PREFACE

Difficulties Encountered in Compiling the Statute Text. The original design of the Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure was to present the criminal laws with such completeness that they could be administered without it being necessary to refer to the civil statutes. In pursuance of this policy, the original constructors of the Codes gathered together and placed in the Codes every constitutional and legislative enactment which had any bearing on the criminal law of the State. To accomplish this result the Code Commissioners were compelled to dismember acts of the Legislature, placing parts of them in the civil statutes and other parts in the criminal statutes. In a great many cases it was found necessary to place the same provisions in both statutes. The Legislature while sanctioning the establishment of this statutory system failed to observe it and carry it into effect in its subsequent legislation. It failed to legislate separately for the two statutes. It probably was not feasible to do so. Acts were amended as acts after they had been dismembered and divided between the civil and criminal statutes. This situation has rendered the work of compiling the text somewhat difficult. The problem of discriminating between the acts which are appropriate for the criminal statutes and those for the civil statutes has not been easy of solution. It has been the aim of the editors to follow the methods employed in the preparation of the Revised Statutes as far as those methods could be determined from an examination of the contents of the revised criminal codes. The editors have been liberal in adding provisions to the compilation and it is their belief that the Codes as compiled contain everything that the practitioner could reasonably expect to find in a criminal statute.

Defects in the Revision of 1911. The Revised Criminal Statutes of 1911 possess so many defects that it is not safe in all cases to rely on them to ascertain the existing law of the State on the subject of crime and criminal procedure. The act adopting the revision contained no clause repealing laws not incorporated therein. In view of the absence of a repealing provision and on account of the serious defects in the work of revision, the courts have deprived the Revised Criminal Statutes of 1911 of much of the usual sanctity accorded to Revised Statutes. Among the decisions bearing on this subject attention is particularly called to Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626, Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505, Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713, Williams v. State, 71 App. 6, 159 S. W. 732.

The defects in the Revised Criminal Statutes are as follows:

(a) The omission of subsisting laws not repealed or held unconstitutional by the courts. A table has been prepared for each Code showing the laws omitted therefrom and which have been carried into the new compilation. This table appears immediately preceding the Table of Session Laws in each of the Codes. Representative examples of omitted laws appear at articles 220, 664b-664d, 695e, 852a, 1255a and 1521a of the Penal Code, and articles 97a, 109a, 264a, 291a, 632a, 844a, 1105a, 1117h, and 1163a of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(b) The inclusion of laws which had become obsolete or which had been amended, repealed, or superseded by later legislation. There are a great many instances in which the revisers fell into this error. In each case an explanatory note will be found in this compilation following the repealed or superseded provision. Representative examples will be found by referring to the explanatory notes under articles 109, 111, 150-154, 403, 418, 678, 850, 853, 857, 901, 1054, 1263, 1458, 1464, 1488, 1513 and 1551-1554 of the Penal Code, and articles 140, 165, 302, 646, 648, 963, 1010, and 1129 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(c) Failure to observe the changes in the civil statutes involving either the creation of a new offense or repealing or modifying existing provisions of the criminal codes. For representative examples of this defect see the explanatory notes under articles 409, 1278, 1414, 1488, 1491-1503, 1526 and 1531d of the Penal Code, and articles 618, 661a, 889, and 1081 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The editors who prepared this compilation have carefully examined the civil legislation subsequent to the Revised Statutes of 1895, and in many cases have found provisions affecting the criminal branch of the law which were not carried into the Revised Criminal Statutes of 1911. These have been inserted at their appropriate places in the compilation. Examples of this work appear at articles 115a, 115b, 120, 616, 681, 753, 835, 1252, 1487a, 1487b and 1617a of the Penal Code, and articles 845 and 846 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(d) Errors in classification and arrangement of the laws and in the molding of their language in attempting to accommodate them to the revision. This has resulted in many cases in giving a legislative act a wider or a more restricted scope on the face of the revision than was intended by the Legislature when the act was passed. For representative examples see explanatory notes under articles 100, 220, 1256, 1278 and 1284 of the Penal Code, and articles 625, 646, 648, 899, 900, 1117a-1117e, and 1127a of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(e) Lack of uniformity and coherence in the distribution of laws between the subdivisions of the statutes, and the separation of similar or related laws which should have been gathered together. In an unofficial compilation of the laws it is not possible to correct errors of this nature existing in the basic revised statutes. The editors of this compilation, however, have made many cross-references and explanatory notes tending to remove the misleading effect or inconvenience arising from errors of classification of the laws. For examples of this feature of the work see explanatory notes under articles 593, 622, 712, 730, 836, 850 and 1054 of the Penal Code, and articles 899, 900, and 1117a of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

(f) Failure to refer to the earlier enactments of the laws, and erroneous references to the Session Laws. This information is essential to a correct understanding of the history of the legislation. Many errors in the references have been corrected in this compilation. Examples of this work may be seen by comparing articles 852 and 869 of this compilation of the Penal Code with the corresponding articles in the Revised Penal Code.

The Annotations. Both the Penal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure have been carefully and completely annotated. The annotations extend from the earliest decisions up to and including volume 178 of the Southwestern Reporter. The decisions of the federal courts affecting the criminal statutes of Texas have also been carried into the annotations. The work of annotation has been done by the same editorial staff that prepared the annotations for Vernon's Sayles' Civil Statutes for 1914. In annotating the criminal statutes the publishers have availed themselves of the material found in Willson's Texas Criminal Statutes of 1897 and the supplements thereto. Errors of classification found in the Willson books have been corrected and omitted cases have been supplied. The publishers have endeavored to avoid needless duplication of annotations. To effect this purpose it has not followed the practice heretofore prevailing in Texas of placing notes on matters of practice under the statute article defining the crime, as well as under the article defining the particular practice in question. A decision directly involving a matter of practice defined by statute is placed under the procedure statute. Matters of procedure not directly defined by statute are placed under the article relating to the crime on which the prosecution was based. Thus notes on the sufficiency of an indictment in matters not particularly dealt with by a procedure statute are placed under the statute defining the particular crime, while notes on subjects based on the procedure statutes are placed under those statutes. Liberal cross-references have been made between the various articles of the statutes.

The Index. A separate index has been prepared for each Code in accordance with the plan of the Revised Criminal Statutes. The indices in the new compilation are more complete than those of the Revised Statutes. While the index headings used in the Revised Statutes appear in the indices of the present compilation, many new headings have been added and the old ones have been made more complete. Where the annotations cover subjects extending beyond the literal text of the statute, those subjects have been carried into the index, thus making the annotations more readily accessible and giving them the character of an Index Digest.

Tables of Session Laws. Immediately preceding the index in each of the Codes appears a table showing the place in the new compilation where the new laws passed at the regular and called sessions of 1911, 1913 and 1915, are to be found. Preceding each of these tables is an additional table showing subsisting laws enacted during the period between the revision of 1895 and that of 1911, and carried into the new compilation on account of their omission from the Revised Criminal Statutes of 1911. In these tables of omitted laws appear a few acts relating to criminal matters passed prior to the revision of 1895 which were not carried into that revision, but which survive the repealing clause in the act adopting such revision by having been incorporated in the Revised Civil Statutes of 1895 and 1911.

Article 1. [1] Design of the Code.—The design of enacting this Code is to define in plain language every offense against the laws of this state, and affix to each offense its proper punishment. [P. C. 1.]

Construction of Code.—The court will construe the Code so that all its provisions may be upheld if consistent with the intent of the Legislature. Talley v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 255.

Juvenile delinquents.—The statute authorizing the dismissal of indictments against boys under 17 and girls under 13, and the institution of proceedings against them as delinquents, is not in contravention of this article. Ex parte Bartee (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1051.

Art. 2. [2] Object of punishment.—The object of punishment is to suppress crime and reform the offender. [P. C. 2.]

Art. 3. [3] All penalties must be affixed by written law.—In order that the system of penal law in force in this state may be complete within itself, and that no system of foreign laws, written or unwritten, may be appealed to, it is declared that no person shall be punished for any act or omission, unless the same is made a penal offense, and a penalty is affixed thereto by the written law of this state. 7. — Amendments of statutes.—As to mode, see Hasselmeyer v. State, 1 App. 690. Const., art. 3, sec. 36.

8. Punishable offenses.—It seems to have been the intention, in adopting the Codes, to prevent all future penal enactments unless they were appended to and made parts thereof. State v. Garcia, 38 Tex. 543.

Unless the written law makes an act or omission an offense, and affixes thereto a penalty, such act or omission can not be punished. Rogers v. State, 8 App. 401; Smith v. State, 7 App. 286. The object of this article was to prohibit prosecution for what was an offense at common law, but not made penal by our statutes. Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 353; Allen v. State, 34 Tex. 230; State v. Flynn, 35 Tex. 354; State v. Randle, 41 Tex. 292; Johnson v. State, 4 App. 63. And see Ringo v. State, 54 App. 561, 114 S. W. 119.

If the inculpatory acts enumerated in two different articles of the Code be the same, and the penalties prescribed be different, neither is enforceable because of uncertainty as to penalty. Cooper v. State, 25 App. 530, 8 S. W. 654. See in illustration the offenses defined by arts. 269, 477.

Because it fixes minimum penalty only, a penal statute is not vitiated. Myers v. State, 51 App. 463, 103 S. W. 859.

Indictment for pandering held insufficient. Houseman v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1036.

9. — Offenses eo nomine.—If an act or omission eo nomine, is made a penal offense, and a penalty is affixed thereto, it becomes an offense punishable under this article. Robinson v. State, 11 App. 309; Ex parte Bergen, 14 App. 52; Cross v. State, 17 App. 476; Smith v. State, 7 App. 286.

Sodomy and Fabrication of notarial certificate, formerly "not defined," are now punishable offenses. Ex parte Bergen, 14 App. 52; Cross v. State, 17 App. 476; Rogers v. State, 8 App. 401; Prindle v. State, 31 App. 551, 21 S. W. 360, 37 Am. St. Rep. 833. So, also, is fornication. Kelley v. State, 32 App. 579, 25 S. W. 425.

Pursuing business of peddling patent medicines without paying occupation tax is a penal offense. South v. State, 72 App. 381, 162 S. W. 510.

10. — Constructive offenses.—Our statutes are wholly intolerant of constructive offenses and constructive punishments. Republic v. Bynum, Dallam, 376; Mur- ray v. State, 21 App. 620, 2 S. W. 757, 57 Am. Rep. 623; Beeson v. State, 23 App. 406, 5 S. W. 118; Terry v. State, 25 App. 715, 8 S. W. 934.

11. — Previous law.—Under the previous law "fornication" not being defined in the code, could not be punished. State v. Foster, 31 Tex. 578; State v. Smith, 32 Tex. 167; State v. Rahl, 33 Tex. 76; Wolff v. State, 6 App. 195. Nor for the same reason could "sodomy." Fennell v. State, 32 Tex. 378; Frazier v. State, 39 Tex. 390. But the offense of "establishing a lottery" was held to be sufficiently defined. State v. Randle, 41 Tex. 292.

12. — Criminal contempt.—In the absence of statute making a criminal contempt an offense, habeas corpus to review an order committing relator to prison for such a contempt is not a "criminal case." Per Harper and Prendergast, JJ.; Davidson, P. J., dissenting. Ex parte Wolters, 64 App. 238, 144 S. W. 531.

13. — Juvenile delinquents.—The statute authorizing the dismissal of indictments against boys under 17 and girls under 18, and the institution of proceedings against them as delinquents, is not in contravention of this article. Ex parte Bar-tee (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1051.

14. Municipal ordinances.—As to municipal ordinances, see Ex parte Coombs, 38 App. 648, 44 S. W. 854; Ex parte Freeland, 38 App. 321, 42 S. W. 295; Ex parte Fagg, 38 App. 573, 44 S. W. 294, 40 L. R. A. 212; Harris County v. Stewart, 91 Tex. 133, 41 S. W. 650; Leach v. State, 36 App. 248, 36 S. W. 471; Ex parte Bell, 32 App. 308, 22 S. W. 1040, 40 Am. St. Rep. 778.

Art. 4. [4] Common law rule of construction, when.—The principles of the common law shall be the rule of construction, when not in conflict with the Penal Code or Code of Criminal Procedure, or with some other written statute of the state. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 156; P. C. 4.]

Cited, Slack v. State, 61 App. 372, 136 S. W. 1073, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 112; Ex parte Lingenfelter, 64 App. 30, 142 S. W. 555, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 765.

Rules for construction of Constitution.—A constitution is not to receive a technical construction, like a common law instrument or a statute; it is to be interpreted so as to carry out the great principles of government, not to defeat them. Hunt v. State, 7 App. 212. No principle of construction can empower the courts to treat as mere matter of form any express provision of the constitution. Cox v. State, 8 App. 254, 34 Am. Rep. 746. Constitutional provisions are absolutely mandatory, and can in no case be regarded as directory merely, to be obeyed or not, within the discretion of either or all of the departments of government. Hunt v. State, 22 App. 396, 3 S. W. 233; Holley v. State, 14 App. 505; Cox v. State, 8 App. 254, 34 Am. Rep. 746. Legislative power, except where the constitution has imposed limits upon it, is practically absolute. And where limitations upon it are imposed, they are to be strictly construed, and are not to be given effect as against the general power of the legislature, unless such limitations clearly inhibit the act in question. If the act itself is within the scope of legislative authority, it must stand. Baldwin v. State, 21 App. 591, 3 S. W. 109. Legislatures are not empowered to interpret the constitution, nor to abrogate the settled judicial construction of a constitutional provision. Powell v. State, 17 App. 345. The distinguishing characteristic between the federal and a state constitution is, that the former is but a grant of legislative power, and congress, in framing laws, can exercise only such authority as is granted; whereas, state constitutions are but limitations upon the plenary power with which otherwise the legislative department of the state was originally invested. The congress of the United States can enact no laws but such as the federal constitution, either expressly or by implication, authorizes it to enact. On the other hand, the power of a state legislature to enact laws is absolute, except as restrained by constitutional limitations, and these limitations are created and imposed by express words, or by necessary implication. In construing the constitution, the courts of the state must understand that the framers of the instrument, and the people who adopted it, employed and interpreted the words and language of the instrument in their ordinary sense. The object of construction, as applied to a written constitution, is to give effect to the intent of the people in adopting it. In the construction of written laws, it is the intent of the lawmaker that is to be enforced, which intent is to be found in the instrument itself; and it is to be presumed that language has been employed with sufficient precision to convey it, and, unless examination demonstrates that such presumption does not hold good in the particular case, nothing remains but to enforce it. Where a law is plain and unambiguous, whether it be expressed in general or limited terms, the legislature must be understood to mean what they have clearly expressed, and in such case no room is left for construction. The courts are not at liberty to search elsewhere for possible or even probable meanings, when one is plainly declared in the instrument itself. The constitution of the state is simply a chart containing limitations upon power, and when it declares how power may be exercised over any subject, then no power can be exercised over that subject in any manner not clearly within the plain import of the language of the constitution. Mere silence, or failure to provide for some particular feature of the subject, can not be construed into a neglect, omission, or an ignoring of that feature. It is a general rule that when the constitution gives a general power, or enjoins a duty, it also gives by implication every particular power necessary for the exercise of the one or the enjoyment of the other. The implication under this rule, however, must not be conjectural or argumentative. And it is further modified by another rule, that, where the means for the exercise of a general power are given, no other or different means can be implied as being more effective or convenient. And another rule is, that when the constitution defines the circumstances under which a right may be exercised, or a penalty imposed, the specification is an implied prohibition against legislative interference to add to the condition, or to extend the penalty to other cases. Holley v. State, 14 App. 505. In expounding a constitutional provision, such construction should be employed as will prevent any clause, sentence, or word from being superfluous, void, or insignificant. The thing to be sought is the thought expressed. Contemporaneous legislative construction is always considered of force. Cordova v. State, 6 App. 207. Effect is to be given, if possible, to the whole instrument, and to every section and clause. Lastro v. State, 3 App. 363.

And further on this subject, see Coombs v. State, 38 App. 648, 44 S. W. 854; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 36; Huntsman v. State, 12 App. 620; Trigg v. State, 49 Tex. 645; Gordon v. State, 43 Tex. 330; Hobbs v. State, 53 App. 71, 112 S. W. 308, following Porch v. State, 51 App. 7, 99 S. W. 1122, overruling Cline v. State, 36 App. 320, 36 S. W. 1099, 37 S. W. 722, 61 Am. St. Rep. 850, and Childers v. State, 30 App. 160, 16 S. W. 903, 28 Am. St. Rep. 899; State v. Sims, 43 Tex. 521; Ex parte Brown, 38 App. 295, 42 S. W. 554; 70 Am. St. Rep. 743; Smisson v. State, 71 Tex. 222, 9 S. W. 112; Holmes v. State, 20 App. 509; Leach v. State, 36 App. 248, 36 S. W. 471.

In interpreting a provision of a Constitution or Bill of Rights, words should be given their natural signification in the order and grammatical arrangement in which they are placed, and if, thus regarded, the words convey a definite meaning involving no absurdity or contradiction between the parts, that meaning must be given effect. Kemper v. State, 63 App. 1, 138 S. W. 1025.

Construction of statutes.—See as to rules of construction of the Penal Code and the Code of Procedure. Martin v. State, 40 Tex. 19; State v. Randle, 41 Tex. 292; Wilkerson v. State, 2 App. 255 (overruling Smith v. State, 43 Tex. 643); Nelson v. State, 1 App. 41; Williams v. State, Id. 465. See, also, notes to art. 9, post.

Under the rule that, when a provision is adopted from the Constitution or laws of another state or country, the construction placed thereon by the courts of that state or country is also impliedly adopted, the known and the settled construction of English statutes embodied in our own statutes or Constitution was impliedly adopted along with the statutes. Robertson v. State, 63 App. 216, 142 S. W. 533, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 440.

Rules for determining constitutionality of laws.—There is no question of the power of the courts to pronounce a statute unconstitutional and invalid. Lastro v. State, 3 App. 363. The rule is to ascertain whether the legislature is restricted or limited by the constitution. Logan v. State, 5 App. 306. But legislative enactments will not be held invalid unless clearly inconsistent with the constitution. Where there is a reasonable doubt in the judicial mind whether an act of the legislature is in conformity with the constitution, the legislation must be supported. Lastro v. State, 3 App. 363; Cordova v. State, 6 App. 207; Ex parte Mabry, 5 App. 93; Holley v. State, 14 App. 505; Ry. Co. v. Gross, 47 Tex. 428. See this doctrine criticised by Justice Lipscomb, in Thomas v. State, 9 Tex. 335. But where the conviction is clear, the duty of the court to condemn unwarranted legislation is imperative. The obligation of allegiance is to support the constitutive law; and that obligation is rendered eminently imperative upon the courts of last resort, they being the special depositories of the charter of the nation's constitutional will, and its peculiar guardians against all infractions. If a legislative act impugn the principles of the constitution, the act must yield; and, whenever it is brought before the courts, must be declared void. A government can scarcely be deemed free when the rights of the people are left solely dependent on the will of a legislative body, without any restraint. The judiciary is not only a co-ordinate branch of the government, but is a check interposed to keep the other branches within the limitations of the constitution; and the exercise of this great and paramount duty is essential to the existence and transmission of freedom. Ex parte Mabry, 5 App. 93. When a penal law prohibits two or more acts, it may be constitutional and valid as to one of the acts, and unconstitutional and invalid as to the other. Ex parte Kennedy, 23 App. 77, 3 S. W. 114; Holley v. State, 14 App. 506. The constitution of the United States being framed for the establishment of a national government, it is a settled rule of construction of that instrument, that the limitations it imposes upon the powers of government are in all cases to be understood as limitations upon the government of the Union only, except where the states are expressly mentioned. The fifth amendment to the constitution of the United States is not, therefore, a limitation upon the states, and the power to prosecute crime by information, or by other mode than by indictment of a grand jury, not being surrendered by the states, they may, and some of them do, exercise such power. Pitner v. State, 23 App. 366, 5 S. W. 210. In all cases involving clearly and unquestionably the constitutionality and validity of state laws, with reference to provisions of the constitution of the United States, the decisions of the supreme court of the United States clearly, certainly, and unequivocally expressed, are binding upon state courts. But see this case for an instance in which a state court declines to follow a decision of the supreme court of the United States, for several reasons. Asher v. State, 23 App. 662, 5 S. W. 91, 59 Am. Rep. 783. In determining the validity of a statute, assailed upon the ground that its enactment was not in conformity with some express requirement of the constitution, the courts are not confined to the verity usually imported on the face of the statute, if prima facie valid, but may go behind it to ascertain if the express requirement of the constitution was observed in its enactment. See a discussion of the decisions in Blessings v. Galveston, 42 Tex. 641, and Usener v. State, 8 App. 177, which hold a contrary doctrine to that just stated. Hunt v. State, 22 App. 396, 3 S. W. 233. See, also, Baldwin v. State, 21 App. 591, 3 S. W. 109. See, also, Ex parte Tipton, 28 App. 438, 13 S. W. 610, 8 L. R. A. 326.

If a provision inconsistent with the constitution be found inserted, it may be invalidated without interference with other provisions. Albrecht v. State, 8 App.

216, 34 Am. Rep. 737. It cannot be adjudged unconstitutional merely because it may contravene "public policy" or established customs and traditions, ib.; and when duly promulgated as laws, courts have no concern with mere irregularities in the mode of their adoption. Usener v. State, 8 App. 177.

— Legislative policy.—The courts are not concerned with the policy, expediency, propriety or the wisdom of the law-making power, and will not inquire into such matters. Engelking v. Von Wamel, 26 Tex. 469; Smith v. State, 18 App. 454; Davis v. State, 2 App. 425; Stapp v. State, 3 App. 138; Albrecht v. State, 8 App. 216, 34 Am. Rep. 737.

Art. 5. [5] Special provisions control general.—In the construction of this Code each general provision shall be controlled by a special provision on the same subject, if there be a conflict. [P. C. 5.]

Art. 6. [6] Unintelligible law not operative.—Whenever it appears that a provision of the penal law is so indefinitely framed or of such doubtful construction that it can not be understood, either from the language in which it is expressed, or from some other written law of the state, such penal law shall be regarded as wholly inoperative. Definiteness of laws.—The expression "light repairs" is indefinite. State v. International & G. N. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 165 S. W. 892.

— License law.—Peddling patent medicines without paying the occupation tax is punishable. South v. State, 72 App. 381, 162 S. W. 510.

— Punishment.—Indeterminate sentence law held indefinite. Ex parte Marshall, 72 App. 83, 161 S. W. 112.

Art. 7. [7] Judges to report defects in the law.—Whenever a court trying an offense is of opinion that the law is so defective as to have no operation, or when it appears that there has been a failure to provide for any offense, or class of offenses, which ought to be made punishable, the judge of such court shall report the same to the legislature at its next session, after such defect or omission shall have been discovered. [P. C. 7.]

Art. 8. [8] Prosecuting officers to report defects in the law.—It is also declared to be the duty of the attorney general to call the attention of the legislature, in his reports which are required by law to be made to the governor, to any defects or omissions in the penal law which he may observe, and in like manner the district and county attorneys shall communicate to the attorney general such suggestions as they may deem important touching the same subject. [P. C. 8.]

Art. 9. [9] General rule of construction.—This Code, and every other law upon the subject of crime which may be enacted, shall be construed according to the plain import of the language in which it is written, without regard to the distinction usually made between the construction of penal laws and laws upon other subjects; and no person shall be punished for an offense which is not made penal by the plain import of the words of a law. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 156; P. C. 9.]

Art. 9 GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO WHOLE CODE (Title 1

1. Common law rule changed—Legislative intent.
2. Meaning of language.
3. — General and specific words or provisions.
4. — Grammatical errors.
5. Preamble.
6. Construction with reference to other statutes.
7. — Conflicting provisions.
8. — Acts of same session.
9. Provisos and exceptions.
10. Statute adopted from other state or country.
11. Revisions and codes.

1. Common law rule changed—Legislative intent.—In the construction of a statute the legislative intent, if that intent can be ascertained, must govern. When that intention is discovered, it will prevail even over the literal import of words. Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355; Walker v. State, 7 App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595; Sartain v. State, 10 App. 651, 38 Am. Rep. 649; Fowler v. Poor, Dallam, 401; Hanrick v. Hanrick, 54 Tex. 109; Brooks v. Hicks, 20 Tex. 666; Rigby v. State, 27 App. 55, 10 S. W. 760; Scoley v. Sweatt, 28 Tex. 713; Edwards v. Morton, 92 Tex. 152, 46 S. W. 792; Albrecht v. State, 8 App. 313; Ex parte Robinson, 28 App. 511, 13 S. W. 786; Ex parte Creel, 29 App. 439, 16 S. W. 256; Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604; Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 567, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1132.

This article does away with the strict construction of penal statutes, and the plain import of language and the legislative intent, when manifest, control. Gentry v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 635; State v. Forrest, 30 Tex. 503; Speer v. State, 2 App. 246; Turman v. State, 4 App. 586; McGregor v. State, 4 App. 599; Graves v. State, 6 App. 228; Walker v. State, 7 App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595; Randolph v. State, 9 Tex. 521; Ex parte Gregory, 20 App. 210, 54 Am. Rep. 516; Murray v. State, 21 App. 620, 2 S. W. 757, 57 Am. Rep. 623; Searcy v. State, 40 App. 460, 50 S. W. 699, 51 S. W. 1119, 53 S. W. 344; Bowman v. State, 38 App. 14, 40 S. W. 796, 41 S. W. 635; Ex parte Woods, 52 App. 575, 108 S. W. 1171, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 450, 124 Am. St. Rep. 1107; Williams v. State, 52 App. 371, 107 S. W. 1125; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604; Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1043; Bradfield v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 734.

When a statute is capable of two constructions equally reasonable, that should be adopted which effects the intention of the law-making power, unless qualified or restricted by some patent provision of law rendering a contrary construction imperative. Albrecht v. State, 8 App. 313; Rigby v. State, 27 App. 55, 10 S. W. 760; Ex parte Creel, 29 App. 439, 16 S. W. 256; Ex parte Murphy, 27 App. 492, 11 S. W. 487; Ex parte Evers, 29 App. 539, 16 S. W. 343; State v. Connor, 86 Tex. 133, 23 S. W. 1103; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604.

Penal laws are not to be construed so strictly as to defeat the obvious intention of the Legislature. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604; Randolph v. State, 9 Tex. 521.

To arrive at the legislative intention the several parts of the act must be construed together. Estes v. State, 10 Tex. 300.

At common law, strict construction was applicable to highly penal statutes. Estes v. State, 10 Tex. 300; Sernett v. State, 17 Tex. 308.

When the words of a statute are not explicit, the intention is to be collected from the context, the occasion and necessity of the law, the mischief felt, and the remedy in view. Croomes v. State, 40 App. 672, 51 S. W. 924, 53 S. W. 882.

The intent of legislative acts is to be gathered from their entire context, as showing their general purpose, and particular words are to be taken in the sense in which, looking at the entire act, they appear to have been used, rather than according to their accepted lexicographic definition. City of Houston v. Potter, 41 Civ. App. 381, 91 S. W. 389.

The court, in construing the legislative intent in the adoption of the statute, may take into consideration contemporaneous legislative history. Williams v. State, 52 App. 371, 107 S. W. 1121.

To interpret the meaning of a statute, it is to be ascertained what was the fair, natural, and probable intent of the Legislature, taking into consideration contemporaneous history and the habits and activities of the people. Ex parte Roquemore, 60 App. 282, 131 S. W. 1101, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1186.

A thing which is within the intention of the Legislature is as much within the statute as if it were within the letter, while a thing which is within the letter is not within the statute, unless it be within its intention. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604.

The intention may be collected from the cause or necessity of the act. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604.

2. Meaning of language.—For the purpose of ascertaining the intention of the legislature in enacting a statute the language employed in the act is first to be resorted to. If the words employed are free from ambiguity and doubt, and express plainly, clearly, and distinctly the intent, according to the most natural import of the language, there is no occasion to look elsewhere. Murray v. State, 21 App. 620, 2 S. W. 757, 57 Am. Rep. 623; Smith v. State, 18 App. 454; State v. Delesdenier, 7 Tex. 76; Engelking v. Von Wamel, 26 Tex. 469; Holley v. State, 14 App. 506; Dodson v. Bunton, 81 Tex. 655, 17 S. W. 507; Ex parte Woods, 52 App. 575, 108 S. W. 1171, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 450, 124 Am. St. Rep. 1107. See, also, Fire Ass'n v. Love, 101 Tex. 376, 108 S. W. 158, 810.

Where a statute is ambiguous, remarks in debate made by the person proposing it are admissible to aid in its construction. Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

Only where there is ambiguity in the words of a statute may the court leave its strict letter and construe it in accordance with what appears from an examination of the whole act to have been the intention of the Legislature. Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 351.

3. — General and specific words or provisions.—When a particular class is spoken of, and general words follow, the class first mentioned is to be taken as the most comprehensive, and the general words treated as referring to matters ejusdem generis, with such class. Murray v. State, 21 App. 620, 2 S. W. 757, 57 Am. Rep. 623; R. v. Bynum, Dallam, 376; Ex parte Muckenfuss, 52 App. 467, 107 S. W. 1131. When there is nothing in the statute to limit its general words, they must have general effect. Laughter v. Seela, 59 Tex. 177.

Whenever it is found that an act makes a general provision, apparently for all cases, and at the same time contains a special provision for a particular class of cases, the special provision must govern as to the particular class. Perez v. Perez, 59 Tex. 322.

4. — Grammatical errors.—“Grammatical errors shall not vitiate a law, and a transposition of words and clauses may be resorted to when the sentence or clause is without meaning as it stands, and in no case shall the punctuation of a law control or affect the intention of the legislature in the enactment.” Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 5503. This rule, though declared in a civil statute, is applicable and binding in the construction of a penal statute. Murray v. State, 21 App. 620, 2 S. W. 757, 57 Am. Rep. 623; Rigby v. State, 27 App. 55, 10 S. W. 760; Bradstreet v. Gill, 72 Tex. 115, 9 S. W. 753, 2 L. R. A. 405, 13 Am. St. Rep. 768; Ex parte Rodriguez, 39 Tex. 705, compared.

5. Preamble.—In the interpretation of a statute, resort may be had to the preamble, but it cannot limit or control the express provisions of the statute. And the statement of legislative reasons in the preamble will not affect the validity of the statute. Sutherland v. De Leon, 1 Tex. 250, 46 Am. Dec. 100; Ex parte Gregory, 20 App. 210, 54 Am. Rep. 516. And see Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

6. Construction with reference to other statutes.—It is a well settled rule in the construction of statutes, and for the purpose of arriving at the legislative intentions, that all laws in pari materia, or on the same subject-matter, are to be taken together, examined and considered as if they were one law. Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355; Napier v. Hodges, 31 Tex. 287; Taylor v. State, 3 App. 169; Walker v. State, 7 App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595; Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418; Selman v. Wolfe, 27 Tex. 68; Hanrick v. Hanrick, 54 Tex. 101.

Where one statute deals with a subject comprehensively and another statute deals with part of the same subject in a more definite way, the two should be read together if possible with a view to giving effect to both, but, under any necessary conflict, the special act must prevail. Ex parte Townsend, 64 App. 350, 144 S. W. 628, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 814.

7. — Conflicting provisions.—Where there is an irreconcilable repugnancy between two statutes, or statutory provisions, the rule seems to be, that the statute or provision last enacted controls the former enactment, and is to be regarded as the law. This rule, however, obtains only in cases where there is such absolute repugnancy, as that both statutes or provisions can not stand together, and the court is, of necessity, compelled to give effect to one as expressive of the legislative intention rather than the other. Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355; Davis v. State, 2 App. 425; Chiles v. State, 1 App. 27; Ex parte Segars, 32 App. 553, 25 S. W. 26; Nobles v. State, 38 App. 330, 42 S. W. 978; Ratigan v. State, 33 App. 301, 26 S. W. 407; Ragazine v. State, 47 App. 46, 84 S. W. 832. And see Gulf Ry. Co. v. Ram-bolt, 67 Tex. 654, 4 S. W. 356; Ex parte Wood, 36 App. 7, 34 S. W. 965.

A construction which repeals former statutes, by implication, is not to be favored; the repugnancy must be plain and unavoidable. Neill v. Keese, 5 Tex. 23, 51 Am. Dec. 746; Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418; Williams v. State, 52 App. 371, 107 S. W. 1121.

Where two statutes can be given a construction to uphold both, it must be done. Williams v. State, 52 App. 371, 107 S. W. 1121; Lovett v. Casey, 17 Tex. 594.

Where there are several statutes upon the same subject, containing no express provisions of repeal, the presumption is that they are governed by one spirit and policy and are intended to be consistent and harmonious; and it is the duty of the Court, so far as is consistent with the language used, to give effect to that intention. This is most expressly so, in respect to statutes passed at the same session. Neill v. Keese, 5 Tex. 23, 51 Am. Dec. 746.

Where a subsequent statute, though not repugnant, in all its provisions, to a prior one, is clearly intended to prescribe the only rule which should govern, or where it is framed from another, some parts being omitted, the subsequent statute must be construed to repeal the prior one. Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418.

When the new statute, itself, comprehends the entire subject, and creates a new, entire, and independent system, respecting that subject matter, it repeals all previous laws respecting the same subject matter. Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418.

8. — Acts of same session.—In the construction of acts of the same session, the whole must be taken and construed as one act. Thus, it would not be a reasonable mode of construing acts of the legislature, so to construe them as to make one act repeal another passed at the same session. It can not be supposed that it was the legislative intention that acts thus passed should abrogate and repeal one another. Neill v. Keese, 5 Tex. 23, 51 Am. Dec. 746; Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355; Austin v. Ry. Co., 45 Tex. 234; Walker v. State, 7 App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595; Lovett v. Casey, 17 Tex. 594; McGrady v. Terrell, 98 Tex. 427, 84 S. W. 641; Garrison v. Richards (Civ. App.) 107 S. W. 861; Joliff v. State, 53 App. 61, 109 S. W. 176; Laughter v. Seela, 59 Tex. 177; Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 548, L. R. A. 1915C, 101; Ex parte Nitsche (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 1101.

9. Provisos and exceptions.—The office of a proviso, generally, is either to except something from the enacting clause, to restrain its generality, or to exclude some possible ground of misinterpretation of it, as extending to cases not intended by the legislature to be brought within its purview. A proviso must be considered in arriving at the intention of the legislature. Graves v. State, 6 App. 228. See, also, Campbell v. Wiggins, 85 Tex. 424, 21 S. W. 599; Ex parte Wood, 36 App. 7, 34 S. W. 965.

Exceptions in statute not extended by implication. Roberts v. Yarboro, 41 Tex. 449; Markham v. Carothers, 47 Tex. 21; Wallace v. Stevens, 74 Tex. 559, 12 S. W. 283.

Proviso construed strictly. Roberts v. Yarboro, 41 Tex. 450; Collins v. Warren, 63 Tex. 311.

State bound by rules of practice when no exception in its favor made by law. State v. Kroner, 2 Tex. 493.

Courts have no authority to extend exceptions in an act beyond the cases embraced in a fair construction of the act. Reynolds v. State, 1 App. 616.

On exceptions in local option law, see Gilbert v. State, 32 App. 596, 25 S. W. 632.

10. Statute adopted from other state or country.—The settled construction of English statutes embodied in our own statutes or Constitution was impliedly adopted along with the statutes. Robertson v. State, 63 App. 216, 142 S. W. 533, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 440.

11. Revisions and codes.—A subsequent statute which revises the entire subject-matter of a prior one, and which is intended as a substitute therefor, repeals the prior one, though it contain no repealing clause. Bryan v. Sundberg, 5 Tex. 418; Holden v. State, 1 App. 225; Stirman v. State, 21 Tex. 734.

The presumption is that the codifiers and the legislature did not intend to change the laws as they formerly stood, and accordingly a statute should be construed in the light of the former law. Ex parte Muckenfuss, 52 App. 467, 107 S. W. 1131 (following Runnels v. State, 45 App. 446, 77 S. W. 459); Braun v. State, 40 App. 236, 49 S. W. 620.

The Legislature, in re-enacting a statute in substantially the same terms, will be considered to intend that it shall be given the same meaning given the former statute by the courts. Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 940.

Where the meaning and intent of a revision or codification of the statutes is not plain, resort may be had to the original acts in order to arrive at a correct construction of the provisions. Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505.

The adoption of the Revised Code constituted a re-enactment of the laws included therein, which are to be construed the same as other acts passed by the Legislature. Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505.

Art. 10. [10] Words specially defined, how understood.—Words which have their meaning specially defined shall be understood in that sense, though it be contrary to their usual meaning; and all words used in this Code, except where a word, term or phrase is specially defined, are to be taken and construed in the sense in which they are understood in common language, taking into consideration the context and subject matter relative to which they are employed. [P. C. 10 and 28.]

This is O. C., arts. 10 and 28, revised and consolidated.

General and specific words.—See note under Art. 9.

Definitions.—“Knowingly” and “pass,” as those words are used in the statute denouncing the offense of uttering a forged instrument, are not words of technical signification, and the omission of the trial court to define the same to the jury was not error. Peterson v. State, 25 App. 70, 7 S. W. 530. See, also, Bautsch v. State, 27 App. 342, 11 S. W. 414; Childers v. State, 30 App. 160, 16 S. W. 903, 28 Am. St. Rep. 899.

It is unnecessary to define words generally understood. Blackburn v. State, 71 App. 625, 160 S. W. 687. Such as “procured.” Currington v. State, 72 App. 143, 161 S. W. 478. Act without emergency clause.—Belcher v. State, 39 App. 121, 44 S. W. 1106.

Number of votes required to pass emergency statute.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. McGlamory, 92 Tex. 150, 41 S. W. 466.

Computation of 90 days.—Halbert v. San Saba Springs Land & Live-Stock Ass'n, 89 Tex. 230, 34 S. W. 639, 49 L. R. A. 193.

Statute operates on the day it becomes a law.—Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Lynch, 22 Civ. App. 336, 55 S. W. 389.

Art. 14. [14] Ignorance no excuse.—After a law has taken effect, no person shall be excused for its violation upon the ground that he was ignorant of its provisions. [P. C. 13.]

Ignorance as excuse.—Ignorance of law is no excuse, and every person is required, at his peril, to take cognizance of it. Chaplin v. State, 7 App. 87; Thompson v. State, 26 App. 94, 9 S. W. 486; Hughes v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 173; Collmorgen v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 519.

Ignorance of fact is a different matter and may be a defense. Hailes v. State, 15 App. 93. Compare with Jones v. State, 32 App. 533, 25 S. W. 124.

When the criminality of an act depends solely upon the intention with which it was done, the ignorance of the party charged, or his inability to obtain proper information, may be considered in determining his guilt. State v. Sparks, 27 Tex. 705.

Local custom cannot supersede a law. Lawrence v. State, 20 App. 536 (overruling Debbs v. State, 43 Tex. 650); McNeely v. State, 49 App. 286, 92 S. W. 419.

No one is excused by his ignorance of the law; knowledge of the law being conclusively presumed. Crain v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 155.

The acts of every person must be reviewed from the standpoint that he knew the law. Taff v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 214.

Mistake of law.—See post, Art. 46.

Art. 15. [15] Effect of modification by subsequent law.—When the penalty for an offense is prescribed by one law, and altered by a subsequent law, the penalty of such second law shall not be inflicted for a breach of the law committed before the second shall have taken effect. In every such case the offender shall be tried under the law in force when the offense was committed, and if convicted, punished under that law; except that when by the provisions of the second law the punishment of the offense is ameliorated, the defendant shall be punished under such last enactment, unless he elect to receive the penalty prescribed by the law in force when the offense was committed. [P. C. 14.]

Punishment, and election as to penalty.—See Greer v. State, 22 Tex. 588; Rich v. State, 9 App. 176.

When the punishment for an offense is ameliorated by statute after its commission, the defendant, upon conviction, must be punished according to the later enactment, unless he elect to receive the penalty affixed by the former law, and such election must be made before verdict. The defendant can not elect, except in case of amelioration. If the later statute increases the punishment, he must be punished according to the former law. Maul v. State, 25 Tex. 168; Veal v. State, 8 App. 474; Perez v. State, Id. 610; McInturf v. State, 20 App. 335; Allen v. State, 7 App. 298; Doran v. State, Id. 385; Noftsinger v. State, Id. 301; Wall v. State, 18 Tex. 682, 70 Am. Dec. 302; Blount v. State, 34 App. 640, 31 S. W. 652; Ledbetter v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 479.

The punishments for murder were not ameliorated by the Code, Wall v. State, 18 Tex. 682, 70 Am. Dec. 302; nor by the amendments of 1858, Cockrum v. State, 24 Tex. 394; nor by the Constitution of 1870, Art. V, § 8. The latter only vested in the jury a power of commuting punishment theretofore vested in the executive, Dawson v. State, 33 Tex. 491; Hunt v. State, 7 App. 212; nor, it seems, was the change effected by the revision of 1879. Walker v. State, 7 App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595.

Where two offenses are included in the same indictment, and the penalty as to one or more of such offenses has been ameliorated, the defendant has the right to elect as to either or all so ameliorated. If the election be as to the highest offense only, which has been ameliorated and there has been no amelioration as to the lower offenses, on conviction of one of such lower offenses, the punishment must be fixed according to former law. Maul v. State, 25 Tex. 166; Jenkins v. State, 28 App. 86, 12 S. W. 411; Johnson v. State, 28 App. 562, 13 S. W. 1005.

In Noftsinger v. State, 7 App. 301, which was a prosecution for murder in the first degree, the defendant elected to be punished under the former law fixing the punishment at death absolutely, which punishment was assessed against him, and on appeal the conviction was affirmed. But had not the defendant elected to be punished under the former law, it would have been the imperative duty of the court to have given him the benefit of the ameliorated punishment. McInturf v. State, 20 App. 335.

In Doran v. State, 7 App. 385, the conviction was for murder in the first degree. At the time of the commission of the offense the penalty was death absolutely. At the time of the trial the penalty had been changed to the alternative one of death or confinement for life in the penitentiary. Held, that the court should have submitted to the jury the alternative punishment.

One who committed a homicide before the law abolishing the degrees of murder became effective was entitled to be tried and sentenced under the old law. Hill v. State, 72 App. 109, 161 S. W. 118. See, also, Johnson v. State, 72 App. 178, 161 S. W. 1098; Ybarra v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 10.

The court should charge the jury as to the definition of murder under the old law, but, as to the penalty, under the new law. Robbins v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 528.

Objection to charge with a requested instruction held to constitute an "election" to be tried under the murder law existing when the offense was committed. Herrera v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 719.

Failure to object to instruction may be treated as an election to be tried under the old law. Echols v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 786.

— Amelioration.—The offense was committed before the new law took effect but the trial was had after. The old law provided for fine or imprisonment, while the new law provided for fine or imprisonment or both, so that the punishment was not ameliorated, though both fine and imprisonment was less under the new law. Hence the penalty under the old law should have been charged. Kendall v. State, 55 App. 139, 114 S. W. 833.

— Doubt as to penalty.—If it is doubtful whether the later statute mitigates the penalty, defendant should be permitted to decide for himself. The greater punishment does not necessarily produce the most physical suffering, but that which is most ignominious. Herber v. State, 7 Tex. 72; see, also, Greer v. State, 22 Tex. 588.

— Trial.—An ameliorating statute taking effect after the trial has commenced, is not operative in the case. From beginning to end the case must be tried under the law in force when the trial began. Simms v. State, 8 App. 230; Myers v. State, Id. 321.

— Violation of local option law.—One charged with violating the local option law, prior to the statute making a sale of intoxicating liquor a felony, is properly tried and punished under the statute, making a sale of liquor a misdemeanor, in force at the time of the offense. Sandoloski v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 151.

Art. 16. [16] Repeal, effect of.—The repeal of a law, where the repealing statute substitutes no other penalty, will exempt from punishment all persons who may have offended against the provisions of such repealing [repealed] law, unless it be otherwise declared in the repealing statute. [P. C. 15.]

Cited, Ex parte Cassens, 57 App. 377, 122 S. W. 888; Cook v. State, 71 App. 532, 160 S. W. 465; Johnson v. State, 72 App. 178, 161 S. W. 1098; Robbins v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 528.

Effect on pending proceedings.—This article applies as well to proceedings in an appellate court, as to the court having original cognizance of the offense. Wall v. State, 18 Tex. 682, 70 Am. Dec. 302; Sheppard v. State, 1 App. 522, 28 Am. Rep. 422; Hubbard v. State, 2 App. 506; Tuxton v. State, 4 App. 472; Halfin v. State, 5 App. 212; Chaplin v. State, 7 App. 87; Monroe v. State, 8 App. 343; Fitze v. State, 13 App. 372; Mulkey v. State, 16 App. 53; Whisenhunt v. State, 18 App. 491; Woodlief v. State, 21 App. 412, 2 S. W. 812; Boone v. State, 12 App. 184; Etter v. R'y Co., 2 Willson Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 58; Kenyon v. State, 31 App. 13, 23 S. W. 191.

The repeal of a law substituting no other penalty, operates to nullify convictions under the repealed statute. Fitze v. State, 13 App. 372; Monroe v. State, 8 App. 343; Boone v. State, 12 App. 184; Kenyon v. State, 31 App. 13, 23 S. W. 191; Sullivan v. State, 32 App. 50, 22 S. W. 44. And see Dickinson v. State, 38 App. 472, 41 S. W. 759, 43 S. W. 520; Ex parte Coombs, 38 App. 648, 44 S. W. 854; Hall v. State, 52 App. 195, 106 S. W. 149, dismissing appeal from conviction under repealed law.

Local option law.—The foregoing rule does not apply to the local option law, nor does the repeal exempt from prosecution those who offended the law while in operation. This statute is constitutional. Ezzell v. State, 29 App. 521, 16 S. W. 782.

Effect of repeal of civil statute.—The repeal of a civil statute for the enforcement of which a penalty has been enacted, operates as a repeal of the latter. State v. Robinson, 19 Tex. 478.

Mode of repeal.—A statutory provision may be repealed by an amendment of the act which omits the provision. State v. Andrews, 20 Tex. 230; Holden v. State, 1 App. 225.

The legislature can repeal a definite part of a section or article by omitting and not re-enacting the repealed part. Such mode is constitutional. Chambers v. State, 25 Tex. 307. And see Greer v. State, 22 Tex. 588, and compare Chaplin v. State, 7 App. 87.

A general repealing clause extends only to those acts on the same subject, or parts of such acts, clearly inconsistent with the repealing act, and only to the extent of the conflicting provisions. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

— Amendments.—Where a section of a statute is amended, and the amendment is made in such terms that it stands in the stead of such section, and by a subsequent act the said section is expressly repealed, the amendment is also repealed. Greer v. State, 22 Tex. 588.

An enactment which purports merely to amend a repealed act is of no effect. The amendatory act fails when a repealing and an amendatory act, referring to the same law, take effect on the same day. Robertson v. State, 12 App. 541.

— Legislative intent.—The question of repeal is one of legislative intent. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626; Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759.

— Implied repeal.—Repeals by implication are not favored. Hunt v. State, 7 App. 212; Thouvenin v. Rodrigues, 24 Tex. 468; Napier v. Hodges, 31 Tex. 287; Walker v. State, 7 App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595; Harold v. State, 16 App. 157; Frasher v. State, 3 App. 264, 30 Am. Rep. 131; Taylor v. State, 3 App. 169; Rogers v. Watrous, 8 Tex. 62, 58 Am. Dec. 100; Tunstall v. Wormley, 54 Tex. 476; Ex parte Keith, 47 App. 283, 83 S. W. 683. And see also generally, Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355; Stirman v. State, 21 Tex. 734; Ex parte Valasquez, 26 Tex. 178; Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

To constitute a repeal by implication, the new statute must cover the whole subject-matter of the old one, and prescribe different penalties. There must be an irreconcilable repugnancy between the two acts, and the repugnancy must be plain and unavoidable. Walker v. State, 7 App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595; Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 370; Austin v. State, 61 App. 573, 135 S. W. 1167; Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626; Morales v. State, 36 App. 234, 36 S. W. 435, 846.

Where a new law covers the whole subject-matter of an old and prescribes a different penalty, the old law is repealed by implication. Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713; Stebbins v. State, 22 App. 32, 2 S. W. 617.

To make a later act repeal a previous one of the same session, there must be an irreconcilable repugnancy. Even if the acts are of different sessions, in the absence of an express appeal they must be reconciled if possible, Taylor v. State, 3 App. 169; and the rules laid down in Rogers v. Watrous, 8 Tex. 62, 58 Am. Dec. 100, are not applicable in the construction of acts passed at the same session. Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355. But if they are irreconcilably repugnant the later must prevail, Chiles v. State, 1 App. 27; and the later statute controls, although it is a municipal charter. Davis v. State, 2 App. 425.

When a subsequent statute, revising the subject-matter of a former one, is evidently intended as a substitute for it, although it contains no express words to such effect, it must be held to operate to repeal the former, to the extent to which its provisions are revised and supplied. Harold v. State, 16 App. 157; Holden v. State, 1 App. 226; Stirman v. State, 21 Tex. 734; Etter v. R'y Co., 2 Willson Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 58; Cain v. State, 20 Tex. 355; Rogers v. Watrous, 8 Tex. 62, 58 Am. Dec. 100; Ex parte Valasquez, 26 Tex. 178.

This rule applies to a subsequent general law and a pre-existing special law— as, for instance, the Terrell election law and the local option law. Ex parte Keith, 47 App. 283, 83 S. W. 683; Arrington v. State, 48 App. 541, 89 S. W. 643;

Special laws and legislation to be made operative by the voters of a particular locality, and laws of kindred character, are not repealed by general laws unless specially mentioned in such general laws, or the purpose to repeal is clearly manifest. Ex parte Neal, 47 App. 441, 83 S. W. 831.

Revision including repealed laws.—Repealed laws remained repealed though included in the revision by the commissioners. Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713.

Art. 17. [17] When new penalty is substituted.—When by the provisions of a repealing statute a new penalty is substituted for an offense punishable under the act repealed, such repealing statute shall not exempt from punishment a person who has offended against the repealed law while it was in force, but in such case the rule prescribed in article 15 shall govern. [P. C. 16.]

Penalty.—Where the penalty is simply increased by the new law, the prosecution under the old law is not abated. Gill v. State, 30 Tex. 514; Roberts v. State, 17 App. 148.

One charged with homicide committed before the new murder law can be tried and convicted under the old law but he is punishable under the new law. Cook v. State, 71 App. 532, 160 S. W. 465; Ybarra v. See, also, notes under art. 15.

Art. 18. [18] Change of definition, effect of.—If an offense be defined by one law, and by a subsequent law the definition of the offense is changed, no such change or modification shall take effect as to offenses already committed; but all offenders against the first law shall be tried, and their guilt or innocence determined in accordance with the provisions thereof. [P. C. 17.]

Murder.—As to trial and punishment under statute consolidating the offenses of first and second degree murder, and substituting a new penalty. See Cook v. State, 71 App. 532, 160 S. W. 465; Hill v. State, 72 App. 109, 161 S. W. 118; Johnson v. State, 72 App. 178, 161 S. W. 1098; James v. State, 72 App. 457, 163 S. W. 61; Jones v. State, 72 App. 504, 163 S. W. 81; Ybarra v. State (Cr. See, also, notes under art. 15.

Art. 19. [19] Previous offenses not affected by this Code.—No offense committed, and no fine, forfeiture or penalty incurred under existing laws, previous to the time when this Code takes effect, shall be affected by the repeal herein of any such existing laws, but the punishment of such offenses, and the recovery of such fines and forfeitures, shall take place as if the law repealed had still remained in force, except that when any penalty, forfeiture or punishment shall have been mitigated by the provisions of this Code, such provision shall apply to and control any judgment to be pronounced after this Code shall take effect, for any offense committed before that time, unless the defendant elect to be punished under the provisions of the repealed law. [P. C. 18.]

See Chaplin v. State, 7 App. 87; Walker v. State, 7 App. 245, 32 Am. Rep. 595; Ybarra v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 10; Robbins v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 528.

Change of penalty.—See art. 15 and notes.

Art. 20. [20] No cumulative penalties.—No penalty affixed to an offense by one law shall be considered as cumulative of penalties prescribed under a former law, and in every case where a new penalty is prescribed for an offense, the penalty of the first law shall be considered as repealed, unless the contrary be expressly provided in the law last enacted. [P. C. 19.]

Cumulative remedy.—In Bush v. Republic, 1 Tex. 455, it is held that if a statute prohibits an act, under a penalty to be enforced by indictment, and a subsequent statute gives a qui tam action for such penalty, the latter is merely cumulative of, and does not repeal, the remedy given by the former statute.

Art. 25. [25] "Accused" and "defendant" synonymous.—The word "accused" is intended to refer to any person who, in a legal manner, is held to answer for any offense, at any stage of the proceeding, or against whom complaint, in a lawful manner, is made, charging the commission of an offense, including all proceedings from the order for arrest to the final execution of the law; and the word "defendant" is used in the same sense. [P. C. 24.]

[26] "Criminal action" defined.—A "criminal action," as used in this Code, means the whole, or any part, of the procedure which the law provides for bringing offenders to justice; and the terms "prosecution," "criminal prosecution," "accusation," and "criminal accusation," are used in the same sense. Article 32. [32] The persons punishable under this Code.—All persons, whether inhabitants of this state or of the United States, or aliens, are amenable to punishment for offenses which are defined and made punishable under the provisions of this Code. The exceptions to the general rule here laid down are given in the subsequent articles of this title. [Act October 31, 1866, p. 70; P. C. 32.]

See arts. 959, 1431, 1432, post, and notes. See, also, arts. 5275, 5276, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Operation of laws as to nonresidents.—The penal laws of the state are operative on nonresidents within the state. Ex parte Asher, 23 App. 662, 5 S. W. 91, 59 Am. Rep. 783.

Aliens.—Aliens are subject to the law of the territory wherein the crime is committed. Ex parte Martinez (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 959.

Excuse for violation of law.—That third persons have also violated the law is no excuse or justification. Hickman v. State, 64 App. 161, 141 S. W. 973.

Art. 33. [33] Indians not punishable, except when.—No act done within the uninhabited portion of the state, by individuals belonging to the several Indian tribes, in their intercourse with each other, or with other tribes, and affecting no other person, is considered an offense against this Code, but in all other respects, such individuals are upon a footing with all other persons, both as to protection and liability to punishment. 1. Discretion.—See Gardiner v. State, 33 Tex. 692.

Proof that the defendant knew the difference between good and evil, or that he was possessed of the intelligence of ordinary boys of his age, does not fill the requirements of the statute. It must be shown that he understood the nature and illegality of the act. Wusnig v. State, 33 Tex. 651; Parker v. State, 20 App. 451; *Carr v. 2. — Evidence.—Proof of discretion need not be made by direct and positive evidence, but may be shown by circumstances. Ragsdale v. State, 61 App. 145, 134 S. W. 234; *Wusnig v. 4. — Burden of proof.—Nonage must be proved by the accused; but, when the fact is shown the state must prove discretion. Scott v. State, 71 App. 41, 158 S. W. 814; *Wusnig v. 6. — Instructions.—See Rocha v. State, 38 App. 69, 41 S. W. 611.

In a prosecution against an infant for the theft of horses, a charge that, if the infant be found to be less than 13 years of age, then he cannot be convicted, unless he has discretion sufficient to understand the nature and illegality of the theft, sufficiently presented the question of the infant's incapacity. Pyron v. State, 138 S. W. 705.

7. — No issue as to discretion when accused is over 13.—Neal v. State (Cr. App.) 101 S. W. 212.

8. Infancy alone not a defense.—A minor who has arrived at years of discretion may be convicted of a violation of the local option law. Brown v. State, 47 App. 326, 83 S. W. 373.

9. — Infancy of person executing fraudulent mortgage.—Lively v. State (Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 321.

10. — Minor may plead guilty.—See Ex parte White, 50 App. 473, 98 S. W. 850.

11. Competency as witnesses.—See art. 788, subd. 2, C. C. P., and notes thereunder.

An infant of under 7 years is competent to testify in a capital felony. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 838. But, see Freasier v. State (Cr. App.) 84 S. W. 360.

12. Juvenile delinquents.—See C. C. P. art. 1195, et seq. and notes.

Art. 35. [35] Persons under seventeen years not punishable capitally.—A person, for an offense committed before he arrived at the age of seventeen years, shall in no case be punished with death; but may, according to the nature and degree of the offense, be punished by imprisonment for life, or receive any of the other punishments affixed in this Code to the offense of which he is guilty. [P. C. 37.]

Constitutionality of law.—The statute is constitutional. Ex parte Walker, 28 App. 246, 13 S. W. 861.

Evidence of non-age.—See Binkley v. State, 51 App. 54, 100 S. W. 780.

The burden of proving nonage rests upon the defendant. The maxim that the burden of proof never shifts from the state, means only that it never shifts in so far as it is necessary to make out the specific crime charged, by establishing the corpus delicti, and the constituent elements of the crime. Ake v. State, 6 App. 398, 32 Am. Rep. 586; Jones v. State, 13 App. 1; Taylor v. State, 3 App. 169; Ellis v. State, 30 App. 601, 18 S. W. 139; Wilcox v. State, 33 App. 392, 26 S. W. 989.

Evidence in a murder trial held sufficient the jury in finding that accused was more than 17 years old. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 965.

Ball.—A person under the age of seventeen years can not be punished with death. A capital offense is such only as can be punished with death. By force of this statute (art. 35), murder committed by a person under seventeen years old is per se bailable. Ex parte Walker, 28 App. 246, 13 S. W. 861; Walker v. State, 28 App. 503, 13 S. W. 860.

This article does not apply to an application, when accused was committed to an insane asylum after the offense and before conviction, for leave to take him out of the asylum on bond, in the absence of anything to suggest non-age at the time of the offense. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 117.

Punishment.—An accused under 17 years old, convicted of a capital offense, can not be punished with death. Ex parte Walker, 28 App. 246, 13 S. W. 861; Walker v. State, 28 App. 503, 13 S. W. 860; Ingram v. State, 29 App. 33, 14 S. W. 457.

Where evidence failed to show defendant seventeen years old, conviction with death penalty was erroneous, see Wilcox v. State, 32 App. 234, 22 S. W. 1109. See, also, dissenting opinion of Judge Simpkins, Id.

Minor sixteen years old, violating local option law, shown to have discretion, is punishable. Brown v. State, 47 App. 326, 83 S. W. 378.

The punishment for rape is imprisonment for life or for not less than 5 years; the maximum punishment of death not applying where accused is under 17 years. Munger v. State, 57 App. 384, 122 S. W. 874.

— Instructions and verdict.—If the jury are instructed to find for life imprisonment instead of capital punishment, in case of guilt and that accused was under seventeen, a verdict assessing the former punishment is good, without an express finding as to age. Taylor v. State, 3 App. 169.

Accomplice.—See art. 83.

Juvenile delinquents.—See C. C. P., art. 1195 et seq.

Art. 36. [36] Married woman, offenses by, etc.—A married woman who commits an offense by the command or persuasion of her husband shall not, in any case, be punished by death, but may be imprisoned for life, or a term of years, according to the nature and degree of the crime; and, in cases not capital, she shall receive only one-half the punishment to which she would otherwise be liable. [P. C. 38.]

See, post, art. 84.

Married woman as principal.—A married woman may be convicted as principal with her husband in the commission of a crime, such as keeping a bawdy house, where she did not act under coercion or duress. Barker v. State, 64 App. 106, 141 S. W. 529.

Art. 37. [37] Husband, etc., instigating offense, double punishment.—When it shall appear that a minor was aided or instigated in the commission of an offense by a relation in the ascending line, or by his guardian, or an apprentice under age by his master, or a wife by her husband, such relation, guardian, master or husband shall, at the discretion of the jury, in capital cases, be punished by death, and, in cases not capital, shall receive double the punishment imposed by law in ordinary cases for the same offense. [Act Oct. 31, 1866, p. 71; P. C. 39.]

See, also, post, art. 84.

Instigating offense.—Information, evidence and charge held to sustain a conviction of instigating a minor to loiter on school grounds. King v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 675.

Art. 38. [38] "Minor" defined.—The word "minor" as here and elsewhere used in this Code signifies a person under the age of twenty-one years. [P. C. 40.]

Cited, Schenault v. State, 10 App. 410.

Criminal responsibility.—Minor cannot be convicted of aggravated assault and battery on a female or child. Schenault v. State, 10 App. 410; Henkel v. State, 27 App. 510, 11 S. W. 671; White v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 826; nor can a minor be held responsible for fraudulent disposition of mortgaged property. Jones v. State, 31 App. 252, 20 S. W. 578.

"Adult" defined.—George v. State, 11 App. 95; Schenault v. State, 10 App. 410; Henkel v. State, 27 App. 510, 11 S. W. 671; Ellers v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 813.

Evidence of age.—Andrews v. State, 13 App. 343.

Art. 39. [39] Insanity a defense.—No act done in a state of insanity can be punished as an offense. No person who becomes insane after he committed an offense shall be tried for the same while in such condition. No person who becomes insane after he is found guilty shall be punished for the offense while in such condition. [P. C. 41.]

1. Criminal responsibility in general.—The law does not require, as the condition on which criminal responsibility shall follow the commission of crime, the possession of one's faculties in full vigor, or a mind unimpaired by disease or infirmity. The mind may be weakened by disease, or impaired, and yet the accused be criminally responsible for his acts. The accused can only discharge himself from responsibility by proving that his intellect was so disordered that he did not know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, and that it was an act which he ought not to do. If he had sufficient intelligence to know what he was doing, and to know that the act was wrong, and had the will and power to refrain from doing it, he is, in contemplation of law, responsible for the act committed. The rule adopted in this state as to the character of insanity which will exempt from responsibility for crime, is that at the time of committing the crime the accused was laboring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature or quality of the act he was doing, or, if he did know it, that he did not know he was doing wrong. The inquiry should be directed to his knowledge of right and wrong, with respect to the very act with which he is charged. Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500, 62 Am. Dec. 539; Webb v. State, 5 App. 596; Williams v. State, 7 App. 163; Clark v. State, 8 App. 350; King v. State, 9 App. 515; Warren v. State, 9 App. 619, 35 Am. Rep. 745; *Johnson v. W. 591; Riley v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 498; Cannon v. State, 41 App. 467, 56 S. W. 361; Griffith v. State, 47 App. 64, 78 S. W. 347; Kirby v. State, 49 App. 517, 93 S. W. 1030; Kelley v. State, 51 App. 151, 101 S. W. 230; Hogue v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 905; Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 627; Woods v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 633; Montgomery v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 813; Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

The test of insanity is confined to the capacity to distinguish between the right and wrong of the particular act, and does not go to the capacity and will power of person affected with insanity to restrain his actions. Hurst v. State, 40 App. 382, 46 S. W. 635, 50 S. W. 719.

There are no degrees of insanity as a criminal defense; one's guilt being tested by the question whether he knew the nature and quality of his act. Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455.

Insanity is "a defect of reason and disease of the mind." Shaffer v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1061.

Insanity must have controlled the will and taken away the freedom of moral action. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

Insanity merely exempts the accused from punishment without exonerating him from the charge of committing the offense. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

2. Delusion.—See Merritt v. State, 39 App. 70, 45 S. W. 21; Riley v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 498.

There is no difference between delusion and insanity. Boren v. State, 32 App. 637, 25 S. W. 775.

3. Partial insanity.—In general insanity, where the party claims total irresponsibility, general proof as to his knowledge of right and wrong is the test. If the issue be partial insanity, the inquiry is to his mental status at the time of, and with respect to, the particular act charged. Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500, 62 Am. Dec. 539.

This rule applies to the character of evidence to be tendered in the two different cases, and is subordinate to the general test, which is, "a knowledge of right from wrong." Giebel v. State, 28 App. 151, 12 S. W. 591. And see Rusk v. State, 53 App. 338, 110 S. W. 58.

4. Kleptomania.—Kleptomania is an uncontrollable propensity to steal, and is a species of insanity. Looney v. State, 10 App. 520, 38 Am. Rep. 646; Harris v. State, 18 App. 287; Massengale v. State, 24 App. 181, 6 S. W. 35; Giebel v. State, 28 App. 151, 12 S. W. 591; Frizzell v. State, 30 App. 42, 16 S. W. 751; Lowe v. State, 44 App. 224, 70 S. W. 206.

5. Insanity produced by intoxicating liquors or drugs.—See art. 41 and notes thereunder.

6. Moral insanity and irresistible impulse.—For a discussion of the doctrines of "moral insanity" and "irresistible impulse" the case of Leache v. State, 22 App. 279, 3 S. W. 539, 58 Am. Rep. 638, is referred to, from which it would seem that these doctrines are not recognized as law in this state, any farther than is conceded in that case, and in the case of King v. State, 9 App. 515. See, also, Hurst v. State, 40 App. 378, 46 S. W. 635, 50 S. W. 719; Lowe v. State, 44 App. 224, 70 S. W. 206; Cannon v. State, 41 App. 467, 56 S. W. 361; Hogue v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 905; Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455.

The law of uncontrollable impulse, superinduced by passion, is not recognized. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 802.

7. Somnambulism.—Somnambulism is not an indication of insanity. Fisher v. State, 30 App. 503, 18 S. W. 90.

8. Temporary insanity.—Distinction between "temporary" and "settled" insanity. Kelley v. State, 31 App. 216, 20 S. W. 357.

9. Trial of issue of insanity.—Procedure after conviction, see Code Cr. Proc. art. 1017 et seq.

The issue of insanity must be tried by the jury on affidavit, and, before trial, on indictment. Guagando v. State, 41 Tex. 626.

When one has been tried as to his sanity and found by the jury to be insane, this does not prevent his being tried for an offense and convicted, the plea of insanity being urged on the latter trial. Chase v. State, 41 App. 560, 55 S. W. 833.

The issue may be tried under the general plea of not guilty, along with other issues submitted to the same jury impaneled to try the special issue. Wilson v. State, 58 App. 596, 127 S. W. 548.

A finding that defendant was guilty of aggravated assault only held conclusive against the issue of insanity. Hogue v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 905.

Where it appears that accused has been adjudged insane, his trial should be continued until the jury has been impaneled to determine the question of sanity at the time of trial. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1146. See, also, Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

10. Instructions.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 929.

Evidence warranting charge, see notes under art. 735, C. C. P.

For approved charges upon this defense, see Clark v. State, 8 App. 350; King v. State, 9 App. 515; Massengale v. State, 24 Tex. 181, 6 S. W. 35; Frizzell v. State, 30 App. 42, 16 S. W. 751; Williams v. State, 7 App. 163; Duke v. State, 61 App. 441, 134 S. W. 705; Maxey v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 952; Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455; Montgomery v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 813.

When the defense is the insane propensity to steal known as kleptomania, and there is evidence tending to sustain that defense, the charge should distinctly present and specifically treat of the peculiar issue thus raised, and not stop with submitting the usual test of the defendant's ability in general to distinguish right from wrong. Looney v. State, 10 App. 520, 33 Am. Rep. 646.

Charge on issue of insanity produced by use of alcoholic stimulants, approved. Rather v. State, 25 App. 623, 9 S. W. 69.

It is proper for the court to charge on insanity generally and then apply the law to particular facts proved by defendant as to delusion. Merritt v. State, 40 App. 365, 50 S. W. 384.

It is not error for the court to charge that the issue of insanity must be "clearly proved." Smith v. State, 31 App. 14, 19 S. W. 252; Giebel v. State, 28 App. 151, 12 S. W. 591; Smith v. State, 22 App. 316, 3 S. W. 684.

For criticism of a charge upon insanity, see Boren v. State, 32 App. 637, 25 S. W. 775; Hunt v. State, 33 App. 252, 26 S. W. 206.

The words "lucid interval", being generally well-understood, need not be defined. Montgomery v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 813.

11. Bail.—One found to have become insane before trial may be restrained in an asylum, until he becomes sane, and he must be returned for trial to the custody of the court having jurisdiction, and he may not be released on bail. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 117.

12. Evidence.—See art. 40, and notes.

13. Issue on plea of guilty.—See arts. 565, 566, 781, C. C. P.

14. Separate trial of insanity after conviction.—See arts. 1017-1030, C. C. P. See, also, notes under art. 39, ante.

Art. 40. [40] Proof of insanity according to common law.—The rules of evidence known to the common law in respect to the proof of insanity shall be observed in all trials where that question is in issue. The manner of ascertaining whether the insanity is real or pretended, when it is alleged that the defendant became insane after the commission of the offense, is prescribed in the Code of Criminal Procedure. 1. Presumptions.—Every person is presumed to be of sane mind, until the contrary is shown. Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500, 62 Am. Dec. 539; Fisher v. State, 30 App. 502, 18 S. W. 90 (following Webb v. State, 5 App. 596; s. c., 9 App. 490); King v. State, 9 App. 515; Massengale v. State, 24 App. 181, 6 S. W. 35; Guerrero v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 731.

If insanity be proved to have existed at any particular period, it is ordinarily presumed to have continued. But this is the rule where the insanity proved is of a permanent character. Where the insanity is temporary or recurrent such presumption does not prevail, but, on the contrary, in such case, the law presumes the offense of such persons to have been committed in a lucid interval, unless it appears to have been committed in the time of his distemper. Leache v. State, 22 App. 279, 3 S. W. 539, 58 Am. Rep. 638; Webb v. State, 5 App. 596; Smith v. State, 22 App. 316, 3 S. W. 684; Hunt v. State, 33 App. 252, 26 S. W. 206; Nugent v. State, 46 App. 67, 80 S. W. 84; Sims v. State, 50 App. 563, 99 S. W. 555; Wooten v. State, 51 App. 428, 102 S. W. 416; Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1146.

For charge of court on this question, see Hunt v. State, 33 App. 252, 26 S. W. 206.

Art. 40 GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO WHOLE CODE (Title 1

Judgment in an insanity inquisition is only presumptive or prima facie evidence of insanity as to the time prior and subsequent to the adjudication. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1146.

The presumption from such adjudication does not prevent submission of the issue of insanity to the jury. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

The burden is on the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that one proved insane prior to the offense was sane at the time of the offense and responsible for his acts. Id.

As to effect of use of whisky containing cocaine, see Maddox v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1026.

2. Burden of proof.—Accused has the burden of proving insanity by a preponderance of evidence. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 627; Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500, 62 Am. Dec. 539; Leache v. State, 22 App. 279, 3 S. W. 539, 58 Am. Rep. 638; Hurst v. State, 40 App. 388, 46 S. W. 635, 50 S. W. 719; Boren v. State, 32 App. 637, 25 S. W. 775; Webb v. State, 5 App. 596; s. c., 9 App. 490; King v. State, Id. 515; Johnson v. State, 10 App. 571; Jones v. State, 13 App. 1; King v. State, Id. 277; Mendiola v. State, 18 App. 462; Smith v. State, 19 App. 95; Fisher v. State, 30 App. 503, 18 S. W. 90; Lovegrove v. State, 31 App. 491, 21 S. W. 191; Stanfield v. State, 50 App. 69, 94 S. W. 1057; McCulloch v. State, 50 App. 132, 94 S. W. 1056; Fults v. State, 50 App. 502, 98 S. W. 1057; Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455; Welch v. State, 71 App. 17, 157 S. W. 946; Douglass v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 933; Guerrero v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 731.

But where accused has been adjudged insane the state must show that he was sane at the time of the offense. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1146, 171 S. W. 229; Morse v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 927; Graham v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 726; Douglass v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 933.

It is not error to refuse to instruct for acquittal if there was a reasonable doubt of the defendant's sanity when he committed the homicide. King v. State, 9 App. 515; Webb v. State, Id. 490.

Insanity being established by a judgment of court, it devolves on the state to show its temporary nature. Hunt v. State, 33 App. 252, 26 S. W. 206.

It is not necessary that insanity be established beyond a reasonable doubt; it is sufficient if it satisfies the minds of the jury. Williams v. State, 37 App. 348, 39 S. W. 687.

Insanity must be clearly proved to authorize the jury to find that question in favor of accused. Wilson v. State, 58 App. 596, 127 S. W. 548.

3. — Plea of guilty.—Sanity of defendant is an issue under plea of guilty, and evidence on that issue should be introduced in connection with the plea. Burton v. State, 33 App. 138, 25 S. W. 782.

On a plea of guilty, the burden of proof is on the state to show that accused was sane when he committed the offense. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 975.

4. Mental condition in general.—Evidence of the state of mind of the accused, both before and after the alleged criminal act is admissible. Webb v. State, 5 App. 596; Warren v. State, 9 App. 619, 35 Am. Rep. 745; Hunt v. State, 33 App. 252, 26 S. W. 206; Leache v. State, 22 App. 279, 3 S. W. 539, 58 Am. Rep. 638; Williams v. State, 37 App. 348, 39 S. W. 687; Cannon v. State, 41 App. 467, 56 S. W. 351. See, also, Maxey v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 952.

As to physical tests and evidence, especially expert and non-expert, see McLeod v. State, 31 App. 331, 20 S. W. 749; Shaffer v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1061; Graham v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 726.

Letters written by defendant as evidence of sanity. Hunt v. State, 33 App. 252, 26 S. W. 206.

Where defendant tries to show that he acted upon insane delusions, state can show that the facts which he claimed to be delusions were real to rebut his theory of insane delusion. Merritt v. State, 40 App. 361, 50 S. W. 384.

General insanity renders the party wholly irresponsible, and general proof as to his knowledge of right and wrong is an appropriate test. In cases of partial insanity, the inquiry must be more particularly directed to the mental status at the time of and with reference to the particular act charged. Giebel v. State, 28 App. 151, 12 S. W. 591; Frizzell v. State, 30 App. 42, 16 S. W. 751; Fisher v. State, 30 App. 503, 18 S. W. 90.

On trial of grandmother for murder of infant grandchild to which she had been devotedly attached, defense was insanity, evidence conflicting. Held, that the judgment should have been set aside. Newberry v. State, 32 App. 145, 22 S. W. 412.

Defendant's manner at the trial having been introduced to show his insanity testimony of an expert that he was simulating is admissible. Burt v. State, 38 App. 397, 40 S. W. 1000, 43 S. W. 344, 39 L. R. A. 305, 330.

Accused's demeanor and appearance during trial may be shown as a circumstance to prove sanity or insanity. Lane v. State, 59 App. 595, 129 S. W. 353.

As to self-serving declaration, see Maxey v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 952.

The state may prove in rebuttal acts tending to establish sanity, though such rebuttal evidence shows the commission of other offenses. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

The state may show that conduct of the accused did not occur when he was not in view of the jury. Guerrero v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 731.

Where accused's defense was that he had been drinking to excess in the near past, was subject to spells of despondency, was of a melancholy and brooding disposition, and at such times did not comprehend the full measure of his acts, and was a paranoiac, though not insane, evidence of his condition six years or more before the homicide would be admissible on the issue of his condition at the homicide, if any facts or circumstances in evidence showed his mental condition to be other than that of a sane man at the homicide. Myers v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 1167.

5. Reputation.—Insanity cannot be proved by general reputation. Cannon v. State, 41 App. 467, 56 S. W. 351; Ellis v. State, 33 App. 86, 24 S. W. 894; Womble v. State, 39 App. 24, 44 S. W. 827; First Nat. Bank of Navasota v. McGinty, 29 Civ. App. 539, 69 S. W. 495; Wilson v. State, 58 App. 596, 127 S. W. 548.

Nor by what third persons have said. Montgomery v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 813.

6. Medical works.—A chapter in a standard medical work on mental and nervous diseases not competent. Montgomery v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 813.

7. Opinion evidence.—Nonexperts.—Upon an issue of insanity, witnesses who are not experts, are permitted to state their opinions and conclusions upon the facts to which they testify. McClackey v. State, 5 App. 320; Webb v. State, Id. 596; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 60; Holcomb v. State, 41 Tex. 125; Campbell v. State, 10 App. 560; Harris v. State, 18 App. 287; Mendiola v. State, 18 App. 462; Carr v. State, 24 App. 562, 7 S. W. 328, 5 Am. St. Rep. 905; Williams v. State, 37 App. 348, 39 S. W. 687; Burt v. State, 38 App. 397, 40 S. W. 1000, 43 S. W. 344, 39 L. R. A. 305, 330. A contrary doctrine was held in Hickman v. State, 38 Tex. 190; but that decision is evidently no longer the rule in this state. In Gehrke v. State, 13 Tex. 568, it was held that nonexpert witnesses should not be permitted to testify that they were conversant with persons well known to be insane, and that the conduct and appearance of the prisoner were like such as they had observed in said insane, and that the prisoner, in their opinion, looked and acted like one insane. In Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 60, it is said that the holding in the Gehrke case is not in conflict with the rule stated in the first sentence of this note. And in Webb v. State, 5 App. 596, the Gehrke case is declared overruled upon this point. Carr v. State, 24 App. 562, 7 S. W. 328, 5 Am. St. Rep. 905; McLeod v. State, 31 App. 331, 20 S. W. 749. The opinion of nonexperts is competent evidence only when the facts and circumstances upon which it is based are stated by such witness. Ellis v. State, 33 App. 86, 24 S. W. 894; Merritt v. State, 39 App. 70, 45 S. W. 21; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 60; Holcomb v. State, 41 Tex. 125; McClackey v. State, 5 App. 320; Webb v. State, Id., 596; Harris v. State, 18 App. 287; Mendiola v. State, Id., 462; Burton v. State, 33 App. 138, 25 S. W. 782; Adams v. State, 34 App. 470, 31 S. W. 372, overruling Gehrke v. State, 13 Tex. 568; Williams v. State, 37 App. 348, 39 S. W. 687; Betts v. State, 48 App. 562, 89 S. W. 413; Henderson v. State, 49 App. 478, 93 S. W. 551; Sims v. State, 50 App. 563, 99 S. W. 555; Freeman v. State, 46 App. 318, 81 S. W. 953; Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 860; Fults v. State, 50 App. 502, 98 S. W. 1057; Wells v. State, Id., 499, 98 S. W. 851.

A nonexpert may testify as to a mental condition if he has knowledge of the person's habits and conduct. Key v. State, 72 App. 129, 161 S. W. 130; Lane v. State, 59 App. 595, 129 S. W. 353; Jordan v. State, 64 App. 187, 141 S. W. 786; Maxey v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 952; Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455; Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1146; Brice v. State, 72 App. 219, 162 S. W. 874.

But such witness cannot give an opinion on a theoretical question, based on facts with which he is not familiar, or give an opinion as to what will be the result of a given course of conduct or disease as producing insanity. Maxey v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 952.

Witnesses who testified that they had been acquainted with accused could testify that they had never noticed anything peculiar about his conduct or appearance or speech which would lead them to conclude that he was insane; such testimony being a statement of facts from which the jury might form their own judgment. Turner v. State, 61 App. 97, 133 S. W. 1052; Rogers v. State, 71 App. 149, 159 S. W. 40.

Where sheriff gives defendant warning, such sheriff may give his opinion as to the sanity of defendant based on a conversation with him. Burt v. State, 38 App. 397, 40 S. W. 1000, 43 S. W. 344, 39 L. R. A. 305, 330.

A nonexpert's testimony that he did not believe that accused had mental strength to form and execute a design to take life, held, properly excluded. Lane v. State, 59 App. 595, 129 S. W. 353.

A jailer is not disqualified to testify because accused was in jail at the time witness made the observations on which opinion is based. Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455.

8. — Experts.—The opinion of medical experts is admissible as to the mental state of a person whom they have examined. Pigg v. State, 43 Tex. 108; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 60. They may also state their opinion upon the whole evidence, if they have heard it all, or upon a hypothetical statement which is in conformity with the whole evidence. But it is inadmissible to permit an expert to give his opinion upon anything short of the whole evidence in the case, whether he has personally heard it, or it is stated to him hypothetically. Nor can he be asked as to an hypothesis having no foundation in the evidence in the case, or resting on statements made to him by persons out of court. The proper question to be propounded to an expert to elicit his opinion upon the evidence in the case, or upon a hypothetical statement of it, is, "If the symptoms and indications testified to by the other witnesses are proved, and if the jury are satisfied of the truth of them, was the defendant in your opinion insane?" Webb v. State, 9 App. 490; Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 60; Johnson v. State, 10 App. 571; Betts v. State, 48 App. 522, 89 S. W. 413; Turner v. State, Id., 585, 89 S. W. 975.

Where the expert has not heard the evidence, each side has the right to an opinion from the witness upon any hypothesis reasonably consistent with the evidence, and, if meagerly presented in the examination on one side, it may be fully presented on the other; the whole examination being within the control of the court, whose duty it is to see that it is fairly and reasonably conducted. He may be asked by either party as to the reasons upon which his opinion is based; or he may, with leave of the court, give such explanation on his own account. Beyond this he can not go in such examination, though he may be examined in details in or-

A minister of the gospel, who had read some authors upon moral and intellectual science, but nothing upon insanity or medical jurisprudence, is not an expert. Burt v. State, 38 App. 397, 40 S. W. 1000, 43 S. W. 344, 39 L. R. A. 305, 330.

An expert may base his opinion upon the conduct of defendant while in jail, though defendant was unwarned. Burt v. State, 38 App. 397, 40 S. W. 1000, 43 S. W. 344, 39 L. R. A. 305, 330.

An expert witness must be introduced as such. Cannon v. State, 41 App. 467, 56 S. W. 351.

Defendant may show what he said to an expert in order to present the facts on which the opinion was based. Spivey v. State, 45 App. 496, 77 S. W. 444.

A physician who was not familiar with accused, having only seen him two or three times, and who had never noticed anything wrong with him except on one occasion, when accused seemed to have been greatly excited, was crying, and complained that deceased had assaulted him a few moments before, was not competent to testify as to accused's sanity or insanity. Cox v. State, 60 App. 471, 132 S. W. 125.

After a physician had given expert testimony tending to show that one accused of murder was a monomaniac, it was not error to exclude testimony by him as to various statements made to him by accused concerning past transactions, where such statements were not sought to be shown to establish a basis for the witness' opinion. Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455.

9. — Hypothetical questions.—On hypothetical questions, medical and non-medical expert witnesses, see Burt v. State, 38 App. 397, 40 S. W. 1000, 43 S. W. 344, 39 L. R. A. 305, 330; Shaffer v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1061.

Defendant, contending that a question is not full and complete, must submit a proper question. Shirley v. State, 37 App. 475, 36 S. W. 267.

10. Sufficiency of evidence.—As to sufficiency of evidence to support plea of insanity, see Lovegrove v. State, 31 App. 491, 21 S. W. 191; Newberry v. State, 32 App. 145, 22 S. W. 412; Jordan v. State, 64 App. 187, 141 S. W. 786; Woods v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 633; Montgomery v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 813; Lee v. State, 72 App. 237, 162 S. W. 843.

11. Charge of court.—See notes under art. 39, Penal Code, and art. 735, C. C. P. Willson's Cr. Forms, 929.

Art. 41. [41] Intoxication as a defense.—Neither intoxication nor temporary insanity of mind, produced by the voluntary recent use of ardent spirits, shall constitute any excuse in this state for the commission of crime, nor shall intoxication mitigate either the degree or the penalty of crime, but evidence of temporary insanity produced by such use of ardent spirits may be introduced by the defendant in any criminal prosecution in mitigation of the penalty attached to the offense for which he is being tried, and, in cases of murder, for the purpose of determining the degree of murder of which the defendant may be found guilty. It shall be the duty of the several district and county judges of this state, in any criminal prosecution pending before them, where temporary insanity is relied upon as a defense and the evidence tends to show that such insanity was brought about by the immoderate use of intoxicating liquors, to charge the jury in accordance with the provisions of this article. 1. Intent and effect of statute in general.—The meaning of our statute regulating intoxication as a defense to crime is: 1. Mere intoxication from the recent use of ardent spirits will not, of itself, in any case excuse crime. 2. Mere intoxication will neither mitigate the degree nor the penalty of crime. 3. Temporary insanity produced by such use of ardent spirits is evidence which may be used in all cases in the mitigation of the penalty, and also in murder, for the further purpose of determining the degree. Clore v. State, 26 App. 624, 10 S. W. 242. See, also, Williams v. State, 25 App. 76, 7 S. W. 661; Houston v. State, 26 App. 657, 14 S. W. 352; Reagan v. State, 28 App. 227, 12 S. W. 601, 19 Am. 2. Intoxication as defense.—Intoxication or temporary insanity caused by the voluntary recent use of liquor will constitute no excuse for the commission of crime. Lyles v. State, 64 App. 621, 142 S. W. 592; Wright v. State, 37 App. 627, 40 S. W. 491; Little v. State, 42 App. 551, 61 S. W. 483; Perkins v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 241; Stevens v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 944; Brice v. State, 72 App. 219, 162 S. W. 874.

3. — Delirium tremens or mania a potu.—Mania a potu or delirium tremens is a species of insanity, and excuses unlawful acts, although the intoxication which caused it may have been voluntary. Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500, 62 Am. Dec. 539; Zembrod v. State, 25 Tex. 519; Erwin v. State, 10 App. 700. See, also, Johnson v. State, 1 App. 146; Wenz v. State, Id. 36; Loza v. State, Id. 488, 28 Am. Rep. 416; Colbath v. State, 4 App. 76; McCarty v. State, Id. 461; Brown v. State, Id., 275; Payne v. State, 5 App. 35; Pugh v. State, 2 App. 539; Walker v. State, 11 App. 544; Scott v. State, 12 App. 31.

Temporary insanity produced by the use of intoxicating liquor is no defense unless the intoxicants have been used so continuously for so long a time and so excessively as to produce delirium tremens or mania a potu, and the criminal act takes place while the person is suffering therefrom. Truett v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 523. See, also, Kelley v. State, 31 App. 216, 20 S. W. 357, citing Clore v. State, 26 App. 624, 10 S. W. 242; Evers v. State, 29 App. 539, 16 S. W. 343; Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500, 62 Am. Dec. 539; Evers v. State, 31 App. 318, 20 S. W. 744, 18 L. R. A. 421, 37 Am. St. Rep. 811.

4. Evidence of intoxication in general.—Opinion evidence, see Stewart v. State, 38 App. 627, 44 S. W. 505.

That accused took two drinks of cherry bitters shortly before the assault is admissible on the issue of his intoxication. Wrage v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 55.

5. Admissibility in mitigation of punishment.—Evidence of intoxication is admissible in a homicide case in mitigation of the punishment. Lyles v. State, 64 App. 621, 142 S. W. 592.

6. Admissibility on question of motive and intent.—See Scott v. State, 12 App. 31; Reagan v. State, 28 App. 227, 12 S. W. 601, 19 Am. St. Rep. 833.

Under this article, evidence of the defendant's intoxication is properly limited to mitigation of the punishment to be assessed, and cannot be considered in determining intent. Baldwin v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 312; Stoudenmire v. State, 58 App. 258, 125 S. W. 399.

Prior to the enactment of the statute drunkenness was admissible on the issue of motive and intent. Wenz v. State, 1 App. 36; Loza v. State, 1 App. 488, 28 Am. Rep. 416.

Where law imputes an intent from the act committed evidence of intoxication to negative intent is not admissible. Little v. State, 42 App. 551, 61 S. W. 483.

Intoxication admissible to show that defendant, prosecuted for breach of the peace in rattling prosecutor's door, thought it was the door of another. Garrett v. State, 49 App. 235, 91 S. W. 577.

7. Admissibility to determine degree of crime—Decisions prior to statute.—Ferrell v. State, 43 Tex. 503; Colbath v. State, 4 App. 76; Brown v. State, 4 App. 275; McCarty v. State, 4 App. 461.

8. — Decisions under the statute.—Temporary insanity produced by the use of intoxicating liquors will not reduce homicide to manslaughter. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 657; Clore v. State, 26 App. 624, 10 S. W. 242; Houston v. State, 26 App. 657, 14 S. W. 352; Gaitan v. State, 11 App. 544; Hernandez v. State, 32 App. 271, 22 S. W. 972; Mays v. State, 50 App. 165, 96 S. W. 329; Truett v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 523.

Intoxication which does not amount to or produce temporary insanity is not admissible in evidence even for the purpose of determining the degree of murder. Young v. State, 53 App. 416, 110 S. W. 448, 126 Am. St. Rep. 792; Evers v. State, 31 App. 318, 20 S. W. 744, 18 L. R. A. 421, 37 Am. St. Rep. 811; Delgado v. State, 34 App. 157, 29 S. W. 1070; Gonzales v. State, 31 App. 508, 21 S. W. 253; Ex parte Evers, 29 App. 539, 16 S. W. 343.

Intoxication or temporary insanity produced by recent use of intoxicating liquors will be considered in passing on the question whether one is guilty of murder in the first or second degree, but it cannot be considered in fixing the grade of offense in any other instance. Lyles v. State, 64 App. 621, 142 S. W. 592; Burkhard v. State, 18 App. 599; Ward v. State, 19 App. 664; Bramlette v. State, 21 App. 611, 2 S. W. 765, 57 Am. Rep. 622.

Degrees of murder having been abolished, temporary insanity from the recent use of intoxicating liquors is available only in mitigation of punishment. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 657.

9. Toxicomania.—See Otto v. State, 47 App. 128, 80 S. W. 525, 122 Am. St. Rep. 682.

A person rendered temporarily insane by the voluntary recent use of cocaine or morphine cannot, during such insanity, be guilty of an assault with intent to murder. Edwards v. State, 38 App. 386, 43 S. W. 112, 39 L. R. A. 262; Edwards v. State (Cr. App.) 54 S. W. 589.

Art. 41 GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO WHOLE CODE (Title I

The statute does not apply to a morphine fiend, whose mind at the time of an offense was in an unbalanced condition; but if, from the use of morphine, his mind was incapable of rational action, he would not be responsible therefor. Moss v. State, 57 App. 620, 124 S. W. 647, 136 Am. St. Rep. 1001. See Edwards v. State, 38 App. 386, 43 S. W. 112, 39 L. R. A. 262.

10. Combination of causes of insanity.—One insane from the combined use of drugs and intoxicants, so that he did not know what he was doing, cannot be convicted of crime. Lawrence v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 636; Edwards v. State, 38 App. 386, 43 S. W. 112, 39 L. R. A. 262; Cannon v. State, 41 App. 467, 56 S. W. 351; Phillips v. State, 50 App. 481, 98 S. W. 869.

11. — Evidence.—As to evidence whether whisky contained so much cocaine as to render accused temporarily insane, see Maddox v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1026.

Where accused claimed that deceased gave him whisky containing cocaine, and that he was thereby rendered insane, evidence that deceased was drunk on the morning of the homicide was inadmissible. Maddox v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1026.

12. Common law rule.—Prior to the preceding enactment there was no statute relating to intoxication as a defense in criminal trials, but such defense was often interposed, and the courts passed upon it in the light of the common law. It was held that intoxication merely is not insanity, and where it was voluntary, could never afford an excuse nor even a palliation for crime. Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500, 62 Am. Dec. 539; Zembrod v. State, 25 Tex. 519; Colbath v. State, 2 App. 391.

To preserve his rationality is due from every person to society, and no injustice is done any one by holding him for his acts while voluntarily drunk. Colbath v. State, 4 App. 76. Simple voluntary intoxication is no excuse for crime. Carter v. State, 12 Tex. 500, 62 Am. Dec. 539; Outlaw v. State, 35 Tex. 481; Payne v. State, 5 App. 35.

It may be important in determining the character of his acts, as well as the purpose and intent with which they were done, Ferrell v. State, 43 Tex. 503; Wenz v. State, 1 App. 36; especially when the question is whether the murder is of the first or second degree, Colbath v. State, 2 App. 391; s. c. 4 App. 76; Brown v. State, 4 App. 275; McCarty v. State, 4 App. 461; or the assault was "with intent to murder," Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 36; Walker v. State, 7 App. 627; or the "entry" was burglarious, Johnson v. State, 1 App. 146; or the "taking" was with fraudulent intent, Loza v. State, 1 App. 488, 28 Am. Rep. 416.

It will not reduce a homicide to manslaughter; it can only be regarded in determining between the two degrees of murder. Farrer v. State, 42 Tex. 265; Ferrell v. State, 43 Tex. 503; Gaitan v. State, 11 App. 544; Fugh v. State, 2 App. 539.

13. Charge of court.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 931; Navarro v. State (Cr. App.) 43 S. W. 105.

In a murder case, the following charge upon the issue of intoxication was held to be in accordance with the statute, viz.: "You are charged that intoxication produced by the voluntary recent use of ardent spirits constitutes no excuse for the commission of crime; nor does intoxication mitigate either the degree or the penalty of crime. However, in a case where the defendant is accused of murder, as in the case before you, you may take into consideration the mental condition of the defendant for the purpose of determining the degree of murder, if you should find him guilty of murder." Charles v. State, 13 App. 658.

Where, in a prosecution for burglary, defendant claimed to have been so drunk as not to know what he was doing, and there was no evidence of insanity except that produced by use of intoxicating liquors, the court gave proper instructions under the article of the Penal Code as to parties drunk from the recent use of intoxicants, there was no error in refusing other instructions as to the necessity of intent at the time of breaking and entering, and as to intoxication bearing on the question. Doyle v. State, 59 App. 39, 126 S. W. 1131.

Where accused was intoxicated at the time of the alleged attempt to rape, a charge on the question of intent should have been given. Reagan v. State, 28 App. 227, 12 S. W. 601, 19 Am. St. Rep. 833.

On a trial for homicide, where, although the evidence showed that deceased was drunk and somewhat boisterous, no occasion for killing him on that account appeared, it was not error to fail to charge relative to his condition. Jackson v. State, 71 App. 297, 158 S. W. 813.

A charge conforming substantially to the language of the statute, is, ordinarily, sufficient. Williams v. State, 25 App. 76, 7 S. W. 661.

For a correct charge on drunkenness as a defense in case of assault with intent to rob, see Scott v. State, 12 App. 31.

Instruction as to effect of intoxication; held, error, but not reversible error. Tippett v. State, 37 App. 186, 39 S. W. 120.

Charge on combined use of drugs and whisky, approved. Cannon v. State, 41 App. 467, 56 S. W. 351.

Sufficiency of instruction on temporary insanity, see Young v. State, 53 App. 416, 110 S. W. 445, 126 Am. St. Rep. 792.

Where, on a trial for burglary, the undisputed evidence showed that accused entered, in the nighttime, the private residence of prosecutor, and that, if accused intended to steal, he was detected and arrested before accomplishing that purpose, and accused proved that he was so intoxicated that he did not know what he was doing, and the court charged that, if accused was so intoxicated that he did not have sufficient mind to form an intent, he must be acquitted, and that, before conviction, the jury must find that he entered with the intent to steal, a conviction will not be disturbed. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 571.

The charge as to mental condition produced by drugs should be separate and independent from a charge as to temporary insanity produced by ardent spirits. Edwards v. State, 38 App. 386, 43 S. W. 112, 39 L. R. A. 262; Otto v. State, 47 App. 128, 80 S. W. 525, 122 Am. St. Rep. 682; Phillips v. State, 50 App. 481, 98 S. W. 868; Burton v. State, 46 App. 493, 81 S. W. 742.

[47] Mistake of fact, excuse, when.—The mistake as to fact which will excuse, under the preceding article, must be such that the person so acting under a mistake would have been excusable had his conjecture as to the fact been correct; and it must also be such mistake as does not arise from a want of proper care on the part of the person committing the offense. Perjury.—See Art. 305 and notes.

Mistake of fact.—Information to the accused concerning a matter which, if true, would render it probable that the fact about which he claims to have been mistaken might therefore exist, is not an existing fact, supposed or real, concerning which he could be mistaken. A delusion as to facts, created under such circumstances is a "want of care" on his part. Tardiff v. State, 23 Tex. 169.

State*, 43 App. 608, 68 S. W. 170.

If one is clearly of the impression that he had the right to do what he did, and there are good reasons for this impression he is not guilty of wrongdoing, if the fact does not exist which he believes to exist. Giddings v. State, 47 App. 360, 83 S. W. 694.

Mistake as to intoxicating character of liquor sold in local option territory. Reed v. State, 53 App. 4, 108 S. W. 368, 126 Am. St. Rep. 765.

To kill while playing with a gun believed to be unloaded held no offense. Mc-Cray v. State, 63 App. 522, 140 S. W. 442.

An employé must show not only that he did not know that intoxicating liquors were for sale and that he did not knowingly sell them, but also that he could not have known by an exercise of proper care. Mealer v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 353.

As to marriage under a mistake of fact, see Coy v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 221.

Proper care.—Proper care in avoiding mistake of fact, is a question which is controlled by the particular facts of the case, and is an issue which is to be determined by the jury upon the evidence adduced. The court, in its charge upon this issue, should give the two preceding articles, without attempting to define the meaning of the words "proper care." Those words are not technical, having a fixed legal meaning, but are plain, common, well understood words, and need no explanation. Watson v. State, 13 App. 76; Halles v. State, 15 App. 93; Guest v. State, 24 App. 235, 5 S. W. 841; Mason v. State, 29 App. 24, 14 S. W. 71; Weatherford v. State, 31 App. 530, 21 S. W. 251, 37 Am. St. Rep. 828; Pettit v. State, 28 App. 240, 14 S. W. 127.

An employé must show not only that he did not know that intoxicating liquors were for sale and that he did not knowingly sell them, but also that he could not have known by an exercise of proper care. Mealer v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 353.

One must use care to ascertain whether liquor was intoxicating or not before offering to sell it. Mollenkopf v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 799.

Instructions.—Court must charge it in cases in which evidence raises mistake of fact. Jackson v. State, 47 App. 85, 79 S. W. 521, 80 S. W. 631; Mayne v. State, 48 App. 93, 86 S. W. 329; *Uloth v. Art. 48. [48] Act done by mistake, a felony, when.—If one intending to commit felony, and in the act of preparing for or executing the same, shall, through mistake or accident, do another act which, if voluntarily done, would be a felony, he shall receive the punishment affixed by law to the offense actually committed. [P. C. 49.]

Homicide.—As to excusable homicide see art. 1111, post.

If A. shoots at B., with express malice, and by accident kills C., the offense is murder in the second degree. McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Bean v. Mathieu, 33 Tex. 591; Angell v. State, 36 Tex. 542, 14 Am. Rep. 380; Ferrell v. State, 43 Tex. 503; Taylor v. State, 3 App. 387; Halbert v. State, Id. 656; McConnell v. State, 13 App. 390; Clark v. State, 19 App. 495; Breedlove v. State, 26 App. 445, 9 S. W. 763; Musick v. State, 21 App. 69, 18 S. W. 95; Miller v. State, 52 App. 72, 105 S. One who, with malice aforethought, shoots at one person and accidentally kills another, is guilty of murder. Richards v. State, 35 App. 38, 30 S. W. 805.

Homicide by accidental discharge of defendant's pistol, when deceased was trying to prevent him from killing another, is not excusable. Wheatly v. State (Cr. App.) 39 S. W. 672.

As to use of the word "mistake" for "unintentionally" in charge, see Deneaner v. State, 58 App. 624, 127 S. W. 201.

— Manslaughter.—When the killing intended would have been manslaughter, the accidental killing would not be a higher grade of homicide. Ferrell v. State, 43 Tex. 504; Clark v. State, 19 App. 495; McConnell v. State, 22 App. 354, 3 S. W. 699, 58 Am. Rep. 647.

If the act committed is the unintentional homicide of a different person from the one intended, and is without malice, and done while the mind is under the immediate influence of sudden passion, arising from an adequate cause, rendering the mind incapable of cool reflection, the crime is manslaughter, because the crime intended was manslaughter. Clark v. State, 19 App. 495; Leggett v. State, 21 App. 382, 17 S. W. 159; Breedlove v. State, 26 App. 445, 9 S. W. 763; Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944; McCullough v. State, 62 App. 126, 136 S. W. 1055; see, also, Brailaford v. State, 71 App. 113, 158 S. W. 541; Whiten v. State, 71 App. 555, 160 S. W. 462.

Where accused shot and killed his wife while intending to shoot a third person, the killing could not be reduced to manslaughter, but only to murder on implied malice. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 864.

— Assault with intent to murder.—If one while trying to kill one person unintentionally cuts or stabs another, he is guilty of an assault with intent to murder. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 95 S. W. 1058.

If a person acting with malice express or implied and with an intent to kill shoots at one person and strikes another, he is guilty of assault to murder. Vining v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 909.

Where defendant's firing of the gun was accidental, he could not be guilty of an assault with intent to kill. Martin v. State, 71 App. 521, 160 S. W. 968.

— Self-defense.—If a party in necessary self-defense accidentally kills a person, it is justifiable homicide. Plummer v. State, 4 App. 310, 30 Am. Rep. 165; Clark v. State, 19 App. 495; Ferrell v. State, 43 Tex. 503; McCullough v. State, 62 App. 126, 136 S. W. 1055.

Charge of court.—An instruction that where A. in attempting to kill B. kills C., it is murder in the first degree, is erroneous. But if the defendant was found guilty of murder in the second degree, the error will be immaterial. Taylor v. State, 3 App. 387.

Variance.—Under an indictment charging defendant as an accomplice to the murder of A., evidence was inadmissible to show that the plot by defendant and an alleged principal was to kill M., and that A. was killed by mistake. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 989.

Art. 49. [49] Same subject, as to misdemeanor.—If one intending to commit a felony, and, in the act of preparing for or executing the same, shall, through mistake or accident, do another act which, if voluntarily done, would be a misdemeanor, he shall receive the highest punishment affixed by law to the offense actually committed. [P. C. 50.]

Commission of other offense in attempt.—Post. Art. 82.

Art. 50. [50] Felony committed by mistake, etc., lowest punishment affixed.—If one intending to commit a misdemeanor, and, in the act of preparing for or executing the same, shall, through mistake, commit an offense which is by law a felony, he shall receive the lowest punishment affixed by law to the offense actually committed. [P. C. 51.]

Commission of other offense in attempt.—Post, art. 82.

Presumption of innocence.—See art. 11, ante. See also Code Cr. Proc. art. 785.

Presumption from use of weapon.—See arts. 1106, 1147, post.

A stick about 1 inch in diameter and 2½ feet long, held, not per se a deadly weapon, within the rule as to presumption of intent in the use of a deadly weapon. Shaw v. State, 34 App. 435, 31 S. W. 361.

The weapon must be one likely to produce death in order to raise the presumption of felonious intent. Griffin v. State, 40 App. 312, 50 S. W. 366, 76 Am. St. Rep. 718; Griffin v. State (Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 848; Connell v. State, 46 App. 259, 81 S. W. 746.

Where a deadly weapon is used in a deadly manner, the presumption of intent to kill is practically conclusive, but, if the weapon be not dangerous or be not used in a deadly manner, then the intent must be established by the facts. Grant v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 929.

Assault.—See Art. 1009.

This and article 1009 ought very seldom to be given in a charge to the jury and certainly not in a case where the defendant claims an accidental injury. Acrey v. State, 51 App. 35, 100 S. W. 954.

An intent to commit a criminal assault can be presumed from the fact of actual injury to prosecutrix. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 635.

Intent presumed.—A man is always presumed to intend that which is the necessary or even probable consequences of his acts, unless the contrary appears. McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 42, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Aiken v. State, 10 App. 610. See, also, Phillips v. State, 26 App. 245, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; White v. State, 29 App. 530, 16 S. W. 340; Rogers v. State, 32 App. 447, 24 S. W. 282; High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488; Wood v. State, 27 App. 393, 11 S. W. 449; Shaw v. State, 34 App. 435, 31 S. W. 361; *Tubbs v. It may ordinarily be presumed that one who breaks and enters a house did so with intent to commit theft. Vickery v. State, 62 App. 311, 137 S. W. 687, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 514.

One is responsible for the consequences of his act, whether he shot to kill or only to scare. Simms v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 786.

One who strikes another with a weapon calculated to produce death is presumed to have intended that it shall result. Crutchfield v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1053. See, also, Wood v. State, 27 App. 393, 11 S. W. 449; Rogers v. State, 71 App. 271, 159 S. W. 44.

Malice will not be implied from all killings. Garcia v. State, 70 App. 485, 156 S. W. 939.

When one puts in motion a set of circumstances, knowing the results to follow, he is responsible for all criminal acts that are the natural and intended results of his action. Phillips v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 353.

In view of this article and article 52, post, evidence of other offenses is not admissible in a prosecution for abortion, where the evidence showed that accused intended to commit an abortion if the woman was pregnant, and the only issue was her pregnancy. Gray v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 337.

Good intent as excuse.—When a person does a prohibited act, with the intent the law forbids, it will not avail him that he also intended an ultimate good, and if he intended to do what the law forbade, there need not be any other intent. Phillips v. State, 29 Tex. 226; High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488; Wood v. State, 27 App. 393, 11 S. W. 449. See Clopton v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 173.

Instructions.—See art. 1106, post, and notes.

It has been held improper in a number of instances to give this article in charge to the jury against the defendant, because the presumption of innocence is stronger than any presumption of guilt arising merely from the means used to accomplish the guilty purpose, and the burden rests upon the state, in a criminal trial, to overcome the presumption of innocence, by establishing the guilt of the accused by legal evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Black v. State, 18 App. 124; Jones v. State, 13 App. 1; Thomas v. State, 14 App. 200; Brinkoeter v. State, Id., 67; Luera v. State, 12 App. 257; Bell v. State, 17 App. 538; Richardson v. State, 32 App. 524, 24 S. W. 894.

Abstract charge, held improper. Floyd v. State, 29 App. 341, 15 S. W. 819; Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458. Especially where accused claimed an accidental injury. Acrey v. State, 51 App. 35, 100 S. W. 954 (Henderson, J., dissenting). See, also, Tubbs v. State, 50 App. 143, 95 S. W. 112. In this connection, an instruction held not to shift the burden of proof on accused. Brown v. State, 4 App. 275; Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417.

This article should be given in charge only in those exceptional cases wherein the defensive matter throws the burden of proof on the defendant. Perry v. State, 44 Tex. 473; Ainsworth v. State, 8 App. 532; Dubose v. State, 10 App. 230; Richardson v. State, 32 App. 524, 24 S. W. 894 (following Jones v. State, 13 App. 1). Also Lucio v. State, 35 App. 320, 33 S. W. 358; Bowman v. State, 38 App. 14, 40 S. W. 796, 41 S. W. 635; Snead v. State, 40 App. 262, 49 S. W. 595.

For correct instruction in a murder case as to the intent deducible from the means used, see Gatlin v. State, 5 App. 531.

Ordinarily presumptions of law which are against the defendant should not be given in charge. Bell v. State, 17 App. 538; Shaw v. State, 34 App. 435, 31 S. W. 361.

When the weapon is used in inflicting a wound which causes death it may be that a charge on the character of the weapon as not being a deadly one, is called for under this article. Outley v. State (Cr. App.) 99 S. W. 97.

A charge making sudden passion a controlling factor in determining intent held erroneous. Grant v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 929.

Charge not sufficient for failing to describe weapon, a gun barrel. Crutchfield v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1053.

Art. 52. [52] Burden of proof on defendant, when.—On the trial of any criminal action, when the facts have been proved which constitute the offense, it devolves upon the accused to establish the facts or circumstances on which he relies to excuse or justify the prohibited act or omission. [P. C. 53.]

1. Burden of proof on state.—See notes under Code Cr. Proc. art. 785.

2. Burden of proof on defendant and charge of court thereon.—For a full exposition of the import and purpose of this article, and an elucidation of the principles which determine whether it should or should not be given in charge to the jury, see Jones v. State, 13 App. 1; Leache v. State, 22 App. 279, 3 S. W. 539, 58 Am. Rep. 638.

The burden of proof is always on the state to overcome the presumption of innocence and establish the guilt of the accused beyond a reasonable doubt; but when this is done it devolves on the accused to prove any facts in justification or excuse, unless they appear in the state's evidence. Delany v. State, 41 Tex. 601; Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Lewis v. State, 7 App. 567; Hill v. State, 5 App. 2; Powell v. State, 5 App. 234; Bridgers v. State, 8 App. 145; Dubose v. State, 10 App. 230; Jones v. State, 13 App. 1; Donaldson v. State, 15 App. 25; Leache v. State, 22 App. 279, 3 S. W. 539, 58 Am. St. Rep. 638; Stilly v. State, 27 App. 445, 11 S. W. 458, 11 Am. St. Rep. 201. See, also, Ake v. State, 6 App. 398, 32 Am. Rep. 586; Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458; Ellis v. State, 30 App. 601, 18 S. W. 139; Jones v. State, 32 App. 108, 22 S. W. 149, following Reynolds v. State, 32 App. 36, 22 S. W. 18.

It is error to instruct the jury to the effect that "the burden of proof never shifts from the state to the defendant, but is upon the state throughout to first establish every constituent element of the offense." Horn v. State, 30 App. 541, 17 S. W. 1094; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 229, 9 S. W. 557; Conner v. State, 24 App. 245, 6 S. W. 138; Guajardo v. State, 24 App. 603, 7 S. W. 331.

It is frequently an error to give the preceding article in charge to the jury, as it only devolves upon the defendant to show excuse or justification when it fails to appear in the evidence for the prosecution. Delany v. State, 41 Tex. 601; Perry v. State, 44 Tex. 473; Brown v. State, 4 App. 275; Ake v. State, 6 App. 398, 32 Am. Rep. 586; Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Ainsworth v. State, 8 App. 532; Guffee v. State, Id. 187; Jones v. State, 13 App. 1; Brinkoeter v. State, 14 App. 67; Thomas v. State, Id. 200; Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458. See, also, Stilly v. State, 27 App. 445, 11 S. W. 458, 11 Am. St. Rep. 201; Ellis v. State, 30 App. 601, 18 S. W. 139.

The burden of proof is never on the defendant, as in civil cases and never shifts from the state to him, and the court should ordinarily so charge on request. Perry v. State, 44 Tex. 473; Black v. State, 1 App. 368; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 228, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; Horn v. State, 30 App. 541, 17 S. W. 1094. But, see Slade v. State, 29 App. 392, 16 S. W. 253, and Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 886, where it is held that the charge as given sufficiently protected the rights of accused.

The burden is upon the defendant to show the relation and circumstances which justify the violence. State v. Stephenson, 20 Tex. 151.

Where a breach of duty has been established it devolves on defendant to show justification or excuse. Sennett v. State, 17 Tex. 308; Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304.

This article should not be indiscriminately given in charge, as it applies only in those exceptional cases wherein the burden of proof is on the accused to establish his defense. Thomas v. State, 14 App. 200. See, also, Brown v. State, 4 App. 275; Ainsworth v. State, 8 App. 532; Dubose v. State, 10 App. 230; Luera v. State, 12 App. 257; Jones v. State, 13 App. 1.

An accused is entitled to a distinct and affirmative presentation of the issues which arise upon his evidence to prevent their ignorment by the jury. Freeman v. State, 52 App. 500, 107 S. W. 1127.

Defendant is not required to show mitigating facts unless they fail to appear from the evidence adduced against him. Guffee v. State, 8 App. 187.

Where the evidence raises the question of innocent intention or accidental shooting, it is error to charge that the burden of proving accident or innocent intention is on the defendant. Richardson v. State, 32 App. 524, 24 S. W. 894.

When the state shows the taking up and using of an estray, the burden is on the defendant to justify his action. Asheroft v. State, 32 Tex. 108.

Requested charges in a case of assault by driving against a person, held improper. Perkins v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 241.

3. — Alibi.—Alibi merely traverses the issues tendered in the indictment, and is not a special defense, nor, in its nature, an independent exculpatory fact, and, therefore, the burden of proof is not upon the defendant to establish it. Ayres v. State, 21 App. 399, 17 S. W. 253.

A charge that alibi is a special plea, independent of a plea of not guilty is not improper. Callaher v. State, 28 App. 247, 12 S. W. 1087; Saenz v. State (Cr. App.) 63 S. W. 316; Young v. State (Cr. App.) 79 S. W. 34.

An instruction on alibi held to improperly place on defendant the burden of proving the defense beyond a reasonable doubt. Henderson v. State, 51 App. 193, 101 S. W. 245.

4. — Nonage.—See notes under arts. 34, 35 ante.

5. — Insanity.—See notes under art. 40 ante.

6. — Self-defense.—The state has the burden of proving that defendant has lost his right of self-defense. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 165.

The burden of proving self-defense is not upon the defendant. Lyons v. State, 71 App. 189, 159 S. W. 1070.

Defendant does not have the burden of showing that he went on a peaceful mission. Mason v. State, 72 App. 501, 163 S. W. 66.

7. — Facts within defendant's knowledge.—Where the defensive fact relied upon is peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant, the burden of proving it rests on him, and the court should so instruct. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417; Lewis v. State, Id. 567; Bridgers v. State, 8 App. 145; Caldwell v. State, 5 Tex. 18; Crow v. State, 41 Tex. 468; Forrest v. State, 3 App. 232; *Burton v. TITLE 2

OF OFFENSES AND PUNISHMENTS

Chap.	Chap.
1. Definition and division of offenses.	2. Punishments in general.

CHAPTER ONE

DEFINITION AND DIVISION OF OFFENSES

Art.	Art.
53. "Offense" defined.	57. Petty offenses.
54. How divided.	58. Subdivision and classification of offenses.
55. Felonies and misdemeanors defined.
56. Felonies subdivided.

Article 53. [53] "Offense" defined.—An offense is an act or omission forbidden by positive law, and to which is annexed, on conviction, any punishment prescribed in this Code. [P. C. 54.]

See, ante, arts. 1, 3, 6, 7, 8. Russell v. State, 37 App. 314, 39 S. W. 674; Ringo v. State, 54 App. 561, 114 S. W. 119.

Statutory definition of offense controlling.—The offending party must be brought within the very terms of the statute under which conviction is sought. Strong v. State, 52 App. 133, 105 S. W. 785. Citing Mitchell v. State, 34 App. 311, 30 S. W. 811; Flynn v. State, 35 App. 220, 32 S. W. 1041; Cook's Case, 42 App. 539, 61 S. W. 307; Hamilton's Case (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 40.

What constitutes "offense."—See Hardin v. State, 39 App. 426, 46 S. W. 803, 806.

What constitutes offense of malicious prosecution for purpose of determining venue of civil suit. Hubbard v. Lord, 59 Tex. 384. See, also, Illies v. Knight, 3 Tex. 312.

Negligent homicide as "offense" within meaning of statutory definition, see Austin v. Cameron, 83 Tex. 351, 18 S. W. 437.

Distinct and continuous offenses.—See Day v. State, 27 App. 143, 11 S. W. 36.

Exhibition of gaming table is not an offense continuous in its nature. Kain v. State, 16 App. 282.

One offense nullifying another.—Where the forgery of a note also constitutes a swindle, the two offenses do not nullify each other. Abel v. State (Cr. App.) 97 S. W. 1055.

When intent immaterial.—Under a statute which does not make an intent to violate it a necessary ingredient, defendant would be guilty if he violated it, whether he intended to do so or not. Hughes v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 173.

Willingness to comply with law and not offend again.—After the unquestioned commission of a statutory offense, the fact that defendant on the next day was willing to comply with the law and not commit the offense again was no defense. Hughes v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 173.

Reference to other offense for penalty.—Barfield v. State (Cr. App.) 43 S. W. 333.

Art. 54. [54] How divided.—Offenses are divided into felonies and misdemeanors. [P. C. 55.]

Russell v. State, 37 App. 314, 39 S. W. 674.

Art. 55. [55] Felonies and misdemeanors defined.—Every offense which is punishable by death or by imprisonment in the penitentiary, either absolutely or as an alternative, is a felony; every other offense is a misdemeanor. [P. C. 56.]

See Ex parte Walker, 28 App. 246, 13 S. W. 861; Walker v. State, 28 App. 503, 13 S. W. 860.

Cited, Welsh v. State, 3 App. 114.

Alternative punishment in penitentiary.—It is the capacity of an offense to be punished by confinement in the penitentiary, and not that such punishment of necessity follows conviction, that distinguishes crime and separates felonies from misdemeanors; and hence the offenses created by statute, falling precisely within the definition of a felony given by statute—a public offense which may (not must) be punished by confinement in the penitentiary—are felonies, although under the statute persons convicted thereof may be fined or imprisoned in the county jail. If by the terms of the statute the jury is at liberty to inflict some milder punishment than death or imprisonment in the penitentiary, this discretion does not prevent the offense from being a felony. Campbell v. State, 22 App. 262, 2 S. W. 825. The case of Sisk v. State, 9 App. 90, in which it was held that the distinction between a felony and a misdemeanor after conviction, was determinable by the punishment assessed by the jury, is expressly overruled in Campbell v. State, supra. See Woods v. State, 26 App. 490, 10 S. W. 108; Kinley v. State, 29 App. 532, 16 S. W. 339; Beard v. State, 45 App. 522, 78 S. W. 348.

The offense of which one was convicted, being punishable in the alternative by imprisonment in the penitentiary, was, under this article a felony, though the penalty imposed was a fine. Huff v. McMichael (Civ. App.) 127 S. W. 574.

Seduction.—The punishment for seduction (art. 1447, post) formerly was by confinement in the penitentiary or fine. This made the crime a felony. Ex parte Biela, 46 App. 487, 81 S. W. 739. See Ward v. White, 86 Tex. 170, 23 S. W. 981.

Forgery.—See Pitner v. State, 23 App. 366, 5 S. W. 210.

Altering mark on animal.—See Barfield v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 1104.

Hiring out convicts for felony.—The statute does not provide for the hiring out of convicts for felony, and release cannot be had through habeas corpus because of inability to pay a felony fine. Ex parte Biela, 46 App. 487, 81 S. W. 739.

"Offense" as implying felony or misdemeanor.—See Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. State, 48 Civ. App. 162, 106 S. W. 918.

Art. 56. [56] Felonies subdivided.—Felonies are either capital or not capital. An offense for which the highest penalty is death is a capital felony. [P. C. 57.]

Minor as subject to capital punishment.—See art. 35, ante, and notes.

Art. 57. [57] Petty offenses.—An offense which a justice of the peace, or the mayor or other officer of a town or city, may try and punish is called a petty offense. [P. C. 58.]

See Bautsch v. State, 27 App. 342, 11 S. W. 414; Ward v. White, 86 Tex. 170, 23 S. W. 981.

Art. 58. [58] Subdivision and classification of offenses.—Offenses are again subdivided and classed as follows; they are—

1. Offenses against the state, its territory, property and revenue.
2. Offenses affecting the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the government.
3. Offenses affecting the right of suffrage.
4. Offenses which affect the free exercise of religious opinion.
5. Offenses against public justice.
6. Offenses against the public peace.
7. Offenses against public morals, decency and chastity.
8. Offenses against public policy and economy.
9. Offenses against public health.
10. Offenses affecting property held in common for the use of the public.
11. Offenses against trade and commerce, and the current coin.
12. Offenses against the persons of individuals.
13. Offenses against reputation.
14. Offenses against property.
15. Miscellaneous offenses. [P. C. 59.]

Article 59. [59] Punishments.—The punishments incurred for offenses under this Code are—

1. Death.
2. Imprisonment in the penitentiary for life or for a period of time.
 - 2a. Imprisonment in the house of correction and reformatory.
3. Imprisonment in the county jail.

4. Forfeiture of civil or political rights.

5. Pecuniary fines. [P. C. 60.]

See ex parte Wood, 36 App. 7, 34 S. W. 965.

Reformatory.—The provision for imprisonment in the house of correction and reformatory must be viewed in the light of the subsequent amendments of the acts of 1887 and 1889. See C. C. P. art. 1195, et seq.

Cumulative punishment.—The statute regulating cumulative punishment refers only to cases in which imprisonment is part of the penalty, and refers to misdemeanors as well as felonies. It has no reference to pecuniary fines. Ex parte Banks, 41 App. 201, 53 S. W. 689.

Fines in two cases.—Where one has been fined in two cases and is hired out and is allowed fifty cents a day on the fines and costs, the cases do not run concurrently. He is not compelled to serve more than a year for one of such fines and the accompanying costs. Ex parte Banks, 41 App. 201, 53 S. W. 689.

Art. 60. [60] Continuous offenses, suppressed.—When an offense of which a person is convicted is in its nature continuous, there shall also be judgment for its suppression. [P. C. 61.]

Continuous offenses.—See notes under art. 53, ante.

Art. 61. [61] No forfeiture in capital cases.—In case of the execution of a convict under sentence of death, or where he is imprisoned for life, there shall be no forfeiture of any kind to the state, nor shall any cost of the prosecution be collected from his estate. [P. C. 62.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 963.

Costs in capital case.—Costs may be adjudged against a convict in a capital case, without vitiating the judgment of conviction, but it is better practice not to enter judgment for costs. Lanham v. State, 7 App. 126; Jackson v. State, 25 App. 314, 7 S. W. 872.

— Liability of owner of slave executed for murder.—The owner of a slave executed for murder was not liable for costs. Grinder v. State, 2 Tex. 338.

Taxation of costs in general.—See C. C. P. art. 1164 et seq.

Art. 62. [62] No forfeiture in any criminal case.—When a convict is imprisoned in the penitentiary, his property shall be controlled and managed in the manner directed by law; but there shall, in no criminal case, be a forfeiture of property of any kind to the state. [P. C. 63.]

Forfeiture of weapons.—By a former act regulating the keeping and bearing of deadly weapons, it was provided that the weapon found on or about the convicted person should be forfeited to the county. This portion of the act was declared to be in violation of sec. 25 of the Bill of Rights of this state. Hudeburgh v. State, 38 Tex. 535; Jennings v. State, 5 App. 298.

Art. 63. [63] Political rights, what are.—When the penalty affixed to the commission of an offense is deprivation of political rights, such rights are intended to include the rights of holding office, of serving on juries, and of suffrage. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 156; P. C. 64.]

Due process of law.—See C. C. P. arts. 3 and 4 and notes.

Art. 64. [64] Double punishment, how fixed.—Whenever a minimum or maximum punishment is fixed by law, and by reason of any aggravation of the offense, or the existence of any circumstance on account of which the law directs that the punishment be doubled, this shall be construed to mean that the jury shall not inflict less than double the smallest punishment incurred by the law, nor more than double the greatest punishment so incurred. [P. C. 65.]

See post, arts. 82-84.

Art. 65. [65] Double punishment in misdemeanor.—If fine and imprisonment are the punishments to be incurred for any offense, and it is provided that the punishment be doubled in any particular case, then the jury are to assess not less than double the smallest, and not more than double the largest, fine prescribed by law, and not more than double the longest period of imprisonment, nor less than double the shortest period of imprisonment, so prescribed. [P. C. 66.]

See post, arts. 83-84.

Art. 66. [66] Same subject.—When an offense is punishable by either fine or imprisonment, and, as an alternative, it is declared that the punishment shall be double in any particular case, the jury are to assess not less than double the amount of the smallest fine, nor more than double the amount of the largest fine, or, as an alternative, they shall not assess less than double the shortest period of imprisonment, nor more than double the longest period. This rule applies where there may be more than two kinds of punishment prescribed as alternatives. [P. C. 67.]

Art. 67. [67] Increase of punishment one-half.—Where it is directed by law that in any particular case the punishment shall be increased one-half, it is to be construed to mean that the jury may, beside the punishment ordinarily prescribed by law, assess such additional punishment as shall not be less than one-half the penalty in ordinary cases; and all the rules before prescribed with respect to offenses, which by law incur alternative punishments, are applicable to cases where the penalty is to be so increased. [P. C. 68.]

Art. 68. [68] Decrease of punishment one-half.—When it is provided that the punishment in any given case, on account of mitigating circumstances, shall be diminished one-half, the jury shall assess one-half of the penalty fixed by law for the offense under ordinary circumstances, and so with regard to any other proportion in which the penalty is directed to be diminished. [P. C. 69.]

Art. 69. [69] Diminution of punishment, what rule.—In the diminution of punishments, the same rule as to two or more penalties, or as to alternative penalties, shall apply which are prescribed with regard to the increase of punishment. [P. C. 70.]

Art. 70. [70] Capital cases, etc., not included in foregoing rules.—The foregoing rules as to increase or diminution of punishments have no application to cases where the highest penalty may be death, nor to any case where the penalty is total deprivation of civil or political rights. [P. C. 71.]

Art. 71. [71] Death, how inflicted.—The punishment of death is inflicted by hanging, as prescribed in the Code of Criminal Procedure. [P. C. 72.]

See C. C. P., art. 883, et seq.

Recital of mode of execution in judgment.—Judgment in capital conviction need not recite the mode of execution. Steagald v. State, 22 App. 464, 3 S. W. 771.

Art. 72. [72] Hard labor intended.—Whenever the penalty prescribed for an offense is imprisonment for a term of years in the penitentiary, imprisonment at hard labor is intended. [P. C. 73.]

Verdict of imprisonment at hard labor.—Verdict of imprisonment "at hard labor in the state prison" is good. Moore v. State, 7 App. 14; Wilson v. State, 12 App. 481; Harris v. State, 8 App. 90. See, also, McCoy v. State, 7 App. 379.

Art. 73. [73] Officer to be removed, when.—Whenever an offense is committed by an officer, and the same appears to the jury to be a wilful violation of duty, they shall so find, and such officer shall be removed from office. [P. C. 75.]

See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 6017-6077.

Legislative power.—Where the constitution prescribes a mode for removing officers the legislature may not authorize a removal in another mode. Griner v. Thomas, 101 Tex. 36, 104 S. W. 1058, 16 Ann. Cas. 944.

Necessity of indictment.—Officer removable without previous conviction under indictment; Const. art. 1, § 10, not applying. Bland v. State (Civ. App.) 38 S. W. 252.

1. Acting with others and presence at commission of crime in general.—All persons are principals who act together in the commission of an offense, although all may not have been actually present when the offense was committed. Corn v. State, 41 Tex. 301; Welsh v. State, 3 App. 412; Wells v. State, 4 App. 20; Berry v. State, 4 App. 492; Templeton v. State, 5 App. 398; Scales v. State, 7 App. 361; Truitt v. State, 8 App. 148; Heard v. State, 9 App. 1; Brown v. State, 9 App. 81; Cohea v. State, 9 App. 173; Cook v. State, 14 App. 96; O'Neal v. State, 14 App. 582; Bean v. State, 17 App. 60; Wright v. State, 18 App. 358; Smith v. State, 21 App. 107, 17 S. W. 552; Watson v. State, 21 App. 598, 1 S. W. 451, 17 S. W. 550; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 228, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; Mason v. State, 31 App. 306, 20 S. W. 564; Mason v. State, 32 App. 95, 22 S. W. 144, 408; Blain v. State, 33 App. 236, 26 S. W. 63; Trimble v. State, 33 App. 397, 26 S. W. 727; McDonald v. State, 34 App. 556, 35 S. W. 286; Goode v. State, 57 App. 220, 123 S. W. 597; Bass v. State, 59 App. 186, 127 S. W. 1020; Sheppard v. State, 63 App. 569, 140 S. W. 1090. All who, by acts, words or gestures, being present, participate in the commission of the offense though they took no actual part in it, are principal offenders. Blain v. State, 33 App. 236, 26 S. W. 63; Lyons v. State, 30 App. 642, 18 S. W. 416; Walker v. State, 29 App. 621, 16 S. W. 548; Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667; Mason v. State, 31 App. 306, 20 S. W. 564. If accused is shown to have been present, and to have acted with and encouraged others in the commission of a crime, he is deemed a principal in such crime, although the act constituting such crime was actually committed by another. Sharp v. State, 6 App. 650; Mills v. State, 13 App. 487; Dunman v. State, 1 App. 593. Any person who advises or agrees to the commission of an offense and is present at its commission is a principal thereto, whether he aids or not in the commission of the illegal act. Sheppard v. State, 63 App. 569, 140 S. W. 1090. But one is not a principal merely because he was present at the commission of the offense, though that is a circumstance which, in connection with other circumstances, may constitute the party a participant. Burrell v. State, 18 Tex. 713; Ring v. State, 42 Tex. 282; Truitt v. State, 8 App. 148; Golden v. State, 18 App. 637; Jackson v. State, 20 App. 190; Sharp v. State, 29 App. 211, 15 S. W. 176; Floyd v. State, 29 App. 349, 16 S. W. 188; Walker v. State, 29 App. 621, 16 S. W. 548; Campbell v. State, 63 App. 595, 141 S. W. 232, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 858. In order to constitute a person a principal in a crime when he is not personally present at the time and place of its commission, he must at the time of the commission of the offense be doing some act in furtherance of the common design. Tittle v. State, 35 App. 96, 31 S. W. 677; Dawson v. State, 38 App. 50, 41 S. W. 599; Starks v. State, 38 App. 233, 42 S. W.

379; Eddens v. State, 47 App. 529, 54 S. W. 828; Tally v. State, 49 App. 91, 90 S. W. 1113; Silvas v. State, 71 App. 213, 159 S. W. 223. Hence, an instruction which authorizes the jury to convict the defendant as a principal if he acted with others in the commission of the offense charged and the act was done in pursuance of a common intent, whether the defendant was in fact actually present, is erroneous, as authorizing a conviction as principal on facts which make the defendant guilty only as an accomplice. Silvas v. State, 71 App. 213, 159 S. W. 223.

Each party to a conspiracy to commit a crime is responsible for the acts of any or all pending the consummation of the common design and in furtherance thereof. Cox v. State, 8 App. 254, 34 Am. Rep. 746; Mills v. State, 13 App. 487; Blum v. State, 20 App. 578, 54 Am. Rep. 530; Kirby v. State, 23 App. 13, 5 S. W. 165; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 228, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862; Mason v. State, 32 App. 95, 22 S. W. 144, 408; English v. State, 34 App. 190, 30 S. W. 233; Burriss v. State, 34 App. 387, 30 S. Otherwise if the undertaking was lawful. Mercersmith v. State, 8 App. 211. A person who persuades others to commit a crime and is present when the conspiracy is entered into, even though he intends to apprehend the others and have them arrested in the act of the commission of the offense is a principal conspirator. Dever v. State, 37 App. 396, 30 S. W. 1071. Where a crime committed is not in any way connected with a conspiracy, but is the independent act of one of the conspirators, though done while he was engaged in the common purpose, the others are not legally responsible therefor, but if the crime is in furtherance of the common purpose, and is such an offense as might have been and should have been contemplated would result from the execution of the conspiracy, and it was so executed, then all engaged in the unlawful purpose are equally guilty, though at the time they may have been engaged in some other part of the common purpose. Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133. See, also, Mercersmith v. State, 8 App. 211; Lyons v. State, 30 App. 642, 18 S. W. 416. If accused was present and took part with others in the crime so as to make him a principal, a charge requiring a prior agreement between accused and the others, to commit the crime or a conspiracy to do so, was not necessary; such a charge only being necessary if accused was present when the crime was committed, but took no part therein. Ross v. State, 60 App. 547, 132 S. W. 793.

To convict a person as principal in the second degree, the evidence must show knowledge on his part of the intention of the principal actor, and a participation in the act. If he was present, consenting, and the act was the result of a common design, he is equally guilty with the real perpetrator. Burrell v. State, 18 Tex. 713; Espinoza v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 208. Mere knowledge that an offense is about to be committed will not make the party a principal. Tullis v. State, 41 Tex. 598; nor will the mere presence of the accused at the commission of the offense, his failure to give the alarm, his silence, inaction, and supposed concealment of the offense. Ring v. State, 42 Tex. 282. But if he was near enough to keep watch, and was acting with others who perpetrated the offense, he is a principal. Selvidge v. State, 30 Tex. 60; or if he was present encouraging others. Sharp v. State, 6 App. 650. His complicity cannot always be determined by his actual corporeal presence, for the offense may consist of a series of acts, performed by different persons, apart from the others; but if done in furtherance of the common design, all are principals. Berry v. State, 4 App. 492. The true test is, "Did the parties act together?" See discussions and illustrations. Welsh v. State, 3 App. 413; Wells v. State, 4 App. 20; Scales v. State, 7 App. 361; Corn v. State, 41 Tex. 301.

If an illegal military order be executed, and its execution results in an offense against the law, the officer who gave the order will be deemed the principal offender. State v. Sparks, 27 Tex. 627.

If one knows the unlawful intent of another and joins with him in the enterprise, both are principals, no matter what the relation between them. But if one brother finds another in a conflict and rushes to his aid, his amenability to punishment depends on his own act and intent, and not upon that of his brother. Guffee v. State, 8 App. 187.

To render a principal criminally liable for an act of his agent, committed in the absence of the principal, there must be some sort of complicity. Oilre v. State, 57 App. 520, 123 S. W. 1117.

Where a father ordered his son to get some whisky which belonged to the father and sell it to the purchaser, the father participated in the sale and was a principal in the transaction. Albright v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1001.

2. Act and intent.—To constitute one a principal with others in the commission of a crime there must be a combination of both act and intent. He must act together with the others in the commission of the offense, knowing their unlawful intent. Welsh v. State, 3 App. 413; Rountree v. State, 10 App. 110. In the case of co-principals, the intent of one may not be the intent of the other, and the issue as to the intent of each must be clearly and distinctly submitted to the jury. The court must not assume that the intent of both was the same. Leslie v. State, 42 App. 65, 57 S. W. 661. But each conspirator is liable for whatever act of his confederates that follows incidentally, or in the natural or probable consequence of the common design though not originally intended. Cox v. State, 8 App. 254, 34 Am. Rep. 746; Bowers v. State, 24 App. 542, 7 S. W. 247, 5 Am. St. Rep. 901; McKenzie v. State, 32 App. 568, 25 S. W. 426, 40 Am. St. Rep. 795; Blain v. State, 33 App. 236, 26 S. W. 63; Rix v. State, 33 App. 353, 26 S. W. 505; Smith v. State, 46 App. 267, 81 S. W. 936, 108 Am. St. Rep. 991. A party's liability may, however, under certain circumstances depend upon his own act and intent, and not those of the other parties. Guffee v. State, 8 App. 187; Trimble v. State, 33 App. 397, 26 S. W. 727 (following Smith v. State, 21 App. 107, 17 S. W. 552;) Blain v. State, 33

App. 236, 26 S. W. 63; Lyons v. State, 30 App. 642, 18 S. W. 416; Tittle v. State, 35 App. 96, 31 S. W. 677; Chapman v. State, 43 App. 328, 65 S. W. 1098, 96 Am. St. Rep. 874; Franklin v. State, 45 App. 470, 76 S. W. 473. If, in a joint unlawful undertaking, one commits a felony beyond the purview of the original enterprise, without the foreknowledge of his confederates, the others are not liable therefor, although the act was done to facilitate the escape of all. Mercersmith v. State, 8 App. 211. See, also, Snell v. State, 29 App. 236, 15 S. W. 722, 25 Am. St. Rep. 723; Walker v. State, 29 App. 624, 16 S. W. 548; Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862.

An instruction that all persons are principals who acted together in the commission of an offense, and that where an offense is committed by one or more persons, and others are present, and, knowing the unlawful intent, aid those actually engaged in the unlawful act, such persons are principals, who may be prosecuted as such, followed by an instruction that, before defendant could be convicted, it must be found beyond a reasonable doubt that he was present "knowing the unlawful intent and aided the persons committing the offense," aptly presents the issue as to intent. Dowling v. State, 63 App. 366, 140 S. W. 224.

3. Distinguished from accomplice.—The distinction between a principal and an accomplice is stated as follows: The facts constituting an accomplice are auxiliary only, all of which may be, and are performed by him, anterior and as inducements to the crime about to be committed, whilst the principal offender not only may perform some antecedent act in furtherance of the commission of the crime, but, when it is actually committed, is doing his part of the work assigned him in connection with the plan and furtherance of the common purpose, whether he be present where the main fact is to be accomplished, or not. When the offense is committed by the perpetration of different parts which constitute one entire whole, it is not necessary that the offenders should be in fact together at the perpetration of the offense, to render them liable as principals. In other words, an accomplice, under our statute, is one who has completed his offense before the crime is actually committed, and whose liability attaches after its commission by virtue of his previous acts in bringing it about through the agency of, or in connection with third parties. The principal offender acts his part individually, in furtherance of and during the consummation of the crime. The dividing line between the two is the commencement of the commission of the offense. If the parties acted together, in the commission of the offense, they are principals. If they agreed to commit the offense together, but did not act together in its commission, the one who actually committed it, is the principal, while the other, who was not present at the commission, and who was not in any way aiding in its commission, as by keeping watch, or by securing the safety or concealment of the principal, would be an accomplice. To constitute a principal, the offender must either be present where the crime is committed, or he must do some act during the time when the offense is being committed which connects him with the act of commission in some of the ways named in the statute. Where the acts committed occur prior to the commission of the principal offense, or subsequent thereto, and are independent of, and disconnected with, the actual commission of the principal offense, and no act is done by the party during the commission of the principal offense in aid thereof, such party is not a principal offender, but is an accomplice or accessory according to the fact. Heard v. State, 9 App. 1; Cohea v. State, 9 App. 173; Cook v. State, 14 App. 96 (approving Scales v. State, 7 App. 361); Hancock v. State, 14 App. 392; O'Neal v. State, 14 App. 582; Bean v. State, 17 App. 60; Phillips v. State, 17 App. 169; O'Quinn v. State, 55 App. 18, 115 S. W. 39; Parker v. State, 24 App. 61, 5 S. W. 653; Buchanan v. State, 26 App. 52, 9 S. W. 57; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 228, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; Dugger v. State, 27 App. 95, 10 S. W. 763; Medis v. State, 27 App. 196, 11 S. W. 112, 11 Am. St. Rep. 192; Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444; West v. State, 28 App. 1, 11 S. W. 635; Elizando v. State, 31 App. 237, 20 S. W. 560; Dawson v. State, 38 App. 50, 41 S. W. 599; Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133.

4. Knowledge and concealment of crime.—Knowledge and concealment of the crime do not make the party either a principal or an accomplice. Burrell v. State, 18 Tex. 713; Tullis v. State, 41 Tex. 598; Ring v. State, 42 Tex. 282; Noffsinger v. State, 7 App. 301; Rucker v. State, 7 App. 549; Golden v. State, 18 App. 637; Smith v. State, 28 App. 309, 12 S. W. 1104; Floyd v. State, 29 App. 349, 16 S. W. 188; Prewett v. State, 41 App. 262, 53 S. W. 879; Scott v. State, 46 App. 536, 81 S. W. 294, 108 Am. St. Rep. 1032. See, also, Wood v. State, 28 App. 14, 11 S. W. 678; Watson v. State, 28 App. 34, 12 S. W. 404; Sharp v. State, 29 App. 211, 15 S. W. 176; Walker v. State, 29 App. 621, 16 S. W. 548. To constitute a principal there must be a knowledge of the unlawful intent of the other parties, and an "acting together." Welsh v. State, 3 App. 413; Rountree v. State, 10 App. 110. Confederates in an unlawful undertaking are not liable for a felony committed by one, without their knowledge, and which did not enter into the original design. Mercersmith v. State, 8 App. 211; Harris v. State, 15 App. 629; Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862.

5. Crime committed primarily in foreign country.—A principal offender under the law of this state is one who, being present when the offense is actually committed by another, and knowing the unlawful intent of such other, aids by acts or encourages by words the party engaged in the commission of the unlawful act. Would the state, in prosecuting such an aider and abettor as the principal offender, for an offense committed primarily in a foreign country, and consummated in this, be required to show a similar or analogous provision of the law of the foreign country? Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667.

6. Misdemeanors in general.—In misdemeanors there are no accomplices; in such cases ordinarily all parties are principals. Schwartz v. State, 38 App. 26, 40 S. W. 976; Strong v. State, 52 App. 133, 105 S. W. 785; Huffman v. State, 57 App.

399, 123 S. W. 596; Ollre v. State, 57 App. 520, 123 S. W. 1117; Lott v. State, 53 App. 604, 127 S. W. 191; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604; Albright v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1001.

Where an absent person is sought to be held guilty of a misdemeanor, there must be some complicity in some manner with the act of the one who committed the offense. Ollre v. State, 57 App. 520, 123 S. W. 1117.

7. Specific crimes—Abortion.—One who provides means to procure an abortion is a principal and not an accomplice. Watson v. State, 9 App. 237; Willingham v. State, 33 App. 98, 25 S. W. 424. A person prescribing and furnishing medicine or an instrument to a woman for the purpose of producing an abortion is a principal offender. Moore v. State, 37 App. 552, 40 S. W. 287.

8. — Assault.—All who are present and participating in an assault are principals. Dunman v. State, 1 App. 593. But a party cannot be guilty of assault as a principal from the fact of his knowledge that somebody was making an unlawful attack on a third party. He must do something. He must aid and encourage by words or gestures, or do some act in order to make him guilty as a principal. Smith v. State, 61 App. 349, 135 S. W. 152.

9. — Assault with intent to murder.—In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, where the two defendants claimed that they were acting in self-defense, their lives being threatened by the other four men who engaged in the affray, and the prosecuting witnesses contended that defendants brought on the difficulty and forced the fight, charges on the question of principal and accessory were improper, not being warranted by the evidence. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 944.

10. — Assault with intent to rape.—All persons who are present and co-operated in assaulting a girl with intent to rape her are guilty as principals. White v. State, 60 App. 559, 132 S. W. 790. So, where accused took any part in the stopping of prosecutrix's buggy and the assault of her with intent to rape, and did anything in furtherance of the criminal acts of others, in that respect he would be a principal whether he had agreed with the others before he came to the place of assault to do anything or not. Ross v. State, 60 App. 547, 132 S. W. 793.

Where two or more who act together with an unlawful intent and common design in committing an offense are each guilty as principals, and the previous acts and declarations of either tending to show their motive in committing the offense are admissible against the others, whether they are prosecuted jointly or separately, so that where several acted together with a common design, in committing an assault with intent to rape, the prior acts and declarations of either were admissible in evidence in a prosecution of any of the others. White v. State, 60 App. 559, 132 S. W. 790.

11. — Assault with intent to rob.—Under this article accused was a principal and not an accomplice where he was present and assisted in an assault with an intent to commit robbery, although he claimed that he thought his codefendant was a detective and that he was helping him to arrest the prosecuting witness. Drysdale v. State, 70 App. 273, 156 S. W. 685.

12. — Bribery.—A party is not guilty of bribery as principal, because he pays a witness in a criminal case to take his daughter, who is also a witness, away from the county. Harrison v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 552.

13. — Burglary.—Where one person plans a burglary, and defendant and another agreed to assist in the commission of the offense, all are guilty. Attaway v. State, 35 App. 403, 34 S. W. 112; Lewis v. State, 72 App. 377, 162 S. W. 866. The possession of a harness by defendant and another, half an hour after a burglary in which two persons participated, attempted to be explained only by a statement of defendant that they were selling it for a stranger, and their then attempting to sell it, warrants a charge on the law of principals, on a prosecution for burglary. Dowling v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 606.

14. — Disorderly house.—On a trial for keeping a house where prostitutes resorted and resided for the purpose of plying their vocation, and where men and women met for sexual intercourse, evidence that accused's husband took men and women there to engage in unlawful cohabitation was admissible, since such acts rendered him liable as a principal offender. Farris v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 310.

15. — Forgery.—See notes under art. 932, post.

16. — Gift or delivery of liquors to minors.—See art. 593, post.

17. — Homicide.—The law of principals in crime applies as well to manslaughter as to any other offense. Though there can be no accomplice in manslaughter, several persons may so act together as to become principals in its commission. Cartwright v. State, 16 App. 473, 49 Am. Rep. 826; Ogle v. State, 16 App. 361; Burnam v. State, 61 App. 616, 135 S. W. 1175. One is responsible for a homicide whether he fired the fatal shot or not, if he was present aiding and assisting. Butler v. State, 61 App. 133, 134 S. W. 230; Goode v. State, 57 App. 220, 123 S. W. 597; Condron v. State, 62 App. 485, 138 S. W. 594; Castillo v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 788. But the mere presence of accused at the time a homicide was committed is not sufficient to make him a principal. Burnam v. State, 61 App. 616, 135 S. W. 1175; Patton v. State, 62 App. 71, 136 S. W. 459. He must say or do something to encourage the third person to do the killing, or the killing must have occurred because of a previous agreement, and, if the third person acted in self-defense, accused could act with him, without becoming guilty as a principal. Patton v. State, 62 App. 71, 136 S. W. 459; Castillo v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 788. But such presence is a circumstance which, in connection with others, may warrant a conclusion that he was a participant. Burnam v. State, 61 App. 616, 135 S. W. 1175. A defendant, in order to be held as a principal and rendered guilty of murder in the first degree, must have been present, knowing the unlawful intent of the person actually committing the murder, and have aided and encouraged him by acts or words in committing the homicide. Menefee v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 138; Maxwell v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 171. See, also, Goode v. State, 57 App. 220, 123 S. W. 597; Castillo v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 788. So, where deceased was killed by a third person under the advice of defendant who furnished him the means by which it was done, but was not present and not doing anything in furtherance of the common design so as to make him constructively present, defendant is not guilty as a principal. Menefee v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 138. And one who furnished a gun to a third person to kill decedent, but who was not present at the time the third person killed decedent, and who did not actually participate therein, was not a principal, but only an accomplice. Clark v. State, 60 App. 173, 131 S. W. 556. But, where a person accused of murder confessed that he was present at the killing of the deceased, and, while he did not strike the blows which resulted in the death, he did take a watch off the deceased's person, he was not an accomplice, but was liable as a principal. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 622.

When two persons are acting together in resisting arrest, with the common purpose to resist to the death, it is immaterial which of them fired the fatal shot. English v. State, 34 App. 190, 30 S. W. 233.

Where defendant with others provoked the difficulty that brought about the murder, and defendant fled, but his co-conspirators killed deceased, they were his agents in the matter, and he is equally guilty with them. Burris v. State, 34 App. 387, 30 S. W. 785.

Every defendant on trial for homicide is to be judged according to his own intent, and where there is a principal in the second degree, if the facts call for it, he is not to be tried solely according to the intent of his principal in the first degree, but according to the intent with which he may have participated. Leslie v. State, 42 App. 65, 57 S. W. 660.

Where, on a trial for homicide, committed by third persons, the evidence showed a conspiracy between accused and the third persons to rob, in the attempted perpetration of which the homicide occurred, and that it was the duty of accused to go to the place where the persons to be robbed were, and to ascertain their unprepared condition and to give notice to the third persons, and that he did so, he was a "principal" to the killing, though he was 100 or 200 yards from the scene of the difficulty. Bass v. State, 59 App. 186, 127 S. W. 1020.

Where the state in the trial of one as principal in a murder puts in the confession of a third person that he did the killing and fails to show defendant's presence, defendant is entitled to an acquittal. Menefee v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 138.

Where one person killed another under a belief that he was making or about to make an attack upon a third person, the latter could not be convicted of the homicide. Maxwell v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 171.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence held sufficient to warrant the jury in finding that defendant held deceased while another struck the fatal blow, so that defendant was guilty as principal. Castillo v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 788.

All persons forming a conspiracy to march into a foreign country at all hazards and overcome all resistance, and arming themselves for that purpose, are equally principals in a murder committed by some of them in furtherance of the conspiracy. Vasquez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1160. And this is true though some members of the conspiracy were not engaged in the killing nor present when it was committed. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1146; Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133. So, where decedent was killed as an incident to a conspiracy to commit another crime, and accused, one of the conspirators, was but a few yards away at the time of the killing, engaged in the furtherance of the common purpose, the fact that he was not bodily present at the exact spot where decedent was killed did not prevent his being a principal. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1146. And where a company illegally organized in Texas to invade Mexico, arming and equipping themselves to engage in war and agreeing to resist all interference, the killing of a deputy sheriff, captured while attempting to investigate the camp, was within the accomplishment of the common purpose, and this being a felony, all engaged therein were guilty of murder as principals. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1146. But, the members of the conspiracy not immediately concerned in the killing could only be convicted of homicide on proof that the killing was incidental to a conspiracy to do an unlawful act and was within the scope thereof. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1153. See, also, Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133.

The failure to indict for murder a member of a conspiracy to rob, in the attempted perpetration of which the murder was committed, does not prejudice the rights of the state to secure a conviction of the other members of the conspiracy, and the fact that one member was not indicted did not prevent the court from submitting the case as justified by the evidence with reference to a conspiracy to which he was a party. Bass v. State, 59 App. 186, 127 S. W. 1020.

Where the one actually committing the homicide is guilty of murder in the second degree, a principal cannot be guilty of a higher grade of offense. Menefee v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 138.

In a murder case, a charge that all persons are principals who act together in committing an offense; and that, when an offense is actually committed by one or more persons, but others are present, and, knowing the unlawful intent, aid by acts or encourage by words or gestures those actually engaged in committing the unlawful act, such persons so aiding are "principals," as are all who endeavor at the time of the offense to secure the safety or concealment of the offenders, and one who is present when the offense is committed is a principal whether he aids or not in the illegal act; and that, if decedent was killed on the date charged, and accused was present, and, knowing the unlawful intent, aided by acts or encouraged by words or gestures those actually engaged in killing decedent, or advised or agreed to the killing, and was present when it was done, whether she aided or not in the killing, or endeavored to secure the safety or concealment of the ones doing the act, she would be a principal, and subject to the same punishment as those actually engaged in the killing is a sufficient charge on the law of principals. Goode v. State, 57 App. 220, 123 S. W. 597. Where, in a prosecution for murder, the court properly instructs that defendant would be guilty if he had formed a conspiracy with the one doing the killing, and that if he aided and abetted such person, or if he stood watch to avoid interruption, he would be guilty, though not present, defendant is entitled to a converse instruction presenting the defense that, though he had formed an intention to get deceased out of a house, still if the intent to kill was formed by the other party during an altercation between him and deceased, and even if he had entered into a conspiracy to run down deceased and thereafter the other party killed him in an altercation, he would not be guilty; the evidence tending to show such defense. Goodwin v. State, 53 App. 496, 126 S. W. 582. In a prosecution for homicide, the clause in an instruction on the law of principals, "and did aid them, or either of them, by acts, or encourage them, or either of them, by words or gestures," should have been amended by eliminating the words "or gestures." Deneaner v. State, 58 App. 624, 127 S. W. 201. Where the state relied on circumstantial evidence, indicating that accused furnished a gun to a third person to shoot decedent, but the circumstances showing accused's presence at the time of the killing were no stronger than those showing that he was not present, a charge that the criterion for determining who are principals is, did the parties act together in the commission of the offense, and was the act done in pursuance of a common intent, and of a previously formed design, and, if so, the parties are alike guilty, whether all were actually bodily present at the time of the commission of the offense, unaccompanied by a charge submitting the issue of accomplice, was erroneous as authorizing a conviction, though accused was not present, and did not actually participate in the killing. Clark v. State, 60 App. 173, 131 S. W. 556. An instruction in the trial of one indicted as a principal in a murder that, if defendant with express malice aforethought with a gun, being a deadly weapon well calculated to produce death by the manner in which it was used, with deliberate mind and formed design, acting together with a certain named person, unlawfully shot and killed deceased, he was guilty of murder in the first degree was erroneous as excluding the question of defendant's presence. And an instruction in the trial of one charged as a principal in a murder that, if defendant with malice aforethought with a gun, being a deadly weapon calculated to produce death by the manner in which it was used, with deliberate mind and formed design, acting together with a third person, unlawfully shot and killed deceased, he was guilty of murder in the first degree was erroneous as leaving the jury to ascertain what the court meant by "acting together with." Menefee v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 133.

18. — Obstructing railroad track.—See note under article 735 of Code Criminal Procedure.

19. — Taking fish and dragging seines in prohibited waters.—Where several parties were acting together in taking fish and dragging seines in prohibited waters, they were all principal offenders, and an instruction to that effect was proper. Gavina v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 594.

20. — Theft.—In order to be a principal accused must be connected with the original taking. Buchanan v. State, 26 App. 52, 9 S. W. 57; Roman v. State, 64 App. 515, 142 S. W. 912; Pendley v. State, 71 App. 281, 158 S. W. 811; Harris v. State, 71 App. 463, 160 S. W. 447. If he did not take the property himself, he must have acted together with the person committing the theft, knowing at the time of the fraudulent intent. Anderson v. State, 8 App. 542; Gentry v. State, 24 App. 478, 6 S. W. 321. And see Slain v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 366. If not present at the time of the taking, he must have been acting with the person committing the theft at the very time of the commission, in pursuance of a common design existing between them to commit the theft. Gentry v. State, 24 App. 478, 6 S. W. 321. If he was not present at the time of the theft, but advised it and the property was taken pursuant to his advice, he would by the express terms of the statute be an accomplice. Pendley v. State, 71 App. 281, 158 S. W. 811. It does not suffice to prove that, subsequent to the taking and without complicity therein, but with knowledge that the property had been stolen, he aided the taker to dispose of it, or fraudulently disposed of it himself. See the opinion for a summary of proof which demanded of the trial court a charge in harmony with this rule. Buchanan v. State, 26 App. 52, 9 S. W. 57; Pendley v. State, 71 App. 281, 158 S. W. 811. After defining theft and principals, the court properly instructed that, if the prosecutor's hog was taken under circumstances amounting to theft, and defendant and F. acted together in such taking, with a common purpose and intent fraudulently to take such hog, knowing it not to belong to either of them, and with intent to deprive the owner of its value, or that F. had such knowledge and intent, and defendant, knowing F.'s unlawful intent, aided him in taking the hog, in either case defendant would be principal in the offense; but if defendant shot the hog at the instance of F., believing it to be F.'s hog, then defendant would not be guilty, whether F. believed it to be his hog or not. McCoy v. State, 58 App. 252, 124 S. W. 921. If accused's son and grandson took possession of another's cow from the range, and drove her away, with the intention of appropriating her to their own use, and accused was not present, he would not be guilty of the theft as a "principal," though he may have agreed that the animal should be stolen and subsequently butchered, and that he would participate in the butchering and would conceal the meat. Where accused was prosecuted under an indictment charging the committing of cattle theft as a principal, he was entitled to a clear-cut charge that if he was not a principal under the statute he should be acquitted, and that the fact that he was an accomplice or a receiver of the stolen animal would not authorize his conviction.

Jones v. State, 57 App. 144, 122 S. W. 31. If the original larceny of cattle in F. county was in accordance with a plan formed by accused and third persons, and the third persons drove the cattle to accused's pasture in F. county and then to T. county, and shipped and sold them, accused was a principal in the concealment of the cattle in T. county, though he was not present in T. county and did not aid in the concealment therein. Davis v. State, 61 App. 611, 136 S. W. 45. A hired hand may be guilty of theft of cattle if he received a certain sum per capita for gathering cattle, and the taking was otherwise fraudulent. Corn v. State, 41 Tex. 301.

An employer may be guilty though not present at the taking. Welsh v. State, 3 App. 413; Wells v. State, 4 App. 20; Scales v. State, 7 App. 361. But it devolves upon the state to prove that the accused knew that the taking was illegal, or the circumstances were such as to charge him with notice. Ivey v. State, 43 Tex. 425. Guilt is dependent on guilty knowledge. Taylor v. State, 5 App. 529.

On trial for theft of hogs, where defendant in furtherance of the common design built a pen while his confederates took the hogs and brought them to the pen, he was a principal in the crime. Trimble v. State, 33 App. 397, 26 S. W. 727 (following Smith v. State, 21 App. 107, 17 S. W. 552).

When an agreement is made between two persons to steal horses and one of them pursuant thereto steals a horse, the other is not a principal offender unless he was at the time doing some act in furtherance of the common design. And where one of such persons afterwards refuses to assist he cannot be convicted for theft of horses stolen by other parties to the agreement. Sessions v. State, 37 App. 62, 38 S. W. 623.

21. — Violations of local option laws.—In a prosecution for violation of the local option law, it is not essential to charge on the subject of principals, since in misdemeanor cases the distinction between principals and accomplices does not apply. Lott v. State, 58 App. 604, 127 S. W. 191; Creed v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 240.

The evidence showed that defendant kept watch over a lot of negro bartenders selling whisky in a local option district, that when the parties to whom he was charged with selling came to the door, defendant objected to one of them coming in because he had been giving parties away. Defendant stepped outside of the door and stood out there with such person; held, the evidence was sufficient to support a conviction under the theory that he was keeping watch. Wolfe v. State, 38 App. 537, 43 S. W. 997.

22. — Violation of Sunday law.—This article, and articles 75 and 79, were intended to apply to every subsequent enactment; and hence apply to article 302 of the Penal Code, making it an offense to permit a public theatrical performance on Sunday, and make all aiding in the commission of the offense principals. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604. And in Gould v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 172, it was held that evidence that the defendant sold tickets, and, in the literature distributed, was held out as the manager of the theater kept open for public amusement on Sunday, justified a finding that he was guilty of opening or permitting the theater to be opened on Sunday, though he was not the proprietor.

23. Indictment, proof and variance.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 733.

The indictment need not allege the facts constituting accused a principal. Williams v. State, 42 Tex. 392; Bell v. State, 1 App. 598; Gladden v. State, 2 App. 508; Davis v. State, 3 App. 91; Tuller v. State, 8 App. 501; Mills v. State, 13 App. 487; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604. It need not allege that the parties impleaded as principals "acted together." Bell v. State, 1 App. 598; Watson v. State, 28 App. 34, 12 S. W. 404; Finney v. State, 29 App. 184, 15 S. W. 175; Loggins v. State, 32 App. 358, 24 S. W. 408; Gallagher v. State, 34 App. 306, 30 S. W. 557. Or that they conspired together to commit the offense. Williams v. State, 42 Tex. 392; Bell v. State, 1 App. 598; Tuller v. State, 8 App. 501; Loggins v. State, 32 App. 358, 24 S. W. 408. It is not necessary to allege the facts relied upon to show the defendants to be principals, although the offense with which they are charged may not have actually been committed by them. But if they are principals by reason of the parts performed by them in the commission of the offense, they may be convicted under an indictment charging them directly with its commission. If, however, the pleader charges each of the defendants with the particular acts done, or part performed by them respectively, and the facts alleged as to some of them be insufficient, the indictment as to them must be held bad. Williams v. State, 42 Tex. 392; Gladden v. State, 2 App. 508. It is proper to charge one as the actual perpetrator and the others as present and knowing the unlawful intent, aided, abetted, encouraged, etc. Gladden v. State, 2 App. 508; Davis v. State, 3 App. 91. The indictment must allege that principal in first degree of his malice aforethought committed the homicide and that the principal in the second degree of his malice aforethought, etc., was present, aiding, etc., and this must be proved and submitted in the same measure by the charge to the court. Leslie v. State, 42 App. 65, 57 S. W. 661.

Persons charged as principals may be convicted of different degrees of homicide. Red v. State, 39 App. 667, 47 S. W. 1003, 73 Am. St. Rep. 965.

Where one is a principal by reason of the part performed by him in the commission of an offense, he may be convicted under an indictment charging him with actual commission; hence an averment that accused passed a forged instrument through and by an agent is surplusage, and the indictment is not defective because not alleging that the agent was innocent. Dillard v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 99.

If a principal only by reason of his co-operation with the party who actually committed the crime he may be convicted under an indictment charging him directly as principal. Tuller v. State, 8 App. 501; Mills v. State, 13 App. 487; Gladden v. State, 2 App. 508; Davis v. State, 3 App. 91. There is no variance where the parties, being indicted as principals, if the proof shows that but one of them alone committed the crime. Such one could be convicted under that indictment. Finney v. State, 29 App. 184, 15 S. W. 175; Watson v. State, 28 App. 34, 12 S. W. 404; Loggins v. State, 32 App. 358, 24 S. W. 408; Gallagher v. State, 34 App. 306, 30 S. W. 557.

Inasmuch as the statute creates a difference between principals and accomplices, an indictment must follow this distinction in charging one as an accomplice; and he cannot be convicted as an accomplice under an indictment charging him as principal, nor as principal under a charge as accomplice. McKeen v. State, 7 App. 631; Truitt v. State, 8 App. 148; Simms v. State, 10 App. 131; Mills v. State, 13 App. 487; Bean v. State, 17 App. 60; Trimble v. State, 18 App. 632; Golden v. State, 18 App. 637; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 228, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; Armstrong v. State, 28 App. 526, 13 S. W. 864; Rix v. State, 33 App. 353, 26 S. W. 505; Dawson v. State, 38 App. 50, 41 S. W. 599; Criner v. State, 41 App. 290, 53 S. W. 873; McAlister v. State, 45 App. 258, 76 S. W. 760, 108 Am. St. Rep. 958; Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 989; Silvas v. State, 71 App. 213, 159 S. W. 223; Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133.

Where the count of an indictment on which he was tried charged accused as principal in committing a robbery, and did not name any other person, the fact that persons named in other counts as principals were shown not to have participated does not constitute a variance. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 345.

24. Evidence.—In the following cases the evidence was held insufficient to support allegations charging accused as a principal. Smith v. State, 23 App. 358, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773; Collins v. State, 24 App. 141, 5 S. W. 848; Gentry v. State, 24 App. 478, 6 S. W. 321; Bowers v. State, 24 App. 542, 7 S. W. 247, 5 Am. St. Rep. 901; Blain v. State, 24 App. 626, 7 S. W. 239; Fernandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 228, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; Knowles v. State, 27 App. 503, 11 S. Art. 75. [75] Same subject.—When an offense is actually committed by one or more persons, but others are present, and, knowing the unlawful intent, aid by acts, or encourage by words or gestures, those actually engaged in the commission of the unlawful act, or who, not being actually present, keep watch so as to prevent the interruption of those engaged in committing the offense, such persons so aiding, encouraging or keeping watch are principal offenders, and may be prosecuted and convicted as such. [P. C. 215.]

Indictment of aider or abettor.—The indictment against an aider or abettor need not allege the acts or words of encouragement. Davis v. State, 3 App. 91.

Offense directly accomplished by another.—Under articles 75 to 78, all persons who are present and participate by acts, or encourage by words or gestures in the commission of the offense, are principals, though the act directly accomplishing the offense is the act of another. Davis v. State, 61 App. 611, 136 S. W. 45.

Woman as guilty of rape.—Under this article a woman may be guilty of rape.—Campbell v. State, 63 App. 595, 141 S. W. 232, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 858.

Giving encouragement.—While mere presence at a homicide will not render one a principal, it may have that effect where there is evidence of a previous conspiracy, his presence then constituting an encouragement to the offense. Leslie v. State, 42 App. 65, 57 S. W. 659.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 733.

Art. 76. [76] Same subject.—All persons who shall engage in procuring aid, arms or means of any kind to assist in the commission of an offense, while others are executing the unlawful act, and all persons who endeavor at the time of the commission of the offense, to secure the safety or concealment of the offenders, are principals, and may be convicted and punished as such. [P. C. 216.]

See notes under the two preceding articles.

Cited, Phillips v. State, 26 App. 228, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471.

Homicide.—A requested charge that the mere presence of a person at the committing of an offense, or his mere knowledge that an offense is about to be committed, will not make him a principal, nor will his failure to give alarm or supposed concealment of the offense and the offenders make him such, but, to constitute one a principal with others in the commission of a crime, there must be a combination of both acts and intent, and he must act together with the others in the commission of the offense, knowing their unlawful intent, and that, unless the jury believe beyond a reasonable doubt that accused was present when decedent was killed, and knew both of the act of the killing and of the intent of the person who committed the act, and did some overt act in connection with such person, and had a guilty knowledge and conspired with the person doing the killing before the act was done, the mere presence at decedent's house on the night of the killing, and the mere fact that she may have falsified and may have concealed those who killed decedent, will not render her a principal, was properly refused, since if accused concealed those who killed decedent, she would be a principal under this article. The charge was also erroneous because, if theretofore accused had consented to the murder, and was present when it was committed, she would be a principal, though at the moment of the killing she did no overt act. Goode v. State, 57 App. 220, 123 S. W. 597.

Forgery.—One who aids in passing forged checks by advising and keeping watch while a confederate passed the paper, may be treated as a principal. Mason v. State, 32 App. 95, 22 S. W. 144, 408.

Abortion.—Where a defendant has furnished the means for procuring an abortion, knowing the purpose intended, and the abortion is in fact procured, he is an accomplice if the crime is accomplished or a principal if the attempt fails. Willingham v. State, 33 App. 98, 25 S. W. 424.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 733.

Art. 77. [77] Same subject.—If any one, by employing a child or other person, who can not be punished, to commit an offense, or by any means, such as laying poison where it may be taken, and with intent that it shall be taken, or by preparing any other means by which a person may injure himself, and with intent that such person shall thereby be injured, or, by any other indirect means, cause another to receive an injury to his person or property, the offender, by the use of such indirect means, becomes a principal. [P. C. 217.]

See notes under articles 74-76 ante.

Employing a person not punishable.—One using an innocent to consummate a crime is a principal, whether present or not, under this article. So, where one points out an animal that does not belong to him on the range and sells it to another as his own, he is guilty of theft. Farris v. State, 55 App. 481, 117 S. W. 798, 799, 131 Am. St. Rep. 824.

Where cattle stolen in one county were placed in a pasture of accused in that county, with knowledge that they were stolen, and he employed an innocent third person to drive them to another county, and there conceal them by shipping them, accused was a principal in the concealment in such second county, within this article and T. county could prosecute him. Davis v. State, 61 App. 611, 136 S. W. 45.

Suicide.—This article does not apply to a case where accused directly or indirectly furnished poison to one who took it voluntarily, and thereby became a suicide. Grace v. State, 44 App. 193, 69 S. W. 530; Sanders v. State, 54 App. 101, 112 S. W. 69, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 243. And an indictment is insufficient which does not negative the idea that deceased voluntarily took the poison and fails to allege deceased's want of knowledge, or that defendant, in some manner, by force, threats or fraud, caused deceased to take the poison. Sanders v. State, 54 App. 101, 112 S. W. 68, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 243.

Passing forged check.—Where accused, in an action against him on a note, handed to his attorney, and his attorney offered in evidence, a check which, after it had been paid, had been so altered as to apparently evidence a payment on such note, and it did not appear that the attorney knew or suspected that the check was forged, while the evidence showed that accused did know that fact, and that he testified to the genuineness of the check, the act of passing the forged instrument was that of accused, and not of his attorney. Bunker v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 108.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 733.

Art. 78. [78] Same subject.—Any person who advises or agrees to the commission of an offense, and who is present when the same is committed, is a principal thereto, whether he aids or not in the illegal act. [P. C. 218.]

Accessory before the fact.—See notes under articles 74 and 75, ante, and 79, post. The difference between accessories before the fact, who are accomplices under the Texas statute, and principals has not been abolished. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 989.

In a prosecution for murder by aiding and abetting another to kill, whether defendant entered into a conspiracy to kill deceased, and whether he aided and encouraged the one doing the killing by standing watch so as to avoid interruption, the evidence held sufficient to take such questions to the jury. Goodwin v. State, 126 S. W. 582.

— Accomplishment of crime other than that intended.—See Blain v. State, 30 App. 702, 18 S. W. 862; Isaacs v. State, 36 App. 505, 38 S. W. 40; Schackey v. State, 41 App. 225, 53 S. W. 877; Renner v. State, 43 App. 347, 65 S. W. 1102.

Qui facit per alium, facit per se.—The maxim, "qui facit per alium, facit per se," obtains no less in criminal than in civil cases. Carlisle v. State, 31 App. 537, 21 S. W. 358; Strang v. State, 32 App. 219, 22 S. W. 680; Willingham v. State, 33 App. 98, 25 S. W. 424.

Aggravated assault.—Under this article mere presence when an offense is committed, does not make one a principal unless he advises or agrees thereto, so that if accused took a girl to a certain place where she was afterwards assaulted by others who met them there, according to agreement without any purpose of having her assaulted, but, as accused understood, for the purpose of seeing her about a letter, he would not be guilty as a principal, and it was error to refuse an instruction to that effect. Nowlin v. State, 60 App. 356, 132 S. W. 800.

Charge on circumstantial evidence under the statute.—In view of this article held that where an issue whether defendant advised or agreed to commission of an offense is raised, and this is shown by circumstantial evidence alone, it is proper for the court to charge on circumstantial evidence on that particular issue. Burnam v. State, 61 App. 616, 135 S. W. 1175.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 733.

Article 79. [79] Accomplice, who is.—An accomplice is one who is not present at the commission of an offense, but who, before the act is done, advises, commands or encourages another to commit the offense; or,

Who agrees with the principal offender to aid him in committing the offense, though he may not have given such aid; or,

Who promises any reward, favor or other inducement, or threatens any injury in order to procure the commission of the offense; or,

Who prepares arms or aid of any kind, prior to the commission of an offense, for the purpose of assisting the principal in the execution of the same. [P. C. 219.]

1. Accomplice in general.—An accomplice is a person who knowingly, voluntarily, actively, and with criminal intent unites with the principal offender in the commission of a crime. Tate v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 825; Holmes v. State, 70 App. 214, 156 S. W. 1173; Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286; Liegeois v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 382. The test is whether the alleged accomplice could be indicted and punished for the crime for which the accused is being tried. Liegeois v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 382. He must, in some way, be connected with the crime charged. It is not sufficient that he may have been connected with a defendant in a prior transaction, even though violative of law. Warren v. State, 60 App. 468, 132 S. W. 136. Mere knowledge that a crime is to be committed does not make one an accomplice. Holmes v. State, 70 App. 214, 156 S. W. 1173.

An accomplice must be either a principal, accomplice, or accessory, technically speaking. Parker v. State, 40 App. 123, 49 S. W. 80.

To constitute an accomplice, it must be charged and proved, first, that an agreement has been entered into (that is, the principal has been advised and commanded to commit the crime); second, that he committed the offense; third, that, before its commission, the accomplice advised or commanded the principal to do the particular overt act, or some act within the purview of the original design; and, fourth, that these acts were within the terms of the agreement between the principal and accomplice. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 989.

In order to make one guilty as an accomplice, it is not necessary that he and the principal should have entered into an agreement to commit the offense, but only that, before the act was done, he advised, commanded, or encouraged the principal to commit the offense. Bragg v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 162.

There must be a principal guilty of the main offense. Arnold v. State, 9 App. 435; Armstrong v. State, 28 App. 526, 13 S. W. 864; Armstrong v. State, 33 App. 417, 26 S. W. 829; Isaacs v. State, 36 App. 505, 38 S. W. 40; Kaufman v. State (Cr. App.) 159 S. W. 58.

One is not an accomplice merely because he conceals his knowledge of a crime. Noftinger v. State, 7 App. 301; Rucker v. State, 7 App. 549; Smith v. State, 23 App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. W. 560; Alford v. State, 31 App. 299, 20 S. W. 553.

W. 874; Cain v. State, 42 App. 210, 59 S. W. 277; Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1146. A co-conspirator is an accomplice and his evidence alone will not support a conviction. Sessions v. State, 37 App. 62, 38 S. W. 623.

If by his acts and conduct one person encourages another to commit a crime he is an accomplice even though he intended to have the other persons punished for the commission of the offense. Dever v. State, 37 App. 396, 30 S. W. 1071; distinguished from Woodworth v. State, 20 App. 375.

Where witness agrees that if defendant will pay a debt which he owes him that he will not testify against him, and it does not appear that defendant accepted the offer, the witness is not an accomplice so as to require corroboration. Robertson v. State, 45 App. 441, 80 S. W. 1000.

Offer to pay fine for committing assault will not render the offerer an accomplice where the actual assault was made by the principal without knowledge of the offer. Mahaney v. State, 48 App. 348, 88 S. W. 223.

Whether or not a child seven years old can be an accomplice is suggested, but not decided in Mason v. State, 2 App. 192.

2. Actual complicity between accomplice and principal necessary.—See Mahaney v. State, 48 App. 348, 88 S. W. 223.

4. Distinguished from principal.—See notes under article 74, ante.

5. Distinguished from conspiracy.—Where a party is charged as an accomplice, under the statute, with the commission of a felony, the case assumes the nature to some extent of a conspiracy, though the statute makes a distinction between a conspiracy as an offense and an offense committed by a principal instigated by an accomplice; a conspiracy being complete when a positive agreement has been made between the parties to commit a felony, while to be an accomplice the crime must have been actually committed by the principal. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 989.

6. Accomplices within provision requiring corroboration.—See notes to articles 791, 801, C. C. P.

One who originates a crime or is instrumental in its initiation, even though a detective or other officer, is an "accomplice"; but if he is approached, and all his steps are taken with a view of detecting the crime, or to get evidence thereof, he is not an "accomplice" to such crime. Holmes v. State, 70 App. 214, 156 S. W. 1173; Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286; Savage v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 730. And see Clay v. State, 40 App. 559, 51 S. W. 212. Where, however, an assistant county attorney made the first proposition and induced accused to offer a bribe, even though he did not intend to accept it, and was merely seeking to entrap or detect accused in the commission of an offense, he was an accomplice. Davis v. State, 70 App. 524, 158 S. W. 288. And where the prosecuting witness encouraged the conspiracy and helped prepare for the commission of the offense, even though he was informing the officers of the same, his testimony would be that of an accomplice. Dever v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1012.

14. — Burglary.—An employé who was approached by accused, and who agreed to let accused know when his employer received a car of feed and to leave the warehouse door open, and who was instructed by his employer to inform accused of the car's arrival, leading to the arrest of accused and to a charge of burglary, is not an accomplice. *Holmes v. Where accused was charged with knowingly permitting a house of which she was lessee to be disorderly, a prostitute to whom accused sub-rented a room, which the tenant used for prostitution, was not an accomplice, since such inmate could not have been convicted of the same crime of which accused was charged. Liegeois v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 382.

16. — False swearing as to age.—In a prosecution for false swearing as to the age of a girl in obtaining a marriage license the girl is an accomplice. Smith v. State, 37 App. 488, 36 S. W. 586.

A woman permitting another to commit an abortion on her is not an accomplice. Gray v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 337. Where an abortion was performed on prosecutrix at the alleged instance of defendant and a physician, prosecutrix was not an accomplice. Fondren v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 411. That prosecutrix willingly submitted to an abortion performed on her did not render her an accomplice. Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 930. And see Watson v. State, 9 App. 237; Freeman v. State, 11 App. 92.

18. — Forgery.—Where a party pays a forged note for the forger and tries to keep the crime a secret and afterwards becomes angry with defendant and prosecutes, he is an accomplice. Nelson v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 645. Where, on the trial of an accomplice to a forgery of checks forged by a third person, the undisputed evidence showed that the third person forged each of the checks and that accused was not present at the time, and the third person testified as to the proximity of accused to her when the checks were passed, a charge that, if the accused was a principal, he could not be convicted as an accomplice was properly refused. Warren v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 130.

19. — Gambling.—Mere participants with accused in a gambling game, concerning which he was charged with falsely testifying, are not accomplices. Warren v. State, 60 App. 468, 132 S. W. 136.

Where decedent was killed by a company of armed men, illegally organized to invade Mexico, and accused was with the company from the time of decedent's capture until long after he was killed in order that he might not inform against the party accused was a principal and not an accomplice, though he was some distance away when the killing occurred and did not participate in it. Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133. Evidence that D. came up with accused and another on the evening of the homicide, but some time before it was committed, and, after they had all drunk whisky, accused, referring to the place where the homicide was committed, remarked, "There is where I will do the work to-night," to which D. replied, "Uh huh," and left and at the time of the killing was conclusively shown to have been at a point in the country where it would have been impossible for him to have taken any part in the murder or to have done any act in furtherance of the crime, was insufficient to make him an accom-pllice, under the rule that concealment of knowledge that a crime is to be committed will not make the concealing party an accomplice or accessory before the fact. Spates v. State, 62 App. 532, 138 S. W. 393. Where parties, after committing a homicide, went to the home of a woman from whom they had rented rooms, and while there told her the facts concerning the killing, it not appearing that she was paid the room rent with the money stolen from deceased, she was not an accomplice, though she concealed her knowledge of the killing for some time. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 75. See, also, Dugger v. State, 27 App. 95, 10 S. W. 763; Condron v. State, 62 App. 485, 138 S. W. 594; Jones v. State, 63 App. 394, 141 S. W. 953; Espinoza v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 208.

One who merely overheard a brief portion of the conversation of persons about taking some one out of jail, which they subsequently did, afterwards killing him, but who was not party to their enterprise and had no portion or part in it, was not an accomplice, though, over his protest and against his wishes, they took from the house where he was working the gun with which they did the killing. Chandler v. State, 131 S. W. 598.

21. — Incest.—See Gillespie v. State, 49 App. 530, 93 S. W. 556.

If the female in incest is shown to have knowingly, voluntarily, and with the same intent which actuated accused, united with him in the offense, she is an accomplice, but if, in commission of the incestuous act, she was the victim of force, threats, fraud, or undue influence, so that she did not act voluntarily, and did not join in the act with the same intent which actuated accused, she is not an accomplice. Mercer v. State, 17 App. 452; Skidmore v. State, 57 App. 497, 123 S. W. 1129, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 466.

22. — Pandering or procuring female for immoral purposes.—In a prosecution for pandering, the female procured is not an accomplice. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 825; Hewitt v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 40.

A female inducing accused for a money consideration to procure men to visit her room for an immoral purpose, is an accomplice of accused, and he cannot be convicted on her uncorroborated testimony. Denman v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 332. A prostitute, who came to a hotel with a man as her husband and so registered, and who remained after he left, and who then employed for a money consideration a porter in the hotel to locate men in the hotel with whom she could have sexual intercourse, and who located men and directed them to her room, is an accomplice of the porter, indicted for alluring a female to visit a room for immoral purposes. Dooms v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 334.

Under Penal Code, art. 506b, making it a felony to procure a female to leave the state for the purpose of prostitution, the female so induced to leave is not an accomplice, even though she went voluntarily. Hewitt v. State, 167 S. W. 40.

23. — Rape.—Prosecutrix cannot be an accomplice in rape case. Hamilton v. State, 36 App. 372, 37 S. W. 431; Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 628; Price v. State, 64 App. 448, 142 S. W. 586; Melton v. State, 71 App. 130, 158 S. W. 550.

24. — Receiving deposit during bank's insolvency.—One who was the manager of the bank of which accused was president, and had personal charge of its business, receiving all moneys and paying all checks, and knew that the bank was insolvent, is an accomplice to the crime of receiving money on deposit during the bank's insolvency, charged against accused. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 561.

25. — Receiving stolen property.—The thief is an accomplice in the offense of receiving stolen property. Miller v. State, 4 App. 251.

Where there was evidence that accused, charged with receiving stolen goods, was informed of the intended larceny, and that his horse and the horse of a witness were hitched to a hack and turned over to negroes, that accused and the witness remained together, and that during the night the negroes came back and said to accused, in the presence of the witness, that they had some stuff from a third person, and that the same was brought into the house in the presence of the witness, there was evidence that the witness was an accomplice. Barker v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 151.

26. — Seduction.—Prosecutrix in a case of seduction is an accomplice. McCullar v. State, 36 App. 213, 36 S. W. 585, 61 Am. St. Rep. 847. A witness who, learning that defendant had had intercourse with prosecutrix, concealed himself and saw them in the act, and then with defendant's consent compelled her to have intercourse with him by threatening to divulge what he had seen, is not an accomplice in the seduction. Anderson v. State, 39 App. 83, 45 S. W. 15.

27. — Theft.—Mere concealment of stolen property does not make one an accomplice. Erwin v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 961. But one who receives stolen money from accused for the purpose of concealment, may be an accomplice. Kelley v. State, 34 App. 412, 31 S. W. 174; Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 423; Guitierrez v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1025.

Where the owner of goods taken promises defendant that if he will return them he will let him go, but if not he will prosecute him, he is an accomplice in law. Campbell v. State, 42 App. 27, 57 S. W. 288.

An accomplice cannot be convicted on the same facts that would make him guilty as principal, or as receiver of stolen property. Criner v. State, 41 App. 290, 53 S. W. 874.

In a prosecution for hog theft, where it appeared that the hogs were taken from their accustomed range, so that whoever took them, by driving them or reducing them to actual possession, was guilty as an original taker, and any one who had connection with the hogs subsequent to such taking was not a principal, but there was no evidence showing how the hogs disappeared from the range, or who took them, and it was sought by circumstantial evidence to connect accused and another with the possession of the hogs, though they were never seen in accused's possession, a charge that all persons are principals who are guilty of acting together in the commission of an offense, and that if the jury believed that one or more of the hogs in question were fraudulently taken as charged, and that accused, with one or more others, acted together in such taking, accused would be a principal, and that by acting together was meant that accused was present, and that the persons acted in concert towards the accomplishment of a common purpose, one performing one part and another another part in aid of its accomplishment at the time of its perpetration, was erroneous, as permitting accused to be convicted as principal, whether he participated in the original taking or not. McClure v. State, 59 App. 287, 128 S. W. 386. Where accused had no connection with the original larceny of cattle, but received them in F. county with knowledge that they were stolen and employed third persons to drive them to T. county, and to ship them in his name, and the third persons knew that the cattle were stolen at the time they took them from accused, accused was at most an accomplice to the concealment of the cattle in T. county. Davis v. State, 61 App. 611, 136 S. W. 45.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of accused as an accomplice in a horse theft, but insufficient to show that a purchaser of the horse from the principal was an accomplice. Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 536.

In order to be a principal, accused must be connected with the original taking; and if he was not present at the time of the theft, but advised it and the hogs were taken pursuant to his advice, he would by the express terms of the statute be an accomplice. Pendley v. State, 71 App. 281, 158 S. W. 811.

In a prosecution for hog theft, the owner testified that he found that his hogs had disappeared and had been tolled away by corn by two and possibly three persons, and followed the tracks some distance in the direction where accused and others lived, and, failing to find the hogs, procured a search warrant, and investigated the houses of several people living in the neighborhood, and in three or four places found fresh hog meat corresponding in size to his own hogs. Accused denied that he had taken the hogs, or that he was where the hogs were taken, and gave evidence that he worked on a certain house on a chimney until about noon, when, the work having stopped, he and others killed two of his own hogs, and sold some of them to his neighbors. Held, that the evidence required a charge on principals and accomplices or accessories, and on the question whether accused was merely the receiver of stolen property, so as to prevent his conviction as a principal. Pendley v. State, 71 App. 281, 158 S. W. 811.

Evidence that the wife of one of the parties to the killing and theft of a yearling heard them talking about the theft, but advised against it, and after it was killed and part of it brought to her house refused to have anything to do with it, did not raise the issue whether she was an accomplice. Elmore v. State, 72 App. 226, 162 S. W. 517.

28. — Violations of liquor laws.—See Fox v. State, 53 App. 150, 109 S. W. 370.

The party to whom whisky is given on election day is not an accomplice. Keith v. State, 38 App. 680, 44 S. W. 847.

The fact that a person induces another to purchase liquor from one who sells it in violation of law does not make either the one who bought or the one who induced him to buy an accomplice. Walker v. State, 72 S. W. 401.

Local option laws, see Sears v. State, 35 App. 442, 34 S. W. 124; Terry v. State, 46 App. 75, 79 S. W. 320; Morrow v. State, 56 App. 519, 120 S. W. 492; Trinkle v. State, 59 App. 257, 127 S. An accomplice must be indicted as such. McKeen v. State, 7 App. 631; Simms v. State, 10 App. 131; Truitt v. State, 8 App. 148; Bean v. State, 17 App. 60; Golden v. State, 18 App. 637; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 228, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; Armstrong v. State, 28 App. 526, 13 S. W. 864; Rix v. State, 33 App. 353, 26 S. W. 505; Davis v. State, 61 App. 611, 136 S. W. 45. The indictment should charge the principal with the crime, and then the accomplice with the statutory prior acts constituting him an accomplice. Poston v. State, 12 App. 408; McKeen v. State, 7 App. 631; Scales v. State, Id. 361; Simms v. State, 10 App. 131; Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444.

Where accused was charged as an accomplice to commission of abortion by a physician, the indictment need not allege that the physician knew that the woman was pregnant when he operated on her. Fondren v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 411.

The second count of the indictment (being the count upon which this conviction was had) charges that certain persons, to the grand jurors unknown, and whom the grand jurors are unable to describe, did kill and murder one Ellick Brown, and that defendant, prior to the commission of said murder by said unknown persons, did unlawfully, willfully, and of his malice aforethought advise, command, and encourage said unknown persons to commit said murder, said defendant not being present at the commission of said murder by said unknown persons. It was objected to the indictment that it neither named nor gave a description of the unknown persons who committed the murder of Brown. Held, that the objection is not sound, and the indictment is sufficient, its purpose and effect not being to charge the unknown persons as the "accused" in this case, but to charge the defendant as an accomplice to the murder of Brown. Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444.

An indictment charging that on a specified date S. forged her father's name to a check on a specified bank for an amount named, and, in proper language, further that before this forgery accused advised, commanded, and encouraged her to commit the forgery, he not being personally present when the forgery was committed, is a sufficient indictment of accused as accomplice to the forgery. Warren v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 130.

33. Evidence.—Confession of principal as evidence against accomplice, see notes under C. C. P. art. 809.

34. Questions for jury.—The best way is to charge what constitutes an accomplice and leave to jury whether he is an accomplice or not. Preston v. State, 40 App. 83, 48 S. W. 581; Bell v. State, 39 App. 680, 47 S. W. 1010.

35. Instructions.—As to alibi. Hamlin v. State, 47 S. W. 656, 664. See notes under art. 735, C. C. P.

Art. 80. [80] Precise offense need not be committed.—To render a person guilty as an accomplice, it is not necessary that the precise offense which he may have advised, or to the execution of which he may have given encouragement or promised assistance, should be committed; it is sufficient that the offense be of the same nature, though different in degree, as that which he so advised or encouraged. [P. C. 220.]

Cited, Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 975.

See notes under art. 78, ante.

Commission of homicide.—A person going with defendant to arrest persons for vagrancy without lawful authority is not an accomplice to a homicide committed by defendant, not within the contemplation of the parties, nor directly connected with the unlawful act. Scott v. State, 46 App. 536, 81 S. W. 294, 108 Am. St. Rep. 1032.

Evidence inadmissible under indictment.—Under this article, and article 48 ante, and article 82 post, in a prosecution under an indictment charging defendant as an accomplice to the murder of A., evidence is inadmissible to show that the plot by defendant and an alleged principal was to kill M., and that A. was killed by mistake. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 989.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 734, 738, 739.

Art. 81. [81] Punishment.—Accomplices shall, in all cases not otherwise expressly provided for, be punished in the same manner as the principal offender. [P. C. 220a.]

Jurisdiction.—Where a murder is committed in one county the district court of that county has jurisdiction to try an accomplice thereto, though all the acts constituting defendant an accomplice were committed in another county. Carlisle v. State, 31 App. 537, 21 S. W. 358.

Verdict.—An accomplice is punished in the same manner as the principal and in a murder case the verdict must specify the degree as it must in a case of murder. Thomas v. State, 43 App. 20, 62 S. W. 920, 96 Am. St. Rep. 834.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 734, 738, 739.

Art. 82. [82] Where one offense is attempted and another committed.—If in the attempt to commit one offense the principal shall by mistake or accident commit some other under the circumstances set forth in articles 48, 49 and 50, the accomplice to the offense originally intended shall, if both offenses are felonies by law, receive the punishment affixed to the lower of the two offenses; but, if the offense designed be a misdemeanor, he shall receive the highest punishment affixed by law to the commission of such misdemeanor, whether the offense actually committed be a misdemeanor or a felony. [P. C. 221.]

See note under article 80, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 734, 738, 739.

Instructions.—Where, on the trial of an alleged accomplice to a homicide, in which it was the state's contention that accused hired R. to kill M., and that R.

killed A. by mistake, believing that he was M., the court charged in the language of this article, except that he substituted for the quoted words "murder in the second degree," and also correctly told the jury what the punishment was for murder in the second degree, the instruction could not have misled the jury; accused, if guilty at all, being guilty of murder in the second degree. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 975.

Art. 83. [83] If principal is under 17, punishment doubled.—If the principal in an offense less than capital be under the age of seventeen years, the punishment of an accomplice shall be increased so as not to exceed, however, double the penalty affixed to the offense in ordinary cases. [P. C. 222.]

Receiver of goods stolen by minor.—The punishment for an adult receiver of goods stolen by a minor under sixteen years old is confinement in the penitentiary for from two to ten years. Ramsey v. State, 34 App. 16, 28 S. W. 808.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 734, 738, 739.

Art. 84. [84] If accomplice is parent, master, guardian or husband to principal, punishment increased.—If the accomplice stands in the relation of parent, master, guardian or husband to the principal offender, he shall, in all such cases, receive the highest punishment affixed to the offense, and the same may, in felonies less than capital, be increased by the jury to double the highest penalty which would be suffered in ordinary cases. [P. C. 223.]

See article 37, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 734, 739.

— Indictment not alleging relation.—This article is not applicable where the indictment does not allege that the defendant stood in the relation of parent to the principal offender. Bragg v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 162.

Art. 85. [85] No accomplice in manslaughter or negligent homicide.—There may be accomplices to all offenses except manslaughter and negligent homicide. [P. C. 224.]

Offenses without accomplice.—Manslaughter and negligent homicide are the only offenses to which there can be no accomplice. Ogle v. State, 16 App. 361; Cartwright v. State, Id., 473, 49 Am. Rep. 826; Austin v. Cameron, 83 Tex. 351, 18 S. W. 437.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 734.

See notes to article 79, ante.

CHAPTER THREE

ACCESSORIES

Art.
86. Who is an accessory.
87. Who cannot be.

88. How punished.

Article 86. [86] Who is an accessory.—An accessory is one who, knowing that an offense has been committed, conceals the offender, or gives him any other aid in order that he may evade an arrest or trial, or the execution of his sentence. But no person who aids an offender in making or preparing his defense at law, or procures him to be bailed, though he afterwards escapes, shall be considered an accessory. [P. C. 225.]

Cited, Tullis v. State, 41 Tex. 598; Robertson v. State, 46 App. 441, 80 S. W. 1000.

In general.—No one can be an accessory after the fact, unless he comes within the letter or spirit of this article; that is he must give some aid and assistance to the principal before he can be guilty. Schackey v. State, 41 App. 255, 53 S. W. 878; Caylor v. State, 44 App. 118, 68 S. W. 982; Chenault v. State, 46 App. 351, 81 S. W. 971; Harrison v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 139. The test is that he renders his principal some personal help to elude punishment; the kind of help is unimportant. Street v. State, 39 App. 134, 45 S. W. 577; Schackey v. State, 41 App. 255, 53 S. W. 878; Gann v. State, 42 App. 133, 57 S. W. 837; Chenault v. State, 46 App. 351, 81 S. W. 971; Smith v. State, 51 App. 137, 100 S. W. 924; Harrison v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 139. It is not essential that the aid rendered shall be of a character to enable the criminal to effect his personal escape or concealment. It is sufficient if it enables him to elude present arrest and prosecution. Blakely v. State, 24 App. 616, 7 S. W. 233, 5 Am. St. Rep. 912. A person can never become an accessory until there has been an offense committed, and the accessory then becomes criminally connected with the principal and not the offense by reason. of the fact that he is assisting the principal in some of the methods specified in the statute. Schackey v. State, 41 App. 255, 53 S. W. 879; Figaroa v. State, 58 App. 611, 127 S. W. 193. One who spirits away or hires material witnesses to leave, so that they cannot be had before the grand jury or trial court, is an accessory. Harrison v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 139. That one compounds a felony does not make him an accessory to the felony compounded. Chenault v. State, supra, overruling Gatlin v. State, 40 App. 116, 49 S. W. 87. See, also, Davis v. State, 52 App. 332, 107 S. W. 855. That accused gives a witness property to secure his departure from the state, in order to get rid of his testimony does not render the witness an accessory. Chitister v. State, 33 App. 635, 28 S. W. 683. Inducing prosecutrix in a rape case to leave the state does not make the person holding out the inducement an accessory after the fact. Caylor v. State, 44 App. 118, 68 S. W. 982. Concealment of knowledge that a felony is to be committed does not make the party concealing it an accessory before the fact. Noftsinger v. State, 7 App. 301.

Distinguished from accomplices.—To constitute one an “accessory,” his participation in the crime and acts must all have occurred subsequent to the commission of the offense, while to constitute one an “accomplice,” his acts must have occurred prior to the commission, and he at the time of the offense must have done nothing in furtherance of the common purpose and design. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1146.

See, also, notes under article 79, ante.

Particular crimes—Aiding escape of prisoner.—This and the following article are not applicable to the offense defined by article 329, post. Peeler v. State, 3 App. 533.

— Burglary or theft.—The bare fact of receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen does not make one accessory to burglary or theft. Street v. State, 39 App. 135, 45 S. W. 577. When one does no more than purchase and receive stolen property, he is not guilty of aiding one to evade arrest—he not having rendered any personal aid to enable the party to escape. Gann v. State, 42 App. 133, 57 S. W. 538.

Since by statute one who steals property in another state and brings it into this state is guilty of theft in this state, one who aids the thief after the property is brought into this state is an accessory. West v. State, 27 App. 472, 11 S. W. 482.

In a prosecution for hog theft, the owner testified that he found that his hogs had disappeared and had been tolled away by corn by two and possibly three persons, and followed the tracks some distance in the direction where accused and others lived, and, failing to find the hogs, procured a search warrant, and investigated the houses of several people living in the neighborhood, and in three or four places found fresh hog meat corresponding in size to his own hogs. Accused denied that he had taken the hogs, or that he was where the hogs were taken, and gave evidence that he worked on a certain house on a chimney until about noon, when, the work having stopped, he and others killed two of his own hogs, and sold some of them to his neighbors. Held, that the evidence required a charge on principals and accomplices or accessories, and on the question whether accused was merely the receiver of stolen property, so as to prevent his conviction as a principal. Pendley v. State, 71 App. 281, 158 S. W. 811.

— Homicide.—Where, immediately after the commission of a homicide by the principal, he and defendant had a retired private consultation, after which the principal mounted a horse and disappeared, and the defendant charged the only two other witnesses present to testify on the inquest to a statement fabricated by himself, to the end that, upon final trial, the principal might be acquitted or released on nominal bond, defendant was an accessory. Blakely v. State, 24 App. 616, 7 S. W. 233, 5 Am. St. Rep. 912. That a witness stated to the prosecuting attorney that accused was at home on the night of the killing, and denied any knowledge of the killing, when he afterwards testified that accused admitted the killing to him before such statement was made to the prosecuting attorney, would not constitute him an accessory after the fact. Hargrove v. State, 63 App. 143, 140 S. W. 234. Where, in a prosecution for homicide committed as an incident to a conspiracy to organize an armed force to invade Mexico, accused at the time of the killing was a member of the company and was then engaged in the furtherance of the conspiracy, he was a principal and not an accessory, though he was not engaged in the killing nor present when it was committed. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1146.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 740.

An indictment against one as accessory to another in the commission of an offense must charge the accessory as such, and must charge the principal with the offense committed. Poston v. State, 12 App. 408. It should state acts done by the accessory in aid of principal and not legal conclusions that he did aid, etc. It should also allege that he knew the crime with which he is charged had been committed by his principal. Street v. State, 39 App. 134, 45 S. W. 577. It need not allege the means by which he gave aid. Gann v. State, 42 App. 133, 57 S. W. 538; Dent v. State, 43 App. 126, 65 S. W. 627. It need not negative inclusion of the accused in the latter clause of the article. State v. Smith, 24 Tex. 285. An indictment charging that defendant, knowing of the commission of a murder, concealed and aided the murderer in order that he might evade an arrest and trial for the offense is sufficient. Blakely v. State, 24 App. 616, 7 S. W. 233, 5 Am. St. Rep. 912. An indictment which properly charged the principal with seduction, and that defendant was an accessory in that, knowing that said W. had committed said offense of seduction, with the purpose and in order that the principal might evade a trial for said offense so committed by him, did unlawfully and willfully conceal and give aid to him, is sufficient. Harrison v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 139.

See, also, notes to article 74, ante.

Art. 87. [87] Who can not be.—The following persons can not be accessories:

1. The husband or wife of an offender.
2. His relations in the ascending or descending line by consanguinity or affinity.
3. His brothers and sisters.
4. His domestic servants. [P. C. 226.]

Relatives.—See Moore v. State, 40 App. 389, 51 S. W. 1108.

A mother can not be an accessory to her son in the commission of crime. Gray v. State, 24 App. 611, 7 S. W. 339. Nor can the grandmother or brother-in-law be accessory. Adcock v. State, 41 App. 288, 53 S. W. 845. A wife does not become an accessory after the fact because after the arrest of her husband and defendant she told persons, who inquired, that she knew nothing of the offense charged against them, though she was cognizant of their criminal acts, for an accessory is one who conceals the offender or gives him aid. Pinckard v. State, 62 App. 602, 138 S. W. 691. Nor can a stepfather, in the commission of an abortion on his stepdaughter. Fondren v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 411. Where defendant was charged with procuring another to burn his building, a brother of the one who set the fire, who was a material witness for the prosecution, and whose only connection with the prosecution was that after his brother's arrest he aided in procuring an attorney and induced defendant to pay the attorney's fees as part of the amount he agreed to pay for starting the fire, was not an accomplice of the defendant, whose testimony must be corroborated to sustain a conviction under this article. Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 122.

Children of deceased and defendant are not accessories, though they were present at the crime and concealed the killing. Martin v. State, 44 App. 279, 70 S. W. 973.

Prosecutrix in rape case and her husband as accessories. Smith v. State, 51 App. 137, 100 S. W. 924.

Domestic servants.—Domestic servant is a servant who resides in the house and not one whose service is outside of the house. Wakefield v. State, 41 Tex. 556; Waterhouse v. State, 21 App. 663, 2 S. W. 889; Peters v. State, 33 App. 170, 26 S. W. 61.

Aiding escape.—None of the parties named in this article are immune from prosecution for conveying articles into a jail to aid in the escape of a prisoner charged with a felony. Peeler v. State, 3 App. 533.

Negating exceptions in indictment.—An indictment need not negative the exceptions contained in this article. State v. Smith, 24 Tex. 285.

Art. 88. [88] How punished.—Accessories to offenses shall be punished by the infliction of the lowest penalty to which the principal in the offense would be liable. [P. C. 227.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 740.

CHAPTER FOUR

TRIAL OF ACCOMPLICES AND ACCESSORIES

Art.	Art.
89. Accomplice may be tried before principal.	91. Can not be witnesses for each other, but may sever.
90. Accessory also, unless principal is arrested.

Article 89. [89] Accomplice may be tried before principal.—An accomplice may be arrested, tried and punished before the conviction of the principal offender, and the acquittal of the principal shall not bar a prosecution against the accomplice, but, on the trial of an accomplice, the evidence must be such as would have convicted the principal. [P. C. 228.]

Order of trial.—Arnold v. State, 9 App. 435; Kingsbury v. State, 37 App. 259, 39 S. W. 365.

Evidence.—An accomplice can be tried and convicted before the principal is, and the acquittal of the principal is no bar to the prosecution of the accomplice. However, he can be convicted only upon such evidence as would convict the principal. Arnold v. State, 9 App. 435; Poston v. State, 12 App. 408; Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444; Bluman v. State, 33 App. 43, 21 S. W. 1027, 26 S. W. 75; Armstrong v. State, 33 App. 417, 26 S. W. 829; Isaacs v. State, 36 App. 505, 33 S. W. 40; Gibson v. State, 53 App. 349, 110 S. W. 41; Richards v. State, 53 App. 400, 110 S. W. 432; Black v. State, 143 S. W. 932; Thomason v. State, 71 App. 439, 160 S. W. 359. The burden is on the state to prove the guilt of the principal to the same extent as if the principal himself was on trial, and hence all evidence to establish the principal's guilt is admissible against the accomplice. Gibson v. State, 53 App. 349, 110 S. W. 50; Fondren v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 411; Aven v. State (Cr.

App.) 177 S. W. 82. But only for the purpose of proving the guilt of the principal. Gibson v. State, 53 App. 349, 110 S. W. 50, 51.

Where in the prosecution of accused as an accomplice to murder it appeared that the principal claimed that he did the killing in self-defense, evidence of the principal's physical condition is competent, but proof of his mental condition showing that he could be influenced is incompetent. Millner v. State, 72 App. 45, 162 S. W. 348. And where, the state proved that the principal after being warned had made a statement or confession admitting the killing of deceased, such statement is admissible against accused to prove the guilt of the principal. Millner v. State, 72 App. 45, 162 S. W. 348. See, also, Bluman v. State, 33 App. 43, 21 S. W. 1027, 26 S. W. 75. Where the confession of the principal was admitted only as tending to show his guilty participancy in the killing, and not as evidence against accused, evidence that the principal, while in jail, told a witness that he killed deceased to get his money, that he thought he had about $600 when he killed him, that he turned his pockets all wrong side out and found he had no money, is properly excluded. And evidence that the principal, who had voluntarily executed a written confession, told witness in jail that the confession was false is admissible. Also evidence that the person alleged to have committed the act, when arrested, had defendant's watch on his person is admissible. And evidence that a witness attempted to borrow money from another in order that he might loan the same to accused, who stated he wanted the money to give it to the person who committed the killing in order to help him off, is admissible. And where the state claimed that defendant was an accomplice to the killing of deceased, and that he desired decedent's death because of intimacy with decedent's wife, certain letters written by the wife to defendant and found in his suit case within two hours after it had been left by him at the house of S., when it was taken charge of by the sheriff, are admissible. Millner v. State, 72 App. 45, 162 S. W. 348. Where there was evidence that defendant had borrowed a $10 bill to aid a friend, who was in trouble, to get out of the country, evidence that when the principal was arrested he had a $10 bill and defendant's watch on his person is admissible. Millner v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 899.

To convict one of being an accomplice to a forgery, the state must prove the forgery and that accused was an accomplice thereto. The state may show what was done at the same time in forging other checks, and in negotiating them and procuring goods and money thereon, to show both the forgery and accused's connection therewith as an accomplice. Warren v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 130.

In a prosecution of accused as an accomplice to arson, evidence showing the principal's guilt which had no application to accused is properly received, without an instruction that it could not be considered against accused or for any other purpose than to show the principal's guilt. Thomason v. State, 71 App. 439, 160 S. W. 359.

— Acts and declarations of conspirators.—See notes under art. 783, C. C. P.

— Judgment of conviction of principal.—Dent v. State, 43 App. 126, 65 S. W. 627.

Form of verdict.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 770.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 739.

Art. 90. [90] Accessory also, unless principal is arrested.—An accessory may in like manner be tried and punished before the principal, when the latter has escaped; but, if the principal is arrested, he shall be first tried, and, if acquitted, the accessory shall be discharged. [P. C. 229.]

Arrest or escape of principal.—An accessory may be tried before his principal only when the principal has escaped. State v. McDaniel, 41 Tex. 229; Ray v. State, 43 App. 234, 64 S. W. 1057; Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747. See, also, Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444; Williams v. State, 27 App. 466, 11 S. W. 481; West v. State, 27 App. 472, 11 S. W. 482. And where the principal has been arrested this article controls the general provisions of Code Cr. Proc. art. 727, relating to the severance on trial of defendants, Ray v. State, 43 App. 234, 64 S. W. 1057; Zweig v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 747.

Death of principal.—The death of the principal is not equivalent to an escape, and in such a contingency the accessory must be discharged. State v. McDaniel, 41 Tex. 229; Moore v. State, 40 App. 391, 51 S. W. 1108.

Confinement of principal in penitentiary as abating prosecution.—A conviction of the principal for another offense and his confinement in the penitentiary does not entitle the accessory to a discharge. Hernandez v. State, 4 App. 425.

Conviction or proof of guilt of principal.—The guilt of the principal must be first established before a conviction can be had of an accessory. Arnold v. State, 9 App. 435; Simms v. State, 10 App. 131; Poston v. State, 12 App. 408; Armstrong v. State, 23 App. 526, 13 S. W. 864; Id., 33 App. 417, 26 S. W. 829; Kingsbury v. State, 37 App. 264, 39 S. W. 365; Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444; Williams v. State, 27 App. 466, 11 S. W. 481; West v. State, 27 App. 472, 11 S. W. 482; Leeper v. State, 29 App. 154, 15 S. W. 411; Isaacs v. State, 36 App. 505, 38 S. W. 40. See, also, Dent v. State, 43 App. 126, 65 S. W. 629. If there be a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the principal the accessory can not be held guilty. It is therefore the duty of the court to charge the law of reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the principal as well as to that of the accessory. Poston v. State, 12 App. 408. The principal has not been convicted where sentence has not been pronounced, though he has been found guilty and judgment has been rendered. Kingsbury v. State, 37 App. 259, 39 S. W. 365. Or until judgment is affirmed if appeal has been perfected. Id.

It is proper to read in evidence, on the trial of an accessory, the verdict and judgment convicting the principal. West v. State, 27 App. 472, 11 S. W. 482; Dent v. State, 43 App. 126, 65 S. W. 629. But such evidence is only prima facie evidence of the guilt of the principal when it is introduced on the trial of the accessory after the fact and it may be combated by evidence on part of accessory, and the innocence of the principal shown thus securing an acquittal of the accessory. Dent v. State, 43 App. 126, 65 S. W. 630.

Sufficiency of evidence. Bluman v. State, 33 App. 43, 21 S. W. 1027, 26 S. W. 75; Dugger v. State, 27 App. 95, 10 S. W. 763.

Jurisdiction.—Carlisle v. State, 31 App. 537, 21 S. W. 358.

Principal's acts and declarations.—See notes under art. 783, C. C. P.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 739.

Art. 91. [91] Can not be witnesses for each other, but may sever.—Persons charged as principals, accomplices or accessories, whether in the same indictment or by different indictments, can not be introduced as witnesses for one another, but they may claim a severance; and, if any one or more be acquitted, they may testify in behalf of the others. [P. C. 230.]

See C. C. P. arts. 785, 788 (subd. 3), 791, 797, and 801, and notes thereunder; Willson's Cr. Forms, 739.

[Act 1879, Extra Session, ch. 8, § 4.]

Art. 108. Venue.—Prosecutions for failing to account for, and pay over money belonging to the state, under the provisions of the preceding article, shall be conducted in Travis county; and prosecutions for failing to account for, and pay over, moneys belonging to the counties, cities and towns, shall be conducted in the county to which such money may belong, or in the county where such city or town is situated. Art. 108b. Any collector of taxes failing to comply with the provisions of this article shall be fined in a sum not less than five hundred and not more than one thousand dollars, and each failure to make the required report shall constitute a separate offense; and it shall be the duty of the comptroller to notify the county attorney, or district attorney, of the county in which the collector resides, and the sureties on the bond of said collector, of any failure to comply with the provisions of this law. [Act March 30, 1887, p. 67.]

Explanatory.—The above article, at the time it was incorporated into the revised Penal Code, had been superseded by Laws 1893, p. 90 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 7618-7620). The superseding act, however, was carried into the Penal Code as arts. 144-146, post.

Howard* (Civ. App.) 129 S. W. 857.

District and County Attorneys.—See arts. 363, 365, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914. In counties that cast 7,500 votes or more in presidential elections, the county attorney is entitled to retain for his individual services fees to the extent of $2,500 and one-fourth of the excess. Hare v. Grayson County (Civ. App.) 51 S. W. 656.

Art. 110a. County attorney, compensation in certain counties.—The county attorney in those counties having no district attorney, where he performs the duties of district attorney, may receive the same compensation as provided for the district attorney. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 44, sec. 10; Rev. Civ. St. 1911, art. 3884.]

See arts. 1117a–1117c, 1117f, 1117h, 1118, 1131, C. C. P.

Explanatory.—Certain provisions of Act 1897, S. S. p. 5, constituting a qualification or amplification of the offenses denounced in art. 113, post, were omitted from the revised Penal Code. These omitted provisions are inserted in this compilation as arts. 110a–110g, 113a–113d, 115a–115c, in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

Art. 110b. District attorney, compensation of.—The maximum fixed for the compensation of the district attorney shall be construed to be the amount which that officer is authorized to retain of fees allowed such officer in his district, whether composed of one or more counties. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 44, sec. 10; Rev. St. 1911, art. 3885.]

See note under art. 110a; see arts. 1117a–1117c, 1117f, 1117h, 1118, 1131, C. C. P.

Art. 110c. County judge, compensation as superintendent of public instruction.—In counties where a county judge acts as superintendent of public instruction, he shall receive such other salary as may be provided by the commissioners' court, not to exceed the sum of six hundred dollars per annum. [Id. sec. 10, Rev. St. 1911, art. 3886.]

See note under art. 110a.

Salary of county judge as county superintendent.—This article empowers the commissioners' court to allow county judges for services as county superintendents of public instruction a salary not to exceed $600 per annum. This precludes the idea that they are any longer entitled to commissions as provided by the old law. Stevens v. Campbell, 26 Civ. App. 213, 63 S. W. 162.

Art. 110d. Officer not collecting maximum fees, etc., may retain out of delinquent fees collected, remainder paid to treasurer.—Any officer mentioned in section 10 of this act [art. 110, ante], who does not collect the maximum amount of his fees for any fiscal year and who reports delinquent fees for that year, shall be entitled to retain, when collected, such part of such delinquent fees as is sufficient to complete the maximum compensation for the year in which delinquent fees were charged, and also to retain the one-fourth of the excess belonging to him, and the remainder of the delinquent fees for that fiscal year shall be paid as herein provided for when collected. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 9, sec. 11; Act 1907, p. 50; Rev. St. 1911, art. 3890.]

Explanatory.—See note under art. 110a. Acts 1907, p. 50, purports to amend "section 2" of Act 1897, S. S. p. 5. From a consideration of the subject-matter of the amendment it is apparent that section 11 was intended, and it was so treated by the revisers of both the Civil and Criminal Statutes.

Art. 110e. Delinquent fees, collection of, commissions on, remainder paid to treasurer.—All fees due and not collected as shown in the report required by section 11 of this act [art. 110f, post] shall be collected by the officer to whose office the fees accrued; and, out of such part of delinquent fees as may be due the county, the officer making such collection shall be entitled to ten per cent of the amount collected by him, and the remainder shall be paid into the county treasury, as provided in section 11 of this act [art. 115a, post]. It shall not be legal for any officer to remit any fee that may be due under the law fixing fees. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 10, sec. 13; Rev. St. 1911, art. 3892.]

Cannot remit fees.—Since the statute prescribes the county clerk's fees for transcribing the records and making new indexes, a contract between the county clerk and county commissioners fixing the clerk's compensation for such work even for less than the legal amount was invalid; the county clerk under Pen. Code 1911, art. 113, and this article, having no right to remit any part of his fees. Russell v. Cordwent (Civ. App.) 152 S. W. 239.

Collection of fees after expiration of term.—After a county officer has gone out of office he has no right to collect the fees that accrued to his office while he was the incumbent. Ellis County v. Thompson, 95 Tex. 22, 64 S. W. 927, 66 S. W. 48.

Art. 110f. Officers to make sworn statement, etc., to show what.—Each officer mentioned in the preceding section [art. 110, ante], and also the sheriff, shall, at the close of each fiscal year, make to the district court of the county in which he resides a sworn statement showing the amount of fees collected by him during the fiscal year, and the amount of fees charged and not collected, and by whom due, and the number of deputies and assistants employed by him during the year, and the amount paid, or to be paid each. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 10, sec. 11; Act 1907, p. 50; Rev. St. 1911, art. 3895.]

See note under art. 110a. See, also, note under art. 110d.

Art. 110g. Officer may appoint deputies, how; county judge not to influence appointment, etc.; compensation, how paid.—Whenever any officer named in articles 3881 to 3886 [Rev. St. 1911; art. 110 of this compilation] shall require the service of deputies or assistants in the performance of his duties, he shall apply to the county judge of his county for authority to appoint same; and the county judge shall issue an order authorizing the appointment of such a number of deputies or assistants as in his opinion may be necessary for the efficient performance of the duties of said office. The officer applying for appointment of a deputy or assistant, or deputies or assistants, shall make affidavit that they are necessary for the efficiency of the public service, and the county judge may require, in addition, a statement showing the need of such deputies or assistants; and in no case shall the county judge attempt to influence the appointment of any person as deputy or assistant in any office. Provided, that in all counties having a population in excess of 100,000 inhabitants, the district attorney of any district, or the county attorney of any county where there is no district attorney, is authorized, with the consent of the county judge of the county for which such appointment is intended, to appoint not to exceed two (2) assistants in addition to his regular deputies or assistants, the number of said deputies not to exceed two for the entire district, regardless of the number of counties it may contain, which two assistants shall not be required to possess the qualifications prescribed by law for district or county attorneys, and who shall perform such duties as may be assigned to them by the county attorney of such county, or the district attorney of such district, and who shall receive as their compensation $100.00 per month, to be paid in monthly installments out of the county funds, of the county for which such appointment is made, by warrants drawn on such county funds; and provided, further, that in counties having a population in excess of one hundred thousand inhabitants, the district attorney in the county of his residence or the county attorney where there is not a district attorney, shall be allowed by order of the commissioners court of the county where such official resides, as in the judgment of the commissioners court may be necessary, to the proper administration of the duties of such office, not to exceed, however, the sum of $50.00 per month. Such amount as may be thus necessarily incurred shall be paid by the commissioners court upon affidavit made by the district attorney or the county attorney, showing the necessity of such expense and for what same was incurred. The commissioners court may also require any other evidence as in their opinion may be necessary to show the necessity of such expenditure but they shall be the sole judge as to the necessity for such expenditure and their judgment allowing same shall be final. The maximum amount allowed for deputies or assistants for their services shall be follows, towit:

First assistant or chief deputy, a sum not to exceed a rate of twelve hundred dollars per annum; others not to exceed a rate of nine hundred dollars per annum.

Provided, however, that in counties having a population of 37,500 or over, the maximum salaries allowed for deputies or assistants for their services shall be as follows:

First assistant or chief deputy, a sum not to exceed a rate of eighteen hundred dollars per annum; heads of each department not to exceed the sum of fifteen hundred dollars per annum; others, not to exceed a rate of twelve hundred dollars per annum.

The county judge in issuing his order granting authority to appoint deputies or assistants, shall state in such order the number of deputies or assistants authorized and the amount to be paid each; and the amount of compensation allowed shall be paid out of the fees of office to which said deputies or assistants may be appointed, and shall not be included in estimating the maximum salaries of officers named in articles 3881 to 3886. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 10, sec. 12; Act 1913, p. 286, sec. 1, amending art. 3903, Rev. St. 1911.]

Explanatory.—Art. 3903, Rev. St. 1911 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 3903), was amended by Acts 1913, p. 246, approved April 3, 1913, the amendment to take effect December 1, 1914. Such article was again amended at the same session of the legislature (Acts 1913, p. 286) so as to read as above, but the act was made to take effect from and after its passage. The later amendment was approved April 7, 1913.

Art. 111. Fees of district clerk.—The clerks of the district court shall hereafter receive the following fees for the following services: For recording return of any writs when any such return is required by law to be recorded, the amount of fifty cents; when the return exceeds three hundred words, for each one hundred words in excess of three hundred words, ten cents. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 44.]

| 1. Constitutionality. | 6. One order for several cases. |

| 3. Fee for recording return of citation. | 8. Discrimination. |
| 4. Fees in receivership proceedings. | 9. Clerk of criminal district court. |
| 5. Commission on penalties collected. | 10. Fees in criminal cases. |

1. Constitutionality.—The provisions in the law limiting the fees and compensation of officers in counties less than 30,000 in population is not a local or special law. A law which relates to persons or things as a class is a general law, while a law which relates to particular persons or things of a class is special and comes within the constitutional prohibition. Kabelmacher v. Kabelmacher, 21 Civ. App. 317, 50 S. W. 1118, 51 S. W. 353.

The act of 1897, page 5, in so far as it regulates the compensation of officers and their fees is not unconstitutional. If a law contains more than one subject not expressed in the title the law is void only as to that subject not expressed. Id.

2. Fees for transcript.—District clerks are entitled to 10 cents per 100 words for making transcripts on appeal. Section 7 of the act of the called session of the 25th legislature, page 12, does not apply. Kabelmacher v. Kabelmacher, 21 Civ. App. 317, 50 S. W. 1118, 51 S. W. 353.

District clerks cannot charge more than 10 cents per 100 words for making transcripts in civil cases on appeal. McLennan County v. Graves, 26 Civ. App. 49, 62 S. W. 122.

3. Fee for recording return of citation.—A clerk cannot charge a fee for recording return of citation, because there is no law requiring such return to be recorded. Texas M. Ry. Co. v. Parker, 28 Civ. App. 116, 66 S. W. 583.

4. Fees in receivership proceedings.—In railroad receivership proceedings, an allowance to the clerk of court held an allowance for a special duty imposed by the court. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Texas Southern Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 296.

5. Commission on penalties collected.—This statute regulates the fees of the clerk in civil actions, and he is not entitled to 5 per cent. commission on moneys collected for the state as penalties for violating the anti-trust laws. Article 1193 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not apply to civil actions in behalf of the state to recover penalties. State v. Hart, 96 Tex. 102, 70 S. W. 948, 949.

6. One order for several cases.—Where by agreement of parties one order is to apply to a number of cases, and but one order is entered upon the minutes of the court, the clerk is entitled to a fee but for one order. Hanrick v. Ake, 75 Tex. 142, 12 S. W. 818.

7. Subpœna.—The insertion of a name in a subpœna, within the statute fixing fees for the district court clerk, held only to be made by the clerk or his deputy. Altgelt v. Callaghan (Civ. App.) 144 S. W. 1166.

8. Discrimination.—The clerk cannot discriminate between litigants and charge fees against one at a higher rate than he would be entitled to charge the other if the latter had been cast in the suit. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. v. State, 57 Civ. App. 165, 122 S. W. 427.

9. Clerk of criminal district court.—See art. 2213, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

10. Fees in criminal cases.—See arts. 1106-1192, C. C. P.

Clerk shall compare and certify copies, etc.; fees.—Whenever, in any suit, a certified copy of any petition or any other instrument is necessary in the district court, it shall be lawful for the plaintiff or defendant to prepare such true and correct copy thereof, and submit the same to the clerk of the district court, whose duty it shall be to compare the same with the original instrument, and, if found to be correct, he shall attach his certificate of true copy. For such services he shall receive fifty cents for each certificate and seal, and, in addition thereto, the sum of ten cents per page, three hundred words to the page, for each page of each copy. But nothing in this or the preceding article shall be construed as repealing the maximum fixed by existing law upon the total compensation allowed to district clerks. [Act 1901, p. 24. Act 1897, S. S. p. 44. Act 1897, S. S. p. 12. Act 1895, p. 170.]

Certified copies of petitions.—Under this and the preceding article, where a clerk received and used printed matter prepared by plaintiff to obtain the benefit of such section, from which, by pasting sheets together and filling blanks, he made copies of a petition, he is estopped to claim the larger fee, under section 1, for making copies of such petition. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. v. State, 57 Civ. App. 165, 122 S. W. 427.

Art. 112. Fees of county clerk.—The clerks of the county court shall hereafter receive for the following services the following fees: For recording return of any writ, when any such return is required by law to be recorded, fifty cents; where the return exceeds three hundred words, for each one hundred words in excess of three hundred words, ten cents. [Act 1897, 1st S. S. p. 44.]

For other provisions fixing the fees of the clerks of the county court, and to which art. 113 is applicable, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 3860-3863.

Art. 113. Penalty for failing to charge up fees, to make report, or to receive back any part allowed deputy.—Any officer named in the three preceding articles [art. 110, ante], and also the sheriff, who shall fail to charge up the fees or costs that may be due under existing laws, or who shall remit any fee that may be due under the laws, or who shall fail to make the report required by this law, or who shall pay his deputy or assistant a less sum than the amount specified in his sworn statement, or receive back any part of such compensation allowed such deputy or assistant, as a rebate, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars. Each act forbidden in this article shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1897, 1st S. S. p. 5.]

See arts. 1106-1192, C. C. P.

For particular provisions relating to the fees of officers named in arts. 110-110b, see the index to Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, and Title 15, C. C. P.

Explanatory.—In the original act the words "Section 10 of this act" are used instead of the words "three preceding articles." Section 10 of the act, as amended, appears in this compilation as art. 110.

Contract for compensation.—Since the statute prescribes the county clerk's fees for transcribing the records and making new indexes, a contract between the county clerk and county commissioners fixing the clerk's compensation for such work for less than the legal amount was invalid. Russell v. Cordwent (Civ. App.) 152 S. W. 239.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 183-186.

Art. 113a. Compensation for ex-officio services, when may be allowed by commissioners' court; proviso.—The commissioners' court is hereby debarred from allowing compensation for ex-officio services to county officials when the compensation and excess fees which they are allowed to retain shall reach the maximum provided for in this chapter. In cases where the compensation and excess fees which the officers are allowed to retain shall not reach the maximum provided for in this chapter, the commissioners' court shall allow compensation for ex-officio services when, in their judgment, such compensation is necessary; provided, such compensation for ex-officio services allowed shall not increase the compensation of the official beyond the maximum amount of compensation and excess fees allowed to be retained by him under this chapter. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 10, sec. 15; Act 1913, p. 246, sec. 1, amending art. 3893, Rev. St. 1911.]

See note under art. 110a.

Art. 113b. Officials named in article 110 to keep accounts; duty of grand jury and district judge as to.—It shall be the duty of those officials named in articles 3881 to 3886 [Rev. St. 1911; art. 110 of this compilation], and also the sheriffs, to keep a correct statement of the sums coming into their hands as fees and commissions, in a book to be provided by them for that purpose, in which the officer at the time when any fees or moneys shall come into his hands shall enter the same; and it shall be the duty of the grand jury (and the district judge shall so charge the grand jury) to examine these accounts at the session of the district court next succeeding the first day of December of each year, and make a report on same to the district court at the conclusion of the session of the grand jury. [Act 1897, S. S. sec. 16; Rev. St. 1911, art. 3894.]

See note under art. 110a.

Art. 113c. Monthly report; statement of expenses; audit, etc.—At the close of each month of his tenure of such office each officer whose fees are affected by the provisions of this Act shall make as a part of the report now required by law, an itemized and sworn statement of all the actual and necessary expenses incurred by him in the conduct of his said office, such as stationery, stamps, telephone, traveling expenses and other necessary expense. If such expense be incurred in connection with any particular case, such statement shall name such case. Such expense account shall be subject to the audit of the county auditor, and if it appear that any item of such expense was not incurred by such officer, or that such item was not necessary thereto, such item may be by such auditor or court rejected. In which case the correctness of such item may be adjudicated in any court of competent jurisdiction. The amount of such expense, referred to in this paragraph, shall not be taken to include the salaries of assistants or deputies which are elsewhere herein provided for. The amount of such expense shall be deducted by the officer in making each such report, from the amount, if any, due by him to the county under the provisions of this Act. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 11, sec. 20; Act 1913, p. 246, sec. 1, amending art. 3897, Rev. St. 1911.]

See note under art. 110a.

Art. 113d. Collector and assessor to file with comptroller copies of sworn statements.—The tax collector and tax assessor, at the time of their settlement of accounts with the comptroller, shall file with him a copy of the sworn statement required under section 11 of this act [art. 110f, ante]. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 11, sec. 18.]

See note under art. 110a.

Art. 114. Clerk issuing attachment or subpoena without authority.—Any district clerk who shall issue any attachment or subpoena for any witness, except upon an order of court or upon the written application, signed and sworn to by the defendant or state's counsel, stating that such witness is believed to be a material witness, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, fined in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars and not more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1897, 1st S. S. p. 5.]

See arts. 1137a, 1138, C. C. P.

Explanatory.—Acts 1897, 1st S. S. p. 5, purports in section 1, to apply only to counties having 3000 voters or over. Art. 1577, post, is a general act, not limited to a particular class of counties.

Art. 115. Amounts allowed officers may be retained; state or county not responsible for fees or compensation, when; officers to make sworn statements of fees collected.—The amounts allowed to each officer mentioned in articles 110, 111 and 112 may be retained out of the fees collected by him under existing laws; but in no case shall the state or the county be responsible for the payment of any sum when the fees collected by any officer are less than the maximum compensation allowed by this law, or be responsible for the pay of any deputy or assistant. Each officer mentioned in article 110, and also the sheriff, shall, at the close of each fiscal year, make to the district court of the county in which he resides a sworn statement, showing the amount of fees collected by him during the fiscal year and the amount of fees charged and not collected, and by whom due, and the number of deputies and assistants employed by him during the year, and the amount paid or to be paid each; and all fees collected by officers named in article 110 during the fiscal year in excess of the maximum amount allowed and of the one-fourth of the excess of the maximum amount allowed for their services, and for the services of their deputies or assistants hereinafter provided for, shall be paid to the county treasurer of the county where the excess accrued; provided, that any officer in article 110 who does not collect the maximum amount of his fees for any fiscal year and who reports delinquent fees for that year, shall be entitled to retain, when collected, such part of such delinquent fees as is sufficient to complete the maximum compensation for the year in which delinquent fees were charged, and also to retain the one-fourth of the excess belonging to him, and the remainder of the delinquent fees for that fiscal year shall be paid as hereinbefore provided for when collected; provided, that in all counties in this state having more than one judicial district, the district clerks thereof shall in no case be allowed fees in excess of the maximum fees allowed clerks in counties having only one district court. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 9, § 11. Act 1907, p. 50.]

Explanatory.—The words in italics were carried into Rev. St. 1911 as art. 3889. That article was amended by Act 1913, p. 246, so as to read as set out below in art. 115a.

Quarterly bill of fees due officer.—See arts. 1132-1134, 1137a, C. C. P.

Art. 115a. Fees how disposed of; excess fees, etc.—Each officer named in this chapter [Art. 110, ante] shall first, out of the fees of his office, pay or be paid, the amount allowed him, under the provisions of this chapter, together with the salaries of his assistants or deputies. If the fees of such office collected in any year be more than the amount needed to pay the amount allowed such officer and his assistants and deputies, same shall be deemed excess fees, and of such excess fees such officer shall retain one-fourth; and in counties having between 25,000 and 38,000 inhabitants until such one-fourth amounts to the sum of twelve hundred and fifty dollars; and counties containing a city of more than 25,000 population, or in which county the population exceeds 38,000, until such one-fourth amounts to the sum of fifteen hundred dollars, such population to be based on the United States census last preceding any given year. All amounts received by such officer as fees of his office beside those which he is allowed to retain by the provisions of this chapter, shall be paid into the county treasury of such county. [Acts 1897, S. S. p. 9, sec. 11. Acts 1907, p. 50. Acts 1913, p. 246, sec. 1, amending art. 3889, Rev. St. 1911.]

See Dallas County v. Bolton, 158 S. W. 1152.

Explanatory note.—The subject-matter of art. 3889, Rev. St. 1911, of which the above provision is an amendment, was carried into the revised Penal Code as a part of art. 115, ante. This part is printed in italics. It is necessarily superseded by this article.

Amount which might be retained.—The term "maximum" means the specified sum, $2,500 (in this case), and the phrase, "The excess of the fees collected by the said officers" signifies that sum which remains after taking from the whole the maximum and the amount paid to deputies. Hence the officer is entitled to retain one-fourth of the amount he receives above the maximum after he has paid his deputies. Ellis County v. Thompson, 95 Tex. 22, 64 S. W. 927, 66 S. W. 48.

Art. 115b. Certain officers not required to report fees or keep statement; proviso as to district attorney.—The officers named in articles 3881 to 3886 [Rev. St. 1911] in those counties having a population of twenty-five thousand inhabitants or less shall not be required to make a report of fees as provided in article 3895, or to keep the statement provided for in article 3894; the population of the county to be determined by the last United States census; provided, that all district attorneys shall be required to make the reports and keep the statements required in this chapter. [Act 1913, p. 246, sec. 1, amending art. 3898, Rev. St. 1911.]

Explanatory.—Laws 1913, ch. 121, p. 246, amends art. 3898, Rev. St. 1911, which was made up of section 17 of Acts 1897, S. S. p. 11. This provision of the act of 1897 was not carried into the revised Penal Code, and it is now, in its amended form, inserted in this compilation as set forth above. The provisions of arts. 3881-3883, 3887, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, are included in this compilation as art. 110, ante.

Indictment.—An indictment charging the tax assessor of D. county with failing to make a report of the fees collected by him, required by law to be made in counties having more than 15,000 population (the number as fixed in the former act) should have alleged that D. county had such population. Bolton v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1197.

Art. 115c. Fiscal year defined, and regulation of reports.—A fiscal year, within the meaning of this act, shall begin on December 1 of each year; and each officer named in section 10 of this act [art. 110, ante], and also the sheriff, shall file the reports and make the settlement required in this act on December 1 of each year. Whenever such officer serves for a fractional part of a fiscal year, he shall nevertheless file his report and make a settlement for such part of a year as he serves, and shall be entitled to such proportional part of the maximum allowed as the time of his services bears to the entire year. However, an incoming officer elected at the general election, who qualifies prior to December 1 next following, shall not be required to file any report or make any settlement before December 1 of the following year; but his report and settlement shall embrace the entire period dated from his qualification. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after December 1, 1897. [Act 1897, S. S. p. 11, sec. 19.]

See note under art. 110a.

Art. 115d. County and precinct officers to inform persons for whom money is collected; payment of same.—It shall be the duty of every county and precinct officer in the state of Texas who shall, in his official capacity, collect or receive any money or fees belonging to any witness, officer or other person, to inform such person of the collection of such money or fees, and to promptly pay the same over on demand to the person entitled thereto, taking receipt therefor, which shall be entered or noted in the fee book of such officer. [Act 1907, p. 120.]

Explanatory note.—This provision was inadvertently made a part of art. 115 of the revised Penal Code, and erroneously credited to Act 1907, p. 50. Inasmuch as amendatory provisions have been added to the remaining part of art. 115, and designated as arts. 115a-115c, this part of art. 115 is denominated as art. 115d, so as to place it in proximity with the related provisions included in arts. 116-118.

Art. 116. Officers to make quarterly statements of moneys in their hands uncalled for.—On or before the second Mondays in February, May, August and November of each year, said officers shall make report in writing and under oath to the commissioners' court of their respective counties of all such moneys and fees so collected by them during the quarter last preceding and remaining in their hands uncalled for, giving the number and the style of each cause in which said moneys or fees accrued and the name of the person entitled thereto, which report shall be filed with the county clerk of said county, and the same shall be by him kept and preserved for future reference and examination. [Act 1907, p. 120.]

Art. 117. Moneys not called for to be paid over to county treasurer.—Every officer collecting or having the custody of any money or fees embraced within the provisions of this law at the expiration of four years from the time of collecting or receiving such money or fees, in all cases where the same have not been paid over to the person or persons entitled thereto, shall pay the same to the county treasurer of his respective county, accompanying the same by an itemized statement, as provided in Article 115 [115d] hereof, which statement shall be filed and kept by said treasurer, and said money or fees shall be by him placed to the credit of the road and bridge fund of the county; and the treasurer shall issue to the said officer his receipt for said money or fees, itemizing the same as above provided, which receipt shall be filed by said officer with the county clerk of his respective county; provided, that any officer, upon retiring from office, having any money or fees in his hands embraced within the provisions of this law, and which are not due to be turned over to the county treasurer as herein provided, shall turn the same over to his successor in office, together with an itemized list of the same as hereinbefore provided, taking proper receipt therefor, and his successor shall report and pay over the same to the county treasurer in accordance with the provisions hereof. [Id., p. 120.]

Art. 118. Penalty for violating three preceding articles.—Any person violating any of the provisions of the three preceding articles [115, 116, 117] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars. [Id., p. 120.]

Article 119. [106] Contract to charge the state, without authority.—If any person or officer in this state shall contract with any other person for his services or labor, or for any property of any kind, with intent to charge the state of Texas with the same, and to do which, such person or officer has no authority by law, he shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars and not more than two thousand dollars. [Act May 4, 1874, pp. 221–2.]

See art. 376 and notes.

Art. 119a. Regents, etc., of eleemosynary institutions not to make purchases unless expressly authorized by legislature.—That it shall hereafter be unlawful for any regent, or regents, director or directors, officer or officers, member or members, of any educational or eleemosynary institution of the State of Texas, to contract or provide for the erection or repair of any building, or other improvement or the purchase of equipment or supplies of any kind whatsoever for any such institution, not authorized by specific legislative enactment, or by written direction of the Governor of this State acting under and consistent with the authority of existing laws, or to contract or create any indebtedness or deficiency in the name of or against this State, not specifically authorized by legislative enactment, or to divert any part of any fund provided by law to any other fund or purpose than that specifically named and designated in the legislative enactment creating such fund, or provided for in any appropriation bill. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 32, ch. 22, § 1.]

Art. 119b. Same; penalty.—That any regent, director, officer or member of any governing board of any educational or eleemosynary institution, who shall violate this act shall be at once thereafter removed from his position with such institution, and shall not thereafter be eligible to hold said position, and in addition thereto shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than ten days, nor more than six months, the venue of such case to be in the county in which may be located the institution affected by such acts of such offender. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 32, ch. 22, § 3.]

Art. 120. State purchasing agent shall not be interested in any contract with state, or accept or receive from any person to whom contract has been awarded, rebate, gift, money, etc.; penalty for.—The state purchasing agent shall not be interested in, or in any manner connected with, any contract or bid for furnishing supplies or articles of any kind to any of said institutions or to any other department or institution of the State, or with any person, firm or corporation who is interested in or in any manner connected with any kind of contract with the state or any of its institutions and departments, nor shall he collect or be paid his salary, or any part thereof, while he is in any manner or degree indebted to the state or in arrears in his accounts and reports as such agent. Neither shall said agent accept or receive from any person, firm or corporation to whom any contract may be awarded, directly or indirectly, by rebate, gift or otherwise, any money or other thing of value whatever, nor shall he receive any promise, obligation or contract for future reward or compensation from any such party; provided, that should said purchasing agent violate any of the provisions of this law, or should he receive any rebate, drawback, profit or benefit from any contract, he shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act 1899, p. 138. Act 1915, p. 194, ch. 126, § 1.]

Explanatory.—A part of section 1, Acts 1899, p. 138, ch. 86, was carried into the Revised Statutes as art. 7325. That article was amended by Acts 1915, p. 194, ch. 126, so as to read as indicated above in italics. This amendment therefore, impliedly repealed the corresponding part of the above article of the Penal Code.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 217, 218.

Art. 121. Storekeepers and accountants, appointment of; interest in contracts for supplies; reports; excess of supplies; providing penalty.—There shall be appointed by the superintendents, with the advice and consent of the board of managers of said institution, storekeepers and accountants, one for each of said institutions, who shall hold their office for two years from date of qualification, or until their successors shall have qualified, unless sooner removed by the board of managers, at the suggestion of the superintendent or upon complaint of the Purchasing Agent, for inefficiency, incompetency, neglect of duty or other adequate cause affecting their faithful and satisfactory performance of duty; provided, that where the magnitude of an institution is not sufficient to employ a storekeeper and accountant, that the superintendent shall perform that service. Said storekeeper or accountant shall receive a compensation of not to exceed the sum of nine hundred ($900.00) dollars per annum, to be charged and paid as a part of the current expenses of said institution; and they shall not be entitled to charge, collect or receive any other compensation or commutation or commission, unless it be their own individual board and lodging, when they are required to reside within the institutions to which they are attached. Each of said storekeepers or accountants shall, before entering upon the performance of his duties, make and file with the Comptroller of Public Accounts a bond in the sum of ten thousand ($10,000.00) dollars, payable to the State of Texas, to be approved by the Governor and filed with the Comptroller, which bond shall be conditioned for the full, faithful, accurate and honest performance of his duties; and it shall not be lawful for said storekeepers or accountants to sell or to in any way be concerned in the sale of any merchandise, supplies or other articles to any of the institutions herein named, or to have any interest in any bid or contract therewith, or with any other institution or department of the state government. The office or position of steward, quartermaster or other similar position heretofore existing in any and all eleemosynary institutions are abolished, and said storekeepers or accountants shall hereafter perform all of the duties, except as may be inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter heretofore imposed upon such abolished officers or employes, as well as such other duties as may be required of them by the management of said institutions. They shall also keep the Purchasing Agent constantly advised as to the amount and character of supplies on hand and the amount and character required in order to keep the institutions constantly provided for, and they shall make report on or before the tenth day of each month to the State

Purchasing Agent, showing the total amount of appropriation, the total amount expended and the balance unexpended on the first of each month. They shall also furnish any other information respecting such matters as may be desired by the said Purchasing Agent. If at any time any institution accumulates an amount of supplies on hand in excess of its needs, and another institution is in need of any such supplies, the Purchasing Agent shall present such facts to a board composed of the Governor, Comptroller and Purchasing Agent, with the recommendation that such institution in need of such supplies shall be furnished from such excess of supplies, and if approved by the board, shall forthwith transfer any of such from the institution having such excess to such institution in need of such supplies, and the debit and credit shall be made on the basis that such supplies could be purchased in the open market at the time of the transfer, if such is less than the cost under the general contract for such supplies for the fiscal year, otherwise the debit and credit shall be made on the basis of the general contract price for that year, and all controversies as to such shall be determined by a board composed of the Governor, Comptroller and Purchasing Agent; provided, that any educational institution may dispense with the position of storekeeper, provided for in this Act, and select or appoint some person at such institution whose duty it shall be to receive such supplies purchased, and such person shall make the reports to the Purchasing Agent, as is required of the storekeeper in this article. Any person violating any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act 1899, p. 138, § 3; Act 1915, p. 195, ch. 126, § 1.]

Explanatory.—A part of section 3, Acts 1899, p. 138, ch. 86, was carried into the Revised Statutes of 1911 as art. 7327. That article was amended by Acts 1915, p. 195, ch. 126, so as to read as indicated above in italics. This amendment, therefore, impliedly repealed the corresponding part of the above article of the Penal Code.

Art. 122. Such officers and employés shall not use or receive provisions, clothing, merchandise or other articles furnished by state; penalty for so doing.—No officer or employé created by this law shall ever use or receive for their own use any provisions, clothing, merchandise, or other articles furnished by the state, but that the salaries fixed by law shall be their only compensation; and any person who violates this provision shall, upon conviction, be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than ten years. [Act 1899, p. 142.]

Art. 122a. Institutions included; proviso.—The institutions herein contemplated are those for the care of the insane, deaf and dumb, the blind, the orphans, the Confederate Home and all other State institutions, educational or eleemosynary, now established or that may hereafter be established anywhere in Texas, excepting the penitentiary system and its management, and also excepting the Senate and House of Representatives and all departments in the State Capitol, including General Land Office, and as to such Senate, House of Representatives, departments and General Land Office the present law or custom now in force shall continue; provided, that all contracts designated in Article 16, Section 21, of the Constitution of the State shall be approved by a board consisting of the Governor, Secretary of State and Comptroller. [Act 1915, p. 198, ch. 126, § 1.]

Explanatory.—The above article was created by way of amendment of art. 7327, Rev. St. 1911. It has application to the subject matter of this chapter of the Penal Code, and it is inserted in this compilation for convenience and to properly supplement the penal provisions.

Code 1911, art. 130, providing that one pursuing a taxable occupation, without first obtaining a license, shall be fined not less than the tax due and not more than double that sum, are not void on the ground that the penalty in part may be fixed by the commissioners' court, levying a tax of one-half of that of the state for the county. South v. State, 72 App. 381, 162 S. W. 510.

2. Interstate commerce.—The law imposing a license tax for soliciting orders for photographs, pictures, etc., for a corporation in another State, is a tax upon interstate commerce and is unconstitutional. Ex parte Holman, 36 App. 225, 36 S. W. 441.

Where a person travels in Texas for his principal in another State and takes orders for goods and has the goods shipped to him and he delivers them to purchasers, he is engaged in interstate commerce and does not pay occupation tax. Turner v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 835.

Selling goods by samples for house outside of the State is not taxable occupation because it is interstate commerce. French v. State, 42 App. 222, 58 S. W. 1015, 52 L. R. A. 160; Talbutt v. State, 39 App. 65, 44 S. W. 1091, 73 Am. St. Rep. 903; Kirkpatrick v. State, 42 App. 459, 60 S. W. 762.

One who has buggies shipped to him in original packages by the manufacturers residing in another state, and he puts them together and peddles them about the country is liable to pay the tax assessed on such articles. This is not interstate commerce. Saulsbury v. State, 43 App. 90, 63 S. W. 568, 96 Am. St. Rep. 837.

The legislature cannot levy an occupation tax upon the sale of lightning rods manufactured in another State and sold in this State by a traveling salesman. Talbutt v. State, 39 App. 64, 44 S. W. 1091, 73 Am. St. Rep. 903.

3. Municipal powers.—That a municipal tax may operate as a local prohibition of a lawful pursuit does not authorize a restraint of its collection, so long as the corporation does not transcend constitutional limits. Ex parte Schmidt, 2 App. 196. It may tax an insurance company domiciled in another city, and enforce its collection by criminal proceedings against the agent, Id.; but it can not levy a license occupation tax on "vehicles kept for hire," in excess of one half the amount levied by the state, Ex parte Gregory, 1 App. 753; Ex parte Slaren, 3 App. 662; although under its police power it may impose regulations by way of license, and to an amount necessary to enforce such regulations. Id.; Ex parte Gregory, 20 App. 210, 54 Am. Rep. 516.

A city cannot levy and collect occupation taxes upon a calling, profession or business when the State has not taxed such calling, profession or business. Ex parte Terrell, 40 App. 28, 48 S. W. 504.

A city held authorized to prohibit peddling of any kind of merchandise on its public square or any street within its limits. Ex parte Hogg, 70 App. 161, 156 S. W. 931.

4. — Concurrent and conflicting powers of state and municipality.—See art. 965, C. C. P. and notes thereunder.

5. Levy of tax.—See Monford v. State, 35 App. 237, 33 S. W. 351.

No particular form is prescribed for an order of the commissioner's court levying a tax. Wade v. State, 22 App. 629, 3 S. W. 736; Halfin v. State, 18 App. 410.

The ground of objection to the introduction of an order of the commissioners' court levying an occupation tax in a prosecution for pursuing an occupation without having paid such tax that the order "had not been read over and signed at the end of the term by the judge as is required by law" did not affirmatively show that the order was not in fact signed by the judge, and was insufficient. Staten v. State, 63 App. 592, 141 S. W. 525.

6. Occupation.—The following of such occupation without license is the gravamen of the offense. Viser v. State, 10 App. 86; La Norris v. State, 13 App. 33, 44 Am. Rep. 699; Standford v. State, 16 App. 331; Wells v. State, 18 App. 417; Merritt v. State, 19 App. 435; Williams v. State, 23 App. 499, 5 S. W. 136; McReynolds v. State, 26 App. 372, 9 S. W. 617. See Kennedy v. State, 58 App. 608, 127 S. W. 204. Single sale of liquor not a pursuing of the occupation of a liquor dealer. Standford v. State, 16 App. 331; Halfin v. State, 18 App. 410.

Sale of three bottles of medicine by a traveling Methodist minister not a pursuing of "occupation of vending medicine." Love v. State, 31 App. 469, 20 S. W. 978.

The word "occupation" means vocation, calling, trade or business by which one makes a living or obtains wealth. Robbins v. State, 57 App. 462, 123 S. W. 695. See, also, Cohen v. State, 53 App. 422, 110 S. W. 66.

7. Employés.—Employé, following the occupation, is equally liable with the principal. La Norris v. State, 13 App. 33, 44 Am. Rep. 699; Davidson v. State, 27 App. 262, 11 S. W. 371. See Tardiff v. State, 23 Tex. 169.

8. Particular occupations—Attorneys.—Lawyers may be prosecuted and fined for refusing to pay an occupation tax and take out license to practice law. A lawyer is not, as a part of the judiciary system, exempt from occupation tax. The requirement of the statute making it obligatory upon a previously licensed attorney that he shall, before pursuing his practice, obtain another license, is not the impairment of the original contract by license permitting him to practice. To tax the employment of a vested right has never been held to impair it; and though a license be a vested right, yet unless there is something in the privilege by which the state has relinquished the right of taxation, it is presumed to be accepted subject to the power of the state to impose upon its exercise a share of the public burdens. The license to pursue the occupation is not a technical "license" to practice law; it is simply a receipt for the occupation tax. Languille v. State, 4 App. 312, to effect that a lawyer's license is a naked privilege, revocable at pleasure by the state, is disapproved. Ex parte Williams, 31 App. 262, 20 S. W. 580, 21 L. R. A. 783.

9. — Druggists.—See Ex parte Woods, 52 App. 575, 108 S. W. 1171, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 450, 124 Am. St. Rep. 1107.

The law does not require druggists in local option districts to obtain license to sell such intoxicants. Gibson v. State, 34 App. 218, 29 S. W. 1085; Rathburn v. State, 88 App. 281, 31 S. W. 189.

10. — Flying Jenny.—Where defendant, a farmer, had provided himself with the necessary equipment to operate a flying jenny, an occupation taxed by law, and to operate the same for profit, he was guilty of pursuing an occupation without paying the occupation tax provided therefor. Robbins v. State, 57 App. 462, 123 S. W. 695.

11. — Hawkers and peddlers.—One selling goods by sample, who merely takes orders, without delivering the goods, is not a peddler. Potts v. State, 45 App. 45, 74 S. W. 31, 2 Ann. Cas. 827.

Power of city, Ex parte Hogg, 70 App. 161, 156 S. W. 931.

A "peddler" or "hawker" is a small retail dealer, who carries his merchandise with him, traveling from place to place, or from house to house, exposing his or his principal's goods for sale; it being immaterial whether the goods are bartered or sold, or whether the sale is conditional or on the installment plan. The business of peddling is distinct from that of a manufacturer selling his own products, and those who raise or produce what they sell, such as farmers and butchers, are not peddlers. Ex parte Hogg, 70 App. 161, 156 S. W. 931.

Under Pen. Code 1911, arts. 3, 6, providing that no person shall be punished for any act unless the same is made a penal offense and a penalty affixed by written law, and providing that the articles in the Penal Code, and other written law may be looked to, article 130, making one pursuing a taxable occupation, without first obtaining a license, liable to a fine not less than the tax due, when read in connection with Rev. St. 1911, arts. 7355, 7357, imposing an occupation tax of $100 on traveling vendors of patent medicines, and providing that the commissioners' court may levy for county revenue purposes, one-half of the state occupation tax on all occupations, prescribes a penal offense for pursuing the business of peddling patent medicines without first paying the occupation tax imposed by the statute and by the commissioners' court. South v. State, 72 App. 381, 162 S. W. 510.

12. — Itinerant physician.—See Fouts v. State, 51 App. 3, 101 S. W. 223.

Medical specialist dividing his time between two places of business, held, not one "traveling from place to place." Hairston v. State, 36 App. 470, 37 S. W. 853.

Where accused for over a year preceding the prosecution had been a resident of the city of V. and had practiced medicine in the county in which such city was situated, he cannot be convicted of pursuing the occupation of an "itinerant physician" without payment of the tax required, even though he was not authorized to practice in the county, because he had not obtained a license and registered as a physician. Rutherford v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1157.

13. — Lightning rod dealers and canvassers.—In Acts Sp. Sess. 25th Leg. c. 18, subd. 35, providing that every person dealing in lightning rods shall pay an annual tax of $36 to the state and $18 to the county, and that every person canvassing for the sale of lightning rods shall pay an annual tax of $100 to the state and $50 to the county, the word "dealer" is used in the sense of one who buys and sells at his place of business, and one who pays the dealer's tax is not authorized to make sales by canvassing, so that the act is not in violation of Const. art. 8, §§ 1, 2, providing that taxation shall be equal and uniform upon the same class of subjects. Camp v. State, 61 App. 229, 135 S. W. 146.

14. — Liquor dealers.—See art. 611 et seq., post.

Local option territory. Gibson v. State, 34 App. 219, 29 S. W. 1085; Snearley v. State, 40 App. 507, 52 S. W. 547, 53 S. W. 636; Ex parte Bains, 39 App. 62, 45 S. W. 24; Williamson v. State, 41 App. 461, 55 S. W. 570; Watson v. State, 42 App. 13, 57 S. W. 102; Hail v. State, 48 App. 514, 90 S. W. 503.

An employé of the Pullman Palace Car Company, who, as such, sold liquors upon his employers' cars, was held to be "a person engaged in the business" within the meaning of the statute. La Norris v. State, 13 App. 33, 44 Am. Rep. 699; Davidson v. State, 27 App. 262, 11 S. W. 371.

It is pursuing or following an occupation, calling, or profession, or doing an act taxed by law, without first obtaining a license therefor, that constitutes this offense, and therefore the mere sale of liquor without obtaining license to sell, is not an offense. In such case it must be proved that the defendant pursued or followed the occupation, or engaged in the business of a liquor dealer. Merritt v. State, 19 App. 435; Haffin v. State, 18 App. 410; Wells v. State, Id. 417; Stanford v. State, 16 App. 331; La Norris v. State, 13 App. 33, 44 Am. Rep. 699; Williams v. State, 23 App. 499, 5 S. W. 136. For evidence improperly excluded, see Boyd v. State, 19 App. 446.

The legislature of this state has the power to absolutely prohibit drinking saloons, or saloons to be used in the pursuit of the liquor traffic. This power carries with it the power to regulate the mode and manner and the circumstances under which such saloons may be conducted, and to surround the right with such conditions, restrictions, and limitations as it may deem proper. Under this rule the act of the legislature requiring the execution of a bond as a condition precedent to the granting of a license to conduct a drinking saloon is constitutional. Ex parte Bell, 24 App. 428, 6 S. W. 197.

Relator was charged with the offense of pursuing the occupation of a retail liquor dealer without having complied with the license laws. The application for the writ of habeas corpus alleges the refusal of the relator to execute the bond required by law, and prays for relief upon the ground that the conditions of the bond are unconstitutional. Held, that the conditions of the bond can not be inquired into in a proceeding of this character, the bond never having been executed; and that the constitutionality of the conditions can be impeached only in a proceeding to enforce the penalties for their infraction. Id. See, also, Schwartz v. State, 32 App. 387, 24 S. W. 28.

The article applies especially to retail liquor dealers, and was intended to enforce prompt payment of their occupation tax. A liquor dealer operating his business a single day without posting his license violates the law at his peril. Schwartz v. State, 32 App. 387, 24 S. W. 28; Meroney v. State, 49 App. 337, 92 S. W. 844.

The local option law, when put into operation, supersedes in such territory occupation tax laws on the sale of liquors. Gibson v. State, 34 App. 218, 29 S. W. 1085.

15. — Pawnbrokers.—Rev. St. 1911, art. 6155 et seq., declaring what pawnbrokers shall do when receiving an article in pledge, and what they shall do when they sell it, and Pen. Code 1911, art. 641, punishing a pawnbroker violating the law in either receiving or selling a pledged article, do not fix the liability of a pawnbroker pursuing the occupation without first obtaining a license, but his liability is determined by Rev. St. 1911, arts. 7355, 7357, and Pen. Code 1911, art. 130. Schapiro v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 683.

16. — Photographers.—The tax is not levied on the vocation of a photographer but on the owner of a photograph gallery, and where a man has a gallery in one county and an employé goes into other counties and takes pictures, but has no gallery in such counties, he does not have to pay the tax in the latter counties. Mullinnix v. State, 42 App. 526, 60 S. W. 769.

17. — Social clubs.—See Arnold v. State, 38 App. 1, 40 S. W. 734.

Bona fide social clubs are not liable to the occupation tax in selling to its members and non-resident visitors, if the sales are not for profit. State v. Austin Club, 89 Tex. 20, 33 S. W. 113, 30 L. R. A. 500; Koenig v. State, 33 App. 367, 26 S. W. 835, 47 Am. St. Rep. 35. But, see Krnavek v. State, 38 App. 44, 41 S. W. 612.

18. — Transient merchants.—Under Rev. St. 1911, art. 7355, § 1, providing that from every merchant removing from place to place and offering for sale bankrupt stocks of goods, or advertising fire sales or water and fire damaged stocks for sale, for a limited period, there shall be collected a certain license, and providing that if such merchants remain in one place for 12 months, they shall be required to pay an additional sum according to class and amount of goods sold in a year, the tax is imposed only on merchants pursuing such occupation temporarily, and an indictment for engaging in such business without license, which did not allege that accused pursued such occupation for a limited period, was fatally defective. Mistrot v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 848.

19. — Traveling salesmen.—Defendant held not to be following the occupation of traveling vendor of medicines. Love v. State, 31 App. 469, 20 S. W. 978.

Subdivision 3 of article 5049 of the Revised Statutes of 1895, levies an occupation tax on salesmen of medicines, exempting salesmen of wholesale drug houses. Held, that the exemption does not protect a traveling salesman of a wholesale house who sells at retail. The act is constitutional. Needham v. State, 51 App. 248, 103 S. W. 857.

20. Payment of tax.—Mere tender of tax, without procuring license, not sufficient. Curry v. State, 28 App. 477, 13 S. W. 773.

An insurance agent who pays his tax in the county of his residence, cannot be required to pay in another county under the act of 1897. Sayles' Civil Statutes 1897, article 5049, subd. 33; Eichlitz v. State, 39 App. 486, 46 S. W. 643.

21. Posting license.—Schwartz v. State, 32 App. 387, 24 S. W. 28.

22. Receipt as license.—A valid receipt for the occupation tax will operate as a license. Fouts v. State, 51 App. 3, 101 S. W. 223.

23. Revocation of license.—It is within the power of the legislature to revoke, by general law, a license to sell liquors, for which an antecedent tax had been received by the state. Rowland v. State, 12 App. 418.

24. Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 40, 44-46, 48, 49. See Code Crim. Proc. art. 464. See, also, O'Neal v. State, 51 App. 100, 100 S. W. 919.

The indictment must allege the amount of taxes due, as that is the basis of the penalty. Spears v. State, 8 App. 467; Archer v. State, 9 App. 78; Sheffield v. State, 14 App. 238; Rather v. State, 15 App. 556. The cases above cited overrule, upon this point, Carr v. State, 5 App. 153; Harris v. State, 4 App. 131; Languille v. State, Id. 313; Tonella v. State, Id. 325; Munch v. State, 3 App. 552. It must further allege the levy of the tax by the commissioners' court. Crews v. State, 10 App. 292. In an indictment for pursuing the occupation of a liquor dealer without payment of the tax, the name of the person to whom the liquor was sold need not be alleged. Mansfield v. State, 17 App. 468. A mere sale of intoxicating liquors without engaging in or pursuing the occupation of selling is not an offense. An indictment, therefore, which charges merely a sale of intoxicating liquors without license charges no offense. But there are certain enumerated acts taxed by law, such as exhibiting a theater, dramatic performance, circus, sleight of hand performance, etc., which are made taxable whether engaged in as an occupation or not, and to commit such acts without paying the tax is a penal offense. In such cases it would be sufficient to allege the commission of the act without alleging that the defendant engaged in or pursued such acts as an occupation, calling, etc. Merritt v. State, 19 App. 435. The Illustrated News and the Police Gazette are publications specially enumerated in the statute levying occupation taxes, as among those the sale of which can not be pursued as an occupation without the payment of the occupation tax. It is not necessary, therefore, that the indictment should describe them further than by name. But if the indictment be with reference to a publication not so specifically named it would be essential to allege the character of such publication and that it was illustrated. Baldwin v. State, 21 App. 591, 3 S. W. 109. An indictment for pursuing the occupation of keeping a "pool table" was held bad because it did not allege that it was of a kind with some one or all of those enumerated in the statute levying the tax, and that it was used for profit. Longenotte v. State, 22 App. 61, 2 S. W. 620. An indictment alleged that on the twenty-fifth day of December, 1883, the defendant followed the occupation, etc. Held, that this was a sufficient allegation of the year in which he followed the occupation, and of the year for which he failed to pay his occupation tax. Mansfield v. State, 17 App. 468.

Indictment must allege positively the following of the occupation and the tax due. Archer v. State, 9 App. 78; Rather v. State, 15 App. 556; Sheffield v. State, 14 App. 238.

Indictment alleging all the elements of the offense as set out in the statute, need not allege that defendant had not procured a license before the finding of the indictment. Fahey v. State, 27 App. 146, 11 S. W. 108, 11 Am. St. Rep. 182.

Requisites of indictment for failure to pay occupation tax for license to sell intoxicating liquors in local option territory on prescription. Watson v. State, 42 App. 13, 57 S. W. 102.

Indictment for selling medicated bitters without a license should allege that the bitters were intoxicating and that the sale was in quantities of a gallon or less. Cousins v. State, 46 App. 87, 79 S. W. 549.

Indictment against peddler should negative the fact that defendant was a merchant paying an occupation tax as such. Potts v. State, 45 App. 45, 74 S. W. 31, 2 Ann. Cas. 827. See, also, Needham v. State, 51 App. 248, 103 S. W. 857.

An information, closely following the language of this article, charging accused with unlawfully engaging in, following, and pursuing the occupation of bringing off a fight between dogs and dogs, which said occupation was then and there made taxable, and was taxed by law, without having first paid the taxes due the state, is sufficient. Kennedy v. State, 58 App. 608, 127 S. W. 204.

Under Rev. St. 1911, art. 7355, § 1, providing that every transient merchant offering for sale bankrupt stocks of goods, etc., shall pay a license of $100 per month for the first month or less, and for each additional month an additional sum of $20, but that, where he remains for six months, in addition to the $100 for the first month, he shall pay $10 per month, and that, where he remains twelve months, he shall pay the license levied upon the ordinary retail merchant, an information not alleging how long defendant had been located in the county was not specific enough to show what tax, if any, was due; and, where it charged in one place that Mistrot Bros. and ——— Mistrot engaged in the business, and in another that C. L. Mistrot, one of the firm, engaged in such business, it was so vague that it could not be determined whether Mistrot Bros. or C. L. Mistrot was liable for the tax. Mistrot v. State, 72 App. 408, 162 S. W. 833.

A complaint and information, which alleges that accused unlawfully pursued the occupation of pawnbroker, which occupation was taxable by law, without obtaining a license therefor, and which avers that the tax due the state was $150, and that the tax due the county was $75, and that the tax due the county had been levied by the commissioners' court, is sufficient without alleging that the commissioners' court had entered the order fixing the county tax, and without alleging that accused loaned money, received deposits as security for the payment of loans and interest on personal property, and what property he took as security and to whom he made loans. Schapiro v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 683.

25. Evidence.—See Boyd v. State, 19 App. 446; Petteway v. State, 36 App. 97, 35 S. W. 646.

The levy of the tax and the amount thereof must be proved. Crews v. State, 10 App. 292; Mansfield v. State, 17 App. 468; Barnes v. State, 44 App. 473, 72 S. W. 177; Scott v. State, 47 App. 176, 82 S. W. 656.

Proof of a single sale will not sustain allegation of pursuing the occupation. Stanford v. State, 16 App. 331; Merritt v. State, 19 App. 435; Halfin v. State, 18 App. 410.

Payment of the United States special revenue tax is prima facie evidence of the following of the occupation, which payment may be shown by a copy of the entries in the books of the Internal Revenue office. Floek v. State, 34 App. 314, 30 S. W. 794; Gersteman v. State, 35 App. 318, 33 S. W. 357; Monford v. State, 35 App. 237, 30 S. W. 351.

In a prosecution for fighting dogs without having first paid the occupation taxes due the state, evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Kennedy v. State, 58 App. 608, 127 S. W. 204.

See, also, notes under art. 783, C. C. P.

26. Penalties.—The minimum penalty for pursuing the occupation of retail liquor dealer, without having first procured license and paid the tax therefor, is by fine not less than the tax imposed. As one year is the shortest period of time for which license will issue for such occupation, the minimum fine assessable is the amount of the tax for one year. Davidson v. State, 27 App. 262, 11 S. W. 371.

27. Habeas corpus.—One properly charged with pursuing an occupation without a license, cannot on habeas corpus show a receipt for the license tax. Ex parte Jennings (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 1143.

28. Repeals.—This article is not repealed by the act of 1897, and, construing it with art. 529s, it provides for obtaining the license required by law. Gustafson v. State, 40 App. 67, 45 S. W. 717, 48 S. W. 518, 43 L. R. A. 615.

Art. 131. Plumber conducting business without license; penalty for.—Any person, whether as master plumber, employing, or journeyman plumber, engaged in, working at, or conducting the business of plumbing without license, as provided by law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall pay a fine of not less than twenty nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars. [Act 1897, p. 236.]

Necessity of license.—Rev. St. 1911, art. 986, provides that every city having underground sewers or cesspools shall regulate the tapping thereof, and house draining and plumbing. Articles 987 and 988 require such cities to create a board for the examination of plumbers. Held that, where accused was charged with conducting a plumbing business in a town without a license, but it was not shown that the town had underground sewers or cesspools, or that it had any such officers as could constitute a plumbing examiners' board, and had no such board, a conviction could not be sustained. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 348.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 47.

Art. 132. [113] Penalty not exclusive.—The preceding articles shall not be construed so as to affect any civil remedy to enforce the collection of taxes.

Art. 133. [114] Payment of tax bars prosecution.—Any person prosecuted under article 130 of the Penal Code of the state of Texas shall have the right at any time before conviction to have such prosecution dismissed upon payment of the tax and all costs of said prosecution, and procuring the license to pursue or follow the occupation for the pursuing which, without license, the prosecution was instituted; and no prosecution shall be commenced against any person after the procuring of said license, notwithstanding they may have followed such occupation, calling or profession before procuring said license; provided, said license shall cover the time said person has actually followed said occupation, calling or profession. The county clerk shall be entitled to ten cents for issuing the license, to be paid by the person to whom it is issued. [Act March 15, 1881, pp. 34-5.]

Dismissal of prosecution.—It was improper for the officer to issue the license until both tax and costs were paid, but the court erred in charging the jury to convict if the defendant paid the tax before trial but did not pay the costs then accrued. Rogers v. State, 35 App. 543, 34 S. W. 634.

Minimum penalty.—Davidson v. State, 27 App. 262, 11 S. W. 371.

Art. 134. [115] Refusal to render or swear to assessment.—If any person shall refuse or neglect to make out and render a list of his taxable property, when called upon in person by the assessor of taxes or his deputy, or shall fail or refuse to qualify to the truth of his statement of taxable property, or shall fail or refuse to subscribe to any oath or affirmation required by law in the rendition of taxable property, he shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty nor more than one thousand dollars. [Act Aug. 19, 1876, pp. 196-7.]

Fiduciaries.—This article includes all holdings of taxable property held as agent, trustee or in other fiduciary capacity. Downes v. State, 22 App. 393, 3 S. W. 242.

President of national bank.—The president of a national bank, when called upon by the assessor to do so, must render a sworn statement showing the number and amount of shares of stock of such bank and the names of the owners of such shares and the number and amount of stock owned by each shareholder, and his refusal or neglect to do so, subjects him to punishment under this article. Downes v. State, 22 App. 393, 3 S. W. 242; Gen. Laws, 19 Leg., Reg. Sess., pp. 105-106.

Time for prosecution.—Article 7575, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, authorizes a delinquent to exculpate himself before the board of equalization, for refusal, etc., to render a list of taxable property, and he has until the first Monday in June of the year for which he is delinquent, to give reasons for his refusal, etc. Therefore, a prosecution instituted against him for such refusal, etc., before the expiration of said date, is premature and not maintainable. Mock v. State, 11 App. 56; Galbraith v. State, 33 App. 331, 26 S. W. 502.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 50, 51.

This article must be construed in connection with the provisions of the Civil Statutes which prescribe the duties in this regard of all owners and holders of taxable property, and therefore an indictment based on said articles must allege the year for which the defendant's property was assessable. Berry v. State, 10 App. 315; Haugh v. State, 12 App. 343. An indictment under this article should allege: 1. That the accused was a person required by law to render such list. 2. That he held or owned taxable property on the first day of January of the year for which the property is required to be listed. 3. That he was called upon in person by the assessor of taxes to render a list of his taxable property for the year, naming the year, and stating the time when he was so called upon. 4. That he refused or neglected to make out and render such list of the taxable property held and owned by him on the first day of January of the year for which he was called upon to list. Caldwell v. State, 14 App. 171; Willson's Cr. Forms, 44, 46; Davidson v. State, 27 App. 262, 11 S. W. 371.

Recognizance.—See note under Code Crim. Proc. art. 919.

Art. 135. Officers of national bank required to furnish tax assessor sworn statement.—If any president, vice president, or cashier, of any national bank shall fail or refuse to furnish the tax assessor or deputy tax assessor, when called upon to do so by such tax assessor or deputy tax assessor, a sworn statement, showing:

1. A list of the names of all the shareholders of the stock of such national bank.

2. The number and amount of the shares owned and held by each shareholder of stock in such national bank.

3. The place of residence of each stockholder in such bank, if known. (If not known, that fact shall be so stated.)

4. The amount or amounts of notes issued by such national bank and circulating as money, or that is intended to circulate as money (stating such amounts in dollars.)

6. The amount of indebtedness of such bank and how such indebtedness is evidenced.

7. The amount of paper evidencing indebtedness owned by such bank, which was acquired by such bank, either at par or at a discount.

They shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and by confinement in jail not less than ten days nor more than thirty days. [Act 1897, p. 157.]

See notes to art. 134, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 694.

Art. 138. Penalty for such pretended sale.—The president, cashier or secretary of any banking or other corporation, or any person that may be a party or privy to such fraudulent sale, exchange or transfer, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and in addition thereto shall be confined in the county jail not less than ten days nor more than thirty days. [Act March 23, 1891, p. 39.]

Art. 140. [117] Failure to collect occupation taxes.—It shall be the duty of the tax collector to make an affidavit before any justice of the peace against any person, firm or association of persons engaging in or pursuing any occupation on which, under the laws of this state, a tax is imposed, who fails or refuses to pay the same. And any collector of taxes who shall knowingly permit any person, firm or association of persons to engage in or pursue any occupation on which, by the laws of this state, a tax is imposed, without first paying all legal taxes assessed against such person, firm or association of persons, for such occupation, for state and county purposes, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars for every such offense; provided, that evidence that such collector of taxes has made the affidavit herein required immediately against such person, firm or association of persons, so pursuing an occupation in violation of law, shall be a defense against all prosecutions under this article. [Act April 2, 1887, p. 128.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 39.

Art. 141. [118] Failure of dealer to post occupation license.—

Said occupation license shall be posted as above specified before any person, firm or corporation, subject to the occupation tax, shall engage in business.

2. Any person, firm or corporation failing, neglecting or refusing to post or keep posted their occupation license, as required in section one of this article, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in double the amount of their occupation tax for each offense, and each day any person, firm or corporation shall violate the provisions of this article shall constitute a separate offense.

Constitutionality.—Bell v. State, 28 App. 96, 12 S. W. 410.

Posting license.—Posting license is required in order to enforce prompt payment of the occupation tax. Schwartz v. State, 32 App. 387, 24 S. W. 28.

Gravamen of the offense is pursuing the occupation without having paid the occupation tax and posting the license. Schwartz v. State, 32 App. 387, 24 S. W. 28; Meroney v. State, 49 App. 337, 92 S. W. 844.

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 309.

Art. 143. [119] Officer purchasing property sold for taxes.—If any sheriff, or collector of taxes, of any county in this state, deputy sheriff or deputy collector, or any employé of such sheriff or collector authorized by him to collect or receive taxes, or to assist in any way in making sales for the collection of taxes, shall, in the county where he resides, bid for, purchase or attempt to purchase, or be in any way interested in the purchase of any property, either real or personal, at any sale of such property, made or attempted to be, for the collection of state and county taxes, or either, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than one thousand dollars, and any such officer so offending shall be deemed guilty of official misconduct, and, upon conviction, shall be removed from office. [Act February 9, 1883, p. 7.]

Art. 144. [119a] Tax collector failing to perform certain duties.—If at the end of any month the collector of taxes shall fail to make to the comptroller of public accounts his itemized monthly report of taxes collected, or if he shall fail at the end of any month to make to the commissioners' court his itemized monthly report of all tax collections for the county, or if he shall fail at the end of any month, or within three days thereof, to promptly remit to the state treasurer the amount due by him to the state, or pay over to the county treasurer the amount due by him to the county, or if he shall fail to make out and post, between April 1 and 15 of each year, a list of delinquent or insolvent taxpayers, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, fined in a sum not less than three hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and each failure shall constitute a separate offense. [Act of 1893, p. 91.]

[119b] Tax collector issuing unauthorized tax receipt.—Any collector of taxes in this state, who shall issue an occupation tax receipt upon any blank paper, or blank of any kind whatever other than the blank occupation tax receipt furnished to him as required by law, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and each receipt so unlawfully issued shall constitute a separate offense, and, upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars. [Id.]

See art. 109, and note thereunder.

Art. 146. [119c] Clerk failing to make certain certificates.—If the county clerk shall fail to examine the monthly reports of the collector of taxes, and within two days after the presentation to him of said reports by the collector, to certify to their correctness as regards names, dates and amounts, or shall fail to file the report intended for the commissioners' court, together with the tax receipt stubs in his office for the next regular meeting of the commissioners' court, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, fined in a sum not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars, and each failure shall constitute a separate offense. [Id. p. 92.]

Art. 147. Persons and corporations liable for occupation tax failing to make report.—If the comptroller has reason to believe, or does believe, that any individual, company, corporation, association, receiver or receivers, subject to the provisions of the law providing for the levy of occupation taxes, has made a false return, or has failed or omitted to make a full return of gross receipts, or other statement of business done, required by any of the provisions of said law, he shall report the same in writing to the governor, and it shall be the duty of the governor to immediately require the revenue agent of the state of Texas to examine any books, papers, documents, or other records or evidence showing or tending to show such unlawful act or omission. Said revenue agent shall check the report made with such books, papers, documents or other records or evidence, and make his report to the comptroller; and, if it appears from said report that any false or incorrect return has been made, or that any individual, or the president, treasurer or superintendent of any company, corporation or association, or any member of any firm required by this act to make reports, has failed or omitted to make a full return, as required by law, then the comptroller shall notify such individual, or the president, treasurer or superintendent of any company, corporation or association, or receiver or receivers of any company, corporation or association, or any member of any firm, to make forthwith an additional or supplemental report; and if any such individual or the president, treasurer or superintendent of any company, corporation or association, or any member of a firm, or any receiver or receivers of any company, corporation or association making said original report, shall fail or refuse to make said additional or supplemental report, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than two hundred nor more than five hundred dollars; and venue of such prosecution is hereby fixed in Travis county, Texas. [Act 1907, p. 488.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 43, 52.

Art. 148. Persons or corporations liable for franchise tax failing to make report.—Every person required by the law prescribing franchise taxes to be paid by corporations to make any annual report to the secretary of state, who shall, for a longer period than five days, and every person who shall, for more than ten days after the mailing by the secretary of state demand upon him for any other report, which the secretary of state is by this law authorized to require, fail or refuse to make such report, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty dollars and not more than two hundred dollars; and each day of such failure or refusal after the expiration of said five days or said ten days, as the case may be, shall constitute a separate offense. The secretary of state shall keep a record of the mailing of any and all notices and demands for reports provided for by this law. [Act 1897, ch. 120; Act 1905, ch. 72; Act 1907, p. 505.]

Explanatory.—Acts 1913, p. 327, § 2 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7397b) provides that corporations failing to make the reports required by the act relating to franchise taxes shall be subject to a penalty of $10 per day, recoverable by civil action to be instituted by the attorney general. It would seem that this act supersedes the criminal penalty imposed by art. 148 above.

Art. 149. Charter or right to do business of corporations forfeited, right of officers to do business in corporate name ceases.—In any and all cases in which the charter or right to do business of any private domestic corporation, heretofore or hereafter chartered under the laws of this state, or the permit of any foreign corporation or its right to do business within this state, shall have been, or shall hereafter be, forfeited, it shall be unlawful for any person or persons who were or shall be stockholders, or officers of such corporation at the time of such forfeiture to do business within this state in or under the corporate name of such corporation, or to use signs or advertisements of such corporation or similar to the signs or advertisements which were used by such corporation before such forfeiture; and each and every person who may violate any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars; provided, the inhibition and penalties prescribed by this article shall not apply where the right of such corporation to do business within this state has been revived in the manner provided by law and is at the time in good standing. [Act 1907, p. 507.]

Art. 149a. Wholesale dealers in or distributors of liquors; "wholesale dealer" defined.—Each and every individual, company, corporation or association created by the laws of this State or any other State, who shall engage in his own name or in the name of others, or in the name of its representatives or agents in this State, in the business of a wholesale dealer or a wholesale distributor of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, shall make quarterly, on the first days of January, April, July and October of each year, a report to the Comptroller of Public Accounts, under oath of the individual or of the president, treasurer or superintendent of such company, corporation or association, showing the gross amount collected and uncollected from any and all sales made within this State of any of said articles during the quarter next preceding. Said individuals, companies, corporations and associations, at the time of making said report, shall pay to the Treasurer of the State of Texas an occupation tax for the quarter beginning on said date, equal to one half of one per cent of said gross receipts from said sale as shown by said report.

A wholesale dealer or distributor, within the meaning of this Section, is any individual, company, association or corporation selling any of the articles hereinbefore mentioned in any quantity, for cash or on credit, either in his own name or in the name of others, or in the name of its representatives or agents, to retail dealers or to consumers, not to be drunk on the premises, or who deliver on consignment to their agents for retail or for delivery to consumers, provided the above shall not apply to sales to consumers, where the liquor sold is delivered to the purchaser in person, at the dealers place of business and at time of sale, and where the amount sold does not exceed one gallon.

For the purpose of ascertaining the amount of gross receipt tax due each quarter by each and every individual, company, corporation, or association created by the laws of this State or in any other State, who shall engage in his own name or in the name of others, or in the name of its representatives or agents in this State in the business of a wholesale dealer or a wholesale distributor of spirituous, vinous or malt liquor or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, it shall be the duty of each and every individual, company, corporation or association selling any of the articles hereinbefore mentioned either in his own name or in the name of others, or in the name of its representatives or agents, to keep a plain, legible record of the date of each and every such sale or consignment, the name and address of the retail dealer or individual to whom sold or consigned, the quantity, the price, and the manner in which shipment or delivery was made; and this record shall be subject to the inspection of the Comptroller of [or] the State Revenue Agent or their representatives at any time they see proper to investigate said records.

Any person, company, corporation or association, or any receiver or receivers failing to keep a record as provided for in this Act, shall forfeit and pay to the State of Texas a penalty not exceeding one thousand dollars. [Act 1913, p. 33, ch. 19, § 1, amending Art. 7379 Rev. St. 1911.]

Definitions—"Gross receipts."—In this article the term "gross receipts," though ordinarily meaning the gross amount of cash received, includes the gross amount collected and uncollected of all the sales, on which amount the percentage must be computed to determine the tax. Eppstein v. State (Civ. App.) 138 S. W. 1124.

—"Receipts."—The tax imposed by this article is a tax on the gross sales whether collected or uncollected during the preceding quarter; the word "receipts," when used in a commercial sense, meaning the receiving of obligations or promises to pay, whether written or verbal, as well as cash. Eppstein v. State, 105 Tex. 35, 143 S. W. 144.

IMPOSING OCCUPATION TAX ON PERSONS DEALING IN UNEARNED WAGES OF ANOTHER

Laws 1905, ch. 111, imposing a tax in such case was held unconstitutional in Owens v. State, 53 App. 105, 112 S. W. 1075, 126 Am. St. Rep. 772, and was omitted from the revised penal code.

GROSS EARNINGS TAX ON RAILROADS

Laws 1905, ch. 141, imposing a gross earnings tax on railroads was held invalid as interfering with interstate commerce, and section 3, thereof, making it a misdemeanor to omit the making of the reports required by the statute, was not carried into the revised penal code. See Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. State, 210 U. S. 217, 28 Sup. Ct. 638, 52 L. Ed. 1031.

CHAPTER SIX

OCCUPATION TAX ON SOLICITING ORDERS IN LOCAL OPTION DISTRICTS, COLD STORAGE AND C. O. D.
SHIPMENT OFFICES

Art.		Art.
150.	Persons, firms or corporations soliciting orders for intoxicating liquor.	153.	Clerk required to make report of all licenses issued.
151.	Persons, firms or associations operating cold storage.	154.	Providing penalty for violation.
152.	Persons, firms or corporations desiring to engage in either business to file application and pay tax.	155.	Persons, firms or corporations maintaining office for C. O. D. intoxicating liquor shipments.
		156.	Penalty for maintaining such office without paying tax.

Article 150. Persons, firms or corporations soliciting orders for intoxicating liquor.—In all counties, justice precincts, towns, cities or other subdivisions of a county, where the qualified voters thereof have, by a majority vote, determined that the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited therein, there is hereby levied upon all firms, persons, association of persons and corporations that pursue the business of selling or offering for sale any intoxicating liquors by soliciting or taking orders therefor, in any quantities whatsoever, in any such county, justice precinct, town, city or other subdivision of a county, an annual state tax of four thousand dollars; and each county, and also each incorporated city or town, may levy an annual tax not exceeding two thousand dollars in any such county or incorporated city or town where such business is pursued. [Act 1897, p. 128. Act 1907, ch. 112, p. 212. Act 1909, p. 53.]

Explanatory.—Arts. 606a-606g, post, wholly or partly supersede arts. 150-154. These articles may still theoretically operate in respect to transactions within the exceptions named in arts. 606f-606k. It would seem, however, that, for all practical purposes, arts. 150-154 are dead legislation, in view of the very high licenses exacted.

Indictment or complaint.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 323.

A complaint and information are defective if they fail to state that the "solicitation" "was for the sale or delivery of intoxicating liquors in said county." Patterson v. State (Cr. App.) 90 S. W. 31.

Evidence.—Edmanson v. State, 64 App. 413, 142 S. W. 887.

Art. 151. Persons, firms or corporations operating cold storage.—In all counties, justice precincts, towns, cities or other subdivisions of a county, where the qualified voters thereof have, by a majority vote, determined that the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited therein, there is hereby levied upon all firms, persons, association of persons and corporations that pursue the business of keeping, maintaining or operating what is commonly known as a "cold storage," or any place by whatever name known, or whether named or not, where intoxicating or non-intoxicating liquors or beverages are kept on deposit for others, or where any such liquors are kept for others under any kind or character of bailment, an annual state tax of two thousand dollars. Counties, incorporated cities and towns, where such business is located, may each levy an annual tax of not exceeding one thousand dollars upon each such place so kept, run, maintained or operated. [Id.]

See note under art. 150.

Definitions—"Nonintoxicating liquors and beverages."—The words "nonintoxicating liquors and beverages," in this article considered in connection with the evil intending to be corrected and with the history of the legislation upon the same subject, have reference to alcoholic or spirituous fluids, either distilled or fermented, and do not include liquids such as water, milk, etc. Ex parte Flake (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 146.

Constitutionality.—This article is authorized by state constitution, which provides a mode whereby it may be determined whether the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited in a given territory, since such provision implies that it is within the power, and is the duty of the legislature to enact all laws necessary to enforce prohibition in localities where it is adopted. Ex parte Flake (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 146.

And does not violate Const. art. 3, § 35, providing that no statute shall contain more than one subject, though it provides for the regulation and prohibition of the liquor traffic in prohibition territory; such object and purpose constituting but one subject. Id.

And is a police regulation, and not a revenue measure, though incidentally revenue may be derived from its enforcement. Id.

The classification by this article is reasonable, and based on what is for the best interest of the state and the welfare of its citizens. Id.

And being within police power inherent in the state, does not violate Const. U. S. Amend. 14. Id.

The fact that the license prescribed by this article is so large as to be prohibitive of the business, does not render it violative of Const. art. 1, § 19, by depriving citizens of the state of their property rights, privileges, and immunities. Id.

This article bears equally upon all citizens seeking to do such cold storage business in local option territory, and hence does not deprive citizens of their equal right to transact business. Id.

Uniformity of taxes.—The fact that this article applies only to local option territory does not render it violative of Const. art. 8, §§ 1, 2, providing that taxes shall be uniform throughout the state. Ex parte Flake (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 146.

Right to question validity.—One charged with violating this article, by storing "intoxicating liquors" in local option territory without having obtained a license, could not complain or raise the question as to what other liquors the statute does or does not apply. Ex parte Flake (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 146.

Keeping place.—Certain members of a lodge in prohibition territory organized an auxiliary society, rented a place where they installed barroom fixtures, and on the bar counter placed a locked box, in which each member placed an envelope containing the amount which he desired to spend that week for liquor. One of the members during the first year, and thereafter a different member each week, would take out the money from the box, purchase beer, place it on ice, and have it dealt out to the members to the amount paid for by them, by a porter hired by the society. Accused attended to the business for one week, and had beer carried to the apartment, kept there on ice, and dispensed by the porter. Held that, accused was guilty of pursuing the business of keeping, maintaining, or operating a place where intoxicating liquor is kept on deposit for others. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 548, L. R. A. 1915C, 101.

Art. 152. Persons, firms or corporations desiring to engage in either business to file application and pay tax.—Each person and each firm and each corporation and each association of persons, desiring to engage in the business mentioned in articles 150 and 151 in said local option territory, before engaging in same, shall file with the county clerk of the county in which the business is to be pursued, an application in writing for a license to engage therein, and shall state the county or portion of the county in which the business is to be pursued, and, if within the corporate limits of any incorporated city or town, that fact shall be so stated, and any such person or firm or corporation or association of persons shall pay to the tax collector of the county the entire amount of annual tax levied for the state and the entire amount of the annual tax upon such business as may be levied by the commissioners' court of said county, and, if the business is to be pursued in an incorporated city or town, shall pay to the collector of taxes of such city or town the tax that may be levied on such business by said city or town; and all such taxes shall be paid in advance, and no license shall be issued by the county clerk until the person or firm or corporation or association of persons, applying therefor, shall exhibit receipts showing the payment of all taxes levied and authorized by this law, and the county clerk shall be entitled to charge a fee of twenty-five cents for the issuance of such license. [Id.]

See note under art. 150.

Art. 153. Clerk required to make report of all licenses issued.—The county clerk shall be and is hereby required to make report of all licenses issued by authority of this law as in other cases. [Id.]

See note under art. 150.

Art. 154. Providing penalty for violation.—Any person, or any member of a firm, or any member of an association of persons, or any officer or representative of a corporation, who shall pursue or engage in or aid or assist in any manner in said business, mentioned in articles 150 and 151, in said local option territory, without there having been issued to said person or firm or association of persons or corporation license therefor as provided for, shall each be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction therefor, shall be fined in any sum not less than the amount of the tax due and not more than double that sum, and shall in addition be imprisoned in the county jail not less than ninety days nor more than six months. [Id.]

See note under art. 150; and see Ex parte Woods, 52 App. 575, 108 S. W. 1171, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 450, 124 Am. St. Rep. 1107.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 323.

Art. 155. Persons, firms or corporations maintaining office for C. O. D. intoxicating liquor shipments.—Any person, firm or corporation, doing business in this state, shall, at each office or place kept, operated or maintained by such person, firm or corporation, at which intoxicating liquors legally deliverable are delivered upon payment of purchase money therefor, commonly designated as shipments C. O. D., pay annually for each office or place so kept an annual occupation tax to the state of Texas of five thousand dollars, and any county, or any incorporated city or town, wherein such office or place is located, may levy an annual occupation tax upon such person, firm or corporation herein referred to for each of said offices, not to exceed one-half of the amount hereby levied by the state, such tax to be due and payable annually. [Act 1907, p. 2.]

Cited, Caswell & Smith v. State (Civ. App.) 148 S. W. 1159.

Constitutionality.—This chapter is valid as a police regulation of the handling of liquors, since the legislature had authority to abrogate the C. O. D. feature of the liquor traffic, or impose any burden thereon which tended to prevent the evasion of the local option statutes. L. Craddock & Co. v. Wells-Fargo Company Express (Civ. App.) 125 S. W. 59.

And is not in violation of Const. art. 8, §§ 1, 2, providing that taxation and all occupation taxes shall be equal and uniform, upon the class of subjects within the limits of the authority levying the tax, since the delivery of liquor C. O. D. constitutes a business in itself, and is not necessarily a part of an express company's business. Id.

Statute as revenue law.—This chapter is a revenue law, and not prohibited by Const. art. 3, § 48, providing that the legislature shall not levy taxes or impose burdens on the people except to raise revenue sufficient for the economical administration of the government. L. Craddock & Co. v. Wells-Fargo Company Express (Civ. App.) 125 S. W. 59.

Rights and liabilities of express companies.—This chapter was sufficient to warrant an express company in refusing to carry liquor in that manner, since it could either pay the license tax or refuse to carry the liquor C. O. D. L. Craddock & Co. v. Wells-Fargo Company Express (Civ. App.) 125 S. W. 59.

Where an express company had contracted to carry packages of intoxicating liquor C. O. D. for plaintiff, and the legislature by this chapter rendered this business unlawful, the express company was thereby excused from collecting the price and plaintiff on ordering the goods returned cannot recover the return charges paid on such packages on the ground that defendant's failure to perform the contract of transportation deprived plaintiff of all benefit thereunder. Id.

Art. 156. Penalty for maintaining such office without paying tax.—The maintaining or operating such office or offices, place or places, by any person, firm or corporation in this state, without paying the occupation tax required in article 155, shall subject such person, firm or corporation so operating and maintaining such office or offices, place or places, to pay to the state of Texas the sum of fifty dollars, and to the county and any incorporated city or town in which said offices or places are located, each the sum of fifty dollars for each day such office or offices, place or places, may be maintained or operated, and for each office or place so operated; and the state or county, or any incorporated city or town, may sue for and recover, either jointly or severally, each the said sum, for each day that each of said offices or places may be maintained and operated without prepayment of the aforesaid occupation tax. [Id., p. 2.]

CHAPTER SEVEN

OCCUPATION TAX ON DEALERS IN NON-INTOXICATING MALT LIQUORS

Art.		Art.
157.	Persons selling non-intoxicating malt liquor as a beverage.	159.	Clerk required to make report of all licenses issued.
158.	To file application for license and pay collector the tax.	160.	Providing penalty for violation.

Article 157. Persons selling non-intoxicating malt liquors as a beverage.—There is hereby levied upon all firms, persons, associations of persons and corporations, selling non-intoxicating malt liquors, an annual state tax of two thousand dollars. Counties, incorporated cities and towns, where such sales are made, may each levy an annual tax of not exceeding one thousand dollars upon all such persons, firms or corporations; provided, that this article shall not prevent the sale of such proprietary remedies as "malt extract," "malt medicine" and "malt and iron," manufactured and used exclusively as medicine and not as a beverage, when sold upon the prescription of a regular practicing physician; provided, further, that not more than one sale shall be made upon any one prescription. [Act 1909, p. 51.]

Police power and constitutionality of regulations.—Acts 1907, c. 112, imposing an occupation tax is unconstitutional, in that the taxes levied are not equal and uniform. Ex parte Woods, 52 App. 575, 108 S. W. 1171-1179, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 450, 124 Am. St. Rep. 1107.

This chapter is a valid exercise of the state's police power, and not invalid as imposing a prohibitive tax, and as preventing pursuit of a lawful business. Ex parte Townsend, 64 App. 350, 144 S. W. 628, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 814.

This chapter is not invalid as imposing different rates in different parts of the state from those established by chapter 5, which applies only to the sale of intoxicating liquors. Id.

Const. art. 16, § 20, relating to intoxicating liquors, does not limit the power of the Legislature to regulate sale of nonintoxicating alcoholic liquors. Id.

Alcohol is the intoxicating element in spirituous, vinous, malt, and other intoxicating liquors, and makes the same dangerous, and the Legislature's police power extends to regulation of the sale of all beverages containing any degree of alcohol. Id.

In the absence of constitutional limitation, a state Legislature can absolutely prohibit sale of or place a prohibitive tax upon the sale of any articles which in themselves are harmful, or which may be injurious to the health, morals, or general welfare of the people. Id.

Liquors defined.—Malt liquor is an alcoholic liquor. Ex parte Townsend, 64 App. 350, 144 S. W. 628, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 814.

An intoxicating liquor is any liquor containing alcohol, which can be drunk as a beverage in such quantity as to produce intoxication. Ex parte Townsend, 64 App. 350, 144 S. W. 628, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 814.

Art. 158. To file application for license and pay collector the tax.—Each person, and each firm, and each corporation, and each association of persons, desiring to engage in the business mentioned in the preceding article, before engaging in same, shall file, with the county clerk of the county in which the business is proposed to be pursued, an application in writing for a license to engage therein, and shall state the place or house in which said business is to be pursued, and, if within the corporate limits of any incorporated city or town, that fact shall be so stated; and any such person or firm or corporation or association of persons shall pay to the tax collector of the county the entire amount of annual tax levied by the state, and the entire amount of the annual tax upon such business as may be levied by the commissioners' court of said county, and, if the business is to be pursued in an incorporated city or town, shall pay to the collector of taxes of such city or town the tax that may be levied on such business by said city or town, and all such taxes shall be paid in advance; and no license shall be issued by the county clerk until the person or firm or corporation or association of persons applying therefor shall exhibit receipts showing the payment of all taxes levied and authorized by this law; and the county clerk shall be entitled to charge a fee of twenty-five cents for the issuance of such license, and it shall be unlawful to carry on business under said license in more than one place at the same time, or in any place other than that named in said application for said license, unless the party carrying on said business shall first file with the county clerk of the county in which said business is carried on a written statement, showing such change of place of business. [Act 1909, p. 397.]

See Ex parte Townsend, 64 App. 350, 144 S. W. 628, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 814.

Art. 159. Clerk to make report of all licenses issued.—The county clerk shall be and is hereby required to make report of all licenses issued by the authority of this law as in other cases. [Id., p. 52.]

Art. 160. Providing penalty for violation.—Any person, or any member of a firm, or any member of an association of persons, or any officer or representative of a corporation, who shall pursue or engage in, or aid or assist in any manner, in said business mentioned in article 157, without there having been issued to said person, or firm, or association of persons, or corporation, license therefor, as provided for in this law, shall each be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than twenty days nor more than ninety days. [Id., p. 52.]

See Ex parte Woods, 52 App. 575, 108 S. W. 1171, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 450, 124 Am. St. Rep. 1107.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 55.

Art. 162. [121] Surveyor locating unapproved certificates.—It shall not be lawful for any district or deputy surveyor to locate any certificate for land, or to survey any land for any person holding a headright certificate of the first or second class, unless it be certified under the hand and seal of the clerk of the county court of the county where the certificate was issued, or the county where it is proposed to be located, or under the hand and seal of the commissioner of the general land office, that the same has been reported by the commissioners appointed under an act of congress to detect fraudulent land certificates, etc., passed January, 1840, as a genuine and legal claim against the government of Texas; and any surveyor offending against the true intent and meaning of this article shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined in any sum not more than five thousand dollars. [P. C. 243.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 56.

Art. 163. [122] Handling land office files without authority.—If any person shall handle or examine any of the papers, files or records in the general land office, without the consent of the commissioner or chief clerk, or without the presence and superintendence of a clerk in said office, he shall be fined not less than one dollar nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act June 2, 1873, p. 180.]

Intrusion.—It is an offense under this article to handle or examine the records of the general land office without the permission of the commissioner. Anderson v. Rogan, 93 Tex. 182, 54 S. W. 242.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 57.

165. Clerks in land office not to give information.
166. Officers not to purchase mineral lands.

Article 164. [123] Officers not to deal in public lands.—If any person who is an officer or clerk in the general land office, or a district surveyor, or deputy district surveyor, or county surveyor, or his deputy, shall, directly or indirectly, be concerned in the purchase of any right, title or interest in any public land, in his own name or in the name of any other person, or shall take or receive any fee or emolument for negotiating or transacting any business connected with the duties of his office, other than the fees allowed by law, he shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars. [P. C. 244.]

See Appendix to Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, for omitted and repealed land laws.

County surveyors.—By the provisions of Pen. Code, art. 164, no county or district surveyors or their deputies shall be directly or indirectly engaged in the purchase of public land. When patent has been issued to such a purchaser, the state can maintain an action to cancel the patent without returning or offering to return the purchase-money paid by the defendant to the state. State v. Thompson, 64 Tex. 690.

The original article (244) did not include county surveyors among the prohibited class. See an insufficient indictment. Gray v. State, 7 App. 10.

An officer must perform the duties of his office until his successor has qualified. He cannot resign so as to legally do anything before his successor qualifies, which he is forbidden to do while holding the office. A county surveyor cannot purchase public land. Keen v. Featherstone, 29 Civ. App. 563, 69 S. W. 983.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 58, 59.

Art. 165. [124] Clerks in the land office not to give information.—Any clerk or other employé in the general land office, who shall accept or receive from any person or persons, money, or other thing of value, in consideration of services performed in the designation of vacant land, or in discovering or making known to such person or persons any defects in any file or files, or any paper or document in said office, or who shall perform any work out of office

Any person violating the provisions of this article shall be punished by fine as provided in the Penal Code. [Sen. Jour., 1895, p. 478.]

3. Said board shall publish annually, for free distribution among the people of the state, all practical information collected in the prosecution of said survey as the same progresses; but the information obtained by a survey of the public school, university, asylum or state lands shall not be communicated by said board, or by the person or persons making said survey, to any person whomsoever until said information is published for the benefit of the general public; and anyone violating this provision shall, upon conviction, be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not to exceed two years in jail. [Act 1901, p. 32.]

Explanatory.—Acts 1901, p. 32, at the time it was carried into the revised Penal Code as above, had been superseded by Acts 1903, p. 234, ch. 144. The superseding act is as follows:

1. The board of regents of the University of Texas are authorized and directed as soon as practicable to have made a mineral survey of all the lands belonging to the public schools, university, asylums or to the State and other mineral lands within the State.

All money recovered by any action or proceeding under this section shall be paid to the adjutant general, who shall apply the same to the use of the active militia of this state. [Act 1905, p. 183.]

The words "executive, legislative, or judicial officer" are meant in their broadest sense and are intended to embrace every officer, whether a state, county, or precinct officer. Davis v. State, 70 App. 524, 158 S. W. 288.

2. Offense when complete.—The offense is complete when the offer is made. Rath v. State, 35 App. 142, 33 S. W. 229.

3. Tender of bribe.—An actual tender is not essential. O'Brien v. State, 6 App. 665.

4. Entrapment.—Where an officer first suggests his willingness to a person to accept a bribe, and thereby originates the criminal intent, and apparently joins the defendant in a criminal act first suggested by the officer, merely to entrap the defendant, it seems this would not constitute the offense of offering to bribe the officer. O'Brien v. State, 6 App. 665; S. C., 7 App. 181. But if the defendant first offered to bribe the officer, no subsequent conduct of the officer would exculpate the defendant. O'Brien v. State, 7 App. 181.

A person tendering a bribe to an assistant county attorney for the purpose of influencing his official action was guilty of offering a bribe, even though the county attorney made the first advance and by his words, acts, and conduct induced accused to make the offer, and although the assistant county attorney did not intend to accept the bribe. Davis v. State, 70 App. 524, 158 S. W. 288.

A person could be guilty of bribing a policeman, although the policeman had no corrupt purpose or intent, but took the bribe merely to secure evidence against the briber for the purpose of procuring his conviction; the guilt of the briber being measured by his own intent and not by the intent of the acceptor of the bribe. Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

5. Defense.—On a trial for offering to bribe a county commissioner to vote a certain way on a certain proposition pending before the commissioners' court, the fact that the commissioner suggested bribery to defendant, or was willing to be bribed, is immaterial. Rath v. State, 35 App. 142, 33 S. W. 229.

6. Future offenses.—Bribery could be committed by bribing an officer not to arrest a person for thereafter keeping a gambling house or house for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor as well as for theretofore keeping it. Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

7. Evidence.—On a trial for offering a bribe a county commissioner to vote a certain way on a certain proposition pending before the commissioners' court, it is not necessary, in order to prove that such person was a commissioner, to introduce the record of his election and qualification. Rath v. State, 35 App. 142, 33 S. W. 229.

8. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 63.
See Code Crim. Proc. art. 466.

9. Instructions.—On a trial for offering a bribe to an assistant county attorney to induce him to file a motion to set aside a judgment of conviction against a third person and to recommend to the judge that the judgment be set aside, where accused claimed that he offered the money merely in payment of such third person's fine, the court should have made it plain in its charge that, if the money was tendered under the belief that it was to be used in paying the fine, accused would not be guilty and would be guilty only if he tendered the money to influence the attorney's action as an official. Davis v. State, 70 App. 524, 158 S. W. 288.

Where the court required the jury to believe beyond a reasonable doubt every essential element of bribery before they could convict, and also properly charged on reasonable doubt, the failure to quote the statutory definition of a bribe was not error. Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

10. Recognizance.—See notes under Code Crim. Proc. art. 903.

A bail bond describing the offense as offering to bribe a judicial officer, held sufficient. Hardin v. State, 36 App. 460, 37 S. W. 735.

Art. 175. [126] Officers accepting bribe.—Any legislative, executive or judicial officer who shall accept a bribe or consent to accept a bribe under an agreement or with an understanding that his act, vote, opinion or judgment shall be done or given in any particular manner or upon a particular side of any question, cause or proceeding which is or may thereafter by law be brought before him, or that he shall make any particular nomination, appointment, or do any other act or omit to do any act in violation of his duty as an officer, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 159; P. C. 251.]

Former laws.—Prior to the revision of the Code it was held that an agreement by an officer to accept a bribe was not an offense. Hutchinson v. State, 36 Tex. 293. But the words, "or consent to accept a bribe," were inserted in the foregoing article by the revisers, with a view, doubtless, to supply the defect therein pointed out by the decision above cited.

Justices of the peace.—Justice of the peace accepting money for failure to institute proceedings against one whom he knew to be guilty of unlawfully carrying a pistol held guilty. Morawietz v. State, 46 App. 436, 80 S. W. 997.

Offense.—To constitute bribery the gift, advantage or emolument must precede the act. Hutchinson v. State, 36 Tex. 293.

To constitute bribery, the gift, advantage or emolument must be bestowed to induce the officer to do a particular act in violation of his duty, or as an inducement to favor, or in some manner aid the person offering same, or another, in a manner forbidden by law. Hutchinson v. State, 37 Tex. 293.

Failure of a justice in consideration of a bribe to institute proceedings for the arrest of a person carrying a pistol is criminal. Morawietz v. State, 46 App. 436, 80 S. W. 997.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 63, 64.

Requisites, see Code Crim. Proc. art. 466.

When offense complete.—The offense was complete when the bribe was accepted and received. Ruffin v. State, 36 App. 565, 38 S. W. 169.

Offense held complete when the bribe was accepted and received with the understanding that the incumbent of an office would be removed and an appointment made regardless of whether the removal was ever made or the matter of appointment came up. Ruffin v. State, 36 App. 565, 38 S. W. 169.

Proof.—On a trial for offering to bribe a county commissioner to vote a certain way on a certain proposition pending before the commissioners' court, it is not necessary, in order to prove that such person was a commissioner, to introduce the record of his election and qualification. Rath v. State, 35 App. 142, 33 S. W. 229.

On an indictment charging defendant, a county commissioner, with accepting a bribe with the understanding that his opinion, judgment, acts, influence, and vote should be given in favor of securing the appointment of a person to an office to be filled by the commissioners' court, a conviction cannot be had on proof that he accepted the bribe with the understanding that he should bribe another commissioner with it. Ruffin v. State, 36 App. 565, 38 S. W. 169.

SOHREME COURT I

Accomplice.—One giving a bribe is an accomplice of the officer receiving it. Ruffin v. State, 36 App. 565, 38 S. W. 169.

Where a justice of the peace accepted money for failing to institute proceedings against a person whom he knew to be guilty of unlawfully carrying a pistol, and divided the money with a deputy sheriff who was with him when he obtained the information as to carrying the pistol, the deputy sheriff, the person guilty of carrying the pistol, and a friend of his who was with him at the time the settlement was made, and furnished a part of the money therefor, were all accomplices. Morawietz v. State, 46 App. 436, 80 S. W. 997.

Art. 176. [127] Officers specified.—Under the name of executive, legislative and judicial officers are included the governor, lieutenant-governor, comptroller, secretary of state, state treasurer, commissioner of the general land office, commissioner of agriculture, insurance, statistics and history, superintendent of public instruction, members of the legislature, aldermen of all incorporated cities and towns in this state, judges of the supreme, district and county courts and of the courts of appeals, attorney general, district and county attorneys, justices of the peace, mayors and judges of such city courts as may be organized by law, county commissioners, school trustees, and all other city, county and state officials. [Act March 30, 1885, p. 69; amended Act 1907, p. 127.]

See notes under art. 174.

Cited, Davis v. State, 70 App. 524, 158 S. W. 288; Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

Officers.—Prior to the adoption of the Revised Codes, article 122 did not specify "county attorney" as an officer, as it now does. It was nevertheless held that such officer was within the meaning of said articles, such officer being a judicial one. State v. Currie, 35 Tex. 17.

In Hutchinson v. State, 36 Tex. 293, the prosecution was against an overseer of a road for accepting a bribe in that capacity. It was not questioned but that he was such an officer as came within the meaning of art. 122.

A private person to whom a prisoner is delivered is not an officer. Messer v. State, 37 App. 635, 40 S. W. 488.

There can be no conviction of bribing an "assistant city attorney" of a city, the charter of which makes no provision for such an officer, but by Loc. & Sp. Laws 30th Leg. c. 5, § 26, only authorizes the city attorney to appoint a "deputy," the word "deputy" not meaning the same as "assistant city attorney"; an "assistant" being one who assists, and in the absence of statutory authority never acts officially for his principal, and is not required to be sworn, while a deputy may do anything his principal can do, and is required to be sworn, and, in the absence of the creation by the charter of the office, it being impossible that an assistant city attorney can be an official de jure or de facto. Naill v. State, 59 App. 484, 129 S. W. 630, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1268.

"Executive, legislative or judicial officer," construed. Davis v. State, 70 App. 524, 158 S. W. 288.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 63.

Art. 177. [128] Bribery of clerks, etc., of legislative and executive departments.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any clerk or other officer of either branch of the legislature, or any clerk or employé in any department of the state government, with the intent to influence such officer to make any false entry in any book or record pertaining to his office, or to mutilate or destroy any part of such book or record, or to violate any other duty imposed upon him as an officer, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 159; P. C. 253.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 65.

Art. 178. [129] Accepting bribe by same.—If any officer named in the preceding article shall accept a bribe so offered, or consent to accept the same, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 159; P. C. 254.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 66.

Art. 179. [130] Bribery of auditor, juror, etc.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any auditor, juror, arbitrator, umpire or referee, with intent to influence his decision, or bias his opinion in relation to any cause or matter which may be pending before, or may thereafter by law be submitted to, such auditor, juror, arbitrator, umpire or referee, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 161; P. C. 299.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 67.

Art. 180. [131] Acceptance of bribe by same.—If any juror, auditor, arbitrator, umpire or referee shall accept, or agree to accept, a bribe offered for the purpose of biasing or influencing his opinion or judgment, as set forth in the preceding article, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 161; P. C. 300.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 67, 68.

Art. 181. [132] Offense complete, when.—To complete the offenses mentioned in the two preceding articles, it is not necessary that the auditor, umpire, arbitrator or referee shall have been actually selected or appointed; it is sufficient if the bribe be offered or accepted with a view to the probable appointment or selection of the person to whom the bribe is offered, or by whom it is accepted. Nor is it necessary that the juror shall have been actually summoned; it is sufficient if the bribe be given or accepted in view of his being summoned as a juror, or selected as such, to sit in any particular case, civil or criminal. [P. C. 301.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 67, 68.

Art. 182. [133] Bribery of attorneys.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any attorney at law, charged with the prosecution or defense of a suit, with intent to induce him to divulge any secret of his client, or any circumstance which came to his knowledge as counsel, to the injury of his client, or with intent to induce him to give counsel, or in any way advise or assist the opposite party, to the injury of his client in any cause, civil or criminal, or to neglect the interests of his client, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 161; P. C. 302.]

Evidence.—A conviction for an attempt to bribe the attorney at law employed by private persons to prosecute for a theft is not established by the confession of defendant that he offered the attorney money, at the request of the prosecuting witness, to dismiss the prosecution; the attorney being dead, and the confession uncorroborated. Brady v. State, 32 App. 264, 22 S. W. 924.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 69.

Requisites, see Code Crim. Proc. art. 466.

Art. 183. [134] Acceptance of bribe by same.—If any attorney at law charged, as above stated, with the management of any cause, civil or criminal, shall accept, or agree to accept, a bribe offered to induce him to divulge any secret of his client, or any circumstance which came to his knowledge as counsel, to the injury of his client, or to give counsel or in any way advise or assist the opposite party, to the injury of his client, or to neglect the interests of his client, he shall be punished in the manner provided in the preceding article. [P. C. 303.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 70.

Art. 184. [135] Bribery of clerks of courts.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any clerk or deputy clerk of any court of record, to induce such officer to alter, destroy or mutilate any book, record or paper pertaining to his office, or to surrender to the person offending any book, record or paper for any unlawful purpose, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 161; P. C. 304.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 71.

Art. 185. [136] Acceptance of bribe by same.—If any clerk, or deputy clerk, of any court of record in this state shall accept, or agree to accept, a bribe offered for the purposes enumerated in the preceding article, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 161; P. C. 305.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 72.

Art. 186. [137] Bribery of same to do any official act.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any officer named in article 184 to do any other act not enumerated in said article, in violation of the duties of his office, or to omit to do any other act incumbent on him as an officer, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 161; P. C. 306.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 71.

Evidence.—On a trial for offering to bribe a county commissioner to vote a certain way on a certain proposition pending before the commissioners' court, it is not necessary, in order to prove that such person was a commissioner, to introduce the record of his election and qualification. Rath v. State, 35 App. 142, 33 S. W. 229.

Art. 187. [138] Bribery of sheriffs and peace officers.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any sheriff or other peace officer to permit any prisoner in his custody to escape, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 162; P. C. 307.]

1. Offense.—Paying or offering to pay any money or thing of value to a peace officer for the release of a prisoner from his custody is a criminal offense. O'Brien v. State, 6 App. 665.

Where a peace officer with a view to entrap defendant suggests that he will accept a bribe, defendant by acceding thereto does not become guilty of bribery. O'Brien v. State, 6 App. 665.

The actual tender of a bribe is not necessary to perfect the offense of attempting to bribe a peace officer, but any expression of an ability to produce a bribe as a gift to the officer to induce him to release a prisoner is sufficient to complete the offense. Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

2. Defense.—On a trial for offering to bribe a county commissioner to vote a certain way on a certain proposition pending before the commissioners' court, the fact that the commissioner suggested bribery to defendant, or was willing to be bribed, is immaterial. Rath v. State, 35 App. 142, 33 S. W. 229; O'Brien v. State, 6 App. 665.

3. Legality of arrest.—A defendant charged with offering to bribe an officer to release a prisoner, cannot question the manner in which such officer became charged with the custody of such prisoner, said officer being a deputy sheriff de facto and jailer. Florez v. State, 11 App. 102; Moseley v. State, 25 App. 515, 8 S. W. 652. The manner in which the prisoner came into the custody of the de facto officer is not subject to question. Florez v. State, 11 App. 102.

To constitute the offense the arrest of the prisoner must have been legal. Moore v. State, 44 App. 159, 69 S. W. 521; Ex parte Richards, 44 App. 561, 72 S. W. 838.

4. Officers.—Officer de facto. Florez v. State, 11 App. 102.

A private citizen guarding a prisoner until he could execute a bail bond not being a "peace officer" within the statute, an offer to bribe him is no offense. Messer v. State, 37 App. 635, 40 S. W. 488.

The officer bribed must have been in the discharge of a legal and official duty. Moore v. State, 44 App. 159, 69 S. W. 521.

A chief of police of a city engaged in assisting a deputy sheriff to make an arrest is a peace officer, within the meaning of the statutes defining the offense of attempting to bribe a peace officer. Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

5. Offer.—A question, "how much would you take to turn me loose and let me go and get away?" was an offer to bribe the officer. Evans v. State, 48 App. 620, 89 S. W. 1080.

6. Evidence.—In a prosecution for attempting to bribe a peace officer, testimony that witness met the chief of police, who afterwards arrested defendant, and told him that he had a capias for defendant, and instructed him to arrest him if he found him, and suggested that they go around the square in different directions to look for defendant, was admissible to show the legality of the arrest, although such statements were made in defendant's absence. Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

In a prosecution for attempting to bribe a police officer, evidence that just before the attempt defendant tried to borrow money from witness, and just after the commission of the offense told witness that he had no money in his possession, was inadmissible. Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

7. Instructions.—In a prosecution for attempting to bribe a peace officer, a charge that the exact language in which the offer of a bribe was made need not be proven is, if erroneous, harmless, where the exact language was proven. Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

8. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 73, 75.
See Moseley v. State, 25 App. 515, 8 S. W. 652.
Requisites, see Code Crim. Proc. art. 466.

9. Variance.—Evidence that defendant told a peace officer who had arrested him that he was going to leave the country, and that if the officer would release him he would give him five dollars, "and give him more money then," does not constitute such variance, as to necessitate its exclusion, from an indictment alleging that defendant offered to give the police officer "the sum of five dollars in money." Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

Where an indictment charged that defendant offered to bribe an officer having him in custody by stating to the officer, "How much will you take to turn me loose and let me go and get away?" and the language proved was, "How much will you take to turn me loose and let me go?" there was no variance. Evans v. State, 48 App. 620, 89 S. W. 1080.

10. Examining trial.—Where the evidence was conflicting as to whether defendant offered to bribe the officer while he was being held under an illegal arrest, or whether the offer was made after the officer had discovered the goods in his possession which would entitle him to hold defendant on another charge, the examining court was justified in holding him to further answer the action of the grand jury. Ex parte Richards, 44 App. 561, 72 S. W. 838.

Art. 188. [139] Same subject.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any sheriff or other peace officer, in any case, civil or criminal, to make a false return upon any process, directed to him, or fail to return any such process, or summon, or fail to summon, any one to serve on a jury, with a view to produce a result favorable to a particular side in any cause, civil or criminal, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 162; P. C. 308.]

Cited, Moseley v. State, 25 App. 515, 8 S. W. 652.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 74, 75.

Art. 189. [140] Same subject.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, a sheriff or any other peace officer to do any other act not heretofore enumerated, contrary to his duty as an officer, or to omit to do any duty incumbent upon him as an officer, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 162; P. C. 309.]

Cited, Moseley v. State, 25 App. 515, 8 S. W. 652.

Elements of offense.—"Willfully" and "corruptly" are not descriptive elements of the offense. Garner v. State, 50 App. 364, 97 S. W. 98.

A prisoner does not violate this article by appealing to the sheriff to intercede for him in the disposition of cases against him, if he does not attempt to get that officer to default in his duty. Garner v. State, 50 App. 364, 97 S. W. 98.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 75.

Requisites, see Code Crim. Proc. art. 466.

Evidence.—See notes under Code Crim. Proc. art. 783.

Art. 190. [141] Acceptance of bribe by sheriffs, etc.—If any sheriff or other executive or peace officer shall accept, or agree to accept, a bribe offered, as mentioned in articles 187, 188 and 189, he shall receive the same punishment as is affixed to the offense of giving or offering a bribe in the particular case specified. [P. C. 310a.]

Offense.—Where a justice of the peace accepted money for failing to institute proceedings against a person whom he knew to be guilty of unlawfully carrying a pistol and divided the money with a deputy sheriff who was with him when he obtained the information as to carrying the pistol, the deputy was guilty of taking a bribe. Morawietz v. State, 46 App. 436, 80 S. W. 997.

Legality of arrest.—A peace officer prosecuted for accepting a bribe to release a prisoner cannot question the legality of the arrest and custody. Moseley v. State, 25 App. 515, 8 S. W. 652.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 75.

Art. 191. [142] Bribery of witness.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any witness in any case, either civil or criminal, to disobey a subpoena or other legal process, or to avoid the service of the same by secreting himself, or by any other means, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 11, 1860, p. 95; P. C. 310b.]

See Leeper v. State, 29 App. 154, 15 S. W. 411, and, ante, art. 174.

Elements of offense.—The money or gift need not be produced, tendered, or accepted, if the prosecution is for an "offer to bribe," nor is it essential that an indictment be pending or a subpoena issued for the witness. Jackson v. State, 43 Tex. 421.

Statements by one co-defendant to another, "I will assist you to pay your fine," or "I would rather pay your fine than mine," constituted no offer to bribe the other to absent himself from the trial. Peacock v. State, 37 App. 418, 35 S. W. 964.

A prosecution for the bribery of a witness in a pending cause cannot be defeated because the state fails to show that an information has been filed, where it does not show an affidavit and a subpoena, etc. Smalley v. State, 59 App. 95, 127 S. W. 225.

To constitute the offense of bribing a witness to avoid a process, there must have been a process either issued or served. Harrison v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 552.

Principals and accomplice.—See notes under article 74, ante.

See Code Crim. Proc. arts. 466, 801, and notes thereunder.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for attempting to bribe a witness, the uncontradicted testimony of a number of witnesses that the witness on whom the attempt at bribery was made had been duly summoned was sufficient evidence of the summoning, without the introduction of the subpoena. Savage v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 730.

Such explanatory testimony was admissible as showing defendant's attempt to tamper with the witness as a circumstance tending to show his guilt. Savage v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 730.

Art. 192. [143] Acceptance of bribe by witness.—If any witness in any case, civil or criminal, shall accept, or agree to accept, a bribe offered for the purpose or purposes mentioned in the preceding article, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 11, 1860, p. 95; P. C. 310b.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 77.

Art. 193. [144] "Bribe" defined.—By a "bribe," as used throughout this Code, is meant any gift, emolument, money or thing of value, testimonial, privilege, appointment or personal advantage, or the promise of either, bestowed or promised for the purpose of influencing an officer or other person, such as are named in this chapter, in the performance of any duty, public or official, or as an inducement to favor the person offering the same, or some other person. [P. C. 255; Const., Art. 16, § 41.]

Cited, Peacock v. State, 37 App. 418, 35 S. W. 964.

Definition.—Instruction defining bribery held correct. Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

Charge of court defining "bribe" in the language of this article is proper and sufficient. Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

Tender.—Actual tender not necessary; any expression of ability to produce the bribe, sufficient to constitute the offense. Lee v. State, 47 App. 620, 85 S. W. 804.

Indictment.—Requisites, see Code Crim. Proc. art. 466.

Art. 194. [145] Bribe need not be direct.—The bribe, as defined in the preceding article, need not be direct; it may be hidden under the semblance of a sale, wager, payment of a debt, or in any other manner designed to cover the true intention of the parties. The bribe, or the promise thereof, must precede the act which it is intended to induce the person bribed to perform. [P. C. 256.]

LOBBYING

Art.		Art.
195.	Defining lobbying.	197.	Provisions shall not apply, when.
196.	Persons privately soliciting vote of member of legislature guilty of.	198.	Providing penalty.
		199.	Persons prohibited from going on floor of either house of the legislature.

Article 195. Defining lobbying.—If any person having any direct interest, or the president or any other officer of any corporation having any direct interest, in any measure pending before, or thereafter to be introduced in, either branch of the legislature of this state, shall, at any place in this state, in any manner, privately attempt to influence the action of any member of the legislature of this state during his term of office concerning such measure, except by appealing to his reason, he shall be deemed guilty of lobbying. [Act 1907, p. 162.]

Art. 196. Persons privately soliciting vote of member of legislature guilty of.—That if any paid or employed agent, representative or attorney of any person, association or corporation, shall, at any place in this state, after the election and during the term of office of any member of the legislature of this state, privately solicit the vote, or privately endeavor to exercise any influence, or offer anything of value or any other inducements whatever, to any such member of the legislature, to influence his action concerning any measure then pending, or thereafter to be introduced, in either branch of the legislature of this state, he shall be deemed guilty of lobbying. [Id., p. 162.]

Art. 197. Provisions shall not apply, when.—The provisions of this law shall not be held to apply to the governor or a member of the legislature of this state, nor to prohibit any person either in person, or by his agent or attorney, or any corporation by representatives, agents or attorneys, from exercising the right of petition to the legislature, or from collecting facts, preparing petitions, procuring evidence and submitting the same, together with arguments, to either branch of the legislature, when in session, or to any committee thereof, in the interest of any measure in which he or it may be interested; but in such case the agency and the interest in the measure, or the person so appearing, shall be fully disclosed. [Id., p. 162.]

Art. 198. Providing penalty.—That lobbying, as hereinbefore defined, shall be unlawful, and the same is hereby prohibited; and any person who shall be convicted of lobbying, shall, upon such conviction, be punished by fine of not less than two hundred dollars nor more than two thousand dollars, and in addition may, at the discretion of the jury, be imprisoned in the penitentiary for a term not less than six months nor more than two years; and any violation of this law may be prosecuted in the county where the offense is committed, or in Travis county. [Id., p. 162.]

Art. 199. Persons prohibited from going on floor of either house of the legislature.—To prevent lobbying and to promote the orderly dispatch of business, it is hereby made unlawful for any person employed in any manner to represent the interest in legislation of any person, association or corporation to go upon the floor of either house of the legislature, reserved for members thereof, while in session, except upon invitation of such house; and any person violating the provisions of this article shall be punished by a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars. [Id., p. 162.]

DRUNKENNESS IN OFFICE AND IN PUBLIC [OR PRIVATE] PLACE

---	---

Article 200. [146] State or district officer guilty of drunkenness.—Any state or district officer in this state who shall be guilty of drunkenness shall be subject to removal from office in the manner provided by law; and, upon conviction thereof, in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act July 31, 1876, pp. 76-7.]

Jurisdiction.—Drunkenness does not indicate corruption or willful neglect or failure of duty, and is not included in the term "official misconduct." This offense is within the jurisdiction of the county court. Craig v. State, 31 App. 29, 19 S. W. 504; Bordeaux v. State, 31 App. 37, 19 S. W. 603.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 78.

In a proceeding under section 24 of article 5 of the Constitution of 1876, to remove an officer for "habitual drunkenness," it is sufficient to allege that such officer was guilty of habitual drunkenness. Trigg v. State, 49 Tex. 645.

It is not necessary to its definition that specific instances of drunkenness be alleged, or that the effect upon the mind or body produced thereby be stated. Trigg v. State, 49 Tex. 645.

Acts of drunkenness between the election and qualification of the officer should not have been allowed in the pleading or in evidence. Trigg v. State, 49 Tex. 645.

Allegations charging, with time and place, four acts of drunkenness in as many months, would not be sufficient, from which the charge of habitual drunkenness could be inferred as a necessary or legal consequence. Trigg v. State, 49 Tex. 645.

The indictment clearly charging an offense under the statute both in getting drunk and being found intoxicated in a public place, unnecessary allegations do not invalidate it but are to be treated as surplusage. Kuykendall v. State, 72 App. 153, 161 S. W. 130.

Removal from office.—See Trigg v. State, 49 Tex. 645.

Art. 201. [147] "State or district officer" defined.—Within the term "state or district officer" are included the governor, lieutenant-governor, the heads of the several executive departments at the capital, and their chief clerks, the judges of the supreme court, courts of appeals, and the district courts, district attorneys, members and officers of the senate and house of representatives, and all other officers who derive their appointment directly from state authority.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 78.

Art. 202. [148] County or municipal officer guilty of drunkenness.—Any county or municipal officer who shall be guilty of drunkenness shall, for the first offense, be fined in any sum not less than five and not more than fifty dollars; upon a second conviction for the same offense, he shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars; and upon a third conviction for the same offense, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than three hundred dollars, and be subject to removal from office in the manner provided by law. [Act July 31, 1876, pp. 76-7.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 78-80.

Art. 203. [149] "Drunkenness" defined.—Drunkenness, as used in this chapter, is the immoderate use of any spirituous, vinous or malt liquors to such an extent as to incapacitate an officer from the discharge of the duties of his office, either temporarily or permanently. [Act July 31, 1876, p. 76.]

Habitual drunkenness as ground for removal discussed. Trigg v. State, 49 Tex. 645.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 78, 79.

Art. 204. [150] Drunkenness in public or private place; how punished.—Any person who shall get drunk, or be found in a state of intoxication, in any public place, or at any private house, except his own, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction before a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be fined in any sum not more than one hundred dollars for each and every such offense. [Act Feb. 21, 1879; Act 1913, p. 177, ch. 93, § 1, amending Art. 204 P. C.]

Public place.—This term does not mean a place which, in point of fact, is public, as distinguished from private, a place that is visited by many persons, and that is usually accessible to the public. A grand jury room, during the session of the grand jury, is a public place. Murchison v. State, 24 App. 8, 5 S. W. 508; Clinton v. State, 64 App. 446, 142 S. W. 591. A schoolhouse, where people are assembled for religious worship, is a "public place." January v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 555. A hotel room was not a "public place." Bordeaux v. State, 31 App. 37, 19 S. W. 603. A private residence was not a "public place." Pugh v. State, 55 App. 462, 117 S. W. 817, 131 Am. St. Rep. 822. Whether a place is a public place is a mixed question of law and fact, to be submitted to the jury. Elsbury v. State, 41 Tex. 158; Parker v. State, 26 Tex. 204.

Persons liable.—This article applies to all persons found drunk in a public place, and is not limited to public officers. January v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 555.

Conflicting jurisdiction of state and city.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 965.

A city ordinance identical with an existing penal statute is void, and will not support a conviction. Ex parte Wickson (Cr. App.) 47 S. W. 643.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 78, 81.

An information charging, "In a certain public place, to wit, in the town of H., near the H. and H. public road, known as the old Grove mill," held insufficient. Murray v. State, 48 App. 219, 87 S. W. 349.

An information, alleging that accused did unlawfully, by the voluntary and immoderate use of liquor, get drunk, and was found in a state of intoxication in a designated schoolhouse, where people were then assembled for religious purposes, states an offense. January v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 555.

It was sufficient, in a complaint and information, to allege that the offense occurred in the county in which the prosecution was brought, without alleging the particular place in the county. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 607.

A complaint and information sufficiently identified the public place by describing it as a restaurant to which people commonly resorted for the purpose of eating and purchasing refreshments. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 607.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for being drunk in a public place, evidence held insufficient to support a conviction. Clinton v. State, 64 App. 446, 142 S. W. 591.

On a trial of accused for being drunk in a public place, the fact that some one had vomited at the place, and that a greasy spot was on the floor where one had vomited, was admissible. January v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 555.

Instructions to jury.—Charge should confine the jury to the public place alleged in the information. Murray v. State, 48 App. 219, 87 S. W. 349.

The court, on a trial of accused for being drunk in a public place, must define, in its instructions, a public place, and leave the jury to find whether the alleged place was a public place. January v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 555.

Art. 205. Drinking intoxicating liquors on railway passenger train.—It shall be unlawful for any person to drink intoxicating liquors of any kind in or upon any railway passenger train, or coach, or closet, vestibule thereof, or platform connected therewith, while the said passenger train or coach is in the service of passenger transportation within this state. Provided, that nothing in this article shall be construed to prevent the use of intoxicating liquors as stimulant in case of actual sickness of the person using said stimulant.

Any person violating this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1907, p. 51.]

Art. 220. Penalty for misdemeanor under this law.—Any person who is found guilty of a misdemeanor under the succeeding articles of this chapter shall be subject to a fine of not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or to hard labor on the public roads of the county in which the offense was committed for any period of time not less than sixty days nor more than one year, or to both such penalties. [Id., p. 558.]

Explanatory.—The above article, as originally enacted, reads as follows: "Any person who is found guilty of a misdemeanor under this act shall be subject to a fine of not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or to hard labor on the public road of the county in which the offense was committed for any period of time not less than sixty days nor more than one year, or to both such penalties." Act 1903, ch. 101, § 108; Act 1905, 1st S. S., p. 558, ch. 11, § 148.

Art. 222, post, in its original form reads as follows: "Any person who fraudulently or wilfully does anything in violation of this act to affect the result of any primary, special or general election is guilty of a misdemeanor unless some other penalty for such act is specially provided for." Act 1903, ch. 101, § 109; Act 1905, 1st S. S., p. 558, ch. 11, § 150.

Art. 226, post, in its original form, is as follows: "Any judge, clerk, chairman or member of an executive committee, collector of taxes, county clerk, sheriff, county judge or judge of an election, president or member of a State convention, or Secretary of State who wilfully fails or refuses to discharge any duty imposed on him by this law, is guilty of a misdemeanor unless the particular act under some other section of the law is made a felony." Act 1903, ch. 101, § 115; Act 1905, 1st S. S., p. 558, ch. 11, § 154.

Construing together the above three sections of the act of 1905, it would seem that the compilers of the revised Penal Code failed to present in the Code all the offenses described in the original act. The various things denounced in the act of 1905 are made misdemeanors by sections 150 and 154 of that act (Penal Code, arts. 222, 226) and section 148 (Penal Code, art. 220) fixes the penalty where it is not otherwise specifically denominated in the act. If the original act is to stand unimpaired by the revision, as would seem to result from the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626, the Penal Code is incomplete in so far as it attempts to enumerate the offenses against the right of suffrage. In view of the doubt as to whether the revision has limited the scope of the original act, and as to just what acts directed or prohibited by the act of 1905, and its subsequent amendments, come within the criminal provisions, the compilers have not attempted to set out the omitted provisions. The omitted provisions, with their amendments will be found in Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 2912, 2920-2924, 2927, 2933, 2935, 2937-2954, 2957-2970, 2972-2974, 2976-2985, 2990-2995, 2997-2999, 3001, 3003-3011, 3013, 3015-3023, 3026, 3084-3138, 3140, 3145-3174.

Art. 221. Voting or attempting to vote more than once.—Any person who, at a general, special or primary election, wilfully votes or attempts to vote in any other name than his own, or who votes or attempts to vote more than once, is guilty of a misdemeanor. [Id., p. 558.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 104.

Art. 222. Doing any act in violation of this law.—Any person who fraudulently or wilfully does anything in violation of this law to affect the result of any primary, special or general election, is guilty of a misdemeanor unless some other penalty for such act is specially provided for. [Id., p. 558.]

See note under art. 220.

Art. 223. Either party to a violation of this and the preceding section may be compelled to testify regarding thereto, but shall not be punished for any act regarding which he may have been required to testify. [Act 1905, p. 561.]

1. Explanatory.—This article, at the time of its incorporation into the revised Penal Code, had been superseded in part by Acts 1909, p. 309, which was carried into the Penal Code as art. 630.

2. Validity.—This article as originally enacted in 1876, held valid. English v. State, 7 App. 171.

3. Repeal.—As to repeal of former laws by implication, see Fleeks v. State, 47 App. 327, 83 S. W. 381.

4. Permits by officers.—Judges of election or other officers cannot permit establishments to be kept open. English v. State, 7 App. 171.

5. Day defined.—The word day includes the time elapsing from one midnight to the succeeding one. Haines v. State, 7 App. 30; Lawrence v. State, 7 App. 192.

6. Persons liable.—An employé who opens or helps to keep open his proprietor's saloon is equally with him amenable. Davidson v. State, 27 App. 262, 11 S. W. 371; Janks v. State, 29 App. 233, 15 S. W. 815.

7. Defenses—Mistake of fact.—See Hailes v. State, 15 App. 93.

8. — Validity of election.—On a prosecution for keeping open a bar-room on election day, held, that the validity of the election could not be attacked in regard to the manner of ordering and holding the same, where same was held under the forms of law. Geib v. State, 31 App. 514, 21 S. W. 190.

That an election is merely voidable owing to irregularities but not void is no defense. Sadler v. State, 48 App. 507, 89 S. W. 974, 122 Am. St. Rep. 770.

9. — Prescription.—A physician who keeps a drug store is not at fault if the applicant for a prescription practices a fraud upon him. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 64 S. W. 1052.

10. Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 121, 122.

The prosecution may be by information, Haines v. State, 7 App. 30.

An indictment for the offense should allege what the election was for. It is not sufficient to allege that an election was then and there held. Hoskey v. State, 9 App. 202. And it must allege that the offense was committed in the defendant's voting precinct, village, town, or city. Zweifel v. State, 16 App. 154; Smith v. State, 18 App. 454. But this allegation would not now be required. Hailes v. State, 15 App. 93. A prosecution for this offense may be by information as well as by indictment. Haines v. State, 7 App. 30.

Information, to be sufficient, must aver that the house was opened and kept open on the day of election in the precinct, village, town, or city where such election was being held, or within three miles thereof. Patton v. State, 31 App. 20, 19 S. W. 252. An information for keeping open a bar-room on election day, is sufficiently specific if it alleges that such election was held by lawful authority. Following Janks v. State, 29 App. 233, 15 S. W. 815.

It is no ground for quashing an indictment for keeping open a bar room on an election day that the election was not legally held. If it was held under the forms of law it is not subject to collateral attack. Wear v. State, 35 App. 30, 26 S. W. 68, 29 S. W. 1082.

An indictment charging the sale of intoxicating liquors on election day, which does not give the number of the voting precinct where the election was held, nor of the Justice precinct, is insufficient. Gage v. State (Cr. App.) 76 S. W. 459.

An information charging the giving of intoxicating liquors to another while an election is being held need not state that the defendant is not a druggist, etc.; the proviso of the statute relating to such offense forming no part of its definition. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 318.

11. Evidence.—The State has only to prove that the defendant is engaged in the saloon business and that the same was open by or under his direction. It need not show that he sold, gave away or offered to sell intoxicating liquors. Smith v. State, 52 App. 357, 107 S. W. 353.

12. Instructions.—On trial of one for keeping open saloon on election day, instruction need not state that defendant must have kept it open unlawfully and willfully, as these words are not part of the definition of the offense. Knox v. State (Cr. App.) 77 S. W. 14.

Falsely personating another.—Any person who attempts to falsely personate at an election another person, and vote, or attempt to vote, on the authority of a poll tax receipt or certificate of exemption not issued to him by the county tax collector, is guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by hard labor within the walls of a penitentiary not less than three nor more than five years. It shall be the duty of the attorney general to institute proceedings for such forfeiture whenever it is made known to him by the affidavit of a reputable man that in his opinion such offense has been committed. The officers, agents and employes of such corporation, as also the candidate, and all persons connected with his political headquarters, shall be competent witnesses, and may be compelled to attend court and testify, and those shall not be subject to prosecution who reveal facts showing a violation of this section. Same; false return or certificate; penalty.—Any manager, judge or clerk of any such election, who shall knowingly make any false return or false certificate of the result of any such election, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than five years. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 264e. Same; intimidation or obstruction of voters; penalty.—Any election officer or supervisor who shall intimidate or attempt to intimidate any voter, or knowingly refuse to allow any qualified voter to vote, or any person who, within one hundred feet of the voting box on election day, shall intimidate or attempt to intimidate any qualified voter from voting, or in any manner by word or act attempt to influence any voter to cast his vote for or against any question provided under this Act to be voted upon, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than $50.00 nor more than $500.00. Provided, further, that the provisions of this Section shall not be construed to prevent the officers of the election from assisting any qualified voter in making out his ticket as is provided for under the General Election Laws. [Id., § 5a.]

Art. 264f. Same; false returns of election to Secretary of State; penalty.—Any officer of any county upon whom is placed by law the duty of making and certifying to the Secretary of State returns of any such election, who shall knowingly make or certify to any false certificate or false statement of the result of any such election shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than five years. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 264g. Same; refusal of county judge to appoint nominated officers of election; penalty.—Should any county judge refuse to appoint the officers as provided for and required in Section 1 of this Act [art. 264a], upon application to him, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not less than $50.00 nor more than $500.00, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than ten days nor more than thirty days, and in addition, such refusal of such county judge shall be grounds for his impeachment and removal from office. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 264h. Same; repeal of existing statutes.—This law shall not repeal any existing statute with reference to the conducting of elections, but shall be cumulative thereof. [Id., § 16.]

CHAPTER THREE

RIOTS AND UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES AT ELECTIONS, AND VIOLENCE USED OR MENACED TOWARD ELECTORS *

Art. 265. Riots at elections. 266. Unlawful assemblies to prevent. 267. Tumults, mobs and disturbances.	Art. 268. Intimidation of electors. 269. Carrying arms about election.
--	---

Article 265. [165] Riots at elections.—If any riot be committed at the place of holding a public election, or within one mile of such place, with a design to disturb or influence such election, every person engaged therein shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [P. C. 271.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 96.
Indictment to sufficiently charge riot must show for what purpose the rioters assembled, and that they unlawfully assembled; and further, set out the illegal act which was the object of the meeting. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 672, 18 S. W. 676.

Art. 266. [166] Unlawful assemblies to prevent.—If any unlawful assembly meets at the place of holding an election or within a mile thereof, for the purpose of preventing the holding of such election, all persons engaged in such unlawful assembly shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [P. C. 272.]

See art. 436, post.
Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 97.

Art. 267. [167] Tumults, mobs and disturbances at elections.—If any person shall disturb any election by inciting or encouraging a tumult or mob, or shall cause any disturbance in the vicinity of any poll or voting place, he shall be punished by fine of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, and, in addition thereto, may be imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding one month. [Act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 311, § 25.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 98.

Art. 268. [168] Intimidation of electors.—If any person shall, by force or intimidation, obstruct or influence, or attempt to obstruct or influence, any voter in the free exercise of the elective franchise, he shall suffer the punishment prescribed in the preceding article. [Act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 311, § 25.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 99.
Indictment under Act Aug. 15, 1870, held sufficient. State v. Franks, 38 Tex. 640.

Art. 269. [169] Carrying arms about elections.—If any person, other than a peace officer, shall carry any gun, pistol, bowie knife or other dangerous weapon, concealed or unconcealed, on any day of election, during the hours the polls are open, within the distance of one-half mile of any poll or voting place, he shall be punished as prescribed in article 167 [267] of this Code. [Act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 311, § 25.]

Validity.—This article is constitutional. Livingston v. State, 3 App. 74.
This article defines the offense of carrying arms about elections. Article 477, post, defines the offense of carrying arms in church or other assembly. These two offenses are distinct, comprehending different elements and punished by different penalties, although one of the ingredients of each is common to both. These acts are, therefore, not within the rule that if the inculpatory acts enumerated in two different articles of the Penal Code be the same, and the penalties prescribed be different, neither will be enforceable because of uncertainty as to the penalty. Cooper v. State, 25 App. 530, 8 S. W. 654; Cooper v. State, 26 App. 575, 10 S. W. 216.

Operation.—The statute cannot be construed to abridge the right to carry arms where the purpose is protection against apparent, present and serious danger to human life then about to be inflicted. Barkley v. State, 28 App. 99, 12 S. W. 99.

It is immaterial whether the election is held for a state officer or for a congressman, since the election being under the laws of the state, the offender is punishable under the state's laws. State v. Franks, 38 Tex. 640.

Relation to other laws.—The act of 1876 virtually re-enacts Act 1873, § 31, and hence its repeal of that act does not condone offenses violative of that section committed while the act of 1873 was in effect. Livingston v. State, 3 App. 74.

Defendant procured a pistol on the east side of the square of the city of Tyler on an election day, put it in his pocket and walked across the east side of the square to the courthouse where people were voting. He was prosecuted under article 269, and his defense was that he should have been prosecuted under article 477 because of the lesser penalty; held, that the offense announced under article 269 was complete before the offense announced by article 477 was committed. Burns v. State, 36 App. 601, 38 S. W. 204.

Former laws.—A similar provision in a former statute (Acts 1870, chap. 78, sec. 54) was held applicable to all elections, congressional as well as state. See a sufficient allegation. State v. Franks, 38 Tex. 640.

Offense, what constitutes.—Where it reasonably appeared to defendant that his brother was in danger of injury from persons armed with sticks and he procured a pistol and went to the polling place and quelled the disturbance peaceably, he was not guilty of carrying a pistol in violation of this article. Barkley v. State, 28 App. 99, 12 S. W. 495.

Defenses.—That the defendant's life had been threatened and was in danger and that he carried a gun to protect himself, is no defense to a charge under this article. Livingston v. State, 3 App. 74. Nor is it a defense to such charge that five months before the election the defendant was deputized to execute a warrant. Snell v. State, 4 App. 171.

To a prosecution for carrying arms about an election, etc., as that offense is defined by this article, the accused interposed the defense that the election was void because illegal. But held, first: Primarily, the presumption obtains in favor of the legality of the election. Second: Even if the legality of election can be assailed collaterally, the burden of establishing the illegality of the same rests on the accused. Third: In a prosecution for the violation of this article, it is immaterial whether the election was legal or illegal, if the same was held under the forms of law. Cooper v. State, 26 App. 575, 10 S. W. 216. See, also, Barkley v. State, 28 App. 99, 12 S. W. 495.

Officers.—A special constable appointed by a county commissioner, who is a magistrate, is exempt from the operation of this article. Gonzales v. State, 53 App. 430, 110 S. W. 740.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 100.

Evidence.—Defendant's evidence that his life had been threatened and was in danger was properly excluded as immaterial. Livingston v. State, 3 App. 74.

Evidence that defendant thought his appointment for the purpose of arresting a certain person named in the warrant authorized him to carry a pistol was properly excluded; the person having been arrested, and his case disposed of, prior to the date of carrying the pistol charged in the indictment. O'Neal v. State, 32 App. 42, 22 S. W. 25.

Evidence that defendant reported to the county attorney that one S. had threatened his life, and that the attorney had told him he had the right to carry a pistol by virtue of the warrant authorizing him to arrest another person, was properly excluded, where S. had been placed under bond to keep the peace, and such other person arrested, prior to the offense charged. O'Neal v. State, 32 App. 42, 22 S. W. 25.

CHAPTER FOUR

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENSES AFFECTING THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE *

Art.		Art.
270.	Illegal arrest of voter.	280.	County clerk failing to destroy ballots.
271.	Illegal voting.	281.	Not applicable in cases of contest.
272.	Official ballot—depositing two or more tickets folded together.	282.	Wilful neglect of official duty.
273.	Instigating illegal voting.	283.	Elector voting without qualifications.
274.	False swearing by voter.	284.	Penalty for illegal voting.
275.	Procuring voter to swear falsely.	285.	Registrar to administer oaths.
276.	Failing to deliver returns.	286.	Penalty for illegal certificates.
277.	Preventing delivery of returns.	287.	Election officer disclosing vote or giving information.
278.	Officer opening ballot.	288.	Other offenses.
279.	County clerk—failure to keep ballot-boxes securely.

Article 270. [170] Illegal arrest of voter.—If any magistrate or peace officer shall knowingly cause an elector to be arrested in attending upon, going to, or returning from an election, except in cases of treason, felony, or breach of the peace, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars. [P. C. 270.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 101.

*As to offenses omitted from revised Penal Code, see note under art. 220, ante.

Art. 271. [171] Illegal voting.—If any person knowing himself not to be a qualified voter shall, at any election held, vote for any officer to be then chosen, or for or against any measure or proposition to be determined by said election, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [O. C. 275, amended by Act March 23, 1887, p. 37.]

False swearing.—The offense of false swearing and illegal voting are different offenses, and there is no inhibition in the Constitution against defendant being prosecuted for both offenses; the mere fact that they occur contemporaneously does not make them one and the same offense. Arrington v. State, 48 App. 541, 89 S. W. 643.

Knowledge of disqualification.—Previous conviction of felony is a disqualification to vote, and the trial court did not err in charging that if accused had been previously convicted of assault to murder he knew the fact, which was equivalent to knowing that he was not a qualified voter. Held, further, that he was chargeable with knowledge that assault to murder is a felony, and that one of the consequences of conviction therefor is disqualification to vote. Thompson v. State, 26 App. 94, 9 S. W. 486.

Subsequent statutes.—One can be punished under this article for illegal voting. The Terrell election law does attempt by implication to repeal this article. Arrington v. State, 48 App. 541, 89 S. W. 643.

That other acts were subsequently denounced as illegal voting and made penal held not to prevent prosecutions for violations of this article. Arrington v. State, 48 App. 541, 89 S. W. 643.

Voting without complying with any condition that the legislature might subsequently impose would be illegal. Arrington v. State, 48 App. 541, 89 S. W. 643.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 102.

See Thompson v. State, 26 App. 94, 9 S. W. 486.

Indictment for illegal voting is not required to allege the specific authority for the election, nor the authority of the officers, nor the names of the candidates. Gallagher v. State, 10 App. 469.

An indictment charging that the "vote was for city attorney and other officers then and there to be chosen at state election," held to sufficiently charge the purpose of the election. Gallagher v. State, 10 App. 469.

An allegation that defendant voted at an election authorized by law, included the further idea that it was held by proper officers. Gallagher v. State, 10 App. 469.

Under the better practice an indictment for illegal voting should aver the particular disability. Gallagher v. State, 10 App. 469.

An indictment charging that the election was "held and authorized by law within the City of W." held to sufficiently state the place of voting. Gallagher v. State, 10 App. 469.

Indictment held to sufficiently allege the purpose for which the election was being held. Borches v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 423.

Voting place sufficiently alleged in averment "election authorized by law at Prairie Hill school house, in voting precinct No. 10." May v. State, 43 App. 54, 63 S. W. 132.

If, where the election was held was the usual voting place in the precinct and had been so used by the voters, the election would be a legal one if no other place had ever been designated. May v. State, 43 App. 54, 63 S. W. 132.

Alleging that the election was "then and there held for the purpose of electing various county and precinct officers of Texas," indictment sufficiently designated the character of the election. May v. State, 43 App. 54, 63 S. W. 132.

Gist of the offense is that the accused voted illegally at a legal election, and not that he voted for or against any particular candidate or proposition. It was not essential for the indictment to charge how he voted. May v. State, 43 App. 54, 63 S. W. 132.

Proper form of indictment of a justice of the peace for accepting a bribe for failure to institute proceedings for the arrest of a person whom he knew to be unlawfully carrying a pistol, stated. Morawietz v. State, 46 App. 436, 80 S. W. 997.

Evidence.—Any error in admitting the minutes of the commissioners' court of the county wherein the county judge ordered the election for county and precinct officers was immaterial, where the election was general of which the court could have taken judicial notice. Borches v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 423.

The disqualification charged being the minority of the defendant, the question was one for the jury on the evidence. May v. State, 43 App. 54, 63 S. W. 132.

Art. 272. [173] Official ballot.—All ballots shall be printed with black ink on clear white paper of sufficient thickness to prevent the marks thereon to be seen through the paper, and of uniform style. The tickets of each political party shall be placed or printed on one ballot, arranged side by side in columns separated by parallel rule. The space which shall contain the title of the office and the name of the candidate (or candidates, if more than one is to be voted for for the same office) shall be of uniform style and type in said tickets. At the head of each ticket shall be printed the name of the party. When a party has not nominated a full ticket, the titles of those nominated shall be in position opposite to the same office in a full ticket; and title of the offices shall be printed in the corresponding position in spaces where no nominations have been made. In the blank columns and independent columns, the titles of the offices shall be printed in all blank spaces to correspond with a full ticket. When presidential electors are to be voted on, their names shall appear at the heads of their respective tickets. When a constitutional amendment or other propositions are to be voted on, the same shall appear once on each ballot in uniform style and type. When a voter desires to vote a ticket straight, he shall run a pencil or pen through all other tickets on the official ballot, making a distinct marked line through such ticket not intended to be voted; and when he shall desire to vote a mixed ticket, shall do so by running a line through the names of such candidates as he shall desire to vote against in the ticket he is voting, and by writing the name of the candidate for whom he desires to vote in the blank column and in the space provided for such office, same to be written with black ink or pencil, unless the names of the candidates for whom he desires to vote appear on the ballot, in which event, he shall leave the same not scratched.

When a constitutional amendment or other question submitted by the legislature is to be voted on, the form in which it is submitted shall be described by the governor in his proclamation in such terms as to give the voter a clear idea of the scope and character of the amendment, and printed once at the bottom of each ballot as described by this act the words, "for" and "against" under it; provided, the legislature has failed to prescribe a form. If a proposition or question is to be voted on by the people of any city, county or other subdivision of the state, the form in which such proposition shall be voted on shall be prescribed by the local or municipal authority submitting it. [Act 1905, p. 531.]

Depositing ballots folded together.—Any person who shall deposit any ballot, except as provided in this article, or shall deposit two or more tickets folded together, at any election in this state, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. [Act April 18, 1879, p. 119.]

For construction in Civil cases, see notes under art. 2969, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 105.

Art. 273. [174] Instigating illegal voting.—Every person who shall procure, aid, assist, counsel or advise another to give his vote at any election, knowing that the person is not duly qualified to vote, or shall procure, aid, assist, counsel or advise another to give his vote more than once at such election, shall be fined in a sum not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, and may, in addition thereto, be imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding one month. [O. C. 276, and act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 311, § 25.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 106, 108.

Art. 274. [175] False swearing by voter.—If any person challenged as unqualified shall be guilty of wilful and corrupt false swearing, in taking any oath prescribed by law, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [O. C. 278.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 109.

Art. 275. [176] Procuring voter to swear falsely.—Every person who shall wilfully and corruptly procure any person to swear falsely, as prescribed in the preceding article, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for any time not exceeding three years, or by fine not exceeding three thousand dollars. [O. C. 279.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 110.

Art. 276. [178] Failing to deliver returns.—If any person intrusted with the transmission of an election return, shall wilfully do any act that shall defeat the delivery thereof or shall wilfully neglect to deliver the same as directed by law, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [P. C. 281.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 115.

Art. 277. [179] Preventing delivery of returns.—If any person shall take away such election return from any person intrusted therewith, either by force or in any other manner, or shall wilfully do any act that shall defeat the due delivery thereof, as directed by law, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars. [P. C. 282.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 116.

Art. 278. [180] Officer opening ballots.—Any officer or person with whom may be legally deposited the ballots cast in an election, who shall open and read any ballot, or who shall permit it to be done, except in cases provided for by law, shall be punished by fine not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars, and may, in addition thereto, be imprisoned in the county jail not to exceed six months. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 160; P. C. 269a; Acts of 1879, ch. 112, p. 120.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 117.

Art. 279. [181] County clerk failing to keep ballot boxes securely.—If any clerk of the county court in this state shall fail, neglect or refuse to securely keep any ballot box containing tickets of election committed to his custody by the presiding officer of any election precinct, he shall be punished by fine not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars, and, in addition thereto, he may be imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding six months. [Act Aug. 23, 1875, p. 308, § 16.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 118.

Art. 280. [182] County clerk failing to destroy ballots.—If any clerk of the county court in this state shall fail, after the expiration of one year from the date of any election, to destroy, by burning, all the ballots cast at such election, which may have come to his custody, he shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 308, § 16.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 119.

Art. 281. [183] Not applicable in cases of contest.—The provisions of the foregoing article shall not apply to cases in which a contest may have grown out of any election, within one year after the date of such election. [Act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 308, § 16.]

Art. 282. [184] Wilful neglect of official duty.—If any officer on whom a duty is enjoined, in any statute relating to elections, shall be guilty of a wilful neglect of such duty, or shall act corruptly or with partiality in the discharge of such duty, in any manner not provided for in this title, he shall be fined in a sum not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars. [P. C. 283.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 120.

Art. 283. [187] Elector voting without legal qualifications.—Any elector voting at any election who does not possess the legal qualification shall be punished as now provided by law for illegal voting; and any person swearing falsely as to his own qualifications, or those of a challenged elector shall be punished as now provided by law for false swearing. [Act March 30, 1891, p. 47.]

Art. 284. [188] Penalty for illegal registration.—Any person who shall illegally register as a qualified voter of any city shall be deemed guilty of felony, and, upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one year nor more than two years. [Act 22d Leg., called session, p. 13, § 14.]

Art. 285. [189] Registrar to administer oaths; penalty for false swearing.—The registrar is hereby authorized and empowered to administer all necessary oaths to applicants for registration, and also to all witnesses touching the qualifications of applicants for registration; and any person who shall swear falsely about his own qualifications as a voter of the city, or any person who shall, as a witness for the applicant for registration, swear falsely about the qualifications of such applicant, shall be deemed guilty of false swearing, and, upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished as is provided by law for the punishment of false swearing in other cases. [Act April 12, 1892, chap. 13, p. 13, 22d Leg., called session, § 15.]

Art. 286. [190] Penalty for issuing illegal certificates.—Any registrar who shall knowingly issue a registration certificate to any person not legally entitled to register, or who shall knowingly issue, or cause to be issued, a certificate of registration to any imaginary or fictitious person, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one year, nor more than two years for each and every such registration certificate so issued. [Id., § 22.]

Art. 287. [191] Election officer disclosing vote or giving information.—Any officer upon whom a duty is imposed by an act to provide for the registration of all voters in all cities containing ten thousand inhabitants or more, who shall disclose to any person the name of any candidate for whom any elector has voted, or gives any information by which it can be ascertained for whom any elector has voted, or any person who shall remove any ballot from any polling place, or any person who shall knowingly apply or receive any ballot in any polling place other than that in which he is entitled to vote, or any person who shall show his ballot after it is marked to any person in such a way as to reveal the contents thereof, or the name of the candidate or candidates for whom he marked his ballot, or any person who shall, contrary to this act, examine his ballot or solicit the voter to show the same, or person other than an officer of election who shall deliver any ballot to an elector, or any elector who shall deliver a ballot to the presiding officer to be voted, except the one he received from the election officer, or any elector or any one who shall, contrary to the provisions of this act, place any mark upon or do anything to his ballot by which it may afterwards be identified as the one voted by any particular individual, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine not less than fifty dollars and not more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than three months nor more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. [Id., § 28.]

Construed.—Articles 1738 and 1741 of the Revised Statutes of 1895, requiring that all ballots shall be numbered, were not repealed by this article. State v. Connor, 86 Tex. 133, 23 S. W. 1103.

Art. 288. [192] Other offenses declared and penalty prescribed.—Any judge or clerk of election who shall wilfully disregard any of the provisions of this act, or who shall negligently fail to enforce any of the provisions of this act, or who shall, in counting the ballot or making the returns thereof, wilfully disregard any of the directions or requirements of this act, or any person who shall wilfully alter or destroy any ballot cast at an election or any of the returns of an election regulated by this act, or who shall introduce among the genuine ballots a fraudulent ballot, or any person who shall falsely write the initials of the presiding officer or any writing upon the ballot purporting to be written by the clerk or presiding officer, or any person who shall steal any of the ballots or returns, or wilfully or fraudulently hinder or delay the delivery of any election returns to the county clerk, or wilfully break open any of such sealed returns of any election regulated by this act, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years, or by fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than two thousand dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 29.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 111-114.

CHAPTER FIVE

PRIMARY ELECTIONS *

Art.	Art.
289. Penalty for illegal voting at primary election.	293. Bribery, or attempt, of officer of election.
290. Procuring an illegal vote.	294. Bribery, or attempt, of voter.
291. Officer making false return.	295. Open saloon on election day, and drinking liquor by election officers.
292. Officer divulging votes.

Article 289. [192a] Penalty for illegal voting at primary election.—Any person voting at any primary election, called and held by authority of any political party for the purpose of nominating candidates of such political party for any public office, who is not qualified to vote, in the election precinct where he offers to vote at the next state, county or municipal election, or who shall vote more than once at the same or different precincts or polls on the same day, or different days in the same primary election, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding sixty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1895, p. 40.]

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 103, 104.

An information alleging that defendant voted at a primary in a certain precinct, while a resident of another county, is fatally defective in failing to also allege that he would not be a qualified elector in such precinct at the next election. Calcoat v. State, 37 App. 245, 39 S. W. 364.

Art. 290. [192b] Procuring an illegal vote.—Every person who shall knowingly procure any illegal vote to be cast at any such primary election shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished as provided in the preceding article. [Act 1895, p. 40.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 107.

Art. 291. [192c] Officer making false return.—Any presiding officer, manager, judge or clerk of any primary election, called and held by authority of any political party in this state, who shall knowingly make or return, or cause to be made or returned, a false statement of the result of any such primary election, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding sixty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1895, p. 40.]

Art. 292. [192d] Officer divulging votes.—Any presiding officer, judge, clerk or other officer of an election, who shall divulge how any person voted at such primary election, from an inspection of the tickets, unless in a judicial investigation, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars. [Id.]

Art. 293. [192e] Bribery or attempted bribery of officer of election.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any presiding officer, manager, judge or clerk of any primary election, called and held by authority of any political party for the purpose of nominating candidates of such political party for public office, as a consideration for some act done or omitted to be done, or to be done or omitted contrary to his duty in relation to such primary election, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. Art. 294. [192f] Bribery or attempted bribery of voter.—If any person shall bribe, or offer to bribe, any voter for the purpose of influencing his vote at any primary election, called and held by authority of any political party for the purpose of nominating candidates of such political party for any public office, upon conviction thereof, [he] shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Id.]

See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 3174a-3174z.

Art. 295b. Same; corrupt practices.—At each and every primary election held in this State for the nomination of a candidate for United States Senator, each and every provision of the laws of this State which has for its object the protection of the ballot and the safe guarding of the public against fraudulent voting, illegal methods, undue influence, corrupt practices, and in fact each and every restriction of whatever kind or character or nature as applied to any election held in this State whether general, special or primary shall be held to apply to a primary election held for or when a candidate for United States Senator is to be nominated when not in conflict with the provisions of this Act. And the violation of any such provisions or restrictions at any such primary election shall be punished in the same manner as prescribed by law for the violation of any election law whether general, special or primary. Same; certain provisions made applicable.—When the law with reference to holding senatorial primaries is silent the election officers in securing supplies, in conducting the election and in making returns and in canvassing the votes shall in every particular follow the methods provided by law covering primary elections or general elections held for the purpose of electing or nominating State, district, county, and precinct offices. Art. 295f. Art. 295g. Disbursements through agents prohibited; filing authorization.—No candidate for United States Senator shall make any disbursement for political purposes except under his personal direction, which for every purpose shall be considered his act, through a party committee, or through a personal committee, whose authority to act shall be filed, as provided by this Act. If such campaign committee consists of only one person, such person shall be deemed the secretary thereof. Any candidate for United States Senator may revoke the selection of any member of such personal campaign committee by a revocation in writing which, with proof of personal service on the member whose selection is so revoked, shall be filed with the officer with whom the appointment was filed. Such candidate may fill the vacancy thus created in the manner in which an original appointment is made. The acts of every member of such personal campaign committee will be presumed to be with the knowledge and approval of the candidate until it has been clearly proved that the candidate did not have knowledge of and approved the same, and that in the exercise of reasonable care and diligence, he could not have had knowledge of or any opportunity to disapprove the same. [Id., § 16.]

Art. 295i. Disbursements by persons other than candidates and their committees prohibited; exceptions.—No person or group of persons, other than a candidate or his personal campaign committee or a party committee, shall in an election for a United States Senator or nomination of a candidate for United States Senator make any disbursement for political purposes otherwise than through a personal campaign committee or a party committee, except that expenses incurred for rent of hall or other room for public speaking, for printing, for postage, for advertising, for distributing printed matter, for clerical assistance and for hotel and traveling expenses solely in connection with a public speaking engagement, may be contributed and paid by a person or group of persons residing within the county where such expenses are incurred, but not otherwise. [Id., § 17.]

Art. 295j. What disbursements by candidates authorized.—No candidate for the nomination or election for United States Senator shall make any disbursements for political purposes except:

(1) For his personal hotel and traveling expenses and for postage, telegraph and telephone expenses.

(4) For contribution to his party committee.

(5) For other purposes enumerated by law when such candidate has no personal campaign committee, but not otherwise.

(6) After the primary, no candidate for United States Senator for election shall make any disbursement in behalf of his candidacy, except contributions to his party committee, for his own actual necessary personal traveling expenses, and for postage, telegraph and telephone expenses. [Id., § 18.]

Art. 295k. What disbursements by committee authorized.—No party committee nor personal campaign committee shall make any disbursements except:

(1) For maintenance of headquarters and for hall rentals, incident to the holding of public meetings.

(2) For necessary stationery, postage and clerical assistance to be employed for the candidate at his headquarters or at the headquarters of the personal campaign committee, or party committee incident to the writing, addressing and mailing of letters and campaign literature.

(3) For necessary expenses incident to the furnishing and printing of badges, banners and other insignia, to the printing and posting of hand bills, posters, lithographs and other campaign literature and the distribution thereof through the mails or otherwise.

(4) For campaign advertising in newspapers, periodicals or magazines, as provided by law.

(5) For actual and necessary personal expenses of public speaking.

(6) For traveling expenses of members of party committees or personal campaign committees. Nothing herein shall be construed as authorizing the employment on a salary or any other reward, any campaign manager, booster or political organizer. [Id., § 19.]

Art. 295l. Rendition of bills for disbursements; time for; bills presented out of time not to be paid.—Every person who shall have any bill, charge or claim upon or against any personal campaign committee, any party committee or any candidate for United States Senator for any disbursement made, services rendered, or thing of value furnished, for political purposes or incurred in any manner in relation to any primary or election for United States Senator, shall render in writing to such committee or candidate, such bill, charge or claim within ten days after the day of election or primary in connection with which such bill, charge or claim was incurred. No candidate for United States Senator and no personal campaign or party committee shall pay any bill, charge or claim so incurred prior to any primary or election which is not so presented within ten days after such primary or election. [Id., § 20.]

Art. 295m. Filing statement of disbursements; contents; final statement.—Every candidate for United States Senator and the secretary of every party committee shall on the second Saturday occurring after such candidate for United States Senator or committee has first made a disbursement or first incurred any obligation, express or implied, to make a disbursement for political purposes, and thereafter, on the second Saturday of each calendar month, until all disbursements shall have been accounted for, and also on the Saturday preceding any election or primary, file a financial statement verified upon the oath of such candidate for United States Senator or upon the oath of the Secretary of such committee, as the case may be, which statement shall cover all transactions not accounted for and reported upon in statements theretofore filed. Each statement after the first shall contain a summary of all preceding statements, and summarize all items theretofore reported under the provisions of each subdivision of this Act in a separate total, and shall state the sum and total of all disbursements up to date of the report. On or before the second Saturday after the election, a final statement shall be filed by said candidate for United States Senator and the Secretary of every personal campaign committee, and the secretary of every party committee, which said statement shall include all former statements and be as full and complete as that required for the statements required to be made on the last Saturday before the election and required by this Act. [Id., § 21.]

Art. 295n. Filing statements with county clerk and Secretary of State.—The statement of every candidate for United States Senator and the statement of his personal campaign committee shall be filed with the county clerk of the county where such candidate resides and with the Secretary of State. [Id., § 22.]

Art. 295o. Contents of statements.—Each statement shall give in full detail:

(1) Every sum of money and all property, and every other thing of value received by such candidate or committee during such period from any source whatsoever which he uses or has used, or is at liberty to use for political purposes, together with the name of every person from which same was received, the specific purposes for which it was received, and the date when each was received, together with the total amount received from all sources in any amounts or manner whatsoever.

(2) Every promise or pledge of money, property or other thing of value received by such candidate or committee during such period, the proceeds of which he uses or has used or is at liberty to use for political purposes, together with the names of the person by whom each was promised or pledged, and the date when each was so promised or pledged together with the total amounts promised or pledged from all sources in any amount or manner whatsoever.

(4) Every obligation, express or implied, to make any disbursement incurred by such candidate or committee for political purposes during such period, together with the names of the person or persons to or with whom each such obligation has been incurred, the specific purpose for which each was made, and the date when each was incurred, together with the total amount of such obligations made in any amounts or manner whatsoever. [Id., § 23.]

Art. 295p. Persons receiving payments to file statements with Secretary of State; penalty for violation.—Each and every person who shall receive any payment directly or indirectly, for political purposes in a campaign before a primary or a general election for United States Senator whether as salary or as expenses, shall within thirty days after such payment has been made, or such payment has been promised, make a sworn statement showing in detail said payment or promised payments, by who made, what services were rendered for same. This statement shall be filed with the Secretary of State. Any person who comes within the provisions of this section and fails to make the statements herein, shall upon conviction be confined in the county jail for not less than ten nor more than thirty days. [Id., § 24.]

Art. 295q. Blanks for statements; distribution.—Blanks for all statements required by law shall be prepared by the Secretary of State and copies thereof, together with a copy of this Act, shall be furnished by the Secretary of State to the secretary of every personal campaign committee and to the secretary of every party committee, and to every candidate for United States Senator upon the filing of nomination papers, and all other persons required by law to file such statements who may apply therefor. [Id., § 25.]

Art. 295r. Name of candidate not to be printed on ballot if statements not filed.—The name of no candidate for United States Senator chosen at a primary election or otherwise, shall be printed on the official ballot for the ensuing election, unless there has been filed by or on behalf of said candidate and by his personal campaign committee, if any, the statements of accounts and expenses relating to the nominations of candidates for United States Senator required by this Act. [Id., § 26.]

Art. 295s. Persons other than candidates or committees to file statements of disbursements; contents of statements.—Every person other than a candidate or a personal campaign committee or party committee, who shall within any twelve months before or after any election for United States Senator make any disbursements for any political purposes relating to the election or nomination of a candidate for United States Senator exceeding in the aggregate, twenty-five ($25) dollars in amount and value, shall file within forty-eight hours after making any disbursements, causing the aggregate of such disbursements to reach such amount, a sworn statement thereof with the clerk of the county wherein he resides. (2) Such statements shall give in full detail, with date, every item of money, property, or other thing of value constituting any part of such disbursement, the exact means by which and the manner in which each such disbursement is made, and the name and address of every person to whom each was made, and the specific purpose for which each was made. [Id., § 27.]

Art. 295t. Limitation of amount of disbursements; proviso.—No disbursement shall be made and no obligation, express or implied, to make such disbursement or payment, shall be incurred by or on behalf of any candidate for the nomination for United States Senator which shall be in the aggregate in excess of $5,000.00, and $1,000.00 additional when a second primary is necessary. Provided that the expenditures allowed in Section 17 [Art. 295i] shall not be included in estimating the $5,000.00, or the additional $1,000.00 for the second primary. [Id., § 28.]

Art. 295u. Delegation of authority to make disbursements; limitation on amount.—Any candidate for United States Senator may delegate to his personal campaign committee, or to any party committee or his party, in writing duly subscribed by him, the expenditure of any portion of the total disbursements which are authorized to be incurred by him or on his behalf, by the provisions of this Act, but the total of all disbursements, by himself, by his personal campaign committee in his behalf, by all party committees in his behalf, or otherwise made in his behalf, shall not exceed in the aggregate the amounts in this Section, except as provided by law. Provided that the expenditures allowed in Section 17 [Art. 295i] hereof shall not be included in estimating the total amount. [Id., § 29.]

Art. 295v. Persons other than candidates failing to comply with requirements; penalty.—Any person other than a candidate for United States Senator and any or all members of any personal campaign committee, or any party committee, who shall fail to do and perform any and all the things required by him or them in reference to the disbursement or collection, or the payment of money, or things of value for political purposes, as defined by this Act, shall upon conviction be confined in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than one hundred days, and in addition there-to may be fined in a sum of not less than one hundred, nor more than five hundred dollars. [Id., § 30.]

Art. 295w. Persons other than candidates doing things prohibited; penalty.—Any person (not a candidate) and any and all members of any personal campaign committee or party committee who shall do any of the things forbidden by this Act with reference to the payment, collection or disbursement of money or other things of value for political purposes, as defined herein, shall, upon conviction, be confined, in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than one hundred days, and in addition thereto may be fined in a sum of not less than two hundred nor more than five hundred dollars. [Id., § 31.]

Art. 295x. Candidate failing to do things required; penalty.—Any candidate for United States Senators who shall fail to do and perform any of the things or acts required of him under the provision of this Act relating to the disbursement or collection of money or anything of value for political purposes, shall upon conviction be confined in the county jail for not less than thirty nor more than one hundred days, and in addition thereto, may be fined not less than two hundred, nor more than five hundred dollars, nor shall he be entitled to hold the office for which he may be elected, or if nominated, his name shall not be placed upon the official ballot for the ensuing election. [Id., § 32.]

Art. 295y. Candidate doing things forbidden; penalty.—If any candidate for United States Senator shall do any of the things or acts forbidden by the provisions of this Act with reference to the disbursement or collection of money, or anything or things of value, for political purposes as defined by this Act, he shall upon conviction, be confined in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than one hundred days, and in addition thereto may be fined in any sum not less than two hundred, nor more than five hundred dollars, nor shall he be entitled to hold the office for which he may be elected, or if nominated, his name shall not be placed upon the official ballot for the ensuing election. Said petitioner shall conform in every particular to the requirements of the laws of this State with reference to placing the name of any candidate, other than the nominee of any party upon the official ballot, provided, further, that in no case shall the name of any person be placed upon the official ballot at any general election as a candidate for United States Senator as the nominee of any party unless he has been nominated under the provisions of this Act and has complied with every provision of the laws of this State with reference to the nomination of candidates for United States Senators. [Id., § 36.]

OF OFFENSES WHICH AFFECT THE FREE EXERCISE OF RELIGIOUS OPINION

Chap.	Chap.
1. Disturbance of religious worship.	2. Sunday laws.

CHAPTER ONE

DISTURBANCE OF RELIGIOUS WORSHIP

Art.	Art.
296. Disturbance of congregation in any manner.	297. Offender may be bound over. 298. Double penalty for second offense.

Article 296. [193] Disturbance of congregation in any manner.—Any person who, by loud or vociferous talking or swearing, or by any other noise or in any other manner, wilfully disturbs any congregation, or part of a congregation, assembled for religious worship and conducting themselves in a lawful manner, or who wilfully disturbs in any manner any congregation assembled for the purpose of conducting or participating in a Sunday school, or to transact any business relating to or in the interest of religious worship or a Sunday school, and conducting themselves in a lawful manner, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [O. C. 284, amended by Act April 23, 1873, p. 43, and by Act Feb. 28, 1883, p. 17, amended Act 1897, p. 102.]

Elements of offense.—The law protects a congregation, assembled for religious worship, from disturbance so long as any one of them remains on the ground. Haynes v. State, 71 App. 31, 159 S. W. 1059; Dawson v. State, 7 App. 59.

If one denomination lends its house of worship to another, its sexton cannot interfere by raising a quarrel during services as to right of occupancy. Dorn v. State, 4 App. 67.

To constitute offense the congregation must have been "wilfully" disturbed. Richardson v. State, 5 App. 470; Wood v. State, 16 App. 574; Finney v. State, 29 App. 184, 15 S. W. 175; Holmes v. State, 39 App. 231, 45 S. W. 487, 73 Am. St. Rep. 921.

Proof must show that congregation, or a part thereof, was disturbed, and also that the disturbance was wilful. Richardson v. State, 5 App. 470.

A church official may notify the minister that he has been silenced. Richardson v. State, 5 App. 470.

The disturbance must be in one of the modes mentioned. Richardson v. State, 5 App. 470.

The congregation must be assembled for some purpose named in the statute; assemblage for business purposes is not sufficient. Wood v. State, 11 App. 318.

One who wilfully disturbs one member of a congregation assembled for religious worship, violates this article. McVea v. State, 35 App. 1, 26 S. W. 834, 28 S. W. 469.

The offense is complete if only one worshipper was disturbed, and it is not error for the court to so instruct the jury. McVea v. State, 35 App. 1, 26 S. W. 834, 28 S. W. 469.

Not error to charge authorizing conviction if defendant disturbed the congregation or any part of same. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 78 S. W. 1078.

The fact that defendant was in a crowd which disturbed a religious meeting will not support a conviction, without a showing that he participated in the disturbance. Denny v. State, 52 App. 158, 105 S. W. 798.

Persons who assembled at a church in the belief of a rumor that there would be preaching constitute a congregation assembled for religious worship, even though the rumor was false, and it was contradicted by the preacher. Laird v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 260.

In a prosecution for disturbing a congregation assembled for religious worship, where people assembled at the church for worship were disturbed, the mere fact that the minister failed to come did not alter the character of the assemblage. Haynes v. State, 71 App. 31, 159 S. W. 1059.

Sunday schools.—Disturbing Sunday school is distinct from the offense of disturbing religious worship, and proof of one will not authorize conviction of the other. Hubbard v. State, 32 App. 389, 24 S. W. 30.

Indictment, information, or complaint.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 123.

The indictment may charge the offense generally in the language of the statute, without specifying the particular acts done. State v. Wupperman, 13 Tex. 33; Kindred v. State, 33 Tex. 67; Corley v. State, 3 App. 412; Bush v. State, 5 App. 64;

Lockett v. State, 40 Tex. 4. But the indictment must allege the manner of the disturbance, as well in order that it may be determined whether or not the statutory offense has been charged, as that the accused may know the "nature and cause of the accusation against him." It is not necessary in charging the manner of the disturbance to enter into details. A general statement, as that it was effected by "loud talking," "swearing," "discharging fire-arms," "whistling," "fighting," or the like will be sufficient. Kindred v. State, 33 Tex. 67, holds a contrary doctrine to the above, but that decision was made under a statute materially different from the existing one, and is not now applicable. Thompson v. State, 16 App. 159. Where all the prescribed modes of disturbance are charged in one count, as they may be, they must be charged conjunctively. Copping v. State, 7 App. 61. If the information charges the offense sufficiently, it is immaterial that the complaint is very general. Phants v. State, 2 App. 398; Wood v. State, 11 App. 318. But the information and complaint must not be materially variant. Hefner v. State, 16 App. 573; Wood v. State, 11 App. 318.

The indictment under the old statute (Hart. Dig., sec. 481) was required to allege that the congregation was assembled at one of the places specified in the statute, State v. McClure, 13 Tex. 23; but the term "a house for religious worship" might have been employed instead of "a meeting-house;" and if the allegation was that the congregation "were assembled for religious worship," it was sufficiently comprehensive to embrace the statutory ingredient that they "were attending a protracted or other religious meeting." State v. Yarborough, 19 Tex. 161. See a good indictment. Lockett v. State, 40 Tex. 4; Bush v. State, 5 App. 64.

The indictment must charge the means or manner of disturbance, but need not enter into details. Thompson v. State, 16 App. 159 (overruling Kindred v. State, 33 Tex. 67); Nash v. State, 32 App. 368, 24 S. W. 32, 26 S. W. 412, distinguishing Ma-gee's Case, 7 App. 99; McKay's Case, 8 App. 672, and Mullinix's Case, 32 App. 116, 22 S. W. 407.

An indictment charging disturbing a congregation assembled for religious worship held good under Pen. Code, art. 296, before such article was amended by Act April 23, 1873. Lockett v. State, 40 Tex. 4.

Information taken in connection with the affidavit held sufficient to support a conviction. Phants v. State, 2 App. 398.

Indictment held to sufficiently allege the locality at which the congregation was assembled. Corley v. State, 3 App. 412.

Indictment charged: "Heretofore, to wit, on the first day of December, A. D. 1876, in the county of H. State of T. did willfully disturb a congregation assembled for religious worship and conducting themselves in a lawful manner, by loud and vociferous talking." Held, sufficient as to time, place and manner. Bush v. State, 5 App. 64, citing Corley v. State, 3 App. 412.

Indictment held sufficient as to time, place and manner in which the congregation was disturbed. Bush v. State, 5 App. 64.

A complaint charging that the offense was committed by defendant and another "by loud and vociferous talking and by assaulting each other," held not at fatal variance with an information charging that defendant alone committed the offense. Wood v. State, 11 App. 318.

Indictment held bad for uncertainty, where it failed to allege the means or manner by which the defendant disturbed the congregation. Thompson v. State, 16 App. 159.

Where the state makes no reply to a motion to dismiss the cause on the ground that no complaint was filed as a basis for the information, and no complaint appears in the record, it will be presumed that the record is complete, and the cause will be dismissed. McVea v. State, 35 App. 1, 26 S. W. 834, 28 S. W. 469.

Complaint must be filed as a basis for information. McVea v. State, 35 App. 1, 26 S. W. 834, 28 S. W. 469.

The indictment must state that the congregation alleged to have been disturbed was conducting themselves in a lawful manner. Kizzia v. State, 38 App. 319, 43 S. W. 86.

An indictment charging a defendant with disturbing a congregation "assembled for religious worship in a lawful manner" is insufficient to charge the offense defined by Rev. Pen. Code, art. 296, of disturbing a congregation "assembled for religious worship and conducting themselves in a lawful manner." Kizzia v. State, 38 App. 319, 43 S. W. 86.

Complaint that did not begin with the constitutional requirement "in the name and by the authority of the State of Texas," held absolutely void. Ex parte Jackson, 50 App. 324, 95 S. W. 1047.

An indictment for disturbing religious worship is not sustained by proof that the meeting was for the purpose of practicing singing and took place at a school-house Sunday evening. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 916.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for this offense, a witness was asked by the prosecution, "Was the manner in which the defendant spoke, calculated to disturb the congregation?" He answered in the affirmative. Both question and answer were objected to by the defendant and it was held that the court erred in not sustaining said objections. It was further held that defendant's questions propounded to the same witness, viz.: "Why was it that defendant called you a d—d liar?" "What had you done or said?" were competent, and should have been permitted, not in justification of the offense, but in mitigation of punishment. Calvert v. State, 14 App. 154. Wood v. State, 16 App. 574; Lyons v. State, 25 App. 403, 8 S. W. 643.

Testimony that defendant "caused general confusion, excitement and disturbance among the people there assembled," being a statement of fact and not opinion evidence, was admissible. Lewis v. State, 33 App. 618, 28 S. W. 465.

On a prosecution for disturbing a religious meeting, testimony, elicited from defendant on cross-examination, that he was drinking at the time of the disturbance, is admissible to show his mental condition, and as affecting the weight of his testimony. Lewis v. State, 33 App. 618, 28 S. W. 465.

Evidence that after preaching was over defendant said if the preacher fooled with him he would shoot him was admissible to show intent. McAdoo v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 966.

Testimony that the preacher ceased preaching, and spoke to defendant, and the others participating in the disturbance, about their talking, is not inadmissible as hearsay. McAdoo v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 966.

On trial for disturbing religious worship, it was error to admit evidence that parties had quit attending Sunday school on account of the acts of the defendant. Deskin v. State, 94 App. 439, 93 S. W. 742.

Evidence of threats made by accused after the offense against the minister whose congregation was disturbed was admissible to show accused's animus, and to disprove his claim that the disturbance was not willful. Webb v. State, 63 App. 207, 140 S. W. 95.

In a prosecution for disturbing a congregation assembled for religious worship, evidence that, before accused moved into the community, some one had shot into the church was inadmissible, as it did not tend to show who committed the offense in question. Haynes v. State, 71 App. 31, 159 S. W. 1059.

— Sufficiency.—Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Webb v. State, 63 App. 207, 140 S. W. 95; McElroy v. State, 25 Tex. 507; Hunt v. State, 3 App. 116, 30 Am. Rep. 126; Friedlander v. State, 7 App. 204; Lott v. State, 41 Tex. 121; Dorn v. State, 4 App. 67; Cantrell v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 42; Love v. State, 35 App. 27, 29 S. W. 790; Winnard v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 555; Laird v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 260; Haynes v. State, 71 App. 31, 159 S. W. 1059.

Evidence held insufficient. Richardson v. State, 5 App. 470; Bush v. State, 6 App. 421; Wood v. State, 16 App. 574; Lyons v. State, 25 App. 403, 8 S. W. 643; Denny v. State, 52 App. 158, 105 S. W. 798; Wood v. State, 11 App. 318.

Evidence that defendant disturbed the congregation by talking and laughing with others, held sufficient. McAdoo v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 966.

Instructions.—An instruction that the term "willful" as used in the indictment signifies "without reasonable ground for believing the act to be lawful, or a reckless disregard of the rights of others," is correct. Finney v. State, 29 App. 184, 15 S. W. 175.

Pending the taking of a collection after a religious service, a person known as "Camptime," who had prayed in a very loud manner for defendant as being a wicked and mean person, was requested to sing, when defendant objected, in an ordinary voice, to "Old Camptime doing any more," saying that he would not attend another meeting if Camptime was allowed to run it. Held that defendant was entitled to an instruction that the congregation, to be protected from disturbance, must be conducting itself in a lawful manner. Nash v. State, 32 App. 368, 24 S. W. 32, 26 S. W. 412.

A charge which instructs the jury that the statute protects the congregation "so long as any one of them are on the ground," etc., held not erroneous when the evidence showed that a part of the disturbance occurred in the house during service. Love v. State, 35 App. 27, 29 S. W. 790.

Where it was shown that the disturbance occurred in the church during service, as well as just outside the church immediately after service, it was proper to charge that the statute protects a congregation so long as any of them are on the ground, either before, during, or after service. Love v. State, 35 App. 27, 29 S. W. 790.

In a prosecution for willfully disturbing a congregation, the definition of "willful" as meaning with evil intent, or without reasonable grounds for believing the act to be lawful, is sufficient, without stating that it should be with legal malice. Holmes v. State, 39 App. 231, 45 S. W. 487, 73 Am. St. Rep. 921.

Where the evidence showed that the disturbance occurred in the house, defendant was not prejudiced by a charge that he would be guilty if he disturbed the congregation in or out of the house. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 78 S. W. 1078.

Refusal of an instruction that before defendant could be convicted as principal the evidence must show that he either created the disturbance himself or acted with, or encouraged, those who disturbed the congregation, held error. Denny v. State, 52 App. 158, 105 S. W. 798.

In a prosecution for disturbing a congregation assembled for religious worship, where the instructions defined the word "willfully" as meaning with evil intent, or without reasonable grounds for believing the act to be lawful, it was not necessary to give any other instruction defining the word, nor was it necessary to carry the definition forward in each paragraph of the instructions wherein the word was used. Haynes v. State, 71 App. 31, 159 S. W. 1059.

Where the evidence in a prosecution for disturbing a congregation assembled for religious worship showed that a jug was thrown through the window by one of two persons acting together, and accused admitted that he was with a certain companion, it was not error to refuse to instruct that if accused did not throw the jug, he must be acquitted, for if either threw the jug, both would be guilty. Haynes v. State, 71 App. 31, 159 S. W. 1059.

This article prohibits the running of a poolroom on Sunday. Ex parte Axsom, 63 App. 627, 141 S. W. 793, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 179, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 794.

Art. 300. [197] Not applicable, when.—The preceding article shall not apply to household duties, works of necessity or charity; nor to necessary work on farms or plantations in order to prevent the loss of any crop; nor to the running of steamboats and other water crafts, rail cars, wagon trains, common carriers, nor to the delivery of goods by them or the receiving or storing of said goods by the parties or their agents to whom said goods are delivered; nor to stages carrying the United States mail or passengers; nor to foundries, sugar mills, or herders who have a herd of stock actually gathered and under herd; nor to persons traveling; nor to ferrymen or keepers of toll bridges, keepers of hotels, boarding houses and restaurants and their servants; nor to keepers of livery stables and their servants; nor to any person who conscientiously believes that the seventh or any other day of the week ought to be observed as the Sabbath, and who actually refrains from business and labor on that day for religious reasons. [Act Dec. 2, 1871, p. 62.]

Necessity.—The term "necessity," as employed in the Sunday statutes, is not an absolute, unavoidable, physical necessity, but rather an economic and moral necessity, and the necessity may grow out of or be incident to a particular trade or calling (quoting 5 Words and Phrases, p. 4729). Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 637; Hennersdorf v. State, 25 App. 597, 8 S. W. 926, 8 Am. St. Rep. 448.

The operation of an ice factory on Sunday comes within the exception. Hennersdorf v. State, 25 App. 597, 8 S. W. 926, 8 Am. St. Rep. 448. And, likewise, does the shoeing of a stage horse. Nelson v. State, Id., 599, 8 S. W. 927.

Where no special circumstances exist, the work of a barber in shaving customers on Sunday is not such a work of necessity as is excepted. Ex parte Kennedy, 42 App. 148, 58 S. W. 129, 51 L. R. A. 270.

Where defendant engaged in farm work on Sunday, which there was evidence to show was not a work of necessity, a verdict convicting him of violating the Sunday law was supported by the evidence. Lee v. State, 50 App. 643, 100 S. W. 156.

This article prohibits the running of a poolroom. Ex parte Axsom, 63 App. 627, 141 S. W. 793, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 179, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 794.

A contract to construct a building stipulated that the owner would pay the contractor $50 per day for each day prior to a designated future date that he should complete the building, and that the contractor would pay $50 per day for every day subsequent to such date it took to complete the building. The building was not completed on the designated date, and thereafter the contractor worked his men on Sunday, paying them double wages. The extra pay allowed for Sunday work amounted to more than $50 per day. Held, that the work on Sunday was not a work of necessity, and an employé working for the contractor was properly convicted of violating the Sunday law. Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 637.

Art. 301. [198] Horse racing, gaming, etc., on Sunday.—Any person who shall run, or be engaged in running, any horse race, or who shall permit or allow the use of any nine or ten pin alley, or who shall be engaged in match shooting, or any species of gaming for money or other consideration, within the limits of any city or town on Sunday, shall be fined not less than twenty nor more than fifty dollars. [Act Dec. 2, 1871, p. 62.]

Constitutional questions.—This article is constitutional. Shook v. State, 25 App. 345, 8 S. W. 329.

Gaming.—This article embraces any species of gaming for money; and as fast as any game for money became prohibited by law, this article attached thereto. Borders v. State (Cr. App.) 66 S. W. 1102.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 128, 131-133.

Indictment must allege the name of the person or persons with whom the accused engaged in gaming. Shook v. State, 25 App. 345, 8 S. W. 329.

Art. 302. [199] Selling goods on Sunday.—Any merchant, grocer, or dealer in wares or merchandise, or trader in any business whatsoever, or the proprietor of any place of public amusement, or the agent or employé of any such person, who shall sell, barter, or permit his place of business or place of public amusement to be open for the purpose of traffic or public amusement on Sunday, shall be fined not less than twenty nor more than fifty dollars. The term, place of public amusement, shall be construed to mean circuses, theaters, variety theaters and such other amusements as are exhibited and for which an admission fee is charged; and shall also include dances at disorderly houses, low dives and places of like character, with or without fees for admission. 1. Historical.—Before the changes made in this article by the Act of April 2, 1887, amending the Act of April 10, 1883, it read as follows: "Any merchant, grocer, or dealer in wares or merchandise, or trader in any lawful business whatsoever, or the agent or employé of any such persons, who shall sell or barter on Sunday, shall be fined not less than twenty, nor more than fifty dollars; provided, this article shall not apply to markets or dealers in provisions as to sales of provisions made by them before 9 o'clock a. m., nor the sale of burial or shrouding material; provided, the sale of newspapers, ice, and milk at any hour in the day shall be permissible; provided further, that nothing in this title shall be construed to prevent the sending or receiving of telegraph messages." As adopted in the Revised Code it read as follows: "Any merchant, grocer, or dealer in wares or merchandise, or trader in any lawful business whatsoever, who shall barter or sell on Sunday, shall be fined not less than twenty nor more than fifty dollars; provided, this article shall not apply to markets or dealers in provisions as to sales made by them before 9 o'clock a. m." As enacted by the act of Dec. 2, 1871, it read as follows: "Any merchant, grocer, or dealer in wares or merchandise, or trader in any lawful business whatsoever, who shall sell or barter on Sunday, between the hours of 9 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m., within the limits of any city or town, shall be fined in a sum of not less than twenty nor more than fifty dollars; provided, that nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prohibit the sale of drugs and medicines on Sunday." 2 Pas. Dig., article 6504.

2. Legislative power.—A municipal charter which attempts and purports to confer upon a "city court" exclusive jurisdiction of all violations of the Sunday law within the city limits between the hours of 12 o'clock Saturday night and 9 o'clock Sunday morning, and between the hours of 4 o'clock p. m. Sunday and 12 o'clock Sunday night, is unconstitutional and absolutely void, in that it attempts a divestiture or destruction by the legislature of the power and jurisdiction of justices' courts created and provided for by the state constitution. Ex parte Ginnocchio, 30 App. 584, 18 S. W. 82; Todd v. State, 30 App. 667, 18 S. W. 642.

It is within the power of the Legislature to require cessation of labor on certain days periodically. Ex parte Roquemore, 60 App. 282, 131 S. W. 1101, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1186.

3. Municipal powers.—See art. 965, C. C. P., and notes.

4. Validity.—Sunday laws are constitutional as within the police power of the State. Gabel v. Houston, 29 Tex. 335; Bohl v. State, 3 App. 683; Usener v. State, 8 App. 177; Ex parte Sundstrom, 25 App. 133, 8 S. W. 207; Ex parte Brown (Cr. App.) 61 S. W. 396.

This article as to sales by merchants, is constitutional. Ex parte Sundstrom, 25 App. 133, 8 S. W. 207; Whitcomb v. State, 30 App. 269, 17 S. W. 258; Todd v. State, 30 App. 667, 18 S. W. 642.

This article is not class legislation. Searcy v. State, 40 App. 460, 50 S. W. 699, 51 S. W. 1119, 53 S. W. 344.

The Sunday law is not violative of Const. art. 16, § 20, known as the Local Option section, or suspended as to a licensed liquor dealer. Bennett v. State, 49 App. 294, 92 S. W. 415.

5. Construction.—This article is not affected by nor is it in conflict with any of the provisions of the Baskin-McGregor law, regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors. Ex parte Wright, 56 App. 504, 120 S. W. 868.

The purpose of the Baskin-McGregor law is to punish one selling intoxicating liquors without a license at any time, whether on Sunday or week day. The general Sunday law punishes infractions by sales on Sunday, whether with or without license. Id.

6. Terms defined.—"Open," as used herein, means that the house should be closed against all traffic. Whitcomb v. State, 30 App. 269, 17 S. W. 258.

In a prosecution for keeping open a liquor saloon for traffic on Sunday the court charged that, if the jury believed defendant kept his saloon open for the purpose of "traffic" on Sunday he should be convicted; and "that the term 'traffic' as employed has its usual and commonly accepted meaning." Held that no further definition of the word "traffic" was necessary. Levine v. State, 35 App. 647, 34 S. W. 969.

This article means the entire day, from Saturday midnight to Sunday midnight. Muckenfuss v. State, 55 App. 229, 116 S. W. 51, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 783, 131 Am. St. Rep. 813, 16 Ann. Cas. 768.

A base ball park is not within the term, "and such other amusements for which admission fee is charged," the rule being that, where general words follow an enumeration of particular things in the statute, such words must be held to include only such matters or objects as are of the same kind as those specifically enumerated. Ex parte Roquemore, 60 App. 282, 131 S. W. 1101, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1186.

The word "theater" does not mean the building, but the performance or exhibition given; and, while a moving picture show is not a theater, it falls within the prohibition of the statute as one of "such other amusements" prohibited (citing 8 Words & Phrases, p. 6937). Ex parte Lingenfelter, 64 App. 30, 142 S. W. 555, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 765.

The word "employé," is synonymous with servant, a "servant" being a person employed to labor for the pleasure or interest of another, or as a legal term, one employed to render service or assistance in some trade or vocation, but without authority to act as agent in place of his employer; and, while an "agent," in the broadest sense of the word, may be construed to have the same power of authority as his principal, no such inference can be drawn from the term "employé"; and by the use of such terms it was intended to include any subordinate, though without the authority of his principal or the proprietor, who, in any way, acted together with the proprietor in the commission of the offense. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604.

7. Elements of offense.—The offense is complete if the place is kept open for the purpose of traffic whether there has been a sale or not. Armstrong v. State, 47 App. 510, 84 S. W. 827; Brown v. State, 38 App. 597, 44 S. W. 176.

It is immaterial that the purchaser did not pay for the article sold by defendant. Elsner v. State, 30 Tex. 524.

The statute does not prohibit the gift of intoxicating liquors on Sunday. Keller v. State, 23 App. 259, 4 S. W. 886.

8. Former jeopardy.—An acquittal of a saloon keeper of the charge of permitting his place of business to be open on Sunday, February 24, 1895, was not a bar to a prosecution for keeping his place open on Sunday, August 10, 1895, in the absence of proof that the two charges referred to the same transaction. Fehr v. State, 36 App. 93, 35 S. W. 381, 650.

9. Separate offenses.—Each act of sale is a separate offense. Albrecht v. State, 8 App. 313; Mosely v. State, 18 App. 311.

10. Persons liable.—Principals and accomplices, see notes under articles 74 and 79.

Defendant, a bar-tender, being present and in control of the porter, he was liable for the sale, though the porter waited on the customer. Collins v. State, 34 App. 95, 29 S. W. 274.

A sale of goods, wares or liquors on Sunday is not a violation of law, unless brought within the inhibition of this article, and must be by a "merchant, grocer, or dealer in wares or merchandise, or trader in any business," etc. Meeks v. State, 32 App. 420, 24 S. W. 98; Johnson v. State, 34 App. 106, 29 S. W. 472.

The statute includes any person in the employ of the merchant or dealer, in any capacity about the particular business, even though not as salesman, and an employé of any kind, though he did not in fact make the sale as agent, if he aided in it, is a principal. Burnett v. State, 42 App. 600, 62 S. W. 1063.

A party violating the Sunday law, is amenable in his individual capacity, though he belongs to a firm. Morris v. State, 48 App. 562, 89 S. W. 832.

A ticket agent of an amusement company held liable. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604.

11. Barbers.—In absence of special circumstances, a barber shaving his customers on Sunday violates this article. Ex parte Kennedy, 42 App. 148, 58 S. W. 129, 51 L. R. A. 270.

12. Farmers.—To constitute one guilty under this article he must come within the terms or definition of the statute: i. e., he must be a merchant, grocer or dealer in wares or merchandise or trader in any business whatsoever, etc. A farmer selling products from his farm produced by his own labor does not come within the statute. Hanks v. State, 50 App. 577, 99 S. W. 1011, 1012.

13. Liquor sales.—See arts. 615, 616, 623.

Whisky is ordinarily regarded as a beverage and not as a medicine, especially when not sold as a medicine or by a druggist. Searcy v. State, 40 App. 460, 50 S. W. 699, 51 S. W. 1119, 53 S. W. 344.

The local option law treats whisky as a medicine, and authorizes its sale under certain conditions, and when the conditions are complied with, such sale can be made in a drug store in local option territory as well as outside such territory. Watson v. State, 46 App. 138, 79 S. W. 31.

A hotel or restaurant keeper, though authorized to pursue his occupation on Sunday, is not thereby authorized to violate any prohibitory law. Whether the beer served with the meal was a gift or sale, properly submitted to the jury. Savage v. State, 50 App. 199, 88 S. W. 351.

14. Drugs.—In a prosecution for selling Florida water on Sunday, evidence which tended to show that such water was a drug or medicine and was sold as such did not authorize a conviction. Todd v. State, 30 App. 667, 18 S. W. 642.

Drugs and medicines are excepted from the statutes prohibiting the sale of goods on Sunday. Todd v. State, 30 App. 667, 18 S. W. 642.

15. Public amusements.—This article includes moving picture shows. Ex parte Lingenfelter, 64 App. 30, 142 S. W. 555, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 765; Lempke v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 217.

An assembling of persons on Sunday to unlawfully open a theater would not be a violation of this article, unless an admission fee was charged. Ex parte Jacobson, 55 App. 237, 115 S. W. 1193.

The opening of places of amusement on Sunday is not a violation of the law unless an admission fee is charged. Ex parte Jacobson, 55 App. 237, 115 S. W. 1194.

A theater giving more than one exhibition on Sunday cannot be punished for each performance. It is only one offense. Muckenfuss v. State, 55 App. 229, 116 S. W. 51, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 783, 131 Am. St. Rep. 813, 16 Ann. Cas. 768.

This article does not prohibit the owner of a baseball park from permitting a game to be played therein on Sunday for admission fee. Ex parte Roquemore, 60 App. 282, 131 S. W. 1101, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1186.

This article was intended to prevent the Sunday theater when an admission was charged thereto. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604.

Defendant, in a prosecution under this article as the agent and employé of an amusement company, was shown to have been the ticket agent and in the ticket office of the building in which the performance was given, and to have sold admission tickets thereto, but urged that under the statute only the proprietor could "permit" the place to be open; and hence that no mere subordinate could be convicted thereunder. Held, that the intent of the section was to make it an offense for any agent or employé of the proprietor to do any act toward keeping the theater open and running on Sunday, whether he had control of it, or could permit it to be opened, or not; and hence that defendant was guilty of the offense. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604.

A "theater" is a playhouse, a building for the representation of a theatrical performance. Gould v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 172.

The opening of theaters and moving picture shows on Sunday, and the exhibition therein of vaudeville performances and plays, or moving picture scenes, where a fee is charged for entrance thereto, violates this article. Ex parte Zuccaro, 72 App. 214, 162 S. W. 844.

A contract for services of vaudeville performers is not void as in violation of this article, where the contract called for no services upon Sunday except such as might be lawfully given. Bergere v. Parker (Civ. App.) 170 S. W. 808.

Under this article, held, that a contract with an amusement company could not be enforced in so far as it included Sunday exhibitions. La Crandall v. Ledbetter, 15 Fed. 702, 86 C. C. A. 570.

16. Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 134.

An indictment charging the selling of beer on Sunday need not so describe the offense as to entirely dispense with proof of its identity, where the judgment is pleaded in bar of the subsequent prosecution. Albrecht v. State, 8 App. 313.

An indictment should allege that defendant was a merchant, grocer or dealer in wares or merchandise or a trader in a lawful business. Archer v. State, 10 App. 482.

It is necessary, therefore, that the indictment shall, with reasonable certainty, specify the sale alleged, as the offense for which the accused is to be tried. An indictment which alleged that the defendant on a certain Sunday sold "merchandise," without describing the merchandise, or naming the person to whom he sold it, or otherwise identifying such sale, was held bad. Mosely v. State, 18 App. 311. The indictment should allege that the defendant, at the time of the offense, was a merchant, grocer, dealer in wares and merchandise, or a trader in a lawful business as the case may be, and it is also necessary to prove such allegation. Archer v. State, 10 App. 482. An indictment which alleged that the defendant was a "liquor dealer" was held sufficient upon the ground that "liquor" is "merchandise." Day v. State, 21 App. 213, 17 S. W. 263. When the allegation is that the defendant is a "dealer," proof that he was merely a clerk in the establishment does not sustain the allegation. Archer v. State, 10 App. 482. Where an indictment charged the sale of "whisky" on Sunday, it was held that the charge was sustained by proof that he sold a beverage known as "whisky cocktail" on Sunday. Galloway v. State, 23 App. 398, 5 S. W. 246.

An indictment charging defendant with selling drinks of whisky, "said person being then and there a liquor dealer" is sufficient; it not being necessary to allege that defendant was a "trader in unlawful business" or "a retail liquor dealer." Day v. State, 21 App. 213, 17 S. W. 262.

Where the indictment alleged in separate counts the keeping open of a place of business and also a sale therein on a certain day, the state was not bound to elect on which count to proceed; it not being necessary to set out such different states of facts in separate counts. Brown v. State, 33 App. 597, 44 S. W. 176, see Hall v. State, 41 App. 423, 55 S. W. 173; Herod v. State, Id. 597, 56 S. W. 59.

Information was insufficient in not alleging that the defendant was the employé or clerk of his employer and sold the liquor belonging to his said employer as his employé or clerk. Behrens v. State, 42 App. 629, 62 S. W. 568.

Indictment not invalid because it charges that, as liquor dealer "or" keeper of a bar-room, defendant permitted his saloon to be opened on Sunday for traffic. Hofheintz v. State, 45 App. 117, 74 S. W. 310.

Not necessary to specify the particular business defendant was engaged in, and allegation that he was a dealer in wares and merchandise is sufficient. The further allegation that he permitted his place of business to be opened for traffic on Sunday, can be sustained without proof of a specific sale. Griffith v. State, 48 App. 575, 89 S. W. 832. Armstrong v. State, 47 App. 510, 84 S. W. 827.

An information alleging that accused, as agent and employé of the proprietor of a theater, permitted a theatrical performance to be given on Sunday, to which a fee was charged for admission, charges an offense. Gould v. State, 61 App. 195, 134 S. W. 695.

17. Pleading and proof.—Proof that defendant was a clerk in a saloon was insufficient to sustain an allegation that he was a dealer. Archer v. State, 10 App. 482.

Where the indictment charged the sale of whiskey on Sunday and the proof showed a sale of "whiskey cocktail," there was no variance.—Galloway v. State, 23 App. 398, 5 S. W. 246.

In a prosecution for permitting one's place of business to be open for the purpose of traffic on Sunday, it is not necessary to prove a sale. Griffith v. State, 48 App. 575, 89 S. W. 832.

18. Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction for selling on Sunday. Caspary v. State, 14 App. 567.

A conviction of selling liquor is not sustained by proof of a gift. Keller v. State, 23 App. 259, 4 S. W. 886.

In a prosecution for selling liquor on Sunday, it is not reversible error to allow the prosecuting attorney to ply defendant with certain questions on cross-examination, intended to show that he had no regard for the Sunday law, and that he was in the habit of violating it, where he answers in the negative. Levine v. State, 35 App. 647, 34 S. W. 969.

In a prosecution for selling liquors on Sunday the prosecuting attorney may ask defendant on his cross-examination as a witness how many times he had been convicted for violating the liquor and Sunday laws. Levine v. State, 35 App. 647, 34 S. W. 969.

Where defendant is testifying in a case against him for keeping his place of business open on a named Sunday for traffic, State can prove by him that he has kept it open on other Sundays. Dickey v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 628.

In a prosecution for selling liquor on Sunday, information charging that accused sold as the agent and employé of a certain firm, evidence that it was generally understood that the firm were the owners of the saloon where the sale occurred is inadmissible, the proper method of proving ownership being by the license, bond, etc. Earl v. State, 44 App. 493, 72 S. W. 376.

The county clerk testified that he kept a stub book from which retail liquor licenses were issued. The stub book showed the issuance of the license to the firm employing accused, its date and expiration, etc. Held, that the stub book was inadmissible. Earl v. State, 44 App. 493, 72 S. W. 376.

Admission of evidence of other indictments charging defendant with similar offenses about the same time to show the fact of ownership as stated in the other indictments held error. Custer v. State, 48 App. 144, 86 S. W. 757.

Defendant delivered the whiskey and declined to receive the proffered payment, but did not protest when the money was left at a usual place on the counter, or offer to return it. Proof of sale was sufficient. Morris v. State, 48 App. 562, 89 S. W. 832.

Competent for State to prove by defendant that he was an habitual violator of the Sunday law. Morris v. State, 48 App. 562, 89 S. W. 832.

Where one not under arrest was called before the grand jury, at the time evidently believing he was under suspicion for violating the Sunday law, and was informed that such jury was investigating violations of such law, and without being warned was questioned on the subject, his statement then made may be used against him on a trial for violating such law. Smith v. State, 48 App. 509, 90 S. W. 37.

Evidence showing the club room was a subterfuge, conviction was proper. Ward v. State, 55 App. 362, 116 S. W. 1154.

Defendant admitting on cross-examination that he had a license, there was no reversible error in admitting in evidence a stub book kept by the clerk. Ward v. State, 55 App. 362, 116 S. W. 1154.

On a trial for permitting a theatrical performance on Sunday, testimony of witnesses as to what took place in the building on the occasion was admissible. Gould v. State, 61 App. 195, 134 S. W. 695.

In a prosecution of an employé of the lessee of a theater for permitting a Sunday performance, the lease held admissible. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 604.

19. Instructions.—Refusal of an instruction that defendants could not be convicted unless the evidence showed that their place of business was open on Sunday for the purpose of traffic with their knowledge or consent, held error, since the presumption that defendants knew what was going on at their place of business could be rebutted by evidence. Whitcomb v. State, 30 App. 269, 17 S. W. 258.

An instruction held erroneous where it submitted to the jury all phases of the statute instead of restricting them to a consideration of the phase charged in the indictment,—that defendants permitted their place to be open on Sunday. Whitcomb v. State, 30 App. 269, 17 S. W. 258.

A requested instruction that defendants could not be convicted unless their saloon was permitted by them to be open for traffic and that the mere fact that liquor was sold on Sunday would not be sufficient to convict if the doors were closed, held properly refused as misleading where it appeared that the doors were all closed and that persons got in at the side door which was not locked. Whitcomb v. State, 30 App. 269, 17 S. W. 258.

Refusal of an instruction to acquit defendant unless the sale, if any, made by him, was made as a merchant, grocer, or dealer in wares or merchandise, held error. Hanks v. State, 50 App. 577, 99 S. W. 1011.

20. Judgment.—Judgment against plural defendants prosecuted to conviction for misdemeanors must be several and not joint. Whitcomb v. State, 30 App. 269, 17 S. W. 258.

21. Penalty.—On the question of increased penalty, the court properly admitted in evidence memoranda orders of a corporation court showing a previous conviction for a similar offense, and it was not necessary to show that such judgment was formally entered by the corporation court. Muckenfuss v. State, 55 App. 216, 117 S. W. 853.

Nor was it necessary that the memoranda judgments show a conviction for a similar offense of the identical class; sufficient if it showed conviction for violating the Sunday law in any of the prescribed modes. Muckenfuss v. State, 55 App. 216, 117 S. W. 853.

22. Recognizance on appeal.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 919.

23. Injunction.—An injunction to restrain one from keeping his barber shop open on Sunday will not issue at the suit of one who shows no property rights invaded, but who merely seeks to restrain competition of a business rival. York v. Yzaguirre, 31 Civ. App. 26, 71 S. W. 563.

Art. 303. [200] Exceptions from operation of preceding article.—The preceding article shall not apply to markets or dealers in provisions as to sales of provisions made by them before 9 o'clock a. m., nor to the sale of burial or shrouding material, newspapers, ice, ice cream, milk, nor to the sending of telegraph or telephone messages at any hour of the day, nor to keepers of drug stores, hotels, boarding houses, restaurants, livery stables, bath houses, or ice dealers, nor to telegraph or telephone offices. [Act April 13, 1891, p. 173.]

Validity.—This article is not class legislation. Searcy v. State, 40 App. 460, 50 S. W. 699, 51 S. W. 1119, 53 S. W. 344.

Druggists.—The legislature is authorized, under its police power, to exempt certain articles of merchandise as common necessities, from the inhibition of sale. Searcy v. State, 40 App. 460, 50 S. W. 699, 51 S. W. 1119, 53 S. W. 344.

This article exempts druggists selling drugs and medicines (Todd v. State, 30 App. 667, 18 S. W. 642), or intoxicants under the local option law. Watson v. State, 46 App. 138, 79 S. W. 31.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 134.

It is not necessary to negative the exceptions. Archer v. State, 10 App. 482; Mosely v. State, 18 App. 311.

OF PERJURY

Art.	Art.
304. "Perjury" defined.	308. In what sort of proceeding.
305. Not perjury, when.	309. Immaterial statement not perjury.
306. Oath must be legally administered.	310. Punishment.
307. And about something past or present.	311. Perjury in capital cases.

Article 304. [201] "Perjury" defined.—Perjury is a false statement, either written or verbal, deliberately and wilfully made, relating to something past or present, under the sanction of an oath, or such affirmation as is by law equivalent to an oath, where such oath or affirmation is legally administered, under circumstances in which an oath or affirmation is required by law, or is necessary for the prosecution or defense of any private right, or for the ends of public justice. 1. Elements of offense.—The essential elements are 1. A false statement, either written or verbal. 2. Must have been deliberately and wilfully made. 3. Must relate to something past or present. 4. Must be made under the sanction of an oath or its equivalent affirmation. 5. The oath or affirmation must have been administered under circumstances in which it is required by law, or is necessary for the prosecution or defense of a private right, or for the ends of public justice. West v. State, 8 App. 119; State v. Peters, 42 Tex. 7; Warren v. State, 57 App. 262, 122 S. W. 541.

Where the court has jurisdiction and power to administer an oath to a witness, his false statement under oath constitutes perjury though the jury has not been properly sworn. Smith v. State, 31 App. 315, 20 S. W. 707; Schooler v. State, 52 App. 331, 106 S. W. 359.

Any deliberate and wilful false statement by a witness in answer to questions is perjury though the questions would be too general to form the basis of his impeachment. McDonough v. State, 47 App. 227, 84 S. W. 594, 122 Am. St. Rep. 684 (overruling Meeles v. State, 32 App. 420, 24 S. W. 98; McMurtry v. State, 33 App. 521, 43 S. W. 1010; Higgins v. State, 38 App. 539, 43 S. W. 1012).

False testimony before grand jury. Pipes v. State, 26 App. 318, 9 S. W. 614; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1071.

Defendant on trial of G. for theft testified that he saw M. and not G. in possession of the property. On subsequent trial of M. he testified that he saw G. and not M. in possession of the property and denied that he had testified otherwise on the trial of G.; held, immaterial which statement was true. Whitaker v. State, 37 App. 479, 36 S. W. 253.

If a false statement is material and is wilfully and knowingly made, it is perjury whether in the conjunctive or disjunctive form. Fry v. State, 36 App. 582, 37 S. W. 741, 38 S. W. 168.

Where the party is charged with having committed perjury in trial in justice court, State must show the jury in justice court was sworn. Curtley v. State, 42 App. 227, 59 S. W. 45.

Perjury committed on the taking of depositions is complete when the depositions are taken, though they are never filed. Manning v. State, 46 App. 326, 81 S. W. 957, 3 Ann. Cas. 867.

False testimony in a civil action for the collection of a note, that a receipt, purporting to have been signed by the plaintiff and to show payment of the note, had been executed by the plaintiff, is perjury. Barber v. State, 64 App. 96, 142 S. W. 577.

False testimony by accused upon the trial of an action in justice court that he was an infant at the time he incurred certain obligations constitutes perjury, though the cause was continued upon the claim of plaintiff that it was surprised by such testimony. Poulter v. State, 70 App. 197, 157 S. W. 166.

Where the grand jury investigating violations of the law prohibiting the sale and storing of intoxicating liquors investigated the question whether certain persons had received liquor, and stored the same in a house rented by a witness before the grand jury, and whether he knew that the persons had received liquor on a designated date and stored it in the house, the false testimony of the witness that no liquor had been received and stored in his house constituted perjury. Trinkle v. State, 71 App. 64, 158 S. W. 544.

On a trial for perjury predicated on accused giving false testimony in the county court on his trial for crime, the state need not prove that the jury in the county court was sworn. Mares v. State, 71 App. 303, 158 S. W. 1130.

"Perjury" is a false statement deliberately and wilfully made. Johnson v. State, 71 App. 428, 160 S. W. 964.

2. — Deliberation and wilfulness.—Among the ingredients essential to constitute perjury the false statement assigned must have been made by the accused deliberately and wilfully; his mind must have been deliberate; he must, in such mind, have made the false statement deliberately and wilfully; he must have known the statement to be false, and with such knowledge he must deliberately have made it. To this extent the offense of perjury involves the condition and status of the mind of the accused; and whether intoxicated at the time he made the false statement, and incapable of mental deliberation and criminal intent, and therefore incapable of perjury, is a proper inquiry to be submitted to the jury. See in extenso the opinion of Hurt, presiding judge, in elaboration of the question, and for a review of authorities thereon. (Overruled by Evers v. State, 31 App. 318, 20 S. W. 744, 18 L. R. A. 421, 37 Am. St. Rep. 811.) Lyle v. State, 31 App. 103, 19 S. W. 903.

It is immaterial whether accused swore to facts set forth according to the best of his knowledge and belief, or that they were absolutely true. Beach v. State, 32 App. 240, 22 S. W. 976.

If defendant believed the statement he made to be true he is not guilty of perjury. Butler v. State, 36 App. 444, 37 S. W. 746.

"Wilful" means with evil intent or legal malice, or without legal ground to believe the act lawful, and so the jury must be instructed. Windom v. State, 56 App. 198, 119 S. W. 309.

In a prosecution for uttering a false affidavit, the fact that accused was suffering from an illness at the time does not prevent the issue that it was not wilfully and deliberately made. Welch v. State, 71 App. 17, 157 S. W. 946.

3. — Jurisdiction of proceedings in which perjury was committed.—See Manning v. State, 46 App. 326, 81 S. W. 957, 3 Ann. Cas. 867.

A false statement may be assigned for perjury if it was made in the course of a judicial proceeding before a court of competent jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the proceeding, although its jurisdiction had not actually attached. Anderson v. State, 24 App. 705, 7 S. W. 40; Higgenbotham v. State, 24 App. 505, 6 S. W. 201.

The perjury assigned in this case was alleged to have been committed on the trial of one Coy for the murder of one Jackson in Wilson county. Soon after the killing of Jackson, Coy killed one Elder, in Karnes county, and fled to Mexico, whence he was extradited for the murder of Elder, but not for the murder of Jackson. Coy was then indicted and put upon trial in Wilson county for the murder of Jackson, which trial resulted in a mistrial. No objection nor plea to the jurisdiction of the district court of Wilson county was interposed upon the trial for the murder of Jackson, but, soon after the mistrial, Coy sought his discharge by the writ of habeas corpus upon the ground that, not having been extradited for the murder of Jackson, he was illegally restrained of his liberty upon the charge of the murder of Jackson. Upon the hearing of the writ it was adjudged that the district court of Wilson county had no jurisdiction to try him for the Jackson murder, and he was discharged from restraint under that charge. The contention in this case is that the district court of Wilson county, having no jurisdiction to try Coy for the murder of Jackson, the accused did not, and could not, commit legal perjury on that trial. Held: 1. The district court of Wilson county had jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the prosecution—murder—against Coy. 2. It did not have jurisdiction over Coy's person to try him for the murder of Jackson, because he was not extradited for that particular murder. 3. Jurisdiction over the person is a matter subject to the objection or waiver only of the person over whom it is being, or is sought to be, exercised. 4. If such person submits to the jurisdiction of the court over his person, and to trial, without objection, he waives his privilege, whatever it may be, and the proceedings of the court trying him, at the most, are merely voidable, and voidable only at his instance, and can not be questioned by any other person. 5. The trial of Coy for the murder of Jackson was a legal proceeding, and the court trying him was a court of competent jurisdiction for the purpose of this case. Wherefore the contention of the defense is not tenable. Cordway v. State, 25 App. 405, 8 S. W. 670.

An indictment for perjury will lie for giving false testimony upon an examining trial, though the complaint upon which the trial was had was defective, and should have been quashed on motion. Waddle v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 591.

Accused was in justice court convicted of a gaming offense, the charge being made by complaint only. Thereafter he appealed to the county court, and the prosecutor, discovering the complaint to be defective, moved to dismiss and filed a new complaint. Accused waived notice and the filing of an information, consenting to go to trial immediately upon the complaint. Held, that the county court had jurisdiction over the prosecution, and accused, having given materially false testimony, was guilty of perjury. Etheridge v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1031.

4. — Affidavits.—Perjury may be assigned upon an affidavit made in support of a motion for new trial, although such affidavit be made by a person other than the defendant in the cause in which the same is made, and although the motion for new trial was not filed in proper time. Hernandez v. State, 18 App. 134, 51 Am. Rep. 295.

Perjury may be assigned upon oral testimony taken before an examining court, although such testimony is required to be reduced to writing. Covey v. State, 23 App. 388, 5 S. W. 283.

Perjury, under this article, may be assigned upon the affidavit of a public school teacher to the voucher or check drawn by the trustees for his pay, such as is contemplated by article 3962 (3776) of the Revised Statutes of 1895. O'Bryan v. State, 27 App. 339, 11 S. W. 443.

Sheriff's affidavit for fees conveying witness held to be an oath for the "prosecution of a private right." Shely v. State, 35 App. 190, 32 S. W. 901.

Perjury cannot be assigned on an affidavit made for the purpose of obtaining a new trial in an examining court. Butler v. State, 36 App. 483, 38 S. W. 46; Id., 36 App. 444, 37 S. W. 746.

The offense of false swearing is consummated when accused signs and swears to a false affidavit, even though he does not use the affidavit for the purpose for which it was intended. Welch v. State, 71 App. 17, 157 S. W. 946.

5. False swearing.—Perjury and false swearing distinguished, see notes under art. 312, post.

6. Defenses.—No one can be compelled to give evidence against himself, but this right may be waived, and it confers no immunity for false testimony. Mattingly v. State, 8 App. 345. See Kitchen v. State, 26 App. 165, 9 S. W. 461; Pipes v. State, 26 App. 318, 9 S. W. 614.

In a prosecution for making a false affidavit, it is no defense to show that accused's attorney advised or suggested to him that he make such affidavit as a means of procuring a continuance. Welch v. State, 71 App. 17, 157 S. W. 946.

That the question asked of a witness before the grand jury is too general to form a basis for his impeachment will not preclude a false answer from being ground for a conviction of perjury. Scott v. State, 72 App. 26, 160 S. W. 960.

7. Convicts.—An exconvict may be prosecuted and convicted of perjury. (Following Williams v. State, 28 App. 392, 12 S. W. 1103; Shannon v. State, 28 App. 474, 13 S. W. 599.) Murphy v. State, 33 App. 314, 26 S. W. 395.

8. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 135-138.
See Code Crim. Proc. art. 465.

9. Evidence.—Number of witnesses and corroboration, see Code Cr. Proc., art. 806 and notes.

Directing acquittal for insufficiency of corroboration, see Code Cr. Proc., art. 805 and notes.

Perjury may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Rogers v. State, 35 App. 221, 32 S. W. 1044; Trinkle v. State, 71 App. 64, 158 S. W. 544; Miles v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 567; Hart v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 152. See, also, notes under art. 806, Code Cr. Proc.

In a prosecution for perjury in giving false testimony, evidence held to support a verdict of guilty. Waddle v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 591; Freeman v. State, 44 App. 496, 72 S. W. 1001.

In a prosecution for slander against one who called a female a whore, accused testified that he had had intercourse with the prosecutrix. Thereafter accused was charged with perjury. A witness testified that the prosecutrix admitted to her that she had intercourse with a named man. Held, that the witness could not be contradicted by evidence of statements by the man named that he never had any improper relations with the prosecutrix. Cox v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1067; Reed v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1065.

The papers in the case in which perjury was committed cannot be used as evidence, but only as inducement to show fact of judicial proceeding in which perjury is alleged to have been committed. Ross v. State, 40 App. 352, 50 S. W. 336.

Under the law of this state an information is insufficient for any purpose unless founded upon a complaint, filed therewith, charging an offense. The indictment in this case charged that the perjury was committed on the trial of a judicial proceeding in the county court, "wherein one Bean was duly and legally charged by information," etc. To support the allegation of jurisdiction of the county court, the state introduced in evidence the information, but not the complaint. Held, that the proof was insufficient. Wilson v. State, 27 App. 47, 10 S. W. 749, 11 Am. St. Rep. 180; Smith v. State, 27 App. 50, 10 S. W. 751.

That the court was in session and a judicial proceeding pending when perjury was committed was sufficiently proved by oral testimony without introducing the records where no objection to the manner of proof was urged. King v. State, 32 App. 463, 24 S. W. 514.

Where perjury is assigned on testimony of defendant at trial of another case against him, a judgment of acquittal of the offense therein charged is inadmissible as evidence. Hutcherson v. State, 33 App. 67, 24 S. W. 908.

On a trial for giving false testimony before a grand jury regarding a theft by third persons, testimony tending to prove the theft including the confessions of such third persons, though not made in defendant's presence, was admissible on the questions of falsity and materiality. Martin v. State, 33 App. 317, 26 S. W. 400.

The coroner's certificate of the inquest bore a wrong date; held that it was competent to show the actual date of the inquest. Rogers v. State, 35 App. 221, 32 S. W. 1044.

On trial for perjury assigned on evidence given in another case against defendant, the judgment in the former case is inadmissible in evidence. Hutcherson v. State, 33 App. 67, 24 S. W. 908.

In a trial for perjury, it was held relevant and competent for the state to prove by the attorney who represented the defendant in the trial in which the perjury was alleged to have been committed, his reason and purpose for having the defendant to testify in said cause, such testimony tending to show that the defendant did not make the alleged false statements through inadvertence or mistake, or under agitation. Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662; Cordway v. State, 25 App. 405, 8 S. W. 670.

While it may be shown by the minutes of the court that the grand jury before whom defendant testified was legally impaneled, the failure to do so is not cause for acquittal where this is otherwise shown without objection. Foster v. State, 32 App. 39, 22 S. W. 21.

When perjury is assigned upon one of two conflicting statements by defendant, the pleader should select a statement, assign it for perjury, and prove that it was false, and such proof cannot be made alone by a statement in conflict with that assigned. Whitaker v. State, 37 App. 479, 36 S. W. 253.

Testimony held insufficient to support conviction. Butler v. State, 36 App. 433, 38 S. W. 46; Id., 36 App. 444, 37 S. W. 746.

Defendant was charged with swearing that he did not see one K. with a pistol on a certain occasion. Two witnesses testified that on a bright moonlight night K., in the immediate presence of defendant, drew out his pistol and struck at one of the witnesses; held, that this is tantamount to positive proof that defendant saw such pistol. Franklin v. State, 38 App. 346, 43 S. W. 85.

Evidence of facts tending to show that when false affidavit was made, defendant believed the statements therein to be true was admissible. Luna v. State, 44 App. 482, 72 S. W. 378.

Facts and circumstances incriminating the person upon whose trial the perjury was committed, are necessary facts on the trial for perjury. Freeman v. State, 44 App. 496, 72 S. W. 1001.

Where the parol evidence in connection with so much of the judgment as was introduced sufficiently identified the case in which the perjury was committed, it was not necessary to introduce the complaint and information. Curtis v. State, 46 App. 480, 81 S. W. 29.

On a prosecution for perjury, all that is necessary to show jurisdiction of the court is to show that it had jurisdiction of the prosecution on which the alleged false testimony was given; and though the prosecution is in the county court, where such false testimony was given, and the prosecution in which the false testimony was given originated in a justice court, it is unnecessary and improper to introduce the transcript of such court, though it is proper to introduce the complaint. Warren v. State, 57 App. 518, 123 S. W. 1115.

On a prosecution for perjury, the judgment on the prosecution of defendant on which the alleged false testimony was given is not admissible. Warren v. State, 57 App. 518, 123 S. W. 1115.

In a prosecution for perjury consisting of false testimony given in another suit, the pleadings in such suit were properly admitted; the court having limited the purpose, for which they might be considered. Downing v. State, 61 App. 519, 136 S. W. 471.

Where in a suit on certain notes accused testified that A., from whom he purchased the notes, had not signed them until he did so at the request of accused at the time of the transfer, to establish that accused was a bona fide purchaser for value, and perjury was assigned on such testimony, evidence that witnesses had seen the notes prior to the date of the purchase, and that A.'s name was on them at that time, and also that other witnesses saw A. sign the notes prior to the purchase, and prior to their indorsement by the payees before they were delivered to A., who delivered them to accused, was admissible. Downing v. State, 61 App. 519, 136 S. W. 471.

In a prosecution for perjury consisting of evidence given by accused in another action to show that he was a bona fide purchaser of certain notes sued on, evidence as to the terms of a trade in which the notes were canceled and delivered to one of the alleged makers before they were transferred by the latter to accused, there being no claim that accused was present at that time or had any knowledge thereof when he purchased the notes, was irrelevant. Downing v. State, 61 App. 519, 136 S. W. 471.

Where perjury was based on alleged testimony by accused in a prior suit on certain notes, it was proper for the state to permit witnesses, including the stenographer at the trial, to testify what testimony was given by him in such suit. Downing v. State, 61 App. 519, 136 S. W. 471.

In a trial for falsely testifying before a grand jury which investigated a gaming transaction, it was proper to exclude a question asked by accused whether a certain watch was not taken or lost as part of the transaction, the testimony being offered by accused to show that the witness declined to answer any questions about the game before the grand jury under advice of counsel that his testimony might incriminate him under a charge of having taken the watch, where the witness had already explained that he refused to testify before the grand jury under such advice. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 598.

In a trial for falsely testifying before a grand jury that accused did not participate in a gambling game and did not see others play, he claiming that, if he played or saw others play, he was so drunk that he did not remember it. when he was before the grand jury, the state was properly permitted to show that, before he left the grand jury room, he was given opportunity to retract his testimony, that he testified that he was not drunk or frightened, and knew what he was doing, and that he testified before the grand jury that a certain person came in the room where the game was played about a certain time. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 598.

In a prosecution for perjury in an action by his wife for a divorce, it was proper to show the pendency of that action, and whether or not issue was joined therein. Spearman v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 915, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 243.

In a prosecution for perjury for having testified falsely in his wife's action for divorce that he had not had intercourse with his wife before marriage, the wife's testimony as to such intercourse was admissible. Spearman v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 915, 44 L. R. A. (N. S.) 243.

Where a third person executed to accused a mortgage note for $650, and a note for $80, not secured by a mortgage, and the $80 note was a genuine one, while the $650 note was given to prevent the third person's creditors from levying on the mortgaged property, the testimony of accused on the examining trial of the third person for disposing of mortgaged property, that the third person owed him the $650 note, sustained a charge of perjury. Waddle v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 882.

In a prosecution for perjury based on false testimony by accused that he was an infant when he contracted the liability sued on, testimony by a witness that he filed a suit for accused's mother for divorce is admissible when limited only to fix the date of his first acquaintance with accused. Poulter v. State, 70 App. 197, 157 S. W. 166.

In a prosecution for perjury based on accused's false testimony that he was an infant when he incurred the obligation sued on, evidence that, in the action in which the testimony was given, he was asked if he had not stated to the clerk, when he applied for a marriage license some time before, that he was more than 21 years of age, is admissible. Poulter v. State, 70 App. 197, 157 S. W. 166.

In a prosecution for perjury based on false testimony by accused that he was an infant when he incurred an indebtedness to plaintiff, the charter and amendments of the plaintiff corporation in the former action are admissible. Poulter v. State, 70 App. 197, 157 S. W. 166.

The state must not only prove the alleged perjured testimony, but must prove that accused knew that the testimony was false when he gave it. Trinkle v. State, 71 App. 64, 153 S. W. 544.

On a trial for perjury based on accused testifying that liquor was not received and stored in his house on a designated date, the testimony of the receipt of liquor on that date was admissible, but the receipt of liquor on later dates was not admissible, in the absence of evidence that accused had notice thereof. Trinkle v. State, 71 App. 64, 153 S. W. 544.

Evidence held not to show that accused knew that the alleged perjured testimony was false when he gave it. Trinkle v. State, 71 App. 64, 153 S. W. 544.

On the trial of accused for perjury, based on his false testimony in the county court on his trial for unlawfully betting at a gaming bank, the complaint and information in the county court are admissible. Mares v. State, 71 App. 303, 153 S. W. 1130.

In a prosecution for perjury committed in a divorce suit by the plaintiff therein, the petition in the divorce suit was properly admitted in evidence. Edwards v. State, 71 App. 417, 160 S. W. 709, 49 L. R. A. (N. S.) 563.

Where an indictment for perjury, based on defendant's denial as a witness before the grand jury that he knew of any gambling, alleged that he knew of gambling between certain parties at a certain place about May 1st, it was error to admit evidence that he knew of gambling at a different place on about August 1st, especially where it did not appear that the participants in both games were the same. Scott v. State, 72 App. 26, 160 S. W. 960.

In a prosecution for perjury alleged to have been committed in an action on a note made by accused to another, the note, being fully identified, is admissible in evidence, although not marked with a file mark. Johnson v. State, 71 App. 428, 160 S. W. 964.

In a prosecution for perjury in falsely testifying in a personal injury action that accused had never been injured while working for another railroad, parts of the transcript in the civil action, which showed that accused's counsel therein withdrew from the case upon it appearing that accused had testified falsely, were not admissible in evidence; only accused's questions and answers in the civil action being admissible. Key v. State, 72 App. 129, 161 S. W. 130.

In a perjury case, where defendant was charged with testifying falsely before the grand jury, the testimony of grand jurymen was admissible to show that defendant acted deliberately and wilfully and did not testify through misapprehension or agitation. Poulter v. State, 72 App. 140, 161 S. W. 475.

Since in a perjury case, where defendant was charged with testifying falsely before the grand jury as to his brother's age, it was incumbent on the state to show that the grand jury was inquiring into an alleged violation of law, evidence showing that an action was pending against the brother in the justice court, in which he had entered a plea of minority and swore that he was only 19 years of age, was admissible, but the result of that trial was inadmissible, as defendant was not bound thereby. Poulter v. State, 72 App. 140, 161 S. W. 475.

In a prosecution for perjury for falsely stating that W. was in a certain house between the hours of 9 and 11 on a certain night, when in truth W. was at that time on a certain street corner and then and there committed the theft, it was not necessary to prove that accused was at the place of the theft, or that W. committed the theft. Hart v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 152.

In a prosecution for committing perjury in a theft case by testifying that the alleged thief was in a certain house at a certain time, when the thief was in fact on a certain street corner where the theft was committed, evidence held to sustain a finding that accused's testimony was false. Hart v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 152.

Where accused, who was charged with falsely testifying that he had had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix in a slander case, attacked prosecutrix's reputation for chastity, evidence showing her good reputation for chastity, as well as that of a medical examination disclosing that she was a virgin, is admissible. Reed v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1065.

Accused, who was charged with falsely testifying that the prosecutrix in a slander case permitted sexual intercourse, offered witnesses to show that prosecutrix was not a virtuous female. Held, that it was permissible to show on cross-examination of these witnesses that they attended church functions and social gatherings with the prosecutrix. Cox v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1067.

In a prosecution for slander brought against one who stated that a young woman was no better than a whore, accused testified that he had had intercourse with the woman. The issues in the slander case were the truth of the statement and the utterance of the words. Held that, in a subsequent prosecution for perjury, proof that the defendant in the slander case uttered the slander as alleged was not essential to a conviction; accused's testimony at all events being material to the issues. Cox v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1067.

In a prosecution for perjury, committed before a grand jury investigating illegal sales of liquor, the evidence showing that, while defendant stated that he had received no liquor from one S., two sheriffs looking over a partition had seen S. hand him a pint, evidence that witness had talked with defendant and another negro, and that, although he did not know which one had made the remark or the exact words of it, nevertheless something had been said to the effect that deputy sheriffs, through a hole in a certain partition, could have seen the transfer of liquor, and that there was no use in swearing to a lie, was admissible in evidence to impeach defendant's testimony and as an implied admission. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1071.

10. Instructions.—Instructions as to corroboration and number of witnesses, see Code Cr. Proc. art. 806 and notes.

Where the court charges that perjury is a false statement deliberately and willfully made and that a false statement made through inadvertence or under agitation or by mistake, the failure to define willful is not error, in the absence of any objection or request for a special instruction. Hill v. State, 22 App. 579, 3 S. W. 764.

Where the indictment itself shows that the perjury assigned relates to a past event, it is not necessary to charge that the statement must relate to a past or present event. Kitchen v. State, 26 App. 165, 9 S. W. 461.

When the nature of the offense charged is made by law to depend upon the peculiar condition and state of the mind of the accused at the time, it is not only proper that evidence of drunkenness as a fact affecting the mind should be received, but the court should instruct the jury that in passing upon the question whether the accused deliberately and willfully committed the act, they should look to all the evidence, including that relating to drunkenness in connection with the other testimony tending to show the condition of the mind of the accused. Lyle v. State, 31 App. 103, 19 S. W. 903. (Overruled by Evers v. State, 31 App. 318, 20 S. W. 744, 18 L. R. A. 421, 37 Am. St. Rep. 811.) For other decisions hereunder, see Anderson v. State, 24 App. 705, 7 S. W. 40; Smith v. State, 27 App. 50, 10 S. W. 751; Brookin v. State, 27 App. 701, 11 S. W. 655; Brooks v. State, 29 App. 582, 16 S. W. 542; Turner v. State, 30 App. 691, 18 S. W. 792.

Under indictment charging perjury before a grand jury in reference to gaming in an outhouse, when the testimony as to the house being commonly resorted to is very meager, the judge should instruct the jury that unless they find that the house referred to was commonly resorted to for gaming purposes, they should acquit the defendant. Higgins v. State, 38 App. 539, 53 S. W. 1012.

Where the allegation as to the particular officer administering the oath was specially controverted, defendant was entitled to a special instruction that the jury should acquit if the oath was not administered by such officer. Crouch v. State, 46 App. 76, 79 S. W. 524.

Where the state proved its case as alleged while defendant's witnesses were not definite as to the time and place of a conversation the court was not required to charge on the theory that there was a conflict as to whether the conversation occurred at the time and place alleged. Jordan v. State, 47 App. 133, 83 S. W. 821.

It was not error to charge that if the oath was not administered on the occasion when the alleged false statements were made the jury should acquit, and defendant could not complain thereof. Clay v. State, 52 App. 555, 107 S. W. 1129.

In charging this article the court should define to the jury the meaning of the words "deliberately" and "willfully." For not doing so the case will be reversed. Windon v. State, 56 App. 198, 119 S. W. 309.

The indictment for perjury charged that in a certain case the accused testified, "I know Mr. A. when I see him. He shot once with a pistol in the direction of Mr. O., * * * and did not drop his pistol," etc., and further alleged that it was material whether the accused was present at such shooting, and whether A. had a pistol and shot, and that in fact accused was not immediately present at the time, and A. did not have a pistol, and that accused's testimony was willfully false. Held, that it was not necessary to require the jury to find that the single sentence, "I know Mr. A. when I see him" was false. Young v. State, 70 App. 434, 157 S. W. 151.

In a prosecution for perjury, charges requiring the jury to find, beyond a reasonable doubt, that issue was joined between accused and plaintiff in an action in justice court, and that while it was pending accused gave the testimony upon which perjury was assigned, coupled with other charges, stating the averments of the indictment, and requiring a finding that they were true in order to convict, and that if, when accused testified in the justice court, the question was whether a continuance should be granted, and he was interrogated by counsel in order that the latter might determine if he would ask for a postponement, then accused should be acquitted, are more favorable to accused than he is entitled. Poulter v. State, 70 App. 197, 157 S. W. 166.

In a prosecution for false swearing to a false affidavit, intended by accused to be used as a basis for a continuance, but was not, it was not improper for the court to charge the jury that the affidavit was not made in the course of a judicial proceeding. Welch v. State, 71 App. 17, 157 S. W. 946.

Where an indictment charged accused with committing perjury in testifying that he did not bet at a game played with dice with two persons named "and" other persons at a specified time and place, an instruction, that accused would be guilty if he falsely testified before the grand jury that he did not bet with the persons designated "or" any other person at a game played with dice, etc., was not objectionable as failing to submit the perjury assigned in the indictment. Portwood v. State, 71 App. 447, 160 S. W. 345.

Where, in a prosecution for perjury in testifying before the grand jury that accused did not bet at a game played with dice, with two persons specified and others, at a specified time and place, there were two issues presented by the evidence—one that he was asked before the grand jury if he did not play at the game with the persons specified at such time and place, and the other that he was not asked particularly about any game and did not testify about any particular game, and therefore did not testify that he did not bet at a game played with the parties specified—it was error to refuse a request to charge that he could only be convicted of falsely testifying as alleged in the indictment, and could not be convicted if it was found that he only testified that he did not bet at any game, and was not asked and did not testify about any particular game, under the rule that accused is entitled to have defensive matter sustained by the evidence affirmatively submitted to the jury. Portwood v. State, 71 App. 447, 160 S. W. 345.

Where the indictment, in a prosecution for perjury based on a false denial that defendant knew of gambling, charged him with knowledge that a particular game was played, and evidence was admitted showing that he knew of the playing of an entirely different game, it was error to refuse to instruct that the jury could not convict upon proof of any game except that alleged in the indictment. Scott v. State, 72 App. 26, 160 S. W. 960.

Where, in a prosecution for perjury based on defendant's denial as a witness before the grand jury that he knew of any gambling in the county where the grand jury was sitting, the evidence left it doubtful whether the game of which defendant knew was not played in another county to which the grand jury would have had no right to extend its investigation, it was error to refuse to instruct that defendant should be acquitted unless the gambling occurred in the county where the grand jury was sitting. Scott v. State, 72 App. 26, 160 S. W. 960.

Where, on a trial for perjury based on accused falsely testifying in a civil action between third persons that he had dug a well 54 feet deep, the evidence was conflicting, and several witnesses testified that, if a well was left standing for a year or more without casing, the same would run together, a charge that if accused dug a well 54 feet deep, and it filled up or there was a reasonable doubt thereof, accused must be acquitted, and, if employes of accused drilled a well 54 feet deep, accused was not guilty, and if he had been informed by his employes that the well was 54 feet deep, and he believed the statement, he was not guilty, etc., is sufficient. Green v. State, 132 S. W. 806.

11. Verdict.—Applying general verdict to good assignment of perjury sustained by evidence, see Code Cr. Proc. art. 770 and notes.

12. Judgment.—Conforming judgment to verdict on appeal, see notes under Code Cr. Proc. art. 938.

Art. 305. [202] Not perjury, when.—A false statement made through inadvertence, or under agitation, or by mistake, is not perjury. [P. C. 288.]

Inadvertence, etc.—See Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662, for evidence held competent when adduced by the state, to show that the false statement was not made through inadvertence, etc. See, also, Sisk v. State, 28 App. 432, 13 S. W. 647.

That a false statement was made through inadvertence or mistake or under agitation is a matter of defense. Johnson v. State, 71 App. 428, 160 S. W. 964; Brown v. State, 9 App. 171.

Evidence that defendant excused certain witnesses but afterwards told a third person to see them and countermand the order releasing them was admissible to show that defendant's false statement in an application for a continuance that the witnesses were not absent by his procurement or consent was made through mistake. Brookin v. State, 27 App. 701, 11 S. W. 645.

Perjury cannot be predicated on an erroneous construction of a written instrument by a witness. Schoenfeld v. State, 56 App. 103, 119 S. W. 101, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1216, 133 Am. St. Rep. 356.

Where, on a trial for perjury, accused testified that he had been sick some time before he gave his testimony, that if he had ever received the money which the witnesses testified he did receive, and which he denied receiving, he did not remember it, that his memory was not good, and that it was more than four years since the money was claimed to have been paid him, the refusal to charge the substance of this article was error. Mason v. State, 57 App. 319, 122 S. W. 871.

It was proper for the court to charge the requirements of this article. Mares v. State, 71 App. 303, 158 S. W. 1130.

In a prosecution for perjury based on a false statement, made by defendant as a witness before the grand jury, that he knew of no gambling, testimony of the foreman of the grand jury that they informed defendant that they had strong evidence that there had been gambling in which he was implicated, or of which he knew, and that they repeatedly urged him to tell the truth and gave him time to consider before signing his statement, was admissible on the issue whether defendant's testimony before the grand jury was deliberate, and not under agitation, mistake, or failure of memory. Scott v. State, 72 App. 26, 160 S. W. 960.

Instructions.—Where intoxication at the time of the alleged false statement was relied on as a defense, an instruction giving the provisions of this article was sufficient, without calling special attention to his intoxicated condition. Sisk v. State, 28 App. 432, 13 S. W. 647.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 135.

Art. 306. [203] Oath must be legally administered.—The oath or affirmation must be administered in the manner required by law, and by some person duly authorized to administer the same in the matter or cause in which such oath or affirmation is taken. [P. C. 289.]

Authority to administer oath.—Pipes v. State, 26 App. 318, 9 S. W. 614.

In order to constitute perjury, the oath must be administered by some person authorized to administer it in the manner in which it was taken, and in the manner required by law. State v. Powell, 28 Tex. 627; State v. Peters, 42 Tex. 7; Stewart v. State, 6 App. 184.

Where perjury is committed before a justice of the peace, it is sufficient to allege that he was a justice of the peace and had jurisdiction without showing his commission or how jurisdiction attached. State v. Peters, 42 Tex. 7; Bradberry v. State, 7 App. 375; Waters v. State, 30 App. 284, 17 S. W. 411. See also Stewart v. State, 6 App. 184.

The foreman of a grand jury has authority to administer oaths to witnesses appearing before that body to testify. Massie v. State, 5 App. 81.

County attorneys are authorized and qualified to administer oaths to complaints cognizable in justice courts, and to affidavits on which to base informations in the county courts. Bradberry v. State, 7 App. 375.

An affidavit sworn to before a county clerk to obtain a marriage license will not support an assignment of perjury. Such an oath is extrajudicial and extrajudicial oaths lay no foundation for perjury. No oath before a person acting in a private capacity, or having no authority to administer oaths of a public nature or to administer the oath actually taken, or before persons assuming to administer justice by means of an authority seemingly colorable but in fact unwarrantable and void, can ever amount to perjury. Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662; Steber v. State, 23 App. 176, 4 S. W. 880.

An oath to complaint charging one with aggravated assault can be taken by a county attorney and comes within the statute defining perjury. Rambo v. State, 43 App. 271, 64 S. W. 1039.

Form of oath.—Where the statute has prescribed the form of the oath, and the indictment sets out a different oath, the indictment is bad. State v. Perry, 42 Tex. 238.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 135.

See Code Crim. Proc. art. 465.

Art. 307. [204] And about something past or present.—The false statement must be of something past or present; oaths of office, or any other promissory oaths, are therefore not included in the definition of perjury, except that part of the official oath prescribed by the constitution which relates to dueling. [P. C. 289.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 135.

See Code Crim. Proc. art. 465.

Art. 308. [205] In what sort of proceeding.—All oaths or affirmations legally taken in any stage of a judicial proceeding, civil or criminal, in or out of court, or before a grand jury, are included in the description of this offense. [Act March 15, 1875, p. 170; P. C. 290a.]

Oral testimony before examining court. Covey v. State, 23 App. 388, 5 S. W. 283.

Swearing falsely in a civil case, in the absence of issue joined, is not perjury. Garrett v. State, 37 App. 198, 38 S. W. 1017, 39 S. W. 108.

False testimony on a trial under a defective information is perjury. Kelley v. State, 51 App. 507, 103 S. W. 189.

The false statement as to the property owned by him, made by one justifying as a cognizor in a criminal prosecution, is in a judicial proceeding, within this article. Warren v. State, 57 App. 262, 122 S. W. 541.

False testimony by accused upon the trial of an action in justice court that he was an infant at the time he incurred certain obligations constitutes perjury, though the cause was continued upon the claim of plaintiff that it was surprised by such testimony. Poulter v. State, 70 App. 197, 157 S. W. 166.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 135.

See Code Crim. Proc. art. 465.

Art. 309. [206] Immaterial statement not perjury.—The statement of any circumstance wholly immaterial to the matter in respect to which the declaration is made is not perjury. [P. C. 291.]

Cited, Cordway v. State, 25 App. 405, 8 S. W. 670; Parker v. State, 25 App. 743, 9 S. W. 42; Maines v. State, 26 App. 14, 9 S. W. 51; Sisk v. State, 28 App. 432, 13 S. W. 647; Lucas v. State, 27 App. 322, 11 S. W. 443.

Materiality.—To constitute perjury, the false statement must be material to the issue on the trial of which the defendant was sworn. But it is not necessary that the particular fact sworn to should be immediately material to the issue. It must, however, have such a direct and immediate connection with a material fact as to give weight to the testimony on that point. A party not only commits perjury by swearing falsely and corruptly as to the fact which is immediately in issue, but also by swearing falsely and corruptly as to material circumstances tending to prove or disprove such facts. If the statement tends even circumstantially to the proof of the issue, it will be deemed material. The true test is, whether the statement could have properly influenced the tribunal. If it tends to do so, or to extenuate or increase the damage, it is material. The degree of materiality is of no importance. And if it be material as to a single fact, it is sufficient. Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662; Lawrence v. State, 2 App. 479; State v. Lindenburg, 13 Tex. 27; Bradberry v. State, 7 App. 375; Martinez v. State, Id. 394; Mattingly v. State, 8 App. 345; State v. Webb, 41 Tex. 67; Donohoe v. State, 14 App. 638; Hernandez v. State, 18 App. 134, 51 Am. Rep. 295; Williams v. State, 28 App. 301, 12 S. W. 1103; Rahm v. State, 30 App. 310, 17 S. W. 416, 28 Am. St. Rep. 911; Agar v. State, 29 App. 605, 16 S. W. 761; Martin v. State, 33 App. 317, 26 S. W. 400; Wynne v. State, 60 App. 660, 133 S. W. 682; Frazier v. State, 61 App. 647, 135 S. W. 583.

Perjury may be assigned upon a false statement affecting only a collateral issue, as that of the credit of a witness. Washington v. State, 22 App. 26, 3 S. W. 228; Williams v. State, 28 App. 301, 12 S. W. 1103; McVicker v. State, 52 App. 508, 107 S. W. 834.

A witness' denial that he had been convicted 16 years before was immaterial, as it was too remote for purposes of impeachment. Busby v. State, 48 App. 83, 86 S. W. 1032.

False testimony before the grand jury as to sales of liquor is not material unless the sellers are within the classes inhibited by statute from selling. Meeks v. State, 32 App. 420, 24 S. W. 98.

The materiality of evidence before a grand jury must be measured by the subject matter under investigation. If the matter being investigated is innocent of the law, then the statement is not materially false, though untrue. Weaver v. State, 34 App. 554, 31 S. W. 400.

Testimony in a civil suit assigned as perjury held immaterial. Misener v. State, 34 App. 588, 31 S. W. 858.

Testimony before grand jury held material. Butler v. State, 36 App. 483, 37 S. W. 746.

When there is no plea of non est factum defendant's testimony that he did not sign the note is immaterial. Garrett v. State, 37 App. 198, 38 S. W. 1017, 39 S. W. 103.

N. was charged with the theft of hogs belonging to R. Defendant testified that he saw N. driving said hogs in the county in which the theft was alleged to have been committed, which testimony was alleged to be false; held, this testimony was necessarily material. Martinez v. State, 39 App. 479, 46 S. W. 826.

Though a witness is asked about immaterial matters without objection, for the purpose of impeachment, perjury cannot be predicated on his answers. McAvoy v. State, 39 App. 684, 47 S. W. 1000.

Where defendant testified that the man committing an assault was a small man, his false denial on cross-examination that he had stated before the trial that the man was a large man was material. George v. State, 40 App. 646, 60 S. W. 374, 51 S. W. 378.

Where, in a suit by accused as indorsee of a note, he claimed and sought to use evidence that A., from whom he procured the note, had not signed the same until he did so at the request of accused at the time of transfer, as a circumstance to prove that accused was an innocent purchaser, and accused testified to such fact solely to prove that he was an innocent purchaser, the fact as to when A. signed the note was sufficiently material to be the subject of an assignment of perjury. Downing v. State, 61 App. 319, 136 S. W. 471.

The testimony of accused, on his trial for unlawfully betting at a gaming bank at the house of a third person, that he was not present at the house at the time charged is material so as to be perjury if false. Mares v. State, 71 App. 303, 153 S. W. 1130.

Where a witness had testified falsely, before the grand jury investigating illegal sales of liquor by a third person, that he had not secured any liquor from such person, the possession of liquors by the accused always being material in prosecutions for violation of a liquor law, such testimony was material and supported the conviction of perjury. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1071.

Indictment.—See Code Crim. Proc. art. 465.

Evidence.—Number of witnesses and corroboration, see Code Crim. Proc. art. 806.

The evidence should clearly show the materiality of the alleged false testimony. Lawrence v. State, 2 App. 479; Cox v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1067; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1071.

All the essential allegations in the indictment must be proved. Lawrence v. State, 2 App. 479. Proof that the false testimony was admitted on the trial of the case in which it was given, is not sufficient evidence of its materiality on a trial for perjury. Lawrence v. State, 2 App. 479. When the perjury is assigned upon an affidavit which the defendant signed by making his mark thereto, there must be proof that he knew and understood the contents of such affidavit at the time he swore thereto. Evidence held insufficient to prove such knowledge. Hernandez v. State, 18 App. 134, 51 Am. Rep. 295. Where the perjury was committed before a grand jury, it is competent to show by the records of the court, that said court was in session, and the grand jury organized when the perjury was committed. St. Clair v. State, 11 App. 297. The indictment alleging that the perjury was committed upon the trial of one P., the state was properly permitted to prove the proceedings had, and the evidence delivered by the defendant upon said trial, for the purpose of showing that the alleged false statements were made in a judicial proceeding, and were material to an issue in said proceeding. Partain v. State, 22 App. 100, 2 S. W. 854. The state was permitted, over the objection of the defendant, to prove by the attorney of B., upon whose trial the perjury was alleged to have been committed, his reason and purpose for placing the defendant upon the witness stand on said trial. Held, competent evidence for the purpose of negating that the alleged false statements were made through inadvertence, etc. Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662. Freeman v. State, 44 App. 496, 72 S. W. 1001. A judgment rendered in the judicial proceeding in which the perjury is alleged to have been committed is admissible evidence as inducement, but not to prove the perjury. Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662; Maines v. State, 23 App. 568, 5 S. W. 123. But the record of a trial and judgment in a civil suit in which the perjury was alleged to have been committed was held to have been properly excluded when offered by the state, because the parties to said suit were not the parties to the prosecution; because the action was not in rem, nor the judgment of a public nature; and because said record and judgment were not sought to be used by way of inducement, or to establish a collateral fact, but as evidence to prove the alleged perjury. Hill v. State, 22 App. 579, 3 S. W. 764. See this case for certain conversations of defendant held to be competent evidence against him. And for other evidence held inadmissible, see Washington v. State, 23 App. 336, 5 S. W. 119; Maines v. State, 23 App. 568, 5 S. W. 123.

Facts held insufficient to convict. Lawrence v. State, 2 App. 479.

Where the alleged false oath was made on habeas corpus before another judge, the order of transfer from the judge issuing the writ is competent. Watson v. State, 5 App. 11.

In a prosecution for perjury committed upon the trial of C. for burglary, the state was properly permitted to prove the testimony of the accused before the grand jury upon the investigation of the charge against C., and his subsequent contradictory evidence on the trial of C., and his statement, respecting the inducements under which he testified as he did on the trial. Littlefield v. State, 24 App. 167, 5 S. W. 650.

It was not error to permit the state in a trial for perjury to read in evidence the complaint filed in the cause upon the trial of which the perjury was alleged to have been committed, inasmuch as such evidence was competent to prove that the alleged false statements were made in the judicial proceeding and before the court alleged in the indictment, but, having admitted such evidence, the trial court, in its charge, should have limited its effect to such purpose only. Higgenbotham v. State, 24 App. 505, 6 S. W. 201.

The indictment charges that the perjury was committed upon the trial of M. and J. for the murder of J. J. The state introduced in evidence a separate judgment rendered against J., to which the defense objected upon the ground that it did not appear from that judgment that M. and J. were jointly tried, but that J. was tried alone. As matter of fact, M. and J. were jointly placed upon trial, and when the state closed its evidence the court directed the acquittal of J., and the trial of M. was proceeded with, the consequence being the return of two verdicts and the rendition of two judgments in the case. The statement of defendant, assigned as perjury, was made during the progress of the joint trial. Held, that the judgment against J. was properly admitted in evidence. Kitchen v. State, 26 App. 165, 9 S. W. 461.

The record of the proceedings upon the trial in which the perjury was alleged to have been committed was properly admitted in evidence as matter of inducement, and to support the allegation in the indictment that the perjury was committed upon the said trial. Kitchen v. State, 26 App. 169, 9 S. W. 461.

The state introduced in evidence, over objection of the defendant, an indictment charging him with the murder of J. J.—the offense involved in the trial upon which the perjury is alleged to have been committed—and adduced oral proof that M., one of the defendants in the said trial, was a witness against him. Held, that the evidence was competent to show motive. Kitchen v. State, 26 App. 165, 9 S. W. 461.

Evidence that the oath was administered by another person than the one named in the indictment is admissible. Jefferson v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 1090.

Evidence held to show that false testimony of accused before grand jury investigating illegal sales of liquor was on a material point. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1071.

See, also, Maines v. State, 26 App. 14, 9 S. W. 51; Kiteken v. State, 29 App. 45, 14 S. W. 392; Brooks v. State, 29 App. 582, 16 S. W. 542; Waters v. State, 30 App. 284, 17 S. W. 411; Aguierre v. State, 31 App. 519, 21 S. W. 256; Shely v. State, 35 App. 190, 32 S. W. 901; Rogers v. State, 35 App. 221, 32 S. W. 1044.

Questions for jury.—The materiality of testimony assigned as perjury is a question of law. Foster v. State, 32 App. 39, 22 S. W. 21; Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662; Donohoe v. State, 14 App. 638; Washington v. State, 23 App. 336, 5 S. W. 119; Smith v. State, 27 App. 50, 10 S. W. 751; Jackson v. State, 15 App. 579; Scott v. State, 35 App. 11, 29 S. W. 274; Luna v. State, 44 App. 482, 72 S. W. 378; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1071.

Like any other question of law, the question of materiality may be so mingled with the facts that the court should submit it, with proper instructions upon the law, to the jury. Foster v. State, 32 App. 39, 22 S. W. 21; Washington v. State, 23 App. 336, 5 S. W. 119.

Submission of materiality of testimony to jury held not prejudicial. Montgomery v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 805.

Instructions.—Number of witnesses and corroboration, see Code Crim. Proc. arts. 805, 806.

Limitation of evidence to specific purpose for which admitted. Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662; Maines v. State, 23 App. 568, 3 S. W. 123; Kitchen v. State, 26 App. 169, 9 S. W. 461; Washington v. State, 23 App. 336, 5 S. W. 119; Littlefield v. State, 24 App. 167, 5 S. W. 650; Higgenbotham v. State, 24 App. 505, 6 S. W. 201; Brown v. State, 24 App. 170, 5 S. W. 685; Foster v. State, 32 App. 39, 22 S. W. 21.

Where there are several assignments of perjury the charge of the court should be confined to those that are made upon material matter. Donohoe v. State, 14 App. 638; Sisk v. State, 28 App. 432, 13 S. W. 647.

An instruction that the jury should acquit if they had a reasonable doubt whether defendant's statement was true or false, was not prejudicial to defendant, and he could not complain that the verdict was contrary to the charge as the error in the charge was against the state. Kitchen v. State, 26 App. 165, 9 S. W. 461.

It is not essential to charge that the statement assigned as perjury must relate to a past or present event, where the indictment shows that it related to a past event. Kitchen v. State, 26 App. 169, 9 S. W. 461.

The court properly told the jury that the statement assigned as perjury was material. Scott v. State, 35 App. 11, 29 S. W. 274.

Art. 310. [207] Punishment.—The crime of perjury, except as in cases provided for in article 311 of the Penal Code, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not more than ten years nor less than two years. [P. C. 292, amended 1897, p. 146.]

Art. 311. [208] Perjury in capital case.—When the perjury is committed on a trial of a capital felony, and the person guilty of such perjury has, on the trial of such felony, sworn falsely to a material fact tending to produce conviction; and the person so accused of the capital felony is convicted and suffers the penalty of death, the punishment of the perjury so committed shall be death. CHAPTER TWO OF FALSE SWEARING

Art.	Art.
312. "False swearing," definition of.	317. False swearing to enlistment paper.
313. Past or present.
314. Officer falsely reporting collections of public moneys.	317a. False swearing by applicant or witness in pension proceedings.
315. False swearing in relation to quarantine matters.	317b. False swearing by school census trustee.
316. Witness before grand jury divulging proceedings, etc.

Article 312. [209] "False swearing," definition of.—If any person shall deliberately and wilfully, under oath or affirmation legally administered, make a false statement by a voluntary declaration or affidavit, which is not required by law or made in the course of a judicial proceeding, he is guilty of false swearing, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

1. Validity of article.—This article is not invalid under Const., art. 1, § 5, requiring oaths and affirmations to be taken subject to the pains and penalties of perjury, as that section applies only to witnesses while giving evidence. Campbell v. State, 43 App. 602, 68 S. W. 513.

2. Repeal.—This article was not repealed by Rev. St. art. 3 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 9) requiring oaths and affirmations to be taken subject to the pains and penalties of perjury. Campbell v. State, 43 App. 602, 68 S. W. 513.

3. Elements of offense.—Any false oath as to something past or present is false swearing without regard to its materiality. Wilson v. State, 49 App. 496, 93 S. W. 547.

If any person deliberately and willfully, under oath legally administered, makes a false statement by a voluntary declaration on affidavit not required by law, he is guilty of false swearing, but such a statement, made through inadvertence or under agitation or by mistake, does not constitute false swearing; the expressions "deliberately" and "willfully" meaning "made after meditation and with an evil intent." Welch v. State, 71 App. 17, 157 S. W. 946.

4. Perjury distinguished.—If the false statement be made under oath, legally administered, in or out of court, under circumstances which make it necessary for the ends of public justice, and during any stage of a judicial proceeding it cannot be false swearing but may be perjury. Thus a false statement in a complaint before a magistrate initiating a criminal prosecution is not false swearing but may be perjury. Langford v. State, 9 App. 233.

An affidavit made before a clerk of a county court to obtain a marriage license would be false swearing, not perjury. Steber v. State, 23 App. 176, 4 S. W. 880; Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662.

The verdict convicted of false swearing. The judgment declared for perjury as charged in the indictment. Perjury and false swearing are distinct offenses, and this conviction can not stand. O'Bryan v. State, 27 App. 339, 11 S. W. 443. On distinction between the offenses, see Woodson v. State, 24 App. 153, 6 S. W. 184.

The affidavit of a public school teacher to the voucher or check for his pay, such as is contemplated by Rev. St. 1895, art. 3962, is one required by law, and a false affidavit is perjury and not false swearing. O'Bryan v. State, 27 App. 339, 11 S. W. 443.

A false statement as to the property owned by him, made by one justifying as cognizor in a criminal prosecution, is perjury, rather than false swearing. Warren v. State, 57 App. 262, 122 S. W. 541.

5. Authority to administer oath.—Under Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St., 1914, art. 13, any affidavit taken within the state may be made before a county judge within his county. O'Bryan v. State, 27 App. 339, 11 S. W. 443.

The power to administer oaths and affidavits generally appertains to the office of county clerk, and belongs to his official duties, and his deputy, in this regard, has such power and authority as he can exercise. Harkreader v. State, 35 App. 243, 33 S. W. 117, 60 Am. St. Rep. 40.

A minor is eligible to the office of deputy county clerk, and, as such may administer an oath to an applicant for a marriage license. Harkreader v. State, 35 App. 243, 33 S. W. 117, 60 Am. St. Rep. 40; Mahon v. State, 46 App. 234, 79 S. W. 23.

A notary has authority to swear persons, whether to necessary affidavits required by law, or those which are voluntary, and therefore could swear a chattel mortgagor to an affidavit that he was the owner of the property, and that it was not incumbered. Campbell v. State, 43 App. 602, 68 S. W. 513.

A false affidavit signed by P. as "Justice of the Peace and Ex Officio Notary Public," did not show on its face that it was not taken before an officer authorized to administer oaths. Wilson v. State, 49 App. 496, 93 S. W. 547.

6. Form of oath.—An objection that the particular form of oath required by statute was not administered cannot be considered on appeal where it was not raised in the trial court, especially where the officer testified that he swore defendant to the affidavit, and that defendant signed it. Adams v. State, 49 App. 361, 91 S. W. 225.

7. Accomplice.—See notes under art. 79.

8. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 109, 110, 141, 142, 144.

See Code Crim. Proc. art. 465.

An indictment, whether good or bad as a pleading, which unmistakably describes every element of false swearing as defined by this article, is a charge of crime, within Const. U. S. art. 4, § 2, cl. 2, regulating extradition. Pierce v. Creecy, 23 S. Ct. 714, 210 U. S. 387, 52 L. Ed. 1113.

9. Evidence.—Number of witnesses and corroboration, see Code Crim. Proc. arts. 805, 806.

In a prosecution for false swearing, the alleged false statement being that the mother of an intended bride was willing for her to marry a certain person, it was held to be irrelevant and incompetent testimony for the state to prove that another person than the said mother, with whom said intended bride lived, did not give his consent to said marriage. Steber v. State, 23 App. 176, 4 S. W. 880.

On a trial for false swearing before a justice of the peace he was properly permitted to testify that he was a justice and administered the oath. Woodson v. State, 24 App. 153, 6 S. W. 184.

On a trial for swearing falsely on an application for a marriage license that the girl was of age and that no legal objections existed to the marriage, evidence that her parents objected, if not material, was at least not prejudicial. Harkreader v. State, 35 App. 243, 33 S. W. 117, 60 Am. St. Rep. 40.

Evidence that defendant pending the engagement but not during the month preceding the making of the affidavit, had given the girl presents which she retained with the knowledge and consent of her parents, was not admissible to show the parent's consent to the marriage. Harkreader v. State, 35 App. 243, 33 S. W. 117, 60 Am. St. Rep. 40.

The deputation showing the appointment of a deputy clerk was admissible on a trial for false swearing before him, though he could have sworn that he was such deputy clerk. Mahon v. State, 46 App. 234, 79 S. W. 28.

On a trial for false swearing to obtain a marriage license, where the identity of the person making the affidavit was in issue, and it appeared that the license was delivered to such person and was subsequently received by a clergyman from defendant, the license was admissible. Mahon v. State, 46 App. 234, 79 S. W. 28.

In a prosecution for false swearing to an affidavit made to the claim agent of a railroad on which defendant claimed to have been injured while an employé, the affidavit, with the proof as to its execution and defendant's signature and oath thereto, without proof by the attesting witness, was admissible; and defendant's deposition in a civil case in another district court, proved up by the officer before whom it was taken, was also admissible. Urben v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 514.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction for false swearing as to the girl's age to obtain a marriage license. Wilson v. State, 49 App. 496, 93 S. W. 547.

10. Limiting evidence.—On a trial for false swearing to obtain a marriage license where the license was only admissible on the question of identity but could have been considered for other purposes, the court should have limited the jury's consideration thereof to the question of identity. Mahon v. State, 46 App. 234, 79 S. W. 28.

11. Instructions.—It was error not to define the terms "deliberately" and "willfully." Knight v. State, 71 App. 36, 158 S. W. 543; Steber v. State, 23 App. 176, 4 S. W. 880; Mahon v. State, 46 App. 234, 79 S. W. 28; Holt v. State, 48 App. 559, 89 S. W. 838.

Notwithstanding the failure to define such terms, the charge was substantially correct where it was not excepted to and the omission in view of the facts could not have reasonably caused injury, especially where it was practically covered by a special instruction. Woodson v. State, 24 App. 153, 6 S. W. 184.

It was reversible error to refuse to charge as requested that if defendant believed the matter stated in his false affidavit made to obtain a marriage license, to be true, he would not be guilty. Aguierre v. State, 31 App. 519, 21 S. W. 256.

Instruction as to defendant's lack of knowledge of certain contents of affidavit held erroneously refused under the evidence and not sufficiently covered by instruction given. Porter v. State, 48 App. 301, 88 S. W. 359.

Where an indictment assigned false swearing in that an affidavit for a marriage license alleged as true three different facts all of which were false, an instruction submitting all of such predicates in solido was not error. Adams v. State, 49 App. 361, 91 S. W. 225.

In a prosecution for falsely swearing, in an affidavit to procure a marriage license, that the woman was 18 years of age, accused testified that they did not have any conversation about procuring the license, but that the license clerk asked whom the license was for, and he said for himself; and in answer to a question whether he was 21 years of age said, "I look like it, don't I?" and also stated that he would not swear to the girl's age, not knowing it, and was asked, "How old would you take her to be?" and he said, "I don't know, 20 to 23 years of age," and that the clerk made out the license and told him to sign his name, and that accused swore that the statement was true "to the best of his knowledge." Held, that the evidence raised the issue of mistake in swearing as to the girl's age so as to require an instruction thereon. Knight v. State, 71 App. 36, 158 S. W. 543.

In a prosecution for false swearing, where the court, in reference to the oath made by defendant, charged that the alleged false statements must have been made by defendant of his own free will and accord, and that to warrant a conviction it was necessary that the state prove that the affidavit was voluntarily made, sufficiently defined the word "voluntarily," and defendant's requested addition "unrestrained by external interference, force, or influence, and not prompted or suggested by another," was properly refused. Urben v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 514.

Art. 313. [210] Past or present.—The false swearing must, as in regard to perjury, be relative to something past or present.

Art. 314. [211] Officer falsely reporting collection of public moneys.—If any officer of this state, or of any district or county thereof, who is charged by law with the duty of receiving or collecting public moneys, other than taxes, for the use of the state or counties, and reporting the same, under oath, to the district, county or commissioners' court of any county, shall falsely report the amount of such collections, or any part thereof, he shall be deemed guilty of false swearing, and, upon conviction, shall be punished as prescribed in article 209. [Act May 1, 1874, pp. 182-3.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 143.

Art. 315. [212] False swearing in relation to quarantine matters.—Any person suspected of violating any quarantine law or regulation, and who, upon being sworn by any one authorized to administer an oath by the provisions of any law of this state, shall knowingly swear falsely about any matter concerning which the quarantine laws and regulations permit examination, shall be deemed guilty of false swearing, and shall, on conviction in a court of competent jurisdiction, be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act March 21, 1883, p. 27.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 144.

Art. 316. [213] Witness before grand jury divulging proceedings, etc.—Any grand juror, or any person who shall appear before any grand jury in this state, and who, after being sworn according to law as a witness before said grand jury, shall afterwards divulge, either by word or sign, any matter about which said witness may have been interrogated, or any proceeding or fact said witness may have learned by reason of being said witness, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and may be in addition thereto imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding six months; provided, this act shall not apply to persons required to testify to any of the aforesaid matters before a judicial tribunal. [Act April 4, 1887, p. 131.]

Elements of Offense.—It is not essential that the offense should be committed intentionally and willfully, and unless defendant was so under the influence of morphine that he did not know right from wrong, he was guilty. Higdon v. State, 46 App. 198, 79 S. W. 546.

When Disclosure Permitted.—It is the declared policy of the law to make secret all proceedings before the grand jury except as provided in Code Cr. Proc. art. 416, authorizing a disclosure when the truth or falsity of evidence given in the grand jury room in a criminal case is under investigation. Gutgesell v. State (Cr. App.) 43 S. W. 1016; Hines v. State, 37 App. 339, 39 S. W. 935; Christian v. State, 40 App. 669, 51 S. W. 903.

Persons compelled to testify.—Where a witness before the grand jury, who could have been compelled to testify against himself in gambling cases, does testify, this, while it may exonerate him from punishment in a gaming matter pertaining to himself, does not authorize or permit him to divulge any matter occurring before the grand jury. Misso v. State, 61 App. 241, 135 S. W. 1173.

Indictment.—An indictment reciting that defendant was interrogated by the grand jury with reference to "unlawful card playing," and charging that he afterwards disclosed what he had testified, was good whether the matter about which he was interrogated related to a direct violation of law or not. Misso v. State, 61 App. 241, 135 S. W. 1173.

Instructions.—An instruction defining the offense in the language of the statute was proper. Higdon v. State, 46 App. 198, 79 S. W. 546. An instruction to find defendant guilty if he disclosed the matter about which he had been interrogated was not on the weight of the testimony. Id. The failure of such instruction to state the particulars of the testimony could not be complained of in the absence of a request for a more specific instruction. Id. If the matter inquired about could not have been of a criminal nature defendant should have requested an instruction to acquit. Id.

Art. 317. False swearing to enlistment paper.—Every person who enlists or re-enlists in the active militia of this state shall sign and make oath to an enlistment paper, which shall be filed in the office of the adjutant general. Such oath shall be taken and subscribed to before a field officer, or the commanding officer of a signal corps, troop, battery or company, who are hereby authorized to administer such oaths; and such oaths may be taken before any officer authorized by the laws of this state to administer oaths. A person making a false oath to any statement contained in such enlistment paper shall, upon conviction, be deemed guilty of false swearing and punished accordingly. [Act 1905, p. 179.]

Art. 317a. False swearing by applicant or witness in pension proceedings.—Any applicant for a pension under the provisions of this Act, [Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, Arts. 6267–6268, 6272, 6279] or any witness testifying under any of the provisions of this Act in regard to the service upon which such claim for pension is based or in regard to the property, effects or income of the applicant who shall wilfully make any false statements in regard thereto shall be deemed guilty of false swearing and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than two nor more than five years. [Act 1913, p. 285, ch. 141, § 7.]

Art. 317b. False swearing by school census trustee.—The census trustee shall arrange the forms for white and colored children separately in alphabetical order, according to the family name of the children reported thereon. He shall also make, on a prescribed form, separate census rolls for the white and colored children of his district, showing the name, age, sex and color of each child, and the name of the parent, guardian or person having control of said children by whom it is reported. He shall also make a summary of his rolls showing the number of children of each race that will be of the different ages over seven and under seventeen on the first day of next September, which shall continue to be the scholastic age, as is now provided by law, he shall make oath to his rolls and summaries, and to the faithful and accurate discharge of his duties, deliver the rolls, together with the forms arranged in alphabetical order, to the county superintendent on or before June first next after his appointment.

Any census trustee who shall wilfully fail or refuse to obtain the necessary information in regard to any child which will be over seven and under seventeen years of age on the first day of September next thereafter, or who shall wilfully fail or refuse to include any child within said ages in his rolls, or shall wilfully make any false report, roll or summary, shall be guilty of false swearing, and shall be punished as prescribed by law for that offense. And if the county superintendent finds or believes that any census trustee has violated any duty required under this act, such county superintendent shall report said census trustee to the grand jury of the county at its next session after discovering such breach of duty. [Act 1897, S. S., ch. 16, repealed; Act 1905, p. 285, ch. 124, § 89.]

Explanatory.—The above provision was omitted from the revised Penal Code, and is included in this compilation as art. 317b, in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

CHAPTER THREE

OF SUBORNATION OF PERJURY AND FALSE SWEARING

Art.	Art.
318. Subornation of perjury, or false swearing.	319. Attempt at subornation of perjury.

Article 318. [214] Subornation of perjury, or false swearing.—If any person shall designedly induce another to commit perjury or false swearing, he shall be punished as if he had himself committed the crime.

Acts constituting another offense.—That the acts making one an accessory to a homicide also constituted subornation of perjury did not prevent his prosecution as an accessory. Blakely v. State, 24 App. 616, 7 S. W. 233, 5 Am. St. Rep. 912.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 139, 145.

Art. 319. [215] Attempt at subornation of perjury.—If any person shall, by any means whatever, corruptly attempt to induce another to commit the offense of perjury or false swearing, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

See Watson v. State, 5 App. 11.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 140, 146.

	348. "Jail" defined.
	349. "Officer" defined.
	350. "Arms" defined.
	351. Refusing to aid officer.

Article 320. [216] Officer in charge of prisoner wilfully permitting escape in capital case.—Any officer, jailer or guard, having the legal custody of any person accused or convicted of a capital offense, who wilfully permits such person to escape, or to be rescued, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. [P. C. 312.]

See C. C. P. art. 470, and notes.

Escape pending appeal.—See, Lloyd v. State, 19 App. 137.

Elements of offense.—Voluntary and negligent escapes are made by the statute distinct offenses with different punishments. The former may be a felony, the latter can only be a misdemeanor. State v. Dorsett, 21 Tex. 656.

Defenses.—On the trial of a constable for permitting the escape of one in his custody by virtue of his official authority, it is immaterial whether the arrest and custody were legal or illegal. Moseley v. State, 25 App. 515, 8 S. W. 652.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 147.

The indictment must charge that the defendant did willfully permit the escape. Barthelow v. State, 26 Tex. 175. Willfully and negligently permitting an escape are distinct offenses, and an indictment which in the same count alleges that the defendant "did willfully and negligently" permit the escape is duplicitous and bad. State v. Dorsett, 21 Tex. 656. The indictment need not show that the arrest and custody of the escaped prisoner were legal, nor that any accusation had been legally made against him, nor the particulars of the crime he had committed or was charged with committing. State v. Hedrick, 35 Tex. 485.

Evidence.—See Martin v. State, 25 App. 557, 8 S. W. 682.

Art. 321. [217] In felonies.—Any officer, jailer or guard, who has the legal custody of any person accused or convicted of a felony less than capital, who wilfully permits such person to escape, or to be rescued, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than two and not exceeding five years. [P. C. 313.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 147.

Art. 322. [218] In misdemeanors.—Any officer, jailer or guard, having the legal custody of a person accused or convicted of a misdemeanor, who wilfully permits such person to escape, or to be rescued, shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars. [P. C. 314.]

Effect of unauthorized release of prisoner.—See notes under Code Cr. Proc., art. 879.

Elements of offense.—A sheriff who permits a person convicted of misdemeanor to go at large, when such prisoner has been committed to jail until the fine and costs are paid, is guilty of permitting such prisoner to escape. Luckey v. State, 14 Tex. 400. The escape must be permitted knowingly and intentionally by the officer, and such knowledge and intention must appear satisfactory from the evidence. Barthelow v. State, 26 Tex. 175.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 147. See art. 320.

Art. 323. [219] Negligently permitting escape in capital case.—Any officer, jailer or guard, who has the legal custody of a person accused or convicted of a capital offense, and who negligently permits such person to escape or to be rescued, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars. [P. C. 315.]

Jurisdiction.—Under the constitutional provision giving the district court jurisdiction of misdemeanors involving official misconduct, the district court has jurisdiction of a prosecution for negligently permitting the escape of one accused or convicted of a capital offense. Hatch v. State, 10 App. 515. But see Watson v. State, 9 App. 212.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 147. See art. 320.

The indictment need not show that the arrest and custody of the escaped prisoner were legal nor that any accusation had been legally made against him nor the particulars of the crime he had committed or was charged with committing. State v. Hedrick, 35 Tex. 485.

Evidence.—The escape must be permitted knowingly and intentionally by the officer, and such knowledge and intention must appear satisfactorily from the evidence. Barthelow v. State, 26 Tex. 175.

Art. 324. [220] In felonies.—Any officer, jailer or guard, who has the legal custody of a person accused or convicted of a felony less than capital, and who negligently permits such person to escape or to be rescued, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [P. C. 316.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 147. See art. 320.

Art. 325. [221] In misdemeanors.—Any officer, jailer or guard, who has the legal custody of a person accused or convicted of a misdemeanor, and who negligently permits such person to escape or to be rescued, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [P. C. 317.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 147. Art. 320.

Art. 326. [222] Officer refusing to arrest or receive in felony.—Any sheriff or other officer, who wilfully refuses or fails from neglect to execute any lawful process in his hands requiring the arrest of a person accused of felony, whereby such person escapes, or wilfully refuses to receive in a jail under his charge, or to receive into his custody, any person lawfully committed to such jail and ordered to be confined therein on an accusation of felony, or lawfully committed to his custody on such accusation, shall be fined not exceeding two thousand dollars. [Act Feb. 11, 1860, p. 96; P. C. 318.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 148, 149.

Art. 327. [223] Same in cases of misdemeanor.—Any sheriff or other officer, who wilfully refuses or fails from neglect to execute any lawful process in his hands requiring the arrest of a person accused of a misdemeanor, whereby the accused escapes, or who wilfully refuses to receive into a jail under his charge, or to receive in his custody any person lawfully committed to such jail on an accusation of misdemeanor, or lawfully committed to his custody on such accusation, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act Feb. 11, 1860, p. 96; P. C. 319.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 148, 149.

Art. 328. [224] Private person appointed to execute, same as officer.—If any private person, appointed with his own consent to execute a warrant of arrest, shall be guilty of any one of the offenses heretofore enumerated in this chapter, he shall be punished in the same manner as an officer in a like case. [P. C. 320.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 150.

Art. 329. [225] Conveying arms, disguises, etc., into jail to aid felon.—If any person shall convey, or cause to be conveyed, into any jail, any disguise, instrument, arms, or any other thing useful to aid any prisoner in escaping, with intent to facilitate the escape of a prisoner lawfully detained in such jail, on an accusation of felony, or shall, in any other manner calculated to effect the object, aid in the escape of a prisoner legally confined in jail, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 162; P. C. 321.]

Substantive offense.—This offense is a substantive one, and the culpability of the party charged therewith is in no wise dependent upon, or affected by, the guilt or innocence of the succored prisoner. Peeler v. State, 3 App. 533.

Counsel and advice.—The aid conveyed must be physical. Counsel and advice will not constitute the aid intended by the statute. White v. State, 13 Tex. 133.

Persons liable.—Articles 86 and 87, relating to accessories, are not applicable in a prosecution for this offense and afford no immunity to the relatives of the prisoners who violate this article. Peeler v. State, 3 App. 533.

Jail.—See art. 348, and notes.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 151.

If the defendant is indicted for aiding in the escape of a prisoner, he can not be convicted under such indictment, upon proof that the prisoner was in his custody, and that he negligently or wilfully permitted him to escape. White v. State, 13 Tex. 133.

The indictment must allege that the acts done by the defendant were done for the purpose and with the intent to aid the prisoner to escape. Jenkins v. State, 49 App. 470, 93 S. W. 554.

The word "furnish" is not equivalent to the word "convey," and an indictment which employs the former and not the latter word charges no offense. Francis v. State, 21 Tex. 280.

See this case for a sufficient but inartistic indictment. Clayton v. State, 4 App. 515.

An indictment which fails to allege that accused did the acts complained of with intent to aid in the escape of a prisoner lawfully confined in jail is fatally bad. Jenkins v. State, 49 App. 470, 93 S. W. 554.

Evidence.—Declarations of accomplice, see notes under Code Cr. Proc. art. 783. Evidence held insufficient. Poncio v. State, 28 App. 104, 12 S. W. 413.

The admission of evidence that defendant for four months was confined for a felony in the same jail with prisoners whose escape he aided, held not injurious to defendant. Watson v. State, 32 App. 80, 22 S. W. 46.

Corroboration.—Escaped prisoner as accomplice, see notes under Code Cr. Proc., art. 801.

Art. 330. [226] Same in misdemeanor.—If any person shall, by any of the means contemplated in the preceding article, aid in the escape of a person legally confined in jail upon an accusation for a misdemeanor, he shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars. [P. C. 323.]

Post, art. 337.

Indictment.—See Willson's Forms, 151.

Art. 331. [227] Breaking into jail to rescue prisoner.—If any person shall break into any jail for the purpose of effecting the rescue or escape of a prisoner therein confined, or for the purpose of aiding in the escape of any prisoner so confined, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than six years. [P. C. 322, 324.]

Post, art. 337.

Elements of offense.—Where defendant, in company with others, entered the jail at night by unbolting unlocked doors, covered the jailer with firearms, and compelled him to open the prison cells, there was a sufficient breaking. Williams v. State, 24 App. 17, 5 S. W. 655.

It is not necessary to show that the prisoner was legally confined. Starks v. State, 38 App. 233, 42 S. W. 379.

What constitutes jail.—See art. 348, and notes.

Burglary.—It is not burglary to break into a jail and release prisoners, and a case of burglary cannot be charged in an indictment under this article. Kipper v. State, 42 App. 613, 62 S. W. 421, 422.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms 152.

See notes under art. 329.

Indictment held sufficient. Williams v. State, 24 App. 17, 5 S. W. 655; Starks v. State, 38 App. 233, 42 S. W. 379.

In an indictment it is not necessary to charge that the breaking was done willfully and by force, such words not occurring in the statute. Loggins v. State, 32 App. 358, 24 S. W. 408.

Evidence.—Proof of ordinances, see notes on documentary evidence under Code Cr. Proc., art. 783.

For evidence insufficient to sustain conviction, see Gillian v. State, 3 App. 132.

Evidence held sufficient. Williams v. State, 24 App. 17, 5 S. W. 655.

Post, art. 337.

Art. 332. [228] Aiding prisoner charged with felony to escape from officer.—If any person shall wilfully aid in the escape of a prisoner from the custody of an officer, by whom he is legally held in custody on an accusation of felony, by doing any act calculated to effect that object, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years; and if, in aiding in the escape, he shall make use of arms, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than ten years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 162; P. C. 325.]

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 154. See, post, art. 337.

An indictment which in its charging part merely copies the language of this article, is not sufficient. Thus, an indictment which alleged that the defendant "did unlawfully make an assault upon one H., and did then and there and thereby, wilfully aid in the escape of one K., from the custody of said H., the said H. being then and there the sheriff of T. county, state of Texas, and the said K. being then and there a prisoner, and then and there legally held in custody by the said H., sheriff, on an accusation for a felony, to wit, the theft of three steers," etc., was held to be insufficient. It should have alleged that the defendant, knowing that the sheriff had the custody of a prisoner, and with the intent to aid in the escape of said prisoner, did wilfully make an assault upon the sheriff, describing the character of the assault, and that the assault so made was calculated to effect the escape of the prisoner. Vaughn v. State, 9 App. 563.

Art. 333. [229] Same; aid in case of misdemeanor.—If any person shall wilfully aid a prisoner to escape from the custody of an officer by whom he is legally detained in custody after conviction of a misdemeanor, or while being so detained in custody on an accusation for misdemeanor, by doing an act calculated to effect that object, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars; and if, in aiding in the escape, he shall make use of arms, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [P. C. 326; amended Act 1905, p. 377.]

Post, art. 337, 346.

Attempts.—An attempt to aid a prisoner to escape is no offense. Blanchette v. State, 58 App. 180, 125 S. W. 26.

Aiding convict.—A person who aids a convict to escape is not punishable under this article. It applies to a case where one aids one accused of crime to escape before he is convicted. Brannan v. State, 44 App. 399, 72 S. W. 184.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 153.

Art. 334. [230] Assisting inmate of state institution for correction of juveniles to escape.—Any person who shall knowingly assist any inmate lawfully confined in the state institution for the training of juveniles to escape, or who shall knowingly conceal such inmate, or advise or abet the escape of such inmate, or who shall furnish such inmate with money, arms, or any character of means to escape, with the purpose of facilitating the escape of such inmate, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be confined in the penitentiary for a term of not less than two nor more than five years. [O. C.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 155.

Art. 334a. Persuading inmate from Girls' Training School.—Any person who shall persuade, coerce, employ or induce in any manner any girl who has been committed to the Girls' Training School from such institution or from any home selected by the persons herein [Arts. 5234b-5234i, Vernons' Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] empowered to make such selection, without the knowledge and consent of such persons, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than $100.00, and not more than $500.00, or be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days, or both fined and imprisoned. [Act 1913, p. 291, ch. 144, § 9.]

Art. 335. [231] Telegraph officer divulging process.—Any executive officer, director, superintendent, manager, operator, clerk, messenger or other party in the employ of a telegraph company, who shall wilfully divulge, or in any manner make known, except to the proper authority, the contents of any warrant, affidavit or telegram relating to any crime already committed, or for the prevention of the same, shall, upon conviction, be fined in a sum not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand, or be imprisoned in the state penitentiary for a term not less than two years nor more than five years. [Act April 17, 1871, p. 40, § 7.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 156.

Art. 336. [232] Preventing execution of civil process.—If any person shall prevent or defeat the execution of any process in a civil cause, by any means not amounting to actual resistance, but which are calculated to prevent the execution of such process, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars; evading the execution of such process is not an offense under this article. [P. C. 327.]

Post, art. 341.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 157; post, art. 340.

An indictment should allege the means used by defendant to prevent or defeat the execution of the process and that defendant at the time knew the capacity in which the officer was acting or pretending to act. Horan v. State, 7 App. 183.

Evidence.—On a trial for resisting an officer attempting to serve a writ of sequestration fair on its face and issuing from a proper court, it was not necessary, before introducing the writ, to prove a valid affidavit therefor. Meador v. State, 44 App. 468, 72 S. W. 186.

Art. 337. [233] Offenses complete without actual escape.—The offenses enumerated in articles 329, 330, 331, 332 and 333 are complete without the actual escape of the prisoner; and a person accused of any of said offenses may be prosecuted and tried, although the person escaping be retaken, and although after being retaken he is brought to trial and acquitted. [P. C. 328-9.]

Indictment.—Blanchette v. State, 58 App. 180, 125 S. W. 26.

Art. 338. [234] County convict escaping from employer.—Any person who has been convicted of a misdemeanor or petty offense, and afterwards hired under authority of law, who shall escape from his employer or person hiring him during the term of which he may have been hired, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding two years. [Act Aug. 21, 1876, p. 229, § 4.]

Elements of offense.—A voluntary escape is where an officer having the custody of a prisoner charged with and guilty of an offense knowingly gives him his liberty with intent to save him from his trial or the execution of his sentence. Porter v. State, 34 App. 364, 30 S. W. 791.

A county convict who after being hired out leaves the county with the consent of his hirer on his promise to return, is not on failure to do so guilty of an escape. Porter v. State, 34 App. 364, 30 S. W. 791; Ex parte Logsdan, 35 App. 56, 31 S. W. 646.

Escape as used in preceding article means the actual escape of a prisoner from confinement or custody. Carter v. State, 29 App. 5, 14 S. W. 350.

Evidence that defendant, though living on the farm to which he was sent by his hirer, refused to work and sometimes went to town did not support a conviction, though it perhaps showed refractory conduct justifying punishment under Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 6240. Carter v. State, 29 App. 5, 14 S. W. 350.

Jail defined.—A jail is not necessarily a house. It may be a pen or inclosure. Welch v. State, 25 App. 580, 8 S. W. 657.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 158.

The information need only allege that the escape was unlawfully and wilfully made and need not allege that it was without the consent of the hirer or that the convict was hired to be kept and remain in the county. Carter v. State, 29 App. 5, 14 S. W. 350.

A complaint charging that defendant was a county convict sufficiently charges that he was convicted of misdemeanor or petty offense within this article. Porter v. State, 34 App. 364, 30 S. W. 791.

Pleading.—Under Act April 4, 1891, a county court was authorized to convene in special session to receive a plea of guilty by a county convict charged with an escape. Porter v. State, 34 App. 364, 30 S. W. 791.

Art. 339. [235] Person resisting officer in case of felony.—If any person shall wilfully oppose or resist an officer in executing or attempting to execute any lawful warrant for the arrest of another person in a case of felony, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than five years; and, if arms be used in such resistance, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 163; P. C. 331.]

Warrant executed in other county.—A capias issued by a justice of the peace of one county for the arrest of an alleged offender cannot be legally executed in another county until indorsed as required by the Code of Criminal Procedure, and when so indorsed must be executed by the proper officer of the county of the arrest. Ledbetter v. State, 23 App. 247, 5 S. W. 226; Peters v. State, 23 App. 684, 5 S. W. 228.

Illegal warrant or arrest.—An unlawful arrest is regarded as a continuous assault of an aggravated nature. The party detained or another party in his behalf may use all force adequate to resist the aggression and effect the liberation, even to the extent of taking life if that be essential. Alford v. State, 8 App. 545; Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705.

A warrant did not authorize the arrest of a person other than the one therein named and the insertion of another's name after the issuance of the warrant was a nullity. Alford v. State, 8 App. 545.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 159.

See Pierce v. State, 17 App. 232, for an indictment under this article held sufficient.

Resisting search warrant.—Raising question of constitutionality on habeas corpus, see Code Cr. Proc. art. 160.

Art. 340. [236] In cases of misdemeanors.—If any person shall wilfully oppose or resist an officer in executing or attempting to execute any lawful warrant for the arrest of another person in a case of misdemeanor, or in arresting or attempting to arrest any person without a warrant, where the law authorizes or requires the arrest to be made without a warrant, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than five hundred dollars; and, if arms be used, by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than one thousand dollars. [P. C. 220, amended by Act of April 4, 1881, p. 108.]

Indictment or information.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 159. See, post, sec. 491.

An information is insufficient where it does not allege whether the arrest was sought by virtue of a warrant or without one, but only that accused was drunk in a public place in the presence of a deputy sheriff. Harless v. State, 53 App. 319, 109 S. W. 334.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for resisting an officer, testimony of what was said and done from the time the officer formally arrested accused until he was confined in the place of custody is admissible to show whether accused's conduct was wilful, so that evidence was admissible that, while the officer was taking accused to jail, he cursed and abused the officer, and threatened to kill him after he was released at the courthouse. Woodward v. State, 58 App. 412, 126 S. W. 271.

Art. 341. [237] In civil cases.—If any person shall wilfully resist or oppose an officer in executing, or attempting to execute, any process in a civil cause, he shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars; and, if arms be used in such resistance, the punishment shall be doubled. [P. C. 333.]

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 153, 160; ante, arts. 335, 336.

The indictment must allege the particular mode in which the resistance was made, and the knowledge of defendant as to the capacity of the officer. Horan v. State, 7 App. 183. See, also, notes under art. 344.

Art. 342. Resisting officers of improvement district.—The district supervisors of any levee improvement district, and the district engineer and his assistants, from the time of their appointments, and the state reclamation engineer and his deputies, are hereby authorized to go upon any lands or waters for the purpose of examining the same and locating all levees and other improvements, making plans, surveys, maps and profiles, together with all necessary teams, help and instruments, without subjecting themselves to an act of trespass; and any person or persons, firm or corporation, who shall wilfully prevent or prohibit any of such officers from entering any lands or waters for such purposes, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each day he, they or it shall so prevent or hinder such officer from entering upon such lands or waters; and any justice of the peace of the county shall have jurisdiction in all such offenses. [Act 1909, p. 152 repealed. Act 1915, p. 244, ch. 146, § 42.]

Art. 342a. Unlawful construction of levee improvements.—From and after the taking effect of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation or levee improvement district, without first obtaining the approval of plans for the same by the State Reclamation Engineer, to construct, attempt to construct, cause to be constructed, maintain or cause to be maintained, any levee or other such improvement on, along or near any stream of this state which is subject to floods, freshets or overflows, so as to control, regulate or otherwise change the flood waters of such stream; and any person, corporation or district violating this section of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, and each day any such structure is maintained or caused to be maintained shall constitute a separate offense. And in the event any such structure is about to be constructed, is constructed, or maintained by any person or corporation without approval of plans by the State Reclamation Engineer, it shall be the duty of the Attorney General, on the request of the State Reclamation Engineer, to file suit in one of the district courts of Travis county, in which the venue of such suits is hereby fixed, to enjoin the construction or maintenance of such structure. [Act 1915, p. 248, ch. 146, § 62.]

Art. 342b. Same; purpose and scope of act.—This Act shall not be construed to repeal any of the provisions of Chapter 118, General Laws of the Thirty-second Legislature, Regular Session, entitled "Drainage Districts—Authorizing the Commissioners Courts of the Several Counties of the State to Establish Same," nor of Chapter 36, General Laws Thirty-third Legislature, First Called Session, entitled, "Drainage Districts—Amending Sections 7, 8, 23, 29, 36 and 61, Chapter 118, General Laws, Regular Session, Thirty-second Legislature, Relating Thereto," nor any of the irrigation laws of this State. [Id., § 63.]

Art. 342c. Same; repeal.—Chapter 85, General Laws of the State of Texas, passed by the Thirty-first Legislature, Regular Session, entitled "An Act to authorize the Commissioners Court of the several counties in Texas to create and establish improvement districts to prevent overflows and to construct and maintain levees and other improvements on rivers, creeks and streams to prevent overflows, etc., etc., and declaring an emergency," is hereby expressly repealed, and all other laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act are also hereby expressly repealed. [Id., § 65.]

Art. 342d. Resisting officers of drainage district.—The drainage commissioners of any district and the civil engineer from the time of their appointment, are hereby authorized to go upon any lands lying within said district for the purpose of examining the same, locating the canals, drains, ditches and levees, making plans, surveys, maps and profiles, and are hereby authorized to go upon any lands beyond the boundaries of such district and in any county for the purpose of examining the same, and locating the necessary outlets for any of the canals, drains or ditches of such district, together with all necessary teams, help, tools and instruments, without subjecting themselves to action of trespass, and any person who shall wilfully prevent or prohibit any of such officers from entering any land for such purposes shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction may be fined in any sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each day he shall so prevent or hinder such officer from entering upon any land, and any justice of the peace in the county shall have jurisdiction of all such offenses. [Act 1907, p. 78; Act 1911, p. 258, ch. 118, § 41.]

Art. 343. Resisting navigation and canal commissioners and engineers.—The navigation and canal commissioners of any district and the engineers from the time of their appointment are hereby authorized to go upon any lands lying within said district for the purpose of examining the same, making plans, surveys, maps and profiles, together with all necessary teams, help, tools and instruments, without subjecting themselves to action or [for] trespass; and any person who shall wilfully prevent or prohibit any such officer from entering any land for such purposes, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, may be fined in any sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each day he shall so prevent or hinder such officer from entering upon any land; and any justice of the peace in the county shall have jurisdiction of all such offenses. [Act 1909, p. 43.]

Art. 343a. Resisting officers of irrigation district.—The irrigation directors of any district and the engineer and employes thereof are hereby authorized to go upon any lands lying within said district, for the purpose of examining same, locating reservoirs, canals, dams, pumping plants and all other improvements, to make maps and profiles thereof; and are hereby authorized to go upon the lands beyond the boundaries of such districts in any county for the purposes stated, and for any other purposes necessarily connected therewith, whether herein enumerated or not. And any person who shall wilfully prevent or prohibit any such officers or employes from entering any lands for such purposes shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars for each day he shall so prevent or hinder such officer or employee from entering upon any lands. [Act 1913, p. 402, ch. 172, § 84.]

Art. 344. [238] Accused resisting process.—If the party against whom a legal warrant of arrest is directed, in any criminal case, resist its execution, when attempted by any person legally authorized to execute the same, he shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars; and, if arms be used in making the resistance, in such manner as would make him liable for assault and battery or assault with intent to murder, or any other offense against the person, he shall receive the highest penalty affixed by law for the commission of such offense in ordinary cases. [P. C. 334.]

See English v. State, 34 App. 190, 30 S. W. 233.

Acts constituting resistance.—Where defendant objected to his arrest because his name was misspelled in the warrant but upon being informed that this gave him no right to question the officer's authority to arrest, he at once surrendered himself, went with the officer, obtained sureties and executed a bail bond, his conduct did not constitute resistance. McGrew v. State, 17 App. 613.

Indictment or information.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 161.

McGrew v. State, 17 App. 613.

The indictment must allege that the officer was resisted in attempting to execute the warrant. Hill v. State, 43 Tex. 329.

Indictment for resisting arrest should show that the warrant was valid. Toliver v. State, 32 App. 444, 24 S. W. 286.

Where the arrest was for "a misdemeanor of gaming," an information not showing whether the arrest was under a warrant or without a warrant or by what authority the officer undertook to make the arrest, was insufficient. Lee v. State, 45 App. 94, 74 S. W. 28.

A complaint and information held not to show resistance to execution of a legal warrant. Sullivan v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1091.

Evidence.—See Jacobs v. State, 28 App. 80, 12 S. W. 408.

On a trial for killing an officer who was attempting to illegally arrest defendant, evidence of the issuance of a capias in another county for defendant's arrest for burglary was inadmissible. Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705.

Instructions.—See Jacobs v. State, 28 App. 80, 12 S. W. 408.

Where the evidence showed that the arrest in resisting which defendant killed an officer was legal, an instruction that the question whether it was illegal or not was not for the jury to determine as there was no evidence that defendant was influenced by an alleged illegal arrest, was not prejudicial. Sierra v. State, 37 App. 430, 35 S. W. 982.

Instructions on a trial for homicide as to deceased's authority to arrest defendant and defendant's right of self-defense, held defective. Hardin v. State, 40 App. 208, 49 S. W. 607.

Warrant.—The law declares the county judge to be a magistrate and vests him with power to issue warrants of arrest. Graham v. State, 29 App. 31, 13 S. W. 1013.

A defect in a warrant is no defense where defendant knew that the officer had a warrant for his arrest and assaulted the officer without inquiring as to the validity of the warrant. Graham v. State, 29 App. 31, 13 S. W. 1013.

A justice of the peace cannot order a warrant of arrest executed beyond the limits of his county. Toliver v. State, 32 App. 444, 24 S. W. 286.

The offense must be named in the warrant to make it legal. Fulkerson v. State, 43 App. 587, 67 S. W. 502; Sullivan v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1091.

Unlawful arrest.—See James v. State, 44 Tex. 314.

Though a man will not be justifiable if he kills in defense against an illegal arrest of ordinary character, the killing is manslaughter only. Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454; Meuly v. State, 26 App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Miller v. State, 32 App. 319, 20 S. W. 1103. See, also, Miller v. State, 31 App. 609, 21 S. W. 925, 37 Am. St. Rep. 836; Goodman v. State, 4 App. 349; Mundine v. State, 37 App. 5, 38 S. W. 619; Ex parte Sherwood, 29 App. 334, 15 S. W. 812.

No statute gives jurisdiction to a sheriff to serve a capias beyond the limits of his county, and an attempted arrest in another county was unlawful. Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454.

An unlawful power of arrest may be exercised in such a wanton and unnecessary manner as to make the officer a trespasser and justify resistance. Ex parte Sherwood, 29 App. 334, 15 S. W. 812.

A warrant being illegal an officer is not authorized to execute it and the defendant is not required to submit to arrest. His resistance, however, must not be made in an unwarrantable or illegal manner or he will be responsible for his acts. Toliver v. State, 32 App. 444, 24 S. W. 286.

A constable had no right to arrest a person without a capias for a burglary committed in another county and in making the arrest was a trespasser and the person arrested had the right to resist by force using no more than was necessary to resist the unlawful acts. Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705.

An officer making an arrest must not resort to the use of deadly weapons unless compelled to do so by the conduct of the prospective prisoner. English v. State, 34 App. 190, 30 S. W. 233.

A defendant would be guilty of murder in the first degree if he, anticipating an arrest, should prepare himself with a deadly weapon and deliberately and calmly form the intent to kill the officer. Hill v. State, 35 App. 371, 33 S. W. 1075.

Killing man resisting unlawful arrest.—See Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944.

Art. 345. [239] Process must be legal.—To render a person guilty of any of the offenses included within the meaning of articles 339 and 340, the warrant or process must be executed, or its execution attempted, in a legal manner. [P. C. 335.]

See notes under preceding articles.

Art. 346. [240] "Accusation" defined.—The word "accusation," as used here, and in every part of this Code, means a charge made in a lawful manner against any person, that he has been guilty of some offense which subjects him to prosecution in the name of the state. A person is said to be "accused" of an offense from the time that any "criminal action" shall have been commenced against him.

A legal arrest without warrant;

A complaint to a magistrate;

A warrant legally issued; and indictment, or an information, are all examples of "accusations," and a person proceeded against by either of these is said to be "accused." [P. C. 336.]

See notes under preceding articles.

Cited, Pierce v. State, 17 App. 232.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 153.

An information charging that defendant unlawfully made an attempt to aid a prisoner to escape, etc., is insufficient, since there is no such offense as an attempt to aid an escape. Blanchette v. State, 58 App. 180, 125 S. W. 26.

Art. 347. [241] "Legally confined in jail" defined.—A person is "legally confined in jail," or "legally detained in custody," when he has been committed or arrested upon a legal warrant, or arrested in any of the modes pointed out in the Code of Criminal Procedure. [P. C. 337.]

Art. 348. [242] "Jail" defined.—The word "jail" means any place of confinement used for detaining a prisoner. [P. C. 338.]

Jail.—A jail is not necessarily a house, but may be an inclosure of any kind or any place of confinement used in detaining prisoners. Whether the space between the jail building and a wall surrounding it was a part of the jail was properly left to the jury. Welch v. State, 25 App. 580, 8 S. W. 657.

A building used as a jail and in which a prisoner is confined is within the protection of the statute, though not situated in an incorporated town and not owned by the county. Irvington v. State, 45 App. 559, 78 S. W. 928.

Art. 331 applies as well to a city calaboose as to a county jail. Starks v. State, 38 App. 233, 42 S. W. 379.

Art. 349. [243] "Officer" defined.—By "officer," as used in this chapter, is meant any peace officer, as sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable of a beat, marshal, constable or policeman of a city or town, any jailer or guard, or any person specially authorized by warrant to arrest. [P. C. 339.]

Policemen.—An indictment for bribing a policeman not to arrest, report, and file a complaint against accused for keeping a gambling house or place where liquor was unlawfully sold was not defective on the ground that the law did not require police officers to report and file complaints against violators. Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 236.

A policeman is an executive officer within the purview of Pen. Code 1911, art. 424, providing that any person who shall falsely assume or pretend to be a judicial or executive officer of the state shall be punished, for a policeman is a public officer of the state expressly charged by the statutes with enforcing a large body of the criminal law. Ex parte Preston, 72 App. 77, 161 S. W. 115.

Art. 350. [244] "Arms" defined.—The term "arms," as used in this chapter includes any deadly weapon.

Art. 351. [245] Refusing to aid an officer.—If any person, being called on by a magistrate, or peace officer, shall fail or refuse to aid such officer in any matter in which, by law, he may be rightfully called on to aid or assist in the execution of a duty incumbent upon such magistrate or peace officer, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. Within the meaning of this article, shall be included the case of an officer who, with design that the same may be filled up and used for fraudulent purposes, attaches his signature or seal of office to any paper wholly blank. [255] Requisites of such record.—By "short statement," as used in the preceding article, is meant that such statement shall recite the true date on which such acknowledgment or proofs were taken, the name of the grantor and grantee of such instrument, its date, if proved by a subscribing witness, the name of the witness, the known or alleged residence of the witness, and whether personally known or unknown to the officer; if personally unknown, this fact shall be stated, and by whom such person was introduced to the officer, if by any one; and the known or alleged residence of such person. Such statement shall also recite, if the instrument is acknowledged by the grantor, his then place of residence, if known to the officer; if unknown, his alleged residence, and whether such grantor is personally known to the officer; if personally unknown, by whom such grantor was introduced, if by any one, and his place of residence. If land is conveyed or charged by the instrument, the name of the original grantee shall be mentioned, and the county where the same is situated; and a failure to comply with any one of the requirements shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Act April 28, 1874, p. 156.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 173.

Art. 362. [255a] False certificate as to corporate indebtedness, etc.—If any mayor, county judge, tax assessor, or other officer or person, for the purpose of securing the certificate of the attorney general, provided for in the issuance and sale of bonds by any county, city or town in the state of Texas, shall knowingly make, or be concerned in making or forwarding, to the attorney general, a false certificate as to the amount of the taxable value of the property in such county, city or town, as shown by the last official assessment, or knowingly and falsely certify as to the amount of indebtedness of such county, city or town, or the rate of tax levied to provide interest and sinking fund for such indebtedness, or other facts required by the attorney general, he shall be guilty of felony, and, upon conviction therefor, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than five years. [Act 1893, p. 85.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 173a, 173b.

Art. 362a. False certificate to physician.—That it shall be a misdemeanor and shall disqualify from office for the Board of Medical Examiners [arts. 799a–799g, post] to issue a certificate of license to any person, only as set forth and prescribed from office; the Governor shall appoint a new Board in full, as provided in this Act. 1. EXTORTION

Article 363. [256] Extortion by officers.—If any officer or person, authorized by law to demand or receive fees of office, shall wilfully collect any fee or fees due him by law in excess of the fee or fees allowed by law for such service, or for fees not allowed by law, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years for each offense. [P. C. 340, amended by Act of Feb. 9, 1883, p. 5; amended 1907, p. 307.]

See art. 3915, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Nature of offense.—Extortion is not an offense eo nomine within the rule that if the offense is not one eo nomine, the essential ingredients of the offense must be stated in the recognizance on appeal. Schoonmaker v. State, 37 App. 424, 35 S. W. 969; Johnson v. State, 38 App. 26, 40 S. W. 982.

What constitutes demand.—The presentation of the county judge's certified account of his fees to the commissioner's court, is a "demand." Brackenridge v. State, 27 App. 513, 11 S. W. 630, 4 L. R. A. 360.

Elements of offense.—Before this article was amended, it was held that a prosecution under said article for demanding and receiving fees not allowed by law, could not be maintained under it. Smith v. State, 10 App. 413. The amendment cures this defect in the article, and also changes the penalty. The extortion must be knowingly done. Millar v. Douglass, 42 Tex. 288.

The demand of illegal fees is "official misconduct" subjecting a county judge to removal from office. Brackenridge v. State, 27 App. 513, 11 S. W. 630, 4 L. R. A. 360.

Acts committed after an officer's re-election but before his qualification under such re-election, were not condoned by the re-election. Brackenridge v. State, 27 App. 513, 11 S. W. 630, 4 L. R. A. 360.

Under Code Criminal Procedure, art. 1154, a county judge was not entitled to a fee for actions dismissed without trial as for criminal actions tried and finally disposed of. Brackenridge v. State, 27 App. 513, 11 S. W. 630, 4 L. R. A. 360.

Where an official stenographer in a suit for his fees in the original petition charged an amount not authorized by law, but in amended petition (upon which the case was tried) reduced the amount so that it was within the law, he did not violate this article. Ben C. Jones & Co. v. Smith, 49 Civ. App. 637, 109 S. W. 1111.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 32, 174.

An indictment which charged that defendant "did willfully, corruptly, and extorsively demand of the said H. P. H., administrator, aforesaid, fees greater than were or are allowed by law," held defective; but the court based its decision on another statute (Pasc. Dig., art. 3830), and seems to have overlooked the Code. State v. Smythe, 33 Tex. 547.

See a defective indictment under the act of 1874, State v. Smith, 44 Tex. 443; which repealed the original article (354b). lb. Robinson v. State, 2 App. 390.

An indictment for extortion which alleged that defendant as county attorney accepted a fee to dismiss a prosecution, was defective in not alleging the exaction of a fee not authorized by law. Poole v. State, 22 App. 685, 3 S. W. 476.

An indictment held to sufficiently charge that demand by county judge was in his official capacity. Brackenridge v. State, 27 App. 513, 11 S. W. 630, 4 L. R. A. 360.

Art. 364. Officers demanding illegal fees.—If any officer or other person, authorized by law to demand or receive fees of office, shall willfully make out his account for fees in excess of those allowed by law, or for fees not allowed by law, and shall present or file such account with the proper officer with whom the law requires the same to be presented or filed, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five or more than two hundred and fifty dollars for each offense. [Act 1907, p. 307.]

Art. 365. [257] Applies to all officers.—The two preceding articles apply to all persons holding any office to which fees are attached, and to the heads of the departments of the government in whose offices fees may be charged. [P. C. 353.]

2. CONVERSION

Art. 366. [258] Conversion by sheriff, etc.—If any sheriff, or other officer, having collected money for any party to a suit, shall, without the consent of such party, unlawfully convert the same, or any part thereof, to his own use, he shall be punished in the same manner as if he had committed theft of such money. [Act Feb. 12, 1858; P. C. 354a.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 177.

Art. 367. [259] Appropriation of trust funds.—If any officer of any court who has the legal custody of any money, evidence of debt, scrip, instrument of writing or other article, that may have been deposited in court to abide the result of legal proceedings, shall appropriate the same to his own use, he shall be punished as if he had committed theft of such money, evidence of debt, scrip, instrument of writing or other article. [Act May 19, 1876, p. 7.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 179.

Art. 368. [260] Officer failing to deposit trust funds, etc.—Any officer of any court having the custody by law of any money, evidence of debt, scrip, instrument of writing or other article that may have been deposited in court to abide the result of any legal proceedings, who shall fail to seal up in a secure package the identical money or other article received by him, and deposit the same in some iron safe or bank vault; or who, when such money or other article is so deposited, shall fail to keep it always accessible and subject to the control of the proper court; or who shall fail to keep, in a well-bound book, a correct statement showing each and every item of money or other article so received or deposited, on what account received, and what disposition has been made of the same, shall be punished by fine not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding three months; and may, in addition thereto, be punished by the proper court for contempt. [Act May 19, 1876, p. 7.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 180

Art. 369. [261] Failing to turn over funds, etc., to successor.—Any officer, such as is enumerated in the preceding article, who shall fail or refuse to turn over to his successor in office, on the expiration of his own term of office, the record of trust funds therein specified, together with the packages of money or other articles in his possession or control, shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Act May 19, 1876, p. 7.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 181.

3. PECULATION

Art. 370. [262] State officer buying claims against state.—Any officer of this state who shall trade for, buy or be in any way concerned in the purchase of any claim or demand against the state shall be fined in the sum of one thousand dollars. [Act May 3, 1873, p. 62.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 182, 188.

Art. 371. [263] "State officer" defined.—By the term, "officer of this state," as used in the preceding article, is meant the governor, lieutenant governor, the heads or employés of any of the executive departments, members and officers of both houses of the legislature, the judges of the several courts, district and county attorneys, sheriffs, tax collectors and tax assessors.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 188.

Art. 372. Officers and employés of state penitentiary.—No officer or employé of the state penitentiaries shall be permitted to purchase any goods or merchandise or other property from the state or penitentiary system, except such surplus fruits, vegetables, ice, water, steam and lights as may be produced or manufactured on the premises of the penitentiary, or to appropriate to his private use or employment the labor, services or use of any state penitentiary convict, or of any animal, vehicle or other personal property belonging to the state, unless it be by the express consent of the penitentiary board, had by an order to that effect entered of record on the minutes of said board, providing for the amount to be paid by such officer or employé for the use, employment and services of such convict or convicts, or the use of any personal property belonging to the state; and no employé or officer using any of the state property shall be allowed to use same in keeping boarders for profit, unless such boarder or boarders be in the employ of the state penitentiary system; and no penitentiary sergeant, guard or other officer or employé of the penitentiary shall accept or receive any salary or other compensation from any person or corporation hiring or otherwise employing state convicts. Any such officer or employé who shall violate any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by dismissal from his office or employment, and by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars; and, if the conviction be for accepting or receiving any salary or compensation from a hirer or employer of state convicts, the party so convicted shall, in addition to the penalty above described, be confined in the county jail not less than one month nor more than one year.

Any person, co-partnership or firm, or any member of such co-partnership or firm, or any agent, servant or representative of such person, co-partnership or firm, or any officer, agent, servant or representative of any corporation, hiring or employing state convicts by contract with the state or penitentiary system of hire, lease, or for any share or portion or per cent of the crops or other products of the labor of such convicts, who shall pay, or promise or offer to pay, either directly or indirectly, to any sergeant, guard or other employé of the state having such convicts in charge or under his control, either in whole or in part, any money or other valuable thing, shall be guilty of a felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for two years. [Act 1903, p. 161.]

See arts. 1615, 1616, post.

Art. 373. [264] County or city officer trading in claims.—Any officer of any county in this state, or of any city or town therein who shall contract, directly or indirectly, or become in any way interested in any contract for the purchase of any draft or order on the treasurer of such county, city or town, or for any jury certificate or any other debt, claim or demand for which said county, city or town may or can in any event be made liable, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than twenty times the amount of the order, draft, jury certificate, debt, claim or liability so purchased or contracted for. [Act March 30, 1874, p. 47.]

Officers included.—This article is comprehensive and not only includes any officer who may contract directly or indirectly with a county, city or town, but also any officer who may in any way become interested in the purchase of draft or order on the treasury or any debt for which the county, city or town may be liable. Texas Anchor Fence Co. v. City of San Antonio, 30 Civ. App. 561, 71 S. W. 301.

Ignorance of law.—An alderman of a town purchasing a draft drawn in favor of a third person against the town violates this article, notwithstanding his ignorance of the law or his acting in good faith. Collmorgen v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 519.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 187, 188.

See Robinson v. State, 2 App. 390.

An averment that defendant unlawfully acquired jury scrip was not a sufficient charge that he contracted or was interested in a contract for jury scrip. State v. Smith, 44 Tex. 443.

An information, alleging that accused, being an alderman of a town, became interested in a contract for the purchase of a draft on the treasurer of the town for which it was liable for $60, sufficiently alleges that the draft was for $60. Collmorgen v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 519.

An indictment in the language of this article is not insufficient when attacked for the first time on appeal for failing to describe the particular warrant purchased by accused or failing to set it out in hæc verba. Collmorgen v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 519.

Evidence.—Proof of character of instrument purchased, see Huff v. State, 23 App. 291, 4 S. W. 890. See, also, notes on best and secondary evidence under Code Cr. Proc., art. 783.

On the trial of a county attorney for buying jury scrip the main point necessary to be established to warrant a conviction, was that defendant at the time he purchased the scrip was county attorney, and the evidence being insufficient as to this, the conviction would be set aside. Huff v. State, 23 App. 291, 4 S. W. 890.

Amount of penalty.—The word "amount," in this article means the face amount of the draft, and not its cash value at the time it was purchased by the officer or what he in fact paid for it. Collmorgen v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 519.

Art. 374. Mayor and members of city council.—It shall be unlawful for the mayor or any member of any city council or board of aldermen, of any city or town in this state, to accept, directly or indirectly, any frank, privilege, free light or water, or sewerage service, or other service, or a lower rate therefor than the regular rate established by said council or board of aldermen, or any gift or anything of value from any water, gas, light and sewer companies, corporations or persons. The servants, agents, officers or employés, or any person acting, directly or indirectly, in behalf of any of said companies, corporations or persons mentioned, who shall, directly or indirectly, give or grant any privilege, frank, free water, light, gas, sewerage service or free service of any kind, or any gift of anything of value to any mayor, or to a member of any such city council, board of aldermen, or any such mayor, or a member of any such council or board of aldermen, who shall receive, accept or enjoy such free light, water, gas, or sewerage service, or other free service, or a lower rate than the regular rate, or any gift of anything of value, as prohibited herein, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction therefor, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by confinement in the county jail not exceeding twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1907, p. 218.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 188.

Art. 375. [265] Ex-officers included, when.—Within the term "officer," as used in the preceding article, are included ex-officers until they have made a final settlement of their official accounts. [Act March 30, 1874, p. 47.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 188.

Art. 376. [266] County or city officers becoming interested in contracts.—If any officer of any county in this state, or of any city or town therein, shall become in any manner pecuniarily interested in any contracts made by such county, city or town, through its agents or otherwise, for the construction or repair of any bridge, road, street, alley or house, or any other work undertaken by such county, city or town, or shall become interested in any bid or proposal for such work or in the purchase or sale of anything made for or on account of such county, city or town, or who shall contract for or receive any money or property, or the representative of either, or any emolument or advantage whatsoever in consideration of such bid, proposal, contract, purchase or sale, he shall be fined in a sum not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act March 30, 1874, p. 47.]

Acts constituting offense.—Previous to this statute it was not an offense for a road-overseer to have an arrangement with the contractor by which he was to share the profits. Hutchinson v. State, 36 Tex. 293.

This article inhibits any officer of a county, city or town from entering into, on account of himself, any kind of a financial transaction with the corporation. An indictment charged a violation in that accused sold a mule to the county of which he was a county commissioner. Held, a violation. Rigby v. State, 27 App. 55, 10 S. W. 760.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 188.

Hutchinson v. State, 36 Tex. 293, was decided prior to this statute, and under the statute against bribery. The facts of that case would seem to fall within this article.

Removal of officer.—A county official may be removed under Rev. St. 1895, art. 3531 (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 6030) for official misconduct, though he has not been convicted on an indictment for the offense alleged as ground of removal. Bland v. State (Civ. App.) 38 S. W. 252.

Art. 377. County judges, commissioners or members of navigation board.—Neither the county judge nor any county commissioner, nor member of the navigation board, nor the navigation and canal commissioners or engineer, shall be, directly or indirectly, interested for themselves or as agents for anyone else in the contract for the construction of any work to be performed by such navigation district; and, if said officers, or either of them, shall, directly or indirectly, become interested in any contract for such work, or in any fee paid by such navigation district whereby he or others shall receive any money consideration or other thing of value, except in payment of services as provided by law, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than one year. [Act 1909, p. 45.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 188.

Art. 378. County judge and other officers of improvement district.—Neither the County Judge nor any County Commissioner, nor the district engineer, nor the district supervisors, shall be directly or indirectly interested, for themselves or as agents for any one else, in the contract for or construction of any work to be performed by such district; and if any of said officers shall directly or indirectly become interested in any contracts for such work or any fee paid by such district, whereby he shall receive any money consideration or other thing of value, other than such fees and compensation as may be provided for herein, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than one year. [Act 1909, p. 154, ch. 85, repealed; Act 1915, p. 247, ch. 146, § 55.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 188.

Art. 379. Director or officer of irrigation district.—No director of any irrigation district, irrigation engineer or employee thereof shall be directly or indirectly interested either for themselves or as agents for any one else in any contract for the purchase or construction of any work by said irrigation district and if any such person shall directly or indirectly become interested in any such contract, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine in any sum not to exceed one thousand dollars, or by confinement in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1905, p. 250, ch. 50, repealed; Act 1913, p. 386, ch. 172, § 22.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 188.

Art. 379a. Officers not to be interested in contracts of drainage district.—Neither the county judge or any county commissioner or drainage commissioner nor the drainage engineer shall be directly or indirectly, interested for themselves or as agents for any one else in the contract for the construction of any work to be performed by such drainage district, [Arts. 2567-2625, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] and if said officers or either of them shall directly or indirectly, become interested in any contract for such work, or in any fee paid by such drainage district whereby he shall receive any money consideration or other thing of value, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than one year. [Act 1907, p. 78; Act 1911, p. 263, ch. 118, § 63.]

Art. 380. [267] Purchase of witness fees by officer.—Any county judge, clerk or deputy clerk of any district or county court, sheriff or his deputy, justice of the peace or constable, who shall purchase or otherwise acquire from the party interested any fee or fees coming to any witness in any proceeding whatever, either before the district or county court, or the court of any justice of the peace, or before any coroner's inquest, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 164; P. C. 354b.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 188, 189.

4. NEPOTISM

Art. 381. "Nepotism" defined.—Subject to the exceptions set forth in Article 384, it shall hereafter be unlawful for any officer of this State, or for any officer of any district, county, city, precinct, school district or other municipal subdivision of this State, or for any officer or member of any State, district, county, city, school district or other municipal board, or judge of any court, created by or under authority of any General or Special Law of this State, or member of the Legislature, to appoint, or vote for, or to confirm, the appointment to any office, position, clerkship, employment or duty, of any person related within the second degree by affinity or within the third degree by consanguinity to the person so appointing or so voting, or to any other member of any such board, the Legislature, or court of which such person so appointing or voting may be a member, when the salary, fees, wages, pay or compensation of such appointee is to be paid for, directly or indirectly, out of or from public funds or fees of office of any kind or character whatsoever. [Act 1907, p. 12; Act 1909, p. 85; Act 1915, p. 149, ch. 95, § 1, Pen. Code, art. 381, amended.]

Art. 382. Officers included.—The inhibitions declared by and set forth in this law shall apply to and include the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Railroad Commissioners, heads of departments of the State Government, judges and members of any and all boards and courts established by or under authority of any General or Special Law of this State, members of the Legislature, mayors, commissioners, recorders, aldermen and members of school boards of incorporated cities and towns, public school trustees, officers and members of boards of managers of the State University and of its several branches, and of the various State educational institutions and of the various State eleemosynary institutions, and of the penitentiaries; but this enumeration is not intended and shall not be construed or held to exclude from the operation and effect of this law any person included within its general provisions. [Act 1907, p. 12; Act 1909, p. 85; Act 1915, p. 149, ch. 95, § 1, art. 382, Pen. Code, amended.]

Art. 383. Every justice failing to make and file such report shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars. Parents refusing to answer questions of school census trustee.—

The county superintendent of public instruction shall, on the first day of January of each year, or as soon as practicable thereafter, appoint one of the trustees of each school district, or some other qualified person, to take the scholastic census, who shall be known as the census trustee of the district. It shall be the duty of the census trustee to take, between the first day of May and the first day of June after his appointment, a census of all the children that will be over seven and under seventeen years of age on the first day of the following September, and who are residents of the school district on said first day of May, and to make report under oath to the county superintendent on or before the first day of June next thereafter. In taking the said census he shall visit each home, residence, habitation and place of abode, and shall, by actual observation and interrogation, enumerate the children thereof in the following manner: He shall use for each parent, guardian or person having control of any such children, a prescribed form showing the name, color, and nationality of the person rendering such children, the name and number of the school district in which the children reside, and the name, sex and date of birth of each child of which he is the parent or guardian, or of which he has control, and which child will be over seven and under seventeen years of age on the first day of September next following. The census trustee shall require such form to be subscribed and sworn to by the person rendering the children, and he is hereby authorized to administer oaths for this purpose. When the census trustee visits any home or house or place of abode of a family, and fails to find either the parent or any person having legal control, it shall be the duty of the census trustee to leave the prescribed census blank for the use of parents at such home or place of abode, with a note to the parent or guardian having legal control of child or children, requiring that the form be filled out, sworn and subscribed to before the census trustee, or any officer authorized to administer oaths, and that the blank, when so filled out, shall be delivered by the parent or person having legal control of the child or children to the census trustee.

Every person having control of any child which will be over seven and under seventeen years of age on the first day of September next thereafter, and who, being requested by the census trustee to prepare said form giving the information required, or to give the information necessary to enable the trustee to prepare the same, shall refuse to do so, or shall refuse to make oath to said form when filled according to his statement of facts in regard to said children, or shall fail to return the form left at his home in his absence, as above required, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than five nor more than ten dollars. And it shall be the duty of the census trustee at once to file with some justice of the peace of competent jurisdiction complaint against such person. Only children of the same family shall be listed on one form, and if one person has under his control children of different family name, he should use a separate form for each family name. Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 720-722.

Information for refusal to answer questions must allege that defendant had children or was guardian of children of scholastic age. Dunlap v. State, 40 App. 591, 51 S. W. 392.

Art. 419. [Superseded by Act 1911, S. S. Ch. 11, § 23. See Art. 1513a, Penal Code, post.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 723-725.

Art. 420. Tax assessor and equalization board.—Any county tax assessor who shall violate or in any respect fail to comply with any of the provisions of the law creating the state tax board, and any member of any board of equalization, and any county tax assessor, who shall modify or change, or vote to modify or change, in any manner whatsoever the finding, valuation or apportionment of any intangible assets as so fixed, determined, declared and certified by said state tax board, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars. [Act 1905, ch. 146; Act 1907, p. 476.]

Art. 420a. Mailing notice of delinquent taxes; contents of notice; duplicates; furnishing statements of taxes on demand; duties of district attorney; redemption.—Not later than the first day of May, 1916, in all counties of less than 50,000 inhabitants, and not later than the first day of May, 1917, in all counties of more than 50,000 inhabitants, and not later than the first day of June in every year following thereafter, it shall be the duty of the Collector of Taxes in the various counties of this state to mail to the address of every record owner of any lands or lots situated in such counties, a notice showing the amount of taxes appearing delinquent or past due and unpaid against all such lands and lots according to the delinquent tax records of their respective counties on file in the office of the Tax Collector, and a duplicate of which shall also have been filed in the office of the Comptroller of Public Accounts of the State of Texas and approved by such officer; such notice shall also contain a brief description of the lands or lots appearing delinquent, and various sums or amounts due against such lands or lots for each year they appear to be delinquent according to such records, and it shall also be the duty of the tax collectors of the various counties in this State not later than the dates named, and every year thereafter, to furnish to the county or district attorneys of their respective counties duplicates of all such statements mailed to the tax payers in accordance with the provisions of this Act, together with similar statements, or in lieu thereof, lists of lands and lots located in such counties containing amounts of State and county taxes due and unpaid, and the years for which due, on lands or lots appearing on such records in the name of "Unknown" or "Unknown Owners," or in the name of persons whose correct address or place of residence in or out of the county said tax collector is unable by the use of due diligence to discover or ascertain; and it shall be the further duty of the tax collector to furnish on demand of any person or persons, firm or corporation, like statements with reference to any particular lot or tract of land for whatever purpose desired, which shall be in all instances certified by him with the seal of his office attached; said notices or statements herein provided for shall also recite that unless the owner or owners of such lands or lots described therein shall pay to the tax collector the amount of taxes, interest, penalty and costs set forth in such notice within 90 days from date of notice, then, and in that event, the county or district attorney will institute suits not later than January 1, next, for the collection of such moneys, and for the foreclosure of the constitutional lien existing against such lands and lots; and whenever any person or persons, firm or corporation shall pay to the tax collector all of the taxes, interest, penalties and costs shown by the records aforesaid to be due and unpaid against any tract, lot or parcel of land for all of the years for which said taxes may be shown to be due and unpaid, then it shall be the duty of the tax collector to issue to such person or persons, firm or corporation a redemption receipt covering such payment as is now required by law. [Act 1915, p. 250, ch. 147, § 1.]

Art. 420b. Records from which notices and statements are to be made; examination of records of district court and county clerk; publication of delinquent list; duties of tax collector.—In making up the notices or statements provided for in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 420a], it shall be the duty of the tax collectors of the various counties in the State to rely upon the delinquent tax records compiled, or to be compiled, under the provisions of Article 7685 and Article 7707 of the Revised Civil Statutes of the State of Texas for 1911, which have been approved by the commissioners court of such counties and a duplicate of which has been filed in the office of the Comptroller of Public Accounts of the State of Texas, and which has or shall hereafter be approved by such State officer; and it shall be the duty of the tax collector, whenever there shall be as many as two years of back taxes that have not been included in such delinquent tax records to prepare or cause to be prepared a supplement to such records which shall be prepared in duplicate, one copy to be filed in the office of the county clerk and one copy thereof to be furnished to the Comptroller of Public Accounts subject to his approval; and whenever said supplement shall have been approved by the commissioners court and by the State Comptroller, then the tax collector shall rely thereon for the data covering delinquent taxes for said years in making out the notices or statements provided for in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 420a]; provided, said tax collector in making up said delinquent tax record and supplement, shall examine the records of the district court and the county clerk's office of his county and no tract of land shall be shown delinquent on said delinquent tax record for any year where the records of the district court or the county clerk's office show that the taxes for said year have been paid. It shall not be necessary to publish said delinquent tax records and supplements thereto if the delinquent list for each year has been advertised as required by Article 7692 of the Revised Civil Statutes of 1911. To enable the tax collector to comply with the provisions of Section 1 of this Act, it shall be the duty of the tax assessors of the various counties of the State to hereafter enter the postoffice address of each and every tax payer after his name on the tax rolls, and the Comptroller shall hereafter provide a column for the entry of such address on the sheets furnished the assessors for making up the tax rolls. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 420c. Duties of county and district attorneys to foreclose tax liens; compensation.—Not later than January 1, 1917, in counties of less than 50,000 inhabitants, and not later than January 1, 1918, in counties of more than 50,000 inhabitants, and not later than June 1 of each year thereafter, it shall be the duty of the county attorney, or the district attorney if there be no county attorney, to file and institute suits as otherwise provided by law for the collection of all delinquent taxes due at the time of filing such suit on land or lots situated in such county, together with interest, penalties and costs then due as otherwise provided by law; provided, that for the work of filing such suits, the county or district attorney shall receive a fee of $5 for the first tract of land included in each suit, and $1 for each additional tract included therein; provided, that where unimproved town lots are sued upon or included in a suit with other land or improved town lots in the same town, only one such additional fee shall be added for each twenty lots or any number less than twenty; and, provided further, that in counties containing over 50,000 inhabitants such attorney's fee shall be $2.50 for the first tract and 50 cents for additional fees as above provided. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 420d. Same; duties mandatory; violation of law a misdemeanor.—The duties prescribed in this Act for the county tax collector, county and district attorneys and other officers, State and county, are hereby declared to be mandatory and shall not be construed as merely directory, and any county or State official who shall fail or refuse to perform the duties herein set out for him to perform shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined in any sum not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, and in addition thereto shall be subject to removal from office; provided, further, that no county or district officer charged with any duty under Title 126, Chapter 15, of the Civil Statutes, 1911, can make settlement with the commissioners court of his county or the Comptroller of this State until he shall have performed the duties required of him under said Title 126, Chapter 15, of the Civil Statutes of 1911. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 420e. Same; repeal.—Article 7707, Revised Civil Statutes of the State of Texas for 1911, and all other laws or parts of laws in conflict with this Act, are hereby expressly repealed. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 420f. Assessment of omitted property.—If any tax assessor, or the county judge, or any member of the commissioners court shall intentionally or willfully neglect, fail or refuse to perform any of the acts herein [Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, Arts. 7710-7714] required to be done by such officers, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine of not less than one hundred, nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than one month nor more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Such offenses may be prosecuted upon indictment or information in any county of the judicial district to which such county belongs other than the county in which the offense is committed. [Act 1905, p. 322, ch. 131, § 6.]

Explanatory.—The above provision [art. 420f] was omitted from the revised Penal Code, and is inserted in this compilation in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

6. BARRATRY

Art. 421. [290] "Barratry" defined and punished.—If any person shall wilfully instigate, maintain, excite, prosecute or encourage the bringing of any suit or suits at law or equity in any court of this state in which such person has no interest, with the intent to distress or harass the defendant therein, or shall wilfully bring or prosecute any false suit or suits at law or equity, of his own, with the intent to distress or harass the defendant therein, or, if any attorney at law shall seek or obtain employment in any suit or case at law, or in equity, to prosecute or defend the same by means of personal solicitation of such employment, or by procuring another to solicit for him employment in such cause, or who shall, by himself or another, seek or obtain such employment by giving to the person from whom the employment is sought money or other thing of value, or who shall, directly or indirectly, pay the debts or liabilities of the person from whom such employment is sought, or who shall loan or promise to give, loan or otherwise grant money or other valuable thing to the person from whom such employment is sought, before such employment, in order to induce such employment, whether the same shall be done directly by him or through another, shall be deemed guilty of barratry, and shall, upon conviction, be punished by fine in any sum not to exceed five hundred dollars, and may in addition thereto be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding three months. The term attorney at law shall include counselor at law; and any attorney at law violating any of the provisions of this law, shall, in addition to the penalty hereinbefore provided, forfeit his right to practice law in this state, and shall be subject to have his license revoked and be disbarred in the manner provided by law for dishonorable conduct or malpractice, whether he has been convicted for violating this law or not. [Act Aug. 21, 1876, p. 227; amended 1901, p. 125.]

Elements of offense.—The English Statutes against common barratry, maintenance and champerty, are not part of the common law of this state. Bentnick v. Franklin, 38 Tex. 458; Stewart v. Railway Co., 62 Tex. 246.

Attorneys at law may contract for a contingent interest in the subject matter of litigation as compensation for professional services where it is done in good faith. Stewart v. Railway Co., 62 Tex. 246.

When one wilfully "instigates," "incites" or "encourages" the institution of a suit with the intent to distress or harass, he is guilty of a misdemeanor and a contract for part of the recovery as a fee is tainted with fraud and unenforceable. Cox et al. v. Watelsky et al., 27 Civ. App. 478, 66 S. W. 328.

The promise of an attorney to defray all the expenses incident to the collection of his client's claim for damages is a promise to grant or give a valuable thing to his client within the meaning of this law. Ft. W. & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Carlock & Gillespie, 33 Civ. App. 202, 75 S. W. 932.

If any attorney does not seek or obtain employment in a case by personal solicitation, it is not unlawful for him to loan or promise to loan or advance money to his client who has employed him to recover damages, and his contract with his client is not thereby affected. M. K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Bacon (Civ. App.) 80 S. W. 573.

Where attorneys having notes in their possession for collection surrendered them to their client, and thereby surrendered their lien for services rendered, and accepted as consideration a sum admittedly an insufficient remuneration for the work and the release of the lien, and a contract that, if the notes were paid, they should receive $300 more, and, if not paid within 90 days, the notes should be returned to the attorneys for collection, and they should then receive a reasonable fee for their services, such contract was not in violation of this article. Fish v. Sadler (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 1185.

7. COMPOUNDING CRIME

Art. 422. [291] Agreeing with offenders not to prosecute.—If any person has knowledge that an offense against the penal laws of this state has been committed, and shall agree with the offender, either directly or indirectly, not to prosecute or inform on him in consideration of money or other valuable things, paid, delivered or promised to him by such offender, or other person for him, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars.

Extorting money by threats of prosecution.—See arts. 1187 and 1328 and notes.

Acts constituting offense.—As distinguished from arts. 1187 and 1328, relative to extorting money or property by threats, this article seems to be predicated upon the idea that the agreement is voluntary and entered into. Williams v. State, 51 App. 1, 100 S. W. 149.

One who gives a mortgage to secure payment of debt of his son, in order to save him from prosecution for a felony, is not guilty of compounding a felony, but the ones who procured the giving of such mortgage might be guilty. Gray v. Freeman, 37 Civ. App. 556, 84 S. W. 1110.

An agreement to the effect that one would not prosecute the son for criminal offense if his parents would convey him a tract of land is not void but might constitute a penal offense. Medearis v. Granberry, 38 Civ. App. 187, 84 S. W. 1071.

A contract made in consideration of compounding a criminal offense is void because in contravention of public policy as well as of this article. Shriver v. McCann (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 317.

Variance.—On a trial for compounding an offense, held that there was no variance as to whether a person through whom the arrangement was made, was acting for defendant or the offender. Powell v. State, 51 App. 342, 101 S. W. 1006.

8. MALICIOUS PROSECUTION

Art. 423. [292] "Malicious prosecution" defined and punished.—If any person in this state, for the purpose of extorting money from another, or the payment or security of a debt due him by such other person, or with intent to vex, harass or injure such person, shall institute, or cause to be instituted, any criminal prosecution against such other person, he shall be deemed guilty of malicious prosecution, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than one month nor more than one year.

Cited, Hubbard v. Lord, 59 Tex. 384.

In general.—See Dempsey v. State, 27 App. 269, 11 S. W. 372, 11 Am. St. Rep. 193; Reed v. State, 29 App. 449, 16 S. W. 99; Blasingame v. State, 47 App. 582, 85 S. W. 275.

Prosecutions should not be resorted to for the purpose of gratifying private malice, or to enforce the collection of debts. Robinson v. State, 33 Tex. 341.

Probable cause and malice.—Malice as element of murder, see notes under art. 1140.

There must be a want of probable cause for instituting or causing to be instituted the alleged malicious prosecution. Dempsey v. State, 27 App. 269, 11 S. W. 372, 11 Am. St. Rep. 193.

"The existence of such facts and circumstances as would excite belief in a reasonable mind, acting on the facts within the knowledge of the prosecutor, that the person charged was guilty of the crime for which he was prosecuted," constitutes probable cause. Dempsey v. State, 27 App. 269, 11 S. W. 372, 11 Am. St. Rep. 193.

The prosecution must have been actuated by malice. Any unlawful act done willfully and purposely to the injury of another, is, as against that person, malicious. Dempsey v. State, 27 App. 269, 11 S. W. 372, 11 Am. St. Rep. 193.

Where the person prosecuted was guilty, the prosecution was not within the statute, though defendant was actuated by a spirit of revenge and a desire to vex, harass and injure such person. Johnson v. State, 32 App. 58, 22 S. W. 43.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 212.

The information need not allege that the prosecution had ended before the information was presented. Dempsey v. State, 27 App. 269, 11 S. W. 372, 11 Am. St. Rep. 193.

Evidence.—A verdict of acquittal in the prosecution instituted by accused is not competent evidence against him. Reed v. State, 29 App. 449, 16 S. W. 99.

Instructions.—The courts should define malice and instruct in regard to the want of probable cause. Reed v. State, 29 App. 449, 16 S. W. 99.

Civil liability.—See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, pp. 1095, 1343, 1432, 2447, 2533.

9. FALSE PERSONATION

Art. 424. [293] Falsely pretending to be an officer.—Any person who shall falsely assume or pretend to be a judicial or executive officer of this state, or a justice of the peace, sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable or any other judicial or ministerial officer of any county in the state, and shall take upon himself to act as such, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding six months, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act Nov. 12, 1866, p. 201.]

Officers personated.—It seems that an indictment will lie for falsely personating a minister of the gospel, but it must expressly aver that the accused was not a minister. Young v. State, 35 Tex. 114.

A notary public must be confirmed by the senate, but if he acts officially under an appointment and commission, without confirmation, honestly believing that he has a right to do so, he is not liable criminally. Brown v. State, 43 Tex. 478.

A policeman is an executive officer within the purview of this article. Ex parte Preston, 72 App. 77, 161 S. W. 115.

Intent.—See Burnsides v. State, 51 App. 399, 102 S. W. 118.

It is not the intention of this article to punish one who honestly believes that he is entitled to the office in which he assumes to act. The ordinary test of criminality is the criminal intent or guilty knowledge, and in this offense such intent or knowledge is an essential constituent. The provisions of the Code as to mistake do not apply to offenses of this character. Brown v. State, 43 Tex. 478.

Mistake.—See notes under art. 46, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 213.

An indictment which alleges that branch pilots are executive officers of the State is bad. Petterson v. State (Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 100.

An indictment charging defendant with pretending to be sheriff of a county, in that he pretended to be J. and acted as such officer is not supported by proof that he represented himself to be the sheriff without representing himself to J., who was the sheriff. Butts v. State, 47 App. 494, 84 S. W. 586.

That the complaint charged that defendant "unlawfully, willfully, and falsely assumed and pretended," etc., to be a deputy sheriff, while the information only charged that he "unlawfully and falsely assumed and pretended," etc., was not a fatal variance. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 714.

Instructions.—The court need not require that defendant's act should have been wilfully done, nor define "wilful," though criminal intent and guilty knowledge are elements of the offense. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 714.

10. BADGES, UNLAWFUL WEARING

Art. 425. Badges, unlawful wearing.—Any person who shall wilfully and without due authority use or wear the badge, label or button or other emblem of the United Confederate Veterans, United Sons of Confederate Veterans, United Daughters of the Confederacy, Grand Army of the Republic, Women's Relief Corps, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the United States of America, the Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Woodmen of the World, any labor organization, or any order, society or organization in the state of Texas, or who shall use or wear the same to obtain aid or assistance or patronage thereby within this state, unless he shall be entitled to use or wear the same under the rules and regulations of the United Confederate Veterans, United Sons of Confederate Veterans, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Grand Army of the Republic, Women's Relief Corps, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the United States of America, the Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Woodmen of the World, any labor organization, or any order, society or organization in the state of Texas, whose badge, label or button or other emblem was so used or worn, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding fifty dollars, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding sixty days, or both, at the discretion of the court or jury trying the case. [Act 1909, p. 134.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732j.

11. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Art. 426. [294] Wilful neglect of official duty.—If any officer of the law shall wilfully or negligently fail to perform any duty imposed on him by the Penal Code or Code of Criminal Procedure he shall, when the act or omission is not otherwise defined, be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished as prescribed in the succeeding article. [Act May 26, 1864, pp. 7, 8; P. C. 348a.]

"Succeeding article" refers to art. 430 post.

See notes under article 430 post.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 214.

Art. 427. Selection of jurors in certain counties.—That between the 1st and 15th days of August of each year, in all counties in this state having therein a city or cities containing a population aggregating twenty thousand (20,000) or more people, as shown by the United States census of date next preceding such action, the tax collector of such county or one of his deputies, together with the tax assessor of such county or one of his deputies, together with the sheriff of such county or one of his deputies, together with the county clerk of such county or one of his deputies, together with the district clerk of such county or one of his deputies, shall meet at the court house of such county and shall select from the list of qualified jurors of such county as shown by the tax lists in the tax assessor's office for the current year, the jurors for service in the district and county courts of such county for the ensuing year in the manner hereinafter provided. [Acts 1907, p. 269, sec. 1. Amended Acts 1911, p. 150, sec. 1.]

If any of the officers mentioned in this article shall wilfully or negligently fail to serve as herein provided, or if any of the said officers shall wilfully or negligently fail to designate one of their deputies for such service, or if, after such designation, such deputy shall wilfully or negligently fail to serve, the officer so failing to serve or to designate a deputy, or the deputy so failing to serve, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1907, p. 271, ch. 139, § 10.]

Denial by the supreme court of a writ of error to review a decision of the court of civil appeals adjudging the validity of this article amounts to a decision that the law is valid and is conclusive on the court of civil appeals in a subsequent case. Rice & Lyon v. Lewis (Civ. App.) 125 S. W. 961.

This article is a "general" and not a special law, within Const. art. 3, § 56, prohibiting the passage of any local or special law regulating the summoning or impaneling of juries. Houston Electric Co. v. Faroux (Civ. App.) 125 S. W. 922.

Effect.—This act does not repeal the statutory provision relating to the summoning of talesmen, and where less than 24 names are drawn from the wheel the judge can order the sheriff to summon talesmen to fill up the panel. Houston Electric Co. v. Seegar, 54 Civ. App. 255, 117 S. W. 902, 903.

Art. 428. Putting in or taking names from wheel illegally.—If any person shall put into the wheel or take from the wheel, except at the times and in the manner provided for by law, a card or cards bearing the name or names of any person, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1907, p. 272.]

Art. 429. Providing penalty.—If any person shall violate any of the provisions of said law [Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 5151-5158], or shall wilfully or negligently fail or neglect to perform any duty therein required of him, then, where no penalty is specifically imposed by the terms of said law, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars. [Id., p. 271.]

Art. 430. [295] General penalty, in the absence of any other.—Whenever, in the Penal Code or Code of Criminal Procedure, it is declared that an officer is guilty of an offense on account of any particular act or omission, and there is not in the Penal Code any punishment assigned for the same, such officer shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not exceeding two hundred dollars. [Act March 5, 1863, p. 12; P. C. 349.]

Drunkenness in office.—See arts. 200 to 203.

Acts covered.—Article 426 seems to refer to acts of omission rather than of commission. State v. Kingsbury, 37 Tex. 159. This statute covers every wilful failure or neglect to discharge an official duty, the penalty for which is otherwise not provided for; and under it, a justice could be indicted for failure to report as required by Paschal's Digest, sec. 3772, State v. Baldwin, 39 Tex. 155; or a sheriff for failing to properly supervise his jail, Gordon v. State, 2 App. 154; but intimated that for subscribing a jurat, several months after it was made, as of the day it was made, is an imprudence, and not a crime on the part of a district clerk. Bacon v. State, 10 Tex. 98.

Indictment.—An indictment charging a sheriff with unlawfully and negligently exercising supervision and control over the county jail held sufficient. Gordon v. State, 2 App. 154.

Art. 431. [296] Malfeasance, when not otherwise designated.—All offenses committed by officers of the law, when not otherwise designated, are known under the general term of malfeasance in office. [P. C. 350.]

Art. 432. [297] "Officer" defined.—By an "officer of the law" as used in the preceding article is meant any magistrate, peace officer or clerk of a court. [P. C. 351.]

Art. 433. [298] Sheriff failing to make report to adjutant general.—1. Hereafter it shall be the duty of each sheriff in this state, upon the close of any regular term of the district court in his county, or within thirty days thereafter, to make out and forward by mail to the adjutant general of this state a certified list of all persons who, after indictment for a felony, have fled from said county. Such lists shall contain the full name of each of such fugitives, with a description giving his age, height, weight, color and occupation, the complexion of skin and the color of eyes and hair, and any peculiarities in person, speech, manner or gait that may serve to identify such fugitive, so far as the sheriff may be able to give them, and shall state the offense with which such person is charged.

2. The adjutant general shall prescribe, have printed and forward to the sheriffs of the several counties the necessary blanks upon which are to be made the lists herein required.

3. Any sheriff in this state failing or refusing to make out and forward said certified lists, within the time and according to the forms herein provided for, shall be deemed guilty of official misconduct, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act March 25, 1887, p. 44.]

Art. 434. Sheriff appointing deputies not allowed by law.—Any sheriff of any county of this state who shall appoint any more deputies than are provided for by law, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars; provided, further that this law shall not apply to counties having more than one district court. [Act 1903, p. 160.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 175.

TITLE 9

OF OFFENSES AGAINST THE PUBLIC PEACE

Chap.	Chap.
1. Unlawful assemblies.	3. Affrays and disturbances of the peace.
2. Riots.	4. Unlawfully carrying arms.

CHAPTER ONE

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES

Art.	Art.
435. "Unlawful assembly" defined.	443. To prevent the sitting of any tribunal.
436. To prevent elections.	444. To prevent the collection of taxes.
437. To prevent execution of law, etc.	445. To prevent any person pursuing his labor.
438. To effect the rescue of a capital felon.	446. To frighten any one by disguise.
439. To effect the rescue of a felon.	447. To disturb families.
440. To rescue one accused of capital felony.	448. To effect any other illegal object.
441. To rescue one accused of lesser felony.	449. Lawful meetings not included.
442. To rescue one accused of misdemeanor.	450. Lawful meetings included if the unlawful purpose is afterward agreed upon.

Article 435. [299] "Unlawful assembly" defined.—An unlawful assembly" is the meeting of three or more persons with intent to aid each other by violence, or in any other manner either to commit an offense, or illegally to deprive any person of any right, or to disturb him in the enjoyment thereof. [P. C. 355.]

McGehee v. State, 23 App. 330, 5 S. W. 222.

What constitutes offense.—Under this article and articles 445 and 451, though not per se an offense to stop the running of trains, it was an offense for two or more persons to meet and co-operate in preventing the conductor of a railroad train from pursuing his usual occupation and employment of operating such train. McGehee v. State, 23 App. 330, 5 S. W. 222.

There is no unlawful assembly except when it contemplates a disturbance of the peace or injury to the rights of individuals, and it cannot be composed of persons assembled to carry on their ordinary business though on a day and in a manner not authorized by law, unless their actions will in some way disturb the rights of others or the public rights. An actress traveling around the country and meeting with others on Sunday in a theatre to entertain the people is not guilty thereof. Ex parte Jacobson, 55 App. 237, 115 S. W. 1193.

Indictment or information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 96, 97, 222-232.

A count of an indictment held sufficient to charge an unlawful assembly. McGehee v. State, 23 App. 330, 5 S. W. 222.

Indictment or information for riot must show for what purpose the rioters assembled. Failing in this allegation the information was insufficient. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 672, 18 S. W. 676.

An indictment for an unlawful assembly to prevent a party by violence from having a social gathering or dance at his house, should allege that such party has a house and was giving or about to give a social gathering or dance, etc. Follis v. State, 37 App. 535, 40 S. W. 277.

Art. 436. [300] To prevent elections.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly is to prevent the holding of any public election, or to prevent any particular person or number of persons from voting at a public election, the punishment shall be that which is prescribed in article 266. [P. C. 356.]

See arts. 265-269, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 96, 97, 222-232.

Art. 437. [301] To prevent execution of law, etc.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to oppose or prevent the execution or enforcement of any law of the state, or the lawful decree or judgment of a court in a civil action, the punishment shall be a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [P. C. 357.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 224-232.

Art. 438. [302] To effect the rescue of capital felon.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to effect the rescue of a prisoner lawfully convicted of a capital offense, the punishment shall be a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [P. C. 358.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 226-232.

Art. 439. [303] To effect the rescue of a felon.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to effect the rescue of any person lawfully convicted of a felony less than capital, the punishment shall be a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [P. C. 359.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 226-232.

Art. 440. [304] To rescue one accused of capital felony.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to rescue any person arrested or imprisoned for a capital offense before trial, the punishment shall be a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [P. C. 360.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 227-232.

Art. 441. [305] To rescue one accused of lessor felony.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to rescue any person lawfully arrested or imprisoned for any felony less than capital, the punishment shall be a fine not exceeding three hundred dollars. [P. C. 361.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 227-232.

Art. 442. [306] To rescue one accused of misdemeanor.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to rescue a person accused of a misdemeanor, the punishment shall be a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars. [P. C. 362.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 227-232.

Art. 443. [307] To prevent the sitting of any tribunal.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to prevent or oppose the sitting of any lawful court, board of arbitrators or referees, the punishment shall be a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [P. C. 362a.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 228-232.

Art. 444. [308] To prevent the collection of taxes.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to prevent the collection of taxes, or other money due the state, the punishment shall be a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [P. C. 363.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 229-232.

Art. 445. [309] To prevent any person from pursuing his labor.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to prevent any person from pursuing any labor, occupation or employment, or to intimidate any person from following his daily avocation, or to interfere in any manner with the labor or employment of another, the punishment shall be by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

Cited, McGehee v. State, 23 App. 330, 5 S. W. 222.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 231, 232.

For indictment under which conviction was sustained, see McGehee v. State, 23 App. 333, 5 S. W. 222.

An information for preventing one from performing the duties of his lawful employment, was defective for failure to set forth the nature of the "lawful employment." Luter v. State, 32 App. 69, 22 S. W. 140.

An indictment charging accused with assembling with others to prevent E. from operating a certain farm, by illegally depriving him of the right to employ Mexicans as laborers thereon, was defective in failing to allege that E. then and there had in his employ, or was about to employ, Mexicans as laborers on his farm. Bradford v. State, 40 App. 632, 51 S. W. 379.

Art. 446. [310] To frighten any one by disguise.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to alarm and frighten any person by appearing in disguise, so that the real persons so acting and assembling cannot be readily known, and by using language or gestures calculated to produce in such person the fear of bodily harm, the punishment shall be by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act Nov. 6, 1871, p. 19; P. C. 363a.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 231, 232.

Art. 447. [311] To disturb families.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to repair to the vicinity of any residence, and to disturb the inmates thereof by loud, unusual or unseemly noises, or by the discharge of firearms, the punishment shall be by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. A residence may be either a public or private house.

See Ex parte Jacobson, 55 App. 237, 115 S. W. 1193.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 232.

Art. 448. [312] To effect any other illegal object.—If the purpose of the unlawful assembly be to effect any illegal object other than those mentioned in the preceding articles of this chapter, all persons engaged therein shall be liable to fine not exceeding two hundred dollars. [P. C. 364.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 232.

An indictment alleging that defendants unlawfully met in a certain county, with intent, by violence, to deprive a certain person of his right to have a dance at his house, sufficiently laid the venue, without averring that the house was in that county; the unlawful meeting being the gist of the offense. Follis v. State, 37 App. 535, 40 S. W. 277.

An indictment alleging that defendants met to aid each other, by violence, to deprive a certain person of his right to have a dance at house, is fatally defective, unless it charges that such person had a house and was giving, or intending to give, a dance there. Follis v. State, 37 App. 535, 40 S. W. 277.

Art. 449. [313] Lawful meetings not included.—No public meeting for the purpose of exercising any political, religious or other lawful rights, no assembly for the purpose of lawful amusement or recreation, is within the meaning of this chapter. [P. C. 365.]

See Ex parte Jacobson, 55 App. 237, 115 S. W. 1193.

Inclusion of similar offenses.—This article must be held to include similar offenses, as the articles which precede it. The act of entertaining or amusing an audience is not and cannot constitute a disturbance of the peace, and has none of the elements of such an offense, whether done on Sunday or any other day. Ex parte Jacobson, 55 App. 237, 115 S. W. 1196.

Art. 450. [314] Lawful meetings included if unlawful purpose is afterward agreed on.—Where the persons engaged in any unlawful assembly, met at first for a lawful purpose, and afterward agreed upon an unlawful purpose, they are equally guilty of the offense defined in article 435. [P. C. 376.]

CHAPTER TWO

RIOTS

Art.		Art.
451.	"Riot" defined.	460.	Preventing any person from labor.
452.	To prevent collection of taxes.	461.	Disturbing residence.
453.	To prevent execution of law.	462.	Committing any other illegal act.
454.	Rescue of felon under death sentence.	463.	Half penalty when object not accomplished.
455.	Rescue of felon less than capital.	464.	All participants guilty.
456.	Rescue of one convicted of misdemeanor.	465.	Where assembly was at first lawful.
457.	Rescue of one imprisoned for capital offense.	466.	One may be prosecuted before others are arrested.
458.	Felony less than capital.	467.	Indictment, requisites of.
459.	Misdemeanor.	468.	Duty of officers in case of riot.

Article 451. [315] "Riot" defined.—If the persons unlawfully assembled together do or attempt to do any illegal act, all those engaged in such illegal act are guilty of riot. [P. C. 366.]

See McGehee v. State, 23 App. 330, 5 S. W. 222.

Compound offense.—Riot is a compound offense—there must be both an unlawful act to be done and an unlawful assembly of more than two persons. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 672, 18 S. W. 676.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 96, 233.

See post, arts. 466, 467.

Indictment or information for riot must show for what purpose the rioters assembled that the court may judge whether it was lawful or not, and it must state in terms that the defendants "did unlawfully assemble together." It must likewise state the illegal act which was the object of the meeting, for a riot is a compound offense—there must not only be an unlawful act to be done, but an unlawful assembly of more than two persons. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 672, 18 S. W. 676.

Defective in this case in not alleging that the parties "did unlawfully assemble together," or that, having lawfully assembled they afterwards joined in the commission of an unlawful act. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 672, 18 S. W. 676.

Art. 452. [316] To prevent collection of taxes.—If the purpose of a riot be to prevent the collection of taxes or other money due the state, any person engaged therein shall be punished by fine not less than two hundred dollars and not exceeding one thousand dollars, although the purpose of the riot be not effected; and if such illegal purpose be effected, in addition thereto, imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years may be added. [P. C. 367.]

See Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 672, 18 S. W. 676, which, with reference to essentials of indictment, applies to arts. 465, 466, 469, 470 and 472.

Art. 453. [317] Execution of law.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall prevent the execution or enforcement of any law of the state, or the lawful decree or judgment of any court in a civil cause, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years, and by fine not less than two hundred nor more than one thousand dollars. [P. C. 368.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 233b, 233c.

Art. 454. [318] Rescue of felon under sentence of death.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall rescue another, lawfully convicted or under lawful sentence of death, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than five nor more than ten years. [P. C. 369.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 233d.

Art. 455. [319] Rescue of felon less than capital.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall rescue any prisoner, lawfully convicted of felony less than capital, or lawfully under sentence for such offense, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years. [P. C. 370.]

Art. 456. [320] Rescue of one convicted of misdemeanor.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall rescue any prisoner, lawfully convicted of a misdemeanor, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not less than six months nor more than two years.

Art. 457. [321] Rescue of one imprisoned for capital felony.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall rescue any prisoner, lawfully arrested or imprisoned for a capital felony, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years. [P. C. 371.]

Art. 458. [322] Felony less than capital.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall rescue any prisoner, lawfully arrested or imprisoned for a felony less than capital, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 164; P. C. 372.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 233d.

Art. 459. [323] Misdemeanor.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall rescue any prisoner, lawfully arrested or imprisoned for a misdemeanor, he shall be punished by confinement in the county jail not less than six nor more than twelve months.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 233d.

Art. 460. [324] Preventing any person from labor.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall prevent any other person from pursuing any labor, occupation or employment, or intimidate any other person from following his daily avocation, or interfere in any manner with the labor or employment of another, he shall be punished by confinement in the county jail not less than six months nor more than one year.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 233e.

Art. 461. [325] Disturbing residence.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall disturb the inmates of any residence by loud, unusual or unseemly noises, or by the discharge of fire-arms in the immediate vicinity of such residence, he shall be punished by fine not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars. A residence may be either a public or private house.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 233f.

Art. 462. [326] Committing any other illegal act.—If any person, by engaging in a riot, shall commit any illegal act other than those mentioned in the ten preceding articles, he shall, in addition to receiving the punishment affixed to such illegal act by other provisions of this Code, be also punished by confinement in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [P. C. 373.]

Indictment.—An indictment which charges that defendant "then and there engaged in a riot with other parties, [named.] who had assembled at the residence of T., and he did then and there, acting with said other parties, disturb the inmates of T.'s residence by the discharge of firearms," is fatally defective, in that it fails to allege facts showing either an unlawful assemblage and its purpose, or a lawful assemblage and a subsequent agreement of the persons so assembled to commit an unlawful act. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 672, 18 S. W. 676.

Evidence.—Testimony of accomplices of a meeting to run Mexican laborers out of the country held not sufficiently corroborated by other evidence that notices were afterwards posted on certain premises, without evidence as to who posted them. Holman v. State, 40 App. 628, 51 S. W. 379.

Art. 463. [327] Half penalty when object not accomplished.—When the purpose of the riot was to effect any of the illegal acts mentioned in the preceding articles of this chapter, and such unlawful object is not effected, the punishment may, in the discretion of the jury, be diminished to half the penalty affixed to such riot where the illegal purpose was effected. [P. C. 374.]

For construction of articles 463 to 467, see Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 372, 18 S. W. 676.

Art. 464. [328] All participants guilty.—A person engaged in any riot, whereby an illegal act is committed, shall be deemed guilty of the offense of riot, according to the character and degree of such offense, whether the said illegal act was in fact perpetrated by him, or by those with whom he is participating. [P. C. 375.]

See note under article 463 ante.

Art. 465. [329] Where assembly was at first lawful.—Where the assembly was at first lawful, and the persons so assembled afterward agree to join in the commission of an act which would amount to riot, if it had been the original purpose of the meeting, all those who do not retire when the change of purpose is known are guilty of riot. [P. C. 377.]

See note under article 463 ante.

Art. 466. [330] One may be prosecuted before others are arrested.—Any one person engaged in an unlawful assembly or riot may be prosecuted and convicted before the others are arrested, but the indictment or information must state, and it must be proved on the trial, that three or more persons were assembled, and their names given, if known; if not known, it must be so alleged. [P. C. 378.]

See notes under articles 451 and 463 ante.

Art. 467. [331] Indictment, requisites of.—The indictment or information must likewise state the illegal act which was the object of the meeting, or which they proceeded to do, if the assembly was originally lawful. [P. C. 379.]

See notes under articles 451 and 463 ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 233a.

Art. 468. [332] Duty of officers in case of riot.—If any persons shall be unlawfully or riotously assembled together, it shall be the duty of any magistrate or peace officer, so soon as it may come to his knowledge, to go to the place of such unlawful or riotous assembly and command the persons assembled to disperse; and all who continue so unlawfully assembled, or engaged in a riot, after being warned to disperse, shall be punished by the addition of one-half the penalty to which they would otherwise be liable, if no such warning had been given. [P. C. 380.]

CHAPTER THREE

AFFRAYS AND DISTURBANCES OF THE PEACE

Art.	Art.
469. "Affray" defined.	472. "Public place" defined.
470. Disturbance of the peace.	473. Shooting in public place.
471. Vulgar or profane language over telephone.	474. Horse racing on public road or street.

Article 469. [333] "Affray" defined.—If any two or more persons shall fight together in a public place, they shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. [O. C. 381.]

Nature and elements of offense.—It is not essential to constitute an affray that the fighting should be by consent of the parties concerned. It is not the mere fighting of the persons engaged that constitutes the gravamen of this offense. It is because the violence is committed in a public place and to the terror of the people that the crime is called an affray, instead of an assault and battery. Hence, one of the parties engaged in an affray may be convicted and punished, whilst the other may be acquitted. Saddler v. State, Dallam, 610.

An affray is a State offense and can also be made a city offense, and when one is convicted in a city court he cannot be prosecuted in a State court for the same offense. Ex parte Freeland, 38 App. 321, 42 S. W. 295.

If there be actual fighting in a public place a participant who used rough and insulting language before the fray and fought zealously while fighting is not innocent because he entered into it reluctantly. Pollock v. State, 32 App. 29, 22 S. W. 19.

When two persons by mutual consent engage in a personal encounter in a public road in presence of a third party it is an affray. Piper v. State (Cr. App.) 51 S. W. 1118.

A private residence may become a "public place," within the statute, by throwing it open to the public generally for a single entertainment, and persons who engage in a fight during such entertainment may be prosecuted under the statute. Austin v. State, 57 App. 611, 124 S. W. 639.

A conviction for engaging in an "affray" does not bar a prosecution for "aggravated assault" under a plea of former jeopardy, nor does the doctrine of carving apply. McCraw v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 967.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 234.

The indictment need not allege that any fighting took place; "did make an affray" is sufficient. State v. Washington, 19 Tex. 128, 70 Am. Dec. 323 (but this was before the Code). It may charge generally that defendant "did fight with one C. in a public place," without further particularity. Shelton v. State, 30 Tex. 431. See an approved precedent. State v. Billingsley, 43 Tex. 93.

An indictment charging that, at a time and place stated, being a public place, the parties "did unlawfully and willingly fight together though not according to common law precedents conformed to the statute and was sufficient." State v. Billingsley, 43 Tex. 93.

It is sufficient to charge fighting in a public place without describing it. Shelton v. State, 30 Tex. 431, Tummins v. State, 18 App. 13, and Dailey v. State, 27 App. 569, 11 S. W. 636, relating to indictments under the statute forbidding playing cards in a public place hold that unless the place is among those enumerated in the statute the facts constituting it a public place should be alleged. And see notes to post, art. 472.

Art. 470. [334] Disturbance of the peace.—If any person shall go into or near any public place, or into or near any private house, and shall use loud and vociferous or obscene, vulgar or indecent language, or swear or curse, or yell or shriek, or expose his person, or rudely display any pistol or other deadly weapon, in a manner calculated to disturb the inhabitants of such public place or private house, he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. [Amended by Act Feb. 19, 1883, p. 12.]

See, Lumbkin v. State, 12 App. 341; McCandless v. State, 21 App. 411, 2 S. W. 811; Wallace v. State, 33 App. 178, 26 S. W. 68.

Disturbance of occupant of residence or guest therein.—The language used must be of a character calculated to disturb the inhabitants of the house, and if not near enough for them to hear it conviction could not be sustained. Elliott v. State, 37 App. 514, 40 S. W. 234.

That defendant was mistaken in the house was no defense; he appearing there at night, rattling the door, demanding admittance and threatening to kill the inhabitants. Garrett v. State, 49 App. 235, 91 S. W. 577.

The court should instruct to the effect that the jury must believe that defendant not only cursed and swore near the alleged private residence, but that he did so in a manner calculated to disturb the inhabitants thereof. Jones v. State, 50 App. 210, 96 S. W. 29; Crain v. State, 53 App. 617, 111 S. W. 150.

In a prosecution for swearing in a public place at the residence of a person named, where people were assembled for the purpose of innocent amusement, much of the evidence tended to show that the persons present were there by invitation. Held, that the court should have given a requested charge that if the place charged in the indictment was not a public place, but a private residence, and those assembled were there by invitation, then accused would be entitled to an acquittal. Austin v. State, 57 App. 623, 124 S. W. 636.

Inhabitants protected by statute.—Those occupying residences abutting a public street are inhabitants of such street. Keller v. State, 25 App. 325, 8 S. W. 275.

Houses protected.—A private house in course of construction, so nearly finished that the owner was moving into it was within the protection of the statute. Crain v. State, 53 App. 617, 111 S. W. 150.

Rudely displaying pistol or deadly weapon.—Holding a pistol in the hand and firing it into the air is "rudely" displaying it. And it was not necessary that the assembly disturbed saw the pistol. Gozy v. State, 34 App. 146, 29 S. W. 783.

Rudely displaying and firing a pistol at or near a private residence in a manner calculated to disturb the inhabitants is an offense, though done by a peace officer. Russell v. State, 38 App. 590, 44 S. W. 159.

A club may or may not be a deadly weapon, but it is not a deadly weapon within the meaning of this statute. This article is confined to pistols or guns or weapons of like character usually understood to be deadly. Fuller v. State, 48 App. 300, 87 S. W. 832.

That one who displayed a pistol in a road dedicated to public use owned the fee in the road did not prevent his conviction under this and article 472. Jones v. State, 60 App. 56, 130 S. W. 1001.

Where, in a prosecution for rudely displaying a deadly weapon in a manner calculated to disturb the inhabitants of a private residence, it appeared that the tenant who had occupied the residence and loaded all his household articles preparatory to moving off the premises, but had not left the premises when trouble arose, and defendant displayed his rifle in such a way as to frighten the tenant's wife and children, the place was properly found to have been the "private residence" of the tenant at the time of the offense. Ward v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 343.

Indecent exposure of person.—In a trial for indecent exposure in a public place while taking a bath in a livery stable, it was error to refuse to instruct that accused was not guilty unless he acted in such way as tended to disturb persons rightfully at the stable, but unqualified instructions that accused would not violate any law by taking a bath in the stable, or if he did not expose his person outside the stable, were properly refused. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 599.

Indictment and information, and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 235.

An information for disturbance of the peace, brought under this article need not set out the abusive language used, and an information based on article 1020, if it charges that defendant, in the presence and hearing of another, did curse or abuse such person, under circumstances reasonably calculated to provoke a breach of the peace, is sufficient. In so far as the case of Elkins v. State, 26 App. 220, 9 S. W. 491, announces or intimates a rule different from that above stated, that case is disapproved. Foreman v. State, 31 App. 477, 20 S. W. 1109.

The allegation that defendant acted "in a manner calculated to disturb the inhabitants of said public place" sufficiently avers that people were assembled in the place named. Parsons v. State, 33 App. 540, 28 S. W. 204.

An information describing the place as St. Paul's Church should have been quashed where the complaint described it as St. Paul's Methodist Church. Landrum v. State, 37 App. 666, 40 S. W. 737.

An indictment alleging that defendant "willfully and unlawfully" displayed a deadly weapon to wit a certain club of wood was insufficient in the use of the word willfully, and in description of the weapon. Fuller v. State, 48 App. 300, 87 S. W. 832.

Where the indictment alleges that defendant did rudely display a gun, it is fatally defective if it does not allege that the gun was a deadly weapon. Jones v. State, 50 App. 210, 96 S. W. 29.

Failure to allege that the gun displayed was a deadly weapon was a fatal defect. Jones v. State, 50 App. 210, 96 S. W. 29.

This article provides various and sundry means by which its provisions may be violated. The pleader must select the particular means which the accused used, and the proof will be confined to the allegations. Lockett v. State, 50 App. 590, 99 S. W. 1011.

An indictment, charging that defendant and two others unlawfully met together with the intent to aid each other to repair to the vicinity of the residence of V. and there disturb her and two others, inmates thereof, by loud and unseemly noise, and that they did then and there by such means disturb V. and the other inmates of such residence, in the enjoyment of her and their right to peace, etc., was fatally defective, for failure to allege that V. owned any residence, or occupied a house as a residence, and that defendants went to her residence. Bales v. State, 57 S. W. 874, 122 S. W. 874.

Where the information charged accused with having used loud and vociferous, vulgar, and indecent language, proof that accused came to the house of complainant and said, "By God, I am not going to come back here any more; I want you to pay me now," there was a fatal variance. Snodgrass v. State, 61 App. 654, 136 S. W. 57.

Sufficiency of evidence of offense.—Evidence that defendant while with some drinking companions fired at a dog and then into a house, hitting a woman therein sustained a conviction. Spiars v. State, 40 App. 437, 50 S. W. 947.

Evidence held to sustain conviction for swearing and using obscene language in a manner calculated to disturb the inhabitants of a private house. Mercer v. State, 52 App. 321, 106 S. W. 365.

Evidence in a prosecution for a breach of the peace held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Robertson v. State, 63 App. 268, 140 S. W. 105.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of indecent exposure in a public place in violation of this article and article 472 post. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 599.

Opinion evidence.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.

Charge on weight of evidence.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 735.

Art. 471. Vulgar or profane language over telephone.—If any person shall use any vulgar, profane, obscene or indecent language over or through any telephone in this state, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1909, p. 87.]

Language within statute.—The use of the expression "son of a bitch" in a conversation over the telephone falls within the provision of this article, the term "indecent" meaning "unfit to be heard, offensive to modesty and delicacy," the term "vulgar" signifying "lack of cultivation or refinement," while the term "obscene" means "offensive to chastity or modesty," for the expression used is not merely rude and uncouth. Darnell v. State (Cr. App.) 161 S. W. 971.

Defenses.—It is no defense to a prosecution under this article that prosecuting witness could have disconnected the phone and thereby refused to listen to more than one single utterance by defendant. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 82.

Complaint and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 235.

A complaint and information following the language of the statute is sufficient, though there is no allegation that the language was heard by any one or that it disturbed any one. And the commission of the offense is sufficiently alleged before filing of the complaint and information by the use of the word "heretofore." Where the complaint and information alleged the use of obscene language over a telephone on the 16th day of March, the testimony of the sole witness for the state, on a trial had on the 24th day of March, that defendant used the language charged on the former date, did not show that the offense was not committed before the complaint and information was filed. And an allegation that defendant used obscene language over a telephone describing it by number and giving the ownership thereof, is sufficient though not specifically alleging that it was in operation and capable of being actually used. So also an allegation that the telephone belonging to the Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Company, is sufficient without alleging that such company was a copartnership, corporation, joint-stock company, or individual firm. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 82.

Art. 472. [335] "Public place" defined.—A public place, within the meaning of the two preceding articles, is any public road, street or alley of a town or city, or any inn, tavern, store, grocery or workshop, or place at which people are assembled, or to which people commonly resort for purposes of business, amusement, recreation or other lawful purpose. [Amended by Act Feb. 19, 1883, p. 12.]

Validity of statute.—This statute is not void for uncertainty or inaccuracy. Sisk v. State, 35 Tex. 495.

Public place.—The following have been held to be public places: A public street. King v. Brown, 100 Tex. 109, 94 S. W. 328; a grand jury room, during session. Murchison v. State, 24 App. 8, 5 S. W. 508. While the following have been held not to be public places: A private room in a hotel. Bordeaux v. State, 31 App. 37, 19 S. W. 603; a livery stable. Metzger v. State, 31 App. 11, 19 S. W. 254; a gin. Dailey v. State, 27 App. 569, 11 S. W. 637; a boarding house. Huffman v. State, 49 App. 319, 92 S. W. 419.

A private residence may become a "public place," within the statute, by throwing it open to the public generally for a single entertainment, and persons who engage in a fight during such entertainment may be prosecuted under the statute. Austin v. State, 57 App. 611, 124 S. W. 639.

That one who displayed a pistol in a road dedicated to public use owned the fee in the road did not prevent his conviction under this article and article 470. Jones v. State, 60 App. 56, 130 S. W. 1001.

Indictment.—Any facts making a place public which is not so per se must be alleged and shown. Dailey v. State, 27 App. 569, 11 S. W. 637; Huffman v. State, 49 App. 319, 92 S. W. 419.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of indecent exposure in a public place in violation of this article and article 470 ante. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 599.

Art. 473. [336] Shooting in public place.—If any person shall discharge any gun, pistol or fire-arms of any description, or shall discharge any cannon cracker or torpedo on or across any public square, street or alley in any city, town or village, or in any street, or within one hundred yards of any business house, in this state, he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. [Act Nov. 12, 1886, p. 210; Amended Act 1901, p. 300.]

Police shooting dogs under city ordinance.—City ordinance authorizing the shooting by police of unmuzzled dogs found at large is unconstitutional as contrary to this section and such policeman was not protected thereby. Lynn v. State, 33 App. 153, 25 S. W. 779.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 238.

Art. 474. [337] Horse racing on public road and street.—Any person who shall run, or be in any way concerned in running any horse race in, along or across any public square, street or alley in any city, town or village, or in, along or across any public road within this state, shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act May 19, 1873, pp. 83, 84.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 239-241.

If the indictment is against two persons, it must allege they ran together, State v. Catchings, 43 Tex. 654; but the objection comes too late on appeal, if it does not so allege. King v. State, 3 App. 7.

CHAPTER FOUR

UNLAWFULLY CARRYING ARMS

Art.	Art.
475. Unlawfully carrying arms.	478. Not applicable to whom.
476. Not applicable, when, and to whom.	479. Arrest without warrant; officer failing to arrest, punishable.
477. Carrying arms in church or other assembly.	480. Not applicable to frontier counties.

Article 475. [338] Unlawfully carrying arms.—If any person in this state shall carry on or about his person, saddle, or in his saddle bags, any pistol, dirk, dagger, slung shot, sword cane, spear, or knuckles made of any metal or any hard substance, bowie knife, or any other knife manufactured or sold for purposes of offense or defense, he shall be punished by fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, or by confinement in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Amended by Act Jan. 30, 1889; amended 1905, p. 56.]

1. Constitutional right to keep and bear arms.—The constitutional right “to keep or bear arms in self-defense or in the defense of the state,” is no defense to an indictment for carrying a pistol contrary to the statute. Lewis v. State, 7 App. 567.

A requested charge in a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol that under the state and federal Constitutions every person is allowed to carry arms in the protection of his personal property, and, if accused was in a difficulty and had been physically injured and carried the pistol to protect himself, the jury should acquit, was properly refused as an incorrect statement of the law. Greer v. State, 62 App. 81, 136 S. W. 451.

2. Constitutionality of statute.—A portion of this article which as formerly enacted declared that the weapon shall be forfeited was held unconstitutional. Hudeburgh v. State, 38 Tex. 535; Jennings v. State, 5 App. 298.

This statute is constitutional. It does not conflict with section 23 of the Bill of Rights of this state, which declares that “every citizen shall have the right to keep and bear arms in the lawful defense of himself or the state; but the legislature shall have power by law to regulate the wearing of arms with a view to prevent crime.” State v. Duke, 42 Tex. 455; English v. State, 35 Tex. 478, 14 Am. Rep. 374; Lewis v. State, 7 App. 567.

Act Jan. 30, 1889, entitled “An act to amend an act [passed February 24, 1887] entitled ‘An act to amend art. 318, chapter 4, title 9, of the Penal Code,’” is not invalid because of the failure of the first section thereof to express the same intention. Ratigan v. State, 33 App. 301, 26 S. W. 407.

3. Validity of municipal ordinance.—See notes under C. Cr. Proc. art. 965.

An ordinance against carrying arms is to be construed with the statute and was not void because it omitted the exceptions as to travelers and persons in imminent danger. Ex parte Boland, 11 App. 159.

4. Carrying in general.—Carrying in his hand was a carrying about his person within the meaning of the statute. Woodward v. State, 5 App. 296.

Where the information charged the carrying of a pistol, and the evidence related to no other weapon, a charge including every other weapon mentioned in this article was error, and it was error also for the charge to include the provisions of the following article where the evidence raised no question under it. Tracy v. State, 27 App. 496, 11 S. W. 484.

For a correct charge of the court hereon. McNeil v. State, 29 App. 48, 14 S. W. 393.

For charge of the court held erroneous, see Ratigan v. State, 33 App. 301, 26 S. W. 407.

The owner of a pistol who had placed it in the keeping of a prospective purchaser held not guilty of unlawfully carrying it on taking it back to his place of business though he did not go directly, and exhibited the pistol when assaulted. Fields v. State, 45 App. 563, 78 S. W. 932.

Carrying a pistol in a basket held in the hand is a carrying on or about the person. Johnson v. State, 51 App. 648, 104 S. W. 902.

Where defendant went into a saloon, took a pistol from the saloon keeper, walked a distance of 80 or 90 feet to the back door of the saloon, and fired it off, and returned and handed it to the saloon keeper, he was guilty of carrying a pistol. Schuh v. State, 58 App. 165, 124 S. W. 908.

Where defendant, riding with a marshal, after the marshal had hitched his horse in front of a house and gone into the house, seeing the marshal’s pistol on the buggy seat, took it only for the purpose of handing it to the marshal, and carried it into the house, and at once delivered it, he was not guilty of an unlawful carrying. Fuller v. State, 58 App. 449, 126 S. W. 569.

It was error to refuse to instruct that accused did not unlawfully carry a weapon, if he took it during an encounter between others, and retained it only to prevent a shooting. Baker v. State, 61 App. 193, 134 S. W. 686.

Accused who had won at gaming, and who was then robbed and made to give the money back to the loser, and who knew that a police officer was within calling distance or within as easy reach as his own arms, was not justified in going 700 yards to his residence returning with a pistol and himself attempting to arrest the robber, and was guilty of unlawfully carrying a pistol. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 804.

The fact that accused claimed to have received a pistol by pledge, erroneously believing that he could carry it into a public assemblage for the purpose of meeting the pledgor and having it redeemed, would not be a defense to a charge of unlawfully carrying a pistol; he having in fact intended to carry the weapon on his person, and merely having been ignorant of the legal consequences. Crain v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 155.

One informed of an insult to his wife by a third person may not carry a pistol while going to see the third person to demand an explanation of his conduct. Austin v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 462. But if defendant had just traded for the pistol he might stop on his way home and demand the explanation. Quinn v. State, 50 App. 209, 96 S. W. 33.

Where defendant and others were together, and one of the others handed defendant a pistol and defendant fired it, and thereafter immediately dropped the pistol or returned it the defendant was not guilty of unlawfully carrying a pistol. Guy v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 303; Fretwell v. State, 52 App. 499, 107 S. W. 837.

5. Character and condition of arms.—To carry the barrel and stock of a revolver, without having the cylinder also, is not an offense. Cook v. State, 11 App. 19.

This article is simply to punish one for the carrying of such weapons as it specifically designates, and is not a measure of the right of self defense or criterion by which parties arming themselves to provoke a difficulty may be charged; thus a pocket knife might not be within this article, but yet be an arming of one's self. Lahue v. State, 51 App. 159, 101 S. W. 1008.

The inhibition of carrying arms under this article is not the criterion of a party arming himself to provoke a difficulty with a view of using the arms he carries. One may arm himself with a pocket knife, if it is of such dimensions as to be used as a deadly weapon. (Thornton v. State (Cr. App.) 65 S. W. 1105, conflicting with this rule, is overruled.) Lahue v. State, 51 App. 159, 101 S. W. 1011.

In a prosecution for carrying arms, the state's witnesses testified that accused dropped something in the street which looked like a pistol; but they did not examine it, or look at it carefully, and accused claimed that it was a cylinder or wooden pistol, which would not revolve, and could not be fired, and gave a reason for carrying such a pistol which had some probability. Held, that the evidence raised the issue whether the thing carried was a weapon prohibited by statute. Blackburn v. State, 58 App. 48, 124 S. W. 666.

It is illegal to carry a pistol, though the cylinder is carried in one pocket and the frame is carried in another. Crain v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 155.

It is unlawful to carry a pistol which is even broken or out of repair, if it can be still used for shooting, unless it is being carried to be repaired. Raspberry v. State (Cr. App.) 160 S. W. 682.

Under the statute declaring that any person who shall carry on or about his person any pistol shall be punished, it is unlawful to carry a pistol, whether a new one or an old one, loaded or unloaded, or a good or an inferior one. Steele v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 511.

6. Knuckles.—Under the old law using only the term "brass knuckles" the courts held that any metal knuckle was included; the term used being merely the name of the kind of weapon intended. Harris v. State, 22 App. 677, 3 S. W. 477; Louis v. State, 36 App. 52, 35 S. W. 377, 61 Am. St. Rep. 332.

The words "knucks" and "knuckles" mean the same thing; a bail bond using the former was good. Mills v. State, 36 App. 71, 35 S. W. 370.

An acquittal of one charged with carrying brass knuckles bars a prosecution for carrying "knuckles made of metal, same being a hard substance." Morrison v. State, 38 App. 392, 43 S. W. 113.

7. Slung shot.—A short stick loaded with metal and with a string attached to fasten to the wrist was not a slung shot. Geary v. State, 53 App. 38, 108 S. W. 379.

8. Intent of accused.—Intent is an essential. Waddell v. State, 37 Tex. 354.

Intent being an essential element of the offense, it is competent in cases involving the intent for the accused to prove his general reputation. Short v. State, 25 App. 379, 8 S. W. 281; Lann v. State, 25 App. 495, 8 S. W. 650, 8 Am. St. Rep. 445.

It is not the object of the law to punish a person for carrying a weapon when it clearly appears he did not intend to violate the law. Lyle v. State, 21 App. 153, 17 S. W. 425.

An instruction that if defendant had no intention to violate the law he was not guilty was properly refused. Cordova v. State, 50 App. 353, 97 S. W. 87.

If defendant did not know that the pistol was in his pocket or on his person he could not be convicted. Miles v. State, 52 App. 561, 108 S. W. 378, 124 Am. St. Rep. 1106.

The intention of accused is immaterial; the statute not making the intent an element of the offense. Farris v. State, 64 App. 524, 144 S. W. 249.

9. Carrying in vehicle.—If one had a pistol on his person while in a buggy he would be guilty. Prewitt v. State, 49 App. 323, 92 S. W. 800.

The defendant and another person were going along a road in a wagon; a rabbit was seen by them; the other person handed defendant a pistol; the defendant got out of the wagon and shot at the rabbit; held, these facts did not constitute an offense. Sanderson v. State, 23 App. 520, 5 S. W. 138.

Carrying a pistol in a wagon and holding it in the hand while engaged in looking for a flask in the wagon was not within the statute. Cathey v. State, 23 App. 492, 5 S. W. 137.

When the evidence showed that the pistol was in a box in a wagon in which defendant and others were riding, it was error to instruct the jury that carrying a pistol in a box within easy reach was carrying it on or about his person. Hardy v. State, 37 App. 511, 40 S. W. 299.

One placing a pistol in a wagon driven by him was not guilty of carrying it on or about his person, but when on a difficulty arising he took the pistol and climbed out of the wagon he was guilty. Thompson v. State, 48 App. 146, 86 S. W. 1033.

Defendant was guilty of carrying a pistol, where he got out of the vehicle he was driving, and at the point of a pistol, theretofore kept under the seat of the vehicle, forced another party to desist from a difficulty with the latter's wife. Hill v. State, 50 App. 619, 100 S. W. 384.

Where accused drove to the residence of his uncle with a pistol in the bottom of his buggy, and from there toward the home of prosecutrix, and at a distance from the road leading to her home he took the pistol and discharged it, and then put it back in the bottom of the buggy and then went to the home of the prosecutrix, and from that point to his own home, without removing the pistol he was guilty of carrying a pistol. De Friend v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 881.

In a prosecution for carrying of a pistol on or about the person, evidence as to carrying a pistol either in his buggy or under the cushion of the seat held to establish the offense. Mayfield v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 308.

10. Carrying at religious gathering.—It was no defense, that in a prosecution under this article it was shown that the pistol was carried at a religious gathering in violation of art. 477. Veal v. State, 58 App. 340, 125 S. W. 919.

11. Carrying in pursuit of thieves.—Doubted whether it be criminal to carry a pistol when in pursuit of thieves in possession of stolen property. Lyle v. State, 21 App. 153, 17 S. W. 425.

The fact that defendant was seeking to arrest one whom he had been informed had stolen his cotton did not justify him in carrying a pistol. Smith v. State, 47 App. 469, 85 S. W. 1078.

12. Carrying on range or while hunting stock.—Carrying deadly weapons into the woods while hunting stock or on the range for the purpose of killing a beef is a violation of the act of April 12, 1871, permitting carrying "at his own place of business." Baird v. State, 38 Tex. 599; Reynolds v. State, 1 App. 616.

13. Carrying while hunting.—Carrying a pistol while hunting is a violation of the law. Titus v. State, 42 Tex. 578.

14. Carrying between residence and place of business.—See note on Premises and Places of Business, art. 476.

15. Finding pistol and carrying the same home.—To find and carry a pistol to one's home is not an offense. Mangum v. State, 15 App. 362.

Where a person, upon finding a pistol in a store, fired it off, and it was immediately taken away from him, his act is not punishable as a violation of the statute against carrying weapons on and about the person. Hicks v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 938.

One who finds a pistol and carries it to his residence does not thereby violate the law against the carrying of weapons. Meeking v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 309.

16. Carrying from place of gift or purchase.—Purchasing a pistol in a town, and carrying it from store to store in quest of ammunition for it, and then carrying it a distance of fifteen miles to defendant's home, was not an offense. Waddell v. State, 37 Tex. 354.

The object is to prohibit the carrying of weapons for unlawful offensive or defensive purposes and a prosecution against a purchaser of a pistol for carrying it home was frivolous. Christian v. State, 37 Tex. 475.

The transportation of a pistol home from the place of purchase, by the party purchasing it, although defendant discharged it while so transporting it, does not constitute an offense. West v. State, 21 App. 427, 2 S. W. 810.

One trading for a pistol might stop on his way home to demand explanation of an alleged insult to his wife. Quinn v. State, 50 App. 209, 96 S. W. 33.

A purchaser of a pistol need not carry it home by the most direct route. Granger v. State, 50 App. 488, 98 S. W. 836.

In rebuttal of defendant's contention that he was carrying the pistol home after it was given to him, the state may show that he turned aside to engage in a personal difficulty. Griffin v. State, 54 App. 374, 112 S. W. 1066.

Accused, temporarily residing in a city under a physician's treatment, had his room in the city hospital, but often spent his nights with a friend, rooming in one of the physician's offices. While spending the night with the friend, the latter gave accused a pistol, and the following morning accused carried the pistol while going by the nearest practicable route to the hospital. Held, that accused was not guilty of carrying a pistol in violation of the statute. Kellum v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 870.

17. Delivering to buyer.—Carrying pistol to deliver it to another person to whom defendant had sold it is no offense. Upton v. State, 33 App. 231, 26 S. W. 197.

Where defendant goes to a certain place to deliver a pistol which he had sold he has the right to carry the pistol to the place of delivery, and, if he does not find the purchaser there, to return with it to his house; but if he fails to find such person at the place of delivery, and then goes about other business, carrying the pistol with him, it is a violation of the law. Snider v. State (Cr. App.) 43 S. W. 84.

One carrying a pistol to deliver to the purchaser does not violate the pistol law by using the pistol when engaging in a difficulty with another party. Head v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 1062.

18. Carrying to place for repair and return.—Carrying a pistol home from a repair shop is not a violation of the law though it was discharged during the trip. Pressler v. State, 19 App. 52, 53 Am. Rep. 383.

The carrying a pistol to a shop to have it repaired is not a violation of this article. Mangum v. State (Cr. App.) 90 S. W. 31.

A person who carries a broken pistol in a useless condition to a blacksmith for repairs, and finds the blacksmith absent, is not guilty of carrying a pistol when he takes it away with him and later returns with it to the blacksmith. Fitzgerald v. State, 52 App. 265, 106 S. W. 365, 124 Am. St. Rep. 1095.

Where defendant, being in G., and living in X., 15 miles from G., having a pistol, which he claimed he had taken from his home to have repaired, and which, being repaired, he was taking home, went to T., 19 miles from G., and 12 or 15 miles from X., and there spent the night, exhibiting and firing the pistol on the street, the law that, while he had a right to carry the pistol from G. through T. to his home, he did not have the right to go about the streets of T. with the pistol exhibiting and firing it off, was sufficiently given by a charge that he would have a right to carry a pistol from where he had it repaired to his home by a direct or reasonable and practicable route, but he could not claim the benefit of such exemption, if he stopped over in his journey, and engaged in business, pleasure, or disturbance of the peace; and if he was on his way home by a reasonable and practicable route, and had not digressed from his purpose of carrying the pistol home, he was not guilty, but otherwise if he was not on his way home, and had digressed from his common purpose and intent. Brent v. State, 57 App. 411, 123 S. W. 593.

It is lawful for a person to carry a pistol, which is out of repair and will not shoot, to a repairer to be fixed, and to carry it home therefrom. Britton v. State, 57 App. 583, 124 S. W. 684, 136 Am. St. Rep. 1000.

One who had loaned another his pistol may go to the home of the latter to get it, and carry it to a gunsmith for repairs, without violating the pistol law; but he may not turn aside, and go on the premises of a third person, and draw the pistol on a person there. Roberts v. State, 60 App. 111, 131 S. W. 321.

A requested charge in a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol that the law authorizes a pistol to be carried to a shop for repairs and taken home when repaired was properly refused as inapplicable, where the place to which accused carried the pistol was not a repair shop, and it was not taken there for that purpose. Greer v. State, 62 App. 81, 136 S. W. 451.

It is reversible error, in a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol to refuse to submit to the jury the defense that defendant was taking the pistol to get it repaired, as he testified, where a special charge on that point was requested. Buckley v. State, 70 App. 550, 157 S. W. 765.

Where accused was carrying a pistol to his home from the place where it had been repaired, the facts that he accidentally discharged it, and that on his journey home he retraced his steps for a short distance to make a small purchase, will not render him guilty of the offense of unlawfully carrying a pistol. Morris v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 709.

19. Carrying borrowed weapon home and returning same to lender.—"While defendant would have the right to carry a borrowed pistol home, it would be his duty, while he carried the pistol, to proceed home with it in a reasonable time, and upon the commonly pursued route; and he would not have the right to make unnecessary departure from his direct route, or to visit places with his pistol not necessary to be visited in the exercise of the right that the law gives him." Corдова v. State, 50 App. 253, 97 S. W. 87.

For the borrower to carry the pistol to his home is no violation of the statute. Brooks v. State, 52 App. 417, 107 S. W. 354.

While one could legally return a pistol which he has borrowed by carrying it on his person, he is not excused, on the ground that he was returning it to the lender, if he went into a public assembly with it, instead of directly proceeding to return it. Veal v. State, 58 App. 919, 125 S. W. 919.

In a prosecution for carrying a pistol, where the evidence showed that the defendant loaned his pistol to a certain woman, who carried it to her room, and, when he was arrested, he was there to take it home, it was error to charge that, if defendant "bona fide loaned" the pistol he would have a right to carry it home, as, if he loaned the pistol, he had a right either to send or go for it, whether it was loaned in good faith or not. Engman v. State, 61 App. 496, 135 S. W. 565.

Where accused, charged with carrying a pistol, claimed that he borrowed the pistol as he was leaving town after having a difficulty with a third person, and that while en route to his wagon to go home he met the third person and the difficulty was resumed, a charge that before the jury could give accused the benefit of his defensive matter they must find beyond a reasonable doubt that he had a legal right to carry the pistol was erroneous, for the reasonable doubt was in his favor as he could borrow the pistol and carry it home, and if after borrowing it he was en route to his wagon to go home, the mere fact that he had a difficulty did not affect his right. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 1073.

20. Jurisdiction of offense.—The penalty prescribed by the former statute was a fine of not less than twenty-five, nor more than one hundred dollars. It was held that the county courts and justices of the peace had concurrent jurisdiction of the offense. Woodward v. State, 5 App. 296; Jennings v. State, 5 App. 298; Solon v. State, Id. 301; Leatherwood v. State, 6 App. 244; Chaplin v. State, 7 App. 87. But the amended article has changed the penalty for this offense, fixing it at a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars, and confinement in the county jail not less than twenty nor more than sixty days. This deprives justices of the peace of jurisdiction of this offense. Const. art. 5, sec. 19; C. C. P., art. 106; Tuttle v. State, 1 App. 364.

A city ordinance prescribing a lower penalty than the statute, is void, and proceedings thereunder in the mayor's court are a nullity. McLain v. State, 31 App. 558, 21 S. W. 365.

21. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 242.

See notes to art. 476.

Art. 476. [339] Not applicable, when, and to whom.—The preceding article shall not apply to a person in actual service as a militiaman, nor to a peace officer or a policeman, or person summoned to his aid, nor to a revenue or other civil officer engaged in the discharge of official duty, nor to the carrying of arms on one's own premises or place of business, nor to persons traveling, nor to one who has reasonable ground for fearing an unlawful attack upon his person, and the danger is so imminent and threatening as not to admit of the arrest of the party about to make such attack, upon legal process. [Act April 12, 1871, p. 25.]

1. Officers in general.—Certain officers exempt from operation of statute. Lann v. State, 25 App. 495, 8 S. W. 650, 8 Am. St. Rep. 445; West v. State, 26 App. 99, 9 S. W. 485; Blair v. State, 26 App. 387, 9 S. W. 890.

An officer of one city has no right to carry a pistol in another city, when he is not engaged in official duty in the latter. Ray v. State, 44 App. 158, 70 S. W. 23.

The burden was upon one charged with unlawfully carrying a pistol to establish the defense that he was at the time a civil officer engaged in the discharge of his duty, and had a reasonable fear of an unlawful attack upon his person, and that the danger was so imminent as not to permit the arrest of the threatening party, which circumstances article 476, provides shall relieve from liability, especially in view of article 52, requiring accused to establish the facts relied on to excuse or justify the prohibited act. Hunter v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 164.

2. Deputies and de facto officers.—It is no defense that defendant is a deputy marshal of another town. Corley v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 975; Munn v. State (Cr. App.) Id. 977.

The exception as to peace officers permits a deputy sheriff of one county to carry arms in another county. Irvine v. State, 18 App. 51. And it is immaterial whether he was on private or official business. Clayton v. State, 21 App. 343, 17 S. W. 261.

This article does not authorize a deputy sheriff to carry a pistol when outside the county of his appointment and not on official business. Ransom v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 932.

If a party honestly believes that he is an appointed officer, and with that belief carries the weapon, he is not guilty. Carroll v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 94.

That defendant carried a pistol as a deputy constable under the apparent authority conferred by a constable, who, however, under Rev. St. 1911, arts. 7137, 7138, was without authority to appoint deputies, was a mistake of law, which was no defense to a prosecution for carrying a pistol. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 833.

A defendant who had been deputed special constable by a justice of the peace could not, it was held, justify under such authority five months thereafter. Snell v. State, 4 App. 171.

Whether or not a de facto officer is within the exception seems to be an open question. Rainey v. State, 8 App. 62, 34 Am. Rep. 756.

At the time a defendant was seen with a pistol he declared that he was deputy sheriff of the county, and had been over in another county after a horse thief. Held, that, as the declaration accompanied the act of carrying the pistol, it was res gestæ, and therefore competent evidence, and as it was a reasonable explanation of his having the pistol, and was not controverted, it was sufficient to show that he was a civil officer engaged in the discharge of an official duty at the time of the alleged offense, and was therefore not culpable for having the pistol on his person. Irvine v. State, 18 App. 51.

A deputy post master violates the statute by carrying a pistol while going about attending his personal affairs. Love v. State, 32 App. 85, 22 S. W. 140.

While one charged with carrying a pistol cannot defend on the ground that he is a deputy sheriff where his appointment bears no indorsement and he resided in another county at the time of the appointment and made no pretense of being an officer under arrest, such person would not be guilty if he carried the pistol under a reasonable and honest belief that he was a deputy sheriff. Blair v. State, 26 App. 387, 9 S. W. 890; Lyle v. State, 21 App. 153, 17 S. W. 425.

The defense, in a prosecution for carrying a pistol, offered in evidence the commission of the sheriff of the county, appointing the accused a special deputy to pursue and capture horse thieves. This evidence, upon objection made thereto by the state, was rejected. Held, error. The commission, whether legal or illegal, being of a nature calculated to lead the accused to believe that he had the right to carry the pistol, should have been admitted. It is also suggested that a citizen, who is not an officer, when in hot pursuit of a thief, or of stolen property, would not violate the law in carrying a pistol. Lyle v. State, 21 App. 153, 17 S. W. 425.

The authority of a person deputized to execute process expires with the attainment of that object. O'Neal v. State, 32 App. 42, 22 S. W. 25.

A person deputized to make an arrest by a magistrate, in the absence of a peace officer may carry arms. Jenkins v. State, 47 App. 224, 82 S. W. 1036.

One deputized to arrest a person could not justify carrying arms while on a different mission in another direction. Brown v. State, 51 App. 423, 102 S. W. 406.

One cannot justify the carrying of arms on his appointment as special deputy sheriff, it having been given, when the sheriff had more deputies than the law allowed, on his statement to the sheriff that his father had been having trouble with neighbors, and that he wanted a commission to protect his father, and the appointment being expressly without pay and without authority to serve papers, and he never having taken any oath of office, and the commission not being recorded; this being a mere subterfuge. Patton v. State, 61 App. 352, 135 S. W. 556.

A deputy sheriff's belief that he had a right to carry a pistol in a county other than that of his appointment was a mistake of law, and not of fact, and did not relieve him from criminal liability. Ransom v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 932.

Under Rev. St. 1911, art. 7125, authorizing sheriffs to appoint one deputy for each justice precinct in addition to the precinct where the county site is situated, where a sheriff appointed two deputies in such a precinct, one of whom was the active deputy, who made arrests and served process, the appointment of the other was illegal, and he acquired no right by virtue of such appointment to carry a pistol, under this article. Ransom v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 932.

3. Persons summoned to aid of officer.—"Or person summoned to his aid" was added by the revision of 1879. Under the original act, which was silent on this point, it was held that such person was protected in carrying arms so long as he was under the command of the officer, notwithstanding the officer deflected from his course and visited places not specified in the writs. O'Conner v. State, 40 Tex. 27.

A person summoned by an officer legally authorized to execute a search warrant, to attend him armed as one of the posse to assist in its execution, can not be convicted for carrying deadly weapons while thus employed, though he may, in company with the officer, and while under his orders, have gone in a direction which he was not required to go in executing the process. O'Conner v. State, 40 Tex. 27.

Where, on a trial for carrying a pistol, accused relied on the fact that his father, a constable, had asked him to keep the pistol as he might need accused to help him preserve order, evidence that a third person had a mixed reputation and would fight was properly excluded. Gentry v. State, 61 App. 619, 136 S. W. 50.

4. State ranger.—A mere appointment by the adjutant-general without having taken the oath, etc., did not constitute defendant a ranger. Ringer v. State, 33 App. 180, 26 S. W. 69.

5. Penitentiary or convict guard.—A sergeant or under officer in the penitentiary service is, while in charge of a convict camp and engaged in duties incidental thereto, a "civil officer engaged in the discharge of official duty" within the meaning of article 476, and as such is expressly exempt from amenability for carrying a pistol. Carmichael v. State, 11 App. 27.

A penitentiary guard comes within the meaning of civil officer and is exempt from liability while on duty. West v. State, 26 App. 99, 9 S. W. 485.

While a state convict guard is a "civil officer," and may carry a pistol in the discharge of his duties, he cannot carry it when not in the discharge of his duties. Veal v. State, 58 App. 340, 125 S. W. 919.

6. City attorney.—When the defense is that defendant is city attorney, the evidence must, in order to justify him, show that he is city attorney and at the time actually in discharge of his duties. Brownlee v. State, 35 App. 213, 32 S. W. 1043.

A city attorney is not a civil officer entitled to carry arms. Featherston v. State, 35 App. 612, 34 S. W. 276, 938.

7. Soldier of United States army.—A soldier in the United States army, in actual discharge of his duties, is not amenable under this statute. Lann v. State, 25 App. 495, 8 S. W. 650, 8 Am. St. Rep. 445.

8. Rural mail carrier.—A rural mail carrier is merely an employé in the postal department of the United States and is not an officer within this and the preceding article. Lattimore v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 588.

9. Travelers.—Question for jury. See notes under C. C. P. art. 786.

Because a party meets another in a public road, and, after some conversation, got into an altercation and drew a derringer (from the bottom of his buggy), it does not necessarily follow that he was carrying the pistol unlawfully. Maxwell v. State, 38 Tex. 170. The statute was not intended to prevent persons traveling in carriages or buggies upon the public highway from placing arms in their vehicle for self-defense, or even from carrying them from place to place for an innocent purpose; and a traveler is not compelled to lock up his arms where they would be useless to him if attacked. Id.; Smith v. State, 42 Tex. 464. This was under the original act, which required persons traveling to keep their arms in their baggage.

One taking a wagon and going on a trip taking two or three days is a traveler. Smith v. State, 42 Tex. 464.

When found carrying a pistol, the defendant was en route with a herd of cattle driving the same from another county to a market in the state of Kansas. Held, that he was a traveler. Rice v. State, 10 App. 288. Under the former statute the exception as to a traveler was qualified by requiring that the weapon should be carried with his baggage. Chaplin v. State, 7 App. 87; Lewis v. State, 2 App. 26; Woodward v. State, 5 App. 296; Smith v. State, 42 Tex. 464. But as the law now is, he may carry the weapon on or about his person. Chaplin v. State, 7 App. 87. The accused when he carried the pistol on his person was going from his home in the county to the county site of said county, intending to return to his home the next day. Held, he was not a traveler. Darby v. State, 23 App. 407, 5 S. W. 90; Campbell v. State, 28 App. 44, 11 S. W. 832.

One starting on a journey did not lose his right to go armed by going out of his way to send a doctor to his home. Irvin v. State, 51 App. 52, 100 S. W. 779.

One going from his home to the county seat a distance of about 18 miles, to return next day is not a traveler. Darby v. State, 23 App. 407, 5 S. W. 90.

A fugitive from justice is not a traveler. Shelton v. State, 27 App. 443, 11 S. W. 457, 11 Am. St. Rep. 200.

A traveler can not claim the benefit of the exemption when he stops in his journey and engages in business or pleasure. Stilly v. State, 27 App. 445, 11 S. W. 458, 11 Am. St. Rep. 201; Navarro v. State, 50 App. 326, 96 S. W. 932; Colson v. State, 52 App. 138, 105 S. W. 507; Ratigan v. State, 33 App. 301, 26 S. W. 407.

A person going from his temporary residence to his permanent home in another county is a traveler. Campbell v. State, 28 App. 44, 11 S. W. 832.

Defendant had traveled a distance of twenty-five miles and was preparing to camp out; held, that he was a traveler. Price v. State, 34 App. 102, 29 S. W. 473.

When the defense is that defendant was a traveler and not liable, the burden is upon him to show that he was a traveler. Blackwell v. State, 34 App. 476, 31 S. W. 380.

Defendant borrowed a pistol to carry to his brothers in another county, but several days later he was seen in the county of his residence at a public gathering with the pistol; held, that he could not justify himself on the ground that he was a traveler. Brownlee v. State, 35 App. 213, 32 S. W. 1043.

One going to a place fifteen miles from home is not a traveler. Stanfield v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 116.

A person returning home from a trip one hundred and fifty miles distant is a traveler. Thomas v. State, 37 App. 142, 38 S. W. 1011. As is a railroad porter travelling that distance on his daily run. Williams v. State, 44 App. 494, 72 S. W. 380.

A person going a distance of eighteen miles is not a traveler. Creswell v. State, 37 App. 335, 39 S. W. 372, 935.

The evidence showed that defendant lived in another county than that of the prosecution, and about thirty-five miles from where he was seen with the pistol, that he went to the place and returned immediately home; held, that he was a traveler. Bain v. State, 38 App. 635, 44 S. W. 518.

Mere delay in pursuing a journey does not deprive one of the defense of traveling. Irvine v. State, 51 App. 52, 100 S. W. 779.

Evidence of intoxication was admissible in connection with trips to and from a saloon to show that defendant who claimed to be a traveler was not such when arrested. Colson v. State, 52 App. 138, 105 S. W. 507.

That defendant, while driving home from a business trip to another county, stopped in the road for a few minutes at a creditor's request to discuss the debt, did not deprive him of his character as a traveler. Hunt v. State, 52 App. 477, 107 S. W. 842.

An auditor on a railroad train engaged in his business of collecting tickets and fares of passengers is a traveler. Barker v. Satterfield (Civ. App.) 111 S. W. 438.

In a prosecution for carrying brass knucks about accused's person, conflicting evidence held to sustain a conviction on the theory that accused, who was a traveler, had the weapon on his person when he left his wagon and went into town. Alexander v. State (Cr. App.) 122 S. W. 387.

One who was a traveler, within the statute, could not carry concealed weapons around a town in his pocket while he was making purchases, but could leave them in his wagon on going out in town, and place them in his pocket again on returning to the wagon, without violating the law. Alexander v. State (Cr. App.) 122 S. W. 387.

A cessation of a journey on some legitimate business incident to the journey would not make one cease to be a person traveling. Campbell v. State, 58 App. 349, 125 S. W. 893, 21 Ann. Cas. 447.

A person going from one county to another, or contemplating a journey, about to board a train, is a person "traveling." Campbell v. State, 58 App. 349, 125 S. W. 893, 21 Ann. Cas. 447.

On a prosecution for carrying a pistol, the defense was that accused was a traveler, and he testified that on arriving at the city of W. at 4 o'clock in the evening he went with a friend to a hotel. On cross-examination he testified that he registered, but did not remember whether he registered, or whether his friend registered for both. It appeared from the register of the hotel that the name of accused was not upon it. Held, that it was error not to permit accused to prove that when he went to the hotel he requested his friend to register for him, and that he believed that he had complied with his request; such testimony being explanatory of a matter involving his veracity as a witness, and it appearing that if he had not stopped over night at the hotel, as he claimed, his whereabouts from the time he reached W. until the next day would be unaccounted for. Ward v. State, 61 App. 604, 136 S. W. 48.

A traveler, in going the nearest practicable route from a hotel to a permanent boarding house, would have a right to carry his pistol. Ward v. State, 61 App. 604, 136 S. W. 48.

Where a traveler was going from a hotel to a permanent boarding place on a direct line and on the way stopped to dine with a friend, it was not such a diversion from his line of travel as would amount to a violation of law because of his carrying a pistol. Ward v. State, 61 App. 604, 136 S. W. 48.

Where a merchant, charged with carrying a pistol, testified that he was going out to see some customers, who were owing him, his testimony disclosed that he was not a traveler within the meaning of the Code. Hickman v. State, 71 App. 483, 160 S. W. 382.

One who goes from a point in one county to a point in another is a "traveler" within the meaning of the law, which allows a traveler to carry arms; but after he arrives at his destination, secures a room, and remains there all night, he ceased to be a traveler, and, if he carries his pistol next morning while going around the town, he is guilty of unlawfully carrying it. Ballard v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 340.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, evidence held sufficient to warrant the judge in finding that the defendant, who had gone across the line to another state to procure some whisky, and was then returning, was not a traveler. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1154.

The burden is upon one who is arrested while carrying a weapon upon his person to show that at the time he was a traveler—that is, one on a real journey—and the mere fact that he was crossing back and forth from one county or state to another is not decisive on the question. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1154.

Defendant riding about a neighborhood, working at various places, or riding in search of work, intending, if he found none, to proceed to another county, was not within the definition of "traveler," as fixed by the statute relating to the unlawful carrying of weapons. Younger v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1039.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, an instruction that if the jury believed from the testimony that the defendant was, at the time he was arrested, a traveler, "you will acquit him," sufficiently submitted the issue of his being a traveler. Younger v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1039.

10. Premises or place of business.—A person has the right to carry a pistol at his home or at his place of business, but he has no right to habitually carry a pistol between his home and his place of business. Chambers v. State, 34 App. 293, 30 S. W. 357; Skeen v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 218; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 1077.

If accused had previously carried a pistol to the place where he was employed, and his employer asked him to take the pistol home, and on his way home with it he stopped at a store to buy supplies for supper, and while waiting for some one to wait on him was arrested, he was not guilty of unlawfully carrying a pistol. Waterhouse v. State, 57 App. 590, 124 S. W. 633.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, evidence that accused was a bartender, and had been cleaning up the saloon just prior to his arrest, and was taking the pistol home with him to sell it, if believed, constituted a defense. Kirby v. State, 61 App. 1, 133 S. W. 682.

The place of business contemplated by the statute has reference to a particular locality appropriated exclusively to a local business, such as a farm, the store, the shop or dwelling place, and the business such only as is usually carried on upon that farm, in the store or shop or other appropriated local place. Baird v. State, 38 Tex. 599.

A person has no right to carry a pistol while hunting hogs in the range, or while hunting for anything off his own premises. Baird v. State, 38 Tex. 599; Titus v. State, 42 Tex. 578. Nor to take a pistol out on the range to kill a beef, although the defendant had no other means at hand to kill the beef. Reynolds v. State, 1 App. 616.

Where the premises were in the possession of a tenant of defendant under an unexpired lease, and the lease contained no reservation authorizing the defendant to enter upon the premises, it was held that such premises were not the defendant's within the meaning of the exception in the statute. Zallner v. State, 15 App. 23. The premises on which the pistol was carried belonged jointly to defendant's wife and one M., but were occupied by said M., and not by defendant or his wife. Held, that the premises were not the defendant's own within the meaning of this exception in the statute. Brannon v. State, 23 App. 428, 5 S. W. 132.

Proof that a pistol was found on the person of accused at his usual place of business will not sustain a conviction. Short v. State, 25 App. 379, 8 S. W. 281.

A person's temporary residence is his home and he has a right to carry a pistol there. Campbell v. State, 28 App. 44, 11 S. W. 832.

Carrying pistol on public road on premises where defendant lives is not a violation of the statute. Ross v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 199.

A private person cannot make a public office his business office so as to justify his carrying a pistol therein. Featherstone v. State, 35 App. 612, 34 S. W. 276, 938.

It is no defense that defendant was carrying the weapon on land leased by his father to another. Fannin v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 280.

Defendant having by contract right to use the office of another on occasions of dealing with the employes of the other held to have a right to carry a pistol in the office. Smith v. State, 50 App. 642, 100 S. W. 155.

An auditor on a railroad train engaged in his business of collecting tickets and fares of passengers is on his own premises and is at his place of business and is exempt from punishment for carrying a pistol at such time. Barker v. Satterfield (Civ. App.) 111 S. W. 438. Likewise a railroad porter engaged on a train. Williams v. State, 44 App. 494, 72 S. W. 380.

If accused resided at a livery barn, without the owner objecting, he is not amenable for carrying a pistol therein; ownership or lease of the barn by him being unnecessary. Craig v. State, 60 App. 195, 131 S. W. 562.

A rural mail carrier is not, while engaged in carrying and distributing mail as such in the vehicle used by him, on his own premises and place of business within this article, permitting the carrying of weapons on one's own premises or place of business. Latimore v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 588.

One does not violate the law against carrying a pistol, where he merely carries it from his place of business to his home, having on his person a considerable sum of money, not deviating from his nearest route, and stopping only for a moment's conversation, though he shoots at one assaulting him. Bowles v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 869.

Where accused rented a picnic ground for a day, the premises being temporary under his control, he was entitled to carry a pistol thereon without violating the law, but not where people were assembled or assembling. Gibbs v. State, 70 App. 278, 156 S. W. 687.

A person cannot lawfully carry a pistol into an assembly of people, although the premises on which the assembly is located belong to him. Gibbs v. State, 70 App. 278, 156 S. W. 687.

A person employed by a company to cut timber could lawfully carry a pistol in going from his and his partner's camp to the timber allotted to them for cutting, and from such allotment, when they finished cutting there, to another allotment; this being his "place of business" within the statute. Hare v. State, 71 App. 395, 160 S. W. 79.

Where accused did not claim, in a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, that he was on his own premises at the time, and even denied having a pistol, it was not error to refuse a request to charge that accused had a right to carry a pistol on his own premises. Boyette v. State, 72 App. 231, 162 S. W. 872.

No one can give to another permission to carry arms on his premises in violation of law. Guthrie v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 730.

A farm to which accused goes to forcibly take some corn claimed by his employer is not the "place of business" of accused within the statute so as to entitle him to carry a pistol. Guthrie v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 730.

An owner who lives on his premises, and who has rented a part thereof on shares, and who with his tenant jointly cultivates the crops, is on his own premises, and his act in carrying a pistol while there is not punishable. Fields v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1166.

Where accused, having discovered that a neighbor whose land adjoined his own was shooting his hogs, armed himself and went to the creek which divided their property, and the neighbor left, accused was not guilty of violating the pistol law, because on returning to his residence he traveled part of the way on a public road. Parker v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 343.

On a trial for unlawfully carrying a pistol, it appeared that accused ordered a person to leave his residence; that in a scuffle which ensued he was knocked down; that he then went to a store where he had a pistol, obtained it, and as he started back was intercepted by persons who told him that B. wanted to see him; that he went upon the sidewalk with the pistol in his hand; and that such persons then took him across the street. The court refused to charge that it was not unlawful for him to have a pistol at his place of business or at his residence or to carry it from the one place to the other, and that, if he went to the store and secured the pistol, and had it for the purpose of returning to his residence, but was informed that B. desired to see him, and went into the street with a view to seeing B., the carrying of the pistol would not be unlawful. Held, that such instruction should have been given. McQueen v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 91.

The court should also have charged that, if accused was carried across the street with the pistol in his hand by the persons who intercepted him, this would not be a violation of law, as only a voluntary act on his part in traveling about the streets with the pistol would make him responsible. McQueen v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 91.

The court should also have charged with reference to accused's intent. McQueen v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 91.

In a prosecution for carrying a pistol, an instruction that if defendant, after purchasing the pistol, traveled home by the shortest and most practical route, he should be acquitted, otherwise convicted, is too stringent; and a requested charge that if defendant was taking the pistol home, and traveling a practical route, the mere fact that he stopped for the purpose of trading would not make him guilty, should have been given. Waterhouse v. State, 138 S. W. 386.

11. Apprehension of attack and imminence of danger.—Whether the fear of an unlawful attack was reasonable, or whether the danger was so imminent and threatening as not to admit of the arrest of the party about to make such attack, upon legal process, are mixed questions of law and fact, to be determined by the jury, under proper instructions from the court. Young v. State, 42 Tex. 462. See, also, Strickland v. State, 33 App. 559, 28 S. W. 466. Threats, retracted on the same day they were made, do not justify carrying a pistol. Phillips v. State (Cr. App.) 50 S. W. 1063.

Conviction of unlawfully carrying a pistol cannot be sustained on proof that accused had reasonable ground to fear an unlawful attack, the danger being imminent, and of a character not to admit of arrest of the threatening party. The actual presence of such party at the time the pistol was carried not essential to bring accused within the statute. Short v. State, 25 App. 379, 8 S. W. 281.

Defendant, a teacher, was notified before a school entertainment that several persons would attend it, and break it up; also, that it was currently rumored that he would have trouble, and that there would be a fight there that night. Defendant tried in vain to get an officer to attend, and stated to the officer that he could not ascertain who the persons were who had threatened to break up the entertainment. Held, that no such danger existed as to justify defendant in carrying a weapon. Alexander v. State, 27 App. 533, 11 S. W. 628.

The defense of apprehension of danger was not available under section 477 to a school teacher carrying arms in a school entertainment. Alexander v. State, 27 App. 533, 11 S. W. 628.

Defendant who had been assaulted and pursued by a more powerful man armed with a club and threatening his life was justified in arming himself. Coleman v. State, 28 App. 173, 12 S. W. 590.

Mere threats held not such a danger as to authorize defendant to carry arms. O'Neal v. State, 32 App. 42, 22 S. W. 25. But the receipt of several anonymous letters threatening the life of defendant held to give him the right to arm himself. Short v. State, 25 App. 379, 8 S. W. 281.

That defendant's life had been threatened held not imminent danger available as a defense. O'Neal v. State, 32 App. 42, 22 S. W. 25; Thompson v. State, 48 App. 146, 86 S. W. 1033.

In order to authorize the carrying by one of a pistol on his person, under the statute, the danger of an attack on him must be so imminent and threatening as not to admit of the arrest upon legal process of the party about to attack him. O'Neal v. State, 32 App. 42, 22 S. W. 25; Thompson v. State, 48 App. 146, 86 S. W. 1033.

To justify himself on the ground that he apprehends an attack on his person, defendant must show that the danger existed at the time he armed himself. Brownlee v. State, 35 App. 213, 32 S. W. 1043.

Where defendant, at her home, shot witness and then pursued him 200 to 500 yards from the premises she could not justify carrying the pistol on ground of self defense. Woodroe v. State, 50 App. 212, 96 S. W. 30.

Evidence of a quarrel was admissible on the intent of one claiming to be a traveler. Irvine v. State, 51 App. 52, 100 S. W. 779.

Defendant might testify to the apprehension of danger from persons who had previously threatened his life and whom he was informed were searching for him when he armed himself. Johnson v. State, 54 App. 168, 110 S. W. 451.

On defense of imminent danger evidence that on prior occasions defendant shot or attempted to shoot others was inadmissible. Hargrove v. State, 53 App. 541, 110 S. W. 913.

In a prosecution for carrying a pistol, a charge that if accused, when he armed himself, if he did so, had reasonable ground for fearing an unlawful attack by another, and the danger was so imminent as not to admit of the latter's arrest, the jury should acquit, was not objectionable as charging that accused must have had reasonable grounds for fearing an attack at the very time he armed himself, in order to authorize an acquittal, and was proper. Hines v. State, 57 App. 216, 123 S. W. 411.

One believing his life in danger has the legal right to carry a pistol from his residence to his store, and if he used the pistol, thinking his life was threatened, he would not be guilty of an illegal carrying; and hence, in a prosecution for carrying a pistol, where defendant claimed he was carrying it to his store, and that he used it, thinking his life was in danger, his right to use it should have been presented by the instructions. Ellias v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 1139.

Where a husband sold his corn crop and thereafter separated from his wife, who remained on the farm and resisted efforts of the purchaser to gather the crop, accused, hired by the purchaser to gather the crop, both knowing of the wife's claim and her intention to resist, is not authorized to carry a pistol. Guthrie v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 730.

It is no defense to a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol that the defendant armed himself for the purpose of hunting another who had had adulterous relations with his wife in order to seek an explanation from him, even though that fact was such provocation as would reduce a homicide at their first meeting to murder, since it is not made one of the exceptions by the statute prohibiting the unlawful carrying of pistols, and the court cannot add another exception to those enumerated. Ballard v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 340.

Nor does the fact that the other had made threats to kill defendant under certain circumstances justify defendant's act in arming himself and going into another county to seek the other. Ballard v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 340.

Where accused had unsuccessfully attempted to compel a person to leave his residence, he had a right to go to his store and obtain a pistol which he had there, and carry it back to the house to defend himself in case he should be attacked while forcing such party to leave the house, especially where such person had knocked him down when he first attempted to compel him to leave. McQueen v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 91.

12. Evidence to rebut defense.—Evidence admissible to rebut defense. See Briscoe v. State, 32 App. 411, 24 S. W. 95.

13. Evidence.—Evidence held to sustain a conviction of unlawfully carrying a pistol. Nolen v. State, 72 App. 450, 162 S. W. 869; Prewitt v. State, 49 App. 323, 92 S. W. 800; James v. State, 51 App. 633, 103 S. W. 934; Hutchins v. State, 51 App. 339, 101 S. W. 795; Brent v. State, 57 App. 411, 123 S. W. 593; Jones v. State, 53 App. 313, 125 S. W. 914; Veal v. State, 58 App. 340, 125 S. W. 919; Gentry v. State, 61 App. 619, 136 S. W. 50; Jones v. State, 61 App. 656, 136 S. W. 57; Vincent v. State, 72 App. 193, 162 S. W. 840; Lawless v. State, 72 App. 366, 162 S. W. 890; O'Hara v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 1113. Contra, Foster v. State, 59 App. 44, 126 S. W. 1155, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1206; Waterhouse v. State, 62 App. 551, 138 S. W. 386.

There should be such clearness and certainty in the proof as would amount to that which is morally certain; testimony that witness saw a belt on defendant, and beneath his coat something that looked like the handle of a pistol was not such certainty. Smith v. State, 10 App. 420.

The state having shown the carrying it devolved on defendant to show authority therefor. Blair v. State, 26 App. 387, 9 S. W. 890.

The purpose or reason for having a pistol are matters to be shown by defendant. Skeen v. State, 34 App. 308, 30 S. W. 554.

Evidence that defendant presented his pistol at another is admissible. O'Neal v. State, 32 App. 42, 22 S. W. 25.

On trial for carrying a pistol the defense was that defendant had repaired the pistol for the owner and was taking it home. The state was allowed to prove that shortly before defendant was found with the pistol on his person he had told an officer that another party had his drum and that he, defendant, would have to be arrested before night if he did not get his drum. Briscoe v. State, 32 App. 411, 24 S. W. 95.

That defendant was subsequently seen in possession of the same pistol was admissible to rebut his testimony that he was delivering a pistol to the purchaser. Upton v. State, 33 App. 231, 26 S. W. 197.

When, on trial for carrying a pistol the evidence shows that defendant had carried a pistol on several different occasions, it is sufficient, the presumption being that it was his custom to do so. Skeen v. State, 34 App. 308, 30 S. W. 554.

Evidence that defendant, when arrested on his way home at 2 o'clock in the morning, a few steps from his place of business, which he had just closed, had a pistol is insufficient to sustain a conviction of unlawfully carrying a pistol; he testifying that he was carrying it to his home, that he had not carried it except on one or two occasions mentioned by him, and that he was not in the habit of carrying it between his home and place of business; and there being evidence of his good reputation and fair dealing. Mathonican v. State, 51 App. 471, 102 S. W. 1123.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, where it was claimed by both defendant and the city marshal in their testimony that the city marshal went to defendant and informed him there was a show coming to town, and that he wanted defendant to get his pistol and go with him to meet the train, to protect the town from thugs that accompanied the show, and that thereupon defendant procured a pistol, walked to the back door of the saloon, and fired it off, evidence that defendant and the marshal proceeded to get drunk, and went upon the streets, and whooped and hallooed, knocked one or two men down, and proceeded to make considerable noise, was admissible as tending to impeach and contradict the defendant and the city marshal, and as bearing on the intent of the defendant. Schuh v. State, 58 App. 165, 124 S. W. 908.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that defendant had a pistol at the time alleged. Holt v. State, 58 App. 295, 125 S. W. 573.

In a prosecution for carrying a pistol, where the complaining witness was asked by accused's counsel why he waited so long before making the complaint, his testimony that he did not intend to make the complaint, but accused kept going around the country threatening him, was admissible. Jones v. State, 58 App. 213, 125 S. W. 914.

Where, in a prosecution for carrying knucks, the defense was that accused did not have the knucks, but that in the fight in which they were seen they were on his breast and rolled off when he arose, evidence that the wounds inflicted upon the accused in the fight in question were such as could not have been inflicted with a bare hand or fist, but must have been produced by some hard substance, would tend to show that the defendant did not have the knucks and is material. Pope v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 611.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, evidence held to support a finding by the jury that the pistol was not so broken that it could not be fired, especially where the pistol was in evidence, although several witnesses testified that it could not be fired. Farris v. State, 64 App. 524, 144 S. W. 249.

It was not error to permit the officer, who arrested accused for unlawfully carrying a pistol, to state that he heard shooting in a certain direction and went there and found accused with a pistol; the officer being entitled to state what attracted his attention. Crain v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 155.

Where, in a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, accused claimed that he could not unbreec the pistol because the cylinder would not revolve, evidence was admissible that accused had the pistol in his hand and unbreecched and unloaded it. Raspberry v. State, 72 App. 13, 160 S. W. 682.

In a prosecution for carrying a pistol at a supper and dance, evidence as to the presence of intoxicating liquor, drunkenness, pistol shots, and a cutting scrape there, drawn out on cross-examination of defendant's witnesses, was admissible to show the occasion for the defendant having and presenting a pistol, and that he was the person who fired the shots, or one of them, though no witness swore who fired any of the shots, nor who was engaged in the cutting scrape. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 708.

On appeal from a conviction for unlawfully carrying a pistol on the street, defenses not supported by any evidence will not be considered. Alexander v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 224.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, where defendant denied any admission that he had fired a pistol, and testified that he stood in the door of his boarding car and fired a pistol after another shooting had taken place, the evidence presented a defensive issue, the refusal to submit which to the jury was error. Ranols v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1128.

14. Indictment and information and proof thereunder.—See C. C. P. art. 469.

An indictment charging carrying a pistol in a public assembly may be quashed as to the portion relating to the assembly and sustained as sufficient to charge carrying under this article. Pickett v. State, 10 App. 290.

If an information for unlawfully carrying a pistol into a ball room be defective, "into a ball room" may be rejected as surplusage and the indictment be good for unlawfully carrying a pistol. Lomax v. State, 38 App. 318, 43 S. W. 92.

Where defendant was convicted of carrying a pistol, the fact that the evidence showed the pistol was carried at a public gathering would not constitute a variance between the evidence and indictment; it being immaterial that his act constituted the further offense of carrying a pistol at a public assembly, since he was not indicted for that offense. Walker v. State, 52 App. 314, 106 S. W. 1166.

It was not a variance that the pistol was also carried at a religious meeting. Veal v. State, 58 App. 340, 125 S. W. 919.

To charge that the defendant "did have about his person a certain pistol," is equivalent to charging that he "did carry" it about his person. State v. Carter, 36 Tex. 89.

Under the original act, the exceptions embraced in this article were embodied in the enacting clause, and it was first held that these exceptions were matters of defense, and need not be negated in the indictment, Jenkins v. State, 36 Tex. 638; State v. Carter, 36 Tex. 89; but this ruling was afterward reversed, the court holding that each one of said exceptions should be substantially negatived. State v. Duke, 42 Tex. 455; Smith v. State, 42 Tex. 464. But they may have been negatived by necessary inference, State v. Clayton, 43 Tex. 410; Woodward v. State, 5 App. 296; Leatherwood v. State, 6 App. 244; but the state was not required to prove these negative averments. Id.; State v. Duke, 42 Tex. 455; Summerlin v. State, 3 App. 444; Lewis v. State, 7 App. 567. Under the present Code the indictment need only charge an unlawful carrying upon the person the prohibited weapon, Lewis v. State, 7 App. 567; Zallner v. State, 15 App. 23; and a conviction upon proof of that fact does not violate the constitutional right.

An indictment need not charge that the weapon was "unlawfully" carried. It is sufficient to use the words of the statute. Pickett v. State, 10 App. 290; Tucker v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 611. See, also, Smith v. State, 25 App. 454, 8 S. W. 645; Lann v. State, 25 App. 495, 8 S. W. 650, 8 Am. St. Rep. 445; West v. State, 26 App. 99, 9 S. W. 485; Wilson v. State, 27 App. 47, 10 S. W. 749, 11 Am. St. Rep. 180; Stilly v. State, 27 App. 445, 11 S. W. 458, 11 Am. St. Rep. 201; Tracy v. State, 27 App. 496, 11 S. W. 484; Campbell v. State, 28 App. 44, 11 S. W. 832; Jacobs v. State, 28 App. 79, 12 S. W. 408; Jenkins v. State, 28 App. 86, 12 S. W. 411; Coleman v. State, 28 App. 173, 12 S. W. 590; McNeil v. State, 29 App. 48, 14 S. W. 393.

A conviction under art. 470, of going near a private residence of another, and rudely displaying a pistol, was not a bar to a conviction for carrying on and about the person a pistol, where defendant carried the pistol before and after the act for which he was formerly convicted. Nichols v. State, 37 App. 616, 40 S. W. 502.

An indictment which alleges that the knuckle carried on or about the person was made of any hard substance, without naming the substance is sufficient. Prater v. State (Cr. App.) 108 S. W. 687.

Charging disjunctively a carrying "on or about" the person is sufficient. Lewellen v. State, 54 App. 640, 114 S. W. 1179.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, the fact that the evidence also showed that the pistol was carried at a religious gathering did not constitute a variance. Veal v. State, 58 App. 340, 125 S. W. 919.

Where defendant objected to the introduction of testimony that he was seen carrying a pistol on a certain date in 1911 because of uncertainty as to the year charged in the indictment and the clerk of the court testified that the blurred date was 1911, the evidence objected to was properly admitted. Valigura v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 856.

16. Delivery of weapon to court and forfeiture thereof.—See note under article 62 ante.

A defendant can not be required, upon conviction, to deliver the weapon to the court, and a judgment to that effect is a nullity. Hudeburgh v. State, 38 Tex. 535.

Forfeiture of the weapon cannot be decreed upon conviction. Jennings v. State, 5 App. 298.

17. Defendant as witness for himself.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 790.

18. Verdict.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 770.

19. Harmless error.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 938.

Art. 477. [340] Carrying arms in church or other assembly.—

If any person shall go into any church or any religious assembly, any schoolroom, ballroom, or other place where persons are assembled for amusement or for educational or scientific purposes, or into any circus, show or public exhibition of any kind, or social gathering, or to any election on the day or days of any election where any portion of the people of this state are collected to vote at an election, or to any other place where people may be assembled to muster or perform any other public duties, and shall have or carry about his person any pistol or other firearm, dirk, dagger, slungshot, swordcane, spear, brass knuckle, bowie knife, or any other kind of a knife made and manufactured for the purpose of offense and defense, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred ($100.00) dollars nor more than five hundred ($500.00) dollars, or by confinement in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act Apr. 12, 1871, p. 25; Act 1915, p. 132, ch. 80, § 1, amending Art. 477, Pen. Code.]

See notes under article 475 ante.

Imminent danger, see note under art. 476.

Cited, Brown v. State, 71 App. 212, 158 S. W. 807.

Portion of former law unconstitutional.—A portion of this article which formerly declared that the weapon shall be forfeited was held unconstitutional. Hudeburgh v. State, 38 Tex. 535; Jennings v. State, 5 App. 298.

Intent.—The mere taking from its place in a house where there was a social gathering, and immediately replacing a weapon, without intending to violate the law, would not be an offense. Brooks v. State, 15 App. 88.

Intent is an essential element of this offense. Schroeder v. State, 50 App. 111, 99 S. W. 1003.

At the request of the owner, defendant for safe-keeping took a pistol from under the buggy seat, where it lay, and put it in the bar connected with the club in whose ballroom the social function was taking place. He did not carry the pistol on or about his person while in the ballroom. Later he put it back into the buggy. Held, that defendant was not guilty of carrying a pistol into a social gathering. Schroeder v. State, 50 App. 111, 99 S. W. 1003.

Public Assembly.—A justice's court in session and engaged in a trial is a "public assembly" within the meaning of the preceding article. Summerlin v. State, 3 App. 444.

One's own premises as exception.—The owner of house in which a ball was going on, invited the defendant to act as doorkeeper and general manager, with authority to preserve peace and good order, and armed him with a pistol. Held, that such authority did not justify him in having the pistol on or about his person. Owens v. State, 3 App. 404. No person, unless he be a peace officer, can go into an assembly of people such as is named in the statute and have and carry about his person a prohibited weapon, without violating the law. Not even the owner of the premises is exempt under this article. Brooks v. State, 15 App. 88.

A school teacher cannot carry weapons in his own school room at a public entertainment given by the school. Alexander v. State, 27 App. 533, 11 S. W. 628.

A person not an officer has no right to carry a pistol at a picnic, though he is legally in possession and control of the premises. Monson v. State, 45 App. 426, 76 S. W. 570.

Bar-room adjacent to ball room.—The carrying of a pistol into a bar-room adjacent to a ball room in which there was a social gathering, is not an offense. To sustain the charge of carrying the pistol into a social gathering he must have carried it into the ball room. Schroeder v. State, 50 App. 111, 99 S. W. 1003.

Time of commission of offense.—Defendant procured a pistol on the east side of the square of the city of Tyler on an election day, put it in his pocket and walked across the east side of the square to the courthouse where people were voting. He was prosecuted under article 269, and his defense was that he should have been prosecuted under this article because of the lesser penalty; held, that the offense announced under article 269 was complete before the offense announced by this article was committed. Burns v. State, 36 App. 601, 38 S. W. 204.

Jurisdiction of offense.—Justices of the peace do not have jurisdiction of this offense, as the penalty may exceed two hundred dollars. Const., art. 5, section 19; C. C. P., article 106; Anderson v. State, 18 App. 17.

Indictment and proof thereunder.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 243.

For indictments bad as to this section but good as to carrying, see note under art. 476.

An indictment charged that the defendant went upon the public square of a town where people had assembled to attend district court, and carried a pistol upon his person. It was held that to sustain this charge it was necessary to prove that people were assembled on the public square at the time and for the purpose alleged. Scott v. State, 40 Tex. 503.

Where the indictment was for carrying a weapon into a "ballroom," it was held that it was not necessary to allege that a ball or dance was going on, or that the persons there assembled were human beings. Owens v. State, 3 App. 404. But it must be alleged that persons had assembled. The purpose of the law is not the protection of the edifice or premises, but the protection of the persons there assembled. Rainey v. State, 8 App. 62, 34 Am. Rep. 736. It need not negate any of the exceptions in the statute, as none of them are now embraced in the enacting clause. See Owens v. State, 3 App. 404; Summerlin v. State, Id. 444, decided under the statute as it was before the revision. Indictments under article 477 approved. Cooper v. State, 25 App. 530, 8 S. W. 654; Cooper v. State, 26 App. 575, 10 S. W. 216; Alexander v. State, 27 App. 533, 11 S. W. 628; Jacobs v. State, 28 App. 79, 12 S. W. 408.

That defendant in violating art. 269 also violated this article was no defense to his prosecution under the former article. Burns v. State, 36 App. 601, 38 S. W. 204.

Art. 478. [341] Not applicable to whom.—The preceding article shall not apply to peace officers or other persons authorized or permitted by law to carry arms at the places therein designated. [Act April 12, 1871, p. 25.]

Peace officers.—See notes under article 476.

Invalidity of provision for forfeiture, see note under art. 477.

See C. C. P. arts. 43, 146, 147, 278.

The presumption is against existence of an exception, such as that defendant is a peace officer. Young v. State, 42 Tex. 462; Williams v. State, Id. 466; Summerlin v. State, 3 App. 444; Lewis v. State, 7 App. 567; Zallner v. State, 15 App. 23.

But it was not incumbent on him to show that he was then and there in the discharge of his duties as such. Williams v. State, 42 Tex. 466.

The statute does not limit the right of a peace officer to carry arms. Williams v. State, 42 Tex. 466.

Whether or not a peace officer de facto is within the meaning of this article, seems to be an open question. Rainey v. State, 8 App. 62, 34 Am. Rep. 736.

Appointment as bailiff to the grand jury invested appointee with no authority as a peace officer after adjournment of that body. Alford v. State, 8 App. 545.

All peace officers known to the law are carefully enumerated in the Code; and no such officer as deputy-marshal appearing there, it must be shown that the charter provides for such office before it is recognized. Alford v. State, 8 App. 545.

The constitution makes county judges peace officers, and when the legislature in enacting the pistol law, excluded from its operation all peace officers, a county judge is embraced in the list and as such peace officer he is authorized to carry a pistol. Jones v. State, 43 App. 283, 65 S. W. 92.

Judges of the courts are conservators of the peace authorized to carry arms under the circumstances provided, and hence under the election law the presiding officer at an election would have power to carry a pistol. Hooks v. State, 71 App. 269, 158 S. W. 808.

Others than peace officers.—See notes under the preceding article.

Peace officers only are excepted by the provisions of this article. The owner of the premises is not authorized to carry arms into the assembly, nor is a school teacher in a school room exempt. That the weapon was carried into the assembly in anticipation of an unlawful attack upon the person is not an available defense. Alexander v. State, 27 App. 533, 11 S. W. 628. And note case of an invalid appointment as a deputy sheriff. Blair v. State, 26 App. 397, 9 S. W. 890.

Art. 479. [342] Arrest without warrant; officer failing punished.—Any person violating any of the provisions of articles 475 and 477 may be arrested without warrant by any peace officer and carried before the nearest justice of the peace for trial; and any peace officer who shall fail or refuse to arrest such person on his own knowledge, or upon information from some credible person, shall be punished by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act April 12, 1871, p. 26.]

Arrest without warrant.—A person unlawfully carrying arms may be arrested by a peace officer without warrant upon his own knowledge or upon information of some credible person. Jacobs v. State, 28 App. 79, 12 S. W. 408; Hodges v. State, 6 App. 615; Ex parte Sherwood, 29 App. 334, 15 S. W. 812; Miller v. State, 32 App. 319, 20 S. W. 1103; Montgomery v. State, 43 App. 394, 65 S. W. 539, 55 L. R. A. 710; Morawietz v. State, 46 App. 436, 80 S. W. 997; Brown v. King, 41 Civ. App. 588, 93 S. W. 1019; King v. Brown, 100 Tex. 109, 94 S. W. 329, 330; Hull v. State, 50 App. 607, 100 S. W. 403; Ricen v. State, 63 App. 89, 138 S. W. 403; Condron v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 253; Ex parte Sherwood, 29 App. 334, 15 S. W. 812.

Evidence held to authorize submitting the issue as to whether an arrest without a warrant was legal as on information for carrying a pistol. Earles v. State, 47 App. 559, 85 S. W. 1.

The law presumes the credibility of a citizen who informs an officer of defendant's conduct. Miller v. State, 32 App. 319, 20 S. W. 1103.

This article only gives an officer the right to arrest without warrant when he knows that a person is carrying a pistol of his own knowledge, or when he derives the information from some credible person. But this does not specially apply to magistrates, or authorize them to require peace officers to make the arrest of persons unlawfully carrying pistols. Morawietz v. State, 46 App. 436, 80 S. W. 997.

There is no statute which authorizes a magistrate to require a peace officer to make an arrest in cases generally, where they may happen within the view or knowledge of the magistrate. This may be done only under statutes which specially provide therefor. Id.

Policemen are peace officers and may under this article arrest in certain cases without a warrant. Hull v. State, 50 App. 607, 100 S. W. 403.

Testimony of informant and of the officers as to the information was admissible. Johnson v. State, 51 App. 648, 104 S. W. 902.

Defendant, who was shooting off a pistol on a public road, was properly arrested without a warrant; the arresting officer having heard the shots and being informed by credible witnesses that defendant was the guilty party. Ricen v. State, 63 App. 89, 138 S. W. 403.

Holding armed person arrested for another offense.—Arresting one for gaming, and being subsequently informed that the party arrested had a pistol on his person at the time of arrest, the sheriff was authorized to hold him for that offense. Garner v. State, 50 App. 364, 97 S. W. 98, citing Ex parte Richards, 44 App. 561, 72 S. W. 838.

When a sheriff has arrested one and does not know at the time that he has a pistol but is subsequently informed of this fact, he is authorized to hold him in custody for said offense, though he had arrested him on another charge, and it is his duty to carry him before a justice of the peace for trial. Garner v. State, 50 App. 364, 97 S. W. 99, 100.

Neglect or refusal to arrest.—A peace officer is punishable who refuses or neglects to arrest, without warrant, on information of a credible person, or his own knowledge, one for carrying a pistol. Miller v. State, 32 App. 319, 20 S. W. 1103. And see Brown v. King, 41 Civ. App. 588, 93 S. W. 1017.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 244.

Art. 480. [343] Not applicable to frontier counties.—The provisions of this chapter shall not apply to or be enforced in any county which the governor may designate by proclamation as a frontier county and liable to incursions by hostile Indians. [Act April 12, 1871, p. 26.]

Revocation of proclamation.—The governor may revoke his proclamation at any time, and subject a county previously exempted, to the operation of the law. And may exercise this power by a new designation omitting counties previously designated. State v. Clayton, 43 Tex. 410. In such case, defendant can not plead as a defense ignorance of such revocation, as it is matter of law and not of fact. Chaplin v. State, 7 App. 87.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—For the constituent elements of bigamy, see La Rose v. State, 29 App. 215, 15 S. W. 33.

2. Distinguished from adultery.—Bigamy and adultery are different offenses. Swancoat v. State, 4 App. 105.

The fact of marriage would make the relation none the less adulterous if, after ascertaining their supposed legal marriage was unlawful and void, the parties continued to cohabit together. Hildreth v. State, 19 App. 196.

3. Meaning of "former wife."—The term "former wife" in this article is used in contradistinction to the person then being taken to wife. Burton v. State, 51 App. 196, 101 S. W. 227.

4. Marriage in general.—In a prosecution for bigamy a valid marriage of the defendant, and a subsequent marriage by him, or her, during the life of his or her lawful spouse must be proved. May v. State, 4 App. 424; Dumas v. State, 14 App. 464, 46 Am. St. Rep. 241.

A valid marriage is one solemnized with the legal prerequisites of, and in accordance with the lex loci contractus. In this state, a license is a legal prerequisite, and the rites of matrimony must be performed by some one of the functionaries authorized by the statute to perform them. Dumas v. State, 14 App. 464, 46 Am. St. Rep. 241.

That the minister celebrating a marriage was not ordained as provided by statute does not render the marriage void provided there was a valid common law marriage. Holder v. State, 35 App. 19, 29 S. W. 793.

Whatever be the form of ceremony, if parties agree to take each other as husband and wife and live in that relation, this proves marriage binding on the parties and will subject them to legal penalties for a disregard of its obligations. Waldrop v. State, 41 App. 194, 53 S. W. 131.

In a prosecution for bigamy, the fact that the woman with whom the alleged bigamous marriage occurred repudiated the marriage as soon as she discovered the want of a divorce from defendant's former wife was immaterial, as such repudiation could not dissolve the marriage. Burks v. State, 50 App. 47, 94 S. W. 1040.

It is not a prerequisite to the validity of a marriage that a license issue. Burks v. State, 50 App. 47, 94 S. W. 1040.

Whatever be the form of ceremony, or if there be no ceremony, if the parties agree to take each other for husband and wife, and from that time on live professedly in that relation, proof of these facts beyond a reasonable doubt in a prosecution for bigamy is sufficient proof of a marriage binding on the parties. Hearne v. State, 50 App. 431, 97 S. W. 1050.

Where a prior marriage is a nullity, a subsequent marriage does not constitute the offense of bigamy. McCombs v. State, 50 App. 490, 99 S. W. 1017, 9 L. R. A. 1036, 123 Am. St. Rep. 855, 14 Ann. Cas. 72.

The state must not only prove the two marriages, but it must prove the first marriage, and it must prove the first marriage alleged in the indictment, and, of course, the identification of appellant, if it was appellant, must be shown as being the same person whose name was mentioned in the license issued and who is supposed to have solemnized the first marriage. And it must be further shown that the identical woman to whom he was first married by virtue of the first marriage was living at the time of the consummation of the second marriage. Goat v. State, 51 App. 393, 102 S. W. 121.

5. Emancipated slaves.—Emancipated slaves who were declared lawfully married by the constitution of 1869, are within the law defining and punishing bigamy. Stewart v. State, 7 App. 326.

Section 27 of article XII of the Constitution of 1869, validating common law marriages of slaves, was not annulled by the abrogation of that constitution. Stewart v. State, 7 App. 326.

6. Mistake and duress.—Bigamy is not committed by the intermarriage of a man and woman, one of them having a lawful spouse alive, if such marriage was entered into under a mistake of fact as to the death of the former spouse. Hildreth v. State, 19 App. 195; Watson v. State, 13 App. 76; Alonzo v. State, 15 App. 378, 49 Am. Rep. 207. But if after discovering such mistake they continue to cohabit together, they would be guilty of adultery, and the fact that they have been married to each other would be no defense to a prosecution against them for adultery. Hildreth v. State, 19 App. 195. Defense that defendant's wife had deserted him for more than three years and that he was informed and believed that his first marriage was therefore void, held no defense; if mistake at all, it was a mistake of law, and not of fact. Medrano v. State, 32 App. 214, 22 S. W. 684, 40 Am. St. Rep. 775.

Where one who is under arrest for seduction marries the female alleged to have been seduced, he cannot afterwards, in a prosecution for bigamy, claim that such marriage was under duress, as marriage under such circumstances is provided for by Pen. Code, art. 1449. Medrano v. State, 32 App. 214, 22 S. W. 684, 40 Am. St. Rep. 775.

An instruction that the statute provides that if a person, under mistake as to a fact, does an act otherwise criminal, he commits no offense; that the mistake must be such that, had the supposed fact existed, the person would have been excusable, and the mistake must not arise from want of care; that, therefore, if defendant had been informed and believed that his first wife was dead, and exercised proper care in ascertaining the truth, he was not guilty, but, if the mistake arose from want of proper care on his part, it would not avail him, was correct. Welch v. State, 46 App. 528, 81 S. W. 50.

Where the defense was that defendant believed his first wife was dead, it was not necessarily incumbent on the court to specify the sources of information, as shown by the evidence, which might have led to the alleged mistake. Welch v. State, 46 App. 528, 81 S. W. 50.

A mob visited the house where accused and the second wife were on the night preceding their marriage, and demanded that accused marry the woman at once. He promised to marry her, and the mob dispersed. That night he applied for a license, but was informed that no license would be issued until the following morning. On a renewal of his application the next morning, a license was issued, and he married the woman. Held, that accused was not under duress at the time he committed the bigamy. Burton v. State, 51 App. 196, 101 S. W. 226.

7. Venue.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 258.

8. Indictment and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 246.

The indictment need not state the name of the first or lawful spouse of the defendant. Watson v. State, 13 App. 76. But it must allege a valid marriage of the defendant, and his or her subsequent marriage during the life of the lawful spouse. It need not negative the exceptions contained in article 482, as they are matters of defense. Hull v. State, 7 App. 593.

Indictment should distinctly aver a former marriage, the name of the former husband or wife, and the subsequent marriage on which the prosecution is based. (Watson v. State, 13 App. 76, overruled.) McAfee v. State, 38 App. 127, 41 S. W. 627; Vinsant v. State, 42 App. 413, 60 S. W. 550.

An indictment for bigamy must state the name of accused's first wife and aver that she is alive, but need not state her maiden name. Richardson v. State, 71 App. 111, 158 S. W. 517.

Indictment must conclude with the constitutional formula, "against the peace and dignity of the state." Poss v. State, 47 App. 486, 83 S. W. 1109.

Where the indictment charged that accused married "Ida A.," and the undisputed evidence showed that she was known as "Ida A.," that in German the English word "Ida" is pronounced "Eda," that the marriage license authorized the marriage of accused and "Eda A.," and that the record of the marriage showed the marriage of accused and "Eda A.," a charge that, if accused married "Ida A.," the mere circumstance that in the marriage license her name appeared as "Eda A.," was immaterial, was not erroneous, as on the weight of the evidence and as leading the jury to believe that it made no difference whether the woman's name was "Ida" or "Eda." Nickelson v. State, 53 App. 631, 111 S. W. 414.

An indictment for bigamy must state the name of the woman with whom the bigamous marriage is contracted. Nickelson v. State, 53 App. 631, 111 S. W. 414.

An indictment charged that accused on November 22, 1907, with force and arms, in the county and state, etc., did unlawfully marry R., he then and there having a lawful former wife then living, was fatally defective for failure to allege facts showing the validity and continued existence of a former marriage. Bryan v. State, 54 App. 18, 111 S. W. 744, 16 Ann. Cas. 515.

On a trial for bigamy, proof of the marriage of accused to a woman while his former wife was living, by witnesses present at the marriage and by the officer performing the ceremony, and by the marriage license of accused and the woman, with the return of the officer performing the ceremony, was admissible as against the objection that there was no allegation in the indictment to support the same. McMahan v. State, 61 App. 489, 135 S. W. 558.

An indictment charging that accused unlawfully married J. while he then and there had a former wife T.—that is, that accused at the time of his marriage with J. had theretofore been and was then and there lawfully married to T. and, at the time of his second marriage, T. was then and there living, etc.—sufficiently charges bigamy. Morville v. State, 63 App. 553, 141 S. W. 102.

Under an indictment for bigamy charging that accused at the time of a second marriage was lawfully married to "Theresa Morville," evidence was admissible to show that the former marriage was with "Theresa Deignon," since the indictment did not charge that accused married her under the name of "Theresa Morville." Morville v. State, 63 App. 553, 141 S. W. 102.

9. Evidence.—Admissions of defendant are competent evidence to prove the first marriage. Gorman v. State, 23 Tex. 646.

Admission of guilt held to remove the presumption of innocence conflicting with presumption of continued existence of former wife. Circumstances and presumptions affecting evidence of continued existence of first marriage, discussed. Gorman v. State, 23 Tex. 646.

The jury may presume from the facts and circumstance that the first wife was alive at the date of the second marriage, there being no rule of law which requires this to be proved by direct evidence, Gorman v. State, 23 Tex. 646; but the presumption is one of fact and not of law, and it is error to instruct that the presumption of life continues for seven years, and the burden is on the defendant to show the contrary. Hull v. State, 7 App. 593.

Proof of the marriage of ex-slaves who were married by the constitution of 1869 is not proof by reputation; but the evidence must show that they were living together at the date said constitution took effect. Steward v. State, 7 App. 326.

The burden of proof is on the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the lawful spouse was living at the date of the second marriage. This proof need not be made by direct or positive testimony, but, like any other fact, may be established by circumstantial evidence under the rules of law applicable to that character of evidence. Hull v. State, 7 App. 594; Gorman v. State, 23 Tex. 646.

It appears well settled that general reputation, cohabitation and admissions or confessions are all admissible to prove the first marriage. Dumas v. State, 14 App. 464, 46 Am. Rep. 241.

The marriage license and the return thereon, of the officer or minister who executed the same, or the testimony of witnesses who were present at the marriage, are legal and sufficient evidence of marriage. Dumas v. State, 14 App. 464, 46 Am. Rep. 241; Frasher v. State, 3 App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131. A certified copy of the marriage certificate from the records of another state, properly authenticated, was held competent and sufficient proof of marriage, in connection with evidence identifying each of the persons named in said certificate. For a full discussion of the questions relating to such evidence, the mode of authenticating the same, and of proving the laws of other states, see Patterson v. State, 17 App. 102.

Where on a trial for bigamy it was objected to the marriage license as evidence that the same did not show on its face to have been issued by the county clerk, held, that inasmuch as it was made to appear that at the time of the issuance of said license the offices of the county and district clerk were held by the same individual, the objection was not well taken. Foster v. State, 31 App. 409, 20 S. W. 823.

The mistake of a clerk who was filling the two offices of district and county clerk of his county, in the issuance of a marriage license which he signed as district instead of county clerk, will not invalidate a marriage solemnly consummated between the parties. Foster v. State, 31 App. 409, 20 S. W. 823.

A petition for divorce filed by defendant against an alleged former spouse is admissible to prove the former marriage. Adkisson v. State, 33 App. 296, 30 S. W. 357.

It is not error to confront the defendant with the two women to whom he is charged to be married for the purpose of being identified by defendant. Hearne v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 1009.

The admission in evidence of a contract signed by defendant, showing that he married his first wife because he had seduced her, was harmless error, in view of prior evidence to the same fact admitted without objection by defendant. Welch v. State, 46 App. 528, 81 S. W. 50.

The mere fact that appellant had permitted evidence to be introduced, without objection, proving or tending to prove seduction, and that he introduced a letter to disprove the seduction, would not authorize the state to introduce evidence to prove that he proposed to attempt an abortion upon his first wife. Welch v. State, 46 App. 528, 81 S. W. 50.

A witness was improperly allowed to state that, after the second marriage of defendant, the wife of the witness had remarked to defendant that she was afraid he had taken a wrong step, and that she was very much surprised, as the statement did not indicate any criminality calling for a response from defendant. Welch v. State, 46 App. 528, 81 S. W. 50.

In a prosecution for bigamy, error in allowing parol proof of a letter written by defendant to his daughter after the second marriage, in which he stated that he was going away and would never see her again, that he was "her poor ruined crazy papa," and that if she did not stop writing to him she would get him into trouble, was harmful to defendant, though his defense was insanity. McCullough v. State, 50 App. 132, 94 S. W. 1056.

In a prosecution for bigamy, where the guilt of accused depends on the validity of a certain marriage, the law will not presume that such marriage was valid, but the prosecution must prove such fact beyond a reasonable doubt. McCombs v. State, 50 App. 490, 99 S. W. 1017, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1036, 123 Am. St. Rep. 855, 14 Ann. Cas. 72.

In a prosecution for bigamy, evidence examined, and held to show invalidity of the prior marriage, and hence insufficient to sustain a conviction. McCombs v. State, 50 App. 490, 99 S. W. 1017, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1036, 123 Am. St. Rep. 855, 14 Ann. Cas. 72.

It was not error for the state, to call to the witness stand the former wife of accused, where she was not questioned, and did not testify to anything. Burton v. State, 51 App. 196, 101 S. W. 226.

Under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2958, requiring the county clerk to record marriage licenses and the return thereto by the person officiating at the marriage, and article 2312, providing that certified copies of records of the county clerk's office may be admitted in evidence, provided they are filed and three days' notice given, a certified copy of a marriage license and the return thereto is inadmissible on a trial for bigamy, where the same had not been filed and three days' notice given to accused. Burton v. State, 51 App. 196, 101 S. W. 226.

Where, the state relied on a prior marriage regularly celebrated, and offered evidence establishing a common-law marriage, and did not call any witness present at the marriage ceremony, the admission in evidence of a certified copy of a marriage license issued to accused, and the return thereto, without complying with Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2312, was prejudicial. Burton v. State, 51 App. 196, 101 S. W. 226.

Specific acts of intimacy of one prosecuted for bigamy and his alleged wife are admissible in evidence. Bryan v. State, 63 App. 200, 139 S. W. 981.

Evidence, in a prosecution for bigamy, held to show prima facie that accused was previously married to another, so as to make the evidence of his second wife admissible. Bryan v. State, 63 App. 200, 139 S. W. 981.

Error in permitting the second wife's mother to testify that since the date of the second marriage she had seen a woman whom people called T., the person named in the indictment as the former wife, was harmless where the former marriage with T. was incontrovertibly proven. Morville v. State, 63 App. 553, 141 S. W. 102.

An instruction that the burden was on the state to show the issuance of a license for the first marriage was properly refused, since a license is not an absolute prerequisite to a lawful marriage. Morville v. State, 63 App. 553, 141 S. W. 102.

On a trial for bigamy, accused's marriage to two women could be proved by the testimony of those who were present when the marriage ceremonies were performed. Cooper v. State, 71 App. 489, 160 S. W. 382.

In a prosecution for bigamy, the fact that a child was born to the first alleged wife was inadmissible, as it would have no tendency to show that defendant was the person who, under another name, had married her at a certain place. Harris v. State, 72 App. 117, 161 S. W. 125.

In a prosecution for bigamy, a license to defendant to marry the alleged former wife was not admissible unless proven to be the original license issued by the proper officer, or unless a certified copy of it was filed with the papers at least three days before the trial and notice of such filing was given to defendant. Harris v. State, 72 App. 117, 161 S. W. 125.

Where a marriage license offered by the state was not admissible in a prosecution for bigamy, the state could not prove its contents by oral testimony. Harris v. State, 72 App. 117, 161 S. W. 125.

Evidence in a bigamy prosecution held to support a conviction. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 144.

An original marriage license, with the return thereon showing the marriage, having been filed and recorded in the county clerk's office, according to law, is admissible on a prosecution for bigamy; it having been filed with the papers in the case, and a copy thereof served on defendant at the previous term. Edwards v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 517.

On a trial for bigamy, evidence that the first wife of accused had been guilty of adultery about six months after her marriage to accused was inadmissible. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 43.

On a trial for bigamy, evidence held to support a finding that accused, who admitted his marriage to one woman, was the person who had previously married another woman. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 43.

Where, on a trial for bigamy, accused, H. M. H., alias J. M. H., admitted his marriage to C. in 1912, but denied his prior marriage to E., a marriage license for the marriage of J. M. H. and E. and the return of a justice of the peace of the marriage under the license were admissible. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 43.

In a prosecution for bigamy, it appeared that accused had been married three times. His first marriage had been dissolved by a valid decree of divorce, and accused claimed that, relying upon a letter written by his second wife informing him that she had procured a divorce, he celebrated a third marriage. On cross-examination it was brought out that he was informed of the dissolution of his first marriage by his sister, who wrote him that his first wife had procured a divorce and that in the same letter she inclosed a certified copy of the divorce decree. The copy was produced and identified. Held, that the copy of the decree, where limited solely to the question whether accused had used due care in ascertaining whether his second wife had procured a divorce before celebrating another marriage, was admissible; such decree not being necessary to show the dissolution of accused's first marriage, he having testified to that fact himself. Coy v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 221.

10. — Burden of proof on defendant.—See notes under art. 52 ante.

In a prosecution for bigamy, an instruction that, if the jury do not believe beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant married a woman who was alive at the time of his second marriage, they must acquit, was not objectionable as placing an unauthorized burden on defendant. Hearne v. State, 50 App. 431, 97 S. W. 1050.

11. Husband and wife as witnesses.—See notes under C. C. P., 794.

12. Charge on mistake of fact.—Instruction on mistake of fact and proper care under art. 47, held erroneous in defining those terms instead of merely leaving the issue to the jury. Watson v. State, 13 App. 78.

13. Peremptory charge.—Where the indictment charged that accused, having a wife in New Jersey, unlawfully married another, the fact that he had previously been married in Michigan will not justify a peremptory charge on the ground that the New Jersey marriage was invalid, where accused himself testified that his first marriage had been dissolved by a decree of divorce. Coy v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 221.

14. Acquittal as bar to prosecution.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 9.

In Alonzo v. State, 15 App. 378, 49 Am. Rep. 207, it is held that in a prosecution for adultery, the acquittal of one of the parties to the offense will not bar a prosecution against the other. The reason and doctrine of that decision seems applicable also to the offenses of bigamy and miscegenation.

Art. 482. [345] Preceding article not applicable, when.—The provisions of the preceding article shall not extend to any person whose husband or wife shall have been continually remaining out of the state, or shall have voluntarily withdrawn from the other and remained absent for five years, the person marrying again not knowing the other to be living within that time; nor shall the provisions of said article extend to any person who has been legally divorced from the bonds of matrimony. [O. C. 385.]

Cited, Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 144.

Abandonment of spouse.—The provision that the preceding article shall not apply to one whose husband or wife shall have voluntarily withdrawn and remained absent for five years, applies to a person who was deserted by his wife in another state more than five years before the second marriage, although he has not resided in Texas five years prior to the second marriage. Poss v. State, 47 App. 486, 83 S. W. 1109.

The provision that the preceding article shall not extend to any person whose husband or wife shall have continuously remained out of the state for five years, does not apply to the case of a person who was abandoned by his wife in another state more than five years before his second marriage, but who has not lived in Texas five years. Poss v. State, 47 App. 486, 83 S. W. 1109.

Under the provision that the preceding article, shall not apply to a person whose husband or wife shall have continuously remained out of the state or shall have voluntarily withdrawn and remained absent for five years, proof by defendant in a prosecution for bigamy that his first wife voluntarily withdrew from him and remained absent more than five years prior to the second marriage is a complete defense, irrespective of the presumption of life or death after the absence of five years. Poss v. State, 47 App. 486, 83 S. W. 1109.

Proof entitling defendant to verdict.—If the defendant proves the essential features of either of the provisos as contained in this article he is entitled to a verdict. Poss v. State, 47 App. 486, 83 S. W. 1110.

Mistake.—See notes under preceding article.

Negating exceptions of article in indictment.—See notes under the preceding article.

Art. 483. [346] Intermarriage of whites and blacks.—If any white person and negro shall knowingly intermarry with each other within this state, or having so intermarried, in or out of the state, shall continue to live together as man and wife within this state, they shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for a term not less than two nor more than five years. [O. C. 386.]

Change in statute and constitutionality.—Prior to the revision of the Code the preceding article prescribed a punishment for the white person only. The negro was not punishable. Now both are punishable. Even before the change in the article it had been held to be valid, and not in conflict with the constitution of the United States, or of the act of congress known as the Civil Rights Bill. Frasher v. State, 3 App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131. Or of the constitution of this state. Francois v. State, 9 App. 144.

Marriage is a civil status left solely by the Federal Constitution and the laws to the discretion of the states under their general power to regulate their domestic affairs; this article is within the power of the state, and does not contravene the Federal Constitution. Frasher v. State, 3 App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131; Francois v. State, 9 Tex. 144.

Policy of state.—It has always been the policy of this state to maintain separate marital relations between whites and blacks. Frasher v. State; 3 App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131.

Marriage as element of offense.—A mere cohabitation within the state without marriage does not bring the offense within the statute. Moore v. State, 7 App. 608.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 247, 248.

Failure to name the name of the negro is not available in motion in arrest of judgment. Frasher v. State, 3 App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131.

The marriage must be positively averred. Moore v. State, 7 App. 608.

The indictment should have averred that defendant being a white person did knowingly intermarry with a negro without the state and did thereafter remove to this state and continue to cohabit with such negro within the state; or if the marriage occurred within this state, that fact should be alleged with the further allegation of continued cohabitation. Moore v. State, 7 App. 608.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for miscegenation, the fact of marriage must be proved. It must also be proved that one of the parties to the marriage was a white person, and the other a negro. The mere opinion of a witness that one of them looked like a white person, or, as the case may be, looked like a negro, is insufficient. The different race of the parties must be proved with certainty beyond a reasonable doubt. Moore v. State, 7 App. 608.

Where one testified in a civil suit that she was a white woman, held admissible against her on trial for intermarrying with a negro. Bell v. State, 33 App. 163, 25 S. W. 769. Evidence that her first husband was white is admissible as a circumstance against her. Id. Record of acquittal of paramour is inadmissible. Id.

To convict under this article the state has the burden of showing that one of the parties had sufficient negro blood to prohibit the marriage, and, where there is a reasonable doubt about it, accused must be acquitted. Flores v. State, 60 App. 25, 129 S. W. 1111.

Where, on the trial for a violation of this article, no witness testified to the quantity of negro blood in the woman whom accused married, and every witness, when asked with reference to the degree of negro blood in the woman, answered that they did not know, the refusal to charge that the burden of proof was on the state to show that he had violated the law in marrying the woman, and that the burden did not shift to him, was erroneous, though the court charged that, if the jury should find that the woman was a negro within the statute, accused was guilty. Flores v. State, 60 App. 25, 129 S. W. 1111.

Acquittal as bar to prosecution.—In Alonzo v. State, 15 App. 378, 49 Am. Rep. 207, it is held that in a prosecution for adultery, the acquittal of one of the parties to the offense will not bar prosecution against the other. The reason and doctrine of that decision seems applicable also to the offenses of bigamy and miscegenation.

Civil matters.—See notes under article 4613, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 484. [347] "Negro" and "white person" defined.—The term "negro," as used in the preceding article, includes also a person of mixed blood descended from negro ancestry from the third generation, inclusive, although one ancestor of each generation may have been a white person. All persons not included in the definition of "negro" shall be deemed a white person within the meaning of this article.

Indictment.—Where an indictment charged that defendant, a white person, knowingly married a negro, the court properly refused to quash because it did not allege that he married a negro within the third generation inclusive. Frasher v. State, 3 App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131.

Instruction.—An instruction that the allegation that defendant married a negro was not sustained by evidence that he married a person of mixed blood unless it was shown that she was within the class designated in the law as negroes was misleading as authorizing the jury to find defendant guilty if he had married "a person of mixed blood descended from negro ancestry." Frasher v. State, 3 App. 263, 30 Am. Rep. 131.

Art. 485. [348] Proof of marriage.—In trials for the offenses named in the preceding articles of this chapter, proof of marriage by mere reputation shall not be sufficient.

See notes under article 481, ante.

Reputation in connection with other evidence.—General reputation alone, insufficient, may when taken with other evidence such as cohabitation and defendant's admission be sufficient to sustain a conviction. Dumas v. State, 14 App. 464, 46 Am. Rep. 241; Adkisson v. State, 34 App. 296, 30 S. W. 357.

Although general reputation of marriage is alone not sufficient evidence to prove marriage, it is admissible as tending to do so, and taken in connection with the cohabitation of the parties, and the admissions of the defendant, would be sufficient to sustain a conviction. See this subject fully discussed in Dumas v. State, 14 App. 464, 46 Am. Rep. 241. This article does not declare that reputation is not admissible evidence of marriage, but only that reputation alone, without other evidence, is insufficient to establish the fact of marriage. Patterson v. State, 17 App. 102.

Evidence held sufficient in connection with evidence of reputation. Adkisson v. State, 34 App. 297, 30 S. W. 357.

General reputation alone is insufficient, but, taken in connection with cohabitation and admission, makes prima facie case sufficient to sustain verdict for bigamy. Waldrop v. State, 41 App. 194, 53 S. W. 130.

While, under this article providing that proof of marriage by reputation is not sufficient in a prosecution for bigamy, general reputation alone is not sufficient to prove the previous marriage, it may be sufficient when taken in connection with evidence of cohabitation and accused's admissions. Bryan v. State, 63 App. 200, 139 S. W. 981.

Marriage of emancipated slaves.—Proof of the marriage of ex-slaves who were married by the Constitution of 1869 is not proof by reputation, but the evidence must show they were living at the date such Constitution took effect. Steward v. State, 7 App. 326.

| 6. Testimony of prosecutrix or paramour. | |

1. Nature and elements of offense.—Incest is not an offense at common law. It was made a statutory offense in this state by the Act of 1848, which took effect January 1, 1849, and prior to said act a prosecution for said offense was not maintainable in this state. Tuberville v. State, 4 Tex. 128.

Under this article and article 489, a defendant who is indicted for committing incest by marrying his niece may be convicted on proof of his cohabiting with her without proof of a formal marriage between them. Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 802.

The act denounced by this and the following article is sexual intercourse, so that where there has been many separate acts, extending over a period of years, each completed act constitutes a separate offense. Pridmore v. State, 59 App. 563, 129 S. W. 1112, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 858.

2. Relationship of parties.—To prove incest with a stepdaughter it must be shown that girl's mother was defendant's lawful wife and if a prior marriage of either of the parties had existed, that it had been dissolved by death or divorce. McGrew v. State, 13 App. 340; Harville v. State, 54 App. 426, 113 S. W. 283; Nance v. State, 17 App. 385.

Relationship by affinity ceases with the dissolution of the marriage creating it. Incest, therefore, between parties whose relationship is one in affinity founded upon the marriage of one of them, is impossible after the dissolution of the marriage. Johnson v. State, 20 App. 609, 54 Am. Rep. 535; Stanford v. State, 42 App. 343, 60 S. W. 253.

Illegitimacy is no defense if the relationship exists. Clark v. State, 39 App. 179, 45 S. W. 576, 73 Am. St. Rep. 918; Wadkins v. State, 58 App. 110, 124 S. W. 959, 137 Am. St. Rep. 922, 21 Ann. Cas. 556.

Where accused, charged with incest with his stepdaughter, had been married prior to his marriage to the mother of prosecutrix, the state should clearly show that at the time of the second marriage his first wife was dead, or that the first marriage had been annulled. Burford v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 538; Vickers v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 578.

The illegality of the marriage interposed is no defense to incest. Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 802.

On the trial of a man for incest in marrying his half-niece, where the indictment charges and the evidence shows that his wife is the only daughter of his half-sister, naming her, it is not error to charge that, "if the jury believe defendant's wife is the daughter of a half-sister of defendant, you should find him guilty." Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 102.

A marriage in one county on license issued in another county is legal. Cummings v. State, 36 App. 256, 36 S. W. 442.

While the mother is living, intercourse of her husband with the stepdaughter during the marriage relation is incestuous. Stanford v. State, 42 App. 343, 60 S. W. 254.

The depth of the penetration is not material to the crime of incest, where there is an emission. Drake v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 315.

Unless the mother of the girl with whom incest was charged to have been committed was the lawful wife of defendant, their intercourse would not constitute the crime. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 331.

Under this and the two following articles both the stepfather and stepdaughter who have carnal intercourse are guilty of incest, although the intercourse takes place before the death of the woman's mother. Vickers v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 669.

3. Consent of female.—Consent by the female is no defense to the man. Mercer v. State, 17 App. 452; Schoenfeldt v. State, 30 App. 695, 18 S. W. 640.

That the female did not willingly consent, but accused used some force, is no defense to a prosecution for incest. Jordan v. State, 62 App. 388, 137 S. W. 114.

4. Indictment and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 249-251.

See Compton v. State, 13 App. 271, 44 Am. Rep. 703.

An indictment for incest is not defective because it fails to charge that defendant knowingly entered into an unlawful marriage. Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 802.

Where the related parties marry, the indictment need not allege that accused "knowingly" entered into the unlawful marriage. Following the statute, and charging the intercourse as both incestuous and unlawful, was sufficient. Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 802; and by analogy an indictment for incest need not allege that the parties were not married. Barrett v. State, 55 App. 182, 115 S. W. 1187.

An indictment against a man for incest in marrying his half-niece is not fatally defective on the ground that it fails to charge affirmatively that there was a marriage, where it alleges that "the defendant did unlawfully intermarry." Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 802.

An indictment alleged that accused was the father of prosecutrix and had carnal knowledge with her; held, that it is not necessary to further allege that prosecutrix was a female. Waggoner v. State, 35 App. 199, 32 S. W. 896.

An indictment which in one count charges incest and in another count charges rape is good. Owens v. State, 35 App. 345, 33 S. W. 875; Wiggins v. State, 47 App. 538, 84 S. W. 821.

An indictment for incest, which alleges that prosecutrix was the daughter of a brother of accused, and that accused and the brother were children of the same father and mother, sufficiently shows that prosecutrix was a niece of accused; and it is not necessary to allege that accused and his brother were lawful issue of their parents; nor that there was a lawful marriage of their parents; nor to give the name of the mother of accused; nor to allege that prosecutrix was the lawful daughter of accused's brother; nor to give the name of her mother; nor that she was born of a lawful marriage. Bailey v. State, 63 App. 584, 141 S. W. 224.

Under Code Cr. Proc. arts. 453, 460, 476, providing that an indictment, charging the commission of the offense in ordinary language, so as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is meant, shall be sufficient, etc., an indictment for incest, which alleges that accused "did * * * unlawfully, canally know, and incestuously have carnal knowledge of," prosecutrix, is not bad; the word "canally" being intended for "carnally." Bailey v. State, 63 App. 584, 141 S. W. 224.

In a prosecution for incest, where the indictment charged accused with having intercourse with the daughter of his sister, proof merely that the female was his niece is not sufficient to warrant a conviction, and constitutes a fatal variance. Blalack v. State, 72 App. 375, 162 S. W. 865.

5. Evidence.—See notes under article 489 post.

Evidence of sexual acts between same parties prior to, or when indicating continuousness of illicit relations, subsequent to the act charged. Burnett v. State, 32 App. 86, 22 S. W. 47.

Proof of other acts than those charged is not admissible. Clifton v. State, 46 T. Cr. R. 18; Kilpatrick v. State, 39 App. 10, 44 S. W. 830; Gillespie v. State, 49 App. 530, 93 S. W. 556; Wiggins v. State, 47 App. 538, 84 S. W. 821. But, see, Burnett v. State, 32 App. 86, 22 S. W. 47.

In a prosecution for incest alleged to have been committed in December, evidence of other acts of intercourse by accused with the prosecuting witness in October and November was not admissible; one act of intercourse being sufficient to constitute the crime. Skidmore v. State, 57 App. 497, 123 S. W. 1129, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 446.

Where the state has elected to rely upon one act of incestuous intercourse, evidence of subsequent acts are inadmissible, and likewise acts leading up to the intercourse. Gross v. State, 61 App. 176, 135 S. W. 373, 33 L. R. A. (N. S.) 477.

In a prosecution for incest, prosecutrix may testify as to other acts of intercourse than those charged. Cowser v. State, 70 App. 265, 157 S. W. 758.

In a prosecution for incest, prior acts of intercourse between the parties, a stepfather and his young stepdaughter, are admissible as original evidence. Vickers v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 669.

Evidence of prior acts showing familiarity is admissible. Pridmore v. State, 53 App. 620, 111 S. W. 155.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of incest. Adams v. State, 64 App. 61, 141 S. W. 527; Lucas v. State, 62 App. 316, 137 S. W. 354; Bailey v. State, 63 App. 584, 141 S. W. 224; Contra, Tuberville v. State, 4 Tex. 128; Gay v. State, 2 App. 127; McGrew v. State, 13 App. 340; Cude v. State, 50 App. 371, 97 S. W. 485; Sauls v. State, 30 App. 496, 17 S. W. 1066.

If the female with whom the incestuous intercourse is alleged to have been had, is shown to have knowingly, voluntarily, and with the same intent which actuated the accused, united with him in the commission of the offense, she is an accomplice in the crime, and her uncorroborated testimony is insufficient to support a conviction of the accused. On the other hand, if the evidence shows that in the commission of the incestuous act, she was the victim of force, threats, fraud, or undue influence, so she did not act voluntarily, and did not join in the act with the same intent that actuated the accused, then she is not an accomplice, and a conviction might stand even upon her uncorroborated testimony. Mercer v. State, 17 App. 452.

On trial for incest, it is error to allow the physician who attended the girl and delivered her child to state his opinion as to whose child it was. Kilpatrick v. State, 39 App. 10, 44 S. W. 830.

Where a man is indicted for marrying his half-niece, declarations of his deceased mother that he was illegitimate, and therefore not of kin to his wife, are not admissible for the purpose of showing that he married in good faith, where it is not shown that such declarations were made known to the defendant until about the time of his marriage. Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 802.

Where a man born in lawful wedlock is indicted for marrying his half-niece, declarations of his deceased mother that he is illegitimate, and therefore not of kin to his wife, are not admissible to rebut the family recognition and belief that has existed from his birth, nor the presumption that children born in wedlock are legitimate. Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 802.

Common law marriage is established by proof that the parties agreed to take each other to husband and wife, and from that time on lived professedly as such; and the common law marriage is subject to marriage liabilities. Simon v. State, 31 App. 186, 20 S. W. 399, 716, 37 Am. St. Rep. 802.

A marriage duly solemnized by proper authority is not invalid because the officer issuing the license, who held the positions of both district and county clerk under the law as it then existed, signed the license as district clerk instead of county clerk, and affixed to such license the seal of the district court instead of that of the county clerk, and hence the license is admissible in evidence on a prosecution of one of the parties to such marriage for bigamy. Foster v. State, 31 App. 409, 20 S. W. 823.

Evidence of cruelty of defendant to his daughter to compel her to submit to his embraces is admissible. Clements v. State, 34 App. 616, 31 S. W. 642.

Declarations of the prosecutrix to third parties not in defendant's presence, as to the paternity of the child should have been excluded. Gillespie v. State, 49 App. 530, 93 S. W. 556; Poyner v. State, 40 App. 640, 51 S. W. 376.

In a prosecution of a father for incest with his daughter, the state may show her age at the time the first indecent proposal was made; and anything showing a persistent effort to debauch and domination by brutal treatment or filthy familiarity is admissible in evidence. Pridemore v. State, 53 App. 620, 111 S. W. 155.

In a prosecution for incest alleged to have been committed with the daughter of accused's wife by a former husband, divorce from or death of the first husband before the wife's second marriage being essential to conviction, affirmative proof is necessary, and the statement by a witness that he understood that the former husband was dead was inadmissible. Harville v. State, 54 App. 426, 113 S. W. 283.

Where a prosecuting witness is shown by accused, on cross-examination of another witness, to have made statements out of court differing from his testimony at the trial, testimony of a witness for the state as to what the prosecuting witness had told him of the transaction is admissible, though accused was not present and the prosecuting witness was able to testify himself. Harville v. State, 54 App. 426, 113 S. W. 283.

The prosecution being dismissed as to one of two jointly indicted, the district attorney might properly tender her as a witness to the accused on trial. Harville v. State, 54 App. 426, 113 S. W. 283.

In a prosecution for incest, testimony was not admissible that witness, who had waited on prosecuting witness several months at her father's house, had never seen any misconduct by her, though accused had previously introduced evidence that prosecutrix had had intercourse with others. Skidmore v. State, 57 App. 497, 123 S. W. 1129, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 446.

In a prosecution for incest, where the state introduced evidence that, on September 17th following the intercourse which prosecutrix testified occurred in the previous December, she gave birth to a child, accused could prove that prosecutrix had intercourse with another during the months of September, October, November, and December previous to the birth of the child, to show that such other might have been the father of the child, and not accused. Skidmore v. State, 57 App. 497, 123 S. W. 1129, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 446.

Where defendant on a prosecution for incest with his sister sought to show that B, who married her, had had intercourse with her before their marriage, and that he, and not defendant, was the father of her child, it was proper to admit the testimony of B. that having been in love with her, and supposing her virtuous till she told him of her condition, he married her to save her name. Harris v. State, 64 App. 594, 144 S. W. 232.

In a prosecution for incest by a man with his stepdaughter, in which it was shown that accused had a son prior to his present marriage, the proof is sufficient that the former marriage was valid, though it would not be sufficient where the accused was a woman, since an illegitimate child is only the child of the mother, so as to require proof that such marriage had been dissolved before the present marriage. Vickers v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 578.

6. Testimony of prosecutrix or paramour.—See C. C. P. art. 801, and notes thereunder.

New trial will not be granted to procure for defendant the testimony of the female where unimpeached testimony showed her an accomplice. Jones v. State, 23 App. 501, 5 S. W. 138.

Where the conviction rested solely upon the testimony of the alleged injured female, and her own testimony showed that she willingly, knowingly, and voluntarily united with the defendant in the commission of the carnal act, she being his niece, it was held that in the absence of corroborating evidence the conviction could not stand. Blanchett v. State, 29 App. 46, 14 S. W. 392. See, also, Dodson v. State, 24 App. 514, 6 S. W. 548; Shoenfeldt v. State, 30 App. 695, 18 S. W. 640.

When the prosecuting witness on a trial for incest was impeached by several witnesses as to statements by her contradictory of her evidence as to the paternity of her child, held permissible for the state to prove in support of her testimony her general good reputation for truth and veracity. Tipton v. State, 30 App. 530, 17 S. W. 1097; Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444.

When the evidence tends to show the consent of prosecutrix, a conviction cannot stand on her uncorroborated testimony. Coburn v. State, 36 App. 257, 36 S. W. 442.

Testimony of prosecutrix is sufficiently corroborated when the whole evidence shows that defendant is the only person who had the opportunity to have intercourse with her, and that she was pregnant. Jackson v. State, 37 App. 612, 40 S. W. 498.

An isolated act of intercourse testified to by the prosecutrix alone, who consented to the intercourse, is insufficient to support a conviction. Clark v. State, 39 App. 179, 45 S. W. 576, 73 Am. St. Rep. 918.

The general reputation of the prosecutrix for chastity is immaterial, consequently she cannot be impeached by showing admissions of intercourse with other men. Richardson v. State, 44 App. 211, 70 S. W. 320.

The female, having denied the offense, may be contradicted by the state by testimony of grand jurors as to her testimony before that body. Gibson v. State, 45 App. 312, 77 S. W. 812.

The state cannot corroborate the prosecutrix by proving statements out of court and before the grand jury similar to her testimony, and that she never charged any one but accused with being the father of her child, unless an attempt has been made to impeach her testimony that he is its father by proof of contradictory statements made by her out of court; and such corroboration is not permissible, although the defense in cross-examining her has attacked her virtue and attempted to show that her testimony is false. Pridemore v. State, 53 App. 620, 111 S. W. 155.

Where it is not permissible for the state to corroborate its witness by showing similar statements to that sworn to in court, statements made by the prosecuting attorney in the presence of the jury of facts indirectly that have the illegal purpose of corroborating the witness are prejudicial, though the testimony suggested in such statement is excluded. Pridemore v. State, 53 App. 620, 111 S. W. 155.

The female consenting is an accomplice within the rules of evidence. Skidmore v. State, 57 App. 497, 123 S. W. 1129, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 446.

Evidence held to sufficiently corroborate the testimony of prosecutrix to justify a conviction of incest. Jordan v. State, 62 App. 388, 137 S. W. 114.

A female voluntarily submitting is an accomplice of accused charged with incest, and her testimony, to justify a conviction, must be corroborated. Jordan v. State, 62 App. 388, 137 S. W. 114.

That the female gave birth to a child in the usual period of gestation from the date of the intercourse as fixed by her testimony is corroborative of her testimony, and other testimony that accused was with her at the date and place testified to by her is also admissible to corroborate her testimony. Jordan v. State, 62 App. 388, 137 S. W. 114.

In a prosecution for incest, where the defense, in cross-examining the prosecuting witness, attempted to show that her statement that the act occurred while the parties were standing and that conception resulted was unreasonable, it was proper for the state to show on redirect examination that defendant and witness had previously had intercourse on numerous occasions. Vickers v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 669.

7. Testimony of husband and wife.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 795.

8. Charge of court.—In its charge to the jury the court is required to distinctly set forth the law applicable to the case as made by the evidence. The jury are the exclusive judges of the facts proved and of the weight to be given to the testimony, and it is usual for the court in its charge to instruct the jury that such is their province. See Jackson v. State, 22 App. 442, 3 S. W. 111, for a state of facts which demanded such an instruction, and because of the failure of the court to give it, the conviction was set aside.

When the evidence raises the issue as to the prosecutrix being an accomplice, the court should instruct the jury on the law of accomplices. Coburn v. State, 36 App. 257, 36 S. W. 442.

In an incest case, a question asked a witness whether he had ever heard accused or any member of his family deny that the other party to the offense was accused's stepdaughter, the daughter of his wife, was improper, as indirectly forcing accused's wife to testify against him; she being a member of his family. Harville v. State, 54 App. 426, 113 S. W. 283.

9. Dismissal against paramour turning state's evidence.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 729.

10. Conviction or acquittal as bar to prosecution.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 9.

The acquittal of one of the parties to the incestuous intercourse will not bar the prosecution and conviction of the other. One may be innocent and the other guilty of the offense. Alonzo v. State, 15 App. 378, 49 Am. Rep. 207.

Art. 487. [350] Certain marriages prohibited.—No man shall marry his mother, his father's sister or half-sister, his mother's sister or half-sister, his daughter, the daughter of his father, mother, brother or sister, or of his half-brother or sister, the daughter of his son or daughter, his father's widow, his son's widow, his wife's daughter, or the daughter of his wife's son or daughter.

See notes under the preceding article.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 249-251.

Art. 488. [351] Same subject.—No woman shall marry her father, her father's brother or half-brother, her mother's brother or half-brother, her own brother or half-brother, her son, the son of her brother or sister, or of her half-brother or half-sister, the son of her son or daughter, her mother's husband after the death of her mother, her daughter's husband after the death of her daughter, her husband's son, the son of her husband's son or daughter.

See notes under article 486 ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 249-251.

Art. 489. [352] Relationship, how proved; proof of marriage unnecessary.—Upon a trial for incest, the fact of the relationship between the parties may be proved in the manner in which that fact is established in civil suits; and proof of cohabitation or carnal knowledge shall be in all cases sufficient, without proof of marriage.

Relationship by affinity.—Where the step-father is charged with incest with his step-daughter, a legal marriage of the defendant with the mother of such daughter must be established before the carnal intercourse of such father and daughter can be held to be incest. McGrew v. State, 13 App. 340. The fact of such legal marriage may be proved by circumstantial as well as by direct evidence. Nance v. State, 17 App. 385. If there be evidence tending to show that the mother of the step-daughter, prior to her marriage with defendant, had been married to another man, it devolves upon the state to show that such former marriage was illegal, or had ceased to exist at the time of her marriage with defendant, otherwise her marriage with defendant would be illegal, and there would be no relationship between defendant and her daughter. Nance v. State, 17 App. 385; McGrew v. State, 13 App. 340.

Illegitimate relationship.—In a prosecution for incest with accused's illegitimate child, evidence was admissible that accused claimed prosecutrix, who was born to her mother out of wedlock, as his child when she was an infant, shortly after her mother's death, and took her to his home and recognized her as his child. Wadkins v. State, 58 App. 110, 124 S. W. 959, 137 Am. St. Rep. 922, 21 Ann. Cas. 556.

The legitimacy of a child cannot be impeached by proof that her color is different from that of her mother's husband, where she is the same color as her mother. Foote v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 275.

In a prosecution for incest, in order to show that the girl with whom the offense was claimed to have been committed was not the child of accused's brother, but an illegitimate child of such brother's wife, accused offered to show acts of illicit intercourse between his brother's wife and a man not her husband after her marriage to his brother by the testimony of the wife and the alleged paramour. The testimony was excluded. Held not error, since the illegitimacy of a child born in lawful wedlock can be established only by proof of nonaccess or impotency. Foote v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 275.

Evidence in general.—See notes under article 486 ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 251.

1. Changes in law.—By the Revised Penal Code, the offense of adultery has been materially changed, and the offense may now be committed in either of two modes; 1st, by the living together and having carnal intercourse with each other, of a man and a woman, of whom either is married to some other person; or, 2d, by the habitual carnal intercourse of such parties with each other, without living together. The changes made in the law defining this offense, are such as require corresponding changes in the pleading, proof, and instructions to the jury, and many of the adjudications under the former law are now inapplicable. Collum v. State, 10 App. 708. Only such adjudications under the former statutes as seem to be still applicable are cited.

2. Ordinance as conflicting with statute.—An ordinance of the city of Ft. Worth, which under its special charter was given all the police power of the state as to acts which could be made minor offenses, making it unlawful for any white person and any negro to have sexual intercourse with each other within the city limits, each act to be a separate offense, and declaring its violation a misdemeanor, punishable by fine not exceeding $200, was not invalid, as conflicting with this article nor with article 494, since one act alone between such white person and negro constitutes an offense, whether one or both are married to another, or neither is married. Strauss v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 663.

3. Nature and elements of offense.—The other essentials being present the crime may consist of either one of two circumstances: 1. The living together and carnal intercourse with each other. 2. Habitual carnal intercourse without living together. Edwards v. State, 10 App. 25; Mitten v. State, 24 App. 346, 6 S. W. 196; Bird v. State, 27 App. 635, 11 S. W. 641, 11 Am. St. Rep. 214; Randle v. State, 12 App. 250.

Continuing to live together after discovering that the wife's former marriage was not dissolved by death of the husband as was supposed was adultery. Hildreth v. State, 19 App. 195.

If the parties live together a single act will suffice. Bird v. State, 27 App. 635, 11 S. W. 641, 11 Am. St. Rep. 214; Swancoat v. State, 4 App. 105.

4. Living together.—If a married man and an unmarried colored woman lived together in the same room, with but one bed in the room, and with no other attendant but a small child, and thus live for a series of months, the jury might convict. Richardson v. State, 34 Tex. 142. It is the act of living together that constitutes the offense, and not the knowledge or intent; and such guilty knowledge need not be averred or proved. Fox v. State, 3 App. 329, 30 Am. Rep. 144. And subsequent marriage does not relieve the offenders. Id.

To constitute adultery there must be some sort of living together; a single act or occasional acts will not constitute adultery. Swancoat v. State, 4 App. 105; Parks v. State, Id., 134.

It was not necessary to define "living in adultery" the meaning being plain; that is: the state of living of the parties described in the code, and necessarily involved the idea of unlawful carnal intercourse. Parks v. State, 4 App. 134.

The words "living together" not being defined in the code are to be construed in the sense in which they are understood in common language taking into consideration the context, and thus construed mean that the parties must "dwell or reside together—abide together in the same habitation as a common or joint residing place." Bird v. State, 27 App. 635, 11 S. W. 641, 11 Am. St. Rep. 214; Burnett v. State, 44 App. 226, 70 S. W. 207.

See opinion for facts held insufficient to support a conviction on an indictment charging defendants with living together. McCabe and Cordway v. State, 34 App. 418, 30 S. W. 1063.

Where the parties resided about a mile apart evidence of intimacy, frequent meetings, and tending to show that defendant had stayed a night in the woman's house did not show a living together. Burnett v. State, 44 App. 226, 70 S. W. 207.

Several acts of intercourse by defendant with a servant living in his house did not warrant conviction under the first provision as to living together. Boswell v. State, 48 App. 47, 85 S. W. 1076, 122 Am. St. Rep. 731.

To constitute the crime of adultery by living together, it is not necessary that the parties live together as man and wife, but only that they live together and have intercourse. Shaw v. State, 49 App. 379, 91 S. W. 1087.

Evidence of adultery between defendant and his wife's niece, who was living in his home, authorizes a conviction of adultery by "living together"; since it is not necessary to constitute that offense that the parties live together as man and wife, but only that they live together and have intercourse. Bodkins v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 216.

5. Habitual carnal intercourse.—Under the original Code (arts. 392, 393), carnal knowledge by an unmarried man with a married woman, as many as a half dozen times, his visits being stolen, and the parties not living together, did not constitute the offense. Richardson v. State, 37 Tex. 346. A single act will not suffice, but repeated interviews at a given place, or even at different appointed places, may. Swancoat v. State, 4 App. 105; Parks v. State, 4 App. 134; Morrill v. State, 5 App. 447.

The court need not define the word "habitual" it being a word of general signification, and not technical. Collum v. State, 10 App. 708; Hilton v. State, 41 App. 190, 53 S. W. 113.

The word "habitual" is not a technical word, but is only to be understood as it is commonly used and needs no definition in charge. Hilton v. State, 41 App. 190, 53 S. W. 113.

Four acts of carnal intercourse are not sufficient to sustain conviction on charge of habitual intercourse. Hilton v. State, 41 App. 190, 53 S. W. 113.

6. Distinguished from statutory rape and bigamy.—Bigamy and adultery though covering the same period as to time are distinct offenses. Swancoat v. State, 4 App. 105.

Carnal intercourse with a female under the age of consent being declared by the statute to be rape is that and nothing else, so that she is not an accomplice on the ground that she was guilty of adultery. Donley v. State, 44 App. 428, 71 S. W. 958.

7. Marriage.—If slaves were living together as man and wife at the date the constitution of 1869 took effect, and continued so to live until 1876, and the cohabitation of the woman with another man, she is deemed to have been legally married. But there must be evidence of living together at that time. McKnight v. State, 6 App. 158; Webb v. State, 24 App. 164, 5 S. W. 651.

That the marriage ceremony was not by an ordained minister would not cause a prosecution for adultery of one of the parties to fail if there was a common law marriage. Holder v. State, 35 App. 19, 29 S. W. 793.

8. Indictment and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 252-254.

To support conviction for adultery it must be charged and proved that one of the parties is married to some person other than the particeps criminis. Tucker v. State, 35 Tex. 113.

The indictment need not aver that accused knew that his paramour was married; it is the act of living together that constitutes the offense. Fox v. State, 3 App. 329, 30 Am. Rep. 144.

If the indictment allege adultery by living together conviction cannot be had for habitual carnal intercourse without living together. Randle v. State, 12 App. 250; Burns v. State, 12 App. 394; Bird v. State, 27 App. 635, 11 S. W. 641, 11 Am. St. Rep. 214.

Though the statute uses the terms "man" and "woman" on indictment describing the parties as "a male" and "a female" is sufficient. Holland v. State, 14 App. 182.

It is sufficient to allege that one of the offenders is married to some person other than to the person with whom the adultery is charged. But it is not necessary that the name of such person be alleged; nor is it necessary to allege that one of the offenders is a man and the other a woman. Hildreth v. State, 19 App. 195; Collum v. State, 10 App. 708; Holland v. State, 14 App. 182; Clay v. State, 3 App. 499. The adultery need not be alleged with a continuando, but may be alleged as on a single, designated day. Swancoat v. State, 4 App. 105. An indictment which merely charges that the parties did "unlawfully cohabit together and carnally know each other," is insufficient. Edwards v. State, 10 App. 25.

Indictments for adultery approved. Mitten v. State, 24 App. 346, 6 S. W. 196; Bird v. State, 27 App. 635, 11 S. W. 641, 11 Am. St. Rep. 214; Thomas v. State, 28 App. 300, 12 S. W. 1098.

If, under an indictment for adultery, the carnal intercourse is established by proof of one act and that the parties lived together, or by proof of habitual intercourse, whether they lived together or not, and the state should fail to prove the marriage, as alleged the accused could be legally convicted of fornication. Kelley v. State, 32 App. 579, 25 S. W. 425.

Prosecution for adultery failing for proof of marriage only the defendant may be convicted of fornication; but conviction for adultery cannot be had on prosecution for fornication, as here the marriage is not alleged and the punishment is greater. Kelley v. State, 32 App. 579, 25 S. W. 425.

In criminal procedure at common law, in other states and in this state, under an indictment for adultery, with the proper allegations, a conviction can be had, under proper evidence, for fornication. The question is not whether one offense includes another. It is a question of allegation. The legislature cannot, by enacting that a certain offense includes another offense, relieve the state of the necessity of inserting in the indictment every allegation necessary to make a good indictment for the offense of which the accused has been convicted. Cosgrove v. State, 37 App. 249, 39 S. W. 367, 66 Am. St. Rep. 802.

A woman indicted for adultery with a man alleged to be married to a certain woman then living cannot be convicted of fornication on proof that the man was not so married, there being no allegation that the parties to the crime were not married. Cosgrove v. State, 37 App. 249, 39 S. W. 367, 66 Am. St. Rep. 802.

The allegations in such cases must contain the essentials of fornication, before conviction can be had therefor. Id.; Pena v. State, 46 Tex. Cr. 458, 80 S. W. 1014.

Allegation that defendant was married to a third party named was sufficient to charge that the parties were not married to each other. Lee v. State, 47 App. 464, 83 S. W. 1110.

Allegation that defendant was married to G. and proof of marriage to A. was fatal. Garland v. State, 51 App. 643, 104 S. W. 898.

May charge adultery in one count and fornication in another. Garland v. State, 51 App. 643, 104 S. W. 898; Cosgrove v. State, 37 App. 249, 39 S. W. 367, 66 Am. St. Rep. 802.

Under this article and article 492, it was held that it was sufficient in a prosecution of the woman to prove that the man was at the time married to another person then living, without proving that accused was then married, so that an allegation that she was could be rejected as surplusage. Goodwin v. State, 70 App. 600, 158 S. W. 274.

Where an indictment for adultery alleged the name of defendant's wife, and it was conclusively shown that defendant was married and living with his wife at the time of the acts charged, an instruction that did not require the jury to find that he was married to the person named in the indictment was not erroneous. Bodkins v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 216.

In an indictment for adultery, an allegation of the name of defendant's wife is surplusage. Bodkins v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 216.

9. Transferring indictment or information to county court.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 483.

10. Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to support a conviction. Eaton v. State, 60 App. 429, 132 S. W. 356; Smith v. State, 58 App. 106, 124 S. W. 919; Price v. State, 64 App. 448, 142 S. W. 586.

A witness must not be allowed to testify his mere suspicions from general indications, as that, from the position in which he saw the parties, he received the impression that they had been having carnal intercourse. McKnight v. State, 6 App. 158.

It is not incumbent on the state to prove the name of the person to whom one of the adulterers is married. Collum v. State, 10 App. 708.

Nor to prove a guilty knowledge on the part of the accused. Fox v. State, 3 App. 329, 30 Am. Rep. 144.

The evidence should be confined to the particular kind of adultery charged, that is, to adultery by cohabitation and carnal intercourse or by habitual carnal intercourse, without cohabitation. Where but one of these modes of committing the offense is charged, evidence of its commission by the other mode is not admissible, and if admitted, will not support conviction. Randle v. State, 12 App. 250; Burns v. State, Id., 394.

Former acts of intimacy short of carnal intercourse, of recent date, may be shown; but acts of familiarity four years before the date of the alleged offense was too remote. French v. State, 47 App. 571, 85 S. W. 4.

In a prosecution for adultery, the state was permitted to prove acts of the parties occurring subsequent to the filing of the indictment, and in a county other than that of the prosecution. It was held that under the peculiar facts of that case, the evidence was admissible. Funderburg v. State, 23 App. 392, 5 S. W. 244.

Prosecutrix testified that defendant had intercourse with her several different times, always in the presence of his wife, and that she at first yielded to defendant's embraces at his wife's solicitations. The court holds this to be a most remarkable state of facts, but refuses to pass on the sufficiency of the evidence. Hoy v. State, 39 App. 340, 45 S. W. 916.

Declaration of paramour jointly indicted with defendant, not made in his presence, is not admissible against him. Whicken v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 48.

Evidence that defendant insisted that his paramour change her room from downstairs in the hotel where they were stopping to upstairs and near defendant's room was properly admitted. Coons v. State, 49 App. 256, 91 S. W. 1085.

Testimony that defendant's paramour, whose name was Mrs. Shaw, was called "Muggins" by defendant, was not objectionable. Coons v. State, 49 App. 256, 91 S. W. 1085.

Testimony that witness understood that defendant's paramour was a grass widow, and that defendant had said she was a widow, was not irrelevant or immaterial. Coons v. State, 49 App. 256, 91 S. W. 1085.

Evidence that witness supposed defendant to be a married man, and that he lived with a woman understood to be his wife several years before the prosecution, was admissible, and not objectionable as secondary or indefinite. Coons v. State, 49 App. 256, 91 S. W. 1085.

Testimony by defendant's alleged paramour that she and defendant boarded at the same hotel in another county is admissible, if shown to be shortly before or after the date alleged in the indictment. Coons v. State, 49 App. 256, 91 S. W. 1085.

Evidence held sufficient to support conviction for adultery. Coons v. State, 49 App. 256, 91 S. W. 1085.

The jury were not required to find that the parties had carnal intercourse on any particular occasion, provided they found, from the circumstances surrounding any occasion within the time covered by the indictment, that the parties lived together and had carnal intercourse. Counts v. State, 49 App. 329, 94 S. W. 220.

The state must show that defendant's wife was alive at the time of the offense. Dixon v. State, 50 App. 385, 97 S. W. 692.

Evidence held insufficient to show habitual carnal intercourse. Green v. State, 53 App. 540, 110 S. W. 908; Sadler v. State, 52 App. 439, 107 S. W. 352; Quinn v. State, 51 App. 155, 101 S. W. 248.

Acts of the parties prior to the finding of the indictment are admissible in prosecution for adultery, though the illicit intercourse occurred after the date alleged in the indictment. Russell v. State, 53 App. 500, 111 S. W. 658.

In a prosecution for adultery, evidence that defendant's horse was hitched at the home of his paramour is admissible. Russell v. State, 53 App. 500, 111 S. W. 658.

In a prosecution for adultery by means of habitual carnal intercourse without living together, corroboration of the female as to one act of intercourse will not warrant a conviction on her testimony. Wallace v. State, 63 App. 611, 141 S. W. 95.

Evidence in a prosecution for adultery by means of habitual carnal intercourse without living together held not to show habitual intercourse. Wallace v. State, 63 App. 611, 141 S. W. 95.

In a prosecution for adultery by means of habitual carnal intercourse without living together, evidence that the female is a prostitute is admissible, bearing on the issue of habitual intercourse. Wallace v. State, 63 App. 611, 141 S. W. 95.

That the complaining witness was a prostitute in the habit of having indiscriminate intercourse with other men, or that her reputation was that of an unchaste woman, were not defenses to a prosecution for fornication, and evidence of such facts was properly excluded. Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 915.

Evidence, held sufficient to justify the jury in finding that accused and the woman lived together as man and wife, and had sexual intercourse while living together. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 567.

On a trial for adultery with C., testimony that L., accused's housekeeper, married, and, after living with her husband but a short time, returned to keeping house for accused, was competent, especially where accused's witness testified to the same effect. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 568.

On a trial for adultery with C., testimony that she was a prostitute and had previously been in a house of prostitution, and that accused visited her there ostensibly to urge her to return to her home, and went to her room with her, was competent. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 568.

Evidence that delivery wagons carried groceries to the house where it was claimed accused and a woman lived together as man and wife was competent. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 568.

Sexual intercourse while living together may be established by circumstantial testimony. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 567.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. Koger v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 577.

In a prosecution of defendant for adultery with his wife's niece, who had been living in his home, evidence that the girl had gone from defendant's home to a home for fallen girls and had there given birth to a baby is admissible, when limited to the issue whether the niece had had intercourse with some man. Bodkins v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 216.

11. Testimony of husband or wife.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 795.

12. Testimony of accomplice.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 801.

13. Competency of indicted adulterer as witness for paramour.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 791.

14. Charge of court.—A charge which wholly ignores the question of the marriage of one of the parties, is erroneous. Parks v. State, 3 App. 337. When but one of the modes of committing adultery is charged in the indictment, it is a radical error to instruct that a conviction may be had upon evidence which proves the other mode not alleged. Randle v. State, 12 App. 251; Burns v. State, Id. 334; Hildreth v. State, 19 App. 195. Where evidence of the acts of the parties occurring in another county from that of the prosecution, and subsequent to the presentment of the indictment, was admitted as tending to prove the adultery charged, it was held error for the court to omit to instruct the jury, as to the purpose for which such testimony was admitted, and that they could not convict for adultery committed in another county. Funderburg v. State, 23 App. 392, 5 S. W. 244. When the adultery is charged to have been committed by "habitual carnal intercourse," without cohabitation, it is error to instruct the jury so as to permit a conviction without proof that the carnal intercourse was habitual. The phrase "habitual intercourse," is a familiar and untechnical expression, and need not be explained in the charge. Collum v. State, 10 App. 708.

Instruction properly refused. Perry v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 618.

When there is evidence of an act after complaint was filed, the court should instruct the jury that defendant could not be convicted on such testimony. Proctor v. State, 37 App. 366, 35 S. W. 172.

Appellant was charged by complaint filed on the 20th of July, 1895; information was filed on the 22d day of August; the evidence tended to show adultery to have been committed between the filing of the complaint and information. The charge of the court authorized the jury to convict on evidence at any time within two years prior to the filing of the information; held, error. Proctor v. State, 37 App. 366, 35 S. W. 172.

On a trial for adultery, where accused admitted he was married, a charge assuming the existence of the marriage is not objectionable as being on the weight of the evidence. Russell v. State, 53 App. 500, 111 S. W. 658.

15. Acquittal or conviction as bar to prosecution.—See notes under article 492 and C. C. P. arts. 9, 772.

Conviction of bigamy would not necessarily bar prosecution for adultery during the period covered by the bigamous marriage. Swancoat v. State, 4 App. 105.

Art. 491. [354] Proof of marriage.—The proof of marriage in such cases may be made by the production of the original marriage license and return thereon, or a certified copy thereof, or by the testimony of any person who was present at such marriage, or who has known the husband and wife to live together as married persons.

Proof is not limited to the statutory method and admissions of an accused that he is a married man are competent evidence against him. Boger v. State, 19 App. 91. Holland v. State, 14 App. 182.

Marriage license.—A marriage license held sufficient to show the marriage of defendant. Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 26 S. W. 724.

Opinion evidence.—Marriage can not be proved by opinion. Webb v. State, 24 App. 164, 5 S. W. 651.

Other proof.—The preceding article does not prescribe the only mode of proving the marriage. It may be proved by the defendant's admissions, as may also the fact that his, or her, lawful spouse was living at the time of the adultery. Boger v. State, 19 App. 91. Of course such admissions would ordinarily be admissible evidence only against the party making them. Marriage can not be established by declarations of paramour made before prosecution was instituted. The paramour is an accomplice and her testimony must be corroborated. Wiley v. State, 33 App. 406, 26 S. W. 723.

When the defense is that the parties were legally married and that a former marriage by defendant was null, a petition in a suit for divorce filed by defendant against his former wife is admissible. Holder v. State, 35 App. 19, 29 S. W. 793.

Evidence, on a trial for adultery, held sufficient to justify the jury in finding that accused and the woman were both married, and that his wife and her husband were living. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 567.

Art. 492. [355] Both parties guilty.—When the offense of adultery has been committed, both parties are guilty, although only one of them may be married.

Acquittal or conviction of one party.—The acquittal of one of the parties to the adultery will not bar a prosecution and conviction of the other. Alonzo v. State, 15 App. 378, 49 Am. Rep. 207; Ledbetter v. State, 21 App. 344, 17 S. W. 427; Solomon v. State, 39 App. 149, 45 S. W. 706.

Instructing verdict in favor of one defendant on joint trial.—On a joint trial for adultery the court instructed a verdict of not guilty as to one of the defendants; held, no error; one defendant may be found not guilty and the other one guilty. Solomon v. State, 39 App. 140, 45 S. W. 706.

Subsequent marriage as defense or condonation.—A subsequent valid marriage of the parties does not condone the previous adultery, and is no defense to a prosecution for said offense. Fox v. State, 3 App. 329, 30 Am. Rep. 144. See, also, Bird v. State, 27 App. 635, 11 S. W. 641, 11 Am. St. Rep. 214.

Although the evidence may show that the parties married each other and lived together as man and wife, they may still be convicted of adultery. Hildreth v. State, 19 App. 195.

Proof of marriage.—Under this article and article 490, ante, it was held, that it was sufficient in a prosecution of the woman to prove that the man was at the time married to another person then living, without proving that accused was then married, so that an allegation that she was could be rejected as surplusage. Goodwin v. State, 70 App. 600, 158 S. W. 274.

Art. 493. [356] Punishment for adultery.—Every person guilty of adultery shall be punished by fine not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 165; P. C. 392.]

Art. 494. [357] "Fornication" defined.—"Fornication" is the living together and carnal intercourse with each other, or habitual carnal intercourse with each other without living together, of a man and woman, both being unmarried.

See Perigo v. State, 25 App. 533, 8 S. W. 660.

When made an offense.—Prior to the adoption of the Revised Penal Code, the offense of fornication was not defined by the Code, and was therefore not punishable under article 3 of said Code as it then existed. Wolff v. State, 6 App. 195, and cases there cited. But it is now made an offense and is punishable. Wells v. State, 9 App. 160; Powell v. State, 12 App. 238.

Ordinance as conflicting with statute.—See art. 965, C. C. P., and notes.

Nature and elements of offense.—Under the original Code (arts. 392–395), the offense of "fornication," not being defined, was not punishable, but "a living together in fornication" was an offense. State v. Foster, 31 Tex. 578; Fennell v. State, 32 Tex. 379; State v. Smith, 32 Tex. 167; but afterward it was held that "a living together in fornication" was not punishable. State v. Rahl, 33 Tex. 76. But these cases have been criticised, and are hardly authority. State v. Randle, 41 Tex. 292. See, however, Wolff v. State, 6 App. 195.

"Living together" means that the parties dwell or reside together in the same habitation as a common or joint residing place. Thomas v. State, 28 App. 300, 12 S. W. 1098; Mitten v. State, 24 App. 346, 6 S. W. 196; Bird v. State, 27 App. 365, 11 S. W. 641, 11 Am. St. Rep. 214.

Fornication may be committed in one of two modes: 1. By living together and carnal intercourse with each other. 2. By habitual carnal intercourse with each other without living together. Thomas v. State, 28 App. 300, 12 S. W. 1098.

That the complaining witness was a prostitute in the habit of having indiscriminate intercourse with other men, or that her reputation was that of an unchaste woman, were not defenses to a prosecution for fornication, and evidence of such facts was properly excluded. Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 915.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 255, 256.

Included in indictment for adultery, see note under article 490.

Under a similar statute (Hart. Dig., sec. 377), an indictment against a negro man and a certain woman, for living together in fornication, need not aver the descent of the woman. Ashworth v. State, 9 Tex. 490.

Under Pen. Code, art. 494, declaring that the offense of fornication may be committed by a man and woman living together, both being unmarried, and having carnal intercourse with each other, or by such man and woman having habitual carnal intercourse with each other without living together, an indictment charging that a man and woman had habitual carnal intercourse, but not alleging that they lived together at the time of such intercourse, or that they had the intercourse without living together, is fatally defective. Jones v. State, 29 App. 347, 16 S. W. 189.

It is not necessary that each count, conclude "against the peace and dignity of the state." Stebbins v. State, 31 App. 294, 20 S. W. 552.

An indictment alleging "neither of said persons being then and there lawfully married to another person then living" sufficiently charged that defendants were unmarried. Stebbins v. State, 31 App. 294, 20 S. W. 552.

State is not required to elect between counts in an indictment all charging misdemeanors. Stebbins v. State, 31 App. 294, 20 S. W. 552.

The indictment for fornication containing an allegation that the parties were not living together, the charge should make the fact of their living apart necessary to conviction. Mitchell v. State, 38 App. 325, 42 S. W. 989.

May charge adultery in one count and fornication in another. Garland v. State, 51 App. 643, 104 S. W. 898; Cosgrove v. State, 37 App. 248, 39 S. W. 367, 66 Am. St. Rep. 802.

The information should follow the statute, and one merely charging habitual carnal intercourse was insufficient. Cannedy v. State, 58 App. 184, 125 S. W. 31.

An information for fornication, which charged accused with being an unmarried male and the person with whom the offense was committed with being an unmarried female, charged that accused was a man and that the other person was a woman. Townser v. State, 58 App. 453, 126 S. W. 572, 137 Am. St. Rep. 976.

Evidence.—As a general rule it is not competent for the state to prove that the female defendant has the reputation of a prostitute. Perigo v. State, 25 App. 533, 8 S. W. 660. But in view of the female's confession of the fact the error was not material. Id.

Proof, which, but for failure to prove marriage of one of the parties, would sustain conviction for adultery, would sustain conviction for fornication. Kelley v. State, 32 App. 579, 25 S. W. 425.

The paramour is not a competent witness, though not indicted. Spencer v. State, 31 Tex. 64.

A conviction of a woman upon the unsupported declarations of her paramour, testified to upon trial by third parties, can not be sustained. Spencer v. State, 31 Tex. 64; nor do the facts that the man and the woman lived together in the same house, but occupied different rooms, the woman having been the slave of the man, being nearly white, and wearing short hair, justify a conviction. Smelser v. State, 31 Tex. 95.

The state must show affirmatively that both parties were unmarried. Wells v. State, 9 App. 160.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Cohen v. State, 11 App. 337; Smelser v. State, 31 Tex. 95.

Evidence held insufficient to show a living together. McCabe v. State, 34 App. 418, 30 S. W. 1063.

Evidence that the woman had intercourse with other men was not admissible. Rodes v. State, 38 App. 328, 42 S. W. 990.

A prosecution for fornication, being an offense only against public decency, testimony that the particeps criminis, prior to her living in fornication with defendant, had borne a good reputation for chastity, was irrelevant. Boatwright v. State, 42 App. 442, 60 S. W. 760.

On a prosecution for fornication, the fact that witnesses testified without objection that the particeps criminis, prior to her alleged improper relations with defendant, had borne a good reputation for chastity, did not authorize the admission of similar testimony thereafter over objection. Boatwright v. State, 42 App. 442, 60 S. W. 760.

On a prosecution for fornication, the particeps criminis being on the stand, and having given material testimony against defendant, it was error to refuse to permit introduction of a letter written by her in which she had made statements contradictory to her testimony. Boatwright v. State, 42 App. 442, 60 S. W. 760.

On a prosecution for fornication, testimony that the witness, at the instance of defendant's brother, had endeavored to get the particeps criminis and defendant admitted to the county farm, was not reversible error on the ground that defendant was not a party to the arrangement, in view of the court's explanation that defendant was shown to have authorized his brother to procure such admission. Boatwright v. State, 42 App. 442, 60 S. W. 760.

On a trial for fornication, evidence held not to sufficiently corroborate the testimony of the woman with whom the alleged offense was committed. Townser v. State, 58 App. 453, 126 S. W. 572, 137 Am. St. Rep. 976.

A conviction of unlawful cohabitation and of having carnal intercourse with an unmarried woman cannot be sustained without proof that she was unmarried. Watson v. State, 62 App. 620, 138 S. W. 611.

Accused's testimony that he had intercourse with the complaining witness five or six times, that he remembered having intercourse twice in 1910, and three times in 1911, that he did not remember telling the grand jury that he had intercourse with her whenever he wanted to, that he guessed he could have had intercourse any time he wanted to, and that he went to see her until she told him she was pregnant, when he quit, sufficiently showed that the acts of intercourse were habitual to sustain a conviction for fornication. Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 915.

Charge of the court.—Charge of the court in fornication cases, see Mitten v. State, 24 App. 346, 6 S. W. 196.

On indictment for fornication in living together it was error for the charge to authorize conviction for habitual carnal intercourse without living together. Powell v. State, 12 App. 238.

When only one of the modes of committing fornication is charged in the indictment, it is radical error to instruct the jury that they may convict upon evidence proving that the offense was committed by the other mode not charged. Powell v. State, 12 App. 238.

Acquittal as bar to prosecution.—The acquittal of one of the alleged fornicators is no bar to the prosecution and conviction of the other. Alonzo v. State, 15 App. 378, 49 Am. Rep. 207.

Art. 495. [358] Punishment for fornication.—Every person guilty of fornication shall be punished by fine not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars.

CHAPTER FOUR

BAWDY AND DISORDERLY HOUSES

Art.		Art.
496.	"Bawdy house" and "disorderly house" defined.	502. Further defined.
497.	"Assignment house" defined.	503. Keeping same may be enjoined.
498.	Alluring females to visit same.	504. Who may be made party defendant.
499.	Includes any room, etc.	505. Duty of attorney general, district and county attorneys.
500.	Punishment for keeping.	506. Officers, their duties.
501.	Owner, lessee or agent controlling premises.

Article 496. [359] "Bawdy house" and "disorderly house" defined.—A "bawdy house" is one kept for prostitution or where prostitutes are permitted to resort or reside for the purpose of plying their vocation. A "disorderly house" is any assignation house or any theater, playhouse or house where spirituous, vinous or malt liquors are kept for sale, and prostitutes, lewd women or women of bad reputation for chastity are employed, kept in service or permitted to display or conduct themselves in a lewd, lascivious or indecent manner, or to which persons resort for the purpose of smoking or in any manner using opium, or any house in which spirituous, vinous or malt liquors are sold or kept for sale, without first having obtained a license under the laws of this state to retail such liquors; or any house located in any county, justice precinct or other subdivision of a county where the sale of intoxicating liquor has been prohibited under the laws of this state, in which such non-intoxicating malt liquor is sold or kept for the purpose of sale, as requires the seller thereof to obtain internal revenue license under the laws of the United States as a retail malt liquor dealer; or any house located in any county, justice precinct or other subdivision of a county in which the sale of intoxicating liquor has been legally prohibited, where the owner, proprietor or lessee thereof has posted license issued by the United States of America, authorizing such owner, proprietor or lessee thereof to pursue the occupation and business of a retail liquor dealer, or a retail malt liquor dealer. [Amended by Act April 4, 1889, p. 33; amended, Act 1907, p. 246; S. S. 1910, p. 32.]

Constitutionality and repeal.—Acts 30th Leg. c. 132, P. C. arts. 496 et seq., was not repealed by Vagrancy Act 1909, c. 59, P. C. arts. 634 et seq. punishing as vagrants, among others, every common prostitute and every keeper of a house of prostitution, etc., and repealing all conflicting laws. Weir v. State, 64 App. 164, 141 S. W. 948; Hitchings v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1164.

Acts 30th Leg. p. 246, c. 132, is not in conflict with Const. art. 16, § 20, requiring the Legislature to enact a law whereby the voters of any municipality may by a majority vote determine whether the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited within prescribed limits. Joliff v. State, 53 App. 61, 109 S. W. 176.

This law not unconstitutional, nor is it repealed by the act known as the Baskin-McGregor bill. Joliff v. State, 53 App. 61, 109 S. W. 177; Bumbaugh v. State, 56 App. 331, 120 S. W. 424.

Acts 30th Leg. c. 132, P. C. arts. 496 et seq. prohibiting disorderly houses, was not repealed by Robertson-Fitzhugh Liquor Law (Acts 31st Leg. [1st Ex. Sess.] c. 17) § 25, P. C. art. 626, forbidding presence of lewd women in places where liquor is sold. Morgan v. State, 62 App. 39, 136 S. W. 445.

Act April 18, 1907 (Acts 30th Leg. c. 132) P. C. arts. 496 et seq., relating to the offense of keeping a bawdyhouse, does not violate Const. art. 3, § 25, which requires that no bill shall contain more than one subject which shall be expressed in its title. Richards v. State, 63 App. 176, 140 S. W. 459.

This article, including in the definition of a disorderly house a place in prohibition territory where nonintoxicating malt liquors, requiring a United States retail liquor dealer's license are sold or kept for sale was a proper exercise of the state's "police power," which includes authority to restrict the pursuit of any business or occupation injurious to the health, peace, security, morals, or general welfare of society. Johnson v. Elliott (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 968.

Conflict with other articles.—This article and articles 589 and 611 are not conflicting. Haynes v. State, 63 App. 181, 139 S. W. 1155.

Statute as general.—Acts 30th Leg. p. 246, c. 132, prohibiting the keeping of a disorderly house where intoxicating liquors are sold or kept for sale without a license, is a general law and is applicable in local option territory as well as in nonlocal option territory Joliff v. State, 53 App. 61, 109 S. W. 176.

The disorderly house statute is a general law, and applies to all parts of the state, whether local option is in force or not. Layton v. State, 61 App. 507, 135 S. W. 557.

Lease of premises illegal.—A lease of premises to be occupied as a bawdyhouse by the lessee, executed by the lessor who had knowledge of the lessee's purpose, and who acquiesced in the use of the premises and collected the rent, is illegal, and neither party may demand relief therefrom or thereunder, within the rule that, where two persons participate in an unlawful transaction and are in pari delicto, neither a court of law nor equity will aid either, notwithstanding articles 496, 500, and 501, defining a bawdy house and punishing the keeper and owner thereof, unless the owner proceeds to prevent the keeping by giving information to the prosecuting attorney. Eckles v. Nowlin (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 794.

Sale of liquor.—See notes under articles 500 and 503, post.

Sales without license in general, see art. 611, post.

Article 496, as enacted in 1907 (Acts 30th Leg. c. 132), and as amended in 1910 (Acts 31st Leg. 3d Ex. Sess. c. 14), defining a "disorderly house" as a house where intoxicating liquors are kept for sale and sold without a license, or any house located in prohibition territory in which nonintoxicating malt liquor is sold or kept for sale, so as to require the seller to obtain an internal revenue license under the federal laws, etc., does not include persons not previously included, but merely provides that, where by law a license is required, the carrying on of the business without a license gives to the house the quality of a disorderly house, and a club organized to maintain golf and other sports which maintains a clubhouse where its members may obtain intoxicating liquors, does not maintain a disorderly house. State v. Duke, 104 Tex. 355, 137 S. W. 654, 138 S. W. 385.

Where a club is not organized in good faith for purposes authorized by law, but merely as a subterfuge for the sale of intoxicants, sales made by it are illegal and are subject to the penalties imposed by law. State v. Duke, 104 Tex. 355, 137 S. W. 654, 138 S. W. 385.

The possession of an internal revenue liquor license by a club organized to maintain golf and other sports, and maintaining a clubhouse where intoxicants are sold to its members, does not fix on the directors of the club the liabilities and burdens of a retail liquor dealer, nor estop them from showing that they are not in the business of selling intoxicants, within the law. State v. Duke, 104 Tex. 355, 137 S. W. 654, 138 S. W. 385.

A bona fide club, situated in a precinct, city, or town where liquor may be lawfully sold, organized for purposes sanctioned by law, and which, as a mere incident and without profit, furnishes liquors to its members, and not to the public generally, is not a person, under the laws, "engaged in the occupation or business of selling intoxicating liquors," though each individual act of such club in territory where the sale of liquor is prohibited by law is a sale. State v. Duke, 104 Tex. 355, 137 S. W. 654, 138 S. W. 385.

Under Acts 23d Leg. c. 121, Acts 30th Leg. c. 138, and Acts 31st Leg. 1st Ex. Sess. c. 17, imposing a tax on every person, firm or association selling intoxicating liquors, etc., a club organized to maintain golf and other sports, and maintaining a clubhouse where intoxicating liquors are sold to the members only, does not sell intoxicating liquors. State v. Duke, 104 Tex. 355, 137 S. W. 654, 138 S. W. 385.

A social club organized in Oklahoma, but which has not complied with the laws of Texas by filing its charter, etc., may not sell liquor in Texas without a license, even if it had a permit to do business in the state; there being no showing that the law of Oklahoma permitted a club to sell liquor without a license. Pace v. State, 70 App. 454, 156 S. W. 1192.

Article 496, providing that a house located in a prohibition district, in which nonintoxicating malt liquor is sold or kept for sale, requiring the seller to have an internal revenue license, shall be a disorderly house, should be construed as constituting a special exception to Rev. St. 1911, arts. 7476, 7477, providing for the licensing of persons to sell nonintoxicating malt liquors, with reference to particular territory, and was therefore not in conflict with such sections. Johnson v. Elliott (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 968.

This article in declaring that a house located in a district where the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited in which nonintoxicants, for the lawful sale of which an internal revenue license is required, are sold or kept for sale shall constitute a disorderly house, was not objectionable for uncertainty in referring to the laws of Congress to determine the conditions under which it should be applicable. Johnson v. Elliott (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 968.

Rev. St. 1911, art. 7476, levies a state tax on sellers of nonintoxicating malt liquors of $2,000, and authorizes counties, incorporated cities, and towns to levy an additional tax not exceeding $1,000 on such persons. Section 7477 requires persons engaged in the business to apply for a license and pay the taxes prescribed. Held, that Pen. Code, art. 496, defining a disorderly house as any house situated in territory where the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited where nonintoxicating malt liquors, requiring an internal revenue license, are sold or kept for sale, was not invalid as delegating to Congress the power of determining whether the business of selling nonintoxicating malt liquors shall be valid, and as conferring on another jurisdiction power to suspend a state law; since, if Congress should exempt sellers of nonintoxicating malt liquors from the internal revenue requirement, a person prosecuting such business in prohibition territory where the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited would owe his immunity from punishment, not to the suspension of the state law, but to the fact that he was not keeping a disorderly house under the conditions prescribed by the Penal Code. Johnson v. Elliott (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 968.

While a bona fide club situated in a district where liquor may lawfully be sold, organized for purposes sanctioned by law, and selling liquor to its members, and not to the public as a mere incident to its organization and without profit, is not engaged in the occupation or business of selling intoxicating liquors, under the laws of the state, and cannot be enjoined under articles 496 and 503, providing for injunction against houses where liquor is illegally sold as disorderly houses, yet such protection does not extend to clubs not organized in good faith for purposes authorized by law but merely as a subterfuge to evade the law. Soto v. State (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 279.

The fact that sales of liquor by a social club were not made for profit does not prevent the club from being engaged in the business of selling such liquors, since profit is not an essential element of engaging in such business. State v. Country Club (Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 570.

Accomplice.—See notes under article 79 ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 257, 258.

Art. 497. "Assignment house" defined.—An "assignment house" is a house, room or place where men and women meet by mutual appointment, or by appointment made by another, for the purpose of sexual intercourse, whether at such place vinous, spirituous or malt liquors are kept for sale or are used or not. [Act 1907, p. 246; S. S. 1910, p. 32.]

Restaurant.—One who maintained a restaurant in which he permitted lewd women to congregate and drink and to meet men for the purpose of arranging for unlawful sexual intercourse elsewhere is guilty of keeping a disorderly house within the purview of articles 497, 498, 499, and so his maintenance of such restaurant may be enjoined under the direct provisions of article 503. Ex parte Yoshida, 70 App. 212, 156 S. W. 1166.

Art. 498. Alluring females to visit same.—It shall be unlawful for any person to invite, solicit, procure, allure or use any means for the purpose of alluring or procuring any female to visit and be at any particular house, room or place for the purpose of meeting and having unlawful sexual intercourse with any male person, or to take part, or in any way participate in any immoral conduct with men or women, or to use at such place any intoxicating liquors, or to give to any person the name and address, or either, or photograph of any female for the purpose of enabling the person to whom such name, address or photograph of such female is given and furnished, to meet and have unlawful sexual intercourse, or to bring about or procure such unlawful sexual intercourse with such female by any other person. Any person violating any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars, and, in addition thereto, shall be confined in the county jail not less than one nor more than six months. [Act 1907, p. 246.]

See arts. 506a-506e, post, and note under article 497 ante.

Constitutionality.—The punishment assessed in articles 359a and 361 refer to distinct, though allied, offenses, and hence Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 246, c. 132, adding and re-enacting such articles, and prohibiting the keeping of disorderly houses, is not unconstitutional, because of indefiniteness of the punishment prescribed. Wilson v. State, 55 App. 176, 115 S. W. 337.

Information.—An information charging that accused procured and allured a female to be at a certain place, a designated town, for the purpose of meeting and having unlawful intercourse with men, is sufficiently definite to charge a violation of this statute. Sanders v. State, 60 App. 34, 129 S. W. 605.

Such information was sufficient without stating any particular house or room in such town. Sanders v. State, 60 App. 34, 129 S. W. 605.

This article, making it unlawful for any person to solicit or procure any female to visit any particular house for the purpose of having unlawful intercourse with any male person, etc., creates the offense of alluring any female to go to a certain place for immoral conduct, and where a female is allured or invited, and she starts to the place of assignment, the offense is complete, and the information need not give the names of those she was to meet at such place. Sanders v. State, 60 App. 34, 129 S. W. 605.

Female as accomplice.—See notes to art. 79, ante.

Evidence.—On a trial for soliciting a female to visit a place for the purpose of having sexual intercourse with P., where the identity of the female was in issue, testimony of W. that he accompanied the prosecuting witness to the place where the crime was committed and had intercourse with such female was admissible for all purposes. Dowd v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 304.

Art. 499. [360] Includes any room, etc.—Any room or part of a building or other place appropriated or used for either of the purposes above enumerated is a disorderly house within the meaning of this chapter.

See note under article 497 ante.

Meaning of "house."—The house may be any kind of a structure, even a tent. Killman v. State, 2 App. 222, 28 Am. Rep. 432.

When one carries lewd women around through the country and stops at various places and the prostitution is carried on in a hack and wagon which are under his control and he receives part of the proceeds he is guilty of keeping a disorderly house. Tracy v. State, 42 App. 494, 61 S. W. 127, 128.

Art. 500. [361] Punishment for keeping, or owner of the house having information that his house is being kept or used, etc.—Any person who shall, directly or as agent for another, or through any agent, keep or be concerned in keeping, or aid or assist or abet in keeping, a bawdy house or a disorderly house, in any house, building, edifice or tenement, or shall knowingly permit the keeping of a bawdy house or a disorderly house in any house, building, edifice or tenement owned, leased, occupied or controlled by him, directly as agent for another, or through any agent, shall be deemed guilty of keeping, or being concerned in keeping, or knowingly permitted to be kept, as the case may be, a bawdy house or a disorderly house, as the case may be, and, on conviction, shall be punished by a fine of two hundred dollars, and by confinement in the county jail for twenty days for each day he shall keep, be concerned in keeping or knowingly permit to be kept, such bawdy or disorderly house. [Amended by Act April 4, 1889, p. 33; amended 1907, p. 246.]

1. Constitutionality, repeal, and amendment.—See notes under article 504.

Offenses committed before the amendment were properly tried by the old law. Johnson v. State, 28 App. 562, 13 S. W. 1005.

Not "any person" as under the old law, but only "any owner, lessee or tenant" is declared guilty under the amendment April 4, 1889, Gen. Laws, 21 Leg. p. 33. Lamar v. State, 30 App. 693, 18 S. W. 788.

Under this amendment a servant of the owner merely taking care of the place cannot be punished. Mitchell v. State, 34 App. 311, 30 S. W. 810.

A husband may be liable though the wife owns the property. Willis v. State, 34 App. 148, 29 S. W. 787.

A mother of an owner held not liable, though she exercised some control over the premises and paid taxes thereon. Cook v. State, 42 App. 539, 61 S. W. 307.

Under the amendment the offenses were cognizable by a justices court, and as this gave the district court of Harris appellate jurisdiction by virtue of Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1496, 1497, it had not original and exclusive jurisdiction. Davis v. State, 32 App. 382, 23 S. W. 892.

The vagrancy act of 1909, p. 111, P. C. arts. 634 et seq., punishing as vagrants every keeper of a house of prostitution, etc., and repealing all conflicting laws, did not repeal this article. Wilson v. State, 61 App. 628, 136 S. W. 447.

Act April 18, 1907 (Acts 30th Leg. c. 132), amending Pen. Code 1895, tit. 10, c. 4, arts. 361, 362 (articles 500 and 502, post) does not violate Const. art. 3, § 36, which provides that no law shall be revived or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the act revived or the section or sections amended shall be re-enacted and published at length. Richards v. State, 63 App. 176, 140 S. W. 459.

2. Validity of municipal ordinance.—See art. 965, C. C. P., and notes.

3. Nature and elements of offense and persons liable.—If the house is kept for the purposes named in the statute it is immaterial how quietly and peaceably it is kept. Sylvester v. State, 42 Tex. 496.

It is only the keeper of the disorderly house that is subject to punishment. Prostitutes who may occupy rooms in such house, but who are not the keepers, or concerned in the keeping of such house, are not guilty of this offense. Moore v. State, 4 App. 127; Stone v. State, 22 App. 185, 2 S. W. 585. Nor is the owner of the house who has rented it for the purpose of its being kept as a disorderly house guilty of the offense of keeping such house. Albertson v. State, 5 App. 89.

A house is not necessarily a disorderly house within the meaning of the statute because it is resorted to by prostitutes and vagabonds. It must be kept for the purpose or as a resort. Proof that accused kept a combined retail grocery establishment and beer saloon, and that prostitutes and vagabonds resorted to that establishment for the purpose of buying and drinking beer was insufficient to support a conviction for "keeping a disorderly house." McElhanev v. State, 12 Tex. App. 231; Harmes v. State, 26 App. 190, 9 S. W. 487, 8 Am. St. Rep. 470.

On keeping a disorderly house as continuous offense. See Huffman v. State, 23 App. 491, 5 S. W. 134; Fleming v. State, 28 App. 234, 12 S. W. 605; Novy v. State, 62 App. 492, 138 S. W. 139.

The statute is violated if a prostitute is knowingly employed, or is permitted, after employment, to conduct herself in an indecent manner. Johnson v. State, 32 App. 504, 24 S. W. 411.

In making a case under the statute, all that is required of the state, as to the character of the woman, is to show such facts as would put a reasonable man on notice. Id.

A tenant is liable if he allows lewd conduct in his house. Golden v. State, 34 App. 143, 29 S. W. 779.

Defendant kept a house for the sale of spirituous, vinous and malt liquors; lewd women were allowed to stay about the place and to display and conduct themselves in a lascivious manner; held, that he was guilty of keeping a disorderly house. Golden v. State, 34 App. 143, 29 S. W. 779.

On trial for keeping a disorderly house the evidence showed that the defendant had made a request in writing to his tenant to vacate the premises; held, that this alone was insufficient. Willis v. State, 34 App. 148, 29 S. W. 787.

It is no defense that house is property of defendant's wife. Willis v. State, 34 App. 148, 29 S. W. 787.

A servant of the owner of a disorderly house can not be punished for taking care of the house. Mitchell v. State, 34 App. 311, 30 S. W. 810.

Agent having charge of the property is liable. Flynn v. State, 35 App. 220, 32 S. W. 1041.

Defendant may be convicted for keeping a disorderly house, although but one prostitute is in the house, if it is shown to be a place where men commonly resort, or acts of prostitution have been there committed. Ramey v. State, 39 App. 200, 45 S. W. 489.

To constitute tenancy the keeper must have a right of tenancy by virtue of contract with the owner or landlord. Bates v. State, 45 App. 420, 76 S. W. 463.

A mere trespasser is not owner, lessee or tenant. Id.

Under this article and article 496, defining a bawdyhouse, and punishing any person who directly, or as agent for another, keeps, or assists in keeping a bawdyhouse, etc., a tenant of a house, who keeps the house as a bawdyhouse, is guilty of a criminal offense. Farrell v. State, 64 App. 200, 141 S. W. 535.

One prosecuted for unlawfully keeping and knowingly permitting a house under her control to be kept as a place where prostitutes resort cannot be convicted, unless she had knowledge of the conduct of the inmates or knew that they were prostitutes. Hitchings v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1164.

It is no offense for one to keep liquors for his own use. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 306.

The keeper of a disorderly house within article 496, defining a disorderly house as any assignation house, or theater or house where liquors are kept for sale and women of bad reputation are permitted, is guilty of an offense involving moral turpitude, and a witness for accused is properly cross-examined as to whether he is under an indictment for keeping a disorderly house (citing 5 Words and Phrases, p. 4580). Bird v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 738.

It is no defense to a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house where liquor is sold without a retail license that it was in territory where a license could not be obtained. Gill v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 616.

One who sells real estate to a purchaser who uses it for immoral purposes is not guilty of an offense, but one who leases property with knowledge that the lessee will use it for immoral purposes is guilty. Compton v. State, 71 App. 7, 158 S. W. 515.

A lease of premises to be occupied as a bawdyhouse by the lessee, executed by the lessor who had knowledge of the lessee's purpose, and who acquiesced in the use of the premises and collected the rent, is illegal, and neither party may demand relief therefrom or thereunder, within the rule that, where two persons participate in an unlawful transaction and are in pari delicto, neither a court of law nor equity will aid either, notwithstanding articles 496, 500, and 501, defining a bawdyhouse and punishing the keeper and owner thereof, unless the owner proceeds to prevent the keeping by giving information to the prosecuting attorney. Eckles v. Nowlin (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 794.

Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 2969, provides that all property of a wife, both real and personal, owned by her before marriage shall be her separate property, but during the marriage the husband shall have the sole management thereof. Held, that where a husband and wife lived together on property belonging to her, and it did not appear that he in fact was not in control thereof, or that the wife had ever objected to his control, it was no defense to a prosecution of the husband for maintaining a disorderly house thereon that the title was in the wife. Key v. State, 71 Tex. 485, 160 S. W. 354.

Where the owner of a house is charged with knowingly permitting it to be kept as a house of prostitution where prostitutes are permitted to resort or reside for the purpose of plying their vocation, knowledge that the occupants were prostitutes and were running houses of prostitution must be traced to accused. Golden v. State, 72 App. 19, 160 S. W. 957.

A woman in charge and control of a house on the night when parties met there for the purpose of having sexual intercourse, who had lived there continuously for more than six months, and who admitted to witnesses that she was the keeper of the house, was the "keeper" thereof, within the statute. Hearne v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 596.

In a prosecution for permitting a disorderly house to be kept on defendant's premises, tried without a jury, where the state's evidence would authorize a conviction, and it appeared that defendant was informed of the character of the house some time in January or February and requested additional investigation, which was refused, the defendant's efforts in the following May, after prosecution had been commenced, to have the premises vacated, were too late to save him from prosecution. Davidson v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1037.

See Willis v. State, 34 App. 148, 29 S. W. 787; Young v. State, 55 App. 383, 116 S. W. 1158.

An indictment without the approved beginning or conclusion and failing to allege that the assembly of disorderly persons permitted by defendant was at his house was insufficient. Stephanes v. State, 21 Tex. 206.

It is sufficient to charge that the defendant "did unlawfully keep a disorderly house, being then and there kept for the purpose of public prostitution." Thompson v. State, 1 App. 56; Thompson v. State, 2 App. 82; Brown v. State, Id. 189; Killman v. State, Id. 222, 28 Am. Rep. 432; Lowe v. State, 4 App. 34; Brooks v. State, Id. 567; Loraine v. State, 22 App. 640, 3 S. W. 340. But an averment that the defendant "did commit the offense of keeping a disorderly house" is insufficient. Lasindo v. State, 2 App. 59; Tompkins v. State, 4 App. 161. Since the amendment of the preceding article 496 the decision in Springer v. State, 16 App. 591, is not applicable. This offense is a continuous one, and a conviction bars all further prosecutions up to the time of such conviction. But if the indictment alleges certain dates within which the offense was committed, a conviction will not bar a prosecution for the same offense committed at a time not within the dates alleged. Huffman v. State, 23 App. 491, 5 S. W. 134; Wilson v. State, 16 App. 591; Handley v. State, Id. 444. No specific description of the house is necessary. Lowe v. State, 4 App. 34. Nor is it necessary to allege that prostitutes or vagrants did resort to the house. Brooks v. State, 4 App. 567. It may be alleged conjunctively that the offense was committed in all the modes specified in the statute, but if these modes be alleged disjunctively the indictment will be bad. Tompkins v. State, 4 App. 161.

Plea of former conviction does not avail, where the last indictment covers a different time. Fleming v. State, 28 App. 234, 12 S. W. 605.

Indictment must charge that the accused is either the owner, lessee, or tenant of the house. Lamar v. State, 30 App. 693, 18 S. W. 788. And on other essentials of indictment, see Ex parte Garza, 28 App. 381, 13 S. W. 779, 19 Am. St. Rep. 845; Johnson v. State, 28 App. 562, 13 S. W. 1005; Harmes v. State, 26 App. 190, 9 S. W. 487, 8 Am. St. Rep. 470.

Each day may be alleged in a separate count in the indictment and a conviction had on each count on the same trial. Hall v. State, 32 App. 474, 24 S. W. 407. Complaint alleging that defendant is the owner, tenant, and lessee of house is not demurrable. Merrell v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 41.

Under a statute against keeping a disorderly house, or knowingly permitting it to be kept, where such ways of committing the offense are included in the same general definition, and made punishable in the same manner they do not constitute distinct offenses, and may be charged conjunctively in one count in the indictment. Willis v. State, 34 App. 787, 29 S. W. 787.

The indictment alleged ownership in accused, the evidence showed that he was agent for the house and had control of it, and rented it knowing the purpose for which it would be used; held, that the ownership was properly alleged (distinguished from Mitchell v. State, 34 App. 311, 30 S. W. 810). Flynn v. State, 35 App. 220, 32 S. W. 1041.

An information for keeping a disorderly house need not name the house nor the lot on which it is situated. Sprague v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 837.

An indictment following the statute and stating conjunctively the acts constituting keeping a disorderly house was not duplicitous, nor bad for using the words "for prostitution" rather than the words "for the purpose of prostitution." Schulze v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 918.

An information alleging in substance that on February 2, 1907, and on each and every day from then until March 1, 1907, accused did as owner, tenant, and lessee, unlawfully keep a disorderly house for the purpose of public prostitution and as a common resort for prostitutes and vagabonds, is sufficient. Wimberly v. State, 53 Tex. Cr. 11, 108 S. W. 384.

An indictment charging one with keeping a disorderly house where liquors are sold or kept for sale without a license is sufficient when drawn with special reference to the forms laid down in Willson's Criminal Forms, No. 218. Joliff v. State, 53 App. 61, 109 S. W. 176.

An indictment under this article as amended by the act of 1907 need not allege that the liquors charged to have been kept are capable of producing intoxication. Jelink v. State, 52 Civ. App. 402, 115 S. W. 908.

Under article 496, defining a disorderly house as one where spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors are kept for sale without first having obtained a license, an indictment for keeping a disorderly house is not insufficient for failure to allege that the liquors kept for sale were intoxicating. Tachini v. State, 59 App. 55, 126 S. W. 1139.

Where the statute (Acts 30th Leg. c. 132), defining the offense of keeping a bawdyhouse, under which accused was prosecuted, went into effect in August, 1907, and the information charged that accused was the keeper of the house on December 18, 1909, testimony was admissible as to the general reputation of the house from September 1 to December 18, 1909, and was not objectionable on the ground that it was not limited to the time of the allegations in the information, charging accused with keeping the house. Gordon v. State, 60 App. 570, 133 S. W. 255.

An information charging the keeping of a disorderly house sufficiently identified the house by alleging that it was in a certain county. Wilson v. State, 61 App. 628, 136 S. W. 447.

An information for keeping a bawdyhouse under this article, which declares that "any person who shall directly keep a bawdyhouse in any house, building, edifice, or tenement shall be deemed guilty of keeping the same," is sufficient without alleging that defendant was the owner, lessee, or tenant, etc., or the extent of his control over it. Mosher v. State, 62 App. 42, 136 S. W. 467.

An information charging that accused on a certain day, and on each succeeding day from that date to another fixed day, conducted a disorderly house, is not bad as stating a separate offense for each day covered by the period. Novy v. State, 62 App. 492, 138 S. W. 139.

An indictment for keeping a bawdyhouse, which substantially follows the form for an indictment laid down in the Penal Code, is sufficient. Farrell v. State, 64 App. 200, 141 S. W. 535.

An indictment, charging accused with keeping a bawdyhouse, which specifically charges that the house was in the county in which the indictment was found, need not give any further description of the location of the house. Farrell v. State, 64 App. 200, 141 S. W. 535.

Under this article and article 496, defining a bawdyhouse, and punishing any person who directly, or as agent for another, keeps, or assists in keeping, a bawdyhouse, etc., a tenant of a house, who keeps the house as a bawdyhouse, is guilty of a criminal offense; and an indictment charging the offense, need not allege that he knowingly permitted the keeping of the house. Farrell v. State, 64 App. 200, 141 S. W. 535.

The complaint and information in a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house charged that the house was kept by defendant directly and indirectly. Held that, as the rest of the information followed the statute, the words "and indirectly" are surplusage, not affecting the validity of the information. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 939.

Under this article and article 496, defining a bawdyhouse, and punishing any person who shall, directly or as agent for another, or through any agent, keep or be concerned in keeping a bawdyhouse, an indictment, alleging that accused did unlawfully keep and was concerned in keeping a bawdyhouse, where women of ill fame were permitted to resort and reside, is not objectionable as duplicitous, but is valid, within the rule that, where several ways are set forth in a statute by which an offense may be committed, and all are embraced in the same offense and made punishable in the same manner, they may be charged conjunctively in the same count. Cabiness v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 934.

Striking out as surplusage the words "and directly and indirectly" from an indictment charging that defendant did unlawfully and directly and indirectly keep and was concerned in keeping a house where spirituous, vinous, and malt liquors were kept for sale in quantities of a gallon and less, without having first obtained a license under the laws of the state to retail such liquors, it charges the offense denounced by article 500, of keeping and being concerned in keeping a disorderly house, defined by article 496 as a house where spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors are sold or kept for sale, without having first obtained a license under the laws of the state to retail such liquors. Gill v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 616.

An indictment for keeping a house where intoxicants were sold in quantities of a gallon or less without having obtained a license to "retain" such liquors should be amended to use the word "retail," instead of "retain"; it being no violation of law to "retain" liquors in any quantity, since the laws only prohibit the retailing of liquors. Minter v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 783.

In a prosecution under this article, declaring it a misdemeanor for one knowingly to permit the keeping of a disorderly house in a building owned by him, the information need not allege that defendant had not immediately proceeded to prevent the keeping of it, and that he had not given the county attorney notice that it was being kept on his premises, since such matters, not made a part of the definition of the offense, were matters of defense. Davidson v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1037.

A prosecution on a complaint charging defendant as a vagrant, in that she was the keeper of a house of prostitution, where prostitutes resorted etc., held not a prosecution under articles 496, 500, which fixes the punishment. State ex rel. Bergeron v. Travis County Court (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 365.

7. Transferring cases to county court.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 483.

8. Evidence.—Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction, see Watts v. State, 22 App. 572, 3 S. W. 769; Brown v. State, 2 App. 189; Couch v. State, 24 Tex. 557; Morris v. State, 38 Tex. 603; Huffman v. State, 23 App. 491, 5 S. W. 134; Sweeney v. State, 59 App. 370, 128 S. W. 390; Tachini v. State, 59 App. 55, 126 S. W. 1139; Wilson v. State, 61 App. 628, 136 S. W. 447; Sullivan v. State, 61 App. 657, 136 S. W. 456; Cabiness v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 934; Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1090; Gill v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 616; Hogue v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 805; Dimitri v. State, 70 App. 17, 155 S. W. 535; Hearne v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 596; Clifford v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 365. Contra, see McElhaney v. State, 12 App. 231; Smalley v. State, 11 App. 147; Sara v. State, 22 App. 639, 3 S. W. 339; Loraine v. State, Id. 640, 3 S. W. 340; Morse v. State (Cr. App.) 47 S. W. 989; Layton v. State, 61 App. 507, 135 S. W. 557; Harden v. State, 62 App. 84, 136 S. W. 768.

The character of the house alleged to be disorderly may be established by proof of its general reputation as such, and such proof is sufficient to warrant the finding that the house is disorderly. Stone v. State, 22 App. 185, 2 S. W. 585; Burton v. State, 16 App. 156; Allen v. State, 15 App. 320; Sylvester v. State, 42 Tex. 494; Morris v. State, 38 Tex. 603; Wimberly v. State, 108 S. W. 384. But while the character of the house may be thus established, such evidence will not be sufficient or competent to prove that the defendant kept, or was concerned in keeping, the house. The evidence must directly connect the defendant with keeping the house. Sara v. State, 22 App. 639, 3 S. W. 339; Burton v. State, 16 App. 156; Allen v. State, 15 App. 320; Gamel v. State, 21 App. 358, 17 S. W. 158. The general reputation of the occupants of a house is also admissible to prove the character of the house, but not that the defendant was the keeper of the house. Allen v. State, 15 App. 320. Evidence offered by the defendant, which tends to show that another person was the keeper of the house at the time of the alleged offense, is admissible. Stone v. State, 22 App. 185, 2 S. W. 585.

The general reputation of a house and the character of its occupants may be proved. Harkey v. State, 33 App. 100, 25 S. W. 291, 47 Am. St. Rep. 19. Evidence that the owner of a disorderly house lives in an adjoining room is admissible to show notice. Forbes v. State, 35 App. 24, 29 S. W. 784.

On trial for keeping a disorderly house, evidence of the reputation of the house and its inmates is clearly admissible. Golden v. State, 34 App. 143, 29 S. W. 779; Forbes v. State, 35 App. 24, 29 S. W. 784.

That lewd women visited the house with men was competent to show that the owner who lived in an adjoining house had notice of the purposes for which the house was being kept. Id.

The evidence in this case shows that defendant, who was a grocery merchant, kept store about seventy yards from his residence; that a woman came to his store. After night, a number of men being there, said that he took the woman to his residence and there had sexual intercourse with her; that some ten of the other men who were around the store had sexual intercourse with the woman at defendant's residence that night. Defendant denies having intercourse with the woman, and denies knowing that others were having intercourse with her until about midnight, when he immediately drove her away from his house; held, that the evidence is sufficient to support a conviction for keeping a disorderly house. Stokeley v. State, 37 App. 638, 40 S. W. 971.

It is not error to permit testimony of reputation of the house for two or three years previous to the alleged offense, where defendant was the owner during all that time. Sprague v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 837.

Evidence of the general reputation of the house and its inmates is admissible in a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house. Sprague v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 837.

While proof of the general reputation of a disorderly house is admissible on the trial of its alleged keeper, such evidence alone is insufficient to convict him. Ramey v. State, 39 App. 200, 45 S. W. 489; Clifford v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 365.

It is not admissible to prove the reputation of the house subsequent to the filing of the complaint or that defendant permitted it to be kept after that time. Brady v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 647.

Testimony that the accused rendered the property alleged to be disorderly house for taxes is admissible to show ownership. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 39.

State can prove by the officer that he took acknowledgment of deed to defendant conveying the property alleged to be a disorderly house. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 40.

Evidence by the superintendent of a gas company that defendant's house had four gas meters in it, and that all of them were used most of the time, the account being in the name of the defendant, and never having been changed at any time, was admissible to show that defendant still had control over the house during an absence, when it was alleged another controlled the house, and as a circumstance to show ownership. Frazier v. State, 47 App. 24, 81 S. W. 532.

Testimony by the tax collector that he issued an occupation license to defendant to sell beer on the premises in question was admissible to show assertion of ownership of the premises by defendant. Frazier v. State, 47 App. 24, 81 S. W. 532.

A deed of the premises to defendant, made eight years before the alleged offense, was admissible; its remoteness going to its weight, and not its admissibility. Frazier v. State, 47 App. 24, 81 S. W. 532.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house during a certain month, evidence of the reputation of the house for two or three years prior to said month, during all of which time it was occupied by defendant, was admissible. Frazier v. State, 47 App. 24, 81 S. W. 532.

Testimony of a minister, who had visited the alleged house and talked with accused, held admissible as tending to show accused's occupation, her manner of living, and the character of the house she was keeping. Wimberly v. State, 53 App. 11, 108 S. W. 384.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, the general reputation of the house in question is admissible. Wimberly v. State, 53 App. 11, 108 S. W. 384.

Since general reputation of the house has long been held admissible, where one is charged with keeping a disorderly house, though independent evidence must appear that accused was engaged in keeping such house as owner, lessee, or tenant, where the Legislature made a house where liquors were sold or kept for sale without a license also a disorderly house, they must have contemplated that the same rule of evidence would apply to the new offense. Joliff v. State, 53 App. 61, 109 S. W. 176.

On a trial for keeping a disorderly house where liquors were sold and kept for sale without a license, the testimony of a witness that on a designated day he saw a United States internal revenue license in the name of accused posted in the house was competent to prove the fact of the possession by accused of such a license. Joliff v. State, 53 App. 61, 109 S. W. 176.

On a trial for keeping a disorderly house where liquors were sold and kept for sale without a license, evidence that persons other than accused sold intoxicating liquors in the house in accused's absence is competent to prove the sale and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors. Joliff v. State, 53 App. 61, 109 S. W. 176.

The court properly received the testimony of the tax assessor, who stated that he knew accused by another name and recognized her original assessment of the property in question as signed by her. Moore v. State, 53 App. 113, 110 S. W. 911.

Evidence held to show that accused was in control of the house, authorizing a conviction. Moore v. State, 53 App. 113, 110 S. W. 911.

Accused's connection with the house as owner or lessee must be shown by other testimony than by general reputation. Moore v. State, 53 App. 113, 110 S. W. 911.

Evidence of the general reputation of the house kept by accused is admissible. Moore v. State, 53 App. 113, 110 S. W. 911.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, a question to a witness for the state whether he had ever had any business transaction in the house in question and at what time he had been in the house was proper, as introductory and leading up to the particular transaction which was evidence of the offense. Tachini v. State, 59 App. 55, 126 S. W. 1139.

Evidence that a person who was being prosecuted for keeping a disorderly house rendered for taxation the property where the house was located for his wife and made an affidavit as to the ownership and value of said property is admissible to show ownership of the property, and as connecting defendant with the keeping of the house. Tachini v. State, 59 App. 55, 126 S. W. 1139.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, evidence of the general reputation of the house during the period set out in the indictment is admissible. Tachini v. State, 59 App. 55, 126 S. W. 1139.

Where, in a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house where liquors were sold, there is evidence that one other than defendant rented the house in which the liquors were sold, and that he was frequently seen about the place, and defendant is not shown to have made more than one or two sales, and at a time later than any act for which he was found guilty, an internal revenue license issued to such lessee is admissible, though not shown to have been in the place of business before the day of trial. Lockhart v. State, 58 App. 438, 126 S. W. 575.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house where intoxicating liquors were sold, a witness, though he may show the general reputation of the house as a place where liquors are sold, cannot be permitted to answer a question, asked him, whether the sales were "without there first having been obtained a license to retail liquors under the law." Lockhart v. State, 58 App. 438, 126 S. W. 575.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house where liquors were sold, evidence of sales made by defendant after the last act charged in the indictment is admissible for the purpose at least of showing defendant's connection with the business. Lockhart v. State, 58 App. 438, 126 S. W. 575.

In a prosecution of appellant and another for keeping a bawdy and assignation house, in which it was admitted by appellant that the other was his housekeeper, evidence as to the character and conduct of the inmates, and conversations had with them, and offers by the other defendant to procure women for persons visiting the house, was admissible, and was not objectionable on the ground that such matters occurred in appellant's absence. Hickman v. State, 59 App. 88, 126 S. W. 1149.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, evidence that, when witness went to accused's house, no one was there but accused and an unknown man, and that he jumped over the back fence on seeing the officers who were with witness, was admissible to prove the character of the house, when taken in connection with the rest of the evidence. Finn v. State, 60 App. 521, 132 S. W. 805.

The above evidence would not be inadmissible because the act occurred after accused's arrest, since it occurred on the same day, thereby making it closely related to the time covered by the indictment, and since in the nature of things the character of the house was not fixed necessarily by the transaction of a single day. Finn v. State, 60 App. 521, 132 S. W. 805.

In a prosecution for keeping a bawdyhouse, testimony was admissible to show the character of the house, that, when witness visited it, accused tried to get him to buy a bottle of beer, and stated that it cost $1 a bottle. Gordon v. State, 60 App. 570, 133 S. W. 255.

Defendant, accused of keeping a disorderly house, can show by any one cognizant of the facts that people had not frequented the house for immoral purposes at or about the time made by the state's proof. Thompson v. State, 61 App. 250, 134 S. W. 350.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, in that intoxicating liquors were illegally sold and kept for sale therein, there was error in admitting evidence of sales to and purchases by persons who were not shown to be employes of or connected in business with defendant. Layton v. State, 61 App. 507, 135 S. W. 557.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, evidence of the general reputation of the house as a place where intoxicants were sold, and of the inmates as being prostitutes, was admissible; the extent of witness' information as to the reputation of the house and the number of persons whom he had heard speak thereof going rather to the weight of the evidence than to its admissibility. Wilson v. State, 61 App. 628, 136 S. W. 447.

In a trial for keeping a disorderly house where intoxicating liquors were sold, testimony of what was done and said, not only by accused, but by his clerks or other employes, tending to show unlawful keeping of intoxicants for sale, is admissible. Novy v. State, 62 App. 492, 138 S. W. 139.

Since under this article keeping a disorderly house and keeping such disorderly house through an agent are separate offenses, in a trial for the former offense it is improper to authorize conviction on evidence showing the latter. Novy v. State, 62 App. 492, 138 S. W. 139.

On a trial for keeping a disorderly house, evidence of the general reputation of the house, that it had the reputation of being a disorderly house where lewd women resorted and resided, was admissible. Barker v. State, 64 App. 106, 141 S. W. 529.

In a prosecution for unlawfully keeping and knowingly permitting a house under one's control to be kept as a place where prostitutes resort and reside for the purpose of plying their vocation, the general reputation of the house may be testified to by witnesses cognizant of the facts. Hitchings v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1164.

In a prosecution for keeping a house in which intoxicating liquors were sold and kept without a license, the burden is upon the defendant to show he had a license. Milan v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 185.

Evidence of a live federal liquor license on the wall of defendant's place of business was admissible, though such license ran to a person other than defendant, and it was not shown that defendant had any connection with such license. Milan v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 185.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house in which spirituous liquors were sold and kept for sale, without first having obtained a license to retail such liquors, orders of the commissioners' court, putting prohibition in force in that county, were inadmissible as not tending to support any allegation in the information. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 306.

Evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for keeping a house for the sale of liquor without having a license, in violation of the liquor laws. Minter v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 783.

Where accused was prosecuted under this article for keeping a disorderly house as defined by article 496, as any place where spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors are sold without a license, testimony as to the general reputation of the place was admissible. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 875.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, an objection to a question asked a witness for the state on cross-examination as to whether he had visited the place after the filing of the complaint was properly sustained, even if the answer was expected to show that it was running in an orderly manner at that time, since the manner of running the place after the filing of the complaint was immaterial. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 875.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, in that liquors were sold there without a license, evidence held to warrant the submission of whether there was a club, and, if one in fact existed, whether it was but a subterfuge to cover an unlawful purpose. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 875.

In a prosecution for knowingly permitting property to be used as a house of prostitution, evidence of an inmate that she paid defendant $1.50 a day as rent, that she was a prostitute, and that she plied her vocation in the house in question was admissible. Clyman v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 231.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, evidence by police officer that he arrested 12 prostitutes in the house and they all pleaded guilty was admissible. Dimitri v. State, 70 App. 17, 155 S. W. 535.

It is not error to prove that the general reputation of the house was bad. Pace v. State, 70 App. 454, 156 S. W. 1192.

Where defendant admitted the ownership of the property, but claimed that it was rented to a club the members of which used the liquor, evidence that after the time of the commission of the offense with which accused was charged, the selling of liquor in that place was enjoined is inadmissible, because merely being the opinion of the judge as to the legality of the sales and coming long after the commission of the alleged offense. Allen v. State, 71 App. 158, 158 S. W. 508.

Where accused claimed that he rented the premises to a club the members of which used the liquor, evidence that the place was located near a white school is inadmissible. Allen v. State, 71 App. 158, 158 S. W. 508.

In a prosecution against one Allen for maintaining a place where intoxicating liquors were sold without a license, where he admitted his ownership of the premises, but claimed that they were rented to an association the members of which used the liquor, evidence that the property was known as "Allen's Garden" is inadmissible, generally, tending to prejudice accused, and if admitted should be limited to prove ownership. Allen v. State, 71 App. 158, 158 S. W. 508.

On the trial of the owner of a house for knowingly permitting it to be kept as a house of prostitution, evidence of the general reputation of the house was admissible. Golden v. State, 72 App. 19, 160 S. W. 957.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, in which accused, his wife, and certain other women resided, evidence of the general reputation of such women, and that they had confessed and pleaded guilty to being prostitutes when arrested on that charge, and that accused had gone on their bonds in connection with such charge, was admissible. Key v. State, 71 App. 485, 160 S. W. 354.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, evidence of the conduct of the inmates was admissible. Key v. State, 71 App. 485, 160 S. W. 354.

Where, in a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, it was shown that defendant's wife was the owner of the premises, the fact that records showed that accused had no interest in the property was immaterial. Key v. State, 71 App. 485, 160 S. W. 354.

On a trial for keeping a disorderly house, evidence that a woman, who frequently visited such house, and who would be followed shortly by a man, bore the reputation of being a woman who made dates with men and met them at assignation houses, was admissible. Smith v. State, 72 App. 206, 162 S. W. 835.

On a trial for keeping a house of prostitution where prostitutes were permitted to resort and reside for the purpose of plying their vocation, it was necessary for the state to show that the inmates were prostitutes plying their vocation in such house or resorting to it for that purpose. Bowman v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 846.

On a trial for keeping a bawdyhouse, the testimony of a witness that while she was rooming with accused, men would come there and she would go to other places and have sexual intercourse with them was admissible, as it tended to show that accused kept a house where prostitutes resided; especially where the witness further testified that she had sexual intercourse with men many times in the room rented from accused. Farris v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 310.

On a trial for keeping a house where prostitutes resorted and resided for the purpose of plying their vocation, and where men and women met for sexual intercourse, evidence that accused's husband took men and women there to engage in unlawful cohabitation was admissible, as it tended to show that accused was keeping a bawdyhouse, especially as all parties aiding and abetting the commission of a misdemeanor are "principals," and such acts rendered him liable as a principal offender. Farris v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 310.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, the testimony of a policeman that he found a young man in a room with defendant and that they both paid fines, and the testimony of another witness that he found defendant in bed with a man, was admissible. Nichols v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 304.

On a trial for keeping a bawdyhouse, evidence that the witness had sexual intercourse at other places with one of accused's roomers for whom he would call at accused's house was admissible; especially where there was evidence tending to show that accused knew the roomer was a prostitute. Farris v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 310.

On a trial for keeping a bawdyhouse, evidence that a witness for the state had tried to get R., an inmate of accused's house, to engage rooms with other persons for the purpose of entrapping them was properly excluded, where it was not contended that he brought her to accused's house or sought to get her to bring other women there, as this might tend to show animosity towards R., but not towards accused. Farris v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 310.

In a prosecution for permitting the keeping of a disorderly house on defendant's premises, testimony that the general reputation of the keeper of the house, and of an inmate, for virtue and chastity, were bad, was admissible. Davidson v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1037.

It is not necessary to sustain a conviction that the defendant be proved to be the owner, lessee, or tenant of the house. Clifford v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 365.

9. Defendant as witness in own behalf.—See C. C. P. art. 790.

10. Charge of the court.—It is advisable though not necessary that the word "prostitution" be defined in the charge. Bigby v. State, 5 App. 101. It is not error, when the evidence warrants it, to instruct the jury that if the defendant, either alone, or in connection with another, kept a disorderly house, or was in any way concerned in keeping such house, he would be guilty. Stone v. State, 22 App. 185, 2 S. W. 585. Where a witness for the state was an accomplice in keeping a disorderly house, the court must charge the law relating to accomplice testimony. Stone v. State, 22 App. 185, 2 S. W. 585.

For charge of the court, see Gamel v. State, 21 App. 357, 17 S. W. 158.

The court, over defendant's objection, read the article of the Penal Code relating to keeping a disorderly house, and the punishment therefor, and then verbally instructed them that if they believed beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant owned, rented, or leased "that house" they should find defendant guilty. Held, that this was error. Harkey v. State, 33 App. 100, 25 S. W. 291, 47 Am. St. Rep. 19.

When requested the court should instruct the jury that defendant could not be guilty of keeping a disorderly house unless he be the owner, lessee or tenant of the house. Mitchell v. State, 34 App. 311, 30 S. W. 810.

In a prosecution of two persons for keeping a disorderly house, a charge that, if the jury believed that only one or either of the defendants rented the house, they should find both not guilty, while incorrect, was not prejudicial to defendants. Marx v. State, 44 App. 506, 72 S. W. 590.

Where the court charged to convict, if jury found that offense was committed within two years from filing indictment, not reversible error in absence of statement of facts showing when offense was committed. The fact may have been that the offense was committed after the law of 1907 became effective. Matlook v. State, 52 App. 544, 109 S. W. 193.

Where, on a trial for keeping a disorderly house in violation of Acts 30th Leg. 1907, p. 246, c. 132, the evidence was conflicting on the issue whether accused controlled the house and permitted women to go there, the court was required to submit the issue to the jury. Young v. State, 55 App. 383, 116 S. W. 1158.

An instruction that any part of a building used in keeping for sale and selling intoxicants, and where lewd women, etc., are permitted to conduct themselves in a lewd, etc., manner, is a disorderly house, was erroneous, as ignoring accused's defense that he was not connected with the restaurant in the rear of his saloon, in which the disorderly conduct was permitted. Morgan v. State, 62 App. 39, 136 S. W. 445.

In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, in that liquors were being sold there without a license, where there was no allegation in the information as to Sunday sales, requested instructions relative to Sunday sales were properly refused. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 875.

Where accused admitted his ownership of the premises, but claimed that he rented them to an association, the members of which used the liquor, and offered evidence to that effect, special charges submitting his defense should be given. Allen v. State, 71 App. 158, 158 S. W. 508.

Where, in a prosecution of a husband for keeping a disorderly house on property owned by his wife, there was no proof that the wife objected to his control of the property, or that he in fact was not in control thereof, the court did not err in refusing to charge that the husband was not bound to assume control of the separate property of his wife. Key v. State (Cr. App.) 160 S. W. 354.

Under an information for keeping a disorderly house in a house owned by another and leased by the defendant, an instruction authorizing a conviction if defendant himself was the owner was reversible error, since he could not be charged with committing an offense in one way and be convicted for its commission in another way. Hall v. State, 72 App. 161, 161 S. W. 457.

Under an information charging that defendant was the lessee of the premises and kept a house of prostitution, where the evidence fully supported such allegation, error in defining the offense by copying the entire statute as to such offenses was not reversible error. Dean v. State, 72 App. 274, 161 S. W. 974.

On a trial for keeping a house of prostitution where prostitutes were permitted to resort and reside for the purpose of plying their vocation, where no witness testified that the inmates of such house were prostitutes or that they committed any act of prostitution, accused was entitled to an instruction to acquit unless they were prostitutes and resided in, or resorted to, such house to ply the vocation of a prostitute. Bowman v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 846.

On a trial for keeping a disorderly house, an instruction that the jury must believe, beyond a reasonable doubt, that accused unlawfully and knowingly permitted prostitutes to resort or reside in such house for the purpose of plying their vocation, or that she unlawfully and knowingly kept such house for the purpose of prostitution, and in order to convict, and that though they believed that prostitutes did resort or reside there for such purpose, they could not convict, unless they believed, beyond a reasonable doubt, that accused had knowledge of their character, and knowingly permitted them to ply their vocation there, was properly refused, since it is necessary only for the state to prove such facts as would put her upon notice and inquiry which, if followed up, would result in knowledge. Cunningham v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 519.

Where the indictment charged the offense of keeping an assignation house, the submission of the wholly different, though allied, offense of keeping a house of prostitution, was error. Bodine v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 609.

11. Former acquittal or conviction as bar to prosecution.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 9.

12. Injunction.—See notes under arts. 503-505, post, and arts. 4689, 4690, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 501. Owner, lessee or agent controlling premises.—Any owner, lessee, or the agent of either, controlling the premises, having information that the premises are being kept, used or occupied as a bawdy or disorderly house, shall be held guilty of knowingly permitting the premises to be kept as a bawdy or disorderly house, as the case may be, unless he shall immediately proceed to prevent the keeping, using or occupying of such house, building, edifice or tenement for such purpose by giving such information to the county or district attorney, against the person or persons violating the provisions of this act, or take such other action as may reasonably accomplish such result. [Id. p. 246.]

Illegality of lease.—A lease of premises to be occupied as a bawdyhouse by the lessee, executed by the lessor who had knowledge of the lessee's purpose, and who acquiesced in the use of the premises and collected the rent, is illegal, and neither party may demand relief therefrom or thereunder, within the rule that, where two persons participate in an unlawful transaction and are in pari delicto, neither a court of law nor equity will aid either, notwithstanding articles 496, 500, and 501. Eckles v. Nowlin (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 794.

Art. 502. [362] "Disorderly house" further defined.—Any person who shall directly, as agent for another, or through an agent, knowingly employ or have in his service in any capacity in any theater, playhouse, dance house, or house where spirituous or malt liquors are kept for sale, any prostitute, lewd woman or women of bad reputation for chastity, or permit any such woman to display or conduct herself therein in an indecent manner, shall be guilty of keeping a disorderly house, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and by confinement in the county jail for twenty days for each day that such person is kept in service or employed or permitted to display or conduct herself as hereinbefore provided. [Act April 4, 1889, p. 33; amended 1907, p. 246.]

See notes under articles 496 and 500.

See Ex parte Bell, 32 App. 308, 22 S. W. 1040, 40 Am. St. Rep. 778.

Constitutionality.—Act April 18, 1907 (Acts 30th Leg. c. 132), amending Pen. Code 1895, tit. 10, c. 4, arts. 361, 362 (articles 502 and 500, ante), does not violate Const. art. 3, § 36, which provides that no law shall be revived or amended by reference to its title; but in such case the act revived or the section or sections amended shall be re-enacted and published at length. Richards v. State, 63 App. 176, 140 S. W. 459.

Variety show or theater.—Any variety show or theater combining the elements set forth in the statute comes within the prohibition of law, and is a disorderly house, whatever be the name given to it by the proprietors or the public. Without these elements it cannot be declared illegal. Where these elements exist, the inmates and proprietor may, under proper ordinance, be arrested and convicted of vagrancy, or may be punished as prescribed by the statute. Disorderly houses are forbidden by law, and a variety show, to come within the prohibition, must, in effect, be a disorderly house. Ex parte Bell, 32 App. 308, 22 S. W. 1040, 40 Am. St. Rep. 778.

On the prosecution of the manager of a theater for keeping a disorderly house, the state proved that the women employed in the theater were prostitutes, and had borne that reputation for several years before their employment by defendant; that their reputation for chastity was not only bad, but it had been so testified to in trials in defendant's presence, while he had them in his employ; and that, after the theater was over, it was their custom to conduct themselves in an indecent manner with the patrons. Held, that such facts warranted a conviction, without positive proof of actual knowledge by defendant of the acts and doings of the women he employed, since the law requires him to use reasonable diligence to ascertain their character, and all that the state need do is to prove facts which would put a reasonable man on notice. Johnson v. State, 32 App. 504, 24 S. W. 411.

An indictment, under the article before the Revised Penal Code took effect, which charged that defendant was the owner and manager of a theater and dance house where liquors were sold, and that he unlawfully kept and employed therein lewd women and prostitutes, was sufficient. Callaghan v. State, 36 App. 536, 38 S. W. 188.

Conflicting powers of state and municipalities.—See notes under art. 965, C. C. P.

Art. 503. [362a] Keeping same may be enjoined.—The habitual, actual, threatened or contemplated use of any premises, place, building or part thereof, for the purpose of keeping, being interested in, aiding or abetting the keeping of a bawdy or disorderly house, shall be enjoined at the suit of either the state or any citizen thereof. [Id., p. 246.]

See arts. 4689, 4690 Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, and notes.

Constitutionality.—This law is constitutional. Clopton v. State (Civ. App.) 105 S. W. 994.

Statute to be construed strictly.—The statute is at least quasi penal, and must be strictly construed. State v. Duke, 104 Tex. 355, 137 S. W. 654, 138 S. W. 385.

Nature and scope of remedy in general.—This article contemplates issuance of an injunction only in independent suits primarily to abate the unlawful thing, and not as an ancillary proceeding to gain possession in suits of trespass to try title. Eckles v. Nowlin (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 794.

The granting of an injunction under this article at the suit of an owner executing a lease of premises with knowledge of the lessee's purpose to use the same as a bawdyhouse, is in effect the granting of relief to the owner from his illegal contract, and equity cannot issue the injunction. Eckles v. Nowlin (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 794.

Under article 496, an injunction restraining defendants from selling or keeping for sale spirituous, etc., liquors on the premises, was too broad; the court being only authorized to restrain defendants' use of the house for the sale of liquor without a license. Soto v. State (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 279.

Adequacy of other remedy.—The fact that remedy by criminal prosecution is adequate is no ground for refusing the injunction. Clopton v. State (Civ. App.) 105 S. W. 994.

Restraining sale of liquor.—Under this article and article 496, ante, defining a "disorderly house" to be any house in which liquors are sold or kept for sale without a license, an injunction restraining defendants from selling or keeping for sale spirituous, etc., liquors on the premises, was too broad; the court being only authorized to restrain defendants' use of the house for the sale of liquor without a license. Soto v. State (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 279.

— Sale by club.—See notes under article 496, ante.

An injunction to restrain a club from selling intoxicating liquors to its members cannot be granted under this article, unless the persons doing the acts complained of may be prosecuted under the statute. State v. Duke, 104 Tex. 355, 137 S. W. 654, 138 S. W. 385.

While a bona fide club situated in a district where liquor may lawfully be sold, organized for purposes sanctioned by law, and selling liquor to its members, and not to the public as a mere incident to its organization and without profit, is not engaged in the occupation or business of selling intoxicating liquors, under the laws of the state, and cannot be enjoined under articles 496 and 503, providing for injunction against houses where liquor is illegally sold as disorderly houses, yet such protection does not extend to clubs not organized in good faith for purposes authorized by law but merely as a subterfuge to evade the law. Soto v. State (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 279.

Restraining maintenance of restaurant.—One who maintained a restaurant in which he permitted lewd women to congregate and drink and to meet men for the purpose of arranging for unlawful sexual intercourse elsewhere is guilty of keeping a disorderly house within the purview of articles 497, 498, and 499, defining an assignation house as a place where persons meet by appointment for the purpose of sexual intercourse, that it shall be unlawful for any person to use at such place intoxicating liquors, and that any part of a room or building used for such purposes is a disorderly house, and so his maintenance of such restaurant may be enjoined under the direct provisions of article 503. Ex parte Yoshida, 70 App. 212, 156 S. W. 1166.

Petition.—Preliminary injunction. See notes under article 505 post.

A petition under this article need not negative the matters contained in the proviso of article 504. The exception contained in the proviso is a matter of defense. Lane v. Bell, 53 Civ. App. 213, 115 S. W. 919.

The description of the house as "being situated in the town of G. on the north side of West Church street in a locality generally known as Silver City," is sufficient under this article. Id.

Under article 496, defining a "disorderly house" as one where spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors are sold or kept for sale, without a license and article 503 held, that a petition alleging defendants' possession and control of a house commonly known as the "Ureka Club and Socorro Mutua Mexicana," and that defendants were habitually using the premises as a disorderly house, and contemplate continuing such use in that therein spirituous, vinous, and malt liquors were sold in quantities of one gallon and less, to be drunk on the premises, and so kept for sale without a license to retail such liquor, and that there was no person or corporation having a license under the law to retail liquor on the premises, was sufficient to justify an injunction against the maintenance of the place. Soto v. State, 171 S. W. 279.

Art. 504. Who may be made parties defendant.—Any person who may use, or who may be about to use, or who may aid or abet any other person in the use of any premises, place or building, or part thereof, may be made a party defendant in such suit; provided, that the provisions of this article and article 505 shall not apply to, nor be so construed as to interfere with the control and regulation of bawds and bawdy houses by ordinances of incorporated towns and cities acting under special charters and where the same are actually confined by ordinance of such city within a designated district of such city. [Id., p. 246.]

See notes under article 503 ante, and arts. 4689, 4690 Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

License of bawdy houses or prohibition thereof except in defined districts.—See notes under article 500 ante.

It is competent for the legislature by special act to empower municipalities to license, within limits, disorderly houses, and such license is a valid defense to a prosecution by the state for keeping such a house. Davis v. State, 2 App. 425.

Under authority granted a city council by the city charter to prohibit or to segregate and regulate bawdy houses and variety shows, the granted rights must be legally exercised in harmony with the criminal laws of this state. Ex parte Bell, 32 App. 308, 22 S. W. 1040, 40 Am. St. Rep. 778.

The Dallas ordinance prohibiting bawdy houses except in a defined district is not void as conflicting with the Penal Code prohibition against keeping such houses; no penalty being prescribed nor license given. Hatcher v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 133 S. W. 914.

Prohibiting bawdy houses except in a defined district constitutes legitimate exercise of police power. Hatcher v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 133 S. W. 914.

The Dallas ordinance prohibiting bawdy houses except in a defined district does not infringe the constitutional prohibition against damaging property for public use without adequate compensation, on account of injury resulting to property adjoining such district. Hatcher v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 133 S. W. 914.

Under the express terms of Dallas City Charter, and under this article as added by Laws 1907, c. 132, the city is empowered to prescribe limits outside of which bawds shall not reside. Hatcher v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 133 S. W. 914.

The use of real property for prostitution being contrary to the laws of the state, a city has no authority to set apart and designate any portion thereof for the purposes of permitting prostitutes to resort and reside therein for the purpose of plying their vocation. Clyman v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 230.

Art. 505. Duty of attorney general, district or county attorney.—The attorney general and the several district and county attorneys shall institute and prosecute all suits that said attorney general, or such district or county attorney, may deem necessary to enjoin such use; provided, that such suit may be brought and prosecuted by any one of such officers; and provided, further, that nothing in the above proviso contained shall prevent such injunction from issuing at the suit of any citizen of this state, who may sue in his own name; and such citizen shall not be required to show that he is personally injured by the acts complained of; and the procedure in all cases brought hereunder shall be the same as in other suits for injunction, as near as may be; provided, that when the suit is brought in the name of the state by any of the officers aforesaid, the petition for injunction need not be verified. [Id., p. 246.]

See notes under art. 4690 Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Validity of statute.—This article in authorizing suit to restrain the keeping of a disorderly house to be brought by any citizen without showing that he is personally injured by the acts complained of, is not invalid. Ex parte Morgan, 57 App. 551, 124 S. W. 99, 136 Am. St. Rep. 996.

Repeal of statute.—This article, authorizing suit to restrain the keeping of a disorderly house to be brought by any citizen, without showing that he is personally injured by the acts complained of, is not repealed by article 4643, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, which has reference largely to the practice with reference to granting writs, hearing thereof, and appeals and orders granted therein, but does not by its terms or necessary implication repeal the former provision. Ex parte Morgan, 57 App. 551, 124 S. W. 99, 136 Am. St. Rep. 996.

Preliminary injunction—Notice.—A preliminary injunction should not ordinarily be granted without notice; the status quo being maintained in the meantime by the issuance of a restraining order. Soto v. State (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 279.

— Petition.—Under this article providing that the procedure to enjoin the maintenance of a liquor nuisance as a disorderly house shall be the same as in other suits for injunction, as near as may be, except that the petition need not be verified, a verified petition is not necessary to a preliminary injunction in such cases. Soto v. State (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 279.

Where, in a suit to enjoin a liquor nuisance as a disorderly house, the petition prayed an injunction restraining defendants from using the premises to sell spirituous, etc., liquors, and from keeping for sale therein such liquors and from selling the same on the premises, it was sufficient to justify the issuance of a preliminary injunction. Soto v. State (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 279.

Violation of injunction and punishment therefor.—Where relator was adjudged guilty of contempt in violating an injunction restraining him from continuing to run a disorderly house, a writ of commitment for contempt, where showing that the order was made in the court which had issued the injunction, is not invalid because through a clerical error it was recited that it was given in another court. Ex parte Yoshida, 70 App. 212, 156 S. W. 1166.

The complaint calling to the court's attention the fact that relator had violated an injunction restraining him from maintaining a disorderly house, when signed by the county attorney officially, is sufficient, though not verified by him. Ex parte Yoshida, 70 App. 212, 156 S. W. 1166.

Art. 506. [363] Sheriffs and other officers, district judges and grand juries, their duties in the premises.—Sheriffs and their deputies, constables and their deputies, mayors, marshals, chiefs of police, their deputies and assistants, and policemen of towns and cities are especially charged diligently to discover and report to the proper legal authorities, and by all lawful means to aid in the enforcement of the law for all violations of the articles of this chapter; the district judges are required to give them specially in charge to the grand juries, and grand juries are required at every term of the district court of their county to call before them each and all officers charged with the enforcement of the articles of this chapter and examine them under oath touching their knowledge and information of violations thereof, and as to their diligence in their enforcement. [Act April 4, 1889, p. 33.]

Enforcement of law by policemen—Falsely pretending to be officer.—Code Cr. Proc. arts. 43, 44, respectively, declare that policemen of an incorporated municipality are peace officers, and that it shall be the duty of every peace officer to preserve peace, while Pen. Code, arts. 506, 561, 611, require peace officers, including policemen, to aid in the enforcement of the law against disorderly houses, gambling, and the unlawful sale of intoxicants, and article 349, defining the term "officer," states that it includes any peace officer, marshal, or policeman of a city or town. Held that, while an executive officer is one whose duties are mainly to cause the laws to be executed, a policeman is an executive officer within the purview of Pen. Code, art. 424, providing that any person who shall falsely assume or pretend to be a judicial or executive officer of the state shall be punished, for a policeman is a public officer of the state expressly charged by the statutes with enforcing a large body of the criminal law. Ex parte Preston, 72 App. 77, 161 S. W. 115.

— Bribery of policeman.—Under article 496, defining a “disorderly house,” among other definitions, as one in which liquors are kept for sale without a license, or as any house in any county, etc., in which the sale of intoxicating liquor is prohibited, where there is posted a United States retail liquor or malt liquor dealer’s license, article 500, making it an offense to keep, assist, or permit the keeping of a disorderly house, article 506, requiring policemen to discover and report to the proper legal authorities, and by all lawful means to aid in the enforcement of the law for all violations of that chapter, articles 548 to 563, inclusive, denouncing gaming or keeping of premises therefor, or permitting the keeping of any place therefor, article 564, requiring policemen to avail themselves of all lawful means to suppress violations of that law, article 611, prohibiting sales of intoxicating liquor without a license, article 631, requiring peace officers having knowledge of violations of that chapter to report them to the county attorney, article 349, and Code Cr. Proc. art. 43, both providing that policemen are peace officers, Code Cr. Proc. art. 44, requiring peace officers to preserve the peace within their jurisdiction by using all lawful means, to interfere without warrant where authorized by statute to prevent or suppress crime, to give notice to some magistrate of offenses committed in his jurisdiction where he has good reason to believe there has been a violation of the penal law, and to arrest offenders without warrant where authorized by law, and article 261, authorizing municipal authorities to establish rules authorizing the arrest without warrant of persons found in suspicious places and under circumstances reasonably showing that they have been guilty of a felony or breach of the peace or are about to commit some offense against the law, peace officers are required to do all things necessary or proper to prevent, suppress, and punish crime, and hence an indictment for bribing a policeman not to arrest, report, and file a complaint against accused for keeping a gambling house or place where liquor was unlawfully sold was not defective on the ground that the law did not require police officers to report and file complaints against violators. Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

CHAPTER FOUR A

PANDERING

Art.	Art.
506a. Pandering.	506d. Same; keeping rendezvous for females; employment of procurers.
506b. Same; defense; venue.
506c. Same; female as competent witness; marriage to accused; proviso.	506e. Same; marriage as defense.

Article 506a. Pandering.—Any person who shall procure or attempt to procure or be concerned in procuring, with or without her consent, a female inmate for a house of prostitution, or who, by promises, threats, violence or by any device or schemes, shall cause, induce, persuade or encourage a female person to become an inmate of a house of prostitution, or shall procure a place as inmate in a house of prostitution for a female person, or any person who shall, by promises, threats, violence or by any device or scheme, cause, induce, persuade or encourage an inmate of a house of prostitution to remain therein as such inmate, or any person who shall, by fraud or artifice, or by duress of person or goods, or by abuse of any position of confidence or authority, procure any female person to become or remain an inmate of a house of ill fame, or to enter any place in which prostitution is encouraged or allowed in this State, or to come into this State or leave this State for the purpose of prostitution, or who shall procure any female person to become an inmate of a house of ill fame within this State, or to come into this State or to leave this State for the purpose of prostitution, or who shall give or agree to receive or give any money or thing of value for procuring, or attempting to procure, any female person to become an inmate of a house of ill fame within this State, or to come into this State or leave this State for the purpose of prostitution, shall be guilty of pandering, and, upon conviction for an offense under this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for any term of years, not less than five. [Act 1911, p. 29, ch. 23, § 1.]

Regulation of interstate commerce.—The statute making it a felony to procure a female to leave the state for the purpose of prostitution, is not a regulation of interstate commerce, since it is not the transportation of the girl that is made punishable, but the acts within the state by which she was induced to leave. Hewitt v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 40.

Nature and elements of offense.—In a prosecution for pandering, an instruction that, if it was understood between defendant and prosecutrix, his wife, that they should leave H. county and enter a house of prostitution, and they did so enter the house of J., or if they formed such understanding at that time and entered and remained in such house of J., the jury should find defendant not guilty, was properly refused, since, if defendant left H. county with prosecutrix and carried her to B. county with the understanding that she was to enter a house of prostitution, and he procured her admission thereto, he was guilty, though he did so with her consent and at her request. Stevens v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 944.

In a prosecution for procuring a woman to come into the state for prostitution, her previous immorality is no defense. McDowell v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 521.

To constitute the offense of procuring a woman to come into the state for prostitution, it is not necessary that the procuring be by fraud, duress, etc. McDowell v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 521.

The term "prostitution" has different meanings according to the sense in which it is used. Illicit intercourse, which in a sense is prostitution, may be adultery, where one of the parties is married, or fornication where both are unmarried, and in a sense the offense of pandering means the procuring of a place for a female with or without her consent in a house of prostitution, and inducing her to practice illegal sexual intercourse with others. Hewitt v. State, 71 App. 243, 158 S. W. 1120.

The term "pandering" used to define the offense created by this article means, and is limited to, the procuring of a female to become an inmate of a house of ill fame or to prostitute her body to other men; the term "pander" meaning one who caters to the lust of others, a male bawd, a pimp, or procurer, the offense not being established by proof of illicit intercourse between the female and the alleged panderer. Hewitt v. State, 71 App. 243, 158 S. W. 1120.

This article in providing that any person who shall procure, attempt to procure, or be concerned in procuring, with or without her consent, a female inmate for a house of prostitution, or who by promises, threats, violence, shall cause any female to become an inmate of a house of prostitution, shall be guilty of a felony and be punished, etc., was intended to cover all acts, devices, etc., to induce any female to submit her body to other men for the purposes of prostitution, whether they succeeded or not, and it is immaterial whether she prior thereto, was virtuous or not; and to reach solicitors for such houses, as well as those acting on their own initiative and behalf, whether they were connected, either directly or indirectly, at the time, with any such house. Currington v. State, 72 App. 143, 161 S. W. 478.

Indictment.—An indictment charging pandering in the language of the statute was sufficient. Jones v. State, 72 App. 496, 162 S. W. 1142.

An indictment under this article need not allege the state into which the female was induced to go; the offense being complete even though there was no particular destination determined upon. Hewitt v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 40.

Under article 3, forbidding punishment of any act or omission not made a penal offense by written law, and under this article defining the offense of pandering as committed by "any person who shall by fraud or artifice or by duress of person, * * * or by abuse of * * * confidence, procure any female person to become an inmate of a house of ill fame, or to enter any place in which prostitution is * * * allowed," an indictment charging that defendant "by fraud, etc., and by abuse of confidence, etc., did * * * procure and induce * * * the said female to submit her body and person to men for the purpose of prostitution," is insufficient to sustain a conviction, as failing to allege that the woman was induced to remain in or enter a house of prostitution. Houseman v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1036.

An indictment charging the offense of pandering in the words of the statute is sufficient without specific averments as to the house of prostitution into which the woman was inveigled. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 354.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for pandering, evidence held to sustain a conviction. Stevens v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 944.

In a prosecution for pandering, evidence of the prosecutrix's prior immoral character, and that her prior reputation was bad, related to a collateral issue, and was inadmissible as matter of defense. Stevens v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 944.

In a prosecution for pandering, evidence that prosecutrix had previously lived an immoral life and was willing to accompany accused to the place where she was taken was no defense. Stevens v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 944.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of procuring a woman to come into the state for prostitution. McDowell v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 521.

In a prosecution under this article for attempting to procure a woman to enter a house of prostitution, evidence of defendant's other acts, though tending to prove other crimes, was admissible as being so connected with the crime charged that it would tend to establish his intent therein. Currington v. State, 72 App. 143, 161 S. W. 478.

In a prosecution under this article for endeavoring to procure a woman to enter a house of prostitution, the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt the requisites of the offense. Currington v. State, 72 App. 143, 161 S. W. 478.

In a prosecution under this article for attempting to procure a woman to enter a house of ill fame, the burden of proof was on the state. Currington v. State, 72 App. 143, 161 S. W. 478.

In such prosecution there was a presumption of innocence in defendant's favor. Currington v. State, 72 App. 143, 161 S. W. 478.

On a trial for procuring a place for a woman in a house of prostitution, the court did not err in refusing to require such woman and the proprietress of such house, who admitted that they were going under assumed names, to disclose their true names, unless such information could be of some useful purpose to accused, and hence a bill of exceptions which did not show why accused desired to know their true names presented nothing for review. Jones v. State, 72 App. 496, 162 S. W. 1142.

On a trial for procuring a place for a woman in a house of prostitution, evidence that the house in question had the general reputation of being a house of prostitution was admissible. Jones v. State, 72 App. 496, 162 S. W. 1142.

On a trial for procuring a place for a woman in a house of prostitution as an inmate, evidence that accused visited her at such house was admissible. Jones v. State, 72 App. 496, 162 S. W. 1142.

On a trial for procuring a place for a woman as an inmate of a house of prostitution, the admission of evidence that accused, while visiting her at such house, cursed her for refusing to give him money was not reversible error where the jury assessed the minimum penalty. Jones v. State, 72 App. 496, 162 S. W. 1142.

Such evidence should, however, be excluded on proper objection. Jones v. State, 72 App. 496, 162 S. W. 1142.

In a prosecution for procuring a female to leave the state for the purpose of prostitution, where the defendant contended that the girl had insisted on going with him, and that he endeavored to persuade her to return home, evidence that the defendant had borrowed money from the girl's father to enable him to search for her when he already knew where she was was admissible as contradicting his defense. Hewitt v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 40.

In a prosecution for procuring a girl to leave the state for the purpose of prostitution, evidence held sufficient to show that the defendant had such purpose when he induced the girl to leave and at all other times. Hewitt v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 40.

In a prosecution for procuring a female to leave the state for the purpose of prostitution, evidence that the defendant had taken the prosecuting witness to a certain place in another state was admissible to prove that he had procured her to leave the state. Hewitt v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 40.

In a prosecution for the procuring of a woman to have sexual intercourse with another man, evidence that during the intercourse she robbed the man, and gave part of the money to accused, is admissible as part of the res gestæ. Bybee v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 526.

In a prosecution for procuring a woman for another man to have sexual intercourse with, evidence of the other man's conversation with accused before the appearance of the female, of the fact that the woman had sexual intercourse with him, and of the man's payment to her, is admissible. Bybee v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 526.

In a prosecution for pandering, evidence that witnesses had arrested prostitutes in the house into which the woman was inveigled is admissible; the state being bound to show that the woman was taken to a place where prostitution was allowed or encouraged. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 354.

That the arrests occurred a year before does not render the evidence inadmissible on account of remoteness. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 354.

Question for jury.—Evidence in a prosecution for pandering held for the jury. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 354.

Charge of court.—Where, in a prosecution of defendant for pandering, by taking his wife to the house of J., all the evidence showed that prosecutrix while in the house was engaging in sexual intercourse with others than defendant, her husband, and that defendant knew it was a house of prostitution when he placed his wife therein, a request to charge that, if defendant procured a room in the house from J. for the use of himself and wife, and remained in the house for that purpose, he should be found not guilty, though the jury should also find that the house was a house of prostitution, was properly refused as not supported by the evidence. Stevens v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 944.

Since this article, prohibiting and punishing pandering, was intended only to cover those acts, conduct, and devices of a person to induce a female to submit her body to other men for prostitution, as distinguished from other sexual crimes as adultery, fornication, etc., where accused, while not denying intercourse with prosecutrix, did deny that he had ever attempted to induce her to submit her person to prostitution, and there was no evidence that she had been induced so to do, it was error for the court to refuse to define "prostitution" under the statute prohibiting pandering; it being the claim of accused that the state's case showed a commission of adultery, but not the offense charged. Hewitt v. State, 71 App. 243, 158 S. W. 1120.

This article makes procurement a felony punishable by imprisonment. Code Cr. Proc., art. 58, and Pen. Code, art. 10, declare that all words used in the Code are to be taken and understood in their usual acceptation in common language, except when particularly defined by law. Held that, as the word "procured" had no other meaning than that in which it was commonly understood, there was no error in failing to define it. Currington v. State, 72 App. 143, 161 S. W. 478.

Where the court submitted only those grounds charged in the indictment and restricted the jury to a consideration thereof, the fact that in defining the statutory offense of pandering he copied the entire section relating thereto is harmless. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 354.

In a prosecution for pandering, the court need not define the terms "prostitution" and "house of ill fame." Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 354.

Female procured as accomplice.—See notes under article 79 ante.

Art. 506b. Same; defense; venue.—It shall not be a defense to a prosecution for any of the Acts prohibited in the foregoing section, that any part of such act or acts shall have been committed outside this State, and the offense shall in such case be deemed and alleged to have been committed and the offender tried and punished in any county in which the prostitution was intended to be practiced, or in which the offense was consummated, or in which any overt acts in furtherance of the offense shall have been committed. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 506c. Same; female as competent witness; marriage to accused; proviso.—Any such female person referred to in the foregoing sections shall be a competent witness in any prosecution under this Act to testify for or against the accused as to any transaction or as to any conversation with the accused or by such accused with another person or persons in her presence, notwithstanding her having married the accused before or after the violation of the provisions of this Act, whether called as a witness during the existence of the marriage or after its dissolution; provided, however, that any testimony or statement given by such female during the trial for any such offense above named shall not be used as evidence against her in any criminal prosecution. [Id., § 3.]

Wife as witness.—Under the express provisions of this article, a wife is a competent witness against her husband in a prosecution for pandering. Stevens v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 944.

Exemption from rule governing accomplices.—The provision of the statute against pandering that the female for whom a room in a house of prostitution is alleged to have been procured may testify for or against accused shows an intention not to bring such witnesses within the rule governing accomplices' testimony, since, under the law, an accomplice cannot testify for a codefendant, and hence the court properly refused to charge that such female and the proprietor of the house of prostitution were accomplices. Jones v. State, 72 App. 496, 162 S. W. 1142.

The female induced to leave the state for the purpose of prostitution is not an accomplice, even though she went voluntarily. Hewitt v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 40.

Art. 506d. Same; keeping rendezvous for females; employment of procurers.—Any person who shall keep, or be concerned in keeping or maintaining, any house or station or place of rendezvous or place of resort for females, under the guise of securing, for such female, a place of employment, but with the intent to place such female in a house of prostitution or in the possession of another person, to be used for prostitution, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of years not less than five. Any person keeping such house or station or place of rendezvous or resort for females, who shall employ any other person to procure any female to go to such place of resort, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for any term of years not less than five. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 506e. Same; marriage as defense.—The act or state of marriage shall not be a defense to any violation of this Act. [Id., § 5.]

CHAPTER FIVE

MISCELLANEOUS OFFENSES

Art.	Art.
507. "Sodomy" defined and punished.	510. Desecration of graves.
508. Indecent publications and exposures.	511. Interference with dead bodies.
509. Disseminating scandals and lechery.	512. College, physician or surgeon receiving dead bodies.
	513. Punishment for.

Article 507. [364] "Sodomy" defined and punished.—If any person shall commit with mankind or beast the abominable and detestable crime against nature, he shall be deemed guilty of sodomy, and, on conviction thereof, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for not less than five nor more than fifteen years. [Act Feb. 11, 1860, p. 97.]

Nature and elements of offense.—It was formerly held that this offense was not punishable, because not defined. Fennell v. State, 32 Tex. 373; Frazier v. State, 39 Tex. 390. But it is no longer necessary that the offense, to be punishable, should be expressly defined, and "sodomy" being an offense eo nomine with a penalty affixed thereto, is now punishable. Ex parte Bergen, 14 App. 52; Cross v. State, 17 App. 476.

Whilst sodomy is punished by this article, it is only generally defined as the "abominable and detestable crime against nature, with mankind or beast," and we must look to the common law for the elements of the crime. At common law, the act in a child's mouth did not constitute the offense, and such being the nature of the detestable act of which defendant was proven guilty, in this case, the conviction can not stand. Prindle v. State, 31 App. 551, 21 S. W. 360, 37 Am. St. Rep. 833.

Copulation in the mouth not sufficient. Prindle v. State, 31 App. 551, 21 S. W. 360, 37 Am. St. Rep. 833; Lewis v. State, 36 App. 37, 35 S. W. 372, 61 Am. St. Rep. 831; Mitchell v. State, 49 App. 535, 95 S. W. 500.

Woman is included in the term mankind as used in this article. Lewis v. State, 36 App. 37, 35 S. W. 372, 61 Am. St. Rep. 831. A venereal affair against the order of nature with a woman is sodomy. Adams v. State, 48 App. 90, 86 S. W. 334, 122 Am. St. Rep. 733.

An instruction, on a trial for sodomy, that if the jury had a reasonable doubt as to penetration of the animal they should acquit, sufficiently covered the question of penetration. Moody v. State, 121 S. W. 1117.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 259-261.

It is not enough to charge this offense in the very language of the statute. The facts which will put the defendant upon notice of the specific act must be averred. State v. Campbell, 29 Tex. 44, 94 Am. Dec. 251. An indictment which charged that the defendant "did unlawfully and wilfully commit with a mare, the same being a beast, the abominable and detestable crime against nature, by then and there having carnal connection with said beast, and did then and there commit the crime of sodomy with said beast" was held sufficient. The objection to said indictment that it did not allege the genus of the mare, or that said mare was a female of her species, was not a valid one. A mare is the female of the horse or equine genus of quadrupeds. Cross v. State, 17 App. 476.

Motion to quash indictment because the indictment does not allege the term of the court at which the grand jury was organized. The indictment alleges that the court was then in session for the fifty-fourth judicial district, and alleges the indictment to be the act of the grand jury of McLennan county, and that it was presented in open court; held, that it was sufficient. Wright v. State, 35 App. 367, 33 S. W. 973.

The indictment need not allege the sex of the person on whom the crime was committed and this though it alleges a name applicable to either sex. Adams v. State, 48 App. 90, 86 S. W. 334, 122 Am. St. Rep. 733.

Indictment charging copulation with a "sow" sufficiently described the animal. Langford v. State, 48 App. 561, 89 S. W. 830.

An indictment for sodomy, charging that the offense was committed by copulation with a woman, in that he penetrated her fundament or anus with his private parts, is sufficient. James v. State, 61 App. 232, 134 S. W. 699.

Evidence.—Carnal knowledge is as essentially an element of this offense as it is of rape, and the rules of evidence which apply in a prosecution for rape should be observed in prosecutions for sodomy. Penetration, as in rape, must be proved, though to no particular depth. The jury may infer penetration from circumstances, without direct proof. Cross v. State, 17 App. 476.

Evidence held insufficient. Langford v. State, 48 App. 561, 89 S. W. 830; Mullins v. State, 45 App. 465, 76 S. W. 560.

For evidence, see Richardson v. State, 49 App. 391, 94 S. W. 1016, and notes under C. C. P. art. 783 et seq.

Evidence held to support a conviction of sodomy. Moody v. State, 57 App. 76, 121 S. W. 1117.

Punishment.—A term of two years for one 16 years old was unauthorized. The court should have told the jury that if they found that defendant was guilty and was 16 or under and they assessed his punishment at 5 years, they might in their discretion confine him in the reformatory rather than the penitentiary. Brown v. State, 50 App. 626, 99 S. W. 1001.

A verdict of guilty against two, not assessing separate punishment was bad. Medis v. State, 27 App. 194, 11 S. W. 112, 11 Am. St. Rep. 192.

Accomplice.—If there was consent, the person participating was an accomplice and his testimony required corroboration. Medis v. State, 27 App. 194, 11 S. W. 112, 11 Am. St. Rep. 192.

Questions for jury.—If the evidence leave the question of consent in doubt it is for the jury. Medis v. State, 27 App. 194, 11 S. W. 112, 11 Am. St. Rep. 192.

Art. 508. [365] Indecent publications and exposures.—If any person shall make, publish or print any indecent and obscene print, picture or written composition, manifestly designed to corrupt the morals of youth, or shall designedly make any obscene and indecent exhibition of his own or the person of another, in public, he shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Nature and elements of offense.—The publicity contemplated had reference to persons rather than place. An exhibition in a public road might not be "in public" while a similar act in a private place might be "in public" within the meaning of the law, depending on persons who did or could see the act. Moffit v. State, 43 Tex. 346.

The "obscene and indecent exhibition" means an exposure of the parts of the person commonly considered as private, and does not mean or include obscene or indecent print, picture or written composition placed on the clothes worn on the person. Tucker v. State, 28 App. 541, 13 S. W. 1004.

"Stay with me after school. I have secured a powder through the mail that will make you safe" is not such an "indecent composition" as is "manifestly designed to corrupt the morals of youth" within the meaning of this article. A female over 21 years of age is not a youth within the meaning of this article. Edwards v. State, 47 App. 611, 85 S. W. 797.

One charged with delivering an obscene picture to a female about 15 years of age may not show in justification that she had previously received other lewd pictures. Holcomb v. State, 60 App. 408, 132 S. W. 362.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 262, 265.

An indictment for indecent publication should allege or set out the publication sufficiently to enable the court to judge of its character. State v. Hanson, 23 Tex. 232. An indictment for an indecent exposure of person is sufficient, if the offense be charged in the language of the statute. Moffit v. State, 43 Tex. 346; State v. Griffin, Id. 538.

An indictment charging that defendant on a day stated did then and there designedly make an obscene and indecent exhibition of his person in public contrary to law and against the peace and dignity, etc., was sufficient. State v. Griffin, 43 Tex. 538.

When, in charging the making, etc., of an indecent, etc., written composition, the composition being set out in haec verba, it is unnecessary to charge the manner and means of the making of the same, or the circumstances attending its publication. Smith v. State, 24 App. 1, 5 S. W. 510.

Where the defendant is indicted for making and publishing an indecent and obscene written composition, it is the province of the judge to determine whether it is indecent and obscene. Smith v. State, 24 App. 1, 5 S. W. 510.

A recital in an indictment for making and publishing an obscene composition that certain words were "manifestly designed to corrupt the morals of youth," does not mean that the composition of itself and upon its face must manifestly produce that effect, but refers to the intention and purpose of the defendants in making the composition. Smith v. State, 24 App. 1, 5 S. W. 510.

For an indictment setting out a medical advertisement, held not "manifestly designed," etc., and therefore insufficient on its face, see Abendroth v. State, 34 App. 325, 30 S. W. 787.

Art. 509. Disseminating scandals and lechery.—Every person or persons who shall, within this state, engage in the business of editing, publishing or disseminating any newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or any printed paper, devoted mainly to the publication of scandals, whoring, lechery, assignations, intrigues between men and women, and immoral conduct of persons; or any person or persons who shall knowingly have in his or her possession for sale, or shall keep for sale, or distribute, or in any way assist in the sale, or shall gratuitously distribute, or give away, any such newspaper, pamphlet, magazine, or printed paper, in this state, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of not less than two nor more than five years. [Act 1897, p. 160.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 263, 264.

Art. 510. [366] Desecration of grave.—If any person shall wrongfully destroy, mutilate, deface, injure or remove any tomb, monument, gravestone or other structure in any place used or intended for the burial of the dead, or any fence, railing or curb for the protection of such structure, or any inclosure for any such place of burial, or shall wrongfully injure, cut, remove or destroy any tree or shrub growing within any such inclosure, he shall be punished by imprisonment in jail not exceeding six months, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 166.]

Intent.—Where the defendant had placed a new fence instead of the old one, and his fence was a good one, this was held to be no defense. Having done what the law forbade, it would not avail him that in doing it, he intended an ultimate good. Phillips v. State, 29 Tex. 226.

In a prosecution hereunder the fact that the graveyard was neglected and had grown up in a wilderness, and was situated near defendant's house, and had become the rendezvous of polecats, who preyed on his chickens, and that he merely cut down some of the bushes in order to get out the polecats, raises a question for the jury as to whether the act was wrongfully done. Bird v. State, 46 App. 135, 79 S. W. 25.

It is error, in instructing on the elements of the offense, to omit the word "wrongfully." Bird v. State, 46 App. 135, 79 S. W. 25.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 266-268.

See Phillips v. State, 29 Tex. 226.

Questions for jury.—In this case, for cutting shrubs, etc., growing in an inclosure, a graveyard, it should be left to the jury to determine whether or not the act was wrongfully done. Bird v. State, 46 App. 135, 79 S. W. 25.

Charge of court.—Where it appears that one string was gone from the graveyard fence, and that it was broken down in other places, it is error to refuse to instruct that the word "inclosure" means the act of inclosing, the separating of land from common ground into distinct possession by a fence, and if the jury have a reasonable doubt as to whether the graveyard was an inclosure as thus defined they should acquit. Bird v. State, 46 App. 135, 79 S. W. 25.

It is error in a prosecution under this article to refuse to charge defining the word "inclosure" and instructing the jury that if they have a reasonable doubt as to whether the graveyard was an inclosure as defined to acquit the defendant. Bird v. State, 46 App. 135, 79 S. W. 25.

Art. 511. [367] Interference with dead bodies.—If any person not authorized by law, or by a relative or friend, for the purpose of reinterment, shall disinter, remove or carry away any human body, or the remains thereof, or shall conceal the same, knowing it to be so illegally disinterred, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 269, 270.

The dead body should be specified or designated by the name by which it was known, in order to identify the transaction and point out the particular offense with which accused is charged, and if this cannot be done sufficient reason should be alleged in the pleading why this is not done. Leach v. State, 44 App. 523, 72 S. W. 600. Followed by Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 1134.

Art. 512. College, physician or surgeon receiving dead bodies.—No school, college, physician or surgeon shall be allowed or permitted to receive any such body or bodies until bond shall have been given to the state by such physician or surgeon, or by or in behalf of such school or college, to be approved by the clerk of the county court in and for the county in which such physician or surgeon may reside, or in which such school or college may be situated, and to be filed in the office of said clerk, which bond shall be in the penal sum of one thousand dollars, conditioned that all such bodies which the said physician or surgeon or said college shall receive thereafter shall be used; and all such experiments on the lower animals shall be conducted only for the promotion of medical science; and whoever shall sell or buy such body or bodies, or in any way traffic in the same, or shall transmit or convey, or cause or procure to be transmitted or conveyed, said bodies to any place outside the state, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction, be liable to a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars for each offense, or to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding two years in the county jail. [Act 1907, p. 119.]

Civil provisions, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 5756-5763.

Art. 513. Punishment for.—Any person having duties imposed upon him by the provisions of this law who shall refuse, neglect or omit to perform said duties, or any of them, as required by said law, shall, on conviction thereof, be liable to a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for each offense. [Id., p. 119.]

523.	Embezzling or misapplying funds.

Article 514. [368] Issuing bills to pass as money.—If any person within this state shall issue any bill, promissory note, check or other paper intended to circulate as money, he shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each bill, promissory note, check or other paper so issued.

Decisions under former statutes.—See Orton v. Engledow, 8 Tex. 206; State v. Williams, Id. 256; State v. Williams, 14 Tex. 98; Williams v. State, 23 Tex. 264; Mills v. State, Id. 295.

Essentials of offense.—Where it is shown that the bills were issued, and were used, with the knowledge of the party issuing them, by the community as a circulating medium, the offense is complete. Luckey v. State, 26 Tex. 362.

— Bills redeemable in Confederate notes.—That the bills issued were redeemable in Confederate notes would not repel the intention manifested in issuing them that they should circulate as money. Luckey v. State, 26 Tex. 362.

— Value as circulating medium.—That the bills were not regarded by the community in which they were issued as of equal value with gold and silver as a circulating medium, would not tend to show that accused did not violate the law. Luckey v. State, 26 Tex. 362.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 271.

Where an indictment charged that the defendant, without authority of law, did issue certain "bills," intended to circulate as money, and set out copies thereof, from which it appeared that the bills were drawn for "one dollar in currency," made payable to bearer, "when twenty dollars are presented," and accepted by the drawee, the instruments were properly termed bills, and if improperly designated, it was immaterial error. Luckey v. State, 26 Tex. 362.

— Requisites in general.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

— Surplusage.—Where the bills were alleged in the indictment to have been engraved, whereas they were printed, the allegation might be regarded as surplusage, and the bills admitted in evidence. Luckey v. State, 26 Tex. 362.

Art. 515. [369] Includes corporations.—Any officer of any banking company or body corporate, who signs his own name, or that of another, by the authority of such other, to any bank bill, promissory note, check or other paper, being evidence of a promise to pay, and intended to circulate as money, is guilty of the offense punishable by the preceding article.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 272.

— Requisites in general.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

Art. 516. [370] Also indorsement of foreign bills.—Any person who may bring into this state any bank bill, purporting to be issued by any bank in any other state or territory of the Union, or in any foreign country, and shall sign or indorse the same to be circulated as money in this state, shall be deemed guilty of the offense mentioned in article 514.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 273.

— Requisites in general.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

Art. 517. [371] Passing paper of broken bank.—If any person shall fraudulently pass or transfer, or offer to pass or transfer, any paper purporting to be bank paper, and to be issued by any bank, which, having once existed, has since broken, or the money of the same becomes valueless, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 269, 270, 274.

— Requisites in general.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

Art. 518. [372] Not applicable to United States banks.—The provisions of this chapter shall not apply to any bank incorporated under the laws of the United States, nor to bills issued by such bank. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 166.]

Art. 519. Misappropriating funds of savings banks.—It shall be unlawful for any director or officer of any bank or banking and trust company, which shall establish or maintain, or continue to maintain, a savings department, or which shall use the word "savings," as provided in this article, to knowingly misappropriate any moneys or funds belonging to such savings department, or to use or consent to the use of any such moneys or funds otherwise than for the payment of lawful demands of savings depositors, and in the making of such investments as are prescribed by law, and in the payment of such dividends to the shareholders as are allowed by the law to be paid therefrom, or to borrow any of the funds belonging to such savings department, or to in any way be an obligor for moneys loaned by or borrowed of such savings department, or to receive or accept, directly or indirectly, any commission, brokerage or other valuable thing or favor of any kind by reason or on account of any loan or investment made out of the funds of such savings department, or to sell such savings department any security or other investment, or wilfully and knowingly do, or perform, any act or transaction by or as a result of which at any time the assets of such savings department, including cash, shall not at least equal in amount the deposits in such savings department, at least fifteen per cent of which shall be actual cash in such savings department. [Act 1909, p. 406.]

Civil provisions, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 445-517.

Art. 520. Penalty for.—Any officer or director of any state bank or banking and trust company, who shall knowingly violate the provisions of this article, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than one nor more than five years. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 521. State banks, authority to do business.—All state banks transacting business in this state shall be required, on or after the first day of January, 1910, to hold a certificate of authority to transact a banking business, issued by the commissioner in compliance with the provisions of this law, and to keep the same conspicuously posted at all times in the banking house where such business is transacted. It shall be the duty of the commissioner of insurance and banking to issue to each state bank, which the state banking board shall have approved and certified to him as provided by law as being entitled to transact a banking business, a certificate of authority in such form as the state banking board shall approve, to be signed by him under his official seal, certifying that such state bank is authorized under the laws of this state to engage in the banking business. Such certificate of authority, when issued to guaranty fund banks, shall contain the following statement on the face thereof in bold type: "The non-interest bearing and unsecured deposits of this bank are protected by the state bank guaranty fund." And, when issued to bond security banks, shall contain the following statement on the face thereof in bold type: "All deposits of this bank are protected by security bond under the laws of the state of Texas." And, when issued to the state banks other than guaranty fund banks and bond security banks, it shall contain neither of these nor any similar statement. The commissioner of insurance and banking shall close all state banks which the state banking board shall disapprove and determine not entitled under the laws of this state to transact a banking business, and shall proceed in such cases in the manner provided by law with respect to insolvent banks, unless such banks shall go into voluntary liquidation; provided, that hereafter the secretary of state shall, on issuance of any charter to any bank or banking and trust company, deliver the same to the commissioner of insurance and banking, who shall deliver such charter to such corporation, together with the certificate herein provided for, upon such corporation showing to the satisfaction of the state banking board that it has complied with the state banking laws. Any person or persons who shall in any capacity transact, or hold themselves out as transacting, the business of banking for or on behalf of any state bank or state banking and trust company, after the first day of January, 1910, without such bank or banking and trust company shall hold a certificate of authority, as herein provided for, except in cases where such certificates shall not yet have been issued to newly incorporated banks as herein provided for, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished for each offense, each day being considered as a separate offense, by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars and not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than one nor more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 522. Non-interest bearing and unsecured deposits protected.—All guaranty fund banks provided for by law are hereby authorized and empowered, if they desire so to do, to publish, by any form of advertising which they may adopt, or upon their stationery, the following words: "The non-interest bearing and unsecured deposits of this bank are protected by the depositors guaranty fund of the state of Texas." All bond guaranty banks provided for by law are hereby authorized and empowered, if they desire so to do, to publish, by any form of advertising which they may adopt, or upon their stationery, the following words: "The deposits of this bank are protected by guaranty bond under the laws of this state." Said banks are authorized to use the terms "guaranty fund bank," or "guaranty bond bank," as the case may be, but they are hereby prohibited from describing said forms of guaranty by any other terms or words than herein named. Any guaranty fund bank or bond security bank or any officer, director, stockholder, or other person, for any such bank who shall write, print, publish, or advertise in any manner or by any means, or permit any one for them, or for said bank, to write, print, publish or advertise any statement that the deposits of any such bank are secured otherwise than as permitted in this article, or who shall make or publish any advertisement or statement to the effect that the state of Texas guarantees or secures the deposits in any such bank or banking and trust company, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or confined in the county jail for not less than three months nor more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Any person who shall write, print, publish or advertise the above statement, authorized to be used by bond security banks or guaranty fund banks, other than as herein authorized, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or confined in the county jail for not less than three months nor more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 523. Embezzling or misapplying funds.—Every president, cashier, director, teller, clerk or agent of any state bank, or banking and trust company, incorporated under the laws of Texas, who embezzles, abstracts or wilfully misapplies any of the moneys, funds or credits of such state bank, or who, without authority from the directors, issues or puts forth any certificate of deposit, draws any order or bill of exchange, makes any acceptance, assigns any note, bond, draft, bill of exchange, mortgage, judgment or decree, or who makes any false entry in any book, report or statement of such state bank, with intent in either case to defraud such state bank, or any other corporation, body politic or any individual, person, firm or association, or to deceive any officer of such state bank, the commissioner of insurance and banking, or any examiner or special agent, authorized by law to examine the affairs of any such state bank, and every person who, with like intent, aids or abets any officer, clerk or agent in any violation of this article, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall, upon conviction, be imprisoned in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than five years nor more than ten years. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 524. Director borrowing funds.—Any director of a state bank or banking and trust company, incorporated under the laws of this state, who shall, either directly or indirectly, borrow any of the funds of such bank in excess of ten per cent of its capital and surplus, without the consent of a majority of the directors of the bank first having been obtained and made a matter of record at a regular meeting of the board, or without the written consent of such majority of the directors, other than the borrowers, being jointly executed by them and filed in the archives of such bank before the loan is made; and any officer of a state bank who shall knowingly become indebted to such bank, directly or indirectly, in any sum whatever, without the consent of a majority of the board, other than the borrower, obtained or recorded or filed in like manner, and any officer or director of such bank who shall knowingly loan or assent to the loaning of any of its funds to any officer, or any of its funds to any director in excess of ten per cent of its capital and surplus, without such consent being first obtained and recorded or filed, or who shall knowingly permit any such officer or director to become indebted to the bank or liable to it without such consent, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than two years, upon conviction thereof. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 525. Officer or director, failure of duty.—Any officer, director or employé of any state bank or trust company, who knowingly or wilfully fails or refuses to perform any duty imposed upon him by law, or who shall do or perform or assist in doing or performing any act or transaction prohibited by the provisions of this law, for the punishment of which provision is not otherwise herein made, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a term of not less than thirty days nor more than ninety days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 526. Commissioner of insurance, etc., not to be interested in.—Neither the commissioner of insurance and banking, nor any regularly appointed clerks or employés of the department of insurance and banking, nor any state bank examiner, shall, at any time during his incumbency, be financially interested, directly or indirectly, in any state bank or banking and trust company, subject to the supervision of the department of insurance and banking, or knowingly be or become indebted, either directly or indirectly, to any such state bank or banking and trust company. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 527. Penalty for.—Any officer or employé, named in the foregoing article, violating its provisions shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding five hundred dollars; and the venue in such case shall be in the county wherein such state bank or banking and trust company is located. The violation of the provisions of this article shall work a forfeiture of the office or position held by the person guilty of such violation. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 528. Certifying check without funds, penalty for.—Any officer, clerk or agent of any state bank or banking and trust company incorporated under the laws of Texas, who shall wilfully certify to any check, or checks, before the amount thereof shall have been regularly entered to the credit of the drawer, upon the books of such state bank or banking and trust company, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine of not less than five hundred nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the state penitentiary for not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 529. Failure to notify commissioner of banking of violation of law.—Any state bank examiner, or special agent, who shall knowingly and intentionally fail or refuse to notify the commissioner of insurance and banking in writing of any violation of the criminal provisions of this law within ten days after the same shall come to his notice or attention, unless such notice shall, within his knowledge, have been previously given by some other bank examiner or special agent, or any commissioner of insurance and banking, who shall knowingly and intentionally fail or refuse to notify in writing the county or district attorney charged by law with the duty of the prosecution thereof, of any such violation, within ten days after the same shall have come to his knowledge or attention, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be punished by fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than three nor more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, and, upon conviction, shall be removed from office. [Id., p. 406.]

Art. 530. Examiner violating oath of office.—For any violation of his oath of office, or of any duty imposed upon him by law, any examiner shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding five years, and upon indictment of any such examiner for any violation of this law, he shall be disqualified from further discharging the duties of such office, until such indictment is fully disposed of. [Act 1905, p. 514, § 68.]

Art. 531. Duty of commissioner of insurance and banking.—It shall be the duty of the commissioner of insurance and banking, not less than twice during any one year, to call upon each bank organized under this act, and trust company or savings bank, doing business under the provisions of this law for a statement as provided by law; and he may call upon any one or more of such corporations to make such statements at any time, though it be more than a second statement within the year; and the commissioner shall give no notice to any person whatsoever of the day on which he will call for such statement. For a violation of this prohibition, or of any other duty herein imposed upon him, he shall be deemed to have committed a misdemeanor in office, and, upon conviction of the same, upon indictment or information of any parties, in the name of the state, before a competent tribunal, he shall be punished by removal from office, and by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars for each violation of this law. Should any president, cashier or secretary, or any officer of such corporation, or any director thereof, refuse to make the statement so required of him or them, or wilfully and corruptly make a statement, he or they, and each of them, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, upon information, punished by a fine for each offense not exceeding five hundred dollars, and not less than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not less than one nor more than twelve months in the city or county jail, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., p. 507, § 49.]

See art. 520 Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 532. Receiving deposits when insolvent.—If any president, director, manager, cashier, or other officer, of any banking institution, or the owner, agent, or manager, of any private bank or banking institution, or the president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, director, or agent, of any trust company or institution, doing business in this state, shall receive or assent to the reception of any deposit of money or other valuable thing into such bank or banking institution, or trust company or institution, or if any such officer, owner, or agent, of such bank or banking institution, or if any president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, director, or agent, of such trust company or institution, shall create or assent to the creation of any debt, debts, or indebtedness, in consideration of or by reason of which indebtedness any money or valuable property shall be received into such bank or banking institution, or trust company or institution, after he shall have had knowledge of the fact that such bank, banking institution, or trust company or institution, or the owner or owners of any such private bank, is insolvent or in failing circumstances, he shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for a term of not less than two nor more than ten years; provided, that the failure of any such bank or banking institution, or trust company or institution, shall be prima facie evidence of knowledge on the part of any such officer or person that the same was insolvent or in failing circumstances when the money or property was received on deposit. [Act 1897, p. 130.]

| 3. What constitutes insolvency. | 8. — Accomplice. |
| 4. — Time of receiving deposit. | 9. Indictment. |
| 5. — Evidence. | 10. — Requisites in general. |

1. Explanatory.—Subsequent to the enactment in 1897 of the above article, the legislature, in 1905, passed an act making bank officers personally liable for any deposits received or debts incurred by the bank while insolvent. (See Vernon's Sayles' (Civ. St. 1914, art. 554.) The later act does not expressly repeal the earlier provision. Whether an implied repeal resulted is a question for judicial determination.

2. Constitutionality.—The provision of this article that failure of the bank shall be prima facie evidence of knowledge by the bank officers of its insolvency is unconstitutional because not embraced in the title of the act. Roby v. State, 41 App. 152, 51 S. W. 1114.

3. What constitutes insolvency.—"Insolvency," means that accused did not have sufficient assets to pay his debts, and is synonymous with "failing circumstances." Brown v. State, 71 App. 353, 162 S. W. 339. "Assets," means the property of accused, real and personal, his bills receivable, notes, obligations due him, of any and every character, considering the solvency of the makers, indorsers, and guarantors, and the value of the securities thereon, if any, and all stocks held by him as his property. Fleming v. State, 62 App. 653, 139 S. W. 598; Brown v. State, 71 App. 353, 162 S. W. 339.

4. — Time of receiving deposit.—A charge that accused in fact must have been insolvent at the time the deposit was received and must have known the fact, coupled with an instruction that the deposit must have been received "after" accused knew the bank was insolvent, etc., was not objectionable as not properly fixing the time. Brown v. State, 71 App. 353, 162 S. W. 339.

5. — Evidence.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 783.

The state must prove the property owned by accused at the time he received the deposit, its condition and value, the amount of his indebtedness and liabilities, to enable the jury to determine the fact of insolvency. The value of property claimed to be owned by accused at the time of receiving the deposit, if it had no market value, could be ascertained by describing it and proving its cost, etc., and the reasonable value of stock in corporations owned by him could be fixed by proving the productive capacity of their plants, the market price of the stock, if any, and from any facts or circumstances which would enable the jury to correctly determine the actual value. Evidence as to the value of each separate piece of property or assets was also admissible. Evidence of the cashier of another bank instituted and controlled by accused that there was no capital paid in at the time of its organization together with the value of its assets was admissible. Evidence of the trustee in bankruptcy of accused's estate who had taken possession of all his property that no person within witness' knowledge, other than accused, had ever asserted or claimed any interest in the bank, together with the character and amount of the property received and the investigations made as to its value and condition, was admissible. Where accused also owned another bank, it was proper for the state to prove the conditions of that bank on the issue of his insolvency on the date the deposit was received. And where the state bank commissioner testified that he had checked and verified a statement of the assets and liabilities of that bank after it had been prepared by one of his subordinates and that the same was correct, such statement was properly admitted. Where accused claimed as part of his assets certain shares of stock in another bank, it was permissible for the commissioner of banking to testify that such shares were valueless. Where the state bank commissioner testified that after examining another bank owned by defendant he objected to certain loans and demanded that they be withdrawn from the bank and replaced with cash or other proper security and accused withdrew these notes and replaced them with others alleged to have been given by purchasers of stock in a corporation of which defendant was president, evidence that the notes so substituted were uncollectible, given by persons of small means and under contracts providing that the sales should be void if the corporation did not pay specified dividends, etc., was admissible as bearing on the issue of accused's insolvency and as tending to show his bad faith in making the substitution. Brown v. State, 71 App. 353, 162 S. W. 339.

6. — Instructions.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 735.

The court should charge the proper rule for determining the question of solvency. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 561.

7. Persons liable.—Accused, establishing a private bank, and placing the same in charge of employes who were authorized to do a general banking business, gives, in law, his assent to each and every act of such employes within the scope of the business authorized by him to be done by his agents and employes, and is liable for their acts in receiving deposits while he and the bank were insolvent, though he was not present when the deposit was received, did not expressly authorize it, and had no actual knowledge thereof. Brown v. State, 71 App. 353, 162 S. W. 339.

8. — Accomplice.—See notes under article 79, ante.

9. Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 276, 277. Roby v. State, 41 App. 152, 51 S. W. 1114.

An indictment, alleging that accused was the president of a bank, that as president he received as a deposit a bank check on another bank, payable to the order of a third person, that the check was deposited by the third person, that the president received the deposit after he knew that the bank was in failing circumstances and insolvent, does not charge the offense denounced by this article because it does not allege affirmatively the insolvency of the bank at the time of the deposit, and because it does not show that the check was transferred as a deposit to the bank. Fleming v. State, 62 App. 653, 139 S. W. 598.

An indictment alleging that accused received and assented to the reception of a deposit of money in the bank of E., "unincorporated," accused then and there being president of said bank and the bank being insolvent, and that accused then knew that such bank and the owner and owners of said bank was and were insolvent, etc., charges that the E. bank was a private bank, and was bad for not alleging that accused was its owner, agent, or manager, and the names of the owners, and that they were insolvent when the money was received. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 561. But an indictment alleging that accused unlawfully assented to the reception of a deposit of the value of $50 from and by D., which money was placed to the credit of D.'s open account on the books of a specified bank, unincorporated, which was a private bank of which accused was the owner, and then and there insolvent and in failing circumstances at the time of receiving the deposit, and knowing that the bank and its owner were insolvent, etc., was not objectionable for failure to sufficiently allege the names of the persons composing the bank. Brown v. State, 71 App. 353, 162 S. W. 339.

10. — Requisites in general.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

CHAPTER ONE A

RURAL CREDIT UNIONS

Art.	Art.
532a. Rural credit unions; examination by State Bank Commissioner; embezzlement of funds.	532b. Same; prosecution for misapplication of funds.

Article 532a. Rural credit unions; examination by State Bank Commissioner; embezzlement of funds.—Ten or more citizens of this State may associate themselves together, by articles of agreement, and form a rural credit union, and upon the approval of the State Banking Board may become a corporation upon complying with such provisions of the Act regulating State banks as may be applicable to the transaction of the business herein authorized to be done. The State Banking Board may permit the formation of such corporation when it is satisfied that the proposed field of operation is favorable to the success of a rural credit union, and that the standing of the proposed members is such as to give assurance that its affairs will be administered in accordance with the spirit of this Act, and it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Banking to issue a charter to said rural credit union to do business in conformity with the provisions of this Act. The State Bank Commissioner, or his deputy, shall have authority to examine the accounts, books and papers of rural credit unions herein authorized to be organized. Any rural credit union violating the provisions of this Act shall be subject to the forfeiture of its charter, and any officer or member misapplying or embezzling funds belonging to such rural credit union, shall be subject to prosecution and punishment as already provided for violating the provisions of the State Banking laws. [Act 1913, p. 163, ch. 87, § 3.]

See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 7046a-7046x.

Art. 532b. Same; Prosecution for misapplication of funds.—The State Bank Commission shall require such rural credit unions to keep such books as he may deem necessary for the proper conduct of their business; may make examination and report of the transaction of such rural credit unions' business and institute necessary proceedings for the prosecution of any officer or director misapplying the rural credit unions' funds. The rural credit unions shall be subject to the general supervision of the State Bank Commissioner. [Id., § 5.]

CHAPTER ONE B

CO-OPERATIVE SAVINGS AND CONTRACT LOAN COMPANIES

Art. 532c. Pecuniary interest of corporate officers prohibited; penalty.	Art. 532e. Engaging in business contrary to law; proviso.
532d. Fraudulent representations by officers.	532f. Partial invalidity; application of general corporation laws.

Article 532c. Pecuniary interest of corporate officers prohibited; penalty.—No director or officer of any company transacting business in this State or organized under the laws of this State shall receive any money or valuable thing for negotiating, procuring, recommending or aiding in any purchase or sale by any such company of any property or any loan from such company, nor be pecuniarily interested, directly or indirectly, either as principal, co-principal, agent or beneficiary in any such purchase, sale or loan; provided that nothing contained in this article shall prevent the company from making a loan upon a contract by the borrower not in excess of the reserve value thereof. Any person violating any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by fine of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1915, 1st S. S., p. 14, ch. 5, § 25.]

Art. 532d. Fraudulent representations by officers.—Any officer or agent of any company acting under the provisions of this Act who shall knowingly misrepresent any material fact relative to the contract or certificate issued or to be issued and sold by any such company to any purchaser thereof, shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be punished by fine of not less than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment in the penitentiary for any period of time not more than three years or by both such imprisonment and fine. [Id., § 26.]

Art. 532e. Engaging in business contrary to law; proviso.—No person, firm, corporation, or association of persons or joint stock company shall hereafter engage in this State in the business provided for in this Act, except in compliance with this Act, and any corporation which does so engage shall have its charter forfeited by suit of the Attorney General and shall be liable to a penalty of not less than one hundred dollars a day nor greater than five hundred dollars a day for each day that it does so engage; all such suits to be brought as other penalty suits which the Attorney General is authorized to bring; any person who does so engage in violation of the provisions hereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor for each and every day such person is so engaged and shall be punished by fine not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars for each offense; provided each day shall be a separate offense; provided, however, that existing corporations, individuals, associations and joint stock companies engaged in the business defined in this Act at the time this measure goes into effect shall have twelve months thereafter to adjust their business affairs and bring their business under the terms of this Act; provided, however, that they must within sixty days after this Act goes into effect submit a statement of their business to the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, together with the certificate of their intention to accept the provisions of this Act, and comply therewith. [Id., § 27.]

Art. 532f. Partial invalidity; application of general corporation laws.—Should any section of this Act be held unconstitutional—al or void for any reason or as to any particular company, corporation, individual or association, such holding shall not affect the remainder of the Act. The general corporation laws of this State where not in conflict herewith shall govern corporations chartered or operating under this Act; and the general laws specifying charges which may be made by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall apply to corporations chartered or operating hereunder. [Id., § 29.]

CHAPTER TWO

OF LOTTERIES AND RAFFLES

Art.	Art.
533. Establishing a lottery.	536. Dealing in futures.
534. Selling lottery tickets.	537. Permitting premises to be used for such purposes.
535. Raffle for over five hundred dollars.

Article 533. [373] Establishing a lottery.—If any person shall establish a lottery or dispose of any estate, real or personal, by lottery, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars.

| 4. — Raffle distinguished. | 9. Accomplices. |

1. Constitutional provision.—See Const., art. 3, sec. 47.

2. Persons liable.—That accused was present, handled tickets and operated the policy wheel, does not show that he established the lottery. Howard v. State, 49 App. 327, 91 S. W. 785.

3. What constitutes a lottery.—Any scheme for the distribution of prizes by chance is a lottery. State v. Randle, 41 Tex. 292; Randle v. State, 42 Tex. 580; Holoman v. State, 2 App. 610, 28 Am. Rep. 439; Prendergast v. State, 41 App. 358, 57 S. W. 850. And it matters not by what name such a scheme may be known, it comes within the prohibition of this article. State v. Randle, 41 Tex. 292. It is no less a lottery because the scheme includes no blanks if the prizes are of unequal value. Randle v. State, 42 Tex. 580; Holoman v. State, 2 App. 610, 28 Am. Rep. 439. A sale of boxes of candy, some of which contain money or a prize, the purchaser selecting in ignorance of contents, is a device in the nature of lottery. Holoman v. State, 2 App. 610, 28 Am. Rep. 439.

4. — Raffle distinguished.—A lottery is a game in which there is a keeper or exhibitor, who has the real fund, and against which the better stakes his money, which may be evidenced by tickets. A raffle is a game of perfect chance, in which every participant is equal with every other, in the proportion of his risk and prospect of gain. The prize is a common fund, or that which is purchased by a common fund. Each is an equal actor in developing the chances, in proportion to his risk. Whether they be developed with dice, or some other instrument, is not material. The successful party takes the whole prize, and all the rest lose. The element of one against the many, the keepers against the betters, either directly or indirectly, is not to be found in it. It has no keeper, dealer, or exhibitor, and is not a banking game. Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692; Risein v. State, 44 App. 413, 71 S. W. 974. See, also, Martin v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 712.

5. — Slot machines.—A slot machine is a lottery and a person who keeps one in his saloon is guilty of establishing a lottery. Prendergast v. State, 41 App. 358, 57 S. W. 851.

6. — Revolving spindle.—A device operated by accused, constructed so that a spindle would turn, and the players playing equal sums were entitled to whatever article the spindle pointed to when it stopped, such articles being of different values, constitutes a lottery. Barry v. State, 39 App. 240, 45 S. W. 571.

7. — Knife rack.—A knife rack is not a lottery, and in any event the imposition of a tax by the state and exaction of a license for its operation would eliminate it from the category of offenses. McRae v. State, 46 App. 489, 81 S. W. 741.

8. — Subscription schemes.—A subscription scheme involving club membership and weekly dues of a stipulated sum, and final drawing from a bag of tickets for a suit of clothes, is a lottery. Grant v. State, 54 App. 403, 112 S. W. 1068, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 876, 130 Am. St. Rep. 897, 16 Ann. Cas. 844.

9. Accomplices.—See notes under article 79 ante.

An employee in a saloon where a slot machine is used is not an accomplice in keeping it, even though he puts nickels in the slot. Prendergast v. State, 41 App. 358, 57 S. W. 851.

10. Indictment.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481; Willson's Cr. Forms, 278.

An indictment for establishing a lottery is defective where it alleges the disposition of a single prize to be distributed among the purchasers of the tickets.—Risein v. State, 44 App. 413, 71 S. W. 974.

Where one is indicted only under first clause, he cannot be convicted under second, and it is improper to admit evidence of violation of second clause. Howard v. State, 49 App. 327, 91 S. W. 785.

Where the proof, under an indictment charging accused with establishing a lottery for the purpose of disposing of suits of clothes by lot to be disposed of "among the persons who should become the purchasers of tickets therein, which said tickets were then and there issued by 'accused' in the form of membership contracts in a club," the proof failed to show that tickets were issued, but did show that the parties were to pay a dollar a week and when the first dollar was paid a receipt was given, there was a variance. Robinson v. State, 60 App. 592, 132 S. W. 944.

Art. 534. [374] Selling lottery tickets.—If any person shall sell, offer for sale or keep for sale, any ticket or part ticket in any lottery, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars.

Art. 535. [375] Raffle for over $500; offering for sale ticket in raffle for over $500.—If any person shall establish a raffle for, or dispose by raffle of, any estate, real or personal, exceeding five hundred dollars in value, he shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars; or if any person shall establish a raffle for, or shall dispose by raffle of, any estate, real or personal, of the value of five hundred dollars, or less, he shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. If any person shall offer for sale or keep for sale any chance, ticket or part ticket, in any raffle of real estate, real or personal, of any value whatever, he shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars, and all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this article are hereby repealed. [Amended Act 1909, p. 98.]

Elements of offense.—See Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692; Risein v. State, 44 App. 413, 71 S. W. 974.

Where accused, to dispose of a gun, placed numbers from 1 to 40 in envelopes, and sold the envelopes for the number of cents corresponding with the number in the envelope drawn, and the names of the buyers were placed on a circular board, whirled and shot at, and the person's number to which the shot came nearest won the article, accused disposed of the article by a raffle. Hickman v. State, 64 App. 161, 141 S. W. 973.

For the owner of a buggy to sell cigars for a dollar apiece, at the same time allowing purchasers to draw numbers, one of which would entitle the holder to the vehicle, constitutes the offense of raffling. Martin v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 712.

— Value of property.—The value of the property raffled must exceed $500. Long v. State, 22 App. 194, 2 S. W. 541, 58 Am. Rep. 633. See, also, Rosales v. State, 22 App. 673, 3 S. W. 344, and Risein v. State, 44 App. 413, 71 S. W. 974.

— Purpose of raffle.—It is immaterial whether the raffle be for religious, benevolent or profane purposes. Long v. State, 22 App. 194, 2 S. W. 541, 58 Am. Rep. 633.

— Lottery distinguished.—See note to article 533, ante.

Indictment.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447–481; Willson's Cr. Forms, 280, 281.

— Description of property.—An indictment, alleging that accused unlawfully established a raffle and disposed by raffle of "certain personal estate * * * less than $500 in value," is fatally bad for failing to name the property. Hickman v. State, 64 App. 161, 141 S. W. 973.

— Duplicity.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 481.

Art. 536. [377] Dealing in futures.—If any person shall, directly or through an agent or agents, manage or superintendent for himself, or shall as agent or representative of any other person, firm or corporation, conduct, carry on or transact any business which is commonly known as dealing in futures, in cotton, grain, lard, any kinds of meats or agricultural products, or corporation stocks, or shall keep any house, or manage, conduct, carry on or transact any business commonly known as a produce or stock exchange, or bucket shop, where future contracts are bought and sold with no intention of an actual bona fide delivery of the article or thing so bought or sold, such person, whether acting for himself or for another, as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, and, in addition thereto, shall be imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than six months; provided, that each day that such business or house is carried on or kept shall constitute a separate offense. [Act March 1, 1887, p. 10, § 1.]

Explanatory.—It would seem that the act which makes up this article and the following article had been superseded by Acts 1907, p. 172 (arts. 538-547, post) at the time that the two acts were carried into the revised Penal Code.

Elements of offense.—Contracts for the future delivery of products, when it is contemplated by the parties that there shall be no delivery are violative of this article. Seeligson v. Williams, 65 Tex. 215, 57 Am. Rep. 593; Floyd v. Patterson, 72 Tex. 202, 10 S. W. 526, 13 Am. St. Rep. 787; Oliphant v. Markham, 79 Tex. 543, 15 S. W. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 363; Norris v. Logan (Civ. App.) 94 S. W. 127. It must be shown that both parties to the contract contemplated that there should be no delivery of the thing sold. It is not sufficient that only one so contemplated. Scales v. State, 46 App. 296, 81 S. W. 949, 950, 66 L. R. A. 730, 108 Am. St. Rep. 1014. Where bona fide delivery is contemplated, the transaction is not an offense. Scales v. State, 46 App. 296, 81 S. W. 947, 66 L. R. A. 730, 108 Am. St. Rep. 1014. And a contract for the sale of goods to be delivered in the future, though the seller may not then have them, is valid. Seeligson v. Williams, 65 Tex. 215, 57 Am. Rep. 593; Floyd v. Patterson, 72 Tex. 202, 10 S. W. 526, 13 Am. St. Rep. 787; Oliphant v. Markham, 79 Tex. 543, 15 S. W. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 363.

A contract with cotton brokers for future delivery of cotton where margins are put up, where contracts for future delivery are sold and not the cotton itself, where the names of the purchasers are not known nor any day specified for delivery, violates this article. Logan v. Norris, 100 Tex. 228, 97 S. W. 820.

— Place of transaction.—The business must be carried on in this state, the sales and purchases being made in the state. Scales v. State, 46 App. 296, 81 S. W. 947, 66 L. R. A. 730, 108 Am. St. Rep. 1014; Salmon v. State, 56 App. 408, 120 S. W. 427. An agent in this state merely receiving orders to be conveyed to parties in another state, and purchases and sales there made, does not come within the inhibition of this law. Scales v. State, 46 App. 296, 81 S. W. 947, 66 L. R. A. 730, 108 Am. St. Rep. 1014; Salmon v. State, 56 App. 408, 120 S. W. 427. But one who in this state, controlling none of the commodity, accepts the money of purchasers, telegraphs their orders to brokers in another state, notifies them of the acceptance of the offers, then keeps them advised of the fluctuations of the market and requires them to cover margins, does come within the statute. Fullerton v. State (Cr. App.) 75 S. W. 534.

— Hedging contracts.—See note to art. 543, post.

— Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 281, 717. See, also, Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

The indictment need not allege an actual sale. Scales v. State, 46 App. 296, 81 S. W. 947, 66 L. R. A. 730, 108 Am. St. Rep. 1014 (following Fullerton v. State [Cr. App.] 75 S. W. 531, and overruling Goldstein v. State, 36 App. 193, 36 S. W. 278, and Cothran v. State, 36 App. 196, 36 S. W. 273). It should show that there was no intent to deliver the article or thing bought or sold. Goldstein v. State, 36 App. 197, 36 S. W. 278. It must name the article bought or sold. Goldstein v. State, 36 App. 197, 36 S. W. 278.

Evidence.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 783; De Lam v. State, 50 App. 4, 95 S. W. 532.

The burden is on the State to show before either party to the contract (dealing in futures) can be convicted, that both parties engaged in a wagering contract. Scales v. State, 46 App. 296, 81 S. W. 949, 950, 66 L. R. A. 730, 108 Am. St. Rep. 1014.

Art. 537. [378] Permitting premises to be used for such business.—Whoever knowingly permits any such business to be carried on in his building, house, booth, arbor or erection of which he is the owner, or has the possession, care, management or renting, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, fined in any sum not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars. Each day he so permits shall constitute a separate offense. [Act March 1, 1887, p. 10, § 2.]

CHAPTER THREE

BUCKET SHOPS—DEFINING AND PROHIBITING SAME

Art.	Art.
538. A bucket shop defined.	543. Penalty for making future contract.
539. Futures or dealing in futures defined.	544. Telegraph or telephone company.
540. Punishment for.	545. Proof prima facie.
541. Renting or leasing property used for.	546. What constitutes prima facie case.
542. Agent or broker making contract.	547. Persons not exempt from testifying.

Article 538. A bucket shop defined.—A bucket shop, within the meaning of this law, is any place wherein dealing in futures is carried on contrary to any of the provisions hereof. [Act 1907, p. 172.]

See art. 536, ante, and note.

Art. 539. Futures or dealing in futures defined.—By each of the expressions, “futures,” “dealing in futures,” and “future contracts,” as these terms are used in this law is meant: 1. A sale or purchase, or contract to sell, or any offer to sell or purchase, any cotton, grain, meat, lard, or any stocks or bonds of any corporation, to be delivered in the future, when it was not the bona fide intention of the party being prosecuted under this chapter, at the time that such sale, contract, purchase, or offer to sell or purchase, was made, that the thing mentioned in such transaction should be delivered and paid for as specified in such transaction. 2. Any such sale, purchase, offer or contract, where it was the intention of the party being prosecuted hereunder at the time of making such contract or offer, that the same should, or, at the option of either party, might be settled by paying or receiving a margin or profit on such contract. 3. Any purchase, sale or offer of sale or purchase, or contract for future delivery of any of the things mentioned in this article on, by or through any exchange or board of trade, the rules, by-laws, customs or regulations of which permit such contract or transaction to be settled or closed by delivery or tender of any grade or grades of the thing mentioned in such contract or transaction, other than the grade upon which the price is based in said transaction, at any price other than the actual price for spot delivery of such other grade or grades, at the time and place of delivery or tender. [Id., p. 172.]

Cited, Mackay Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Bain (Civ. App.) 163 S. W. 98.

Art. 540. Penalty for.—If any person shall, either directly or indirectly, carry on or conduct, or be in any wise interested in carrying on or conducting, any bucket shop, he shall be punished by two years confinement in the penitentiary. [Id., p. 172.]

Art. 541. Renting or leasing property used for.—If any owner or person, in the management or control of any property, shall knowingly rent or lease the same to be used as a bucket shop, or shall knowingly permit the same to be used, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than two thousand dollars, and may, in addition thereto, be confined in the county jail not less than one nor more than six months. [Id., p. 172.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 718.

Art. 542. Agent or broker making contract.—If any person shall act or offer to act as the agent or broker of any other person in making or offering to make any future contract, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than two thousand dollars, and shall be confined in the county jail not less than one nor more than six months. [Id., p. 172.]

Art. 543. Penalty for making future contract.—If any person shall make or offer to make for himself any future contract, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, and may be confined in the county jail not less than ten nor more than thirty days; provided, it may be shown in defense of any prosecution under this law that the transaction out of which such prosecution arose was a “hedging” contract between parties in this state and a party or parties without this state; and if such contract was made in whole or in part by any message sent by telegraph or telephone, that such message was delivered to the telegraph or telephone company sending the same by the defendant himself, and not through or by any broker or agent, and that such company rendering such service was a common carrier, exclusively so engaged, with no direct or indirect connection with or interest in such transaction, other than the transmission of such message and receiving the charges therefor which are not in excess of the usual rate for commission messages between the points of transmission and receipt of such message. [Id., p. 172.]

Hedging contracts.—Under this article persons doing business in Texas could lawfully hedge against loss on cotton bought by them by the sale through brokers of cotton futures in Liverpool, England, so that a telegram advising the brokers in England to hedge on behalf of such persons was not in furtherance of an illegal act; “hedging” contracts being where one buys certain cotton at the current price and sells an equal amount for future delivery, so as to protect himself from loss due to fluctuation in the market. Mackay Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Bain (Civ. App.) 163 S. W. 98.

Art. 544. Telegraph or telephone company.—If any telegraph or telephone company, or any agent thereof, shall knowingly permit any telegraph or telephone wire or instrument to remain in any bucket shop, or shall knowingly permit any of the wires, instruments or equipments of such telegraph or telephone company, to be used by any person engaged in any business rendered unlawful by this law, whether or not the same be leased by the person or persons so illegally using the same, such company or agent shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and each day that this article is violated shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., p. 172.]

Art. 545. Proof prima facie.—In any prosecution under this law in which it shall be a material issue as to whether or not in the offer to or contract to sell or purchase for future delivery anything mentioned in this law, it was the intention of the defendant that such thing should be delivered and paid for in accordance with the terms of such offer or contract, proof by the state that such contract was for the future delivery of such thing, shall constitute a prima facie case for the state on this issue, and the burden shall be upon the defendant to prove that the thing so contracted for, or offered to be contracted for, was in fact delivered in accordance with the terms of such contract, or that it was the bona fide intention of the defendant, at the time of making such contract, that such thing should be so delivered; and the court trying the case shall so charge the jury. [Id., p. 172.]

Art. 546. What constitutes prima facie case.—If, in any prosecution under this law, it shall be a material issue as to whether or not the rules, regulations, by-laws or customs of any exchange or board of trade on, by or through which any contract or offer for future delivery was made, permitted such contract or transaction to be settled or closed by the delivery or tender of any grade or grades of the thing mentioned in such contract or transaction, other than the grade upon which the price was based in said transaction, at any price other than the actual price for spot delivery of such other grade or grades, at the time and place of such delivery or tender, proof that the same was made or offered or pretended to be made by, through or upon any exchange or board of trade shall constitute a prima facie case for the state. [Id., p. 172.]

Art. 547. Persons not exempt from testifying.—No person shall be exempt from testifying as to any violation of the provisions of this law by reason of being himself guilty of such violation, but no person called by the state or a grand jury to testify shall be prosecuted for any violation of any of the provisions of this law testified to by such person. [Id., p. 172.]

Article 548. [379] Playing cards in a public place.—If any person shall play at any game of cards at any house for retailing spirituous liquors, store house, tavern, inn, or other public house, or in any street, highway or other public place, or in any outhouse where people resort, or at any place except a private residence occupied by a family; or, if any person shall bet or wager any money or other thing of value, or representative of either, at any game of cards, except in a private residence occupied by a family, and the provisions of the act that permits gaming in a private residence shall not apply in case such residence is one commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than twenty-five dollars. [Act 1901, p. 26.]

1. Construction in general.	13. What constitutes playing at game of cards.
2. House for retailing spirituous liquors.	14. Necessity of bet or wager.
3. — Club rooms.	15. What constitutes bet or wager.
4. Store house.	16. Accomplices.
5. Tavern, inn, or hotel.	17. Acquittal of joint defendants.

10. Private residence occupied by a family.	22. — Ownership or occupancy of house.
11. — As a public place.	23. — Playing in general.
12. — Commonly resorted to for gaming.	24. — Playing at cards.
	25. — Betting money.
	26. Evidence.
	27. Instructions.

1. Construction in general.—Gaming is not per se an offense. The games prohibited and made penal by this chapter are divided into two classes: 1. Playing at cards in particular places; 2. Gaming tables and banks. Sheppard v. State, 1 App. 304.

It is an offense to play cards at any place except at a private residence. Elliott v. State, 59 App. 1, 127 S. W. 547.

2. House for retailing spirituous liquors.—In the earlier cases it was held that a house for retailing spirituous liquors included the whole house, from cellar to garret, regardless of approaches. McGaffey v. State, 4 Tex. 156; Cole v. State, 9 Tex. 42; Pierce v. State, 12 Tex. 210; Redditt v. State, 17 Tex. 610. But these decisions have been overruled. The room in which the game is played must be shown to have the inhibited character. It is not necessary that it is in the main business room. If it be auxiliary to, or used in connection with the business of the principal room, this will suffice. Holzclaw v. State, 26 Tex. 682; Horan v. State, 24 Tex. 161; O'Brien v. State, 10 App. 544. If the room has no connection with the saloon it is not within the inhibition. Galbreath v. State, 36 Tex. 200; Harcrow v. State, 2 Tex. App. 511; O'Brien v. State, 10 App. 544; Watson v. State, 13 App. 160; Early v. State, 23 App. 364, 5 S. W. 122; Stewart v. State, 34 App. 33, 28 S. W. 806. But see Reeves v. State, 34 App. 147, 29 S. W. 786, holding that a dugout, though disconnected with the saloon, but used as a storing place for the saloon's liquor supplies, is within the statute. If the room is connected with the saloon so that drinks may be served therein it is within the inhibition. Watson v. State, 13 App. 160; Hasley v. State, 14 App. 217; Stebbins v. State, 22 App. 32, 2 S. W. 617. And a conviction may be had although the room used was rented to and under the control of another. Cherry v. State, 30 Tex. 439.

3. — Club rooms.—A hall used by a club, and where liquors are furnished to members only without profit, is not a house for retailing liquors. Winters v. State, 33 App. 395, 26 S. W. 839.

4. Store house.—A house where drugs are kept and vended is a store house. Redditt v. State, 17 Tex. 611.

Where the playing was done in a back room of a store house, used for a bed room, and to which customers had free access, such room was used for the purposes of the store, and was a part of the store house. Sheppard v. State, 1 App. 304.

5. Tavern, inn, or hotel.—"Tavern," "inn" and "guest" at hotel, defined. Comer v. State, 26 App. 509, 10 S. W. 106.

6. — Private room of inn, etc., within article 549.—A guest room in a hotel is a part of the public hotel or tavern, in that it is for the use of the public business of the house in the entertainment of its guests. To make such a room a private room within the exception in article 549, it must have been taken by a guest or lodger, seeking rest for a night or day, or a residence for a time or by one desiring to use it for a temporary habitation, that is a "place of abode." And so a room in an inn, engaged temporarily for the purpose of private gaming, is not a private room, especially where the person so engaging it has other apartments in the same inn, which he occupies as his abode. Comer v. State, 26 App. 509, 10 S. W. 106. See, also, Bordeaux v. State, 31 App. 37, 19 S. W. 603.

7. Other public house.—The term "public house" is generic, and includes all houses made public by the occupation carried on in them. Shihagan v. State, 9 Tex. 430; State v. Barns, 25 Tex. 654; Cole v. State, 23 App. 536, 13 S. W. 859. It signifies a house commonly open to the public either for business, pleasure, religious worship, the gratification of curiosity, and the like. State v. Alvey, 26 Tex. 155; Parker v. State, 26 Tex. 204; Cole v. State, 23 App. 536, 13 S. W. 859; Grant v. State, 33 App. 527, 27 S. W. 127; Gomprecht v. State, 36 App. 434, 37 S. W. 734. It may be applied to a house either on account of its proprietorship or purpose. Lockhart v. State, 10 Tex. 275; Gomprecht v. State, 36 App. 434, 37 S. W. 734. It is a place usually accessible to the neighboring public, and it may be public during some hours of the day and private during other hours. Gomprecht v. State, 36 App. 434, 37 S. W. 734; Turbeville v. State, 37 App. 145, 38 S. W. 1010. And the evidence should show that the house by its uses was public at the time the game was played. Turbeville v. State, 37 App. 145, 38 S. W. 1010. It includes all those houses designated by the statute, a fact of which the courts will take judicial knowledge. Grant v. State, 33 App. 527, 27 S. W. 127.

A common gambling house is a public house. Rice v. State, 10 Tex. 545. A dwelling or business house, by being used as a common resort for gaming, becomes a public house. Wheelock v. State, 15 Tex. 257. A room kept as a common resort for persons desiring to play cards, although all who desire may not be permitted to have access to it, is a public house. Lockhart v. State, 10 Tex. 275. A conviction of playing at a game with cards in a place where people commonly resorted for the purpose is supported by evidence that defendant played cards in an upper room of a building, and that it was resorted to on several occasions for the purpose of gaming. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 39 S. W. 662. A school house is a public house. It is none the less so on a day when there is no school and the building is temporarily vacant, or being used for other purposes. Cole v. State, 28 App. 536, 13 S. W. 859, 19 Am. St. Rep. 856. The back room of a physician's office occupied as a bed room, his drugs being kept in the front room, is a public house. Redditt v. State, 17 Tex. 611.

Whether a house named in the statute is public, is a question of law; but whether a house not named is public, is a question of fact. Shihagan v. State, 9 Tex. 430; State v. Alvey, 26 Tex. 155; Elsberry v. State, 41 Tex. 158.

8. Other public place.—The term "public place" does not mean a place solely devoted to the public. It means a place which is public in point of fact as distinguished from a place that is private; a place that is visited by many persons, and usually accessible to the neighboring public. Parker v. State, 26 Tex. 204. One having an office for the transaction of business cannot during business hours close his office and thereby make it a private room so as to justify gaming therein. An allegation in an indictment for playing cards, alleging that the playing was in "a public place, being a certain insurance office commonly open to the public for business purposes," is sustained by proof that accused was an insurance agent, doing a large business, which was transacted in said office, that the games were played in said office by parties invited to it by accused, and that during the time they were so played the office was kept closed to the general public, and business applicants were turned away. Gomprecht v. State, 36 App. 434, 37 S. W. 734. But see Turbeville v. State, 37 App. 145, 38 S. W. 1010, holding that a conviction cannot be had for playing cards in a public place on evidence merely that the place was a printing office which was in the daytime a public place, without any proof that it was such at night, when the playing was done, where there was evidence that the office was shut and that blinds were on all the windows except one opening into the back yard, and that the office was not open to the public or to their observation.

A gin not being one of the places designated by statute as a public place, the facts which make it a public place must be alleged. Dailey v. State, 27 App. 569, 11 S. W. 636. A jail house is not necessarily a public place. State v. Alvey, 26 Tex. 155. Nor a "quirt" shop. Tummins v. State, 18 App. 13. Nor a livery stable. Fossett v. State, 16 App. 375. Whether or not a room in a livery stable is a public place is a question for the jury, a livery stable not being mentioned in the statute. Sisk v. State, 35 App. 462, 34 S. W. 277.

A secluded spot in the woods, to become a public place, must be a place commonly resorted to for gaming or other purposes. Bledsoe v. State, 21 Tex. 223; Gerrells v. State (Cr. App.) 26 S. W. 394; Crutcher v. State, 39 App. 233, 45 S. W. 594.

A bona fide social club is not a public place. Koenig v. State, 33 App. 368, 26 S. W. 835, 47 Am. St. Rep. 35. The rooms of a commercial club, to which only the club members and invited visitors are admitted, except when the club has under discussion some question affecting the public interest, are not a public place. Grant v. State, 33 App. 527, 27 S. W. 127.

A jury room in a court house is a public place, and the fact that it is occupied as a sleeping apartment will not make it a private place unless such occupancy is by permission of the commissioners' court of the county. Wilcox v. State, 26 Tex. 145.

Under an indictment alleging that the playing was at a public place, to wit, a house where people commonly resorted for the purpose of gaming, a conviction could not be sustained on proof of the playing of but a single game. Fossett v. State, 18 App. 330.

An office used for the manufacture of medicine to which the public are admitted is a public place. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 271.

An indictment charging in one count that the offense was committed in a public place, to wit, a gaming house, and in another count that the offense was committed in a house attached to a storehouse, is not supported, on either count by evidence that the room was over a storehouse, that it was entered by a stairway from the outside, and was not connected with the store, where there was a failure to show that it was commonly resorted to for gaming purposes. Gomprecht v. State, 36 App. 434, 37 S. W. 734.

9. Outhouse.—The term "outhouse" means any house standing out and apart from houses occupied and used as dwelling or business houses—an unoccupied house not used as a dwelling, or as a business house. Wheelock v. State, 15 Tex. 253; Sisk v. State, 28 App. 432, 13 S. W. 647. That a room in it is occupied as a sleeping room, does not take it out of the statute. Sisk v. State, 28 App. 432, 13 S. W. 647. To bring an outhouse within the inhibition of the statute it must be one to which people resort for gaming or other purposes. It must have been resorted to on more than one occasion, or by more persons than were actually engaged in the gaming. Wheelock v. State, 15 Tex. 260; State v. Norton, 19 Tex. 102; Lynn v. State, 27 App. 590, 11 S. W. 640.

A charge of playing cards in an outhouse is amply supported by proof that defendant played in such outhouse, and that there were tables and chairs in the house, and that men were frequently seen resorting to such house. Armstrong v. State, 34 App. 645, 31 S. W. 666.

The house in which accused and others played cards was in the inclosure of the dwelling house of one of the participants, but was an outhouse about 250 yards therefrom, in a field, and various vegetables and implements were stored therein, and it was closed, but not locked, and contained no furniture, and no betting was done at the games, the outhouse was not a "residence," within the statutes, and accused was guilty of the offense of gaming. Soape v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 612.

10. Private residence occupied by a family.—A room used by a single man as his bed room is his private residence. Stewart v. State, 34 App. 33, 28 S. W. 806; Alphin v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 159. But see Beard v. State, 51 App. 61, 101 S. W. 796, holding that a room back of a shop where a single man cooks his meals, eats and sleeps, is not a private residence, and Patterson v. State, 55 App. 393, 116 S. W. 1151, holding that where a man who has never been married lives alone in a house of only one room, it is not a private residence.

A private residence occupied by a family does not mean a hotel, does not mean a saloon, does not mean a public street or highway nor an outhouse where people resort. Wilkerson v. State, 44 App. 455, 72 S. W. 852, 853. It is not the private residence that protects the gaming from being unlawful, but the fact that the residence is at the time occupied by a family. The length of time that the family is not occupying it is immaterial, so long as they are not occupying it at the time of the offense. Stallings v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 153. So, where a number of persons, none of whom resided in a certain residence, obtained permission from the owner to go to his house in the absence of himself and his family for the purpose of playing dominoes, and after having gone there under this permission proceeded to gamble with cards and bet money on the game, they were trespassers, and the house was not a private residence. Sloan v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 156; Stallings v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 159.

A camp occupied by defendant and his son held a private residence. Hipp v. State, 45 App. 200, 75 S. W. 28, 62 L. R. A. 973.

An abandoned private residence held not a private residence within this article. McCollum v. State, 49 App. 383, 92 S. W. 848.

11. — As a public place.—A private residence becomes a public place only when spirituous liquors are sold there. White v. State, 39 App. 269, 45 S. W. 702, 46 S. W. 825.

A private residence cannot be an appurtenance to a public road, near which it is, so as to authorize prosecution for permitting gaming therein, as in a public place. Dunn v. State, 72 App. 170, 161 S. W. 467.

12. — Commonly resorted to for gaming.—Under this article, construed with article 557, post, the playing of cards in a private house is an offense only when there is betting, and when the house is used as a resort for gaming. Purvis v. State, 62 App. 302, 137 S. W. 701, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 536. See, also, Robinson v. State, 72 App. 616, 163 S. W. 434. When parties constantly resort to a private residence for the purpose of gaming it is a gaming house. Morgan v. State, 42 App. 422, 60 S. W. 764. The number of times that games are played is not the sole criterion of whether a private residence is commonly resorted to for gaming. A man, his friends, and invited guests may play frequently without violating the law, if the main object and purpose is not to gamble for money, while if a man throws open the doors of his home to any and all who desire to enter therein for the purpose of gambling with cards there is a violation of the law, though evidence that this was continuously or frequently done would add additional strength to the evidence. Sloan v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 156. Where there was evidence that for six months a number of games were played at the residence, witnesses saying that they knew six or eight times when they were there and played cards for money, a finding that the residence was commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming was sustained. Floekinger v. State, 45 App. 199, 75 S. W. 303. Where the only evidence was to the effect that defendant and another were sitting opposite each other at a table on which were money and a deck of cards, there could be no conviction. Purvis v. State, 62 App. 302, 137 S. W. 701, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 536.

To constitute the offense of gaming in a private room or residence, it must appear that the room or residence is a gaming house, or that the room is attached to a public house and commonly used for gaming purposes, or that it is a private room in an inn or tavern and commonly used for gaming purposes, or that it is a room or house where spirituous liquors are sold. Miller v. State, 35 App. 650, 34 S. W. 959.

13. What constitutes playing at game of cards.—"Monte" is known as a banking game, or a game which is played, kept, dealt, or exhibited. It is a game which cannot properly be said to be played with cards. Card playing is contradistinguished from gaming tables or banks. So, where an indictment charges unlawful playing at a game of cards in a public place, and the evidence shows that the game played was monte, a conviction thereunder cannot be sustained. Averheart v. State, 30 App. 651, 18 S. W. 416.

If appellant's act was a trick or joke, if he was playing at a game with cards where spirituous liquors were retailed, he was guilty. Toler v. State, 41 App. 659, 56 S. W. 917.

14. Necessity of bet or wager.—Under former laws betting was necessary to constitute the offense. Reeves v. State, 9 Tex. 447. But under the present law it is an offense to play cards even without betting at any place, except at a private residence occupied by a family. Borders v. State, 24 App. 333, 6 S. W. 532; Gallegos v. State, 50 App. 190, 95 S. W. 124; Lamar v. State, 49 App. 563, 95 S. W. 511.

15. What constitutes bet or wager.—A bet may be an implied understanding that the loser shall pay for the whisky. Bachelor v. State, 10 Tex. 258.

Money may be bet without being in sight. Pierce v. State, 12 Tex. 210.

One cannot be convicted of playing or betting on a game of cards upon evidence showing that he, as banker, exhibited a monte bank at which the other players bet, since he could not bet at his own banking game. Vinson v. State, 58 App. 47, 124 S. W. 652. Nor can one be convicted of unlawfully playing at a game of cards at a place other than a private residence occupied by a family, on evidence that, if gambling at all, he was betting at a game of "monte." Arredondo v. State, 58 App. 145, 124 S. W. 930.

16. Accomplices.—See notes under article 79, ante.

17. Acquittal of joint defendants.—See notes under Code Cr. Proc. art. 9.

18. Indictment or information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 282-286. See, also, Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

19. — Joinder of offenses.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 481.

20. — Venue.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 451, subd. 5.

21. — Description of place or house.—If the playing was in one of the houses specifically named in the statute it is sufficient to use the designation used in the statute, as that the playing was at "a house for retailing spirituous liquors" or at "a store house," or "a tavern," or "an inn." Sheppard v. State, 1 App. 304; Royal v. State, 9 Tex. 449; Watson v. State, 13 App. 160; Askey v. State, 15 App. 558; Bacchus v. State, 18 App. 15; Early v. State, 23 App. 364, 5 S. W. 122; Horan v. State, 24 Tex. 161. But if the house be one not specifically named in the statute, the indictment must not only allege that it was a public house, but must also allege the facts which show that it was public. Jackson v. State, 16 App. 373; Fossett v. State, 16 App. 375; Bowman v. State, 16 App. 613; Tummins

v. State, 18 App. 13; State v. Barns, 25 Tex. 654; Millican v. State, 25 Tex. 664; State v. Alvey, 26 Tex. 155; State v. Fuller, 31 Tex. 559; State v. Mansker, 36 Tex. 364; Elsberry v. State, 41 Tex. 158. An indictment which alleges that the gaming was done at a public house, to-wit, a house commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming, sufficiently alleges the public character of the house. Williams v. State, 42 App. 368, 60 S. W. 248, 249. Where a room in a house is designated as the place where the gaming occurred, the indictment alleges that the room was, at the time of the gaming, attached to one of the public houses named in the statute, or to some house commonly known as public. O'Brien v. State, 10 App. 544; Weiss v. State, 16 App. 431; Tummins v. State, 18 App. 13; Bacchus v. State, 18 App. 15; Early v. State, 23 App. 364, 5 S. W. 122. An indictment, charging in one count that accused played at a game with cards "at a house for retailing spirituous liquors," and in another count alleging the place as a "certain room attached to a house for retailing spirituous liquors," charges a statutory offense in each count. Early v. State, 23 App. 364, 5 S. W. 122. An indictment for playing at a game with cards in a private room of a public house must allege that spirituous liquors were sold at such house, unless it was a gaming house. Miller v. State, 35 App. 650, 34 S. W. 959.

If the gaming was at a public place, designated as such by the statute, as a "street" or "highway," it is sufficient to so allege, but if at a public place, not specifically named as such in the statute, the facts which constitute the place a public one, must be averred. Shihagen v. State, 9 Tex. 430; Rice v. State, 10 Tex. 545; State v. Lopez, 18 Tex. 33; State v. Barns, 25 Tex. 654; Cherry v. State, 30 Tex. 439; Metzger v. State, 31 App. 11, 19 S. W. 254; Elsberry v. State, 41 Tex. 158; Sheppard v. State, 1 App. 304; Scribner v. State, 12 App. 173; Jackson v. State, 16 App. 373; Fossett v. State, 16 App. 375; Bowman v. State, 16 App. 513; Dailey v. State, 27 App. 569, 11 S. W. 636; Chapman v. State, 63 App. 494, 140 S. W. 442. If the playing was not done at any of the places named in the statute as public places, it is only necessary to state that the said place was then and there not a private residence occupied by a family. Osborn v. State (Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 592. In an indictment under this article for playing cards it is sufficient to allege that the same was not played at a private residence without stating where it was played. Russell v. State, 44 App. 465, 72 S. W. 190, 191; Hankins v. State, (Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 191. An allegation that accused "did then and there unlawfully play at a game of cards in a public place, to wit, the Commercial Union Clubrooms, which club room was then and there a place to which people did then and there commonly resort for the purpose of business, amusement, and recreation, and which club room was then and there a "public place," is sufficient. Grant v. State, 33 App. 527, 27 S. W. 127. An information for unlawfully playing cards in a public place describing the place as being in a certain pasture about 340 yards from the I. & G. N. Ry. Depot was too indefinite. Crutcher v. State, 39 App. 233, 45 S. W. 594. A count charging accused with playing cards in a club room in a certain hotel sufficiently charges playing in a public place. So, also, is a count charging accused with playing cards in a private room of an inn, commonly used for gaming. Goldstein v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 239. An indictment alleging that defendant did then and there unlawfully play at a game with cards in a public place, to wit: a printing office, commonly resorted to by the public is sufficient. Turbeville v. State, 37 App. 145, 38 S. W. 1010. An indictment charging that defendant played cards in a room in a certain house which room was commonly resorted to, etc., is insufficient. Burk v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 659.

An indictment charging that defendant unlawfully bet at a game of cards, but not negating that the game was at a private house, or charging that it was at a place prohibited under the statute, is insufficient. Purvis v. State, 62 App. 302, 137 S. W. 701, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 536; Chapman v. State, 63 App. 513, 140 S. W. 441; Chapman v. State, 63 App. 494, 140 S. W. 442; George v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 621; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 621; George v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 1138; Shelton v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 349; (overruling Hodges v. State, 44 App. 444, 72 S. W. 179; Wilkerson v. State, 44 App. 455, 72 S. W. 850, 851; Purvis v. State, 52 App. 343, 107 S. W. 55; Singleton v. State, 53 App. 625, 111 S. W. 736). An information charging accused with unlawfully playing cards at a certain place on a certain river near a fish trap in the pasture of another, about four miles from a certain town, the same not then and there being a private residence occupied by a family, negated the fact that the game was at a private residence, and charged an offense. Elliott v. State, 59 App. 1, 127 S. W. 547.

If the gaming was at an out house, it is sufficient to so allege in the language of the statute, that is, that it was "at an out house where people did then and there resort." State v. Norton, 19 Tex. 102; State v. Stewart, 35 Tex. 499.

The information must allege that the gaming was at a private residence occupied by a family, but was one commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming. Williams v. State, 48 App. 325, 87 S. W. 1156. An information charging that accused unlawfully played, bet, etc., at a game of cards in the private residence of C., "said private residence being then and there occupied by a family, and said private residence being then and there one commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming," is sufficient. Floeckinger v. State, 45 App. 199, 75 S. W. 303.

An indictment for gaming with cards in a room which is a common resort for gaming does not charge gaming in a public place or house. Nail v. State (Cr. App.) 50 S. W. 704.

22. — Ownership or occupancy of house.—If the playing was in a house it need not be alleged who owned or occupied the house. Prior v. State, 4 Tex. 383; Wilson v. State, 5 Tex. 21; Sublett v. State, 9 Tex. 53; Sheppard v. State, 1 App. 304.

23. — Playing in general.—An indictment against two or more persons for playing cards, which charges them jointly, must allege that they played together.

Lewellen v. State, 18 Tex. 538; State v. Roderica, 35 Tex. 507; Galbreath v. State, 36 Tex. 200; Herron v. State, Id. 285; State v. Homan, 41 Tex. 155. Unless the indictment, by its averments, clearly shows that the defendants are indicted for separate offenses. Parker v. State, 26 Tex. 204. If the indictment be against one person only, it need not allege with whom he played. Johnson v. State, 36 Tex. 198; Day v. State, 27 App. 143, 11 S. W. 36. Or that he played with any one. State v. Shult, 41 Tex. 548.

24. — Playing at cards.—An allegation that accused "did play at a game of cards" is sufficient. Johnson v. State, 36 Tex. 198; State v. Mansker, 36 Tex. 365; State v. Shult, 41 Tex. 548.

25. — Betting money.—It is not necessary to give a description of the thing bet. Handy v. State, 49 App. 381, 92 S. W. 848; Herrin v. State, 50 App. 351, 97 S. W. 88.

An allegation that money was bet is not supported by proof that bank notes or property was bet. Hale v. State, 8 Tex. 171.

An indictment, which, after describing the public place, alleges that defendant did, then and there, in the house aforesaid, play at a game with cards with one M., upon the result of which said game a sum of money was then and there bet, to-wit: the sum of twenty-five cents, contrary, etc., is sufficient, without averring that defendant bet the money, or knew that it was bet. State v. Ward, 9 Tex. 370.

While it would have been sufficient for the information to allege that accused bet at a game of cards, without alleging that he bet money, where it specifically alleged that he bet money, it was necessary to prove such fact in order to avoid a variance. Melton v. State, 58 App. 86, 124 S. W. 910.

26. Evidence.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 783.

Evidence held not to sustain a conviction for unlawfully playing cards. Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 878; Bowen v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 306.

That a witness saw money on the table, where defendant and others were playing cards, is sufficient to authorize the jury to find that money was bet. Rice v. State, 10 Tex. 545.

Evidence that defendant played a game of poker at a schoolhouse supports the allegation of an unlawful game of cards not at a private residence. Inman v. State, 47 App. 609, 85 S. W. 796.

Where the evidence fails to show at what time the card playing occurred it is insufficient to support a conviction. Fallwell v. State, 48 App. 35, 85 S. W. 1069.

There being no direct evidence of card playing circumstantial evidence held insufficient to support a conviction. Ables v. State, 49 App. 292, 92 S. W. 414.

Evidence that but one game was played in a tent used as defendant's residence held insufficient to support a conviction. Spencer v. State, 49 App. 382, 92 S. W. 847.

Evidence showing that three or four games were played in which five or six parties indulged in defendant's residence and in which the two witnesses participated held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Herrin v. State, 50 App. 351, 97 S. W. 88.

On trial for gaming in an out house where people resort, evidence that accused, with three others, played a game of cards in a "seed-house," three others being present, and that, so far as witnesses knew, it was the only game ever played therein, without any evidence that people at any other time ever resorted there for any other purpose, is insufficient to support a conviction. Hopkins v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 975.

A conviction for playing cards in a gaming house is sustained by evidence that the room where the parties played was used for the purpose of gaming, and was fitted up with a regular poker outfit, and that there were "take-offs out of each pot" for the owner of the game. Wartelsky v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 1079.

Evidence that accused had before been convicted of gambling is inadmissible. Goldstein v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 289.

Evidence that money was bet on the game is admissible. Goldstein v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 289.

On a trial for playing at a game with cards in an outhouse, evidence that during the time covered by the indictment lights were frequently seen in said house, is admissible. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 747.

On a trial for gaming at a public place where people had assembled for amusement, evidence showing that whiskey was sold at the place is admissible as tending to show its public character. White v. State, 39 App. 269, 45 S. W. 702, 46 S. W. 825.

A question as to the value of poker chips used in the game, asked to show their market value, and not their value as representing money in the particular game, which gave the market value of the chips, is not admissible. Melton v. State, 58 App. 86, 124 S. W. 910.

27. Instructions.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 735; O'Brien v. State, 10 App. 544; Askey v. State, 15 App. 558; Bacchus v. State, 18 App. 15.

Art. 549. [380] What included in preceding article.—All houses commonly known as public, and all gaming-houses, are included within the meaning of the preceding article. Any room attached to such public house and commonly used for gaming, is also included, whether the same be kept closed or open. A private room of an inn or tavern is not within the meaning of public places, unless such room is commonly used for gaming; nor is a private business office or a private residence to be constructed as within the meaning of a public house or place; provided, said private residence shall not be a house for retailing spirituous liquors. [Act Feb. 11, 1866, pp. 97, 98.]

See notes to article 548, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 282.

Art. 550. [381] Offense complete without betting.—In prosecutions under the two preceding articles, it shall not be necessary for the state to prove that any money or article of value, or the representative of either, was bet at such game, when the prosecution is for playing cards at a house for retailing spirituous liquors, store house, tavern, inn or any other public place, or in any street, highway or other public place, or in any outhouse where people resort, or at any place except a private residence occupied by a family; provided, that nothing in this title shall be so construed as to prevent the playing of any game for amusement at a private residence occupied by a family. [Amended Act 1901, p. 26.]

See notes to article 548, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 282.

Art. 551. [382, 388a] Gaming table, bank, etc., keeping or exhibiting.—If any person shall, directly or as agent or employé for another or through any agent or agents, keep or exhibit, for the purpose of gaming, any policy game, any gaming table, bank, wheel or device of any name or description whatever, or any table, bank, wheel or device for the purpose of gaming, which has no name, or any slot machine, any pigeon hole table, any jenny lind table, ten pin alley or table or alley of any kind whatsoever, regardless of the name, or whether named or not, or of the number of pins, balls, or rings used for gaming, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than four years, regardless of whether any of the above mentioned games, tables, banks, alleys, wheels, devices or slot machines are licensed by law or not; provided, that any such alley, table, bank, wheel, machine or device shall be considered as used for gaming, if the table fees, alley fees, or money or anything of value is bet thereon. [Act 1905, ch. 22; Act 1907, p. 108; Act 1913, p. 277, ch. 137, §§ 1, 2.]

1. Explanatory.—Acts 1913, p. 277, ch. 137, §§ 1, 2, repeal "article 551, title 2 [11], chapter 4, of the Revised Criminal Statutes of the State of Texas, 1911," and declares that "article 558, of title 2 [11], chapter 4, shall be amended by re-numbering said article 551, to take the place of the repealed article."

2. Historical.—This article (Pen. Code 1911, art. 558) makes felonies the same acts made misdemeanors by Pen. Code 1911, art. 551. It followed said article 551 in the Code of 1911. It is in irreconcilable conflict with said art. 551, which, however, does not make both articles void. This article was passed later than said article 551, which was re-enacted in the Code of 1911 by mistake, repeals said article 551, and is the law now in force. Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505; Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713.

Unconstitutionality of prior amendatory act, see Hunt v. State, 22 App. 396, 3 S. W. 233; Wright v. State, 23 App. 313, 5 S. W. 117; Ford v. State, 23 App. 520, 5 S. W. 145.

3. Offense in general.—One who keeps or exhibits any kind of table or device for the purpose of gaming is guilty of a misdemeanor (under superseded and repealed article). Dalton v. State (Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 25.

That a game was played with dice at a private residence is not necessarily a defense to a prosecution under this article. Faucett v. State, 46 App. 113, 79 S. W. 548.

It is not necessary that the dealer or exhibitor should have any interest against the bettors. Dalton v. State (Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 27.

4. Continuing offense.—Exhibiting a gaming table or bank is not a continuous offense. Each act of exhibiting is a separate offense. It has not been decided, however, that keeping such table or bank is not a continuous offense. Kain v. State, 16 App. 282; Smith v. State, 28 App. 102, 12 S. W. 412.

5. Keeping.—“Keeping” is holding the table or bank in readiness for the purpose of obtaining bettors. Wolz v. State, 33 Tex. 331.

6. Exhibiting.—Exhibiting a gaming table or bank is a distinct offense from keeping a table for gaming. Kain v. State, 16 App. 282.

7. Game defined.—A game is a trial of skill, or of chance between two or more contending parties, according to some rule by which each one may fail or succeed in the trial; of skill, as chess or billiards; of chance, as raffle and simple lottery; of chance and skill combined, as backgammon, whist, faro, etc. Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692. See, also, Faucett v. State, 46 App. 113, 79 S. W. 548.

8. Gaming table or bank.—The constituent elements of a gaming table or bank are as follows:—it is a game; it has a keeper, dealer or exhibitor; it is based on the principle of the one against the many—the keeper, dealer or exhibitor against the bettors, directly or indirectly; and it must be exhibited, that is, displayed for the purpose of obtaining bettors. Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692; Lyle v. State, 30 App. 118, 16 S. W. 765, 28 Am. St. Rep. 893; Averheart v. State, 30 App. 651, 18 S. W. 416; Bell v. State, 32 App. 187, 22 S. W. 687; Shaw v. State, 35 App. 394, 33 S. W. 1078. Any change, cover, disguise, or subterfuge in any such ingredients, or in relation to the structure upon which the game is exhibited, or the instruments by which the result is developed, for the purpose of evasion, will not change the character of the game. It is difficult to imagine any species of table or bank, or gaming device resembling either, that is kept for gaming, that would not be included in the clauses of the Code. Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692. It matters not how the table or bank is constructed or operated if it is kept or exhibited for gaming purposes. Doyle v. State, 19 App. 410. Whether or not the table was designed for gaming purposes is immaterial—it is the game or character of play on it that determines its status. Estes v. State, 10 Tex. 300; Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692; Chappell v. State, 27 App. 310, 11 S. W. 411; Bird v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 738. Contra, see Whitney v. State, 10 App. 377; Smith v. State, 17 Tex. 191. An indictment will lie against any gaming table or bank, though it be not enumerated in the statute. Randolph v. State, 9 Tex. 521.

To constitute a “bank” there must be a fund of money offered and ready to be staked on all bets others may make against the banker, on the game which he keeps or exhibits. This element is the distinguishing feature between a bank and a gaming table, and is perhaps the only real difference between them. Webb v. State, 17 App. 205.

9. — Ten-pin alley.—One may be guilty of exhibiting or keeping a ten-pin alley on evidence showing that the players at the game contributed an equal amount towards the purchase of a knife, which was given to the player making the highest score, the keeper of the alley depending on the profit on the knife for his remuneration. Blades v. State, 43 App. 409, 66 S. W. 565.

10. — Poker game or table.—A poker game is not a banking game. Gillen v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 48. The dealer in a game of “senate poker,” a game played with cards on any flat surface, who takes no part in the game; but merely receives a percentage of the bets as his fees, and who gives “chips” in change for money, which are used in the betting, and which are cashed by him at the end of the game, is not exhibiting a gaming bank and table. Hairston v. State, 34 App. 346, 30 S. W. 811. A table upon which poker is played, having a hole in its center, into which the players put a chip for the proprietor when they hold certain hands, is not a gaming table, and its proprietor can not be convicted of keeping and exhibiting a gaming table. Lyle v. State, 30 App. 118, 16 S. W. 765, 28 Am. St. Rep. 893.

11. — Dice or crap game.—A game of “craps,” in which the exhibitor played the game as against the many, received the bets and paid the losses out of the bank fund which he kept before him on the table, is a banking game. Copeland v. State, 36 App. 576, 38 S. W. 189, reversing Bell v. State, 32 App. 187, 22 S. W. 687, and distinguishing Chappell v. State, 27 App. 310, 11 S. W. 411, in which it was held that a game called craps, played by one man throwing dice on a table, and betting on certain numbers, while another party bet against him, played on a flat surface, without the intervention of any third party, was not a game to be “played, dealt, kept, or exhibited,” and that where such a game was played in a saloon, an employé of the proprietor, who stood by and received fees from the players, was not guilty of keeping a gaming table; Faucett v. State, 46 App. 113, 79 S. W. 548. That the game of craps can be played without a table does not prevent a table specially designed for such game, and exhibited, from being a gaming table, though there are games which cannot be played without a table, and though the dealer in such games can take but one bet at a time, and the better throws the dice. Bell v. State, 32 App. 187, 22 S. W. 687. See, also, Shaw v. State, 35 App. 394, 33 S. W. 1078.

The proprietor of a saloon, keeping therein a table, on which dice are thrown for drinks and money, and on which games of dominoes are played, is not guilty of keeping and exhibiting a gaming table. Whitney v. State, 10 App. 377.

12. — Slot machine.—This article prohibits the keeping of a slot machine in which checks may be drawn for merchandise, even if no blanks are drawn. Lytle v. State (Cr. App.) 100 S. W. 1161.

13. — “Monte” game.—That in a prosecution for keeping and exhibiting, for the purpose of gaming, a gaming table and bank, where there was no question that, if monte was dealt or exhibited, it was for the purpose of obtaining bets, failure to charge that the banking or dealing of the game of monte at a place not usually resorted to for gaming is not a felony is not error. Morris v. State, 57 App. 163, 121 S. W. 1112.

14. — Grand Raffle.—“Grand raffle” contains all the elements of a gaming table or bank. Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692.

15. — Game of cards.—One having charge of an ordinary game of cards played on a blanket in a shed room to a barn, by negroes as an attachment to a negro dance, and at which money was bet, is not running a gambling house. Hanks v. State, 54 App. 1, 111 S. W. 402, 17 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1210.

16. — Billiard or pool table.—One who exhibits a billiard table, and who takes the bets of the players throwing dice, without himself throwing dice, is guilty of “exhibiting a gaming table.” Bird v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 738. One who keeps a table on which is played the game known as fifteen ball pool, the same being a billiard or pool table, the game being usually played on such table with the understanding that the loser was to pay for the drinks or cigars ordered from defendant’s bar, money also being bet on the game, is guilty of exhibiting a gaming table, but not guilty of exhibiting a bank. Webb v. State, 17 App. 205. Evidence that a game of pool was played on a pool table by several persons, with the understanding among themselves, to which defendants were not parties, that the loser should pay to defendants the sum of five cents for each cue used in the game, defendants in no way participating in the game, is insufficient to support a conviction for exhibiting a gaming table. Smith v. State, 28 App. 102, 12 S. W. 412.

17. — Part owner.—One who is a part owner of a table belonging to a gambling establishment, kept and exhibited for the purpose of gaming is guilty of keeping and exhibiting a gaming table, though not actually present at the time it was exhibited. Buchanan v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 339.

18. Occupation tax or license.—Under this article as it now stands (also under article 557) it is no defense to a prosecution that accused has paid the occupation tax and been granted a license. Blades v. State, 43 App. 409, 66 S. W. 565. See, also, Reeves v. State, 12 App. 199, and Parker v. State, 13 App. 213, holding to the same effect, under a prior occupation tax act, which, while authorizing a license to be granted, inhibited the exhibiting or betting at any of the prohibited games. Other decisions to the contrary, under prior laws are Houghton v. State, 41 Tex. 136; State v. Johnson, 41 Tex. 504; Longworth v. State, 41 Tex. 508; Chiles v. State, 1 App. 28; Harris v. State, 9 App. 308; Rutherford v. State, 39 App. 137, 45 S. W. 579; Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 66 S. W. 555; Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 66 S. W. 565.

In a prosecution for keeping and exhibiting, for the purpose of gaming, a gaming table and bank, the game being monte, failure to charge what is a banking game is not error; the statute expressly defining monte to be a banking game. Morris v. State, 57 App. 163, 121 S. W. 1112.

Art. 552. [383] Table or bank includes, what.—It being intended by the foregoing article to include every species of gaming device known by the name of table or bank, of every kind whatever, this provision shall be construed to include any and all games which in common language are said to be played, dealt, kept or exhibited.

See notes to article 551, ante.

Indictment.—Willson’s Cr. Forms, 289.

Art. 553. [384] Games specifically enumerated.—Lest any misapprehension should arise as to whether certain games are included within the meaning of the foregoing articles, it is declared that the following games are within the meaning and intention of said articles, viz.: Faro, monte, vingt et un, rouge et noir, roulette, A B C, chuck-a-luck, keno, pool and rondo; but the enumeration of these games specially shall not exclude any other properly within the meaning of the two preceding articles. Any game played for money upon a billiard table, or table resembling a billiard table, other than the game of billiards licensed by law, is punishable under the provisions of this chapter.

See notes to article 551, ante.

Indictment.—Willson’s Cr. Forms, 289, 290, 292.

Art. 554. [385] Indictment.—In any indictment or information for the class of offenses named in the three preceding articles, it is sufficient to state that the person accused kept a table or bank for gaming, or exhibited a table or bank for gaming, without giving the name or description thereof, and without stating that the table or bank, or gaming device, was without any name, or that the name was unknown.

Complaint, indictment, or information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 289. See, also, Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

— Allegations in general.—Where the table or bank exhibited is one specifically named in the statute, it is not necessary to allege in the indictment that it was kept or exhibited for the purpose of gaming. Wardlow v. State, 18 App. 356; Doyle v. State, 19 App. 410; Short v. State, 23 App. 312, 4 S. W. 903. If, however, the table or bank be not one specifically named, it must be alleged that it was kept and exhibited for gaming purposes. Ben v. State, 9 App. 107; Anderson v. State, 9 App. 177; Doyle v. State, 19 App. 410; Booth v. State, 26 Tex. 203; State v. Blair, 41 Tex. 30. The indictment need only follow the statute. Estes v. State, 10 Tex. 300; State v. Kelly, 24 Tex. 182; Polk v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 988. The latitude allowed by this article is not intended to be exclusive. Other modes of description equally as certain may be adopted. Estes v. State, 10 Tex. 300; State v. Kelly, 24 Tex. 182. An allegation that defendant "did unlawfully keep and exhibit a gaming table and bank, for the purpose of gaming," is sufficient. Campbell v. State, 2 App. 187; Parker v. State, 13 App. 213; Webb v. State, 17 App. 205; Perkins v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 341; Rabby v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 741; Moore v. State, 35 App. 74, 31 S. W. 649; Ranirez v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 278. On a trial for "keeping a cue alley table for the purpose of gaming," evidence that money, alley fees, or other things of value were bet on the cue alley, is properly admitted, without further allegations descriptive of the offense. State v. Howery, 41 Tex. 506.

— Joint or separate indictment.—Where more than one join in the commission of an offense, all or any number of them may be jointly indicted for it, or each may be separately indicted. An indictment charging that accused and M. "did unlawfully keep and exhibit a bank for gaming purposes is not objectionable. Webb v. State, 17 App. 205.

Duplicity.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 481.

Cited, Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

Art. 555. [386] Proof.—In prosecutions under articles 551, 552 and 553, it shall be sufficient to prove that any game therein mentioned was played, dealt or exhibited, without proving that money or other articles of value were won or lost thereon.

Evidence.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 783.

Where an indictment avers that accused kept and exhibited a gaming table in the city of D., such averment must be strictly proved, though it was not necessary to allege that the offense was committed in such city. Withers v. State, 21 App. 210, 17 S. W. 725.

Evidence that one, while a game was proceeding at a gaming table, from his position at the table, opposite the dealer, picked up the dice, and threw or handed them back to him, is sufficient to authorize a finding that he was exhibiting a game. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 871.

On a trial for keeping and exhibiting for gaming purposes a gaming table in a room, it is proper to permit a witness to describe the room where the alleged gambling took place, though he shows that there was a bar in the room where intoxicants were sold; there being no effort to prove that accused sold intoxicants in violation of law. Bird v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 738.

— Accomplice testimony.—See notes under Code Cr. Proc. art. 801.

— Reputation of accused.—In a prosecution for keeping and exhibiting a gaming table, evidence offered by the accused to prove his reputation as an industrious, hard-working man was properly excluded as it was not an issue in the case. Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505.

— Sufficiency.—Cited, Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

Evidence held sufficient to support conviction. Gomprecht v. State, 36 App. 434, 37 S. W. 734; Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 39 S. W. 662; Dalton v. State (Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 27; Morris v. State, 57 App. 163, 121 S. W. 1112. Evidence held insufficient to support a conviction. Wells v. State, 22 Tex. App. 18, 2 S. W. 609; Erwin v. State, 25 App. 330, 8 S. W. 276; Polly v. State, 33 App. 410, 26 S. W. 727; Spriggs v. State, 58 App. 191, 125 S. W. 27.

Art. 556. [387] "Played," "dealt" and "exhibited" defined.—The words "played" and "dealt" have the meaning attached to them in common language. The word "exhibited" is intended to signify the act of displaying the bank or game for the purpose of obtaining bettors.

See notes to article 551, ante.

Art. 557. [388] Gaming table, bank, etc., betting at.—If any person shall bet or wager at any gaming table, or bank, or pigeon hole, or jenny lind table, or nine or ten-pin alley, such as are mentioned in the six preceding articles, or shall bet or wager any money or other thing of value at any of the games included in the six preceding articles, or at any of the following games, viz.: Poker-dice, jack-pot, high-dice, high-die, low-dice, low-die, dominoes, euchre with dominoes, poker with dominoes, sett with dominoes, muggins, crack-loo, crack-or-loo, or the game of matching money or coins of any denomination for such coins, or for other things of value, or at any game of any character whatever that can be played with cards, dice, or dominoes, or at any table, bank or alley, by whatsoever name the same may be known, or whether named or not, and without reference as to how the same may be played, and without reference as to how the same may be constructed or operated, or shall bet or wager upon anything in any place where people resort for the purpose of betting or wagering, he shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars; provided, no person shall be indicted under this article for playing said games with dominoes or cards at a private residence occupied by a family, unless same is commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming; and provided, further, that no banking game played with cards or dominoes shall be exempted from the provisions of this chapter on account of being played at a private residence occupied by a family; and provided, further, that for betting on any gaming table or bank, the court or jury may, in addition to said fine, impose a jail penalty of not less than ten nor more than thirty days. 1. Constitutionality.—Act March 28, 1907 (Acts 30th Leg. c. 49, amending this article is not unconstitutional on the ground that its provisions are not expressed in the title. Singleton v. State, 53 App. 625, 111 S. W. 737; Simons v. State, 56 App. 339, 120 S. W. 210.

This article does not discriminate against the negro race, because it permits card playing—a white man's game—while it wholly prohibits craps, which is a negro game. Sparks v. State, 64 App. 610, 142 S. W. 1183.

2. Repeal.—Act March 28, 1907 (Acts 30th Leg. c. 49), of which this article is a part repealed articles 382, 389, and 390 of the Code of 1895, notwithstanding their inclusion in the Revision of 1911 as articles 551, 572, and 573. Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713.

3. Betting in general.—A bet is the mutual agreement and tender of a gift of something valuable, which is to belong to the one or the other of the contracting parties, according to the result of the trial of chance or skill, or both combined. Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692; Long v. State, 22 App. 194, 2 S. W. 541, 53 Am. Rep. 633. The rules of the game constitute the terms of the agreement, and define the contingency upon which one or the other is to receive the gift. The staking of money or property, besides being a tender, is an ostensible adoption or sanction of the agreement. Stearnes v. State, 21 Tex. 692. Betting, of itself, is not a violation of law. It is the betting at games, tables, or banks, which are inhibited that constitutes the offense denounced by the preceding article. Houghton v. State, 41 Tex. 136; Chiles v. State, 1 App. 28. It is not an offense to bet at a game unless something of value is bet. Portwood v. State, 71 App. 447, 160 S. W. 345. A bet may be made by acts without words. Emmons v. State, 34 App. 98, 29 S. W. 474, 475; Rainbolt v. State, 51 App. 153, 101 S. W. 217.

Where accused was charged with betting on a banking game, evidence that he, as keeper of the bank, bet with a player that he (the player) had made a bad bet against the bank, the charge was not sustained by the evidence, since the bet was a bet by the keeper of the bank against a player, and not against the bank, and the keeper was guilty of exhibiting a bank, but not of betting against it, as charged in the indictment. Askey v. State, 20 App. 443.

There is no distinction between playing and betting, and, when it is charged that an accused "played" at cards, it means that he was betting, or, if it was a banking game, that he exhibited it for the purpose of obtaining bets, and generally the word has such meaning in statutes with reference to gaming. Purvis v. State, 62 App. 302, 137 S. W. 701, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 536.

4. Betting for drinks.—Betting for drinks of liquor is in effect a betting of money. Bachelor v. State, 10 Tex. 258. Where accused and another played for the drinks on a pool table, and the loser paid for the drinks, but there was no prior agreement that he should do so, there is a betting on a gaming table. Dunbar v. State, 34 App. 596, 31 S. W. 401.

5. Paying table fees.—Paying of "table fees" is also a betting. Tuttle v. State, 1 App. 365; Vanwey v. State, 41 Tex. 639; Humphreys v. State, 34 App. 434, 30 S. W. 1066; Hall v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 122. But evidence that accused, the loser in a game of pool, paid the fees for use of the table, and that this was the general custom, is insufficient to sustain a conviction for gaming, in the absence of evidence of knowledge of such custom on accused's part. Ellis v. State, 58 App. 319, 125 S. W. 892.

6. Betting at crack loo.—Betting at "crack loo" is prohibited by this article though it is not played with dice or dominoes. Donathan v. State, 43 App. 427, 66 S. W. 781.

7. Playing pin pool.—One may be convicted of playing pin pool without proof that he actually put up money, where it is shown that the game required the pool played for to be made by the persons playing for it by putting up a certain amount of money, and that he was playing when the pool was up. Cohen v. State, 17 Tex. 142.

8. Raffle.—A raffle for a gun of the value of seven dollars, played with dice at a saloon, was held to be an unlawful betting within the purview of said act. It does not make any difference whether such betting or raffle be for religious, benevolent, or profane purposes. Long v. State, 22 App. 194, 2 S. W. 541, 58 Am. Rep. 633.

9. Betting at game played with dice.—It is an offense to bet on any game played with dice, wherever played. Day v. State, 27 App. 143, 11 S. W. 36; Bowles v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 626; Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 226. By whatever name the game is known. Day v. State, 27 App. 143, 11 S. W. 36. This includes a private residence, though it is occupied by a private family, and is not commonly resorted to for purpose of gaming. Bowles v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 626; Knowles v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 777. Contra, Borders v. State, 24 App. 333, 6 S. W. 532; Stewart v. State, 34 App. 33, 28 S. W. 806; Borders v. State (Cr. App.) 66 S. W. 1103; Barton v. State, 50 App. 161, 95 S. W. 111; Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 96 S. W. 1085; Marks v. State, 51 App. 218, 101 S. W. 805. These cases were decided on the law as it was prior to the amendment of 1907.

Where the evidence showed that defendant threw all the dice, stood behind the table and took all the bets, it has been held that the game was a banking game, defendant was the dealer, and could not be convicted of betting at a game with dice. Shaw v. State, 35 App. 394, 33 S. W. 1078. On trial for betting at a game with dice commonly called "craps," it makes no difference whether it was a banking or table game or not, if he bet it was a violation of the law. Thompson v. State, 37 App. 227, 38 S. W. 785, 39 S. W. 298.

10. — Distinct offenses.—Each separate act of betting at a game played with dice constitutes a distinct offense. The consecutive throwing of dice from nightfall until daybreak does not constitute a continuous game, and the consecutive betting on the different throws does not constitute a continuous offense. Day v. State, 27 App. 143, 11 S. W. 36; Kain v. State, 16 App. 282.

11. Betting at game of cards.—Under this article (as amended by Acts 30th Leg. c. 49, Acts 1907, p. 107) it is an offense to bet on a game of cards, without reference to where the game is played. Hence, it is an offense to bet at a game of cards in a private residence, though it is occupied by a private family, and is not commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming. Purvis v. State, 52 App. 342, 107 S. W. 55; Singleton v. State, 53 App. 625, 111 S. W. 736; Vinson v. State, 58 App. 47, 124 S. W. 652.

That defendant and another were sitting opposite each other at a table on which was some money and a deck of cards, is insufficient to sustain a conviction for betting at a game of cards played at a private residence. Purvis v. State, 62 App. 302, 137 S. W. 701, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 536.

12. Playing at game of cards in private residence.—Under this article, construed with article 548, ante, the playing of cards in a private residence is an offense only when there is betting, and when the house is used as a resort for gaming. Purvis v. State, 62 App. 302, 137 S. W. 701, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 536.

It is only games played with cards and dominoes that are not offenses when played at a private residence occupied by a family. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 226.

See, also, notes to article 548, ante.

13. Playing game with cards at private residence.—The place at which defendant, a bachelor and farmer, played cards, a house occupied by him alone, except that a man, who was a stone mason, was stopping with him, was not a "private residence occupied by a family," within the exception to the gaming law. Robbins v. State, 57 App. 8, 121 S. W. 504.

14. Place commonly resorted to for gaming.—Where defendant was convicted for gaming in a dugout, a place commonly resorted to for gaming purposes, it was immaterial that the place was also used for other purposes, such as the sale of liquors at retail. Reeves v. State, 34 App. 147, 29 S. W. 786.

15. License or occupation tax.—See note to article 551, ante.

16. Complaint, indictment or information.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481; Willson's Cr. Forms, 290, 291.

17. — Bet in general.—An allegation that defendant "bet," includes the averment that the betting was something of value, and it is not necessary to allege what was bet, or that it was something of value. Long v. State, 22 App. 194, 2 S. W. 541, 58 Am. Rep. 633. See, also, Harrison v. State 15 Tex. 239.

18. — Betting at game played with dice.—An indictment for betting at a game played with dice need not allege that accused played the game with, or bet at the game with, another person. Day v. State, 27 App. 143, 11 S. W. 36.

An indictment for betting at a game played with dice commonly called "craps" is not objectionable on the ground that, as the game was a banking game, the indictment should have been for betting at a banking game. Thompson v. State, 37 App. 227, 38 S. W. 785, 39 S. W. 298.

19. — Betting at game of cards.—An information by a county attorney, upon affidavit attached, presenting that defendant unlawfully bet at a game of cards at a place not then and there a private residence occupied by a family, and that affiant had reason to believe and did believe that defendant then played at cards at a place not then and there a private residence, is defective, in that it does not present to the court that accused had violated a law, but only that some affiant charged him with committing the offense. Zinn v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 825.

20. — Playing pool.—An indictment charging one with betting at a game called "pool" is sufficient. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 684.

21. — Negating exceptions.—Since it is an offense to bet on any game played with dice, wherever played, an allegation, in an information charging accused with betting on a game played with dice called "craps," at a party's private residence, that such private residence was commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming is surplusage, and need not be proved. Bowles v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 626. Under the old law it was necessary to negative that the game was played at a private residence. Colchell v. State, 23 App. 584, 5 S. W. 139; Borders v. State (Cr. App.) 66 S. W. 1103.

An indictment for betting at monte need not allege that the betting was not at a private residence occupied by a family. Mares v. State, 71 App. 303, 158 S. W. 1130.

22. Evidence.—Where the state proved that accused bet on a game of cards, and he introduced no evidence, a conviction of gaming was supported by the evidence. Coots v. State, 57 App. 276, 122 S. W. 543. Evidence held not to sustain a conviction for gaming. Lucas v. State, 57 App. 198, 122 S. W. 387.

Evidence that "checks" were used in betting is sufficient, without any further evidence that the checks represented money, or other property. Walton v. State, 14 Tex. 381.

Proof of betting money by accused upon the game charged to have been played upon the table is sufficient proof, as against the party charged with the betting, that the table was at the time kept or exhibited for gaming. Ramey v. State, 14 Tex. 409.

Evidence that a witness saw accused betting at faro, at the place charged in the indictment, within the county, within one year before the finding of the indictment, is sufficient, although the witness could not state what was bet, whether money, property, or the representative of either, although he was positive that the bank was exhibited for gaming. Harrison v. State, 15 Tex. 239.

The state must prove that the offense was committed within one year prior to the presentment of the indictment. Manning v. State, 35 Tex. 723.

Evidence in a prosecution for betting at dice held to sustain a conviction. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 226.

23. — Venue.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 257.

Art. 558. [388a] Amended by renumbering the article 551. See art. 551, and note thereunder.

Art. 559. [388b] Keeping or renting for.—If any person shall rent to another, or shall keep or be in any manner interested in keeping, any premises, building, room or place for the purpose of being used as a place to bet or wager, or to gamble with cards, dice, dominoes, or to keep or exhibit for the purpose of gaming, any bank, table, alley, machine, wheel or device whatsoever, or as a place where people resort to gamble, bet or wager upon anything whatever, or shall knowingly permit property or premises of which he is owner, or which is under his control, to be so used, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than four years, regardless of whether any of the above mentioned games, tables, banks, alleys, machines, wheels or devices, or things, are licensed by law or not; and any place or device shall be considered as used for gaming or to gamble with or for betting or wagering, if any fees, money, or anything of value is bet thereon, or if the same is resorted to for the purpose of gaming or betting. [Act 1907, p. 108.]

1. Constitutionality.—Act 30th Leg. c. 49, of which this article is a part, held to comply with Const. art. 3, § 38, requiring the presiding officers of each house to sign bills when passed after their titles have been publicly read and the fact of signing to be entered on the journals. Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759; Knox v. State, 62 App. 512, 138 S. W. 787. In the above cited cases it was held that said constitutional provision did not require the journals of the two houses to affirmatively show what the title of the bill was or that the full title thereof was read. Act 30th Leg. c. 49, of which this article is a part, does not, by making it an offense to wager money at cards, contravene Const. art. 3, § 35, providing that no bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title. Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759; Knox v. State, 62 App. 512, 138 S. W. 787.

2. Repeal.—This article was not repealed by the vagrancy act of 1909 (Acts 31st Leg. c. 59), articles 634-640, post. Austin v. State (Cr. App.) 135 S. W. 1167; Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759; Goodwin v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 939.

Acts 30th Leg. c. 49 (Acts March 28, 1907), of which this article is a part, repeals articles 382, 389, and 390 of the Code of 1895, notwithstanding their inclusion in the Revision of 1911 as articles 551, 572, and 573. Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713; Williams v. State, 71 App. 6, 159 S. W. 732 (overruling Simons v. State, 56 App. 339, 120 S. W. 210).

3. Keeping room for use as place to bet, etc.—It is not necessary to show that accused was the owner or proprietor of the room kept. And it is no defense that the principal use of the room is lawful. Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759.

4. Keeping gaming devices.—Where rented premises are used for gambling purposes by a sublessee, with the lessee's knowledge and consent, the lessee may be convicted as a keeper of gambling devices. Strong v. State, 70 App. 89, 156 S. W. 656.

5. Resort for gaming.—Where a person opens a house under his control and permits persons to gather there and gamble without invitation, it becomes a "resort for gambling." Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 313. It must appear that people resorted to the place for gambling and engaged in gambling after resorting there, with the knowledge and consent of the keeper. Moore v. State, 62 App. 326, 137 S. W. 690. Where accused rented premises used as a restaurant and pool hall, and permitted negroes to assemble therein to throw dice, he being present and taking a commission from the games, a prosecution is properly brought under this article. Goodwin v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 939.

6. Nature of place kept.—An "appurtenant" is not a portion of the principal thing, but is something belonging or pertaining to something else which is its principal. So, where a game of cards was played in a part of a saloon, and not in an appurtenant thereto, a conviction could not be supported. Ballew v. State, 26 App. 483, 9 S. W. 765.

7. Nature of device kept or used.—In a prosecution for permitting betting on dominoes in a public house under defendant's control, it is not error to refuse an instruction for acquittal if defendant did not keep a table and dominoes specially for gaming purposes. Humphreys v. State, 34 App. 434, 30 S. W. 1066.

8. Permitting property under control to be used, etc.—The offense of permitting gaming to be carried on may be proven without showing that accused kept the place in question as a gambling house, or that it was kept for the purpose of using it as such, although this article makes that an offense. The words "was used" not relating back to and making it necessary, in order to commit the offense of knowingly permitting the property to be used for gaming, that it shall also be kept as a gambling house, but applying to that part of the article making it an offense to keep property or premises to be used as a gaming place, so as to make that a distinct and separate offense. Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713. In a trial of a tenant for knowingly permitting his subtenant to use the leased premises for gambling purposes, instructions were proper and sufficient which, taken in a whole, required the jury to find that the premises were used for gambling purposes with the defendant's knowledge and permission before finding him guilty, and further required that they acquit the defendant if they had a reasonable doubt upon the question of whether he rented the premises to be used as a barber shop, and did not know they were being used for gaming purposes. De Los Santos v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 919. Where a room in a saloon is rented to a third party for gaming purposes, the owner of the saloon is guilty of permitting gaming on his premises. Rankin v. State, 42 App. 1, 56 S. W. 929.

The act of a person in engaging with others in gambling on premises under his control constitutes permission to the others to gamble. And where an unmarried man takes possession of a private house, by permission or otherwise, during the owner's absence, and permits gambling therein, he is guilty of unlawfully permitting property under his control to be used as a resort for gambling. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 313.

9. Control of building, etc.—One cannot be convicted of permitting a game of monte to be played in a house under his control, where it is shown that the game was played during the occupancy of the house by a tenant who was then in possession and carried the keys. Kimbrough v. State, 25 App. 397, 8 S. W. 476. One could not be convicted of permitting a game of cards to be played upon his premises, on evidence that the premises had been rented to, and was under the control of, another, although he might be convicted of renting the premises to another to be used as a place for playing, etc. Nairn v. State, 18 App. 260; Borchers v. State, 31 App. 517, 21 S. W. 192.

The word "control" has the meaning of "manage," and a party may be in control who was neither a tenant nor an owner. Defendant, who rented and had control of the second floor and the control of a door thereto from the ground floor, and of a room on the second floor which was the only access to an attic reached by a ladder, and who knew that from day to day and from month to month and both day and night many negroes congregated in the attic, and was frequently in the attic and knew gambling was going on there, and was himself in charge of games, and from time to time stopped gambling there, was in such "control" of the place that he might be convicted of those offenses. Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713. One who rents the whole of a building and uses a part of it and sublets other parts is in control of the whole building within the meaning of the gaming laws. De Los Santos v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 919.

Though a lease of rooms restricts their use to a particular purpose, the lessor does not thereby retain any control over them, which renders it his duty to prevent their use for illegal gaming. Robinson v. State, 24 Tex. 152.

10. Continuing offense.—In a prosecution for keeping a room for the purpose of being used as a place to gamble with cards, the state is not confined to one particular case of such use; the offense charged being a continuous one, and the state being entitled to show many and continuous acts of gambling in the particular room. Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759.

11. Indictment or information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 295-297. See, also, Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

12. — Renting premises, etc.—An indictment alleging that accused unlawfully rented to another a house to be used as a place for "playing games with cards, dice, and dominoes, and dealing and exhibiting faro monte, and other games inhibited by law," is insufficient in that it does not allege that the house is any one of the houses inhibited by the statute for the playing at games with cards, nor that, as to dice and dominoes, it is not a private residence, nor that the banking and table games were kept and exhibited for the purpose of gaming. Eylar v. State, 37 App. 257, 39 S. W. 665.

13. — Keeping and being interested in keeping, etc.—An indictment charging defendant with keeping and being interested in keeping certain premises for the purpose of being used as a place to bet with cards and dice charges an offense under the laws of the state. Polk v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 907. An indictment charged that accused, on September 5, 1907, in T. county, did unlawfully keep, and was then and there interested in keeping, a building, room, or place to be used as a place to bet, wager, and gamble with cards, and was then and there interested in the keeping of such building, etc., where people resorted for that purpose. Another count charged that defendant, in the same place, on the same day, did unlawfully and knowingly permit the building, room, and place which was then and there under his control to be used as a place to bet, wager, and gamble with cards, and as a place where people resorted for that purpose. Held, that such counts stated an offense under this article. Razor v. State, 57 App. 10, 121 S. W. 512.

14. — Permitting premises under control to be used, etc.—An indictment for permitting property under the defendant's control to be used as a resort for gambling, need not describe the premises, further than to say that it is a house under defendant's control, or allege that the house was a public place, or name the games played therein. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 313. An indictment for permitting premises to be used as a "place to keep and exhibit for the purposes of gaming a gaming table and bank," is not insufficient because it fails to describe the kinds of table or bank. De Los Santos v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 919.

A count in an indictment charging that defendant unlawfully and knowingly permitted property under his control to be used as a place to gamble with cards, and a count charging that he knowingly permitted property under his control to be used as a place where people resorted to gamble with cards, sufficiently charges a violation of so much of this article as makes it an offense to keep any place for use as a place to gamble or as a place where people resort to gamble. Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713.

15. — Permitting gaming, etc.—It is not necessary to aver that money or property was bet on the game. McGaffey v. State, 4 Tex. 156; Bosshard v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 207; State v. Flores, 33 Tex. 444. Contra, Johnson v. State, 34 App. 227, 29 S. W. 1083. Nor is it necessary to name the persons who played. McGaffey v. State, 4 Tex. 156. Nor is it necessary to name the particular game played. State v. Ake, 9 Tex. 322; Horan v. State, 24 Tex. 161.

The house in which the gaming must be permitted must be alleged to be one of those inhibited by the statute. Wallace v. State, 12 App. 479. Contra, Nairn v. State, 18 App. 260. An indictment charging accused with "unlawfully permitting a game with dice to be played and bet at a house under his control," the said "house being then and there a public place, to wit, a house for retailing spirituous liquors," is good. Robinson v. State, 24 App. 4, 5 S. W. 509. See, also, Ballew v. State, 26 App. 483, 9 S. W. 765; Galloway v. State (Cr. App.) 26 S. W. 67. An information charging accused with unlawfully permitting a game of cards to be played upon his premises, the said house being then and there appurtenant to a public place, to-wit, a house for retailing spirituous liquors, is sufficient. Borchers v. State, 31 App. 517, 21 S. W. 192.

A house for retailing spirituous liquors is a public house, and an indictment for permitting cards to be played in such house is not bad because the letter "e" is left off of "public;" the words "a publi place" could be eliminated and the indictment still be sufficient. Williams v. State, 35 App. 391, 33 S. W. 1080.

16. — Gambling.—An indictment charging that "defendant did unlawfully and knowingly keep a room in the Star hotel to be used for gambling, and did knowingly permit said room to be used for gambling," held bad, because the word "gambling," was not used in the code as indicating any of the gaming prohibited, and as being too general. State v. Bullion, 42 Tex. 77.

17. Evidence.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 783.

18. — Keeping or maintaining room, etc.—Evidence held sufficient to support a conviction for keeping a gaming resort. Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 133 S. W. 759; Knox v. State, 62 App. 512, 133 S. W. 787; Goodwin v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 939; Boswell v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 432; Robertson v. State, 70 App. 307, 159 S. W. 713.

In a prosecution for keeping a gambling room, evidence that witnesses had seen gambling carried on at the place many times within six weeks immediately before the offense relied on for conviction was claimed to have occurred was admissible, under the rule that evidence of acts of control, ownership, and direction by accused of the place where the gambling was done, both before and immediately after the time charged in the indictment, is admissible to prove the offense charged. So, also, evidence that a deputy sheriff, in raiding the room, found several persons there playing poker while sitting at a table with chips in front of them, and that K., who was co-operating with accused, was there cashing chips, but that defendant was not there, together with a description of the table and a washstand in which chips and cards were found, is admissible. Razor v. State, 57 App. 10, 121 S. W. 512.

19. — Permitting house under control, etc.—To warrant a conviction for permitting a banking game to be exhibited in defendant's house it is not necessary to prove an express authority or liberty given by defendant. It is sufficient to show that he permitted it to be done, that is, knowing the game was being exhibited in his house, he tacitly acquiesced in its being done. Robinson v. State, 15 Tex. 311. But it is not sufficient to merely prove that the house was owned by defendant. There must be evidence, either positive or presumptive, that defendant permitted the game. Harris v. State, 5 Tex. 11.

Evidence held to sustain a finding that defendant permitted a house under his control to be used as a resort for gambling, etc. De Los Santos v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 919; Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 313.

On indictment for permitting a game of cards to be played in his store room, it is not incumbent on the state to prove the permission expressly. The other facts being proved, the permission will be presumed, unless accused adduces proof to negative the presumption. McGaffey v. State, 4 Tex. 156.

Where, on an indictment for permitting a game of dice to be played in a house under accused's control, the said house being a public place commonly resorted to for the purpose of gaming, the evidence showed the playing of but a single game of dice, and there was no other proof that the house was a public place, a conviction can not be had. Fossett v. State, 18 App. 330.

An indictment for permitting a game at cards to be played on premises appurtenant to a house for retailing liquors, a deed of conveyance to defendant is admissible to show ownership in him. But where such a deed has been introduced in evidence to show such ownership, evidence by one of the grantors that defendant was not present when the deed was signed, that it was not delivered to him, that he did not pay the grantor anything, or that he had any knowledge of the deed other than that derived from the indictment is improperly excluded. Biles v. State, 25 App. 441, 8 S. W. 650.

An indictment for permitting a game of cards to be played upon accused's premises, the said premises then and there being appurtenances to a public place, to-wit a house for retailing spirituous liquors, is not supported by evidence that the playing was in a room which was a part of a saloon. Nor can a conviction be had where all the witnesses testified that they did not know whether the premises belonged to accused. Ballew v. State, 26 App. 483, 9 S. W. 765.

Where, on a prosecution for permitting betting on dominoes played in a public house under defendant's control, it appears that defendant has not only knowingly permitted the gaming, but has himself participated in the games, it is not error to exclude evidence that defendant had a rule not to allow betting on dominoes. Humphreys v. State, 34 App. 434, 30 S. W. 1066.

One may not be convicted of permitting gaming in a house under his control on evidence that there was gaming on the third floor of a building leased by defendant's firm, defendant having no knowledge of any gambling. Brown v. State, 49 App. 419, 93 S. W. 723.

In a trial for permitting gambling on premises under defendant's control, evidence that one night shortly before the grand jury met he requested that gambling stop did not present the issue that the gambling took place without his consent, where it appeared that he engaged in the games on all prior occasions. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 313.

20. Instructions.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 735.

Cited, Austin v. State (Cr. App.) 135 S. W. 1167; Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286; Dunn v. State, 72 App. 170, 161 S. W. 467; Hodges et al. v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 697.

On trial for permitting a prohibited game to be played in a house under the control of accused, it was error to instruct the jury to convict if they found that the room in which the gaming was done had been leased by accused to another for a gaming house, since the offense for which accused was on trial is a distinct offense from that of renting a room, etc., for use for playing, etc. Nairn v. State, 18 App. 260.

Where on a trial for keeping a gambling house the state showed that accused's house was resorted to for gambling, and that gambling was carried on there, and accused contradicted the state's evidence, and showed that if gambling was carried on he did not know it, the refusal to charge that to convict accused the jury must believe that he kept the house for the purpose of gambling or knowingly permitted the house to be used for that purpose, was error. Moore v. State, 62 App. 326, 157 S. W. 690.

In a prosecution for keeping a room as a place in which to gamble with cards, the refusal of requested charges that "kept for the purpose of gambling" means the chief purpose, and that the accused must have been personally interested in keeping, or have been the proprietor of, the room in question, if error, was harmless. Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759.

Art. 560. [338c] Betting at places resorted to.—If any person shall bet or wager at any gaming table or bank, or other thing, mentioned in this law, or shall bet or wager upon anything in any place to which people resort for the purpose of betting or wagering, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars; provided, that where the conviction is for betting at any gaming table or bank, the court or jury may, in addition to said fine, impose a jail penalty of not less than ten nor more than thirty days. [Id., p. 108.]

Betting.—See notes to article 557, ante.

Art. 561. [388d] Persons equipping gaming house.—If any person shall, in any manner, aid in equipping or furnishing any gaming house, or place where people resort for the purpose of gaming, wagering or betting, he shall be punished by confinement in the county jail for a period of not less than thirty nor more than ninety days. Art. 562. [388e] Persons permitting device on premises.—If any person shall knowingly permit any gaming paraphernalia, table, or device or equipment of a gaming house, of any character whatever, to remain in his possession or on premises under his control or of which he is owner, and to be used for gaming purposes, he shall be punished by confinement in the county jail for a period of not less than thirty days nor more than one year. [Id., p. 109.]

An indictment charging accused with permitting a game in a prohibited place should specify some inhibited game. Meyers v. State, 41 App. 508, 55 S. W. 818.

Art. 563. [388f] Persons going in gaming house.—If any person shall go into or remain in any gambling house, knowing the same to be such, or shall remain in any place where any of the games prohibited by this act or, within his knowledge, being played, dealt or exhibited, he shall be punished by a fine or not less than twenty-five nor more than fifty dollars. Gambling house and gaming house, as used in this law, is meant any place where people resort for the purpose of gaming, betting or wagering. [Id., p. 109.]

Constitutionality.—This article is not violative of Const. art. 1, § 3, providing that all men when they form a social compact have equal rights, etc., nor of article 4, § 2, nor of art. 3, § 35, section 1 of the fourteenth amendment of the federal Constitution. Barfield v. State, 62 App. 400, 137 S. W. 920.

Place.—The "place" referred to in this article means a place in which gaming is being conducted in a sense continuously, and does not embrace a dwelling house in which a prohibited game is played for the time being, and is not shown to be a place to which people resort for the purpose of gaming. Hence a person remaining in a private dwelling house, not shown to be a place frequented for the purpose of gaming, while a prohibited game was being played therein, is guilty of no offense. Walters v. State, 58 App. 240, 125 S. W. 11.

Complaint and information.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447–481.

A complaint and information charging that defendant unlawfully and knowingly went into and remained at a place where a game of cards was being played, which was not a private residence occupied by a family, and he knew that the game was being played, etc., sufficiently charges an offense under this article. Barfield v. State, 62 App. 400, 137 S. W. 920.

Evidence.—See Code Cr. Proc. art. 783.

Cited, Austin v. State, 61 App. 573, 135 S. W. 1167; Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

On a trial under an information charging, in two counts, that accused played cards at a place other than a private residence occupied by a family, and that he knowingly went into and remained at a place where a game of cards was being played, evidence held sufficient to support a conviction for going into and remaining at a place where cards were being played. Sloan v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 156.

Art. 564. [388g] Officers to suppress same.—Whenever it shall come to the knowledge of any sheriff, constable, police officer or other peace officer, by affidavit of a reputable citizen, or otherwise, that any of the provisions of this law are being violated, it shall be the duty of such officer to immediately avail himself of all lawful means to suppress such violation; and he shall be authorized, by any search warrant that is issued by virtue of this law, to enter any house, room or place to be searched, using such force as may be necessary to accomplish such purpose. Art. 565. [388h] When justice to issue search warrant.—Upon the filing with any justice of the peace, county or district judge, or any other magistrate, of an affidavit in writing, made by a reputable citizen, that gaming, betting or wagering, as prohibited by this law, is being conducted in any building, room, premises or place, describing the same sufficiently for identification, it shall be the duty of such officer, with whom said affidavit is filed, to immediately issue a warrant, commanding the peace officer to whom same is directed, to immediately enter and search such building, room, premises or place, and in the event the same is a gaming house, as defined in this law, to arrest all parties found therein, or making their escape therefrom, and to take possession of any gambling paraphernalia, device or equipment found therein; and it shall be the duty of such officer to immediately take the persons arrested before the nearest magistrate, and lodge the proper complaint against each person so arrested. Art. 566. [388i] Gambling house public nuisance.—The existence of any gambling house, or gaming table, or bank, or gaming paraphernalia, or device of whatever kind or character, and all equipments of such gambling house, is hereby declared to be against public policy, and the same is hereby declared to be a public nuisance; and no suit shall be brought or maintained in any of the courts of this state for the recovery of same, or for any insurance thereon, or for damages by reason of any injury to or for the destruction of same. Art. 567. [388j] Used for, terminates lease.—The use of any house, property or premises, by any tenant or lessee for any purpose, made unlawful by this law, shall terminate all rights and interests of such tenant or lessee in same, and shall entitle the owner thereof to the immediate possession of said house, property or premises. [Id., p. 110.]

Termination of lease.—Cited, Austin v. State, 61 App. 573, 135 S. W. 1167.

This article operates to terminate a lease to a sublessee who uses the premises for gambling purposes, and, if the illegal use be with the lessee's knowledge and consent, the lessee is punishable under article 559, punishing the keeper of gambling devices. Strong v. State, 70 App. 89, 156 S. W. 656.

Art. 568. [388k] Officers to seize gaming tables.—It shall be the duty of every sheriff, constable, police officer or other peace officer, by virtue of the warrant authorized by this act, to seize and take into his possession all gaming tables, devices and other equipments or paraphernalia of gambling houses, the existence of which has come to his knowledge, and to immediately file with the justice of the peace, county judge or district judge, a list in writing of the property seized, and shall designate the place where same was seized, and the owner of same, or person from whom possession was taken. Thereupon it shall be the duty of said justice of the peace, county or district judge, to note same upon his docket, and to issue, or cause the clerk of the court to issue, a notice in writing to the owner or person in whose possession the articles seized were found, commanding him to appear at a designated time, not earlier than five days from the service of such notice, and show cause why such articles should not be destroyed. If personal service can not be had upon the person to whom same is directed, a copy of said notice shall be posted for not less than five days, either upon the court house door of the county where the proceedings are begun or upon the building or premises from which the property seized was taken. Art. 569. [388l] Same destroyed by order of court.—If, upon a hearing of the matter referred to in the preceding section, the justice of the peace, county judge or district judge, before whom the cause is pending, shall determine that the property seized is a gaming table, or bank, or is used as equipment or paraphernalia for a gambling house, and was being used for gaming purposes, he shall order same to be destroyed; but any part of same may, by order of the court, be held as evidence to be used in any prosecution or case until the prosecution or case is finally disposed of. Property not of that character or not so used shall be ordered returned to the person entitled to possession of the same. It shall be the duty of the officer, within not less than fifteen nor more than thirty days from the entry of said order, to destroy all property, the destruction of which has been ordered by the court, unless the owner, lessee or person entitled to possession under this law, shall, before the destruction of said property, file a suit to recover same. Art. 570. [388m] Persons interested in, rights of.—Any person having interest in, or entitled to possession of, any property seized under this law, shall have the right at any time before the destruction of such property, as in ordinary civil cases, to try the issue of whether or not such property is a gaming table, or bank or device or was used as equipment or paraphernalia of any gambling house, and to recover the possession of the same, and to maintain any other character of suit not inconsistent with this law; and it shall be the duty of the officer having said property in his possession, after notice of the pendency of said suit, to safely keep said property, pending the same. [Id., p. 110.]

Art. 571. [388n] Indictment for, sufficiency of.—In any indictment or information for keeping or exhibiting a gaming table, alley, machine, wheel, device or bank, it shall be sufficient to state that the person accused kept the table, alley, machine, wheel, device or bank for gaming, or exhibited the same for gaming, without giving the name or description thereof and without stating that the table, bank, alley, machine, wheel or gaming device was without any name, or that the same was unknown; and it shall not be necessary in the prosecution to prove that money or other articles of value were won or lost thereon. Art. 574. [391] Procedure in gaming cases.—Any court, officer or tribunal, having jurisdiction of the offenses enumerated in this chapter, or any district or county attorney, may subpoena persons and compel their attendance as witnesses to testify as to the violations of any of the provisions of the foregoing articles. Any person so summoned and examined shall not be liable to prosecution for any violation of said articles about which he may testify; and, for any offense enumerated in this chapter, a conviction may be had upon the unsupported evidence of an accomplice or participant.

Constitutionality.—This article is constitutional. Wright v. State, 23 App. 313, 5 S. W. 117.

Immunity to persons testifying.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 4, 37, 729.

Bettors at the same game are not exempt from testifying. And if they testify under this article they are exempt from prosecution. Stone v. State, 3 App. 675. This exemption applies whether the one testifying is or is not under indictment for the offense. Griffin v. State, 43 App. 428, 66 S. W. 782. But the protection extended to an offender who testifies, is limited to the identical acts about which he testified, and the burden is upon him, when claiming such protection, to show that he testified about the very act for which he is being prosecuted. Kain v. State, 16 App. 282.

Defendant was entitled to prove that he had been summoned and testified before the grand jury as to the violation of the gaming laws, and especially the occurrence for which he was prosecuted. Griffin v. State, 43 App. 428, 66 S. W. 782.

Art. 575. Betting at baseball or football.—It shall be unlawful for any person in this state to enter into an agreement with another, either orally, written or implied, whereby either one or both shall bet or wager money or anything of value, or otherwise become a party to any gambling scheme based upon the final result or outcome, or any play or portion thereof of a game of baseball, or football; provided, that nothing herein shall prohibit contesting baseball or football teams, or their duly authorized agents or managers from entering into an agreement as to the manner of disposition of gate receipts derived from such games. Constitutionality.—This article is constitutional. Ex parte Hernan, 45 App. 343, 77 S. W. 225; Ex parte Walsh, 59 App. 409, 129 S. W. 118.

Bet.—A "bet" is defined as that which is laid, staked, or pledged as between two persons upon the event of a contract or any contingent issue, the act of giving such a pledge, and to be synonymous with "wager" applied both to the contract of betting and wagering and to the thing or sum bet or wagered. Art. 578. Betting on horse racing.—That it shall be unlawful for any person or association of persons, or any corporation, at any place in this state, by pool selling or book making or by means of telegraph, telephone or otherwise, to aid or assist any other person in wagering, betting or placing a bet, or in offering to wager, bet or place a bet of anything of value on any horse race to be run, trotted, or paced at any place in this state or elsewhere. Constitutionality.—This article is constitutional. Ex parte Walsh, 59 App. 409, 129 S. W. 118.

Offering or tendering bet.—See notes to article 577, ante.

It was not a violation of the former law to offer or tender a bet. Windsor v. State, 46 App. 140, 79 S. W. 312.

Aiding or assisting.—This article does not attempt to regulate transactions outside the state, but merely to prevent the aiding or assisting of another in betting or placing a bet or in offering to wager or place a bet upon a horse race, the aiding and offering contemplated taking place in the state, and it being immaterial whether the race be run there, or whether it be run at all. Such aiding or assisting and offering to place, and the placing of money with telegraph companies to be wagered on a horse race, are proper objects of police control. Ex parte Walsh, 59 App. 409, 129 S. W. 118.

Art. 579. Owner or lessee using place for pool selling.—It shall be unlawful for the owner, agent or lessee of any property in this state to permit the same to be used as a place for selling pools, or book making, or wagering, or receiving or assisting any person in placing any bet of, or in receiving or transmitting any offer to bet, anything of value on any horse race to be run, trotted or paced at any place in this state or elsewhere. [Id., p. 91.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 296. See, also, Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

Art. 580. Penalty for three preceding articles.—Any person, violating any one of the provisions of articles 577, 578 and 579, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than ninety days. And any corporation holding a charter, or foreign corporation holding a permit, to do business in this state, which shall violate any of said provisions of articles 577, 578 and 579, shall thereby forfeit its charter or permit to do business in this state, as the case may be, and, in addition thereto, shall be liable to the state for a penalty of not less than two hundred nor more than five hundred dollars; and the person or persons, acting for said corporation in the violation of any of the provisions of either of said articles, shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty days nor more than ninety days. [Id., p. 91.]

Art. 581. Buying pools, penalty for.—If any person shall, at any place in this state, buy pools or otherwise wager anything of value on any horse race to be run, trotted or paced, at any place in this state or elsewhere, or shall offer to wager, or shall offer to place any money or other thing of value with any other person, to be transmitted to any other place, to be wagered on any such horse race, he shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., p. 91.]

Constitutionality.—This section is not violative of Const. art. 3, § 35. Ex parte Walsh, 59 App. 409, 129 S. W. 118.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 130, 295. See, also, Code Cr. Proc. arts. 447-481.

Art. 582. Evidence sufficient to convict.—A conviction for the violation of any of the provisions herein may be had upon the unsupported evidence of an accomplice or participant, and such accomplice or participant shall be exempt from prosecution for any offense under this law about which he may be required to testify. [Id., p. 91.]

See notes to article 574, ante.

Immunity to witness in general.—See Code Cr. Proc. arts. 4, 37, 729.

Materiality of testimony.—An indictment for perjury committed by defendant, in testifying before the grand jury that he had not played any card games, was not subject to a motion to quash on the ground that his statement could not have concerned a material inquiry because of the provision in this article, that any person examined before a grand jury shall not be liable to prosecution for any offense about which he may be required to testify. Bell v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 239.

Unsupported evidence of accomplice.—The error, if any, in allowing one of two witnesses, testifying that they and accused gambled on the occasion in question, to state, that he had pleaded guilty to gaming was not prejudicial to accused. Sparks v. State, 64 App. 610, 142 S. W. 1183.

588. What "bet or wager" includes.

Article 586. [395] Penalty.—If any person shall, whether before or after the happening of any public election held under authority of law within any election precinct of this State for any purpose whatever, wager or bet in any manner whatever upon the result of any such election, he shall be fined not less than One Hundred Dollars nor more than One Thousand Dollars, or by confinement in the county jail for not less than twenty nor more than sixty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 167; Act 1915, p. 37, ch. 22, § 1, amending art. 586, Penal Code 1911.]

Elections to which applicable.—This article applies only to elections held in this state. Covington v. State, 28 App. 225, 14 S. W. 126.

Stakeholder as accomplice.—See notes under article 79, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 304-305a.

The day election was held or to be held must be alleged. If two or more are jointly indicted for betting together, it should be so alleged. If for jointly betting with some other person, so allege, naming the person, or alleging that his name is to the grand jurors unknown, if such be the fact. If it is intended to charge the defendants severally, and not jointly, the indictment should allege that they "did severally bet," etc. Lewellen v. State, 18 Tex. 538. It is sufficient to allege a bet, without alleging that anything of value was bet. Long v. State, 22 App. 194, 2 S. W. 541, 58 Am. Rep. 633.

Evidence.—On trial for betting on the result of a public election between two candidates, the evidence should show whether the election was for city or county officers, or whether it was a special election, and should show for what office the parties were candidates. Rich v. State, 38 App. 199, 42 S. W. 291, 38 L. R. A. 719.

Art. 587. [396] "Public election" defined.—A public election, within the meaning of the preceding article, is any election held under authority of law in any election precinct in this State for any purpose whatever. [Act 1915, p. 37, ch. 22, § 2, amending art. 587, Pen. Code 1911.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 304-305a.

Art. 588. [397] What "bet or wager" includes.—The bet or wager may be of money or of any article of value, and any device in the form of purchase or sale or in any other form made for the purpose of concealing the true intention of the parties, is equally within the meaning of a bet or wager.

See notes to article 557, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 305a.

1. In general.—The law applies to territory that had at a previous election adopted local option. Beaty v. State, 72 App. 634, 162 S. W. 877; Fitch v. State, 58 App. 366, 127 S. W. 1040; Slack v. State, 61 App. 372, 136 S. W. 1073, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 112; Dozier v. State, 62 App. 258, 137 S. W. 679. Contra, Doyle v. State, 59 App. 60, 127 S. W. 815; Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 128 S. W. 905.

A conviction in the county court for illegally selling intoxicants in a dry county would not bar a subsequent prosecution for unlawfully pursuing the occupation of selling intoxicants in prohibition territory. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 571.

2. Legislative power.—The power to legislate for the enforcement of local option laws is not taken away from the Legislature by the adoption of local option, except as to those offenses defined and punishment attached which were in existence when local option was adopted; and, if new offenses grow out of the violation of the local option law, not covered by existing laws, it is the duty of the Legislature to pass efficient laws to meet such emergencies. Fitch v. State, 58 App. 366, 127 S. W. 1040.

It is within the power of the Legislature to make the pursuing and engaging in the occupation of retail liquor dealer as a business in local option territory a separate offense from an individual sale of liquor therein, and to prescribe a penalty therefor, and for the enforcement of such penalty in any territory where local option prevails, without reference to when the county has adopted local option. Mizell v. State, 59 App. 226, 128 S. W. 125.

The court should not, by construction, take away the power of the Legislature to enact a statute, if it is not inhibited by the Constitution. Dozier v. State, 62 App. 258, 137 S. W. 679.

Intoxicating liquors are peculiarly within the control of the police power of the state. Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

3. Constitutionality.—This article is constitutional. Fitch v. State, 58 App. 366, 127 S. W. 1040; Clark v. State, 61 App. 597, 136 S. W. 260; Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 571.

4. Relation to other statutes.—The pursuing and engaging in the occupation of retail liquor dealer as a business in local option territory is an offense separate from that of making individual sales of such liquor in local option territory. Mizell v. State, 59 App. 226, 128 S. W. 125; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1066; Kinnebrew v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 775; Byrd v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1068.

This article is not in conflict with art. 496 or art. 611. Haynes v. State, 63 App. 181, 139 S. W. 1155.

This article is to be construed in connection with arts. 150 and 597. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 548, L. R. A. 1915C, 101.

5. Election, and contest thereof.—See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 5715-5730 and notes.

6. Offense.—To constitute an offense the accused must have been engaged in the business of selling intoxicating liquors, and also must have made at least two sales. Floyd v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 264; Hernandez v. State, 64 App. 73, 141 S. W. 268; Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 262; Molthrop v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 1159; Sain v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 566; Moreno v. State, 71 App. 460, 160 S. W. 361; Dawson v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 5.

Pursuit of the business or occupation of unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor in prohibition territory does not require that it be the principal business of the defendant. Campbell v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 850; Clark v. State, 61 App. 597, 136 S. W. 260; Creech v. State, 70 App. 229, 158 S. W. 277; Moreno v. State, 71 App. 460, 160 S. W. 361.

Although the statute requires proof of two sales two isolated sales would not, in themselves, without other facts or circumstances, constitute such offense. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 245.

The mere delivery of whisky belonging to another to a person who had purchased it from its owner, by one not an owner of it, upon the request of the purchaser to turn it over to him, with no knowledge that a sale had been made, would not make the person delivering a participant in the sale and liable as a seller. Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 262.

To sustain a conviction the record must show that prohibition was in force in the county at the time of the alleged offense. Kinnebrew v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 775.

A party may be guilty of engaging in the business or occupation of selling intoxicating liquors in local option territory without obtaining a license. Flowers v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 925.

Accused must be engaged in that business as his principal business, or in some way as a business proposition, and it is insufficient that he has intoxicants in his possession and makes several sporadic sales. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1066.

The sale of a pint of whisky on two occasions about two weeks apart would not constitute "engaging in the business" or occupation of selling intoxicants contrary to the statute. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1066.

Where a person made one sale of intoxicating liquor in local option territory without carrying on the business, or without being connected with the ownership of the liquor, or where he aided or abetted the owner to sell, he could not be convicted of pursuing the occupation in local option territory because one sale was insufficient. Lester v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 861.

Where accused made many sales of liquor in connection with the operation of a restaurant, she was properly prosecuted for pursuing the business or occupation of selling intoxicating liquor instead of for making several single sales of liquor. Moreno v. State, 71 App. 460, 160 S. W. 361.

7. Principals and accomplices.—See post, art. 602; Creed v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 240; Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

8. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 315a.

An indictment need not negative exceptions. Weeks v. State, 64 App. 445, 142 S. W. 571; Beaty v. State, 72 App. 634, 162 S. W. 877; Slack v. State, 61 App. 372, 136 S. W. 1073, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 112; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 349. Contra, Keith v. State, 58 App. 418, 126 S. W. 569; Sutphen v. State, 59 App. 500, 129 S. W. 144; Riggins v. State, 61 App. 301, 135 S. W. 126.

The statute denouncing the offense of pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquors in violation of law requiring proof of two sales, the indictment must allege the names of the persons to whom the sales are made. Whitehead v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 583; Fitch v. State, 58 App. 366, 127 S. W. 1040; Murphy v. State, 59 App. 479, 129 S. W. 138; Sutphen v. State, 59 App. 500, 129 S. W. 144; Flores v. State, 60 App. 200, 131 S. W. 588; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 349.

The indictment must allege that at least two sales were made. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 349; Fitch v. State, 58 App. 366, 127 S. W. 1040; Flores v. State, 60 App. 200, 131 S. W. 588; Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 252.

An indictment was fatally defective where it failed to allege the time and place of the sales. Murphy v. State, 59 App. 479, 129 S. W. 138; Sutphen v. State, 59 App. 500, 129 S. W. 144.

An indictment which does not aver the fact of any sale or sales by appellant is insufficient. Flores v. State, 60 App. 200, 131 S. W. 588; Sutphen v. State, 59 App. 500, 129 S. W. 144.

An indictment that, on or about a certain day and year before presentment of the indictment, in a stated precinct and county, without being permitted by law, accused unlawfully engaged in and pursued the occupation and business of selling intoxicating liquors after local option had been adopted is insufficient. Fitch v. State, 58 App. 366, 127 S. W. 1040.

The indictment, alleging that accused, on or about December 1, 1909, made two different sales of intoxicating liquor to one Tom Calloway, and on or about said date made other sales of intoxicating liquors in violation of the law to persons to the grand jurors unknown, and did in such county, during the months of August, September, October, November, and December, 1909, and January, 1910, anterior to the presentment of the indictment, make more than at least two sales of intoxicating liquors, sufficiently alleged that as many as two sales were made within three years from the date of the indictment, without expressly stating that they were made within such time. Mizell v. State, 59 App. 226, 128 S. W. 125.

An indictment simply alleging that accused "did unlawfully engage in and pursue the occupation and business of selling intoxicating liquors," without naming any persons to whom the intoxicants were sold, or that any intoxicants were sold, was insufficient. Chapa v. State, 60 App. 365, 132 S. W. 127.

Where the indictment only charged sales of whisky, the admission of evidence that witness, among other packages delivered to accused, delivered a cask marked "Beer," was not reversible error. Stephens v. State, 63 App. 382, 139 S. W. 1141.

An indictment alleging that prohibition had been adopted in F. county, and that thereafter and on specified dates defendant did unlawfully and not as permitted by law engage in the occupation of selling intoxicating liquors in violation of law, and did make certain sales specifically described, at least more than twice, was sufficient. Stephens v. State, 63 App. 382, 139 S. W. 1141.

An indictment charged a sale to one "Joy Benge," and on cross-examination accused testified that his name was George, but stated that he was called "Joy" by three persons. Held, insufficient to show that he was commonly known as Joy, or was as well known by that name as by his real name, and that the indictment did not therefore properly allege his name as a purchaser of the liquor. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 940.

An indictment, charging accused with selling "spirituous, vinous and malt liquors," is not sufficient, in that it does not allege that the liquors were intoxicating. Floyd v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 264.

While the statute necessitates the allegations of only two sales, proof of other sales is admissible if tending to show a pursuit of the business, and so, where the indictment has alleged the names of two persons to whom sales were made, it is proper for it to generally allege the making of other sales. Whitehead v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 583.

An indictment charging that defendant on or about December 18, 1911, unlawfully engaged in and pursued the occupation of selling intoxicating liquors in violation of law, after the prohibitory law had been theretofore put in force, and that on or about that date he made two different sales of intoxicating liquors to one G., and on or about the same date made other sales to other persons to the grand jury unknown, and during the months of November and December of the year 1911 made more than two sales, was sufficient. Atkinson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 114.

A person indicted for pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquors cannot be convicted for making a single sale. Leonard v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 632.

An indictment held sufficient to show that the violation charged occurred while the prohibition law was in force, although it did not allege the time when the order declaring the result and ordering publication was made, or the time when the publication was made. Leonard v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 632.

An indictment which, after alleging that prohibition was in force in a certain county, averred that accused did unlawfully pursue the business of selling intoxicating liquors therein, the same not then and there being permitted, and that he made sales to certain specified persons, is sufficient. Misher v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1049.

An indictment which averred that an election was held, and it was determined that the sale of liquor should be prohibited, is sufficient, although not averring that the election held was a legal and valid one. Monroe v. State, 70 App. 245, 157 S. W. 154.

It need not be proved that the sale of liquor was the principal business of the defendant. Creech v. State, 70 App. 229, 158 S. W. 277.

In a prosecution of "James Walter Brown," an examined copy of entries in the books of the internal revenue collector, showing the issuance of a liquor license to James Brown at G., Tex., where accused was engaged in business, was admissible; there being no evidence that there was any other James Brown in that place. Brown v. State, 72 App. 33, 160 S. W. 374.

An indictment charging at least two sales within three years from the date of the indictment was sufficient. Beaty v. State, 72 App. 634, 162 S. W. 877.

An indictment may charge that a sale was made to the person who received the liquor and paid the price, though others contributed to the price. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 349.

There is no fatal variance between an indictment alleging that accused pursued the occupation of selling intoxicating liquor and making "two different sales * * * to M. and H.," though construed to charge two sales jointly, and the proof of a separate sale to H., in which M. was interested, because contributing a part of the price, and a sale to M., in which H. was interested, for the same reason. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 349.

Where an indictment charged that the notice of the result of the election was published the necessary four weeks in a newspaper selected in the manner required by law by the county judge of the county for such publication, and that the selection and publication were duly certified by the county judge, and the certificate entered of record in the minutes of the commissioners, the indictment sufficiently showed that the county judge ordered the publication for the necessary time in a selected newspaper. Mills v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 367.

An indictment that failed to allege that the sale was not permitted by law was not void, and evidence of the commission of the offense was admissible, since it is matter of defense to be shown that the sale was permitted by law; the burden of proof being on defendant to show that he had the legal right to sell intoxicants under the statute. Mills v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 367.

9. Evidence — Presumptions and burden of proof.—See notes under art. 52, ante, and art. 785, C. C. P.

Validity of election, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 5728.

The state must show that local option was in effect. Lester v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 861.

The state need not prove each specific sale alleged, but need only prove that accused followed the business or occupation, and made at least two sales. Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

The state must prove at least two sales to persons named in the indictment. Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 252.

10. — Admissibility.—See notes under art. 783, C. C. P.

Evidence of other sales than those alleged is admissible to show that accused was engaged in the occupation of selling intoxicants. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 571; Clay v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 280; Byrd v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1068; Mitchell v. State, 71 App. 185, 159 S. W. 1073; Brown v. State, 72 App. 33, 160 S. W. 374.

Testimony of an express agent as to shipments to accused held admissible. Clark v. State, 61 App. 597, 136 S. W. 260; Dawson v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 5.

The state was properly permitted to show the amount of liquor received by accused and that it was delivered at the place where he carried on the business. Byrd v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1068.

The refusal to permit accused to show that it was the custom of patrons of his place of business to have him order intoxicating liquors for them was proper where each witness called to testify was permitted to state whether or not he had requested accused to order liquor for him. Byrd v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1068.

Express books and entries therein held sufficiently identified, and accused's connection therewith and signatures thereto sufficiently proven to justify the admission of the books in evidence. Leonard v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 632.

Where witnesses testified as to their purchase of intoxicants, but could not fix the date as before or after prohibition went into effect, other evidence to fix the date as after the time when prohibition went into effect is admissible, particularly where the witnesses were unwilling. Misher v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1049.

Evidence that large quantities of intoxicating liquors were hauled to the barn of accused's employer, and that accused was present and assisted in placing them therein, and that the liquors were carried from the barn to the bar of the hotel which accused managed for his employer, and that he sold them indiscriminately, is proper to be considered by the jury. Creed v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 240.

Evidence that drunken people were frequently seen in defendant's place of business was admissible. Brown v. State, 72 App. 33, 160 S. W. 374.

The books of express companies, showing the quantity of liquor received by accused prior to the return of the indictment, and during the time he was alleged to have been engaged in the prohibited business were admissible. Brown v. State, 72 App. 33, 160 S. W. 374.

Testimony that defendant at various other times, after selling to witness, solicited him to make purchases is admissible. Harris v. State, 72 App. 117, 161 S. W. 125.

Evidence of whisky and alcohol being frequently shipped and delivered to defendant is admissible. Miller v. State, 72 App. 151, 161 S. W. 128.

Evidence of other sales should be confined to the time subsequent to the publication of the order made by the judge after the prohibition election, where such time is within three years prior to the indictment. Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 252.

The original records showing that local option is in force in a county are admissible, without having given notice. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 349.

It was error to admit testimony by the county attorney that a paper, which a United States revenue agent had dropped and which the attorney picked up, was an application signed by defendant for an internal revenue license to sell liquor, without a showing that the paper had been lost or destroyed. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1051.

Testimony by the county attorney that he told a United States revenue agent, out of the presence of the defendant, that he thought the agent could sell a liquor license to defendant, was inadmissible. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1051.

The testimony of a witness that he met accused and asked for whisky, that accused said he would try and get some whisky, and that a little later the witness found a bottle in his wagon, was admissible; the witness having no other person to procure whisky for him. Jackson v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 521.

11. — Sufficiency.—Evidence held sufficient. Arias v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 340; Mills v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 367; Dawson v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 5; Callicoate v. State, 61 App. 420, 135 S. W. 124; Dozier v. State, 62 App. 258, 137 S. W. 679; Hernandez v. State, 64 App. 73, 141 S. W. 268; Craft v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 1163; Atkinson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 114; Leonard v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 632; Thompson v. State, 72 App. 6, 160 S. W. 685; Waits v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 708; Robertson v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 1191.

Evidence held insufficient. Floyd v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 264; Thompson v. State, 57 App. 408, 123 S. W. 593; Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 262; Molthrop v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 1159.

Evidence held to sufficiently establish defendant's identity as the person by whom the liquor was sold and to sustain a conviction. Craig v. State, 62 App. 299, 137 S. W. 667.

Proof of several sales of intoxicating liquors by accused, and that about that time he received, by express, 84 quarts of whisky, was sufficient to support a finding that he was engaged in the business of selling. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 245.

Proof of two or even three isolated sales of intoxicating liquors is insufficient. Whitehead v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 583.

Evidence held sufficient to show that the signatures for shipments by express of intoxicating liquors were the genuine signatures of accused, and that he received the liquors. Leonard v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 632.

Proof of two illegal sales is sufficient to support a conviction, although a greater number have been alleged in the indictment. Misher v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1049.

Evidence held to show a sale of whisky to J., and not to show that accused was merely acting as J.'s agent in ordering the whisky for him. Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

12. Questions for jury.—See notes under art. 786, C. C. P.

Evidence held sufficient to go to the jury. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1175; Cole v. State (Cr. App.) 162 S. W. 880.

Evidence held to make it a jury question as to whether a certain person was an accomplice. Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

13. Instructions.—See notes under arts. 735-743, C. C. P.

The court should charge that, though the jury might find that accused was following the business and occupation of selling intoxicating liquors, they could not convict him unless the state should prove to their satisfaction, beyond a reasonable doubt, that accused while pursuing such occupation and business had made at least two or more sales within three years. Mizell v. State, 59 App. 226, 128 S. W. 125.

A charge held not argumentative nor on the weight of the evidence. Clark v. State, 61 App. 597, 136 S. W. 260.

A charge that in order to constitute engaging in or pursuing the occupation of selling intoxicating liquor it is necessary for the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant unlawfully followed that business, places a greater burden on the state than the law requires, and was not prejudicial to defendant. Clark v. State, 61 App. 597, 136 S. W. 260.

A charge that if the jury believed that accused unlawfully engaged in, and pursued, the occupation or business of selling intoxicating liquors, as alleged in the indictment, and at or about the date mentioned in the indictment made at least two different sales of intoxicating liquors to the parties named in the indictment, they should find the defendant guilty, is proper, not authorizing a conviction for two sales unless accused was also engaged in the business of selling, and not being a charge on the weight of evidence. Dickson v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 914.

Where accused claimed that he merely ordered the liquor for others, a charge that if he ordered the liquor for the accommodation and as the agent of the purchasers, and not as the seller's agent, such transactions would not be sales, was proper in connection with the further charge that the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt that accused was pursuing such business, and had made at least two sales. Dickson v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 914.

An instruction that it was not necessary that a party should make a profit in his business in order to be guilty of pursuing the occupation of selling intoxicating liquors was not an improper limitation on the meaning of the words, "occupation" or "business," as used in the statute, and was proper where the evidence showed that accused would order whisky for his store customers, and charge it in their store account at cost to be paid when the rest of the account was paid, since each of these transactions constituted a sale. Dickson v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 914.

An instruction that it was necessary to show that defendant made at least two sales of intoxicating liquor within three years preceding the indictment was erroneous for failure to define what constitutes engaging in or pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquors. Floyd v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 264.

An instruction that the state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant unlawfully engaged in or pursued the occupation or business of selling intoxicating liquors in J. county at the time alleged in the indictment, and that the sales, if any, were made to G. as alleged prior to January 5, 1912, when the indictment was filed, and that defendant pursued such business as a business or calling and for profit or gain, and that at least two sales were made by him, and unless the jury so believed beyond a reasonable doubt they should acquit, properly defined the offense. Atkinson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 114.

Where the state's witnesses testified that they bought intoxicating wine from accused, while she claimed that the beverage was grape juice made by boiling the juice of the grape, and was not intoxicating, she was entitled to an affirmative instruction that if the jury believed from the evidence that the beverage was grape juice, and would not intoxicate, or if they had a reasonable doubt of that fact, they must acquit. Mollenkopf v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 799.

An instruction that it was necessary to prove that accused made at least two sales, and that by the term "business and occupation" was meant a calling, trade, or vocation which one engages in to make a living or obtain wealth was misleading, in that it authorized an inference that proof of two sales in and of itself would constitute a business or occupation, and that the latter part of the charge was a definition more burdensome on the state and more favorable to accused than required by the statute creating the offense, it being only essential, to establish engaging in the business or pursuing the occupation of selling whisky, that the state prove that accused kept in her possession whisky for sale, and that she actually made two sales within the time specified in the statute. Mollenkopf v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 799.

Where the indictment alleged that accused pursued the occupation and on or about a designated date made different sales of liquor to third persons, and the evidence only established a sale to one of them not made directly by accused, and there was nothing to show that accused was a partner of any of the parties actually making a sale, or that he had any connection with them, a charge that if accused by agent, employé, or partner, while pursuing the business, made as many as two different sales to persons, he should be convicted, was erroneous. Lester v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 861.

Charges that in order to constitute "engaging in the business of selling intoxicants," the state must prove that accused had made at least two sales of intoxicating liquors within the period of limitation; and that in order to constitute engaging in said occupation or business, the state must prove that accused unlawfully engaged in and followed said occupation between the dates stated, that he unlawfully made at least as many as two sales of intoxicants between said dates, were not on the weight of the evidence. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 571.

An instruction that the terms "occupation" and "business" meant trade, calling, or vocation in which one engages to procure a living or obtain wealth, was a sufficient definition of the term "occupation." Anderson v. State, 70 App. 250, 157 S. W. 150.

Since the mere making of two or more sales in itself does not constitute the offense of pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquors, an instruction by which the court made that the test of whether accused was pursuing the business or occupation of selling intoxicating liquors, and which did not clearly charge that the jury must believe from all the evidence that he pursued that business or occupation, and in addition thereto made at least two sales, was erroneous. Bird v. State, 70 App. 515, 157 S. W. 479.

Where the sheriff testified to finding whisky under the floor of accused's house, while she testified that she had rented that room to J., that he was occupying it, and that she did not know the whisky was there, an instruction that the jury could consider the testimony relative to the finding of the whisky in determining whether or not she was prosecuting such business was erroneous; and the court should have charged that if the whisky was owned by J., or by some person other than accused, and was placed there without her knowledge or consent, it could not be considered against her for any purpose, but that if the jury believed it belonged to and was placed there by her or with her knowledge it might be considered. Creed v. State, 71 App. 509, 160 S. W. 468.

The court charged that if the jury believed that accused acted only as agent in procuring certain whisky for J., she would not be guilty of making a sale thereof, but refused a charge that if she acted only as agent, such act could not be considered as evidence that she was engaged in the business. Held, that the refusal of such instruction was error. Creed v. State, 71 App. 509, 160 S. W. 468.

The charge does not authorize a conviction for making two sales; it instructing that the jury must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was pursuing the occupation and made two sales to the person named in the indictment, or they would acquit, and then defining occupation in an unobjectionable way. Miller v. State, 72 App. 151, 161 S. W. 128.

Failure to define the meaning of "engaging in or pursuing the occupation or business" of selling intoxicants would be favorable to accused, so that he could not complain thereof; since, without definition, the jury would naturally understand that the term meant the pursuit of the business as a vocation to procure a living or obtain wealth. Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

The requested charge that by the term "pursuing the occupation" of selling intoxicants in prohibition territory was meant that accused was engaged in selling intoxicants as her chief business and occupation, and was engaged therein for the purpose of making a living or obtaining wealth, was properly refused as inaccurate. Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

An instruction held not objectionable on the ground that it did not sufficiently define the offense charged. Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

An instruction held not objectionable upon the ground that it permitted a conviction on proof of two separate and distinct sales. Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

The court should define "engaging in or pursuing the occupation or business of selling intoxicating liquors." Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 184.

The instructions should have been to convict, if defendant pursued the business at any time prior to the indictment and subsequent to the date of the publication of the order following the prohibition election, where that date was within three years before the filing of the indictment, and the court should instruct the jury to convict defendant if he pursued the business within three years prior to the indictment. Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 252.

Defendant is entitled to an instruction that the state must prove at least two sales to persons named in the indictment. Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 252.

Requested charge that the term "occupation" or "business" means vocation, trade, calling, the business in which one engages to procure a living or wealth, is properly refused. Jackson v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 521.

In a prosecution for violating the local option law, an instruction that if the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that accused sold intoxicating liquor, honestly believing that it was not intoxicating when drunk in reasonable quantities, he would not be guilty, sufficiently presented the question of good faith and mistake of fact by accused. Deadweyler v. State, 121 S. W. 863.

In a prosecution for engaging in the occupation of retail liquor dealer as a business in local option territory, the court should charge that, though the jury might find that accused was following the business and occupation of selling intoxicating liquors, they could not convict him unless the state should prove to their satisfaction, beyond a reasonable doubt, that accused while pursuing such occupation and business had made at least two or more sales within three years. Mizell v. State, 128 S. W. 125.

Art. 590. United States revenue license prima facie proof of.—

In prosecutions under this law, where it is proven that there is posted up at the place where such intoxicating liquor is being sold, United States internal revenue liquor or malt license, to any one, it shall be prima facie proof that the person to whom such license is issued is engaged in and is pursuing the business and occupation of selling intoxicating liquors within the meaning of this law. [Id., p. 284.]

See notes under art. 597, post.

Art. 591. What constitutes pursuing occupation of.—In order to constitute the engaging in or pursuing the occupation of business of selling intoxicating liquors, within the meaning of this law, it shall be necessary for the state to prove in all prosecutions hereunder, that the defendant made at least two sales of intoxicating liquor within three years next preceding the filing of the indictment. [Id., p. 284.]

See notes under article 589, ante.

Indictment and proof thereunder.—Where an indictment for selling liquor in local option territory charged that defendant was engaged in the business and in pursuit thereof made two sales to one D., as well as to other persons unknown, the admission of testimony of R. that he bought whisky from the defendant was proper; there being two elements of the offense—that accused was engaged in the business of selling intoxicants in prohibited territory, and that he made at least two sales. Mills v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 367.

Art. 592. [398] Selling liquor to wild Indians.—If any person shall sell, give or barter, or cause to be sold, given or bartered, any ardent spirits, or any spirituous or intoxicating liquors, or fire-arms, or ammunition, to any Indian of the wild or unfriendly tribes, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act Oct. 31, 1866, p. 71.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 306.

Art. 593. [400] Giving or delivering to minors.—Any person who shall give or deliver, or cause to be given or delivered, or be in any way concerned in the gift or delivery of any spirituous, vinous, malt or intoxicating liquors to any person under the age of twenty-one years, whether consigned to such person or to some other person, without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such person who is under the age of twenty-one years, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction therefor, shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars; and any person who, as agent for or employed by an express company or other common carrier, or who, as agent for or employé of any other person, firm or corporation, delivers, or causes to be delivered, any spirituous, vinous, malt or intoxicating liquors to any person under the age of twenty-one years, whether consigned to such person or to some other person, without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished, upon conviction therefor, by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1897, ch. 32; Act 1907, ch. 116. Amended, Act 1909, p. 119.]

Explanatory.—This article is in the language of the original session laws. The same act was changed in language somewhat and inserted in the revised Penal Code as art. 1054. The act from which arts. 593 and 1054 were constructed seems to have been superseded by Acts 1909, 1st S. S. p. 307. See note under art. 1054, post.

In general.—Reed v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 1074.

The ante-bellum offense of selling liquor to a slave without a permit assimilates to this. Under Hartley's Digest, art. 454, punishing selling to a slave, proof of giving away would not sustain a conviction, Allen v. State, 14 Tex. 633; and (under O. & W., art. 688) if the sale or gift was with the consent or upon the order of another, it was the duty of the person making the sale or gift to know that the other was the "master, overseer, or employer." A white man could, however, buy the liquor in good faith and without collusion, and give it to a slave in the presence of the seller, without criminating the latter. Smith v. State, 24 Tex. 547. The particular transaction must have been identified in the indictment, and if the name of the slave was unknown, the name of the master, etc., should be stated, or other facts sufficient to fix the identity. State v. Shwartz, 25 Tex. 764.

As to selling and permitting to be drunk on premises, see Ezzell v. State, 29 App. 521, 16 S. W. 782.

This article construed in connection with arts. 622 and 1054. Talley v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 255.

The offense mentioned in this article and that of selling to a minor are distinct. Dickerson v. State, 72 App. 293, 162 S. W. 871.

A loan of whisky to a minor, which is subsequently repaid, is a "sale," especially in local option territory. Jenkins v. State, 70 App. 138, 155 S. W. 531.

Knowledge of minority.—Knowledge on the part of the defendant that the person to whom he sold the liquor was, at the time of the sale, a minor, is an essential element of this offense. Hunter v. State, 18 App. 444, 51 Am. Rep. 319; Pressler v. State, 13 App. 95; Henderson v. State, 37 App. 79, 38 S. W. 617; Williams v. State, 23 App. 70, 3 S. W. 661; Sears v. State, 35 App. 442, 34 S. W. 124; Gray v. State, 44 App. 470, 72 S. W. 169; Ferguson v. State, 50 App. 155, 95 S. W. 111.

Consent of parent or guardian.—Consent is defensive matter. Kuhn v. State, 34 App. 85, 29 S. W. 272.

The sale must be backed by a written consent of some person authorized to give such permission. The fact that the minor had neither parents nor guardian, will not relieve the seller. Herchenbach v. State, 34 App. 122, 29 S. W. 470.

A stepfather can give written consent to sale of liquor to minor stepson, so as to exempt seller from punishment, even though the mother protests against such sale. Welch v. State, 46 App. 528, 81 S. W. 50.

Principals and accomplices.—Where defendant, a saloon keeper, was actually present and knew that one purchasing liquor was making the purchase for a minor who there paid the money to the intermediary, who in turn paid it to defendant, defendant was liable as principal for a sale to a minor. Starling v. State, 34 App. 295, 30 S. W. 445.

A purchaser of liquors sold in violation of law is not an accomplice of the seller. Sears v. State, 35 App. 442, 34 S. W. 124.

A sale by an agent, acting within the scope of his agency, makes a prima facie case against the dealer. Ollre v. State, 57 App. 520, 123 S. W. 1116.

But a dealer is not liable for a sale at his place of business by one who assumes to be, but is not his agent, or by agent who sells in violation of his orders. Id.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 312.

It must be alleged that defendant knowingly sold the liquor to a minor. Pressler v. State, 13 App. 95; Henderson v. State, 37 App. 79, 38 S. W. 617.

Indictment held sufficient. Hunter v. State, 18 App. 444, 51 Am. Rep. 319.

It must be alleged that defendant made the sale without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor, or some one standing in their place or stead. If the word "father" be used in the indictment in place of the word "parent," such indictment will be bad. Lantzmaster v. State, 19 App. 320.

A person can be convicted of giving intoxicating liquors to a minor on a complaint charging the selling and giving of such liquors to a minor, regardless of whether or not the local option law was in force in the county. Ex parte Casens, 57 App. 377, 122 S. W. 888.

Where defendant was indicted under art. 1054, a finding of guilty under this article was reversible error. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 612.

Where the evidence, under an indictment for giving intoxicating liquors to a minor without the consent of his parent or guardian, showed only a loan or sale, which the court instructed came within the statute, there was a variance, requiring the reversal of a conviction. Jenkins v. State, 70 App. 138, 155 S. W. 531.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Simpson v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 303.

Evidence held not to support a conviction. Turley v. State, 59 App. 156, 127 S. W. 835.

Evidence in a prosecution for knowingly giving and delivering intoxicating liquor to a minor held insufficient to support a conviction. Ethridge v. State, 63 App. 662, 141 S. W. 89.

Defendant's knowledge at the time that the purchaser was a minor may be proved by circumstances. Hunter v. State, 18 App. 444, 51 Am. Rep. 319; Sears v. State, 35 App. 442, 34 S. W. 124; Williams v. State, 23 App. 70, 3 S. W. 661; Ferguson v. State, 50 App. 155, 95 S. W. 111.

Knowledge of the purchaser's minority must be proved, and merely proving that the buyer was sixteen years old is not sufficient. Henderson v. State, 37 App. 79, 38 S. W. 617.

A witness may testify to the physical marks of age of the alleged minor, but not as to how, in his opinion, such physical marks would impress others. Walker v. State, 25 App. 448, 8 S. W. 644; Garner v. State, 28 App. 561, 13 S. W. 1004; Waldstein v. State, 29 App. 82, 14 S. W. 394; Yakel v. State, 30 App. 391, 17 S. W. 943, 20 S. W. 205.

Sufficiency of evidence. See Wakefield v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 470.

Defendant must show proper written consent of parents. Kuhn v. State, 34 App. 85, 29 S. W. 272.

Evidence held sufficient to show sale to a minor. Horsky v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 443; Sears v. State, 35 App. 442, 34 S. W. 124.

When the evidence shows a sale by an employé it must further show that defendant acquiesced in the sale. Freedman v. State, 37 App. 115, 38 S. W. 993.

Evidence of sales to other minors is inadmissible. Freedman v. State, 37 App. 115, 38 S. W. 993.

Instructions.—Charge of court authorizing conviction if defendant “was instrumental or in any way concerned in giving liquor to a minor” was erroneous. Walker v. State, 57 App. 172, 122 S. W. 395.

Art. 593a. Sale or other disposition of liquors in bawdy houses.—That if any person, whether the owner, lessee, manager, house-keeper, proprietor, servant, agent, employé, inmate, visitor or any other person shall sell, give away or drink, or permit to be sold, given away or drunk, any spirituous or vinous or malt liquors, whether capable of producing intoxication or not, in any bawdy house, disorderly house or assignation house, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction such person or persons shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than thirty days nor more than ninety days, and by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1911, p. 23, ch. 15, § 1.]

Keeping disorderly house, see art. 496 et seq.

Instructions.—An instruction was not affirmatively erroneous for authorizing a conviction whether accused knew the intoxicants were given away or not, where all the evidence showed that she did know such fact, and had herself often drunk on the premises. Forester v. State, 72 App. 298, 162 S. W. 507.

Art. 593b. Same; definition of terms.—For the purposes of this Act a bawdy house is one kept for prostitution, or where prostitutes are permitted to resort for the purpose of plying their vocation.

A disorderly house is an assignation house or any theater or any play house or house or place where prostitutes or lewd women or women of bad reputation for chastity are employed, kept in service, or permitted to resort or permitted to display or conduct themselves in a lewd or lascivious or indecent manner.

An assignation house is a house or room or place where men and women meet by appointment made by themselves or by another for the purpose of sexual intercourse. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 593c. Same; incriminating testimony.—No person shall be exempt from giving testimony in any proceeding for the enforcement of this Act, but the testimony given by a witness shall not be used against him or her, in any criminal action or proceeding, nor shall any criminal action or proceeding be brought against such witness on account of any testimony so given by him or her. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 594. [401] Selling and permitting the same drunk on premises.—If any person or firm shall sell, or be in any way concerned in selling, spirituous, vinous or other intoxicating liquors in quantities of a quart or more, and shall permit the same to be drunk at the place or establishment where sold, or at any other place provided by said person or firm for that purpose, he or they shall be punished by fine not less than fifty nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 168.]

This article has survived all the mutations of legislation since the war (State v. Smith, 35 Tex. 132; May v. State, 35 Tex. 650; State v. Perry, 44 Tex. 100), but until July 24, 1879, was inoperative for want of a penalty. Smith v. State, 7 App. 286.

Offense.—The gist of this offense is selling liquor in quantities of a quart or more and allowing it to be drunk on the premises where sold. If the parties regarded the quantity sold as a quart, it is immaterial if it was not an exact quart, if it approximated it. Scott v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 168. When an act is done on a man's premises, and in his presence, without any effort on his part to prevent it, it must be inferred that it was with his consent. Cochran v. State, 26 Tex. 678. A hotel keeper is amenable to this law for selling liquor to his guest and permitting the same to be drunk on the premises, unless, perhaps, where the liquor is drunk in a room leased by such guest. Scott v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 168.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 311.

Requisites in general, see arts. 447-487, C. C. P.

A party cannot be convicted for this offense under an indictment charging him with retailing without a license. May v. State, 35 Tex. 650.

Instructions.—See notes under arts. 735-743, C. C. P.; May v. State, 35 Tex. 650.

Art. 595. Selling to habitual drunkards.—Any person who shall knowingly sell or give, or cause to be sold or given, or who shall be instrumental in selling, giving or procuring of any spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, to any person who is an habitual drunkard, shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1903, p. 69.]

See art. 623, post; Scott v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 169.

Art. 596. "Habitual drunkard" defined.—An habitual drunkard, within the meaning of this law, is one who makes it a habit to get drunk, or who habitually becomes intoxicated by the voluntary use of intoxicating liquors. [Id., p. 69.]

Art. 597. [402] Selling in prohibited districts.—If any person shall sell any intoxicating liquor in any county, justice precinct, city or town in which the sale of intoxicating liquor has been prohibited under the laws of this state, or if any person shall give away any intoxicating liquor in any such county, justice precinct, city or town, with the purpose of evading the provisions of said laws, he shall be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than twenty nor more than sixty days. Or, if any person shall sell any intoxicating liquor in any county, justice precinct, school district, city or town, or subdivision of a county, in which the sale of intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be prohibited under the laws of this state, or if any person shall give away any intoxicating liquor in any such county, justice precinct, school district, city or town, or subdivision of a county, with the purpose of evading the provisions of said law, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than three years. Upon complaint being filed with any county judge, or justice of the peace, describing the place where it is believed by the person making the complaint that intoxicating liquor is being sold or given away in violation of law, such county judge or justice of the peace shall issue his warrant directing and commanding the sheriff or any constable of his county to search such place, and, if the law is being violated, to arrest the person so violating it; and it shall be the duty of the officer to whom such warrant is delivered to search the place described in the warrant, to seize all intoxicating liquors found therein, and arrest and bring before the county judge or justice who issued the writ, all persons connected with such business either as proprietor, manager, clerk or other employé; and, if admission into said place is refused, the officer executing said warrant is hereby authorized to force open the same. In prosecutions under this article, where it is proven that there is posted up at the place where such intoxicating liquor is being sold or given away with the purpose of evading the provisions of the law, United States internal revenue liquor or malt license, to any one, it shall be prima facie proof that the person to whom such license is issued is engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquor. 1. In general.—Old art. 378 reads as follows: "If any person shall sell, exchange, or give away any intoxicating liquor whatever, in any county, justice's precinct, city, or town in this state, after the qualified voters of such county, justice's precinct, city, or town have determined at an election held in accordance with the laws of this state, that the sale or exchange of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited in such county, justice's precinct, city, or town, and the commissioners' court has passed an order to that effect, which order has been duly published in accordance with law, he shall be fined in a sum not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars." [Act June 24, 1876, p. 26.]

The act of July 24, 1879, amending section 5 of the act of June 24, 1876, the original option act from which this article was framed, was held to be nugatory and inoperative, because the act which it amended had been repealed by the adoption of the Revised Code. Robertson v. State, 12 App. 541; Pinckard v. State, 13 App. 373; Van Noy v. State, 14 App. 69; Akin v. State, Id. 142.

For an exhaustive review of the civil statutes upon which the preceding article is based, see Dawson v. State, 25 App. 670, 8 S. W. 820; Ex parte Burrage, 26 App. 35, 9 S. W. 72; Robinson v. State, 26 App. 82, 9 S. W. 61; Lawhon v. State, 26 App. 101, 9 S. W. 355; Curry v. State, 28 App. 475, 13 S. W. 752; Id., 28 App. 477, 13 S. W. 773; Ex parte Cox, 28 App. 537, 13 S. W. 493.

On trial for violation of the local option law, three distinct sales were testified to by the prosecuting witness. Defendant pleaded former conviction, but there was no evidence that defendant had ever been convicted for the sale involved in this case, and the judgment will not be disturbed. Bruce v. State, 39 App. 26, 44 S. W. 852.

One cannot be prosecuted for the sale of intoxicants until after 28 days from the first publication. Byrd v. State, 53 App. 597, 111 S. W. 149.

The accused can not defend on the ground of the invalidity of the election after the time prescribed for contesting such election has passed. Jerue v. State, 57 App. 213, 123 S. W. 414. And see Ex parte McGuire, 57 App. 38, 123 S. W. 425; Gober v. State, 57 App. 66, 123 S. W. 427.

Where the local option law had been adopted in a county at two elections, the second of which was held after the adoption of the statute making it a felony to sell intoxicating liquors, one subsequently selling intoxicating liquors was properly prosecuted under the second election. Mayo v. State, 62 App. 110, 136 S. W. 790.

A conviction in the county court for illegally selling intoxicants in a dry county would not bar a subsequent prosecution, for unlawfully pursuing the occupation of selling intoxicants in prohibition territory. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 571.

Where a subdivision which had adopted the prohibition law holds a new election, and adopts the new law making a sale of intoxicants a felony, instead of a misdemeanor, the state cannot elect to proceed under the original election, and the county court has no jurisdiction of the prosecution. Sandaval v. State, 72 App. 368, 162 S. W. 1148.

2. Constitutionality.—This law is constitutional. Rippey v. State (Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 15 (affirmed by U. S. Supreme Court, Id., 193 U. S. 504, 24 Sup. Ct. 516, 48 L. Ed. 767); Ex parte Lynn, 19 App. 293; Steele v. State, 19 App. 425; Ex parte Kennedy, 23 App. 77, 3 S. W. 114; Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 571.

The legislature had no constitutional power to prohibit the gift of intoxicating liquors nor to empower localities to do so by means of the local option law, and under the former statute it was not an offense to give intoxicating liquors to another in a local option district, and to the extent that the local option law prohibited a gift, it was unconstitutional. Stallworth v. State, 16 App. 345; Holley v. State, 14 App. 505; McMillan v. State, 18 App. 375; Steele v. State, 19 App. 425.

See a discussion of the rules in relation to constitutional provisions as to the passage of laws, wherein it is held that in passing upon the constitutionality of a law the court will not go behind the enrollment of the act. Ex parte Tipton, 28 App. 428, 13 S. W. 610, 8 L. R. A. 326, citing Central Ry. Co. v. Hearne, 32 Tex. 547; Blessing v. City of Galveston, 42 Tex. 642; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Odum, 53 Tex. 343; Day Land & Cattle Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526, 4 S. W. 865; Gaddy v. State, 8 App. 127; Wood v. State, 27 App. 396, 11 S. W. 449; approved by Williams v. Taylor, 83 Tex. 667, 19 S. W. 156.

This article as amended by the act of the Twenty-eighth Legislature (Gen. Laws 1903, p. 55, chap. 40), in so far as it authorizes a seizure of intoxicating liquors transcends the bounds of constitutional authority and is void. Beavers v. Goodwin (Civ. App.) 90 S. W. 932.

It is immaterial whether an amendment to an act is unconstitutional or not, and whether, if so, it vitiates the whole article as amended, as, if such be the case, the prosecution can be sustained under the article as it stood before amendment. Ultoh v. State, 48 App. 295, 87 S. W. 823.

3. Relation to other statutes.—Statute making the violation of local option law a felony held not to apply to counties adopting local option before its passage.

Crawford v. State (Cr. App.) 128 S. W. 1122; Lewis v. State, 58 App. 351, 127 S. W. 808, 21 Ann. Cas. 656; Doyle v. State, 59 App. 60, 127 S. W. 815; Thompson v. State, 59 App. 277, 128 S. W. 382; Rice v. State, 59 App. 293, 128 S. W. 613; Payne v. State, 60 App. 322, 131 S. W. 1101; Head v. State (Cr. App.) 141 S. W. 536; McKinney v. State (Cr. App.) 128 S. W. 1122; Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 348.

The act of March 30, 1887, amendatory of the general local option law, is operative only in those communities wherein the local option law has been adopted since it went into effect and cannot affect those communities wherein the general local option law was previously in operation. Robinson's Case, 26 App. 82, 9 S. W. 61; Lawhon v. State, 26 App. 101, 9 S. W. 355; Dawson v. State, 25 App. 670, 8 S. W. 829.

Where the local option law has been adopted and put in force, it operates a repeal within the particular locality of all laws and parts of laws in conflict with it, and exempts from punishment all previous offenders against the repealed laws. Robertson v. State, 5 App. 155; Ex parte Lynn, 19 App. 293; Boone v. State, 12 App. 181; Donaldson v. State, 15 App. 25.

When by a subsequent election, prohibition has been repealed, prosecutions for violations of the law while it was in force cannot be maintained, and convictions had prior to such repeal cannot be enforced. Halfin v. State, 5 App. 212; Monroe v. State, 8 App. 343; Fitze v. State, 13 App. 372; Pinckard v. State, Id. 373; Freese v. State, 14 App. 31; Prather v. State, Id. 453; Mulkey v. State, 16 App. 53. But such is not now the law. Post, art. 602.

The penalty prescribed by the act of 1887, was not repealed by the act of 1893. Aaron v. State, 34 App. 103, 29 S. W. 267.

The legislature cannot by amendment impose new burdens upon the people of a precinct pending the operation of the local option law therein. Ex parte Bains, 39 App. 62, 45 S. W. 24.

Conviction on a count for violating the law in a precinct in erroneous where since the adoption of the law in the precinct the law has been adopted in the county before the finding of the indictment; the law in the precinct was merged in that of the county. Raby v. State, 42 App. 56, 57 S. W. 651.

The legislature in amending the provisions of the local option law cannot affect territory in which the law is already in force. Ex parte Elliott, 44 App. 575, 72 S. W. 837.

Where local option is in force the law prohibiting sales to minors is superseded. Tompkins v. State, 49 App. 154, 90 S. W. 1019.

A sale to a minor in local option territory cannot be prosecuted under the statute prohibiting sales to minors. Dean v. State, 49 App. 249, 92 S. W. 38.

There is no irreconcilable conflict between this and article 5060j, Sayles' Civil Statutes. There is no double penalty about the matter since the violation of the bond would be one thing and selling illegally the whisky is another one. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 105 S. W. 811, 812.

A rule of construction is that when the legislature revises or re-enacts a statute after it has been judicially construed without changing it, the presumption obtains that the legislature intended that the same construction should continue to be applied to that statute. Lewis v. State, 58 App. 351, 127 S. W. 808, 21 Ann. Cas. 656, and cases cited.

The holding of a local option election in December, 1909, in which local option carried, after the passage of the local option law making its violation a felony, operated to repeal the misdemeanor punishment imposed by the former local option statute, and to put in force the felony punishment as to offenses committed after such election was held. Enriquez v. State, 60 App. 580, 132 S. W. 782.

The adoption by a county, at an election held throughout the county, of Act April 24, 1909 (Laws 1909 [1st Called Sess. 31st Leg.] c. 35), amending Pen. Code 1895, art. 402 (art. 597, above), fixing the penalty for violating the local option law at confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than three years, superseded the prior local option law adopted in any of the precincts in the county, so that such penalty was operative throughout the county, including such precincts. Garrett v. State, 61 App. 254, 134 S. W. 696.

This article was not repealed by the vagrancy act (Acts 31st Leg. c. 59), defining and punishing vagrants. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 348.

This article construed in connection with articles 150 and 589. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 548, L. R. A. 1915C, 101.

5. License.—Whether local option is adopted before or after the passage of the law of 1897, license must be procured before one can sell liquor under the provisions of the law. Snearley v. State, 40 App. 507, 52 S. W. 547, 53 S. W. 696.

A local option election suspends the occupation tax, as it was under the act of 1893. Gibson v. State, 34 App. 219, 29 S. W. 1085.

Act of 25th Legislature providing for license for liquor dealers in local option precincts does not apply to precincts where local option is already in force. Ex parte Baines, 39 App. 62, 45 S. W. 24.

6. Offense.—Intoxicating liquor is a liquor intended for use as a beverage, or capable of being so used, which contains alcohol, obtained by fermentation or by distillation, in such proportion that it will produce intoxication, when taken in such quantities as may practically be drunk. Sandoloski v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 151.

This article and article 589 create two distinct offenses. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1066; Mizell v. State, 59 App. 226, 128 S. W. 125.

When prohibition has been declared, it operates a revocation of all licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors within the locality adopting it, and a subsequent sale of such liquor within such locality, made under an unexpired license granted before the prohibition, is a violation of law. Robertson v. State, 12 App. 541; Ex parte Lynn, 19 App. 293.

It is immaterial with what intent one sells liquor in a local option district. Pike v. State, 40 App. 615, 51 S. W. 395; Howard v. State, 72 App. 624, 163 S. W. 429.

State*, 38 App. 537, 43 S. W. 997.

State* (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 164.

In a prosecution for wrongful selling of liquor to H. in violation of the prohibition law, evidence that defendant had been bound over to await the action of the grand jury on a complaint charging him with pursuing the occupation of selling intoxicating liquors, and that the state in such proceeding relied on the sale to H. as one of the sales by which it was intended to show that defendant was guilty of pursuing the occupation, furnished no defense. Sinclair v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 530.

An indictment charging that defendant sold and gave away liquors sufficiently charges a sale. Jordan v. State, 37 App. 224, 38 S. W. 780, 39 S. W. 111; Ellis v. State, 59 App. 419, 128 S. W. 1125.

Indictment held sufficient. Williams v. State, 37 App. 238, 39 S. W. 664; Sedberry v. State, 14 App. 233.

There is a variance between an indictment or information charging that the accused sold intoxicating liquors to a certain person and proof that the sale was made to that person's agent. Miles v. State, 62 App. 530, 138 S. W. 398; Clay v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 430.

An indictment for selling liquor within some locality where its sale is specially prohibited need only follow the statute. It need not designate the house where sold, or the person to whom sold, and it need not set out the special statute. Ryan v. State, 32 Tex. 280; State v. Heldt, 41 Tex. 220.

When a sham gift, but a real sale, is the offense, the indictment should charge that the gift was made "with the purpose of evading the law." Stallworth v. State, 16 App. 345; Holley v. State, 14 App. 505.

A prohibited sale of liquors is per se a violation of law and not an evasion of law. It is not necessary, therefore, that indictment should allege a sale with the purpose of evading law. McMillan v. State, 18 App. 375.

Information for violating local option law must allege adoption and promulgation of the law. Hall v. State, 37 App. 219, 39 S. W. 117.

Information need not allege that election was ordered by commissioners' court. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 39 S. W. 578.

An indictment which alleges that the election had been held in the precinct, city or town, or a subdivision, describing it; that the commissioners' court had passed an order declaring the result, and that said order had been duly published as required by law, is sufficient in regard to the adoption of the law. Williams v. State, 37 App. 238, 39 S. W. 664.

The indictment must allege that the sale took place in the prohibited territory. To allege that the sale took place in "the precinct of Justice of the Peace No. 1," is not sufficient. Williams v. State, 38 App. 377, 43 S. W. 115.

Where indictment describes territory by metes and bounds and evidence shows that lines do not close, defendant should be acquitted. Matkins v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 109.

Indictment must allege that the liquor was sold in the local option territory. Maddox v. State, 42 App. 509, 60 S. W. 960.

An information which alleges that the commissioners' court of the county had duly made, passed, and entered an order declaring the result of the local option election and prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor within the county, as required by law, and had caused the order to be published in the manner and form and for the length of time, required by law, is sufficient, without alleging in terms that the county judge published the order declaring the result of the election. Wesley v. State, 57 App. 277, 122 S. W. 550.

An information which states the date of the offense within the period of limitation, and which avers that the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors was in force, is good, without alleging the date of the local option election, where at the date of the offense and of the filing of the information, and at the time of trial, the statute imposed a penalty by fine and imprisonment in the county jail, notwithstanding a subsequent act making the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors a felony. Coy v. State, 59 App. 379, 128 S. W. 414.

An indictment need not allege the date upon which the local option election was held in the county. Enriquez v. State, 60 App. 580, 132 S. W. 782.

An indictment which alleges a sale in a certain named county, is sufficient in its designation of the place of offense. Green v. State, 62 App. 345, 137 S. W. 126.

It is no ground for the quashing of an indictment that it charged that the order of commissioners' court absolutely prohibited the sale of intoxicating liquors in the designated county without negating the exceptions under which such liquors might be sold, since the law itself makes the exceptions. Green v. State, 62 App. 345, 137 S. W. 126.

Though two indictments were pending against defendant, one for sale on the 6th of a month, and the other for a sale on the 11th of the month, it was not error to allow the state on a trial under the former indictment to elect, after the close of the evidence to rely for a conviction on the sale on the 11th; it not having been suggested that defendant was surprised by the election or had a valid defense to the transaction of that date. James v. State, 63 App. 75, 138 S. W. 612.

The state, though required to show the local option law was in force, may prove the facts necessary therefor without pleading them. James v. State, 63 App. 75, 138 S. W. 612.

Where an indictment alleged that the election was properly held "on or about March 12, 1910," it was not objectionable for indefiniteness as to the date of the election. Wright v. State, 63 App. 429, 140 S. W. 1105.

An information filed in county court, charging that accused sold intoxicating liquors on September 29, 1909, which was after Act April 24, 1909 (Acts 31st Leg. [1st Ex. Sess.] c. 35), went into effect, and that the sale was made after an election had been held in the territory, was insufficient in failing to show that the county court had jurisdiction of the offense, for the county court has jurisdiction only of misdemeanors, and, if the election was held after act of April 24, 1909, went into existence, the sale was a felony. Head v. State, 64 App. 112, 141 S. W. 536.

Evidence held to indicate a sale of liquor to B., if a sale was made to any one, and not to P., as alleged in the indictment. Whitstone v. State, 64 App. 168, 141 S. W. 951.

In an affidavit for violating the local option law, it was alleged that at an election held it was determined that the sale of intoxicating liquors should be prohibited in justice precinct No. 4, and the necessary orders made and publication had, and that thereafter, on a date specified, a person named "did then and there sell intoxicating liquor" to a person named. The information followed the complaint, except that, instead of the words "then and there," the words "thereafter in said justice precinct" were used. Held, that the affidavit sufficiently charges that the sale took place in justice precinct No. 4, and that there was no variance between the affidavit and the information in that respect; both affidavit and information charging the offense to have been committed in prohibited territory (citing Words & Phrases, vol. 8, p. 6946). Moreno v. State, 64 App. 660, 143 S. W. 156, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 863.

An objection that an information does not show that the election putting prohibition into effect was held before the passage of the Act of April 24, 1909, c.

35, making such sale a felony, is an objection to the form of the information, and to be available an exception must be taken before announcement for trial. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 348.

An indictment charging the commission of such an offense on August 1, 1909, held to charge only a misdemeanor. Mealer v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 353.

An indictment presented in the district court, and alleging that defendant on January 20, 1911, violated the local option law, which election was held on March 5, 1910, properly alleges the date of the election, conferring jurisdiction upon the district court. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 588.

Though an information for violating the local option law is required, by Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 478, subd. 2, to allege the date of the local option election by which the law was put in force, such allegation being no part of the offense, failure of an information to include it did not render it fatally defective, under article 476, providing that formal defects in indictments shall be disregarded, which is made applicable to informations by article 480. Meyer v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 919.

An objection made for the first time in the motion for rehearing that an information for selling liquor in prohibition territory is defective for failing to allege the date of the election by which prohibition was put in force comes too late. Crawford v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 229.

An objection to an indictment charging a violation of the local option law, on the ground that it does not allege the date of the adoption of prohibition, cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Ferguson v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 239.

The complaint and information were not fatally defective for not alleging the date of the prohibition election, or when the law was put in force. Snell v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 615.

An information in the county court for a violation of the prohibitory law, which alleges that such law was then in force, but does not allege the date when such law was adopted or put in force, should be quashed as not showing jurisdiction of the court. Parker v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1184.

A person indicted for pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquors cannot be convicted for making a single sale. Leonard v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 632.

An indictment which alleges, without giving the date, that the prohibition law was put in force by election orders, etc., prior to the time the act making it a felony was passed, was sufficient. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 997.

That a complainant swore positively to a sale, instead of alleging that he had reason to believe and did believe that a sale was made, was not ground for quashing a complaint and information. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1196.

That a complaint and information did not negative the fact that the sale was on a prescription was not ground for quashing it. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1196.

An indictment which alleges that the local option election was held on June 6, 1903, and that on August 17, 1912, accused made a sale of liquor, sufficiently shows that the county court has jurisdiction of the offense. Jones v. State, 70 App. 343, 156 S. W. 1191.

An affidavit charging a violation of the local option law need not allege that the sale of liquor was unlawful. Giles v. State, 70 App. 550, 157 S. W. 943.

An indictment charging an illegal sale of intoxicating liquor after the adoption of prohibition, which does not allege when prohibition was adopted, charges prima facie a felony when the offense was committed after the felony statute went into effect. Johnson v. State, 70 App. 582, 157 S. W. 1196.

An indictment is not subject to motion to quash, because not specifically stating the date of the election when prohibition was carried, and whether the law was put in force prior or subsequent to Acts 31st Leg. (1st Ex. Sess.) c. 35, which makes subsequent violations felonies instead of misdemeanors. Nobles v. State, 71 App. 121, 158 S. W. 1133.

An indictment alleging that a prohibition election was held anterior to July 1, 1909, and in accordance with the laws of the state, sufficiently showed that the local option law was in force at and prior to July 1, 1909, and was therefore sufficient as to the date. Cobb v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 73.

The information or indictment should allege the date of the adoption of the local option law, for, if the election was held subsequent to the passage of the felony statute, the county court would not have jurisdiction, and, if held before, it would have jurisdiction. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 705.

10. Evidence.—Adoption of prohibition, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 5721, 5722, 5727 and notes.

11. — Judicial notice.—Courts do not know judicially that beer is an intoxicating liquor. Where the account sued on was for beer, and defendant pleaded that the sale was for intoxicating liquor sold him in local option territory, the evidence must show that beer is an intoxicating liquor. Dallas Brewery v. Holmes Bros., 51 Civ. App. 514, 112 S. W. 124.

The local option law is a local or special law, and is in force only in those counties where the people have adopted it, and the court on appeal does not judicially know in what territory it has been adopted. Dorman v. State, 64 App. 104, 141 S. W. 526.

12. — Presumptions and burden of proof.—See notes under art. 52, ante and art. 785, C. C. P.

To sustain a conviction of violating the local option law, the law must be shown to be operative in the territory where the offense occurred. Ellis v. State, 59 App. 419, 128 S. W. 1125; Curry v. State, 28 App. 475, 13 S. W. 773; Ex parte Sublett, 23 App. 309, 4 S. W. 894; Wells v. State, 24 App. 230, 5 S. W. 830; Woodward v. State, 58 App. 411, 126 S. W. 270; Ellis v. State, 59 App. 630, 130 S. W. 171; Poudrill v. State, 61 App. 431, 135 S. W. 126; Dorman v. State, 64 App. 104, 141 S. W. 526;

Ferguson v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 239; Galloway v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 857; Lester v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 861; Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 997; Johnson v. State, 70 App. 582, 157 S. W. 1196. And see, also, Ninenger v. State, 25 App. 449, 8 S. W. 480; Croom v. State, 25 App. 556, 8 S. W. 661; Ex parte Burrage, 26 App. 35, 9 S. W. 72.

When the State made out a prima facie case by introducing the orders of the court the burden then shifts to the defendant to show such orders illegal. Frickie v. State, 39 App. 254, 45 S. W. 810.

The burden is upon the State to prove that the order of prohibition was duly published. This may be proven by a certified copy of the order required to be entered by the judge, or by the newspaper containing the publication. Jones v. State, 38 App. 533, 43 S. W. 981.

The burden is on the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the beverage sold was intoxicating. Cannan v. State, 71 App. 416, 159 S. W. 1186.

13. — Admissibility in general.—See notes under art. 783 et seq., C. C. P.

Evidence that drunken men were seen about the drug store of defendant during the time he had blackberry cordial for sale, is admissible to prove that it was intoxicating. Pike v. State, 40 App. 614, 51 App. 395.

Evidence of other sales of the same beverage is not admissible to show intent. Dane v. State, 36 App. 84, 35 S. W. 661.

Where defense was that defendant was steward for a social club, and was merely dispensing liquor as such; held competent for the State to prove the amount of intoxicating liquors shipped to such club between given dates. Arnold v. State, 38 App. 1, 40 S. W. 734.

Other sales than that alleged may be proved to show character of business in which defendant was engaged. Matkins v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 109.

Return and poll list of election held competent in evidence. Nelson v. State (Cr. App.) 75 S. W. 502.

When one is arrested under this act he cannot be compelled to be sworn to testify in the case. He is virtually a defendant in the case and cannot be compelled to incriminate himself, and there is no object in swearing him except to get his testimony. He is guilty of no contempt if he refuses to be sworn. Ex parte Sauls, 46 App. 209, 78 S. W. 1073.

The original minutes of the commissioners' court, containing the orders going to make a valid local option law, are admissible to prove the existence of the law. Holley v. State, 46 App. 324, 81 S. W. 957.

It was proper to permit minutes of commissioners' court to be corrected and read. Cantwell v. State, 47 App. 521, 85 S. W. 18.

Evidence describing the buildings, fixtures, and surroundings where the liquor was sold was admissible. Todd v. State, 57 App. 26, 121 S. W. 506.

Where the complaint was made by the sheriff, who saw the sale made, and who brought the buyer to the courthouse before a justice of the peace, evidence as to why the buyer did not make the complaint was inadmissible. Wooten v. State, 57 App. 89, 121 S. W. 703.

Evidence that the proprietor of the drug store where the alleged sale of liquors was made had employed the accused, a day or two before, to haul away empty beer and whisky bottles, is inadmissible, as not tending to show a sale by the accused. Hankins v. State, 57 App. 152, 122 S. W. 21.

Where defendant was convicted upon the testimony of but one witness, evidence that defendant, while upon the way to trial, upon being overtaken by a buggy in which the witness was riding, halted it, and pulled the witness out, and fought with him, was inadmissible. Haney v. State, 57 App. 158, 122 S. W. 34.

Evidence that seven weeks before the alleged sale liquors were found in defendant's possession is inadmissible if objected to by defendant. Goss v. State, 57 App. 557, 124 S. W. 107.

Where the state sought to show that accused was a partner of a third person who was believed to be selling whisky, and that under the arrangement accused undertook to sell whisky stored on his premises, evidence of the declarations of accused, his presence at the third person's place, and familiarity with the business, was admissible as a circumstance to show the relation. Holt v. State, 57 App. 432, 125 S. W. 43.

Where the state sought to show that accused was a partner of a third person, who was selling whisky, and that under the arrangement accused sold whisky, and accused denied the firm arrangement, evidence that accused had told another that he did not want his wife to know that he was in the liquor business, because he had been in that business before and had gotten into trouble, was admissible as showing accused's reason for not disclosing his connection with the third person. Holt v. State, 57 App. 432, 125 S. W. 43.

It is competent to show that one charged with selling intoxicating liquors on a designated date in violation of the local option law had on that date received whisky by express. Ellis v. State, 59 App. 626, 130 S. W. 170.

The state may show that accused received liquor during several months prior to and up to the date of the offense. Ellis v. State, 59 App. 630, 130 S. W. 171.

The prosecuting witness testified on cross-examination that he was an ex-saloon keeper and bartender, and ran a saloon in another state, and that he knew what whisky was, whereupon defendant asked him if the whisky he claimed to have purchased from him was the same character of whisky he had sold while he was in that business, for the purpose of showing that the liquor sold was not pure whisky, and that the witness could not say that it was an intoxicant. Held, that the evidence sought was objectionable, since the question was whether the liquor sold was whisky, and not whether it was the kind that prosecuting witness had himself sold. Green v. State, 62 App. 345, 137 S. W. 126.

A violation of the local option law may be proved by a copy of the entries in the books of the internal revenue collector showing the issuance of an internal revenue license, as expressly permitted by art. 603. Columbo v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 910.

Evidence that accused had received eight barrels of whisky was admissible to show the character of his business; and it was not error to fail to limit the effect of the testimony. Patton v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 1189.

The theory of defendant on a prosecution for sale of liquor to H. being that he acted only as agent of H., testimony of a witness that he saw defendant call M. and give him the money which H. had furnished, and saw M. go away and after some time return with the liquor and give it to defendant, who in turn gave it to H., is admissible. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 251.

Prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, testimony as to whether the assistant county attorney, at the time he induced witnesses to purchase liquor from the accused, had announced himself as a candidate for county attorney, was wholly immaterial. Lawson v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 587.

Evidence to show that defendant had access to a quantity of whisky at the time of the alleged sales was admissible. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1053.

Evidence that liquors other than those involved were found on premises controlled by accused, and were claimed by him, was inadmissible to show intent to commit the particular offense. Stewart v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1150.

Evidence that accused resisted arrest, drew a dirk, and cut the officers who were arresting her, was admissible. Moreno v. State, 71 App. 460, 160 S. W. 361.

Evidence held to authorize the admission in evidence of a bottle of diluted alcohol claimed to be the liquor purchased by prosecutrix from accused. Thompson v. State, 72 App. 6, 160 S. W. 685.

Evidence as to the receipt by accused of shipments of liquor about and prior to the time of the alleged sale was admissible to show his possession of the article alleged to have been sold. Cowley v. State, 72 App. 173, 161 S. W. 471.

Where the state showed the receipt by accused of shipments of whisky about and prior to the time of the alleged sale, the waybills for which described the shipments as a specified number of quarts and pints, the testimony of the express agent that he had examined shipments so marked, addressed to other parties, and found them to contain half pint bottles should have been excluded, though, if he had examined any of the shipments addressed to accused and found such condition to exist, he could so testify. Cowley v. State, 72 App. 173, 161 S. W. 471.

Where accused testified that he was asked by the prosecuting witness to get him some whisky from D. and that he did so, it was error to exclude evidence of a witness that accused, just prior to the alleged sale, asked him if he knew where D. was, telling him that he wished to get some whisky from D. for a sick person, that he directed accused to D., and that accused left in that direction, and immediately thereafter delivered a half pint of whisky to the prosecuting witness, since this would have strongly supported accused's theory. Cowley v. State, 72 App. 173, 161 S. W. 471.

It is error to permit a witness to state that he had heard people say that they believed accused was selling whisky. Sasser v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1160.

A witness, knowing the reputation of accused as a bootlegger of whisky in prohibition territory, may testify as to whether his reputation is good or bad. Sasser v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1160.

Evidence that officers under a search warrant found in accused's trunk about 76 pint bottles of whisky was admissible. Martoni v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 349.

The state may, on the cross-examination of accused, show that he had at the time of the alleged offense a United States internal revenue license to sell whisky. Martoni v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 349.

It was not error to permit the prosecuting witness, who had testified that he bought the liquor for two other persons, to testify that after making the purchase he gave it to one of those persons, who shared it with the other. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 895.

The state may cross-examine the defendant as to the number of times within the last six months or a year he had gone away and brought back with him intoxicating liquors, for the purpose of proving that he had, from time to time, procured and had on hand such liquor. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 895.

Evidence that when arrested on the second day after the sale defendant had an unopened pint of whisky on his person was admissible as a circumstance to show that he made the sale as charged. McCuen v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 738.

14. — Internal revenue license.—An examined copy from the books of the internal revenue collector is admissible in evidence in trial of case of violating the local option law. Biddy v. State (Cr. App.) 108 S. W. 692; Gerstenkorn v. State, 38 App. 621, 44 S. W. 503; Broadnax v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1168.

It is not permissible for a witness to testify from memory or copy made by him of the internal revenue or collector's books as to an entry in said books. Biddy v. State (Cr. App.) 107 S. W. 814; Broadnax v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1168.

Certified copies of revenue officer's books made by him or his deputy are admissible to show issuance of license, but the contents of the book cannot be proved by a party making a memorandum from such books, and testifying from it or from memory. Goble v. State, 42 App. 501, 60 S. W. 969.

The sheet showing the paying of an internal revenue liquor tax by defendant was not admissible, unless properly proven by an examined copy or otherwise. Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 252.

If a sheet, showing an internal revenue liquor tax to have been paid by defendant, was properly proven, testimony of witnesses that they had seen an internal revenue license posted in defendant's place of business was admissible though they were unable to state the wording of the license. Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 252.

15. — Weight and sufficiency.—See Dickerson v. State, 72 App. 539, 162 S. W. 1155; Wolfe v. State, 38 App. 537, 43 S. W. 997; Goff v. State, 57 App.

An order of the commissioners' court and their publication of the result of a local option election held sufficient to establish its legality. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 65 S. W. 916.

The order for a local option election, the order declaring the result, and the certificate of the county judge, held sufficient evidence that local option was in force in the territory specified. Cantwell v. State, 47 App. 521, 85 S. W. 18.

Issuance of internal revenue license to one is prima facie evidence that he is engaged in selling intoxicating liquors. Fox v. State, 53 App. 150, 109 S. W. 372.

A statement by a witness that there was a local option law in the county held insufficient to show that fact so as to sustain a conviction for its violation. Bills v. State, 55 App. 541, 117 S. W. 835.

While, under the statute, contests of local option elections must be taken in due time, the court should in every prosecution for violating the local option law require the introduction of formal orders of the commissioner's court adopting local option in the county. Id.

A sale in violation of the local option law may be made by implication as well as by direct contract, so that no words are necessary to constitute a transaction a "sale," but passage of the property with intent to sell is enough. Jackson v. State, 57 App. 341, 123 S. W. 142.

A county court record, purporting to show the proceedings taken for the adoption of local option, but failing to state for what purpose the local option election was held, and the minutes failing to show whether the result of the election was favorable or unfavorable, was not sufficient to show that local option had been adopted in the county. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 940.

Evidence held to show that the law was in force before the sales were made. Nobles v. State, 71 App. 121, 158 S. W. 1133.

Evidence held insufficient to establish the publication, which was a condition precedent to the going into effect of the law. Walker v. State, 72 App. 536, 163 S. W. 71.

On a trial in 1915 for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors on or about January 1, 1915, the state proved that prohibition was in force in the county under an election held in 1904. A witness testified positively to the sale to him by accused of whisky in 1915, and that "I bought said whisky this year. This year is 1904." Held, that the evidence supported a verdict of guilty, as it was clear that the witness intended 1915, and not 1904, and no one could have understood otherwise. Hart v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 1175.

16. Questions for jury.—See notes under art. 786, C. C. P.

Question whether local option law is in force in a county is for jury. Strickland v. State (Cr. App.) 47 S. W. 470.

Evidence held to raise the issue as to whether the purchases were made by accused as agent so as to require the submission of the question. Scott v. State, 70 App. 57, 153 S. W. 871.

Evidence as to whether accused made unlawful sales held for the jury. Nobles v. State, 71 App. 121, 158 S. W. 1133.

It is usually a question for the jury to decide whether an accused sold intoxicating liquors or not, but the facts must show a sale. Latham v. State, 71 App. 552, 160 S. W. 455.

Where accused was charged with illegally selling certain alcohol to prosecutrix in prohibition territory, and the bottle containing the alcohol was admitted in evidence, it was proper for the court to permit it to go to the jury for them to "smell its contents"; it not appearing that they drank any of it. Thompson v. State, 72 App. 6, 160 S. W. 685.

Where, on a trial for violating the prohibition law, a witness swore positively that he purchased a bottle of whisky from accused and paid him therefor, while accused denied making the sale, there was a question for the jury. Hart v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 1175.

17. Instructions.—See notes under art. 735 et seq. C. C. P.

If the court charge upon simulation he must give the character of the simulation. Vanarsdale v. State, 35 App. 588, 84 S. W. 931.

It is unnecessary to define in the charge intoxicating liquor because it is commonly understood what it is. Pike v. State, 40 App. 615, 51 S. W. 395.

Under an indictment charging a sale to a particular person an instruction allowing a conviction for a sale to any person is erroneous. Drechsel v. State, 35 App. 580, 34 S. W. 934.

On trial for sale in a particular precinct an instruction on a sale in "a" local option precinct is erroneous. Hood v. State, 35 App. 585, 34 S. W. 935.

For a correct instruction as to the meaning of the word traffic, see Levine v. State, 35 App. 647, 34 S. W. 969.

On trial for selling to a certain person, an instruction permitting a conviction for a sale to any person is erroneous. Lafferty v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 373.

When the orders required by statute have been properly made, and have been introduced in evidence, it is not error for the court to instruct the jury that local option is in force, unless defendant has proven, or introduced testimony tending to prove, that some of the requisites of the statute were not complied with. Shields v. State, 38 App. 252, 42 S. W. 398.

The court can instruct the jury that local option has gone into effect at the time specified in the order, there being no controversy as to this. Webb v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 83.

When order declaring result has been made by commissioners' court, it is presumed that all antecedent necessary steps to validity of law have been taken and defendant must show that orders have not been entered, and in absence of such proof court can assume in charge to jury that local option is in force. Allen v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 265.

A charge that the law was in force held justified. Sebastian v. State, 44 App. 508, 72 S. W. 849.

Where the accusation is for the sale of malt liquors and an internal revenue license or an examined copy of the same is introduced in evidence against the defendant, the court is not authorized to instruct the jury that the same is prima facie evidence that appellant is engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors. The malt liquors may or may not be intoxicating. Uloth v. State, 48 App. 295, 87 S. W. 823.

It is not correct to charge that the issuance of an internal revenue license to defendant is evidence of his guilt of the particular offense charged. Gorman v. State, 52 App. 327, 106 S. W. 385.

A charge that it was agreed between the state and accused that during the year within which accused could be found guilty of selling intoxicating liquors the local option law was in effect and the sale of intoxicating liquors prohibited, sufficiently charged that the local option law was in force. Matthews v. State, 57 App. 328, 122 S. W. 544.

Where the evidence showed that the sale occurred after the publication of the result of the election and before the filing of the pleading charging accused with the offense, a charge that if accused, within two years from the filing of the pleading in the case, sold intoxicants in violation of the local option law, he was guilty, was correct, though the election adopting local option was being contested. Gober v. State, 57 App. 66, 123 S. W. 427.

On prosecution for an illegal sale of liquor to witness, the evidence showed that witness and B. and others jointly contributed $1.50 with which to buy a quart of whisky, and gave the money to B.; that all went to the hotel where defendant was working, and asked him if he had any whisky, and he replied that he did not, but might get some, and took the money and departed, returning with whisky, which he gave to B., or one of the others. Witness testified that he had never purchased whisky from defendant, had nothing to do with buying it, but merely put in 50 cents. Held, that an instruction that if defendant did not himself, or through an agent, sell to witness, he should be acquitted, was an insufficient presentation of defendant's case, and it was error to refuse to instruct that if no whisky was delivered to witness, but was delivered to B., and that B. gave defendant money with which to buy liquor, and not witness, they should acquit. Burrell v. State, 58 App. 293, 125 S. W. 575.

Where the evidence of the state was limited to the date alleged in the information, and there was no evidence that accused was engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors on the day of the trial, a charge that the issuance of an internal revenue license is prima facie proof that accused has paid the special tax as a seller of liquors, and is prima facie proof that he is engaged in the business of selling intoxicating liquors, was not objectionable as charging that the internal revenue license made a prima facie case that accused was, at the date of the trial, engaged in the liquor business. Coy v. State, 59 App. 379, 128 S. W. 414.

An instruction that no particular formality is required to constitute a sale, and that the essential ingredients are a meeting of the parties' minds on a sale and purchase for an agreed price and the purchaser's obtention of possession by the act or agency of the seller, was not erroneous as failing to instruct that to constitute a completed sale the purchaser must pay or agree to pay the price when he obtains possession, where the court had instructed that a sale is a parting with title and possession for an agreed consideration by one party and the acceptance of the property and payment of the price or consideration by the other. Kirksey v. State, 61 App. 641, 135 S. W. 577.

Where the evidence shows the proper orders of election, carrying prohibition, the putting of the law in force, publications, etc., the court should charge that the law is in force. Looper v. State, 62 App. 96, 136 S. W. 791.

Defendant's requested instruction that if he gave the liquor to the prosecuting witness, and if such witness had asked defendant if he had such liquor at that time, and that if such witness owed the defendants at that time, or if there was reasonable doubt as to those facts, they should find for defendant, held properly refused. Green v. State, 62 App. 345, 137 S. W. 126.

An instruction that, if the defendant merely gave the liquor to the prosecuting witness without pay, he should be acquitted, is proper; and a requested addition to this instruction that if defendant gave the liquor to the prosecuting witness, or intended to give and to sell it to him without pay therefor, defendant should be acquitted, is properly refused. Green v. State, 62 App. 345, 137 S. W. 126.

Where the orders made in the election adopting local option are put in evidence and no issue is raised as to the regularity of the election, the court should charge that local option is in force in the county. Dozier v. State, 62 App. 258, 137 S. W. 679.

Evidence held to require a requested charge that, if accused purchased the liquor merely as agent and did not himself sell it to the alleged purchaser, the jury should acquit. Johnson v. State, 63 App. 457, 140 S. W. 337.

An instruction that a delivery of intoxicating liquors may be by the person charged with the sale, or by him acting through some one else, and if the defendant in person sold the liquor to the witness, and delivered the liquor himself in person, or through some other person acting with the defendant, or under his instructions, such delivery would authorize a verdict of guilty, providing the other essential elements of the sale were found held proper. Beck v. State, 63 App. 615, 141 S. W. 111.

Where the evidence showed that accused bought whisky for prosecutor while acting as an accommodation agent of the prosecutor to secure whisky, a charge that if accused sold whisky to prosecutor, or acted as agent of a third person in selling whisky to prosecutor, he was guilty, was unauthorized by the evidence, which called for a charge, when requested by accused, that if he acted as the agent of prosecutor in purchasing the whisky he must be acquitted. Brewster v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 339.

Evidence held not to authorize an instruction that accused would be guilty of violating the local option law, if he acted as an agent for the person selling the whisky. Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 578.

Where the evidence was that the state's witness gave defendant 50 cents to buy whisky, and on defendant's return with alcohol refused it, and then followed defendant and took it from him, and was conflicting as to whether defendant consented to the taking, the failure to submit the question of defendant's consent was reversible error. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 550.

Where there was evidence of more than two sales about the same time that accused was charged with a commission of the offense, an instruction that, in order to convict, the jury must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that accused had made the two specific sales alleged in the complaint and information, and that one sale would not constitute a retail malt dealer, was proper and sufficient. Ausbrook v. State, 70 App. 289, 156 S. W. 1177.

Where, on a trial for selling beer in prohibition territory, witnesses testified that the beer would not intoxicate, the court must charge that, unless the jury found that the beer was intoxicating, or if they had a reasonable doubt of the fact, they must acquit accused. Jones v. State, 70 App. 343, 156 S. W. 1191.

A clerical error in an instruction as to the time of the sale held not misleading. Giles v. State, 70 App. 550, 157 S. W. 943.

The court can only charge that prohibition is in force where proof has been made of the orders for the election, of the commissioners' court declaring the result in favor of prohibition, and putting prohibition in force, and of the publication of the order putting prohibition in force. Johnson v. State, 70 App. 582, 157 S. W. 1196.

Charges that the burden was on the state to prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, that accused sold the liquor as charged, and that he was not acting as agent for the prosecuting witness, and if he was, there was no sale, sufficiently presents the defense that accused merely procured the liquor as the witness' agent. Nobles v. State, 71 App. 121, 158 S. W. 1133.

A charge that if accused, "with the purpose" and "for the purpose" of evading such law did sell intoxicating liquors, he should be found guilty is improper in the use of the quoted phrases; for there is no law punishing a man for selling intoxicating liquor in prohibition territory for such purpose. Nobles v. State, 71 App. 121, 158 S. W. 1133.

It was error to charge that the burden was on the state in the first instance to prove that beer was sold, whereupon the burden shifted to defendant to prove that the beer so sold was not intoxicating. Cannan v. State, 71 App. 416, 159 S. W. 1186.

Where the indictment was returned March 31, 1913, and the evidence showed that the sale in question took place, if at all, on March 25, 1913, it was not error for the court to charge that, if the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant in A. county, Tex., at any time during the month of March, and before the 31st day thereof, did sell intoxicating liquors, etc., they should find him guilty. Thompson v. State, 72 App. 6, 160 S. W. 685.

18. Appeal.—Recognizance, see Code Crim. Proc. art. 919.

When the statement of facts fails to show that local option was in force the case will be reversed. Wartelsky v. State, 38 App. 629, 44 S. W. 510; Whittlesey v. State, 72 App. 614, 163 S. W. 78.

Where, on a trial for violating the local option law, the state introduced orders for a local option election, declaring the result of the election, and ordering publication thereof, but did not show the result of the election, nor a publication of the proclamation declaring the result, nor the date of the election, the appellate court could not presume that the local option law had been adopted at the time of an alleged sale. Ellis v. State, 59 App. 626, 130 S. W. 170.

19. Punishment.—Punishment of two years in the penitentiary on conviction for selling liquor in violation of the prohibition law is not excessive, where the statute authorizes confinement in the penitentiary for not less than one nor more than three years. Mitchell v. State, 71 App. 241, 158 S. W. 815.

20. Seizure.—A petition for an injunction to restrain a seizure must allege facts showing that the prerequisites of a complaint and search warrant had not been complied with, and an allegation that defendant had, and, unless restrained, would continue, to search applicant's place of business, "without legal process or authority of law," is but the statement of a legal conclusion and insufficient. Moss v. Whitson (Civ. App.) 130 S. W. 1034.

Art. 598. [403] Not applicable, when.—The preceding article shall not apply to the sale of wines for sacramental purposes, nor to alcoholic stimulants as medicines in cases of actual sickness; but such stimulants shall only be sold upon the prescription of a regular practicing physician, dated and signed by him and certified on his honor that he (the physician) has personally examined the applicant (naming him), and that he finds him actually sick and in need of the stimulant prescribed as a medicine; provided, that a physician who does not follow the profession of medicine as his principal or usual calling, or who is in any way, directly or indirectly, engaged in the sale of such stimulants on his own account or as the agent, employé, or partner of others, shall not be authorized to give the prescription provided for in this article; and provided, further, that no person shall be permitted to sell more than once on the same prescription, nor upon a prescription which has been canceled, nor on a prescription which is not dated, signed and certified, as above required; provided, that every person selling such stimulants upon the prescription herein provided for shall cancel such prescription by indorsing on it the word "canceled," and file the same away, and on the first day of July, 1903, and every month thereafter, file the said prescription with the clerk of the district court, accompanied by an affidavit, stating that he has sold no intoxicating liquor other than that named in the prescriptions filed, which said prescriptions shall be preserved by the clerk of the district court for a period of three years from and after the date of filing, subject to the inspection of the grand jury, district, county and precinct officers. [Added by Act March 30, 1887, pp. 70-71; amended, Act 1903, p. 56.]

Former statute.—Old article 379 was as follows:

The preceding article shall not apply to the sale of wine for sacramental purposes, nor to the sale of alcoholic stimulants as medicine, in cases of actual sickness, upon the written prescription of a regular practicing physician, certifying upon honor that the same is actually necessary as a medicine. [Act June 24, 1876, p. 26.]

Offense.—When a party has a regular certified prescription, it is a good defense whether the prescription is canceled or not. Snead v. State, 40 App. 265, 49 S. W. 595.

Intoxicants for medical purposes can only be sold upon a prescription certifying that a regular physician signing the prescription has personally examined the party to whom the prescription is given, and that he is actually sick; and he must certify these matters upon his honor. The terms of the exception must be followed. McLain v. State, 42 App. 213, 64 S. W. 866.

One can be punished for failing to file the prescriptions accompanied by the affidavit mentioned in this article. Holland v. State, 51 App. 547, 103 S. W. 631, 632.

A physician gave a prescription and directed the patient to take it in whiskey. The patient gave the physician a sum of money who delivered him whiskey in his possession with the statement that it belonged to another patient, and with the understanding that the bottle ordered by the patient should replace the one delivered. Held, a sale under this article. Daniel v. State, 57 App. 467, 125 S. W. 37.

Indictment.—An indictment for violating the local option law need not negative that it was sold for sacramental or medicinal purposes. Williams v. State, 37 App. 238, 39 S. W. 664.

Complaint defective which fails to allege that sale of liquor was not made under prescription and does not contain other negative averments in article 7467, R. S. Gamble v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 95.

An indictment for selling liquor in violation of the local option law need not negative the exceptions in art. 598. Mayo v. State, 62 App. 110, 136 S. W. 790.

Disqualification of jurors.—West v. State, 35 App. 48, 30 S. W. 1069.

Art. 599. [404] Failure to cancel prescription; permitting liquor to be drunk on premises.—It shall be the duty of any person who sells any intoxicating liquor upon the prescription provided for in article 598 to write across the face of the prescription, with ink, the word "canceled," and file the same with the clerk of the district court, accompanied by an affidavit as hereinbefore provided; and for any failure to do so, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars; and if any person shall sell any intoxicating liquor upon the prescription provided for in article 598 and shall permit the same to be drunk at the place or establishment where sold, or at any other place provided for that purpose by such person, he shall be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Added by Act March 30, 1887, p. 71; amended Act 1903, p. 56.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 317.

Injunction.—The district court has jurisdiction to issue an injunction to restrain a druggist, licensed to sell liquor on prescription, from selling liquor in violation of law. Ex parte Roper, 61 App. 68, 134 S. W. 334.

An injunction restraining a druggist licensed to sell liquor on prescription is not void because it restrains him from selling on prescriptions in accordance with law, as well as without prescriptions in violation of law; the remedy being by motion for its modification. Ex parte Roper, 61 App. 68, 134 S. W. 334.

Art. 600. [405] Giving prescription illegally.—If any person who is not a regular practicing physician shall give a prescription to be used in obtaining any intoxicating liquor in any county, school district, justice precinct, city or town, or subdivision of a county, in which the sale of intoxicating liquor has been prohibited under the laws of this state, or if any practicing physician who is directly or indirectly, either for himself or as the agent or employé of another, interested in the sale of liquor, shall give a prescription to be used in obtaining any intoxicating liquor in any such county, justice precinct, school district, city or town, or subdivision of a county, to any one who is not actually sick, and without a personal examination of such person, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail not less than twenty nor more than sixty days. [Added by Act March 30, 1887, p. 71; amended, Act 1903, p. 56.]

Offense.—This article makes it an offense to give a prescription to another party than the one writing the prescription. It is not unlawful for one to write a prescription for himself. Hawk v. State, 44 App. 560, 72 S. W. 842.

This article does not prohibit and punish giving prescriptions in local option territory other than those mentioned, to-wit: Counties, justices' precincts, cities and towns. School district not being mentioned in the statute, it is no offense to give a prescription in a school district territory where the local option law has been put in force. Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 73 S. W. 398.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 318.

An indictment charging a practicing physician with illegally giving a prescription should allege that such prescription was given without a personal examination. Stovall v. State, 37 App. 337, 39 S. W. 934. See, also, Stewart v. State, 35 App. 392, 33 S. W. 1081; Alford v. State, 37 App. 386, 35 S. W. 657.

Indictment must allege directly that party giving a prescription was a regular practicing physician. McQuerry v. State, 40 App. 572, 51 S. W. 247; West v. State, 40 App. 575, 51 S. W. 247.

When indictment alleges that prescription was given without a personal examination, proof that defendant made a personal examination is a variance from the allegation. McQuerry v. State, 40 App. 572, 51 S. W. 247.

It must also allege that local option was in force. Stewart v. State, 35 App. 392, 33 S. W. 1081; Alford v. State, 37 App. 386, 35 S. W. 657.

Evidence.—The person to whom the prescription was given testified that he was sick, and that defendant did examine him; held, that the evidence did not support the conviction. McQuerry v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 990.

Art. 601. [406] "Blind tiger" defined; penalty for keeping; procedure against.—Any person who shall keep or run, or shall be in any manner interested in keeping or running, a blind tiger in any county, justice precinct, school district, city or town, or subdivision of a county, in which the sale of intoxicating liquor has been prohibited under the laws of this state, he shall be punished by confinement in the county jail not less than two nor more than twelve months, and by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars. Each and every day such blind tiger is run or kept shall be a separate offense. A "blind tiger," within the meaning of this article, is any place in which intoxicating liquors are sold by any device whereby the party selling or delivering the same is concealed from the person buying or to whom the same is delivered. Upon complaint being filed with any county judge or justice of the peace describing the place where any "blind tiger" is kept or run, such county judge or justice shall issue his warrant, directing and commanding the sheriff, or any constable, of his county, to search such place, and, if the law is being violated, to arrest the person so violating it; and it shall be the duty of the officer to whom such warrant is delivered to search the place described in the warrant, and to arrest and bring before the county judge, or the justice who issued the writ, all persons found by him therein; and if admission into said place is refused, the officer executing said warrant is hereby authorized to force open the same. In prosecutions under this article, where it is proven that there is posted up at the place where such blind tiger is kept or run, United States internal revenue liquor or malt license, to any one, it shall be prima facie proof that the person to whom such license is issued is keeping and running such blind tiger. [Added by Act March 30, 1887, pp. 71, 72; Act 1901, 1st S. S. ch. 18; amended, Act 1903, p. 57.]

Constitutionality.—This article is not unconstitutional because it prescribes a higher punishment for sale of intoxicants by means of a "blind tiger" than for others. Schwulst v. State, 52 App. 426, 108 S. W. 698.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 319.

Art. 602. [407] Repeal of law does not exempt offender; offender not an accomplice.—When the sale of intoxicating liquor has been prohibited in any county, justice precinct, school district, city or town, or subdivision of a county, the repeal of such prohibition shall not exempt from punishment any person who may have offended against any of the provisions of the law while it was in force; and the fact that a person purchases intoxicating liquor from one who sells it in violation of the provisions of this chapter shall not constitute such person an accomplice. [Added by Act March 30, 1887, p. 72; amended, Act 1903, p. 56.]

Accomplices.—The purchaser of intoxicating liquor illegally sold is not an accomplice of the seller so as to make his testimony subject to the rule governing testimony of accomplices. Ray v. State, 60 App. 138, 131 S. W. 542.

A purchaser of liquor illegally sold is not an accomplice of the seller. Sears v. State, 35 App. 442, 34 S. W. 124; Robertson v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 1191.

Witnesses who were purchasers of intoxicating liquors are not accomplices in violating the law with the seller thereof. Trinkle v. State, 59 App. 257, 127 S. W. 1060; Id., 60 App. 187, 131 S. W. 583.

This article specifically provides that the purchaser of intoxicating liquors in a local option district is not an accomplice of the seller. Morrow v. State, 56 App. 519, 120 S. W. 491.

A purchaser of intoxicating liquor from one selling it in violation of the law and connected with the transaction in no other way is not an accomplice. Creech v. State, 70 App. 229, 158 S. W. 277.

The fact that one is employed to buy beer by the sheriff, from a party who sells it in violation of the law as amended by acts of 1903, does not make him an accomplice of the seller and therefore his testimony need not be corroborated. Terry v. State, 46 App. 75, 79 S. W. 320.

Where the court stated in the presence of the jury that he understood the law to be that a detective, or the purchaser of intoxicating liquors need not be corroborated, but that he would not so charge, and upon objection of defendant's counsel he withdrew the remark and instructed the jury not to consider it, no error was committed. Morrow v. State, 56 App. 519, 120 S. W. 492.

One who is requested by an officer to purchase liquor of accused, and who makes such purchase with his own money knowing that accused would be prosecuted if he sold him the liquor, is not an accomplice of accused. Moreno v. State, 64 App. 660, 143 S. W. 156, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 863.

It was not error for the court to refuse either to charge that a purchaser was an accomplice, or to submit that question to the jury. Neal v. State, 70 App. 584, 157 S. W. 1192.

A purchaser of intoxicating liquors in a local option district, though a detective or "spotter," is not an accomplice, either under this article or under the common law. Albright v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1001.

Uncorroborated evidence of a detective who admitted that he induced accused to make the sale in order to detect him in a violation of law, though contradicted by accused, will support a conviction for violation of the local option law. Looper v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 342.

Repeal.—One charged with violating the local option law, prior to the statute making a sale of intoxicating liquor a felony, is properly tried and punished under the statute, making a sale of liquor a misdemeanor, in force at the time of the offense. Sandoloski v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 151.

Art. 603. Entries in books of internal revenue collector admissible in evidence.—In prosecutions under the provisions of this law, an examined copy of the entries on the books of the internal revenue collector, showing that the United States internal revenue liquor or malt license has been issued to the person or persons charged with violating the provisions hereof, shall be admissible in evidence, and shall be held to be prima facie evidence that such person or persons has paid the United States special tax as a seller of spirituous or malt liquors, and shall be held prima facie proof that the person or persons paying such tax are engaged in selling intoxicating liquors. [Act 1903, p. 56.]

See ante art. 597.

Evidence.—Where a person took out an internal revenue license as a retail liquor dealer, the fact that he was engaged in selling nonintoxicating malt liquors, and was advised to take out a license for that reason, would not prevent the issuance of such license from being prima facie proof under this article. Columbo v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 910.

A violation of the local option law may be proved as permitted by this article, though article 597 also permits it to be proved by showing that an internal revenue license is posted in the place where the violation is charged to have occurred. Columbo v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 910.

Instructions.—A charge that the license introduced in evidence is prima facie evidence that the licensee is engaged in selling intoxicating liquors is not reversible error, the error in referring to the paper introduced in evidence as a license being immaterial. Columbo v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 910.

Art. 604. Persons, firms or associations engaged in business of keeping and storing intoxicating liquor.—If any person, firm or association of persons, agent or employé of any person, firm or association of persons, who are engaged in the business or occupation of keeping or storing spirituous, vinous, or intoxicating liquors for others, within any county, justice precinct, subdivision of a county, city or town, in which the sale of spirituous, vinous and intoxicating liquors has been prohibited under the laws of this state, shall permit any one to drink any spirituous, vinous or intoxicating liquors within such place of business, such person, firm or association of persons, agent or employés, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. [Act 1905, p. 91.]

Constitutionality.—This law is constitutional. Ex parte Massey, 49 App. 60, 92 S. W. 1084, 122 Am. St. Rep. 784.

Separate offenses.—No matter how many may drink at the same time, permitting any one to drink would be a separate offense. Teague v. State, 51 App. 523, 102 S. W. 1143.

Persons liable.—An owner who has no knowledge of the act of his clerk in permitting drinking is not guilty. Teague v. State, 51 App. 523, 102 S. W. 1143.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 320-322.

Instructions.—Where the defendant's evidence tended to show that he kept the liquors as an accommodation for others and not for hire a charge that by the terms "business" and "occupation" as used in this statute, is meant that which engages one's time and attention or labor, or that about which a person is engaged or employed, is too restrictive under the facts and erroneous. Cohen v. State, 53 App. 422, 110 S. W. 67, 68.

Art. 605. Penalty for.—Any person, firm or association of persons, or any agent or employé, found guilty of the above defined offense, shall be punished by a fine in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and by confinement in the county jail for not less than twenty nor more than sixty days. [Id., p. 91.]

Art. 606. Shipping intoxicating liquor; words to be placed on package; book to be kept.—Each and every person in this state, who shall place or have placed any package or parcel, of whatever nature, containing any intoxicating liquor, with any express company, railroad company or other common carrier, for shipment or transportation to any point in any county, justice precinct, school district, city or town, or subdivision of a county, within this state, where the sale of intoxicating liquors has been, or may hereafter be, prohibited under the laws of this state, shall first place in a conspicuous place, in plain letters, on such package or parcel the words: "Intoxicating liquor," the character and quantity of such intoxicating liquor, the place from where shipped, the place of destination and the names of the consignor and the consignee; and no express company, railroad company, or other common carrier, or any agent thereof, in this state, shall accept or receive from any person, firm or corporation, for shipment or transportation to any such point where the sale of intoxicating liquors has been, or may hereafter be, prohibited, under the laws of this state, any such package or parcel, unless the same shall have been labeled in the manner and form as hereinbefore in this article required; and no express company, railroad company, or other common carrier, or any agent thereof, in this state, shall deliver such package or parcel to any other than the consignee in person. Any agent of such express company, railroad company, or other common carrier, having the custody of any book or books required by this law of such express company, railroad company, or other common carrier, to be kept, shall, at the request of any person, at any reasonable time during office hours, produce such book or books for inspection by any officer of the law or any member of the grand jury.

When any express company, railroad company, or other common carrier, within this state, shall receive any package or parcel of whatsoever nature, whether from a point within or without this state, containing any intoxicating liquor, for transportation to any point within any county, justice precinct, school district, city or town, or subdivision of a county, where the sale of intoxicating liquors has been prohibited under the laws of this state, such express company, railroad company, or other common carrier, shall forthwith transport such intoxicating liquor to the place of its destination; and, upon the arrival of same at its place of destination, there shall be entered in a book to be kept for that purpose the names of the consignor and the consignee, the exact time of the arrival of such package or parcel at the place of its destination, the place from where shipped, the quantity and character of such intoxicating liquor, as shown on such package or parcel, the exact time delivered to the consignee, if delivered, and the signature of such consignee, who shall sign in person for same before delivery thereof; and such book shall be open at all reasonable hours for inspection by any officer of the law or any member of the grand jury.

Any agent of any express company, railroad company, or other common carrier, or any other person, who shall violate any of the provisions of this section of this law shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for any term not less than twenty nor more than sixty days. [Act 1905, ch. 160; S. S. 1910, p. 33.]

Explanatory.—This section is greatly reduced in its scope by arts. 606a-606p, post, but it probably still subsists as to the excepted instances and purposes in and for which liquor may be shipped.

Constitutionality.—This article is a valid exercise of the police power. Hughes v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 173.

This article does not violate Bill of Rights, § 9, which provides that the people shall be secure in their persons, houses, and papers from all unreasonable searches and seizures. Hughes v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 173.

Offenses.—This article covers and prohibits such a shipment of intoxicating liquor as baggage, without being properly labeled. Phillips v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 353.

Indictment.—An indictment which charged that defendant about 3 o'clock in the afternoon of a certain day, the same being within the office hours of his express company, refused to permit the sheriff to inspect books was sufficient, though it did not allege that the hour was "reasonable," especially where that ground was not given for the refusal. Hughes v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 173.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for refusing to permit inspection of books kept by defendant as an express agent, evidence by defendant that, if the officers entitled to examine the books had told him their rights under the law, he would have permitted their inspection, was inadmissible. Hughes v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 173.

A letter written by defendant to the county attorney the day after the refusal, offering to permit the examination of his books and stating that he did not intend to violate the law, was inadmissible. Hughes v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 173.

The entries on packages and in the books and papers of express companies are quasi public records and admissible in evidence in a prosecution for pursuing the occupation of selling intoxicating liquors in prohibition territory on proof that they were the records kept by the express company and identifying them, though they were not proved by the officer or agent of the express company making the entries; it also appearing that accused had signed such records as a receipt for the packages referred to therein. Stephens v. State, 63 App. 382, 139 S. W. 1141.

Evidence in a prosecution for pursuing the occupation of selling liquors in prohibition territory by a driver of an express wagon that he hauled for accused packages marked intoxicating liquors from the express office to the place where accused did business was not objectionable as opinion evidence because the witness had no personal knowledge of the contents of the packages. Stephens v. State, 63 App. 382, 139 S. W. 1141.

Where defendant was charged with violating the local option law, evidence that on various occasions he went at night with unidentified persons to a railway station some distance from the place where he resided, and each time identified the one who was with him as the consignee of liquor at such station, and that none of the alleged consignees were known to the agent, was admissible to show defendant's alleged system in carrying on the business in violation of the law. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 904.

Art. 606a. Delivery of liquor for shipment within state.—Except as otherwise provided in this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or any officer, agent or employé thereof in this state to deliver to any other person, firm or corporation, or any agent, officer or employé thereof, any intoxicating liquor for shipment, transportation, carriage or delivery within this state. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 62, ch. 31, § 2, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 1.]

Historical.—Laws 1901, ch. 96, declaring that a C. O. D. shipment of liquor shall constitute a sale at the place of delivery, and that where orders are solicited in local option territory the transaction shall be considered a sale at the place of solicitation was held unconstitutional in James v. State, 45 App. 592, 78 S. W. 951, and was omitted from the revised Penal Code.

In general.—This applies to a county which, prior to its enactment, had adopted prohibition. Longmire v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1165.

To secure a conviction under the Allison Bill, prohibiting the shipment of intoxicating liquors into local option territory, it is necessary that some of the provisions with regard to the illegal shipment, transportation, and reception of intoxicating liquor in such territory be violated. Bain v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 563.

Legislative power.—The Legislature may pass laws defining offenses for new conditions arising under the prohibition law, to aid in the prevention of illegal sales. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 211.

Constitutionality.—This act is constitutional. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 211; Ex parte Muse (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 520.

Offense.—Petitioner, an express agent, delivered in local option territory, liquor shipped from without the state, which the consignee used and intended to use only for himself and his family. Held, that in view of section 9, (606i) authorizing any person to carry into local option territory liquor intended for his own use, petitioner was not guilty of any violation of law; section 5, (606d) authorizing deliveries of intoxicants when not intended to be used unlawfully. Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

Defendant's act as an agent in buying for another and carrying to him a bottle of whisky bought with such other's money for his individual use was not an offense. Ex parte Hopkins (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1163.

Transportation as agent for another for his own use is not an offense. Longmire v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1165.

Indictment.—An indictment charging in two counts that the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors had been duly voted upon, carried, and was in force in the county at the time of the offense charged, and that accused unlawfully delivered to Y. intoxicating liquors for shipment, transportation, and carriage within the state, and that he unlawfully delivered to Y. intoxicating liquor in violation of such law, charged an offense. Ex parte Muse (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 520.

An indictment need not allege whether the transportation was interstate or intrastate. Longmire v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1165.

Art. 606b. Reception of liquor for shipment within state.—Except as otherwise provided in this Act, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or any agent, officer or employé thereof in this state to receive from any other person, firm, or corporation, or any agent, officer or employé thereof, any intoxicating liquor for shipment, transportation, carriage or delivery within this state. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 63, ch. 31, § 3, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 2.]

See notes under art 606a, ante.

Art. 606c. Shipment of liquor within state.—Except as otherwise provided in this Act, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or any agent, officer or employé thereof to ship, transport, carry or deliver any intoxicating liquor to any other person, firm or corporation, or any agent, officer or employé thereof in this state. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 63, ch. 31, § 4, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 3.]

See notes under art. 606a, ante.

Legislative power.—With the shipment and delivery of intoxicating liquor wholly within the state, the Legislature alone has authority to deal, and, in so far as it may be necessary to protect the public health, morals, and welfare, its will, as expressed in statutes, is final. Longmire v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1165.

Interstate shipments.—This article is inapplicable to interstate shipments. Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

Indictment.—An indictment charging conjunctively a violation of this article, charges but one offense. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 211.

An indictment charging the transportation and delivery of intoxicating liquor in prohibition territory, which alleges that on a designated date an election was held under proper authority and that prohibition was adopted, was sufficient, without naming the various voting precincts in the county. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 211.

An indictment need not allege whether the transportation was interstate or intrastate. Longmire v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1165.

An indictment charging that defendant did unlawfully bring, transport, and carry into the county intoxicating liquors for one E., and did then and there deliver intoxicating liquors to E., and did receive for transportation, carriage, and delivery to E. in said county, intoxicating liquors, said liquors being received by defendant in D. county, Tex., from person or persons unknown, was sufficient. Perryman v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1195.

Evidence.—Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 211.

Testimony of an officer, seizing a valise of accused which he had carried into the prohibition territory, that the bottles in the valise contained whisky, was admissible. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 211.

Where there was evidence that a valise containing whisky was the property of accused, and that he had transported the same into prohibition territory from a point in the state, the action of the court in allowing the district attorney to open the valise in the presence of the jury, and introduce it and the whisky contained therein in evidence, was proper. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 211.

Where the evidence clearly showed that a valise containing bottles of whisky was carried into the territory by accused, the testimony of an officer that he saw a third person go to a negro coach, and saw a negro's arm handing the valise out to him, and that when the third person saw the officer he threw the valise under the coach, was admissible as against the objection that it was not shown that accused handed the valise to the third person; the evidence excluding every other reasonable hypothesis than the fact that accused was the one who handed the valise to the third person. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 211.

Art. 606d. Shipment of liquor from without the state to place within the state where sale is prohibited.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or any officer, agent or employé thereof to ship, or transport in any manner or by any means whatsoever any spirituous, vinous, malted, fermented or other intoxicating liquor of any kind from a point within any other state or territory or district of the United States to any person, firm or corporation, or agent, officer, or employé thereof in this state residing or living within any territory within this state where the sale of intoxicating liquors has been prohibited under the laws of this state, which such spirituous, vinous or malted, fermented or other intoxicating liquor is intended by any person interested therein to be received, possessed, sold or in any manner used in violation of any law of this state. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 63, ch. 31, § 5.]

Explanatory.—The proviso in Act 1913, ch. 67, § 4, excluding interstate commerce from the operation of the act was repealed by the amendatory act (Act 1913, 1st S. S. ch. 31).

See notes under art. 606a, ante.

Constitutionality.—This article is not an invalid regulation of interstate commerce. Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

Laws applicable.—Interstate shipments are governed solely by this section which is a replica of the Webb-Kenyon Act. Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

Offense.—It is no offense for an express agent to deliver in local option territory, liquor shipped from without the state, which the consignee used and intended to use only for himself and his family. Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

Persons delivering intoxicants within local option territory are bound to exercise "proper care" which is the use of such diligence as the circumstances require to see that the liquor is not used contrary to law, and only a mistake of fact will excuse a delivery of liquors used or intended to be used contrary to law. Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

Defendant's act as an agent in buying for another and carrying to him a bottle of whisky bought with such other's money for his individual use was not an offense. Ex parte Hopkins (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1163.

Art. 606e. Soliciting orders for intoxicating liquors in local option territory.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation in person, by letter, circular or other printed or written matter, or in any other manner to solicit or take orders for any intoxicating liquors in any county, justice precinct, town, city or other subdivision of a county where the qualified voters thereof have by a majority vote determined that the sale of intoxicating liquors shall be prohibited therein. [Id., § 6.]

Historical.—Laws 1905, ch. 159 prohibiting the soliciting of orders for the sale of liquor in local option territory was held unconstitutional in Ex parte Massey, 49 App. 60, 92 S. W. 1086, 122 Am. St. Rep. 784, and was omitted from the revised penal code.

Offense.—That a person, upon the solicitation of another, attempts to procure intoxicating liquors for him, but does not himself solicit the giving of an order therefor, is not a violation of this article. Bain v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 563.

Art. 606f. Medicinal, mechanical, and scientific purposes excepted.—Nothing in this Act shall prohibit any owner, proprietor, agent or employé of any drug store in which drugs are compounded and employing a registered pharmacist, whether incorporated or unincorporated, or any owner, proprietor, agent or employé of any educational or eleemosynary institution, whether incorporated or unincorporated, or any owner, proprietor, agent or employé of any public or private hospital, whether incorporated or unincorporated, or any agent, officer or employé of any manufacturer or the owner or proprietor of any manufacturing establishment, whether incorporated or unincorporated, from receiving alcohol for the uses of his, their or its business only; provided such business is not manufacturing of any intoxicating liquors capable of being used as a beverage; provided further that the order for the same shall be accompanied with an affidavit showing that the person ordering or receiving same is entitled to receive the same under the provisions of this section; in which said affidavit the fact shall be stated as to the status of the person so ordering or receiving the same, and the quantity of alcohol so ordered and an original of such affidavit at the time of the making of such order shall be filed with the clerk of the district court of the county where such intoxicating liquor is to be delivered. [Id., § 7.]

See notes under art. 606a.

Art. 606g. Not applicable to licensed dealer.—Nothing in this Act shall make it unlawful for any person licensed or authorized under the laws of this state to sell spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, to ship, transport, carry or deliver such liquors to any person within the limits of the territory wherein the sale of intoxicating liquors is permitted under the laws of this state. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 63, ch. 31, § 8, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 5.]

See notes under art. 606a.

Art. 606h. Proprietors of vineyards not prohibited from shipping grape juice and wine.—Nothing in this Act or the laws of this State shall make it unlawful for any person who is engaged in the planting or growing of a vineyard to ship, transport, carry or deliver, any grape juice or wine made by him from grapes so grown, to any person within the limits of any territory in this state in which the sale of intoxicating liquors is permitted under the laws of this state. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 64, ch. 31, § 8a.]

Art. 606i. Liquors for private use excepted.—Nothing in this Act shall make it unlawful for any person for the use of himself or the members of his family residing with him, to personally carry such liquor to any point within this state. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 64, ch. 31, § 9, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 6.]

See notes under art. 606a.

Personal transportation.—The transportation of intoxicating liquors from "wet" territory in the state into prohibition territory by a citizen of the latter territory, for his own use is not a violation of this act. Longmire v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1165.

Art. 606j. Shipment to licensed dealers not prohibited.—Nothing in this Act shall make it unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or any agent, officer, or employé thereof to ship, transport, carry or deliver intoxicating liquor to any person authorized or licensed under the laws of this state to sell spirituous, vinous or malt liquors (including dealers licensed and authorized under the laws of this state to sell such liquor for medicinal purposes on prescription in local option territory). [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 64, ch. 31, § 10, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 7.]

See notes under art. 606a.

Art. 606k. Wine for sacramental purposes excepted.—Nothing in this Act shall make it unlawful for any priest or minister of any religious denomination or sect, to order or receive wine for sacramental purposes, or for any common carrier to ship, transport, carry or deliver same to any priest or minister of any religious denomination or sect for sacramental purposes only, in quantities of one gallon or less. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 64, ch. 31, § 11, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 8.]

Art. 606l. Negating exceptions.—It shall not be necessary in any prosecution under this Act to negative the exceptions herein made but the same shall be available to the defendant as purely defensive matters. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 64, ch. 31, § 12.]

Negating exceptions.—Ex parte Muse (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 520; Longmire v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1165; Perryman v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1195.

Art. 606m. Affidavit by persons using liquor for medical, etc., purposes.—Any owner, proprietor, agent or employé of any drug store, or any owner, proprietor, agent or employé of any board of directors of any hospital, educational or eleemosynary institutions of this state, or any owner, agent or employé of any manufacturer or manufacturing establishment who shall order any alcohol without accompanying the order with an affidavit as required in Section 7 [art. 606f] of this Act, or who shall fail or refuse to file an original of such affidavit with the clerk of the county where such liquor is to be delivered, shall be guilty of violating the provisions of this Act. [Id., § 13.]

Art. 606n. Penalties and suits therefor.—Any corporation which shall violate any of the provisions of this Act, shall for each such violation forfeit and pay the sum of Five Hundred Dollars to the state of Texas. The county Attorney for the county or in case there is no county attorney for said county, then the district attorney for the district, including such county in which such violation may occur, shall, upon credible information furnished him, institute suit or suits in the name of the State of Texas against such corporation for the recovery of said penalties; and in case of a recovery of any penalties, the said attorney instituting and prosecuting said cases shall be entitled to one-fourth of the amount thereof as commission for his services, and the remainder thereof shall be paid into the Road and Bridge Fund of said county; provided that the State of Texas shall in no event be liable for any costs in any suit authorized by this law to enforce its provisions and the state shall not be required to give bond for costs in any suit instituted under the provisions of this Act.

And provided further, that should any county or district attorney refuse to bring such suit after credible information has been furnished him, then and in that event any private person, a citizen of the county in which the violation occurred, may institute suit in his own name for the use and benefit of the State of Texas as provided for herein for the recovery of such penalties provided for in this Act; and said person so instituting any suit may be required to give security for costs as provided for under the general laws of the State of Texas.

Provided further, that should any private citizen institute suit as herein provided for, and he be required to give bond, and thereafter any county or district attorney desiring to prosecute same, said attorney shall be permitted so to do, and his name shall be entered upon the Court docket where said case is pending, and thereafter said private citizen and his sureties shall be relieved of all costs in said case at that time remaining unpaid, which have accrued or which may thereafter accrue. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 64, ch. 31, § 14, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 10.]

Art. 606o. Violation of act a felony.—Any person, or any officer, agent or employé of any firm or any corporation who shall violate any of the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall be confined in the state penitentiary for not less than one nor more than three years. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 65, ch. 31, § 15, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 9.]

Art. 606p. Conviction on testimony of accomplice; exemption from prosecution.—A conviction for a violation of any of the provisions herein may be had on the unsupported evidence of an accomplice or participant, and such accomplice or participant shall be exempt from prosecution for any offense under this law about which he may be required to testify. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 65, ch. 31, § 16.]

Purchaser and seller under local option laws, see ante, art. 602.

Art. 606q. Invalidity of part of act.—If for any reason any section or part of this Act shall be held to be unconstitutional or invalid, then that fact shall not invalidate any other part of this Act but the same shall be enforced without reference to the parts so held to be invalid. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 65, ch. 31, § 17, amending Act 1913, ch. 67, § 12.]

Sec. 18, Acts 1913, 1st S. S. ch. 31, repeals all laws and parts of laws in conflict.

Art. 607. [408] Evidence when persons are jointly indicted.—Where persons are jointly indicted, or otherwise prosecuted for selling liquor in violation of law, it shall be sufficient to show, by general reputation, that they are understood to be members of the firm. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 168.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 315.

Art. 608. [409] Members of firm liable personally.—Any one member of a firm may be separately prosecuted for the offense of selling liquor in violation of law. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 168.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 315.

Art. 609. [410] If owner is unknown, persons selling liable.—Where any establishment for the sale of liquor is conducted without the name of the owner being known, any and all persons who may be found selling liquor in such establishment, in violation of law, shall be subject to prosecution as separate offenders. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 168.]

Art. 610. [411] Procedure in case of firm.—When a firm is prosecuted for a violation of the law relating to the sale of liquor, the fine shall be assessed against the parties jointly, but each defendant shall be liable for the whole amount; and in cases of prosecution against a firm, if all the defendants be not arrested, a verdict and judgment for the full amount of the fine may be rendered against any one or more who may be tried. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 168.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 315.

COLD STORAGE ACT

Laws 1897, ch. 99, making it a misdemeanor to operate a cold storage plant for the keeping or cooling of intoxicating liquors for others was held unconstitutional in Ex parte Brown, 38 App. 295, 42 S. W. 554, 70 Am. St. Rep. 743, and was omitted from the revised penal code.

CHAPTER EIGHT

VIOLATIONS OF THE LAW REGULATING THE SALE OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS

Art.	Art.
611. Selling without license.	624. Spirituous or vinous liquors not to be sold under malt dealer's license.
612. Selling malt liquors without license.	625. Musical instruments or games prohibited in place of business.
613. Wine growers exempted, when.	626. Female employé other than member of family prohibited.
614. Business under license limited to one place.	627. Not to sell to persons after having been notified.
615. Time for opening and closing.	628. Law not to conflict with local option law.
616. Selling to be drunk on premises; bond required; false affidavit of verification; sale without giving bond; sale after cancellation of bond; sale after withdrawal of sureties; proviso in respect to sales to minors and habitual drunkards.	629. License to be posted in conspicuous place.
617-621. [Superseded.]	630. Prohibiting sale of liquor at places and on election day.
622. Selling or giving away to minors.	630a. Sale within prohibited districts in cities and towns.
623. Selling or giving away to habitual drunkards or on Sunday or on election day.	631. Duties of certain officers.
	632. Official dereliction, penalty.
	633. Tax collectors issuing illegal receipts.

Article 611. Selling without license.—No person shall, directly or indirectly, sell spirituous or vinous liquors, capable of producing intoxication, in quantities of one gallon or less, without taking out a license as a retail liquor dealer. Any person who shall violate the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not to exceed six months. [Act 1907, ch. 138; Act 1909, p. 294.]

See art. 130, ante.

Cited, Ex parte Preston, 72 App. 77, 161 S. W. 115; Minter v. State, 70 App. 634, 159 S. W. 286.

Relation to other statutes.—The purpose of this law is to punish one selling intoxicating liquors without license at any time, whether on Sunday or week day. The general Sunday law punishes infractions by sales on Sunday whether with or without license. Ex parte Wright, 56 App. 504, 120 S. W. 868.

Art. 302 is not affected nor is it in conflict with any of the provisions of this chapter. Ex parte Wright, 56 App. 504, 120 S. W. 868.

This article is not in conflict with articles 496 and 589. Haynes v. State, 63 App. 181, 139 S. W. 1155.

Legislative powers.—A sale of intoxicating liquor is subject to control under the police power of the state, and it may be either prohibited or permitted under such conditions as the Legislature shall impose. State v. Country Club (Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 570; Ex parte Bell, 24 App. 428, 6 S. W. 197; Ex parte Peede (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 749.

Offense.—Tax for sale of liquors cannot affect a sale made prior to its levy. Petteway v. State, 36 App. 97, 35 S. W. 646.

Whether liquor sold comes within the prohibition depends on whether it was intoxicating. Petteway v. State, 36 App. 97, 35 S. W. 646.

One sale of liquor taken from a licensed saloon by an employé of the proprietor would not constitute the employé a "liquor dealer" within the meaning of this article. Cassidy v. State, 58 App. 454, 126 S. W. 600.

Before one can be convicted of unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors, the jury must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the liquor sold was intoxicating. Roberts v. State, 59 App. 47, 126 S. W. 1129.

Where two licenses were issued authorizing relator to sell intoxicating liquors at two different places in the same county, the revocation of one license for a violation of the liquor law does not ipso facto revoke the other license, when no notice of a declaration of a forfeiture has been given, so as to render relator's sales made under the authority of the second license illegal. Ex parte Hewgley (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1174.

This article was intended to make unlawful a single sale by any one not licensed and not within the exception, even if not engaged in the business of selling. State v. Country Club (Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 570.

— Intent.—Intent is not an issue in selling liquor without license. Allen v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 265.

The only intent necessary is an intent to do the prohibited act, though the seller believes in good faith that the sale is not prohibited by the statute. State v. Country Club (Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 570.

— Social Clubs.—Keeping place for sale, see ante, art. 496 et seq.

A bona fide club dispensing liquors to its membership is not within the law requiring a license to follow the business of selling liquors. Baker v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 340; Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 940; Trezevant v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 1191.

Where an incorporated club purchased liquors in bulk with money in the treasury, a sale of the same at the usual price, though made only to its members, constitutes a sale within the prohibition laws. Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 940.

Where a club, formed for social and literary purposes, and having a membership and charging membership dues, has a bar and a stock of liquors kept for sale, the officer or person in charge who makes a sale of liquor to a person not a member is guilty. Trezevant v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 1191.

Facts held to show that a club was not bona fide, but a mere pretense for the sale of liquor. Baker v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 340.

A transfer of common property to one of the owners in consideration of payment of the price into the common fund is a "sale," but a distribution of it among the common owners is not. State v. Country Club (Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 570.

The enacting of this article and following articles exempting certain persons therefrom, is a more definite indication of the intent to include incorporated clubs within the prohibition than if there had been an attempt to enumerate the prohibited classes, since the word "persons" includes corporations, and the mention of exempted persons excludes others from the exemption. State v. Country Club (Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 570.

The re-enactment of this law after it had been decided that the statute of which it formed a part did not authorize the collection of a license tax from an incorporated club, indicated, under the rule that the Legislature, in re-enacting a statute which has been construed, adopts the construction placed thereon, rather than that the Legislature intended to prohibit all sales by such clubs than that they were to be exempted from the prohibition. State v. Country Club (Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 570.

The dispensing of intoxicating liquors by an incorporated, bona fide social club to its members for a sum sufficient to pay the cost of the liquors and of maintaining the service is a "sale" of such liquors, and, if unlawful, cannot be held to be within the implied powers of the corporation. State v. Country Club (Civ. App.) 173 S. W. 570.

Indictment.—The indictment must allege a violation of the particular character of license required in that particular territory as a prerequisite to engage in the sale of such intoxicants. As a license to sell on prescription of regular practicing physicians, it must be alleged that this provision was violated. Williamson v. State, 41 App. 461, 55 S. W. 569.

Indictment alleging sale in quantities less than one gallon is not sustained by proof of sale in quantities of more than a gallon. Williamson v. State, 41 App. 461, 55 S. W. 570.

The indictment must allege the intoxicating quality of the malt liquors sold. Hardwick v. State, 55 App. 140, 114 S. W. 832.

An indictment alleged that accused sold intoxicants in quantities of less than one gallon without taking out a license as a retail dealer, he not being then a retail dealer, and not having taken out a license as such, and that he then and there sold intoxicants, to wit, one glass of beer to a certain person and a bottle of beer to another, etc. Held, that the indictment contained only one count, and a contention that it contained two, one alleging a sale of a glass and bottle of beer without alleging that they contained less than a gallon, so that accused could not be convicted, the indictment failing to allege whether he was a wholesale or retail dealer, was untenable, and the indictment was sufficient. Hookman v. State, 59 App. 183, 127 S. W. 825.

An indictment for the offense of selling intoxicating liquors in quantities of one gallon or less, without first obtaining license to do so, need not allege that defendant was pursuing the occupation of a retail liquor dealer. Trezevant v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 1191.

Evidence.—Evidence of the effect of brandy cherries, sold by a person other than defendant, is inadmissible. Petteway v. State, 36 App. 97, 35 S. W. 646.

When the only issue is whether defendant sold spirituous liquors, evidence of intent is inadmissible. Id.

An order of the commissioners' court levying a county tax on all occupations taxable by law, is sufficient and is admissible in evidence. Witherspoon v. State, 39 App. 65, 44 S. W. 164, 1096.

To warrant a conviction for an alleged sale of liquor through go-betweens, the state must show that the accused was connected with the sale, and received the price, and knew what it was for. Lindley v. State, 57 App. 480, 123 S. W. 1107.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Cassidy v. State, 58 App. 454, 126 S. W. 600.

In a prosecution for selling liquor without a license, evidence of violation of the law under license would not sustain a conviction, and evidence that defendant sold the liquor after getting it from a licensed saloon, where he worked as a bartender, need not be considered. Cassidy v. State, 58 App. 454, 126 S. W. 600.

Where, on the issue whether liquor sold was intoxicating, a witness testified that he had handled a car load of the beverage, and that the casks that were sold to prosecutor went out of the same car from which casks to a third person were sold, and there was nothing to show that the third person had bought liquor from any one else, evidence that the liquor sold by the third person was intoxicating was admissible. Roberts v. State, 59 App. 47, 126 S. W. 1129.

It is competent for the state to show the possession of the liquor by the prosecuting witness on the day of the sale and immediately following, and to introduce and identify the liquor so found in his possession. McAdams v. State, 59 App. 86, 126 S. W. 1156.

Declarations of the prosecuting witness are inadmissible to connect accused with the sale. McAdam v. State, 59 App. 86, 126 S. W. 1156.

In a prosecution for selling on April 24th, evidence that on April 22d accused applied for a retail license to sell at the place where the illegal sales were claimed to have been made, and was granted a license on May 6th, was admissible to show that accused had control and management of the place when the sales charged were made, and as evidence to identify such place. Hookman v. State, 59 App. 183, 127 S. W. 825.

Testimony was not admissible that the place in which accused was charged with selling intoxicants was reputed a place where beer was sold. Hookman v. State, 59 App. 183, 127 S. W. 825.

Error in admitting evidence that the house in which the sales were alleged to have been made was reputed a place where beer was sold, held reversible where accused claimed he had not sold any liquor, and did not control the place and that the beer privilege therein belonged to another who had a license, and the evidence sharply conflicted. Hookman v. State, 59 App. 183, 127 S. W. 825.

Evidence that defendant, after his attention was called by officers to the fact of an alleged unlawful sale, but while he was not under arrest, asked how much it would take to square the thing was admissible. Trezevant v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 1191.

The Court of Criminal Appeals will take judicial notice that beer is intoxicating. Figueroa v. State, 71 App. 371, 159 S. W. 1188.

Instructions.—Inasmuch as a party engaged in the sale of malt liquors, regardless of their intoxicating qualities, is required to obtain a license for the sale of such malt liquors, a charge on this statute, making the revenue license prima facie evidence and shifting the burden of proof, is not authorized in any case where the accusation is for the sale of malt liquors and the intoxicating quality of the liquor is a matter in dispute. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 97 S. W. 318.

It is proper to charge the substance of this article in a prosecution under art. 612. Figueroa v. State, 71 App. 371, 159 S. W. 1188.

Art. 612. Selling malt liquors without license.—No person shall sell, directly or indirectly, malt liquor capable of producing intoxication, in quantities of one gallon or less, without taking out a license as a retail malt dealer; provided that this article shall not apply to a retail liquor dealer, and that a retail liquor dealer's license shall be construed to embrace a retail malt dealer's license. Any person, who shall violate the provisions of this article, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred and fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding ninety days. [Act 1907, ch. 138; Act 1909, p. 295.]

Offense.—It is an offense to sell intoxicating liquors at any other place than that set out in the license. Saffroi v. Cobun, 32 Civ. App. 79, 73 S. W. 829.

In a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors without a license, proof that accused had a license to sell intoxicating liquors at another place on the same street is no defense; the statute prohibiting a dealer in intoxicants from carrying on his business under his license at more than one place at the same time, and providing for a change of the location of licenses. Loicano v. State, 72 App. 518, 163 S. W. 64.

Indictment.—A complaint was not fatally defective because it alleged that defendant sold "malt liquor or beer" instead of charging a sale of malt liquor and beer, since the terms "malt liquor" and "beer," as used in this article are in effect synonymous. Figueroa v. State, 71 App. 371, 159 S. W. 1188.

An information alleging that accused sold intoxicating malt, spirituous, and vinous liquors, to wit, one bottle of beer, is not duplicitous in charging the sale of different kinds of intoxicating liquors in the same count as it specifically alleges the kind of liquor sold, and the words "spirituous and vinous" should be disregarded as surplusage. Loicano v. State, 72 App. 518, 163 S. W. 64.

Evidence.—It was not necessary for the state to prove any county levy of taxes. Figueroa v. State, 71 App. 371, 159 S. W. 1188.

Instructions.—The court did not err in omitting to define the terms "occupation" or "business," neither of which were used in the statute under which defendant was prosecuted. Figueroa v. State, 71 App. 371, 159 S. W. 1188.

It was proper for the court in stating the case to the jury to charge the substance of article 611. Figueroa v. State, 71 App. 371, 159 S. W. 1188.

Art. 613. Wine growers exempted, when.—This law shall not be so construed as to deny the right of wine growers to sell wine of their own production in any quantity without license; provided, that such wine grower shall not permit nor suffer any wine so sold by him to be drunk on his premises; and provided, further, that this article shall not be so construed as to give any wine grower the right to sell any wine to any minor, without the permission of the parent, master or guardian of such minor first had and obtained, or any habitual drunkard, after being notified by any relative of such drunkard not to make such sale, gift or disposition. Every wine grower who shall violate any of the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail during a term not to exceed three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1907, ch. 138; Act 1909, p. 295.]

Art. 614. Business under license limited to one place.—No retail liquor dealer nor retail malt dealer shall carry on said business at more than one place at the same time under the same license, nor shall any such license be voluntarily assigned more than once; but, before the assignee of such license can engage in business thereunder, he shall comply with the provisions required of the original licensee; and provided, further, that the sale of such license, whether in the name of the original licensee or assignee, may be made under execution or mortgage; and the purchaser of such license at such sale shall have the right to surrender such license to the state or county which issued the tax receipt which is the basis therefor, and shall receive therefor the pro rata unearned portion of such license; provided, further, that should said original licensee or his assignee desire to change the place designated in said license he may do so by applying to the county judge as in case of original application for license, but it shall not be necessary to furnish another certificate from the comptroller of public accounts. [Id.]

Art. 615. Time for opening and closing.—Every person or firm having a license, who may be engaged in or who may hereafter engage in the sale of intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises (in any locality of this State other than where local option is in force) shall close and keep closed their houses and places of business and transact no business therein or therefrom from and after nine thirty o'clock P. M. until six o'clock A. M. of each week day, and shall close and keep closed their houses and places of business and transact no business therein or therefrom from and after nine thirty o'clock P. M. on Saturday until six o'clock A. M. of the following Monday of each week, and any such person or firm or his or their agent or employee who shall open or keep open, or permit to open or permit to be opened or kept open, any such house or place of business, for the purpose of traffic or who shall sell or barter any intoxicating liquor of any kind, or who shall transact or permit to be transacted therein or therefrom any such business between the hours aforesaid shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1907, p. 260; Act 1909, p. 304; Act 1913, p. 141, ch. 75, amending art. 615, Pen. Code 1911.]

See Act 1913, 1st S. S. ch. 30, § 1, amending the civil statutes relating to the time of closing (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7451).

Cited, in dissenting opinion, Moreno v. State, 64 App. 660, 143 S. W. 156, Ann. Cas. 1914C, 863.

Indictment.—An indictment charging that defendant "did then and there open and permit to be opened his place of business for the purpose of traffic, and did then and there barter and sell intoxicating liquor, to wit, whisky and beer in quantities of less than one quart, after twelve o'clock midnight on Saturday, February 2, 1909, and before five o'clock a. m. the following Monday, February 4, 1909," sufficiently alleged the date of the commission of the offense to be on a certain day; the absence of a date preceding the words "then and there" not being fatal in view of the other allegations. Celli v. State, 60 App. 311, 131 S. W. 597.

An affidavit, stating that a certain person had a retail license to sell liquor at a certain place on a certain date, and that on such date, at a prohibited time, he sold liquor, in violation of this article, was sufficient to authorize the county court to issue the notice provided for in section 8, informing him, in effect, that the matter of canceling his license would be heard at a certain time. State v. De Silva, 105 Tex. 95, 145 S. W. 330.

Evidence.—There is no presumption that local option laws are in effect in a given territory, and hence in a prosecution for sales of intoxicants on Sunday made by a licensed dealer, the state having introduced his application for a license in which he made affidavit that prohibition was not in effect in the place in which he carried on his business, is not bound to show that the local option law had not been adopted. Woods v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 296.

Art. 616. Selling to be drunk on premises; bond required; false affidavit of verification; sale without giving bond; sale after cancellation of bond; sale after withdrawal of sureties; proviso in respect to sales to minors and habitual drunkards.—Every person or firm desiring to engage in the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, or medicated bitters, capable of producing intoxication to be drunk on the premises, shall, before engaging in such sale, be required to enter into a bond in the sum of five thousand dollars; provided, however, that any person or firm dealing exclusively in malt liquors shall be required to give bond only in the sum of one thousand dollars, with at least two good, lawful and sufficient sureties, and the sureties required by law on the bonds of liquor dealers shall make affidavit, before some officer authorized to administer oaths, that they, in their own right, over and above all exemptions, are each worth the full amount of the bond they sign as sureties; and no county judge shall approve any such bond unless the affidavit as provided for in this article shall have been duly made. The approval of any such bond by the county judge without such affidavit shall make said county judge liable for any penalty recovered on such liquor dealer's bond; and any person who shall make any false affidavit, as required by this law, shall be punished as provided for in the Penal Code of this State; provided, that nothing herein shall prevent the making of such bond by a surety, company as permitted by law, payable to the State of Texas, to be approved as to security by the county judge; which bond shall be conditioned that said person or firm so selling spirituous, vinous or malt liquors or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, in any quantity, to be drunk on the premises, shall not, either in person or knowingly by any agent, employé or representative, during the year for which such license shall run, keep open the house or place where liquors shall be sold under such license for the sale thereof, or transact such business in such house or place of business, after 9:30 o'clock p. m. on Saturday and between that hour and 6 o'clock a. m. on the following Monday of any week, or between the hours of 9:30 p. m. and 6 a. m. of the following morning of any week day, and that such person or firm shall keep an open, quiet and orderly house or place for the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, and that such person or firm, or his or their agent or employé, will not sell or permit to be sold in his or their house or place of business, nor give nor permit to be given any spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors, or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, to any person under the age of 21 years, or to a student of any institution of learning, or any habitual drunkard, after having been notified in writing through the sheriff or other peace officer, by the wife, father, mother, daughter or sister of such habitual drunkard, said notice shall be in force and effect for a period of two years, not to sell to any such person, and that he or they will not permit any person under the age of 21 years to enter and remain in such house or place of business; that he or they will not permit any games prohibited by the law of this State to be played, dealt or exhibited in or about such house or place of business, and that he or they will not rent or let any part of the house or place in which he or they have undertaken to sell spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, in any quantity, to be drunk on the premises, to any person or persons for the purpose of running or conducting any game or games prohibited by the laws of this State, and that he or they will not adulterate the liquors sold by them in any manner, mixing the same with any drug, and that he or they will not knowingly sell or give away any impure or adulterated liquors of any kind, and that he or they will not violate any law of this State relating to the regulation, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors, which said bond shall be filed in the office of the county clerk of the county where such business is conducted, and shall be recorded by such clerk in a book to be kept for such purpose; for which service said clerk shall be entitled to a fee of seventy-five cents; which said bond may be sued on at the instance of any person or persons aggrieved by the violations of its provisions, and such person shall be entitled to recover the sum of five hundred dollars as liquidated damages for such infraction of the conditions of such bond; and the said bond shall not be void on the first recovery, but may be sued on until the full penal sum named therein shall have been recovered. In addition to civil proceedings for individual injuries brought on said bond, as above indicated, if any person or firm shall violate any of the conditions of the bond herein required, it shall be the duty of the county and district attorneys, or either of them, to institute suit thereupon; or any person owning real property in the county may institute suit thereupon in the name of the State of Texas, for the use and benefit of the county, but no compensation shall be allowed such citizen, and he may be required to give security for costs; and the amount of five hundred dollars as a penalty shall be recovered from the principals and sureties upon the liquor dealer's bond, upon the breach of any of the conditions thereof; and thereafter when any recovery is had by any person or by any county or district attorney, for the use and benefit of the county in any action in any court of competent jurisdiction, upon the bond of any person or firm engaged in the sale of spirituous, vinous, or malt liquors or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, or malt liquors exclusively, to be drunk on the premises, in any locality other than where local option is in force, upon the ground that such licensee sold, or permitted to be sold, or gave or permitted to be given, any such liquors to a minor in his place of business, or permitted a minor to enter or remain in his place of business, or sold such liquor to any habitual drunkard, after having been notified in writing not to sell to such habitual drunkard, or that such licensee permitted prostitutes or lewd women to enter and remain in his place of business, or permitted any games prohibited by the law to be played, dealt or exhibited in or about his place of business, or of renting or letting his place of business, or any part thereof, for such purpose or purposes, the license of such person or firm shall, by reason of such recovery, be forfeited, revoked and cancelled; and that court entering judgment of recovery shall also enter an order declaring forfeited, revoked and cancelled such license; and the unearned portion of the occupation tax paid therefor shall not be refunded, but shall be forfeited to the State and county, city or town to which the money for the same may have been paid. And any person or firm who shall sell any such liquors or medicated bitters in any quantity, to be drunk on the premises, without first giving bond, as required by law, or who shall sell the same after said license shall have been forfeited, revoked or cancelled, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction shall be fined in the same amount provided for sales where no license has been obtained. An open house in the meaning of his chapter, is one in which no screens or other device is used or placed inside or outside of such house or place of business for the purpose of or that will obstruct the view through the open door or place of entrance into any such house or place where intoxicating liquors are sold to be drunk on the premises. A quiet house or place of business, in the meaning of this chapter, is one in which no music, loud or boisterous talking, yelling or indecent or vulgar language is allowed, used or practiced, or any other noise calculated to disturb or annoy any person residing or doing business in the vicinity of such house or place of business, or those passing along the streets or public highways. By an orderly house, is meant one in which no prostitutes or lewd women are allowed to enter or remain; and it is further provided that said house must not contain any vulgar or obscene pictures. Any surety on such bond may relieve himself from further liability thereon by giving the principal in said bond notice in writing that he will no longer remain as surety thereon, and filing with the county judge an affidavit that such notice has been given; and, if within five days after such notice the principal fails to make a new bond, he shall cease to pursue said business until a new bond is given. Any person who shall continue to pursue said business after such notice is given and such affidavit is filed, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished as provided in cases where no license has been procured; provided, that where the sale was made in good faith, or the minor permitted to enter and remain in good faith, with the belief that the minor was of age, and there is good ground for such belief, that shall be a valid defense to any recovery on such bond; provided, further, that where the sale to any habitual drunkard is made in good faith, with the belief that he is not an habitual drunkard, and there are good grounds for such belief, that shall be a valid defense to any recovery on such bond; provided, the provisions of this law shall apply to suits by the State or of any individual. Provided, that no license shall be issued under this law to any person who has been convicted of a felony and served such term of conviction. [Act 1901, ch. 136; Act 1907, ch. 138; Act 1909, p. 304; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 58, ch. 30, § 1, amending art. 7452 Rev. St. 1911.]

Explanatory.—Arts. 616–621 revised Pen. Code, and art. 7452, Rev. Civ. St. 1911, were made up from the same act, and hence, the amendment of art. 7452 of the civil statutes worked a supercession of the corresponding articles in the Penal Code.

Decisions on civil features of article.—See notes under art. 7452, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Constitutionality.—A statute requiring the execution of a bond as a condition precedent to the granting of a license to conduct a saloon is constitutional. Ex parte Bell, 24 App. 428, 6 S. W. 197.

Arts. 617–621.—Superseded by Act 1913, S. S. ch. 30 amending art. 7452 Rev. St. 1911. See art. 616 Penal Code, and note thereunder.

Art. 622. Selling or giving away to minors.—Every retail liquor dealer, or malt liquor dealer, or other person, who shall knowingly sell, give away, deliver or otherwise dispose of, or suffer the same to be done, about his premises, any intoxicating liquor in any quantity to any minor, or who shall have in his employ about his place of business, or who shall permit any minor to enter and loaf or remain in his place of business, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction therefor, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not longer than sixty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1907, p. 266; Act 1909, p. 307.]

Explanatory.—See arts. 593 and 1054 and notes thereunder. This article is modified by a proviso to art. 616, ante, as amended by Acts 1913, S. S. ch. 30.

Application.—In order to effectuate all the provisions of the code this article was held to apply to retail dealers alone, to express companies and common carriers alone, and article 1054 to all persons other than licensed retail liquor dealers and express companies and common carriers. Talley v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 255.

Effect of local option.—Where the local option law is in force in a district, the law prohibiting the sale of liquor to minors held superseded. Tompkins v. State, 49 App. 154, 90 S. W. 1019.

A sale of liquor to a minor in local option territory cannot be prosecuted under the statute prohibiting sales to minors, as it is a violation of the local option law. Dean v. State, 49 App. 249, 92 S. W. 38.

A person can be convicted of giving intoxicating liquors to a minor on a complaint charging selling and giving regardless of whether the local option law was in force in the county. Ex parte Cassens, 57 App. 377, 122 S. W. 888, 891.

Offense.—An indictment drawn in a local option county, charging a violation of this article is improper; the proper proceeding being by an action under article 597 for a violation of the local option law. Talley v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 255.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 303, 310.

Art. 623. Selling or giving away to habitual drunkards, or on Sunday or election day.—Any sale, gift or other disposition of intoxicating liquors, knowingly made to any minor, or to any habitual drunkard, or on any Sunday or election day, by an agent, clerk or other person acting for any retail liquor dealer, or retail malt dealer, or other person, shall be deemed and taken to be, for all purposes of this law, as the act of such retail liquor dealer or retail malt dealer, or other person. [Act 1907, ch. 138; Act 1909, p. 307.]

See proviso to art. 616 as amended by Acts 1913, S. S. ch. 30.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for selling liquor on Sunday, evidence held insufficient to support a conviction. Mittendorf v. State, 59 App. 245, 128 S. W. 118.

In a prosecution of a defendant charged with giving intoxicating liquor to another while an election was being held in a certain town, precinct, and county of the state, evidence of the orders of the commissioners' court creating such precinct as well as the fact that the town was in such precinct was admissible. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 318.

Sales by agent.—Proof of a sale by an agent acting within the scope of his agency makes a prima facie case against the dealer. Ollre v. State, 57 App. 520, 123 S. W. 1116.

A liquor dealer is not criminally liable for a sale made at his place of business by one assuming to act as his agent, where he shows, either that such person was not his agent, or that the sale was made in violation of his orders. Ollre v. State, 57 App. 520, 123 S. W. 1117.

Spirituous or vinous liquors not to be sold under malt dealer's license.—Any person or firm doing business under a retail malt dealer's license in this state, who shall sell any spirituous or vinous liquors other than those defined by law as malt liquors, shall, upon conviction therefor, be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than three hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than six months, and shall, in addition to the punishment herein prescribed, forfeit his license as a retail malt dealer; and the court in which such conviction is had shall cause such forfeiture to be entered in the judgment of conviction; and such retail malt dealer shall thenceforth be deemed to have no license; and the clerk of said court shall certify such forfeiture to the comptroller of public accounts, as elsewhere herein provided. [Act 1907, ch. 138; Act 1909, p. 308.]

Art. 625. Musical instruments or games prohibited in place of business.—It shall be unlawful for any retail liquor dealer, or retail malt dealer, to use, exhibit, suffer to be kept, exhibited or used, in his place of business any piano, organ, or other musical instrument whatever, for the purpose of performing upon, or having the same performed upon, in such place, or to permit any sparring, boxing, wrestling, or any other exhibition or contest, or cock fight, in his place, or to set up, keep, use, or permit to be kept or used, in or about the said premises, or by any other person, or to run, or to be run, in connection with such place of business, in any manner or form whatever, any billiard table, pool-table or gaming table, bowling or ten pin alley, cards, dice, dominoes, or any other device for gaming or playing any game of chance, or to permit any person to play at, on or with such tables, alleys, cards, dice, dominoes, or other device of any kind. [Act 1907, p. 267; Act 1909, p. 309.]

Repeal.—Acts 30th Leg. c. 132, P. C. arts. 496 et seq. prohibiting disorderly houses, was not repealed by this article. Morgan v. State, 62 App. 39, 136 S. W. 445.

Information.—An information held not too general or indefinite because not giving the names of the lewd women. Ferguson v. State, 72 App. 494, 163 S. W. 65.

Art. 627. Not to sell to persons after having been notified.—It shall be unlawful for any retail liquor dealer, or retail malt dealer, to sell, give away, or otherwise dispose of, or suffer the same to be done about his premises, any intoxicating liquors to any habitual drunkard, after he shall have been notified by the wife, father, mother, brother, sister, child or guardian of such person not to sell, give away or furnish to such person any intoxicating liquors; and any retail liquor dealer or retail malt dealer violating this article shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not exceeding six months, or punished by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id.]

Law not to conflict with local option law.—This law, or any of the provisions thereof, shall not be construed to be in conflict with any local option law now or hereafter to be in force in this state; and no license to any retail liquor or retail malt dealer shall be issued or shall be effective at any place where local option law is in force and operation. [Act 1907, p. 268; Act 1909, p. 309.]

Art. 629. License to be posted in conspicuous place.—Any license required by this law shall be posted, in some conspicuous place, in the house where the business or occupation, for which such license is necessary, is carried on, before engaging in such business or occupation, and any person so licensed who fails to so post the same shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars. [Id.]

See § 130.

Art. 630. Prohibiting sale of liquor at places and on election day.—It shall be unlawful for any retail liquor dealer, or retail malt dealer, to sell, or offer for sale, any intoxicating liquors at any place where people have assembled for religious worship, or for educational or literary purposes, or in any election precinct on any election day; and any person violating the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. In prosecutions under this law, where it is proven that there is posted up at the place where such intoxicating liquor is sold, United States internal revenue liquor or malt license, to any one, it shall be prima facie proof that the person to whom such license is issued is engaged in and is pursuing the business and occupation of selling intoxicating liquors, within the meaning of this law. CHAPTER EIGHT A

POOL HALLS

Art. 633a. "Pool hall" defined. 633b. Operation of pool hall within prohibited territory.	Art. 633c. Same; evidence as to result of election; judicial notice; charge to juries.
--	---

Article 633a. "Pool hall" defined.—The term "pool hall" as used herein [arts. 6319a–6319n, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] shall mean and include the following: Any room, hall or building in which are exhibited any pool or billiard table or tables for the purpose of permitting games played thereon for hire, revenue, prize, fees, or gain of any kind. [Act 1913, p. 140, ch. 74, § 12.]

Constitutionality.—This act is unconstitutional as delegating legislative power, and authorizing the suspension by the voters of the general law for licensing pool rooms. Ex parte Mitchell (Sup.) 177 S. W. 953. The civil features of this law are to be found in Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 6319a-(6319n).

The pool hall statute (Acts 33d Leg. c. 74), providing for prohibition of pool rooms, and making its provisions effective in any county, precinct, etc., dependent upon the result of an election therein, does not violate Const. art. 1, § 28, which restricts the power to suspend laws to the Legislature, and especially prohibits the exercise of such power by any other body. Ex parte Francis, 72 App. 304, 165 S. W. 147.

Such act, though without specific authority therefor in the Constitution, was not unconstitutional as a delegation of power to make a law, since the act was the law itself, and the fact that it went into effect in given territory as a result of an election therein, did not vitiate the law; but it remained the same, and could not be changed, altered, or amended in any way except by another act of the legislative body. Ex parte Francis, 72 App. 304, 165 S. W. 147.

Such act, applying within the territory where it is adopted, without discrimination in favor or against all persons therein, does not conflict with Const. U. S. Amend. 14, guaranteeing equal protection of the laws. Ex parte Francis, 72 App. 304, 165 S. W. 147.

Such act deprives no person of any property, and does not conflict with Const. U. S. amend. 14, or Texas Bill of Rights, § 19, providing that property shall not be taken without due process of law. Ex parte Francis, 72 App. 304, 165 S. W. 147.

Such act, providing for a local option vote thereon in any political subdivision of the state, prescribing the manner of holding such elections, and declaring the result thereof, defining the term "pool room" or "pool hall," providing a penalty for violation of its provisions, authorizing prosecuting attorneys to enjoin the running of such pool rooms or pool halls, and declaring an emergency, was not void as being vague, ambiguous, and indefinite. Ex parte Francis, 72 App. 304, 165 S. W. 147.

Rev. St. 1911, art. 7355, § 8, which levied an occupation tax of $20 on every billiard or pool table used for profit, and the pool hall statute (Acts 33d Leg. c. 74), which permitted counties and justice precincts to accept its provisions whereby pool halls might be prohibited therein, were not in irreconcilable conflict, and the prior statute was modified by the later act to the extent that the occupation tax was applicable only in the territory in which pool halls were not prohibited by an acceptance of the later act, so that one did not suspend the other. Ex parte Francis, 72 App. 304, 165 S. W. 147.

This act is not unconstitutional as an attempted delegation of the legislative power to the electors of the subdivision named, contrary to Const. art. 3, § 1, vesting the legislative power in the Senate and House of Representatives, being a completed act as enacted by the Legislature. Roper & Gilley v. Lumpkins, 163 S. W. 110.

Nor does such act violate the provision of the Bill of Rights prohibiting any interference with property, etc., except by due course of the law of the land. Id.

The provision of section 11 of this act (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 6319k) that, if the result of the election be in favor of prohibiting pool halls, a contest shall not suspend the enforcement of the law pending such contest, is constitutional, for, while it may work a hardship on those engaged in running poolrooms, yet if a contest suspended the enforcement of the law, the law, though validly adopted, might never go into effect, because the contest might be pending until a subsequent election when determination might be in favor of the licensing of pool halls. Winn v. Dyess, 167 S. W. 294.

Art. 633b. Operation of pool hall within prohibited territory.—When any such election [Art. 6319a Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] has been held and has resulted in favor of the prohibition of the operation and maintenance of pool halls within the territory for which the election is held, any person who shall thereafter, within the prescribed bounds of said territory, operate or maintain a pool hall such as is defined herein shall be subject to prosecution, and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five and not to exceed one hundred dollars, or by confinement in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than one year, and each day such pool hall or pool room is run shall be a separate offense. [Id., § 13.]

See note under art. 633a.

Art. 633c. Same; evidence as to result of election; judicial notice; charge to juries.—In any prosecution that may arise under this Act it shall not be necessary for the State to introduce in evidence, any records, order of court, or any copy thereof, in regard to the adoption of said law, but all courts of the county and all appellate courts reviewing any such prosecution shall take judicial knowledge of the existence and validity of said law, and shall give the same in charge to the juries the same as if a part of the penal code of this State. [Id., § 15.]

See note under art. 633a.

1. In general.—This article enumerates certain persons who come within the definition of vagrant. Ex parte Strittmatter, 58 App. 156, 124 S. W. 906, 137 Am. St. Rep. 937, 21 Ann. Cas. 477. A vagrant was originally understood to be an idle person, without visible means of support, who, though able to work for his maintenance, refused to do so, but the idea later included one whose business status or course of conduct was vicious or habitually unlawful; so the offense of being a vagrant, where it depends upon an habitual course of misconduct, is a separate offense from each specific act of misconduct. Parshall v. State (Cr. App.) 138 S. W. 759. "Vagrant" and "vagabond" are not equivalent. Johnson v. State, 28 App. 562, 13 S. W. 1005.

2. Common law.—The statutes of the United States and England having so frequently dealt with the subject of vagrancy, the common law on the subject has become largely superseded. Ex parte Strittmatter, 58 App. 156, 124 S. W. 906, 137 Am. St. Rep. 937, 21 Ann. Cas. 477.

3. Repeal.—The following articles were not repealed by this article. Articles 496 and 500, defining disorderly and bawdy houses, and prescribing the penalty for keeping such houses. Wilson v. State, 61 App. 628, 136 S. W. 447; Haynes v. State, 63 App. 181, 139 S. W. 1155; Weir v. State, 64 App. 164, 141 S. W. 948; Hitchings v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1164. Article 559, making it a felony for any person to keep any premises, building, room, or place for the purpose of being used for a place to gamble with cards. Austin v. State, 61 App. 573, 135 S. W. 1167; Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759; Goodwin v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 939. Article 597 making the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors in prohibited districts a misdemeanor. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 348; Snell v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 615.

4. Able-bodied persons habitually loafing, etc.—The term "larger portions of their time," when construed with the balance of the provision, is not so vague as to render the law invalid. The terms "loiter, loaf, and idle," when construed with the words "larger portions of their time," require proof, to sustain a conviction of vagrancy, that the person charged was able to work, and, being so able, habitually loafed, loitered, and idled in the city for the greater part of his time, without employment or visible means of support. Ex parte Strittmatter, 58 App. 156, 124 S. W. 906, 137 Am. St. Rep. 937, 21 Ann. Cas. 477. The word "visible" means noticeable, apparent, open, conspicuous, or perceptible by the eye. Branch v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 605.

The Legislature had ample power, under Const. art. 3, § 46, to enact this paragraph declaring that all able-bodied persons, who habitually loaf, loiter, and idle in any city, town, village, railroad station, or other public place within the state for the larger portion of their time, without any regular employment, and without any visible means of support, are vagrants, and the paragraph is constitutional. Ex parte Strittmatter, 58 App. 156, 124 S. W. 906, 137 Am. St. Rep. 937, 21 Ann. Cas. 477.

5. Common prostitutes.—It is the common prostitute that is declared a vagrant. All prostitutes are not common prostitutes. A common prostitute is one who makes a business of selling the use of her person to the male sex for the purpose of illicit intercourse. A woman may be a prostitute, and yet have illicit connection with but one man; but to be a common prostitute, her lewdness must be more general and indiscriminate. Springer v. State, 16 App. 591.

This article applies only to those persons who meet the description at the time that a charge is made under it, and one who has abandoned her vocation as a prostitute and has entered a place set apart for her reformation is not a vagrant. City of San Antonio v. Salvation Army (Civ. App.) 127 S. W. 860.

6. Keeper of house of gambling or gaming.—So much of this article as makes every keeper of a house of gambling or gaming a vagrant defines a different offense from that defined by article 559, making it a felony for any person to keep any premises, building, room, or place for the purpose of being used as a place to gamble with cards, there being a distinction between the offense of keeping a "room," denounced by article 559, and keeping a "house," denounced under the vagrancy act, for "room" and "house" are not synonymous or convertible terms. If it did not it would be unconstitutional, as violative of Const. art. 1, § 14, prohibiting double jeopardy. Parshall v. State, 62 App. 177, 138 S. W. 759. See, also, Austin v. State, 61 App. 573, 135 S. W. 1167.

One who permits many people to come and gamble in his residence, and who does not charge any fees or superintend the games, but plays as one of the visitors, and has none of the usual gambling house paraphernalia, is not a keeper of a gambling house within the purview of this article. Austin v. State, 61 App. 573, 135 S. W. 1167.

7. Defenses.—The purpose of this article is to punish persons whose status or course of conduct is that of vagrants as defined in the act, and it is no defense, when such status is shown to exist, that such person has money, etc., since he may have secured it by gambling, etc. Branch v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 605.

8. Jurisdiction of offense.—See note to article 639, post.

9. Complaint or indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 259, 325.

It is not sufficient to charge that the accused is "a vagrant within the meaning of the law." Some one or more of the statutory constituents of the offense must be alleged. Walton v. State, 12 App. 117. A complaint, charging in one count that on a certain day defendant was "a vagrant person in that on said date he was able to work and did not work, and has no property to support him," in another count he "was then and there a vagrant in that he habitually loafs and loiters around the streets and alleys and frequents places of ill fame in the city," and in another that he "was a vagrant person in that he is a professional thief and is engaged in unlawful pursuits," held insufficient to charge vagrancy under any of the definitions thereof. Edwards v. State, 71 App. 405, 160 S. W. 80.

10. Evidence.—Under an information, charging accused generally as a vagrant—a prostitute—evidence to prove her general reputation, or the bad character of her associates is inadmissible. Arnold v. State, 28 App. 480, 13 S. W. 774. See, also, Holsey v. State, 24 App. 35, 5 S. W. 523; Johnson v. State, 28 App. 562, 13 S. W. 1005.

The admission of evidence that the keeper of the place about which defendant loafed and another had no license to sell intoxicating liquors there is erroneous. So also is the admission of evidence that the keeper of a place, about which defendant loafed, had attempted to bribe peace officers to permit gambling in such place, and was being prosecuted for bribery. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 319.

In a prosecution for vagrancy under paragraph d evidence that the defendant, at the time charged, had some money on his person, and that he paid cash for groceries is not relevant. Branch v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 605.

Art. 635. Person unlawfully soliciting orders for intoxicating liquors, vagrant.—Any person who unlawfully solicits orders for intoxicating liquors. [Id., p. 112.]

Art. 636. Male person habitually associating with prostitutes, vagrant.—All male persons who habitually associate with prostitutes, or habitually loiter in or around houses of prostitution, or who, without having visible means of support, receive financial aid or assistance from prostitutes. [Id., p. 112.]

Occasional visits.—This article was intended to reach persons who associated with prostitutes as their equals or associated with them in public and was not intended to make a vagrant of one who merely visited such a person occasionally at her rooms. Ellis v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 339; Lingenfelter v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 981.

Information.—An information alleging that defendant, referred to as "Jim," but not otherwise alleged to be a "male person," did habitually associate with a prostitute, etc., does not state an offense, under this article. Ellis v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 339.

Evidence.—Evidence, in a prosecution for habitually associating with prostitutes, held to sustain a conviction. Lingenfelter v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 981. Evidence in a prosecution for vagrancy for loitering in disorderly houses held insufficient to support a conviction. Martoni v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1169.

Under an indictment, charging vagrancy for loitering in a disorderly house from a certain date until the date of the filing of the complaint, evidence that accused was seen in disorderly houses more than a year before is inadmissible, where there was no showing that he was at such places between that time and the time specified in the complaint. (Evidence insufficient to support a conviction.) Martoni v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1168.

Art. 637. Duty of sheriff and other officers.—It shall be the duty of every sheriff, deputy sheriff and constable in every county, and of the police, town marshal, deputy marshal, and other like officials, in every county, city, town or village in the state, to give information under oath to any officer empowered to issue criminal warrants, of all vagrants within their knowledge, or upon information in their respective counties, cities, towns and villages; thereupon the said officer shall issue a warrant for the apprehension of the person alleged to be a vagrant. [Id., p. 112.]

Art. 638. Information charging vagrancy.—All information charging vagrancy shall be under oath; and, while it is made the special duty of the officers named in article 637 hereof to file the said information whenever they shall have knowledge or good reason to suspect that any person is a vagrant, as defined by any clause or article of this law, yet any information charging vagrancy may be filed under oath by any resident of the state. [Id., p. 112.]

Art. 639. Court having jurisdiction; penalty for.—Whenever any person shall have been arrested on a charge of vagrancy, he shall immediately be carried before any court having jurisdiction of the offense herein named, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not to exceed two hundred dollars. [Id., p. 112.]

Courts invested with jurisdiction.—Corporation courts, under the express provisions of Rev. St. 1914, art. 904, are given jurisdiction of a prosecution on complaint charging that defendant, on or about a certain day and on each successive day thereafter to a certain date, was a vagrant, in that she was unlawfully and willfully the keeper of a house of prostitution, where prostitutes were permitted to resort and reside for the purposes of plying their vocation, etc. State ex rel. Bergeron v. Travis County Court (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 365.

Art. 640. Failure of officer to perform duty, penalty for.—If any of the officers named in article 637 shall fail, refuse, or neglect to perform the duties therein required, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., p. 112.]

CHAPTER NINE A

ABANDONMENT OF WIFE OR CHILDREN

Art.	Art.
640a. Desertion and failure to support wife or children; penalty.	640d. Venue.
640b. Order for support pendente lite; contempt.	640e. Expenses of extradition and prosecution.
640c. Proof of marriage and paternity; confidential communications; evidence as to willfulness of desertion.	640f. Liberal construction; partial invalidity.

Article 640a. Desertion and failure to support wife or children; penalty.—That any husband who shall wilfully or without justification, desert, neglect or refuse to provide for the support and maintenance of his wife, who may be in destitute or necessitous circumstances, or any parent who shall wilfully or without justification, desert, neglect or refuse to provide for the support and maintenance of his or her child or children under the age of sixteen years in destitute or necessitous circumstances, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars and not more than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1907, p. 133, ch. 62; Act 1913, p. 188, ch. 101, § 1.]

Explanatory.—This act supersedes Laws 1907, ch. 62, which was declared unconstitutional in Ex parte Smythe, 56 App. 375, 120 S. W. 200, 23 L. R. A. (N. S.) 854, 133 Am. St. Rep. 976, and was not carried into the revised penal code.

Intent.—This act does not impose a penalty for mere temporary separation due to inability to furnish support, but implies a purpose on the part of the husband and father not to support his family, where there is no justification or excuse for his failure to do so. And where the evidence shows that accused had merely left his family temporarily in order to secure work, and to make a new home for them, there can be no conviction. Irving v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1166.

Place of abandonment.—Where accused had, before the passage of this act, abandoned his wife and children in another state, and the wife and children thereafter came within the state for over six months, and accused knew of their destitute condition, and wilfully refused to support them, he was guilty of the offense denounced by the act. Noodleman v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 710.

Complaint, indictment or information.—A complaint and information for wife and child desertion without justification, leaving them in destitute and necessitous circumstances following the language of the statute is sufficient, although not alleging that the wife and child were without the necessities of life, or the means of obtaining them or were in want and in extremely needy and distressing circumstances. Hatch v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1062. An indictment charging that the defendant deserted and abandoned his wife, but not directly alleging that he had a wife or giving her name, is insufficient. So also is an indictment for the abandonment of defendant's minor child, which does not allege the name of the child. Irving v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1166.

In a prosecution for wife desertion, where the information alleged that the county attorney presented to the court that on a certain date, before the filing of such information, the defendant deserted his wife, etc., not referring to the complaint, which alleged that theretofore defendant deserted his wife without justification and refused to provide for her support, and that she was in destitute and necessitous circumstances, such complaint and information sufficiently charged the offense as against general demurrer; it not being necessary that the information should make mention of the complaint. Herrera v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 696.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for the abandonment of defendant's minor son, evidence which does not establish the name of the son as charged in the indictment is insufficient to sustain a conviction. Irving v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1166.

Evidence showing when accused abandoned his wife and family is also admissible, although it cannot be considered, except as tending to show the condition of the wife and children. And evidence that his children were in a destitute condition for a long time before the law went into effect, and that such condition continued up to the time of the prosecution, is admissible. Noodleman v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 710.

In a prosecution of accused for abandonment of his wife, evidence held sufficient to show abandonment when he refused to send her money to return to him from a visit to her mother in F. county, which he had induced her to make, or in any case when he wrote her two months later that she need not come back, that he would never treat her as a wife, and that she should do the best she could, for he did not want her. Hatch v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1062.

Art. 640b. Order for support pendente lite; contempt.—At any time before the trial, upon petition of the complainant and upon notice to the defendant, the court or judge thereof in vacation, may enter such temporary orders as may seem just, providing for the support of the deserted wife or children, or both, pendente lite, and may punish for the violation of or refusal to obey such order or orders as for contempt. [Act 1913, p. 189, ch. 101, § 2.]

Art. 640c. Proof of marriage and paternity; confidential communications; evidence as to wilfulness of desertion.—No other or greater evidence to prove the marriage of such husband and wife, or that the defendant is the father or mother of such child or children, shall be required than is or shall be required to prove such facts as in a civil action. In no prosecution under this Act shall any existing statute prohibiting disclosures of confidential communications between husband and wife apply, to strictly relevant facts and both husband and wife shall be competent and compellable witnesses to testify against each other to any and all relevant matters, including the fact of such marriage, and the parentage of such child or children. Proof of the desertion of such wife, child or children in destitute or necessitous circumstances or of neglect or refusal to provide for the support and maintenance of such wife, child or children shall be prima facie evidence that such desertion, neglect or refusal is wilful. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 640d. Venue.—An offense under this Act shall be held to have been committed in the county in which such wife, child or children may have been at the time such abandonment occurred, or in the county in which such wife, child or children shall have resided for six months next preceding the filing of the complaint, information or indictment. [Id., § 4.]

Jurisdiction.—Where accused had deserted his wife and children in another state before the passage of this act, and they afterwards came into this state and resided for over six months in the county in which prosecution was instituted, and accused, though knowing of the destitute condition of his children, wilfully refused to support them, the courts of the county where the children resided had jurisdiction. Noodleman v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 710.

The jurisdiction given by this section is not defeated by the fact that, during the six months, the wife was temporarily absent from the county for two months earning money for her support. Hatch v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1062.

Art. 640e. Expenses of extradition and prosecution.—It shall be the duty of the commissioners' court of the county in which a complaint, information or indictment under this Act is filed to furnish the funds necessary for extraditing or arresting and returning to such county any defendant under this Act who is not at the time in such county or who has gone to another State. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 640f. Liberal construction; partial invalidity.—This Act shall be liberally construed and if any section thereof be declared invalid, the remaining parts of the law shall not be affected thereby, as it is the intent of the Legislature to preserve all, any and every portion of said Act, if possible. [Id., § 6.]

[Act July 9, 1879, extra session, ch. 36, § 1.]

Art. 645. [418] Penalty for acting as agent unlawfully.—Any person who shall do or perform any of the acts or things mentioned in the preceding article for any insurance company hereinbefore referred to, without such company having first complied with the requirements of the laws of this state, or having received the certificate of authority from the commissioner of insurance and banking of the state of Texas, as required by law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction by any court of competent jurisdiction, for the first offense be fined five hundred dollars, and also a sum equal to the state, county and municipal licenses required to be paid by such insurance company for doing business in this state, and shall be imprisoned in the county jail, where the offense is committed, for the period of three months, unless the fine assessed against him and the sum of licenses herein mentioned and the cost of the court be sooner paid; and for any second or other offense, such person shall be fined in the sum of one thousand dollars, and shall be imprisoned in the county jail for the period of six months, unless the fine assessed against him and the costs of the court be sooner paid. Insurance companies not to do certain things.—No company shall engage or participate in the insuring or re-insuring of any property in this State against loss or damage by fire except in compliance with the terms and provisions of this Act; nor shall any such company knowingly write insurance at any lesser rate than the rates herein provided for, and it shall be unlawful for any company so to do, unless it shall thereafter file an analysis of same with the Commission, and it shall be unlawful for any company, or its officers, directors, general agents, State agents, special agents, local agents, or its representatives, to grant or contract for any special favor or advantages in the dividends or other profits to come thereon, or in commissions in the dividends or other profits to accrue thereon, or in commissions or division of commission, or any position or any valuable consideration or any inducement not specified in the policy contract of insurance; nor shall such company give, sell or purchase, offer to give, sell or purchase, directly or indirectly as an inducement to insure or in connection therewith, any stocks, bonds or other securities of any insurance company or other corporation, partnership or individual, or any dividends or profits accrued or to accrue thereon, or anything of value whatsoever, not specified in the policy; but nothing in this Section or in this Act shall be construed to prohibit a company from sharing its profits with its policyholders, provided that such agreement as to profit-sharing shall be placed on or in the face of the policy, and such profit-sharing shall be uniform and shall not discriminate between individuals or between classes; provided, however, that no part of the profit shall be paid until the expiration of the policy. Any company, or any of its officers, directors, general agents, state agents, special agents, local agents or its representatives, doing any of the acts in this Section prohibited, shall be deemed guilty of unjust discrimination; provided, however, that if any agent of [or] company shall issue a policy without authority, and any policyholder holding such policy shall sustain a loss or damage thereunder, said company or companies shall be liable to the policyholder thereunder, in the same manner and to the same extent as if said company had been authorized to issue said policies, although the company issued said policy in violation of the provisions of this Act. But this shall not be construed to give any company the right to issue any contract or policy of insurance other than as provided in this Act. [Act 1910, S. S., p. 135, repealed; Act 1913, p. 204, ch. 106, § 22, superseding art. 660 revised Pen. Code.]

[Act 1910, S. S., p. 136, repealed; Act 1913, p. 205, ch. 106, § 23, superseding art. 662, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 662a. Law not applicable to collection of premiums; certain policies to be in force.—The provisions of this law shall not deal with the collection of premiums, but each company shall be permitted to make such rules and regulations as it may deem just between the company, its agents, and its policyholders; and no bona fide extension of credit shall be construed as a discrimination, or in violation of the provisions of this Act.

All policies heretofore issued or which shall hereafter be issued by any insurance company prior to the taking effect of this Act which provide that said policies shall be void for non-payment of premiums at a certain specified time, shall be and the same are in full force and effect, provided, that the company or any of its agents have accepted the premium on said policies after the expiration of the dates named in said provisions fixing the date of payment. [Act 1913, p. 205, ch. 106, § 24.]

Art. 663. Incriminating testimony.—No person shall be excused from giving testimony or producing evidence when legally called upon to do so at the trial of any other person or company charged with violating any of the provisions of this Act on the ground that it may incriminate him under the laws of this State; but no person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he may testify or produce evidence under this Act, except for perjury in so testifying. [Act 1910, S. S., p. 137, repealed; Act 1913, p. 206, ch. 106, § 28, superseding art. 664 revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 664a. Partial invalidity.—If any part of this Act be for any reason held unconstitutional, it shall not affect any other portion or part of this Act. [Act 1913, p. 206, ch. 106, § 30.]

Art. 664b. Shall file bond.—Every fire insurance company, not organized under the laws of this state applying for a certificate of authority to transact any kind of insurance in this state shall, before obtaining such certificate, file with the commissioner of insurance and banking, a bond, with good and sufficient surety or sureties to be approved by the commissioner of insurance and banking, payable to the commissioner of insurance and banking, and his successors in office, in a sum equal to twenty-five per cent of its premiums collected from citizens or upon property in this state during the preceding calendar year, as shown by its annual report for such year; provided, however, the bond in no case shall exceed fifty thousand dollars, nor be less than ten thousand dollars, conditioned that said company will pay all its lawful obligations to citizens of this state. Such bonds shall be subject to successive suits by citizens of this state so long as any part of the same shall not be exhausted, and the same shall be kept in force unimpaired until all claims of citizens of this state arising out of obligations of said company have been fully satisfied. Such bonds shall provide that in the event the company shall become insolvent or cease to transact business in this state at any time when it has outstanding policies of insurance in favor of citizens of this state or upon property in this state the commissioner of insurance and banking shall have the power, after having given ten days notice to the officers of such company or any receiver in charge of its property and affairs, to contract with any other insurance company transacting business in this state for the assumption and reinsurance by it of all the insurance risks outstanding in this state of such company which is insolvent, or which has ceased to transact business in this state, which contract shall also provide for the assumption by such reinsuring company of all outstanding and unsatisfied lawful claims then outstanding against such company which has become insolvent, or ceased to transact business in this state, and in the event of the commissioner making any such contract and if the same shall be approved as reasonable by the attorney general and the governor of this state the reinsuring company shall be entitled to recover from the makers of such bond the amount of the premium or compensation so agreed upon for such reinsurance. Any company desiring to do so may at its option in lieu of giving the bond required by this section deposit securities of any kind in which it may lawfully invest its funds with the state treasurer of this state upon such terms and conditions as will in all respects afford the same protection and indemnity as is herein provided for to be afforded by said bond. Explanatory.—The above act, comprising arts. 664b-664d, was omitted from the revised Penal Code, and is included in this compilation in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

When bond required.—Under this article and art. 664d, requiring that before any company shall issue any policy it shall first have filed during the calendar year in which such policy may issue a bond in a sum not less than $10,000, conditioned for the payment of all lawful obligations to citizens of this state arising out of any policies or contracts issued by such company, and makes it a penal offense for any company to issue policies without having given bond, held that, when construed with the senate journal, which showed that this article as it originally stood made no provision for a minimum or maximum penalty, which provision was entered by amendment without any other change in the bill, the two articles were but complements of each other, and hence required the giving of only one bond. Ætna Ins. Co. v. Hawkins, 103 Tex. 195, 125 S. W. 313.

Under this article and art. 664d, which requires that before any company shall issue any policy it shall first have filed, "during the calendar year in which such policy may issue, a bond," etc., and the practice and statutory provision, under which the state department did not issue the certificates to insurance companies until March, the words "calendar year," as used in art. 664d, would be read in connection with this article, and construed to mean the year in which the certificate is to run, since it was obvious that the legislature considered that the certificate was to run a calendar year, and since any other construction would leave an interval between January and March, during which time a policy issued by the company would not be preceded by a bond "filed during the calendar year." Id.

Under the statutory provision that certificate of authority for an insurance company to do business in the state must be obtained annually, and this article, the filing of a bond is required whenever a certificate to do business was applied for. Id.

Obligation of bond.—Under this article and art. 664d, which requires that, before any company shall issue any policy, it shall first have filed a bond conditioned for the payment of all lawful obligations to citizens of the state arising out of any policies or contracts issued by such company, a bond filed must contain all the conditions imposed by either section, except that the bond mentioned in this article would be limited by the language of art. 664d to include only lawful obligations arising out of insurance policies or contracts. Ætna Ins. Co. v. Hawkins, 103 Tex. 195, 125 S. W. 313.

Bond for benefit of policy holders.—A bond executed by defendant to indemnify a surety on the bond of a foreign insurance company to enable it to obtain a license to do business in Texas held to inure to the benefit of policy holders of the insurance company. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. Anderson (Sup.) 155 S. W. 1176.

Art. 664c. Same; time for compliance with act.—Every fire insurance company not organized under the laws of this State which shall hold a certificate of authority to transact any kind of insurance business in this State, when this Act takes effect, shall within ninety days thereafter comply with the requirements of Section 1 of this Act [Art. 664b], as to companies hereafter obtaining certificates of authority and it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking to revoke the certificate of authority failing to so comply within such period. [Id., § 2.]

See notes under art. 664b.

Art. 664d. Same; penalty for violation.—Every fire insurance company not organized under the laws of this state, hereafter issuing or causing or authorizing to be issued any policy of insurance other than life insurance shall first have filed with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking during the calendar year in which such policy may issue or authorize or cause to be issued a bond of good and sufficient sureties to be approved by such commissioner in a sum of not less than ten thousand dollars, conditioned for the payment of all lawful obligations to citizens of this State arising out of any policies or contracts issued by such fire insurance company, which such bond shall be subject to successive suits by citizens of this State so long as any part of the same shall not be adjusted and so long as there remains outstanding any such obligations or contracts of such fire insurance company. Any person violating the provisions of this Section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than three nor more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. This Act shall not apply to any person, firm or corporation or association doing an interinsurance, co-operative or reciprocal business. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 665. Fraternal benefit societies defined.—Any corporation, society, order or voluntary association, without capital stock, organized and carried on solely for the mutual benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, and not for profit, and having a lodge system with ritualistic form of work and representative form of government, and which shall make provision for the payment of benefits in accordance with Section 5 [Art. 665d] hereof, is hereby declared to be a fraternal benefit society. [Act 1899, p. 195; Act 1909, p. 359, repealed; Act 1913, p. 220, ch. 113, § 1, superseding art. 665 revised Pen. Code.]

Explanatory.—Acts 1913, p. 220, § 23, repeals chapter 36 of 1st S. S. and chapter 22 of 2nd S. S., 1909, and chapter 92, Acts 1911, and all other laws in conflict, and thus supercedes arts. 665-672, Revised Pen. Code.

Art. 665a. Lodge system defined.—Any society having a supreme governing or legislative body and subordinate lodges or branches by whatever name known, into which members shall be elected, initiated and admitted in accordance with its Constitution, laws, rules, regulations and prescribed ritualistic ceremonies, which subordinate lodges or branches shall be required by the laws of such society to hold regular or stated meetings at least once in each month, shall be deemed to be operating on the lodge system. [Act 1909, p. 357, § 2, repealed; Act 1913, p. 220, ch. 113, § 2.]

Explanatory.—Sections 2-8, 11-18, 20, 22-24, 26, 29, of Act 1913, ch. 113, amendatory of similar provisions in the repealed act of 1909, which were omitted from the revised Penal Code, are inserted in this compilation for convenience and because they seem to enumerate or illustrate the acts denounced in the penal provisions.

Art. 665b. Representative form of government defined.—Any such society shall be deemed to have a representative form of government when it shall provide in its Constitution and laws for a supreme legislative or governing body, composed of representatives, elected either by the members or by delegates elected, directly or indirectly by the members, together with such other members as may be prescribed by its Constitution and laws; provided, that the elective members shall constitute a majority in number and have not less than two-thirds of the votes, nor less than the votes required to amend its Constitution and laws; provided, further, that the meetings of the supreme or governing body, and the election of officers, representatives or delegates, shall be held as often as once in four years. The members, officers, representatives or delegates of a fraternal benefit society shall not vote by proxy. [Act 1909, p. 357, § 3, repealed; Act 1913, p. 220, ch. 113, § 3.]

Art. 665c. Exemptions.—Except as herein provided, such societies shall be governed by this Act, and shall be exempt from all provisions of the insurance laws of this State, not only in governmental relations with the State, but for every other purpose, and no law hereafter enacted shall apply to them, unless they be expressly designated therein. [Act 1909, p. 358, § 4, repealed; Act 1913, p. 221, ch. 113, § 4.]

Such society shall have the power to give a member, when permanently disabled or on attaining the age of seventy, all or such portion of the face value of his certificate as the laws of the society may provide; provided, that nothing in this Act contained shall be so construed as to prevent the issuing of benefit certificates for a term of years less than the whole of life which are payable upon the death or disability of the member occurring within the term for which the benefit certificates may be issued. Such society shall, upon written application of the member, have the power to accept a part of the periodical contributions in cash, and charge the remainder, not exceeding one-half of the periodical contribution, against the certificate, with interest payable or compounded annually at a rate not lower than four per cent per annum; provided, that this privilege shall not be granted except to societies which have readjusted or may hereafter readjust their rates of contribution, and to contracts affected by such readjustment.

Any society which shall show by the annual valuation herein-after provided for that it is accumulating and maintaining the reserve not lower than the usual reserve computed by the American Experience Table and five per cent. interest may grant to its members extended and paid-up protection, or such withdrawal equities as its Constitution and laws may provide; provided, that such grants shall in no case exceed in value the portion of the reserve to the credit of such members to whom they are made. [Act 1909, p. 358, § 5, repealed; Act 1913, p. 221, ch. 113, § 5.]

Art. 665e. Within the above restrictions each member shall have the right to designate his beneficiary, and from time to time have the same changed in accordance with the laws, rules or regulations of the society, and no beneficiary shall have or obtain any vested interest in the said benefit until the same has become due and payable upon the death of the said member; provided, that any society may, by its laws, limit the scope of beneficiaries within the above classes. [Act 1909, p. 358, § 6, repealed; Act 1913, p. 221, ch. 113, § 6.]

See notes under art. 4832, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 665f. ticles of incorporation, or articles of association, if a voluntary association, a constitution or laws duly made or enacted subsequent to the issuance of the benefit certificates shall bind the member and his beneficiaries, and shall govern and control the agreement in all respects the same as though such changes, additions or amendments had been made prior to and were in force at the time of the application for membership. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 358, § 8, and Act 1909, 2nd S. S., p. 443, repealed; Act 1913, p. 222, ch. 113, § 8.]

See notes under art. 4834, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

The funds from which benefits shall be paid and the funds from which the expenses of the society shall be defrayed shall be derived from periodical or other payments by the members of the society and accretions of said funds; provided, that no society, domestic or foreign, shall hereafter be incorporated or admitted to transact business in this State which does not provide for stated periodical contributions sufficient to provide for meeting the mortuary obligations contracted, when valued upon the basis of the National Fraternal Congress Table of Mortality as adopted by the National Fraternal Congress, August 23, 1899, or any higher standard, with interest assumption not more than four per cent. per annum, nor write or accept members for temporary or permanent disability benefits except upon tables based upon reliable experience, with an interest assumption not higher than four per cent. per annum.

Deferred payments or installments of claims shall be considered as fixed liabilities on the happenings of the contingency upon which such payments or installments are thereafter to be paid. Such liability shall be the present value of such future payments or installments upon the rate of interest and mortality assumed by the society for valuation, and every society shall maintain a fund sufficient to meet such liability regardless of proposed future collections to meet any such liabilities. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 359, § 9, repealed; Act 1913, p. 222, ch. 113, § 9, superseding Art. 666 revised Pen. Code.]

[Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 359, § 10 and Act 1911, ch. 92, repealed; Act 1913, p. 223, ch. 113, § 10, superseding art. 667 revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 668. [Repealed by Act 1913, ch. 113, § 33. See note under art. 665 ante.]

Art. 668a. Distribution of funds.—Every provision of the laws of the Society for payment by members of such Society, in whatever form made, shall distinctly state the purpose of the same and the proportion thereof which may be used for expenses, and no part of the money collected for mortuary or disability purposes or the net accretions of either or any of said funds shall be used for expenses. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 360, § 13, repealed; Act 1913, p. 223, ch. 113, § 11.]

See note under art. 665a.

Art. 668b. First. The proposed corporate name of the society, which shall so closely resemble the name of any society or insurance company already transacting business in this State as to mislead the public or to lead to confusion.

Second. The purpose for which it is formed, which shall not include more liberal powers than are granted by this Act; provided, that any lawful, social, intellectual, educational, charitable, benevolent, moral or religious advantages may be set forth among the purposes of the Society, and the mode in which its corporate powers are to be exercised.

Third. The names, residences and official titles of all the officers, trustees, directors or other persons who are to have and exercise the general control and management of the affairs and funds of the Society for the first year or until the ensuing election at which all such officers shall be elected by the supreme legislative or governing body, which election shall be held not later than one year from the date of the issuance of the permanent certificate.

Fourth. Such articles of incorporation and duly certified copies of the Constitution and laws, rules and regulations, and copies of all proposed forms of benefit certificates, applications therefor and circulars to be issued by such society, and a bond in the sum of five thousand dollars, with sureties approved by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, conditioned upon the return of the advance payments, as provided in this Section, to applicants, if the organization is not completed within one year, shall be filed with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, who may require such further information as he deems necessary, and if the purposes of the society conform to the requirements of this Act, and all provisions of law have been complied with, the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall so certify and retain and record (or file) the articles of incorporation, and furnish the incorporators a preliminary certificate authorizing said society to solicit members as hereinafter provided.

Upon receipt of said certificate from the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, said society may solicit members for the purpose of completing its organization and shall collect from each applicant the amount of not less than one regular monthly payment, in accordance with its Table of Rates as provided by its Constitution and laws, and shall issue to each such applicant a receipt for the amount so collected. But no such society shall incur any liability other than for such advanced payments, nor issue any benefit certificate nor pay or allow, or offer or promise to pay or allow, to any person any death or disability benefit until actual bona fide applications for death benefit certificates have been secured upon at least five hundred lives for at least one thousand dollars each, and all such applications for death benefits shall have been regularly examined by legally qualified practicing physicians, and certificates of such examination have been duly filed and approved by the chief medical examiner of such society; nor until there shall be established ten subordinate lodges or branches into which said five hundred applicants have been initiated; nor until there has been submitted to the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, under oath of the president and secretary or corresponding officers of such society, a list of such applicants, giving their names, addresses, date examined, date, approved, date initiated, name and number of the subordinate branch of which each applicant is a member, amount of benefits to be granted, rate of stated periodical contributions, which shall be sufficient to provide for meeting the mortuary obligation, contracted, when valued for death benefits upon the basis of the National Fraternal Congress Table of Mortality, as adopted by the National Fraternal Congress, August 23, 1899, or any higher standard, at the option of the society, and for disability benefits by tables based upon reliable experience and for combined death and permanent total disability benefits by tables based upon reliable experience, with an interest assumption not higher than four per cent. per annum; nor until it shall be shown to the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking by the sworn statement of the treasurer or corresponding officer of such society, that at least five hundred applicants have each paid in cash at least one regular monthly payment as herein provided per one thousand dollars of indemnity to be effected, which payments in the aggregate shall amount to at least twenty-five hundred dollars; all of which shall be credited to the mortuary or disability fund on account of such applicants and no part of which may be used for expenses.

Said advanced payments shall, during the period of organization, be held in trust, and if the organization is not completed within one year as hereinafter provided, returned to said applicants.

The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking may make such examination and require such further information as he deems advisable; and upon presentation of satisfactory evidence that the society has compiled [complied] with all the provisions of law, he shall issue to such society a certificate to that effect. Such certificate shall be prima facie evidence of the existence of such society at the date of such certificate. The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall cause a record of such certificate to be made and a certified copy of such record may be given in evidence with like effect as the original certificate.

No preliminary certificate granted under the provisions of this Section shall be valid after one year from its date, or after such further period, not exceeding one year, as may be authorized by the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance upon cause shown; unless the five hundred applicants herein required have been secured and the organization has been completed as herein provided; and the articles of incorporation and all proceedings thereunder shall become null and void in one year from the date of said preliminary certificate, or at the expiration of said extended period, unless such society shall have completed its organization and commenced business as herein provided. When any domestic society shall have discontinued business for the period of one year, or has less than four hundred members, its charter shall become null and void. Every such society shall have the power to make a Constitution and by-laws for the government of the society, the admission of its members, the management of its affairs and the fixing and readjusting of the rates of contribution of its members from time to time; and it shall have the power to change, alter, add to, or amend such Constitution and by-laws and shall have such other powers as are necessary and incidental to carrying into effect the object and purposes of the society. [Act 1899, p. 200, § 14; Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 360, § 14, repealed; Act 1913, p. 223, ch. 113, § 12.]

Art. 668c. Powers retained; reincorporation; amendments.—Any society now engaged in transacting business in this State may exercise, after the passage of this Act, all of the rights conferred thereby, and all of the rights, powers and privileges now exercised or possessed by it under its charter or articles of incorporation not inconsistent with this Act, if incorporated; or if it be a voluntary association, it may incorporate hereunder. But no society already organized shall be required to reincorporate hereunder, and any such society may amend its articles of incorporation from time to time in the manner provided therein or in its Constitution and laws, and all such amendments shall be filed with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking and shall become operative upon such filing, unless a later time be provided in such amendments or in its articles of incorporation, Constitution or laws. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 362, § 15, repealed; Act 1913, p. 225, ch. 113, § 13.]

See note under art. 665a.

Art. 668d. Mergers and transfers.—No domestic society shall merge with or accept the transfer of the membership or funds of any other society unless such merger or transfer is evidenced by a contract in writing, setting out in full the terms and conditions of such merger or transfer, and filed with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking of this State, together with a sworn statement of the financial condition of each of said societies by its president and secretary, or corresponding officers, and a certificate of such officers, duly verified under oath of said officers of each of the contracting societies, that such merger or transfer has been approved by a vote of two-thirds of the members of the supreme legislative or governing body of each of said societies.

Upon the submission of said contract financial statements and certificates, the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall examine the same, and if he shall find such financial statements to be correct and the said contract to be in conformity with the provisions of this Section, and that such merger or transfer is just and equitable to the members of each of said societies, he shall approve said merger or transfer, issue his certificate to that effect, and thereupon the said contract or merger or transfer shall be of full force and effect. In case such contract is not approved, the fact of its submission and its contents shall not be disclosed by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 363, § 16, repealed; Act 1913, p. 226, ch. 113, § 14.]

Art. 668e. Annual license.—Societies which are now authorized to transact business in this State may continue such business until the first day of April next succeeding the passage of this Act, and the authority of such societies may thereafter be renewed annually, but in all cases to terminate on the first day of the succeeding April; provided, however, the license shall continue in full force and effect until the new license be issued or specifically refused. For each such license or renewal the society shall pay the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking ten dollars. A duly certified copy or duplicate of such license shall be prima facie evidence that the licensee is a fraternal benefit society within the meaning of this Act. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 363, § 17, repealed; Act 1913, p. 226, ch. 113, § 15.]

See note under art. 665a.

Art. 668f. Admission of foreign society.—No foreign society now transacting business, organized prior to the passage of this Act, which is not now authorized to transact business in this State, shall transact any business herein without a license from the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking. Any such society shall be entitled to a license to transact business within this State upon filing with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking a duly certified copy of its charter or articles of association; a copy of its Constitution and laws, certified by its secretary or corresponding officer; a power of attorney to the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking as hereinafter provided; a statement of its business under oath of its president and secretary or corresponding officers in the form required by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, duly verified by an examination made by the supervising insurance official of its home State or other State satisfactory to the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking of this State; a certificate from the proper official in its home State, province or country that the society is legally organized; a copy of its contract, which must show that benefits are provided for by periodical or other payments by persons holding similar contracts; and upon furnishing the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking such other information as he may deem necessary to a proper exhibit of its business and plan of working, and upon showing that its assets are invested in accordance with the laws of the State, territory, district, province or country where it is organized, he shall issue a license to such society to do business in this State until the first day of the succeeding April, and such license shall, upon compliance with the provisions of this Act, be renewed annually, but in all cases to terminate on the first day of the succeeding April; provided, however, that license shall continue in full force and effect until the new license be issued or specifically refused. Any foreign society desiring admission to this State shall have the qualifications required of domestic societies organized under this Act and have its assets invested as required by the laws of the State, territory, district, country or province where it is organized. For each such license or renewal the society shall pay the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking ten dollars. When the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking refuses to license any society or revokes its authority to do business in this State, he shall reduce his ruling, order or decision to writing and file the same in his office, and shall furnish a copy thereof, together with a statement of his reasons, to the officers of the society, upon request, and the action of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall be reviewable by proper proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction within the State; provided, however, that nothing contained in this or the preceding section shall be taken or construed as preventing any such society from continuing in good faith all contracts made in this State during the time such society was legally authorized to transact business herein. [Act 1899, p. 196, § 3; Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 363, § 18, repealed; Act 1913, p. 226, ch. 113, § 16.]

Art. 668g. Power of attorney and service of process.—Every society, whether domestic or foreign, now transacting business in this State shall, within thirty days after the passage of this Act, any [and] every such society hereafter applying for admission, shall before being licensed, appoint in writing the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, and his successors in office to be its true and lawful attorney upon whom all legal process in any action or proceeding against it shall be served, and in such writing shall agree that any lawful process against it which is served upon such attorney shall be of the same legal force and validity as if served upon the society and that the authority shall continue in force so long as any liability remains outstanding in this State.

Copies of such appointment certified by said Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall be deemed sufficient evidence thereof and shall be admitted in evidence with the same force and effect as the original thereof might be admitted. Service shall only be made upon such attorney, must be made in duplicate upon the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, or, in his absence, upon the person in charge of his office, and shall be deemed sufficient service upon such society; provided, however, that no such service shall be valid or binding against any such society when it is required thereunder to file its answer, pleading [pleading] or defense in less than thirty days from the date of mailing the copy of such service to such society. When legal process against any such society is served upon said Commissioner of Insurance and Banking he shall forthwith forward by registered mail, one of the duplicate copies prepaid and directed to its secretary or corresponding officer. Legal process shall not be served upon any such society except in the manner provided herein. [Act 1899, p. 197, § 4; Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 364, § 19, repealed; Act 1913, p. 227, ch. 113, § 17.]

See note under art. 665a, ante, and notes under art. 4844, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 668h. Place of meeting; location of office.—Any domestic society may provide that the meetings of its legislative or governing body may be held in any State, district, province or territory wherein such society has subordinate branches, and all business transacted at such meetings shall be as valid in all respects as if such meetings were held in this State; but its principal office shall be located in this State. [Act 1899, p. 199, § 12; Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 364, § 20, repealed; Act 1913, p. 228, ch. 113, § 18.]

See note under art. 665a, ante, and notes under art. 4845, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 668i. Grand lodges regarded as single state organization; reports.—All grand lodges, by whatever name known, whether incorporated or not, holding charters from any supreme governing body, which were conducting business in this State upon the passage of this Act as a fraternal beneficiary association, upon what is known as the separate jurisdiction plan, shall be treated as single

State organizations, and all reports required by the provisions of this Act shall be made and furnished by the officers of such supreme State governing body and shall embrace and contain the transactions, liabilities and assets of such State organization. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 365, § 23, repealed; Act 1913, p. 228, ch. 113, § 20.]

See note under art. 665a, ante, and notes under art. 4847, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 668j. Constitution and laws; amendments.—Every society transacting business under this Act shall file with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking a duly certified copy of all amendments of, or additions to its Constitution and laws within ninety days after the enactment of the same. Printed copies of the Constitution and laws, as amended, changed, or added to, certified by the secretary or corresponding officer of the society, shall be prima facie evidence of the legal adoption thereof. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 365, § 24, repealed; Act 1913, p. 228, ch. 113, § 22.]

See note under art. 665a, ante, and notes under art. 4849, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 668k. Annual reports.—Every society transacting business in this State shall annually, on or before the day of March, file with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking in such form as he may require, a statement under oath of its president and secretary or corresponding officers, of its condition and standing on the thirty-first day of December next preceding, and of its transactions for the year ending on that date, and also shall furnish such other information as the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking may deem necessary to a proper exhibit of its business and plan of working. The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking may at other times require any further statement he may deem necessary to be made relating to such society.

In addition to the annual report herein required, each society shall annually report to the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking a valuation of its certificates in force on December 31st last preceding, excluding those issued within the year for which the report is filed, in cases where the contribution for the first year in whole or in part are used for current mortality and expenses; provided, the first report of valuation shall be made as of December 31st, 1913, such report of valuation shall show, as contingent, liabilities the present mid-year value of the promised benefits provided in the constitution and laws of such society, under certificates the subject to valuation; and, as contingent assets, the present mid-year value of the future net contributions provided in the Constitution and laws as the same are in practice actually collected. At the option of any society, in lieu of the above, the valuation may show the net value of the certificates subject to valuation hereinbefore provided, and said net value, when computed in case of monthly contributions, may be the mean of the terminal values for the end of the preceding and of the current insurance years.

Such valuation shall be certified by a competent accountant or actuary, or, at the request and expense of the society, verified by the actuary of the Department of Insurance of the home State of the society, and shall be filed with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking within ninety days after the submission of the last preceding annual [annual] report. The legal minimum standard of valuation for all certificates, except for disability benefits, shall be the National Fraternal Congress Table of Mortality as adopted by the National Congress, August 23rd, 1899; or, at the option of the society, any higher table; or, at its option, it may use a table based upon the society's own experience of at least twenty years, and covering not less than one hundred thousand lives with interest assumption not more than four per centum per annum. Each such valuation report shall set forth clearly and fully the mortality and interest basis and the method of valuation. Any society providing for disability benefits shall keep the net contributions for such benefits in a fund separate and apart from all other benefit and expense funds and the valuation of all other business of the society; provided, that where a combined contribution table is used by a society for both death and permanent total disability benefits, the valuation shall be according to tables of reliable experiences, and in such cases a separation of the funds shall not be required.

The valuation herein provided for shall not be considered or regarded as a test of the financial solvency of the society, but each society shall be held to be legally solvent [solvent] so long as the funds [funds] in its possession are equal to or in excess of its matured liabilities.

Beginning with the year, 1914, a report of such valuation and an explanation of the facts concerning the condition of the society thereby disclosed, shall be printed and mailed to each beneficiary member of the society not later than June 1st, of each year; or, in lieu thereof, such report of valuation and showing of the society's condition as thereby disclosed may be published in the society's official paper and the issue containing the same mailed to each beneficiary member of the society. The laws of such society shall provide that if the stated periodical contributions of the members are insufficient to pay all matured death and disability claims in full, and to provide for the creation and maintenance of the funds required by its laws additional, increased or extra rates of contribution shall be collected from the members to meet such deficiency; and such laws may provide that, upon the written application or consent of the member, his certificate may be charged with its proportion of any deficiency disclosed by valuation, with interest not exceeding five per centum per annum. [Act 1899, p. 197, § 5; Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 365, § 25, repealed; Act 1913, p. 229, ch. 113, § 23.]

See note under art. 665a.

Art. 668l. Provisions to insure future security.—If the valuation of the certificates, as hereinbefore provided, on December 31st, 1917, shall show that the present value of future net contributions, together with the admitted assets, is less than the present value of the promised benefits and accrued liabilities, such society shall thereafter maintain said financial condition at each succeeding triennial valuation in respect of the degree of deficiency as shown in the valuation as of December 31, 1917. If at any succeeding triennial valuation such society does not show at least the same condition, the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall direct that it thereafter comply with the requirements herein specified. If the next succeeding triennial valuation after the receipt of such notice shall show that the society has failed to maintain the condition required herein, the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking may, in the absence of good cause shown for such failure, institute proceedings for the dissolution of such society, in accordance with the provisions of Section 24 of this Act [art. 668n], or in the case of a foreign society, its license may be cancelled in the manner provided in this Act.

Any such society, shown by any triennial valuation, subsequent to December 31, 1917, not to have maintained the condition herein required, shall, within two years thereafter, make such improvement as to show a percentage of deficiency not greater than as of December 31, 1917, or thereafter, as to all new members admitted, be subject, so far as stated rates of contributions are concerned, to the provisions of Section 12 of this Act [Art. 668b], applicable in the organization of new societies; provided, that the net mortuary or beneficiary contributions and funds of such new members shall be kept separate and apart from the other funds of the society. If such required improvement is not shown by the succeeding triennial valuation, then the said new members may be placed in a separate class and their certificates valued as an independent society in respect of contributions and funds. [Act 1913, p. 230, ch. 113, § 23a.]

Art. 668m. Same; valuation of certificates; transfers; tabular basis; accumulation basis; filing table showing credits; proviso.— In lieu of the requirements of Section 23 [Art. 668k] and 23a, [Art. 668l] any society accepting in its laws the provisions of this Section, may value its certificates on a basis herein designated, “accumulation basis,” by crediting each member with the net amount contributed for each year and with interest at approximately the next rate earned and by charging him with his share of the losses for each year, herein designated “cost of insurance,” and carrying the balance, if any, to his credit. The charge for the cost of insurance may be according to the actual experience of the society applied to a table of mortality recognized by the law of this State, and shall take into consideration the amount at risk during each year, which shall be the amount payable at death less the credit to the member, except as specifically provided in its articles of laws or contracts no charge shall be carried forward from the first valuation hereunder against any member for any past share of losses exceeding the contributions and credit. If, after the first valuation, any member’s share of losses for any year exceeds his credit, including the contribution for the year, the contribution shall be increased to cover his share of the losses. Any such excess share of losses chargeable to any member may be paid out of a fund or contribution especially created or required for such purpose.

Any member may transfer to any plan adopted by the society with net rates on which tabular reserves are maintained and on such transfer shall be entitled to make such application of his credit as provided in the laws of the society.

Certificates issued, rerated or readjusted on a basis provided for adequate rates with adequate reserves to mature such certificates upon assumption for mortality and interest recognized by the law of this State shall be valued on such basis, herein designated the “Tabular Basis”; provided, that if on the first valuation under this Section a deficiency in reserve shall be shown for any such certificate, the same shall be valued on the accumulation basis.

Whenever in any society having members upon the tabular basis and upon the accumulation basis, the total of all costs of insurance provided for any year shall be insufficient to meet the actual death and disability losses for the year, the deficiency shall be met for the year from the available funds after setting aside all credits in the reserve or from increased contributions or by an increase in the number of assessments applied to the society, as a whole or to classes of members as may be specified in its laws, savings from a lower amount of death losses may be returned in like manner as may be specified in its laws. If the laws of the society so provide, the assets representing the reserves of any separate class of members may be carried separately for such class as if in an independent society, and the required reserve accumulation of such class, so set apart shall not thereafter be mingled with the assets of other classes of the society.

A table showing the credits to individual members for each age and year of entry and showing opposite each credit the tabular reserve required on the whole life or other plan of insurance specified in the contract, according to assumptions for mortality and interest recognized by the law of this State and adopted by the society, shall be filed by the society with each annual report and also be furnished to each member before July 1st of each year.

In lieu of the aforesaid statement there may be furnished to each member within the same time a statement giving the credit for such member and giving the tabular reserve and level rate required for a transfer carrying out the plan of insurance specified in the contract. No table or statement need be made or furnished where the reserves are maintained on the tabular basis. For this purpose individual bookkeeping accounts for each member shall not be required and all calculations may be made by actuarial methods.

Nothing herein contained shall prevent the maintenance of such surplus over and above the credits on the accumulation basis, and the reserves on the tabular basis pursuant to its laws; nor be construed as giving to the individual member any right or claim to any such reserve or credit other than in manner as expressed in the contract and its laws; nor as making any such reserve or credits a liability in determining the legal solvency of the society. [Id., § 23b.]

Art. 668n. Examination of domestic societies.—The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, or any person he may appoint, shall have the power of visitation and examination into the affairs of any domestic society. He may employ assistants for the purpose of such examination, and he, or any person he may appoint, shall have, free access to all the books, papers and documents that relate to the business of the society, and may summon and qualify as witnesses under oath and examine its officers, agents and employes or other person in relation to the affairs, transactions and conditions of the society.

The expense of such examination shall be paid by the society examined, upon statement furnished by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking and the examination shall be made at least once in three years. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 366, § 26, repealed; Act 1913, p. 232, ch. 113, § 24.]

See note under art. 665a.

Art. 668o. Examination of foreign societies.—The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, or any person whom he may appoint, may examine any foreign society transacting or applying for admission to transact business in this State. The said Commissioner of Insurance and Banking may employ assistants, and he, or any person he may appoint, shall have free access to all the books, papers and documents that relate to the business of the society, and may summon and qualify as witnesses under oath and examine its officers, agents and employes and other persons in relation to the affairs, transactions and conditions of the society. He may, in his discretion, accept in lieu of such examination of the Insurance Department of the State, territory, district, province or country where such society is organized. The actual expense of examiners making any such examination shall be paid by the society, upon statements furnished by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking. If any such society or its officers refuse to submit such examination or to comply with the provisions of the Section relative thereto, the authority of such society to write new business in this State shall be suspended, or license refused until satisfactory evidence is furnished the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking relating to the condition and affairs of the society, and during such suspension the society shall not write any new business in this State. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 367, § 28, repealed; Act 1913, p. 233, ch. 113, § 26.]

See note under art. 665a.

Art. 668p. Certain societies excluded; accident societies.—Nothing contained in this Act shall be construed to affect or apply to grand or subordinate lodges of Masons, Odd Fellows or Knights of Pythias (exclusive of the insurance department of the supreme lodge Knights of Pythias) and the Junior Order of the United American Mechanics (exclusive of the beneficiary degree or insurance branch of the National Council Junior Order United States American Mechanics) or societies which limit their membership to any one hazardous occupation nor to similar societies which do not issue insurance certificates nor to an association of local lodges of a society now doing business in this State which provides death benefits not exceeding five hundred dollars to any one person or disability benefits not exceeding three hundred dollars in any one year to pay one person or both, nor to any contracts of reinsurance business on such plan in this State nor to domestic societies which limit their membership to the employés of a particular city or town, designated firm, business house or corporation, nor to domestic lodges, orders or associations of a purely religious, charitable and benevolent description which do not provide for a death benefit of more than one hundred dollars or for disability benefits of more than one hundred and fifty dollars to any person in one year.

The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking may require from any society such information as will enable him to determine whether such society is exempt from the provisions of this Act.

Any fraternal benefit society heretofore organized and incorporated and operating within the definition set forth in Sections 1, 2 and 3 of this Act [arts. 665, 665a, 665b], providing for the benefits in case of death or disability resulting solely from accidents, but which does not obligate itself to pay death or sick benefits, may be licensed under the provisions of this Act and shall have all the privileges and shall be subject to all the provisions and regulations of this Act, except that the provisions of this Act requiring medical examinations, valuations of benefit certificates and that the certificates shall specify the amount of benefits, shall not apply to such society. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 368, § 30, repealed; Act 1913, p. 233, ch. 113, § 29.]

Art. 668q. Labor organizations excluded.—The provisions of this Act shall not apply to nor include the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Order of Railway Conductors, Order of Railway Telegraphers, Switchmen's Union of North America, and Railway Mail Association. [Act 1899, p. 200, § 16; Act 1903, p. 179; Act 1905, p. 206, ch. 106, § 1.]

Explanatory.—The above provision (art. 668q) was omitted from the revised Penal Code. The legislature, by Act 1909, p. 370, § 37, apparently attempted to repeal it, but designated it as "chapter 108." The later act (Act 1913, p. 236, § 33) in turn repeals the act of 1909, and thus repeals the repealing clause. Inasmuch as the exclusion of labor unions from the act is not obviously inconsistent with the new act, the act of 1905 is included in this compilation in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

Art. 669. Provisions not to apply to local mutual aid associations; annual statement by such associations, etc.—The provisions of this Act shall not apply to incorporated or unincorporated mutual relief or benefit or burial associations operating upon the assessment plan, whose business is confined to not more than one county in the State, or to a territory in two or more adjacent counties included within a radius of not more than twenty-five miles surrounding the city or town in which its principal office is to be located, which is designated in its charter, which are hereby denominated local mutual aid associations; providing that such associations are in no manner directly or indirectly connected, federated or associated with any such association, and do not directly or indirectly contribute to the expense or support of any other such association or to the officers, promoters or managers thereof. And, provided, that no person or officer shall receive from said association any payment on account of organization or other expenses or salaries not a bona fide resident of such county, in which such association is domiciled. The association above mentioned shall annually on or before March 1st, file a statement with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, which shall be signed and sworn to by the president, secretary and treasurer or the officers holding positions corresponding thereto. Such statement shall show whether the association has during the preceding year done any business outside of the county in which it is domiciled, and shall state whether or not said association is associated, federated or directly or indirectly connected with any other, and shall show what, if anything, has been contributed during the preceding year by said association, or the members to any person or officer or director thereof for salaries, commissions or promotion expenses and the name and residence of the party or parties receiving the same. Should any person in such affidavit herein provided for make any false statement he shall be deemed guilty of false swearing, and punished as provided by law. The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking may, at his option, and it shall be his duty, if not satisfied with said statement, to demand other and additional statements, and examine the books, papers and records of said association, either himself or by some other suitable person, authorized by him. Should it appear to the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking that any such local mutual aid association is not carrying on business as set forth in this Section, and is not entitled to the exemption therein set forth, such association shall be subject to and comply with all provisions of this Act as a fraternal beneficiary association. Every such local association claiming to be entitled to the benefit of the exemption created by this Section shall plainly state upon its certificates, applications and all advertising matter, in a conspicuous manner, that said association is a local mutual aid association, or same shall be deemed subject to all provisions of this Act. [Act 1909, p. 369, § 34, repealed; Act 1913, p. 234, ch. 113, § 31, superseding arts. 669, 672 revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 670. Penalties.—Any person, officer, member or examining physician of any society authorized to do business under this Act who shall knowingly or willfully make any false or fraudulent statement or representation in or with reference to any application for membership, or for the purpose of obtaining money from or benefit in any society transacting business under this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty days, nor more than one year, or both in the discretion of the court; any person who shall willfully make a false statement of any material fact or thing in a sworn statement as to the death or disability of a certificate holder in any such society for the purpose of procuring payment of a benefit named in the certificate of such holder, and any person who shall willfully make any false statement in any verified report or delaration [declaration] under oath required or authorized by this Act, shall be guilty of perjury, and shall be proceeded against and punished as provided by the statutes of this State in relation to the crime of perjury.

Any person who shall solicit membership for, or in any manner assist in procuring membership in any fraternal benefit society not licensed to do business in this State, or who shall solicit membership for, or in any manner assist in procuring membership in such society not authorized as herein provided to do business as herein defined in this State, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars.

Any person who solicits for or organizes lodges of such association as are described in the first section of this Act [Art. 665] without first obtaining from the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking a certificate of authority showing that the association has complied with the provisions of this Act, and is entitled to do business in this State, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than three nor more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; provided, the provisions of this Section shall not be so construed as to prohibit any member or members of a local or subordinate lodge from soliciting any person or persons to become a member of any local or subordinate lodge already in existence; and providing, further, the provisions of this Section shall not apply to any member or members of any local or subordinate lodge who participate in, supervise or directs or conducts the organization or establishment of any local or subordinate lodge within the limits of the county of his or their residence or lodge district. All certificates of authority for agents or solicitors shall be issued by the Commissioner upon application made therefor by any of the general officers of the association, or by any agent whom the properly authorized governing body of the association has, by resolution, filed with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, duly empowered to make such application, and all such certificates shall be revoked by the Commissioner upon the request of the association and may be revoked for cause upon like ground and in like manner as the as the certificates of authority of agents for life insurance companies under the laws of this State. All such certificates shall be renewed annually and shall expire on the first day of April of each year, and a fee of $1.00 shall be paid for the use of the State for the issuance of said such certificate.

Any society or any officer, agent or employé thereof neglecting or refusing to comply with or violating any of the provisions of this Act, the penalty for which neglect, refusal or violation is not specified in this Section, shall be fined not exceeding two hundred dollars upon conviction thereof. [Act 1899, p. 198, § 8; Act 1909, p. 369, § 33; Act 1913, p. 235, ch. 113, § 32, superseding arts. 670, 671 revised Pen. Code.]

plying with the provisions of this law; provided, that all such persons shall be bona fide citizens and residents of the state of Texas. [Act 1903, p. 174.]

Art. 674. Art. 693n. Unlawful to act as agent for association not authorized to do business in state.—It shall be unlawful for any person to act as agent for any building and loan association not authorized to do business in this State, [arts. 1313a–1313y, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] or to solicit, sell, or dispose of any shares of any such unauthorized association; and any person or persons acting for any such unauthorized association, or in any manner aiding in the transaction of the business of such association in this State, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars for each offense, and in default of payment of such fine shall be imprisoned in the county jail, for a period not to exceed one year. All fines collected under the provisions of this section shall be paid into the State Treasury. [Id., § 35.]

Article 694. [423] Offensive trades and nuisances.—If any person shall carry on any trade, business or occupation injurious to the health of those who reside in the vicinity, or shall suffer any substance which has that effect to remain on premises in his possession, he shall be punished by fine not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars; and each separate day of carrying on such business, trade or occupation, or of permitting such substance to remain on the premises, shall be considered a separate offense.

Abatement of nuisances.—Authority to abate nuisances does not include the power to declare that to be a nuisance which in its situation, nature or use is not such. Ex parte Robinson, 30 App. 493, 17 S. W. 1057; Pye v. Peterson, 45 Tex. 312, 23 Am. Rep. 608.

What constitutes public nuisance.—To constitute a public nuisance there must be a substantial injury to the public at large. The keeping of stallion in a town or elsewhere is not per se a nuisance. Ex parte Robinson, 30 App. 493, 17 S. W. 1057.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 327, 328.

Art. 695. [424] Pollution or obstruction of water courses.—If any person shall in any wise pollute or obstruct any water course, lake, pond, marsh or common sewer, or continue such obstruction or pollution, so as to render the same unwholesome or offensive to the inhabitants of the county, city, town or neighborhood thereabout, he shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act Feb. 11, 1869, p. 97.]

Explanatory.—This article is to some extent superseded by arts. 695a–695d, post, but as this article has a broader scope, especially as to "obstruction" of water, it is still an operative statute.

Construction of former provision.—This article originally provided a penalty for any person "who shall do any other act or thing that would be deemed and held to be a nuisance at common law," and the provision was held valid, Allen v. State, 34 Tex. 230; and applicable to bawdy-houses, State v. Flynn, 35 Tex. 354; but these cases were overruled before the provision was expunged. Johnson v. State, 4 App. 63.

Prosecution—Absence of intent.—Where defendant built dams across a bayou on his land for irrigation purposes, and after the water had risen and receded, a disagreeable smell arose, though no intent to produce same was shown, no criminal prosecution would lie. Stacey v. State, 54 Cr. App. 610, 114 S. W. 807, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1259.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 329.

Art. 695a. Unlawful to pollute water courses and other bodies of water; penalty; persons liable; provisos.—That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, private or municipal, to pollute any water course, or other public body of water, from which water is taken for the uses of farm, live stock, drinking and domestic purposes, in the State of Texas, by the discharge, directly or indirectly, of any sewage or unclean water or unclean or polluting matter or thing therein, or in such proximity thereto as that it will probably reach and pollute the waters of such water course or other public body of water from which water is taken, for the uses of farm live stock, drinking and domestic purposes; provided, however, that the provisions of this bill shall not affect any municipal corporation situated on tide water; that is to say, where the tide ebbs and flows in such water course. A violation of this provision shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars. When the offense shall have been committed by a firm, partnership or association, each member thereof who has knowledge of the commission of such offense, shall be held guilty. When committed by a private corporation, the officers and members of the board of directors, having knowledge of the commission of such offense, shall each be deemed guilty; and when by a municipal corporation, the mayor and each member of the board of aldermen or commission, having knowledge of the commission of such offense, as the case may be, shall be held guilty as representatives of the municipality; and each person so indicated as above shall be subject to the punishment provided hereinbefore; provided, however, that the payment of the fine by one of the persons so named shall be a satisfaction of the penalty as against his associates for the offenses for which he may have been convicted; provided, the provisions of this Act shall not apply to any place or premises located without the limits of an incorporated town or city, nor to manufacturing plants whose affluents contain no organic matter that will putrify, or any poisonous compounds, or any bacteria dangerous to public health or destructive of the fish life of streams or other public bodies of water. [Act 1913, ch. 47, § 1, amended; Act 1915, p. 38, ch. 23, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Act 1915, ch. 23 provides that ch. 47 of Acts of Regular Session of 33rd Legislature, page 90, be amended so as to read as shown by arts. 695a-695d.

Septic tank as nuisance.—A city incorporated under the general laws, with authority under its charter to provide a sewer system, must exercise its authority in a proper manner, and it may not create or maintain a nuisance, and in the construction of a septic tank for the purifying of sewage it must exercise care to build one of such character and dimensions as to prevent the escape therefrom of foul odors in such volume as to create a nuisance to any of its citizens. Cardwell v. Austin (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 385.

Injunction—Jurisdiction of District Court.—This article does not deprive the district court of jurisdiction to prevent and suppress nuisances by injunction, and at most the remedy by injunction conferred on county courts is only cumulative of the remedy resting in the district courts. Cardwell v. Austin (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 385.

Adequate remedy at law.—Where a method can be adopted by which sewage of a city may be purified and discharged practically free from odor, or where the odor will not interfere with the comfortable use and enjoyment by an individual of his home, and where the effluent will not so contaminate a stream as to render it unfit for drinking water for stock, the mere fact that the proximity of a septic tank to the residence of an individual will produce a degree of mental annoyance or tend to lessen the value of his property does not justify an injunction to restrain the establishment and operation of the tank, for the individual may be compensated in money for the damages sustained. Cardwell v. Austin (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 385.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In a suit against a city and the owner of a franchise to construct and maintain a septic tank in connection with the sewer system in the city, evidence held to support a finding that the construction and operation of a proposed septic tank would create a nuisance, but not to support a finding that the construction and operation of a tank of proper dimensions and character would create a nuisance. Cardwell v. Austin (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 385.

Art. 695b. Same; Restraining order on conviction.—Upon the conviction of any person under Section 1 of this Act [Art. 695a], it shall be the duty of the court, or judge of the court, in which such conviction is had, to issue a writ of injunction, enjoining and restraining the person or persons or corporation responsible for such pollution, from a further continuance of such pollution; and for a violation of such injunction, the said court and the judge thereof shall have the power of fine and imprisonment, as for contempt of court, within the limits prescribed by law in other cases; provided, that this remedy by injunction and punishment for violation thereof shall be cumulative of the penalty fixed by Section 1 of this Act; and the assessment of a fine for contempt shall be no bar to a prosecution under Section 1; neither shall a conviction and payment of fine under Section 1 be a bar to contempt proceedings under this section. [Act 1913, ch. 47, § 2, amended; Act 1915, p. 39, ch. 23, § 1.]

Art. 695c. Same; time for compliance with act by cities and persons.—Any city or town of this State, with a population of more than fifty thousand inhabitants, which has already an established sewerage system dependent upon any water course or other public body of water, from which water is taken for the uses of farm, live stock, drinking and domestic purposes, or which discharges into any water course or public body of water, from which water is taken for the uses of farm, live stock, drinking and domestic purposes, shall have until January 1, 1917, within which to make other provisions for such sewage. Cities and towns of less population than fifty thousand inhabitants shall have until January 1, 1917, within which to make other arrangements for the disposal of such sewage. Any person, firm or corporation, private or municipal, coming under or affected by the terms of this bill, or any independent contractor having the disposal of the sewage of any city or town, shall have until January 1, 1917, within which to make other arrangements for the disposal of such sewage, or other matter which may pollute the water, as defined in this bill. [Act 1913, ch. 47, § 3, amended; Act 1915, p. 39, ch. 23, § 1.]

Art. 695d. Duties of State Board of Health; inspector.—The Texas State Board of Health is authorized, and it is hereby made its duty, to enforce the provisions of this Act; and to this end the Governor shall appoint, by and with the consent of the Senate, an inspector to act under the direction of the said Board of Health and the State Health Officer making such investigations, inspections and reports, and performing such other duties in respect to the enforcement of this Act as the said Board of Health officer may require. [Act 1913, ch. 47, § 4, amended; Act 1915, p. 39, ch. 23, § 1.]

Art. 695e. Harboring or concealing leper.—Any person within this State who shall knowingly harbor or conceal any leper shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not less than fifty dollars and not more than five hundred dollars for every day of such concealment. [Act 1909, 1st S. S., p. 336, ch. 26, § 7.]

Explanatory.—The above provision (art. 695e) was omitted from the revised Pen. Code, and as it appears to be a subsisting law, in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626, it is inserted in this compilation.

Art. 696. Leaving dead body of animal in highway or near private residence.—If any person shall leave the carcass, or body of any horse, mule, ox, steer, cow or other animal which died in the actual possession of such person in any public road or highway, or in any street or alley of any village, town or city in this State, or within fifty yards of such public road, highway, street or alley, or shall leave any such carcass, or body within five hundred yards of any private residence, he shall be fined in any sum not less than five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act Apr. 7, 1874, p. 69; Act 1913, p. 155, ch. 83, § 1, amending Art. 696 revised Pen. Code.]

Explanatory.—The amendment is of "article 696, chapter 1 of title 12 of the Revised Criminal Statutes of the State of Texas, as adopted by the Thirty-Second Legislature."

Actual possession.—Where one owns a pasture the fence of which runs along a public road or highway, and he turns his horse in such pasture and it dies, and the carcass is permitted to lie within 50 yards of such public road or highway he is not guilty under this article since the animal is not shown to have been in the actual (manual) possession of accused. Ogg v. State, 48 App. 231, 87 S. W. 348.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 330.

Art. 697. Public buildings, railways, persons, etc., subject to rules of health officer.—If any person having control of any public building, or any agent, manager, operator, employé or receiver of any railway company, sleeping car company, or any individual, shall fail to comply with the provisions of this chapter, and the rules and regulations promulgated by the state health officer, under the provisions thereof, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1903, p. 180.]

[Fire protection, see Title 13, ch. 5.]

Article 697a. Sterilizing dishes, etc.; napkins.—Any person or persons conducting or managing or their agents of any hotel, cafe, restaurant and any other public place where meals are served, must after the taking effect of this Act, sterilize in hot boiling water, all plates, cups, saucers, knives, forks, spoons and such other utensils as may be used in serving meals and drinks, after being used and before permitting them to be used again; provided that the water in which said eating utensils are sterilized, shall be changed every two hours; provided further that no napkins shall be furnished for use after being used once until laundered. [Act 1915, p. 10, ch. 7, § 1.]

Art. 697b. Same; penalty.—Any person or person[s] conducting or managing or their agents of any public eating house mentioned in section 1 of this Act [Art. 697a], who violates the provisions thereof, shall be fined not less than five ($5.00) dollars nor more than one hundred ($100.00) dollars for each separate offense. [Id., § 2.]

- 714. Penalty for offering same for sale not so marked or branded.
- 715. Penalty for violating any of the three preceding articles.
- 716. Manufactured wheat or corn products, packages how marked or branded.

Article 698. [426] Superseded by Art. 700 (c) (6), post.

Historical.—(This chapter is a substitution for chapter two of title XII, of the Penal Code of 1895, held in some respects inoperative. See Dorsey v. State, 38 App. 527, 44 S. W. 514, 40 L. R. A. 201, 70 Am. St. Rep. 762.)

Elements of offense.—To constitute the offense of selling diseased meat, the seller must have known at the time he sold it that the meat was diseased; and to warrant a conviction, the evidence must affirmatively establish such knowledge. See the statement of the case for evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for selling diseased meat. Teague v. State, 25 App. 577, 8 S. W. 667.

Offering for sale adulterated food.—See the statement of the case for an information held sufficient to charge the offense of offering adulterated food for sale. To support a conviction for offering adulterated food for sale it devolves upon the state to prove not only that the accused offered such food for sale, but that, when he did so, he knew that the said food was adulterated. See the statement of the case for evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for offering adulterated food for sale. Sanchez v. State, 27 App. 14, 10 S. W. 756.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 334.

Art. 699. Manufacture and sale of adulterated and misbranded foods.—That no person, firm or corporation, shall within this State manufacture for sale, have in his possession with the intent to sell, offer or expose for sale, or sell or exchange any article of food, or drug which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act. The term "food" as used herein shall include all articles used for food, drink, flavoring, confectionery or condiment, by man, whether simple, mixed or compounded. That the term "drug" as used in this Act shall include all medicines and preparations for internal or external use recognized in the United States Pharmacopoeia or National Formulary, and any substance or mixture of substances intended to be used for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease of either man or animal. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 167, repealed; Act 1911, p. 76, ch. 47, § 1, superseding Art. 699, revised Pen. Code.]

Explanatory.—Act 1911, ch. 47, § 26 repeals ch. 94, Acts 31st Leg. and all other laws in conflict.

Constitutionality of act.—The pure food law is not unconstitutional as to one charged with violating the act because the title does not specifically refer to and describe the offense, which is done in the body of the act. Focke v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 267.

The pure food law is not unconstitutional as to one charged with selling fruit not protected from flies, dust, and dirt, because the offense charged is not contained or disclosed in the caption, but in the body of the act. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 311.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 335-338.

Art. 700. Drugs, confectionery, and foods, when deemed adulterated.—That for the purposes of this Act an Article shall be deemed to be adulterated: (a) In the case of drugs; (1) if, when sold under or by a name, recognized in the eighth decennial revision of the United States Pharmacopoeia or in such United States Pharmacopoeia as was official at the time of labeling it, or in the National Formulary, it differs from the standard strength, quality or purity laid down therein; (2) if, when sold under or by a name not recognized in the eight decennial revision of the United States Pharmacopoeia, but which is found in some other Pharmacopoeia or other standard work on materia medica, it differs materially from the standard of strength, quality or purity laid down in such work; (3) if its strength, quality or purity falls below the professed standard under which it is sold. (b) In the case of confectionery: If it contain terra alba, barytes, talc, chrome yellow, or other mineral substance or poisonous color or flavor, or other ingredients deleterious or detrimental to health or any vinous, malt or spirituous liquor or compound, or narcotic drug. (c) In the case of food; (1) if any substance has been mixed and packed with it so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength; (2) if any substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article; (3) if any valuable constituent of the article has been wholly or in part abstracted, or if the product be below that standard of quality, quantity, strength or purity represented to the purchaser or consumer; (4) if it be mixed, colored or powdered, coated or stained in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed; (5) if it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health, provided, that when in the preparation of food products for shipment they are preserved by any external application applied in such manner that the preservative is necessarily removed mechanically, or by maceration in water or otherwise, and directions for the removal of said preservative shall be printed on the covering of the package, the provisions of this Act shall be construed as applying only when said products are ready for consumption; (6) if it consists in whole or in part of a filthy, decomposed or putrid animal or vegetable substance, or any portion of an animal or vegetable unfit for food, whether manufactured or not, or if it is the product of a diseased animal, or one that has died otherwise than by slaughter. For the purpose of this Act, the term "filthy" shall be deemed to apply to food not securely protected from flies, dust, dirt, and as far as may be necessary by all reasonable means from all foreign or injurious contaminations. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 167, repealed; Act 1911, p. 77, ch. 47, § 2, superseding art. 700, revised Pen. Code.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 337, 338.

Art. 701. "Misbranded" defined.—That the term "misbranded," as used herein, shall apply to all drugs or articles of food or articles which enter into the composition of food, the package or label of which shall bear any statement, design or device regarding such article or the ingredients or substances contained therein which shall be false or misleading in any particular. That for the purposes of this Act an article shall also be deemed to be misbranded: (a) In the case of drugs; (1) if it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the name of another article; (2) if the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed in whole or in part and other contents shall have been placed in such package, or if the package fail to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion of any morphine, phenacetine, opium, cocaine, heroin alpha, or beta eucaine, chloroform, cannabis indica, chloral hydrate, or acetanilid or any derivative or preparation of any such substances contained therein. (b) In the case of food: (1) if it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the distinctive name of another article; (2) if it be labeled or branded so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser or purport to be a foreign product when not so, or if the contents of the package as originally put up shall have been removed in whole or in part and other contents shall have been placed in such package, or if it fail to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion of any morphine, opium, cocaine, heroin alpha, or beta eucaine, phenacetin chloroform, cannabis indica, chloral hydrate or acetanilid, or any derivative or preparation of any of such substances contained therein; (3) if in package form and the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, they are not plainly and correctly stated on the outside of the package; (4) if the package containing it or its labels bear any statement, design or device regarding the ingredients or the substances contained therein, which statement, design or device shall be false or misleading in any particular, provided that that an article of food which does not contain any added poisonous or deleterious ingredient shall not be deemed to be adulterated or misbranded in the following cases: First in case of mixtures or compounds which may be now or from time to time hereafter known as articles of food, under their own distinctive names, and not an imitation of or offered for sale under the distinctive name of another article, if the name be accompanied on the same label or brand with a statement of the place where said article has been manufactured or produced; second, in the case of articles labeled, branded or tagged so as to plainly indicate that they are compounds, imitations or blends; that the term "blend," as used herein, shall be construed to mean a mixture of like substances, not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring ingredients used for the purpose or coloring and flavoring only; and provided, further, that nothing in this Act shall be construed as requiring or compelling proprietors or manufacturers of proprietary foods which contain no unwholesome added ingredients to disclose their trade formulas except in so far as the provisions of this Act may require to secure freedom from adulteration or misbranding. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 167, repealed; Act 1911, p. 78, ch. 47, § 3, superseding art. 701, revised Pen. Code.]

Arts. 702, 703.—[Repealed by Act 1911, ch. 47, § 26.]

Art. 704. Manufacture and sale of certain foods, discolored and adulterated.—It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture, sell, offer or expose for sale or exchange any article of food to which has been added formaldehyde, boric acid or borates, benzoic acid or benzoate sulphurous acids or sulphites, salacyclic acid or salacylates, abralstal, beta naphthal, fluorine compounds, dulcin, glucin cocaine, sulphuric acid or other mineral acid except phosphoric acid, any preparation of lead or copper or other ingredient injurious to health; provided, that nothing in this Act shall be construed as prohibiting the sale of catsups, sauces, concentrated fruits, fruit juices, and like substances preserved with one-tenth of one per cent of benzoate of soda, or the equivalent benzoic acid, when a statement of such fact is plainly indicated upon the label; provided, further, that the oxides of sulphur may be used for bleaching, clarifying and refining food products. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 169, repealed; Act 1911, p. 79, ch. 47, § 4, superseding art. 704, revised Pen. Code.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 335, 336.

Art. 705. Baking powder to be labeled, how.—Whoever manufactures for sale within this State, or offers or exposes for sale or exchange or sells any baking powder or compound intended for use as a baking powder under any name or title whatsoever shall securely affix or cause to be securely affixed to the outside of every box, can or package containing such baking powder or like mixture or compound a label distinctly printed in plain capital letters in the English language, containing the name and residence of the manufacturer or dealer, and the ingredients of the baking powder. Baking powder containing less than 10 per cent of available carbon dioxide shall be deemed to be adulterated. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 169, repealed; Act 1911, p. 79, ch. 47, § 5, superseding art. 705, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 706. Sale of impure milk.—That it shall be unlawful for any person either by himself or agent to sell or expose for sale or exchange any unwholesome, watered, adulterated or impure milk or swill milk or colostrum, or milk from cows kept upon garbage, swill or any other substance in a state of putrefaction or other deleterious substances, or from cows kept in connection with any family in which there are infectious diseases, or from sick or diseased cows; provided, "skim milk" may be sold if on the can, or package from which such milk is sold, the words "skim milk" are distinctly painted in letters not less than one inch in length. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 169, repealed; Act 1911, p. 79, ch. 47, § 6, superseding art. 706, revised Pen. Code.]

Construction with reference to city ordinance.—This article is enforceable, and there is no conflict in the penalties prescribed by the state law; besides the act of the legislature cannot be held invalid because the city ordinance may be out of harmony with it; and, when a conflict arises between the act of the legislature and the city ordinance, the latter must give way and be held invalid. Mantel v. State, 55 App. 456, 117 S. W. 855, 131 Am. St. Rep. 818.

Art. 707. [Repealed by Act 1911, ch. 47, § 26.]

Art. 708. Exemptions from provisions of act.—That no dealer shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this Act, when he can establish a guaranty signed by the wholesaler, jobber, manufacturer, or other party residing within this State or in the United States from whom he purchases such article, to the effect that the same is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, designating it. Said guaranty, to afford protection, shall contain the name and address of the party making the sale of such articles to such dealer, and in such case said party or parties shall be amenable to the prosecutions, fines and other penalties, which would attach, in due course to the dealer under the provisions of this Act. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 169, repealed; Act 1911, p. 79, ch. 47, § 7, superseding art. 708, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 709. Unlawful for officers to issue certificates of purity.—It shall be unlawful for the Dairy and Food Commissioner or his deputy or assistants while they hold office to furnish to any individual, firm or corporation any certificate as to the purity or excellence of any article manufactured or sold to or by them to be used as food or drug or in the preparation of foods or drugs. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 171, repealed; Act 1911, p. 81, ch. 47, § 17, superseding art. 709, revised Pen. Code.]

Dairy and Food Commissioners.—Provisions as to appointment, removal, powers and duties of Dairy and Food Commissioner are placed in the civil statutes. See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 4575-4585d.

Art. 710. Obstruction of officers.—Any person who shall wilfully hinder or obstruct the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his inspector, or other persons by him duly authorized in the exercise of the powers conferred upon him by this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25.00 nor more than $200.00. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 172, repealed; Act 1911, p. 81, ch. 47, § 19, superseding art. 710, revised Pen. Code.]

Dairy and Food Commissioners.—See notes under art. 709.

Art. 711. Penalty for violations of act.—Whoever shall do any of the acts or things prohibited, or willfully neglect or refuse to do any of the Acts or the things enjoined by this Act, or in any way violate any of its provisions, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25.00 nor more than $200.00. [Act 1907, ch. 39; Act 1909, p. 169, repealed; Act 1911, p. 79, ch. 47, § 8, superseding art. 711, revised Pen. Code.]

MILL PRODUCTS

Art. 712. Standard weights, etc.—Mill products, hereinafter mentioned, shall have the following standard weights, viz: Flour, one hundred and ninety-six pounds per barrel, or forty-eight pounds per sack; corn meal, bolted or unbolted, thirty-five pounds per sack, and feed made from cereals of any kind, whether pure, mixed or adulterated, one hundred pounds per sack. Fractional barrels and sacks shall weigh in the same proportion; and these weights shall be net and exclusive of the barrel or sack in which such product is packed. [Act 1905, p. 227, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Attention is called to art. 730, post. The subject matter of art. 730 was first enacted in 1905 (Acts 1905, p. 207, § 1). The latter act took effect at the same time as Act 1905, p. 227, constituting art. 712. It should be noticed that Acts 1905, p. 207, § 1 contains the same language as is embraced in art. 712, except that it includes "cotton seed meal." Acts 1905, p. 207, § 1 was amended in 1907 (Acts 1907, p. 243), and "cotton seed meal" was dropped out and "rice bran" and "rice polish" added. This would seem to present a question as to whether the amendatory act of 1907 superseded Acts 1905, p. 227, § 1 (art. 712, above).

Art. 713. Correct name and true net weight to be marked or branded on hogshead, sack, package, etc.—The correct name and the true net weight of the contents of each and every hogshead, barrel, box, cask, bale, sack or package of any of the foregoing products, whether sold in single packages or lots, shall be plainly marked, branded or stenciled in large, legible letters and figures, not less than two inches in size, upon the exterior of such hogshead, barrel, box, cask, bale, sack or package, in a conspicuous place, as the head in case of hogsheads or barrels, and the front or branded side in case of sacks, bales or packages; and it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or the agent, employé or representative of any person, firm or corporation, to sell or exchange, or offer for sale or exchange, any of such products so packed or contained, until the provisions hereof have been complied with. [Id., p. 227, § 2.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 457.

Art. 714. Penalty for offering same for sale not so marked or branded.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, or the agent, employé or representative of any person, firm or corporation, to sell or exchange, or offer for sale or exchange, whether in single packages or lots, any product composed of mixed cereals of any kind, or any cereal adulterated in any manner, unless the word "adulterated" is plainly marked, printed or stenciled diagonally across the other marks or brands, if any, on the hogshead, barrel, box, bale, cask, sack or package containing the same, or in case there are no other marks thereon, then across such hogshead, barrel, box, cask, bale, sack or package, in a conspicuous place in large legible letters and figures not less than two inches in size. [Id., p. 227, § 3.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 458.

Art. 715. Penalty for violating any provision of this law.—If any person shall knowingly violate the provisions of this law, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and each transaction shall be deemed a separate offense. [Id., p. 227, § 4.]

Art. 716. Manufactured wheat or corn products, packages how marked or branded.—Any person, firm, corporation or agent, employé or representative of any person, firm, corporation, manufacturer or dealer in said manufactured wheat or corn products in original packages, and offering the same for sale in this state, whether said packages are sold singly or in lots, and all manufacturers or dealers of flour, meal or feed from the above enumerated grain products in this state, when offering the same for sale in original packages, whether sold in single packages or lots, shall place in large, legible letters and figures, not less than two inches in size, on the package or packages so offered for sale, the name of the contents and the actual net weight of the contents of said package or packages; and it shall be unlawful for any such person to sell, or offer to sell, any of the articles mentioned in this act which have been falsely labeled, knowing the same to be falsely labeled. All adulterated wheat or corn products shall have stamped upon the sacks or barrels, "adulterated." [Act 1899, p. 304.]

Indictment and Information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 339-341.

An information or indictment based upon this article to be sufficient, must allege the article with which the flour was adulterated. Dorsey v. State, 38 App. 527, 44 S. W. 514, 40 L. R. A. 201, 70 Am. St. Rep. 762.

Every such tree, shrub or plant shall be a public nuisance, and as such, it shall be the duty of the commissioner of agriculture or his representatives to abate it; and no damage shall be awarded for entering upon the premises upon which there are trees, shrubs or plants infested with yellows, black knot, crown gall or other infectious or dangerous disease, or infested with San Jose scale or other dangerous insect pest, for the purpose of legally inspecting the same; nor shall any damages be awarded for the treatment by the commissioner of agriculture, or his duly authorized agents or representatives, of such trees, shrubs or plants, or for altogether destroying such trees, if necessary to suppress such insect, pest or disease, if done in accordance with the provisions of this article. If, however, in the judgment of said commissioner, or person representing him, any tree, shrub or plant infected with any disease, or infested with dangerously injurious insects, can be treated with sufficient remedies, he may direct such treatment to be carried out by the owner under the direction of the commissioner, agent, employé or representatives. In case of objections to the findings of the chief inspector, employés or representatives of the commissioner, an appeal may be made to the commissioner, whose decision shall be final. An appeal must be taken within five days from service of said notice, and shall act as a stay of proceedings until it is heard and decided. When the commissioner, or chief inspector, or employé, or representative, appointed by him, shall determine that any tree or trees, shrubs or other plants must be treated or destroyed forthwith, he may employ all necessary assistance for that purpose; and such representative or representatives, agent or agents, employé or employés may enter upon any or all premises necessary for the purpose of such treatment, removal or destruction. But such commissioner or the person representing him shall, before such treatment or destruction, first require the owner or person in charge of the trees, shrubs or plants, to treat or destroy same, as the case may be; and, upon the refusal or neglect upon the part of said owner or person in charge to so treat or destroy such trees, plants or shrubs, then such commissioner, chief inspector, or person or persons representing him shall treat or destroy such trees, shrubs or plants; and all charges and expenses thereof shall be paid by such owner or person in charge of said trees, shrubs or plants, and shall constitute a legal claim against such owner or person in charge, which may be recovered in any court having jurisdiction upon the suit of such commissioner or chief inspector, or the county attorney of the county where the premises are situated, together with all costs, including an attorney fee of ten dollars, to be taxed as other costs. If, after such examination, it is found that the said trees, shrubs or other plants so examined are apparently free in all respects from any contagious or infectious disease or diseases, dangerously injurious insect pest or pests, the said commissioners shall issue to the owner or proprietor of the stock so examined a certificate, setting forth the fact that the stock so examined was at the time of such examination apparently free from any and all such disease or diseases, insect pest or pests. No such certificate shall be negotiable or transferable, and shall be void if sold or transferred. Any such act or sale or transference shall be punishable as provided by this article. Should any individual, partnership or corporation, nursery agent, or dealer or broker, send out or deliver, within the state, trees, vines, shrubs, plants, buds or cuttings, commonly known as nursery stock, and which are subject to the attacks of insects and diseases above provided for, unless he has in his possession a copy of said certificate, dated within a year thereof, deface or destroy such certificate, or wrongfully be in possession of such certificate, or fail to attach proper tags on each and every shipment, such tags bearing a copy of the said certificate, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. This certificate must show that the stock to be shipped has been examined by the proper officer of inspection in that state or province, and that the stock is apparently free from all dangerous insect pests or contagious diseases; and that when fumigation is required by the commissioner of agriculture, that the stock has been properly fumigated. Immediately upon receipt of the filing with the commissioner of agriculture of this certificate, he shall, in addition, make further investigation as to the moral standing and integrity of the applicant as will satisfy him that the applicant is entitled to receive a certificate. A fee of five dollars shall be required from the applicant, upon receipt of which, the commissioner of agriculture may issue a certificate permitting the applicant to ship into the state. Each box, bale or package of nursery stock from outside the state shall bear a tag, on which is printed a copy of the certificate of this state, and also a copy of the certificate of the state in which it originates. Fractional barrels and sacks shall weigh in the same proportion, and those weights shall be net and exclusive of the barrel or sack in which said product is packed. And any person, firm or association of persons, engaged in the manufacture of mill products of any character whatsoever, who shall use any bag, box, barrel or any other receptacle, into which to put such product other than the one bearing the name of such mill manufacturing the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction therefor, shall be fined in any sum from one hundred dollars to one thousand dollars, or, in addition thereto, be confined in the county jail for a term of thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment. This shall not be construed to apply to farmers who grind their own feed stuff, and who do not adulterate same. [Act 1905, p. 208, § 4, amended; Act 1907, p. 244.]

Art. 734. To pay inspection tax and affix tag.—The manufacturer, importer, agent or seller of each concentrated commercial feeding stuff, as defined in article 731, shall, before the article is offered for sale, pay to the director of the Texas agricultural experiment station an inspection tax of ten cents per ton for each ton of such concentrated feeding stuff sold or offered for sale in the state of Texas, for use within this state, and shall affix to each lot shipped in bulk, and to each bag, barrel or other package of such concentrated feeding stuffs a tag to be furnished by said director, stating that all charges specified in said section have been paid. Art. 737. Shall furnish list of names or trade marks.—All manufacturers and importers of concentrated commercial feeding stuffs, or dealers in same, shall, when requested, furnish the director of the Texas experiment station with a complete list of names or trade marks of such feeding stuffs. Art. 738. Analysis of to be made and published annually.—The director of the Texas agricultural experiment station shall cause one analysis or more to be made annually of each concentrated commercial feeding stuff sold, or offered for sale, under the provisions of this act. Said director is hereby authorized in person, or by deputy, to take a sample not exceeding two pounds in weight for analysis from any lot or package of concentrated commercial feeding stuff which may be in the possession of any manufacturer, importer, agent, dealer or buyer in this state; but said sample shall be drawn or taken in the presence of said party or parties in interest or their representatives, and shall be taken from a parcel, lot or number of parcels, which shall not be less than five per cent of the whole lot inspected, and shall be thoroughly mixed and divided into two samples and placed in glass or metal vessels, carefully sealed, and a label placed on each, stating the name or brand of the feeding stuff or material sampled, the name of the party from whose stock the sample is drawn and the date and place of taking such sample; and said label shall be signed by the director or his deputy and the party or parties at interest, or their representative present at the taking and sealing of said sample; provided, that where the party or parties at interest refuse to be present and take part in the sampling of the said feed stuffs, the director or his deputy may take said samples in the presence of two disinterested witnesses; one of said duplicate samples shall be retained by the director, and the other shall be left with the party whose stock was sampled; and the sample or samples retained by the director shall be for comparison with the certified statements made in articles 730 and 733. The result of the analysis of the sample or samples so prescribed, together with such additional information as circumstances advise, shall be published in reports or bulletins by the Texas agricultural and mechanical college from time to time. [Id., p. 207.]

Art. 739. "Importer" defined.—The term, "importer," for all the purposes of this law, shall be taken to mean all such persons as shall bring into or offer for sale, within this state, concentrated commercial feeding stuffs manufactured without this state. [Id., p. 207.]

Art. 740. Manufacturing or selling adulterated feeding stuffs, penalty for.—Any person manufacturing, selling, or offering for sale, any adulterated feeding stuff within this state, shall, upon conviction therefor, be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars and not more than two hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail for a term of not less than thirty days and not more than sixty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. For the purpose of this act, a feeding stuff shall be deemed to be adulterated if it contains any sawdust, dirt, damaged feed, or any foreign matter whatever, or if it is in any respect not what it is represented to be; or if any rice hulls or chaff, peanut shells, corncobs, oat hulls, or other similar substances of little or no feeding value are admixed therewith; provided, that no wholesome mixture of feeding stuffs shall be deemed to be adulterated if the true percentage of constituents thereof is plainly and clearly stated on the package, and made known to the purchaser at the time of the sale. It shall be the duty of the director of the experiment station to examine, or have examined, for adulteration, all suspicious samples of feeding stuffs, and such other samples as may be desirable. [Act 1905, p. 210, § 11; Act 1907, p. 245.]

CHAPTER FIVE

COCAINE AND MORPHINE

Art.

747. Unlawful to sell or give away except on prescription, with certain provisos.

Art.

748. Unlawful for any practitioner of medicine, dentistry or veterinary to prescribe to habitual users.

749. Penalty for violating this law.

Article 747. Unlawful to sell or give away except on prescription, with certain provisos.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell, furnish or give away cocaine, salts of cocaine or preparations containing cocaine, or salts of cocaine, or any morphine, or salts of morphine, or preparations containing morphine or salts of morphine, or any opium or preparations containing opium, or any chloral hydrate or preparations containing chloral hydrate, except upon the original written order or prescription of a lawfully authorized practitioner of medicine, dentistry or veterinary medicine, which order or prescription shall be dated and shall contain the name of the person for whom prescribed, or, if ordered by a practitioner of veterinary medicine, shall state the kind of animal for which ordered and shall be signed by the person giving the prescription or order. Such written order or prescription shall be permanently retained on file by the person, firm or corporation who shall compound or dispense the article ordered or prescribed; and it shall not be recomounded or dispensed a second time, except upon the written order of the original prescriber for each and every subsequent compounding or dispensing. No copy or duplicate of such written order or prescription shall be made or delivered to any person; but the original shall at all times be open to inspection by properly authorized officers of the law. Provided, however, that the above provisions shall not apply to preparations containing not more than two grains of opium, or not more than one-eighth grain of morphine, nor not more than two grains of chloral hydrate, or not more than one-sixteenth grain of cocaine, in one fluid ounce, or, if solid preparation, in one avoirdupois ounce; provided, also, that the above provisions shall not apply to preparations recommended in good faith for diarrhoea or cholera, each bottle or package of which is accompanied by specific directions for use, and the caution against habitual use; nor to linaments or ointments when plainly labeled, "for external use only." And provided, further, that the above provisions shall not apply to sales at wholesale jobbers, wholesalers and manufacturers to retail druggists, nor to sales at retail by retail druggists to regular practitioners of medicine, dentistry or veterinary medicine, nor to sales made to manufacturers of proprietary or pharmaceutical preparations for use in the manufacture of such preparations, nor the sales to hospitals, colleges, scientific or public institutions; nor to the sale of patent or proprietary medicines sold by druggists or others, containing any of the foregoing substances, the sale of which is prohibited by this law; provided, such preparations be not compounded or sold for the purpose of the evasion of this law. [Act 1903, ch. 115; Act 1905, p. 45.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 342, 349.

An indictment for unlawfully selling, furnishing, and giving cocaine and morphine to one not having a written prescription of a physician was sufficient, without negating the exceptions as to sales in good faith for cholera, etc. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 861.

Art. 748. Unlawful for any practitioner of medicine, dentistry or veterinary to prescribe to habitual users.—It shall be unlawful for any practitioner of medicine, dentistry or veterinary medicine to furnish to, or prescribe for the use of, any habitual user of the same, any cocaine or morphine, or any salts or compound of cocaine or morphine, or any preparation containing cocaine or morphine or their salts, or any opium or chloral hydrate, or any preparation containing opium or chloral hydrate; and it shall also be unlawful for any practitioner of dentistry to prescribe any of the foregoing substances for the use of any person not under his treatment in the regular practice of his profession, or for any practitioner of veterinary medicine to prescribe any of the foregoing substances for the use of any human being; provided, however, that the provisions of this section shall not be construed to prevent any lawfully authorized practitioner of medicine from prescribing in good faith for the use of any habitual user of narcotic drugs such substances as he may deem necessary for the treatment of such habit. [Act 1903, ch. 115; Act 1905, p. 46.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 349-351.

An indictment which fails to allege that the prescription was not given for the treatment of the habit is insufficient. Blair v. State (Cr. App.) 97 S. W. 89; Blair v. State, 50 App. 225, 96 S. W. 23.

Art. 749. Penalty for violating this law.—Any person who shall knowingly violate any of the provisions of this law shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction for the first offense, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than fifty dollars, and, upon conviction for a second offense, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and, upon a conviction for a third and all subsequent offenses, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and shall be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than six months. It shall be the duty of the grand jury to make presentments for violations of this law. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 349.

CHAPTER SIX

UNLAWFUL PRACTICE OF MEDICINE

Art.	Art.
750. Authority to practice registered in district clerk's office; change of residence recorded, where.	756. Practicing in violation of law, penalty.
751. District clerk to keep medical register.	757. Not applicable to what cases.
752. Practitioners of medicine to receive verification license.	758. Physicians, etc., to report births and deaths.
753. Applicants other than those under previous article.	758a. Soliciting or drumming patients or patronage.
754. Not to discriminate against any particular school.	758b. Same; receiving compensation for soliciting patronage for physicians.
755. Shall be regarded as practicing medicine, when.	758c. Same; penalty.
	758d. Same; newspaper advertising excepted.
	758e. Incriminating testimony.

Article 750. Authority to practice registered in district clerk's office; change of residence recorded, where.—It shall be unlawful for any one to practice medicine, in any of its branches, upon human beings within the limits of this state who has not registered in the district clerk's office of the county in which he resides, his authority for so practicing, as herein prescribed, together with his age, postoffice address, place of birth, school of practice to which he professes to belong, subscribed and verified by oath; which, if wilfully false, shall subject the applicant to conviction and punishment for false swearing as provided by law. The fact of such oath and record shall be indorsed by the district clerk upon the certificate. The holder of the certificate must have the same recorded upon each change of residence to another county, and the absence of such record shall be prima facie evidence of the want of possession of such certificate. [Act 1907, p. 225.]

1. Historical.—The Act of May 16, 1873, the original act upon this subject, was repealed by the act of August 21, 1876, which latter act is the one from which these articles were framed in revising. Ellison v. State, 6 App. 248.

2. Validity of act.—The act is valid, since no one has an inalienable right to practice medicine or treat diseases for pay. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 523; Herrington v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 721.

Const. art. 16, § 31, provides that the legislature may pass laws prescribing the qualifications of practitioners of medicine and punish persons for malpractice, but that no preference shall ever be given by law to any school of medicine. Held, that the word "medicine," as used in the constitution, embraced the art of healing, by whatever scientific or supposedly scientific method; the art of preventing, curing, or alleviating diseases, and remedying as far as possible results of violence and accident, some thing or method supposed to possess curative power, and hence authorized the passage of this act, requiring physicians and surgeons, including osteopaths, to obtain a license before engaging in the public practice of their profession. Ex parte Collins, 57 App. 2, 121 S. W. 501, affirmed by Supreme Court of the United States, 1d., 32 S. Ct. 286, 223 U. S. 288, 56 L. Ed. 439.

This act is not unconstitutional in discriminating against the practice of the masseur treatment, in failing to provide any board or authority to whom one can apply for license to practice such treatment, for a license to practice that treatment can be obtained from the state medical board, and the condition that an applicant have certain medical knowledge is not a discrimination against the practice of the masseur treatment, but a valid exercise of police power. Germany v. State, 62 App. 276, 137 S. W. 130, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 477.

This act regulating the right to practice medicine, and defining who shall be regarded as medical practitioners, was a reasonable exercise of the state's police power. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

The act is not invalid for indefiniteness because not specifically requiring a certificate to be registered in the office of the clerk of the district court. Byrd v. State, 72 App. 242, 162 S. W. 360.

3. Act of 1873.—See a discussion of the original act of May 16, 1873. State v. Goldman, 44 Tex. 104. These articles are not only expressly sanctioned by the constitution, but such legislation is competent under the general police power of the state. Logan v. State, 5 App. 306.

All medical practitioners, except those practicing regularly for five years prior to January 1, 1875, and those who qualified under the act of 1873, must have a certificate of qualification, and before engaging in practice must have it recorded; and one who had qualified under the act of 1873, but since removed to another county, must likewise have his certificate recorded. Hilliard v. State, 7 App. 69.

4. Time of taking effect of act.—Where, in a prosecution for practicing medicine without a license, accused testified that he never procured a license to practice medicine, and had not filed for registration a license to practice medicine in any county, it was no defense that the alleged offense was committed before he was required to register and file a certificate to practice medicine, if he desired so to do, under this act as a legal practitioner of medicine within the state under prior laws then in force, which required a physician to file a diploma or license, and have the same recorded in the office of the clerk of the district court of the district in which he practiced. Dankworth v. State, 61 App. 157, 136 S. W. 788.

5. Construction of act.—This act does not seek to regulate how any one shall treat diseases, but merely provides that, before any one shall treat, or offer to treat, diseases, he shall show his competency and obtain from the State Board of Medical Examiners authority to practice. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 523.

6. Compliance with article.—Where a man presents a certificate from the examining board of another State to such board in this State, and it is indorsed by the latter and given to the clerk to be recorded, but the latter failed to properly record it, he complied with the law as far as he was concerned, and was not guilty of practicing medicine without a license. Price v. State, 40 App. 429, 50 S. W. 700.

If defendant when he practiced as charged labored under the mistake that his certificate had been filed for record in the county of the prosecution, and if said mistake did not arise from want of proper care on his part, he was entitled to acquittal. Pettit v. State, 28 App. 240, 14 S. W. 127.

A physician is liable to punishment if he practices medicine without having his certificate filed and recorded in the district clerk's office. Wicks-Nease v. Watts, 30 Civ. App. 515, 70 S. W. 1001.

Although one may have a diploma "issued by a bona fide medical college of respectable standing" still he must receive a certificate to practice medicine from one of the duly constituted boards of medical examiners of the state of Texas, which shall be recorded before he would be authorized to practice. It is not necessary for him to be examined if he has complied with other provisions of the statute, but he must have the certificate. That a board refuses to examine him, or issue a certificate to him, is no defense. Stone v. State, 48 App. 114, 86 S. W. 1031.

7. Persons liable.—See notes under article 755.

8. Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 343.

The indictment (under act of 1873) must allege that accused practiced medicine without a diploma, or without a certificate of qualification, or without having practiced for five consecutive years, and that accused resided or sojourned in the county of the prosecution. State v. Goldman, 44 Tex. 104.

Under act of 1876 an indictment need not allege the particular branch or department of medicine in which the defendant practiced. Antle v. State, 6 App. 202.

An indictment under this act need not allege the particular branch or department of medicine in which the defendant practiced. Antle v. State, 6 App. 202.

An information that does not allege that the defendant resided in the county where he is prosecuted and had not filed his certificate or diploma there or which does not allege where he resided or that in the county of his residence he had not filed his certificate or diploma, states no offense. Person v. State, 53 App. 334, 109 S. W. 935.

Under this act an indictment which charges that accused did unlawfully engage in the practice of medicine in C. county without having first filed for record with the clerk of the district court of said county his authority for practicing medicine, is insufficient for failure to allege either that accused resided in C. county or that he did not register his authority to practice in the office of the district clerk of the county in which he resided. Lockhart v. State, 58 App. 80, 124 S. W. 923.

Under this article and art. 755 an indictment charging the defendant with unlawfully practicing medicine, without having properly registered his authority for so doing, and treating and offering to treat physical disease and disorder, and making a charge therefor, is sufficient. Young v. State, 61 App. 440, 134 S. W. 736.

Where an information for illegally practicing medicine stated that accused did practice medicine without having been licensed to do so, etc., it was not defective for failure to allege the particular school of medicine to which defendant was claimed to belong. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

Under this article an information charging that accused did practice medicine, etc., was not objectionable for failure to allege that he professed to be a physician or surgeon; the act not being limited to persons so professing, but including any person treating or offering to treat any disease, etc. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

An information, alleging that accused unlawfully engaged in the practice of medicine, for pay, as a regular practitioner, without a certificate from the Board of Medical Examiners, and without a diploma from any accredited medical college, charges a violation of arts. 751-756, providing for the granting of licenses to practice medicine, and punishing any person practicing medicine in violation of law, and does not charge the offense denounced by this article prohibiting any one from practicing medicine who has not registered, in the county in which he resides, his authority for practicing, and is not bad for failing to allege the county of the residence of accused, and that she had not registered her certificate, essential to charge an offense under this article. Stiles v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 326.

An indictment alleging that accused practicing medicine without a license practiced under a system of treatment, the name of which was unknown to the grand jury, but which treatment consisted in the performing of physical manipulations, does not require evidence to sustain a conviction that the name of the treatment was unknown to the grand jury. Milling v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 434.

An indictment which alleges that accused did unlawfully engage in the practice of medicine upon a human being without having registered in the district clerk's office of the county of his residence a certificate from some authorized board of medical examiners, or a diploma from some accredited medical college, contrary to the statute made and provided is sufficient. Byrd v. State, 72 App. 242, 162 S. W. 360.

An indictment charging the unlawful practice of medicine alleged that accused had not filed a certificate from the board of medical examiners "or a diploma from some accredited medical college." Held, that as the filing of a diploma did not authorize any one to practice medicine, the expression "or a diploma from some accredited medical college" will be disregarded as surplusage. Byrd v. State, 72 App. 242, 162 S. W. 360.

An indictment charging that accused was practicing medicine without having filed his certificate in the office of the district clerk of the county of his residence, as required, is not bad for uncertainty in failing to allege that the certificate was not filed in the office of the clerk of the district court. Byrd v. State, 72 App. 242, 162 S. W. 360.

Where a complaint and information distinctly charge the offense of treating or offering to treat any disease by any method in violation of subdivision 2 the allegations in the complaint and information attempting to charge accused with professing to be a physician or surgeon in violation of subdivision 1 will be treated as surplusage, and thereby render the complaint and information good as against the objection that separate and distinct offenses are charged. Herrington v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 721.

An information is fatally defective, where it fails to allege defendant's residence and that he had not registered his authority or license in the district clerk's office of the county of his residence, though it alleges that he was not licensed and authorized under the laws of the state to practice medicine, was not practicing medicine under the provisions of the laws of the state, and was not a physician under a diploma of a reputable and legal college of medicine. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 1112.

9. — Negating exceptions.—The exceptions contained in this article need not be negated in the indictment. They are matters of defense and provable under the plea of not guilty. Blasdell v. State, 5 App. 263; Logan v. State, Id. 306; Newman v. State, 58 App. 223, 124 S. W. 956; Dankworth v. State, 61 App. 157, 136 S. W. 788.

The provisos in the act of 1876 need not have been negated as exceptions in the enacting clause, Blasdell v. State, 5 App. 263; Logan v. State, 5 App. 306; as they were matters of defense, and provable under the general issue, Antle v. State, 6 App. 202; nor need the information (or indictment) allege the particular branch or department in which the defendant was engaged. Id.

An indictment alleging that accused practiced on human beings without authority of law, in that he unlawfully treated a physical disease of a person named and charged him indirectly therefor, said treatment being given in the capacity of a physician, under a system of treatment consisting in the performance of physical manipulations, sufficiently charges a practicing of medicine and the indictment need not allege that the treatment accused practiced was not within his particular sphere as a masseur, nor negative that he did not publicly represent himself as a masseur. Milling v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 434.

10. — Variance.—An indictment alleging that accused practicing medicine without a license treated a patient, and that the treatment consisted in physical manipulations with accused's hands "over" the patient, is sustained by proof that accused placed his hands "upon" the patient and rubbed and manipulated his hands "upon" his body; the words "upon" and "over" being synonymous. Milling v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 434.

The variance between the complaint and information alleging that accused practiced medicine by treating a person named for consumption, diagnosing her case and prescribing a treatment, and the proof that the person named applied to accused for treatment and told him that she had asthma and a choking-up sensation at night, and that accused did not diagnose the case as consumption, is fatal. Norwood v. State, 70 App. 605, 158 S. W. 270.

11. — Disjunctive allegations.—See C. C. P. art. 473.

12. — Following language of statute.—See C. C. P. art. 474.

13. — Joinder of counts.—See C. C. P. art. 481.

14. Instructions.—Harmless error in instructions. See C. C. P. article 743.

Where, on a trial for practicing medicine without a license, the state proved that accused treated diseases as a doctor, and charged indirectly therefor without having a license, and accused claimed that he practiced solely as a masseur and so advertised himself, the instructions which drew clearly the distinction between the practice of medicine and the practice solely as a masseur, and which submitted the issue to the jury, and which stated that, before accused could be convicted, the jury must be satisfied that he practiced medicine and charged for his services in the practice, etc., correctly presented the issues. Milling v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 434.

Where the information alleged that defendant charged $2 of the current money of the United States of America for his services, an instruction, authorizing a conviction if he charged any money of any sort for medical treatment, was not within the issues, which should have been confined to finding the money charged to be the current money of the United States. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 729.

15. Burden of proof.—See notes under art. 52, ante, and art. 785, C. C. P.

16. Admissibility of evidence.—See notes under art. 783 et seq., C. C. P.

Under act of 1876 it was competent to prove the professional capacity in which defendant held himself out to the public. Antle v. State, 6 App. 202.

Evidence as to whether the treatment given by defendant to certain patients was harmful or beneficial was immaterial. Germany v. State, 62 App. 276, 137 S. W. 130, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 477.

Evidence as to whether the prosecuting witness had been treated by other physicians before she was treated by defendant was immaterial. Germany v. State, 62 App. 276, 137 S. W. 130, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 477.

A check executed by the patient's husband, payable to defendant or order, on which was defendant's indorsement, and on the face the words "one week's medical treatment for my wife," was admissible to show that the treatment was for compensation, and not gratuitous. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

In a prosecution against defendant for practicing medicine without a license, evidence that, on request being made for receipts for money paid by a patient's husband, defendant stated that he did not give receipts because they were unnecessary as he could not collect by law, was admissible to show that defendant was aware of the provisions of the act and that the business he was pursuing was prohibited. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

Evidence that defendant had prescribed for prosecuting witness for catarrh was admissible to show that he was practicing medicine. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

Evidence of a third person that he called on defendant at the "Temple," which was the name given by accused to his place of business, asked him if he could cure the witness' wife of neuralgia, and that accused replied that he could, and that the charges would be $10 per week if the witness brought his wife to the Temple and $15 per week if accused was compelled to go to the home of the witness, was admissible to show that accused was treating, or offering to treat, disease for pay. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

The state in a prosecution for the alleged treatment of a specified person for hire was not limited to proof of defendant's treatment of the person alleged, but was entitled to show that defendant had treated and offered to treat other persons as proof that he had been treating or offering to treat various diseases for compensation, especially in view of the defense that he only accepted free will offerings in return. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

Where defendant was charged in one count with practicing medicine in that he treated certain named persons, and in another count with offering to treat diseases without a license, evidence that, at various times about the time charged in the indictment, defendant treated numerous witnesses, whose names were not mentioned in the indictment, for various ailments and diseases was admissible in support of either or both counts. Mueller v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1142.

In the prosecution of an alleged optician for practicing without license, witnesses were properly permitted to testify that accused stated to them that the glasses he offered were "medicated" glasses. Tipton v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 97.

17. — Newspaper advertisements.—Evidence of advertisements issued by defendant for the purpose of obtaining practice was admissible. Germany v. State, 62 App. 276, 137 S. W. 130, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 477.

Defendant's newspaper advertisements were not objectionable because the state, at the time the advertisements were offered, had not shown that defendant had treated the particular persons named in the first count of the indictment. Mueller v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1142.

Newspaper advertisements, in which defendant called himself a "professor" able to cure any and all diseases, and invited the afflicted public to come to him for treatment, were not inadmissible, because they did not show that he was practicing, or offering to practice, medicine, and did not claim to be a physician or practitioner of medicines belonging to any particular school, or because such advertisements stated that he made no charge. Mueller v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1142.

The admission of an advertisement which on its face was that of another person, and copies of the newspaper containing advertisement of an osteopathic infirmary and hospital, followed by the name of defendant as its physician and surgeon without a showing that defendant authorized the publication and was connected with the infirmary, did not make him responsible, and was inadmissible. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 729.

In a prosecution for unlawfully practicing medicine, evidence of the auditor of a newspaper that defendant had a credit on his books of $247, in the absence of any showing that it had been placed there to pay for advertisements therein, or any other connection, was inadmissible. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 729.

18. Sufficiency of evidence.—Under Act 1876 it was held sufficient to prove a single act of engaging in the practice in connection with proof that he held himself out to the public as a practicing physician. Antle v. State, 6 App. 202.

In a prosecution for the unlawful practicing of medicine without being registered in C. county, where accused was alleged to have then resided, a conviction was unauthorized in absence of proof that he resided in C. county; such proof being indispensable. Young v. State, 59 App. 358, 128 S. W. 1103.

On a prosecution for practicing medicine without having filed the required certificate, evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that defendant was treating disease by some method and charging therefor. Newman v. State, 61 App. 338, 134 S. W. 688.

Proof that defendant did not charge for his services directly, but told all who applied for treatment that he would receive from them "free will offerings," and that he actually did receive pay from patients, was sufficient to show that he practiced medicine for compensation. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

The state is not required to prove defendant practiced by some particular system or method, but simply that he treated a disease or disorder, mental or physical, and charged therefor. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1047.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of accused for unlawfully practicing medicine without a license. Mueller v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1142.

In a prosecution for unlawfully practicing medicine, evidence showing defendant's treatment of disease by rubbing, manipulation, etc., held to justify conviction. Newman v. State, 72 App. 367, 163 S. W. 427.

19. Unlicensed practitioner's right to recover fees.—See notes under art. 5736, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 751. District clerk to keep medical register.—It is hereby made the duty of the district clerk of each county in this state to purchase a book of suitable size, to be known as the "medical register" of such county, and set apart one full page for the registration of each physician, and to record in the same the name and record of each practitioner who presents a certificate from the state board of examiners, issued under this act. The clerk shall receive the sum of one dollar from each physician so registered, which shall be his full compensation for all duties required under this act. When any physician shall die or remove from the county, or have his license revoked, it shall be the duty of said clerk to make a note of facts at the bottom of the page as closing the record. On the first day of January in each year, said clerk shall, on request of the board, certify to the office of the state board of medical examiners a correct list of the physicians then registered in the county, together with such other information as said board may require. Any district clerk, upon conviction of knowingly violating any of the provisions of this act, shall be fined not more than fifty dollars. A copy from the medical register pertaining to any person certified to by said clerk under the seal of said court, also a certificate issued by said officer certifying that any person named has or has not registered in said office as required by this act, shall be admitted as evidence in all trial courts. [Id., p. 225.]

See notes under art. 750; Morse v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 57 Civ. App. 93, 122 S. W. 446.

Art. 752. Practitioner of medicine to receive verification license.—All legal practitioners of medicine in this state who, practicing under the provisions of previous laws, or under diplomas of a reputable and legal college of medicine, have not already received license from a state medical examining board of this state, shall present to the board of medical examiners for the state of Texas, documents, or legally certified transcripts of documents, sufficient to establish the existence and validity of such diplomas or of the valid and existing license heretofore issued by previous examining boards of this state, or exemption existing under any law, and shall receive from said board verification license, which shall be recorded in the district clerk's office in the county in which the licentiates may reside. Such verification license shall be issued for a fee of fifty cents to all practitioners who have not already received a license from the state board of medical examiners of this state. It is especially provided that those whose claims to state licenses rest upon diplomas from medical colleges, recorded from January 1, 1891, to July 9, 1901, shall present to the state board of medical examiners satisfactory evidence that their diplomas were issued from bona fide medical colleges of reputable standing, which shall be decided by the board of medical examiners before they are entitled to a certificate from said board. This board may, at its discretion, arrange for reciprocity in license with the authorities of other states and territories having requirements equal to those established by this act. License may be granted applicants for license under such reciprocity on payment of twenty dollars. [Id., p. 225.]

See Morse v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 57 Civ. App. 93, 122 S. W. 446; Lockhart v. State, 58 App. 80, 124 S. W. 923.

Time of taking effect of act.—See note under article 750.

Verification certificate.—Where one has been granted a certificate to practice medicine in any county, and the certificate has been duly recorded, the board of examiners has no right to refuse a verification license to an applicant therefor, nor to limit the certificate of a female applicant to the practice of obstetrics. Board of Medical Examiners v. Taylor, 56 Civ. App. 291, 120 S. W. 575.

Under Rev. St. 1895, arts. 3784, 3785, requiring the board of medical examiners to examine applicants for certificates to practice medicine in any of its branches in enumerated subjects, and providing that the board, being satisfied as to the qualifications of an applicant, shall grant to him a certificate, which shall entitle the person to practice medicine, etc., a certificate reciting that the board has examined a person, and has found her qualified to practice the branches of obstetrics and diseases peculiar to women and children, is, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, a valid license to such person to practice medicine as limited in the certificate, and such person is entitled to a verification certificate, under Acts 1907, c. 123. State Board of Medical Examiners v. Taylor, 103 Tex. 444, 129 S. W. 600.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 343.

See note under article 750.

Admissibility of evidence.—See art. 750.

It is error to admit opinion of witness that a college is not an accredited medical college, basing such opinion on a book purporting to contain a list of accredited medical colleges. Aldenhoven v. State, 42 App. 6, 56 S. W. 914.

Art. 753. Applicants other than those under previous article.—All applicants for license to practice medicine in this state, not otherwise licensed under the provisions of law, must successfully pass an examination before the Board of Medical Examiners established by this law. Applicants, to be eligible for examination, must present satisfactory evidence to the board that they are more than twenty-one years of age, of good moral character, and graduates of bon fide, reputable medical schools. Such schools shall be considered reputable within the meaning of this law, whose entrance requirements and courses of instruction are as high as those adopted by the better class of medical schools of the United States, whose course of instruction shall embrace not less than four terms of five months each. Application for examination must be made in writing under affidavit to the secretary of the board, on forms prepared by the board, accompanied by a fee of twenty-five ($25.00) dollars; except when an applicant desires to practice obstetrics alone, the fee shall be five ($5.00) dollars. Such applicant shall be given due notice of the date and place of examination. Applicants to practice obstetrics in the State of Texas, upon proper application, shall be examined by the Board in obstetrics only, and upon satisfactory examination shall be licensed to practice that branch only; provided, this shall not apply to those who do not follow obstetrics as a profession, and who do not advertise themselves as obstetricians or midwives, or hold themselves out to the public as so practicing. In case any applicant, because of failure to pass examination, be refused a license, he or she shall, after one year, be permitted to take a second examination without an additional fee. [Act 1907, p. 225; Act 1915, p. 112, ch. 63, § 1, superseding art. 753, revised Pen. Code.]

Explanatory.—Art. 753, revised Pen. Code, and art. 5739, Revised St., 1911, were made up from section 7 of Act 1907, p. 226. Act 1915, ch. 63, amends art. 5739, Revised St., 1911, and thus supersedes art. 753, revised Pen. Code.

Verification certificate.—See notes under art. 752.

Temporary certificate.—One member of the board of examiners cannot issue a third temporary certificate to an applicant so as to entitle him to practice medicine and charge fees. Peterson v. Seagraves, 94 Tex. 390, 60 S. W. 752 (decision under prior act).

Unlicensed practitioner's right to recover fees.—See notes under art. 5736, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 754. Not to discriminate against any particular school.—Nothing in this law shall be constructed as to discriminate against any particular school or system of medical practice. This act shall not apply to dentists, legally qualified and registered under the laws of this State, who confine their practice strictly to dentistry; nor to nurses who practice only nursing; nor to masseurs, in their particular sphere of labor, who publicly represent themselves as such; nor to commissioned or contract surgeons of the United States army, navy or public health and marine hospital service, in the performance of their duties, but such shall not engage in private practice without license from the board of medical examiners; nor to legally qualified physicians of other states called in consultation, but who do not open offices or appoint places in this state where patients may be met or called to see. This act shall be so construed as to apply to persons, other than licensed druggists of this state, not pretending to be physicians, who offer for sale on the streets or other public places, remedies which they recommend for the cure of disease. [Act 1907, p. 227.]

See notes under art. 750; Morse v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 57 Civ. App. 93, 122 S. W. 446.

When prior act took effect.—The act of February 22, 1901, which excludes from its operation all those who were practicing medicine in Texas prior to January 1, 1885, did not go into effect until ninety days after the adjournment of the twenty-seventh legislature, and adjournment occurred April 9, 1901. Wickes-Nease v. Watts, 30 Civ. App. 515, 70 S. W. 1002, 1003.

Masseur treatment.—See notes under arts. 750, 755.

Art. 755. Shall be regarded as practicing medicine, when.—Any person shall be regarded as practicing medicine within the meaning of this act:

(1) Who shall publicly profess to be a physician or surgeon and shall treat, or offer to treat, any disease or disorder, mental or physical, or any physical deformity or injury, by any system or method, or to effect cures thereof.

(2) Or who shall treat, or offer to treat, any disease or disorder, mental or physical, or any physical deformity or injury, by any system or method or to effect cures thereof, and charge therefor, directly or indirectly, money or other compensation. [Id., p. 227.]

See Morse v. State Board of Medical Examiners, 57 Civ. App. 93, 122 S. W. 446; Young v. State, 61 App. 440, 134 S. W. 736.

Validity of act.—Discrimination against masseur treatment, see note under article 750.

Persons within act in general.—This act is not limited to persons professing to be physicians and surgeons but includes any person treating or offering to treat any disease, etc. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

Proof that defendant did not charge for his services directly, but told all who applied for treatment that he would receive from them "free will offerings," and that he actually did receive pay from patients, was sufficient to show that he practiced medicine for compensation. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

One treating or offering to treat without medicine various diseases for a specific compensation is within the act. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 523.

An officer, agent, or employé of a corporation who practices medicine without a license commits an offense, though he purports to act for the corporation. Norwood v. State, 70 App. 605, 158 S. W. 270.

Masseur or massage doctor.—A masseur who publicly represents himself as a masseur, and who limits his practice to that of a masseur, is exempt from the law requiring a certificate for the practice of medicine; but where he represents himself as a masseur, but undertakes to cure diseases for pay and represents himself as able to cure diseases, he must obtain the proper certificate. Milling v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 434; Newman v. State, 61 App. 338, 134 S. W. 688; Dankworth v. State, 61 App. 157, 136 S. W. 788.

A party who advertised in a local newspaper that he was a masseur doctor located at a certain place, and that he could heal all diseases, and who treated many persons who came to him afflicted with various ailments, for which he received compensation, was "practicing medicine," within the meaning of this article, and hence was required to have a license, although he prescribed and used no drugs, but only massage treatment. Newman v. State, 58 App. 223, 124 S. W. 956.

Osteopathy.—One practicing osteopathy was not entitled to practice his profession without a license. Ex parte Collins, 57 App. 2, 121 S. W. 501.

Laying on of hands.—This act prohibited the attempted treatment of disease by an unlicensed person by means of prayer and the laying on of hands. Singh v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 891.

See notes under art. 750.

Admissibility of evidence.—See notes under article 750.

Sufficiency of evidence.—See notes under article 750.

Art. 756. Practicing in violation of law, penalty.—Any person practicing medicine in this state in violation of the provisions of this law shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding six months; and each day of such violation shall constitute a separate offense, and in no such case shall the violator be entitled to recover anything for the services rendered. [Id., p. 228.]

See notes under art. 750.

Distinct offenses.—A conviction of unlawfully practicing medicine in March is no bar to a prosecution for practicing medicine upon another person in May. Byrd v. State, 72 App. 265, 162 S. W. 363.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 343.

Art. 757. [441] Not applicable, to what cases.—The provisions of this chapter shall not apply to any person who has been regularly engaged in the general practice of medicine, in any of its branches or departments, in this state, for five consecutive years prior to January 1, 1875; nor to any person who may have legally qualified himself to practice medicine under the provisions of an act, entitled, "An act to regulate the practice of medicine," passed May 16, 1873; nor to all those who were practicing medicine in Texas prior to January 1, 1885; nor to all those who began the practice of medicine in this state after the above date, who have complied with the laws of this state, regulating the practice of medicine, in force. [O. C., Act 1901, p. 14.]

Historical.—Added in revising.

The Act of August 21, 1876, did not take effect until ninety days after its passage, Logan v. State, 5 App. 306; and as it expressly repealed the act of May 16, 1873, an indictment under the last named act would not lie in 1877, after its repeal. Ellison v. State, 6 App. 248.

Place of recording certificate.—One who qualified under the Act of 1873, but afterward removed to another county, must have his certificate also recorded in the latter county. Hilliard v. State, 7 App. 69.

Art. 758. Physicians, etc., to report births and deaths.—All physicians, surgeons or accoucheurs who may attend at the birth of a child, or, in the absence of such attendance, either parent of the child, shall report the fact to the clerk of the county court, together with the name of the parent or parents, the sex of the child and the race to which the child belongs, and whether of foreign or native parents, whether still born or alive, within thirty days after said birth occurs, under a penalty of five dollars for each failure to do so; to be collected as other fines for misdemeanors are. All physicians, surgeons, accoucheurs and coroners, cognizant of death, shall report the same, together with the race, nativity, age, sex, residence, whether alien or citizen, and the cause of death, to the clerk of the county court within thirty days after the occurrence, under a penalty of not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars for each failure to do so; these data to be recorded as a part of the vital statistics of the county and state; and the clerk of the county court shall be paid by the county ten cents for each birth or death so recorded, and he shall report monthly all these data to the department of public health and vital statistics. In default of so reporting, he shall be fined not less than fifty dollars for each offense. [Act 1903, p. 220.]

Explanatory.—This article is, in the main, superseded by the new Sanitary Code (post, art. 801, Rules 34-50). The new act does not, however, specify the particulars that shall be stated in reports of births and deaths. Though the State Board of Health is given power (Rule 38) to prescribe the form of birth and death certificates, it is possible that the above article may still have some vitality in determining the statistical facts required as to births and deaths.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 726, 727.

Art. 758a. Soliciting or drumming patients or patronage.—If any physician, surgeon, osteopath, masseur, or any other person who practices medicine or the art of healing the sick or the afflicted, with or without the use of medicine, shall employ or agree to employ, pay or promise to pay, or reward or promise to reward, any person, persons, firm, association of persons, co-partnership, or corporation for securing, soliciting or drumming patients or patronage, such physician, surgeon, osteopath, masseur, or any other person who practices medicine or the art of healing the sick or afflicted, with or without the use of medicine, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished as hereinafter provided. [Act 1911, p. 97, ch. 55, § 1.]

Art. 758b. Same; receiving compensation for soliciting patronage for physicians.—If any person, firm, association of persons, co-partnership or corporation shall accept or agree to accept any payment, fee or reward, or anything of value, for securing, soliciting or drumming for patients or patronage for any physician, surgeon, osteopath, masseur or any other person who practices medicine or the art of healing with or without medicine shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be punished as hereinafter provided. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 758c. Same; penalty.—That any person violating any of the provisions of this Act shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than $100.00 nor more than $200.00 for each and every offense, and each and every payment or reward or fee or agreement to pay or accept a reward or fee shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 758d. Same; newspaper advertising excepted.—Provided, that nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit the inserting in a newspaper or newspapers of an advertisement of a person's business, profession and place of business, or from advertising by hand-bills and paying for services in distributing same. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 758e. Incriminating testimony.—No person shall be exempt from giving testimony in any proceedings for the enforcement of this Act, but the testimony given by a witness shall not be used against him or her in any criminal action or proceeding, nor shall any criminal action or proceeding be brought against such witness on account of any testimony so given by him or her. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 772. Persons heretofore registered entitled to certificate.—All persons heretofore registered by district boards as pharmaceutical examiners shall, upon presenting proof of such registration in accordance with the law regulating the practice of pharmacy then in force, and the payment of one dollar, be entitled to a certificate of registration as licensed pharmacist, under the meaning of this law, from the state board of pharmacy, without examination. Such application shall be made to the state board of pharmacy within ninety days after the first meeting of said board. Proprietors and employes of such proprietors who are actively engaged in the preparation of physicians' prescriptions, and compounding and vending of medicines in towns of less than one thousand inhabitants in the State of Texas, and also proprietors and employes of such proprietors who shall become so engaged in such towns during the next five years after the passage of this law, shall be exempt from examination; provided, he or she will register as required in this law, and, upon paying said board of pharmacy one dollar, shall receive a certificate of registration which shall entitle such person to practice pharmacy in towns of one thousand inhabitants or under. Provided, that should such person fail to apply for registration within ninety days, from and after the first meeting of said board, said party shall be required to pay the same fee as in original registration. Every person who shall hereafter desire to be licensed as a pharmacist shall file with the secretary of the board of pharmacy an application, upon blanks furnished by the board of pharmacy for that purpose, duly verified under oath, setting forth the name and age of the applicant, the place or places at which, and the time spent in the study of the science and art of pharmacy, the experience in the compounding of physicians' prescriptions which the applicant has had under the direction of a legally licensed pharmacist, and shall appear at a time and place designated by the board of pharmacy, and submit to an examination as to his or her qualifications for registration as a licensed pharmacist or assistant pharmacist; provided, however, if any applicant should fail to pass a satisfactory examination, he or she may, at any subsequent meeting of the board of pharmacy within six months, be permitted to be re-examined without cost. [Id., p. 350.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 345.

Art. 773. In order to be licensed what is required of applicant.

—In order to be licensed as a pharmacist within the meaning of this act, an applicant shall be not less than twenty-one years of age, and shall have been licensed as an assistant pharmacist for not less than two years prior to his application for license as a pharmacist, or he shall present to the board satisfactory evidence that he is a graduate of a reputable school or college of pharmacy, or that he has had four years' practical experience in pharmacy under the instruction of a pharmacist; and he shall also pass a satisfactory examination by or under the direction of a board of pharmacy. In order to be licensed as an assistant pharmacist, within the meaning of this law, an applicant shall not be less than eighteen years of age, and shall have a sufficient preliminary general education, and shall have not less than two years' experience in pharmacy, and shall pass a satisfactory examination by, or under the direction of the board of pharmacy. Provided, however, that in the case of persons who have attended a reputable school or college of pharmacy, the actual time of attendance at school or college of pharmacy, may be deducted from the time of experience required of pharmacist and assistant pharmacist, but in no case shall less than two years' experience be required for registration as a licensed pharmacist. [Id., p. 350.]

Art. 774. When board shall enroll name of applicant and issue license.—If the applicant for license as a pharmacist or assistant pharmacist has complied with all the requirements of the two preceding articles, the board of pharmacy shall enroll his name upon the register of pharmacist or assistant pharmacist, and issue to him a license, which shall entitle him to practice as pharmacist or assistant pharmacist for a period of two years from the date of said license. The board of pharmacy may refuse to grant a license to any person guilty of felony or gross immorality, or who is addicted to the use of alcoholic liquors or narcotic drugs to such an extent as to render him unfit to practice; and the board of pharmacy, after due notice and herein may revoke a license for like cause, or any license which has been procured by fraud. [Id., p. 351.]

Art. 775. When board may issue license without examination.—The board of pharmacy may issue license to practice as pharmacist or assistant pharmacist in this state, without examination, to such persons as have been legally registered or licensed as pharmacists or assistant pharmacists in other states or foreign countries; provided, that the applicant for such license shall present satisfactory evidence of qualifications equal to those required from licentiates in this state, and that he was registered or licensed by examination in such other state or foreign country, and that the standard of competency required in such other state or foreign country accords similar recognition to the licentiates of this state. Applicants for license under this article shall, with their application, forward to the secretary of the board of pharmacy the same fees as are required of other candidates for license. [Id., p. 351.]

Art. 776. License and renewal conspicuously posted.—Every certificate of license to practice as pharmacist or assistant pharmacist, and every license to any proprietor or employé to conduct a drug store in towns of not more than one thousand inhabitants, as above provided, and every renewal of such license, shall be conspicuously exposed in the pharmacy, or drug store or place of business of which the pharmacist, or assistant pharmacist, or other person to whom it is issued, is the owner or manager, or in which he is employed. Every licensed pharmacist or assistant pharmacist who desires to continue in the practice of his profession shall, within thirty days next preceding the expiration of his license or permit, file with the board an application for the renewal thereof, which application shall be accompanied by the fee hereinafter prescribed. If the board shall find that the applicant has been legally licensed in this state, and is entitled to renewal of license, or to a renewal of such permit, it shall issue to him a certificate attesting the fact. If any pharmacist or assistant pharmacist shall fail, for a period of sixty days after the expiration of his license, to make application to the board for its renewal, his name shall be erased from the register of licensed pharmacist or assistant pharmacist; and such person, in order to become registered as a licensed pharmacist or assistant pharmacist, shall be required to pay the same fee as in the case of original registration. The name of the responsible manager of every pharmacy, drug store or apothecary shop, shall be conspicuously displayed outside of such place of business. [Id., p. 351.]

Art. 777. When board to examine applicants and make annual report to governor.—It shall be the duty of the board to examine all applications for registration of such persons as may be entitled to the same under the provisions of this law, and to make an annual report to the governor, a copy of which shall be furnished to the Texas state pharmaceutical association, upon the condition of pharmacy in Texas, which report shall embrace all the proceedings of the board, and give an itemized account of all money received and disbursed by said board; and said itemized account of money paid out by said board shall show to whom paid and specifically for what purpose it was paid, and also the names of all pharmacists duly registered under this act. And it shall be the further duty of the board to deliver all money on hand at the end of the term of each board after all outstanding debts have been paid over to their successors in office. [Id., p. 353.]

Art. 778. Board to hold meetings for examination of applicants.—The Texas state board of pharmacy shall hold meetings for the examination of applicants for registration, and for the transaction of such other business as may legally come before it, at least once in four months, and such additional meetings as may be necessary; provided, that said regular meetings shall be held on the third Tuesdays of January, May and September of each year, in such cities or places as the said board may select, or such cities or places as shall be deemed most convenient for applicants. Due notice of such meetings shall be given by publication in such papers as may be selected by the board, thirty days in advance of said meetings. Three members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of any and all business. The president and secretary shall have the power to administer oaths in all matters pertaining to the examination and registration of pharmacist and assistant pharmacist. The board shall keep a record of its proceedings and a register of all persons to whom certificates or license as pharmacist or assistant pharmacist and permits have been issued, and all renewals thereof; and the books and register of the board or a copy of any part thereof, certified by the secretary, shall be accepted as competent evidence in all the courts. [Id., p. 353.]

Art. 779. Member of board may issue temporary certificate, when.—Any member of the board of pharmacy may issue a temporary certificate upon satisfactory proof that the applicant is competent; said temporary certificate shall be null and void after the first meeting of the board of pharmacy next after the granting said temporary certificate; provided, that not more than one temporary certificate shall ever be granted to any one person. [Id., p. 354.]

Art. 780. Board may charge and collect fees.—The board of pharmacy shall be entitled to charge and collect the following fees: For the examination of an applicant for license as a pharmacist, five dollars; for the examination of an applicant for license as an assistant pharmacist, two dollars and fifty cents; for renewing the license as a pharmacist, one dollar; for renewing the license as assistant pharmacist, one dollar; for issuing license to any proprietor or employé to conduct a drug store in towns of not more than one thousand inhabitants, one dollar; all fees shall be paid before any applicant may be admitted to examination or his name placed upon the register of pharmacists, or assistant pharmacists, or before any license or permit or any renewal thereof may be issued by the board. [Id., p. 354.]

Art. 781. Penalty for violating this law.—Whoever, not being licensed as a pharmacist, shall conduct or manage any drug store or other place of business for the compounding, dispensing or sale at retail of any drugs, medicine or poisons, or for the compounding of physicians' prescriptions contrary to the provisions of articles 771 and 772, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, and each week such drug store or pharmacy or other place of business is so unlawfully conducted shall be held to constitute a separate and distinct offense. Whoever, not being licensed as a pharmacist or assistant pharmacist, shall compound, dispense or sell at retail, any drugs, medicine, poison or pharmaceutical preparation, even upon a physician's prescription or otherwise, and whoever, being the owner or manager of the drug store, pharmacy or other place of business, shall cause or permit any one not licensed as a pharmacist or assistant pharmacist, to dispense, sell at retail or compound any drug, medicine, poison or physician's prescription, contrary to the provisions of articles 771 and 772, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. Any license or permit or renewal thereof, obtained through fraud, or by any false or fraudulent representations, shall be void and of no effect in law. Any person who shall make any false or fraudulent representations for the purpose of procuring a license or permit or renewal thereof, either for himself or for another, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars; and any person who shall wilfully make a false affidavit for the purpose of procuring a license or permit or renewal thereof, either for himself or for another, shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to like penalties as in other cases of perjury. Whoever, being the holder of any license or permit granted under this act, shall fail to expose such license or permit, or any renewal thereof, in a conspicuous position in the place of business to which such license or permit relates, or in which the holder thereof is employed, contrary to the provisions of article 776, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than five dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars; and each week that such license, permit or renewal shall not be exposed, shall be held to constitute a separate and distinct offense; and whoever, being the holder of any license or permit granted under this act, shall, after the expiration of such license or permit, and without renewing the same, continue to carry on the business for which such license or permit was granted, contrary to the provisions of article 776, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than five dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars. All persons who have heretofore received registration certificates in compliance with an Act of the Regular Session of the Thirty-first Legislature, being "An Act to define and regulate the practice of professional nursing, to create a Board of Nurse Examiners for the examination and licencing [licensing] of nurses, and to prescribe their qualifications, to provide for their proper registration and for the revocation of certificates, and to fix suitable penalties for the violation of this Act," shall not be required to obtain new registration certificates, but such certificates heretofore secured under said Act of the Thirty-first Legislature shall be in all things valid and binding and of full force and effect. All persons who are in training in the wards of a general hospital or sanitarium in this State where a two-years' training with a systematic course of instruction is given at the time of the passage of this Act, and shall graduate hereafter, and possess the above quali-

All nurses who have served in the army or navy of the United States, and have been honorably discharged, shall be entitled to registration without examination. It shall be unlawful hereafter for any person to practice nursing as a registered nurse, without a certificate from the State Board of Nurse Examiners. A nurse who has received his or her certificate according to the provisions of this Act shall be styled and known as a "Registered Nurse." No other person shall assume such title or use the abbreviation "R. N." or any other letters to indicate that he or she is a registered nurse. The Board in each instance shall require a registration fee of five ($5.00) dollars. [Act 1909, ch. 117, § 4, amended; Act 1911, p. 166, ch. 89, § 1, superseding art. 782, revised Pen. Code.]

Explanatory.—Acts 1911, ch. 89, § 1, amends section 4 of ch. 117, of Acts 31st Legislature (1909) and thus supersedes art. 782, revised Pen. Code.

Art. 783. Penalty for.—Any person violating the provisions of this law, or who shall make any false representations to said board in applying for a certificate, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not more than three hundred dollars. [Act 1909, p. 228.]

Art. 784. Embalming; persons engaged or desiring to engage in practice, what required of.—Every person engaged, or desiring to engage, in the practice of embalming, in connection with the care and disposition of dead human bodies, within the state of Texas, shall make a written application to the State board of embalming for a license, accompanying the same with a license fee of five dollars, whereupon the applicant, as aforesaid, shall present himself or herself before said board at a time and place to be fixed by said board; and if the board shall find upon examination that the applicant is of good moral character, possessed of the knowledge of the venous arterial system, the location of the heart, lungs, bladder, womb and other organs of the human body, and the location of abdominal, pleural and thoracic cavities, location of the carotid, brachial, radial, ulnar, femoral and tibial arteries, a knowledge of the science of embalming and the care and disposition of the dead, and has a reasonable knowledge of sanitation and the disinfection of bodies of diseased persons, and the apartment, clothing and bedding in case of death by infectious or contagious diseases, the board shall issue to said applicant a license as a duly licensed embalmer, authorizing him to practice the science of embalming. Such license shall be signed by a majority of the board and attested by its seal. All persons receiving license under the provisions of this law shall have said license registered in the county clerk's office in the county in the jurisdiction of which it is proposed to carry on said practice, and shall display said license in a conspicuous place of business of said person so licensed. [Act 1903, p. 124.]

Art. 785. Shall annually obtain renewal license.—That every registered embalmer, who desires to continue the practice of his profession, shall annually thereafter, during the time he shall continue in such practice, on such date as said board may determine, pay to the secretary of said board a fee of two dollars for the renewal of said license. [Id., p. 125.]

Art. 786. Unlawful for persons not registered to practice.—It shall be unlawful for any person not a registered embalmer, to embalm or pretend to practice the science of embalming, in connection with the care and disposition of the dead, unless said person is a registered embalmer, within the meaning of this chapter. [Id., p. 125.]

Art. 787. Not to apply when and to whom.—That nothing in this law shall apply to, or in any manner interfere with, the duties of any municipal, county, and state officer, or state institution, nor shall this law apply to any person simply engaged in the furnishing of burial receptacles for the dead, but shall only apply to such person or persons engaged in the business of embalming, in connection with the care and disposition of the dead. [Id., p. 125.]

Art. 788. Penalty for violation.—That any person who shall embalm, or attempt to practice the science of embalming, in connection with the care and disposition of the dead, without having complied with the provisions of this law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, before any court, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than fifty dollars or not more than one hundred dollars for each and every offense. All fines collected for the violation of any of the provisions of this law shall be paid into the public school fund of the state. [Id., p. 125.]

BARBERING—REGULATING SAME

Laws 1907, ch. 141, p. 273, relating to this subject was held unconstitutional in Jackson v. State, 55 App. 557, 117 S. W. 818, on the ground that it was a mechanical pursuit, and subject to a tax, in view of Const. art. 8, § 1, and on the further ground that inasmuch as it excepted certain persons from its operation, it was discriminatory and violated section 3 of the Bill of Rights forbidding the granting of special privileges.

CHAPTER TEN A VETERINARIANS

Art.	Art.
799a. Compliance with requirements.	799e. Practice without compliance with act; penalty.
799b. Application for license; examination; provisos.	799f. What constitutes "practicing"; United States officers, non-resident practitioners, and other persons excepted.
799c. Payment of fee; persons excepted; disposition; bond.	799g. Grand jury; charge to.
799d. Registration of license; fee; removal to other county.

Article 799a. Compliance with requirements.—That no person shall practice veterinary medicine or veterinary surgery in any of their departments, including veterinary dentistry, within this State, unless and until such persons shall have complied in all respects with the provisions of this Act. [Act 1911, p. 132, ch. 76, § 1.]

Constitutionality of act.—The regulation of the practice of veterinary medicine, surgery, and dentistry is within the police powers of the state. Pistole v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 618.

This act, being a police regulation, and not a tax measure, is not violative of Const. art. 8, §§ 1, 2, requiring taxation to be equal and uniform. Id.

This act is not violative of Const. U. S. art. 4, § 2, providing that the citizens of each state shall be entitled to the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several states, nor of the due process and equal protection provisions of the fourteenth amendment, despite the provisions of arts. 799c, 799d, 799f. Id.

Arts. 799a, 799b are not violative of Const. art. 1, §§ 3, 17, 19, providing that all men shall have equal rights, that private property shall not be taken for public use without adequate compensation, and that no citizen of the state shall be deprived of property, privileges, or immunities, except by due process of law. Id.

The title of this act: "An act to regulate the practice of veterinary medicine, surgery and dentistry; creating a board for the examination of applicants for the practice of veterinary medicine, surgery and dentistry; prescribing their powers, duties and qualifications; said board to be known as the 'State Board of Veterinary Examiners;' prescribing penalties for a violation of the provisions of this act, and declaring an emergency"—is not open to the objection that it is too general, and does not embrace the provisions of the act. Id.

Board of examiners.—In the trial of one for violating this act, it was no defense that the board of examiners consisted of only five members, though seven are required by law, and that three of the five were graduates of the same school; the presumption being that the Governor has not violated his sworn duty, such board being at least a de facto board, and the section of the statute requiring that no two members of the board shall be graduates of the same college would not disqualify the board, though more than two of them were graduates of a particular college, where the members so graduating were also graduates of other and diverse colleges. Pistole v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 618.

Art. 799b. Application for license; examination; provisos.—That any person desiring to practice veterinary surgery in this State shall make application for license to said State Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners upon blanks furnished by said Board for such purpose. Said application shall be accompanied by the fee hereinafter prescribed and by satisfactory proof that the applicant is of good standing and character. His diploma shall be submitted for inspection by the Board. When these preliminary requirements are satisfied, the applicant shall present himself before the Board for examination upon the following subjects: Veterinary anatomy, veterinary pathology, chemistry, veterinary surgery, veterinary obstetrics, veterinary materia medica, veterinary sanitary science and police and veterinary practice. Provided, that until January first, 1912, persons who have been engaged in the practice of veterinary surgery or any of the branches thereof, including veterinary dentistry, in the State of Texas, as their principal occupation for at least one year immediately prior to the passage and approval of this Act, and are of good moral character, shall be entitled to a certificate of license on application to the Board, presentation of satisfactory evidence and payment of the regular application fee hereinafter prescribed. Such license to expire at the end of one year from date of issuing. Provided that nothing in this Act shall prohibit any person who has practiced veterinary surgery for five years prior to the enactment of this law from practicing in their county or residence only, without license by making affidavit before the district clerk of his county that he has practiced veterinary surgery for five years, but if such person shall move from such county of residence he shall comply with all the requirements of this Act before he shall be allowed to practice. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 799c. Payment of fee; persons excepted; disposition; bond.—That every person applying to said Board for a license to practice shall accompany such application with a fee of five dollars, which fee shall in no case be refunded; provided, the payment of a license fee of five dollars shall not be required of those who have practiced veterinary surgery in Texas for as much as one year before this Act shall become operative. All fees shall be held in the custody of the secretary-treasurer who shall give bond in the sum of two thousand dollars for their safe keeping. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 799d. Rule 18. Health Authorities to Investigate Reported Cases.—Whenever a local health authority is informed or has reason to suspect that there is a case of smallpox, scarlet fever, or other reportable disease within the territory over which he has jurisdiction, he shall immediately examine into the facts of the case and shall adopt the quarantine or employ the sanitary measures as herein provided.

Rule 19. Health Authority Shall See That Quarantine and Disinfection Is Carried Out.—Within his jurisdiction, each and every local health authority shall see that the quarantining or disinfection of any house, building, car, vessel, or vehicle, or any part thereof and of any articles therein likely to retain infection, is carried out, and that all persons who have been in quarantine, are required to take a disinfecting bath before the same are released. And in the event of the disease having been smallpox, all persons exposed shall be isolated for eighteen days from the time of last exposure unless successfully vaccinated.

Rule 20. Premises Occupied by Persons With Contagious Diseases To Be Disinfected Before Reoccupied.—No person shall offer for hire or cause or permit any one to occupy apartments perviously occupied by a person ill with smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria, or tuberculosis, or any quarantinable disease, until such apartments shall have been disinfected under the supervision of the local health authority.

Rule 21. On Failure to Disinfect Premises They Shall Be Placarded.—Whenever these rules and regulations, or whenever the order or direction of the local health authority requiring the disinfection of articles, premises or apartments, shall not be complied with, or in case of any delay, said authority shall forthwith cause to be placed upon the door of the apartment or premises a placard as follows: "These apartments have been occupied by a patient suffering with a contagious disease and they may have become infected. They must not be again occupied until my orders directing the renovation and disinfection of same have been complied with. This notice must not be removed, under penalty of the law, except by an authorized health official.”

Rule 22. Nurses and Midwives Shall Report Redness of Eyelids or Inflammation to Health Authority.—Whenever any nurse, midwife or other person not a legally qualified practitioner of medicine shall notice inflammation of the eyes or redness of the lids in a new-born child under his or her care, it shall be the duty of such person to report the same to the local health authority, or in his absence, any reputable physician, within twelve hours of the time the disease is first noticed.

Rule 23. Householders or Heads of Families to Report Contagious Diseases.—Every hotel proprietor, keeper of a boarding house or inn, and householder or head of a family in a house wherein any case of reportable contagious disease (including tuberculosis) may occur, shall report the same to the local health authority within twelve hours of the time of his or her first knowledge of the nature of such disease, unless previous notice has been given by the physician in attendance; and in cases of quarantinable diseases until instructions are received from the said local health authority shall not permit any clothing or other article which may have been exposed to infection to be removed from the house; nor shall any occupant of said house change his residence elsewhere without the consent of the said local health authority.

Rule 24. Persons Suffering from Reportable Diseases Shall Not Work Where Food Products are Produced.—No person suffering with any reportable disease, or who resides in a house in which there exists a case of smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria, or typhoid fever, shall work or be permitted in or about any dairy, or any establishment for the manufacture of food products, until the local health authority has given such a person a written certificate to the effect that no danger to the public will result from his or her employment or presence in such establishment.

Rule 25. Health Authority Shall Send Attending Physician Printed Matter.—Immediately after being notified of any case of smallpox, scarlet fever, ditheria [diphtheria], typhoid fever, or tuberculosis, the local health authority shall send to the attending physician, or with his approval directly to the patient the printed matter published by the State Board of Health relative to the prevention and control of such diseases.

Rule 29. Health Authority to Notify Superintendents of Pupils From Infected Houses.—The local health authority shall notify the superintendent or principal of any school of the locations of quarantinable diseases, and if the superintendent or principal finds any attendants in such school who live in said houses, he shall deny them admission to the said schools, only admitting them again upon presenting a certificate from the attending physician, countersigned by the local health authority, that there is no longer danger from contagion.

Rule 30. Children With Contagious Diseases Shall Not Attend School.—No superintendent, principal or teacher of any school, and no parent, master or guardian of any child or minor, having the power and authority to prevent, shall permit any child or minor, having any quarantinable disease, or any child residing in any house in which any such disease exists or has recently existed, to attend any public, private, parochial, church or Sunday school until the requirements of these rules shall have been complied with.

See art. 758, ante.

Rule 35. Undertaker Shall Report Deaths.—Every person acting as undertaker shall file with the proper registrar a certificate of death and all persons furnishing a coffin or box in which to bury the dead shall be deemed undertakers.

Rule 36. City and County "Registrar."—For the purposes of these rules and regulations the phrase "county registrar" shall be held to designate the clerk of the county court, when a birth or death is returnable from a county, outside of incorporated cities or towns; and in all such incorporated cities and towns the term city registrar shall be held to designate the city health officer or other city official, acting as registrar for said city, and all returns of births and deaths accruing [occurring] outside of incorporated cities and towns shall be made to the county registrar of the county in which said births and deaths occur; all returns of births and deaths occurring within any incorporated city or town shall be made to the city registrar of the city or town in which said births and deaths occur, and all returns of deaths where the bodies are buried within any incorporated city or town shall be made to the city registrar.

Rule 37. In Incorporated Cities and Towns, City Health Officer to Act as City Registrar, etc.—Each and every incorporated city or town in the State of Texas shall constitute a primary registration district. In such incorporated city or town, the city health officer shall be and shall be known as the city registrar. Each city registrar shall appoint a deputy whose duty it shall be to act in his stead in case of absence, illness or disability, and both city registrar and his deputy shall be subject to all rules and regulations herein mentioned. Provided, that in cities or towns where the city secretary or other city officials are, at the date of promulgation of the Sanitary Code for Texas, officiating as registrars of births and deaths under local ordinances which require a burial permit, based upon a duly accredited death certificate, before allowing the dead to be buried, such officers shall be continued as city registrars in and for such cities and towns, but shall be subject to the rules and regulations herein contained. That the body of any person whose death occurs in any said registration district shall not be interred, deposited in a vault or tomb, cremated or otherwise disposed of, or removed or transported from said registration district until a permit for burial, removal or other disposition shall have been properly issued by the city registrar of the registration district in which the death or interment occurs. And no such burial or removal permit shall be issued by any registrar until a complete and satisfactory certificate and return of the death has been filed with him as hereinafter provided. Provided, that a transit permit issued in accordance with the law and health regulations of the place where death occurred, whether in Texas or outside of the State, may be accepted by the city registrar of the district where the body is to be interred or otherwise finally disposed of, as a basis upon which he shall issue a local burial permit, in the same way as if the death occurred in his city, but shall plainly enter on the face of the copy of the record which he shall make for return to the State Registrar the fact that it was a body shipped in for interment, and give the actual place of death. But when a body is removed from a district in Texas to an adjacent or nearby district for interment, not requiring the use of a common carrier or the issue of a transit permit, then the city registrar's burial permit from the district where death occurred may be accepted as authority for burial. It shall be the duty of the aforementioned city registrar to record in a permanently bound book, which shall be secured from the city for that purpose, all births and deaths which shall occur within their respective cities and towns, together with such statistics and data as shall be furnished him by the birth certificates and death certificates herein elsewhere provided for, and it shall be the duty of said city registrar to transmit all such original birth and death certificates received during the preceding month to the State Registrar of Vital Statistics at Austin on or before the tenth day of the following month.

Rule 38. Form of Certificate.—All certificates of births and deaths shall be made in the manner prescribed by the State Board of Health and in the form of certificate prescribed by the State Registrar to the aforementioned registrars.

See art. 758, ante, and explanatory note.

Rule 39. Undertaker Shall Fill Out Certificate and Obtain Particulars.—In case of death (including stillbirths) in which any undertaker buries the dead or assists at such burial, it shall be the duty of such undertaker to accurately and properly fill out the death certificate as provided by the State Registrar, in so far as regards the “personal and statistical particulars,” and further, he shall obtain from the physician or coroner the answers to questions under the heading of “medical particulars” of the death certificate; said death certificate to be mailed or handed in by the undertaker to the county registrar within five days after said death occurs; provided, that in case the undertaker can not communicate with the physician or coroner within the five days specified, he shall mail the death certificate to such physician or coroner, as accurately and properly filled out as possible, for such physician or coroner to complete the “medical particulars” of the death certificate, in which event the aforesaid physician or coroner shall make report to the proper registrar.

Rule 40. Physicians Shall Promptly Give Medical Particulars to Undertaker.—It shall be the duty of every physician in the event of a death (including stillbirths) occurring in any case at which said physician is the last in attendance, to promptly and accurately fill out the questions in the “medical particulars” of the death certificate when the death certificate is presented by the undertaker.

Rule 41. Physician Last in Attendance Shall Report Rural Deaths.—In the event of a death occurring in the rural districts of the State and no undertaker being in attendance or responsible for the report of the death, the physician last in attendance or the coroner, in the event of his being called in, shall accurately and completely fill out the certificate of death and transmit it to the county registrar.

Rule 42. Coroner Shall Give Information, Also Head of House.—In case of death (including stillbirths) where a coroner shall hold an inquest to ascertain the cause of death, the said coroner shall answer the questions (medical particulars) as in Rule 39 to be answered by the attending physician, and answer them in as full and complete manner as the information from such coroner’s inquest will permit; and when a person dies without medical attendance and does not require the attendance of a coroner, the head of the household where such death occurs, or the next of kin, shall immediately notify the local health authority who shall, after proper investigation, and, if deemed necessary by him, after an autopsy to determine the cause of death, issue a certificate of death.

Rule 43. Superintendents of Hospitals to Give Information.—If the deceased died in a hospital or other institution, the person acting as undertaker shall present the certificate to the superintendent or head of such institution for the special information indicated on the blank for such cases. The undertaker shall then fill in the other information above required and transmit the complete certificate to the proper registrar.

Rule 44. Undertakers Shall Report Physicians for Neglect of Giving Information.—In the event of the neglect or refusal of the physician, coroner, superintendent or person in charge of any hospital or other institution to promptly and accurately fill out the death certificate as above required, and sign it, when so requested by an undertaker, the same shall be immediately reported by the undertaker to the State Registrar for the purpose of prosecution.
