A "road brand," as distinguished from a "range brand," is a brand required by statute to be placed upon cattle before being removed from the county in which they are gathered to market outside of the state, which brand must be recorded in the county from which the cattle are to be driven, and before their removal from such county. The brand introduced in evidence in this case was the "road brand" of the alleged owner, which was recorded after the cattle were driven from the county where gathered, and after the commission of the offense. Held that the said brand was inadmissible to prove ownership, and should have been excluded. Crowell v. State, 24 App. 404, 6 S. W. 318; Myers v. State, 24 App. 334, 6 S. W. 194. Other decisions hereunder as follows: Tinney v. State, 24 App. 112, 5 S. W. 831; White v. State, 24 App. 231, 5 S. W. 857, 5 Am. St. Rep. 879; Willis v. State, 24 App. 487, 6 S. W. 200; Lott v. State, 24 App. 723, 14 S. W. 277; Williams v. State, 26 App. 131, 9 S. W. 357; Woods v. State, 26 App. 490, 10 S. W. 108; Langham v. State, 26 App. 533, 10 S. See, also, as to mark and brand, Harwell v. State, 22 App. 251, 2 S. W. 606. The particular portion of the animal upon which the brand is placed is as important as the characters used. Where the brand was to be placed on the hip, evidence showing that it was on the ribs was held insufficient. Priemuth v. State, 1 App. 480. But such a variance may be explained by other evidence. Harwell v. State, 22 App. 251, 2 S. W. 606.

Possession of the servant is that of the master, and an allegation that it was in the latter is supported by proof that it was in the servant. Thomas v. State, 1 App. 289.

A variance between the middle initial letter of the given name as alleged and as proved will be immaterial. Dixon v. State, 2 App. 531; Delphino v. State, 11 App. 30. Where the proof showed that the owner was known by the name alleged in the indictment, as well as by his true name, it was held there was no variance. Bird v. State, 16 App. 525.

The allegations in the indictment of the ownership and possession of the alleged stolen property must be proved as laid. A material variance between these allegations and the evidence will be fatal. Proof of either a general or special property in the alleged owner will be sufficient. Jinks v. State, 5 App. 68; Skipwith v. State, 8 App. 135; Walker v. State, 9 App. 38; Frazier v. State, 18 App. 434. See upon this subject, ante, art. 858, note 6; art. 863, note 1. The ownership of animals may be proved otherwise than by a bill of sale. Exclusive control, care, and management of the property is sufficient proof of ownership. Phillips v. State, 17 App. 169; Dodd v. State, 10 App. 370; Pippin v. State, 9 App. 269; Crockett v. State, 5 App. 526. Where the indictment charges the ownership in two persons, jointly, it will not be sustained by proof that the ownership was in but one of the persons. Brown v. State, 35 Tex. 689. Where the indictment charges ownership in one person, and the proof shows that the property was owned jointly, or in common, by two or more persons, but was in the control, care, and management of the alleged owner, the allegation of ownership is sustained. Terry v. State, 15 App. 66; Henry v. State, 45 Tex. 84; Crockett v. State, 5 App. 526. Where the indictment alleges that the ownership of the property is unknown, the evidence must show that the grand jury used reasonable diligence to discover the ownership, and failed to ascertain who the owner of the property was. The allegation that the owner of the property was unknown to the grand jury must be sustained by proof. Williamson v. State, 13 App. 514; Jorasco v. State, 6 App. 238. Ownership cannot be proved by a bill of lading and indorsements. Radford v. State, 35 Tex. 15. Brands upon animals are not evidence of ownership unless recorded. But ear-marks are evidence of ownership though not recorded. Love v. State, 15 App.

563; Johnson v. State, 1 App. 333. And an unrecorded brand is competent evidence of the identity of the animal, though not of ownership. Coombes v. State, 17 App. 258. The proof of record of a brand to show ownership must be made by the record itself, or by a certified or sworn copy thereof. It cannot be made by parol evidence. Elsner v. State, 22 App. 687, 3 S. W. 474. Ownership of animals, however, may be proved in other ways than by marks and brands. Corn v. State, 41 Tex. 302; Poag v. State, 40 Tex. 151; Allen v. State, 42 Tex. 518; Johnson v. State, 1 App. 333; Jones v. State, 3 App. 498; Lockhart v. State, Id. 567; Fisher v. State, 4 App. 181; Wolf v. State, Id. 332; Hutto v. State, 7 App. 44; Love v. State, 15 App. 563; Wyers v. State, 21 App. 448, 2 S. W. 816; Dreyer v. State, 11 App. 631. Where a brand was recorded after the theft was committed, it was held that it was admissible in connection with other evidence, but of itself was not sufficient evidence of ownership. Priemuth v. State, 1 App. 480; Harvey v. State, 21 App. 178, 17 S. W. 158. A certified copy of the record of a recorded mark and brand is competent evidence. The original record need not be produced. Wilson v. State, 3 App. 206. When a mark and brand has been recorded in a county comprising the intended range of the owner's stock, it is admissible in evidence in any county in which a prosecution for the theft of such stock may be instituted. Atterberry v. State, 19 App. 401. A bill of sale, executed by the general to the special owner, after the alleged theft from the special owner, is not admissible to prove ownership. Groom v. State, 23 App. 82, 3 S. W. 668. A bill of sale cannot be introduced in evidence without proof of its execution, unless it has been filed among the papers in the cause at least three days before the commencement of the trial, and notice of such filing given to the opposite party or his attorney. And if there be a subscribing witness to the bill of sale, its execution cannot be proved by another witness who testifies that he saw it executed, unless the absence of the subscribing witness be accounted for. An unacknowledged, unrecorded bill of sale is admissible to prove ownership in theft. But the property mentioned in the bill of sale must be identified as the alleged stolen property. Morrow v. State, 22 App. 239, 2 S. W. 624. It is not a valid objection to a bill of sale that it was recorded in the wrong record book. Britt v. State, 21 App. 215, 17 S. W. 255. Animals running in their accustomed range are in the possession of their owner. If they are under the control, care, and management of a special owner, they are in the possession of such special owner. Moore v. State, 8 App. 496; Mackey v. State, 20 App. 603; Littleton v. State, 20 App. 168; ante, art. 1334. Possession from which the property was taken must be alleged and at least substantially proved. Littleton v. State, 20 App. 168; White v. State, 33 App. 94, 25 S. W. 290; Mixon v. State, 28 App. 347, 13 S. W. 143; Hill v. State, 55 App. 407, 117 S. W. 823.

While a recorded brand is evidence of ownership, it is only prima facie evidence, to be considered by the jury like any other evidence. Alexander v. State, 24 App. 126, 5 S. W. 840.

The indictment charged the ownership and possession of the property to be in J. C. B. The proof showed that the horse was taken by the accused from a place at which one Bull had hopped it by direction of D. H. B., who had borrowed the animal from J. C. B. Held, that the proof established the possession in D. H. B., and that the variance between the allegation and proof on that issue is fatal to the conviction. Conner v. State, 24 App. 245, 6 S. W. 138.

A brand, although recorded after the commission of the offense, is admissible in evidence, but is not sufficient to prove ownership. Crowell v. State, 24 App. 404, 6 S. W. 318.

Brands are not evidence of ownership, unless recorded; ear-marks are. Myers v. State, 24 App. 334, 6 S. W. 194; Crowell v. State, 24 App. 44, 6 S. W. 318; Thompson v. State, 25 App. 161, 7 S. W. 589; Hayes v. State, 30 App. 404, 17 S. W. 940; Horn v. State, 30 App. 541, 17 S. W. 1094; Titile v. State, 30 App. 597, 17 S. W. 1118.

In a trial for cattle theft the state relied wholly on the brand found upon the animal for proof that the animal belonged to the person whom the indictment alleged to be the owner, but failed to prove that the brand had been duly recorded. A bill of exceptions reserved by the defense shows that the defense objected to a record of the brand adduced by the state, but does not set out the record of the brand nor allege that it was put in evidence over the objections made to it by the defense. Held, that the evidence wholly fails to sustain the allegation of ownership made by the indictment, and consequently fails to support the verdict and judgment of conviction. Burke v. State, 25 App. 172, 7 S. W. 873. And see Graves v. State, 28 App. 354, 13 S. W. 149; Lasher v. State, 30 App. 387, 17 S. W. 1064, 28 Am. St. Rep. 922; Thompson v. State, 25 App. 161, 7 S. W. 589.

Certificate of the county clerk of Young county to a copy taken from the record of marks and brands read as follows: "The state of Texas, county of Young: I, Chas. O. Joline, clerk of the county court in and for said county, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the record of the mark and brand of Wilkins Bros." Signed, with seal, etc. Held, that such certification of the copy from the record was sufficient to show that the said mark and brand were recorded in Young county. Byrd v. State, 26 App. 374, 9 S. W. 759.

The certificate of the county clerk to a copy of the record of the brand of W. P. Coats reads as follows: "The state of Texas, county of Taylor: I, David J. Red, clerk of the county court of said county, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the record of the mark and brand of W. P. Coats (horse brand)." Signed, with seal, etc. Held sufficient to show that the said brand was recorded in Taylor County. Thompson v. State, 26 App. 466, 9 S. W. 760.

By express provision of the statute (Rev. Stat. 1895, art. 4930, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7160), marks and brands which would otherwise be intrinsically evidence of ownership, are admissible in the courts of this state, to prove ownership, only when they have been duly recorded. This rule applies to equine as well as other stock named in the statute. Thompson v. State, 26 App. 466, 9 S. W. 760.

The proof shows that Coats lived in Taylor county when his brand was recorded in that county, and that, at the time of the alleged theft of the horse, he lived in Callahan county, at which said time his horse stock ran in the counties of Taylor, Callahan, and Coleman. Held, that the record of the brand in Taylor county was sufficient, and complied with the provisions of the statute (Rev. St. 1895, art. 4930, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7160), which require that marks and brands shall be recorded in the county court of the county in which the stock may be. Thompson v. State, 26 App. 466, 9 S. W. 760.

Proof that M. was a joint owner and possessor with others of the stolen property, will support the allegation of the indictment which laid the ownership and possession in him only. See the statement of the case for a charge of the court on the issues of ownership and possession, held correct and sufficient. Clark v. State, 26 App. 486, 9 S. W. 767.

Owner's name was alleged as "Burris." The proof showed it to be "Burrows." But it being also shown that he was commonly known as "Burris," the variance was immaterial. Taylor v. State, 27 App. 44, 11 S. W. 35.

Unacknowledged, unrecorded bill of sale is admissible to prove ownership in theft. Graves v. State, 28 App. 354, 13 S. W. 149; Abrigo v. State, 29 App. 143, 15 S. W. 408; Williams v. State, 30 App. 153, 16 S. W. 760.

An unrecorded bill of sale conveying all cattle in a certain brand, which brand is upon the animal alleged to have been stolen, is legitimate testimony. Wilson v. State, 32 App. 22, 22 S. W. 39.

If the indictment allege the name of the owner unknown, and the proof shows that the name could have been ascertained if the grand jury had used ordinary diligence, the variance will be fatal. Swink v. State, 32 App. 530, 24 S. W. 893.

Where the indictment alleged ownership and possession in Bledsoe, and the proof shows Bledsoe to be the owner, but that at the time of the theft the property was in the care and under the control of one Little, the court should have instructed the jury that if Little had the possession, care, and management of the property at the time of the theft, they must acquit the defendant. White v. State, 33 App. 94, 25 S. W. 290.

And where the indictment alleges ownership in a certain person, proof of his exclusive possession, control, and management is sufficient. Ledbetter v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 1084.

Where defendant when arrested was using a part of the wire alleged to have been stolen, and when it was taken by the sheriff, remarked that he guessed he would bring it back, held, sufficient to show possession. Pitts v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 359. But where cotton is in a warehouse, deposited by accused under authority of owner, and he has only the receipts, it is not sufficient possession to support a conviction for theft. Johnson v. State, 34 App. 254, 30 S. W. 228.

The indictment alleged the ownership in H., the evidence showed the property to be the separate property of H.'s wife, but H. had control of the same; held, no variance. Sinclair v. State, 34 App. 453, 30 S. W. 1070.

Evidence that the alleged owner had exclusive possession is sufficient. Ledbetter v. State, 35 App. 195, 32 S. W. 903.

On trial for theft of cattle the record of marks and brands is admissible to prove ownership. Thurmond v. State, 37 App. 422, 35 S. W. 965.

Under indictment for theft of a horse alleging the ownership in a person to the grand jurors unknown, it is not necessary for the State to prove that the grand jury made diligent search to ascertain the owners. McCarty v. State, 36 App. 135, 35 S. W. 994.

If the evidence that by the use of reasonable diligence the grand jury might have ascertained the name of the owner of the stolen property, an indictment alleging the ownership in a person unknown will not be supported. Grant v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 264.

It is not admissible for defendant to prove that his stepfather, since deceased, claimed the animal charged to have been stolen. Anderson v. State, 39 App. 690, 24 S. W. 517.

The indictment alleged the horses to be the property of A. B. S., and in the possession of said A. B. S. The evidence showed that P. was looking after the horses, that the owner lived some distance from the farm where the horses were; held, the court should have instructed the jury that if they believed from the evidence that P. had the actual care, custody and control of the horses, they should acquit defendant. Long v. State, 39 App. 461, 46 S. W. 821, 73 Am. St. Rep. 954.

Brand recorded in one county can be used as evidence of ownership in a prosecution in another county. Walton v. State, 41 App. 454, 55 S. W. 563.

Where indictment alleges ownership and possession in one, and the proof shows ownership in one and possession in another, it is fatal to conviction. Both ownership and possession can be alleged in the one having possession. Williams v. State, 42 App. 18, 57 S. W. 93.

An unrecorded brand on an animal can only be used as any other flesh mark in connection with other testimony to identify the animal. It is no proof of ownership, and the flesh mark can be proved by parol as any other flesh mark. Welch v. State, 42 App. 338, 60 S. W. 46.

On an indictment for theft from an unknown owner, the State is only required to show, prima facie, that the owner was unknown to the grand jurors. McCarty v. State, 36 App. 135, 35 S. W. 994.

In a trial for theft, accused was entitled to prove that the property did not belong to the prosecuting witness and was not in his possession at the time of the alleged taking, but was in the possession of and was owned by another. Wilson v. State, 58 App. 104, 124 S. W. 943.

In a prosecution for theft of cattle, in which the indictment alleged, that the cattle were the property of H., and were taken from his possession without his consent, proof that the cattle were under control by H., who lived in another state, but were in the immediate charge of a hired hand in this state, who looked after them and kept up the fences, etc., was a fatal variance. Bonner v. State, 58 App. 195, 125 S. W. 22.

That the evidence showed that the owner's surname was different from that alleged in the information in a prosecution for theft would be a variance. Johnson v. State, 58 App. 442, 126 S. W. 597.

The variance between an information for larceny, alleging special ownership in one person and general ownership in another of the goods stolen, and the evidence excluding the idea that the former had any ownership or possession of the goods, is fatal. Coleburn v. State, 61 App. 26, 133 S. W. 882.

Evidence held insufficient to show ownership, as charged in an indictment. Spiller v. State, 61 App. 555, 135 S. W. 549.

Evidence held insufficient to show ownership, as charged in a larceny indictment. Spiller v. State, 61 App. 555, 135 S. W. 549.

To establish ownership of property charged to have been stolen, the state must show exclusive control, care, and management in the claimed owner. Spiller v. State, 61 App. 555, 135 S. W. 549.

Evidence, in a trial for cattle theft, held to support a finding of special ownership in two persons in charge. Taylor v. State, 62 App. 611, 138 S. W. 615.

In a prosecution for theft of cattle marked with a peculiar brand, testimony by the prosecuting witness that his father and mother, who had owned the brand, were both dead, and that he was their sole heir and inherited it, was admissible. Dugat v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 789.

In a prosecution for larceny, unless inhibited by statute, proof that the stolen animal was marked with a given brand, and that the prosecuting witness was owner of the brand, is admissible. Dugat v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 789.

In a prosecution for the theft of cattle, the owner's testimony that the animal he lost had a certain brand, which was not shown to have been recorded, and that the hide of the buried animal looked like that of the animal lost but had cuts in it where the brands were, was admissible when offered, not to show ownership, but only to show identity of the hide with the animal missing. Elmore v. State, 72 App. 226, 162 S. W. 517.

In a prosecution for the theft of a cow, an unrecorded brand cannot be introduced to establish ownership. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 909.

In a prosecution for larceny of ice from a railroad company, evidence held sufficient to show that the general foreman of the mechanical department of the railroad company had a sufficient special ownership in the property stolen. Schneider v. State, 70 App. 517, 156 S. W. 944.

Under Rev. St. 1911, art. 7160, as amended by Acts 33d Leg. c. 69 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7160) providing that no brand on animals except such as are recorded shall be recognized in law as evidence of the ownership of the animals upon which it is used, but that this shall not apply in criminal cases, in a criminal case evidence as to unrecorded brands is admissible to prove ownership as well as identity. Turner v. State, 71 App. 477, 160 S. W. 357.

In a prosecution for theft of property, possession of which was alleged to be in one W., but shown to be in his renter, while the evidence of such possession in the renter did not amount to demonstration, it was clear to the exclusion of reasonable doubt so as to require reversal. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 5.

Ownership must be proven as alleged. Schenk v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 357. On indictment for theft ownership must be proven as alleged. Schenk v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 357.

32. — Want of owner's consent.—As to allegation of want of owner's consent, see, ante, notes under "Indictment and Information." The allegation of want of the owner's consent to the taking of the property must be proved. It can not be presumed merely from the possession of property recently stolen. Garcia v. State, 26 Tex. 209, 82 Am. Dec. 605. It can not be proved by the owner's declarations to third persons. West v. State, 32 Tex. 651. Nor by the mere fact that, in a dispute with the clerk as to whether defendant had bought the article, the former said he had not. Davis v. State, 37 Tex. 227. Nor by mere proof that the alleged owner claimed the property and took it. Jorasco v. State, 8 App. 540. But the fact of the want of the owner's consent may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Wilson v. State, 45 Tex. 76, 23 Am. Dec. 602; McMahon v. State, 1 App. 102; Welsh v. State, 3 App. 422; Foster v. State, 4 App. 246; Trafton v. State, 5 App. 480; Rains v. State, 7 App. 588; Kemp v. State, 38 Tex. 110; Stewart v. State, 9 App. 321; Spruill v. State, 10 App. 695; Wilson v. State, 12 App. 481; Mackey v. State, 20 App. 603. But circumstantial evidence should not be resorted to when direct evidence of the fact is attainable. Wilson v. State, 12 App. 481; Bowling v. State, 13 App. 338; Williamson v. State, Id. 514; Anderson v. State, 14 App. 49; Love v. State, 15 App. 563; Miller v. State, 18 App. 34; Shultz v. State, 20 App. 308; Williams v. State, 19 App. 277. Where ownership is alleged in two or more persons, the want of consent of each of the alleged owners must be proved. Williams v. State, 19 App. 276; McIntosh v. State, 18 App. 285. If the alleged owner proves to be an agent of the general owner, he may testify as to his authority as agent without producing a power of attorney. Turner v. State, 7 App. 596. The defendant can not prove declarations of the owner, made after the alleged theft, that the property was taken with his consent, although the owner be dead at the time of the trial. Sneed v. State, 4 App. 514. As to bill of sale of property, when offered as evidence by defendant, see Long v. State, 1 App. 466; Shoefercater v. State, 5 App. 207; Dreyer v. State, 11 App. 631. Where the theft is committed by means of false pretenses, the want of the owner's consent to the taking is shown by proof that the property was obtained from him by such means. Ante, art. 1332, note.

The consent of the owner was not shown by proof that, for the purpose of detecting the accused in the very act of theft, the horse was hobbled with the expectation and intent that defendant would take him, it not appearing that the owner in any way suggested the theft to the accused or induced him to commit it. Conner v. State, 24 App. 245, 6 S. W. 138. And see, also, Stockman v. State, 24 App. 387, 6 S. W. 298, 5 Am. St. Rep. 894; Coward v. State, 24 App. 591, 7 S. W. 332; Jones v. State, 28 App. 42, 11 S. W. 830; Good v. State, 30 App. 276, 17 S. W. 469; Thurmond v. State, 30 App. 539, 17 S. W. 1098.

Where a person borrows a horse to go to church, and while there the horse is stolen, such temporary custodian is not legally in possession of the horse, and it need not be shown that the taking was without his consent. Emmerson v. State, 33 App. 89, 25 S. W. 289.

When the owner of a horse loans it temporarily to another to ride to church and it is there stolen, the indictment properly alleged possession in the owner and it is not necessary to prove the want of consent of the temporary custodian. Emmerson v. State, 33 App. 89, 25 S. W. 289.

On trial for theft of cattle the alleged owner of the cattle died before trial; held, competent to prove that such deceased owner was before the grand jury and interested in the prosecution, thereby showing want of consent. Brooks v. State, 38 App. 167, 31 S. W. 410.

Where there is positive, affirmative testimony to be had as to want of consent to the theft from the person, that fact cannot be shown by circumstantial evidence; but it can be so shown where there is no positive evidence available. Lynch v. State, 70 App. 449, 156 S. W. 1182.

33. — Possession of stolen property.—See article 1359, post, and notes thereunder.

Possession of stolen property is presumptive evidence of the guilt of the possessor of the theft. It may be strong or weak, according to the circumstances of the case. It is merely a circumstance to be considered by the jury in connection with all the evidence adduced. And to warrant an inference or presumption of guilt from the circumstance of possession alone, such possession must be recent, must be personal and exclusive, must be unexplained, and must involve a distinct and conscious assertion of property by the defendant. Robinson v. State, 22 App. 690, 3 S. W. 736; Ayres v. State, 21 App. 399, 17 S. W. 253; Lehman v. State, 18 App. 174, 51 Am. Rep. 298; Sullivan v. State, 18 App. 623; York v. State, 17 App. 441; Roberts v. State, Id. 82; Bragg v. State, Id. 219; Perkins v. State, 32 Tex. 109; McNair v. State, 14 App. 83; Schindler v. State, 15 App. 394; Faulkner v. State, Id. 115; Thomas v. State, 43 Tex. 658; Yates v. State, 37 Tex. 202; Beck v. State, 44 Tex. 430; Jenkins v. State, 30 Tex. 444; Mondragon v. State, 33 Tex. 480. It was formerly held that the circumstance of possession of recently stolen property, unexplained, would not, standing alone, be sufficient to warrant a conviction of the theft. Hannah v. State, 1 App. 578; Truax v. State, 12 App. 230. But these decisions have been overruled and it is now the settled doctrine that if a party in whose possession property recently stolen is found, fails satisfactorily to account for his possession, the presumption of guilt arising from recent loss and possession will warrant his conviction of the theft. Roberts v. State, 17 App. 82; McNair v. State, 14 App. 78. Proof of possession of part of the stolen property if unexplained, will support a conviction for the theft of all of it. Hill v. State, 41 Tex. 253. And that it was all taken at the same time. Jack v. State, 20 App. 656. But proof of possession will not be sufficient to warrant a conviction, if the other facts in evidence are not consistent with guilt. Wafford v. State, 44 Tex. 439.

Possession of recently stolen property is not positive evidence of theft. At most it is but a circumstance tending to establish theft. A case, therefore, depending alone upon the possession of recently stolen property is a case resting alone upon circumstantial evidence, and in such case the omission of the trial court to charge the jury upon the law of circumstantial evidence is material error. Note the opinion for a state of proof to which the rule applies. And note in this case charge of the court as applied to the subject-matter and presumptions arising under the same. Boyd v. State, 24 App. 570, 6 S. W. 853, 5 Am. St. Rep. 908. Other decisions hereunder: Bean v. State, 24 App. 11, 5 S. W. 525; Moreno v. State, 24 App. 401, 6 S. W. 299; *Field v. Possession of recently stolen property is but a circumstance to be taken in connection with other circumstances. Torres v. State, 33 App. 125, 25 S. W. 128. The court instructed the jury that the possession of the hide of the stolen animal by defendant's son would not be evidence against defendant, unless they believed that said son received possession from defendant; held, correct. Brown v. State, 34 App. 150, 29 S. W. 772.

Evidence held sufficient to show that defendant had taken possession of property, see Pitts v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 359. Contra, see Johnson v. State, 34 App. 254, 30 S. W. 228.

Evidence of possession of a stolen cart held admissible. Passagoli v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 200.

In a prosecution for theft of a bay horse, which accused was shown to have exchanged for a sorrel, evidence held to show that accused was in exclusive possession of the bay when he swapped it for the sorrel. Johnson v. State, 57 App. 603, 124 S. W. 664.

Evidence of possession of recently stolen property is admissible against the possessor in a trial for theft thereof. Newton v. State, 62 App. 622, 138 S. W. 708.

In a prosecution for the theft of cattle, where it appeared that accused kept his cattle in a certain pasture and had been about the pasture a few days before the theft, the circumstance that the stolen animal was found in the pasture was admissible in evidence. Dugat v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 789.

In a prosecution for theft of goats, defendant's possession of the pasture where it was claimed they were found was admissible as bearing on his possession of them. Simonds v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 1064.

34. — Explanation of possession.—Charge of court as to, see note on "charge of court," post.

When the possession of recently stolen property is relied on as inculpatory of the defendant, his explanation of such possession is admissible in his behalf, provided it was given on the first occasion for any explanation by him—that is, when he was first directly or circumstantially called upon to explain his possession. And his explanation is admissible in his behalf, although at the time it was made, he was not then in possession of the property. Taylor v. State, 15 App. 356; Castellow v. State, Id. 551; Howell v. State, 16 App. 93; Ross v. State, Id. 554; Satlillo v. State, Id. 249; Lewis v. State, 17 App. 140; Heskew v. State, Id. 161; York v. State, Id. 441; Windham v. State, 19 App. 413; Schultz v. State, 20 App. 315. And when his explanation of his possession of the property is natural, reasonable, and probably true, it operates to rebut the presumption of guilt arising from his possession of the property, and in such case, if such explanation be not shown to be false, further evidence of the defendant's guilt will be required to warrant his conviction. Roberts v. State, 17 App. 82; York v. State, Id. 441; Windham v. State, 19 App. 413; Schultz v. State, 20 App. 315; Howell v. State, 16 App. 93; Ross v. State, Id. 554; Irvine v. State, 13 App. 499; Sitterlee v. State, Id. 587; McCall v. State, 14 App. 353; Clement v. State, 22 App. 23, 2 S. W. 379; Clark v. State, Id. 599, 3 S. W. 744; Vaughn v. State, 21 App. 573, 2 S. W. 825; Miller v. State, 18 App. 34; Anderson v. State, 11 App. 576. But the state is only required to prove the falsity of the defendant's explanation made at the time his possession was challenged. It can not be required to disprove every conflicting explanation the defendant may have made. Ashlock v. State, 16 App. 13. Recent possession of stolen property may be accounted for by proof of the purchase of the same, whether the purchase be in good or bad faith. And if the defendant in fact purchased the property, he can not be convicted of the theft of it, although he knew at the time he purchased it that it had been stolen by the seller. Prator v. State, 15 App. 363; McAfee v. State, 14 App. 668; Bond v. State, 23 App. 180, 4 S. W. 580; Shuler v. State, 23 App. 182, 4 S. W. 581; Curlin v. State, 23 App. 681, 5 S. W. 186; Anderson v. State, 11 App. 576. Where several are jointly indicted for the theft, explanation of possession by any one of them is admissible in evidence in behalf of each of the defendants. Shelton v. State, 11 App. 36; Wright v. State, 10 App. 476. See facts held insufficient to convict, although defendant's explanation of his possession was shown to be false. Norwood v. State, 20 App. 306.

To entitle defendant to introduce evidence of an explanation it must appear that the explanation was made when he was first called upon to explain. Martin v. State, 32 App. 441, 24 S. W. 512. See, also, Threadgill v. State, 32 App. 451, 21 S. W. 511.

The defense proposed to prove that the defendant, at his first meeting with the owner of the property after the alleged theft, proposed to pay him for the same. It was also proposed to prove the conversation which then ensued between the defendant and the owner, which conversation is not set out in the bill of exceptions. Held, that the said proof was properly excluded as being no part of the res gestae nor relevant to any issue in the case, and as not coming within the rule which qualifies as evidence a defendant's explanation of his possession of stolen property. Brooks v. State, 26 App. 184, 9 S. W. 562. Also, see Cortez v. State, 24 App. 511, 6 S. W. 546; Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242; Boyd v. State, 24 App. 570, 6 S. W. 853, 5 Am. St. Rep. 908; Lopez v. State, 28 App. 343, 13 S. W. 219; Bayne v. State, 29 App. 132, 15 S. W. 404; Williamson v. State, 30 App. 330, 17 S. W. 722; Andrews v. State, 25 App. 339, 8 S. W. 328; Matlock v. State, 25 App. 654, 8 S. W. 818, 8 Am. St. Rep. 451.

See evidence held admissible against the defendant's explanation. Kelley v. State, 31 App. 211, 20 S. W. 365.

State cannot convict upon the falsity of explanation of possession of property recently stolen; the jury can only consider said falsity as any other circumstance. For proper charge on this subject, see Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913. For discussion, see Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 276. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 54.

When possession of stolen property is relied upon by the State, any explanation of such possession made by defendant is admissible in evidence. Goens v. State, 35 App. 73, 31 S. W. 656.

Explanation cannot occur when there has been no possession, or when made prior to possession. Eastland v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 167.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, where the evidence was circumstantial and the defendant testified that he bought the beef found in his possession from another, it could show that the officers attempted to arrest two others for the theft, but the arrest was successfully resisted, and that the description of one of the others corresponded with the description of the man from whom he claimed to have bought the beef. Silvas v. State, 71 App. 213, 159 S. W. 223.

The burden is on the state throughout the trial to establish the guilt of accused beyond a reasonable doubt. Evidence establishing a mere probability, or a strong suspicion of his guilt, is not sufficient. Chapman v. State, 1 App. 728; Ring v. State, 42 Tex. 282; *Tollett v. The court instructed the jury that before they could convict defendant, they must believe, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he fraudulently took from the alleged owner the head of cattle charged, without his consent, and that the same was the personal property of said alleged owner; held, sufficient. Thumond v. State, 37 App. 422, 35 S. W. 965.

Evidence held not to support a conviction of hog theft. McClure v. State, 59 App. 287, 128 S. W. 386; Ellis v. State, 27 App. 190, 11 S. W. 111.

See this case for evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for theft, because it does not overcome the presumption of innocence nor exclude reasonable doubt. Reveal v. State, 27 App. 57, 10 S. W. 759.

Where evidence showed defendant to be a hired hand with no interest in the herd of cattle, and that he did not know the different brands of cattle in the herd, and while scattered up and down the creek drinking defendant drove another cow into the herd, held insufficient to support conviction. Mims v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 540.

Evidence held not to support a conviction of cattle theft. Daniel v. State, 60 App. 515, 132 S. W. 773. Where accused and two others were found in the possession of stolen property, and the evidence of the larceny was wholly circumstantial, it was not error to permit the state to show that the three persons were together some time before the stealing, that one of them, other than the accused, was going under an assumed name, and to trace their movements down to the time of their arrest. Slain v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 366.

Evidence in a prosecution for hog theft held insufficient in not proving the corpus delicti by connecting accused with the hog. Motley v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 620.

Where the prosecution relies for conviction solely upon evidence that the stolen horse was found in the defendant's possession, and that he gave a false explanation of where he got it, the evidence is wholly circumstantial, and it is reversible error for the court to refuse to charge the jury to that effect. Stewart v. State, 71 App. 480, 160 S. W. 381.

In a prosecution for the theft of a horse, where the facts raised the issue as to whether defendant had traded a mule for the horse at the time he drove the horse off, an instruction that if defendant got the horse in exchange for the mule, or if there was reasonable doubt as to whether the trade was made, he should be acquitted, was a specific presentation of the issue. Brooks v. State, 71 App. 599, 160 S. W. 696.

37. Questions for jury.—It is the province of the jury to determine the value of the property, and where the evidence upon that issue is conflicting, the verdict, on appeal, will not be disturbed if there be evidence to support it. Jack v. State, 20 App. 656.

See the opinion in extenso, and the statement of the case for proof developed on a trial for horse theft, which, raising the defense of mistake of fact on the part of the accused, in asserting claim to the animal alleged to have been stolen, demanded of the trial court the submission of that issue to the jury under proper instructions. Note, also, that in view of the proof, the trial court, having refused the accused a continuance, should have awarded him a new trial. Guajardo v. State, 24 App. 604, 7 S. W. 331.

There being no evidence of purchase of the animals, the court could not be required to submit such issue to the jury. Glass v. State, 34 App. 299, 30 S. W. 556.

But if there is such evidence, the court should give a proper instruction upon it. Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913.

When there is evidence of honest acquisition the issue must be presented to the jury. Parker v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 668.

Evidence of theft held sufficient to present a question for the jury. Petty v. State, 59 App. 586, 129 S. W. 615.

Where an indictment for hog theft charged that the owner of the hog was unknown, there must be some evidence of such want of knowledge, either by the grand jurors or otherwise, to authorize submission of the question to the jury. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 938.

In a prosecution for larceny of mules which accused purchased and for which he executed a note signed by others as sureties, evidence held to make it a jury question whether the mules were in fact subsequently sold to the sureties, and, if so, whether accused was given authority by them to sell the mules, or whether the mules were merely pledged to the sureties. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 181.

On evidence in a prosecution for the theft of a horse, held, that a peremptory instruction of acquittal was properly refused. Brooks v. State, 71 App. 599, 160 S. W. 696.

In a prosecution for theft, the sufficiency of the identification of the property held for the jury. Schenk v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 357.

38. Charge of court.—See C. C. P., arts. 735, et seq., and notes thereunder.

See note under article 1345.

Harmless error, see notes under C. C. P., art. 743.

See Cunningham v. State, 27 Tex. Cr. 479; Young v. State, 34 App. 290, 30 S. W. 238; Blount v. State, 34 App. 640, 31 S. W. 652.

The charge should instruct the jury on the law applicable to the particular case before them, as developed by the facts proved. It should apply the law to the evidence. It is not essential that it should give the statutory definition of theft; but failing to do this, it should inform the jury of the nature and character of the elements and ingredients of the offense. It should instruct as to fraudulent intent; that such intent is the essential ingredient of theft, and must have existed in the mind of the defendant at the very time he took the property; that such intent formed subsequent to the taking will not constitute theft; that a fraudulent intent embraces the ideas that the defendant knew when he took the property that it did not belong to him, that he took it intending at the time to deprive the owner of the value of it, and to appropriate the same permanently to his own use or benefit; that to constitute a fraudulent taking, it must be an intentional taking, without the consent of the owner, an intentional fraud, and an intentional appropriation. Johnson v. State, 1 App. 118. The charge must confine the fraudulent intent to the very time of the taking. Warren v. State, 17 App. 207. Where the evidence requires it the jury should be instructed as to the distinction between trespass and theft. Bray v. State, 41 Tex. 203; Harris v. State, 2 App. 102; McPhail v. State, 10 App. 128. Where there is evidence tending to show that the defendant took the property under an honest claim of right, such issue should be submitted to the jury under proper instructions, and the jury should be directed to acquit the defendant, if, from the evidence, they entertained a reasonable doubt that he took the property fraudulently. Cameron v. State, 9 App. 332; Sigler v. State, Id. 427; Miles v. State, 1 App. 510; Loza v. State, Id. 488, 28 Am. Rep. 416; Hamilton v. State, 2 App. 494; Bray v. State, 41 Tex. 203; *Varas v. Where the evidence requires it, the court should instruct the jury that if the defendant took the property, with the intent at the time of appropriating it temporarily, but not permanently, they should acquit him. Wilson v. State, 18 App. 270, 51 Am. Rep. 309; Loza v. State, 1 App. 488, 28 Am. Rep. 416; Blackburn v. State, 44 Tex. 457; Johnson v. State, 36 Tex. 375; Banks v. State, 7 App. 591; Dunham v. State, 3 App. 465. Where there is evidence tending to show that the defendant purchased the property after it had been stolen by another, the charge should instruct the jury upon this issue, and direct the acquittal of the defendant, if from the evidence the jury entertained a reasonable doubt of his complicity in the theft. In such case the charge should not make the defendant's innocence depend upon his honest purchase of the property. If he, in fact, purchased it, having had no complicity in taking it, he cannot be convicted of theft, although he knew at the time of purchasing it that his vendor had stolen it. Clayton v. State, 15 App. 348; Prator v. State, Id. 363; Faulkner v. State, Id. 115; Anderson v. State, 11 App. 576; Barrett v. State, 18 App. 64; Murphy v. State, 17 App. 645; Morrow v. State, 8 App. 52; Vincent v. State, 9 App. 303; Henry v. State, Id. 358; Ray v. State, 13 App. 51. Where there is a doubt raised by the evidence that the defendant had any connection with, or complicity in the original taking of the property, the court should instruct the jury that he cannot be convicted of the theft of the property unless the evidence shows beyond a reasonable doubt that he participated in the original taking, no matter what connection he may have had with the property thereafter. Tucker v. State, 21 App. 699, 2 S. W. 893; Curlin v. State, 23 App. 681, 5 S. W. 186; McAfee v. State, 17 App. 135. If the evidence tends to show an acting together with others, conspiracy or complicity in the taking (or with a view to the covering up of a fraudulent taking) between the vendor in a bill of sale and the defendant, it would not only be right but proper for the court to submit the bona fides of the bill of sale, that the jury might ascertain and find whether or not it was a sham or device conceived to cover up and avoid the theft. Roberts v. State, 17 App. 82; Prator v. State, 15 App. 363; Shoefercater v. State, 5 App. 207. If an animal was purchased by the defendant with the knowledge that it had been stolen by his vendor, and the animal escapes and returns to the possession of the owner, and the defendant then takes it, he is guilty of theft. McAfee v. State, 17 App. 135; Ashlock v. State, 16 App. 13. The charge must not authorize a conviction without guilty knowledge or intent. Logan v. State, 2 App. 403; *Riojas v. The charge should instruct that the allegations of ownership and possession should be proved, and that unless proved the defendant should be acquitted. Williams v. State, 4 App. 5; Kay v. State, 40 Tex. 29; Bray v. State, 41 Tex. 560; Robinson v. State, 5 App. 519. It should also instruct that the allegation of want of consent must be proved. Lindley v. State, 3 App. 445; Burt v. State, 7 App. 578. Where the punishment is dependent upon the value of the property, the charge must explain the law upon the subject applicable to the facts in evidence and the standard of value. Jackson v. State, 20 App. 190; Saddler v. State, Id. 195. With regard to the presumption of guilt arising from possession of the property, the jury should not be told that the possession of recently stolen property is presumptive evidence of guilt. *Williams v. Where there is evidence adduced by the state proving, or tending to prove the theft of other property than that alleged in the indictment at the same time and place, the charge should not fail to instruct the jury that such testimony can only be considered by them for the purpose for which it was admitted, that is, to establish identity in developing the res geste, or to prove the guilt of the accused by circumstances connected with the theft, or to show the intent with which the defendant acted with respect to the property for the theft of which he is on trial; and that they could not convict the defendant for the theft of any other property than that named in the indictment. Carter v. State, 23 App. 508, 5 S. W. 128; Davis v. State, 23 App. 210, 4 S. W. 590; Clark v. State, 23 App. 612, 5 S. W. 178; Mayfield v. State, 23 App. 645, 5 S. W. 161; Alexander v. State, 21 App. 406, 17 S. W. 139, 57 Am. Rep. 617; House v. State, 16 App. 25. A charge which assumed that the property named in the indictment was stolen, and that the defendant was the thief, was held erroneous. White v. State, 21 App. 339, 17 S. W. 727. It is error to charge that the possession of a stolen animal by the defendant without a written transfer or bill of sale thereto, is prima facie evidence that such possession was illegal. White v. State, 21 App. 339, 17 S. W. 727; Gomez v. State, 15 App. 64; Schindler v. State, Id. 394; Florez v. State, 13 App. 665; Garcia v. State, 12 App. 335. It is a charge upon the weight of evidence and error to instruct the jury that if a part of the alleged stolen property was found and identified as such, the theft of the remainder might be inferred from that fact, if all of the property is shown to have been stolen at the same time and place. White v. State, 17 App. 188.

An instruction defining theft in the language of article 858, was not insufficient for failing to define "fraudulent taking" and "consent" in the absence of a request for their definition. Ellington v. State, 63 App. 420, 140 S. W. 1102; Ellington v. State, 63 App. 424, 140 S. W. 1100.

Where the defendant was charged with theft of certain jewelry, one piece, a necklace, being of the value of over twenty dollars, and the other pieces being of less than twenty dollars in value, and there was evidence tending to show that defendant found the necklace, it was held that the court should have charged the jury, that if they believed from the evidence that she was guilty of the theft of the other articles, but had a reasonable doubt of her guilt of the theft of the necklace, they should not convict her of felony. Lee v. State, 14 App. 266.

An information charged the theft of a male hog. Held, that the trial court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury that a male hog is one which has not been changed from a boar to a barrow by castration. A barrow is a hog, especially a male hog, castrated. Williams v. State, 17 App. 521.

Duty to charge on felonious theft. Lacey v. State, 22 App. 657, 3 S. W. 343.

The factum probandum of theft, as that offense is defined by our statute, is the taking of the property. If the taking, being the main fact in issue, is not directly attested by an eyewitness, but is proved as a matter of inference from other facts in evidence, the case rests wholly upon circumstantial evidence, and the failure of the trial court to give in charge to the jury the law of circumstantial evidence is material error. Crowell v. State, 24 App. 404, 6 S. W. 318.

In proper cases the court should submit the bona fides of bills of sale in evidence. Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242; Boyd v. State, 24 App. 570, 6 S.

W. 853, 5 Am. St. Rep. 908; Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667; White v. State, 28 App. 71, 12 S. W. 406; Huffman v. State, 28 App. 174, 12 S. W. 588.

However improbable may be the evidence in support of a defense, it is the duty of the trial court to submit the issue to the jury under proper instructions. A defense witness in this case testified that he was present and witnessed the defendant's purchase of the alleged stolen animal. Held, that in failing to submit the question of a purchase vel non to the jury, the charge of the court was erroneous. McDaniel v. State, 24 App. 552, 7 S. W. 249.

The indictment alleged the ownership of the animal to be in C. and A. and R., and that the same was taken without the consent of C. or A. or R., or either of them, which correctly alleged the want of consent. The trial court charged the jury to convict if they found that the defendant took the animal without the consent of C. or A. or R., or either of them. Held, fundamental error, inasmuch as it was equivalent to an instruction to convict if any one of the parties did not consent, notwithstanding either or both of the other two may have consented. Woods v. State, 26 App. 490, 10 S. W. 108. Other decisions hereunder: Conner v. State, 24 App. 245, 6 S. W. 138; Willis v. State, 24 App. 487, 6 S. W. 200; Jones v. State, 28 App. 42, 11 S. W. 830; Otero v. State, 30 App. 450, 17 S. W. 1081. And as to asportation, see Coward v. State, 24 App. 590, 7 S. W. 332.

With reference to the defendant's explanation of his possession of recently stolen property, the trial court charged the jury as follows: "If you believe from the evidence that the animal in question had been recently stolen, and the defendant was found in possession of the same, and when his right to the possession of said animal was first challenged, he gave a reasonable account thereof consistent with his innocence, it devolves upon the state to show that it was untrue. If, however, when his possession was first challenged he failed to reasonably and satisfactorily account for his possession thereof, you will find him guilty as charged in the indictment." Held, that the latter clause of the said charge is erroneous, not only because it is upon the weight of evidence, but because it restricts the defensive proof to an opportune and reasonable explanation of the possession by the accused of the stolen property. Arispe v. State, 26 App. 581, 10 S. W. 111.

If the evidence does not raise the issue of voluntary return of the stolen property, the court should not charge upon it. Harris v. State, 29 App. 101, 14 S. W. 390, 25 Am. St. Rep. 717; Schultz v. State, 30 App. 94, 16 S. W. 756.

The evidence requiring it, the charge should instruct upon the distinction between trespass and theft, and to the effect that, if the property was taken merely for temporary use and not permanent appropriation, it was not theft. Schultz v. State, 30 App. 94, 16 S. W. 756.

A charge is radically erroneous which ignores the allegation of want of consent as well as possession of the alleged owner, and authorizes a conviction without proof of such averments, and which further required of the jury the defendant's conviction on proof of the want of consent of a party not named in the indictment, either as owner or in possession of the property. Otero v. State, 30 App. 450, 17 S. W. 1081. A joint ownership being alleged in the indictment, it was error to instruct the jury to convict if the evidence established the want of consent "of either" of the owners. Woods v. State, 26 App. 490, 10 S. W. 108; Jones v. State, 28 App. 42, 11 S. W. 830. The charge should apply the law to the evidence. Myers v. State, 24 App. 336, 6 S. W. 194. See, also, Williams v. State, 24 App. 24, 5 S. W. 655; Myers v. State, 24 App. 334, 6 S. W. 194; Roy v. State, 24 App. 369, 6 S. W. 186; Gilleland v. State, 24 App. 524, 7 S. W. 241; Willis v. State, 24 App. 584, 6 S. W. 856; Boyd v. State, 24 App. 570, 6 S. W. 853, 5 Am. St. Rep. 908; Criswell v. State, 24 App. 606, 7 S. W. 337.

The charge was error as shifting the burden from the state to prove false a reasonable explanation of possession. Lacy v. State, 31 App. 78, 19 S. W. 896. And further, on such a charge, see Connors v. State, 31 App. 453, 20 S. W. 981.

For charge held sufficient where defendant claimed to have bought the property, see Mathews v. State, 32 App. 355, 23 S. W. 690.

Where the defense was a purchase the court charged the jury that if the horse was originally taken from the owner by defendant and afterward he pretended to purchase him from another whom he knew was not the owner, such purchase would not avail as a defense. Jameson v. State, 32 App. 385, 24 S. W. 508.

All the facts and evidence must be considered by the jury and must be properly presented by the court in its charge. James v. State, 32 App. 509, 24 S. W. 642.

Court properly refused to instruct on the theory that the property had been taken piece at a time. Torres v. State, 33 App. 125, 25 S. W. 128.

For sufficient charge on recent possession and explanation, see Hyatt v. State, 32 App. 580, 25 S. W. 291.

On trial for theft of hogs under twenty dollars in value, alleged to have been committed before the offense was made a felony, the court charged the jury "to fix his (defendant's) punishment by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed one year, and by fine in any sum not to exceed five hundred dollars." Held erroneous. Hargrove v. State, 33 App. 165, 25 S. W. 967.

The court instructed the jury that the possession of the hide of the stolen animal by defendant's son would not be evidence against defendant, unless they believed that said son received possession from defendant; held, correct. Brown v. State, 34 App. 150, 29 S. W. 772.

Instructions held erroneous, see Prewitt v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 792; Brown v. State, 34 App. 150, 29 S. W. 772; Clark v. State, 34 App. 120, 29 S. W. 382; Hargrove v. State, 33 App. 165, 25 S. W. 967. The jury after having retired returned and asked what length of time the property must have been in defendant's possession to constitute theft; the judge replied, "a moment's possession is sufficient." Held, while abstractly correct, it was insufficient under the facts. Mahoney v. State, 33 App. 388, 26 S. W. 622. Where indictment in one count charged theft and in another receiving and concealing stolen property, instruction that the jury might convict of either offense on either count held error. Pollard v. State, 33 App. 197, 26 S. W. 70. When indictment charges theft generally and evidence shows theft from the person, the jury should be instructed to acquit. For charge held correct on indictment alleging ownership in person unknown to grand jurors, see Peevehouse v. State (Cr. App.) 27 S. W. 142.

Where the indictment alleges the property in possession of one person and the evidence shows it to be in another, the court should instruct the jury to acquit. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 220.

The defense was that defendant took the horse in the hope of gaining a reward for his return. The court instructed the jury that this was not a temporary taking, but that if defendant intended to hold the horse until he was paid for its return, to that extent he must have intended to deprive the owner of the value of the horse, etc.; held, substantially correct. Dunn v. State, 34 App. 257, 30 S. W. 227, 53 Am. St. Rep. 714.

Defense was that the property belonged to defendant's mother, and that he had a right to take it. The court should have submitted a charge upon this phase of the case. Vance v. State, 34 App. 395, 30 S. W. 792.

State cannot convict on the falsity of explanation of property recently stolen; the jury can consider said falsity as any other circumstance. For proper charge in this subject, see Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913. For discussion, see Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 276; Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 54.

A charge that defendant may be convicted if his explanation of recent possession is not reasonable, is error. Pace v. State (Cr. App.) 31 S. W. 173.

Where evidence of theft of other property is admitted without objection, the court in its charge should limit the jury to the evidence in the particular case. Mask v. State, 34 App. 136, 31 S. W. 408.

When there is no testimony as to defendant's keeping watch, a charge on that question is erroneous. Tittle v. State, 35 App. 96, 31 S. W. 677.

When the evidence in any way tends to show a claim of right, the court should instruct the jury on that phase of the case. Vance v. State, 34 App. 395, 30 S. W. 792; Lawrence v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 668; Young v. State, 34 App. 290, 30 S. W. 238; Teague v. State (Cr. App.) 31 S. W. 401; Phillips v. State (Cr. App.) Id. 644.

Instruction on intent, see Green v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 120.

The court upon request should charge upon defendant's explanation of his possession of stolen property. Wright v. State, 35 App. 470, 34 S. W. 273.

When there is no positive proof that defendant was nearer than thirty miles of the horse when it was stolen, the court should instruct on circumstantial evidence. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 283.

The court charged the jury: "If recently stolen property was found in defendant's possession, and he gave an explanation of such possession, which appears reasonably true, you cannot convict him, unless you are satisfied from other testimony in the case that such explanation is false;" held, error. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 284.

There was evidence that at the time the stolen animal was found in defendant's possession he had another animal, but no evidence that the other animal was stolen. In his charge the court said: "In this case the State has introduced evidence tending to prove theft of property other than that alleged in the indictment to have been stolen, and at the same time and place;" held, error. Id.

When the court charges on circumstantial evidence, a special charge on possession need not be given. Bonnors v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 650.

A charge that before there can be a conviction the jury must believe that the horses belonged to a certain person, renders unnecessary a charge that they must acquit if the property belonged to defendant. Thurmond v. State, 37 App. 422, 35 S. W. 965.

When there is no positive proof that accused was nearer than thirty miles of the place where the horse was stolen, a charge on circumstantial evidence should be given. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 283; Id., 36 App. 109, 35 S. W. 971.

Defendant was charged with theft of a plow stock of the value of two dollars. It appeared that the prosecutors owed defendant twenty-one dollars, and that he took the plowstock intending to account for it in the settlement of his debt; held, this was not theft, and the court erred in failing to instruct the jury on this phase of the case. Young v. State, 37 App. 457, 36 S. W. 272.

When the taking is shown by positive evidence an instruction on circumstantial evidence is not necessary. Rodgers v. State, 36 App. 563, 33 S. W. 184.

The evidence showed that the sum of $585 was placed in a locked closet in a room, and $310 of said sum had disappeared; that no person except defendant and members of the family had been in the room. Defendant acknowledged taking the sum of $45.60; held, that a charge in reference to the theft of property under the value of $50 was properly refused. Ellis v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 205.

The indictment contained two counts, one for theft and one for knowingly receiving stolen property. Defendant was convicted for the latter; held, he could not be injured by a defective charge on the former count. Rosson v. State, 37 App. 87, 38 S. W. 788.

When the animal was only running with defendant's cattle and he did not claim ownership, and explained why the animal was in his pen, he was entitled to an instruction on that phase of the case, and the court's attention having been called to that defense, should have given a proper instruction. Berry v. State, 37 App. 44, 38 S. W. 812.

The court instructed the jury that defendant's explanation of possession might be shown to be false by circumstantial evidence; held, correct. Franklin v. State, 37 App. 312, 39 S. W. 680.

The defense was that the cow alleged to have been stolen took up and ran with defendant's cattle, and that defendant's son, without defendant's knowledge, put his brand on said cattle; held, the court should have given a plain, straight charge upon such defense. Berry v. State, 37 App. 44, 38 S. W. 812.

A charge that if taking was innocent defendant should be acquitted; held, sufficient. Key v. State, 37 App. 511, 40 S. W. 296.

The court instructed the jury: "If you believe from the evidence that the defendant, at the time he took the oats, believed that he had the consent of the owners or the consent of either of them, then there would be an absence of fraudulent intent and you will acquit the defendant;" held, sufficient. Beabout v. State, 37 App. 515, 40 S. W. 405.

As to fraudulent intent, see Beabout v. State, 36 App. 515, 40 S. W. 405.

Instruction as to stealing the property in another county and bringing it into the county of the prosecution; held, sufficient. Thurman v. State, 36 App. 646, 40 S. W. 795.

Instruction as to fraudulent intent; held, insufficient. Harrell v. State, 37 App. 612, 40 S. W. 799.

When the evidence tends to show that the taking was only for temporary use, the court should give that defense in the charge. Harrell v. State, 37 App. 612, 40 S. W. 799.

Defendant's witnesses testified that the calf charged to have been stolen was sucking defendant's cow, and that at the time it was branded they supposed it belonged to defendant, that they branded it when it was a sucking calf. The court should have instructed the jury in effect that if they believed from the evidence that the calf belonged to defendant's cow he could not be convicted. Black v. State, 38 App. 58, 41 S. W. 606.

See opinion for instruction held not contradictory, in that it instructed the jury that if defendant's explanation of possession was reasonable they should acquit him; but if defendant's explanation was unreasonable they should take his possession as a circumstance against him. Wheeler v. State, 38 App. 71, 41 S. W. 615.

On trial for theft of cattle when there is evidence of the taking of other cattle at the same time, the court should in its instruction limit such testimony to its legitimate purpose. Bratt v. State, 38 App. 121, 41 S. W. 622.

When the State admitted that defendant obtained possession of the money with consent of the owner, it was error for the court to charge the jury to convict if they found from the evidence that defendant obtained the money without the consent of the owner. It was also erroneous to charge upon the money being obtained by false pretense when there was no evidence of such pretense. Sanders v. State, 38 App. 343, 42 S. W. 983.

The evidence showed that about a month after the theft was committed, defendant's father was arrested and a part of the stolen property found in his possession. The court instructed on the possession of recently stolen property; held, error. The evidence showed that the property had been stolen for a month, and there was no evidence to show that defendant was present when his father was arrested. Spillman v. State, 38 App. 607, 44 S. W. 149.

On trial for theft of a horse it is proper for the court to charge the jury, if they find certain facts supported by the evidence, they should find defendant guilty of theft, if such facts constitute theft. Crook v. State, 39 App. 252, 45 S. W. 720.

Where State relies solely on possession of recently stolen property, charge on circumstantial evidence must be given. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 340.

Where an indictment contains first count for theft and second count for receiving stolen property, charge as to possession of property recently stolen, held erroneous, because jury might have applied it to second count in absence of explanation. Trail v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 92.

Where brand recorded after the commission of the offense is admitted in evidence, the court should instruct the jury that it can only be considered for purpose of identity and not to prove ownership. Welch v. State, 42 App. 338, 60 S. W. 46.

This article does not apply to horse theft, and a charge stating the punishment as provided by article 1353 as amended by act of 1897 was correct. Beard v. State, 45 App. 522, 78 S. W. 348.

A charge held erroneous as precluding the jury from passing on the value of a safe alleged to have been stolen. Schwartz v. State, 53 App. 449, 111 S. W. 399.

It is error to charge that if the jury should find the defendant guilty of petty theft to assess his punishment at confinement in the county jail not exceeding one year and by a fine not exceeding $500. Peck v. State, 54 App. 81, 111 S. W. 1021, 16 Ann. Cas. 583.

A portion of a charge submitting the issue of the owner's possession of stolen sacks authorized a conviction if the jury were satisfied that defendant, at or about the time charged in the indictment, "fraudulently took from the possession of the sacks the property described in the indictment, and that they were the property of J. J. McQ., without the consent of said J. J. McQ., with intent to deprive the owner of the value of the same," etc. Held, that it was wholly meaningless and defective, in that the jury were not required to find that the property was taken from possession of the person as laid in the indictment. Eubanks v. State, 57 App. 153, 122 S. W. 35.

Where the issue of theft was raised by the state's case, and defendant admitted the manual taking, but claimed it was done under circumstances not imputing crime to him, but in pursuance of purchase, it was error to submit the issue of voluntary return of stolen property, as that doctrine necessarily implies there has been, in the first place, a criminal taking, and this charge was calculated to create a belief in the minds of the jury that the original taking was wrongful. Eubanks v. State, 57 App. 153, 122 S. W. 35.

An indictment for theft must aver possession of the property stolen, and that it was taken from possession of the owner or person holding for him, and in submitting the issue of possession it should be substantially in the terms of the indictment. Eubanks v. State, 57 App. 153, 122 S. W. 35.

In a prosecution for theft, under article 1340, declaring that theft of property of the value of $50 or over shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than 2 nor more than 10 years, a charge failing to require the jury to find the value of the property taken was erroneous. Johnson v. State, 57 App. 308, 122 S. W. 877.

Defendant was charged with the theft of property over the value of $50, in violation of article 1340, declaring such theft punishable by imprisonment. Defendant requested the court to charge that, when theft of property by the same person and from the same owner is committed on different occasions, each occasion constitutes a distinct offense, and that unless property of the value of $50 was taken at one and the same time defendant must be acquitted. Held that, though such instruction was erroneous in so far that it directed an acquittal if the jury found the value of property taken at any one time to be less than $50, it was sufficient to call the court's attention to error in omitting to require the jury to find the value of the property taken, and to consider such value as an ingredient of the offense. Johnson v. State, 57 App. 308, 122 S. W. 877.

Where defendant offered no explanation of his possession of the property alleged to have been stolen until the trial, when he swore that he obtained it from D., the evidence did not raise the issue of explanation of possession of property recently stolen, and the court was not required to charge thereon. Cleveland v. State, 57 App. 356, 123 S. W. 142.

Where, in a prosecution for cattle theft, only a count alleging possession in H., was submitted to the jury, and the proof did not conclusively show an abandonment of possession by N., under a contract to care for the cattle between N. and H., or a termination of his possession at the time of the theft, the court erred in refusing to charge that possession of the person so unlawfully deprived of property is constituted by the exercise of actual control or management of the property, and if at the time the cattle were taken they were in the possession of N. the jury should find defendant not guilty. Bonner v. State, 59 App. 350, 128 S. W. 1102.

In a prosecution for theft, a charge of the court which failed to instruct that the taking by defendant must have been without the consent of the prosecuting witness, whom the indictment alleged was the owner, and where the evidence failed to show that the taking was without his consent, is objectionable. McConico v. State, 61 App. 48, 133 S. W. 1047.

In a prosecution for theft, declarations of the defendant, introduced in evidence in explanation of his possession of the stolen property, were sufficient to authorize a charge on the law of explanation of the possession of recently stolen property. Bacon v. State, 61 App. 206, 134 S. W. 690.

In a prosecution for theft, on an information charging the property in one and the possession in another holding for him, a charge not requiring the jury to find that the property was taken without the consent of the party in possession is fatally defective. Henley v. State, 61 App. 428, 135 S. W. 133.

Where a house servant, on trial for stealing a watch from a room, was not in possession of the stolen property, though the evidence showed that he had disposed of it shortly after the alleged theft, an instruction upon the presumption arising from the possession of the recently stolen property is unnecessary. Dixon v. State, 62 App. 75, 136 S. W. 463.

An indictment for theft, charging that the property was taken without the consent of J. "and" L., the owners, was not insufficient for failing to state that the taking was without the consent of either. Taylor v. State, 62 App. 611, 138 S. W. 615.

In a larceny trial, it was proper to instruct that before convicting of felony it must be found beyond reasonable doubt that the bicycle stolen was of the reasonable cash market value of $50 or over, and that if accused was deemed guilty beyond reasonable doubt, but the jury had reasonable doubt as to such value, he should be convicted of petty theft. Robinson v. State, 63 App. 373, 140 S. W. 228.

An instruction that, if the property was found recently after being stolen in defendant's possession, etc., he could be convicted, was not improper because the property was found in possession of the railway company to which accused had delivered it for shipment. Davis v. State, 63 App. 453, 140 S. W. 349.

An instruction in a prosecution for theft that by the "value of property" is meant the market value of the property at the time and place of the taking was not misleading, and properly defined the market value of the property as being at the place where stolen, though such a charge was not necessary; the term "market value" being in general use, and easily understood. Williams v. State, 63 App. 507, 140 S. W. 447.

Where defendant in a prosecution for the theft of a hog testified that, after keeping up the hogs in his pen a week or a week and a half, they were turned out and stayed around the house three or four days, and went back and forth in the woods, and that one of them seen by defendant went off in the woods, and defendant had never seen it since, a charge that theft is complete when the fraudulent taking occurs, which includes the intent to deprive the owner of the value of the property, if fraudulently taken and without the consent of the owner, and that it was immaterial that the person so taking it was from some cause afterwards deprived of the property, is warranted by the evidence. Holloway v. State, 63 App. 503, 140 S. W. 453.

In a prosecution for theft of property to the value of over $50, a charge which failed to give the statutory definition of such theft, as prescribed by article 858, was not erroneous, where the charge required all the elements of the statutory offense to be found against accused before conviction. Franklin v. State, 63 App. 438, 140 S. W. 1091.

In a prosecution for the theft of a yearling which defendant killed, where it was shown that he concealed the carcass, and told one who remonstrated with him that he was doing the killing, a charge that if the taking was under a claim of right, by honest mistake, subsequent appropriation would not be theft was unnecessary. Roberts v. State, 64 App. 135, 141 S. W. 235.

In a prosecution for theft of lard thrown from a railroad car onto the right of way, and loaded by defendant into a wagon almost immediately thereafter, evidence held insufficient to present the issue of the accidental finding of lost property. Roman v. State, 64 App. 515, 142 S. W. 912.

Defendant, having been acquitted of burglary from a railroad car from which lard had been thrown onto the right of way, was then indicted for theft; the evidence showing that he was apprehended while in the act of loading a part of the lard into a wagon on the night that it was taken from the car. He requested the court to charge that, if another person threw the lard from the car, then the fact that defendant took the same from the right of way would not constitute theft, which the court gave with the addition, unless the jury believed that defendant either by himself or in connection with another took possession of the property with the intent at the time of defrauding the owner, and appropriating the same to his own use. Held that, though the charge as requested was not the law of the case, the amendment was in effect a peremptory instruction to find defendant guilty, and was erroneous. Roman v. State, 64 App. 515, 142 S. W. 912.

In a prosecution for the theft of cattle, a charge that, if the animal in question was the property of the prosecuting witness, yet defendant cannot be convicted if it went voluntarily into his lot or pasture, or got in there otherwise than through the act or agency of defendant, is not erroneous in authorizing a conviction if defendant drove the animal into his pasture, though not intending to steal it, or if the agent of defendant drove the animal into the pasture. Baker v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 607.

In a prosecution for horse theft, it appeared that the owner had once authorized accused's alleged accomplice to trade the horses, and accused testified that when he and the latter took the horses from the owner's pasture, the accomplice told accused that he owned the horses, and agreed to pay accused $10 to take them to a certain place for him, and that accused took the horses from the owner's pasture under that belief. The court charged that if the jury believed that accused took the horses under the honest belief that they belonged to the accomplice, or under the belief that the accomplice had authority from the owner to take them, the jury should acquit, and also instructed that if the accomplice had authority from the owner to dispose of the horses and hired accused to take them to a certain place, and accused thought he had the right to do so by reason of such employment, the jury should acquit, and further instructed that accused's explanation of his possession of recently stolen property is admissible for him, if it was given on the first occasion for any explanation by him (that is, when he was first directly or circumstantially called upon to explain his possession), and in such case, if such explanation be not shown to be false, further evidence of guilt would be required to warrant a conviction. Held, that the instructions sufficiently presented the theory of accused's defense. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 186.

An instruction, on a trial for the larceny of the property of R. in the possession of T., which authorizes a conviction if the property was taken without the consent of R. and T., or either of them, is erroneous. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1094.

Where, on a trial for larceny, the evidence of prosecutor's ownership of the property was uncertain, and the state introduced in evidence the testimony of accused on a former trial to the effect that the property belonged to a third person, and that accused sold it for him for a compensation, the refusal to charge that the jury could not find accused guilty, unless they believed that the property belonged to prosecutor, was reversible error. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1094.

Where, on a trial for the larceny of a bale of cotton, the testimony of prosecutor as to his ownership thereof was uncertain, and the state introduced in evidence the testimony of accused on a former trial to the effect that the cotton was the property of another person, and that accused sold it for him for a compensation, the refusal to charge that, unless accused was connected with the original taking, he must be acquitted, though the cotton belonged to prosecutor, and was unlawfully taken by some other person, though accused knew it was taken at the time he received it and hauled it to market, was reversible error. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1094.

An instruction that if accused purchased property claimed to have been stolen by him, or the jury had reasonable doubt thereof, they should acquit, fully presented his defense embodied in his testimony that he purchased the property from another. Fennell v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 127.

In a prosecution for the theft of cattle, where it appeared that defendants were both acting as hired hands for the owner of the herd into which the stolen cattle had gotten and had no interest in the cattle themselves, the jury should have been appropriately instructed as to its bearing on their possession. McKnight v. State, 70 App. 470, 156 S. W. 1188.

On a trial for cattle theft, where the testimony showed that soon after the theft the cattle were in accused's possession and sold by him, that he and the purchaser were indicted, and that the purchaser called on him for an explanation of his possession, this being the first time and first occasion he had been so called upon to explain, and that he then explained that he had not stolen the cattle, but had a bill of sale and a check showing payment for them, a charge on the possession of recently stolen property was properly given, since to justify such charge it is not necessary that the explanation should go minutely into the details of accused's alleged purchase of the stolen property. Turner v. State, 71 App. 477, 160 S. W. 357.

Where the evidence in a prosecution for hog theft raised the issue of a taking by mistake, the court should have granted a requested instruction that, even if accused was a principal in the taking, he could not be convicted if he believed at the time that the hog belonged to his father and that he had a right to take it under his father's authority. Harris v. State, 71 App. 463, 160 S. W. 447.

The claim of defendant, charged with theft of a calf, that he bought it from some one or other of the persons from whom he had recently bought cattle was presented sufficiently favorably by a charge to acquit if the jury believe from the evidence that he bought it from enumerated persons, or any one else, or if they have a reasonable doubt as to whether he did so. Law v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 90.

Defendant, charged with theft of a calf, is not entitled to a charge as to the nature of the possession which will alone warrant an inference of guilt, where the state does not rely on recent possession alone, but there are other cogent circumstances; the animal being recently branded with defendant's brand, and he admitting possession and claiming ownership through purchase from some one or other. Law v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 90.

On a trial for stealing a harness found in accused's possession, and which he claimed to have purchased from a trader, instructions that if the harness was bought by him from a trader, or if the jury had a reasonable doubt thereof, to acquit accused, and that if they believed that he bought the harness from a trader, or from any person, or got it from any person other than by acting in connection with M. and breaking and entering the barn of the prosecuting witness, to acquit accused, submitted accused's defensive plea in a very favorable light, and he could not complain thereof. Whitfill v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 681.

Where accused, on trial for theft, showed that, when first charged with the offense, he claimed that he bought the property from a certain third person for a specified price, the court should charge that if accused did not steal the goods, but bought them from the thief knowing them to be stolen, he was not guilty of theft, which was a separate offense. Baldwin v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 701.

In a prosecution for larceny of a gate, where the defendant admitted the taking, but testified that he did so because he lived 35 miles from where lumber could be bought, and that he took the gate only to use it temporarily until he could get some lumber, and so informed the prosecuting witness, and that he thought from his past dealings with the witness that there would be no objection, it was error not to give proper instructions as to the intent of defendant. Kellar v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 723.

In a prosecution for the larceny of a gate, where defendant admitted taking it, but claimed that it was with intent to use only temporarily, and then return it, it was error to instruct the jury that one could not borrow property without the express consent of the owner, and to refuse to submit the defense of want of felonious intent; since that amounted practically to a peremptory instruction to find the defendant guilty. Kellar v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 723.

39. Verdict.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 770.

Art. 1330. [859] Property must have some value.—The property must be such as has some specific value capable of being ascertained. It embraces every species of personal property capable of being taken.

See other decisions as to value, ante, article 1329, and post, article 1342, notes. Hurley v. State, 30 App. 333, 17 S. W. 455, 23 Am. St. Rep. 916; Sands v. State, 30 App. 578, 18 S. W. 86.

Pay check as subject of offense.—Under the statute, a pay check is the subject of theft. Fulshear v. State, 59 App. 376, 128 S. W. 134.

A pay check payable to order is the subject of theft, though it is not indorsed. Fulshear v. State, 59 App. 376, 128 S. W. 134.

Application of statute to indictment.—Where an indictment charged theft from the person and described the property stolen as a pocketbook containing one $10 bill and two $5 bills, all of the aggregate value of $20, good and lawful money of the United States, the description is sufficient under art. 458, providing that where it is necessary to describe property in an indictment a general description by name, kind, and quality shall be sufficient, and this article and article 1337, post, both of which refer to the crime of theft, and, respectively, provide that the property must have some specific value, and that the term "property" as used in relation to theft includes money, bank bills, and goods of every description as well as agricultural products, and all other personal property, since any theft from the person is a felony and the grade of the offense does not depend upon the amount stolen, and the property alleged to have been stolen was not money, but a pocketbook and its contents, all of which was of the aggregate value of $20. Sims v. State, 64 App. 435, 142 S. W. 572.

Art. 1331. [860] Asportation not necessary.—To constitute "taking," it is not necessary that the property be removed any distance from the place of taking; it is sufficient that it has been in the possession of the thief, though it may not be moved out of the presence of the person deprived of it; nor is it necessary that any definite length of time shall elapse between the taking and the discovery thereof; if but a moment elapse, the offense is complete.

See Martin v. State, 44 Tex. 172; Cody v. State, 31 App. 183, 20 S. W. 398; Minter v. State, 26 App. 217, 9 S. W. 561.

Taking and asportation.—See notes under articles 1329, ante, and 1351, post.

It must be proved that there was a taking of the property, but it is not necessary to prove that there was any asportation of it. To constitute a taking, it is not necessary that the property should have passed into the actual manual possession of the thief. Thus, where the defendant pointed out to a person a certain cow and calf on the range, falsely claiming that he owned them, and sold them to the person to whom he had pointed them out, and such person thereupon took possession of the cow and calf, it was held the acts of defendant constituted a taking effected through the innocent agency of the purchaser. Doss v. State, 21 App. 505, 2 S. W. 814, 57 Am. Rep. 618, overruling Lott v. State, 20 App. 230. So where the defendant called up a bunch of hogs, and sold them to a person who took and carried them away, this was held to be a taking by the defendant. When the theft is of an animal, it is a taking, whenever the animal is brought under the control of the thief. Madison v. State, 16 App. 436. Killing the cow of another on the range, though the animal never passed into the manual possession of the slayer, was held to be a taking. Coombes v. State, 17 App. 259. And killing a hog is taking it. Hall v. State, 41 Tex. 287; Walker v. State, 3 App. 70. But where the defendant sold a steer, claiming it as his property, and executed a bill of sale for it to the purchaser and received pay, the steer at the time being on the range, and not in the possession, actual or constructive, of the defendant or his vendee, it was held that there had been no taking. Hardeman v. State, 12 App. 207. A person may be guilty of a taking, although he be not present at the time and place of the taking, but the evidence must show his complicity as a principal in the original taking. See the following cases illustrating this doctrine: Wright v. State, 18 App. 356; Trimble v. State, Id. 632; Watson v. State, 21 App. 598, 1 S. W. 451, 17 S. W. 550; Doss v. State, 21 App. 505, 2 S. W. 814, 57 Am. Rep. 618; Smith v. State, 21 App. 107, 17 S. W. 552; Welsh v. State, 3 App. 413; Wells v. State, 4 App. 20; Scales v. State, 7 App. 361; McCampbell v. State, 9 App. 124, 35 Am. Rep. 726; Cohea v. State, 9 App. 173; O'Neal v. State, 14 App. 582; ante, art. 73.

Asportation is not necessary to constitute theft. The marking and branding of an animal without asporting it, and for the purpose of appropriation, will evidence a fraudulent taking. Coward v. State, 24 App. 590, 7 S. W. 332.

Defendant broke and entered a store containing a female figure on which was a dress and cloak. He had taken the cloak from the figure, rolled it up, and laid it on the floor, and was trying to take off the dress, but had not succeeded, having pulled it down to the bottom of the figure, by which method it could not be removed, and the storekeeper testified that it could only have been taken off over the head. Held, that there was no sufficient asportation of the dress to constitute theft thereof, and that defendant was therefore only guilty of the theft of the cloak. Clark v. State, 59 App. 246, 123 S. W. 131, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 323.

In a prosecution for theft, proof that defendant, or some one, had taken actual manual possession of the cotton and moved it some distance to the scales, that defendant informed the manager of the yard holding the cotton for the owner that he had cotton to be weighed and assisted him in weighing and sampling it, and received tickets issued by such owner, which he sold for cash, showed a "taking," within this article. Reece v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 317.

Necessity of thief's actual possession.—In Lott v. State, 20 App. 230, it was held that though asportation of the property was not essential to complete the theft, still there must have been a fraudulent actual taking of the property, and the property must have passed into the possession of the thief. But this doctrine of the Lott Case was expressly overruled in Doss v. State, 21 App. 505, 2 S. W. 814, 57 Am. Rep. 618, which holds that a fraudulent taking constitutes and completes the crime of theft, and that it is not necessary that the property should have passed into the actual manual possession of the thief. See the last cited case for an elaborate discussion of the question and a review of previous decisions. See, also, Dukes v. State, 22 App. 192, 2 S. W. 590; Coombes v. State, 17 App. 259; Madison v. State, 16 App. 436; Hall v. State, 41 Tex. 287; Flynn v. State, 42 Tex. 301; Hardeman v. State, 12 App. 207. Post, art. 1348, note. *Conner v. Allegation of taking and asportation in indictment.—See note under article 1329, ante.

Art. 1332. [861] The "taking" must be wrongful.—The taking must be wrongful, so that if the property came into the possession of the person accused of theft by lawful means, the subsequent appropriation of it is not theft, but if the taking, though originally lawful, was obtained by any false pretext, or with any intent to deprive the owner of the value thereof, and appropriate the property to the use and benefit of the person taking, and the same is so appropriated, the offense of theft is complete.

1. Offense under this article in general.—This statute is broad enough to comprehend any pretext by which the possession of the property is obtained, although such pretext be in itself illegal. Lovell v. State, 48 App. 85, 86 S. W. 753, 13 Ann. Cas. 561.

One can be prosecuted under this article for obtaining money from another for the purpose of bribing an officer. The fact that the owner of the money intended to commit a crime when he parted with his money will not avail the accused as a defense. The statute is very broad and does not say that the pretense must be a legal pretense, if true, but merely requires that if the taking though originally lawful, was obtained by any false pretext, etc., the party would be guilty of theft. Lovell v. State, 48 App. 85, 86 S. W. 760, 13 Ann. Cas. 561.

When the taking of the property was originally lawful, that is, when the property came into the possession of the accused not wrongfully, but lawfully, a conviction for theft can not be sustained unless it be shown that the accused obtained the property by some false pretext, or with the intent at the very time of obtaining the property of depriving the owner of the value thereof, and of appropriating the property to the use and benefit of the person taking; and it must also further appear that the property was so appropriated. Porter v. State, 23 App. 295, 4 S. W. 889; Hornbeck v. State, 10 App. 408; Dow v. State, 12 App. 343; Morrison v. State, 17 App. 34, 50 Am. Rep. 120; Atterberry v. State, 19 App. 401. See, also, Keonio v. State, 4 App. 173; Berg v. State, 2 App. 148; Pitts v. State, 3 App. 210; Pitts v. State, 5 App. 122; Madden v. State, 1 App. 204. In order to establish the character of theft specified in the preceding article it must be proved by the state: 1st, That the possession of property was obtained by false pretext; or 2d, that at the very time the possession of the property was obtained by the accused, there existed in his mind the fraudulent intent to deprive the owner of the value of the property, and to appropriate the same to his own use; and 3d, that he did so appropriate the property. The fraudulent intent must exist at the very time of acquiring the possession of the property. No subsequent fraudulent intent or appropriation of the property will suffice to constitute the original lawful taking theft. And the mere fact that subsequent to his lawful acquisition of the property, the accused appropriated it to his own use and benefit, is not sufficient to establish the falsity of the pretext by which he acquired possession, nor his fraudulent intent at the time of such acquisition. Hernandez v. State, 20 App. 151. Where property is taken with the consent of the owner, or with the consent of one owner where there are several, the taking is not wrongful but lawful. Taylor v. State, 18 App. 489. And so where it is taken with the consent of the agent or clerk of the owner. Powell v. State, 11 App. 401. As to consent of the owner for the purpose of entrapping the thief, see Epeiden v. State, 3 App. 156, 30 Am. Rep. 126; Johnson v. State, 3 App. 590; Allison v. State, 14 App. 122; Pigg v. State, 43 Tex. 108; Alexander v. State, 12 Tex. 540; Robinson v. State, 34 App. 71, 29 S. W. 40, 53 Am. St. Rep. 701.

This article provides two modes under which the acquisition of the property will constitute theft: 1, that the taker obtained the lawful possession of the property by some false pretext which induced or deceived the owner to surrender it to him; or, 2, that at the time he obtained the possession of it with the consent of the owner, he intended to deprive the owner of the value of the same and appropriate it to his own use. Porter v. State, 23 App. 295, 4 S. W. 889; Stokely v. State, 24 App. 509, 6 S. W. 538; Boyd v. State, 24 App. 570, 6 S. W. 853, 5 Am. St. Rep. 908; Cunningham v. State, 27 App. 480, 11 S. W. 485; Williams v. State, 30 App. 153, 16 S. W. 760.

To constitute theft the taking of the property must have been wrongful, unless the possession of the property was obtained by some false pretext, or the taking was accompanied by the intent to deprive the owner of the value of the property. Stokely v. State, 24 App. 509, 6 S. W. 538.

Conversion by the accused of property lawfully obtained is not sufficient to establish the fraudulent intent at the time of the taking. Stokely v. State, 24 App. 509, 6 S. W. 538.

If the accused got possession of a horse, intending to comply with an agreement made with the owner, he would not be guilty of theft, but if he intended to appropriate the horse at all events, he would be guilty of theft. Sheil v. State, 32 App. 512, 24 S. W. 646.

Although the possession of the property is obtained by defendant lawfully, yet if it was obtained with the intent to deprive the owner of the value thereof, the offense of theft is complete, as contemplated by this article. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 65 S. W. 922.

Where one procures the possession of personal property by the false and fraudulent statement that the check which he gives in payment is good, knowing at the time that it is worthless with the intent thereby to deprive the owner of the value of the property, is theft under this article. Bullard v. Stuart, 46 Civ. App. 49, 102 S. W. 175.

Unless the accused intended at the time of taking to appropriate the property to his own use he would not be guilty under this statute of theft. Flagg v. State, 51 App. 602, 103 S. W. 856.

Where defendant accosted prosecutor and solicited that he purchase liquor, and prosecutor gave defendant a dollar for a quart of alcohol, and defendant kept the money without delivering any alcohol, a demand for return of the money was not essential to defendant's conviction for theft thereof. Hawkins v. State, 58 App. 407, 126 S. W. 268, 137 Am. St. Rep. 970.

One who negotiates for purchase of hogs, and obtains possession of them on his promise to send back the money, not intending to do so, but to appropriate to his own use, which he does, is guilty of larceny, though but for his fraud the title would have passed. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 85.

Where C. paid defendant $10, on her representation that for a fee of that amount she would obtain for him certain employment, which she never did, intending the title of the $10 to pass to her, defendant was not guilty of "theft," but, at most, of "swindling." Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 159.

2. Offense compared with and distinguished from offense under article 1348.— See Abbey v. State, 35 App. 589, 34 S. W. 930.

A conviction for theft by means of false pretext may be had under an indictment charging theft in usual form. The evidence in this case shows that the accused acquired the possession of the alleged stolen horses with the consent of the owner, under a contract of hiring. Under this proof the trial judge charged the jury upon theft by means of false pretext, as defined by article 1332, and also theft, as defined by the act of March 8, 1887 (article 1348, post), i. e., fraudulent conversion of property without the consent of the owner. When said property has been obtained from the owner by virtue of a contract of bailment, held, that the proof authorized the charge first mentioned, but that the same was insufficient, inasmuch as it failed to instruct the jury explicitly that the fraudulent intent on the part of the accused must have existed at the very time he obtained possession of the property, and that no subsequent fraudulent intent would constitute theft. Taylor v. State, 25 App. 96, 7 S. W. 861.

The fact that the prosecution might have been maintained under article 1348 of the Penal Code, is no reason why it might not also be maintained under this article, if the facts bring it within this article. Lewis v. State, 48 App. 309, 87 S. W. 831.

Under this article the fraudulent intent must exist at the time of obtaining the money and the representations must be false, while under article 1348 the fraudulent intent rises subsequent to obtaining the goods. Appropriation is necessary under both articles. Price v. State, 49 App. 131, 91 S. W. 571.

3. Offense distinguished from "swindling" or "embezzlement".—The difference between theft by false pretext and swindling is that in theft the owner parting with the possession does not intend to part with the ownership of his property. In swindling the owner intends to part with both ownership and possession. Taylor v. State, 32 App. 110, 22 S. W. 149.

Where defendant was at a saloon and rooming house "moving around and drinking" and said to prosecutor that he was working there and that prosecutor had better give him his money to keep instead of taking it to his room, and the latter did so, and the defendant appropriated the money to his use, he was guilty of theft and not of embezzlement, the statement that he was working there being false. Johnson v. State, 46 App. 415, 80 S. W. 622.

Where one borrows money on pretense to pay a debt and promises to return when he reaches a certain place, but appropriates the money, it is not theft but swindling. Bink v. State, 50 App. 450, 98 S. W. 250.

Where parties by pretense of a footrace obtained money from the owner which he says he loaned to one man to bet on the race, which was to be returned to him in any event together with half of the winnings, if the one to whom he loaned won his bet, it was theft under this article and not swindling when he failed to get any of it back. Glasgow v. State, 50 App. 635, 100 S. W. 933.

Where by the fraud practiced the title to money is passed, the offense is "swindling" as defined by article 1241, post, and not theft, but if mere possession is obtained by false pretenses, and title does not pass, the person acquiring the money is guilty of "theft." Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 217.

4. Theft regardless of pretense.—Conversion of property, where one obtains it for the purpose of appropriating it to his own use is theft, regardless of any pretense. Flynn v. State, 47 App. 26, 83 S. W. 206.

5. Theft of lost property.—See Rochell v. State, 55 App. 152, 115 S. W. 583; Moxie and Brackens v. State, 54 App. 529, 114 S. W. 375; Rhodes v. State, 11 App. 563.

To constitute a finding theft, the intent to defraud the owner and appropriate the property must exist in the mind of the finder at the time he took possession. If the intent to steal did not exist at that time no subsequent intent to steal will render the original taking theft. Stepp v. State, 31 App. 349, 20 S. W. 753. And see Reed v. State, 8 App. 40, 34 Am. Rep. 732; Wilson v. State, 14 App. 205; Warren v. State, 17 App. 207; Worthington v. State, 53 App. 178, 109 S. W. 187.

The evidence in this case tends to show that the defendant found the lost property, and the question of notice of ownership turns upon the fact whether he knew the owner, or could he by ordinary inquiry have ascertained the ownership of the same. The proof was that the family name of the owner was plainly engraved on the property—a lady's watch—and that the defendant was in the vicinity of the place of its loss on the night it was lost, and knew of the presence there of the person who lost it. Held sufficient to put the defendant upon notice of ownership. Stepp v. State, 31 App. 349, 20 S. W. 753.

Lost property, like any other, may be the subject of theft, although the finder come lawfully into possession of it. If, at the very time of finding and taking the lost property, the criminal intent to deprive the owner of the value of the property, and to appropriate it to the use and benefit of the taker, is formed in the mind of the taker, the taking will be theft. Statum v. State, 9 App. 273; Robinson v. State, 11 App. 403, 40 Am. Rep. 790; Rhodes v. State, 11 App. 563. The time of the taking is the time of the finding, and if the fraudulent intent did not exist at the time of the taking, no subsequent fraudulent intent in relation to the property will constitute theft. The following would be a proper charge upon this issue: "If you believe from the evidence that the property was lost, and that the defendant found it, he can not be convicted of the theft of it unless you believe from the evidence that at the time he found it, he fraudulently took it with the intent at that time to deprive the owner of the value of it, and to appropriate it to his own use or benefit. No fraudulent intent in the mind of the defendant in relation to the property, which was formed after he had taken the property, will authorize his conviction of the theft of such property." Martinez v. State, 16 App. 122; Warren v. State, 17 App. 207; Reed v. State, 8 App. 40, 34 Am. Rep. 732; Wilson v. State, 14 App. 205.

The finding of lost property is not per se theft, yet lost property can be stolen. Robinson v. State, 11 App. 403, 40 Am. Rep. 790.

The finder of lost property is not guilty of theft though he may expect reward, when he does not withhold and conceal it until he gets a reward. Martin v. State, 44 App. 538, 72 S. W. 386.

Where accused had found a pair of gloves, which the prosecuting witness had left in the post office, and, thinking that they belonged to another person, took them to give to such other person, but, on seeing a lost notice of the prosecuting witness, returned them to him, accused was not guilty of larceny; there being no intent on his part to appropriate the gloves to his own use. Drummond v. State, 71 App. 260, 158 S. W. 549.

Where a trunk was sold in which were goods unknown to both buyer and seller, the goods, so far as the parties were concerned, were lost, and the owner is deemed to still have constructive possession, so that they may be the subject of larceny by the finder. Ellis v. Garrison (Civ. App.) 174 S. W. 962.

For a person to be guilty of the theft of lost goods, there must have been an intent to steal at the time of the finding, and knowledge or reasonable means of ascertaining the owner. Ellis v. Garrison (Civ. App.) 174 S. W. 962.

6. Appropriation of estray.—When a person takes up a horse as an estray with no intention of stealing him, his afterwards appropriating him does not constitute theft. McCarty v. State, 36 App. 135, 35 S. W. 994.

Where a party takes up a horse and uses it, to convict him there must be shown an intent to steal it at the very time he took it up. Gosler v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 51.

7. Conversion of employer's property.—A servant who is in temporary custody of his employer's property is guilty of theft if he fraudulently appropriates the same to his own use. Livingston v. State, 38 App. 535, 43 S. W. 1008.

8. Money paid by mistake.—If at the time accused received more than his check on a bank called for, he intended to appropriate it to his own use, and did so appropriate it, it would be theft. Fulcher v. State, 32 App. 621, 25 S. W. 625.

9. Indictment and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 634. See Dow v. State, 12 App. 343; Morrison v. State, 17 App. 34, 50 Am. Rep. 120; Atterberry v. State, 19 App. 401.

The matter alleged to be false should be fully set out and described, and the indictment to be good must by positive averment negative the existence of the facts or truth of the matters alleged to be false. Warrington v. State, 1 App. 168.

If the indictment sets out the false pretenses, etc., by which the theft was perpetrated, they must be proved as alleged. Warrington v. State, 1 App. 168.

Under an indictment for theft by wrongful taking against the owner's consent, proof is competent that the taking was with such consent, but obtained by false pretext, or with intent to deprive the owner of his property, and appropriate it to the use of the taker; upon which, with further proof of such an appropriation, a conviction may be had notwithstanding the form of the indictment. Berg v. State, 2 App. 148, noting that Marshall's Case, 31 Tex. 471, has been overruled.

The false pretext must be set out, and its truth negated by express averment, and the indictment must further aver the delivery of the property with the owner's consent, and also the intent with which it was obtained. Jones v. State, 8 App. 648.

Under an indictment for theft charging a fraudulent taking without the owner's consent, the state may prove that the taking was with the owner's consent, but obtained by false pretenses. Hawkins v. State, 58 App. 407, 126 S. W. 263, 137 Am. St. Rep. 970.

10. Evidence.—See Worthington v. State, 53 App. 178, 109 S. W. 187.

In a prosecution for theft of money by false pretenses, evidence held to warrant a conviction. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 217.

In a prosecution for theft of money by false pretenses, evidence held not to raise the issue whether the money was loaned to accused. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 217.

11. Charge of court.—See Pones v. State, 43 App. 201, 63 S. W. 1021; Glasgow v. State, 50 App. 635, 100 S. W. 933.

Art. 1333. [862] Possession and ownership need not be in same person.—It is not necessary, in order to constitute theft, that the possession and ownership of the property be in the same person at the time of taking.

See notes under article 1329, ante.

Corporate property.—The property stolen belonged to Ben Irelson Company (a corporation). Ben Irelson owned most of the stock in the company and was manager and in control of the business. Possession and ownership were properly alleged to be in him. Price v. State, 55 App. 157, 115 S. W. 586.

Proof under indictment.—In view of this and the following article it was held that art. 457, providing that where one person owns the property, and another has possession, charge, or control of it, ownership may be alleged in either, and where property is owned in common, or jointly by two or more, ownership may be alleged to be in all or either, applied to the special owner of property as well as the actual owner thereof, and that the state made out its case when it proved the alleged owner to be a special joint owner with two others, and that, while all three had the care and management of the property, it was unnecessary to prove want of consent of the other joint owners, though to prove it would not be reversible error, nor prejudicial to accused. Lockett v. State, 59 App. 531, 129 S. W. 627.

— As applied to burglary.—Under this and the following article, an allegation, in an indictment for breaking and entering a house with intent to take personally, that such property belonged to a certain person, was supported by proof that he had the exclusive care, control, and management of the property. Clark v. State, 58 App. 181, 125 S. W. 12.

Art. 1334. [863] Possession; how constituted.—Possession of the person so unlawfully deprived of property is constituted by the exercise of actual control, care and management of the property, whether the same be lawful or not.

See notes under articles 1329 and 1333, ante.

Possession or ownership in general.—Property left temporarily in the custody of another is in possession of the owner. And a joint owner who has exclusive possession is the owner. Garling v. State, 2 App. 44.

It is not necessary that the possession be lawful. Crockett v. State, 5 App. 526; Moore v. State, 8 App. 496; King v. State, 43 Tex. 351.

Possession or ownership is constituted by the concurrence of actual control, care and management of the property. Pippin v. State, 9 App. 269; Ledbetter v. State, 35 App. 195, 32 S. State*, 33 App. 89, 25 S. W. 289.

Where property is accidentally left in a particular place, it is still in the possession, constructively, of the owner. Statum v. State, 9 App. 273.

In the preceding article the word "or" between the words "care" and "management" should be read "and" in construing said article. To constitute possession within the meaning of said article, there must be combined actual control, actual care, and actual management of the property. Frazier v. State, 18 App. 434, overruling upon this point Erskine v. State, 1 App. 405.

A railroad yardmaster having the care and control of freight at a certain point had the legal possession of goods in cars there. McDonald v. State, 70 App. 80, 156 S. W. 209.

Synonymous terms.—"Possession" and "custody" are not synonymous or convertible terms, and if property be in the mere temporary custody of a ward, servant, or other person, it is not in the possession of the ward, servant, or other person, but is in the possession of the owner. Bailey v. State, 18 App. 426; Frazier v. State, Id. 434; Littleton v. State, 20 App. 168; Clark v. State, 23 App. 612, 5 S. W. 178; Thomas v. State, 1 App. 289; Burns v. State, 35 Tex. 724; Garling v. State, 2 App. 44; Crook v. State, 39 App. 252, 45 S. W. 720, and cases cited; Daggett v. State, 39 App. 5, 44 S. W. 148, 842.

Community property in custody of widow.—The widow is the "owner" of unadministered community property in her actual custody. Henry v. State, 45 Tex. 84.

Animals on range.—Animals on their accustomed range are in the possession of their owner. Deggs v. State, 7 App. 359; Jones v. State, 3 App. 498; Crockett v. State, 5 App. 526; Moore v. State, 8 App. 496; Cameron v. State, 44 Tex. 652; Bennett v. State, 32 App. 216, 22 S. W. 684; Mackey v. State, 20 App. 603; Hayes v. State, 30 App. 404, 17 S. W. 940; McGrew v. State, 31 App. 336, 20 S. W. 740.

If, however, they are in the custody and care of a special owner, though on the range, they are in his possession. Littleton v. State, 20 App. 168; Hall v. State, 22 App. 632, 3 S. W. 338; Williams v. State, 26 App. 131, 9 S. W. 357, citing Tinney v. State, 24 App. 112, 5 S. W. 831, and Alexander v. State, 24 App. 126, 5 S. W. 840.

Theft of a cow is no less the taking from the original owner because a third person has previously taken it and changed the brand, where the cow returned to her accustomed range before the theft. Taylor v. State, 62 App. 611, 138 S. W. 615.

Animals on their accustomed range being in the possession of the owner, one who takes an animal disturbs the owner's possession and is guilty of larceny. Dugat v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 789.

Cattle running at large.—Cattle running at large, and not on accustomed range, are subject of theft. Borer v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 951.

Charge of court.—See notes under article 1329, ante.

Art. 1335. [864] Theft of one's own property, when.—No person can be guilty of theft by taking property belonging to himself, except in the following cases:

1. Where the property has been deposited with the person in possession as a pledge or security for debt.

2. Where it is in the possession of an officer of the law by process from a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Where the property is in the possession of an executor or administrator for the purpose of administration.

4. In all other cases where the person so deprived of possession is, at the time of taking, lawfully entitled to the possession thereof as against the true owner.

Taking under claim of right or belief of ownership.—See Small v. State, 18 App. 336; Boyd v. State, 28 App. 524, 13 S. W. 864; McGowan v. State, 27 App. 183, 11 S. W. 112; Herber v. State, 7 Tex. 69; Thurman v. State, 33 Tex. 634; Howard v. State, 25 App. 602, 8 S. W. 806; Cudd v. State, 25 App. 666, 8 S. W. 814; Demint v. State, 26 App. 370, 9 S. W. 738; Thompson v. State, 26 App. 466, 9 S. W. 760; Wilson v. State, 27 App. 577, 11 S. W. 638; Parks v. State, 29 App. 597, 16 S. W. 532; Young v. State, 34 App. 290, 30 S. W. 238.

Where property has been taken under a claim of right, if the accused appears to have had any fair color of title, or if the title of the prosecutor be brought into doubt at all, the court will direct an acquittal, it being improper to settle such disputes in the form of process affecting men's liberties or reputation. Harris v. State, 17 App. 177; Evans v. State, 15 App. 31; McNair v. State, 14 App. 78; Smith v. State, 42 Tex. 444; Boyd v. State, 18 App. 339; Benton v. State, 21 App. 554, 2 S. W. 885.

If property be taken under the belief at the time on the part of the taker that it belongs to him, it is not theft, although in fact the property does not belong to him. Britt v. State, 21 App. 215, 7 S. W. 255; Owens v. State, 21 App. 579, 2 S. W. 808; Donahoe v. State, 23 App. 457, 5 S. W. 245; White v. State, 23 App. 643, 5 S. W. 164; Misseldine v. State, 21 App. 335, 17 S. W. 768; Bray v. State, 41 Tex. 203; Johnson v. State, Id. 608; Smith v. State, 42 Tex. 444; Mullins v. State, 37 Tex. 337; Billard v. State, 30 Tex. 367, 94 Am. Dec. 317.

Taking from landlord without repaying advances.—"Croppers on shares" may commit the offense if they take cotton raised by them from the possession of the landlord without complying with their contract to repay advances before title should pass. Connell v. State, 2 App. 422. But if, by the contract, the landlord is not entitled to exclusive possession, it is not theft. Bell v. State, 7 App. 25.

Taking from bailee.—Under this article it is immaterial whether the fraudulent taking of his own property from his bailee would operate to charge the bailee; it would be theft. Taylor v. State, 7 App. 659; State v. Stephens, 32 Tex. 155.

— Common law.—At common law the taking of one's goods from a bailee was not larceny unless it operated to charge the bailee with their value, but it is otherwise under this Code. Taylor v. State, 7 App. 659; State v. Stephens, 32 Tex. 155.

Taking from officer.—The taking of his own property under either clause of this article must be fraudulent to constitute theft. The taking of one's own property from the possession of an officer who has levied on it is not necessarily theft; nor is the taking from an officer any more fraudulent than from an individual. Billard v. State, 41 App. 225, 53 S. W. 637.

Art. 1336. [865] Part owner can not commit, unless.—If the person accused of the theft be part owner of the property, the taking does not come within the definition of theft, unless the person from whom it is taken be wholly entitled to the possession at the time.

Taking by part owner in general.—Where the defendant was charged with the theft of property belonging to A, and the proof showed that A had purchased the property from the half brother of the defendant, and that said property was a portion of the estate of a deceased brother of the defendant and in which estate defendant owned an interest, and upon which estate there was no administration, it was held, that as the defendant had never parted with his inherited interest in said estate, and had not authorized the sale of said property, he was a part owner of said property, and his right to the possession thereof was as good as A's, the alleged owner's, and he was therefore not guilty of theft in taking said property. Fairy v. State, 18 App. 314.

Delegation of right to take.—Where an owner or joint owner of property is not entitled to the possession of it, he can not delegate to another person the right to take the same, and the consent of such owner or joint owner will not protect the person taking the property from amenability for the theft of it. Duren v. State, 15 App. 624.

Croppers on shares.—When "croppers on shares" took from the gin yard of their landlord, cotton raised by them, but baled up and in the landlord's possession, and upon which the landlord had a lien for unpaid advances, it was held to be theft. Connell v. State, 2 App. 422.

"Croppers on shares" may commit the offense if they take cotton raised by them from the possession of the landlord without complying with their contract to repay advances before title should pass. Connell v. State, 2 App. 422. But if, by the contract, the landlord is not entitled to exclusive possession, it is not theft. Bell v. State, 7 App. 25.

A rented land of B, it being the agreement that each should have an equal share of the crops produced when gathered, and that A's part of the crop should be bound for advances made to him by B. Before the crops were gathered or divided, A, without the consent of B, sold a bushel of the corn raised. Held, not to be theft, as under the rental contract B was not entitled to the exclusive possession of the crops. Bell v. State, 7 App. 25.

Where cotton in the open boll, alleged to have been stolen, was the joint property of defendant and his lessor under a contract to share the crops, and defendant, after having moved off the place, later returned to finish gathering the crop, a conviction of the defendant for theft could not be sustained, since the lessor could not divest defendant of his ownership and possession by having the cotton picked, and there was no such severance of defendant's relation to the cotton as would make his possession of it unlawful or his sale of it theft. Gipson v. State, 57 App. 290, 122 S. W. 557.

Partnership property.—Where the court charged that if the property was partnership property the jury should acquit, it was more liberal than this article required, and the defendant could not complain. Warren v. State, 51 App. 99, 100 S. W. 952.

Art. 1337. [866] "Property" defined.—The term "property," as used in relation to the crime of theft, includes money, bank bills, goods of every description commonly sold as merchandise, every kind of agricultural produce, clothing, any writing containing evidence of an existing debt, contract, liability, promise or ownership of property real or personal, any receipts for money, discharge, release, acquittance and printed book or manuscript, and, in general, any and every article commonly known as and called personal property, and all writings of every description; provided such property possesses any ascertainable value.

Property defined in general.—See Ex parte Willke, 34 Tex. 155; Harberger v. State, 4 App. 26, 30 Am. Rep. 157; Bryant v. State, 16 App. 144; Block v. State, 44 Tex. 620; Lewis v. State, 28 App. 140, 12 S. W. 784; Kimbrough v. State, 28 App. 367, 13 S. W. 218; Green v. State, 28 App. 493, 13 S. W. 784; Davis v. State, 32 App. 377, 23 S. W. 794.

Property, to be the subject of theft, must be such as has some specific value capable of being ascertained, and it embraces every species of personal property capable of being taken. Collins v. State, 20 App. 197. See, also, succeeding article.

"Property" includes any and every article commonly known and designated as personal property. Brown v. State, 23 App. 214, 4 S. W. 588.

Property severed from realty.—Doors, when severed from a house, become personal property and the subject-matter of theft. Ex parte Willke, 34 Tex. 155.

The common law rule that the severance and asportation of things annexed to the realty must be distinct and several acts, does not obtain in this state. Thus taking rails from a fence may be theft. Harberger v. State, 4 App. 26, 30 Am. Rep. 157.

The moment property is detached from real property it becomes personal property, and the taking thereof is theft. Alvia v. State, 42 App. 424, 60 S. W. 551.

Money.—National bank notes, and United States treasury notes, are "money" and "property." Sansbury v. State, 4 App. 99. See, also, Taylor v. State, 29 App. 466, 16 S. W. 302; Otero v. State, 30 App. 450, 17 S. W. 1081; Menear v. State, 30 App. 475, 17 S. W. 1082; Cook v. State, 4 App. 265.

In a prosecution for theft of $1, current money of the United States, the court should charge that the evidence must show that the money taken was current money of the United States, in order to convict. Johnson v. State, 58 App. 442, 126 S. W. 597.

Bank-bills.—"Bank-bills" include "bank-notes." Roth v. State, 10 App. 27.

Checks.—A check drawn but not delivered, and stolen while in the possession of the drawer is "property" under this article. Worsham v. State, 56 App. 253, 120 S. W. 440, 441, 18 Ann. Cas. 134.

Deeds.—A deed executed and acknowledged has a value, so as to be the subject of theft. Roberts v. State, 61 App. 434, 135 S. W. 144.

Railroad tickets.—See Patrick v. State, 50 App. 496, 98 S. W. 840, 123 Am. St. Rep. 861, 14 Ann. Cas. 177.

Application of statute to indictment.—In view of the provision herein that the term "property," in relation to theft, includes every article commonly known and called personal property, it was held that, since paper currency of the United States was "property" within such definition, an indictment, charging theft of $50 in paper currency of the value of $50, was not fatally defective for failure to allege that such currency was money, or, if not money, for failure to describe it more specifically. Diaz v. State, 62 App. 317, 137 S. W. 377.

Where an indictment charged theft from the person and described the property stolen as a pocketbook containing one $10 bill and two $5 bills, all of the aggregate value of $20, good and lawful money of the United States, the description is sufficient under art. 458, providing that where it is necessary to describe property in an indictment a general description by name, kind, and quality shall be sufficient, and this and article 1350, ante, both of which refer to the crime of theft, and, respectively, provide that the property must have some specific value, and that the term "property" as used in relation to theft includes money, bank bills, and goods of every description as well as agricultural products, and all other personal property, since any theft from the person is a felony and the grade of the offense does not depend upon the amount stolen, and the property alleged to have been stolen was not money, but a pocketbook and its contents, all of which was of the aggregate value of $20. Sims v. State, 64 App. 435, 142 S. W. 572.

Art. 1338. [867] Animals of domestic breed included.—Within the meaning of "personal property" which may be the subject of theft, are included all domesticated animals and birds, when they are proved to be of any specific value.

Dog.—A dog is a subject of theft, and if value sufficient be alleged and proved, punishment may be by confinement in the penitentiary. Hurley v. State, 30 App. 333, 17 S. W. 455, 28 Am. St. Rep. 916.

Chicken.—Under this article on a prosecution for theft of a chicken, failure to prove its value necessitates reversal of a judgment of conviction. Hasley v. State, 50 App. 45, 94 S. W. 899.

Art. 1339. [868] Particular penalties exclude general punishment.—Theft of certain particular kinds of property, as of a horse, property wrecked, etc., have a punishment affixed differing from the general punishment of the crime of theft; whenever, therefore, the law provides a particular punishment for theft committed in regard to a special kind of property, theft of such property is not included within the law affixing a general penalty to the offense; but in other cases, whenever it is declared to be an offense to steal or otherwise fraudulently appropriate property, the provision is intended to include any and every species of personal property according to its general and broadest signification.

Art. 1340. [869] Theft of fifty dollars and over.—Theft of property of the value of fifty dollars or over shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. [Amend. 1895, p. 15.]

Art. 1341. [870] Petty theft; how punished.—Theft of property under the value of fifty dollars shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years, during which time the prisoner may be put to hard work on the county roads or otherwise, and by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by such imprisonment without fine. [Id.]

See notes under the following article.

Application of statute to bail.—In view of this article, making petty theft punishable by imprisonment in jail not exceeding two years and by fine not exceeding $500, or by such imprisonment without fine, and of Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 646, requiring that the defendant be personally present for trial of an offense punishable by imprisonment in jail, a bail bond in the sum of $100, conditioned for the defendant's appearance for trial on the charge of the theft of a pair of shoes worth $4, was not excessive. Willis v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 904.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 634.

Art. 1342. [871] General penalties not applicable, when.—The two preceding articles do not apply to theft of property from the person, nor to cases of theft of any particular kind of property where the punishment is specially prescribed.

1. Punishment in general.—For decisions as to punishment, see Irvin v. State, 25 App. 588, 8 S. W. 681; Cunningham v. State, 27 App. 479, 11 S. W. 485; Berry v. State, 27 App. 483, 11 S. 2. Punishment specially prescribed.—The theft of a $1,200 automobile is punishable under Acts 33d Leg. c. 100, § 1, providing that any one who shall steal any motor vehicle worth over $35 shall be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than one year, and not under the statute relating to the theft of property worth over $50, by which a penitentiary sentence is authorized in view of article 1342, providing that the articles of the Code prescribing the penalty for theft of property worth over $50 do not apply to the theft of any particular property where the punishment is specially prescribed. Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 351.

3. Conviction of misdemeanor in case of felony per se.—If the theft be a felony per se the accused cannot be convicted of a misdemeanor theft. Roberts v. State, 33 App. 83, 24 S. W. 895.

4. ——— Theft from the person.—Where indictment charges theft from the person only the defendant can not be convicted of petty theft. Roberts v. State, 33 App. 83, 24 S. W. 895.

5. Value as determining degree of offense in general.—See Clark v. State, 26 App. 486, 9 S. W. 767; White v. State, 33 App. 94, 25 S. W. 290.

Where the accused, under the pretense of making change for a twenty dollar bill of the value of twenty dollars, after getting said bill in his possession stated to the person who had handed it to him that he could not change it, and, pretending to return the said bill, fraudulently returns instead thereof a one dollar bill, it was held, that he had taken property of the value of twenty dollars and was guilty of felony. Walters v. State, 17 App. 226, 50 Am. Rep. 128.

Felony theft is for theft of property over the value of twenty dollars, and the penalty is from two to ten years in the penitentiary. Cunningham v. State, 27 App. 479, 11 S. W. 485; Berry v. State, 27 App. 483, 11 S. W. 521; Stallings v. State, 29 App. 220, 15 S. W. 716; Spradling v. State, 30 App. 595, 17 S. W. 1117.

A dog is a domesticated animal and, therefore, the subject of theft. To steal a dog of over twenty dollars in value is felony. Williamson v. State, 30 App. 330, 17 S. W. 722.

An employé, having dominion and custody of certain of his employers' property, without their knowledge or consent, on January 20, sold twenty sacks of cotton-seed meal for $1 per sack, which he delivered in three successive trips from the place of storage to the place of delivery. The defense was, that each sale was a separate transaction running through a week. The court charged the jury that before they could convict of a felony they must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant took during one day a sufficient amount of cotton-seed meal to be of the reasonable value of $20 or over. Held error. The felonious character of a theft can not be fixed by the amount which may be stolen in one day. The converse is the general rule, that property taken at one time and one place constitutes one transaction and one offense, and no aggregation of distinct and separate misdemeanors will make a felony. But see the opinion for exceptions to the rule, to which category this case does not belong. Cody v. State, 31 App. 183, 20 S. W. 398.

Where the value of lard taken from a railroad car and thrown on the right of way was more than $50, that the lard loaded by defendant in his wagon shortly thereafter, at the time he was arrested, was less than $50 did not raise the issue of misdemeanor, since, if he was not connected with the original taking as principal or otherwise, his going to the place and loading the lard in his wagon would not render him guilty of theft at all, and, if he was connected with the original taking, the degree of the offense was determined by the value of all the lard taken from the car. Roman v. State, 64 App. 515, 142 S. W. 912.

6. Value defined.—"Value" is the market value of the article if it has such value, and if not, the amount it would cost to replace it. Martinez v. State, 16 App. 122; Cannon v. State, 18 App. 172; Saddler v. State, 20 App. 195; Rollins v. State, 32 App. 567, 25 S. W. 125.

And see Clark v. State, 23 App. 612, 5 S. W. 178, to the effect that the allegation of value has reference to the market value in the county of the prosecution.

7. Alleging and proving value.—See notes on evidence under article 1329, ante. The value of the property stolen must be alleged, except where the theft of particular kinds of property is declared an offense, as in the case of certain animals, and also except in the case of theft from the person. It is only in cases where the character of the offense and its punishment are made dependent upon the value of the property that it is necessary to allege value. Shaw v. State, 23 App. 493, 5 S. W. 317; Collins v. State, 20 App. 197; Hall v. State, 15 App. 40; Pittman v. State, 14 App. 576; Cady v. State, 4 App. 238; Radford v. State, 35 Tex. 15; Boyle v. State, 37 Tex. 359; Sheppard v. State, 1 App. 522, 28 Am. Rep. 422; Lunn v. State, 44 Tex. 85; Cook v. State, 2 App. 290; Lopez v. State, 20 Tex. 780; Johnson v. State, 29 Tex. 492. An indictment for the theft of a watch left with a jeweler to be repaired, need only allege the value of the watch, not the value of the repairs. State v. Stephens, 32 Tex. 155. An indictment charging the theft of several articles may allege an aggregate value to the whole; but if the value affects the penalty it is better to allege the value of each article, and thus provide against a possible failure to prove the theft of some of them. Meyer v. State, 4 App. 121; Doyle v. State, Id. 253; Ware v. State, 2 App. 547; Thompson v. State, 43 Tex. 270. The allegation of value has reference to the market value of the property in the county of the prosecution. Clark v. State, 23 App. 612, 5 S. W. 173; Saddler v. State, 20 App. 195; Martinez v. State, 16 App. 122. See, also, Sands v. State, 30 App. 578, 13 S. W. 86; Watts v. State, 6 App. 263.

In cases where the character of the offense and its punishment are made dependent upon the value of the property, such value must be alleged. To be the subject of theft, unless it be a particular kind of property, the taking of which is theft per se, the stolen property must have some specific value. Ellison v. State, 25 App. 328, 8 S. W. 462.

The property stolen must have some specific value capable of being ascertained, but it is only in cases where the character of the offense and its punishment is made dependent upon the value of the property stolen that value need be alleged or proved. Green v. State, 28 App. 493, 13 S. W. 784.

Value not being an essential element of theft from the person, it need not be either alleged or proved. Green v. State, 28 App. 493, 13 S. W. 784.

To sustain a felony conviction the proof must show that the value of the property taken was twenty dollars or over. Langford v. State, 8 Tex. 115; Simpson v. State, 10 App. 681; Pittman v. State, 14 App. 576; Hall v. State, 15 App. 40; Moore v. State, 17 App. 176.

Where it is necessary to allege the value of property, it is also necessary to prove it. Radford v. State, 35 Tex. 15; Cady v. State, 4 App. 238; Cook v. State, 2 App. 290; Simpson v. State, 10 App. 681; Pittman v. State, 14 App. 576; Hall v. State, 15 App. 40; Lunn v. State, 44 Tex. 85.

On the trial of one jointly charged with others, it is only necessary to prove the value of the property taken by all of the parties committing the theft, without showing the value of the property taken by each one. And if the value of the property taken by all the thieves acting together in the theft amounts to twenty dollars, they are each guilty of a felony. Clay v. State, 40 Tex. 67.

Where an indictment charges the theft of several different articles and alleges the aggregate value of the property, but does not allege the separate value of the articles, the proof must establish the theft of each article, or the conviction will not be sustained. Thompson v. State, 43 Tex. 268; Meyer v. State, 4 App. 121; Doyle v. State, Id. 253; Ware v. State, 2 App. 547.

When the property taken was charged to be two hundred pounds of cotton of the aggregate value of six dollars, and the proof showed the theft of seventy-five pounds of the aggregate value of three dollars, it was held that this variance was immaterial, as the charge and conviction were for a misdemeanor. Duren v. State, 15 App. 624.

And the proof must show that property of the value of twenty dollars or over was taken at one time. Lacey v. State, 22 App. 657, 3 S. W. 343.

Where different articles are alleged to have been stolen, and the values are fixed of each separate article, the evidence must show the taking of articles of the value of $50 or over at one time to sustain a conviction for felonious theft, under article 1340, making the theft of property of the value of $50 or over punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary. Johnson v. State, 57 App. 308, 122 S. W. 877.

A complaint and information, charging accused with stealing money of the value exceeding $1, was not insufficient to support a conviction of petty theft, as failing to show that the offense was not a felony, because of the failure to allege that the money was of a value of less than $50, since the complaint did not charge a felony in the absence of an allegation that the money was of the value of $50, or over, and it could not have misled accused, especially where he made no objection in the court below. McAdams v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 792.

8. — Animals.—The value of an animal stolen need not be alleged or proved. Lopez v. State, 20 Tex. 781, Johnson v. State, 29 Tex. 492; Davis v. State, 40 Tex. 134.

The punishment formerly prescribed by article 1355 depending upon value, it was held that the indictment must allege value, and the proof must establish it. Blunt v. State, 9 App. 234; Lunn v. State, 44 Tex. 85; Hall v. State, 15 App. 40. And see Whitsett v. State, 9 App. 198; Hargrove v. State, 33 App. 165, 25 S. W. 967; Spradling v. State, 30 App. 595, 17 S. W. 1117; Cannon v. State, 18 App. 172.

If the property be hogs their value must be proved. Hall v. State, 15 App. 40; Lunn v. State, 44 Tex. 85; Pittman v. State, 14 App. 576. The above decisions were rendered under the former law which did not punish hog theft as a felony unless the value was $20 or over.

9. — Money.—Where money was described as "ten dollars, lawful money," the description was held to be sufficient, and that it was unnecessary to further allege the value of the money. Warren v. State, 29 Tex. 369. But it was afterward held that the value of the money must be alleged. Boyle v. State, 37 Tex. 359, and such is the rule at present.

Where the property stolen is money its value must be proved. Simpson v. State, 10 App. 681; Cook v. State, 2 App. 290; Lavarre v. State, 1 App. 685; Martinez v. State, 41 Tex. 164; Boyle v. State, 37 Tex. 360. It was formerly held otherwise. Warren v. State, 29 Tex. 369.

10. — Property carried to another county.—Prosecution being in the county into which the stolen property was carried, its value in that county and not in the county of the original taking must be proved, it being necessary to show a complete offense in the county of the forum. Clark v. State, 23 App. 612, 5 S. W. 178, citing Roth v. State, 10 App. 27, and Gage v. State, 22 App. 123, 2 S. W. 638, and for review of rules applicable. Martinez v. State, 16 App. 122; Saddler v. State, 20 App. 195

11. — Felony per se.—Value need not be either alleged or proved in theft cases made by statutes felony per se. Art. 1339, ante.

In charging theft from the person, it is not necessary to allege the value of the thing taken. Campbell v. State, 61 App. 504, 135 S. W. 548; Watts v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 202.

Where the theft is from the person, it is a felony per se, and the value of the property taken need not be alleged or proved. Shaw v. State, 23 App. 493, 5 S. W. 317. See, also, Bennett v. State, 16 App. 236; Harris v. State, 17 App. 132; Green v. State, 28 App. 493, 13 S. W. 784.

Not necessary to allege value in thefts that are made felonies per se, that is, theft from the person, or of a horse, ass, mule, cattle or hog. In other thefts, value must be alleged and proved. Ellison v. State, 25 App. 328, 8 S. W. 462; White v. State, 33 App. 94, 25 S. W. 290; Lunn v. State, 44 Tex. 85; Johnson v. State, 29 Tex. 492; Lopez v. State, 20 Tex. 780.

Whenever punishment is affixed by law to the theft of a particular kind of property, it is unnecessary to either allege or prove the value thereof, the offense being made per se a felony; but with respect to all other classes of property value must be both alleged and proved, as the value determines the grade of the offense and the punishment. Johnson v. State, 57 App. 308, 122 S. W. 877.

12. Value as question for jury.—See notes under article 1329, ante.

13. Charge of court.—See notes under article 1329, ante.

Art. 1343. [872] Voluntary return of stolen property.—If property, taken under such circumstances as to constitute theft, be voluntarily returned within a reasonable time, and before any prosecution is commenced therefor, the punishment shall be by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 181.]

Voluntary return in general.—See Dalton v. State, 50 App. 523, 98 S. W. 855; Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 75 S. W. 35; Ware v. State, 47 App. 541, 84 S. W. 1065; Schultz v. State, 30 App. 94, 16 S. W. 756; Bennett v. State, 17 App. 143; Ellison v. State, 25 App. 328, 8 S. W. 462; Anderson v. State, 25 App. 593, 9 S. W. 43; Bennett v. State, 28 App. 342, 13 S. W. 142; Sands v. State, 30 App. 579, 18 S. W. 86; Boze v. State, 31 App. 347, 20 S. W. 752; Moxie and Brackens v. State, 54 App. 529, 114 S. W. 375; Purcell v. State, 29 App. 1, 13 S. W. 993; Hyatt v. State, 32 App. 580, 25 S. W. 291.

A voluntary return of stolen property, within the meaning of the preceding article, must be made under the following circumstances: 1. The return must be voluntary, that is, willingly made; not made under the influence of compulsion, fear of punishment, or threats. If, however, it be made under the influence of repentance for the crime, and with the desire to make reparation to the injured owner, it will be voluntary, although it may also be influenced by fear of punishment. 2. It must be made within a reasonable time after the theft, and before prosecution for the theft has been commenced. 3. It must be an actual, not merely a constructive return of the property into possession of the owner. 4. The property returned must be the identical property taken, and all of it unchanged. Bird v. State, 16 App. 523; Owen v. State, 44 Tex. 248; Stephenson v. State, 4 App. 591; Trafton v. State, 5 App. 480; Shultz v. State, Id. 390; Horseman v. State, 43 Tex. 353; Moore v. State, 8 App. 496; Allen v. State, 12 App. 190; Wheeler v. State, 15 App. 607; Bennett v. State, 17 App. 143; Dupree v. State, Id. 591; Schultz v. State, 20 App. 315; Stapp v. State, 31 App. 349, 20 S. W. 753.

Where the stolen animal had been conveyed thirty miles, and was returned back ten miles of that distance, it was held to be not a return of the property within the meaning of the preceding article. Turning an animal loose upon the range is not a return of it. Moore v. State, 8 App. 496.

Unless possession thereof had been obtained with the owner's consent. McCracken v. State, 6 App. 507; Brill v. State, 1 App. 572.

A return of stolen animals on the evening of the day on which they were stolen, is a return of the property "within a reasonable time." Ingle v. State, 1 App. 307.

When, as in this case, the evidence on a trial for theft tends to show a voluntary return of the stolen property by the accused to the owner within a reasonable time, and before prosecution has been instituted, it devolves upon the trial court to charge the jury upon the law applicable to such defense. See the statement of the case in Guest v. State, 24 App. 235, 5 S. W. 840, for evidence held to raise the issue of a voluntary return of the alleged stolen property, within the statutory meaning of that defense. Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242. And see Kellar v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 723.

And note this case—theft of lost property—on "reasonable time" as applied to voluntary return, and the intent in retaining possession of lost property found. Stapp v. State, 31 App. 349, 20 S. W. 753.

Return on demand.—Return of the stolen property upon the demand of the owner is not a voluntary return. Harris v. State, 29 App. 101, 14 S. W. 390, 25 Am. St. Rep. 717.

Payment for property.—Payment for the property is not a voluntary return. Shultz v. State, 5 App. 390; Trafton v. State, Id. 480.

Return after accused found in possession or taken in act.—A thief caught in the possession of the stolen property cannot claim the benefit of the preceding article by offering to give up the stolen property or pay for it. Grant v. State, 2 App. 164.

The offer of the thief to return the property comes too late after he has been caught in possession. Harris v. State, 29 App. 101, 14 S. W. 390, 25 Am. St. Rep. 717; Boze v. State, 31 App. 347, 20 S. W. 752.

When defendant was found in possession of the hogs recently marked, he offered to return them to the owner; held, this was not a voluntary return. Blount v. State, 34 App. 640, 31 S. W. 652.

Where defendant knows that stolen property has been discovered in his possession, he cannot, by thereafter returning the same, reduce his punishment. Elkins v. State, 35 App. 206, 32 S. W. 1046.

When the proof shows that accused was detected in the theft it is too late to make a voluntary return, but the evidence must show that he knew he was detected. Elkins v. State, 35 App. 206, 32 S. W. 1047.

To constitute "voluntary return" of property, it must be willingly restored to the owner within a reasonable time, the motive inducing its return being immaterial, but a return after accused is found in possession or taken in the act, or after prosecution is instituted, is not voluntary. Petty v. State, 59 App. 586, 129 S. W. 615.

In a prosecution for misdemeanor theft, no charge on the voluntary return of stolen property is necessary, where the evidence showed that the property was not returned until after prosecution was begun. Stubbs v. State, 71 App. 390, 160 S. W. 87.

Art. 1344. [873] "Steal" or "stolen" include, what.—The words "steal" or "stolen," when used in this code in reference to the acquisition of property, include property acquired by theft.

Cited, Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 351.

Synonymous terms.—"Steal" and "stolen" are synonymous with "theft." Carr v. State, 9 App. 463; Sands v. State, 30 App. 578, 18 S. W. 86.

Application of statute to recognizance and indictment.—Recognizance for offense under article 1349, recited that the defendant stands charged with "receiving and concealing stolen property of the value of ten dollars," etc. It was objected to the recognizance that it was insufficient and invalid because it used the word "stolen" instead of the statutory words "acquired in such manner that the acquisition comes within the meaning of the term 'theft.'" Held, that under our Code the word "stolen" was sufficient in the recognizance, though it would not be in an indictment. Sands v. State, 30 App. 579, 18 S. W. 86.

Art. 1345. [874] Stealing agricultural products.—The stealing or feloniously taking any growing, standing or ungathered Indian corn, wheat, cotton, potatoes, rice or other agricultural product, shall hereafter be deemed theft; and any person who shall hereafter steal or feloniously take, pluck, sever or carry away any Indian corn, or wheat, cotton, potatoes, rice or other agricultural product, growing, standing or remaining ungathered in any plantation, field or other ground, shall, on conviction thereof, be deemed guilty of theft, and suffer punishment as in other cases of theft.

Fraudulent intent.—See notes under article 1329, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 635.

Evidence.—Accused was charged in an information with unlawfully and fraudulently stealing from the possession of A, one bushel of corn, of the value of 40 cents, and that the offense was committed in a county named, upon a date specified. The evidence showed that accused sold two bushels of corn for 50 cents a bushel, that the corn at the time was in the field and ungathered, that later the corn was gathered by the purchaser, that the corn belonged to another person than accused, and that the latter was not present when the corn was gathered. Held, that the evidence did not support the indictment. Carson v. State, 57 App. 30, 121 S. W. 860.

Charge of court.—On prosecution for stealing corn under article 1345, the court should charge the jury that they must believe that defendant took the corn either fraudulently or feloniously. McKinney v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 816.

Art. 1346. [875] Stealing record books or filed papers.—If any person shall take and carry away any record book or filed paper from any clerk's office, public office, or other place where the same may be lawfully deposited, or from the lawful possession of any person whatsoever, with intent to destroy, suppress, alter or conceal, or in any wise dispose of the same, so as to prevent the lawful use of such record book or filed paper, he shall be deemed guilty of theft, and punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than three nor more than seven years. [Act Feb. 12, 1878, p. 181.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 636.

See Witte v. State, 21 App. 88, 17 S. W. 723.

Art. 1347. [876] Stealing from a wreck.—If any person, with intent to deprive the true owner of the value thereof, shall appropriate to his own use, or dispose of to his own benefit, any property taken or driven on shore from any vessel wrecked, stranded or burned on the seashore, or on any river, bay or harbor of the state, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 637.

Art. 1348. [877] Conversion by a bailee is theft.—Any person having possession of personal property of another by virtue of a contract of hiring or borrowing, or other bailment, who shall, without the consent of the owner, fraudulently convert such property to his own use with intent to deprive the owner of the value of the same, shall be guilty of theft, and shall be punished as prescribed in the Penal Code for theft of like property. [Act March 8, 1887, p. 14.]

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—The fraudulent intent need not exist at the time of obtaining possession of the property. It is the fraudulent conversion, and not the fraudulent taking that forms the gist of this offense. Taylor v. State, 25 App. 96, 7 S. W. 861.

The proof shows that the accused borrowed a horse from the owner in the Indian Territory and rode it into Cooke county, Texas, where, without the consent of the owner, and with the fraudulent intent to convert and appropriate the said property to his own use, he sold it. Held, that such facts constitute the crime of theft as defined by this article. Brooks v. State, 26 App. 184, 9 S. W. 562. See, also, Harris v. State, 29 App. 101, 14 S. W. 390, 25 Am. St. Rep. 717.

The constituent elements of this offense are: 1, possession by virtue of bailment; 2, fraudulent conversion of same by bailee to his own use without consent; 3, conversion by the bailee with intent to deprive the owner of the value, etc. "Intent to appropriate" is not an essential ingredient. Purcell v. State, 29 App. 1, 13 S. W. 993.

The fact that a bank by mistake, paid defendant $500 more than his check called for, which he converted to his own use, did not justify conviction under this article. Fulcher v. State, 32 App. 621, 25 S. W. 625.

An agreement held to be a contract of hiring within the statute and not a gratuitous loan. Neel v. State, 33 App. 408, 26 S. W. 726.

To bring accused within the provisions of the statute he must be a party to the contract of bailment. Calkins v. State, 34 App. 251, 29 S. W. 1081.

Under this article, the state is not bound to prove that accused resorted to false pretenses, or entertained at the time he acquired possession, the intention to deprive the owner of the use, etc. He may have obtained the property in good faith, without intending to appropriate it, or to deprive the owner of its value, but having acquired possession by borrowing, a subsequent appropriation, such as is described in the statute, makes him guilty. Abbey v. State, 35 App. 590, 34 S. W. 930.

A conversion of property bailed constitutes theft under this article. Malz v. State, 36 App. 447, 34 S. W. 267, 37 S. W. 758.

Actual sale is not necessary to a conversion, and theft by bailee and conversion can be made before termination of bailment. See Steadham v. State, 40 App. 43, 48 S. W. 177; Elton v. State, 40 App. 342, 50 S. W. 379, 51 S. W. 245.

Under the statute it does not matter whether or not the party intended to convert the property at the time he acquired possession; it does not matter whether or not he resorted to any false pretenses or representations; and if he acquired possession by borrowing, hiring or as a bailee, and did convert, he is guilty. Lopez v. State, 37 App. 649, 40 S. W. 972.

A fraudulent conversion is an essential element of the offense. Smith v. State, 45 App. 251, 76 S. W. 434.

One is not guilty under this article who keeps a gun, which he has repaired, for the charges. Simpson v. State (Cr. App.) 96 S. W. 925.

One is guilty under this article who appropriates to his own use property which he borrows from one who is not the owner but who is in lawful possession of the same at the time of borrowing and ownership can be alleged in the temporary possession of the property. Piper v. State, 56 App. 121, 119 S. W. 869.

Where the tenant is bound under his lease to pick the cotton crop, have it ginned and sold, and deposit in a bank a certain per cent. of the proceeds as rent, and he retains the entire money, he is not guilty of theft as a bailee, because the landlord has neither delivered to him this specific property, nor has he such an ownership that the tenant by converting the money is guilty of theft. Northcutt v. State, 60 App. 259, 131 S. W. 1128, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 822.

Where the purchaser of land moved into possession, and the seller left certain harvester canvases on the land, because not ready to move them, and there was no false pretext used by the purchaser to obtain possession of them, his subsequent theft of these canvases is the crime defined by this article, making a fraudulent conversion by bailee theft, and in a prosecution for such conversion the defendant should be tried under the bailment statute, and charges presenting the issue of theft by a bailee should be given. Whitaker v. State, 62 App. 36, 136 S. W. 1072.

If the owners of mules authorized accused to sell them, he would not be guilty of theft, even though he failed to apply the proceeds on a note executed by him and guaranteed by them as agreed. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 181.

Where defendant, engaged to be married to prosecuting witness, procured diamond rings from her on pretense of having them repaired at his expense and then pawned them, there being no question of agency, he could be convicted of theft by bailee. Creale v. State, 71 App. 9, 158 S. W. 268.

Where defendant was in possession of a cow belonging to another under an agreement to borrow the cow, and fraudulently converted it to his own use without the owner's consent and with intent to deprive the owner of the value thereof, there was a conversion. Barrow v. State, 71 App. 549, 160 S. W. 458.

A bailee converting the money of his bailor to his own use was guilty of the theft thereof, though the money was delivered to him for an illegal purpose. Himmelfarb v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 586.

Under an indictment charging theft by a bailee of money received for the purpose of buying barroom fixtures and whisky, it was sufficient to sustain a conviction that the money was received for the purpose of buying whisky alone. Himmelfarb v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 586.

2. "Bailment" defined.—The word "bailment" has a well understood meaning and need not further be defined. Malz v. State, 36 App. 452, 34 S. W. 267, 37 S. W. 748.

A bailment is a delivery of personal property to another for some purpose, express or implied, that such purpose shall be carried out. Fulcher v. State, 32 App. 621, 25 S. W. 625. And see Neel v. State, 33 App. 408, 26 S. W. 726; Malz v. State, 36 App. 447, 34 S. W. 267, 37 S. W. 748; Abbey v. State, 35 App. 539, 34 S. W. 930; Taylor v. State, 25 App. 96, 7 S. W. 861; Jaimes v. State, 32 App. 473, 24 S. W. 297.

An essential of a bailment is the delivery of property by the bailor to the bailee for a particular purpose, and without such a delivery there can be no bailment, and it is also requisite that title to the property shall remain in the bailor. Northcutt v. State, 60 App. 259, 131 S. W. 1128, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 822.

The Penal Code defines "bailment" as a contract of borrowing or hire. "A bailment is a delivery of goods for some purpose on a contract, express or implied, that after the purpose has been fulfilled, they should be redelivered to the bailor, or afterwards dealt with according to his directions or kept until he reclaims them." Northcutt v. State, 60 App. 259, 131 S. W. 1128, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 822.

3. Nature of particular bailment.—Where the owner of a piano stored it in defendant's house for the owner's benefit, in consideration of which defendant's child was to have the use thereof for practice, the agreement constituted a bailment of hiring, as distinguished from a bailment of borrowing. Height v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 908.

4. Compared with and distinguished from other offenses.—See Fulcher v. State, 32 App. 621, 25 S. W. 625.

The constituent elements of the species of theft defined by this article, are essentially different from those of theft in general, and from theft by means of false pretext, inasmuch as, to constitute the theft denounced by this article, the fraudulent intent refers to and must concur with the act of conversion, and need not exist at the time of obtaining the possession of the property. Proof, therefore, which would support a conviction for the theft defined by this article, would not authorize a conviction for theft under an indictment for general theft; and inasmuch as the indictment was in general form, the charge of the court upon the theft defined by this article was unwarranted and erroneous. See the opinion in extenso for an elucidation of the principle. Taylor v. State, 25 App. 96, 7 S. W. 861.

Conviction cannot be sustained under an indictment charging theft in general terms—and vice versa. Torres v. State, 33 App. 125, 25 S. W. 128; Williams v. State, 30 App. 153, 16 S. W. 760.

A conviction for theft of a horse, on a general indictment for theft, is not supported by evidence that defendant borrowed the horse and thereafter converted him to his own use. Mangum v. State, 38 App. 231, 42 S. W. 291.

Although one may be guilty of theft under this article, that is no reason why he may not be prosecuted for embezzlement of property acquired by bailment under article 1416 in a proper case. Wilson v. State, 47 App. 159, 82 S. W. 652.

The fact that a prosecution may be maintained under this article is no reason why it might not also be brought under article 1332, if the facts bring it within the latter article. Lewis v. State, 48 App. 309, 87 S. W. 831.

Under this article the fraudulent intent arises after obtaining possession of the goods, while under article 1332 such intent must exist at the time of gaining possession of the goods and the representations must be false. Appropriation is necessary under both articles. Price v. State, 49 App. 131, 91 S. W. 571.

Where the charge is embezzlement under article 1416, it is error for the court to fail to charge on this crime, and to charge on conversion of property by bailee under this article. Maulding v. State, 53 App. 220, 108 S. W. 1182.

In a conversion under bailment, the fraudulent matters occur after obtaining lawful possession of the property. If the fraudulent purpose existed at the time of getting the property, and false pretenses were employed to get possession, with the then existing purpose of appropriating the property, and appropriation did occur, it would be "theft" under the general statute, and not under the statute with reference to conversion under a contract of hiring or borrowing. Pickrell v. State, 60 App. 572, 132 S. W. 938.

The word "bailee" as used in the embezzlement statute, which punishes the fraudulent conversion by a bailee, does not include all bailments, but only those for the sole benefit of the bailor, where there is a fiduciary relation between the parties; hence as there must be a fraudulent taking to constitute the crime of theft denounced by article 1329, the conversion of property by a bailee, where the bailment is for mutual benefit, falls within the purview of article 1348, making such conversion an offense, being neither theft nor embezzlement. Johnson v. State, 71 App. 206, 159 S. W. 849.

See Collins v. State, 56 App. 385, 118 S. W. 1038.

Not necessary under this article to allege the particular character of the bailment which makes the conversion theft. McCarty v. State, 45 App. 510, 78 S. W. 506.

Where the allegations are that the contract of hiring was with an agent of the owner, the indictment should allege that the person who made the contract with the defendant was the agent of the owner in positive terms, and should also allege that the conversion was without the consent of the agent as well as without the consent of the owner. McCarty v. State, 45 App. 510, 78 S. W. 506.

As the intent to appropriate the property is not expressly made an element of this offense as in the case of general theft, it is not necessary to allege it as specifically, nor in the same manner, as is required in general theft. Purcell v. State, 29 App. 1, 13 S. W. 993.

When indictment charges theft by a contract of bailment, it must allege that the accused was a party to the contract. Calkins v. State, 34 App. 251, 29 S. W. 1081. But a theft of pledged property may be charged under general indictment. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 785.

An indictment under this article alleging defendant at a certain time had possession of two mules, the property of W. and the possession thereof acquired by defendant by virtue of a contract of hiring and borrowing made with W. and defendant did then, without consent of W., fraudulently convert the mules to his own use, with intent to deprive the owner of their value, is insufficient, because not alleging defendant was bailee of W. or hired or borrowed the mules of W. by virtue of a contract between W. and himself. Smith v. State, 38 App. 232, 42 S. W. 302.

An averment that defendant had possession of the property in question, which he acquired by virtue of a contract of hiring and borrowing made with a third person named, sufficiently alleges a contract made with the third person. Elton v. State, 40 App. 339, 50 S. W. 379, 51 S. W. 245, overruling Smith v. State, 38 App. 232, 42 S. W. 302.

Indictment held sufficient under this article. Young v. State, 45 App. 247, 75 S. W. 798.

Ownership can be alleged in the temporary possession of the property. Piper v. State, 56 App. 121, 119 S. W. 869.

An indictment for theft of a horse by conversion, alleging that the horse belonged to R., that accused acquired possession of it under a contract of hiring with T. thereunto duly authorized by R., that T. was then and there the agent, clerk, and employé of R., etc., sufficiently alleged T.'s authority to make the contract of hiring. Evans v. State, 70 App. 79, 155 S. W. 531.

Theft by bailee and conversion can be proved by circumstances. Steadham v. State, 40 App. 43, 48 S. W. 177; Elton v. State, 40 App. 342, 50 S. W. 379, 51 S. W. 245.

The proof must show the accused a party to the bailment. Calkins v. State, 34 App. 251, 29 S. W. 1081.

Conversion under this article can be proved by circumstances as well as by direct and positive testimony. Jeffreys v. State, 51 App. 566, 103 S. W. 887.

In a trial of a bailee for theft of a horse placed in his charge, evidence that defendant borrowed money on the horse was not of itself proof of a conversion of the horse; defendant retaining possession thereof, and the owner being in a position to at any time reclaim it. McAlister v. State, 59 App. 237, 128 S. W. 123.

Evidence in a prosecution for theft as a bailee held not to show a bailment for hire, but to show a loan, if anything. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 181.

In a prosecution for theft of a piano as bailee, evidence held to warrant a finding that defendant fraudulently converted the piano to his own use in D. S. county, and removed the piano without the owner's knowledge to New Mexico. Height v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 908.

Where, in a prosecution for fraudulent conversion of a horse alleged to have been obtained under a contract of borrowing, defendant claimed that he had purchased the horse from prosecutor and it appeared that he had possession thereof for several months before he sold it and before prosecutor sought to have him arrested, evidence that prosecutor had not inquired concerning defendant or the horse or asked the sheriff to investigate the matter and find accused was admissible. Gamboia v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 249.

In a prosecution for theft of diamond rings which defendant pawned, testimony of the prosecuting witness that after she had refused to let defendant have her rings and defendant took them from her fingers, stating that he would have them repaired and return them, and that they went that evening to a picture show, is sufficient evidence on which to base a charge as to theft by bailee. Creale v. State, 71 App. 9, 158 S. W. 268.

On a trial for theft by a bailee, the prosecuting witness was properly permitted to testify that he never consented that accused might convert the money turned over to him to his own use. Himmelfarb v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 586.

On a trial for theft by a bailee, where it appeared that accused obtained money from a negro for the ostensible purpose of purchasing fixtures and whisky and procuring a license for a saloon which the negro was to conduct, and there was evidence that accused told the negro that he had applied to C. for a license, and that the negro then inquired of C. whether such application had been made, it was not error to permit C. to testify that accused never applied for a license, and that a negro inquired of him whether accused had so applied, though he could not identify the prosecuting witness as the negro who made the inquiry. Himmelfarb v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 586.

On a trial for theft by a bailee, where it appeared that accused used the money turned over to him by the prosecuting witness for another purpose in purchasing a car load of pool tables, the bill of lading for such pool tables was properly admitted in evidence. Himmelfarb v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 586.

Where accused agreed to rent a building to the prosecuting witness for a saloon, and at different times received money from him for the ostensible purpose of purchasing fixtures and liquors and procuring a license, evidence as to the entire transaction was admissible on a trial for theft of the money received for the purpose of buying whisky. Himmelfarb v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 586.

See Taylor v. State, 50 App. 377, 97 S. W. 473; Smith v. State, 45 App. 251, 76 S. W. 434.

Where the indictment alleges acquisition under contract of hiring and borrowing, and the evidence shows a hiring, it is error to restrict the jury in the charge to consideration of question of borrowing. Harrison v. State, 42 App. 509, 60 S. W. 963.

On prosecution for theft by bailment, an instruction that if defendant hired a wagon and harness in H. county for the purpose of going to J. county, and thus obtained the property, and then, while in H. county, conceived the idea of going elsewhere, with no intention of paying for the use of the property, and with the intention of moving out of the country with same, and did so, without the consent of the owner, and with the intent before leaving H. county of depriving the owner of the value of the same and to convert it to his own use, he was guilty, was objectionable as declaring him guilty for merely conceiving the offense. Pickrell v. State, 60 App. 572, 132 S. W. 938.

One who has a lien upon property or holds it as a pledge is not the owner, so that where, in a prosecution for theft of a pair of mules as bailee, the evidence made it an issue whether title to the mules had passed to the persons from whom the theft was charged to have been committed, or whether such persons merely held it to secure a debt from accused, it was error not to submit the issue. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 181.

In a prosecution for the conversion of a cow in possession of accused, an instruction defining theft and stating the punishment therefor was proper, where the law as to conversion by bailee provided that a person guilty of that offense should be punished in the same manner as if guilty of theft. Barrow v. State, 71 App. 549, 160 S. W. 458.

12. Punishment.—Acts 25th Leg. 1897, p. 83, c. 67, which punishes the offense defined by article 1353 by imprisonment for not less than 2 or more than 10 years, did not abrogate the punishment for theft as a bailee by changing the punishment for theft under article 1353 after the enactment of article 1348, as the latter article merely provided that whatever punishment was prescribed at any time by the Penal Code should be applicable to theft by a bailee. Brown v. State, 57 App. 570, 124 S. W. 101.

Art. 1349. [878] Receiving stolen property.—If any person shall receive or conceal property which has been acquired by another in such manner as that the acquisition comes within the meaning of the term theft, knowing the same to have been so acquired, he shall be punished in the same manner as if he had stolen the property. 1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—To sustain a conviction for receiving, etc., stolen property, it must satisfactorily appear, beyond a reasonable doubt, (1) That the property was acquired by theft, and (2) that the defendant, knowing it to have been so acquired, received or concealed the same. Wilson v. State, 12 App. 481; Mooney v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 52.

In order to constitute the offense of receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen, the fraudulent intent to secure profit from the act or to protect the thief, and the knowledge that the property was stolen, must concur with the commission of the act. The receiving of the property with intent to restore it to the owner without reward, or with any other innocent intent, although with knowledge that it was stolen, will not constitute the offense. Arcia v. State, 26 App. 193, 9 S. W. 685.

The gist of this offense is receiving the stolen property "knowing" it to have been stolen. Grande v. State, 37 App. 51, 38 S. W. 613.

A person may be guilty of receiving stolen property without concealing it, but he can not be guilty of concealing it without receiving it. Thurman v. State, 37 App. 646, 40 S. W. 795.

The original theft of the property by another must be proved, and then that the accused received the same knowing it to be stolen. Johnson v. State, 42 App. 440, 60 S. W. 667; Wilson v. State, 12 App. 481.

One cannot be convicted under this article when it is shown that he purchased the goods from one who had the legal power to sell them, though that sale involved a breach of trust by the latter. Bismark v. State, 45 App. 54, 73 S. W. 965.

Where accused was apprehended as he was loading stolen lard into a wagon on a railroad right of way, the court properly charged that he was not guilty of theft, unless he was connected with the original taking of the lard from the railroad car, since, if he was not so connected, he was only guilty of receiving stolen goods. Roman v. State, 64 App. 515, 142 S. W. 912.

To constitute the crime of receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen, actual knowledge of the theft is necessary; and it is not sufficient merely that there be knowledge of facts sufficient to satisfy a man of ordinary intelligence and caution that the property was stolen. Forrester v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1041.

A person who, knowing that goods were stolen, directed the thief to deliver them to him by placing them in his barn was guilty of receiving stolen goods, even conceding that an agreement between accused and the thief, pursuant to which the goods were stolen, would have authorized the state at its option to prosecute accused as an accomplice to the thief. Kaufman v. State, 70 App. 438, 159 S. W. 58.

2. Distinguished from theft or embezzlement.—A conviction for the offense of receiving stolen property can not be had under an indictment charging theft. Brown v. State, 15 App. 581; Chandler v. State, Id. 587; Gaither v. State, 21 App. 527, 1 S. W. 456; Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913; Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667; Gray v. State, 24 App. 611, 7 S. W. 339.

That the defendant, subsequent to the theft of the property, and with knowledge that it was stolen, aided the thief to dispose of it, or purchased it from the thief, are facts sufficient to support a conviction for receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen, but not to support a conviction for theft. Prator v. State, 15 App. 363.

Evidence in a theft case tending to establish the offense of receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen, the trial court erred in omitting to charge the jury that if they believed the evidence to establish such a receiving of the stolen property, and not an actual complicity in the taking of the property, the accused could not be convicted of theft. Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667.

The receiving of stolen property, though with guilty knowledge, will not support a conviction for theft, and the court, when the issue is raised, by the evidence, should so instruct the jury. Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913.

Receiving stolen property is a distinct offense from theft. Gray v. State, 24 App. 611, 7 S. W. 339; Pollard v. State, 33 App. 197, 26 S. W. 70.

A mere receiver of stolen property cannot be convicted of accessory to theft thereof. Street v. State, 39 App. 134, 45 S. W. 577.

If not in some way connected with the original taking so as to make him a principal, accused could not be convicted of theft, though he received the property knowing it to be stolen. Jackson v. State, 47 App. 85, 79 S. W. 521, 80 S. W. 631; McDonald v. State, 34 App. 556, 35 S. W. 286.

Accused drove a herd of cattle to town for shipment to market. A third person drove another's cattle into the herd, and requested accused to take them to market and remit to him the money after a sale of the cattle. The third person was seen in conjunction with accused in driving the cattle. Held, that accused, if not engaged in the original taking, could at most be convicted of receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen. Lee v. State, 57 App. 177, 122 S. W. 389.

The offenses of theft of property, of being an accomplice to the theft of such property, and of receiving and concealing the same property are entirely separate and distinct offenses, and, under an indictment charging one of such offenses, a party cannot be convicted of either of the others. Kaufman v. State, 70 App. 438, 159 S. W. 58.

The owner of certain personal property went to a bathing beach, and, before going in, deposited the property with the bathhouse keeper. R. in some way obtained possession of the check, presented it to the keeper, and obtained the property, and the next day part of it was found in accused's possession, concealed in a safety deposit vault. Held, that the evidence showed pure theft on the part of R., and did not raise the issue of embezzlement. Goldstein v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 709.

See Brothers v. State, 22 App. 447, 3 S. W. 737; Trimble v. State, 18 App. 632.

It is unnecessary to allege the name of the thief by whom the property was stolen, or the time or place of the theft; but the name of the owner of the property, if known, should be alleged, and the name of the person from whom the property was received by the defendant, or that the names of such persons were unknown to the grand jury. State v. Perkins, 45 Tex. 10. It need not be alleged that the stolen property was received or concealed by the defendant, without the consent of the owner, or with the intent to deprive the owner of the value of it, and to appropriate it to the defendant's use or benefit. It is not necessary to charge that the defendant received or concealed the property with intent to defraud any person. Nourse v. State, 2 App. 504. Nor is it necessary to allege the facts which constituted the theft of the property. Brothers v. State, 22 App. 447, 3 S. W. 737; Hodges v. State, Id. 415, 3 S. W. 739. The indictment may charge both receiving and concealing, and a conviction may be had upon proof of either. Nourse v. State, 2 App. 304.

Not necessary for indictment to allege name of a person from whose possession property was taken, nor to allege the essential elements of theft. Trail v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 92.

An indictment alleging that accused unlawfully received and concealed certain cattle, that such cattle had theretofore been acquired by another person in such manner that its acquisition was a theft, and that accused received and concealed the cattle knowing them to have been so acquired, sufficiently alleged accused's knowledge that the cattle were stolen at the time he received them. Mooney v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 828.

An indictment for receiving stolen property knowing that it had been stolen and bringing it into this state need not allege the time and place of the original taking, though it must allege that it was fraudulently received and concealed with knowledge that it had been acquired by theft, and the name of the owner if known, and the name of the person from whom received. Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

8. — Allegation of ownership.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 457.

9. — Proof and variance.—Under an indictment alleging that the stolen property was received from a certain person, the State must prove that the property was received from the particular person mentioned. Proof that the property was received from some other person would not support a conviction. Moseley v. State, 36 App. 578, 37 S. W. 736, 38 S. W. 197.

There is not a variance between an indictment for receiving stolen property, alleging ownership of the property in M., and proof that it was part of the stock of a business, which, while owned by him, was conducted under the name of City Lumber Company. Hogg v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 195.

There is a variance between allegation in an indictment that accused received stolen property from some person to the grand jurors unknown, and proof that witnesses, who testified before the grand jury, knew that the property was received from a particular person. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1136.

10. Evidence.—See C. C. P., arts. 783 et seq., and notes thereunder.

For evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction, see Shaw v. State, 27 Tex. 750; Doon v. State, 42 Tex. 237; Nourse v. State, 2 App. 304; Tucker v. State, 23 App. 512, 5 S. W. 180; Moseley v. State, 35 App. 210, 32 S. W. 1042; Moseley v. State, 36 App. 578, 37 S. W. 736, 38 S. W. 197; Mooney v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 52.

It was held error to reject evidence offered by the defendant to prove that before he received the cattle from the thief, the said thief had claimed the same as his property, and had bargained them to another party. Harwell v. State, 22 App. 251, 2 S. W. 606.

Explanation of possession of stolen property. Brothers v. State, 22 App. 447, 3 S. W. 737; Williams v. State, 45 App. 240, 75 S. W. 509.

For evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction, see Estes v. State, 23 App. 600, 5 S. W. 176; Brothers v. State, 22 App. 447, 3 S. W. 737; Bryan v. State, 54 App. 59, 111 S. W. 1035.

It being necessary to authorize a conviction for receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen, that the theft of the property should be established, the acts and declarations of the thief are admissible to prove the theft, but the court in its charge to the jury should explain the purpose for which such testimony is admitted, and direct the jury to not consider it for any other purpose. Tucker v. State, 23 App. 512, 5 S. W. 180.

On a trial for receiving, etc., stolen property, the state was properly allowed to read in evidence the indictment, judgment of conviction, and sentence against the party from whom defendant received the property, for the theft of the same—the purpose of the evidence being limited by the charge. Cooper v. State, 29 App. 8, 13 S. W. 1011, 25 Am. St. Rep. 712.

To constitute the crime of receiving stolen property, it is essential, under article 1349, that the accused must have known, at the time he received it, that it was stolen; but such guilty knowledge will be implied if the circumstances were such as should have been sufficient to satisfy a man of ordinary intelligence and caution that the property was stolen. Murio v. State, 31 App. 210, 20 S. W. 356; Cas-tieberry v. State, 35 App. 382, 33 S. W. 875, 60 Am. St. Rep. 53.

On a prosecution for receiving stolen property the bare fact that defendant is found in the possession of the stolen property is not sufficient to support a conviction, the evidence must further show that he knew the same to have been stolen. Castleberry v. State, 35 App. 382, 33 S. W. 875, 60 Am. St. Rep. 53.

A state's witness was allowed, over defendant's objection, to testify what certain books belonging to a railway company would show; held inadmissible. Wade v. State, 37 App. 401, 35 S. W. 663.

The fact that defendant bought the property for less than its value from an unknown party and represented that he gave more for it than he did, does not show that he knew it was stolen. Trail v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 93.

Where, on a trial for the theft of a horse, and for receiving the horse, knowing that it was stolen, and concealing it, there was no evidence that accused received or concealed the horse in the county, unless he stole it in the county, and the circumstances justified a finding that he committed the theft of the horse in the county, a conviction of receiving and concealing the horse in the county, but acquitting him of the theft thereof, was unwarranted by the evidence. Arrington v. State, 62 App. 357, 137 S. W. 669.

Evidence examined, and held sufficient to show that the person from whom accused was charged with receiving stolen property was unknown to the grand jury as alleged in the indictment. Yantis v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 947.

Evidence, on trial for receiving stolen property, held to authorize a finding that defendant knew it was stolen. Hogg v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 195.

In a prosecution for receiving or concealing stolen goods, the sworn written confession of the original thief that he stole the property, as well as the indictment charging him therewith, and the verdict and judgment of conviction and sentence were admissible in evidence to show that the property was stolen, but not as substantive evidence of accused's guilt; the court limiting their consideration to that purpose. Meek v. State, 71 App. 433, 160 S. W. 698.

In a prosecution for receiving or concealing stolen goods, which were shown to include certain pipes, evidence that witness found two pipes buried in the ground, which were part of the stolen property, and delivered them to the owners, was admissible over an objection, shown by bill of exceptions only, that it was not shown that accused was connected with the hiding of the pipes or knew of their being stolen at the time, so that the evidence was immaterial. Meek v. State, 71 App. 433, 160 S. W. 698.

Evidence, that, after cattle came into defendant's possession, a few days before he sold them, the brand on them was changed, is evidence of his knowing, when receiving them, that they were stolen. Stanfield v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 216.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen goods, all evidence which would have been admissible on a trial of the thief to show that he was guilty of theft was admissible to show that the goods delivered to accused were stolen goods; the state being also required to prove that accused, at the time he received the goods, knew that they were stolen, and, with such knowledge, concealed them. Goldstein v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 709.

Evidence was admissible that the wife of accused took the stolen ball from a bureau drawer and delivered it to the officers in the presence of accused. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 793.

It is proper, if not necessary, to permit the state to prove the allegation, in an indictment for receiving stolen property, that the property was received by accused from a person to the grand jurors unknown, and the district attorney and grand jurors may testify to the efforts made to ascertain the identity of the unknown person. Mooney v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 52.

On a trial for receiving stolen cattle, it was not error to permit witnesses to testify that the alleged stolen cattle belonged to them. Mooney v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 52.

In authorizing the jury to convict without proof of the criminal intent, and in omitting to instruct correctly upon the question of intent, and finally in refusing a special charge to supply the omission, the trial court erred in this case. Arcia v. State, 26 App. 193, 9 S. W. 685.

Note charge of the court in this case held correct. Morgan v. State, 31 App. 1, 18 S. W. 647.

Erroneous charge. Ramsey v. State, 34 App. 16, 28 S. W. 808.

Where defendant claimed to have bought the goods he was charged with receiving, the court should have given a distinct charge as to the purchase, whether asked or not. Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913.

On a trial for receiving stolen property it is error to charge on recent possession without also charging upon knowingly receiving same. Grande v. State, 37 App. 51, 38 S. W. 613.

The indictment contained two counts, one for theft and the other for receiving stolen property; held, the defendant could not be heard to complain of a defective charge on theft on conviction of receiving stolen property. Rosson v. State, 37 App. 87, 38 S. W. 788.

A charge of the court which instructs the jury that if defendant received the property in one county, and brought it into another, the court of the county where said property was brought would have jurisdiction, is erroneous. Thurman v. State, 37 App. 646, 40 S. W. 795.

Where an indictment contains first count for theft and second count for receiving stolen property, charge as to possession of property recently stolen held erroneous, because jury might have applied it to second count in absence of explanation. Trail v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 92.

Where there is evidence tending to show that defendant received the animal from one who he believed to be rightly in possession of it, this issue should be submitted to the jury. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 834.

Accused was arrested in D. county while in the possession of stolen property shortly after it was stolen, and stated that the property had been sent to him at that place. On a trial for receiving the stolen property in V. county the court charged that if the property was received by accused in D. county, or in any place except V. county, or if they had a reasonable doubt as to whether he received it in V. county, they should acquit accused. Held, that this property presented the question of the possession of recently stolen property. Yantis v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 947.

A person who, knowing that goods were stolen, directed the thief to deliver them to him by placing them in his barn received the goods when they were placed in the barn, although he was not personally present and did not manually receive them, and hence the court properly so charged and refused to charge an alibi, though there was evidence showing accused's absence when the goods were placed in his barn. Kaufmar v. State, 70 App. 438, 159 S. W. 58.

While it might be proper to charge on the subject, where the evidence tends to show that accused's intention in receiving or concealing property was innocent, the refusal of such a charge is not reversible error, where the evidence does not suggest that accused's intention was innocent. Meek v. State, 71 App. 433, 160 S. W. 698.

An instruction, in a prosecution for receiving or concealing stolen goods, that the jury could not convict unless they believed beyond a reasonable doubt that the original thief took the property from the owners' possession without their consent, or the consent of either of them, with intent to deprive them of its value and appropriate it to his own use, and that accused knew the property was stolen and received and concealed it, was not objectionable on the ground that it authorized a conviction, even though one of the owners consented to the taking of the property. Meek v. State, 71 App. 433, 160 S. W. 698.

Since article 1349 punishes one who shall receive "or" conceal property known to have been stolen, a charge that accused must have "both received and concealed" the stolen property erred in favor of accused, so that he cannot complain thereof. Meek v. State, 71 App. 433, 160 S. W. 698.

In a prosecution for receiving or concealing stolen goods, accused requested an instruction that the corpus delicti consists of two facts, first, of the fact that the property received had been stolen, and, second, that accused received it, and that to authorize a conviction the jury must believe from evidence outside of accused's confession that the property was stolen, and that accused received it, and that the state must prove such facts beyond a reasonable doubt, which instruction was refused, but the court charged that to warrant a conviction the evidence must show beyond a reasonable doubt that the property was acquired by theft, and that accused, knowing it to have been stolen, received and concealed it, and that the jury could not convict accused unless they believed, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the alleged thief took the property from the owners without their consent, or the consent of either of them, with intent to deprive them of its value, and that accused knew that the property had been stolen and received and concealed it. Held that, in view of accused's full confession and other evidence tending to show that he knowingly received and concealed stolen property, the requested charge was properly refused as not called for by the evidence and as improperly limiting the effect of part of it, and the charge given was correct. Meek v. State, 71 App. 433, 160 S. W. 698.

15. — Assumption as to facts.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 736.

16. Verdict.—See C. C. P., art. 770.

17. Punishment.—A change in the statute made is in the last clause. The old article read: "He shall be punished in the same manner as by law the person stealing the same would be liable to be punished."

This offense is punishable the same as the theft of the property. Nourse v. State, 2 App. 305; Vincent v. State, 10 App. 330.

As to punishments, see Spradling v. State, 30 App. 595, 17 S. W. 1117.

In a case tried before the change was made, a boy under sixteen years of age had stolen property over the value of twenty dollars, and defendant, a man, concealed said property. It was contended upon the trial that an adult could not be sent to the reformatory, could not be punished in like manner as the youthful thief, and hence could not be punished at all; held, the intention of the statute was to assess a penalty the same as if defendant himself had stolen the property. Ramsey v. State, 34 App. 16, 28 S. W. 808.

An adult convicted of fraudulently receiving property of more than twenty dollars in value stolen by a person under the age of sixteen years should be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. Ramsey v. State, 34 App. 16, 28 S. W. 808.

18. Recognizance.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 919.

Recognizance for offense under this article recited that the defendant stands charged with "receiving and concealing stolen property of the value of ten dollars," etc. It was objected to the recognizance that it was insufficient and invalid because it used the word "stolen" instead of the statutory words "acquired in such manner that the acquisition comes within the meaning of the term 'theft.'" Held that under our Code the word "stolen" was sufficient in the recognizance, though it would not be in an indictment. Sands v. State, 30 App. 579, 18 S. W. 86.

OF THEFT FROM THE PERSON

Art. 1350. Punishment for. 1351. Ingredients of the offense.	Art. 1352. Attempt to commit the offense.

Article 1350. [879] Punishment for.—If any person shall commit theft by privately stealing from the person of another, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years.

Felony.—Any theft from the person is a "felony." Chitwood v. State, 44 App. 439, 71 S. W. 973; Campbell v. State, 61 App. 504, 135 S. W. 548.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 638.

Art. 1351. [880] Ingredients of the offense.—To constitute the offense it is necessary that the following circumstances occur:

1. The theft must be from the person; it is not sufficient that the property be merely in the presence of the person from whom it is taken.

2. The theft must be committed without the knowledge of the person from whom the property is taken, or so suddenly as not to allow time to make resistance before the property is carried away.

3. It is only necessary that the property stolen should have gone into the possession of the thief; it need not be carried away in order to complete the offense.

For other rules and decisions pertinent to this offense, see notes to preceding chapter.

See Article 1350 and note.

1. Nature and elements of offense.—"Theft from the person" may be committed either by taking without the knowledge of the person from whom the property is taken, or by taking so suddenly as not to allow time to make resistance before the property is taken. Johnson v. State, 55 App. 411, 117 S. W. 964; Grant v. State, 59 App. 123, 127 S. W. 173; Woodard v. State, 9 App. 412.

In this offense, as in ordinary theft, the taking of the property includes the carrying away of the same, and if the property was taken too suddenly to allow time for resistance, it was also carried away too suddenly to allow time for resistance. In other words asportation is no more necessary to constitute theft from the person, than it is to constitute ordinary theft. Dukes v. State, 22 App. 192, 2 S. W. 590; Flynn v. State, 42 Tex. 301; ante, art. 1331, note.

In theft from the person, as in general theft, the property must be taken without the consent of the owner, or, if the possession was lawfully obtained, it must have been obtained by the taker by some false pretext, or with the present intent to deprive the owner of the value of the property and appropriate it to his (the taker's) own use, and there must be an actual appropriation. See the statement of the case for evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for theft from the person, because insufficient to establish the fraudulent intent at the time of the taking. If the accused, when he obtained possession of the property, did so without false pretext or fraudulent intent, and believed that he had the consent of the owner to the taking, he would not be guilty of theft, even though he subsequently converted the property to his own use. This rule, applying to the state of case made by the proof, should have been given in the charge to the jury. Graves v. State, 25 App. 333, 8 S. W. 471. And see, also, Taylor v. State, 25 App. 96, 7 S. W. 861; Nichols v. State, 28 App. 105, 12 S. W. 500; McCullum v. State, 29 App. 162, 14 S. W. 1020.

Evidence that the owner of stolen money felt some one touch his pocket containing his purse, and that on looking around quickly he saw defendant's hand holding the purse pass from his to defendant's pocket, is sufficient to prove theft from the person, hereunder. Green v. State, 28 App. 493, 13 S. W. 784.

If prosecutor knew when defendant put his hand into his pocket, and permitted him to take his money, then defendant would not be guilty of theft, but if prosecutor knew nothing about it until defendant got a hold of his pocketbook, then it would be theft it matters not at what instant thereafter he discovered it. Files v. State, 36 App. 206, 36 S. W. 93; McLin v. State, 29 App. 171, 15 S. W. 600.

Theft from the person may be committed by taking property from the possession of another in a public place; the statute requiring a private taking having reference to the manner, and not the place, of taking. Clemmons v. State, 45 S. W. 911, 39 App. 279, 73 Am. St. Rep. 923.

Where money is suddenly snatched from the hand of the owner, so as not to allow time for resistance, the offense is complete. It is not necessary that it be carried away, and it is not necessary that it be taken without the knowledge of the owner, when it is suddenly taken. Clemmons v. State, 39 App. 279, 45 S. W. 911, 73 Am. St. Rep. 923.

The theft must be "from" the "person," and not merely from the presence of the taking of any one will be sufficient. Grissom v. State, 40 App. 146, 49 S. W. 93.

Merely inserting the hand in the pocket of another far enough to touch money contained therein, but not securing it, will not constitute a theft from the person Tarrango v. State, 44 App. 385, 71 S. W. 597.

If a person knows at the time that money is being extracted from his pocket the accused cannot be convicted under the first paragraph of this subdivision, but under the second paragraph if he knows it, but it is taken from his person so suddenly, as not to allow time for resistance then the offense is complete. Roquemore v. State, 50 App. 542, 99 S. W. 549.

It is not necessary that the theft occur in a concealed manner and out of observation of others. Black v. State, 52 App. 8, 104 S. W. 897.

2. Compared with and distinguished from ordinary theft.—In this offense the punishment is not graded by the value of the property taken, as in ordinary theft, but the offense is per se a felony, if the article taken be of any value. It is not necessary therefore to allege or prove the value of the property taken. Bennett v. State, 16 App. 236; Shaw v. State, 23 App. 493, 5 S. W. 317; Harris v. State, 17 App. 132; Flynn v. State, 42 Tex. 301.

The offense of theft from the person being essentially different from ordinary theft, a conviction thereof can not be had under an indictment for ordinary theft. Harris v. State, 17 App. 132; Black v. State, 52 App. 8, 104 S. W. 897.

Where indictment charges theft from the person only the defendant can not be convicted of petty theft. Roberts v. State, 33 App. 83, 24 S. W. 895.

Indictment may include counts for theft and theft from the person. Flynn v. State, 47 App. 26, 83 S. W. 206.

"Theft from the person" is sui generis; is an offense distinct from any other theft, and the punishment prescribed therefor is not graded the same as in other theft. It is a felony, without regard to the value of the property stolen. Under an ordinary indictment for theft a party cannot be convicted for privately stealing from the person. Gage v. State, 22 App. 123, 2 S. W. 638.

Since the statute defines theft from the person as a distinct offense, and essentially different from ordinary theft, one cannot be convicted of theft from the person under an indictment for ordinary theft. Nichols v. State, 28 App. 105, 12 S. W. 500.

Indictment containing counts in theft, theft from the person, and robbery. Hooten v. State, 53 App. 6, 108 S. W. 651.

3. Distinguished from robbery.—Where force is used, the court should charge on robbery and not theft from the person. Gallagher v. State, 34 App. 306, 30 S. W. 557.

The mere snatching money from another's hand is not robbery, but is theft from the person. Johnson v. State, 35 App. 140, 32 S. W. 537.

4. Venue.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 245.

5. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 638.

As to indictment for theft in general, see notes under article 1329, ante.

To constitute this offense the theft must be from the person, and not merely in the presence of the dispossessed party, and be committed without his knowledge, or so suddenly as to preclude resistance before asportation. If an indictment contains these allegations, in addition to those necessary to charge theft in general, it is substantially sufficient. Woodard v. State, 9 App. 412. But it will be insufficient without said allegations that the property was taken without the knowledge of the person dispossessed, or so suddenly as not to allow time to make resistance before it was carried away. Kerry v. State, 17 App. 178, 50 Am. Rep. 122; Gage v. State, 22 App. 123, 2 S. W. 638. The indictment must allege, and the proof must show, the ownership of the property and that the property was taken without the owner's consent. Anderson v. State, 14 App. 49.

The indictment, to warrant a conviction, must state everything which is essential to the proof of the crime,—that is, that the offense was "committed without the knowledge of the person from whom the property was taken, or so suddenly as not to allow time to make resistance before the property is carried away;" and the proof must correspond with the allegation. Gage v. State, 22 App. 123, 2 S. W. 638.

It is not necessary to either allege or prove the value of the property taken. Shaw v. State, 23 App. 493, 5 S. W. 317.

Indictment approved. McCollom v. State, 29 App. 162, 14 S. W. 1020.

An indictment for theft from the person must allege that the property was taken from the person, it is not sufficient to allege that it was "unlawfully, fraudulently and privately taken from his possession." Jones v. State, 39 App. 387, 46 S. W. 250.

It is not sufficient under this article as is ordinarily the case, to follow its language, but inasmuch as article 1351 defines what circumstances must occur to constitute the offense of theft by privately stealing from the person of another, the indictment must charge and set out the particular means whereby the alleged theft was committed. Bush v. State, 53 App. 213, 109 S. W. 185, 186.

An indictment, charging that defendant stole from a person named corporeal, personal property then and there belonging to such person, to wit, one purse containing money and checks, sufficiently charged the offense of theft from the person. Wilson v. State, 71 App. 426, 160 S. W. 967.

Form of indictment for theft from the person held sufficient, see Burrus v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 981.

6. — Description of property.—See notes under C. C. P. arts. 458, 468.

7. — Proof and variance.—Where the indictment alleged that the watch and chain stolen were together of the value of $35 evidence of the value of the watch alone was properly admitted. Bennett v. State, 16 App. 236.

An averment of the theft of "United States paper currency money of a certain value" is sustained by proof that the stolen property was either United States treasury notes, or national bank notes, or United States gold or silver certificates. Kimbrough v. State, 28 App. 367, 13 S. W. 218.

The indictment alleged theft by privately taking from the person. It devolved upon the state to show that said money was taken privately, that is, without the knowledge of the party robbed. Files v. State, 36 App. 206, 36 S. W. 93.

An indictment for theft from the person, of several articles supports a conviction based on a taking of any one of the articles. Grissom v. State, 40 App. 146, 49 S. W. 93.

Under an indictment for theft from the person charging that the property taken was United States currency, it was competent to prove that either treasury notes, national bank bills, or United States gold or silver certificates were taken. Dennis v. State (Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 559.

Where an indictment charges theft of bills "in the currency of the United States of America," or theft of "current money of the United States of America," giving the denomination and value thereof, the allegation may be proved by theft of United States legal treasury notes, or of United States demand notes, or United States gold or silver certificates, or of national bank bills of the United States. Berry v. State, 80 S. W. 630, 46 App. 420.

In a prosecution for theft from the person, where the indictment charged that accused had stolen a pocketbook containing one $10 bill and two $5 bills, all of the aggregate value of $20 good and lawful money of the United States, the prosecuting witness testified that his pocketbook contained about $25, there being two $5 bills, a $10 bill, and about $5 in specie, and that the pocketbook was a small leather purse for carrying money in. Held, that though the indictment be interpreted as charging a theft of money, and though the witness failed to testify that the money stolen was current money of the United States, there was no variance. Sims v. State, 64 App. 435, 142 S. W. 573.

8. Evidence.—Evidence held sufficient to convict, see Boyd v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 157; Shaw v. State, 23 App. 493, 5 S. W. 317; Woodard v. State, 9 App. 412; Flynn v. State, 42 Tex. 301; Johnson v. State, 55 App. 411, 117 S. W. 964; Nelson v. State, 48 App. 471, 88 S. W. 807; Johnson v. State, 62 App. 284, 136 S. W. 1058; Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 549. Contra, Graves v. State, 25 App. 333, 8 S. W. 471; Johnson v. State, 52 App. 510, 107 S. W. 845; Thomas v. State, 51 App. 329, 101 S. W. 797; Placker v. State, 58 App. 216, 125 S. W. 409.

On trial for theft from the person the same rules as to recent possession, and explanation of possession apply as in other theft cases. Roberts v. State, 33 App. 83, 24 S. W. 895.

The indictment charged in one count theft, and in another count theft from the person; the testimony of the prosecutor made out a case of theft from the person, that of defendant a case of theft only. The jury found defendant guilty of theft from the person. The verdict will not be disturbed. Blount v. State, 35 App. 376, 33 S. W. 872.

The evidence showed that defendant slipped his hand into W.'s pocket and took his pocket book; that W. discovered the fact just as defendant withdrew his hand; held, sufficient proof of theft. Files v. State, 36 App. 206, 36 S. W. 93.

Evidence in explanation of possession of alleged stolen money held admissible. Britain v. State, 52 App. 169, 105 S. W. 817.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of theft from the person, committed by a taking privately and without the knowledge of the person from whom the property was taken. Grant v. State, 59 App. 123, 127 S. W. 173.

Evidence, on a trial for theft from the person, that the prosecuting witness felt something brush against his person, and upon feeling ascertained that his pocketbook had been taken, that accused ran away, and was chased by the prosecuting witness and arrested by officers, who were called, and that upon the following morning the pocketbook was found in a private inclosure near the point where accused was arrested, was sufficient to sustain a conviction. Johnson v. State, 70 App. 347, 156 S. W. 1181.

On a trial for theft from the person, evidence held sufficient to support a conviction on the theory that accused either committed the theft, or was a principal if it was committed by another. Black v. State, 72 App. 481, 162 S. W. 521.

9. Charge of court.—Where the indictment charged that the property was taken "so suddenly as not to allow time to make resistance before said property was carried away" and the prosecuting witness testified that he was awakened by some one putting his hand into his pocket but did not know that the money was taken until the person was gone, held error for the court to instruct the jury to convict if defendant took the money "so suddenly" or if he took it "without the knowledge," etc. Swartz v. State (Cr. App.) 27 S. W. 136.

The indictment charged defendant with taking the property so suddenly as to not allow time for resistance, the court instructed on the phase of the case and also as to the offense when committed without the knowledge of prosecutor; held error, but in this case the charge was not excepted to, the evidence was overwhelming and the case will not be reversed. Robinson v. State, 37 App. 195, 39 S. W. 107.

In a prosecution for theft from the person, an instruction to acquit if defendant took the property with prosecutor's consent, and afterwards formed the intent to appropriate it, is sufficient, as bearing on defendant's claim that he had prosecutor's consent to take the property. O'Toole v. State, 51 S. W. 244, 40 App. 578.

It is not error to quote the whole definition of the law in a charge and then apply the particular phase of the law applicable to the facts, in instructing the jury. Mathis v. State (Cr. App.) 65 S. W. 523.

The court should have charged that if, prior to the taking of the money, prosecutor told defendant to take care of him in case he got too drunk to take care of himself, and defendant believed prosecutor intended him to take his money from him, or in case they had a reasonable doubt as to whether that was true, in either case they should acquit. McMahan v. State. 50 App. 244, 96 S. W. 17.

Where the evidence shows that defendant was engaged to be married to the prosecuting witness, and that, upon noticing that the prongs on her diamond rings needed tightening, stated that if she would let him have them he would have them repaired, to which she replied that she could have it done herself, whereupon he took them from her fingers, there is not sufficient evidence to raise an issue of theft from the person, authorizing the giving of a requested instruction by defendant on that issue. Creale v. State, 71 App. 9, 158 S. W. 268.

10. — Duplicity.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 481.

11. — Description of property and money.—See notes under C. C. P. arts. 458, 468.

Art. 1352. [880a] Attempt to commit the offense.—If any person shall attempt to commit the offense of theft from the person, as defined in the two preceding articles, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than three years. [Act 1909, p. 70.]

CHAPTER ELEVEN

THEFT OF ANIMALS

Art.	Art.
1353. Theft of horse, etc.	1356. Wilfully driving stock from range,
1354. Theft of cattle.	theft.
1355. Theft of sheep, hogs, etc., how punished.	1357. Party may drive stock in range.
	1358. What proof sufficient for the state.

Article 1353. [881] Theft of horse, etc.—If any person shall steal any horse, ass or mule, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 181; amended Act 1897, p. 83.]

See notes under chapter 9.

Cited, Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 351.

Explanatory.—Amended in revising (1879) by omitting the words "gelding, mare, colt," which were contained in the original article.

Effect of amendment.—Act 1897 did not abrogate the punishment for theft as a bailee by changing the punishment for theft under article 1353 after the enactment of article 1359, as the latter article merely provided that whatever punishment was prescribed at any time by the Penal Code should be applicable to theft by a bailee. Brown v. State, 57 App. 570, 124 S. W. 101.

Distinguished from other offenses.—Where a person takes up a horse as an estray, without the present intention of committing theft thereof, his appropriation of the horse thereafter, without a compliance with the estray laws, does not constitute theft of the horse, but merely a violation of the estray laws. McCarty v. State, 36 App. 135, 35 S. W. 994.

Defendant was convicted under a general indictment for the theft of a horse. It appeared that the owner of the horse loaned it to defendant for use in working his crop, and defendant afterwards took the horse out of the county, and sold it. There was no evidence of an intention to convert the horse to defendant's own use when he acquired possession of it. Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, since the prosecution should have been made under art. 1348, for conversion of the property while in defendant's possession under a contract of borrowing. Mangum v. State, 38 App. 231, 42 S. W. 291.

One assisting a person, having possession as employé, of horses of another, in driving them away with the purpose of appropriating them is not guilty of theft, but is guilty of embezzlement. Pearce v. State, 50 App. 507, 98 S. W. 861.

Punishment under statute exclusive.—A prosecution for horse theft is properly based on this article and the punishment prescribed therein is properly inflicted and not that stated under article 1329. Beard v. State, 45 App. 522, 78 S. W. 348.

Principals.—See notes under article 74, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 639.

Conviction of driving from accustomed range on indictment for theft, see notes under arts. 1356, 1386.

Description of animal, see notes under C. C. P. art. 458.

Indictment can charge theft of one head of cattle under this article. Warren v. State (Cr. App.) 105 S. W. 817.

— Ownership.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 457.

Evidence.—See notes under chapter 9, and see C. C. P. art. 783 et seq.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction. Lopez v. State, 46 App. 473, 80 S. W. 1016.

Evidence held insufficient to support conviction. Young v. State, 47 App. 468, 83 S. W. 808; Shilling v. State, 52 App. 326, 106 S. W. 357.

Charge.—Where, on a prosecution for horse theft, defendant claimed that he took the horse merely for the purpose of using it, and with intent to return it, it having been turned over to him by one who stated that he had borrowed it from the owner, an instruction that, if accused took the horse with intent not to deprive the owner of the value of it, but merely to use it, the jury should acquit, was proper. Windom v. State, 44 App. 514, 72 S. W. 193.

Art. 1354. [882] Theft of cattle.—If any person shall steal any cattle or hog, he shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary not less than two nor more than four years. [Act May 17, 1873, p. 80.]

See notes under articles 74, 77, and 79, and chapter 9, ante.

Evidence.—Evidence relating to brands generally, see C. C. P. art. 783 et seq. And see, also, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7160.

Art. 1355. [883] Theft of sheep, goat, etc.; how punished.—If any person shall steal any sheep or goat, he shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for not less than two nor more than four years. [Art. 748 Rev. P. C. 1879; art. 883 Rev. P. C. 1895; Act 1893, ch. 26; Amended Act 1905, p. 16.]

See notes under chapter 9.

See Ellis v. State, 27 App. 190, 11 S. W. 111; Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 351.

Explanatory.—This article was amended in the revision of 1879 so as to make the offense a felony or misdemeanor dependent upon the value of the property, it being a felony under the original article as at present without regard to the value of the property taken. Decisions as to felony or misdemeanor are included in the notes under article 1342, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 641.

Art. 1356. [884] Wilfully driving stock from range, theft.—If any person shall wilfully take into possession and drive, use or remove from its accustomed range, any live stock not his own, without the consent of the owner, and with intent to defraud the owner thereof, he shall be deemed guilty of theft, and, on conviction, shall be confined in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, or be fined in a sum not to exceed one thousand dollars, or by both such imprisonment and fine, at the discretion of the jury trying the case. [Act Nov. 12, 1866, p. 188.]

Offense in general.—To come within this article, the driving must be "wilful," that is, committed with evil intent, etc., a fact that is presumed from the driving. Owens v. State, 19 App. 242.

To constitute this offense it is essential that the act be wilfully committed, that is, with evil intent, or without reasonable ground to believe that it was lawful. Yoakum v. State, 21 App. 260, 17 S. W. 254.

On trial for removing horse from its accustomed range the question of intent is not in issue. Beachamp v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 807.

Distinguished from theft in general.—This article contemplates the driving of stock from its accustomed range and not the bare theft of an animal running at large near the house of its owner, taken in custody by a thief, carried to another or adjoining neighborhood and sold. Terry v. State, 43 App. 353, 66 S. W. 452.

Conviction and verdict under indictment for theft.—See notes under art. 1386, post, and C. C. P. art. 770.

Under an indictment for the theft of an animal, the defendant may be convicted of this offense. Counts v. State, 37 Tex. 593; Campbell v. State, 42 Tex. 591; Bawcom v. State, 41 Tex. 189; Marshall v. State, 4 App. 549; Powell v. State, 7 App. 467; Turner v. State, Id. 596; Foster v. State, 21 App. 80, 17 S. W. 548; Smith v. State, 21 App. 133, 17 S. W. 558; McElmurray v. State, 21 App. 691, 2

S. W. 892; Campbell v. State, 22 App. 262, 2 S. W. 825; Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242.

If the proof upon which the state depends leaves it in doubt whether the offense is theft per se or wilfully driving stock from the range, the indictment should charge both in different counts. Smith v. State, 34 Tex. 612.

Where conviction was had under article 1356 on an indictment for cattle theft and a new trial was granted the defendant, it was held that on another trial he might be convicted of the theft as charged in the indictment. Campbell v. State, 22 App. 262, 2 S. W. 825, overruling Sisk v. State, 9 App. 90.

Conviction for the theft of an animal will bar a subsequent prosecution under this article. McElmurray v. State, 21 App. 691, 2 S. W. 892.

Though under an indictment charging theft of cattle in the usual form, a conviction may be had either for the theft defined in article 1356, or for the misdemeanor of driving cattle from their accustomed range as defined in article 1386, the verdict, to be sufficient, must show with reasonable certainty of which offense, the felony or the misdemeanor, the accused was found guilty. Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242. And on the same subject, see Id.; Taylor v. State, 25 App. 96, 7 S. W. 861; Spoonemore v. State, 25 App. 358, 8 S. W. 280; Woods v. State, 26 App. 490, 10 S. W. 108; Lopez v. State, 28 App. 343, 13 S. W. 219.

Conviction under article 1356 cannot be held under an indictment charging theft of such animals. Long v. State, 33 App. 461, 46 S. W. 821, 73 Am. St. Rep. 954 (overruling Counts v. State, 37 Tex. 593; Campbell v. State, 42 Tex. 591; Bawcom v. State, 41 Tex. 189; Marshall v. State, 4 App. 549; Powell v. State, 7 App. 467; Turner v. State, Id., 596; Foster v. State, 21 App. 80, 17 S. W. 548; Smith v. State, 21 App. 133, 17 S. W. 558, and Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242).

It is error to charge that defendant can be convicted of driving stock from accustomed range, under an indictment for theft. Chambers v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 261.

Venue.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 245.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 642.

See Shubert v. State, 20 App. 320; Woods v. State, 26 App. 490, 10 S. W. 108.

The indictment for this offense need not aver an intention to appropriate the animals to the use of the defendant. Smith v. State, 34 Tex. 612. It is proper, and perhaps necessary, to allege the ownership of the animals. Smith v. State, 43 Tex. 433; State v. Faucett, 15 Tex. 585. It may allege that the animal was driven out of the instead of its accustomed range. Fowler v. State, 38 Tex. 559.

If the driving includes several different animals belonging to different owners, all may be embraced in one count. Long v. State, 43 Tex. 467.

An indictment which used the word "deprive" instead of the statutory word "defraud" in alleging the intent, was held sufficient. Shubert v. State, 20 App. 320.

It need not describe the "range." Foster v. State, 21 App. 80, 17 S. W. 548; State v. Thompson, 40 Tex. 515. Nor state the distance the animal was driven. Darnell v. State, 43 Tex. 147.

Burden of proof as to mitigation or justification.—It devolves on the defense to prove mitigating or justifying facts. Owen v. State, 19 App. 242.

Admissibility of evidence.—In a prosecution for wilfully driving a Jersey bull from his accustomed range, it was no defense that defendant did the act charged in order to protect his Hereford cows from being served; and evidence of the difference in value between calves of Hereford cows from a Hereford sire and from a Jersey sire was properly excluded. Buster v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 730.

Charge of court.—It is error to charge that a party acting under another's authority must know that the latter had a right to give it, and that A. can not give B. authority over more than one brand. Wills v. State, 40 Tex. 69. Having admitted proof that other property of like character was driven at the same time and from the same place as the property described in the indictment, the trial court erred in omitting in its charge to limit the jury as to the legitimate purposes for which such proof could be considered. In instructing the jury upon the law relating to this offense, the charge need not explain the legal signification of the word "wilfully," though it would not be improper to do so. Wheeler v. State, 23 App. 598, 5 S. W. 160.

Art. 1357. [885] Party may drive stock in range.—Nothing in the preceding article contained shall be construed to prevent any person from driving his own and other stock that may be mixed therewith to the nearest convenient point within the usual range of such stock, for separation. [Id., p. 187.]

Art. 1358. [886] What proof sufficient for the state.—In any prosecution under article 1356, it shall only be necessary for the state to prove the act of driving, using or removing from its accustomed range, any live stock not belonging to, or under the control of, the accused; and it shall devolve upon the accused to show any fact under which he can justify or mitigate the offense. [Id., p. 188.]

Burden of proof.—It only devolves upon the state to prove the act of driving, using, or removing from its accustomed range any live stock not belonging to or under the control of the accused. It devolves upon the accused to show any fact in justification or mitigation of the act. Owens v. State, 19 App. 242.

CHAPTER TWELVE

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE RECOVERY OF STOLEN ANIMALS AND THE DETECTION AND PUNISHMENT OF THIEVES

Art.	Art.
1359. Want of bill of sale prima facie evidence of illegal possession.	1367. Required to keep record of cattle purchased or slaughtered.
1360. Driving stock to market without bill of sale.	1368. Penalty for purchasing slaughtered cattle, unless, etc.
1361. Butchering unmarked or unbranded animals.	1369. The record provided for to be open for inspection, etc.
1362. Not applicable to animals raised by butcher.	1370. Duty of county attorney.
1363. Butcher failing to make report of animals slaughtered.	1371. Inspector to keep record.
1364. Before engaging in business of slaughter and sale of animals, what is required.	1372. Counties exempt.
1365. Butchers and slaughterers required to file bond.	1373. Auctioneer selling animal without written statement, etc.
1366. Penalty for failure to make bond.	1374. Auctioneer failing to report sales of animals.
	1375. This chapter not to apply to Karnes county.

Article 1359. [887] Want of bill of sale prima facie evidence of illegal possession.—Upon the trial of any person charged with the theft of any animal of the horse, ass or cattle species, the possession of such stolen animal by the accused, without a written transfer or bill of sale, containing a specific description of such animal, shall be prima facie evidence against the accused that such possession was illegal. [Act Nov. 13, 1886, p. 223; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

See notes under art. 7171, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

As to charging this article in a prosecution for theft, see notes under 1329, ante. See Willey v. State, 22 App. 408, 3 S. W. 570; Gilleland v. State, 24 App. 524, 7 S. W. 211; Graves v. State, 28 App. 354, 13 S. W. 149; Abrigo v. State, 29 App. 143, 15 S. W. 408.

Explanatory.—Articles 1359 to 1363, 1366, 1369, 1373, 1374, seem to be exactly the same as the old ones, but 1365, 1367, 1368, and 1372, have all been changed.

Constitutionality.—Act Nov. 13, 1866, to regulate the sale, etc., of livestock, held constitutional. State v. Dietz, 30 Tex. 511; Faith v. State, 32 Tex. 373.

Rule prior to statute.—Prior to the enactment of this article, the absence of a written conveyance was not prima facie evidence of illegal possession. Espy v. State, 32 Tex. 375.

Bill of sale as evidence in general.—See notes on evidence under article 1329.

It is not a valid objection to a bill of sale that it was recorded in the wrong book. Britt v. State, 21 App. 215, 2 S. W. 255.

A bill of sale to be admissible in evidence must be filed among the papers of the cause at least three days before the commencement of the trial, and notice of such filing given to the opposite party or his attorney, or its execution must be proved. If the bill of sale be subscribed by a witness, its execution can not be proved by another witness, unless the absence of the subscribing witness is accounted for. It is no objection to a bill of sale that it was not recorded until after the date of the alleged theft, and an unrecorded, unacknowledged bill of sale is admissible evidence to prove ownership in a prosecution for theft. The property mentioned in the bill of sale must be identified as the alleged stolen property. Morrow v. State, 22 App. 239, 2 S. W. 624.

Where, on trial for the theft of a horse, the bill of sale given by defendant to the person to whom he sold the horse is proved by witnesses who saw defendant execute it, it is not necessary to file such bill of sale with the record three days before the trial, as the rule requiring instruments to be so filed only applies to those the execution of which is not proved aliunde. Williams v. State, 30 App. 153, 16 S. W. 760.

On the trial for theft of a cow, a bill of sale to the alleged owner describing the cow in question is admissible in evidence, though not recorded. Wilson v. State, 32 App. 22, 22 S. W. 39.

On the trial for theft, a bill of sale, made by defendant, of the animal alleged to have been stolen, is admissible in evidence, though it was not acknowledged or recorded. Lockwood v. State, 32 App. 137, 22 S. W. 413.

An instruction that the law requires a butcher to take a bill of sale to cattle bought and slaughtered by him as such butcher, but no law exists requiring a purchaser of hogs to take a bill of sale therefor to show his good faith in the possession, held proper. Wheeler v. State, 38 App. 71, 41 S. W. 615.

Rebuttal of presumption.—The presumption of illegal possession arising from the absence of a written conveyance may be rebutted by parol proof of any fact tending to show legality of possession. Wills v. State, 40 Tex. 69; Garcia v. State, 12 App. 335; Flores v. State, 13 App. 665; Gomez v. State, 15 App. 64; Schindle v. State, Id. 394; White v. State, 21 App. 339, 17 S. W. 727.

The presumption from failure to produce a written conveyance is not conclusive, and may be rebutted by competent evidence. Flores v. State, 13 App. 665; Garcia v. State, 12 App. 335.

Art. 1360. [888] Driving stock to market without bill of sale.—Any person who may be found in any county of this state driving to market any animals, such as are specified in the preceding article, and who has not in his possession a bill of sale or transfer for each and all of said animals, containing their marks and brands, or a list of such marks and brands of any of such animals as were raised by himself, both said bill of sale and list being duly certified as recorded by the clerk of the county court of the county from which such animals have been driven, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not exceeding two thousand dollars. [Id., p. 224; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

See notes under arts. 7170-7172 Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Constitutionality.—See note under article 1359.

Repeal of former law.—The repeal of the act of 1863 (P. D., art. 2417) by this act did not abate prosecutions. Gill v. State, 30 Tex. 514.

The act of May 22, 1871, not applying to certain counties, the act of 1866 was not repealed as to those counties. Id. But see Monroe v. State, 3 App. 341.

Offense.—It is no violation of the statute for one to drive cattle of his own raising to the market in the county of his residence and where the cattle were raised without having in his possession a recorded list of his marks and brands. Senterfit v. State, 41 Tex. 186.

Venue.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 258.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 643.

The indictment (under P. D., art. 2417) need only charge generally "that defendant did butcher beef for the market of B., and did fail to return a list of the marks and brands," etc. Schutze v. State, 30 Tex. 508.

Charge of court.—The court must not charge in the face of the evidence as to complicity, and upon an assumption not warranted by the evidence. Bergstrom v. State, 36 Tex. 336.

Art. 1361. [889] Butchering unmarked or unbranded animals.—If any butcher or other person, engaged in the slaughter of animals, shall kill, or cause to be killed, any unmarked or unbranded animal for market, or shall purchase and kill, or cause to be killed, any animal, without having taken a bill of sale or written transfer from the person selling the same, he shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than three hundred dollars. [Act Nov. 13, 1866, p. 244; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

See notes under article 1359, ante.

What constitutes offense.—Where a butcher slaughters two unmarked cattle for a stranger and then buys them and sells them, he is properly convicted under this article. Hunt v. State, 33 App. 93, 25 S. W. 127.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 644, 645.

Art. 1362. [890] Not applicable to animals raised by butchers.—The preceding article shall not apply to the slaughter of any animal raised by the person slaughtering the same. [Id.; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

Constitutionality.—See notes under article 1359, ante.

Art. 1363. [891] Butcher failing to make report of animals slaughtered.—If any person engaged in the slaughter and sale of animals for market in any county, city, town or village in this state, shall fail to report to the commissioners' court of the county in which he transacts such business, at each regular term thereof, the number, color, age, sex, marks and brands of every animal slaughtered by him since the last term of said court, accompanied with a bill of sale or written conveyance to him of every animal slaughtered, save such as were raised by himself, which shall be specified, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than three hundred dollars. [Id.; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

See note under article 1372, post.

Historical.—The above provision was re-enacted in 1907 as an amendment of art. 4943 Rev. St. 1895. See art. 7173 Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Constitutionality.—See notes under article 1359 ante.

This article does not conflict with section 10 of the Bill of Rights. Aston v. State, 27 App. 574, 11 S. W. 637.

Conflict with revised civil statutes.—There is no conflict between this article and article 4943 of the Revised Statutes of 1895 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7173). Dreyer v. State, 10 App. 97.

Substantive offense.—This article defines a substantive offense, not limited by or dependent upon any other enactment, and is a general law in force throughout the state. Dreyer v. State, 10 App. 97.

Report contemplated by statute.—A butcher cannot excuse himself for failure to report to the county commissioners court at each regular term by producing a report for said term sworn to and filed at a later term. Bruns v. State, 33 App. 415, 26 S. W. 722.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 646, 647.

Indictment should allege, not only that defendant was a butcher, but that he had slaughtered a number of animals, etc., and had failed to make a report of the same. Braun v. State, 40 App. 241, 49 S. W. 620.

When indictment alleged that the defendant was engaged in the butcher business on the 11th day of February, and that he did not make a report at first meeting of the commissioners' court, which was on the same day, it is fatally defective in not alleging that he was engaged in the business prior to said 11th day of February. Braun v. State, 40 App. 241, 49 S. W. 620.

An indictment for this offense held insufficient. Kinney v. State, 21 App. 348, 17 S. W. 423.

An indictment charging that defendant failed to make report "of all animals purchased and slaughtered by him," held defective in that it only partially stated the offense. Kinney v. State, 21 App. 348, 17 S. W. 423.

Former laws.—See Bergstrom v. State, 36 Tex. 336; Monroe v. State, 3 App. 341; Schultze v. State, 30 Tex. 508.

Art. 1364. Before engaging in business of slaughter and sale of animals, what is required.—Before engaging in the business of slaughter and sale of animals for market, every person, firm or corporation, desiring to so engage, must first register his name or their names with the county clerk, indicating their purpose to engage in such business, and, upon failure to so first register their names, they may be fined in any sum not less than five dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars. Provided, nothing in this law shall be construed to apply to slaughter houses in this state slaughtering as many as three hundred cattle per day. [Act 1907, p. 240.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 647.

Art. 1365. [892] Butchers and slaughterers required to file bond.—Every person, before he shall set up and carry on the trade or occupation of a butcher or slaughterer of cattle in the state of Texas, shall file a bond, to be approved by the county judge of the county in which he resides to carry on the business, in a sum not less than two hundred dollars, nor more than one thousand dollars, payable to the state of Texas, conditioned that he shall keep a true and faithful record, in a book kept for that purpose, of all cattle purchased or slaughtered by him, with a description of the animal, including marks, brands, age, color, weight and from whom purchased and the date thereof, that he will have the hide and ear of such animal inspected by the inspector, or some magistrate of the county, within twenty days after it is slaughtered, and that he will not purchase any cattle that has been slaughtered by another, unless the hide and ears of such slaughtered animal accompany said animal offered for sale, and that he will not purchase any animal that has been slaughtered by another, when the ear marks or brands on the hide accompanying such animal, when offered for sale, have been changed, mutilated or destroyed. [895] Penalty for purchasing slaughtered cattle, unless accompanied by hide and ears, etc.—Any person engaged in butchering or slaughtering, and who shall purchase any cattle that have been slaughtered by another without the hide and ears of such animal accompanying the same, or shall purchase any animal that has been slaughtered by another when the ear mark or brand on the hide accompanying the same, when offered for sale, have been changed, mutilated or destroyed, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., § 4; amend. Id.; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 649.

Art. 1369. [896] The record provided for in article 1367 to be open for inspection.—The record provided for in article 1367 of this charter shall be open to the inspection of all parties; and any butcher refusing to permit such inspection at any reasonable hour shall be fined in any sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars. [Id., § 5; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

Constitutionality.—See notes under article 1359, ante.

Art. 1370. [897] Duty of county attorney.—In addition to the criminal prosecution that may be brought under this law, it is the duty of the county attorney to bring a civil action against any butcher or slaughterer of animals for any violations of the terms of the bond prescribed in article 1365. [Act 1893, p. 38; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 651.

Constitutionality.—See notes under article 1359, ante.

Art. 1371. [898] Inspector to keep record.—It shall be the duty of the inspector or magistrate to keep a record of the marks, brands, color and general description of such hides, and for whom inspected, with the date of inspection, and return a copy of the same to the clerk of the county court of the county in which it was inspected within thirty days after said inspection; and said inspector or magistrate shall be entitled to receive ten cents for each hide so inspected, to be paid by the party having the hide inspected; and any inspector or magistrate failing to keep such book, or failing to make such report as above provided for, may be fined in any sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty-five dollars. [Id.; amended, Act 1899, p. 87.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 647.

Constitutionality.—See notes under article 1359, ante.

Application to article 1363.—This article in exempting certain counties from "the provisions of this law," means the provisions of the law of 1893 brought forward by the codifiers, and not at all to article 1363, though it is found in the same chapter of the Penal Code. Braun v. State, 40 App. 241, 49 S. W. 620.

Art. 1373. [901] Auctioneer selling animal without written statement, etc.—If any auctioneer or other person shall sell at auction any horse, mule or ox, without first requiring from the party for whom such sale is made, a written statement signed by him of the manner in which, and the name and residence of the person from whom, he acquired such animal, he shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id.; amended, Act 1899, p. 89.]

Constitutionality.—See notes under article 1359, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 653.

Art. 1375. This chapter not to apply to Karnes county.—The provisions of chapter 12, title 17, of the Penal Code, in so far as the same relate to and require the inspection by a magistrate, or an inspector, of the ears and hides of animals slaughtered by butchers, shall not apply to Karnes county. Historical.—The amendment, in 1915, of art. 1372, ante, may supersede this article.

Constitutionality.—See notes under article 1359, ante.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

ILLEGAL MARKING AND BRANDING AND OTHER OFFENSES RELATING TO STOCK

Art. 1376. Illegal marking and branding.	Art. 1383. Having possession of hide without owner's consent.
1377. Altering or defacing mark or brand.	1384. Having possession of hide with brand cut out, etc.
1378. Using mark or brand not on record.	1385. Milking another's cow.
1379. Same subject.	1386. Driving cattle from range.
1380. Killing unmarked or unbranded cattle, etc.	1387. Preceding article qualified.
1381. Procedure in prosecutions for.	1388. Procedure in such cases.
1382. Skinning cattle.	1389. False pedigree and certificate of sale.

Article 1376. [903] Illegal marking and branding.—Every person who shall mark or brand any horse, mule, ass or cattle, or who shall mark any sheep, goat or hog, not being his own, and without the consent of the owner, and with intent to defraud, shall be punished in the same manner as if he had committed a theft of such animal.

See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 7151-7160, and notes thereunder.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 654.

See State v. Faucett, 15 Tex. 584; Cresap v. State, 28 App. 529, 13 S. W. 992; Mayes v. State, 33 Tex. 340; Adams v. State, 16 App. 162; House v. State, 15 App. 522.

The indictment should allege the name of the owner of the animal, or that the owner is unknown. State v. Haws, 41 Tex. 161; State v. Faucett, 15 Tex. 584.

The indictment must allege that the act was done "without the consent of the owner" and "with intent to defraud." State v. Hall, 27 Tex. 333.

Where the indictment charges the illegal marking or branding of a horse, mule, ass, or cattle, it need not allege value; but, if the animal be a sheep, goat, or hog, value must be alleged. If the value alleged be less than twenty dollars, value need not be proved, as in such case the offense alleged is a misdemeanor, and its punishment is not graded by the value of the animal. Melton v. State, 20 App. 202.

— Description of animal.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 458.

— Proof and variance.—Where an indictment alleged that the animal was the property of Joseph R., and the evidence proved it to be the property of Napoleon R., the variance was held fatal. Mayes v. State, 33 Tex. 340.

Allegations that the act was done "without the consent of the owner" and "with intent to defraud" must be proved. Fossett v. State, 11 App. 40.

Evidence.—As to evidence relating to brands, see C. C. P. arts. 783 et seq., and also Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7160.

And "want of consent" can not be proved by the declarations of the owner to a third person. West v. State, 32 Tex. 651; Cresap v. State, 28 App. 529, 13 S. W. 992.

See a case for evidence which negated any criminal intent. Taylor v. State, 35 Tex. 496.

Charge of court.—The court instructed the jury if they believed that the defendant had permission from S. to mark his hogs, and if they found that defendant at the time he marked the hogs believed that they belonged to S. and that he had a right to mark them, they should acquit him; held, correct. Goree v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 119.

Failure of court to limit effect of evidence as to brands; held, error. Childers v. State, 37 App. 392, 35 S. W. 654.

Former jeopardy.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 9.

Art. 1377. [904] Altering or defacing mark or brand.—Every person who shall alter or deface the mark or brand of any horse, mule, ass or cattle, or shall alter or deface the mark of any sheep, goat or hog, not being his own property, and without the consent of the owner, and with intent to defraud, shall be punished in the same manner as if he had committed a theft of such animal. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, pp. 181-82.]

Laws 1893, p. 25 (art. 1355, ante) considered in connection with Pen. Code (1879) art. 760, provides a punishment without further legislation for subsequent alteration of marks of hogs. Barfield v. State (Cr. App.) 43 S. W. 333.

Nature and elements of offense.—Putting a new brand on an animal already branded, without the consent of the owner, is an "altering" of the brand within the meaning of this article, although such new brand may not interfere with the figure of the old brand, and may be on another part of the animal. Linney v. State, 6 Tex. 1, 55 Am. Dec. 756; Boyd v. State, 24 App. 570, 6 S. W. 853, 5 Am.

St. Rep. 908; Coward v. State, 24 App. 590, 7 S. W. 332; Alford v. State, 31 App. 299, 20 S. W. 553.

"Altering" and "defacing" are not synonymous. Defacing means obliterating. Altering means changing to another brand. Linney v. State, 6 Tex. 1, 55 Am. Dec. 756.

To constitute this offense, it is not necessary that the original sear of the old brand should be changed. The alteration may be effected by so clipping the hair on the original brand, as to change it into another brand. If the defendant, with fraudulent intent, altered the brand on an animal not his own, without the consent of the owner, he is guilty of this offense, no matter with what instrument or means he effected the alteration. Slaughter v. State, 7 App. 123.

It is not essential, to constitute an alteration of a brand, that the original scar be changed. Slaughter v. State, 7 App. 123.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 655.

See Davis v. State, 13 App. 215; House v. State, 15 App. 522; Alford v. State, 31 App. 299, 20 S. W. 553.

— Proof and variance.—When the indictment described the brand which it was alleged was altered, and then described the brand as it appeared after the alleged alteration, it was held that the alteration must be proved as alleged, as it was descriptive of the offense. See this case for an indictment held good, and for a fatal variance between the alteration as alleged, and that proved. Davis v. State, 13 App. 215.

Where the indictment charged the alteration of the brand on six head of cattle, describing the alteration, and the proof showed that the brand on some of the cattle had been altered as described, but on others the alteration was different from that alleged, it was held that the indictment was sustained; that proof of the alteration as described in the indictment of the brand on any one of the animals was sufficient to sustain the indictment in this respect, and that it was competent for the state to prove the alteration of the brands upon the other cattle, although variant from the alteration described in the indictment, as such proof was res gestæ, the alterations all having been made at the same time and place, and constituted but one transaction. House v. State, 15 App. 522.

On a trial for illegally altering the brand on animals, where the evidence showed that the offense was committed after the animals had strayed from the ranch of the alleged owner into the adjoining pasture of another party than the alleged owner, and it was insisted by the defense that the party having actual care, control, and possession of the premises where the offense was committed was the party properly in possession of the animals, and that the facts proved constituted a variance between the allegations and proof of ownership, held, that the objection was not tenable. Cattle can not by their act or volition change ownership in themselves from one person to another. Alford v. State, 31 App. 299, 20 S. W. 553.

Where the indictment charging defendant with defacing a cattle mark with intent to defraud alleged that the ownership and possession of the cow was in W.'s brother, and the evidence showed that the mark was defaced while the cow was in possession of W., to whom the brother had loaned her for milking purposes, there was a fatal variance. Williams v. State, 42 App. 18, 57 S. W. 93.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction. House v. State, 15 App. 522.

A copy of a record of a cattle-brand was certified to as follows: "State of T., County of Y. I, J., clerk of the county court in and for said county, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the record of the mark and brand of W." Held sufficient to authorize its admission in evidence on a trial for theft. Byrd v. State, 26 App. 374, 9 S. W. 759.

The description of a horse-brand, followed by a certificate of the clerk of the county court that it is a true copy of the record of the brand, shows, with reasonable certainty, that it was recorded in that county. Thompson v. State, 26 App. 466, 9 S. W. 760.

Charge of court.—The penalty for the offense must be correctly charged. Burford v. State, 44 Tex. 525.

The charge of the court should confine the jury to the alteration alleged in the indictment. House v. State, 15 App. 522.

On a trial for altering the brand of cattle, where the court had charged that before the jury could convict they must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant altered the brand with intent to defraud the owner, it was proper to refuse to charge for defendant if he believed that the animal had been stolen, and changed the brand with intent to prevent the thief from recovering it. Childers v. State, 37 App. 392, 35 S. W. 654.

On trial for changing the brand on an animal with intent to defraud, where the question of ownership depended largely on evidence as to the original brand, which had not been recorded, it was error for the court to fail to charge that such brand could be considered only as a flesh mark, and not as evidence of ownership, since Rev. St. 1895, art. 4930 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7160) provides that no unrecorded brand shall be evidence of ownership. Childers v. State, 37 App. 392, 35 S. W. 654.

On trial for changing the brand on an animal with intent to defraud, where the evidence as to the ownership was circumstantial, it was error to refuse to give a charge on circumstantial evidence. Childers v. State, 37 App. 392, 35 S. W. 654.

Art. 1378. [905] Using mark or brand not on record.—If any person shall mark or brand any unmarked or unbranded stock with a mark or brand, not upon record, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act Nov. 12, 1866, p. 188.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 656.

Art. 1379. [906] Same subject.—If any person shall alter or change any mark or brand upon any stock of his own, or that is under his control, without first having such changed mark or brand recorded, he shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 657.

Art. 1380. [907] Killing unmarked or unbranded cattle.—If any person shall knowingly kill any unmarked or unbranded animal of the cattle species, or any unmarked hog, sheep or goat, not his own, he shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 658.

See Lawrence v. State, 20 App. 536.

Art. 1381. [993] Procedure in prosecutions for.—In prosecutions under the preceding article, it shall only be necessary for the state to allege and prove that the animal killed was not the property of the accused, without stating or proving the true owner of such animal.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 658.

Art. 1382. [909] Skinning cattle.—If any person shall remove the hide, or any part thereof, from any cattle not his own, and without the consent of the owner, he shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty nor more than one hundred dollars; and the removal of each separate hide from each animal shall constitute a separate offense. [Act April 2, 1887, p. 105.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 659.

Art. 1383. [910] Having possession of hide without owner's consent.—If any person shall be found in possession of any hide of any cattle not his own, and possession of said hide is obtained without the consent of the owner or his legal representative, he shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 672.

Art. 1384. [911] Having possession of hide with brand cut out, etc.—If any person be found in possession of any hide of any cattle with brand cut out or disfigured, and shall offer the same for sale, he shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty nor more than one hundred dollars; and the possession and offer of sale of each hide with the brand cut out or disfigured shall constitute a separate offense; provided, that nothing in this act shall prevent any person who shall be guilty of the offense of theft of such hide from being prosecuted and convicted for such offense. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 673.

Art. 1385. [912] Milking another's cow.—If any person, without the consent of the owner, shall take up, use or milk any cow, not his own, he shall, for every such offense, be punished by fine not exceeding ten dollars. [Act Nov. 12, 1866, p. 188.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 660.

Compare this article with article 1232.

Art. 1386. [913] Driving live stock from range.—If any person shall wilfully kill, or destroy, or drive, or remove from its accustomed range, any live stock, not his own, without the consent of the owner, under such circumstances as not to constitute theft, he shall, nevertheless, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [Id.]

Conviction and verdict under indictment for theft.—Though under an indictment charging theft of cattle in the usual form, a conviction may be had either for the theft defined in article 1356, or for the misdemeanor of driving cattle from their accustomed range as defined in article 1386, the verdict, to be sufficient, must show with reasonable certainty of which offense, the felony or the misdemeanor, the accused was found guilty. Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242. And on the same subject, see Taylor v. State, 25 App. 96, 7 S. W. 861; Spoone-more v. State, 25 App. 358, 8 S. W. 280; Woods v. State, 26 App. 490, 10 S. W. 108; Lopez v. State, 28 App. 343, 13 S. W. 219. And see Foster v. State, 21 App. 80, 17 S. W. 548, and authorities cited. Guest v. State, supra, is overruled by Long v. State, 39 App. 461, 46 S. W. 821, 73 Am. St. Rep. 954. See, also, Chambers v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 261; Counts v. State, 37 Tex. 593; Campbell v. State, 42 Tex. 591; Turner v. State, 7 Tex. App. 596; Smith v. State, 21 App. 133, 17 S. W. 558.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 661.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to support conviction. Newport v. State (Cr. App.) 77 S. W. 224.

Charge.—Where, in a prosecution for driving cattle from their accustomed range, the evidence showed that the animal in question got into defendant's herd as it was being driven past prosecutor's premises, and that defendant tried to prevent it from following the herd, refusal to charge that, if defendant did not purposely drive the animal, he would not be guilty, was error. Day v. State, 47 App. 178, 82 S. W. 657.

Art. 1387. [914] Preceding article qualified.—Nothing in the preceding article shall be construed to prevent any person from driving his own and other stock, which may be mixed therewith, until the same can be conveniently separated; provided, that nothing herein shall be construed to authorize any person under any circumstances to remove any live stock, not his own, from their usual range. [Id., p. 187.]

See article 1357, ante.

Art. 1388. [915] Procedure in such cases.—In any prosecution under article 1386, it shall only be necessary to prove the act of killing, or destroying or driving, using, or removing from the range of any stock not belonging to, or under the control of, the accused; and it shall devolve upon the accused to show any fact under which he can justify or mitigate the offense. [Id.]

See article 1358, and note thereto.

Art. 1389. [916] False pedigree and certificate in sale of animals; penalty.—Any person who shall knowingly and wilfully furnish or give to a purchaser of any animal any false pedigree or false certificate of sale of such animal, and every person who shall knowingly and wilfully use, for the purpose of deceiving, any false pedigree or false certificate of sale of any animal, whether such false pedigree or false certificate of sale was furnished, given or procured in this state or elsewhere, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail for a term not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act April 13, 1891, § 1.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 674.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

OFFENSES RELATING TO ESTRAYS

Art. 1390. Unlawfully disposing of an es-tray.	Art. 1391. Taking up and using without complying with the law.
--	--

Article 1390. [917] Unlawfully disposing of an estray.—If any person shall unlawfully remove, sell or in any other manner dispose of, any animal which has been taken up by him as an estray, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 184.]

See notes under the following article.

See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts 7185-7208.

Gravamen of offense.—The gist of the offense is the unlawful disposition of the animal. Brogden v. State, 44 Tex. 103.

Venue.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 258.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 662.

To charge that the defendant unlawfully killed the animal, charges an unlawful disposition of it, and the manner of the disposition. Brogden v. State, 44 Tex. 103.

An indictment charging defendant with unlawfully taking up and using a horse "coming within the meaning of an estray" without the consent of the owner, held insufficient. State v. Meschac, 30 Tex. 518.

An indictment charging that defendant did take up and use an estray without complying with the estray laws, need not state the age, color, sex, marks or brands of the animal taken up. State v. Crist, 32 Tex. 99.

An allegation that the animal was an estray was a sufficient allegation that the ownership was unknown. State v. Anderson, 34 Tex. 611.

Description of the animal taken up held sufficient. State v. Anderson, 34 Tex. 611.

Indictment held not defective though it stated that the owner of the animal was known to the grand jury. State v. Fletcher, 35 Tex. 749.

An indictment for the theft of an animal which had been taken up as an estray should allege ownership in the taker-up, and not that the ownership is unknown. Swink v. State, 24 S. W. 893, 32 App. 530.

Charge of court.—An indictment contained two counts. The first charged the sale of an estray animal without having given legal notice of the sale, and the second charged the selling of the estray, when three adult bidders besides the family of the taker-up were not present. The state, on the trial, abandoned the first count, electing to proceed on the second. But the court submitted both counts to the jury in its charge. Held, error, because the matters charged in the first count were no longer in issue, and the charge should have limited the jury to a consideration of the second count only. It was further held that the term "family" as used in article 4967, Revised Statutes 1895 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7198), means the collective body of persons who live in one house, under one head or manager, and that in this case the court should have so instructed the jury. Goode v. State, 16 App. 411.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for the theft of a horse under an indictment alleging the owner thereof as unknown, it is not necessary, where the evidence shows, on trial, that the horse had no known owner, to prove diligent search by the grand jury to ascertain the owner. McCarty v. State, 36 App. 135, 35 S. W. 994.

Evidence that a horse broke into defendant's pasture, and was there for three years, and that defendant's boys were seen to use it, where there is no evidence that defendant ever handled the horse, or used it in any way, does not justify a conviction for violation of the estray law. Thompson v. State, 37 App. 654, 40 S. W. 997.

Art. 1391. [1918] Taking up and using without complying with the law.—If any person shall, without complying with the laws regulating estrays, take up and use, or otherwise dispose of, any animal coming within the meaning of an estray, he shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. If the unlawful taking or disposition of an estray animal be effected in such manner as to come within the meaning of theft, the person guilty of the same shall be punished for that offense. [Id.]

See notes under article 1332, ante, as to theft of estray.

It is now made illegal by express statutory provision to use any horse, etc., taken up as estray, for any purpose whatever, until the party taking up such animal shall have given the required bond. Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 7185, 7186, 7191. But after giving such bond the taker-up may use the animal in moderation. Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7202.

Nature and elements of offense.—The penalty is not confined to cases in which an estray animal is taken up by a citizen on his own land or premises, but extends to all cases in which such an animal is taken up and used by any one contrary to the intent of the statute. State v. Apel, 14 Tex. 428.

Under a former statute, it was held that a person who took up and used an estray horse without having legally advertised the same, and without having first made oath and estrayed the same according to law, was guilty of this offense. State v. Armontrout, 21 Tex. 472.

And "oxen," other than "work oxen," are included in the term "cattle." State v. Moreland, 27 Tex. 726.

Under former statutes it was necessary to allege and prove the value of the animal, because the punishment was regulated by such value. State v. McCormack, 22 Tex. 297; Tharp v. State, 28 Tex. 696; Osborn v. State, 33 Tex. 545. But as the punishment for this offense, and also for the offense defined in article 1390 is not regulated or affected by the value of the animal, it is no longer necessary to allege or prove the value of the animal in a prosecution for either offense. It is essential that the evidence should show that the offense was committed in the county of the prosecution. Tharp v. State, 28 Tex. 696.

To constitute this offense the defendant must have "taken up and used" the animal. "Taking up" without "using" would not constitute the offense, and the indictment should charge, and the proof show both a taking up and a using of the animal. Davis v. State, 30 Tex. 352.

A "gelding" is included in the generic term "horse" used in the estray law. Owens v. State, 38 Tex. 555.

This offense is in the nature of theft, and a prosecution for it is not barred until the lapse of two years after the cessation of the unlawful use of the animal. Davis v. State, 2 App. 162.

The statute contemplates that the animal must not only be taken up but must be used. When a hog was taken up and kept in a pen and fed for some time, and was then turned out and it died, this statute was not violated. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 78 S. W. 928.

"Estray" defined.—An "estrays" is the property of the owner, though such owner be unknown, and may be the subject of theft or of misdemeanor. If the owner be known at the time of the indictment his name and ownership should be alleged, and that the act of the defendant with respect to the animal was without such owner's consent. The word "estrays," as used in our statutes, does not mean an animal using its accustomed range, or which belongs to the neighborhood, the owner being known, or who might be known on reasonable inquiry. But our statutes do not restrict the meaning of the word to animals whose owners are unknown, but includes animals whose owners are known, but are remote, or animals whose owners would not follow and reclaim them with reasonable diligence. State v. Apel, 14 Tex. 428; State v. Fletcher, 35 Tex. 740.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 663.

See State v. Carabin, 33 Tex. 697; State v. Apel, 14 Tex. 431; State v. Fletcher, 35 Tex. 740; Swink v. State, 32 App. 530, 24 S. W. 893.

Under former statutes (Hart. Dig., art. 1254, and O. C. 775a, 775b) it was necessary to allege the value of the animal, the penalty being fixed thereby, State v. McCormack, 22 Tex. 297; Osborn v. State, 33 Tex. 545; and it was also requisite to prove it on trial. Tharp v. State, 28 Tex. 696.

"Without complying with the laws regulating estrays," is an essential ingredient of this offense and cannot be omitted in the indictment. State v. Hutchinson, 26 Tex. 111.

To allege "without estraying the same in the manner prescribed by law," was held sufficient. State v. Moreland, 27 Tex. 726.

It must be averred that the animal was an "estrays," not that it was an animal "coming within the meaning of an estrays." State v. Meschac, 30 Tex. 518.

It is not necessary in the indictment to allege the age, sex, color, brand, etc., of the animal. State v. Crist, 32 Tex. 99; State v. Anderson, 34 Tex. 611. Seemingly it was held otherwise in State v. Meschac, 30 Tex. 518.

Certainty to a common intent in the description of the stray animal is all that is required in the indictment. State v. Ivy, 33 Tex. 646.

To describe the animal as "one horse" is sufficient. State v. Ivy, 33 Tex. 646; State v. Carabin, Id. 697. Or as "one gelding." State v. Crist, 32 Tex. 99; Owens v. State, 38 Tex. 555. Or, as "ox," oxen being included in the term "cattle," but not meaning "work oxen." State v. Moreland, 27 Tex. 727.

The allegation that the animal was an estray is a sufficient allegation that the ownership was unknown. State v. Anderson, 34 Tex. 611.

"Did take up and trade off," charges both taking up and using. State v. Dunham, 34 Tex. 675.

Evidence.—When the state shows the taking up and using of an estray, the burden is on the defendant to justify his action. Ashcroft v. State, 32 Tex. 108.

Evidence held insufficient to support conviction for violation of estray law. Thompson v. State, 37 App. 654, 40 S. W. 997.

Every person, whether in his individual capacity or as an officer, agent or receiver of a corporation, violating this article, shall, upon conviction, be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars; and each day's violation of this article shall be considered a separate offense. [Act 1895, p. 108.]

See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 7256-7305a, and notes thereunder.

Constitutionality.—The articles of this chapter have been held to be constitutional, not coming within the meaning of a "local law" as those words are used in sec. 23, art. 16, of the constitution. Lastro v. State, 3 App. 363.

[925] Clandestine driving cattle across the Rio Grande.—Any person who shall drive any cattle across the Rio Grande into Mexico, at any other point than where a United States custom house is established, or where there is a place of inspection by United States custom house officers, or without first having the same inspected in accordance with law, shall be confined in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Id., § 35.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 675.

Art. 1404. [926] Shipping hides imported from Mexico without inspection.—Any person who shall ship from any port in this state any hides of cattle imported from Mexico, without first having procured a certificate of importation and inspection in accordance with law, shall be fined not less than one nor more than five dollars for each hide so shipped. Art. 1405. [927] Selling hides without inspection.—Any person who shall sell any hides of cattle, without the same having been inspected, shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Id., § 36.]

[Id., § 37.]

See as to road-brand, Rev. St. 1895, art. 5023a; Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7278.

Art. 1407. [929] Driving stock out of county without owner's consent.—Any person who shall drive any cattle or horses out of any county, without the written authority of the owner thereof, duly authenticated as the law requires, and without first having the same duly inspected, shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Id., § 39.]

When offense is complete.—The offense is complete in either county, the moment the animal is driven across the line of the coterminous counties. Rogers v. State, 9 App. 43, distinguishing Senterfit's case, 41 Tex. 186.

Venue.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 258.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 679.

The indictment must negative that the cattle driven were the defendant's and that they were driven without the owner's written authority. Covington v. State, 6 App. 512; Long v. State, Id. 642; Heard v. State, 8 App. 466.

Art. 1408. [930] Failing to take bill of sale in purchasing animals.—Any person who shall purchase any animals or hides of cattle without obtaining a bill of sale from the owner or his agent, shall be fined not less than twenty nor more than one hundred dollars for each animal or hide so purchased. [Id., § 39.]

Nature and elements of offense.—The preceding article is construed to require that the bill of sale shall be obtained at the time of the delivery of the cattle. It being in evidence that the cattle were purchased and received by an agent of the defendant for the defendant, it was incumbent upon the state to not only show that the cattle were purchased and received by the agent under the directions of the defendant, but that said agent purchased and received the cattle without taking a bill of sale thereto, by direction of the defendant. Houston v. State, 13 App. 595.

In a prosecution for this offense the defendant offered to prove that another person purchased the cattle for him, received them for him, and gave him a bill of sale which he said at the time was the bill of sale for the cattle, and he offered said bill of sale in evidence. This proposed testimony was rejected. Held, error. If defendant did in fact purchase the cattle through an agent, and the cattle were delivered to the agent in the absence of the defendant, these facts would constitute a good defense, unless it further appeared that defendant consented to the receiving of the cattle by his agent, without a bill of sale therefor. Brockman v. State, 16 App. 54.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 680.

Information held sufficient. Long v. State, 6 App. 642.

An indictment for this offense must allege the ownership of the cattle to be in some one. Houston v. State, 13 App. 595.

Evidence.—Where the charge was that the defendant purchased cattle on a certain day without taking a bill of sale, and the proof showed such a purchase on three several days, and the conviction was for more than one day's purchase, the judgment was set aside, it being held that the conviction could only be for the purchase made on one of the days. Long v. State, 6 App. 642.

The execution by defendant of an attested bill of sale which has not been filed in the case, cannot be proved by secondary evidence without accounting for the non-production of the subscribing witness. Graves v. State, 28 App. 354, 13 S. W. 149.

On trial for theft of a mule, a bill of sale of such mule, which a witness testifies he saw defendant write, and that defendant then gave it to him, and which is not attested, is admissible in evidence. Abrigo v. State, 29 App. 143, 15 S. W. 408.

Art. 1409. [931] Agent selling without power of attorney.—Any person who shall, as the agent of another, sell any cattle without first having obtained a power of attorney from the owner, duly authenticated, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars. [Id., § 40.]

Power of attorney.—See Turner v. State, 7 App. 596.

Revocation of agency.—Massey v. State, 31 App. 91, 19 S. W. 908.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 681.

Art. 1410. [932] More than one brand or mark.—Any person who shall, in originally branding or marking cattle, use more than one mark or brand, shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars for each animal so branded or marked. [Id., § 41.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 682.

Records as evidence.—The statute, Rev. St. 1895, arts. 4922, 4923 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 7152, 7153) contemplating a person's using only one record brand, and Pen. Code, art. 932, making it an offense to use more, where a person records several marks and brands none of these would be evidence of ownership of an animal so branded, but could be used to establish its identity. Turner v. State, 45 S. W. 1020, 39 App. 322.

The record of a second brand while the first remains unabandoned is not admissible to prove ownership, the statute providing for the use of only one brand by one person. Unsell v. State, 45 S. W. 1022, 39 App. 330.

Art. 1411. [933] Branding or marking outside a pen.—Any person who shall brand or mark any animal, except in a pen, shall be fined not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars for each animal so branded or marked. [Id., § 42.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 683.

Art. 1412. [934] Clerk improperly recording brand.—Any clerk of the county court who shall record any brand when the person having the same recorded fails to designate the part of the animal upon which the same is to be placed, shall be fined not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars. [Id., § 43.]

See Hayes v. State, 30 App. 404, 17 S. W. 940; Massey v. State, 31 App. 91, 19 S. W. 908; Tittle v. State, 30 App. 597, 17 S. W. 1118; McKenzie v. State, 32 App. 568, 25 S. W. 426, 40 Am. St. Rep. 795; McGrew v. State, 31 App. 336, 20 S. W. 740.

Record of brand.—Where a recorded brand is relied on to prove ownership, it should identically correspond with that on the animal and should be on the same part of the animal as shown in the record or the discrepancy should be explained by other evidence. Myers v. State, 24 App. 341, 6 S. W. 194; Priesmuth v. State, 1 App. 480.

Record of brand must designate the part of the animal on which it is placed. Massey v. State, 31 App. 91, 19 S. W. 908.

"Left shoulder or side" is insufficient as a designation of the part of the animal on which the brand is to be placed, and such a brand cannot properly be recorded. Reese v. State, 43 App. 539, 67 S. W. 326; Steed v. State, 43 App. 567, 67 S. W. 330.

— As evidence.—The record should designate the part of the animal on which the brand is to be placed. However, the fact that the record designated the brand as being on the hip and the evidence showed that it was on the side of the animal, did not render the record inadmissible in evidence. Harwell v. State, 22 App. 251, 2 S. W. 606.

The record which showed that the brand was placed on the hip, thigh and flank, fulfilled the requirements of the statute, though it did not state on which side of the animal it was placed. Thompson v. State, 25 App. 161, 7 S. W. 589.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 684.

Art. 1413. [935] Agent of railroad, etc., receiving for shipment uninspected animals.—If any agent of any railroad, steamship, sailing vessel, or shipping company of any kind, shall receive for shipment any horses or cattle, unless such horses or cattle have been duly inspected according to law, he shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one thousand dollars for each animal so unlawfully shipped. [Act April 10, 1883, p. 71.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 685.

Art. 1414. [936] Counties exempted.—The counties of Anderson, Angelina, Aransas, Archer, Armstrong, Atascosa, Austin, Bailey, Bandera, Bastrop, Baylor, Bee, Bell, Bexar, Bowie, Bosque, Brazoria, Brazos, Brewster, Briscoe, Brown, Burleson, Burnet, Caldwell, Callahan, Calhoun, Cameron, Camp, Carson, Cass, Chambers, Cherokee, Childress, Clay, Cochran, Collin, Collingsworth, Colorado, Comal, Comanche, Cooke, Coryell, Cottle, Crockett, Crosby, Dallam, Delta, Denton, De Witt, Dickens, Donley, Duval, Eastland, Ellis, El Paso, Erath, Falls, Fannin, Fayette, Floyd, Foard, Fort Bend, Franklin, Freestone, Frio, Galveston, Gillespie, Goliad, Gonzales, Gray, Grayson, Gregg, Grimes, Guadalupe, Hall, Hamilton, Hardeman, Hardin, Harris, Harrison, Hartley, Hays, Hemphill, Henderson, Hidalgo, Hill, Hockley, Hood, Hopkins, Houston, Hunt, Irion, Jackson, Jack, Jasper, Jeff Davis, Jefferson, Johnson, Karnes, Kaufman, Kendall, Knox, Kinney, Lamar, Lamb, Lampasas, Lavaca, Leon, Liberty, Limestone, Lipscomb, Live Oak, Llano, Loving, Madison, Marion, Mason, Medina, Maverick, McLennan, Milam, Mills, Mitchell, Montague, Montgomery, Morris, Motley, Nacogdoches, Navarro, Newton, Orange, Palo Pinto, Panola, Parker; Pecos, Polk, Presidio, Rains, Red River, Refugio, Robertson, Rockwall, Rusk, Reeves, Sabine, San Augustine, San Jacinto, San Patricio, Schleicher, Shelby, Smith, Shackelford, Somervell, Starr, Stephens, Tarrant, Terrell, Throckmorton, Titus, Trinity, Tyler, Upshur, Val Verde, Van Zandt, Victoria, Walker, Ward, Washington, Webb, Wharton, Wheeler, Williamson, Wilson, Wise, Winkler and Young are hereby exempted from the provisions of this chapter, and from all laws regulating the inspection of hides and animals. [Act 1893, ch. 107; Act 1895, ch. 43; Act 1897, p. 171; Act 1899, p. 205; Act 1901, p. 269; Act 1903, pp. 111, 186; Act 1905, p. 70; Act 1907, pp. 26, 121, 190, 203; Act 1909, pp. 30, 113, 129, 130; Act 1913, p. 85, ch. 43, § 1.]

Historical.—Art. 1414, revised Pen. Code, was made up from Acts 1893, p. 162, amending Act Mar. 29, 1889, § 1. The revisers overlooked the fact that the act of 1893 had been superseded by various acts passed in the subsequent years 1895, 1897, 1899, 1901, 1903, 1905, 1907, 1909. Most of these acts amended art. 5043, Rev. St. 1895 (art. 7305, Rev. St. 1911). Tracing back the history of the hide and animal inspection law it will be seen that the counties affected by the act are the same, whether the question is viewed from the standpoint of the civil statutes or from that of the criminal statutes. The latest expression of the legislature as to the parts of the state affected by the law is given above in art. 1414, and below in arts. 1414a–1415a.

Art. 1414a. Other counties exempted.—That the counties of Stonewall, Kent, Scurry and Fisher be, and the same are hereby exempt from the provisions and operations of Articles 7256 to 7305 inclusive of Chapter 7, title 124, of the Revised Civil Statutes of 1911 relative to the inspection of hides and animals. [Act 1913, p. 87, ch. 45, § 1.]

See note under art. 1414.

Art. 1414b. Same.—That the counties of Oldham and Potter be and the same are hereby exempt from the provisions and operations of Articles 7256 to 7305, inclusive, of Chapter 7, Title 124, Revised Civil Statutes of 1911, relative to the inspection of hides and animals. [Act 1915, p. 222, ch. 142, § 1.]

See note under art. 1414.

Art. 1415. Counties placed under the law.—That the Governor of Texas shall immediately appoint an inspector of hides and animals for each of the following counties, to wit: the counties of El Paso, Cameron, Hidalgo, Lamb, and Starr each of whom shall hold his office for a term of two years and until the election and qualification of his successor. That said counties of El Paso, Cameron, Lamb, Hidalgo and Starr shall be subject to all of the provisions of Articles 7256 to 7304, inclusive, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, 1911, except that the inspector shall be elected in each of said counties at the first general election held after appointment herein authorized. [Act 1915, p. 22, ch. 13, § 1.]

Historical.—Art. 1415, revised Pen. Code, was superseded by the later acts of the legislature. See note under art. 1414.

Art. 1415a. Same.—That the Governor of Texas shall immediately appoint an inspector of hides and animals for each of the following counties, to-wit: The counties of Bee, Duval, Live Oak, Maverick and Val Verde, each of whom shall hold his office for a term of two years and until the election and qualification of his successor. All animal and hide inspectors appointed by the Governor shall be entitled to receive for their services the sum of three cents for each animal and hide personally inspected. That said counties of Bee, Duval, Live Oak, Maverick and Val Verde shall be subject to all of the provisions of Articles 7256 to 7304, inclusive, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, 1911, except that the inspector shall be elected in each of said counties at the first general election held after the appointment herein authorized. [Act 1915, p. 107, ch. 57, § 1.]

See note under art. 1414.

Historical.—It will be noticed that the counties of Wichita, Wilbarger, Harde- man, Childress, Donley, Armstrong, Oldham, Gray, and Karnes, are exempted from operation of the "inspection" laws by article 1414 and are placed under the operation of the "inspection laws" by article 1415. Also that the counties of Wichita, Wilbarger, Harde- man, Childress, Donley, Gray, and Armstrong are twice exempt under the provisions of article 1414.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

EMBEZZLEMENT

Art.	Art.
1416. Defined and punished.	1419. "Money" and "property" defined.
1417. By factor or commission mer- chant.	1420. Fraudulently receiving, etc., em- bezzled property.
1418. By carrier.

Article 1416. [938] Defined and punished.—If any officer, agent, clerk or attorney at law or in fact, of any incorporated company or institution, or any clerk, agent, attorney at law or in fact, servant or employé of any private person, copartnership or joint stock association, or any consignee or bailee of money or property, shall embezzle, fraudulently misapply or convert to his own use, without the consent of his principal or employer, any money or property of such principal or employer which may have come into his possession or be under his care by virtue of such office, agency or employment, he shall be punished in the same manner as if he had committed a theft of such money or property. [Act May 25, 1876, p. 9.]

See ante, art. 1348 and notes thereunder.

Nature and elements of offense.—Prior to the last amendment of art. 1416, it was held that an attorney at law could not be convicted of this offense for converting to his own use moneys received for his client. State v. McLane, 43 Tex. 404. But the amended article includes an attorney at law or in fact. Griffin v. State, 4 App. 390.

Partners cannot embezzle the partnership property, but a mere inchoate agreement of partnership cannot furnish immunity to one of the contracting parties, who obtains the money of the other upon such agreement, and then abandons the venture and appropriates the money. Napoleon v. State, 3 App. 522.

Where the evidence shows that the property alleged to have been embezzled was an advance payment made to the defendant, a conviction for embezzlement will not be sustained. Keeller v. State, 4 App. 527.

Concise-ly defined, embezzlement, which is akin to theft, is the fraudulent appropriation of the personal property of another by one to whom it had been entrusted. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Simco v. State, 8 App. 406; Cole v. State, 16 App. 461.

Conversion of bailment or proceeds by bailee as offense. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Baker v. State, 6 App. 344; Epperson v. State, 22 App. 694, 3 S. W. 789; Horse and not proceeds of sale. Henderson v. State, 55 App. 640, 117 S. W. 825; Huggins v. State, 42 App. 364, 60 S. W. 52.

It is not necessary to constitute the offense that a demand on defendant for the property should have been made. The fraudulent appropriation is to be inferred from facts. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417.

The doctrine of ultra vires cannot be invoked as a defense. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417.

The breach of trust constitutes the gist of the offense, and unless there be a duty or trust imposed, this offense cannot exist. Four things must be established: (1) Defendant's agency and charged with the duty of receiving the property. (2) The receipt of the property. (3) Its receipt by virtue of his agency. (4) Its embezzlement. The offense may be effected by an authorized sale, if done with a fraudulent intent. But, if by transmutation the property becomes the agent's, it ceases to be the subject of embezzlement by him. Webb v. State, 8 App. 310; Epperson v. State, 22 App. 694, 3 S. W. 789; Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Griffin v. State, 4 App. 390; State v. Johnson, 21 Tex. 775; Brady v. State, 21 App. 659, 1 S. W. 462; Taylor v. State, 29 App. 466, 16 S. W. 302. See Bryant v. State, 57 App. 267, 122 S. W. 543.

Authority conferred on a sewing machine agent to trade the machines for horses and convert the horses into money held to so change the character of the contract of agency that neither the horses nor their proceeds were the property of the principal, so that the law of embezzlement could not apply. Webb v. State, 8 App. 310.

The value of the property embezzled must be proved. Reside v. State, 10 App.

675; Gerard v. State, Id. 690; Stallings v. State, 29 App. 220, 15 S. W. 716. See, also, Aldrich v. State, 29 App. 394, 16 S. W. 251.

There is no settled mode in which embezzlement must take place. It may occur in any of the numberless ways which may suggest themselves to the particular individual. The mode of embezzlement is simply matter of evidence and not of pleading. Cole v. State, 16 App. 461; Golden v. State, 22 App. 1, 2 S. W. 531.

See facts held to constitute a delivery of goods to bailee. Cohen v. State, 20 App. 224.

Embezzlement by partner selling machine on authority of outgoing partner and appropriating proceeds. Aldrich v. State, 29 App. 394, 16 S. W. 252.

Giving of an indemnity bond held not to absolve from liability. Smith v. State, 34 App. 265, 30 S. W. 236.

A taking of principal's money constitutes embezzlement, where the taking was not open and under claim of right. Smith v. State, 34 App. 265, 30 S. W. 236.

Proof that an express agent took the money without consent of the agent having direct supervision of the office is sufficient. Smith v. State, 34 App. 265, 30 S. W. 236.

Where no fraudulent intent is shown defendant should be acquitted. Eilers v. State, 34 App. 344, 30 S. W. 811.

An attorney collecting money and appropriating it to his own use is guilty, though he intended to replace it out of his own money. Farmer v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 620.

One who receives a watch and money and a horse to trade for another horse but trades without giving the watch and money and conceals this fact from the owner, may be convicted. O'Morrow v. State, 44 App. 221, 70 S. W. 209.

One to whom another gives money to purchase a business wherein they are to be partners, is not guilty though using the money for other purposes. Manuel v. State, 44 App. 433, 71 S. W. 973.

The "recording and financial secretary" of a lodge cannot be convicted of embezzling funds, if there are two secretaries, one a "permanent secretary" and the other the "recording and financial secretary," and it is the former's duty to receive the money. Loving v. State, 44 App. 373, 71 S. W. 277.

Though a partner cannot embezzle partnership funds, yet where any condition precedent in a contract of partnership remains to be performed before the funds become partnership property, the party appropriating or misapplying the funds may be guilty of embezzlement thereof, though there is an executory contract of partnership. Ray v. State, 48 App. 122, 86 S. W. 761.

Conversion by accused of money deposited with him for safe-keeping. Stephens v. State, 49 App. 489, 93 S. W. 545.

Where a purchaser of land made a part payment on agreement of vendor to satisfy a vendor's lien note, and he failed to do so, but accepted the balance of payments from the purchaser, he was guilty. Cowan v. State, 49 App. 466, 93 S. W. 553.

The word "agent" as used in this article means one in the employ of another for a specific purpose. One known as and called a "messenger" in the employ of an express company is an "agent" within the meaning of the statute. Lamb v. State, 49 App. 442, 93 S. W. 734.

One in the employ of an express company known as, and called a "messenger" is an agent within the meaning of this article. Lamb v. State, 49 App. 442, 93 S. W. 734.

Where one receives goods from another under a contract that he is to take them at cost price to the other as a sale to him, they to divide profits on a resale by him, his appropriation of the property would not be embezzlement. McCrary v. State, 51 App. 496, 103 S. W. 926, 123 Am. St. Rep. 903.

The statute includes cases where money is received by virtue of express terms of the employment or agency, or by virtue of the implied authority fairly resulting from the express terms of the agency. Smith v. State, 53 App. 117, 109 S. W. 120, 121, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 531, 15 Ann. Cas. 435.

The essential issue in a trial for embezzlement is whether accused intended to defraud the owner. Henderson v. State, 55 App. 640, 117 S. W. 825.

Where no fiduciary relation of principal and agent existed between prosecuting witness and defendant, the latter was not guilty of embezzlement. Bryant v. State, 57 App. 267, 122 S. W. 543.

Under this article the offense consists of an agent's fraudulent misapplication or conversion to his own use, without the consent of his principal or employer, of money or property of the principal or employer, or which may have come into his possession, or is under his control, by virtue of his office, agency, or employment. Hamer v. State, 60 App. 341, 131 S. W. 813.

Where one advanced money to accused to make improvements on accused's homestead, took a note therefor from accused and his wife, together with a contract providing that the money should be used in the construction of the house in question, and received a lien to secure payment of the note, both upon the house to be improved and upon other property belonging to accused's wife, the transaction was an ordinary contract of borrowing and lending, the money not being placed in accused's hands as agent, and his failure to repay it did not constitute embezzlement. Clark v. State, 61 App. 539, 135 S. W. 575.

The fact that accused intended to repay the amount converted would not be a defense to a prosecution for embezzling the proceeds of a check given to accused to deposit for another, so that it was immaterial whether accused intended to pay back the amount of the check out of the proceeds of certain notes. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

A partner cannot be guilty of embezzling the partnership property; the statute defining the offense not mentioning partners among those who may be guilty of the crime, and, aside from statute, a partner being entitled to use the property, so as to be only civilly liable, if he converts it to his own use. O'Marrow v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 252.

Where a jeweler, with whom a diamond had been placed for sale by a jobber, made a conditional sale of it, and indorsed the contract of sale to the jobber, the latter became the legal owner of the contract and entitled to the diamond when it was returned by the purchaser to the jeweler. Pope v. State, 71 App. 261, 158 S. W. 527.

A boarding house keeper, who fraudulently misappropriates money deposited with him for safe-keeping by a boarder, to be returned on demand, is guilty of embezzlement, for there are contractual relations between the parties, as Rev. St. 1911, art. 5663, gives the keeper a lien thereon for the payment of his board bill, and there is a fiduciary relation between the parties because the keeper would not be responsible for the money if it was left in the boarder's room, so that the bailment is for the boarder's benefit (citing 3 Words & Phrases, 2761). Johnson v. State, 71 App. 206, 159 S. W. 849.

Where defendant induced prosecutrix to deliver to him certain stock certificates and a note, to be exchanged for shares in another company and returned to her, but he immediately sold the stock so delivered and converted the proceeds, he was properly charged with embezzling the proceeds of the sale and not the stock. Landrum v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 726.

Where defendant induced prosecutrix to deliver to him certain certificates of stock in a life insurance company and a note for $300, for which he was to procure for her shares in another insurance company and deliver the same to her after the exchange had been made, but he sold her shares and converted the proceeds, he was guilty of embezzlement. Landrum v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 726.

Two of three trustees of a school district determining that a school building should be repaired may lawfully delegate to one of the trustees the duty of carrying out the work, so as to constitute the trustee an "agent" within this article. Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 219.

Trustees of a school district delegated one trustee to look after the repairs of a schoolhouse, and to sign their names to vouchers to be presented to the superintendent for approval before the depository of the school money was authorized to pay it. The trustee made an oath to a voucher, which the superintendent approved, and the depository paid the money, which was converted by the trustee. Held, as there was no law requiring an affidavit to the vouchers, and as any want of authority to sign the vouchers had been ratified by the subsequent action of the other trustees, that the money came into the hands of the trustee rightfully, and hence he was guilty of embezzlement under this article. Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 219.

Inasmuch as the trustees had complete control over the money, though it belonged to the particular school, as was alleged, and could only be paid out by the depository on their order, it was their money, and the accused trustee was their agent under this article. Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 219.

Where such trustee, after getting approval of a voucher, had it discounted at the depository bank, because there was not enough school money to pay the voucher, the money he received was nevertheless school money, the bank thereafter appropriating such money as it came in to pay the voucher, and the trustee was properly convicted of embezzlement under this article. Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 219.

Compared with and distinguished from other offenses.—See notes under articles 1329, 1332, and 1348, ante.

Theft as including offense, see C. C. P. art. 772, and notes thereunder.

Embezzlement is the fraudulent appropriation of the property of another by the person to whom it has been intrusted. It is akin to theft, but is a distinct offense. Simco v. State, 8 App. 406; Golden v. State, 22 App. 1, 2 S. W. 531; Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Griffin v. State, 4 App. 390, overruling upon this point, Riley v. State, 32 Tex. 763.

A conviction under an indictment for theft was not permissible for an offense committed before the present revision. Simco v. State, 8 App. 406.

In the case of a bailment, it is only where the property is held by the bailee for the benefit of the bailor, that embezzlement can be committed. Where the possession is for the benefit of the bailee, as in the case of a hiring, the offense cannot be committed. Reed v. State, 16 App. 587. But see, ante, art. 1348, which makes a conversion under such circumstances theft.

One who was the agent, employé or clerk of another, having control of the latter's pawnshop, part of the time during the owner's absence, but while under his direction and supervision, and who took property therefrom without the owner's consent, was guilty of theft and not embezzlement. Zysman v. State, 42 App. 432, 60 S. W. 669.

Where defendant and his partner were running a gin, and cotton ginned into a bale was left in their custody by one who brought it to the gin, and defendant took charge of it and sold it, he would not be guilty of theft, but of embezzlement, if guilty at all. Edwards v. State, 47 App. 65, 79 S. W. 542.

One who under pretense that he is an employé at a lodging house, obtains money from a guest to keep for him over night and who immediately decamps, is guilty of theft and not of embezzlement. Johnson v. State, 46 App. 415, 80 S. W. 621.

Because the act may, under article 1348, constitute theft by bailee is no reason why it should not also constitute embezzlement under the general statute. Wilson v. State, 47 App. 159, 82 S. W. 651.

When one sends a servant for medicine to one place, on a mare which he furnishes him, and the servant goes to another place and tries to sell the mare, he is guilty of embezzlement, although he may be also guilty of theft under article 1348. Wilson v. State, 47 App. 159, 82 S. W. 652.

Disposing of mortgaged property. Forbish v. State, 49 App. 486, 93 S. W. 1029.

Where the charge is embezzlement under this article it is error for the court to fail to charge on this crime, and to charge on conversion of property by bailee under article 1348. Maulding v. State, 53 App. 220, 103 S. W. 1182.

It is not receiving stolen property but embezzlement, when a clerk consented to burglary of his employer's premises, and part of the property was afterwards found in his possession. Bowmer v. State, 55 App. 416, 116 S. W. 798.

The word "bailee" as used in the embezzlement statute, which punishes the fraudulent conversion by a bailee, does not include all bailments, but only those for the sole benefit of the bailor, where there is a fiduciary relation between the parties; hence as there must be a fraudulent taking to constitute the crime of theft denounced by article 1329, the conversion of property by a bailee, where the bailment is for mutual benefit, falls within the purview of article 1348, making such conversion an offense, being neither theft nor embezzlement. Johnson v. State, 71 App. 206, 159 S. W. 849.

Where accused, who was authorized to sign the name of the firm for which he worked, drew a check in the firm name and had a draft payable to his brother-in-law issued out of the proceeds, which draft accused used in payment of his own debt, signing the brother-in-law's name to the draft, he was guilty of embezzlement of money, and not of the mere draft. Pope v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 152.

The owner of certain personal property went to a bathing beach, and, before going in, deposited the property with the bathhouse keeper. R. in some way obtained possession of the check, presented it to the keeper, and obtained the property, and the next day part of it was found in accused's possession, concealed in a safety deposit vault. Held, that the evidence showed pure theft on the part of R., and did not raise the issue of embezzlement. Goldstein v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 709.

Felony or misdemeanor.—See Clark v. State, 48 App. 527, 89 S. W. 647; McCrary v. State, 51 App. 496, 103 S. W. 926, 123 Am. St. Rep. 903; Stallings v. State, 29 App. 220, 15 S. W. 716; Taylor v. State, 29 App. 466, 16 S. W. 302.

Second-hand clothing has no such market value as will represent an actual value in determining the grade of the offense of embezzlement of such property. Nor can the rule obtaining among dealers in second-hand clothing, "to sell for fifty per cent less than the original cost," furnish anything like a just standard of value. Cooksie v. State, 26 App. 72, 9 S. W. 58.

The mode of arriving at the value of articles of that character, which were embezzled, was correctly stated in the following charge: "If you believe, from the evidence, that the defendant is liable, under the charge given you, for the embezzlement of any of the articles described in the indictment, you are instructed that in arriving at the value of such articles, and thereby fixing the punishment of the defendant, you will be governed by what, if anything, you believe from the evidence was the fair and reasonable value of such articles at the time and place they were so embezzled." Cooksie v. State, 26 App. 72, 9 S. W. 58.

Embezzlement is a felony or a misdemeanor according to the value of the property embezzled. Aldrich v. State, 29 App. 394, 16 S. W. 251.

When defendant was herding horses for his employer and let them get away and he was found twenty miles away with one horse in his possession, but there is no evidence showing intent to dispose of same, appropriation is not shown and conviction for felony cannot be sustained; it is a misdemeanor. Ximenez v. State (Cr. App.) 54 S. W. 588, 589.

Prosecutrix delivered to defendant $2,050 to be invested for her in October, 1902, and on December 2, 1902, following, defendant claimed that he had loaned the money to W., and exhibited a note for the amount covered by a mortgage on real property. It was thereafter discovered that the note was a forgery, and that W. was a fictitious person. It was also shown that on the day defendant received the money he deposited it in the bank, and on the same day drew out $540, and on October 16th, $100; on the 18th, $136; on the 23d, $65; on the 29th, $50; on November 6th, $61; and on the 7th, $73. On December 17th he executed the fictitious note to conceal the defalcation. The indictment charged the embezzlement as having been committed on December 13, 1902, on which date he withdrew from the bank but $42.25. Held that, since defendant had authority to draw the money out of the bank all at once or at different times, several withdrawals did not constitute different offenses, but that the act of embezzlement occurred when accused attempted to cover his appropriations, the different withdrawals being mere continuous acts admissible to show criminal intent, and hence the fact that he only withdrew $42.25 on the date of the alleged embezzlement did not reduce the crime to a misdemeanor. Hamer v. State, 60 App. 341, 131 S. W. 833.

In a prosecution for embezzlement, where accused admitted the embezzlement, but testified that he never took more than $50 at one time, it was error to refuse to instruct that he could only be convicted of a misdemeanor if the jury should find that he never took more than $50 at one time. Day v. State, 71 App. 414, 159 S. W. 1186.

Venue.—See C. C. P. art. 251, and notes thereunder.

Indictment, proof, and variance.—See C. C. P. arts. 451 et seq. and notes thereunder. Willson's Cr. Forms, 686-688.

Where the indictment charged embezzlement of $10,000 in gold coin (describing it), proof that defendant embezzled the whole amount in solido is sufficient, without specific proof as to any of the coin described. Riley v. State, 32 Tex. 763.

The indictment must aver a fraudulent intent. Peacock v. State, 36 Tex. 647. But an allegation that the defendant "did embezzle, fraudulently misapply, and convert to his own use" was held to sufficiently allege a fraudulent intent. Such allegation follows the language of the statute, and ex vi termini imports a fraudulent intent. Bridgers v. State, 8 App. 145. When the indictment is against an agent, clerk, etc., it must be distinctly averred that the defendant had the care or possession of the money or property by virtue of his agency, clerkship, etc. State v. Johnson, 21 Tex. 775; Gaddy v. State, 8 App. 127. For an indictment against an agent held good, see Gibbs v. State, 41 Tex. 491; Brown v. State, 23 App. 214, 4 S. W. 588. Against a clerk, see Wise v. State, 41 Tex. 139. Against a bailee. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417. See Golden v. State, 22 App. 1, 2 S. W. 531; and Brown v. State, 23 App. 214, 4 S. W. 588, approving Willson's Cr. Forms. The indictment need not allege an intent to deprive the owner of the property of its value and to appropriate it to the taker's use, as in theft. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417. The indictment must allege the value of the embezzled property. Reside v. State, 19 App. 675. The ownership of the property embezzled must be alleged, and may be alleged in a special owner as in theft, and in case a corporation is the owner, it is sufficient to allege ownership in the corporation by name. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Riley v. State, 32 Tex. 763. Where the indictment, in the same count, charged the embezzlement of a horse, and also a gun and pistol, the two latter of the aggregate value of twenty dollars, the indictment was held bad for duplicity. Heineman v. State, 22 App. 44, 2 S. W. 619. A conviction for this offense cannot be had under an indictment for theft. Huntsman v. State, 12 App. 619, overruling Whitworth v. State, 11 App. 414. See, also, Simco v. State, 8 App. 406; Cody v. State, 31 App. 183, 20 S. W. 398.

In an indictment against the treasurer of an incorporated company for embezzlement of its money, the only description of the money was as follows: "Five hundred dollars, lawful money of the United States of America, of the value of five hundred dollars, a more particular description of which the grand jury cannot give." The defense excepted to the indictment because it did not allege the names of the persons from whom the defendant received the said five hundred dollars, nor state whether the money was gold or silver coin, national bank or United States treasury notes, or United States paper money authorized by law. Held, that the exceptions were properly overruled, the facts showing that the allegation of the indictment is as definite and specific as practicable.

It is urged in this court that the indictment is insufficient because it does not allege that the money was "current" money. Held, in view of the facts of this case, that such an allegation was not necessary in this indictment. Malcolmson v. State, 25 App. 267, 8 S. W. 468.

It was at one time held that an indictment which charged the embezzlement of money, was not sustained by proof of the embezzlement of United States greenbacks, or national bank notes, or both. Block v. State, 44 Tex. 620. But such is not now the law. Griffin v. State, 4 App. 390.

An indictment held fatally defective in substance. Griffin v. State, 4 App. 390. An indictment charging the embezzlement of particular property will not be sustained by proof of the embezzlement of the proceeds of such property. Baker v. State, 6 App. 344.

Mode of embezzlement is a matter of evidence and not of pleading. Cole v. State, 16 App. 461; Golden v. State, 22 App. 1, 2 S. W. 531; Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417. See also Malcolmson v. State, 25 App. 267, 8 S. W. 468.

The ownership of the property must be proved as alleged, and the nonconsent of the owner or owners, to the appropriation thereof by the defendant. Cohen v. State, 20 App. 224; Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Livingston v. State, 16 App. 652.

For essential allegations, see Jaimes v. State, 32 App. 473, 24 S. W. 297.

Indictment against a city officer need not allege that the city was incorporated. Nor is it necessary to set out the ordinance creating defendant an officer. Steiner v. State, 33 App. 291, 26 S. W. 214. Indictment for theft of a bicycle which alleges possession in defendant by virtue of contract of hiring is sufficient indictment for embezzlement. Gebhardt v. State (Cr. App.) 27 S. W. 136. Where W. delivered money to defendant to be carried to K., the indictment should allege the want of consent of both W. and K. Turner v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 767.

An indictment charging the embezzlement of funds belonging to an incorporated company need not allege the charter or act of incorporation. Smith v. State, 34 App. 265, 30 S. W. 236. See, also, Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417.

The indictment should have alleged by whom defendant was intrusted with the property, the agreement to carry it and what was to have been done with it. Nassitts v. State, 36 App. 5, 34 S. W. 957.

The relation of parties being sufficiently stated, an indictment was not defective as failing to allege the property came into accused's possession, or under his care, by virtue of his agency, office, or employment. Evans v. State, 40 App. 54, 48 S. W. 194.

An indictment held sufficient. See Stephens v. State, 49 App. 489, 93 S. W. 545, following Goodwyn v. State (Cr. App.) 64 S. W. 251.

Description of corporation. Garner v. State, 51 App. 578, 105 S. W. 187; Stalling v. State, 29 App. 220, 15 S. W. 716.

An allegation in an indictment that money charged had "theretofore" come into accused's possession and was in his care as agent was not bad as being too general, nor as being a mere conclusion, nor as showing that the money came into his possession before the agency. Mortimore v. State, 60 App. 69, 130 S. W. 1004.

Where an indictment alleged the embezzlement of $2,050 lawful money of the United States of America, it sufficiently alleged the value of the property embezzled. Hamer v. State, 60 App. 341, 131 S. W. 813.

The phrase "current money of the United States," as used in an indictment for embezzlement by tax collector, charging conversion to his own use of such money, includes gold, silver, copper or other coin, bank bills, government notes, or other circulating medium which is current as money; article 1419 post, providing that the term "money," as used in the chapter on embezzlement, shall include, besides coin, bank bills, government notes, or other circulating medium. Ferrell v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 901.

The variance between an indictment for embezzlement of a described check and the check offered in evidence, which was like the description in the indictment, except that it contained in the upper left-hand corner a monogram of the bank, was immaterial. Irby v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 543.

Evidence.—See C. C. P. arts. 783 et seq., and notes thereunder.

Evidence is admissible to explain a seeming variance, Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417.

Evidence is admissible to explain the terms of the bailment, Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417.

The fraudulent appropriation is to be inferred from facts. Flight, insolvency, concealment, or evasion, are circumstances to prove guilt. The guilt of the defendant may be proved by any of the modes sanctioned by the general rules of evidence. Proof by positive testimony is not required. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Riley v. State, 32 Tex. 763.

Where the evidence for the state establishes a prima facie case of guilt, and the defendant relies upon a bona fide disposition of the property, the burden is upon him to prove such defense. Bridgers v. State, 8 App. 145.

Where the indictment charged the defendant with the embezzlement of money intrusted to him for payment to the state treasurer, it was held competent for the state to prove by a clerk in the treasurer's office that the books of that office did not show payment of the money by the defendant to the treasurer. But it was further held, that this negative evidence did not suffice to countervail the presumption of innocence, and it was incumbent on the state to produce the best evidence, viz.: the testimony of the treasurer, in proof of the nonpayment of the money to him by defendant. Strong v. State, 18 App. 19.

When defendant has received property to be disposed of in a particular way and he has not done so, to relieve himself he must show what he did with it. Evans v. State, 40 App. 58, 48 S. W. 194.

When a witness testified that the value of the property was as alleged in the indictment, it was held sufficient proof of value, although the indictment was not read in evidence, but only read as pleading. Harris v. State, 21 App. 478, 2 S. W. 830. See Cooksie v. State, 26 App. 72, 9 S. W. 58, as to evidence of value.

The venue like any other fact may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Brown v. State, 23 App. 214, 4 S. W. 588.

A statement by an agent charged with embezzlement that he had taken the money and lost it at a game of poker is an admission that he used it without the principal's consent, and fraudulent intent is sufficiently established by proof of concealment until the crime was discovered. Smith v. State, 34 App. 265, 30 S. W. 236.

Evidence that defendant had put the goods beyond his control and secured money and drinks on them sufficiently shows fraudulent intent. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 922.

Evidence of want of consent to taking. See Garner v. State, 51 App. 578, 105 S. W. 187; Smith v. State, 34 App. 265, 30 S. W. 236.

Where prosecutrix's attorney was indicted for embezzlement of money alleged to have been left with him for investment, a receipt reciting that defendant had received from prosecutrix $60 on "loan account" did not of itself indicate that the relation between the parties was that of debtor and creditor. Hamer v. State, 60 App. 341, 131 S. W. 813.

Since, in a prosecution for embezzlement, the intent is incapable of direct proof, great latitude is necessarily allowed in proving the same, and any evidence is admissible which has a tendency, though slight, to establish fraudulent intent on the one hand, or the bona fides of accused on the other. Hamer v. State, 60 App. 341, 131 S. W. 813.

In a prosecution for embezzling the proceeds of a check given to accused by the prosecuting witness for deposit to the maker's credit in a bank in which accused owned stock in which one count alleged conversion of a check, and another of its proceeds, evidence was admissible that accused deposited the check to his own credit, and that witness, an official of the bank, had the original deposit slip showing that fact, and that, after depositing the check, accused gave the cashier a check for the amount, which was credited against one of accused's notes. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

Where the indictment in a prosecution for embezzling a check alleged that accused fraudulently embezzled and converted the check to his own use, evidence was admissible that he received the proceeds of the check as a credit on a note he owed the bank. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

In a prosecution for embezzling the proceeds of a check given to accused to deposit for another, evidence by prosecuting witness that he had to sell his buggy and team to pay off two notes which he had signed for accused was not admissible, being calculated to prejudice him with the jury. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

In a prosecution for embezzling the proceeds of a check given to accused to deposit for another, evidence as to what property accused owned, or the amount of, or his failure to pay, his debts, was not admissible. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

In a prosecution for embezzling the proceeds of a check given to accused to deposit for another, a letter written by accused after converting the proceeds, stating that he told the owner of the check about using the proceeds not less than a week after he received the check, was admissible as tending to show whether the owner gave him authority to use the check, or whether accused thought he had authority to so use it. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

A letter written by accused to the owner of a check shortly after its alleged embezzlement, stating that the owner knew that what accused did had been intentionally honest, and that he had meant no wrong and had not desired to beat him out of a cent, was admissible on the question whether accused had authority to use the proceeds of the check for himself. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

The check given to accused by prosecuting witness and described in the indictment was also admissible in evidence. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

Evidence, on a prosecution for embezzlement of money obtained on a check, held insufficient to raise the issue of the check being drawn on defendant's own account, but to show that, by arrangement with the person whose property was charged to have been embezzled, it was to be paid out of his money. Poteet v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 863.

In a prosecution for the embezzlement of a diamond, evidence held sufficient to warrant a finding that it was not sold to the jeweler on credit, but that it was entrusted to him for sale. Pope v. State, 71 App. 261, 158 S. W. 527.

In a prosecution for theft or embezzlement of a note, evidence that when the owner learned defendant had pledged the note he made no objection and did not appear surprised is admissible to show the owner's consent. Pye v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 741.

Questions for jury.—See C. C. P. art. 786, and notes. See Henderson v. State, 55 App. 640, 117 S. W. 825.

The question of fraudulent conversion is a question of fact for the jury, and not a matter of law. Jaimes v. State, 32 App. 473, 24 S. W. 237.

Question of partnership. Butler v. State, 54 App. 42, 111 S. W. 146.

In a prosecution for theft or embezzlement of a note which was delivered to defendant to enable him to raise money for the owner, the question whether defendant believed he had permission to use the note for his own benefit held, under the evidence, for the jury. Pye v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 741.

Charge of court.—See C. C. P. arts. 735 et seq., and note thereunder. Epperson v. State, 22 App. 694, 3 S. W. 789.

If evidence be introduced tending to show consent on the part of the owner, the jury should be instructed to acquit if they found that fact. Henderson v. State, 1 App. 432.

The statutory terms, "embezzle, fraudulently misapply, or convert to his own use," are employed in their ordinary signification and need not be explained in the charge. Bridgers v. State, 3 App. 145. If the evidence tends to show consent of the owner to the conversion of the property by the defendant, the charge should submit that issue, and direct the jury to acquit in case they entertained a reasonable doubt of the want of the owner's consent. Henderson v. State, 1 App. 432. For a correct charge as to the ownership of money, where defendant claimed that the money alleged to have been embezzled by him belonged to his wife, see Golden v. State, 22 App. 1, 2 S. W. 531. For a correct charge as to embezzlement by a bailee who sold the property, having authority to sell, see Epperson v. State, 22 App. 694, 3 S. W. 789. This offense may be presented within three years after its commission, but not after the lapse of that time. Where, by the evidence, no issue is raised as to limitation, the charge need not instruct in regard thereto. Cohen v. State, 20 App. 224.

Charge as to venue. Cohen v. State, 20 App. 224.

Correctness of instructions on appropriation by husband of wife's money. Gold- en v. State, 22 App. 1, 2 S. W. 531.

In a trial for embezzlement of money by an officer of an incorporated company it was not error to allow the state to prove that the accused, without authority, but with the company's money, bought and charged to the company a pair of horses and a set of harness, and afterward sold the same. Appellant, however, insists that such proof necessitated an instruction to the jury not to convict for a conversion or sale of the horses and harness. But held that, the proof being competent for the purpose of tracing the company's money into the custody of the accused, and there being no purpose or attempt to convict him of a conversion or sale of the horses and harness, it was not incumbent on the trial court to instruct the jury as contended by appellant. Malcolmson v. State, 25 App. 267, 8 S. W. 468.

The proof in this case clearly establishing the agency of the accused with respect to the alleged embezzled property, the charge of the trial court upon the subject was correct. The charge of the court referred to reads as follows: "In deciding as to whether or not the defendant was the agent of M., within the meaning of the foregoing charge, you are instructed that if you believe from the evidence that said M. told defendant to get said articles and bring them to him, and also told one Mrs. W. to have R. to get them and bring or send them to him or his wife, and that said R. in compliance with said instructions, did get into her possession said articles and deliver them to the defendant for him to send by express to said M., or to his wife for him, at Dallas, and that defendant so received into his possession said articles, agreeing with said R. to send them to said M., or to his wife for him, you will find the defendant to have been such agent." Cooksie v. State, 26 App. 72, 9 S. W. 58.

Charge held erroneous. Jaimes v. State, 32 App. 473, 24 S. W. 297.

A charge held not objectionable for failing to more fully charge on a power of attorney and right thereunder to dispose of funds. Jackson v. State, 44 App. 259, 70 S. W. 760.

The court need not define "embezzlement" and "fraudulent misapplication." Jackson v. State, 44 App. 259, 70 S. W. 760.

Charge as to loan and loss of money. Garner v. State, 51 App. 578, 105 S. W. 187.

A general charge defining the offense without applying the law to the facts, is insufficient. Goodsoe v. State, 52 App. 626, 108 S. W. 388.

In a prosecution for embezzlement of a diamond, where the defense was that it was sold to the defendant on credit and not consigned to him for sale, an instruction that if the jury had a reasonable doubt, or believed that the prosecuting witness agreed to sell goods on credit to the defendant, and that this diamond was sold under the agreement, they must acquit, presented affirmatively the defendant's theory of the case. Pope v. State, 71 App. 261, 158 S. W. 527.

Art. 1417. [939] By factor or commission merchant.—If any factor or commission merchant shall embezzle or fraudulently misapply or convert to his own use any money, goods, produce, commodity or other property, which shall have come into his possession or shall be under his care by virtue of his office, agency or employment, he shall be punished in the same manner as if he had committed a theft of such money, goods, produce, commodity or other property. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 182.]

See notes to preceding article.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 689.

See good indictment on motion in arrest. Gibbs v. State, 41 Tex. 401. The indictment should aver the character of the consignment and the act of conversion; but if these are averred in general terms, and the defendant fails to except in limine, the judgment will not be arrested for that defect. Ib. The indictment need not allege a fraudulent intent, and it may characterize the defendant as "the commission-merchant," instead of "a commission-merchant." The terms "embezzle, fraudulently misapply, or convert," are used in their ordinary signification, and the burden of proving a bona fide disposition of the property is on the defendant. Bridgers v. State, 8 App. 145.

The indictment should aver the character of the consignment and the act of conversion. If the indictment follows the language of the statute it sufficiently alleges fraudulent intent. Bridgers v. State, 8 App. 145.

Art. 1418. [940] By carrier.—If any carrier, to whom any money, goods or other property, shall have been delivered to be carried by him, or if any other person who shall be intrusted with such property, shall embezzle or fraudulently convert to his own use any such money, goods or property, either in the mass, as the same were delivered, or otherwise, he shall be deemed guilty of theft, and shall be punished as prescribed for that offense according to the value of the money, goods or other property so embezzled or converted. [Id.]

See notes under preceding articles of this chapter, and Smith v. State, 34 App. 265, 30 S. W. 236; Stallings v. State, 29 App. 220, 15 S. W. 716; Livingston v. State, 16 App. 652; Aldrich v. State, 29 App. 394, 16 S. W. 251; Felsenthal v. State, 30 App. 675, 18 S. W. 644; Cooksie v. State, 26 App. 72, 9 S. W. 58.

Nature of offense.—Where money was delivered to the wife of accused, to be carried to a third party, and accused converted it to his own use and failed to pay on demand, he was guilty of theft within the meaning of this article. De Gaultie v. State, 31 Tex. 32.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 690.

See Keeller v. State, 4 App. 527.

An indictment alleging delivery to defendant a carrier, by W. of money belonging to K. to be carried, and that defendant embezzled it without K.'s consent, should also allege that W. was K.'s agent, and embezzlement was without W.'s consent. Turner v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 767.

Indictment for embezzlement under this article, should allege the agreement to carry the property and by whom defendant was intrusted with the property. Nasitts v. State, 36 App. 5, 34 S. W. 957.

Evidence.—In a prosecution under this article in which it appeared that accused, after having induced the prosecuting witness to deposit money then in another bank in a bank in which accused was a stockholder, took a $60 check from him, and deposited it in his own name, instead of in the name of the prosecuting witness as agreed, evidence was admissible that prosecuting witness had money on deposit in the other bank to meet the check when it was issued. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 944.

Art. 1419. [941] "Money" and "property" defined.—The term "money," as used in this chapter, includes, besides gold, silver, copper or other coin, bank bills, government notes or other circulating medium current as money; and the term "property" includes any and every article commonly known and designated as personal property, and all writings of every description that may possess any ascertainable value.

See Kimbrough v. State, 28 App. 367, 13 S. W. 218.

Property.—"Money" is property within the meaning of article 251 of the C. of C. P. prescribing the venue of prosecutions for this offense. Brown v. State, 23 App. 214, 4 S. W. 588.

"Property," includes any and every article commonly known and designated as personal property, and all writings of every description that may possess any ascertainable value, and this includes money. Taylor v. State, 29 App. 466, 16 S. W. 302.

Money.—See Griffin v. State, 4 App. 390.

An indictment for embezzling money held not sustained by proof of embezzling United States currency or national bank bills. Block v. State, 44 Tex. 620.

In legal acceptance, the word "money" means current metallic coins. Block v. State, 44 Tex. 620.

"Money," as used in the statutes pertaining to theft (and kindred crimes), means legal tender coin, or legal tender currency of the United States. McCline v. State, 25 App. 247, 7 S. W. 667; Lewis v. State, 28 App. 140, 12 S. W. 736; Taylor v. State, 29 App. 466, 16 S. W. 302; Otero v. State, 30 App. 450, 17 S. W. 1081; Me- near v. State, 30 App. 475, 17 S. W. 1082.

"Money," under this article, includes, beside gold, silver, copper or other coin, bank bills, government notes, or other circulating medium, current as money. Taylor v. State, supra; Malcolmson v. State, 25 App. 267, 8 S. W. 468.

The description "current money of the United States of America" is sufficient. It covers any kind of current money of the United States, and includes, besides gold and silver, copper and other coin, bank bills, government notes and other circulating medium current as money. Butler v. State, 46 App. 287, 81 S. W. 744.

In view of this article it was held that the phrase "current money of the United States," as used in an indictment for embezzlement by tax collector, charging conversion to his own use of such money, includes gold, silver, copper or other coin, bank bills, government notes, or other circulating medium which is current as money. Ferrell v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 901.

Art. 1420. [942] Fraudulently receiving, etc., embezzled property.—If any person shall fraudulently receive or conceal any property which has been acquired by another in such manner as that the acquisition comes within the meaning of embezzlement, knowing the same to have been so acquired, he shall be punished in the same manner as the person embezzling the same would be liable to be punished. [Act March 16, 1883, p. 24.]

Nature and elements of offense.—Embezzlement is an offense eo nomine, and this article is not so indefinitely framed, or of such doubtful construction as that it can not be understood, and is not, therefore, inoperative. It uses the words "acquired" and "acquisition" where the words "converted" and "conversion" should have been used, but still the legislative intent is plain, which is to create and punish as an offense the fraudulent receiving or concealing of embezzled property, the same as the fraudulent receiving or concealing of stolen property. Hodges v. State, 22 App. 415, 3 S. W. 739. Prior to the enactment of the preceding article it was not an offense to fraudulently receive or conceal embezzled property. Leal v. State, 12 App. 279.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 692, approved in Hodges v. State, 22 App. 415, 3 S. W. 739.

1. SWINDLING

Article 1421. [943] "Swindling" defined.—"Swindling" is the acquisition of any personal or movable property, money or instrument of writing conveying or securing a valuable right, by means of some false or deceitful pretense or device, or fraudulent representation, with intent to appropriate the same to the use of the party so acquiring, or of destroying or impairing the rights of the party justly entitled to the same. 1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—Decisions defining the offense. Mathews v. State, 10 App. 279; May v. State, 15 App. 430; Baker v. State, 14 App. 332.

To constitute this offense there must be: 1, an intent to defraud; 2, an actual fraud committed; 3, false pretenses made by the accused; and 4, the fraud must have been accomplished by means of the false pretenses made use of for the purpose. Blum v. State, 20 App. 578, 54 Am. Rep. 530, citing Buckalew v. State, 11 App. 352, and other authorities, and generally see Cline v. State, 43 Tex. 494; Robinson v. State, 33 Tex. 341; Allen v. State, 16 App. 150; Moody v. State, 24 App. 458, 6 S. W. 321; May v. State, 15 App. 430; Stringer v. State, 13 App. 520; Buntain v. State, 15 App. 515; Johnson v. State, 57 App. 347, 123 S. W. 143.

The fact that a man bets on his own ability to work a swindling device, does not prevent the transaction from being a swindle. Gray and Ross v. State, 32 App. 598, 25 S. W. 627.

Where one is authorized to buy property for another, and buys and pays for the property by draft on his principal, the fact that the principal fails to pay the draft does not constitute swindling. Williams v. State, 34 App. 606, 31 S. W. 649.

The drawing and passing a worthless check held not swindling within the meaning of this article. Ayers v. State, 37 App. 1, 38 S. W. 943; Brown v. State, 37 App. 104, 38 S. W. 1008, 66 Am. St. Rep. 794.

The offense may consist of acts as well as words. Brown v. State, 37 App. 104, 38 S. W. 1008, 66 Am. St. Rep. 794. See, also, Faulk v. State, 38 App. 77, 41 S. W. 616; Speer v. State, 50 App. 273, 97 S. W. 469.

The instrument declared on read "$3 Hamilton Texas July 1st 1896 I promise to pay to A C L Hurst quarterly in advance for one year and in the event default is made in the payment of any amount the whole to become due" signed J. E. W. It was alleged to be of the value of $15, and to be an instrument securing a valuable right; held, the instrument as alleged would not support a charge of swindling. Hurst v. State, 39 App. 196, 45 S. W. 573.

Note a device with trick locks, manipulated under a wager, held to be a clear case of swindling. McFarland v. State, 45 App. 248, 75 S. W. 788.

Conversion of funds by a guardian. Walls v. State, 45 App. 329, 77 S. W. 8.

Swindling an insurance company. Hunter v. State, 46 App. 498, 81 S. W. 730.

In a case of swindling it is not necessary that any benefit accrue to the party guilty of the fraud or deceit; or injury to the person intended to be defrauded. Faxter v. State, 51 App. 576, 105 S. W. 195; La Moyne v. State, 53 App. 221, 111 S. W. 950. See, also, article 1424, and notes.

That the injured party could, after the failure of the security given falsely by the accused, have secured himself by marshaling other properties owned by accused, is no defense. La Moyne v. State, 53 App. 221, 111 S. W. 950 (overruling Gaskins v. State [Cr. App.] 38 S. W. 470; Perry v. State, 39 App. 495, 46 S. W. 816, and Lively v. State [Cr. App.] 74 S. W. 321).

The crime of swindling having been committed by defendant making false representations, knowing they were false, on which he obtained a loan of L., was not wiped out by his giving L. property to pay the debt in order to prevent a prosecution. Robinson v. State, 63 App. 212, 139 S. W. 978.

Where accused sold animals of a third person to prosecutor representing ownership, and thereby obtained from prosecutor money, a conviction for swindling was authorized. Melton v. State, 63 App. 573, 140 S. W. 781.

Where C. paid defendant $10, on her representation that for a fee of that amount she would obtain for him certain employment, which she never did, intending the title of the $10 to pass to her, defendant was not guilty of "theft," but, at most, of "swindling." Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 159.

2. Intent.—An essential element of this offense is the intent with which the defendant acquires the property. Stringer v. State, 13 App. 520; May v. State, 15 App. 430; Sims v. State, 28 App. 447, 13 S. W. 653.

3. False pretense or promise and reliance thereon.—See Harrison v. State, 44 App. 243, 70 S. W. 421; May v. State, 17 App. 213.

To constitute this offense, some false pretense, etc., as to an existing fact, or a past event, must have been made. Mere false promises, or false professions of intentions, although acted upon, are not sufficient. Johnson v. State, 41 Tex. 65;

Mathews v. State, 10 App. 279; Allen v. State, 16 App. 150; Blum v. State, 20 App. 578, 54 Am. Rep. 530. See further, as to false pretense, art. 1332.

The false pretense, etc., to constitute this offense, must be as to some existing fact, or past event. Mere false promises, or false professions of intention, although acted upon, are not sufficient. Mathews v. State, 10 App. 279; Allen v. State, 16 App. 150; Blum v. State, 20 App. 578, 54 Am. Rep. 530; Johnson v. State, 41 Tex. 65. It is not necessary that the pretense, etc., should be in words; there may be a sufficient false pretense, etc., in the acts and conduct of the party, without any verbal representation of a fraudulent nature. Blum v. State, 20 App. 578, 54 Am. Rep. 530. It need not be such an artificial device as would impose upon a man of ordinary prudence and caution, nor need it be such that can not be guarded against by ordinary caution. But if the pretense was absurd or irrational, or if the injured party knew its falsity, or had the means of instantly detecting it, it will not be such a pretense as will constitute this offense. Buckalew v. State, 11 App. 352; Colbert v. State, 1 App. 314; May v. State, 17 App. 213.

An essential element of the offense is, that the party injured, in parting with his property, actually relied upon and was deceived by the false pretenses, etc., of the accused. Buckalew v. State, 11 App. 352; Ervin v. State, id. 536.

Swindling may be predicated upon a promissory note, when its execution has been procured by means of false or deceitful pretenses, or fraudulent representations. Baker v. State, 14 App. 332.

No statement of anything to occur in the future is a pretense under this article, though a false pretext may be implied from the acts and conduct of the party without false or fraudulent verbal representations. Blum v. State, 20 App. 578, 54 Am. Rep. 530; Hurst v. State, 39 App. 196, 45 S. W. 573; Brown v. State, 37 App. 104, 38 S. W. 1008, 66 Am. St. Rep. 802; Johnson v. State, 41 Tex. 65; Boscow v. State, 33 App. 390, 26 S. W. 625; Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 85.

A false promise to do a certain thing in the future is not swindling; but when accompanied by a false statement as to an existing fact, it may sustain the charge. Boscow v. State, 33 App. 390, 26 S. W. 625.

The indictment must allege and evidence show that the injured party relied on the false statements and was induced to part with his property by means of the false pretenses. Thorpe v. State, 40 App. 347, 50 S. W. 383.

✓ Pretenses must relate to existing facts or past events; mere false promises or professions of intention, though acted on, are insufficient. Martin v. State, 36 Tex. Cr. 125, 35 S. W. 976.

The mere act of drawing a check upon a bank in which the drawer has neither funds nor credit will not alone, or without attending false representations, constitute swindling. Ayers v. State, 37 App. 1, 38 S. W. 792; Brown v. State, 37 App. 104, 38 S. W. 1008, 66 Am. St. Rep. 794.

It is not necessary that the false pretenses should be the sole inducement which moved the prosecutor to part with his property. It is sufficient that they materially contribute to this end and without which he would not have parted with his property. Cowan v. State, 41 App. 617, 56 S. W. 752.

Defendant insured his life, and then pretended that he had been drowned, leaving evidence indicative in some respects of this fact. The beneficiary innocently believing the insured to be dead, brought suit on the policy, (which the insurance company resisted on the ground that the insured was not dead) and recovered judgment which the company was forced through the courts to pay. This was not swindling under the statutes. The pretense or representations may be of acts or conduct as well as by words, still they must be made to some one and must be declared on in the indictment. They must be relied on and the party injured must be induced to part with the ownership of the property on the faith of the representations. A connection must be shown between the alleged false representations and the obtention of the property. The court cannot be deemed the agent of the company to show such connection. The company did not believe the facts relied on to show false representations, but was compelled by the court in the suit to accept them as true and pay the money. The indictment should have been quashed. Hunter v. State, 46 App. 498, 81 S. W. 730.

The offense consists of a wilful false representation as to a substantial and material fact, inducing another to part with his property. La Moyne v. State, 53 App. 221, 111 S. W. 950.

While a false representation that one is the owner of property is one on which a prosecution for swindling may be based, a representation that one will invest in certain property, and failure to do it, is but a breach of promise, not a basis for swindling. Johnson v. State, 57 App. 347, 123 S. W. 143.

A defendant who falsely represented that he was the owner of land free from incumbrance, and purchased personal property on credit, securing the price by a deed of trust on the land, is guilty of "swindling," within this and the following article, though the person swindled had constructive notice by means of the records that the land was incumbered. Brown v. State, 62 App. 592, 138 S. W. 604.

✓ To support a conviction under article 1421, defining swindling as the acquisition of property by false and deceitful means, it must appear that the party injured, in parting with his property, actually relied on and was deceived by the false pretenses used by accused. McDaniel v. State, 63 App. 260, 140 S. W. 232.

* The crime of swindling or obtaining money by false pretenses defined by article 1421, may be committed by the use of false pretenses with reference to real, as well as personal, property. Yoakum v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 910.

A fraudulent representation that deceased would at some future time convey title to certain land in return for the present delivery of certain notes does not constitute the offense of swindling, since the statute expressly excludes matters of that sort; to constitute the offense the representations must relate to a past matter or existing fact and not a mere promise to do some act in the future. Windham v. State, 71 App. 384, 160 S. W. 72.

4. Acquiring or impairing property or right.—The title to money or property must be obtained by the accused, or must pass from the injured party. Cline v. State, 43 Tex. 494; State v. Vickery, 19 Tex. 326; May v. State, 15 App. 430.

The money being placed to accused's credit in a bank instead of being paid to him, there is no merit in contention that he did not receive it in cash. Medders v. State, 54 App. 494, 113 S. W. 270.

Securing the signature of a person to a note, whereby he was subsequently required to pay it, is securing from him a "valuable right," within art. 1421, as to swindling. Johnson v. State, 57 App. 347, 123 S. W. 143.

A debtor for merchandise, who agreed to give a check on a bank in payment, on the creditor making out an itemized account and attaching it to the check, and who represented that the check would be paid, and who gave a check, to which was attached the account, is not guilty of swindling merely because the check was not paid for want of funds, since the debtor acquired no property or right by means thereof, or impaired the right of the creditor. Allen v. State, 58 App. 494, 126 S. W. 571.

Where a person secured the indorsement of his note by another upon false representations that he was solvent, that he owed but a limited amount (naming it), and owned property of a value greatly in excess of such amount, and that a named person would loan him a given amount if the note was indorsed by the person to whom the representations are made, etc., he acquired a valuable right, and his act is "swindling," within the purview of the statute. Hubbert v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 267.

5. Felony or misdemeanor.—See La Moyne v. State, 53 App. 221, 111 S. W. 950; Faulk v. State, 38 App. 77, 41 S. W. 616.

6. Compared with and distinguished from other offenses.—See notes under articles 1329 and 1332. ante. See Mathews v. State, 33 Tex. 102; Witherspoon v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 433; Hirshfield v. State, 11 App. 207; Underwood v. State, 49 App. 285, 91 S. W. 572.

When the possession of property is acquired by false pretenses, the true distinction between theft and swindling is this: when by such pretenses the owner is induced to part with the property finally, the offense is swindling; but when possession is obtained in a manner not adequate to pass title to the property, but merely the interim custody, and the property is then appropriated in pursuance of the original fraudulent intent, it is theft. White v. State, 11 Tex. 769; State v. Vickery, 19 Tex. 326; Cline v. State, 43 Tex. 494; Pitts v. State, 5 App. 122. Swindling may be committed without destroying or impairing the rights of the party justly entitled to the property, and may be perpetrated upon one who is not even justly entitled to the property. It may be committed with either of two intents: 1. With the intent to appropriate the property. 2. With the intent to destroy or impair the rights of the party justly entitled to the property, or both these intents may enter into the offense. Theft is not constituted unless the two intents exist and accompany the taking of the property. May v. State, 15 App. 430.

If the owner was induced to part with his property finally, by means of the false pretenses, the offense is swindling. But when the possession, delivered to him by the owner, was obtained in a manner not to pass title, the owner only intending to part with the possession and custody, and not title, and the acquiring person then and there intending to appropriate it, and did appropriate it, the offense is theft. State v. Vickery, 19 Tex. 326; Cline v. State, 43 Tex. 494; Curtis v. State, 31 App. 39, 19 S. W. 604; Taylor v. State, 32 App. 110, 22 S. W. 148; Bink v. State, 50 App. 445, 98 S. W. 863.

The indictment must allege that the injured party was induced to part not only with the possession but also with the title of his property, which is essential to show that the act was swindling and not theft. Cline v. State, 43 Tex. 494; Curtis v. State, 31 App. 39, 19 S. W. 604; Bink v. State, 50 App. 445, 98 S. W. 863 (following Witherspoon v. State [Cr. App.] 37 S. W. 433. Hirshfield v. State, 11 App. 207, and overruling Sims v. State, 21 App. 649, 1 S. W. 465).

It has been held that, on proper proof, a conviction can be had for swindling under an indictment for theft. Davison v. State, 12 App. 214, but compare Huntsman v. State, Id., 619.

A party can be guilty of both forgery and swindling in the same transaction. Scott v. State, 40 App. 108, 48 S. W. 523.

The difference in theft by false pretext, and swindling is, that in theft the owner, in parting with the possession, does not intend to part with the ownership of his property; while in swindling, the owner intends to part with both ownership and possession. Taylor v. State, 32 App. 110, 22 S. W. 149.

Where one fills in the blank spaces of a printed receipt, the signature of which is not in writing, nor resembles manuscript, but is printed in bold type, he is not guilty of forgery, but of swindling. Heath v. State, 49 App. 49, 89 S. W. 1063, 122 Am. St. Rep. 733.

Where a person obtained money from a bank by the unauthorized signing of the name of another to a note, it is forgery and indictable as such, rather than as swindling. Ashmore v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 196.

Where by the fraud practiced the title to money is passed, the offense is "swindling" and not theft, but if mere possession is obtained by false pretenses, and title does not pass, the person acquiring the money is guilty of "theft." Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 217.

Indictment need not charge that offense was committed feloniously or with a felonious intent. Robinson v. State, 33 Tex. 341.

The indictment must distinctly aver the ownership of the property acquired by the defendant, and the person from whom the same was acquired by the defendant. Burd v. State, 39 Tex. 509. The false or deceitful pretense or device, or fraudulent representation used to accomplish the swindle, must be set forth fully and accurately. The facts of the case should be stated clearly and distinctly, accompanied by such explanations, when necessary, as will place in bold relief the important fact, so that its meaning, relation, and pertinency may be fully comprehended, without a resort to inference. State v. Baggerly, 21 Tex. 757; Washington v. State, 41 Tex. 583; Mathena v. State, 15 App. 473; Buntain v. State, Id. 515; Lutton v. State, 14 App. 518. And it must appear that the false pretenses, etc., related to existing facts, or past events; mere false promises, or false professions of intention, though acted upon, are not sufficient. Allen v. State, 16 App. 150. It must be distinctly alleged that the pretenses, etc., were false, and an omission of such allegation is not cured by an averment that the defendant knew they were false. State v. Levi, 41 Tex. 563; Warrington v. State, 1 App. 168. It must be alleged that the defendant knew the pretenses, etc., were false when he made them. State v. Levi, 41 Tex. 563; Marander v. State, 44 Tex. 442; Hirsch v. State, 1 App. 393. It must be alleged that the injured party was induced to part with the ownership of the property, acquired by the defendant, by means of the false pretenses, etc., alleged in the indictment. Hightower v. State, 23 App. 451, 5 S. W. 343; Mathena v. State, 15 App. 473; Buckalew v. State, 11 App. 352; Epperson v. State, 42 Tex. 79; White v. State, 3 App. 605; Ervin v. State, 11 App. 536. But it need not be expressly alleged that the injured party relied upon the false pretenses, etc. Baker v. State, 14 App. 332. A general description of the property acquired, as in theft, will be sufficient, but if the property be particularly described, it must be proved as described, or the indictment will not be sustained. Childers v. State, 16 App. 524. The indictment should fully set out the matter alleged to be false, and the matter thus alleged, being material and descriptive, must be proved as alleged. The alleged false matter, however, may be set out by its substance, or by its tenor. If set out by its tenor, the proof must conform strictly to the allegations; but if by its substance, then it is only necessary to prove the allegation substantially. Thus, when the alleged false representation was, that the defendant had "a large amount of money on deposit in the Dallas National Bank," proof that the representation was that he "had $5,000 on deposit" in said bank, was held sufficient. It was further held that the allegation that the defendant fraudulently obtained the sum of $106 was supported by proof that he obtained $109—the variance being immaterial, it only being necessary to prove that he so obtained money of the value of $20 or more. This case is distinguished from Marwinsky v. State, 9 App. 377, and Litman v. State, Id. 461; Moore v. State, 20 App. 233. The fact that the indictment alleges facts which constitute theft, will not vitiate it. By the same act the defendant may have committed both theft and swindling, and the state had its election to prosecute him for either offense, but a conviction of one would bar a prosecution for the other. Sims v. State, 21 App. 649, 1 S. W. 465. But it has been held, contrary to the doctrine of the last cited case, that where the indictment alleged facts which showed that the defendant had committed the offense of uttering a forged instrument, it was a bad indictment. Hirshfield v. State, 11 App. 207. An essential ingredient of swindling is the intent with which the property is acquired. It must be acquired with the intent to appropriate the same to the use of the person acquiring it, and this intent must be alleged in the indictment. Stringer v. State, 13 App. 520, overruling upon this point Tomkins v. State, 33 Tex. 228. Where the swindling alleged consists in obtaining a person's signature to an instrument in writing, it must be alleged that the instrument, after being signed, was delivered. Baker v. State, 14 App. 332. So, when it was alleged that the swindle was accomplished by means of a false draft, it was held that the indictment was bad, because it did not allege that said draft was delivered to or accepted by the injured party. Lutton v. State, 14 App. 518. Where the alleged swindle was perpetrated by means of a written instrument, the written instrument should be set out, as in the case of forgery, or good reason should be alleged for not so setting it out. State v. Baggerly, 21 Tex. 757; Baker v. State, 14 App. 332; White v. State, 3 App. 605; May v. State, 15 App. 430. Where it was charged that the swindling was by means of a "writing obligatory," which the defendant knew to be valueless, it was held that the indictment must show wherein the said writing was valueless. State v. Dyer, 41 Tex. 520. The ownership of the property acquired by the defendant by the swindle must be alleged, and the same rules apply in respect to ownership as are applicable in a prosecution for theft. May v. State, 15 App. 430; see ante, art. 1329, and C. C. P. art. 457 and notes. The value of the property acquired must be alleged, as in theft. Ante, art. 1342. See an indictment which was held bad for uncertainty, because it did not clearly appear therefrom whether the pleader intended to charge that the defendant swindled the injured party out of an organ, or out of a chance in a raffle for said organ. If the latter, swindling could not be based upon it, a "chance in a raffle" not being property. Rosales v. State, 22 App. 673, 3 S. W. 344. It has been held that a conviction may be had for this offense under an ordinary indictment for theft. Ante, art. 1329.

It is necessary to allege ownership of property obtained. Washington v. State, 41 Tex. 583; Mays v. State, 28 App. 484, 13 S. W. 787.

Averment as to delivery of watch, in case wherein the gravamen of the offense was its delivery in pledge to secure money borrowed. Buntain v. State, 15 App. 515.

Indictment for swindling by false pretense must positively and clearly aver the commission of the acts of the accused. If a written instrument enters into the offense, as matter of inducement, it should be set out as in forgery. Dwyer v. State, 24 App. 132, 5 S. W. 662.

Indictment charged the offense of swindling by means of a promissory note, which, though he knew it to be neither valid nor genuine, the accused represented to be good, valid, and genuine. The indictment sets out the note in hæc verba, and upon its face it appears to be a valid obligation. The indictment, however, fails to allege the facts which render the note invalid and worthless. Exception to the indictment and a motion in arrest of judgment, based upon this omission, were overruled. Held, that the exception and the motion in arrest were well taken, and should have prevailed. Wills v. State, 24 App. 400, 6 S. W. 316.

Indictment for swindling by means of a false chattel mortgage and fraudulent verbal representations, is not sufficient to charge the offense, unless it sets out the alleged mortgage in hæc verba, or unless, stating good reason why the alleged mortgage could not be so set out, it sets it out in substance. Ferguson v. State, 25 App. 451, 8 S. W. 479.

A written instrument being the basis of the swindle, the indictment must set out the instrument in full, or show good reason for not doing so. Scott v. State, 27 App. 264, 11 S. W. 320; Ferguson v. State, 25 App. 451, 8 S. W. 479; Hardin v. State, 25 App. 74, 7 S. W. 534.

See indictment for swindling by means of a "trick knife," held sufficient. Gray and Ross v. State, 32 App. 598, 25 S. W. 627. An indictment for swindling a bank must state whether such bank is an individual, corporation, copartnership, or joint stock company. Nasets v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 698.

Indictment held insufficient because the alleged representations did not relate to existing facts or past events. Martin v. State, 36 App. 125, 35 S. W. 976.

An indictment for swindling alleged that defendant handing to the injured party a check stated to him that "he would have no trouble in getting his money," held, the indictment charged no offense. Martin v. State, 36 App. 125, 35 S. W. 976.

An indictment for swindling by an exchange of property must allege an actual delivery of the property. Cummings v. State, 36 App. 152, 36 S. W. 266.

An indictment charging that defendant falsely represented that he owned a diamond stud and thereby induced prosecutor to part with $75; held, insufficient. Cummings v. State, 36 App. 152, 36 S. W. 266.

An indictment which alleges that the fraudulent representations were made to C., that C. was the owner of the money, and that he was the owner of the Jones County Bank, sufficiently shows that C. was the party swindled. Faulk v. State, 38 App. 77, 41 S. W. 616. Distinguishing Nasets v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 698.

Allegation of exchange of property. Faulk v. State, 38 App. 77, 41 S. W. 616.

The transaction constituting the fraudulent pretense must be fully averred. Hurst v. State, 39 App. 196, 45 S. W. 573.

An information alleging that defendant represented to a dentist that a person had agreed to secure his note for work and material, and that he knew the representation to be false when made, held sufficient where it was alleged that the dentist was thereby induced to part with his property, though reliance on the representation was not distinctly alleged. Fairy v. State, 50 App. 396, 97 S. W. 700.

An indictment for swindling, charging that defendant procured certain clothing from prosecutor's clerk in exchange for a check on a bank, which defendant represented would be paid on presentation from funds which defendant falsely claimed to have on deposit therein, that the check was not good, that defendant had no right to draw it, etc., and that payment was refused, stated an offense. Glover v. State, 57 App. 208, 122 S. W. 396.

An indictment for swindling must allege that the person alleged to have been swindled relied on the false representations. Johnson v. State, 57 App. 347, 123 S. W. 143.

An affidavit and information for swindling alleged that on June 1, 1909, defendant, with force and arms, and by means of false and fraudulent representations, knowingly and fraudulently made by him to W., had induced W. to part with his lawful money in the sum of $26 by representing that he, defendant, was the owner of certain goods, and had the right to dispose of the same, when in fact he did not own the goods, so that the representations were false and made solely to swindle W., contrary, etc. Held fatally defective for failure to show connection between the false representations and the obtaining of the property, and for failure to allege that prosecutor intended to part, and did part, with the title to his property, and that he acquired any property; the entire charge being laid inferentially and by way of recital instead of by positive, direct averment. Robinson v. State, 60 App. 353, 132 S. W. 354.

An indictment, alleging the obtaining of money from L., by a false statement of defendant that he was the owner of certain property, and by giving a lien thereon to secure payment of the money so obtained, is not subject to motion to quash because of the deed of trust to C. as trustee, set out in the indictment, given to secure the payment, reciting that it was given for and in consideration of a sum paid by C., trustee; it further reciting that it was given to secure the payment of a note due L. Robinson v. State, 63 App. 212, 139 S. W. 978.

An indictment for swindling, which alleges that accused represented that he was a member of a solvent construction company of which third persons named were members, and that accused was solvent, that he and the third persons named were not members of the company, which was not solvent, and that, by reason of the false representations, accused obtained a contract to build a railway, and obtained a specified sum under the contract, charges the obtaining of money by the false representations, and is good; and the allegations of the value of the contract may be treated as surplusage. McDaniel v. State, 63 App. 260, 140 S. W. 232.

The presentation of a note to a person for his signature and its signing by such person does not make it his note, so that, where an indictment for swindling alleged that by the defendant presenting a note to another for his signature it became the property of the other, and the defendant obtained it from him by fraudulent representations, and contained no allegation that the defendant obtained the signature, either as an accommodation maker or as surety, under the fraudulent representations alleged, it is insufficient to charge the offense. Hubbert v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 267.

Where an indictment charged that defendant, in order to obtain $10 from prosecutor, represented that he was the owner of certain real estate in El Paso county, Tex., and by means of false pretenses and fraudulent representations induced prosecutor to exchange such sum for an instrument purporting to be a conveyance of the land described, and by such false pretenses prosecutor was induced to part and did part with the possession of the money to accused, when, in fact, accused did not own the land or have the right to sell the same, or make a valid deed there-to, etc., sufficiently charged the crime of swindling within article 1421. Yoakum v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 910.

An indictment charging swindling must allege the ownership of the property fraudulently acquired by accused and the person from whom it was acquired. Pilgrim v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1170.

An indictment for obtaining notes by false pretenses, which fails to state whether the pretenses were with reference to a promise to deliver a deed to land or with reference to the land conveyed by the deed delivered, and which fails to show except in an inferential way that the deed delivered did not cover the land to be conveyed, is vague, indefinite, and uncertain. Windham v. State (Cr. App.) 160 S. W. 72.

Allegations of the indictment in a prosecution for swindling, that accused represented that he was the agent of an underwriters' association, and falsely represented the amount of the capital, etc., thereof, and that prosecuting witness was induced to pay the agent $30 for a receipt set out in the indictment, did not sufficiently allege the offense of swindling, and should have alleged that prosecuting witness, by reason of such representations, was induced to take out an application for insurance, and pay $30 "as a premium on said policy," etc.; it being the policy, and not the receipt, for which he was induced by the false representations to pay out his money. Tripp v. State (Cr. App.) 160 S. W. 1191.

9. — Proof and variance.—See Baker v. State, 14 App. 322; Mathews v. State, 33 Tex. 102; Brown v. State, 48 App. 433, 88 S. W. 811; Salter v. State, 35 App. 501, 38 S. W. 212; Peckham v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 532; Marwilsky v. State, 9 App. 377.

Where the indictment alleged that the property acquired was "good, lawful, and current money of the United States of America, being currency bills," it was held that this description, though unnecessarily particular, should have been strictly proved. Childers v. State, 16 App. 524. Where the indictment charged that the property acquired was nine dollars, and the proof was that it was six dollars, the variance was held to be fatal. Marwilsky v. State, 9 App. 377; Litman v. State, Id. 461. But see Moore v. State, 20 App. 233, explaining the cases last cited, and holding that where the indictment charged that the defendant obtained $106, but the proof showed he obtained $109, there was no variance. It was also held in the same case, that where the indictment alleged the false representation to be that the defendant had "a large amount of money on deposit in the Dallas National Bank," it was not a variance to prove the representation to be that he "had $5,000 on deposit" in said bank. An indictment which alleged the ownership of the property to be in B. K. & Co., was held to be not supported by proof that B. & K. were the owners. Mathews v. State, 33 Tex. 102. The false pretense, etc., must be proved precisely as alleged. Warrington v. State, 1 App. 168; Peckham v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 532.

The indictment alleged that defendant procured money from D. B. as agent of J. B. by a false note and mortgage. The mortgage introduced was executed direct to J. B.; held, no variance. Perry v. State, 39 App. 495, 46 S. W. 816.

Where the indictment alleged swindling on one contract, and the evidence shows that if there was any swindling it was on a subsequent contract, there is a fatal variance. Dechard v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 814.

Where an indictment for swindling charged that defendant secured a loan from a bank by false representations as to his ownership of property and his having a contract with a person to deliver cattle, failure to prove the pretense of having the contract did not necessitate a verdict for defendant, since the pretense of having a contract to deliver, being of something in futuro, was not a basis for a prosecution, and it was clear from the indictment itself that the false pretenses relied upon were those regarding ownership. Baxter v. State, 51 App. 576, 105 S. W. 195.

Where, in a prosecution for swindling by giving prosecutor's clerk a worthless check in payment of goods, the clerk had testified that the check in question, which was on a specified bank, was the check defendant gave witness for the goods, evidence that after witness had sold the goods to defendant, and after defendant stated he wanted to pay for them with a check, witness asked defendant if he had money in the bank, and defendant answered that the check would be honored and that he had money, was not objectionable because the indictment did not charge that defendant had represented to witness that he had on deposit money in the bank on which the check was given. Glover v. State, 57 App. 208, 122 S. W. 396.

Where one is charged with acquiring by swindling the possession of property described, the state must prove that the property so acquired is that described. Lieske v. State, 60 App. 276, 131 S. W. 1126.

An indictment for swindling, which alleges that accused unlawfully acquired current money of the United States of a specified sum, is not sustained by proof of the unlawful acquisition by accused of a check for that amount. Lieske v. State, 60 App. 276, 131 S. W. 1126.

A deed of trust to C., trustee, to secure payment of a note due L., being an exact copy of the mortgage set out in the indictment, is not inadmissible as at variance with the mortgage alleged in the indictment, though the indictment alleged the execution of the mortgage to L. Robinson v. State, 63 App. 212, 139 S. W. 973.

A deed of trust to C., trustee, to secure payment of a note due L., is in law a mortgage to L. Robinson v. State, 63 App. 212, 139 S. W. 973.

The allegation of an indictment for swindling that defendant obtained money from L. is supported by evidence that defendant received from L. his check on a bank and immediately cashed it at the bank in L.'s presence. Robinson v. State, 63 App. 212, 139 S. W. 973.

The variance between an indictment for swindling, based on the sale of an animal, which sets out the check delivered in payment of the animal, and the check as described in the indictment, together with an indorsement on the back thereof by accused, does not render the check inadmissible, where the proof showed that prosecutor gave accused the check, and that thereafter accused indorsed it. Melton v. State, 63 App. 573, 140 S. W. 781.

The allegation of title of the property fraudulently acquired by accused charged with swindling must be proved, and a variance between the allegation and proof is fatal. Pilgrim v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1170.

The value of the property must be proved, as in theft. Ante, art. 1342, note. Evidence that the property was of the value of fifteen dollars will not support a conviction for the felony grade of this offense. Mathews v. State, 10 App. 279. Where two persons are jointly indicted for this offense, evidence that one of them, with the knowledge, approbation, concurrence, and direction of the other, made the false pretenses charged, warrants the conviction of both. Blum v. State, 20 App. 578, 54 Am. Rep. 530. But to make one defendant amenable for the acts and declarations of his codefendant, proof of complicity between them, in the commission of the offense, must be adduced. Marwilsky v. State, 9 App. 377. See a state of case wherein the defendant should have been permitted to show the course of dealing between himself and the alleged injured parties, both before and after the date of the alleged offense, as reflecting upon the intent of the defendant, or throwing light upon the question whether or not the creditor was using the criminal law to collect a debt. Lutton v. State, 14 App. 518. Evidence that the defendant delivered the property to the wife of the person whose name was used as a basis of credit, is competent for the defendant. Bozier v. State, 5 App. 220. But that the defendant, at the time he acquired the property, intended to repay the same, cannot operate to relieve the act of its criminal character, and evidence of such intent, and the defendant's ability to make the repayment, is not competent. Buntain v. State, 15 App. 515; Moody v. State, 24 App. 458, 6 S. W. 321.

10. Evidence.—See notes to following article. See, also, C. C. P. arts. 783, et seq. and notes thereunder.

See Brown v. State, 37 App. 104, 38 S. W. 1008, 66 Am. St. Rep. 794; Brown v. State, 29 Tex. 503; McFarland v. State, 45 App. 248, 75 S. W. 788; Salter v. State, 36 App. 501, 38 S. W. 212.

Evidence held not to support a conviction. McDaniel v. State, 63 App. 260, 140 S. W. 232; Popinaux v. State, 12 App. 140; Childers v. State, 16 App. 524; Moore v. State, 20 App. 233; Blum v. State, 20 App. 578, 54 Am. Rep. 530; Williams v. State, 34 App. 606, 31 S. W. 649; Campbell v. State, 52 App. 208, 106 S. W. 130.

To sustain a conviction, the facts charged must be proved; and if the charge be that the accused passed spurious money, representing it to be good, the spuriousness of the money must be satisfactorily proved. Brown v. State, 29 Tex. 503. So, where the property was acquired by means of a representation that the defendant had money on deposit in a bank, it must be satisfactorily proved that he had no such deposit. Moore v. State, 17 App. 176. The notarial certificate of the protest of a draft made in another state, is admissible in evidence to prove the matter stated in such certificate, but is not evidence to prove any fact not stated in said certificate. May v. State, 15 App. 430; s. c., 17 App. 213.

In a prosecution for swindling it was held error to admit in evidence a certain petition, citation, and judgment, as the same were immaterial and irrelevant to any issue in the case. Moody v. State, 24 App. 458, 6 S. W. 321.

On trial for swindling by obtaining money under the false pretense that defendant was associated with one H—— in the practice of medicine, held that H—— could testify as to the falsity of such statement both as to himself and his son who was his partner. Boscow v. State, 33 App. 390, 26 S. W. 625.

Evidence of the status of defendant's bank account, held, admissible. Brown v. State, 37 App. 104, 38 S. W. 1008, 66 Am. St. Rep. 794.

On trial for swindling by means of a worthless draft by which defendant secured a deposit at a bank upon which he drew checks, such checks are admissible in evidence. Faulk v. State, 38 App. 77, 41 S. W. 616.

In a prosecution for swindling by means of a worthless check, evidence of the bookkeeper of the bank on which the check was drawn that the check was presented to the bank for payment, and payment refused, was proper. Glover v. State, 57 App. 208, 122 S. W. 396.

In a prosecution for fraudulently inducing the complaining witness to sign a note with accused by falsely representing that accused had a contract to teach school, evidence held insufficient to overcome the legal presumption of innocence, and to sustain a conviction. Thurman v. State, 59 App. 285, 128 S. W. 404.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of swindling by obtaining money for services as a Spiritualist in finding buried money. Nurse v. State, 59 App. 354, 128 S. W. 906.

Evidence held insufficient to authorize a conviction of swindling, claimed to have been perpetrated by defendant having cotton, which he had bought by the pound, underweighed at the time of purchase. Schillings v. State, 60 App. 309, 131 S. W. 1075.

Defendant purchased mules upon credit, giving a deed of trust for the payment of the price upon land to which he claimed to have an unincumbered title. His title in fact was incumbered. Held, that vendors' lien notes on the land were admissible, as well as evidence that such notes had not been paid. Brown v. State, 62 App. 592, 138 S. W. 604.

It was not error in such case to permit the state to show that defendant had made no payments upon his land; the court having instructed the jury that if the land was sufficient to pay both debts defendant would not be guilty of any offense. Brown v. State, 62 App. 592, 138 S. W. 604.

L., on a prosecution for obtaining money from him on false representations, may testify that, of the sum defendant arranged to borrow from him, he at defendant's request paid part of it to a bank in payment of defendant's debt to it, and the remainder to defendant. Robinson v. State, 63 App. 212, 139 S. W. 978.

In a trial for swindling by leading the defrauded persons to believe that accused had discovered minerals in a shaft which accused "salted," the jury were properly permitted to consider similar transactions between accused and the defrauded persons concerning another shaft which he sunk, and in which he falsely represented that minerals had been found, to establish the identity in developing the res geste of the particular offense, and as tending to circumstantially show his guilt. Trimble v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 929.

In a trial for swindling by falsely representing that accused had struck mineral in a shaft sunk for the defrauded persons, testimony concerning investigations witnesses had made in the shafts after accused was paid was admissible; the fact that the investigations were made from one to six days after accused gave possession going to the weight rather than the admissibility of the testimony. Trimble v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 929.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of swindling by leading the defrauded persons to believe that minerals had been discovered in a shaft. Trimble v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 929.

Where, in a prosecution for swindling in executing a deed of trust to secure a loan on property which accused had already conveyed to another, there was parol evidence admitted as to the contents of the note, the deed of trust securing it, and the deed which accused previously made and delivered to the prior grantee of the property, it was no ground for reversal that the record on appeal failed to show the note, deed of trust, and deed, or that such instruments had ever, in fact, been admitted in evidence. Bedford v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 727.

11. — Other offenses.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.

12. Charge of court.—See C. C. P. arts. 735 et seq., and notes thereunder.

See Sherwood v. State, 42 Tex. 498; Moore v. State, 20 App. 233; Matthews v. State, 33 Tex. 102; Speer v. State, 50 App. 273, 97 S. W. 469; La Moyne v. State, 53 App. 221, 111 S. W. 950; Faulk v. State, 38 App. 77, 41 S. W. 811; Brown v. State, 48 App. 433, 88 S. W. 811; Gray and Ross v. State, 32 App. 598, 25 S. W. 627.

See a case where the trial court properly refused to charge the law relating to circumstantial evidence, and also properly refused to instruct the jury that if the defendant, at the time he acquired the property, intended to repay it, he would not be guilty. Buntain v. State, 15 App. 515.

Charge of the court required the jury to believe that the signatures to the document were on it before its utterance, and that the defendant's false representation that they were genuine induced the issuance of the draft thereon—otherwise, to acquit. Held correct. Scott v. State, 27 App. 264, 11 S. W. 320. See, also, Moody v. State, 24 App. 458, 6 S. W. 321; Lewis v. State, 28 App. 140, 12 S. W. 736; Taylor v. State, 29 App. 466, 16 S. W. 302; Otero v. State, 30 App. 450, 17 S. W. 1081.

Where accused charged with swindling by the sale to prosecutor of an animal belonging to a third person sought to show that he bought the animal from the third person and had made a partial payment therefor, a charge that if accused bought the animal from the third person, and that they agreed on the terms of sale, and that the third person accepted a part payment and delivered possession to accused, relying on his promise to subsequently pay the balance, the title passed to accused, and he could not be convicted, was not objectionable because making it necessary that the third person received the part payment before title could pass to accused. Melton v. State, 63 App. 573, 140 S. W. 781.

Where an indictment for swindling charged that accused fraudulently acquired property from eight persons named, and the proof showed that the title and possession of the property fraudulently acquired by accused was in one of the persons only, a charge authorizing a conviction if accused by fraudulent representations made to one only of the persons obtained the property was erroneous. Pilgrim v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1170.

Where accused was charged with executing a deed of trust on property that he did not own to secure a loan, the deed by which accused had previously conveyed the land to another being admissible on the issue whether accused intended to swindle the lender at the time he executed the deed of trust, the court did not err in refusing to charge that the deed could not be considered as evidence to establish accused's guilt. Bedford v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 727.

Where, in a prosecution for swindling by executing a deed of trust on property which accused did not own to secure a loan, the court charged that, if accused did not receive the consideration from one to whom he had previously sold the land when he made the deed to him, he should be acquitted, such instruction sufficiently covered a request to charge that the jury could not consider such deed as evidence of accused's guilt. Bedford v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 727.

Art. 1422. [944] Certain wrongful acts included.—Within the meaning of the term “swindling” are included the following wrongful acts:

1. The exchange of property upon the false pretense that the party is the owner or has the right to dispose of the property given in exchange.

See notes under the preceding article.

See, also, Hardin v. State, 25 App. 74, 7 S. W. 534; Scott v. State, 27 App. 264, 11 S. W. 320; Sims v. State, 28 App. 447, 13 S. W. 653; Mays v. State, 28 App. 484, 13 S. W. 787; Frank v. State, 30 App. 381, 17 S. W. 936; Curtis v. State, 31 App. 39, 19 S. W. 604; Graves v. State, 31 App. 65, 19 S. W. 895.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 693, 695-697.

Indictment should state the name of the person to whom the property was sold or traded. Presley v. State, 24 App. 494, 6 S. W. 540, Smith v. State, 26 App. 577, 10 S. W. 218.

It is essential under this subdivision, and must be alleged, that some false representation as to existing facts or past events was made by accused. Mere false promise or false profession of intention will not suffice. Martin v. State, 36 App. 125, 35 S. W. 976, citing Allen v. State, 16 App. 150; Epperson v. State, 42 Tex. 79; Curtis v. State, 31 App. 39, 19 S. W. 604; Thorpe v. State, 40 App. 346, 50 S. W. 383.

Indictment for swindling by exchange or disposition of property must allege an actual sale and delivery by defendant. Cummings v. State, 36 App. 152, 36 S. W. 266.

Evidence.—A bill of sale signed by the prosecutor and another was held admissible on trial for procuring an exchange of property by fraud on the prosecutor. Salter v. State, 36 App. 501, 38 S. W. 212.

2. The purchase of property upon the faith and credit of some other person upon the false pretense that such other has given the accused the right to use his name in making the acquisition.

Under this subdivision, see Boscov v. State, 33 App. 390, 26 S. W. 625; Curtis v. State, 31 App. 39, 19 S. W. 604; Tomkins v. State, 33 Tex. 228; Robinson v. State, Id. 341; Epperson v. State, 42 Tex. 79; Hirshfield v. State, 11 App. 207; May v. State, 15 App. 430; s. c., 17 App. 213; Richardson v. State, 2 App. 322; Bozier v. State, 5 App. 220; Boscov v. State, 33 App. 390, 26 S. W. 625.

3. The obtaining by false pretense the possession of any instrument of writing, certificate, field notes or other paper relating to lands, the property of another, with the intent that thereby the proper owner shall be defeated of a valuable right in such lands.

See State v. Vickery 19 Tex. 326.

4. The obtaining by any person of any money or other thing of value with intent to defraud by the giving or drawing of any check, draft or order upon any bank, person, firm or corporation, with which or with whom such person giving or drawing said check, draft or order has not at the time of the giving or drawing of such check, draft or order, or at the time when in the ordinary course of business such check, draft or order would be presented to the drawee for payment, sufficient funds to pay same, and no good reason to believe that such check, draft or order will be paid.

See notes under article 1421, ante.

5. The special enumeration of cases of swindling above set forth shall not be understood to exclude any case which by fair construction of the language, comes within the meaning of the preceding Article. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 183; Act 1913, p. 184, ch. 98, § 1, amending Art. 1422, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 1423. [945] “Money” includes bank bills.—Within the meaning of “money,” as used in this chapter, are included also bank bills or other circulating medium current as money. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 183.]

See notes to articles 1419, 1421, ante.

See Block v. State, 44 Tex. 620; Lewis v. State, 28 App. 140, 12 S. W. 736.

“Current money” defined.—“Current money” includes national bank bills as well as U. S. treasury notes. Baxter v. State, 51 App. 576, 105 S. W. 195.

Description of money in indictment and proof thereof.—An unnecessary description of the money by the indictment imposes the necessity of proving it as alleged. Childers v. State, 16 App. 524. And see Lewis v. State, 28 App. 140, 12 S. W. 736; Block v. State, 44 Tex. 620.

Under this article an indictment for swindling, alleging current money, includes bank bills, as well as United States treasury notes. Baxter v. State, 51 App. 576, 105 S. W. 195.

Under this article, there is no variance between an indictment alleging the obtaining of money by swindling and the evidence that accused received a bank check and cashed it. King v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 543.

Art. 1424. [946] No benefit need accrue to defendant.—It is not necessary, in order to constitute the offense of swindling, that any benefit shall accrue to the person guilty of the fraud or deceit, nor that any injury shall result to the persons intended to be defrauded, if it is sufficiently apparent that there was a wilful design to receive benefit or cause an injury. [Id.]

See notes under article 1421, ante.

Immateriality of benefit or injury.—Immaterial that any benefit accrue to the person guilty of the fraud, or that any injury shall result to the person intended to be defrauded, the intent of accused being shown. La Moynes v. State, 53 App. 221, 111 S. W. 950; Baxter v. State, 51 App. 576, 105 S. W. 195.

Effect of statute as to indictment.—In view of this article it was held that where defendant by false representations secured a loan from a bank on his note therefor, an indictment against him for swindling need not allege that the note had never been paid. Baxter v. State, 51 App. 576, 105 S. W. 195.

Art. 1425. [947] If the act constitutes any other offense.—Where property, money or other articles of value enumerated in the definition of swindling are obtained in such manner as to come within the meaning of theft, or some other offense known to the law, the rules herein prescribed with regard to swindling shall not be understood to take any such case out of the operation of the law which defines any such other offense. [Id.]

See article 1332, ante.

See Mathews v. State, 33 Tex. 102.

Necessity of prosecution for other offense.—If the fraud charged constitutes another offense defendant should be prosecuted for it and not for swindling. Witherspoon v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 433.

When the transaction on which the charge of swindling is based constitutes another offense, the prosecution must be for such other offense and not the swindling. Cline v. State, 43 Tex. 494; Bink v. State, 50 App. 445, 98 S. W. 863 (following Witherspoon v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 433; Hirshfield v. State, 11 App. 207, and overruling Sims v. State, 21 App. 649, 1 S. W. 465).

Even if the facts constitute swindling, yet if they also constitute theft by fraudulent pretext, the guilty person may by provision of Pen. Code 1911, art. 1425, be prosecuted for the latter offense. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 85.

Evidence showing forgery.—The evidence showed that the defendant induced one bank to cash a draft by means of a forged telegram from another bank; held, that he is guilty of uttering a forged instrument and should be prosecuted for that offense and not for swindling. Witherspoon v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 433.

Where the facts show the offense to be both a swindle and a forgery the case is one of forgery and the prosecution must be for that offense. Abel v. State (Cr. App.) 97 S. W. 1056.

Art. 1426. [948] Executor, etc., converting estate, guilty of swindling.—If any executor, administrator or guardian, having charge of any estate, real, personal or mixed, shall unlawfully, and with intent to defraud any creditor, heir, legatee, ward or distributee interested in such estate, convert the same, or any part thereof, to his own use, he shall be deemed guilty of the offense of swindling. [Id.]

Explanatory.—The amendment is by inserting the word "creditor."

See notes to article 1421, ante.

Constitutionality.—This article was within the constitutional power of the Legislature to enact, notwithstanding articles 1442 and 1443, though it fails to embrace an essential ingredient of swindling as defined in the said two articles. Walls v. State, 45 App. 329, 77 S. W. 8.

Swindling by guardian.—Moody v. State, 24 App. 458, 6 S. W. 321.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 698.

Art. 1427. [949] Punishment.—Every person guilty of swindling shall be punished in the same manner as is provided for the punishment of theft, according to the amount of the money or the value of the property or instrument of writing so fraudulently acquired. [Id.]

See articles 1340 and 1341.

Determination of grade of offense.—Defendant, by fraudulent representations, induced prosecutor to sell his horse; held, that in determining the grade of the offense the amount paid for the horse should be deducted from the value of the horse. Gaskins v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 470.

Construing this with article 1424 the grade of the offense should be fixed by the value of the property the possession of which is yielded upon the fraudulent representations. La Moynes v. State, 53 App. 221, 111 S. W. 953; Baxter v. State, 51 App. 576, 105 S. W. 195.

Art. 1428. Obtaining board or lodging by false or fraudulent representations, trick, etc.—Every person who shall obtain board or lodging in any hotel or boarding house by means of any trick or deception or false or fraudulent representations, or statement or pretense, and shall fail or refuse to pay therefor, shall be held to have obtained the same with the intent to cheat and defraud such hotel or boarding house keeper, and shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one month, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1899, p. 172.]

Constitutionality.—It seems that this act is an attempt to vest hotel and boarding-house keepers with legislative powers and hence is unconstitutional. For the opinion of the court on a similar act see Jannin v. State, 42 App. 631, 51 S. W. 1126, 62 S. W. 419, 96 Am. St. Rep. 821.

Art. 1429. Conviction can be had under foregoing article, when.—It shall be the duty of every hotel and boarding house keeper in the state to post a printed copy of this law in a conspicuous place in each room of his or her hotel or boarding house; and no conviction shall be had under the foregoing article until it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court that the provisions of said article have been substantially complied with by the hotel or boarding house keeper making the complaint. [Id., p. 172.]

See note under preceding article.

2. FRAUDULENT DISPOSITION OF MORTGAGED PROPERTY

Art. 1430. [950] Fraudulent disposition of mortgaged property.—If any person has given, or shall hereafter give, any mortgage, deed of trust or other lien, in writing, upon any personal or movable property or growing crop of farm produce, and shall remove the same, or any part thereof, out of the state, or shall sell or otherwise dispose of the same, with intent to defraud the person having such lien, either originally or by transfer, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act March 31, 1885, p. 85.]

See Cravey v. State, 26 App. 84, 9 S. W. 62; Thornton v. State, 34 App. 469, 31 S. W. 372; Williams v. State, 27 App. 258, 11 S. W. 114; Martin v. State, 28 App. 364, 13 S. W. 151.

Explanatory.—The amendment inserts "or growing crop of farm produce."

Nature and elements of offense.—The several ways in which this article may be violated: 1, by removing the mortgaged property or any part thereof, out of the state; 2, by selling the mortgaged property; 3, by otherwise disposing of the mortgaged property—the intent being in either case to defraud the mortgagee or lien-holder. The lien must be in force, valid and subsisting. Robberson v. State, 3 App. 502.

A removal of the property from one county to another in the state, does not constitute the offense. The term "otherwise dispose of" does not include a removal, or a sale, but does include any other mode of placing the property beyond the reach of the holder of the lien. Robberson v. State, 3 App. 502.

Removal of the property is an offense only when the removal is from the State. Robberson v. State, 3 App. 502.

Prior to the amendment of the preceding article, it was held that a growing crop of cotton was not movable property, nor was it personal property until ready to be harvested, and hence could not be the basis of this offense. Hardeman v. State, 16 App. 1, 49 Am. Rep. 821. But the article as amended expressly includes "growing crops." Honeycut v. State, 23 App. 71, 3 S. W. 716.

Fraudulent intent is the gist of the offense and must be alleged and proved. Glass v. State, 23 App. 425, 5 S. W. 131; Robberson v. State, 3 App. 502; Satchell v. State, 1 App. 438.

Liability of minor.—A minor cannot be held criminally responsible for disposition of mortgaged property. His disposition thereof is a disaffirmance of his mortgage contract, and renders it void. Jones v. State, 31 App. 252, 20 S. W. 578.

Defenses.—The owner of a horse turned it over to defendant to sell; defendant to have all above a certain sum that he might get for the horse. Defendant traded the horse for a pair of mules and told plaintiff that he had a purchaser for said mules. Thereafter the owner, being dissatisfied with the failure of defendant to sell the mules as he had promised, took a mortgage on the mules securing a note for the amount for which the horse was to be sold. Held, that the execution of the mortgage changed the relation of the parties as to the property from the condition on which defendant originally acquired it, but, if the conduct of the parties after the execution of the mortgage showed that the mortgage was not intended to express the contract existing between the parties, then defendant would have the right to set this up in a prosecution against him for thereafter selling the mortgaged property. Stewart v. State, 60 App. 92, 131 S. W. 329.

A chattel mortgage cannot be set aside on an implied agreement or understanding; but there must have been an express contract made subsequently in order to set aside and invalidate the note and mortgage. Stewart v. State, 60 App. 92, 131 S. W. 329.

One accused of fraudulently disposing of mortgaged property having admitted that he received possession of the property by agreeing to give a mortgage thereon, and that he did execute and deliver the mortgage should not be permitted to say that, in fact, he did not do so. Loggins v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 170.

Venue.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 258.

Indictment, proof and variance.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 699.

Description of property, see notes under C. C. P., art. 458.

See, also, C. C. P., art. 470, and note.

Variance. See Honeycut v. State, 23 App. 71, 3 S. W. 716; Jones v. State, 35 App. 565, 34 S. W. 631.

Neither the value of the property, nor its liability to forced sale need be alleged, and the title may be laid in the administrator of a deceased mortgagee. State v. Maxey, 41 Tex. 521.

If the instrument is conditional, it must be averred that the condition has happened. State v. Devereux, 41 Tex. 383.

It must be alleged that the mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien in writing, was valid, subsisting, and unpaid at the time of the sale, removal, or disposition of the property. Satchell v. State, 1 App. 438.

It must be alleged that the mortgage or other lien was in writing, and that the injured party was the holder of the same. Moye v. State, 9 App. 88.

The indictment must allege that the property was personal or movable property, or a growing crop of farm produce, at the time of the execution of the mortgage or lien upon it. The sale or other disposition of real property on which the owner had executed a written lien is not an offense. Hardeman v. State, 16 App. 1, 49 Am. Rep. 821.

Willson's Cr. Forms, 699, approved in Glass v. State, 23 App. 425, 5 S. W. 131.

For allegation as to the mortgage, see, also, Glass v. State, 23 App. 425, 5 S. W. 131; Jones v. State, 35 App. 565, 34 S. W. 631.

The indictment in this case alleges that the mortgaged property was fraudulently disposed of by the accused to some person to the grand jury unknown. The evidence shows that it was disposed of to one Ike Thomas, and that the grand jury either knew, or by the exertion of reasonable diligence could have ascertained that fact. Held, that the indictment is sufficient, to charge the offense of fraudulently disposing of mortgaged property, but the evidence, disproving an essential allegation in the said indictment, is insufficient to support the conviction. Presley v. State, 24 App. 494, 6 S. W. 540. See, also, Armstrong v. State, 27 App. 462, 11 S. W. 462.

The indictment in this case described the property to which it related as "a growing crop," and alleged that the mortgage thereon was executed on the fifteenth day of January, 1887, and pledged a crop not then planted. Held, that the indictment was insufficient to charge the offense denounced by this article. To be sufficient to charge an offense under the facts stated, the indictment should have charged that the accused executed a mortgage upon a crop to be planted; that the said crop was afterwards planted by the accused, and that when the same was planted by him, and was growing or grown, the mortgage attached to and became a lien upon the same, and that the accused fraudulently disposed of the same, etc. Mooney v. State, 25 App. 31, 7 S. W. 587.

Indictment, to be sufficient to charge the offense of disposing of mortgaged property with intent to defraud, must allege the name of the person to whom the mortgaged property was disposed of, or that the name of such person was unknown to the grand jury. Smith v. State, 26 App. 577, 10 S. W. 218; Alexander v. State, 27 App. 94, 10 S. W. 764.

It is made a felony to fraudulently dispose of the whole or a part of the mortgaged property, but in each instance there must be a fraudulent disposition. Therefore it follows that each fraudulent disposition is a separate offense, and where the pleader undertakes to allege separate offenses, he must do so in separate counts. He cannot allege two distinct offenses in the same count. Wood v. State, 47 App. 543, 84 S. W. 1058.

An indictment for the fraudulent disposition of mortgaged chattels, which alleges that accused delivered to prosecutor a chattel mortgage, which sets out the mortgage, which on its face authorizes the prosecutor as trustee to sell the chattels on default, and which avers that accused fraudulently sold the chattels with intent to defraud the prosecutor, the legal owner of the mortgage, is sufficient without alleging that the prosecutor is the holder of the debt and that he is a trustee for the holder. Stewart v. State, 60 App. 92, 131 S. W. 329.

While, in a prosecution for fraudulently disposing of mortgaged property, it is better for the indictment to set out the mortgage or its substance, in order to be sufficient, it must at least allege that the mortgage was given to secure an indebtedness, naming the amount, and that the debt was unpaid when the property was disposed of. McElroy v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 797.

Evidence.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 783.

Evidence held sufficient to convict. Wisdom v. State, 39 App. 621, 47 S. W. 1118.

Charge of court and questions for jury.—See Jones v. State, 35 App. 565, 34 S. W. 631.

Where the evidence raised the issue that in exchanging the mortgaged property, the defendant stipulated that the title to the same should not pass to and vest in the vendee, until he, the defendant, had satisfied the mortgage, the court should have submitted this issue in its charge, and should have directed the jury that such a disposition of the property would not have been with a fraudulent intent. Glass v. State, 23 App. 425, 5 S. W. 131.

Where defendant is charged with selling mortgaged property, and there is evidence that he notified purchaser of the mortgage, and the purchaser agreed to pay balance after satisfaction of his debt on the mortgage, this issue should be presented to the jury. Sweat v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 265.

On a trial for fraudulently selling mortgaged chattels the evidence showed that accused was in possession of a horse to sell for the prosecutor, that thereafter he exchanged it for a pair of mules, and in settlement of the transaction he executed to prosecutor a chattel mortgage on the mules for the amount for which the horse was to be sold. The evidence showed that after such execution of the mortgage he treated the property as his own and subsequently mortgaged it to a third person and thereafter sold it. Held, that an instruction that, if accused under a mistaken belief supposed he could sell the chattels, he should be acquitted, though he intended to appropriate the proceeds of the sale to his own use, was sufficiently favorable to accused. Stewart v. State, 60 App. 92, 131 S. W. 329.

Where an alleged unlawful sale of mortgaged property occurred July 15, 1909, and an indictment therefor was returned on September 30th following, an instruction that if the mortgage was a valid lien on the property on or about July 15, 1910, and defendant on that day sold the property, he was guilty, was erroneous. Fox v. State, 61 App. 341, 135 S. W. 557.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

OF OFFENSES COMMITTED IN ANOTHER COUNTRY OR STATE

Art.	Art.
1431. Bringing stolen property into this state.	1432. Requisites of guilt under preceding article.

Article 1431. [951] Bringing stolen property into this state.—If any person having committed an offense in any foreign country, state or territory, which, if committed in this state, would have been robbery, theft, embezzlement or receiving of stolen goods or property, knowing the same to have been stolen, or fraudulently receiving or concealing property acquired by another by embezzlement, knowing the same to have been so acquired, shall bring into this state any property so acquired or received, he shall be deemed guilty of robbery, theft, embezzlement, or receiving of goods or property stolen or embezzled, as the case may be, knowing the same to have been stolen or embezzled, and shall be punished as if the offense had been committed in this state. And, in cases herein mentioned, the offense may be charged to have been committed in any county into or through which the property may be brought in the same manner as if the act constituting such offense had taken place wholly within this state. [Amend. 1895, p. 116.]

See notes under the following article.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 702.

Art. 1432. [952] Requisites of guilt under preceding article.—To render a person guilty under the preceding article, it must appear that by the law of the foreign country, state or territory from which the property was taken and brought to this state, the act committed would also have been robbery, embezzlement, theft or receiving stolen goods or property, or receiving or concealing goods or property embezzled. [Amend. 1895, p. 116.]

Nature and elements of offense.—The evidence must show that the defendant brought the property into the county of the prosecution, or took possession and control of it after it reached said county. Carter v. State, 37 Tex. 362.

The law of the foreign country or state is an element of the offense and an issuable fact to be alleged and proved. Cummins v. State, 12 App. 121.

It must be shown that the defendant committed the theft and brought the property into this state, or, at least, that he had possession or control over it after it came into this state. But if the defendant not only aided in the original theft, but furnished the means for bringing the property into this state, and then came to this state himself in pursuance of an agreement with the other thief, and here received his portion of the fruits of the theft, he brought the property into the state within the meaning of the law. Sutton v. State, 16 App. 490.

To support a conviction for the theft of property stolen in a foreign country and brought into this state, it devolves upon the prosecution to prove that the act committed was not only theft in this state, but was theft in the foreign country from which the property was taken and brought into this state. Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667. See, also, Clark v. State, 27 App. 405, 11 S. W. 374; West v. State, 27 App. 472, 11 S. W. 482.

Constituent elements of bringing stolen property into the state: 1, the acts and intent must constitute theft by the law of the country in which the property was taken; 2, such acts and intent must constitute theft under the law of this state. The thief must bring the stolen property into this state. McKenzie v. State, 32 App. 568, 25 S. W. 426, 40 Am. St. Rep. 795. And see, also, State v. Morales, 21 Tex. 298; Carmisales v. State, 11 App. 474; Edwards v. State, 29 App. 452, 16 S. W. 98.

Unless the act constitutes robbery under the laws of the territory where committed, it is no offense to bring the property into this State, though the act constitutes robbery if committed in Texas. Smith v. State, 37 App. 346, 39 S. W. 933.

If a person commits an act in another State or Territory, which if committed in this State would be theft and subsequently brings the stolen property into this State he can be prosecuted in this State and punished as if the theft had been committed in this State. Beard v. State, 45 App. 522, 78 S. W. 348.

It is not an offense to bring property acquired in another State or jurisdiction, into this State, when it has been acquired by means of swindling. Bink v. State, 50 App. 450, 98 S. W. 251.

Swindling is not included among the inhibited crimes enumerated in article 1431, and this State has no extra territorial jurisdiction over such offenses. Bink v. State, 50 App. 450, 98 S. W. 249.

To constitute the offense of bringing stolen goods into the state, it was not necessary that defendant himself should ship the goods, as if he was the procuring cause, he would be legally responsible for bringing them into the state. Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

In a prosecution for bringing stolen goods into the state, the fact that one in charge of the corporation, alleged to be the original owner of the property, had employed a drayman to carry the goods to the depot from which they were stolen did not take them out of his possession. Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

Accomplice.—See notes under article 79, ante.

Venue.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 258.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 702.

See Granado v. State, 37 App. 426, 35 S. W. 1069.

The law of the foreign state or country is an issuable fact, and must be alleged. Carmisales v. State, 11 App. 474; Cummins v. State, 12 App. 121; Edwards v. State, 29 App. 452, 16 S. W. 98.

That the accused was punishable by, or amenable to, the laws of the foreign country or state need not be alleged. Cummins v. State, 12 App. 121.

It must be averred that the act was an offense under the laws of the foreign country or state. State v. Morales, 21 Tex. 298; Carmisales v. State, 11 App. 474.

For a sufficient indictment, see Cowell v. State, 16 App. 57.

In an indictment charging theft of a horse in another State or Territory, and the subsequently bringing the stolen property into this State, the indictment must contain the laws of the State or Territory in which the animal was stolen. Beard v. State, 45 App. 522, 78 S. W. 349.

An indictment under this article charging theft of a horse in another State where the stolen property is brought into this State need not allege the value of the horse. Beard v. State, 45 App. 522, 78 S. W. 348.

Where an indictment for bringing stolen cattle into the state and selling them properly alleged the theft of one head of cattle, and the court's charge followed the indictment, it was not material that the evidence showed the theft of more than one head. Gorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1012.

An indictment for receiving stolen property knowing that it had been stolen and bringing it into this state need not allege the time and place of the original taking, though it must allege that it was fraudulently received and concealed with knowledge that it had been acquired by theft, and the name of the owner, if known, and the name of the person from whom received. Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

Under this and the preceding article it was not necessary that an indictment, specifically alleging that the acts of accused under the laws of Missouri constituted the offense of receiving stolen property, allege the facts going to constitute theft by the original taker from whom the property was received. Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

Under article 1431 an allegation in an indictment for the offense that the property was received "in the county of St. Louis," was not an element of the offense, and would be disregarded as surplusage; and, even if a descriptive averment necessary to be proved, and even if the city of St. Louis, in which it was received, was a municipality separate from the county of St. Louis, proof that the city was always considered as a part of the county was not a variance, but sufficiently sustained the descriptive averment. Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

Evidence.—See Carter v. State, 37 Tex. 362; Clark v. State, 27 App. 405, 11 S. W. 374; Sinclair v. State, 34 App. 453, 30 S. W. 1070; Smith v. State, 37 App. 342, 39 S. W. 933.

Article 2304 of the Revised Statutes (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 3692), provides how laws shall be proved, and is applicable in criminal cases. Cummins v. State, 12 App. 121.

For the manner of proving the laws of an Indian nation, see Cowell v. State, 16 App. 57.

Evidence held insufficient to convict. Cowell v. State, 16 App. 57.

In a case arising under the preceding articles, all the facts and circumstances bearing upon the transaction, whether transpiring in this state or out of it, are admissible in evidence, and may be considered by the jury. Sutton v. State, 16 App. 490.

Evidence held sufficient to support conviction. Sutton v. State, 16 App. 490.

As sufficient proof that an act committed was not only theft in this state, but theft in the foreign county from which the property was taken and brought into this state, the trial court properly admitted in evidence a reprint of a book purporting to be the "Penal Code of the State of Coahuila, Republic of Mexico, and published by authority of said state;" the rule being that "when the code or the statutes of another state have been published by authority, and purport to have been so published, a reprint of such book is admissible in evidence, without other evidence of its sanction by the government of such state." Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667.

An unrecorded brand is no evidence of ownership. McKenzie v. State, 32 App. 568, 25 S. W. 426, 40 Am. St. Rep. 795.

In a prosecution for bringing stolen cattle into the state from Oklahoma and selling the same to L. for beef, it appearing that L. gave defendant a check for $50 with knowledge that the cattle had been stolen, evidence of the transaction between defendant and witness, a banker, who cashed the check, concerning what occurred at the time was admissible. Gorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1012.

In a prosecution for bringing stolen goods into the state, evidence held to show that defendant received the goods from the persons named in the indictment. Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

Charge of court.—See Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667.

Charges held correct. Sutton v. State, 16 App. 490; Clark v. State, 27 App. 405, 11 S. W. 374.

Evidence held sufficient to support an instruction that if the horses were stolen in Mexico and brought into Texas, defendant should be convicted. Granado v. State, 37 App. 426, 35 S. W. 1069.

In a prosecution for bringing stolen cattle from Oklahoma into Texas and selling them, the court properly charged the jury as to the law of theft of both Oklahoma and Texas. Gorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1012.

In a prosecution for bringing stolen goods into the state knowing them to have been stolen, where there was evidence that defendant was at a certain place in the other state with the original taker of the goods and admitted that they had crooked goods, and that the original taker resided in the other state, had the reputation of being a professional thief, and had been convicted of similar thefts, while defendant resided in Texas, the refusal to submit a count charging defendant with theft of the goods and the submission of that adjudging him with receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen goods, was proper. Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

1. Explanatory.—The amendment leaves out the words "theft and forgery," adding in their stead, "or any other offense of the grade of felony."

2. Offense in general.—See notes under articles 74 and 79 ante, and C. C. P. art. 801.

The offense is complete as soon as the criminal agreement is entered into, and although the conspirators do not proceed to consummate it. Johnson v. State, 3 App. 590.

After an agreement to commit burglary, the owner of the house, for purposes of detection, may connive at the entry without relieving the conspirators from liability. (Speiden v. State, 3 App. 156, 30 Am. Rep. 126, and Pigg v. State, 43 Tex. 108, distinguished.) Johnson v. State, 3 App. 590.

Conspiracy defined. Myers v. State, 6 App. 1.

The least degree of concert or collusion between parties to an illegal transaction makes the act of one the act of all. Phillips v. State, 6 App. 364. And the agreement may be entered into, and the offense be completed, although the original purpose of meeting and consultation was lawful. Lowery v. State, 30 Tex. 402. The agreement completes the offense. Johnson v. State, 3 App. 590.

Conspiracy has been defined as a combination of two or more persons by some concerted action to accomplish some criminal or unlawful purpose, or to accomplish some purpose not in itself criminal or unlawful by criminal or unlawful means. Loggins v. State, 12 App. 65.

An "agreement" is a coming together of parties in opinion or determination; the union of two or more minds in a thing done or to be done; a mutual assent to do a thing. A conspiracy can not be committed by one person alone, and it can not be committed by two, when there is no concurrence of purpose and mind, or when the concurrence or purpose on the part of one is unreal or feigned. Woodworth v. State, 20 App. 375.

As to acts establishing conspiracy, see Smith v. State, 21 App. 107, 17 S. W. 552; Lyons v. State, 30 App. 642, 18 S. W. 416; Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862.

It is not necessary, in order to establish a conspiracy to commit an offense, to prove that the persons charged came together, and actually agreed in terms to have that design and pursue it by common means. If it be proved that they pursued the same objects, often by the same means, one performing one part and another a different part of the same, so as to complete it with a view to the attainment of the same object, the jury will be justified in concluding that they were engaged in a conspiracy to effect that object, and such acting together would make all principal offenders, whether bodily present at the place of the offense or not, and until the full purpose and object of the conspiracy has been consummated. Smith v. State, 21 App. 107, 17 S. W. 552.

When two or more persons agree to commit an offense and from the nature of the offense it is reasonably probable that death will result to the victim, and death does result, all the parties connected with the conspiracy would be responsible for the homicide. Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862.

Whether co-conspirators proceed severally or collectively, each is responsible for the acts of all as though performed by himself alone. Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862.

Proof that the parties actually agreed in terms to a certain design and to pursue it by common means, held not essential to the establishment of the crime of conspiracy. Smith v. State, 21 App. 107, 17 S. W. 552.

It takes two or more to form a conspiracy, and they must be named in the indictment. Dever et al. v. State, 37 App. 396, 30 S. W. 1071.

A person who persuades others to enter into a conspiracy to commit crime is guilty though he did not intend to help commit the crime. Dever et al. v. State, 37 App. 396, 30 S. W. 1071.

When one enters into a conspiracy to commit a crime, even though he withdraws before the crime has been committed, he may be convicted for entering into the conspiracy. Dill v. State, 35 App. 240, 33 S. W. 126, 60 Am. St. Rep. 37.

When a conspiracy to commit an unlawful act exists, and in the execution of the conspiracy one of the persons commits a homicide, all persons engaged in the conspiracy are guilty of murder. Mitchell v. State, 36 App. 278, 33 S. W. 367, 36 S. W. 456; Isaacs v. State, 36 App. 505, 33 S. W. 40.

Each conspirator is responsible for everything done by his confederate which follows immediately in the execution of the common design, as one of its probable and natural consequences, even though it was not intended as a part of the original design or common plan. Henry v. State (Cr. App.) 54 S. W. 593.

Our statute with reference to conspirators, and who may be engaged in a conspiracy makes no exception in favor of the wife. Husband and wife may conspire together without the intervention of a third person to commit a murder and if either is being tried for the consummated offense the doctrine of conspiracy, so far as the rules are concerned, is applicable under our system. Smith v. State, 48 App. 233, 89 S. W. 817.

Where a party is charged as an accomplice, under the statute, with the commission of a felony, the case assumes the nature to some extent of a conspiracy, though the statute makes a distinction between a conspiracy as an offense and an offense committed by a principal instigated by an accomplice; a conspiracy being complete when a positive agreement has been made between the parties to commit a felony, while to be an accomplice the crime must have been actually committed by the principal. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 989.

Where a crime committed is not in any way connected with a conspiracy, but is the independent act of one of the conspirators, though done while he was engaged in the common purpose, the others are not legally responsible therefor, but if the crime is in furtherance of the common purpose, and is such an offense as might have been and should have been contemplated would result from the execution of the conspiracy, and it was so executed, then all engaged in the unlawful purpose are equally guilty, though at the time they may have been engaged in some other part of the common purpose. Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133.

3. — Conspiracy to kill.—The test of whether accused was principal was whether he and another acted together in pursuance of a common design wherein their minds had agreed. Kirby v. State, 23 App. 13, 5 S. W. 165.

The accused, who was on trial for the murder of his jailer, contended that a conspiracy among several of the prisoners extended no further than the escape, and did not contemplate the killing of the jailer, or the infliction of bodily injury upon him beyond his mere detention, and that the killing was the individual and independent act of C. alone, perpetrated without the accused's complicity, and without ability on his part to prevent it. Held, in view of the nature and object of the conspiracy, and of the preparation and use of a deadly weapon as a means to execute the common design, that the homicide was not the independent act of C. alone, but was the act of each and all the conspirators, because it was directly incident to and grew out of the common design of all. Kirby v. State, 23 App. 13, 5 S. W. 165, citing Mercersmith v. State, 8 App. 211; Stevenson v. State, 17 App. 619. And see Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862; Cox v. State, 8 App. 254, 34 Am. Rep. 746; Renner v. State, 43 App. 347, 65 S. W. 1102.

If defendant and another combine to beat a person, and in the attempt to do so the co-conspirator kill such other person, both would be guilty of murder. Mitchell v. State, 36 App. 278, 33 S. W. 367, 36 S. W. 456.

Defendant having helped to set in motion that which resulted in another's death is guilty of murder, he is an accomplice whether he instigated the act himself or his co-conspirators instigated it. Isaacs v. State, 36 App. 505, 33 S. W. 40.

Where there is a conspiracy to kill, mere presence at scene of killing, under some circumstances, will be sufficient act of encouragement. Leslie v. State, 42 App. 65, 57 S. W. 661.

Where the state claimed a killing was the result of a conspiracy, accused cannot be convicted for the acts of his co-conspirators, unless he conspired to take deceased's life or conspired to do an unlawful act and the killing was the result of an attempt to perpetrate it. Cline v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 520.

4. — Conspiracy to steal.—The conspiracy to steal is complete at the time it is entered into, without any reference to subsequent theft, and a conviction of the theft is not a bar to prosecution for the conspiracy. Bailey v. State, 42 App. 289, 59 S. W. 901.

5. — Conspiracy to commit burglary.—The offense of conspiracy to commit burglary is complete when the agreement to burglariously enter a house is entered into, though the parties abandon the object of the conspiracy. Johnson v. State, 3 App. 590.

A conspiracy to commit burglary and the burglary committed in pursuance thereof are different offenses and a conviction of one will not bar a prosecution for the other. Whitford v. State, 24 App. 489, 6 S. W. 537, 5 Am. St. Rep. 896.

When one has entered into a conspiracy to commit burglary, notwithstanding he withdraws before the commission of the offense, he may nevertheless be convicted of conspiracy. Dill v. State, 35 App. 240, 33 S. W. 126, 60 Am. St. Rep. 37.

The fact that a person, after entering into an agreement with another to commit a burglary, withdraws from the transaction, does not prevent his conviction for the conspiracy. Dill v. State, 35 App. 240, 33 S. W. 126, 60 Am. St. Rep. 37.

6. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 703, 704.

The indictment need not set out the offense with the same particularity for an unexecuted as for an executed conspiracy. See an indictment for conspiracy to commit burglary held sufficient. Brown v. State, 2 App. 115; Mason v. State, Id. 192.

The parties to a conspiracy to commit crime must be named, and there must be at least two principals. Dever v. State, 37 App. 396, 30 S. W. 1071. See, also, Woodworth v. State, 20 App. 375.

7. Evidence in general.—See Cox v. State, 8 App. 254, 34 Am. Rep. 746; Loggins v. State, 12 App. 65; Pierson v. State, 18 App. 524; Kennedy v. State, 19 App. 618; Smith v. State, 21 App. 107, 17 S. W. 552; Willey v. State, 22 App. 408, 3 S. W. 570; Richards v. State, 53 App. 400, 110 S. W. 432; Proctor v. State, 54 App. 254, 112 S. W. 770; O'Quinn v. State, 55 App. 18, 115 S. W. 39; Williams v. State, 55 App. 65, 115 S. W. 35; Roma v. State, 55 App. 344, 116 S. W. 598.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain convictions. Brown v. State, 2 App. 115; Mason v. State, Id. 192.

A conspiracy cannot be proven by confessions of one of the co-conspirators, the existence of the conspiracy must be proven by other evidence. Sessions v. State, 37 App. 62, 38 S. W. 623; Menges v. State, 25 App. 710, 9 S. W. 49.

Where one of several defendants charged with conspiracy has been acquitted, the record of acquittal is evidence for another defendant subsequently tried. Paul v. State, 12 App. 346.

The fact of possession by one of several defendants of goods belonging to deceased is admissible. Conde v. State, 33 App. 10, 24 S. W. 415; Clark v. State, 28 App. 189, 12 S. W. 729, 19 Am. St. Rep. 817; Rix v. State, 33 App. 353, 26 S. W. 505.

When a conspiracy to commit burglary has been shown, any fact or circumstance which would tend to show that defendant's co-conspirator was present is admissible. Mixon v. State, 36 App. 66, 35 S. W. 394.

8. — Homicide.—See Hudson v. State, 43 App. 420, 66 S. W. 668; Moore v. State, 44 App. 526, 72 S. W. 595; Williams v. State, 45 App. 240, 75 S. W. 509; Kipper v. State, 45 App. 377, 77 S. W. 611; Chapman v. State, 45 App. 479, 76 S. W. 477; Carbough v. State, 49 App. 452, 93 S. W. 738; Parnell v. State, 50 App. 419, 98 S. W. 269; Banks v. State, 52 App. 480, 108 S. W. 693; Richards v. State, 53 App. 400, 110 S. W. 432; Proctor v. State, 54 App. 254, 112 S. W. 770; Roma v. State, 55 App. 344, 116 S. W. 598.

Where in a murder case conspiracy was shown, a bill of sale purporting to convey from deceased to defendant's co-conspirator certain goods found in the co-conspirator's possession was properly admitted in evidence. Post v. State, 10 App. 598.

Evidence held not to show a conspiracy to murder or to commit any crime of which murder might be the reasonable and natural consequence. Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862.

In a prosecution for murder, where there is evidence that a number of people took part in the homicide, and that defendant was among them, exclusion of evidence offered by defendant to show threats and ill feeling against deceased of a person not indicted with the others, if error, is harmless, since the presence of such person and participation in the crime could not benefit defendant. Harris v. State, 20 S. W. 916, 31 App. 411.

J.'s threats, made in defendant's absence, after J.'s fight with deceased held admissible against defendant, it being left to the jury to say whether the conspiracy was then formed, in which case only they were to consider them. Blain v. State, 33 App. 236, 26 S. W. 63.

In a prosecution for killing decedent pursuant to a conspiracy to organize in Texas a company to invade Mexico, evidence concerning the carrying of arms and ammunition from Texas into Mexico was admissible as showing the formation of an unlawful conspiracy. Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133.

In a prosecution for homicide in the furtherance of a conspiracy to illegally organize in Texas an armed company to invade Mexico, evidence that accused, a member of the company, secured arms when he went to the camp, carried them all the time while he was in the company, and was armed when arrested, was admissible as showing that, while in the United States, the company was prepared to resist all those who might interfere with their purpose, together with the nature of the resistance that would be offered. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1146.

Where decedent was killed as an incident to a conspiracy to illegally organize an armed force in Texas to invade Mexico, in accordance with a certain political party, and accused testified that he was a subscriber to a newspaper, and that one of the principal things which induced him to join the company was articles in the paper, and that the principles announced in the paper were those of the party to which he belonged and joined the company to carry out, a translated copy of the paper was admissible as showing the purpose for which the conspiracy was organized and for which the defendant joined it. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1149.

In a prosecution for homicide committed in furtherance of an illegal conspiracy to organize in Texas an armed band to invade Mexico, evidence held to warrant a finding that defendant was a member of the band and engaged in the furtherance of the conspiracy at the time of the killing. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1153.

Where, in a prosecution for homicide, the state did not claim a specific conspiracy to kill deceased, but that he was killed as an incident to a conspiracy to organize in Texas an armed force to invade Mexico, the members of the company not immediately concerned in the killing could only be convicted of homicide on proof that the killing was incidental to a conspiracy to do an unlawful act and was within the scope thereof. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1153.

In a prosecution for homicide alleged to have been committed in the furtherance of a conspiracy to organize in Texas an armed force to invade Mexico, personal property found on one of the conspirators at the camp ground, including a manifesto, battle flag, bugle, guns, bayonets, dynamite, and other munitions of war, and testimony concerning where and what was found, was admissible to show the conspiracy and its purpose. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1153.

In a prosecution for homicide committed as incidental to an illegal conspiracy to organize in Texas an armed band to invite Mexico, a manifesto in the Mexican language, purported to have been written by a Junta in California, intended to incite Mexicans to rebellion, found in the possession of one of the conspirators, who separated from the others a short time prior to their arrest, but who was first arrested, was admissible against accused to show the illegal character of the conspiracy. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1153.

Where decedent was killed as incidental to a conspiracy to organize in Texas an armed force to invade Mexico in order to prevent a discovery of the conspiracy, which did not terminate until the conspirators' arrest, evidence of all that took place and what each of the conspirators said from the time of their discovery at their rendezvous and until they were arrested was admissible, in a prosecution against each of them for the homicide. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1153.

9. — Rape.—See Williams v. State, 55 App. 65, 115 S. W. 35.

10. — Arson.—On trial for conspiracy to commit arson, a letter written by a third party after the accomplishment of the conspiracy, though it bore the name of one of the conspirators, and was addressed to defendant, but never given to him, was inadmissible against him. Dawson v. State, 38 App. 9, 40 S. W. 731.

Where defendant was charged with conspiracy to commit arson, and the theory of the state was that he committed the crime to procure the insurance money, a continuance because of the absence of defendant's wife on account of sickness should be granted, where defendant desired to prove by her that she knew the value of the articles stored in the house, and that they were insured for only half their value. Dawson v. State, 38 App. 9, 40 S. W. 731.

11. — Burglary.—Where the evidence in a burglary case showed a conspiracy, it was not error to admit evidence of finding of the fruits of the crime in defendant's house in defendant's absence. Jackson v. State, 28 App. 370, 13 S. W. 451, 19 Am. St. Rep. 839.

When a conspiracy to commit burglary has been shown, any fact or circumstance tending to show defendant's presence at the time of the commission of the offense is admissible. Mixon v. State, 36 App. 66, 35 S. W. 394.

12. — Robbery.—See Nite v. State, 41 App. 340, 54 S. W. 763.

At the place of the robbery tracks of two persons were found, both with peculiarities; held, evidence of both tracks was admissible against each defendant. Angle v. State, 35 App. 427, 34 S. W. 116.

13. — Theft.—Collateral evidence in proof of conspiracy to steal cattle held improperly admitted. Rix v. State, 33 App. 353, 26 S. W. 505.

14. — Swindling.—See Marwilsky v. State, 9 App. 377; Gray v. State, 32 App. 598, 25 S. W. 627; Cowan v. State, 41 App. 617, 56 S. W. 751.

15. — Acts and declarations.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.

16. — Testimony of wife.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 795.

17. Accomplices.—See art. 79 et seq. ante, and notes thereunder.

18. Questions for jury and charge of court.—Instructions submitting to the jury the question of the existence of a conspiracy held proper. Loggins v. State, 12 App. 65.

Where several were jointly indicted for conspiracy, and one had severed and been tried and acquitted, it was held to be error to charge, on the trial of another of the defendants, with reference to a supposed conspiracy between him and the defendant who had been acquitted. The charge should have confined the jury to a conspiracy between the defendant on trial and the defendants not yet tried. Paul v. State, 12 App. 346.

The jury should be instructed that the conspiracy could not be established by the acts or declarations of a co-conspirator, made after the consummation of the offense, and in the absence of defendant. Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444.

When the time that the conspiracy was entered into is a disputed fact, the trial court should submit that fact to the jury and instruct them not to consider any act or declaration which did not occur during the existence of the conspiracy. Harris v. State, 31 App. 411, 20 S. W. 916.

It is the province of the court to determine, in a case involving that question, whether or not a prima facie case of conspiracy has been established; and if, in the opinion of the court, such issue arises from the evidence permitted to be introduced, then it is further the duty of the court to submit the issue of conspiracy, or not, to be determined by the jury, as any other issue in the case. Luttrell v. State, 31 App. 493, 21 S. W. 248.

There need be no charge on conspiracy, where the facts tend to show this, if the charge on principals is sufficiently comprehensive. Augustine v. State, 41 App. 59, 52 S. W. 79, 96 Am. St. Rep. 765.

19. — Homicide.—Where defendant was convicted of murder upon evidence which established a conspiracy between him and his co-defendant to kill the deceased, and the fact that he was present at the homicide, it was not error for the court to refuse to instruct that, if prior to the killing defendants abandoned their design, and deceased was subsequently killed by the co-defendant, and that defendant at the time did no act aiding, encouraging, or abetting the offense, he would not be liable except as accomplice. Slade v. State, 29 App. 381, 16 S. W. 253.

On a murder trial, where a conspiracy to kill deceased was sought to be shown, it was proper to charge that, if the jury believed that defendant had entered into a conspiracy to kill the deceased, they could consider as evidence against defendant any acts or declarations of his co-conspirators, or either of them, done or made to carry out their common purpose during the pendency of such conspiracy, but should disregard such acts and declarations if there was no conspiracy, or if they were not done or made during the pendency thereof to carry out the design. Luttrell v. State, 21 S. W. 248, 31 App. 493.

An instruction, in addition, that if a conspiracy was not established the jury were not to consider these acts and declarations as evidence against defendant held proper. Luttrell v. State, 31 App. 493, 21 S. W. 248.

Under the evidence in a murder case held that the giving of an instruction relative to conspiracy was not error. Childs v. State, 35 App. 573, 34 S. W. 939.

In a prosecution for homicide, evidence held sufficient to justify submission to the jury of the question of a specific conspiracy to take the life of decedent, though the preponderance of the evidence indicated that he was killed as an incident to a conspiracy to commit another offense. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1153.

Where all the testimony showed a conspiracy between defendant and third persons committing a murder, and that the murder was committed in pursuance of the common design, the court could refuse to define a "conspiracy"; but where the testimony did not show conclusively a conspiracy, the court must instruct on the subject, and clearly state what facts must be found to justify a conviction. Vasquez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1160.

20. — Burglary.—Where the indictment charged the defendants, one H. and one W., with a conspiracy to commit burglary, and the evidence completely exonerated the defendant W., it was held not to be error for the court to instruct the jury, that if the evidence showed a conspiracy between the defendant and H., the offense would be complete, and that the state was not required to prove W. was also a party to the conspiracy. The allegations as to W. were held to be surplusage and not essential to be proved. Woodworth v. State, 20 App. 375.

21. — Theft.—On a trial for theft of a cow, there was evidence that defendant and others conspired to prove a purchase of the cow after defendant took possession of it, and the court charged that, "when two or more persons conspire together to commit an offense, and each carries out the part agreed to be done by him, and such offense is actually committed, then all parties to such an agreement are equally guilty of such offense; and if * * * defendant fraudulently took the property, * * * and others agreed or conspired, before or after such taking, to prove a purchase or pretended purchase, * * * either before or after such taking, this would be no defense to such fraudulent taking." Held, that such instruction was authorized by the evidence, and was correct. Kegans v. State, 27 App. 703, 11 S. W. 644.

22. Judgment.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 853.

Art. 1438. [958] Punishment.—Conspiracy to commit murder shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. Conspiracy to commit any one of the other offenses named in the preceding article shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Oct. 26, 1871, p. 15.]

See notes under article 1437, ante.

Art. 1439. [959] To kill, same as murder.—A conspiracy to kill a human being shall be deemed a conspiracy to commit murder. [Id., p. 16.]

Art. 1440. [960] Conspiracy to commit an offense in another state.—A conspiracy entered into in this state for the purpose of committing any one of the offenses named in article 1437 in any other of the states or territories of the United States, or in any foreign territory, shall be punished in the same manner as if the conspiracy so entered into was to commit the offense in this state. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 705.

Evidence.—See notes under article 1337, ante.

Where a company was illegally organized and equipped in Texas under an agreement to invade Mexico, such organization constituted a felony in Texas as violating articles 1433 to 1441, and decedent having been killed by members of the organization to prevent his informing against it, a flag with the words: "The Liberal Party Mexico. Land and Liberty"—emblazoned thereon and a bugle found at the conspirators' camp, were admissible, in a prosecution against them for the homicide, to show they were engaged in an illegal design. Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133.

— Acts and declarations.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.

Art. 1441. [961] Conspiracy in another state to commit offense in this.—A conspiracy entered into in another state or territory of the United States to commit any one of the offenses named in article 1437 in this state, shall be punished in the same manner as if the conspiracy had been entered into in this state.

Jurisdiction and proof.—The courts of Texas have jurisdiction, independent of the Act of 1876, to try a prosecution for conspiracy to fabricate titles to Texas lands, though the fabrication was committed in another state by defendant's co-conspirator. Ex parte Rogers, 10 App. 655, 38 Am. Rep. 654.

State can prove that parties formed a conspiracy outside of the State to come to Texas and commit crime. Moore v. State, 40 App. 443, 50 S. W. 942.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 703, 706.

Indictment should contain a direct averment that the conspiracy was to be consummated in another State, under this article. Cowan v. State, 41 App. 617, 56 S. W. 752.

Forgery in another state.—See art. 950, ante.

CHAPTER TWO OF THREATS

Art. 1442. Threat to take life, etc. 1443. Threat must be seriously made. 1444. Which is a question of fact.	Art. 1445. Certain threats not included. 1446. Sending threatening letter.
--	--

Article 1442. [962] Threats to take life, etc.—If any person shall threaten to take the life of any human being, or to inflict upon any human being any serious bodily injury, he shall be punished by fine of not less than one hundred nor more than two thousand dollars, and, in addition thereto, he may be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [Act Feb. 22, 1875, p. 51.]

See notes under 1445 post.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 711, 712, 744.

Art. 1443. [963] Threats must be seriously made.—In order to render a person guilty of the offense provided in the preceding article, it is necessary that the threat be seriously made. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 711, 744.

Art. 1444. [964] Which is a question of fact.—It is for the jury to determine, in every case of prosecution under article 1442, whether the threat was seriously made or was merely idle and with no intention of executing the same. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 744.

Art. 1445. [965] Certain threats not included.—A threat that a person will do any act merely to protect himself, or to prevent the commission of some unlawful act by another, does not come within the meaning of this chapter. [Id., p. 52.]

See Woods v. State, 37 App. 459, 36 S. W. 96.

Nature and elements of offense.—Two things must concur to constitute this offense: 1. A threat to take life, or do serious bodily injury. 2. A serious intention existing at the time of making such threat, to execute it. Buie v. State, 1 App. 58; McFain v. State, 41 Tex. 385.

That the threat was conditional is immaterial, provided it required something to be done, or left undone, that the party threatening had no right to require. McFain v. State, 41 Tex. 385. But a mere rash and inconsiderate expression will not constitute this offense. March v. State, 3 App. 107.

If the object of the threat was merely to extort money, it is not sufficient to constitute this offense, unless the defendant intended to execute the threat in case the money was not paid him. Haynie v. State, 2 App. 168.

A mere rash and inconsiderate expression provoked by an angry altercation in which the parties were engaged, held not a threat to kill. March v. State, 3 App. 107.

The court should instruct the jury, that if defendant had no intention of executing the threat he should be acquitted. Wilkerson v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 807.

One who made an unprovoked assault on prosecutor, and who, when prevented from again striking prosecutor, made an inconsiderate and harsh remark, did not unlawfully and seriously threaten to take the life of a human being, punishable by article 1442. Bolt v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 431.

Arrest of offender.—If serious threats to take life of a peace officer have been made, he can make affidavit and get a warrant for the arrest of the offender. Without such warrant he has no more right to go to the house of the offender and intrude upon his premises than any other citizen. Allen v. State (Cr. App.) 66 S. W. 674.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 711, 744.

It is sufficient, in the case of a threat to take life, for the indictment to allege that the defendant "did unlawfully and seriously threaten to take the life of" a person naming the person, without alleging the particulars of the threat. Tynes v. State, 17 App. 123; Buie v. State, 1 App. 58; Longley v. State, 43 Tex. 490; McFain v. State, 41 Tex. 385. An indictment which charged that two defendants did, "jointly and severally," seriously threaten, etc., was held good, the words "jointly and severally" being treated as surplusage. Gay v. State, 3 App. 168.

Evidence.—It is competent for the state, to prove intention, to give in evidence other threats made by the defendant on another occasion. Longley v. State, 43 Tex. 490; Aycock v. State, 2 App. 381; Thrasher v. State, 3 App. 281. And, also, to prove that the defendant had a grudge against the party threatened. Aycock v. State, 2 App. 381.

To be admissible in evidence the threat need not name the threatened party, if the other proved facts show that the injured party was intended. Hardy v. State, 31 App. 289, 20 S. W. 561; Massey v. State, 31 App. 371, 20 S. W. 758.

See this case for evidence to sustain conviction for making threats to take life under article 1442. Shelton v. State, 56 App. 265, 119 S. W. 862.

Charge of court and questions for jury.—Whether the threat was seriously made is a question of fact, and must be submitted to the jury. Longley v. State, 43 Tex. 490.

In case of proof of a grudge against the party threatened, it was held not to be error for the court to charge that the jury might consider such grudge, if any existed at the time the threats were made, if any threats were made, in determining whether such threats, if any, were seriously made. Aycock v. State, 2 App. 381.

The fact the defendant did not execute the threat, when he could have done so, will not necessitate a charge that the jury might infer that the threat, if made, was not seriously made. Vincent v. State, 3 App. 678.

Art. 1446. [966] Sending threatening letter.—If any person shall knowingly send or deliver to another any letter or writing, whether signed or not, threatening to accuse such other person of a criminal offense, with a view of extorting money, property, thing of value, or any advantage whatever from such other person, or threatening to kill or in any manner injure the person of such other, or to burn or otherwise destroy or injure any of his property, real or personal, or to do any other injury to such other person, he shall be punished by fine not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and, in addition thereto, may be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year.

Nature and elements of offense.—A conviction in a prosecution for a threat to extort money, held not authorized unless it appeared that defendant intended to execute his threat to kill if the money be not paid. Haynie v. State, 2 App. 168.

It is the sending or delivering of a threatening letter knowingly that constitutes this offense, not knowingly threatening. Castle v. State, 23 App. 286, 4 S. W. 892.

Venue.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 258.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 713, 744.

The indictment must charge that the act of sending or delivering the letter was "knowingly" done. To allege that it was "unlawfully" done will not be sufficient. Tynes v. State, 17 App. 123; Landa v. State, 26 App. 580, 10 S. W. 218. Nor will it be sufficient to charge that the defendant "knowingly did threaten, etc., by sending, etc." Castle v. State, 23 App. 286, 4 S. W. 892.

The indictment should set out the writing verbatim. Tynes v. State, 17 App. 123; Hanson v. State, 35 App. 593, 34 S. W. 929.

Information held insufficient, because it failed to charge that accused delivered the letter with a view to extort money. Landa v. State, 26 App. 580, 10 S. W. 218.

Where information alleged a threat to prosecute before justice court of precinct No. 1, B. county, held, that the allegation must be proved. Strange v. State, 33 App. 315, 26 S. W. 406.

An indictment for sending a letter threatening to charge another with some criminal offense, must set out the specific offense intended to be charged against such other person. Cohen v. State, 37 App. 118, 33 S. W. 1005.

CHAPTER THREE

SEDUCTION

Art.	Punishment.	Art.	Punishment.
1447.	Punishment.	1450.	Abandonment after seduction and marriage, offense defined.
1448.	"Seduction" how used.	1451.	Married man not liable, if known.
1449.	Marriage obliterates offense.

Article 1447. [967] Punishment.—If any person, by promise to marry, shall seduce an unmarried female under the age of twenty-five years, and shall have carnal knowledge of such female, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 185; amended, Act 1903, p. 221.]

See notes under the two following articles.

Cited, Thorp v. State, 59 App. 517, 129 S. W. 607, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 421.

Change in statute.—Act of 1903 changed the punishment for seduction, by omitting the fine therefrom. Ex parte Biela, 46 App. 487, 81 S. W. 739.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 715.

Art. 1448. [968] "Seduction," how used.—The term "seduction" is used in the sense in which it is commonly understood.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. Nature and elements of offense in general. | 8. — Sufficiency. |
| 2. Seduction as felony. | 9. — Presumption of chastity. |
| 3. Justification or defense. | 10. — Opinion evidence. |
| 4. Accomplice. | 11. — Testimony of female and corroboration thereof. |
| 5. Indictment. | 12. Charge of court. |
| 6. — Of accessory. | 13. — On weight of evidence. |
| 7. Evidence. | 14. Punishment. |

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—The term seduction when used in the sense in which it is commonly used does not convey the full meaning of the offense, which was intended to be punished by the Code. Cole v. State, 40 Tex. 147.

The promise of marriage is an important element in the definition of the statutory offense and must be shown to have been the sole inducement. Cole v. State, 40 Tex. 147.

The promise of marriage is an essential element of this offense, and the concession must have been alone upon that consideration. The jury must not, therefore, be instructed that "seduce" is used in its ordinary sense. Cole v. State, 40 Tex. 147.

The object of the statute is to redress a frailty, which has been induced by a promise of marriage. Kelly v. State, 33 App. 31, 24 S. W. 295.

Seduction, as used in this chapter, means to "lead away" a female from the path of virtue, to entice or persuade her, by a promise of marriage, to surrender her virtue, and have carnal intercourse with the man making such promise. Putman v. State, 29 App. 454, 16 S. W. 97, 25 Am. St. Rep. 738.

It must be shown that the carnal intercourse with the female was accomplished by means of a promise to marry her made at the time of the illicit intercourse. That promise, and the yielding of her virtue by the female in consideration thereof is the gist of the offense. See the opinion in extenso. Putman v. State, 29 App. 454, 16 S. W. 97, 25 Am. St. Rep. 738; Cole v. State, 40 Tex. 147.

The evidence showed that for four years past the reputation of prosecutrix for chastity was bad; that before defendant's promise of marriage was made, under which she claimed to have been seduced, she was generous and promiscuous in her favors, and specific acts were proved. Held, that it was error to instruct the jury that if defendant and prosecutrix were well acquainted, and defendant, knowing her character in the community, promised to marry prosecutrix, and seduced her by virtue of such promise, he cannot avail himself of her want of chastity as a defense. Mrous v. State, 21 S. W. 764, 31 App. 597, 37 Am. St. Rep. 834.

The law is mainly intended to redress frailty when induced by a promise of marriage not when existing before. Kelly v. State, 33 App. 31, 24 S. W. 295, following Mrous v. State, 31 App. 597, 21 S. W. 764, 37 Am. St. Rep. 834.

If, prior to the alleged seduction, prosecutrix had intercourse with another man, defendant is not guilty. Luckie v. State, 33 App. 563, 28 S. W. 533.

A conviction may be had though the promise was not repeated at the time of the act. Bailey v. State, 36 App. 540, 38 S. W. 185.

To warrant conviction it must be shown that prosecutrix relied upon promise of marriage. Barnes v. State, 37 App. 320, 39 S. W. 684.

If prosecutrix did not rely solely on the absolute promise of marriage, but was moved to favor defendant partly through fear, or partly through lust, or through both, defendant should be acquitted, though a promise of marriage was then made, and was part, though not the sole, inducement. Nolan v. State, 48 App. 436, 88 S. W. 242.

An instruction that seduction means an enticement of a woman on the part of a man to surrender her chastity by means of some art, violence, promise, or deception calculated to accomplish that object, and to include the yielding of her person to him, as much as if it was expressly stated, was not open to the objection that it made a deception, influence, art, or other promise sufficient to constitute the offense, regardless of the character of the deception or promise, and because under the laws of Texas the offense of seduction consists of a woman surrendering her virtue by reason of a promise of marriage. Faulkner v. State, 53 App. 258, 109 S. W. 199.

A woman who has carnal intercourse with a man under a conditional promise of marriage, the condition to happen in the future, predicated on a possible pregnancy, is not seduced. Simmons v. State, 114 S. W. 841, 54 App. 619.

If the girl was unchaste prior to appellant having intercourse with her even under promise of marriage still he would not be guilty of seduction under article 1447. If a girl has intercourse with a man under a promise that if she becomes pregnant he will marry her, this is in the nature of a contract in the nature of a bargain and barter than a betrayal of confidence and is not seduction. Simmons v. State, 54 App. 619, 114 S. W. 844, 845.

A man having intercourse with a woman pursuant to a contract to marry her if she becomes pregnant, is not guilty of seduction. Muhlhouse v. State, 56 App. 288, 119 S. W. 866.

A woman who had been having intercourse with other men at the time accused had intercourse with her, was not subject to seduction by accused. Muhlhouse v. State, 56 App. 288, 119 S. W. 866.

An instruction on a trial for seduction defining "seduce" as to entice a woman to surrender her chastity by deception, and stating that seduction is not complete unless the female was at the time chaste, unmarried, and under 25 years of age, and was persuaded to surrender her chastity by reason of accused's promise to marry her, and that if accused had intercourse with prosecutrix by reason of his promise of marriage, and prosecutrix was then chaste and unmarried and under 25 years of age, he was guilty, but if she yielded by reason of her own passion he must be acquitted, is sufficient. Hinman v. State, 59 App. 29, 127 S. W. 221.

A blunt offer of wedlock in the future for sexual favors at the present time presents no case of seduction. Barclay v. State, 62 App. 323, 137 S. W. 118.

In view of Rev. St. 1895, art. 2955 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 4609), providing that any girl over 14 years of age may marry, the offense of seduction, which consists of having carnal knowledge of a female with her consent, obtained under a promise of marriage, may be committed with a girl under 15 years of age at the time, and the fact that, as the girl had not arrived at the age of 15 years, the offender might be guilty of rape, does not affect the state's right to prosecute for seduction. Murphy v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 616.

A charge that in order to constitute the offense of seduction the female must be under the age of 25 years and unmarried, and have yielded her chastity and person under a promise of marriage, is a correct definition of the crime of seduction. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

To constitute seduction, there must have been an act of intercourse induced by a promise of marriage. McLaurin v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 557.

An unchaste female cannot be subject of seduction. Coleman v. State, 71 App. 20, 158 S. W. 1137.

Where the prosecuting witness agreed to intercourse in return for defendant's promise to marry her, such a transaction of barter of sexual favors for the promise contained none of the legal elements of a seduction. Gleason v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 506.

A charge that by the term "seduction" is meant the leading of an unmarried female away from the path of virtue, and, before a conviction can be had, the jury must be convinced that accused had intercourse with prosecutrix within three years before the filing of the indictment, that the prosecutrix consented solely upon accused's promise of marriage, that she was under 25 years of age, and at that time was virtuous, correctly charges the elements of the offense. Grimes v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 523.

2. Seduction as felony.—See notes under article 55, ante.

3. Justification or defense.—Character of female, see Kelly v. State, 33 App. 31, 24 S. W. 295; Mrous v. State, 31 App. 597, 21 S. W. 764, 37 Am. St. Rep. 834. Acts of intercourse with others subsequent to the seduction is no defense thereto. Anderson v. State, 45 S. W. 15, 39 App. 83.

One who seduced a woman under a promise of marriage may not escape punishment therefor by proving that the woman before the time appointed for the marriage had intercourse with other men. Carter v. State, 59 App. 73, 127 S. W. 215.

The fact that a difference between accused and prosecutrix arose after he had seduced her under a promise of marriage did not bar a prosecution unless he in good faith offered to marry her. Hinman v. State, 59 App. 29, 127 S. W. 221.

Where accused seduced prosecutrix by virtue of a promise of marriage, the fact of her subsequent misconduct with others was not a justification or ground of defense. Walls v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 130.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence of improper conduct of the prosecutrix with others after the date of the seduction is no defense. Curry v. State, 72 App. 463, 162 S. W. 851.

That after accused had led her astray, prosecutrix submitted herself to other men, was no defense. Hart v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 436.

4. Accomplice.—See notes under article 79 ante.

5. Indictment.—The indictment must allege that at the time of the commission of the act the female was unmarried. Mesa v. State, 17 App. 395.

An indictment charging that accused had carnal knowledge of prosecutrix under a "prom" of marriage is insufficient to charge seduction. Latham v. State, 63 App. 632, 141 S. W. 953.

6. — Of accessory.—See notes under article 86 ante.

7. Evidence.—Letters from the prosecutrix to a third person stating other acts of illicit intercourse are admissible. Davis v. State, 36 App. 548, 38 S. W. 174.

The deposition of a witness in a breach of promise suit cannot be adduced as evidence on trial for seduction, as the state was not a party in the civil suit. Luckie v. State, 33 App. 562, 28 S. W. 533.

It is competent to prove that defendant stated that he intended to have carnal intercourse with prosecutrix, but that he did not intend to marry her. Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 669.

Prosecutrix's character for virtue cannot be attacked by evidence of statements made by third persons in regard thereto. Parks v. State, 35 App. 378, 33 S. W. 872.

Any act or statement of the prosecutrix tending to show a want of virtue is admissible, but it must be proven by witnesses who saw the act or heard the statement. Mere reports or rumors of the conduct of the prosecutrix are not admissible, unless the witness is qualified to testify to her general reputation for chastity, and such reports go to make up her general reputation. Parks v. State, 35 App. 278, 33 S. W. 872.

Testimony by the mother of the prosecutrix that she had overheard a conversation between prosecutrix and defendant is admissible. Snodgrass v. State, 36 App. 207, 36 S. W. 477.

Prosecutrix testified that no person except defendant had had intercourse with her; held, admissible to prove by other men that they had had intercourse with her. Davis v. State, 36 App. 548, 38 S. W. 174.

It is competent to show that, subsequent to the alleged seduction, prosecutrix had had promiscuous intercourse with other men. Id.

Evidence that the prosecutrix was called Miss, that she lived with her mother and received the attentions of defendant, is sufficient proof that she was unmarried. Bailey v. State, 36 App. 540, 38 S. W. 185.

The testimony of the mother of the prosecutrix that defendant visited her daughter about once a week, that he told her they were engaged and asked her consent to their marriage, is sufficient evidence of promise of marriage. Id.

Sexual intercourse may be proven by circumstantial evidence. Evidence that defendant had said that he was going to have intercourse with the prosecutrix, and that they went to a hotel and registered as man and wife, and stayed in the same room, is sufficient evidence of sexual intercourse between the parties. Id.

It is not error, on trial of an indictment for seduction committed prior to the taking effect of the act permitting the seduced female to testify, to admit the evidence of such female, since such act does not require less evidence to convict, and hence is not ex post facto. Mrous v. State, 21 S. W. 764, 31 App. 597, 37 Am. St. Rep. 834.

Though, on indictment for seduction, defendant may not have used due diligence to procure absent witnesses, by whom he claimed, in his motion for a continuance, which was overruled, that he could prove that they had had intercourse with the prosecutrix, and though these witnesses may not have been very credible, a conviction should be reversed, and an opportunity given to procure them, where the circumstances, and the testimony of the prosecutrix herself, tend to show that she was unchaste, and that they had had intercourse with her. Kelly v. State, 33 App. 31, 24 S. W. 295.

In a prosecution for seduction, remarks of the court, in overruling an objection by accused to the testimony of a witness as to the reputation of prosecutrix for chastity, on the ground that the witness never heard any one speak of her reputation in that respect, that there is no higher evidence of the good character of a person than that it was never discussed, and that that fact is the best evidence of good character, is ground for reversal. McCullar v. State, 36 App. 213, 36 S. W. 585, 61 Am. St. Rep. 847.

The seduced female is presumed to be a willing party to the act, and it is immaterial as to whether or not she adjusted her person so as to facilitate the act. Barnes v. State, 37 App. 320, 39 S. W. 684.

It is competent to prove that the act of coition produced no pain, soreness or laceration of the parts of the female. Id.

On cross-examination prosecutrix testified that defendant never got her full consent, and that she would not have done it had she not been afraid of him. Held, that questions as to whether she submitted to him because he promised to marry her, because she loved him, and because she was afraid of him were erroneous as leading. Barnes v. State, 37 App. 320, 39 S. W. 684.

Evidence of the complexion, and of the color of the hair and eyes, of a child only three or four months old, is not admissible for the purpose of comparison, in order to prove its paternity. Barnes v. State, 37 App. 320, 39 S. W. 684.

Where defendant proved an act of intercourse between prosecutrix and another, it is competent for the prosecution to show what was said and done in connection therewith to induce prosecutrix to submit. Anderson v. State, 45 S. W. 15, 39 App. 83.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence that prosecutrix had kissed and been kissed and embraced by other men than defendant is admissible, as tending to show lack of chastity. Creighton v. State, 41 App. 101, 51 S. W. 910.

It is admissible to prove that prosecutrix, for a long time before her child was born, lived at a house and associated with three women who had given birth to illegitimate children. This to show her real character. Caviness v. State, 42 App. 420, 60 S. W. 555.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence of acts of prosecutrix subsequent to the alleged commission of the offense, going to show illicit relations and lascivious conduct with others than defendant, is admissible to show that prosecutrix was unchaste prior to the alleged illicit intercourse with defendant. Nolan v. State, 48 App. 436, 88 S. W. 242.

While the mere fact that prosecutrix subsequently becomes a prostitute is no justification or defense for defendant, yet, if her conduct be such as to indicate general prostitution on her part, this should be considered as a circumstance by the jury in passing on whether she was probably chaste at the time of her alleged seduction. Nolan v. State, 48 App. 436, 88 S. W. 242.

In a prosecution for seduction, letters written to a third person by prosecutrix, showing a vulgar and lascivious mind on her part, were admissible for the purpose of discrediting her, and also to shed light on her chastity at the time of her alleged seduction by defendant. Nolan v. State, 48 App. 436, 88 S. W. 242.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence that prior to the trial prosecutrix, who married subsequent to the alleged seduction, stated, in substance, to defendant's attorneys, that defendant had raped her, was admissible for impeachment, and an attempted limitation of it by the court to contradiction alone was error. Nolan v. State, 48 App. 436, 88 S. W. 242.

As under the amendment to the seduction law the offer of marriage must be made to the prosecutrix herself, it was not error in a prosecution for seduction of a minor female to exclude evidence that shortly after his arrest defendant sent to her father, requesting permission to marry her, witness also testifying that the day following defendant stated that he did not intend to marry prosecutrix. Nolan v. State, 48 App. 436, 88 S. W. 242.

In a prosecution for seduction, prosecutrix was asked on direct examination whether she believed at the time that defendant and she were to become man and wife the following spring, whether the day of their marriage had been fixed, and whether the time was fixed according to his or her suggestions. Held, that the questions and the evidence elicited thereby were relevant and material. Faulkner v. State, 53 App. 258, 109 S. W. 199.

In a prosecution for seduction, testimony of prosecutrix in response to a question whether defendant in his actions toward her appeared "affectionate or loving, kind, and true, as a true lover should," was admissible. Faulkner v. State, 53 App. 258, 109 S. W. 199.

Where, in a prosecution for seduction, prosecutrix testified as to the existence of an engagement between her and defendant at the time of the seduction, evidence as to a former engagement between prosecutrix and defendant, which had been broken before the alleged seduction took place, was admissible. Faulkner v. State, 53 App. 258, 109 S. W. 199.

Where, on a trial for seduction, the evidence showed that accused was in love with prosecutrix, that her father was opposed to him and objected to his coming to the house to see her, that accused had requested a third person to bring prosecutrix to a town, and that he intended to marry her, statements by accused that he was responsible for prosecutrix's pregnancy, and that he contemplated stealing a girl, were admissible to prove intercourse with prosecutrix and to corroborate the proof of an engagement to marry. Hinman v. State, 59 App. 29, 127 S. W. 221.

In a prosecution for seduction, testimony by a physician that his examination had disclosed the prosecutrix's pregnancy is admissible. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

In a prosecution for seduction, where the record disclosed that prosecutrix was the only girl to whom accused was paying attention and that her social position was good, evidence of his boasts of his conquests among the best girls in the town was admissible. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

In a prosecution for seduction where, after his examining trial, accused sought to have a conversation with prosecutrix in the presence of no one but his relative and friend, and the aunt of the prosecutrix objected to such conversation, saying that she did not think they had any talk coming, that all they needed was a marriage license and a preacher, and the accused remained silent, no conversation being had, evidence of the remarks of the aunt and the failure of accused to reply was admissible as an implied admission. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

In a prosecution for seduction, testimony by the mother of the prosecutrix that after the examining trial of accused he called up the prosecutrix and asked to speak to her was admissible, where accused made an engagement with the prosecutrix, when called to the telephone, to have a meeting with her at the residence of a third party, and it appeared that such meeting was had. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

The state, on a trial for seduction is not confined to proof of the first act of intercourse, but subsequent acts may be shown. Walls v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 130.

The details of an operation of abortion and the suffering at the time and after are not admissible in evidence in a prosecution for seduction, nor for being an accessory to that crime. Harrison v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 139.

On a trial for seduction, it was immaterial whether accused was present in a physician's office when the money was given to prosecutrix to leave the county and go to a distant city; the payment being done with his knowledge, consent, and acquiescence. Cole v. State, 70 App. 459, 156 S. W. 929.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence that letters were written by the sister of the prosecutrix to a named third person was inadmissible. Black v. State, 71 App. 621, 160 S. W. 720.

In a prosecution for seduction under promise of marriage, evidence that prosecutrix's mother had been long dead at the time of the seduction was admissible. Gillespie v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 135.

Where, in a prosecution for seduction under promise of marriage, prosecutrix's reputation for chastity became an issue, evidence that on one occasion, during the time in question, she had a difficulty with a young man in a church and called him "a damn son of a bitch" was admissible. Gillespie v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 135.

On a trial for seduction, letters written by the prosecutrix long after the offense, and of little importance, were not admissible. Creacy v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 162.

In a prosecution for seduction under promise of marriage, both the act of intercourse and the promise of marriage may be established by circumstantial evidence. De Rossett v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 531.

In a prosecution for seduction, the child of prosecuting witness should not have been brought before the jury, identified, and introduced as evidence. Gleason v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 506.

Where the prosecutrix testified that she yielded solely on account of accused's persuasions and entreaties, relying on his protestations of love and marriage, questions as to whether prosecutrix was capable of experiencing and did experience sexual desire do not call for material evidence. Grimes v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 523.

8. — Sufficiency.—Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Wooldridge v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 550; Carter v. State, 59 App. 73, 127 S. W. 215; Hinman v. State, 59 App. 23, 127 S. W. 221; Barclay v. State, 62 App. 323, 137 S. W. 118; Browning v. State, 64 App. 148, 142 S. W. 1; Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967; Push v. State, 71 App. 14, 157 S. W. 944; Blackburn v. State, 71 App. 625, 160 S. W. 687; Curry v. State, 72 App. 463, 162 S. W. 851; Slaughter v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 580. Contra, Murphy v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 616.

Defendant, at the time the seduction was alleged to have taken place, paid prosecutrix assiduous attention. A witness testified that defendant admitted his engagement to marry prosecutrix, and of his having intercourse with her, and saw them in the act. Held sufficient corroboration of prosecutrix, who testified that the intercourse was superinduced by promise of marriage, to sustain a conviction of seduction. Anderson v. State, 45 S. W. 15, 39 App. 83.

The evidence to support a conviction of seduction must be measured and governed by the rules governing the sufficiency of evidence to justify a conviction of any other crime, and any fact essential to the offense may be established by circumstantial evidence as well as by direct proof. Nash v. State, 61 App. 259, 134 S. W. 709.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence held to authorize the jury to find that an engagement existed between prosecutrix and defendant at the time of the acts complained of. Barclay v. State, 62 App. 323, 137 S. W. 118.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence held insufficient to raise the issue of consent because of lust or fear. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

9. — Presumption of chastity.—Proof of acts of carnal intercourse with others than defendant after the act charged, is no answer to the presumption that she was chaste before the act charged. Anderson v. State, 39 App. 83, 45 S. W. 15.

Want of chastity of a prosecutrix being a complete defense to a prosecution under the statute, evidence of her chastity is admissible in the first instance, for while she is presumed chaste the accused is also presumed innocent. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

In a prosecution for seduction, the prosecutrix is presumed chaste. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

The prosecutrix is presumed chaste, and if accused relies on the fact of unchastity he has the burden of establishing it. Curry v. State, 72 App. 463, 162 S. W. 851.

10. — Opinion evidence.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.

11. — Testimony of female and corroboration thereof.—See C. C. P. art. 789, and notes thereunder.

12. Charge of court.—Where, on a trial for seduction, the testimony showed that for four years past the reputation of prosecutrix was bad; that before appellant's promise of marriage was made she was generous and promiscuous in her favors, and specific acts were also proved, held, that a charge to the jury which in effect instructed them, if they believed that defendant and prosecutrix were well acquainted with each other, and defendant, knowing the character of the prosecutrix in the community, promised to marry her, and subsequently seduced her by virtue of said promise, that he could not avail himself of the character of the woman for want of chastity, was erroneous, because if the facts above stated were true, appellant was not guilty of seduction, whatever may have been his civil liability for breach of promise. Mrous v. State, 31 App. 597, 21 S. W. 764, 37 Am. St. Rep. 834.

Definition should be given to the jury. Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 669. The prosecutrix is an accomplice and the court should so instruct the jury. McCullar v. State, 36 App. 213, 36 S. W. 585, 61 Am. St. Rep. 847.

It was not error to refuse to charge as to conditional promise of marriage, where the only evidence on the question was that defendant said he would marry prosecutrix when he got out of his trouble, alluding to a criminal matter then pending in the courts against him. Barnes v. State, 37 App. 320, 39 S. W. 684.

When there is conflicting evidence as to the guilt of the accused the court should define seduction. Merrell v. State, 42 App. 13, 57 S. W. 291.

Where there was evidence that the prosecuting witness was not a chaste woman, it was error, in a trial for seduction, to fail to define the term "seduction" in charging the jury. Gorzell v. State, 43 App. 82, 63 S. W. 126.

Where others had an equal opportunity with defendant to have had sexual intercourse with prosecutrix, and there was evidence that she had had intercourse with others, and evidence showing unchaste habits was not denied by her, a conviction could not be sustained. Gorzell v. State, 43 App. 82, 63 S. W. 126.

The court was not required to limit the effect of evidence as to an engagement between prosecutrix and defendant, which was broken prior to the seduction. Faulkner v. State, 53 App. 258, 109 S. W. 199.

Where the testimony suggested a promise of marriage on condition of prosecutrix becoming pregnant by reason of intercourse, the court, at the request of accused, must charge that if the marriage promise was conditional the offense was not established; and an instruction that if prosecutrix yielded through fear of accused, or for any other reason than by the means of promise of marriage previously made, was insufficient, as leading the jury to believe that the conditional marriage promise was sufficient. Muhlhouse v. State, 56 App. 288, 119 S. W. 866.

Where the intercourse is admitted, and defendant testifies that it was with the consent of prosecutrix, that issue should be affirmatively presented. Lemmons v. State, 58 App. 269, 125 S. W. 400.

Where the court defined "seduction," and stated that it was to lead an unmarried woman under the age of 25 years from the paths of virtue, to entice her by means of a marriage promise to have intercourse with the man making the promise, and that the woman must have been of chaste character, the instructions were not open to the objection that the court in its preparatory statement omitted to state the elements of the offense. Carter v. State, 59 App. 73, 127 S. W. 215.

Where there was no suggestion in the evidence that the intercourse was the result on prosecutrix's part of anything except the promise of marriage, unless the jury might attribute it to her own lust, and the court charged that if the intercourse was the result of her passion accused should be acquitted, the refusal to charge that, if the intercourse was induced on her part by any other motive than promise to marry, accused must be acquitted, was not erroneous. Hinman v. State, 59 App. 29, 127 S. W. 221.

A charge, in a seduction case, that if prosecutrix's conduct for chastity was bad, and that before accused had promised to marry her, if he did do so, and that she was generous and promiscuous in bestowing her favors to other men, then if, under these circumstances, accused had carnal intercourse with her, he would not be guilty of seduction, is erroneous, since, if prosecutrix was not of a chaste character, or if theretofore she had had carnal intercourse with some other man, she was not the subject of seduction. Vantreese v. State, 59 App. 281, 128 S. W. 383.

Where two witnesses testified that they had been criminally intimate with prosecutrix on several occasions prior to the intercourse between accused and prosecutrix, the refusal to charge that though prosecutrix yielded to accused under a promise of marriage, yet if before the promise of marriage, she had had criminal intercourse with other persons, accused must be acquitted, was reversible error. Sharp v. State, 61 App. 247, 134 S. W. 333.

Where prosecutrix fixed the time of the promise of marriage and accompanying act of intercourse as in April, 1908, and the evidence showed that accused, in the early part of 1909, married another woman, and thereafter wrote letters to prosecutrix as a renewal of the engagement, and subsequently renewed illicit relations with her, a charge that, if accused at any time within three years before the return of the indictment seduced prosecutrix by means of a promise of marriage previously made, he was guilty was erroneous, as authorizing a conviction under either promise of marriage, while the subsequent promise could not form the basis of a conviction. Humphrey v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 641.

Where many circumstances were shown indicating lack of prior chastity on prosecutrix's part, it was error for the court to omit to charge that, if prosecutrix was unchaste at the time the offense was committed, defendant could not be convicted. Bishop v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 278.

An instruction defining the term "seduce" as an inducement of a woman on the part of a man to surrender her chastity by reason of some art, influence, or deception calculated to accomplish that object, and to include the yielding of her person to him as much as if it was expressly stated, is correct. Bost v. State, 64 App. 464, 144 S. W. 589.

A charge authorizing a conviction if accused had, at any time within three years next prior to the finding of the indictment, seduced prosecutrix, was correct, though not referring to the date of the seduction as alleged by prosecutrix. Bost v. State, 64 App. 464, 144 S. W. 589.

In a prosecution for seduction, held, that the charge of the court sufficiently submitted everything that was properly necessary to be submitted under the evidence and the law. Bost v. State, 64 App. 464, 144 S. W. 589.

Where the indictment alleged that the offense occurred in 1910, and the evidence showed the first act of intercourse to have occurred in 1909, a charge that a woman could be seduced but once and that accused could be convicted only for the first act of copulation and that subsequent acts of intercourse can be considered along with other evidence in passing on the guilt or innocence of accused, is not contradictory as authorizing a conviction for any offense committed within three years prior to the filing of the indictment, and in instructing that no conviction could be had for subsequent acts. Knight v. State, 64 App. 541, 144 S. W. 967.

An instruction, that seduction is not complete unless the female alleged to have been seduced be at the time a chaste person unmarried and under 25 years of age and was persuaded to surrender her chastity and have carnal intercourse with defendant by reason of his promise to marry her and must have relied upon said promise and must not have surrendered her virtue or yielded to his desires through any other consideration, was proper. Bush v. State, 71 App. 14, 157 S. W. 944.

An instruction that if prosecutrix ever had intercourse with a "man" other than accused, the jury should acquit, was not misleading in excluding possible intercourse between prosecutrix and a "boy"; there being no evidence, on the issue of prosecutrix's alleged intercourse with another than defendant, that she had ever been intimate with a "boy." Bush v. State, 71 App. 14, 157 S. W. 945.

Where defendant claimed that he had heard of prosecutrix's intimacy with others but did not produce any witness who had told him of any such intimacy, instructions affirmatively requiring the jury to believe beyond a reasonable doubt that prosecutrix had submitted herself to defendant solely by reason of his promise to marry her, and that if she prior to that time had been intimate with any other person, or if defendant had ever been intimate with her prior to his promise of marriage, to find him not guilty, sufficiently submitted the question of the previous chastity of the prosecutrix. Blackburn v. State, 71 App. 625, 160 S. W. 687.

An instruction, strictly in accordance with the statute, that, if any person by a promise of marriage shall seduce any unmarried female under the age of 25 years, he is guilty of seduction, and literally quoting article 1448, declaring that the term "seduction" is used in the sense in which it is commonly understood, was sufficient even if it were necessary to define the offense to the jury; it being the rule that, where the charge taken as a whole substantially defines the offense and whatever words therein are necessary to be defined, that is all that is required. Blackburn v. State, 71 App. 625, 160 S. W. 687.

Evidence held to require a finding that the promise of marriage by which prosecutrix was induced to yield her person on the first occasion was not conditioned on her becoming pregnant from the intercourse, so that the court did not err in refusing to submit the question of such alleged conditional promise. Gillespie v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 135.

13. — On weight of evidence.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 735.

14. Punishment.—1. The Penal Code declares that every offense punishable by death or imprisonment in the penitentiary, either absolutely or alternatively, is a felony. Seduction is punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary or by fine. Rev. St. 1879, art. 3602 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 6249) provides that any one convicted of a misdemeanor or petty offense may be hired out to liquidate his fine and costs. Held, that one convicted of seduction, and punished by fine, could not be so hired out. Ward v. White, 23 S. W. 981, 86 Tex. 170.

One whose punishment, on conviction of seduction, has been fixed at a fine, which he claims to be unable to pay, held not entitled to be released from custody on habeas corpus. Ex parte Biela, 81 S. W. 739, 46 App. 487.

On conviction of seduction, a sentence of seven years is not excessive. Faulkner v. State, 53 App. 258, 109 S. W. 199.

Art. 1449. [969] Marriage obliterates offense.—If the parties marry each other at any time before the defendant pleads to the indictment before a court of competent jurisdiction, then the prosecution, if begun, shall be suspended, but not dismissed; and, if indictment has been returned, the case shall be continued on the docket of the court from term to term; and, if the defendant, after said marriage in good faith continues to live with the person so seduced for two years after said marriage, the said prosecution shall be dismissed; but, if the defendant within two years after said marriage, without the fault of his said wife, such fault amounting to acts committed by her after said marriage as would entitle him to a divorce, shall abandon her or refuse to live with her, or shall be so cruel to her as to compel her to leave him, or shall be guilty of such outrages or cruelties toward her as to render their living together insupportable, then the prosecution shall be revived, and said marriage shall be no bar to the same, and the female so seduced shall be a competent witness against the defendant; provided, however, that if, after the prosecution is begun, and prior to the time he pleads to the indictment before a court of competent jurisdiction, the defendant, in good faith, offers to marry the female so seduced, and if she refuses to marry him, such refusal shall be a bar to further prosecution; but the benefit of this article shall not apply to the case of a defendant who was in fact married at the time of committing the offense. [Act 1899, ch. 47; Amended, Act, 1903, p. 221.]

Constitutionality.—That portion of this law (Act of 1903) which suspends the indictment, in case the defendant marries the seduced female, for two years in which to live in good faith with his wife and treat her well, is invalid, and contrary to section 10, article 1 of the Bill of Rights. Waldon v. State, 50 App. 512, 98 S. W. 848, 14 Ann. Cas. 342.

Marriage or offer to marry.—By the term, "in good faith offer to marry," the statute goes no farther than the marriage vow. It does not include, nor require, the promise to live with, protect, and support. Wright v. State, 31 App. 354, 20 S. W. 756, 37 Am. St. Rep. 822. And after prosecution is begun and up to the moment of conviction, such an offer made by defendant is a valid defense. Id.

While prosecutrix was on the stand testifying, defendant produced a marriage license, and offered to marry her then and there, stating that, if she accepted, his Honor upon the bench could marry them. The district attorney, contesting the good faith of the offer, was allowed to call a witness who testified that defendant had stated to him that he would not live a day with prosecutrix, that it would break his mother's heart for him to marry her. Defendant was then sworn, and again promised to marry prosecutrix, saying he would live with her and act as a true husband. She refused his offer. Held, that the prosecution should have been dismissed. Id.

Where a defendant who is a minor offers to marry the prosecutrix but his mother will not allow him, it is not an offer in good faith within the meaning of the law. Merrell v. State, 42 App. 19, 57 S. W. 290.

The provisions of this article do not apply where the marital stage is assumed between the parties prior to the institution of criminal proceedings. Eledge v. State, 50 App. 223, 96 S. W. 39, 40.

Where one seduces a woman under promise of marriage a conviction can only be barred by his marrying her or in good faith offering to do so. Hinman v. State, 59 App. 29, 127 S. W. 221.

Under this article, providing that, where accused in good faith offers to marry prosecutrix, the prosecution for seduction shall be dismissed, one is not relieved from prosecution for seduction because prosecutrix married a third person, and prevented accused from marrying her after the institution of the prosecution. Thorp v. State, 59 App. 517, 129 S. W. 607, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 421.

Under this article and article 1447, one on trial for rape of a female under the age of 15 years may not rely on the presumption of a common-law marriage arising from evidence of cohabitation following their engagement to marry at some future time. Wofford v. State, 60 App. 624, 132 S. W. 929.

Offer of marriage, in order to constitute a defense to seduction, must be made before accused pleads to the indictment for seduction. Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

Art. 1450. Abandonment after seduction and marriage, offense defined.—If any person, by promise of marriage, shall seduce an unmarried female under the age of twenty-five years, and shall have carnal knowledge of such female, and if, after prosecution has begun, the parties marry each other, at any time before the defendant pleads to the indictment before a court of competent jurisdiction, and if the defendant within two years after said marriage, without the fault of his said wife, such fault amounting to acts committed by her after said marriage as would entitle him to a divorce under the laws of this state, shall abandon her or refuse to live with her, or shall be so cruel to her as to compel her to leave him, or shall be guilty of such outrages or cruelties towards her as to make their living together insupportable, thereby leaving her or forcing her to leave him and live apart from each other, shall be guilty of the offense of abandonment after seduction and marriage; and any person convicted of said offense shall be confined in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than ten years; and said marriage shall be no bar to the qualifications of said female to testify against the defendant; and the female so seduced and subsequently married and abandoned, as herein provided, shall be a competent witness against said defendant. [Act 1909, p. 97.]

Constitutionality.—This statute is not a violation of Bill of Rights, § 3, requiring that all men shall have equal rights and privileges. Thacker v. State, 62 App. 294, 136 S. W. 1095.

Nor does it impose a "cruel or unusual punishment" within Const. art. 1, § 13. Thacker v. State, 62 App. 294, 136 S. W. 1095.

Nor does it provide for putting one twice in jeopardy for the same offense within Const. art. 1, § 14. Thacker v. State, 62 App. 294, 136 S. W. 1095.

Nor is it an "ex post facto law" within Const. art. 1, § 16. Thacker v. State, 62 App. 294, 136 S. W. 1095.

Abandonment and liability therefor in general.—In a prosecution of a husband for abandoning his wife, whom he had married to prevent prosecution for seduction under promise of marriage, defendant cannot be convicted if the female consented to the illicit intercourse not relying solely on a prior unconditional promise of marriage, but on a promise to marry her in case she should become pregnant, or on any other reason or inducement. Thacker v. State, 62 App. 294, 136 S. W. 1095.

Temporary absence of the husband from his wife, with her consent, while at work, without an intention to abandon her, does not constitute an abandonment, but proof that he refused to furnish her a home, except with his parents and their family, and that they so abused her, with his knowledge, as to force her to leave, was sufficient to constitute abandonment. Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

Justification of abandonment.—The statute defining the offense of abandonment after seduction and marriage authorizes the abandonment of the woman by the man only for such acts of intercourse committed after marriage by her as would entitle him to a divorce; the law condones his past offense if he marries and lives with and supports her, and it also requires of him to condone all her acts prior to the marriage, and if, after he had seduced her, she, between that time and the time he married her, again fell, it would not justify him in abandoning her, as, having been guilty of the first wrong, he must bear its consequences. James v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 727.

Seduction before law took effect.—Where a seduction took place in 1907, but the parties married in July, 1909, and the husband abandoned his wife shortly thereafter, it was held that, the marriage and abandonment having taken place after the law took effect, it was immaterial that the seduction was prior thereto. Thacker v. State, 62 App. 294, 136 S. W. 1095.

Commencement of prosecution for seduction.—The filing of a complaint for seduction before a justice of the peace, the issuance of a warrant, and accused's arrest thereunder, constituted the commencement of a prosecution against him for seduction within this article. Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

Indictment and proof thereunder.—Where a statute prescribes different ways by which the offense of abandonment after seduction and marriage can be committed, an indictment should not be quashed on the ground that it charges the offense to have been committed in only one of those ways. Qualls v. State, 71 App. 67, 153 S. W. 539.

Where an indictment alleged only an abandonment of the wife by the husband and not the commission of the offense in other ways denounced by the statute, the state must prove that the abandonment occurred in the county of the prosecution, even though other acts which would constitute the offense, had they been alleged, were committed within the county, and the statute gave the jurisdiction of an offense committed partly within and partly without the state to the court of any county where the defendant might be found. Qualls v. State, 71 App. 67, 153 S. W. 539.

Evidence.—Where, in a prosecution of a husband for abandoning his wife, whom it was alleged he had seduced before marriage, defendant denied that she left her home prior to her marriage on account of her pregnant condition, it was error to exclude evidence of a witness who carried her part of the distance on that trip that in talking to him prosecutrix stated she was leaving home on account of unpleasantness of her home and home surroundings, and that she could not remain with her father's family under such conditions. Coleman v. State, 71 App. 20, 153 S. W. 1137.

Where, in a prosecution for abandonment after seduction and marriage, defendant sought to show that his wife abandoned him in another state, and that he refused to live with her when she came to Texas, because he had been informed by his father that she had returned to Texas to send him to the penitentiary, all of which the wife denied or explained, evidence that defendant did not intend to live with his wife longer than the two years required by law is pertinent. Qualls v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 202.

In a prosecution for abandonment after seduction and marriage, evidence that the prosecutrix had been engaged to other men prior to the time she became engaged to defendant was not germane, where there was no proof offered as to criminal intimacy. Qualls v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 202.

In a prosecution for abandonment after seduction and marriage, evidence that the prosecuting witness had given birth to a child was admissible. James v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 727.

In a prosecution for abandonment after seduction and marriage, where defendant's testimony to show that prosecutrix was not chaste when he was alleged to have had his first intercourse with her was to the effect that she in her own home, in the presence of her visitors, a young lady and a young man, openly and flagrantly engaged in an act of intercourse with defendant's brother, who never told defendant when they were trying to send him to the penitentiary, yet told him immediately after his marriage, was so unreasonable and contrary to all human experience that a conviction would not be disturbed. James v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 727.

Accused having abandoned his wife, whom he married to stop prosecution for seduction, the state could prove by parol that a complaint for seduction was prepared by the district attorney, furnished to the wife's father, delivered to a justice of the peace, and that he issued a warrant thereon under which accused was arrested, as bearing on the pendency of the prosecution for seduction at the time of the marriage, and this regardless of the fact that the justice did not put his file mark on the complaint or docket the case, and decline to have anything further to do with it, and made the warrant returnable before another justice. Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

In a prosecution for abandonment of a wife and marriage to avoid prosecution for seduction, evidence of the justice before whom the seduction prosecution was instituted that he was justice of precinct No. 7 in M. county, Tex., was admissible. Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

Where a wife was married to avoid a husband's prosecution for seduction and taken to the home of his parents, evidence as to the treatment she received from her husband's mother and other members of the family in his absence, of which he was informed, and that this was such as to force her to leave, was admissible in a prosecution against him for abandonment to show that she did not leave him voluntarily. Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

In a prosecution for wife abandonment after marriage to escape prosecution for seduction, the complaint and warrant, or properly certified copies thereof, on which accused was arrested for the seduction constituted the best evidence of the institution of such a prosecution, prior to the marriage, and, such documents not having been shown to have been lost or destroyed, it was error to permit oral proof thereof by the district attorney who drew the complaint and the justice of the peace who filed the same and issued the warrant. Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

Testimony of wife.—In a prosecution of a husband for abandonment of his wife, whom he married to prevent prosecution for seduction under marriage promise, the prosecuting witness must be corroborated both as to the promise of marriage and as to the illicit intercourse. Thacker v. State, 62 App. 294, 136 S. W. 1095.

A wife can testify against her husband in a prosecution against him for abandonment after seduction and marriage, since the statute expressly authorizes such testimony. Qualls v. State, 71 App. 67, 153 S. W. 539.

Charge of court.—In a prosecution for abandonment after seduction and marriage, where the defendant contended that he did not abandon his wife but that she abandoned him in another state, and she testified that she was informed while in another state that her husband had abandoned her and that she then stated she was coming back to send him to the penitentiary, the court should give a charge, on request by the defendant, as to the place of the abandonment. Qualls v. State, 71 App. 67, 158 S. W. 539.

Where, in a prosecution of a husband for abandoning his wife, whom he had seduced before marriage, there was evidence that she was unchaste, and that he had been intimate with her many times before the occasion on which she claimed she submitted to his embraces under promise of marriage, the court erred in refusing to charge that if there was no promise of marriage after the first act of intercourse, then prosecutrix would not be chaste, and the jury should acquit. Coleman v. State, 71 App. 20, 158 S. W. 1137.

Where, in a prosecution for abandonment of wife, married by defendant after he seduced her, there was evidence that she had not been chaste before accused had known her, and, while she testified that the first act of intercourse with defendant was in September, he testified that he had been intimate with her many times as far back as the prior June, it was error to refuse to charge that to convict accused the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt, considering the charge on accomplice's testimony, that he promised to marry her, and that she submitted to his embraces while she was chaste, and relying on his unconditional promise to marry her, and even though the jury might believe that defendant had carnal intercourse with her, and he promised to marry her, yet, if at the time of the intercourse she was actuated by lust or any such consideration, or if the promise of marriage by defendant was conditional on prosecutrix's becoming pregnant from such intercourse, or if the jury had a reasonable doubt that she may have been actuated by any such motive, and that the promise of marriage may have been so conditioned, to find defendant not guilty. Coleman v. State, 71 App. 20, 158 S. W. 1137.

Where, in a prosecution for a wife abandonment after marriage to avoid prosecution for seduction, accused defended on the ground that the wife had been guilty of acts which would entitle him to a divorce, the court properly submitted such matters in general terms for finding, and refused to select certain facts showing or tending to show acts or outrages or cruelties, or abandonment or not, and tell the jury that they would or would not be sufficient to authorize a conviction or require acquittal, since such charge would be on the weight of the evidence. Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

Art. 1451. [970] Married man not liable if known.—No person who was, at the time of committing the offense, married, and the fact of marriage known to the woman, shall be held liable for the offense defined in this chapter.

B. Minor, et. al., vs. C. C. McDonald, Secretary of State*. [Id., § 4.]

1. Validity in general.—The anti-trust acts of May 25, 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 246, c. 146), and March 31, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 119, c. 94), held not indefinite and uncertain, but valid. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 48 Civ. App. 162, 106 S. W. 918.

2. Constitutionality.—The Supreme Court has held that our former statutes on trusts and conspiracies against trade were constitutional. Welch v. Windmill Co., 89 Tex. 653, 36 S. W. 71, citing Coal Co. v. Lawson, 89 Tex. 394, 32 S. W. 871, 34 S. W. 919; Houck v. Association, 88 Tex. 184, 30 S. W. 869.

It seems that the statute is not violative of the fourteenth amendment. Texas Brewing Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 40 S. W. 737.

The law prohibiting combinations in restraint of trade is not obnoxious to the fourteenth amendment to the United States constitution. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 19 Civ. App. 1, 44 S. W. 936, affirmed by Supreme Court of the United States, Id., 177 U. S. 28, 20 Sup. Ct. 518, 44 L. Ed. 657.

This article is not violative of state or national constitution. Texas Brewing Co. v. Durrum (Civ. App.) 46 S. W. 880.

The act of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 246, c. 146) was not rendered unconstitutional by the act of May 27, 1899, to protect workmen in the right of organization, etc. This latter act engrafts no exception upon the anti-trust act of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 262, c. 153). Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 48 Civ. App. 162, 106 S. W. 926. Affirmed by Supreme Court of the United States, and statute held not unconstitutional, as retroactive, as denying due process of law, or as imposing excessive punishment. Id., 212 U. S. 86, 29 Sup. Ct. 220, 53 L. Ed. 417.

3. Law in force.—The sections of this and the act of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 246, c. 146) providing penalties are penal, but cases prosecuted under them for the penalties are not criminal but civil and articles 238, 239, C. C. P., relating to limitation, do not apply in a civil action to recover the penalties. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 48 Civ. App. 162, 106 S. W. 926.

The proviso in this act as to repeal preserved whatever rights the state had under the act of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 246, c. 146), including the rights to enforce the penalties prescribed by that act. Id.

The repealing clause of this law repeals that part of the law of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 246, c. 146) wherein the attorneys for the state are allowed as fees one-fourth of the penalties collected. State v. Brady, 102 Tex. 408, 118 S. W. 128-131, reversing (Civ. App.) 114 S. W. 896.

4. Retroactive operation.—This act has no retroactive effect so as to affect contracts previously entered into and executed. Crump v. Ligon, 37 Civ. App. 172, 84 S. W. 251.

Where a combination in restraint of trade is formed before the anti-trust law is passed, it can be restrained after the law is enacted and those guilty of carrying out the contract punished. State v. M., K. & T. Ry. Co., 99 Tex. 516, 91 S. W. 215, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 783, 13 Ann. Cas. 1072.

5. Illegality of contract in general.—See article 1465, and notes.

The fact that a part of the account between the parties was due, and stated when a contract was made between them which was invalid under this and article 1456, and which stipulates for the payment of the account stated, would not save such part of the contract from being illegal and unenforceable so as to permit recovery of such amount; all items of the illegal contract being invalid. J. R. Watkins Medical Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 162 S. W. 394.

6. Combinations prohibited.—Persons may, without malice toward any one, and for the lawful purpose of protecting each other from dishonest or insolvent customers, and otherwise actually assisting each other in the conduct of their business, agree that each, upon the request of the other, would refuse to deal with any person. Delz v. Winfree, 80 Tex. 400, 16 S. W. 111, 26 Am. St. Rep. 755; Delz v. Winfree, 25 S. W. 50, 6 Civ. App. 11.

There must be a "combination"—a union or association of capital, skill or acts. Gates v. Hooper, 90 Tex. 563, 39 S. W. 1079. See Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 264, 24 S. W. 397, 22 L. R. A. 483; Coal Co. v. Lawson, 89 Tex. 394, 32 S. W. 871, 34 S. W. 919; Welch v. Windmill Co., 89 Tex. 653, 36 S. W. 71; Brewing Co. v. Templeman, 90 Tex. 277, 38 S. W. 27; Fuqua v. Brewing Co., 90 Tex. 298, 38 S. W. 29, 750, 35 L. R. A. 241.

Equity will not compel an accounting between partners for profits growing out of an illegal contract to restrict trade, etc. Wiggins v. Bisso, 92 Tex. 219, 47 S. W. 637, 71 Am. St. Rep. 837.

If the combination was made and its object was to restrain trade and create a monopoly, the statute denounces it no matter if the immediate result is to lower prices. The object of the law is to guard the commerce and trade of the state. The getting of a city ordinance enacted by a city council extending the lives of corporations for a long period is a circumstance which may be shown to prove a conspiracy against trade. Although a party may not be alleged to be in the conspiracy, yet when the facts establish a conspiracy and show that he was a party to it, his acts and declarations made to further the common design can be shown. San Antonio Gas Co. v. State, 22 Civ. App. 118, 54 S. W. 289.

Where an agreement in violation of the anti-trust law has been made, and one party thereto pursues the course of conduct agreed on, the law presumes that the acts done by him were the result of the agreement and of entering into it, so that the parties thereto are liable as aiders and abettors and are responsible for the acts of each and all within this article. State v. Racine Sattley Co. (Civ. App.) 134 S. W. 400.

A combination in violation of the anti-trust statute is void, irrespective of the common-law distinction between restrictions on trade which are reasonable and those which are unreasonable. Crandall v. Scott (Civ. App.) 161 S. W. 925.

A contract to purchase patent medicines from plaintiff at wholesale to be sold at the regular retail prices in a certain part of the county except within cities, which also provided that the buyer would sell no other goods during the term of contract except those procured from plaintiff and would sell them only to customers at their residences in the district prescribed, violated this and article 1456; being an attempt to combine the capital, skill, etc., of the parties to maintain a standard of prices and prevent competition in the territory fixed. J. R. Watkins Medical Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 162 S. W. 394.

7. Contract not to engage in business.—A promise by a merchant to the purchaser of his stock to retire from business in the town for one year does not constitute a trust. Gates v. Hooper, 90 Tex. 563, 39 S. W. 1079.

An agreement not to engage in a particular business for two years is not in violation of the trust law, or against trade. Erwin v. Hayden (Civ. App.) 43 S. W. 610.

An agreement that if defendant ceased to teach music in plaintiff's school that he would not teach in a certain town is a binding contract and is not in violation of the foregoing article. Patterson v. Crabb (Civ. App.) 51 S. W. 870.

A contract of seller, on the sale of merchandise and goods to refrain from such business for twenty years within the county in which the sale is made, is not invalid as an unreasonable restraint of trade. Tobler v. Austin, 22 Civ. App. 99, 53 S. W. 706.

An agreement by a doctor not to practice his profession within ten miles of a certain town for ten years is not void, as against public policy, at common law, and is not in conflict with the law to prevent a combination in restraint of trade. Wolff v. Hirschfeld, 57 S. W. 572, 23 Civ. App. 670.

An agreement by an owner, on sale of his business and good will, not to re-enter such business within a specified time at a certain place, is not void as in restraint of trade. Comer v. Burton-Lingo Co., 24 Civ. App. 251, 58 S. W. 969.

This law does not apply when one sells his business and good will to a single person or firm on condition that the purchaser will not engage in the same kind of business for a limited time at a specified place. It prohibits any combination having for its purpose the doing of either of the things specified, without regard to the intention of the parties or of the immediate effect of the combination on trade and commerce. Id.

A promise by a partner to his copartner, purchasing the business of the firm, not to engage in such business in that town so long as the copartner remains in the business in the town, is not void as in restraint of trade, at common law. Crump v. Ligon, 84 S. W. 250, 37 Civ. App. 172.

An agreement by the seller of a cotton gin and gristmill not to re-engage in that business so long as the purchasers operated it was not in violation of this article. Malakoff Gin Co. v. Riddlesperger (Civ. App.) 133 S. W. 519.

Plaintiff and two other concerns, who conducted a moving picture business in the town, made an agreement by which the others gave notes to plaintiff in consideration of plaintiff stopping business and agreeing that no showhouse except the two owned by the makers should open in the town before a certain time, and that if a showhouse of a certain standard should open within the time and run for six months, all of the notes maturing after the opening of the house should be void, and that if a showhouse should open and run for less than such period, the notes should be void for the time it was conducted. Held, that the contract was in violation of the Anti-Trust Act and void. Crandall v. Scott (Civ. App.) 161 S. W. 925.

8. Interstate commerce.—Where manufacturers in another state sell to dealers in Texas on an order from the latter, and the goods are delivered in Texas on a contract on the part of the sellers not to sell similar goods to any one in a named county for a specified time except the purchasers of the bill it is an interstate transaction and the Texas anti-trust laws do not apply. Eclipse Paint & Mfg. Co. v. New Process Roofing & Supply Co., 55 Civ. App. 553, 120 S. W. 533.

Where goods sold and contemplated to be sold under a contract in restraint of trade were to be shipped from a sister state to Texas and there mingled with other goods of the buyer in Texas to become a part of the buyer's stock and to be there sold at retail, and the contract was made with the knowledge and purpose and intent of all the parties thereto that that should be done, the parties were liable for a violation of this article, as against the objection that the transaction was interstate commerce. State v. Racine Sattley Co. (Civ. App.) 134 S. W. 400.

A petition, in an action by the state against a foreign corporation for a violation of the anti-trust act of 1903 (Acts 1903, c. 94), which alleged that the foreign corporation was a manufacturer of farming implements and vehicles; that it contracted with a dealer in the state in such articles to give him the exclusive sale of its goods, the latter agreeing not to buy or sell any other makes of like goods; that the foreign corporation had traveling salesmen soliciting business throughout the state; that the contract was signed by one of the salesmen; and that the foreign corporation was a wholesale dealer in farming implements and vehicles—was sufficient as against a general demurrer to show that it was the purpose of the foreign corporation to sell goods under the contract at the residence of the dealer in Texas, and that it was its purpose that the contract should be carried into effect in Texas, so that the transaction was not interstate commerce, but was subject to the state anti-trust laws. Id.

The fact that the sale of goods by a citizen of another state to a citizen of Texas under a contract which violated the Anti-Trust Act also constituted interstate commerce would not prevent the Anti-Trust Act from applying to invalidate the contract and prevent a recovery thereon. J. R. Watkins Medical Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 162 S. W. 394.

9. Contracts with carriers.—A contract of railroad company to ship 66 per cent. of output of salt of a company at as low rate as any other company held not void as against public policy. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Texas Short Line Ry. Co., 35 Civ. App. 387, 80 S. W. 567.

A railroad company has the right to give one person the privilege of soliciting on its trains the transfer business of the passengers on such trains, and to exclude another from engaging in the same business on its trains. By so doing it does not violate the anti-trust law. Lewis v. W. M. W. & N. W. Ry. Co., 36 Civ. App. 48, 81 S. W. 112, 113.

A contract between a railway company and a sleeping car company, whereby the former grants the latter the exclusive right to furnish sleeping cars to be used on the railway company, and on all lines controlled by it, and all roads which it might subsequently acquire or operate, is not in restraint of trade and does not violate the anti-trust law. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. State, 99 Tex. 34, 87 S. W. 341, 70 L. R. A. 950.

Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 6616 authorizes express companies to pursue their business on all the railways controlled by state legislation with equal and reasonable facilities and accommodations and upon equal and reasonable rates, and any combination of the kind denounced by the anti-trust statute, the carrying out of which would limit or narrow such scope, is necessarily one to create or carry out a restriction in the free pursuit of the business. Hence an agreement by a railroad company to give one express company "exclusive privileges" and bound itself not to contract with other express companies to do an express business on its road violates this article. State v. M., K. & T. Ry. Co., 99 Tex. 516, 91 S. W. 215, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 783, 13 Ann. Cas. 1072.

An agreement between carriers and associations and citizens of a city binding the carriers to sell excursion tickets at a special low rate for certain occasions held not to contravene the state or federal anti-trust laws. Lyle v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co., 100 Tex. 292, 99 S. W. 396, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 437.

10. Contracts for sale of goods.—Under this article a petition, which alleges that a manufacturer of farm implements and vehicles entered into a contract with a dealer therein whereby the manufacturer agreed to give the dealer the exclusive sale of its product, and whereby the dealer agreed not to buy or sell any other makes of like goods, and that the manufacturer and dealer carried the contract into execution to the injury of the people, charges a violation. State v. Racine Sattley Co. (Civ. App.) 134 S. W. 400.

An agreement whereby plaintiff was to give defendant the sole and exclusive right to sell certain automobiles and supplies in a fixed territory for a given length of time is not in violation of this article defining a trust as a combination of capital, skill, or acts by two or more persons for specified purposes; there being no combination in this case. Nickels v. Prewitt Auto Co. (Civ. App.) 149 S. W. 1094.

A contract for sale of goods by a manufacturer to a retailer, he agreeing to sell none other than its products, and to have no other business, is invalid as creating a trust, defined by Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7796, as a combination of capital, skill, or acts by two or more to prevent competition. Armstrong v. W. T. Rawleigh Medical Co. (Civ. App.) 178 S. W. 582.

11. Exclusive franchise.—A city held not to have express or implied power to grant to a waterworks company an exclusive franchise to furnish water to the city for thirty years. Ennis Waterworks v. City of Ennis (Civ. App.) 136 S. W. 513.

12. Ordinance regulating billboards.—The anti-trust laws have no application to the questions raised in a proceeding to test the constitutionality of an ordinance regulating the size, location, and construction of billboards. Ex parte Savage, 63 App. 285, 141 S. W. 244, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 951.

13. Reservation in dedicating deed as to use of streets.—A reservation in dedicatory deeds of the right in the grantors to the exclusive use of the streets and alleys so dedicated for the maintenance of street railroads, lighting, sewers, gas, telephones, etc., held contrary to public policy, as tending to create a monopoly. Jones v. Carter, 45 Civ. App. 450, 101 S. W. 514.

14. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 707-710b.

Art. 1455. "Monopoly" defined.—A "monopoly" is a combination or consolidation of two or more corporations when effected in either of the following methods:

1. When the direction of the affairs of two or more corporations is in any manner brought under the same management or control for the purpose of producing, or where such common management or control tends to create a trust as defined in the first section of this chapter.

2. Where any corporation acquires the shares or certificates of stock or bonds, franchise or other rights, or the physical properties, or any part thereof, of any other corporation or corporations, for the purpose of preventing or lessening, or where the effect of such acquisition tends to affect or lessen competition, whether such acquisition is accomplished directly or through the instrumentality of trustees or otherwise. [Id.; Act 1903, p. 120.]

What are monopolies.—A monopoly is not only an exclusive right granted by the state to a few of something which was before of common right, but embraces a combination, regardless of form, the tendency of which is to prevent competition and control prices to the detriment of the public. Jones v. Carter, 45 Civ. App. 450, 101 S. W. 514.

Municipal ordinance regulating the size, location, and construction of billboards held not in conflict with Const. art. 1, § 26, prohibiting monopolies. Ex parte Savage, 63 App. 285, 141 S. W. 244, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 951.

Where neither party to a contract giving an exclusive selling agency in specified territory was a corporation, and there being no evidence of a combination or consolidation, the agreement was not in violation of this article. Nickels v. Prewitt Auto Co. (Civ. App.) 149 S. W. 1094.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 707, 710, 710a, 710b.

Art. 1456. "Conspiracy in restraint of trade" defined.—Either or any of the following acts shall constitute a conspiracy in restraint of trade:

1. Where any two or more persons, firms, corporations or associations of persons, who are engaged in buying or selling any article of merchandise, produce or any commodity, enter into an agreement or understanding to refuse to buy from or sell to any other person, firm, corporation or association of persons, any article of merchandise, produce or commodity.

2. Where any two or more persons, firms, corporations or associations of persons, shall agree to boycott or threaten to refuse to buy from or sell to any person, firm, corporation or association of persons for buying from or selling to any other person, firm, corporation or association of persons. [Id.]

See notes under articles 1454, ante, and 1471, post.

Constitutionality.—Acts March 30, 1889, and April 30, 1895, prohibiting combinations in restraint of trade, held not a violation of Const. U. S. Amend. 14. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 19 Civ. App. 1, 44 S. W. 936.

Restraint of trade.—Trade as used in the statute is synonymous with traffic—the buying and selling of articles of commerce. The term does not include an occupation or employment. Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 250, 24 S. W. 397, 22 L. R. A. 483.

Any combination in restraint of trade is unlawful. The prohibition applies to every article of usual and general consumption and of daily use among the people, and this is a matter of common knowledge. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Ass'n v. Houck (Civ. App.) 27 S. W. 692; Houck v. Anheuser-Busch Brewing Ass'n, 88 Tex. 184, 30 S. W. 869.

A combination which operates to create and carry out restrictions in trade and to prevent competition is within the statute. Coal Co. v. Lawson, 89 Tex. 394, 32 S. W. 871, 34 S. W. 919; Brewing Co. v. Templeman, 90 Tex. 277, 38 S. W. 27; Fuqua v. Pabst Brewing Co., 90 Tex. 298, 38 S. W. 29, 750, 35 L. R. A. 241.

A contract between A. and B., by which A. agrees not to sell any beer other than that furnished by or with the consent of B. and B. agrees to sell to no other person at two towns at which A. carries on his business, is prohibited by this statute. Texas Brewing Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 40 S. W. 737.

Cyclone Woven Wire Fence Co.*, 22 Civ. App. 41, 54 S. W. 392.

A contract between a foreign corporation, and a citizen of Texas, which gives the latter the exclusive right to sell goods of the former in Texas and that provides that the purchaser will not buy from anyone, except said corporation, such goods, and that the said goods shall not be used or sold or otherwise disposed of by the purchaser outside of a certain territory is contrary to law and void. Pasteur Vaccine Co. v. Burkey, 22 Civ. App. 232, 54 S. W. 804.

Under statute avoiding contracts against trade, a broker may not recover for services in securing an agreement between competitors to maintain prices. Street v. Houston Ice & Brewing Co. (Civ. App.) 55 S. W. 516.

Where the contract was that the retailer would handle the goods of wholesaler exclusively except so far as he might purchase cheaper or inferior class of tin goods and that the wholesaler would not sell to anyone else in retailer's city, so that the latter should have exclusive control of retail business in the city in certain lines, it violated this law and was therefore void. Simmons & Co. v. Terry (Civ. App.) 79 S. W. 1103.

A contract of sale and purchase entered into by two parties wherein the seller agrees not to sell the same kind of goods in three specified cities until the purchaser had disposed of the goods bought from the seller is not in violation of the anti-trust law (Acts 1899, p. 246, c. 146), and the notes given by the purchaser for the goods are not uncollectible under that act. Norton v. W. H. Thomas & Co., 99 Tex. 578, 91 S. W. 780; Id. (Civ. App.) 93 S. W. 712.

Sargent*, 51 Civ. App. 619, 113 S. W. 330.

A manufacturer in another state sold souvenir albums to firm in Galveston and agreed not to sell to any one else in Galveston for the period of one year. This contract did not violate this law. Albertype Co. v. Gust Feist Co., 102 Tex. 219, 114 S. W. 792.

Where an agreement in violation of the anti-trust law of 1903 (Acts 1903, c. 94) has been made, and one party pursues the course of conduct agreed on, the law presumes that the acts done by him were the result of the agreement, so that the parties thereto are liable. Id.

Under this article a contract between plaintiff and defendant grain dealers, whereby plaintiff agreed not to buy grain from the growers thereof or from curb-stone brokers or other persons not regularly engaged in the grain business was void as contravening the statute. Star Mill & E. Co. v. Ft. Worth Grain & E. Co. (Civ. App.) 146 S. W. 604.

Prewitt Auto Co.* (Civ. App.) 149 S. W. 1094.

Acts of defendant, a dealer in eggs, in writing to the express company which employed plaintiff, and whose rules forbade him to engage in such business on his own account, resulting in stopping plaintiff's personal activity in such business, and reducing his profits and in his final discharge, without malice or interference with his customers, held proper competition, and not actionable as an interference with plaintiff's business. Swift & Co. v. Allen (Civ. App.) 151 S. W. 645.

A contract giving plaintiff the exclusive right to bottle "Jersey-Creme," a drink, in a certain part of the country, by which the plaintiff agreed to use defendant's copyrighted labels and bottles and to buy the syrup for making such drink from the defendant, was a "conspiracy in restraint of trade" within the article; the bottles and labels being only incidentals, and "Jersey-Creme" being a "commodity" or "article of merchandise," and since it indirectly conferred upon appellee the exclusive right to purchase and resell the syrup. Jersey-Creme Co. v. McDaniel Bros. Bottling Co. (Civ. App.) 152 S. W. 1187.

A contract whereby a retail ice dealer agreed to purchase all of his ice from a certain manufacturer and wholesaler so long as the latter could supply his demands, and the wholesaler agreed to sell a certain quantity and as much more as possible to the retailer at a fixed price, unless the market price should go below that, when the market price should prevail, is contrary to subdivision 1 of this article, it not being necessary that the agreement be to refuse both to buy and sell. Wood v. Texas Ice & Cold Storage Co. (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 497.

The fact that the retailer was to receive the benefit of the market price, whatever it might be, does not render the contract lawful, since the intent of the parties and the actual effect of the contract cannot save it if it is illegal under the terms of the act. Wood v. Texas Ice & Cold Storage Co. (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 497.

The fact that one of the parties was a wholesaler and the other a retailer takes the contract out of the statute. Wood v. Texas Ice & Cold Storage Co. (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 497.

Art. 1457. Trusts, monopolies and conspiracies in restraint of trade prohibited.—Any and all trusts, monopolies and conspiracies in restraint of trade, as herein defined, are hereby prohibited and declared to be illegal. [Id.; Act 1903, p. 121.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 710-710b.

Art. 1458. Corporations forfeit charter for violation of this law.—Any corporation holding a charter under the laws of the state of Texas, which shall violate any of the provisions of this chapter, shall thereby forfeit its charter and franchise, and its corporate existence shall cease and determine. [Id.]

Explanatory.—At the time the above provision was carried into the revised Penal Code of 1911, it had been amended by Act 1909, p. 281. In view of the decision in Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505, the amendatory act is included in this compilation, and is set out below:

Attorney general to institute quo warranto proceedings.—For a violation of any of the provisions of this chapter, or any anti-trust laws of this state, by any corporation, it shall be the duty of the attorney general, upon his motion and without leave or order of any judge or court, to institute suit or quo warranto proceedings in Travis county, or at the county seat of any county in the state which the attorney general may select, for the forfeiture of its charter rights and franchises, and the dissolution of its corporate existence; and for such purposes, venue is hereby given to each district court in the state of Texas. [Id.; Act 1903, p. 121. Amended Acts 1909, p. 281.]

Validity.—That anti-trust statutes have no application to interstate commerce held not to affect the power of the court to apply them to domestic commerce, so as to forfeit permit of foreign corporation for violation thereof. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 19 Civ. App. 1, 44 S. W. 936, affirmed by U. S. Supreme Court, Id., 177 U. S. 28, 20 Sup. Ct. 518, 44 L. Ed. 657.

The (anti-trust) law tested by the decision of the United States (in the Connolly Case) is valid to the extent that it authorizes the state to revoke the license of a foreign corporation or to forfeit the charter of a domestic corporation for acts done which are forbidden by the anti-trust law. State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co., 95 Tex. 603, 69 S. W. 61.

Forfeiture of charters for violation of law.—The purchase of six cotton compresses by a cotton compress company on one day held not to show that the object of incorporation was to do a lawful act to effect an unlawful purpose,—the restraint of trade. State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co., 95 Tex. 603, 69 S. W. 58.

— Evidence.—Evidence in action for violation of anti-trust law held sufficient to connect corporation therewith. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 19 Civ. App. 1, 44 S. W. 936.

The charter of a compress company, incorporated for constructing, purchasing, and maintaining cotton compresses in various counties of the state, held not subject to forfeiture, under the evidence, on the ground that its incorporation was procured for creating a monopoly in compressing cotton. State v. Shippers' Compress & Warehouse Co. (Civ. App.) 67 S. W. 1049.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 710-710b.

Art. 1459. Duty of attorney general.—For a violation of any of the provisions of this chapter by any corporation mentioned herein, it shall be the duty of the attorney general, upon his own motion, and without leave or order of any judge or court, to institute suit or quo warranto proceedings in Travis county, at Austin, or at the county seat of any county in the state, where such corporation exists, does business, or may have a domicile, for the forfeiture of its charter rights and franchise, and the dissolution of its corporate existence. [Id.; Act 1903, p. 121.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 710-710b.

Art. 1460. When corporation of this state has forfeited its charter, no other corporation to which property of defaulting corporation has been transferred shall be incorporated or be permitted to do business in this state.—When a corporation, organized under the laws of this state, shall have been convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this chapter, and its charter and franchise has been forfeited, as provided in article 1458, no other corporation to which the defaulting corporation may have transferred its properties and business, or which has assumed the payment of its obligations, shall be permitted to incorporate or do business in Texas. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 710-710b.

Art. 1461. Foreign corporation violating this law forbidden to do business.—Every foreign corporation violating any of the provisions of this chapter is hereby denied the right, and is prohibited from doing any business within this state; and it shall be the duty of the attorney general to enforce this provision by injunction or other proceedings in the district court of Travis county, in the name of the state of Texas. [Id.]

In general.—The courts of Texas have the power of interpretation of the statutes of Texas. What they say the statutes of that state mean, we must accept them to mean, whether it is declared by limiting the objects of their general language or by separating their provisions into valid and invalid parts. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 20 Sup. Ct. 518, 44 L. Ed. 657.

A corporation is the creature of the law and none of its powers are original. They are precisely what the incorporating act has made them and can only be exerted in the manner in which that act authorizes. In other words, the state prescribed the purposes of a corporation and the means of executing those purposes. Purposes and means are within the state's control. This is true as to domestic corporations. It has even a broader application to foreign corporations. Id.

The charter of a corporation confers its powers and the means of executing them, and such powers and means can only be exercised in other states by the permission of the latter. Id.

Having no absolute right of recognition in other states, but depending for such recognition and enforcement of its contract upon their assent, it follows, as a matter of course, that such assent may be granted upon such terms and conditions as those states may think proper to impose. They may exclude the foreign corporation entirely; they may restrict its business to particular localities or they may exact such security for the performance of its contracts with their citizens as in their judgment will best promote the public interest. The whole matter rests in their discretion. Id.

A corporation does not have the rights of its personal members and cannot invoke that provision of section 2, article 4, of the Constitution of the United States which gives to the citizens of each state the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several states. The statute of 1889 therefore was a condition upon the plaintiff in error (the Waters-Pierce Oil Company), within the power of the state to impose, and whatever its limitations were upon the power of contracting, whatever its discriminations were, they became conditions of the permit and were accepted with it. The statute was not repealed by the statute of 1895. The only substantial addition made by the latter was to exclude from its provisions organizations of laborers for the purpose of maintaining a standard of wages. Id.

The act of 1895 is either constitutional or unconstitutional. If it is constitutional the plaintiff in error (the Waters-Pierce Oil Company) has no right to complain of it. If unconstitutional it does not affect the act of 1889, and that imposes valid conditions upon the plaintiff in error, and their violation subjected its permit to do business in the state to forfeiture. Id.

Foreign corporation held no less responsible for infraction of anti-trust law by its agent because in so doing the agent's acts involved a criminal responsibility. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 19 Civ. App. 1, 44 S. W. 936, affirmed by U. S. Supreme Court, Id., 177 U. S. 28, 20 Sup. Ct. 518, 44 L. Ed. 657.

So much of the anti-trust statutes of 1889 and 1899 as authorize the cancellation and forfeiture of a charter or of permit to do business within the state is constitutional and valid. National Cotton Oil Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 72 S. W. 615, affirmed by U. S. Supreme Court, Id., 197 U. S. 115, 25 Sup. Ct. 379, 49 L. Ed. 689.

Art. 1462. Quo warranto proceedings.—The provisions of the Revised Statutes of this state, prescribing the remedy and regulating the proceedings by quo warranto, etc., shall, except in so far as they conflict herewith, govern and control the proceedings when instituted to forfeit any charter under this chapter. [Id.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 710-710b.

Art. 1463. Foreign corporations convicted of violating this law, no other corporation to which the defaulting corporation has transferred its business or property shall be permitted to incorporate or do business in this state.—When any foreign corporation has been convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this chapter, and its right to do business in this state has been forfeited, as provided in article 1461, no other corporation to which the defaulting corporation may have transferred its properties and business, or which has assumed the payment of its obligations, shall be permitted to incorporate or do business in Texas. [Id.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 710-710b.

Art. 1464. Penalty may be recovered for violating this law.—Each and every firm, person, corporation or association of persons, who shall in any manner violate any of the provisions of this chapter, shall, for each and every day that such violation shall be committed or continued, forfeit and pay the sum of fifty dollars.

which may be recovered in the name of the state of Texas in any county where the offense is committed or where either of the offenders reside, or in Travis county; and it shall be the duty of the attorney general, or the district or county attorney under the direction of the attorney general, to prosecute for the recovery of the same; and the fees of the prosecuting attorney for representing the state in proceedings under this chapter shall be over and above the fees allowed him under the general fee bill. [Id.]

Explanatory.—At the time the above provision was inserted in the revised Penal Code it had been amended by Act 1909, p. 281. In view of the decision in Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505, the amendatory act is included in this compilation, and is set out below:

Penalties; venue; fees of attorney general.—Each and every firm, person, corporation or association of persons, who shall in any manner violate the provisions of this chapter, shall, for each and every day that such violation shall be committed or continued, forfeit and pay a sum of not less than fifty nor more than fifteen hundred dollars, which may be recovered in the name of the state of Texas in the district court of any county in the state of Texas, and venue is hereby given to such district courts; provided, that when any such suit shall have been filed in any county and jurisdiction thereof acquired, it shall not be transferred to any other county, except upon change of venue allowed by the court; and it shall be the duty of the attorney general, or the district or county attorney under the direction of the attorney general, to prosecute for the recovery of the same; and the fees of the district or county attorney for representing the state in all anti-trust proceedings, or for the collection of penalties for the violation of the anti-trust laws of this state, shall be ten per cent of the amount collected up to and including the sum of fifty thousand dollars, and five per cent on all sums in excess of the first fifty thousand dollars, to be retained by him when collected; and all such fees which he may collect shall be over and above the fees allowed under the general fee bill; provided, that the provisions of this chapter as to the fees allowed the prosecuting attorney shall not apply to any case in which judgment has heretofore been rendered in any court, nor to any moneys to be hereafter collected upon any such judgment heretofore rendered in any court, whether such judgment or judgments are pending upon appeal or otherwise; and provided, further, that the district or county attorney who joins in the institution or prosecution of any suit for the recovery of penalties for a violation of any of the anti-trust laws of this state, who shall, previous to the collection of such penalties, cease to hold office, he shall be entitled to an equal division with his successor of the fee collected in said cause; and in case of the employment of special counsel by any such district or county attorney, the contract so made shall be binding upon such prosecuting officer making such contract and thereafter retiring from office; provided, further, that in case any suit is compromised before any final judgment in the trial court is had, then the fees herein provided for shall be reduced one-half. [Id., Act 1903, p. 121, § 11. Amended Act 1909, p. 281.]

Repeal of law.—The anti-trust law of 1903 (Gen. Laws, p. 119, c. 94) does not repeal the provision of the anti-trust act of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 246, c. 146), giving the county attorney a fee of 25 per cent. of penalties recovered for violations of the latter law before this law took effect. State v. Brady (Civ. App.) 114 S. W. 896, reversed 102 T. 408, 118 S. W. 128.

Ground of action.—Where an action is brought to recover a penalty allowed by the anti-trust statutes of Texas, held, that no right of the state to the penalties could be based on the ground that the contract created a monopoly at common law or was in violation of the anti-trust statutes of the United States. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 88 S. W. 370.

In an action by the state for the penalty prescribed by this article, the fact that the petition annexes, as an exhibit, the contract relied on, which contains blanks which could not be filled by parol evidence in a suit between the parties thereto will not render the petition bad; the making of the contract, and not the contract itself, being the foundation of the suit, so that, the contract being merely evidence, it is immaterial that it only supports the petition in part. State v. Racine Sattley Co. (Civ. App.) 134 S. W. 400.

Inquiry as to offense.—While the language of this statute is imperative, it necessarily implies that before the officer acts he must look into the facts and find not only that there is ground to believe that an offense has been committed but that enough evidence to a successful prosecution can be procured. Lewright v. Bell, 94 Tex. 556, 63 S. W. 623.

Verdict.—The verdict ($1,623,900) is not so large, being under the maximum permitted by law, as to render it manifest that the jury were actuated by prejudice or other improper motives. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 48 Civ. App. 162, 106 S. W. 926.

Art. 1465. Contract in violation of provisions of this law void.—Any contract or agreement in violation of the provisions of this chapter shall be absolutely void and not enforceable either in law or equity. [Id.; Act 1903, p. 122.]

See notes under article 1454, ante.

Validity of contracts.—Contract of insurance held valid, though insured is a member of a trust. Springfield Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Cannon (Civ. App.) 46 S. W. 375.

Indebtedness for hydrant rentals, under contract with the assignee of the vendee of the city's waterworks, held not void because the franchise granted to the vendee created a monopoly. City of Tyler v. L. L. Jester & Co. (Civ. App.) 74 S. W. 359.

Right of action for breach of contract.—Contract by which defendant was to sell no other goods than those of plaintiff held in restraint of trade, so that plaintiff could not recover for goods furnished. S. S. White Dental Mfg. Co. v. Hertzberg (Civ. App.) 51 S. W. 355.

Defendant cannot recover on claim in reconvention for damages for breach of a contract which is violative of statute against monopolies. Pasteur Vaccine Co. v. Burkey, 23 Civ. App. 232, 54 S. W. 804.

A contract by the president and the teller of a bank to recover control of sufficient stock to secure the election of a satisfactory board of directors and their own re-election as officers, and to share the expense, is illegal, and expenses incurred thereunder by one cannot be recovered of the other. Withers v. Edmonds, 26 Civ. App. 189, 62 S. W. 795.

In view of this article the buyer could not maintain an action for damages for breach of a contract to sell grain which included provisions in restraint of trade contrary to the act. Star Mill & E. Co. v. Ft. Worth Grain & E. Co. (Civ. App.) 146 S. W. 604.

Judgment.—In an action on a note by a licensee, given in payment of property purchased under the license, where the licensee seeks a rescission on the ground of fraud and tenders property received under the license contract, he cannot complain of a judgment which requires him to return the property so tendered, even though contract is in violation of statute against trusts. Clark v. Cyclone Woven-Wire Fence Co., 22 Civ. App. 41, 54 S. W. 392.

Art. 1466. Punishment for violating this law.—And, in addition to all other penalties and forfeitures herein provided for, every person violating the provisions of this chapter shall be further punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. [Id.; Act 1903, ch. 94, § 13; Act 1907, p. 194.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 710b.

Art. 1467. In prosecutions for violating this law, what evidence used.—In prosecutions for the violations of any of the provisions of this chapter, evidence that any person has acted as the agent of a corporation in the transaction of its business in this state shall be received as prima facie proof that his act in the name, behalf or interest of the corporation of which he was acting as the agent, was the act of the corporation. [Id.; Act 1903, p. 122.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 710b.

Art. 1468. Persons may be summoned and required to testify when, shall not be subject to indictment or prosecution.—Upon the application of the attorney general or of any of his assistants, or of any district or county attorney, acting under the direction of the attorney general, made to any county judge, or any justice of the peace, in this state, stating that he has reason to believe that a witness, who is to be found in the county in which such county judge or justice of the peace is an officer, knows of a violation of any of the provisions of this chapter, it shall be the duty of the county judge, or of the justice of the peace, as the case may be, before whom such application is made, to have summoned and to have examined such witness in relation to violations of any of the provisions of this chapter, said witness to be summoned as provided for in criminal cases. The said witness shall be duly sworn; and the county judge, or justice of the peace, as the case may be, shall cause the statements of the witness to be reduced to writing and signed and sworn to before him; such sworn statement shall be delivered to the attorney general, his assistants, or the district or county attorney, upon whose application the witness was summoned. Should the witness summoned as aforesaid fail to appear, or to make statements of the facts within his knowledge, under oath, or to sign the same after it has been reduced to writing, he shall be guilty of contempt of court, and may be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, and may be attached and imprisoned in the county jail until he shall make a full statement of all the facts within his knowledge with reference to the matter inquired about. Any person who shall testify before any county judge, or justice of the peace, as provided for in this chapter, or who shall testify as a witness for the state in the course of any statutory proceeding to secure testimony for the enforcement of this law, or in the course of any judicial proceeding to enforce the provisions of this chapter, shall not be subject to indictment or prosecution for any transaction, matter or thing concerning which he shall so give evidence, documentary or otherwise. [Act 1907, p. 221.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 710b.

Witnesses.—The provision in this section relating to the securing of testimony does not apply to an examination before a grand jury, or district court. It is confined to examinations before a justice of the peace. Ex parte Andrews, 51 App. 79, 160 S. W. 378. (This decision was rendered before the amendment was made.)

Art. 1469. Actions brought under this law have precedence.—All actions authorized and brought under this chapter shall have precedence, on motion of the prosecuting attorney or the attorney general, of all other business, civil and criminal, except criminal cases where the defendants are in jail. [Act 1903, p. 122.]

Art. 1470. Entering into agreement to form trust, monopoly, etc., penalty.—If any person shall enter into an agreement or understanding of any character to form a trust, or to form a monopoly, or to form a conspiracy in restraint of trade, as these offenses are defined in this chapter, or shall form a trust, monopoly or conspiracy in restraint of trade, or shall be a party to the formation of a trust or monopoly or conspiracy in restraint of trade, or shall become a party to a trust or monopoly or conspiracy in restraint of trade, or shall do any act in furtherance of or aid to such trust or monopoly or conspiracy in restraint of trade, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a period of not less than two years nor more than ten years. [Act 1907, ch. 173, p. 322; Act 1907, p. 457.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 708, 709, 710b.

Art. 1471. Person, member, agent, employé, etc., operating in violation of this law, penalty.—If any person shall, as a member, agent, employé, officer, director or stockholder of any business, firm, corporation or association of persons, form, in violation of the provisions of this chapter, or shall operate, in violation of the provisions of this chapter, any such business, firm, corporation or association formed in violation of this chapter, or shall make any sale, or purchase, or any other contract, or do business for such business, firm, corporation or association, or shall do any other act which has the effect of violating or aiding in the violation of any of the provisions of this chapter, or shall, with the intent or purpose of driving out competition or for the purpose of financially injuring competitors, sell within this state at less than cost of manufacture or production, or sell in such a way or give away within this state, products for the purpose of driving out competition or financially injuring competitors engaged in a similar business, or give secret rebates on such purchase for the purpose aforesaid, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for a period of not less than two years nor more than ten years. [Id.]

Former law.—Article 981 of the old law, substituted by this chapter, which declares the parties who are amenable to, and the penalties for, a violation of the provisions of the law of trusts and conspiracies against trade, created two distinct characters of offenses: 1, as to all persons who may become engaged in the conspiracy or take part therein, or aid or advise in its commission; 2, as to all who shall, as principals, managers, directors, agents, servants or employes, or in any other capacity, knowingly carry out any of the stipulation, purposes, prices, rates or orders thereunder, or in pursuance thereof; that is, two or more persons may enter into the conspiracy originally, or others after the conspiracy is formed may enter into it, or after the conspiracy is formed any person not an original conspirator may knowingly serve as principal, manager, director, agent, servant or employé of the trust or combination in carrying out its purposes—and in each of such condition the party is amenable to, and liable under the law. Hathaway v. State, 36 App. 261, 36 S. W. 465. Compare this and the old article.

— Indictment and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 710b.

Under the former statute Penal Code 1895, art. 976, relating to conspiracies against trade, proof that defendant was an agent without proof that he knew of the conspiracy is insufficient. Hathaway v. State, 36 App. 261, 36 S. W. 465.

When the indictment does not charge defendant as a principal or that he acted for the trust proof of such facts will not support a conviction. Hathaway v. State, 36 App. 261, 36 S. W. 465.

Art. 1472. Persons outside state liable to punishment, when.—If any person shall, outside of this state, do anything which, if done within this state, would constitute the formation of a trust or monopoly or conspiracy in the restraint of trade, as defined in this chapter, and shall cause or permit the trust or monopoly so formed by him to do business within this state, or shall cause or permit such trust, monopoly, or conspiracy in restraint of trade to have any operation or effect within this state, or, if such trust, monopoly or conspiracy in restraint of trade, having been formed outside of said state, any person shall give effect to such trust, monopoly or conspiracy in this state, or he shall do anything to help or aid it doing business in this state, or otherwise violate the anti-trust laws of this state, or if any person shall buy or sell or otherwise make contracts for or aid any business, firm, corporation or association of persons, formed or operated in violation of the provisions of this chapter, or so formed or operated as would be in violation of the laws of this state, if it had been formed within this state, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for a period of not less than two years nor more than ten years. [Id.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 710b.

Art. 1473. Persons, etc., who have formed trusts, etc., penalty for.—If any person or employé or employes, or agent or agents, stockholder or stockholders, officer or officers of any person, firm, association of persons, or corporation, now doing business in this state, who have formed a trust, as defined in this chapter, or formed a monopoly, as defined in this chapter, or has formed a conspiracy in restraint of trade, as defined in this chapter, or shall do or perform any act of any character to carry out such trust, monopoly or conspiracy in restraint of trade, such person, employé or employes, agent or agents, stockholder or stockholders, officer or officers, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than two years nor more than ten years. [Id.; Act 1907, p. 458.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 710b.

See note under 1471, ante.

Art. 1474. Venue for criminal prosecutions under this law.—Criminal prosecutions under this chapter may be conducted in Travis county, Texas, or in any county in this state wherein a trust, monopoly, or conspiracy in restraint of trade is being carried on; a recovery or prosecution against any person for any violation of this act shall not bar a prosecution of or recovery against any other person or persons for the same offense. [Id.]

Art. 1475. District or county attorney may commence prosecution, shall notify attorney general.—Prosecutions under this chapter may be instituted and prosecuted by any county or district attorney of this state; and, when any such prosecutions have been instituted by any county or district attorney, such officer shall forthwith notify the attorney general of such fact; and it is hereby made the duty of the attorney general, when he shall receive such notice, to join such officer in such prosecution and do all in his power to secure the enforcement of this chapter. [Id.]

Art. 1476. Fee of district and county attorney.—For every conviction obtained under the provisions of this chapter, the state shall pay to the county or district attorney in such prosecution the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars; and, if both the county and district attorney shall serve together in such prosecution, such fee shall be divided between them as follows: One hundred dollars to the county attorney and one hundred and fifty dollars to the district attorney. [Id.]

Art. 1477. Agricultural products and live stock in hands of producer exempt.—The provisions of this law shall not apply to agricultural products or live stock while in the hands of the producer or raiser; and it shall be lawful for any and all persons engaged in any kind of work or labor, manual or mental, or both, to associate themselves together and form trades unions and other organizations for the purpose of protecting themselves in their personal work, personal labor, and personal service, in their respective pursuits and employments. [Act 1899, p. 262.]

Art. 1478. Trade unions, etc., exempt when.—And it shall not be held unlawful for any member or members of such trades union or other organization or association, or any other person, to induce or attempt to induce, by peaceable and lawful means, any person to accept any particular employment, or quit or relinquish any particular employment in which such person may then be engaged, or to enter any pursuit, or refuse to enter any pursuit, or quit or relinquish any pursuit, in which such person may then be engaged; provided, that such member or members shall not have the right to invade or trespass upon the premises of another without the consent of the owner thereof. [Id., p. 262.]

Art. 1479. Preceding article not to apply to combination, etc.—The foregoing article shall not be held to apply to any combination or combinations, association or associations of capital, or capital and persons, natural or artificial, formed for the purpose of limiting the production or consumption of labor's products, or for any other purpose in restraint of trade; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be held to interfere with the terms and conditions of private contract with regard to the time of service, or other stipulations between employers and employes; provided, further, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to repeal, affect or diminish the force and effect of any statute now existing on the subject of trusts, conspiracies against trade, pools and monopolies. [Id., p. 262.]

"Public house of amusement" defined and subject to regulations.—All buildings constructed, fitted and equipped for the purpose of theaters, commonly called theaters, opera houses, play-houses, or by whatever name designated, which are and shall hereafter be used for public performances, the production and exhibition of plays, dramas, operas and other shows of whatever nature, to which admission fees are charged, be, and the same are hereby declared to be "public houses of amusement," and the same shall be subject to regulation by the public will as expressed by ordinance, statute, or other law; provided, that owners and lessees shall have the right to assign seats to patrons thereof, and to refuse admission to objectionable characters. [Act 1907, p. 21.]

Explanatory.—This article and the following article were brought into being as an amendment of art. 1164, Rev. St. 1911. As a criminal feature is added by the amendment, the new act is placed in this compilation.

CHAPTER NINE

STATE REVENUE AGENT

Art. 1488.	Appointment of state revenue agent; his duties.	Art. 1490.	Salary of revenue agent; traveling expenses; penalty for making false report.
1489.	Books and records of officers to be submitted to state revenue agent on demand; penalty for		failure to comply with this law.

Article 1488. [989] His duties.—The governor is hereby authorized to appoint a suitable person as revenue agent for the state, for the purpose of securing a better enforcement of the revenue laws of the state. The agent provided for herein shall be known as the state revenue agent. Said revenue agent shall be subject to the direction of the governor, who may, whenever in his judgment the public service demands it, direct the said revenue agent to investigate books and accounts of the assessing and collecting officers of this state, and all officers and persons disbursing, receiving or having in their possession public funds, and to make such other investigations and perform such other duties in the interest of the public revenue as the governor may direct. Whenever any such investigation is ordered by the governor, the revenue agent shall report to him in writing the results of such investigations, and to point out the particulars, if any, wherein the revenue laws have been violated or their enforcement neglected, together with the names of the parties delinquent therein; whereupon the governor shall institute civil and criminal proceedings through the attorney general in the name of the state against such delinquent parties, who are reported by such agent to be delinquent; and it is further provided, that said revenue agent shall have power at any time to examine and check up all and any disbursements or expenditures of money appropriated for any of the state institutions or for any other purpose, or for improvements made by the state on state property, or money received and disbursed by any board authorized by law to receive and disburse any state money. [Act April 13, 1891, § 1, 22d Leg., p. 87.]

Explanatory.—When the above article was carried into the revised Penal Code it had been superseded by Act 1899, p. 26, amending art. 5058, Rev. St. 1895, which article had been made up from the same act from which art. 1488 above was constructed. The amendatory act is set out below, in view of the decisions in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626, and Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505.

Powers and duties of state revenue agent.—The Governor is authorized to appoint a suitable person as Revenue Agent for the State, for the purpose of securing a better enforcement of the revenue laws of the State. The agent provided for herein shall be known as the State Revenue Agent. Said Revenue Agent shall be subject to the directions of the Governor, who may, whenever in his judgment the public service demands it, direct the said Revenue Agent to investigate books and accounts of the assessing and collecting officers of this State, and all officers and persons disbursing, receiving or having in their possession public funds, and to make such other investigations and perform such other duties in the interest of the public revenues as the Governor may direct. Whenever any such investigation is ordered by the Governor, the Revenue Agent shall report to him in writing the results of such investigation, and point out the particulars, if any, wherein the revenue laws have been violated, their enforcement neglected, together with the names of the parties delinquent therein. Whereupon the Governor shall institute civil and criminal proceedings through the Attorney-General in the name of the State against such delinquent parties who are reported by such agent to be delinquent. Said Revenue Agent shall have power at any time to examine and check up all and any disbursements or expenditures of money appropriated for any of the State institutions or for any other purpose or for any improvements made by the State on State property or money received and disbursed by any board authorized by law to receive and disburse any State money. Said Revenue Agent shall also have power and authority, and it is hereby made his duty, to fully investigate any and all State institutions when so directed by the Governor or required by information coming to the knowledge of said agent. He shall investigate the manner of conducting the same and the policy pursued by those in charge thereof, and the conduct or efficiency of any person employed therein by the State. He shall examine into and report upon the character and manner as well as the amount of expenditures thereof. He shall also investigate and ascertain all sums of money due the State from any source whatever; the ascertainment and collection of which does not devolve upon other officers of this State under existing law. And he shall report all such facts to the Governor, who shall proceed therein as provided by this or any other law of this State. [Acts 1891, p. 87. Amended Acts 1899, p. 26.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732a, 732b.

Art. 1489. [990] Books and records of officers to be submitted; penalty.—When said revenue agent, acting under the direction of the governor, calls on any person connected with the public service to inspect his accounts, records or books, said officers or official so called upon shall submit to said agent all books, records and accounts so called for without delay. Any failure or refusal on the part of any officer or official to comply with the provisions of this article shall be an offense, for which, on conviction thereof, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and may be imprisoned in the county jail not more than one year. [Act April 13, 1891, p. 87, § 2.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 215, 732a, 732b.

Art. 1490. [991] Penalty for making false report.—Said revenue agent shall receive as compensation for his services not exceeding two thousand dollars per annum, together with his actual traveling expenses, which shall be paid on the approval of the same by the governor; provided, that said revenue agent shall not be allowed traveling expenses for any service connected with the examination and investigation of the accounts of any institution in Travis county. If the revenue agent herein provided for shall wilfully make a false or fraudulent report of the financial condition of the books of any officer or official, department or institution, handling, receiving or disbursing any state funds, appropriated or unappropriated, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than five hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and imprisoned in the county jail for any period not to exceed twelve months. [Id., § 3.]

GUARANTY AND FIDELITY COMPANIES— REGULATION OF

Articles 1491–1503. [992–1004] [Superseded.]

Explanatory.—The above articles appeared in the revised Penal Code of 1895 as arts. 993–1004. The revisers of 1895 carried the same provisions, with the exception of art. 1000 of the Penal Code, into the Revised Statutes of 1895, as ch. 16 of Title 21 (Arts. 733–744). This title and chapter of the Civil Statutes was repealed by Act 1897, ch. 165, § 13, which act reconstructed and re-enacted the repealed law without any criminal feature therein, the criminal features in the old act being displaced by provisions imposing penalties recoverable in a civil action. The result is that the subject matter of this chapter of the Penal Code was dead and obsolete law when it was carried into the revision of 1911. In view of the decisions in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626, and Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505, the articles of this chapter are omitted from this compilation.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 41, 732c.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Article 1504. Doing business in this state, required to do what.
—Every corporation, company or individual, doing business in this state as a bond investment company, or company to place or sell bonds, certificates or debentures, on the partial payment or installment plan, shall, and the same is hereby required to, deposit with the state treasurer, in cash or securities approved by the state treasurer, the sum of five thousand dollars; and, in addition thereto, they shall be required to deposit semi-annually with the state treasurer in cash or securities to be approved by said officer, ten per cent of all the net premium received, until the sum deposited shall amount to the sum of one hundred thousand dollars. [Act 1897, p. 118.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 42.

Art. 1505. Failure to comply with this law, charter forfeited.—If any such company, being a domestic corporation, shall fail, for sixty days after the organization of such company, to make with the state treasurer the deposit required by this chapter, it shall be considered to have forfeited its charter; and the attorney general shall, immediately upon receiving information thereof, bring suit in the name of the state, in the district court of Travis county, to have such charter or certificate of incorporation declared forfeited and of no effect; and said court shall declare such charter forfeited, and appoint a receiver for such company, whose duty it shall be, under the order of the court, to distribute to the shareholders the assets of the company. The court shall, out of the assets of the company, make such allowance for compensation for the receiver as shall be equitable and just. [Id., p. 118.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 42.

Art. 1506. Officer, agent, etc., of any such company transacting business in violation of this law, penalty.—If any officer, agent, or representative of any such company or companies, whether they be foreign or domestic corporations, shall attempt to place or sell shares, or to transact any business whatsoever in the name or on behalf of such company or companies, while they fail or refuse to comply with the provisions of this chapter, said officer, agent or representative shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars for each offense, or be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than thirty days nor more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., p. 118.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 42.

CHAPTER TWELVE

PRIZE FIGHTING, ROPING CONTESTS, ETC.

Art. 1507. Pugilistic encounters prohibited; penalty.	Art. 1510. Matching any cock fight, etc., penalty.
1508. "Pugilistic encounter" defined.	1511. Engaging in roping contest, pen- alty.
1509. Exhibition of prize fights by means of moving pictures pro- hibited.

Article 1507. [1005] Pugilistic encounters prohibited; penalty.—Any person who shall voluntarily engage in a pugilistic encounter between man and man, or a fight between a man and a bull, or any other animal, for money or other thing of value, or for any championship, or upon the result of which any money or anything of value is bet or wagered, or to see which any admission fee is charged, either directly or indirectly, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act of Oct. 3, 1895, S. S.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 237, 732d, 732e.

Art. 1508. [1005a] "Pugilistic encounter" defined.—By the term, "pugilistic encounter," as used in this act, is meant any voluntary fight or personal encounter by blows by means of the fists or otherwise, whether with or without gloves, between two or more men for money, or for a prize of any character, or for any other thing of value, or for any championship, or upon the result of which any money or anything of value is bet or wagered. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732d, 732e.

Art. 1509. [1005b] Exhibition of prize fights by means of moving pictures prohibited.—It shall be unlawful for any person, association, corporation, or any agent or employé of any person, association, corporation or receiver, partnership or firm, to give or present to the public an exhibition of prize fights or glove contests, or of any obscene, indecent or immoral picture of any character whatsoever, by means of moving picture films, bioscopes, viti-scopes, magic lanterns, or other device or devices in moving picture shows, theaters, or any other place whatsoever.

Any person or persons, association, or any agent or employé of any person, association, corporation or receiver violating any of the provisions of this act shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than ten nor more than sixty days, or both, in the discretion of the court or jury, and each day's violation of any of the provisions of this article shall constitute and be punishable as a separate offense. [Act S. S. 1910, p. 21.]

Former acts.—Act 1889 imposes an occupation tax of $500 on prize fights. Act March 23, 1891, prohibits prize fighting, and makes it a felony punishable by fine and imprisonment. Held, that the act of 1891 repealed so much of the act of 1889 as permitted an occupation tax to be charged on prize fights, and that a conviction under the act of 1889 for engaging in a prize fight without obtaining a license could not be sustained. Sullivan v. State, 32 App. 50, 22 S. W. 44.

Act 1895, prohibiting "prize fighting and pugilism," and "fights between men and animals," does not violate Const. art. 3, § 35, prohibiting any bill from containing more than one subject. McMeans v. Finley, 32 S. W. 524, 88 Tex. 515.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732d, 732e.

Art. 1510. Matching any cock fight, etc., penalty.—Any person who shall match, or be concerned in matching, any cock fight, or who shall match, or be concerned in matching or causing, a fight between any animals or fowls, or who shall keep, or be concerned in keeping, any cock pit or other place for the purpose of matching fights between cocks, or any other animals or fowls, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. Each day such cock pit or other place, as aforesaid, shall be kept shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1907, p. 156.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732i.

Art. 1511. Engaging in roping contest, penalty.—Any person who shall engage in a roping contest, with other persons or alone, in which cattle or other animals are roped as a test or trial of the skill of the person or persons engaged in such roping contest, for money or prize of any character, or for any championship, for anything of value, or upon the result of which any money or anything of value is bet or wagered, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars; and each animal roped, or attempted to be roped, shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1905, p. 69.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 730.

[Act April 28, 1891, § 9.]

Effect of statute as to validity of certificate and contract.—Under this article and Rev. Explanatory.—At the time the above article was placed in the revised Penal Code of 1911, the act from which it was taken had been superseded by Act 1905, ch. 124, § 124a. The superseding act is placed in this compilation, and is set out below, in view of the decision in Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505:

Selling or giving away or accepting or using prior to examination, questions propounded by superintendent of public instruction.—

That any person or persons who shall sell, barter or give away, prior to any forthcoming examination, to applicants for teachers' certificates or to any other person, the questions prepared by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to be used by the county summer normal or any other boards of examiners in the examination of teachers at said forthcoming examination, or any person or persons who shall accept or otherwise obtain possession of such questions or the answers thereto, prior to any such examination, or any person or persons who shall use the same fraudulently at the time of such examination, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars and not more than five hundred dollars, and in addition thereto shall be imprisoned in the county jail for any number of days not less than twenty and not more than sixty. [Act 1903, 1st S. S., p. 23; Act 1905, ch. 124; Act 1907, p. 454; Act 1911, 1st S. S., p. 95, ch. 11, § 23.]

Art. 1513b. Trustee or teacher receiving commission or rebate on text books.—No trustee or teacher shall ever receive any commission or rebate on any books used in the schools with which he is concerned as such trustee or teacher, and if any such trustee or teacher shall receive or accept any such commission or rebate he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction he shall be fined not less than fifty dollars and not more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1911, 1st S. S., p. 96, ch. 11, § 24.]

Art. 1513c. Influencing or attempting to influence adoption of text books.—Any person not the author or publisher or the bona fide permanent and regular employé of such publisher who shall appear before such Text Book Board in behalf of any book submitted to the Text Book Board for adoption, or seek to influence the members thereof, or any author, publisher, bona fide permanent and regular employé of such publisher who seeks to influence the said Text Book Board in the selection or adoption of any text book by appealing to the members of said board separately, or at any other time than when the board is in regular session, or in any way violating Section I of this Act [art. 2909a, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and shall be confined in the county jail for not less than thirty days and not more than ninety days. [Id., § 24a.]

Art. 1513d. Receiving greater price for supplementary text books than that approved by state superintendent.—When the supplementary books other than those selected by the Text Book Board are used, they shall be furnished at prices fixed by the trustees of the school in which they are used and approved by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction; and, if any teacher or trustee shall knowingly and directly or indirectly receive from any pupil a greater price therefor than the price fixed, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., § 25.]

Art. 1513e. Loitering on school grounds.—It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to loiter or loaf upon any public school grounds in this state, during the session of such school, after being warned by the person in charge of such school to leave such grounds; and such person or persons so found shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction therefor, shall be fined in any sum not less than five and not to exceed twenty-five dollars. [Act 1897, ch. 164, § 11; Act 1903, 1st S. S., ch. 12, § 12; Act 1907, p. 452; Act 29th Leg., ch. 124.]

Explanatory.—This article constituted a part of art. 1514 of the revised penal code. The rest of the article was superseded by ch. 11 of the First Called Session of the 32nd legislature, and appears in this compilation as arts. 1513a–1513d, ante. This article is numbered 1513e for the reason that there were two articles bearing that number in the revised penal code.

Loitering on school grounds.—The term “school grounds,” as used in this article, is sufficiently broad to apply to acts done inside the building on the grounds, as well as on the grounds outside the building. King v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 675.

That an information charging defendant with causing a minor, in violation of article 37, to loiter on school grounds, in violation of article 1514, did not allege the way in which he caused the offense to be committed did not render it defective; it not being necessary that an information allege the evidence. King v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 675.

Where a boy, after being expelled from school and told not to return, enters the school-room and refuses to go home, though commanded to do so by the teacher, this constitutes “loitering,” within article 1514. King v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 675.

Where, in a prosecution for inciting a minor, in violation of article 37, to loiter on school grounds, in violation of article 1514, after he had been expelled, defendant admitted that he knew of such expulsion, the court properly refused to instruct that, even though the minor had been expelled, defendant would not be guilty unless he knew of such fact. King v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 675.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of instigating a minor, in violation of article 37, to loiter on school grounds, in violation of article 1514. King v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 675.

The title of Acts 29th Leg. c. 124, reading in part “An act to provide for a more efficient system of public free schools,” sufficiently covers section 79, which makes it unlawful for any person to loiter on public school grounds, to comply with Const. art. 3, § 35, requiring that the subject of a statute be expressed in its title. King v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 675.

Indictment.—Willson’s Cr. Forms, 561, 723–725.

Art. 1513f. Employment of children of school age.—No child under fourteen years of age not lawfully excused from attendance upon school shall be employed by any one during the school hours in any occupation during the period which the child is required to be in school, as provided by this Act. Any person, firm or corporation found guilty of employing any child or any person inducing any child to remain out of school who is subject to the provisions of this Act shall be fined not to exceed ten dollars for each offense, and each day that said child is employed after due notice given by any school official that said child can not be legally employed shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1915, p. 94, ch. 49, § 5.]

Art. 1513ff. Attendance requirements and provisions.—Every child in this State who is eight years and not more than fourteen years old shall be required to attend the public schools in the district of its residence, or in some other district to which it may be transferred, as provided by law, for a period of not less than sixty days for the scholastic year, beginning September 1, 1916, and for a period of not less than eighty days for the scholastic years beginning September 1, 1917, and for the scholastic year 1918–19, and each scholastic year thereafter a minimum attendance of 100 days shall be required. The period of compulsory school attendance at each school shall begin at the opening of the school term unless otherwise authorized by the district school trustees and notice given by the trustees prior to the beginning of such school term; provided, that no child shall be required to attend school for a longer period than the maximum term of the public school in the district where such child resides. [Id., § 1.]

Art. 1513fff. Exemptions.—The following classes of children are exempt from the requirements of this Act:

(a) Any child in attendance upon a private or parochial school or who is being properly instructed by a private tutor.

(b) Any child whose bodily or mental condition is such as to render attendance inadvisable, and who holds definite certificate of a reputable physician specifying this condition and covering the period of absence.

(c) Any child who is blind, deaf, dumb or feeble-minded, for the instruction of whom no adequate provision has been made by the school district.

(d) Any child living more than two and one-half miles by direct and traveled road from the nearest public school supported for children of the same race and color of such child, and with no free transportation provided.

(e) Any child more than twelve years of age who has satisfactorily completed the work of the fourth grade of a standard elementary school of seven grades, and whose services are needed in support of a parent or other person standing in parental relation to the child, may, on presentation of proper evidence to the County Superintendent of Public Instruction, be exempted from further attendance at school. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1513g. Duties of parent or guardian.—If any parent or person standing in parental relation to a child within the compulsory school attendance ages who is not properly excused from attendance upon school for some one or more of the exemptions provided in Section 2 of this Act [art. 1513fff] fails to require such child to attend school regularly for such period as is required in Section 1 [art. 1513ff] hereof, it shall be the duty of the attendance officer who has jurisdiction in the territory where said parent or person standing in parental relation resides, to warn such parent or person standing in parental relation, that the provisions of this Act must be immediately complied with, and upon failure of said parent or persons standing in parental relation to immediately comply with the provisions of this Act after such warning has been given, the official discharging the duties of the attendance officer shall forthwith file complaint against such parent or person standing in parental relation to said child, which complaint shall be filed in the County Court, or in the Justice Court in the precinct where such parent or guardian resides, and shall diligently prosecute same to its conclusion. Any parent or other person standing in parental relation upon conviction for failure to comply with the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined for the first offense five dollars, and for the second offense ten dollars, and for each subsequent offense twenty-five dollars. Each day that said child remains out of school after said warning has been given or after said child has been ordered in school by the juvenile court, may constitute a separate offense; provided, however, that if any parent or person standing in parental relation to any child within the compulsory school attendance ages shall present proofs that he or she is unable to compel such child to attend school, said person in parental relation shall be exempt from the above penalties as regards the non-attendance of such child, and such child may be proceeded against as an habitual truant and be subject to commitment to the State Juvenile Training School or any other suitable school agreed upon between the parent or the guardian of said child and the judge of the juvenile court. All fines collected under the provisions of this Act shall be paid into the available school fund of the common school district or of the independent school district in which the person fined resides, as the case may be. [Id., § 9.]

If any railroad shall refuse to permit the commissioners, or either of them, or any person authorized thereto, to examine its books and papers, such railroad company shall, for each offense, pay to the state of Texas not less than one hundred and twenty-five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for each day it shall so fail or refuse; provided, that any person other than one of said commissioners who shall make any such demands shall produce his authority, under the hand and seal of said commission, to make such inspection. Art. 1514a. Penalty for refusal to exhibit books or papers.—Any officer, agent or employé of any railroad company who shall, upon proper demand, fail or refuse to exhibit to the commissioners, or either of them, or any person authorized to investigate the same, any book or paper of such railroad company, which is in the possession or under the control of such officer, agent or employé, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction in any court having jurisdiction thereof, shall be fined for each offense a sum not less than one hundred and twenty-five dollars and not to exceed five hundred dollars. Art. 1515a. Penalty for refusal to answer and fill out blanks.—2. If any officer or employé of a railroad company shall fail or refuse to fill out and return any blanks, as above required, or fail or refuse to answer any question therein propounded, or give a false answer to any such question, where the fact inquired of is within his knowledge, or shall evade the answer to any such question, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof, be fined for each day he shall fail to perform such duty, after the expiration of the time aforesaid, a penalty of five hundred dollars; and the commission shall cause a prosecution therefor in the proper court; and a penalty of like amount shall be recovered from the company when it appears that such person acted in obedience to its direction, permission or request in his failure, evasion or refusal. Said commission shall have the power to prescribe a system of bookkeeping, to be observed by all the railroads subject hereto, under the penalties prescribed in this article. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 1516. [1009] Punishment for false billing, classification, weight, etc.—Any officer or agent of any railroad subject to this law who, by means of false billing, false classification, false weight, or by any other device, shall suffer or permit any person or persons to obtain transportation for property, at less than the regular rates then in force on such railroad, or who, by means of false billing, false classification, false weighing, or by any device whatever, shall charge any person, firm or corporation more for the transportation of property than the regular rates, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, fined in a sum of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars. [Id., § 16.]

Indictment—Willson's Cr. Forms, 560.

Art. 1517. "Unjust discrimination" defined, penalty for.—If any officer, agent, clerk, servant or employé, or any receiver, or his servant, agent or employé of any railroad company in this state shall, directly or indirectly, or by any special rate, rebate, drawback, or other device, for, and on behalf of, such railroad company, knowingly charge, demand, contract for, collect or receive from any person, firm or corporation a greater or less compensation for any service rendered, or to be rendered, by any such railroad company in this state than such railroad company, or its said officers, agents, clerks, servants or employés, or receiver thereof, charges, demands, contracts for, collects or receives from any other person, firm or corporation for doing a like and contemporaneous service, or if any officer, agent, clerk, servant or employé, or receiver, or his agents, servants or employés, of any railroad company in this state, who shall, for, and on behalf of, such railroad company, make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or any advantage to any particular person, company, firm, corporation or locality, as to any service rendered, or to be rendered or performed, by such railroad company, or to subject any particular description of traffic on such railroad company to any undue or unreasonable prejudice, delay or disadvantage in any respect whatever, such officer, clerk, servant or employé, or receiver, his agents, servants or employés of such railroad company, shall be deemed guilty of unjust discrimination within the meaning of this chapter, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for not less than two nor more than five years. [Act 1899, p. 203.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 53, 54.

Art. 1518. Not applicable, when.—Nothing herein shall prevent the carriage, storage or handling, by railroad companies in this state, or by their agents, officers, clerks, servants and employés, of freight free or at reduced rates, or to prevent railroads, their agents and employés and officers, from giving free transportation or freight rates to any railroad officers, agents, employés, attorneys, stockholders or directors, or to any other officer or person, when permitted by chapter 16 of this title, article 1533.

Art. 1519. Persons subpoenaed and compelled to testify as to violations of this law exempt from prosecution; evidence on which conviction may be had.—Any court, officer or tribunal, having jurisdiction of the offense mentioned in this chapter, or any district or county attorney, may subpoena persons and compel their attendance as witnesses to testify as to the violations of this chapter; and any person so summoned and examined shall not be liable to prosecution for any violation of this law about which he may testify; and for any offense by reason of violations of this chapter, a conviction may be had upon the unsupported evidence of an accomplice or participant. [Id., p. 203.]

Art. 1520. District judge to specially charge grand jury.—It shall be the duty of every district judge in this state, in whose court a grand jury shall be impaneled, to charge said grand jury, whenever organized, to thoroughly investigate with reference to violations of this chapter. Art. 1521. [1009a] Railroad official making false statement to secure registration of bond.—Each and every railroad director, president, secretary or other official who shall knowingly make any false statement upon which to secure the registration of any bond or other evidence of debt, as required by the law regulating the issuance of stocks and bonds, or who shall, by false statement knowingly made, procure of the railroad commission direction to the secretary of state to register the same, and which shall be, by the secretary of state, registered, or shall, with knowledge of such fraud, negotiate or cause to be negotiated, any such bond or other security issued in violation of said chapter, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by confinement at hard labor in the state penitentiary for a term of years not less than two nor more than fifteen, and shall likewise be liable to any creditor of such company for the full amount of damages sustained by such wrongful conduct. Venue in such cases shall be in either of the district courts held in Travis county, or in the county where the principal office of the railway company whose property is sought to be so incumbered or affected is located. [Act 1893, p. 59.]

Art. 1521a. Penalty not otherwise provided.—If any railway company doing business in this state shall hereafter violate any other provision of this chapter, or shall do any other act herein prohibited, or shall fail or refuse to perform any other duty enjoined upon it for which a penalty has not been provided by law, or shall fail, neglect or refuse to obey any lawful requirement, order, judgment or decree made by the railroad commission of Texas, for every such act of violation it shall pay to the state of Texas a penalty of not more than five thousand dollars. [Id., sec. 18. Amended Acts 1901, p. 265.]

See Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Young (Civ. App.) 137 S. W. 380.

Explanatory.—The above provision was not included in the revised Penal Code, 1911, and is placed in this compilation, in view of the decision in Berry v. State, 156 S. W. 626, for the reason that it seems to state a general criminal penalty for violation of the orders of the Railroad Commission. In this respect it seems to give effect to art. 1522, post. That article, as it now stands, and as it stood in the revised Penal Code, seems to be lacking in vital force (there being nothing in the revised Penal Code indicating the penalty spoken of but not defined), unless it can be attached to the above general provision. On the assumption that this view is correct the publishers have added a number of acts similar to that embraced in art. 1522, some of which antedate the revision and were not included therein. The acts added, in this connection, will be found below as arts. 1521b, 1522a-1522f.

Art. 1521b. Duty to provide suitable freight and passenger depots.—It shall be the duty of all railroad companies in this state to provide and maintain adequate, comfortable and clean depots and depot buildings at their several stations for the accommodation of passengers, and to keep said depot buildings well lighted and warmed for the comfort and accommodation of the traveling public; provided, further, that said railroad companies shall keep and maintain separate apartments in such depot buildings for the use of white passengers and negro passengers, and to keep and maintain adequate and suitable freight depots and buildings for the receiving, handling, storing and delivering of all freights handled by such roads. [Act 1909, 2d S. S., p. 401, ch. 13, § 1.]

Explanatory.—This provision was omitted from the revision of 1911, and is added to this compilation. See note under art. 1521a.

Art. 1521c. Commission to require compliance.—Power is hereby conferred upon the railroad commission of Texas to require compliance by railroad companies with the provisions of this act under such regulations as said commission may deem reasonable, and all railroad companies shall be subject to the penalties prescribed by law for failure to comply with such requirements. [Id., § 2.]

Compelling erection of depot.—The railroad commission has the power to compel a railroad company to erect depot buildings, not only at places designated by itself as stations but at places of starting, when the nearest station from the starting point is about ten miles distant, although just across the state line in another state are station buildings on the line as it extends through the latter state. Railroad Commission v. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co., 102 Tex. 393, 117 S. W. 795. But the commission cannot exercise power to require a railway company to erect and maintain depots at places selected arbitrarily and in disregard of public necessity. An order of the railroad commission directing the railroad company to establish a station in the state of Texas within a few hundred feet of an established station in Oklahoma, held unreasonable. Railroad Commission of Texas v. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 114 S. W. 192. The commission is entitled to enforce an order for the construction of a passenger and freight station at a particular town located on state line. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. v. Railroad Commission of Texas, 56 Civ. App. 422, 120 S. W. 1055.

Art. 1522. Railroad commission may require construction of union passenger depots.—Where two or more railroad companies reach the same city or town in this state, it shall be the duty of the railroad commission of Texas to ascertain whether it is practicable and feasible for such railroad companies to use a joint or union passenger depot; and, if the railroad commission finds, upon investigation, that it is practicable for such railroad companies to join in the construction and use of a passenger depot, then it shall give notice to said railroad companies, and, after investigation and public hearing, may require the construction and maintenance of such union passenger depot by the railroad companies entering any such city or town, provided, that it shall appear to the railroad commission that the construction and maintenance of such joint or union passenger depot are just and reasonable to the railroad companies involved, and demanded by the public interest. The railroad commission may specify the requirements of such union depot as to kind and character; and said railroad commission may apportion the cost of constructing and maintaining the same to each railroad company, in cases where the interested railroad companies can not themselves agree.

Failure upon the part of any railroad company to observe and obey the orders of the railroad commission, issued in compliance with this article, shall subject such railroad company to the fines and penalties prescribed by law for failure to obey the lawful requirements, orders, judgments and decrees made by the railroad commission of Texas. [Act 1909, p. 399.]

See art. 1521a, and note thereunder.

Art. 1522a. Construction of switch tracks and furnishing of facilities.—Any railroad company or receiver thereof upon application of any shipper tendering traffic for transportation, shall construct, maintain and operate upon reasonable terms, a switch connection with any such private sidetrack or spur track which has been or shall hereafter be constructed by any such shipper, to connect with its railroad where such connection is reasonably practicable and can be put in with safety and will furnish sufficient business to justify the construction and maintenance of the same; and shall furnish cars for the movement of such traffic to the best of its ability without discrimination in favor of or against such shipper. [Act 1915, p. 66, ch. 35, § 1.]

See art. 1521a, and note thereunder.

Art. 1522b. Same; penalty.—If any railroad company or receiver thereof shall fail to install and operate any such switch connection as aforesaid, on application therefor by any shipper, such shipper may make application to the Railroad Commission of Texas, and said commission shall be authorized and empowered to enter such orders as may be necessary governing the construction, maintenance and operation of said switch connection with said private sidetrack or spur track, where such connection is reasonably practicable, and can be put in with safety and will furnish sufficient business to justify the construction and maintenance of the same. [Id., § 2.]

See art. 1521a, and note thereunder.

Art. 1522c. Same; rates; discrimination.—The Railroad Commission of Texas shall fix just and reasonable rates to be charged by railroad companies or receivers thereof for traffic moved and handled over such private sidetracks or spur tracks extending to private industries, and it shall be the duty of the Railroad Commission to adopt such rates, rules, and regulations as will prevent any discrimination in the operation of such tracks or the handling of such traffic. Whenever any railway company or receiver thereof shall operate any private sidetrack or spur track without charge, the Railroad Commission of Texas shall have power and authority to compel the operation without charge of and private sidetrack or spur track similarly situated. [Id., § 3.]

See art. 1521a, and note.

Art. 1522d. Same; Railroad Commission to prescribe rates and make regulations.—The Railroad Commission of Texas shall prescribe reasonable rates, rules and regulations for the operation of all private sidetracks or spur tracks as may already have been or may hereafter be constructed either by the railroad companies themselves or by individuals or corporate interests, or jointly by such railroads and individuals or corporations, when such private sidetracks or spur tracks are operated by railroad companies or the receivers thereof; and shall have power and authority to order and compel the operation of said private sidetracks or spur tracks whenever the railway company or receiver thereof is operating other private sidetracks or spur tracks similarly situated, and to prevent discrimination therein. [Id., § 4.]

See art. 1521a, and note.

Art. 1522e. Same; power of Railroad Commission to prevent discrimination.—Whenever any railroad company or receiver thereof shall hereafter construct or maintain or contribute to the construction or maintenance of any private sidetrack or spur track to any private industry, the Railroad Commission shall have power to order such railway company or receiver to construct or maintain or contribute to the construction or maintenance of a sidetrack or spur track to any private industry similarly situated, on the same terms and conditions. [Id., § 5.]

See art. 1521a, and note.

Art. 1522f. Same; penalty.—Failure upon the part of any railroad company or receiver thereof to observe and obey the orders of the Railway Commission issued in compliance with this Act, shall subject such railroad company to the fines and penalties prescribed by law for failure to obey the lawful requirements, orders, judgments and decrees of the Railroad Commission. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 1522g. Maintenance of roadbed and track.—The Railroad Commission of Texas shall have authority and it is hereby made its duty to see that each and every railroad corporation owning or operating a line of railroad in this State shall maintain its roadbed and track in such condition as to enable it to perform all of its duties as a common carrier with reasonable safety to persons and property carried by it and its employes and with reasonable dispatch.

The Railroad Commission of Texas shall be vested with full power to require of any such railroad company to purchase or secure for installation in its roadbed or track all such ties, rails, ballast and other materials and equipment as may, in the judgment of the Railroad Commission of Texas, be necessary for the proper maintenance of such track and roadbed so as to enable such railroad corporation to adequately perform its duties to the public and to transport freight and passengers with safety thereunto and without delay.

The Railroad Commission of Texas is hereby empowered to require any such railroad company to acquire and install in the whole of such track or roadbed, or any portion thereof that may be designated by the Railroad Commission of Texas, such ties, rails, ballast and other materials as may, in the judgment of the Railroad Commission, be adequate and sufficient to place such track or roadbed in safe condition. [Act 1915, p. 201, ch. 129, § 1.]

See art. 1521a, and note thereunder.

Art. 1522h. Same; penalty.—When the Railroad Commission of Texas shall have made any such order as authorized by Section 1 of this Act [art. 1522g], it shall be the duty of any such railroad company or receiver subject thereto, to promptly comply with the terms thereof, and for failure or refusal to do so, such company or receiver shall become liable to the State of Texas, “as in other cases of failure to comply with orders of the Railroad Commission as provided by law.” In addition to such penalties, any court of competent jurisdiction shall have the power to, and it shall be its duty to, issue writs of mandamus and mandatory injunctions and other proper writs to compel the compliance with such orders. [Id., § 2.]

See art. 1521a, and note thereunder.

Art. 1522i. Trains to be regular, and notice to be given.—Every such corporation shall start and run their cars for the transportation of passengers and property at regular times to be fixed by public notice, and shall furnish sufficient accommodations for the transportation of all such passengers and property as shall, with a reasonable time previous thereto, offer or be offered for transportation at the place of starting and at junctions of other roads and at sidings and stopping places established for receiving and discharging way passengers and freights, and shall take, transport and discharge such passengers and property at, from, and to such places, on the due payment of the tolls, freight or fare legally authorized therefor. Failure on the part of railroad companies to comply with the requirements of this article shall be deemed an abuse of their rights and privileges and subject to regulation and correction by the railroad commission. [P. D. 4893. Amended Act 1903, 1st S. S., p. 21, ch. 11, § 1.]

Right to fix schedules.—See art. 6543, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

A railroad has the right to adopt reasonable regulations with reference to the time of starting and running its trains for the transportation of passengers, the time to be fixed by public notice, and shall take passengers from and to places named. Where a party insists in traveling on the trains, after the schedule has been published, to a point where he is informed the train will not stop, he cannot recover damages for being carried beyond that point. Beauchamp v. Railway Co., 56 Tex. 239; Railway Co. v. White, 4 Willson, Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 260, 17 S. W. 419.

Rights of and duties towards passengers.—See Carriers, Title 20, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

That a belated train arrived earlier than had been represented by the defendant's station agent to plaintiff prior to plaintiff's leaving the depot for breakfast held insufficient to raise an inference of negligence from the agent's failure to delay the train, that plaintiff might take passage thereon. Southern Kansas Ry. Co. of Texas v. Emmett (Civ. App.) 139 S. W. 44.

Delay in transporting freight.—See notes under art. 6610, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

This article provides also for the transportation of property at regular times, and it is held that the shipper who is ready to pay freight can recover damages resulting from delay in transporting freight. Railway Co. v. Schmidt (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 452.

Prepayment of freight and other conditions.—Under this article and art. 6554, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, making railroads liable for refusal to so transport, etc., a complaint in an action for wrongful delay in transportation, alleging that the freight charges were "paid or agreed to be paid when the shipment was tendered," did not sufficiently allege a payment. Dorrance & Co. v. International & G. N. R. Co., 103 Tex. 200, 125 S. W. 561.

Under this article and art. 6554, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, providing that on refusal so to transport any property, or to deliver the same at the regularly appointed time, the railroad shall pay to the party aggrieved all damages sustained thereby, with costs of suit, etc. Held, that the words on "the refusal," etc., "so to take," etc., refer to this article and mean in case of the refusal to take under the conditions prescribed in this article. Id.

This article does not contemplate a prepayment of the freight, and hence there was a payment when, on the making out of the bill of lading, a draft was given the railroad for the freight, and was forwarded with the bill of lading and paid on presentation. Id.

Where a carrier did not require prepayment of freight charges as authorized by this article, it waived such prepayment, so that failure to prepay was not a defense to an action under art. 6554, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, imposing a penalty for delay in transportation. Texas Cent. R. Co. v. Hannay-Frerichs & Co., 104 Tex. 603, 142 S. W. 1163.

Liability for freight charges.—In the absence of an agreement to the contrary, a consignor is generally responsible for the freight charges. Keeling & Field v. Walter Connally & Co. (Civ. App.) 157 S. W. 232.

Actions for failure to transport.—See notes under art. 6554, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 1522j. To build sidings, etc., when.—All railroads in Texas shall be required to build sidings and spur tracks sufficient to handle the business tendered such railroads, when ordered to do so by the railroad commission, as hereinafter provided. [Act 1903, p. 93, ch. 68, § 1.]

Explanatory.—The above provision was omitted from the revision of 1911, and is included in this compilation. See art. 1521a, and note thereunder.

When and where switches, etc., can be required.—This law confers power upon the railroad commission to require the construction of sidings and spur tracks for public uses only, and free from discrimination in favor of any particular individual. The commission exceeds its authority when it undertakes to compel a railroad company to construct a side track for the preferential use of a lumber company. Railroad Commission v. St. L. S. W. Ry. Co., 35 Civ. App. 52, 80 S. W. 102, 103, 104.

The language "the business tendered such railroads" refers to freight and passengers which come to the railroad from the public for transportation as a public highway. It was not intended to require railroad companies to construct "switches and spur tracks" away from their lines to accommodate individual interests. Ry. Com. v. St. L. S. W. Ry. Co., 98 Tex. 67, 80 S. W. 1141.

Validity of special contract.—A contract between a railroad company and a mill owner for the construction of a side track and switch, in consideration of the latter releasing the company from liability, held to show on its face a sufficient consideration, so as to prevent determination of the issue by the court ex parte. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Carter, 95 Tex. 461, 68 S. W. 159.

A contract between a railroad company and a mill owner for the construction of a side track and switch, in consideration of the latter releasing the company from liability, held not void as against public policy. Id.

A contract by a railroad section foreman to procure a switch track at a specified place in consideration for a conveyance of land held not to be void as against public policy. Wright v. Riley (Civ. App.) 118 S. W. 1134.

Use of spur track.—Where a lumber company and a railroad construct a spur track from the former's premises to the latter's line, the former has no right to authorize a use of the spur by another railroad. Texarkana & Ft. S. Ry. Co. v. Texas & N. O. R. Co., 28 Civ. App. 551, 67 S. W. 525.

Art. 1522k, l. Commission to enforce compliance.—Power is conferred on the railroad commission of Texas to require compliance by railroad companies with the provisions of Section 1 of this Act [art. 1522j,] under such regulations as said commission may deem reasonable; and all railroad companies shall be subject to the penalties prescribed by law for failure to comply with the requirements of the railroad commission as provided herein. [Act 1903, p. 93, ch. 68, § 2.]

See notes under preceding article.

Art. 1522m. Powers of commission over other subjects.—Power and authority are hereby conferred upon the Railroad Commission of Texas over all public wharves, docks and piers and all elevators, warehouses, sheds, tracks and other property used in connection therewith in the State of Texas, and over all suburban, belt and terminal railroads in said State, and over all persons, associations and corporations, private or municipal, owning or operating any such railroad, wharf, dock, pier, elevator, warehouse, shed, track, or other property, and it is hereby made the duty of the said Railroad Commission to fix and adopt all necessary rates, charges and regulations, to govern and regulate said persons, associations and corporations, and to correct abuses and prevent unjust discriminations in the rates, charges and tolls of said persons, associations and corporations, and to fix divisions of rates, charges and regulations between same and railroads and all other common carriers, under the control of the Railroad Commission where a division is proper, and to correct and prevent any and all other abuses in the conduct of their business. [Act 1911, p. 157, ch. 86, § 1.]

Art. 1522n. Same; charging greater rates than those prescribed by commission.—If any person, association or corporation subject to the provisions of this Act, shall demand or receive a greater compensation for any service rendered or to be rendered than that fixed and established by the said Railroad Commission then, and in every such case, such person, association or corporation shall be deemed guilty of extortion and shall forfeit and pay to the State of Texas, a sum not to exceed five hundred dollars for each offense; provided, that if it shall appear that such violation was not wilful, said person, association or corporation shall have ten days to refund such overcharges or damages, in which case the penalty shall not be incurred, and the said Commission shall have authority and it shall be its duty to sue for and recover the same in the same manner as may be prescribed by law for like suits against railroad companies. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1522o. Same; discrimination.—If any person, association or corporation subject to the provisions of this Act shall by any special rate, rebate, drawback or other device, or in any manner directly or indirectly charge, demand, collect or receive from any other person, association or corporation a greater or less compensation for any service rendered, or to be rendered, by it than it charges, demands, collects or receives from any other person, association or corporation for doing a like and contemporaneous service, or if any such person, association or corporation shall make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any other person, association or corporation, or to any locality, or shall subject any particular description of traffic to any undue or unreasonable prejudice, delay or disadvantage, then and in any such case the person, association or corporation thus offending shall forfeit and pay to the State of Texas a sum not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) for each and every offense. [Id., § 3.]

Article 1523. [1010] 1. Railroad to provide separate coaches for white and negro passengers.—Every railway company, street car company and interurban railway company, lessee, manager, or receiver thereof, doing business in this state, as a common carrier of passengers for hire, shall provide separate coaches or compartments, as hereinafter provided, for the accommodation of white and negro passengers, which separate coaches or compartments shall be equal in all points of comfort and convenience. [Act 22d Leg., ch. 41, § 1, pp. 44 and 165; amended Act 1907, p. 58.]

2. "Negro" defined.—The term "negro" used herein includes every person of African descent as defined by the statutes of this state. [Id. § 2; amended Act 1907, p. 58.]

3. "Compartment" defined, etc.; lettering on coach.—Each compartment of a railroad coach, divided by good and substantial wooden partitions, with a door therein, shall be deemed a separate coach within the meaning of this law, and each separate coach shall bear in some conspicuous place appropriate words in plain letters indicating the race for which it is set apart; and each compartment of the street car or interurban car divided by board or marker placed in a conspicuous place, bearing appropriate words in plain letters, indicating the race for which it is set apart, shall be sufficient as a separate compartment within the meaning of this law. [Id., § 3; amended, Act 1907 p. 58.]

4. Penalty for failure to provide, etc.—Any railway company, street car company or interurban railroad company, lessee, manager or receiver thereof, which shall fail to provide its cars bearing passengers with separate coaches or compartments, as above provided for, shall be liable for each and every failure to a penalty not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, to be recovered by suit in the name of the state in any court of competent jurisdiction; and each trip run with such train or street car or interurban car without such separate coach or compartment shall be deemed a separate offense. [Id., § 4; amended Act 1907, p. 59.]

5. Passenger riding in coach not for his race; penalty.—If any passenger upon a train or street car or interurban car, provided with separate coaches or compartments, as above provided, shall ride in any coach or compartment, not designated for his race, after having been forbidden to do so by the conductor in charge of the train, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than five nor more than twenty-five dollars. [Id., § 5; amended Act 1907, p. 59.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 557.

6. Does not apply, wherein.—The provisions of this law shall not be so construed as to prohibit nurses from traveling in any coach or compartment with their employer, or employes, upon the train of cars in the discharge of their duty, nor shall it be construed to apply to such freight trains as carry passengers in cabooses; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent railroad companies in this state from hauling sleeping cars, dining or cafe cars or chair cars attached to their trains, to be used exclusively by either white or negro passengers, separately, but not jointly. [Amended by Act 22d Leg., ch. 103, § 4; amended, Act 1907, p. 59.]

7. Law to be posted, where.—Every railroad company carrying passengers in this state shall keep this law posted in a conspicuous place in each passenger depot and in each passenger coach provided in this law. [Act 22d Leg., ch. 41, § 7; amended Act 1907, p. 59.]

8. Does not apply to excursion trains.—The provisions of this law shall not apply to any excursion train, or street car, or interurban car, as such, for the benefit of either race. [Id., § 8; amended Act 1907, p. 59.]

9. Duty of conductors.—Conductors of passenger trains, street cars or interurban lines, provided with separate coaches, shall have the authority to refuse any passenger admittance to any coach or compartment, in which they are not entitled to ride under the provisions of this law; and the conductor in charge of the train or street car or interurban car shall have authority, and it shall be his duty, to remove from a coach or street car, or interurban car any passenger not entitled to ride therein, under the provisions of this law, and, upon his refusal to do so knowingly, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than five or more than twenty-five dollars. [Id., § 9; amended Act 1907, p. 59.]

Willson's Cr. Forms, 559.

Entering negro coach in performance of official duty.—A white peace officer may enter a negro coach in performance of his duty. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Brown (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 259.

10. Fines collected to go to school fund.—All fines collected under the provisions of this law shall go to the available common school fund of the county in which conviction is had. Prosecutions under the provisions of this law may be instituted in any court of competent jurisdiction in any county through, or into which, said railroad may be run or have an office. [Id., § 10; amended Act 1907, p. 59.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 557, 559, 732g, 732h.

Art. 1524. [1010a] Locomotive engineer failing to sound bell and whistle; penalty.—A bell of at least thirty pounds weight and a steam whistle shall be placed on each locomotive engine, and the whistle shall be blown and the bell rung at the distance of at least eighty rods from the place where the railroad shall cross any public road or street; and such bell shall be kept ringing until it shall have crossed such public road, or stopped; and each locomotive engine approaching a place where two lines of railway cross each other, shall, before reaching such railway crossing, be brought to a full stop; and any engineer having charge of such engine, and neglecting to comply with any of the provisions of this article, shall be fined in any sum not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars for such neglect; and the corporation operating such railway shall be liable for all damages which shall be sustained by any person by reason of any such neglect; provided, however, that the full stop at such crossings may be discontinued when the railroads crossing each other shall put into full operation at such crossing an interlocking switch and signal apparatus, and shall keep a flagman in attendance at such crossing. [Act 1893, p. 87.]

Crossing signals.—Under Acts 1883, (page 28,) an instruction which makes a ringing or whistling at 80 rods' distance, without continuance of the ringing, a compliance with the law, is properly refused. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Duelm (Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 596.

Rev. St. 1879, art. 4232, as amended by Act March 21, 1883 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 6564), does not require both the whistle to be blown and the bell rung; and it is sufficient if the whistle is blown at a distance of at least 80 rods before the crossing is reached, without continuing the blowing until the crossing is passed. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Kirschoffer (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 577.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 563, 732g, 732h.

Art. 1525. [1010b] Ticket agents to be provided with certificate of authority.—It shall be the duty of all railroad companies doing business in this state, or the receiver of any such railroad company, through their duly authorized officers, to provide each agent who may be authorized to sell tickets or other evidences entitling the holder to travel upon any such railroad, with a certificate, setting forth the authority of such agent to make such sale. Such certificate shall be duly attested by the corporate seal of such railroad company, or the signature of the receiver, if any there be, of such railroad company, or by the signature of the officer whose name is signed upon the tickets or coupons which such agent may be authorized to sell. [Act of 1893, p. 97.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732g, 732h.

SCALPING RAILROAD TICKETS.

Laws 1893, p. 97 making it an offense for any person other than a railroad agent to sell tickets, but requiring that the ticket shall contain a notice that it is unlawful for one not a railroad agent to sell same was held unconstitutional in Jannin v. State, 42 App. 631, 51 S. W. 1126, 62 S. W. 419, 96 Am. St. Rep. 821, and was omitted from the revised Penal Code.

Art. 1526. [1010e] Agents must exhibit authority on demand.—It shall be the duty of every agent who shall be authorized to sell tickets, or parts of tickets, or other evidences of the holder's right to travel over any railroad within this state, upon demand, to exhibit to any person desiring to purchase a ticket, or to any officer of the law who may request it, the certificate of his authority to sell, and to keep said certificate posted in a conspicuous place in his office for the information of travelers. [Id.]

Explanatory.—The revisers of 1911 ascribed the above provision to the act of 1893. The subject-matter of this article was carried into Rev. St. 1895, as art. 4560c, and such article was amended by Act 1903, p. 162, but no change was made in its language.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732h.

Art. 1527. [1010f] Railway companies to redeem unused tickets.—It shall be the duty of all railroad companies in this state, or the receiver or trustee of any such railroad company, to provide for the redemption, from the holder thereof, of the whole, or any parts or coupons of any ticket or tickets which they, or any of their duly authorized agents, may have sold, if for any reason the holder has not used, and does not desire to use the same, upon the following terms: If neither the ticket, nor any part thereof, has been used by the holder, he shall be entitled to receive the full amount he paid therefor; and, where the ticket has been used in part, the holder thereof shall be entitled to receive the remainder of the price paid for the whole ticket, after deducting therefrom the tariff rate between the points for which the portion of said ticket was actually used. [Id.]

Invalidity of omitted part of original statute.—That part of the act which leaves it optional with the railroad company to stamp on the ticket the provision that the act shall not apply to a person holding a ticket upon which is not printed that it is a penal offense for him to sell the ticket, is in violation of law, null and void. Jannin v. State, 42 App. 631, 51 S. W. 1128, 62 S. W. 419, 96 Am. St. Rep. 821.

Necessity of immediate redemption on presentation.—Under this and the two following articles, the railway company may provide its own processes of disbursement; and where a company required tickets for redemption to be forwarded to the auditor of the company, who would send a cash slip to the ticket agent whereupon the money would be paid to the holder of the ticket, the refusal of an agent to immediately pay the redeemable value of a ticket upon presentation did not subject the company to the prescribed penalty, the words "when presented," being equivalent to "in case it is presented," or "on condition that it be presented." Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Beaird (Civ. App.) 169 S. W. 1050.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732h.

Art. 1528. Demand must be made within ten days.—Provided, however, such tickets, or parts thereof, shall be presented for redemption to the railroad company from which it has been purchased, or the receiver of such railroad company, or to any of the duly authorized ticket agents of such railroad company, or receiver thereof, or in case of a through ticket, to any of the authorized agents of any connecting line, within a time not exceeding ten days after the right to use said ticket has expired by limitation of time as stipulated therein. [Id.]

See notes under the preceding article.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732h.

Art. 1529. Refusal to redeem; penalty.—Any railroad company, or receiver, or trustee of such railroad company, over or on which said ticket may be used, which shall refuse or fail to redeem the whole, or any part or coupon of any ticket or tickets, when presented, shall forfeit to the holder thereof a sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, recoverable in any court of competent jurisdiction. [Id.]

See notes under article 1527, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732h.

Art. 1530. [1010g] Law to be printed on tickets.—It shall be the duty of the railway company to print conspicuously across the face of every ticket, sold by its duly authorized agents in this state, a notice to the holder thereof that this ticket, or any unused part thereof, is redeemable by the company or its receiver at any ticket office of the company, when presented for redemption. [Id., p. 98.]

Art. 1531. [1010h] Unlawful boarding of train.—Any person who shall board any passenger, freight or other railway train, whether moving or standing, for any purpose, and without, in good faith, intending to become a passenger thereon, and with no lawful business thereon, and with intent to obtain a free ride on such train, however short the distance, without the consent of the person or persons in charge thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by fine of not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1895, p. 178.]

Offender as trespasser.—A person standing on a railroad platform waiting for a chance to steal a ride on a train, being there for the purpose of defrauding the railroad company, in violation of this article, was a "trespasser." Grubb v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 153 S. W. 694.

Ejection and arrest without warrant.—A violation of this article would not justify the arrest of the offender without a warrant, so that, in an action against a railroad company for unlawful expulsion and wrongful arrest, an instruction that plaintiff's expulsion would be lawful if he was attempting to violate the statute when ejected was properly refused. Freeman v. Costley (Civ. App.) 124 S. W. 458.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 558.

An indictment against defendant for unlawfully boarding a railway train, as prohibited by this article, without the consent of the person in charge thereof, failing to state the name of such person, or that his name could not be ascertained with reasonable diligence by the grand jury, was insufficient. Daugherty v. State, 41 App. 661, 56 S. W. 629.

Under this article, an indictment charging that defendant unlawfully boarded a passenger and freight train on a certain railroad was not objectionable for failure to sufficiently charge that "defendant boarded a railway train." Daugherty v. State, 41 App. 661, 56 S. W. 629.

Art. 1531a. Train dispatchers; duties.—Every such railroad corporation operating trains in this State shall employ a competent train dispatcher whose duty it shall be to keep informed of the movement of all trains upon the lines of such railroad corporation. Said train dispatcher shall also keep all agents at stations having telegraph offices in or near them, informed of the movement of all passenger trains one hour prior to the time such passenger train or trains are due, according to the published schedule at such stations. And in the event any such passenger train is delayed for more than one hour, than the published schedule, then it shall be the duty of such train dispatcher to inform such local agents how late said train is and the last telegraph station passed. If such train dispatcher shall fail or refuse to furnish the information concerning the movement of trains to agents as herein required, then such dispatcher shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars for each offense. [Act 1903, 1 S. S., p. 21; Act 1913, p. 318, ch. 148, § 2, amending Art. 6553, Rev. St. 1911.]

Explanatory.—Act 1903, 1 S. S., p. 21, of which Act 1913, ch. 148, § 2, is amendatory, was omitted from the revised Pen. Code of 1911, and is included in this compilation in view of the decision in Berry v. State, 156 S. W. 626.

Art. 1531b. Derailing devices on repair tracks; exception.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or receiver operating any railroad, machine shop or other concern engaged in repairing or manufacturing cars within this State to use any tracks not equipped with derailing devices upon which to repair or manufacture cars; such derailing devices to be provided with private locks, to be kept locked at all times when tracks are in use: provided, that nothing in this Act shall be construed as prohibiting temporary repairs to cars on tracks other than where cars are regularly repaired or manufactured. [Act 1913, p. 334, ch. 158, § 1.]

Art. 1531c. Same; punishment.—Any person, firm, corporation or receiver, operating any railroad, machine shop or other concern engaged in the repairing or manufacture of cars in this State, who shall violate the provisions of Section on [1] of this Act [art. 1531b], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be fined in a sum not less than fifty ($50.00) dollars nor more than two hundred ($200.00) dollars and each day such violation shall exist shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1531d. Train bulletins at stations.—It shall be also the duty of every such railroad agent at stations having telegraph communication with the train dispatcher of the railroad, to ascertain one hour before the schedule time of the arrival of passenger trains, if such train is on time, and if on time, to bulletin that fact on a board provided by the company and placed in some conspicuous place at the passenger station. And if the train is late, he shall bulletin how late, and the last telegraph station passed by such train. If later than one hour, said agent shall thereafter ascertain the latest news from such train dispatcher, or some other reliable source, every hour, and bulletin such information and the time of the probable arrival of such train. If any such agent shall fail or refuse to perform the duties required of him by this Article, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, for each time he fails or refuses to perform the duties required of him by this Article, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than one

Explanatory.—Act 1903, ch. 107, § 1, consists of an amendment of art. 4560c. Rev. St. 1895. It was omitted from the revised Penal Code of 1911, and is included, in its amended form, in this compilation, in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

Art. 1531e. Obstruction of highway crossings.—It shall hereafter be unlawful for any railway company or any officer, agent, servant, receiver or receivers of any railway corporation to wilfully obstruct for more than five minutes at any one time any street, railway crossing or public highway in this State by permitting their trains to stand on or across such crossing or crossings. [Act 1915, p. 109, ch. 60, § 1.]

Art. 1531f. Same; punishment.—Any person, firm or corporation, or the officers, agents, servants, receiver or receivers of any corporation violating any of the provisions of this Act, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1531g. Section foremen shall make report of animals killed; evidence.—Whenever any animal is killed or found dead upon the roadbed or right of way of any railroad company in this State, the section foreman of the railroad where said animal is killed or found dead, shall take and make a description of such animal, stating its kind, the marks and brands, color, and apparent age, and any other description that may serve to identify said animal, which description must be taken and made before said animal is buried or otherwise disposed of, and shall transmit same to the County Clerk of the county in which said animal is found or killed, within ten days from the date of finding or killing, which description shall be by said County Clerk filed and kept of records in his office without exacting any fees from section foreman for filing same. A certified copy of said report so filed may be introduced in evidence in any case wherein the killing, death, or value of said animal is in question. [Act 1915, p. 126, ch. 73, § 1.]

Art. 1531h. Same; punishment.—Any person violating any of the provisions of Section 1 of this Act [art. 1531g] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than five dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars. [Id., § 2.]

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

RAILROADS, ETC.—PROHIBITING ISSUANCE OF FREE PASSES, ETC.

Article 1532. Free pass, frank, privilege or free haul or carrying of persons or property free of charge, penalty for.—If any steam or electric railway company, street railway company, interurban railway company, or other chartered transportation company, express company, sleeping car company, telegraph or telephone company, or person or association of persons operating the same, or the receivers or lessees thereof, or any officer, agent or employé of any such company in this state, shall knowingly haul or carry any person or property free of charge, or give or grant to any person, firm, association of persons, or corporation, a free pass, frank, a privilege or a substitute for pay, or a subterfuge which is used, or which is given to be used instead of the regular fare or rate for transportation, or any authority or permit whatsoever, to travel or to pass or convey or transport any person or property free, or sell any transportation for anything except money, or for any greater or less rate than is charged to all persons under the same conditions, over any railway or other transportation line, or part of line, in this state, or shall knowingly permit any person to transmit any message free in this state, or shall give any frank or right or privilege to transmit messages free in this state, or property free of charge or for greater or less fare or rate than is charged other persons in this state, for similar service, except such persons as are hereinafter exempted under the provisions of this chapter, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction in any action brought on this account, and for that purpose, shall pay to the state of Texas the sum of five thousand dollars for each and every act which violates the provisions of this article; and any person, president, director, officer, employé or agent of any such corporation or association of persons, who shall sell any transportation for anything except money, or knowingly give, grant, issue, or cause to be issued, a free pass, a frank, a privilege or any substitute for or in lieu thereof, for the transportation of any person, article or thing, or the sending or transmitting any messages over wire or other means of transmitting messages in this state, except to such persons as are hereinafter exempted from the provisions of this chapter, shall be deemed guilty of a felony under the laws of this state, and, upon conviction for such act, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than two thousand dollars, and may, in addition thereto, in the discretion of the jury, be imprisoned in the penitentiary for a term of not less than six months nor more than two years. [Act 1907, p. 93.]

Free transportation of witnesses for railroad.—Where, in an action for injuries to a servant of defendant railroad company, certain of its witnesses testified that they had been furnished free transportation over defendant's road to the place of trial, and admitted that they were not employés nor within any of the exceptions prescribed by Gen. Laws 1907, p. 93, c. 42, prohibiting the issuance of free passes, and declaring that all persons, except those mentioned in section 2, obtaining a free pass or using free tickets, shall be guilty of misdemeanor, it was not error to permit plaintiff's counsel, in argument, to state that such of defendant's witnesses as so testified violated the law in accepting transportation paid by defendant. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 121 S. W. 876.

Art. 1533. Provisions of preceding article not to prohibit what.—That the provisions of Section 1 of this Act [art. 1532] shall not be held to prohibit any steam or electric interurban railway, telegraph company or chartered transportation company or sleeping car company or the receivers or lessees thereof or persons operating the same, or the officers, agents or employés thereof from granting free or exchanging free passes, franks, privileges, substitute for pay or other thing herein prohibited to the following persons: The actual bona fide employés of any such companies and the members of their families. Any other bona fide peace officer shall enjoy the same privilege, when their duties are to execute criminal processes; provided, that if any such railroad or transportation company shall grant to any sheriff a free pass over its lines of railroad, then it shall issue like free transportation to each and every sheriff in this State who may make to it written application therefor; and provided further, that said sheriffs and other peace officers above mentioned using such free passes or transportation shall deduct the money value of the same, at the legal rate per mile, from any mileage accounts against the State and litigants earned by them in executing process when such pass was used or could have been used; also members of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission or their inspectors, of Texas, not exceeding twenty-five (25) in number for any one year; any person who has by many years of actual labor aided, assisted and been instrumental in securing the passage of statutes by the Congress of the United States requiring the equipment of railroad trains with adequate safety appliances for the protection of the persons and lives of the employes and passengers; provided, that such person was not at such time a public officer, National, State or local, nor employed directly or indirectly by any railroad company; provided, that nothing in this Act shall prevent any such companies, the receivers or lessees thereof and their families or the officers, agents or employes from granting to ministers of religion reduced rates of one-half (1-2) the regular fare, nor shall anything in this Act prevent any such companies, their receivers or lessees from transporting free of charge any article being sent to any orphan home or other charitable institution; provided, further, that nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit any such companies, their receivers or lessees or officers, agents or servants from making special rates for special occasions or under special conditions, but no such rate shall ever be made without first obtaining authority from the Railroad Commission of Texas; and provided further, that no persons who hold any public office in this State shall at any time during their term of office be entitled to any such pass or transportation, privilege or franks or substitute for fare or charges over any railway or other company mentioned in Section one (1) of this Act, except employes operating trains when in the actual discharge of their duties as such and the officers hereinbefore exempted; provided, further, that nothing in this Act shall prohibit any street railway company from transporting, free of charge, police officers and firemen in any city where said company is authorized so to do by any ordinance or authority from the city council of any such city; provided, however, that no person or persons, beneficiaries of free transportation herein permitted, shall ride on a free pass or enjoy free transportation to or from any political convention or on any political errand; that nothing in this Act shall prohibit any express company from hauling or carrying free of charge the packages and property of its actual and bona fide officers, attorneys, agents and employes who are actually in the employment of any such company, its receivers or lessees, at the time such free transportation or the right thereto was given; and provided, further, that nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit any telegraph or telephone company from carrying and transmitting free of charge the messages of its bona fide officers, attorneys, agents and employes and their families who are actually in the employment of such company, its receivers or lessees at the time when such free transportation or the right thereto was given; provided, the actual bona fide officers and employes upon annual salaries of railway and telephone companies, and telegraph companies are hereby permitted to exchange franks, privileges and free transportation over their respective lines of railway and telegraph or telephone; and provided, further, that nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent the right of contract between railway companies and publishers, editors or proprietors of newspapers or magazines from making an exchange of mileage for advertising space in such news-

Art. 1533a. Transportation of public health exhibit.—It shall be lawful for any railroad company to furnish free of charge a car or cars for the display of the public health exhibit and to furnish free transportation to the persons actually engaged in the work in connection with the display of the public health exhibit. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 191, ch. 45, § 2.]

Art. 1534. Persons offering to use permit, pass, franks, etc., issued to any other person, or applying for same, knowing he is not entitled thereto, penalty.—If any persons shall present, or offer to use, in his own behalf, any permit or frank whatsoever, to travel, pass or to convey any person or property or message which has been issued to any other person, or shall, knowing that he is not entitled under the provisions of this chapter, apply to any railway, express, telegraph or telephone company, officer, agent, lessee or receiver thereof, for any free pass, frank, privilege or a substitute for pay given or to be used instead of the regular fare or rate for transportation, or for any other consideration, except money, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by confinement in the county jail for not less than thirty days and not more than twelve months, and by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars. [Act 1907, p. 95.]

Art. 1535. Discrimination by any means or device, penalty.—No company, subject to the provisions of this chapter, shall, directly or indirectly, by any special rate, rebate, draw-back, or other device or exchange, demand, charge or collect or receive from any person, firm, association of persons or corporation a greater or less or different compensation for any service rendered, or to be rendered, in the transportation of passengers, property or messages, than it charges, demands, collects or receives from any other person, firm, association of persons or corporation for doing for him, them or it, a like service, if the transportation or transmission is a like kind of traffic or service under substantially similar circumstances and conditions; and any such company violating these provisions shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and for each offense, on conviction, shall pay to the state of Texas a penalty of five thousand dollars. [Id., p. 96.]

Art. 1536. Companies, their lessees and receivers shall report annually the name and residence of each person to whom free transportation was given.—Each and all companies subject to the provisions of this chapter, their receivers and lessees, shall report annually on such dates as may be fixed by the railroad commission of this state, the name and residence of each and every person to whom free transportation, or right thereto, was given to travel, or to have his property or messages transported or transmitted over its transportation, express, sleeping car or railway or telegraph or telephone line; and any company violating this provision shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and for each offense, on conviction, shall pay to the state of Texas a penalty of one thousand dollars. [Id., p. 96.]

Art. 1537. Persons other than those exempt using free pass, free ticket, etc., penalty.—Any person, other than the persons excepted in this chapter, who uses any such free ticket, free pass or free transportation, frank or privilege over any railway or other transportation line or sleeping or express car, telegraph or telephone line, mentioned in this chapter, for any distance under the control and operation of either of said companies, subject to the provisions of this chapter, or under their authority, or shall knowingly and wilfully, by any means or device whatsoever, obtain, use or enjoy from any such company, a less fare or rate than is charged, demanded, collected or received by any such company from any other person, firm, association of persons or corporations for doing for him, them or it, a like service, if the transportation or service is of a like kind of traffic or service under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, such person or such officer or agent who acts for such corporation or company thus favored, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, for each offense, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars. [Id., p. 96.]

Effect of statute as to alleged misconduct of a conductor in demanding fare.—In an action against a carrier for alleged misconduct of its conductor with reference to a demand on the plaintiff's wife for fare for her child, the evidence showed that the conductor told plaintiff's wife that he could not carry the child without payment of fare, and that he would have to expel the child unless the fare was paid, and that under the statute it was an offense for him to permit the child to ride without payment of fare. There was evidence that the wife entered the train not expecting to pay fare for the child. Held in view of this article that it was error to refuse an instruction that the conductor was entitled to make such statement to plaintiff, and that, if such conversation was had the jury could not find for plaintiff unless the conductor's manner was rough, and as a result therefrom the wife suffered the injury alleged. Trinity & B. V. Ry. Co. v. Carpenter (Civ. App.) 132 S. W. 837.

Art. 1538. Director, officer, agent, receiver, etc., wilfully violating this law or permitting its violation, penalty.—Any director, officer, agent or any receiver, trustee, lessee or person acting for, or employed by, any company subject to the provisions of this chapter, who alone, or with any other corporation, company, persons or party, shall wilfully do, or cause to be done, or shall wilfully suffer, or permit to be done, any act, matter or thing in this chapter prohibited or declared to be unlawful, or who shall aid or abet therein, or shall wilfully omit or fail to do any act, matter or thing in this act required to be done, or shall cause or wilfully suffer or permit any act, matter or thing so directed, required by this chapter to be done, not to be done, or shall aid or abet any such omission or failure, or shall be guilty of any infraction of this chapter, or shall aid or abet therein, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be subject to a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars; and, if the offense for which any person shall be convicted under this section shall be unlawful discrimination in rates, fares or charges for the transportation of passengers or property, or the transmission of messages, such person may, in addition to the fines hereinbefore provided for, at the discretion of the jury, be imprisoned in the penitentiary for a term not less than six months nor more than two years. [Id., p. 96.]

Art. 1539. Person may be compelled to testify, exempt from prosecution.—In any investigation, suit or prosecution which may be had, or instituted, under the provisions of this chapter, the court or tribunal in which the investigation, suit or prosecution is pending may compel all persons to attend and give testimony, and to produce such papers, books and documents as may be desired by the state; and no person shall be exempt from giving testimony therein; provided, however, that no criminal action or proceeding shall be brought or prosecuted against such witness on account of any testimony so given or furnished by him. [Id., p. 97.]

Art. 1546. Penalty for issuing wrongful, fraudulent or unauthorized bill of lading.—Any officer, agent or servant of a carrier, railroad or other transportation company, or receiver thereof, affected by this chapter, who shall wrongfully issue a bill of lading, with the intent to defraud any person, or who shall, with intent to defraud, knowingly misdescribe any goods, articles or other property, or the quantity or amount thereof, described in any bill of lading, or who shall knowingly issue a bill of lading without authority so to do, with the intent to defraud any person, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than two years and not exceeding ten years. CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

RAILROAD EMPLOYÉS—LIMITING THE WORK HOURS OF SAME

Art.
1551-1554. [Repealed.]

Art.
1555. Railroad telegraph or telephone operator not to work more than eight hours in twenty-four consecutive hours, penalty.

Articles 1551-1554. [Act 1903, ch. 31; Act 1907, pp. 113, 114; Act 1907, S. S. ch. 5.] Repealed. See note below.

Explanatory.—The act of 1907, ch. 51, pp. 113, 114, with the amendatory act (Act 1907, S. S. ch. 5), when carried into the revised Penal Code of 1911, as articles 1551 to 1554, inclusive, had been expressly repealed by Act 1909, ch. 101, § 3. This repeal was evidently overlooked by the revisers, and in view of the decisions in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626; Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505; Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713; Williams v. State, 71 App. 6, 159 S. W. 732, the articles named are omitted from this compilation. The act of 1909 re-enacted the former provisions but substituted a penalty recoverable in a civil action in place of the former criminal penalty. The new act will be found in Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, as articles 6584 and 6585.

Art. 1555. Railroad telegraph or telephone operator not to work more than eight hours in twenty-four consecutive hours, penalty.—It shall be unlawful for any railroad telegraph or telephone operator to work more than eight hours in twenty-four consecutive hours at such occupation; and any such operator, violating this article, shall pay a fine in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars; provided, that, in case of an emergency, any operator may remain on duty for an additional two hours. [Act 1907, p. 223.]

Constitutionality.—This act is unconstitutional, in that it purports to apply to both interstate and intrastate commerce, and is in conflict with Act Cong. March 4, 1907, c. 2939, § 2, 34 Stat. 1416 [U. S. Comp. St. 1913, § 8678], and, hence, violative of the commerce clause of the federal constitution. State v. Texas & N. O. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 124 S. W. 984.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

RAILROAD COMPANIES—REQUIRING ENGINEERS OR CONDUCTORS TO SERVE FIRST AS FIREMEN OR BRAKEMEN

Art.
1556. Person running a locomotive engine upon any railroad, qualification of.
1557. Person engaged as conductor on railroad, qualification of.

Art.
1558. Penalty for violating two preceding articles.
1559. Shall not apply, when.
1560. Not to apply to railroads less than twenty-five miles in length, or lessee or receiver thereof.

Article 1556. Person running a locomotive engine upon any railroad, qualification of.—If any person shall run or operate any locomotive engine upon any railroad in the state of Texas, without having served three years prior thereto as a fireman or engineer on a locomotive engine, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and he shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars; and each day he so engages shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1909, p. 92.]

Constitutionality.—This chapter is not unconstitutional because article 1560, post, provides that the law shall not apply to railroads less than 25 miles long. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 900. Nor is it unconstitutional as an unlawful interference with interstate commerce. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 900. Reversed by Supreme Court of the United States. (1914) Id., 233 U. S. 630, 34 Sup. Ct. 681, 58 L. Ed. 1129, and the statute is held unconstitutional, as infringing the right of contract.

Art. 1557. Person engaged as conductor on railroad, qualification of.—If any person shall act, or engage to act, as a conductor on a railroad train in this state, without having for two years prior thereto served or worked in the capacity of a brakeman or conductor on a freight train on a line of railroad, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars; and each day he so engages shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., p. 92.]

Constitutionality.—See note under the preceding article.

This article is not unconstitutional as an unreasonable interference with employment contracts or the right to pursue a vocation. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 900. Reversed by Supreme Court of the United States. (1914) Id., 233 U. S. 630, 34 Sup. Ct. 681, 58 L. Ed. 1129, and the statute is held unconstitutional, as infringing the right of contract.

Application to conductor serving required time in another state.—One who had acted as freight conductor for a number of years in another state could not be convicted under this article, the statute not requiring one to have worked as a conductor, etc., for two years within this state. Byrne v. State, 60 App. 518, 132 S. W. 473.

Art. 1558. Art.		Art.
1567.	Station or depot in city or town to bear name of postoffice.	1568.	Not to apply, when.
		1569.	Penalty for violation.

Article 1567. Station or depot in city or town to bear name of postoffice.—It shall hereafter be unlawful for any corporation or receiver, operating any line of railroad, in whole or part, in this state, or any officer, agent or representative of such corporation or receiver, to retain, maintain or establish a name for any railway station or depot, in any incorporated or unincorporated town or city within this state, other than the name of the town or city, which have, and bears, the name of its postoffice so given by the United States government. [Act 1909, p. 89.]

Art. 1568. Not to apply, when.—The provisions of article 1552 shall not apply to two or more incorporated or unincorporated towns or cities in this state which now are situated within five miles of each other, and which each have therein established postoffice named and designated by the United States government. Provided, that this chapter shall not apply to those cases where the postoffice name of the city, town, village or settlement is so similar in sound or otherwise to that of some other station upon such railroad, as that confusion in train orders and directions may arise therefrom; and provided, further, that where the name of such place is changed by the postal department of the federal government, such railway shall not be required to again change the name of its station; and provided, further, that all railways having stations affected hereby shall have ninety days from and after this chapter becomes effective to comply therewith. CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

STREET RAILWAY—REGULATING FARES IN CERTAIN CITIES AND TOWNS

Art. 1570. Required to carry children of the age of twelve years or less for one-half fare; not to apply when. 1571. Provide for sale of children in lots of twenty, etc. 1572. Children under the age of five years transported free, when.	Art. 1573. Providing for transfers. 1574. Officer of any corporation violating this law, penalty. 1575. Person misrepresenting age or grade to secure reduced fare, penalty.
---	---

Article 1570. Required to carry children of the age of twelve years or less for half fare; not to apply when.—All persons or corporations, owning or operating street railways in or upon the public streets of any town or city in this state of not less than forty thousand inhabitants are required to carry children of the age of twelve years or less at, and for one-half, the charge or fare regularly collected by such person or corporation for the transportation of adult persons; provided, that this chapter shall not apply to street cars carrying children or students to and from schools, colleges, or other institutions of learning, situated at a distance of one mile or more beyond the limits of the incorporated city or town from which said cars run. [Act 1903, p. 182.]

Regulation of rates.—The legislature has the power to regulate the rates of fare of a street railway company in the absence of any provision in its charter relinquishing that right, provided the rates are not so unreasonable as to practically destroy the value of the property of the corporation. San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt (Civ. App.) 81 S. W. 108.

Art. 1571. Provide for sale of tickets in lots of twenty, etc.—All such persons or corporations, owning or operating street railways, shall sell or provide for the sale of tickets in lots of twenty, each good for one trip over the lines or lines owned or operated by such person or corporation, at, and for, one-half the regular fare or charge collected for the transportation of adult persons, to students not more than seventeen years of age in actual attendance upon any academic, public or private school, of grades not higher than the grades of the public high schools of this state, situated within, or adjacent to, the town or city in which such street railway is located. Such tickets are required to be sold only upon the presentation by the student desiring to purchase the same of the written certificate of the principal of the school upon which he is in attendance, showing that he is not more than seventeen years of age, is in regular attendance upon such school, and is within the grades hereinbefore provided. Such tickets are not required to be sold to such students, and shall not be used except during the months of the year when such schools are in actual session; and such students shall be transported at half fare only upon the presentation of such tickets. [Id., p. 182.]

Constitutionality.—See San Antonio Traction Co. v. Altgelt, 200 U. S. 304, 26 Sup. Ct. 261, 50 L. Ed. 491.

Art. 1572. Children under the age of five years transported free, when.—All such persons or corporations are required to transport children of the age of five years or less, when attended by a passenger of above said age, free of charge. [Id., p. 182.]

Art. 1573. Providing for transfers.—All such persons or corporations are required to accord to all passengers referred to in articles 1561, 1562 and 1563 the same rights as to the use of transfers issued by their own or other lines as are, or may be, accorded to passengers paying full fare. [Id., p. 182.]

Art. 1574. Officer of any corporation violating this law, penalty.—Any officer of any corporation or other person who shall knowingly violate any of the provisions of this chapter shall, upon conviction, be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., p. 182.]

Art. 1575. Person misrepresenting age or grade to secure reduced fare, penalty.—Any person who shall misrepresent the age or the grade of any person for the purpose of securing the reduced fare herein provided for shall, upon conviction, be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., p. 182.]

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

ASSIGNOR

Article 1576. [1011] Secreting or concealing property from assignee.—If any assignor shall secrete or conceal from his assignee any portion of the property belonging to his estate, other than that which is exempt from execution, or shall, previous to, and in contemplation of, the assignment, transfer any property, with the intent or design to defraud his creditors, such assignor shall be adjudged guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment and labor in the penitentiary for not less than two nor more than five years. [Act March 24, 1879, § 11.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 700, 701.

DUPLICATION OF PROCESS FOR WITNESSES

Article 1577. [1012] Duplication of process for witnesses; penalty.—It shall be unlawful for the clerk of any district court, after a witness in a felony case has been served with a subpoena or an attachment, to issue any other or further process for said witness, except upon the order of the presiding judge, made upon application to him for that purpose. When a witness has been served with process by one party, it shall inure to the benefit of the opposite party, in case he should need said witness; and, as far as practicable, the clerk shall include in one process the names of all witnesses for the state and defendant; and such process shall show that the witnesses are summoned for the state and defendant. Any district clerk who shall violate the provisions of this law shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 21st Leg., March 30, 1889, ch. 121, p. 145.]

See art. 114, ante, and note thereunder.

Application to misdemeanors.—This article, inhibiting clerks from issuing further process where the witness has been served with process by one party, except upon order of the judge, etc., applies only in felony cases, and has no application to misdemeanors. Searcy v. State, 40 App. 460, 50 S. W. 699, 51 S. W. 1119, 53 S. W. 344.

Notice of intention to use witness.—The non-issuing party should make known his intention to use the witness. Byrd v. State, 39 App. 609, 47 S. W. 721.

Practice as to process.—In conforming to this article, the better practice is, where both parties desire the witness, to have the process issued for either, show that fact on its face. Mixon v. State, 36 App. 66, 35 S. W. 394.

In view of this article, forbidding the issuance of more than one subpoena for a witness and giving defendant the benefit of the action of the state in "serving" process on a witness, that defendant failed to look up a witness, for the absence of whom a continuance was asked, because the state had "issued" a subpoena, would not excuse lack of diligence. Stacy v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 114.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 168, 169.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

COUNTY FINANCES *

1579.	Clerk failing to keep finance ledger.	1584.	Check and warrants on city depository, how drawn; penalty for violation.
1580.	Treasurer failing to make report.	1584a.	Approval of treasurer's report; order; counting cash; affidavit; registration and publication; penalty for violation.
1581.	Selecting depository of funds of county.
1582.	Members of commissioners' court failing or refusing to vote; penalty.

Article 1578. [1013] State or county officer refusing information.—If any state or county officer shall fail or refuse to give any data, statistics and information required of him by law, such state or county officer shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, be fined in a sum not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 21st Leg., April 2, 1889, p. 23.]

Art. 1579. [1013a] Clerk failing to keep finance ledger.—If the clerk of the county court of any county in this state, or county auditor in counties having an auditor, shall wilfully fail, neglect, or refuse to keep, or cause to be kept, the finance ledger, provided for by law, or shall wilfully fail, neglect, or refuse to make, or cause to be made, the quarterly statement as provided for by law, the clerk or auditor so failing, neglecting or refusing shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars; provided, that such failure, neglect, or refusal, for each quarter, shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1893, p. 161.]

Art. 1580. [1013b] Treasurer failing to make report.—Any county or city treasurer, or treasurer of the school board of each city or town having exclusive control of its schools, failing to make and transmit the report required by law, and certified copy, or either, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1893, p. 188.]

Explanatory.—The report contemplated by this article was to be made to the commissioners' court at its first regular term after Aug. 31 in each year (art.

* See, also, Title 4, chs. 3 and 5; Title 8, ch. 6, arts. 388-420.

3936, Rev. St. 1895). This requirement was repealed by Act 1905, ch. 124, § 170. The act of 1905 requires the report to be made to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction on or before Oct. 1st in each year (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 2773), but the act imposes no penalty for a failure to report. In view of this situation, this article may be superseded, though it did not appear in the chapters of the civil statutes which were expressly repealed. See Berry v. State, 156 S. W. 626; Stevens v. State, 159 S. W. 505. The repealing clause in the act of 1905 reads as follows: "All provisions of chapters 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16, of Title lxxxvi, of the Revised Statutes of the State of Texas and all amendments thereto not herein specifically re-enacted are hereby repealed and all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed." See, also, art. 403, ante.

Art. 1581. Selecting depository of funds for county.—The commissioners' court of each county in this state are authorized, at the February term thereof every two years, to receive proposals from any banking incorporation, association or individual banker in such county, as may desire to be selected as the depository of the funds of such county. Notice that such bids will be received shall be published by, and over the name of the county judge, once each week for at least twenty days before commencement of such term, in some newspaper published in said county; and, if no newspaper be published therein, then, in any newspaper published in the nearest county; and, in addition thereto, notice shall be published by posting same at the courthouse door of said county. [Act 1905, ch. 164, § 20; Act 1907, p. 208, § 20.]

Art. 1582. Member of commissioners' court failing or refusing to vote; penalty.—Any member of the commissioners' court of any county who shall fail or refuse to vote for a compliance with the requirements of this section [preceding article] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for less than one nor more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and such failure or refusal shall be deemed ground for removal from office. [Id.]

Art. 1583. Selecting depository of funds of city.—The city council of every city in the state of Texas, incorporated under the general laws thereof, or incorporated under special charter, at its regular meeting in July of each year, is authorized to receive sealed proposals, for the custody of the city funds, from any banking corporation, association or individual banker, doing business within the city, that may desire to be selected as the depository of the funds of the city. The school funds, from whatsoever source derived, of incorporated cities, is part of the city funds, and is subject to the provisions of this chapter. Notice that such bids will be received shall be published by the city secretary, not less than one nor more than four weeks before such meeting, in some newspaper published in the city. Any banking corporation, association or individual banker, doing business in the city, desiring to bid, shall deliver to the city secretary on or before the day of such meeting designated by said published notice, a sealed proposal, stating the rate per cent upon daily balances that said banking corporation, association or individual banker offers to pay to the city for the privilege of being made the depository of the funds of the city for the year next following the date of such meeting; or, in the event that said election shall be made for a less term than one year, as hereinafter provided, then, for the time between the date of bid and the next regular time for the selection of a depository as aforesaid. All such proposals shall be securely kept by the secretary, and shall not be opened until the meeting of the council for the purpose of passing upon same; nor shall any other proposals be received after they shall have been opened. It shall be a misdemeanor for the city secretary or other person to open any of said proposals, or to disclose, directly or indirectly, the amount of any such bid to any person or persons before the selection of such depository, and, upon conviction, he shall be fined in a sum of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1905, ch. 123, § 1; Act 1905, ch. 164, § 34; Act 1907, p. 132.]

Art. 1584. No warrant shall be drawn by the mayor and secretary upon any of the special funds, created for the purpose of paying the bonded indebtedness of said city in the hands of the city treasurer, or in the depository, for any purpose whatsoever, other than to pay the principal or interest of said special fund, or for the purpose of investing said special fund according to law. No city treasurer shall pay off, or issue a check, to pay any money out of any special fund created for the purpose of paying any bonded indebtedness of said city other than for the purpose to pay interest due on said bonds, the principal of said bonds, or for the purpose of making an investment of said fund according to law. Any mayor who shall draw a warrant against a special fund, as above defined, for any other purpose than above specified, or any city treasurer who shall pay, or issue a check to pay, a warrant drawn on the special fund of any city, other than for the legal purpose of paying interest due on said bonds, the principal of said bonds, or for investing said sinking fund according to law, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be confined in the penitentiary for any term not less than one year nor more than five years. [Act 1905, ch. 123, § 6; Act 1905, p. 397.]

Art. 1584a. Approval of treasurer's report; order; counting cash; affidavit; registration and publication; penalty for violation.—When the commissioners' court has compared and examined the quarterly report of the treasurer, and found the same correct, it shall cause an order to be entered upon the minutes of the court, stating the approval thereof, which order shall recite separately, the amount received and paid out of each fund by the treasurer since the preceding treasurer's quarterly report, and the balance of such fund, if any, remaining in the treasurer's hands, and the court shall cause the proper credit to be made in the accounts of the treasurer, in accordance with said order, and said court shall actually inspect and count all the actual cash and assets in the hands of the treasurer belonging to the county at the time of the examination of his said report; and prior to the adjournment of each regular term of the court, the county judge and each of the commissioners shall make affidavit in writing that the requirements of this article have been in all things fully complied with by them at said term of said court, and that the cash and other assets mentioned in said county treasurer's quarterly report made by said treasurer to said court, and held by him for the county, have been fully inspected and counted by them, giving the amount of said money and other assets in his hands; which affidavits of the members shall be filed with the county clerk of the county, and by him recorded in the minutes of the said county commissioners' court of the term at which the same were filed; and the same shall be published in some newspaper published in the county, if there be a newspaper published in the county, for one time, to be paid for at the same rate as other legal notices.

And any county judge, county commissioner, or county clerk in this State, who shall negligently or intentionally fail or refuse to comply with the requirements of this Article, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof in a court of competent jurisdiction shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1897, p. 28, ch. 30, § 1.]

Explanatory.—The above provision was omitted from the revised Penal Code, and in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626, it is included in this compilation. The civil part of the above article was carried into Rev. St. 1911 as arts. 1448-1450. The criminal feature was added by Act 1897, ch. 30, p. 27, by way of amendment of art. 867, Rev. St. 1895.

School fund embraced.—The county school fund was embraced in this article requiring the county funds to be counted by the commissioners' court. Poole v. Burnet County, 97 Tex. 77, 76 S. W. 426.

[Id., p. 61.]

Art. 1590. Shall give written notice to district or county attorney, when.—If the commissioner of labor statistics shall learn of any violation of the law with respect to the employment of children, or fire escapes, or the safety of employés, or the preservation of health, or in any other way affecting the employés, he shall at once give written notice of the facts to the county or district attorney of the county in which the law has been violated, or of some other county, if any there be, having jurisdiction of the offense; and the county or district attorney to whom such notice has been given shall immediately institute the proper proceedings against the guilty person. [Id., p. 61.]

Article 1592. Owner, lessee, agent, etc., operating mine, duty of.—It shall be unlawful for the owner, agent, lessee, receiver or operator of any mine in this state to employ any person or persons in said mine for the purpose of working therein, unless there are in connection with every seam or stratum of coal or ore worked in such mine not less than two openings or outlets, separated by a stratum of not less than one hundred and fifty feet at surface and not less than thirty feet at any place, at which openings or outlets, safe and distinct means of ingress and egress, shall, at all times, be available for the persons employed in such mine. The escapement shafts or slopes shall be fitted with safe and available appliances, by which the employés of the mine may readily escape in case of accident. In slopes used as haulage roads, where the dip or incline is ten degrees or more, there must be provided a separate traveling way, which shall be maintained in a safe condition for travel, and kept free from dangerous gases. [Act 1903, p. 103.]

Art. 1593. Time for completing escapement shaft.—The time which shall be allowed for completing such escapement shaft or opening as is required by the terms of this chapter, shall be: For mines already opened, one year for sinking any shaft or slope two hundred feet or less in depth, and one additional year, or pro rata portion thereof, for every additional two hundred feet or fraction thereof; but, for mines which shall be opened after the taking effect of this chapter, the time allowed shall be two years for all shafts or slopes more than two hundred feet in depth, and one year for all shafts two hundred feet in depth or less; and the time shall be reckoned in all cases from the date on which coal or ore is first hoisted from the original shaft or slope, for sale or use. [Id., p. 103.]

Art. 1594. Shafts, cages and passways, constructed, how.—Any shaft in process of sinking, and any opening projected for the purpose of mining coal of all kinds, shall be subjected to the provisions of this chapter.

At the bottom of every shaft and every caging place therein, a safe, commodious passageway must be cut around said landing place, to serve as a traveling way by which employes shall pass from one side of the shaft to the other, without passing under or near the cage.

The upper and lower landings at the top of each shaft, and the openings of each intermediate seam from or to the shaft, shall be clear and free from loose materials, and shall be securely fenced with automatic or other gates or bars, so as to prevent either men or materials from falling into the shaft.

Every hoisting shaft must be equipped with substantial cages fitted to guide rails running from the top to the bottom. Said cages must be safely constructed, they must be furnished with suitable boiler iron covers to protect persons riding thereon from falling objects, and they must be equipped with safety catches. Every cage on which people are carried must be fitted with iron bars, rings, or chains in proper place and in sufficient number to furnish a secure handhold for every person permitted to ride thereon. At the top landing, cage supports, where necessary, must be carefully set and adjusted so as to work properly, and securely hold the cages when at rest.

In all cases where the human voice cannot be distinctly heard, there shall be provided a metal tube or telephone from the top to the bottom of the shaft or slope through which conversation may be held between persons at the bottom and top of such shaft or slope, and that there shall also be maintained an efficient system of signaling to and from the top of the shaft or slope and each seam or opening.

Every underground place on which persons travel, worked by self-acting engines, windlasses or machinery of any description, shall be provided with practical means of signaling between the stopping places and the ends of the plane, and shall further be provided, at intervals of not more than sixty feet, with sufficient man-holes for places of refuge.

Every mine shall be supplied with props and timbers of suitable length and size; and, if from any cause the timbers are not supplied when required, the miners shall vacate any and all such working places until supplied with timber needed.

All openings, worked out or abandoned portions of every operated mine likely to accumulate explosive gases or dangerous conditions shall be securely gobbled and blocked off from the operated portions thereof, so as to protect every person working in such mines from all danger that may be caused or produced by such worked out portions of such mines. [Act 1907, p. 331.]

Art. 1595. Current of fresh air shall be maintained throughout mine.—(a) Throughout every mine there shall be maintained currents of fresh air sufficient for the health and safety of all men and animals employed therein; and such ventilation shall be produced by a fan or some other artificial means; provided, a furnace shall not be used for ventilating any mine in which explosive gases are generated.

(b) The quantity of air required to be kept in circulation and passing a given point shall be not less than one hundred cubic feet per minute for each person, and not less than three hundred cubic feet per minute for each animal in the mine, measured at the foot of the downcast; and this quantity may be increased at the discretion of the inspector, whenever, in his judgment, unusual conditions make a stronger current necessary. Said current shall be forced into every working place throughout the mine, so that all parts of the same shall be reasonably free from standing powder smoke and deleterious air of any kind.

(c) The measurement of the current of air shall be taken with an anemometer at the foot of the downcast, at the foot of the upcast, and at the working face of each division or split of the air current.

(d) The main current of air shall be split or subdivided as to provide a separate current of reasonably pure air to every one hundred men at work; and the inspector shall have authority to order separate currents for smaller groups of men, if in his judgment special conditions make it necessary.

(e) The air current for ventilating the stable shall not pass into the intake air current for ventilating the working parts of the mine.

(f) Whenever the inspector shall find men working without sufficient air, he shall at once give the mine manager or operator notice and a reasonable time in which to restore the current, and, upon his or their refusal or neglect to act promptly, the inspector may order the endangered men out of the mine. [Id., p. 332.]

Art. 1596. Appearance of fire damp, notice to be given.—Immediate notice must be conveyed by the miner or mine owner to the inspector, upon the appearance of any large body of fire damp in any mine, whether accompanied by any explosion or not, and upon the concurrence of any serious fire within the mine or on the surface. [Id., p. 333.]

Art. 1597. Cages on which men are riding, how constructed, speed of.—Cages on which men are riding shall not be lifted or lowered at a rate greater than six hundred feet per minute, except with the written consent of the inspector. No person shall carry any tools or material with him on a cage in motion, except for use in making repairs; and no one shall ride on a cage while the other cage contains a loaded car. No cage, having an unstable or self-dumping platform, shall be used for the carriage of men or materials, unless the same is provided with some convenient device, by which said platform can be securely locked, and unless it is so locked whenever men or material are being conveyed thereon. [Id., p. 333.]

Art. 1598. Powder in mine, how carried.—No miner or other person shall carry powder into the mine, except in the original keg or in a regulation powder can, securely fastened, and the can in otherwise air tight condition. [Id., p. 333.]

Art. 1599. Cut-throughs, how made.—It shall be the duty of the mine foreman to see that proper cut-throughs are made in all the pillars at such distances as in the judgment of the mine inspector may be deemed requisite, not more than twenty yards nor less than ten yards apart, for the purpose of ventilation; and the ventilation shall be conducted through said cut-throughs into the rooms and entries by means of check doors made of canvas or other material, placed on the entries or in other suitable places; and he shall not permit any room to be opened in advance of the ventilating current. Should the mine inspector discover any room, entry, airway or other working place being driven in advance of the air current contrary to the requirements of this article, he shall order the workmen in such places to cease work at once until the law is complied with. [Id., p. 333.]

Art. 1600. Safety lamps to be kept when necessary.—At any mine where the inspector shall find fire damp is being generated so as to require the use of a safety lamp in any part thereof, the operator of such mine, upon receiving notice from the inspector that one or more such lamps are necessary for the safety of the men in the mines, shall at once procure and keep for use such number of safety lamps as may be necessary. [Id., p. 334.]

Art. 1601. Shaft, safety lamp, etc., shall not be injured.—It shall be unlawful for any miner, workman or other person, knowingly or carelessly, to injure any shaft, safety lamp, instrument, air-course or brattice, or to obstruct or throw open an air-way, or to carry any open lamp or lighted pipe or fire in any form into a place worked by the light of safety lamps, or within three feet of any open powder, or to handle or disturb any part of the hoisting machinery, or to enter any part of the mine against caution, or to do any wilful act whereby the lives or health of persons working in mines, or the security of the mine machinery thereof, is endangered. [Id., p. 334.]

Art. 1602. Rules printed in English shall be posted.—It shall be the duty of every operator to post on the engine house and at the pit top of his mine, in such manner that the employes of the mine can read them, rules not inconsistent with this chapter, plainly printed in the English language, which shall govern all persons working in the mine. And the posting of such notice, as provided, shall charge all employes of such mine with legal notice of the contents thereof. [Id., p. 334.]

Art. 1603. Adequate and accurate scales shall be provided.—The owner or operator of every mine shall provide adequate and accurate scales for weighing coal; and it shall be the duty of the mine inspector to examine such scales, and, if same are not found to be accurate, he shall notify the owner to repair same; and, if such owner fails or refuses to repair same within a reasonable time, said inspector shall institute proceedings under the law against the proper parties. [Id., p. 334.]

Art. 1604. Employes shall have right to employ check weighman.—The employes in any mine in this state shall have the right to employ a check weighman at their own option and their own expense. [Id., p. 334.]

Art. 1605. Kind of oil to be used in mine.—No miner or other person employed in a mine shall use any kind of oil other than a good quality of lard oil for lighting purposes, except when repairing downcast or upcast shafts. [Id., p. 334.]

Art. 1606. Any person violating any of the provisions hereof, penalty.—Any person who shall wilfully violate any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding six months. [Id., p. 334.]

Art. 1606a. Electric wires to be insulated; trolley wires, how placed.—From and after September 1, 1911, in all mines in this State where electricity is or hereafter shall be used as a part of the system, power or means of mining and procuring the coal or other mineral from any of said mines, that the owners or operators of every such mine shall cause all wires conducting electricity in and about said mine to be carefully and thoroughly insulated or protected in a safe manner, so that the person or animals coming in contact therewith shall not be injured thereby; all wires as aforesaid shall either be thoroughly insulated or placed where persons employed in and about the mines can not come in contact therewith, or shall be covered, protected or shielded in a safe manner, so as to prevent any injuries or accidents therefrom to those in or about the mines; provided, however, it shall not be necessary to insulate or cover trolley wires, but they shall all be hung and kept not less than five feet and six inches above the rail, and shall be securely fastened, and not permitted to sag less than said height. Where there is sufficient height in existing entries to permit this, but where sufficient height is not available in existing entries, then the trolley wires shall be placed to one side of the entry, six inches outside the rail; and in all such cases the trolley wire shall be placed on the side of the entry opposite from the working rooms, except where there are rooms on both sides of the entry, in which event, the trolley wires may be placed over the opening of said rooms, said trolley wires to be safely shielded; provided, where it is impracticable in existing entries to place trolley wires six inches outside of the rail, or five feet, six inches high, and where separate travel way is not provided, then the trolley wire shall be safely shielded; and it is further provided that this Act shall not apply to entries that are not used as travel ways for workmen or work animals; provided, however, that this Section shall not apply to mines in operation in this State on January 1, 1902, and prior thereto, and which have developed until there is at least two thousand (2000) feet distance from the shaft to the face of the coal being operated, except as to extensions of trolley wires made and to be made after January 1, 1910, in such mines. [Act 1911, p. 196, ch. 97, § 1.]

Art. 1606b. Penalty for violation.—Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred ($500.00) dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding six months. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1606c. Duties of state mining inspector.—It shall be the duty of the State Mining Inspector to see that the provisions of this Act are complied with, and shall report all violations hereof to the State Mining Board and to the district or county attorney of the county where the offense is committed. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1606d. It shall be brought up to date at least once each month, covering operations for the preceding month. The original of said map shall be on file at the office of the operator at or near said mine. Said map shall be extended or brought up to date at any time requested by the State Mine Inspector, at least every three months, if, for any reason, a mine should be closed, then a final map shall be made and filed; provided, however, that maps existing on the date of the passage of this Act may be continued on the same scale as begun, if not smaller than one-half inch to one hundred feet. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1606e. Same; penalty for violation.—The penalty for non-compliance with Section 4 [art. 1606d] hereof shall be by a fine of not less than twenty-five ($25.00) dollars nor more than fifty ($50.00) dollars for each offense. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1606f. Feeding animals in mine; storing feed.—It shall be unlawful for any person, association of persons, corporation or receiver, owning, operating or managing any mine in this State, to feed or permit to be fed any work animal in said mines, or to store or keep any feed for such animals in said mines. [Act 1911, p. 205, ch. 102, § 1.]

Art. 1606g. Permitting animal to remain over ten hours unlawful.—It shall be unlawful for any person, association of persons, corporation or receiver, owning, operating or managing any mine in this State, to permit any work animal to remain in any mine longer than ten consecutive hours. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1606h. Not applicable to certain mines; open light in stable prohibited; inflammable stock food.—It is further provided that Sections 1 and 2 [arts. 1606f, 1606g] shall not apply to mines complying with the following provisions:

All stables in mines in which work animals are kept shall be equipped with fire proof doors at each opening, with a door frame of concrete, stone or brick, laid in mortar, and such stable door shall be kept closed during working hours of mines.

All feed, hay, grass, cane, etc., except corn, corp chops, bran and shelled oats, shall not be taken down the hoisting shaft until after the regular day shift is out of the mine.

It is further provided that no open light shall be taken into any underground stable by any person.

It is further provided that not over twenty-four (24) hours' supply of hay, grass or cane, or any other kind of inflammable stock food, except corn, corn chops, bran and shelled oats, shall be taken down in any one day. [Id., § 2a.]

Such building shall be provided with proper light and heat, with a supply of hot and cold water and shower baths, and with properly constructed individual lockers for the use of such employes. Article 1607. Prison commission created.—The management and control of the prison system of the state of Texas shall be vested in a board, to be known as the board of prison commissioners, and, for the purposes of this chapter, shall be referred to as the prison commission. Said board of prison commissioners shall be composed of three men, to be appointed by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, whose term of office shall be two years from date of appointment, except those first appointed under this chapter, who shall hold their offices, respectively, for eight, sixteen and twenty-four months from the date of their appointment and qualification. [Act 1910, S. S., p. 143.]

See art. 1607a, post. For other provisions relating to the powers and duties of the board of prison commissioners, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 6086-6095j, 6172-6256.

Art. 1607a. Constitution and tenure of commission.—The Board of Prison Commissioners charged by law with the control and management of the State prisons, shall be composed of three members appointed by the Governor, by and with the consent of the Senate, and whose terms of office shall be six years, or until their successors are appointed and qualified; provided that the terms of office of the Board of Prison Commissioners first appointed after the adoption of this amendment shall begin on January 20th of the year following the adoption of this amendment, and shall hold office as follows: One shall serve two years, one four years, and one six years. Their terms to be decided by lot after they shall have qualified, and one Prison Commissioner shall be appointed every two years thereafter. In case of a vacancy in said office the Governor of this State shall fill said vacancy by appointment for the unexpired term thereof. [Const. art. 16, § 58, adopted Nov. 5, 1912.]

Art. 1608. Commission charged with direction of state prison system and care, etc., of prisoners.—The prison commission shall be vested with the exclusive management and control of the prison system of this state, and shall be held responsible for the proper care, treatment, feeding, clothing and management of the prisoners confined therein, and at all times for the faithful enforcement of the spirit, intent and purpose of the laws and rules governing said system; provided, that the prison commission shall be held responsible for maltreatment of prisoners, and, if permitted, it shall be grounds for removal from office. [Act 1910, S. S., p. 145.]

Art. 1609. Commission to classify prisoners into three classes and each class into three grades.—The prison commission shall provide for the classification of all prisoners, separating them into the following classes: In the first class shall be included young men, first offenders, those appearing to be corrigible, or less vicious than others, and likely to observe the laws, and to maintain themselves by honest industry after their discharge. In the second class shall be included those appearing to be less corrigible, or more vicious, but content to work and reasonably obedient to prison discipline as not to seriously interfere with the productiveness of their labor, or with the labor or conduct of those with whom they may be employed. In the third class shall be included those appearing to be incorrigible or so insubordinate or so vicious in their nature as to seriously interfere with the labor and moral development of those with whom they must come in contact.

The prison commission shall make rules and regulations for the promotion and reduction of the prisoners from one class to another, and shall transfer them from one class to another from time to time, as they may seem to merit promotion or reduction.

The prisoners in each of the classes hereinbefore named, shall be kept in, or upon different or separate prisons or farms. Any prisoner, upon entering the prison system, shall be assigned to one of its institutions according to his class, as hereinbefore provided, and shall be entered in said institution in a neutral grade, which shall be known as grade No. 2, and in which he shall be furnished with a suitable uniform designated for that grade. The prison commission shall adopt rules for a higher grade which shall be known as grade No. 1, as a reward for obedience to prison discipline and good conduct, and shall provide a suitable uniform for this grade; and they shall provide for a lower grade as a punishment for misconduct and violation of prison discipline, which grade shall be known as No. 3, and in which the prisoner shall be clothed in stripes. The uniforms for grades Nos. 1 and 2 shall not be stripes. The prison commission shall provide rules for promotion of prisoners from any grade to another for good conduct and obedience to prison discipline, and for demotion of prisoners for misconduct and violation of prison discipline. The prison commission shall provide specifically for the extension or denial of privileges for the various grades herein provided. [Id., p. 151.]

as may be necessary, such punishment being always humane, and placing prisoners in stocks, shall be prohibited. Whipping with not exceeding twenty lashes on the bare rump and thighs may be resorted to with prisoners of the third class, who can not be made to observe the rules by milder methods of punishment. The strap to be used must be of leather, not over two and one-half inches wide, and twenty-four inches long, attached to a wooden handle; no convict shall be whipped until same has been authorized by at least two members of the prison commission upon their written order; and such order so issued shall be executed only in the presence of a prison physician; and a sworn report shall be made by the officer executing such order to the penitentiary commission, who shall keep a record of all such reports in a well bound book to be kept for that purpose, which shall be at all times open to public inspection; and such report, so to be made by such officer executing the order of the prison commission, shall state the name of the convict whipped, the number of strokes administered, the size of the strap used, the time and place thereof, in whose presence same was done, and the cause thereof. It shall further be the duty of the prison commission to make a semi-annual report of the whipping of convicts to the district judge of the county where such whipping occurred, who shall report same to the grand jury, which is hereby authorized to make investigation thereof, if they deem same advisable. The utmost care must be used by the officer executing the order of the commission not to break the skin of the prisoner whipped; and any person guilty of whipping a prisoner more lashes, or other than as provided herein, or striking a prisoner, except in self-defense, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars, and imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than six months. White and negro prisoners shall not be worked together when it can be avoided, and shall be kept separate when not at work. [Id., p. 152.]

Art. 1611. Penalty for misapplication of money of prisoners by officers, etc., of prison.—Prisoners, when received into the penitentiary, shall be carefully searched. If money be found on the person of the prisoner, or received by him at any time, it shall be taken in charge by the prison commission and placed to the prisoner's credit, and expended for the prisoner's benefit on his written order, and under such restrictions as may be prescribed by law or the rules. Any officer or employé, having charge of a prisoner's money, who misappropriates the same or any part thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be confined in the penitentiary for a term of not more than five years. [Id., p. 156.]

Art. 1612. Duties of officers, etc., on decease of prisoner, and penalty for failure to perform.—If any prisoner shall die while in prison, the officer in charge of the prisoner at the time of his death shall immediately report the same to the prison commission, and, if he knows the address or place of residence of any relative within the third degree, either by consanguinity or affinity, shall also notify by wire said relative of the death of such prisoner, and, if the relative of such prisoner claim the body or will take charge of same, then the body of such prisoner shall be turned over to such relative; and the expense of shipping the body to where it is to be buried, provided it is within this state, shall be paid by the prison commission out of any available penitentiary funds on hand, upon the request of such relative. If the residence and address of the relative of such prisoner is unknown, such prisoner shall be decently buried in citizen's clothes, and the grave marked by a stone with the name of said prisoner, date of death and age, if known, inscribed thereon. If the body of such prisoner is not claimed by the relatives, the prison commission shall at once notify the county judge of the county from which the prisoner was sentenced, of his death, the date and cause of death and place of burial. The prison commission shall cause to be made and kept a record of the deaths of prisoners, and certified copies of same, made by the custodian thereof, shall be admissible in evidence under the rules of law applying to official records. Any officer or employé of the prison system of whom any duties are required by this article, who shall fail to discharge such duties, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Id.]

Art. 1613. Same.—The prison commission, or other person in charge of prisoners, upon the death of any prisoner under their care and control, shall at once notify the nearest justice of the peace of the county in which said prisoner died, of the death of said prisoner; and it shall be the duty of such justice of the peace, when so notified of the death of such prisoner, to go in person and make a personal examination of the body of such prisoner, and inquire into the cause of the death of such prisoner; and said justice of the peace shall reduce to writing the evidence taken during such inquest, and shall furnish a copy of the same to the prison commission, and a copy of the same to the district judge of the county in which said prisoner died; and the copy so furnished to said district judge shall be turned over by the district judge to the succeeding grand jury; and the said judge shall charge the grand jury, if there should be any suspicion of wrong-doing shown by the inquest papers, to thoroughly investigate the cause of such death.

Any officer or employé of the prison system, having charge of any prisoner at the time of the death of such prisoner, who shall fail to immediately notify a justice of the peace of the death of such prisoner, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and by confinement in the county jail not less than sixty days nor more than one year; provided, that the justice of the peace making such examination shall be paid a fee as is now provided by law for holding inquests, said fee to be on sworn account therefor, approved by the prison commission. [Id.]

Art. 1614. Prison physician failing to make report, or making false report.—The prison commission shall provide for competent medical attention for all prisoners, and shall establish rules whereby all physicians shall be required to keep a record of all cases of sickness, accident or injury which they treat. The physicians so employed shall be reputable practicing physicians of not less than two years of experience in practice. Each physician employed in the prison system shall, at the end of each month, file with the prison commission a report in writing, subscribed and sworn to by him, which report shall state the names, race and sex of each prisoner treated or examined by him during said month, the malady or disease with which each was afflicted, and, if any shall be suffering with wounds or injuries inflicted by accident or some individual, he shall state the nature and extent of said injuries, by whom and by what means inflicted, or how the same occurred, and all such other information concerning said matters, and the condition of each prisoner treated or examined by him during said months, as he may possess; provided, further, that for a failure to make such a report or any false statement knowingly made by any such physician in any such reports, he shall be prosecuted for the offense of perjury or false swearing, as provided by law. [Id., p. 157.]

Art. 1615. Conversion of prison property declared to be theft and punishable as such.—Any officer or employé of the prison system, who shall fraudulently convert to his own use and benefit any food, clothing, or other property, belonging to or under control of the prison system, shall be guilty of theft, and, upon conviction, be punished as prescribed by law. [Id., p. 158.]

See art. 372, ante.

Art. 1616. Felony for officer, etc., to acquire financial interest in contracts on behalf of prison, or to speculate in any prison transaction; penalty.—Any officer, agent or employé, in any capacity connected with the prison system of this state, who shall be financially interested, either directly or indirectly, in any contract for the furnishing of supplies or property to the prison system, of the purchase of supplies or property for the prison system, or who shall be financially interested in any contract to which said prison system is a party, or who shall knowingly and fraudulently sell or dispose of any property belonging to said prison system below its reasonable market value, or who shall be financially interested in any other transaction connected with the prison system, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than two years nor more than five years; and each transaction shall constitute a separate offense. [Id.]

See art. 372, ante.

Art. 1617. Officer, etc., inflicting unauthorized punishment on any prisoner; penalty.—Any sergeant, guard or other officer or employé of the prison system of this state who shall inflict any punishment upon a prisoner, not authorized by the rules of the prison system, shall be guilty of an assault, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished as prescribed by law; and it shall be the duty of the prison commission to make complaint before the proper officer of any county in which such assault was committed upon such prisoner. Provided, that in all cases where any person is charged by complaint or indictment with an offense against a prisoner, prisoners and ex-prisoners shall be permitted to testify. [Id.]

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
REFORMATORY INSTITUTIONS

Article 1617a. Corporal punishment of inmates of Girls' Training School.—Corporal punishment in any form shall not be inflicted upon the inmates of said institution except as a last resort to maintain discipline, and then only in the presence of the Superintendent, and a resident nurse; and at no time shall any inmate be struck more than twenty times, and that only with such instrument and in such manner as will inflict reasonable and moderate punishment, considering the age, size and strength of the culprit and the strength of the person administering such punishment, and at no time shall any weapon or instrument of torture be used, or any instrument which by its make, coupled with the manner of its use would be calculated to inflict bodily injury. Any one violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than $25.00 nor more than $100.00 or sentenced to not less than thirty days, nor more than ninety days in jail, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 11, ch. 6, § 15.]

Explanatory.—The above provision is added, by way of amendment, to Rev. St. 1911, as art. 5234a (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 5234a). As it contains a criminal feature it is inserted in this compilation.

TITLE 19

REPETITION OF OFFENSES

Art.	Art.
1618. Second and subsequent convictions for misdemeanor.	1620. Third conviction for felony, how punished.
1619. Subsequent conviction for felony.	1621. Second conviction for capital offense, how punished.

Article 1618. [1014] Second and subsequent convictions for misdemeanor.—If it be shown on the trial of a misdemeanor that the defendant has been once before convicted of the same offense, he shall, on a second conviction, receive double the punishment prescribed for such offense in ordinary cases; and upon a third, or any subsequent conviction for the same offense, the punishment shall be increased, so as not to exceed four times the penalty in ordinary cases. [P. C. 818.]

Validity of statute in general.—This article is not invalid for uncertainty, in that it is not stated whether it is the maximum or the minimum penalty which is to be doubled. Gould v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 172.

Constitutionality.—This article is constitutional. It does not place defendant twice in jeopardy for the same offense. Kinney v. State, 45 App. 500, 78 S. W. 226, 79 S. W. 570.

Construction of statute in general.—Prior cases for offenses of like character cannot be used to enhance the punishment of a subsequent offense of like character. Kinney v. State, 45 App. 500, 78 S. W. 226, 79 S. W. 570.

This article is to be construed as a reform provision of our Code. That is, if after the conviction for the first offense the defendant does not reform but persists in crime and commits another offense of like character, he can be tried and his former conviction used to enforce his punishment and so on as he commits such subsequent offense up to four.

Prior cases cannot be used to enhance the punishment in any given case more than once. They cannot be made to do double duty. The statute allows these offenses to enter into a subsequent offense for the enhancement of the punishment in as many as four cases. There is no statutory authority that prior offenses can be used more than in the four cases on the contingencies mentioned. Kinney v. State, 47 App. 496, 84 S. W. 590.

Under the statute, the punishment for a third or any subsequent conviction for the same offense shall not be less than four times the minimum, nor more than four times the maximum, penalty for the first offense. Gould v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 172.

"Same offense" defined.—The words "same offense" as used in this article do not mean the identical offense, but an offense of like character. See Kinney v. State, 45 App. 500, 78 S. W. 226, 79 S. W. 570. Muckenfuss v. State, 55 App. 216, 117 S. W. 853.

Indictment and Information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 741.

The increased punishments provided by this and following articles can not be inflicted unless the indictment alleges the previous conviction, and that the offense with which the defendant is then charged was committed since said previous conviction. "Murder" and "an assault with intent to murder" are not offenses of the same nature. Long v. State, 36 Tex. 6.

When the punishment assessed was not greater than that which might have been imposed for first offense, defendant cannot complain that indictment charged that he had been convicted of the "same offense" in three former cases. "Same offense" does not mean "same transaction" but an offense of same character. Kinney v. State (Cr. App.) 78 S. W. 225.

It is not sufficient to allege in the language of the statute that appellant had been previously convicted of the "same offense," but it must aver that he had been previously convicted of an offense of like character to that for which he is being tried. Kinney v. State, 45 App. 500, 78 S. W. 226, 79 S. W. 571.

Where an information sets up previous convictions in order to charge the defendant with a cumulative punishment, it is necessary to allege that the defendant has been convicted of previous offenses of a like character, but it is not necessary to allege those convictions with the same particularity as if the defendant were charged originally, but the allegation with regard to the previous crimes must show that they have succeeded one another; and hence the second paragraph of an information for violating the local option law, which charged that the defendant on a day named had been convicted of "the same offense" in three previous cases, and that each was for "the same offense" as the one hereinbefore charged, was defective in failing to allege that they were offenses "of like character," and that they were successive offenses; the allegation in the latter regard being of three convictions on the same day. Neece v. State, 62 App. 373, 137 S. W. 919.

Where an information charged a violation of the local option law in the first paragraph, and the second paragraph defectively charged former convictions to impose a cumulative penalty on the accused, and a conviction was had, the case should only be reversed and remanded, as a valid trial may be had on the offense sufficiently charged in the first paragraph. Neece v. State, 62 App. 378, 137 S. W. 919.

Under this article an information, alleging that accused had been convicted of the "same offense," setting out two instances thereof did not properly charge the character of offense; the words "same offense" not meaning the identical offense, but one of like character. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 729.

Evidence.—In the trial of one for keeping a theater open in violation of the Sunday law, charged not to be his first offense, evidence held sufficient to support a finding that the prior convictions charged in the information were for offenses of the same identical character and kind as that for which he was on trial. Gould v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 172.

In the trial of one for a violation of the Sunday law alleged not to be his first offense, the records of the corporation court of a city, showing that he had been tried for a similar offense, and, upon a plea of guilty, had been fined, were admissible in evidence to show his liability to the enhanced punishment prescribed by article 1014, for second and subsequent similar offenses, regardless of the validity of the judgment entry therein shown. Gould v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 172.

Where a judgment of the defendant's prior conviction of a similar offense had never been used to enhance his punishment in any case, it was admissible in evidence in his trial for keeping a theater open in violation of the Sunday law to show his liability to the enhanced punishment prescribed by this article for second and subsequent similar offenses. Gould v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 172.

Under this and the following articles where an information for adultery and fornication charged a former conviction for fornication, such former judgment of conviction on a plea of guilty was admissible; but, it not appearing whether accused pleaded guilty to adultery or fornication, the information should have been introduced to identify the offense of which he was convicted. Koger v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 577.

Where, on a trial for fornication, a former judgment of conviction on a plea of guilty, for fornication with the same person, was introduced as a basis for increased punishment, the county attorney could not properly argue that the plea of guilty might be considered in determining accused's guilt. Koger v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 577.

Where the information did not properly allege previous convictions so as to warrant the additional punishment authorized by this article the admission of the records of prior convictions was error. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 729.

Such error was not cured by withdrawing the incompetent evidence from the jury, and, in view of a punishment of $200 and 10 days' imprisonment and the statutory penalty of not less than $50 nor more than $500, and imprisonment not to exceed six months, was prejudicial. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 729.

Charge of court.—Where, for the purpose of increasing the penalty which might be imposed, former convictions of defendant of other violations of the same law were alleged, charging that proofs of such convictions could not be considered in passing on his guilt or innocence of the offense for which he was being tried, but only in fixing the penalty was not error. Gould v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 247.

Art. 1619. [1015] Subsequent conviction for felony.—If it be shown, on the trial of a felony less than capital, that the defendant has been before convicted of the same offense, or one of the same nature, the punishment on such second or other subsequent conviction shall be the highest which is affixed to the commission of such offenses in ordinary cases. [P. C. 819.]

See notes under article 1618, ante.

Offenses of same nature.—Murder and assault to murder are not offenses of the same nature within this article. Long v. State, 36 Tex. 6.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 742.

Art. 1620. [1016] Third conviction for felony; how punished.—Any person who shall have been three times convicted of a felony less than capital, shall, on such third conviction, be imprisoned to hard labor for life in the penitentiary. [P. C. 820.]

See notes under articles 1618 and 1619, ante.

Art. 1621. [1017] Second conviction for capital offense; how punished.—A person convicted a second time of any offense to which the penalty of death is affixed as an alternate punishment, shall not receive, on such second conviction, a less punishment than imprisonment for life in the penitentiary. [P. C. 821.]

See notes under articles 1618 and 1619, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 743.
