Rule 45. Stillborn or Those Dead Births of Seven Months Gestation To Be Reported.—All stillborn children (those dead at birth after seven months gestation) shall be registered as births and also as deaths, and a certificate of both the birth and the death shall be filed with the proper registrar, in the usual form and manner, the certificate of birth to contain in place of the name of the child, the word "stillborn." The "medical particulars" of the death certificate shall be signed by the attending physician, if any, or midwife, and shall state the cause of death as "stillborn," with the cause of the stillbirth, if known, whether a premature birth, and, if born prematurely, the period of uterine gestation, in months, if known.

Rule 46. Clerks Shall Record All Statistical Data.—The clerk of the county court in every county in the State of Texas shall record all statistical data relating to such births and deaths as are reported to him from his county outside incorporated cities and towns in a permanently bound book which he shall secure and keep for that purpose, in form as supplied by the State Registrar, and shall transmit the original certificates to the State Registrar by the tenth of each month following the month in which they are received.

Rule 47. Sextons Shall Keep Record.—All sextons or superintendents of cemeteries are required to file all burial permits received and to record in a permanently bound book, the names of all persons interred, date of interment, place of burial, number of the grave or section of cemetery where buried and name of undertaker; and shall before the tenth of the following month make a report to the State Registrar of all deceased persons deposited in their respective cemeteries during the preceding month.

Rule 48. State Registrar Shall Supply Blanks, etc.—The State Registrar shall prepare, print and supply to all city and county registrars all blanks and forms used in reporting births and deaths or in otherwise carrying out the purposes of this regulation, and each county shall print and supply their county registrar and each city council supply their city registrar with a permanently bound book, in form prepared by the State Registrar for recording all statistical data relating to births and deaths in their respective jurisdictions; and the State Registrar shall prepare and issue such detailed instructions as may be required to secure the uniform observance of its provisions and the maintenance of a perfect system of registration. He shall carefully examine all certificates received and if any such are incomplete or unsatisfactory he shall require such further information to be furnished as may be necessary to make the record complete and satisfactory. And all physicians, midwives, informants or undertakers connected with any case, and all other persons having knowledge of the facts, are hereby required to furnish such information as they may possess regarding any birth or death upon demand of the State Registrar, in person, by mail, or through the county or city registrar. He shall further arrange, bind and permanently preserve the certificates in a systematic manner.

Rule 49. City and County Registrars Shall Furnish Blanks to Those Required to Report.—It shall be the duty of the city and county registrars to supply blank forms of certificate and such instructions as are applied to them by the State Registrar to all in their respective jurisdictions who are required to make reports under these regulations.

Rule 50. City and County Registrars Examine All Certificates of Birth and Death.—Each city and county registrar shall carefully examine each certificate of birth or death when received, and if any such are incomplete or unsatisfactory, he shall require such further information to be furnished as may be necessary to make the record complete and satisfactory. He shall number consecutively the certificates of birth and death, in two separate series, beginning with the "number one" for the first birth and first death in each calendar year.

DEPOTS, RAILWAY COACHES AND SLEEPING CARS

Rule 51. Contagious Diseases Barred From Public Vehicles.—No person known to be suffering from any contagious disease such as smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles or whooping cough shall be allowed to enter or ride in any day coach, sleeping car, interurban car or street car, and when any such person is discovered to be in any car as mentioned above, it shall be the duty of the conductor or other individual in charge of said car to notify the nearest or most accessible county or city health officer and the latter shall remove and isolate said patient as is proper in such case or circumstance.

Rule 52. Depots, etc., To Be Ventilated and Heated.—Each depot, railway coach, sleeping car, interurban car and street car while in use for the accommodation of the public shall be properly ventilated, and, if necessary, heated, and a sufficient amount of heat shall be furnished in time of need so that fresh air can be supplied without causing it to become unduly or uncomfortably cold; and the janitor, conductor, caretaker or other person in charge shall see to it that the air is replenished with fresh air from time to time as needed to prevent the same from becoming foul, unsanitary or oppressive.

Rule 53. Cuspidors To Be Provided, Disinfected, etc.—Cuspidors must be provided in adequate numbers in all waiting rooms of depots and railway stations; each day coach shall be provided with one cuspidor for each seat or every two chairs, and two in each smoking apartment; except that in each parlor car there may be as few as one cuspidor to every three seats and two cuspidors used in the smoking apartment; in each sleeping car shall be placed one cuspidor to each section and three cuspidors in the smoking apartment, one of which cuspidors, in the absence of a dental lavatory, shall be of an unusually large size and placed near the wash basin for use in washing the teeth; each aforementioned cuspidor shall contain not less than one-third of a pint of an approved disinfectant solution, and the cuspidor shall be emptied, washed in a similar solution and replenished each trip or every twenty-four hours.

Rule 54. Dry Cleaning Prohibited.—Dry dusting and dry sweeping is prohibited at all times in waiting rooms of depots and railway stations, or in railway coaches, sleeping cars, interurban cars and street cars.

Rule 55. Coaches To Be Cleaned After Each Trip; How Cleaned.—Railway day coaches shall be thoroughly cleaned at the end of each trip, and in no instance shall the day coach go uncleaned longer than two days when such coach is in use; the thorough cleaning of day coaches shall consist as follows:

(a) Windows and doors shall be first opened and the aisle-strip, if there be any, removed, and, when possible, thoroughly sunned.

(b) All upholstery shall be dusted and brushed, using the vacuum process cleaning apparatus whenever possible.

(c) Floor mopped or swept, after it has been sprinkled with an approved disinfectant solution, or preferably cleaned by sprinkling with sawdust moistened with said approved disinfectant and sweeping. After cleaning, as described, the floor must be scrubbed with soap and water to which may be added the same disinfectant solution.

(d) Closet floors, urinals, toilet bowls, and walls must be cleaned by washing, scouring and wiping with an approved disinfectant solution, to which soda ash or other cleansing agent may be added.

(e) All arms of seats and window ledges must be wiped free of dust with a damp cloth (preferably one wet with disinfectant solution).

(f) Provided, that where the vacuum cleaning apparatus is installed and coaches are thoroughly cleaned with this method daily, the aforementioned method of brushing, cleaning and scrubbing may be used as seldom as once in each period of seven days.

Rule 56. Railway Stations To Be Cleaned.—The sanitary method of cleaning as prescribed in the foregoing rule must be followed in the sanitation of waiting rooms of depots and railway stations once in every twenty-four hours.

Rule 57. Dining Cars, etc., To Be Thoroughly Cleaned.—Parlor, buffet and dining cars must be cleaned at cleaning terminals, as set forth in Rule 55 of this chapter. Carpets and draperies to be removed, dusted, sunned and aired. Food boxes, refrigerators, closets, drawers, and cupboards to be cleaned, scalded and treated with a solution containing 2 per cent. formaldehyde, or other approved disinfectant.

Rule 58. Interurban and Street Cars To Be Washed, Disinfected, etc.—Interurban cars and street cars must be washed with a hose and scrubbed thoroughly once every twenty-four hours, and must be disinfected with formaldehyde gas under the supervision of the local health authority immediately after any case of contagious disease has been discovered therein.

Rule 59. Sleeping Cars To Be Cleaned; Disinfected.—All sleeping cars shall be cleaned at cleaning terminals according to the methods set forth in Rule 55 above, at least twice during a period of every seven days; shall be disinfected with formaldehyde gas at least twice during a period of seven days; upon routes designated by the President of the State Board of Health, all sleeping cars shall be disinfected as seldom as once during a period of seven days. In addition to the foregoing, all sleeping cars shall be disinfected immediately after any case of contagious or infectious disease is discovered therein. All blankets used in sleeping cars must be thoroughly sterilized and washed at intervals of not more than ninety days.

Rule 60. Record of Disinfection To Be Kept and Signed.—On each passenger car operated in the State of Texas a disinfection record must be kept and preserved, and on same the following records are to be entered and kept, viz.:

1. Place and date of each disinfection.
2. Length of time devoted to each such thorough disinfection.
3. Each item in said record shall be inserted immediately after each act recorded, and the signature of the person or persons doing said cleaning or disinfection must appear beneath the said records.

Rule 61. Water Coolers To Be Provided; Manner of Cleaning.—All depots, railway coaches, sleeping cars, or interurban cars must be provided with a water cooler for the use of patrons and the traveling public; such water cooler must be so constructed as to be easily removed for the purpose of cleaning; must be emptied, rinsed and cleaned, and must be scalded and sunned when possible once in each period of twenty-four hours, and must be filled with good and wholesome drinking water when in service. Ice for use in water coolers must not be dumped on floors, sidewalks or car platforms. It must be washed and must be handled with ice-tongs.

Rule 62. Expectorating on Floors Prohibited.—Expectorating on the floor or walls or furniture of any waiting room in any depot, on any depot platform, in any railway coach, sleeping car, interurban car, or street car in this State, is prohibited. Placards calling attention of passengers and employes shall be hung in a conspicuous place in each of the aforementioned rooms and cars.

Rule 63. Expectorating in Basins Prohibited.—Brushing of teeth or expectorating in basins used for lavatory purposes is prohibited, and placards calling attention of passengers and employés shall be hung in a conspicuous place in the dressing room of passenger coaches.

Rule 64. Separate Compartments for Negro Porters.—Sleeping car companies shall provide compartments and bedding for their negro porters separate from those provided for their white passengers.

Rule 65. Negro Porters Prohibited From Sleeping In.—Negro porters shall not sleep in sleeping car berths nor use bedding intended for white passengers.

Rule 66. Certain Floor Covering Prohibited.—No waiting room in any depot or railway station shall be floored in part or entirely with burlap, cocoa matting, or sacking cloth.

Rule 67. Water Closets To Be Provided.—All depots and railway station shall provide adequate urinals and water closets for patrons and the traveling public; must keep them in proper sanitary condition, and if within five hundred feet of any public sewer, must make permanent sanitary connection with same. Any privy or box closet furnished by any such railway company shall be protected from flies by screening or other effective method, including hinged lids or other device for covering the opening in the seats of said closets. Such privies and closets as are not in connection with a sanitary sewer shall be provided with a water-tight box, or other receptacle underneath, and when full or at any time when its condition shall create a nuisance or become unsanitary, and in no instance shall such box closet go longer than one month before it must be emptied and disinfected with 5 per cent carbolic acid solution or other approved disinfectant solution.

Rule 68. Railway Premises Shall Be Drained.—The premises of all depots and railway stations shall be thoroughly drained, so that no stagnant water will collect on said premises.

Rule 69. All Cisterns, etc., Shall Be Screened.—All cisterns, fire water barrels, or other water containers upon the premises of any depot or railway station shall be screened with not less than 16-mesh wire gauze.

GOVERNING THE PREPARATION FOR TRANSPORTATION OF DEAD BODIES

Rule 70. Bodies Dead of Pestilential Diseases.—No body of any person dead of Asiatic cholera, bubonic plague, typhus fever or small-pox shall be transported except in a hearse or undertaker's wagon unless said body shall have been cremated.

Rule 71. Bodies Dead of Dangerous Contagious Diseases.—The bodies of those who have died of diphtheria (membranous croup), scarlet fever (scarlatina, scarlet rash), glanders, anthrax or leprosy, shall not be accepted for transportation unless prepared for shipment by being thoroughly disinfected by (a) arterial and cavity injection with an approved disinfectant fluid, (b) disinfecting and stopping all orifices with absorbent cotton, and (c) washing the body with the disinfectant, all of which must be done by a licensed embalmer, holding a certificate as such. After being disinfected as above, such body shall be encased in an air-tight zinc, tin, copper or lead-lined coffin, or iron casket, all joints and seams hermetically soldered, and all enclosed in a strong, tight wooden box. Or, the body being prepared for shipment by disinfecting as above, may be placed in a strong coffin or casket, and said coffin or casket enclosed in an air-tight copper or tin case, all joints and seams hermetically soldered and all enclosed in a strong outside wooden box.

Rule 72. Bodies Dead of Non-quarantinable Contagious Diseases.—The bodies of those dead of typhoid fever, puerperal fever, erysipelas, tuberculosis and measles, or other dangerous communicable disease, other than those specified in Rules 70 and 71, may be received for transportation when prepared for shipment by filling cavities with an approved disinfectant, washing the exterior of the body with the same, and stopping all orifices with absorbent cotton and encased in an air-tight coffin or casket; provided, that this shall apply only to bodies which can reach their destination within forty-eight hours from time of death. In all other cases such bodies shall be prepared for transportation in conformity with Rule 71. But when the body has been prepared for shipment by being thoroughly disinfected by an embalmer holding a certificate, as in Rule 71, the air-tight sealing may be dispensed with.

Rule 73. Bodies Dead of Other Diseases.—The bodies of those dead of diseases that are not contagious, infectious or communicable may be received for transportation when encased in a sound coffin or casket and enclosed in a strong outside box; provided, they reach their destination within thirty hours from time of death. If the body can not reach its destination within thirty hours from time of death, it must be prepared for shipment by filling cavities with an approved disinfectant, washing the exterior of the body with the same, and stopping all orifices with absorbent cotton, and encased in an air-tight coffin or casket. But when the body has been prepared for shipment by being thoroughly disinfected by a licensed embalmer as in Rule 71, the air-tight sealing may be dispensed with.

Rule 74. Persons Accompanying Bodies Dead of Contagious Diseases.—In cases of contagious or infectious diseases, the body must not be accompanied by persons or articles which have been exposed to the infection of the disease, unless certified by the health officer as having been properly disinfected; and before selling passage tickets, agents shall carefully examine the transit permit and note the name of the passenger in charge, and of any other proposing to accompany the body, and see that all necessary precautions have been taken to prevent the spread of disease. The transit permit in such cases shall specifically state who is authorized by the health authorities to accompany the remains. In all cases where bodies are forwarded under Rule 71, notice must be sent by telegraph to health officer at destination, advising the date and train on which the body may be expected. This notice must be sent by or in the name of the health officer at the initial point, and is to enable the health officer at destination to take all necessary precautions at that point.

Rule 75. Bodies Not Shipped By Express.—Every dead body not shipped by express must be accompanied by a person in charge, who must be provided with a passage ticket and also present a full first-class ticket marked "corpse" for the transportation of the body, and a transit permit showing physician's or coroner's certificate, name of deceased, date and hour of death, age, place of death, cause of death, and if of a contagious or infectious disease, the point to which the body is to be shipped, and when death is caused by any of the diseases specified in Rule 71, the names of those authorized by the health authorities to accompany the body. The transit permit must be made in duplicate, and the signatures of the physician or coroner, health officer and undertaker must be on both the original and duplicate copies. The undertaker's certificate and paster of the original shall be detached from the transit permit and pasted on the end of the coffin box. The physician's certificate and transit permit shall be handed to the passenger in charge of the corpse. The whole duplicate copy shall be sent to the official in charge of the baggage department of the initial line and by him to the Secretary of the State Board of Health at Austin.

Rule 76. Bodies Shipped By Express.—When dead bodies are shipped by express, the whole original transit permit shall be pasted upon the outside box, and the duplicate forwarded by the express agent to the Secretary of the State Board of Health at Austin.

Rule 77. Disinterred Bodies Treated as Contagious.—Every disinterred body, dead from any disease or cause, shall be treated as contagious or dangerous to the public health and shall not be accepted for transportation unless said removal has been approved by the State or local health authorities having jurisdiction where such body is disinterred, and the consent of the health authorities of the locality to which the corpse is consigned has first been obtained; and all such disinterred remains shall be enclosed in a hermetically sealed (soldered) zinc, tin or copper-lined coffin or box. Bodies deposited in receiving vaults shall be treated and considered the same as buried bodies.

Rule 78. Transfer of Dead Bodies in Transit.—When it may become necessary to transfer dead bodies in transit from one railway train to another, or from one station to another, or from a station to a ferry, the affidavit of the undertaker and permit of the local health officer accompanying the remains shall be in all cases sufficient authority for such transfer.

Rule 79. Certificate Furnished by Undertaker.—No common carrier shall accept for transportation any body unless a certificate is furnished by the undertaker preparing such body for shipment to the effect that the foregoing rules have been complied with in the preparation for transportation of said body.

Penalty.—Any person who shall violate any of the rules, regulations or provisions of the Sanitary Code of Texas, as herein set forth, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars and not more than one thousand dollars.

Repeal.—Provided, this Act shall not be construed to repeal any of the laws of this State now in force affecting the public health, which are not clearly in conflict herewith, but shall be construed to be cumulative to said laws.

Explanatory.—Act 1911, ch. 95, § 1, amends section 10 of chapter 30, Acts 31st Legislature "at its Regular Session" (the act was passed at the first called session). As art. 801, revised Pen. Code was made up from the section amended, such article is thereby superseded.

Arts. 802–805. [Amended. See Art. 801.]

Explanatory.—The above articles of the revised Pen. Code were made up from section 10, ch. 30, 1st called session of 31st Leg. and, hence, the amendment of section 10 (see art. 801, ante), worked their supersession.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 580.

Art. 805a. Charbon districts.—That all of that portion of the State of Texas in which charbon or anthrax has heretofore been prevalent or any district of the State of Texas in which charbon or anthrax may become prevalent, shall be known as charbon districts and shall be subject to the provisions hereof. [Act 1913, p. 147, ch. 78, § 2 (10a).]

Explanatory.—Act 1913, ch. 78, § 2, amends Act 1909, ch. 30, by adding thereto sections 10a to 10k, inclusive. The criminal provisions of such added sections are inserted in this compilation as arts. 805a–805h.

Art. 805b. Report of animals and persons suffering from charbon or anthrax.—That each person residing in a district where charbon or anthrax is prevalent or where the same is supposed to be prevalent shall report in writing to the county health officer, who in turn shall report in writing to the president of the State Board of Health at Austin, all cases where an animal or animals are suffering with charbon or anthrax or supposed to have such disease, and each physician practicing in the State of Texas shall report in writing to the president of the State Board of Health all persons suffering from charbon or anthrax or supposed to be suffering from same and in case of failure to do so any person so failing shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than $10.00 nor more than $25.00 and each case of which no report is made shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., § 2 (10b).]

Art. 805c. Destruction of carcasses of animals dying from charbon or anthrax.—That carcasses of stock which have died from charbon or anthrax shall be destroyed by burning by the owner or person in charge within 24 hours after death and any owner or person having charge of said animals who should fail to destroy said carcasses as herein provided shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than $25.00 nor more than $100.00 and each 24 hours after the first 24 hours that said carcass is permitted to remain undestroyed shall be considered a separate offense. [Id., § 2 (10e).]

Art. 805d. Quarantine of animals infected.—The county health officer shall be the exclusive judge of the necessity of isolation or quarantine of all animals infected therewith and when in the judgment of said county health officer there exists a necessity thereof [therefor] said county health officer shall issue a proclamation directing that all animals of certain classes which he may specify in the infected district, in either the entire county or any political subdivision thereof, shall be placed and kept in an enclosure by the owners or keeper thereof, and any owner, or keeper of such animals for the owners, who shall fail or refuse to obey the requirement of such proclamation shall be fined in any sum not less than $10.00 nor more than $50.00 and where any owner or keeper for the owner shall have more than ten animals subject to the quarantine regulations herein provided the fine shall be doubled and each day that any owner or keeper for such owner shall fail to comply with the proclamation of said county health officer, shall constitute a separate offense and such quarantine shall continue and be in effect as long as in the judgment of such county health officer it may be necessary to prevent the spread of charbon or anthrax. [Id., § 2 (10f).]

Art. 805e. Proclamation of quarantine.—The proclamation of the county health officer provided for in Section 10f of this Act [art. 805d] shall be sufficient, if it name the kinds or classes of stock to which it shall apply and it shall be published in some newspaper published in the county if there be one; and if there be no newspaper it shall be posted in three public places in said county one of which shall be at the court house door of such county if the proclamation pertains to the whole county, but if only to a subdivision of the county, then in any three public places in such subdivision, and one insertion in a newspaper shall be sufficient, and such proclamation shall be effective three days after such notice is given. [Id., § 2 (10g).]

Art. 805f. Election for prevention of animals from running at large in county within charbon districts.—In all counties now affected with charbon or anthrax, or which may hereafter become affected, the qualified voters of such county or any political subdivision thereof may, in the manner hereinafter provided, prohibit the running at large of cattle, horses, sheep, goats and hogs or any of such animals within such county or subdivision thereof; provided that, upon the petition of ten per cent of the qualified voters of such county or subdivision, thereof presented to the commissioners' court of such county in open session, requesting such court to order an election to be held in such county or political subdivision thereof said petition to state the territory within which an election is requested and the kinds of animals to be effected and also for what portions of the year it is desired to prohibit such stock from running at large, or whether the entire year, it shall be the duty of said commissioners' court to order such election to be held within such territory as may be petitioned for, naming the kinds of animals to be affected thereby and as designated in the order for such election; and such commissioners' court shall also designate in said order of election the time within which such stock is to be prohibited from running at large, whether for the entire year or for portions thereof; which the said court is hereby authorized to do in accordance with the petition therefor. Such commissioners' court is hereby authorized and it is made its duty to provide for the holding of such elections and compensation of officers thereof, provided that the expense of such election shall be borne by the county wherein such election is ordered and held; and provided further that in any such election so to be held the ballots shall read as follows: "For the Running at Large of Domestic Animals," and "Against the Running at Large of Domestic Animals."

Returns of such election shall be made by the presiding officers of the precinct or precincts of the county where such election is held, to the county judge of such county, whose duty it shall be to forthwith call the commissioners' court together for the purpose of canvassing the returns; and if it shall be found by the commissioners' court, upon a canvass of such returns, that a majority of the qualified voters of the county or subdivision thereof wherein such election was held, is in, favor of prohibiting the running at large of such domestic animals as hereinbefore named, then it shall be the duty of the commissioners' court of such county to forthwith declare the result of said election and give public notice thereof by proclamation of such court to be issued and posted within three public places of the county or subdivision thereof in which such election has been held. [Id., § 2 (10h).]

Art. 805g. Same; permitting animals to run at large.—From and after the issuance and posting of the proclamation hereinabove provided for, it shall be unlawful for any owner or keeper of such animals hereinabove designated or any of them to permit such animals as have been voted upon to run at large within such county or subdivision thereof at any time within which the same has been prohibited; and in case of failure or refusal of any owner or keeper of such stock or any of them to comply with such proclamation he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined in any sum not less than five dollars ($5.00) nor more than fifty dollars ($50.00) and each day that any owner or keeper for such owner shall fail to comply with the law as herein provided for, shall constitute a separate offense. The venue of such prosecution shall lie in the counties where the offense is committed. [Id., § 2 (10i).]

Art. 805h. Repeal.—This Act shall not be construed to repeal the laws of this State now in force affecting the public health, which is not clearly in conflict herewith but shall be construed to be cumulative to the said law but all laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed. [Id., § 2 (10j).]

Art. 806. Members of board, inspectors and officers constituted peace officers.—Each member of the said Texas state board of health, and each of its inspectors and officers, is hereby constituted a peace officer, and shall have power to arrest persons violating any of the provisions of the sanitary code [to be adopted by the board], of the violation of any public health, sanitary or quarantine law of the state; and such member, officer or inspector may so arrest such offenders without warrant when the offense is committed within the presence or sight of such member, officer or inspector, but otherwise only when in the execution of a warrant issued by a proper officer. [Act 1909, p. 345.]

Explanatory.—The words in brackets are superseded by the new Sanitary Code (see art. 801, ante).

Art. 807. Sheriff and other officers to do what.—It is hereby made the duty of all sheriffs and their deputies, and constables and their deputies, police officers, town marshals, state rangers, and all other peace officers, to assist in the apprehension and arrest of all persons violating any provisions, rules, ordinances or laws or the sanitary code for Texas, [as it may be adopted by said board,] or for violation of any public health, sanitary or quarantine laws of the sanitary code for Texas, [as it may be adopted by said inspectors and officers of said board,] to apprehend and arrest all persons who may commit any offense against the public health laws of this state, or the rules, regulations, ordinances and laws of the sanitary code for Texas [when adopted, published and promulgated by said board of health,] as provided in this law, when charged to execute a warrant of arrest issued by the proper officer for the apprehension and arrest of all persons charged with so offending. [Id., p. 346.]

Explanatory.—The words in brackets are superseded by the new Sanitary Code (see art. 801, ante).

Art. 808. When and by whom buildings and premises may be examined and inspected.—The members of the board of health and every person duly authorized by them, upon presentation of proper authority in writing, are hereby empowered, whenever they may deem it necessary in pursuance of their duties, to enter into, examine, investigate, inspect and view all grounds, public buildings, factories, slaughter houses, packing houses, abattoirs, dairies, bakeries, manufactories, hotels, restaurants and all other public places and public buildings where they may deem it proper to enter, for the discovery and suppression of disease, and for the enforcement of the rules, regulations and ordinances of the sanitary code for Texas [after it has been adopted, promulgated and published by the board] for the enforcement of any and all health laws, sanitary laws or quarantine regulations of this state. [Id., p. 346.]

Explanatory.—The words in brackets are superseded by the new Sanitary Code (see art. 801, ante).

Art. 809. Oaths may be administered, when and by whom.—The members of said board of health and its officers are hereby severally authorized and empowered to administer oaths and to summon witnesses and compel their attendance in all matters proper for the said board to investigate, such as the determination of nuisances, investigation of public water supplies, investigation of any sanitary conditions within the state, investigation of the existence of infection or the investigation of any and all matters requiring the exercise of the discretionary powers invested in said board and its officers and members, and in the general scope of its authority invested by this law. The several district judges and courts are hereby charged with the duty of aiding said board in its investigations and in compelling due observance of this law, and, in the event any witness summoned by said board or any of the officers or members of the same, shall prove disobedient or disrespectful to the lawful authority of such board, officer or member, such person shall be punished by the district court of the county in which such witness is summoned to appear as for contempt of said district court. [Id., p. 346.]

Art. 810. Witness testifying falsely guilty of perjury.—Any witness, when summoned to appear before said board, who shall falsely testify as to any matters proper for the determination of any question which the board may be investigating, shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be punished as provided by law for the offense of perjury. [Id., p. 346.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 363.

Art. 812. [480] Of roads, streets, or bridges.—If any person shall wilfully obstruct or injure, or cause to be obstructed or injured in any manner whatsoever, any public road or highway, or any street or alley in any incorporated town or city, or any public bridge or causeway, he shall be fined in a sum not exceeding two hundred dollars. [Act 1913, p. 315, ch. 147, § 4, amending Art. 812, revised Pen. Code.]

See art. 823, post. See, also, art. 154, C. C. P. and note.

Explanatory.—Act 1913, ch. 147, was approved Apr. 7, 1913, and is an act relating to the powers of cities containing over 5000 inhabitants. Section 4 of this act, in which the amending provision is contained, recites: “ * * * Among the other powers that may be exercised by any such city, the following are hereby enumerated for greater certainty: * * * To enforce all ordinances necessary to protect health, life and property, and to prevent and summarily abate and remove all nuisances and to preserve and enforce the good government, order and security of the city and its inhabitants, and as incident to giving effect to the provisions hereof article 812 of the Penal Code of the state of Texas is hereby amended so as to hereafter read as follows:” (Text as above.) At the same session of the Legislature, but by an act approved Apr. 3, 1915 (ch. 128, p. 258) art. 812 of the Penal Code was again amended, reducing the maximum penalty for violation in the same manner as the later act above referred to, but extending the operation of the article to unincorporated towns or cities, and to bridges or causeways “within this state.” By this act the article is made to read as follows:

If any person shall wilfully obstruct or injure or cause to be obstructed or injured, in any manner whatsoever, any public road or highway, or any street or alley, in any incorporated or unincorporated town or city or any public bridge or causeway within this State, he shall, upon conviction, be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred dollars ($200.00). [Act 1913, p. 258, ch. 128, § 1, amending Art. 812, revised Pen. Code.]

That the design of the two acts was the same is indicated by the emergency clause in the earlier amendment, which is as follows: "The fact that corporation courts have jurisdiction only to try offenses where the fine to be imposed shall not exceed two hundred dollars, and the further fact that the Court of Criminal Appeals of Texas has held that a city ordinance imposing a less fine than five hundred dollars for obstructing streets is void, by reason of being in conflict with the State law; and whereas, it is desirable that incorporated cities and towns should be clothed with authority to pass ordinances controlling their streets and alleys, and the fact that such cities and towns, incorporated under the general law, now have no such authority, creates an emergency and an imperative public necessity," etc. Inasmuch as a question may arise as to whether chapter 128 may be operative in spite of chapter 147, the compilers have set out the text of both amendments, with full explanation of the situation.

The original article reads as follows: "If any person shall willfully obstruct or injure, or cause to be obstructed or injured in any manner whatsoever, any public road or highway, or any street or alley in any incorporated town or city, or any public bridge or causeway, he shall be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars."

1. Offense.—Where one owned land on both sides of a public road crossed by a creek spanned by a bridge, the fact that persons could not cross the creek except on the bridge, did not authorize him to fence the creek's banks from his land to the bridge. Cornelison v. State, 40 App. 159, 49 S. W. 384.

One is indictable for obstructing a public road where he places his fence along the same, though he leaves enough open way for the travel of the public, and also for closing up the remaining portion of the road by a fence. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

Where the public road was not laid out at the point designated as having been obstructed, and the public were authorized to use the land which defendant fenced only until such time as he saw fit to inclose it, and such inclosure did not interfere with the road as laid out by the viewers and adopted by the commissioners' court, defendant was not guilty of obstructing a highway. Farr v. State, 55 App. 271, 116 S. W. 570.

If accused, as his father's employé, assisted in fencing a road, believing that his father had a right to do so, and knowing of no criminal intent of his father to obstruct the road, he was guilty of no offense. Craighead v. State, 55 App. 339, 116 S. W. 579.

2. Existence of highway.—A public road is one established as such by order of the commissioners' court in accordance with law. For the law regulating the establishment, etc., of public roads, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, title 119, and Amendatory Act of 18 Leg., special session, p. 19. Act of 19 Leg., p. 25 and p. 92. In order to condemn private property to public uses, the law authorizing and directing it must be strictly observed and pursued, and the performance of what the law requires is a condition precedent to the authority to condemn. A public road cannot be laid out and established without the requirements of the law in such cases having first been complied with. Davidson v. State, 16 App. 336. To constitute a road ordered to be laid out by the commissioners' court, a public road, the designation of its locality by reference to natural objects, if from the nature of the country that can be done, and the adoption thereof by the county court, is sufficient; and it is as effectual as if made by passing over the ground, marking trees, or setting up mounds. Floyd v. State, 25 Tex. 277.

Compliance with the requirements of the statute is essential to the laying out and establishment of a road. Davidson v. State, 16 App. 336; Floyd v. Turner, 23 Tex. 292.

A road not located in accordance with the order of the commissioners' court establishing it is not a public road. Owen v. State, 24 App. 201, 5 S. W. 830.

Where a third class road is established, the owner of the land upon which it is located, who has consented to such location, without compensation therefor, may erect gates across such road, such as are described in the statute. But if the land has been condemned in accordance with law, he has no right to erect such gates. Conner v. State, 21 App. 176, 17 S. W. 157.

It is not necessary, to constitute a public road, that all obstructions be removed from it, and, though a part of such a road is under fence, the remaining part which is open to travel cannot be obstructed. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

A conviction of obstructing a public road cannot be sustained, where it appears that the obstruction was placed, not in a public road, as created by the commissioners' court, but on a passageway adjoining the road, owned by accused and not shown to have been dedicated to public use. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 622.

3. — Authority to establish.—Only the commissioners court, as such, is authorized to establish and designate a public road. Ehlers v. State, 44 App. 156, 69 S. W. 148.

4. — Notice of laying out.—On trial for obstructing a public road it is not necessary to prove that notice of its laying out was given to the land owners. Ewing v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 618.

5. — Oath of commissioners.—A public road cannot be laid out and established without the requirements of the law in such cases having first been complied with, and one of the prerequisites is that those appointed to lay out the road shall, before proceeding to act as such, take the oath prescribed by statute. Davidson v. State, 16 App. 336.

6. — Payment of damages.—A condition precedent to the authority of the commissioners' court to take a person's land for a public road, is that said court, in the manner provided by law, shall ascertain the damage thereby accruing to such owner, and make compensation to him for the same. And changing a public road of the third class to one of the first class is taking the owner's land over which the road passes. Thompson v. State, 22 App. 328, 3 S. W. 232. And so is changing the road from a second to a third class one. Bradley v. State, 22 App. 330, 2 S. W. 828.

When a road has been laid out substantially in accordance with the law, the fact that a land owner across whose land such road runs has not received any damages, nor been allowed damages by the commissioners' court, does not justify him in obstructing such road. Crouch v. State, 39 App. 145, 45 S. W. 578.

A road which has been laid out and worked and used as a public road for fifteen years, although the order establishing it does not show that damages for taking the land were allowed or that he was notified of the proceedings, is a public road. Ward v. State, 42 App. 435, 60 S. W. 757.

7. — Adverse or permissive use.—In a prosecution for obstructing a public road the character of the road may be established as public by evidence of long continued use as such, and by an order of the county court assigning hands to work on it as a public road. Berry v. State, 12 App. 249.

In a prosecution for obstructing a public road the character of the road may be shown by proof of long continued use of it as such and by an order of the county court assigning hands to work on it as a public road, but a user by the public merely for a short time will not make it a public road. Hall v. State, 13 App. 269.

Mere travel over a road for a short period does not make it a public road. Day v. State, 14 App. 26.

Permissive use of road over another's land held not sufficient to establish right in public. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 736.

A road laid out, worked and recognized as a public road for fifteen years is a public road. Ward v. State, 42 App. 435, 60 S. W. 757; Race v. State, 43 App. 438, 66 S. W. 560.

Evidence showing that the road at the point of obstruction had never been designated, but was used by the public by the consent of the owner until such time as he should elect to inclose it; he was not guilty of obstruction, citing Is-ham v. State, 49 App. 324, 92 S. W. 808. Farr v. State, 55 App. 271, 116 S. W. 570.

Where a county commissioners' court ordered a road to be opened between two sections of land, and the county surveyor found that the defendant had a part of the adjoining section fenced, and had been in possession of such portion for more than 10 years, claiming title thereto, and he was given no notice of the appointment of a jury of freeholders to view the road as prescribed by law, he was not criminally responsible for obstructing the road, where he rebuilt his fence upon its being cut down by the road overseer in opening up the road. Lewis v. State, 64 App. 110, 141 S. W. 532.

Where, at the time a road was laid out by a jury of view on the line of a survey, there was an old road crossing such survey diagonally, and the owner of such survey, who was a member of the jury, told the other members that the public might continue to use the old road until he chose to fence the survey, the use of the old road by the public was not adverse to his title. Rust v. State, 71 App. 283, 158 S. W. 519.

In a prosecution for obstructing a public road, evidence for the state that overseers had been appointed for the road for every year from 1878 down to the trial would have supported a finding that the state had acquired title by limitation, where the road did not coincide with the road as laid out by the commissioners' court. Rust v. State, 71 App. 283, 158 S. W. 519.

8. — Conclusiveness of report of jury.—Where the jury of review reported the road laid out followed a certain boundary line, but the road actually laid out was two hundred yards from the reported route—that the reported route was never laid out or marked upon the ground, and had never been used or worked as a public road, but that the road as actually laid out and marked had been used by the public, and worked by the road overseer, it was held that the true public road was that actually used by the public, and recognized by the county authorities, and not the route reported by the jury of review. Day v. State, 14 App. 26.

The action of the commissioners' court in laying out and adopting a public road as reported by the jury of review cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding by showing a want of the notice of the sitting of the jury of review, prescribed by Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, art. 4691, though the judgment of the commissioners' court establishing the road does not contain any recitation of notice. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

The report of a jury of view appointed to lay out a road and the order of commissioners' court adopting such report could not be varied by the testimony of a juror that the report did not correctly describe the highway as in fact surveyed and adopted by the jury. Rust v. State, 71 App. 283, 158 S. W. 519.

9. — Abandonment.—The evidence showed that the road passed through defendant's land; that it had never been formally opened by the commissioner's court; that it had been used by travelers, but had been practically abandoned before the defendant fenced it. Defendant testified that he believed that he had a right to fence the land, and that the fence was built without any intention of violating the law; held, that the evidence is insufficient to support a conviction. Meyer v. State, 37 App. 460, 36 S. W. 255.

10. — Proof of existence.—A variance as to the road is immaterial on trial, if it is shown to be the same road alleged. Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304. It is not necessary to prove a classification; and proof that defendant acted as overseer is sufficient to show notification of his appointment, etc. Id. Under the Republic (1st Cong., p. 157) the commissioners could designate the route by natural objects, without going over the ground, marking trees, etc.; and if this designation was acted on by the county court, its status as a public road was fixed. Floyd v. State, 25 Tex. 277.

The public character of the road may be established, not only by the order of the commissioners' court, but also by proof that it has long been used as a public road, and that the commissioners' court has recognized it as such by assigning hands to work it, or by an order declaring it to be a road of a certain class. Michel v. State, 12 App. 108; Berry v. State, Id. 249; Jolly v. State, 19 App. 76; McWhorter v. State, 43 Tex. 666.

Evidence which shows that the fence alleged to be the obstruction was on the land of the accused when the road through it was established, and that the said road was never opened after it was established, will not support a conviction for obstructing a public road. Rankin v. State, 25 App. 694, 8 S. W. 932.

11. Estoppel.—One who, with full knowledge of the establishment of a public road subsequently petitions the commissioners' court to change such road, is estopped to question the legality of its establishment. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

12. Streets and alleys.—The ordinance of a town authorizing the occupation of six feet of sidewalk for the purpose of a fruit stand would be a complete defense to obstruction if only the six feet were occupied. Echols v. State, 12 App. 615.

It was no offense under this article before its amendment to obstruct a street or alley in an unincorporated town. McClanahan v. State, 21 App. 429, 2 S. W. 813; Echols v. State, 12 App. 615; Martin v. State, 72 App. 454, 162 S. W. 1145.

Where a state law provides as a penalty for the obstruction of the streets of towns a fine not to exceed $500, a town ordinance punishing the obstruction of its streets by fine not in excess of $25 conflicts with the state law, and is void. Ex parte Cross, 44 App. 376, 71 S. W. 289.

A town ordinance punishing the obstruction of its streets by a fine not in excess of $2500, being in conflict with this section, is void. Ex parte Cross, 44 App. 376, 71 S. W. 289.

13. Reconstructing road.—Where accused, against the protests and objection of the properly constituted county authorities, undertook to determine for himself that a road properly constructed by such authorities was not properly constructed, and attempted to take the matter and the law into his own hands and construct it differently to suit his own desires, he was guilty of violating this article. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 508.

14. Willfully.—The word "willful," when used in a penal statute, means more than its import in common parlance. It means with evil intent, or legal malice, or without reasonable ground to believe the act to be lawful. Thomas v. State, 14 App. 200; Rose v. State, 19 App. 470; Loyd v. State, Id. 321; Shubert v. State, 16 App. 645; Trice v. State, 17 App. 43; Yoakum v. State, 21 App. 260, 17 S. W. 254; Parsons v. State, 26 App. 192, 9 S. W. 490; Musgrave v. State, 28 App. 57, 11 S. W. 927.

Intent is a constituent element of this offense, and it must appear that the obstruction was willful on the part of the accused. Such intent is not to be presumed from the act of obstruction; but it must be proved as a fact, as such fact is proved in other offenses where it is an element of the offense. Brinkoeter v. State, 14 App. 67; s. c., 16 App. 72; Shubert v. State, 16 App. 645; Trice v. State, 17 App. 43; Loyd v. State, 19 App. 321; Sanborn v. State, 21 App. 155, 17 S. W. 475; Conner v. State, Id. 176, 17 S. W. 157; Baker v. State, Id. 264, 17 S. W. 144; Murphy v. State, 23 App. 333, 4 S. W. 906; Guthrie v. State, Id. 339, 4 S. W. 906. And road must be legally established. Owen v. State, 24 App. 201, 5 S. W. 830; Rankin v. State, 25 App. 694, 8 S. W. 932; Parsons v. State, 26 App. 192, 9 S. W. 490; Varnell v. State, 26 App. 56, 9 S. W. 65; Laroe v. State, 30 App. 374, 17 S. W. 934.

When a road was obstructed by the accused, not willfully, but with the belief, based on good cause, that he had the legal right to obstruct it, he is not guilty of an offense. Owen v. State, 24 App. 201, 5 S. W. 830.

A person who, under a mistake of fact, erects a fence encroaching on a public road, without any intention to obstruct or knowledge that he is obstructing it, is not guilty of willfully obstructing a public road. Sanborn v. State, 21 App. 155, 17 S. W. 475.

The act of obstruction must be affirmatively shown to have been "wilful." Laroe v. State, 30 App. 374, 17 S. W. 934; Parsons v. State, 26 App. 192, 9 S. W. 490; Cornelison v. State, 40 App. 159, 49 S. W. 384.

In a prosecution for wilfully obstructing a public road, the court charged that by the word "wilful" is meant that defendant knew at the time of the alleged obstruction that such road was a public road of the second class, and said obstruction was placed there with an evil intent. Held a proper legal definition of the term "wilful." Cornelison v. State, 40 App. 159, 49 S. W. 384.

The court in defining the offense should use the word "wilfully" as this is of the essence of the offense and should also define its meaning. Dyrley v. State (Cr. App.) 63 S. W. 631.

Evidence that accused went to the county commissioner of the precinct and inquired about the boundaries of the road and was authorized by the county commissioner to fence the road was sufficient to present an issue of fact for the jury whether accused's act was willful, which should have been submitted by a proper instruction, although there was evidence for the state that he was not authorized to fence the road by the county commissioner, since if the jury believed the evidence first referred to they could hardly have found that he acted with evil intent and legal malice. Rust v. State, 71 App. 283, 158 S. W. 519.

In a prosecution for violating the statute prohibiting the obstruction of streets in an incorporated town, evidence that accused was advised by the mayor and others that he had a right to place the posts, which were the alleged obstruction, where he placed them after incorporation was voted out, was admissible on the question of wilfulness. Martin v. State, 72 App. 454, 162 S. W. 1145.

Where accused claimed that he acted solely to protect his premises from back-water caused by the road, evidence that when a county commissioner sent word to accused declining to take any action, and stating that the road was not the cause of the water backing up, accused said: "It seems we have no commissioner, and no commissioners' court; just let's take the matter in our own hands and attend to it," and that when warned by a constable that he and those aiding him would be prosecuted, he replied, "Let's go ahead and cut it in five or six places anyhow, and just let them prosecute"—was relevant on the question of wilfulness. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 508.

Where it appeared that defendant stated that he did not wish to do anything in respect to closing certain lands, except what was agreeable to the commissioners' court, and that he would remove any fence that they did not want where he had placed it, the charge, especially where there was an issue of wilfulness, should have defined the word "wilful." Carney v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 155.

15. Advice as defense.—But after the road has been legally established the owner of land condemned for that purpose cannot disregard the order of the commissioners court even on the advice of attorneys that the order establishing the road was void. Crouch v. State, 39 App. 145, 45 S. W. 573.

The fact that defendant obstructed the road after he knew that it had been used as a third-class road was willful, and that his attorney advised him that the order was void was no defense as tending to show that his act was not willfully done. Ward v. State, 42 App. 435, 60 S. W. 757.

An attorney's opinion that the road is not a legal one is no defense on a trial for obstructing the road. Ward v. State, 42 App. 435, 60 S. W. 758.

One bound by the judgment of the commissioners' court establishing a public road cannot, in the face of the facts and his knowledge of the establishment of the road, in a prosecution for obstructing such public road, show his good faith or negative the imputation of wilfulness in stopping up the road, by evidence as to his belief based on what others may have advised him in regard to fencing up the road. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

16. Obstruction as negligence.—An obstruction of a street in an incorporated city in violation of this article is as to a person injured while using the street at the place of obstruction, negligence per se. Shippers Compress Warehouse Co. v. Davidson, 35 Civ. App. 558, 80 S. W. 1033.

17. Erection of gates.—To erect a gate across a public road of the first or second class constitutes an illegal obstruction of same. Jolly v. State, 19 App. 76.

The erection of a gate across a road of the third class would not have constituted an illegal obstruction of same, provided defendant complied with the requirements of the law in the construction thereof. Jolly v. State, 19 App. 76.

18. Fences.—The fact that after the establishment of a road one places his fence within the bounds of said road, and the commissioners' court does not remove the obstruction, does not relieve such person of liability for subsequently closing up the road by fencing it. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

19. Complaint, information or indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 364, 366.

An indictment under this article need not allege the materiality of the obstruction, or that the road had been duly laid off, or negative the right to obstruct. State v. Collins, 38 Tex. 189. It need not allege the class of the road, but if it does, the allegation is descriptive and must be proved. Meuly v. State, 3 App. 382. It may be charged that the defendant "did unlawfully and wilfully obstruct and cause to be obstructed a public road." Day v. State, 14 App. 26.

An indictment charging the obstruction of a public road need not allege the materiality of the obstruction, or that the road was laid off by the proper public authorities, or negative defendant's right to obstruct same. State v. Collins, 38 Tex. 189.

An indictment charging an obstruction of a public road need not allege the particular class of road; but when the offense charged is described with unnecessary particularity it is necessary to prove it substantially as described. Meuly v. State, 3 Tex. App. 382.

Indictment must allege that road was a public one. McClanahan v. State, 21 App. 429, 2 S. W. 813.

An indictment charging defendant with wilfully obstructing a public road and highway does not charge two distinct offenses. Laroe v. State, 30 App. 374, 17 S. W. 934.

An indictment held sufficient to charge obstruction of a public road. Richardson v. State, 46 App. 83, 79 S. W. 536.

The complaint or indictment in a prosecution for violating the statute before its amendment, which prohibits the wilful obstruction of a street in an incorporated town, was defective for not alleging that the town at the time was an incorporated town. Martin v. State, 72 App. 454, 162 S. W. 1145; McClanahan v. State, 21 App. 429, 2 S. W. 813; Echols v. State, 12 App. 615.

20. — Variance.—In a prosecution on a complaint and information charging the obstruction of an avenue extending north and south on the east side of an addition to a town, and known as G. avenue, by erecting a fence across it, where the only witness testified that the avenue obstructed ran east and west, and where the maps in evidence did not show any such avenue in the addition, the proof did not correspond with the allegations. Carney v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 155.

21. Evidence.—Defendant's testimony that previous to the obstruction he was informed by the person who laid out the road that he laid it out without authority is admissible on the question of willfulness. Laroe v. State, 30 App. 374, 17 S. W. 934.

Orders of the commissioners' court requiring defendant to open a dam which he had built alongside a public highway are not admissible against defendant in a prosecution for obstructing the highway predicated on the building of a dam, where defendant admitted having built the dam. Richardson v. State, 46 App. 83, 79 S. W. 536.

In a prosecution for obstructing a public road defendant cannot show good faith, and contradict the imputation of willfulness, by showing the prosecution by him of injunction proceedings with reference to the road subsequent to his obstruction thereof. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

In a prosecution for obstructing a public road by fencing same, defendant's father being the owner of the land on both sides thereof, it was error to exclude testimony of a county commissioner that the father obtained verbal permission to locate the road at his own expense, where the court instructed that the fact that accused was his father's employé did not justify his act; the testimony tending to show a lack of willfulness or criminal intent on accused's part. Craighead v. State, 55 App. 339, 116 S. W. 579.

22. — Sufficiency.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of obstructing a public road. Farrier v. State, 54 App. 536, 113 S. W. 763; Meyer v. State, 37 App. 460, 36 S. W. 255.

Evidence held to support a conviction. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 508.

23. Instructions.—An instruction to acquit defendant of obstructing a road if the jury believed from the evidence that he was not guilty held erroneous. Brinkoeter v. State, 14 App. 67.

It was not error to refuse a charge that, if defendant thought he was placing the obstruction on his own land, he should be acquitted, since the material question was whether it was in fact a public road. Cornelison v. State, 40 App. 159, 49 S. W. 384.

Where there was no question that defendant closed the road at a point in the road as designated by the jury of review and the commissioners' court, a charge that the true public road was the one actually laid out on the ground by the jury of review, and not the land lines or the route described in the report of the jury of review, was not prejudicial. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

An instruction defining a public road as one actually reviewed and laid out on the ground by a jury of review appointed by and acting under authority from the commissioners' court, their written report describing the road having been approved and recorded by the commissioners' court, was proper. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

A charge confining the investigation of the jury to the period between the 23d of February and the 27th of June, was not subject to criticism on the ground that it deprived defendant of any right under a plea of former acquittal of obstructing the same public road on the 14th of January, but it rather conserved that right. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

An instruction that there was testimony as to the location of accused's fence, which is claimed by the state to be the obstruction, but the testimony on that point was conflicting, and that the jury was not required to harmonize conflicts in the evidence, but were free to believe any of the witnesses, was objectionable as misleading. Jacobs v. State, 55 App. 149, 115 S. W. 531.

Where accused testified that he had obtained permission from the commissioners' court to survey the land at his own expense and locate the boundary lines of the road, and that he surveyed the land and placed a fence five feet from the line on his own land, leaving that much land for the benefit of the public not called for by the field notes, the refusal to charge that if accused, when he built the fence, believed that it was built on his own land, or on the boundary line of the road, he should be acquitted, was erroneous. Craighead v. State, 55 App. 460, 117 S. W. 816.

24. — Willful.—The giving of instructions that willfulness would be presumed from the act of obstructing and that when the facts constituting the offense have been proven it devolves on defendant to show facts in justification held error. Brinkoeter v. State, 14 App. 67.

Failure to instruct on the meaning of "willful" held error. Trice v. State, 17 App. 43.

Failure to define "wilful" held error. Loyd v. State, 19 App. 321.

The defense being that the road was not wilfully obstructed, it was error for the court to fail to instruct as to the statutory meaning of the word "wilfully," the omission being called to the attention of the court. Sneed v. State, 28 App. 56, 11 S. W. 834.

In such prosecution it was incumbent on the court to define the word "wilfully" to the jury. Dyrley v. State (Cr. App.) 63 S. W. 631.

Where, in a prosecution for obstructing a road, the court instructed that, in order to convict, the jury must believe that the act was wilful, it was not necessary to give defendant's requested instructions on wilfulness. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

25. Amount of fine.—Where accused, against the protests and objection of the properly constituted county authorities, cut a solid smooth gravel road, and put in a wooden culvert, thereby injuring and obstructing the road, and later commenced cutting the road at another point, a fine of $50 was proper. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 508.

26. Venue.—A conviction of obstructing a highway will be set aside where the statement of facts fails to show that the road alleged to have been obstructed was situated in the county. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 39 S. W. 678.

27. Plea of acquittal.—In a prosecution for obstructing a road on March 3, the striking of a plea showing an acquittal of obstructing the same road on January 14th held not prejudicial. Kelley v. State, 46 App. 23, 80 S. W. 382.

Art. 813. [481] Riding or driving over bridges.—If any person shall ride or drive over any bridge belonging to any county, or to any municipal or private corporation, faster than a walk, he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. [Act 22d Leg., p. 131.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 365.

Art. 813a. Entering on toll bridge with intent to avoid payment of toll.—If any person or persons in this State shall wilfully enter upon any toll bridge maintained wholly or partly within this State without the consent of those in charge of such bridge, with the intent to avoid the payment of the toll lawfully chargeable for crossing the same, such person or persons shall be deemed trespassers and guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1915, p. 154, ch. 100, § 1.]

Art. 814. Name of owner of automobile or motor vehicle to be registered.—All owners of automobiles or motor vehicles shall, before using such vehicles or machines upon the public roads, streets or driveways, register with the county clerk of the county in which he resides, his name, which name shall be registered by the county clerk in consecutive order, in a book to be kept for that purpose, and shall be numbered in the order of their registration; and it shall be the duty of such owner or owners to display in a conspicuous place on said machine the number so registered, which number shall be in figures not less than six inches in height. The county clerk shall be paid by such owner or owners a fee of fifty cents for each machine registered. [Act 1907, p. 193.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732L.

Art. 815. Speed of regulated.—No automobile or motor vehicle shall be driven or operated upon any public road, street or driveway at a greater rate of speed than eighteen miles an hour, or upon any public road, street or driveway, within the built up portions of any city, town or village, the limits of which shall be fixed by the municipal officers thereof, at a greater rate of speed than eight miles an hour, except where such city or town may, by an ordinance or bylaw, allow a greater rate of speed; provided, the speed limit shall not apply to race courses or speedways. [Id., p. 193.]

Validity of act.—The validity of this article is not affected by art. 816, declaring that no operator of an automobile shall drive the same at any speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the travel and use of the road by others, which is but a limitation on the speed rates fixed in art. 815, and though art. 816 is invalid because uncertain, art. 815 is valid. Byrd v. State, 59 App. 513, 129 S. W. 620.

Construction of act.—This article creates two offenses, and the exception relates only to the latter offense. Byrd v. State, 59 App. 513, 129 S. W. 620.

Existence of road.—A conviction for the violation of this article must be reversed, where the evidence does not establish that the road where the automobile was run was a public road. Allen v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1151.

Excessive speed as negligence.—The driver of an automobile which was injured in turning to avoid a railroad locomotive at a crossing was guilty of negligence per se in approaching at from 15 to 25 miles per hour in violation of this article, in the absence of any showing that a greater speed was permitted by ordinance; and no recovery could be had from the railroad. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. v. Rucker (Civ. App.) 167 S. W. 301.

Intent.—This article does not make the intent of an operator of an automobile an element of the offense; but an operator must at his peril keep within the statutory limit. Goodwin v. State, 63 App. 140, 138 S. W. 399.

Defenses.—A driver of an automobile is not relieved from the penalty for operating it at a speed in excess of that fixed by Acts 30th Leg. c. 96, on the ground that the automobile was under the control of a third person riding therein, unless the driver shows that he was under duress and drove the automobile at the instance of the third person. Goodwin v. State, 63 App. 140, 138 S. W. 399.

Indictment or complaint.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 732m.

A complaint alleging that accused operated an automobile at a greater speed than 18 miles an hour on a public road not a speedway charges a violation of this article. Goodwin v. State, 63 App. 140, 138 S. W. 399.

— Negating exception.—Indictment to be sufficient must negative exception named in the article. Byrd v. State, 59 App. 513, 129 S. W. 620.

Art. 816. Not to be operated as to endanger life or limb.—No person in charge of an automobile or motor vehicle on any public road, street or driveway, shall drive the same at any speed greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the traffic and use of the public road, street or driveway by others, or so as to endanger the life or limb of any person thereon. [Id., p. 193.]

Validity of article.—The validity of art. 815, fixing the maximum speed of automobiles on public roads, is not affected by this article which is but a limitation on the speed rates fixed in art. 815, and though art. 816 is invalid because uncertain, art. 815 is valid. Byrd v. State, 59 App. 513, 129 S. W. 620.

Effect on civil duty.—Even if this article was too indefinite to be enforced as a penal statute, it was sufficient as a remedial statute imposing a civil duty so as to render its violation negligence per se. Solan & Billings v. Pasche (Civ. App.) 153 S. W. 672.

Art. 817. Racing on street or public road prohibited.—All drivers or operators of automobiles or motor vehicles are prohibited from racing upon any public road, street or driveway. [Id., p. 193.]

Art. 818. Operator when signaled shall come to a standstill.—Any person driving or operating an automobile or motor vehicle shall, at the request, or signal by putting up the hand, or by other visible signal from a person riding or driving a horse or horses or other domestic animal, cause such vehicle or machine to come to a standstill as quickly as possible, and to remain stationary long enough to allow such animal to pass. [Id., p. 193.]

Art. 819. Shall have attached suitable bell to give notice of approach.—Every driver or operator of an automobile or motor vehicle shall have attached thereto a suitable bell or other appliance for giving notice of its approach, so that, when such attachment is rung or otherwise operated it may be heard a distance of three hundred feet, and shall carry a lighted lamp between one hour after and one hour before sunrise. [Id., p. 193.]

Art. 820. Penalty for violation.—Every one who violates any of the six preceding articles shall be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., p. 193.]

Art. 821. [482] Destroy, injure or misplace bridge, culvert, ditch, signboard, etc.—Any person who shall knowingly or willfully destroy, injure or misplace any bridge, culvert, drain, sewer, ditch, signboard, mile post, or tile, or anything of like character placed upon any road for the benefit of the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, punished by fine of not more than five hundred dollars, and shall be liable to the county and any person injured for all damages caused thereby. [Act 22d Leg., ch. 97, p. 149, § 22.]

Art. 822. [482a] Unlawful to carry over any public road or culvert any traction engine, when.—It shall be unlawful for any person to transport or carry over any public bridge or culvert, upon any public road or highway, or any street or alley in any incorporated town or city, any traction engine with lugs on the wheels thereof, and to carry or transport over any such public bridge or culvert any traction engine or separator, without having first provided and placed in position skids upon which the wheels of said traction engine or separator shall be run, which said skids shall be not less than three inches thick, twelve inches in width and sixteen feet in length; and any person violating the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act 1907, p. 189.]

Art. 823. [483] Not applicable, when.—No person shall be punished, under article 812, who places obstructions in the streets or alleys of an incorporated city or town for purposes of building or improvement, under the sanction of the corporate authorities of such city or town.

Art. 824. [484] Commissioners' court may regulate.—Nothing in this chapter contained shall be so construed as to prevent the commissioners' courts of the several counties, or the municipal authorities of towns or cities, from adopting such regulations as they may deem proper relative to the removal of obstructions from public roads, streets or bridges, and to enforce the same by due process of law.

See notes under art. 812.

Art. 825. [485] Commissioners' court may control streets, etc., when.—In all cities and incorporated towns in the state of Texas in which, from any cause, there is not a de facto municipal government in the active discharge of their official duties, the commissioners' court of the county in which such city or incorporated town is situated shall assume and have control of the streets and alleys thereof, and shall have the same worked under the law and regulations for the working of public roads; and such streets and alleys, for the purposes of this law, shall be held and denominated public roads; provided, that all residents of any city or town having no de facto city government, not otherwise exempt from road duty, shall be liable to road service as in other cases. [Act March 4, 1885, p. 25.]

Art. 826. [485a] Wilful obstruction of public ditch or diversion of water.—If any person shall wilfully obstruct any public ditch, or shall wilfully divert the water from its proper channel, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than five nor more than five hundred dollars, and shall also be liable for any and all damages accruing to any person or persons or corporation or county for any such act. [Acts of 1895, p. 155; Act 1897, p. 99.]

Explanatory.—In the revised Penal Code the above article was ascribed to Acts 1895, p. 155. The provision was re-enacted, without change of language, by Acts 1897, p. 99, § 15. See art. 836, and note thereunder.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 379.

Art. 826a. Depositing glass and other substances in highway.—That hereafter it shall be unlawful for a person to wilfully throw or deposit in or on any public road, street, or alley any glass bottle, glass, nails, tacks, hoops, wire, cans or any other substance, likely to injure any person, animal, automobile or vehicle and any person violating any of the provisions hereof, shall upon conviction thereof, be fined any sum not less than five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1913, p. 131, ch. 71, § 1.]

CHAPTER TWO

OFFENSES PERTAINING TO PUBLIC ROADS, [DRAINAGE, LEVEES], AND IRRIGATION

Art.	Art.
827. Refusal to serve as overseer.	837c. Penalty for unlawful interference.
828. Failure of duty as overseer.	837d. Interference with headgates, etc., forbidden.
829. Same subject continued.	837e. Penalty for injuring works.
830. Commissioner failing to comply.	837f. Penalty for polluting or obstructing canals, etc.
831. Superintendent failing to comply.	837g. Diversion of water from watershed prohibited when.
831a. Age limitation of workers on public roads, etc.	837h. Same; permit; proceedings.
832. Failure to attend when summoned, etc.	837i. Same; penalty.
833. Failure to open boundary lines.	837j. Johnson Grass and Russian Thistle.
834. Leaving gate open on third class road, etc.	837jj. Same; limitation of preceding article.
835. Violation of irrigation laws.	837k. Artesian wells.
836. Person obstructing ditch constructed under the drainage law.	837l. Waste defined.
836a. Destruction of works constructed by State Levee and Drainage Board.	837m. Penalty for waste.
837. Injuring canal.	837n. Record of boring, etc.
837a. Taking water without permit.	837o. Oil wells.
837b. Use of streams for conveying stored water.	837p. Partial invalidity.

Article 827. [486] Refusal to serve as overseer.—If any person, subject to public road duty under the laws of this state, shall wilfully fail or refuse to serve as overseer of any road in his road district or precinct, when duly appointed as such overseer by the commissioners' court of his county, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars. [Act July 29, 1876, p. 67.]

Duty to accept appointment.—A road overseer has no option of accepting or rejecting an appointment as road overseer, but must perform the service required of him as prescribed, and within the time prescribed. State v. Chinn, 29 Tex. 497.

Ignorance as defense.—Defendant's inability to read and write is no defense in prosecution for wilfully refusing to serve as road overseer. France v. State (Cr. App.) 77 S. W. 452.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 367.

Art. 828. [487] Failure of duty as overseer.—If any overseer of a public road in this state shall wilfully fail, neglect or refuse to perform any duty imposed upon him by law, or shall so fail, neglect or refuse to keep the roads, bridges and causeways in his precinct or district clear of obstructions and in good order, or shall wilfully suffer such roads, bridges or causeways to remain uncleared and out of repair for twenty days at any one time, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than twenty-five dollars. [Id., p. 68.]

Character of road.—It is not necessary to prove that the road has been classified. Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304.

Appointment of overseer.—Proof that the defendant acted as overseer of the road is sufficient evidence of his appointment as such, and that he had been notified of such appointment. Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304. A formal acceptance of such appointment by him need not be shown. State v. Chinn, 29 Tex. 497.

For an order appointing an overseer held sufficient, see Tincher v. State, 19 Tex. 156.

Willful.—To constitute an offense the neglect of duty by road overseer must be shown to have been willful. Such overseer is charged only with reasonable diligence, and if, because of lack of available means, he fails to keep his road in repair, he is not liable. Moore v. State, 27 App. 439, 11 S. W. 457. See, also, Parker v. State, 29 App. 372, 16 S. W. 186; Howell v. State, 29 App. 592, 16 S. W. 533; Laroe v. State, 30 App. 374, 17 S. W. 934.

Removal of obstructions.—An overseer of a public road is not only authorized, but it is made his duty to remove from such road all unauthorized obstructions, and in performing such duty he is justified by the law in removing a fence which has been erected across such road. Schott v. State, 7 App. 616.

Repair of streets.—An indictment will not lie against an overseer for failing to keep a road in repair within the limits of an incorporated city or town, for the reason that the commissioners' court has no jurisdiction over the subject-matter. But where there is not a de facto municipal government, the commissioners' court has jurisdiction to control the streets and alleys of the city or town, and in such case the overseer would be liable. State v. Jones, 18 Tex. 874.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 368.

Indictment need not allege specifically the county in which the road is situated, if it designates said road as leading from the county seat of the county, naming the county, to the line of said county. State v. Lee, 15 Tex. 252. But on exception, the omission to allege the road precinct, by number or otherwise, with sufficient certainty to identify the road assigned, is fatal. Thus to allege, that it was "road number seven in said county," is insufficient. State v. Hail, 21 Tex. 587.

An indictment alleging that defendant was duly elected road overseer of Road Precinct No. 1 of a certain road leading from Austin by certain places to the county line and took upon himself his duties as such, and charging that he failed to keep the roads, bridges, and causeways within his said precinct clear and in good order, sufficiently charged that the offense was committed in Travis County. State v. Lee, 15 Tex. 252.

An indictment for failure to keep the road in repair, is sufficient when it charges that the defendant was overseer of a certain specific precinct of a certain designated public road in the county, and that he willfully suffered such road of which he was overseer to remain uncleared and out of repair for twenty days at one time. State v. Forrest, 30 Tex. 503. It would, perhaps, be better pleading, to designate the twenty days time during which the road was suffered to remain out of repair.

An indictment under the 23d section of the road law was sufficient where it charged that defendant was overseer of a certain precinct of a certain road in the county and neglected to keep same in good repair and suffered same to remain out of repair for twenty days at one time. State v. Forrest, 30 Tex. 503.

An indictment was defective where it failed to show that defendant road overseer was bound by law to keep the road in repair. Massure v. State, 36 Tex. 377.

Variance.—A variance in the description of the road in the indictment, and that described in the order establishing such road, is immaterial if it be proved to be the same road, and the description of it in the indictment is appropriate. Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304.

Art. 829. [488] Same subject.—If any overseer of a public road in this state shall fail, within six months after his appointment as such, to measure the road or roads in his precinct or district and set up posts of lasting timber at the end of each mile leading from the court house, or some other noted place or town, and to mark on such posts in legible words and figures the distance in miles to such court house, or other noted place, or shall fail, when any such post is destroyed or removed, to replace the same with another marked as the original, or shall fail to affix or set up at the forks of all public roads in his district or precinct index boards with the directions pointing toward the most noted places to which they lead, he shall be fined in the sum of five dollars. [Id., p. 67.]

Elements of offense.—The neglect to set up mileposts for any consecutive six months is not necessarily an offense. This consists in not doing it within six months after his appointment. State v. Smith, 25 Tex. Supp. 64. Nor does a penalty attach upon a failure to "measure the road," but for failure "to set up mileposts." State v. Mathis, 30 Tex. 506.

Evidence.—Evidence that defendant acted as road overseer was admissible and sufficient proof that he had been notified of his appointment. Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304.

In the prosecution of a road overseer for failure to keep a road in repair, it need not be proven that the road has been classified. Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304.

Burden of proof.—See notes under art. 52, ante, and art. 785, C. C. P.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 370-372.

The indictment need not describe the order establishing a road. Sigler v. State, 17 Tex. 304.

After verdict indictment is sufficient if it describes the road and the breach of duty with such certainty as to notify the defendant of the precise facts constituting the offense. Sennett v. State, 17 Tex. 308.

The omission to allege the road precinct by number or otherwise, with sufficient certainty to identify the road assigned is fatal. Hardeman v. State, 25 Tex. 179.

Where the indictment is for failure to put up mileposts, it must be alleged that such failure was within six months after his appointment as overseer. Hardeman v. State, 25 Tex. 179; State v. Smith, 25 Tex. Supp. 64; State v. Chinn, 29 Tex. 497. It should, in such case, negative the fact that there is any other "noted place or town" between the termini of the precinct. State v. Mathis, 30 Tex. 506.

An indictment describing the road as "road No. 7 in M. county," held insufficient. Hardeman v. State, 25 Tex. 179.

An indictment not describing with certainty the road of which defendant was appointed overseer, held insufficient. Hardeman v. State, 25 Tex. 179.

An indictment of a road overseer for wilfully failing to keep a road in repair, which charges that defendant, "of the county of F.," on a specified date, "in the county and state aforesaid, was the duly appointed overseer of a public road then and there situated," giving the section and precinct, sufficiently avers that the road was in F. county. Howell v. State, 29 App. 592, 16 S. W. 533.

Pleading and proof.—Where the offense is described with unnecessary particularity, it is necessary to prove it substantially as described. Meuly v. State, 3 App. 382.

Where one of the several modes in which the statute may be violated has been selected and declared on, the prosecution can prove no other but must prove the case as alleged. Howell v. State, 29 App. 592, 16 S. W. 533.

Art. 830. [489] Road commissioner failing to comply; penalty.—Any road commissioner who shall wilfully fail to comply with any duty required of him shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act April 6, 1889, 21st Leg., ch. 111, § 5.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 369.

Art. 831. [490] Road superintendent failing to comply; penalty.—Any road superintendent who shall wilfully fail or refuse to comply with any provision of law or order of the commissioners' court shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, punished by fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars for each offense. [Act 22d Leg., ch. 97, p. 149, § 21.]

Counties exempted, see article 6976, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

Art. 831a. Age limitation of workers on public roads, etc.—No person in this state under the age of twenty-one years, or over the age of forty-five years, shall be required to work upon the public roads of this state or upon the streets and alleys of any city or town of this state. [Act 1895, p. 160, ch. 102, § 1.]

Explanatory.—The above provision was omitted from the revised Pen. Code of 1911. As it seems to be unrepealed, and in view of the decision in Berry v. State, 156 S. W. 626, it is inserted in this compilation.

Art. 832. [491] Failure to attend when summoned.—If any person, liable to work upon the public roads, after being legally summoned, shall fail or refuse to attend, either in person or by able and competent substitute, or fail or refuse to furnish his team or tools at the time and place designated by the person summoning him, or to pay to such road overseer the sum of one dollar for each day he may have been notified to work on the public roads, or to pay to such overseer the sum of one dollar and fifty cents for each day he may have been notified to furnish his team for road work, or, having attended, shall fail or refuse to perform good service or any other duty required of him by law, or the person under whom he may work, or, if any one shall fail to comply with any duty required of him as provided by law, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, fined in any sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars. [Act July 29, 1876, p. 60; Act 1899, ch. 15; amended, Act 1901, p. 277.]

Payment of money.—The payment of money in lieu of attendance and work must be made to the overseer. A tender or payment made to an unauthorized person is no defense to a prosecution under the preceding article. Gross v. State, 4 App. 249.

Applicability of act to city.—This article has no application to a citizen of a city which, under its charter, exercises exclusive control over the streets, alleys and public highways within the city limits. Ex parte Roberts, 28 App. 43, 11 S. W. 782.

A town or city incorporated under the general laws has the power, by ordinance, to compel its citizens to work its streets under penalty of fine and imprisonment. Ex parte Bowen, 34 App. 107, 29 S. W. 269.

A city can impose such penalties as it sees fit without reference to the State law in regard to working the roads subject to the limitations of punishment as fixed by the jurisdiction of their local courts. Ex parte Drake, 55 App. 233, 116 S. W. 49.

Residence.—If accused did not make his home in a particular road precinct and was a transient person working in boats on the bay most of the time, he could not be convicted of failing to work the public roads in the district; the state being required to show that he was subject to road duty and had lived within the boundaries of the road precinct long enough to make him a road hand. Anselin v. State, 72 App. 17, 160 S. W. 713.

Complaint and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 373, 374.

A complaint and information which charged that accused was a delinquent poll tax payer in the county, liable under the law to work upon a certain public road, and was legally summoned to do so at a certain time and place by the road commissioner for the district, and wilfully failed and refused to do so, etc., was insufficient because failing to allege that accused was liable and in default of payment of a tax for a year within the period of limitation. Bluitt v. State, 56 App. 525, 121 S. W. 168.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for failure of a delinquent poll tax payer to appear for road work, while a strong inference might arise from an agreed statement of facts reciting that accused was correctly assessed for a poll tax in 1905 for that year by the tax assessor, as shown by the tax rolls of the county, and that he did not pay any poll tax in 1905 or 1906, that a poll tax had been levied for those years, it could not, in the absence of proof to that effect, be assumed that there had been a levy, in the absence of a clear agreement to that effect. Bluitt v. State, 56 App. 525, 121 S. W. 168.

Art. 833. [493] Failure to open boundary lines.—Whenever the commissioners' court of any county in this state shall duly declare the boundary lines between the lands of different persons a public highway, in accordance with law, if any person or owner shall fail, neglect or refuse, for twelve months after legal notice thereof, to leave open his land, free from all obstructions, for ten feet on his side of the line designated, he shall be fined not more than twenty dollars for each month after the twelve months afore-said in which he may so fail, neglect or refuse. [Act July 29, 1876, p. 69.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 375.

Art. 834. [494] Leaving gates open on third-class roads.—Any person or persons placing a gate on or across any third-class road, or on or across any road such as is designated in article 833 of the Penal Code, shall be required to keep said gate and the approaches to the same in good order; and the gate shall be ten feet wide and so constructed as to cause no unnecessary delay to the traveling public in opening and shutting the same, and provide a fastening to hold said gate open till the passengers go through; and such person or persons shall place a permanent hitching post and stile block on each side of, and within sixty feet of, such gate. Any person or persons who may hereafter place a gate on or across a third class road, or on or across any road such as is designated in article 493 [833], who shall wilfully or negligently fail to comply with the requirements of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, may be fined in any sum not less than five nor more than twenty dollars for each offense; and each week of said failure shall constitute a separate offense. Any person or persons who shall wilfully or negligently leave open any gate on or across any third class road, or on or across any road such as is designated in article 493 [833], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, may be fined in any sum as above provided for. [Amended by Act Feb. 2, 1874, S. S., p. 18.]

Construction of act.—For construction of this article, see Jolly v. State, 19 App. 76, and Conner v. State, 21 App. 176, 17 S. W. 157; and note the first mentioned decision to the effect that if the road obstructed by the gate is not a public road of either class, then the leaving open of such a gate would be a violation of article 1250 of this Code.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 376.

Art. 835. [495] Violation of irrigation laws.—If any person amenable to the laws governing irrigation shall fail or refuse to work on any ditch or aqueduct when summoned so to do by the proper authority, he shall be fined not less than one nor more than five dollars. [Act Dec. 20, 1861.]

Explanatory.—The above article seems to have been superseded by the new irrigation acts (Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 4991-5107-105). Arts. 5002m and 5002o, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914 seem to be the only vestige of the old provisions requiring work on irrigation ditches. The new provisions contemplate a civil rather than a criminal remedy against delinquents.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 377.

Art. 836. Persons obstructing ditch constructed under the drainage law.—If any person shall wilfully or negligently obstruct, or cause to be obstructed, any ditch constructed under the drainage law of this state, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1899, p. 100.]

Explanatory.—While the revisers of the Penal Code ascribed the above provision to Act 1899, p. 100, it may have been the design to construct a composite provision applicable to all the groups of the drainage law. Act 1899, p. 100, as originally enacted, has reference to the group placed under chapter 2 of Title 47, Rev. St. 1911. The corresponding penal provision for the group represented by chapter 2, Title 47, Rev. St. 1911 is found in Acts 1897, p. 99, § 15. This provision was carried into the Penal Code as art. 826. The group represented by chapter 4, Title 47, Rev. St. 1911, carried a penal provision (Acts 1907, p. 88, ch. 40, § 39), and this provision was inserted in the revision as art. 1253, post. Art. 1253 was superseded by Act 1911, ch. 118, § 40 (art. 1253, post).

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 380.

Art. 836a. Destruction of works constructed by State Levee and Drainage Board.—Any person or persons who shall wilfully destroy or deface any corner, line, mark, bench mark or other object fixed or established in connection with the work herein authorized [Arts. 5529a-5529j, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon a conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars; or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than thirty days; or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1909, ch. 81; Act 1911, ch. 88; Act 1913, p. 296, ch. 145, § 9.]

Art. 837. [496] Injuring irrigation canal, etc.—Any person who shall wilfully or through gross negligence injure any irrigating canal or its appurtenances, wells or reservoirs, or who shall waste the water thereof, or shall take the water therefrom without authority, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, for each offense, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars. [Act March 19, 1889, p. 100, § 14; Act 1895, p. 25, § 16; amended, Act 1899, p. 301.]

Explanatory.—Acts 1913, ch. 171 re-enacts Acts 1895, p. 25, of which this article was a part (section 16), and creates separate offenses of the various acts denounced by this article. See arts. 837a, 837e, 837f, 837i, 837m, post. The result would seem to be that this article is wholly or partly superseded. See, also, art. 1252.

Information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 378.

In a prosecution for the wrongful taking of water from an irrigating canal, the information in failing to allege ownership of the canal was fatally defective, this article being analogous to those of theft and malicious mischief involving a trespass upon the property of others. Dolan v. State, 60 App. 5, 129 S. W. 840.

Art. 837a. Taking water without permit.—Any person, association of persons, corporation or irrigation district, or any agent, officer, employé or representative of any person, association of persons, corporation or irrigation district, who shall wilfully take, divert or appropriate any of the water of this State, or the use of such water, for any purpose, without first complying with all the provisions of this Act [Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 4991-5011s], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and on conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and each day that such taking, diversion or appropriation of water shall continue shall constitute a separate offense; and the possession of such water, except when the right to its use is acquired in accordance with the provisions of law, shall be prima facie proof of the guilt of the person, association of persons, corporation, irrigation district, or the agent, officer, employé or representative of any person, association of persons, corporation or irrigation district. [Act 1895, p. 25; Act 1913, p. 367, ch. 171, § 39.]

Art. 837b. Use of streams for conveying stored water.—For the purpose of conveying and delivering storm, flood or rain water from the place of storage to the place of use as provided in the preceding Section [art. 5001m, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] it shall be lawful for any person, association of persons, corporation or irrigation district to use the banks and bed of any flowing natural stream within this State; under and in accordance with such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Board of Water Engineers; and such board shall prescribe rules and regulations for such purpose. No person, association of persons, corporation, or irrigation district who has not acquired the right to the use of such conserved or stored waters as provided in the last preceding Section [art. 5001m, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] shall take, use, or divert same. [Act 1913, p. 370, ch. 171, § 51.]

Art. 837c. Penalty for unlawful interference.—Any person, association of persons, corporation, or irrigation district, of [or] the agent, officer, employee, or representative of any such person, association of persons, corporation, or irrigation district who shall wilfully interfere with the passage of or take, divert, or appropriate such conserved or stored water during the passage and delivery thereof as provided in the last two preceding sections [art. 837b, ante, and art. 5001m, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 52.]

Art. 837d. Interference with headgates, etc., forbidden.—Any person, who shall wilfully open, close, change or interfere with any headgate or water box, without lawful authority, or who shall wilfully use water or conduct water in or through his ditch or upon his land, to which water he is not entitled, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum of not less than ten dollars, and not more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding sixty days; provided, that the possession or use of water to which the person using or possessing same shall not lawfully be entitled shall be prima facie proof of the guilt of the person so using or in possession of same. [Id., § 69.]

Art. 837e. Penalty for injuring works.—Any person or persons who shall knowingly and wilfully cut, dig, break down, destroy, or injure, or open any gate, bank, embankment or side of any ditch, canal, reservoir, flume, tunnel or feeder or pump or machinery, building, structure or other work, which is the property of another, or in which another owns an interest, or which is in the lawful possession or use of another or others, and which is used for the purpose of irrigation or milling or mining, or manufacturing, or for the development of power or for domestic purposes, or for stock-raising, with intent maliciously to injure any person, association or corporation or irrigation district, or for the gain of any person, association or corporation, so cutting, digging, breaking, injuring or opening any such work hereinbefore in this Section named, or with the intent of stealing or taking or causing to run out or waste out of any such ditch, canal or reservoir, feeder or flume, any water for his own profit, benefit or advantage or to the injury of any person, association or corporation lawfully entitled to the use of such water or to the use or management of such ditch, canal, tunnel, reservoir, feeder, flume, machinery, structure or other irrigation work, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and may be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for any term not exceeding two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 70.]

Art. 837f. Penalty for polluting or obstructing canals, etc.—Any person or persons who shall deposit in any canal, lateral, reservoir or lake, used for any of the purposes enumerated in this Act [arts. 4991–5011s, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] the carcass of any dead animal, tin cans, discarded buckets or pails, garbage, ashes, baling or barbed wire, earth, offal or refuse of any character, or any other article or articles which might pollute or obstruct the flow of water in any such canal or other similar structure, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 71.]

Art. 837g. Diversion of water from watershed prohibited when.—It shall be unlawful for any person, association of persons, corporation, or irrigation district to take or divert any of the water of the ordinary flow, underflow, or storm flow of any stream, water course, or watershed in this State into any other natural stream, water course, or watershed to the prejudice of any person or property situated within the watershed from which such water is proposed to be taken or diverted. [Id., § 81.]

Art. 837h. Same; permit; proceedings.—Before any person, association of persons, corporation, or irrigation district shall take any water from any natural stream, water course, or watershed in this State into any other watershed, such person, association of persons, corporation, or irrigation district shall make application to the Board of Water Engineers for a permit so to take or divert such waters, and no such permit shall be issued by the board until after full hearing before said board as to the rights to be affected thereby, and such hearing shall be held and notice thereof given at such time and such place in such mode and manner as the board may prescribe; and from any decision of the board an appeal may be taken to the district court of the county in which such diversion is proposed to be made in the mode and manner prescribed in this Act for other appeals from the decision of the board. [Id., § 82.]

Art. 837i. Same; penalty.—If any person, association of persons, corporation, irrigation district, or the agent, attorney, employé, or representative of any such person, association of persons, corporation or irrigation district, shall take or divert any waters from one natural stream, water course, or watershed into any other watershed contrary to the provisions of the last two preceding Sections of this Act [arts. 837g, 837h], he, it or they, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail for any term not exceeding six months, and each day that such taking or diversion shall continue shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., § 83.]

Art. 837j. Johnson Grass and Russian Thistle.—It shall be unlawful for any person, association of persons, corporation or irrigation district owning, leasing or operating any ditch or canal or reservoir or cultivating any lands, abutting upon any reservoir, ditch, flume, canal, waste-way or lateral to permit Johnson Grass or Russian Thistle to go to seed upon such reservoir, ditch, flume, canal, waste-way or lateral within ten feet of the high water line of any such reservoir, ditch, flume, canal, waste-way or lateral, where the same crosses or lies upon land in the ownership or control of any such person, association of persons, corporation or irrigation district, and any one violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than thirty days nor more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 90.]

Art. 837jj. Same; limitation of preceding article.—That Section 90 [art. 837j] of the Acts of the Thirty-Third Legislature of Texas, approved April 9, 1913, General Laws, Thirty-third Legislature, pages 358 et seq., relating to irrigation, shall have no application to cases of lands or ditches located in Tom Green, Sterling, Irion and Schleicher county, in which the land abutting upon the reservoir, ditch, flume, canal, wasteway or lateral owned and cultivated by the person, association of persons or corporations owning or operating such reservoir, ditch, flume, canal, wasteway or lateral. [Act 1915, p. 127, ch. 74, § 1.]

Art. 837k. Artesian wells.—An artesian well is defined for the purposes of this Act to be any artificial well in which, if properly cased, the waters will rise by natural pressure above the strata in which they are found. [Act 1913, p. 378, ch. 171, § 91.]

Art. 837l. Waste defined.—Waste is defined for the purposes of this Act in relation to artesian wells to be the causing, suffering or permitting the waters of an artesian well to run into any river, creek or other natural water course or drain, superficial or underground channel, bayou, or into any sewer, street, road, highway, or upon the land or any other person than that of the owner of such well, or upon the public lands, or to run or percolate through the strata above that in which such water is found: unless it be used for the purposes and in the manner in which it may be lawfully used on the premises of the owner of such well; provided, that nothing in this Section shall be construed to prevent the use of such water, if suitable, for the proper irrigation of trees standing along or upon any street, road or highway, or for ornamental ponds or fountains, or the propagation of fish or for the purposes authorized by this Act. [Id., § 93.]

Art. 837m. Penalty for waste.—Any person causing, suffering, or permitting the waste of water from an artesian well as defined in the last preceding Section [art. 837l] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than five hundred or by imprisonment in the county jail for any period not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 94.]

Art. 837n. Record of boring, etc.—Any person boring or causing to be bored any artesian well shall keep a complete and accurate record of the depth and thickness and character of the different strata penetrated, and when such well is completed, shall transmit by registered mail to the Board of Water Engineers a copy of such record. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction therefor shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., § 95.]

Art. 837o. Oil wells.—Nothing in the preceding Sections numbered ninety-one to ninety-five [arts. 837k–837n, ante, and art. 5011h, Vernon’s Sayles’ Civ. St., 1914] inclusive, shall be construed to apply to any oil well, and the status of such oil wells shall be unaffected by this Act. [Id., § 96.]

Art. 837p. Partial invalidity.—If any provision of this Act shall be held unconstitutional, it shall not be held to invalidate any other provision of this Act. [Id., § 99.]

CHAPTER TWO A

OFFENSES RELATING TO TOLL ROADS

Article 837q. Toll road corporations may promulgate rules and regulations.—Every toll road corporation [Vernon’s Sayles’ Civ. St. 1914, arts. 1278a–1278u] shall have the power to promulgate, by its board of directors, all necessary and reasonable rules and regulations relating to the manner in which traffic shall move over any toll road operated by it, and to refuse the use of such road to any person who shall fail or refuse to abide by such rules and regulations; and shall be empowered to fix and charge tolls for the use of such roads; provided, that such rules and regulations shall not be contrary to law, and provided that the rate to be charged for each class of vehicle shall be the same to all in each of such classes. [Act 1913, p. 145, ch. 77, § 22.]

Art. 837r. May not refuse reasonable use of road.—No such corporation shall have the right arbitrarily to refuse the use of such road to any person who shall offer to pay the regular toll therefor, except that such corporation shall be authorized to refuse to permit such road to be used by any vehicle which shall render the same unduly hazardous to the patrons of said road or damaging to the surface thereof, or to any person who shall fail or refuse to abide by the reasonable and necessary traffic regulations promulgated by such corporation. [Id., § 23.]

Art. 837s. Trespass on property of toll road corporation.—It shall be unlawful for any person to trespass or enter upon the property or right of way of any such corporation without its consent except as to crossings provided by law, and any person so trespassing or unlawfully entering thereupon shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in a sum not less than $25.00 nor more than $100.00. [Id., § 24.]

Art. 837t. Obstruction of toll road.—It shall be unlawful for any person to in any manner obstruct any such toll road, or to place thereon any thing or substance which would be reasonably calculated to result in injury to any patron of such road, or damage to any vehicle which might be run over the same; and any person so placing any such obstruction or thing or substance on any such road shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in a sum not less than $50.00 nor more than $200.00. [Id., § 25.]

CHAPTER THREE

OFFENSES RELATING TO FERRIES

Art. 838. Keeping ferry without license.	Art. 839. Failure to keep good boats, etc.

Article 838. [497] Keeping ferry without license.—If any person or firm shall keep any ferry over any water course, navigable stream, lake or bay in this state, and shall charge or receive any money, property, or other valuable thing, for crossing passengers or property at such ferry, without first obtaining license, as is now or as may hereafter be required by law, such person or firm shall be punished by fine not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act Feb. 11, 1860, p. 98.]

See chap. 10, title 119, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, for law regulating ferries.
Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 381.

Art. 839. [498] Failure to keep good boats.—If the owner of any licensed ferry in this state shall fail to keep, at all times, good, safe and substantial boats, sufficient in number for the ready accommodation of the public, or shall fail to keep the banks on each side of the ferry in good repair, and so graded that the ascent shall not exceed one foot in every seven feet from the water's edge to the top of the bank, or shall fail to give ready attendance on all passengers desiring to cross with their animals, wagons, or other property, or shall charge higher rates of ferriage than those fixed by the proper authority, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act March 4, 1875, pp. 58-59.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 382-385.

CHAPTER FOUR

OFFENSES RELATING TO PUBLIC GROUNDS AND BUILDINGS

Art. 840. Injuring or defacing a public building	Art. 852. Purchaser turning loose too many stock upon leasehold land.
841. "Public building" defined.	852a. Construction of fences without gates.
842. All officers to report violations.	853. Other statutes relating to public lands.
843. Driving in capitol grounds, etc.	854. Permitting fence to stand, etc.
844. Injuring roadway, public grounds or property of state prohibited.	855. Articles that apply to prosecutions.
845. Not to apply, when.	856. When the law does not apply.
846. "Public grounds" defined.	857. Unlawful to herd horses, etc.
847. Hitching in capitol grounds.	858. Penalty.
848. Pass-keys to state capitol.	859. Turning loose excess of stock on leased land.
849. Taking property from public grounds.	860. Illegal fencing, etc., of public lands.
850. Unlawful fencing, using, etc., public land.	860a. Suits to be brought.
851. Not applicable, when.

Article 840. [499] Injuring or defacing a public building.—If any person shall wilfully injure or deface any public building, or the furniture therein in this state, he shall be fined not less than five nor more than five hundred dollars. The word "deface" in this chapter shall be held to apply to writing, carving or scratching on the walls or plastering or furniture of said building, or staining the same with paint or any other article which will produce a discoloration of the same. [Act May 14, 1888, p. 5, § 5.]

Injuring building.—One breaking the window-panes of and shooting into a schoolhouse is guilty of injuring it, within the statute punishing the injuring or defacing of a public building, though it be conceded that the injury did not amount to a defacing. Thurston v. State, 58 App. 308, 125 S. W. 31.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 386. See art. 841.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence held to show that accused was the person who maliciously injured a public building, authorizing a conviction. Thurston v. State, 58 App. 308, 125 S. W. 31.

Art. 841. [500] “Public building” defined.—The term “public building” as used in the preceding article means the capitol and all other buildings in the capitol grounds at the seat of government, including the general land office and the executive mansion, the various state asylums and all buildings belonging to either, all college or university buildings erected by the state, all court houses and jails and all other buildings held for public use by any department or branch of government, state, county or municipal; and the specific enumeration of the above shall not exclude other buildings not named, properly coming within the meaning and description of a public building.

What constitutes “public building.”—A building intended to be protected is a public building owned or controlled and held by the public authorities for a public use. A house in which public school is taught is not necessarily a public building. Cleavinger v. State, 43 App. 280, 65 S. W. 90.

A schoolhouse is a “public building.” Thurston v. State, 58 App. 308, 125 S. W. 31.

Indictment.—Willson’s Cr. Forms, 386.

When the offense is injuring or defacing a public building other than one that is specifically named in the preceding article, the indictment must allege that the building was “a public one held for public use.” Brown v. State, 16 App. 245; Pratt v. State, 19 App. 276; Clark v. State, 23 App. 260, 5 S. W. 115.

Indictment must allege that said church was a public building then and there held for public use. Burkhalter v. State (Cr. App.) 104 S. W. 901.

An indictment charging injury to property pertaining to a public building to wit, “the Colorado High School Building,” should allege that such building was held for public use; it not being one of those enumerated in the statute. Hughes v. State, 59 App. 360, 128 S. W. 904.

Art. 842. [501] All officers to report violations.—It is the especial duty of all executive officers of the state and the county officers of the various counties to aid in the execution of the two preceding articles, and to report all violations thereof to the proper authorities for immediate prosecution. [Act Jan. 4, 1862, p. 51.]

Indictment.—Brown v. State, 16 App. 245; Pratt v. State, 19 App. 276; Clark v. State, 23 App. 260, 5 S. W. 115; note under § 841.

Art. 843. [502] Driving in capitol grounds.—If any person shall drive, ride or lead, or cause to be driven, ridden or led, any horse or other animal to the capitol grounds at the seat of government, or into the inclosure of the state cemetery, without the consent of the keeper or superintendent of said grounds or cemetery, he shall be fined not exceeding twenty-five dollars. [Act April 29, 1874, p. 165.]

Indictment.—Willson’s Cr. Forms, 387, 389.

Art. 844. Injuring roadway, public grounds or property of state prohibited.—It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to drive, or cause to be driven, over or along any roadway in any of the public grounds of this state, any heavy vehicle, or vehicle for carrying merchandise, or vehicle heavily loaded, or otherwise reasonably calculated to injure or deface such roadways, or to make their maintenance more expensive; or to drive, or cause to be driven, any vehicle or conveyance of any kind, or to drive, or cause to be ridden, any animal of any kind, over, across, or along any of the footpaths or walks in such grounds, or on the turf of such grounds, or at any place therein, except on and along the roadways and at the hitching places provided therefor; or to hitch any horse or team in any of said public grounds, or to the fences surrounding the same, unless at some place especially provided therefor, or to cause or permit any horse, not being driven to some vehicle or ridden, or any cow, sheep, goat, hog, or other animal reasonably calculated to injure said grounds, or anything pertaining thereto, or go into or remain in any portion of said grounds; or to cut, pull, break, bruise, remove, or in anywise injure any tree, or shrub or vegetation of any kind growing thereon; or disturbing any birds' nests or eggs; or to in any wise injure, deface or in any way interfere with any chair, bench, seat, hydrant, frame, fence, gate, erection or structure of any kind therein or thereon or connected therewith; or to fish or wash or bathe in or any way pollute the waters of any lake or pond, or stream, therein, or to obscenely or indecently expose any part of his or her person, or to do any indecent act thereon. Any person violating any of the several provisions of this law shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined in any sum not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1903, p. 187.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 388.

Art. 845. Not to apply, when.—This law shall not apply to anything done by the lawful custodian of the public grounds on which said act is performed, or under his authority and direction, and which is done in the reasonable discharge of his duties as such custodian, or in the use of such grounds for the purpose to which they are dedicated by the state. [Id., p. 187.]

Art. 846. "Public grounds" defined.—The term "public grounds," as used in this law, includes all grounds owned by the state, and used and maintained by it in connection with any public building or institution, whether for governmental, educational, eleemosynary or other purpose, and all state cemeteries and all parks maintained at the expense of the state. [Id., p. 187.]

Art. 847. [503] Hitching in capitol grounds.—If any person shall hitch any animal to any tree or shrub in the capitol grounds or state cemetery, he shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Act April 29, 1874, p. 165.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 390.

Art. 848. [503a] Pass-keys to state capitol.—It shall not be lawful for any person to make or have made, or to keep in his possession, a pass or master key to the rooms and apartments in the state capitol, unless authorized to do so by the superintendent of public buildings and grounds; and any person violating the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. [Acts of 1895, p. 79.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 392.

Art. 849. [504] Taking property from public grounds.—If any person shall take, remove, injure or destroy any species of public property pertaining to public building, as defined in article 841, or to the grounds belonging to such building, he shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars.

Public building.—An indictment charging injury to property pertaining to a public building to wit, "the Colorado High School Building," should allege that such building was held for public use; it not being one of those enumerated in the statute. Hughes v. State, 59 App. 360, 128 S. W. 904.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 391.

Art. 850. [505] Unlawful fencing, using, etc., public lands.—It shall be unlawful for any person to fence, use, occupy or appropriate, by herding or line-riding, any portion of the public lands of the state, or of the lands belonging to any particular fund specified in this act, without having first obtained a lease of such lands in accordance with the provisions of this act. Any person, whether owner of stock, manager, agent, employé or servant, who shall fence, use, occupy or appropriate, by herding or line-riding, any portion of such lands without a lease thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall, upon conviction, be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and, in addition thereto, shall be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than three months nor more than two years. Each day of such fencing, using, occupying or appropriating, by herding or line-riding, shall be deemed a separate offense; and any person so offending may be prosecuted, by indictment or information, in the proper court of the county where any portion of the land lies or to which it may be attached for judicial purposes, or in the county of Travis; and jurisdiction of such offenses is hereby vested in said courts; and, in case any indictment or information is preferred or filed against a non-resident of this state for a violation of this article, it shall be the duty of the governor to demand the extradition of the defendant from the proper officer of any state or territory where he may be found, in order that he may be brought to trial. "Fencing," within the meaning of this article, is the erection of any structure of wood, wire, or both, or any other material intended to prevent the passage of cattle, horses, mules, asses, sheep, goats or hogs, whether the same shall inclose lands on all sides or be erected on one or more sides. Any appropriation of land belonging to any particular fund specified in this act, or of the public lands of this state, without having first obtained a lease thereof, by fencing of any kind, or by inclosures consisting partly of fencing and partly of natural obstacles, or impediments to the passage of live stock, shall be deemed an unlawful appropriation, punishable as provided in this article for appropriating such lands; and each day said land is so appropriated shall be deemed a separate offense. [Act April 1, 1887, p. 89, § 18.]

Explanatory.—At the time this article was placed in the revised Penal Code the act from which it was derived (Act 1887, p. 89, § 18) had been superseded by Act 1895, p. 74. The latter act, however, was carried into the revised Penal Code as art. 860, post. The later act was substantially the same as the earlier one, except that the proviso (art. 851) of the early act was omitted from the act of 1895. The result would seem to be that the revisers of 1911 inadvertently restored a proviso, which the legislature, in 1895, intended to strike out.

Art. 851. [506] Not applicable, when.—The provisions of this act, as set forth in the preceding article, shall not apply to persons who are moving or gathering or holding for shipment any stock mentioned in said article; provided, the said persons have not erected any fence on such lands or continue on said lands longer than one week. [Id., § 19.]

Explanatory.—This proviso was not contained in the later act of 1895. See art. 860, and art. 850 and note thereunder.

Art. 852. [507] Turning loose too many stock on leasehold land.—No purchaser or other person than the lessee of public free school, asylum and public lands shall be permitted to turn loose within such leasehold more than one head of horses or mules or cattle for any ten acres of land purchased, owned or controlled by him and uninclosed, or in lieu thereof, four head of sheep or goats to every ten acres so purchased, owned or controlled and uninclosed. Each violation of this provision of this article, which restricts the number of stock that may be turned loose on lands leased from the state, shall be an offense; and the owner, on conviction, shall be punished by a fine not less than one dollar for each head of stock he may so turn loose; and each thirty days' violation of the provisions of this article shall constitute a separate offense. [Act April 1, 1887, p. 88, § 15; amended by Act April 28, 1891, p. 181.]

Explanatory.—Between Apr. 28, 1891, the date of the amendatory act from which the above article was taken, and 1911, the date of the revision, the subject matter of the above article had been three times re-enacted, viz. Acts 1895, p.

71, § 18; Acts 1897, p. 187, ch. 129; and Acts 1901, p. 292, ch. 125, § 5. However, in these various re-enactments, no substantial change was made in the language of the provision.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 585.

Art. 852a. [422d, 508] Construction of fences without gates.—It shall be unlawful for any person or corporation who may have used any of the lands, by joining fences or otherwise, to build or maintain more than three miles, lineal measure, of fence running in the same general direction without a gateway in the same, which gateway must be at least ten feet wide, and shall not be locked or kept closed so as to obstruct free ingress and egress; provided, that all persons who have fences already constructed in violation of the provisions of this law shall have two months from the time this act takes effect within which to conform with the provisions thereof; provided further, that if any person or persons shall build or maintain more than three miles, lineal measure, running in the same direction without providing such gateway he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than two hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and each day that such fence remains without such gateway shall constitute and be punished as a separate offense; provided further, that the construction of gates as provided for in this article shall apply only to pasture lands; provided further, that when herds of cattle, horses, sheep or goats are driven through this state from one place to another place in this state, and it becomes necessary for such stock to pass through any inclosed pasture of any person who has leased any of the aforesaid lands, such lessees of such inclosure shall permit such stock to pass through such pasture; provided, that the owner of such stock so driven through any such inclosure shall move the same as expeditiously and with as little delay as practicable through such inclosure. [Act Apr. 1, 1887, p. 90, § 21.]

Explanatory.—The above provision was carried into the revised Penal Code of 1895 as art. 508, but it was omitted from the revision of 1911. In view of the decision in Bugby-Coleman Land & Cattle Co. v. Matador Land & Cattle Co., 26 Civ. App. 260, 63 S. W. 914, recognizing the constitutionality and continued existence of the statute, it is included in this compilation.

Constitutionality of act.—This law is not in violation of the constitution. Inasmuch as a lessee's right to maintain the inclosure was founded upon his lease of the school lands from the State he must be held to have consented to what the law imposes as one of the conditions of the lease and right to inclose. Bugby-Coleman Land & Cattle Co. v. Matador Land & Cattle Co., 26 Civ. App. 260, 63 S. W. 914.

Recovery of damages.—The lessee cannot recover damages caused by sheep in grazing while being moved expeditiously through his inclosed lands. Acrey v. McKenzie, 30 Civ. App. 255, 70 S. W. 367.

Art. 853. [509] Other statutes relating to public lands.—Each and every person who shall have inclosed, by fencing or otherwise, any of the public free school lands belonging to the state, and shall use the same to the exclusion of the public, shall pay an annual rental value therefor of the sum of twenty-five dollars for each section so inclosed.

And it shall be the duty of the surveyor of each county to make a report to the county commissioners' court on the first Monday in June each year of the number of sections of public school lands in his county inclosed during the past year, and the names of the person or persons controlling such inclosed lands, and the number of sections controlled by him or them, respectively.

And the said court, at the first regular term thereafter, shall make a list of the names of the persons controlling such public free school lands, the number of sections so controlled by each person, and the aggregate amount due from each person, at the rate of twenty-five dollars for each section so inclosed and controlled, which list shall be recorded by the clerk of said court, and a certified copy thereof forwarded by him to the comptroller of public accounts, and a like copy delivered to the collector of taxes for said county.

The collector of taxes, on receipt of such list, shall proceed to collect the same under the same provisions and penalties as is imposed by law for the collection of taxes.

All moneys collected under the provisions of this act shall be paid by the collector into the state treasury and constitute a part of the available school fund; provided, that the state may resume control of said land at any time.

Any person who shall control inclosed lands belonging to the public free schools, and fail to pay the rental value as specified under the provisions of this act, upon the demand of the collector, shall be subject to prosecution upon complaint, information or indictment, and fined in the sum of one hundred dollars for each section so inclosed. [Act April 17, 1879, pp. 101-2.]

Explanatory.—It would seem that this article was superseded, in part at least, by the act of Apr. 1, 1887, p. 89, § 18 (art. 850, ante).

Description of land in indictment.—An indictment for unlawfully fencing lands of another is sufficient when it describes the land as a certain half of a certain section. It is not necessary for the number of acres to be stated. Gibbs v. State, 39 App. 476, 46 S. W. 645.

Art. 854. Permitting fence to remain standing round land of another, etc.—If any person or corporation shall knowingly make or permit to remain standing any fence on or around the land of another, or the public, public school, university or asylum lands of this state, without the written consent of the owner thereof duly acknowledged, or a duly executed lease of such land from the proper authority in a case of public, public school, university or asylum lands, as the case may be, duly recorded in the county where the land lies or to which it is attached for judicial purposes, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, fined in any sum not less than fifty cents nor more than one dollar per acre per month for each month so inclosed, or fined and imprisoned in the county jail for any period not over two years. Within the meaning of person, as used in this act, is included every man managing or controlling for a corporation, firm or joint stock company, and any and every individual or person who shall aid, assist or direct in the violation of this act. Half of all fines collected under the provisions of this act shall be paid to the person or persons informing on the person or corporation who shall unlawfully inclose any land; provided, that each three months said land is so inclosed shall constitute a separate offense. A fence, within the meaning of this act, is any structure of wood, wire, or both, or any other material intended to prevent the passage of cattle, horses, mules, asses, sheep, goats or hogs. Where persons or corporations have unlawfully fenced land belonging to the state, or public school, university or asylum lands, it shall be the duty of the attorney general, either in person or by proxy, to institute proceedings in the name of the state against any person or incorporation so unlawfully inclosing said lands; and the expense incurred in employing counsel to prosecute such cases shall be deducted from the fine or fines collected from any person or corporation violating the provisions of this act, the balance to be paid to the fund to which it belongs. [Act Feb. 7, 1884, pp. 68-69.]

Art. 855. Articles that apply to prosecutions.—In all prosecutions under this chapter, the provisions of articles 1290 and 1291 of the Penal Code of the State of Texas shall apply. [Id.]

Art. 856. When the law does not apply.—This chapter shall not apply to persons who have heretofore settled upon lands not their own, where the inclosure is two hundred acres or less, and where the principal pursuit of such person upon the land and is that of agriculture. [Id.]

Art. 857. Unlawful to herd horses, etc.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to herd, or aid in herding, or cause to be herded, loose-herded or detained for grazing by line-riding, any cattle, horses, mules, asses, sheep or goats on any vacant public domain, school, university or asylum lands within this state, unless the same shall have been leased from the proper authority; provided, that this section of this act shall not apply to persons herding such stock, in gathering for or carrying to and from market, or in moving the same from one section of the country to another. [Id.]

Explanatory.—When the above provision was carried into the revised Penal Code it had been superseded by the Act of Apr. 1, 1887 (art. 850, ante) and by Act 1895, p. 74 (art. 860, post). See note under art. 850.

Art. 858. Penalty.—Any person who shall knowingly violate any of the provisions of article 857 shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined one hundred dollars for each year or part of a year, for each section or part of a section (meaning six hundred and forty acres of land or less, whether surveyed in sections or not), which shall be used contrary to the provisions of said article. [Id.]

See note under preceding article.

Art. 859. [509a] Turning loose excess of stock on leased lands.—Each violation of the provisions of article 852 of this Code, which restricts the number of stock that may be turned loose on lands leased from the state, shall be an offense; and the offender, on conviction, shall be punished by fine of one dollar for each head of stock he may so turn loose; and each thirty days' violation of the provisions of said article shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1895, p. 71.]

See note under art. 852.

Art. 860. [509b] Illegal fencing, etc., of public lands.—It shall be unlawful for any person to fence, use, occupy or appropriate by herding or line-riding, any portion of the public lands of the state, or of the lands belonging to the public free schools or asylums, without having first obtained a lease of such lands. Any person, whether owner of stock, manager, agent, employé or servant, who shall fence, use, occupy or appropriate by herding or line-riding any portion of such lands without a lease thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and, in addition thereto, shall be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than three months nor more than two years. Each day of such fencing, occupying, using or appropriating by herding or line-riding shall be deemed a separate offense; and any person so offending may be prosecuted by indictment or information in the proper court of the county where any portion of the land lies, or to which it may be attached for judicial purposes, or in the county of Travis; and jurisdiction of such offenses is hereby vested in said courts; and in case any indictment or information is preferred or filed against a nonresident of this state for a violation of this article, it shall be the duty of the governor to demand the extradition of the defendant from the proper officer of any state or territory where he may be found, in order that he may be brought to trial. "Fencing," within the meaning of this article, is the erection of any structure of wood, wire, or both, or any other material intended to prevent the passage of cattle, horses, mules, asses, sheep, goats or hogs, whether the same shall inclose lands on all sides or be erected on one or more sides. Any appropriation of land belonging to any particular fund specified in said act or of the public lands of this state, without having first obtained a lease thereof, by fencing of any kind, or by inclosures consisting partly of fencing and partly of natural obstacles or impediments to the passage of live stock, shall be deemed an unlawful appropriation, punishable as provided in this article for appropriating such lands, and each day said land is appropriated shall be deemed a separate offense. [Id., p. 74.]

See arts. 850 and 857, and notes thereunder.

Art. 860a. Suits to be brought.—When said agents [state land agents; Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 5460 et seq.] shall have reported that any public free school, asylum, or other public lands is or has been used or occupied or inclosed without authority of law, or that any timbered land belonging to any of said fund has been or is being destroyed, or depredated upon to the injury of such land, or the detriment of such fund, the governor shall investigate same, and in his discretion direct that suit be instituted for the recovery of such sums as may appear to be proper under this act, and article 5467 [Rev. St. 1911] or he may transmit such documents as he may deem proper to the proper officer or court for the purpose of criminal proceeding, as provided for in articles 850, 851, 852, 853, 859, 860 of the Penal Code and neither of said remedies shall be exclusive of the other, but the one shall be cumulative of the other, and the state may use either or both remedies; provided, that this shall not repeal any pre-existing criminal law. [Act 1899, p. 176, ch. 104, § 2; Rev. Civ. St. 1911, art. 5464.]

Explanatory.—The above provision was omitted from the revised Penal Code. Inasmuch as it has a bearing on the criminal laws of the state, it is included in this compilation, in view of the decision in Berry v. State, 156 S. W. 626.

CHAPTER FIVE

PUBLIC OR QUASI PUBLIC BUILDINGS—FIRE PROTECTION

[Sanitary regulations of hotels, etc., see Title 12, ch. 1A.]

Art.		Art.
861.	Every public lodging house to be furnished with.	867.	Tenant or lessee may do what.
862.	How constructed.	867a.	Certain buildings to be provided with fire escapes.
863.	Where constructed.	867b.	Duties of officers as to enforcement of act.
864.	Placards indicating way to.	867c.	Notice to owners of buildings.
865.	Every bedroom to be provided with rope.	867d.	Penalty for violation of act.
866.	Penalty for violation.

Article 861. Every public lodging house to be furnished with.—Every building or structure kept, used or maintained as, or advertised as, or held out to the public to be, an inn, hotel or public lodging house or place where sleeping accommodations are furnished to the public, whether with or without meals, shall have and be provided with, at each and every floor above the second floor, or at every floor twenty feet or more above the ground, two or more iron or steel fire escapes to be attached securely on the outside of the walls of such buildings or structures; and such buildings or structures shall have and be provided with a way of egress to said fire escapes, which way of egress and fire escapes shall, at all times, be kept free and clear of obstructions and in good repair and ready and suitable for immediate use. [Act 1907, p. 164.]

Explanatory.—This act is to some extent superseded by Act 1915, ch. 12 (arts. 867a-867d, post).

Art. 862. How constructed.—Said fire escapes shall consist of iron or steel ladders reaching from the roof of the building to within twelve feet of the ground, and the rungs of said ladders must be at least six inches from the wall, so that a secure foothold and handhold on same may be had, and the ladders must be securely bolted to and through the wall, and must be capable of sustaining a weight of fifteen hundred pounds avoirdupois, and that each floor above the ground floor, with proper open connections and exit to these ladders, shall be iron or steel balconies or landings, with strongly braced iron or steel hand railings, capable of sustaining a weight of fifteen hundred pounds avoirdupois. Said landings or balconies and the hand railings thereof shall be securely bolted to and through the walls, and in case of wooden buildings, said ladders, landings or balconies and hand railings shall be securely bolted to and through, or clamped with iron or steel clamps to and around, the upright studding or frame proper of the building. [Id., p. 164.]

Art. 863. Where constructed.—All fire escapes shall be located as far as possible, consistent with accessibility, from stairways, elevator hatchways and other openings in the floors, and shall be located on two or more sides of the building, and as far apart as is consistent with the construction and location of the building. [Id., p. 164.]

Art. 864. Placards indicating way to.—Placards or signs, indicating plainly the way to fire escapes, shall be placed and kept continuously in conspicuous places in the offices, hallways and in every bedroom of such building. [Id., p. 164.]

Art. 865. Every bedroom to be furnished with rope.—Every building or structure not more than two stories high from the ground, and where the second floor is less than twenty feet above the ground, kept, used or maintained as, or advertised as, or held out to the public to be, an inn, hotel or public lodging house or place where sleeping accommodations are furnished to the public, whether with or without meals, shall have and be provided with, in every bedroom on the floor above the ground floor, a manilla or hemp rope of at least five-eighths of an inch thickness, firmly knotted at least at every fifteen inches of its length, and long enough to reach within four feet of the ground, and to be securely fastened within the room not less than three feet above the base or sill of the window or opening, and so with strength of rope and fastening be capable of sustaining a weight of not less than five hundred pounds avoirdupois. [Id., p. 164.]

Art. 866. Penalty for violation.—Any person or persons owning, keeping or maintaining, controlling or managing, any building or structure kept as, used as, maintained as, or advertised as, or held out to the public to be, an inn, hotel, public lodging house or place where sleeping accommodations are furnished to the public, whether with or without meals, in violation of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars; and each and every day any person owning, keeping, maintaining, controlling or managing any building or structure kept as, maintained as, or advertised as, or held out to the public to be, an inn, hotel, public lodging house or place where sleeping accommodations are furnished to the public, whether with or without meals, in violation of the provisions of this law, shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., p. 165.]

Art. 867. Tenant or lessee may do what.—The tenant or subtenant, lessee or sub-lessee, of any building, coming within the provisions and requirements of this act, may, when the owner or his agent fails to comply with the provisions of this act, contract for and have constructed and erected said fire escapes in accordance with the requirements of this law, and may deduct the cost of same from the amount due, or the amounts that may become due such landlord or lessor on account of the rent or lease of such building. [Id., p. 165.]

Art. 867a. Certain buildings to be provided with fire escapes.—That every building of over two stories in height now or hereafter used in whole or in part as a seminary, college, academy, school house, dormitory, hotel, apartment house, or lodging house or theater or place of public amusement, including halls for public gatherings, other than private residences, or any manufacturing, wholesale or retail mercantile establishment, factories, or work shops, warehouses where five or more persons shall be assembled, shall be provided with at least one, and as many additional fireproof stairways or ladders or iron spiral fire escape on the exterior of such building placed in such position and as many in number as may be designated by the head of the fire department of that city or town, in or near which such building may be located, if there be one, or by the mayor, if there be no head of such fire department, or by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, if such building be not in or near any incorporated city or town, or one having a head of its fire department. If one or more fire escapes or ladders are required on each side of such buildings for the accommodation and protection of the guests, assemblies, employés or inmates of such buildings, now or hereafter, used in whole or in part as a seminary, college, academy, school house, theater or place of public amusement, including halls for public gatherings other than private residences, or by any manufacturing wholesale or retail mercantile establishment, factories or work shops, warehouses, where five or more persons shall be assembled or a place of public resort, shall be provided therewith; such stairways or ladders shall connect the cornice with the top of the first story of any such building by a metal platform, balcony, piazza, or other safe and convenient resting place on a level with the floor of each story so connected and of sufficient length to permit access to the same from not less than two windows of each story. They shall be convenient of access from the interior of the building, commodious in size and form and of sufficient strength to be safe for the purpose of ascent and descent. It shall be the duty of the school board controlling any school in Texas, conducted in a building two or more stories in height, to have the building equipped with necessary fire escapes as is provided herein. [Act 1915, p. 20, ch. 12, § 1.]

Art. 867b. Duties of officers as to enforcement of act.—It shall be the duty of fire chiefs or marshals of fire departments, mayor or chief of police or city marshal of all such cities and towns in which the building is located, or by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics and his factory inspectors, to enforce the provisions of the foregoing section. The term "balcony, piazza, or other safe and convenient resting place" shall not be construed to mean any wooden or iron awning which might intervene between such stairways and such landing upon the ground or sidewalk. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 867c. Notice to owners of buildings.—Any person who shall fail to comply with the provisions of Section one (1) of this Act [art. 867a] within sixty days after being notified in writing to do so by either of the said officers whose duty it may be to give such notice, shall be punished according to law; said chief or marshal of all such cities and towns in which the buildings are located, or by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics or his factory inspectors, upon receiving notice or obtaining knowledge, that any person within his jurisdiction has not so complied with said provisions, shall file a written statement to that effect with the county attorney of the county in which such building is located, and such being done, such county attorney shall prosecute such persons, firms, corporations or agents having charge of such buildings. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 867d. Penalty for violation of act.—The owners, tenants, firms, corporations, agents or other persons in charge of any business within either of the foregoing sections, who shall fail or neglect, after a written notice has been given him [them] in accordance with the preceding sections, to comply with any of the provisions of said preceding section which are applicable to the building owned, leased, or in his charge, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars, nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., § 4.]

CHAPTER FIVE A

LIBRARIES, MUSEUMS, ETC.

Article 867e. Detaining books, etc.—That whoever wilfully detains any book, newspaper, magazine, pamphlet, manuscript, or other property belonging to any public or incorporated library, reading room, museum, or other educational institution for thirty days after notice in writing to return the same, given after the expiration of the time which by the rules of such institution such articles or other property may be kept, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $1.00 nor more than $25.00, and the said notice shall bear on its face a copy of this Section. [Act 1913, p. 281, ch. 140, § 1.]

Explanatory.—The subject-matter of this article is dealt with in Acts 1897, ch. 153; Acts 1903, ch. 119; Acts 1905, ch. 61; Acts 1907, chs. 75, 78. Acts 1911, ch. 110, re-enacts the article, and expressly repeals Acts 1907, ch. 75. Acts 1913, ch. 135, § 2, expressly repeals art. 868, Penal Code. This would seem to supersede Acts 1911, ch. 110, especially in view of art. 907, Pen. Code, as amended by the repealing act of 1913, above referred to.

Indictment must state that the fish was taken in fresh waters. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 832.

Art. 869. Unlawful to use nets; certain counties exempted.—If any person shall at any time during the year take, catch, ensnare or entrap any fish, except minnows for bait by means of nets or in any other manner than with ordinary hooks and line or trot line, except as specified in Section One, Chapter 78, of the General Laws of the Regular Session of the Thirtieth Legislature, [art. 868] such person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars; provided that the following counties are hereby exempt from the provisions of this section: Anderson, Angelina, Archer, Baylor, Bosque, Brazos, Brown, Burnet, Brazoria, Bowie, Camp, Caldwell, Chambers, Cherokee, Cass, Clay, Galveston, Comanche, Collin, Delta, De Witt, Eastland, Fannin, Freestone, Fayette, Gillespie, Goliad, Grimes, Hamilton, Hardin, Hopkins, Hill, Hood, Houston, Hunt, Jack, Jefferson, Johnson, Jones, Kaufman, Knox, Lamar, Limestone, Liberty, Llano, Mason, Matagorda, Mitchell, Morris, Nacogdoches, Newton, Orange, Panola, Polk, Rains, Rockwall, Red River, San Augustine, Sabine, Stephens, Shackelford, San Jacinto, Shelby, Smith, Throckmorton, Trinity, Tyler, Titus; Upshur, Van Zandt, Webb, Walker, Wharton, Wood and Young; provided that the Counties of Gregg, Harrison and Rusk shall be exempt from the provisions of this Section as to the waters of Sabine River but no further, and that Harrison County shall be exempt from the provisions of this Section in so far as it applies to the waters of Big Cypress above Tuscombie Bridge and Little Cypress; provided that in the County of McLennan it shall not be unlawful for any person to take or catch fish by means of net or seine from any stream in said county from May 15 to October 1st of each year and that it shall not be unlawful for any person or persons to take or catch fish by net or seine in Palo Pinto County from June 15th to October 1st of each year; provided that Clay county shall be exempt from the provisions of this Section along the waters of the Wichita and Red Rivers; also Jack County along the waters of Trinity River, provided that the counties of Austin, Washington, and Palo Pinto shall be exempt from the provisions of this Section along the waters of Brazos river, provided further that in the county of Falls it shall not be unlawful for any person or persons to take or catch fish by means of net or seine from any stream in said county from June 15th to September 1st of each year. Provided further that it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to build any trap in or across any stream or lake in Wood County, Texas, for the purpose of catching or taking fish from any such stream or lake, and any person violating this provision shall be punished as provided by this Act. [Act 1897, ch. 153; Act 1899, chs. 55, 69; Act 1901, ch. 18; Act 1901, 1st S. S., ch. 17; Act 1903, ch. 119; Act 1905, ch. 61; Act 1907, chs. 75, 78; Act 1909, p. 95; Act 1911, ch. 110; Act 1911, ch. 113; Act 1911, 1st S. S., ch. 17; Act 1913, ch. 41; Act 1913, ch. 96, amended; Act 1915, p. 15, ch. 10, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Act 1913, ch. 135, § 2 repeals art. 869, Penal Code, but as the Act of 1915 re-enacts its subject-matter, the new act is given the old code number. Act 1915, ch. 10, § 1, amends "section 2, chapter 96, of the General Laws of the Regular Session of the Thirty-third Legislature, relating to the taking of fish, as amended by chapter 96 of the General Laws of the Regular Session of the Thirty-third Legislature" so as to read as above. It was probably the intent to amend section 2, chapter 49 of the acts of the 31st Legislature, as amended, etc. The misdescription of the act amended is probably immaterial in view of the clear intent as shown by the subject-matter of the act.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 393.

Art. 870. Taking fish by means of nets, etc., without consent of owner.—Any person who shall take, catch, ensnare or entrap any fish by means of nets or seines or by muddying, ditching or draining any lake, pool or pond in any county within this State without the consent of the owner of such lake, pool or pond, shall be subject to the penalty hereinbefore prescribed in Section 2 of this Act [art. 869, ante, as amended] and in all prosecutions under this Act, the burden of proof of such consent of the owner shall devolve and be upon the defendant. [Act 1907, ch. 78, § 2; Act 1909, p. 96, repealed; Act 1911, ch. 110, § 5, superseded; art. 870, revised Pen. Code, superseded; Act 1911, p. 233, ch. 113, § 3 [2].]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 393.

Art. 871. Conviction may be had on unsupported testimony of accomplice.—Any court, officer or tribunal, having jurisdiction of the offense set forth in this chapter, or any district or county attorney, may subpoena persons, and compel their attendance as witnesses to testify as to violations of any of the provisions of this law; and any person so summoned and examined shall not be liable to prosecution for any of the violations of this law about which he may testify; and a conviction for said offense may be had upon the unsupported evidence of an accomplice or participant. [O. C.]

Art. 872. [513] Duty of persons erecting dams and other obstructions.—It shall be the duty of every person, firm, or corporation, municipal or private, who has heretofore erected, or who may hereafter erect any dam, water weir, or other obstruction or weirs on any regular flowing stream within this state to build, construct and keep in repair fish ways, or fish ladders, at such dam, water weir, or obstruction, so that at all seasons of the year fish may ascend above such dam, weir, or obstruction, to deposit their spawn. Any person, firm or corporation, or the agent or employé or officer of any corporation, whether private or municipal, who shall erect such dam, weir, or obstruction, or any firm, person, or corporation whether private or municipal, who shall own or maintain, any such dam, obstruction or weir, who shall fail or refuse to build, construct and keep in repair such fish way, or fish ladder, within 90 days after having been notified by the Fish, Game and Oyster Commissioner of this state to do so, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25.00 nor more than $500.00; provided, that each week after the expiration of 90 days after receiving notice, as herein provided that such person, firm or corporation, municipal or private, shall fail or refuse to so build, construct and keep in repair, such fish way or fish ladder, shall constitute a separate offense. [O. C.; Act Apr. 17, 1879, p. 100, § 1; Act 1915, p. 118, ch. 67, § 1, amending art. 872, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 873. Limiting fish that may be taken and sold.—It shall be, and is unlawful for any person to take, in any way, more than fifty pounds of any fresh water fish, for sale or barter for money or anything of value whatsoever; provided, that any one person shall be allowed to take and sell as much as fifty pounds of fish in one week, and no more than fifty pounds of fish in any one week of seven days; provided, the counties of Wharton and Nueces shall be exempt from the provisions of this law. [Act 1905, p. 222.]

Art. 874. Number of squirrels that may be taken and sold.—It shall be, and is unlawful, for any person to kill more than ten squirrels in any one day of twenty-four hours; and it is not lawful for any person to sell more than five squirrels in any one week of seven days. [Id., p. 222.]

Art. 875. Not to apply to certain counties.—If any person shall violate any provision of the two preceding articles, said person shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars, with commement in the county jail not less than one day nor more than ten days. Provided, the said provisions shall not apply to any county situated in the ninth and twelfth and thirty-first and fifth and eighteenth and twenty-first and seventeenth and tenth and second and twenty-fourth and fifteenth and fourteenth senatorial districts of Texas. [Id., p. 222.]

Art. 876. Sale of squirrels prohibited in county of Montgomery.—It shall be unlawful for any person to sell, or offer for sale, or ship for sale, in the county of Montgomery, any squirrels; and any person violating the provisions of this article, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1907, ch. 63, § 2; Act 1909, p. 117.]

Art. 876a. Shipping squirrels.—It shall be unlawful for any person to ship or cause to be shipped, or for any express company, railroad company or other common carrier or the officers, agents, servants or employes of the same, to receive for the purpose of transportation, or to transport, carry or take beyond the limits of the county of Liberty in the State of Texas any wild squirrels. Any person violating the provisions of this Section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars; and each such shipment shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1911, p. 98, ch. 56, § 1.]

Art. 877. [513a] Catching of fish, etc., in counties of Montgomery and Newton.—It shall be unlawful for any person in the counties of Montgomery and Newton in the state of Texas, at any time during the year, to take, catch, ensnare or entrap any fish by means of nets, traps, poison or dynamite, or in other manner than with the ordinary hook and line or trot line, in any of the fresh waters, lakes or streams of this state in said counties; and any person violating the provisions of this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars and not more than one hundred dollars; provided, that this article shall not be construed to prevent the catching of fish by nets in any of the lakes in said county, except Grand Lake. [Act 1907, ch. 63, § 1; Act 1909, p. 133.]

Art. 877a. Fishing in valley of Medina river; bass; weight and number of fish.—It shall be unlawful for any person who shall fish in any water which is located in the valley of the Medina river, where the lower or diversion dam above the town of Castroville crosses the Medina river in Medina county, Texas, to a point on the Medina river in Bandera county, Texas, which, by following the meanders of the Medina river upward toward its source, shall constitute a distance of twenty-five miles, or in any water which is impounded in Medina county, Texas, by said lower or diversion dam, or in any water which is impounded in Medina county, Texas, and in Bandera county, Texas, by what is known as the upper or main dam which crosses the Medina river, a distance of about four miles above the said lower or diversion dam, to catch and retain, or have in his possession, any bass or other fish of the bass species, which shall weigh less than one pound; or to catch and retain, or have in his possession, in any one day, more than a total aggregate of ten bass or other fish of the bass species; or to catch and retain, or have in his possession in any one day, a total aggregate of more than twenty perch, crappie or sun fish, or other fish of the perch, crappie or sunfish species, which shall be larger than two inches long; or shall, at any time during the month of March, April and May of any year, make use of a dowgiac or other similar device for catching fish, but this provision shall not prohibit what is known as fly fishing. [Act 1915, p. 135, ch. 84, § 1.]

Art. 877b. Same; sale or purchase of fish.—It shall be unlawful for any person to sell, or offer for sale, or to buy, any fish caught in any of the waters described in Section 1 [art. 877a] hereof. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 877c. Same; penalty.—Any person violating any provision of this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than $5.00 nor more than $15.00, for each violation of this law, and each fish caught in violation of this Act shall be deemed a separate violation hereof, and a separate offense, and he may be prosecuted either in the county where the fish is caught, or where he is found with them in his possession, or where the fish are sold, or bought, or where they are offered for sale. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 877d. Same; cumulative of general law.—This special law is meant to be cumulative of the General Law of the State of Texas, and is not meant to repeal the General Law of the State of Texas. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 877e. Same; catching for bait.—Nothing in this Act shall prohibit the catching of more than twenty perch or sunfish to be used for bait, provided none of the perch or sunfish so caught to be used for bait shall be larger than two inches in length. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 878. Wild game, property of public.—All the wild deer, wild antelope, wild Rocky Mountain sheep, wild turkey, wild ducks, wild geese, wild grouse, wild prairie chickens (pinnated grouse), wild Mongolian or English pheasants, wild quail or partridges, wild doves, wild pigeons, wild plover, wild snipe, wild jacksnipe, wild curlews, wild robins, wild Mexican pheasants or chachalaca, and all other wild animals, wild birds and wild fowls found within the borders of this state, shall be, and the same are hereby declared to be the property of the public. [Act 1897, ch. 149, § 1; Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 278.]

Art. 879. Unlawful to kill or have in possession any wild bird but game bird as defined.—It shall be unlawful for any person in the state of Texas to kill, catch or have in his or her possession, living or dead, any wild bird, other than a game bird, or to purchase, to offer or expose for sale, transport or ship within or without the state, any such wild bird after it has been killed or caught, except as permitted by this law; and no part of the plumage, skin or body of any bird protected by this article shall be sold or had in possession for sale. For the purposes of this article, the following only, shall be considered game birds: Wild turkey, wild ducks, wild geese, wild grouse, wild prairie chicken (pinnated grouse), wild Mongolian or English pheasants, wild quail or partridges, wild doves, wild pigeons, wild plover, wild snipe, wild jacksnipe, wild curlews, wild robins and wild Mexican pheasants or chachalaca. [Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 278.]

Art. 880. Unlawful to destroy nest or eggs of wild birds.—It shall be unlawful for any person in the state of Texas to take or needlessly destroy the nest or eggs of any wild bird, or have such nest or eggs in his or her possession, except as permitted by this law. [Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 279.]

Art. 881. Penalty for violating two preceding articles.—Any person violating any of the provisions of Sections 2 and 3 of this Act [arts. 879, 880] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall upon conviction be fined not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars for each bird, living or dead, or a part of a bird, nest or set of eggs or part thereof, possessed in violation of this Act. [Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 279, § 4, amended; Act 1911, p. 101, ch. 60, § 1, superseding art. 881, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 882. Selling or purchasing game.—Whoever shall sell or offer for sale, have in his or her possession for the purpose of sale, or whoever shall purchase or have in his possession after purchase any wild deer, wild antelope or wild Rocky Mountain sheep, killed in this State, or the carcass thereof, or the hide thereof, or the antlers thereof, or whoever shall sell or offer for sale, or have in his possession for the purpose of sale, or whoever shall purchase or have in his possession after purchase any of the game or game birds mentioned in Section 1 of this Act [art. 878] killed or taken within this State shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor

It shall further be unlawful for any person at any time to hunt deer or other game mentioned in Section 1 of this Act by aid of what is commonly known as a hunting lamp or lantern, or any other light used for the purpose of hunting at night; and after the space of five years next after this Act takes effect, it shall be unlawful for any person to kill, trap or ensnare or in any way destroy any wild antelope or Rocky Mountain sheep in the period of time embraced between the first day of January and the first day of November of each year; provided further, that it shall be unlawful for any person to kill, trap or ensnare more than two wild antelopes or one Rocky Mountain sheep during the months of November and December of each year; and any wild Mongolian or English pheasants, wild turkey or any prairie chicken (pinnated grouse), in the period of time embraced between the first day of February and the first day of November of each year. Any person violating any provisions of this Section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1897, ch. 149, § 6; Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 280, § 9, amended; Act 1911, p. 102, ch. 60, § 1, superseding art. 889, revised Pen. Code.]

Explanatory.—The above act took effect 90 days after adjournment of the legislature on March 11, 1911.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence in a prosecution for killing a wild deer out of season held to sustain a finding that the deer was killed in the close season in 1910 or 1911. Baker v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 631.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 399, 400, 408.

Art. 889a. Deer call or decoy.—It shall be unlawful for any person at any time of the year within this state, to use a deer call, whistle, decoy, horn, call, pipe, reed, or other devise, mechanical or natural, for the purpose of calling or attracting the attention of any deer, and any person hunting deer by such means, or attempting to use such means in hunting deer, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment of not less than twenty days or more than ninety days, or both by said fine and imprisonment, and each and every such unlawful act shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1915, p. 162, ch. 107, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Act 1915, ch. 107, § 1, provides “that there shall be added to Article 889 of the Revised Criminal Statutes * * * an article to be known as Article 889a.”

Art. 889b. Open season for doves.—From and after the passage of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person within this State to kill, ensnare, entrap or in any way destroy any wild doves between the first day of March and the first day of September of any year. [Act 1915, 1st S. S., p. 43, ch. 22, § 2, amending Act 1915, ch. 123, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Act 1915, ch. 123 and the amendatory act (Act 1915, S. S. ch. 22), in their titles, amend ch. 6, Title 13, of the Penal Code, by inserting therein articles 889a and 889b. As the legislature at the same session enacted another provision to be designated as article 889a, the two articles in question are here designated as articles 889b and 889c. The act took effect 90 days after adjournment of legislature on March 20, 1915.

Art. 889c. Open season for bob-whites, quail, or partridges.—From and after the passage of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person in this State to kill, entrap, ensnare or in any way destroy any bob-whites, quail or partridges in this State, between the first day of February and the first day of December of any year; provided, it shall be unlawful for any person at any time to kill or destroy in one day more than fifteen of the birds or fowls mentioned in this Act or in Article 878 of this chapter. [Act 1915, 1st S. S., p. 43, ch. 22, § 3, amending Act 1915, ch. 123.]

See note under preceding article.

Art. 889d. Penalty for violation of two preceding articles.—Any person violating the provisions of this law shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten ($10.00) dollars nor more than one hundred ($100.00) dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than five nor more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1915, 1st S. S., p. 43, ch. 22, § 4.]

Art. 890. Unlawful to receive for transportation.—It shall be unlawful for any express company, railroad company, or other common carrier, or the officers, agents, servants or employes of the same, to receive for the purpose of transportation, or to transport, carry or take beyond the limits of the State, or within this State, except as hereinafter provided, any wild animal, bird or water fowl mentioned in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 878, ante], or the carcass thereof, or the hide thereof. Any persons violating the provisions of this Section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. Provided, that each shipment shall constitute separate offense, and that such express company, or other common carrier, or its agents, servants or employes shall have the privilege of examining any suspected package for the purpose of determining whether such package contains any of the articles mentioned herein. [Act 1897, ch. 149, § 7; Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 280, § 10, amended; Act 1911, p. 103, ch. 60, § 1, superseding art. 890, revised Pen. Code.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 409.

Art. 891. Exception when lawfully killed; shipping affidavit.— Nothing in this Act shall be construed [to] prohibit the transportation or shipment of any of the game, birds or wild fowls mentioned in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 878, ante], when lawfully taken or killed, from the place of shipment to the home of the person who killed the same; provided, the person who killed said game, birds or fowls, shall accompany said game, birds or fowls on the same train or common carrier from the point of shipment to the said point of destination, and provided further, that the person desiring to ship or transport said game, birds or fowls shall first make the following affidavit in writing before some officer authorized by law to administer oaths, and deliver same to said railroad or common carrier, or to the agent of said railroad or common carrier, at the point of shipment; and upon filing the affidavit, such party shall be permitted to transport to his home in accordance herewith not exceeding twenty-five of any wild game bird, when such number is permitted to be killed or the kind offered for shipment, except wild duck, provided that such party may be permitted to transport seventy-five wild ducks upon filing the affidavit containing the provisions as stipulated in the affidavit prescribed:

State of Texas, County of Before me, the undersigned authority, on this day personally appeared....., who, after being by me duly sworn, upon oath says: I live at in the County of, in the State of; that I have killed (state the number and kind of game, birds or fowls), which [I] desire to ship from, incounty, to my home, which game I killed for my own use and not for sale, and same shall not be sold, and same will be accompanied by me from the point of shipment to the point of destination; that I have not killed or shipped exceeding three buck deer during this hunting season and have not killed or shipped exceeding twenty-five birds or fowls mentioned in Section 1 of this Act, except wild ducks, in any one day during the present hunting season; and that I have in no way violated any of the provisions of this bill; (and if such game to be shipped be wild duck) then such party shall further make affidavit that the shipment I offer is wild duck only; that the number does not exceed seventy-five, and I killed the said duck in three days consecutively, and that I did not kill more than twenty-five of same in any one day.

Sworn to and subscribed by.....before me this..... day of, 19....

Name and official character of officer.

And thereupon said game birds or fowls shall be transported or shipped by railroad or other common carrier in the name of the person making said affidavit to the home of said person, and shall mark on the card attached to said game, birds or fowls the words, "Affidavit Made." Any person violating the provisions of this Section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 281, § 11, amended; Act 1911, p. 103, ch. 60, § 1, superseding art. 891, revised Pen. Code.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 409a.

Art. 892. What birds not protected.—The English or European house sparrows, hawks, crows, buzzards, black birds, rice birds and owls are not included among the birds protected by this chapter. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent any person or persons from killing birds that are at the time destroying his growing crop. [Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 282.]

Art. 893. Domestic birds excepted.—Nothing in this chapter shall prevent the keeping of any bird in a cage as a domestic pet; provided, that such bird shall not be sold or exchanged or offered for sale or exchange, or transported out of the state; provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit the sale or shipment of canary birds or parrots. [Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 282.]

Art. 894. Possession of prohibited bird applies to any such bird.—Whenever in this chapter the possession of any bird is prohibited, said prohibition shall apply equally to a bird coming from outside the state as to one taken within the state. [Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 282.]

Art. 895. Possession during protected season prima facie evidence of guilt.—Possession at any time of the year during which the game, birds and wild fowl of the state are protected herein shall be prima facie evidence of the guilt of the person in possession thereof. [Act 1897, ch. 149, § 8; Act 1903, ch. 137; Act 1907, p. 282.]

Art. 896. Game, fish and oyster commissioner to enforce law.—It is hereby made a special duty of the game, fish and oyster commissioner to enforce the statutes of this state for the protection and preservation of wild game and wild birds, and to bring or cause to be brought actions and proceedings in the name of the state of Texas to recover any and all fines and penalties provided for in the laws now in force or that may hereafter be enacted relating to wild game and wild birds. Said game, fish and oyster commissioner may make complaint and cause proceedings to be commenced against any person for violation of any of the laws for the protection and propagation of game or birds without the sanction of the county attorney in which such proceedings are commenced, and in such case he shall not be required to furnish security for costs. Said commissioner shall at any and all times seize and take possession of all birds and animals that have been caught, taken or killed, or had in possession or under control, or have been shipped contrary to any of the laws of this state; and such seizure may be made without a warrant. All birds or animals, seized by the commissioner, shall be disposed of in such manner as may be directed by any court having competent jurisdiction to hear and determine cases for violation of the game and bird laws of this state. [Act 1907, p. 254.]

Art. 897. Has power of sheriff, may arrest without warrant.—Said game, fish and oyster commissioner shall have the same power and authority to serve criminal process as sheriffs, and shall have the same power as sheriffs to require aid in executing such process.

Said commissioner may arrest without warrant any person found by him in the act of violating any of the laws for the protection or propagation of game or wild birds, and take such person forthwith before a magistrate having jurisdiction. Such arrests may be made on Sunday, and in which case the person arrested shall be taken before a magistrate having jurisdiction, and proceeded against as soon as may be, on a week day following the arrest. [Id., p. 255.]

Art. 898. Penalty for violation.—Any person violating the provisions of this law shall be punished, upon conviction, by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars and the cost of prosecution, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

And the court shall sentence the offender to be confined in the county jail, until such fine is paid, for any period not exceeding one hundred days; and, in all cases where a fine and imprisonment is imposed, the sentence shall provide that, if the fine and costs are not paid at the time of the expiration of such imprisonment, the person serving such sentence shall be further detained in jail until such fine and costs are paid, for any period stated; provided, that the whole term of imprisonment shall not exceed six months. [Id., p. 257.]

Art. 899. Hunting license to be procured, when.—It shall hereafter be unlawful for any person who has not been a bona fide inhabitant of and resident citizen of this state, for six months last past to hunt for or kill any game or birds protected by the laws of this state, without first procuring a hunting license from the game, fish and oyster commissioner, permitting him to do so, and by paying to said commissioner the sum of fifteen dollars. Said license shall be dated when issued, and shall remain in force until the first day of September, following thereafter. It shall hereafter be unlawful for any person to hunt or kill any game quadrupeds or game birds or wild fowl protected by the game laws of this state, except in the county of his residence or in the counties adjoining the county of his residence, or on land owned or controlled by him, without first obtaining a state hunting license from the game, fish and oyster commissioner, permitting him to do so. Any person who has been a bona fide resident of this state for six months last past may procure a hunting license to hunt outside the boundaries of the county in which he resides, by paying a license fee of one dollar and seventy-five cents to the county clerk of the county in which he resides, to be dated when issued. Such license shall expire the first day of September of each year following such date. Said license shall authorize the person named therein to use firearms in the hunting or killing game birds during the hunting season of that year, but only in the manner and time prescribed by law. Said license shall limit the number and quality of game which may be taken or killed, in accordance with the provisions of law governing the subject. [Act 1909, p. 456.]

Art. 900. Person hunting who refuses to show license.—Any person found hunting, in open season, any game protected by the laws of the state, and who shall refuse to show his license herein provided for to any sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable, game commissioner or deputy game commissioner, or any other person or persons, on whose lands said person or persons are found hunting, or to any person who has the land under their control, on demand, shall be deemed guilty of a violation of the provisions of this law, and, upon conviction, shall be liable to the penalties provided herein. [Id., p. 456.]

Art. 901. [525] Oysters culled from public beds, etc.; penalty; cancellation of license.—It shall be unlawful for any person to fail or refuse to scatter the culls of such oysters as he may take from the oyster reefs as directed by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, and any person so failing or refusing to scatter such culls, as directed, by the Commissioner, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction, he shall be fined in a sum of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. And on such conviction the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner may cancel the license of the captain of the boat, and he shall also cancel the license of such person to gather oysters, on which such person is employed or for which he is gathering oysters, and no new license shall be issued to such captain or to such person convicted for a period of

Explanatory.—Act 1891, p. 155, § 2, from which art. 901 was constructed, seems to have been superseded, prior to the revision, by Act 1897, p. 127, ch. 98, § 1, which reads as follows: "When oysters are gathered as prescribed in article 529s of this act, from the public beds or reefs, except for planting, they must be culled, and the young oysters and dead shells must be returned to the original reef or bed while the young oysters are yet alive, and not to exceed ten hours from the time of taking from the water bed or reef. Any person offending against this article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars for each and every offense."

Art. 902. [526] Planting prohibited, when.—It shall be unlawful for any person to plant or purchase oysters for planting, bedding or depositing, or for marketing, or for any other purpose whatever, from the first day of May to the first day of September in any year, except by permission of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, and, if any person shall violate the provisions of this Article, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction shall be fined for each offense not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1891, p. 155, § 6; Act 1913, p. 269, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 902, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 903. [526a] Unlawful to receive for shipment, when.—It shall be unlawful for any transportation company operating within this State, its officers, agents or employes, to receive for shipment, or to ship, within the boundaries of this State, from the first day of May to the first day of September of any year, any oysters from any public bed or reef, for depositing or for marketing; provided, that nothing in this Chapter shall be so construed as to prohibit any such transportation company, its officers, agents or employees, from shipping, or receiving for shipment, any oysters taken from a private bed, located under the laws of this State, offered for shipment by the owner or owners, locator or locators, of such bed; such fact to be established by the written affidavit of the person or persons offering such oysters for shipment, made before an officer authorized to take oaths. Any officer, agent or employee of such transportation company, violating the provisions of this Section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction shall be fined for each offense not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1907, p. 233; Act 1913, p. 269, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 903, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 904. [528] Unlawful to rake, dredge, etc.; penalty.—It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to rake, dredge or excavate with machinery any public oyster bed or oyster reefs in the waters of this State without first having obtained permission of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner to so dredge or excavate with machinery. Any person or persons who shall violate the provisions of this Article shall, on conviction, be fined in any sum not less than five hundred nor more than one thousand dollars. Each day's violation of any of the provisions of this Article shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1907, p. 233, § 8; Act 1913, p. 269, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 904, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 905. [529] Unlawful to destroy or deface buoy.—Any person who shall wilfully deface, injure or destroy or remove any buoy, markers, or fence, or any parts thereof, used to designate or enclose a private oyster bed in this State, without the consent of the owner thereof, or any buoy, marker or sign placed or used by the Game, Fish or Oyster Commissioner for the purpose of designating any waters closed against fishing or oyster taking, without the consent of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1899, ch. 56; Act 1901, p. 302; Act 1913, p. 269, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 905, revised Pen. Code.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 569.

Art. 906. [529b] Unlawful to catch fish, green turtle, etc.; how and when.—It shall be unlawful for any person to catch or attempt to catch any fish, green turtle, loggerhead, terrapin or shrimp in any of the bays or navigable waters of this State, within the limits or within one mile of the limits of any city or town in this State, with seines, dragnets, fykes, set nets, trammel nets, traps, dams or weirs. A town or city in the meaning of this Act shall be a collection of one hundred families within an area of one square mile. Any one violating any of the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. In all prosecutions under the provisions of this Act, the identification of the boat from which such violation or violations occur shall be prima facie evidence against the owner, lessee, person or persons in charge or master of such boat. [Act 1897, p. 213; Act 1913, p. 269, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 906, revised Pen. Code.]

Construction of act.—This article as amended by Acts 33d Leg. c. 135, which act amended arts. 901-923 inclusive, and adding thereto articles 923a-923k, which article provided a penalty for violation of any provision of the act, when construed with the other provisions of the act which imposed different penalties for violation of the other articles, and to effectuate the intent of the Legislature, imposes the penalty only upon the violation of that article, and not upon the other articles of the act. Sterrett v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 16.

Under this article and art. 911, an information charging defendant in the alternative with catching "fish or terrapin or both fish and terrapin with a drag seine or set net" is fatally defective. Venturio v. State, 37 App. 653, 40 S. W. 974.

Art. 907. [529c] Catching same by explosives or poison.—The catching, taking or killing of fish, green turtle or terrapin in any of the salt waters or fresh waters, lakes or streams in the State by poison, lime, dynamite, nitroglycerine, giant powder or other explosives, is hereby prohibited; and any person offending against this Article, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars; and by confinement in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than ninety days. [O. C.; amended, Act 1897, p. 125; Act 1913, p. 270, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 907, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 908. [529d] Penalty for failure to take out license as a fisherman.—Any person who shall engage in the business of fishing or catching green turtle or terrapin or shrimp for market without first having procured a license therefor, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1897, p. 125; Act 1913, p. 270, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 908, revised Pen. Code.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 396.

Art. 909. [529e] Sale of certain fish of certain weight prohibited.—It shall be unlawful for any person to have in his or her possession or to sell or ship any red fish more than twelve pounds in weight or less than one and one-half pounds in weight; any trout of less than three-fourths of one pound in weight; sheepshead, flounder, Spanish mackerel or pompano of less than one-half pound in weight. It shall also be unlawful for any person to place or stretch in or across any water any seine or net for the purpose of catching or holding fish for a longer period of time than ten hours. Any person offending against this Article shall, upon conviction, be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1899, ch. 56; Act 1907, p. 238, ch. 126; Act 1909, p. 329; Act 1913, p. 270, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 909, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 910. [529f] Sale of turtle and terrapin of certain weight prohibited.—It shall be unlawful for any person to sell or ship any green turtle of less than twelve pounds in weight or terrapin of less than six inches in length of under shell, or to catch or sell any terrapin from the first day of May to the first day of August. Any person offending against this Article shall, upon conviction, be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars. [O. C.; Act 1913, p. 270, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 910, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 911. [529g] Catching fish or terrapin with drag seine during breeding season; proviso.—It shall be unlawful for any person, during the breeding season, consisting of the months intervening between June first and September first of each year, to catch any fish or terrapin in the bays, tidal or coastal waters of this State by the use of a drag seine; or to drag any seine or net or other device, except a minnow seine for catching bait of not more than twenty feet in length or a shrimp seine of not more than fifty feet in length for catching shrimp only. And, it shall be unlawful for any person to place or set or drag any net or seine or use any other device for taking fish, other than the ordinary hook and line or cast net, or minnow seine of not more than twenty feet in length, within the waters of any pass leading from the Texas coastal waters into the Gulf of Mexico, or within one mile of such pass, or within the waters of any pass, stream or canal leading from one body of Texas bay or coastal waters into another body of such waters. And the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, whenever he has reason to believe that fish are breeding, or that it is destructive to fish, to permit fishing in any of such tidal waters, shall have power and authority to close such waters against fishing with any net, seine or other device, except by hook and line or cast net or minnow net of no greater length than twenty feet; but such commissioner shall give notice of his intention to close any such waters against fishing with nets and seines for two weeks prior to such closing by posting notices in public places near such waters; and after the date set in such notices for the closing of such waters, it shall be unlawful to drag, seine or set nets in such waters for that period of time that the commissioner shall in the notices declare they shall be closed. Any person offending against the provisions of this Article, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by fine of not less than $25.00 nor more than $200.00; and each day shall constitute a separate offense, and in all prosecutions under this article the identification of the boat from which the violation occurred shall be prima facie evidence against the owner of the party last in charge of such seines or nets or on such boat.

Nothing in the foregoing article shall be taken to prohibit fishing on the Gulf Beach outside of one mile of the passes at any time and with any net or seine authorized by the provisions of this chapter. And provided further, that this section is not intended to prevent the use of trammel nets, gill nets or other nets, when used strictly as set nets, except in passes, streams, canals and in waters within one mile of passes leading from coastal waters into the Gulf of Mexico. [Act 1897, ch. 98; Act 1899, ch. 56; Act 1909, p. 329; Act 1913, ch. 135; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 33, ch. 23, § 1.]

Prohibited territory.—A defined channel, extending between Padre and Mustang Islands, through which the tide flows and ebbs, leading from the interior end of a strait to Corpus Christi Bay, one of the coast waters of Texas on the Gulf of Mexico, through which channel the Gulf waters flow, is a part of the Corpus Christi Pass, within this article as amended. Gibson v. Sterrett (Civ. App.) 144 S. W. 1189.

Seining is prohibited in the entire length of the channel known as Corpus Christi Pass leading from Corpus Christi Bay to the Gulf of Mexico by this article as amended. Gavinia v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 594.

Principal offenders.—See notes under article 74, ante.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 398.

An information charging accused with seining and dragging a seine is sufficient to charge a violation of this article as amended. Gavinia v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 594.

See Venturio v. State, 37 App. 653, 40 S. W. 974; note under 906.

Question of law.—See notes under art. 786, C. C. P.

Whether Corpus Christi Pass is covered by this article as amended, is a question of law, and not of fact, and hence a charge that, if accused did seine and drag a seine in that pass, he was guilty of violating that section, was not a charge on the weight of the evidence. Gavinia v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 594.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence in a prosecution for seining in prohibited waters held to justify a refusal of a peremptory instruction for defendant. Gavinia v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 594.

Art. 912. [529h] Person fishing with drag seine to return fish of certain size to water.—Any person fishing with a drag seine or set net, for sale or market, shall return all fish, green turtle or terrapin of the sizes and weights, specified in Articles 909 and 910 of the Penal Code, to the water, while they are yet alive, except sharks, gars, rays, catfish and sawfish; and the size of the meshes of the fish seines shall not be less than one and one-half inches square, not including the bag nor shall any seine exceed twelve hundred feet in length; and any person offending against this Article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1897, ch. 98; Act 1909, p. 331; Act 1913, p. 271, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 912, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 913. [529i] Coast survey charts as evidence.—All United States Coast Survey Charts covering the coast of Texas shall be admissible as evidence in all prosecutions under this Act. [O. C.; Act 1913, p. 271, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 913, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 914. [529j] Closed season for oysters.—It shall be unlawful for any person to take or catch oysters from any public beds or reefs, for sale or for market, from the first day of April to the first of September of each year. Any person offending against this Article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars; and each day shall constitute a separate offense; provided that part of Laguna Madre, south and west of Baffin's Bay, be exempted from the operation of this Article. [Act 1907, ch. 126; Act 1909, p. 331; Act 1913, p. 271, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 914, revised Pen. Code.]

For public and private beds defined, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, article 2981.

Art. 915. [529j½] Use of screens on taking water from public waters.—It shall be the duty of every person, firm or corporation using pumps for the purpose of taking water from the public waters of the State, when directed to do so by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner to place screens over the mouth of the intake pipe for the purpose of preventing fish from entering said pipe. The size of and regulations for placing such screens shall be designated by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission. Any person, firm or corporation failing to comply with this Article, after notification by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner so to do shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars; and each day shall constitute a separate offense.

Art. 916. [529/] Taking fish, turtle, terrapin, or oysters, with seine without license.—It shall be unlawful for any person to catch any fish, green turtle or terrapin, with seine or set net for market, in any of the bays or coast waters of this State, or gather any oysters with tongs or otherwise, for market or planting, from any of the public reefs or beds in this State, without having a license from the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or his deputy. Any person offending against this Article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars; and each day shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1897, ch. 98; Act 1899, p. 77; Act 1913, p. 271, ch. 135, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Pen. Code 1895, arts. 529k, 529l, were held unconstitutional in Gustafson v. State, 48 S. W. 518, as involving discrimination against nontaxpaying citizens.

Art. 917. Dealer in fish and oysters shall take out license; requirements; "wholesale dealer" defined.—For the protection of the fish and oyster industry any individual, firm or corporation, engaged in or who may engage in, the business of a wholesale dealer or dealers in fish and oysters, shall on or before the first day of September of each year, secure from the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or one of his deputies, a license granting such individual, firm or corporation, permission to engage in said occupation. For the purpose of obtaining this license the applicant desiring same must make written application to the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or one of his deputies, in which he (the applicant) shall set forth, under oath, if required, that he is a citizen of the United States; he shall also agree that, because of the privilege which he applies for from the State of Texas, that all products handled by him shall at all times be subject to the inspection of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or any of his deputies; and in said application he shall authorize said Commissioner or any of his deputies to enter his place of business, or any place where he may have such products stored, and inspect same. He shall also agree to keep a correct record of all fish and oysters handled by him under this Chapter in a book to be furnished by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner; and, further, that failure on his part to keep a correct record shall be grounds for the forfeiture of his license granted him under the application aforesaid. This application, having been duly executed and delivered to the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or any of his deputies, together with the fee for same, it shall then be the duty of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or his deputy, to issue to the applicant a license to engage in the business set forth in the application. Said license must be signed by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or one of his deputies, stamped with the seal of his office, and state the name of the licensee, place of business and the kind of license applied for, and shall be good for twelve months following the date of issuance. For such license the applicant shall pay one dollar for each one thousand pounds of fish handled by him, and a tax of one cent per barrel on oysters handled by him, which tax shall be paid monthly; the tax to be paid on the first of each month, which may be due upon the said products handled during the preceding month, as shown by the record books hereinbefore mentioned. And any person, firm or corporation, or association of persons, or any officer, agent or employee of any company, corporation or association of persons who shall engage in the business of a wholesale dealer in fish and oysters, or either, without procuring a license to follow said business, or without paying the tax required by this Article, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and each day such business may be engaged in in violation of this Article shall constitute a separate offense; and upon conviction for pursuing said occupation without payment of the tax required by law or for any other violation of the game, fish and oyster law, the license of such dealer shall be forfeited. A wholesale dealer, within the meaning of this Article, is one who is engaged in the fish and oyster business as a dealer, supplying the retail and wholesale trade, or either, by sales in quantities of fifty (50) pounds or more of fish, and of oysters of five (5) barrels or more. [Act 1909, p. 327; Act 1913, p. 272, ch. 135, § 1, superseding art. 917, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 918. [529n] Selling unculled oysters; penalty.—Any person offering, for sale, or who shall sell, any cargo of oysters which shall contain more than five per cent of young oysters, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. Any oyster that measures less than three and one-half inches from hinge to mouth shall be deemed a young oysters for the purpose of this and the preceding Article [Art. 917]. [Act 1897, ch. 98; Act 1909, p. 327; Act 1913, p. 273, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 918, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 919. [529o] Duty of Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner.—It shall be the duty of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner or his deputy, when he thinks that any cargo of oysters offered for sale, contains more than five per cent of young oysters, to take as many as he may deem necessary from such cargo, cull them and measure the young oysters, or those that measure less than three and one-half inches from the hinge to the mouth, and ascertain to the best of his ability, the proportion of the young oysters by number to the marketable oysters; and, if the young oysters be in greater proportion than five per cent, the cargo shall be deemed unculled, and the owner shall be deemed guilty of the offense prescribed in Article 918 of the Penal Code. [Act 1907, ch. 126; Act 1909, p. 327; Act 1913, p. 273, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 919, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 920. [529p.] Theft from private oyster bed.—It shall be unlawful for any person to take oysters from a private bed, or to take oysters deposited by one making up a cargo for market or family use, without the consent or permission of the owner thereof; and anyone offending any provisions of this Article shall be deemed guilty of theft and, upon conviction, shall be punished as provided by law for the offense of theft. [O. C.; Act 1913, p. 273, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 920, revised Pen. Code.]

Repeal.—This statute was passed subsequent to the enactment of Penal Code, article 527, and there is such an irreconcilable conflict between the two that both cannot stand, therefore, such article 527 is repealed. Ragazine v. State, 47 App. 46, 84 S. W. 833.

Art. 921. [529t] Selling oysters gathered for planting.—It shall be unlawful for any person gathering oysters for planting on locations obtained from the State or on private property, to sell, market or in any way dispose of oysters so gathered at the time of gathering, for any other purpose than planting, provided, this shall not be considered as meaning the right to dispose of a location or oyster bed. Any person offending against this Article shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1897, ch. 98; Act 1907, p. 238; Act 1913, p. 273, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 921, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 922. [529u] Gathering seed oysters without license.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation or joint stock company to gather seed oysters for planting without having first obtained a permit or license to do so from the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or his deputy, said permit or license to designate the reef or beds from which the applicant is allowed to gather seed oysters; and any person, agent, employee or officer of a firm, corporation or joint stock company gathering or having gathered oysters for planting from any bed or reef designated, or who has not a permit or license for gathering seed oysters, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1899, p. 77; Act 1913, p. 273, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 922, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 923. Penalty for selling fish, turtle, oysters, etc., without license.—Any person who shall market or offer to market any fish, turtle, terrapin, shrimp or oysters taken from salt waters of this State, or any fish taken from any fresh water lakes or streams, in any quantity greater than fifty pounds, shall pay the tax and obtain the permit, as prescribed by law, before disposing of any part of said product, and if he or any other person shall sell or shall dispose of any part of said product for shipment or storage before obtaining said permit, the person so selling or disposing of said product, or any part thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon a conviction, shall be fined not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars. In prosecutions in this and other similar cases, the fact of the fish, turtle, terrapin, shrimp and oysters being of the varieties that are found in the waters of this State shall be prima facie evidence that said fish, turtle, terrapin, shrimp or oysters were taken from the waters of this State. [Act 1905, p. 134; Act 1913, p. 273, ch. 135, § 1, amending art. 923, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 923a. Permit to use dredges for oysters.—Whenever the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner believe that an oyster bed can be improved by the use of dredges in it, he may grant the use of such dredges in such reefs, but only under the superintendence, supervision and in the presence of a deputy Fish and Oyster Commissioner. [Act 1913, p. 274, ch. 135, § 1.]

Construction of act.—Art. 906, as amended by Acts 33d Leg. c. 135, which act amended arts. 901-923 inclusive, and adding thereto articles 923a-923k, which article provided a penalty for violation of any provision of the act, when construed with the other provisions of the act which imposed different penalties for violation of the other articles, and to effectuate the intent of the Legislature, imposes the penalty only upon the violation of that article, and not upon the other articles of the act. Sterrett v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 16.

Art. 923b. Closing overworked reefs; notice.—Whenever the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner believes that any public reef is being overworked or damaged in any way he may close such reef against any one taking oysters from it, but before he closes such reef he shall give two weeks' notice of such closing posting notices in such fish houses as are in two towns nearest such reefs. In such notices he shall state the date of closing and the time for which such reefs shall be closed. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Art. 923c. Seizure of unlawful fishing devices and instrumentalities.—Nets, seines, boats or other devices for catching, fish, unlawfully used in the waters of this State, or boats, dredges, barges and tongs unlawfully used in violating the oyster laws of this State, are hereby declared public nuisances and may be summarily seized, destroyed and abated by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, or his deputies and no action for damages shall be maintained against such Commissioner or his deputies for such seizure, destruction and abatement. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Validity of act.—In the exercise of the power of the state to protect fish, it may not only prohibit the use of seines and nets, but to enforce such regulation may declare seines and nets to be a nuisance, and require their abatement, as was done by this article. Sterrett v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 16.

Art. 923d. Penalty for taking oysters from closed reef.—Any person who shall take any oysters from any oyster reef which has been closed by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be fined in a sum of not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Art. 923e. Complaint before justice of the peace.—Complaint against any person for the violations of the game, fish and oyster laws of this State may be made before any justice of the peace of the county in which the offense is charged to have been committed, and he shall have jurisdiction to try and dispose of such cases, provided the penalties prescribed for such offenses are within the jurisdiction of justices of the peace. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Art. 923f. What devices may not be used for fishing.—It shall be unlawful for any person to take or catch any fish, in the public fresh water rivers, creeks, lakes, bayous, pools, lagoons or tanks of this State by any other means than by the ordinary hook and line or trout line, or by set or drag net or or seine the meshes of which are less than three inches square, or trammel net, the meshes of any part of which are less than four inches square or by a minnow seine of no more than twenty feet in length, and it shall be unlawful for any person to place in the public fresh water rivers, creeks, lakes, bayous, pools, lagoons or tanks of this State any net or other device or trap for taking or catching fish other than a set net or drag net or seine, the meshes of which are less than four inches square. Any person violating any provision of this Section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. All fresh water streams or bayous emptying into the tidal waters of this State are, for the purpose of this Act, hereby declared fresh water streams to their mouths. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Art. 923g. Having in possession or carrying seine or drag net into prohibited waters.—It shall be unlawful for any person to carry into or have in his possession in any waters where seining is prohibited, any seine or drag net, and any such person who shall carry into or have in his possession any such seine or drag net shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be fined in a sum of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars, and any seine or drag net so carried into or found in such waters shall be deemed a nuisance, and the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner or his deputy are required to abate such nuisance by the destruction of such nets, as provided in this Act. Provided, that this Act shall not apply to the closed waters within one mile of any town. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Art. 923h. Dealer's license forfeited on conviction.—On the conviction of any wholesale dealer or the conviction of any licensed fisherman or oysterman, the license of such dealer shall be forfeited and the Game, Fish Oyster Commissioner shall not issue to such dealer, fisherman or oysterman another license for a period of three years. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Art. 923i. Obstruction or diversion of waters.—It shall be unlawful for any person to wilfully obstruct the natural flow of waters into any of the public waters of this State or two [to] wilfully divert the water from any of the public lakes, streams or ponds of this State, except for domestic or other necessary uses or for irrigation purposes, and any person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined in a sum of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id.]

Art. 923j. Measure for sale of oysters.—Any person who uses any measure in the sale of oysters other than the measure established by this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined in a sum of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id.]

The act does not prescribe the measure referred to.

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Art. 923k. Taking boat, etc., into prohibited waters.—Any person who shall wilfully and with intent to injure the owner take any boat, seine or net or other device for fishing into prohibited waters, or shall use said articles for the unlawful taking or catching of fish, so as to cause the destruction of same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars, and by confinement in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than ninety days. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Validity of act.—This article is a valid exercise of the power of the state to regulate the right of fishery. Sterrett v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 16.

Art. 923l. Seining for gars, turtle, etc., not prohibited; seining by county authorities.—The provisions of this Act relative to use of seines in fresh water streams shall not prevent the seining for gars, turtle and other natural enemies of fish, under the supervision of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner or a deputy; and the commissioners' court of any county is hereby authorized to have any stream, creek or lake in said county seined for the purpose of destroying any gar, turtle or other natural enemies of the fish which may be caught from such waters, said seining to be done under the supervision of and in the presence of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner or a deputy. The expenses of said seining to be borne by the said county, or by the citizens thereof; all good or edible fish which may be caught or taken in said seine to be returned to the waters. [Id.]

See notes under art. 923a, ante.

Art. 923m. Seining for drum fish; permit; superintendence.—Any person leasing an oyster claim or oyster reef in waters where seining is prohibited, may apply to the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner for permission to seine for drum fish in such waters. In his application he shall make oath that the drum fish are seriously damaging his oysters, and that if he is permitted to seine for such drum fish in such waters, he will not take or destroy any other food fish but will throw them back in the water. If the Commissioner is satisfied that such damage is being done, he may grant such permission to the person applying for it, specifying in such permit the length and mesh of the seine to be used, the length of time in which it is to be used, and the claim or reef on which it is to be used. And such Commissioner shall assign a deputy Fish and Oyster Commissioner to superintend such seining and no seine shall be dragged except in his presence, and for which, a person obtaining the permission to seine, as set forth above, shall pay to the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner, $2.50 per day to be placed in the special fish and oyster fund, for such services. The person granted such permission shall board the deputy Fish and Oyster Commissioner during his superintendence of such seining. If the person obtaining the permission shall violate any of the provisions of this Act, he shall be prosecuted and punished under the criminal laws of this State applicable in such cases. [Act 1913, p. 306, ch. 146, § 1, amending Art. 4018, Rev. St. 1911.]

Art. 923n. Taking of marl, sand, shells, or mudshells from fishing waters; permit; proviso.—If any person, association of persons, corporate or otherwise, shall, for himself or itself, or for or on behalf of or under the direction of another person, association of persons, corporate or otherwise, take or carry away any of the marl, sand or shells or mudshell included in this Act, [Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts 4021b–4021i] or shall disturb any of said marl, sand shells or mudshell or oyster beds or fishing waters, or shall fish in any fresh water lake or shall operate in or upon any of said places for any purpose other than that necessary or incident to navigation or dredging under State or Federal authority, without having first obtained a written permit from the Game, Fish and Oyster Commissioner for the territory in which such operation is carried on, such person, association of persons, corporate or otherwise, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in a sum of money not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and one-half of the proceeds arising from such fines shall be appropriated to the road and bridge fund of the county in which the conviction is had and one-half shall be appropriated to the fish and oyster fund. Provided, however, that there may be taken and appropriated from beneath the waters of Galveston Bay, sand for filling and raising the grade of Galveston Island, without making payment therefor to the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission or to the State of Texas. [Act 1911, p. 120, ch. 68, § 9; Act 1913, p. 329, ch. 154, § 1.]

29. Verdict.

1. Nature and elements of offense.—The common law definition of forgery is, "the fraudulent making or alteration of a writing to the prejudice of another's right." This definition is sufficiently comprehensive to include official as well as private writings, but has not been adopted in the Code of this state. Rogers v. State, 8 App. 401.

2. — Intent.—See notes under art. 926, post.

3. — Nature and apparent efficacy of instrument.—Pecuniary obligation, see post, art. 930; Johnson v. State, 40 App. 605, 51 S. W. 382, 76 Am. St. Rep. 742; Tracy v. State, 49 App. 37, 90 S. W. 308.

A written instrument, to be the subject of forgery, must be valid, if genuine, for the purpose intended. If void or invalid on its face, and it cannot be made good by averment, the crime of forgery cannot be predicated upon it. It must be an instrument which, if it were true, would create, increase, diminish, discharge, or defeat a pecuniary obligation, or would transfer, or in some manner affect property. Anderson v. State, 20 App. 595; Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503; Howell v. State, 37 Tex. 591; Rollins v. State, 22 App. 548, 3 S. W. 759, 58 Am. Rep. 659.

Any written instrument which, if true, would create, increase, diminish, discharge or defeat a pecuniary obligation, or would transfer or in some manner affect property, is subject-matter of forgery. But if void or invalid on its face, and it cannot be made good by averment, forgery cannot be predicated upon it. Hendricks v. State, 26 App. 176, 9 S. W. 555, 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 463; King v. State, 27 App. 567, 11 S. W. 527, 11 Am. St. Rep. 203.

An instrument void on its face is a subject of forgery if extrinsic facts are alleged showing that the holder might be enabled by reason thereof to defraud another. Forcy v. State, 60 App. 206, 131 S. W. 585, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 327; Green v. State, 63 App. 510, 140 S. W. 444; Hendricks v. State, 26 App. 176, 9 S. W. 555, 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 463; Daud v. State, 34 App. 460, 31 S. W. 376.

But if the legality of the instrument be but doubtful, and by proper averments its legality can be shown, it is the subject of forgery. Rollins v. State, 22 App. 548, 3 S. W. 759, 58 Am. Rep. 659; Daud v. State, 34 App. 460, 31 S. W. 376; Carder v. State, 35 App. 105, 31 S. W. 678; Scott v. State, 40 App. 107, 48 S. W. 523.

An instrument void on its face cannot be the subject of forgery. Forcy v. State, 60 App. 206, 131 S. W. 585, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 327; Scott v. State, 40 App. 107, 48 S. W. 523; King v. State, 42 App. 108, 57 S. W. 840, 96 Am. St. Rep. 792; Green v. State, 63 App. 510, 140 S. W. 444.

Signing of a fictitious name, with fraudulent intent, is forgery. Hocker v. State, 34 App. 359, 30 S. W. 783, 53 Am. St. Rep. 716; Davis v. State, 37 App. 218, 39 S. W. 296.

It is immaterial as to where in the instrument the signature appears, if it purports to have been placed there to give it authenticity. Crawford v. State, 31 App. 51, 19 S. W. 766; Elkins v. State, 35 App. 207, 32 S. W. 1047.

Undated instrument. Boles v. State, 13 App. 650.

Forgery may be predicated upon an instrument which, if true, would tend, though might not actually, defeat or discharge an obligation. Fonville v. State, 17 App. 368.

If the instrument would create a pecuniary obligation upon the purported maker if genuine it is the subject of forgery. Scott v. State, 40 App. 107, 48 S. W. 523.

The name of payee in forged instrument or something from which to ascertain to whom payment is to be made is essential. Colter v. State, 40 App. 166, 49 S. W. 379.

Unstamped instrument. Thomas alias Moon v. State, 40 App. 565, 51 S. W. 242, 46 L. R. A. 454, 76 Am. St. Rep. 740.

Order to "let Bare have $5 in grosses and charge the same to" the purported drawer is an order for articles of value, implies an obligation to the extent of $5, and without the averment of extrinsic facts will support an indictment for forgery. Hendricks v. State, 26 App. 176, 9 S. W. 555, 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 463. And see Williams v. State, 24 App. 342, 6 S. W. 531.

A written instrument which, if genuine, would be valid, can be made the basis of an indictment for forgery. Hendricks v. State, 26 App. 176, 9 S. W. 555. See Alexander v. State, 28 App. 186, 12 S. W. 595; Sweet v. State, 28 App. 223, 12 S. W. 590; Hooper v. State, 30 App. 412, 17 S. W. 1066, 28 Am. St. Rep. 926; Burks v. State, 24 App. 326, 6 S. W. 300.

If the instrument is void or invalid upon its face, and incapable of being made good by the averment of extrinsic facts, an indictment for forgery cannot be predicated upon it. Hendricks v. State, 26 App. 176, 9 S. W. 555, 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 463; Daud v. State, 34 App. 460, 31 S. W. 376.

Signing a dead person's name to a check with intent to defraud is forgery. Brewer v. State, 32 App. 74, 22 S. W. 41, 40 Am. St. Rep. 760.

Two parties of the same name lived in different counties, defendant secured the signing of one of their names to the instrument representing him to be the other one; held, that he was guilty of forgery. Peel v. State, 35 App. 308, 33 S. W. 541, 60 Am. St. Rep. 49.

Where one person induces another to sign a third person's name to a bond intending to pass such instrument as the bond of such party and does so pass it, he is guilty of forgery. Peel v. State, 35 App. 308, 33 S. W. 541, 60 Am. St. Rep. 49.

The alleged forged instrument was set out as follows: "May 22, 1897. Mr. Brin Pies let John Womble hame ine thing that he wont J O Thompson;" held, the instrument does not on its face import such an obligation as would constitute forgery. Womble v. State, 39 App. 24, 44 S. W. 827.

To constitute the basis of forgery, the instrument must appear on its face to be, or must in fact be, one which, if true, would possess some legal validity, or in other words must be legally capable of effecting a fraud. Cagle v. State, 39 App. 109, 44 S. W. 1097, and authorities cited.

A good test is whether the subject-matter of the alleged forgery would create a pecuniary liability upon the purported maker, if it were genuine. And every instrument purporting to be a complete pecuniary obligation on the part of the maker, is the subject of forgery. Scott v. State, 40 App. 105, 48 S. W. 523.

It is not necessary to constitute forgery that the instrument be full and complete. If it is complete so far as the maker is concerned, it is sufficient. Spicer v. State, 52 App. 177, 105 S. W. 813.

One of two persons having the same name who signs the name to a note with intent that it may be used in trade as the note of the other, is guilty. Edwards v. State, 53 App. 50, 108 S. W. 673, 126 Am. St. Rep. 767.

The bond of the guardian of an infant over 14 years of age was the subject of forgery, even though no notice was given of the application for guardianship letters and the bond was not filed for nearly 40 days after waiver of citation by the minor and the appointment of accused as guardian. Jones v. State, 60 App. 67, 130 S. W. 1012.

A writing valid on its face though invalid as a matter of fact or under the proof, is the subject of forgery. King v. State, 57 S. W. 840; Jones v. State, 60 App. 67, 130 S. W. 1012.

An instrument valid on its face may be forged, though extrinsic facts exist which would avoid it if genuine, or though other steps would have been necessary to have perfected it. Jones v. State, 60 App. 67, 130 S. W. 1012.

A written instrument filled in over the genuine signature of the purported maker, agreeing to give defendant a sum of money for his equity in land for which the signer had sued, and agreeing not to dispossess defendant until the amount named is paid, is an instrument subject to forgery. Wheeler v. State, 62 App. 370, 137 S. W. 124.

Where the reading is so imperfect and obscure that, without extrinsic evidence, it does not show a capacity of effecting fraud, it is not a subject of forgery. Green v. State, 63 App. 510, 140 S. W. 444.

An instrument to be the subject of forgery must be of a character calculated to deceive. Bagley v. State, 63 App. 606, 141 S. W. 107.

Where a contract of insurance demanded proof by affidavit with proper seal of death of insured, an indictment for passing a forged proof of death, which set cut an affidavit without a seal, did not allege an instrument which was the subject of forgery. Bagley v. State, 63 App. 606, 141 S. W. 107.

Where accused, who was indebted upon a note, falsely uttered a receipt, which purported to show that the note had been paid, and in an action on the note pleaded the receipt, and offered parol testimony to explain the receipt, which was ambiguous, he was guilty of forgery, though the receipt taken by itself was unintelligible. Barber v. State, 64 App. 89, 142 S. W. 582.

In a prosecution for forging an express money order, which recited on its face that any alteration, defacement, or mutilation rendered the order void it is no defense to show that the written word of the amount of the order was so blurred and smeared as to be illegible, where it appeared that the amount of the order as expressed in numerals was clear, for bad writing or bad spelling will not vitiate an instrument. Cheesebough v. State, 70 App. 612, 157 S. W. 761.

Under this article an alleged forged instrument must on its face be a completed instrument, or, if not a completed instrument, the indictment must allege extrinsic facts to show that the instrument, if genuine, would be a valid instrument. Ritter v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 727.

4. — Particular instruments.—Order for payment of money though not addressed to any particular person. Dixon v. State (App.) 26 S. W. 500; Kennedy v. State, 33 App. 183, 26 S. W. 78; Green v. State (Cr. App.) 140 S. W. 444.

Order for money or goods, though neither accepted nor filled. Keeler v. State, 15 App. 111; Crawford v. State, 31 App. 51, 19 S. W. 766.

Instrument purporting to be a deed, but neither witnessed nor acknowledged, is valid as a contract and is the subject of forgery. Lassiter v. State, 35 App. 540, 34 S. W. 751; Howard v. State, 37 App. 494, 36 S. W. 475, 66 Am. St. Rep. 812.

Indorsement of confederate pension warrant drawn payable to the order of a pensioner who had died, whether the warrant was negotiable or not. Dreben v. State, 71 App. 341, 162 S. W. 501.

Where the drawer of a check after it was paid by the bank on which it was drawn altered the date thereof and inserted a provision that it was to be applied on a particular note held by the payee and given by the drawer after the check was paid, thereby making it purport to evidence a payment on such note, he was guilty of "forgery" within this article as one of the tests of whether an instrument is the subject of forgery is whether, if the instrument were true, the holder would be enabled to maintain or defeat a civil suit by such instrument (citing Words and Phrases, Forgery). Bunker v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 108.

5. — Injury from forgery.—See art. 926, post.

6. Forgery and uttering forged instrument distinguished.—Forgery and uttering forged instrument are distinct offenses. Green v. State, 36 App. 109, 35 S. W. 971; Preston v. State, 40 App. 80, 48 S. W. 581.

7. Forgery and swindling in same transaction.—Scott v. State, 40 App. 108, 48 S. W. 523.

8. Swindling distinguished.—Where one fills in the blank spaces of a printed receipt, the signature of which is not in writing, nor resembles manuscript, but is printed in bold type, he is not guilty of forgery, but of swindling. Heath v. State, 49 App. 49, 89 S. W. 1063, 122 Am. St. Rep. 783.

Where a person obtained money from a bank by the unauthorized signing of the name of another to a note, it is forgery and indictable as such, rather than as swindling. Ashmore v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 196.

9. Principals.—See notes under article 74 ante.

10. Accomplice.—See notes under article 79, ante, and C. C. P. art. 801.

11. Defenses.—See Webb v. State, 47 App. 305, 83 S. W. 394; Plemons v. State, 44 App. 555, 72 S. W. 854.

Subsequent ratification of the act of the person whose name was forged does not condone the forgery. Countee v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 127.

That a firm owed accused or his father for work performed is no defense to a prosecution for forging a check purporting to be drawn by the firm, though accused intended that the amount thereof should be credited on the account. Morville v. State (Cr. App.) 141 S. W. 96.

It is no defense to a prosecution for forging the names of others to a promissory note that accused did not think that they would object, it appearing that one of the parties whose name he subscribed to the note refused to sign it, and that the others refused to ratify the signature thereafter. Meredith v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1019.

12. Venue.—See C. C. P. art. 235.

13. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 410.

Necessary allegations: Shanks v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 326; State v. Baggerly, 21 Tex. 757; Anderson v. State, 20 App. 595; Thomas v. State, 18 App. 213; Smith v. State, 31 App. 51, 19 S. W. 766, and cases cited; Thurmond v. State, 25 App. 366, 8 S. W. 473; Lucas v. State, 39 App. 48, 44 S. W. 825; Webb v. State, 39 App. 534, 47 S. W. 356; Brooks v. State, 45 App. 206, 75 S. W. 507; Franklin v. State, 46 App. 181, 78 S. W. 934; Usher v. State, 47 App. 93, 81 S. W. 309; Knezek v. State, 49 App. 157, 90 S. W. 1099; Huckaby v. State, 45 App. 577, 78 S. W. 942, 108 Am. St. Rep. 975.

It must be alleged that the instrument charged to be a forgery was made without lawful authority. Shanks v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 326.

Indictment which alleges that the forged instrument "did create a pecuniary obligation" is inconsistent, incongruous and fatally defective. If it was false and forged it could not create a pecuniary obligation. Scott v. State, 40 App. 107, 48 S. W. 523.

An indictment charging in one part the entire instrument as forged and in another that appellant knew the indorsement was forged, held not duplicitous. Strang v. State, 32 App. 219, 22 S. W. 680.

An indictment charging forgery of an instrument purporting to be a deed which was neither witnessed nor acknowledged, charges an offense. Lassiter v. State, 35 App. 540, 34 S. W. 751.

Indictment held good, though the letters "A. D." before the year were omitted. Whorton v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1082.

An indictment, charging accused with passing a forged instrument by introducing it in evidence on the trial of an action in the court held by a justice of the peace, sufficiently designated such court as the "justice court"; such court being known and generally called by that name. Bunker v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 108.

Where a count, in an indictment charging accused with passing a forged instrument, also contained allegations that accused forged such instrument, they could be eliminated as surplusage. Bunker v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 108.

14. — Statutory form.—See art. 470 C. C. P. Form No. 27.

15. — Intent.—See C. C. P. art. 454 and notes.

For indictment held sufficient, though it failed to charge the intent to defraud, see Howard v. State, 37 App. 494, 36 S. W. 475, 66 Am. St. Rep. 812.

Where, though an indictment for forgery charges that the offense was "with intent to injure and defraud," a conviction may be had upon a showing that the offense was committed with intent either to injure or defraud. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 178.

16. — Description of or setting forth instrument in general.—It is sufficient to charge the gravamen of the offense in the language of the code, and set out the forged instrument in hæc verba. Labbaite v. State, 6 App. 483.

An indictment designating the instrument as a "school voucher or check" is sufficient, the instrument being set out in hæc verba. Thomas v. State, 18 App. 213.

The indictment must purport to and must set out the alleged false instrument by its tenor, unless it be impracticable to do so, in which case it must specifically allege the reason for not setting it out and then allege its substance, and so describe it as to identify it with reasonable certainty. Smith v. State, 18 App. 399; Thomas v. State, 18 App. 213; Baker v. State, 14 App. 332; White v. State, 3 App. 605; State v. Baggerly, 21 Tex. 757.

In setting out an alleged forged instrument it is not necessary to set out any writing put upon the instrument subsequent to the forgery. Hennessey v. State, 23 App. 340, 5 S. W. 215; May v. State, 15 App. 430; Labbaite v. State, 6 App. 257.

It is sufficient if the instrument is set out in hæc verba. Westbrook v. State, 23 App. 401, 5 S. W. 248.

Indictment held to sufficiently allege that the instrument was set out in hæc verba. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 267.

Indorsement on back of forged instrument held essential. Robinson v. State, 35 App. 54, 43 S. W. 526, 60 Am. St. Rep. 20; Daud v. State, 34 App. 460, 31 S. W. 376; Overly v. State, Id., 500, 31 S. W. 377.

An indictment for forging a railroad ticket should set out the stamp and indorsement on the back of the ticket. Robinson v. State, 35 App. 54, 43 S. W. 526, 60 Am. St. Rep. 20.

An indictment for forgery of a postal money order should, when the forged order cannot be procured, set out a substantial copy of it. Pierce v. State, 38 App. 604, 44 S. W. 292.

It is sufficient to set out the instrument by its tenor alleged to have been forged. Webb v. State, 39 App. 504, 47 S. W. 356; Id. (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 498.

A memorandum on a note which forms no part of it need not be copied in the indictment in setting out the forged instrument. Adkins v. State, 41 App. 577, 56 S. W. 64.

Revenue stamps on forged paper (a note) are not part of the paper and need not be described. Giles v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 99.

Indictment is sufficient if it pleads the substance of the forged instrument. Dudley v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 111.

Indorsements on a forged note constitute no part of the note and need not be set out in the indictment. Beer v. State, 42 App. 505, 60 S. W. 962, 96 Am. St. Rep. 810.

The indictment alleged: That, at the time of the offense, R. Jacobs & Sons was a business firm. That Harvey Roamell had credit with such firm. That accused fraudulently passed as true to the said R. Jacobs a false and forged instrument in writing, as follows: "To Mr. R. Jacobs & sons please fill this order for me 17 $ 35 ¢ Harvey romal." That in such instrument the term "Mr. Jacobs & sons" was meant for "R. Jacobs & Sons"; the word "oder" for the word "order"; the figures "17 $ 35 ¢" for $17.35; and the name "Harvey romal" for "Harvey Roamell"—all of which was intended for an order from Harvey Roamell upon R. Jacobs & Sons, in favor of the bearer for $17.35 worth of goods. Held that, if the instrument was the subject of forgery, the indictment sufficiently set forth the purport of the instrument so as to make it valid. Forey v. State, 60 App. 206, 131 S. W. 585, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 327.

An indictment charging that accused on a specified date, within the county and state, and before the presentment of the indictment, did without lawful authority, and with intent to injure and defraud, wilfully and fraudulently make a false instrument in writing purporting to be the act of another, to wit, purporting to be the act of L., he being a fictitious person, "which false and forged instrument was to the tenor as follows," and then copying a check alleged to have been forged, was sufficient. McGee v. State, 62 App. 358, 137 S. W. 686.

An indictment which alleges that accused, with intent to defraud, fraudulently made a false instrument in writing to the tenor following, then setting out in hæc verba an obligation binding one to pay to another a specified sum, is sufficient, within the rule that it is not necessary that an indictment for forgery contain a purport clause. Whittaker v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 599.

An indictment for forgery of a check need not allege an indorsement thereon, put on it at the banker's request after its presentation at the bank; the check being a complete instrument without the indorsement. Whorton v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1082.

An indictment for the forgery of a railroad receiver's certificate for the amount due discharged employes, which sets forth a blank certificate furnished by the receivers to their agents to be used in paying off employes, and which sets forth the meaning of all the terms in the blanks, and which sets forth a copy of a certificate charged to have been forged, is sufficient as against the objection that the alleged forged instrument did not appear on its face to be one on which, if genuine, the receivers could be held liable, in that neither their names nor the word "receivers" appears in the alleged forged certificate; the names of the receivers and the word "receivers" not appearing in the blank form. That the blank copy of the certificate did not have on its face "Supt. of Machinery," and that the forged certificate did have such words, did not render the indictment invalid. Ritter v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 727.

17. — Variance between purport and tenor clauses.—The purport and tenor clauses of the indictment must not be repugnant, and if so setting out the instrument in hæc verba will not cure such defect; thus where the purport clause described the instrument as a "check for money on the city bank of Dallas" and the instrument set out was a check on the "city bank" without designation of place, the indictment was bad. Roberts v. State, 2 App. 4; Westbrook v. State, 23 App. 401, 5 S. W. 248.

Repugnancy as to name of bank in indictment for forgery of a check held fatal. Roberts v. State, 2 App. 4.

The indictment alleged in the purport clause that the indorsement forged purported to be the act of Wm. M. Cook, Jr., and the indorsement shown in the tenor clause was Wm. Cook pr Wm. M. Cook Jr W L Thulemeyer; held, the variance was fatal. Thulemeyer v. State, 38 App. 349, 43 S. W. 83.

The indictment need not set out the forged instrument, both by its purport and its tenor, but if it does, any repugnancy between the two allegations is fatal. Westbrook v. State, 23 App. 401, 5 S. W. 248.

Variance as to name held fatal. English v. State, 30 App. 470, 18 S. W. 94; Black v. State, 46 App. 109, 79 S. W. 308; Booth v. State, 36 App. 600, 38 S. W. 196.

In an indictment it was alleged that the instrument purported to be the act of C. R., a fictitious person; then the indictment set out the instrument which was signed C. R.; held, there was no variance. Hocker v. State, 34 App. 359, 30 S. W. 783, 53 Am. St. Rep. 716.

Where the indictment alleged the forgery to be the apparent act of J. and the instrument set out showed it to have been signed by C., the variance was fatal. Overly v. State, 34 App. 500, 31 S. W. 377.

Where an indictment for forging a railroad ticket charged that the instrument purported to be the act of one J., agent for said road, and the instrument set out was signed C., Gen'l P. & Tkt Agt.; held, that the variance was fatal. Overly v. State, 34 App. 500, 31 S. W. 377.

The indictment charged that the forged instrument purported to be the act of M. W. Leonard and another, the tenor clause showed it to be the act of W. W. Linard and another; held, variance fatal. Campbell v. State, 35 App. 182, 32 S. W. 899.

Indictment alleged the instrument purported to be the act of Mr. Andrew Arlow and set out an instrument signed L. B. P. & Co. and Andrew Arlow; held, variance fatal. Fite v. State, 36 App. 4, 34 S. W. 922.

Act of single and several parties. Stephens v. State, 36 App. 386, 37 S. W. 425; Tracy v. State, 49 App. 37, 90 S. W. 308; Crayton v. State, 45 App. 84, 73 S. W. 1046; Gibbons v. State, 36 App. 469, 37 S. W. 861.

The purport clause alleged the forged instrument to be the act of G.; the tenor clause showed it to be the act of S. and G.; held, the variance was fatal. Darbyshire v. State, 36 App. 547, 38 S. W. 173.

Indictment alleged instrument to be the act of M. & Co., and set out the instrument signed M. & Co., with the letter "M." written under signature; held, no variance. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 793.

The indictment set out the names of the members of the firm separately. In the tenor clause the first two names signed were joined by the character &; held, no variance. Sawyers v. State, 39 App. 481, 46 S. W. 814.

When the purport clause alleges the forged instrument to be the act of a corporation, and the tenor clause shows it to be the act of the president and secretary of the corporation, the variance is fatal. Millsaps v. State, 38 App. 570, 53 S. W. 1015.

Indictment need not set out forged instrument by both its tenor and purport clauses, but if it should do so, any repugnance between the two will be fatal. Hanks v. State (Cr. App.) 54 S. W. 588.

Variance as to date. Hickman v. State, 44 App. 533, 72 S. W. 587.

An indictment for forging a county convict bond should set it out in hæc verba and allege that it was approved by the county judge. Crayton v. State, 45 App. 84, 73 S. W. 1046.

18. — Facts extrinsic to instrument.—See Costley v. State, 14 App. 156; Anderson v. State, 20 App. 595; Rollins v. State, 22 App. 548, 3 S. W. 759, 58 Am. Rep. 659; Hendricks v. State, 26 App. 176, 9 S. W. 555, 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 463; King v. State, 27 App. 567, 11 S. W. 525, 11 Am. St. Rep. 203; Jonier v. State, 48 App. 360, 87 S. W. 1039; Knezek v. State, 49 App. 157, 90 S. W. 1099; Simms v. State, 32 App. 277, 22 S. W. 876; Carder v. State, 35 App. 105, 31 S. W. 678; Overly

v. State, 34 App. 500, 31 S. W. 377; Womble v. State, 39 App. 24, 44 S. W. 827; Belden v. State, 50 App. 565, 59 S. W. 563; McBride v. State, 48 App. 213, 88 S. W. 237; Allen v. State, 44 App. 63, 68 S. W. 286, 100 Am. St. Rep. 839; Fischl v. State, 54 App. 55, 111 S. W. 410; Rubio v. State, 50 App. 177, 95 S. W. 120.

Where the forged instrument is set out in hæc verba, it is not necessary to allege that it would if true have created, discharged, or affected any pecuniary liability. Labbaite v. State, 6 App. 483; Horton v. State, 32 Tex. 79; Morris v. State, 17 App. 660. Rule otherwise where instrument on its face does not import an obligation. Belden v. State, 50 App. 565, 99 S. W. 563.

Where the forged instrument is not plain in meaning, explanatory averments should be used and also innuendoes showing what the misspelled and ambiguous words in the instrument mean. Crawford v. State, 40 App. 345, 50 S. W. 378.

Where the forged instrument is not plain in its meaning it should be made so by innuendo averments. Polk v. State, 40 App. 669, 51 S. W. 909.

If the forged instrument imports no legal liability on its face the indictment should allege by appropriate innuendoes such intrinsic facts as will invest it with legal force. Carder v. State, 35 App. 105, 31 S. W. 678.

An indictment for forging a check, drawn by the trustees to pay a school teacher, which fails to allege that the affidavit of the teacher (as required by art. 3962, Sayles' Civ. Stats., Rev. Ed.) accompanied the check, is fatally defective. Caffey v. State, 36 App. 198, 36 S. W. 82, 61 Am. St. Rep. 841.

An instrument void on its face cannot be made good by averment. Caffey v. State, 36 App. 198, 36 S. W. 82, 61 Am. St. Rep. 841. And see Carder v. State, 35 App. 105, 31 S. W. 678, and cases cited.

If the instrument is incomplete in form, the indictment must set out the extrinsic facts to show that, if genuine, it would be valid. Cagle v. State, 39 App. 109, 44 S. W. 1097; Scott v. State, 40 App. 105, 48 S. W. 523; Carder v. State, 35 App. 105, 31 S. W. 678.

In forgery if the paper declared on be not one of the ordinary instruments used in commercial transaction, but dependent upon extrinsic facts to create a liability, such facts must be alleged in the indictment. Cagle v. State, 39 App. 109, 44 S. W. 1097.

Where an instrument on its face does not import a pecuniary obligation there must be explanatory averments, showing how the instrument became an obligation affecting money or property. Lynch v. State, 41 App. 209, 53 S. W. 693.

Innuendo averments are unnecessary where a forged instrument clearly imports on its face a pecuniary obligation. Reeves v. State, 51 App. 604, 103 S. W. 894.

Explanatory averments to explain the instrument set forth in an indictment for forgery are proper to explain what may not otherwise be intelligible. Chappel v. State, 58 App. 52, 124 S. W. 657.

Since a check imports a pecuniary obligation on its face, an indictment for the forgery thereof need not allege that the purported maker had funds in the bank on which it is drawn. Reeseaman v. State, 59 App. 430, 128 S. W. 1126.

In an indictment against a railroad station agent who was authorized to hire and pay extra help required at his station, taking receipts therefor which were turned in as a part of his accounts as cash, for forgery of such a receipt, an allegation that it was a part of his duty to have the party to whom the money was paid sign a receipt, and when signed it was his duty to turn it in as cash, imported a legal obligation in the performance of his services for the company. Pelton v. State, 60 App. 412, 132 S. W. 480, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 86.

An indictment against a railroad station agent for forging a labor receipt for money paid for services rendered at his station, in order to have shown that the receipt created, increased, discharged, or defeated a legal pecuniary obligation, should have alleged that it was defendant's duty to account to the railroad company for all moneys coming into his hands belonging to it and for all moneys paid out by him for the company, and to make a report of all moneys collected and paid out, and that when defendant, as agent, paid out money for extra labor and took receipts therefor, the company became bound to repay him if paid out of his own money, or, if paid out of money belonging to the company in his possession, to give him credit therefor on an accounting or report. Pelton v. State, 60 App. 412, 132 S. W. 480, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 86.

An indictment for forgery of an instrument reading, "2/16, 1911. let Roy Denman have 685 [meaning thereby $6.85] L. T. Burns," the explanation as to its meaning being an averment of the pleader, is good on demurrer, since the explanatory averment is suggested by the instrument itself, and made necessary in the indictment to show that the three figures meant $6.85. Green v. State, 63 App. 510, 140 S. W. 444.

A check calling for "$50.75 Fifty Cents and 75/100 Dollars" is so uncertain as to be insufficient to support an indictment for forgery, in the absence of innuendo averments alleging its true meaning. Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1088.

Where the instrument, claimed to have been forged, as set out in the indictment, was an ordinary check on a bank, which imported a pecuniary obligation on its face, it was not necessary for the indictment to allege that the instrument would have created a pecuniary obligation if valid. Davis v. State, 70 App. 253, 156 S. W. 1171.

An indictment alleging the forging of a check payable to the order of a firm named, "$15.00 Fifteen no/Dollars For Goods," was not defective for not alleging what was meant by the word "no," or the words "For Goods"; their meaning being well known in the commercial world. Davis v. State, 70 App. 253, 156 S. W. 1171.

In a prosecution for forgery, where the instrument on its face was a negotiable one imparting a pecuniary obligation, it was unnecessary for the indictment to contain any explanatory averments. Cheesebourn v. State, 70 App. 612, 157 S. W. 761.

An indictment for making a false instrument purporting to be a receipt by the treasurer of a life insurance company for a premium on a policy was not defective because of the omission of extrinsic averments showing how and in what manner it might become possessed of capacity to defraud, since the instrument, if true on its face, would create a legal obligation on the part of the treasurer to pay the company the sum, the receipt of which was therein acknowledged. Lamb-Campbell v. State, 72 App. 628, 162 S. W. 879.

An indictment for making a false instrument purporting to be a receipt by the treasurer of a life insurance company for a premium on a policy need not allege that the treasurer had authority to issue such receipts, as the duty to do so necessarily follows the holding of the office of treasurer. Lamb-Campbell v. State, 72 App. 628, 162 S. W. 879.

An indictment for forgery, containing the following innuendo: "That in said false and forged instrument, if true, the words, 'Bmt. Tex.,' were * * * intended for 'Beaumont, Texas,' and the name 'T. G. Tigmosk' * * * was meant * * * for 'T. G. Lignoski'; and the said instrument * * * was intended for an order from Ed Weiss upon the Sun Pipe Line Company * * * in favor of T. G. Lignoski, whereby the said Sun Pipe Line Company should pay to the said T. G. Lignoski" a certain sum—sufficiently explained the instrument set out in the indictment to make it available as a basis of the charge of forgery and render the indictment good. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 144.

19. — Designation or description of parties.—See art. 456, C. C. P., and notes thereunder.

The indictment need not name the party intended to be defrauded. Johnson v. State, 35 App. 271, 33 S. W. 231; Labbaitte v. State, 6 App. 483; Johnson v. State, 1 App. 146; Pye v. State, 71 App. 94, 154 S. W. 222; Davis v. State, 70 App. 253, 156 S. W. 1171.

If the forged instrument purport to be the act of a partnership, the name of such partnership and the name of each individual member thereof should be averred. Labbaitte v. State, 6 App. 483.

An indictment alleging that a school voucher or check purported to be signed by three persons designated by their names, and that it purported to be their act as trustees of a certain school community, was a sufficient allegation that said three persons were trustees of said school community, and that said voucher or check purported to be their official act as such. Thomas v. State, 18 App. 213.

The instrument must purport to be the act of another and the indictment must so allege and must name the person whose act it purports to be. Henderson v. State, 20 App. 304.

Indictment charging intent to defraud is sustained by evidence that the name forged was the name of a fictitious person. Johnson v. State, 35 App. 271, 33 S. W. 231.

For sufficiency of indictment alleging that defendant fraudulently made a forged instrument purporting to be the act of another, "a fictitious person," see Hocker v. State, 34 App. 359, 30 S. W. 783, 53 Am. St. Rep. 716.

Where the instrument is set out in hæc verba, the name of the person whose act it purports to be need not be averred. Westbrook v. State, 23 App. 401, 5 S. W. 248.

The indictment must show whether the beneficiary in a forged instrument was a partnership, an individual or a corporation. Carder v. State, 35 App. 105, 31 S. W. 678.

The indictment in one place alleged the instrument to be the act of "Mr. J." and in another part alleged it to be the act of "Mrs. J.;" held, fatally defective. Fite v. State, 36 App. 4, 34 S. W. 922. See, also, Stephens v. State, 36 App. 386, 37 S. W. 425; Gibbons v. State, 36 App. 469, 37 S. W. 861; Booth v. State, 36 App. 600, 38 S. W. 196.

An indictment alleging, in one clause, the instrument to be the act of B., and in another clause to be the act of B. and another, is fatally defective. Fite v. State, 36 App. 4, 34 S. W. 921.

It is not necessary that the indictment charging the forgery of a firm name set out the names of the individual members of the firm. Howard v. State, 37 App. 494, 36 S. W. 475, 66 Am. St. Rep. 812; distinguished from Labbaitte v. State, 6 App. 483.

An indictment alleging the forged instrument to be the check of a transfer company should show whether such company was a corporation or a partnership. Hutton v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 209.

Indictment alleged the forgery of J. C. Pray, Agt., to a bill of lading; held, no sufficient allegation that Pray was the agent of the railroad company. Beasley v. State, 39 App. 688, 47 S. W. 991.

Where alleged forged paper is signed by firm name the names of the members need not be alleged or that their names were unknown. Brod v. State, 42 App. 71, 57 S. W. 671.

Where the person injured by the forgery of a check is the purported maker, the indictment need not allege whether the bank on which the check was drawn was a corporation, joint-stock company, or partnership. Reeseman v. State, 59 App. 430, 128 S. W. 1126.

An indictment for forgery, where the instrument is set out according to its tenor, is not defective in failing to allege that the act purported to be that of another than the defendant, where there is no similarity between the name of defendant and that on the instrument, so as to cause confusion. Hardin v. State, 60 App. 129, 131 S. W. 552.

It is necessary where the forged paper is set out according to its tenor to allege name of party forged to the instrument. Rhudy v. State, 42 App. 225, 58 S. W. 1008.

Where an alleged forged check was payable to "Abilene D. G. Co. or bearer," it being payable to bearer, it was not essential to a conviction that the indictment should contain explanatory averments as to who was meant by "Abilene D. G. Co." Carter v. State, 61 App. 609, 136 S. W. 47.

An indictment for forging a false instrument purporting to be the act of "Austin Bros." is not insufficient for failing to allege that they constituted a firm, and to state the names of the members thereof. Morville v. State, 63 App. 551, 141 S. W. 98.

An indictment for the forgery of a receipt which, as set out, was signed by a named person to whom defendant was indebted is sufficient, though it did not allege that the instrument was the act of such person, and did not name the person whose act the instrument purported to be. Barber v. State, 64 App. 89, 142 S. W. 582.

An indictment for the forgery of an obligation purporting to bind a person named to pay a specified sum to "the L. B. Price Mercantile Company" is good, without alleging whether the latter is a partnership or corporation; it not being claimed that it executed the instrument. Whittaker v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 599.

An indictment for forgery need not state whose act it purports to be, nor who it was intended to defraud; it need only be charged that it was executed without lawful authority, and with intent to defraud. Pye v. State, 71 App. 94, 154 S. W. 222.

An indictment charging the forgery of a check need not allege that "S. F. Hackney and son," the payee, was a firm. Davis v. State, 70 App. 253, 156 S. W. 1171.

It was not necessary that the indictment, charging the forgery of a check on a bank, allege whether the bank was incorporated or unincorporated; it not being the injured party. Davis v. State, 70 App. 253, 156 S. W. 1171.

An indictment for making a false instrument, purporting to be a receipt by the treasurer of a life insurance company for a premium on a policy, need not allege whether or not the company is a corporation. Lamb-Campbell v. State, 72 App. 628, 162 S. W. 879.

An indictment which merely set out the check which was drawn on the First National Bank and dated Mexia, Texas, is sufficient without allegations as to what first national bank it was drawn on for the check would have been a forgery, whatever bank may have been intended to be defrauded. Bowen v. State, 72 App. 404, 162 S. W. 1146.

20. — Counts and election.—See article 946, post, and C. C. P. art. 481, and notes thereunder.

21. — Issues, proof, and variance.—See Fite v. State, 36 App. 4, 34 S. W. 922; Stephens, Id., 386, 37 S. W. 425; Davis v. State, 37 App. 218, 39 S. W. 296; Thulemeyer v. State, 38 App. 349, 43 S. W. 83; Pierce v. State, Id., 604, 44 S. W. 232; Sawyers v. State, 39 App. 481, 46 S. W. 814; Williams v. State, 47 App. 605, 85 S. W. 800; Morris v. State, 52 App. 288, 106 S. W. 383; Lasister v. State, 49 App. 532, 94 S. W. 233; Wisdom v. State, 49 App. 534, 95 S. W. 505; Bader Alias Leifeste v. State, 44 App. 184, 69 S. W. 506; Miller v. State, 50 App. 536, 100 S. W. 380; Baird v. State, 51 App. 322, 101 S. W. 991; Simms v. State, 32 App. 277, 22 S. W. 876; Lovejoy v. State, 40 App. 89, 48 S. W. 520.

Where an indictment undertakes to set out the forged instrument according to its tenor the strictest proof is required, and this is furnished only by an exact copy. Tenor imports an exact copy and requires the strictest proof. Fischl v. State, 54 App. 55, 111 S. W. 411, 412; Feeney v. State, 58 App. 152, 124 S. W. 944; Simmons v. State, 61 App. 7, 133 S. W. 687.

Where the indictment alleged that an entire deed was a forgery, and set out the deed, including the certificate of acknowledgment, in haec verba, it was not error to allow the state to prove the certificate, as well as the deed, to be a forgery. Ham v. State, 4 App. 645.

Where the indictment alleged that the forged instrument purported to be the act of Abraham Barnes, but the signature to the instrument was A. Barnes, it was held there was no variance. Ham v. State, 4 App. 645.

Where the indictment set out the alleged forged note, ignoring an indorsement on the back thereof, such omission was held immaterial, and the note was admissible in evidence. Labbaite v. State, 6 App. 483; May v. State, 15 App. 430.

Where the indictment charged that the forged instrument was signed "Pat Whelan," proof that it was signed "P" Whelan or "D" Whelan, did not support the allegation. Murphy v. State, 6 App. 554.

If the alleged forged instrument be set out in haec verba, a variance, otherwise than by misspelling, between the words of the instrument as set out, and those of the instrument put in evidence, will be fatal to the prosecution. Thomas v. State, 18 App. 213.

The mere misplacement of a dot belonging to the letter "i" in setting out a proper name, does not constitute a variance. Hennessy v. State, 23 App. 340, 5 S. W. 215.

The indictment charged the instrument to be the act of a fictitious person, the instrument on its face did not show it to be the act of a fictitious person; held, no variance. Hocker v. State, 34 App. 359, 30 S. W. 783, 53 Am. St. Rep. 716.

On trial for forgery of a draft the indictment in the tenor clause had on the left-hand side the letters F. N. B. The draft had on the left-hand side a monogram F. N. B.; held, no variance. DeAlberts v. State, 34 App. 508, 31 S. W. 391.

An indictment alleged the instrument to be the act of Wm. R. Robinson; on the trial the State proved that Wm. R. Robinson was a fictitious person; held, no error. Chapman v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 621; citing Johnson v. State, 35 App. 271, 33 S. W. 231.

An indictment charging the instrument to be the act of one R., evidence that R. is a fictitious person is admissible. Chapman v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 621.

The indictment charged the forgery of a deed as purporting to be the act of John Cotton, Jr. The introduction of a patent to John Cotton, Assignee, etc., is not a variance. Lassiter v. State, 35 App. 540, 34 S. W. 751.

The fact that the deed set out in an indictment for forgery contains no certificate of acknowledgment, while that offered in evidence has such certificate appended, is not a variance; a deed and its acknowledgment being separate and distinct. Lassiter v. State, 35 App. 540, 34 S. W. 751.

Under an indictment setting out the forged instrument and intent to defraud, it is admissible to prove that the signature is that of a firm. Howard v. State, 37 App. 494, 36 S. W. 475, 66 Am. St. Rep. 812.

The indictment alleged the instrument to be the act of one Mc.; the instrument introduced in evidence showed it to be the act of Mc. and T.; held, variance fatal. Booth v. State, 36 App. 600, 38 S. W. 196.

Under indictment for forging a postal money order the evidence showed that defendant forged the name of the payee to the order; held, a fatal variance between allegation and proof. Pierce v. State, 38 App. 604, 44 S. W. 292.

Where the instrument set out purported to be the act of N. Webb, and the proof showed the instrument to be signed by J. N. Webb, the variance was fatal. Webb v. State, 39 App. 534, 47 S. W. 356; Id. (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 498.

Variance between the alleged forged check, as set out in the indictment and the instrument itself as tendered in evidence, is fatal. Feeney v. State, 58 App. 152, 124 S. W. 944.

The indictment alleged that the forged instrument contained a description of a tract of land in the J. A. "2 league grant on S. B. B. of which I am the owner," etc. The alleged forged instrument described the tract as in the J. A. "2 league grant N. S. B. B. of which I am the owner," etc. The state claimed that a capital "N" was intended for the quoted word "on" in the instrument as alleged; but an inspection of the original instrument showed that the capital "N" used with the letters "N. S. B. B." was identical with the same letter as used elsewhere in the description. Held, that there was a fatal variance. Bedford v. State, 60 App. 83, 131 S. W. 314.

If the grand jury, in finding an indictment for forgery, could, by the use of process in summoning witnesses they knew of, have ascertained and charged in the indictment a substantial copy of the note alleged to have been forged, and they heard no witnesses, but set out the substance of the note in the indictment, such conduct was ground for reversal where upon the trial a variance was proved between the note alleged to have been forged and the note charged as to the amount thereof, the place of payment, and a provision as to its being secured by pledge of sureties. Carlton v. State, 60 App. 584, 132 S. W. 775.

The variance between an indictment for forgery, which sets out the instrument in hæc verba, including the signature "Doff G.," and which alleges that the name was intended for "Dolph G.," and the instrument introduced in evidence was signed by "Dolph G.," the right name of the person whose signature was forged, is fatal. Simmons v. State, 61 App. 7, 133 S. W. 687.

Where no forgery was predicated on the indorsement of a check, it was not a fatal variance that the check offered in evidence bore an indorsement not described in the indictment. McGee v. State, 62 App. 358, 137 S. W. 686.

The record of a forgery case should not be treated as presenting a variance because the charge was that the forged check purported to be signed by "R. C. Cameron & Son," whereas a critical analysis of the signature shows "R. C. Cammon & Son," or "R. C. Camnon & Son," especially since the check was identified as the one accused passed, and he filed an affidavit incorporating the check with the name spelled "Cameron." Feeny v. State, 62 App. 585, 138 S. W. 135.

Defendant was indicted for forging a check payable to C., "or bearer," in the amount of "Seven fifté Dollars." The check offered in evidence was not payable to bearer, but directed the bank to pay C. "seven and 50/100 Dollars," adding the letters "C. N. B.," not appearing on the copy set out in the indictment. Held, that the two instruments were not the same, and that there was a fatal variance. Mills v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 368.

Though an indictment for passing a forged check alleged that the bank upon which the check was drawn was incorporated, it was not necessary to prove such allegation; the instrument not having been passed on the bank but on another. Bunker v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 108.

Howard v. State, 37 App. 494, 36 S. W. 475, 66 Am. St. Rep. 799; McGlasson v. State, 37 App. 620, 40 S. W. 503, 66 Am. St. Rep. 842; Preston v. State, 41 App. 300, 53 S. W. 127, 831; Whittle v. State, 43 App. 468, 66 S. W. 771.

For mode of making out a prima facie case, and establishing venue, see Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503.

23. — Presumptions and burden of proof.—Where the forgery of a deed is charged, it must be proved that the person whose name was forged owned the land. Horton v. State, 32 Tex. 79; Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503.

That the instrument was made without lawful authority must be proved, and without such proof the case is not made out. Shanks v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 326.

When the State shows that the defendant signed the name of a third person to a note without his knowledge or consent, it is not necessary to prove an intent to defraud. Green v. State, 36 App. 109, 35 S. W. 971.

In a prosecution for passing an alleged false writing, to justify a conviction the writing itself must be produced in court, or it must be accounted for by showing the accused has possession of it, or that it has been destroyed. Bobbit v. State, 59 App. 314, 128 S. W. 1104.

To justify a conviction of passing a forged instrument, the instrument itself must be introduced in evidence. Muniz v. State, 59 App. 365, 128 S. W. 1104.

Where accused, indicted for the forgery of an obligation of receivers of a railroad corporation, did not under oath plead that the corporation was not duly incorporated, but his only plea was an oral one of not guilty, it was not necessary for the state to prove that the corporation was duly incorporated. Ritter v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 727.

23½. — Introduction of forged instrument.—The forged instrument being accessible, its introduction in evidence was imperative. Dovalina v. State, 14 App. 312.

As to practice when the forged instrument is lost, destroyed or is in the possession of the defendant, see Rollins v. State, 21 App. 148, 17 S. W. 466; Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503; Thornley v. State, 36 App. 119, 34 S. W. 264, 35 S. W. 981, 61 Am. St. Rep. 836; Patterson v. State, 17 App. 102; Johnson v. State, 9 App. 249; Caston v. State, 31 App. 304, 20 S. W. 585.

The rule that before a recorded instrument can be offered in evidence it must have been filed with the papers in the case three days before the trial does not apply in prosecutions for forgery. Caston v. State, 31 App. 304, 20 S. W. 585.

In a prosecution for forging a check, complete and valid on its face, the check was admissible in evidence. Davis v. State, 70 App. 253, 156 S. W. 1171.

24. — Admissibility.—It is competent to prove that a name partially obliterated was at the time of the execution of the instrument plainly written. Inman v. State, 35 App. 36, 30 S. W. 219.

Evidence to prove explanations alleged in the indictment is admissible. Daud v. State, 34 Tex. 460, 31 S. W. 376.

On trial defendant offered to prove that he had ample means and money on his person at the time of the alleged forgery: First, in order to show that there was no motive. Second, to show that if he under such circumstances committed the forgery he was insane; held, properly excluded. DeAlberts v. State, 34 App. 508, 31 S. W. 391.

The State cannot corroborate the testimony of the purported maker of the instrument by proving by others that he had, in talking with them, always repudiated the instrument. McGlasson v. State, 38 App. 351, 43 S. W. 93.

Evidence that defendant had turned over all of his property to the prosecutor should not be admitted unless there was something to show its bearing upon the question. McGlasson v. State, 38 App. 351, 43 S. W. 93.

A deed which is the connecting link between the forged deed and defendant is admissible to show his interest in the transaction. Preston v. State, 40 App. 80, 48 S. W. 581.

On a trial for passing a forged instrument, evidence that accused the date he passed the check boarded a train and stated that he was going to a designated town, but went to another, and that accused told the witness that he had changed his mind, was relevant and admissible, though not in rebuttal of any evidence of accused. Fluewellian v. State, 59 App. 334, 128 S. W. 621.

On a trial for passing a forged check purporting to be signed by one "Obrey F.," evidence that "Aubrey F." and "Ovay F." did not sign the check nor authorize accused to do so was relevant, where the state attempted to prove that there was no such person as "Obrey F.," and that if the check was intended to be the act of "Aubrey" or "Ovay" it was forged. Fluewellian v. State, 59 App. 334, 128 S. W. 621.

In a trial for forging a check of a fictitious firm, the state could show that no such firm ever existed or was known in the county, especially since the check purported to be drawn for services rendered by accused. Feeny v. State, 62 App. 585, 138 S. W. 135.

In a trial for forging an instrument purporting to be the act of "Austin Bros.," the state could show that the firm was composed of two certain persons, and that the instrument was in the handwriting of neither, and authorized by neither. Morville v. State, 63 App. 551, 141 S. W. 98.

In a prosecution for the forgery of a receipt for the amount of a note executed by accused, evidence that the payee had, after the date of the execution of the receipt, placed the note in the hands of an attorney for collection was admissible. Barber v. State, 64 App. 89, 142 S. W. 582.

In a prosecution for uttering a forged note, on which the names of several individuals had been forged, evidence that if the note had been presented to some of them they would have signed it, at defendant's request, was properly excluded as immaterial. Jordan v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 623.

In a prosecution for uttering a forged note, evidence that the holder, in consideration of payment of the note and others alleged to have been made and uttered at the same time, agreed to mark them settled and deliver them to defendant, and that he also agreed to execute a petition, asking the court to dismiss the prosecution because, in the holder's opinion, there was no criminal intent, was inadmissible. Jordan v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 623.

The evidence in a forgery prosecution showed that a check was given to accused, F., for $2.25 on a certain bank, and that, when it was presented, the name of the payee had been changed to J., or bearer, and the amount raised from $2.25 to $7.25, and the check for the latter amount was cashed. Held, that the evidence that the check for $7.25 was cashed at the bank was admissible, though accused was not charged with passing a forged instrument. Frye v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 199.

Where, in a prosecution for forgery of a check, it was claimed that defendant carried the forged check to witness for the purpose of having it cashed, the witness was properly asked whether he had any business transaction with defendant on the day defendant tendered the check to witness to be cashed, to which the witness answered that defendant presented the check to be cashed, and stated that P. sent him down for that purpose. Douglass v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1089.

The state's case, on a prosecution for forgery of the check of C., being one of circumstantial evidence, and the only question being whether the forgery, which was not denied, was committed by defendant, a check on the same bank, previously given by C. to defendant and cashed by him at the bank, was admissible as showing his knowledge of where C. banked, and his opportunity to examine his signature. Whorton v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1082.

Where defendant admitted that he signed and intended to sign the name of the prosecuting witness to the note, and showed that about the date of the note she came to him to borrow money, and that he understood her to request him to obtain it for her, and signed her name for that purpose, and where the prosecuting witness denied defendant's statements, she was properly permitted to testify that she had not signed the note or authorized defendant to sign her name to it. Pye v. State, 71 App. 94, 154 S. W. 222.

In a prosecution for forging the indorsement of a confederate pensioner to whom the warrant had been issued after he had died, the necessary affidavits required to accompany such warrant, stating the county of the pensioner's residence, his post office address, and that he was the identical person to whom a pension had been granted, and that the conditions which existed at the time of making the application, on which the pension was granted, still existed, which were also shown to have been forged by accused, and which were clearly identified, were admissible. Dreeben v. State, 71 App. 341, 162 S. W. 501.

In a prosecution for forgery of an order, purporting to be signed by W. on the S. Co., a witness' testimony that he had purchased another order from defendant signed by W. on such company at about the same time was properly admitted, where defendant admitted that he sold the alleged forged order, but claimed that it had been given to him by a third person to cash, and that he did not sign W.'s name thereto. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 144.

Testimony that defendant brought to the witness an order signed by W., and that because it was not properly worded the witness wrote out the order copied in the indictment and introduced in evidence, and gave it to defendant, telling him that if he would get W. to sign it he would cash it for him, and that defendant subsequently returned with such order with W.'s name signed thereto, whereupon the witness cashed same, was admissible. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 144.

Accused gave a check March 13, 1912, and was subsequently charged with altering it after its payment by the bank by changing its date to March 13, 1914, and inserting a provision that it was to be applied on a particular note, and with passing it as so altered. Held, that it was permissible to show by the officers of the bank that such a check was paid on March 22, 1912, and that no such transaction had taken place at any time from March 13, 1914, to March 22, 1914. Bunker v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 108.

26. — Other offenses.—See note under C. C. P. 783.

27. — Weight and sufficiency.—Facts held sufficient. Barnwell v. State, 1 App. 745; Costley v. State, 14 App. 156; Murphy v. State, 49 App. 488, 93 S. W. 543; Fonville v. State, 17 App. 368; Hennessey v. State, 23 App. 340, 5 S. W. 215; Hughes v. State, 59 App. 294, 129 S. W. 837; Terry v. State, 60 App. 60, 130 S. W. 1004; Dreeben v. State, 71 App. 341, 162 S. W. 501.

Evidence that witness has no recollection of ever giving defendant authority to sign his name will not support conviction. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 865.

Evidence held insufficient, see Horton v. State, 32 Tex. 79; Montgomery v. State, 12 App. 323; S. C., 13 App. 74; Dovalina v. State, 14 App. 312; Smith v. State, 18 App. 399; Murphy v. State, 6 App. 554; Brown v. State, 55 App. 9, 114 S. W. 820.

In a prosecution for forgery, where the defendant had been conducting business under the name of his servant and had written letters under that name, evidence held insufficient to support a conviction of forgery for signing servant's name. Fench v. State, 60 App. 432, 132 S. W. 478.

The state proved that accused falsely represented himself to be B., and claiming to be B. purchased goods in that name, and in payment thereof executed a check in the name of B. Held, that such facts establish a prima facie case of forgery without proof that B. was a fictitious person, or that defendant did not have the right to sign B.'s name. Carter v. State, 61 App. 609, 136 S. W. 47.

Evidence, in connection with a plea of guilty, held to sustain a conviction for forgery with the imposition of the lowest authorized penalty. Weatherford v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 581.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of forging a receipt for $75 in signing the name of another actually existing person, or the name of a fictitious person. Walderen v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 348.

28. Instructions and questions for jury.—See notes under following article and, also, C. C. P. art. 735 et seq., and notes thereunder.

See Thornley v. State, 36 App. 119, 34 S. W. 264, 35 S. W. 981, 61 Am. St. Rep. 836; Garza v. State, 38 App. 317, 42 S. W. 563; Feeney v. State, 58 App. 152, 124 S. W. 944; Plemmons v. State, 44 App. 555, 72 S. W. 854; Spicer v. State, 52 App. 177, 105 S. W. 813; Gaut v. State, 49 App. 493, 94 S. W. 1034; Usher v. State, 47 App. 93, 81 S. W. 309; Lasister v. State, 49 App. 532, 94 S. W. 233; Baird v. State, 51 App. 322, 101 S. W. 991; Green v. State, 36 App. 109, 35 S. W. 971; Lovejoy v. State, 40 App. 89, 48 S. W. 520.

It is proper to charge that the defendant is guilty if he forged the note or any part of it. Darbyshire v. State, 36 App. 547, 38 S. W. 173.

It is error to charge the mere making of the forged instrument constitutes the offense without proof that it was made without lawful authority. Shanks v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 326.

Where there is no allegation of forgery by altering a genuine instrument it is error to charge that forgery is committed by altering a genuine instrument. Johnson v. State, 40 App. 612, 51 S. W. 382, 76 Am. St. Rep. 742.

Where evidence of collateral facts, or of a distinct offense is admitted to prove guilty knowledge or a criminal intent, the charges should apprise the jury of the purpose and scope of such evidence, and instruct them to not consider it as proof of the commission of the offense, but only as evidence bearing upon the issues of guilty knowledge or criminal intent. Francis v. State, 7 App. 501; Hennessy v. State, 23 App. 340, 5 S. W. 215.

It is the duty of the trial judge to construe an alleged forged instrument and to instruct the jury as to its legal effect had it been genuine. Burks v. State, 24 App. 326, 6 S. W. 300; Id., 24 App. 332, 6 S. W. 303.

An instruction that the instrument must be such, if true, as would have "transferred or affected any property or any money whatever," is not erroneous because of the use of the word "money," though the statute uses only the word "property," as "property" includes "money." Williams v. State, 58 App. 82, 124 S. W. 954.

29. Verdict.—See C. C. P. arts. 763 et seq., and notes thereunder.

Verdict failing to find on an essential element of the offenses and to assess punishment, is an absolute nullity. O'Connor v. State, 37 App. 267, 39 S. W. 368.

Art. 925. [531] Alteration also forgery.—He is also guilty of forgery who, without lawful authority, and with intent to injure or defraud, shall alter an instrument in writing, then already in existence, by whomsoever made, in such manner that the alteration would (if it had been legally made) have created, increased, diminished, discharged or defeated any pecuniary obligation, or would have transferred, or in any manner have affected any property whatever.

Intent, see post, art. 926.

Offense.—Forgery by alteration is committed by the fraudulent endorsement of the name of the payor on an existing negotiable note. And so is the raising of a draft or check forgery by alteration. Strang v. State, 32 App. 219, 22 S. W. 680; Mason v. State, 31 App. 306, 20 S. W. 564; Mason v. State, 32 App. 95, 22 S. W. 144, 408.

The raising of the figures on a voucher check would increase the pecuniary liability of its maker, and the person who raised such figures would be guilty of forgery, though he did not sign the receipt on the reverse side of the check. Horn v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 948.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 411.

The indictment must set forth what was done. It must be alleged in what the alteration consisted, so as to advise the defendant of the very words he is alleged to have changed. It must be alleged whether it was by changing, obliterating, adding to, or erasing words and figures, so as to leave no uncertainty of what is intended to be charged. State v. Knippa, 29 Tex. 295; Hennessy v. State, 23 App. 340, 5 S. W. 215.

As to indictment for forgery by alteration of scholastic census, see Munoz v. State, 40 App. 460, 50 S. W. 949.

An indictment charging accused with fraudulently altering a pay check by indorsing the name of the payee thereon was not bad for failing to allege the drawee was a firm, corporation, or partnership. Carter v. State, 55 App. 43, 114 S. W. 839.

Indictment is not duplicitous because in one portion it describes the entire instrument as forged, and in another charges that the defendant knew that the endorsement was forged. Strang v. State, 32 App. 219, 22 S. W. 680.

Where forgery of a railroad ticket is charged, the fact that it consisted of filling in the destination and placing a stamp on the back should have been charged. Overly v. State, 34 App. 500, 31 S. W. 377.

In an indictment for raising a check drawn on a bank it is not necessary to allege that such bank is a corporation. This is necessary when defendant is charged with forging the signature of the bank. Lucas v. State, 39 App. 48, 44 S. W. 825.

Explanatory averments. Johnson v. State, 40 App. 605, 51 S. W. 382, 76 Am. St. Rep. 742.

The purport clause of the indictment charged that the instrument (forged by an indorsement) had been executed by G. N. Y., while the tenor clause said G. N. Y., paymaster. There was no variance because of use of word paymaster in tenor clause and not in purport clause. Carter v. State, 55 App. 43, 114 S. W. 840.

Where accused was charged with altering a bank check made on a printed blank used by the bank, and which the cashier refused to pay upon presentation, and the drawer, the cashier, and the constable, who saw part of the check, were all residents of the county and witnesses before the grand jury, the destruction of the check by accused did not excuse the failure of the indictment to describe the instrument correctly according to its tenor. Collum v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1144.

Instructions.—Charge on forgery by alteration is improper where there is no allegation to that effect. Johnson v. State, 40 App. 612, 51 S. W. 382, 76 Am. St. Rep. 742.

Art. 926. [532] Intent to injure, etc., necessary.—The false making or alteration to constitute forgery, must be done with intent to injure or defraud; and the injury must be such as affects one pecuniarily, or in relation to his property.

Cited, Heimes v. State, 59 App. 420, 129 S. W. 123.

Offense.—The intent to injure or defraud anyone, whether it does or not, is the gravamen of forgery. Scott v. State, 40 App. 105, 48 S. W. 523; Green v. State, 35 App. 109, 35 S. W. 971; Ashmore v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 196.

Intent to defraud is the essence of this offense, but it is immaterial whether this intent is or not directed toward any particular person, and it is sufficient if the state or some person may be affected. Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503; Montgomery v. State, 12 App. 323. See, also, Lucas v. State, 39 App. 48, 44 S. W. 825.

The injury must be such as affects one pecuniarily, or in relation to his property; but it is not necessary that the accused intended to injure or defraud any particular person, or that any particular person was injured or defrauded by the forgery. Ashmore v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 196.

Ratification.—A defendant may be convicted though the person whose name was forged ratified his act. Countee v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 127.

See notes under article 924, ante.

Evidence.—Other offenses, see notes under Code Cr. Proc. art. 783; Ham v. State, 4 App. 645; Francis v. State, 7 App. 501; Burks v. State, 24 App. 326, 6 S. W. 300; Id., 24 App. 332, 6 S. W. 303; Hennessy v. State, 23 App. 340, 5 S. W. 215; Mason v. State, 31 App. 306, 20 S. W. 564.

The fact of forgery, itself, will be sufficient to show an intention to defraud. Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503.

Questions for jury.—The court must submit the issue, raised by the testimony, that accused had authority from the person whose name was charged to have been forged to sign his name. White v. State, 61 App. 498, 135 S. W. 562.

Art. 927. [533] "Instrument in writing" defined.—The words "instrument in writing," as used in articles 924 and 925, and elsewhere in this chapter, include every writing, purporting to make known or declare the will or intention of the party whose act it purports to be, whether the same be of record or under seal or private signature, or whatever other form it may have. It must be upon paper or parchment, or some substance made to resemble either of them. The words may be written, printed, stamped or made in any other way, or by any other device. And the words, "in writing," "write," "written," include all these modes of making. An instrument, partly printed or stamped, and partly written, is an instrument in writing. In order to come within the definition of forgery, the signature, when made otherwise than by writing, must be made to resemble manuscript.

Signature in bold type.—Signature in bold type not in writing or resembling manuscript. Heath v. State, 49 App. 49, 89 S. W. 1063, 122 Am. St. Rep. 783.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 413.

Art. 928. [534] "Alter" defined.—The word "alter," in the definition of forgery, means to erase or obliterate any word, letter or figure, to extract the writing altogether, or to substitute other words, letters or figures for those erased, obliterated or extracted, to add any other word, letter or figure to the original instrument, or to make any other change whatever which shall have the effect to create, increase, diminish, discharge or defeat a pecuniary obligation, or to transfer, or in any other way affect, any property whatever.

See Mason v. State, 31 App. 306, 20 S. W. 564; Id., 32 App. 95, 22 S. W. 144, 408; Strang v. State, 32 App. 219, 22 S. W. 680.

Indictment.—See notes under article 924, ante.

Art. 929. [535] "Another" includes, what.—The instrument must purport to be the act of "another;" and, within the meaning of this word, as used in defining forgery, are included this state, the United States, or either of the states or territories of the Union; all the several branches of the government of either of them; all public or private bodies, politic and corporate; all courts; all officers, public or private, in their official capacity; all partnerships in professions or trades; and all other persons, whether real or fictitious, except the person engaged in the forgery.

Offense.—Fraudulently signing the name of a dead or a fictitious person to an instrument in writing is forgery. Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503; Brewer v.

State, 32 App. 74, 22 S. W. 41, 40 Am. St. Rep. 760; Davis v. State, 34 App. 117, 29 S. W. 478; Hocker v. State, 34 App. 359, 30 S. W. 783, 53 Am. St. Rep. 716; Johnson v. State, 35 App. 271, 33 S. W. 231.

Art. 930. [536] "Pecuniary obligation" defined.—"Pecuniary obligation" means every instrument having money for its object, and every obligation for the breach of which a civil action for damages may be lawfully brought.

Pecuniary obligations.—Instances of "pecuniary obligation:" Peel v. State, 35 App. 308, 33 S. W. 541, 60 Am. St. Rep. 49; Keeler v. State, 15 App. 111; Hendricks v. State, 26 App. 176, 9 S. W. 555, 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 463; Reddick v. State, 31 App. 587, 21 S. W. 684; Anderson v. State, 20 App. 595; Kennedy v. State, 33 App. 183, 26 S. W. 78; Boles v. State, 13 App. 650; Crawford v. State, 31 App. 51, 19 S. W. 766; Womble v. State, 39 App. 24, 44 S. W. 827; Scott v. State, 40 App. 105, 48 S. W. 523.

A date is not indispensable to an instrument creating a pecuniary obligation. Boles v. State, 13 App. 650.

A bail bond is a pecuniary obligation, and is the subject of forgery, notwithstanding it had not been forfeited. Costley v. State, 14 App. 156.

It is not essential that the forged instrument, if true, should actually discharge or defeat an obligation; it is sufficient if it tends to do so. Fonville v. State, 17 App. 368.

An order "Let Bare have $5 in grosses, and charge same to" the purported drawer, is an order for articles of value, implies an obligation, and is the subject of forgery. Hendricks v. State, 26 App. 176, 9 S. W. 555, 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 463.

A diploma from a school or college is not a "pecuniary obligation," and hence does not come within the purview of this article, but it is a species of "property," and, as such, a fraudulent order for its delivery is the subject of forgery. Alexander v. State, 28 App. 186, 12 S. W. 595.

An order for payment of money may create pecuniary obligation without being addressed to any particular person, and hence a subject of forgery. Dixon v. State (App.) 26 S. W. 500; Kennedy v. State, 33 App. 183, 26 S. W. 78.

An instrument purporting to be a statement of time of a work man is a pecuniary obligation. Daud v. State, 34 App. 460, 31 S. W. 376. See, also, Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 544.

A person cannot be convicted of forging the will of a living person. A will is not effective until after death of testator. Huckaby v. State, 45 App. 577, 78 S. W. 944, 108 Am. St. Rep. 975.

An instrument need not, without explanatory averments, import a financial obligation, in order to be made the subject of forgery. Forey v. State, 60 App. 206, 131 S. W. 585, 32 L. R. A. (N. S.) 327.

Confederate pension warrant. Dreeben v. State, 71 App. 341, 162 S. W. 501.

Questions for jury.—Whether or not an instrument imports a pecuniary obligation is a question for the court, and it should be determined in the charge to the jury. Overly v. State, 34 App. 500, 31 S. W. 377.

Art. 931. [537] "Transferred or in any manner have affected" defined.—By an instrument which would "have transferred or in any manner have affected" property, is meant every species of conveyance, or undertaking in writing, which supposes a right in the person purporting to execute it, to dispose of or change the character of property of every kind, and which can have such effect when genuine.

See notes under art. 924, ante.

Art. 932. [538] All participants guilty.—He is guilty of making or altering, as the case may be, under articles 924 and 925, who, knowing the illegal purpose intended, shall write, or cause to be written, the signature, or the whole or any part, of a forged instrument. All persons engaged in the illegal act are deemed guilty of forgery.

Peel v. State, 35 App. 308, 33 S. W. 541, 60 Am. St. Rep. 49; Robinson v. State, 35 App. 54, 43 S. W. 526, 60 Am. St. Rep. 20; Heard v. State, 9 App. 1; Ex parte Rogers, 10 App. 655, 38 Am. Rep. 654; Rogers v. State, 11 App. 608; Williams v. State, 24 App. 342, 6 S. W. 531; Mason v. State, 32 App. 95, 22 S. W. 144, 408; Dillard v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 99.

Art. 933. [539] Filling up over signature.—It is forgery to make, with intent to defraud or injure, a written instrument, by filling up over a genuine signature, or by writing on the opposite side of a paper so as to make the signature appear as an indorsement.

See Overly v. State, 34 App. 500, 31 S. W. 377; Robinson v. State, 35 App. 54, 43 S. W. 526, 60 Am. St. Rep. 20; Montgomery v. State, 12 App. 323.

Offense.—Where defendant filled check for another purpose and made it payable to another person than that for which it was given him, held, forgery. Hooper v. State, 30 App. 412, 17 S. W. 1066, 28 Am. St. Rep. 926.

A written instrument filled in over the genuine signature of the purported maker, agreeing to give defendant a sum of money for his equity in land for which the signer had sued, and agreeing not to dispossess defendant until the amount named is paid, is an instrument subject to forgery. Wheeler v. State, 62 App. 370, 137 S. W. 124.

Where a confederate pension warrant was drawn payable to the order of a pensioner who had died, and the warrant came into the hands of defendant, a clerk in the pension commissioner's office, who forged an indorsement of the pensioner's name on the back of the warrant and cashed it, the forgery of such instrument was sufficient to "in some manner affect the property" so as to constitute forgery without reference to whether the warrant was negotiable or not. Dreeben v. State, 71 App. 341, 162 S. W. 501.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 412, 413. See Booth v. State, 36 App. 600, 38 S. W. 196; Colter v. State, 40 App. 165, 49 S. W. 379.

An indictment of a railroad station agent for forging a receipt for money claimed to have been paid by him for extra labor rendered at his station charging that defendant, after procuring a receipt to be signed in blank, filled in an amount much larger than that owing or paid to the employé, held fatally defective for failure to show that any pecuniary obligation would have been created, increased, discharged, or defeated by the receipt if it had been true. Pelton v. State, 60 App. 412, 132 S. W. 480, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 86.

Art. 934. [540] Person not guilty, when.—When the person making or altering an instrument in writing acts under an authority which he has good reason to believe, and actually does believe, to be sufficient, he is not guilty of forgery, though the authority be in fact insufficient and void.

See Sweet v. State, 28 App. 223, 12 S. W. 590; Burge v. State, 32 App. 359, 23 S. W. 692; Williams v. State, 24 App. 342, 6 S. W. 531.

Instructions.—Charge held sufficient, see McCay v. State, 32 App. 233, 22 S. W. 974.

The court must submit the issue, raised by the testimony, that accused had authority from the person whose name was charged to have been forged to sign his name. White v. State, 61 App. 498, 135 S. W. 562.

An instruction, in a prosecution for forgery, that if accused actually believed he had authority to sign to a check the name which he signed thereto, the jury should acquit, cannot be complained of for not being based upon the hypothesis that accused "reasonably" believed, etc. Davis v. State, 156 S. W. 1171.

Art. 935. [540a] Altering teacher's certificate is forgery.—Any person who shall unlawfully and wilfully raise, change, or alter, any teacher's certificate or diploma or other instrument having the force of a teacher's certificate, shall be deemed guilty of forgery, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for a term of not less than two nor more than seven years. [Acts of 1893, p. 205.]

See Thomas v. State, 18 App. 213; Mee v. State, 23 App. 566, 5 S. W. 243; Alexander v. State, 28 App. 186, 12 S. W. 595; Brooks v. State, 45 App. 206, 75 S. W. 507.

Art. 936. [541] Penalty.—If any person be guilty of forgery he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 685.

Art. 937. [542] Passing forged instrument.—If any person shall knowingly pass as true, or attempt to pass as true, any such forged instrument in writing as is mentioned and defined in the preceding articles of this chapter, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

See notes under article 924, ante, and article 946, post.

Offense.—Having a forged deed placed on record is a sufficient uttering. Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503.

Article 932, ante, is not pertinent to this offense. Hatch v. State, 8 App. 416, 34 Am. Rep. 751.

It is an offense to knowingly utter as true a forged instrument, which, at the time it was forged, was not the subject of forgery, but which was made the subject of forgery before it was uttered. Johnson v. State, 9 App. 249.

An instrument which cannot be the basis of a prosecution for forgery cannot be the basis of a prosecution for this offense. Anderson v. State, 20 App. 598.

The pledging of a forged instrument as security for a debt, under an agreement to redeem the same within a specified time, is an uttering of the same within the meaning of the statute, and the trial court did not err in refusing to charge the jury to the converse of this rule, and to the effect that, to constitute the uttering of the forged instrument, it must have been given by the accused absolutely in payment or exchange. Thurmond v. State, 25 App. 366, 8 S. W. 473.

One who passes the check of a fictitious person, representing it to be the check of another, is guilty of passing a forged instrument. Davis v. State, 34 App. 117, 29 S. W. 478.

Depositing forged notes as security for a debt is the passing of same within the meaning of the statute. Nichols v. State, 39 App. 80, 44 S. W. 1091.

One may be convicted of passing a forged instrument not in his handwriting. Leslie v. State (Cr. App.) 47 S. W. 367.

Essential ingredients of the offense of passing forged instruments are the forgery itself and knowledge of defendant of the forgery. Hanks v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 922.

It is an offense to attempt to pass as true an altered teacher's certificate. Brooks v. State, 45 App. 206, 75 S. W. 507.

It is an offense to attempt to pass as true a forged diploma or teacher's certificate. Brooks v. State, 45 App. 206, 75 S. W. 509.

Where a person passes a check purporting to be signed by a fictitious person, and which he falsely represents has been executed and given him by some person whom the testimony discloses is fictitious, he is guilty of passing a forged instrument. Boswell v. State, 59 App. 161, 127 S. W. 820.

Accused presented a forged check to the teller of a bank. The teller took it to the vice president, who engaged accused in conversation to detain him until an officer should arrive. The vice president asked him if he wanted the money in $10 bills, and asked accused if he would not leave some of the money in the bank on deposit, to which he replied that he did not wish to. Held, that there was an attempt to pass the check on the vice president, though it was presented to the teller. Houston v. State, 59 App. 505, 128 S. W. 618.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 414. See C. C. P. arts. 454, 481, and notes thereunder.

Indictment held sufficient. Peterson v. State, 25 App. 70, 7 S. W. 530; Thurmond v. State, 25 App. 366, 8 S. W. 473.

The indictment must charge that the uttering was knowingly done. Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503; Morris v. State, 17 App. 660.

Indictment under this article sufficient which alleges that accused "did wilfully, knowingly and fraudulently, pass as true to one F. a forged instrument in writing to the tenor following," and then setting out the instrument. Cagle v. State, 39 App. 109, 44 S. W. 1097.

If the paper declared on be not an instrument ordinary in commercial transactions, but is contractual in form, and depends on extrinsic facts to create a liability, such extrinsic facts must be averred. Cagle v. State, 39 App. 109, 44 S. W. 1097.

An indictment alleging that accused uttered a forged instrument of the tenor as follows: "Bartlett, Tex. (meaning thereby Bartlett, Texas). Receipt of cotton seed Sept. 9/30/07 (meaning thereby September 30, 1907), Three dollars & 65c (meaning thereby Three & $\frac{65}{100}$ dollars), 3.65 (meaning thereby \$3.65). [Signed] Rev. Peach (meaning thereby Lewis Pietzsch)"—is sufficient; the explanatory averments explaining what might otherwise be unintelligible. Chappel v. State, 58 App. 52, 124 S. W. 657.

Since, in a prosecution for uttering a forged check under the statute requiring that the instrument uttered be passed with an intent to injure or defraud, the indictment need not allege any particular person who was intended to be injured or defrauded, in a prosecution for passing a forged check to a certain person, the indictment need not allege that such person received the check as agent for a bank. Heimes v. State, 59 App. 420, 129 S. W. 123.

An indictment for uttering a forged check was not fatally defective for failure to allege whether the company purporting to have drawn the check was a partnership, a joint-stock company, or a corporation. Brown v. State, 60 App. 505, 132 S. W. 789.

An indictment for uttering a forged check was not fatally defective for failure to allege whether the bank was a partnership, a joint-stock company, or a corporation, or what business it was engaged in. Brown v. State, 60 App. 505, 132 S. W. 789.

An indictment is not fatally defective for failure to allege that the instrument was made or uttered without lawful authority and with intent to defraud. Brown v. State, 60 App. 505, 132 S. W. 789.

An indictment for uttering a forged note, which alleges that accused fraudulently made a false instrument in writing purporting to be the act of another, which instrument "is in substance as follows," and which then sets out the instrument in hæc verba, sufficiently sets out the alleged false instrument. Slatter v. State, 61 App. 243, 136 S. W. 770.

An indictment for passing a forged instrument, which alleges that accused passed as true a forged instrument to a person named with intent to defraud a third person, but which fails to allege any legal relation between them, is fatally defective. Bagley v. State, 63 App. 606, 141 S. W. 107.

It was not necessary to allege an indorsement on a check, where it was shown that it was placed there long subsequent to the execution of the instrument, and not until it was delivered to the indorsee. Wesley v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 197.

An indictment without extrinsic or innuendo averments, charging defendant with passing the following instrument: "Mr. Bartay please let Jim Whitmire have the plows if he dont pay you I will Yours Respectfully Mr. Sam. Pier"—was insufficient. Whitmire v. State, 70 App. 475, 156 S. W. 1179.

Where accused was charged with passing a forged instrument upon one person, proof that he passed it upon a third person is insufficient to warrant a conviction. Brown v. State, 71 App. 45, 158 S. W. 533.

Evidence held not sufficient. Whitmire v. State, 70 App. 475, 156 S. W. 1179; Leeper v. State, 27 App. 694, 11 S. W. 644.

If the utterer of a forged note, made payable to himself, represents the maker as at a particular place and engaged in a particular business, evidence that it is not that person's note is sufficient prima facie proof of forgery; for accused, being the payee, must have known who was the maker. Barnwell v. State, 1 App. 745.

On the question of intent, the state may prove previous attempts of defendant on the same day to pass the alleged forged instrument. Burks v. State, 24 App. 326, 6 S. W. 300.

The state introduced in evidence the alleged forged instrument before proving that the same was written by the accused, but subsequently produced such proof. Held, that such practice, though irregular, was not materially erroneous. Williams v. State, 24 App. 342, 6 S. W. 531.

Evidence that the defendant was drunk about the time he passed a forged check, does not justify a charge on temporary insanity when there is no evidence that the defendant was drunk at the time he signed the check. Howard v. State, 37 App. 494, 36 S. W. 475, 66 Am. St. Rep. 812.

On trial for uttering a forged deed executed at the time of execution of another deed conveying the premises to defendant, evidence of the entire transaction was admissible. Preston v. State, 40 App. 72, 48 S. W. 581.

On a prosecution for uttering a forged deed by presenting it for record, where the pendency of a civil action against accused is shown, it is admissible on the question of intent to show introduction of the deed in evidence by defendant on his behalf in that action. Preston v. State, 40 App. 72, 48 S. W. 581.

The proof must show that defendant knew, at the time he passed the instrument, that it was forged. Feeny v. State, 58 App. 152, 124 S. W. 944.

To support a conviction under an indictment alleging that accused passed a forged instrument to an individual to defraud an insurance company, the evidence must show a legal connection between the individual and the company. Bagley v. State, 63 App. 606, 141 S. W. 107.

Evidence held to identify accused as the person who passed a forged instrument, justifying his conviction therefor. Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 185.

Where only one note was described in the indictment, and there was nothing in the record to show that such note was part of a transaction in which eleven notes, aggregating $2,300, were given, the note described in the indictment was not subject to exclusion, because it was one of a series of notes, all of which were passed at the same time. Jordan v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 623.

Questions for jury.—The defense that defendant had bought the instrument from another party, and that he could neither read nor write, should have been submitted to the jury. Garza v. State, 38 App. 317, 42 S. W. 563.

Instructions.—See C. C. P. arts. 735, et seq., and notes thereunder.

"Knowingly" and "pass" are not words of technical meaning and need not be defined in the charge. Peterson v. State, 25 App. 70, 7 S. W. 530; Thurmond v. State, 25 App. 366, 8 S. W. 473.

It is incumbent on the court to charge the statutory definition of forgery, or to explain the constituents of that offense. Ham v. State, 4 App. 645.

While it was competent, in a prosecution for attempting to pass a forged instrument, for the state to prove that the accused attempted to pass the same forged instrument to another than the person alleged in the indictment, and at another time and place, it was incumbent on the court to charge the jury that such evidence was admissible only upon the issue of the fraudulent intent of the accused in the transaction on trial. Omission to so charge was fundamental error. Burks v. State, 24 App. 332, 6 S. W. 303. See, also, Burks v. State, 24 App. 326, 6 S. W. 300; Francis v. State, 7 App. 501; Hennessy v. State, 23 App. 340, 5 S. W. 215.

And further on charge of court, see Mason v. State, 31 App. 306, 20 S. W. 564; Davis v. State, 34 App. 117, 29 S. W. 478; Shanks v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 326; Hennessy v. State, 23 App. 340, 5 S. W. 215; Burks v. State, 24 App. 326, 6 S. W. 300; s. c., 24 App. 332, 6 S. W. 303.

An instruction requiring defendant's conviction if the instrument was forged, and if the defendant "did knowingly pass said instrument as true," was faulty, in that it failed to require that defendant must have known that the instrument was forged at the time he passed it, in order to render him guilty. Feeny v. State, 58 App. 152, 124 S. W. 944.

Where, the court had defined forgery, and charged that if defendant had unlawfully passed the alleged forged instrument as true, with intent to injure and defraud, he would be guilty, the jury having inquired whether the use of a fictitious name in making a check with intent to defraud, and knowingly passing the same with intent to defraud, constituted two separate offenses, punishable separately, the court did not err in charging in reply, that it did, and that if the jury found, beyond a reasonable doubt, that both such offenses had been committed, they should find defendant guilty of only one offense, and should state under which count of the indictment the conviction was had. Boswell v. State, 59 App. 161, 127 S. W. 820.

Where on a trial for attempting to pass a forged note the evidence showed that all the names, save the name of accused, were forgeries, and that accused stated to the person to whom he attempted to pass the note that the maker had signed the note while sitting on his horse, a charge that an attempt to pass a forged instrument must be done with intent to injure or defraud was applicable. Slatyer v. State, 61 App. 243, 136 S. W. 770.

In a prosecution for having possession of a known forged instrument with intent to pass it, a requested charge that, if the name signed to the instrument purported to be the act of Fred Williamson and the jury found the name to it to be Freed William, they should acquit, is properly refused where the name actually signed to the instrument, as shown by the copy in the indictment and the instrument itself in evidence, was Freed William. Woodard v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 309.

Verdict.—See C. C. P. arts. 763, et seq., and notes thereunder.

Art. 938. [543] Preparing implements for forgery.—Whoever shall prepare in this state any implements or materials, or engrave any plate for the purpose of being used in forging the notes of any bank, whether within this state or out of it, and whether the same be incorporated or not, or who shall have in his possession in this state any such implements, materials or engraved plate, with intent to be used for the purpose above mentioned, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 415, 416.

Art. 939. [544] Possession of forged instrument with intent to pass.—If any person shall knowingly have in his possession any instrument of writing, the making of which is by law an offense, with intent to use or pass the same as true, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1859, p. 169.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 417.

Art. 940. [545] Evidence in case of bank bills.—Upon the trial of any indictment for the forgery of any bank bill, or for passing, or attempting to pass, any such bill as true, or for knowingly having in possession any such forged bank bill, evidence that bills or notes, purporting to be issued by any bank, are commonly received as currency, or proof of the existence of such bank by parol testimony, shall be deemed sufficient to show its legal establishment and existence.

See Elkins v. State, 35 App. 207, 32 S. W. 1047; O'Connor v. State, 37 App. 267, 39 S. W. 368.

Art. 941. [546] Falsely reading instrument.—If any one, with intent to defraud, shall, either by falsely reading or falsely interpreting, any pecuniary obligation or instrument in writing, which would in any manner affect property, or by misrepresenting its contents, induce any one to sign such instrument as his act, or give assent to it in such manner as would make it his act, if not done under mistake, the person, so offending, shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Offense.—The mere fact that a deed absolute on its face may have been intended as a mortgage will not preclude a prosecution under this article. Nor would the fact that a deed to a homestead absolute in form may be shown by parol to be intended as security for a loan, convey no title, change the fact that the instrument was legitimate subject for prosecution under this article. Lewis v. State, 48 App. 149, 86 S. W. 1028.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 418.

Art. 942. [547] Substituting one instrument for another.—If any person, with intent to defraud, shall substitute one instrument of writing for another, and, by this means, induce any person to sign an instrument materially different from that which he intended to sign, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 419.

Art. 943. Mutilate, destroy, deface any book, record or other document kept by officer of this state, punishment for.—If any person, without authority of law, shall wilfully and maliciously change, alter, mutilate, destroy, deface or injure any book, papers, record or any other document, required or permitted by law to be kept by any officer within this state, he shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than five years. [Act 1899, p. 301.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 550.

Art. 944. [548] Falsely personating another.—If one shall falsely personate another, whether bearing the same name or not, and, in such assumed character, shall give authority to any person to sign such assumed name to any instrument in writing which, if genuine, would create, increase, diminish or discharge any pecuniary obligation, or would transfer, or in any way affect any property, he shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years.

See Peel v. State, 35 App. 308, 33 S. W. 541, 60 Am. St. Rep. 49.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 420.

Art. 945. [549] Same in acknowledgments.—If any person shall falsely personate another, whether bearing the same name or not, and in such assumed character shall, before any officer authorized by law to authenticate instruments of writing for registration, acknowledge the execution of an instrument of writing purporting to convey, or in any manner affect, an interest in property, such instrument purporting to be the act of the person whose name is so assumed, and the acknowledgment thereof being such as would entitle the instrument to be registered, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 421.

This offense is nearly allied to forgery, and the indictment should be framed with an equal degree of certainty as in that offense. The falsely authenticated instrument should be set out; or cause be shown for not setting it out; the property to be affected by it should be sufficiently described; the purpose of the acknowledgment should be averred, and the authority of the accused to make it should be negated. Martin v. State, 1 App. 586.

Indictment hereunder should set out the falsely authenticated instrument or explain not doing so; sufficiently describe the property to be affected; aver the purpose of the acknowledgment, and negative the authority of the accused. Martin v. State, 1 App. 586.

Need not allege the whereabouts or residence of the person falsely personated. Freeman v. State, 20 App. 558.

Art. 946. [549a] Prosecutions under one bill of indictment.—A conviction for any of the offenses, mentioned in articles 924, 937 and 939 of this Code, shall be a bar to any other prosecution under said articles, based upon the same transaction or same forged instrument of writing; provided, that one or more of said several offenses may be charged by separate counts in the same bill of indictment, and prosecuted together to final judgment, without election by the state as to which it relies upon for conviction; and provided, further, a judgment of conviction shall specify which offense or under which count the defendant is found guilty, and shall assess but one penalty not exceeding the greatest punishment fixed by law to the highest grade of offense of which defendant is convicted; and it is hereby declared unlawful for any county or district attorney, or any person acting as such, to wilfully or knowingly demand or receive fees for more than one prosecution that could have been combined or prosecuted in one bill of indictment, and subject to the penalties prescribed by law for the punishment of extortion of illegal fees. [Acts of 1895, p. 106.]

Time of taking effect.—This article did not take effect till 90 days after April 30, 1895, and so was unavailable in a case tried July 23, 1895.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 410, 414.

An indictment may in separate counts charge forgery, and the uttering of a forged instrument knowing it to be forged. Boles v. State, 13 App. 650; Barnwell v. State, 1 App. 745; Bell v. State, 21 App. 270, 17 S. W. 155; Keeler v. State, 15 App. 111; Dovalina v. State, 14 App. 312; Chester v. State, 23 App. 677, 5 S. W. 125; Pitts v. State, 40 App. 667, 51 S. W. 906.

An election cannot be required between counts for forging and for uttering. Carr v. State, 36 App. 3, 34 S. W. 949.

But the court submitting but one of the counts in its charge is tantamount to an election by the state, and the dismissal of the other count. Stephens v. State, 36 App. 386, 37 S. W. 425.

Jeopardy.—This article limits the defense of former jeopardy in offenses defined by articles 924, 937, and 958 of this Code to former conviction, and does not include former acquittal. Green v. State, 36 App. 109, 35 S. W. 971; Hooper v. State, 30 App. 412, 17 S. W. 1066, 28 Am. St. Rep. 926; Reddick v. State, 31 App. 587, 21 S. W. 684; Inman v. State, 35 App. 36, 30 S. W. 219.

Forgery and uttering same forged instrument are distinct offenses and conviction or acquittal for one does not bar the other. Preston v. State, 40 App. 80, 48 S. W. 581; Hooper v. State, 30 App. 412, 17 S. W. 1066; 28 Am. St. Rep. 926; Preston v. State, 40 App. 72, 48 S. W. 581.

The offense of attempting to pass an instrument knowing it to be forged is different from the offense of having possession of an instrument knowing it to be forged with intent to use and pass it as true; hence an acquittal of the first offense does not bar a prosecution for the second. Woodard v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 309.

Verdict.—Under an indictment containing counts for forgery and uttering a forged instrument there cannot be a general verdict and judgment for both offenses. Pitts v. State, 40 App. 667, 51 S. W. 906.

Where an indictment contains a count for forgery and another for uttering, and the evidence supports both counts, a general verdict can be entered upon either. Carr v. State, 36 App. 3, 34 S. W. 949.

Where the indictment charges forgery in one count and uttering the forgery in another, a general verdict of guilty without specifying the count is good, but the court in entering judgment and sentence must recite the offense of which defendant is adjudged guilty. Jacobs v. State, 42 App. 353, 59 S. W. 1112.

CHAPTER TWO

FORGERY OF LAND TITLES, ETC.

Art.	Art.
947. "Forgery of patents," etc., defined.	951. Proof and allegations necessary in indictment; proof of intent to defraud United States, etc., no variance.
948. False certificate by officers, forgery.	952. Venue.
949. Knowingly uttering forged instrument.	953. Rules in forgery applicable.
950. Non-residents may commit; venue.

Article 947. [550] "Forgery of patents," etc., defined.—Every person who falsely makes, alters, forges or counterfeits, or causes or procures to be falsely made, altered, forged or counterfeited, or in any way aids, assists, advises or encourages the false making, altering, forging or counterfeiting of any certificate, field notes, returns, survey, map, plat, report, order, decree, record, patent, deed, power of attorney, transfer, assignment, release, conveyance or title paper, or acknowledgment, or proof of record, or certificate of record belonging or pertaining to any instrument or paper, or any seal, official or private stamp, scroll, mark, date, signature, or any paper, or any evidence of any right, title, or claim of any character, or any instrument in writing, document, paper or memorandum, or file of any character whatsoever, in relation to or affecting lands, or any interest in lands in this state, with the intent to make money or other valuable thing thereby, or with intent to set up a claim or title, or aid or assist any one else in setting up a claim or title, to lands or any interest in lands, or to prosecute or defend a suit, or aid or assist any one else in prosecuting or defending a suit with respect to lands, or to cast a cloud upon the title, or in any way injure, obtain the advantage of, or prejudice the rights or interest of, the true owners of lands, or with any fraudulent intent whatever, shall be deemed guilty of forgery, and be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary at hard labor not less than five nor more than twenty years. [Act July 28, 1876, p. 59.]

Constitutionality.—The various articles of this chapter held constitutional. Grooms v. State, 40 App. 319, 50 S. W. 370; Johnson v. State, 9 App. 249; Ham v. State, 4 App. 645; Francis v. State, 7 App. 501; Rogers v. State, 11 App. 608; Hanks v. State, 13 App. 289.

Offense.—To take any one step or do any one act or thing in the commission of the offense, if any fraudulent intent may be reasonably inferred therefrom, is an offense under this article. Phillips v. State, 6 App. 364.

Instruments subject of forgery.—An instrument in the form of a deed though not acknowledged or witnessed, is a subject of forgery. Lassiter v. State, 35 App. 540, 34 S. W. 751, Howard v. State, 37 App. 494, 36 S. W. 475, 66 Am. St. Rep. 812.

A forged transfer of land, though a blank be left for the name of the transferee, is an instrument within the meaning of the statute. Phillips v. State, 6 App. 364.

The fabrication of a certificate of a notary public, purporting to authenticate the acknowledgment of a conveyance or transfer, is forgery, but was not an offense prior to the enactment of this article. Rogers v. State, 8 App. 401. It was an offense, however, to knowingly utter as true a fabricated certificate, though fabricated before this statute. Johnson v. State, 9 App. 249.

A deed purporting to convey the homestead of husband and wife without the certificate of the wife's separate acknowledgment, is not subject to forgery. Johnson v. State, 40 App. 611, 51 S. W. 382, 76 Am. St. Rep. 742.

A written instrument filled in over the genuine signature of the purported maker, agreeing to give defendant a sum of money for his equity in land for which the signer had sued, and agreeing not to dispossess defendant until the amount named is paid, is an instrument subject to forgery. Wheeler v. State, 62 App. 370, 137 S. W. 124.

An affidavit reciting that the deponent had conveyed land by quitclaim deed will estop him from asserting title; hence the forgery of such an affidavit falls within the act declaring that every person who forges or falsely makes any paper affecting the title to land shall be deemed guilty of forgery. Dillard v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 99.

Where the owner of real estate put in circulation a letter reciting a conveyance of the land, intending that a purchaser from a third person should rely thereon, he is estopped to assert his title. Dillard v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 99.

Parties liable.—Any act in furtherance of the offense from which a fraudulent intent can be inferred comes within the purview of this article. And the least degree of concert or collusion between plural parties in the illegal transaction makes the act of one the act of all. Phillips v. State, 6 App. 364; Heard v. State, 9 App. 1.

Jurisdiction and venue.—See arts. 950, 952, post; C. C. P. art. 235.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 422.

Proof of signature of "A. Barnes," when the indictment charged "Abraham Barnes," is no variance. Ham v. State, 4 App. 645.

A distinct variance between the attestation clause of a deed and the haec verba allegation of the indictment, disqualifies the former as evidence. Ex parte Rogers, 10 App. 655, 38 Am. Rep. 654.

An indictment which alleges that accused unlawfully and with intent to defraud assisted the forging of a signature to a certain deed purporting to entitle the grantee named therein to certain lands which, if true, would have affected the title and interest in such lands, sufficiently charged that the instrument would have affected the title to lands. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 893.

Where an indictment charging forgery of an affidavit affecting title to land set forth the affidavit, which showed wherein it affected title, explanatory averments are unnecessary. Dillard v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 99.

Evidence.—Comparison of handwriting, see C. C. P. art. 814.

Other offenses, see C. C. P. art. 783; Preston v. State, 40 App. 72, 48 S. W. 581.

The state must prove that the party whose name to a deed was forged was the owner of the land. Henderson v. State, 14 Tex. 503; Horton v. State, 32 Tex. 79.

In a prosecution for uttering a forged deed, proof that the certificate of authentication was forged is competent, it being set out. Ham v. State, 4 App. 645.

Evidence, in a prosecution for the forgery of a note purporting to be secured by trust deed on certain described property, held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Pye v. State, 71 App. 94, 154 S. W. 222.

Instructions.—The charge must define or explain "forgery." Ham v. State, 4 App. 645.

See charges properly given and refused, and one which should have been given in relation to proof of execution. Hatch v. State, 6 App. 384.

In a prosecution for forging and passing a forged instrument affecting title to land, the case must be submitted under Pen. Code 1911, arts. 947, 949, defining that particular offense, and not the general statute. Dillard v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 99.

Art. 948. [551] False certificate by officers forgery.—If any person authorized by law to take the proof or acknowledgment of any instrument, document or paper whatsoever, affecting or relating to the title of lands in this state, wilfully and falsely certify that such proof or acknowledgment was duly made, or if any person fraudulently affixes a fictitious or pretended signature purporting to be that of an officer or any other person, though such person never was an officer or never existed, he shall be deemed guilty of forgery and punished as provided in article 947 of this chapter. [Id.]

See notes under the preceding article.

Offense.—Since the act referred to, the fabrication of instruments in the nature of official acts,—those, for instance, of a notary public—has been forgery. Rogers v. State, 8 App. 401.

Even before the act of 1876, to utter or pass a fabricated certificate of authentication was an offense. Johnson v. State, 9 App. 249.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 423, 424.

Art. 949. [552] Knowingly uttering forged instruments.—Every person who knowingly utters, publishes, passes or uses, or who in any way aids, assists in or advises the uttering, publishing, passing or using as true and genuine any false, forged, altered or counterfeited certificate, field-notes, returns, survey, map, plat, report, order, decree, record, patent, deed, power of attorney, transfer, assignment, release, conveyance, title papers, acknowledgment or proof for record or certificate of record belonging or pertaining to any instrument or paper, or any evidence of any right, title or claim of any character whatsoever, or any instrument in writing, document, paper, memorandum or file, or any official or private seal, or any scroll, mark, date or signature in any way relating to, or having any connection with, land, or any interest in land in this state, with the intent mentioned in article 947 of this chapter, or with any other fraudulent intent whatsoever, shall be deemed guilty and be punished in like manner as is provided in article 947 of this chapter. And the filing or causing or directing to be filed, or causing or directing to be recorded, in the general land office of the state, or in any office of record or in any court in this state, or the sending through the mails or by express, or in any other way, for the purpose of filing or record of any such false, altered, forged or counterfeited matter, documents, conveyances, papers or things, knowing the same to be false, altered, forged or counterfeited, shall be an uttering, publishing and using within the meaning of this article. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 425.

Instructions.—In a prosecution for passing a forged instrument, the court should instruct that, in order for defendant to be convicted, he must have done so with intent to defraud. Feeney v. State, 124 S. W. 944.

In a prosecution for passing a forged instrument, where the count in the indictment upon which the conviction was predicated alleged that the party whose act the instrument on its face purported to be was a fictitious person, the jury should have been instructed on this averment. Feeney v. State, 124 S. W. 944.

In a prosecution for forging and passing a forged instrument affecting title to land, the case must be submitted under Pen. Code 1911, arts. 947, 949, defining that particular offense, and not the general statute. Dillard v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 99.

Art. 950. [553] Non-residents may commit, venue.—Persons out of the state may commit and be liable to indictment and conviction for committing any of the offenses enumerated in this chapter, which do not in their commission necessarily require a personal presence in this state—the object of this chapter being to reach and punish all persons offending against its provisions, whether within or without the state. An indictment, under this chapter, may be presented by the grand jury of Travis county, in this state, or in the county where the offense was committed, or in the county where the land lies about which the offenses named in this chapter were committed. [Id.]

See notes under art. 947.

Constitutionality.—The preceding articles, and all the other provisions of this chapter are constitutional. Ham v. State, 4 App. 645; Francis v. State, 7 App. 501; Johnson v. State, 9 App. 249; Hanks v. State, 13 App. 289.

Jurisdiction and venue.—See art. 952, post, and C. C. P. art. 235.

Persons out of the state may commit the offense defined, and be indicted therefor, either in the county of Travis, the county in which the offense was committed, or the county in which the land to be affected is situate. Ham v. State, 4 App. 645; Francis v. State, 7 App. 501; Rogers v. State, 11 App. 608; Hanks v. State, 13 App. 289; Grooms v. State, 40 App. 319, 50 S. W. 370; Johnson v. State, 9 App. 249.

And the statutes in force prior to the act of 1876, conferred such jurisdiction upon the courts of this state. Ex parte Rogers, 10 App. 655, 38 Am. Rep. 654; Rogers v. State, 11 App. 608; Hanks v. State, 13 App. 289.

Proof showing that a conspiracy to fabricate land titles was entered into in this state, and that one or more of the overt acts were perpetrated in this state, the courts of this state had jurisdiction independent of the act of 1876—this article. Ex parte Rogers, 10 App. 655, 38 Am. Rep. 654.

As Travis county has original jurisdiction under this article, it is competent, by agreement of parties, to transfer cases filed in another jurisdictional county to Travis. Grooms v. State, 40 App. 319, 50 S. W. 370.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 422.

Art. 951. [554] Proof and allegations necessary in indictments; proof of intent to defraud the United States, etc.—Upon indictment under this chapter, to warrant a conviction, it shall only be necessary to prove that the person charged took any one step, or did any one act or thing in the commission of the offense, if from such step, act or thing any of the intentions hereinbefore mentioned, or any other fraudulent intention, may be reasonably inferred; nor shall it be any defense to a prosecution under this chapter that the matter, act, deed, instrument or thing was in law, either as to substance or form, void, or that the same was not in fact used for the purpose for which it was made or designed; and it shall only be necessary in an indictment under this chapter to state with reasonable certainty the act constituting the offense, and charge, in connection therewith, in general terms, the intention to defraud, without naming the person or persons it was intended to defraud; and, on trial of such indictment, it shall be sufficient and shall not be deemed a variance if there appears to be an intent to defraud the United States, or any state, territory, county, city, town or village, or any body corporate, or any public officer in his official capacity, or any co-partnership or member thereof, or any particular person. [Id.]

See notes under arts. 947, 950.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 422.

Art. 952. [555] Venue.—Indictments under this chapter may be presented and the offenses prosecuted in any of the counties prescribed in title 4, chapter 2, of the Code of Criminal Procedure. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 422.

Art. 953. [556] Rules in forgery applicable.—The rules prescribed in chapter 1 of this title, relative to the offense of forgery, so far as the same are applicable, shall apply to the various offenses enumerated in this chapter. [Id.]

CHAPTER THREE

OF COUNTERFEITING AND DIMINISHING VALUE OF CURRENT COIN

Art.	Art.
954. "Counterfeiting" defined.	959. Making dies, etc., and having them in possession.
955. "Altering" also counterfeiting.	960. Passing coin of diminished value.
956. Resemblance need not be perfect.	961. "Gold and silver coin" defined.
957. Punishment.	962. What sufficient to constitute passing.
958. Passing counterfeit coin.

Article 954. [557] "Counterfeiting" defined.—He is guilty of counterfeiting who makes, in the semblance of true gold or silver coin, any coin of whatever denomination, having in its composition a less proportion of the precious metal of which the true coin intended to be imitated is composed than is contained in such true coin, with intent that the same should be passed in this state or elsewhere.

Jurisdiction.—This and the following articles make the counterfeiting of the gold or silver coins of the United States an offense against this state, and confers jurisdiction of such offense upon the courts of this state. Martin v. State, 18 App. 224.

Congress has expressly conferred and recognized the jurisdiction of state courts over counterfeiting. Stroube v. State, 49 App. 581, 51 S. W. 357.

Offense.—One who passes a copper cent so changed by some chemical way as to make it appear to be a ten-cent piece and passes it as such may be convicted of passing counterfeited coin. Glass v. State, 45 App. 605, 73 S. W. 1068, 108 Am. St. Rep. 980.

Venue.—See C. C. P. art. 236.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 426.

Instructions.—See Stroube v. State, 40 App. 581, 51 S. W. 357.

Art. 955. [558] "Altering" also counterfeiting.—He is also guilty of counterfeiting who, with like intent, alters any coin of lower value so as to make it resemble coin of higher value.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 427.

Art. 956. [559] Resemblance need not be perfect.—The resemblance between the true and the false coin need not be perfect to constitute the offense of counterfeiting.

See notes to article 954.

Art. 957. [560] Punishment.—Any person who shall counterfeit any gold or silver coin shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than five nor more than ten years.

Art. 958. [561] Passing counterfeit coin.—If any person, with intent to defraud, shall pass, or offer to pass, as true, or bring into this state, or have in his possession, with intent to pass as true, any counterfeit coin, knowing the same to be counterfeit, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 428.

Art. 959. [562] Making dies, etc., and having them in possession.—If any person, with the intention of committing the offense of counterfeiting or of aiding therein, shall make or repair, or shall have in his possession any die, mould or other instrument whatever, designed or adapted, or usually employed for making coin, or shall prepare, or have in his possession, any base metal prepared for coinage, with intent that the same may be used for the purpose of counterfeiting, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 429.

Art. 960. [563] Passing coin of diminished value.—If any person shall, with intent to profit thereby, diminish the weight of any gold or silver coin, and shall afterward pass it for the value it would have had before it was so diminished, or send it to any place, whether in the state or out of it, with the intent that the same may be passed, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five year. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 169.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 430.

Art. 961. [564] "Gold and silver coin" defined.—By the gold or silver coin mentioned in this chapter is meant any piece of gold or silver of which one of these metals is the principal component part, and which passes as money in the United States, either by law or usage, whether the same be of the coinage of the United States or of any foreign country.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 426.

Art. 962. [565] What sufficient to constitute passing.—It is sufficient to constitute the offense of passing, or attempting to pass, under the provisions of this chapter, if the counterfeit coin be delivered or offered to another, with the intention of defrauding, or enabling such other person to defraud, although such counterfeit coin be not delivered or offered at the full value which it would bear if genuine.

CHAPTER FOUR

OF OFFENSES WHICH AFFECT FOREIGN COMMERCE

Art. 963. Shipping articles without inspection.	Art. 966. Same subject.
964. Altering marks, etc.	967. Fraudulent insurance.
965. False packing.	968. Harboring deserting seamen.

Article 963. [566] Shipping articles without inspection.—If any person shall export from this state, or ship for the purpose of exportation to any one of the United States or to any foreign port, any article of commerce which, by any law of the state, may be required to be inspected by a public inspector, without having caused such inspection to be made according to law, he shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 431.

Art. 964. [567] Altering marks, etc.—If any person shall counterfeit or alter the mark, brand or stamp directed by any law of the state to be put on any article of commerce, or on the box, cask or package containing the same, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year.

Art. 965. [568] False packing.—If any person shall, with intent to defraud, put into any hogshead, barrel, cask or keg, or into any bale, box or package containing merchandise or other commodity usually sold by weight, any article whatever of less value than the merchandise with which such bale, box, package, hogshead, barrel, cask or keg is apparently filled, or, with intent to defraud, shall sell or barter, give in payment, or expose to sale, or ship for exportation, any such hogshead, barrel, cask, keg, box, bale or package of merchandise, or other commodity with any such article of inferior value concealed therein, he shall be punished by confinement in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars.

Offense.—Where the prosecution was for falsely packing a bale of cotton, it was held that it matters not at what time the sand or dirt was put into the cotton, provided it was done by the defendant, and for the purpose, and with the intent to defraud, and in a manner calculated to accomplish such purpose at the time. It is not necessary to constitute the offense of false packing that the defendant should have been present at the time of packing, and at that very time should have put the sand and dirt into the cotton. If the sand and dirt were mingled by him with the cotton, while the said cotton was in the seed, and by his act it went into the bale of cotton when the cotton was packed, the offense was as complete as if he had put the sand and dirt into the cotton while it was being packed. Jones v. State, 22 App. 680, 3 S. W. 478.

The gravamen of this offense is packing a bale with an article of less value than the pretended article. Packing a bale of cotton with an "inferior quality" of cotton, is no offense. Lidtkje v. State, 27 App. 500, 11 S. W. 629.

Sale and intent to defraud, coupled with a guilty knowledge that the bale of cotton was falsely packed, or knowledge of such facts as would put him on inquiry, is of the essence of this offense, and unless shown conviction cannot stand. Anderson v. State, 30 App. 699, 18 S. W. 866.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 432, 433.

It is not essential to an indictment under this article that the name of the person intended to be defrauded shall be alleged. Holden v. State, 18 App. 91.

The specific intent to defraud must be alleged. Holden v. State, 18 App. 91.

Instructions.—This article defines two separate and distinct offenses. When the indictment charges and the evidence suggests but one it is error to submit both to the jury. Jones v. State, 22 App. 680, 3 S. W. 478.

Art. 966. [569] Same subject.—If any person shall, with intent to deceive and defraud, conceal within any hogshead, cask, barrel, box, bale, keg or package, containing merchandise or other commodity, any merchandise or commodity of a quality inferior to that which such hogshead, cask, barrel, bale, keg or package is filled, or any substance of less value, he shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 170.]

Offense.—The offense defined by article 965 is the false packing with merchandise of any article whatever of less value than the merchandise, the intent being to defraud. That defined by article 966 may be committed in like manner, but also by packing with merchandise articles of like character but of inferior value. And in any event the false packing must have been willful and with intent to defraud. Lidtke v. State, 27 App. 500, 11 S. W. 629.

Indictment or complaint.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 434.

A complaint which charged defendant with concealing inferior cotton inside a bale of superior cotton, but did not charge that the cotton so concealed was of less value, was not defective; for there are two ways of violating the statute, one by concealing merchandise of inferior quality, and the other by substitutions of less value, and the pleader, having selected the first, is not bound to charge the other violation. Jordan v. State, 60 App. 178, 131 S. W. 539.

Instructions.—While it was undesirable that the charge should contain a full statement of the statute, yet as the court, when applying the law to the facts, charged the jury directly and pertinently to the facts in the case on trial, the error was harmless, and will not cause reversal. Jordan v. State, 60 App. 178, 131 S. W. 539.

Art. 967. [570] Fraudulent insurance.—If any person shall cause insurance to be made in this state upon any merchandise or other commodity represented to be already shipped, or about to be shipped, at any place, whether within this state or out of it, and shall, with the intent to defraud the insurer, ship articles of value less than one-half the represented value of those insured, or of a different kind from those insured, he shall be punished by fine in a sum not exceeding the amount for which such merchandise or commodity may be insured.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 435.

Art. 968. [571] Harboring deserting seamen.—The municipal authorities of incorporated towns and cities, being shipping ports, may make such regulations as are deemed proper for the punishment of keepers of boarding houses and others who knowingly lodge, entertain or conceal seamen who have deserted from any merchant vessel in their respective ports; but they shall not affix a higher penalty for such offense than a fine of fifty dollars, or imprisonment in jail for thirty days.

CHAPTER FIVE

PUBLIC WAREHOUSEMEN AND WAREHOUSES

Art.	Art.
969. "Public warehousemen" and "warehouses" defined.	less otherwise stamped; warehouseman not to issue receipt for his own property proviso.
970. Owner or operator shall obtain certificate and file bond.	976. Penalty for violation of law.
971. Warehouse receipts for property stored; form; duplicates.	976a. Civil liability in addition to criminal.
971a. Supervision of warehouses by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking; examinations.	977. Not applicable to private warehousemen or private warehouse receipts.
971b. Form for cotton warehouse receipts.	977a. Cotton and grain receipts may be issued to farmers under supervision of Board of Supervisors of warehouses; blanks for such receipts.
971c. Liens on cotton to be stated in receipt; non-negotiable receipts.	977b. Same; owners may issue promissory notes on deposit of warehouse receipts in state banks; negotiability of notes.
971d. Exchange of non-negotiable for negotiable receipt.	977c. Same; penalty for unlawful issuance of receipts or notes.
971e. False statement or concealment concerning liens.	977d. Same; contract with state banks as to compensation.
972. Unlawful to issue receipt unless goods are deposited.	977e. Same; landlord's lien not to be impaired; penalty.
973. When and to whom property stored shall be delivered; liability; cancellation of receipt.
974. Shall not limit liability.
975. Warehouse receipt negotiable un-

Article 969. "Public warehousemen" and "warehouses" defined.—All persons, firms, companies or corporations who shall receive cotton, tobacco, wheat, rye, oats, rice, oil, or any kind of produce, wares, merchandise, or any description or personal property in store for hire, under the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed and taken to be public warehousemen; and all warehouses which shall be owned or controlled, conducted and managed in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed and taken to be public warehouses, provided that a public warehouse for the storage of cotton may, within the meaning of this Act, include a lot or parcel of land inclosed with a lawful fence, the gates or entrances to which shall be kept securely locked at night. [Act 1901, p. 251; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 93, ch. 37, § 2, amending Art. 969, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 970. Owner or operator shall obtain certificate and file bond.—The owner, proprietor, lessee or manager of any public warehouse, whether an individual, firm or corporation, before transacting any business in such public warehouse shall procure from the county clerk of the county in which the warehouse or warehouses are situated, a certificate that he is transacting business as a public warehouseman under the laws of the State of Texas, which certificate shall be issued by said clerk upon a written application, setting forth the location and name of such warehouse or warehouses, and the name of each person, individual, or a member of the firm, interested as owner or principal in the management of the same, or, if the warehouse is owned or managed by a corporation, the names of the president, secretary and treasurer of such corporation shall be stated, which application shall be received and filed by such clerk and preserved in his office, and the said certificate shall give authority to carry on and conduct the business of a public warehouse within the meaning of this Act, and shall be revocable only by the district court of the county in which the warehouse or warehouses are situated, upon a proceeding before the court, on complaint by written petition of any person, setting forth the particular violation of the law, and upon process, procedure and proof, as in other civil cases. The person receiving a certificate, as herein provided for, shall file with the county clerk granting same, a bond payable to the State of Texas, with good and sufficient surety, to be approved by said clerk, in the penal sum of five thousand dollars, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duty as a public warehouseman,—which said bond shall be filed and preserved in the office of such clerk. [Act 1901, p. 251; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 93, ch. 37, § 3, amending art. 970, revised Pen. Code.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 461.

Art. 971. Warehouse receipts for property stored; form; duplicates.—On application of the owner or depositor of the property stored in a public warehouse, the warehouseman shall issue, over his own signature, or that of his duly authorized agent, a public warehouse receipt therefor, to the order of the person entitled thereto; which receipt shall purport to be issued by a public warehouse, shall bear date of the day of its issue, and shall state upon its face the name of the warehouse and its location, the description, quantity, number and marks of the property stored, where such receipt is for cotton it shall state the class and weight, and the date on which it was originally received in warehouse, and that it is deliverable upon the return of the receipt, properly indorsed by the person to whose order it was issued, and on payment of all charges for storage, and insurance, which charges shall be stated on the face of the receipt. All such receipts shall be numbered consecutively, in the order of their issue; and when such receipt is for cotton, the receipt shall state whether the cotton therein described is exposed to the weather or is under shelter; and a correct record of such receipts shall be kept in a well-bound book, which shall be, at all reasonable hours, open to examination by any interested person; and no two receipts bearing the same number shall be issued from the same warehouse during the same year, nor shall any duplicate receipts be issued, except in the case of a lost or destroyed receipt, in which case the new receipt shall bear the same date and number as the original, and shall be plainly marked on its face, "duplicate" and provided, that no such duplicate receipt shall be issued by the public warehouseman until adequate security acceptable to the warehouseman be deposited with or to the order of said warehouseman, to protect the party or parties who may finally hold the original receipt in good faith and for a valuable consideration. [Act 1901, p. 251; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 94, ch. 37, § 4, amending Art. 971, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 971a. Supervision of warehouses by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking; examinations.—The supervision of public warehouses shall be under the control of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, whose duty it shall be to prescribe all forms of receipts, certificates, and records of whatsoever description necessary in the conduct of the business of public warehouses; and in providing forms for handling those products which are of general commercial character, the said commissioner shall prescribe forms answering to all usual requirements of negotiable receipts of certificates. The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking is hereby empowered and directed to make not less than one examination each year of all such public warehouses, the necessary expense of such examination or examinations to be paid by the warehouse. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 95, ch. 37, § 5.]

Art. 971b. Form for cotton warehouse receipts.—The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall provide a uniform public warehouse receipt for cotton which shall be used by all public warehouses coming under the provisions of this Act, which said receipt shall conform in all respects to the provisions herein set out. In addition to the other provisions such receipt shall have a blank form on the back thereof, to be filled in and signed by the owner of the cotton showing whether or not such cotton is free from encumbrance or liens of any kind. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 971c. Liens on cotton to be stated in receipt; non-negotiable receipts.—If there is any encumbrance or liens of any kind on said cotton at the time of its storage the nature and amount of same shall be clearly set out and it is hereby made the duty of the public warehouseman or his authorized agent issuing the receipt, to have said blank filled in and signed by the owner of the cotton before issuing a negotiable receipt against same; provided, however, such statement need not be made if a non-negotiable receipt is desired, but in such cases the public warehouseman issuing said receipt shall write or stamp across the face thereof the words "not negotiable." [Id., § 7.]

Art. 971d. Exchange of non-negotiable for negotiable receipt.—If a person holding a non-negotiable receipt for cotton as is herein provided for, shall desire to obtain a negotiable receipt in lieu thereof, he shall return said non-negotiable receipt to the public warehouse issuing same and thereupon shall comply in every respect with the provisions of this chapter relating to negotiable receipts, and upon compliance therewith a negotiable receipt shall be issued to him in lieu of said non-negotiable receipt, and said non-negotiable receipt thereupon shall be cancelled, and the word "cancelled" plainly marked in ink across the face thereof. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 971e. False statement or concealment concerning liens.—Any person making a false statement concerning liens, mortgages, encumbrances or indebtedness or whatsoever nature against the cotton, or who shall in any particular conceal the existence of liens, mortgages, encumbrances or indebtedness of any kind that may exist against such cotton, or who shall fail to truthfully make the statements provided for by this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of one thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the penitentiary for one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 972. Unlawful to issue receipt unless goods are deposited.—No public warehouse receipt shall be issued except upon the actual previous delivery of the goods in the public warehouse or on the premises, and under the control of the public warehouseman by whom it purports to be issued; and the name of the warehouse shall invariably be specified in such receipt. [Act 1901, p. 252; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 95, ch. 37, § 10, amending Art. 972, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 973. When and to whom property stored shall be delivered; liability; cancellation of receipt.—On the presentation and return to the warehouseman of any public warehouse receipt issued by him and properly indorsed, and the tender of all proper warehouse charges upon the property represented by it, such property shall be delivered immediately to the holder of such receipt; but no public warehouseman who shall issue a receipt for goods shall, under any circumstances or upon any order or guarantee whatsoever, deliver the property for which receipts have been issued, until the said receipt shall have been surrendered and cancelled, except in case of lost receipts, as provided for in Section 4 [Art. 971]; and, in default of the strict compliance with the provisions of this article, he shall be held liable to the legal holder of the receipt for the full value of the property therein described, as it appeared on the day of the default, and shall, furthermore, be liable to the special penalty herein provided. Upon delivery of the goods from the warehouse, upon any receipt, such receipt shall be plainly marked in ink across its face with the words "cancelled," with the name of the person cancelling the same, and shall thereafter be void, and shall not again be put in circulation. [Act 1901, p. 252; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 96, ch. 37, § 11, amending Art. 973, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 974. Shall not limit liability.—No public warehouseman shall insert in the public warehouse receipt issued by him any language limiting or modifying his liabilities or responsibilities as imposed by the laws of this State, excepting, "not accountable for leakage or depreciation," or words of like import and meaning. [Act 1901, p. 252; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 96, ch. 37, § 12, amending Art. 974, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 975. Warehouse receipt negotiable unless otherwise stamped; warehouseman not to issue receipt for his own property; proviso.—The receipt issued against property stored in public warehouses, as herein provided for shall be negotiable and transferable by endorsement in blank or by special endorsement, and delivery in the same manner and to the same extent as bills of exchange and prom-issory notes now are, without other formality; and the transferee or holder of such public warehouse receipt shall be considered and held as the actual and exclusive owner, to all intents and purposes, of the property therein described, subject only to the lien and privilege of the public warehouseman for storage and other warehouse charges; provided, however, that all such public warehouse receipts as shall have the words "not negotiable" plainly written or stamped on the face thereof, shall be exempt from the provisions of this article; and provided, further, that no public warehouseman shall issue warehouse receipts against his own property in his own warehouse; but, upon sale of such property in good faith may issue to the purchaser his public warehouse receipt in form and manner as herein provided, which issue and delivery of the receipt shall be deemed to complete the sale, and shall constitute the purchaser full owner, as aforesaid, of the property therein described. Nothing in this last clause shall be construed to exempt the issuer of said receipt for his own goods in his own public warehouse, from complying with and being subject in all respects, to all other articles of this chapter. [Act 1901, p. 252; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 96, ch. 37, § 13, amending art. 975 revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 976. Penalty for violation of law.—Any public warehouseman who violates any of the provisions of this law shall be deemed guilty of criminal offense, and, upon indictment and conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine in any sum not exceeding five thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the State penitentiary not exceeding two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1901, p. 252; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 96, ch. 37, § 14, amending art. 976, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 976a. Civil liability in addition to criminal.—Any, every and all persons, aggrieved by the violations aforesaid, shall have the right to maintain an action against the person or persons, corporation or corporations, so violating any of the provisions of this law, for the recovery of damages which he or they may have sustained by reason of such violation aforesaid, before any court of competent jurisdiction, whether such person or persons so violating shall have been convicted of criminal offense under this law or not. [Act 1901, p. 252; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 96, ch. 37, § 15, amending art. 976, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 977. Not applicable to private warehousemen or private warehouse receipts.—Nothing in this law shall be construed to apply to private warehouses or to the issue of receipts by their owners or managers under existing laws, or to prohibit public warehousemen from issuing such receipts as are now issued by private warehousemen under existing laws; provided, that such private warehouse receipts issued by public warehousemen shall never be written on a form or blank indicating that it is issued from a public warehouse, but shall, on the contrary, bear on its face, in large characters, the words, "not a public warehouse receipt." [Act 1901, p. 252; Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 97, ch. 37, § 16, amending art. 977, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 977a. Cotton and grain receipts may be issued to farmers under supervision of Board of Supervisors of Warehouses; blanks for such receipts.—That each and every person, partnership or joint stock association hereafter engaged in agricultural farming shall have the right to deposit his, her or their cotton or grain by weight or in bushels of the standard weight of the United States in any bonded warehouse or elevators under the supervision and control of the Board of Supervisors of Warehouses under the laws of the State of Texas, which said cotton and grain, upon the deposit thereof in said bonded warehouse, shall be properly classed or classified by the keeper of said bonded warehouse and a certificate containing the weight, numbers of bales or packages of grain, and the classification thereof shall be written in said certificates, which said certificates shall be printed or lithographed by and under the supervision and direction of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking of the State of Texas, and blanks thereof furnished to the keepers of said bonded warehouse to be furnished by him under his official signature to the depositors of cotton and grain of any kind in said bonded warehouse. [Act 1915, p. 226, ch. 145, § 1.]

Art. 977b. Same; owners may issue promissory notes on deposit of warehouse receipts in state banks; negotiability of notes.—And be it further enacted, that blank promissory notes of the face value of one, two, three, five, ten and twenty dollars each, made payable to bearer, shall be prepared in due form, properly lithographed, and be furnished by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking to banks chartered under the laws of the State of Texas for the use of the depositors of said cotton and grain aforesaid, whereby the said depositors shall have the right to take their said certificates of their said cotton or grain to the said State bank or banks chartered by the State of Texas and deposit said certificates with said bank or banks, and they shall furnish said depositor with blank promissory notes of the face value aforesaid, or so much thereof as shall be equal to two-thirds of the value of each bale of cotton according to its classification, or to each parcel of grain, according to its classification in said certificates, which said promissory notes, when signed up by the depositors of said certificates, shall become negotiable paper as other promissory notes, and shall be a lien upon said cotton to the extent of their face value, for the purpose of aiding and securing their redemption by said bank as hereinafter provided. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 977c. Same; penalty for unlawful issuance of receipts or notes.—And be it further enacted, that any person other than the keeper and manager of the bonded warehouse herein provided for, and any person other than the owner of said certificates, who shall sign said certificates or any of said promissory notes herein provided for and put the same in circulation, shall be guilty of a felony, and shall be punished on conviction for said offense for a term of years not less than two nor more than ten years in the penitentiary of the State of Texas. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 977d. Same; contract with state banks as to compensation.—And be it further enacted, that the owners of said cotton and grain certificates shall have the right under this Act by private contract to arrange and have any State bank or banks aiding and assisting in the execution and putting in circulation said promissory notes as commercial paper and keeping a record of said certificates deposited with said bank, and the said notes issued aforesaid, such compensation as may be agreed to by the depositors of said certificates and the makers of said notes. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 977e. Same; landlord's lien not to be impaired; penalty.—And be it further enacted, that no person holding such cotton or grain certificates issued by the keepers of the bonded warehouse under this Act shall place said certificate or offer to place said certificate in any State bank or banks in this State for the purpose of obtaining the benefits of this Act in any instance where there is a prior landlord's lien or mortgage, and any person violating this provision of this Act shall be deemed guilty of swindling, and shall be punished as provided in our penal code defining swindling. [Id., § 9.]

---	--

Article 978. "Public ginner" defined, certificate required, form of.—All custom ginner of seed cotton in this state are hereby declared to be public ginner. Any person or persons, firm or corporation in this state, before engaging in the business of public ginner, shall obtain from the county clerk of the county in which gin is located a certificate after the following form:

Number.....

This is to certify that.....of.....county, Texas, has this day filed affidavit required by law, of all public ginner in this state.

(Seal.)

.....
County clerk of.....county, Texas.

Art. 979. Form of affidavit to be made.—The form of affidavit to be made to and filed with the county clerk shall be as follows:

I,.....of.....county, Texas, do solemnly swear that I will, so long as I may operate a public gin, make and forward a true and correct report of the number of bales of cotton ginned by me to the commissioner of agriculture at Austin, as required by law. [Id., p. 313.]

Art. 980. County clerk to issue and number each certificate.—The county clerk shall number each certificate issued by him consecutively, beginning at number one; and shall immediately forward to the commissioner of agriculture the name and postoffice address to whom certificate was issued. The clerk shall issue certificates to all ginner, and shall take the affidavits as herein required without cost to ginner. [Id., p. 313.]

Art. 981. Duty of commissioner of agriculture.—The commissioner of agriculture, upon receipt of information of the issuance of a ginner's certificate from any county clerk in this state, shall immediately forward all necessary blanks to the public ginner for making official cotton report, which shall consist of the following:

Envelopes addressed to the commissioner of agriculture, Austin, Texas; and there shall be printed upon the upper left hand corner the words, "official cotton report of.....county," also blanks, to wit:

Official Cotton Report

Certificate No.....

....., 190..

Commissioner of Agriculture,
Austin, Texas.

Sir: This is to certify that I have ginned.....bales of cotton from the day of 190....., to the day of 190.....

[Id., p. 313.]

Art. 982. Public ginner to forward report to commissioner of agriculture.—All public gidders shall make and forward reports to the commissioner of agriculture, on the blanks furnished them, by the third of each month, stating the exact number of bales ginned by them the preceding calendar month. This report must be made by all gidders, unless they have ceased to operate, the notice of which must be forwarded to the commissioner of agriculture. These reports must be securely sealed by gidders. [Id., p. 314.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 455.

Art. 983. Shall open same and give out information, when.—The commissioner of agriculture shall open, on the eighth of each month, and tabulate the official cotton reports of the various counties, in the presence of three creditable witnesses, who shall be appointed by the governor. The complete report, showing total number of bales of cotton ginned, shall be given out to the public, including the press, at eleven o'clock a. m., on the ninth of each month. [Id., p. 314.]

Art. 984. Giving out information before time specified, penalty.—If the commissioner of agriculture, his assistants, or any one connected with the opening and tabulating of these official cotton reports, or any other person, shall give out any information, as to the number of bales of cotton ginned, before the time specified by this act, shall, upon conviction, be confined in the penitentiary not less than one year nor more than three years. [Id., p. 314.]

Art. 985. County clerk or public ginner violating any provisions hereof, penalty.—All county clerks and public gidders who violate any of the provisions of this act are guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., p. 314.]

Art. 986. Person, owner, etc., of public gin shall keep record.—Hereafter, every person, firm, corporation or association of persons owning, controlling or operating a public cotton gin in this state, shall keep, or cause to be kept, a public record of all cotton brought to them for ginning and packing. Such record shall correctly show the amount of cotton received, date of its receipt, by whom brought to the gin and the name or names of the party or parties claiming to own the same. [Act 1901, p. 263.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 456.

Art. 987. Each bale of cotton shall be marked and same put upon record.—Said ginner, after ginning and packing said cotton, shall place, or cause to be placed, on each bale of cotton, the initials of the party or parties claiming to own said cotton, under which he shall place some private ginner's mark, all of which shall be put upon record in the book before mentioned. [Id., p. 263.]

Art. 988. Buyers of cotton shall not alter or deface marks.—Hereafter, every person, firm, corporation or association of persons who shall buy cotton in this state, shall not change, alter or deface the marks and brands on such cotton. [Id., p. 263.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 459.

Art. 989. Person, firm, corporation, etc., failing, refusing, etc., to comply with any provisions hereof, penalty.—Any person, firm, corporation or association of persons failing, neglecting or refusing to comply with any of the provisions of this act shall be punished by a fine in any sum not more than twenty-five dollars. [Id., p. 263.]

CHAPTER SEVEN

FALSE WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

Art.
990. Penalty for using.
991. Definition.
992. Destruction of, on conviction.

Art.
993. Applicable to electric current, water or gas, when; penalty for violation.

Article 990. [572] Penalty for using.—If any person shall use a false balance, weight or measure in weighing or measuring anything whatever, purchased or sold by himself, or bartered, shipped or delivered by him for sale, or bartered or pledged, or given in payment, knowing the same to be false, and with intent to defraud, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 436, 437.

Art. 991. [573] Definition.—A false weight or measure is such as is not in conformity with the standard which is or may be established by a law of this state.

Art. 992. [574] Destruction of, on conviction.—When a warrant of arrest is issued in case of offenses under this chapter, the magistrate shall direct the false balances, weights or measures to be seized and kept by the sheriff until the trial of defendant; and, in case of conviction, the same shall be destroyed.

Art. 993. Applicable to electric current, water or gas, when; penalty for violation.—Whoever, intentionally, by any means or device, prevents electric current, water or gas from passing through any meter or meters belonging to a person, corporation, or company, engaged in the manufacture or sale of electricity, water or gas, for lighting, power or other purposes, furnished such person to register the current of electricity, water or gas, passing through meters, or intentionally prevents a meter from duly registering the quantity of electricity, water or gas supplied, or, in any way, interferes with its proper action or just registration, or without the consent of such person, corporation or company, intentionally diverts any electric current from any wire, or water or gas from any pipe or pipes of such person, corporation or company, or otherwise intentionally uses, or causes to be used, without the consent of such person, corporation or company, any electricity or gas manufactured, or water produced or distributed, by such person, corporation or company, or any person, corporation or company who retains possession of, or refuses to deliver, any meter or meters, lamp or lamps, or other appliances which may be, or may have been, loaned them by any person, corporation or company for the purpose of furnishing electricity, water or gas, through the same, with the intent to defraud such person, corporation or company, or, if any person, corporation or company engaged in the manufacture or sale of electricity, water, or gas for lighting, power or other purposes, shall knowingly misread any meter or overcharge any customer for such light, water or gas furnished, shall, for every such offense, be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars and not more than one hundred dollars. Every person, firm or corporation engaged in the business referred to in this act shall keep displayed at all times, in a conspicuous place in their office, a printed copy of this law. [Act 1905, p. 205.]

CHAPTER SEVEN A

WEIGHT OF COTTON BALES

Art. 993a. Cotton ginners to stamp weights upon bales.	Art. 993d. Unlawful to make greater deduction for tare than shown by marks.
993b. Cotton compresses to see that marks are not defaced.	993e. Same; penalty.
993c. Separate offenses.	993f. Same; separate offenses.

Article 993a. Cotton ginners to stamp weights upon bales.—That the owners, lessees, operators or receivers of all cotton gins, in this State, shall stamp or write, upon each and every bale of cotton ginned by them, in plain figures, the weight of the bagging and ties in which the cotton is wrapped, said figures to be written or stamped with indelible ink, and shall be not less than four inches in height and three inches in width, and shall be preceded by the word, "tare," written or stamped upon the bale with indelible ink, the letters composing said word to be not less than four inches in height and three inches in width. Any person wilfully violating the provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten, nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1911, p. 47, ch. 34, § 1.]

Art. 993b. Cotton compressers to see that marks are not defaced.—That the owners, lessees, operators or receivers of all cotton compresses in this State, shall write or stamp upon each and every bale of cotton compressed by them, the word and figures placed upon such bale or bales of cotton by the ginner ginning the same, in compliance with Section 1 of this Act [art. 993a], in the same manner as provided for ginners in said Section 1, should such word and figures be defaced or hidden during the process of compression. Any person wilfully violating the provisions of this section, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten ($10.00) dollars, nor more than one hundred ($100.00) dollars. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 993c. Separate offenses.—Each bale of cotton ginned and each bale of cotton compressed without having placed thereon the word and figures as provided in Sections 1 and 2, respectively, of this Act [arts. 993a, 993b], shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 993d. Unlawful to make greater deduction for tare than shown by marks.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation, cotton exchange or board of trade, to make a greater deduction for tare, either from the gross weight of any bale of cotton or the price of same than is shown by the figures placed upon the bale in compliance with Section 1 of this Act [art. 993a]. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 993e. Same; penalty.—Any person, firm, corporation, cotton exchange, or board of trade, or any agent of any person, firm, corporation, cotton exchange, or board of trade who violates the provisions of Section 4 of this Act [Art. 993d], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine, of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 993f. Same; separate offenses.—Each bale of cotton from which a greater deduction for tare is made, than is shown by the figures written or stamped upon same, shall constitute a separate offense. [Id., § 6.]

CHAPTER EIGHT

OF OFFENSES BY PUBLIC WEIGHERS

Art. 994. Use of false balances. 995. Giving false certificate. 996. Other than public weigher shall not weigh, etc. 997. Factor, etc., shall not employ private weigher.	Art. 998. Person may weigh his own produce. 999. Weighing or offering to weigh for public without complying with this law, penalty.
---	---

Article 994. [575] Using false balances.—If any person is elected or appointed public weigher under the laws of this state, or, if any person whomsoever who is engaged in the business of weighing for the public, and who holds himself out to weigh for the public, shall fraudulently use any false balances, scales or instruments for weighing, or shall, in the exercise of his duty as such public weigher, or as such weigher for the public, fraudulently give the wrong weight of any article whatever weighed by him, he shall be punished by fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed one year. [Amended, Act 1901, p. 257.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 438-440, 442, 445.

Art. 995. [576] Giving false certificate.—If any public weigher in this state or his deputy, or if any person whomsoever who is engaged in the business of weighing for the public, or who holds himself out to weigh for the public, shall wilfully or fraudulently certify to or sign any false weight of cotton, sugar, wool, hides, or other commodity, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act March 15, 1875, p. 164; amended, Act 1901, p. 257.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 441, 443.

Art. 996. [577] Other than public weigher shall not weigh.—It shall not be lawful for any person other than a regularly appointed weigher, or his deputy, to weigh any cotton, wool, sugar, or hides required to be weighed, sold or offered for sale in any city having a public weigher duly qualified. Any person or persons so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction before any court of competent jurisdiction, shall suffer a fine of five dollars for each and every bale of cotton, bale or sack of wool, hogshead or barrel of sugar, bale or loose hide, so weighed. [Act April 19, 1879, p. 116, § 7.]

See Martin v. Johnson, 11 Civ. App. 628, 33 S. W. 306.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 444.

Injunction.—The petition of a public weigher seeking to enjoin an unauthorized weigher need not allege that the weighing was not done at the request of the owner in order to entitle him to a preliminary injunction, the criminal statutes showing that it was the policy of the law to protect the public weigher, and the fees of his office and the last pronouncement of the Legislature having omitted that qualification. Perry v. Carlisle (Civ. App.) 151 S. W. 1155.

The public weigher of a municipality is entitled to enjoin an unauthorized weigher who set up his establishment just outside the municipality, so as to weigh property bought and offered for sale therein. Perry v. Carlisle (Civ. App.) 151 S. W. 1155.

A public weigher elected in a justice precinct cannot enjoin a private weigher from carrying on his business. Paschal v. Inman (Sup.) 157 S. W. 1158.

Art. 997. [578] Factor, etc., shall not employ private weigher.—It shall not be lawful for any factor, commission merchant, or any other person or persons, to employ any one other than a regularly appointed and qualified public weigher, or his deputy, to weigh any cotton, wool, sugar or hides required to be weighed, sold or offered for sale in any city having a public weigher duly qualified; and any person or persons violating this provision shall be liable, at the suit of the public weigher of such city, or either of such public weighers, to damages in any sum not less than five dollars for each bale of cotton, bale or sack of wool, hogshead or barrel of sugar, or bale of hides, so unlawfully weighed, to be recovered in any court of such county having jurisdiction thereof; provided, any owner shipping any produce named in this article to any town or city having a public weigher may, by written instructions, authorize his factor, commission merchant or agent to have such produce weighed by private weighers, if he prefers so to do; and, in all such cases, the prohibitions and penalties embraced in this article and in the preceding article shall not apply. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 998. [579] Person may weigh his own produce.—Nothing in this law shall prevent any person, firm or corporation from weighing his own cotton, wool, sugar, hay, grain or pecans in person; providing that in places where there are no public weighers appointed or elected, that any person who shall weigh cotton, wool, sugar, grain, hay or pecans for compensation shall be required, before weighing such produce, to enter into a bond, with at least two good and sufficient sureties, in the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, approved and payable as in the case of public weighers referred to in this chapter, and conditioned that he will faithfully perform the duties of his office, and turn over all property weighed by him on demand of the owner; provided, that this article shall not apply to merchant flouring mills. [Id., § 10; amended, Act 1905, p. 117.]

See Watts v. State ex rel. Jowers, 61 Tex. 184; Johnson v. Martin, 75 Tex. 33, 12 S. W. 321.

Weighing of produce by owner.—The act of April 12, 1883 (Acts Leg. 1883, p. 84) amending the act of 1879, permits private persons in cities having a public weigher to weigh cotton, when so requested by the owner thereof. Ex parte Hunter, 34 App. 114, 29 S. W. 482.

The owner of produce may procure any one to weigh it when he is present and acts for himself. Martin v. Johnson, 11 Civ. App. 628, 33 S. W. 306.

Art. 999. Weighing or offering to weigh for public without complying with this law, penalty.—Any person who shall weigh or offer to weigh any cotton, wool, sugar or hides for compensation for the public, without complying with all of the provisions of this law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred dollars. [Act 1905, p. 117.]

Note.—Laws 1905, ch. 152, amending Laws 1901, ch. 112, making it a misdemeanor to issue merchandise checks to employes, was held unconstitutional in Jordan v. State, 51 App. 521, 103 S. W. 633, 11 L. R. A. (N. S.) 603, 14 Ann. Cas. 616, and was omitted from the revised penal code.

Private weighers.—A private person has the right, under the law, to keep scales for weighing in a city; to pursue the business of a private cotton weigher, and to solicit such business on private orders as he is allowed to receive. Watts v. State ex rel. Jowers, 61 Tex. 184.

Any person may weigh cotton, hides or wool, when requested to do so by the owner, notwithstanding there may be a public weigher in the city or town where the same is weighed. Ex parte Hunter, 34 App. 114, 29 S. W. 482.

Article 999a. Commercial fertilizers before sale to have brand or label; what must be shown, etc.—All corporations, firms or persons, before selling or offering for sale any commercial fertilizer for use within this State, shall brand or attach to each bag, barrel or package a plainly printed statement, showing the brand or name of said fertilizer, the net weight of the contents of the package, the name and address of the corporation, firm or person registering said fertilizer and the minimum percentages guaranteed to be present of available phosphoric acid, of nitrogen and of potash soluble in distilled water. Only such potash shall be claimed to be present as sulphate, which is in excess of the quantity required to combine with the chlorine present, less one-half per cent. In bone meal, tankage, or other similar products, the phosphoric acid shall be claimed as total phosphoric acid, unless it be desired to claim available phosphoric acid only, in which latter case the guarantee must take the form above set forth. In the case of bone meal and tankage, information showing the fineness of the product may be branded or attached to the package; provided it takes a form approved by the State Chemist. All branding or labeling must be durable and legible, and so placed and arranged as to be easily read. [Act 1899, p. 64, ch. 46, repealed; Act 1911, p. 218, ch. 109, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Act 1911, p. 223, ch. 109, § 19, repeals chapter 48, Gen. Laws 1899, and other laws in conflict, and thus supersedes Arts. 741-746, revised Penal Code. Section 20 provides that the act shall take effect Sept. 1, 1911.

Art. 999aa. Statement to be filed with state chemist; copy of brand or stamp to be filed, etc.; certificate of registration; what brand or stamp may be registered; priority in registration, etc.;

chemist to publish annual list.—All firms, corporations or persons, before selling or offering for sale any commercial fertilizer for use within this State, shall annually file with the chemist of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, herein termed the State Chemist, a certified statement giving the information required by Section 1 of this chapter [Art. 999a] and the true names and sources of all the ingredients used in the manufacture of the said fertilizer. If the same fertilizer is sold under a different name or names, said fact shall be stated, and the different brands which are identical shall be named. If the source of any ingredient of said fertilizer is changed, notification must be promptly furnished the State Chemist. A copy of the brand or stamp on the bag or other package or on the label attached thereto shall be filed with the State Chemist on or before delivery to the dealers, agents or consumers in this State, which brand or stamp shall be uniformly used during the fiscal year for which it is filed, but such brand or stamp shall truly set forth the data required in Section 1 of this Act, and be otherwise in accordance with the provisions of this chapter. On receipt of the certified statement above described, and the copy of the brand or stamp and after compliance with other requirements of this chapter, the State Chemist shall issue a certificate of registration for the commercial fertilizer, which shall be in force until the succeeding September first. A brand name previously registered shall not be allowed to be registered by another firm, corporation or individual, and no brand or name shall be allowed to be registered which is so nearly similar to another as to lead to uncertainty, confusion or fraud. The party whom the previous records of the State Chemist's office show to have first registered the name shall be permitted to retain it, subject, however, to appeal and hearing before the State Chemist to determine who is entitled to the brand; but the action of the State Chemist shall be without prejudice to the legal rights of the parties to the brand or trademark. No brand or name once registered shall be changed to a lower grade at any subsequent registration. The State Chemist shall publish annually a list of brands or trade-marks registered with him. [Act 1911, p. 218, ch. 109, § 2.]

Art. 999aaa. Words "high grade" and "standard" shall not appear upon what bags or packages; when words "low grade" must appear, etc.—The words "high grade" shall not appear upon any bag or other package of any complete fertilizer which complete fertilizer contains, by its guaranteed analysis, less than ten per cent available phosphoric acid, one and sixty-five one-hundredths per cent nitrogen and two per cent of potash, or a grade or analysis of equal total commercial value; the word "standard" shall not appear upon any bag or other package of any complete fertilizer which contains, by its guaranteed analysis, less than eight per cent available phosphoric acid, one and sixty-five one-hundredths per cent nitrogen and two per cent potash, or a grade or analysis of equal total commercial value; the words "high grade" shall not appear upon any bag or other package of any acid phosphate with potash, which shall contain, by its guaranteed analysis, less than thirteen per cent available phosphoric acid, and one per cent of potash, or a grade or analysis of equal total commercial value; the word "standard" shall not appear upon any bag or other package of any acid phosphate with potash which shall contain, by its guaranteed analysis, less than eleven per cent available phosphoric acid, and one per cent potash, or a grade or analysis of equal total commercial value; the words "high grade" shall not appear upon any bag or other package of any plain acid phosphate which shall contain by its guaranteed analysis, less than fourteen per cent available phosphoric acid; and the word "standard" shall not appear upon any bag or other package of any plain acid phosphate which shall contain by its guaranteed analysis less than twelve per cent available phosphoric acid. The word "standard" shall not appear upon any bag or other package of acid phosphate with nitrogen which shall contain, by its guaranteed analysis, less than nine per cent of available phosphoric acid and two per cent nitrogen, or a grade or analysis of equal total commercial value. It is hereby further provided that no commercial fertilizer shall be sold, offered or exposed for sale for use within this State, upon which the use of the words "high grade" or "standard" is prohibited by this Section, unless the words "low grade" is printed in two-inch letters in a conspicuous place upon the package of said commercial fertilizer. Provided, further, that no claim or guarantee for less than one per cent of phosphoric acid or of potash, or for less than a 0.82 per cent of nitrogen, shall be allowed in any commercial fertilizer. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 999b. Inspection tax; tags showing payment; not applicable to certain fertilizers; fees and penalties, how disposed of; tags, how issued; attaching tags when fertilizer not registered, etc., prohibited; fiscal year, etc.—For the purpose of defraying the expenses connected with the inspection of commercial fertilizer sold, or exposed, or offered for sale in this State, and experiments relative to the value thereof, all firms, corporations or persons engaged in the manufacture or sale of commercial fertilizers shall pay to the State Chemist an inspection tax of twenty-five cents per ton (2000 pounds) for such commercial fertilizers sold or exposed, or offered for sale in this State in order to entitle the same to inspection and delivery, and shall attach a tag furnished by the State Chemist as evidence that said tax is paid, and goods so tagged shall not be liable to any further tax. But nothing contained in this Section shall interfere with fertilizers passing through the State in transit; nor shall apply to the delivery of fertilizing materials in bulk to fertilizing factories for manufacturing purposes. The fees received by the State Chemist and all the penalties collected under this chapter shall be deposited with the treasurer of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, and shall be expended under the direction of the Board of Trustees of said College in defraying the expenses of inspecting and analyzing commercial fertilizers, the preparation of tags, and bulletins, experiments relative to the value of fertilizers, and for such other purposes as the Board of Trustees of said Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas shall allow or direct. Firms, corporations or persons, or agents representing them, who have registered their brands in compliance with Section 2 [Art. 999aa], of this chapter, shall forward to the State Chemist a request for tax tags, stating that the said tags are to be used upon the brands of commercial fertilizers registered and sold in accordance with this chapter, and said request shall be accompanied with the inspection tax, whereupon, it shall be the duty of the State Chemist to issue tags to parties applying, who shall attach said tags to each bag, barrel or package thereof. All firms, corporations or persons are hereby forbidden to attach the tag prescribed by this Section to any bag, barrel or package of any commercial fertilizer which has not been previously registered as required in Section 2 of this chapter [Art. 999aa], and which is not in accordance with all other provisions of this chapter. No tags shall be used after the end of the fiscal year for which they are issued, and they shall not be redeemed by the State Chemist. The fiscal year shall be comprised between the dates of September first and August thirty-first, inclusive. The State Chemist is hereby empowered to adopt a form for said tags. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 999bb. Duties and powers of state chemist; penalty for interference; analysis and samples; certificate of state chemist; evidence; bulletins, information, etc.—The State Chemist shall cause one analysis or more to be made annually of such commercial fertilizer sold or offered for sale under the provisions of this Act as may be sampled under his direction. The State Chemist, in person or by deputy, shall have power to enter into any car, warehouse, store, building, boat, vessel, steamboat, or place, supposed to contain fertilizers for the purpose of inspection or sampling, and shall have the power to take a sample for analysis, not exceeding two pounds, from any package or lot of fertilizer found within the State. Any person who opposes the entrance of said chemist or deputy, or in any way interferes with the discharge of his duty, shall be liable to a fine of not less than fifty dollars and not more than five hundred dollars. Said sample shall be drawn by means of a sampling tube of uniform diameter and at least eighteen inches long, placed in a jar or can, sealed and labeled by the inspector. Said sample shall be taken from not less than five bags, but in lots of 100 and over, from not less than 5 per cent of the entire number. All analyses shall be made by the official methods of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists of North America. In the trial of any suit or action wherein is called in question the value or composition of any fertilizer, a certificate signed by the State Chemist and attested with his seal, setting forth the analysis made by the State Chemist, or under his direction, of the sample of said fertilizer analyzed by him under the provisions of this chapter, shall be prima facie proof that the fertilizer was of the value and consistency shown by his said analysis. And the said certificate of the State Chemist shall be admissible to evidence to the same extent as if it were his deposition taken in said action in the manner prescribed by law for the taking of depositions. The State Chemist shall issue at least one bulletin annually, setting forth the analyses of fertilizers made under the provisions of this chapter, the operations of the law, and such other information concerning violations or operations of this chapter, or otherwise pertaining to the sale of fertilizers as may be considered necessary. The State Chemist shall also investigate the composition, properties and agricultural values of fertilizers or of fertilizer materials or ingredients of fertilizers sold or offered for sale within the State of Texas, and shall publish his results as he may find. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 999bbb. Deficiency below guaranteed value; duties of state chemist; selling fertilizer which is below guaranteed value misdemeanor.—Whenever the State Chemist shall be satisfied that any lot or shipment of fertilizer is four per cent or more below the guaranteed value in plant food, it shall be his duty to assess such deficiency against the manufacturer or guarantor of the fertilizer, and require that the value of the deficiency be made good to all persons who have purchased said fertilizer; and the State Chemist may seize any fertilizer belonging to such manufacturer or guarantor if the deficiency shall not be paid within thirty days after notice to such manufacturer.

Any person, firm, or corporation who shall intentionally or knowingly sell or offer for sale any commercial fertilizer for use within this State which is materially below the guaranteed value in plant food, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars for the first offense, and not less than two hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for each subsequent offense, and shall refund to all purchasers of said commercial fertilizer twice the value of the deficiency in plant food. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 999c. Selling fertilizer containing forbidden materials unlawful, etc.; duty of state chemist; to issue bulletins; evidence, etc.—It shall be unlawful to sell or offer for sale, in this State, any fertilizer or fertilizing materials which contain an undue quantity of hair, or which contains leather scraps, peat, or other substances of low availability as food for plants, but in which such forbidden materials aid in making up the required or guaranteed analysis. Whenever the analysis by the State Chemist shall show the presence of any of these unlawful materials in goods registered for sale, publication shall be made in bulletins giving the name or brand of the goods and the unlawful substance contained in its composition. No manufacturer or seller of such goods shall be allowed to collect pay for the same, and if payment has been made it shall be returned by the seller to the purchaser. A copy of the bulletin containing the statement of the presence of said unlawful materials in the named goods shall be evidence in any court in this State in bar of payment and for recovery of money paid for goods so named. The presence of any forbidden material shall vitiate the whole; provided that manufacturers who desire to use any such material may do so under such regulations as the State Chemist may prescribe, if it be shown that it is available for a proper purpose. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 999cc. Monthly statements by carriers; examination of carriers' books.—It shall be lawful for the State Chemist to require the officers, agents, or managers of any railroad, steamboat or other transportation company, transporting fertilizers or fertilizing material in the State, to furnish monthly statements of the quantity of such fertilizers, with the names of the consignor and consignee and the name of brand delivered on their respective lines at any and all points within this State. And the State Chemist is hereby empowered to compel such officers, agents or managers to submit their books for examination, if found expedient so to do. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 999ccc. Statements to be mailed to state chemist after sales, etc.; annual statements of sales to be submitted.—Every firm, corporation or person who has registered fertilizers for sale within the State of Texas, shall mail to the State Chemist, on forms provided by the State Chemist, within three days of each sale, shipment or delivery, a statement showing the official name of fertilizer, the quantity and the name and address of the person to whom the fertilizer is sold, and if such fertilizer is to be used for manufacturing purposes, the fact must be so stated, and also the composition of said fertilizer. Every corporation, firm or person registered to sell fertilizers within the State of Texas according to this chapter, shall annually on the first day of May, submit to the State Chemist a statement of their sales of said fertilizer since September 1, preceding, and the State Chemist is hereby authorized to require other statements of sales, if necessary, in such form as he may prescribe. The sales or shipments of any individual, corporation, firm, or person shall not be disclosed. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 999d. Fertilizer sold, etc., in violation of law liable to seizure; warrant for seizure on complaint of state chemist, etc.; hearing, condemnation and sale; sale, how advertised and made, etc.—Any commercial fertilizer sold, offered, or exposed for sale within this State in violation of any provision of this chapter, shall be liable to seizure at the instance of the State Chemist. Upon complaint being filed by the State Chemist, in person or by duly authorized deputy, with any county judge or justice of the peace, describing the commercial fertilizer and the place where it is believed that said commercial fertilizer is sold, offered or exposed for sale in violation of law, such county judge or justice of the peace shall issue his warrant directing and commanding the sheriff or any constable of his county to search such place, and if the law is being violated, to seize the commercial fertilizer, and it shall be the duty of the officer to whom such warrant is delivered to search the place described in the warrant and to seize all commercial fertilizer found therein which is in violation of law, and if admission into said place is refused, the officer executing said warrant is hereby authorized to force open the same. If it shall appear at the hearing before the county judge or justice of the peace who issued said writ, that the commercial fertilizer was being sold, exposed or offered for sale in violation of any provision of this chapter, said commercial fertilizer shall be condemned and delivered to an officer or agent of the State Chemist, to be sold by or under the direction of the State Chemist, and the net proceeds paid to the Treasurer of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this chapter. The sale shall be made at the court house door in the county in which the seizure is made, after thirty days' advertisement in some newspaper published in said county, or if no newspaper is published in such county, then by like advertisement in a newspaper published in the nearest county thereto having a newspaper. The advertisement shall state the name or brand of the goods, the quantity, and why seized and offered for sale. Said commercial fertilizer shall be sampled and subjected to analysis if necessary or tagged or branded and otherwise brought into compliance with the requirements of this chapter, before being sold. The State Chemist, however, may, in his discretion, release the commercial fertilizer seized or condemned, upon the payment of the required tax or charge and all cost and expense incurred in any proceeding connected with such seizure and condemnation and upon compliance with all other requirements of this chapter. [Id., § 10.]

Art. 999dd. Selling, etc., offering in certain cases misdemeanor; duties of attorney general and county attorneys; injunction.—Every firm, corporation or person who shall sell or offer for sale any commercial fertilizer without having attached thereto such labels, stamps and tags as are required by law, or who shall use the required tag a second time to avoid the payment of the tonnage charge, or who shall sell adulterated or misbranded fertilizer within the meaning of this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars for each offense. It shall be the duty of the Attorney General and of the several county attorneys, when requested by the State Chemist, to institute suit to enjoin any person, firm, or corporation, resident or non-resident, from manufacturing, or selling or soliciting orders for the sale of fertilizers in this State or selling fertilizers for use in this State without complying with all the provisions of this chapter, which injunction may issue without bond or advanced cost. [Id., § 11.]

Art. 999ddd. Commercial fertilizer defined; certain substances exempt.—A commercial fertilizer is hereby defined as any material, substance or mixture, which contains or is claimed to contain more than one per cent of total phosphoric acid, or of potash, or of nitrogen, and which is used for application to the soil to promote the growth of crops, or any substance, material or mixture, which is claimed to exert a beneficial action upon the soil or to promote the growth of crops; provided, that following substances: lime, limestone, marl, unground bones, stock-pen manure, bran-yard manure, or the excrement of any domestic animal, shall be exempt from the provisions of this chapter, in case that said manure or excrement has not been dried or manipulated or otherwise treated or is not claimed to have a value of more than four dollars a ton. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 999e. Penalty for selling, etc., adulterated or misbranded fertilizer; when deemed misbranded or adulterated.—Any person, firm or corporation manufacturing, selling or offering for sale any adulterated or misbranded commercial fertilizer for use within this State shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars or not more than two hundred dollars. A fertilizer shall be deemed to be misbranded if it carries any false or misleading statement upon or attached to the package, or if false or misleading statements concerning its agricultural value are made on the package or in any printed advertising matter issued by the corporation, firm or individual that registered said fertilizer, or if the number of net pounds set forth upon the package is not substantially correct. A fertilizer is adulterated if it contains any substance or substances injurious to the crop or to the soil, or if the guaranteed valuation exceeds the valuation of the plant food found on analysis ten per cent or more, or if any of the plant food constituents falls twenty per cent or more below the guaranteed composition. [Id., § 13.]

Art. 999ee. Sale of fertilizer in bulk in certain cases authorized.—Manufacturers, jobbers, dealers or manipulators of commercial fertilizers may sell acid phosphate or other commercial fertilizer in bulk to persons, individuals or firms who desire to purchase the same for their own use on their own land but not for sale or distribution, under rules and regulations prescribed by the State Chemist which will not be inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter; provided, that inspection tax shall be paid upon such fertilizer as provided in Section 5 [art. 999bb]. But if such bulk fertilizer is offered for sale or distribution, it must be tagged and branded and otherwise accord with the provisions of this chapter. [Id., § 14.]

Art. 999eee. Penalty for deceiving, counterfeiting, etc.—Any person, party or manufacturer who uses the fertilizer tags, bags or labels of some other person, party or manufacturer, in such a way as to deceive or tend to deceive, or who counterfeits, or uses a counterfeit, of the tax tag prescribed in this chapter, shall be subject to a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, and not more than five hundred dollars. [Id., § 15.]

Art. 999f. Weight of bags or packages; weight, how ascertained; penalty for failure to make good deficiency; etc.—All fertilizers or fertilizing materials sold or offered for sale for use within this State, shall be in bags or packages of one hundred pounds net weight, except as provided in Section 14 [art. 999ee]. The weight of fertilizers shall be ascertained by the inspectors of the State Chemist before drawing a sample, or by the purchaser within ten days of delivery to him, in the presence of at least two disinterested witnesses, one chosen by the purchaser and the other by the manufacturer, and the purchaser shall within five days notify the manufacturer to make good the deficiency, and upon failure of the manufacturer to do so within twenty days thereafter, he shall be liable to a penalty of three dollars for each sack, barrel, or package, which immediately attaches and becomes recoverable by the State, one-half of the penalty so received to be paid to the purchaser in case of a sale; provided, if any such manufacturer shall refuse, decline, or neglect to be present or to choose a witness within six days as herein provided after having been notified or requested in writing by the purchaser so to do, then he or they shall have forfeited their right to do so and the purchaser may select two witnesses who shall select a third, who shall proceed to ascertain said weight. [Id. § 16.]

Art. 999ff. Purchaser for use who is not dealer, etc., may take sample for analysis; state chemist to make analysis; samples, how taken, certified, etc.; penalty for refusal to furnish certificate, etc.— Any person not a dealer in, or agent for the sale of any fertilizer, who may purchase any commercial fertilizer for his own use within this State and not for sale, may take a sample of same for analysis, which analysis shall be made free of charge by or under the direction of the State Chemist. Said sample or samples of fertilizer shall be taken in the presence of both purchaser and seller. One cupful of the fertilizer shall be taken from the top and one cupful from the bottom of each sack, provided that there are not more than five sacks in the lot, but in lots of 10 to 100 sacks, from not less than five sacks; in lots of 100 and over, from not less than five per cent of the entire number. The samples so taken shall be intermixed upon some surface so as not to mix dirt or any other substance with the fertilizer. After thorough mixing, at least one pound of the material must be put into each of two cans or jars, one of which securely sealed and marked in such a way as to surely identify the sample and show by whom it was sent, but the name of the fertilizer or of the person from whom it was purchased need not be given, and must be forwarded by express, all charges prepaid, to the State Chemist; the other sample, securely sealed, shall be turned over to the company or agent selling same. The purchaser shall also send with the sample a certificate signed by himself and two disinterested witnesses, stating that the sender has purchased the fertilizer for his own use and not for sale and that the sample was taken in the manner prescribed in this Section, and that the sender has in his possession a certificate signed by himself and the two witnesses, giving the name of the fertilizer and manufacturer thereof as tagged or branded on the packages and will forward this certificate to the State Chemist on receipt of the analysis. Provided, however, that if the person, company or agent shall refuse, decline or neglect to witness the taking of samples, after having been requested or notified by the purchaser in writing six days before so to do, then the sample may be taken in the manner already described in the presence of two disinterested witnesses. Any person having sent a sample for analysis under the provisions of this Section, who shall, after having received the report of analysis of same, refuse to furnish the required certificate, shall thereafter forfeit the privilege of analysis of fertilizers under this Section. [Id., § 17.]

Art. 999fff. Penalty for violation of act.—Any person, corporation or firm violating any provision of this chapter for which a penalty is not otherwise provided herein, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., § 18.]

Article 999g. Livestock commission merchants defined.—That any person, firm or corporation pursuing or who shall pursue the business of selling livestock, cattle, cows, calves, bulls, steers, hogs, sheep, mules, horses, jacks and jennets, or any of them upon consignment for a commission or other charges, or who shall solicit consignments of live stock as a commission merchant or who shall advertise or hold himself out to be such, shall be deemed and held to be a livestock commission merchant within the meaning of this Act. [Act 1913, p. 93, ch. 49, § 1.]

Art. 999gg. Bond of.—That all livestock commission merchants be and they are hereby required to make bond each in the sum of $10,000.00 entered into with two or more good and sufficient sureties, who are residents of this State, or some surety company duly and legally authorized to do business in this State, payable to the county judge of the county in which such livestock commission merchant resides or has his principal office, and to his successors in office, as trustees for all persons who may become entitled to the benefits of this Act, such bond to be filed in the county where such commission merchant has his principal office or place of business, in which county suits may be maintained on such bond and such bond shall be conditioned that such livestock commission merchant will faithfully and truly perform all agreements entered into with consignors with respects to receiving, handling, selling and making remittances and payments made to him, which bond shall be approved by the county clerk of the county in which such livestock commission merchant resides, or has principal office and by him, be filed and recorded. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 999ggg. Suits on bond.—That the bond provided for by the preceding section may be sued upon and recovery had thereon by any person claiming to have been damaged by a breach of its conditions; provided, that said bond shall not become void upon the first recovery thereon, but may be sued upon until the amount thereof is exhausted. That upon the exhaustion of said bond by recoveries thereon, said livestock commission merchant shall be required to make and file a new bond conditioned as provided in Section 2 [Art. 999gg] hereof. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 999h. New bond required, when.—That if it shall come to the knowledge of the said county judge or the county clerk that either or all of the sureties on said bond are, or may become insolvent, then it shall be the duty of said county judge or said county clerk to require said live stock commission merchant to enter into, execute and deliver a new bond, as herein provided for. [Id., § 3a.]

Art. 999hh. Penalty for violation of law.—That any person who shall advertise or solicit business as a livestock commission merchant, or who shall pursue in any way the occupation of a livestock commission merchant, without having made the bond or bonds as required by this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not more than five thousand dollars ($5,000), or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than one month and not more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 999hhh. Bond filed, where; fees.—The bond herein mentioned shall be filed and kept by the county clerk of the county where filed, who shall receive the sum of fifty cents for each such bond, same to be paid by such commission merchant. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 999i. Laws not repealed.—It is expressly declared that none of the provisions of Title 57 of the Revised Civil Statutes of 1911, are affected or in anywise modified or repealed by the provisions of this Act. [Id., § 6.]

CHAPTER EIGHT C

COMMISSION MERCHANTS

Art.
999ii. Bond of.

Art.
999iii. Bond made where; suit in same county.

Article 999ii. Bond of.—Every commission merchant is hereby required to make bond in the sum of three thousand dollars, entered into with two or more good and sufficient sureties, who are residents of this State, and who shall make affidavit before some officer authorized to administer oaths, that they in their own right, over an above all exemptions, are worth the full amount of the bond they sign as sureties, payable to the county judge of each county in which such commission merchant maintains an office, and to the successors in office of such county judge as trustees for all persons who may become entitled to the benefits of this Act; conditioned that such commission merchant will faithfully and truly perform all agreements and contracts entered into with consignors for said produce, goods, wares or merchandise, that said commission merchant will promptly receive and sell such produce, goods, wares or merchandise, and will on receipt of such produce, goods, wares or merchandise class the same, and if such class as made by such commission merchant is not as high as that made and sent to him by the consignor, he (the commission merchant), will immediately notify the consignor of such fact and of the class made by him; and, as soon as sold will send to the consignor a full and complete account of sales of same, giving an itemized account thereof, and the price received, the dates of sales, and shall, within five days after said produce, goods, wares or merchandise are sold, send to the consignor the full amount received for the same, less the commission due said commission merchant under the contract of consignment, which bond shall be approved by the county judge of the county in which said commission merchant maintains an office, and by said county judge filed for record in the county clerk's office as chattel mortgages are now authorized to be filed by law; provided, that any commission merchant may be bonded under the provisions of this Act by a solvent surety company, doing business in this State, to be approved by the county judge under the provisions of this Article. [Act 1907, p. 61, § 2; Act 1913, p. 178, ch. 94, § 1, amending art. 3827, Rev. St. 1911.]

Art. 999iii. Bond made where; suit in same county.—Such bond shall be made and filed for record in each county in which such commission merchant maintains an office, and in which county suits may be maintained upon such bond by any person claiming to have been damaged by a breach of its condition; provided, that said bond shall not become void upon the first recovery thereon, but may be sued upon until the amount thereof is exhausted; provided, however, that when said bond by suits of recovery has been reduced to the sum of fifteen hundred dollars, that said commission merchant shall be required to enter into a new bond in the sum of three thousand dollars as required in the first instance under the provisions of this Chapter; which said new bond shall be liable for all future contracts, agreements or consignments thereafter entered into by said commission merchant and consignor of such produce, cotton, sugar, goods, wares or merchandise, and upon failure of said commission merchant to give said new bond, as above required, he shall cease doing business in this State; provided any commission merchant, as herein defined, who shall engage in business as such commission merchant, without first making and filing the bond provided for in Articles 3827 and 3828, [Rev. Civ. St. 1911] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1907, p. 61, § 2; Act 1913, p. 178, ch. 94, § 1, amending art. 3828, Rev. St. 1911.]

Consent of wife to security for loan. 999mm. Annual tax.

Article 999j. "Loan broker" defined.—A "loan broker" is a person, firm or corporation who pursues the business of lending money upon interest and taking as security for the payment of such loan and interest an assignment of wages, or an assignment of wages with power of attorney to collect the same or other order for unpaid chattel mortgage or bill of sale upon household or kitchen furniture. [Act 1915, p. 48, ch. 28, § 1.]

Art. 999jj. Bond required.—No person, firm or corporation shall pursue the business of a loan broker without first having given bond with at least two good and sufficient sureties or the guaranty of some solvent bonding company authorized to do business in this State, in the sum of five thousand ($5,000) dollars, payable to the State of Texas, approved by and filed with the clerk of the County Court of the county in which such person, firm or corporation proposes to pursue said business, conditioned that such person, firm or corporation shall faithfully comply with each and every requirement of the law governing such business, and will pay to any person dealing with such loan broker any judgment that may be obtained against him. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 999jjj. Registration of bond.—The bond required by the preceding article shall be recorded and safely kept in the office of the clerk of the County Court of the county in which such loan broker pursues such business, the recording fees thereof to be paid by such loan broker, and a new bond shall be given, filed and recorded in the same manner as the first one, every twelve months during the continuance of such business. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 999k. Separate offices.—A bond shall be required and given by each loan broker for each and every separate office or place of business which he may conduct. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 999kk. Broker to keep register of loans.—Each loan broker shall keep a well-bound book in which he shall register all his transactions as a broker at the time same occurs; such registry shall show (1) the articles of property securing the loan, if the same be secured by chattel mortgage or bill of sale on household or kitchen furniture; (2) the assignment of wages, or the assignment of wages with power of attorney to collect the same, or other order for unpaid wages given as security, giving the name of the person receiving the money, and the person by whom such person is employed, or by whom it is expected that he will be employed, and in whose service it is expected that he shall earn the salary or wages; (3) the amount of money received by the borrower; (4) the amount to be received back by the loan broker, and the time in which he is to receive back such payment; (5) the rate of interest or discount agreed upon. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 999kkk. Public inspection of register.—Such books shall be kept open for inspection, and that the broker shall give to the party borrowing, a ticket showing the amount of cash actually received, and showing the amount paid back by the borrower to the loan broker on each payment, such tickets to correspond with the entry on the book of the register. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 999l. Loan broker to file power of attorney to receive service of process.—Each loan broker as defined in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 999j] engaged in doing or desiring to do business in this State shall file with the County Clerk of the county in which he or it is engaged in doing such business or desires to do such business an irrevocable power of attorney duly executed, constituting and appointing the County Judge of the county in which he or it is engaged in doing business or in which he or it desires to do business, and to his successors in office, his or its duly authorized agent and attorney in fact, for the purpose of accepting service for him or it, or being served with citation in any suit brought against him or it in any court of this State by any person, firm, company or corporation, and consenting that the service of any civil process upon such County Judge as his or its attorney for such purpose, in any suit or proceeding, shall be taken and held to be valid, waiving all claim and right to object to such service or to any error by reason of such service and such appointment, agency and power of attorney, shall by its terms and recitals provide that it shall continue and remain in force and effect so long as such loan broker continues to do business in this State and so long as it shall have outstanding any claim of any character held by any citizen, firm, company or corporation of this State or by the State of Texas against him or it, and until all claims of every character, so held by any citizen, firm, company or corporation or by the State of Texas, shall have been settled. Said power of attorney shall be signed in person by any individual loan broker and by each member of any firm, partnership or association engaged in business as a loan broker, and if such loan broker is a corporation it shall be signed by the president or vice-president and by the secretary of such corporation, and shall be attested by the seal of such corporation. Each such power of attorney shall be acknowledged before some officer authorized by the laws of this State to take acknowledgments. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 999ll. Payment of judgments.—If any judgment upon any bond given by any loan broker shall remain unpaid for sixty days after final judgment and execution thereon, it shall be unlawful for such loan broker to continue to run such business, and the same shall be punished by fine of not less than $50.00 nor more than $250.00, and each and every day in which such loan broker conducts such business shall be a new and separate offense. Each and every person employed by and engaged in the conduct of such business shall be guilty of unlawfully conducting the same, if the same be conducted without a bond, or after the forfeiture of such bond as above described. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 999lll. Penalty for violation of law.—If any loan broker, or person doing business as such shall make any loan upon chattel mortgages or bill of sale upon household or kitchen furniture, or shall make any loan taking as security for the payment thereof an assignment of wages or an assignment of wages with power of attorney to collect the same, whether the same be called a loan or purchase without complying with the laws regulating loan brokers in this State, he shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50.00 nor more than $250.00 for each. [Id., § 10.]

Art. 999m. Consent of wife to security for loan.—Each assignment, mortgage, power of attorney to collect or other transfer of the salary or wages of a married man, and each bill of sale or chattel mortgage upon the household and kitchen furniture of a married man shall be void unless the same be made and given with the consent of the wife, and such consent shall be evidenced by the wife joining in the assignment, mortgage, power of attorney to collect or other transfer of salary or wages, and the signing of her name thereto and by her separate acknowledgment thereof, taken and certified to by a proper officer, substantially in the mode provided by law for the acknowledgment by the wife of a conveyance of the homestead. [Id., § 11.]

Art. 999mm. Annual tax.—Every loan broker shall pay an annual tax of one hundred and fifty dollars to the State of Texas for each and every place of business. [Id., § 12.]

CHAPTER EIGHT E

EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES

Art.	Art.
999mmm. License and bond; action on bond.	duty of commissioner of Labor Statistics.
999n. Shall keep register of transactions; charges for service.	999o. "Private agency for hire" defined.
999nn. Immoral occupations; false promises; inducing employ-és to leave service.	999oo. Fees and fines to be paid into state treasury; special fund.
999nnn. Penalty for violation of act;	999ooo. Disposition of fines assessed by courts.
	999p. Blank books.

Article 999mmm. License and bond; action on bond.—No person, firm or corporation in this state shall open, operate or maintain a private employment agency for hire, or where a fee is charged to either applicant for employment or for help, without first obtaining a license for the same from the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, and such license fee shall be $25.00 (twenty-five dollars). Such license shall be of force for one year, but may be renewed from year to year upon the payment of a fee of $25.00 (twenty-five dollars) for each renewal. Every license shall contain a designation of the city, street and number of the building in which the licensed party conducts said employment agencies. The license, together with a copy of this Act, shall be posted in a conspicuous place in each and every employment agency. The Commissioner of Labor Statistics shall require with each application for a license a good and sufficient bond in the penal sum of five hundred ($500.00) dollars, to be approved by said commissioner, and conditioned that the obligor will not violate any of the duties, terms, conditions, provisions, or requirements of this Act. The said Commissioner of Labor Statistics is authorized to cause an action to be brought on said bond in name of the State for any violation of any of its conditions, and may revoke, upon a full hearing, any license whenever, in his judgment, the party licensed shall have violated any of the provisions of this Act. [Act 1915, p. 163, ch. 108, § 1.]

Art. 999n. Shall keep register of transactions; charges for service.—It shall be the duty of every licensed agency to keep a register in a substantial book, in the form prescribed by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics, in which shall be entered the age, sex, nativity, trade or occupation, name and address of every applicant. Such licensed agency shall also enter in a register the name and address of every person who shall make application for help or servants, and the name and nature of the employment for which such help shall be wanted. Such register shall, at all reasonable hours, be open to the inspection and examination of the Commissioner of Labor Statistics or his deputies or inspectors. Where a registration fee is charged for filing or receiving application for employment or help, said fee shall in no case exceed the sum of two ($2.00) dollars, for which a receipt shall be given, in which shall be stated the name of the applicant, the amount of the fee, the date, the name or character of the work or the situation to be secured. In case the said applicant shall not obtain a situation or employment through such licensed agency within one month after registration as aforesaid, then said licensed agency shall forthwith repay and return to such applicant, upon demand being made therefor, the full amount of the fee paid or delivered by said applicant to said licensed agency; provided, that such demand be made within thirty (30) days after the expiration of the period aforesaid. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 999nn. Immoral occupations; false promises; inducing employés to leave service.—No agency shall send or cause to be sent any female help or servants to any place of bad repute, house of ill fame or assignation house, or any house or place kept for immoral purposes. No such licensed agency shall publish, or cause to be published, any false information, or to make any false promise concerning or relating to work or employment to anyone who shall register for employment, and no such licensed agency shall make any false entries in the register to be kept as herein provided, and all entries in such registers shall be made in ink. Any licensed person or agency shall not by himself or itself, agent or otherwise, induce, or attempt to induce, any employé to leave his employment with a view to obtaining other employment through such agency. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 999nnn. Penalty for violation of act; duty of commissioner of Labor Statistics.—It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Labor Statistics to enforce this Act, and when informed of any violation thereof, it shall be his duty to institute criminal proceedings for enforcement of its penalties before any court of competent jurisdiction. He may make such rules and regulations for the enforcement of this Act not inconsistent therewith, as he may deem proper. Any person convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of Sections 1, 2 and 3 [Arts. 999mmm-999nn] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction shall be fined not less than fifty ($50.00) dollars nor more than two hundred ($200.00) dollars for each offense; provided, that any person or persons who shall send any female help or servants to any place of bad repute, house of ill fame or assignation house or any house or place kept for immoral purposes, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction shall be punished by a fine of not less than one thousand ($1,000.00) dollars nor more than five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two (2) years nor more than ten (10) years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 999o. "Private agency for hire" defined.—A private agency for hire is defined and interpreted to mean any person, firm or corporation engaging in the occupation of furnishing employment or help, or giving information as to where employment or help may be secured, or displaying any employment sign or bulletin, or, through the medium of any card, circular or pamphlet, offering to secure employment or help; provided, that charitable organizations not charging a fee shall not be included in said term. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 999oo. Fees and fines to be paid into state treasury; special fund.—The Commissioner of Labor Statistics shall, at the end of each month, make an itemized account of all moneys received by him from fees and fines, under the provisions of this Act, and pay the same into the State Treasury, to be held in a separate fund known as the employment agency fund, and to be used for expenses incurred in inspecting, regulating and printing blanks and books to be furnished such employment agencies by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics. The unexpended moneys remaining in the State Treasury at the end of the fiscal year shall be transferred into the school fund. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 999ooo. Disposition of fines assessed by courts.—All fines assessed by the courts for violation of Sections 1 and 2 of this Act [Arts. 999mmm, 99n] shall be paid by said court to the Commissioner of Labor Statics or his duly authorized agents. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 999p. Blank books.—The Commissioner of Labor Statistics shall furnish to each licensed employment agency blank books upon which their record shall be kept, as provided for in this Act, together with forms for receipts, etc., and all necessary blanks upon which reports shall be made to the Commissioner of Labor Statistics. [Id., § 8.]

CHAPTER EIGHT F

CONTRACTING STEVEDORES

Art.	Art.
999pp. Contracting stevedore and stevedore defined.	999qq. Bond and license in each county, etc.; suits on bond.
999ppp. License and bond; penalty.	999qqq. License, how granted.
999q. Bond.	999r. New bonds and licenses; time within which to qualify.

✓ Article 999pp. Contracting stevedore and stevedore defined.—A contracting stevedore, within the meaning of this Act, is any person, firm, association of persons, or corporation that contracts with any ship, agent, owners, masters, managers or captains of vessels, or with any other person or corporation, for the purpose of loading or unloading, or of having loaded or unloaded any vessel, ship or water craft; a stevedore within the meaning of this Act is any laborer who performs any of the actual labor in loading and unloading any ship, vessel or water craft whatsoever while in the service or employ of a contracting stevedore as above mentioned. [Act 1913, p. 153, ch. 82, § 1.]

Art. 999ppp. License and bond; penalty.—It shall hereafter be unlawful for any contracting stevedore to engage in the business or pursue the occupation of loading and unloading or having loaded or unloaded by the employment of labor therefor any ship, vessel or water craft in this State without first obtaining the license and executing the bond as hereinafter provided, and any such person who pursues said occupation without first qualifying as provided by this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars for each day he shall pursue such occupation or business without thus qualifying and any member of a firm or association or any manager of a corporation who come within the meaning of a contracting stevedore who shall thus offend shall be amendable [amenable] to prosecution hereunder. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 999q. Bond.—Each contracting stevedore as contemplated by this Act is hereby required to make bond in the sum of five thousand dollars, entered into with two or more good and sufficient sureties, who are residents of this State, or with any good and sufficient surety bonding Co. authorized to transact business in this State, payable to the county judge of the county in which such stevedore pursues his occupation and to his successor in office, as trustee for all persons who may become entitled to the benefits of this Act, said bond to be conditioned that said contracting stevedore will promptly on Saturday of each week pay each laborer his wages for labor performed in loading and unloading any such ship, vessel or water craft according to the scale of wages agreed upon, and that all agreements entered into with said laborers and each of them in respect to the loading and unloading of said water craft, as above mentioned, will be faithfully and truly performed, which bond shall be approved by the county clerk of the county in which said contracting stevedore is pursuing said business or occupation and by him shall be filed and recorded. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 999qq. Bond and license in each county, etc.; suits on bond.—The bond and license hereinafter provided for shall be made in each county in which said contracting stevedore pursues said occupation, in which county suits may be maintained upon such bond by any person to whom wages are due and unpaid for such labor as is hereinbefore mentioned; provided, that the same shall not become free upon the first recovery, but may be sued upon until the full amount thereof is exhausted, or suits sufficient to exhaust the bond or [are] pending, and when so exhausted said contracting stevedore shall make and file a new bond in amount and conditioned as provided for the first, and his failure so to do shall render him amendable [amenable] to prosecution as if no bond had ever been given in the first instance. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 999qqq. License, how granted.—Said contracting stevedore shall, before beginning business as before stated, file his application in writing for a license to pursue the occupation of a contracting stevedore for the county mentioned, and on approval of the bond hereinbefore provided for by the county clerk and payment of a license fee of five dollars the clerk shall grant to him a license to pursue said occupation upon such form as the county commissioners court may designate, the said license fee to be paid into the general fund of the county. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 999r. New bonds and licenses; time within which to qualify.—Said contracting stevedore shall be and he is hereby required to execute a new bond and to obtain the issuance of a new license at the expiration of each year from the former, every two years from the issuance of the former license, and all contracting stevedoers who may be engaged in the occupation herein defined at any port, sub-port or other place where ships, vessels or water crafts are loaded or unloaded, at the time this law becomes effective, shall have thirty days from and after the going into effect of this law to qualify thereunder by executing the bond and obtaining the license as required herein. [Id., § 6.]

Article 999rr. State Board of Public Accountancy created.— There is hereby created a board to be known as the State Board of Public Accountancy, to be composed of five members, who shall be public accountants of good moral character and qualified citizens of the State of Texas, each of whom shall have had at least three years practical experience as a public accountant on his own account immediately preceding his appointment, during the last three years of which he shall have been so engaged in the State of Texas; the members of said board to be selected and appointed as hereinafter provided. [Act 1915, p. 184, ch. 122, § 1.]

Art. 999rrr. Appointment and tenure of members of board.— Within thirty days after this Act shall go into effect the Governor of the State of Texas shall appoint five persons qualified as provided in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 999rr], who shall constitute the State Board of Public Accountancy.

The members of the first State Board of Public Accountancy provided for herein shall be appointed for and shall serve for the term ending on the third Tuesday of January, 1917, or until their successors are appointed and qualified. On and after the third Tuesday in January, 1917, and regularly every two years thereafter, the Governor of the State of Texas shall appoint five members as successors on said board, and each and every member who may be appointed to succeed any member of the first State Board of Public Accountancy shall be a certified Public Accountant, holding a certificate as such under the provisions of this Act, and resident of Texas for at least three years preceding said appointment.

Five members of the First State Board of Public Accountancy provided for herein shall confer upon themselves the title "Certified Public Accountant," provided that each member of said board shall have filed an application for such certificate with four remaining members of said board, and, provided further, that said applicant shall meet the requirements as provided in Section 8 [Art. 999ttt]. All vacancies in said board caused by death, resignation, removal from the State, or otherwise, shall be filled by appointment of the Governor, and each special appointment shall be from the roster of certified public accountants created under this Act, and said appointee shall continue only until the expiration of the regular term for which the predecessor of such appointee would have held office. The revocation of the certificate of any member of this board shall terminate his membership thereon, and the Governor shall fill the vacancy so caused as herein above provided. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 999s. Organization of board; rules and regulations; powers.—The members of said board shall, within thirty days after their appointment, qualify by taking the oath of office before a notary public or other officer empowered to administer oaths in the county in which each shall reside, and shall file same with the Secretary of State and receive their certificate of appointment as members of the “State Board of Public Accountancy.” At the first meeting after each biennial appointment, the board shall elect from among its members a chairman and secretary-treasurer. The board may prescribe rules, regulations and by-laws in harmony with the provisions of this law and not inconsistent with the laws of the State of Texas for its own proceedings and government and for the examination of applicants for certificates as certified public accountants; which rule shall provide that when a division on any motion occurs, at least three affirmative votes shall be necessary to the final adoption thereof. It is further provided that three members of said board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the board.

All rules, regulations and by-laws adopted by the said board shall be filed with the office of the Secretary of State. Said board, or any member thereof, shall have the power to administer oaths for all purposes required in the discharge of its duties, and said board shall adopt a seal to be affixed to all of its official documents. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 999ss. Meetings of board; examinations.—The board shall meet within sixty days after its appointment and at least once in each year for the purpose of examining applicants for certificates as provided herein, and may meet as many times during the year as may be in its discretion advisable. Notice of all meetings shall be given at least thirty days prior to the dates selected for same by publication three consecutive times in three daily newspapers published in the three most populous cities in the State, such notice giving the time and place of meeting and stating the purpose to be for the examination of applicants for certificates as certified public accountants; provided, that the board may hold any number of meetings, and at any time, without giving notice by publication of such meetings, if a meeting be called for any other purpose than the examination of applicants for certificates. It is further provided that any applicant who has successfully passed an examination before said board upon three of the subjects required may have a re-examination upon the unsuccessful subject under the supervision of said board. Examinations by the board shall be on the following subjects: “Theory of Accounts,” “Practical Accounting,” “Auditing,” and “Commercial Law as Affecting Accountancy,” and each applicant shall be required to make a general average of at least seventy-five per cent. on all subjects, and to each person passing such examination, if he has otherwise qualified, shall be issued by the State Board of Public Accountancy a certificate as a “Certified public accountant of the State of Texas,” and the State Board of Public Accountancy shall have the power to revoke or recall any certificate issued under this Act as hereinafter provided. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 999sss. Records of board; transmission to Secretary of State.—The State Board of Public Accountancy shall preserve a record of its proceedings in a book kept for that purpose, showing the name, age and duration of residence of each applicant, the time spent by the applicant in practice as a public accountant, or in employment in the office of the public accountant, and the year and school, if any, from which degrees were granted or in which the course of study was successfully completed by the applicant as required by law. Said register will show, also, whether applicants were rejected or licensed, and shall be prima facie evidence of all matters contained therein. The secretary of the board shall, on December 31 of each year, transmit an official copy of said register to the Secretary of State for permanent record, certified copy of which, under the hand and seal of the secretary of said board or Secretary of State, shall be admitted in evidence in any court or proceeding. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 999t. Qualifications of applicants for certificates.—No person shall be permitted to take an examination unless he be twenty-one years of age, of good moral character, a qualified citizen of the United States, and unless he shall have had one year's study and practice in accountancy or accounting work. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 999tt. Certificate without examination.—The board may, in its discretion, waive the examination and issue a certificate to any person who has received and holds a valid and unrevoked certificate as a certified public accountant issued by or under the authority of any state or territory of the United States, the District of Columbia, or who holds the equivalent of such certificate by and under the expressed legal authority of any foreign nation, providing, however, that such certificate or degree shall, in the opinion of the board, have been issued under a standard fully equivalent to that of the requirements of said board, and issued by such state or territory as may extend the same privilege to certified public accountants holding certificates from this State; provided, further, that such applicant shall have qualified as provided in Section 6 [Art. 999t]. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 999ttt. Same.—The State Board of Public Accountancy shall, upon written application therefor, waive examination of any applicant, provided said applicant shall be qualified as provided by Section 6 [Art. 999t] hereof, and shall have been practicing on his own account as a public accountant, or on the behalf of another public accountant, as a senior public accountant for not less than three years, two years of which practice shall have been within the State of Texas immediately preceding said application; provided, further, that such application is filed prior to January 1, 1916. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 999u. Examination fee; annual fee.—Each applicant for a certificate as certified public accountant shall, at the time of making application, pay to the treasurer of said board a fee of twenty-five dollars, and no application shall be considered by said board until said fee of twenty-five dollars shall have been paid. In case of failure on the part of any applicant to pass a satisfactory examination, said applicant may have the privilege of appearing at any subsequent examination conducted by said board for re-examination, upon the payment of an additional fee of ten dollars.

The holder of each certificate issued hereunder shall pay an annual fee of $1.00 into the treasury of the State Board of Public Accountancy. The failure on the part of the holder of any certificate issued under this Act to pay this fee shall automatically cancel the privilege of using the title "Certified Public Accountant," but reinstatement may be had at any time within two years, or before the expiration of sixty days after the two years shall have elapsed, by the payment of the fee and application in such form as may be provided by the board and the payment further of a penalty of $2.50 for each year lapsed. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 999uu. Revocation of certificate.—The State Board of Public Accountancy shall revoke and recall any certificate issued under this Act if the holder thereof: (1) shall be convicted of a felony; (2) shall be declared by any court to have committed any fraud; or (3) shall be declared by any court or commission to be insane or otherwise incompetent; or (4) shall be held by this board to be guilty of any act or default discreditable to the profession; provided, that written notice of the cause of such contemplated action and the date of the hearing thereof by this board shall have been served upon the holder of such certificate at least fifteen days prior to such hearing, or provided that such notice of such contemplated action and the date of the hearing thereof by this board shall have been mailed to the last known address of such holder of such certificate at least twenty days prior to such hearing; and at such hearing the Attorney General of this State, or any one of his assistants, or any district attorney designated by him, may sit with the board as legal counsellor and advisor, and to prepare for any legal action that may be determined upon by the State Board of Public Accountancy. [Id., § 11.]

Art. 999uuu. Penalty for violation of act.—If any person represents himself to the public as having received a certificate as provided for in this Act, or advertises as a “Certified Public Accountant,” or uses the initials “C. P. A.,” or otherwise falsely holds himself out as being qualified under this Act, while practicing in this State, without having actually received such certificate, or it has been recalled or revoked, and he shall continue to use the initials “C. P. A.,” or shall refuse to surrender such certificate after revocation thereof, or shall otherwise violate any provisions of this Act, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined any sum not to exceed $200.00. No audit company, incorporated or unincorporated, shall use the title “Certified Public Accountants” or the initials “C. P. A.,” and no firm or partnership shall use this title, or these initials, unless each member of said firm or partnership is a legal holder of a certificate issued under the provisions of this Act, and any violation of these provisions shall be punished by a fine not to exceed the sum of $200.00.

The use by any person, firm or corporation of the abbreviated title “Certified Accountant,” or of the initials “C. A.,” shall be construed a violation of this Act, and shall subject such person, firm or corporation to a fine not to exceed the sum of $200.00. [Id., § 12]

Art. 999v. Misconduct by practicing public accountant.—If any person practicing in the state of Texas as a Certified Public Accountant under this Act shall wilfully falsify any report or statement bearing upon any examination, investigation or report made by him or under his direction as such Certified Public Accountant, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $100.00 or more than $1,000.00; provided, further, than any person convicted under this section shall forfeit and surrender the certificate of Certified Public Accountant held by him to the State Board of Public Accountancy. [Id., § 13.]

Art. 999vv. Purpose and scope of law.—Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent any person from being employed as an accountant in this State in either public or private practice. The purpose of this law is to provide for the examination and the issuance of a certificate, or degree, granting the privilege of the use of the title "Certified Public Accountant," and the use of the initials "C. P. A.," as indicative of the holder's fitness to serve the public as a competent and properly qualified accountant in public practice, and to prevent those who have no such certificate or degree from using such title or initials; provided, however, the use of the initials "C. P. A." or "C. A." to designate any business other than the practice of accountants or auditors is not prohibited by this Act. [Id., § 14.]

Article 999vvv. Corporations affected by act; promotion commissions or fees.—Every private corporation, foreign or domestic, organized for profit, which is now attempting or shall hereafter attempt to increase its capital stock, and every proposed corporation attempted to be organized which shall, directly or indirectly, through itself, its agents or employes, or through any person or association of persons, holding companies, sales companies or otherwise, or through any other agents, sell or contract to sell any stock of such corporation or proposed corporation, upon which sale or proposed sale or contract of sale any part of the proceeds derived or to be derived therefrom are used or to be used, directly or indirectly for the payment of any commission, promotion, organization fee or other expenses incident, directly or indirectly, to the sale of its shares of stock, except attorney's fees, charter fees, franchise tax, permit fees and stationery and supplies, shall be subject to the provisions of this act. [Act 1913, 1st S. S., p. 66, ch. 32, § 1.]

Art. 999vvvv. Corporations affected; mining, oil, or gas companies; townsite companies.—This act shall also apply to any mining, oil or gas corporation increasing its stock or proposed mining, oil or gas corporation attempting to sell stock in which any land or mineral or thing of value is to be procured from, in or under such land that has been or is to be placed as an asset with or in the corporation or proposed corporation, whether any promotion fee is charged or not, and to any townsite corporation or proposed townsite corporation. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 999w. Sale of stock; filing statement; contents of statement; foreign corporation to file copy of charter; employment of experts; statement of townsite company.—Before offering for sale or contracting to sell, directly or indirectly, any stock of such proposed corporation, or such increased stock of any existing corporation, or before selling any stock in any townsite corporation as provided in Section 2 [art. 999vvvv], such corporation, or those promoting or having charge of the sale of stock of any proposed corporation, shall file, under oath, in the office of the Secretary of State, where, under the law, a charter would be filed in his department, or in the office of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, where, under the law, a charter would be filed in his department, together with a filing fee of twenty dollars, the following documents: A statement showing in full detail the plan upon which the corporation proposes to increase its capital stock or upon which the promoters or those having charge of the sale of stock of any proposed corporation proposes to sell its stock and organize the corporation, together with a copy of all the forms of contracts, stock (or deeds, if the same shall come under Section 2 hereof) to be used by the corporation or promoters, or those having charge of the sale of stocks of any proposed corporation in connection with such stock sales. The statement shall further show the name, location and domicile of such corporation, and the names of its officers or proposed officers, if any, or promoters, and the addresses of all the parties; the amount of capital stock of any corporation already organized, the proposed increase, or the proposed capital stock of the corporation to be organized, and the price at which the stock is proposed to be sold; and the price at which the stock is proposed to be sold shall not be changed without filing with the secretary or commissioner, as the case may be, a statement of such change, which shall be subject to his approval. Any such corporation or promoters of such proposed corporation shall furnish the secretary or commissioner such other information as may be necessary or proper concerning the sale of its stock.

If it shall be a corporation organized under the laws of any other jurisdiction, it shall file with the Secretary or commissioner a copy of its charter, and such other evidence of its authority as the secretary or commissioner may require.

Said statement shall also show the commission, promotion fee and other estimated incidental expenses proposed to be charged for the organization of such proposed corporation, or the increase in the capital stock of any corporation already organized, and how the commissions or fees are to be paid.

If the corporation or proposed corporation comes under Section 2 hereof, the officers of the corporation, or the promoters of the proposed corporation shall state the facts upon which they base their estimate of the actual value of the property which is to become an asset of the corporation, and the secretary or commissioner shall require such proof as he may deem proper to establish the actual value of the property.

The secretary or commissioner shall have the right to employ such experts as he may deem necessary, and the experts shall be employed at the expense of the corporation or promoters of a proposed corporation.

No corporation proposed to be organized for the purpose of buying or selling town sites and town lots shall hereafter be granted a charter by the Secretary of State, or if a foreign corporation shall not be granted a permit to do business in the State of Texas unless the incorporators of said proposed corporation or officer of such foreign corporation shall file with the Secretary of State each and every document, contract and all papers referred to in Section 3 of this act [this article], as well as a general statement of the plan of its proposed townsite, and a general statement of its methods of advertising same, together with a sample copy of its advertising literature, and no charter shall be granted any corporation unless after the compliance with the provisions of this act and in the judgment of the Secretary of State, such business of any proposed townsite corporation will be honestly and fairly conducted both to the corporation and to the public. And each and every corporation in this State now existing or hereafter organized desiring to engage in the sale of townsite lots or sites shall, prior to such sale, file with the Secretary of State a general plan of said proposed lots to be sold, as well as a copy of any and all proposed contracts to be made with the public in the sale thereof, and a general statement of the literature proposed to be issued, and all matter referred to in Section 3 hereof, and if in the judgment of the Secretary of State said sale will be conducted both honestly and fairly to the corporation and to the public, a permit to conduct said sale shall be granted. This provision shall not be construed to authorize the creation of any corporation for any purpose not now authorized by the laws of this State. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 999ww. Granting or refusing permit; stock previously sold; promotion fee; when permit shall not issue; bond.—The secretary or commissioner, upon the receipt of the information as provided for in Section 3, [art. 999w] shall grant or refuse such permit.

If the secretary or commissioner shall decide that the sale of stock will be fairly and honestly conducted, both to the corporation and to the public, such permit shall be granted, provided that the commissions, promotion and other incidental expenses, exclusive of the exempted expenses mentioned in Section 1 of this act [art. 999vvv] shall not be more than fifteen (15) per cent of the price at which such stock is to be sold as shown by the application or amended application.

Provided, that where any proposed corporation has already sold its stock, or a part thereof, or any part thereof has been subscribed at the time this act shall take effect, this act shall not effect stock previously sold or subscribed nor any contracts made in reference to same; but if any of the stock of said proposed corporation remains unsold or unsubscribed, said corporation shall, nevertheless, be entitled to a permit upon complying with the other conditions of this act, including the future sale or subscription of any of its stock.

The commission or promotion fee shall be paid to the agent or promoter as the stock is sold by him and paid for by the purchaser. The stock shall be considered as paid for when paid for in cash, property or labor.

No permit shall be granted unless there shall appear upon the subscription lists and contracts of such corporation or proposed corporation, in bold type, the amount of the commissions, promotion fees and other estimated expenses incident to the sale of such stock, and the interest which the officer, agent, employé or promoter selling or contracting to sell such stock has in such sale; nor shall such permit be granted until the applicants therefor have entered into a bond for not less than one thousand dollars ($1000) nor more than one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), the same to be fixed by the secretary or commissioner at not more than ten per cent of the stock proposed to be issued. The said bond shall be payable to the secretary or commissioner as the case may be, and his successor in office, conditioned that the facts set forth in the application for such permit, and the proof and statements offered to such secretary or commissioner, upon which the application is based, are true, and that they will comply with the provisions of this act in the sale of the stock of such corporation or proposed corporation. Said bond may be made with individual sureties or a surety company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and the bond shall be approved by the secretary or commissioner. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 999www. Misrepresentations; suit on bond; amount of recovery; successive suits; new bond; list of officers, agents, etc.—Whenever any permit has been issued, the corporation or persons receiving the same shall file a list of the names of their or its authorized officers, agents and employes, and the postoffice address of each; and, in case of the change of any of its officers, agents or employes, it shall file a list of such changes with the secretary or commissioner. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 999www. Deposit of net proceeds of sales.—All moneys or other things of value collected by such corporation or the promoters of a proposed corporation, for the sale of its stock, or contract for the sale of its stock, shall be deposited by said corporation to its credit, or by the promoters of a proposed corporation, to the credit of its proposed officers or trustees, with the exception of the amount allowed for commissions, promotion fees and other incidental expenses, with a bank, bank and trust company or trust company incorporated under the laws of this State, or of the United States. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 999x. Books showing sales to be kept; inspection by state officers.—All such corporations, and the organizers or trustees of proposed corporations shall keep a set of books, which shall show the amount of money, or other things of value received by such corporation or proposed corporation, from the sale of its stock, or from contracts of sale of its stock, and such books shall show the number and amounts of stock sold or contracted to be sold, by whom sold, and to whom sold, or contracted to be sold, and the postoffice address of each. Said books shall at all times be open for inspection by the secretary or commissioner, or his duly authorized agent. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 999xx. Foreign corporations; no permit unless fifty per cent of stock subscribed; loan and insurance companies excepted.—No permit to sell stock shall ever be issued to any foreign corporation which has not at the time of making application for permit at least fifty per cent of its capital stock subscribed and paid in, providing that this shall not apply to any foreign corporation engaged exclusively in the business of lending money in this state, nor to any insurance company that is required by law to obtain a permit from the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking. [Id., § 10.]

Art. 999xxx. Foreign corporations; power of attorney to receive process.—Each foreign corporation or the promoters of any proposed foreign corporation desiring to sell or contract to sell its stock in this State shall first file with the secretary or commissioner a like power of attorney to that provided for life insurance corporations in Article 4773, Revised Civil Statutes of the State of Texas of 1911, [same article in Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] and service may be had upon the corporation and the secretary or commissioner, as the case may be, as therein provided for, and the secretary or commissioner, as the case may be, upon receipt of such process as is therein provided for, shall proceed as is provided for him to do in Article 4774, Revised Civil Statutes of the State of Texas of 1911 [same article in Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] and the secretary or commissioner's acts and conduct in regard to such power of attorney, and such process shall be the same as is provided for in said Articles 4774 and 4773, and the effect, force and result of such acts shall be the same as therein provided for. [Id., § 11.]

Art. 999xxxx. Penalty for violation of law.—It shall hereafter be unlawful for any officer, agent or employé or trustee, or holding company, or sales agents, or person, or association of persons in this State to sell, or offer to sell, or contract to sell, directly or indirectly, for such concern, any stock of any corporation or proposed corporation, subject to this act, which has been, proposed to be, is now being, or may hereafter be organized for profit, without first complying with the provisions of this act, and any person so offending shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two thousand dollars, and in addition thereto may be imprisoned in the county jail for any period not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 999y. Organization within two years; refundment to subscribers; extension of time.—At the expiration of two years from the granting of a permit under this act if the proposed corporation has failed to organize, then all subscribers must be refunded the amount paid to the promoter or trustee; provided, however, that the secretary or commissioner may grant an extension of time for the sale of securities. [Id., § 12a.]

Art. 999yy. Law cumulative.—This act shall be construed to be cumulative of any other law or laws of this State. [Id., § 13.]

Art. 999yyy. Corporations and transactions not affected by act.—The terms of this act shall not apply to any national bank, nor to any corporation having a charter granted under any act of the Congress of the United States, nor to any State bank, bank and trust company or trust company organized under the laws of this State, nor to any corporation organized under the Federal Reclamation Act, approved June 17, 1902, or the regulations established by the Secretary of the Department of the Interior in pursuance thereof. Nor shall the terms of this act apply to any corporation or the promoters of any corporation organized under the laws of Texas which does not sell or contract to sell its stock to more than twenty-five bona fide purchasers; provided, it does not act as the agent or trustee, holding company or sales company in the promotion of any concern which is included under the terms of this act. Nor shall this act apply to any railroad or railway company or interurban railroad or railway company, or street railroad or railway company. Nor shall this act apply to the sale of stock of a corporation by a bona fide owner of same, who had in good faith bought the same, and who in the purchase and sale of same was and is not acting directly or indirectly as promoter or agent of such corporation. Nor shall this act apply to a bona fide stock or stock broker in the sale of stock, which stock has been by such corporation sold and issued to a bona fide purchaser prior to the offering of same for sale by such broker; provided, that such purchaser or broker was not acting, directly or indirectly, as promoter of such corporation. [Id., § 14.]

Art. 999yyyy. Deposit of funds with state treasurer; examination of corporations; expenses.—All moneys collected under the terms of this act by the secretary or commissioner shall be quarterly deposited by him with the State Treasurer and credited to the general fund. Whenever the secretary or commissioner shall deem it necessary to examine the books of any corporation or proposed corporation, subject to the provisions of this act, or investigate its financial condition, he shall do so at the expense of the corporation or proposed corporation under investigation, and the corporation or the agents of the corporation or proposed corporation being investigated shall pay to the secretary or commissioner, or his agent, making the investigation his actual expenses and seven dollars and fifty cents per day for such investigation, which said expenses shall be paid at the termination of such investigation by the concern investigated. [Id., § 15.]

Art. 999z. Definition of terms.—Whenever the word “secretary” is used in this act it shall be considered to mean Secretary of the State of Texas, and whenever the word “commissioner” is used in this act it shall be considered to mean Commissioner of Insurance and Banking of the State of Texas. [Id., § 16.]

SALE OF PATENT RIGHTS

Art. 999zz. Notes to state consideration. 999zzz. Effect of statement in notes or liens.	Art. 999zzzz. Penalty for violation of act.
---	---

Art. 999zzz. Effect of statement in notes or liens.—The aforesaid statement on the face of said notes or liens shall be notice to all subsequent purchasers of said notes or liens of all equities existing between the parties to the original transaction, and the same shall be subject to all defenses against subsequent owners and holders, that they would, if the same had remained in the hands of the original owner. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 999zzzz. Penalty for violation of act.—If anyone selling a patent or patent right territory shall take a note or lien for the purchase price of the same, contrary to the provisions of this Act, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction fined any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., § 3.]

Article 1000. [580] False certificate by notary public.—If any notary public shall make any false certificate as to the proof or acknowledgment of any instrument of writing relating to commerce or navigation to which, by law, he is authorized to certify, or shall make any false certificates as to the proof or acknowledgment of any letter of attorney, or other instrument of writing relating to commerce or navigation, to which he may by law certify, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 446.

Art. 1001. [581] False declaration or protest by.—If any notary public shall make any false declaration or protest respecting any matter or thing relating to commerce or navigation, or to commercial instruments, where, by law, he is authorized to make such declaration or protest, he shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 447.

Art. 1002. [582] Preceding articles embrace, what.—The provisions of the two preceding articles are intended to embrace all acts of a notary public, done in his official capacity within the proper sphere of his duties, and which arise out of transactions respecting navigation or commerce.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 446, 447.

Art. 1003. [583] False declaration by master of vessel.—If any master or other officer of a vessel, with intent to defraud, shall make a false declaration or protest as to the loss or damage of any vessel or cargo, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 448.

Art. 1004. [584] Throwing ballast into the sea near bar, etc.—From and after the passage of this act, it shall be unlawful to throw into the sea any part of the ballast of any vessel within six miles of any bar or harbor in this state. [Act April 23, 1879, p. 153, § 2.]

Art. 1005. [585] Penalty.—If any ballast shall be thrown into the sea within the limits forbidden by this law, from any vessel, the master or officer in charge thereof at the time shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., § 2.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 449.

Art. 1006. [586] False entry in book of account.—If any person, with intent to defraud, shall make, or cause to be made, any false entry in any book kept as a book of accounts, or shall, with like intent, alter, or cause to be altered, any item of an account kept or entered in such book, he shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, or be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Offense.—The essentials of the offense are the making of a false entry and the intent to defraud. Pope v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 150.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 450, 451.

Instructions.—A charge, that if the jury believed that the alleged false entry was made by accused, but that it was correct and was a proper entry, and that it was not made with intent to defraud, he should be acquitted, is improper, because requiring the jury, as a condition to acquitting, to believe, not only that the entry was correct and proper, but that it was made without intent to defraud. Pope v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 150.

Questions for jury.—Accused held not entitled to a directed verdict of acquittal. Pope v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 150.

Article 1008. [587] "Assault and battery" defined.—The use of any unlawful violence upon the person of another with intent to injure him, whatever be the means or the degree of violence used, is an assault and battery. Any attempt to commit a battery, or any threatening gesture showing, in itself or by words accompanying it, an immediate intention, coupled with an ability to commit a battery, is an assault.

Offense.—Slightest degree of violence is sufficient. Donaldson v. State, 10 App. 307; Ware v. State, 24 App. 521, 7 S. W. 240. See, also, Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129; Robey v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 713.

To constitute assault and battery unlawful violence must be used upon another, and such violence must be used with the intent to injure the person upon whom it is inflicted. Unaccompanied by such intent the violence, however unlawful, does not constitute assault and battery. High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488; Carroll v. State, 24 App. 366, 6 S. W. 190; Dickenson v. State, 24 App. 121, 5 S. W. 648; Donaldson v. State, 10 App. 307; Ware v. State, 24 App. 521, 7 S. W. 240.

Ability and an attempt or threatening movement, showing intention to commit a battery, are constituent elements. Carroll v. State, 24 App. 366, 6 S. W. 190; Flournoy v. State, 25 App. 244, 7 S. W. 865; Lee v. State, 34 App. 519, 31 S. W. 667.

A common assault and battery is the unlawful assaulting and beating of another; and the least touching of another willfully, or in anger is a battery; and every battery includes an assault; so that every unlawful touching of another person is an assault and battery. Norton v. State, 14 Tex. 387; Johnson v. State, 17 Tex. 515.

It is sufficient that an act be done indicating an intention to immediately commit a battery, coupled with the ability to do it. Thus the mere act of taking a gun from the rack, coupled with other indicia, will sometimes suffice. Higginbotham v. State, 23 Tex. 574; Johnson v. State, 14 App. 306.

The flourish of a knife in a threatening manner sometimes constitutes an assault. Stockton v. State, 25 Tex. 772.

An assault may be committed though the party announces that he has no intention to do immediate injury. The test is, was there in fact a present purpose of doing an injury? If so, the acts will amount to an assault; otherwise they will not. Bell v. State, 29 Tex. 492; Rainbolt v. State, 34 Tex. 286; Hill v. State, Id. 623; Agitone v. State, 41 Tex. 501; Walker v. State, 7 App. 627.

An assault may be committed by one or more persons at the same time by the same act. State v. Bradley, 34 Tex. 95.

In every assault there must be an intent to injure, coupled with an act which must be at least the beginning of the attempt to injure then and not an act of preparation for some contemplated injury to be afterwards inflicted. Johnson v. State, 43 Tex. 576.

An assault is an attempt to commit a battery. Ability to commit a battery by violence by the means used is essential. McKay v. State, 44 Tex. 43.

The use of any dangerous weapon or the semblance thereof in an angry or threatening manner, with intent to alarm another, under circumstances calculated to effect that object, is an assault. Kief v. State, 10 App. 286.

An assault and battery does not consist of every violent act against another, but only of "an unlawful violence upon the person of another with intent to injure him," etc. Souther v. State, 18 App. 352.

Where one approaches another in a threatening manner and uses threatening language and gestures, it is an assault. Brister v. State, 40 App. 506, 51 S. W. 393.

The statutory definition follows the common law. Evans v. State, 25 Tex. 303.

The use of any unlawful force upon the person of another with intent to injure in an assault and battery. Two things must concur—the one physical and the other mental—the act and the intent. Floyd v. State, 29 App. 341, 15 S. W. 819.

An assault includes the idea of intended unlawful violence toward the person alleged to have been assaulted. In every assault there must be an intent to injure. The test is, was there in fact a present purpose of doing an injury? If so, the acts will amount to an assault; otherwise they will not. White v. State, 29 App. 530, 16 S. W. 340.

Defendant knocked the prosecutor down with a milk bucket; held, an assault and battery. Marrow v. State, 37 App. 330, 39 S. W. 944.

For defendant, after there was no danger of violence from one who had been knocked down and was being held, to kick at him was an assault. Marrow v. State, 37 App. 330, 39 S. W. 944.

The use of a loaded gun which was incapable of being fired because of a broken firing pin held a simple assault and not an aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Pearce v. State, 37 App. 643, 40 S. W. 806.

Accused had threatened to beat prosecutor to death the first time they met again, and a few days thereafter he approached him on the highway, in an angry and threatening manner, telling him, if he had a knife, to use it, and that prosecutor was afraid to do so, and then ran his hand into his pocket, but suddenly stopped when prosecutor pointed a pistol at him. Held to constitute an assault. Brister v. State, 40 App. 505, 51 S. W. 393.

Drawing back or lifting the arm to strike one who could have been hit is an assault. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bowdoin (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 1.

— Intent.—Intent to injure is the principal ingredient of the offense. Berry v. State, 30 App. 423, 17 S. W. 1080; Floyd v. State, 29 App. 341, 15 S. W. 819; Young v. State, 31 App. 24, 19 S. W. 431. See, also, Atkins v. State, 11 App. 8; Dowlen v. State, 14 App. 61.

In every assault there must be an intent to injure, coupled with an act which must at least be the beginning of the attempt to injure at once, and not a mere act of preparation for some contemplated injury that may afterward be inflicted. Johnson v. State, 43 Tex. 576; Fondren v. State, 16 App. 48; Rutherford v. State, 13 App. 92; and see Bell v. State, 29 Tex. 492; Rainbolt v. State, 34 Tex. 286; Hill v. State, Id. 623; Agitone v. State, 41 Tex. 501.

Accidental injury without intent to inflict pain or injury does not constitute an assault. Atkinson v. State, 62 App. 419, 138 S. W. 125.

Principals.—See notes under art. 74, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 464, 465.

See, also, C. C. P. art. 470, and notes.

A battery need not be charged, if there was only an assault. State v. Johnston, 11 Tex. 22.

The indictment need not negative the relations and circumstances which would justify an act of violence. State v. Stephenson, 20 Tex. 151.

The indictment may charge an assault upon two or more persons. State v. Bradley, 34 Tex. 95.

Nor need it be alleged that the defendant had the ability to commit a battery. Greenwood v. State, 35 Tex. 587.

An indictment charging that defendant committed "and assault" instead of "an assault" held not fatally defective. Martin v. State, 40 Tex. 19.

An indictment charging that defendant did assault, strike and beat another with intent to injure, held sufficient as an indictment for common assault. State v. Cass, 41 Tex. 552.

An indictment for a simple assault need not state the instrument or means used in committing it. State v. Hunter, 44 Tex. 94.

It is not necessary in charging an assault that the particular acts of violence constituting the assault should be averred. The means by which the offense was committed need not be stated. Roberson v. State, 15 App. 317; Martin v. State, 40 Tex. 19. See, also, Smith v. State, 62 App. 281, 136 S. W. 1063.

An "intent to injure," or "unlawful violence" need not be alleged. Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490; State v. Hartman, 41 Tex. 562; State v. Hays, Id. 526; State v. Allen, 30 Tex. 59; Evans v. State, 25 Tex. 303; State v. Luterloh, 22 Tex. 210.

Where indictment charges striking with the fist, proof of a blow made with the open hand is sufficient. Allen v. State, 36 App. 436, 37 S. W. 738.

Where the state elects to try accused for an assault committed on a particular date, in a particular manner, it must prove that the assault was committed on that date by the means alleged. Graham v. State, 72 App. 9, 160 S. W. 714.

— Inclusion in other offenses.—Under an indictment charging an assault with intent to murder, or an aggravated assault, a conviction for a simple assault may be had. Harrison v. State, 10 App. 93; Kennedy v. State, 11 App. 73; Bolding v. State, 23 App. 172, 4 S. W. 579; Davis v. State, 20 App. 302; Peterson v. State, 12 App. 659; Bittick v. State, 40 Tex. 117; James v. State, 36 Tex. 645; Gardenheir v. State, 6 Tex. 348; Givens v. State, Id. 344; Johnson v. State, 17 Tex. 515; Reynolds v. State, 11 Tex. 120.

An indictment which imperfectly charges an aggravated assault may be good for a simple assault. Nelson v. State, 2 App. 227; Marshall v. State, 13 App. 492, overruling State v. Pierce, 26 Tex. 114. See, also, Smith v. State, 35 Tex. 500.

If the indictment is bad for the felony, the state can not dismiss as to the higher grade and obtain a conviction for simple assault. Robinson v. State, 31 Tex. 170.

The indictment may charge both the higher and lower degrees of the offense, and if bad for the higher, may be good for the lower. State v. Bradley, 34 Tex. 95; Wilks v. State, 3 App. 34.

A defendant may be punished under the same indictment for different degrees of an assault. State v. Bradley, 34 Tex. 95.

An indictment may be bad for an assault with intent to murder and good for a simple assault. State v. Archer, 34 Tex. 646; Wilks v. State, 3 App. 34.

Under an indictment charging defendant with an aggravated assault, a conviction could be had for simple assault. Smith v. State, 35 Tex. 500; Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490.

Where the indictment was for a felony, jurisdiction of the district court was not ousted by the fact that the conviction was for a misdemeanor included within the felony charged. Montgomery v. State, 4 App. 140.

Under an accusation charging aggravated assault, defendant may be convicted of simple assault. Harrison v. State, 10 App. 93.

— Allegation of name.—See notes under C. C. P. 456.

— Variance.—On an indictment for assault on one "Garzia," a conviction may be had on proof of an assault on one "Garcia," in the absence of proof as to the pronunciation of the letter "z" in the Mexican name "Garzia." Rape v. State, 34 App. 615, 31 S. W. 652.

Where an accusation particularizes the transaction, the proof must be confined to such transaction. Herald v. State, 37 App. 409, 35 S. W. 670.

Evidence.—Facts held insufficient to justify a conviction, Warren v. State, 33 Tex. 517; Chamberlain v. State, 2 App. 451; Lewallen v. State, 6 App. 475; McConnell v. State, 25 App. 329, 8 S. W. 275; Jeffers v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1038. When the evidence is conflicting as to the first aggression, the verdict will not be disturbed. Givens v. State, 6 Tex. 344.

The character of the assaulted party as a quarrelsome, pugnacious man, it was held, could not be proved by the defendant, when the defense was that the assault was committed while such party was in the act of committing arson in the nighttime, and was not recognized by the defendant until the assault had been committed. Henderson v. State, 12 Tex. 525.

In some cases the defendant may prove the character of the injured party when in liquor. Lewallen v. State, 6 App. 475.

Acts which prima facie and unexplained, are undoubtedly assaults, may be shown to be, in truth, different from what they purport to be; that they are not attempts or offers to do harm, but merely annoying gestures without any accompanying purpose of mischief, or that they are merely reasonable preparations to repel anticipated violence. Young v. State, 7 App. 75; Bell v. State, 29 Tex. 492.

If the intent imputed to the accused is to injure the mind or feelings of the assaulted party, the evidence germane to the existence of such intent may well involve the character of the assailed party, and in such case would be admissible. See this case for an instance, where such evidence was held admissible. Donaldson v. State, 10 App. 307.

In a prosecution for an assault, defendant proposed to prove that it was the custom and practice of himself and associates to denounce each other in violent and abusive language, sometimes flourishing deadly weapons and indulging in threats, when in fact such conduct was merely matter of jest, and accompanied by no actual intention of committing violence. Held, that such evidence was properly rejected. Hawkins v. State, 17 App. 593, 50 Am. Rep. 123.

A verdict of guilty of simple assault is amply supported by evidence of an attempt to commit a battery with an open knife, which was prevented only by the interference of bystanders. Yawn v. State, 37 App. 205, 38 S. W. 785, 39 S. W. 105.

On trial for an assault, evidence of previous threats made by defendant against the person assaulted is admissible. Bolton v. State (Cr. App.) 39 S. W. 672. But evidence of trouble between prosecutor and others is inadmissible.—Id.

When a party who interposes to prevent a battery upon the person assaulted, and defendant in turn assaults him, evidence of such assault is admissible to show the animus of defendant. McCray v. State, 38 App. 609, 44 S. W. 170.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Reynolds v. State, 63 App. 270, 139 S. W. 977.

Evidence held not to raise issue of simple assault. Vivian v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 895; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 1110; Raleigh v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 1050.

Where accused approached prosecutor in a threatening manner, with the intent to assault him, challenging him to defend himself with a knife, and was stopped before he got close enough to commit a battery by prosecutor pointing a pistol at him, a request to charge that accused had not committed an assault because there had been no present ability to commit a battery, was properly refused. Brister v. State, 40 App. 505, 51 S. W. 393.

Facts held to require a charge on simple assault. Smith v. State, 61 App. 349, 135 S. W. 152.

One is not entitled to a charge on simple assault, in that he only used his hands and feet, where he helped one who was using a knife. Cukierski v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 313.

Definition of an assault is incomplete without a definition of a battery. Perkins Bros. Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 556.

Where the evidence showed beyond doubt that serious bodily injury was inflicted, the court properly refused to charge on simple assault. Solis v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 343.

Art. 1009. [588] Intent presumed, and "injury" defined.—When an injury is caused by violence to the person, the intent to injure is presumed; and it rests with the person inflicting the injury to show the accident or innocent intention. The injury intended may be either bodily pain, constraint, a sense of shame or other disagreeable emotion of the mind.

Presumptions and burden of proof.—See arts. 51 and 52, ante, and notes.

When an injury is caused by violence to the person, the intent to injure is presumed, and it rests with the person inflicting the injury to show that it was due to accident or innocent intention. McConnell v. State, 25 App. 329, 8 S. W. 275; McKay v. State, 44 Tex. 43; Atkins v. State, 11 App. 8.

The intent to injure will be presumed when an injury has been inflicted, but when no injury has been inflicted, the intent must be proved. Ware v. State, 24 App. 521, 7 S. W. 240; McConnell v. State, 25 App. 329, 8 S. W. 275. See, also, Ward v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1073; Robey v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 713.

The presumption is not conclusive, but merely casts the burden on defendant to show accident or innocent intent. Floyd v. State, 29 App. 341, 15 S. W. 819.

Where one uses violence upon another and produces an injury, the burden is upon him to show that his act was innocent and without intent to injure. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 89 S. W. 1081.

It is improper to charge in assault and battery cases, that intent to injure will be presumed, when no physical injury has been inflicted, except in cases of assault of an indecent character by an adult upon a female. In case of assault by one man upon another, where no injury has been inflicted, the intent to injure must be proved as any other fact. Tubbs v. State, 50 App. 143, 95 S. W. 113.

The presumption that injury was intended arises from violence, but that presumption may be rebutted. Perkins v. State, 62 App. 508, 138 S. W. 133.

— Charge.—Charge held more favorable to defendant than the law. Williams v. State, 4 App. 255.

An instruction held erroneous as assuming that an injury was done prosecutrix, whereas the evidence rendered it doubtful whether her feelings were injured. Floyd v. State, 29 App. 341, 15 S. W. 819.

The giving of an instruction embracing this article held proper though prosecutrix did not testify to any disagreeable emotion, where it appeared that defendant admitted her virtue and she immediately complained after the insult. Young v. State, 31 App. 24, 19 S. W. 431.

Where the violence is slight, the charge as to intent to injure must be given, but where the injury is obvious, no such need be given. Brown v. State, 42 App. 417, 60 S. W. 549, 96 Am. St. Rep. 806. See, also, Stripling v. State, 47 App. 117, 80 S. W. 377.

Where the State's proof tends to show an assault without violence, the court must instruct the jury there must be established an intent to injure on the part of person making the assault and it is not proper to charge that the intent to injure is presumed, and accused must show innocent intention. Lee v. State, 47 App. 612, 85 S. W. 799.

Where accused claims that the injuries were accidental, and there is evidence that he caused the injuries, an instruction that, when an injury is caused by violence to the person, the intent to injure is presumed, and it rests with the person inflicting the injury to show accident or innocent intention, is proper. Yates v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1064.

Argument.—Reading section held not attack on defendant's failure to testify. Jacobs v. State, 37 App. 428, 35 S. W. 978.

Art. 1010. [589] May be committed on person not intended.—An assault, or an assault and battery, may be committed, though the person actually injured thereby was not the person intended to be injured.

Accidental injury.—If, in a difficulty he brought on, accused, in an effort to strike an antagonist, accidentally strikes and injures a third party, he is guilty of assault and battery on the latter. Powell v. State, 32 App. 230, 22 S. W. 677.

However, if in the justifiable self-defense of himself, the accused unintentionally injured a bystander, he would be guilty of no offense. Powell v. State, 32 App. 230, 22 S. W. 677; Plummer v. State, 4 App. 310, 30 Am. Rep. 165; Clark v. State, 19 App. 495.

To warrant a conviction for accidentally striking another when correcting a child, evidence must show the correction immoderate. Turner v. State, 35 App. 369, 33 S. W. 972.

The accused may make any defense, mitigation, or extenuation that could have been offered if he had shot the person intended. Vining v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 909.

Art. 1011. [590] How it may be committed.—An assault, or assault and battery, may be committed by the use of any part of the body of the person committing the offense, as of the hand, foot, head, or by the use of any inanimate object, as a stick, knife, or anything else capable of inflicting the slightest injury, or by the use of any animate object, as by throwing one person against another, or driving a horse or other animal against the person.

Cited, Ward v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1073.

Art. 1012. [591] Any means capable of injury sufficient.—Any means used by the person assaulting, as by spitting in the face or otherwise, which is capable of inflicting an injury, comes within the definition of an assault, or an assault and battery, as the case may be.

Art. 1013. [592] "Coupled with ability to commit" defined.—By the terms, "coupled with an ability to commit," as used in article 1008 is meant—

1. That the person making the assault must be in such a position that, if not prevented, he may inflict a battery upon the person assailed.

2. That he must be within such distance of the person so assailed as to make it within his power to commit the battery by the use of the means with which he attempts it.

3. It follows that one who is, at the time of making an attempt to commit a battery, under such restraint as to deprive him of the power to act, or who is at so great a distance from the person assailed as that he can not reach his person by the use of the means with which he makes the attempt, is not guilty of an assault. But the use of any dangerous weapon, or the semblance thereof, in an angry or threatening manner, with intent to alarm another, and under circumstances calculated to effect that object, comes within the meaning of an assault.

Cited, Vivian v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 895.

Ability to commit.—If there be question of the ability to commit battery, it should go to the jury under instruction. Boles v. State, 18 App. 422.

An assault can only be committed when the act is coupled with the ability to commit a battery. For instance, the parties being too far separated for the accused to commit violence with the means used, there was no assault. Marshall v. State, 34 App. 22, 36 S. W. 1062.

That defendant was restrained before he made battery is no defense. Goss v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 725.

Use of weapon with intent to alarm.—An assault with a gun which cannot be fired is only a simple assault. Pearce v. State, 37 App. 643, 40 S. W. 806 (overruling McCullough v. State, 24 App. 128, 5 S. W. 839; Blackwell v. State, 33 App. 278, 26 S. W. 397, 32 S. W. 128).

Defendant used a gun, that was loaded but could not be fired, for the purpose of alarming the injured person, held a simple assault. Pearce v. State, 37 App. 643, 40 S. W. 806.

If the weapon as used was calculated to alarm, it is immaterial that it did not, in fact, alarm the party threatened. Coker v. State, 22 App. 20, 2 S. W. 615. And see further Johnson v. State, 19 App. 545; Atterberry v. State, 33 App. 88, 25 S. W. 125; Smith v. State, 62 App. 281, 136 S. W. 1063.

One who curses and points a fire arm at another, who flees, is guilty of an assault. Myers v. State, 72 App. 630, 163 S. W. 432. See, also, King v. State, 61 App. 427, 135 S. W. 136.

Pointing a gun or pistol at a person, within carrying distance of the weapon, with intent to injure such person, is an assault, unless it appear that the weapon was unloaded; and the burden of proving that it was unloaded is on the defendant. Forrest v. State, 3 App. 232; Crow v. State, 41 Tex. 468; Caldwell v. State, 5 Tex. 20; Burton v. State, 3 App. 408, 30 Am. Rep. 146.

Under the last clause of subdivision 3 of this article, if a dangerous weapon is used in a threatening manner, with intent to alarm, and under circumstances calculated to effect that object, the ability to commit battery is not necessary to constitute assault. Kief v. State, 10 App. 286; Trimble v. State, 57 App. 439, 125 S. W. 41.

Presenting a fire-arm in a condition for immediate use accompanied by an avowal of an intention to kill the party assaulted, is an assault. Johnson v. State, 19 App. 545.

The use of the weapon must be unlawful, which necessarily implies aggression, and the facts must show a present unlawful purpose to alarm another. If the weapon is used in lawful self-defense, it does not constitute assault. White v. State, 29 App. 530, 16 S. W. 340.

Where defendant, armed with a knife, advanced in an angry and threatening manner with intent to alarm the injured party, he was guilty of an assault. Atterberry v. State, 33 App. 88, 25 S. W. 125.

It is error to charge that it made no difference whether defendant had a weapon or not, if he made a threatening gesture. Nelson v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 645.

If a party has no weapon or semblance thereof, he cannot be guilty, under subdivision 3 of this article. Nelson v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 645.

Where one presents a pistol at the breast of another and snaps it, he is guilty of an assault with intent to murder. The burden is on the defendant to prove that the pistol is unloaded if such is the fact. The court is not bound to submit the issue to the jury whether the pistol was loaded or not simply because it does not fire. Bedford v. State, 44 App. 97, 69 S. W. 158.

The use simply of animate or inanimate objects for the purpose of alarming another does not under our statute constitute an assault. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 72 S. W. 169.

To constitute an assault by alarming a person, the thing done must first be unlawful, and must be done in an angry or threatening manner, and with intent to alarm; but there may be an intent to alarm which is not unlawful, and one may compel trespassers on his premises to leave them, and the means used to accomplish that purpose, if not intended to bring about injury, cannot become an assault. Trimble v. State, 57 App. 429, 125 S. W. 40.

Where accused threatened to kill and snapped a pistol which could not be fired, the issue of aggravated assault should have been submitted. Oliver v. State, 60 App. 62, 131 S. W. 215.

Firing a gun to frighten another is a simple assault. Drake v. State, 62 App. 130, 136 S. W. 1064.

Where one intending to commit an assault with his fists, is so confused by a blow that he uses a knife without knowing what he is doing, he may be convicted of simple assault. Brewer v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 622.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 465.

Evidence.—On trial for aggravated assault, when the evidence shows that defendant made an assault with a knife and was prevented from committing a battery; held, the evidence is amply sufficient to support a verdict for simple assault. Yawn v. State, 37 App. 205, 38 S. W. 785, 39 S. W. 105.

Evidence held insufficient to authorize a conviction of any character of assault other than that named in subdivision 3. McCullough v. State, 24 App. 128, 5 S. W. 839.

Charge.—A court is not required to charge that "an unloaded pistol is not a deadly weapon," or that "a pistol without a cap is not a deadly weapon," these being matters about which the jury are supposed to possess competent knowledge without information from the court. Flournoy v. State, 16 Tex. 31.

Where the testimony tended strongly to show that the alleged injured party was beyond the reach of danger from the means used, the charge should have explained the statutory meaning of "coupled with an ability to commit" the assault. Boles v. State, 18 App. 422.

The definition of an assault is incomplete without a definition of a battery. Perkins Bros. Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 556.

One who compels another to make an apology by threatening him with a knife, is not entitled to the submission of the issue whether there was an intent to injure. Yelton v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 318.

Decisions under original article.—Before this article was revised, it was held that mere threatening gestures and accompanying words did not constitute an assault, unless coupled with an ability to commit battery, no matter what the intention was. McKay v. State, 44 Tex. 43; Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 593; Spears v. State, 2 App. 244; Jarnigan v. State, 6 App. 465.

Art. 1014. [593] When violence does not amount to.—Violence used to the person does not amount to an assault or battery in the following cases:

1. In the exercise of the right of moderate restraint or correction given by law to the parent over the child, the guardian over the ward, the master over his apprentice, the teacher over the scholar.

Cited, Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

2. For the preservation of order in a meeting for religious, political or other lawful purposes.

3. The preservation of the peace, or to prevent the commission of offenses.

4. In preventing or interrupting an intrusion upon the lawful possession of property.

Cited, S. H. Kress & Co. v. Lawrence (Civ. App.) 162 S. W. 448.

5. In making a lawful arrest and detaining the party arrested, in obedience to the lawful order of a magistrate or court, and in overcoming resistance to such lawful order.

6. In self-defense or in defense of another against unlawful violence offered to his person or property.

SUBD. 1

1. Test of liability in general.—The true issue in prosecutions of this character, when the relationship is established, is, "Was the correction moderate?" not whether the instrument was unusual and calculated to inflict serious injuries, nor that the chastisement was done in a cruel or vindictive manner. Stanfield v. State, 43 Tex. 167.

2. Parent and child.—A stepfather stands in loco parentis to the stepchild, and may exercise this right. Gorman v. State, 42 Tex. 221; Turner v. State, 35 App. 369, 33 S. W. 972.

This provision applies only to the actual, and not to a mere conventional, relationship of parent and child. Davis v. State, 6 App. 133.

The right of moderate restraint applies not only to the parent, but also to a person who stands in loco parentis. Thus a brother of a fifteen year old girl, who provided her with board, lodging, clothing, and schooling, might be considered as standing in loco parentis to her. Snowden v. State, 12 App. 105, 41 Am. Rep. 667.

Defendant, while inflicting punishment upon his step-daughter, accidentally struck his wife; held, that in order to sustain a conviction for an assault upon his wife the evidence must show that he was chastising the child in an immoderate or unlawful manner. Turner v. State, 35 App. 369, 33 S. W. 972.

3. Master and servant.—A master has no right to chastise his servant. Davis v. State, 6 App. 133.

4. Teacher and pupil.—The teacher is clothed with discretionary authority to punish refractory pupils, and is not liable for its exercise, unless in an excessive or malicious manner. Stephens v. State, 44 App. 67, 68 S. W. 281, citing Dowlen v. State, 14 App. 61; Hutton v. State, 23 App. 386, 5 S. W. 122, 59 Am. Rep. 776, and Kinnard v. State, 35 App. 276, 33 S. W. 234, 60 Am. St. Rep. 47.

And see further, Bolding v. State, 23 App. 172, 4 S. W. 579; Stanfield v. State, 43 Tex. 167.

In all such cases the law presumes, from the relation of the parties, an entire absence of any criminal intent to injure, and it does not devolve upon the defendant to show accident or innocent intention, unless it be shown that the force used was excessive. Whether the violence used was moderate or excessive, must necessarily depend upon the age, sex, condition, and disposition of the pupil, with all the attending circumstances. Dowlen v. State, 14 App. 61; Stanfield v. State, 43 Tex. 167.

The teacher can use only that degree of violence necessary to restrain or correct the pupil. Dowlen v. State, 14 App. 61.

Evidence held to show that the injured person was a child and to sustain a conviction. Bell v. State, 18 App. 53, 51 Am. Rep. 293.

Case held immoderate punishment of pupil by teacher, see Whitley v. State, 33 App. 172, 25 S. W. 1072.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain the conviction of a teacher for simple assault. Stephens v. State, 44 App. 67, 68 S. W. 281.

The punishment must be moderate though the pupil is not subdued. Whitley v. State, 33 App. 172, 25 S. W. 1072.

Evidence to show that an assault made by a teacher upon his pupil was so severe as to draw blood is admissible. Kinnard v. State, 35 App. 276, 33 S. W. 234, 60 Am. St. Rep. 47. Also, evidence of teacher's intention. Id.

A teacher is not liable for unusual consequences resulting from an abnormal condition of the pupil's blood. Ely v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 631.

5. Burden of proof.—See notes under art. 52, ante, and art. 785, C. C. P.

SUBD. 2

6. Force permissible.—Only the force necessary to the purpose is permissible under this subdivision of the article; excessive force is punishable. Rasberry v. State, 1 App. 664.

SUBD. 4

7. Defense of property.—When one is guilty of improper conduct in a private house, the owner has the right to use sufficient force to eject him if he refuses to leave when requested. Hinton v. State, 24 Tex. 454; McCrary v. State, 38 App. 609, 44 S. W. 170.

An assault committed by one in possession of property who resists its taking without warrant of law, using no more force than is necessary, is justifiable. Yarborough v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 272. See, also, Lassiter v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 710.

A party cannot justify an assault committed in attempting to take forcible possession of a house belonging to him. He cannot even use his title to the house in mitigation of the offense. Terrell v. State, 37 Tex. 442.

Aggravated assault cannot be justified upon the ground that the house was the property of defendant and the assault was committed in an effort to take possession of it, nor can title be invoked to mitigate the offense. Terrell v. State, 37 Tex. 442. Defense of one's own habitation is a right only limited in extent by the same rules which govern in the defense of the person. Richardson v. State, 7 App. 486.

Force necessarily used to defend one's own property from violence, is not assault. Souther v. State, 18 App. 352.

A person may defend against an assault on his property, using the means at hand. Lilly v. State, 20 App. 1.

One who is in lawful possession of property has the right, as against a trespasser to arm himself for his protection, and go to where the trespass is being committed and request such person to leave; and if the trespasser refuses to go, he can insist upon his going and use all reasonable means to compel him to leave, using no more force than is reasonably necessary. And if under such circumstances he is himself attacked he can meet force with force. Vann v. State, 43 App. 244, 64 S. W. 244.

The defendant's theory of the case should be submitted. Robey v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 713.

8. Arrest.—Legal arrest by an officer being resisted, he may resort to such force as is necessary, but no more, to overcome the resistance and accomplish the arrest. If the officer exceeds such force, he is guilty of an offense. Beaverts v. State, 4 App. 175, citing Skidmore v. State, 43 Tex. 93; Skidmore v. State, 2 App. 20. And see, also, Giroux v. State, 40 Tex. 97; Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944; Rasberry v. State, 1 App. 665; Owen v. State, 58 App. 261, 125 S. W. 405.

While an officer has the right to use necessary force to complete a legal arrest, he may not kill his prisoner to prevent his attempted escape. Caldwell v. State, 41 Tex. 86. And see Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705; Tiner v. State, 44 Tex. 128.

A peace officer has the right to summon assistance to his aid in the discharge of his duty. Owen v. State, 58 App. 261, 125 S. W. 405.

9. Self-defense.—As to actual and apparent danger, see Phipps v. State, 34 App. 608, 31 S. W. 657; s. c., 34 App. 560, 31 S. W. 397; Garner v. State, 34 App. 356, 30 S. W. 782; Law v. State, 34 App. 79, 29 S. W. 160; Smith v. State, 33 App. 513, 27 S. W. 137; McGrath v. State, 35 App. 413, 34 S. W. 127, 941; Williford v. State, 36 App. 414, 37 S. W. 761; Pinson v. State, 50 App. 234, 96 S. W. 23; Crenshaw v. State, 48 App. 77, 85 S. W. 1147; Martin v. State, 71 App. 521, 160 S. W. 968.

See, also, Priest v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 611; Evans v. State, 57 App. 174, 122 S. W. 392.

The right of self-defense is limited only by what reasonably appears to the person exercising it to defendant to be dangerous at the time, viewed only from his standpoint. Aycock v. State, 55 App. 142, 115 S. W. 590; Jones v. State, 50 App. 194, 95 S. W. 1044; Newcomb v. State, 49 App. 550, 95 S. W. 1048; Brownlee v. State, 48 App. 408, 87 S. W. 1153; Beard v. State, 47 App. 50, 81 S. W. 33, 122 Am. St. Rep. 672.

See, also, Black v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 944; Darnell v. State, 58 App. 535, 126 S. W. 1122; Cooley v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 192.

And further, on the right of self-defense, see West v. State, 2 App. 460; Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389; Blake v. State, 3 App. 581; May v. State, 6 App. 191; Hobbs v. State, 16 App. 517; Good v. State, 18 App. 39; Hawthorne v. State, 28 App. 212, 12 S. W. 603; Downey v. State, 33 App. 330, 26 S. W. 627; Rhea v. State, 37 App. 138, 38 S. W. 1012.

As to imperfect right of self-defense, see, also, Cheatham v. State, 57 App. 442, 125 S. W. 565; Corley v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 227.

One attacked by several is justified in acting on the hostile demonstrations of any one of them. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 944.

See, also, Recen v. State, 58 App. 457, 126 S. W. 577.

One who wrongfully goes on the premises of another to take property without warrant of law, cannot claim to have acted in self-defense. Yarborough v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 270; Yarborough v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 272.

One may act upon a reasonable apprehension of danger. Munden v. State, 37 Tex. 353; Moore v. State, 15 App. 1.

Though defendant's purpose in entering prosecutor's house was unlawful, where he abandoned such purpose, and sought to escape from the house before being pursued by prosecutor, he may resist prosecutor's pursuit and assault by force, and plead self-defense. Cox v. State, 57 App. 427, 123 S. W. 696, 26 L. R. A. (N. S.) 621, 136 Am. St. Rep. 992.

One has the right to defend himself if assaulted by an arresting officer, and this right is not abridged by a knowledge that the officer has a warrant. Owen v. State, 58 App. 261, 125 S. W. 405.

Since the right of self-defense of one on trial for assault with intent to murder must be determined by the facts known to him, testimony of a state's witness that prior to the difficulty he told prosecutor that accused was enraged against him, and that he (prosecutor) ought to be prepared for any emergency, was inadmissible; accused not knowing of the conversation. Dowell v. State, 58 App. 482, 126 S. W. 871.

Where prosecutor had threatened accused charged with assault with intent to murder, and at the time of the assault prosecutor did some act manifesting an intent to execute the threat or unlawfully assaulted accused, or did acts producing in the mind of accused a reasonable apprehension of an assault or of death or serious bodily injury, and accused committed the assault charged to protect himself from such danger or apparent danger, the assault was justifiable self-defense. Darnell v. State, 58 App. 585, 126 S. W. 1122.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, where it appeared that the prosecuting witnesses had formed a conspiracy to kill defendants, and had come to town for that express purpose, and that one of the prosecuting witnesses had advanced to provoke the difficulty, defendants, if believing that an attack was imminent, could, in their own protection, assail all of the prosecuting witnesses, though some of them had not made any overt act or fired any guns, for the act of one conspirator is that of another, and the law of conspiracy is not changed because invoked by one accused of crime. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 944.

If accused had reason to believe that prosecuting witness had poisoned his chickens, he could ask him if he had done so, without forfeiting his perfect right of self-defense, if then assaulted, provided he did not intend to bring on a difficulty in asking the questions. Parish v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 327.

A party, who has voluntarily agreed to fight, cannot successfully plead self-defense in a prosecution for assault with intent to kill. Brewer v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 622.

While one illegally arrested may use all necessary force to effect his release, he cannot justify a malicious assault on the arresting officer made for other reasons, merely because he was illegally arrested. Nickerson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 992.

One cannot justify assaulting an arresting officer by reason of being struck by him because of an insulting epithet. Nickerson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 992.

The question whether the person assaulted, who admitted trouble with another some months before, was at that time armed with a pistol, is immaterial on the issue of accused's plea that he acted in self-defense because the witness was armed. Evans v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 795.

Charge held proper. Hogue v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 905; Noland v. State, 63 App. 275, 140 S. W. 100; Yarborough v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 270; Yarborough v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 272; Foster v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 583; Simms v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 786; Russell v. State, 71 App. 86, 158 S. W. 546.

On provoking difficulty and charge thereon, see Rogers v. State, 71 App. 271, 159 S. W. 44; Barrego v. State, 61 App. 625, 136 S. W. 41; Walker v. State, 63 App. 499, 140 S. W. 455; Sanchez v. State, 70 App. 24, 156 S. W. 218; Shoemaker v. State, 71 App. 445, 160 S. W. 356; Martin v. State, 71 App. 521, 160 S. W. 968; Stoner v. State, 72 App. 482, 162 S. W. 836.

Facts held not to require charge on self-defense. Martin v. State, 71 App. 521, 160 S. W. 968; Ulun v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 699; Teel v. State, 63 App. 460, 140 S. W. 340; Davis v. State, 63 App. 484, 141 S. W. 93; Yarborough v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 272; Waters v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 796.

Facts held to require charge on self-defense. Fisher v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 528; Culp v. State, 58 App. 74, 124 S. W. 946; Prater v. State, 60 App. 88, 131 S. W. 325; Shoemaker v. State, 71 App. 445, 160 S. W. 356; Lassiter v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 710.

In a proper case, the law of self-defense must be given. Edwards v. State, 5 App. 593; Coons v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 820; Martin v. State, 71 App. 521, 160 S. W. 968. Even though the assault is upon an officer having the defendant in custody. Goodman v. State, 4 App. 349.

For charge unduly limiting the right of self-defense, see, also, Parish v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 327; Kelton v. State, 71 App. 491, 160 S. W. 342.

If portions of the evidence tend to show that the assailed attempted to strike with a stick, the charge must not restrict the right of self-defense to actual striking. McFarlin v. State, 41 Tex. 23.

Charge held insufficient, Carter v. State, 28 App. 355, 13 S. W. 147.

Charge held objectionable in form in that the unlearned juror might be unable to grasp, retain, and properly apply the different circumstances, conditions, and contingencies upon which the rights of defendant were predicated—all of which are contained in a single paragraph. Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071.

It appeared that the injured party fired the first shot, when defendant rising up drew his pistol and said: "If that's your game here's at you," and fired; held, this did not constitute mutual combat, and a charge on mutual combat predicated upon these facts is erroneous. Waldon v. State, 34 App. 92, 29 S. W. 273.

The court in charging on self-defense, further charged on provoking difficulty, but there was no evidence to support this phase of case and such a charge was necessarily prejudicial to defendant's rights. Thomas v. State, 34 App. 481, 31 S. W. 170.

On trial for an assault and battery, where the danger if any is patent and real, it is not error to refuse a charge on apparent danger. Thompson v. State, 35 App. 352, 33 S. W. 871; Moore v. State, 31 App. 234, 20 S. W. 563; Dyer v. State, 47 App. 253, 83 S. W. 192, distinguishing Hjeronymous v. State, 46 App. 157, 79 S. W. 313, and McVey v. State (Cr. App.) 81 S. W. 740.

Where defendant claims no assault has been committed, he can not complain of a refusal to instruct on self-defense. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 149.

Refusal to charge that defendant might act on the danger as it appeared to him, is erroneous. Harris v. State, 37 App. 454, 36 S. W. 263.

The court charged that if defendant sought a meeting with the injured party with the intent to raise a difficulty, he could not avail himself of self-defense; but if he sought the injured party with no intent to raise a difficulty, his right of self-defense would be perfect; held, no error. Rhea v. State, 37 App. 138, 38 S. W. 1012.

Charge on abandonment of difficulty held justified by the facts. McCray v. State, 38 App. 609, 44 S. W. 170.

It is error to charge on self-defense where evidence does not raise the issue. Mattison v. State, 54 App. 514, 114 S. W. 824.

On charge in a case of assault on a person assisting an arresting officer, see Owen v. State, 58 App. 261, 125 S. W. 405.

For charge held inapplicable to facts, see Little v. State, 61 App. 197, 135 S. W. 119.

Charge held properly refused. Barrego v. State, 61 App. 625, 136 S. W. 41.

A charge limiting accused's right to use force to such force as was reasonably necessary for his own protection held error. Comegys v. State, 62 App. 231, 137 S. W. 349.

Evidence held not to raise the issue of self-defense separate from that of threats so as to require a distinct charge on self-defense. Bussey v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 873.

A charge on the right to defend against a robbery is not objectionable for using the words "force and violence" instead of the phrase "by assault and putting in fear of their lives or bodily injury." Wilson v. State, 70 App. 627, 158 S. W. 512.

A charge on excessive force held improper. Shoemaker v. State, 71 App. 445, 160 S. W. 356.

On a trial for aggravated assault, requested instructions given by the court held to fairly submit the defense of self-defense. Yates v. State, 72 App. 279, 162 S. W. 499.

Charge held erroneous as placing on defendant the burden of proving self-defense, and as submitting to the jury whether he used greater force than necessary, as it appeared to them at the time of the trial, instead of as it reasonably appeared to defendant at the time of the assault. Knox v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 729.

Accused is entitled to have self-defense submitted from his standpoint. Fisher v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 528.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, where accused claimed that he acted in self-defense, believing he was in imminent danger, but there was no evidence of any threats before the altercation which led to the assault, a charge that, if the words or acts of the prosecuting witness created in the mind of accused reasonable apprehension of imminent danger, then he had the right to defend himself in such a manner as seemed reasonably necessary, and that he was not bound to retreat to avoid the necessity of assaulting his assailant, is a sufficient presentation of the right of self-defense as raised by the evidence, which only showed that the prosecuting witness got down from his wagon and reached towards his pocket, where accused believed he had a knife. Nesbitt v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1126.

11. Defense of another.—One who interposes in defense of the life or person of another assumes the same responsibilities to the law that rest upon such other, and is entitled to the same justification. For full discussion of the subject, see Guffee v. State, 8 App. 187; Kendall v. State, Id., 569; Dyson v. State, 14 App. 454; Reyons v. State, 33 App. 143, 25 S. W. 786, 47 Am. St. Rep. 25; Terrell v. State, 53 App. 604, 111 S. W. 152. See, also, Little v. State, 61 App. 197, 135 S. W. 119.

The evidence showing that defendant assaulted a person after the latter had thrown a missile at a third person, and while in the act of reaching for another stone, a charge that if the assault on said third person was over, and defendant cut the assailant out of revenge, he would not be justifiable, is erroneous. Horton v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 612.

The right covers all phases of an attack. Smith v. State, 61 App. 349, 135 S. W. 152.

One present with another who is the object of a deadly attack may defend the one assaulted though he himself is not attacked. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 944.

12. Homicide in self-defense or in defense of another.—See arts. 1104-1110 and notes thereunder.

13. Prevention of offenses by act of private person.—See C. C. P. arts. 110-116 and notes thereunder.

14. Evidence of threats against accused, and character of person assaulted.—See notes under art. 1143.

15. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 465.

Art. 1015. [594] Degree of force permissible.—In all the cases mentioned in the preceding article, where violence is permitted to effect a lawful purpose, only that degree of force must be used which is necessary to effect such purpose.

Force permissible.—In all cases of self-defense the means must be proportioned to the aggression. Stockton v. State, 25 Tex. 772; Burch v. State, 43 Tex. 376; Cotton v. State, 4 Tex. 260; Hobbs v. State, 16 App. 517; Hawthorne v. State, 28 App. 212, 12 S. W. 603; Miller v. State, 31 App. 609, 21 S. W. 925, 37 Am. St. Rep. 836; Patterson v. State, 49 App. 613, 95 S. W. 129.

See, also, Rasberry v. State, 1 App. 665; Skidmore v. State, 2 App. 20; May v. State, 6 Tex. App. 191; Dunnaway v. State, 72 App. 617, 163 S. W. 426; Robey v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 713.

Whether the degree of force used was necessary or excessive, is a question which must be determined from the facts of each particular case as the law does not furnish the measure. Souther v. State, 18 App. 352; Stanfield v. State, 43 Tex. 167.

Defendant, in the fight, used a brass motor key; the assaulted party used a walking stick, and there was some conflict as to who was the aggressor; held, that defendant ought to have been allowed to prove the size and appearance of the stick used by the injured party. Law v. State, 34 App. 79, 29 S. W. 160.

Defendant, on going to a hospital, turned over his 6 year old child to one to be taken care of until he was able to leave the hospital and care for the child, and was arrested on a charge of vagrancy, and sued out a writ of habeas corpus, and obtained an agreement whereby such person was to keep the child until the charge was disposed of. The charge was dismissed on agreement that defendant would not interfere with the child's custody until it was determined whether he was entitled thereto. Held, that on the refusal of the one in possession to surrender the child and in attempting to get possession of the child, he had no right to strike the person in possession. Carrel v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 331.

Art. 1016. [595] Verbal provocation no justification.—No verbal provocation justifies an assault and battery, but insulting and abusive words may be given in evidence in mitigation of the punishment affixed to the offense.

Insulting words.—Grossly insulting words may mitigate punishment, but not justify assault or reduce the offense. Timon v. State, 34 App. 363, 30 S. W. 808; White v. State, 23 App. 154, 3 S. W. 714; Cartwright v. State, 14 App. 486.

See, also, Boone v. State, 31 Tex. 557; Griffin v. State, 57 App. 280, 122 S. W. 553.

Defamatory language used about a female inmate of defendant's household is not admissible as a justification, but may be admitted in mitigation of exemplary damages for the assault. Parham v. Langford, 43 Civ. App. 31, 93 S. W. 526.

Art. 1017. [596] "Battery," how used.—The word "battery" is used in this Code in the same sense as "assault and battery."

Battery.—Assault is included in every battery. Norton v. State, 14 Tex. 387; Johnson v. State, 17 Tex. 515; Dool v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 626.

Art. 1018. [597] Degrees of assault.—An assault is either a simple assault, an aggravated assault, or an assault with intent to commit some other offense.

Aggravated assault.—Any circumstances of aggravation in the manner or character of the assault or battery, by which it exceeds the incidents or consequences of a common assault or battery, will render the assault of an aggravated nature. Norton v. State, 14 Tex. 387.

The use of a worn-out pocket knife will suffice, Weaver v. State, 24 Tex. 387. If an officer strikes his prisoner over the head with a pistol, except in his own necessary defense, he commits the offense. Skidmore v. State, 43 Tex. 93; s. c., 2 App. 20.

If the transaction is a mutual combat on equal terms, no undue advantage being taken or sought, though fought with bludgeons, the offense is aggravated assault; if the defendant took an undue advantage, it might be of a higher grade. King v. State, 4 App. 54, 30 Am. Rep. 160; Wilson v. State, 4 App. 637; Bingham v. State, 6 App. 169.

Aggravated assault and battery necessarily includes simple assault and battery. One cannot be heard to complain of conviction of the latter on proof sufficient to establish the former. Foster v. State, 25 App. 543, 8 S. W. 664.

Evidence to show the commission of a battery is admissible in a trial for aggravated assault. Dool v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 626.

One charged with an aggravated assault may be convicted of a simple assault if the facts justify such finding. Yelton v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 318.

Art. 1019. [598] Punishment for simple assault.—The punishment for a simple assault, or for assault and battery, unattended with circumstances of aggravation, shall be a fine of not less than five nor more than twenty-five dollars.

Penalty changed in revising (1879), the former penalty being a fine not exceeding $100.

Meaning of terms.—The terms "simple assault" and "assault and battery" are used synonymously, and the latter term does not include an aggravated assault. Foster v. State, 27 Tex. 236.

Plural assaults.—A single difficulty may embrace plural assaults, and a conviction may be had for each. State v. Eradley, 34 Tex. 95; Samuels v. State, 25 App. 537, 8 S. W. 656; Ashton v. State, 31 App. 482, 21 S. W. 48.

Art. 1020. [599] Abusive language an offense.—If any person shall, in the presence or hearing of another, curse or abuse such person, or use any violently abusive language to such person, concerning him or any of his female relatives, under circumstances reasonably calculated to provoke a breach of the peace, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act March 8, 1887, pp. 13, 14.]

Cited, Presley v. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 145 S. W. 669.

Offense.—The fact that the prosecuting witness was trespassing on the land of defendant's mother was no defense under this article, though it might be considered as a mitigating circumstance in fixing the punishment. Deaton v. State, 53 App. 393, 110 S. W. 69, 70.

That a cursing and abuse of females occurred in the house of accused will not excuse the offense. Bumgarner v. State, 64 App. 165, 142 S. W. 4.

Abusive language towards accused does not justify the offense although it may mitigate the penalty. Easter v. State, 71 App. 370, 160 S. W. 74.

Indictment or information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 236.

The information should allege that the language was used in the presence or hearing of the injured party. Elkins v. State, 26 App. 220, 9 S. W. 491.

And see, also, Foreman v. State, 31 App. 477, 20 S. W. 1109; Menasco v. State, 32 App. 582, 25 S. W. 422; Secker v. State, 28 App. 479, 13 S. W. 774.

If an information alleges that defendant, in the presence and hearing of another, did curse and abuse such person, under circumstances reasonably calculated to provoke a breach of the peace, it is sufficient. Foreman v. State, 31 App. 477, 20 S. W. 1109. Elkins v. State, 26 App. 220, 9 S. W. 491, so far as it intimates a different rule, is overruled. Id.

If the indictment presents two phases of abusive language, if the evidence sustains either, the conviction is proper. Wilborne v. State (Cr. App.) 66 S. W. 559.

An information which uses the words "in a manner" calculated to provoke a breach of the peace, instead of "under circumstances," etc., is sufficient. The words used are tantamount to those employed by the statute. Trezevant v. State, 47 App. 502, 84 S. W. 828.

Art. 1021. [600] Intimidation of another.—Any person who shall, by threatening words, or by acts of violence or intimidation, prevent or attempt to prevent another from engaging or remaining in or from performing the duties of any lawful employment, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than five hundred dollars, or by confinement not less than one nor more than six months in the county jail. [Id., p. 13.]

Offense.—An owner of animals, who by threatened use of violence takes them from one who had taken them up for depredating on his crop, does not violate this article. Franklin v. State, 61 App. 235, 134 S. W. 702.

Indictment or information.—Information must set out the nature of "lawful employment." Luter v. State, 32 App. 69, 22 S. W. 140.

Indictment held not defective for failure to set out the threatening words, or state the specific acts of violence. Diggs v. State, 64 App. 122, 141 S. W. 100.

Evidence and charge.—The court should direct an acquittal when the prosecutor's title is doubtful. Boyd v. State, 28 App. 524, 13 S. W. 864.

As to evidence to sustain charge, see Diggs v. State, 64 App. 122, 141 S. W. 100.

CHAPTER TWO

AGGRAVATED ASSAULT AND BATTERY

Art.	Art.
1022. Definition.	1024. Punishment.
1023. Aggravation may be of different degrees.

Article 1022. [601] Definition.—An assault or battery becomes aggravated when committed under any of the following circumstances:

1. When committed upon an officer in the lawful discharge of the duties of his office, if it was known or declared to the offender that the person assaulted was an officer discharging an official duty.

2. When committed in a court of justice, or in any place of religious worship, or in any place where persons are assembled for the purpose of innocent amusement.

3. When the person committing the offense goes into the house of a private family and is there guilty of an assault and battery.

4. When committed by a person of robust health or strength upon one who is aged or decrepit.

5. When committed by an adult male upon the person of a female or child, or by an adult female upon the person of a child.

6. When the instrument or means used is such as inflicts disgrace upon the person assaulted, as an assault or battery with a whip or cowhide.

7. When a serious bodily injury is inflicted upon the person assaulted.

8. When committed with deadly weapons under circumstances not amounting to an intent to murder or maim.

9. When committed with premeditated design, and by the use of means calculated to inflict great bodily injury.

10. When committed by any person or persons in disguise.

IN GENERAL

1. Offense.—An intent to injure is not a necessary element of the offense. Cromwell v. State, 60 App. 183, 131 S. W. 595.

2. — Principals.—See notes under art. 78, ante.

3. — Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 466-475.

The indictment need not charge in words that the assault is aggravated, but may set out the particular facts and circumstances which constitute the offense. Pinson v. State, 23 Tex. 579; Meier v. State, 10 App. 39.

The intent to injure need not be averred. Bronson v. State, 2 App. 46; Ferguson v. State, 4 App. 156; Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490; ante, art. 588.

An indictment for aggravated assault held not defective, though it did not allege that the assault was with intent to injure or in an attempt to commit a battery coupled with an intention and ability to commit same or that the gun was loaded. Foreest v. State, 3 App. 232.

An indictment held insufficient to support a conviction for an aggravated assault and battery or for any higher grade of offense than a simple assault and battery. Flynn v. State, 8 App. 368.

It should set out the facts or ground constituting the aggravation. Meier v. State, 10 App. 39; Flynn v. State, 8 App. 368; Williamson v. State, 5 App. 485; Lacoume v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 626.

Indictments for aggravated assault should allege some of the particular acts or circumstances which are necessary to constitute the offense. Allen v. State, 13 App. 28.

To charge that the defendant "did make an aggravated assault," upon a person, naming such person, without stating the fact or ground of aggravation, is insufficient. Marshall v. State, 13 App. 492; Allen v. State, Id. 23; Key v. State, 12 App. 506; Browning v. State, 2 App. 47. But such an indictment will be good for a simple assault. Marshall v. State, 13 App. 492; Nelson v. State, 2 App. 227, overruling State v. Pierce, 26 Tex. 114.

4. — Variance.—The circumstances of aggravation must be proved as alleged, not other circumstances. Pinson v. State, 23 Tex. 579; McGrew v. State, 19 App. 302; Stevens v. State, 27 App. 461, 11 S. W. 459.

Under an indictment charging an aggravated assault with a knife, conviction for an assault with a stick cannot be had. Herald v. State, 37 App. 409, 35 S. W. 670.

5. — Inclusion in other offenses.—Conviction of simple assault under indictment charging aggravated assault, see article 1003.

Under an indictment for assault with intent to murder defendant could be convicted of aggravated assault and battery. James v. State, 36 Tex. 645.

Under an indictment charging assault with intent to murder, a conviction may be had for an aggravated assault. Henderson v. State, 2 App. 88; Davis v. State, 20 App. 302; Moore v. State, 7 App. 14.

Under an indictment charging murder, defendant may be convicted of aggravated assault and battery. Green v. State, 8 App. 71.

A defendant indicted for an assault with intent to murder may be convicted of an aggravated assault. Bolding v. State, 23 App. 172, 4 S. W. 579; Davis v. State, 20 App. 302. And, also, when indicted for an assault with intent to rape. Brown v. State, 7 App. 569.

Conviction for aggravated assault may be had under indictment for assault to murder, though the indictment does not charge the circumstances of aggravation. Bolding v. State, 23 App. 172, 4 S. W. 579.

A conviction of aggravated assault and battery may be had under an indictment for murder in the second degree, which charges defendant with killing the deceased "by striking, beating, bruising, and wounding him with a stick," independently of the article providing that murder shall include all assaults. Bean v. State, 25 App. 346, 8 S. W. 278.

Where an assault is made with a deadly weapon, under circumstances insufficient to justify a conviction of assault to murder, a submission of the issue of aggravated assault is proper. Blackwell v. State, 33 App. 278, 26 S. W. 397, 32 S. W. 128.

It is not necessary to allege the manner by which an aggravated assault was committed; a conviction being permissible under an indictment in the usual form charging assault with intent to murder. Wimberley v. State, 60 App. 65, 130 S. W. 1002.

6. Evidence.—Evidence held sufficient, see Brown v. State, 16 Tex. 122; Moorings v. State, 42 Tex. 85; Young v. State, 44 Tex. 98; Rasberry v. State, 1 App. 664; Dunman v. State, Id. 593; Skidmore v. State, 2 App. 20; Coney v. State, Id. 62; Bingham v. State, 6 App. 169; Cato v. State, 4 App. 87; Johnson v. State, 7 App. 210; Atkins v. State, 11 App. 8; Jones v. State, 12 App. 156; McMahon v. State, 16 App. 357; Bell v. State, 18 App. 53, 51 Am. Rep. 293; Coker v. State, 22 App. 20, 2 S. W. 615; Robertson v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 478; Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 386; Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 667; Waechter v. State, 34 App. 297, 30 S. W. 444, 800; Lee v. State, 34 App. 519, 31 S. W. 667; McDade v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 125.

A continuance sought to get testimony of words of provocation used prior to an aggravated assault held properly denied. Boone v. State, 31 Tex. 557.

Evidence held insufficient, see Chamberlain v. State, 2 App. 451; Young v. State, 7 App. 75; Pease v. State, 13 App. 18; Osborne v. State, 14 App. 225; Hall v. State, 16 App. 6, 49 Am. Rep. 824; McGrew v. State, 19 App. 302; Metcalf v. State, 21 App. 174, 17 S. W. 142; Peterson v. State, 21 App. 485, 1 S. W. 521; George v. State, 21 App. 315, 17 S. W. 351; Hutton v. State, 23 App. 386, 5 S. W. 122, 59 Am. Rep. 776; Flournoy v. State, 25 App. 244, 7 S. W. 865; Lee v. State, 34 App. 519, 31 S. W. 667.

Cross-examination of prosecuting witness relative to threats to poison accused, made subsequent to the commission of the alleged assault held properly excluded where no predicate had been laid therefor. Booker v. State, 4 App. 564.

Where the prosecuting witness testified on cross-examination that the county attorney induced her to make affidavit against defendant, evidence rebutting and contradicting this statement was properly admitted. Gonzales v. State, 16 App. 152.

It is sufficient ground for the postponement of a trial for aggravated assault that a witness, by whom defendant expects to prove that threats of personal violence had been made against him by the alleged assaulted party, is absent, as such threats, if the issue is self-defense, and the evidence is in conflict as to who began the difficulty, are material. Tankersley v. State, 31 App. 595, 21 S. W. 767.

The testimony of the prosecuting witness, on a trial for assault with intent to murder, that he was robbed during the assault, is admissible as a part of the res gestæ. Richards v. State, 34 App. 277, 30 S. W. 229.

Where, on a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, it appeared that the assault was made with a stick, the defendant was entitled to a continuance because of the absence, caused by sickness, of a witness by whom he expected to prove that the stick was not a deadly weapon. Richards v. State, 34 App. 277, 30 S. W. 229.

Evidence that two or three days after the assault the prosecuting witness bore marks of the whipping he had received held not too remote. Caples v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 267.

The exclusion of an almanac showing there was no moon on the night in question was proper, where the prosecutor testified that he recognized the parties by the light of a match struck by one of them. Caples v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 267.

Evidence as to whether defendant had a bottle of whisky in his store, or had in fact taken a drink or two, without any contention that the assault occurred in the store, or that he was intoxicated at the time, was inadmissible. Hodges v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 512.

7. Charge.—See C. C. P. art. 735.

Where the defendant is charged with an assault with intent to murder, and convicted of an aggravated assault, the omission to give in charge the elements of murder is immaterial. Haynes v. State, 2 App. 84.

The charge must be confined to the particular ground, or grounds, of aggravation alleged in the indictment. Kouns v. State, 3 App. 13; Stanfield v. State, 43 Tex. 167; Ferguson v. State, 4 App. 156; McGregor v. State, Id. 599; Coney v. State, 43 Tex. 414; Williams v. State, 8 App. 367; Kennedy v. State, 9 App. 399; Hunt v. State, Id. 404; Reid v. State, Id. 472; Clubb v. State, 14 App. 192.

A charge which substantially directs the jury that they must convict the defendant of either an aggravated, or a simple assault, leaving them no option to acquit, is erroneous. Kennedy v. State, 9 App. 399.

"If you believe that an offense has been committed you may find the defendant guilty," etc., was held to be erroneous, because it did not require the jury to believe that the defendant, and none other, committed the offense. Reid v. State, 9 App. 472.

Where the evidence demands it, it is error to refuse to instruct that the defendant may be convicted of a simple assault. Key v. State, 12 App. 506.

Where the evidence is clear and sufficient that the defendant is guilty of an aggravated assault, a charge upon simple assault need not be given. Jackson v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 229; Chambers v. State, 42 Tex. 254.

The refusal of an instruction that defendant could not be convicted of an aggravated assault unless the jury found that he attempted to use violence toward the person of prosecutrix with intent to injure her person held error. Floyd v. State, 29 App. 341, 15 S. W. 819.

Under an indictment for assault with intent to murder, the court, in submitting aggravated assault, may submit either ground that may be developed by the evidence directly growing out of the assault charged, including assault by an adult male on a female. Lofton v. State, 59 App. 270, 128 S. W. 384.

Where, on a trial for aggravated assault, accused relied on self-defense, and the facts called for a charge on excessive force after the danger had passed, the court should submit in separate instructions the law of self-defense and the law of excessive force. Aycock v. State, 133 S. W. 683.

8. Review.—A person convicted of a simple assault under charge of aggravated assault can not be heard to complain that evidence tended to support the charge for higher degree. Foster v. State, 25 App. 543, 8 S. W. 664.

9. Conviction of assault and battery in case of homicide in sudden passion not with deadly weapon.—See art. 1149 and notes.

10. Offense.—An assault committed in a court room is ipso facto an aggravated assault. Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490.

It is an offense to assault a justice of the peace. Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490. It is not necessary that the assault be committed within the very walls of the building used for religious worship. Pollock v. State, 60 App. 265, 131 S. W. 1094.

11. Indictment.—An allegation that the assault was made "in a court of justice, then and there being in session," is sufficient. State v. Murrah, 25 Tex. 753; State v. Hunter, 44 Tex. 552; Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490; Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 416, 17 S. W. 1061; State v. Hunter, 44 Tex. 94.

It need not aver that the court was then in session, or specify the court. Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490; State v. Hunter, 44 Tex. 94; State v. Murrah, 25 Tex. 759.

An intent to injure or unlawful violence need not be alleged especially when the transaction as set out imports illegality. Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490.

Indictment held good for an aggravated assault where it alleged that the assault was committed in a court of justice. Milstead v. State, 19 App. 490.

Use of "at" for "in" referring to the school house used for religious worship, held not to invalidate the information. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 416, 17 S. W. 1061. Compare Pederson v. State, 21 App. 485, 1 S. W. 521.

12. — Variance.—The evidence disclosed that the assault was on a minister in a congregation assembled for religious worship under a brush arbor, a few steps from the school-house. Held, that the evidence sufficiently corresponded to the allegations, and did not constitute a variance. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 416, 17 S. W. 1061.

13. Evidence.—Exclusion of evidence of defendant's reputation, if error, held harmless where defendant admitted the offense and the disturbing of religious worship as charged. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 416, 17 S. W. 1061.

14. Instructions.—See notes to C. C. P. art. 735.

In a prosecution for an assault with intent to murder, where the real issue was as to the existence of the intent at the time of the assault, it was error to instruct that, if the state had not made a case of assault with intent to murder, the jury might inquire whether it was an aggravated assault, and, if they found the same was committed in a court of justice, to find defendant guilty of an aggravated assault, since the jury might well have thought therefrom that no other circumstance except an assault "in a court of justice" would reduce the crime to an aggravated assault. Mathis v. State, 39 App. 549, 47 S. W. 464.

15. Offense.—Where the assault occurred in the house of defendant's father, in the common sitting room of the family, and the defendant at the time was an occupant of said house, and a member of the family, it was held that this ground of aggravation did not apply. Hall v. State, 16 App. 6, 49 Am. Rep. 824.

This article does not refer to those occupying a private residence, one of whom disturbs the others, but was enacted to protect such occupants from being disturbed by others. McIver v. State, 34 App. 214, 29 S. W. 1083 (following Hall v. State, 16 App. 6, 49 Am. Rep. 824).

To constitute aggravated assault the party charged must go into the house of a private family and must there commit not only an assault but a battery also. Pederson v. State, 21 App. 485, 1 S. W. 521.

16. Indictment.—The indictment must allege that the house was that of "a private family." State v. Cass, 41 Tex. 552.

An allegation that defendant "went into the residence of H. G., and did then and there assault, strike, and beat the said H. G., with intent to injure," is insufficient, except for simple assault. There should be an additional averment that G. had a family. State v. Cass, 41 Tex. 552.

It must allege that accused did go into the house and there commit the assault. To allege that he committed the assault at such house is insufficient. The indictment must also allege that a battery was committed. Pederson v. State, 21 App. 485, 1 S. W. 521.

17. Evidence.—Exclusion of evidence to show defendant's innocent purpose in going into the house held error. Burns v. State, 23 App. 641, 5 S. W. 140.

18. Charge.—See notes to C. C. P. art. 735.

Accused cannot complain of an instruction permitting a verdict of guilty of simple assault, on the ground that the evidence clearly showed an aggravated assault. Garrett v. State, 61 App. 514, 135 S. W. 532.

In a trial for aggravated assault claimed to have been committed by accused forcing the door to a house to which prosecuting witness fled, it was error to refuse to instruct that, to convict of the offense charged, it was essential that accused intended to do unlawful violence or some injury, and that if he used violence to enter the house for a lawful purpose, using no more force than was necessary, and without intending to injure prosecuting witness, he should be acquitted. It was also error to refuse to instruct that no amount of constraint, sense of shame, or other disagreeable emotion caused by words alone would authorize a conviction. It was also error to refuse to instruct that, though accused caused the door to strike prosecuting witness, unless it caused physical pain, an intent to injure would not be presumed, and that the burden of proving such intent was on the state. Atkinson v. State, 138 S. W. 125.

19. Offense.—A person fifty years of age, having one arm disabled, was held to be "decrepit." Bowden v. State, 2 App. 56.

A "decrepit person" is one so disabled by mental or physical weakness, as to be practically helpless in a personal conflict with a person of ordinary health and strength. Decrepitude may exist without age. Hall v. State, 16 App. 6, 49 Am. Rep. 824.

One who, in a difficulty produced by himself, accidentally struck a decrepit person is guilty of aggravated assault. Powell v. State, 32 App. 230, 22 S. W. 677. And see Bowden v. State, 2 App. 56.

Where decedent's widow testified that her husband was 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighed 147 pounds, was "real stout," and about 60 years of age, the court erred in charging that, if deceased was aged and decrepit, that would furnish a basis for a conviction of aggravated assault; the word "decrepit," as used in Pen. Code 1895, art. 601, declaring an assault aggravated if made on a decrepit person, meaning one who is disabled, incapable, or incompetent, from either physical or mental weakness or defects, so as to render him comparatively helpless in a personal conflict with one possessed of ordinary health and strength, and not merely a person broken down with age, and wasted or worn with infirmities of old age, etc. Little v. State, 61 App. 197, 135 S. W. 119.

20. Charge.—See notes to Code Cr. Proc. art. 735.

Charge should direct the jury to the question of the guilt in view of the physical condition of the parties. Darnell v. State, 58 App. 585, 126 S. W. 1122.

21. Offense.—Forcible resistance to a release of stock that has been illegally taken, will constitute an assault. Cox v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 754.

There is no law abridging an adult's right to self-defense when attacked by a minor or child. Latham v. State, 39 App. 472, 46 S. W. 638.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault on a girl nine years old, a note written by defendant and given to the child did not constitute an assault, but, being of an affectionate character, might be read and considered in determining whether the subsequent acts of defendant amounted to an indecent fondling of the child's person. St. John v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 360.

22. — "Adult" and "child."—Henkel v. State, 27 App. 510, 11 S. W. 671; Wilman v. State, 63 App. 623, 141 S. W. 110.

"Child" is not synonymous with "minor." McGregor v. State, 4 App. 599; Allen v. State, 7 App. 298.

An "adult" person is one who has attained the full age of twenty-one years. Schenault v. State, 10 App. 410; George v. State, 11 App. 95; Hall v. State, 16 App. 6; 49 Am. Rep. 824.

A child is a young person, as contradistinguished from a person whose age implies settled habits and discretion. When applied to a boy it means a male not above the age of fourteen years, and when applied to a girl, it means a female not above the age of twelve years. Bell v. State, 18 App. 53, 51 Am. Rep. 293.

Any assault on a female is an aggravated one. Carmicle v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 238.

See, also, White v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 826.

23. Consent.—In a prosecution for aggravated assault upon a girl nine years of age, her consent was immaterial as being too young to consent to the fondling of her person in an indecent manner. St. John v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 360.

24. — Assault on female.—An adult male, who assaulted a female, in attempting to eject her from premises owned by him, is guilty of an aggravated assault, and the title to the premises is no protection to him, and not admissible in evidence for him. Terrell v. State, 37 Tex. 442.

Violent and indecent familiarity with an adult male with the person of a female, against her will, is an aggravated assault. Veal v. State, 8 App. 474; Pfefferling v. State, 40 Tex. 486; Curry v. State, 4 App. 574; Ridout v. State, 6 App. 249; Sanford v. State, 12 App. 196.

But not when such familiarity is with the consent of the female. Atkins v. State, 11 App. 8; Crawford v. State, 21 App. 454, 1 S. W. 446.

A male minor held capable of committing this offense. George v. State, 11 App. 95.

Indecent familiarity on a female's person, without her consent, by an adult male, is aggravated assault. Gill v. State, 48 App. 39, 85 S. W. 1062; Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 635.

Where the female is a child, such indecent familiarity is aggravated assault, with or without consent. Knight v. State, 48 App. 41, 85 S. W. 1067; Rogers v. State, 40 App. 355, 50 S. W. 338; Hill v. State, 37 App. 279, 38 S. W. 987, 39 S. W. 666, 66 Am. St. Rep. 803.

See, also, Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 729.

If the male be not an adult, the offense is simple assault. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 635.

Intentionally driving a wagon against a buggy driven by a female, whereby she is thrown out and injured, is an aggravated assault. Carmicle v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 238.

25. — Assault by female.—An assault by one female upon another is not necessarily aggravated, and in such case an adult male who was present and consenting to a simple assault by one female upon another is not guilty of an aggravated assault. Colquitt v. State, 34 Tex. 550.

If an adult male procures one female to assault another, and is present when the assault is made, he is guilty of an aggravated assault. Dunman v. State, 1 App. 593.

A female who acts with an adult male in committing an assault on another female is, under the doctrine of principal offenders, guilty of an aggravated assault. Kemp v. State, 25 App. 589, 8 S. W. 804.

26. — Assault by husband on wife.—A husband has the right to defend against an assault by his wife as far as may be necessary to protect himself. Leonard v. State, 27 App. 186, 11 S. W. 112; Kelton v. State, 71 App. 491, 160 S. W. 342.

The husband cannot inflict corporal punishment on the wife. Gorman v. State, 42 Tex. 221.

The husband is guilty of an aggravated assault and battery if he chastises his wife. Owen v. State, 7 App. 329; Jones v. State, 12 App. 156.

Striking her over the head with a stick is an aggravated assault. Jordan v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 881.

He cannot use force in obtaining possession of children. Dool v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 626.

27. — Assault by parent on child.—See art. 1014 (1) and notes thereunder.

In a prosecution of a father for assault on his daughter, one witness testified that on July 4th he heard screams at defendant's house; that immediately thereafter the daughter came to his house, and complained of the assault. A witness for defendant testified that on the same day he heard the daughter threaten to knock defendant's head off with an ax. A physician testified that he treated the daughter on July 15th. Held, that the evidence was sufficient to show that the assault was committed on July 4th. Waechter v. State, 34 App. 297, 30 S. W. 444, 800.

Where defendant, while chastising his stepdaughter, accidentally struck another, it must be shown, in order to his conviction for assault and battery for such striking, that his chastisement of the girl was immoderate, as, occupying a parental relation towards her, the presumption is that her punishment was lawful. Turner v. State, 35 App. 369, 33 S. W. 972.

A father has the right to moderately chastise his minor son, without being guilty of an assault. Thompson v. State, 46 App. 412, 80 S. W. 623.

Where a father whipped his infant child without intent to take her life, and the whipping was not cruel, he was guilty of aggravated assault only. Betts v. State, 60 App. 631, 133 S. W. 251.

The accused should be acquitted if the jury have a reasonable doubt whether the punishment was excessive. Wilman v. State, 63 App. 623, 141 S. W. 110.

28. Indictment.—The indictment must allege the name of the party injured or that it is to the grand jurors unknown. Rutherford v. State, 13 App. 92.

Where indictment charges an assault made with a piece of "scantling," evidence that it was made with a scantling, a picket, or a pole is sufficient. Holliday v. State, 35 App. 133, 32 S. W. 538.

It is not necessary to allege the name of another person who acted as principal with defendant. Webb v. State, 36 App. 41, 35 S. W. 380.

A part of a count charging intent is not an essential averment. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 984.

And further as to indictment, see Blackburn v. State, 39 Tex. 153; Bell v. State, 25 Tex. 574.

29. — Assault on female.—When the ground is that the assaulting party was an adult male, and the assaulted party a female, the indictment must so allege. The allegation must be that the defendant was an "adult male." Collins v. State, 5 App. 38; Griffin v. State, 12 App. 423; Lawson v. State, 13 App. 83.

It need only allege that the accused is "an adult male," and the person assaulted "a female." Collins v. State, 5 App. 38; but describing the injured female as "the wife of T. B." is fatally defective. Ranch v. State, 5 App. 363.

Where the assault charged is one made by an adult male upon a female, it must be proved that the defendant at the time of the assault was twenty-one years of age. George v. State, 11 App. 95; Andrews v. State, 13 App. 343; Henkel v. State, 27 App. 510, 11 S. W. 671.

On trial for an aggravated assault committed by an adult male upon a female, the means used may be proven though not alleged. Duke v. State, 35 App. 283, 33 S. W. 349.

An information charging that defendant, "a male person," committed an assault upon a female with intent to have unlawful sexual intercourse with her is sufficient to charge an aggravated assault. Price v. State, 35 App. 501, 34 S. W. 622.

An information which charges that defendant, an adult male, committed an assault upon a female, naming her, is sufficient. Webb v. State, 36 App. 41, 35 S. W. 380.

When an indictment charges an aggravated assault by an adult male upon a female, the age of the female may be proven whether alleged or not. Hill v. State, 37 App. 279, 38 S. W. 987, 39 S. W. 666, 66 Am. St. Rep. 803.

An information charging that accused, an adult, committed an aggravated assault includes a simple assault on proof that she was not an adult. Ely v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 631.

Indictment held to allege that accused was an adult male when offense was committed. Wilson v. State, 71 App. 547, 160 S. W. 454.

30. — Assault on child.—An information for an aggravated assault to the effect that the assault was committed by an adult male, upon a child, with switches, is sufficient. The State would be confined in her proof to the means alleged. Kinnard v. State, 35 App. 276, 33 S. W. 234, 60 Am. St. Rep. 47.

31. — Variance.—In a prosecution for aggravated assault, the grounds of aggravation being an assault by an adult male on a female, evidence of the means used in making the assault is admissible, though the information does not set forth the means. Duke v. State, 35 App. 283, 33 S. W. 349.

32. Evidence.—Evidence held to sustain conviction. Cuellar v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 228; Inglen v. State, 36 App. 472, 37 S. W. 861; Patton v. State, 58 App. 231, 125 S. W. 24; Perkins v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 241; Grantland v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 196; Jordan v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 881; Yarborough v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 272.

Where any question arises as to the name of the person on whom the indictment alleges that the injury was inflicted, the fact should be submitted to the jury and it is competent to show in support of the allegation that the person was as well known by the name used in the indictment as by any other. Bell v. State, 25 Tex. 574.

Evidence held insufficient to authorize a conviction of aggravated assault where the information alleged that defendant was an adult and there was no proof thereof. Robinson v. State, 25 App. 111, 7 S. W. 531.

Proof that defendant was a man is sufficient evidence that he was an adult male. Holliday v. State, 35 App. 133, 32 S. W. 538.

Presumption of intent follows proof of actual injury, and imposes countervailing burden on the defendant, but such presumption does not obtain if injury be not shown. Stripling v. State, 47 App. 117, 80 S. W. 376, overruling Floyd v. State, 29 App. 341, 15 S. W. 819, and following Young v. State, 31 App. 24, 19 S. W. 431.

Evidence that defendant had lived in a vicinity for 25 years is sufficient to show that he was an adult. Stone v. State, 57 App. 321, 123 S. W. 582.

Evidence held to raise an issue whether accused consented to an assault by others, as affecting his responsibility. Johnson v. State, 59 App. 263, 128 S. W. 614.

33. — Assault on wife.—Evidence held to sustain the conviction of a husband for an aggravated assault on his wife though she used the first force. Hunes v. State, 12 App. 156.

Under a charge of aggravated assault by the husband upon the wife, evidence that he had been previously married and divorced is inadmissible. Webb v. State, 36 App. 41, 35 S. W. 380.

On trial of defendant for aggravated assault upon his wife, it is admissible to prove that he induced another man to get in bed with her, and to try to have carnal intercourse with her, in order to get a divorce. Webb v. State, 36 App. 41, 35 S. W. 380.

An assault by a husband upon a wife cannot be proved by a judgment of divorce granted upon the ground of his assault. Dunagain v. State, 38 App. 614, 44 S. W. 148.

Evidence held not to sustain a judgment of conviction for assaulting accused's wife. Kelton v. State, 71 App. 491, 160 S. W. 342.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault on a girl nine years old, evidence held insufficient to show indecent fondling of her person by defendant. St. John v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 360.

34. — Assault on female.—Evidence held sufficient to show defendant an adult male and injured party a female. Pilcher v. State, 32 App. 557, 25 S. W. 24; Johnson v. State, 59 App. 263, 128 S. W. 614.

The sex of the parties need not be proved directly. Thus, where, the parties being in court, the defendant was spoken of in the evidence as "a man who wore whiskers" and "kept a hotel," and the party assaulted was called "Nancy" and referred to in the evidence as "she," it was held that this was sufficient proof of the sex of the parties. Tracy v. State, 44 Tex. 9. So where it was proved that the defendant was a man—a presiding elder—a preacher, and that the female was a wife and mother. Veal v. State, 8 App. 474. See, also, Davis v. State, 6 App. 133; Gaston v. State, 11 App. 143. But see, also, Hall v. State, 16 App. 6, 49 Am. Rep. 824, for evidence held insufficient to show that the defendant was an adult male. Where the charge was an assault upon a child, and on the trial the witnesses all referred to and called the assaulted party "a boy," it was held that this was sufficient proof that such assaulted party was a child. Bell v. State, 18 App. 53, 51 Am. Rep. 293. In such a case the statements of a child made two or three nights after the assault as to his physical condition, were held to be inadmissible in evidence. Dowlen v. State, 14 App. 61.

It is not competent for the state to put in evidence complaints made by the injured female immediately after the assault, unless they come within the rule of res gestæ. Veal v. State, 8 App. 474.

While, in order to warrant a conviction of aggravated assault by an adult male upon a female, it must be shown that defendant was at least 21 years old, yet, where he was spoken of on the trial as "a man," and "a railroad hand," and no question was raised below as to his age, nor suggested by the facts in evidence, the judgment will not be reversed for want of specific proof of the fact. Henkel v. State, 27 App. 510, 11 S. W. 671.

In a prosecution for assault, where defendant offers evidence to prove that the assaulted person stated that she did not know who committed the assault the state, to corroborate her testimony, may prove that she stated soon after the assault that defendant was one of the persons who committed the assault. Duke v. State, 35 App. 283, 33 S. W. 349.

The declarations of the prosecutrix, in order to be admissible, must be part of the res gestæ. Price v. State, 35 App. 501, 34 S. W. 622.

Evidence as to the appearance and condition of a female when first seen after the assault had been committed is admissible. Id.

An assault cannot be proved by statements of the person alleged to be assaulted, where she denies the assault on the trial. Dunagain v. State, 38 App. 614, 44 S. W. 148.

In a prosecution for an assault on a female child, evidence of similar assaults on other occasions is admissible to show intent. Rogers v. State, 40 App. 355, 50 S. W. 338.

It cannot be presumed that the accused was an adult. White v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 826.

Evidence in a prosecution for assault to rape held to sustain a conviction for aggravated assault. Vivian v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 895.

35. — Assault by parent.—In a trial for assault, evidence that, immediately after the offense, the complaining witness went to B.'s home, a short distance away, and voluntarily told him that her father had pushed her out of the house, and then kicked her, was admissible as a part of the res gestæ. Waechter v. State, 34 App. 297, 30 S. W. 444, 800.

In a prosecution of accused for inflicting corporal punishment on her female child, between two and three years old, which resulted in its death, circumstantial evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of aggravated assault. Earnest v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 638.

36. Charge.—See notes to C. C. P., art. 735.

Facts held to require a charge on accidental assault. Owens v. State, 62 App. 129, 136 S. W. 1057. But, see Jordan v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 881.

Evidence held to require a charge that, if there was reasonable doubt as to whether or not the child was over 14, accused must be acquitted. Wilman v. State, 63 App. 623, 141 S. W. 110.

Defendant's theory should be presented to the jury. McGill v. State, 71 App. 443, 160 S. W. 353.

37. — Assault on female.—When there is no controversy as to the sex of the parties to an aggravated assault the charge may assume their sex as alleged. Davis v. State, 6 App. 133.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape held that failure to instruct on assault and aggravated assault with or without a request was error. Hemanus v. State, 7 App. 372.

Where the assault charged was upon a female, and the proof was that she was fifteen years old, and lived with the defendant, who was her brother, and who furnished her with board, lodging, clothing, and schooling, it was held that the court should have charged the parental right of correction. Snowden v. State, 12 App. 105, 41 Am. Rep. 667.

When on a charge of assault with intent to rape, evidence shows violent and indecent familiarity, court should charge the law of aggravated assault. Shields v. State, 32 App. 498, 23 S. W. 893. See, also, Alexander v. State, 58 App. 621, 137 S. W. 189.

The evidence showed that defendant took the injured party by the arm and made an indecent proposal to her, but did nothing further; held, the court should have, at the request of defendant, instructed the jury that if defendant had probable ground to believe and did believe that such taking hold of injured party's arm would not be objected to by her, and that he did not intend to injure her, they should acquit him. Shields v. State, 39 App. 15, 44 S. W. 844.

On a trial for an aggravated assault by an adult male upon a female, an instruction that "before you can find the defendant guilty as charged in the information you must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the acts done by the defendant at the time of the commission of the assault were acts of preparation on the part of defendant to have illicit, unlawful, and improper connection; that is, that unlawful handling of the privates, or attempt to handle the privates, of the alleged injured party, with the party assaulted"—is erroneous, for vagueness. Bradford v. State, 25 App. 723, 9 S. W. 46.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, where the evidence makes an issue as to whether defendant intended to use force, it is error not to submit to the jury the law of aggravated assault and battery. Shields v. State, 32 App. 498, 23 S. W. 893.

The court instructed the jury that if they believed from the evidence that the defendant, an adult male, did commit an assault, etc. This charge was objected to because it assumed defendant to be an adult male; held, the objection was not well taken. Holliday v. State, 35 App. 133, 32 S. W. 538.

On a trial for aggravated assault, the state's evidence was that defendant caught a girl eight years old, and held her between his legs; that she tried to get loose; that he used improper language, and exposed his person. Held, that the evidence warranted a charge, in the language of the statute, that, when an injury is caused by violence to the person, the intent to injure is presumed, and it rests on the one inflicting the injury to show accident or innocent intention, where the main charge required the jury to find beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant intended to injure the girl. Hill v. State, 37 App. 279, 38 S. W. 987, 39 S. W. 666, 66 Am. St. Rep. 803.

It is proper to charge in a prosecution for aggravated assault on a child eight years old that if defendant indecently or violently fondled her person, with intent to injure her, they must find defendant guilty, without requiring the act to be done without the consent of the child. Hill v. State, 37 App. 279, 38 S. W. 987, 39 S. W. 666, 66 Am. St. Rep. 803.

In an information charging defendant with "an aggravated assault" was an allegation that he intended, by the use of means employed by him on the person of a female, to have carnal intercourse with her. Held that, part of the count charging intent not being an essential averment, a refusal to charge that such intent must exist is not error. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 984.

In a prosecution for an assault on a female child, an instruction to find defendant guilty, if he indecently handled the child, does not injure defendant by failing to state that the assault must be made with intent to injure the child. Rogers v. State, 40 App. 355, 50 S. W. 338.

In a prosecution for an assault on a female child, an instruction that, when an injury is caused by violence to the person, the intent is presumed, and defendant must show the accident, or innocence of the intention, is not erroneous as stating, as a matter of law, that injury had resulted from defendant's act. Rogers v. State, 40 App. 355, 50 S. W. 338.

An instruction that the injury intended may be a sense of shame, following an instruction that the intent is presumed where an injury is caused by violence to the person, is not prejudicial, as being an undue repetition. Rogers v. State, 40 App. 355, 50 S. W. 338.

Where accused was referred to throughout the trial as a male adult, and his mother testified that he was 27 years of age, it was proper to instruct that, if the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed the assault, he would be guilty. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 345.

For correct charge in a case of assault on a female, see Pittcock v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 971.

38. — Assault on child.—Giving of an instruction to convict defendant if he chastised his ward with an unusual instrument calculated to inflict serious injuries held error as making the instrument the test of guilt. Stanfield v. State, 43 Tex. 167.

39. Punishment.—A fine of $500, and 12 months' imprisonment in a county jail, for an assault committed on complainant by defendant by seizing her sleeve and jerking her nearly to the ground, tearing off the sleeve (these facts being in dispute), is excessive. Robinson v. State, 25 App. 111, 7 S. W. 531.

On conviction of an aggravated assault on a married woman held that a verdict assessing a penalty of three hundred dollars fine and six months' imprisonment was not excessive. Young v. State, 31 App. 24, 19 S. W. 431.

SUBD. 6

40. Offense.—A male person under twenty-one years of age may commit an aggravated assault and battery upon a female by using violent familiarity upon her person, without her consent, with intent to have improper connection with her. George v. State, 11 App. 95.

A male is guilty of an aggravated assault by feeling the private parts of a chaste female against her will; this clause not limiting the character of the assault to the use of whip or cowhide. Slawson v. State, 39 App. 176, 45 S. W. 575, 73 Am. St. Rep. 914.

An assault with switches or sticks is aggravated; the statute including all assaults where whipping is administered. Caples v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 267.

41. Evidence.—Evidence held to support a conviction notwithstanding evidence of self-defense. Yates v. State, 72 App. 279, 162 S. W. 499.

42. Information.—An information under said subdivision referring to defendant by the pronoun "his," and to the person assaulted by the pronoun "her," and referring to her vagina, makes it sufficiently clear that defendant was a male, and that he assaulted a female. Slawson v. State, 39 App. 176, 45 S. W. 575, 73 Am. St. Rep. 914.

43. Offense.—Whenever there are such circumstances of aggravation attending the commission of the offense, as the use of bludgeons, missiles, weapons, or instruments of any kind capable of inflicting injury beyond what may ordinarily be inflicted by a blow with the fist and used in such manner as to be likely to inflict such injury, and especially where so used as to cause a wounding, the offense must be deemed to be an aggravated assault. Norton v. State, 14 Tex. 387.

An assault committed by striking with a pistol is, under the law of Texas (Pen. Code, arts. 46, 496), simple assault, notwithstanding the person assaulted was wounded by the accidental discharge of the pistol used in the assault, unless it is shown that a pistol was, when used in such a manner, a deadly weapon; or that by means of such use of it serious bodily injury had been inflicted, or that the assault was committed with premeditated design and by the use of means calculated to inflict great bodily injury. Pierce v. State, 21 App. 540, 1 S. W. 463; Jenkins v. State, 30 App. 379, 17 S. W. 938; Stephenson v. State, 33 App. 162, 25 S. W. 784; Melton v. State, 30 App. 273, 17 S. W. 257.

"Serious bodily injury" is such as gives rise to apprehension—an injury which is attended with danger. Biting off a small portion of the rim of the ear, it was held, was not inflicting serious bodily injury. George v. State, 21 App. 315, 17 S. W. 351; Halsell v. State, 29 App. 22, 18 S. W. 418.

To make the throwing of a hot coffee pot on a person an aggravated assault, it must have been thrown so as to make it a deadly weapon, or it must have inflicted serious bodily injury. Clark v. State, 63 App. 579, 140 S. W. 779; Bagley v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 773; Shelton v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 940.

44. Indictment.—"Striking and beating with a pistol in a manner calculated to inflict serious bodily pain and injury" does not per se constitute an aggravated assault. If, as used, the pistol was a deadly weapon, or if the assault was made with premeditated design, the assault would be an aggravated one; but, in the absence of both these allegations, the indictment charges a simple assault only. Miles v. State, 23 App. 410, 5 S. W. 250.

An indictment held sufficient to charge aggravated assault and battery under this subdivision. Bean v. State, 25 App. 346, 8 S. W. 278.

Where the indictment alleges the assault made with a deadly weapon, also, that serious bodily injury was inflicted, proof of either allegation will sustain a conviction. Whitten v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 474.

Indictment held sufficient. Bagley v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 773.

The injury and not the means is the criterion by which the aggravation is determined. Hyde v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 535.

45. — Election between counts.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 481.

46. — Pleading and proof.—Where an indictment charges that an assault was aggravated, first, because serious bodily injury was inflicted; second, because the offense was committed upon a female by an adult male,—proof of the latter fact alone is sufficient. Waechter v. State, 34 App. 297, 30 S. W. 444, 800.

Serious bodily injury, relied on in a prosecution for aggravated assault, is supported by proof that the injuries inflicted on the assaulted stiffened one of his fingers. Branch v. State, 35 App. 304, 33 S. W. 356.

47. Evidence.—The assaulted party having testified that he was unable to go about, evidence that the day after the assault he was in front of accused's house and invited him to fight, was improperly excluded. Parish v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 327.

A physician having testified that he would not state the wound was such as might probably result in death, his testimony, showing the bullet did inflict serious bodily injury, was admissible. Singleton v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 46.

48. — Sufficiency.—Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Rowlett v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 599; Fulkerson v. State, 57 App. 80, 121 S. W. 1111; Bagley v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 773; Nickerson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 992.

Facts held insufficient to sustain conviction. Russell v. State, 71 App. 86, 158 S. W. 546.

49. — Serious injury.—Serious injury not shown. Miller v. State, 59 App. 249, 128 S. W. 117; Parish v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 327.

A dislocation of complaining witness' shoulder inflicted by defendant while forcibly putting him out of a door in the post office, which hurt a great deal, required a sling for several weeks, and continued to hurt at trial six months later, which had been put in place while complainant was under anesthetics, and which, while not necessarily permanent, would expose the joint to greater chance of a subsequent dislocation, was a serious injury. Robey v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 713.

Facts held not to require a charge on aggravated assault. Bussey v. State, 71 App. 612, 160 S. W. 697; Spiller v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1164.

Charge on intent to injure held sufficient. Johnson v. State, 71 App. 610, 160 S. W. 702; Robey v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 713.

Where injury was almost fatal, a proper charge on defendant's ability to inflict the injury can not prejudice him. De Los Santos v. State (Cr. App.) 31 S. W. 395.

It is not necessary to submit the issue of simple assault in a homicide case where the jugular vein was cut, causing death. Kinslow v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 249.

51. Offense.—Hunt v. State, 6 App. 664; Johnson v. State, 70 App. 294, 156 S. W. 1164.

Where the evidence showed that the fight was provoked by defendant and it was not shown that it was necessary to his defense that he should use a knife which, though not very formidable, was a dangerous weapon capable of inflicting a serious wound and of endangering the life of the person on whom it was used, the jury was justified in finding him guilty of aggravated assault in the use of the knife. Weaver v. State, 24 Tex. 387.

On trial for an assault with intent to murder, where an assault with a deadly weapon is shown, but the intent to kill is not shown, the offense would be an aggravated assault. Moore alias Neal v. State, 33 App. 306, 26 S. W. 403.

The use of a loaded gun, incapable of being fired because of a broken firing pin, held a simple assault and not an aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Pearce v. State, 37 App. 643, 40 S. W. 806.

An unlawful assault with a deadly weapon, not in self-defense, is aggravated assault. Hamilton v. State, 60 App. 258, 131 S. W. 1127.

Where accused, after ordering out of his store, one, who was his enemy, got his shotgun and pointed it at him, but did not fire it, or use it to strike with, and inflicted no injury, the acts of accused amounted to no more than simple assault. Shuffield v. State, 62 App. 556, 138 S. W. 402.

To make the throwing of hot coffee on a person an aggravated assault, it must have been done so as to make it a deadly weapon, or it must have inflicted serious bodily injury. Clark v. State, 63 App. 579, 140 S. W. 779.

A person shooting another is guilty of assault, unless done by accident or unintentionally; the grade of the offense depending on whether he acted with malice, and intended to kill. Vining v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 909.

Where a person threw a stick at another with no intention of killing him, and which was not what would usually be considered a deadly weapon, he would be guilty of an aggravated assault only. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1071.

Shooting to frighten or to inflict injury without killing is an aggravated assault. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1046.

One who curses and points a gun at another, who flees, the gun not being fired, is guilty of aggravated assault. Myers v. State, 72 App. 630, 163 S. W. 432.

52. Deadly weapon.—A "deadly weapon" is one which, in the manner used, is likely to produce death, or serious bodily injury. Skidmore v. State, 43 Tex. 93; Kouns v. State, 3 App. 13; McReynolds v. State, 4 App. 327; Johnson v. State, 70 App. 294, 156 S. W. 1164; Harris v. State, 72 App. 491, 162 S. W. 1150.

A fire-arm is not necessarily a deadly weapon. Whether or not in the particular case it was a deadly weapon must depend upon its size, or the manner of its use. Skidmore v. State, 43 Tex. 94; Key v. State, 12 App. 506; Shadle v. State, 34 Tex. 572; State v. Franklin, 36 Tex. 155; Hunt v. State, 6 App. 663.

A chair is not necessarily a deadly weapon. Kouns v. State, 3 App. 13. Nor is "a black jack pole used as a fence rail." Wilson v. State, 15 App. 150.

When assault was made with a pistol it must be shown in what manner the pistol was used. Stephenson v. State, 33 App. 162, 25 S. W. 784.

"An instrument calculated and likely to produce death or serious bodily injury from the manner in which it is used," is a proper definition of a deadly weapon. Hardy v. State, 36 App. 400, 37 S. W. 434.

Whether a weapon is a deadly weapon can be proved by its size and character and the manner in which it was used. Hardy v. State, 36 App. 400, 37 S. W. 434.

A deadly weapon is one which, from the manner used, is calculated to produce death or serious bodily injury. Wilson v. State, 37 App. 156, 38 S. W. 1013.

An assault with an ordinary saw is not an "assault with a deadly weapon," where the injuries inflicted are very slight. Fisher v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 544.

A weapon may or may not be deadly according to its size and the manner of its use. Smith v. State, 61 App. 349, 135 S. W. 152; Fisher v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 544.

53. — Elements of manslaughter as reducing assault with intent to murder to aggravated assault.—See arts. 1128-1138 and notes thereunder.

54. Distinct offenses.—A conviction for engaging in an "affray" does not bar a prosecution for "aggravated assault" under a plea of former jeopardy, nor does the doctrine of carving apply. McCraw v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 967.

55. Indictment and Information.—See notes under the two preceding subdivisions.

An allegation that the assault was committed with a pistol, and that the defendant did shoot at the assaulted party, with intent to kill, sufficiently charges an aggravated assault. It is not necessary to allege that the assault was unlawful. State v. Lutterloh, 22 Tex. 210.

An information charging that defendant "did make an aggravated assault and battery * * * and * * * with brass knuckles * * * did strike, beat, wound" held insufficient to charge aggravated assault or more than a simple assault. Wilks v. State, 3 App. 34.

It is not necessary to allege that the fire-arm used was loaded, or that the assaulted party was within carrying distance of the weapon. Burton v. State, 3 App. 408, 30 Am. Rep. 146; Rainbolt v. State, 34 Tex. 286.

It need not allege that the assault was committed under "circumstances not amounting to an intent to murder or maim." Brown v. State, 2 App. 61; Hunt v. State, 6 App. 663; State v. Franklin, 36 Tex. 155.

The indictment must allege that the weapon with which the assault was committed, was a "deadly" one. To allege that the assault was committed with a pistol without alleging that the pistol was a deadly weapon is insufficient. Key v. State, 12 App. 506; Miles v. State, 23 App. 410, 5 S. W. 250; Williamson v. State, 5 App. 485.

Information held to charge an offense. Dunn v. State, 71 App. 89, 158 S. W. 300.

Intent to injure need not be alleged. Yelton v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 318.

56. — Election between counts.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 481.

57. — Variance.—If the assault is alleged to have been committed with a specific weapon, it must be so proved. McGee v. State, 5 App. 492.

Where an indictment charged an assault with intent to murder with a bowie knife, and the evidence showed an assault with a butcher knife, that there was no variance. Hernandez v. State, 32 App. 271, 22 S. W. 972.

An information charging an assault committed with a knife, is not supported by evidence of an assault committed with a stick. Herald v. State, 37 App. 409, 35 S. W. 670.

58. Evidence.—Facts held to sustain a verdict of guilty. Noland v. State, 63 App. 275, 140 S. W. 100; Simpson v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 1078; Black v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 932; Waller v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 921.

Evidence that defendant seized a gun during the fight with a knife held admissible as part of the res gestæ, but not to establish an assault with the gun. Weaver v. State, 24 Tex. 387.

If the assault was with a fire-arm, the state need not prove it was loaded; if unloaded the burden is upon the defendant to prove it. Crow v. State, 41 Tex. 468; Caldwell v. State, 5 Tex. 18.

The locality and character of the wounds inflicted is competent evidence to prove that the weapon used was a deadly one, and may be sufficient. Briggs v. State, 6 App. 144.

Proof by the defendant that the assaulted party had a weapon which he did not attempt to use, is inadmissible. Briggs v. State, 6 App. 144.

If the charge is that the assault was committed with a deadly weapon, it must be proved that the weapon was deadly when used in the manner in which it was used, or attempted to be used. Wilson v. State, 15 App. 150; Hilliard v. State, 17 App. 210; Hunt v. State, 6 App. 663; Key v. State, 12 App. 506; McGrew v. State, 19 App. 302.

Conviction for aggravated assault with deadly weapon will be set aside when there is no evidence to show that the knife used was a deadly weapon. Willson v. State, 34 App. 64, 29 S. W. 41.

There was no proof as to the size of the knife, and a physician who examined the wounds testified that they were not dangerous; held, the evidence was insufficient to support the verdict. Willson v. State, 34 App. 64, 29 S. W. 41.

The proof showing that the assault was committed with a pistol, used as a bludgeon, the size and weight of the pistol must be shown. Branch v. State, 35 App. 304, 33 S. W. 356.

The prosecutor found defendant and a woman in a thicket; evidence tending to show that prosecutor was in the habit of spying upon persons was inadmissible. Parker v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 265.

The state of defendant's feeling may be shown. Decker v. State, 58 App. 159, 124 S. W. 912.

Where defendant had testified that he wanted to settle the matters in controversy with complainant and had offered to do so, evidence in rebuttal that witness, prior to the difficulty, went to see accused and tried to induce him to settle the difference, was admissible. Decker v. State, 58 App. 159, 124 S. W. 912.

If accused waylaid prosecutor and shot him without killing him at a time his mind was incapable of cool reflection on first meeting prosecutor after being informed of insults to a female relative, he was guilty of aggravated assault. Cheatham v. State, 57 App. 442, 125 S. W. 565.

Where accused cut prosecutor's throat, and made a gash five inches long around his neck, and one three inches long across his cheek, and cut his coat and vest, he was guilty of aggravated assault, if of anything, without reference to whether he acted in the heat of passion. Wimberley v. State, 60 App. 65, 130 S. W. 1002.

A conviction held unauthorized. Maxwell v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 1190.

Evidence of an agreement between the accused and his brother to beat up a person other than the one assaulted, held improperly admitted. Larue v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 194.

In a prosecution for assault to kill, where it appeared that the assault was made with a dirk, the blade being 5½ inches long from guard to the point, sharp on both edges, and about three-fourths of an inch in width, tapering to a point, and a dangerous wound was made under the shoulder blade puncturing the lung tissue, the issue of simple assault was not presented. Hogue v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 905.

If accused provoked a difficulty with G., with no intention of killing him, and after being knocked down by G. formed an intention to kill, he was only guilty of aggravated assault, if his mind was rendered incapable of cool reflection by G.'s blows. Solis v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 343.

If accused, when he "hollered" as he approached G., intended to bring on trouble with G., but had no intention of killing him, his attack on G., after G. had knocked him down, was no graver offense than aggravated assault. Solis v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 343.

59. — Deadly weapon.—Evidence that defendant struck a person with a "good-sized walking-stick made of bois d'arc, and loaded;" that it was a "fair-sized walking-stick;" that the last blow was over the eye, and stunned the assaulted person; that the blow "cut the skin;" and that blood was wiped from the forehead,—is sufficient to convict of assault with a deadly weapon, or of an assault inflicting serious bodily injury. Stevens v. State, 27 App. 461, 11 S. W. 459.

In a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon, the prosecuting witness testified that defendant cut him "three times in the back." The physician who attended the witness testified that the wounds were not serious, and looked as though they had been made with a penknife. Defendant testified that he cut the witness with his knife. There was no evidence as to the character of the knife. Held, that the evidence failed to show that the knife was a deadly weapon. Wilson v. State, 34 App. 64, 29 S. W. 41.

On a prosecution for aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, where it appears that the weapon was a pistol used as a bludgeon, the weight and size of the pistol must be shown to determine whether it is, as so used, a deadly weapon. Branch v. State, 35 App. 304, 33 S. W. 356.

Evidence held to justify a finding that accused, when he assaulted complainant, used a dangerous weapon. Decker v. State, 58 App. 159, 124 S. W. 912.

In a prosecution for an assault to murder, evidence held to justify a finding that the weapon used was a deadly weapon, so as to warrant a conviction of aggravated assault. Teasley v. State, 150 S. W. 784.

Evidence held to sustain a finding that the knife used was a deadly weapon. Johnson v. State, 70 App. 294, 156 S. W. 1164.

Evidence held insufficient to show that the knife used was a deadly weapon. Burleson v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 851.

60. — Weapons or means used as evidence of intent.—See art. 1147, post and notes.

61. Charge.—See notes to C. C. P. art. 735.

Facts held to require a charge on aggravated assault. Cukierski v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 313; Leigh v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 920; Earnest v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 638; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 310; Mitchell v. State, 71 App. 254, 158 S. W. 812.

Facts held not to require a charge on aggravated assault. Gray v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 283; Crutchfield v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1053.

On the trial of B, charged with an aggravated assault on C, there was evidence that C was attempting to strike B with a stout walking stick at the time B stabbed him with a pocketknife. Held, that it was error to charge "if you believe that B stabbed C without C striking him with the stick, you will find him guilty of an aggravated assault." McFarlin v. State, 41 Tex. 23.

Where the assault charged was with a pistol, the jury propounded to the court the question, "Is a pistol a deadly weapon, the size not known, and not known whether empty or loaded?" The court answered, "A pistol is a deadly weapon." Held, error. Skidmore v. State, 43 Tex. 94.

The jury should be instructed as to the meaning of the phrase "deadly weapon," where it charged that the assault is committed with such a weapon. Kouns v. State, 3 App. 13.

And see on charge, Dillard v. State, 31 App. 67, 19 S. W. 895.

On trial of assault with intent to murder, where the evidence tends to show an aggravated assault, the court should submit that issue to the jury. Goode v. State, 32 App. 505, 24 S. W. 102.

Where a deadly weapon is used with the intention of alarming another the court should instruct on that phase of the case. Blackwell v. State, 33 App. 278, 26 S. W. 397, 32 S. W. 128.

On trial for assault with intent to murder where there is a conflict in the evidence as to defendant's intent to kill, the court should submit the law of aggravated assault. Moore v. State, 33 App. 351, 26 S. W. 404.

On trial for an assault with intent to murder where a deadly weapon was used but the evidence fails to establish the intent the court should charge the law on aggravated assault. Moore v. State, 33 App. 351, 26 S. W. 404; Blackwell v. State, 33 App. 278, 26 S. W. 397, 32 S. W. 128; Moore alias Neal v. State, 33 App. 306, 26 S. W. 403.

Where the defense was that the defendant fired the shots with intent to alarm and the evidence tended to support this theory the court should have charged the law in regard to aggravated assault. Moore alias Neal v. State, 33 App. 306, 26 S. W. 403.

A charge stating two grounds of aggravated assault and to convict if defendant committed an aggravated assault does not authorize a conviction on any other than the grounds stated. Russell v. State, 35 App. 8, 29 S. W. 43.

Defendant cut his wife's throat with a razor and ran after her and tried to cut her again; held, a charge on aggravated assault was properly refused. Halliburton v. State, 34 App. 410, 31 S. W. 297.

It appearing that defendant used his pistol only as a club the court should have defined deadly weapon. Lawson v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 895.

On evidence of an assault with a knife, it is not error to charge on the use of a dangerous weapon. Ellison v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 945.

The evidence showed the assault to have been made with a breast yoke, which inflicted but slight injury, and then defendant picked up a rock with which he might have killed the injured party; but after striking one lick threw the rock down and left; held, the court should have charged an aggravated assault. Smith v. State, 36 App. 569, 38 S. W. 167.

On trial for assault with intent to murder, failure to instruct as to aggravated assault and battery is error, where the weapons used in committing the assault were a breast yoke and a rock. Smith v. State, 36 App. 569, 38 S. W. 167.

Defendant testified that he did not intend to kill the assaulted party, but the testimony of all the other witnesses and the physical facts were against him; held, no error to refuse a special charge raising the question of aggravated assault. Schmeischer v. State, 36 App. 461, 37 S. W. 864, 38 S. W. 355.

But see dissenting opinion of Davidson, Judge. Id.

A charge that a deadly weapon is one which, from the manner used, is calculated to produce death, "or serious bodily injury," is not erroneous, on the ground that the weapon, as used, must be capable of producing death, where the evidence shows that the assault was with a shotgun, and a witness testifies that the gun, as loaded, and at the distance defendant was from the prosecutor, was a deadly weapon. Wilson v. State, 37 App. 156, 38 S. W. 1013.

The evidence showed that if defendant did not provoke the difficulty, he willingly engaged in the fight; held, that he could not complain of the charge of the court on aggravated assault. Wilson v. State, 37 App. 156, 38 S. W. 1013.

On trial for an assault with intent to murder, when the evidence shows either such an assault or self-defense, the court is not required to charge an aggravated assault. Barnes v. State, 39 App. 184, 45 S. W. 495.

When an assault is made with a deadly weapon, but it is doubtful as to whether or not defendant intended to kill the injured party, the court should instruct the jury that if they have a reasonable doubt as to such intention they will only find defendant guilty of an aggravated assault. Mathis v. State, 39 App. 549, 47 S. W. 464.

See this case for facts which called for a charge upon aggravated assault upon grounds stated in subdivisions 7 and 8 of this article. Henderson v. State, 55 App. 15, 115 S. W. 45.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, there was evidence that the person assaulted brought on the difficulty, threw a rock at accused, and then pulled a pistol and threatened to kill him. Held, that this evidence necessitated a charge as to the law of aggravated assault, on the theory that the difficulty was begun by the prosecuting witness. Heath v. State, 57 App. 59, 121 S. W. 862.

Where, on a trial for assault with intent to murder, no motive was shown for the shooting, and the parties were strangers, and the testimony raised the issue of an attack on accused by prosecutor and his associates suddenly, unexpectedly, and in the darkness, resulting in the infliction of serious wounds on accused, the court must submit the issue of aggravated assault. Reeen v. State, 58 App. 457, 126 S. W. 577.

Evidence in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder held to raise the issue of aggravated assault. Furgerson v. State, 58 App. 431, 126 S. W. 594.

Where, in a prosecution for murder, the character of wound inflicted by accused who stabbed deceased, the latter's prostrated condition immediately following the stabbing, the depth of the wound, and all, clearly showed the weapon used was deadly, there was no issue of aggravated assault in the case, and the court did not err in not charging thereon. Joseph v. State, 59 App. 82, 127 S. W. 171.

A pistol used as a firearm is per se a "deadly weapon," and it is unnecessary to define the term. Lofton v. State, 59 App. 270, 128 S. W. 384.

Where there was evidence that the difficulty between accused and prosecutor arose from the fact that prosecutor owed accused money, and the state showed that accused was the aggressor, and without excuse cut prosecutor with a penknife with a blade two or three inches long, and accused raised the issue of self-defense, and there was no evidence as to whether the wound was serious or not, the court erred in not submitting the issue of aggravated assault, though the facts did not call for a charge of aggravated assault on account of passion arising from adequate cause. Armstrong v. State, 60 App. 316, 131 S. W. 1074.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, there was evidence that the defendant, after a dispute with the prosecuting witness over payment for an article bought at the witness' store, said, "I will pay you, but I will see you again," and that the defendant, leaving the store, returned in a short time, and from a position behind a telephone pole shot and wounded the witness. The witness ran into the store, and defendant followed him, and shot and wounded him again, and witness then hid in the store, while the defendant shot once or twice more. This evidence, and evidence to identify the defendant, was corroborated. Held, that the court's refusal to submit the case to the jury, with an instruction upon aggravated assault, was not error. Harding v. State, 60 App. 327, 131 S. W. 1092.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, submitted to the jury on an instruction as to assault with a deadly weapon, it appeared from the evidence that the assault was committed and the wounds of the prosecuting witness made with a wooden stick about 2½ or 3 feet long, measuring about 1½ inches in diameter at the larger end and about three-quarters of an inch at the smaller end, and weighing from three-quarters of a pound to 1½ pounds. A physician testified that he examined the wounds shortly after the alleged assault, and found some blood clots under the scalp, a wound upon the jaw, and bruises on the shoulder, which might have been made with a stick, and which he dressed; the witness not stating whether the wounds were serious or not. Held, that the evidence was insufficient to warrant an instruction upon assault with a deadly weapon. Hamilton v. State, 60 App. 258, 131 S. W. 1127.

Defendant, an adult male, was charged with assaulting a boy 13 years of age and stabbing him with a sword for running between the line of a Knights of Pythias funeral procession. An examination of the boy disclosed a small punctured wound one-fourth to half an inch deep on his thigh and about half an inch long, which seemed to have been caused by a sharp pointed instrument. Defendant denied that he struck the boy, and disclaimed any purpose or intent to do so, nor was there any motive or evidence of any intention on the defendant's part to kill the boy. Held, that the court erred in failing to submit aggravated assault, under Pen. Code 1895, art. 1031, declaring that, when an assault is committed with a deadly weapon under circumstances not amounting to an intent to murder or maim, the offense is "aggravated assault." Malone v. State, 60 App. 509, 132 S. W. 769.

The jury should be instructed on cooling time. Leggett v. State, 62 App. 99, 136 S. W. 784.

Where the case was submitted on the issues of assault to murder and aggravated assault, the court should, especially in connection with a charge on cooling time, have instructed as to blows inflicted by prosecutor on defendant, with a chair bottom and rail, causing pain and bloodshed, authorizing a conviction of the lesser offense, though such blows were inflicted an hour before the parties again met, when defendant shot prosecutor. Leggett v. State, 62 App. 99, 136 S. W. 784.

The evidence of the state in a prosecution for an assault with intent to kill tended to show a dispute between the parties growing out of a game of craps; that defendant shot directly at one of the state's witnesses under such circumstances as to show that he did so with intent to kill, and that of the defendant that the shot was accidental, and that he did not shoot at or intend to shoot or kill the witness, nor shoot in self-defense, and that he used his pistol with the intention of defending himself if it became necessary, as he believed that the witnesses intended to assault him. Held, that an instruction upon aggravated assault was necessary. Davis v. State, 63 App. 484, 141 S. W. 93.

Evidence on a trial for homicide held not to require the submission of aggravated assault. Carver v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 746.

In a prosecution for homicide, where a witness testified that, on exclamation by the wife of deceased that men standing by had let that man kill her husband, he went out to where deceased was lying on the ground, and that defendant stood over him with an ax, and struck him on the head, and where defendant himself testified that he picked up an ax and struck deceased with it three times, knocking him down at the first blow, a charge on aggravated assault defining a deadly weapon was not called for. Penton v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 190.

Where, in a prosecution for aggravated assault by striking prosecutor with a rock, there was no evidence that the injuries were serious or of an aggravated nature, an instruction defining aggravated assault as one from which serious bodily injury results, or committed with a deadly weapon under circumstances not amounting to intent to murder or maim, or committed with a premeditated design and by the use of means calculated to effect great bodily injury, and charging that, if defendant committed an aggravated assault by then and there assaulting and cutting prosecutor with a knife, as alleged in the information, he should have been found guilty, etc., was erroneous. Shelton v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 940.

Charge held too restrictive. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1046.

Where defendant stabbed deceased in the stomach only once with an ordinary pocket knife and there was no testimony showing directly that it was a deadly weapon, defendant having testified that he had no idea of killing deceased, but, being greatly frightened at the way deceased came at him, struck him once with the knife in order to defend himself, it was error to refuse to charge on aggravated assault. Hysaw v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 941.

The killing of another with a weapon not likely to produce death is only aggravated assault in the absence of evidence showing a design to kill, consequently in a homicide case, where the court properly charged the jury that, if the hammer used in the offense was not an instrument likely to produce death, it cannot be presumed that death was intended, a further instruction on aggravated assault was necessary. Beaupre v. State, 70 App. 19, 156 S. W. 625.

Evidence, in a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, held to make it a jury question whether the fights theretofore had between the parties were sufficient to constitute adequate cause, so as to reduce the offense to aggravated assault. Luttrell v. State, 70 App. 183, 157 S. W. 157.

It was not error to refuse to charge the law of aggravated assault, where defendant procured a pistol and went to the other's house, and a shooting affray immediately followed. Rogers v. State, 71 App. 271, 159 S. W. 44.

Where the evidence in a homicide case tended to show that the knife used was 8 or 8½ inches long, and had been sharpened while in accused's possession shortly before the killing, and was used with such force as to sever decedent's watch chain, put gaps in the knife, and drive part of the chain into his abdomen and that the knife went six inches across the abdomen, until it struck and cut off two ribs, and then went downward an inch and a half and that a second wound was inflicted inside the bowels before the knife was withdrawn, a requested charge on aggravated or simple assault was properly refused; the evidence indicating a design to kill. Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272.

On a trial for assault with intent to murder, where the state's evidence showed a deliberate and wilful assault with a shotgun within a distance of only 12 to 15 feet, while accused testified that he shot solely in self-defense and did not testify that he did not intend to kill the party assaulted, the court properly refused to submit aggravated assault under Pen. Code 1911, art. 1022, subd. 7, providing that an assault becomes aggravated when a serious bodily injury is inflicted upon the person assaulted, or subdivision 8, providing that an assault is aggravated when committed with deadly weapons, under circumstances not amounting to an intention to murder or maim, since the evidence showed an assault with a deadly weapon in such a way as to show an intention to kill. Bussey v. State, 71 App. 612, 160 S. W. 697.

On a trial for assault to murder, accused's testimony that, as he was walking down the street with a pistol in his hand just after killing a man, some one called, "Look out," that as he turned he saw approaching a person whom he knew to be an officer, and that the officer was attempting to draw a pistol, whereupon he fired, though it raised the issue of self-defense, did not justify the submission of aggravated assault. Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 534.

Where the state's evidence presented only the question of murder, and the defendant's evidence raised only the question of manslaughter and accidental killing, the court properly refused to instruct on aggravated assault. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1156.

Where the injuries inflicted by accused result in death, the issues of assault with intent to murder or aggravated assault do not arise and should not be submitted. Francis v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 779.

On a trial for assault to murder, the court, in charging on self-defense, should have told the jury that if accused provoked the difficulty, with no intention of killing, and was assaulted by the prosecuting witness, and driven to the necessity of cutting as a matter of self-preservation, he would be guilty of no higher offense than aggravated assault, if the blows and assault caused such pain as to produce anger, rage, or fear to an extent rendering his mind incapable of cool reflection, as the statute provides that a blow causing pain is "adequate cause." Solis v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 343.

Defendant was tried for assault with intent to commit murder, and the court charged that "an assault becomes aggravated when committed with a deadly weapon under circumstances not amounting to an intent to murder or maim," and that, if there was a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's intent to murder or maim, the defendant was guilty of no higher offense than aggravated assault. Held, that the use of the word "maim," in conjunction with murder, had a tendency to confuse the jury, for if it was believed that defendant's intent was not to murder, but to maim, the jury would have been obliged to convict, and hence the instructions taken together were reversible error. Cooper v. State, 132 S. W. 355.

63. Offense.—An assault is not necessarily aggravated because committed by the use of means calculated to inflict great bodily injury. It must also be committed with premeditated design. Pinson v. State, 23 Tex. 579.

An aggravated assault under this subdivision may be committed with the fists. Keley v. State, 12 App. 245.

An assault committed with premeditated design, but without the specific intent to kill, and by the use of means calculated to inflict great bodily injury, is an "aggravated assault." Armstrong v. State, 60 App. 316, 131 S. W. 1074.

Where one intending to use his fists, is so confused by a blow that he uses a knife without knowing what he is doing, he is not guilty of aggravated assault, but may be convicted of simple assault. Brewer v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 622.

The assault must be committed with a fixed purpose, and not upon a rash impulse, but the real injury is not material, except as showing that the means were calculated to inflict serious injury. Hodges v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 512.

Where accused struck complaining witness on being called a liar by him, and witness fell, fracturing his skull, it was insufficient to support a conviction of aggravated assault. Calvert v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 744.

But see Little v. State, 61 App. 197, 135 S. W. 119.

64. Indictment.—Conviction under this clause may be had under indictment for assault with intent to murder or rape. Givens v. State, 6 Tex. 344; Gardenehr v. State, Id. 348; Johnson v. State, 17 Tex. 565; Blackwell v. State, 33 App. 278, 26 S. W. 397, 32 S. W. 128.

An indictment under this subdivision is not duplicitous because it alleges that the assault was committed with a deadly weapon. Coney v. State, 2 App. 62.

65. Evidence.—The assaulted party may testify as to the ownership of the locus of the assault. Tucker v. State, 6 App. 251.

Evidence held to sustain conviction. Johnson v. State, 59 App. 425, 128 S. W. 1123.

And further as evidence, see Pinson v. State, 23 Tex. 579; Briggs v. State, 6 App. 144; McGrew v. State, 19 App. 302; Stevens v. State, 27 App. 461, 11 S. W. 459; Chambers v. State, 42 Tex. 254; Skidmore v. State, 43 Tex. 93; Wilson v. State, 15 App. 150; Wilson v. State, 34 App. 64, 29 S. W. 41; Parrish v. State, 32 App. 583, 25 S. W. 420.

66. Charge.—See notes to C. C. P. art. 735.

An instruction that if defendant, on or about the date specified, and within two years prior to the filing of the information, did commit an assault on prosecutor with premeditated design, that is, preconceived in his mind prior to such assault, and the assault was committed by means calculated to inflict great bodily injury on prosecutor, the jury should find him guilty of aggravated assault, was erroneous, for failure to require that the premeditation must have existed in the mind of accused at the time of the assault, especially in view of evidence that an unfriendly state of feeling had existed between the parties for a considerable time. Decker v. State, 124 S. W. 912.

As to necessity of charge upon reasonable doubt, as between two degrees, see Hodges v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 512.

67. Offense.—Where a breach of peace justifies an officer in making an arrest, and the person attempted to be arrested, while within striking distance and having a carving knife in his hand, raises the knife in a striking position and orders the officer to stand back, he is guilty of an assault. Stockton v. State, 25 Tex. 773.

The assaulted person and the officer by whom he was summoned as a posse having attempted to arrest defendant for the theft without a warrant, the arrest was illegal, and defendant was justified in striking the injured person with his whip, to compel him to release defendant's horse. Massie v. State, 27 App. 617, 11 S. W. 638.

The invalidity of a warrant can not be pleaded if unknown to accused when he committed the assault. Graham v. State, 29 App. 31, 13 S. W. 1013.

It is no offense to resist arrest by one who is neither a de jure nor a de facto officer. Brown v. State, 43 App. 411, 66 S. W. 547.

It must appear that the party assaulted was an officer in the actual discharge of his duties, and that the assault was made as an interruption of his duty. Jeanes v. State, 60 App. 440, 132 S. W. 352.

One arrested without a warrant for an offense not committed in the officer's presence, has a right to relieve himself of the restraint, and in doing so is not guilty of assault. Williams v. State, 64 App. 491, 142 S. W. 899.

The fact that an officer thinks that a writ entitles him to take property under it will not increase his rights. If the writ is void he is a trespasser. Lassiter v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 710.

68. Officers.—Peace officers are designated by C. C. P. art. 43.

The term "officer," includes all persons legally authorized to perform public duties. Sanner v. State, 2 App. 458.

A policeman is a peace officer. Sanner v. State, 2 App. 458.

69. Indictment.—The indictment must allege that it was known or declared to the defendant that the person assaulted was an officer discharging an official duty. State v. Coffey, 41 Tex. 46; Johnson v. State, 26 Tex. 117; Bristow v. State, 36 App. 379, 37 S. W. 326.

Under an indictment for assault upon a peace officer conviction may be had for simple assault. Jay v. State, 41 App. 451, 55 S. W. 336.

An allegation that defendant made an assault upon an officer while in the discharge of his official duty is sufficient. Dilliard v. State, 62 App. 321, 137 S. W. 356.

70. — Pleading and proof.—Evidence that the person assaulted was a peace officer and that when assaulted he was arresting defendant held admissible though the indictment did not allege these facts. Hodges v. State, 6 App. 615.

71. Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of assaulting an officer. Franklin v. State, 27 App. 136, 11 S. W. 35.

On a prosecution for aggravated assault, the injury being inflicted when the assaulted person was in the act of arresting defendant for theft of cattle, testimony of a witness that another had told him that defendant was the person who drove the cattle from her pasture is inadmissible, as hearsay. Massie v. State, 27 App. 617, 11 S. W. 638.

The officer having arrested accused's father, the circumstances of the arrest were admissible. Marsden v. State, 59 App. 36, 126 S. W. 1160.

Evidence held to justify a conviction. Ligon v. State, 59 App. 274, 128 S. W. 620.

Evidence held to show that the officer was not in the performance of his duty. Jeanes v. State, 60 App. 440, 132 S. W. 352.

Conversation of which accused had no information is irrelevant. Walker v. State, 63 App. 499, 140 S. W. 455.

72. Charge.—See notes to Code Cr. Proc. art. 735.

Facts held to require charge on aggravated assault. Sanchez v. State, 70 App. 24, 156 S. W. 218.

Art. 1023. [602] Aggravation may be of different degrees.—The circumstances of aggravation, mentioned in the preceding article, are of different degrees, and the jury are to consider these circumstances in forming their verdict and assessing the punishment. [Act Nov. 6, 1871.]

Art. 1024. [603] Punishment.—The punishment for an aggravated assault or battery shall be a fine not less than twenty-five nor more than one thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not less than one month nor more than two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Historical.—The penalty formerly was a fine not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, and the jury might add imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years.

Punishment.—A fine of $500 and confinement in the county jail for twelve months, held excessive in view of the evidence. Robinson v. State, 25 App. 111, 7 S. W. 531.

Grossly insulting words will not justify or reduce aggravated to simple assault, though they may mitigate the punishment. Timon v. State, 34 App. 363, 30 S. W. 808.

A verdict imposing a fine of $500 and imprisonment for fifteen months held not excessive under the circumstances. Inglen v. State, 36 App. 472, 37 S. W. 861. "Month." means a solar month or thirty days, and not a calendar or lunar month. McKinney v. State, 43 App. 387, 66 S. W. 769.

A fine of $200 and 12 months in jail held not excessive. Cuellar v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 228.

A fine of $500 and two years' imprisonment in the county jail held not excessive. Jobe v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1025.

— Charge.—It is fundamental error to mistake the penalty in the charge. Bostic v. State, 22 App. 136, 2 S. W. 538; Gardenhire v. State, 18 App. 565; Howard v. State, Id. 348; Veal v. State, 8 App. 474.

A charge which fails to instruct that both such fine and imprisonment may be imposed is erroneous. Graham v. State, 29 App. 31, 13 S. W. 1013; Moody v. State, 30 App. 422, 18 S. W. 94.

A charge of the court which erroneously states the maximum of the fine assessable, is cause for reversal. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 416, 17 S. W. 1061.

The court charged: "If you find the defendant guilty the form of your verdict will be, 'We the jury find the defendant E. B. guilty as charged at a fine of $500,—filling in the amount.'" Held erroneous as well as inconsistent. It is for the jury and not the court to assess the fine within statutory limits. Blackwell v. State, 30 App. 416, 17 S. W. 1061.

Verdict.—See C. C. P. art. 763 et seq. and notes thereunder.

On trial of aggravated assault the verdict was: "We the jury find the defendant guilty and assess his fine $10." Held, the verdict is indefinite and insufficient. Hays v. State, 33 App. 546, 28 S. W. 203.

Where the offense charged consists of degrees, the jury should state in their verdict the degree in which they find the accused guilty; and where the information charged aggravated assault, and the verdict read: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty, and assess his fine at ten dollars,"—it is too indefinite to form the basis of a judgment. Hays v. State, 33 App. 546, 28 S. W. 203.

Under an indictment for aggravated assault, jury found defendant guilty and assessed his punishment at fine that might apply to either simple or aggravated assault; held, not reversible. Pearce v. State, 37 App. 643, 40 S. W. 806.

Under indictment for aggravated assault and verdict is fine of $25, it should state whether it is for aggravated or simple assault. Lee v. State, 41 App. 557, 55 S. W. 814.

CHAPTER TWO A

ASSAULT WITH PROHIBITED WEAPON

Art.
1024a. The offense defined.

1024b. Purpose and scope of act.

Article 1024a. The offense defined.—That if any person shall wilfully commit an assault or an assault and battery upon another with a pistol, dirk, dagger, slung shot, sword cane, spear or knuckles made of any metal or made of any hard substance, bowie knife, or any knife manufactured or sold for the purpose of offense or defense, while the same is being carried unlawfully by the person committing said assault, he shall be deemed guilty of an assault with a prohibited weapon and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not to exceed two thousand dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed two years, or by confinement in the penitentiary for not more than five years. [Act 1913, p. 237, ch. 114, § 1.]

Indictment.—An indictment for assault which merely states that the weapon used was unlawfully carried without alleging the facts which made the carrying unlawful, is insufficient. Denton v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 796.

Art. 1024b. Purpose and scope of act.—The above shall not be construed to in any manner affect Article 475 of the Revised Penal Code of 1911 relating to unlawfully carrying arms, but shall be cumulative thereof and is intended to create the offense of assault with prohibited weapons and prescribing penalty thereof. [Id., § 2.]

Article 1025. [604] Assault with intent to maim.—If any person shall assault another with intent to commit the offense of maiming, disfiguring or castration, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years; and, if such assault be made by a person or persons in disguise, the penalty shall be double. [Act Nov. 6, 1871, p. 20.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 476.

A charge of maiming and disfiguring carries with it a charge of assault with intent to maim and disfigure. Pool v. State, 59 App. 482, 129 S. W. 1135.

Art. 1026. [605] With intent to murder.—If any person shall assault another with intent to murder, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than fifteen years; if the assault be made with a bowie knife or dagger, or in disguise, or by laying in wait, or by shooting into a private residence, the punishment shall be double. 1. Offense.—To establish this offense the evidence must show that had the death of the assaulted party resulted from the assault the homicide would have been murder. State v. Kellough, 32 Tex. 74; Yanez v. State, 20 Tex. 656; Stapp v. State, 3 App. 138; Wilson v. State, 4 App. 637; Stevens v. State, 38 App. 550, 43 S. W. 1005; Williams v. State, 57 App. 492, 123 S. W. 1110; Darnell v. State, 58 App. 585, 126 S. W. 1122.

To constitute an assault with intent to murder, there must be an unlawful violence, a specific intent to kill, and the act must be prompted by malice. Ponton v. State, 35 App. 597, 34 S. W. 950; Chatman v. State, 40 App. 278, 50 S. W. 396; Young v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1046.

If the assault is voluntary, committed with deliberate design, and with an instrument capable of producing death, in such manner as evidences an intention to take life, and there are no extenuating circumstances, it is an assault with intent to murder. Yanez v. State, 20 Tex. 656.

Administering poison, with malicious intent is not an assault with intent to murder. It is a different and more heinous offense. Garnet v. State, 1 App. 605, 28 Am. Rep. 425.

Where A. and B. agree to fight with knives, and, proceeding to the place agreed upon, A. strikes B. with his knife, and B. draws a pistol and shoots A. and continues to shoot at him while he is retreating, B. is guilty of an assault with intent to murder. King v. State, 4 App. 54, 30 Am. Rep. 160.

If the defendant attempted to shoot the assaulted party with intent to kill him, and in such attempt was actuated by malice aforethought, and under circumstances which, if the death of the assaulted party had resulted, the homicide would have been murder; but was prevented by any cause from effecting his purpose, he would be guilty of an assault with intent to murder. Miller v. State, 15 App. 125.

A person intending to commit murder and using a deadly weapon in such a manner that his intent is apparent, can not afterward, by abandoning any further attempt, lessen the effect of his previous acts. Watts v. State, 30 App. 533, 17 S. W. 1092.

Two prisoners attempted to make their escape, one of them trying to cut the jailer's throat, with a razor, and in the scuffle the other one secured the jailer's pistol and made him go inside the cell; held, they were both guilty of an assault with intent to murder. Thompson v. State, 37 App. 448, 36 S. W. 265.

Defendant standing by took part with the aggressor in a fight and shot at the injured party; held, if the shot had been fatal the crime would have been murder, and not manslaughter, hence the assault was assault with intent to murder. Schrimsher v. State, 36 App. 461, 37 S. W. 864, 38 S. W. 355.

One who calls another a liar, and picks up his gun, is not conclusively guilty of an assault with intent to murder. Stevens v. State, 38 App. 550, 43 S. W. 1005.

If, when one accused of assault to murder shot, assailed was out of range, there was no assault. Jackson v. State, 54 App. 605, 114 S. W. 136.

It is not conclusive that an assault was not with intent to murder because it was from a rash and inconsiderate impulse, and the assailant did not follow up his victim, though there was nothing to prevent. Duncan v. State, 55 App. 168, 115 S. W. 837.

If accused placed a child, to which his sister-in-law had just given birth, in an exposed position near his house, without any intent to kill it, but to hide his sister-in-law's shame and his own paternity of it until it could be carried away, he would not be guilty of assault to murder, but of some lesser degree of assault, if of anything. Martin v. State, 57 App. 264, 122 S. W. 558.

Where accused waylaid prosecutor and shot him without killing him when his mind was capable of cool reflection, and his mind was cool, he was guilty of assault with intent to murder. Cheatham v. State, 57 App. 442, 125 S. W. 565.

Accused is guilty of assault with intent to murder, and not of aggravated assault, where, if the assaulted party had died, accused would have been guilty of murder. Edwards v. State, 58 App. 342, 125 S. W. 894.

To shoot at another is not necessarily an assault with intent to murder. Cooper v. State, 60 App. 411, 132 S. W. 355.

A hatchet in the hands of a strong man is a "dangerous weapon." Stanton v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 808.

Where one intending to commit an assault with his fists, is so confused by a blow that he uses a knife without knowing what he is doing, he is not guilty of assault with intent to murder but may be convicted of simple assault. Brewer v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 622.

Where accused fired a 32-caliber rifle and wounded a person from 75 to 100 yards away, he was guilty of some grade of assault. Catlett v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 673.

Where accused applied opprobrious epithets to G., and, after G. had knocked him down, attacked G., he was guilty of assault to murder, if he applied such epithets with the intention of provoking a difficulty and killing G. Solis v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 343.

2. — Intent.—The evidence must show a specific intent to kill the person assaulted. Jobe v. State, 1 App. 183.

The specific intent to kill is an indispensable element of assault to murder. Davidson v. State, 22 App. 372, 3 S. W. 662; Downes v. State, 22 App. 393, 3 S. W. 242; McCullough v. State, 24 App. 128, 5 S. W. 839; Lehman v. State 26 App. 322, 9 S. W. 610; Coleman v. State, 28 App. 173, 12 S. W. 590; Carter v. State, 28 App. 355, 13 S. W. 147; English v. State, 28 App. 500, 13 S. W. 775; Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646.

For an assault to be one to murder, there must be a specific intent to take life. Leigh v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 920.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, the reason why accused was armed at the time of the shooting is immaterial, where prosecutor committed the first overt act, and accused shot in what he believed was self-defense. Clark v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 84.

3. — Malice.—Malice is as much an ingredient of this offense as it is of murder. Hodges v. State, 3 App. 470; Daniels v. State, 4 App. 429; Garza v. State, 11 App. 345; Babb v. State, 12 App. 491; Caruthers v. State, 13 App. 339.

Malice is that condition of the mind which shows a heart regardless of social duty and fatally bent on mischief, the existence of which condition is inferred from acts done, or words spoken. Harris v. State, 8 App. 90; McKinney v. State, Id. 626; Bramlette v. State, 21 App. 611, 2 S. W. 765, 57 Am. Rep. 622. See, also, Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444; Boyd v. State, 28 App. 137, 12 S. W. 737; Gallaher v. State, 28 App. 247, 12 S. W. 1087; Ainsworth v. State, 29 App. 599, 16 S. W. 652; Callahan v. State, 30 App. 275, 17 S. W. 257.

Express or implied malice supports a charge of assault to murder. Jackson v. State, 54 App. 605, 114 S. W. 136.

Where one intentionally, wilfully, without justification or excuse, and while his mind was cool enough to realize the nature of his acts, shot another with intent to kill, he was actuated by "malice." Williams v. State, 61 App. 589, 135 S. W. 552.

4. — Grade of assault.—Aggravated assaults generally, see notes to art. 1022 ante.

Elements of manslaughter as determining grade of offense, see notes to arts. 1128-1138, post.

Conviction when offense, of different degree is charged, see C. C. P. arts. 771, 772.

5. — Murder defined.—See art. 1140.

6. — Accidents.—See notes under art. 48 ante.

7. — Insanity and intoxication as defense.—See arts. 39-41, and notes.
 8. — Self-defense.—See notes under art. 1014 and arts. 1104-1110.
 9. Principals.—See notes under art. 74 ante.
 10. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 477. See, also, C. C. P. art. 447, et seq., and notes.

The same particularity is not required in charging this offense as is required in charging murder. State v. Croft, 15 Tex. 576; State v. Jennings, 35 Tex. 503; State v. Wall, Id. 484; Morris v. State, 13 App. 65.

The state can not enter a nolle prosequi for the felony on a defective indictment and proceed only for the lesser offense, after exceptions are overruled. Robinson v. State, 31 Tex. 170.

It may charge an assault on two persons with intent to murder one. State v. Simpson, 32 Tex. 98; or both. State v. Bradley, 34 Tex. 95.

For one insufficient except for simple assault, see State v. Archer, 34 Tex. 646.

For indictments held to be good, see State v. Peters, 36 Tex. 325; James v. State, Id. 645; Bittick v. State, 40 Tex. 117; State v. Walker, Id. 485; Mayfield v. State, 44 Tex. 59; State v. Jennings, 35 Tex. 503; Warfield v. State, Id. 736; Meredith v. State, 40 Tex. 480; Crane v. State, 41 Tex. 494; Johnson v. State, 1 App. 130; Montgomery v. State, 4 App. 140; Gordon v. State, 23 App. 219, 4 S. W. 883.

A slight mistake in the name of the injured party at the conclusion of the indictment is immaterial, if referred to as "the said." Hart v. State, 38 Tex. 382.

"Did commit and assault" will answer, in the absence of special exception. Martin v. State, 40 Tex. 19.

To allege that the intent was to "kill and murder" is not bad. The words "kill and" may be rejected as surplusage. Meredith v. State, 40 Tex. 480.

Although they may constitute a charge for aggravated assault. Young v. State, 44 Tex. 98; State v. Bradley, 34 Tex. 95.

Unnecessary allegations may be rejected. Johnson v. State, 1 App. 130.

Assault to "kill" is not an offense against the law—the charge must be assault with intent to murder. Lockwood v. State, 1 App. 749.

For indictments held bad, see Jones v. State, 21 App. 349, 17 S. W. 424; Bartlett v. State, Id. 500, 2 S. W. 829.

Form No. 357 of Willson's Cr. Forms, for this offense, is approved in Bartlett v. State, 21 App. 500, 2 S. W. 829, and Williams v. State, Id. 256, 17 S. W. 624.

To an indictment for assault with intent to murder it was objected that it was insufficient because it failed to allege that the pistol used in the commission of the offense was charged, and that it failed to allege otherwise the present ability of the accused to inflict an injury. Held, that the objection is unsound; such allegations not being necessary to the sufficiency of an indictment for assault to murder. Bradberry v. State, 22 App. 273, 2 S. W. 592.

Where an indictment charged an assault with intent to commit murder on two persons, and it appeared that there were two assaults, each on one of the persons, a motion to compel the state to elect on which assault it would rely should have been granted. Scott v. State, 46 App. 305, 81 S. W. 950.

To allege that accused, with malice aforethought, did unlawfully assault a certain person "with intent to kill and murder" him, is sufficient. Garza v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 590.

11. — Intent and malice.—It need not allege "of his malice aforethought," State v. Jennings, 35 Tex. 503; Martin v. State, 40 Tex. 19; Lyons v. State, 9 App. 636; Gordon v. State, 23 App. 219, 4 S. W. 883; Mills v. State, 13 App. 487.

The intent to murder must be alleged. State v. Johnston, 11 Tex. 22; State v. Nations, 31 Tex. 561; Bartlett v. State, 21 App. 500, 2 S. W. 829.

The word "feloniously" is not necessary. Posey v. State, 32 Tex. 476; Prim v. State, 32 Tex. 157.

The phrase, "feloniously, unlawfully, wilfully, and with malice aforethought," in connection with the assault, need not be repeated in connection with the intent. Stewart v. State, 4 App. 519.

The indictment must allege expressly whom the defendant intended to kill. It can not be inferred that he intended to kill the person alleged to have been assaulted. Wimberly v. State, 7 App. 328; State v. Nations, 31 Tex. 561.

Intent with malice aforethought to kill is equivalent to intent to murder. Smith v. State, 31 App. 33, 19 S. W. 546.

An indictment alleging that defendant "with malice aforethought," made an assault upon another with intent "to kill" him, sufficiently charges such an assault as, had death resulted, would have been murder, and is not objectionable on the ground that it charges the assault to have been made with intent "to kill" instead of with intent "to murder." Smith v. State, 31 App. 33, 19 S. W. 546.

An indictment charging an assault with intent to murder two persons is not duplicitous. Scott v. State, 46 App. 305, 81 S. W. 950.

12. — Means or instrument used.—It is not necessary to state the instrument or means used in making the assault. The weapon need not be named, or the manner in which it was used or attempted to be used, or that the defendant was in "carrying distance of the assaulted party." State v. Croft, 15 Tex. 575; State v. Peters, 36 Tex. 325; James v. State, Id. 645; State v. Killough, 32 Tex. 78; Bittick v. State, 40 Tex. 117; Martin v. State, Id. 19; Mayfield v. State, 44 Tex. 59; Nash v. State, 2 App. 362; Hines v. State, 3 App. 483; Montgomery v. State, 4 App. 140; Payne v. State, 5 App. 35; Davis v. State, 20 App. 302; Price v. State, 22 App. 110, 2 S. W. 622; Douglass v. State, 26 App. 109, 9 S. W. 489, 3 Am. St. Rep. 459; Mathis v. State, 39 App. 549, 47 S. W. 464; Lacoume v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 626.

A gun need not be alleged as a deadly weapon, if it is averred that it was charged with gunpowder and bullets, and was discharged at the person. State v. Rutherford, 13 Tex. 24.

An indictment for intent to murder need not state the instrument or means made use of by the assailant, to effectuate the murderous intent. State v. Croft, 15 Tex. 575.

But it should show that the gun was charged, or that the accused had a present ability to commit a battery. Robinson v. State, 31 Tex. 170.

Allegations as to the kind of weapon used and the specific circumstances of the act held not to vitiate the indictment even if unnecessary. State v. Killough, 32 Tex. 74.

An indictment for assault with intent to murder need not allege the instrument or means used. Bittick v. State, 40 Tex. 117.

It may charge that defendant shot the pistol in and upon the injured party, instead of the bullets. Crane v. State, 41 Tex. 494.

Indictment need not allege the weapon used. Payne v. State, 5 App. 35.

Where the assault is committed with bowie knife or dagger or in disguise, double punishment can not be inflicted unless the means be alleged. Garcia v. State, 19 App. 389.

13. — Issues, proof and variance.—The attempted use of another weapon than the one alleged may be proved but where the indictment charged that the assault was with a knife, proof that it was with a gun did not sustain the charge. Weaver v. State, 24 Tex. 387.

If the assault is charged to have been made on William R. Rathburn, and the evidence shows only that it was upon a man by the name of Rathburn, the verdict will be set aside. Hardin v. State, 26 Tex. 113.

It may allege that defendant "shot," instead of "assaulted;" and because he missed, makes no variance. Carr v. State, 41 Tex. 543.

Evidence of the official character of the party assaulted is admissible though not alleged. Hodges v. State, 6 App. 615.

Evidence of circumstances constituting aggravated assault is admissible. Moore v. State, 7 App. 14.

The indictment need not allege all of the parties who participated in the assault in order to admit evidence that a party not on trial and not named in the indictment committed the offense, while the accused was present aiding and abetting in its commission. Mills v. State, 13 App. 487.

There is no material variance when the instrument alleged and that proved are of the same nature and character, and capable of inflicting the same kind of wound. A charge of an assault with a gun is sustained by proof that a pistol was used. Douglass v. State, 25 App. 109, 9 S. W. 489, 8 Am. St. Rep. 459.

Where indictment alleged assault committed with a bowie knife and evidence showed it to have been committed with a butcher knife, held, no variance. Hernandez v. State, 32 App. 271, 22 S. W. 972.

Where an indictment charges an assault with intent to murder two persons, the fact that it appears that the assault was by different acts, though in the same transaction, does not amount to a variance defeating the prosecution. Scott v. State, 46 App. 305, 81 S. W. 950.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, leading and suggestive questions should be excluded, referring to the identification of the assaulted party, whose name was not proved, nor any testimony offered that she was named as alleged. Brown v. State, 53 App. 303, 109 S. W. 188.

14. — Conviction of offense included in charge.—See C. C. P. arts. 771, 772 and notes.

Conviction of aggravated assault under indictment charging assault with intent to murder, see article 1022, ante.

Assault with intent to murder includes an aggravated assault, an aggravated assault and battery, a simple assault, and a simple assault and battery, and a conviction may be had for either of those minor offenses under an indictment charging an assault with intent to murder. Bolding v. State, 23 App. 172, 4 S. W. 579; Davis v. State, 20 App. 302; Jones v. State, 21 App. 349, 17 S. W. 424; Peterson v. State, 12 App. 650; Garcia v. State, 19 App. 389; Henderson v. State, 2 App. 89; Bittick v. State, 40 Tex. 117; James v. State, 36 Tex. 645; Gardenheir v. State, 6 Tex. 348; Givens v. State, Id. 344; Johnson v. State, 17 Tex. 515; Reynolds v. State, 11 Tex. 120; Montgomery v. State, 4 App. 140; Moore v. State, 7 App. 14; Posey v. State, 32 Tex. 476; Waddill v. State, 33 Tex. 343; Henderson v. State, 2 App. 88.

Conviction of lower degrees may be had under indictment charging higher, but such conviction will not bar prosecution for murder, if the assaulted party dies. State v. Archer, 34 Tex. 646; James v. State, 36 Tex. 645.

Under an indictment for assault with intent to murder a conviction can not be had for unlawfully carrying arms. Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 36.

Indictment for the higher offense includes assaults to commit inferior grades of the offense. Stapp v. State, 3 App. 138.

The verdict may be for assault with intent to murder, on an indictment for murder. Stapp v. State, 3 App. 138.

A conviction for this offense may be had under an indictment for murder. Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593; Peterson v. State, 12 App. 650; Stapp v. State, 3 App. 138.

An indictment for robbery will not support a conviction of assault with intent to murder. Munson v. State, 21 App. 329, 17 S. W. 251.

Defendant may be convicted of an assault with intent to murder under a charge of burglary with intent to commit murder. Hammers v. State, 29 App. 445, 16 S. W. 99.

15. Evidence.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783 et seq.

The opinion of a witness as to the deadly character of a tumbler, is not admissible; but where the witness testified that he caught the arm of the assailed as he seized a tumbler, he may state why he did so. Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 36.

In a trial for assault with intent to murder, it was held not competent for the defendant to prove that an indictment was then pending against the alleged assaulted party for an assault with intent to murder him, the defendant. McGuire v. State, 10 App. 125.

On a trial for assault with intent to murder, where the character of the weapon has already been fully shown by competent evidence, it is not reversible error to allow a witness to state that, if armed with such a weapon, he would not be "afraid to tackle any man." Ashton v. State, 31 App. 479, 21 S. W. 47.

The burden of showing the pistol unloaded was on defendant. Bedford v. State, 44 App. 97, 69 S. W. 158.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, evidence that some months before the commission of the alleged crime defendant had accidentally discharged a gun so near prosecuting witness as to burn his face with the powder was immaterial. Goebel v. State, 45 App. 415, 76 S. W. 460.

A policeman ordered negroes, of whom accused was one, away from a pool-room, and while doing so, kicked one of them, who was going into the room. In a difficulty arising thereafter between accused and the policeman, the policeman was shot. Held, in a prosecution for the offense, that it was not prejudicial error to exclude the testimony of the negro who was kicked, and others, that he was doing nothing at the time, since it was more of an opinion than a fact. Williams v. State, 54 App. 642, 114 S. W. 802.

Testimony of the prosecuting witness that, shortly before an assault on him, there was a message delivered to him from accused, who was outside the house, was not inadmissible as hearsay or as testimony of a conversation in accused's absence, where the witness was not allowed to state the subject-matter of the message. Henderson v. State, 55 App. 15, 115 S. W. 45.

In a prosecution for shooting a man and wife while in bed, with intent to murder them, where the testimony showed that shots of different sizes were found in the bed clothing as well as in the bodies of the injured persons, testimony was admissible to show that a battered piece of lead was found on the bedclothes the morning after the shooting, though it was not shown that it touched either of the injured persons, nor that it was fired from accused's gun, nor that he had any connection with it. Pemberton v. State, 55 App. 464, 117 S. W. 837.

A conversation between defendant and another, concerning a woman, held inadmissible. Rushing v. State, 62 App. 309, 137 S. W. 372.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, it appeared that defendant, when a peace officer attempted to arrest him as he was riding in a wagon, shot at the officer, and when arrested there was a pistol in the wagon, and cartridges which fitted the pistol were found on defendant's person, and that the cartridges had soft-nosed bullets which had been split and something put into them. Held, that evidence of these facts was admissible. Ricen v. State, 63 App. 89, 138 S. W. 403.

Where it appeared that the two defendants engaged in a shooting affray with four others who they claimed had conspired to kill them, evidence as to the reason why one of these four who had come to town heavily armed went to the bank near defendants' place of business is inadmissible where it did not appear that defendants knew of such reason. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 944.

Witnesses may state for what purpose accused said he wanted a gun when he attempted to borrow it. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 802.

Evidence of what took place between accused and prosecutor the day after the difficulty is properly excluded. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 185.

Evidence that after the difficulty defendants' cousin disappeared and that two horses disappeared at the same time held inadmissible. Maldonado v. State, 70 App. 205, 156 S. W. 647.

Testimony of assaulted party as to effects of wounds held admissible. Luttrell v. State, 70 App. 183, 157 S. W. 157.

As to reputation of the third person accompanying prosecuting witness, see Wilson v. State, 70 App. 627, 158 S. W. 512.

Evidence of the finding of a pistol, shells and bullets held admissible. Forester v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 87.

The evidence sought to be elicited by defendant, charged with firing at S. from ambush, that 20 years before, shortly after the killing of C., with which S. was charged, S. was fired at from ambush by C.'s brother, was too remote in time. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 1192.

16. — Intent and motive.—Statements by accused in the nature of threats are admissible. Brewer v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 622; Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 128; Martin v. State, 71 App. 52, 160 S. W. 968. See, also, Dowell v. State, 58 App. 482, 126 S. W. 871.

Evidence of former trouble between the parties is admissible to show intent or motive. Martin v. State, 41 App. 242, 53 S. W. 850; Carr v. State, 41 Tex. 543; Luttrell v. State, 70 App. 183, 157 S. W. 157.

The declarations of the assaulted party, made after the difficulty, are, ordinarily, incompetent. Meredith v. State, 40 Tex. 480.

The statements of the defendant about the difficulty are not admissible in his behalf unless they come within the rule of res gestæ. Johnson v. State, 1 App. 130. But see Taliaferro v. State, 40 Tex. 523.

Declarations of the injured party held admissible as showing animus. Black v. State, 8 App. 329.

On the trial of a husband for an assault with intent to murder his wife, the testimony of the wife tended to show that he assaulted her because he found an unknown man with her two days prior to the assault. Under the peculiar circumstances of the case, it was held that the defendant should have been permitted to prove that twenty days previous to the assault she had been surprised in an act of criminal intercourse with said unknown man, and that defendant, at the time he assaulted her, was apprised of that fact. Greta v. State, 10 App. 36.

The defendant was a watchman at a railroad freight depot, and in the nighttime fired upon and wounded two persons passing near the depot. Held, that as tending to throw light upon defendant's motive in shooting, and in mitigation, if not justification of the act, he was entitled to prove that there had been a great deal of car-breaking, and stealing from the cars at night at said depot a short time previous to the shooting. Hobbs v. State, 16 App. 517.

Testimony of the assaulted party and his wife and daughter is competent to prove the conduct of defendant prior to the assault. Moore v. State, 31 App. 234, 20 S. W. 563. See same case further on evidence.

Antecedent menaces, quarrels, and grudges may be proved to show malice. Sullivan v. State, 31 App. 486, 20 S. W. 927, 37 Am. St. Rep. 826.

Previous assaults, outrages, threats, and acts of cruel and ill treatment toward his wife, extending back over a period of several years, is proper and legitimate evidence to meet defendant's theory of temporary insanity produced by the recent use of intoxicants, as well as to show malice, motive, ill-will, and intent on his part in making the assault on her. Hall v. State, 31 App. 565, 21 S. W. 368.

For language used by defendant held admissible to show that he was fatally bent on mischief, see Wiseman v. State, 32 App. 454, 24 S. W. 413.

Evidence of an assault on the father of the prosecuting witness held admissible to show malice. Denson v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 150.

On a trial for assault alleged to have been committed with a knife, a piece of iron, and a sharp instrument to the grand jurors unknown, the court admitted evidence that defendant also used an ax handle, but instructed the jury that in order to convict they must find that he committed the assault with one of the weapons alleged in the indictment; held, no error. Foster v. State, 39 App. 399, 46 S. W. 231.

Previous assault may be proved to show animus and motive, and if there have been several so close together as to be res gestæ, they may all be proved. Hamilton v. State, 41 App. 644, 56 S. W. 927.

Where previous assaults cannot be considered for any other purpose than to show motive, court need not limit the testimony in his charge. Hamilton v. State, 41 App. 644, 56 S. W. 928.

Where, in a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, it was shown that both defendant and prosecutrix lived on F.'s farm, and worked for him, and that the assault was occasioned by defendant's jealousy of prosecutrix, arising from F.'s attentions to her, evidence that F. whipped people on the farm, and made them do as he pleased, was inadmissible to show a motive for the assault, or to show the relationship which defendant bore to F. or to prosecutrix. Barnard v. State, 45 App. 67, 73 S. W. 957.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, in which it was the theory of the state that defendant had attempted to kill prosecuting witness in order to conceal a theft by defendant of certain money which had been taken by some one some time before from the house of prosecuting witness at which defendant stayed, evidence that defendant had, during the time the sheriff was investigating as to who took the money, advised him to obtain a search warrant and search the premises was improperly excluded, because tending to rebut the state's theory of motive. Goebel v. State, 45 App. 415, 76 S. W. 460.

Evidence as to the meaning of a common expression used in games is admissible. Davis v. State, 63 App. 484, 141 S. W. 93.

The assaulted party's statement that she did not believe that defendant intended to hurt her is a mere opinion, and not admissible. Rhodes v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 128.

Evidence that prior to the stabbing defendant sought to secure a pistol held competent to show animus and intent. Brewer v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 622.

Evidence of the details of a dispute over an account held properly admitted. Brewer v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 622.

Testimony as to the condition of the ground where the assault occurred, the tracks, etc., found there, held admissible to show whether the persons at this point were waiting for the person assaulted. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1015.

Evidence that the parties were paying attentions to a woman held admissible on the question of motive. Irving v. State, 70 App. 222, 156 S. W. 641.

Matter not shown to have entered into the difficulty is inadmissible to show motive. Maldonado v. State, 70 App. 205, 156 S. W. 647.

A statement by accused that he was going to kill a red-headed, freckled-face s— of a b—, is inadmissible, where there is no evidence pointing the threat towards the assaulted party. Wade v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 215.

17. — Weapons or means used evidence of intent.—See art. 1147, post, and notes.

18. — Circumstances reducing grade of offense.—Testimony held competent on issue of manslaughter. Wadlington v. State, 19 App. 266.

Where the homicide was not committed in the perpetration of a felony, and the circumstances do not show a cruel or evil disposition on the part of defendant, the intent to kill cannot, as a matter of law be inferred from a killing with a stick four feet long and two inches in diameter. Fitch v. State, 37 App. 500, 36 S. W. 584.

To permit the state to show that accused called on complaining witness' wife held error. Comegys v. State, 62 App. 231, 137 S. W. 349.

A petition for a divorce, filed by accused held properly excluded. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 886.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, alleged to have grown out of misconduct by prosecutor concerning defendant's wife, evidence that a year prior to the difficulty defendant filed a suit for divorce was inadmissible. Daniels v. State, 71 App. 662, 160 S. W. 707.

19. — Threats against accused, and character of person assaulted.—See art. 1143 and notes.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to kill a policeman, accused claimed that he was fired upon by one whom he thought to be another with whom he had had a difficulty, and fired back, hitting the policeman. Held, that it was not prejudicial error to refuse to permit accused to testify that such other person was a man of dangerous character, since, the danger being real rather than apparent, it was immaterial what his character was. Williams v. State, 54 App. 642, 114 S. W. 802.

20. — Sufficiency.—Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction. Yanez v. State, 20 Tex. 656; Meredith v. State, 40 Tex. 480; Rideus v. State, 41 Tex. 199; Crane v. State, Id. 494; Carr v. State, Id. 543; Young v. State, 44 Tex. 98; Pugh v. State, 2 App. 539; Stapp v. State, 3 App. 138; King v. State, 4 App. 54, 30 Am. Rep. 160; Collins v. State, 70 App. 24, 156 S. W. 218.

A conviction can not be sustained upon circumstantial testimony, when it appears that positive is not inaccessible. Porter v. State, 1 App. 395.

Where it was proved that the defendant, while drunk, shot at a friend and missed him, the material question for the jury to determine was, whether he shot intending to hit, or whether the act was done in a spirit of drunken bravado. Walker v. State, 7 App. 627.

It is only necessary to prove that the instrument used was capable of producing death in the manner in which it was used. Givens v. State, 35 App. 563, 34 S. W. 626.

Evidence showing the assault to have been committed with a bois d'arc stick, three or four feet long, and about one and a half inches in diameter, held sufficient on the question of deadly weapon. Franklin v. State, 37 App. 113, 38 S. W. 802, 1016.

See opinion for facts adduced on trial for assault with intent to murder upon which the court should have instructed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. Clifton v. State, 39 App. 619, 47 S. W. 642.

Evidence held to warrant an instruction on assault to kill. Cukierski v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 313.

Evidence held to require the submission of the question whether the discharge of a pistol was accidental. Maldonado v. State, 70 App. 205, 156 S. W. 647.

Evidence held to authorize the submission of the question of assault with intent to kill. Luttrell v. State, 70 App. 183, 157 S. W. 157.

Where following a quarrel with another, defendant procured a pistol, and went to the other's house, whereupon both began shooting, there being no evidence that defendant went to adjust the difficulty, an instruction that, if the crime would have been manslaughter had death occurred, defendant could not be found guilty of assault to murder was uncalled for by the evidence. Rogers v. State, 71 App. 271, 159 S. W. 44.

Evidence held to justify a finding of assault to murder by shooting under circumstances showing a reckless disregard of human life. Catlett v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 673.

21. Charge.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 735 et seq.

Charge held erroneous because leaving out of view certain essential principles as applicable to the particular facts. Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 36.

When there is no evidence that defendant provoked the difficulty, the charge must not assume, even remotely or inferentially, that he did. Thomas v. State, 40 Tex. 36.

Whether a weapon, as used, was dangerous to life, is a question for the jury. Sheffield v. State, 1 App. 640.

The charge need not be as specific as in murder. Daniels v. State, 4 App. 429.

A husband on trial for an assault with intent to murder his wife, testified that the cut was purely accidental and was done in trying to push her out of the way to get to her paramour. The court instructed the jury that if they believed he cut her accidentally, in trying to kill her paramour, they should acquit him; held correct. Pena v. State, 38 App. 333, 42 S. W. 991.

An assault and a specific intent to kill are elements which must concur to constitute the offense of assault with intent to murder. Charge of the court, therefore, which in defining the offense extended the intent to "do such serious bodily injury as would probably end in death," constitutes fundamental error. Lehman v. State, 26 App. 322, 9 S. W. 610.

Charge held correct. Wagner v. State, 35 App. 255, 33 S. W. 124; McMillan v. State, 35 App. 370, 33 S. W. 970; Cole v. State, 35 App. 384, 33 S. W. 968.

The defendant was charged with an assault committed upon his wife, the evidence showed that he and his wife were in a room together. The defendant testified that his pistol discharged accidentally. The court instructed the jury that if they had a reasonable doubt as to whether the pistol was discharged accidentally, they would acquit the defendant; held, correct. Wagner v. State, 35 App. 255, 33 S. W. 124.

On a trial for an assault with intent to murder, the court instructed the jury: (1) If the defendant cut and wounded the injured party with a knife, such act would be an assault. (2) If such assault was made wilfully, intentionally, and without lawful justification or excuse, then the same would be made upon what the law terms malice. (3) If said assault in addition to being made with malice, was made with the specific intention to kill by use of such knife, then such act was an assault with intent to murder; held, error. (1) The cutting must have been unlawful. (2) The definition of malice is incorrect, but the defendant might under passion have wilfully, intentionally and without legal justification committed the assault, and yet it would have been without malice. (3) The court apparently assumed facts which should have been left for the jury to determine. Ponton v. State, 35 App. 597, 34 S. W. 950.

The court instructed the jury: "If you are satisfied from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant, without legal justification or excuse, cut R. with a knife and that the knife was a deadly weapon, as above defined, and that defendant so cut said R. not through sudden impulse, passion or resentment, fear or terror; but did so with intent then and there to kill him, and with malice aforethought, as above explained, then you will find him guilty of an assault with intent to murder, etc.;" held, this charge was sufficient. Williams v. State, 38 App. 144, 41 S. W. 626.

The court instructed the jury that if defendant voluntarily discharged his gun into the house, with the intent to kill any person who might be in the way of the shot, this would include an intent to kill the injured party; held, correct. Darity v. State, 38 App. 546, 43 S. W. 982.

Where, in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, there was no fact or combination of facts which constituted adequate cause for defendant's shooting the person assailed, who, the evidence showed, was retreating and seeking to avoid a difficulty at the time the shot was fired, an instruction that any combination of circumstances capable of creating sudden passion, etc., rendering the mind incapable of cool reflection for a time, may be adequate cause, and whether such adequate cause existed was for the jury to determine, but that insulting words or gestures, unaccompanied by violence, would not constitute adequate cause, was not prejudicial to defendant. Jowell v. State, 44 App. 328, 71 S. W. 286.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, an instruction that, if defendant's mind was aroused by prosecutrix shooting at him, this would be adequate cause, was a sufficient instruction on adequate cause, since to shoot at a person with a pistol would not as a matter of law constitute adequate cause, as defined by Pen. Code 1895, art. 702. Lofton v. State, 128 S. W. 384.

Defendant and his wife had had trouble, and defendant had taken the children to his father's home. The wife had gone there with an officer to take them away. Defendant, who was a young man of very weak mind, came up with a gun in his hand, ran between his wife and children, placed the gun between his wife, on one side, and children, on the other, and fired. He could have killed his wife if he had tried. Held to raise an issue whether the shot was not fired merely to frighten the wife, and it was error, in charging on aggravated assault, not to present that phase of the case to the jury. Angel v. State, 45 App. 135, 74 S. W. 553.

In a criminal prosecution, one of the defenses raised was insanity. It appeared that defendant was a young man of very weak mind. Held error to charge the jury "that the question for your determination is not whether defendant is a man of weak mind or strong mind," etc.; the charge being on the weight of the evidence, and having a tendency to withdraw from the jury the question as to the weakness of defendant's mind. Angel v. State, 45 App. 135, 74 S. W. 553.

Where, on a prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder, it appeared that defendant and another were shooting at others who returned the fire, the arms being deadly weapons from the commencement of the shooting, and it was a question which of the parties commenced the shooting, it was error to instruct on excessive force on the part of one attacked. Scott v. State, 46 App. 305, 81 S. W. 950.

An instruction using the words "under the immediate influence of sudden passion," etc., held not erroneous as limiting the defense, and leading the jury to believe that the passion must have arisen when defendant met the prosecutor. Jones v. State, 47 App. 515, 85 S. W. 5.

Evidence held not to authorize an instruction on justification in the protection of defendant's person against any unlawful attack other than one of intent to murder or inflict serious bodily injury. Floyd v. State, 52 App. 103, 105 S. W. 791.

In a trial for assault with intent to murder, it was not reversible error to fail to instruct on reasonable doubt as applied to the grade of offense raised by the evidence, where the court instructed that if the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that accused was guilty of an assault, but had reasonable doubt whether the assault was with malice aforethought with intent to murder, he should be acquitted, and the jury should then consider whether he was guilty of aggravated assault, or was justified in his acts; that every accused person is presumed to be innocent until his guilt is established beyond reasonable doubt; and that if the jury had reasonable doubt as to accused's guilt he should be acquitted. Bryant v. State, 54 App. 65, 111 S. W. 1009.

An instruction that, if one accused of assault to murder shot, but the jury believed or had reasonable doubt that assailed was out of range, accused should be acquitted, was not erroneous as placing the burden on accused to show that assailed was out of range. Jackson v. State, 54 App. 605, 114 S. W. 136.

An instruction that, if the jury believe beyond reasonable doubt that accused unlawfully assaulted another with a deadly weapon, but that through sudden passion induced by adequate cause his mind was incapable of cool reflection, he was guilty of aggravated assault, was not erroneous as placing the burden on accused to show facts reducing the character of the assault, and as requiring the jury to find those facts beyond reasonable doubt. Jackson v. State, 54 App. 605, 114 S. W. 136.

An instruction that, if the jury believed or had reasonable doubt that one accused of assault to murder shot with no intention of inflicting injury, he should be acquitted, was not erroneous as shifting the burden of proof to accused. Jackson v. State, 54 App. 605, 114 S. W. 136.

Where accused seeks to justify an assault because of threatened attack by the use of means calculated to produce death or serious bodily injury, it is the better practice to charge the provision that, when a homicide takes place to prevent murder, etc., if the means used by the person attempting or committing the murder are such as would have been calculated to produce that result, it will be presumed that the person using them designed to inflict the injury. Henderson v. State, 55 App. 15, 115 S. W. 45.

It was not error, in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, to refuse to charge on self-defense, where the evidence did not raise the issue. McDonald v. State, 55 App. 208, 116 S. W. 47.

Where no issue of aggravated assault was raised, a charge that if accused, with a knife, which was a deadly weapon, with malice aforethought, assaulted prosecuting witness with intent to kill and murder her, and if the assault, if any, was not made under the immediate influence of sudden passion produced by an adequate cause, he was guilty, was not objectionable as failing to clearly present the issue of accused's mental condition and confining the jury to a determination of whether the passion was such as anger, rage, and sudden resentment or terror, the court having properly charged on insanity, and was not erroneous, it simply quoting the statute and giving accused the benefit of the doctrine of aggravated assault. McDonald v. State, 55 App. 208, 116 S. W. 47.

An objection to a charge on adequate cause that, if adequate cause existed, the offense would be reduced to aggravated or simple assault, and accused was not given the benefit of a reasonable doubt on that proposition, would not raise the question that the charge did not copy the statute. McDonald v. State, 55 App. 208, 116 S. W. 47.

Accused could not complain of a charge that any condition or circumstance capable of creating, and which does create, sudden rage, etc., rendering the mind at the time incapable of cool reflection, whether accompanied by bodily pain or not, may be adequate cause, on the ground that it did not follow the statute defining adequate cause to be such as would commonly produce a degree of anger, rage, or resentment in a person of ordinary temper, since the charge was broader than the statute. McDonald v. State, 55 App. 208, 116 S. W. 47.

Where, the evidence raises other issues than assault to murder and self-defense, the court should limit malice aforethought and assault to murder by the extenuating circumstances proved. Sanchez v. State, 70 App. 24, 156 S. W. 218.

It is error to give a charge authorizing a conviction of defendants if either made the assault with intent to kill. Maldonado v. State, 70 App. 205, 156 S. W. 647.

The charge must conform to the indictment. Brailford v. State, 71 App. 113, 158 S. W. 541.

Where the injuries result in death, the issue of assault with intent to murder does not arise and should not be submitted. Francis v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 779.

Where all the evidence showed conclusively that defendant's wife died from injuries received at his hands, the court did not err in refusing to submit to the jury the issue of assault with intent to murder. Paschal v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1057.

Accused was not prejudiced by an instruction that it is not enough that the assaulting party believed himself in danger, unless the circumstances are such that the jury can say he had a reasonable ground for such belief, where the court further charged in the same connection that the law guarantees the right to act on apparent danger, and that in judging thereof the law requires the jury to view the danger from defendant's standpoint, and to consider all the circumstances surrounding defendant at the time of the difficulty, though the jury may believe that in fact no real danger existed, and if, at that time, it reasonably appeared to defendant that the prosecutor was about to attack him, defendant would be guilty of no offense. Decker v. State, 124 S. W. 912.

The evidence tended to show that but two or three minutes elapsed between the second assault by prosecutor on accused and the third difficulty, in which accused inflicted the injury relied on; and that in the second difficulty prosecutor knocked accused down, and was beating him about the head and face when he was taken off. Held that, in a prosecution for assault to murder, it was error not to charge on the question of cooling time. Luttrel v. State, 143 S. W. 628.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, an instruction that if defendant stabbed prosecutor, but that prior thereto prosecutor, by his conduct, caused defendant to believe that he was in danger, and that prosecutor was about to draw a knife and throw bricks at defendant, but that the circumstances were not sufficient to warrant a belief on the part of defendant that he was in danger of death or serious bodily harm, but that the conduct of prosecutor aroused in him a sudden passion, anger, rage, or resentment, and under the influence thereof he cut prosecutor, his offense would be aggravated assault, was not erroneous, as requiring the jury to find more than one thing to constitute an adequate cause. Scott v. State, 143 S. W. 610.

An instruction on self-defense, on a trial of assault with intent to murder, that if from the acts of prosecutor, or from his words coupled with his acts, there was created in the mind of accused a reasonable apprehension that he was in danger of losing his life or of suffering serious bodily harm at the hands of prosecutor, accused could defend himself from danger, or apparent danger, as it reasonably appeared to him at the time, viewed from his standpoint, etc., fairly represented the issue. Smith v. State, 143 S. W. 643.

An instruction in a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, that if the jury believed that the accused was guilty of an assault, but had a reasonable doubt whether the assault was upon malice aforethought with intent to murder, then they should acquit him of that offense, and should consider whether he was guilty of an aggravated assault, did not eliminate from the jury's consideration the issue of self-defense. Luttrell v. State, 157 S. W. 157.

In a trial for assault, an instruction on self-defense, stated in general terms, is sufficient, in the absence of request for a more specific instruction. Hoyle v. State, 137 S. W. 355.

A charge held erroneous as being more burdensome than the law, in that it blends the law of self-defense with the law of threats, and requires, to justify the assault, an affirmative finding that the assaulted party made a movement with his hand as if to draw a weapon and used threatening language toward defendant, which would cause him to have a reasonable apprehension of serious bodily injury, or that the assaulted party was about to carry out the threats. Graves v. State, 124 S. W. 676.

22. — Intent and malice.—The exact issue of the defendant's intention must be submitted in charge, when there may be conflicting theories as to the act, and not be assumed inferentially by the court. See instances. Agitone v. State, 41 Tex. 501; Walker v. State, 7 App. 627.

From the use of an instrument likely to produce death, such purpose may be presumed; but this is a presumption of fact, and it is error to charge it as a presumption of law. Agitone v. State, 41 Tex. 501.

The intent is an essential ingredient of the offense and a material inquiry for the jury, under appropriate instructions as to malice and murder. Anderson v. State, 1 App. 730; Lockwood v. State, Id. 749; Agitone v. State, 41 Tex. 501; Walker v. State, 7 App. 627.

The court must charge that to constitute the offense there must have existed in the mind of the defendant at the time of committing the assault, a specific intent to kill the person assaulted. Pruitt v. State, 20 App. 129; Davis v. State, 15 App. 475; White v. State, 13 App. 259; Gillespie v. State, Id. 415; Jobe v. State, 1 App. 183; Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444; Boyd v. State, 28 App. 137, 12 S. W. 737; Gallaher v. State, 28 App. 247, 12 S. W. 1087; Ainsworth v. State, 29 App. 599, 16 S. W. 652; Callahan v. State, 30 App. 275, 17 S. W. 257; Moody v. State, 30 App. 422, 18 S. W. 94.

An essential element of this offense is the specific intent to kill, and it must be embraced in the court's charge to the jury. Hightower v. State, 56 App. 248, 119 S. W. 691, 133 Am. St. Rep. 966.

The court instructed the jury that to constitute an assault with intent to murder, two things must concur: first, an assault, and second, a specific intent to kill; held, error, but in this case not reversible because in another portion of the charge he correctly charged upon malice and applied it to the case. White v. State, 34 App. 153, 29 S. W. 1094.

Where on trial for assault with intent to murder defendant was convicted of aggravated assault, error in charge on intent will not be reversible. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 667.

A charge which defines assault and malice aforethought, and requires a finding beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused made an assault with malice aforethought and intent to kill, is ordinarily sufficient. Luttrell v. State, 70 App. 183, 157 S. W. 157.

The court must charge that the offense is not committed unless malice is proved, so that had death resulted it would have been murder. Daniels v. State, 71 App. 662, 160 S. W. 707.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, there was evidence that prosecutor and accused had been friendly before the difficulty, and so far as either knew there was no animosity against the other. Accused did not attack prosecutor with a knife until the latter had struck him with a post auger, when defendant knocked off the blow and the auger came down on the head of his younger brother. Accused further testified that he could have cut prosecutor to pieces if he had desired to, but that he did not want to kill him at all, but only wanted him to drop the auger. Held, that the court should have charged that, although defendant cut prosecutor with a knife, yet, if he did so without a predetermined intent to kill, but only to disarm him and to defend himself against an attack by prosecutor with the auger, defendant could not be convicted of assault to murder. Scott v. State, 131 S. W. 1072.

An instruction, in a trial for murder, that if the defendant was committing an unlawful assault upon the deceased with a gun without any intention to kill him and caused the death of deceased by shooting, when there was no apparent danger of causing death and no intent to murder, he was guilty of negligent homicide in the second degree, sufficiently presents the issue of whether defendant had the intent to kill. Ford v. State, 142 S. W. 6.

23. — Grade of assault.—See notes under arts. 1003 and 1022, ante, and arts. 1128-1138.

In a proper case the law of aggravated assault should be charged. Marshall v. State, 40 Tex. 200; Taliaferro v. State, 40 Tex. 523; Collins v. State, 6 App. 72. See, also, Daniels v. State, 71 App. 662, 160 S. W. 707.

If the blow was struck in a sudden melee, the distinction between murder and manslaughter must be charged. Williams v. State, 43 Tex. 382.

When the court charges as to the law of manslaughter, but fails to instruct as to what the verdict should be in case the killing would have been manslaughter, it is an erroneous charge. Hodges v. State, 3 App. 470.

When the facts demand a charge submitting the issue of aggravated assault, it is not necessary that the definition of manslaughter be given if the law of aggravated assault is otherwise adequately explained. Wilson v. State, 4 App. 637. Contra this doctrine, Spivey v. State, 30 App. 343, 17 S. W. 546.

The law of manslaughter or aggravated assault need not and should not be charged, when the facts do not raise the issue. Anderson v. State, 15 App. 447; Hines v. State, 3 App. 484; Sims v. State, 4 App. 144; Winn v. State, 5 App. 621; Carr v. State, 41 Tex. 544.

Where the court instructed the jury, "if defendant provoked the difficulty in order to have a pretext to kill C., or do him some serious bodily harm," etc., held, that since the intent to "do serious bodily harm" will not constitute assault with intent to murder, the charge was erroneous and calculated to mislead, in that it did not go further and instruct that if the intent was to do serious bodily harm and not murder, the offense would be aggravated assault, and not assault with intent to murder. Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071.

For test as to whether charge should be given on lesser degree of offense, see Sowel v. State, 32 App. 482, 24 S. W. 504.

On trial for assault with intent to murder, where there was evidence that defendant had been struck by the prosecuting witness in the house of the latter, and left the house, immediately followed by the prosecuting witness, who carried a pistol, and pointed it at defendant, and that defendant turned and shot him, the whole having taken place in a short space of time, it was error for the court to fail to charge on aggravated assault. Slaughter v. State, 34 App. 81, 29 S. W. 161.

On trial for assault with intent to murder, failure to instruct as to aggravated assault and battery is error, where the weapons used in committing the assault were a breast yoke and a rock. Smith v. State, 36 App. 569, 38 S. W. 167.

It is error for the charge to make the circumstances convict of assault with intent to murder, when facts charged in other portions of the charge make only aggravated assault. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 640.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, it appeared that accused fired but one shot, at close range; there being nothing to prevent him from hitting the prosecuting witness. Accused denied that he fired at the witness. Held, that it was error to fail to charge on aggravated assault. Cubine v. State, 44 App. 596, 73 S. W. 396.

On a trial for assault with intent to murder, where the prosecutor had ejected from his house the accused, who went off some distance, and, after getting a pistol, returned and commenced firing on the prosecutor, and where the evidence also raised the issue of aggravated assault, it was error to instruct on the law of provoking the difficulty, since it might tend to procure a conviction of the higher grade of the offense on trial. Ross v. State, 46 App. 451, 80 S. W. 1004.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, where defendant's testimony showed that he acted in self-defense because prosecutor was about to attack him with a dirk or knife, and that he did not shoot with intent to hurt or kill prosecutor, but merely to scare him away, the court should have charged on aggravated and simple assault. Pastrana v. State, 48 App. 224, 87 S. W. 347.

Where, on a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, there was evidence tending to show a lesser degree than such crime, and defendant entered a plea of guilty, it was the duty of the court to instruct on the lesser degree. Jackson v. State, 48 App. 373, 88 S. W. 239.

Failure to instruct on aggravated assault held error. Floyd v. State, 52 App. 103, 105 S. W. 791.

Evidence held not sufficient to justify a charge submitting the theory of aggravated assault by means of a deadly weapon. Barnes v. State, 52 App. 407, 107 S. W. 823.

Where the weapon used by defendant was not of a deadly character, nor the injury inflicted of a serious nature, then simple assault was an issue in the case, and the jury should have been instructed thereon. Barnes v. State, 52 App. 407, 107 S. W. 823.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, where the evidence of prosecuting witness was that the assault was deliberate and unprovoked, and accused testified that he did not attack such witness, there was nothing justifying the submission of a lesser degree of unlawful assault. Colbert v. State, 52 App. 486, 107 S. W. 1115.

An instruction submitting the issue of aggravated assault held erroneous where it confined such issue to the question of passion arising for adequate cause, and did not state that if there was no specific intent to kill and serious bodily injury, or if the assault was committed with a deadly weapon under the circumstances not amounting to an intent to murder, accused would be guilty only of aggravated assault. Henderson v. State, 55 App. 15, 115 S. W. 45.

Under an indictment for this offense, the court, in submitting aggravated assault, may submit either ground that may be developed by the evidence directly growing out of the assault charged, including assault by an adult male on a female, though not specifically alleged in the indictment. Lofton v. State, 59 App. 270, 128 S. W. 384.

24. — Definition of terms.—It is not necessary to explain the distinction between express and implied malice, as the existence of either kind of malice will be sufficient to constitute this offense. Anderson v. State, 1 App. 731; Wilson v. State, 4 App. 637; Stapp v. State, 3 App. 138.

It must explain the term malice. Smith v. State, 1 App. 517; Anderson v. State, Id. 731; Williams v. State, 3 App. 316; Hodges v. State, Id. 470; Ewing v. State, 4 App. 417; Wilson v. State, Id. 637; Johnson v. State, Id. 598; Daniels v. State, Id. 429; Caruthers v. State, 13 App. 339; Hayes v. State, 14 App. 330; Anderson v. State, 1 App. 730; Hines v. State, 3 App. 484.

It must define an "assault" and "murder," not in statutory terms, but sufficiently to inform the jury of the elements of the offense. Smith v. State, 1 App. 516.

Ordinarily the charge should inform the jury what is murder, and what facts constitute that offense. Lockwood v. State, 1 App. 750; Haynes v. State, 2 App. 84.

In a proper case the charge should define the term "deadly weapon." Kouns v. State, 3 App. 13.

It should define or explain what an assault is. Campbell v. State, 9 App. 147; Driskill v. State, 22 App. 60, 2 S. W. 622.

A charge that, "malice is when one with a sedate and deliberate mind and formed design kills another, and such killing is murder," held, erroneous, inasmuch as killing, to constitute murder, must have been committed unlawfully, and under circumstances which do not excuse or justify the act. Pickens v. State, 13 App. 353.

For an inadequate and incorrect definition of malice, see Hayes v. State, 14 App. 330.

The court instructed the jury that if they believed from the evidence that defendant, with malice aforethought, made an assault upon the injured party by shooting him with a gun, with the intent to kill him, etc.; and properly defined malice; held, that it was not necessary under this instruction to define murder. Grayson v. State, 35 App. 629, 34 S. W. 961.

An instrument calculated to produce death or serious bodily injury, is a deadly weapon. Hardy v. State, 36 App. 400, 37 S. W. 434.

"Malice" held sufficiently defined. Williams v. State, 61 App. 589, 135 S. W. 552.

Where defendant shot at another with a pistol, it was unnecessary to define the term "assault." Williams v. State, 61 App. 589, 135 S. W. 552.

In a case of serious bodily injury, the failure to properly define "deadly weapon" is not reversible. Hughes v. State, 62 App. 288, 136 S. W. 1068.

Where, on a trial of an accomplice to an assault with intent to murder, the court defined malice aforethought, and charged that there could be no murder without malice, a charge that if accused, before the commission of the assault by a third person, wilfully and of his malice aforethought advised or encouraged the third person to murder prosecutor, or if accused "promised any reward or favor to" the third person to murder prosecutor, he was guilty, was not objectionable for failing to repeat the words "malice aforethought" in submitting the issue of promising reward and favor to the third person. Vails v. State, 128 S. W. 1117.

25. — Penalty.—The charge must instruct correctly as to the penalty. Howard v. State, 18 App. 348.

On a trial for assault with intent to murder where the accused was convicted of said offense, held, a misstatement by the court as to the penalty for the lesser offense of aggravated assault is harmless. Bell v. State, 31 App. 521, 21 S. W. 259.

An instruction that the penalty be fixed at not less than 2 nor more than 7 years, after the penalty had been changed to not less than 2 nor more than 15 years could not have injured defendant. Leal v. State, 46 App. 334, 81 S. W. 961.

26. Verdict.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 763 et seq.

A verdict "guilty of an attempt to commit an assault" is bad. White v. State, 22 Tex. 608.

"We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of an assault with intent to kill," etc., is not a good verdict. Long v. State, 34 Tex. 566; Sheffield v. State, 1 App. 640.

"Guilty of an assault with attempt to murder" was held sufficient. Hart v. State, 38 Tex. 382.

It is not essential that the verdict should name the offense of which it finds the defendant guilty. A general verdict of "guilty as charged in the indictment," and assessing the punishment is sufficient. Henderson v. State, 5 App. 134; Nettles v. State, Id. 386. See, also, Pierce v. State, Austin term, April 20, 1875 (unreported).

A verdict of guilty of assault with intent to "murder" is not insufficient to sustain a conviction of assault with intent to murder, where it is clear that the jury intended to so convict. Bryant v. State, 54 App. 65, 111 S. W. 1009.

27. Punishment.—Murder, and an assault with intent to murder, are not offenses of the same nature within the meaning of art. 1619 of this Code. Long v. State, 36 Tex. 6.

The sentence should be indeterminate, and, if made for a given term of years, will be reformed on appeal. Bell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1150.

Art. 1027. [606] "Bowie-knife" and "dagger" defined.—A "bowie-knife" or "dagger," as the terms are here and elsewhere used, means any knife intended to be worn upon the person, which is capable of inflicting death and not commonly known as a pocket-knife.

See notes under art. 1026 ante.

Art. 1028. [607] Test on trial.—Whenever it appears, upon a trial for assault with intent to murder, that the offense would have been murder had death resulted therefrom, the person committing such assault is deemed to have done the same with that intent.

Intent as element.—See notes under § 1026 ante.

In order to constitute the offense of an assault with intent to murder, two things must concur: (1) An assault; and (2) a specific intent to kill. Without a simultaneous concurrence of these two constituent elements, there can be no assault with intent to murder. No other intent save the specific one to kill, will be sufficient. If the intent is to maim, rob, rape, or other than kill, it will not be an assault with intent to murder. The intent may be to kill under circumstances which, if death ensued, it would not be murder. Such intent would not constitute the specific intent required in the offense. The preceding article of the Code is applicable only where there exists the specific intent to kill. It is not applicable in any case where such intent does not exist. It simply prescribes a test by which to determine whether there was an offense, and if so, what offense; but in thus affording a test does not dispense with the very gist of the offense, that is, a specific intent to kill. White v. State, 13 App. 259; Harrill v. State, Id. 374; Gillespie v. State, Id. 415; Courtney v. State, Id. 502; Davis v. State, 15 App. 475; Pruitt v. State, 20 App. 129; Long v. State, 36 Tex. 6; Carter v. State, 28 App. 355, 13 S. W. 147.

Art. 1029. [608] With intent to rape.—If any person shall assault a woman with intent to commit the offense of rape, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for any term of years not less than two. [Amend. 1895, p. 104.]

1. Offense.—Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574. See, also, Ford v. State (Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 847.

The force used, or attempted to be used, must be such as might reasonably be supposed sufficient to overcome resistance, considering the relative strength of the parties, and other circumstances of the case. Saddler v. State, 12 App. 194; Brown v. State, 27 App. 330, 11 S. W. 412; Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646; Mooney v. State, 29 App. 257, 15 S. W. 724; Rhea v. State, 30 App. 483, 17 S. W. 931; Duckett v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1177; post, art. 1064.

When used with reference to a human being, the word "female" is synonymous, interchangeable with, equivalent to, and means "a woman." Gibson v. State, 17 App. 577.

Violent or indecent familiarity with the person of a female, with no intent to force her, is only an aggravated assault. Pefferling v. State, 40 Tex. 486; Thompson v. State, 43 Tex. 583; Curry v. State, 4 App. 574; Veal v. State, 8 App. 474.

Slipping into a room of a female at night, with nothing on but a shirt, and pulling her bedclothes, may constitute the offense. Dibrell v. State, 3 App. 456.

The assault must be committed with the specific intent to rape. No other intent will suffice. Thus an assault with intent to have an improper connection with a woman, but without the use of force, and not without the consent of the woman, would not be an assault with intent to rape. Thomas v. State, 16 App. 535; Curry v. State, 4 App. 574; Pefferling v. State, 40 Tex. 486; Sanford v. State, 12 App. 196; Irving v. State, 9 App. 66; McGee v. State, 21 App. 670, 2 S. W. 890; Jones v. State, 18 App. 485; Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646; Veal v. State, 8 App. 474; Thompson v. State, 43 Tex. 583; Robertson v. State, 30 App. 498, 17 S. W. 1068; Power v. State, 30 App. 662, 18 S. W. 552.

This offense is constituted by the use of any threatening gesture, showing in itself, or by words accompanying it, an immediate intention, coupled with an ability to have carnal knowledge of a woman by force, without her consent. Jones v. State, 18 App. 485.

To warrant a conviction under an indictment for an assault and battery with intent to commit rape, the state must prove the actual or attempted use of force. Fraud and threats have no part in such an offense. Pen. Code Tex. arts. 525, 526, 530. Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458.

This offense can only be committed by means of force or attempted force. It can not be committed by threats or fraud. Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574; Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458; Taylor v. State, 22 App. 529, 3 S. W. 753, 58 Am. Rep. 656.

Assault to rape is constituted by the existence of facts which bring the offense within the definition of an assault, coupled with an intention to commit rape; and such an assault can only be committed by means of force or attempted force.

Carroll v. State, 24 App. 366, 6 S. W. 190. See, also, Shields v. State, 32 App. 498, 23 S. W. 893; Passmore v. State, 29 App. 241, 15 S. W. 286; Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574.

Essential that there be an intention to commit the entire crime of rape. Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646.

The assault must be accompanied with the specific intention to rape; with the specific intention to have carnal knowledge of the woman; to have carnal knowledge of the woman without her consent; to have carnal knowledge of the woman by force; to have carnal knowledge of the woman without her consent, and by the use of such force as is sufficient to overcome such resistance as the woman should make. Shields v. State, 32 App. 498, 23 S. W. 893; Passmore v. State, 29 App. 241, 15 S. W. 286.

On trial for assault with intent to commit rape, where it appeared that, after making an indecent proposal to the prosecutrix, defendant took hold of her, and tried to push her down, and she then pushed him away, and escaped, it was error to refuse an instruction that, to find defendant guilty, the jury must believe that, when he took hold of the prosecutrix, he intended to gratify his passion notwithstanding her resistance. Porter v. State, 33 App. 355, 26 S. W. 626.

Assault with intent to rape is established where evidence shows that accused intended, if necessary, to force compliance with his desires. Dockery v. State, 35 App. 487, 34 S. W. 281.

The offense of assault with intent to commit rape is established where the evidence shows beyond a reasonable doubt that accused intended, if it became necessary, to force compliance with his desires regardless of any resistance made by his victim. Dockery v. State, 35 App. 487, 34 S. W. 281.

It must be shown that defendant used such force as would make him guilty of rape had he succeeded. McAdoo v. State, 35 App. 603, 34 S. W. 955, 60 Am. St. Rep. 61.

Pen. Code 1895, art. 1064, defining force as applied to the crime of rape does not limit the rule that, in order to convict for assault with intent to commit rape, the evidence must show, not only an assault, but that defendant intended to have carnal knowledge of the woman, and "to use all his power," notwithstanding any resistance on her part. McCullough v. State (Cr. App.) 47 S. W. 990.

An assault with intent to rape apprehends an intent on the part of defendant to use sufficient force to overcome the utmost resistance. Clark v. State, 39 App. 152, 45 S. W. 696; Id. (Cr. App.) 51 S. W. 1120.

Where the evidence was that defendant entered room of prosecutrix while she was asleep, pulled up her gown and placed his hand upon her privates, when she awoke, it does not sustain charge of assault with intent to rape. Ford v. State (Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 847.

To constitute an assault with intent to rape by force, the consent of the female must be wanting, and the assault by accused must be such as to show a purpose to have intercourse with the female despite her resistance. Cotton v. State (Cr. App.) 105 S. W. 185.

If accused seized and assaulted prosecutrix with intent to have sexual intercourse with her, the crime of assault with intent to rape became complete the moment the assault was actually made, though accused afterwards abandoned the intent to have intercourse with prosecutrix. Ross v. State, 60 App. 547, 132 S. W. 793.

Before one can be convicted of assault with intent to commit rape, it must be found that he had the specific intent to have sexual intercourse with prosecutrix, and a finding that he placed his hands on the girl with her consent with no intention to rape her is no offense. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1065.

One assaulting a female with intent to rape her is guilty although he voluntarily abandons the assault. Duckett v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1177.

That prosecutrix was a woman of loose virtue is no defense. Taff v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 214.

2. — Female under age of consent.—An attempt to have carnal knowledge of one under the age of consent, though with her consent, is an assault with intent to rape. Callison v. State, 37 App. 211, 39 S. W. 300; Mayo v. State, 7 App. 342; Moore v. State, 20 App. 275; Croomes v. State, 40 App. 672, 51 S. W. 924, 53 S. W. 882 (overruling Hardin v. State, 39 App. 426, 46 S. W. 803); Allen v. State, 36 App. 381, 37 S. W. 429; Blair v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 880; Gage v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 565; Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 50.

Under this article one may be convicted of assault with intent to rape a child under 15 years old, though she consented to sexual intercourse, and no force was used, in view of articles 1063, and 1064, and the Code defining an assault as any unlawful violence on the person of another. Croomes v. State, 40 App. 672, 51 S. W. 924, 53 S. W. 882.

Proof that defendant laid violent hands on the child and made all necessary preparations for intercourse with her was sufficient. Alexander v. State, 58 App. 621, 127 S. W. 189.

When the female is under the age of consent she cannot consent to the use of unlawful violence so as to prevent the act from amounting to an assault with intent to rape. Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

Assault with intent to rape a female under age of consent defined. Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

Touching a girl with the intent of having sexual intercourse was an assault, where she was incapable of giving her consent thereto, and the intent to have such intercourse is an intent to injure. Altman v. Eckerman (Cr. App.) 132 S. W. 523.

One unlawfully handling a female under the age of consent may be guilty of assault with intent to rape, though not intending to forcibly ravish her. Hightower v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1168.

3. — Attempt.—See art. 1070 and notes.

In an attempt to rape, the age of the assaulted female has nothing to do with the question; it is mainly a question as to intended use of force. Warren v. State, 38 App. 152, 41 S. W. 635.

We have no law declaring that "an attempt to commit rape is an offense." Art. 1070, post, authorizes the penalty provided in this article where, in a rape case, it appears that the accused attempted the rape though he failed to accomplish it. Warren v. State, 38 App. 152, 41 S. W. 635. And see Taylor v. State, 44 App. 153, 69 S. W. 149.

The offense of attempt to rape is distinct and separate from the offense of assault to commit rape. Shockley v. State, 71 App. 475, 160 S. W. 452.

4. Principals.—See notes under art. 74, ante.

5. Rape defined.—See art. 1063.

6. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 478.

Indictment held to be sufficient. Greenlee v. State, 4 App. 345; Smith v. State, 41 Tex. 352; Gibson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 574; Lights v. State, 21 App. 308, 17 S. W. 428.

The word "ravish" or "ravished" is the essential word in all indictments for rape or for assault with intent to rape; it is indispensable. It means all that is necessary to a charge of rape, and imports not only violence on the part of the man but resistance and want of consent on the part of the woman; and where that word is used in an indictment for rape, it is but repetition to allege that the defendant carnally knew the woman forcibly and against her will. Gibson v. State, 17 App. 577.

It may use the word "attempt" instead of "intent," and it is not necessary to allege that the accused is a male, and that the female was alive and in being, Greenlee v. State, 4 App. 345. See, also, Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 576.

It need not allege that the assaulted party was a woman or female, if that fact appears from all that is stated in the indictment, but it is better to make the direct allegation of the fact. See indictment held sufficient. Battle v. State, 4 App. 595, 30 Am. Rep. 169; Jones v. State, 18 App. 485.

Indictment held bad. Hewitt v. State, 15 App. 80.

Where the assaulted party is alleged to be a "female," this is equivalent to alleging her to be a "woman" and is sufficient. But if the assault was upon a "female under the age of ten years" the indictment should so allege. See an indictment held to be sufficient. Gibson v. State, 17 App. 574. In the case last cited it is said that the word "ravish" or "ravished" is essential in all indictments for rape, or for assault with intent to rape. But this expression seems to be in conflict with all the other decisions, and with later decisions of the same court with reference to this offense. If the word "ravish" or "ravished" is used, however, it implies force, and the want of consent of the assaulted party. Davis v. State, 42 Tex. 226; Williams v. State, 1 App. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 399; Mayo v. State, 7 App. 342; Hewitt v. State, 15 App. 80.

Where the assault is upon a female under the age of ten years, it is unnecessary to allege the means by which the rape was intended to be accomplished, or that it was without the consent of the female. In such case these allegations should not be made. Moore v. State, 20 App. 275.

When the indictment does not allege that the female assaulted was under the age of consent, the state must prove that the assault was made without her consent and with intent to commit rape by force, although it be shown that she was under said age. Moore v. State, 20 App. 275; Mosely v. State, 9 App. 137.

An indictment for an assault with intent to rape a girl under fifteen years of age must allege that she was not the wife of defendant. Edwards v. State, 37 App. 242, 38 S. W. 996, 39 S. W. 368; Dudley v. State, 37 App. 543, 40 S. W. 269.

It is proper to join in an indictment a count charging an assault with intent to rape and one charging an attempt to rape. Reagan v. State, 28 App. 227, 12 S. W. 601, 19 Am. St. Rep. 833.

The indictment for assault with intent to rape closed with the words, "by then and there, without the consent of the said Mrs. L., attempting by force, threats and fraud, to have carnal knowledge of her, the said Mrs. L.," held, that such allegations did not vitiate the indictment. Oxsheer v. State, 38 App. 499, 43 S. W. 335.

An indictment alleging that defendant did make an assault on, and attempt to ravish, N., held insufficient to charge an attempt to rape; art. 1070 excluding the question of assault in an attempt to rape. Taylor v. State, 44 App. 153, 69 S. W. 149.

An indictment averring that defendant did make an assault on and attempt to ravish N. charges an assault with intent to rape; the word "attempt" being equivalent to charging an intent. Id.

An indictment alleging that accused made an assault on a person named, a female under the age of 15 years and not the wife of accused, and that accused had carnal knowledge of the female, is not defective for failing to allege that accused is a male person, and for failing to aver whether the rape was committed with or without the female's consent. Taylor v. State, 50 App. 362, 97 S. W. 94, 123 Am. St. Rep. 844.

Indictment charging an assault with intent to "ravish," held not defective for failure to allege want of consent and intent to commit rape by force. Alexander v. State, 58 App. 621, 127 S. W. 189.

In an indictment for attempt to commit rape, the character of force necessary to be charged is the same as that required in the ordinary rape by force. Wyvias v. State (Cr. App.) 142 S. W. 585.

An indictment for an attempt to commit rape on a female, under the age of 15 years which fails to charge that the attempt was made by force or threat or fraud, is insufficient. Wyvias v. State (Cr. App.) 142 S. W. 585.

An indictment for an attempt to commit rape on a female under the age of 15 years must show an intent to use force which might reasonably be supposed to be sufficient to overcome all resistance. Wyvias v. State (Cr. App.) 142 S. W. 585.

Allegations of force, threats, or fraud are not necessary where the girl is under the age of consent. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1065.

An indictment alleging that accused made an assault upon a woman with the intent by force, threats, and fraud, without her consent, to commit rape upon her, by then and there attempting to ravish her, charges the offense of assault with intent to commit rape and not an attempt to commit rape, notwithstanding the unnecessary allegations charging an attempt. Shockley v. State, 71 App. 475, 160 S. W. 452.

Where an indictment clearly charged the offense of assault with intent to commit rape, the inclusion of unnecessary allegations charging an attempt does not render it uncertain or subject to motion to quash as they can be disregarded as surplusage. Shockley v. State, 71 App. 475, 160 S. W. 452.

7. — Included offenses.—Under an indictment for this offense a conviction may be had for an aggravated or a simple assault. Brown v. State, 7 App. 569; Curry v. State, 4 App. 574. But not for an attempt to commit rape. Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574; Taylor v. State, 22 App. 529, 3 S. W. 753, 58 Am. Rep. 656; Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458; Brown v. State, 7 App. 569; Williams v. State, 1 App. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 399.

See, also, O'Bryan v. State, 27 App. 330, 11 S. W. 443; Massey v. State, 29 App. 159, 15 S. W. 601; Passmore v. State, 29 App. 241, 15 S. W. 286.

8. — Variance.—Where an indictment charged an assault with intent to murder with a bowie knife, and the evidence showed an assault with a butcher knife, there was no variance. Hernandez v. State, 32 App. 271, 22 S. W. 972.

In a prosecution for an assault with intent to rape upon "Dorothy Cohen," where her mother testified that her name was "Dorothy," and it appeared that she went by that name, the fact that she spelled it "Dorthea" did not present a variance. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 50.

9. Evidence.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783 et seq.

It is error to admit, as original evidence, the fact that prosecutrix identified defendant as her assailant. If her testimony were attacked this might be done to support her. Clark v. State, 39 App. 160, 45 S. W. 696.

Statements by the prosecuting witness three-quarters of an hour after reaching home after the assault are not admissible as res gestae. Caudle v. State, 34 App. 26, 28 S. W. 810.

Statements by the prosecuting witness, in regard to the details of the assault, made after the assault, are admissible only in support of her veracity, and not as original evidence. Caudle v. State, 34 App. 26, 28 S. W. 810.

On the trial it was not error to admit the testimony of physicians to the fact that defendant was afflicted with a venereal disease a few days before the alleged assault on the prosecutrix. Allen v. State, 36 App. 381, 37 S. W. 429.

When defendant has testified in his own behalf, he may, on cross-examination, be asked if he has not been previously indicted for assault with intent to rape. Clark v. State, 38 App. 30, 40 S. W. 992.

See opinion for experiments made for defendant after the alleged transaction, which were held admissible in corroboration of defendant's testimony. Id.

A witness was asked whether prosecutrix made any reply when the sheriff asked her to be certain whether defendant was her assailant, to which the witness responded that prosecutrix made no reply, and evidence was then admitted in rebuttal to show that prosecutrix fainted before defendant was taken out of the room, whereby she was unable to respond to the sheriff. Held, that the testimony as to prosecutrix fainting was prejudicial error; the identity of the assailant being one of the questions in issue. Turman v. State, 50 App. 7, 95 S. W. 533.

Where it appearing that prosecutrix broke away from her assailant and ran, it was proper to admit evidence that after she had run about 200 yards she fainted. Turman v. State, 50 App. 7, 95 S. W. 533.

It was not error to permit a witness to testify that the house of witness where the crime was committed was closed when witness left it in the morning, though such testimony might suggest that the accused had committed burglary. Turman v. State, 50 App. 7, 95 S. W. 533.

Where the court excluded a letter written by prosecutrix to her father 10 days after the assault, on the ground that it contained statements that were improper to go to the jury, the error in permitting prosecutrix to testify that the letter was with reference to the assault was not prejudicial to accused. Warren v. State, 54 App. 443, 114 S. W. 380.

Where the theory of the state was that accused and prosecutrix were engaged to be married, and prosecutrix testified that she left home with accused on the night of the assault believing that he would take her to a designated town, and there marry her, and accused claimed that the prosecutrix left home with him for an immoral purpose, and sought to cover up her immoral conduct, a letter written by accused to prosecutrix some months before indicating the existence of an engagement to marry was admissible as corroborative of prosecutrix. Warren v. State, 54 App. 443, 114 S. W. 380.

The testimony of prosecutrix that on accused coming to her house after the commission of the offense, and inviting her to a party, she asked him to leave, was admissible. Warren v. State, 54 App. 443, 114 S. W. 380.

Where the theory of the state was that prosecutrix left home with accused, believing that they would go to a designated town and there marry, while accused claimed that the prosecutrix consented to go with him for an immoral purpose, evidence of the conduct of the prosecutrix on leaving home with accused was admissible. Warren v. State, 54 App. 443, 114 S. W. 380.

Defendant held entitled to show the use of persuasion to induce the girl to testify against him. Liles v. State, 58 App. 310, 125 S. W. 921.

Evidence that shortly after the alleged assault prosecutrix had been pleasant and agreeable toward defendant is admissible. Conger v. State, 63 App. 312, 140 S. W. 1112.

On a trial for assaulting a female under the age of 15 years with intent to rape, evidence that accused was a preacher and that the church where the family of prosecutrix attended and were members was one of his appointments was properly admitted to show why accused knew prosecutrix and how long. Love v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 920.

10. — Intent.—The burden of proof to show the criminal intent is upon the state, and evidence showing a mere possibility of the existence of such intent is insufficient. House v. State, 9 App. 567; Robertson v. State, 30 App. 498, 17 S. W. 1068.

To authorize a conviction the proof must show specific intent. Thomas v. State, 16 App. 535.

Defendant has a right to testify as to his intention (following Berry v. State, 30 App. 423, 17 S. W. 1080). Lewallen v. State, 33 App. 412, 26 S. W. 832.

Where prosecutrix testified that defendant pursued her, finally overtook her, drew a loaded pistol, and pointing it at her, demanded that she submit to his desires, and upon her refusal he left her, an instruction that defendant could not be convicted unless the jury found that he not only committed the assault, but that it was committed with the specific intention of having carnal intercourse with her by force, if necessary, regardless of any resistance made by her, should have been given. Caddell v. State, 44 App. 213, 70 S. W. 91.

To establish an assault with intent to rape by force, a specific intent to rape must be established, and the evidence must show more than the possibility of such intent. Cotton v. State, 52 App. 55, 105 S. W. 185.

Evidence as to what was said and done on the day the offense was alleged to have been committed held admissible. Grimes v. State, 64 App. 64, 141 S. W. 261.

The testimony of prosecutrix that defendant told her to take her pants down, and she would not do so, but he took hold of her and took the pants off, that she tried to keep him from doing so, but could not, and that he unbuttoned his pants, took out his privates, and pressed her to him, etc., when a woman interfered, was admissible on the issue of intent. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 50.

In such prosecution, the length of time the prosecuting witness had been acquainted with the woman who interfered was admissible. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 50.

11. — Other acts, and transactions.—Testimony as to other acts and transactions than the one alleged is admissible for the purpose of corroborating the testimony as to the particular act. Callison v. State, 37 App. 211, 39 S. W. 300.

Where the girl is more than 15 years of age, evidence of prior attempts is inadmissible. Crimes v. State, 64 App. 64, 141 S. W. 261.

12. — Character of female.—General reputation of the female held admissible on the question of want of consent but not to show justification. Favors v. State, 20 Tex. App. 155; Lawson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 292.

Evidence of the prosecutrix's reputation for chastity is admissible. Shields v. State, 32 App. 498, 23 S. W. 893.

When force has been proven beyond question, evidence of the injured female's reputation is worse than idle. Steinke v. State, 33 App. 65, 24 S. W. 909, 25 S. W. 287.

Where accused assailed the reputation of prosecutrix for virtue, the state was properly permitted to show her general reputation for virtue and chastity prior to the alleged offense. Warren v. State, 54 App. 443, 114 S. W. 380.

Where all the evidence showed that prosecutrix did not assent to the attempted act, and there was nothing to justify accused in believing that she would consent, evidence as to her general reputation for chastity was not admissible. Ross v. State, 60 App. 547, 132 S. W. 793.

The admission of evidence as to prosecutrix's reputation for chastity in a rape prosecution is limited to her general reputation and to acts of illicit intercourse with accused alone, so that, in a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, testimony that prosecutrix had at various times had intercourse with another, and that accused had been informed thereof, was not admissible. Ross v. State, 60 App. 547, 132 S. W. 793.

13. — Age of female.—An allegation of the age of the female being descriptive and material must be proven though the state attempts to abandon such allegation. Mosely v. State, 9 Tex. App. 137.

Exclusion of depositions of the girl's parents taken by defendant showing when she was born held error. Caples v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 730.

14. — Physical condition, complaints and declarations of female.—It is a rule of evidence that "it is relevant to prove any circumstance which tends to make the proposition at issue more or less improbable." Under this rule, the condition of an under-garment of the alleged injured female on the first evening and second morning after the alleged rape was properly admitted in evidence. The objection that the examination of the garment was too remote in point of time, goes to the weight rather than the competency of the evidence. Grimmett v. State, 22 App. 36, 2 S. W. 631, 58 Am. Rep. 630.

The mother of the alleged injured female was permitted to testify for the state, to the particulars of the complaint made to her by such party on the morning after the night of the alleged assault. Held, error. Such evidence is admissible only when the statements of the alleged injured party are within the rule of res gestæ. McGee v. State, 21 App. 670, 2 S. W. 890.

The appearance, condition of clothing and marks of violence upon prosecutrix, shortly after the alleged assault, are admissible evidence; but statements made by her when not res gestæ are not admissible. (Following Fefferling v. State, 40 Tex. 487.) Caudle v. State, 34 App. 26, 28 S. W. 810.

Complaints made by the prosecutrix are admissible for the purpose of showing that she was or was not dissatisfied, owing to the length of time and surrounding circumstances, etc. Sentell v. State, 34 App. 260, 30 S. W. 226.

When the details, narrated by the prosecutrix, are a part of the res gestæ, the name of the defendant may be proven by proving her statements in that regard. Id.

On a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, it was proper for the state to show the condition of prosecutrix on the night of the day on which the crime was committed. Turman v. State, 50 App. 7, 95 S. W. 533.

Accused sought a continuance because of the absence of witnesses by whom he claimed he could prove that he was at the place of one of them some time before the crime, and at the place of the other some time after, and that he did not have such clothing as described by prosecutrix. Held, that the testimony was not material; it appearing that accused was near enough at either place to the place of the crime to have been at such places as alleged, and yet have been present at the commission of the crime, and it not appearing what opportunity the witnesses had had of knowing the character of accused's clothing. Turman v. State, 50 App. 7, 95 S. W. 533.

An application for a continuance because of the absence of a witness who would testify that he met a person wearing clothing similar to the clothing described by the prosecutrix as that worn by her assailant, about two miles from the scene of the crime and going toward that place, was properly denied for immateriality of the testimony. Turman v. State, 50 App. 7, 95 S. W. 533.

Failure of prosecutrix to make outcry is a circumstance against the state's case. But the state may show why she made no outcry. Warren v. State, 54 App. 443, 114 S. W. 380.

If she is asked what is the matter and then makes her complaint, it is admissible. Conger v. State, 63 App. 312, 140 S. W. 1112.

Evidence that the prosecutrix was crying when she made complaint is admissible. Conger v. State, 63 App. 312, 140 S. W. 1112.

Where accused has impeached prosecutrix, testimony of complaints by prosecutrix and of her condition immediately after the assault is admissible. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 631.

On a trial for assaulting a girl eight years old with intent to rape while on her way to school in the morning, evidence that on reaching home that evening she complained to her parents was competent. Duckett v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1177.

Testimony of prosecutrix that after the assault she ran and told a certain person all about it and asked her what she should do, and that they phoned the sheriff and officer for help, all in a few minutes after the alleged assault, was admissible as a part of prosecutrix's complaint. Fuller v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1021.

Such evidence was also admissible as a part of an outcry or complaint. Fuller v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1021.

Evidence of the condition of the dress of prosecutrix and her appearance when reaching home, about two hours after the assault, is admissible. Calyon v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 591.

15. — Sufficiency.—Evidence held insufficient. Ellenburg v. State, 36 App. 139, 35 S. W. 989; Caldwell v. State, 14 Tex. Cr. 171; Johnson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 565; Mathews v. State, 34 App. 479, 31 S. W. 381; Dockery v. State, 35 App. 487, 34 S. W. 281; Pless v. State, 23 App. 73, 3 S. W. 576; Carroll v. State, 24 App. 366, 6 S. W. 190; Passmore v. State, 29 App. 241, 15 S. W. 286; Shepard v. State, 34 App. 35, 28 S. W. 816; Marshall v. State, 34 App. 22, 36 S. W. 1062; Allen v. State, 36 App. 381, 37 S. W. 429; Laco v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 176; Tittle v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 202; Clark v. State, 39 App. 153, 45 S. W. 696; Hancock v. State (Cr. App.) 47 S. W. 465; Draper v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 655; Cotton v. State (Cr. App.) 105 S. W. 185; Collins v. State, 52 App. 455, 107 S. W. 852; Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129; Blair v. State, 60 App. 363, 132 S. W. 358; Wyvlas v. State, 64 App. 236, 142 S. W. 585; Love v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 920; Duckett v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1177.

Evidence held to sustain conviction. Yawn v. State, 37 App. 205, 38 S. W. 785, 39 S. W. 105; Edwards v. State, 37 App. 242, 38 S. W. 996, 39 S. W. 368; Dibrell v. State, 3 App. 456; Doyle v. State, 5 App. 442; Grimmett v. State, 22 App. 36, 2 S. W. 631, 58 Am. Rep. 630; Stout v. State, Id. 339, 3 S. W. 231; House v. State, 9 App. 53; Sanford v. State, 12 App. 196; Peterson v. State, 14 App. 162; Thomas v. State, 16 App. 535; Johnson v. State, 17 App. 565; Jones v. State, 18 App. 485; Moore v. State, 20 App. 275; Pless v. State, 23 App. 73, 3 S. W. 576; Stout v. State, 22 App. 339, 3 S. W. 231; Bourland v. State, 49 App. 197, 93 S. W. 115; White v. State, 60 App. 559, 132 S. W. 790; Ross v. State, 60 App. 547, 132 S. W. 793; Conger v. State, 63 App. 312, 140 S. W. 1112; Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 631; McWhirter v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 189; Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 576; Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1065; Love v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 920; Duckett v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1177; Calyon v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 591; Allen v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 88.

Evidence held insufficient where it did not show the intent. Jones v. State, 18 App. 485; Thomas v. State, 16 App. 535; Robertson v. State, 30 Tex. App. 498, 17 S. W. 1068.

Evidence held insufficient where it showed consent. Moore v. State, 20 App. 275.

A conviction for assault with intent to rape is not supported by evidence showing an attempt to rape by fraud. Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574.

Where prosecutrix testified as to the number of times she was assaulted, and the manner thereof, without contradiction, and that she told her mother and brother of the first assault, which testimony both mother and brother denied, and the sheriff who arrested defendant testified to finding him in hiding, and that defendant asked what it took to constitute rape and made other incriminating remarks, and the testimony of prosecutrix was corroborated, the verdict of conviction will not be disturbed. Shepard v. State, 34 App. 35, 28 S. W. 816.

Evidence that defendant, while on horse-back, struck the prosecutrix with a whip, and made an insulting proposition to her, but did not get off the horse, though he might have done so, or use any other force, will not sustain a conviction of assault with intent to rape. Mathews v. State, 34 App. 479, 31 S. W. 381.

The charge should define rape or its constituents. Fulcher v. State, 41 Tex. 233.

The charge should define an assault. Hemanus v. State, 7 App. 372.

The court should not instruct that when the assault has been proved, it rests with defendant to show accident or innocent intention. Thomas v. State, 16 App. 535; Jones v. State, 13 App. 1; Curry v. State, 4 App. 574.

Unless an issue of limitation of the offense be raised by the evidence, the charge may omit to instruct in regard thereto. Unlike the offense of rape, this offense is not barred until the lapse of three years after its commission. Moore v. State, 20 App. 275.

The court should instruct the jury that there must have existed in the mind of the defendant, at the time of the alleged assault, a specific intent to commit rape by force. Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458; McGee v. State, Id. 670, 2 S. W. 890; Irving v. State, 9 App. 66.

The court should instruct the jury as to the character of the force necessary to constitute the crime. Brown v. State, 27 App. 330, 11 S. W. 412. Shields v. State, 32 App. 498, 23 S. W. 893.

If defendant is a minor, the court should instruct the jury that if they believed the accused assaulted the prosecutrix but did not intend to use the degree of force necessary to overcome resistance, they should find him guilty of simple assault. Porter v. State, 33 App. 385, 26 S. W. 626.

It was error to refuse to charge that if the jury did not believe that, under the circumstances, defendant intended to have carnal knowledge of the prosecutrix, notwithstanding her resistance, they might find defendant guilty of simple assault, but not of assault to rape. Porter v. State, 33 App. 385, 26 S. W. 626.

Where a man is prosecuted for an attempt to carnally know a child of tender years, that the effort to penetrate the private parts of the prosecutrix with his male organ is evidenced only by the irritation of the parts of the child, testified to by her mother and physicians, and by the fact that defendant communicated to her a venereal disease, does not entitle defendant to a charge on circumstantial evidence. Allen v. State, 36 App. 429, 37 S. W. 429.

It is error to charge that, as a matter of law, the uncorroborated testimony of a prosecutrix in a case of assault with intent to rape is sufficient to convict. Cox v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 157.

It is not error to fail to instruct that the prosecutrix must be shown to have resisted with all her power when the proof shows that her resistance was successful. Barnett v. State, 42 App. 302, 62 S. W. 766.

Refusal of instruction on proof required as to want of consent and on presumption as to consent held error in view of the evidence. Perez v. State, 48 App. 225, 87 S. W. 350.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, where accused admitted his presence with the girl, there was no necessity for a charge on alibi. Herbert v. State, 49 App. 72, 90 S. W. 633.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, it is not proper to prove more than one act, and where more than one act is proved without objection, it is the duty of the court to limit the consideration of the jury to one specific act. Henderson v. State, 49 App. 511, 93 S. W. 550.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, where the court in defining assault added that the injury intended might be either bodily pain, constraint, or sense of shame, or other disagreeable emotion of the mind, this was error, unless the evidence suggested aggravated assault. Henderson v. State, 49 App. 511, 93 S. W. 550.

Where, on a trial for rape on a female 11 years of age, there was evidence indicating that the offense was committed by the consent of the prosecutrix and circumstances showing lack of penetration, an instruction on assault with intent to commit rape, that the injury intended might be either bodily pain, constraint, or sense of shame, or other disagreeable emotion of the mind, was not erroneous. Taylor v. State, 50 App. 362, 97 S. W. 94, 123 Am. St. Rep. 844.

Where, on a trial for rape on a female 11 years of age, the prosecutrix testified that accused raped her, and the evidence indicated that it was done with her consent, and circumstances showed a lack of penetration, it was proper to charge an assault with intent to rape. Taylor v. State, 50 App. 362, 97 S. W. 94, 123 Am. St. Rep. 844.

Where the jury might find from the evidence that the assault was made to recover a ring which defendant had given the prosecutrix, the court erred in refusing to charge that if the jury should so find, and the prosecutrix screamed only to prevent defendant getting possession of the ring, or if they should have a reasonable doubt as to such matters, it would be their duty to acquit defendant. Freeman v. State, 52 App. 500, 107 S. W. 1127.

Where there was evidence of acts of illicit intercourse between defendant and the prosecutrix, tending to show that the assault was made for the purpose of having intercourse with her with her consent, and evidence showing that the assault was made only to secure from the prosecutrix a ring which defendant had previously given her, it was error to refuse to submit the issue of aggravated assault. Freeman v. State, 52 App. 500, 107 S. W. 1127.

It was error to charge that testimony of illicit intercourse between defendant and prosecutrix and of the latter's reputation for virtue was admitted, not in justification, but on the issues of the credibility of prosecutrix as a witness, and as to whether it was necessary that she should be forced to the embraces of defendant, since evidence impeaching the general reputation of a prosecutrix for chastity is always admissible, to raise a presumption of her consent, and as bearing upon defendant's intent. Freeman v. State, 52 App. 500, 107 S. W. 1127.

Where the indictment alleged assault by force, threats, and fraud, and the proof excluded any question of fraud, and presented mainly an assault to rape by force, held that a charge that rape is the carnal knowledge of a woman without her consent, obtained by force, threats, or fraud, or the carnal knowledge of a woman so mentally diseased as to have no will to oppose the act, or the carnal knowledge of a female under the age of 15 years, while including matters having no relation to the offense charged in the indictment or the evidence adduced, was not prejudicial in view of the other instructions given. Railsback v. State, 53 App. 542, 110 S. W. 916.

Such charge is not objectionable by the omission of the word "will." Conger v. State, 63 App. 312, 140 S. W. 1112.

Charge held not objectionable as authorizing a conviction where the injury intended is merely constraint or a sense of shame. Conger v. State, 63 App. 312, 140 S. W. 1112.

An instruction that if defendant assaulted prosecutrix, then under the age of 15 years, by putting his hands and arms around her, and fondling her with the specific intent to have carnal knowledge of her, without defining the word "assault," fully presented the issues. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1065.

Charge held to have correctly covered every phase of the case. Duckett v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1177.

A request to charge that accused was not guilty unless the assault was made with specific intent to have carnal knowledge without consent, held covered by the charge given. Blair v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 779.

In a prosecution for assaulting a female under the age of 15 years with intent to rape, an instruction requiring the jury to find, to justify a conviction, that accused used the kind of force necessary to place prosecutrix in the position and attitude in which the act of sexual intercourse could have been performed with her, is properly refused. Love v. State, 150 S. W. 920.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, where the evidence showed that after a struggle defendant abandoned his efforts, it was not error, after the court had charged on the theory of the state that such assault was made with the specific intent to commit rape by force and the defendant's theory traversing this contention, to refuse a special instruction that if the jury believed the defendant had formed the intention of committing the assault, but that before it was made he had abandoned the former intent, he would not be guilty. Stewart v. State, 133 S. W. 1051.

17. — Grade of assault.—See notes to Penal Code art. 1022, subd. 5, and C. C. P. art. 735.

The court should charge the law of aggravated assault when the evidence raises that issue. McGee v. State, 21 App. 670, 2 S. W. 890.

When there is evidence of violent and indecent familiarity with the person of the prosecutrix without her consent, the court should charge the law of aggravated assault. Shields v. State, 32 App. 498, 23 S. W. 893.

Prosecutrix testified that defendant requested her to have sexual intercourse with him, but she refused, and that he then threw her on the floor several times, and tried to tear her clothes. No marks of violence were shown to have been made on her, and she testified that she screamed only once or twice during the half an hour tussle, though several people lived near by. Held, that it was error to refuse to charge as to aggravated assault, where defendant denied any assault, since defendant may not have entertained the intent at the time to accomplish his purpose at all hazards. McCullough v. State (Cr. App.) 47 S. W. 990.

Where the testimony of prosecutrix showed that the unquestioned purpose of accused was to have carnal intercourse, while he denied that he made the attempt at all, no charge on aggravated assault was necessary. Herbert v. State, 49 App. 72, 90 S. W. 653.

The evidence raised the issue of aggravated assault and battery, requiring the court to charge thereon. Taylor v. State, 50 App. 362, 97 S. W. 94, 123 Am. St. Rep. 844.

One indicted for assault with intent to commit rape and convicted of aggravated assault cannot complain of the failure to require a finding as to the offense charged, where the issue of an aggravated assault was the only one submitted. Halsell v. State, 53 App. 510, 110 S. W. 441.

Art. 1030. [609] With intent to rob.—If any person shall assault another with the intent to commit the offense of robbery, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 495.]

Robbery defined.—See arts. 1327 and 1328, post.

Intoxication as defense.—See art. 41 and notes.

Principals.—See notes under art. 74, ante.

Offense.—Where defendant, while walking in the evening with prosecutor and his companion, who were strangers to him, stepped out in front of them, presented a gun, and ordered them to "Halt! Throw up your hands!" and, on prosecutor and his companion taking flight, shot after them, such facts established an assault committed with the specific intent to rob. Long v. State, 47 App. 296, 83 S. W. 384.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 480, 481, 932.

It is not necessary to allege specifically that the assault was made with the intent to appropriate the property of the injured party to his own use. It is a sufficient allegation of intent to allege that the assault was made with "intent to rob." Morris v. State, 13 App. 65.

The indictment need not describe the property which defendant intended to take or allege that he intended to deprive the owner of some of the value thereof. Crumes v. State, 28 Tex. App. 516, 13 S. W. 868, 19 Am. St. Rep. 853.

The word "attempt" is more comprehensive than the word "intent," and when used in an indictment for assault with intent to rob, it sufficiently charges the intent. Runnells v. State, 34 App. 431, 30 S. W. 1065. See also Atkinson v. State, 34 App. 424, 30 S. W. 1064.

And further on indictment, see Clark v. State, 41 App. 641, 56 S. W. 621.

Evidence.—Testimony to the effect that witness had intrusted money and business to defendant, and that she would still be willing to trust him, is inadmissible. Anglely v. State, 35 App. 427, 34 S. W. 116.

Testimony of a witness that he saw, on the day the robbery was committed, two men answering the description of defendant and his co-defendant, in the vicinity of the robbery, is admissible. Id.

Two persons were charged in separate indictments for the same offense, and the evidence shows a peculiar track made by one; held, admissible against both. Id.

Also when it was shown that one of the parties had a red handkerchief, it was competent to show that the red handkerchief was found in defendant's co-defendant's pocket. Id.

Evidence that the assaulted party had no money is inadmissible unless defendant proposes to prove that he knew that the assaulted party had no money. Id.

Evidence by a police officer that he found a pistol in the street where the assault occurred the morning after the assault is admissible. Wingate v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1078.

— Sufficiency.—Evidence held to sustain conviction. Hernandez v. State, 60 App. 382, 131 S. W. 1091; Scott v. State, 12 App. 31; Williams v. State, 37 App. 147, 38 S. W. 202; Wingate v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1078; Drysdale v. State, 70 App. 273, 156 S. W. 685.

Evidence held insufficient, see Robertson v. State, 10 App. 602; Sanders v. State, 53 App. 613, 111 S. W. 157.

Charge.—Where defendant "held up" prosecutor and his companion with a gun in the evening, and, on their taking to flight, shot at them, he was not entitled to a charge on aggravated assault in a prosecution for assault with intent to rob. Long v. State, 47 App. 296, 83 S. W. 384.

Art. 1031. [610] In attempt at burglary.—If any person, in attempting to commit burglary, shall assault another, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Id., p. 171.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 482.

Art. 1032. [611] Ingredients of the offense.—An assault with intent to commit any other offense is constituted by the existence of the facts which bring the offense within the definition of an assault, coupled with an intention to commit such other offense, as of maiming, murder, rape or robbery.

Offense.—One who tried to detach a shirt stud, but was prevented, held not guilty of assault with intent to rob. Walters v. State, 56 App. 10, 118 S. W. 543.

"Assault," defined. Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

An assault to commit another offense is an assault that is intended to be or is in its nature the procuring or instrumental means of accomplishing or carrying out the completed act. Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

Assault with intent to rape female under age of consent defined. Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

Indictment.—The proper construction, with reference to an indictment, of the preceding article is, that it is only necessary in charging an assault with intent to commit some other offense, to allege an assault, coupled with an intention to commit such other offense, naming it, without alleging the constituent elements of such other offense. Wherever the offense is defined, as is the case in murder, rape, robbery, etc., in charging assaults with intent to commit these offenses, it is only necessary to charge the assault, and the intent to commit the offense, naming such offense. Morris v. State, 13 App. 65; Martin v. State, 40 Tex. 19; Bittick v. State, 40 Tex. 117; Long v. State, 10 App. 186; State v. Croft, 15 Tex. 575; Lights v. State, 21 App. 308, 17 S. W. 428. But see Hewitt v. State, 15 App. 80.

OF MAIMING, DISFIGURING AND CASTRATION

Art.	Art.
1033. "Maiming" defined.	1036. Punishment.
1034. Punishment.	1037. "Castration" defined.
1035. "Disfiguring" defined.	1038. Punishment.

Article 1033. [612] "Maiming" defined.—To maim is to wilfully and maliciously cut off or otherwise deprive a person of the hand, arm, finger, toe, foot, leg, nose or ear; to put out an eye or in any way to deprive a person of any other member of his body.

Offense.—A willful act is one committed with an evil intent, with legal malice, without reasonable ground for believing the act to be lawful, and without legal justification. A malicious act is one committed in a state of mind which shows a heart regardless of social duty, and fatally bent on mischief; a wrongful act, intentionally done without legal justification or excuse. Bowers v. State, 24 App. 542, 7 S. W. 247, 5 Am. St. Rep. 901; Key v. State, 71 App. 642, 161 S. W. 121.

The under lip is a member of the body, but not being specifically designated as such in the statute, its being so is a question of fact for the jury, under proper instruction, and must not be assumed in the charge. Biting off a portion of it is not necessarily maiming, but the jury should determine whether it was so injured as to substantially deprive the party of the lip at the time. If such an injury was inflicted the offense of maiming is complete, though the member was put back to its proper place and afterward grew there. Slattery v. State, 41 Tex. 619.

To constitute the offense of maiming, the act must be both willful and malicious. Bowers v. State, 24 App. 542, 7 S. W. 247, 5 Am. St. Rep. 901.

Biting off a portion of a member of a person's body does not necessarily constitute maiming. In all such cases the jury should be left, under proper instructions, to determine whether or not the injury was such as substantially to deprive the injured party of the member. Bowers v. State, 24 App. 542, 7 S. W. 247, 5 Am. St. Rep. 901.

A front tooth is a "member of the body." When the evidence describes the tooth as a "corner tooth," a question of fact for the determination of the jury is raised, i. e., whether the tooth was or was not a "front tooth." High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488.

"Maiming" is to deprive a person of some member of his body. Cooper v. State, 60 App. 411, 132 S. W. 355.

The injury must be done wilfully and maliciously, and, if it arises from a sudden attack without premeditated design, the offense is not maiming. Key v. State, 71 App. 642, 161 S. W. 121.

The whole member need not be detached, but a severance of only a small part, which does not disfigure the person and can only be discovered by close examination, is not an offense. Key v. State, 71 App. 642, 161 S. W. 121.

If a maiming occurred under the immediate influence of sudden passion aroused by adequate cause, such as an assault, the issue of simple assault by accused would not be in the case, though accused only intended to commit a simple assault. Key v. State, 71 App. 642, 161 S. W. 121.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 483.

An indictment which, otherwise correct, charges the defendant with wilfully and maliciously shooting off the toe of another, is sufficient to charge this offense. Indictment for this offense will not sustain a conviction for assault to murder. Davis v. State, 22 App. 45, 2 S. W. 630.

A charge of maiming and disfiguring carries with it a charge of assault with intent to maim and disfigure. Pool v. State, 59 App. 482, 129 S. W. 1135.

Evidence.—Evidence held sufficient to support conviction. Davis v. State, 22 App. 45, 2 S. W. 630.

See the statement of the case for evidence which, tending to show that the act of the accused was neither wilfully nor maliciously done within the legal significance of those terms, was erroneously excluded by the trial court, such evidence being competent upon the question of intent. Bowers v. State, 24 App. 542, 7 S. W. 247, 5 Am. St. Rep. 901.

Charge.—The charge should explain the terms "wilfully" and "maliciously." Davis v. State, 22 App. 45, 2 S. W. 630; Bowers v. State, 24 App. 542, 7 S. W. 247, 5 Am. St. Rep. 901.

An instruction assuming that the under lip was a member of the body and determining as a matter of law that biting off only a portion of the under lip would be tantamount to biting off the whole of the under lip, held erroneous as invading the province of the jury. Slattery v. State, 41 Tex. 619.

Art. 1034. [613] Punishment.—If any person shall commit the offense of maiming, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 171.]

Art. 1035. [614] "Disfiguring" defined.—To disfigure is to wilfully and maliciously place any mark, by means of a knife or other instrument, upon the face or other part of the person.

Offense.—The word "instrument" includes any means by which one may disfigure, such as carbolic acid. Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 567, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1132.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 484.

A charge of maiming and disfiguring carries with it a charge of assault with intent to maim and disfigure. Pool v. State, 59 App. 482, 129 S. W. 1135.

Evidence.—Evidence held to justify a conviction of disfiguring by throwing carbolic acid. Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 567, 40 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1132.

Art. 1036. [615] Punishment.—If any person shall disfigure another, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, or by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 484.

Art. 1037. [616] "Castration" defined.—To castrate is to wilfully and maliciously deprive any person of either or both, or any part of either or both of the testicles.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 485.

Art. 1038. [617] Punishment.—If any person shall commit the offense of castration, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than five nor more than fifteen years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 485.

CHAPTER FOUR A

HAZING

Art.	Art.
1038a. Offense defined.	1038d. Penalty imposed on teachers and
1038b. Teachers and school officers shall not encourage or permit hazing.	school officers.
	1038e. Other laws not affected.
1038c. Penalty imposed on students.	1038f. Repeal.

Article 1038a. Offense defined.—That it shall be unlawful for any student of the University of Texas, of the A. & M. College of Texas, of any normal school of Texas, or of any other State educational institution of this State, to engage in what is commonly known and recognized as hazing, or to encourage, aid or assist any other person thus offending.

For the purpose of making plain what is meant herein by "hazing," same is defined as follows:

(a) Any willful act by any one student alone or acting with others, directed against any other student of such educational institution, done for the purpose of submitting such student made the subject of the attack committed, to indignity or humiliation, without his consent.

(b) Any willful act of any one student alone, or acting with others, directed against any other student of such educational institution, done for the purpose of intimidating such student attacked by threatening such student with social or other ostracism, or of submitting such student to ignominy, shame, or disgrace among his fellow students, and acts calculated to produce such results.

(c) Any willful act of any one student alone, or acting with others, directed against any other student of such educational institution, done for the purpose of humbling, or that is reasonably calculated to humble the pride, stifle the ambition, or blight the courage of such student attacked, or to discourage any such student from longer remaining in such educational institution or to reasonably cause him to leave such institution rather than submit to such acts.

(d) Any willful act by any one student alone, or acting with others, in striking, beating, bruising or maiming; or seriously offering, threatening, or attempting to strike, beat, bruise, or maim, or to do or seriously offer, threaten, or attempt to do physical violence to any student of any such educational institution, or any assault upon any such students made for the purpose of committing any of the acts, or producing any of the results to such student as defined in subdivisions (a), (b), or (c) of this Section. [Act 1913, p. 239, ch. 117, § 1.]

Art. 1038b. Teachers and school officers shall not encourage or permit hazing.—It shall be unlawful for any teacher, instructor, member of any faculty, or any officer or director, or a member of any governing board of any of such educational institutions to knowingly permit, encourage, aid, or assist any student in committing the offense of hazing, or to willfully acquiesce in the commission of such offense, or to fail to promptly report his knowledge or any reasonable information within his knowledge of the presence and practice of having [hazing] in the institution in which he may be serving, to the executive head or governing board of such institution, and any act of omission or commission shall be deemed “hazing” under the provisions of this Act. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1038c. Penalty imposed on students.—Any student of any of the said State educational institutions of this State who shall commit the offense of hazing, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars, or shall be confined in the county jail for not less than ten days nor more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1038d. Penalty imposed on teachers and school officers.—Any teacher, instructor, or member of any faculty, or officer or director of any such educational institution who shall commit the offense of hazing shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars or not more than five hundred dollars, or shall be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of not less than thirty days or not more than six months or by both such fine and imprisonment, and in addition thereto, shall be immediately discharged and removed from his then position or office in such institution, and shall thereafter be ineligible to reinstatement or re-employment as teacher, instructor, member of faculty, officer, or director in any such State Educational institution for a period of three years. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1038e. Other laws not affected.—It is especially provided in this Act that nothing herein shall be construed as in any manner affecting or repealing any of the laws of this State respecting homicide, or murder of any degree, manslaughter, assault with intent to murder, or aggravated assault. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1038f. Repeal.—That all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith, as hereinafter [hereinbefore] especially provided, be and the same are hereby in all things repealed. [Id., § 6.]

CHAPTER FIVE

FALSE IMPRISONMENT

--	--

Article 1039. [618] "False imprisonment" defined.—False imprisonment is the wilfull detention of another against his consent, and where it is not expressly authorized by law, whether such detention be effected by an assault, by actual violence to the person, by threats or by any other means which restrains the party so detained from removing from one place to another as he may see proper.

Arrest without warrant.—See C. C. P., arts. 259-264.

Offense.—It is a sufficient imprisonment to stop a man from going in any direction he may think proper, and it is not necessary that he be detained in any particular spot, so he is prevented from moving from place to place, or in the direction he wishes to go. Woods v. State, 3 App. 204; Harkins v. State, 6 App. 452; Herring v. State, 3 App. 108; Maner v. State, 8 App. 361; Staples v. State, 14 App. 136.

The posse comitatus is protected by the officer's warrant, although he is not personally present, and the guilt or innocence of the party arrested is immaterial; but the rule is different with a mere volunteer. Kirbie v. State, 5 App. 60.

The gravaman of this offense consists in the wilfull detention of another against his consent, and where it is not expressly authorized by law. Maner v. State, 8 App. 361. It is the wilfull and unauthorized detention of another against his consent, whether such detention be accomplished by actual violence, or by force of threats. Herring v. State, 3 App. 108; Woods v. State, Id. 204. See, also, Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733; Staples v. State, 14 App. 136.

Unavoidable delay of a peace officer in taking bail for a prisoner is not false imprisonment. Cargill v. State, 8 App. 431.

Nor is a reasonable delay, and confinement in a calaboose when necessary. Beville v. State, 16 App. 70.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 486-488.

See, also, C. C. P., art. 470 and notes.

The indictment must allege the detention to have been without lawful authority, and the conclusion "contrary to the statute," etc., will not supply the omission of such allegation. Redfield v. State, 24 Tex. 133.

Indictment charging false imprisonment by means of threats held good. Herring v. State, 3 App. 108.

It must allege the mode in which the detention was effected,—as by actual violence, assault, threats, or the like,—but need not further particularize it. And if threats be the mode alleged, it need not be averred that they were seriously made, or of such a character as to operate on the person threatened, or to inspire him with a just fear of injury to his person, reputation, or property. Maner v. State, 8 App. 361; Staples v. State, 14 App. 136.

Evidence.—The state makes a prima facie case by proving the imprisonment for imprisonment is presumed to be unlawful. It devolves upon the defendant to show that it was lawful. Kirbie v. State, 5 App. 60.

The decision just cited is expressly qualified in a subsequent case, where it is held that the defendant, in mitigation of the penalty, was entitled to prove that he arrested the injured party, believing, and having reason to believe, that such party was guilty of crime; and that legal proceedings for crime had been instituted against him, and the nature of such proceedings. This evidence was not admissible in justification, but in mitigation of the offense. C. C. P. arts. 259 to 264 inclusive, prescribes all the circumstances which justify an arrest without warrant, and under other circumstances than these an arrest without warrant is illegal. The fact that the defendant, when he made the arrest, was accompanied by, and acted in concert with an officer, in such case, affords no justification. Staples v. State, 14 App. 136.

Evidence held insufficient. Boyd v. State, 11 App. 80; McClure v. State, 26 App. 102, 9 S. W. 353.

When the alleged detention was by means of threats, it need not be proved that the threats were express, or that the injured party made any effort to escape the detention. Herring v. State, 3 App. 108; Woods v. State, Id. 204.

Evidence held to support conviction. Herring v. State, 3 App. 108; Woods v. State, Id. 204; Harkins v. State, 6 App. 452; Giroux v. State, 40 Tex. 97.

Evidence to prove menaces made by the injured party while he was detained by the accused, is not admissible. Harkins v. State, 6 App. 452.

The authority to make an arrest need not be shown to be express. If, from all the circumstances, the law would authorize the arrest, by a fair construction, defendant would not be guilty, because the power was not expressly given. Beville v. State, 16 App. 70.

As to evidence, see, also, Walker v. State, 45 App. 443, 8 S. W. 647; Smythe v. State, 51 App. 408, 103 S. W. 899.

Charge.—It was error to instruct the jury that the punishment must be both fine and imprisonment. Redfield v. State, 24 Tex. 133.

For a correct charge as to what constitutes detention, see Woods v. State, 3 App. 204.

For a correct charge as to the rights of a person summoned by an officer to assist in an arrest, see Kirbie v. State, 5 App. 60.

It was held error to charge that an officer's authority, in order to justify an arrest, must be express. Beville v. State, 16 App. 70.

For a state of facts on which the court should have given a requested charge to the effect that where the alleged injured party was attempting to release by force a person whom the defendant, as city marshal, had arrested for being drunk on the streets and disturbing the peace, the defendant had the right, without warrant, to arrest such alleged injured party, also, and confine him in jail. Moseley v. State, 23 App. 409, 4 S. W. 907.

For erroneous refusal of charge, see McClure v. State, 26 App. 102, 9 S. W. 353.

Art. 1040. [619] Assault of violence same as in assault and battery.—The assault of violence may be such as is spoken of in defining the offense of assault and battery.

Art. 1041. [620] What impediment necessary.—The impediment must be such as is in its nature calculated to detain the person and from which he can not by ordinary means relieve himself. [P. C., 514.]

Art. 1042. [621] Threat, effect of.—The threat must be such as is calculated to operate upon the person threatened and inspire a just fear of some injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person, reputation or property of another; and the jury are to consider the age, sex, condition, disposition or health of the person threatened in determining whether the threat was sufficient to intimidate and prevent such person from moving beyond the bounds in which he was detained.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 487.

Art. 1043. [622] What detention is not.—It is not an offense to detain a person in the cases and for the object mentioned in article 1014 as justifying the use of force, but, whenever it is assumed as a justification that such circumstances existed, it must be shown also that the detention was necessary to effect any of the objects set forth in said article.

Justification for arrest.—See notes under art. 1039, ante.

Arrest and detention for theft held not justified. S. H. Kress & Co. v. Lawrence (Cr. App.) 162 S. W. 448.

Art. 1044. [623] Punishment.—Any person who shall be guilty of the offense of false imprisonment shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, and may be confined in the county jail not exceeding one year.

Mitigation of punishment.—Evidence that defendant made the illegal arrest because the person arrested had stabbed another recently, held admissible in mitigation of penalty. Staples v. State, 14 Tex. App. 136.

Discretion of jury.—An instruction requiring the jury to inflict punishment of both fine and imprisonment if they found defendant guilty of false imprisonment, held erroneous; the question whether they will impose imprisonment or not resting within their discretion. Redfield v. State, 24 Tex. 133.

Art. 1045. [624] Detention after discharge on habeas corpus.—If any officer or other person shall hold or detain in any manner any one who has been ordered to be discharged by any court or judge, upon the hearing of a writ of habeas corpus, he shall suffer double the punishment prescribed in the preceding article.

Art. 1046. [625] Refusal to allow consultation with counsel.—If any officer or other person having the custody of a prisoner in this state shall wilfully prevent such prisoner from consulting or communicating with counsel, or from obtaining the advice or services of counsel in the protection or prosecution of his legal rights, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not less than sixty days nor more than six months, and by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars. [Act Nov. 15, 1864, p. 15.]

Consultation with counsel.—In this case it was held that the refusal to allow counsel of one charged with incest to interrogate the girl was violative of the right to confer with counsel. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 331.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 488, 489.

CHAPTER SIX OFFENSES AGAINST MINORS

Art.		Art.
1047.	Enticing minor from legal custody.	1050c.	Same; permitting inspection of premises.
1048.	Sell, etc., pistol, dirk, etc., to minor.	1050d.	Repeal.
1049.	Sell, etc., cigarette or tobacco to minor.	1051, 1052.	[Repealed.]
1050.	Employment in dangerous or immoral occupation.	1053.	Permitting minor to remain in pool room, etc.
1050a.	Same; permitting inspection of premises.	1054.	Selling or giving intoxicating liquor to minor.
1050b.	Employment in quarries or mines.	1055.	Encouraging, contributing, etc., to the delinquency or dependency of child.

Article 1047. [625a] Enticing minors from legal custody.—Any person in this state who shall knowingly entice or decoy any minor in the state away from the custody of his parent or guardian, or person standing in the stead of such parent or guardian, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by fine not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. In all cases where charitable and benevolent institutions have established homes for dependent orphans of their deceased members, and the person legally entitled to the guardianship of such orphans surrenders them to such homes for support, maintenance and education, such institutions, under their agencies, rules and regulations, shall have and exercise over such orphans all the rights of natural guardians, as standing in the place of their parents. [Acts of 1893, p. 114.]

Offense.—In order to constitute this offense it is necessary that the minor be knowingly decoyed or enticed from the parent. Cummings v. State, 36 App. 398, 37 S. W. 435.

The evidence showed that the minor, a boy nineteen years old, had been hiring out and working for himself for several years, and he testified that he left home of his own accord and was not enticed or persuaded by defendant; held, the evidence was entirely insufficient to support the verdict. Id.

Giving moral and active assent to the minor leaving home is not sufficient. Cockrell v. State, 71 App. 543, 160 S. W. 343, 48 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1001.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 490.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to support conviction. Cockrell v. State, 71 App. 543, 160 S. W. 343, 48 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1001.

Art. 1048. Sell, etc., pistol, dirk, etc., to minor.—If any person in this state shall knowingly sell, give or barter, or cause to be sold, given or bartered, to any minor, any pistol, dirk, dagger, slung-shot, sword-cane, spear or knuckles made of any metal or hard substance, bowie knife or any other knife manufactured or sold for the purpose of offense or defense, without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor, or of some one standing in lieu thereof, he shall be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than ten nor more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. And during the time of such imprisonment such offender may be put to work upon any public work in the county in which such offense is committed. [Act 1897, p. 221.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 245.

Art. 1049. Sell, etc., cigarette or tobacco to minor.—Any person who shall sell, give or barter, or cause to be sold, given or bartered, to any person under the age of sixteen years, or knowingly sell to any other person for delivering to such minor, without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor, any cigarette or tobacco in any of its forms, shall be fined not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1899, p. 237.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 313.

Art. 1050. Employment in dangerous or immoral occupations.—Any person, or any agent, or any employé of any person, firm or corporation who shall hereafter employ any child under the age of fifteen years to labor in or about any manufacturing or other establishment using dangerous machinery, or about the machinery in any mill or factory, or in any distillery, brewery, or to labor in any capacity in the manufacture of goods for immoral purposes, or where their health may be impaired or morals debased, or shall send any such child to any disorderly house, bawdy house, or assignation house, or having the control of such child, shall permit him or her to go to any such house, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and each day the provisions of this Act are violated shall constitute a separate offense. [Act 1903, p. 40, ch. 28, repealed; Act 1911, p. 75, ch. 46, § 1, superseding art. 1050, revised Pen. Code.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 331.

Art. 1050a. Same; Permitting inspection of premises.—Such person, firm or corporation, or any agent thereof, shall give free access at all times to the Commissioner of Labor Statistics of the State of Texas, and his deputies, for the inspection of their premises and of the methods employed, to insure compliance with the provisions of the foregoing Section. [Act 1911, p. 76, ch. 46, § 1a.]

Art. 1050b. Employment in quarries or mines.—Any person, agent, or any employé of any person, firm or corporation, who shall hereafter employ any child under the age of 17 years to labor in or about any quarry or mine shall be punished as provided for in Section 1 of this Act [art. 1050]. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1050c. Same; permitting inspection of premises.—Such person, firm or corporation, or any agent thereof, shall give, free access at all time to the Commissioner of Labor Statistics of the State of Texas, and his deputies, for the inspection of their premises and of the methods employed, to insure compliance with the provisions of the foregoing Section [art. 1050b]. [Id., § 2a.]

Art. 1050d. Repeal.—Chapter 28 of the General Laws of the Twenty-eighth Legislature, Regular Session, being "An Act to regulate the employment of children in factories, mills, mines, breweries, manufacturing establishments and other establishments using machinery, and to provide penalties for the violation of the same," be and the same is hereby, expressly repealed, and any and all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this Act, be and the same are hereby repealed. [Id., § 3.]

Arts. 1051, 1052. [Repealed. See arts. 1050–1050d].

Cited, Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Tyler Box Lumber Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 149 S. W. 233.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 332, 333.

Art. 1053. Permitting minor to remain in pool room, etc.—If any owner, lessee or manager of any billiard hall, pool hall, ten pin alley or bowling alley, or any employé therein, whether intoxicating liquors are sold in such place or not, shall permit any person under the age of twenty-one years to enter such place of business and remain therein for any length of time, without the consent of the parent of such minor, or some one standing in their place and stead, or shall permit any person under twenty-one years of age to play billiards or pool, or roll on any ten pin or bowling alley in such place of business without the consent of the parent of such minor, or some one standing in their place and stead, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1897, ch. 154, § 1; Act 1905, p. 105.]

Offense.—One is guilty under this law if he permits a minor to play pool in premises which he has rented, whether he knows that he is a minor or not. Rainbolt v. State, 49 App. 427, 93 S. W. 737.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 300-303.

Evidence.—Accused has a right to show as a defense that he acted in good faith and on a mistake of fact as to the parent's consent. Simpson v. State, 58 App. 253, 125 S. W. 398.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Stark v. State, 71 App. 560, 160 S. W. 454.

Art. 1054. Selling or giving intoxicating liquor to minor.—Any person who shall knowingly sell or give or deliver, or cause to be sold, given or delivered, or be in any way interested in the sale, gift or delivery of any spirituous, vinous, malt or intoxicating liquors to any person under the age of twenty-one years without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such person who is under the age of twenty-one years, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined therefor not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars; and any person who is agent for or employed by any express company or other common carrier, or who, as agent for or employé of any other person, firm or corporation, delivers or causes to be delivered any spirituous, vinous or intoxicating liquors to any other person under the age of twenty-one years, whether consigned to such person or some other person, without the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor or person under the age of twenty-one years, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished, upon conviction therefor, by a fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1909, p. 119.]

Explanatory.—The revisers of the Penal Code, when they inserted Acts 1909, p. 119, and expanded the language so as to include "sales" in addition to "gifts" and "deliveries" of liquor, seem to have overlooked the later act passed at the first extra session of the 1909 legislature (Acts 1909, p. 307, § 19). This later act affixes a different penalty to the act of a retail liquor dealer in selling, giving, or delivering intoxicating liquor to a minor. The later act was included in the revision as art. 622, ante. The revisers again carried Acts 1909, p. 119, into the Penal Code as art. 593, but in its original form.

Offense.—This article applies to all persons other than licensed retail liquor dealers and express companies and common carriers. Art. 593 applies to express companies and carriers, and art. 622 applies to retail liquor dealers. Talley v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 255.

It is unlawful to give a minor intoxicating liquor in local option territory, as well as elsewhere, without the parent's consent. Hogan v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 601.

The sale is not made "knowingly" where the minor has the appearance of a man of age, and represents himself as being over 21. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 612.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 310.

Finding defendant guilty of an offense different from that for which he had been indicted is error. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 612.

Indictment held sufficient. Andrada v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 910.

Evidence.—Knowledge of minority may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Hogan v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 601.

Evidence held to sustain conviction. Hogan v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 601.

Testimony of minor as to the sales is admissible. Andrada v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 910.

Charge.—For charge held to go beyond information, see Walker v. State, 57 App. 172, 122 S. W. 395.

Art. 1055. Encouraging, contributing, etc., to the delinquency or dependency of child.—In all cases where any child shall be a "delinquent child" or a "neglected or dependent child," as defined in the statutes of this state, the parent or parents, legal guardian or persons having the custody of such child, or any person responsible for, or who, by any act, encourages, causes or contributes to the delinquency or dependency of such child, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not to exceed one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for any period not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. The court may impose conditions on any person found guilty under this law, and, so long as such person shall comply therewith to the satisfaction of the court, the judgment imposed may be suspended. [Act 1907, p. 209.]

Habeas corpus.—The statute for proceeding against infants as delinquent children does not create a criminal offense, so that a judgment on a trial under it is not appealable, but any remedy is by habeas corpus. Mills v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 492.

CHAPTER SEVEN

OF KIDNAPING AND ABDUCTION

Art.	Art.
1056. "Kidnaping" defined.	1059. "Abduction" defined.
1057. Punishment.	1060. Of female under fourteen.
1058. If person kidnaped be actually removed.	1061. Offense complete, when.
	1062. Punishment.

Article 1056. [626] "Kidnaping" defined.—When any person is falsely imprisoned for the purpose of being removed from the state, or if a minor under the age of seventeen years, for the purpose of being concealed or taken from the lawful possession of a parent or guardian, such false imprisonment is "kidnaping." If the person kidnaped be under the age of fifteen years, it is not necessary that there should be force in order to constitute the offense of kidnaping. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, pp. 171-2.]

Offense.—When defendant took female under mistake as to her age, and she went with him willingly, there is no offense. Mason v. State, 29 App. 24, 14 S. W. 71. There must be a wilful detention of a person, without such person's consent, and without authority of law. Castillo v. State, 29 App. 127, 14 S. W. 1011.

Where female goes with defendant of her own accord, and testimony shows defendant believed her to be over seventeen years old, it is neither kidnaping nor abduction. Mason v. State, 29 App. 24, 14 S. W. 71; Castillo v. State, 29 App. 127, 14 S. W. 1011.

To constitute the offense of "kidnaping," the detention must be against the consent of the person detained, and the fact that the statute provides that, if the person kidnaped is a female under 15 years of age, force is not an essential element of the offense, does not dispense with her non-consent. Castillo v. State, 29 App. 127, 14 S. W. 1011; Olivarez v. Same (App.) 14 S. W. 1012.

— At common law.—Kidnaping as defined at common law is the forcible abduction and conveying away of a man, woman or child from their own country and sending them to another. Click v. State, 3 Tex. 282.

To constitute the crime of kidnaping at common law, it was essential that the asportation or conveying away be against the will and without the consent of the party injured and without any lawful warrant or authority therefor. Click v. State, 3 Tex. 282.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 491, 492.

See, also, C. C. P. art. 470, and notes.

As to indictment for kidnaping at common law, see Click v. State, 3 Tex. 282.

Evidence.—The prosecuting witness testified that she was only 13, and under the prescribed age, at the time of the alleged offense; but it was shown that she told defendant before the alleged offense that she was 18, and above the required age, and that she had given birth to a child. All the other evidence tended strongly to show that she was a well-developed young woman at the time in question. Held that, the evidence being clear that she consented to go with defendant, a conviction could not be sustained. Mason v. State, 29 App. 24, 14 S. W. 71.

Evidence that defendant delivered the person arrested to soldiers, who placed him in jail, is admissible. Nunuz v. State, 70 App. 481, 156 S. W. 933.

A witness may state that he saw defendants when they had the person in charge, though the witness did not see the actual capture. Nunuz v. State, 70 App. 481, 156 S. W. 933.

Prosecution of persons wrongfully brought into state.—See notes to C. C. P. art. 1101.

Art. 1057. [627] Punishment.—The punishment for kidnaping shall be imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, or fine not exceeding two thousand dollars.

Art. 1058. [628] If person kidnaped be actually removed.—If the person so falsely imprisoned be actually removed out of the state, the punishment shall be imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 491.

Art. 1059. [629] "Abduction" defined.—"Abduction" is the false imprisonment of a woman with intent to force her into a marriage or for the purpose of prostitution.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 493-495.

Art. 1060. [630] Of female under fourteen.—If a female under the age of fourteen be taken for the purpose of marriage or prostitution from her parent, guardian or other person having the legal charge of her, it is abduction, whether she consent or not, and although a marriage afterward take place between the parties.

Offense.—The offense is committed if the man takes a girl under 14 from her parents to have intercourse with her individually. Lopez v. State, 70 App. 71, 156 S. W. 217.

And the offense is committed though the girl is merely taken from her parents without having intercourse with her. Lopez v. State, 70 App. 71, 156 S. W. 217.

A girl under fourteen could not be an accomplice. Mason v. State, 29 App. 24, 14 S. W. 71.

If the person kidnapped be a female under the age of 15 years, force is not necessary to abduction. Castillo v. State, 29 App. 127, 14 S. W. 1011.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 493-495.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to warrant a finding that the girl was under 14 at the time of the abduction. Lopez v. State, 70 App. 71, 156 S. W. 217.

Art. 1061. [631] Offense complete, when.—The offense of abduction is complete if the female be detained as long as twelve hours, though she may afterwards be relieved from such detention without marriage or prostitution.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 493-495.

Art. 1062. [632] Punishment.—Any person who shall be guilty of abduction shall be punished by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars. If, by reason of such abduction, a woman be forced into marriage, the punishment shall be confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years; and, if by reason of such abduction, a woman be prostituted, the punishment shall be confinement in the penitentiary not less than three nor more than twenty years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 172.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 493, 494.

CHAPTER EIGHT

RAPE

Art.		Art.
1063.	"Rape" defined.	1068.	Defendant must be over fourteen.
1064.	Definition of "force."	1069.	Punishment.
1065.	What threat sufficient.	1070.	Conviction may be had for attempt.
1066.	"Fraud" defined.
1067.	Penetration only need be proved.

Article 1063. [633] "Rape" defined.—Rape is the carnal knowledge of a woman without her consent, obtained by force, threats or fraud, or the carnal knowledge of a woman other than the wife of the person having such carnal knowledge with or without consent, and with or without use of force, threats or fraud, such woman being so mentally diseased at the time as to have no will to oppose the act of carnal knowledge, the person having carnal knowledge of her knowing her to be so mentally diseased; or the carnal knowledge of a female under the age of fifteen years, other than the wife of the person, with or without her consent, and with or without the use or force, threats or fraud. [Amended by Act April 13, 1891, p. 96; amend. 1895, p. 79.]

| 26. — Female's condition, complaints and declarations. | |

1. Validity of law.—This article, as amended by acts of 1891, is constitutional. Nichols v. State, 32 App. 391, 23 S. W. 680.

2. Offense.—For definition, see Taylor v. State, 24 App. 299, 6 S. W. 42; Tomlin v. State, 25 App. 676, 8 S. W. 931; Johnson v. State, 27 App. 163, 11 S. W. 106; Brown v. State, 27 App. 330, 11 S. W. 412; Wood v. State, 28 App. 61, 12 S. W. 405; Reagan v. State, 28 App. 227, 12 S. W. 601, 19 Am. St. Rep. 833; Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646; Mooney v. State, 29 App. 257, 15 S. W. 724; Lincecum v. State, 29 App. 328, 15 S. W. 818, 25 Am. St. Rep. 727; Rhea v. State, 30 App. 483, 17 S. W. 931; Rodgers v. State, 30 App. 510, 17 S. W. 1077; Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

3. — Force.—See notes under art. 1064 for definition of force.

Force is a necessary element where the female is above the age of consent. Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

4. — Capacity to consent.—In Baldwin v. State, 15 App. 275, it was said that the Code did not recognize mental incapacity. See Rodriguez v. State, 20 App. 542. This law was again amended by the acts of 1895 raising the age of consent to fifteen years.

As to mental incapacity, see Caruth v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 778; Lopez v. State, 30 App. 487, 17 S. W. 1058, 28 Am. St. Rep. 935; Ellis v. State, 33 App. 86, 24 S. W. 894.

Consent defeats the charge of rape, where the party is capable of giving consent. Altman v. Eckerman (Civ. App.) 132 S. W. 523.

5. — Female under age of consent.—It is rape for one to have carnal knowledge of a female under the age of consent not his wife, with or without her consent and with or without the use of force, threats or fraud. Croomes v. State, 40 App. 680, 51 S. W. 924, 53 S. W. 882; Exon v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 336; Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129; Altman v. Eckerman (Civ. App.) 132 S. W. 523; Whitehead v. State, 61 App. 558, 137 S. W. 356; Kinch v. State, 70 App. 649, 156 S. W. 649; Turner v. State, 72 App. 649, 163 S. W. 705; Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 729. See, also, Gage v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 565.

Intercourse with other men is no defense. Shoemaker v. State, 58 App. 518, 126 S. W. 887; Foreman v. State, 61 App. 56, 134 S. W. 229.

The fact that the prosecutrix made no outcry, she being under age of consent, is not fatal to a conviction. Hamilton v. State, 36 App. 372, 37 S. W. 431.

When the female is under eleven years of age the defense of the existence of a common law marriage between the parties is untenable. Hardy v. State, 37 App. 55, 38 S. W. 615.

Every act of carnal intercourse with a girl under fifteen years of age is a separate offense, and conviction for one is not a bar to prosecution of another. Griffey v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 52.

Representations of the child to accused as to her age are immaterial. Zachary v. State, 57 App. 179, 122 S. W. 263.

It is no defense that defendant in good faith believed prosecutrix was over 15 years. Pilgrim v. State, 59 App. 231, 128 S. W. 128. See, also, Martin v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 579.

No presumption of common-law marriage where female is under 15. Wofford v. State, 60 App. 624, 132 S. W. 929.

"Common-law marriage" defined. Wofford v. State, 60 App. 624, 132 S. W. 929.

6. — Female as accomplice.—See notes under art. 79.

A female under age of consent, though she give her consent to the intercourse, is not an accomplice. Hamilton v. State, 36 App. 372, 37 S. W. 431.

A female under fifteen years of age with whom one has carnal intercourse cannot be an accomplice in a prosecution for rape, based on such intercourse. Danley v. State (Cr. App.) 71 S. W. 959.

7. Limitations.—See C. C. P. arts. 226, 228 and notes.

8. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 478, 496, 497, 626.

See, also, C. C. P. art. 447 et seq. and notes.

The indictment may charge that the rape was effected by all three of the means named in the statute, force, threats, and fraud, the charge being made conjunctively. Sharp v. State, 15 App. 171; Lawson v. State, 17 App. 292; Cooper v. State, 22 App. 419, 3 S. W. 334; Nicholas v. State, 23 App. 317, 5 S. W. 239.

An indictment for rape on a female under 15 years of age must allege that she is other than the wife of accused. Rice v. State, 37 App. 36, 38 S. W. 801; Bice v. State, 37 App. 38, 38 S. W. 803; Edwards v. State, 37 App. 242, 38 S. W. 996, 39 S. W. 368. See, also, Dudley v. State, 37 App. 543, 40 S. W. 269.

If the prosecutrix is over 15 years the indictment need not allege that she was not his wife. Caidenas v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 980. See Belcher v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 519.

The word "felonious" need not be used in the indictment. Robertson v. State, 31 Tex. 36.

"Female" and "woman" are synonymous, and the indictment may allege that the party ravished was a "female," although the statute uses the word "woman." Robertson v. State, 31 Tex. 36; Gibson v. State, 17 App. 574.

The words "rape" and "ravish" can not be used interchangeably, the word "ravish" being the proper and indispensable one to use in charging this offense. The word "ravish" implies both force and the want of consent of the woman, but the word "rape" does not. Davis v. State, 42 Tex. 226; Lewitt v. State, 15 App. 80; Gibson v. State, 17 App. 574; Mayo v. State, 7 App. 342; Williams v. State, 1 App. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 399. See Robertson v. State, 31 Tex. 36; Jones v. State, 18 App. 485; Alexander v. State, 58 App. 621, 127 S. W. 189.

Indictment held to be good. Williams v. State, 1 App. 90; O'Rourke v. State, 8 App. 70; Cornelius v. State, 13 App. 349; Sharp v. State, 15 App. 171.

Indictment alleging that without the consent and against the will of the female defendant did "violently and feloniously rape, ravish, and carnally know her," held, sufficient. Walling v. State, 7 App. 625. See, also, Gutierrez v. State, 44 Tex. 587.

To charge a rape by force there must be an allegation that the accused obtained the carnal knowledge by force and that he ravished the female. Elschlep v. State, 11 App. 301.

The indictment need not allege that the accused was an adult male, nor that he was over the age of fourteen years when the offense was committed. Word v. State, 12 App. 175; Cornelius v. State, 13 App. 349; Davis v. State, 42 Tex. 226.

It is not essential that the indictment should allege the character of the force, or specify the threats used to accomplish the rape. It is sufficient to charge in general terms that the rape was accomplished by force, or by threats, or by fraud, or by all those means together. Cooper v. State, 22 App. 419, 3 S. W. 334.

Where the offense is committed upon a woman, the indictment need not allege that she was over the age of consent, but where it was committed upon a female under that age the indictment must so allege. It is questionable whether these two classes of rape can be joined in the same count in an indictment. Nicholas v. State, 23 App. 317, 5 S. W. 239.

Indictment for ravishing woman so mentally diseased as to have no will to oppose the act need not allege want of consent. Caruth v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 778.

The indictment charged that defendant did "ravish and have carnal," with the prosecutrix; held, the word ravish is equivalent to the words carnal intercourse, and the indictment was sufficient. Fields v. State, 39 App. 488, 46 S. W. 814.

Further as to indictment, see Thompson v. State, 33 App. 472, 26 S. W. 987; Owens v. State, 35 App. 345, 33 S. W. 875; Brinster v. State, 12 App. 612; Wiggins v. State, 47 App. 338, 84 S. W. 821; Altman v. Eckerman (Civ. App.) 132 S. W. 523.

9. — Female under age of consent.—Where the female is alleged to be under the age of consent, allegations of force, threats, or fraud, or the want of the female's consent, are unnecessary and should not be made. Davis v. State, 42 Tex. 226; Moore v. State, 20 App. 275. See, also, Nicholas v. State, 23 App. 317, 5 S. W. 239.

As to rape of girl under fifteen, see, also, Gutierrez v. State, 44 Tex. 587; Moseley v. State, 9 App. 137; Mayo v. State, 7 App. 342; Gibson v. State, 17 App. 574; Rodgers v. State, 30 App. 510, 17 S. W. 1077.

10. — Fraud.—Indictment charging fraud in impersonating the prosecutrix husband must allege that prosecutrix was a married woman, and not the wife of defendant, and it is better to allege the husband's name. Payne v. State, 38 App. 494, 43 S. W. 515, 70 Am. St. Rep. 757. But in Franklin v. State, 34 App. 203, 29 S. W. 1088, it was held that an indictment for an attempt to commit rape upon a married woman by personating her husband need not allege husband's name.

11. — Joinder of counts and election between counts.—See C. C. P. art. 481 and notes.

12. — Issues and proof.—When the indictment alleges the offense to have been committed by force, proof that it was committed on a female under age with her consent is insufficient and will not support a conviction. Jenkins v. State, 34 App. 201, 29 S. W. 1078; Banton v. State, 53 App. 251, 109 S. W. 159; Moore v. State, 20 App. 275; Nicholas v. State, 23 App. 317, 5 S. W. 239.

A charge of rape by force is not supported by evidence of a rape by threats or fraud. Williams v. State, 1 App. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 399; Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574.

Where the indictment charged a rape by force evidence that defendant commanded silence on pain of death was admissible on the issue of consent. Bass v. State, 16 App. 62.

Where it is alleged that force, threats, or fraud were used in accomplishing a rape upon a female alleged to be under the age of consent it was held to be no variance to prove that she was over that age; that the allegation as to her age was surplusage and could be disregarded. Nicholas v. State, 23 App. 317, 5 S. W. 239.

Under an indictment for rape of a girl under fifteen years of age charged to have been committed on a certain date, evidence of acts of intercourse between the parties had on other days is admissible. Hamilton v. State, 36 App. 372, 37 S. W. 431.

Mental condition of prosecutrix may be shown as bearing on want of consent, even though indictment does not charge that she was mentally capable of giving consent. Segrest v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 845.

Evidence of other acts of carnal intercourse than the one alleged is admissible, and the court need not limit the same. Cooksey v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 104.

While an indictment for rape on a female under the age of consent need not allege force, where force is alleged it must be proved. Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

In a trial for raping a child under 14 years of age, the state could show all the facts attending the offense, including force used, though the indictment did not charge force. Hutcherson v. State, 62 App. 1, 136 S. W. 53.

It is not necessary, in a statutory rape case under an indictment charging that the defendant "did then and there ravish and have carnal knowledge" of the prosecutrix, to show force. Vaughn v. State, 62 App. 24, 136 S. W. 476.

13. Election between acts.—See notes under art. 431 C. C. P.; Sharp v. State, 15 App. 171; Nicholas v. State, 5 S. W. 239; Thompson v. State, 33 App. 472, 26 S. W. 987.

The state must elect upon which of several instances of intercourse it will rely. Bader v. State, 57 App. 293, 122 S. W. 555; Batchelor v. State, 41 App. 501, 55 S. W. 491, 96 Am. St. Rep. 791.

Where state elects between acts of intercourse the jury should be restricted to the act chosen. Stone v. State, 45 App. 91, 73 S. W. 956.

14. Continuance.—See C. C. P. arts. 603-609 and notes thereunder.

15. Competency of witness.—See C. C. P. art. 788.

16. Evidence.—See C. C. P. art. 783 et seq., and notes.

It is not permissible to prove that accused is a married man. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 557; Lemons v. State, 59 App. 299, 128 S. W. 416; Jenkins v. State, 60 App. 236, 131 S. W. 542; Wilkerson v. State, 60 App. 388, 131 S. W. 1108, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 126. But see Battles v. State, 63 App. 147, 140 S. W. 783.

To maintain the charge of rape upon a woman by force, the state must prove (1) penetration, (2) force, and (3) that the carnal knowledge was without her consent. Jenkins v. State, 1 App. 346.

Where the want of consent of the woman is necessary to constitute the offense, it must be proved by the state, as well as resistance to the act on her part. Jenkins v. State, 1 App. 346.

Where the female ravished is under the age of consent it is not incumbent upon the state to prove the means by which the crime was accomplished, or to prove the want of consent of such female to the act. Anschicks v. State, 6 App. 524; Mayo v. State, 7 App. 342; Craig v. State, 18 App. 321; Moore v. State, 20 App. 275.

Where the rape was upon a female over the age of consent, no matter what was her physical or mental condition, the state must prove her want of consent to the act. Craig v. State, 18 App. 321; Baldwin v. State, 15 App. 275; contra, Anschicks v. State, 6 App. 524. But these decisions were made before the amendment of this article, and would not apply to the case of a woman mentally diseased so as to have no will to oppose to the act. In such case, however, it would devolve upon the state to prove that the defendant knew that she was so mentally diseased. Where the indictment charged a rape by force alone, and the state was permitted to prove that when the woman attempted to make an outcry the defendant placed his hand over her mouth and commanded her to desist on pain of death, it was held that this evidence was admissible because it was res gestæ, bore directly upon the question of her consent, showed the defendant's intent, and was an important fact to be considered in passing upon the degree and character of the force used by the defendant to accomplish his purpose. Bass v. State, 16 App. 62.

State can not be compelled to use the prosecutrix as a witness. Bozeman v. State, 34 App. 503, 31 S. W. 389.

In a prosecution for rape, the original petition in a prior civil action against the accused by prosecutrix, through her next friend, for damages from the alleged intercourse, was inadmissible. Eckermann v. State, 57 App. 287, 123 S. W. 424.

In a prosecution for rape on a female under the age of consent, evidence that defendant made her presents of candies and a ring, in answer to a question whether prior to the intercourse defendant had made her presents, was admissible as showing intimate relations between prosecutrix and accused, it appearing that the intercourse was had with her consent, and to show willingness on her part. Rowan v. State, 57 App. 625, 124 S. W. 668, 136 Am. St. Rep. 1005.

Where, on a trial for rape by means of a sham marriage, the evidence showed that accused had a legal wife at the time he married prosecutrix, testimony of the father of the legal wife that he, acting in behalf of his daughter, had redeemed accused's household goods from a pledge while accused was in jail on the charge, was inadmissible. Wilkerson v. State, 60 App. 388, 131 S. W. 1108, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 126.

The state, on a trial for rape by means of a sham marriage, may show declarations of accused to prosecutrix as to his possessing property, to show the reasonableness of the testimony of the prosecutrix that she believed that she married accused, and as affecting the probability of her consenting to marry. Wilkerson v. State, 60 App. 388, 131 S. W. 1108, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 126.

Attentions and letters, consistent with the idea of affection for the girl, held admissible. Battles v. State, 63 App. 147, 140 S. W. 783.

Admission of evidence held no error, although it tended to show the commission of another crime by one who aided accused. Wragg v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 342.

Where accused sought to show that a third person was the one who had had intercourse with prosecutrix, the court properly permitted the third person to testify that he had never had intercourse with her. Cain v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 147.

In a prosecution for rape on a girl under 15, whom defendant was keeping in his home for her father, defendant was properly allowed to show that all the time she was with him he gave her the tenderest care and treated her as he would his own child. Haggart v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 328.

17. — Consent.—It is proper to ask her when testifying, "Was it done with or without your consent?" Coates v. State, 2 App. 16.

Evidence of bona fide resistance manifests a want of consent. Anschicks v. State, 6 App. 524.

As to telephone conversation, see Jacobs v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 558.

Where one count charged force and another that prosecutrix was mentally defective, evidence of her mental condition was admissible upon the question of consent. Hubbard v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 260.

18. — Intent.—Evidence of acts and declarations of the defendant five years before the alleged rape was held inadmissible. Tomlin v. State, 25 App. 676, 8 S. W. 931.

Declarations made by the defendant a month before the alleged rape, held admissible. Wood v. State, 28 App. 61, 12 S. W. 405.

Statements of accused held admissible on the question of intent. Sharp v. State, 71 App. 633, 160 S. W. 369.

19. — Character of female.—The woman's character for chastity may be impeached by the defendant, not in justification of the offense, but as tending to show her consent to the act of carnal knowledge. The inquiry must be confined to her general reputation for chastity; and can not extend to particular instances of unchastity with other men than the defendant. Lawson v. State, 17 App. 292; Favors v. State, 20 App. 155; Hernandez v. State, Id. 155; Jenkins v. State, 1 App. 346; Rogers v. State, Id. 187; Dorsey v. State, Id. 33; Pefferling v. State, 40 Tex. 486; Mayo v. State, 7 App. 342. See, also, Lemons v. State, 59 App. 299, 128 S. W. 416.

It is admissible to prove a number of different acts of carnal intercourse when the prosecutrix is under the age of consent. Hamilton v. State, 36 App. 372, 37 S. W. 431; Battles v. State, 63 App. 147, 140 S. W. 783; Clardy v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 568; Abernathy v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 339.

Illicit intercourse between her and the defendant may be proved. Lawson v. State, 17 App. 292; Mayo v. State, 7 App. 342.

As evidence to establish her general reputation for a want of chastity it is competent for the defendant to prove that she had given birth to an illegitimate child prior to the alleged rape. Wilson v. State, 17 App. 525.

It is not permissible to prove that the injured female was regarded by her neighbors as lacking good sense. Ellis v. State, 33 App. 86, 24 S. W. 894.

Objection that State was permitted to prove that defendant had intercourse with prosecutrix who was under age of fifteen after she became the wife of another man is without merit. But on another trial, testimony should only be adduced by State of one act of intercourse between prosecutrix and defendant. (That stated in the indictment.) Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 557.

The general reputation for chastity of prosecutrix's mother and sister held inadmissible; defendant's expert having testified that such general reputation would throw no light on whether or not prosecutrix had nymphomania. Jenkins v. State, 60 App. 236, 131 S. W. 542.

Prosecutrix's reputation for virtue and chastity can be shown by the state only when it is assailed by accused or she is a stranger in the county. Holland v. State, 60 App. 117, 131 S. W. 563.

Accused's testimony that prosecutrix invited him to her house on the absence of the family, and that she so acted as to invite intercourse, and that force was unnecessary, so assailed her chastity as to entitle the state to show that her reputation was good. Holland v. State, 60 App. 117, 131 S. W. 563.

Evidence of the female's good reputation as to chastity and truthfulness held admissible to support her testimony that she believed that she and accused were married. Wilkerson v. State, 60 App. 388, 131 S. W. 1108, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 126.

One accused of raping a female under age with her consent could show that about nine months before her child was born she was seen in compromising relations with another man, to rebut her testimony of exclusive intercourse with accused, and to support his denial of the offense. Parker v. State, 62 App. 64, 136 S. W. 453.

Other acts of intercourse of the prosecutrix under the age of consent are not admissible unless the fact of intercourse be questioned, or the evidence shows that another may be the father of the child, and hence, where the act of intercourse is proven by the birth of a child, evidence of acts recurring more than two years before the birth of the child is inadmissible. Whitehead v. State, 61 App. 558, 137 S. W. 356.

Evidence of other acts of intercourse on the part of the prosecutrix is admissible only when they are with the defendant, and for the purpose of showing consent. Whitehead v. State, 61 App. 558, 137 S. W. 356.

Evidence that others had had intercourse with prosecutrix is not admissible as a defense, but only to affect her credibility. Wade v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 246.

Evidence as to other acts of intercourse prior to the date of the offense charged is admissible solely to corroborate the prosecutrix as to the offense charged. Lott v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 544.

Defendant on cross-examination having attempted to show that the woman's pregnancy was due to another, the state was properly permitted on redirect examination to show who caused her pregnancy. Lott v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 544.

Evidence of the chastity of the prosecutrix is admissible, where accused claims that the intercourse was with her consent. Jacobs v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 558.

Evidence was admissible as to other acts of intimacy not amounting to intercourse between the defendant and prosecutrix. Clardy v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 568.

In a trial for rape on a female under 15 years of age, evidence that she has had prior intercourse with others than the defendant presents no defense and is inadmissible on the main issue. Clardy v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 568.

Evidence that prosecutrix under 15 years of age was a lewd woman at the time of the alleged offense is inadmissible to affect her credibility. Kearse v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 827.

Accused, on a trial for rape on a female under the age of 15 years, may, to affect her credibility, show that prior to the time of the alleged offense she had been an inmate of houses of ill fame, but he may not prove, as affecting her credibility, isolated or independent acts of immorality. Bigliben v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1044.

Though accused, on a trial for rape on a female under the age of 15 years, showed on the cross-examination of prosecutrix that her act with him was the first act committed, he could not impeach her by showing her prior individual and isolated acts of immorality. Bigliben v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1044.

It is not improper to allow the girl to testify that she did not understand the enormity of the offense. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 536.

20. — Age of female.—When the age of the prosecutrix is in issue it is admissible for a witness testifying to her age, to testify to collateral facts that impressed her age upon him at certain times, and to testify to her appearance, as to age when an infant, compared with other infants. Bice v. State, 37 App. 38, 38 S. W. 803.

It is also competent for an experienced physician, who has made a personal examination of the prosecutrix, to testify to her apparent age. Bice v. State, 37 App. 38, 38 S. W. 803.

Witness must testify as to her own knowledge as to her age and not as to what her mother may have said. Johnson v. State, 42 App. 298, 59 S. W. 899.

It is proper to refuse to cause prosecutrix to put on a suit so the jury may see her in a longer skirt where there is no testimony that she was over 14 years, or that accused was misled as to her age. Campbell v. State, 63 App. 595, 141 S. W. 232, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 858.

Testimony of a school census taker as to girl's age as stated by defendant held admissible. Lott v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 544.

As to statements by prosecutrix and rumor, see Magee v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 96.

In a prosecution for rape, where the age of the prosecutrix was in question, accused attempted to show that her parents had married at an earlier date than they testified. They testified that they were married under license issued on a certain day. Held, that the record of the license was properly admitted in evidence. Walton v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 358.

21. — Character of accused.—On a trial for rape the accused may prove his general reputation as a "peaceable and law-biding man." Lincecum v. State, 29 App. 328, 15 S. W. 818, 25 Am. St. Rep. 727.

On trial for rape of his own daughter it is error to allow a State's witness to testify, over defendant's objection, that defendant stated to him, witness, that he did not care if witness had carnal intercourse with his whole family. Owens v. State, 39 App. 391, 46 S. W. 240.

Defendant's good conduct and demeanor toward his children held inadmissible. Cooper v. State, 72 App. 266, 162 S. W. 364.

22. — Other offenses.—See notes under art. 783, C. C. P.

23. — Identity of accused.—On a trial for rape where one of the principal issues was the identification of the defendant, held, that it was not error to allow a witness for the state to testify that when the prosecutrix was brought into the presence of the defendant on the morning after the rape she "shuddered" at her first sight of the defendant; her shuddering being a circumstance which tended to show the certainty of and to corroborate her identification. Bruce v. State, 31 App. 590, 21 S. W. 681.

The state was permitted to prove by the sheriff of the county that after defendant's arrest he placed him and eight other negroes in a line, and brought the prosecutrix, also her little son, in before them separately, and they each identified defendant as being the person who committed the offense. This was introduced by the State as original evidence; held, error. (Overruling on this point, Bruce v. State, 31 App. 590, 21 S. W. 681; Ruston v. State, 4 App. 432; Fulcher v. State, 28 App. 471, 13 S. W. 750; Rippy v. State, 29 App. 37, 14 S. W. 448); Reddick v. State, 35 App. 463, 34 S. W. 274, 60 Am. St. Rep. 56.

24. — Incriminating circumstances.—Where witnesses for the state were permitted to testify, that, five days after the alleged rape, in company with the prosecutrix they went to the place where she said the rape was committed, and saw weeds, grass, etc., disarranged as well as other indications that persons had been lying upon the ground, it was held, that, in view of the circumstances of that case, such evidence was not admissible; that it was too remote and uncertain. Lawson v. State, 17 App. 292.

Condition of an undergarment of the alleged injured female, on the first evening and second morning after the alleged rape, held admissible evidence. Grimmett v. State, 22 App. 36, 2 S. W. 631, 58 Am. Rep. 630.

Evidence of the finding of a receipt, in the handwriting of the defendant at the place of the occurrence, and five or six days thereafter, held admissible as not being too remote. Rodgers v. State, 30 App. 510, 17 S. W. 1077.

The state may show that accused was at the time of his courtship with prosecutrix, and at the time of the alleged marriage, married to another woman, as bearing on his desire to have the marriage with prosecutrix kept secret, and to explain her conduct in leaving home to marry accused without notifying her parents. Wilkerson v. State, 60 App. 388, 131 S. W. 1108, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 126.

The court properly permitted a witness to testify that about the date alleged he saw defendant and a woman in a buggy. Battles v. State, 63 App. 147, 140 S. W. 783.

Evidence that the prosecutrix stated, in a room adjoining the one in which accused and her brother-in-law were sitting, that she was going for a walk, is admissible, where she was attacked during that walk and the brother-in-law testified to hearing the remark. Jacobs v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 553.

Evidence as to condition of locus and as to the finding of articles worn by the parties held admissible. Sharp v. State, 71 App. 633, 160 S. W. 369.

In a trial for rape on a girl under 15 years of age, her testimony that on reaching a junction where she changed cars, and where the offense was alleged to have occurred, she learned that her train would leave for her destination at 6 o'clock in the morning, and that defendant was not with her, was admissible. Graham v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 726.

Physician's opinion as to commission of offense owing to the woman's position held properly excluded. Burge v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 63.

25. — Res gestæ and hearsay.—See notes under art. 783, C. C. P.

26. — Female's condition, complaints and declarations.—Recent complaints by prosecutrix and her appearance and condition of her clothing shortly after the alleged occurrence may be proved as original evidence, though not strictly res gestæ. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 631; Ulmer v. State, 71 App. 579, 160 S. W. 1188. See, also, Jacobs v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 558; Burge v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 63.

The state may prove that the prosecutrix promptly complained of the outrage, and may show her state and appearance, and the condition of her clothes shortly after the alleged occurrence. But proof of the particulars of her complaint, and her detailed statement of the facts connected with the alleged outrage cannot be admitted as original evidence, but may be admissible in rebuttal in support of her veracity and to establish the accuracy of her testimony when her credibility has been attacked by the evidence of the defendant. Lawson v. State, 17 App. 292; Johnson v. State, 21 App. 368, 17 S. W. 252; Holst v. State, 23 App. 1, 3 S. W. 757, 59 Am. Rep. 770; Pefferling v. State, 40 Tex. 486; Irby v. State, 25 App. 203, 7 S. W. 705; McGee v. State, 21 App. 670, 2 S. W. 890; Lights v. State, 21 App. 308, 17 S. W. 428; Sentell v. State, 34 App. 260, 30 S. W. 226.

Where the female alleged to have been outraged was held to be too young to testify as a witness, it was held that statements made by her immediately after the occurrence charging the defendant with the act, and giving some of its details, were inadmissible. Smith v. State, 41 Tex. 352.

The failure of the alleged injured party to make outcry, or to promptly disclose the outrage, may be proved by the defense to discredit her testimony. Rogers v. State, 1 App. 187.

Delay in making complaint is a fact which sometimes casts strong suspicion on the testimony of the prosecutrix, but it is a fact which may be satisfactorily explained by other facts showing good reason for not making complaint promptly. Sharp v. State, 15 App. 171.

The State may show by the prosecutrix, or by other persons, that she made complaint of the outrage soon after its commission, and when, where and to whom it was made; but the prosecution will not be allowed to prove new statements as to how the offense occurred. Reddick v. State, 35 App. 463, 34 S. W. 274, 60 Am. St. Rep. 56. See, also, Valdez v. State, 71 App. 487, 160 S. W. 341.

The only object in admitting such testimony is to corroborate her statements made on the stand. Reddick v. State, 35 App. 463, 34 S. W. 274, 60 Am. St. Rep. 56. See, also, Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 536.

It is not error to allow a physician to testify to an examination of the prosecutrix, made more than two months after the alleged rape. Gonzales v. State, 32 App. 611, 25 S. W. 781.

Statements of complainant must be limited to the fact that complaint was made and the circumstances under which it was made. Reddick v. State, 35 App. 463, 34 S. W. 274, 60 Am. St. Rep. 56.

The rules in regard to evidence of outcry and complaint made by the prosecutrix do not apply when the indictment charges rape of a girl under fifteen years of age. Hamilton v. State, 36 App. 372, 37 S. W. 431.

It is inadmissible to prove that prosecutrix had "fits." Johnson v. State, 42 App. 298, 59 S. W. 899.

The statement made by prosecutrix and the circumstances and reasons for the disclosure, which had been for some time withheld, held admissible. Bader v. State, 57 App. 293, 122 S. W. 555.

The girl's statement held admissible, though made 10 days after the alleged offense. Pettus v. State, 58 App. 546, 126 S. W. 868, 137 Am. St. Rep. 978.

A physician who examined prosecutrix five days after the offense could testify to the conditions disclosed. Hutcherson v. State, 62 App. 1, 136 S. W. 53. See, also, Caton v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 590.

The prosecutrix may testify that the defendant is the father of her baby. Whitehead v. State, 61 App. 558, 137 S. W. 356.

Evidence of the physical condition of the prosecutrix the morning after the rape is admissible; accused having testified that the intercourse was with her consent. Jacobs v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 558.

The fact that the girl accused defendant is not admissible as original testimony. Ulmer v. State, 71 App. 579, 160 S. W. 1188.

In a prosecution of defendant for rape of his daughter, defendant's bill, which merely objected that the girl was permitted to testify that she told her mother, and did not tell her sooner because defendant threatened to kill her, presented no error. Boyd v. State, 72 App. 521, 163 S. W. 67.

The detailed statements of a child eight years old made to the first person she met after she had been raped, were not admissible, unless a part of the res gestae, and, where the interval between the assault and the meeting of such person was not shown, the proof of the statements could not be justified. Douglass v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 933.

The failure of prosecutrix to make outcry or call for aid, when it may be readily obtained, or within reasonable time to disclose the offense tends to discredit her testimony. Burge v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 63.

Evidence that the prosecutrix before making her complaint informed the witness that accused had never had sexual intercourse with her, and that another witness was in such a place that she must have heard the struggle is material. Baker v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1154.

Evidence that the girl, who was under 15, had given birth to a child held admissible. Abernathy v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 339.

Evidence held to show that accused was not the husband of prosecutrix. Munger v. State, 57 App. 384, 122 S. W. 874; Gent v. State, 57 App. 414, 123 S. W. 594.

Sufficiency of evidence to justify that if defendant "kept watch" he was guilty. Caruth v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 532; Shepard v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 816.

Evidence that defendant was an old man and that prosecutrix was a woman is sufficient to prove sex. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 750.

Evidence held not to show a common-law marriage between the parties. Wofford v. State, 60 App. 624, 132 S. W. 929.

Age may be fixed by an event the date of which is shown. Mora v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 344.

33. — Corroboration of female.—A conviction can not be sustained upon the unsupported testimony of the female, who made no outcry for several weeks. Topolanck v. State, 40 Tex. 160.

A conviction may be supported upon the uncorroborated testimony of the prosecutrix, even though she be a child under ten years of age. But such cases require special scrutiny by the jury, and a careful weighing of the evidence, with all remote and near circumstances of probability. Extraordinary effort should be made to corroborate the testimony of the prosecutrix in such cases, and when such testimony can be procured its nonproduction should tell seriously against the prosecution. Gazley v. State, 17 App. 267; Montresser v. State, 19 App. 281; Goss v. State, 40 Tex. 520.

The prosecutrix testified positively as to defendant's identity, and was corroborated by other witnesses who had seen defendant in the neighborhood, both before and after the commission of the offense; held, the evidence was sufficient to support a verdict, assessing the death penalty. Dove v. State, 36 App. 105, 35 S. W. 648.

A conviction on the uncorroborated testimony of the injured female who went riding with the defendant a few days after the occurrence of the alleged offense, cannot stand. Price v. State, 36 App. 143, 35 S. W. 988.

A conviction for rape on a female under the age of consent may be sustained on her uncorroborated testimony. Rattles v. State, 63 App. 147, 140 S. W. 783.

The girl's unsupported testimony is sufficient when there is no doubt as to its reasonableness and probable truth. Logan v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 713.

The fact that the girl refused, until compelled to do so, to name any person as guilty is ordinarily a strong circumstance in support of her testimony. Logan v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 713.

34. — Reasonable doubt.—See notes under art. 785, C. C. P.

35. — Examination and impeachment of witnesses.—See notes under art. 3687, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

36. Charge.—For charge held to be correct, see Washington v. State, 58 App. 345, 125 S. W. 917; Wade v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 246.

The court should instruct on the girl's age when the evidence raises the issue. Tate v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 781; Cowden v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 779.

When the evidence is conflicting as to consent, the jury should be instructed carefully on the point. See an instruction applicable to the particular case, improperly refused. Clark v. State, 30 Tex. 448.

The charge need only comprise the law applicable to every legitimate deduction which the jury may draw from the facts in evidence. Rogers v. State, 1 App. 188.

For charge subject to criticism, but, taken as a whole, not misleading, see Burk v. State, 8 App. 336.

The charge should explain to the jury the statutory meaning "force," and "threats," and "fraud," where the case demands it. Jones v. State, 10 App. 552; Jenkins v. State, 1 App. 346.

The charge should not submit an issue not presented by the indictment. Craig v. State, 18 App. 321.

Where the indictment charged a rape by force, threats, and fraud, and there was no allegation of the nonage of the female, but the evidence showed that she was under age, and tended to show that she consented to the act, the court should have instructed, at defendant's request, that the state must prove that she did not consent to the act. Moore v. State, 20 App. 275.

The charge should be confined to the case made by the evidence. If the evidence shows the rape to have been committed by one or two of the several means, viz.: force, threats, or fraud, but not by all three of the said means, it is error to charge the jury upon all three of the said means. In other words, though the indictment should charge the three means, the charge of the court should be confined to the means only that is proved by the evidence. Serio v. State, 22 App. 633, 3 S. W. 784; Williams v. State, 1 App. 90, 23 Am. Rep. 399.

For charge held abstractly correct, but, in view of the evidence, erroneous in that it did not direct an acquittal if the jury believed from the evidence that the female consented to the sexual act, and was over the age of consent, see Taylor v. State, 24 App. 299, 6 S. W. 42.

For charge held erroneous, because it rested the defendant's right to acquittal upon a hypothesis eliminated by the proof, see Taylor v. State, 24 App. 299, 6 S. W. 42.

Charge held erroneous in that, under the proof, it failed to instruct the jury that defendant should be acquitted of assault to rape or aggravated assault if the female was not under the age of consent and consented to the act of the defendant. Taylor v. State, 24 App. 299, 6 S. W. 42.

Upon requisites of the charge of the court in rape cases, see Johnson v. State, 27 App. 163, 11 S. W. 106; Mooney v. State, 29 App. 257, 15 S. W. 724; Rodgers v. State, 30 App. 510, 17 S. W. 1077.

On a trial for rape the question whether the prosecution has been corroborated is one of fact, and should not be given in charge. Gonzales v. State, 32 App. 611, 25 S. W. 781.

Where indictment charged in one count rape by force and fraud, and in another rape of a woman so mentally diseased as to have no will, etc., and prosecutrix testified that she kicked and fought defendant, it was error for the court to confine his charge to the second count. Thompson v. State, 33 App. 472, 26 S. W. 987.

Special charge as to defendant's testimony properly refused, see Russell v. State, 33 App. 424, 26 S. W. 990.

For charge held sufficient, see Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 31 S. W. 371.

The prosecutrix, a child, testified to the act; held, that the defendant was not entitled to a charge on circumstantial evidence. Allen v. State, 36 App. 381, 37 S. W. 429.

For a charge held to contain all the constituent elements of the offense, see Pettitway v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 860.

Charge on facts testified to by defendant; held, erroneous. Shell v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 207.

Where defendant testified, that he was not present when others, with whom he is charged to have been in conspiracy, committed the rape, but afterwards had intercourse with prosecutrix with her consent, this issue should have been submitted to jury. Segrest v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 845.

A charge held erroneous in using the word "crime," since it might have conveyed the impression that the court believed the offense had been committed. Pettus v. State, 58 App. 546, 126 S. W. 868, 137 Am. St. Rep. 978.

For charge held erroneous, see Pettus v. State, 58 App. 546, 126 S. W. 868, 137 Am. St. Rep. 978.

A charge requiring the jury to find the age of the prosecutrix is not erroneous, though her age is not contested. Cain v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 147.

Charge held to properly submit issue of age of the girl, there being no evidence of mistake of fact as excusing defendant. Martin v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 579.

Refusal to charge that consent would be presumed held proper. Burge v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 63.

It is not necessary for the court to group the facts tending to show the girl was over 15 years. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 536.

Where the court submitted the case based on force alone, error in a charge defining rape as defined by the code was not reversible. Calyon v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 591.

37. Improper argument of prosecuting attorney.—See notes under art. 724, C. C. P.

38. Verdict.—See C. C. P. art. 763 et seq., and notes.

The court submitted to the jury "rape and assault with intent to rape." The verdict of the jury was, "We the jury find defendant guilty as charged in the indictment and assess his punishment at confinement in the penitentiary for fifty years;" held, this was evidently a finding that defendant was guilty of rape. McGee and Fuller v. State, 39 App. 190, 45 S. W. 709.

38. New trial.—See arts. 835–846, C. C. P. and notes.

40. Civil liability.—The fact that the woman yielded will not defeat a civil action for assault and battery. Altman v. Eckerman (Civ. App.) 132 S. W. 523.

Art. 1064. [634] Definition of "force."—The definition of "force," as applicable to assault and battery, applies also to the crime of rape, and it must have been such as might reasonably be supposed sufficient to overcome resistance, taking into consideration the relative strength of the parties, and other circumstances of the case.

Force as element of offense.—There must be something more than the want of consent on the part of the woman; there must be a resistance made by her. The whole subject of resistance is referable to the question of the consent of the female. A feigned resistance would not show want of consent, while an unfeigned, positive resistance would. Jenkins v. State, 1 App. 346; Anschicks v. State, 6 App. 524; Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646; Mooney v. State, 29 App. 257, 15 S. W. 724; Rhea v. State, 30 App. 483, 17 S. W. 931.

It is such force as might be reasonably supposed sufficient to overcome resistance, taking into consideration the relative strength of the parties and other circumstances in the case. Jones v. State, 10 App. 552; Saddler v. State, 12 App. 194; Favors v. State, 20 App. 155; Hernandez v. State, Id. 15; Sharp v. State, 15 App. 171; Passmore v. State, 29 App. 241, 15 S. W. 286; Brown v. State, 27 App. 330, 11 S. W. 412; Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646, and authorities cited; Price v. State, 36 App. 143, 35 S. W. 983.

In determining upon the sufficiency of the force used, the jury is authorized to take into consideration threats made at the time of the commission of the offense. Sharp v. State, 15 App. 171; Bass v. State, 16 App. 62; Perez v. State, 50 App. 34, 94 S. W. 1036.

The word "force" does not refer to the mere muscular force necessarily exerted by the male in the act of copulation; nevertheless, in estimating the efficiency of the resistance made by the female, her mental capacity is a proper subject of inquiry and consideration. Baldwin v. State, 15 App. 275.

The use of chloroform as a means comes within the meaning of fraud, and is not force. Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574.

In default of resistance by the female, consent is presumed. Mooney v. State, 29 App. 257, 15 S. W. 724.

It is error to refuse to charge that if defendant did not intend to have carnal knowledge of prosecutrix if she resisted, he should be found guilty of simple assault. Porter v. State, 33 App. 385, 26 S. W. 626. See, also, Sanford v. State, 12 App. 196.

The force is that by which the dissenting woman is subjected to and put under the power of the assailant so that he is able notwithstanding her opposition to have intercourse with her. Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129.

— Attempt to commit rape.—To constitute an attempt to commit rape there must have been an intent to use such force as would constitute rape, or an assault to commit rape, but the attempt to apply force must have failed so that it did not amount to rape or an assault with intent to rape. Holloway v. State, 54 App. 465, 113 S. W. 933. And, see, Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 576. See, also, art. 1070, post, and notes thereunder.

— Female under age of consent.—Force is not an element of the offense when committed on a child under the age of ten years. Rodgers v. State, 30 App. 510, 17 S. W. 1077; Alexander v. State, 58 App. 621, 127 S. W. 189; Cromeans v. State, 59 App. 611, 129 S. W. 1129; Ulmer v. State, 71 App. 579, 160 S. W. 1188.

See, also, notes under art. 1063, ante.

Evidence.—Evidence held to support conviction. Cole v. State, 57 App. 51, 123 S. W. 409, 136 Am. St. Rep. 973.

See Perez v. State, 50 App. 34, 94 S. W. 1036.

Charge.—The legal significance of "force" must be given, whether asked or not. Jenkins v. State, 1 App. 346; Brown v. State, 27 App. 330, 11 S. W. 412.

Definition of "force" in charge, approved. Jones v. State, 10 App. 552; Favors v. State, 20 App. 155. See Anschick v. State, 6 App. 524.

Where the evidence raised an issue as to consent the court should have charged on force and resistance essential to be shown. Tyler v. State, 46 App. 10, 79 S. W. 558.

A requested charge on the degree of resistance by the woman held erroneous. Lemons v. State, 59 App. 299, 128 S. W. 416.

A requested charge on the effect of the woman's consent to violence exerted against her held erroneous. Lemons v. State, 59 App. 299, 128 S. W. 416.

One charged with assault with intent to commit rape cannot complain of a charge which substantially follows this definition of force. Conger v. State (Cr. App.) 140 S. W. 1112.

Charge held correct. Conger v. State (Cr. App.) 140 S. W. 1112.
See, also, notes under arts. 735-743, C. C. P.

Art. 1065. [635] What "threat" sufficient.—The "threat" must be such as might reasonably create a just fear of death, or great bodily harm, in view of the relative condition of the parties as to health, strength and all other circumstances of the case.

Cited, Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 576.

Threat as element of offense.—The threats used must be such as might reasonably create a just fear of death, or great bodily harm, in view of the relative condition of the parties as to health, strength, and all other circumstances of the case. Jones v. State, 10 App. 552.

Where both force and threats are alleged, in determining the sufficiency of the force, or the effect of the threats proved, it is proper to consider the cogency which the threats may have contributed to the force, and the intensifying influence which the force may have imparted to the threats. Sharp v. State, 15 App. 171.

As to the character and sufficiency of threats, see Reagan v. State, 28 App. 227, 12 S. W. 601, 19 Am. St. Rep. 833.

Evidence.—Evidence held to support conviction. Cole v. State, 57 App. 51, 123 S. W. 409, 136 Am. St. Rep. 973.

Charge.—See Jones v. State, 10 App. 552, and see notes under art. 1064, ante, and arts. 735-743, C. C. P.

Where the court submitted the case based on force alone, error in a charge defining rape as defined by arts. 1063, 1065, was not reversible. Calyon v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 591.

Art. 1066. [636] "Fraud" defined.—The "fraud" must consist in the use of some stratagem by which the woman is induced to believe the offender is her husband, or in administering, without her knowledge or consent, some substance producing unnatural sexual desire or such stupor as prevents or weakens resistance, and committing the offense while she is under the influence of such substance. It is a presumption of law, which can not be rebutted by testimony, that no consent was given under the circumstances mentioned in this article.

Cited, Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 576.

Fraud as element of offense.—It is rape to have carnal knowledge of woman who is asleep without her consent, when no more force is used than that involved in the act. Payne v. State, 40 App. 203, 49 S. W. 604, 76 Am. St. Rep. 712.

That portion of this article with reference to the use of stratagem, protects married women only. Having carnal knowledge of a woman when she is asleep, is not per se fraud within the meaning of the statute. To constitute the statutory fraud, it must be the use of some stratagem by which the woman is induced to believe that the offender is her husband. King v. State, 22 App. 650, 3 S. W. 342. The use of chloroform as a means is fraud, and not force. Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574.

"Stratagem" defined, and, held, that it must be such as to induce the woman to believe the offender is her husband. Mooney v. State, 29 App. 257, 15 S. W. 724; Franklin v. State, 34 App. 203, 29 S. W. 1088; Huffman v. State, 46 App. 428, 80 S. W. 625.

If the fraud is such as to cause the woman, whether legally married or unmarried, to give consent to the copulation, believing she is the wife of the man she is copulating with, it is necessarily rape whether the woman be married or single. Lee v. State, 44 App. 354, 72 S. W. 1008, 61 L. R. A. 904. And see Wilkerson v. State, 60 App. 388, 131 S. W. 1108, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 126.

Deception and persuasion may sometimes be equivalent to the use of force in obtaining sexual intercourse. Altman v. Eckerman (Civ. App.) 132 S. W. 523.

Charge.—See notes under art. 735, C. C. P.

For approved charges, see Melton v. State, 71 App. 130, 158 S. W. 550, and cases cited.

Art. 1067. [637] Penetration only need be proved.—Penetration only is necessary to be proved upon a trial for rape.

Penetration as element of offense.—Penetration as used in this article means that penetration, with or without emission, is only necessary to be proved. Johnson v. State, 27 App. 163, 11 S. W. 106.

Penetration is an element of rape and must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, though such penetration need not be of any particular depth. Johnson v. State, 27 App. 163, 11 S. W. 106; Davis v. State, 43 Tex. 189; Rodgers v. State, 30 App. 510, 17 S. W. 1077.

The word "penetration" is a limitation upon, and qualification of the meaning of the term "carnal knowledge;" and by "penetration only" this article means merely to dispense with emission in the commission of rape. Lujano v. State, 32 App. 414, 24 S. W. 97.

Evidence.—Where the rape is upon a female under the age of ten years, the testimony of medical experts should be had as to penetration, or its absence reasonably accounted for. Every source of knowledge as to this fact should, in such case, be explored. Davis v. State, 42 Tex. 226.

The fact of penetration must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, but may be established by circumstantial evidence. Word v. State, 12 App. 175.

Evidence to prove penetration was held insufficient. Baldwin v. State, 15 App. 275; Davis v. State, 43 Tex. 189.

Where the girl was examined about ten days after the offense, the physician's testimony as to the fact of penetration was not so remote as to be inadmissible. Thompson v. State, 70 App. 610, 157 S. W. 494.

Testimony of the girl's mother that she examined her daughter's bloomers and found them cut and also found "white stuff like the passage of a man" on them was competent. Thompson v. State, 70 App. 610, 157 S. W. 494.

Testimony of the girl's mother that she found "the passage from him" on her daughter's bloomers was incompetent. Thompson v. State, 70 App. 610, 157 S. W. 494.

Where penetration was testified to by the girl and admitted by appellant in his confession, it was sufficiently proven. Mora v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 344.

Charge.—See Fitzgerald v. State, 20 App. 281.

The jury should be instructed, if asked, that penetration must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Davis v. State, 43 Tex. 189.

In explaining "penetration," the charge should instruct the jury plainly, that to constitute rape, the private parts of the female must have been penetrated by the male member, or sexual organ of the man. But see this case for a charge not so specific which was held to be sufficient. Burk v. State, 8 App. 336, and see, also, Wilson v. State, 17 App. 525.

The court should instruct the jury that penetration should be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Word v. State, 12 App. 174.

For approved charge, see Rodgers v. State, 30 App. 510, 17 S. W. 1077.

Failure to charge this article if prejudicial at all would be prejudicial to the state and defendant can not complain. Lujano v. State, 32 App. 414, 24 S. W. 97.

Where evidence of defendant himself shows an act of carnal intercourse, error in charge on "penetration" is harmless. Ledbetter v. State, 33 App. 400, 26 S. W. 725.

When proof of penetration is positive, an instruction to the jury that penetration may be proven either by positive or circumstantial evidence cannot injure defendant. Belcher v. State, 39 App. 121, 44 S. W. 1106.

Where the evidence shows penetration, it is not error to refuse a request for a finding whether there was an attempt to commit rape. Boyd v. State, 72 App. 521, 163 S. W. 67.

Art. 1068. [638] Defendant must be over fourteen.—No person under the age of fourteen, at the time the offense is charged to have been committed, can be convicted of rape, or assault with intent to commit the offense.

Indictment.—Indictment need not charge that defendant was under fourteen years of age at the time the offense was committed. If true, it was matter of defense. Davis v. State, 42 Tex. 226; Word v. State, 12 App. 174; Cornelius v. State, 13 App. 349.

Burden of proof.—See notes under art. 52, ante.

Charge.—Where evidence tending to show that defendant was under fourteen years of age was very inconclusive, the court did not err in refusing to submit that issue to the jury. Wilcox v. State, 33 App. 322, 26 S. W. 989.

Art. 1069. [639] Punishment.—Whoever shall be guilty of rape shall be punished by death or by confinement in the penitentiary for life, or for any term of years not less than five, in the discretion of the jury. [Act Nov. 10, 1886, p. 161.]

Cited, Murff v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 238.

Extent of punishment.—See Dove v. State, 36 App. 105, 35 S. W. 648.

Ninety-nine years in the penitentiary, held, not excessive punishment for rape on a female 9 years old. Moore v. State, 49 App. 449, 36 S. W. 327.

Twenty years' imprisonment is not excessive punishment for forcibly raping a child. Hutcherson v. State, 62 App. 1, 136 S. W. 53.

Where the jury fixed the punishment at 35 years, the sentence, in view of the indeterminate law, must be a sentence of imprisonment for not less than 5 years nor more than 35 years. Douglass v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 933.

Nine years for intercourse with a girl under 15 is not excessive. Lafoon v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1168.

— Minors.—See art. 35, ante, and notes.

The maximum punishment of death does not apply where accused is under 17 years. Munger v. State, 57 App. 384, 122 S. W. 874.

Charge.—It is not error to charge that the jury may assess the punishment at death or imprisonment for not less than five years, although the jurors were not asked whether they had conscientious scruples against punishment by death. Wragg v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 342.

A charge omitting to state that punishment may be by imprisonment for life is erroneous, but in this case the error was harmless. Graham v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 726.

Evidence as to age.—See art. 52, ante, and notes.

Art. 1070. [640] Conviction may be had for "attempt."—If it appear, on the trial of an indictment for rape, that the offense, though not committed, was attempted by the use of any of the means spoken of in articles 1064, 1065 and 1066, but not such as to bring the offense within the definition of an assault with intent to commit rape, the jury may find the defendant guilty of an attempt to commit the offense, and affix the punishment prescribed in article 1029.

Attempt.—See art. 1029, and notes.

Attempt to rape is a distinct offense from rape or assault to rape, and may be prosecuted and punished as such. Melton v. State, 24 App. 284, 6 S. W. 39, citing Williams v. State, 1 App. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 399; Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458; Moore v. State, 20 App. 275; Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574; Taylor v. State, 22 App. 529, 3 S. W. 753, 58 Am. Rep. 656. And see Reagan v. State, 28 App. 227, 12 S. W. 601, 19 Am. St. Rep. 833; Franklin v. State, 34 App. 203, 26 S. W. 1088; Holloway v. State, 54 App. 463, 113 S. W. 933; Shockley v. State, 71 App. 475, 160 S. W. 452.

An attempt, in legal parlance, means an endeavor to accomplish a crime carried beyond mere preparation, but falling short of the ultimate design in any part of it. Lovett v. State, 19 Tex. 174. See, also, Marthall v. State, 34 App. 22, 36 S. W. 1062.

The age of the female is immaterial, and though she be under 15 years of age force must be proven to convict under this article. Warren v. State, 38 App. 152, 41 S. W. 635.

The gravamen of the offense of attempting to rape a married woman by fraud in personating her husband is the fraud, and it is not necessary that the woman should believe the offender to be her husband. Franklin v. State, 34 App. 203, 29 S. W. 1088.

To convict under this article it must be shown that it was defendant's intent to use the same force as would make him guilty of rape or of assault with intent to rape, but that in the actual attempt carried beyond mere preparation, he fell short of the requisite degree of force. McAdoo v. State, 35 App. 603, 34 S. W. 955, 60 Am. St. Rep. 61. See, also, Warren v. State, 38 App. 152, 41 S. W. 635.

If the offense should fall within the definition of an assault with intent to rape the defendant cannot be convicted of an attempt to rape. Waire v. State (Cr. App.) 64 S. W. 1062.

The very definition under this article, excludes in an attempt to rape the question of assault. Taylor v. State, 44 App. 153, 69 S. W. 149.

An "attempt to rape" can be committed without an assault being made on the person of the female, but, in an "assault to rape," an assault in one of the ways defined by the Code is one of the constituent elements. Taff v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 214.

Assault with intent to rape.—See art. 1029, ante, and notes.

Burglary with intent to rape.—See arts. 1303, 1304, post, and notes.

Limitations.—See art. 226 et seq., C. C. P.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 479, 496.

See Franklin v. State, 34 App. 203, 29 S. W. 1088.

See, also, notes under art. 1029, ante.

A conviction for this offense can not be had under an indictment for an assault with intent to rape. Brown v. State, 7 App. 569; Williams v. State, 1 App. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 399; Burney v. State, 21 App. 565, 1 S. W. 458; Taylor v. State, 22 App. 529, 3 S. W. 753, 58 Am. Rep. 656; Milton v. State, 23 App. 204, 4 S. W. 574; Shockley v. State, 71 App. 475, 160 S. W. 452.

It is not necessary to a conviction for attempt to rape that the indictment be for rape. Reagan v. State, 28 App. 227, 12 S. W. 601, 19 Am. St. Rep. 833.

An indictment, alleging that accused unlawfully assaulted a female under the age of 15 years and attempted to ravish her, does not charge an attempt to commit rape. Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 576.

Evidence.—Sufficiency of evidence, see Franklin v. State, 34 App. 203, 29 S. W. 1088; Bozeman v. State, 34 App. 503, 31 S. W. 339.

Charge.—Where on a trial for rape the court, in its charge to the jury, made the fact of defendant's guilt to depend upon their belief, beyond reasonable doubt, that he had actually ravished and penetrated the injured female, held, that defendant could not be heard to complain that the court had omitted to charge the law with regard to an attempt to commit rape. Massey v. State, 31 App. 371, 20 S. W. 758.

Where the evidence shows penetration, it is not error to refuse a request for a finding whether there was an attempt to commit rape. Boyd v. State, 72 App. 521, 163 S. W. 67.

OF ABORTION

Art. 1071. Definition and punishment. 1072. Furnishing the means—an accomplice. 1073. Attempt at.	Art. 1074. In case of death, murder. 1075. Destroying unborn child. 1076. Not punishable when procured by medical advice.

Article 1071. [641] Definition and punishment.—If any person shall designedly administer to a pregnant woman, or knowingly procure to be administered, with her consent, any drug or medicine, or shall use toward her any violence, or means whatever, externally or internally applied, and shall thereby procure an abortion, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years; if it be done without her consent, the punishment shall be doubled.

By the term "abortion" is meant that the life of the fetus or embryo shall be destroyed in the woman's womb, or that a premature birth thereof be caused. [Amended, Act 1907, p. 55.]

1. Constitutionality.—This article is not unconstitutional as failing to sufficiently define or describe the offense. Jackson v. State, 55 App. 79, 115 S. W. 262, 131 Am. St. Rep. 792.

2. Offense.—Fingers inserted into the womb constitute an "instrument." Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 930.

3. Principals and accomplices.—A completed abortion should be prosecuted under this article only. If the attempt to commit abortion fails, accused should be prosecuted under both this and art. 1073. Willingham v. State, 33 App. 98, 25 S. W. 424. And see Jackson v. State, 55 App. 79, 115 S. W. 266, 131 Am. St. Rep. 792.

Though the injured female consents, she is not an accomplice to the act of abortion or attempt thereof. Willingham v. State, 33 App. 98, 25 S. W. 424, citing Watson v. State, 9 App. 237; Shaw v. State, 165 S. W. 930. And see Miller v. State, 37 App. 575, 40 S. W. 313; Hunter v. State, 38 App. 61, 41 S. W. 602; Gray v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 337.

The female subject of abortion cannot be a principal. The party prescribing and furnishing the means would be principal under this article. The party supplying the means on prescription with the knowledge that it was intended for abortion, would be accomplice under art. 1072. Moore v. State, 37 App. 552, 40 S. W. 287; Cave v. State, 33 App. 335, 26 S. W. 503. And see Fondren v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 411.

Article 79 applies to this offense. Fondren v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 411.

See, also, notes under arts. 74, 99, ante.

4. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 498, 499.

See notes under arts. 447-487, C. C. P.

Indictment need not allege what drug or medicine was used, or more than that it was a drug or medicine calculated to produce abortion. Watson v. State, 9 App. 237; Cave v. State, 33 App. 335, 26 S. W. 503.

When the indictment alleges that the abortion was produced by means of a metallic instrument being introduced into the womb, the State must confine her proof to the allegations, and should not be allowed to prove attempts made at different times. King v. State, 35 App. 472, 34 S. W. 282.

Indictment held sufficient. Navarro v. State, 24 App. 378, 6 S. W. 542.

As to election between counts, see Moore v. State, 37 App. 552, 40 S. W. 287.

Evidence of use of other instruments than that alleged, held, admissible. Moore v. State, 37 App. 552, 40 S. W. 287.

A request to instruct a verdict of not guilty for want of evidence that the grand jury did not know the name of the instrument held properly refused. Link v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 987.

An indictment charging one as an accomplice need not allege that the principal knew the woman was pregnant. Fondren v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 411.

An indictment enlarged that accused did unlawfully and designedly make an assault on a pregnant woman, and, with the woman's consent used means calculated to produce, and which did produce, an abortion on the woman, who was then pregnant. Held that, as the term "abortion" generally means the premature delivery of the fetus or a miscarriage, and the term "pregnancy" includes the entire time from conception to delivery, the indictment charged the offense of abortion. Gray v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 337.

5. — Different counts, duplicity, and election.—See art. 481, C. C. P.

6. Competency of wife as witness against husband.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 795.

7. Evidence.—It is competent to prove by the prosecutrix the means used, how it affected her, and her suffering; but that defendant killed the child and came near killing her, are matters of opinion. King v. State, 35 App. 472, 34 S. W. 282.

Where the indictment charge the use of instruments, evidence of two attempts is admissible. King v. State, 35 App. 472, 34 S. W. 282.

Evidence held sufficient to show that abortion resulted from the act of defendant committed thirty days before the abortion occurred. Moore v. State, 37 App. 552, 40 S. W. 287.

On evidence to pregnancy, see Link v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 987.

Evidence of prosecutrix that the man who took her to defendant, and who made the arrangements to have the operation performed, was the author of her ruin and the father of her child, was admissible. Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 930.

8. — Opinion and expert testimony.—See notes under art. 783, C. C. P.

9. — Impeachment of witnesses.—See notes under art. 3637, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914.

10. Charge.—See Reum v. State, 49 App. 125, 90 S. W. 1109. See, also, notes under arts. 735-743, C. C. P.

A charge to acquit if the medicine either caused, or was calculated to cause, the death of the fœtus, should not be given. Link v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 987.

It was not error to omit to define "assault," where the court stated in detail what the jury would be required to find before they could convict. Link v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 987.

11. Continuance.—See notes under art. 603, et seq. C. C. P.

Art. 1072. [642] Furnishing the means; an accomplice.—Any person who furnishes the means for procuring an abortion, knowing the purpose intended, is guilty as an accomplice.

Accomplices.—See notes under art. 1071, ante.

The woman's father testifying for the state, held to be an accomplice. Watson v. State, 9 App. 237.

This article is not exclusive in defining accomplices, but article 79 applies, so that one who advises, commands, or encourages another to commit the abortion, is guilty. Fondren v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 411.

See, also, Willingham v. State, 33 App. 98, 25 S. W. 424; Moore v. State, 37 App. 552, 40 S. W. 287.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 500.

Art. 1073. [643] Attempt at.—If the means used shall fail to produce an abortion, the offender is nevertheless guilty of an attempt to produce abortion; provided, it be shown that such means were calculated to produce that result, and shall be punished by fine not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 172.]

Constitutionality.—This article sufficiently defines the offense. Jackson v. State, 55 App. 79, 115 S. W. 262, 131 Am. St. Rep. 792.

Offense.—Where an attempt to produce abortion fails of its purpose, the accused should be prosecuted under both this and art. 1071. Willingham v. State, 33 App. 98, 25 S. W. 424.

For construction of this article, see Fretwell v. State, 43 App. 501, 67 S. W. 1021.

Accomplices.—See notes under art. 1071, ante.

Evidence held to show that the father of the injured female was an accomplice. Watson v. State, 9 App. 237.

Where the injured female testifies the court is not required to instruct on the law of accomplice. Willingham v. State, 33 App. 98, 25 S. W. 424.

The injured female, though she consented to the attempt, is not an accomplice. Hunter v. State, 38 App. 61, 41 S. W. 602.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 501.

Where indictment charges attempt by use of drug or medicine it is not necessary to allege what drug or medicine was administered. Watson v. State, 9 App. 237; Cave v. State, 33 App. 335, 26 S. W. 503.

Evidence.—On trial for attempt to produce an abortion, the evidence showed that defendant had administered ergot; evidence of experts that ergot would under certain circumstances produce an abortion is sufficient to support a conviction. Hunter v. State, 38 App. 61, 41 S. W. 602. And further as to evidence, see Watson v. State, 9 App. 237.

Art. 1074. [644] In case of death, murder.—If the death of the mother is occasioned by an abortion so produced, or by an attempt to effect the same, it is murder.

Constitutionality.—The statute sufficiently defines the offense. Jackson v. State, 55 App. 79, 115 S. W. 262, 131 Am. St. Rep. 792.

Offense.—A homicide committed by procuring or attempting to procure an abortion is not murder per se, the intent to kill must exist. Ex parte Fatheree, 34 App. 594, 31 S. W. 403.

Evidence.—As to dying declarations, see art. 808, C. C. P., and notes.

Charge.—See Jackson v. State, 55 App. 79, 115 S. W. 262, 131 Am. St. Rep. 792, and notes under art. 735, C. C. P.

Art. 1075. [645] Destroying unborn child.—If any person shall, during parturition of the mother, destroy the vitality or life in a child, in a state of being born, and before actual birth, which child would otherwise have been born alive, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for life, or any period not less than five years, at the discretion of the jury.

Offense.—The child must be in a condition of being born alive and but for the act of the accused the child would have been born alive. This offense differs from infanticide, for in the latter the child must be born alive in order that its death may be brought within the definition of that offense. Hardin v. State, 52 App. 238, 106 S. W. 353.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 502.

The manner in which the vitality is destroyed must be alleged with reasonable particularity; a mere allegation in the language of the statute will not suffice. The indictment need not negative that the act was done under the advice of a physician. State v. Rupe, 41 Tex. 33.

Art. 1076. [646] Not punishable when procured by medical advice.—Nothing contained in this chapter shall be deemed to apply to the case of an abortion procured or attempted to be procured by medical advice for the purpose of saving the life of the mother.

CHAPTER TEN

ADMINISTERING POISONOUS AND INJURIOUS POTIONS

Art. 1077. Poisoning food, well, etc. 1078. Causing another to inhale injurious substances.	Art. 1079. Death within a year, murder. 1080. Malpractice punishable.
---	---

Article 1077. [647] Poisoning food, well, etc.—If any person shall mingle or cause to be mingled any other noxious potion or substance with any drink, food or medicine, with intent to kill or injure any other person, or shall wilfully poison or cause to be poisoned any spring, well, cistern or reservoir of water with such intent, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years.

Offense.—This article denounces two offenses: 1. Poisoning food, etc., with intent to kill or injure; and, 2. Wilfully poisoning any spring, etc. An indictment for the first need not allege that the act was "wilfully" done, but such allegation would be essential in charging the second offense. Davis v. State, 4 App. 456. This offense is not to be treated as an assault with intent to murder, or as any other kind of an assault, although if death ensues the offense will be murder. Garnet v. State, 1 App. 605, 28 Am. Rep. 425.

"The intent to kill" or "the intent to injure" are made to stand in lieu of and must be proven just as malice aforethought under the general law, which means nothing more nor less than the taking of human life with the intention to do so, or when death results from an intention to do serious bodily harm. Rupe v. State, 42 App. 477, 61 S. W. 933.

This article defines an offense as it now stands, whether or not the word "other" as it appears in the article is rejected. Runnels v. State, 45 App. 446, 77 S. W. 460.

For one to be guilty he must have the intent to injure in doing the acts denounced and the administering or use by the intended victim must be unknown to the party taking or using the poisonous matters, or the party causing the injury must do it by some personal act to the party sought to be injured. If the receiving party knows of the deadly character of the poison, takes and swallows it, the party giving it is not guilty. Sanders v. State, 54 App. 101, 112 S. W. 69, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 243. See, also, Grace v. State, 44 App. 193, 69 S. W. 530.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 503, 504, 512.

This article defines two distinct offenses. Indictment for the first need not, as it must in the second, charge that the act was "wilfully" done. Davis v. State, 4 App. 456.

Evidence.—See Ellington v. State, 48 App. 160, 87 S. W. 153.

"In cases of murder by poison it is not essential to conviction that a chemical analysis of the stomach of the deceased should have been made in order to ascertain whether or not death was caused by poison, if death by poison was clearly and satisfactorily proved by other evidence." Johnson v. State, 29 App. 150, 15 S. W. 647. And see, also, Roe v. State, 25 App. 33, 8 S. W. 463; Johnson v. State, 30 App. 419, 17 S. W. 1070, 28 Am. St. Rep. 930.

Charge.—Indictment being drawn under the provisions of this and art. 1079, post, which require that the defendant "mingle" or cause to be mingled the potion, with intent, etc., charge that he gave the deceased and caused him to swallow the drink in which the potion was mingled, was error. Brooks v. State, 42 App. 347, 60 S. W. 53.

Art. 1078. [648] Causing another to inhale injurious substances.—If any person shall, with intent to injure, cause another person to inhale or swallow any substance injurious to health or any of the functions of the body, or, if such substance was administered with intent to kill, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 172.]

Murder by causing inhalation of poison.—See art. 1078, post.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 505, 513.

Art. 1079. [649] Death within a year, murder.—If by reason of the commission of the offenses named in the two preceding articles, the death of a person be caused within one year, the offender shall be deemed guilty of murder and be punished accordingly.

Offenses and procedure.—See notes to art. 1077, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 511-513, 516.

Art. 1080. [650] Malpractice punishable.—If any person engaged in the practice of medicine and claiming to be a physician, shall, by the use of any noxious substance, administered in a grossly ignorant manner, produce death, or other great bodily injury, he shall be punished for the offense as any other person would be who had given such substance, knowing it to be injurious and intending to kill or injure.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 506.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

OF HOMICIDE

Art.	Definition.	Art.	Definition.
1081.	Definition.	1084.	Body of deceased must be found.
1082.	Destruction of life must be complete.	1085.	Persons killed must be in existence.
1083.	Gross negligence, etc., refers to acts of others.	1086.	Produced by words, etc.

Article 1081. [651] Definition.—"Homicide" is the destruction of the life of one human being by the act, agency, procurement or culpable omission of another.

Homicide.—See notes under arts. 1082, 1083.

As appertaining to this article, see Hart v. State, 15 App. 202, 49 Am. Rep. 188; Treadwell v. State, 16 App. 560.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 508.

Charge.—See notes under art. 1082, post.

A charge using the expression "the destruction of the life of one person" instead of the statutory expression "the destruction of the life of one human being," is not objectionable. Jefferson v. State, 71 App. 120, 158 S. W. 520.

Insanity and intoxication.—See arts. 39-41.

Principals, accomplices and accessories.—See notes to arts. 74-91, ante.

Art. 1082. [652] Destruction of life must be complete.—The destruction of life must be complete by such act, agency, procurement or omission; but, although the injury which caused death might not under other circumstances have proved fatal, yet, if such injury be the cause of death, without its appearing that there has been any gross neglect or manifestly improper treatment of the person injured, it is homicide.

Homicide.—This and the preceding article combine a more specific definition of "homicide" than that inherited from the common law. Under our system, the destruction of life must not only be complete, but it must be complete by the act, agency, procurement or omission of the defendant. Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593.

For a construction of the first clause of the second sentence of this article, and for an exposition of the principle, see the deciding opinion of Willson, J., Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593, and note that on the question, Williams v. State, 2 App. 271, and Powell v. State, 13 App. 244, appear to be overruled.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 508.

Charge.—Only in case there should be evidence tending to raise the issue that deceased may have died from some other cause than the infliction of the wound would the court be required to charge specifically on this subject. Outley v. State (Cr. App.) 99 S. W. 96; Smith v. State, 33 App. 513, 27 S. W. 137; Wood v. State, 31 App. 571, 21 S. W. 602.

Where the facts warrant it, an affirmative charge should be given to the effect that if the wound was not necessarily of a fatal character, and would not of itself have caused death, but that deceased died from blood poisoning superinduced either by gross neglect or manifestly improper treatment by deceased or those in attendance upon him, defendant would not be responsible for his death. Johnson v. State, 43 App. 283, 65 S. W. 93, 94; Armsworthy v. State, 48 App. 413, 88 S. W. 215.

Where the court has given a proper charge in accordance with this article, it is not proper for him to give a requested charge to the effect that if the deceased was shot, but the wound thereby inflicted was not necessarily fatal and the wounded party was suffering from or afflicted with a disease not connected with or superinduced by the shot and died therefrom, then the appellant should be acquitted. If the deceased would have shortly died from Bright's disease and it was an incurable malady, yet if appellant's shot assisted in bringing about the death he would be guilty of the homicide. Gardner v. State, 44 App. 572, 73 S. W. 14.

When the deceased lived 18 days after receiving the wound but the evidence shows that the wound caused his death the court need not charge this article. Lahue v. State, 51 App. 159, 101 S. W. 1011.

Where the evidence shows that the wound was not necessarily fatal, and that death might have ensued from deceased's neglect to have the wound treated, the court should charge this and the preceding article, and apply them to the facts of the case. Noble v. State, 54 App. 436, 113 S. W. 282, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 841.

The court, after defining homicide, charged that, though the injury which caused death might not, under other circumstances, have proved fatal, if it be the cause of death, without gross neglect or improper treatment by some other person, such as a physician, nurse, or other attendant, it would be homicide; and, if some one cut deceased and inflicted a wound, not in itself necessarily mortal, and it produced peritonitis or any other effect resulting in his death, the party inflicting the injury would be as guilty as if the wound of itself would inevitably lead to death. Held that, while correct as far as it went, the charge was not sufficient to present fully an issue as to whether improper treatment brought about peritonitis which resulted fatally, and accused was entitled to a requested instruction that, if death was brought about by improper treatment or gross neglect of the physicians, he would not be guilty. McMillan v. State, 58 App. 525, 126 S. W. 875.

Instructions that if accused inflicted wounds not necessarily fatal, but from the effects of which decedent died, accused was guilty of some degree of homicide unless decedent died from her own gross neglect, such as failure to obey instructions of her attending physician, but that if she was guilty of such gross neglect, and the neglect operating with the wounds, caused her death, which would not probably have resulted but for such neglect or if the jury had a reasonable doubt as to whether such were the facts, accused should be acquitted of any degree of homicide, etc., sufficiently presented an issue whether decedent's death was caused by her walking around, whereas the physician had told her to remain in bed. Pettis v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 790.

Where decedent's attending physician testified that the wound inflicted by accused was not necessarily fatal, that decedent's life might have been saved by an operation which the witness desired to perform, but was forbidden to do so by decedent's mother, who had him in charge, and that she administered to him certain medicine which was detrimental and which witness told her not to give, entitled accused to a charge on negligence and improper treatment by others. Masters v. State, 71 App. 608, 160 S. W. 693.

In a prosecution for homicide, where it was shown that shortly after he was shot, deceased was taken to a nearby house; that unsuccessful efforts were made to secure a doctor; that next day deceased was removed to a town where he was attended by a physician, but died shortly thereafter, and the doctor testified that the wound which extended from the upper left side through the lungs, liver, and intestines and lodged in the right hip was necessarily fatal—the court properly refused to instruct on the issue of negligence and gross mistreatment as the cause of death. Francis v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 779.

Death within a year and a day.—See notes under art. 228, ante.

Art. 1083. [653] Gross negligence, etc., refers to acts of others.—The foregoing article, in what is said of gross neglect or improper treatment, has reference to the acts of some person other than him who inflicts the first injury, as of the physician, nurse or other attendant. If the person inflicting the injury, which makes it necessary to call aid in preserving the life of the person injured, shall wilfully fail or neglect to call such aid, he shall be deemed equally guilty, as if the injury were one which would inevitably lead to death.

See notes to art. 1082, ante.

Negligence and improper treatment.—The fact that the family of the deceased was present when the wound was inflicted, does not relieve the person inflicting the wound from furnishing aid to the injured party. Williams v. State, 2 App. 271.

In defining homicide, the Code is more specific than the common law. The common law defines it, as the "killing of any human creature," the "killing of a man by a man." The Code defines it as the destruction of the life of one human being by the act, agency, procurement, or omission of another, and still further, it requires that the destruction of life must be complete by such act, agency, etc. The words "but although the injury which caused death might not under other circumstances have proved fatal," used in article 1082, refer to and mean all injuries which are not of themselves inevitably fatal, or which are not inflicted under circumstances which render them inevitably fatal. In other words, all injuries, which under the circumstances of the particular case, are not necessarily fatal, but which may cause death. An injury which must cause death under any state of circumstances, such as the severance of the head from the body, the severance of the carotid artery, or the breaking of the neck, would not come within the meaning of the words quoted. For injuries of this character no legislation is required, because they can not be affected by either care or negligence, skillful or unskillful treatment. They produce death in spite of any human aid. But if the injury be such that death is not a certain result thereof, if it be such that human aid and skill may prevent a fatal termination, then it is such an injury as the words quoted refer to. At common law the neglect or improper treatment must produce the death in order to relieve the person who inflicted the original injury of the homicide. But the preceding articles of the Code do not require that the neglect or improper treatment should cause the death, either in whole or in part. If there be gross neglect, or manifestly improper treatment, either in preventing, or in aiding the fatal effects of the injury, the death of the injured person is not homicide by the party who inflicted the original injury. Gross neglect and improper treatment are not only such as produce the destruction of life, but such also as allow, suffer, or permit it. The preceding articles, therefore, undoubtedly change the rule of the common law, the theory of which is, that he who caused the first injury should be held guilty of the homicide. The cases of Williams v. State, 2 App. 271, and Powell v. State, 13 App. 244, which declare the common law rule, are virtually overruled upon this point. Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593.

If the party who inflicted the injury wilfully fails to furnish necessary aid, and the injured person dies from the injury, the injury is regarded as inevitably fatal, and no question as to neglect or improper treatment by others can in such case arise as a matter of defense. Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593.

Deceased cannot be charged with neglect or grossly improper treatment where he refuses to allow his leg to be amputated. Franklin v. State, 41 App. 21, 51 S. W. 952.

If one illegally shoots another or inflicts upon him an injury that might not be fatal, and yet of his malice fails to call aid, and the injured party dies, the killing might be imputed to him; but in any event the failure to call aid must be wilful, that is with legal malice and evil intent. Ware v. State, 41 App. 415, 55 S. W. 344.

Charge.—The following charge was held to be correct: "Homicide is the destruction of the life of one human being by the act, procurement, or culpable omission of another. The destruction of life must be complete by such act or agency. But, although the injury which caused death might not, under other circumstances, have proved fatal, yet, if such injury be the cause of death, without its appearing that there has been any great neglect, or manifest improper treatment by some other person, such as a physician, nurse, or other attendant, it would be homicide; and if the jury are satisfied, from the evidence, that some one shot the deceased, and inflicted upon him a wound, which was not in itself necessarily mortal, and that the wound inflicted produced blood poisoning, or any other effect which would result in the death of the deceased, the party inflicting the injury would be as guilty as if the wound would of itself inevitably lead to death." Hart v. State, 15 App. 202, 49 Am. Rep. 188. See this subject fully discussed in Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593.

For facts under which the court, properly charging this article, should, in connection therewith, have submitted articles 1147 and 1150, and in connection with these last named articles, have submitted manslaughter and aggravated assault, see Lee v. State, 44 App. 460, 72 S. W. 195.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 508.

Art. 1084. [654] Body of deceased must be found.—No person shall be convicted of any grade of homicide, unless the body of the deceased, or portions of it, are found and sufficiently identified to establish the fact of the death of the person charged to have been killed. [Act March 8, 1887, p. 4.]

See notes under art. 1140, post.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 508.

Evidence of corpus delicti.—In prosecutions for murder, the state must establish clearly and satisfactorily the corpus delicti. The corpus delicti consists of two things: (1) a criminal act; and (2), the defendant's agency in the commission of such act. In homicide, in order to establish the corpus delicti it must be proved: (1) the death of the party alleged to be dead, and that the death was produced by the criminal act of some one other than the deceased, and was not the result of accident or natural cause; and (2), that the defendant committed the act which caused the death. The corpus delicti may be established by circumstantial evidence, but the fact of the death of the party alleged to have been killed, and that his death was caused by criminal agency, must be clearly shown, and a confession of the defendant is not of itself sufficient proof of this part of the corpus delicti. Special care should be exercised as to this part of the corpus delicti, and there should be no conviction except where this part of the case is proved with particular clearness and certainty. Lovelady v. State, 14 App. 545. And see Id., 17 App. 286. Walker v. State, 14 App. 609; Willson v. State, 41 Tex. 320, Id., 43 Tex. 472; Gay v. State, 40 App. 242, 49 S. W. 612, citing Kugadt v. State, 38 App. 681, 44 S. W. 989; Gay v. State, 42 App. 450, 60 S. W. 771; Conde v. State, 35 App. 98, 34 S. W. 286, 60 Am. St. Rep. 22; Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 65 S. W. 1060; Lott v. State, 60 App. 162, 131 S. W. 553.

See, also, Stegald v. State, 24 App. 207, 5 S. W. 853; Shulze v. State, 28 App. 316, 12 S. W. 1084; Puryear v. State, 28 App. 74, 11 S. W. 929; Morris v. State, 30 App. 95, 16 S. W. 757.

— Admissibility of evidence.—It is competent to show the cause of a death without the aid of expert witnesses, even in a case where death did not ensue immediately after the infliction of the wound. Experts may give their opinions as to the cause of the death. Smith v. State, 43 Tex. 643; Powell v. State, 13 App. 244. See, also, McMillan v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 576.

— Sufficiency of proof of corpus delicti in general.—Evidence held sufficient to establish the corpus delicti. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 527; Shulze v. State, 28 App. 316, 12 S. W. 1084; Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1161.

Evidence held insufficient, on a trial for infanticide, to establish the corpus delicti. Harris v. State, 30 App. 549, 17 S. W. 1110. And see Harris v. State, 28 App. 308, 12 S. W. 1102, 19 Am. St. Rep. 837. And see, also, Jackson v. State, 29 App. 459, 16 S. W. 247; Southern v. State, 57 App. 188, 122 S. W. 259.

For cases and evidence bearing upon the question as to whether the death was caused by the criminal act or agency of another person than the deceased see Olivares v. State, 23 App. 305, 4 S. W. 903; Treadwell v. State, 16 App. 560; Heacock v. State, 13 App. 97; Spear v. State, 16 App. 98; Scott v. State, 23 App. 521, 5 S. W. 142; Lucas v. State, 19 App. 79; Johnson v. State, 20 App. 178.

The corpus delicti must be proven with greater certainty than a mere probability or strong suspicion. Clifton v. State, 39 App. 619, 47 S. W. 642.

The state is bound to prove the corpus delicti, and the amount of proof of identification cannot be complained of. McCue v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 281.

— Circumstantial evidence.—Where criminating facts are fully proven the conviction will not be set aside because the evidence is circumstantial. Wilkins v. State, 35 App. 525, 34 S. W. 627; Wilson v. State, 39 App. 365, 46 S. W. 251; Gossett v. State, 57 App. 43, 123 S. W. 428.

In a prosecution for killing a newborn child, evidence held to sustain a finding that the child's head was mashed in and its neck broken. Jones v. State, 63 App. 494, 141 S. W. 953.

— Confession or testimony of accused.—The uncorroborated testimony of the defendant is not sufficient of itself to establish the corpus delicti, nor to support a conviction. Willard v. State, 27 App. 386, 11 S. W. 453, 11 Am. St. Rep. 197; Harris v. State, 28 App. 308, 12 S. W. 1102, 19 Am. St. Rep. 837; Jackson v. State, 29 App. 459, 16 S. W. 247.

The confession of defendant, together with circumstances tending to show his guilt, is sufficient to prove or establish the corpus delicti. Mathews v. State, 39 App. 553, 47 S. W. 647, 48 S. W. 189.

Where, in a prosecution for infanticide, there was no proof other than defendant's confession that the child came to its death by any act of hers, except, perhaps, by her abandonment thereof, and no examination of its lungs had been made to determine whether in fact the child had ever lived, the proof of the corpus delicti was insufficient to sustain a conviction, under the rule that the corpus delicti must be proved independent of defendant's confession. Ellison v. State, 59 App. 3, 127 S. W. 542.

A confession will not sustain a conviction of homicide unless it is shown that decedent has been killed and that the killing was criminally caused by accused's act or agency. Lott v. State, 60 App. 162, 131 S. W. 553.

An extrajudicial confession standing alone is not sufficient proof of the corpus delicti, but is sufficient if there be such extrinsic corroborative circumstances as will, taken with the confession, produce conviction in the minds of the jury beyond a reasonable doubt. Lott v. State, 60 App. 162, 131 S. W. 553.

The corpus delicti need not be proved independently of confessions which may be taken in connection with circumstantial evidence to determine that fact. Lott v. State, 60 App. 162, 131 S. W. 553.

See, also, Anderson v. State, 34 App. 546, 31 S. W. 673, 53 Am. St. Rep. 722; Hunter v. State, 34 App. 599, 31 S. W. 674.

— Finding of dead body and identification thereof.—The old article read as follows: "No person shall be convicted of any grade of homicide unless the body of the deceased, or portions of it, are found and sufficiently identified to establish the fact of killing."

This article was amended so as to avoid an important question which might have arisen, that is, did it not require, not only that the body of the deceased, or portions of it, should be identified as that of the alleged murdered party, but also that it should be so identified as to establish the fact of killing; that is, that the body, or portions of it, found and identified, should exhibit evidence sufficient to prove that the individual had been killed, that is, that the death was produced by violence and not by natural causes. Walker v. State, 14 App. 609. Under the article as amended this question can not arise.

Where a party has disappeared and portions of a human body are found, after the admission of testimony concerning his disappearance the court should guard the jury against using the circumstances of the disappearance in identifying the remains found as those of the alleged murdered man. Gay v. State, 42 App. 450, 60 S. W. 771. It is only required that such proof be of a legal character and sufficient to clearly establish the death of the party alleged to have been killed. It need not be positive, and if circumstantial, all that is required is that it sufficiently identifies the remains, or portions thereof, as those of deceased. Gay v. State, 40 App. 242, 49 S. W. 612, citing Taylor v. State, 35 Tex. 97; Wilson v. State, 41 Tex. 320; s. c., 43 Tex. 472; Brown v. State, 1 App. 154; Jackson v. State, 29 App. 458, 16 S. W. 247; Gay v. State, 42 App. 450, 60 S. W. 771; McCue v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 280.

The body may be identified by the best evidence attainable, and its identification by positive testimony is not indispensable. Taylor v. State, 35 Tex. 97.

A witness unskilled in anatomy ought not to be permitted to testify as to the sex of a skeleton, but experts should be called to testify upon that question. Wilson v. State, 41 Tex. 320.

For the purpose of identifying the dead body or the portions thereof found, as the remains of the person alleged to have been killed, it is competent to identify clothing and other articles found upon, with, or near to such remains, as the property of the alleged deceased person. Campbell v. State, 8 App. 84; Early v. State, 9 App. 476; McCue v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 280.

It is indispensable that a dead body, or portions of a dead body, be found, and be clearly proved to be the body, or portions of the body of the person alleged to have been killed. Walker v. State, 14 App. 609.

For instances of identification and attempted identification of remains, see Scott v. State, 23 App. 521, 5 S. W. 142; Lightfoot v. State, 20 App. 77; Hung Ah Hang v. State, 18 App. 675; Spear v. State, 16 App. 98; Lum v. State, 11 App. 483; Hamby v. State, 36 Tex. 523.

Eyewitness testimony.—See notes to C. C. P. art. 717.

Charge.—This article is a rule of evidence and limitation on the quantum of proof, and need not be charged to the jury. Southern v. State, 60 App. 578, 132 S. W. 778.

For correct charge, see Southern v. State, 60 App. 578, 132 S. W. 778.

Art. 1085. [655] Person killed must be in existence.—The person upon whom the homicide is alleged to have been committed must be in existence by actual birth. It is homicide, however, to destroy human life actually in existence, however frail such existence may be, or however near extinction from other causes.

Child.—An infant can not be the subject of homicide until its complete expulsion, alive, from its mother. See this case held insufficient to prove the existence of the alleged murdered infant. Wallace v. State, 10 App. 255; see, also, Sheppard v. State, 17 App. 74; Harris v. State, 28 App. 308, 12 S. W. 1102, 19 Am. St. Rep. 837; Harris v. State, 30 App. 549, 17 S. W. 1110; Josef v. State, 34 App. 446, 30 S. W. 1067.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 508.

Indictment sufficiently alleged the "infant child of E. S., said child being without name." Puryear v. State, 28 App. 74, 11 S. W. 929.

Art. 1086. [656] Produced by words.—Although it is necessary to constitute homicide that it shall result from some act of the party accused, yet, if words be used which are reasonably calculated to produce and do produce an act which is the immediate cause of death, it is homicide; as, for example, if a blind man, a stranger, a child, or a person of unsound mind, be directed by words to a precipice or other dangerous place where he falls and is killed; or if one be directed to take any article of medicine, food or drink, known to be poisonous and which does produce a fatal effect; in these and like cases, the person so operating upon the mind or conduct of the person injured shall be deemed guilty of homicide.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 508.

CHAPTER TWELVE OF JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE

1095. Order may be written or verbal.	1107. In protecting person or property from other attacks.
1096. Written orders include what.	1108. Retreat not necessary.
	1109. Requisites of the attack.
	1110. Circumstances justifying in defense of property.

Article 1087. [657] When justifiable.—Homicide is justifiable in the cases enumerated in the succeeding articles of this chapter.

1. OF A PUBLIC ENEMY

Art. 1088. [658] Killing a public enemy.—It is lawful to kill a public enemy, not only in the prosecution of war, but when he may be in the act of hostile invasion or occupation of any part of the state. A public enemy is any person acting under the authority or enlisted in the service of any government at war with this state or with the United States. Persons belonging to hostile tribes of Indians, who habitually commit depredations upon the lives or property of inhabitants of this state, and all persons acting with such tribes are public enemies, and this whether found in the act of committing such depredations or under circumstances which sufficiently show an intention so to do.

Art. 1089. [659] But not by poison.—Homicide of a public enemy by poison or the use of poisoned weapons is not justifiable.

Art. 1090. [660] Nor a deserter, prisoner, etc.—Homicide of a public enemy who is a deserter or prisoner of war, or the bearer of a flag of truce, is not justifiable.

2. OF A CONVICT

Art. 1091. [661] Execution of a convict.—The execution of a convict for a capital offense, by a legally qualified officer, under the warrant of a court of competent jurisdiction, is justifiable when the same takes place in the manner authorized by law and directed by warrant.

3. BY OFFICERS IN THE PERFORMANCE OF A DUTY, AND BY OTHER PERSONS UNDER CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES

Art. 1092. [662] By officer in execution of lawful order.—Homicide by an officer in the execution of the lawful orders of magistrates and courts is justifiable when he is violently resisted and has just ground to fear danger to his own life in executing the order.

Homicide by officers.—An officer's right of self-defense is limited to danger or apparent danger to his own life, and he is not authorized to slay a party to rescue a prisoner, or a prisoner attempting to escape when his own life is not endangered, and when the weapon used in assault upon him is not a deadly weapon. Williams v. State, 41 App. 365, 54 S. W. 759.

Homicide by militiamen.—A militiaman in time of peace may kill in self-defense, but has no other authority to take human life. Manley v. State, 62 App. 392, 137 S. W. 1137.

And further as to militiamen, see Manley v. State, 62 App. 392, 137 S. W. 1137.

Art. 1093. [663] Even though it is erroneous.—The officer is justifiable, though there may have been an error of judgment on the part of the magistrate or court, if the order emanated from a proper authority.

Art. 1094. [664] Qualification of the foregoing.—The rule set forth in the two preceding articles is subject to the following restrictions:

1. The order must be that of a magistrate or a court having lawful authority to issue it.

2. It must have such form as the law requires to give it validity.

3. The person executing the order must be some officer duly authorized by law to execute the order, or some person specially appointed in accordance with law for the performance of the duty.

4. If the person executing the order be an officer, and performing a duty which no other person can by law perform, he must have taken the oath of office and given bond, where such is required by law.

5. The order must be executed in the manner directed by law, and the person executing the same must make known his purpose and the capacity in which he acts.

6. If the order be a written one, and the person against whom it issues, before resistance offered, wishes to see the same, or hear it read, the person charged with its execution shall produce the order and show it or read it.

7. In making an arrest under a written order, the person acting under such order shall, in all cases, declare to the party against whom it is directed the offense of which he is accused, and state the nature of the warrant, unless prevented therefrom by the act of the party to be arrested.

8. The officer or other person executing an order of arrest is required to use such force as may be necessary to prevent an escape when it is attempted, but he shall not in any case kill one who attempts to escape, unless in making or attempting such escape the life of the officer is endangered, or he is threatened with great bodily injury.

9. In overcoming a resistance to the execution of an order, the officer or person executing the same may oppose such force as is necessary to overcome the resistance, but he shall not take the life of the person resisting, unless he has just ground to fear that his own life will be taken, or that he will suffer great bodily injury in the execution of the order.

10. A prisoner under sentence of death, or of imprisonment in the penitentiary, or attempting to escape from the penitentiary, may be killed by the officer having legal custody of him, if his escape can in no other manner be prevented.

1. Arrest.—The rules under which an arrest may be made by a peace officer, without warrant, are defined by Code Cr. Proc. arts. 259–263. These articles prescribe the only circumstances under which an arrest can be made by a peace officer without a warrant, except when the arrest is made in the prevention of an offense. Johnson v. State, 5 App. 43; Ross v. State, 10 App. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 643; Lacy v. State, 7 App. 403; Staples v. State, 14 App. 136; Jacobs v. State, 28 App. 79, 12 S. W. 408; Ex parte Sherwood, 29 App. 334, 15 S. W. 812; Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944.

A person unlawfully carrying arms may be arrested without warrant. Hodges v. State, 6 App. 615. See, also, art. 479, ante; Jacobs v. State, 28 App. 79, 12 S. W. 408.

And see generally, Graham v. State, 29 App. 31, 13 S. W. 1013; Newburn v. Durham, 10 Civ. App. 655, 32 S. W. 112; Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705; English v. State, 34 App. 190, 30 S. W. 233; Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389; Russell v. State, 37 App. 314, 39 S. W. 674; Mundine v. State, 37 App. 5, 38 S. W. 619; Moore v. State, 40 App. 439, 50 S. W. 942; Lynch v. State, 41 App. 510, 57 S. W. 1130; Montgomery v. State, 43 App. 304, 65 S. W. 537, 55 L. R. A. 710; Cortez v. State, 43 App. 375, 66 S. W. 453; s. c., 44 App. 169, 69 S. W. 536; Vann v. State, 45 App. 434, 77 S. W. 813, 108 Am. St. Rep. 961; Earles v. State, 47 App. 559, 85 S. W. 1; Johnson v. State, 49 App. 250, 92 S. W. 257; Early v. State, 50 App. 344, 97 S. W. 82.

2. — Warrants.—For requisites of warrant of arrest, and complaint, see C. C. P. arts. 266–271, and Pierce v. State, 17 App. 232.

The ordinary jurisdiction of a justice of the peace is circumscribed by the limits of his precinct, but when proceeding as an examining court his authority is coextensive with his county. Hart v. State, 15 App. 202, 49 Am. Rep. 188.

A peace officer has no authority beyond the limits of his county to arrest a party accused of crime. A warrant of arrest issued by a justice of the peace confers no authority to arrest in another county, unless it is indorsed by a judge of the supreme court, court of appeals, or a district or county judge (when it may be executed anywhere in the state), or by a magistrate of the county in which the accused is found, when it may be executed in the latter county, but must be executed by an officer of the county where the accused is found. Ledbetter v. State, 23 App. 247, 5 S. W. 226; Peter v. State, 23 App. 684, 5 S. W. 228.

And see, also, Toliver v. State, 32 App. 444, 24 S. W. 286; Russell v. State, 37 App. 314, 39 S. W. 674.

3. — Power of city to authorize arrest without warrant.—See Joske v. Irvine (Civ. App.) 43 S. W. 278, and see art. 963 C. C. P. and notes.

SUBD. 2

4. Validity of process.—If a process, fair and legal on its face, is placed in the hands of an officer for execution, he will be protected in executing it, although he may know of facts which render such process in reality void. Rainey v. State, 20 App. 455; Tierney v. Frazier, 57 Tex. 437.

And further as to validity of process, see, also, Alford v. State, 8 App. 545; Graham v. State, 29 App. 31, 13 S. W. 1013.

See notes under art. 1094, subd. 1, ante.

SUBD. 3

5. Officers authorized.—See C. C. P. arts. 43–47, and notes thereunder. See, also, arts. 279, 280, C. C. P.

SUBD. 4

6. De facto officer.—See Weatherford v. State, 31 App. 530, 21 S. W. 251, 37 Am. St. Rep. 828, and cases cited.

7. Execution of process.—See C. C. P. art. 288.

If a person whose arrest is attempted under legal process knows the purpose and official character of the officer, and the arrest be otherwise lawful, it is his duty to submit, and resistance is unjustifiable, though the officer makes no declaration of his official character or purpose. Plasters v. State, 1 App. 673. But it is otherwise where the process is illegal. Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705.

SUBD. 6

8. Execution of process in other county.—A sheriff is not authorized to execute a capias beyond the limits of his county. In this case the paper was produced, and an altercation and exchange of shots occurred between the prisoner and the officer while the former was reading the warrant. Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454.

SUBD. 7

9. Failure to demand nature of authority.—Resistance after accompanying officer without demanding production of authority to make arrest. Miller v. State, 31 App. 609, 21 S. W. 925, 37 Am. St. Rep. 836.

SUBD. 8

Cited, Williams v. State, 41 App. 365, 54 S. W. 759.

10. Force.—If an officer kills his prisoner, who is not resisting or attacking him, but is simply running away to make his escape, in the absence of proof of express malice, he is guilty of murder in the second degree. Caldwell v. State, 41 Tex. 86; Plasters v. State, 1 App. 673.

In attempting to make an arrest for a petty offense, the officer is not authorized to fire on the party fleeing from such arrest. Tiner v. State, 44 Tex. 128.

Where the evidence showed that a prisoner had escaped by violence from an officer, and was fleeing, but was at the same time in the attitude of, or at least prepared for resistance, it was held that the officer had the right to treat him as resisting. James v. State, 44 Tex. 314.

Authority of sheriff to use force in preventing escape of prisoner in his custody, see James v. State, 44 Tex. 314; Skidmore v. State, 43 Tex. 93.

An officer having lawful authority to make an arrest, may, on meeting with resistance, employ such force as may be necessary to overcome such resistance; but he must use no greater force than is necessary for the arrest and detention of the accused. Beaverts v. State, 4 App. 175; Giroux v. State, 40 Tex. 97; Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944.

The officer must not use a deadly weapon in making an arrest unless compelled to do so by the conduct of the prisoner. English v. State, 34 App. 190, 30 S. W. 233.

11. Rights of officer making illegal arrest.—See Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944; Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705; Mundine v. State, 37 App. 5, 38 S. W. 619; Hardin v. State, 40 App. 208, 49 S. W. 607.

12. Charge on right of self-defense.—Giebel v. State, 28 App. 153, 12 S. W. 591.

Cited, Williams v. State, 41 App. 365, 54 S. W. 759.

13. Force to overcome resistance.—If the officer acts outside of his authority or exercises it unlawfully, his official character does not prevent accused from setting up the unlawful acts to justify or extenuate acts of resistance. James v. State, 44 Tex. 314.

An officer or other person, in executing an order of arrest, is authorized to use such force as is necessary in overcoming resistance to the execution of such order; but he shall not take the life of the person resisting arrest, unless he has just grounds to fear that his own life will be taken, or that he will suffer great bodily injury in the execution of the order. Plasters v. State, 1 App. 673.

Mistake as to identity of person being arrested. Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944.

Effect of previous threats of prospective prisoner against officer. Miller v. State, 32 App. 319, 20 S. W. 1103.

Use of deadly weapon is improper unless the conduct of the prospective prisoner requires it. English v. State, 34 App. 190, 30 S. W. 233.

Where accused was merely attempting to escape, and not resisting the officer, the latter had no right to kill him, and if the officer drew his pistol and shot at accused to kill him to prevent escape, the right of self-defense was complete. Hardin v. State, 40 App. 208, 49 S. W. 607.

14. Degree of homicide.—See notes under arts. 1128-1144, post.

Cited, Ex parte Russell, 71 App. 377, 160 S. W. 75.

15. Convict and guard.—A convict guard is not authorized to kill a convict in attempting to re-arrest him after he has escaped. In such case the guard has only the authority of a peace officer. Wright v. State, 44 Tex. 645.

The guard may kill if absolutely necessary to prevent the escape of the convict in the first instance. Washington v. State, 1 App. 647.

16. Arrest of convict without warrant.—See Ex parte Sherwood, 29 App. 334, 15 S. W. 812.

17. Manslaughter.—See art. 1128 et seq., post.

Art. 1095. [665] Order may be written or verbal.—The order referred to in this chapter may be either written or verbal, where a verbal order is allowed for the arrest of a person.

Process.—See arts. 42, 43, ante, and C. C. P., arts. 265 to 291.

Art. 1096. [666] Written order includes, what.—Under written orders are included all process in a criminal or civil action which directs the seizure of the person or of property.

Art. 1097. [667] Verbal order justifies only in felony.—No officer or other person ordered verbally to arrest another is justified in killing, except the arrest be in a case of felony, or for the prevention of a felony.

Illegal arrest.—As to illegal arrest, see Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944.

Art. 1098. [668] Persons aiding officer justified.—Persons called in aid of an officer, in the performance of a duty, are justified in the same manner as the officer himself.

Possemen.—A de facto officer, known to be such, is charged with the prevention of violations of law in his presence, and may summon the posse comitatus to aid him. A posseman acting within the scope of the officer's authority is justifiable in what he does. Weatherford v. State, 31 App. 530, 21 S. W. 251, 37 Am. St. Rep. 823. See, also, C. C. P., art. 45.

Art. 1099. [669] Persons aiding escape may be killed.—All persons opposing the execution of the order, or aiding in an escape, may be treated in the same manner as the person against whom the order is directed, or who is attempting to escape.

Art. 1100. [670] Federal officers included.—Officers acting under the authority of the laws or courts of the United States have the rights and are liable to the rules prescribed in this chapter.

Art. 1101. [671] In suppressing riots.—Homicide is justifiable when necessary to suppress a riot, when the same is attempted to be suppressed in the manner pointed out in the Code of Criminal Procedure, and can in no way be suppressed except by taking life.

Suppression of riots.—As to officer's authority, see C. C. P., arts. 139-147, and notes.

Art. 1102. [672] In adultery.—Homicide is justifiable when committed by the husband upon the person of any one taken in the act of adultery with the wife; provided, the killing take place before the parties to the act of adultery have separated.

Adultery as justification.—The words "taken in the act of adultery," as used in this article, do not mean that in order to avail himself of the protection given by said article, and justify a homicidal act, the husband should be an actual eyewitness to the physical act of coition between his wife and the person slain; but it will be sufficient if he sees them in bed together, or leaving that position, or in such a position as indicates with reasonable certainty to a rational mind that they had just then committed the adulterous act, or were then about to commit it. But no knowledge otherwise acquired by the husband, however positive, of an adulterous intercourse between his wife and the deceased, will justify the homicide. When adultery is an issue, it may be established by circumstantial evidence, and though a mistake as to the fact of adultery may possibly exist, yet "if a person laboring under a mistake as to a particular fact shall do an act which would otherwise be criminal, he is guilty of no offense, provided it be such a mistake as does not arise from want of proper care on his part." Ante, arts. 46, 47. In other words, a person may always act upon reasonable appearances, and his guilt depends upon the reasonableness of the appearances judged of from his own standpoint. When the facts require it the charge of the court should thus explain the words, "taken in the act of adultery," otherwise the jury might conclude that they meant that the parties must be detected in the actual physical act of coition. The words, "before the parties to the act of adultery have separated," mean only that the parties are still together in company with each other, after the act of adultery; not that they are still united in the act of copulation, and, when the facts require it, the charge of the court should so instruct the jury. Adultery, as used in the preceding article, is ecclesiastical, and not statutory adultery, and to justify a homicide under said article, the defendant need not show that adultery, as defined by art. 490 of this Code, was committed, but it will be sufficient if he show a single defilement of his marriage bed, and where this issue is in the case, the court should so instruct the jury. Price v. State, 18 App. 474, 51 Am. Rep. 322.

One who apprehends his wife and another in the actual physical act of copulation slays the seducer before the parties have separated, is guilty of no grade of homicide. Massie v. State, 30 App. 64, 16 S. W. 770; Morrison v. State, 39 App. 519, 47 S. W. 369.

The statute makes no exception in favor of one place or another, but is broad enough to include every place. It does not authorize immunity to one who has debauched the wife of a citizen, provided he shall induce her to meet him at a house of ill fame, or assignation house. Giles v. State, 43 App. 561, 67 S. W. 412.

See this case for facts held to justify the defendant in believing that deceased and defendant's wife had been copulating or were about to do so, when he discovered them, and hence a charge on manslaughter was not authorized. Dewberry v. State (Cr. App.) 74 S. W. 308.

A charge explaining the expression "taken in the act of adultery" which says, "that the husband must see the parties together in such a position as indicates with reasonable certainty to a rational mind," etc., is erroneous. It was the indication of circumstances that addressed themselves to appellant's mind at the time, which was the question the jury were investigating. If it reasonably appeared to defendant that his wife and deceased were about to commit or had committed adultery he would be justify in slaying deceased. Gregory v. State, 50 App. 73, 94 S. W. 1043.

Where, in a prosecution of accused for killing his wife, the state introduced his confession, in which he stated that he intentionally shot his wife while in flagrante delicto with another, which, by this article is declared justifiable homicide, an instruction that, if accused discovered his wife in such offense, and shot intending to kill her paramour, but accidentally struck and killed her, they should acquit was prejudicial error, though he testified that he shot at his wife's companion, and accidentally struck her. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 583.

Art. 1103. [673] But not in case of connivance.—Homicide cannot be justified by reason of the existence of the circumstances spoken of in the preceding article, where it appears that there has been, on the part of the husband, any connivance in or assent to the adulterous connection.

See notes under preceding article.

4. DEFENSE OF PERSON OR PROPERTY

Art. 1104. [674] In defense of person and property.—Homicide is permitted in the necessary defense of person or property, under the circumstances and subject to the rules herein set forth.

Art. 1105. [675] In preventing other felonies.—Homicide is permitted by law when inflicted for the purpose of preventing the offense of murder, rape, robbery, maiming, disfiguring, castration, arson, burglary and theft at night, or when inflicted upon a person or persons who are found armed with deadly weapons and in disguise in the night time on premises not his or their own, whether the homicide be committed by the party about to be injured or by some person in his behalf, when the killing takes place under the following circumstances:

1. It must reasonably appear by the acts or by words, coupled with the acts of the person killed, that it was the purpose and intent of such person to commit one of the offenses above named.

2. The killing must take place while the person killed was in the act of committing the offense, or after some act done by him showing evidently an intent to commit such offense.

3. It must take place before the offense committed by the party killed is actually completed; except that, in case of rape, the ravisher may be killed at any time before he has escaped from the presence of his victim, and except, also, in the cases hereinafter enumerated.

4. Where the killing takes place to prevent the murder of some other person, it shall not be deemed that the murder is completed so long as the offender is still inflicting violence, though the mortal wound may have been given.

5. If homicide takes place in preventing a robbery, it shall be justifiable if done while the robber is in the presence of the person robbed, or is flying with the money or other article taken by him.

6. In cases of maiming, disfiguring or castration, the homicide may take place at any time while the offender is mistreating with violence the person injured, though he may have completed the offense.

7. In case of arson, the homicide may be inflicted while the offender is in or at the building or other property burnt, or flying from the place before the destruction of the same.

8. In cases of burglary and theft by night, the homicide is justifiable at any time while the offender is in the building, or at the place where the theft is committed, or is within reach of gunshot from such place or building.

9. When the party slain in disguise is engaged in any attempt, by word, gesture or otherwise, to alarm some other person or persons and put them in bodily fear.

1. Defense of another.—A person acting in behalf of another, to prevent such other from being murdered, ravished, robbed, maimed, disfigured, or from sustaining serious bodily injury, is entitled to the same justification under the law as would be the person in whose behalf he acts. For a discussion of the law in such cases, see Cuffee v. State, 8 App. 187; Foster v. State, Id. 248; Dyson v. State, 14 App. 454; Johnson v. State, 5 App. 43; Sterling v. State, 15 App. 249.

2. Theft at night.—Accused and deceased gambled at cards in the nighttime, and when the game ceased two $10 bills lying between them were claimed by both. Deceased started away with them, and accused demanded them, and, when deceased refused to give them to him, struck him a blow with a stick shown to be a deadly weapon, from which he died. Held, that evidence of these facts did not require the submission of the question of justification in preventing a theft at night, under Pen. Code 1911, art. 1105, providing that homicide is permitted when inflicted for the purpose of preventing such a theft. Ballock v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 725.

Under the present statute, the court's failure, on a trial for homicide, to submit the issue of justification in preventing a theft at night was not reversible error, where no exception was taken to the charge at the trial. Ballock v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 726.

5. Reasonableness of apprehension.—The apprehension upon the part of the slayer must be reasonable—not merely conjectural, such as might arise from the mere presence of the intruder, but must be predicated upon some act of deceased of a nature calculated to arouse in the mind of one of ordinary prudence and caution that a theft is about to be committed. Grant v. Hass, 31 Civ. App. 688, 75 S. W. 345.

This article comprises all cases in which, from the acts of the assailant, or his words coupled therewith, it reasonably appears that his purpose or intent is to murder, ravish, rob, maim, disfigure, castrate, or do other serious bodily injury to the assailed party. In such case the assailed party may lawfully kill the assailant while he is committing the offense or injury, or when he has done some act evidently showing his intent to commit it, and the assailed party need not first resort to other means of prevention. *Kendall v. One has the right to kill, resisting a combined attempt to rob and assault with a dangerous weapon. Pryse v. State, 54 App. 523, 113 S. W. 938.

Deceased having attacked defendant with a view of roping him and dragging him from his horse and inflicting death on him, defendant was not required to resort to any other means to repel the attack, than to defend himself in the best manner he could. Williams v. State, 61 App. 356, 136 S. W. 771.

Where there is evidence of threats by deceased against the accused, and of an attack by deceased on accused with a knife, by means of which he inflicted several wounds on accused, and that, after accused had succeeded in getting loose from deceased and secured his gun, deceased came towards him again, and did not heed a warning to stop, a charge which required accused to resort to other means of defense than killing his assailant was error. Maclin v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 951.

10. Defense of another.—Homicide in defense of another is justifiable: 1, when deceased is in the act of murdering such other person; 2, when it reasonably appears that deceased is in the act of committing murder upon such other person; 3, where deceased would have been guilty of murder when in the act of killing upon an insufficient provocation, or his passion had not in fact been aroused by such provocation. Glover v. State, 33 App. 224, 26 S. W. 204; and see, also, Shumate v. State, 38 App. 266, 42 S. W. 600; Mitchell v. State, 38 App. 170, 41 S. W. 816; McGrath v. State, 35 App. 413, 34 S. 11. Charge.—Charge held sufficient. Welch v. State, 57 App. 111, 122 S. W. 881.

SUBD. 6

12. Mistreating with violence.—To assault a person is to mistreat him; but a mere assault is not alway violence. High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488.

SUBD. 7

13. Theft.—Homicide is justifiable when committed to prevent theft at night and at the place of the theft or within gunshot therefrom. And it is immaterial that the person killed had abandoned the property and was fleeing. Whitten v. State, 29 App. 504, 16 S. W. 296.

Homicide though committed while deceased is engaged in committing theft at night cannot be justified if the killing was done upon malice and not to prevent the theft. Laws v. State, 26 App. 643, 10 S. W. 220. See, also, Skaggs v. State, 31 App. 563, 21 S. W. 257.

“Nighttime” is any time between thirty minutes after sunset and thirty minutes before sunrise. Laws v. State, 26 App. 643, 10 S. W. 220. And see Whitten v. State, 29 App. 504, 16 S. W. 296.

If one enters the premises of another at night with the purpose and intention of stealing and if his conduct was such as to make it reasonably appear that such is his intention his killing is justifiable. The killing must be done while the offender is in the act of committing the offense or after some act has been done showing an intention to commit the offense, or if the theft is completed the killing must occur within gun shot distance of the place where the theft was committed. Grant v. Haas, 31 Civ. App. 688, 75 S. W. 345.

The killing of a mere trespasser is unjustifiable, but, where one is stealing and is leaving with the stolen goods, the killing is justified. Slack v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 107.

14. Evidence.—In a homicide case, in which accused claimed that the killing was done to prevent a theft which he believed was about to be committed in the nighttime, evidence held to support a conviction. Joy v. State, 57 App. 93, 123 S. W. 584.

15. Charge.—Omission to define nighttime, held error. Laws v. State, 26 App. 643, 10 S. W. 220.

In a homicide case, in which the evidence made it an issue whether accused shot decedent in the honest belief that he was about to steal corn from him, the court instructed that, if accused believed that decedent was stealing his corn at night and killed him while in reach of gunshot from the place from which he believed the corn had been taken, and such belief did not arise from want of proper care by accused, the jury should acquit, even though decedent or any one else had not in fact stolen the corn, and further charged fully and correctly on manslaughter. Held, that since, under the charge given, accused could not have been convicted of second-degree murder, the element of malice being absent, failure to charge that, if accused shot under the belief that decedent was about to commit theft at night, for the purpose of preventing such theft, the killing could not be more than manslaughter, was not error. Joy v. State, 57 App. 93, 123 S. W. 584.

Charge held erroneous under the facts. Slack v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 107.

Art. 1106. [676] Presumption from the use of weapons.—When the homicide takes place to prevent murder, maiming, disfiguring or castration, if the weapons or means used by the party attempting or committing such murder, maiming, disfiguring or castration are such as would have been calculated to produce that result, it is to be presumed that the person so using them designed to inflict the injury.

See arts. 51, 1147, ante, and notes thereunder.

Presumption as to Intent.—See art. 51, ante, and art. 1147, post.

“Used” and “using a weapon” defined. Ward v. State, 30 App. 687, 18 S. W. 793. And note the presumption to arise from conduct of deceased. Id. Cochran v. State, 28 App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Skaggs v. State, 31 App. 563, 21 S. W. 257.

A shotgun used as a firearm is a “deadly weapon.” Deneaner v. State, 58 App. 624, 127 S. W. 201.

A knife with a blade $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3 inches long, held a “deadly weapon.” Hudson v. State, 59 App. 650, 129 S. W. 1125, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1324.

Where deceased was making an assault on defendant with the loaded end of a quirt, which as sought to be used was a deadly weapon, the statute created from such fact a legal presumption that deceased intended to kill defendant, conferring on defendant the absolute right to kill deceased in self-defense. Polk v. State, 60 App. 499, 132 S. W. 767.

If decedent attacked accused with a knife in such a manner as was reasonably calculated to produce death or serious bodily harm, the law presumes that decedent intended to kill or seriously injure accused. Shed v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 125.

Charge.—If the weapon or means used by the assailant were calculated to effect the purpose of murder, rape, robbery, disfiguring, castration, or serious bodily injury, it is an absolute presumption of law that it was the intention of the assailant to effect the purpose indicated, and this presumption is imperative to juries as well as courts, and when applicable must be given in charge to the jury. Kendall v. State, 8 App. 569; Jones v. State, 17 App. 602; King v. State, 13 App. 277; Cochran v. State, 28 App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Renow v. State, 56 App. 343, 120 S. W. 174; Deneaner v. State, 58 App. 624, 127 S. W. 201; Skaggs v. State, 31 App. 563, 21 S. W. 257; Hall v. State, 43 App. 479, 66 S. W. 784; Yardley v. State, 50 App. 644, 100 S. W. 400, 123 Am. St. Rep. 869; Freeman v. State, 40 App. 545, 46 S. W. 641, 51 S. W. 230; Barnes v. State, 39 App. 184, 45 S. W. 495.

Presumptions of law adverse to a defendant should rarely be given in charge, and then great care should be observed to protect his rights. Shaw v. State, 34 App. 435, 31 S. W. 361.

From appellant's standpoint, and according to the theory developed by his testimony, he and those with him were first assaulted by the prosecuting witness and those with him. Such assault was made upon them with guns. The firing began at a distance of about seventy-five yards. In such State of the case the court should have charged the jury in accordance with the provisions of this statute. Scott v. State, 46 App. 315, 81 S. W. 952.

When the facts show that the prosecuting witness had thrown a cleaver about two feet long at defendant and was advancing on him with a butcher knife, the law presumes that he intended to kill witness or inflict serious bodily injury upon him, and the court should have given this article in charge to the jury. Cooper v. State, 48 App. 36, 85 S. W. 1060.

It is best to charge this article whenever the defendant seeks to justify on the ground of threatened attack by the use of means calculated to produce death or serious bodily injury. Henderson v. State, 55 App. 15, 115 S. W. 46.

It is not required to give this article in charge in any case unless the weapon used is known in law as a deadly weapon. A stick $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3 feet long and 1 inch in diameter is not in law a deadly weapon. Renow v. State, 56 App. 343, 120 S. W. 175; Clark v. State, 56 App. 293, 120 S. W. 179; Coker v. State, 59 App. 241, 128 S. W. 137.

Where the evidence for accused tended to show that deceased had something in his hand that looked like a gun, and the evidence for the State showed that deceased was not armed, the court should have given this article in charge. Duke v. State, 56 App. 502, 120 S. W. 894.

Where decedent's husband came to the door of a house and began shooting at defendant's companion, who thereupon turned quickly and without taking aim fired one barrel of a shotgun, the contents of which missed the husband and struck decedent, defendant was entitled to an instruction in the language of this article. Deneaner v. State, 58 App. 624, 127 S. W. 201.

Where deceased only grabbed accused but did not draw a knife, which was found closed, a charge on the presumption arising from the use of a deadly weapon was properly refused. Spencer v. State, 59 App. 217, 128 S. W. 118.

The charge was not required where deceased had the butt of his gun on the ground with his hand over the barrel in no attitude to shoot. Blue v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 730.

The court in charging on the presumption of intent from the use of a deadly weapon, should also give the substance of art. 1147. Coker v. State, 59 App. 241, 128 S. W. 137.

Evidence that the fatal blows were administered by a willow stick $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3 feet long, 1 inch in diameter at the small end, and $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter at the large end, and weighing a pound and a half, is insufficient in itself to warrant an instruction on the presumption of intent from the use of a deadly weapon. Coker v. State, 59 App. 241, 128 S. W. 137.

Uncontradicted testimony that a knife, which was a deadly weapon, was found beside deceased, required the charging of this article. Hudson v. State, 59 App. 650, 129 S. W. 1125, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1324.

Under this article where the defendant's testimony was that deceased was approaching him with an open knife with a blade three inches long, threatening to cut his guts out, it was error to refuse an instruction that when a deadly weapon is used the law presumes that death or serious bodily injury would be presumed. Best v. State, 61 App. 551, 135 S. W. 581.

Charge held to sufficiently present this presumption. Alexander v. State, 63 App. 102, 138 S. W. 721; Munos v. State, 58 App. 147, 124 S. W. 941.

Charge is not objectionable, though it does not define “deadly weapon.” Anderson v. State, 63 App. 525, 140 S. W. 457.

Where accused testified that he believed that decedent was armed, that decedent was attempting to enter accused's house at the time of the killing, that accused knew that decedent had something in his pocket, and that he had his hand in his pocket at the time the fatal shot was fired, a charge on self-defense, that, if decedent was armed and was about to use the weapon in a manner reasonably calculated to produce death or bodily injury, the law presumed that decedent intended to murder or inflict serious bodily injury on accused, who could rely on self-defense, was too favorable to accused. Wells v. State, 63 App. 618, 141 S. W. 96.

Where accused testified that decedent got his pistol from his pocket and dropped it, the court properly charged on the presumption arising from the use of a deadly weapon. Fox v. State, 71 App. 318, 158 S. W. 1141.

Where decedent was armed with a rock and threw it at accused, and then advanced on accused with a knife, the failure to charge this article was reversible error. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 620.

Where deceased shot defendant with a pistol which constituted the commencement of the difficulty, the court erred in failing to apply the law of presumption provided by this article. Foster v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 583.

An instruction presenting the presumption arising under this article in words that, "and if the weapon used by him, and the manner of its use, were such as were reasonably calculated to produce death or serious bodily injury," unless followed by the words "or it reasonably so appeared to defendant," or words of similar import, is erroneous. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 165.

An instruction that when a killing takes place to prevent murder, if the weapons and means used by the party attempting such murder are such as would have been calculated to produce that result, it is presumed that the person so using them designed to inflict the injury, and that if, at the time accused struck and killed deceased, deceased was making an attack upon him which, under the circumstances, reasonably indicated an intention to murder, maim, or disfigure him, with a piece of iron, and the weapon and manner of its use were calculated to produce murder, maiming, or disfiguration, the law would presume that deceased intended to murder accused, and that if under these circumstances, viewed from accused's standpoint, he killed deceased, he should be found not guilty, should have been given, and was not covered by an instruction that, if accused believed his life was in danger, the jury should acquit, since under this article there is a legal presumption that the attacking party under the circumstances mentioned intends to kill or inflict serious bodily injury. Edwards v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 294.

Under this article it is error for the court to fail to charge this presumption where deceased actually attacks accused, or where accused's testimony would show an actual attack. Bankston v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 1068.

Where it appeared that deceased, at the time defendant struck and killed him, was making an assault on defendant with a deadly weapon, and defendant was entitled as a matter of law to the benefit of self-defense, an instruction that if defendant did kill deceased by stabbing him with a knife, and when so stabbing him deceased was unlawfully striking or attempting to strike defendant with a quirt, defendant should be acquitted, did not justify the refusal of a request to charge that when a homicide takes place to prevent murder or disfiguring, and the weapon used by the party attempting to commit such murder, maiming, or disfiguring is such as would have been calculated to produce that result, it is presumed that the person so using such weapon designed to inflict the injury. Polk v. State, 60 App. 499, 132 S. W. 767.

Where self-defense was involved, the court erred in failing to instruct that if deceased was armed with a pistol and shot at defendant, the law presumed deceased intended to kill him. Hammons v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 493.

In a prosecution for murder, where defendant's theory of the case was that he had called at deceased's store for his mail, when deceased cursed and ordered him out of the house, and, when he insisted on getting his mail, picked up an ax handle and struck him over the head, injuring his ear, whereupon defendant cut deceased with a small knife without intending to kill him, an instruction that reasonable fear of death or great bodily harm will excuse one in using all necessary force to protect his life or person, that it is not necessary that there should be actual danger, provided the party acts on a reasonable apprehension of danger as it appears to him from his standpoint at the time, that the party acting under the real or apparent danger is in no way bound to retreat in order to kill his assailant, and that, if from the evidence the jury believed that defendant killed the deceased, but that at the time the deceased was making an attack on defendant, which, from its manner and character, and defendant's knowledge of the character and disposition of the deceased, caused him to have a reasonable expectation or fear of death or serious bodily injury, and that, acting under such reasonable expectation or fear, the defendant killed the deceased, then the jury should acquit, that, if the deceased was armed with an ax handle, and its manner of use was reasonably calculated to produce death or serious bodily harm, then the law presumed the deceased intended to murder or inflict serious injury on the defendant, that, in determining whether the defendant acted in what reasonably appeared to him to be necessary self-defense, the jury should look at the transaction from the defendant's standpoint at the time, and consider the same in the light of the facts and circumstances as the jury should believe they appeared to the defendant at the time and not from any other standpoint, and that it was for the jury to determine from the evidence what the appearances were to the defendant, and what his standpoint was, and in what light he did, in fact, view the facts, such instruction fully covered the issue of self-defense as presented by defendant's evidence. Bolden v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 533.

— Necessity of bill of exceptions or motion for new trial.—See art. 743, C. C. P. and notes.

Art. 1107. [677] In protecting person or property from attacks.—Homicide is justifiable also in the protection of the person or property against any other unlawful and violent attack besides those mentioned in the preceding article, and, in such cases, all other means must be resorted to for the prevention of the injury, and the killing must take place while the person killed is in the very act of making such unlawful and violent attack; and any person interfering in such case in behalf of the party about to be injured is not justifiable in killing the aggressor, unless the life or person of the injured party is in peril by reason of such attack upon his property.

1. Defense of person or property.—Self-defense is a defensive, not an offensive act. Blake v. State, 3 App. 581; Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389. Whether a killing is in self-defense depends on the motive and intent of accused at the time of the killing under the light presented to him at that time, and it is improper to leave the question to the jury's belief as to the real facts. Manly v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 724.

When the purpose of the unlawful and violent attack is other than those mentioned in article 1110, the person killing must resort to all other means of prevention, except that of retreat. "All other means" does not import all possible means, but all means reasonably proper and effective under the circumstances. Kendall v. State, 8 App. 569; Ainsworth v. State, 1d. 532; Blake v. State, 3 App. 588; Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242; Williams v. State, 2 App. 271; Gilly v. State, 15 App. 287.

The right to arrest for theft, given by C. C. P. art. 376, does not confer upon the person entitled to exercise it, the right to pursue and take the thief, dead or alive, nor is the thief if attacked under such circumstances deprived of all right of self-defense. Luera v. State, 12 App. 257.

To make the killing justifiable it must take place while the person killed is in the very act of making the unlawful and violent attack. Gilly v. State, 15 App. 287; Williams v. State, 2 App. 271; Kendall v. State, 8 App. 569; Jordan v. State, 11 App. 435.

The right of self-defense does not arise when there is opportunity to restrain the assailant by process of law. One who believes his life in danger must, if the circumstances are such that he can, resort to the law for protection. Penland v. State, 19 App. 365; Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389.

In no case of attempted felony, other than those named in article 1105, is it lawful to take life where the party making such attempt may be arrested and thereby prevented from committing the felony. To justify homicide to prevent the perpetration of a felony, the danger of such felony must not be problematical or remote, but evident and immediate. Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389.

The killing must be in necessary resistance to aggression apparently violent, immediate, and imminent toward the person about to be injured. Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389.

In order that killing in defense of property be justifiable, evidence must show that deceased was in the very act of making a violent attack, and that defendant had resorted to all other means to prevent the injury. Woodring v. State, 33 App. 26, 24 S. W. 293.

Homicide in defense of property is justifiable when committed while deceased was in the act of destroying defendant's property. Sims v. State, 36 App. 154, 36 S. W. 256.

When a trespasser goes upon property with the means and intent to commit a felony, the owner has a right to repel force by force. Sims v. State, 36 App. 154, 36 S. W. 256.

A party has a right to prepare himself for an attack and act in his own self-defense whether it endangers other people or not. Lankster v. State, 41 App. 603, 56 S. W. 66.

Where attack is made with deadly weapon it is error to charge that defendant must resort to all other means before killing assailant. McCandless v. State, 42 App. 58, 57 S. W. 673.

A party has the right to use whatever force is necessary to repel an aggression upon his property in order to prevent the same from being taken from him. Howell v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 836.

The issue of defense of property is not raised when the evidence does not show that the deceased was in the act of taking the property, but only shows that deceased had merely informed defendant that he was going to take the property. Dean v. State, 47 App. 243, 83 S. W. 817.

This article does not authorize a killing when the party is about to attack or is doing some act preparatory to the attack, but he must be then making such unlawful and violent attack. One is not compelled to wait until a battery has been inflicted upon him, but the attack must be then imminent, immediate and impending; otherwise he is not to slay, and even then all other means except retreat must be resorted to in order to avoid killing. Bryant v. State, 51 App. 66, 100 S. W. 371. And see Patterson v. State, 49 App. 613, 95 S. W. 129; Baltrip v. State, 30 App. 545, 17 S. W. 1106; Garello v. State, 31 App. 56, 20 S. W. 179; Woodring v. State, 33 App. 26, 24 S. W. 293; Hunnicut v. State, 18 App. 499, 51 Am. Rep. 330.

A party has the right to defend his person or his property against any other unlawful violence than those enumerated in article 1105. French v. State, 55 App. 538, 117 S. W. 849.

In a murder case, where it appeared that accused, while in an altercation with decedent, either shot his pistol or it was discharged, and decedent immediately ran 50 or 100 feet, pursued by accused, who was all the while shooting at him, and who finally shot him in the back, defendant could not rely on self-defense. Hart v. State, 57 App. 21, 121 S. W. 508.

If deceased made an unlawful assault, or threatened the defendant with an attack which might end in his death or serious bodily injury, defendant had a right to kill him without resorting to other means to prevent the injury. Best v. State, 61 App. 551, 135 S. W. 581.

Evidence held to justify a finding that accused knew that a horse belonged to decedent, so that accused pursuing decedent to obtain possession of the horse could not rely on self-defense; decedent not doing any act at the time of the killing that would create in accused's mind a reasonable apprehension of death. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 895.

Where accused claimed that deceased came into his pool hall, raised a row, and drove him from the hall, when deceased was caught by bystanders and ejected, and that thereafter deceased returned armed with a bottle, and upon his threatening to strike, accused shot, there is no ground for the submission to the jury of the issue that accused had the right to slay in defense of his property. Ross v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 305.

Where accused in self-defense inflicted a mortal wound, and deceased thereafter abandoned the combat, accused cannot pursue and inflict other wounds, and if he does so, and death is hastened or contributed to, he is guilty of an offense. Maddox v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1026.

Where an attack is made upon an accused by two persons, they both being present, or by one person when the other is present, in any way aiding or encouraging the attack, accused can defend himself against both as well as either. Stacy v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 114.

2. Defense of habitation.—One's right to defend his own habitation is limited only in extent by the same rules which govern in defense of the person. It is not necessary that there be actual danger, provided the party acted on a reasonable apprehension of danger. Richardson v. State, 7 App. 486, citing Munden v. State, 37 Tex. 353; Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242; Cheek v. State, 4 App. 444; Blake v. State, 3 App. 581; May v. State, 6 App. 191; Marnoch v. State, 7 App. 269. See, also, Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389; Turner v. State, 16 App. 378; Stanley v. State, 16 App. 392.

The law does not protect a gambling room, so as to authorize the keeper thereof to eject a person from it. Pierce v. State, 21 App. 540, 1 S. W. 463.

An intruder or trespasser on the habitation of another, or a guest who puts himself in the wrong may be ejected provided no more force is used than is necessary to effect the expulsion. Wells v. State, 63 App. 618, 141 S. W. 96.

3. Resisting arrest.—Manslaughter, see notes to art. 1130.

If an arrest is attempted for misdemeanor, and the officer unlawfully fires on the party fleeing, the latter may return the fire, and if the officer is killed, the killing is not necessarily unlawful. Tiner v. State, 44 Tex. 128.

If an arrest is illegal and unauthorized, it is a continuous assault of an aggravated nature, and the person arrested, or others in his behalf, may employ adequate force to effect a release. If the officer making such illegal arrest is killed, the perpetrators of the homicide will be guilty of no higher offense than manslaughter, and under certain circumstances may be justified. Alford v. State, 8 App. 545; Johnson v. State, 5 App. 47; Goodman v. State, 4 App. 349; James v. State, 44 Tex. 314; Dyson v. State, 14 App. 454.

A citizen is authorized to stand upon his individual rights and oppose force to force in the prevention of an attempted wrong, and when he is threatened with unlawful arrest, he may not only use force, but can increase that force even to the killing of his adversary, if necessary to prevent the attempted wrong. Ross v. State, 10 App. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 643.

It is no excuse, justification, or extenuation, for a homicide committed by a prisoner held in legal custody, that it was committed in an attempt to secure his liberty by escaping from such custody. Wallace v. State, 20 App. 360; Waite v. State, 13 App. 169; Washington v. State, 1 App. 169.

Defendant cannot claim self-defense where he kills an officer who is trying to arrest him in a lawful manner. Hardin v. State, 40 App. 220, 49 S. W. 607.

If defendant is trying to escape or evade arrest and the officer tries to kill him, the former's right of self-defense is complete. Hardin v. State, 40 App. 220, 49 S. W. 607.

Homicide to prevent arrest, even though the attempted arrest be lawful, is justifiable if the arrest is attempted in such a wanton and menacing manner as to threaten the accused with loss of life or serious bodily harm. Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454.

A killing committed in the prevention of an illegal arrest is ordinarily a homicide of no higher degree than manslaughter. See the opinion for a state of case to which the foregoing rules apply; wherefore the omission of the trial court to give them in charge to the jury was material error. Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454.

See the opinion and the statement of the case for proof under which the charge of the court erroneously made the accused's right of self-defense depend upon whether or not he was the person named in the capias and whether the deceased was making or had made an unlawful attack upon him. Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454.

An officer making an arrest without authority is no more than a private person—a trespasser who may be resisted to the extreme if necessary. If he attempts to shoot to prevent escape and the escaping party shoots and kills him, the killing is justifiable. Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705.

A party may meet unnecessary force with force, but cannot take the arresting officer's life, unless it is necessary or apparently necessary in defense of himself. Condron v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 253.

The fact that officers had no legal authority to make an investigation held no justification for the killing of one of the officers. Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133.

The evidence, if raising the issue of self-defense, was the self-defense in connection with attempted arrest. Stewart v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1077.

See, also, Meuly v. State, 26 App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Massie v. State, 27 App. 617, 11 S. W. 638.

4. Defense of another.—See arts. 115, 116, C. C. P.

To justify defense of another's property, the peril must be not merely to the property, but to the person of the other involved in the assault, and then all reasonable means to avert killing must be resorted to. Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242; Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389; Ledbetter v. State, 26 App. 22, 9 S. W. 60; Risby v. State, 17 App. 517; Kendall v. State, 8 App. 569.

One who interferes in behalf of the owner of the property is not justified in killing the aggressor, unless the life of such owner is imperiled by reason of the attack upon the property. Kendall v. State, 8 App. 569; Risby v. State, 17 App. 517; Ledbetter v. State, 26 App. 22, 9 S. W. 60; Lilly v. State, 20 App. 1; Coulter v. State, 72 App. 602, 162 S. W. 885.

The culpability of a defendant who slays in defense of another is measured by the intent with which he acted, and not by the intent with which such other was actuated, unless he knew or might reasonably have known such intent. Snell v. State, 29 App. 237, 15 S. W. 722, 25 Am. St. Rep. 723. And see, also, Varnell v. State, 26 App. 56, 9 S. W. 65; Bonner v. State, 29 App. 223, 15 S. W. 821.

A mere threatened injury to another would not justify or reduce the homicide. Reynolds v. State, 33 App. 143, 25 S. W. 786, 47 Am. St. Rep. 25; Mealer v. State, 32 App. 102, 22 S. W. 142; Reynolds v. State, 32 App. 151, 22 S. W. 590.

A party who acts in defense of another is authorized to act in same manner as that party would be justified in doing. Garcia v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 651.

If decedent undertook to assault accused's brother with a knife, or accused believed that he was going to do so, accused would have the same right to defend his brother as the brother would have had to defend himself. Griffin v. State, 57 App. 280, 122 S. W. 553.

Where defendant R., learning that his brother was about to enter a mutual combat with deceased, accompanied his brother to settle the difficulty peaceably, which he tried to do, but deceased declined every offer of that sort and fired on the brother, R. was entitled to defend, not only his brother, but himself, when deceased turned on him, and if he killed deceased under those circumstances the killing was justified. Burns v. State, 58 App. 463, 125 S. W. 901.

If accused intervened in a difficulty between his brother and deceased, in which they were cutting each other with knives, and struck and killed deceased entirely in the defense of his brother, it would be justifiable homicide. Vickers v. State, 70 App. 553, 157 S. W. 767.

See, also, Robins v. State, 9 App. 666; Foster v. State, 8 App. 248; Ainsworth v. State, Id. 532; Ross v. State, 10 App. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 643; North v. State, 12 App. 111; Glover v. State, 33 App. 224, 26 S. W. 204; Snell v. State, 29 App. 236, 15 S. W. 722, 25 Am. St. Rep. 723; Mealer v. State, 32 App. 102, 22 S. W. 142; Hargrove v. State, 33 App. 431, 26 S. W. 993.

5. Provoking contest, and impairment of self-defense.—See notes to art. 1138, post.

If a person by his own wrongful act brings about the necessity of taking the life of another to prevent being himself killed, he can not say that such killing was in his necessary self-defense; but the killing will be imputed to malice, express or implied, by reason of the wrongful act which brought it about, or malice from which it was done. A person can not avail himself of a necessity which he has knowingly and wilfully brought upon himself. Logan v. State, 17 App. 50; Cunningham v. State, Id. 89; King v. State, 13 App. 277; Gilleland v. State, 44 Tex. 356; Lee v. State, 21 App. 241, 17 S. W. 425; Thuston v. State, 21 App. 245, 17 S. W. 474; Roach v. State, 21 App. 249, 17 S. W. 464; Crist v. State, 21 App. 361, 17 S. W. 260; Hollis v. State, 8 App. 620; Meuly v. State, 26 App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Beard v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 770; Waldon v. State, 34 App. 92, 29 S. W. 273; Plew v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 366; Abram v. State, 36 App. 44, 35 S. W. 389; Hawkins v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 443; Koller v. State, 36 App. 496, 38 S. W. 44; Winters v. State, 37 App. 582, 40 S. W. 303; Best v. State, 61 App. 551, 135 S. W. 581; Clampett v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 929; Allen v. State, 24 App. 216, 6 S. W. 187. And see, also, under self-defense, Orman v. State, 24 App. 495, 6 S. W. 544; Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454; High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488; Kelly v.

State, 27 App. 562, 11 S. W. 627; McDade v. State, 27 App. 641, 11 S. W. 672, 11 Am. St. Rep. 216; Gonzales v. State, 28 App. 130, 12 S. W. 733; Gonzalez v. State, 30 App. 203, 16 S. W. 978; Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071; Fuller v. State, 30 App. 559, 17 S. W. 1108. But see Carter v. State, 37 App. 403, 35 S. W. 378.

If the accused provoked the deceased to strike him with a stick, which was not followed up by a further assault, he can not justify on the ground of self-defense if he retreats out of danger, draws a dagger, returns to the conflict, and kills his antagonist. Isaacs v. State, 25 Tex. 174.

Where the defendant sought an interview with the deceased for the purpose of demanding payment of a debt, and with no hostile intentions toward the deceased, and the deceased becoming angry, an altercation ensued during which the deceased drew a pistol and assaulted defendant with it in such a manner as to create in the mind of defendant a reasonable apprehension of death or serious bodily injury, and acting upon such reasonable apprehension defendant fired the fatal shot, he was justifiable on the ground of necessary self-defense. Bonniard v. State, 25 App. 173, 7 S. W. 862, 8 Am. St. Rep. 431.

Where a person was taken in adultery with another's wife, it was held that he was not deprived wholly of the right of self-defense by reason of this wrongful act on his part; but that in slaying the husband of the woman with whom he was committing adultery, he could claim partial or imperfect self-defense, and reduce the homicide from murder to manslaughter. The amenability of a person charged with crime is conditioned solely on his own acts, and is never dependent upon the immunity of the injured person in case the result had been different. Reed v. State, 11 App. 509, 40 Am. Rep. 795; King v. State, 13 App. 277.

A party may have a perfect right of self-defense, though he may not be entirely free from blame in the transaction. If the blame or wrong was not intended to produce the occasion, nor an act which was, under the circumstances, reasonably calculated to produce the occasion or provoke the difficulty, then the right of self-defense would be complete, though the act may not be blameless. Franklin v. State, 30 App. 628, 18 S. W. 468.

Where defendant went to deceased's house for the purpose of having carnal intercourse with deceased's wife and killed deceased while there in self-defense, he is guilty of manslaughter. Franklin v. State, 34 App. 286, 30 S. W. 231.

If the slayer provoked the contest with the apparent intention of killing deceased, or doing him some serious bodily injury, he is guilty of murder, although he may have done the act of killing suddenly, without deliberation, and in order to save his own life. The law allows no justification in such a case, and no reduction of the grade of the homicide below that of murder. But if the slayer provoked the contest without any intention to kill or inflict serious bodily injury, and suddenly, without deliberation, did the act of killing, while the homicide would not be justifiable, it might be a lower grade of homicide than murder. Green v. State, 12 App. 445; King v. State, 13 App. 277; Smith v. State, 15 App. 338.

Because the slayer by his own wrongful acts produced the necessity to kill, it does not always follow that the homicide can not be justified or excused. Consideration must be addressed to the nature and quality of the wrongful acts by which it is claimed the right of self-defense is forfeited or abridged. Adjudicated cases hold that among the slayer's acts which abrogate or abridge his right of self-defense, are the following: 1. Devices, by language, or otherwise, to provoke the deceased to make an assault which will furnish a pretext for taking his life, or inflicting serious bodily injury upon him. 2. Provocation of the deceased into a quarrel, causing the fatal affray; but mere words or libelous publications do not amount to such provocation. 3. Preconcert with the deceased to fight him with deadly weapons. 4. Commencing an attack, assault, or battery upon the deceased. 5. Going with a deadly weapon to where the deceased is, for the purpose of provoking a difficulty or bringing on an affray, and by words or acts making some demonstration of such purpose calculated to provoke the deceased. The right of self-defense is not impaired by mere preparation for the perpetration of a wrongful act, unheralded, and unaccompanied by any demonstration, verbal or otherwise, indicative of the wrongful purpose. Cartwright v. State, 14 App. 486; Cunningham v. State, 17 App. 89.

When a party is a mere trespasser upon another's premises, and thus provokes the difficulty which results in the homicide, and such trespass is not with any intent on his part to kill or do serious bodily injury, or to commit any felony, he would not be deprived wholly of the right of self-defense, but such right would be abridged, and would be only partial and imperfect, and would reduce the homicide from murder to manslaughter. Roach v. State, 21 App. 249, 17 S. W. 464; Thuston v. State, 21 App. 245, 17 S. W. 474; Arto v. State, 19 App. 126; Jones v. State, 17 App. 602; King v. State, 13 App. 277.

If the slayer goes upon the premises with the intention to kill, or to do serious bodily injury, or to commit felony, and abandons such intention in good faith, and tries to escape from or avoid his adversary, if he is pursued his right of self-defense revives. Roach v. State, 21 App. 249, 17 S. W. 464.

To be sufficient to revive the perfect right of self-defense, the abandonment of the difficulty must be one which clearly evinces a withdrawal in good faith, and shows clearly the honest effort of the slayer for peace. Roberts v. State, 30 App. 291, 17 S. W. 450.

When A. says to B.: "You are a God d—d liar," and B., upon the impulse of the moment, resents the insult by striking A. with his fist, and A. draws a pistol with intent to kill B., and B., to save his own life, kills A., held, manslaughter. Insulting words will not justify an assault; therefore B. was the aggressor. He was as much guilty of an assault and battery upon A., as he would have been had not A. given the insult; and though he may not have intended to produce the occasion, yet this would be the reasonable and natural consequence of his act for which the law holds him responsible, and to the same extent as if he had intended to provoke the difficulty. Polk v. State, 30 App. 657, 18 S. W. 466.

The fact that a person may know that his presence on his own premises may be offensive to another does not deprive him of self-defense if his going to his premises is in good faith. Milrainey v. State, 33 App. 577, 28 S. W. 537.

Nor where in doing a lawful act he creates a disturbance. Gilcrease v. State, 33 App. 619, 28 S. W. 531.

One may speak to another in a quiet and peaceable manner in regard to derogatory charges or statements made by such other person against him, and knowing such other person is armed he may arm himself with the intention of protecting himself if necessary in self-defense. If such other person makes a violent assault upon him and he kills his assailant in self-defense, he is not guilty of any crime. Shannon v. State, 35 App. 2, 28 S. W. 687, 60 Am. St. Rep. 17.

The fact that a person arms himself before going to demand an explanation does not deprive him of the right of self-defense. Shannon v. State, 35 App. 2, 28 S. W. 687, 60 Am. St. Rep. 17; Duke v. State, 61 App. 19, 133 S. W. 432; Cloud v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 892; Fox v. State, 71 App. 318, 158 S. W. 1141; Quinn v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 783.

Although defendant provoked the fight, if it had ceased and afterward deceased renewed the quarrel, defendant would not be deprived of the right of self-defense. Lindsey v. State, 35 App. 164, 32 S. W. 768.

When defendant is the aggressor the fact that the deceased started to draw his pistol when defendant shot him, does not justify the homicide. Lawrence v. State, 36 App. 173, 36 S. W. 90.

That defendant armed himself to prevent deceased from building a fence on his land did not deprive himself of the right of self-defense. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 587.

No matter what was defendant's purpose in seeking deceased, if, when he met him, he did nothing to provoke a difficulty and deceased assaulted him, his right of self-defense is perfect. Airhart v. State, 40 App. 472, 51 S. W. 214, 76 Am. St. Rep. 736.

Unless defendant's acts are clearly calculated or intended to provoke a difficulty, the right of self-defense is not lost, even though he went to the place for purpose of difficulty. Defendant is not tried merely for seeking out deceased but for his acts after he has met him. Airhart v. State, 40 App. 473, 51 S. W. 214, 76 Am. St. Rep. 736.

One must not only seek his adversary for the purpose of provoking the difficulty but he must provoke the difficulty at the time he meets deceased, before it can be claimed that he has forfeited his right to self-defense. Matthews v. State, 42 App. 31, 58 S. W. 90.

If one intends to provoke a difficulty, and although the means used are not reasonably calculated to provoke, yet if they in fact do provoke it, he is responsible for what he actually intended to do. Matthews v. State, 42 App. 31, 58 S. W. 90.

A cool and calm determination in the mind of the slayer to kill the deceased should the latter, at the time of the meeting, attack him, and do some act manifesting an intention to kill or seriously injure him, would not destroy the slayer's right of self-defense. Pratt v. State, 50 App. 227, 96 S. W. 8.

One who provokes a difficulty without intent to kill or inflict serious bodily injury, and with no intent at the time of provoking the difficulty, is not thereby deprived of his right of self-defense. Best v. State, 58 App. 327, 125 S. W. 909.

In order to abridge the right of self-defense, the language used or acts done must have been spoken or done by accused with intent at the time to provoke the difficulty, as well as reasonably calculated to do so. Keeton v. State, 59 App. 316, 128 S. W. 404.

Where defendant's wife told him that deceased had scared her, defendant was guilty of no wrong in seeking out deceased and demanding an explanation. Bal-lard v. State, 62 App. 435, 138 S. W. 120.

If accused placed money on a table and challenged decedent to take it to create an excuse for the killing, he cannot rely upon defense of property. Mansfield v. State, 62 App. 631, 138 S. W. 591.

That accused went where decedent was with a pistol did not forfeit his right to act in self-defense nor make him guilty of provoking the difficulty. Kincaid v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 597.

Defendant, who had armed himself and gone to take possession of a barn, knowing that his attempt would be likely to cause serious trouble, and knowing of threats against him by the claimant, had still a right to defend himself against a third party, whom he did not know. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 722.

Where defendant was talking to one person, and another person, whom he did not know, shot at him from behind a barn, his right to defend himself against such attack would not be impaired, even though his conduct might have impaired his right to self-defense had he killed the party to whom he was talking. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 722.

Where accused's own testimony showed that the difficulty between him and deceased was caused by his remark with reference to deceased that he would not let any son of a bitch run over his boy, that, when deceased asked if he was referring to him, he did not deny that he was, but drew a knife, and, when deceased got him by the collar, commenced cutting him, and entered into the fight with zeal, accused did not have the perfect right of self-defense which would justify his conduct, but, at most, only the imperfect right which would reduce the grade of offense to manslaughter, since the necessity for self-defense was caused by his own insulting language. Carver v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 746.

There is a difference between bringing on a difficulty and provoking a difficulty for the purpose of getting some advantage. Ware v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1074.

A charge on provoking a difficulty or abridging the right of self-defense is not called for unless the interview was sought by defendant to provoke a difficulty, and when the meeting occurred defendant did some act or used language reasonably calculated to provoke the difficulty, and with intent to provoke a difficulty, and, in fact, did provoke a difficulty in which deceased was the aggressor Sorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 299.

For a discussion of the principles of perfect and imperfect self-defense, see Thumm v. State, 24 App. 667, 7 S. W. 236; Bonnard v. State, 25 App. 173, 7 S. W. 862, 8 Am. St. Rep. 431; Williams v. State, 25 App. 216, 7 S. W. 666; Varnell v. State, 26 App. 56, 9 S. W. 65; Meuly v. State, 26 App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Johnson v. State, 26 App. 631, 10 S. W. 235; Gonzales v. State, 28 App. 130, 12 S. W. 733; Levy v. State, 28 App. 203, 12 S. W. 596, 19 Am. St. Rep. 826; Carter v. State, 28 App. 355, 13 S. W. 147; Habel v. State, 28 App. 588, 13 S. W. 1001; Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071; Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944; Polk v. State, 30 App. 657, 18 S. W. 466; Ball v. State, 29 App. 107, 14 S. W. 1012; Franklin v. State, 30 App. 628, 18 S. W. 468; Muely v. State, 31 App. 155, 18 S. W. 411, 19 S. W. 916; Sullivan v. State, 31 App. 486, 20 S. W. 927, 37 Am. St. Rep. 826; Mundine v. State, 37 App. 5, 38 S. W. 619; Cheatham v. State, 57 App. 442, 125 S. W. 565.

6. Mutual combat.—Manslaughter in mutual combat, see notes to art. 1129, post.

If a person voluntarily engages in a combat, knowing that it will, or may result in death, or some serious bodily injury which may probably produce the death of his adversary or himself, he can not claim that he is acting in self-defense. Gilleland v. State, 44 Tex. 356; Logan v. State, 17 App. 50; Lee v. State, 21 App. 241, 17 S. W. 425; Cunningham v. State, 17 App. 89; Bordeaux v. State, 58 App. 61, 124 S. W. 640.

The fact that deceased may have been in the act of firing upon the defendant does not render the killing justifiable, if it appear that defendant sought the conflict and voluntarily engaged in it, and that threats were mutual and a hostile meeting mutually determined upon. Gilleland v. State, 44 Tex. 356. See this case for a discussion of this article and article 1107.

If death ensues from mutual combat it is murder if undue advantage was taken by the slayer. King v. State, 4 App. 54, 30 Am. Rep. 160.

For discussion of principles entering into the question of mutual combat, see Thumm v. State, 24 App. 667, 7 S. W. 236; Williams v. State, 25 App. 216, 7 S. W. 666; Gonzales v. State, 28 App. 130, 12 S. W. 733; Habel v. State, 28 App. 588, 13 S. W. 1001; White v. State, 30 App. 652, 18 S. W. 462; Waldon v. State, 34 App. 92, 29 S. W. 273.

7. Threats by defendant.—Threats made by the defendant to kill the deceased will not deprive the former of his right to defend himself against an attack made on him by the deceased, on account of such threats. Parker v. State, 18 App. 72; Smith v. State, 15 App. 338; White v. State, 23 App. 154, 3 S. W. 710.

The fact that accused the night after a difficulty with decedent, in which deceased fired a gun at or over accused, wrote a letter to another person making threats against the deceased, does not preclude his relying on self-defense in a prosecution for murder committed the next day while accused was sitting peaceably in a public place, when decedent approached with a gun, and acted in a manner signifying an intention to shoot or kill accused, whereupon accused shot him; accused not having made any hostile movement towards deceased or attempted in any way to execute his threat. Stanley v. State, 62 App. 306, 137 S. W. 703.

Where accused claimed that he shot in self-defense and that he and deceased had been the best of friends, evidence of his remarks and threats against deceased, made some time before the killing, was admissible; it being the contention of the state that accused and his father, who on the day of the killing had a quarrel with deceased, conspired together to kill him. Coulter v. State, 72 App. 602, 162 S. W. 885.

Where accused, relying on self-defense and on the theory that he killed decedent to protect his family, had about three weeks before the killing made threats against decedent under such circumstances that they would probably be communicated to decedent, proof of the threats was admissible. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 100.

And further on threats by defendant, see Manning v. State, 51 App. 211, 93 S. W. 251; McMahan v. State, 46 App. 540, 81 S. W. 296; Pratt v. State, 50 App. 227, 96 S. W. 8; Reinhard v. State, 52 App. 53, 106 S. W. 128; Slade v. State, 29 App. 381, 16 S. W. 253; Gilcrease v. State, 33 App. 620, 28 S. W. 531; Utzman v. State, 32 App. 426, 24 S. W. 412.

8. Manslaughter.—As to manslaughter under this article, see Ross v. State, 10 App. 456, 38 Am. Rep. 643; Roach v. State, 21 App. 249, 17 S. W. 464; Ledbetter v. State, 26 App. 22, 9 S. W. 60; Milrainey v. State, 33 App. 577, 28 S. W. 537; Gilcrease v. State, 33 App. 619, 28 S. W. 531; Glover v. State, 33 App. 224, 26 S. W. 204.

9. Evidence on issue of self-defense.—Evidence as to cuts on the person and clothing of the accused is admissible on the issue of self-defense. The objection that such evidence is easily fabricated goes to its credibility and not to its competency. Good v. State, 18 App. 39.

The state proved over objection that the pistol found on the body of deceased could only fire center-fire cartridges and was loaded with rim fire cartridges, which it could not explode. This evidence should have been excluded as immaterial, since defendant could not have known of the condition of deceased's pistol, the manner in which it was loaded, nor that it could not have been fired by deceased. Everett v. State, 30 App. 683, 18 S. W. 674. See, also, Irvine v. State, 26 App. 37, 9 S. W. 55.

When the defense is self-defense, it is admissible to show that deceased was not friendly with defendant and language used by him showing such feelings toward defendant is admissible. Holley v. State, 39 App. 301, 46 S. W. 39.

It is error to admit proof that deceased's gun was loaded with small shot, when defendant did not know this. Carr v. State, 41 App. 380, 55 S. W. 51.

Acts and declarations of deceased are not admissible for purposes of showing friendly feeling towards accused when they have not been communicated to accused. The facts must be regarded from defendant's standpoint. Stell v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 76.

In a prosecution for homicide by shooting, testimony of a witness that after decedent fell he saw him making a motion with his hand as if putting a knife in his pocket was inadmissible, since defendant could not have acted on anything decedent was doing at that time. Barbee v. State, 58 App. 129, 124 S. W. 961.

Evidence held to show that the killing was not in self-defense. Pannell v. State, 59 App. 383, 128 S. W. 133; Snowberger v. State, 58 App. 530, 126 S. W. 878; Baum v. State, 60 App. 638, 133 S. W. 271; Florence v. State, 61 App. 238, 134 S. W. 689; Powdrill v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 231; Cole v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 929; Latham v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 797.

Proof that decedent was unarmed is admissible. Dougherty v. State, 59 App. 464, 128 S. W. 398.

For testimony on the question of who began the difficulty. Bradley v. State, 60 App. 398, 132 S. W. 484.

Evidence held insufficient to raise an issue as to decedent's abandonment of the difficulty. Duke v. State, 61 App. 19, 133 S. W. 432.

Where defendant testified that when he got the pistol he had in mind a threat of deceased against him, and carried it for protection, testimony that he asked the witness if he would go on his bond if he got into trouble was admissible. Drake v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1157.

Where the issue was self-defense, the question whether a witness had ever seen deceased about the witness' store with a pistol was improperly excluded. Maclin v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 951.

Evidence held to show that accused acted in self-defense. Antu v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 234.

Evidence was admissible for accused, that decedent had, on a number of occasions been seen to carry a pistol, if accused was shown to have known of such fact. Andrus v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 189.

An innocent motive, unknown to defendant, for acts producing an appearance on which he had a right to act in self-defense, may not be shown. And for application of rule, see Singleton v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 46; Bradley v. State, 60 App. 398, 132 S. W. 484; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 328.

Where accused relies on self-defense, his words and conduct immediately after the killing are material on the issue as to why he killed decedent. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 100.

Evidence in a prosecution for murder by shooting deceased several times, in which the defendant relied on self-defense, held sufficient to sustain a conviction of murder. Crossett v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 548.

Whatever accused may have known or heard that could have affected his mind, and had a tendency to lead him to believe that, from the conduct of deceased at the time, his life was in danger, was admissible. Echols v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 786; Keeton v. State, 59 App. 316, 128 S. W. 404; Cloud v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 892; Garcia v. State, 70 App. 485, 156 S. W. 939; Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 100; Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 721.

Evidence, in a prosecution for murder, held to justify submission to the jury of the issue of self-defense. Barnett v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 580.

Evidence in a homicide case held not to raise the issue of manslaughter, but of self-defense. Hove v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 497.

In regulating the right to take life in necessary self-defense, the Code of this state establishes an essential distinction, based upon the nature and severity of the unlawful attack, and discriminates it into two classes. The first class, regulated by article 1105 of the Penal Code, comprises all cases in which, from the acts of the assailant, or his words coupled therewith, it is reasonably apparent that his intent is to murder or do serious bodily harm, in which case the assaulted party may lawfully slay his aggressor while he is committing the offense, or when he has done some act evidently showing his intention to commit it. The second class, regulated by article 1107 of the Penal Code, comprises those cases in which the purpose or intent reasonably indicated by the unlawful and violent attack is other than those above mentioned. The proof on this, as on the former trial of this case, shows that if the deceased made any attack on the accused, it was a murderous attack which came clearly within the provisions of article 1105, and there was no evidence whatever tending to show a milder attack. In this state of the proof the trial court erred in charging the provisions of article 1105, because such charge, being unauthorized by the proof, was calculated to confuse and mislead the jury. (Note the opinion for the approval on the subject of Orman's Case, 22 App. 604, 3 S. W. 468, 58 Am. Rep. 662, and Kendall's Case, 8 App. 569.) Orman v. State, 22 App. 604, 3 S. W. 468, 58 Am. Rep. 662; s. c., 24 App. 495, 6 S. W. 544. See, also, Hill v. State, 10 App. 618; Jordan v. State, 11 App. 435; Foster v. State, Id., 105; Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593; Gonzalez v. State, 30 App. 203, 16 S. W. 978; Fuller v. State, 30 App. 559, 17 S. W. 1108; Warren v. State, 22 App. 383, 3 S. W. 240; Skaggs v. State, 31 App. 563, 21 S. W. 257; Kelly v. State, 27 App. 562, 11 S. W. 627; Bedford v. State, 36 App. 477, 38 S. W. 210.

The charge should be applicable to the facts. It is often inadequate to charge simply the language of the statutory provisions upon this issue. Richardson v. State, 7 App. 486; Kendall v. State, 8 App. 569; Talbert v. State, Id. 316; Salmon v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1023.

The charge should, in a proper case, draw clearly the distinctions between self-defense under article 1105 and self-defense under this article. Kendall v. State, 8 App. 569.

Where the evidence tends to show self-defense under either art. 1105 or art. 1107, the court should frame its charge with reference to the article which is applicable to the facts proved, and should not charge with reference to the other article. But where the evidence raises a question as to which of the two articles apply to the facts, the charge should be with reference to both articles, and should draw clearly the distinctions between the two kinds of attack justifying homicide. Kendall v. State, 8 App. 569.

A charge which limited the right of self-defense to "extreme necessity" held erroneous. King v. State, 13 App. 277.

The charge should be constructed upon the evidence in the particular case on trial. Hackett v. State, 13 App. 406.

The law of self-defense when invoked by the proof should be given to the jury in plain and intelligible language, without superfluous verbiage. Learned abstractions are not the best means to make it comprehensible by the jury. Boddy v. State, 14 App. 538.

The first subdivision of article 1105 declares that it must "reasonably appear," etc. It is error to substitute the word "necessarily" for the word "reasonably" in the charge, as the two words are essentially different in meaning. Also, homicide is justifiable when the slayer kills the deceased after the latter has done some act, etc. A charge which omits the word "after" is erroneous because it limits the justification to a killing while the deceased is in the act of killing the slayer, or in the act of doing the act which evidences his intention to kill the slayer or do him serious bodily injury. Stevenson v. State, 17 App. 618.

It is not error to give in charge the law of article 1107 before charging the law of article 1105. Gonzalez v. State, 30 App. 203, 16 S. W. 978.

A charge that the jury ought to consider the situation and circumstances from accused's standpoint, held sufficient. Jackson v. State, 32 App. 192, 22 S. W. 831.

On trial for murder when the issues raised were: First, whether deceased was killed in pursuance of an agreement between defendant, his father, and brother; second, whether deceased was killed by defendant in protection of the life of his father or brother; or third, whether deceased was killed in mutual combat. Held, that in such case the court should have instructed the jury, that unless the evidence satisfied them beyond a reasonable doubt that there was an agreement between defendant, his father, and brother, to kill deceased or that he was killed in mutual combat they must acquit defendant, unless they believed that defendant's father and brother began the difficulty, and defendant knew it when he entered into the conflict. Hargrove v. State, 33 App. 431, 26 S. W. 993.

See case held error to charge that to justify the homicide all other means must have first been resorted to to prevent the attack. Cline v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 684.

Erroneous charge on self-defense held harmless. James v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 342; Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272; Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 721.

When the court gives an instruction on self-defense which is directly applicable to the facts as testified to by the defendant, failure to give the general instruction on the same subject is not error. McGrath v. State, 35 App. 413, 34 S. W. 127, 941.

The defense was justifiable homicide because deceased was making an assault on defendant's brother with a pistol, and was in the act of taking the latter's life; held, that defendant was not required to resort to other means to prevent the killing of his brother before taking the life of deceased, and a charge based upon such theory was erroneous. Shumate v. State, 38 App. 266, 42 S. W. 600.

A charge "that all self-defense rests upon necessity" is the law when the necessity is only apparent, such proposition should be more fully explained, but when such necessity is real it is not necessary to explain. Williford v. State, 38 App. 393, 42 S. W. 972.

It is proper to charge that one in defending himself against an unlawful attack can use all necessary and reasonable force, but no more than the circumstances reasonably indicate to be necessary. Freeman v. State, 40 App. 551, 46 S. W. 641, 51 S. W. 230.

Where court groups facts and charges if jury finds them true, self-defense could not be set up, it should then group facts embracing defendant's claim and instruct to acquit if the jury finds them to be true. Francis v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 489.

Charge should not restrict the rights of accused to the intent of deceased. Accused's intent must be judged by his own purpose and not by the intent of deceased. Casner v. State, 42 App. 118, 57 S. W. 821, 824.

When the killing occurs in sudden broil, no former grudge or quarrel being shown, and the evidence tends to sustain self-defense, the charge should limit the design to kill to an unlawful design to kill formed prior to the broil. Manis v. State, 41 App. 614, 58 S. W. 81.

Where party's life is in danger, or when the perfect right of self-defense has accrued, he has the right to use any means within his power to protect his life, or his person from serious bodily injury, even to the taking the life of his adversary, and a charge which restricts his right to any reasonable and necessary means, is erroneous. Hall v. State, 42 App. 444, 60 S. W. 770.

In a conflict of evidence it is a question of fact to be submitted to the jury whether defendant has compromised his right of self-defense. Hall v. State, 42 App. 444, 60 S. W. 771.

The fact that the altercation grew out of adverse claims to possession of property would not require a charge involving the right of appellant to protect his claim to the property against an intrusion of the prosecutor. Hill v. State, 43 App. 583, 67 S. W. 506.

Defendant, having purchased a barn from a city located on a lot of which S. was possessed under a lease from the city, went to take down the barn, when he was forbidden to do so by S., though he had agreed to surrender possession within 10 days, which time had long since expired, on the ground that he was entitled to written notice of dispossession. Defendant claimed that, while discussing the matter with S., decedent, his son, armed with a rifle, appeared around the corner of the barn in a shooting position and immediately fired, whereupon defendant shot him. Held, that deceased, having no rights with reference to the property in question, had no right to assault defendant, unless necessary to save his father's life, as authorized by this article, and the court should have charged that if deceased made an attack on defendant as claimed, not in defense of his father, and defendant from his standpoint thought that his life was endangered, he could shoot deceased in self-defense. Smith v. State, 57 App. 455, 123 S. W. 698.

Where the state's evidence showed that decedent struck accused with his hand, and that the blow, which was not serious, was struck as a result of provocation, and the evidence of accused showed that decedent was trying to cut and kill accused with a knife when accused fired the fatal shot, an instruction on self-defense that homicide is justifiable in the protection of the person from any violent attack, and in such case all other means must be resorted to for the prevention of the injury, and the killing must take place while the person killed is in the act of making such attack, or while the person killed is doing some hostile act that would, viewed from the standpoint of accused, produce in his mind a reasonable fear of death, etc., properly submitted the issue of self-defense. Best v. State, 58 App. 327, 125 S. W. 909.

Where the charge sufficiently directs attention to the facts, it is not essential to embody in the charge the details of every fact relied on. Pratt v. State, 59 App. 167, 127 S. W. 827.

Where the question of self-defense is in the case, accused is entitled to a charge thereon independent of the law of threats. Lundy v. State, 59 App. 131, 127 S. W. 1032.

The charge should embody, not only the acts of decedent, but also his words accompanying the acts illustrating the intent of decedent as viewed from accused's standpoint. Lundy v. State, 59 App. 131, 127 S. W. 1032.

Where there was no evidence that decedent intended or attempted at the time of the homicide to enter the storehouse of accused, except as such act related to a threatened assault on accused, and the court charged that one need not retreat to avoid the necessity of killing his assailant, but any one, in defending himself, may stand his ground and kill his adversary if necessary, etc., the refusal to charge that if decedent approached accused's storehouse, and manifested a purpose of entering the same over the protest of accused, accused could prevent decedent from entering the same, and could use force reasonably necessary, etc., was not prejudicial to accused. Pratt v. State, 59 App. 635, 129 S. W. 264.

Where decedent who had had prior difficulties with accused stated that he would take accused's gun, and he approached accused with an ax in hand, threatening to take the gun, and accused, after warning decedent several times, shot decedent as he continued to approach, the issues of self-defense applicable to real and apparent danger of bodily injury and applicable to the taking of the gun from accused were raised, so that the court properly charged the substance of this article. Williams v. State, 59 App. 624, 129 S. W. 838.

Where the jury were in terms instructed that, in passing on the issue whether accused had reasonable grounds to fear an attack by deceased, etc., the facts and circumstances must be looked at and the question determined from the standpoint of defendant alone, the issue of self-defense was properly submitted. Hudson v. State, 59 App. 650, 129 S. W. 1125, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1324.

A difficulty having occurred between defendant and deceased, deceased appeared at a dance defendant was attending armed with a shotgun. Defendant was at once notified that deceased was coming armed to kill him. Defendant approached deceased, had some conversation with him, and on a movement by deceased, as if to shoot, defendant grabbed the gun. They scuffled out of doors, when a shot was fired by defendant, which killed deceased. Held, that defendant, under such circumstances, was entitled to a charge on self-defense, untrammelled by the limitations contained in this article. Anderson v. State, 60 App. 314, 131 S. W. 1124.

In a prosecution for homicide, an instruction that, if defendant fired on deceased in self-defense, but the deceased abandoned the difficulty and defendant had no reasonable apprehension of danger from deceased, defendant would not be justified in pursuing or firing other shots was error, where it failed to state that, if defendant under these conditions was, by the previous conduct of deceased, rendered incapable of cool reflection, he would not be guilty of any higher grade of offense than manslaughter. Johnson v. State, 63 App. 50, 133 S. W. 1021.

A charge that, if accused killed decedent while defending himself against the acts, or acts and words, of decedent, or the acts and words of those acting with him, and that his life was put in danger, or that he was put in danger of serious bodily harm, the jury should acquit was not objectionable as requiring the jury to find that accused acted against the combined acts and conduct of all the parties, before they could acquit on the ground of self-defense. Beaver v. State (Cr. App.) 142 S. W. 11.

A paragraph in the charge consisting of a mere definition, held, not erroneous. Holmes v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 205.

Where deceased had rented a farm from the father of accused, reserving the right to the pecan crop, and accused was on the land threshing such trees when deceased ordered him off the premises, and used threatening language and made a hostile demonstration, on trial for his murder, an instruction on the issue of defense of property should have been given. Walker v. State, 70 App. 84, 156 S. W. 206.

Where self-defense is an issue, an instruction submitting that defense should not require the jury to believe numerous unimportant details leading up to the fatal affray, before they can acquit. McMillan v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 576. Nor should the instruction require the jury to find that the affray started in the precise manner detailed by accused, before they could acquit, the evidence as to how the affray started being conflicting. McMillan v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 576.

Where the killing occurred in a shooting which defendant claimed was begun by deceased, it was error to instruct the jury that they could take into consideration the relative strength of the parties. Hammons v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 493.

Where, in a prosecution for murder, the evidence shows that, at the time of the killing, a brother was not aiding or encouraging deceased in any attack upon accused, though he had theretofore been cursing accused for a grievance, an instruction as to his right of self-defense as against such brother was unnecessary. Stacy v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 114.

13. — Provoking contest.—A charge on provoking difficulties should be given separately from a charge of self-defense. Castro v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 985.

An instruction that defendant had the right, on a peaceable mission, to seek out decedent and ask him to retract insulting language, and to arm himself for his necessary self-defense, if he apprehended danger at the time he sought such apology, and that if defendant, on a peaceable mission, sought out decedent and asked him to apologize, and decedent refused to do so, and it reasonably appeared to defendant that he was in danger of death or serious bodily harm, and acting thereunder he shot decedent, to acquit, placed an improper limitation on defendant's rights by the words "on a peaceable mission." McCleary v. State, 57 App. 139, 122 S. W. 26.

A charge that one who willingly enters into a fight cannot justify shooting in self-defense is erroneous, as depriving him of his right of self-defense by virtue of the wrongful act, without reference to his intent in doing it. Gardner v. State, 57 App. 471, 125 S. W. 13.

An instruction on self-defense that if it reasonably appeared to defendant that deceased had abandoned the conflict, and that thereafter the defendant returned, armed with a stick, and renewed the fight, then he cannot rely on the law of self-defense, was erroneous, as the court should have told the jury that, if the deceased had in fact abandoned the difficulty and the defendant knew he had so abandoned it, and then renewed the attack, he could not plead self-defense. Coker v. State, 59 App. 241, 128 S. W. 137.

A charge that if defendant used words or did acts, either or both of which provoked the difficulty, and that he did so for the purpose or with the intention of provoking a difficulty, he could not rely on self-defense, is proper, it not being necessary to point out the particular acts of provocation on the part of defendant. Giesecke v. State, 64 App. 531, 142 S. W. 1179.

Pursuit of deceased with intent to kill him was an overt act, depriving defendant of the right of self-defense and justifying refusal of an instruction that, though defendant pursued deceased with intent to kill him, yet if when he overtook deceased he drew a pistol and fired, defendant would be justified in killing him. Hammons v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 493.

Where the court instructed as to self-defense, without any limitation as to provocation of difficulty, it was not error to refuse a request that defendant, on seeking deceased for a peaceable settlement, had a right to arm himself, if he thought deceased might make an assault on him, in view of the undisputed evidence that defendant shot and killed one of deceased's sons, had shot another son of deceased and put out both his eyes, that the deceased had shot the defendant in the face and put out his eye, and that defendant had shot at deceased and thought that he had wounded him, and so believed until the defendant shot and killed deceased, and that, when defendant caught sight of deceased, he got his gun and pursued deceased until deceased turned and, as claimed by defendant, put his hand in his pocket. Ford v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 1176.

Charge held erroneous in the use of the word "peaceable." Sorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 299; Gaines v. State, 53 App. 631, 127 S. W. 181.

As to sufficiency of charge, see, also, Stoner v. State, 72 App. 482, 162 S. W. 836; Morgan v. State, 34 App. 222, 29 S. W. 1092; Gaines v. State, 53 App. 631, 127 S. W. 181; Gray v. State, 61 App. 454, 135 S. W. 1179; McGreagor v. State, 71 App. 604, 160 S. W. 711; Reed v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 541; Ghent v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 566.

14. — Mutual combat.—Court need not make direct application of law of mutual combat to murder and manslaughter or either. Gardner v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 1116.

Though it is immaterial on the question of self-defense whether the abandonment of the conflict by deceased was in good faith, defendant may not complain of the instruction that if deceased in good faith abandoned the conflict, and fled, and defendant was then in no danger of violence from deceased, and, knowing he was in no danger, shot deceased, he could not justify the killing on the ground of self-defense. Bordeaux v. State, 58 App. 61, 124 S. W. 640.

Charge held sufficiently favorable to accused. Anthony v. State, 62 App. 138, 136 S. W. 1097.

15. — Threats by deceased.—See notes to art. 1143, post.

Where the evidence raises the issue of self-defense in connection with that of threats, an independent charge on self-defense, should be given, but is not necessary where the evidence does not raise that issue in connection with the issue of threats. Bussey v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 873; Williams v. State, 61 App. 356, 136 S. W. 771. See, also, Ware v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1074; Reagan v. State, 70 App. 498, 157 S. W. 483; Lyons v. State, 71 App. 189, 159 S. W. 1070.

Where the court charged that in determining the rights of accused to act, the matter must be viewed from his standpoint at the time of the homicide, a charge submitting the issue of self-defense on the ground of threats was not erroneous for failing to state that the acts and conduct of decedent must be viewed from the standpoint of accused. Payton v. State, 60 App. 475, 132 S. W. 127.

In a homicide case, refusal to instruct that, if accused believed that decedent was armed and had reasonable ground for such belief, he could act thereon, though decedent was unarmed, was not justified by giving an instruction that if before the killing accused had been informed of decedent's threats to kill him, and if at the time of the difficulty decedent, by his manner, caused accused to believe that he intended to execute such threats, accused should be acquitted. Kemper v. State, 63 App. 1, 138 S. W. 1025.

Where the testimony of the defense raises the right to eject an intruder from the premises, the right of self-defense from attack, and the right of self-defense in view of previously communicated threats, each defense should be separately stated in distinct paragraphs, applying the law of reasonable doubt to each. Reagan v. State, 70 App. 498, 157 S. W. 483.

A charge that if deceased had made threats against accused, and such threats had been communicated, or reports of threats, whether actually made or not, had been reported to accused, and accused shot deceased, who, at the time of the killing, did some act reasonably indicating he was about to put his threats into execution, accused should be acquitted, is not erroneous as requiring the jury to find that deceased actually made the threats. Eads v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 574.

The evidence for accused tended to show that when he and deceased met, deceased jumped from his horse and threw his hand into his bosom as if to draw a pistol, after telling accused to halt, and that accused then shot him. The court charged that if deceased had threatened to kill accused, or if accused had been informed that deceased had done so, such threats, or the fact that accused had been so informed, afforded no justification for the killing, unless deceased at the time of the shooting did or was doing some act, or making some demonstration, manifesting an intention to execute or carry out such threats, or which was reasonably calculated, in view of all the circumstances considered from accused's standpoint, to produce and which did produce in accused's mind the belief that he was about to execute such threats, that in that event accused had a right to act upon such reasonable appearance of danger, though the danger was not real, and that if deceased did any act which reasonably induced accused to believe that he was about to shoot or inflict serious bodily injury and if prompted by such belief accused shot deceased, his act was justifiable. The court did not charge upon self-defense on any other theory. Held, that the refusal of charges as to self-defense on the theory of demonstrations by deceased at the time of the killing without regard to threats was error, as the charge given was limited to threats and accompanying demonstrations. Manly v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 724.

It is error to charge jury that if they believed that defendant killed deceased in part to protect his brother's life and in part because of revenge to find him guilty. Shumate v. State, 38 App. 266, 42 S. W. 609.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant maintained that he had done the killing in defense of his brother, the court charged the jury that every person was permitted to defend himself or his brother, etc., and in the same charge, in applying the law to the facts, instructed the jury that if they believed that, when defendant cut deceased with a knife, it was a necessary measure to protect himself, they should acquit. Held, that this charge was too restrictive, for it should have charged the jury on the facts as to the right of defendant to kill in defense of his brother. Johnson v. State, 60 App. 512, 132 S. W. 804.

17. — Defense of habitation.—See Oldham v. State, 63 App. 527, 142 S. W. 13.

Art. 1108. [678] Retreat not necessary.—The party whose person or property is so unlawfully attacked is not bound to retreat in order to avoid the necessity of killing his assailant.

Retreat.—It is, under this article, a part of the law of self-defense that a party unlawfully assailed is not bound to retreat in order to avoid the necessity of slaying his assailant. Voight v. State, 53 App. 268, 109 S. W. 205; Hix v. State, 51 App. 431, 102 S. W. 405; Watson v. State, 50 App. 171, 95 S. W. 115; Cooper v. State, 49 App. 28, 89 S. W. 1068; Arto v. State, 19 App. 126; Parker v. State, 22 App. 105, 3 S. W. 100; Smith v. State, 57 App. 455, 123 S. W. 698. See, also, May v. State, 23 App. 146, 4 S. W. 591; Gonzales v. State, 28 App. 130, 12 S. W. 733; Ball v. State, 29 App. 107, 14 S. W. 1012; Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071; Nalley v. State, 30 App. 456, 17 S. W. 1084; Warren v. State, 31 App. 573, 21 S. W. 680; King v. State, 13 App. 277; Smith v. State, 33 App. 513, 27 S. W. 137; Garner v. State, 34 App. 356, 30 S. W. 782; Renn v. State, 64 App. 639, 143 S. W. 167.

Deceased demanded and insisted upon his right to move a fence in defendant's possession, and came with employes and a shot-gun to remove such fence; held, that defendant was not bound to retreat, and if he killed deceased while deceased was in the act of removing such fence, he was justified. Sims v. State, 36 App. 154, 36 S. W. 256.

The law of retreat is not applicable to cases of imperfect self-defense. Carter v. State, 30 App. 552, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944.

Return to attack after retreat.—See Isaacs v. State, 25 Tex. 175; Garner v. State, 34 App. 356, 30 S. W. 782.

Charge.—When the evidence raises the issue of self-defense, it is the duty of the court, whether requested to do so or not, to give in charge to the jury all the law upon that issue applicable to the evidence. Under the Code it is a part of the law of self-defense, that an assailed party is not bound to retreat in order to make good his right of self-defense. Failure to so charge is error, which, if excepted to, necessitates the reversal of a conviction, and if not excepted to will still be ground for reversal if the error was calculated to prejudice the rights of the accused. Bell v. State, 17 App. 538; Arto v. State, 19 App. 126; Parker v. State, 22 App. 105, 3 S. W. 100; White v. State, 23 App. 154, 3 S. W. 710. But see Hunt v. State, 33 App. 252, 26 S. W. 206.

The following charge asked by the defendant was held to be substantially correct as matter of law, and, responding to the proof, should have been given. "If Jim Jones, defendant in this case, believed, and had reasonable ground to believe, or for such belief, at the time he shot the deceased, Tom Nowlin (if you find he shot him), that he, defendant, Jim Jones, was being unlawfully arrested, that is, arrested without lawful authority, and that the life or person of him, defendant Jim Jones, was in immediate serious danger thereby, and the acts done by the defendant, Jim Jones, were necessary to prevent such unlawful arrest of him, the said Jim Jones, and without a resort to such extremity, the said unlawful arrest could not have been prevented, and the deceased had not, in fact, any lawful authority to make such arrest, then the homicide was in law justifiable, and you will acquit the defendant." Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454. And see Ball v. State, 29 App. 107, 14 S. W. 1012; Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071; Nalley v. State, 30 App. 456, 17 S. W. 1084; Baltrip v. State, 30 App. 545, 17 S. W. 1006.

When the evidence shows that the defendant did retreat, it is unnecessary to charge the law of retreat. Hudson v. State, 28 App. 323, 13 S. W. 388.

The court instructed that the defendant had the right to resist an unlawful arrest and to use all force necessary to prevent it and to release himself and that he could only be convicted of manslaughter in case he used more force than was necessary. Held that there was no need to further instruct that defendant was not bound to retreat. Montgomery v. State, 45 App. 373, 77 S. W. 789.

Where defendant killed decedent while he was threatening to assault defendant's father, an instruction as to the necessity to retreat applied only to defendant is erroneous, as it should have applied also to the father. Dobbs v. State, 51 App. 113, 100 S. W. 946.

Art. 1109. [679] Requisites of the attack.—The attack upon the person of an individual, in order to justify homicide, must be such as produces a reasonable expectation or fear of death, or some serious bodily injury.

See notes to art. 1014, subdivision 6. ante.

Cited, Alexander v. State, 63 App. 102, 138 S. W. 721.

Attack and danger.—If at the time of the killing, the conduct of the deceased, viewed in the light of all the circumstances, was such as to create in the mind of the defendant, a reasonable apprehension of death or serious bodily injury, although in fact no such danger existed, his right to kill to prevent the apparent danger would be as complete as if the danger had been real. And the appearances or indications of danger must be viewed and considered from the defendant's standpoint in determining whether or not they were reasonably calculated to produce, and did produce in his mind the fear of death or serious bodily harm. Where the evidence demands it, the charge of the court should clearly explain to the jury these rules with reference to apparent danger, and should not restrict the right of self-defense to actual danger. *Marnoch v. And on same question generally, see Bell v. State, 29 Tex. 494; Irwin v. State, 43 Tex. 236; Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389; Sims v. State, 9 App. 586; *Jones v. The right of self-defense is based upon and limited by necessity. When the necessity arises, the right instantly accrues, and when the necessity, real or apparent, ceases, the right no longer exists. Blake v. State, 3 App. 581; Lander v. State, 12 Tex. 462; Hobbs v. State, 16 App. 517; Brendendick v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 116.

A party assailed or endangered may pursue his adversary until the danger is past, and if in so doing he kills the latter, it is justifiable. As long as the danger, real or apparent, exists, the right of defense continues. West v. State, 2 App. 460.

A reasonable belief that another intends to inflict on the party some serious bodily injury, and that he is in such a position that he may carry his intention into effect, is not sufficient to justify the killing of him upon that apprehension; such belief must be founded, in part at least, upon some act of the deceased, showing that he has a present intention to inflict the injury; and even then, the means used to repel the assault and prevent the impending injury must be only such as are necessary under the circumstances. Hinton v. State, 24 Tex. 454.

A previous difficulty with deceased is not a justification for shooting him two hours after it occurred, the accused being in no danger, at the time, of injury. Hudson v. State, 40 Tex. 12.

The assailed must decide at his peril as to the necessity, and threats by a dangerous man, unarmed, and making no effort toward their execution, does not warrant any apprehension. Williams v. State, 2 App. 271.

The right of self-defense is founded on the law of nature, and is not, nor can be, superseded by any law of society. West v. State, 2 App. 460. There must be at least an apparent necessity to ward off by force some unlawful and violent attack. It is not enough that the party believed himself in danger unless the facts were such that the jury can say he had reasonable ground for such belief. Blake v. State, 3 App. 581.

An apprehension of future danger does not justify a homicide. The apprehension must be of a present and imminent danger. Holt v. State, 9 App. 571.

If, there be evidence tending to prove that the homicide was committed for the protection of the slayer against an attack by the deceased, which produced a reasonable expectation or fear of "serious bodily injury" to the slayer, it is error to instruct the jury to convict, unless the slayer, before killing the deceased, resorted to other means for the prevention of the injury. Hunnicut v. State, 20 App. 632.

To justify homicide on ground of self-defense, either with or without threats, the danger must be apparently or really immediate and pressing, imminent and unavoidable. Bush v. State, 40 App. 543, 51 S. W. 238.

If the accused was pursued by the deceased with a pistol in his hand, which he attempted to fire, but failed, and the accused, still fleeing, turned and shot his pursuer, the case is clearly one of self-defense. Underwood v. State, 25 Tex. Supp. 389.

The theories of defense being mistaken identity and self-defense in an attempt to illegally arrest the deceased, the homicide must be of a grade inferior to manslaughter, though done upon reasonable apprehension of danger. Carter v. State, 30 App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944. See, also, Allen v. State, 24 App. 216, 6 S. W. 187; Tillery v. State, 24 App. 251, 5 S. W. 842, 5 Am. St. Rep. 882; Meuly v. State, 26 App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; McDade v. State, 27 App. 641, 11 S. W. 672, 11 Am. St. Rep. 216; Cochran v. State, 28 App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Childers v. State, 30 App. 160, 16 S. W. 903, 28 Am. St. Rep. 899; Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071; Sullivan v. State, 31 App. 486, 20 S. W. 927, 37 Am. St. Rep. 826.

Self-defense cannot be pleaded on the ground of attack on defendant's brother, when the attack had ceased before defendant appeared on the scene. Malone v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 991.

Serious bodily injury does not mean an injury that must necessarily or probably be fatal. Bruce v. State, 41 App. 27, 51 S. W. 955.

Where the evidence showed that accused was quarreling with his employer, and that another interfered, and such other retreated to some distance, and then renewed the attack on accused, and the court charged on the right of one to interfere to prevent an assault on another, a further charge should have been given that, if such other person who was killed by accused stopped the pending assault, and then retreated, and thereafter attacked accused when he was doing nothing that accused could kill in self-defense if he was reasonably in fear of his life, etc. Moss v. State, 59 App. 68, 126 S. W. 1150.

One has the same right to defend against a threatened attack as he has to defend against an actual attack. Payton v. State, 60 App. 475, 132 S. W. 127.

In a prosecution for homicide, it appeared that the deceased had scared the defendant's wife, and when the defendant sought him out and demanded an explanation, deceased told defendant substantially that his wife had lied. The defendant knew that the deceased had a pistol on the morning of the homicide, and, as the deceased told defendant that his wife had lied, he stepped forward, placed his right hand in his shirt, and defendant shot him. Held, that those circumstances presented a case of self-defense upon apparent danger, and not manslaughter. Ballard v. State, 62 App. 435, 138 S. W. 120.

To abridge one's right of self-defense it must be apparent to him that the danger has ceased or he must have reached a place where it is not reasonable for him to have fear of his life or of serious bodily injury. Holmes v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 926.

Appearance of danger held not such as justified the shooting. Cloud v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 892.

The issue of self-defense upon the theory of apparent danger may be raised by the acts of deceased, coupled with his words or by his acts without words. Andrus v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 189.

Joint attack.—When there are more assailants than one, the slayer has the right to act upon the hostile demonstrations of either one of them, and to kill either of them, if it reasonably appeared to him that they were present and acting together to take his life, or do him serious bodily injury. McLaughlin v. State, 10 App. 340; Jones v. State, 20 App. 665; Cartwright v. State, 16 App. 473, 49 Am. Rep. 826; Carter v. State, 37 App. 403, 35 S. W. 378; Stell v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 76; Gaines v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 717. See, also, Bean v. State, 25 App. 346, 8 S. W. 278; Meuly v. State, 26 App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Fifer v. State, 64 App. 203, 141 S. W. 989; Black v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 944.

Charge.—Facts held to require a charge on apparent danger. Lundy v. State, 59 App. 131, 127 S. W. 1032; Rodriguez v. State, 58 App. 397, 126 S. W. 264.

Where accused's testimony only showed preparation for an attack on him by decedent and apparent danger, the court in its charge should not limit accused's right to act from an actual attack alone. McCampbell v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 345; Rhea v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 578.

A charge on apparent danger is properly refused where danger was real. Stacey v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 348; Rodriguez v. State, 71 App. 108, 158 S. W. 537.

The instruction should be, that if the attack by the deceased was such as might reasonably produce in the mind of the slayer a reasonable expectation of either death or serious bodily harm, he would not be required to resort to other means than killing to prevent the injury. Blake v. State, 3 App. 588; Cheek v. State, 4 App. 444; Ainsworth v. State, 8 App. 538; Kendall v. State, Id. 577; Brite v. State, 10 App. 368; Foster v. State, 11 App. 105; Jordan v. State, Id. 448; Boddy v. State, 14 App. 540; Branch v. State, 15 App. 103; Short v. State, Id. 376; Gilly v. State, Id. 301; Sterling v. State, Id. 256; Cartwright v. State, 16 App. 473, 49 Am. Rep. 826; Morgan v. State, Id. 595; Jones v. State, 17 App. 611; Hunnicut v. State, 18 App. 522, 51 Am. Rep. 330; Williams v. State, 22 App. 497, 4 S. W. 64; Orman v. State, 22 App. 604, 3 S. W. 468, 58 Am. Rep. 662; Lee v. State, 21 App. 241, 17 S. W. 425.

A charge is erroneous which turns the issue of self-defense not upon apparent danger, but upon an actual attack when there had been no actual attack. Stewart v. State, 40 App. 651, 51 S. W. 907.

Where the facts require it, the charge should instruct that the defendant had the right to act upon apparent danger as it reasonably appeared to him, and that to justify his acts the danger need not be real. The defendant is entitled to have explained correctly to the jury the law of self-defense in all the phases in which it may be applicable to the evidence. Wheelis v. State, 23 App. 238, 5 S. W. 224; Hill v. State, 10 App. 618; King v. State, 13 App. 277; Jackson v. State, 15 App. 84; Luera v. State, 12 App. 257; Edwards v. State, 5 App. 593; Wasson v. State, 3 App. 474. And see Barnes v. State, 57 App. 449, 125 S. W. 39.

The rule prescribing the extent to which a person in emergency is authorized to act upon appearances of danger is as follows: If, from the standpoint of the slayer, it reasonably appeared to him, from the circumstances of the case, that the danger existed, and he acted under the reasonable belief that it did exist, he was justified in defending against it to the same extent and under the same rules as if the danger had been real. The charge in this case was erroneous in that it limited such right of the accused to his honest belief that he was in danger, and erroneously made this idea prominent by reiteration. Tillery v. State, 24 App. 251, 5 S. W. 842, 5 Am. St. Rep. 882.

It is error to charge "that all other means must be resorted to before accused can kill." One has the right to act upon danger or the reasonable appearance of danger. Casner v. State, 42 App. 118, 57 S. W. 825.

Charge on self-defense relating to real and apparent danger held sufficient. Gay v. State, 58 App. 472, 125 S. W. 896.

Charge held not misleading in the use of the term "great bodily harm" as well as the statutory phrase "serious bodily injury." Ward v. State, 59 App. 62, 126 S. W. 1145; Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272.

A charge that accused could kill if necessary for the preservation of his own life, or if he believed it was necessary, held erroneous for not charging that he could exercise the same right to protect himself against serious bodily harm apprehended by him, though he did not believe that his life was in danger. Gaines v. State, 58 App. 631, 127 S. W. 181.

Charge held not to limit the right of accused to kill in self-defense to the situation as it appeared to him, based only on acts of deceased at that time, and excluding threats made by deceased shortly before. Millican v. State, 63 App. 440, 140 S. W. 1136.

The charge is not objectionable in charging that defendant had the right to act from "apparent danger" as well as "real danger," though the testimony presented a situation of actual danger alone. Allen v. State, 64 App. 225, 141 S. W. 983.

It is error to limit the right of self-defense to an unlawful attack producing a reasonable apprehension of death or serious bodily harm; a party attacked having the right to defend himself against any unlawful assault so long as he uses no greater force than is necessary. Kinslow v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 249.

It is not error to charge that the real or apparent danger justifying the killing must have been imminent and pressing. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 763.

Where it appears that accused was really in danger of his life, an instruction on self-defense should not be confined to apparent danger, but should include real danger. Garcia v. State, 70 App. 485, 156 S. W. 939.

In a prosecution for murder, where defendant's theory of the case was that he had called at deceased's store for his mail, when deceased cursed and ordered him out of the house, and, when he insisted on getting his mail, picked up an ax handle and struck him over the head, injuring his ear, whereupon defendant cut deceased with a small knife without intending to kill him, an instruction that reasonable fear of death or great bodily harm will excuse one in using all necessary force to protect his life or person, that it is not necessary that there should be actual danger, provided the party acts on a reasonable apprehension of danger as it appears to him from his standpoint at the time, that the party acting under the real or apparent danger is in no way bound to retreat in order to kill his assailant, and that, if from the evidence the jury believed that defendant killed the deceased, but that at the time the deceased was making an attack on defendant, which, from its manner and character, and defendant's knowledge of the character and disposition of the deceased, caused him to have a reasonable expectation or fear of death or serious bodily injury, and that, acting under such reasonable expectation or fear, the defendant killed the deceased, then the jury should acquit, that, if the deceased was armed with an ax handle, and its manner of use was reasonably calculated to produce death or serious bodily harm, then the law presumed the deceased intended to murder or inflict serious injury on the defendant, that, in determining whether the defendant acted in what reasonably appeared to him to be necessary self-defense, the jury should look at the transaction from the defendant's standpoint at the time, and consider the same in the light of the facts and circumstances as the jury should believe they appeared to the defendant at the time and not from any other standpoint, and that it was for the jury to determine from the evidence what the appearances were to the defendant, and what his standpoint was, and in what light he did, in fact, view the facts, such instruction fully covered the issue of self-defense as presented by defendant's evidence. Bolden v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 533.

Facts held to warrant a charge limiting accused's right to defend himself from actual attack. Coulter v. State (Cr. App.) 162 S. W. 885.

— Joint attack.—The rules as to apprehended danger are equally applicable and should be given in charge to the jury, where there is evidence tending to show that other persons are acting together with the deceased in the attack upon the defendant. In such case the charge should not ignore the participancy of such other persons, and should not limit the defendant's right of self-defense to the hostile demonstrations of the deceased alone, but should recognize such right with reference to the acts, each and all of the parties apparently making, or participating in the attack upon him. McLaughlin v. State, 10 App. 340; Jones v. State, 20 App. 665.

Where two are engaged in an attack upon defendant, a charge is defective which restricts attack to one; it should be enlarged so as to embrace a joint attack. Francis v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 489.

Where a number of parties are acting together and one of them is killed by accused, it is error to restrict defendant's right of self-defense to an act on part of deceased. If from all the circumstances the accused was in danger, viewed from his standpoint, he had the right to act. Stell v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 77.

Charge on accused's right to act on the hostile demonstrations of another person with deceased held sufficient. Carson v. State, 57 App. 394, 123 S. W. 590, 136 Am. St. Rep. 981.

The court should charge that if it appeared to accused, from the conduct of decedent or from the conduct of decedent and another acting with him, that his life was in danger, he could act in self-defense. McCampbell v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 345. See, also, Mayhew v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 229, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 671.

The charge should not limit the consideration of past threats solely to the action of deceased; the third person by acting in conjunction with deceased assuming all of his past threats. Garcia v. State, 70 App. 485, 156 S. W. 939.

Art. 1110. [680] Circumstances justifying in defense of property.—When, under article 1107, a homicide is committed in the protection of property, it must be done under the following circumstances:

1. The possession must be of corporeal property, and not of a mere right, and the possession must be actual and not merely constructive.

2. The possession must be legal, though the right of the property may not be in the possessor.

Legality of possession.—A charge that defendant might defend property to which he had the rightful possession, held, error. The possession required by the statute is "legal possession," and a person may hold legal possession of property without any claim of right. Sims v. State, 36 App. 154, 36 S. W. 256.

A "legal" possession of the property, without reference to "rightful" possession, is sufficient. Sims v. State, 36 App. 154, 36 S. W. 256; s. c., 38 App. 637, 44 S. W. 522.

On evidence, see Sims v. State, 38 App. 637, 44 S. W. 522; s. c., 36 App. 152, 36 S. W. 256.

Where defendant is shown to be in legal possession, it is reversible error to admit evidence as to rightful possession. Carr v. State, 41 App. 380, 55 S. W. 51.

Where accused tendered the issue of his right to defend his possession of land at the time he killed an officer attempting to execute a writ of sequestration, it was proper to permit a witness to state that a writ of possession on which accused had been ejected had been issued out of a district court. Fifer v. State, 64 App. 203, 141 S. W. 989.

Where accused, killing an officer attempting to execute a writ of sequestration claimed the land in good faith, evidence that at the time of the dispossession of accused, and prior to the killing, an officer took the decree of court dispossessing accused and in the presence of accused ran the lines of the land, and accused and his property were placed off the land, was admissible to show that he knew that a decree had been rendered decreeing him not the owner of the land. Fifer v. State, 64 App. 203, 141 S. W. 989.

A landlord who let farm land for crop rent, the tenant agreeing to work the crops, may, upon the tenant's failure, enter and work the crop for the benefit of both, and, where he peacefully acquired possession, he is not a trespasser, and, if the tenant attempts by display of force to drive him from the land, may defend himself. Hillis v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1154.

Where accused claimed that he entered upon his land to work the crop for the benefit of himself and his tenant who had abandoned it, and that upon the tenant's attempting to drive him therefrom by display of force he killed deceased in defending himself, he is entitled to have his theory of the case submitted, and it is improper for the court to charge that he was under no circumstances entitled to go upon the land. Hillis v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1154.

3. If possession be once lost, it is not lawful to regain it by such means as result in homicide.

Regaining possession.—In a prosecution for murder, wherein it appeared accused killed deceased when endeavoring to gain possession of a house occupied by deceased on land accused had recently bought, there was no error in refusing instructions in favor of the latter's title and right to possession, as the illegality of the possession of deceased would not authorize accused going on the place to forcibly eject him, and killing him in so doing, and the charge on manslaughter sufficiently guarded the question as to extenuating or mitigating circumstances. Gay v. State, 58 App. 472, 125 S. W. 896.

Whether or not deceased was in wrongful possession of a house on land of accused, accused could not go on the premises and eject him by force, as was sought to be done when he went to the place with a shotgun and killed deceased in the difficulty that ensued, as accused, who occupied a neighboring house on the same land, was not in such case acting under the statute authorizing the defense of property or habitation, but requiring him to be in possession, and art. 1110, subd. 3. Gay v. State, 58 App. 472, 125 S. W. 896.

An owner has no right to retake his stolen property by such means as would result in the loss of life or serious bodily injury. Hartfield v. State, 61 App. 515, 134 S. W. 1180.

That one is armed does not impair his right of self-defense, but he has no right to kill, though his adversary wrongfully seeks to obtain possession of premises in dispute. Knight v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 268.

One has no right to use force to regain possession. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 805.

4. Every other effort in his power must have been made by the possessor to repel the aggression before he will be justified in killing. Cited, Smith v. State, 57 App. 455, 123 S. W. 698.

Defense of property.—Homicide in the protection of property is only justifiable after all other means have been resorted to for the prevention of the injury, and the killing must take place while the person killed is in the very act of making such unlawful and violent attack; and such homicide, to be justifiable, must be committed under the following circumstances, viz.: 1. The possession must be of corporeal property, and not of a mere right, and the possession must be actual, and not merely constructive. 2. The possession must be legal, though the right of property may not be in the possessor. 3. If the possession be once lost, it is not lawful to regain it by such means as result in homicide. 4. Every other effort in his power must have been made by the possessor to repel the aggression before he will be justified in killing. It is a general rule that the owner of personal property has a right to use as much force as is necessary to prevent its forcible, illegal removal. Lilly v. State, 20 App. 1; Weaver v. State, 19 App. 547, 53 Am. Rep. 389; Ross v. State, 10 App. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 643. See, also, Souther v. State, 18 App. 352; Woodring v. State, 33 App. 25, 24 S. W. 293; Leibetter v. State, 26 App. 22, 9 S. W. 60; Tolliver v. State, 53 App. 329, 111 S. W. 655; Wenzel v. State, 48 App. 625, 90 S. W. 28; Gilcrease v. State, 33 App. 619, 28 S. W. 531; Dean v. State, 47 App. 243, 83 S. W. 816; Allen v. State (Cr. App.) 66 S. W. 674; Walker v. State, 70 App. 84, 156 S. W. 206.

Where accused went to where decedent was, and killed him simply because he was on accused's premises and would not leave, as demanded by accused, self-defense was not in the case. Humphrey v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 589.

Charge.—Charge held erroneously refused. Newman v. State, 58 App. 443, 126 S. W. 578, 21 Ann. Cas. 718.

Charge held correct. Wells v. State, 63 App. 618, 141 S. W. 96.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

OF EXCUSABLE HOMICIDE

Art.
1111. Definition.

Art.
1112. The lawful act must be done by lawful means.

Article 1111. [681] Definition.—Homicide is excusable when the death of a human being happens by accident or misfortune, though caused by the act of another, who is in the prosecution of a lawful object by lawful means.

Cited, Cooper v. State, 72 App. 250, 161 S. W. 1094.

Accident.—See, also, arts. 45, 48, ante.

If a person acting in his own necessary self-defense shoots and kills a third person by accident, he is guilty of no offense. Clark v. State, 19 App. 495, citing Plummer v. State, 4 App. 310, 30 Am. Rep. 165; McCullough v. State, 62 App. 126, 136 S. W. 1055; Jackson v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 589; Hobbs v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 809.

For facts held to constitute excusable homicide, see Ex parte Warren, 31 Tex. 143, and Ross v. State, 10 App. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 643.

Homicide by accidental discharge of defendant's pistol, when deceased was trying to prevent defendant from killing a third person, is not excusable. Wheatley v. State (Cr. App.) 39 S. W. 672.

Where a pistol accidentally dropped upon the floor is discharged and a person is thereby killed, the defendant by whom the pistol was dropped is, under an indictment for homicide, entitled to an acquittal. Hodge v. State, 60 App. 157, 131 S. W. 577.

Where accused shot deceased believing that he was A., he was entitled to all the defenses to which he would have been entitled if the person shot had in fact been A. Wilson v. State, 70 App. 355, 156 S. W. 1185.

Evidence.—Where there was a plea of accidental homicide and an issue as to whether the shooting was intentional, any circumstance or declaration showing accused's state of mind and which would throw light on such issue was admissible. Singleton v. State, 57 App. 560, 124 S. W. 92.

On a trial for homicide, in which accused claimed that he was intoxicated and that deceased was shot accidentally, evidence held sufficient to support a conviction for murder. Gomez v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 711.

Evidence as to whether deceased was killed by accused or killed himself intentionally or accidentally held sufficient to support a conviction. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 360.

Charge.—An instruction that if the jury believed from the evidence, or had a reasonable doubt, that defendant drew his pistol, not to assault prosecutrix, but to protect himself from danger taken from his standpoint at the time, and while endeavoring to make prosecutrix and her companions talk to him relative to getting his wife back, prosecutrix took hold of the barrel of the pistol, which, in the scuffle, was accidentally discharged and prosecutrix was wounded, defendant should be found not guilty, sufficiently presented the theory of accidental shooting. Groszelmigen v. State, 57 App. 241, 121 S. W. 1113.

Where the issue was whether the killing of decedent was accidental or the result of negligence, the court in its charge defined murder in the first and second degrees, and negligent homicide in the first and second degrees, and stated that if accused fired the pistol accidentally without intending to do so, and thereby killed decedent, and if he did not intend to kill decedent, accused was not guilty of negligence, sufficiently submitted the issue of accidental homicide. Biggerstaff v. State, 59 App. 575, 129 S. W. 840.

Evidence held to raise the issue of accidental shooting. McCray v. State, 63 App. 522, 140 S. W. 442. See, also, Whiten v. State, 71 App. 555, 160 S. W. 462.

Charge held insufficient. Hamilton v. State, 64 App. 175, 141 S. W. 966.

Evidence insufficient to present an issue of self-defense or accidental killing. Vines v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 727.

Charge held sufficient. Vick v. State, 71 App. 50, 159 S. W. 50.

Charges that accused should be acquitted, if the jury had a reasonable doubt whether he intended to kill or at the time he pointed his gun knew it was loaded or cocked, affirmatively present the issue of accidental homicide. Windham v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 661.

Art. 1112. [682] The lawful act must be done by lawful means.—The lawful act causing the death of another must be done by lawful means and used in a lawful degree. Though lawful for the parent, guardian, schoolmaster or master to chastise the child, ward, scholar or apprentice, yet, if this be done with an instrument likely to produce death, or, if with a proper instrument the chastisement be cruelly inflicted and death result, it is murder.

Article 1113. [683] Of two kinds.—Homicide by negligence is of two kinds:

1. Such as happens in the performance of a lawful act; and 2. That which occurs in the performance of an unlawful act.

Accomplice in negligent homicide.—No accomplices to this offense, see art. 85, ante.

But as to testimony as accomplice of one formerly indicted for the same offense, see Saye v State, 50 App. 569, 99 S. W. 551.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

1. IN THE PERFORMANCE OF A LAWFUL ACT

Art. 1114. [684] In the performance of a lawful act.—If any person in the performance of a lawful act shall, by negligence and carelessness, cause the death of another, he is guilty of negligent homicide of the first degree.

Cited, Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

Negligent homicide of first degree.—Homicide committed by intentionally firing a pistol into a residence is not negligent homicide. Russell v. State, 38 App. 590, 44 S. W. 159.

If a husband believing that his wife is about to shoot herself attempts to take the gun from her and it is discharged, killing her, he is not negligent and the court need not charge on negligent homicide. Blalock v. State, 40 App. 154, 49 S. W. 100.

Where the victim was killed by discharge of a pistol which he was attempting to take from defendant or was attempting to prevent defendant from using it was not negligent homicide. Williams v. State, 45 App. 218, 75 S. W. 859.

The test of this offense seems to be that there must be an apparent danger of causing death. And the test of care or caution is that which distinguishes it from excusable homicide. The statute never intended to hold a surgeon liable for a homicide in cases of serious operation unless there was a want of proper caution and care, however dangerous the operation may be. Gorden v. State (Cr. App.) 90 S. W. 637.

Where the court charged that if the shooting was an accident defendant should be acquitted, defendant can not complain of failure to charge on negligent homicide of the first and second degree. Combs v. State, 52 App. 613, 108 S. W. 649.

In order to convict for negligent homicide, the killing must be accidental or unintentional, and under circumstances from which the law will impute negligence. Joy v. State, 57 App. 93, 123 S. W. 584.

The evidence made applicable a requested charge that, on the question of negligence, if accused in exercising ordinary care did not know that the gun was loaded, the jury should acquit. McCray v. State, 63 App. 522, 140 S. W. 442.

If accused obtained and took a gun from the rack and pointed it at decedent and pulled the trigger without knowing that it was loaded, he would not be guilty of negligent homicide in the first degree. Hamilton v. State, 64 App. 175, 141 S. W. 966.

Evidence held not to raise the issue of negligent homicide. Cooper v. State, 72 App. 250, 161 S. W. 1094.

Evidence held to raise the issue of negligent homicide. Windham v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 661; Sewall v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 569.

And generally, see Spears v. State, 41 App. 527, 56 S. W. 347; Morton v. State, 43 App. 533, 67 S. W. 115; Posey v. State, 46 App. 190, 78 S. W. 689; Saye v. State, 50 App. 569, 99 S. W. 551; Holland v. State, 55 App. 27, 115 S. W. 48.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

Art. 1115. [685] "Lawful act" defined.—A "lawful act" is one not forbidden by the penal law, and which would give no just occasion for a civil action.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

Art. 1116. [686] Must be an apparent danger of causing death.—To constitute this offense, there must be an apparent danger of causing the death of the person killed, or some other.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

Art. 1117. [687] How distinguished from excusable homicide.—The want of proper care and caution distinguishes this offense from excusable homicide. The degree of care and caution is such as a man of ordinary prudence would use under like circumstances.

Cited, Baskins v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 723.

Negligence.—Negligence by omission consists in the omission to perform an act with the performance of which the party is especially charged, and there can be no criminal negligence in the omission to perform an act which it is not the express duty of the party to perform. Under this rule brakemen on a railway train, whose duty is shown to pertain in no degree to the operation of a locomotive, nor to the watching of the railway track, nor the sounding of the danger signal, can not be held liable for the killing of a person by the locomotive, operated by the engineer and fireman, upon whom the duty of operating it exclusively devolved. See the statement of the case for evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for negligent homicide. Anderson v. State, 27 App. 177, 11 S. W. 33, 3 L. R. A. 644, 11 Am. St. Rep. 189.

In order that a civil action for a death in the negligent operation of a ferry be deemed an action for an "offense" within Rev. St. art. 1198, subd. 8 it must be alleged that the defendants acted in person and not by agent. Austin v. Cameron, 83 Tex. 351, 18 S. W. 437.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

Art. 1118. [688] Examples.—Throwing timbers by a workman from the roof or upper part of a house in a public street or highway, or where a number of persons are known to be around the house, or discharging firearms on or near a public highway, other than a street in a town or city, in such manner as would be likely to injure persons who might be passing, are examples of negligent homicide of the first degree, in case of death resulting therefrom. If death is caused by the careless discharge of firearms in a public street of a town or city, the offense will be of a higher degree.

Negligent shooting.—If defendant shot and killed deceased, mistaking him for wild game, he was guilty of negligent homicide if he did not exercise ordinary prudence under the circumstances. Bertrung v. State, 2 App. 160.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

Art. 1119. [689] Must be no apparent intention to kill.—To bring the offense within the definition of homicide by negligence, either of the first or second degree, there must be no apparent intention to kill.

Intent.—Negligent homicide is a killing which can only be predicated upon facts showing "no apparent intention to kill." Aikin v. State, 10 App. 619; Clark v. State, 19 App. 495.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

Art. 1120. [690] Homicide must be consequence of the act.—The homicide must be consequence of the act done or attempted to be done.

See art. 1120 C. C. P. and note.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

Art. 1121. [691] Punishment.—Negligent homicide of the first degree shall be punished by confinement in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 507.

2. IN THE PERFORMANCE OF AN UNLAWFUL ACT

Art. 1122. [692] "Of second degree" defined, etc.—The definitions, rules and provisions of the preceding articles of this chapter, with respect to negligent homicide of the first degree, apply also to the offense of negligent homicide of the second degree, or such as is committed in the prosecution of an unlawful act, except when contrary to the following provisions:

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 508.

Art. 1123. [693] Can only be committed, when.—Negligent homicide of the second degree can only be committed when the person guilty thereof is in the act of committing or attempting the commission of an unlawful act.

Art. 1124. [694] "Unlawful act" includes what.—Within the meaning of an "unlawful act" as used in this chapter are included—

1. Such acts as by the penal law are called misdemeanors; and,
2. Such acts, not being penal offenses, as would give just occasion for a civil action.

Negligent homicide of second degree.—Negligent homicide in the second degree is a homicide which occurs in the performance of an unlawful act, when the unlawful act does not rise above the grade of a misdemeanor; and when the evidence is of a character that would warrant the jury in concluding that, in the performance of the act, there was no apparent intention to kill, the law applicable to negligent homicide in the second degree should be given to the jury. Robins v. State, 9 App. 667; Robins v. State, Id. 671.

If, in the commission of a simple assault, or assault and battery upon another, there being no apparent intention to kill, one accidentally kill a third party, he is guilty of negligent homicide of the second degree. McConnell v. State, 13 App. 390.

Three elements concur to constitute negligent homicide of the second degree: 1. The killing must have occurred in the performance of an illegal act. 2. There must have been an apparent danger of causing the death of the person killed or some other. 3. There must have been no apparent intention to kill, and the homicide must have been the consequence of the act done or attempted to be done. See the opinion and the statement of the case for evidence held to raise the issue of negligent homicide of the second degree, and to have demanded of the trial court a charge upon that issue. McConnell v. State, 22 App. 354, 3 S. W. 699, 58 Am. Rep. 647; Howard v. State, 25 App. 686, 8 S. W. 929.

Two of the essentials to constitute negligent homicide of the second degree, are: 1. A killing while the accused is in the performance of an illegal act; 2. There must be no apparent intention to kill. Flynn v. State, 43 App. 407, 66 S. W. 551.

The act must be unlawful and a misdemeanor, and must be accompanied by want of proper care and caution, and there must be apparent danger of causing the death of the person killed, and no apparent intention to kill. Talbot v. State, 58 App. 324, 125 S. W. 906.

Where, on a trial for homicide, there was evidence that accused's brother and H. were having a dispute, in which H. used insulting epithets reflecting on accused's mother, to which the brother responded in the same spirit, that knives were drawn by both, some of the evidence indicating that the brother was in the wrong in drawing his knife, that when accused arrived he urged his brother to make H. take back what he had said, and that while in this condition he shot at H., killing S., but accused claimed that the pistol was fired accidentally, the issue of negligent homicide should have been submitted, since, if accused was in the wrong in interfering in the trouble between his brother and H. and culpable under the law, he was doing an unlawful act and, though he did not intend to kill, was guilty of negligent homicide. Whiten v. State, 71 App. 555, 160 S. W. 462.

Where accused testified that he went to a house where his wife was, without intending to have a difficulty with her, but to induce her to go home with him, and as he was standing in the door some women got hold of his gun, and it was accidentally discharged in the scuffle, shooting his wife, the court should have instructed on negligent homicide in the second degree. Hill v. State, 72 App. 109, 161 S. W. 118.

Where accused engaged with another in the unlawful act of trying to take the wife away from the home of her husband by force or stealth, at night, and accused, in furtherance of the unlawful purpose, while trying to force himself into the house, killed decedent and accused claimed that his gun was accidentally discharged, he was guilty of negligent homicide of the second degree. Chant v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 513.

"Negligent homicide" is a killing which can only be predicated on facts showing no intention to kill, and one who intentionally fired a gun under the mistaken belief that it was loaded with shot that would inflict injury only, while the gun was so loaded as to cause decedent's death, he was guilty of negligent homicide in the second degree, and, if the shooting occurred on or near a public highway while engaged in a lawful act, he was guilty of negligent homicide in the first degree. Egbert v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 560.

Art. 1125. [695] Homicide in an attempt at felony not negligent.—When one, in the execution of or in attempting to execute an act made a felony by the penal law, shall kill another, though without an apparent intention to kill, the offense does not come within the definition of negligent homicide.

As to instructions, see note under art. 1114.

Negligent homicide.—When the slayer, under circumstances which would make the homicide manslaughter, if effected, in attempting to kill one, by accident kills another, against whom he had no malice, such killing would not be more penal than that intended. Ferrell v. State, 43 Tex. 504.

If one committing an assault with intent to murder, accidentally kill a third person, he is guilty of murder in the second degree. McConnell v. State, 13 App. 390; Leggett v. State, 21 App. 382, 17 S. W. 159; Musick v. State, 21 App. 69, 18 S. W. 95; Thomas v. State, 53 App. 272, 109 S. W. 155, 126 Am. St. Rep. 786.

If A. was killed through mistake, the slayer believing him to be K. whom he intended to kill, the homicide was no higher grade than murder in the second degree, and if the circumstances would have made the killing of K. manslaughter then the killing of A. would be manslaughter only. Breedlove v. State, 26 App. 445, 9 S. W. 768.

Unintentional killing of one without malice, in a malicious attempt to kill another was not murder in the first, but second degree. Taylor v. State, 3 App. 337; Halbert v. State, 3 App. 656; Richards v. State, 35 App. 38, 30 S. W. 805.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 508.

Charge.—When the testimony tends to show that the shooting was accidental an instruction as to negligent homicide should be given. Mitchell v. State, 36 App. 278, 33 S. W. 367, 36 S. W. 456; Brittain v. State, 36 App. 406, 37 S. W. 758.

The court having charged on accident held that a charge on negligent homicide was not required. Combs v. State, 52 App. 613, 108 S. W. 649.

Facts held to demand a charge on the law of negligent homicide. Curtis v. State, 22 App. 227, 3 S. W. 86, 58 Am. Rep. 635; McConnell v. State, Id. 354, 3 S. W. 699, 58 Am. Rep. 647; Elliston v. State, 10 App. 361; Howard v. State, 25 App. 686, 8 S. W. 929; Robins v. State, 9 App. 666, Id. 671; Curtis v. State, 22 App. 227, 3 S. W. 86, 58 Am. Rep. 635.

For cases where the charge was not necessary or proper, see Williams v. State, 45 App. 218, 75 S. W. 859; Clifton v. State, 47 App. 472, 84 S. W. 237, 111 S. W. 740; Scott v. State, 47 App. 568, 85 S. W. 1060, 122 Am. St. Rep. 717; Leito v. State, 49 App. 309, 92 S. W. 418.

Art. 1126. [696] In an attempt at misdemeanor, punished, how.—When the unlawful act attempted or executed is known as a misdemeanor, the punishment of negligent homicide committed in the execution of such unlawful act shall be imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding three years, or by fine not exceeding three thousand dollars.

Art. 1127. [697] In a trespass, etc., how punished.—If the act intended is one for which an action would lie, but not an offense against the penal law, the homicide resulting therefrom is a misdemeanor, and may be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year.

Article 1128. [698] Definition of.—Manslaughter is voluntary homicide committed under the immediate influence of sudden passion arising from an adequate cause, but neither justified nor excused by law.

Cited, Jaynes v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 441.

Elements of offense.—The question of force, or degree of force is not an element of the crime. Force and comparative force are applicable to defensive, and not to acts which are solely defensive. Beaty v. State, 30 App. 677, 18 S. W. 646.

Malice is not an ingredient of manslaughter. Roquemore v. State, 59 App. 568, 129 S. W. 1120.

For other decisions pertinent to this subject, see notes to arts. 1022, 1026, 1087-1110, 1140-1143.

— Passion and adequate cause.—Manslaughter is predicated upon adequate cause and unless adequate cause exists, the homicide will not be reduced from murder, although it was committed under the immediate influence of sudden passion, rendering the mind incapable of cool reflection. McKinney v. State, 8 App. 626; Hill v. State, 11 App. 456; Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536; Richardson v. State, 9 App. 612; Boyett v. State, 2 App. 93; Johnson v. State, 43 Tex. 612; *Jennings v. App.) 169 S. W. 1158; Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

If adequate cause is present, and intent to kill is formed in excited state of mind, in case death results the offense would be manslaughter, hence if death does not ensue the offense is only aggravated assault. Chatman v. State, 40 App. 278, 50 S. W. 396.

Passion and the want of premeditation may characterize both murder in the second degree and manslaughter; the crimes are distinguishable by the causes leading to the homicide. If the cause be inadequate, it is murder; if adequate, manslaughter. Childers v. State, 33 App. 509, 27 S. W. 133.

On trial for murder, where there was a total want of provocation, there can not possibly be any manslaughter. Mitchell v. State, 36 App. 278, 33 S. W. 367, 36 S. W. 456.

Where one's mind is capable of cool reflection, even though statutory adequate cause is shown, a homicide committed by him is murder. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 127.

Under the direct provision of the statute, as well as in the absence of statute, to reduce voluntary homicide to manslaughter there must exist "sudden passion" in accused, which must have arisen from an "adequate cause." Wilson v. State, 71 App. 399, 160 S. W. 83.

To reduce the offense of murder to manslaughter, the killing must have been committed under the influence of a sudden transport of passion. Coulter v. State, 72 App. 602, 162 S. W. 885.

"Manslaughter" is the killing of a human being under sudden passion before the slayer has time to reflect. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 227.

Under the statute sudden passion is requisite to constitute "manslaughter," which is homicide committed under the immediate influence of "sudden passion," arising from an adequate cause, the passion that blindly strikes, and not the passion of revenge; and, however sudden the passion, if the evidence does not show that it was from an adequate cause, the homicide cannot be manslaughter; and, whatever the adequate cause, if the homicide was not committed under the immediate influence of sudden passion arising therefrom, it cannot, under the statute, be manslaughter. Hicks v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 755.

Killing by mistake.—See notes under art. 48, ante.

Principals and accomplices.—See notes to art. 74 et seq.

Limitations.—See C. C. P. art. 228 and notes.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 509.

On indictments generally, see C. C. P. art. 447 et seq.

A common law indictment for manslaughter is not sufficient, as this offense at common law differs materially in its definition and essential elements from the offense defined in the preceding article. To be sufficient under the preceding article, the indictment must charge that the defendant, under the immediate influence of sudden passion, arising from an adequate cause, neither justified nor excused by law, did unlawfully and voluntarily kill, etc. Jennings v. State, 7 App. 350.

Where a count of an indictment for manslaughter did not sufficiently charge the offense in respect to the instrument used, it was error to authorize the jury to convict on that count. Huddleston v. State, 70 App. 260, 156 S. W. 1168.

Evidence.—Where killing occurred over a contract, evidence of the terms of the contract is immaterial. Chalk v. State, 35 App. 116, 32 S. W. 534.

As to evidence showing the state of accused's mind, see Burnam v. State, 61 App. 51, 133 S. W. 1045.

Defendant's quarrel with a third person just previous to his killing of deceased was admissible as showing the condition of his mind and the circumstances that led up to the killing. Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 706.

One convicted of this offense can not complain that the evidence established murder instead of manslaughter. Powell v. State, 5 App. 234.

On a second trial after defendant had been acquitted of murder in both degrees the court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury to acquit defendant because the evidence showed murder and not manslaughter. See opinion for facts stated, Scroggins v. State, 32 App. 71, 22 S. W. 45.

Evidence held to show defendant guilty of manslaughter. Castro v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 985; Carter v. State, 37 App. 403, 35 S. W. 378; Id. (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 498; Childers v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 797.

Evidence held not to show manslaughter. Harcastle v. State, 36 App. 555, 38 S. W. 186; Woolbright v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 393; Eggleston v. State, 59 App. 542, 128 S. W. 1105; Powdrill v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 231; Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1158.

Charge.—See notes under arts. 735 and 743, C. C. P.

If the facts proved create a doubt in the mind of the trial judge as to the necessity of a charge upon the law of manslaughter in a trial for murder, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the accused, and such charge given. Williams v. State, 7 App. 396; Robles v. State, 5 App. 346; Halbert v. State, 3 App. 656; Maria v. State, 28 Tex. 698.

A charge on manslaughter is not required, where the proof shows either murder or justifiable homicide only. Grissom v. State, 4 App. 374; Roberts v. State, 5 App. 141; Berry v. State, 8 App. 515; Bejarano v. State, 6 App. 265; Halbert v. State, 3 App. 656; Boyett v. State, 2 App. 93; Jones v. State, 40 Tex. 188; Hudson v. State, Id. 12; Myers v. State, 33 Tex. 525; Vela v. State, 33 App. 322, 26 S. W. 396; McGrath v. State, 35 App. 413, 34 S. W. 127, 941; Treadway v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 655; Blue v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 730; Summers v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 774; Smith v. State, 70 App. 62, 156 S. W. 214; Hammons v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 493; Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 503.

Where the evidence, however inclusively, tends to prove facts from which the jury may deduce a finding of manslaughter, it is incumbent on the trial court to give the law of manslaughter in charge to the jury, and it should be given affirmatively, directly, and pertinently to the theory of the case indicated by such evidence. Mere negative or abstract propositions are not sufficient. McLaughlin v. State, 10 App. 340; Johnson v. State, 43 Tex. 612; Jennings v. State, 7 App. 350; Williams v. State, Id. 396; Moore v. State, 15 App. 1; Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536; Rutherford v. State, 16 App. 649; Gaines v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 717.

It is error to charge the jury that they may find the defendant guilty of manslaughter, without also instructing them as to what state of facts would constitute that offense. Babb v. State, 12 App. 491.

In the absence of evidence tending to establish, or that creates a doubt as to whether the homicide be of a lower grade than murder, it is unnecessary and improper for the court to charge upon manslaughter. Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536; Jackson v. State, 18 App. 586; Burkhard v. State, Id. 599; Anderson v. State, 15 App. 447; Smith v. State, Id. 139; Jones v. State, 22 App. 324, 3 S. W. 230; Wallace v. State, 20 App. 360; Roberts v. State, 5 App. 141; Grissom v. State, 4 App. 374; Hill v. State, 11 App. 456; Boyett v. State, 2 App. 93; Halbert v. State, 3 App. 657; Sierra v. State, 37 App. 430, 35 S. W. 982; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 387.

The charge must be limited to the case on trial. When the defendant was charged with murder, and on a former trial had been convicted for manslaughter, such conviction operated as an acquittal of both degrees of murder, and it was held error for the court upon a second trial to charge the jury upon the law applicable to murder. The charge should have been limited to the law of manslaughter, that being the case on trial. Parker v. State, 22 App. 105, 3 S. W. 100.

Where the defendant was on trial for manslaughter, under an indictment charging murder, having on a former trial been acquitted of murder, it was held error to charge the jury that if they believed, from the evidence, that the defendant was guilty of either degree of murder, they could find him guilty of manslaughter. Such charge was not warranted by the rule that a verdict for an inferior grade will not be set aside because the evidence showed a higher grade of offense. Parker v. State, 22 App. 105, 3 S. W. 100.

Objection that the court charged the jury abstractly upon the issue of manslaughter can not be entertained, inasmuch as it was not interposed when the charge was given and no probable injury to the accused is shown. See the opinion for a charge upon homicide in defense of the person against an unlawful attack, and the statement of the case for a charge upon adequate cause, held sufficient under the facts of the case. And note that the evidence does not call for a charge upon "cooling time," nor upon self-defense, wherefore the trial court did not err in omitting to charge upon "cooling time," nor refusing the special charge as to self-defense. Miller v. State, 27 App. 63, 10 S. W. 445; Arrellano v. State, 24 App. 43, 5 S. W. 526; Thumm v. State, 24 App. 667, 7 S. W. 236; Bonnard v. State, 25 App. 173, 7 S. W. 862, 8 Am. St. Rep. 431; Phillips v. State, 26 App. 238, 9 S. W. 557, 8 Am. St. Rep. 471; Meuly v. State, 26 App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Johnson v. State, 26 App. 631, 10 S. W. 235; Alexander v. State, 25 App. 260, 7 S. W. 867, 8 Am. St. Rep. 438; Miller v. State, 27 App. 63, 10 S. W. 445; Green v. State, 27 App. 244, 11 S. W. 114; Hawthorne v. State, 28 App. 212, 12 S. W. 603; Cochran v. State, 28 App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Floyd v. State, 29 App. 349, 16 S. W. 188; Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071.

The evidence failing to show adequate cause, the court properly refused to charge on manslaughter. Warren v. State, 31 App. 573, 21 S. W. 680. And see, also, Orman v. State, 24 App. 495, 6 S. W. 544; Williams v. State, 25 App. 216, 7 S. W. 666; Alexander v. State, 25 App. 260, 7 S. W. 867, 8 Am. St. Rep. 438; High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488; Clore v. State, 26 App. 624, 10 S. W. 242; Johnson v. State, 26 App. 631, 10 S. W. 235; Hawthorne v. State, 28 App. 212, 12 S. W. 603; Cochran v. State, 28 App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Blackwell v. State, 29 App. 195, 15 S. W. 597; Baltrip v. State, 30 App. 545, 17 S. W. 1106; Bracken v. State, 29 App. 362, 16 S. W. 192.

Where deceased interfered in a fight to keep defendant's friend from cutting another with a knife, and defendant standing by saw and knew that his friend was in no danger but deliberately shot and killed deceased, held that a charge on murder in the first degree was correct. And the court did not err in refusing to instruct upon the law of manslaughter. Reyons v. State, 33 App. 143, 25 S. W. 786, 47 Am. St. Rep. 25.

Where defendant having quarreled with deceased's brother got a gun and deceased was shot by defendant while trying to disarm him, an instruction on manslaughter was properly refused. Beard v. State (Cr. App.) 29 S. W. 770.

An objection that the charge of manslaughter was too restrictive, because it confined the jury to the facts occurring at the time of the homicide; held, the objection was untenable, there being no evidence of any acts of deceased before the time of the homicide. Woodring v. State, 34 App. 419, 30 S. W. 1060.

Instruction properly limited to acts done at the time the homicide was committed. Woodring v. State, 34 App. 419, 30 S. W. 1060.

On a trial for murder, when the acts and conduct of a codefendant have been adduced in evidence, the charge of manslaughter instructed the jury to look into all facts and circumstances before them; held, sufficiently comprehensive to permit the jury to consider the acts of such codefendant. Magruder v. State, 35 App. 214, 33 S. W. 233.

A charge on manslaughter which leaves the jury absolutely untrammelled to review all the evidence in the case in order to determine adequate cause and ascertain whether or not defendant's mind was thereby influenced, is sufficient. Sargent v. State, 35 App. 325, 33 S. W. 364.

Where vicious assault was committed by deceased upon defendant several hours before killing and the circumstances were such as to show that mind of the defendant had not become cool, the assault constituted provocation and manslaughter should have been charged, although there was no other provocation at time of killing. Thomas v. State, 42 App. 386, 56 S. W. 72.

On the trial of a tenant for killing his landlord, there was evidence for accused that the landlord was trying to put him off of the place in the middle of the year, with considerably less property than he was entitled to, that when the landlord offered to let him take such property he had his hand on his pistol, and when accused declined the offer said, "You will take this;" that accused became alarmed and went to a blacksmith shop some distance away; that, though this was not the usual road of travel, the landlord drove down by the blacksmith shop, with the lines in his left hand, and his right hand in the pocket where accused had seen the pistol; that accused grabbed his gun and ordered the landlord to drop the pistol; but that, instead of dropping it, he looked as if he was trying to get it out of his pocket. The state's evidence tended to show that the landlord was using both hands in driving the team, and did not attempt to get his pistol until accused grabbed his gun and ordered him to drop the pistol. Held, that this made a question whether the antecedent circumstances, in connection with the landlord's conduct at the time of the killing, engendered in accused's mind such a degree of anger, rage, or resentment as rendered him incapable of cool reflection, and the failure to properly submit this issue was error. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 334.

In a prosecution for homicide, it was error to charge in one instruction that if defendant was led to commit the homicide from learning that decedent had insulted his wife, and also that the decedent had used violent language to and threatened defendant with bodily harm, he was only guilty of manslaughter, and in the next that, in order to reduce his offense to manslaughter, it was only necessary for the jury to believe that he was led to commit the homicide from learning that decedent had insulted his wife. Barbee v. State, 58 App. 129, 124 S. W. 961.

In a trial for assault with intent to murder, the charge was sufficient where the court, while it did not in terms define manslaughter, did, in charging on aggravated assault, fairly submit the grounds on which the assault, if unlawful, would have been reduced to that offense. Dowell v. State, 58 App. 482, 126 S. W. 871.

The charge should submit the issue with reference to all the facts in evidence. Snowberger v. State, 58 App. 530, 126 S. W. 878.

Held, that instructions held not to correctly present the law of mutual combat, not submitting the facts that would justify conviction for murder, nor drawing the distinction from the facts between murder and manslaughter. McGill v. State, 60 App. 614, 132 S. W. 941.

The court instructed in a homicide case that, if accused defended against the acts, or acts and words, of decedent, or the acts and words of those acting with him, etc., and his mind was agitated beyond cool reflection, and he did not believe that his life was in danger, the jury should acquit of murder and convict of manslaughter. Held, that the charge was not objectionable as requiring the jury to find that accused acted against the combined acts and conduct of all of the parties, before they could find him guilty of manslaughter. Beaver v. State, 63 App. 581, 142 S. W. 11.

The court should charge the law as to manslaughter from the standpoint of accused. Whiten v. State, 71 App. 555, 160 S. W. 462.

Where the issue of manslaughter was presented, an instruction on murder held erroneous in excluding the fact that if the circumstances reduced the offense to manslaughter, it would not be murder. Mason v. State, 72 App. 501, 163 S. W. 66.

Where the court undertakes to enumerate the circumstances that would conduce to show adequate cause and consequent passion, he should enumerate all the circumstances. Kirklín v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1016.

Evidence held not to call for a charge on manslaughter. Luster v. State, 63 App. 541, 141 S. W. 209, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1089; McDade v. State, 27 App. 641, 11 S. W. 672, 11 Am. Art. 1129. [699] "Under the influence of sudden passion" explained.—By the expression "under the immediate influence of sudden passion" is meant—

1. That the provocation must arise at the time of the commission of the offense, and that the passion is not the result of a former provocation.

2. The act must be directly caused by the passion arising out of the provocation. It is not enough that the mind is merely agitated by passion arising from some other provocation, or a provocation given by some person other than the party killed.

3. The passion intended is either of the emotions of the mind, known as anger, rage, sudden resentment, or terror, rendering it incapable of cool reflection.

Sudden passion.—A provocation sufficient to produce a state of mind precluding cool reflection, and to reduce a homicide to manslaughter, must arise at the time of the killing. Cloud v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 892; Johnson v. State, 43 Tex. 612; Boyett v. State, 2 App. 93; Barbee v. State, 50 App. 426, 97 S. W. 1058. See, also, Miles v. State, 18 App. 156; Johnson v. State, 22 App. 206, 2 S. W. 609; Orman v. State, 24 App. 495, 6 S. W. 544; Baltrip v. State, 30 App. 545, 17 S. W. 1106; Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1158; Hicks v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 755.

Where the killing is the result of the provocations mentioned in subdivisions 3 and 4 of article 1132, post, the requirement that "the provocation must arise at the time of the commission of the offense, and that the passion is not the result of a former provocation," is not applicable. In such cases, the time intervening between the slayer's appraisal of the insult, and his first meeting with deceased is not a material consideration; but it is essential not only that the adequate cause be shown but that the state of the slayer's mind predicated thereon, did actually exist at the time of the killing. Eanes v. State, 10 App. 421; Hill v. State, 5 App. 2; Paulin v. State, 21 App. 436, 1 S. W. 453; Orman v. State, 22 App. 604, 3 S. W. 468, 58 Am. Rep. 662; Howard v. State, 23 App. 265, 5 S. W. 231. See, also, Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733.

To reduce the killing from murder to manslaughter two things must concur; there must have been provocation legally sufficient to produce passion, and such passion must in fact have been produced, which rendered the party while under its influence incapable of cool reflection, depriving her for a time of the power to comprehend the consequences of her act. Maria v. State, 28 Tex. 698.

The adequate cause is measured not by pain but by passion. Williams v. State, 15 App. 617.

— Abandonment of combat.—If the deceased attacked defendant, and after shooting at him retreated and quitted the combat as far as he could, and the defendant then, under the immediate influence of sudden passion produced by the assault, fired upon and killed the deceased, he would be guilty of manslaughter. West v. State, 2 App. 460.

One continuing to shoot after it is apparent that all danger has passed, but under the influence of passion aroused by the difficulty, is guilty of no higher offense than manslaughter. Mason v. State, 72 App. 501, 163 S. W. 66.

The court, in charging on self-defense and abandonment of difficulty held reduced to charge on manslaughter. McCampbell v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 345.

Where accused fires the first shot in self-defense and decedent flees, but by his conduct the mind of accused is rendered incapable of cool reflection, though not justified in continuing to shoot after the abandonment of the difficulty by decedent, he would be guilty of no higher grade of offense than manslaughter. McCampbell v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 345.

— Mutual combat.—Mutual combat as impairing self-defense, see notes to art. 1107.

Where, in a sudden quarrel, both parties engage in the contest willingly, fight on equal terms, and no undue advantage is sought or taken by either, if death ensue, the killing will amount to manslaughter. If one party seeks, or takes any undue advantage of his adversary, and slays him, the killing is murder. King v. State, 4 App. 54, 30 Am. Rep. 160; Wilson v. State, Id. 637.

A homicide committed in mutual combat will not be reduced from murder to manslaughter unless it was committed under the influence of sudden passion arising from adequate cause. Spearman v. State, 23 App. 224, 4 S. W. 586; Crist v. State, 21 App. 361, 17 S. W. 260.

An assault committed in a mutual combat will not be reduced to an aggravated assault unless committed under the influence of sudden passion arising from an adequate cause. Spearman v. State, 23 App. 224, 4 S. W. 586; Crist v. State, 21 App. 361, 17 S. W. 260.

When a person entering into a fight with no intent to kill, but during the fight receives great bodily injury and then slays his antagonist, the crime would be manslaughter. Cole v. State, 35 App. 384, 33 S. W. 968.

But when he willingly entered the fight he cannot rely on manslaughter unless during the fight he received great bodily injury. Id.

It appeared from the evidence that there had been two fights between defendant and the injured party, in both of which defendant had entered willingly; held, that he could not rely on heat of passion aroused by the first fight as a defense, or to lower the grade of assault. Cole v. State, 35 App. 384, 33 S. W. 968.

Where accused and decedent agreed to fight without deadly weapons, and in pursuance thereof left decedent's house for a more private place where the fight could be had without interference, that decedent struck accused before giving notice of his intention so to do did not give accused protection under the ordinary rule of self-defense; but, where there was raised in his mind that degree of terror, rage, or resentment recognized by the law, the killing by accused was manslaughter. Anthony v. State, 62 App. 138, 136 S. W. 1097.

— Cooling time.—When the evidence shows two difficulties between the parties, into both of which defendant entered willingly, the doctrine of "cooling time" does not apply. Cole v. State, 35 App. 384, 33 S. W. 968.

Although provocation must arise at trial of homicide and must not be the result of former provocation, yet the statute includes such provocation as constitutes part of res geste, or is so near in point of time as not to allow the mind of a man of ordinary temper, which is excited by previous provocation, to become cool and composed before the killing. What is cooling time is matter of fact to be judged by circumstances of each case. Thomas v. State, 42 App. 386, 56 S. W. 70.

For other decisions as to "cooling time," see Hobbs v. State, 16 App. 517; Eanes v. State, 10 App. 421; Wadlington v. State, 19 App. 266.

Evidence.—While provocation must arise at time of killing, yet if there is testimony of antecedent acts to illustrate, as to intensify or render more significant the act of provocation, this is admissible. Stanton v. State, 42 App. 269, 59 S. W. 272. See, also, Gaines v. State, 58 App. 631, 127 S. W. 181.

Charge.—Sudden passion is a necessary element; instructions should not omit it. Hinton v. State, 24 Tex. 454.

It is error to restrict charge on provocation to time of killing if there is proof of previous acts that intensify the provocation. Spangler v. State, 41 App. 424, 55 S. W. 330; Miles v. State, 18 App. 156.

Where the evidence tends to show that passion was aroused by an adequate cause, the question whether the act of killing was caused by the passion is for the jury and not the court to pass upon. Mackey v. State, 13 App. 360.

The provocation on the part of deceased was a sudden altercation between deceased and defendant's friend. The court properly limited in his charge the provocation to what occurred at the time of the killing. Kidwell v. State, 35 App. 264, 33 S. W. 342.

Where decedent seized the bridle and gave the horse, on which accused was riding, a jerk, which threw accused against the pommel of the saddle, injuring him, and decedent held onto the bridle over accused's protest, and accused shot decedent, the failure to charge, in submitting the issue of manslaughter, that, if decedent's assault created pain and engendered sudden passion, accused would be guilty of no higher offense than manslaughter, was erroneous, notwithstanding a charge that the provocation causing sudden passion must arise at the time of the killing, and that the jury, in determining adequacy of the provocation, must consider all the facts, etc. Craft v. State, 57 App. 257, 122 S. W. 547.

Where, in an instruction on manslaughter, the court charged that the passion, which is an element of that offense, "is not the result of former provocation," but immediately followed with a statement that in determining the question the jury might consider former provocations, if any, in connection with the provocation at the time of the killing, to determine the state of defendant's mind at the time of the killing, the instruction was not erroneous. Edwards v. State, 61 App. 307, 135 S. W. 540.

A charge on manslaughter, that the provocation must arise at the time of the commission of the offense, and the passion must not be the result of a former provocation, presents no error, where the court later on instructed the jury, in determining the adequacy of provocation, to consider all the facts and circumstances in evidence, in passing on the condition of defendant's mind, and if, by reason thereof, his mind at the time of the killing was incapable of cool reflection, etc. Johnson v. State, 63 App. 50, 138 S. W. 1021.

A charge omitting the statutory definition of "under the immediate influence of sudden passion," is improper. Burns v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 356.

A charge that the provocation must arise at the time of the commission of the offense, held not erroneous for failure to qualify it by a statement that such provocation might have its origin prior thereto, where the court had charged that in considering the sufficiency of such provocation the jury should consider all the circumstances. Burns v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 356.

A charge defining "immediate influence of sudden passion," held correct and applicable to the facts. Burns v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 356.

A charge that the jury should determine the adequacy of the provocation, instead of the adequacy of the cause of accused's passion, held not error. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 763.

Where there is no evidence of a former provocation it is error to charge that the provocation must arise at the time, and must not be caused or brought about by any former provocation, etc. McDowell v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1049.

Where a member of the National Guard, while on duty in time of peace, bayoneted a citizen in an altercation with reference to permission to cross a military line, a request to charge that if deceased intended to enter the inclosure guarded by accused, or it so appeared to him, and he intentionally thrust deceased with a bayonet and killed him, his offense was manslaughter, was properly refused as eliminating adequate cause and sudden passion, essential elements of manslaughter. Manley v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1008.

Where the homicide did not take place at the first meeting after accused was informed that deceased was the cause of accused's wife living a life of shame, and he learned no new facts after the first meeting, an instruction requiring that, if adequate cause existed, it produced "sudden passion" was proper. Simmons v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 229.

In a case of joint attack of deceased and another, the charge on manslaughter should not limit provocation solely to the attack of deceased. Nor should the charge limit the passion under which accused acted to that induced solely by the provocation of deceased's attack, but it should include passion caused by the joint attack. Garcia v. State, 70 App. 485, 156 S. W. 939.

The charge should directly submit the question whether the wound or stab made in a joint attack was such provocation as to cause passion, reducing the killing, if not in self-defense, to manslaughter, and a mere general charge is not sufficient. Garcia v. State, 70 App. 485, 156 S. W. 939.

A charge which directs an acquittal if the mind of accused was agitated by anger, rage, resentment, or terror, regardless of what caused or produced the mental condition, is too favorable to accused. Stewart v. State, 71 App. 237, 158 S. W. 996.

While the provocation must arise at the time of the commission of the offense, yet antecedent matters should be considered in passing upon the state of defendant's mind; but the court should not enumerate them, but tell the jury that they must look to all the facts and circumstances in the case. Willis v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1172.

Charge enumerating hostile acts to show passion held erroneous. Henson v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 89.

The court should instruct the jury to consider the question of provocation from the standpoint of the defendant as the facts were presented to his mind. House v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 206.

Evidence held to warrant charging this article. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 240.

The giving of an instruction on manslaughter which quoted Pen. Code 1911, art. 1129, subd. 1, providing that provocation must arise at the time of the commission of the offense, and that the passion must not be the result of a former provocation, was not prejudicial, though it was not authorized by the evidence, where the court also stated that in determining whether adequate cause existed at the time of the killing the jury may consider all of the facts and circumstances in evidence occurring both at the time and prior to the time of the killing. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 503.

On a trial for homicide, the court charged that by the expression "under the immediate influence of sudden passion" was meant that the provocation must arise at the time of the commission of the offense, and that the passion was not the result of former provocation, that the act must be directly caused by the passion arising out of the provocation, and that it was not enough that the mind was merely agitated by passion arising from such other provocation. Held that, though this was correct so far as it went, where manslaughter was in the case by reason of antecedent circumstances also operating on accused's mind, the court should have further charged that in determining whether the provocation at the time of the killing was adequate cause to produce a state of mind incapable of cool reflection the jury should consider all the facts and circumstances in evidence, and that, if they found that the provocation occurring at the time, viewed in the light of the antecedent circumstances, was such as to produce, and in fact did produce, such a state of mind, the killing would be manslaughter. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 334.

— Mutual combat.—If there be no evidence in the case warranting or calling for a charge on mutual combat, it is error to give it. Everett v. State, 30 App. 683, 18 S. W. 674. But see a case wherein such a charge, though error, was held to be harmless. Polk v. State, 30 App. 657, 18 S. W. 466. And see, also, Williams v. State, 25 App. 216, 7 S. W. 666; Bonnard v. State, 25 App. 173, 7 S. W. 862, 8 Am. St. Rep. 431; Anthony v. State, 62 App. 138, 136 S. W. 1097.

Defendant and another engaged in a scuffle and broke a glass in a saloon. The saloon keeper had defendant arrested. Defendant made his escape from the officer and returned to the saloon in about an hour with a shotgun. There was a question as to which fired first, the saloon keeper or defendant; held, the question of adequate cause and cooling time should have been submitted. Mundine v. State, 37 App. 5, 38 S. W. 619.

Facts held to call for a submission of manslaughter from the viewpoint of mutual combat. Reed v. State, 72 App. 103, 161 S. W. 97.

— Cooling time.—Where the evidence presents the question of cooling time, it is error to omit to charge on that subject. Love v. State, 71 App. 79, 158 S. W. 525.

Where there was but one difficulty, which was immediately and continuously prosecuted until the killing, within a very short time after the difficulty had begun, the question of cooling time was not in the case. Wilson v. State, 71 App. 399, 160 S. W. 83.

A charge omitting to submit the question of "cooling time" held too favorable to accused. Myers v. State, 71 App. 594, 160 S. W. 679.

Where statutory adequate cause is not in the case and the court charges that the jury, in considering provocation, may consider all the circumstances, failure to charge on cooling time is not error. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733.

Art. 1130. [700] "Adequate cause" explained.—By the expression "adequate cause" is meant such as would commonly produce a degree of anger, rage, resentment or terror in a person of ordinary temper sufficient to render the mind incapable of cool reflection.

Cited, Jaynes v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 441.

Adequate cause.—High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488; Johnson v. State, 26 App. 631, 10 S. W. 235; Boyd v. State, 28 App. 137, 12 S. W. 737; Cochran v. State, 28 App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Bonner v. State, 29 App. 223, 15 S. W. 821; Bracken v. State, 29 App. 362, 16 S. W. 192.

To raise the issue of manslaughter, it is not essential that the overt act relied upon was sufficient to raise the issue of self-defense. but if, in connection with other antecedent facts and circumstances, it excited in the mind of accused, and was sufficient to excite in the mind of a person of ordinary temper, such sudden passion as would render it incapable of cool reflection. then adequate cause would be produced sufficient to raise the issue of manslaughter, and the law of manslaughter would be a part of the law of the case, and should be given in charge to the jury. Howard v. State, 23 App. 265, 5 S. W. 231; Hobbs v. State, 16 App. 523; Baltrip v. State, 30 App. 545, 17 S. W. 1106; Orman v. State, 24 App. 495, 6 S. W. 544; Hawthorne v. State, 28 App. 213, 12 S. W. 603; Cochran v. State, 28 App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Bracken v. State, 29 App. 562, 16 S. W. 192; Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071. See, also, Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1158.

Where defendant killed deceased through terror and under belief that his life was in danger the homicide would be manslaughter even though his belief was not reasonable. Gilcrease v. State, 33 App. 619, 28 S. W. 531.

There are other adequate causes besides those outlined in the statute, and an adequate cause may be produced by another than the party assaulted; the question must be viewed from the defendant's standpoint. Chatman v. State, 40 App. 280, 50 S. W. 396.

There may be adequate causes outside of those named in statute, and provocation occurring at the time may be intensified by matters occurring before, and such matters can be considered. Warthan v. State, 41 App. 385, 55 S. W. 57.

A blow which causes pain is adequate cause to render mind incapable of cool reflection and reduce killing to manslaughter. Warthan v. State, 41 App. 385, 55 S. W. 57.

A blow which causes either pain or bloodshed, is not adequate cause per se, to reduce homicide to manslaughter. It must produce anger, rage, resentment or terror, to such an extent as to render the mind incapable of cool reflection. Chatman v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 346.

That decedent, accused's wife, was whipping their child held not sufficient provocation to make her killing manslaughter. Wilson v. State, 60 App. 1, 129 S. W. 613.

Adequate cause to justify an assault with a deadly weapon which would otherwise be assault with intent to murder must be some such reason for the difficulty as to disturb the mind beyond cool reflection. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 944.

Where the mind of the party is aroused by an adequate cause to such a degree of sudden anger, fear, rage, or resentment as to render him incapable of cool reflection, the act does not constitute assault to murder, but merely aggravated assault. Vining v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 909.

Where defendant's reason was dethroned because of his anger and resentment caused by the wrongful words, acts, and conduct of prosecutor, the alleged assault with intent to murder was not excused, but the jury could reduce the grade of the offense to aggravated assault. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 802.

The fact that deceased had aided his mother in investigating defendant's violation of an injunction against him in her divorce action and in making an affidavit for his punishment therefor, did not constitute adequate cause for homicide. Powdrill v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 231.

That deceased compelled his wife to make a confession and procured its publication, held not to constitute adequate cause. Jones et al. v. State, 72 App. 504, 163 S. W. 81.

The mere fact accused's wife declined to go home when he demanded it, was not adequate cause to reduce the killing of the wife to manslaughter. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 864.

To constitute "manslaughter," it is essential that there be not only adequate cause but an existing passion caused by what deceased has said or done. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229. See, also, notes under art. 1123, ante.

— Arrest.—An attempted unlawful arrest is adequate cause. Ross v. State, 10 App. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 643; Peter v. State, 23 App. 684, 5 S. W. 228; Goodman v. State, 4 App. 349; Mundine v. State, 37 App. 5, 38 S. W. 619; Ledbetter v. State, 23 App. 247, 5 S. W. 226; Jones v. State, 26 App. 1, 9 S. W. 53, 8 Am. St. Rep. 454; Meuly v. State, Id., 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Lynch v. State, 41 App. 510, 57 S. W. 1130; Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705; Condron v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 253. And see Fifer v. State, 64 App. 203, 141 S. W. 989.

When a person illegally restrained kills the officer, the offense is not of a higher grade than manslaughter. Goodman v. State, 4 App. 349.

If an arrest is attempted by an unauthorized person, and in the mêlée such person is cut by the defendant, the offense is not greater than an aggravated assault and battery. Johnson v. State, 5 App. 43.

An officer is not authorized to kill one who is attempting to rescue a prisoner. If he is assaulted by such an one, but not with a deadly weapon, and kills him, it is manslaughter. Williams v. State, 41 App. 365, 54 S. W. 759. And see Demarco v. State, 60 App. 185, 131 S. W. 589.

Testimony that the accused told the witness several hours after the killing that he was not going to be arrested and that all he wanted was one shot at the constable was admissible to show a threat to resist arrest, regardless of whether it constituted a part of the res gesta. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1156.

Charge.—See notes under arts. 735-743, C. C. P.

Charge held sufficient. Tyler v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1086; Burns v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 356; Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 763; McKelvey v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 932. See, also, Brookins v. State, 71 App. 101, 158 S. W. 521.

To use the words of the statute in a charge upon adequate cause is sufficient; it is error to interpolate the words "and courage" after "temper" in the sentence "resentment or terror in a person of ordinary temper." Gardner v. State, 40 App. 22, 48 S. W. 170.

Any condition or circumstance which is capable of creating sudden passion, rendering the mind incapable of cool reflection, may be "adequate cause," and where the evidence shows a number of conditions or circumstances tending either singly or collectively to show "adequate cause," the jury should not be restricted by the charge to a consideration of a single condition or circumstance, but should be directed to consider them all in determining the question of "adequate cause." In confining the "adequate cause" to the insulting language, and in failing to submit to the jury whether the said acts and threats of the deceased (which were proved to have been communicated to the defendant), of themselves or in connection with the insulting language, were not "adequate cause," the charge was erroneous. Orman v. State, 24 App. 495, 6 S. W. 544. And see Hawthorne v. State, 28 App. 212, 12 S. W. 603.

Under the facts the court properly refused to charge upon homicide in resisting illegal arrest. Wolfforth v. State, 31 App. 387, 20 S. W. 741.

The court need not give statutory definition of adequate cause but may define it in a general way and leave it to the jury to determine from all the facts whether there was adequate cause. Blanco v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 829.

It is error to restrict provocation constituting adequate cause to time of killing. The jury can look to past occurrences between the parties, especially those of deceased towards defendant. Adams v. State, 42 App. 366, 60 S. W. 48.

Where the court, in applying the law to the facts with reference to manslaughter, limited the issue of adequate cause to the acts and words of deceased at the time of the killing, the charge was erroneous, though the court in previously stating the law generally had stated that the jury should take into consideration all the facts and circumstances in the case. Barnes v. State, 61 App. 37, 133 S. W. 887.

Where the adequate cause relied on is statutory, the jury cannot determine whether there is sufficient provocation, so that a charge blending the statutory adequate cause with other facts and making the jury the judges of whether there was sufficient provocation, is erroneous. Ware v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1074.

Where threats uttered by deceased against defendant had been communicated to defendant, the conduct of deceased in approaching defendant and making a hostile demonstration, and using threatening language, entitled defendant to a charge on manslaughter from the standpoint of decedent's threats. Walker v. State, 70 App. 84, 156 S. W. 206.

Failure to define adequate cause, held error on a trial for assault to murder. Robinson v. State, 70 App. 81, 156 S. W. 212.

When statutory adequate cause or causes are alleged as an excuse, it is the court's duty to appropriately instruct with reference to each of such causes; and, if there be independent or a combination of independent causes, not specifically set forth in the statute, those should be combined and charged on separately from the statutory adequate cause. Love v. State, 71 App. 79, 158 S. W. 525. See, also, Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 706.

Charge held erroneous for omitting all the facts bearing on the conduct of decedent. Sneed v. State, 71 App. 299, 158 S. W. 530.

Art. 1131. [701] What are not adequate causes.—Insulting words or gestures, or an assault and battery, so slight as to show no intention to inflict pain or injury, or an injury to property, unaccompanied by violence, are not adequate causes.

Cited, Jaynes v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 441; Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229; Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1158.

Adequate cause.—The circumstances and conditions which constitute adequate cause to reduce a homicide to manslaughter are not restricted to those named in the statute. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 334.

Insulting words or gestures, or an assault and battery so slight as to show no intention to inflict injury, or an injury to property unaccompanied by violence are not adequate causes. Boyett v. State, 2 App. 93; Rutherford v. State, 15 App. 236; Clore v. State, 26 App. 624, 10 S. W. 242; High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488; McGregor v. State, 71 App. 604, 160 S. W. 711.

Facts held not to raise the issue of manslaughter under this article. Charba v. State, 48 App. 316, 87 S. W. 830; Snowberger v. State, 58 App. 530, 126 S. W. 878; Ward v. State, 59 App. 62, 126 S. W. 1145; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733.

Threats by deceased held insufficient to reduce the offense to manslaughter. Davis v. State, 37 App. 371, 35 S. W. 388; Hardeman v. State, 61 App. 111, 133 S. W. 1056.

To make a killing under sudden passion manslaughter there must actually have existed an adequate cause. McKinney v. State, 8 App. 626.

Manslaughter is predicable alone on the supposition of the existence of adequate cause. Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536.

Where the evidence shows assault with intent to murder, evidence of abusive language by the prosecutor will not reduce the offense to aggravated assault nor require a charge thereon. Barbee v. State, 34 App. 129, 29 S. W. 776.

If the cause is such as will be reasonably calculated to rouse the passion of a man of ordinary temper and render him incapable of cool reflection it is deemed an adequate cause. Childers v. State, 33 App. 509, 27 S. W. 133.

An attack on one's property, where it may not justify homicide, is justly regarded as great provocation and may be adequate cause. Milrainey v. State, 33 App. 577, 28 S. W. 537.

Calling a man a son of a bitch, and charging him with attempting to rape prosecutor's wife, held, not justification, and not to reduce assault with intent to murder to an aggravated assault. Barbee v. State, 34 App. 129, 29 S. W. 776.

An offense against one's property, even if wrongful, does not reduce the killing of the offender to manslaughter, unless there are other circumstances. Ward v. State, 59 App. 62, 126 S. W. 1145. See, also, Wisnoski v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 316.

Facts held not calculated to arouse such passion as to render the mind incapable of cool reflection so as to reduce the killing of deceased at the time to manslaughter. Hardeman v. State, 61 App. 111, 133 S. W. 1056.

Threats of themselves alone will not reduce a killing to manslaughter, but, though an assault by deceased later was such as would not reasonably cause one to believe that he was in danger of losing his life or of serious bodily injury, yet the conduct at the time was such, considering the previous threats, as to cause such a degree of anger or terror as to render the mind incapable of cool reflection, the offense would be only manslaughter. Kelly v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 304.

The circulation of a slanderous report in regard to a man will not avail to reduce a homicide to manslaughter, though the killing take place when the mind is incapable of cool reflection. Cloud v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 892.

Calling a man a son of a bitch and striking at him with the open hand, without hitting him, is not adequate cause. Wilson v. State, 71 App. 399, 160 S. W. 83.

Calling a man an opprobrious name and advancing on him with a heavy club in a threatening attitude is not adequate cause. Shaw v. State, 71 App. 630, 160 S. W. 103.

The statement of decedent that if accused did not leave, decedent would go for an officer to have accused arrested for his misconduct, was not adequate cause. Tores v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 523.

Acts of deceased held not to constitute false imprisonment, upon which an issue of manslaughter could be predicated. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733.

Charge.—An instruction on manslaughter was properly refused where there was no evidence whatever of adequate cause. Hill v. State, 11 App. 456.

Charge held correct. Davis v. State, 57 App. 545, 124 S. W. 104.

Under Pen. Code 1911, art. 1131, providing that insulting words or gestures are not adequate cause to reduce a homicide to manslaughter in a prosecution for murder, where the defense was self-defense, and the state's case was that defendant killed deceased because he refused to deliver to him his mail, that both cursed each other, and that, when deceased called defendant a black son of a bitch, defendant inflicted a fatal knife wound in his breast, the refusal of defendant's special instructions that the evidence was insufficient to authorize a conviction for murder was proper. Bolden v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 533.

Art. 1132. [702] What are.—The following are deemed adequate causes:

1. An assault and battery by the deceased, causing pain or bloodshed.

Cited High v. State, 26 App. 545, 10 S. W. 238, 8 Am. St. Rep. 488; Jaynes v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 441.

Adequate cause.—An assault and battery causing either pain or bloodshed is adequate cause. It is not necessary that it should cause both pain and bloodshed. Hill v. State, 8 App. 142; Foster v. State, Id. 248; Childers v. State, 33 App. 509, 27 S. W. 133; Williams v. State, 15 App. 617; Washington v. State, 19 App. 521, 53 Am. Rep. 387; Spivey v. State, 30 App. 343, 17 S. W. 546; Lee v. State, 54 App. 382, 113 S. W. 302; Anthony v. State, 62 App. 133, 136 S. W. 1097; Gaines v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 717; Corbitt v. State, 72 App. 396, 163 S. W. 436. See, also, Solis v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 343.

Where such a cause or causes arising at the time or in connection with a homicide as will produce a degree of anger, fear, or rage, such as to render the mind of an ordinary person incapable of cool reflection, is disclosed, and the jury believes that such cause or causes did produce such a state of mind, the offense is only manslaughter, though such cause or causes are not enumerated in the Code as sufficient to reduce an unlawful killing to manslaughter. Carter v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 739; Childers v. State, 33 App. 509, 27 S. W. 133 (following Williams v. State, 15 App. 617). And see Bonner v. State, 29 App. 223, 15 S. W. 821; Renow v. State, 49 App. 281, 92 S. W. 801; Milrainey v. State, 33 App. 577, 28 S. W. 537.

There are other "adequate causes" than those stated in this article. The statute is explanatory and not restrictive, and the question as to whether or not adequate cause existed is one of fact for the jury to determine. Brown v. State, 38 Tex. 482; Johnson v. State, 43 Tex. 612; West v. State, 2 App. 460; Guffee v. State, 8 App. 187; Williams v. State, 7 App. 396; Maria v. State, 28 Tex. 698; Sterling v. State, 15 App. 249; Williams v. State, Id. 617; Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536; Johnson v. State, 22 App. 206, 2 S. W. 609; Hobbs v. State, 16 App. 517.

Any condition or circumstance which is capable of enacting, and does create, sudden passion, such as anger, rage, sudden resentment, or terror, rendering the mind incapable of cool reflection, whether accompanied by bodily pain or not, is "adequate cause." Where there are several causes to arouse passion, although no one of them might constitute adequate cause, yet all the causes combined might be sufficient to do so. Wadlington v. State, 19 App. 266; Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536; Williams v. State, 15 App. 617.

A killing upon a sudden quarrel and after an assault committed by the deceased, held to be manslaughter. Moffatt v. State, 35 App. 257, 33 S. W. 344.

An assault and battery with intent to injure or inflict bodily pain, constitutes adequate cause. McGregor v. State, 71 App. 604, 160 S. W. 711.

Charge.—See notes under arts. 735–743, C. C. P.

Charge held correct and applicable to the facts. Myers v. State, 71 App. 594, 160 S. W. 679; Irvin v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 589; Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 706.

A charge that assault and battery would not be adequate cause unless it produced severe pain or bloodshed, was held to be erroneous. Tickle v. State, 6 App. 623.

In a trial for assault with intent to murder, the trial court charged the jury that “an assault and battery so slight as to show no intention to inflict pain or injury is not, in law, deemed an adequate cause.” Held that, although abstractly correct, the charge, in view of the proof which showed that the injured party struck the defendant, with a manifest intention to injure him, before the defendant made the assault, was material error. The proof leaving it in doubt whether or not a blow inflicted by the injured party upon the defendant, causing pain and bloodshed, was inflicted before the assault by the defendant, the trial court erred in refusing an instruction to the effect that if the jury should find that the blow causing the pain and bloodshed was inflicted before the assault, it would be “adequate cause.” Williams v. State, 25 App. 216, 7 S. W. 666.

A charge that, if defendant’s mind was aroused by shooting at him, this would be adequate cause, held correct. Lofton v. State, 59 App. 270, 128 S. W. 384.

One convicted of manslaughter cannot complain of an instruction which requires a finding of provocation of the difficulty with intent to kill or do serious bodily injury, since manslaughter can arise from a provocation with intent merely to beat or injure. Gray v. State, 61 App. 454, 135 S. W. 1179.

It is error to leave it to the jury to determine what is adequate cause, and whether the pain caused by the assault produced passion. Luttrell v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 628.

The charge must state what constitutes an adequate cause and submit the issues of the assault and the resulting passion. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 699.

A charge which failed to submit the law of manslaughter with reference to a blow inflicting pain and bloodshed held fatally defective. Gaines v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 717.

A charge on adequate cause must be given where the testimony shows such cause. Rodriguez v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 530.

Charge held inapplicable. Reagan v. State, 70 App. 498, 157 S. W. 483.

Where the provocation was the pain caused by deceased’s assault, a charge on manslaughter limiting the cause to that of an assault causing pain is not too restrictive. Finch v. State, 71 App. 325, 158 S. W. 510.

Charge held too restrictive in failing to instruct that if the jury found deceased inflicted pain or bloodshed on defendant in the prior attack, that would be sufficient cause to arouse sudden passion. Love v. State, 71 App. 79, 158 S. W. 525.

Where there was evidence that just before the killing deceased struck defendant a blow in the face and pursued him with blows, a requested instruction defining manslaughter was improperly refused. Herrera v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 719.

2. A serious personal conflict, in which great injury is inflicted by the person killed, by means of weapons, or other instruments of violence, or by means of great superiority of personal strength, although the person guilty of the homicide was the aggressor; provided, such aggression was not made with intent to bring on a conflict and for the purpose of killing.

3. Adultery of the person killed with the wife of the person guilty of the homicide; provided, the killing occurs as soon as the fact of an illicit connection is discovered.

Adultery as justification for homicide.—See art. 1102, ante.

Adultery as adequate cause.—Adultery of the deceased with the wife of the slayer, provided the killing occurred as soon as the fact of the illicit connection was discovered, is one of the adequate causes expressly enumerated in the statute as sufficient to reduce a homicide from murder to manslaughter. Where this is the provocation it is not required that it should arise at the time of the homicide, but the homicide will be extenuated thereby to manslaughter if it be committed as soon as the fact of such illicit connection is discovered. Paulin v. State, 21 App. 436, 1 S. W. 453; Pickens v. State, 31 App. 554, 21 S. W. 362; Massie v. State, 30 App. 64, 16 S. W. 770; Ex parte Jones, 31 App. 422, 20 S. W. 983; Giles v. State, 60 App. 436, 132 S. W. 359.

The statute presupposes that the adultery would arouse a degree of passion which, for the time, would dethrone reason, but that such passion could constitute an “adequate cause,” only until there had been reasonable time for it to subside. Winkfield v. State, 41 Tex. 148.

If an adulterer is attacked by the husband he is not deprived wholly of the right of self-defense. If he kills the husband to save his own life, he will be guilty of manslaughter only. Reed v. State, 11 App. 509, 40 Am. Rep. 795.

It is essential that the information to accused produce passion. Oldham v. State, 63 App. 527, 142 S. W. 13.

In a prosecution for homicide, where accused claimed that deceased had improper relations with his wife, the state may show the wife's good reputation for virtue. Eads v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 574.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant claimed that he killed deceased under the provocation, reducing the crime to manslaughter, that he had been informed that deceased had sustained criminal relations with his wife, the point was, not whether deceased had actually been guilty of the acts, but whether defendant had been so informed and so believed. Sweat v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 554.

In a prosecution for homicide, where the defendant offered evidence of provocation, to reduce the offense to manslaughter, that deceased had been guilty of improper relations with defendant's wife, and where the whole trend of the state's evidence was to show that deceased had not been guilty, and that the matter was a fabrication pure and simple, the jury should have been instructed that the material point on the issue of provocation was, not whether deceased had been guilty of the conduct alleged, but whether defendant had been informed and believed that he was so guilty. Sweat v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 554.

Defendant in homicide could not show that deceased had recently taken the wives of several men; he not contending any of the husbands could have killed deceased, or that he was related to the women or their husbands. White v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 93.

And see Oliver v. State, 70 App. 140, 159 S. W. 235.

4. Insulting words or conduct of the person killed towards a female relation of the party guilty of the homicide.

Insult to female as adequate cause.—See notes to art. 1133.

Art. 1133. [703] For insult to female, killing must be immediate.—When it is sought to reduce the homicide to the grade of manslaughter, by reason of the existence of the circumstances specified in the fourth subdivision or article 1132 of the Penal Code, it must appear that the killing took place immediately upon the happening of the insulting conduct, or the uttering of the insulting words, or so soon thereafter as the party killing may meet with the party killed, after having been informed of such insults. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, pp. 172-3.]

Insult to female as adequate cause.—Subdivision 4 of article 1132 makes insulting words or conduct toward a female relative of the slayer an adequate cause for the passion which reduces murder to manslaughter, provided the killing occurred immediately upon the happening thereof, or so soon thereafter as the slayer, having been informed of the insults, met with the person killed. In such case the requirement of article 1129 that the provocation must arise at the time of the killing, and that the passion be not the result of a past provocation, is inapplicable. The time intervening between the slayer's appraisal of the insult and his first meeting with deceased is not a material consideration, but it is essential not only that the adequate cause have a status in the evidence, but that the state of the slayer's mind predicated thereon did actually exist at the time of the homicide. In the state of case contemplated by subdivision 4 of article 1132 in connection with this article four issues of fact are presented: 1. The occurrence of insulting words or conduct on the part of the deceased toward a female relative of the accused; 2. Whether that was the real provocation which induced the killing; 3. Whether the killing took place immediately on the happening of the insult or as soon thereafter as the accused, having been apprised thereof, met with the deceased; and 4. Whether the accused, when he killed the deceased, was affected by such a degree of anger, rage, resentment, or terror as would commonly, in a person of ordinary temper, render the mind incapable of cool reflection. In determining these issues the jury should consider the aspect in which the evidentiary circumstances presented themselves to the accused at the time he acted upon them. Eanes v. State, 10 App. 421; Niland v. State, 19 App. 166. See, also, Orman v. State, 22 App. 604, 3 S. W. 468, 58 Am. Rep. 662; Howard v. State, 23 App. 265, 5 S. W. 231; Jones v. State, 33 App. 492, 26 S. W. 1082, 47 Am. St. Rep. 46; Knowles v. State, 31 App. 383, 20 S. W. 829; Reagan v. State, 70 App. 498, 157 S. W. 483.

Insult to female relative as adequate cause is governed by the same rules that apply when adultery with the slayer's wife is the provocation. See Hill v. State, 5 App. 2; Whaley v. State, 9 App. 305.

Deceased accused defendant of insults towards his wife, and ordered him to leave the country; held, that this was not such provocation as would reduce the homicide from murder to manslaughter. Davis v. State, 37 App. 371, 35 S. W. 388.

One is not guilty of murder if he sought decedent to demand an apology for an insult to accused's wife, but shot decedent on account of the insult without demanding an apology. Kincaid v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 597.

To make remarks imputing unchastity to a female relative adequate cause to reduce a killing to manslaughter, they must have produced anger in accused. Fox v. State, 71 App. 318, 158 S. W. 1141.

— Relation of female to accused.—See notes to art. 1136, post.

Insulting conduct of deceased in presence of proprietress of house of prostitution, whose guest, so called, defendant was, does not constitute legal provocation to defendant. Meyers v. State, 39 App. 512, 46 S. W. 817.

The insult must be given to the female while under the protection of the slayer, and the killing must also be done while she is under his protection. Ex parte Jones, 31 App. 422, 20 S. W. 983. And see Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 620.

Insulting words used toward a female relative does not apply where the insulting words or conduct is used to defendant herself. She is not a relative of herself in contemplation of the statute. Moore v. State, 33 App. 351, 26 S. W. 404.

Insulting words to a female in one's presence does not reduce assault with intent to murder to aggravated assault, when the female is not a relative nor under the protection and control of assaulting party. Moody v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 895.

— Words or conduct constituting insult.—The insult need not be in the presence of the female; the word "towards" does not so imply. Hudson v. State, 6 App. 565, 32 Am. Rep. 593. See, also, Wright v. State, 52 App. 542, 107 S. W. 822; Blocker v. State, 61 App. 413, 135 S. W. 130; Whiten v. State, 71 App. 555, 160 S. W. 462.

Calling a man a son of a bitch or a son of a whore is not an insult to a female relative. (Following Graham v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 537.) Fitzpatrick v. State, 37 App. 20, 38 S. W. 806; Simmons v. State, 23 App. 653, 5 S. W. 208; Levy v. State, 28 App. 203, 12 S. W. 596, 19 Am. St. Rep. 826; Woods v. State, 71 App. 398, 159 S. W. 1183; Trevino v. State, 26 App. 221, 9 S. W. 606; Richardson v. State, 28 App. 216, 12 S. W. 870; see, also, Evers v. State, 31 App. 318, 20 S. W. 744, 18 L. R. A. 421, 37 Am. St. Rep. 811; Knowles v. State, 31 App. 383, 20 S. W. 829.

A love letter to a wife is not statutory adequate cause, but it should be considered by the jury in passing upon husband's state of mind at the time of the killing of the writer. Willis v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1172.

Though such letter in itself was not sufficient provocation, yet it might be when considered with all the antecedent conduct and acts of deceased. Willis v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1172.

The Mexican term, "Cabron," which means that the person to whom it is applied consents to the prostitution of his wife, is insulting words toward a female relative within the meaning of the statute. Escareno v. State, 16 App. 85.

The conduct need not offend the female; as where she consents to caresses. Garrett v. State, 36 App. 230, 36 S. W. 454.

Where defendant's wife was scared by deceased, and when defendant sought out deceased, demanding an explanation, and deceased told him in substance that his wife had lied, it was provocation sufficient to reduce the killing to manslaughter. Ballard v. State, 62 App. 435, 138 S. W. 120.

The acts of the deceased toward the female tending to show improper relations will not reduce the killing to manslaughter where the accused himself in his conversations has imputed a want of chastity in her. Teague v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1063.

The words "insulting words or conduct towards a female relative," embrace not only such circumstances as really insult the woman, but such conduct as to be an insult to her husband, which, if in fact it does produce such anger or resentment as to render his mind incapable of cool reflection, reduces his homicide to manslaughter. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 127.

It is not insult where the accused knows the statement to be true. Redman v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 670.

Where accused was seized with sudden passion on seeing his wife caressed by another, and shot at him, but struck his wife, he would be guilty of no higher offense than aggravated assault; the insult to the wife being adequate cause. Hobbs v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 809.

Simply calling defendant's daughter a "wolf" was not statutory adequate cause to reduce a shooting from assault to murder to aggravated assault, though it would be a circumstance to be considered along with any others. Singleton v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 46.

Insulting language towards and of defendant's daughter, by one not present at the time of the shooting, though the father of the one shot, could not reduce the offense from assault to murder to aggravated assault. Singleton v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 46.

— Time of insult.—To be adequate cause, insulting words toward a female relative must be used in the presence of defendant, or the killing occur upon the first meeting of the parties after defendant hears of the insulting language or conduct and the insult must be the real cause of the killing. Jones v. State, 33 App. 492, 26 S. W. 1082, 47 Am. St. Rep. 46; Wright v. State, 36 App. 427, 37 S. W. 732; Hardcastle v. State, 36 App. 555, 38 S. W. 186; Norman v. State, 26 App. 221, 9 S. W. 1071; Parker v. State, 24 App. 61, 5 S. W. 653.

This rule applies to an accomplice. Parker v. State, 24 App. 61, 5 S. W. 653.

The word "meet" signifies that the parties were brought into such proximity as would enable the defendant to act in the premises whether he was armed or unarmed. Gillespie v. State, 53 App. 167, 109 S. W. 158.

Accused cannot justify a homicide through remarks made by decedent to accused's wife, but not communicated to accused until after the homicide. Lacy v. State, 63 App. 189, 140 S. W. 461.

— Information and belief as to insult.—If defendant believed the wife's story of insulting conduct by deceased, it was immaterial whether it had occurred. Jones v. State, 33 App. 492, 26 S. W. 1082, 47 Am. St. Rep. 46.

The criterion was not whether the alleged insulting language was used, but whether accused believed the language was uttered and acted on that belief. Morrison v. State, 61 App. 223, 135 S. W. 551.

Evidence.—To authorize introduction of evidence of insult to female relative it must appear that prior to killing the insult was communicated to defendant and that he shot deceased on first meeting him. Wright v. State, 36 App. 431, 37 S. W. 732; Howard v. State, 23 App. 265, 5 S. W. 231.

The declarations of the defendant made the instant before killing, that deceased had insulted his wife, are not admissible in his behalf, in the absence of other testimony that such insult had been given. Bassham v. State, 38 Tex. 622.

The wife of the deceased was the only witness to the killing. Over objection by the defendant, she was allowed to testify that a few minutes before he killed her husband, he made indecent proposals to her; but of this fact the deceased was never apprised, and there was nothing to indicate that it influenced or explained the motives or acts of either the deceased or the defendant. Held, that this testimony was irrelevant, and of a character likely to incense the jury against the defendant, and it was material error to admit it. Gardner v. State, 11 App. 265.

Evidence of insulting language toward female relatives of defendant was properly excluded when there was no evidence that the fact was communicated to defendant. Wright v. State, 36 App. 427, 37 S. W. 732.

Evidence as to the age of defendant's sister seduced by deceased is immaterial. Caveness v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 750.

The defense was that defendant's wife had told defendant of the misconduct of deceased, which testimony the State controverted; held, that defendant was entitled to prove similar statements made by his wife to a third person. Jones v. State, 38 App. 87, 40 S. W. 807, 41 S. W. 638, 70 Am. St. Rep. 719.

The defense was insulting conduct toward defendant's wife; held, competent for defendant to prove by a witness that his wife told witness of such conduct, and that witness told defendant. He may also prove that deceased was a man of unchaste and lecherous habits, upon the issue as to whether he believed his wife's statements. Jones v. State, 38 App. 87, 40 S. W. 807, 41 S. W. 638, 70 Am. St. Rep. 719.

Where defendant's testimony was that deceased had used insulting language about his female relatives, evidence that prior thereto he had spoken nicely about them, is inadmissible, because it was not part of conversation of defendant's witness with deceased, and it tended to discredit them. Fossett v. State, 41 App. 400, 55 S. W. 498.

Evidence held admissible to show that the motive of the killing was not the insult to defendant's wife, but malice. Barbee v. State, 58 App. 129, 124 S. W. 961.

Where accused killed decedent on his first meeting him after learning of his insulting conduct towards the wife of accused, evidence of the criminal relations between the wife and decedent not known to accused was inadmissible. Young v. State, 59 App. 137, 127 S. W. 1058.

On evidence as to decedent's character, see Redman v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 670.

Evidence of improper relations between accused's wife and the party assaulted two years before held incompetent. Martinez v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 886.

Remarks by deceased not communicated to defendant, held admissible as corroborative of the communicated insults, and also as tending to show that deceased uttered the communicated insults. Walker v. State, 70 App. 84, 156 S. W. 206.

Evidence that the female was only 14 is admissible as tending to lessen the probability that she was a prostitute. Walker v. State, 70 App. 84, 156 S. W. 206. And further on evidence, see Hart v. State, 57 App. 21, 121 S. W. 508.

Charge.—Charge held sufficient. Long v. State, 59 App. 103, 127 S. W. 551, Ann. Cas. 1912A. 1244; Norman v. State, 26 App. 221, 9 S. W. 606; Knowles v. State, 31 App. 383, 20 S. W. 829; Price v. State, 36 App. 403, 37 S. W. 743; Redman v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 670.

It is error to charge that the "provocation must arise at the time of the killing, and must not be the result of a former provocation." Paulin v. State, 21 App. 436, 1 S. W. 453; Niland v. State, 19 App. 166. See, also, Williams v. State, 24 App. 637, 7 S. W. 333; Maxwell v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 62.

For facts which require a charge as to insulting words used by the deceased toward the wife of the defendant, see Smith v. State, 15 App. 338; Washington v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 818.

Facts not involving manslaughter, as predicated upon insulting conduct toward wife of accused. Wolforth v. State, 31 App. 387, 20 S. W. 741; and see Wood v. State, 31 App. 571, 21 S. W. 602; Gay v. State, 58 App. 472, 125 S. W. 896.

On trial for murder where the evidence presents the issue of killing by defendant upon first meeting after learning of deceased's insulting conduct toward his wife, the court should instruct on the law of manslaughter. Jones v. State, 33 App. 492, 26 S. W. 1082, 47 Am. St. Rep. 46.

The court should not limit the jury to the insults to female relative to the time of the homicide but can consider former insults as well. Martin v. State, 40 App. 665, 51 S. W. 912.

The charge was, "If you believe, from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant did unlawfully kill the deceased, by shooting him with a pistol, and that the same was done under the immediate influence of sudden passion, arising from an adequate cause, such as insulting words or conduct of the deceased toward female relations of defendant, you will find defendant guilty of manslaughter." Held, erroneous, because it in effect requires that the killing, in order to be reduced to manslaughter, must have immediately followed the insulting words in order to be sudden, although the insulting words were uttered not in the presence or hearing of the defendant, and although the killing occurred at the first meeting of the parties after the defendant had been informed of the insulting words. Orman v. State, 22 App. 604, 3 S. W. 468.

When evidence showed brutal and insulting conduct toward the mother of defendant, court charged that defendant was not thereby authorized to seek the party so offending for the purpose of killing him and the killing would not for that reason be reduced to manslaughter. Held, error. Halliburton v. State, 32 App. 51, 22 S. W. 48.

Evidence held insufficient to justify a charge on an insult to a female relative. Turner v. State, 37 App. 451, 36 S. W. 87.

It was error to charge that, before defendant would be entitled to a reduction of his offense to manslaughter, the jury must believe both that he was led to commit the homicide from learning that decedent had insulted his wife, and also that the decedent had used violent language to and threatened him with bodily harm. Barbee v. State, 58 App. 129, 124 S. W. 961.

Charge held too restrictive. Reinhardt v. State, 60 App. 662, 133 S. W. 265.

The court should determine as a matter of law whether the remarks made were insulting, and, if so found, should charge that the use of the words constituted adequate cause. Morrison v. State, 61 App. 223, 135 S. W. 551.

Charge limiting the provocation or adequate cause held improper in view of the facts. Kincaid v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 597.

The court should not only define adequate cause, but should apply the law to the facts. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 127.

The charge should apply the law to the fresh provocation, authorizing the jury to look to the preceding facts only in passing on the condition of defendant's mind. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 127.

Where accused's theory was that he shot his wife, intending to shoot another, whom he discovered caressing her, such insult to her being a statutory adequate cause, accused was entitled to an affirmative charge that if the shooting occurred on account of this conduct of the person at whom he shot toward his wife, and the passion was thus engendered, he would be guilty of no greater offense than manslaughter, had death occurred, and, death not having resulted, his offense could not be greater than aggravated assault. Hobbs v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 809.

Wherever there is insulting conduct or words at the time of a difficulty and there had been prior insulting remarks which had been conveyed to the accused, and the killing had been upon the first meeting both causes should be included in the charge on provocation. Walker v. State, 70 App. 84, 156 S. W. 206.

Insulting words used by deceased concerning defendant's wife and lady companion, whom defendant was accompanying at the time, were not ground for an instruction on adequate cause, where the evidence as a whole and defendant's own testimony showed that the difficulty out of which the killing occurred was not caused by such language, even if used by deceased. McGregor v. State, 71 App. 604, 160 S. W. 711.

A charge held not to submit to the jury the question whether it would be adequate cause if defendant was informed and believed that insulting language was used to his wife by deceased, but to state that it would be; and to leave to the jury, as was proper, the questions whether he was so told and so believed, and whether this produced that condition of mind, defined, to reduce the offense to manslaughter. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 442.

Charge held not erroneous, as eliminating all acts and conduct of deceased at the time of the killing tending to show adequate cause. Hicks v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 755.

Art. 1134. [704] General character of female in issue.—In every case where the defense spoken of in the preceding article is relied on, it shall be competent to prove the general character of the female insulted, in order to ascertain the extent of the provocation. [Id., p. 173.]

Character of female.—Not special acts but only the general reputation of the female for chastity, as bearing upon the question of provocation is provable. Wood v. State, 31 App. 571, 21 S. W. 602; Fox v. State, 71 App. 318, 158 S. W. 1141. And see Redman v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 670; Oliver v. State, 70 App. 140, 159 S. W. 235; Ballard v. State, 71 App. 587, 160 S. W. 716; Strickland v. State, 71 App. 582, 161 S. W. 110.

Presumption of the chastity of a female obtains in the absence of proof of general bad reputation, and that language impeaching such chastity is such as would provoke the anger, rage and resentment on the part of the relative to reduce the killing of deceased to manslaughter. Hammond v. State, 28 App. 413, 13 S. W. 605.

For propriety of instructions on insult to relative and defendant's knowledge, see Fuller v. State, 50 App. 14, 95 S. W. 541.

It is not permissible to prove specific acts of adultery of the wife with deceased in a case where the defense was that deceased had raped the wife. Jones v. State, 51 App. 472, 101 S. W. 995, 996.

Art. 1135. [705] Discretion of jury in such cases.—The jury shall be at liberty to determine in every case whether, under all the circumstances, the insulting words or gestures were the real cause which provoked the killing. [Id.]

Construction and operation in general.—The question whether insulting words and conduct toward the wife of the defendant actually produced rage in defendant's mind is for the jury. Reagan v. State, 70 App. 498, 157 S. W. 483; Eanes v. State, 10 App. 421; Halliburton v. State, 32 App. 51, 22 S. W. 48; Fuller v. State, 50 App. 14, 95 S. W. 541; Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 127; Davis v. State, 70 App. 37, 155 S. W. 546; Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 334. And see Willis v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1172.

An instruction that insulting words about and concerning a female relative, who is not present, would not necessarily be adequate cause, was held erroneous. The jury must be left the liberty of determining whether, under all the circumstances, the insulting words were the real cause which provoked the homicide. Hudson v. State, 6 App. 565, 32 Am. Rep. 593.

Where adequate cause and existing passion are shown as the moving cause for a homicide, the jury will not be authorized to find, as a matter of fact, otherwise than is indicated by the testimony. Davis v. State, 70 App. 37, 155 S. W. 546.

Art. 1136. [706] "Relation" includes whom.—Any female under the permanent or temporary protection of the accused, at the time of the killing, shall also be included within the meaning of the term "relation." [Id.]

Female relation.—Any female under permanent or temporary protection, at the time of the killing, is included in the term "relative" under this article. In both cases the insult must be given while the relationship exists, but in the last case the killing must occur while the statutory relationship exists, and not after it has been dissolved. Ex parte Jones, 31 App. 422, 20 S. W. 983. See, also, Melton v. State, 24 App. 47, 5 S. W. 652; Parker v. State, 24 App. 61, 5 S. W. 653; Williams v. State, 24 App. 637, 7 S. W. 333; Massie v. State, 30 App. 64, 16 S. W. 770.

A man's mistress living at his house is a female relative. Gaines v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 717. And so is a cousin of the wife present at the house in which the slayer lives. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 620.

It is not essential that the female be under the defendant's protection if a relative; it is only when the female is not a relative that she must be under his protection. A stepdaughter need not be under the defendant's protection in order that he may avail himself of the defense. Clanton v. State, 20 App. 615.

A promised wife is not a "female relative." Carter v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 739. But in Lane v. State, 29 App. 310, 15 S. W. 827, the court approves instructions given on the theory that insult to defendant's betrothed might constitute adequate cause.

Art. 1137. [707] "Adequate cause" must produce the passion.—In order to reduce a voluntary homicide to the grade of manslaughter, it is necessary not only that adequate cause existed to produce the state of mind referred to in the third subdivision of article 1129, but also that such state of mind did actually exist at the time of the commission of the offense.

Cited, Wilson v. State, 71 App. 399, 160 S. W. 83; Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229; Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1158.

Adequate cause and passion.—See notes to arts. 1128, 1131.

Manslaughter is predicated on adequate cause and unless that exists the homicide will not be reduced to manslaughter though committed under influence of sudden passion that rendered the mind incapable of cool reflection. Clore v. State, 26 App. 624, 10 S. W. 242; Blackwell v. State, 29 App. 194, 15 S. W. 597; Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536; Hill v. State, 11 App. 456.

The cause, to reduce a homicide from murder to manslaughter, must be one acting upon the mind of the slayer. Wolfforth v. State, 31 App. 387, 20 S. W. 741. And see, also, Evers v. State, 31 App. 318, 20 S. W. 744, 18 L. R. A. 421, 37 Am. St. Rep. 811; Ex parte Jones, 31 App. 422, 20 S. W. 983.

Art. 1138. [708] Provoking contest with intent to kill, not manslaughter.—Though a homicide may take place under circumstances showing no deliberation, yet, if the person guilty thereof provoked a contest with the apparent intention of killing, or doing serious bodily injury to the deceased, the offense does not come within the definition of manslaughter.

Provoking contest.—If accused provoked the contest with the apparent intention of killing decedent, or doing him serious bodily injury, he is guilty of murder, though he may have killed him suddenly without deliberation and to protect his own life, though, if he provoked the contest without intent to kill, or inflict serious bodily injury and suddenly without deliberation killed decedent, the offense might be a lower grade than murder. Keeton v. State, 59 App. 316, 128 S. W. 404; Jackson v. State, 32 App. 192, 22 S. W. 831; Polk v. State, 30 App. 657, 18 S. W. 466; Johnson v. State, 26 App. 631, 10 S. W. 235; Varnell v. State, 26 App. 56, 9 S. W. 65; Alexander v. State, 25 App. 260, 7 S. W. 867, 8 Am. St. Rep. 438; Gray v. State, 55 App. 90, 114 S. W. 635, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 513; Best v. State, 58 App. 327, 125 S. W. 909. See, also, Rogers v. State, 71 App. 271, 159 S. W. 44.

Though a homicide may take place under circumstances showing no deliberation, yet, if the person guilty thereof provoked a contest with the apparent intention of killing, or doing serious bodily injury to the deceased, the offense does not come within the definition of manslaughter. But if he provoked the contest without any apparent intention of killing or doing serious bodily injury, and suddenly, without deliberation, did the act of killing, while the homicide would not be justifiable, still it might be reduced to a lower grade than murder. Green v. State, 12 App. 445; King v. State, 13 App. 277; Smith v. State, 15 App. 338; Cartwright v. State, 14 App. 486; Cunningham v. State, 17 App. 89; Jones v. State, Id. 602; Arto v. State, 19 App. 126; Thuston v. State, 21 App. 245, 17 S. W. 474; Roach v. State, 21 App. 249, 17 S. W. 464; Reed v. State, 11 App. 509, 40 Am. Rep. 795. See, also, Burris v. State, 34 App. 387, 30 S. W. 785.

Although the circumstances show no deliberation, yet if defendant provoked the contest apparently for the purpose of killing, or doing serious bodily mischief, the offense is not manslaughter. Hartless v. State, 32 Tex. 88.

Provoking contest with intent to kill can not be manslaughter. Melton v. State, 24 App. 47, 5 S. W. 652; Bonnard v. State, 25 App. 173, 7 S. W. 862, 8 Am. St. Rep. 431; Meuly v. State, 26 App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Rider v. State, 26 App. 334, 9 S. W. 688; Johnson v. State, 26 App. 631, 10 S. W. 235; Nalley v. State, 28 App. 387, 13 S. W. 670; Williams v. State, 30 App. 429, 17 S. W. 1071; Polk v. State, 30 App. 657, 18 S. W. 466; Muely v. State, 31 App. 155, 18 S. W. 411, 19 S. W. 915.

When defendant provokes difficulty, but not with intent to kill, and deceased assaults defendant, and from latter's standpoint he is in danger of death or serious bodily injury and he slays, he is guilty of nothing higher than manslaughter. Tollett v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 575.

If one provokes a difficulty for the purpose of killing and does kill, he is guilty of murder even though in the difficulty deceased assaulted him. Tollett v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 575.

If one provokes a contest with the apparent intention of killing or doing serious bodily harm to his adversary, then in no event is he justified in killing his adversary, even to save his own life; and if he kills his adversary he is at least guilty of murder in second degree. But if he have no such intention, and suddenly, without deliberation, kills, while the act might not be justifiable, still it might be of a lower grade of homicide than murder. Gray v. Phillips, 54 Civ. App. 148, 117 S. W. 873.

Though accused used an insulting epithet to provoke a difficulty, if he intended to provoke only an ordinary fight, and was forced to kill under the circumstances, he was not guilty of a higher grade of homicide than manslaughter. Reed v. State, 72 App. 103, 161 S. W. 97.

Where defendant, after a difficulty with deceased, went back and made a remark calculated to provoke a renewal of the difficulty, but without any intent to kill, and where he was not justified in killing, he would be guilty of no higher offense than manslaughter. Mason v. State, 72 App. 501, 163 S. W. 66.

Evidence of advice given to accused before he entered on land in dispute is admissible to show that he had no intention of provoking a difficulty. Hillis v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1154.

Charge.—Facts held not to warrant charge on provoking a difficulty. Edwards v. State, 60 App. 323, 131 S. W. 1078; Keeton v. State, 59 App. 316, 128 S. W. 404; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 165.

Evidence held to call for a charge on provocation of difficulty. Mason v. State, 72 App. 501, 163 S. W. 66; Gray v. State, 61 App. 454, 135 S. W. 1179; Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1158.

As to sufficiency of charge, see, also, Gaines v. State, 58 App. 631, 127 S. W. 181; McGregor v. State, 71 App. 604, 160 S. W. 711.

Under the facts, the court erred in failing to instruct the jury to the effect that if the defendant did not intend to provoke a difficulty with deceased, but sought him solely for the purpose of demanding payment of a money demand, and a difficulty ensued in which defendant, on account of abuse heaped upon him by deceased, voluntarily slew the deceased in the heat of passion engendered by the abuse, in connection with previous wrongs done him by the deceased, and the circumstances, altogether combined, were of such a character as to produce adequate cause sufficient to render the mind incapable of cool reflection, then the killing would be manslaughter. The court should have instructed the jury to the effect that if defendant sought an interview with the deceased with no hostile intention, and deceased became enraged and committed an assault upon defendant which did inflict pain or bloodshed, and under the passion thus engendered defendant shot and killed deceased, the pain or bloodshed would amount to "adequate cause," and the killing would be manslaughter. Bonnard v. State, 25 App. 178, 7 S. W. 862, 8 Am. St. Rep. 431.

It is not necessary in charge upon provoking difficulty for the court to tell the jury the facts upon which they can find appellant has provoked the difficulty. Matthews v. State, 42 App. 31, 58 S. W. 86, 90, citing cases on same question.

Evidence held not to call for a charge as to accused's right to arm himself. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 265.

Provoking contest as impairing self-defense.—See notes under art. 1107 ante.

Art. 1139. [709] Punishment.—Manslaughter is of various degrees of culpability, according to the circumstances under which it was committed. It shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Id., p. 173.]

The original article fixed the punishment at not exceeding five years.

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, §49.

Charge.—A charge that three years is the minimum is reversible error. Williams v. State, 25 App. 76, 7 S. W. 661.

Article 1140. [710] "Murder" defined.—Every person with sound memory and discretion who, with malice aforethought shall unlawfully kill any person within this State shall be guilty of murder. Murder is distinguishable from every other species of homicide by the absence of circumstances which reduce the offense to negligent homicide, or manslaughter, or which excuse or justify the homicide. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 173; Act 1913, p. 238, ch. 116, § 1.]

1. Explanatory.—Act 1913, ch. 116, § 1 repeals articles 1140, 1141, 1142, 1144 Revised Penal Code, and inserts, in lieu thereof articles 1140 and 1141, to read as herein set out. Sec. 2 repeals all laws in conflict. Sec. 3, the emergency clause, recites: "The fact that the present law defining murder divides the same into two degrees, to-wit: first degree murder and second degree murder, and the fact that such definitions of murder or divisions of murder are creating complications in the trial of those charged with murder," etc.

Cited, Essery v. State, 72 App. 414, 163 S. W. 17.

2. Offense defined.—Offenders may be punished under indictments charging murder under the prior law which was not repealed by Act April 3, 1913. This act only abolished the degrees and changed the penalty. Andrus v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 189; Shaw v. State, 71 App. 630, 160 S. W. 103; Henson v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 89. And see Ex parte Stephenson, 71 App. 380, 160 S. W. 77; Cook v. State, 71 App. 532, 160 S. W. 465; Ybarra v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 10; Echols v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 786.

The court should charge the jury as to the definition of murder under the old law, but, as to the penalty, under the new law the offense having been committed before the change in the law. Robbins v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 528. See, also, Herrera v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 719.

The case is governed by the law in force at the time of the killing and the beginning of the trial. Jones et al. v. State, 72 App. 504, 163 S. W. 81. See, also, Hill v. State, 72 App. 109, 161 S. W. 118.

The matter of defendant's right to a charge of murder in the first and second degrees, under the law in effect when the crime was committed, is not jurisdictional, and, in the absence of proper objection, can not be raised for the first time in the reviewing court. James v. State, 72 App. 457, 163 S. W. 61.

Where accused was convicted of murder in the second degree, and before retrial after reversal the degrees of murder were abolished, he was still subject to conviction at least of murder in the second degree under the old law. Sorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 299.

3. — Capacity to commit offense.—As to insanity and intoxication, see arts. 39-41, ante, and notes.

"Sound mind and discretion" means ability to distinguish between right and wrong as to the particular act. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

4. — Malice as element.—Malice aforethought includes all those states of the mind under which the killing of a person takes place without any cause which will in law justify, excuse or extenuate the homicide. It is the doing of a wrongful act intentionally, without just cause or excuse. It is a condition of the mind which shows a heart regardless of social duty and fatally bent on mischief, the existence of which is inferred from acts committed or words spoken. Vela v. State, 33 App. 322, 26 S. W. 396; Powell v. State, 28 App. 393, 13 S. W. 599; Gallaher v. State, 28 App. 247, 12 S. The distinguishing characteristic of murder is homicide with malice aforethought, express or implied. Evans v. State, 6 App. 513; Pharr v. State, 7 App. 472; Babb v. State, 12 App. 491; McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Ainsworth v. State, 29 App. 599, 16 S. W. 652; Smith v. State, 31 App. 14, 19 S. W. 252; Patterson v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 561; Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229; Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 360.

Express malice is where one with a sedate and deliberate mind and formed design unlawfully kills another, which formed design is evidenced by external circumstances discovering that inward intention, as lying in wait, antecedent menaces, former grudges, concerted schemes to do the person slain some bodily harm, or any other circumstances showing such sedate and deliberate mind and formed design unlawfully to kill another, or to inflict serious bodily harm which might probably end in the death of the person upon whom the same was inflicted. Martinez v. State, 30 App. 129, 16 S. W. 767, 28 Am. St. Rep. 895; Farrer v. State, 42 Tex. 271; Sharpe v. State, 17 App. 486; Lewis v. State, 15 App. 647; McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Jordan v. State, 10 Tex. 479; Harrell v. State, 41 App. 507, 55 S. W. 824; Benson v. State, 51 App. 367, 103 S. W. 911; Plasters v. State, 1 App. 673; Holden v. State, 11 App. 544; Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444; Frizzell v. State, 30 App. 42, 16 S. W. 751; Baltrip v. State, 30 App. 545, 17 S. W. 1106. And see Ex parte Jones, 31 App. 422, 20 S. W. 983; Harris v. State, 40 App. 13, 48 S. W. 502.

It is not necessary that any length of time should intervene between the formation of the intent to kill and the killing. Lawrence v. State, 36 App. 173, 36 S. W. 90; Duebbe v. State, 1 App. 160; Halbert v. State, 3 App. 657; Jordan v. State, 10 Tex. 479; Farrer v. State, 42 Tex. 265; Atkinson v. State, 20 Tex. 522; Snowberger v. State, 58 App. 530, 126 S. W. 878.

Implied malice is that which the law infers from or imputes to certain acts. Thus, when the fact of an unlawful killing is established, and there are no circumstances in evidence which tend to establish the existence of express malice, nor which tend to mitigate, excuse, or justify the act, then the law implies malice. Harris v. State, 8 App. 90; Douglass v. State, Id. 520; Hubby v. State, Id. 597; Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536; Reynolds v. State, 14 App. 427; Turner v. State, 16 App. 378; Stanley v. State, Id. 392; Hill v. State, 11 App. 456; Hart v. State, 21 App. 163, 17 S. W. 421; Smith v. State, 19 App. 95; Ellison v. State, 12 App. 557; Sharp v. State, 6 App. 650, the latter decision modified in Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593, so as to expunge from the definition of implied malice the word "evident," used in the charge approved in that case. And see McGrath v. State, 35 App. 413, 34 S. W. 127, 941; Burns v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 356.

A prisoner in legal custody commits murder in killing to effect escape. Washington v. State, 1 App. 647; Wallace v. State, 20 App. 360; Ex parte Sherwood, 29 App. 334, 15 S. W. 812.

The intent may be to do only serious bodily harm, yet if death ensue it is murder. Summers v. State, 5 App. 365, 32 Am. Rep. 573.

Where one, knowing he has violated the law and that he will be arrested, deliberately determines to make the issue one of life and death, and prepares himself and kills the party attempting to make the arrest, he is guilty of murder although the arrest is illegal. Miller v. State, 32 App. 319, 20 S. W. 1103. See, also, Hill v. State, 35 App. 371, 33 S. W. 1075.

Where parties engaged in robbing a train compel one to stand in place of danger and he is killed by those resisting the robbery, who do not intend to kill him, but intend to kill the robbers, the robbers are guilty of murder, and a charge to this effect is correct, but the court should also charge that if the persons engaged in the robbery did not compel deceased to stand in the place of danger, they are not guilty. Taylor v. State, 41 App. 564, 55 S. W. 965.

Motive is not essential. Butler v. State, 61 App. 133, 134 S. W. 230.

A voluntary and intentional killing may be manslaughter or murder, according to the attendant circumstances, and to elevate the offense from manslaughter to murder, or from aggravated assault to intent to murder, there must be malice express or implied. Daniels v. State, 71 App. 662, 160 S. W. 707.

"Malice aforethought" is the voluntary and intentional doing of an unlawful act by one of sound memory and discretion with the purpose, means, and ability to accomplish the reasonable and probable consequences of the act. Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

Indictments for murder held sufficient. Wade v. State, 23 App. 308, 4 S. W. 896; Smith v. State, 21 App. 277, 17 S. W. 471; De Olles v. State, 20 App. 145; Stephens v. State, Id. 255; Lucas v. State, 19 App. 79; Walker v. State, Id. 176; Penland v. State, Id. 365; Bean v. State, 17 App. 60; Sharpe v. State, Id. 486; Moore v. State, 15 App. 1; Bohannon v. State, 14 App. 271; Walker v. W. 742, 126 Am. St. Rep. 776.

It need not aver that the party slain was a "person of sound memory and discretion" or "a reasonable creature in being" or "a human being." Bean v. State, 17 App. 60; Ogden v. State, 15 App. 454; Bohannon v. State, 14 App. 271; Wade v. State, 23 App. 308, 4 S. W. 896; Perryman v. State, 36 Tex. 321; Zunago v. State, 63 App. 58, 138 S. W. 713, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 665.

It is not necessary to allege an assault or to use the word "felonious" or "feloniously" in charging murder. It need not be alleged that the killing was "unlawfully" or "wilfully" done. Stephens v. State, 20 App. 255; Bean v. State, 17 App. 60; Thompson v. State, 36 Tex. 326; Jackson v. State, 25 App. 314, 7 S. W. 872.

Under the statute of 1848 it was held that the indictment must allege that the assault was made "feloniously and of malice aforethought," but that these words need not be repeated as to the stroke. Arthur v. State, 3 Tex. 403.

The common law form of indictment for murder is sufficient. Gehrke v. State, 13 Tex. 568; White v. State, 16 Tex. 206; Wall v. State, 18 Tex. 682, 70 Am. Dec. 302; Perry v. State, 44 Tex. 473.

Quære: Is it necessary under our Code, except in cases named in articles 1079 and 1146, to allege and prove that the death occurred in a year and a day from the time of the injury? See Edmondson v. State, 41 Tex. 498; Sutton v. State, Id., 515; Hardin v. State, 4 App. 370; Strickland v. State, 19 App. 518.

As to murder by poisoning, see Marshall v. State, 5 App. 273.

It may charge the murder of two or more persons in one count. Rucker v. State, 7 App. 549; Chivarrio v. State, 15 App. 330.

The indictment must set forth the means by which the life of the deceased was extinguished, or allege that the means used were unknown to the grand jury. Drye v. State, 14 App. 185; Walker v. State, Id. 609; Dwyer v. State, 12 App. 535; Peterson v. State, Id. 650; Sheppard v. State, 17 App. 74; State v. Williams, 36 Tex. 352.

An allegation that the defendant "did deprive him" (the deceased) "of life" was held to be a sufficient allegation of killing. Walker v. State, 14 App. 609.

It must allege that the defendant killed the deceased. Strickland v. State, 19 App. 518; Pierce v. State, 21 App. 669, 3 S. W. 111.

The indictment charged that "Mack Green, on or about the first day of May, 1888, in the county and state aforesaid, did, with malice aforethought, kill Sam Smith, by shooting him with a gun, contrary," etc. On motion in arrest of judgment the indictment is held a good indictment for murder, and sufficient to sustain a conviction in the first degree. Green v. State, 27 App. 244, 11 S. W. 114.

Every means of death suggested by the proof should be alleged in the indictment. Burt v. State, 38 App. 397, 40 S. W. 1000, 43 S. W. 344, 39 L. R. A. 305, 330.

An indictment, alleging that the instrument used by accused to commit the homicide was a piece of pipe, sufficiently charged the nature of the instrument with which the crime was committed. Beaver v. State, 63 App. 581, 142 S. W. 11.

An indictment for murder is also an indictment for each degree of homicide, and for assault. Gentry v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 635.

A count charging the killing of deceased by stabbing him "with some sharp instrument" is insufficient. Huddleston v. State, 70 App. 260, 156 S. W. 1168.

Where the indictment charged that deceased was killed with some sharp instrument to the grand jury unknown, it was not error for the district attorney to testify as to the efforts of the grand jury to ascertain the character of instrument used. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 115.

The killing may be proved to have taken place at any time before the presentation of the indictment, either before or after the time charged in the indictment. O'Connell v. State, 18 Tex. 343.

Where the sex of the deceased is averred, which is unnecessary to do, such averment is descriptive of the offense, and must be proved. Wallace v. State, 10 App. 255.

Allegation that deceased was killed by a shot from a gun will admit proof of a shooting by any kind of fire-arm. This indictment alleged the kind of weapon to be unknown to the grand jury. The evidence admitted to prove the diligence of the grand jury to ascertain the fact was too broad, and should have been excluded. Allegation that deceased was killed by being shot devolved upon the state to prove that fact. Monk v. State, 27 App. 450, 11 S. W. 460. See, also, Reno v. State, 25 App. 102, 7 S. W. 532; Levy v. State, 28 App. 203, 12 S. W. 596, 19 Am. St. Rep. 826; Blackwell v. State, 29 App. 195, 15 S. W. 597; Frizzell v. State, 30 App. 42, 16 S. W. 751; White v. State, 30 App. 652, 18 S. W. 462.

Proof that the means of death was unknown to the grand jury, as alleged in the indictment, need not be offered. Harris v. State, 37 App. 441, 36 S. W. 88.

Though an indictment charges the murder to have been committed on February 24, 1910, and the evidence shows it was committed on January 24th, relevant evidence of facts that occurred prior to the date charged were not for that reason inadmissible. Ridge v. State, 61 App. 214, 134 S. W. 732.

The testimony of the foreman of the grand jury that he heard the evidence read before the grand jury, and was unable to ascertain any manner in which the poison was administered, was inadmissible. Orner v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 935.

Under an indictment charging murder on or about March 30th, proof that the crime was committed on March 29th would present no variance. James v. State, 72 App. 457, 163 S. W. 61.

Express malice must be proved, and cannot be inferred. Its actual existence is manifested by external acts or circumstances which may transpire before, at the time of, or immediately after the killing. It is not required that its existence be demonstrated by the evidence with mathematical precision, but it is sufficiently proved if the evidence be sufficient to satisfy and convince the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that it did exist, and the fact of its existence may be established by circumstantial, as well as by direct, evidence. Walker v. State, 14 App. 609; Gaitan v. State, 11 App. 544; Jackson v. State, 9 App. 114; Richarte v. State, 5 App. 359; McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Gomez v. State, 15 App. 327; Holden v. State, 1 App. 226; Murray v. State, Id. 418; Jones v. State, 3 App. 150; Farrer v. State, 42 Tex. 266; Drake v. State, 29 App. 265, 15 S. W. 725. See, also, Logan v. State, 39 App. 573, 47 S. W. 645; Snowberger v. State, 58 App. 530, 126 S. W. 878.

The homicide being proved, the presumption is that the offense is murder; but it may be extenuated to manslaughter by evidence showing an absence of malice. Chandler v. State, 2 Tex. 305; Jordan v. State, 10 Tex. 479; Lander v. State, 12 Tex. 462; Brown v. State, 4 App. 275.

Where fresh provocation intervened between the preconceived intention and the act resulting in death, it will not be presumed that the killing was upon the antecedent malice, in the absence of proof to that effect. McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Murray v. State, 1 App. 417; Primus v. State, 2 App. 369.

The constituents of express malice to be established are: 1. The slayer must be sufficiently self-possessed to comprehend and contemplate the consequences of his acts, and such acts must not be the result of a sudden, rash, inconsiderate impulse or passion. 2. The design formed must be to kill the deceased, or do him serious bodily injury, which may end in death; but this specific malevolence toward the party slain may be embraced in such utter and reckless disregard of life as shows the slayer to be an enemy of all mankind, such as shooting into a crowd, resolving to kill the next man he meets, etc. If the formed design be not to kill or do serious bodily harm to the deceased, but to commit some other felony, the killing will not be on express malice. 3. Malice of all kinds, being a state of mind, must necessarily be inferred. Its actual existence is manifested by external acts, and these external acts or circumstances may transpire before, at the time of, or subsequent to the killing. Even a sudden killing may be attended with such circumstances as to evidence the existence of actual or express malice, and such existence is always a question for the jury and must be proved by the state. McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Richarte v. State, 5 App. 359; Summers v. State, Id. 365, 32 Am. Rep. 573.

Express malice may be shown by proof of the cool, calm, and circumspect deportment and bearing of the party when the act is done, and immediately preceding and subsequent thereto; his apparent freedom from passion or excitement; the absence of any obvious or known cause to disturb his mind or arouse his passions; the nature and character of the act done; the instrument used, as well as the manner in which the murder is committed; declarations indicating not only the state of the mind, but also the purpose and intent with which he acts, and the motives by which he is actuated; and all such other matters and things pertinent to the issue which may be suggested by the facts. Farrer v. State, 42 Tex. 265; Gaitan v. State, 11 App. 544; Garza v. State, Id. 345; Singleton v. State, 1 App. 501; Plasters v. State, Id. 673; Campbell v. State, 15 App. 506; Miller v. State, 31 App. 609, 21 S. W. 925, 37 Am. St. Rep. 836.

The existence of express malice is never presumed from the mere act of killing another with a deadly weapon, by its intentional and deliberate use against the person killed. There must be the other element of murder, to wit, a cool and sedate mind, and a killing in pursuance of a former design to kill, or to inflict some serious bodily injury which would probably result in death. Summers v. State, 5 App. 365, 32 Am. Rep. 573; Murray v. State, 1 App. 418; Hamby v. State, 36 Tex. 523; Farrer v. State, 42 Tex. 266.

Express malice may be evidenced by other external circumstances besides lying in wait, antecedent menaces, former grudges, and concocted schemes. Even in sudden difficulty, homicide may be committed under circumstances of such enormity, cruelty, or deliberate malignity, as will suffice to show that it was done with express malice. Lewis v. State, 15 App. 647; Gaitan v. State, 11 App. 544; Ex parte Beacom, 12 App. 318.

The evidence should not only show that at about the time alleged the accused shot a person, and that such person was dead, but it should also show the time of his death, and its cause. Irving v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 611.

Evidence that deceased had abused his children, and that when defendant re-nonstrated, deceased stated that they were his and he could do as he pleased, held inadmissible. Francis v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 779.

23. — Presumptions from means or instruments used.—See art. 51 ante, and art. 1147 post, and notes.

24. — Admissibility of evidence as to malice and intent.—Evidence of ill feeling between accused and deceased and accused's threats, is admissible on the question of malice and motive. Coffman v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 939; Bryant v. State, 35 App. 394, 33 S. W. 978, 36 S. W. 79; Singleton v. State, 57 App. 560, 124 S. W. 92; Hunter v. State, 59 App. 439, 129 S. W. 125; Bradley v. State, 60 App. 398, 132 S. W. 484; Wheeler v. State, 61 App. 527, 136 S. W. 68; Leech v. State, 63 App. 339, 139 S. W. 1147; Lacy v. State, 63 App. 189, 140 S. W. 461; Fifer v. State, 64 App. 203, 141 S. W. 989; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 165; Pettis v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 790; Rodriguez v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1167; Brock v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 801; Coulter v. State, 72 App. 602, 162 S. W. 885; Gant v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 142; Reed v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 541; Sorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 299; Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 721.

Evidence of the conduct and language of the defendant previous to the killing, and which show, or tend to show, the state of mind of the accused, is admissible. Wright v. State, 41 Tex. 246. See, also, Pace v. State, 58 App. 90, 124 S. W. 949; Drake v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1157; Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 763; Kelly v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 304; Powdrill v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 231; Manning v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 11.

Antecedent menaces, quarrels, and grudges may always be shown to prove malice. Anderson v. State, 15 App. 447; McKinney v. State, 8 App. 626; Smith v. State, 43 Tex. 643; Howard v. State, 25 App. 686, 8 S. W. 929; Frizzell v. State, 30 App. 42, 16 S. W. 751; Fuller v. State, 30 App. 559, 17 S. W. 1108; White v. State, 30 App. 652, 18 S. W. 462; Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 790; Menefee v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 138; Hill v. State, 72 App. 109, 161 S. W. 118; Paschal v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1057. And see Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 437.

Acts and admissions, and the language of the accused before, at the time of, and even after the killing, may often be pertinent evidence to show express malice. Duebbe v. State, 1 App. 159; Garza v. State, 11 App. 345; Crass v. State, 31 App. 312, 20 S. W. 579; Clampitt v. State, 9 App. 27.

Declaration of deceased, not in the presence of defendant and without his knowledge as to his intentions, is not admissible as a predicate to show motive or animus of defendant at time of killing. Woodward v. State, 42 App. 188, 58 S. W. 144. See, also, Coffman v. State, 62 App. 88, 136 S. W. 779; Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 627.

Facts and circumstances originating with the person on trial may be proved where they shed light on the causes of the difficulty, or tend to show malice. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 763. See, also, Burnam v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 757; Wright v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 976.

Evidence of a former difficulty between the parties may be admissible in behalf of the defendant as explanatory of his acts, and is admissible for the state to show the animus of the homicide. Marnoch v. State, 7 App. 269.

Where the scienter or quo animo of the defendant is necessary to be proved, it is competent for the state to introduce testimony of his acts, conduct, or declarations, which tend to establish his knowledge or intent, though such acts, conduct, or declarations may themselves constitute distinct crimes, and are apparently collateral and foreign to the main issue, and may have occurred either prior or subsequent to the act for which the accused is being tried. McKinney v. State, 8 App. 626.

That the deceased had witnessed an assault and battery committed by defendant, and had made complaint against him therefor, was held competent evidence to prove express malice. Williams v. State, 15 App. 104.

A fact, apparently irrelevant, may be made relevant and admissible by other facts with which it is connected by the proof. Thus, where the defendant was on trial for the murder of a policeman, the state was allowed to prove that a short time before the killing the defendant said: "He can't arrest me." It was held that this exclamation, isolated from other facts, would not have been legal evidence, but in view of other facts in proof, tending to show that the exclamation referred to the deceased, it was relevant and admissible. Campbell v. State, 15 App. 506.

Refusal to permit a defendant, on trial for the murder of his wife, to introduce evidence to prove her infidelity, and that recently before the homicide, he was informed of that fact, held, error. Any evidence showing that the defendant had reasonable cause to be excited, troubled in mind, or in any wise mentally distracted, and that would render it improbable that in perpetrating the homicide he acted with a cool, sedate, and deliberate mind, is admissible upon the issue of express malice. Burkhard v. State, 18 App. 599. See, also, Greta v. State, 10 App. 36.

On trial for murder of a policeman, it appeared that on the day previous to the homicide defendant was in the public streets unlawfully carrying a pistol and threatening to kill any d—d policeman who tried to arrest him; that the threats were communicated to deceased and another policeman, and in their efforts to arrest defendant without warrant, deceased was shot and killed by defendant. Held, that the evidence was relevant and was properly admitted. Miller v. State, 32 App. 319, 2 S. W. 1103.

"Lying in wait" is evidence of express malice, and one of the standard illustrations thereof. Osborne v. State, 23 App. 431, 5 S. W. 251.

Antecedent menaces, former grudges, and quarrels may be proved to show the state of mind and the malice of the accused at the time of the killing. Under this rule the state was properly permitted to prove former difficulties between the accused and the deceased, and the previous threats made by the accused against the deceased. Howard v. State, 25 App. 686, 8 S. W. 929.

The acts and conduct of the defendant after a previous difficulty with accused were, in this case, held admissible to show his animus toward deceased. Everett v. State, 30 App. 682, 18 S. W. 674.

Where there is evidence of an old grudge, but defendant's theory is fresh provocation, he should be allowed to prove the recent provocation if he can in order to lessen the degree. Utzman v. State, 32 App. 426, 24 S. W. 412; Rodgers v. State, 28 S. W. 685; Stewart v. State, 34 App. 214, 29 S. W. 1080; Houston v. State, 34 App. 587, 31 S. W. 403.

The state has a right to show that one who, in resisting arrest, killed an officer was a horse thief. English v. State, 34 App. 190, 30 S. W. 233.

When threats have been proven on the part of defendant towards deceased, defendant may prove that he proposed afterwards to drop the difficulty between them. Gaines v. State, 38 App. 202, 42 S. W. 385.

In a conversation about deceased a short time before the homicide, defendant remarked that if he gets after me with a knife, I will cut off his wind; held, admissible. Self v. State, 39 App. 455, 47 S. W. 26.

It is proper to admit a conversation of defendant in which he stated that he was afraid that he would have trouble with deceased. Mott v. State (Cr. App.) 51 S. W. 369.

Statement of defendant that he would stop the laying out of the road with his gun is admissible, although he did not go to the place of the killing for this purpose, yet it showed animus. Furlow v. State, 41 App. 12, 51 S. W. 939.

It is admissible, both as to defendant and deceased, to prove that statements had been made to each of a character making it prudent for him to go armed. In fine, any fact, hearsay or not, which goes to explain the condition of a person's mind, when such condition is at issue, is admissible. Heffington v. State, 41 App. 315, 54 S. W. 757.

While it is admissible to prove statement of defendant before the killing to show state of mind, yet the state of mind must in some manner be directed toward deceased, either by direct expression or so as to embrace deceased. Fossett v. State, 41 App. 400, 55 S. W. 498.

The conduct of defendant previous to homicide to show intent and animus of defendant at time of killing, his desire for peace and apprehension of danger should have been received. Nelson v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 107.

Evidence of what defendant said about deceased twelve or fifteen years prior to homicide is inadmissible, as it throws no light on anything in the trial, and it is not shown that what he said was communicated to deceased. Woodward v. State, 42 App. 188, 58 S. W. 142.

Efforts on part of defendant to settle peaceably his trouble with deceased can be shown, as this tends to show state of deceased's mind and also of defendant's, and throws light upon the question as to who was the aggressor in the fatal encounter. Schauer v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 251.

Evidence that defendant severely whipped deceased at times held properly admitted. Betts v. State, 57 App. 389, 124 S. W. 424.

Evidence that accused was a large man, and young and robust, and that decedent was an elderly man, and small, and blind in one eye, held admissible to indicate the animus and motive of accused. Lundy v. State, 59 App. 131, 127 S. W. 1032.

It was not error to exclude testimony that decedent made "certain statements" respecting accused a few days before the homicide, existence of ill feeling between the parties being undisputed. Kemper v. State, 63 App. 1, 138 S. W. 1025.

On circumstances showing premeditation, see Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455.

That accused procured a bottle of muriatic acid and a shotgun before the homicide held admissible to show premeditation. Asbeck v. State, 70 App. 225, 156 S. W. 925.

A note sent by accused to the sheriff, which disclosed premeditation and a formed and fixed design to kill, held admissible. Lee v. State, 72 App. 237, 162 S. W. 843.

Where defendant killed his wife and another at the same time, evidence that on the same evening a witness heard defendant cursing his wife was admissible and pertinent, in a prosecution for the killing of the other. Robbins v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 528.

In a prosecution for murder, where the state did not dispute that accused went to deceased's store only to get his mail, and that an unpremeditated quarrel then arose between the deceased and accused, the exclusion of evidence that accused had stated he was going down to deceased's store to get his mail, offered to show that there was no premeditation, was proper. Bolden v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 533.

25. — Commission of act.—See notes to art. 1437, post.

When the inculpatory evidence is circumstantial in its nature, any fact, however unimportant in itself, which tends in the least degree to establish the guilt or innocence of the accused, is competent evidence. In such cases, therefore, incidents may be legitimate evidence which would be deemed irrelevant in a case dependent on direct and positive testimony. In such cases the mind seeks to explore all sources from which light, however feeble, may be derived, and in the investigation of such cases greater scope is allowed than when the evidence is direct and positive. Preston v. State, 8 App. 30; Howard v. State, Id. 53; Bouldin v. State, Id. 332; Washington v. State, Id. 377; Simms v. State, 10 App. 131; Dubose v. State, Id. 230; Langford v. State, 17 App. 445; Ryan v. State, 64 App. 628, 142 S. W. 878; Archer v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 857.

When the evidence fails to show that defendant belonged to a mob, or that the killing was done at the instigation of a mob, it is inadmissible to prove other killing by a mob. Campbell v. State, 35 App. 160, 32 S. W. 774.

It is competent to prove by a witness that he heard shots in the direction of the place and at the time that deceased was alleged to have been killed. Harvey v. State, 35 App. 545, 34 S. W. 623.

It is error to admit evidence on a murder trial that defendant offered to pay for testimony in another case. Newton v. State, 41 App. 610, 56 S. W. 64.

Evidence of the physical surroundings, near the scene of the killing, held admissible, as throwing light on the transaction. Lundy v. State, 59 App. 131, 127 S. W. 1032.

26. — Character of accused.—Conversation between deceased and another policeman as to defendant's dangerous character and the method of arrest when afterward in making arrest deceased was killed by defendant held admissible. Miller v. State, 32 App. 319, 20 S. W. 1103.

While it is competent to prove that defendant's mother had hired deceased, instead of her son, to attend to her business, it is not admissible to ask defendant if he had not spent his part of the estate and was drunken and worthless. Williford v. State, 36 App. 414, 37 S. W. 761.

Evidence that a witness carried a pistol because he had heard of a prior difficulty between accused and deceased, and was afraid of deceased, held outside the issues and inadmissible, and so was evidence as to the relative strength of deceased and a third person. Echols v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 786.

27. — Physical condition of parties.—Testimony of physicians as to having attended accused when he was suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia held inadmissible. Joseph v. State, 59 App. 82, 127 S. W. 171.

Evidence of the relative size of defendant and deceased and their respective ages is admissible; the evidence, as a whole, making this a material issue. Sanchez v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 1133.

28. — Motive.—The crime being proved and the circumstances pointing to the accused as the perpetrator, facts tending to show motive, though remote, are admissible. Johnson v. State, 28 App. 17, 11 S. W. 667; Leeper v. State, 29 App. 63, 14 S. W. 398; Johnson v. State, 29 App. 150, 15 S. W. 647; Blackwell v. State, 29 App. 195, 15 S. W. 597; Somerville v. State, 6 App. 433; Dill v. State, 1 App. 278; Lane v. State, 59 App. 595, 129 S. W. 353; Harrelson v. State, 60 App. 534, 132 S. W. 783; Leech v. State, 63 App. 339, 139 S. W. 1147; Millican v. State, 63 App. 440, 140 S. W. 1136; Mitchell v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 1006; Foster v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 936; Kelly v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 304; Asbeck v. State, 70 App. 225, 156 S. W. 925; Corbitt v. State, 72 App. 396, 163 S. W. 436; Coffman v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 939.

On the question of motive, see, also, Simmons v. State, 31 App. 227, 20 S. W. 573; Crass v. State, 31 App. 312, 20 S. W. 579; Gonzales v. State, 31 App. 508, 21 S. W. 253; Miller v. State, 31 App. 609, 21 S. W. 925, 37 Am. St. Rep. 836; House v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 206. See, also, Barbee v. State, 58 App. 129, 124 S. W. 961; Powdrill v. State, 62 App. 442, 138 S. W. 114; Spates v. State, 62 App. 532, 138 S. W. 393; Drake v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1157; Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 996; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 165; Holmes v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 926; DeLeon v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 247; Millner v. State, 72 App. 45, 162 S. W. 348; Francis v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 779; Guerrero v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 731.

On intimacy with wife of deceased, see Goode v. State, 57 App. 220, 123 S. W. 597; Pannell v. State, 59 App. 333, 128 S. W. 133; Millner v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 899.

Antecedent menaces, threats, grudges, and recent difficulties between accused and decedent are admissible on the issue of motive. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 864; Penton v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 190; Gant v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 142.

Evidence that deceased on the morning before he was murdered had received money, was admissible as tending to prove a motive for his murder. Cordova v. State, 6 App. 207; Milo v. State, 59 App. 196, 127 S. W. 1025.

An indictment pending against accused at the time of the homicide, for an offense against the person of deceased or for theft of his property is competent evidence to prove motive. Hudson v. State, 28 App. 323, 13 S. W. 388; Dubose v. State, 13 App. 418; Taylor v. State, 14 App. 340.

It was held competent for the defendant to prove that the house of the deceased, where the homicide occurred, was a house of prostitution, for the purpose of explaining the intent and object of his presence there. Villareal v. State, 26 Tex. 107.

It is competent for the state to prove acts of the accused antecedent to the act of killing, which, either in themselves or in connection with other circumstances, tend to prove motive or preparation. Hubby v. State, 8 App. 597.

The declarations of the accused, made at the time the act is done, and expressive of its object and character, are regarded as verbal acts indicating a present purpose and intention, and are admissible in evidence to determine his motive. Ward v. State, 41 Tex. 612.

It was held permissible for the state to introduce in evidence an indictment charging defendant's brother with theft from the deceased. Coward v. State, 6 App. 60.

It was held admissible for the state to put in evidence an indictment against the defendant for an assault on one W., and also an indictment against said W. and the bail bond of said W. on which deceased was a surety. There was evidence of ill-will and threats of the defendant against the deceased because of his having become the surety of said W. on the bail bond. Rucker v. State, 7 App. 549.

It was held competent for the state to prove that the deceased had considerable money before his removal to Texas, where he was assassinated, though such testimony tended only remotely to prove a motive for his murder. Early v. State, 9 App. 476.

In a trial for murder, the wife of the deceased testified, over objection of the defendant, that a few minutes before the killing, the defendant made indecent proposals to her; but of this fact the deceased was not apprised, and there was no evidence indicating that such proposals influenced or explained the motives or acts of either the deceased or the defendant. Held, that such testimony was irrelevant and it was error to admit it. Gardner v. State, 11 App. 265.

It was held competent to prove that the defendant had served a term in the penitentiary for burglarizing the house of deceased. Powell v. State, 13 App. 244.

An affidavit made by the deceased a short time before the killing, and which was pending at the time of the killing, charging the defendant with an offense, was held admissible evidence to prove motive. Robinson v. State, 16 App. 347.

The defendant was a watchman at a railroad freight depot, and in the nighttime fired upon and wounded two men passing near the depot. Held, that as tending to throw light upon the question of motive in shooting, and as having a tendency to mitigate if not to justify, the conduct of the defendant in shooting, he was entitled to prove that there had been a great deal of car breaking and stealing from the cars at the depot where he was on duty as guard. Hobbs v. State, 16 App. 517.

Where there was evidence of a conspiracy between the defendant and two other parties to kill the deceased, it was held that the state was entitled to prove on the separate trial of the defendant, ill-feeling existing prior to the homicide between said two other parties and the deceased, as tending to show motive for the commission of the murder. Thompson v. State, 19 App. 593.

Where a defendant is charged with the murder of his wife, the state may prove her infidelity to him, and his knowledge of such infidelity to show a motive for the murder. Phillips v. State, 22 App. 139, 2 S. W. 601.

In the trial of a husband for the murder of his wife, it is not competent for the state to prove acts of infidelity on the part of the wife, unless it is also proved that the husband, at the time of the homicide, had knowledge of such acts. Phillips v. State, 22 App. 139, 2 S. W. 601. See the same case for other testimony held to be irrelevant.

An indictment against the defendant for an offense different from that for which he is on trial, may be introduced in evidence against him, if such indictment, in any degree, tends to show a motive on the part of the defendant to commit the offense for which he is on trial. This is so, even where such indictment was presented subsequent to the murder for which the defendant is on trial, where such indictment is connected by other testimony with transactions which occurred before the murder, and which tend to show a motive on the part of the defendant to commit the murder. Kunde v. State, 22 App. 65, 3 S. W. 325.

The State was permitted, over objection by defendant, to prove that defendant had said, prior to the homicide, that he would kill "any man who fooled with Mandy Smith." This was admissible, it being shown that defendant and deceased were rival suitors of Miss Smith. Mathis v. State, 34 App. 39, 28 S. W. 817.

That deceased knew that defendant's brother-in-law had stolen cattle and proposed to testify against him is admissible. Easterwood v. State, 34 App. 400, 31 S. W. 294.

Evidence that deceased had money is inadmissible in the absence of evidence showing that defendant had knowledge of that fact. Lancaster v. State (Cr. App.) 31 S. W. 515.

Evidence that defendant had money after the murder is admissible, but defendant should be allowed to prove in rebuttal that deceased was impecunious. Lancaster v. State (Cr. App.) 31 S. W. 515.

Deceased being a Mexican, it is proper to prove that defendant had been attending meetings the object of which was to get rid of Mexicans in that community. Chalk v. State, 35 App. 116, 32 S. W. 534.

When the testimony shows that deceased had money at the time of the killing, evidence of his poverty previous to the time is inadmissible in rebuttal. Lancaster v. State, 36 App. 16, 35 S. W. 165.

A certified copy of the will of deceased, leaving all her estate to the defendant, her husband, is admissible to show motive. Golin v. State, 37 App. 90, 38 S. W. 794.

See a case where it was held improper to allow the State to prove that defendant's witness was the beneficiary in deceased's life insurance policy. Barry v. State, 37 App. 302, 39 S. W. 692.

On trial for murder committed in the perpetration of burglary, proof that a burglary was committed in a certain way, and defendant was identified therewith, does not authorize the proof of another burglary committed in the same way, but with which defendant is in no way identified. Williams v. State, 38 App. 128, 41 S. W. 645.

It is always admissible to show motive by proving threats against deceased, and it is not necessary that his name be mentioned if it can be shown that the threats had reference to him. Godwin v. State, 38 App. 466, 43 S. W. 336.

When deceased was a witness against defendant in a theft case, it is admissible to prove what deceased stated in reference to defendant's connection with the theft case to prove motive, if defendant knew what deceased's testimony would be, but not otherwise. Attaway v. State, 41 App. 395, 55 S. W. 45.

It is admissible to show what the defendant said and did just before the homicide, of a criminative nature, to show motive. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 948.

It is error to admit evidence that subsequent to the killing accused and his wife's sister, who lived with him and his family, had been indicted for adultery, on the theory that accused killed deceased while the latter was approaching accused's house because of jealousy; there being no evidence that deceased knew the sister-in-law, or to show for what purpose he was approaching the house. Newman v. State, 58 App. 443, 126 S. W. 578, 21 Ann. Cas. 718.

The sister of the accused testified that a few days before the homicide she told the accused that the decedent was the cause of her removal from one school to another, denied on cross-examination that the school superintendent told her, prior thereto, that decedent had nothing to do with her removal. Held that it was competent to contradict her with the testimony of the superintendent. And note other contradicting testimony, held properly admitted. Long v. State, 59 App. 103, 127 S. W. 551, Ann. Cas. 1912A, 1244.

Testimony by decedent's wife that she and her husband were living on accused's place, when the killing occurred, and that accused and her husband were in partnership, was admissible. Spencer v. State, 59 App. 217, 128 S. W. 118.

Where defendant killed deceased because of animosity growing out of defendant's marriage to deceased's daughter, evidence that deceased had been guilty of incest with his daughter, and that that was the cause of the separation between deceased and his wife, was irrelevant. Jennings v. State, 60 App. 421, 132 S. W. 473.

Evidence that decedent had charged accused with larceny was admissible to show motive and resentment of accused. Harrelson v. State, 60 App. 534, 132 S. W. 783.

On criminal intimacy between defendant and deceased's sister, see Baum v. State, 60 App. 638, 133 S. W. 271.

Evidence that deceased had considerable money the evening before he was killed, and that there was only 15 cents on his body when found the next morning, was admissible. Spates v. State, 62 App. 532, 138 S. W. 393.

Where policies on deceased's life were in part payable to accused, evidence that on the day of the homicide she was inquiring concerning the policies was admissible. Streight v. State, 62 App. 453, 138 S. W. 742.

Where accused tendered the issue of his right to defend his possession, when he killed an officer attempting to execute a writ of sequestration, the state could show that accused had been enjoined from entering on the land, and that he had signed an agreement not to go on the land, as bearing on his motive. Fifer v. State, 64 App. 203, 141 S. W. 989.

In a prosecution for homicide, deceased's wife was permitted to testify over objection that she had told her sister-in-law, in the absence of accused, that her husband was going to prosecute accused for cattle stealing. There was no evidence that this statement was communicated to accused, and, although counsel for accused had examined the witness about a part of this conversation, the statement objected to was not germane to those called out by accused's counsel. Held, that the admission of this evidence was reversible error. Maclin v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 951.

Where the state's theory was that accused poisoned deceased in an attempt to poison his wife, on whose life accused held a policy of insurance, evidence showing that accused had collected insurance money for a personal injury and also on a horse that had died was admissible, if tending to show accused's mania for insurance money. Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 996.

Where the trouble arose over deceased's appointment as guardian of infants living with accused, the letters of guardianship, showed to accused just before the killing, and the order of appointment were competent to show motive. Welch v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 572.

On resisting arrest, see Vines v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 727.

Evidence of the action of deceased in making affidavit charging accused with a violation of an injunction in an effort to have him punished therefor was admissible. Powdrill v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 231.

Evidence of deceased's general reputation for virtue and chastity is inadmissible for any purpose. Hall v. State, 70 App. 590, 158 S. W. 272.

Where, at the time of a homicide, defendant was unaware of the issuance of a marriage license authorizing the marriage of deceased and defendant's divorced wife, evidence of the issuance of the license was not admissible against defendant as showing motive. Kirklin v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1016.

That deceased husband had had illicit intercourse and had visited houses of ill fame held inadmissible. Millner v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 899.

The killing of the husband of a woman with whom the slayer has had illicit intercourse is not justified by the fact that the deceased had had illicit intercourse with another woman, and evidence of that fact is inadmissible. Millner v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 899.

Evidence that after the killing accused was freely spending money held admissible, where it appeared that deceased had money. McCue v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 280.

On a trial for homicide, while resisting arrest after commission of a burglary, evidence of the details of the burglary, committed in the presence of decedent and a third person, was admissible. Stewart v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1077.

29. — Threats by defendant.—Evidence of indefinite and indirect threats is inadmissible. Duke v. State, 61 App. 19, 133 S. W. 432; Maclin v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 951; Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 127; Wade v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 215.

A threat of general malignity embracing all persons is admissible. Hiles v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 717. See, also, Mathis v. State, 34 App. 39, 28 S. W. 817.

It is admissible to prove that defendant some time before the transaction used words tending to show that he was going to do a thing similar to that which he did, although he did not in any manner refer to what he afterwards did. Hedrick v. State, 40 App. 535, 51 S. W. 252.

Witness testified that about a week before the homicide occurred he said to defendant, "I heard that fellow (meaning deceased) ballooning at you." Defendant replied, "Yes, I'll fix him." Held, relevant and admissible. White v. State, 32 App. 625, 25 S. W. 784.

It appeared that accused and deceased had an altercation. Accused went off to get a larger pistol and on returning he called to accused, "Now I am ready for you," held, this did not constitute an accidental meeting, but was an invitation by defendant for a renewal of the difficulty. Mathis v. State, 34 App. 39, 28 S. W. 817.

Threats made by defendant are admissible. Bryant v. State, 35 App. 394, 33 S. W. 978, 36 S. W. 79.

Abstract declarations made by defendant shortly before the homicide, such as "I'm going to wind it up," "I've had enough of it," are not admissible unless it be shown in some way that such remarks had reference to the killing. Gaines v. State, 38 App. 202, 42 S. W. 385.

That defendant at one time said he was going to kill somebody, and at another time said he was going to kill his wife and her protector, are inadmissible unless it be shown in some way that such expressions had reference to deceased. Strange v. State, 38 App. 280, 42 S. W. 551.

So much of a conversation between witness and defendant as showed threats of defendant against a syndicate for whom deceased was manager, and that the cause for the threats was the sending of a telegram by deceased, was admissible. Williams v. State, 61 App. 356, 136 S. W. 771.

A statement by defendant that "he would kill anybody who killed his hogs" was admissible, where, taken in connection with the remaining testimony, it clearly points to deceased. Pace v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 132.

Where there was evidence that accused was mad at deceased and called him vile names, testimony as to a threat by accused clearly shown to refer to deceased was properly admitted. Mayhew v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 191.

A remark by accused that he would use his pistol held inadmissible, in the absence of evidence that he referred to deceased. Sorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 299.

A threat made by defendant to kill is admissible, though deceased's name was not mentioned at the time, if it can be reasonably gathered from the evidence that deceased was then meant. Howe v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 497.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence that accused made love to deceased's fiancée and said that he would kill her lover, and that he asked another whether the two were going to be married and made a bet that they would not, is admissible to show motive, malice, intent, and threats. Stacy v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 114.

30. — Circumstances preceding act.—Acts, statements, and declarations of the deceased which tend to prove a peaceable motive, or friendly animus toward the defendant, but which have not been communicated to him, are inadmissible as evidence because they could in no manner have influenced his action and should not be used to establish or aggravate his crime. Brumley v. State, 21 App. 222, 17 S. W. 140, 57 Am. Rep. 612; Johnson v. State, 22 App. 206, 2 S. W. 609; Ball v. State, 29 App. 107, 14 S. W. 1012; Fuller v. State, 30 App. 559, 17 S. W. 1108; Neison v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 108; Hunter v. State, 59 App. 439, 129 S. W. 125. But see Craig v. State, 30 App. 619, 18 S. W. 297.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence showing the facts previous to and leading up to the killing is admissible. Barnett v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 580.

When defendant is charged with murder of his wife, his ill treatment of her previous to the killing is admissible. Spears v. State, 41 App. 527, 56 S. W. 348; Stanton v. State, 70 App. 519, 158 S. W. 994; Cooper v. State, 72 App. 250, 161 S. W. 1094.

See Allison v. State, 14 App. 402, for evidence held to be irrelevant in a murder case, the murder growing out of a feud, having its origin in a controversy about a schoolhouse.

The defense proposed, but was not permitted, to prove that a short time prior to the shooting the deceased was known to be making efforts to trade for a pistol. This proof, in view of the evidence, was competent as tending to explain why it was that defendant and deceased were together at the place of the shooting; why the defendant invited the deceased to that place, and why defendant had a pistol on that occasion; and, moreover, it tended strongly to throw light on the whole transaction. Irby v. State, 25 App. 203, 7 S. W. 705.

The state was allowed to prove that a few minutes before the homicide deceased left a crowd of young ladies remarking that he was going to his store, that he went to the store, lighted a lamp, and remained there a few minutes and then started to return to the plaza. Defendant and his codefendant were seen to change positions on the opposite side of the street and when deceased had gone about fifty yards from his store, the fatal shot was fired. Held, that the evidence was admissible. Rodriguez v. State, 32 App. 259, 22 S. W. 978.

Evidence that defendant assaulted deceased about a year before the killing, is too remote when the evidence shows that defendant had been gone from the country and had not been seen in the country for several months. Wilkins v. State, 35 App. 525, 34 S. W. 627.

It is not error to exclude a statement made by deceased that he had struck defendant with a walking stick, and that defendant would remember him by the mark he left. Bishop v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 170.

Statements made by defendant's son before the homicide was committed, not connected with the killing, are inadmissible. Wilson v. State, 37 App. 64, 38 S. W. 610.

That defendant fired a pistol on the night before the homicide, held admissible to show that defendant had a pistol. Brittain v. State, 36 App. 406, 37 S. W. 758; Id. (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 297.

In a case of murder which grew out of a difficulty between two factions, it was competent to prove that a member of one faction went and challenged a member of the other faction to come up to the place where the killing was afterwards committed. Mitchell v. State, 38 App. 170, 41 S. W. 816.

Prior acts of the deceased connected with the killing are admissible in explanation of the killing. Heffington v. State, 41 App. 315, 54 S. W. 758.

Former acts and conduct may be shown to shed light on what occurred at time of homicide. Spangler v. State, 41 App. 424, 55 S. W. 330.

It is inadmissible to prove that defendant carried a pistol at home of deceased's mother some time before the killing, it not being shown that deceased was near the place at the time. Woodward v. State, 42 App. 188, 58 S. W. 142.

Evidence that deceased remarked that he would separate "that other man and his wife," held not objectionable as not sufficiently referring to accused. Jennings v. State, 60 App. 421, 132 S. W. 473.

Testimony is admissible that accused bought a knife about a week before the homicide; the knife being identified as that used. Bradley v. State, 60 App. 398, 132 S. W. 484.

The rule that actions and declarations of the decedent are not admissible against the accused, who was not present and had no notice of them, applies only to cases involving self-defense, where the accused has a right to act upon movements apparently hostile towards him, and does not exclude testimony as to the actions, movements, and declarations of decedent on the day of the homicide, which are merely explanatory of his presence at the place where he was killed. Bozanno v. State, 60 App. 507, 132 S. W. 777.

Evidence that decedent was called out just before being shot held inadmissible in the absence of a showing accused was instrumental in the calling. Clements v. State, 61 App. 161, 134 S. W. 728.

Where evidence of previous threats by accused against deceased was introduced, evidence of the fact of a prior altercation between them, in which defendant out deceased, without the details thereof, was admissible. Powdrill v. State, 62 App. 442, 138 S. W. 114.

Where the trouble originated over the efforts of accused's father to have decedent put out of a house rented by him, evidence was not admissible that decedent did not pay part of the rent to accused's father resulting in some ill feeling between them. Jackson v. State, 63 App. 351, 139 S. W. 1156.

Evidence that accused, on trial for murder by poison, was, prior to the homicide, in a saloon drinking with a third person, and was assisted home in a drunken condition, was inadmissible. Orner v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 935.

Evidence of divorce proceedings between accused and his wife, and accompanying circumstances, held inadmissible. Drake v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1157.

State held properly permitted to show that, before the killing, accused procured a pistol from a third person, who first refused to give it to him, stating in accused's presence that she would not let him have it because he was "mad." Wysong v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 941.

A witness having testified that he and decedent were friendly, it was not error to exclude testimony whether he and decedent did not "drink together"; it not being claimed that decedent drank the day he was killed. Kirby v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 455.

The acts and conduct of both parties when deceased was in sight of accused are admissible. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 627.

That witness had seen decedent intoxicated some time during the preceding summer, held not admissible. Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272.

Evidence by decedent's daughter that her father was shot at by an unknown person in February preceding the homicide in question in June, offered to show why decedent had purchased a gun, was not admissible for that purpose, in absence of a showing that accused knew that decedent had been shot at in February and was carrying a gun for that reason. Cook v. State, 71 App. 532, 160 S. W. 465.

Where accused killed deceased shortly after his father had had a quarrel with him, evidence of that difficulty and what was said by both parties is admissible; it appearing that it took place only a very short time before the fatal affray. Coulter v. State, 72 App. 602, 162 S. W. 885.

The state can show, by either direct or circumstantial evidence, that the defendant had heard, prior to time of the killing, statements made by his wife which were offered in evidence against him. Robbins v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 528.

A conversation between the parties just prior to the killing was admissible. Sorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 299.

Evidence that some time prior thereto and subsequent to a difficulty between deceased and defendant's brothers a witness saw defendant with a gun near a fence dividing deceased's field from that of defendant's father held inadmissible. Sorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 299.

As to declarations by deceased, see, also, Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 437.

In a prosecution for murder, where the state was permitted to prove that after trouble between defendant and deceased on the day before the killing defendant went to town, and there purchased shotgun shells loaded with buckshot, as tending to show premeditation, it was error to exclude evidence that before purchasing the shells defendant went to a justice of the peace and tried to have deceased put under a peace bond, which the justice refused to do. Sunday v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 97.

In a prosecution for murder, where the state claimed that defendant and his brother, who was jointly indicted with him, had waylaid deceased, while they claimed self-defense, and there was evidence that defendant's brother had been told that deceased and another had threatened to kill him if he did not move off from the place of deceased's father-in-law, it was error to exclude evidence that just before the killing defendant's brother had employed witness to move him off from the place, as a circumstance tending to show an effort by defendant to avoid trouble. Sunday v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 97.

Where there was evidence that on a day preceding that of the killing defendant was going from store to store with part of a luggy shaft about two feet long looking for deceased, it was error to admit evidence that deceased sought advice as to what he should do, and followed it by going to his home, where it was not shown that defendant knew that deceased was trying to evade him. Hammons v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 493.

31. — Identity of accused.—It is erroneous to permit witness to state that he examined other persons than the defendant arrested on suspicion and failed to identify them and they were turned loose. Moore v. State, 40 App. 443, 50 S. W. 942.

A witness may be allowed to testify that he believes he recognizes defendant as the man to whom he had loaned a pistol a short time before the killing occurred. Tate v. State, 35 App. 231, 33 S. W. 121.

A witness testified that in his judgment and belief defendant was the same person that came to his house to borrow a pistol; held, admissible; the fact that he was not certain, would go only to the weight of the testimony. Tate v. State, 35 App. 231, 33 S. W. 121.

Evidence that defendant threw away a pistol which was identified as the one he had taken from an officer, held admissible on the question of defendant's identity. Vines v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 727.

See, also, Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 996.

32. — Means or instruments used.—Witness may be permitted to state that if deceased had a weapon he did not see it and that he was in position to have seen it. Tate v. State, 35 App. 231, 33 S. W. 121; McGrath v. State, 35 App. 413, 34 S. W. 127, 941.

It is not error to permit the exhibition of the rock with which the killing was committed, though the testimony as to identification is slight. McBrayer v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 114.

The fact that defendant's accomplice assisted in finding the instrument with which the murder was committed does not render it inadmissible. Batson v. State, 36 App. 606, 38 S. W. 48.

Where the evidence showed that accused had whipped the deceased child with a waistbelt, evidence of the character, weight, length, and size of the belt was admissible. Betts v. State, 60 App. 631, 133 S. W. 251.

Where it was the theory of the state that accused killed his child with a hairbrush, the testimony of the sheriff that he found the hairbrush in a broken condition, and that it appeared to be freshly broken, was admissible. Betts v. State, 60 App. 631, 133 S. W. 251.

Evidence with reference to a knife held admissible. Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272.

Evidence that accused's pistol would go off by just touching the trigger, held properly excluded. Truett v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 523.

33. — Subsequent incriminating or exculpatory circumstances.—The declarations and conduct of the defendant, either before or after being charged with the offense, are admissible evidence, not as part of the res gestae, but as indicative of a guilty mind. Cordova v. State, 6 App. 207; Langford v. State, 17 App. 445. But see Fulcher v. State, 28 App. 465, 13 S. W. 750.

How far and circumstances under which acts and declarations of defendant are admissible in evidence. Giebel v. State, 28 App. 151, 12 S. W. 591; Angus v. State, 29 App. 52, 14 S. W. 443; Blackwell v. State, 29 App. 195, 15 S. W. 597; Lewis v. State, 29 App. 201, 15 S. W. 642, 25 Am. St. Rep. 720; Morris v. State, 30 App. 95, 16 S. W. 757; Craig v. State, 30 App. 619, 18 S. W. 297. And further on the question, Simmons v. State, 31 App. 227, 20 S. W. 573; Lynch v. State, 24 App. 350, 6 S. W. 190, 5 Am. St. Rep. 888; Wilson v. State, 70 App. 355, 156 S. W. 1185.

Clothing admissible in evidence. Kidwell v. State, 35 App. 264, 33 S. W. 342; Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1074.

The actions of the accused when brought into the presence of the dead body of the deceased are competent evidence as indicative of a guilty mind. Handline v. State, 6 App. 347.

So his flight after the commission of the homicide, together with the circumstances attending such flight, is evidence against him. Aiken v. State, 10 App. 610; Hardin v. State, 4 App. 355; Blake v. State, 3 App. 581; Gose v. State, 6 App. 121; Hart v. State, 22 App. 563, 3 S. W. 741; Williams v. State, 22 App. 497, 4 S. W. 64.

A state's witness, in a trial for murder, testified that after the fatal blow was struck, and just after the deceased fell, he, the witness, picked up a pistol from the ground near the feet of the deceased; that he did not know to which of the parties it belonged, but supposing it to belong to the deceased, he put it in deceased's wagon among his other things. The defense proved the defendant's declarations, made a few minutes after he struck the fatal blow, to the effect that just before he seized the weapon, with which he struck the blow, he saw the deceased thrust his hand behind him, as he thought to draw a knife. He then proposed to prove that a very short time after the difficulty, he requested a witness to summon a doctor; that said witness in going for the doctor put on and wore the coat of the state's witness who testified to having picked up the pistol, and that witness who went for the doctor, found in the coat pocket of said state's witness a pistol, which he identified as the pistol of the deceased. Held, that the proposed testimony, in view of the other evidence in the case, was pertinent and admissible. Lilly v. State, 20 App. 1.

The state was permitted to prove that the husband of deceased said to defendant when they met at the body of the dead woman: "Aleck, you have killed my wife," and defendant made no reply, but walked off. Brown v. State, 32 App. 119, 22 S. W. 596.

Where the evidence showed that the key in defendant's pocket fitted the door of the room in which the murder occurred, defendant should be allowed to explain his possession of the key. Radford v. State, 33 App. 520, 27 S. W. 143.

Witness can not testify that defendant's clothes looked like they had been smeared over with ashes. Moffatt v. State, 35 App. 257, 33 S. W. 344.

Witness testified that he saw defendant ride into the field where deceased was at work, and after the shooting deceased came to witness and asked him who it was that was shooting at him; held, admissible. Williamson v. State, 36 App. 225, 36 S. W. 444.

Evidence of the finding of a hat at deceased's house, after the homicide, with shot holes in it; held, admissible. Houston v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 803.

It is competent for the State to prove the clothing deceased wore at the time he was killed, and then exhibit such clothing to the jury. Mitchell v. State, 38 App. 170, 41 S. W. 816.

Where there was a controversy as to the number of shots, and by whom fired, evidence that near deceased's hand was found a pistol with only one shell in it was admissible. Godwin v. State, 39 App. 404, 46 S. W. 226.

Where the evidence showed a bitter state of feeling between the parties, evidence of statements of accused, made after the homicide, showing intense dislike and ill will towards decedent, was admissible to show such ill will and animosity, and to illustrate accused's attitude respecting the killing. Carson v. State, 57 App. 394, 123 S. W. 590, 136 Am. St. Rep. 981.

The state could show that bullet shells appearing to have been recently exploded and fresh bullet marks on a tree were found the next morning at the scene of the homicide. Butler v. State, 61 App. 133, 134 S. W. 230.

Where the evidence is wholly circumstantial, evidence as to articles found is admissible to connect defendant with the crime. Ridge v. State, 61 App. 214, 134 S. W. 732.

The state can show finding in accused's possession shortly after the homicide of wearing apparel belonging to decedent, and in his possession at or shortly before the homicide; but the things must be identified with reasonable certainty as decedent's. Harris v. State, 62 App. 235, 137 S. W. 373.

Where death was caused by a blunt instrument, evidence that, when deceased's body was found the next morning, the witness and others looked for the weapon used, and that a piece of two-inch iron pipe with blood stains and hair on it was discovered, was admissible. Spates v. State, 62 App. 532, 138 S. W. 393.

Where accused claimed that he shot deceased in the defense of his brother, and that brother, while he and accused were being taken to the scene of the homicide, stated that accused fired the shot in defense of their father, and accused failed to deny that, evidence of such statement was admissible, tending to inculpate accused by showing that his explanation of the crime was untrue. Zimmer v. State, 64 App. 114, 141 S. W. 781.

Evidence that the articles used by decedent after she was poisoned disappeared or were washed held inadmissible, unless accused was connected therewith. Orner v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 935.

Evidence that an account book belonging to the deceased had been lost and not found would not tend to prove any issue. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 622.

Evidence that the sheriff, after obtaining from deceased's wife a description of the man who did the killing, traced the horse of the slayer for some distance was admissible where the horse was recognized by many people and described by deceased's wife. Mitchell v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 1006.

That witnesses saw no weapon on deceased, was not inadmissible on the ground that the evidence showed that other people had been to the place of the killing before such witnesses; that fact only going to the weight of their evidence. Swanney v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 548.

Where the evidence was conflicting as to whether, when accused shot deceased, he had deceased by the right hand pulling him, evidence that immediately after the killing the shirt sleeve on deceased's right arm was drawn down over his hand was admissible. Welch v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 572.

Where deceased wore a truss, and a truss was found in accused's trunk with a blue stain on it, evidence that deceased wore blue shirts which faded was admissible. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1074.

Where the state's theory was that the killing took place over an alleged indebtedness, accused's daughter could testify what she heard accused say about the matter. Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272.

Evidence that tracks were found leading from the place where deceased's body was found, held admissible. Thompson v. State, 72 App. 659, 163 S. W. 973.

Evidence of the discovery of a twig whittled by deceased held not objectionable, because it was found several days after the killing. Bullock v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 196.

Where deceased had been shot while in bed, evidence that the mattress had been burned, and the bedclothes washed, is properly received, where it was not intimated that accused's mother, who took charge of the premises, did so to suppress evidence. Coffman v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 939.

That defendant was nervous and had a haggard appearance, held admissible. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 115.

34. — Cause of death.—The cause of death may be proved without the aid of expert testimony, even where death did not ensue immediately after the infliction of the injury which caused it. Smith v. State, 43 Tex. 613.

Where a blow is the proximate cause of death, the prior enfeebled condition of deceased is not material. Griffin v. State, 40 App. 314, 50 S. W. 366, 76 Am. St. Rep. 718.

In a case of death alleged to be by poison, it is proper to admit evidence of friends and neighbors of deceased that she was apparently contented, happy and joyful in disposition and did not appear to be sick, but had the appearance of a healthy woman. This to rebut theory that deceased died from natural causes. Morrison v. State, 40 App. 493, 51 S. W. 358.

The physician who made the post mortem examination may testify that deceased had been hit with a heavy instrument, describe the places where he was struck, and the effect thereof. Spates v. State, 62 App. 522, 138 S. W. 393.

It is permissible to show that when decedent arrived home he had to be helped into the house. Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272.

Where accused attempted to show that the ligaments, etc., were not properly sewed up, and that death was caused by such improper treatment, physicians could give evidence describing the wound, its depth and course, and the ligaments, etc., severed. Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272.

Evidence that deceased was in perfect health, and that she died in 14 hours after being shot in the abdomen by accused, was clearly admissible. Gomez v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 711.

35. — Incriminating others.—Where the evidence showed that a party who was jointly indicted with the defendant for the murder, had equal opportunities with the defendant to commit the murder, it was held that the defendant was entitled to prove the acts and declarations of such party done and made prior to the murder, tending to show motive on the part of such party toward the deceased, and to show a motive on the part of such party to commit the murder. The cases of Bowen v. State, 3 App. 617; Boothe v. State, 4 App. 202; Walker v. State, 6 App. 576; Holt v. State, 9 App. 571, which hold a contrary doctrine, are overruled. The rule now established is, that investigation with reference to other parties than the accused should not be permitted in cases either positive or circumstantial, unless the inculpatory facts are such as are proximately connected with the transaction. In other words, to show remote acts or threats would not be admissible unless there were other facts also in proof proximately and pertinently connecting such third party with the homicide at the time of its commission. Kunde v. State, 22 App. 65, 3 S. W. 325; McInturf v. State, 20 App. 335; Hart v. State, 15 App. 202, 49 Am. Rep. 188; Dubose v. State, 10 App. 230.

A defendant on trial for murder proposed to introduce evidence of the ill-feeling and previous threats of an independent third party against the deceased, which proposed proof, upon objection, was excluded. Held, that in view of the other proof on the trial, which tended to show the presence of both the defendant and the said third party at the time and place and their participation in the homicide, and because of the further fact that such proof would in no event show the absence of the defendant from the place of the homicide, the exclusion of the proposed evidence did not constitute reversible error. Harris v. State, 31 App. 411, 20 S. W. 916.

It is not error to reject evidence that another had threatened deceased's life. Henry v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 802; Martin v. State, Id. 222.

Evidence that certain persons assaulted deceased about a year before the killing is inadmissible. Wilkins v. State, 35 App. 525, 34 S. W. 627.

When the evidence is circumstantial evidence that other persons than defendant had made threats, is admissible. Murphy v. State, 36 App. 24, 35 S. W. 174.

Accused may meet the charge by showing that another, or others, committed the offense. Wheeler v. State, 56 App. 547, 121 S. W. 166.

That deceased was in fear of a former husband held inadmissible. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 437.

36. — Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence held to justify conviction. Fletcher v. State, 62 App. 417, 138 S. W. 109; Lander v. State, 12 Tex. 462; Killingsworth v. State, 23 Tex. 204; Gillmore v. State, 36 Tex. 334; Weeden v. State, 41 Tex. 84; Gilleland v. State, 44 Tex. 356; Lopez v. State, 2 App. 204; Noland v. State, 3 App. 598; Hill v. State, 5 App. 2; Proffit v. State, Id. 54; Rodriguez v. State, Id. 256; Templeton v. State, Id. 398; Bejarino v. State, 6 App. 265; Gardenhire v. State, Id. 147; Wilson v. State, Id. 427; Evans v. State, Id. 513; Rye v. State, 8 App. 163; Clark v. State, Id. 350; Ross v. State, 10 App. 455, 38 Am. Rep. 643; Homberg v. State, 12 App. 1; Brownlee v. State, 13 App. 255; Kemp v. State, Id. 561; Coffey v. State, Id. 580; Charles v. State, Id. 658; Graves v. State, 14 App. 113; Allison v. State, Id. 402; *McDonald v. In a prosecution dependent wholly upon circumstantial testimony, greater latitude is allowed in the presentation of evidence; but, in such cases it is not sufficient that the circumstances coincide with, account for, and therefore render probable the guilt of the defendant. They must exclude, to a moral certainty, every other hypothesis. Lovelady v. State, 14 App. 545; Pogue v. State, 12 App. 283; Pharr v. State, 10 App. 485; Jackson v. State, 9 App. 114; Taylor v. The mere fact that the defendant knew where the body of the deceased was, is not prima facie evidence of the guilt of the defendant of the homicide. Elizabeth v. State, 27 Tex. 329.

The mere presence of the defendant at the killing will not justify his conviction of the homicide. Ake v. State, 31 Tex. 416.

The guilt of the defendant must be proved with such certainty as to establish it beyond a reasonable doubt. White v. State, 36 Tex. 347; Wallace v. State, 9 App. 299; Holmes v. State, Id. 313; McNair v. State, 14 App. 78; Hackett v. State, 13 App. 406; Dyson v. State, Id. 402.

It is never indispensable to a conviction that a motive for the commission of crime should appear, though in cases of circumstantial evidence, the existence or want of motive is sometimes of great importance. Preston v. State, 8 App. 30.

Deceased, a strong healthy man, was stabbed with a knife immediately under the left nipple. He spoke only once thereafter and died in about fifteen minutes; held, that such facts showed conclusively that the wound was the immediate proximate cause of his death. Thompson v. State, 38 App. 335, 42 S. W. 974.

It is not necessary to show motive. Wynne v. State, 59 App. 117, 127 S. W. 197. Circumstantial evidence considered, and held sufficient to sustain a conviction of murder in the perpetration of robbery. Ridge v. State, 61 App. 214, 134 S. W. 732.

Evidence in a murder case held to authorize a conviction, conceding the truth of testimony, on alibi, as to defendant being at his home at 12:30 or 1 o'clock on the night of the homicide. Wheeler v. State, 61 App. 527, 136 S. W. 68.

The question whether accused intended to kill deceased, or deemed her to be another person about to attack him, held, under the evidence, for the jury. Garrett v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 251.

Evidence held sufficient to authorize the submission to the jury of the question whether defendant was carrying a pistol prior to the killing. Condron v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 253.

Where, on a trial for homicide, the evidence for the state showed a cold-blooded killing, and accused's connection therewith was shown by the testimony of an accomplice, which was corroborated, the verdict could not be disturbed, though accused's testimony tended somewhat persuasively to show that the killing was by a third person. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 75.

In a prosecution for homicide, evidence held to sustain a conviction of murder pursuant to a conspiracy to organize a company in Texas to invade Mexico and to prevent decedent from giving information concerning the conspirators' unlawful purpose. Serrato v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 1133.

One who has pleaded guilty, can not be convicted under the plea if the evidence to determine his punishment shows that he acted in self-defense. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 975.

37. Charge.—See C. C. P. art. 735 et seq.

Evidence held to raise issue of murder. Edwards v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 277; Windham v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 661; Stewart v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1077.

The court should apply the law of threats, like any other law of the case, directly to the issues raised by the testimony. Askew v. State, 59 App. 152, 127 S. W. 1037. And see Bussey v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 873.

See facts which were held to justify a charge to the effect that if one kills another by beating in a cruel and unusual manner, it is murder with express malice although he did not intend to kill. Duebbe v. State, 1 App. 159.

It is never safe to depart from established authorities in giving instructions. With reference to murder, the law has been so fully settled that the courts can not err if they but employ in their charges the language of standard cases. Hunt v. State, 7 App. 212.

Deceased was an officer, but there was no evidence tending to show that he was attempting to arrest defendant at the time of the killing, a charge predicated upon such theory was erroneous. Murphy v. State, 36 App. 24, 35 S. W. 174.

When indictment charges the killing with malice aforethought, and the crime was committed in the perpetration of robbery, it is proper to define robbery. Wilkins v. State, 35 App. 525, 34 S. W. 627.

Charge held sufficient as to identification of defendants. Polk v. State, 35 App. 495, 34 S. W. 633.

When there is no evidence tending to show either manslaughter or justifiable homicide they need not be defined in the charge. Brittain v. State, 35 App. 406, 37 S. W. 758.

In the absence of evidence tending to show coercion, an instruction that if defendant poisoned her child at the persuasion of her mother it is no excuse; held, correct. Carlisle v. State, 37 App. 108, 38 S. W. 991.

Where a person in an attempt to kill one, accidentally kills another, a general charge on implied malice is not sufficient; a charge applicable to the particular facts should be given. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 79.

Charge held to be applicable and to sufficiently submit the theory of accused. Bass v. State, 59 App. 186, 127 S. W. 1020.

A charge that if accused "in a sudden transport of passion," aroused without adequate cause, and not in defense of himself against an unlawful attack, shot and killed decedent with malice aforethought, he was guilty of "murder in the second degree," was sufficient, though it was unnecessary to use the phrase "sudden transport of passion" or "with malice aforethought." Pratt v. State, 59 App. 635, 129 S. W. 364.

A charge that, if one in the perpetration of or in the attempt to perpetrate a robbery upon another shall take the life of such other, he shall be guilty of murder, and that a murder committed under such circumstances is per se murder of the first degree, was erroneous as authorizing a conviction for murder in the first degree without finding the existence of malice. Grant v. State, 60 App. 358, 132 S. W. 350.

Under the facts held that a refusal to charge that, if the killing occurred, not on a previously formed design, but on a subsequently formed design, they should attribute it to the latter, and not to the original, design was error. Mayhew v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 229, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 671.

A charge that if accused killed decedent as alleged he should be convicted of murder is erroneous as authorizing a conviction whether the killing was upon malice, or in self-defense, or constituted manslaughter under adequate cause. Kincaid v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 597.

The words "mitigate, excuse or justify," have a well-understood meaning, and, in the absence of a request, it is not necessary for the court to define them. Kelly v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 304.

Charge held erroneous as authorizing a conviction, though defendant may have acted in self-defense, or been guilty of no higher offense than manslaughter, or unintentional killing. McDowell v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1049.

An instruction held not an insufficient charge on murder in the first degree, though failing to inform the jury that the killing must be unlawful, being correct in other particulars. Crutchfield v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1053.

Charge held sufficient. Crutchfield v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1053.

In a homicide case, the court in defining murder in the second degree need not define words "tend to mitigate, excuse or justify the acts" used therein, where it also charges fully on manslaughter and self-defense. Hendricks v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1005.

A charge that clearly required the jury to believe beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant did not kill decedent in self-defense, but with express malice aforethought, sufficiently covered first and second degree murder. Powdrill v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 231.

Malice will not be implied from all killings, viz., manslaughter and negligent homicide; consequently, in a prosecution for homicide where there was evidence tending to reduce the crime to manslaughter, a charge that malice will be implied from an unlawful killing is improper. Garcia v. State, 70 App. 485, 156 S. W. 939.

Where the court, in a homicide case, after defining the different degrees of homicide, required the jury to find the facts, constituting each degree, to exist beyond a reasonable doubt, and to give the defendant the benefit of a reasonable doubt between the different degrees, it was not error to fail to charge the negative of the facts constituting each degree. Borders v. State, 72 App. 135, 161 S. W. 483.

In the trial for murder, defendant was entitled to a charge on the degrees of murder as they existed under the law in force when the offense was committed, though between such time and the trial the degrees had been changed by statute. James v. State, 72 App. 457, 163 S. W. 61.

Where defendant, in a prosecution for murder, shot deceased, while attempting to recover mules that had strayed into an inclosed field belonging to deceased, and which deceased was seeking to impound, an instruction that the running at large of stock was prohibited, and that if defendant's mules had entered inclosed lands leased by deceased, without his consent, deceased had a lawful right to impound them, was not improper as being immaterial. Barnett v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 580.

An indictment alleged that R. unlawfully and with malice killed A., that accused before the killing unlawfully and with malice advised, commanded, and encouraged R. to kill M., and promised a reward and favor to him for killing M., and that R. while attempting to kill M. killed deceased, believing that he was shooting at M. and thereby "by mistake" killed deceased. The court charged correctly as to murder, malice, etc., and then charged that if R., with malice towards M. and with intent to kill him, shot and killed deceased, believing that deceased was M., and if accused prior to the commission of the offense with malice towards M. encouraged and promised a reward to R. to kill M. and R. was thereby induced to try to kill M., but, in trying to kill him, shot and killed deceased, believing that he was M., accused should be found guilty of murder in the second degree. The court further charged that if the jury believed or had a reasonable doubt that R., when he shot and killed deceased, knew or believed that it was some one other than M., they should find accused not guilty, though they believed beyond a reasonable doubt that accused encouraged and offered R. a reward to kill M. Held, that, though the charge did not use the word "mistake," when read as a whole it did not authorize a conviction on proof of less or different facts than those alleged. Cooper v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 975.

For a sufficient charge upon express malice, see Jordan v. State, 10 Tex. 479; McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Farrer v. State, 42 Tex. 271; Plasters v. State, 1 App. 673; Cox v. State, 5 App. 493.

For other decisions discussing charges upon implied malice, see Perry v. State, 44 Tex. 473; Reynolds v. State, 14 App. 427; Turner v. State, 16 App. 378; Stanley v. State, Id. 392; Miles v. State, 18 App. 156; Neyland v. State, 13 App. 536; Ellison v. State, 12 App. 557; Taylor v. State, 13 App. 184; Turner v. State, 16 App. 379; Morgan v. State, 16 App. 593; Smith v. State, 19 App. 95; Whitaker v. State, 12 App. 436.

Under the former law it was essential to explain the term implied malice, and to distinguish this species of malice from express malice. Jones v. State, 5 App. 397; Pharr v. State, 7 App. 472; Villareal v. State, 26 Tex. 107; Shrivers v. State, 7 App. 450.

The term is sufficiently expounded to the jury by a charge which without critical refinement, substantially explains its legal, in contradistinction to its ordinary signification. If the charge limits the meaning of the term to hatred, ill-will, or hostility, the error is not to the prejudice, but to the advantage of the defendant. Harris v. State, 8 App. 90.

For a sufficient charge explaining the term, see Harris v. State, 8 App. 90; McKinney v. State, Id. 626; Bramlette v. State, 21 App. 611, 2 S. W. 765, 57 Am. Rep. 622.

For a sufficient explanation of implied malice, see Harris v. State, 8 App. 90; Hubby v. State, Id. 597; Douglass v. State, Id. 520; Brown v. State, 4 App. 275; Sharp v. State, 6 App. 650.

For defective explanations of the term, see Pickens v. State, 13 App. 353; Hayes v. State, 14 App. 330.

That express malice may be evidenced by external circumstances, is a part of its definition, and a charge to that effect is not objectionable as being upon the weight of evidence. Sharpe v. State, 17 App. 486; Douglass v. State, 8 App. 520.

Where the court charges fully on the necessity of malice to constitute murder, failure to charge on malice in each instruction is not error. White v. State, 34 App. 153, 29 S. W. 1094.

In defining "sedate and deliberate" it is error to charge that "it does not mean that the mind must be absolutely unruddled." Gaines v. State (Cr. App.) 53 S. W. 626.

A general definition of malice aforethought is usually sufficient. Simmons v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 550.

Where accused claimed that the killing was accidental, a charge which required the jury to believe that accused fired his gun with intent to kill, and that he did unlawfully and with implied malice shoot and thereby kill deceased, sufficiently charges on the issue of intent to kill. Vick v. State, 71 App. 50, 159 S. W. 50.

Though the degrees of murder have been abolished, it is not error to define express and implied malice. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 360.

Art. 1141. Punishment.—The punishment for murder shall be death or confinement in the penitentiary for life or for any terms of years not less than five. [Id.]

See note under preceding article.

Punishment, and assessment thereof.—The question of what penalty shall be inflicted is peculiarly the province of the jury under the guidance of the trial court. Calderon v. State, 63 App. 639, 141 S. W. 251.

The court on appeal may not disturb the punishment assessed by the jury within its discretion conferred by law, on the ground that it is excessive. Villa v. State, 63 App. 537, 141 S. W. 104.

The death penalty may be assessed for murder committed upon implied malice, as well as upon express malice, where the evidence, from the circumstances attendant upon the crime, authorizes the infliction of so severe a punishment. Subia v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 466; Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 162 S. W. 843.

The infliction of the death penalty for homicide is authorized under the existing law. Gomez v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 711.

Under this law the jury may assess the death penalty where the evidence shows beyond a reasonable doubt an unlawful killing with malice aforethought, whether the malice is expressed or implied, and the court may not fix the punishment. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1042.

Art. 1143. [713] Evidence of threats and deceased's character admissible, when.—Where a defendant accused of murder seeks to justify himself on the ground of threats against his own life, he may be permitted to introduce evidence of the threats made, but the same shall not be regarded as affording a justification for the offense, unless it be shown that, at the time of the homicide, the person killed by some act then done manifested an intention to execute the threat so made. In every instance where proof of threats has been made, it shall be competent to introduce evidence of the general character of the deceased. Such evidence shall extend only to an inquiry as to whether the deceased was a man of violent or dangerous character, or a man of kind and inoffensive disposition, or whether he was such a person as might reasonably be expected to execute a threat made. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 174.]

Threats by deceased.—When accused seeks to justify the homicide on the ground of threats against his own life, he is permitted to introduce evidence of such threats, whether communicated to him or not, but no threats will afford justification unless it be shown that at the time of the homicide, the person killed, by some act then done, manifested an intention to execute the threats so made. Logan v. State, 17 App. 50; Allen v. State, 17 App. 637; Miles v. State, 18 App. 156; Thomas v. State, 11 App. 315; Wall v. State, 18 Tex. 682, 70 Am. Dec. 302; *Johnson v. The exclusion of testimony to prove threats made by the deceased will not be error when the evidence in the case shows that such threats could not have afforded justification for the homicide. Penland v. State, 19 App. 365; Ex parte Mosby, 31 Tex. 566, 98 Am. Dec. 547.

Where a defendant waylaid and killed the deceased, evidence of previous threats by the deceased against the defendant, coupled with a movement on his part at the time of the killing, as if to draw a weapon, was held to be wholly immaterial. Ex parte Mosby, 31 Tex. 566, 98 Am. Dec. 547.

The mere expression of an opinion by the deceased that the accused was pursuing a line of conduct which would endanger and cost him his life, was held to be not a threat against the life of the accused. Myers v. State, 33 Tex. 525.

It is not practicable to fix on what the act manifesting the intention of the deceased to execute his threats shall be; but it must be some act reasonably calculated to induce the belief that the threatened attack has then commenced, to be then executed, and not a mere act of preparation to execute the threats at some other period of time, either speedy or remote. Irwin v. State, 43 Tex. 236.

The defendant, for the purpose of showing that his apprehension of danger was reasonable, is entitled to lay before the jury all circumstances which would go to show the character of the threats, the intention with which they were made, and the grounds of fear on which the defendant acted, and hence evidence of previous affrays and difficulties with the deceased, and of previous attacks, and threats made by him are admissible for the defendant. Russell v. State, 11 App. 238.

It is immaterial to the defendant's right to act upon the threat, whether it was seriously made or not, if some act was done by the deceased, which, viewed in the light of the threat, rendered it reasonable for the defendant to infer that the deceased was about to execute the threat, and the defendant did not know that the threat was not seriously made. Wilson v. State, 18 App. 576.

Where evidence of threats could not possibly benefit the defendant, it is not error to reject it. Penland v. State, 19 App. 365; Allen v. State, 17 App. 637; Howard v. State, 23 App. 265, 5 S. W. 231.

Proof of deadly threats made by the deceased against the accused, and that the deceased was a violent and dangerous character, and that the threats and the character of the deceased were known to the accused at the time of the homicide, can afford no justification for homicide without proof that, at the time of the homicide, the deceased did some act indicating a present intention to kill the accused, or do him serious bodily harm. Neither the evidence adduced on the trial nor that foreshadowed in the application for continuance laid a predicate for proof of threats in this case, wherefore a continuance was properly refused. Brooks v. State, 24 App. 274, 5 S. W. 852.

Under a proper construction of this statute, the act done must manifest the immediate intention to execute the threat so made. It was not error, therefore, that in his charge upon this subject the trial judge interpolated the word "immediate" to qualify "intention." See the opinion in extenso on the question. Lynch v. State, 24 App. 350, 6 S. W. 190, 5 Am. St. Rep. 888.

If one accused of culpable homicide has been threatened by the deceased with death or serious bodily injury, and such threat has, prior to the homicide, been communicated to the defendant, and at the time of the homicide the deceased by any act manifested an intention to execute such threat, the defendant would be authorized to act upon appearances in resorting to any means to protect himself, and a killing under such circumstances would be justifiable homicide. In view of the proof in this case, the failure of the trial court to give this rule in charge to the jury was error. Alexander v. State, 25 App. 260, 7 S. W. 867, 8 Am. St. Rep. 438. And see Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 721.

The defendant having introduced evidence of threats against his life, uttered by the deceased, a short time before the homicide, the state, over defendant's objection, was permitted to prove that, about a year before the homicide, the defendant told a witness that the "threats of John Collier (deceased) did not amount to any more than those of an old woman." Held, that objection to this proof was properly overruled. Miller v. State, 27 App. 63, 10 S. W. 445.

Uncommunicated threats are mainly admissible in evidence in case of doubt as to who commenced the difficulty, and who began the attack. Pitts v. State, 29 App. 374, 16 S. W. 189; Stewart v. State, 36 App. 130, 35 S. W. 985; McMillan v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1174; Kirklin v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1016; Bankston v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 1068.

That deceased had said he intended to have carnal intercourse with a woman defendant afterward married is too remote to be admitted in evidence. Cockerell v. State, 32 App. 585, 25 S. W. 421.

That just before the homicide defendant was told of threats made against him by deceased is admissible. Reeves v. State, 34 App. 483, 31 S. W. 382.

That deceased had some time previous to the killing tried to get defendant to help him kill a man, is inadmissible. Ryan v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 288.

Where deceased had made threats and had assaulted defendant before the killing, it was error to exclude evidence that defendant had sent a friend to deceased to get him to withdraw his threats and agree not to harm defendant, it being shown that a peace bond would not have any effect. Schauer v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 251.

Where appellant testified that the deceased attacked him and that he acted in self-defense, evidence of a conspiracy to which deceased belonged, and of threats made by the conspirators should have been admitted. Hall v. State, 42 App. 444, 60 S. W. 770.

Threats of third persons to have deceased kill accused are inadmissible, unless connection is shown between such persons and deceased, or there is some proof of conspiracy between them, or some evidence of their acting together therein. Pol-lard v. State, 58 App. 299, 125 S. W. 390.

Where threats alleged to have been made by decedent were communicated to and believed by accused, accused had the legal right to act on the communicated threats, and the fact that the threats were not made did not affect accused's legal right. Lundy v. State, 59 App. 131, 127 S. W. 1032.

The conduct of decedent at the time of the killing, to justify accused on the ground of threats made by decedent, must be such as to raise in the mind of accused the belief that decedent was about to carry the threats into execution. Payton v. State, 60 App. 475, 132 S. W. 127.

One is not limited in his right to "repel force with force." Duke v. State, 61 App. 19, 133 S. W. 432.

Where there was evidence that decedent intended to compel accused to leave the county because the latter killed his dog, evidence was admissible that accused was much alarmed and feared decedent, and contemplated leaving the county to avoid being injured by decedent. Jackson v. State, 63 App. 351, 139 S. W. 1156.

Where accused knew of the threats made by deceased and of the cause of the threats prior to the homicide, evidence of the reason for the threats was admissible. Treadway v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 655.

Where the deceased has made threats against the accused, his subsequent declarations of pacific intent, not communicated to the accused, are not admissible. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 228.

Threats of themselves alone will not justify a killing, but if deceased raised from his seat with a knife, and defendant thought he was going to carry into effect previous threats to kill him, the right of self-defense arose. Kelly v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 304.

Threats made by one against another with the intention of provoking a difficulty on that occasion would not justify the other in killing him on another and different occasion before an act is done or word spoken. Kelly v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 304.

Where accused, relying on self-defense, had been informed of the fact that his life had been threatened by decedent, and he acted on that information when firing the fatal shot, the jury must view the case from his standpoint, and not from the standpoint as to whether the threats were or were not made. Robbins v. State, 70 App. 52, 155 S. W. 936.

Where a defendant has testified that the deceased was approaching her with a knife, saying that he was going to kill her, evidence of recent attempts by the deceased to kill or inflict serious injury upon her was admissible as bearing on her good faith in claiming that she then feared she would be killed. Clay v. State, 70 App. 451, 157 S. W. 164.

Threats by deceased to take accused's life were properly admitted as tending to shed light on his actions; there being a sharp conflict as to who was the aggressor. Flores v. State, 70 App. 232, 162 S. W. 883.

Where there was a sharp conflict as to which party was the aggressor, and accused introduced proof that deceased had threatened to take his life, accused's remarks shortly before the killing, showing ill will, and that accused was not afraid, were properly admitted. Flores v. State, 72 App. 232, 162 S. W. 883.

Where accused's evidence of communicated threats is denied, the question is whether or not accused had been told that threats had been made by deceased against him and he so believed, and not whether the threats had actually been made. Eads v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 145.

Threats by deceased, whether communicated to defendant or not, are admissible to explain the acts and conduct of the deceased at the time of the homicide. Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 721.

As to conditional threats, see Gilleland v. State, 44 Tex. 356; Knowles v. State, 31 App. 383, 20 S. W. 829; Slade v. State, 29 App. 381, 16 S. W. 253.

For other decisions on the subject of threats in murder cases, see Allen v. State, 24 App. 216, 6 S. W. 187; Tillery v. State, 24 App. 251, 5 S. W. 842, 5 Am. St. Rep. 882; Howard v. State, 25 App. 686, 8 S. W. 929; Ball v. State, 29 App. 107, 14 S. W. 1012; Bonner v. State, 29 App. 223, 15 S. W. 821. And see Reed v. State, 32 App. 25, 22 S. W. 22; Jennings v. State, 60 App. 421, 132 S. W. 473; Kemper v. State, 63 App. 1, 138 S. W. 1025; McMillan v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 1174; Lamb v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1158.

Where evidence was admitted that deceased had said he was going to kill defendant, which threats were communicated to defendant, it was error to refuse to permit evidence that deceased at the same time said it would not be the first man he had killed, as he had killed one in Oklahoma. Hammons v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 493.

Defendant having introduced evidence of uncommunicated threats of deceased against him, as bearing on the acts and conduct of deceased at the time of the homicide, as permissible where self-defense is in issue, the state, to rebut such evidence, may introduce evidence of statements of deceased, uncommunicated to defendant, made after the threats, and just before the homicide, to show a changed state of mind. Howe v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 497.

— Threats against others.—It is not permissible to prove threats made by deceased against another person than the defendant. Drake v. State, 5 App. 649; Talbert v. State, 8 App. 316. But see Slade v. State, 29 App. 381, 16 S. W. 253.

Threats by the deceased against some other person than the defendant can not justify the homicide. Talbert v. State, 8 App. 316.

Testimony as to a conversation with decedent some 30 minutes before the killing, in which he made threats against accused's brother, but did not mention accused, was not admissible. Spencer v. State, 59 App. 217, 128 S. W. 118.

Threats by deceased against one other than accused are inadmissible, where accused had never heard of any such threats. Echols v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 786.

Evidence of threats of the deceased that he would kill one jointly charged with the defendant with killing, deceased was not admissible on the trial of defendant alone; it not being shown that he had knowledge of such threats. Hammons v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 493.

Threats by assaulted party.—The rules governing the admissibility of threats made by deceased, and of the character of the deceased, are also applicable in prosecutions for assault with intent to murder. Bingham v. State, 6 App. 169; Smith v. State, 55 App. 628, 118 S. W. 146; Bussey v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 873.

On proof of threats by the prosecutor, the state may prove his general good reputation for peace. Darnell v. State, 58 App. 585, 126 S. W. 1122; Rhea v. State, 37 App. 138, 38 S. W. 1012, following Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242.

The character of the injured party, and threats made by him, are immaterial, unless they might have influenced the defendant's act. Henderson v. State, 12 Tex. 525; Murray v. State, 36 Tex. 642.

General reputation of prosecutor for being a dangerous man, at a time subsequent to time of alleged offense, not admissible. Burks v. State, 40 App. 170, 49 S. W. 389.

Threats against defendant's life by prosecutor may be proved, but such proof is not a justification unless prosecutor by some act manifested an intent to execute the threats. Darnell v. State, 58 App. 585, 126 S. W. 1122.

Character of deceased or person assaulted.—It is never competent for the prosecution in the first instance to prove that the person slain was of good or peaceable character. Such evidence, however, may be introduced by the prosecution in rebuttal, when the opposite has been testified to in behalf of the defense or where the defendant seeks to justify the homicide on the ground of threats made by the deceased. Russell v. State, 11 App. 288; Graves v. State, 14 App. 113; Irwin v. State, 43 Tex. 236; Brooks v. State, 24 App. 274, 5 S. W. 852; Johnson v. State, 28 App. 17, 11 S. W. 667; Childers v. State, 30 App. 160, 16 S. W. 903, 28 Am. St. Rep. 899; Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 243; Dorsey v. State, 34 Tex. 651; Roberts v. State, 5 App. 141; Williams v. State, 14 App. 102, 46 Am. Rep. 237; Moore v. State, 15 App. 1; Branch v. State, Id. 96; Creswell v. State, 14 App. 7; Miers v. State, 34 App. 161, 29 S. W. 1074, 53 Am. St. Rep. 705; Cornelius v. State, 54 App. 173, 112 S. W. 1050; Arrwine v. State, 50 App. 477, 99 S. W. 97; Hunter v. State, 54 App. 224, 114 S. W. 124, 130 Am. St. Rep. 887; Nelson v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 108; Jirou v. State, 53 App. 18, 108 S. W. 656; Canon v. State, 59 App. 398, 128 S. W. 141; Blocker v. State, 61 App. 413, 135 S. W. 130; Edwards v. State, 61 App. 307, 135 S. W. 540; Williams v. State, 61 App. 356, 136 S. W. 771; Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 763; Hysaw v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 941; Wilson v. State, 70 App. 355, 156 S. W. 1185.

Where there is evidence tending to show that in committing the homicide the defendant acted in self-defense, or under the reasonable apprehension that his life was in danger, or that he was in danger of some serious bodily harm, by reason of some act of deceased, then done, indicating an intention to kill or do serious bodily harm, or that he acted under the impulse of passion, without deliberation, he is entitled to prove, in explanation, extenuation, or justification of his acts, the general character of the deceased, as being that of a violent and dangerous man, or his general character in any other respect which would tend to determine the grade of the homicide by showing the intent actuating the defendant in its commission. Williams v. State, 14 App. 102, 46 Am. Rep. 237; Moore v. State, 15 App. 1. Such evidence is only admissible when it is shown that at the time of the homicide the deceased did some act indicating his purpose then to take the life of the defendant, or do him serious bodily harm. Creswell v. State, 14 App. 1; Moore v. State, 15 App. 1; Stevens v. State, 1 App. 591; Roberts v. State, 5 App. 141; Hudson v. State, 6 App. 565, 32 Am. Rep. 593; Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242; Irwin v. State, Id. 236; Evers v. State, 31 App. 318, 20 S. W. 744, 18 L. R. A. 421, 37 Am. St. Rep. 811. Or when the circumstances of the case raise a doubt as to whether the defendant committed the homicide in self-defense. West v. State, 18 App. 640; Creswell v. State, 14 App. 1.

Evidence of the details of deceased's difficulties with others is inadmissible. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733; Flores v. State, 72 App. 232, 162 S. W. 883; Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 721; Echols v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 786.

It is not competent for the defendant to prove that the general character of the deceased for honesty was bad. Plasters v. State, 1 App. 673.

The defense having proved that deceased was a man of violent and dangerous character, and the state having adduced contrary evidence, it was held that the defendant was entitled to introduce the records of another court to show that the deceased had at one time been convicted of manslaughter. Brunet v. State, 12 App. 521.

If the character of the deceased could not have affected the conduct of the defendant, evidence to prove such character is inadmissible. Henderson v. State, 12 Tex. 525; Grissom v. State, 8 App. 386.

An inquiry as to character must be limited to the general reputation of the deceased in the community of his residence, or where he is best known, and the witness must speak from this knowledge of his general character, and not from his own individual opinion. Brownlee v. State, 13 App. 255; Marshall v. State, 5 App. 273; Roach v. State, 41 Tex. 261; Spangler v. State, 41 App. 424, 55 S. W. 328.

The general character referred to means the general character of the deceased as a dangerous and violent man, or his general character in any other respect that would tend to determine the grade of the homicide by showing the intent actuating the defendant in its commission. Williams v. State, 14 App. 102, 46 Am. Rep. 237.

The rule laid down in Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242, defining the circumstances under which proof of the general character of the deceased may be put in evidence by a defendant upon a trial for murder, cannot be restricted to the one act of seemingly attempting to draw a pistol or other weapon. The reason of the rule applies with equal force to any act reasonably indicating a present purpose on the part of the deceased to kill, or do some serious bodily injury to the defendant. Branch v. State, 15 App. 96.

The defendant having proved acts of the deceased at the time of the homicide reasonably indicating danger to the defendant, and having also shown that the deceased was a violent, dangerous man, it was held that the defendant was entitled to further prove that the deceased carried deadly weapons about his person. Lilly v. State, 20 App. 1. See, also, Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242.

Independent of general reputation as to the character of the deceased, the defendant has the right to prove that he had received information of deceased's character from other sources. Childers v. State, 30 App. 160, 16 S. W. 903, 28 Am. St. Rep. 899. And see, also, on the subject, Brooks v. State, 24 App. 274, 5 S. W. 852; Johnson v. State, 28 App. 17, 11 S. W. 667; Walker v. State, 28 App. 503, 13 S. W. 860.

Evidence of the general reputation of deceased, acquired after the homicide, held, properly excluded. Skaggs v. State, 31 App. 563, 21 S. W. 257.

To show that he drew his pistol in self-defense, a witness testified that he knew defendant to be a professional pugilist and the champion of his class at the time defendant made the assault. Warren v. State, 31 App. 573, 21 S. W. 680.

Proof of general reputation of deceased and that defendant knew of such reputation is admissible. Jones v. State, 38 App. 87, 40 S. W. 807, 41 S. W. 638.

Evidence that deceased was not in the habit of carrying pistol or of using profane language not admissible. McCandless v. State, 42 App. 58, 57 S. W. 672.

It is not admissible to show deceased's character by isolated facts. Nelson v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 108.

After proof of communicated threats, the State may prove the good character of deceased, but not so as to uncommunicated threats. Arnwine v. State, 50 App. 254, 96 S. W. 4.

Where there is evidence of threats made by deceased and communicated to defendant, and evidence tending to show justification on part of defendant, testimony of character is admissible on either side. Menefee v. State, 50 App. 249, 97 S. W. 487.

There is no error in excluding evidence not showing of what offense deceased had been convicted, or that it was one bearing on his character for peace or violence. Pollard v. State, 58 App. 299, 125 S. W. 390.

The general character of deceased or the injured person may be proved, to show that defendant was justified in believing himself in danger of losing his life or of sustaining serious bodily injury from deceased or the injured person. Daniels v. State, 58 App. 569, 126 S. W. 1153.

Accused testified that decedent attacked him without excuse, and swore he would cut him, and also testified that decedent had told him of how he had used his knife in various difficulties. Held, that accused could prove that decedent had assaulted others without apparent excuse, and on the morning of the killing had without excuse attacked two others with a knife. Spencer v. State, 59 App. 217, 128 S. W. 118.

Where there was no evidence showing that decedent was doing anything when he was killed, testimony as to decedent's reputation as a quarrelsome and violent man was offered, such testimony was properly excluded. Spencer v. State, 59 App. 217, 128 S. W. 118.

It was proper to exclude showing by one accused of assault with intent to murder that the assaulted person was quarrelsome and overbearing in his manner, turbulent, and dictatorial, especially in church matters; accused being permitted to prove the assaulted person's general reputation, and to show that he had more trouble than the average man, etc. York v. State, 64 App. 153, 142 S. W. 8.

In a prosecution for assault to murder a police officer, defendant was entitled to prove the officer's general reputation as being a violent and dangerous man, but could not prove that the officer had assaulted other parties at various times, and had killed one man within the preceding five years, for which he had never been indicted. Lacoume v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 626.

Evidence of a previous difficulty, in which deceased had committed a violent assault on another, and of which it was not shown defendant had any knowledge, was inadmissible. Lubbock v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 258.

Accused may show that he knew of his personal knowledge and from hearsay of several attacks made by decedent on third persons and that he had almost killed a person, to explain his condition of mind at the time of the homicide. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 699.

Where decedent and accused had quarrels and fights, and accused, on decedent getting the best of it, cut decedent with a pocketknife, inflicting fatal wounds, and it was not shown that decedent had made any threats against accused, evidence of decedent's good reputation as a peaceable and law-abiding man was inadmissible. Dawson v. State, 70 App. 8, 155 S. W. 266.

Evidence that deceased had been previously seen to carry a pistol, but not on the day or at the time of the alleged homicide, was inadmissible. Hysaw v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 941.

Isolated acts showing that deceased is a dangerous man are inadmissible, in the absence of proof of knowledge thereof on the part of accused at the time of or prior to the difficulty. Smith v. State, 70 App. 62, 156 S. W. 214. But see Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 310.

Where accused claimed that he mistook deceased for A., with whom he had had trouble and for whom he had been warned to look out as he was armed and likely to kill him, the state was properly permitted to prove that A.'s reputation as a peaceable law-abiding citizen was good. Wilson v. State, 70 App. 355, 156 S. W. 1185.

Evidence of knowledge or information brought home to accused concerning the prior difficulty between his brothers and deceased held admissible. Sorrell v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 209.

Where, there was no offer to prove that, prior to the killing, decedent's wife had informed accused that her husband had served a two-year term in the penitentiary, accused was not entitled to prove such fact by decedent's wife. Shaw v. State, 72 App. 114, 161 S. W. 963.

Where accused, for the purpose of showing that deceased, a deputy sheriff, was a violent and dangerous man, introduced testimony that on one occasion he assaulted a witness, the state was properly permitted to prove that the witness was drunk and disorderly, that deceased acted simply as an officer in trying to quiet him. Flores v. State, 72 App. 232, 162 S. W. 883.

Where the defense was permitted to prove a statement by deceased that he would break accused's neck, though not communicated to accused, the state was properly permitted to show deceased's reputation as a peaceable, law-abiding citizen. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 964.

Where defendant claimed that he shot deceased in self-defense, he was entitled to show that deceased was a violent and dangerous man by proof of his general reputation, but if defendant's state of mind at the time of the killing was also in issue, he might then show specific communicated acts of violence on deceased's part. Bullock v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 196.

Where accused is entitled to show specific communicated acts of violence on deceased's part, the state may inquire into particulars of such acts to show that deceased was justified, and to rebut the claim that deceased was a violent and dangerous person. Bullock v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 196; Hysaw v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 941.

But where evidence of decedent's acts is confined to those committed at the very time of the killing, which are res gestae thereof, and they show him to be a violent and dangerous man, the state cannot rebut such evidence by proof of his reputation in those respects. Bullock v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 196.

The state may rebut evidence that deceased had been indicted for murder by showing that he was acquitted, and that he did not participate in the killing, although the details of the prosecution are inadmissible. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733.

Where accused claimed that he killed in self-defense, and testified that because of his knowledge of the numerous difficulties in which deceased had been engaged he regarded him as a dangerous man, the state may introduce evidence to show deceased's general reputation was that of a peaceable, law-abiding citizen. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, where the defendant attacked the character of deceased as a peaceable citizen by testifying that certain persons told him that deceased was as bad a man as there was in that neck of the woods and would need to be watched, evidence supporting the character of deceased was admissible on behalf of the state. Ghent v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 566.

In a prosecution for murder, where the wife of deceased denied on cross-examination that she had told defendant that deceased was of a violent disposition, and that she at one time had kept him from killing her father, and defendant and his family testified that she had so told them, evidence by the father in rebuttal thereof was admissible. Barnett v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 580.

Where defendant, in a prosecution for murder, has introduced evidence that deceased had been engaged in difficulties in another state, as bearing on his character and disposition, evidence as to his general reputation in such other state is admissible in rebuttal. Barnett v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 580.

In a prosecution for murder, where defendant has pleaded self-defense and defense of his wife, based on threats, the general character of deceased as a violent and dangerous man, or a man of kind and inoffensive disposition, is admissible. Barnett v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 580.

In a prosecution for murder, after the introduction of evidence that deceased had made threats against defendant, proof of the general reputation of deceased as a peaceful and law-abiding citizen was admissible. Barnett v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 582.

Charge.—Where the issue of threats of deceased is raised the court should charge this article. Knight v. State, 55 App. 243, 116 S. W. 62; Armsworthy v. State, 48 App. 413, 88 S. W. 217.

The charge of the court is erroneous in that the instruction relating to the threats uttered by the deceased against the accused is disconnected from that portion of the charge which relates to self-defense, whereas it should have formed a part of the instruction on the law of self-defense, and should have been given in immediate connection with that issue. See the opinion in extenso on the subject. Tillery v. State, 24 App. 251, 5 S. W. 842, 5 Am. St. Rep. 582; Mitchell v. State, 50 App. 180, 96 S. W. 43; Burnam v. State, 61 App. 51, 133 S. W. 1045; Ayers v. State, 62 App. 428, 137 S. W. 1146; Mayhew v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 229, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 671; Maclin v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 951; Ware v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1074. See, also, Lyons v. State, 71 App. 159, 159 S. W. 1070.

Where the only threats made were made during the difficulty, it was not necessary to charge on the law of threats. Wilson v. State, 71 App. 399, 160 S. W. 83; Belcher v. State, 71 App. 646, 161 S. W. 459; Francis v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 705.

It was held error to instruct the jury that there must have been "an effort, or demonstration to execute the threats" by the deceased in order to justify the defendant's action. Miles v. State, 18 App. 156.

Inasmuch as the so-called threat in this case was both conditional and had never been communicated to the defendant at the time of the homicide, the court properly refused to charge on threats. Knowles v. State, 31 App. 383, 20 S. W. 829.

Instructions as to the consideration to be given to uncommunicated threats, held proper. Trotter v. State, 37 App. 468, 36 S. W. 278.

Where charge upon threats is given it should be in affirmative form and not negative. Sebastian v. State, 42 App. 84, 57 S. W. 821.

It is error for charge to limit consideration of threats communicated to accused for the purpose of ascertaining the intent of deceased. Sebastian v. State, 42 App. 84, 57 S. W. 821.

The law does not define what "overt act" is necessary, and it is error for the court to limit the right of self-defense to any particular act of the deceased. If threats enter into the question an appropriate charge must be given presenting that phase, and the law does not require an actual attempt to execute the threat, before the demonstration to execute the threat can be relied upon. Any act of the deceased which the accused may have believed evidenced an intention to carry his threats into execution would be basis for his action on the theory of self-defense. Swain v. State, 48 App. 98, 86 S. W. 338; Graves v. State, 58 App. 42, 124 S. W. 676.

A charge which says: Some overt act which was calculated to induce the belief and which did induce the belief in the mind of the accused, reviewing the facts from the defendant's standpoint at the time, etc., was improper. It is best to follow the language of the statute and not try to improve on it. The jury might not have understood what an overt act meant. Clark v. State, 51 App. 519, 102 S. W. 1138.

Where just immediately before the killing deceased said, in reply to defendant's question whether he was drunk or crazy, that if defendant even thought he was drunk or crazy he would kill him, it is not required that the court charge threats under this article. Rice v. State, 51 App. 255, 103 S. W. 1156.

It is error for the court to charge that the jury must believe in the defendant's reasonableness of belief that deceased intended to inflict death or serious bodily injury, and to consider the strength of the parties and any real or apparent attempt of deceased to draw or use a knife or other deadly weapon before he could take advantage of this statute. The court should not go beyond the words of the statute. Lockhart v. State, 53 App. 589, 111 S. W. 1024.

Where there was evidence of threats before the killing, but not communicated to defendant, and evidence of threats at time of killing, there was no need to give substance of this article in charge to jury. Dobbs v. State, 54 App. 550, 113 S. W. 925.

Under this article charge in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder that if the party assaulted had made threats against the life of defendant, and when they met made a movement with his right hand as if to draw a weapon and used threatening language toward the defendant, causing him to have reasonable apprehension of death or serious bodily injury at the hands of the party assaulted, defendant had a right to use all necessary force to defend himself, was erroneous, since the statute does not define what acts shall justify the threatened party in using force to defend himself, and the court is not authorized to do so. Graves v. State, 58 App. 42, 124 S. W. 676.

Charge on threats should apply the law of threats to serious bodily injury as well as the law of threats to take life. Lundy v. State, 59 App. 131, 127 S. W. 1032.

Where the evidence of threats was confined to threats by decedent to kill accused or his son, a charge on self-defense, limiting the evidence to threats to kill accused or his son, as affecting the right of self-defense, was proper. Owens v. State, 63 App. 633, 141 S. W. 530.

It was not error to omit to instruct on uncommunicated threats, where it became an unimportant issue as to who began the difficulty, on proof that decedent abandoned it, and was shot in the back while leaving the place. Lancaster v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 307.

Refusal to charge that threats by deceased not communicated to accused should be considered held proper. Carver v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 746.

Where accused provoked the conflict a refusal to charge on the effect of uncommunicated threats was harmless. Carver v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 746.

It was proper to refuse to instruct that, to excuse accused's acts, it was not necessary that any threats by decedent were seriously made, if accused deemed them serious, where all threats testified to were seriously made, if made. Burnam v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 757.

Where accused testified to threats by deceased made to him personally and others communicated to him by third persons, it was proper for the court to present the question of threats from both viewpoints. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 763.

Where there is no pertinent or forcible evidence on the question of uncommunicated threats, and the evidence, if any, is weak, trivial, and remote, the refusal of an instruction thereon is proper. Summers v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 774.

A separate charge on threats in presenting the issue of self-defense held unnecessary. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 733.

Where the evidence did not show that deceased made any threat against defendant, no charge on threats was called for. Hicks v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 755.

Charge on threats by deceased, approved. Powell v. State, 28 App. 393, 13 S. W. 599; Self v. State, 28 App. 398, 13 S. W. 602; Lewis v. State, 59 App. 51, 126 S. W. 1137; Payton v. State, 60 App. 475, 132 S. W. 127; Edwards v. State, 61 App. 307, 135 S. W. 540; Shed v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 125; Brookins v. State, 71 App. 101, 158 S. W. 521.

See case in which the court limited the right of self-defense as based alone upon threats, and acts manifesting an intention to execute them, and which was defective in failing to further instruct as to self-defense based upon reasonable appearance of danger. Nalley v. State, 30 App. 456, 17 S. W. 1084. See, also, Lynch v. State, 24 App. 350, 6 S. W. 190, 5 Am. St. Rep. 888; Crook v. State, 27 App. 198, 11 S. W. 444; Green v. State, 27 App. 244, 11 S. W. 114; Smith v. State, 31 App. 14, 19 S. W. 252.

Facts held to call for a charge on threats as affecting self-defense. Young v. State, 61 App. 303, 135 S. W. 127; Jackson v. State, 63 App. 351, 139 S. W. 1156; Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 706; Montgomery v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 813; Smith v. State, 70 App. 62, 156 S. W. 214; Rutherford v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 383.

Threats against deceased as evidence of malice.—See notes to art. 1140, ante.

Art. 1144. [714] [Repealed. See art. 1140, ante.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 947, 948.

MURDER BY MOB VIOLENCE

Laws 1897, S. S., ch. 13, relating to the taking of life by mob violence was held unconstitutional in Augustine v. State, 41 App. 59, 52 S. W. 77, 96 Am. St. Rep. 765, and was omitted from the revised penal code.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN OF DUELING

Art.
1145. Dueling, etc., how punished.

Art.
1146. Homicide in, murder in the first degree.

Article 1145. [715] Dueling, etc., how punished.—Any person who shall, within this state, fight a duel with deadly weapons, or send or accept a challenge to fight a duel with deadly weapons, either within the state or out of it, or who shall act as a second, or knowingly aid or assist in any manner those thus offending, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 517-522.

Charge.—Charge on fighting a duel held not authorized by the facts. Guerrero v. State, 39 App. 662, 47 S. W. 655.

Art. 1146. [716] Homicide in, murder in first degree.—If, in any duel hereafter fought in this state, either of the combatants be killed, or receive a wound from which he afterwards dies within three months, the survivor shall be deemed guilty of murder in the first degree and be punished accordingly.

See arts. 1140, 1141, abolishing the degrees of murder.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 516.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO HOMICIDE

Art.	Means or instruments used must be considered.	Art.	If in sudden passion not with deadly weapon.
1147.	Means or instruments used must be considered.	1149.	If in sudden passion not with deadly weapon.
1148.	If injury be done in a cruel manner.	1150.	If evil or cruel disposition be exhibited.

Article 1147. [717] Means or instruments used must be considered.—The instrument or means by which a homicide is committed are to be taken into consideration in judging of the intent of the party offending; if the instrument be one not likely to produce death, it is not to be presumed that death was designed, unless, from the manner in which it was used, such intention evidently appears.

See arts. 51 and 1106, ante.

Deadly weapon.—A deadly weapon is one, which in the manner used is likely to produce death or great bodily harm. McReynolds v. State, 4 App. 327; Coney v. State, 2 App. 62; Key v. State, 12 App. 506; Wilson v. State, 15 App. 150; Hilliard v. State, 17 App. 210; Howard v. State, 18 App. 348; Skidmore v. State, 43 Tex. 93; McDowell v. State, 55 App. 596, 117 S. W. 831; Pierce v. State, 21 App. 540, 1 S. W. 463; Peacock v. State, 52 App. 432, 107 S. W. 346; Briggs v. State, 6 App. 144; Witty v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 229.

A pocketknife with a blade from 2 to 2½ inches long is not per se a deadly weapon. Reeves v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 860; Price v. State, 60 App. 91, 131 S. W. 319; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 310.

The testimony of medical witnesses as to the deadly character of the weapon used is competent evidence. Waite v. State, 13 App. 169; Banks v. State, Id. 182; Thompson v. State, 24 App. 383, 6 S. W. 296. But see Ward v. State, 70 App. 393, 159 S. W. 272.

Whether it is a deadly weapon is a matter of proof and depends, in some cases, on the manner of its use. Hunt v. State, 6 App. 663; Pierce v. State, 21 App. 540, 1 S. W. 463; Jenkins v. State, 30 App. 379, 17 S. W. 938.

A pistol used to strike with is not per se a deadly weapon; its character as such must be shown by evidence thereof or by the injury inflicted. Stephenson v. State, 33 App. 162, 25 S. W. 784.

The injuries themselves may be proof of the deadly character of the weapon where its character is not shown definitely by the evidence. Walters v. State, 37 App. 388, 35 S. W. 652.

The jury may infer the intent to kill where the weapon was a deadly one. Franklin v. State, 37 App. 113, 38 S. W. 802, 1016.

One need not be an expert to testify that a crowbar, 50 inches long and weighing 11 pounds, is a deadly weapon in the hands of a boy 15 years old. Ashley v. State, 58 App. 420, 126 S. W. 589.

A pistol, used as a firearm, is a "deadly weapon." Hartfield v. State, 61 App. 515, 134 S. W. 1180.

To permit the jury to determine whether the knife used was a deadly weapon, though there was no evidence stating in terms that it was a deadly weapon held not error. Luttrell v. State, 70 App. 183, 157 S. W. 157.

Evidence held to authorize a finding that a knife with which accused killed decedent was a deadly weapon. Stewart v. State, 71 App. 237, 158 S. W. 996.

Where the state claimed that defendant killed deceased with a 45-caliber pistol used as a club, which was offered in evidence, identified, and admitted to belong to accused, the court having properly defined the term "deadly weapon," whether the pistol as so used was a deadly weapon was for the jury. Girtman v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1008.

A carving knife, the handle of which was 5¼ inches long, the blade 9¾ inches long, 1½ inches wide at the butt, and tapering to a point and weighing 7 ounces, was a deadly weapon per se. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 1110.

Where a knife with which an assault has been committed had been identified, evidence of the county attorney as to its length, breadth, and weight, and that it was a deadly weapon, was admissible. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 1110.

A 32-caliber rifle, fired at a person from 75 to 100 yards away, is a deadly weapon as a matter of law, and on a trial for assault to murder it is proper to refuse to submit to the jury the question whether the weapon is a deadly weapon. Catlett v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 673.

Weapon or means used as evidence of intent.—See art. 51, ante.

Means or instruments used must be considered. Nichols v. State, 24 App. 137, 5 S. W. 661; Boyd v. State, 28 App. 137, 12 S. W. 737; Bean v. State, 25 App. 346, 8 S. W. 278. And see Gatlin v. State, 5 App. 531; Gaitan v. State, 11 App. 544; Fitch v. State, 37 App. 500, 36 S. W. 584; Hardy v. State, 36 App. 400, 37 S. W. 434; Betts v. State, 60 App. 631, 133 S. W. 251; Crutchfield v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1053; Dawson v. State, 72 App. 68, 161 S. W. 469.

Where a deadly weapon is used in a deadly manner, the presumption of intent to kill is practically conclusive, but, if the weapon be not dangerous or be not used in a deadly manner, then the intent must be established by the facts. Grant v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 929; Martinez v. State, 35 App. 386, 33 S. W. 970; McDowell v. State, 55 App. 596, 117 S. W. 831; Johnson v. State, 42 App. 377, 60 S. W. 48; Washington v. State, 53 App. 480, 110 S. W. 751, 126 Am. St. Rep. 800; Crow v. State, 55 App. 200, 116 S. W. 53, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 497; Betts v. State, 57 App. 389, 124 S. W. 424; Williams v. State, 57 App. 492, 123 S. W. 1110; Thomas v. State, 57 App. 452, 125 S. W. 35.

When one uses an instrument calculated to produce death in a way to produce such a result the law presumes that the party intends to kill; but the homicide would not be presumed to be murder upon express malice, but express malice must be proved aliunde. Murray v. State, 1 App. 417.

On the issue of intent the character of the weapon used and the manner of its use may be proved. Hatton v. State, 31 App. 586, 21 S. W. 679.

When the homicide is not committed in the commission of a felony and no evil disposition is shown, there must have been an intent to kill to constitute murder, and the intent cannot be inferred from the killing with a stick two inches in diameter and four feet long. Fitch v. State, 37 App. 500, 36 S. W. 584.

When a person uses an instrument from which any reasonable person knows that death may result, and death does result, the law presumes that death was intended. Ford v. State, 64 App. 14, 142 S. W. 6.

The state was properly permitted to show that the knife used by accused had been recently sharpened, and had on the blade, next the handle, dust from a whetstone, as tending to show that the assault was premeditated; the parties having agreed to meet, as they did, to try and adjust matters. York v. State, 64 App. 153, 142 S. W. 8.

Testimony of a physician as to wounds inflicted on deceased held admissible on the issue of whether an intent to kill was manifest from the mode and manner of the use of a knife, though it had already been proved that deceased died from wounds inflicted by accused. Dawson v. State, 72 App. 68, 161 S. W. 469.

Charge.—Charge held correct. Gatlin v. State, 5 App. 531; Henry v. State, 38 App. 306, 42 S. W. 559; Cornwell v. State, 61 App. 122, 134 S. W. 221, Ann. Cas. 1913B, 71; Beaure v. State, 70 App. 19, 156 S. W. 625.

Where the weapon used was a pocket knife with blade from 2 to 2½ inches long and there was a conflict in the evidence as to the intent and purpose with which the knife was used, the court should have given this article in charge. Hightower v. State, 56 App. 248, 119 S. W. 693, 133 Am. St. Rep. 966; Snowberger v. State, 58 App. 530, 126 S. W. 878; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 310.

An instruction that if accused, with a leather belt, being a deadly weapon, or a weapon calculated to produce death by the manner in which it was used, struck and killed deceased, the jury should find him guilty, is not erroneous because the indictment did not allege that the belt was a deadly weapon, or became such from the manner of its use. Lee v. State, 44 App. 460, 72 S. W. 195. But see Jackson v. State, 33 App. 281, 26 S. W. 194, 622, 47 Am. St. Rep. 30, holding that on trial for robbery where it was not alleged that deadly weapons were used, it was error to charge the law in relation to the use of deadly weapons.

When the evidence does not show the size of the knife used in a homicide but indicates that it was a common pocket knife, the court should, under this article have charged the law of aggravated assault. Wilson v. State, 49 App. 50, 90 S. W. 315; Dawson v. State, 70 App. 8, 155 S. W. 266. And see Reeves v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 860.

Charge held incorrect. Thomas v. State, 57 App. 452, 125 S. W. 35; Pool v. State, 62 App. 360, 137 S. W. 666; Grant v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 929.

Where the assault is made without any apparent intention to kill with a weapon not reasonably calculated to effect that purpose the court should charge the law of manslaughter and aggravated assault as contained in this article and articles 1150. Lee v. State, 44 App. 460, 72 S. W. 195; Huddleston v. State, 70 App. 260, 156 S. W. 1168.

The preceding article and articles 1148 and 1150 apply to cases where the intention to kill evidently appears, or where it is evidenced by the cruel manner in which the injury was inflicted. Article 1149, applies to a case where there was no intention to kill, and the homicide was divested of an evil and cruel disposition.

Where the evidence makes the intention of the slayer at all doubtful, articles 1147, 1148, 1150 should not be given in charge without also giving in charge article 1149. Dones v. State, 8 App. 112; Hill v. State, 11 App. 456.

A charge should not give undue prominence to the presumption arising against a defendant from the character of the weapon, or the manner in which it was used. See an instance where such error was committed. Bell v. State, 17 App. 538; Whitaker v. State, 12 App. 436.

Where the charge is murder and the means used was a small rock, court should have instructed in accordance with this article and apply the charge to the facts. Honeywell v. State, 40 App. 201, 49 S. W. 586.

Where the real keynote in the case is the intent of the defendant with which the blow was struck, the court should go further than to give the mere abstract form of the statute. He should apply the law embodied in the statute to the facts. Griffin v. State, 40 App. 312, 50 S. W. 366, 76 Am. St. Rep. 718.

See a state of facts upon which it was held not to be error to omit to charge the rules of law declared in articles 1147 and 1149, although the court had charged the substance of article 1150. Hartwell v. State, 23 App. 88, 3 S. W. 715; Johnson v. State, 22 App. 206, 2 S. W. 609; Orman v. State, 24 App. 495, 6 S. W. 544; Levy v. State, 28 App. 203, 12 S. W. 596, 19 Am. St. Rep. 826; Cochran v. State, 28 App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Bracken v. State, 29 App. 362, 16 S. W. 192; Baltrip v. State, 30 App. 545, 17 S. W. 1106.

On a trial for murder committed by striking deceased with a stick, a charge that when the instrument used, or the means in which it was used, was reasonably calculated to produce death, then the law presumes that such was the intent of the party, is erroneous, because it left the jury to infer intention from the mere fact that death followed the blow. Shaw v. State, 34 App. 435, 31 S. W. 361.

A charge which defines a deadly weapon to be one which from the manner used is calculated to produce death or serious bodily injury is not erroneous. Henry v. State (Cr. App.) 54 S. W. 593.

Where the instrument is not one not likely to produce death, then it becomes a controverted question of criminal intent that should be submitted by a proper charge to the jury; and it must appear from the evidence that the manner in which it was used made it evident that the defendant intended to kill, before the jury would be warranted in finding the defendant guilty of homicide. Danforth v. State, 44 App. 105, 69 S. W. 162.

Under this article a defendant is entitled to a charge that if the jury find the instrument used in the homicide was one not likely to produce death, in that event before they find the defendant guilty of any grade of felonious homicide, they must find from manner of use of instrument that defendant intended to take life of the person he killed. Posey v. State, 46 App. 190, 78 S. W. 690.

It is error to charge this article in a case of homicide committed by shooting with a pistol. This article only becomes a part of the law of the given case, when the intent is to be judged in part from the instrument used; that is if it is one not likely to produce death, it is not to be presumed that the death was designed, unless from the manner in which the instrument is used such intent evidently appears. Burnett v. State, 46 App. 116, 79 S. W. 551.

This article need not be given in charge unless the weapon used is not of a deadly character such as a club, a stick or a very small knife. When the instrument is a dirk knife, with a blade five and three-fourths inches long and about seven-eighths of an inch wide, sharp pointed, with a keen sharp edge on both sides, the blade fixed and rigid to the handle, with a guard between blade and handle, and is used with deadly effect, this article need not be given in charge because the instrument so used is a deadly weapon. Connell v. State, 46 App. 259, 81 S. W. 749.

When the defendant begins the difficulty with the evident purpose to kill deceased, and he uses a weapon, which of the size and in the manner used is a deadly weapon, the question of intent based on the character of the instrument is not in issue in the record to be charged upon under this article. Baker v. State (Cr. App.) 81 S. W. 1216.

This article relates to the character of weapon in connection with the intent of the party and a charge on this article is addressed to the evidence and a question of law can only arise from the record evidence in the case. Jackson v. State, 47 App. 557, 85 S. W. 11.

The record does not disclose the size or character of the knife with which the wound was inflicted. If the knife is not a deadly weapon the court should charge this and article 1149. Brownlee v. State, 48 App. 408, 87 S. W. 1155.

Pocketknives are not per se deadly weapons. They may or may not be. If the weapon is not ordinarily a deadly one, then in order to find homicide, the intent to kill must evidently appear from the manner of its use. Before the court is authorized to refuse an instruction under this article, the testimony must make it evident that the party intended to kill. Craiger v. State, 48 App. 500, 88 S. W. 212.

Where there is nothing in the evidence to show the size of the instrument used, outside of the statement that it was the "butt end of a black snake whip," or that it was a stick, it is not shown that it was a deadly weapon, and the court should have given this article in charge to the jury. Coleman v. State, 49 App. 82, 90 S. W. 501.

Where the evidence tends strongly to show that the knife was not in itself a deadly weapon the defendant's rights should have been adequately guarded by a charge presenting this issue. Lucas v. State, 49 App. 135, 90 S. W. 882.

Where the weapon used was a small one-bladed barlow pocket knife the court should have charged this article. Thompson v. State, 49 App. 384, 93 S. W. 111.

Where the knife is shown to have been a small pocket knife, and appellant and prosecuting witness were in a fight when the cutting was done, the court should have charged this article. Johnson v. State, 49 App. 429, 93 S. W. 736, 737.

Usually this article does not apply unless the intent is to be judged in part from the instrument used. It is necessary sometimes to give the statute in charge in order to properly guard the legal rights of a defendant. If the weapon be not one per se deadly in its character then the manner of its use may become a potent fact in regard to the intent. If there is an issue in the case as to whether the party intended to kill, or even if it was a deadly weapon that brought about the death, or if the weapon is not necessarily deadly but death does result, then it may be necessary to give this article in charge to guard defendant's rights in the case. Campos v. State, 50 App. 102, 95 S. W. 1043.

In the absence of testimony showing the deadly character of the weapon used the accused is entitled to have the question of intent presented as an issue to the jury. Williams v. State, 50 App. 269, 96 S. W. 47.

It was not error to give this article in charge in a case where the theory of the State was that the killing was intentional, while that of the defense was the gun was accidentally discharged, which killed deceased. McKenzie v. State (Cr. App.) 96 S. W. 933.

Where the weapon used in inflicting a wound which causes death is a brick-bat it may be that a charge on the character of the weapon as not being a deadly one is called for under this article. Outley v. State (Cr. App.) 99 S. W. 97.

A charge of this article is not called for if the weapon is of a non-deadly character; but if it is unquestionably of a deadly character then it is not error ordinarily to give it in charge. Early v. State, 51 App. 382, 103 S. W. 871, 123 Am. St. Rep. 889.

Where the evidence was that the defendant struck deceased with a "stick of stove-wood," the substance of this article should have been given in charge, with other charges in the case. Washington v. State, 53 App. 480, 110 S. W. 752, 126 Am. St. Rep. 800.

It is error to fail to instruct in a prosecution for murder with an iron pipe, half an inch in diameter and 30 inches long, that an intent to kill at time blow was struck must be shown to convict of homicide, the instrument used not being as a matter of law a deadly weapon. Crow v. State, 55 App. 200, 116 S. W. 54, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 497.

Where the weapon used was an ordinary pocket knife, the blade of which was $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3 inches long, and the deceased was a man of superior strength, age and weight and in resisting the attack the defendant struck rather at random, the court should have given this article in charge. McDowell v. State, 55 App. 596, 117 S. W. 833; Vinson v. State, 55 App. 490, 117 S. W. 848.

Where the conviction is for an aggravated assault and not for assault with intent to murder no harm resulted to defendant in not giving this article in charge to the jury. Halsford v. State, 56 App. 118, 120 S. W. 194.

The charge, "If the means be such as are not likely to produce death, it is not to be presumed that death was designed, unless from the means adopted, and the surrounding circumstances at the time such intention evidently appears" is erroneous because the phrase "and the surrounding circumstances at the time" was improperly included. Grant v. State, 56 App. 411, 120 S. W. 484.

It is not necessary to define deadly weapons unless there is some question as to whether the weapons are of that character, considering the circumstances and the manner of their use. Wheeler v. State, 56 App. 547, 121 S. W. 166. See, also, McGill v. State, 60 App. 614, 132 S. W. 941.

The court having submitted, as a predicate for conviction in a murder case, the whipping of deceased by defendant with a belt worn by him, which was not a deadly weapon, it should have charged this article. Betts v. State, 57 App. 389, 124 S. W. 424.

Case in which this article should have been charged. Snowberger v. State, 58 App. 530, 126 S. W. 878.

Where the court charges on the presumption of intent from the use of a deadly weapon, it should give the substance of this article. Coker v. State, 59 App. 241, 128 S. W. 137.

Where it was to be inferred from the evidence that both parties used knives, but there was no description of the knife used, the court should have charged this article. McGill v. State, 60 App. 614, 132 S. W. 941.

Where, on a trial for assault to murder, the evidence showed that no serious injury was inflicted on prosecutor, and that accused used a small knife, the court should charge this article. Ross v. State, 61 App. 12, 133 S. W. 688.

Instruction in so far as it required that defendant must have been influenced by sudden passion imposed an element more burdensome on defendant, and not within this article and article 51, and was therefore erroneous. Grant v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 929.

Where accused denied having inflicted the fatal wound received by decedent in an affray, testimony for the defense that the knife used by him was short and small raised an issue as to the deadly character of the weapon, so as to require a charge thereon. Blackshear v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 564.

Where the instrument used was a matter of conjecture, where the depth of the wound was not shown, though a small pocket knife might have inflicted it, where there was no previous trouble between the parties, where the blow, if struck by defendant, was during a general fight, the court should have charged this article. Huddleston v. State, 70 App. 260, 156 S. W. 1168.

Art. 1148. [718] If injury be done in a cruel manner.—If any injury be inflicted in a cruel manner, though with an instrument not likely under ordinary circumstances to produce death, the killing will be manslaughter or murder, according to the facts of the case.

Degree of offense.—If the injury were inflicted in a cruel manner, the law implies malice, notwithstanding the instrument used in inflicting the injury be one not likely to produce death. It is the cruel manner in which the act is committed that stamps it as malicious. Whitaker v. State, 12 App. 436; Cook v. State, 22 App. 511, 3 S. W. 749; McCoy v. State, 25 Tex. 33, 78 Am. Dec. 520; Jordan v. State, 10 Tex. 479; Bell v. State, 17 App. 538; Garcia v. State, 48 App. 523, 89 S. W. 647. And see Betts v. State, 60 App. 631, 133 S. W. 251; Girtman v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1008.

In every case when it becomes a question whether or not there was an intention to kill on the part of the slayer suggested by the character of the weapon used not being deadly, it is the duty of the court to submit the issue of manslaughter; and if there is no intention to kill he should submit the issue of aggravated assault. Johnson v. State, 42 App. 377, 60 S. W. 49.

Art. 1149. [719] If in sudden passion not with deadly weapon.—Where a homicide occurs under the influence of sudden passion, but by the use of means not in their nature calculated to produce death, the person killing is not deemed guilty of the homicide, unless it appear that there was an intention to kill, but the party from whose act the death resulted may be prosecuted for and convicted of any grade of assault and battery.

Degree of offense.—See arts. 1022, 1026, ante, and notes.

If a homicide be committed under the influence of sudden passion by the use of means not in their nature calculated to produce death, and in the absence of an intention to kill, the circumstances not showing an evil or cruel disposition, the party killing would not be guilty of culpable homicide, but, self-defense apart, would be guilty of some grade of assault and battery. Thompson v. State, 24 App. 383, 6 S. W. 296; Bean v. State, 25 App. 346, 8 S. W. 278.

This article comprehends the law of a case in which there was no intention to kill, and when the homicidal act was divested of the elements of an evil and cruel disposition. Under it an offender may be prosecuted and convicted of any grade of assault and battery. Hill v. State, 11 App. 456. And see, also, Thompson v. State, 24 App. 383, 6 S. W. 296; Boyd v. State, 28 App. 137, 12 S. W. 737; Wilson v. State, 49 App. 50, 90 S. W. 312; Lucas v. State, 49 App. 135, 90 S. W. 880; Terrell v. State, 53 App. 604, 111 S. W. 152; *Crow v. Art. 1150. [720] If evil or cruel disposition be exhibited.—Where the circumstances attending a homicide show an evil or cruel disposition, or that it was the design of the person offending to kill, he is deemed guilty of murder or manslaughter, according to the other facts of the case, though the instrument or means used may not in their nature be such as to produce death ordinarily.

Offense.—When the evidence shows no evil or cruel disposition on the part of defendant, and the homicide was not committed in the perpetration of a felony, then in order to constitute a case of either murder or manslaughter the evidence must show an intent to kill. *Fitch v. Article 1151. [721] "Libel" defined.—He is guilty of "libel" who, with intent to injure, makes, writes, prints, publishes, sells or circulates any malicious statement affecting the reputation of another in respect to any matter or thing pointed out in this chapter.

1. Constitutionality. 2. What constitutes libel. 3. Publication. 4. Liability of newspaper corporation or members. 5. Indictment, information, and complaint.	6. — Innuendo. 7. — Proof and variance. 8. Evidence. 9. Charge. 10. Recognizance on appeal. 11. Civil liability.
--	---

1. Constitutionality.—The provisions of this chapter are not in derogation of the freedom of the press, nor violative of the constitutional provisions which secure to every person the right to speak, write, or publish his opinions on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that privilege, and which prohibit the enactment of any law curtailing the liberty of speech, or of the press. Morton v. State, 3 App. 510. Bill of Rights, Const., art. 1, sec. 8.

2. What constitutes libel.—See articles 1157, 1171, 1176, post, and notes thereunder.

A libelous article charging that the conductors of a city railroad, as a class, were foul characters, but not mentioning any conductor by name was properly alleged to affect the reputation of any one or more of the conductors of said railroad. Jones v. State, 38 App. 364, 43 S. W. 78, 70 Am. St. Rep. 751.

3. Publication.—See note under article 1156. The publication of a libel and its circulation is made when it is written, printed and sent and delivered, either to the person defamed, or to any other person. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

Depositing a libel in the postoffice for transmission to the party addressed, is a publication of it. Coulson v. State, 16 App. 189; Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

As it was alleged, and some evidence was introduced to show, that the petition was published in a newspaper, and circulated from hand to hand, it was proper to charge that every person signing the paper, knowing that it was intended to be printed, or who signed it and delivered it to another, without knowing that it would be printed, would be guilty of circulating it; that signing and delivering it would be in itself a publication; and that if no protest or direction against its being printed was made by the signer, and it was afterwards printed by the person to whom it was delivered, or by his authority,—it was no defense that the signer did not intend or direct its publication in the paper. Cotulla v. Kerr, 74 Tex. 89, 11 S. W. 1058, 15 Am. St. Rep. 819.

When the defendant admitted writing the libelous matter it is immaterial whether or not he was responsible for its publication. Noble v. State, 38 App. 368, 43 S. W. 80.

Writing a letter and depositing it in the post office addressed to a party, is publication of it within the meaning of the law. Mankins v. State, 41 App. 662, 57 S. W. 952.

Putting a libelous letter in the mail is publication, regardless to whom it is addressed or whether it is addressed at all, and makes the writer guilty of libel. Mankins v. State, 41 App. 662, 57 S. W. 952.

4. Liability of newspaper corporation or members.—Members of a publishing corporation are not liable for a libelous publication by it alone. Belo v. Fuller, 84 Tex. 450, 19 S. W. 616, 31 Am. St. Rep. 75.

5. Indictment, information, and complaint.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 523.

Indictment held sufficient. Morton v. State, 3 App. 510.

For indictments held sufficient, see Woody v. State, 16 App. 252; Morton v. State, 3 App. 510. An indictment for libel must set out the libel in haec verba, and must show upon its face that it is so set out. The literal language of the libel must be set forth, although it may be indecent and obscene. The distinction between libel at common law, and libel as defined by this Code, is, that libel at common law is punishable because of its tendency to provoke a breach of the peace while under this Code it is punishable as well because of its tendency to injure the reputation of the person against whom it is directed. Such being the case, the indictment need only allege the intent to injure the person libeled, and need not allege the tendency and intent to provoke a breach of the peace. Coulson v. State, 16 App. 189; Woody v. State, Id. 252.

It is not essential that a complaint upon which an information is based begin "In the name and by the authority of the state of Texas." Johnson v. State, 31 App. 464, 20 S. W. 980.

To be sufficient the indictment should set out specifically one or more of the grounds stated in the statute. Byrd v. State, 38 App. 630, 44 S. W. 521; Jones v. State, 38 App. 364, 43 S. W. 78, 70 Am. St. Rep. 751.

It is not essential to an indictment that it allege the matter to be libelous or wickedly committed. Baldwin v. State, 39 App. 245, 45 S. W. 714. See, also, Smith v. State, 39 App. 320, 45 S. W. 1013.

In view of this article and article 1157, subd. 1, held, that an indictment for libel, alleging that defendant published a malicious statement concerning complainant, reciting that he was a United States federal guard, that he was a highwayman and cowardly assassin, and the murderer of a certain person who on the morning of March 19, 1906, was cowardly assassinated on a public highway, etc., sufficiently charged complainant with a penal offense, and was therefore sufficient. Gonzales v. State, 58 App. 141, 124 S. W. 937.

An indictment charged defendant with having published a malicious statement of and concerning one Villegas, affecting his reputation, in that he referred to a paper in which Villegas had proposed a ridiculous question as to who was the candidate of the People's Party for mayor, and then stated that Villegas was the heir to a fortune; had studied science; and had studied military affairs, learning only to do half a turn; had studied four years in law school, at the end of which time his father was compelled to purchase for him a law license, to which profession he could not dedicate himself, because he never knew what law was; that he was naturally stupid, and had not inherited the integrity and industry of his father; that he inherited his brother's wife and part of his fortune; and that, not wishing to hurt his modesty, of which he makes so much fuss, nothing would be said of his private life. Held, in view of articles 1151, 1157, 1165, and 1166 that the indictment charged no offense. Aldama v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 730.

6. — Innuendo.—If the indictment conveys the idea that the person has been guilty of a penal offense, or of conduct disgraceful to him as a member of society, it is not necessary to allege that the libelous language does charge him with a penal offense, or does bring him into disgrace as a member of society. Mankins v. State, 41 App. 662, 57 S. W. 952; Lockhard v. State, 43 App. 61, 63 S. W. 566; Gonzales v. State, 58 App. 141, 124 S. W. 937.

Information should state innuendo. McKie v. State, 37 App. 544, 40 S. W. 305.

An information which sets out an instrument denouncing a party as a "black-mailer, a liar and a scoundrel," "A person who is ashamed to have exposed the previous four years of his life," is insufficient. Id.

An indictment for libel without innuendo or explanatory allegations, but which contains allegations of inducement; a colloquium together with an allegation of publication and which sets out an instrument that needs no explanation is sufficient. Squires v. State, 39 App. 96, 45 S. W. 147, 73 Am. St. Rep. 904.

The office of an "innuendo" is to aver the meaning of the alleged libelous language published, but is available only to give point or meaning as explanatory of a matter sufficiently expressed before, but is not available to establish a new charge. McCauley v. State, 64 App. 183, 141 S. W. 975.

Defendant published in his newspaper an article calling attention to the adjournment of court; that crime had been permitted to go unpunished; that the officers drew fat salaries, and used the same to buy expensive bar fixtures for saloons that were owned and controlled by the county officials; that when "some good old soul gets so full of religion that he shouts 'Amen' in church" the county court is quick to judge him insane, but that gang that drank, interfered with peaceable citizens, etc., were seldom found in the jury room; that they did not believe in interfering with a man's personal liberty, unless he was crazy and disturbed public worship by shouting "Amen" or "Glory Hallelujah." Held, that such statements were insufficient to justify an innuendo that they meant that the various officials controlling the county court had illegally sent a man to the asylum as insane who was in fact sane. McCauley v. State, 64 App. 183, 141 S. W. 975.

7. — Proof and variance.—Language charged must be proved. Barnett v. State, 35 App. 280, 33 S. W. 340.

It is sufficient to prove substantially the words charged as libelous and proof of additional words not altering the meaning of those alleged is no variance. McArthur v. State, 41 App. 635, 57 S. W. 848.

8. Evidence.—See article 1164, post, and notes thereunder, and, also, under article 1175, post.

Mailing a libelous letter is a publication, and upon proof of its writing and publication, malice and intent to injure are presumed, and it rests upon the defendant to bring it within the class of privileged communications. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

When the libelous matter consists of a charge that the person against whom it is uttered has been guilty of embezzlement, and is "a liar, swindler, and dead-beat," it is competent, under the latter allegation, to prove, in defense, the general reputation of the injured party. If the charge had been "embezzlement" simply, the inquiry should be restricted to his general character for honesty. Leader v. State, 4 App. 162.

Where the language used by defendant is ambiguous, testimony explaining what the witness understood by it is admissible. Dickson v. State, 34 App. 1, 28 S. W. 815, 30 S. W. 807, 53 Am. St. Rep. 694.

Where State proves certain declarations of defendant as to motive of defendant in publishing the libel, it is not error to exclude other declarations made to other parties, when they constitute no part of those introduced by the State. McArthur v. State, 41 App. 635, 57 S. W. 849.

Proof is not admissible to show bad reputation of libelee in regard to trait of character charged against him. McArthur v. State, 41 App. 635, 57 S. W. 849.

The reputation of a person for truth and veracity cannot be proved when he is not a witness and his truth and veracity are not in issue. McArthur v. State, 41 App. 635, 57 S. W. 849.

In view of article 1151, and articles 1157, 1165, and 1166, post, defining libel in respect to statements affecting the reputation of candidates for office, professional men, etc., and making truth a defense to statements as to their qualifications, evidence in a prosecution for libel affecting reputation of a candidate held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Aldama v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 730.

9. Charge.—The charge held to present the law fairly and fully. Morton v. State, 3 App. 510.

10. Recognizance on appeal.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 919.

11. Civil liability.—See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 5595, et seq., and notes thereunder.

Art. 1152. [722] Punishment.—If any person be guilty of libel, he shall be punished by fine not less than one hundred nor more than two thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years; and the court may enter up judgment and issue an order thereupon directing the sheriff to seize and destroy all the publications, prints, paintings or engravings constituting the libel as charged in the indictment or information.

Art. 1153. [723] Publishing writing purporting to be done by another.—If any person, with intent to injure the reputation of another, shall, without lawful authority, make, publish or circulate a writing purporting to be the act of some other person, and which comes within the definition of libel, as given in this chapter, he shall be punished in the same manner as if the act purported to be his own; and the rules with respect to libel apply also to the making and circulation of such false writing.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 524.

Art. 1154. [724] "Maker" explained.—He is the maker of a libel who originally contrived and either executed it himself by writing, printing, engraving or painting, or dictated or caused it to be done by others.

Art. 1155. [725] "Publisher."—He is the publisher of libel who, either of his own will or by the persuasion or dictation of another, executes the same in any of the modes pointed out as constituting a libel; but if any one by force or threats is compelled to execute such libel he is guilty of no offense.

Publication.—See notes under articles 1151, 1156.

Art. 1156. [726] Circulating.—He is guilty of circulating a libel who, knowing its contents, either sells, distributes or gives, or who, with malicious design, reads or exhibits it to others.

What is circulation.—See notes under article 1151.

Writing a letter and depositing it in the post office constitutes circulation. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594; Coulson v. State, 16 App. 189; Mankins v. State, 41 App. 662, 57 S. W. 950.

The publication of a libel and its circulation is made when it is written, printed and sent and delivered, either to the person defamed, or to any other person. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

Sale and distribution of a paper containing a libel constitutes circulation either at common law or under the penal code; circulation of a libel is an offense committed in any place where the libel is sold or distributed. Belo v. Wren, 63 Tex. 686.

Evidence held to show a "circulating" by reading and exhibiting a libelous statement to others with the intent to injure. Woody v. State, 16 App. 252.

It is not necessary that the letter be addressed or that the information allege the address. Mankins v. State, 41 App. 662, 57 S. W. 950.

Art. 1157. [727] The ideas the statement must convey.—The written, printed or published statement, to come within the definition of libel, must convey the idea either—

1. That the person to whom it refers has been guilty of some penal offense; or Libelous charges.—To charge a person with being a "hiring murderer" if written and published is indictable. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

For writings held to be libels, see Woody v. State, 16 App. 252; Morton v. State, 3 App. 510.

Pen. Code, § 1172, provides that when any person, by virtue of his office, is required to record the proceedings of any religious body, he shall not be charged with libel for any entry so made; the following article provides that if a false statement is entered, which would be libelous if circulated by an individual, the one assenting to and directing such statement is guilty; and the next article provides that the statements are not to be presumed to have been made with intent to injure unless such fact appears. Held, that where a minister, required by a custom of his church to make entries of the names of parents of those baptized, knew that plaintiff had been acquitted of seduction in a suit by the mother of a bastard confirmed by him, yet he entered plaintiff's name as that of the bastard's father,—insisting on making the entry unless the mother would consent to its not being done,—the evidence showed malice, rendering defendant liable under the statute. Kubricht v. State, 44 App. 94, 69 S. W. 157, 58 L. R. A. 959, 100 Am. St. Rep. 842.

Where a minister, knowing that the plaintiff has been acquitted of seduction on a prosecution by the mother of a bastard, makes an entry on his church records imputing paternity of the child to plaintiff, the entry is a libel, within the statutes. Kubricht v. State, 44 App. 94, 69 S. W. 157, 58 L. R. A. 959, 100 Am. St. Rep. 842.

Indictment.—See notes under art. 1151, ante.

In view of this article and article 1151, it was held that an indictment for libel, alleging that defendant published a malicious statement concerning complainant, reciting that he was a United States federal guard, that he was a highwayman and cowardly assassin, and the murderer of a certain person who on the morning of March 19, 1906, was cowardly assassinated on a public highway, etc., sufficiently charged complainant with a penal offense, and was therefore sufficient. Gonzalez v. State, 58 App. 141, 124 S. W. 937.

2. That he has been guilty of some act or omission which, though not a penal offense, is disgraceful to him as a member of society, and the natural consequence of which is to bring him into contempt among honorable persons; or

Construction of article in general.—An information which charges that defendant wrote prosecutrix a letter, the substance of which was that he had seen her in an act of sexual intercourse with a man, is sufficient, without charging that the language used was calculated to bring her into disgrace, and the natural consequence of which was to bring her into contempt. Mankins v. State, 41 App. 662, 57 S. W. 950.

Indictment and proof.—It is not enough for an indictment to charge that defendant published a statement concerning prosecutor affecting his reputation and honesty, setting out the publication of five or six pages; but if it is claimed that it is libelous because conveying the idea that prosecutor has been guilty of some act which is disgraceful to him as a member of society, and the natural consequence of which is to bring him into contempt among honorable persons (art. 1157, subd. 2), the indictment should point out such part of the publication as is claimed to impute such an act, and allege that it does impute an act disgraceful to him, etc. Nordhaus v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 804.

On a trial for libel, where the words complained of by the prosecuting witness are: "I denounce him as a blackmailer, a liar, and a scoundrel; a person who is ashamed to have exposed the four years of his life previous to him coming to E. It was an unlucky moment for him when he brought the name of woman into the question,"—the information must by innuendo show that they refer to some particular act disgraceful to the witness, and the natural consequence of which is to bring him into contempt. McKie v. State, 37 App. 544, 40 S. W. 305.

An indictment for libel in publishing that one of the conductors of a certain railroad caused a lady to be thrown to the ground while alighting from a street car, and imputing to all the conductors of such road disgraceful acts, the nature and consequence of which were to bring them into contempt, and which attributed to said conductors infamous characters, was sustained on proof of any of the allegations. Jones v. State, 43 S. W. 78, 38 App. 364, 70 Am. St. Rep. 751.

An indictment for libel setting out that the publication, which might convey several different meanings, was made with intent to injure prosecutor, and that it was a malicious statement concerning him, which affected his reputation, is sufficient, as it must set forth that it conveyed the idea of one or more of the specific grounds for libel mentioned in Pen. Code 1895, art. 1157. Byrd v. State, 33 App. 630, 44 S. W. 521.

3. That he has some moral vice, or physical or mental defect or disease, which renders him unfit for intercourse with respectable society, and such as should cause him to be generally avoided; or

4. That he is notoriously of bad or infamous character; or Evidence.—Where an indictment charged that the libel represented B. as a man of notoriously bad and infamous character it was error to refuse to permit defendant to adduce evidence of the general character of B. in the community. Leader v. State, 4 App. 162.

5. That any person in office, or a candidate therefor, is dishonest, and therefore unworthy of such office, or that while in office he has been guilty of some malfeasance rendering him unworthy of the place.

Libelous charges.—The word “dishonest” here means some such want of honesty as would go to his personal integrity and would render him unfit to be trusted with official duties. Squires v. State, 39 App. 96, 45 S. W. 147, 73 Am. St. Rep. 904.

A publication in regard to a candidate, to be libelous, must impute to him lack or want of honesty, or unfitness for office. A statement that he is not true to his party, or that he is affiliating with another party, is not libelous. Squires v. State, 39 App. 96, 45 S. W. 147, 73 Am. St. Rep. 904.

Indictment.—An indictment charged defendant with having published a malicious statement of and concerning one Villegas, affecting his reputation, in that he referred to a paper in which Villegas had proposed a ridiculous question as to who was the candidate of the People's Party for mayor, and then stated that Villegas was the heir to a fortune; had studied science; and had studied military affairs, learning only to do half a turn; had studied four years in law school, at the end of which time his father was compelled to purchase for him a law license, to which profession he could not dedicate himself, because he never knew what law was; that he was naturally stupid, and had not inherited the integrity and industry of his father; that he inherited his brother's wife and part of his fortune; and that, not wishing to hurt his modesty, of which he makes so much fuss, nothing would be said of his private life. Held, in view of articles 1151, 1157, 1165, and 1166, that the indictment charged no offense. Aldama v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 730.

Evidence.—In view of articles 1151, 1157, 1165, and 1166, evidence in a prosecution for libel affecting reputation of a candidate held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Aldama v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 730.

Civil liability.—See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 5595, et seq., and notes thereunder.

Art. 1158. [728] Mode of publication.—A libel may be either written, printed, engraved, etched or painted, but no verbal defamation comes within the meaning thereof; and whenever a defendant is accused of libel by means of a painting, engraving or caricature, it must clearly appear therefrom that the person said to be defamed was, in fact, intended to be represented by such painting, engraving or caricature.

Art. 1159. [729] A manuscript must be circulated.—In order to render any manuscript a libel, it must be circulated or posted up in some public place.

See article 1156 and notes thereunder.

Art. 1160. [730] Editor, etc., prima facie guilty.—If the libel be in printed form, and issues or is sold in any office or shop where a public newspaper is conducted, or where books or other printed works are sold or printed, the editor, publisher and proprietor of such newspaper, or any one of them, or the owner of such shop, is to be deemed guilty of making or circulating such libel until the contrary is made on the trial to appear.

Business manager.—In a criminal prosecution for libel, it was immaterial whether defendant was responsible for the publication of the article in question, on account of the fact that he was the financial manager of the paper in which it was published, where it appeared that he had admitted the writing of such article. Noble v. State, 33 App. 368, 43 S. W. 80.

Liability of newspaper corporation or members.—See note under article 1151, ante.

It is no defense to a prosecution for libel that defendant, a part owner of the newspaper in which it was published, protested against the publication, and only agreed to it on his partner agreeing to assume the responsibility therefor, where defendant then set the type for the article. Baldwin v. State, 45 S. W. 714, 39 App. 245.

Art. 1161. [731] But may avoid responsibility, how.—The editor, publisher or proprietor of a public newspaper may avoid the responsibility of making or publishing a libel by giving the true author of the same; provided, such author be a resident of this state and a person of good character, except in cases where it is shown that such editor, publisher or proprietor caused the libel to be published with malicious design.

Art. 1162. [732] Mechanical executor not guilty, unless.—No person shall be convicted of libel merely on evidence that he has made a manuscript copy of a libel or has performed the manual labor of printing it, unless it be shown positively that such person was actuated by a malicious design against the person defamed. But the person for whose account or by whose order it was printed shall be presumed to have known the intent of the publication, and shall be liable for the offense.

Art. 1163. [733] Actual injury not necessary.—It is sufficient to constitute the offense of libel if the natural consequence of the publication of the same is to injure the person defamed, although no actual injury to his reputation has been sustained.

Art. 1164. [734] Intent to injure presumed.—The intent to injure is to be presumed if such would be the natural consequence of the libel, though no actual proof be made that the defendant had such design; and in all trials of libel the jury are to judge from the facts proved relative to the malicious design of the defendant as to what penalty ought to be imposed under the restrictions herein prescribed.

Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

Presumption and burden of proof.—When the libelous matter is published malice or intent to injure is presumed, and the burden of proof is thrown on the party charged to show that publication was made under such circumstances as to bring it within the class of privileged communications. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

The information need not charge that the acts were libelous nor that they were wickedly committed. Baldwin v. State, 45 S. W. 714, 39 App. 245.

Art. 1165. [735] True statement concerning candidate not libel.—It is no offense to make true statements of fact or express opinions as to the integrity or other qualifications of a candidate for any office or public place or appointment.

Const., art. 1, sec. 8; Express Co. v. Copeland, 64 Tex. 354.

Indictment.—An indictment charged defendant with having published a malicious statement of and concerning one Villegas, affecting his reputation, in that he referred to a paper in which Villegas had proposed a ridiculous question as to who was the candidate of the People's Party for mayor, and then stated that Villegas was the heir to a fortune; had studied science; and had studied military affairs, learning only to do half a turn; had studied four years in law school, at the end of which time his father was compelled to purchase for him a law license, to which profession he could not dedicate himself, because he never knew what law was; that he was naturally stupid, and had not inherited the integrity and industry of his father; that he inherited his brother's wife and part of his fortune; and that, not wishing to hurt his modesty, of which he makes so much fuss, nothing would be said of his private life. Held, in view of this and the following article and articles 1151 and 1157, that the indictment charged no offense. Aldama v. State (Cr.App.) 163 S. W. 730.

Evidence.—In view of this and the following article and articles 1151 and 1157, evidence in a prosecution for libel affecting reputation of a candidate held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Aldama v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 730.

Art. 1166. [736] Nor concerning qualifications of professional men.—It is no offense to publish true statements of fact as to the qualifications of any person for any occupation, profession or trade.

See note under article 1165, ante; Const., art. 1, sec. 8.

Art. 1167. [737] No criticism of any book, work of art, etc.—It is no offense to publish any criticism or examination of any work of literature, science or art, or any opinion as to the qualifications or merits of the author of such work.

Const., art. 1, sec. 8.

Art. 1168. [738] The offense relates to persons only.—To constitute libel, there must be some injury intended to the reputation of persons, and no publication as to the government, or any of the branches thereof, as such is an offense under the name of seditious writings or any other name.

Art. 1169. [739] Respecting religious systems, etc.—It is no libel to make publication respecting the merits or doctrines of any particular religion, system of morals or politics, or of any particular form of government.

Art. 1170. [740] Corporations can not be libeled.—It is no libel to make any publication respecting a body politic or corporate as such.

Art. 1171. [741] Nor legislative or judicial proceedings, unless, etc.—It is no libel to publish any statement respecting any legislative or judicial proceedings, whether the statement be in fact true or not, unless in such statement a charge of corruption is made against some person acting in a legislative or judicial capacity.

Freedom of the press.—Extent to which the freedom of the press may be restrained to protect private character from falsehood and slander, and prevent the publication of testimony libelous in its nature, required by the policy of the law to be kept absolutely secret. See Belo v. Wren, 63 Tex. 686; Express Printing Co. v. Copeland, 64 Tex. 354.

Privileged communications.—See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 5597.

It rests upon the defendant to bring a libelous letter within the class of privileged communications. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

And see Belo v. Wren, 63 Tex. 686; Runge v. Franklin, 72 Tex. 585, 10 S. W. 721, 3 L. R. A. 417, 13 Am. St. Rep. 833; Holt v. Parsons, 23 Tex. 9, 76 Am. Dec. 49; Cotulla v. Kerr, 74 Tex. 89, 11 S. W. 1058, 15 Am. St. Rep. 819; Behee v. Railway, 71 Tex. 424, 9 S. W. 449; Railway Co. v. Richmond, 73 Tex. 568, 11 S. W. 555, 4 L. R. A. 280, 15 Am. St. Rep. 794.

Art. 1172. [742] Recorder of minutes, etc., not liable.—Where any person by virtue of his office is required to record the proceedings of any department of the government or of any body corporate or politic, or of any association organized for purposes of business, or as a religious, moral, benevolent, literary or scientific institution, he can not be charged with libel for any entry upon the minutes or records of such department, body or association made in the course of his official duties.

Baptismal record.—This article makes a defendant liable if a false entry is made with malice. Kubricht v. State, 44 App. 94, 69 S. W. 157, 58 L. R. A. 959, 100 Am. St. Rep. 842.

A minister is guilty of libel if he enters the name of a man on the baptismal register of his church as the father of a bastard child when he knows that the imputed father has been acquitted of the crime of seducing the mother of the child, and he has been warned not to put the name there as the father of the child. Kubricht v. State, 44 App. 94, 69 S. W. 157, 58 L. R. A. 959, 100 Am. St. Rep. 842.

Art. 1173. [743] But all members of the association who assent are.—If any false statement be entered upon the minutes or record of proceedings of any corporate body or association included within the meaning of the preceding article, which would be libel if written, printed published or circulated by an individual, according to the previous articles of this chapter, the persons being members of such body or association, who assent to and direct such libelous statement to be made, are guilty of libel under the same rules as if the false statement had been written, published or circulated in any other manner than as a part of the record or proceedings of such body or association, subject, however, to the restrictions contained in the succeeding article.

For the acts of a body corporate as a defense to a civil action for entering a resolution adopted by the trustees of a church censuring plaintiff for defaulting as treasurer, see Holt v. Parsons, 23 Tex. 9, 76 Am. Dec. 49.

Art. 1174. [744] Intent to injure not presumed, unless, etc.—The libelous statement referred to in the preceding article is not to be presumed to have been made with intent to injure, from the mere fact that such would be the natural result thereof, unless it appear from other facts that the statement was in fact made with that intention.

Holt v. Parsons, 23 Tex. 9, 76 Am. Dec. 49.

Art. 1175. [745] "Malicious" signifies what.—The word "malicious" is used to signify an act done with evil or mischievous design, and it is not necessary to prove any special facts showing ill feeling on the part of the person who is concerned in making, printing, publishing or circulating a libelous statement against the person injured thereby.

Presumptions and evidence of malice.—See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 5595, et seq.

Mailing a libelous letter is a publication, and upon proof of its writing and publication, malice and intent to injure are presumed, and it rests upon the defendant to bring it within the class of privileged communications. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

When the communication is not privileged, malice must be shown to authorize a recovery; but in such case negative facts may indicate the malice, as that the publication was false, and was made without legal excuse. The malice may be inferred from the fact of a false publication of libelous matter. When the publication is privileged, the malice so implied from the false and defamatory publication is deemed to have been met and rebutted, in which case, as before stated, malice in fact must be shown to warrant a recovery; and such malice is defined to be ill-will, bad or evil motive, or such gross indifference to the right of others as will amount to a wilful or wanton act. Bradstreet Co. v. Gill, 72 Tex. 115, 9 S. W. 753, 2 L. R. A. 405, 13 Am. St. Rep. 768.

For necessity of proving express malice in case of privileged communication in civil suit, see Railway v. Richmond, 73 Tex. 568, 11 S. W. 555, 4 L. R. A. 280, 15 Am. St. Rep. 794.

Evidence of the general rumor and conversation in the neighborhood in regard to the specific acts charged in the alleged libel is inadmissible to show want of malice in the publication. Baldwin v. State, 45 S. W. 714, 39 App. 245.

Charge.—In an action against a railroad company for libel in publishing plaintiff's name on the "blacklist" as an employé discharged for incompetency, it is error to instruct that the malice essential to such a libel is express malice, which means wicked intent, and that such intent must be proved like any other fact, and is never to be presumed, since the jury may infer the intent from the fact that the publication was false and injurious. Behee v. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co., 71 Tex. 424, 9 S. W. 449.

Art. 1176. [746] Statement in legislative or judicial proceedings not included.—No statement made in the course of a legislative or judicial proceeding, whether true or false, although made with intent to injure and from malicious purposes, comes within the definition of libel.

Statement in judicial proceeding.—This is declaratory of the common law as to slander. And likewise under the statute all things said as well as all documents in judicial proceedings are absolutely privileged. Lindsey v. State, 18 App. 280.

Stockholders of a corporation filed a petition against the corporation, alleging that the president, with the approval of the directors, had been fraudulently conducting the management of the company, detailing the acts alleged to show a concerted scheme to reduce the value of the company's stock, and buy it in, and control the company's affairs. Held that, as proceedings in courts are absolutely privileged, a director of the company, though not a party to the suit, could not maintain an action for alleged defamatory matter contained in the petition, though it was false and malicious, and made under color and pretense of a suit without right. Runge v. Franklin, 72 Tex. 585, 10 S. W. 721, 3 L. R. A. 417, 13 Am. St. Rep. 833.

Art. 1177. [747] Truth of statement may be shown, when.—In the following cases, the truth of any statement charged as libel may be shown in justification of the defendant:

1. Where the publication purports to be an investigation of the official conduct of officers or men in a public capacity.

2. Where it is stated in the libel that a person has been guilty of some penal offense, and the time, place and nature of the offense is specified in the publication.

3. Where it is stated in the libel that a person is of notoriously bad or infamous character.

4. Where the publication charges any person in office, or a candidate therefor, with a want of honesty, or of having been guilty of some malfeasance in office, rendering him unworthy of the place. In other cases, the truth of the facts stated in the libel can not be inquired into.

Truth as justification and proof thereof.—Where a private citizen was libeled as "a hireling, a murderer, and a coward," it was held that the truth of such charge could not be proved as a defense. Smith v. State, 32 Tex. 594.

It would seem that failure to sustain a plea of justification by truth of the alleged libel should not be considered as tending to show malice where the effect would deprive defendant of the benefit of inconsistent pleas. Express Printing Co. v. Copeland, 64 Tex. 354.

Where the libelous matter consisted of a charge that the person against whom it was uttered had been guilty of embezzlement, and was a "liar, swindler, and dead-beat," it was held competent, under the latter portion of said charge, to prove, in defense, the general reputation of the libeled party. But if the libel had charged "embezzlement" only, the inquiry should have been restricted to his general character for honesty. Leader v. State, 4 App. 162. See, also, Johnson v. State, 31 App. 456, 20 S. W. 985; Johnson v. State, 31 App. 464, 20 S. W. 980; Johnson v. State, 31 App. 569, 21 S. W. 541.

Where the article complained of was naturally susceptible of the construction given by the innuendoes, and its truth is denied in the complaint, an instruction which presented the question of the literal truth or falsity of the publication only, without reference to its effect or meaning, was properly refused. Democrat Pub. Co. v. Jones, 83 Tex. 302, 18 S. W. 652.

Where defendant charged injured party with fornication and drunkenness he should have been allowed to prove the truth of the matter charged. Johnson v. State, 31 App. 464, 20 S. W. 980.

Charge of the court held erroneous. Johnson v. State, 31 App. 464, 20 S. W. 980.

Proof of bad character of plaintiff in civil action for libel, see Geo. Knapp & Co. v. Campbell, 14 Civ. App. 199, 36 S. W. 765.

A defense of truth of a publication that a person was jailed on a charge of horse stealing is not made out by proof that he was so charged and was jailed on that charge, but the truth of the charge must be shown. Dement v. Houston Printing Co., 14 Civ. App. 391, 37 S. W. 985.

For evidence admissible as to the truth of a libel in a prosecution for a killing of an editor for its publication, see Williams v. State, 40 App. 497, 51 S. W. 220.

Art. 1178. [748] Province of jury.—The jury in every case of libel are not only the judges of the facts and of the law, under the direction of the court, in accordance with the constitution, but they are judges of the intent with which a libel may have been published or circulated, subject to the rules prescribed in this chapter; and in rendering their verdict they are to be governed by a consideration of the nature of the charge contained in the libel, the general reputation of the person said to be defamed, and the degree of malice exhibited by the defendant in the commission of the offense.

Construction of law by jury.—While under this article the jury are the judges of the law and the evidence, they must construe the law, as in other cases, under the charge of the court as to the law. McArthur v. State, 41 App. 635, 57 S. W. 847.

Art. 1179. [749] This title relates only to penal action.—This title regulates the law with regard to libel when prosecuted as a penal offense, and is not intended to have any operation upon the subject so far as relates to civil remedies for the recovery of damages.

CHAPTER TWO OF SLANDER

Art. 1180. Definition and punishment.	Art. 1181. Procedure in prosecution for.
--	---

Article 1180. [750] Definition and punishment.—If any person shall, orally or otherwise, falsely and maliciously or falsely and wantonly impute to any female in this state, married or unmarried, a want of chastity, he shall be deemed guilty of slander, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars; and the jury may, in addition thereto, find a verdict for the imprisonment of defendant in the county jail not exceeding one year.

- | | |
|---|--------------------------|
| 1. Nature and elements offense. | 6. — Innuendo. |
| 2. Slander of wife by husband. | 7. — Proof and variance. |
| 3. Privileged statement. | 8. Evidence. |
| 4. Words actionable per se. | 9. Charge of court. |
| 5. Indictment and information and proof thereunder. | 10. Verdict. |

1. Nature and elements offense.—If on a prosecution for slander an inquiry into the reputation of the female establishes that such reputation is bad, the defendant is entitled to an acquittal. McMahan v. State, 13 App. 220; Shaw v. State, 28 App. 236, 12 S. W. 741; Crane v. State, 30 App. 464, 17 S. W. 939.

Article 1180 does not include or apply to defamatory language used in a judicial proceeding. The extent and object of the enactment is merely to make it a penal offense to maliciously or wantonly impute to a female a want of chastity. A construction applying it to language used in a judicial proceeding would make the law violative of an established public policy; and such construction of a statute, when avoidable, will not be adopted. Lindsey v. State, 18 App. 280.

Slanderous words spoken about two persons, at the same time and before the same persons constitute separate offenses and when charged separately, each case may be prosecuted. Collins v. State, 39 App. 30, 44 S. W. 846.

2. Slander of wife by husband.—A charge by a husband, who had carnal intercourse with his wife before marriage, that another is the father of her child, is not ground for a conviction of slander it thus appearing that she was not chaste. Baxter v. State, 34 App. 516, 31 S. W. 394, 53 Am. St. Rep. 720.

Under our statute a husband may be prosecuted for slandering his wife. Stayton v. State, 46 App. 205, 78 S. W. 1072, 108 Am. St. Rep. 988.

3. Privileged statement.—Where, on a trial for imputing to a female a want of chastity, the evidence showed that accused and the father of prosecutrix were talking about a matter not relating to prosecutrix, and that during the conversation accused began the conversation touching the prosecutrix, and uttered the slanderous words, the language of accused was not privileged. Richmond v. State, 58 App. 435, 126 S. W. 596.

Statement of defendant to L., the father of the wife of defendant B., when, B. having left his wife, L. went to defendant and asked him what was the matter, that she was unchaste before she was married was not privileged; defendant being the originator of the false charge. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 1108, L. R. A. 1915A, 572.

4. Words actionable per se.—Since words imputing want of chastity are actionable per se only by force of article 1180, such words are actionable only where they are uttered falsely and maliciously, or falsely and wantonly, and the court properly so charged, especially where plaintiff alleged that the statements concerning her were false, malicious, and slanderous, inspired by malice, hatred and ill will, and were spoken wrongfully, maliciously, and oppressively. Lehmann v. Medack (Civ. App.) 152 S. W. 438.

5. Indictment and information and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 525, 526.

An indictment for this offense must set forth, at least substantially, the words or acts constituting the alleged slander. It will not be sufficient to allege in general terms an imputation of a want of chastity. Lagrone v. State, 12 App. 426; Melton v. State, Id. 552; Hammers v. State, 13 App. 344; McMahan v. State, Id. 220; Wiseman v. State, 14 App. 74; Conlee v. State, Id. 222. It should also allege that the slander was perpetrated in the presence of some person or persons, and the better practice is to name such person or persons, or some of them. McMahan v. State, 13 App. 220; Wiseman v. State, 14 App. 74. For indictments held good, see Patterson v. State, 12 App. 458; Humbarb v. State, 21 App. 200, 17 S. W. 126.

A charge of slander set forth in the English language is not sustained by proof of words of similar import uttered in German. Stichtd v. State, 25 App. 420, 8 S. W. 477, 8 Am. St. Rep. 444.

Information must state specifically what was imputed to the female and who the female was. Neely v. State, 32 App. 370, 23 S. W. 798.

Indictment for slander based upon a statement of defendant that the prosecutrix was pregnant must negative that she was legitimately pregnant. Clark v. State, 32 App. 412, 24 S. W. 29.

An information held sufficient. Kyle v. State, 55 App. 360, 116 S. W. 598; Conlee v. State, 14 App. 222.

An indictment alleged that accused, on a date named, orally, falsely, and maliciously imputed to a female, to wit, P., a want of chastity, to wit, that accused, in the hearing of W. and others, falsely, maliciously, and wantonly said of and concerning P. that she was not a good woman, and that she showed herself in front of the drug store before men, meaning thereby and intending to convey the impression that said P. had demeaned herself in a lewd manner in front of the store and before men; that accused, in the hearing of W. and others, falsely, etc., said that three men named were paying attentions to her, the said P., meaning and intending to imply thereby that P. had theretofore had carnal intercourse with the said men, and that accused further said, in the presence and hearing of the said W. and others, that P. had gone to a party, and that a certain man stayed at the telephone office, which was in the same building as P.'s sleeping apartments, and that P. did not return to her home in the building till 2 o'clock a. m., and that such man did not get home until morning, meaning and intending to convey the impression that upon P.'s return at 2 o'clock she permitted the man to remain with her until morning, and while there had intercourse with her. Held, that the indictment was sufficient, under article 1180. Curl v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 602.

6. — Innuendo.—Innuendo is not only permissible, but is always proper when the language charged is ambiguous. Berry v. State, 27 App. 483, 11 S. W. 521; Rogers v. State, 30 App. 462, 17 S. W. 548. See, also, Stichtd v. State, 25 App. 420, 8 S. W. 477, 3 Am. St. Rep. 444; Neely v. State, 32 App. 370, 23 S. W. 798; Whitehead v. State, 39 App. 89, 45 S. W. 10; Roberts v. State, 51 App. 27, 100 S. W. 150.

In an indictment for slander, when ambiguous language is sought to be explained by innuendo, it is necessary to prove the innuendo as substantially as the slanderous words its meaning was intended to explain. Riddle v. State, 30 App. 425, 17 S. W. 1073; Frisby v. State, 26 App. 180, 9 S. W. 463.

An indictment for slander, charging that defendant "did falsely and maliciously impute a want of chastity to C., by saying that one H. was monkeying with C., and doing what he pleased with her, meaning that H. was having carnal knowledge of C.," is sufficient. Dickson v. State, 34 App. 1, 28 S. W. 815, 30 S. W. 807, 53 Am. St. Rep. 694.

On prosecution for forgery it was held proper to admit testimony to prove the innuendos and explanations as alleged. Daud v. State, 34 App. 460, 31 S. W. 376.

The slanderous words charged were that defendant told that he saw prosecutrix and one B "getting there;" held, such expression was susceptible of the meaning that the parties were having carnal intercourse, proper averments by innuendo were made in this case and indictment was sufficient. Whitehead v. State, 39 App. 89, 45 S. W. 10.

An indictment alleging that accused imputed to a married woman that she "was not a respectable woman," without containing innuendo averments alleging what the language meant, and that as spoken and intended it meant that she was unchaste, does not state an offense under this article. Woods v. State, 58 App. 103, 124 S. W. 918.

The slanderous words being susceptible of the meaning alleged by the innuendoes, the innuendoes were proper; the meaning of the language not being obvious without them. Curl v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 602.

Any information charging, in the language of the statute, that defendant falsely, maliciously, and wantonly imputed a want of chastity to a married woman, naming her, in the presence and hearing of certain persons, by saying that her husband was not the father of the child recently born to her, but that its father was a certain other man, sufficiently imputed a want of chastity, without innuendo. Hatcher v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 725.

7. — Proof and variance.—See a variance between the allegata and the probata in this respect, held to be material and fatal to the conviction. Conlee v. State, 14 App. 222.

The state must prove the alleged slander substantially as alleged. Humbard v. State, 21 App. 200, 17 S. W. 126; Conlee v. State, 14 App. 222.

The name of the alleged slandered female must be sufficiently proved to identify, and unless this is done the proof will not only be held insufficient, but the variance between the allegation and the proof will be fatal. See an instance, Humbard v. State, 21 App. 200, 17 S. W. 126.

Where the indictment names two or more persons as present and hearing the slander the names must be proved as alleged. Neely v. State, 32 App. 370, 23 S. W. 798.

To warrant a conviction for slander it is essential that the slanderous language be proven as charged, the proof of other language of same meaning is not sufficient. A charge that defendant had stated that he had had carnal knowledge of a girl was not sustained by proof that he used certain vulgar terms meaning carnal knowledge. Barnett v. State, 35 App. 280, 33 S. W. 340.

Under an indictment which alleged that the slanderous language was uttered to B. and divers other persons not named, it need not be proven that any one other than B. was present at the time of the publication. Collins v. State, 44 S. W. 846, 39 App. 30.

There was no variance between the language, "—— is a whore, and I can prove it," in an indictment for slander, and the language, "—— is a dirty whore, and I can prove it, and is the cause of my wife leaving me," proven on the trial. Kelley v. State, 51 App. 151, 101 S. W. 230.

Under an indictment for slander, alleging that defendant said that he had carnal intercourse with a named woman, the admission of evidence that he said that he had a good time, or had a time with her, constitutes a fatal variance. Hasley v. State, 57 App. 400, 123 S. W. 596, 136 Am. St. Rep. 986.

Where an indictment for slander, in violation of article 1180, for imputing to a female a want of chastity, specifically selected the imputation and charged it, the state was bound thereby as to the imputation, and the court could not permit the jury to convict accused for the imputation of want of chastity otherwise than as alleged. Woods v. State, 58 App. 103, 124 S. W. 918.

On a trial for imputing to an unmarried female a want of chastity, and that she had gone to a town to submit to an abortion, the testimony of a witness that she had seen nothing in prosecutrix's actions at that town indicating that she was not a virtuous woman was inadmissible, because beyond the issues. Richmond v. State, 58 App. 435, 126 S. W. 596, 137 Am. St. Rep. 973.

In a prosecution for slander, the slanderous language must be proven substantially as alleged. Adams v. State, 62 App. 426, 138 S. W. 117.

Where the indictment for slander alleged that the words used by defendant were that "C. and W. had knocked the said Nona M. up and had left the country and that O. was keeping them posted," while the proof was that he said that "C. & W. had knocked the M. girls up and had left the country and that O. was keeping them posted," there was a fatal variance. Simer v. State, 62 App. 514, 138 S. W. 388.

In a prosecution for slander in imputing want of chastity to a female, it is not necessary to prove all of the language charged in the information, but only the imputation of unchastity. McDonald v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 831.

There was a fatal variance in a prosecution for slander in falsely imputing unchastity, where the information alleged that accused stated that the woman "was a woman of ill fame, and that eight different parties had intercourse with her," while the competent proof only showed that accused had upbraided the woman for her ill feeling because he had told her of bad reports concerning her. McDonald v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 831.

8. Evidence.—In a prosecution for slander in imputing unchastity to a female, accused need not establish beyond a reasonable doubt that her reputation for chastity was bad; it being sufficient if the jury believe from the evidence that it is bad. McDonald v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 831; Ballew v. State, 48 App. 46, 85 S. W. 1063; Manning v. State, 37 App. 180, 39 S. W. 118.

The law presumes the chastity of every woman, and it does not devolve upon the state to prove the chastity of the alleged slandered female. Lagrone v. State, 12 App. 426; Collins v. State, 39 App. 30, 44 S. W. 846; Richmond v. State, 58 App. 435, 126 S. W. 596, 137 Am. St. Rep. 973.

The prosecutrix having resided but few months in the county of the prosecution, her reputation in the county from which she removed was admissible and competent evidence. Lum v. State, 11 App. 483; Coffelt v. State, 19 App. 436; Crane v. State, 30 App. 464, 17 S. W. 939. And see Mynatt v. Hudson, 66 Tex. 66, 17 S. W. 396. See, also, on evidence in slander cases, Frisby v. State, 26 App. 180, 9 S. W. 463; Berry v. State, 27 App. 483, 11 S. W. 521.

The defendant may prove in justification: 1. That the particular imputation which he made against the female is true. 2. That her general reputation for chastity at the time he made the imputation was bad. But he can not be permitted to prove any other acts or conduct of the female indicating a want of chastity, except those specifically embraced in the imputation made by him. Patterson v. State, 12 App. 458; McMahan v. State, 13 App. 220.

It does not devolve upon the prosecution to prove the falsity of the imputation, but the prosecution must show that the imputation was made maliciously or wantonly. McMahan v. State, 13 App. 220.

If the imputation be general, as that the impugned female "is a whore," he would be entitled to prove specific acts of such female going to establish the truth of such imputation. Wagner v. State, 17 App. 554.

The imputation being "she is a whore," not "she was a whore," it was held to be not competent for the defendant to prove that prior to her marriage she had lived in adultery with her husband, but it was competent for him to prove that she practiced illicit intercourse with other men than her husband. Wagner v. State, 17 App. 554; Duke v. State, 19 App. 14.

In a prosecution for slander, by calling an unmarried female a whore, it was held competent for the defendant to prove that, shortly previous to the alleged slander, said female had had illicit carnal intercourse with a man, and that defendant, before he uttered the alleged slander, had been informed of that fact. Said act of illicit intercourse tended to establish that the female was a whore. Duke v. State, 19 App. 14.

When the imputed slander consists of a statement as to a specific act of carnal intercourse defendant should be allowed to prove prior acts of illicit intercourse between the same parties. Wood v. State, 32 App. 476, 24 S. W. 284.

Where the words are obviously defamatory, or are clear and unambiguous, whether defamatory or not, the court and jury, and not the witnesses, construe the words; and a witness cannot be asked how he understood the words, nor what impression was produced on his mind on hearing them, and the words are to be construed in their ordinary and usual sense. When the language is ambiguous and the words used are not ordinary, but are local, technical, or slang terms, evidence is admissible to explain their meaning. Dickson v. State, 34 App. 1, 28 S. W. 815, 30 S. W. 807, 53 Am. St. Rep. 694.

On prosecution for slander, imputing to a woman want of chastity, evidence of unlawful commerce with men prior to the time of the alleged slander is admissible. Van Dusen v. State, 34 App. 456, 30 S. W. 1073. See, also, Baxter v. State, 34 App. 516, 31 S. W. 394, 53 Am. St. Rep. 720.

Statements made by defendant, similar to those alleged in the indictment, are admissible. Manning v. State, 37 App. 180, 39 S. W. 118.

Where, in a prosecution for slandering M., the words uttered incidentally involved the chastity of P., it was not error to exclude evidence that P.'s general reputation for chastity was bad, where the jury were not actuated by what was said about P., and found the least punishment for slandering the prosecutrix. Collins v. State, 39 App. 30, 44 S. W. 846.

Where the meaning of the language used was so manifest that it could have but one significance, it is not error to permit the witness to whom it was uttered to state what he understood the defendant to mean by the language used. Collins v. State, 44 S. W. 846, 39 App. 30.

Statements made by defendant to other persons made after the alleged slanderous words are admissible to show the animus of defendant. Whitehead v. State, 39 App. 89, 45 S. W. 10.

In a prosecution for criminal slander by charging a female with unchastity and lascivious conduct in the hearing of a certain person, evidence that accused used substantially the same language concerning the female's conduct in a conversation with another than charged in the indictment, and reflected on prosecuting witness' chastity to others, was admissible to show accused's intent when she uttered the slanderous words charged in the indictment. Curl v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 602.

On prosecution for slandering defendant's wife by charging misconduct with S., circumstances tending to show preparation on the part of S. for the commission of the offense are admissible as tending to show the commission of such offense. Elder v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1052.

Under articles 1180 and 1181 evidence is admissible that the woman had told accused, before his interview with her husband in which accused told him that she was unchaste, that she had had intercourse with others than her husband. McDonald v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 831.

In a prosecution for slander in imputing unchastity to a female, evidence of abusive statements made by accused concerning the female was admissible to show ill will and malice. McDonald v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 831.

In a prosecution for slander in imputing unchastity to a female, accused need not establish the truth of the alleged slanderous statement; it being sufficient as a defense that the jury believe its truth, or have a reasonable doubt of its truth. McDonald v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 831.

To sustain a conviction for slander, it is only necessary to prove substantially what is alleged in the indictment. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1022.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction for slander imputing unchastity to a female public school teacher. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 1022.

9. Charge of court.—It is not error to charge, in the language of the statute, that the law presumes the chastity of every woman. Collins v. State, 44 S. W. 846, 39 App. 30.

In case of slander the court should charge that unless the jury find from the evidence that the imputation was maliciously and wantonly made, notwithstanding it was shown to be false, they should acquit the defendant. Stayton v. State, 46 App. 205, 78 S. W. 1072, 108 Am. St. Rep. 988.

In a prosecution for slander by imputing to a woman a want of chastity, a requested charge that, in order to convict, the jury must believe beyond a reasonable doubt not only that the alleged false words were uttered by defendant, but that such words were uttered maliciously or wantonly; that the expression "maliciously" meant that the words were so uttered as to imply an evil intent or legal malice, or without reasonable grounds for believing that they were true, or that the woman had a bad reputation for chastity, or was unchaste; and that the expression "wantonly" meant that the words were uttered regardless of consequences, in a reckless manner, or under such circumstances as evinced a wicked and mischievous intent, and without excuse—should have been given, as it is a part of the statutory definition of slander. Rainwater v. State, 46 App. 496, 81 S. W. 38.

A charge giving to the jury in the alternative the terms "falsely and maliciously," or "falsely and wantonly," and authorizing a conviction in case defendant used expressions in either sense, being the language of the statute, was correct; and the fact that the indictment charged that defendant used the language falsely and maliciously and wantonly did not change the rule. Kelley v. State, 51 App. 151, 101 S. W. 230.

Where the general reputation for chastity of the slandered female is in issue article 1181, post, should be given in charge. It is reversible error to refuse to give it upon request. Dobbs v. State, 55 App. 483, 117 S. W. 800.

Article 1181 limits inquiry into the reputation of the female to the time of the uttering of the slander, or at least to a time reasonably approximating the date of such uttering; and, where evidence of her good reputation long after the alleged uttering was given, accused was entitled to a charge that the reputation must relate to the reputation at the time of the alleged slanderous words. Richmond v. State, 58 App. 435, 126 S. W. 596, 137 Am. St. Rep. 973.

In a criminal prosecution for slander, the accused is entitled to a special charge defining "wantonly" and "wilfully" as mentioned in the statute. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 614.

Where, in a prosecution for slandering defendant's wife by charging her with improper intimacy with S., defendant did not deny speaking the language charged, but claimed it was true, and there was evidence justifying a reasonable man in believing that his wife had been unduly intimate with S., it was error to refuse to charge that, before accused could be convicted, the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt that the statements were false, and that they were maliciously and wantonly made. Elder v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1052.

In a prosecution for a violation of article 1180, where the complaint and information were in the words of the statute, the refusal of a requested special charge that, unless accused made the statements alleged wantonly and falsely, he should be acquitted is properly refused; for he was guilty if he falsely and maliciously made them. Ethridge v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 1152.

10. Verdict.—A verdict in criminal slander, “We, the jury, find the defendant, C., guilty according to the law and evidence of the case, and affix the fine to the lowest limit, which is $100,” is sufficient. Curl v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 602.

Art. 1181. [751] Procedure in prosecution for.—In any prosecution under this chapter, it shall not be necessary for the state to show that such imputation was false, but the defendant may in justification show the truth of the imputation, and the general reputation for chastity of the female alleged to have been slandered may be inquired into.

See notes under preceding article and Kelly v. State, 37 App. 641, 40 S. W. 803; Jackson v. State, 42 App. 497, 60 S. W. 963; West v. State, 44 App. 417, 71 S. W. 967; Bowers v. State, 45 App. 185, 75 S. W. 299; Kyle v. State, 55 App. 357, 116 S. W. 596.

SENDING ANONYMOUS LETTERS

Art. 1182. Prohibited, penalty for so doing. 1183. Definition of.	Art. 1184. Two or more persons concerned in, either may be compelled to testify.
--	---

Article 1182. Prohibited, penalty for so doing.—If any person shall send, or cause to be sent, deliver, or cause to be delivered, to any other person any anonymous letter or written instrument of any character whatsoever, reflecting upon the integrity, chastity, virtue, good character or reputation of the person to whom such letter or written instrument is sent or addressed, or of any other person, or wherein the life of such person is threatened, said person so sending such letter or written instrument shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred and fifty dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than one month nor more than twelve months. [Act 1909, p. 138.]

What constitutes offense.—Article 1182 is violated where the writer of the letter himself delivers it to the person to whom it is addressed, in view of Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 25, requiring its provisions to be liberally construed to attain the object intended; Rev. St. 1911, art. 5502, subd. 6, requiring the court to look to the intention of the Legislature; Pen. Code 1911, art. 9, requiring that Code and all other criminal laws to be construed according to the plain import of the language without regard to the usual distinction between penal and other laws; and article 10, providing that words specially defined shall be understood in that sense, and other words in the sense in which they are understood in common language. Bradfield v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 734.

Complaint and information.—Under article 1182, making it a misdemeanor to send an anonymous letter “reflecting” on the integrity, chastity, etc., of any person, a complaint and information charging the sending of a letter which “reflects” upon a person named was not defective. Bradfield v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 734.

A complaint and information for sending an anonymous letter reflecting upon a person’s integrity, chastity, etc., need not contain the letter, in view of Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 453, requiring only such certainty as will enable accused to plead the judgment in bar of another prosecution; article 460, providing that it shall be sufficient to charge the offense in ordinary and concise language and with such certainty as will give defendant notice of the offense charged and enable the court to pronounce judgment; and article 474, providing that it is sufficient to use other words conveying the same meaning as the words used in a statute or including the sense of the statutory words. Bradfield v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 734.

Evidence.—Mere proof that accused delivered to prosecutrix an anonymous stamped and sealed letter reflecting on her chastity does not support a conviction of the crime of delivering an anonymous letter to a female reflecting on her virtue and chastity, but it must be shown that he knew the contents of the letter, which cannot be presumed from the mere fact that he delivered the letter. Sims v. State, 71 App. 44, 158 S. W. 287.

On a trial for delivering to a 15 year old girl an anonymous letter reflecting on her integrity, chastity, etc., evidence that on the night before the delivery of the letter accused was seen hugging and kissing such girl was properly excluded, in the absence of any showing that this was with her consent or permission, as otherwise such conduct would not have reflected on her. Bradfield v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 734.

Art. 1183. Definition of.—By an anonymous letter or written instrument, within the meaning of this law, is meant where the sender of such letter or written instrument withholds his or her full and true name from the same, or where no name is signed thereto, or where a fictitious name is signed thereto, or where any description of such sender instead of a name is used, such as “a friend,” or “a true friend” or the like. [Id., p. 138.]

Art. 1184. Two or more persons concerned in, either may be compelled to testify.—If two or more persons are concerned in the composition or sending of any anonymous letter or written instrument, as hereinbefore prohibited by this law, then either of such persons shall be compelled to testify thereto; and the fact that such testimony will incriminate such person shall not exempt such person from testifying in regard thereto; provided, that where such person has been compelled to testify in regard thereto as above stated, then, in that event, when such person has testified fully, fairly and truthfully in regard thereto, then such person shall not be prosecuted under this law for the particular offense about which such person has so testified. [Id., p. 138.]

Article 1185. [752] Combination to falsely accuse another.—If any two or more persons shall combine falsely to accuse another of an offense, and shall, in pursuance of such combination, make such accusation before a court or magistrate, or in any newspaper or other public print, or by the circulation of hand bills, or in any other public manner, by writing, they shall be punished by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two years.

Indictment.—Willson’s Cr. Forms, 530, 531.

Art. 1186. [753] To extort money.—If the purpose of such combination be to extort money or any pecuniary advantage, the punishment shall be by fine not to exceed two thousand dollars, and imprisonment in the penitentiary not to exceed three years.

Offense as felony.—Where money is extorted from one through threats to prosecute him for a criminal offense it is a felony. Williams v. State, 51 App. 1, 100 S. W. 149, 150.

Indictment.—Willson’s Cr. Forms, 532.

Art. 1187. [754] Threats of prosecution to extort money.—If any person, with intent to extort money, or any pecuniary advantage, shall threaten to accuse another of a felony, before any court, or to publish any other statement respecting him which would come within the meaning of libel, he shall be punished in the manner set forth in article 1185. //

See article 1466, post.

Indictment.—Willson’s Cr. Forms, 533.

Where extortion by threats of criminal prosecution before a certain justice is alleged, and threats to prosecute before another justice are proved, the variance is fatal. Strange v. State, 33 App. 315, 26 S. W. 406.

Art. 1188. [755] Publishing another as a coward.—If any person shall, in any newspaper or hand bill, or by notice posted up in any place, publish another as a coward, or use toward him other opprobrious language, he shall be fined in an amount not exceeding two hundred dollars; and, if such publication or posting be in consequence of a refusal to fight a duel, the punishment shall be by fine of not less than five hundred nor more than one thousand dollars.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 534.

Art. 1189. "Whitecapping" defined, punishment for.—Any person who shall post any anonymous notice, or make any threats or signs, or skull and cross bones, or shall, by any other method, post any character or style of notice or threat to do personal violence or injury to property on or near the premises of another, or who shall cause the same to be sent with the intention of interfering in any way with the right of such person to occupy said premises, or to follow any legitimate occupation, calling or profession, or with the intention of causing such person to abandon such premises, or precincts, or county, in which such person may reside, shall be deemed guilty of the offense of whitecapping, and, upon conviction therefor, shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for any period of time not less than two years nor more than five years. [Act 1899, p. 215.]

Notice and sign within statute.—Under indictment charging sending whitecapping letter to "Jim Owes" such a letter addressed to "Jim Owens" was properly admitted. Dunn v. State, 43 App. 25, 63 S. W. 571.

If the notice or sign is sent with the intention of interfering with the person's right to occupy his premises, or intent to frighten him, thereby causing such person to abandon such premises or causing said person by frightening to cease to occupy his premises then and in that event, the intent of the person being to interfere with the possession and occupancy of his premises by frightening him, it would be within the letter and spirit of the statute regardless of whether said notice contained a threat to do personal violence. A notice and sign as follows: "Jim Owens went to Hell June 20, 1900," and a drawing of a coffin and scaffold from which a body is suspended by the neck, is clearly a notice to prosecutor that he would be hanged June 20, 1900, and innuendo averments in the indictment are unnecessary. Dunn v. State, 43 App. 25, 63 S. W. 573.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 714, 744.

CHAPTER FIVE

BLACKLISTING

Art.	Art.
1190. What constitutes discrimination against persons seeking employment.	1194. Same prohibited.
1191. Penalty for violating preceding article.	1195. Penalty for.
1192. Prosecutions under, what is prima facie proof.	1196. Exceptions, when.
1193. "Blacklisting" defined.	1197. Servant or employé not to be coerced.
	1198. Penalty for.
	1199. Witness summoned and examined, when.

Article 1190. What constitutes discrimination against persons seeking employment.—Either or any of the following acts shall constitute discrimination against persons seeking employment:

1. Where any corporation, or receiver of the same, doing business in this state, or any agent or officer of any such corporation or receiver, shall blacklist, prevent, or attempt to prevent, by word, printing, sign, list or other means, directly or indirectly, any discharged employé, or any employé who may have voluntarily left said corporation's service, from obtaining employment with any other person, company, or corporation, except by truthfully stating in writing, on request of such former employé, the reason why such employé was discharged, or why his relationship to such company ceased.

2. Where any corporation, or receiver of the same, doing business in this state, or any officer or agent of such corporation or receiver, shall by any means, directly or indirectly, communicate to any other person or corporation any information in regard to a person who may seek employment of such person or corporation, and fails to give such person in regard to whom the communication may be made, within ten days after demand therefor, a complete copy of such communication, if in writing, and a true statement, if by sign or other means not in writing, and the names and addresses of all persons or corporations to whom said communication shall have been made.

3. Where any corporation, or receiver of the same, doing business in this state, or any agent or employé of such corporation or receiver, shall have discharged an employé, and such employé demands a statement in writing of the cause of his discharge, and such corporation, receiver, agent or employé thereof fails to furnish a true statement of the same to such discharged employé within ten days after such demand, or where any corporation or receiver of the same, or any officer or agent of such corporation, or receiver, shall fail, within ten days after written demand for the same, to furnish to any employé voluntarily leaving the service of such corporation or receiver, a statement in writing that such employé did leave such service voluntarily, or where any corporation or receiver of the same doing business within this state, shall fail to show in any statement under the provision of this law the number of years and months during which such employé was in the service of the said corporation or receiver in each and every separate capacity or position in which he was employed, and whether his services were satisfactory in each such capacity or not, or where any such corporation or receiver shall fail, within ten days after written demand for the same, to furnish to any such employé a true copy of the statement originally given to such employé for his use in case he shall have lost, or is otherwise deprived of the use of, the said original statement.

4. Where any corporation, or receiver of same, doing business in this state, or any agent or officer of the same, shall have received any request, notice or communication, either in writing or otherwise, from any person, company or corporation, preventing or calculated to prevent the employment of a person seeking employment, and shall fail to furnish to such person seeking employment, within ten days after a demand in writing therefor, a true statement of such request, notice or communication, and, if in writing, a true copy of same, and, if otherwise than in writing, a true statement thereof, and a true interpretation of its meaning, and the names and addresses of the persons, company or corporation furnishing the same.

5. Where any corporation, or receiver of the same, doing business in this state, or any officer or agent of such corporation or receiver, discharging an employé, shall have failed to give such employé a true statement of the causes of his discharge within ten days after a demand in writing therefor, and shall thereafter furnish any other person or corporation any statement or communication in regard to such discharge, unless at the request of the discharged employé.

6. Where any corporation, or receiver of same, doing business in this state, or any officer or agent of such corporation or receiver shall discriminate against any person seeking employment on account of his having participated in a strike.

7. Where any corporation, or receiver of the same, doing business in this state, or any officer or agent of such corporation, or receiver, shall give any information or communication in regard to a person seeking employment, having participated in any strike, unless such person violated the law during his participation on such strike, or in connection therewith, and unless such information is given in compliance with subdivision 1 of article 1190. [Act 1909, p. 160.]

Constitutionality.—This article does not violate the fourth amendment of the federal constitution, or the state constitution, forbidding unreasonable searches and seizures. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Hixon (Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 338; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 154 S. W. 583.

This article does not deny to corporations the due process of law guaranteed by the fifth and fourteenth amendments of the federal constitution, and article 1, § 19, of the Texas Constitution. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Hixon (Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 338; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 154 S. W. 583.

This article does not deprive corporations of the equal protection of the laws under the state and federal constitutions. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Hixon (Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 338; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 154 S. W. 583.

This article, though retroactive, is not invalid as an ex post facto law, under Const. U. S. art. 1, § 9, subd. 3, and article 1, § 10, subd. 1, and Const. Tex. art. 1, § 16. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Hixon (Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 338.

This article does not impair the obligation of contracts under Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10, subd. 1, and Const. Tex. art. 1, § 16. Id.

This article does not deny to corporations liberty of speech under the first amendment of the federal constitution and Const. Tex. art. 1, § 8. Id.

This statute is constitutional. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Hixon (Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 338; St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 154 S. W. 583.

The impairment of a corporation's right to discharge employes by the statute cannot be sustained as an exercise of the police power to deal with the real needs of the people in their health, safety, comfort, or convenience. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Sup.) 171 S. W. 703.

The "liberty to speak" or write secured by Const. art. 1, § 8, includes the corresponding right to be silent, and this right is infringed by the provisions of the statute for compelling a corporation to give a discharged employe a statement of the cause of discharge. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Sup.) 171 S. W. 703.

The impairment of a corporation's right to discharge employes at will without cause by the statute is violative of its constitutional right of liberty of contract, which right includes the corresponding right to accept a contract proposed. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Sup.) 171 S. W. 703.

The impairment of a corporation's right to discharge employes without cause by the statute is a denial of the equal protection of the laws secured by Const. U. S. Amend. 14. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Sup.) 171 S. W. 703.

The statute requiring railroad companies to furnish discharged employes with a statement of the cause of their discharge, and to furnish employes voluntarily leaving the service with a statement to that effect showing whether their services were satisfactory, is unconstitutional. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 175 S. W. 1096.

Retroactive operation.—A railroad employe, who is discharged before this article takes effect, and also makes his demand for a service letter before it takes effect is within the article, where the railroad does not act on the demand until after it takes effect. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. v. Hixon (Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 338.

This article, subs. 1, 3, is retroactive in operation, and includes employes discharged before the act took effect. Id.

Excuse.—A railroad corporation is not excused from liability for making false statements in a service letter given under this article on the ground that such statements are privileged. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 154 S. W. 583.

"True statement."—"True statement," as used in this article, means that the employer shall fairly, honestly, and in good faith, state the grounds or cause of discharge. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. of Texas v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 154 S. W. 583.

Sufficiency of statement.—Under this article a railroad employe, who is discharged without sufficient cause, and on demand receives a service letter stating that he was discharged for insubordination, has a good cause of action for damages. St. Louis Southwestern R. Co. of Texas v. Hixon (Civ. App.) 126 S. W. 338.

Where a brakeman refused to handle cars when directed so to do, on the ground that it was dangerous, and was discharged therefor, and a service letter was given him, in response to his written demand, which was never circulated by the company, and there was nothing to question its good faith in its statement that he had been guilty of insubordination, he had no cause of action against it because of the letter. St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Inman (Civ. App.) 137 S. W. 1153.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 527.

Art. 1191. Penalty for violating preceding article.—Every person violating any of the provisions of the preceding article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than one month nor more than one year. [Act 1907, p. 143.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 527.

Art. 1192. Prosecutions under, what is prima facie proof.—In prosecutions for the violation of any of the provisions of this law, evidence that any person has acted as the agent of a corporation in the transaction of its business in this state shall be received as prima facie proof that his act in the name, behalf or interest of the corporation, of which he was acting as the agent, was the act of the corporation. [Id., p. 143.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 527.

Art. 1193. "Blacklisting" defined.—He is also guilty of "blacklisting" who places, or causes to be placed, the name of any discharged employé, or any employé who has voluntarily left the service of any individual, firm, company or corporation on any book or list, or publishes it in any newspaper, periodical, letter or circular, with the intent to prevent said employés from securing employment of any kind with any other person, firm, corporation or company, either in a public or private capacity. [Act 1901, p. 264.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 527.

Art. 1194. Same prohibited.—No corporation, company, or individual shall blacklist or publish, or cause to be blacklisted or published, any employé, mechanic or laborer discharged by such corporation, company or individual, with the intent and for the purpose of preventing such employé, mechanic or laborer from engaging in or securing similar or other employment from any other corporation, company or individual. [Id., p. 264.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 527.

Art. 1195. Penalty for.—If any officer or agent of any corporation, company or individual, or other person, shall blacklist or publish, or cause to be blacklisted or published, any employé, mechanic or laborer discharged by such corporation, company or individual, with the intent and for the purpose of preventing such employé, mechanic or laborer from engaging in or securing similar or other employment from any other corporation, company or individual, or shall in any manner conspire or contrive by correspondence or otherwise, to prevent such discharged employé from procuring employment, as provided in articles 1193 and 1194, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty nor more than ninety days or both. [Id., p. 264.]

Art. 1196. Exceptions, when.—But this law shall not be construed as prohibiting any corporation, company or individual, from giving in writing, on application from such discharged employé, or any corporation, company or individual who may desire to employ such discharged employé, a truthful statement of the reason for such discharge; provided, that said written cause of discharge, when so made by such person, agent, company or corporation, shall never be used as the cause for an action for libel, either civil or criminal, against the person, agent, company or corporation so furnishing same. [Id., p. 264.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 527.

Art. 1197. Servants or employés not to be coerced.—It shall be unlawful for any person or persons, corporation or firm, or any agent, manager or board of managers, or servant, of any corporation or firm in this state to coerce or require any servant or employé to deal with or purchase any article of food, clothing or merchandise of any kind whatever, from any person, association, corporation or company, or at any place or store whatever. And it shall be unlawful for any such person or persons, or agent, manager, or board of managers, or servants, to exclude from work, or to punish or blacklist any of said employés for failure to deal with any such person or persons, or any firm, company or corporation, or to purchase any article of food, clothing or merchandise whatever at any store or any place whatever. [Act 1903, p. 89.]

Indictment.—See Willson's Cr. Forms, 527-529.

Art. 1198. Penalty for.—Any person or persons, company or corporation, or association, or any agent, manager or managers, or servant of any company, corporation or association, described in the foregoing article, who shall violate any of the provisions of the preceding article, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars for each offense. [Id., p. 89.]

Art. 1199. Witness summoned and examined, when.—Upon the application of the attorney general, or of any district or county attorney, made to any justice of the peace in this state, and stating that he has reason to believe that a witness, who is to be found in the county of which such justice of the peace is an officer, knows of a violation of any of the provisions of this chapter, it shall be the duty of the justice of the peace to whom such application is made, to have summoned and to have examined such witness in relation to violations of any of the provisions of this chapter, said witness to be summoned as provided for in criminal cases. The said witness shall be duly sworn, and the justice of the peace shall cause the statements of the witness to be reduced to writing and signed and sworn to before him; and such sworn statement shall be delivered to the attorney general, district or county attorney, upon whose application the witness was summoned. Should the witness, summoned as aforesaid, fail to appear or to make statements of the facts within his knowledge, under oath, or to sign the same after it has been reduced to writing, he shall be guilty of contempt of court, and may be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, and may be attached and imprisoned in the county jail until he shall make a full statement of all the facts within his knowledge with reference to the matter inquired about. Any person so summoned and examined shall not be liable to prosecution for any violation of the provisions of this chapter about which he may testify fully and without reserve. [Act 1907, p. 143.]

1203. "Design" the essence of the offense.	1209. Part owner cannot burn.
1204. Intent presumed, when.	1210. Punishment.
1205. Explosions included.	1211. Burning a state building.
	1212. Attempt at arson.

Article 1200. [756] Definition of.—"Arson" is the wilful burning of any house included within the meaning of the succeeding article of this chapter.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—Arson has ever been regarded as an offense against the security of the habitation rather than the property, and the actual title and true ownership can rarely be a matter for material inquiry in prosecutions for this offense. The landlord himself may commit it on the house occupied by, or in possession of, the tenant, for during the lease the house is the property of the tenant; and so the true owner may be held liable for the offense, although the contract of purchase be simply executory, and for default he may re-enter and repossess the premises by action for title and possession. The court will not inquire into the tenure or interest of the occupier or person in possession of the house, if, in fact, it is occupied or possessed by such person. Tuller v. State, 8 App. 501.

2. House.—See article 1201 and notes thereunder.

3. Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 535.

See, also, notes under following articles.

An indictment charging that the burning was "wilful" need not more specifically allege the design and intent. Thomas v. State, 41 Tex. 27; Tuller v. State, 8 App. 501.

An indictment for this offense, in addition to charging the arson, alleged that a child was in the house at the time the house was burned, and that said child was seriously injured by the fire. Held, that the allegation as to the child did not make the indictment duplicitous, but was a proper allegation in view of article 1222, post. Beaumont v. State, 1 App. 533, 28 Am. Rep. 424. Where the indictment is against the owner for burning his own house, it must allege ownership of the house in the accused, and the particular facts which bring such burning within some one of the exceptions specified in article 1208, post. Tuller v. State, 8 App. 501; Baker v. State, 25 App. 1, 8 S. W. 23, 8 Am. St. Rep. 427; Mulligan v. State, 25 App. 199, 7 S. W. 664, 8 Am. St. Rep. 435; Rogers v. State, 26 App. 404, 9 S. W. 762; Kelley v. State, 44 App. 187, 70 S. W. 20.

In the first count of an indictment for arson the appellant was charged with burning his own house, which was "then and there insured." In the second count it was charged that he burned his own house, endangering thereby the safety of houses belonging to other persons. The locus in quo is described in both counts as "a certain house then and there occupied, owned, and controlled by him, the said Baker." Held, that this allegation is sufficient, inasmuch as the words "then and there" have definite reference to the date and the county previously alleged in the counts. It was not necessary that the first count should allege the amount of the insurance nor the company in which the house was insured. Nor was it necessary that the second count should allege who were the owners of the houses alleged to have been endangered by the burning of the defendant's house, provided they were not the property of the defendant himself. Baker v. State, 25 App. 1, 8 S. W. 23, 8 Am. St. Rep. 427.

Indictment described the burned building as "the house of Mary Gandy there situate in the town of Granbury, said Hood county, Texas, and the said house being then and there held and occupied by C. M. Rogers for and as the agent of J. M. Rogers, said Rogers having theretofore, on or about the second day of November, 1886, rented and leased said house from the said Mary Gandy by and through J. M. Skipper as the agent of her, the said Mary Gandy." The defense excepted to the indictment on the grounds that the description of the house was uncertain, and the averments of its ownership and occupancy uncertain, inconsistent, and repugnant. Held, that the exceptions were correctly overruled, and that it would have sufficed to have described the building as the house of C. M. Rogers, or a house occupied by C. M. Rogers, situated in the town of Granbury, in Hood county, state of Texas. The averments of the ownership of Mary Gandy and the lease to J. M. Rogers were unnecessary and required the state to prove them, but their redundancy does not vitiate the indictment. Rogers v. State, 26 App. 404, 9 S. W. 762.

Where an indictment for arson describes the house alleged to have been burnt as occupied by defendant and one H. as tenants, there is no variance if the evidence shows that the owner of the house rented it to defendant, and that H. jointly occupied it under an agreement with defendant. Woolsey v. State, 30 App. 346, 17 S. W. 546.

Ownership was properly alleged in one in possession under an oral gift from his father. Wyley v. State, 34 App. 514, 31 S. W. 393.

Though, under Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1897, arts. 2968, 2969, providing that all property acquired by either husband or wife during marriage shall be deemed common property, and that during coverture it may be disposed of only by the husband, a house purchased by the husband with his earnings after marriage, and the deed taken in the name of the wife, is community property, an indictment for a criminal burning of the house properly alleged the ownership to be in the husband, and proof that the property was purchased with the husband's earnings, and that the deed was taken in the name of the wife did not establish a variance. Finckard v. State, 62 App. 602, 138 S. W. 601.

Under article 1200, and articles 1207, and 1208, an indictment charging accused with procuring another to burn his house, which was insured, need not allege that the person who set fire to the house knew that it was insured. Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 122.

Though defendant burned G.'s house with his consent, the indictment need not, as in an indictment against G., negative the conditions which would save him from guilt, but the indictment merely charging that defendant burned G.'s house, and such consent, a matter of defense, appearing in the evidence, the state could in rebuttal negative such conditions. Crowder v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 501.

4. Evidence.—See notes under following articles.

Evidence of similar crimes, motive, etc., see C. C. P. art. 783 et seq.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Williams v. State, 41 Tex. 209; Davis v. State, 15 App. 594; Smith v. State, 23 App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773; Bluman v. State, 33 App. 43, 21 S. W. 1027, 26 S. W. 75. Contra, Tuller v. State, 8 App. 501; McMahon v. State, 17 App. 321; Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 436; Landers v. State, 39 App. 671, 47 S. W. 1008.

It was held competent for the prosecution, for the purpose of proving malice on the part of the defendant toward the alleged injured party, to show that prior to the arson there had been difficulties between the defendant and the owner of the burned property, and that the defendant was the aggressor in such difficulties. Davis v. State, 15 App. 594.

In a trial for arson the defense objected to the admission of oral evidence adduced by the state to prove the alleged ownership of the burned house, but the objection was overruled and the testimony admitted. It appears, however, that the same fact was proved by other evidence, to which no objection was made by the defense, and that the defendant occupied the house under a lease from the owner. Held, that in view of this proof there was no material error in overruling the objection to the oral proof of the ownership. Rogers v. State, 26 App. 404, 9 S. W. 762.

Defendant's stepdaughter was allowed to testify that defendant struck her with a stick, and she took refuge in the house that was burned. Held competent to show motive. Oliver v. State, 33 App. 541, 28 S. W. 202.

Where, in a prosecution for arson, there was positive testimony connecting accused with the attempt to burn the house, together with other testimony tending strongly to show an alibi, and other testimony raising the issue of sanity, a judgment of conviction will not be reversed for insufficiency of the evidence. Glaser v. State, 60 App. 379, 131 S. W. 1097.

While parol evidence is inadmissible to prove title to real estate, in a prosecution for arson it is sufficient to prove possession of the property by parol, since the offense is directed against the possession rather than against the absolute ownership. Allen v. State, 62 App. 501, 137 S. W. 1133.

But where the building was unoccupied parol evidence of ownership was admitted. Goldsmith v. State, 46 App. 556, 81 S. W. 710.

In a prosecution for arson, evidence of witness that he pointed out to the sheriff the team driven by defendant to the place where the burning occurred was admissible. Allen v. State, 62 App. 501, 137 S. W. 1133.

The admission of testimony as to contents of building was proper when it was shown that the defendant knew the contents, and must have known what would be the consequence of setting fire to it, and not giving the alarm until too late to save the property. Anderson v. State, 71 App. 27, 159 S. W. 847.

In a prosecution for arson, evidence, consisting of circumstances and a confession, held sufficient to authorize the jury to find that the defendant was a principal in the commission of the offense. Anderson v. State, 71 App. 27, 159 S. W. 847.

In a prosecution of accused as an accomplice to arson, evidence that on the night of the fire, when witness first discovered it, he could smell coal oil very strong, and could see that it had been used there, was admissible. Thomason v. State, 71 App. 439, 160 S. W. 359.

Evidence was not admissible, in a prosecution for burning a house in which accused lived, that witness saw accused with a certain dress on which she made since the fire, unless it were shown that the particular dress was included by accused in her statement of loss from the fire. McClary v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 572.

6. — Identity of defendant.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.
7. — Confessions.—See notes under article 89, ante, and C. C. P. arts. 809, 810.
8. — Other offenses.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.
9. — Expert testimony.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.
10. Charge of court.—See Jones v. State, 5 App. 130.

Facts on which held error to refuse to instruct that an explosion did not come within definition of arson unless it set the house on fire and not merely the parts detached by the explosion. Landers v. State, 39 App. 671, 47 S. W. 1008.

Evidence held to require a charge on whether the house was burned or was merely scorched. Moore v. State, 51 App. 468, 103 S. W. 188.

Where the property burned was shown to be the property of A., and was so charged in the indictment, and there is no question in the record of his ownership, a charge that accused was alleged to have burned a certain house "as charged in the indictment" is sufficient, though it did not state that the house was the property of A. Allen v. State, 62 App. 557, 137 S. W. 1133.

In a prosecution for arson, a number of witnesses testified that B. and another had carried goods from accused's house on the evening before it was burned, and accused testified that he did not know where they were until some time after they were removed; and the removal of such goods from accused's house was relied on by the state as an incriminating fact. Accused requested an instruction that, if the jury believed that B. and another, whose name was unknown, in fact removed the goods from accused's house without his knowledge, they should acquit. Held, that it was error not to call to the jury's attention the facts embodied in the charge requested. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 436.

Art. 1201. [757] "House" defined.—A "house" is any building, edifice or structure inclosed with walls and covered, whatever may be the materials used for building.

Smith v. State, 23 App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773; Mulligan v. State, 25 App. 199, 7 S. W. 664, 8 Am. St. Rep. 435.

What constitutes house.—A jail is a house within this article. Smith v. State, 23 App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773.

A "building" ceases to be such when torn down; one could not be convicted of arson for burning the materials of a crib after tearing it down. Mulligan v. State, 25 App. 199, 7 S. W. 664, 8 Am. St. Rep. 435.

A gin set upon posts, the lower part used for the engine and the upper part which was entirely inclosed with walls used for the gin-house proper, is a "house" within the meaning of this statute. Caddell v. State, 50 App. 380, 97 S. W. 706.

Sufficiency of definition in relation to perjury.—A prosecution for perjury in swearing he did not see a gaming table in a "house" was not sustained by evidence that defendant did see such table in a structure attached to a saloon, enclosed on the four sides but not above. Waul v. State, 33 App. 228, 26 S. W. 199.

Indictment and proof.—Inasmuch as the law vests title of schoolhouses in the county judge, as trustee, it is sufficient to prove character of building and who was county judge at the time. Hester v. State (Cr. App.) 51 S. W. 933.

Charge of court.—Where there was no question that the house which was burned was a ginhouse, a definition by the court in its charge that a "house" is any building, edifice, or structure inclosed with walls and covered, whatever be the material used for the building, was sufficient and not misleading, and was in accord with this article. Allen v. State, 62 App. 501, 137 S. W. 1133.

Art. 1202. [758] Offense complete, when.—The burning is complete when the fire has actually communicated to a house, though it may be neither destroyed nor seriously injured.

Smith v. State, 23 App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773; Delany v. State, 41 Tex. 601.

House smoked or scorched.—Evidence showing that the walls of the house were smoked and scorched is not sufficient to support conviction. Woolsey v. State, 30 App. 346, 17 S. W. 546.

Art. 1203. [759] "Design" the essence of the offense.—It is of no consequence by what means the fire is communicated to a house, if the burning is with design. It may be by setting fire to any combustible material communicating therewith, by an explosion, or by any other means.

Art. 1204. [760] Intent presumed, when.—When fire is communicated to a house by means of the burning of another house, or some combustible matter, it shall be presumed that the intent was to destroy every house actually burnt; provided there was any apparent danger of such destruction.

Setting fire to prison to escape.—In Delaney v. State, 41 Tex. 601, it was held that if a prisoner in jail sets fire to the door, with the intent to burn off the lock so as to effect his escape, or burns a hole in the floor for the same purpose, it is not arson. But, if he communicates the fire to the building without such definite purpose, but with intent to create an alarm, and thus effect his escape in the confusion, being at the same time indifferent whether the building is consumed or not, it would be arson. But the doctrine of that case in so far as it holds that if a prisoner wilfully sets fire to the prison for the purpose of making his escape, with no design of burning the house down, it would not be arson, has been expressly overruled in Smith v. State, 23 App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773, where the question is fully discussed, and the Smith Case was followed in Willis v. State, 32 App. 534, 25 S. W. 123.

Art. 1205. [761] Explosions included.—The explosion of a house by means of gunpowder, or other explosive matter, comes within the meaning of arson.

Explosion.—By the force of a dynamite explosion, splinters of the ceiling of a house were scattered on the floor. Some of these splinters were on fire. Some of the paper between the tin roofing and rafters also burned. Held, that on a trial under an indictment charging defendant with the burning of the house, but not drawn under this article it was error to refuse an instruction that the explosion did not come within the definition of "arson," unless it resulted in setting the house on fire, in contradistinction to the burning of the parts of the house blown off and detached therefrom. Landers v. State, 47 S. W. 1008, 39 App. 671.

Indictment.—In order to support a conviction under this article the indictment should allege the blowing up of the house. Landers v. State, 39 App. 671, 47 S. W. 1008.

Art. 1206. [762] Except, when.—A house, blown up or otherwise destroyed for the purpose of saving another house from fire, is not within the meaning of arson.

Art. 1207. [763] Owner may destroy, except when.—The owner of a house may destroy it by fire or explosion without incurring the penalty of arson, except in the cases mentioned in the succeeding article.

See notes under the following section.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 536.

Art. 1208. [764] Exceptions.—When a house is within a town or city, or when it is insured, or when there is within it any property belonging to another, or when there is apparent danger by reason of the burning thereof, that the life or person of some individual, or the safety of some house belonging to another will be endangered, the owner, if he burn the same, is guilty of arson, and shall be punished accordingly.

Possession as tenant.—One in possession of a house as tenant, who willfully burns it, is guilty of arson, though the elements of that crime by an owner, enumerated here, such as location of the building in a town or city, insurance, containing property of another, etc., do not exist. Kelley v. State, 44 App. 187, 70 S. W. 20.

House containing property of another.—Neither a part owner nor the exclusive owner, when the house contains property of another, can burn the house. Mulligan v. State, 25 App. 199, 7 S. W. 664, 8 Am. St. Rep. 435.

Insured property.—In a prosecution for the burning of a building to secure the insurance thereon, it must be shown, where the accused was not the owner, that he knew of the insurance, and that he burned the building at the instigation of the owner or some one else to defraud the insurance company. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 183.

Under this article, it is not necessary that the property was burned with intent to defraud the insurance company, and therefore the state need not prove that the insurance policy was valid or was issued by a company authorized to do business within the state. Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 122.

Indictment and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 536.

To charge an owner or occupant under any of the exceptions contained in the statute subjecting him to liability the indictment must be so framed as to bring the case within some exception. Tuller v. State, 8 App. 501.

Under Pen. Code Tex. art. 1209, denouncing the burning of a house by a part owner, a tenant in possession of a house under a lease is a part owner; and an indictment against him for arson in burning the building must allege such tenancy, and the particular facts making the burning arson, under this section, as that there was property of another in the house, or that the life of some person was endangered by the burning. Mulligan v. State, 25 App. 199, 7 S. W. 664, 8 Am. St. Rep. 435.

An indictment charging that defendant burned his own house, thereby endangering the safety of houses belonging to other persons, is sufficient without giving the names of such other persons. Baker v. State, 25 App. 1, 8 S. W. 23, 8 Am. St. Rep. 427.

An indictment charging that defendant burned his own house, the said house being at the time insured, is sufficient, without alleging the facts in relation to the insurance. Baker v. State, 25 App. 1, 8 S. W. 23, 8 Am. St. Rep. 427.

Arson may be committed by the tenant in possession as against the owner of the estate in fee, and an allegation of the facts setting forth his status as a tenant in possession and alleging in whom lies the fee title will be sufficient without further alleging the elements of arson committed by the owner. Kelley v. State, 44 App. 187, 70 S. W. 20.

Under this and the preceding article and article 1200, an indictment charging accused with procuring another to burn his house, which was insured, need not allege that the person who set fire to the house knew that it was insured. Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 122.

Nor was it necessary to allege by whom or by what authority the house was insured; an allegation in the language of the statute that it was insured being sufficient. Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 122.

Where an indictment, charging the defendant with procuring another to burn his insured house, alleged that the other maliciously set fire to the house, and that the defendant paid the other a certain sum of money in another county, the state need not prove the malice, or the payment of the exact sum, or that the payment was in the named county, which allegations were not necessary to constitute the offense, since the rule that, when a person, place, or thing necessary to be alleged in an indictment is particularly described, it must be proved as described does not apply to allegations, which are mere surplusage. Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 122.

Though defendant burned G.'s house with his consent, the indictment need not, as in an indictment against G., negative the conditions which would save him from guilt, but the indictment merely charging that defendant burned G.'s house, and such consent, a matter of defense, appearing in the evidence, the state could in rebuttal negative such conditions. Crowder v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 501.

Evidence.—In order to convict one accused of burning a building to obtain the insurance, proof of guilt must be made beyond a reasonable doubt. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 183.

Evidence that the defendant was an agent of the insurer and procured the issuance of the policy to the one who subsequently assigned it to him, that he took the policy to the company's agent and had it transferred by the agent to himself after the assignment, that practically as part of the same transaction he hired another to burn the property in order that he might collect the insurance, and thereafter attempted to collect the amount of the policy and accepted a part thereof in settlement, was sufficient foundation to justify the admission of the policy and assignment in evidence. Arnold v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 122.

Art. 1209. [765] Part owner can not burn.—One of the part owners of a house is not permitted to burn it.

Art. 1210. [766] Punishment.—If any person be guilty of arson, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than five nor more than twenty years.

See post, arts. 1222 and 1223.

Excessive punishment.—The maximum penalty of twenty years under the former statute held not severe under the evidence in the case. Davis v. State, 15 App. 594.

Art. 1211. [767] Burning a state building.—If any person shall wilfully burn the capitol building of the state, the treasury building or comptroller's office, the supreme court building, the executive mansion or the general land office, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for life.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 537.

Art. 1212. [768] Attempt at arson.—If any person shall, by any means calculated to effect the object, attempt to commit the offense of arson, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years.

Attempt defined.—To "attempt" is to make an effort to accomplish some object; to try, to endeavor, to use exertion for some purpose. It necessarily implies an exertion, or effort. An attempt to commit a crime is an endeavor to accomplish it, carried beyond mere preparation, but falling short of the ultimate design, in any part of it. Lovett v. State, 19 Tex. 174.

An attempt to commit a crime is an intent to do it accompanied by some act toward it, but falling short of the commission of the crime. Watts v. State, 30 App. 533, 17 S. W. 1092.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 538.

An indictment charging that a person on or about a certain date did then and there unlawfully, wilfully, and maliciously and with intent and by means calculated to effect the object attempt to set fire to and burn a certain house situated in Johnson county, to wit, that he did then and there unlawfully, wilfully, and maliciously pour a quantity of kerosene oil, a highly inflammable and combustible liquid, upon the floor and billiard and pool tables in such house and set fire to it, with intent to burn the house, sufficiently charges attempted arson. Woods v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 633.

CHAPTER TWO

OF OTHER WILFUL BURNING

Art.	Art.
1213. Rules of arson applicable.	1221. Burning personal property of another.
1214. Burning of other buildings, hay, lumber, etc.	1222. Punishment double in case of personal injury.
1215. Ship, or other vessel, or boat.	1223. When death ensues, murder.
1216. Offense complete, when.	1224. Attempt at other wilful burning.
1217. Bridge burning.	1225. Wilfully firing grass in inclosure of another.
1218. Burning woodland or prairie.	1226. Wilfully firing grass with intent to injure.
1219. Offense complete, when.
1220. Burning personal property insured.

Article 1213. [769] Rules of arson applicable.—The rules and definitions, contained in the preceding chapter with respect to arson, apply also to wilful burnings under the provisions of this chapter, where they are not clearly inapplicable.

Art. 1214. [770] Burning other buildings, hay, lumber, etc.—If any person shall wilfully burn any building, not coming within the description of a house, as defined in the preceding chapter, or shall wilfully burn any stack of corn, hay, fodder, grain or flax, or any pile of boards, lumber or wood, or any fence or other inclosure, the property of another, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, or by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars.

Burning fence.—For evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction for burning a fence, see Pipe v. State, 3 App. 56.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 539, 540.

Art. 1215. [771] Ship, or other vessel, or boat.—If any person shall wilfully burn any ship or other vessel, or any boat of any kind whatsoever, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years, or by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 541.

Art. 1216. [772] Offense complete, when.—This offense is complete only when some person other than the person offending has an interest in the property by insurance or otherwise at the time the burning takes place.

Art. 1217. [773] Bridge burning.—If any person shall wilfully burn any bridge, which, by law or usage, is a public highway, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years, or by fine not exceeding five thousand dollars. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 177.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 542.

Art. 1218. [774] Burning woodland or prairie.—If any person shall wilfully or negligently set fire to, or burn, or cause to be burned, any woodland or prairie, not his own, he shall be punished by fine not less than fifty nor more than three hundred dollars. [Act April 14, 1883, p. 102.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 543.

For an indictment held good, see State v. White, 41 Tex. 64.

Art. 1219. [775] Offense complete, when.—The offense named in the foregoing article is complete where the person offending sets fire to his own woodland or prairie and the fire communicates to the woodland or prairie of another.

Art. 1220. [776] Burning personal property insured.—If any person, with intent to defraud, shall wilfully burn any personal property owned by himself, which shall be at the time insured against loss or damage from fire, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 178.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 544.

Evidence.—Proof that defendant's clerk forbade the removal of goods from the store is incompetent, in the absence of any evidence that defendant authorized him to do so, other than the statement of a person that he was told by defendant to desist from carrying out goods. 33 App. 43, 21 S. W. 1027, reversed. Bluman v. State, 33 App. 43, 26 S. W. 75.

It was error to permit a witness to testify that defendant could have saved some of his goods, had he tried, it not appearing that he knew what defendant could do. 33 App. 43, 21 S. W. 1027, reversed. Bluman v. State, 33 App. 43, 26 S. W. 75.

It was error to admit evidence of the amount of goods saved from a house that was burned at the same time as defendant's store. 33 App. 43, 21 S. W. 1027, reversed. Bluman v. State, 33 App. 43, 26 S. W. 75.

Art. 1221. [777] Burning personal property of another.—If any person shall wilfully burn any personal property belonging to another, the punishment for which is not otherwise provided for in this chapter, he shall be fined not exceeding two thousand dollars.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 545.

Where an indictment is framed under this article it is not necessary to allege the value of the property burned. Stanton v. State, 45 App. 168, 74 S. W. 771

Art. 1222. [778] Punishment doubled in case of personal injury.—If any bodily injury less than death is suffered by any person by reason of the commission of any of the offenses named in this and the preceding chapter, the punishment may be increased by the jury so as not to exceed double that which is prescribed in cases where no such injury is suffered.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 546.

An indictment was neither duplicitous or improper under this article because it alleged that a little child was in the house burned and received bodily injuries. Beaumont v. State, 1 Tex. 533, 28 Am. Rep. 424.

Art. 1223. [779] When death ensues, murder.—Where death is occasioned by any of the offenses described in this and the preceding chapter, the offender is guilty of murder.

See, ante, Murder.

Art. 1224. [780] Attempts at other wilful burning.—If any person shall, by any means calculated to effect the object, attempt to commit any of the offenses enumerated in this chapter, he shall receive such punishment as may be assessed by the jury, not to exceed one-half of the penalty which would have been affixed in case the offense attempted had been actually committed; provided, that, when the punishment shall be confinement in the penitentiary in no case shall the lowest term be less than two years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 178.]

See art. 1212, ante, and note thereunder.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 547.

Art. 1225. [781] Wilfully firing grass in inclosure of another.—Any person who shall wilfully fire any grass within any inclosure, not his own, in this state, with intent to destroy the grass in such pasture, or any part thereof, or any person who shall fire the grass on the outside of any inclosure with the intent to destroy the grass in such inclosure, by the communication of said fire to the grass within, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 7, 1884, pp. 66-67.]

Proof of ownership or title by possession.—See note under art. 1200.

Ownership or title by possession is always made by parol evidence. A mere possessory title in some one other than defendant was all that the state was required to prove. The proof of ownership here held sufficient. Phillips v. State, 17 Tex. 169.

Indictment.—Allegation of ownership in general, see note under art. 1200.

An indictment under the old law charging a burning of prairie on December 1 was good without stating that it was between July 1 and February 15 succeeding, the time limits of the former statute. State v. White, 41 Tex. 64.

An indictment almost literally in the language of the statute, and alleging that the offense was committed in Parker county and that the grass fired was the grass in T's pasture inside his inclosure and that defendant set fire to said grass unlawfully and wilfully with intent to destroy it, sufficiently charged venue and was sufficient generally. While it might not have been necessary to charge ownership other than as not being in defendant, the specific allegation of ownership was not a defect. Phillips v. State, 17 App. 169.

Art. 1226. [782] Wilfully firing grass with intent to injure, etc.—If any person shall wilfully, and with intent to injure the owner or owners of the stock grazing thereon, set fire to any grass upon land not his own, with intent to destroy the same, he shall be confined in the state penitentiary for a period not less than one year nor more than three years. [Id.]

CHAPTER THREE

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF, [CRUELTY TO ANIMALS, TRESPASS, ETC.]

Art.		Art.
1227.	Wilfully sinking vessels, etc.	1249.	When horses, mules, cattle, etc., are prohibited from running at large.
1228.	Destroying telegraph or obstructing message.	1250.	Herding stock in half mile of residence.
1229.	Obstructing railway track, etc.	1251.	Each hour a separate offense.
1230.	Killing animal to injure owner.	1252.	Wilful destruction of irrigation canal.
1231.	Cruelty to animals.	1253.	Obstructing or injuring county drain.
1231a.	Same; feeding and watering animals impounded.	1254.	Cut, destroy or injure levee.
1231b.	Same; care of poultry or birds confined.	1254a.	Destroying or defacing corner, line, mark, etc., in connection with levee.
1231c.	Same; member of Humane Society may require arrests to be made.	1255.	Entering upon inclosed land of another to hunt or take fish.
1231d.	Same; definition of terms.	1255a.	Hunting on enclosed and posted lands containing 2000 acres or more.
1231e.	Same; repeal.	1255b.	Same; punishment; proviso.
1231f.	Same; pending prosecutions.	1255c.	Same; necessity of posting.
1232.	Using animals without consent of owner.	1255d.	Same; repeal.
1233.	Removing buoy, etc.	1255e.	Same; does not authorize hunting in enclosed farms.
1234.	Robbing orchards, gardens, etc.	1256.	Same; counties exempted.
1235.	Destroying fruit, corn, etc.	1257.	Preventing the moving, etc., of railroad trains.
1236.	Introducing Johnson grass.	1258.	Each day a separate offense.
1237.	Requisites of indictment.	1259.	Wilfully injuring railroad, etc.
1238.	Injuring, etc., baggage.	1259a.	Taking or driving motor vehicle belonging to another.
1239.	Throwing stones or firing at railway cars, etc.	1259b.	Removing tools and parts from motor vehicle with intent to steal the same; receiving same.
1240.	Injuring fence, leaving open gates, etc.	1259c.	Meddling with or injuring motor vehicle.
1241.	Where stock law adopted, what constitutes offense.	1259d.	Peddlers, etc., refusing to leave premises on request of owner.
1242.	Wantonly and wilfully, etc., cutting, etc., fence.
1243.	Unlawful to remove party fence.
1244.	Notice of intention to remove.
1245.	Notice requiring removal.
1246.	Dogging stock when fence insufficient.
1247.	"Insufficient fence" defined.
1248.	Removing rock, earth, etc., from premises of another.

Article 1227. [783] Wilfully sinking vessels, etc.—If any person shall wilfully and maliciously cast away, sink or destroy, in any way other than by fire, any vessel or boat which, together with its cargo, if any, shall be of the value of one hundred dollars or more, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, or by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars. If the life of any person is lost by such act, the offender is guilty of murder. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 178.]

Malice and intent.—Intent is an essential element of crimes coming within the purview of this chapter and must be proved. Owens v. State, 25 App. 552, 8 S. W. 658; Brewer v. State, 28 App. 565, 13 S. W. 1004; McMahan v. State, 29 App. 348, 16 S. W. 171.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 548.

Malicious mischief as offense per se.—No such an offense as malicious mischief per se is known to the law. Koritz v. State, 27 App. 53, 10 S. W. 757. See, also, Hooks v. State, 25 App. 601, 8 S. W. 803; Jamison v. State, 27 App. 442, 11 S. W. 483; White v. State, 27 App. 638, 11 S. W. 643; Yarbrough v. State, 28 App. 481, 13 S. W. 775.

Art. 1228. [784] Destroying telegraph or obstructing message.—If any person shall intentionally break, cut, pull or tear down, misplace, or in any other manner injure any telegraph or telephone wire, post, machinery or other necessary appurtenance to any telegraph or telephone line, or in any way wilfully obstruct or interfere with the transmission of messages along such telegraph or telephone line, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, or by fine not less than one hundred nor more than two thousand dollars. [Act Feb. 10, 1885, p. 10.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

What constitutes offense.—To constitute an offense under this article there must have been a breaking, cutting, etc., of some wire, post, machinery or other necessary appurtenances in such manner as to interfere with the transmission of messages along the line. The fact that the wire cut was a dead wire, does not bring the offense within the meaning of this article. Southwestern Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Priest et al., 31 Civ. App. 345, 72 S. W. 242.

Indictment and evidence.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 549, 551.

An information charging that accused unlawfully and wilfully injured and destroyed "certain personal property, to wit, did cut, injure, and pull up posts that were to be used as a phone line," the same belonging to specified persons, "without the consent of any of the parties interested in said property, the property injured, cut, and destroyed by" accused being under the value of $50, is sufficient. Craighead v. State, 117 S. W. 128, 55 App. 386.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction for wilfully injuring telephone posts in a public road. Craighead v. State, 55 App. 386, 117 S. W. 128.

Where one accused of wilfully destroying telephone poles claimed he believed them to be on his land, instead of in an abutting road, and contended that the fence on the south side of the road was on his land, the state could show he previously told witness that the fence on the north side encroached four feet on his land, and that, pursuant to accused's instructions, witness placed the poles six feet from the fence. Craighead v. State, 117 S. W. 128, 55 App. 386.

In a trial for wilfully destroying telephone posts, witness could testify that the posts belonged to him and the other prosecuting witnesses. Craighead v. State, 117 S. W. 128, 55 App. 386.

Art. 1229. [785] Obstructing railroad tracks, etc.—If any person shall wilfully place any obstruction upon the track of any railroad, or remove any rail therefrom, or displace or interfere with any switch thereof, or in any way injure such road, or shall do any damage to any railroad, locomotive, tender or car, whereby the life of any person might be endangered, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than seven years. If the life of any person be lost by such unlawful act, the offender is guilty of murder. [Act March 8, 1887, p. 14.]

See notes under 1227, ante; see post, article 1259.

Nature and elements of offense.—It must appear how the obstruction might or would have endangered human life, as this is the gist of the offense. Bullion v. State, 7 App. 462.

Under the statute making it an offense to wilfully obstruct a railroad track, it is immaterial whether the railroad company is a legal corporation or not. Clay v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 166.

Principals.—See notes under article 74, ante.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 552, 554.

Indictment need not allege the names of the persons whose lives were endangered. Barton v. State, 28 App. 483, 13 S. W. 783. But it should allege that the obstruction was such as to endanger life. 10 Cr. L. Mag. 391.

An indictment charging defendant with placing grease and soap on a railroad track with intent to wreck a train which was being operated, and that he did thereby damage said road and endanger the lives of the employes who were then operating the train, is sufficient. Tuller v. State, 58 App. 571, 126 S. W. 1158.

The indictment need not allege that the railroad company was legally incorporated. Clay v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 166.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to show that human life was endangered by the act committed. Bullion v. State, 7 App. 462.

To show motive the state was properly allowed to prove that the defendant, soon after the offense charged, placed another obstruction at a contiguous point on the track. The charge of the court should, however, have restricted this proof to its legitimate function. Barton v. State, 28 App. 483, 13 S. W. 783.

Where defendants introduced evidence to show that the obstruction was inadvertently placed evidence that they placed another similar obstruction on the same track at a short distance from the first one, on the same evening, was admissible to negative the idea of inadvertence. Stanfield v. State, 43 App. 10, 62 S. W. 917.

Evidence on which held that the court should have instructed on the probability of the guilt of others than defendant. Kirby v. State, 49 App. 517, 93 S. W. 1030.

Charge of court.—Where defendants were on trial for placing an obstruction on a railroad track, and one testified that he was 200 or 300 yards distant at the time the obstruction was placed on the track, and was urging the other to keep away, he was entitled to a charge that, if the jury should find this to be true, he should be acquitted. Stanfield v. State, 43 App. 10, 62 S. W. 917.

Where there is evidence of defendant's placing grease on a railroad track in two places, one where human life was endangered and one where it was not, the court should instruct the jury to consider the evidence as to the placing of the grease in the latter place only for the purposes of showing motive or intent. Tuller v. State, 58 App. 571, 126 S. W. 1158.

In a prosecution for the statutory offense of placing an obstruction upon a railroad track, it is not necessary that the court by instruction define what is meant by obstruction, as that term is defined by the statute itself. Clay v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 166.

In a prosecution for obstructing a railroad track, a charge that, if there was a reasonable doubt as to whether the defendant was on the ground where the offense was committed at the time of its commission, defendant should be acquitted, was not objectionable as placing upon the defendant the burden of proving an alibi. Clay v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 166.

Art. 1230. [786] Killing animal to injure owner.—If any person shall wilfully kill, maim, wound, poison or disfigure any horse, ass, mule, cattle, sheep, goat, swine, dog or other domesticated animal, or any domesticated bird, of another, with intent to injure the owner thereof, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars. And in prosecutions under this article, the intent to injure may be presumed from the perpetration of the act. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 178.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Explanatory.—In revising (1879) the words "or other domesticated animal, or any domesticated bird," were added.

Nature and elements of offense.—It is well-settled law that if an animal be killed or injured by a person in the necessary protection of his property, after he has ineffectually used ordinary care to otherwise protect such property, such killing or injury will not be deemed either "wilful or wanton," within the meaning of the Penal Code. Farmer v. State, 21 App. 423, 2 S. W. 767.

Where a person has a good fence around his premises, and another's cattle, which are fence-breakers, break through it, he has a right to shoot them to protect his crop. Huffman v. State, 110 S. W. 749, 53 App. 489.

That defendant carried the hogs killed to the owner was no defense. Wallace v. State, 30 Tex. 758.

To constitute this offense the act must have been done "wilfully," that is, with evil intent, with legal malice, without legal justification, and the evidence must show such wilfulness to sustain a conviction. Newton v. State, 3 App. 245; Lane v. State, 16 App. 172; Farmer v. State, 21 App. 423, 2 S. W. 767.

Defendant killing male sheep as the only means of preventing their access to his herd of ewes was not guilty of a wilful or wanton killing, whatever his civil liability. Thomas v. State, 14 App. 200.

Though the hog law be in force in a locality, where malicious mischief is committed by the killing of hogs of another, within an insufficient inclosure belonging to the person committing it, he may be convicted, if the proof shows that he either wantonly or wilfully committed the act. Gerdes v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 268. "Wilful" and "wanton" defined in charge approved. Henderson v. State, 53 App. 533, 111 S. W. 736.

For discussion of necessity of showing malice, and meaning of "wilful" in this connection, see Caldwell v. State, 55 App. 164, 115 S. W. 597, 131 Am. St. Rep. 809.

Distinguished from other offenses.—See notes under articles 1231 and 1246, post. The distinction between the offense denoted in this article and theft is, that a wilful killing with intent to injure the owner of the property completes the former, while to constitute the latter there must exist the additional fraudulent intent to deprive the owner of the value of the property and to appropriate it to the use of the offender. Martin v. State, 44 Tex. 172; Thompson v. State, 30 Tex. 356.

This article is distinguished from article 1231 in that it is for the protection of the owner, whereas article 1231 is for the protection of the animal or bird. Turman v. State, 4 App. 586; Irvin v. State, 7 App. 78.

Defence under alibi.—Where, in a prosecution for maliciously shooting a dog, defendant pleaded an alibi, he could not set up either actual or apparent danger from the dog, or his vicious habits, in justification. Atchison v. State, 44 App. 551, 72 S. W. 998.

Jurisdiction.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 106.

Indictment and information and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 564.

Description of animals in indictment for theft, see notes under article 1353 et seq.

Where the indictment charged the defendant with killing a bull, it was held that the state need not prove the brand on the animal. It is sufficient if the ownership of the animal be proved, and this may be done by other evidence than that of a recorded brand. Nutt v. State, 19 Tex. 340. The evidence must clearly establish that the act occurred before indictment. Branch v. State, 41 Tex. 622. Under art. 679, before it was amended, it was held that where the indictment charged the killing of a horse, and the proof showed the animal killed was a gelding, the charge was not supported by the evidence. Gholston v. State, 33 Tex. 342. But as the article now reads, an allegation that the animal was a horse, would be sustained by proof that it was a gelding. Johnson v. State, 16 App. 402; Valesco v. State, 9 App. 76.

Under the original article 679, the penalty was regulated by the amount of the injury done to the owner, and it was therefore held that it was necessary to allege in the indictment the amount of such injury. Nicholson v. State, 3 App. 31; Uecker v. State, 4 App. 234; Thomas v. State, 42 Tex. 236; State v. Heath, 41 Tex. 426; Street v. State, 7 App. 5. But such allegation is not now essential, as the penalty is not regulated or affected by the amount of the injury done. Shaw v. State, 23 App. 493, 5 S. W. 317. It need not be alleged that the animal, etc., killed, etc., was a "domesticated animal," if it was one specifically named in the statute. An information which charged the wounding of "a hog," was held sufficient, without further description of the animal. Rivers v. State, 10 App. 177. When the animal was described as a "steer," the description was held to be sufficient. State v. Lange, 22 Tex. 591. The "color" or other particular description of the animal need not be alleged, but if alleged must be proved. Benson v. State, 1 App. 6. The act must be charged to have been done "wilfully." Uecker v. State, 4 App. 234.

Where the indictment charged that the defendant did "wound and kill" a certain animal, and the proof showed that the animal was wounded, but not killed, it was held that there was a fatal variance between the allegation and the proof. Reid v. State, 8 App. 430. But this decision seems to be in conflict with several others. See Lancaster v. State, 43 Tex. 519; Phillips v. State, 29 Tex. 233; Johnson v. State, 9 App. 249; Hammel v. State, 14 App. 326; Hart v. State, 2 App. 39.

Although, in a prosecution hereunder, the ownership of the animals need not be alleged, if such allegation is made, proof of ownership must correspond with the allegation. McLaurine v. State, 28 App. 530, 13 S. W. 992.

Indictments for malicious mischief (except under art. 1231) to be sufficient must allege the ownership or possession of the property injured to be in some person other than the accused. Woodward v. State, 33 App. 554, 28 S. W. 204.

In a prosecution for unlawfully poisoning animals with intent to injure the owner, the fact that the information charged that 9 head of mules and 4 head of mares were poisoned, and the evidence showed that only 12 carcasses were found, with one missing, was immaterial, since the gist of the offense was wilfully poisoning stock with intent to injure the owner, the number being immaterial. Sands v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1014.

Evidence.—Evidence held to support conviction. Henderson v. State, 53 App. 533, 111 S. W. 736; Sands v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1014; Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 725.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Scroggins v. State, 36 App. 117, 34 S. W. 115; Nicholson v. State, 49 App. 102, 90 S. W. 1011; Lane v. State, 16 App. 172; Owens v. State, 25 App. 552, 88 S. W. 658; High v. State, 61 App. 432, 135 S. W. 135.

It is not necessary to prove malice toward the owner. And the fact that a person other than the owner authorized the act is not admissible evidence for the defense, unless such authority can be traced to the owner. And the fact that after killing the property the defendant carried the same to the owner, is no defense, the offense being complete by the killing. Wallace v. State, 30 Tex. 758. See evidence held insufficient to show evil intent. Lane v. State, 16 App. 172.

Malice is presumed from a wilful killing. Wallace v. State, 30 Tex. 758.

But not from the mere act of killing. Newton v. State, 3 App. 245.

Presumption of malice held rebutted by evidence. Lane v. State, 16 App. 172; Farmer v. State, 21 App. 423, 2 S. W. 767.

In prosecution for malicious mischief any evidence tending to rebut the charge of malice or going to show the animus of defendant is admissible. Woodward v. State, 33 App. 554, 28 S. W. 204.

Where there was no evidence that, at the time of shooting a dog, defendant was in any danger from the dog, which was within its owner's inclosure, and was not attempting to break therefrom, evidence of the dog's viciousness was inadmissible. Atchison v. State, 44 App. 551, 72 S. W. 998.

In a trial for malicious mischief in shooting a dog, evidence that the presence of dogs among defendant's sheep at the time of the killing would have frightened the sheep and caused the ewes, which were heavy with lambs, to lose them, was admissible to rebut the charge of malice and wantonness in shooting the dog. Caldwell v. State, 55 App. 164, 115 S. W. 597, 131 Am. St. Rep. 809.

In a prosecution for poisoning horses, evidence to show some one placed feed in the pasture belonging to prosecuting witness where his horses were some two or three weeks before they were poisoned, and that the tracks of the horse rode to the pasture corresponded with those of one frequently used by accused, was admissible. Minor v. State, 120 S. W. 860, 56 App. 431.

— Confession.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 809.

Charge of court.—It is not correct to instruct that it is an offense to wilfully kill, etc., "any animal." The instruction should be limited to any "domesticated animal," etc. Achterberry v. State, 8 App. 463. The charge should expound the legal signification of the word "wilfully," that is, that the act was done with an evil intent, with legal malice, without reasonable ground for believing such act to be lawful and without legal justification. Thomas v. State, 14 App. 200; Shubert v. State, 16 App. 645; Lane v. State, Id. 172; Trice v. State, 17 App. 43; Owens v. State, 19 App. 242; Rose v. State, Id. 470; Yoakum v. State, 21 App. 260, 17 S. W. 254; Baker v. State, 21 App. 264, 17 S. W. 144. Where the evidence tended to show that the act was committed in the necessary defense of defendant's property, it was held that the jury should have been instructed with reference to such defense, and should have been directed that the act of the defendant was not wilful, if committed in the necessary protection of his property from destruction or injury. Thomas v. State, 14 App. 200; Lane v. State, 16 App. 172. It was held not error to charge that the intent to injure may be presumed from the perpetration of the act, such presumption being expressly created by article 786 as amended. Before the amendment of said article, however, the intent to injure could not be presumed from the mere act of injuring. Lane v. State, 16 App. 172; Newton v. State, 3 App. 245. The charge should be confined to the case made by the indictment and the evidence. Haynes v. State, 10 App. 480.

Failure to define "wilful" was not reversible error, but such failure coupled with refusal of defendant's special requested instructions defining the word. Browder v. State, 30 App. 614, 18 S. W. 197.

Where the right of accused to defend his crop against damage by turkeys was an issue in the trial for the killing of the turkeys, it should have been submitted to the jury in the court's instructions. Swinger v. State, 51 App. 397, 102 S. W. 114.

Where an indictment charged in separate counts the offenses denounced by this and the following article, an instruction that, if accused wantonly maimed a domestic animal, he was guilty, and the jury should fix his punishment at a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $200, was erroneous, because authorizing the jury to find accused guilty under one article and authorizing the punishment prescribed by the other. Johnson v. State, 64 App. 108, 141 S. W. 524.

Art. 1231. Cruelty to animals.—Every person who overdrives, wilfully overloads, drives when overloaded, overworks, tortures, torments, deprives of necessary sustenance, unnecessarily or cruelly beats, or needlessly mutilates or kills, or carries in or upon any vehicle, or otherwise in a cruel or inhumane manner, or causes or procures to be done, or who having the charge or custody of any animal unnecessarily fails to provide it with proper food, drink or cruelly abandons it, shall, upon conviction be punished by fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars. [Act 1901, p. 289; Act 1913, p. 168, ch. 88, § 1, superseding art. 1231, revised Pen. Code.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Explanatory.—In revising (1879), the word "or" was substituted for the word "and" between the words "wilfully" and "wantonly," and the word "disfigure" was inserted after the word "wound."

Nature and elements of offense.—See notes under article 1227, ante.

The killing of an animal which is in the habit of trespassing upon one's crop, during an act of trespass, to prevent a destruction of the crop, and not from wantonness, was held to not constitute this offense. Branch v. State, 41 Tex. 622. But it seems the act will in such case not be justified unless the crop was properly protected by a lawful fence. Jones v. State, 3 App. 228. See, also, upon this subject, Thomas v. State, 14 App. 200; Lane v. State, 16 App. 172.

In a prosecution for wilfully killing swine, defendant may show that the hogs were in his field, destroying his corn, at the time they were killed. McMahan v. State, 29 App. 348, 16 S. W. 171.

Defendant may also show that his field was surrounded by a good fence, although the hog law was in force in the county. McMahan v. State, 29 App. 348, 16 S. W. 171.

The evidence must show a wilful or a wanton act. Farmer v. State, 21 App. 423, 2 S. W. 767.

On prosecution hereunder for wantonly wounding a hog, which the evidence tends to show was shot by defendant while trespassing on his crop, it is competent for defendant to show that his fence was a lawful one, which, by the stock law prevailing in his locality, was not required to turn hogs. Brewer v. State, 28 App. 565, 13 S. W. 1004.

Ownership of the animal is immaterial. Woodward v. State, 33 App. 554, 28 S. W. 204.

One who wilfully and wantonly maims an animal on his own premises, may be convicted under this article. Cryer v. State, 36 App. 621, 37 S. W. 753, 38 S. W. 203.

Distinguished from other offenses.—See note to article 1246, post.

The apparent object in enacting these two articles was in article 1230 to protect the interests of the owner, while 1231 was to protect the animals. Branch v. State, 41 Tex. 624; Turman v. State, 4 App. 586; Benson v. State, 1 App. 6; Rose v. State, 1 App. 400.

The offenses under articles 1230 and 1231 are so different that an acquittal under one is no bar to a prosecution for the same act under the other. Irvin v. State, 7 App. 78.

If the animal, when killed by defendant, was within his enclosure and there was an insufficient fence around it, the killing was an entirely distinct offense from that defined in article 1231, being that defined by article 1246, which is not an offense included within that described in the article 1231. Payne v. State, 17 App. 40; McRay v. State, 18 App. 331.

Defendant who wounded another's hog and pursued it without "taking" it should have been indicted under this or the preceding section rather than for theft. Minter v. State, 26 App. 217, 9 S. W. 561. But where the animal is killed the indictment may be for theft. Coombes v. State, 17 App. 265.

Where the evidence raises the issue whether the hog was wounded in defendant's insufficiently fenced enclosure, the jury should be instructed that, if they find this to be the fact, a conviction cannot be had under article 1231, the punishment for such offense being provided by article 1246. Brewer v. State, 28 App. 565, 13 S. W. 1004.

A person may be convicted, under article 1231, for wilfully killing hogs on his own land although the hog law is in force, but a prosecution under article 1242 cannot be maintained. Gerdes v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 268.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 565.

Duplicity in indictment, see C. C. P. art. 481.

The indictment need not allege the ownership of the animal or bird. Benson v. State, 1 App. 6; Rose v. State, 1 App. 400; State v. Brocker, 32 Tex. 611; Turman v. State, 4 App. 586; Darnell v. State, 6 App. 482 (overruling State v. Smith, 21 Tex. 748). Under this article prior to its being amended, it was necessary to allege that the act was done both wilfully and wantonly. State v. Rector, 34 Tex. 565; Branch v. State, 41 Tex. 622. But as the article now reads it is sufficient to charge that it was committed either wilfully or wantonly. Rountree v. State, 10 App. 110; Burgman v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 111. It need not allege an intent to injure the owner. Article 1230 is intended for the protection of the owner of the animals or birds, while this article, 1231, is intended for the protection of the animals or birds themselves. Turman v. State, 4 App. 586. See art. 1230.

An information following the statute was sufficient without setting forth the facts constituting the offense of maiming. Turman v. State, 4 App. 586.

Charge in indictment that defendant did then and there "wilfully" wound a cow was sufficient without charging a wanton wounding. Rountree v. State, 10 Tex. App. 110.

"Hog" was a sufficient description of the animal; it need not be charged that it is a domesticated animal. Rivers v. State, 10 App. 177.

It is not essential that indictment allege ownership of the animal wantonly killed. And note rule of pleading and practice as to surplage in indictment. McLaurine v. State, 28 App. 530, 13 S. W. 992. And see, also, on indictment, Minter v. State, 26 App. 217, 9 S. W. 561; Brewer v. State, 28 App. 565, 13 S. W. 1004; Browder v. State, 30 App. 614, 18 S. W. 197.

In all cases of killing animals under articles 1231 and 1246, the court suggests a count under each article. Cryer v. State, 36 App. 621, 37 S. W. 753, 38 S. W. 203.

All the modes and means of committing the offense named in this article may be stated in the indictment without rendering it duplicitous. Holman v. State (Cr. App.) 90 S. W. 174.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for wantonly killing a dog, it was held that what the dog had done before the time of the killing could not be shown in evidence as a defense, so as to afford a legal excuse to the defendant to kill the dog at the time he did. McDaniel v. State, 5 App. 475. In a prosecution for wilfully and wantonly wounding a hog, it was held competent for the defendant to prove that the hog was deprecating on his premises, and that after such wounding he sent the owner its value. Lott v. State, 9 App. 206. In a trial for wantonly killing a horse, it was in proof that the animal was a bad fence breaker, and evidence tending to show that the killing was prompted by a desire on defendant's part to prevent the destruction of his crops, and not by a spirit of wantonness, it was held, to countervail the presumption of innocence and warrant a conviction, it was incumbent on the state to prove that defendant's crop was not properly protected against live stock. Davis v. State, 12 App. 11.

In a prosecution for wilfully and wantonly killing a cow, it was held that the defendant should have been permitted to prove that the animals with which the cow herded, were breachy, and in the habit of trespassing upon crops. It was proper evidence to be considered by the jury in determining whether the killing was wilful or wanton or done under circumstances sufficient to negative such motives. Reedy v. State, 22 App. 271, 2 S. W. 591. Where the evidence shows that the animal was killed, wounded, etc., while inside of cleared and cultivated land surrounded by an insufficient fence it shows a different offense than that denounced by article 1231. It shows the offense denounced by art. 1246, and in such case a conviction can not be had under article 1231. Payne v. State, 17 App. 40; McItay v. State, 18 App. 331.

Charge of the court.—The charge of the court should explain to the jury the meaning of “wilfully,” and also “wantonly.” “Wilfully” means that the act was done with an evil intent,—with legal malice, without reasonable ground for believing it to be lawful, and without legal justification. “Wantonly” means that the act was committed regardless of the rights of another, in reckless sport, or under such circumstances as evince a wicked or mischievous intent, and without excuse. Thomas v. State, 14 App. 200. The charge should not make the guilt or innocence of the defendant depend upon whether or not he used greater force than was necessary in protecting his property where such issue was not raised by the evidence. In a proper case the charge should instruct that if it reasonably appeared to the defendant that his property was in danger of serious injury, he would be justified in killing the animal threatening such injury. Farmer v. State, 21 App. 423, 2 S. W. 767; art. 1230.

The word “wilful” should be explained in the charge in prosecutions under statutes using that word. Sparks v. State, 23 App. 447, 5 S. W. 135.

Where an indictment charged in separate counts the offenses denounced by this and preceding article, an instruction that, if accused wantonly maimed a domestic animal, he was guilty, and the jury should fix his punishment at a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $200, was erroneous, because authorizing the jury to find accused guilty under one article and authorizing the punishment prescribed by the other. Johnson v. State, 64 App. 108, 141 S. W. 524.

Where accused was charged under this article with having wilfully and wantonly killed a domestic animal, and the evidence was not conclusive that the killing was wilful or wanton, and the jury might have found that the act was within article 1246, imposing a penalty upon one who, being in charge of cultivated land surrounded by an insufficient fence, shall with firearms kill any animal within the inclosure, it was error for the court to refuse a requested charge that if the facts brought the case within the provisions of the latter article the jury should acquit. Hobbs v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 1100.

Art. 1231a. Same; feeding and watering animals impounded.—Every person who shall impound, or cause to be impounded in any pond or corral under the laws of this State or of any municipality in this State, any animal, shall supply to the same during such confinement a sufficient quantity of wholesome food and water, and in default thereof, upon conviction, be punished by fine or not less than five nor more than fifty dollars. [Act 1913, p. 168, ch. 88, § 2.]

Art. 1231b. Same; care of poultry or birds confined.—Every person who shall receive live fowls, poultry or other birds for transportation or to be confined on wagons or stands, or by the owners of grocery stores, commission houses, or other market houses, or by other persons when to be closely confined shall place same immediately in coops, crates or cages made of open slats or wire on at least three sides, and of such height, that the fowls can stand upright without touching the top, and shall have troughs or other receptacles easy of access at all times by the birds confined therein and so placed that their contents shall not be defiled by them, in which troughs or other receptacles clean water and suitable food shall be constantly kept; shall keep such coops, crates or cages in a clean and wholesome condition; shall place only such numbers in each coop, crate or cage as can stand without crowding one another, but have room to move around; shall not expose same to undue heat or cold; shall remove immediately all injured, diseased or dead fowls or other birds, and in default thereof shall, upon conviction, be punished by fine of not less than five nor more than two hundred dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment, for each offense. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1231c. Same; member of Humane Society may require arrests to be made.—Any member of the Texas State Humane Society may require the sheriff of any county, the constable of any precinct or the marshal or any policeman of any town or city, or any agent of said society authorized by the sheriff to make arrests for the violation of this Act, to arrest any person found violating any of the provisions of this Act, and to take possession of any animal cruelly treated in their respective counties, cities or towns. [Id., § 11.]

Art. 1231d. Same; definition of terms.—In this Act the word “animal” shall be held to include every living dumb creature; the words "torture" and "cruelty" shall be held to include every act, omission or neglect whereby unnecessary or unjustifiable pain or suffering is caused, permitted or allowed to continue, when there is a reasonable remedy or relief, and the words "owner" and "person" shall be held to include corporations, and the knowledge and act of agents and employes of corporations in regard to animals transported, owned, employed by or in custody of the corporation shall be held to be the knowledge and acts of such corporations. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 1231e. Same; repeal.—All Acts or parts of Acts in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed. [Id., § 13.]

Art. 1231f. Same; pending prosecutions.—Nothing in this Act shall be held to apply to or in any manner affect any indictment, trial, writ of error, appeal or other proceedings, judgment, or sentence in case of violation of the provisions of this Section by this Act repealed now pending in any court in this State, and the same shall be held, conducted and adjudged as provided by the law in force before this Act shall take effect. Any offense under the provisions of the Section by this Act repealed which shall have been committed before this Act takes effect shall be required to be prosecuted and punished in accordance with the law in force at the time of the commission of such offense. [Id., § 14.]

Art. 1232. [788] Using animals without consent of owner.—Any person who shall hereafter take and use, or take up and use, any horse, mare, gelding, mule, ox, cow, or any other dumb animal, the property of another, and without the consent of the owner thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars; provided, that nothing herein contained shall prevent a prosecution for the theft of such animal whenever the offense of which said party shall be guilty shall come within the meaning of that crime; provided, that this article shall not be construed as in any way to interfere with the laws regulating estrays. [Acts of 1879, p. 129; amended Act 1899, p. 319.]

See notes under article 1227, ante, and 1246, post.

Art. 1385, post, defines the specific offense of taking up and milking a cow.

Nature and elements of offense.—This article applies only to animals running at large. A horse saddled, bridled and hitched to a tree does not come within the article. Cochran v. State, 36 App. 115, 35 S. W. 968.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 566.

Evidence.—In a prosecution under an information charging defendant with wilfully and cruelly beating a horse, and also with taking up and using the horse without the consent of the owner, evidence held sufficient to justify a conviction for taking up and using the horse without the consent of the owner. Sparkman v. State, 61 App. 429, 135 S. W. 134.

Art. 1233. [789] Removing buoy, etc.—If any person shall wilfully and mischievously remove any buoy, beacon, light or any other mark or signal erected for the purpose of indicating the channel in any bay, river, lake or other navigable water within the state, or shall erect any false buoy, beacon, light or mark or signal to indicate the channel in any such bay, river, lake or other navigable water, with intent to mislead or deceive, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, or by fine not exceeding two thousand dollars; and, if death occurs by reason of such unlawful conduct, the offender is guilty of murder. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 179.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 567, 568.

Art. 1234. [790] Robbing orchards, gardens, etc.—If any person shall take or carry away from the farm, orchard, garden or vineyard of another, without his consent, any fruit, melons or garden vegetables, he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. [Act April 4, 1874.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 570.

Art. 1235. [791] Destroying fruit, corn, etc.—If any person shall wilfully and mischievously injure or destroy any growing fruit, corn, grain, or other like agricultural products, or if any person shall wilfully or mischievously injure or destroy any real or personal property of any description whatever, in such manner as that the injury does not come within the description of any of the offenses against property otherwise provided for by this Code, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars; provided, that when the value of the property injured is fifty dollars or less, then, in that event, he shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars. [Amended by Act March 22, 1889, p. 35.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Distinguished from other offenses.—An indictment under this article for cutting fences was bad, such injury being covered by article 1240. White v. State, 27 App. 638, 11 S. W. 643.

Nature and elements of offense.—Under this article, the injury must be wilful and malicious, and any evidence that would rebut those elements is admissible. Adams v. State, 47 App. 35, 81 S. W. 963.

It involves the actual ownership of and title to the property, and not the mere possessory right of the land, and trial and proof must be from the standpoint of actual ownership. Adams v. State, 47 App. 35, 81 S. W. 963.

One cannot be prosecuted under this article for cutting a small ditch on the land of another believing it to be his own, for the purpose of protecting his own land from an overflow. Adams v. State, 47 App. 35, 81 S. W. 965.

It has been held that tearing down and removing a house came within the meaning of this article. Ritter v. State, 33 Tex. 608. And injury to merchandise. Rose v. State, 19 App. 470. Destroying buggy harness. Terry v. State, 25 App. 714, 8 S. W. 934. But the statute then referred to "other agricultural product or property." See the case of Murray v. State, 21 App. 620, 2 S. W. 757, 57 Am. Rep. 623, where it was held that this article protects agricultural products or property only, and does not relate to any other kind of property, such as a railroad engine. The subject is fully discussed in said decision. See, also, the subsequent case of Beeson v. State, 23 App. 406, 5 S. W. 118; Menges v. State, 25 App. 710, 9 S. W. 49.

On a trial for malicious mischief in breaking the lock on a church door, it appeared that there was a difference among the membership of the church on certain matters, and that the prosecuting witness had locked the door in opposition to the wishes of the majority. Defendant, one of that majority, was an officer of the church, and acted under a reasonable claim of right to do so in breaking the lock. Held, that the charge could not be sustained. Woodward v. State, 33 App. 554, 28 S. W. 204.

In prosecutions for malicious mischief malice is the gravamen of the offense, without which it would be a mere trespass. Woodward v. State, 33 App. 554, 28 S. W. 204.

The value of the property furnishes the basis by which punishment is assessed, and not the amount of injury done; value is therefore a necessary element and must be alleged and proved. Beaufire v. State, 37 App. 50, 38 S. W. 608.

Carrying rubbish into a blacksmith shop and piling it up there was not an offense within this statute; there must be a destruction of, or injury to, the property. Patterson v. State, 41 App. 412, 55 S. W. 338.

Prosecutor sold land to accused and took notes with vendor's lien for payment. Accused built a house on the land. Prosecutor foreclosed his lien and the next day accused knocked down the house and removed it from the land. Until foreclosure sale the legal title was in accused, and he was not guilty under this article of wilfully injuring real estate of another. Price v. State, 49 App. 343, 92 S. W. 811.

Indictment and Information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 571.

An indictment under this article, must allege the value of the property injured. Beaufire v. State, 37 App. 50, 38 S. W. 608; Stanton v. State, 45 App. 168, 74 S. W. 771.

An information charging one with wilfully breaking a lock on the door of a church building should allege that the rightful possession of the property was in some other person than the defendant. Woodward v. State, 33 App. 554, 28 S. W. 204.

The information need not exclude the idea that it is covered by some other provision of the penal code. Adams v. State, 47 App. 35, 81 S. W. 963; Todd v. State, 39 App. 232, 45 S. W. 596. But the nature of the injury should be stated so that it might be seen whether or not the injury came within the offenses "otherwise provided for." Todd v. State, 39 App. 232, 45 S. W. 596.

Allegation of ownership of the real property must be made in the complaint and the proof must respond thereto. The statute was intended to protect the owner against injury to his property, and not a mere possessory right to the property. Proof of ownership can be made by deeds or other evidence of title. Adams v. State, 47 App. 35, 81 S. W. 964, 965.

Evidence.—Where the offense alleged is the cutting a ditch upon real property, it is competent for State to prove that defendant began digging the ditch three or four days prior to the date alleged in the complaint. This was part of the res gestæ of the offense—being same ditch—and not another and distinct offense. Adams v. State, 47 App. 35, 81 S. W. 964.

In a prosecution for injuring a house belonging to prosecutor, evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Stephens v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 255.

Art. 1236. [791a] Introducing Johnson grass.—If any person in this state shall knowingly, wilfully, and with intent to injure, sow, scatter or place, on any land, not his own, the seed or roots of Johnson grass or Russian thistle, or wilfully and knowingly sell or give away any oats, hay, straw, seed or grain, containing or intermixed with the seeds or roots of Johnson grass, to any one who is ignorant of the fact that such seeds or roots are so contained in or intermixed with such oats, hay, straw, seed or grain, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, he shall be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five dollars and not more than one thousand dollars. [Act 1895, p. 160.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 589, 590.

Art. 1237. [791b] Requisites of indictment.—In prosecutions under the preceding article, it shall not be necessary for the indictment to allege the name of the owner of the land, nor shall it be necessary for the state to prove the name of such owner, but it shall be sufficient to allege and prove that the land was not the property of the person accused. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 589.

Art. 1238. [792] Injuring, etc., baggage.—Any baggagemaster, express agent, stage or hack driver, or other common carrier, whose duty it is to handle remove, transfer or to take care of trunks, valises, boxes or other baggage while loading, transporting, unloading, transferring, delivering, storing or handling the same, whether or not in the employ of any transportation company or common carrier, who shall maliciously or carelessly or recklessly break, injure or destroy the said baggage, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction, be fined a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars; provided, that a prosecution for a misdemeanor as provided in this article shall not be a bar to a civil action for damages. [Act March 5, 1881, p. 17.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 572.

Art. 1239. [793] Throwing stone or firing gun or pistol at railroad car, etc.—Any person who shall wilfully or maliciously throw a stone or other missile, or fire any gun, or pistol at, against, or into, any engine, tender, coach, passenger car, whether moving or not, or any other car of any moving train on any railway, or any railway depot, or any private residence, school house, church house, court house, store house, hotel, or other public or private building, public or private tent, sail-boat or steam-boat, in this state, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction therefor, shall be fined in any sum of not less than five dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or be confined in the county jail for any term of not less than ten days nor more than two years. During such term, such convict may be put to hard labor. [Act March 22, 1889; amend. 1895, p. 161; amended, Act 1897, p. 41.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 556.

Art. 1240. [794] Injuring fence, leaving open gates.—If any person shall break, pull down or injure, the fence of another without his consent, or shall wilfully and without the consent of the owner thereof open and leave open any gate leading into the inclosure of another, or shall knowingly cause any hogs, cattle, mules, horses or other stock to go within the inclosed lands of another without his consent, or shall tie or stake out, or cause to be tied or staked out, to graze within any inclosed lands not his own and without the consent of the owner, any horse, mule or other animal, he shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars, and, in addition thereto, may be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding one year. [Act April 23, 1873, pp. 41-42.]

See notes under article 1227, ante. See ante, article 834.

Repeal of statute.—This article was not repealed by the act of February 6, 1884, which is the succeeding article, 1242. Roberts v. State, 17 App. 148.

Distinguished from other offenses.—See note under art. 1235.

Where defendant owning a fence dividing his land from that of another withdrew the fence without the notice or consent mentioned in article 1244 leaving the neighbor's crops exposed to depredations and he thereupon connected the fence with his fence, defendant violated article 1240 by pulling down the connecting fence. Jamison v. State, 27 App. 442, 11 S. W. 483.

Nature and elements of offense.—One joint owner of a division fence has no legal right to break such fence to the injury of the other joint owner, and without the consent of such other joint owner. Hurlbut v. State, 12 App. 252; Becker v. State, 56 App. 92, 119 S. W. 96. But if no injury be done such other joint owner, it would be no offense to pull down the fence for a legitimate purpose. Woodyard v. State, 19 App. 516; Becker v. State, 56 App. 92, 119 S. W. 95; Hurlbut v. State, 12 App. 252.

It has been held that a joint owner is not justified in breaking a partition fence without the other's consent. Becker v. State, 56 App. 92, 119 S. W. 96.

The overseer of a public road is not only authorized, but required, to remove all obstructions therefrom, and if a fence is placed across his road he may remove it without violating this article. Schott v. State, 7 App. 616.

Any citizen would have the right to peaceably remove a fence erected across a public road. Gowhenour v. State, 33 App. 538, 28 S. W. 201. But where the road is not a public road, and is obstructed by a gate or fence, it would be a violation of this article to leave open the gate or pull down the fence. The owner of land over which a public road of the third class passes has the right to erect and maintain gates across such road, and it is a penal offense to leave open such gates, but it is not the offense denounced in the preceding article, but is the one denounced in article 834, ante, and a conviction can not be had therefor under an indictment brought under article 1242, post. Jolly v. State, 19 App. 76.

And if one using a way of necessity remove a fence to the extent of fixing it so that he could go in and out he was not liable under the statute. Knudson v. State, 56 App. 513, 120 S. W. 878.

A tenant has the right during the continuance of his lease, and when there is no stipulation in the lease contract forbidding to pasture his horses upon the leased land, after the crops have been gathered. Coggins v. State, 12 App. 109; Jones v. State, 18 App. 366.

And a tenant may, also, make an opening as a convenient passway in a fence, when such passway does not expose the growing crops of another to depredation. Hooks v. State, 25 App. 601, 8 S. W. 803.

This article is intended to protect growing crops from depredation, aside from the owner's action for damages and should be rigorously enforced. Its provisions extend such protection although the land is in one general inclosure, and the depredation is caused by the employee of a cotenant. Cleveland v. State, 8 App. 44; Jones v. State, 18 App. 366; Jamison v. State, 27 App. 442, 11 S. W. 483; Becker v. State, 56 App. 92, 119 S. W. 95.

In a trial for this offense, the inquiry in regard to possession should be confined to the actual, quiet, and peaceable possession, and should not extend to the rightful possession of the fence. Behrens v. State, 14 App. 121; Carter v. State, 18 App. 573; Jenkins v. State, 7 App. 146. Arbuthnot v. State, 38 App. 509, 34 S. W. 269, 43 S. W. 1024.

A party cannot be punished criminally for putting more cattle in the pasture than he is authorized by reason of the quantity of land owned by him therein. Yarbrough v. State, 37 App. 359, 39 S. W. 941.

A party is guilty who stakes his horse while engaged in hunting on said inclosed lands. Daley v. State, 40 App. 102, 48 S. W. 515.

This article applies to grazing as well as cultivated lands. Daley v. State, 40 App. 102, 48 S. W. 515.

The land need not be enclosed by fence entirely. If it is partly inclosed by the gulf or bayous, so as to be an inclosure that will hold stock, it is sufficient. Daley v. State, 40 App. 102, 48 S. W. 515.

If other parties have small tracts also in the inclosure, their want of consent need not be shown nor their ownership alleged. The statute refers to the possessory right and not to the title, and the main owner has the possession. Daley v. State, 40 App. 102, 48 S. W. 515.

Under our law a tenant in possession of leased premises is the owner thereof until the expiration of the lease, and may, during such time, make any legitimate use of the premises, such as opening a convenient passway in a fence, when such passway does not expose the growing crops of the owner of such fence to depredation by stock. Govitt v. State, 25 App. 419, 8 S. W. 478.

No such an offense as malicious mischief per se is known to the law. Recognition described the offense of pulling down fence of another as malicious mischief, and is not sufficient, wherefore appeal dismissed. Koritz v. State, 27 App. 53, 10 S. W. 757; McLaren v. State, 3 App. 680; Killingsworth v. State, 7 App. 28; Waterman v. State, 8 App. 671. See, also, Hooks v. State, 25 App. 601, 8 S. W. 803; Jamison v. State, 27 App. 442, 11 S. W. 483; White v. State, 27 App. 638, 11 S. W. 643; Yarbrough v. State, 28 App. 481, 13 S. W. 775.

For facts held insufficient to support a conviction for knowingly causing stock to go into the inclosed lands of another without consent of the owner, see Yarborough v. State, 37 App. 357, 39 S. W. 941.

This article making it a penal offense to leave a gate leading into the inclosure of another open, includes gates leading into pastures. Hankins v. State, 39 App. 261, 45 S. W. 807.

Where one rents land and pitches his crops and then abandons his rental contract and the landlord takes charge and tenant afterwards turns his stock on the growing crops he is guilty under this statute. Gartrell v. State (Cr. App.) 61 S. W. 488.

The possession of property under this article is a possessory right and not one of title and it is sufficient to allege ownership in the real owner although he was in possession only through an agent. The agent's possession was the owner's possession. Barber v. State, 42 App. 626, 63 S. W. 324.

If a party breaks, pulls down, or injures the fence of another without his consent he is guilty under this article. Dennis v. State, 43 App. 464, 66 S. W. 839.

It is immaterial in whom is the ownership of the land, the actual exclusive and peaceful possession thereof being in another than the accused. The party in possession can prosecute any one who injures the property. Pate v. State, 46 App. 483, 81 S. W. 738.

This article relates to all fences and is not circumscribed to fences around land for agricultural purposes. McNeely v. State, 50 App. 279, 96 S. W. 1083.

Where prosecutor was not in peaceable possession of land protected by a fence, which defendant was charged to have destroyed but was a trespasser in constructing the fence, prosecution could not be sustained against defendant for its destruction. Farmer v. State, 58 App. 171, 124 S. W. 925.

Where prosecutor was not in peaceable possession of land, protected by a fence which defendant was charged to have destroyed, but was a trespasser in constructing the fence, a criminal prosecution could not be sustained against defendant for its destruction. Farmer v. State, 58 App. 171, 124 S. W. 925.

It is not criminal for one in the actual quiet and peaceable possession of land upon which there is a fence to remove the fence, though his possession be unsupported by legal title. Fitzsimmons v. State, 62 App. 440, 138 S. W. 110.

A tenant of land as to which the landlord reserved no control who after some of the cotton crop had been gathered and after a severe storm had ruined nearly all of the cotton crop turned his stock in the inclosure, but kept them from what cotton was left, so that no injury was done to any crop, could not be convicted of knowingly turning stock into the inclosed land of another without his consent. Thornton v. State, 70 App. 45, 156 S. W. 210.

Where defendant was convicted under a count charging that he "broke, injured, and pulled down the fence of F. D.," and the theory of the state was not that he took down a gate, but that he advised and encouraged the act, he would not be guilty if he had nothing to do with the taking down of the gate, although he did afterward help carry the gate a few feet and hide it. Meador v. State, 72 App. 527, 162 S. W. 1155.

Where a person in possession of land under a claim of ownership, and those under whom she claimed, had been in possession for more than 20 years, the act of another in tearing down the fence on the premises as a step toward taking forcible possession was unlawful, regardless of whether he had any title capable of being established in a civil suit. Johns v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 610.

Indictment and information and proof thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 573, 576, 581, 586.

Allegation of sole ownership of a fence pulled down as being in M. was sufficient notwithstanding the evidence showed a joint ownership between M. and defendant's lessor. Hurlbut v. State, 12 App. 252.

A tenant in possession of leased premises is the owner thereof until the expiration of his lease, and where the indictment alleged the possession to be in the landlord, and the evidence showed it to be in the tenant, it was held a fatal variance. Where there is more than one owner of the fence, the want of consent to the breaking, etc., of each owner must be shown. Brumley v. State, 12 App. 609; Zallner v. State, 15 App. 23.

To charge the offense of pulling down and injuring a fence which belongs to two or more owners, an information must negative the consent of each and all the owners. Govitt v. State, 25 App. 419, 8 S. W. 478; Keizewetter v. State, 34 App. 513, 31 S. W. 395.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for wilfully pulling down a fence, etc. Govitt v. State, 25 App. 419, 8 S. W. 478; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 427.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of accused for unlawfully breaking, pulling down, and injuring a fence belonging to complainant. Farmer v. State, 58 App. 171, 124 S. W. 925.

Where, in a prosecution for unlawfully pulling down a fence, defendant contended that he acted under a belief that he owned the land, evidence that he not only tore down the fence around the land claimed by him but also around another tract was properly admitted; testimony of extraneous crimes being admissible to show intent. Johns v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 610.

Jurisdiction.—In a prosecution for unlawfully pulling down a fence located on property of which another had possession, the fact that defendant claimed to own the land did not cause the question of title to be involved, so as to deprive the county court of jurisdiction. Johns v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 610.

Art. 1241. Where stock law adopted, what constitutes offense.—Any person who shall wilfully turn out, or cause to be turned out, on land not his own or under his control, or who shall wilfully fail or refuse to keep up any stock, prohibited by law from running at large in any county or subdivision of any county in this state, in which the stock law has been adopted, or who shall wilfully allow such stock to trespass upon the land of another, in such county, or subdivision thereof, or who shall wilfully permit to run at large any stock of his own, or of which he is the agent, or of which he has the control, and not permitted to run at large in any county or subdivision of any county in this state, in which the stock law has been adopted, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by fine in any sum not less than five dollars and not more than fifty dollars. [Act 1897, p. 112.]

Stock laws referred to above, see Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 7209-7255. For subsequent amendments, see Gen. Laws 1915, chapters 26, 92, 99, 133. See, post, art. 1249. See, also, notes under article 1227, ante.

Statute applicable to offense.—The first stock laws applied only to hogs, sheep, and goats, and when, in 1897, it was first made a penal offense to permit stock to run at large after the stock law had been adopted, only the law relating to hogs, sheep, and goats was in force. Thereafter the stock law was extended to horses and cattle, and by Acts 26th Leg. c. 128, as amended by Acts 30th Leg. c. 57, it was made an offense to permit such animals to run at large. The two provisions are found in Pen. Code 1911 as articles 1241, 1249; the first being Acts 25th Leg. c. 87, and the latter the act of 1899. Held, that only the act of 1899 applies to a violation of the stock laws by permitting horses and cattle to run at large, after the adoption of the stock law. Neuvar v. State, 72 App. 410, 163 S. W. 58.

Validity of election.—Neither the petition for the election, nor the order of the commissioners' court thereon, nor the notice of election, nor the proclamation of the county judge putting the same into operation, contained a particular description by metes and bounds of the territory to be affected by said election. Held, that such election was invalid. Ex parte Gulledege, 57 App. 156, 122 S. W. 21, citing Cox v. State (Cr. App.) 88 S. W. 812.

Information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 582-584.

In a prosecution for violating the local stock law adopted by a county, it was essential to allege and prove the precedent steps, required by law, by which the local law was adopted. Hill v. State, 58 App. 79, 124 S. W. 940.

The information, in a prosecution for violating the local stock law, alleged that a petition was presented, asking that the commissioners' court order an election to determine whether horses, cattle, etc., be permitted to run at large in said county, and that at the next regular term the court passed an order directing an election, and that the county judge issued an order for the election and caused public notice thereof to be given, and that the election was held and the law adopted. Held, that the information was defective, for not directly alleging that the commissioners' court made an order directing an election to be held to determine whether horses, cattle, etc., should be permitted to run at large in the county. Hill v. State, 58 App. 79, 124 S. W. 940.

Evidence.—On a trial for permitting stock to run at large, evidence that accused's mare had been in the inclosed lands of witnesses several times is admissible to show that accused permitted the animal to run at large from time to time. Black v. State, 62 App. 77, 136 S. W. 478.

Charge of court.—Acts 1897, c. 87, § 1, and Acts 1907, c. 57, § 20a, are identical on the subject of failure to keep stock from running at large after the adoption of the stock law, and one charged with so permitting the stock to run at large cannot complain of a charge given under the law of 1897, where the stock law was in force at the time of the offense. Black v. State, 62 App. 77, 136 S. W. 478.

In a prosecution for violating the stock law, it was proper for the court to permit the jury to go back two years prior to the filing of the complaint. Fisher v. State, 71 App. 564, 160 S. W. 683.

— Bill of exceptions.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 744.

Art. 1242. [795] Wantonly and wilfully, etc., cutting, etc., fence.—Any person who shall wantonly or with intent to injure the owner, wilfully cut, injure or destroy any fence or part of a fence (without such fence is the property of the person so cutting or destroying the same) shall be deemed guilty of an offense, and, upon conviction therefor, shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for a term not less than one nor more than five years. A fence, within the meaning of this law, is any structure of wood, wire, or of both, or of any other material, intended to prevent the passage of cattle, horses, mules, asses, sheep, goats or hogs; provided, however, that it shall constitute no offense for any person owning and residing upon land inclosed by the fence of another, who refuses permission to such person or persons so residing within said inclosure free egress and ingress to their said land, for said person or persons to open a passage way through said inclosure. [Act Feb. 6, 1884, p. 34.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Distinguished from offense under article 1240.—This statute did not repeal article 1240, ante, but creates another and different offense. Roberts v. State, 17 App. 148.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 592.

Art. 1243. [796] Unlawful for owner of party fence to remove, etc.—Hereafter it shall be unlawful for any person who is a joint owner of any separating or dividing fence, or who is in any manner interested in any fence attached to, or connected with, any fence owned or controlled by any other person, to remove the same, except by mutual consent, or as hereinafter provided. [Act April 6, 1889, § 1.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Nature and elements of offense.—This and article 1244 are intended to prevent joint owners from separating their fences without proper notice when by separation or withdrawal of the fence injury would accrue to the party from whose fence it was withdrawn; that is, that it would leave his premises uninclosed. Camp v. State, 49 App. 396, 92 S. W. 845.

Indictment and information.—Indictment alleging that fence inclosed half a section, sufficiently names number of acres, as a section contains 640 acres. Gibbs v. State, 39 App. 478, 46 S. W. 645.

The information must allege that the fence was not removed within the ten days after the six months (notice) has expired. Elkins v. State, 40 App. 590, 51 S. W. 372.

Evidence.—Accused, who was prosecuted for unlawfully breaking, pulling down, and injuring the fence of an adjoining owner, had occupied his lot for a number of years, and the fence in question had been treated in some respects as a partition fence. The adjoining owner had never lived upon his lot, or made any use of it, while accused had improved his property, and had frequently repaired and rebuilt the fence. Held, that evidence by accused that he was familiar with what had always been accepted, since he had owned the property, by him and the other owners of the adjoining lot as the true boundary line, that the location had been fixed by an old post in the front line of the adjoining lot, that this post was some two or three feet over on the adjoining lot from the division fence, that the land on which the fence was situated was recognized by all concerned as his property, and evidence to the same effect by another witness, and a deed to his property, and, in connection therewith, evidence that the property conveyed to him formed one-half of the block in question, and that the center of said block was by actual measurement some five or six feet over on the adjoining lot from the division fence, and that this was the true division line between his property and the adjoining lot, was admissible. Fitzsimon v. State, 59 App. 540, 128 S. W. 903.

Art. 1244. [797] Notice of intention to remove.—Any person who is the owner or part owner of any fences connected with or adjoined to any fences, owned in part or in whole by any other person, shall have the right to withdraw or separate his fence or part of fence from the fence of any other person or persons in this state; that such person who desires to withdraw or separate such fence from the fence of any other person shall give notice in writing to such person, his agent, attorney, or lessee, of his intention to separate or withdraw his fence or part thereof for at least six months prior to the time of such intended withdrawal or separation. Any person, failing to comply with the provisions of this article, shall be fined in any sum not less than two dollars nor more than fifty dollars, and every ten days shall constitute a separate offense for the violation of this article. [Id., § 2.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Nature of offense in general.—To constitute this offense, the party removing the fence must do so without the consent of the other joint owner or owners and without giving the required written notice of his intention to remove it. Warder v. State, 29 App. 534, 16 S. W. 338.

Acts of exclusive owner without notice.—Under the statute even the exclusive owner of a division fence cannot lawfully withdraw or separate his fence from that of the contiguous proprietor without first giving at least six months' notice in writing of his intention. Jamison v. State, 27 App. 442, 11 S. W. 483; Spears v. State, 24 App. 537, 7 S. W. 245.

Acts after expiration of notice.—After the expiration of six months from the time the notice in writing is given an owner is not guilty of any offense in cutting his fence loose from that of the adjoining fence owner. Dennis v. State, 43 App. 464, 66 S. W. 839.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 574.

Indictment must charge all the constituent elements of the offense. Warder v. State, 29 App. 534, 16 S. W. 338.

Art. 1245. [798] Notice requiring removal.—Any person who is the owner of any fence wholly upon his own land to which the fence of another is adjoined, or connected in any manner, may require the owner of any such fence to disconnect and withdraw the same back on his own land by first giving notice, in writing, for at least six months, to such person, his agent, attorney, or lessee, to disconnect and withdraw his fence back on his own land. Any person who shall negligently or wilfully fail to disconnect his fence and remove the same back upon his own land, after the expiration of said notice, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars; and each ten days' failure, after such notice shall constitute a separate offense for the violation of the provisions of this article. [Id., § 3.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 575.

An information for failing to disconnect a fence from that of another and remove it must allege that the fence was not removed within 10 days after the expiration of 6 months after notice to remove it. Elkins v. State, 51 S. W. 372, 40 App. 589.

Art. 1246. [799] Dogging stock when fence insufficient.—Any owner, proprietor, lessee, or other person, in charge of cleared and cultivated land surrounded with an insufficient fence, or the agent or employé of such person, who shall, with fire-arms, dogs, or otherwise, maim, wound or kill any cattle, horses or hogs of another within such inclosure, or who shall cause or procure the same to be done, shall be fined not less than ten nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act Oct. 18, 1871, p. 10.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Nature and elements of offense.—Defendant could not justify killing hogs for trespassing on his crop unless the crop was properly protected against trespassing stock. Jones v. State, 3 App. 228.

A prosecution under this article cannot be maintained where the hog law is in force, since the hog law requires no fence against such stock, and furnishes a remedy to the owner of the premises by impounding of stock. Gerdes v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 268.

Distinguished from offenses under articles 1231 and 1232.—This is a different offense from that denounced by articles 1231 and 1232, ante. Payne v. State, 17 App. 40; McRay v. State, 18 App. 331; Brewer v. State, 28 App. 565, 13 S. W. 1004.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 587.

An information against a married woman for dogging stock on premises inclosed by an insufficient fence alleged ownership of the premises in such married woman, but failed to allege that such premises were her separate property; held, the complaint was insufficient. Lucas et al. v. State, 36 App. 397, 37 S. W. 427.

In all cases of killing animals under articles 1231 and 1246, the court suggests a count under each article. Cryer v. State, 36 App. 621, 37 S. W. 753, 38 S. W. 203.

When an indictment in what purports to be a count charges an offense under this article followed by a comma, and then charges what seems to be an offense under article 1231, ante, with nothing to show that it is a separate and distinct count, it is duplicitous and bad. Porter v. State, 48 App. 125, 86 S. W. 769.

Charge of court.—Where accused was charged under article 1231, ante, with having wilfully and wantonly killed a domestic animal, and the evidence was not conclusive that the killing was wilful or wanton, and the jury might have found that the act was within article 1246, it was error for the court to refuse a requested charge that if the facts brought the case within the provisions of the latter article the jury should acquit. Brewer v. State, 28 App. 565, 13 S. W. 1004; Hobbs v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 1100.

Evidence.—Best evidence, see notes under C. C. P., art. 783, et seq.

Art. 1247. [800] "Insufficient fence" defined.—An "insufficient fence," as used in the preceding article, means a fence less than five feet high, or with openings or crevices in some part thereof sufficiently large for the passage of the animal so maimed, wounded or killed.

Evidence.—See note under art. 1231.

Art. 1248. [801] Removing rock, earth, etc., from premises of another.—If any person shall knowingly enter upon the land or premises of another, and take or remove therefrom any rock, earth, sand, coal, slate or mineral of any description, without the consent of the owner of such land or premises, he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars.

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Ownership of land.—A prosecution hereunder cannot be maintained where complainant's only title to the land from which sand is alleged to have been taken is an unauthorized lease from the state. Dean v. State, 34 App. 474, 31 S. W. 378.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 588.

Evidence.—Where the indictment charged accused with entering on the Commons of a county under the control of the mayor of a city and, without consent, removing earth and sand therefrom, while the mayor testified that he had the care of the property by virtue of his office as mayor, and there was no proof that the property was in the city, a conviction was unauthorized for want of sufficient evidence. Haworth v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 859.

Where on a trial for entering on the Commons of a county and removing therefrom earth and sand, the evidence showed that a deed executed in 1859 apparently vested the title in the county; that in 1873 a third person went into possession and erected a mill and houses, and fenced the land, and that he and those holding under him, including accused, had peaceable and adverse possession until 1912, when the city asserted title, which accused refused to concede, the issue involved one of title which cannot be tried in the criminal courts. Haworth v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 859.

Art. 1249. When horses, mules, etc., are prohibited from running at large.—If any person or persons shall knowingly permit any horses, mules, jacks, jennets, and cattle to run at large in any territory in this state where the provisions of the laws of this state have been adopted prohibiting any of such animals from running at large, such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined in any sum not less than five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1907, p. 123.]

See art. 1241, ante. See notes under article 1227, ante.

Statute applicable to offense.—The first stock laws applied only to hogs, sheep, and goats, and when, in 1897, it was first made a penal offense to permit stock to run at large after the stock law had been adopted, only the law relating to hogs, sheep, and goats was in force. Thereafter the stock law was extended to horses and cattle, and by Acts 26th Leg. c. 128, as amended by Acts 30th Leg. c. 57, it was made an offense to permit such animals to run at large. The two provisions are found in Pen. Code as articles 1241, 1249; the first being Acts 25th Leg. c. 87, and the latter the act of 1899. Held, that only the act of 1899 applies to a violation of the stock laws by permitting horses and cattle to run at large, after the adoption of the stock law. Neuvar v. State, 72 App. 410, 163 S. W. 58.

Defense to prosecution.—In a prosecution for a violation of the stock law, where accused's land and the place where he allowed his animals to run at large was clearly within the limits of the subdivision which adopted the law, the fact that the description of that subdivision was not accurate, and omitted a strip of territory leaving a hiatus between the two parts, was no defense. Neuvar v. State, 72 App. 410, 163 S. W. 58.

Complaint.—Where a complaint charged accused with violating the stock law prohibiting stock from running at large in justice precinct No. 6, in Fayette county, Tex., alleging that the law had been adopted and was in force in such precinct, when, in fact, it was not in force there, except within the territory outside an incorporated town, the complaint was fatally defective. Ex parte Stein, 61 App. 320, 135 S. W. 136.

The complaint does not fail to charge an offense because using "wilful" where the statute uses "knowingly"; the words being synonymous, and "wilful" being of more extensive meaning (citing Words and Phrases, vol. 8, pp. 7468-7481, 7835, 7836; vol. 5, pp. 3937-3939). Ex parte Cowden (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 539.

Evidence.—On a trial for permitting stock to run at large, evidence that accused's mare had been in the inclosed lands of witnesses several times is admissible to show that accused permitted the animal to run at large from time to time. Black v. State, 62 App. 77, 136 S. W. 478.

Under Rev. St. 1911, art. 7233, providing that the petition for an election to prevent horses and cattle from running at large shall set forth clearly the classes of animals which the petitioners desire not to run at large, and, if the petition be for a subdivision of any county, the subdivision shall be particularly described, incorporated towns, included either within the subdivision or within the county, become subject to the stock law, if it is adopted, and hence, in a prosecution for violating the stock law, evidence of ordinances of an incorporated town included in the subdivision is admissible. Neuvar v. State, 72 App. 410, 163 S. W. 58.

Charge of court.—Acts 1897, c. 87, § 1, and Acts 1907, c. 57, § 20a, are identical on the subject of failure to keep stock from running at large after the adoption of the stock law, and one charged with so permitting the stock to run at large cannot complain of a charge given under the law of 1897, where the stock law was in force at the time of the offense. Black v. State, 62 App. 77, 136 S. W. 478.

Art. 1250. [802] Herding stock in half mile of residence.—If any person shall herd any drove of horses, mules, cattle, sheep, goats, or hogs, numbering more than five head, upon any land not his own, and within one-half mile of the residence of any citizen of this state, whenever the owner, lessee or legal representative of such land shall forbid such herding, and shall fail, neglect or refuse to remove such drove at once upon the request of such owner, lessee or legal representative; or whenever any person shall herd any such drove of horses, mules, cattle, sheep, goats or hogs upon the inclosed lands or pasture of another, or cause the same to be so herded, without the consent of such owner, lessee or legal representative, he shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars; provided, that this article shall not apply to droves which are driven through pastures, by the usual route of travel through such pastures, in the most direct and practicable route to any named point of destination, traveling at the greatest practicable speed, and where there is no public road leading to the point of destination; and provided, further, that no person shall be authorized, under the provisions of this article, to drive any drove or herd of stock of any kind into any inclosure belonging to another, for the purpose of grazing or holding such drove or herd of stock for any length of time whatever, without the consent of the owner, lessee or person in charge of such inclosure. This article shall not apply to herds or droves of stock while being held for shipment; provided, that the owner or agent of such stock shall pay the owner of the premises so herded upon, reasonable pasturage and all damages done by said stock. [Act March 13, 1885, p. 29; amended, Act 1897, p. 183.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Historical.—The preceding article was originally enacted by Act June 2, 1873, p. 186, and as adopted in the Revised Code (1879) reads as follows:—

“Art. 690. If any person shall herd any drove of horses or cattle, numbering more than twenty-five head, upon land not his own and within one half mile of the residence of any citizen of this state, and shall fail, neglect, or refuse to remove such drove at once upon the request of such citizen, he shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars.”

By Act April 4, 1881, p. 104, it was amended so as to read as follows:—

“Art. 690. If any person shall herd any drove of horses, cattle, sheep, goats, or hogs, numbering more than twenty-five head, upon any land not his own, and within one half mile of the residence of any citizen of this state, or if any person shall herd any drove of sheep or goats, numbering more than twenty-five, upon any land not his own, whenever the owner, lessee, or legal representative of such land shall forbid such herding, and shall fail, neglect, or refuse to remove such drove at once upon request of such citizen, owner, lessee, or legal representative, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.”

Nature and elements of offense.—Parties driving stock through pasture consisting partly of lands leased from the State held not to violate this article, because Pen. Code 1895, art. 508 gave them this right. Broyles v. State, 41 App. 553, 55 S. W. 966.

Indictment and information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 591.

See Caldwell v. State, 2 App. 53. But Linney v. State, 5 App. 344, is not applicable, the statute being different.

Art. 1251. [803] Each hour a separate offense.—Each hour of delay, after notice given or request made, shall constitute a separate offense under the preceding article. [Act June 2, 1873, p. 18.]

Art. 1252. [803b] Wilful destruction of irrigating canal, etc.—Any person who shall wilfully or maliciously injure or destroy any irrigation canal or its appurtenances, or any irrigation reservoir, dam, well, or any of the appurtenances thereto to the extent of fifty dollars, or if said injury shall amount in value to fifty dollars, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and for each offense shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for not less than two nor more than ten years. [Act 1895, p. 25.]

Explanatory.—The act from which this article was derived was embraced in Title 73, chapter 2 of the Rev. St. 1911. That chapter was repealed by Acts 1913, ch. 171, § 101, and its subject matter, both civil and criminal, re-enacted. The criminal features of the new act are included in this compilation as arts. 837a-837p, ante. It would seem, therefore, that the above article (1252) is wholly superseded. See, also, art. 837, ante, which is an earlier enactment of the irrigation law. Art. 837, however, was amended in 1899.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 378.

Art. 1253. Obstructing or injuring county drain.—Any person who shall wrongfully or purposely fill up, cut, injure or destroy or in any manner impair the usefulness of any canal, drain, ditch or water-course or other work constructed, repaired or improved, under the provisions of this Act [arts. 2567–2625, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914] for the purpose of drainage or protection from an overflow of water, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction may be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding two months. [Act 1907, p. 88; Act 1911, p. 258, ch. 118, § 40, superseding art. 1253, revised Pen. Code.]

See art. 836, ante, and note thereunder.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 380.

Art. 1254. Cut, destroy or injure levee.—Any person or persons who shall wrongfully or purposely cut, injure, destroy, or in any manner impair the usefulness of any levee or other reclamation improvement, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars; or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding one year; or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1909, p. 152; Act 1915, p. 244, ch. 146, § 40, superseding art. 1254, revised Pen. Code.]

Art. 1254a. Destroying or defacing corner, line, mark, etc., in connection with levee.—Any person or persons who shall wilfully destroy or deface any corner, line, mark, bench mark or other object fixed or established in connection with the work herein authorized, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1915, p. 244, ch. 146, § 41.]

Art. 1255. [804] Entering upon inclosed land of another to hunt or take fish.—Any person who shall enter upon the inclosed land of another without the consent of the owner, proprietor or agent in charge, and therein hunt with firearms, or therein catch or take any fish from any pond, lake, tank or stream, or in other manner depredate upon the same, shall be punished by fine not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. Provided, that this article shall not apply to inclosures including two thousand acres or more in one inclosure. [Act March 31, 1885, p. 80; Act 1893, p. 87; Act 1903, p. 159.]

See notes under 1227, ante.

Adoption in Code of 1911 as implied repeal of article 1255a omitted therefrom.—Acts 26th Leg. c. 102 (article 1256a, post), applicable to inclosures of 2,000 acres or more, prohibited hunting upon inclosed and posted land without the consent of the owner, under penalty of not more than $200, and by section 4 provided that it should not repeal the law as to inclosures of 2,000 acres or less. Pen. Code, arts. 1255, 1256, and Acts 28th Leg. c. 103, amending article 1255, not applying to inclosures of 2,000 acres or more, provided a penalty of not less than $10 or more than $100. The codifying commission provided by the Legislature of 1899 brought forward in the Penal Code of 1911 the act of 1903 as article 1255, and entirely omitted the act of 1899; and in 1911 the Code was enacted by bill providing in section 1 "that the following titles, chapters, and articles shall hereafter constitute the Penal Code of the state of Texas," and in section 4 that "nothing in this act shall be construed or held to repeal * * * any law or act passed by this Legislature at its regular session," and no other acts were specifically exempted from repeal. The Penal Code so adopted contained no express repeal of the act of 1899 and no provision dealing with the subject of that act. Held, that the adoption of the Code did not impliedly repeal the act of 1899, and that it was still in full force and effect. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

Validity of amendment.—The act of 1903 being an amendment to this article was proper and said act of 1903 is valid. Ex parte Cox, 53 App. 240, 109 S. W. 370.

Nature of offense in general.—One hunting with firearms on inclosed land of prosecutor without his consent, under the mistaken belief that he is on the land of a third person, who has not given him permission to hunt, but who is his friend and will not object, is not guilty of the crime of hunting with firearms on the land of prosecutor. Armstrong v. State, 70 App. 596, 157 S. W. 1194.

Distinguished from offense under article 1256a.—As Pen. Code, art. 1255 was not repealed by Acts 26th Leg. c. 102 (article 1256a post), and as Acts 26th Leg. c. 102, was not repealed by Acts 28th Leg. c. 103, which amended art. 1255, the law in 1903 prohibited hunting within inclosed and posted lands containing less than 2,000 acres without the consent of the owner, under penalty of not less than $10 nor more than $200, and hunting within inclosed lands containing more than 2,000 acres under fine not exceeding $200; the distinction in the two later acts being that inclosed lands of less than 2,000 acres need not be posted, while inclosures of 2,000 acres or more should be posted. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

Information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 577-580.

An information charging that accused unlawfully entered upon the inclosed and posted lands of a corporation named, without its consent or the consent of its manager, and therein hunted with firearms, did not state an offense under this article, it not alleging that the land in question was used for either agricultural or grazing purposes. Partridge v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 717.

Inclosing land of another.—By act of Feb. 7, 1884, pp. 68, 69, it is made an offense to knowingly make or permit to remain any fence on and around the land of another, without the written consent of the owner, etc. See the act in full, ante, art. 854.

Art. 1255a. Hunting on enclosed and posted lands containing 2000 acres or more.—That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons knowingly to hunt with fire-arms or dogs upon the enclosed and posted lands of another without the consent of the owner thereof where such lands are in use as agricultural lands or for grazing purposes, having cattle, horses, sheep or goats herding or grazing thereon. By enclosed lands is meant any structure for fencing either of wood or iron, or a combination of wood and iron, or wood and wire, or partly enclosed by a fence of iron or wood, or wood and iron, or wood and wire, and partly by water or streams, canon, brush, or rock or bluffs, or any of the islands; provided, same are used for pasturage or cultivation as designated herein; provided, the State shall prove in the trial of any case under this act, before a conviction shall be had, that all the lands in said enclosure is owned or leased by the owner or proprietor of such enclosure; where such lands are subject to purchase or lease; provided, that proof of ownership or lease may be made by oral testimony. [Act 1899, p. 173, ch. 102, § 1.]

Explanatory.—This article and the following articles (1256b-1256f) were omitted from the Revised Criminal Statutes of 1911, and are inserted in view of the decision of the Court of Criminal Appeals in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

See notes under articles 1227 and 1255, ante.

Implied repeal.—In view of article 4 ante, it was held, that the adoption of the Code of 1911, omitting this statute, but without expressly repealing it did not impliedly repeal it, and that it was still in full force and effect. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

Distinguished from offense under article 1255.—As Pen. Code, art. 1255, ante, was not repealed by Acts 26th Leg. c. 102, article 1256a and as Acts 26th Leg. c. 102, was not repealed by Acts 28th Leg. c. 103, which amended art. 1255 the law in 1903 prohibited hunting within inclosed and posted lands containing less than 2,000 acres without the consent of the owner, under penalty of not less than $10 nor more than $200, and hunting within inclosed lands containing more than 2,000 acres under fine not exceeding $200; the distinction in the two later acts being that inclosed lands of less than 2,000 acres need not be posted, while inclosures of 2,000 acres or more should be posted. Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626.

Information.—An information charging that accused unlawfully entered upon the inclosed and posted lands of a corporation named, without its consent or the consent of its manager, and therein hunted with firearms, did not state an offense under this article; it not alleging that the land in question was used for either agricultural or grazing purposes. Partridge v. State (Cr. App.) 170 S. W. 717.

Art. 1255b. Same; punishment; proviso.—That any person who shall knowingly, without the consent of the owner or agent enter the enclosed and posted lands of another and shall, with fire-arms or dogs, hunt on such lands, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not more than two hundred dollars; providing further, that nothing in this act shall prohibit any bona fide traveler, while traveling along a public road in an enclosure, from killing game within a distance of four hundred yards on either side of said road. [Id., § 2.]

See note under art. 1255a.

Art. 1255c. Same; necessity of posting.—No person shall be liable to the penalty prescribed in the preceding article [art. 1255b] unless the owner or proprietor of such enclosure shall at each entrance thereto keep a notice in a conspicuous place, with the word "posted" plainly marked thereon, which shall constitute posting within the meaning of this act. [Id., § 3.]

See note under art. 1255a.

Art. 1255d. Same; repeal.—Nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal the present law relating to enclosures of two thousand acres or less. [Id., § 4.]

See note under art. 1255a.

Art. 1255e. Same; does not authorize hunting in enclosed farms.—Nothing in this act shall be held to authorize any person to hunt in any enclosure which is a farm, or in which are growing crops, without the consent of the owner or lessee of such enclosure. [Id., § 5.]

See note under art. 1255a.

Art. 1256. Same; counties exempted.—That the following counties be and the same are hereby exempted and the provisions of this Act shall not affect or be operative therein or in any county thereof, viz: Upton. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed. [Act 1899, ch. 102, § 6; Act 1903, ch. 123; Act 1905, ch. 71a; Act 1907, ch. 93; Act 1909, ch. 23; Act 1909, p. 135, ch. 80; Act 1911, p. 90, ch. 50, § 1, superseding art. 1256, revised Pen. Code.]

Explanatory.—Act 1909, p. 135, ch. 80, had reference to Act 1899, ch. 102, omitted from the revision of 1911, and inserted in this compilation as arts. 1255a-1255e, and not to Act 1903, p. 159, from which art. 1255 was constructed. In view of the decision in Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505, art. 1256, as it appeared in Rev. Pen. Code, is omitted from this compilation, and Act 1911, ch. 50, amendatory of Act 1909, p. 135, ch. 80, is inserted in its place, but in its proper relation.

Art. 1257. [806] Preventing the moving, etc., of railroad trains.—Any person or persons who shall, by force, threats, or intimidation of any kind whatever, against any railroad engineer or engineers, or any conductor, brakeman, or other officer or employé employed or engaged in running any passenger train, freight train, or construction train, running upon any railroad in this state, prevent the moving or running of said passenger, freight or construction train, shall be deemed guilty of an offense, and, upon conviction thereof, each and every person so offending shall be fined in a sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and also imprisoned in the county jail for any period of time not less than three months nor more than twelve months. [Act March 30, 1887, pp. 72-73.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 553.

Art. 1258. [807] Each day a separate offense.—Each day said train or trains mentioned in the preceding article are prevented from moving on their road, as specified in the preceding article, shall be deemed a separate offense, and shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Id.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 553.

Art. 1259. [808] Wilfully injuring railroad, etc.—Any person who shall wilfully injure any railroad, locomotive engine, or tender, or baggage, passenger or freight car of any railroad in this state, so as to prevent the use of same, shall be punished by fine in any sum not less than one hundred dollars, and imprisoned in the county jail not less than three nor more than twelve months. [Id.]

See notes under article 1227, ante.

Constitutionality.—Bill of Rights, art. 1, § 13, prohibiting excessive fines, is not violated by this article, because it does not provide a maximum punishment. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 134.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 555.

Art. 1259a. Taking or driving motor vehicle belonging to another.—Whoever purposely takes, drives or operates, or purposely caused to be taken, driven or operated upon the public road, highway or other public place, any motor vehicle, bicycle, buggy, carriage or other horse driven vehicle, without the consent of the owner thereof shall, if the value of such motor vehicle, bicycle or other vehicle is thirty-five ($35.00) dollars or more, be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than one year, or if the value is less than that sum, be fined not more than two hundred dollars ($200.00), or imprisoned not more than thirty days, or both. [Act 1913, p. 187, ch. 100, § 1, amended; Act 1915, p. 160, ch. 105, § 1.]

Offenses punishable.—The theft of a $1,200 automobile is punishable under this article and not under the statute relating to the theft of property worth over $50, by which a penitentiary sentence is authorized, in view of article 1342, post, providing that the articles of the Code prescribing the penalty for theft of property worth over $50 do not apply to the theft of any particular property where the punishment is specially prescribed. Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 351.

This article cannot be construed to be applicable only to cases of mere temporary taking and use, so as to render the general statute covering theft of property worth over $50 applicable to the stealing of a $1,200 automobile, under which a penitentiary sentence could be imposed; the special act being wholly unambiguous in language, especially in view of article 10, ante, providing that words specially defined shall be understood in that sense, and of article 1344, post, defining the word "steal" to include "theft." Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 351.

The theft of an automobile valued at $300 is punishable under this article, and not under the statute relating to the theft of property valued at more than $50, for which a penitentiary sentence is authorized. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 824.

Jurisdiction.—The theft of an automobile is a misdemeanor not triable in the district court. Greenwood v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1049.

Art. 1259b. Removing tools and parts from motor vehicle with intent to steal the same; receiving same.—Whoever shall maliciously or with intent to steal or without authority from the owner, unlawfully removes from any motor vehicle or bicycle any portion of the running or steering gear, pump, or any tire, rim, robe, cover, tube, clock, casing, radiator, fire-extinguisher, tool, lamp, starter, battery, coil, spring, gas or oil tank, bell or any signal device, speedometer, license, number, horn, box, basket, trunk or carrier, shield, hood, oiler, gauge, grease-cup, chain, lock, nut, bracket, valve, bolt, rod, cap, screws, wire, spark-plug, pipe, carbureter, magneto, fan, belt, cylinder, switch, brake, electric bulbs, or any device, emblem or monogram thereon or any attachment, fastenings or other appurtenances, or any other part or parts attached to said motor vehicle which are necessary in the use, control, repair or operation thereof, or whoever knowingly buys, receives or has in his possession, any of such articles or any part thereof so unlawfully removed as aforesaid, shall be imprisoned in the county jail not less than six months nor more than one year. [Act 1913, p. 187, ch. 100, § 2.]

Art. 1259c. Meddling with or injuring motor vehicle.—Whoever purposely and without authority from the owner, shall start or cause to be started, the motor of any motor vehicle, or whoever purposely and maliciously shall shift or change the starting device or gears of a standing motor vehicle to a position other than that in which they were left by the owner or driver of said motor vehicle, or whoever shall purposely cut, mark, scratch or damage the chassis, running gear, body, sides, top, robe, covering or upholstering of a motor vehicle, the property of another, or shall purposely destroy any part thereof with or by any liquid or other substance, or shall cut, mash, mark, or in any other way destroy or damage the cylinder, radiator, steering gear, fire-extinguisher, fan, belt, valve, pipe, wire, cap, lamp, gas or oil tank, cup, signal, device, clock, chain, tool, coil, spring, speedometer, starter, battery, spark-plug, brake, tool box, oiler, pump, switch, nut, casing, tire, rim, tube, box, basket, trunk, or carrier, rod, bolt, shield, fender, bracket, gauge, glass, hood, lock, cap, screw, carbureter, magneto, license, number, electric bulb or any device, emblem, monogram or any other attachment, fastening or appurtenance of a motor vehicle, without the permission of the owner thereof, or whoever purposely shall drain or start the drainage of any radiator or oil tank upon a motor vehicle without permission of the owner thereof, or whoever purposely shall put any metallic or other substance or liquid in the radiator, carbureter, oil-tank, grease cup, oilers, lamps or machinery of a motor vehicle, with the intent to injure or damage the same or impede the working of the machinery, or whoever shall maliciously tighten or loosen any bracket, bolt, wire nut, screw, or other fastening on a motor vehicle, or whoever shall purposely release the brake upon a standing motor vehicle, with the intent to injure said machine, shall, upon conviction thereof, be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than six months or more than one year. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1259d. Peddlers, etc., refusing to leave premises on request of owner.—If any person in this State, pursuing the business or occupation of a peddler, hawker, or itinerant vendor of goods, wares and merchandise, shall enter upon the premises owned or leased by another, and shall wilfully refuse to leave such premises, after having been notified by the person, or the agent of the person, owning or in possession of such premises, to leave such premises, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction, he shall be fined in any sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty-five dollars. [Act 1913, p. 142, ch. 76, § 1.]

CHAPTER FOUR

OF INFECTIOUS DISEASES AMONG ANIMALS AND BEES

Art. 1260.	Failing to confine horses with glanders or farcy.	Art. 1267a.	Selling or buying sheep affected with scab.
1261.	Sell or trade or offer to sell or trade animal affected with glanders.	1267b.	"Scab" defined.
1262.	Driving sheep affected with scab or other contagious disease.	1267c.	Importing sheep affected with scab.
1263.	Using horse with glanders or farcy.	1267d.	Moving sheep affected with scab from one county to another.
1264.	Penalty for riding or driving infected animals, etc.; cumulative of other laws.	1267e.	Moving sheep affected with scab within county.
1265.	Permitting sheep with scab to run at large.	1267f.	Driving sheep affected with scab across land of another.
1265a.	Failure to dip sheep affected with scab.	1267g.	Driving sheep affected with scab over public road.
1265b.	Arrest of persons violating preceding article.	1267h.	Penalty for violation of preceding articles.
1265c.	Refusing to permit examination.	1267i.	Penalty for violation of art. 1267b.
1265d.	Same; dismissal of cause or trial of complaint; defense; costs.	1268.	Persons refusing to permit sheep to be examined.
1265e.	Compensation of constable; witnesses, etc., costs.	1269-1274.	[Superseded.]
1266.	Certificate as to condition of sheep imported or moved from one county to another; provisos; penalty for violations.	1275.	Penalty for violation of this law.
1267.	[Superseded.]	1276.	Penalty for violation by owners.
		1277.	Wool growers may pay inspectors.
		1278.	Counties exempt.
		1279.	[Superseded.]
		1280.	Importation of sheep with scab.

Art.	Art.
1281. Bringing infected animal into the state.	1288a. State entomologist; duties and powers; assistants and inspectors; annual report.
1282. Obstructing live stock commissioner.	1288b. Power to deal with diseases, prohibiting shipments into state.
1283. Permitting infected animal to run at large.	1288c. Bees shipped into state to be accompanied by certificate of official entomologist of state of shipment; shipper to file certified copy; evidence in lieu of certificate; confiscation, etc.
1284. Penalties.	1288d. Carriers not to accept shipments except under regulations.
1284a. Powers of Live Stock Sanitary Commission; quarantine regulations; inspection and dipping of sheep affected with scab; refusal of owner to permit dipping; cost of dipping and recovery thereof from owner; inspectors; compensation.	1288e. Authority to declare protective quarantine, etc.
1284aa. Live Stock Sanitary Commission to establish quarantine; unlawful to transport diseased animals, rules and regulations; State Veterinarian; entry on premises to make inspection; seizure of animals moved in violation of law.	1288f. Authority to place restrictive quarantine, etc.
1284b. Cattle may be moved under rules and regulations of live stock sanitary commission.	1288g. Queen bees not to be sold without copy of certificate, etc.
1284c. Special quarantine districts for particular diseases; unlawful to remove cattle; methods of eradicating diseases; dipping live stock.	1288h. Violation of provisions, etc., a misdemeanor; prosecutions; injunctions; duties of attorney general and district attorneys; production of documents; witnesses; duties of sheriffs and constables, etc.
1284d. Owners in special quarantined area to treat live stock.	1288i. Entomologist to publish directions, rules and information, etc.
1284e. Duties of commissioners' court; disinfection of premises.	1288j. Bees affected with foul brood, etc., to be reported by owner, etc.
1284f. Penalty for violation of act.	1288k. Power to transfer bees to movable frame hives, etc.
1284g. Failure to dip animals.	1288l. Penalty for sale or shipment of infected bees.
1284h. Tick eradication; election.	1288m. Exposing honey, etc., infected with foul brood.
1285-1288. [Amended.]	1288n. Preventing inspection or detection of disease.
	1288o. Disposition of fines.

Article 1260. [809] Failing to confine horses with glanders or farcy.—If any person shall wilfully and knowingly fail, neglect or refuse to place and keep in secure confinement, separate and apart from all other stock, any animal of the horse or ass species, diseased with glanders or farcy, belonging to him or subject to his control, he shall be fined not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not less than ten days nor more than three months. [Act Aug. 19, 1876, p. 211.]

See art. 1263.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 593.

Art. 1261. Sell or trade or offer to sell or trade animal affected with glanders.—If any person or persons shall trade or sell, or offer to trade or sell, any animal of the horse or ass species, known or suspected to be affected with glanders, he shall be fined in any sum not less than five nor more than one hundred dollars, or imprisoned in the county jail not less than ten days nor more than ninety days. [Act 1897, p. 216.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 595.

Art. 1262. Driving sheep affected with scab or other contagious diseases.—If any person owning or controlling sheep affected with the scab, or other infectious or contagious disease, shall drive or permit to be driven, such sheep over or along any public road or highway in this state, or shall drive such sheep so affected, or direct or permit such sheep so affected to be driven, on or over the inclosed lands of another without first obtaining the written consent of the owner or person in charge of such inclosed lands, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars. [Act 1897, ch. 125, § 1; Act 1909, p. 114.]

Explanatory.—This article is superseded, in so far as it relates to sheep scab, by Act 1911, ch. 5, §§ 5, 6 (arts. 1267f, 1267g, post). The article is still operative as to “other infectious or contagious disease.”

Art. 1263. [810] Using horse with glanders or farcy.—If any person shall ride, drive or in any manner use any animal of the horse or ass species diseased with glanders or farcy, knowing the same to be so diseased, he shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article. [Act Nov. 8, 1866, p. 102.]

See art. 1260.

Explanatory.—This article, when carried into the revised Penal Code, had been superseded by Act April 12, 1892 (art. 1264, post). See Stevens v. State, 70 App. 565, 159 S. W. 505.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 594.

Art. 1264. [811] Penalty for riding or driving infected animals, etc.; cumulative of other laws.—Any person who may drive, lead or ride any animal infected with said diseases of glanders or farcy, knowing them to be so infected, on, along or across any public highway in this state, or allow any such animal so diseased (knowing them to be so diseased and owning such animal) to run at large on the open range of any county in this state, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act April 12, 1892, 22d Leg., S. S.]

See art. 1263 and note thereunder.

Art. 1265. [812] Permitting sheep with scab to run at large.—If any person, owning or controlling sheep affected with the scab or other infectious or contagious disease, shall permit such sheep to run at large or in charge of any one beyond the limits of his own land, he shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars. [Act Dec. 28, 1861, p. 21.]

Explanatory.—This article may be in part superseded by Act 1911, ch. 5, §§ 1-8 (arts. 1267a-1267i, post). It is still clearly operative, however, as to “other infectious or contagious diseases.” It may also be operative as to permitting sheep affected with scab “to run at large,” etc., since there is no specific denunciation of that act in the later provisions above referred to.

Effect of exemptions in article 1278.—As to the effect of exemptions contained in article 1278, see Harold v. State, 16 App. 157.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 596.

Art. 1265a. Failure to dip sheep affected with scab.—Any person having knowledge or notice of the existence of scab on any sheep owned or in charge of such person, who shall fail or refuse to dip in some preparation known to be effectual in curing scab, all flocks of sheep in which one or more such animals are so infected, within twenty days after such knowledge or notice has been received, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred nor more than two hundred dollars; provided, that every successive twenty days of failure or refusal to dip such sheep, under the provisions of this section, shall be considered a separate offense. [Act 1897, p. 179, ch. 125, § 2.]

Explanatory.—The above act, comprising arts. 1265a-1265e was omitted from the revised Pen. Code, and, in view of the decision in Berry v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 626, it is included in this compilation. It is apparently not in conflict with any other act contained in this chapter of the Pen. Code.

Art. 1265b. Arrest of persons violating preceding article.—For the purpose of determining the existence of scab, under the provisions of this act, and to serve notice on persons as provided in Section 2 [art. 1265a], the justice of the peace having jurisdiction, upon complaint of any person owning or having charge of sheep, supported by affidavit, as to his belief that a flock of sheep within such jurisdiction are infected with scab, shall forthwith issue order to a constable or some peace officer of his county, directing such officer to summon to his aid two persons having knowledge of scab, and to proceed with such persons and examine the sheep so designated, and to notify in writing the owner or person in charge of said sheep, of the result of such examination, and to return to the court of issue such order, showing how he has executed the same. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1265c. Refusing to permit examination.—Any person refusing to permit the examination provided for in Section 3 of this Act [art. 1265b], or to place the sheep in pens for such purpose, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, punished by fine of not less than one hundred nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1265d. Same; dismissal of cause or trial of complaint; defense; costs.—Upon return of the order provided for in Section 3 of this Act [art. 1265b] the Justice of the Peace shall, if it states said sheep are not infected, or that they have been dipped, within ten days next preceding such examination, dismiss such cause. But if such order states said sheep are infected with scab and have not been dipped within the ten preceding days, said Justice of the Peace shall issue warrant of arrest forthwith, against the owner or person having said sheep in charge, and proceed as in other misdemeanor cases; provided, should defendant show, by competent testimony, that such infected sheep were held only on his own or accustomed range, and that he had dipped all flocks so infected, as provided in this act, within twenty days after receiving notice, or within ten days next preceding the serving of such notice, he shall upon payment of all accrued costs be discharged. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1265e. Compensation of constable, witnesses, etc.; costs.—The constable or other peace officer and the person summoned to assist, shall receive as compensation for services performed under the provisions of this act, and for attendance at court as witnesses in such cases, the sum of two dollars and fifty cents per day for each day actually and necessarily so engaged, and such fees shall be taxed as costs against the owner of such sheep; and execution shall be issued; provided, in all cases where it is found such sheep are not infected or have been dipped within the ten days next preceding the examination so made, the costs and fees shall be taxed against the person who made the complaint, and execution shall so issue. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 1266. Certificate as to condition of sheep imported or moved from one county to another; provisos; penalty for violations.—It shall be unlawful to import into this state, or to move from one county to another, or to move from their accustomed range onto lands owned or leased by any person, without permission of such person, any flock of sheep in which one or more of such animals are infected with scab; and any person moving from one county into an adjoining county, with sheep, shall, before crossing the boundary line of said adjoining county, notify the county judge of said county wherein he proposes to enter or cross, and the said county judge shall appoint two competent persons, well versed in the knowledge of the scab disease, to examine said flock or flocks; and, if the same shall be found free of scab, or other infectious disease, then said sheep shall be allowed to proceed through said county; and the county judge shall receive the sum of two dollars and fifty cents for his services; and the said persons so appointed by him shall receive the sum of two dollars per day for their services. Said money to be paid by the party owning said sheep. Any person violating any of the provisions of this law shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum of not less than fifty dollars and not more than one hundred dollars for each such offense. Provided, that this law shall not apply to any person en route from his ranch for the purpose of delivery of his sheep at a railroad shipping point, or any point designated by the buyer thereof; provided, that said party can show a written contract signed by himself and the party to whom he has sold said sheep, specifying the place of delivery; said contract being witnessed by two reputable and creditable persons, citizens of the county in which said sheep were sold; provided, that the person desiring to import into this state, or to move from one county to another, any flock of sheep, shall not be required to have said sheep examined, except in the first county through which he proposes to pass with said sheep; and he shall indicate to the persons making the examination the destination of said sheep; and the county judge of said county making the examination shall issue to the owner or persons in charge of said sheep a certificate showing said sheep to be free from scab and other infectious diseases, which certificate shall be good for one continuous journey of not exceeding thirty days. [Act 1905, p. 222.]

Explanatory.—This article is to some extent superseded by Act 1911, ch. 5, §§ 1-8 (arts. 1267a-1267i, post). The provision as to the method of determining the existence of scab does not seem to be in conflict with the later act, and is apparently still effective.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 600-602, 604.

Art. 1267. [Superseded. See art. 1267g.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 598.

Art. 1267a. Selling or buying sheep affected with scab.—That from and after the taking effect of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell or buy any sheep affected with scab. [Act 1911, p. 7, ch. 5, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 18, Acts 1911, ch. 5, makes an appropriation to pay the expenses of the State Sheep Inspector; section 19 provides that the act shall take effect July 1, 1911; and section 20 repeals Title 111, Rev. St. 1895, and all other laws and parts of laws in conflict.

Art. 1267b. "Scab" defined.—Scab in this Act is defined to be a disease or itch caused from a bug or parasite which works itself into the wool and flesh of the sheep, causing a crusted sore, injuring the wool and causing same to fall from the animal. [Id., § 1a.]

Art. 1267c. Importing sheep affected with scab.—That from and after the taking effect of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to import into this State any sheep affected with scab. [Act Dec. 28, 1861, p. 21; Act 1897, ch. 125, § 1; Act 1905, p. 222; Act 1911, p. 7, ch. 5, § 2.]

See art. 1266 and note thereunder.

Art. 1267d. Moving sheep affected with scab from one county to another.—That from and after the taking effect of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to move from one county to another in this State any sheep affected with scab. [Act 1897, ch. 125, § 1; Act 1905, p. 222; Act 1911, p. 7, ch. 5, § 3.]

See art. 1266 and note thereunder.

Art. 1267e. Moving sheep affected with scab within county.—That from and after the taking effect of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to move from one part of any county in this State to any other part of the same county any sheep affected with scab. [Act 1911, p. 7, ch. 5, § 4.]

See arts. 1265a-1267d, ante.

Art. 1267f. Driving sheep affected with scab across land of another.—That from and after the taking effect of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to drive or cause to be driven on or across the lands of another any sheep affected with scab. [Act 1897, ch. 125, § 1; Act 1905, p. 222; Act 1911, p. 7, ch. 5, § 5.]

See art. 1266 and note thereunder.

Art. 1267g. Driving sheep affected with scab over public road.—That from and after the taking effect of this Act it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to drive along or over a public road any sheep affected with scab. [Act 1876, p. 227; Act 1897, ch. 125, § 1; Act 1905, p. 222; Act 1911, p. 7, ch. 5, § 6.]

See arts. 1262 and 1266 and notes thereunder.

Art. 1267h. Penalty for violation of preceding articles.—Any person, whether acting for himself or as agent for another person, firm or corporation, who shall violate Section 1, 3, 4, 5, or 6 of this Act [arts. 1267a, 1267c–1267g] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars and not more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1911, p. 7, ch. 5, § 7.]

Art. 1267i. Penalty for violation of art. 1267b.—Any person, whether acting for himself or as agent or employé of any other person, firm or corporation, who shall in person or by agent violate any of the provisions of Section 2 of this Act [art. 1267b] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than five hundred and not more than two thousand dollars. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 1268. Persons refusing to permit sheep to be examined.—Any person who shall refuse to permit his sheep to be examined for scab or other infectious diseases, or to place the sheep in pen for such purpose, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. [Act 1905, p. 223.]

See art. 1266, ante, and note under art. 1275, post.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 605.

Arts. 1269–1274. [Superseded by art. 1284a, post.]

Indictment or information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 603.

An information under this section must allege that defendant had knowledge of the inspection, the date he acquired such knowledge, and that he failed to cure the sheep within the twenty days after that date. Hand v. State, 37 App. 310, 39 S. W. 676.

Art. 1275. [819] Penalty for violation of this law, etc.—Any inspector of sheep or his deputy who shall fail to comply with any of the provisions of this chapter, or who shall wilfully or with intent to harass, vex or put to expense, any owner or person in charge of sheep, notify such owner or person in charge that his flock is diseased, or who shall unlawfully demand or receive any fee or compensation where none is allowed by law, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars; and thereupon the office shall be deemed vacant, and the commissioners' court may appoint another inspector for such county. [Act 1883, ch. 54, § 12; Act 22d. Leg., p. 140, § 7.]

Explanatory.—Inasmuch as Act 1915, ch. 111, which largely supersedes the act from which the above article was taken, does not contain any penal provisions directed at sheep inspectors, this article may be still operative as to inspectors appointed under the new act. It should be noted, however, that the denunciation as to failure of duty relates to those duties pointed out in "this chapter" of the Penal Code. The new act does not make any reference to existing provisions of the Penal Code, and hence does not make the new provisions a part of "this chapter" of that Code. It may be argued from this that the coercive measure in the old act cannot be applied to the new. The other provisions of the above article, however, do not seem to carry this restriction, and may apply to the new inspectors.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 606–609.

Art. 1276. [820] Penalty for violation by owners.—Any owner or person in charge of sheep who shall wilfully and knowingly violate any of the provisions of this chapter, when the penalty is not otherwise provided by this chapter, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty nor more than two hundred dollars. [Act 1883, ch. 54, § 13; Act 22d. Leg., p. 140, § 8.]

Explanatory.—What is said in the note to the next preceding article may be, to some extent, applicable to this article, but there are other provisions, such as arts. 1262, 1265, 1266, that can, without question, carry this penal clause.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 604, 610.

Art. 1277. [821] Wool growers may pay inspectors, etc

Explanatory.—The subject-matter of art. 1277, Penal Code of 1911 (art. 821, Penal Code 1895), was made up from Act 22d Leg. p. 140, § 9. The same provision was carried into Rev. Civ. St. 1895, as art. 5363, within Title 111. "Title 111 of the Revised Statutes of Texas" was repealed by Act 1911, ch. 5, § 20. This, of necessity, worked a supercession of the corresponding provision in the Penal Code. See notes under arts. 1278 and 1284a.

Art. 1278. [822] Counties exempt.—The counties of Freestone, Gonzales, Morris, Titus, Cass, Marion, Bowie, Red River, Trinity, San Jacinto, Polk, Anderson, Van Zandt, Cameron, Collin, Colorado, Grimes, Houston, Webb, Encinal, Hunt, Hopkins, Ellis, Dallas, Rockwall, Denton, Fannin, Henderson, Brazos, Smith, Panola, Gregg, Lamar, Wood, Rains, Limestone, Cooke, Brown, Comanche, Cherokee, Mills, Montgomery, Shelby, Lee, Bureson, Rusk, Lavaca, Milam, Wise, Upshur, Robertson, Camp, Parker, Franklin, Navarro, Karnes, Wilson, Atascosa, Harrison, San Augustine, Sabine, Fayette, Austin, Leon, Madison, Hill, Bosque, Waller, Fort Bend, Washington, Guadalupe, Caldwell, Hays, Tarrant, Johnson, Clay, Montague, Erath, Hood, Somervell, Bastrop, Harris, Harrison, Orange, Jefferson, Hardin, Liberty, Chambers, Newton, Tyler, Jasper, Kaufman, Nacogdoches, De Witt, Victoria, Jackson, Calhoun, Refugio, Goliad and Aransas counties are exempted from the provisions of this chapter. [Act 1883, ch. 54, § 16; Act 1885, ch. 14; Act 1891, p. 140, § 10; Act 1897, ch. 68; Act 1901, ch. 107; Act 1903, p. 117.]

See note under article 1265, ante.

Explanatory.—This article would seem to be wholly superseded by Act 1915, ch. 111 (art. 1284a, post). The article was numbered 822 in the revised Penal Code of 1895. It was taken, for the purpose of that Code, from Act 1891, p. 140, § 10. The same section of the act of 1891 was utilized to make up art. 5364, Rev. St. 1895. A reference to the act of 1891 will show that it was merely a limitation of the counties of the state in which the inspection law was to apply. In constructing the Penal Code of 1895 the revisers overlooked this fact, and changed the language so that it read "provisions of this chapter" instead of "provisions of this act." The effect of this change was to exempt the counties named from all the provisions of the chapter of the Penal Code in which art. 822 appeared, though such chapter contained many provisions wholly independent of the act of 1891. The legislature, in 1897, observed this mistake, and, in amending art. 822, Penal Code 1895, changed the language so that it read "from the provisions of articles 813 to 821 inclusive, of this chapter." This legislative appreciation of the situation was again forgotten, however, since, in 1903, the legislature, in amending the list of counties, again fell into the same error, and reverted to the former language: "provisions of this chapter," and that language was carried into the revision of 1911. The legislature has acted on this provision as it appeared in the Civil Statutes (Rev. St. 1895, art. 5364). In 1901 it amended the provision (Acts 1901, ch. 107) and in 1911 (Acts 1911, ch. 5) repealed it, by repealing and re-enacting Title 111, of Rev. St. 1895, of which art. 5364 was a part. As the civil and criminal provisions were derived from the same source, it would seem to follow that an express repeal of one of the provisions would result in an implied repeal or a supercession of the other. In view of the doubt in the situation the provision is continued in this compilation.

Art. 1279. [823] [Superseded by art. 1267g, ante.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 597.

Art. 1280. [824] Importation of sheep with scab.—If any person shall drive or cause to be driven into this state from any other state or country, any sheep affected with scab or any other infectious or contagious disease, knowing the same to be so affected, he shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars. [Act Dec. 23, 1861, p. 21.]

See article 1265.

Explanatory.—This article, in so far as it relates to scab, has been, since its enactment in 1861, superseded by many acts of the legislature. See arts. 1266, 1267c, ante. But as the article also relates to "other infectious or contagious disease" it is perhaps still operative in that respect.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 599, 600, 602.

Art. 1281. [824a] Bringing infected animal into the state.—Any person who shall knowingly bring into this state any domestic animal which is infected with any contagious or infectious disease, or any animal which has been exposed to any contagious or infectious disease, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than five hundred nor more than five thousand dollars. Information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 613.

An information, charging that accused, after cattle owned by him had been duly quarantined by an inspector for the live stock sanitary commission, and after the inspector had ordered him to confine the cattle, which were affected with a contagious and infectious disease, and not to remove or permit them to be removed from the premises where they then were, knowingly and unlawfully drove and moved them and permitted them to go from such premises on other premises, in violation of the order and regulation of the inspector, did not charge an offense, since, while the law authorizes the commission to establish rules and regulations, to establish quarantine, etc., it does not authorize an inspector to do so, and the information did not charge a violation of any rule or regulation of the commission, but merely a violation of the order of the inspector. Rhea v. State, 70 App. 258, 156 S. W. 643.

Verdict.—Where one of the counts submitted attempted to charge a violation of the rules and regulations of the live stock sanitary commission, while the others charged violations of article 1283, and the verdict found accused guilty of "breaking the laws of the live stock sanitary commission," the verdict could not, for the purpose of upholding a conviction, be applied to the counts charging a violation of article 1283, since, while a verdict general in its terms may be applied to any count submitted, a verdict which makes a specific finding as to the count under which accused is found guilty cannot be so applied. Rhea v. State, 70 App. 258, 156 S. W. 643.

Art. 1284. [824d] Penalties.—Except as otherwise provided in this law, any person who shall violate, disregard, or evade, or attempt to violate, disregard or evade, any of the provisions of this law, or who shall violate, disregard, or evade, or attempt to violate, disregard, or evade, any of the rules, regulations, orders, or directions of the live stock sanitary commission, establishing and governing quarantine, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred nor more than five thousand dollars.

Explanatory.—The above provision constitutes section 13 of Acts 1893, p. 70, relating to the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, and, hence, it applies only to the three preceding articles.

Art. 1284a. Powers of Live Stock Sanitary Commission; quarantine regulations; inspection and dipping of sheep affected with scab; refusal of owner to permit dipping; cost of dipping and recovery thereof from owner; inspectors; compensation.—It shall be the duty of the Commission provided for in Article 7312 [Rev. St. 1911] to protect the domestic animals of this state from all contagious or infectious diseases of a malignant character, including cholera in hogs, whether said diseases exist in Texas or elsewhere; and for this purpose they are hereby authorized and empowered to establish, maintain and enforce such quarantine lines and sanitary rules and regulations as they may deem necessary. It shall also be the duty of said Commission to co-operate with livestock quarantine commissioners and officers of other states and territories, and with the United States Secretary of Agriculture, in establishing such interstate quarantine lines, rules and regulations as shall best protect the livestock industry of this state against Texas or splenic fever and scabbies in sheep. It shall be the duty of said Commission upon receipt by them of reliable information of the evidence among the domestic animals of the state of any malignant disease, including scabbies in sheep and cholera in hogs, to go at once to the place where any such disease is alleged to exist and make a careful examination of the animals believed to be affected with any such disease, and ascertain, if possible, what, if any, disease exists among the livestock reported to be affected and whether the same is contagious or infectious; and if said disease is found to be of a malignant contagious or infectious character, they shall direct and enforce such quarantined lines and sanitary regulations as are necessary to prevent the spread of any such disease. And no domestic animal infected with disease, or capable of communicating same, shall be permitted to enter or leave the district, premises or grounds so quarantined, except by authority of the Commission. The said Commission shall also, from time to time, give and enforce such directions and prescribe such rules and regulations as to separating, feeding and caring for such diseased and exposed animals as they shall deem necessary to prevent the animals so affected with such disease from coming in contact with other animals not so affected. And the said Commissioners are hereby authorized and empowered to enter upon any grounds or premises, to carry out the provisions of this Act. If scab or scabbies are found in any flock of sheep when same is inspected, which inspection shall be made whenever the Commission may receive information by notification by any citizen or otherwise that scab probably exists, any member of said Commission, or an inspector appointed by said Commission, shall have the power, and he is hereby given the power, to inspect and dip said sheep at the owner's expense; and if any owner or owners shall refuse to permit said sheep to be dipped after having been examined and condemned by said Commission, he shall be fined in any amount not less than fifty dollars, nor more than two hundred dollars, and if any owner or owners shall refuse to pay the actual cost of said dipping, the Commission, as hereinbefore provided, shall have the right to bring civil action against such owner or owners, in the county where said sheep are so inspected, for the sum or sums actually paid out as the expense of said inspection and dipping; provided, that in case the Live Stock Sanitary Commission shall not have sufficient number of inspectors to execute the provisions of this law, then the Commission may appoint a resident sheep inspector to serve in one or more counties whenever it is necessary to do so, provided the Commissioners Court in said county or counties shall agree to pay the salary of said inspector, or their pro rata of said salary based upon the number of sheep in each county as shown by the tax roll of said counties, where the duties of inspector are performed in more than one county. Said inspectors shall be paid a salary of not less than twenty-five dollars per month nor more than one hundred dollars per month. Such inspectors shall be practical and experienced sheepmen; they shall be under the exclusive control of the Livestock Sanitary Commission, and shall be subject to removal by said Livestock Sanitary Commission, or either of said Commissioners, whenever said Commission or Commissioners shall deem necessary to do so. [Act 1883, ch. 54; Act 22d Leg., p. 140; Act 1911, ch. 5; Act 1913, ch. 169, § 1; Act 1913, ch. 176, §§ 1-3; Act 1915, p. 167, ch. 111, § 1, amending art. 7314, Rev. St. 1911.]

Explanatory.—Acts 1915, ch. 111, does not, in its body, expressly repeal Act 1911, ch. 5, or any part thereof. Its title however recites, among other things, that one of the purposes of the new act is the "repealing the present law passed by the Thirty-Second Legislature relative to appointing inspectors, and the eradication of scab." It contains no more than the usual general repealing clause. It would seem, therefore, that the act of 1915 supersedes, if it does not repeal, that part of the act of 1911 dealing with the subject of county and state inspectors.

Validity.—Acts 33d Leg. c. 169, authorizing the Governor and sanitary commission to fix quarantine lines to prevent the spread of Texas fever, etc., is not a delegation of legislative authority which renders it invalid, for the act prescribes that when the Governor and commission deem it necessary to protect live stock such lines shall be established. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 522.

Quarantine line fixed before law went into effect.—The Governor and the sanitary commission, which was required by Rev. St. 1911, art. 7322, to fix quarantine lines to prevent the spread of Texas fever, etc., so as to conform to the federal quarantine line, and was created long prior to the passage of Acts 33d Leg. c. 169, authorizing the Governor and commission to fix a different line, may, between the date of passage and the time the new act went into effect, fix a new line which would become effective at the same time that the act became effective. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 168 S. W. 522.

Art. 1284aa. Live Stock Sanitary Commission to establish quarantine; unlawful to transport diseased animals; rules and regulations; State Veterinarian; entry on premises to make inspection; seizure of animals moved in violation of law.—[It shall be the duty of the Commission provided for in Article 7312 (Rev. St. 1911) to protect the domestic animals of the State from all contagious, infectious diseases of a communicable character, whether said diseases exist in Texas or elsewhere; and for this purpose it is hereby authorized and empowered to establish, maintain and enforce such quarantine lines and sanitary rules and regulations as it may deem necessary. It shall also be the duty of said Commission to co-operate with the live stock sanitary commission and officers of other states and with the United States Secretary of Agriculture in establishing such interstate quarantine lines, rules and regulations as shall best protect the live stock industry of this State against Texas splenic fever and other contagious, infectious and communicable diseases of live stock.] It shall also be the duty of said Live Stock Sanitary Commission to quarantine any district, county or part of county within this State when it shall determine the fact that cattle or other live stock in such district, county or part of county, are affected with any contagious, infectious or communicable disease, or with the agency of transmission of such diseases, and to give written or printed notice of the establishment of such quarantines to the proper officers of railroads and express companies doing business in or through such quarantine district, county or part of county within this State, and to publish notice of the establishment of such quarantine in such newspapers in the quarantine district, county or part of county as the Live Stock Sanitary Commission may select, or give notice in such other ways as it deems necessary. And no railroad or express company shall receive for transportation or transport from any quarantine district, county or part of county in this State into any other district, county or part of county within this State, any cattle or live stock except as hereinafter provided. Nor shall any person, company, or corporation deliver for transportation to any railroad or express company, any cattle or other live stock of or from a quarantined area except as hereinafter provided. Nor shall any person, company or corporation drive on foot or cause to be driven on foot or transport in private conveyance or cause to be transported in private conveyance, from a quarantined district, county or part of county into any other district, county or part of county of this State any cattle or other live stock, except as hereinafter provided. It shall be the duty of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission of Texas, and it is hereby authorized and directed, to make and promulgate rules and regulations which shall permit and govern the inspection, disinfection, certification, treatment, handling and method and manner of delivery and shipment of cattle and other live stock from a quarantined district, county or part of county into any other district, county or part of county in this State, and the Live Stock Sanitary Commission of Texas shall give notice of such rules and regulation by proclamation issued by the Governor, and the said Live Stock Sanitary Commission of Texas is hereby especially empowered with the authority to employ a State Veterinarian, and assistant State Veterinarians in time of emergency, and inspectors or other persons as it may deem necessary to the performance of the duties imposed upon said Commission. The Live Stock Sanitary Commission, the State Veterinarian, Assistant State Veterinarians, and inspectors acting under authority or direction of the Commission, are hereby empowered and it is made their duty to enter upon premises of any person, or persons, company or corporation, within the State, for the purpose of inspecting, quarantining or disinfecting premises or live stock thereon. Whenever any person shall move any animal which is quarantined or which is by law or by the rules and regulations of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission prohibited from being so moved, across any quarantine line, out of any quarantined district, or of quarantined premises in violation of the law or of the rules and regulations of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission or without its consent, the said Commission, the chairman thereof, or any inspector acting under his direction, shall be authorized (authorized) and empowered to seize such animal or animals and call to their aid the sheriff of the county in which they may be found or through which they may have moved, in violation of law or the rules and regulations of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, and it will be the duty of said sheriff to return such animal or animals to the place, county or quarantined area from which so moved. [Act 1913, p. 353, ch. 169, § 1.]

Explanatory.—The words in brackets are superseded by art. 1284a. Act 1913, ch. 169, § 9 repeals art. 7322, Revised St.

Art. 1284b. Cattle may be moved under rules and regulations of Live Stock Sanitary Commission.—That cattle or other live stock may be moved from a quarantined district, county or part of county, or from quarantined premises into any other district, county, part of county, or premises, under and in compliance with the rules and regulations of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, as proclaimed by the Governor, but it shall be unlawful to move or allow to move any cattle or other live stock from any quarantined district, county, part of county or premises, to any other district, county, part of county or premises, in manner, method or conditions other than those prescribed by the Live Stock Sanitary Commission and proclaimed by the Governor. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1284c. Special quarantine districts for particular diseases; unlawful to remove cattle; methods of eradicating diseases; dipping live stock.—It is further [further] provided that the Live Stock Sanitary Commission shall have the power, and it is hereby made its duty to as far as possible eradicate Texas or splenic fever, the scabies, anthrax, tuberculosis, hog cholera, glanders and other infectious, contagious or communicable diseases of live stock, and for this purpose it is empowered to establish special quarantined districts, where such diseases or the infection of such diseases are known to exist, and notice of the establishment of such special quarantined districts shall be given as provided for in Article 7314. [Rev. St. 1911.] The Live Stock Sanitary Commission shall have power to quarantine premises or pastures located in such special quarantined districts, and the domestic live stock thereon situated in such quarantined districts, or elsewhere when, to their knowledge, such pastures or premises or the live stock located thereon are infected with or have been exposed to a contagious, infectious or communicable disease or the infection thereof, and no live stock shall be moved to or from such special quarantined district, pastures or premises, in a manner, method or other condition other than those prescribed by the Live Stock Sanitary Commission. It will be the duty of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission to prescribe methods for dipping or otherwise treating or disinfecting such premises and the live stock thereon, as in their opinion are necessary for the eradication of the disease or the infection of the disease for which they are quarantined and when any person, company or corporation, owning, controlling or caring for such live stock, shall fail or refuse to dip or otherwise treat such live stock or disinfect premises at such time and in such manner as directed by the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, then the Live Stock Sanitary Commission shall have power to call upon the sheriff of the county in which such live stock are found, and it will be the duty of said sheriff, together with the inspector, to dip or otherwise treat such live stock in a manner and at such time as the Live Stock Sanitary Commission shall direct; and the said sheriff shall keep said cattle in his custody subject to such quarantine instruction as he shall receive from such officers. No officer who shall seize such live stock for dipping or treatment shall be liable to the owner thereof for damages for such taking, or by reason of such dipping or treatment; provided, the dipping or treatment has been done in accordance with the methods approved by the said Live Stock Sanitary Commission. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1284d. Owners in special quarantined area to treat live stock.—It shall be the duty of any person in any county who is the owner or caretaker of any live stock located in a special quarantined area established under the authority of Section 3 of this Act [art. 1284c], known by the live stock inspector to be infected with ticks (Margaropus Analatus) or scabies infection are exposed to infection or agent of transmission of any other infectious, contagious or communicable disease to treat such live stock and at such times and in such manner as shall be directed by the Live Stock Sanitary Commission. [Id., § 4.]

Civil penalty.—See Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 7317.

Art. 1284e. Duties of commissioners' court; disinfection of premises.—It shall be the duty of the commissioners court to co-operate with and assist the Live Stock Sanitary Commission in protecting the live stock of their respective counties from all contagious, infectious or communicable diseases, whether such exists within or outside of the county, and in other ways protecting the live stock interest of their counties. It shall be the duty of said commissioners' court to co-operate with the Live Stock Sanitary Commissioner [Commission] and the officers working under the authority or direction of said Commission in the suppression and eradication of contagious, infectious or communicable diseases. Provided, when it becomes necessary to disinfect any premises under order of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, the county judge shall have such disinfecting done at the expense of the county, and in no case shall the owner, or lessee or tenant of the premises be held answerable to any of the provisions of this Act by reason of the fact that the county fails to disinfect the premises, as herein provided. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1284f. Penalty for violation of act.—Any person, company or corporation violating any of the provisions of this Act, or any of the rules or regulations prescribed to the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty nor more than one thousand dollars. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 1284g. Failure to dip animals.—Any person, company or corporation owning, controlling or caring for any domestic animals affected with or known to have been exposed to any contagious or infectious disease or the agency or transmission thereof, who shall fail or refuse to dip or otherwise treat such live stock at such time and in such manner as directed by the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than one thousand dollars. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 1284h. Tick eradication; election.—It shall be the duty of the commissioners court of any county lying and being situated south or east of the Federal quarantine line to order an election in said county when petitioned to do so by seventy-five resident land owners of the county for the purpose of determining whether the county shall take up the work of tick eradication in said county. Said election to be ordered not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days after the filing of said petition. At said election the ballots shall have printed upon them, "For Tick Eradication in _____county," and "Against Tick Eradication in _____county." The officers of said election shall hold said election and make returns thereof as provided by law, in case of other elections as nearly as may be. Said returns shall be made returnable to the county judge of the county. The commissioner's court shall meet and canvass said returns as soon as practicable after such election and if they shall find that a majority of all the votes were in favor of tick eradication under the direction of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, they shall so certify and cause publication of same to be made in a newspaper published in said county. The county judge shall so notify the Live Stock Sanitary Commission and upon receipt of such notice from the county judge of the county so holding such election, the Live Stock Sanitary Commission shall cause to be issued a supplemental proclamation signed by the Governor proclaiming a quarantine around said county, and the citizens of said county, in co-operation with, and under the direction of, the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, shall begin the work of tick eradication within thirty days of the issuance of the said supplemental proclamation. Should the commissioner's court find that a majority of the votes cast were against tick eradication, then the county judge shall so notify the Live Stock Sanitary Commission and on and after such notice by the county judge of the county judge of the county holding such election the Live Stock Sanitary Commission shall be denied the right to take up the work of tick eradication in said county, and the provisions of this Act with reference to tick eradication and the establishment of special quarantines in reference thereto shall not be in effect in said county. [Id., § 8.]

See Const. art. 16, § 23, Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, vol. 1, p. lxxv.

Arts. 1285-1288. [Amended. See post, arts. 1288a-1288o.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 728, 729.

Art. 1288a. State entomologist; duties and powers; assistants and inspectors; annual report.—That for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act, the entomologist of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the Agricultural & Mechanical College of Texas shall be the State Entomologist of this State, and as such it shall be his duty to enforce the provisions of this Act and to issue such rules, regulations, etc., as are hereinafter required. As State Entomologist he shall receive no fees or remuneration other than his regular salary as Entomologist of the Experiment Station and State Entomologist; provided, that he may be reimbursed for necessary expenses incurred in discharge of his duties as State Entomologist. He shall employ such assistants and inspectors as may be necessary, subject to the approval and confirmation of the Director and Governing Board of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station. He shall make an annual report to the Director and Governing Board of the Experiment Station, such report giving a detailed account of all funds received and disbursed, and for what purpose, as well as a full report upon all prosecutions, etc., made under the provisions of this Act. [Act 1903, ch. 126, amended; Act 1913, p. 96, ch. 51, § 2.]

Art. 1288b. Power to deal with diseases; prohibiting shipments into state.—The said State Entomologist shall have full and plenary power to deal with all contagious or infectious diseases of honey bees which, in his opinion, may be prevented, controlled or eradicated; and shall have full power and authority to make, promulgate and enforce such rules, ordinances, orders and regulations, and to do and perform such acts as, in his judgment, may be necessary to control, eradicate or prevent the introduction, spread or dissemination of any all contagious diseases of honey bees as far as may be possible, and all the rules, ordinances, orders and regulations of said State Entomologist shall have the force and effect of law in so far as they conform to the General Laws of this State and the United States. The State Entomologist, in the exercise of the power and authority herein delegated, shall have authority to prohibit the shipment or bringing into this State of any honey bees, honey, honeycomb, or articles or things capable of transmitting contagious or infectious diseases of bees, from any state, territory or foreign country, except under such rules and regulations as may be adopted and promulgated by said State Entomologist. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1288c. Bees shipped into state to be accompanied by certificate of official entomologist of state of shipment; shipper to file certified copy; evidence in lieu of certificate; confiscation, etc.—All honey bees shipped or moved into this State shall be accompanied by a certificate of inspection signed by the State Entomologist or State Foul Brood Inspector of the state or country from which shipped. Such certificate shall certify to the apparent freedom of the bees, and their combs and hives, from contagious and infectious diseases and must be based upon an actual inspection of the bees themselves within a period of sixty days preceding date of shipment. The shipper of such bees is hereby required to file with the State Entomologist at College Station, Texas, at least ten days in advance of such shipment, a certified copy of said certificate, together with the names and addresses of both consignor and consignee; provided, that when honey bees are to be shipped into this State from other states or countries wherein no official apiary inspector or state entomologist is available, the State Entomologist of Texas may issue permit for such shipment upon presentation of suitable evidence showing such bees to be free from diseases. Shipments of bees arriving at points within this State, not accompanied by the certificate herein described, shall be subject to confiscation and destruction by the State Entomologist or his assistants. This requirement shall not apply to shipments of live bees in wire cages, when without combs or honey. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1288d. Carriers not to accept shipments except under regulations.—It shall be unlawful for railroad companies, express companies and other common carriers to accept for shipment, between points within this State, any honey bees, used honey combs, used bee hives or fixtures, except under such regulations and provisions as the State Entomologist shall prescribe. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1288e. Authority to declare protective quarantine, etc.—The State Entomologist shall have authority to declare a protective quarantine in any district, county, precinct or other defined area wherein foul brood or other contagious disease of bees is not known to exist, or wherein any disease of bees is being eradicated in accordance with the provisions of this Act, said quarantine to prohibit the movement or shipment, into said district, county, precinct or other area, of any bees, honey, appliances or other things capable of transmitting the disease or infection, except under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 1288f. Authority to place restrictive quarantine, etc.—The State Entomologist shall have authority when, in his opinion, public welfare and necessity require it, to place a restrictive quarantine upon any district, county, precinct or other defined area wherein are located any honey bees infected with contagious or infectious disease, said quarantine to prohibit the movement or shipment therefrom of any bees, honey, appliances or other things capable of transmitting the infection, except under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 1288g. Queen bees not to be sold without copy of certificate, etc.—Queen bees and their attendant bees shall not be sold or offered for sale in this State unless accompanied by a copy of a certificate from a State or Government entomologist or apiary inspector to the effect that the apiary from which said queen bees are shipped has been inspected within the preceding twelve months and found apparently free from contagious and infectious diseases, or by a copy of a statement by the beekeeper made before a notary public or other officer having a seal that the bees are not diseased to the best belief of affiant and that the honey used in making the candy contained in the queen cage has been diluted and boiled for at least thirty minutes in a closed vessel. [Id., § 10.]

Art. 1288h. Violation of provisions, etc., a misdemeanor; prosecutions; injunctions; duties of attorney general and district attorneys; production of documents; witnesses; duties of sheriffs and constables, etc.—Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this Act, or violating any of the rules, quarantines, orders or regulations of the State Entomologist issued in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. All prosecutions under this Act shall be commenced and carried on in any county of the State affected by the violation of said orders, quarantines, rules or regulations, and the said State Entomologist may enjoin any threatened or attempted violation of his orders, quarantines, rules or regulations in any court of competent jurisdiction, or take any other civil proceedings necessary to carry out and enforce the provisions of this Act. It shall be the duty of the Attorney General and the various county and district attorneys to represent said State Entomologist whenever called on to do so; and said State Entomologist, in the discharge and enforcement of the duties and powers herein delegated, shall have the authority to compel the production for examination by said State Entomologist, or any one designated by him, of all books, papers and documents in the possession of any person; to take testimony, and compel the attendance and examination under oath of witnesses; and it is hereby made the duty of the various sheriffs and constables throughout the State to serve all papers, orders, summons and writs, that may be delivered to them by said State Entomologist and to protect the State Entomologist or his assistants or inspectors in the discharge of their duties, as herein defined whenever called upon to do so. The said State Entomologist is authorized when necessary to apply to any court of competent jurisdiction for the necessary writs and orders to enforce the provisions of this Article, and in such cases he shall not be required to give bond. [Id., § 11.]

Art. 1288i. Entomologist to publish directions, rules and information, etc.—For the purpose of disseminating knowledge regarding honey bees and their diseases, the State Entomologist shall publish methods and directions for treating, eradicating or suppressing contagious or infectious diseases of honey bees, including the rules and regulations provided for in Sections 2, 3, 5, 8 and 9 [arts. 1288a, 1288b, 1288d–1288f] and such other information as he shall deem of value or necessity to the beekeeping interests of the State. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 1288j. Bees affected with foul brood, etc., to be reported by owner, etc.—If any owner of, or any person having control or possession of any honey bees in this State, knows that any bees so owned or controlled are affected with American foul brood, or any other contagious or infectious disease, or knows of any other bees so diseased, it shall be and is hereby made his duty to at once report such fact to the State Entomologist at College Station, Texas, setting out in his said report all the facts known with reference to said infection. [Id., § 13.]

Art. 1288k. Power to transfer bees to movable frame hives, etc.—The State Entomologist shall have full power in his discretion to order any owner or possessor of bees dwelling in hives without movable frames, or not permitting of ready examination, to transfer such bees to a movable frame hive within a specified time. In default of such transfer the State Entomologist may destroy, or order destroyed, such hives, together with the honey, frames, combs and bees contained therein, without recompense to the owner, lessee or agent thereof. [Id., § 14.]

Art. 1288l. Penalty for sale or shipment of infected bees.—If any owner or keeper of any diseased colonies of bees shall barter, give away, sell, ship or move any infected bees, honey or appliances, or shall expose any other bees to the danger of infection of the disease, or shall refuse or neglect to make report as provided in Section 13 of this Act [art. 1288j], he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., § 17.]

Art. 1288m. Exposing honey, etc., infected with foul brood.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to expose, on their own premises or elsewhere, any honey, hives, frames, combs, brood or appliances known to be infected by foul brood or other dangerous disease of bees, in such a manner that honey bees may have access to same; and it shall be unlawful to sell, offer for sale, barter, give away, ship or distribute any honey taken from a colony or colonies of bees infected with foul brood or other infectious or contagious disease. Violation of this Section shall be deemed a misdemeanor and any person, firm or corporation convicted thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. [Id., § 18.]

Art. 1288n. Preventing inspection or detection of disease.—Any one who shall seek to prevent any inspection of bees, honey or appliances under the direction of the State Entomologist, in accordance with this Act, or who shall seek or attempt to prevent the discovery or treatment of diseased honey bees, or who shall attempt to intimidate the State Entomologist, his assistants or inspectors, or otherwise interfere with them in the lawful discharge of their duties as herein defined shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction, be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five nor more than two hundred dollars. Prosecutions under the provisions of this Section shall be instituted in any county of the State in which the offense is committed. [Id., § 19.]

Art. 1288o. Disposition of fines.—All fines collected for prosecutions under the provisions of this Act shall be paid to the State Treasurer, to become a part of the fund for carrying out the provisions of this Act. [Id., § 20.]

Article 1289. [825] Punishment for.—If any person, without the consent of the owner, shall knowingly cut down or destroy any tree or timber upon any land not his own, or shall knowingly, and without such consent, carry away any such timber, he shall be fined not less than ten nor more than five hundred dollars.

What constitutes offense.—If defendant purchased the land from another and believed it to be his he was not guilty. Lackey v. State, 14 App. 164.

Subletting without consent of the landlord being forbidden by Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, art. 5489, one can be convicted of carrying timber off the land of another, though he purchased it in good faith of one to whom the premises had been sublet without consent of the owner; he having been informed of the facts by the owner's son, and forbidden to remove the timber, and being bound to know the law. Lindley v. State (Cr. App.) 44 S. W. 165.

The defendant to be convicted under this article must knowingly cut timber on land not his own. If he mistakenly believes that the land is his he cannot be convicted. Allsup v. State (Cr. App.) 62 S. W. 1062.

Indictment and evidence thereunder.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 614.

An indictment charging that defendant did then and there unlawfully, knowingly and wilfully, without the consent of the owner thereof, cut down, destroy and carry away trees and timber upon land not his own, to wit upon land known as the M. survey, held sufficient. Leggett v. State, 25 App. 535, 8 S. W. 660.

Where an indictment charges defendant with knowingly cutting timber on a certain survey, evidence that the land was not in such survey is fatal to conviction, though it was not necessary to allege in the information the name of the survey. Evans v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 988.

Charge of court.—For a charge correctly defining "timber" see Wilson v. State, 17 App. 393; ante, art. 1290. Where the evidence showed that the title to the land was in dispute, and that the defendant had purchased the timber from one of the disputants, it was held that the court should have instructed the jury that if they believed from the evidence that the defendant purchased the timber, believing it to be the property of the person from whom he purchased it, and made such purchase in good faith, he would not be guilty of this offense. Lackey v. State, 14 App. 164. Where the evidence showed that the land from which the timber was cut was in the possession of the defendant as well as of the alleged owner thereof, the court should have instructed the jury that if they believed from the evidence that at the time of cutting the timber the defendant had notorious possession and use of the land, evidence that another person also had notorious possession and use thereof would not be sufficient proof that the defendant was not the owner of the land. White v. State, 14 App. 449. Where the facts demand it, the court should instruct the jury that the husband has the legal right to use, manage, and control the land of the wife, and to cut timber therefrom. White v. State, 14 App. 449.

Where the issue was ownership of the land—the determination depending on the dividing line of certain surveys—a requested charge that if there was a reasonable doubt as to whether or not the timber was cut on the survey under which prosecutor claimed, defendant should be acquitted, should have been given. Mann v. State, 47 App. 250, 83 S. W. 195.

Art. 1290. [826] "Timber" and "owner" include what.—The word "timber," as used in the preceding article, includes rails or other articles manufactured from timber; and the word "owner" includes the state and any corporation, public or private, owning lands within this state.

"Timber" defined.—The word "timber," as used in this article, is that sort of wood which is proper for building, or for tools, utensils, furniture, carriages, fences, ships, and the like, usually said of fallen trees, but sometimes of those standing. Wood suitable only for fuel does not come within the meaning of the word "timber." Wilson v. State, 17 App. 393. Before the enactment of this article, "fence rails" were held not to be "timber" within the meaning of article 1289. McCauley v. State, 43 Tex. 374.

State as "owner."—Before the adoption of this article it was held that it was no offense to cut timber from state lands (Hart. Dig. 493). State v. Howard, 21 Tex. 416. And see art. 24.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 614.

Art. 1291. [827] Procedure in prosecutions.—In any prosecution under article 1289, the indictment or information need not allege the name of the owner of the timber, but it shall be sufficient for it to state that the timber was not the property of the accused; and it shall be sufficient to describe the land by the name of the owner, or of the original grantee, or by any name or names by which it may be commonly known in the neighborhood in which the alleged offense was committed.

Indictment or information.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 614.

See, also, note under article 1296, post.

Where the indictment charges defendant with the cutting and carrying away proof of either cutting or carrying away is sufficient. Welsh v. State, 11 Tex. 368.

Before the revision of 1879, it was not necessary for the indictment to describe the lands by metes and bounds, or by the name of the original grantee, but only by the name of the owner. Indictment held sufficient which charged that accused cut and carried away timber "upon land not his own." State v. Warren, 13 Tex. 45.

The indictment may charge conjunctively that the defendant cut down and carried away the timber, and proof that he did either will support the charge. It must be alleged that the act was "knowingly" committed. To allege merely that it was "unlawfully" committed will not be sufficient. State v. Stalls, 37 Tex. 440; Welsh v. State, 11 Tex. 368. Nor is it sufficient to charge that the act was done "willfully." State v. Arnold, 39 Tex. 74.

— Proof and variance.—A variance between the complaint and the information as to ownership will be fatal. Calvert v. State, 8 App. 538. See, also, Leggett v. State, 25 App. 535, 8 S. W. 660.

Failure to prove venue as alleged is fatal. Leggett v. State, 25 App. 535, 8 S. W. 660.

Art. 1292. [828] Modes of proving ownership.—Upon the trial of any case coming within the provisions of article 1289, the state may prove the ownership of the land to be in some person other than the defendant by either of the following modes:

1. By the copy of a grant duly certified from the general land office.

2. By a deed, or a copy of a deed, or other evidence of title, duly certified, from the office of the clerk of the county court of the county where the prosecution is pending.

3. By a certificate from the comptroller's office, or from the assessor and collector of the county, that some person other than the defendant pays taxes on the land.

4. By verbal testimony of title, or of notorious use and possession of the land by some person other than the defendant; and such proof shall be held sufficient until contradicted by competent evidence on the part of the defendant that he is the owner of the land. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 179.]

Evidence.—Prima facie proof is all that is requisite to throw on the defendant the onus of proving license or superior title. But the burden is upon the state to prove prima facie that the timber was knowingly cut, etc., by the defendant from land not his own. Belverman v. State, 16 Tex. 130; White v. State, 14 App. 449. But the state is not required to prove that the defendant committed the act without the consent of the owner. It is for the defendant to show that he had the consent of the owner. Welsh v. State, 11 Tex. 368. Proof of possession is sufficient prima facie proof of ownership and such proof may be made by parol. Phillips v. State, 17 App. 169; May v. State, 15 App. 430. Admissions of the defendant that the ownership was as alleged in the indictment sufficiently proves that fact. Welsh v. State, 11 Tex. 368. But the declarations of a third person as to ownership are not evidence. Belverman v. State, 16 Tex. 130.

Evidence held insufficient to establish ownership in another than defendant. White v. State, 14 App. 449.

Charge held erroneous as shifting the burden of proof on defendants. Matthews v. State (Cr. App.) 42 S. W. 375.

Art. 1293. [829] Road repairs, etc., not included.—Nothing in the foregoing articles of this chapter contained shall render any person guilty of an offense who cuts or uses timber for the purpose of making or repairing any public road or bridge passing over or immediately adjacent to the land on which such tree or timber may be found, or who uses a reasonable amount of wood standing outside of an inclosure for the purpose of making fires while traveling upon the road.

Art. 1294. [830] If the offense is theft, punishable as such.—Nothing contained in the foregoing articles of this chapter shall exempt a person from the penalty affixed to the offense of theft whenever timber is taken in such manner as to come within the definition of that offense.

Art. 1295. [831] Destroying pecan or walnut timber.—If any person shall cut down or otherwise destroy or injure any pecan or walnut tree on land not his own without authority in writing from the owner of such pecan or walnut tree, he shall be punished by fine of not less than twenty-five nor more than fifty dollars. [Act April 20, 1871, p. 42.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 615.

Art. 1296. Gathering pecans or injuring pecan timber without consent of owner.—Any person who shall, hereafter, gather any pecan nuts upon inclosed land not owned, leased or controlled by him, unless it be made to appear in defense that it was done by the consent of the owner, lessor or person in control, or any person who shall cut, destroy, or injure any pecan timber upon lands not his own, unless it be made to appear in defense that it was done with the consent of the owner thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than five dollars and not more than three hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Act 1897, p. 53.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 616, 617.

An indictment which alleges want of consent of owner is good. Burrows v. State (Cr. App.) 101 S. W. 232.

Art. 1297. [832] Person floating timber shall brand same.—Any person engaged in floating or rafting timber upon the waters of any river or creek of this state shall have a log brand with which to brand every log or stick that he may float or haul and put into the waters for sale or market, the same to be distinctly branded. [Act April 7, 1879, p. 81, § 1.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 618.

Art. 1298. [833] Shall have brand recorded.—He shall have said brand recorded in every county in which he cuts any of said timber, and in the county where he proposes to sell or market said timber, by the county clerk, in a book to be kept by said clerk for that purpose, for which said clerk shall receive a fee the same as is by law allowed for recording stock brands. [Id., § 2.]

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 618.

Art. 1299. [834] Shall make report of logs cut, etc.—Any persons who float any logs or timber in this state shall, on the first day of April, first day of July, first day of October and the first day of January of each year, or within fifteen days of such dates, make a written report, under oath, showing the number of logs cut or floated during the next preceding three months, the survey or surveys of land from which they were cut or carried, and the number cut from each, and a description of the brand placed thereon, and shall file the same with the county clerk of the county in which the timber was cut; and such clerk shall record the same in a book kept for that purpose, and index it, and receive therefor the sum of fifty cents from the party presenting the same; provided, this act shall not apply to pickets, post, rails or firewood. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1300. [835] Certificate of clerk evidence of ownership.—A certificate, under the hand of the county clerk, containing a description of a log brand and the name of the owner thereof, with a transfer on the back of it, signed and acknowledged by such owner or proved as other instruments for record, shall be prima facie evidence that the person to whom the transfer is made owns the logs described thereon. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1301. [836] Offenses and punishment; definitions.—Any person who shall buy or sell any timber or log floating or that has been floated in this state, before the same has been branded, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than ten dollars for each log or piece of timber so purchased, sold or traded for. Any person who shall float any unbranded log or timber for market, or who shall fail to make the reports required by this act, or any person who shall brand any log or timber of another without his authority, or any person who shall deface any brand on any log or timber otherwise than when it is in the act of being sawed or manufactured into lumber or other commodity for use in building, or any person not an employé of the owner, who shall, without the written consent of the owner, take into possession any branded or unbranded log or timber cut for floating or sawing, or any sawed timber, lumber or shingle, floating in any of the waters of this state, or deposited upon the banks of any river or stream in this state, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by fine not exceeding two hundred dollars for each offense. By "lumber" is meant lumber attached or bound together in some way for floating, and not loose lumber, and by "shingles" is meant shingles in bunches or bundles, and not loose shingles. [Id., § 5.]

See Willson's Cr. Forms, 618-623.

Art. 1302. [837] Venue.—The courts of the county in which the timber or lumber was deposited in the water, or in which it was unlawfully taken into possession or unlawfully defaced, sold, purchased or branded, as the case may be, shall have jurisdiction of the violation of the act or omission complained of or constituting an offense under this chapter. [Id., § 6.]

Article 1303. [838] "Burglary" defined.—The offense of burglary is constituted by entering a house by force, threats or fraud, at night; or in like manner by entering a house at any time, either day or night, and remaining concealed therein, with the intent in either case of committing a felony or the crime of theft. [Act Aug. 21, 1876, p. 231; amended, Act 1897, p. 65.]

See notes under article 1304, post.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 624-628, 630.

Art. 1304. [839] Same subject.—He is also guilty of burglary who, with intent to commit a felony or theft by breaking, enters a house in the daytime.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—There are three modes by which a burglary may be committed: 1. By force. 2. By threats. 3. By fraud. There are three separate and distinct kinds of burglary contained in the statutory definition: 1. An entry made at night with the intent to commit felony or theft. 2. An entry in the daytime and remaining concealed in the house until night, with like intent. 3. An entry in the daytime with like intent. Conoly v. State, 2 App. 412; Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 506. The entry need not be by all three. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 506.

On a trial for burglary with intent to commit theft, where defendant claimed that he was employed by a third party to assist him in taking and carrying away the goods from the house alleged to have been burglarized, held, that if, at the time of his employment, or during the interval elapsing before the store was entered, he either knew or had reasonable grounds to believe that the transaction in which he was engaged was dishonest, he would be guilty; or if, originally honest, he was put upon notice that the entry was fraudulent, his good faith at the inception of the enterprise would afford him no protection. Connors v. State, 31 App. 453, 20 S. W. 981.

Where defendant broke into a room under the exclusive control of another, the fact that he was an inmate of the house did not prevent the breaking from constituting burglary. Hofland v. State, 47 App. 623, 85 S. W. 798.

A railway porter, authorized or required to be in and around a passenger depot, did not commit burglary in breaking open a drawer in a public telephone booth located in the waiting room and stealing money therefrom. Love v. State, 52 App. 84, 105 S. W. 791.

In a prosecution for forcibly breaking and entering another's house in the night and taking property therefrom, it is sufficient that the person alleged to own the house had possession, charge, and control thereof and jointly owned it with another; it not being essential that he have the exclusive possession and control of the house. Clark v. State, 58 App. 181, 125 S. W. 12.

Nighttime "burglary" is properly defined as entering a house by force at nighttime with the intent of committing the crime of theft. Griffith v. State, 62 App. 642, 138 S. W. 1016.

One who forcibly enters a house and commits the crime of theft does not have to remain there until night to have his act constitute the offense of burglary. Overstreet v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 899.

A defendant is guilty of burglary and larceny of oats from a barn, even though he bought the oats from the owner's brother, who broke open the barn for him, if he knew at the time of the transaction that the brother had no authority to sell the oats. Wilson v. State, 71 App. 330, 158 S. W. 1114.

2. Felony.—Defendants, at night, burglarized, or attempted to burglarize, a store. They were armed to resist arrest. When detected by decedent and a third person they were asked to halt but made no inquiry of the object, and when called to halt a second time they shot and killed decedent. Neither of defendants knew, or could have known, that decedent and the third person did not have a warrant for their arrest. Held, that under articles 1303, and 1320, making a felony to commit the offense of burglary or to attempt to commit burglary, and C. C. P. 1911, art. 259, authorizing a peace officer or any other person to arrest without warrant when a felony is committed within his view, the issue of murder was raised. Stewart v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1077.

3. Intent.—It is not material whether the intent with which the house was entered was actually carried into effect; or only demonstrated by the attempt, or by some overt act, to be decided by the jury from the facts in evidence. Wilburn v. State, 41 Tex. 237.

The intent with which the entrance was made is the essential element of burglary. The intent must be to commit a felony or theft. Collins v. State, 20 App. 197; State v. Robertson, 32 Tex. 159; Allen v. State, 18 App. 120. And such intent must exist at the very time the house is entered. Harris v. State, 20 App. 652. And in case of burglary with intent to commit theft, such intent must be to permanently appropriate the property intended to be stolen. Wilson v. State, 18 App. 270, 51 Am. Rep. 309; Schultz v. State, 30 App. 94, 16 S. W. 756. But it is not material whether the intent is actually carried into effect. Wilburn v. State, 41 Tex. 237.

Breaking into an empty house and taking therefrom doors and window sash which were attached to the house at the time of the entry was burglary, as the act of severance converted such articles into chattels and the taking was theft. Alvia v. State, 42 App. 424, 60 S. W. 551.

In prosecution for burglary with intent to commit rape the state must prove the specific intent of defendant to have carnal intercourse with the female by the use of the force necessary to accomplish that purpose. Mitchell alias Smith v. State, 33 App. 575, 28 S. W. 475.

Article 1307 is but an addition to articles 1303 and 1304, and under the three articles, burglary may consist of entering a house by force, etc., or in entering a house and remaining therein with the intent to commit a felony, or by the discharge of firearms into a house with the intent to injure the person therein, and the intention need not be to commit a felony. Railey v. State, 58 App. 1, 121 S. W. 1120, 125 S. W. 576.

To constitute burglary, an entry by force must be made with intent to commit theft. Hollis v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 853.

If the wrecking of saloons was for the purpose of stealing goods from them, all present and engaging in it would be guilty of burglary, but if the breaking was actuated only by a mob and riot spirit, with no intent to appropriate the property, there was no burglary. Jobe v. State, 72 App. 163, 161 S. W. 966.

The breaking of a show window of a store and the taking of shoes therefrom clearly showed that the breaking was for the purpose of committing the crime of theft. Lewis v. State, 72 App. 377, 162 S. W. 866.

4. What constitutes "house."—See article 1303 and notes.

5. Breaking and entry.—See as to what constitutes, articles 1306-1308, 1310, post, and notes thereunder.

When burglary is committed in the nighttime it is not necessary that there should be an actual breaking. Alexander v. State, 31 App. 359, 20 S. W. 756.

Breaking out of a store by one who entered and concealed himself during business hours without breaking, was not burglary. Edwards v. State, 36 App. 387, 37 S. W. 438.

An entry at night into a store during business hours with intent to conceal one's self held not a burglarious entry. Edwards v. State, 36 App. 387, 37 S. W. 438.

Construing 1303 and articles 1307 and 1308 together, where the evidence showed that the defendant inserted his hand through a glass already broken it was not burglary unless he intended to commit a felony. Jones v. State, 48 App. 336, 87 S. W. 1157.

An entry whether by night or day to constitute burglary must be by breaking and if in the day by breaking externally it must be an actual breaking. Bates v. State, 50 App. 568, 99 S. W. 551; Newman v. State, 55 App. 273, 116 S. W. 577.

An indictment charging accused with burglary followed the language of the statute, and the evidence showed that accused was in the house just before it was closed, and was later found moving around therein by the night watchman and arrested, and accused testified that he went into the house during the day looking for employment, and fell asleep, and found himself locked up when he awoke. Held that, to constitute burglary under the statute, accused must have entered the house in the daytime or night by force, threats, or fraud, and remained concealed with intent to commit a felony or theft therein, and the facts shown do not constitute burglary; not showing that accused entered by force, threats, or fraud. Malley v. State, 58 App. 425, 126 S. W. 598.

The term "breaking" required by article 1304, to constitute burglary, refers to breaking in the daytime, so that the removal of money from a house in the daytime through a window found open is not burglary. Winkler v. State, 58 App. 564, 126 S. W. 1134.

The essential ingredient of burglary is the felonious entry, and the intent may be to commit any felony or the crime of theft. Polk v. State, 60 App. 462, 132 S. W. 134.

Under the statute defining burglary at night, an actual breaking is not required, and it only requires, that an entry shall be made by force, such as opening a door that is shut, whether latched or not. Jones v. State, 60 App. 426, 132 S. W. 476.

While the possession of goods taken from a burglarized house is sufficient to justify a conviction for burglary where accused offers no explanation, proof of an actual breaking is essential. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 156 S. W. 938.

6. Nonconsent.—The entry of a room or house with the free consent of the proprietor or occupant is not burglarious. Turner v. State, 24 App. 12, 5 S. W. 511.

It is not necessary to show non-consent of one who owned an interest in the property but who was not in possession. Hurley v. State, 35 App. 282, 33 S. W. 354.

Where the owner of a house was connected with the original design to break the house, and left the key thereof at a designated point for the purpose of enabling his confederates to induce accused to enter the house, this would authorize an acquittal in a prosecution for burglary on the ground that the owner had consented. Bird v. State, 49 App. 96, 90 S. W. 651, 122 Am. St. Rep. 803.

7. Principals and accomplices.—See notes under articles 74 and 79, ante.

8. Burglary of private residence distinguished.—One cannot now be prosecuted under article 1303 for burglarizing a private residence as article 1305 has been added to the statutes making this a separate and distinct offense from burglary as defined in articles 1303 and 1304. Harvey v. State (Cr. App.) 61 S. W. 492.

A conviction cannot be had under article 1305, relating to burglary of a private dwelling, where the burglarized house is not alleged to be a private dwelling; that article and article 1312, relating to burglary in private residences, covering a distinct offense from that defined by article 1303 and article 1304—article 1312 providing that nothing in articles 1305 or 1312 shall repeal articles 1303 and 1304. Malley v. State, 58 App. 425, 126 S. W. 598.

The offenses described in this and article 1305 are distinct offenses, and a conviction cannot be had under article 1303, if the house burglarized was a private residence. Alinis v. State, 63 App. 272, 139 S. W. 980.

A building burglarized consisted of a storehouse in which a restaurant was conducted. The storehouse was divided into three rooms. The first was used as a dining room, the middle room for cooking, and the rear room was occupied by prosecutor and his wife as a bedroom. The room entered, and from which the property was stolen, was the cookroom. Held, that the premises did not constitute a "private residence," and that accused was properly prosecuted under article 1304, and not under article 1305, providing that the entry of a private residence, either in the day or night, shall constitute burglary. Alinis v. State, 63 App. 371, 140 S. W. 227.

9. Burglary and theft in same transaction.—See articles 1317 and 1318, post, and notes.

Where a party is charged in separate indictments for burglary and theft committed after the burglarious entry, he may be convicted of both offenses. Loakman v. State, 32 App. 563, 25 S. W. 22; Rust v. State, 31 App. 75, 19 S. W. 762; Shepherd v. State, 42 Tex. 501; Robertson v. State, 6 App. 669; Struckman v. State, 7 App. 581; Howard v. State, 8 App. 447; Smith v. State, 22 App. 350, 3 S. W. 238, holding a different doctrine, are overruled.

See, also, Miller v. State, 16 App. 417; Turner v. State, 22 App. 42, 2 S. W. 619; Williams v. State, 24 App. 69, 5 S. W. 838.

10. Indictment in general.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 630.

See, also, notes under articles 1305 and 1307, post.

Application of verdict to count supported by evidence, see C. C. P., 770 and notes.

See Gonzales v. State, 12 App. 657; Alexander v. State, 31 App. 359, 20 S. W. 756; Jester v. State, 26 App. 369, 9 S. W. 616.

The "intent" with which the act was committed must be expressly averred. Reeves v. State, 7 App. 276; Black v. State, 18 App. 124. And the particular offense intended to be committed must be described in the indictment, with all its statutory ingredients. A general charge that the entry was with intent to commit a felony, although the felony be named, will not be sufficient. And so it is insufficient to allege that the intent was to commit theft. The statutory elements of the offense intended to be committed must be set forth with the same completeness and particularity as would be requisite in an indictment for such intended offense. Portwood v. State, 29 Tex., 47, 94 Am. Dec. 258; State v. Williams, 41 Tex. 98; Wilburn v. State, Id. 237; White v. State, 1 App. 211; Conoly v. State, 2 App. 412; Webster v. State, 9 App. 75; Rodriguez v. State, 12 App. 552; Reed v. State, 14 App. 662; Treadwell v. State, 16 App. 643; Taylor v. State, 23 App. 639, 5 S. W. 141; Williams v. State, 24 App. 69, 5 S. W. 838; Coleman v. State, 26 App. 252, 9 S. W. 609; Brown v. State, 7 App. 619; Allen v. State, 18 App. 120. But where the indictment is for burglary with intent to commit theft it is not necessary to describe the property intended to be stolen, or to specify it. Black v. State, 18 App. 124; Washington v. State, 17 App. 197; Summers v. State, 9 App. 396; Neiderluck v. State, 23 App. 38, 3 S. W. 573; Martin v. State, 1 App. 525; Coleman v. State, 2 App. 512. Nor in such case need the value of the property intended to be stolen be alleged. Green v. State, 21 App. 64, 17 S. W. 262; Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462; Collins v. State, 20 App. 197. In such case also an allegation that the property intended to be stolen was "then and there being found" sufficiently charges that said property was in the house entered. Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462. It must be alleged that the property was taken or intended to be taken from the possession of the owner thereof, or from the possession of some one holding the same for him. Reed v. State, 14 App. 662; O'Brien v. State, 27 App. 448, 11 S. W. 459. And "without the consent of the owner." Treadwell v. State, 16 App. 643. And when there are two or more owners, the want of consent of each must be alleged. Taylor v. State, 23 App. 639, 5 S. W. 141. But see Willis v. State, 33 App. 168, 25 S. W. 1119; Hurley v. State, 35 App. 282, 33 S. W. 354. The indictment may properly charge conjunctively that the offense was committed by all three of the means named in the statute, viz., force, threats, and fraud, or it may allege only one of said means, but the evidence and charge of the court must be confined to the means alleged. Buntain v. State, 15 App. 485; Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462; Weeks v. State, Id. 466; Lott v. State, 17 App. 598; Summers v. State, 9 App. 396; Shepherd v. State, 42 Tex. 501; Hobbs v. State, 44 Tex. 353. But some one or more of the means named must be alleged. Hamilton v. State, 11 App. 116; Brown v. State, 7 App. 619. Where a burglary with intent to commit rape was charged, and the allegation was "to commit the crime of rape upon the person of her the said Rachel P.," etc., it was held there need be no allegation that Rachel was a woman. State v. Williams, 41 Tex. 98. Nor is it necessary in such case to allege that the female intended to be raped was in the house. Burke v. State, 5 App. 74. It need not be alleged that the offense was committed "feloniously" or "burglariously." Reed v. State, 14 App. 662; Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 491. Where an indictment charged the entry to have been effected by "breaking," it was held not bad for not charging that it was effected in the nighttime, or by entering in the daytime and remaining concealed, etc. Such an indictment is good for a daylight breaking, but to sustain a conviction in such case the evidence must prove an actual breaking.

Summers v. State, 9 App. 396. An indictment which charges an entry by force, but does not aver that the entry was at night, or that it was made in the daytime by the defendant who remained concealed in the house until night, charges a daylight burglary. Bravo v. State, 20 App. 188. But where the indictment charges that the defendant did "break and enter" the house, a conviction may be had thereunder, whether the offense was committed in the daytime or in the nighttime, if the proof shows that the breaking and entry were effected by force applied to the house; but proof that force was used, but not upon the building, would not support a conviction under such an indictment. Carr v. State, 19 App. 635, 53 Am. Rep. 395; Martin v. State, 21 App. 1, 17 S. W. 430; Newman v. State, 55 App. 273, 116 S. W. 577; Walker v. State, 55 App. 546, 117 S. W. 797. An indictment which described the house entered, as "a certain house then and there occupied and controlled by" a named person, was held to sufficiently designate the house. Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462. For indictments held good, see Mace v. State, 9 App. 110. Summers v. State, Id. 396; Lawson v. State, 13 App. 264; Ross v. State, 16 App. 554.

It is not essential to allege that the entry was without consent of the owner or occupant of the house or of one authorized to give such consent. State v. Williams, 41 Tex. 98; Summers v. State, 9 App. 396; Taylor v. State, 23 App. 639, 5 S. W. 141; Smith v. State, 22 App. 350, 3 S. W. 238; Black v. State, 18 App. 124; Langford v. State, 17 App. 445; Buntain v. State, 15 App. 485; Reed v. State, 14 App. 662; Mace v. State, 9 App. 110; Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462, overruling on this point Brown v. State, 7 App. 619.

Both burglary and theft may be charged in the same indictment and in the same count, but in such case a conviction cannot be had for both offenses. Black v. State, 18 App. 124; Hobbs v. State, 44 Tex. 353; Turner v. State, 22 App. 42, 2 S. W. 619; Miller v. State, 16 App. 417; Dunham v. State, 9 App. 330; Howard v. State, 8 App. 447; Shepherd v. State, 42 Tex. 501.

And in such case the indictment may be bad for the burglary and good for the theft, and conviction had for the latter offense. Dunham v. State, 9 App. 330; Jester v. State, 26 App. 369, 9 S. W. 616.

An indictment for burglary in the nighttime with intent to commit theft, alleging entry by force, was sufficient, without alleging an entry by means of breaking. Bradford v. State, 62 App. 424, 138 S. W. 118; Garner v. State, 31 App. 22, 19 S. W. 333.

The felonious intent ought to be alleged according to the facts of each case. State v. Robertson, 32 Tex. 159.

Indictment for burglary held insufficient in that it did not specifically charge an intent to commit theft or a felony. West v. State, 35 Tex. 89.

To charge burglary at night it is sufficient to charge that the entrance was by breaking without charging that it was by force, fraud or threats. Breaking necessarily includes force and an entrance could not be made by breaking without force, though it might be made by force without breaking. Mathews v. State, 36 Tex. 675.

Indictment held to set forth sufficiently the act alleged as well as the intent with which it was alleged to have been committed with all the particularity the law required. Johnson v. State, 1 App. 146.

The better practice is to allege the time of the burglary, that is whether it was committed in the day time or in the night time. Conoly v. State, 2 App. 412.

Where an indictment for burglary also charges theft of specific articles after the entry, it is not necessary to set forth the essential terms of theft in charging the intent. Williams v. State, 24 App. 69, 5 S. W. 838; Bigham v. State, 31 App. 244, 20 S. W. 577; Coates v. State, 31 App. 257, 20 S. W. 585. It need not be alleged in terms that a "house" was burglarized. Bigham v. State, 31 App. 244, 20 S. W. 577.

The indictment charged conjointly burglary with intent to commit theft without alleging the elements of intended theft and that theft was committed. There being evidence of actual theft, the indictment was held sufficient to support a conviction. Williams v. State, 24 App. 69, 5 S. W. 838.

A conviction for burglary cannot be sustained on an indictment alleging that defendant "then and there, by force, break and enter a house," omitting the essential word "did." Jester v. State, 26 App. 369, 9 S. W. 616.

Indictment is sufficient to charge the burglary of a railway car if it alleges that the said car was occupied and controlled by a certain named person, and that the burglarious entry was made with the fraudulent intent to take, etc., otherwise alleging all the elements of theft. The ownership of the car need not be alleged. Evidence that other cars of the same general description were burglarized would not vitiate the indictment for uncertainty, but might require the state to elect the one upon which a conviction would be sought. See the opinion for the charging part of an indictment held sufficient to charge the burglary of a railway car. Hamilton v. State, 26 App. 206, 9 S. W. 687.

Indictment must allege that the entry was made with the intent to commit felony or the crime of theft. Hammons v. State, 29 App. 445, 16 S. W. 99.

Indictment held sufficient to charge burglary with intent to murder. Stinnett v. State, 32 App. 526, 24 S. W. 908.

Indictment is sufficient if it alleges that the entry was burglarious and without the consent of the occupant. Puyland v. State, 33 App. 382, 26 S. W. 621.

An indictment for burglary instead of using the phrase "then and there" to fraudulently take, etc., charged the breaking, and coupled it with the charge of intent to steal by the conjunction "and"; held, sufficient. Smith v. State, 36 App. 442, 37 S. W. 743.

An indictment charging the taking of property belonging to two owners without "their" consent, was insufficient, since "their" refers to the owners collectively, and the consent of each must be negatived. Young v. State, 42 App. 301, 59 S. W. 890.

It is not necessary under an indictment for the burglary of a house other than a private residence, at night, to allege that such house was not a private residence. Gilford v. State, 48 App. 312, 87 S. W. 699.

A burglary committed in the day time is not within the purview of article 1305, and the indictment need not allege that the house is a private residence. Reyes v. State, 51 App. 420, 102 S. W. 422.

The use of the words "a private residence" in an indictment drawn under article 1304 does not render it vicious. The words may be considered descriptive, and if so must be proved as alleged. Martinez v. State, 51 App. 584, 103 S. W. 931.

An indictment charging that defendant by force, threats and fraud burglariously and fraudulently broke and entered a house was sufficient to charge either a day time or a night time burglary. Montgomery v. State, 55 App. 502, 116 S. W. 1160; Walker v. State, 55 App. 546, 117 S. W. 797.

Where burglary is committed by force, the indictment need not allege whether it was committed in the day or the night time. Vargas v. State, 60 App. 196, 131 S. W. 594.

An indictment for burglary with intent to steal need not allege some value of the property intended to be stolen. Gilder v. State, 61 App. 16, 133 S. W. 883.

The averment, in an indictment for burglary with intent to steal, of the want of consent of prosecutor, is necessary, and the facts must show a want of consent. Moray v. State, 61 App. 549, 135 S. W. 569.

An indictment for burglary, alleging that the defendant broke and entered a house with fraudulent intent to take from said house corporeal property therein being and belonging to a designated owner, and to appropriate the same to her own use, is insufficient, as it contains no allegation that the stolen goods were taken without the consent of the owner. Fox v. State, 61 App. 544, 135 S. W. 570.

In a prosecution for burglary with intent to commit theft, it is not necessary that the indictment allege the value of the property, and that the court's charge require the jury to find that the property had specific value. Bradford v. State, 62 App. 424, 138 S. W. 118.

An indictment for burglary, alleging that the offense was committed on April 19, "One Thousand Nine Hundred and ———," and anterior to the presentment of the indictment, which was filed August 30, 1910, showed on its face that the offense was barred by limitations prior to the return of the indictment, and was therefore insufficient. Bradford v. State, 62 App. 424, 138 S. W. 119.

An allegation of the date of burglary at night charged in an indictment is material only on the question of limitation, provided the offense is charged to have been committed before the return of the indictment. Hogan v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 184.

An indictment alleging the breaking and entering of a house by force, threats, and fraud need not allege whether the offense was committed in the daytime or nighttime, since such an indictment is sufficient to cover either a daytime or nighttime burglary. Stephens v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1001.

An indictment for breaking and entering a house need not allege what property was stolen, its value, nor the character of the house, unless it was intended to charge specifically that it was a private residence. Stephens v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1001.

Where a burglarious entry is alleged to have been by force and breaking, the want of the owner's consent to the entry need not be specifically alleged. Dennis v. State, 71 App. 162, 158 S. W. 1008.

Where burglary is charged to have been committed with the intent to commit some specific crime, the indictment, in addition to alleging the burglary, must also allege each element of the crime intended to be committed. Robinson v. State, 71 App. 561, 160 S. W. 456.

It is not fatal to an indictment for burglary that it is alleged defendant broke and entered the car with intent to take "corporeal property," omitting "personal"; it being in the same count alleged he took from it corporeal personal property, with intent to appropriate it to his own use and deprive the owner of its value. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 506.

An indictment, simply charging burglary, without stating whether committed by day or night, is sufficient for daytime burglary. Howard v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 506.

11. — Allegations as to ownership and occupancy.—Where the property stolen or the burglarized premises belonged to two persons, it is sufficient to allege ownership in one of them. Coates v. State, 31 App. 257, 20 S. W. 585; Skaggs v. State, 56 App. 79, 119 S. W. 106; Cogshall v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 1011.

Where an indictment for burglarizing a fruit stand charged it to be occupied by a person managing the business in the absence of the owner, it was immaterial so far as the indictment was concerned that the owner's mother and sister assisted in making sales and carrying on the business. Willis v. State, 33 App. 168, 25 S. W. 1119.

Where indictment alleged ownership and possession of house to be in C., and evidence showed that C. was sheriff and held goods in such house under writ of attachment, held, he was special owner of the house, the indictment was sufficient and was supported by the evidence. Linhart v. State, 33 App. 504, 27 S. W. 260. Allegation as to ownership of car, see Pyland v. State, 33 App. 382, 26 S. W. 621.

The house burglarized was the house of one D., who kept chickens therein; J. looked after the chickens for D., and J.'s wife was to have a part of the increase; held, the indictment alleging ownership in D. was sufficient. Daggett v. State, 39 App. 5, 44 S. W. 148, 842.

Where I. rented a house containing two rooms and rented one of the rooms to S., ownership of such room was properly alleged in I. Reed v. State, 34 App. 597, 31 S. W. 404.

An indictment describing the house as "occupied S.," instead of occupied by S. was held bad in Scroggins v. State, 36 App. 117, 35 S. W. 968.

Indictment alleging only special ownership in person from whom goods were taken; held, sufficient. Humphrey v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 489.

Possession was properly alleged to be in the person having the exclusive possession, care and control of the burglarized structure where he slept and lived, though he did not own the land upon which it was erected. Favro v. State, 39 App. 452, 46 S. W. 932, 73 Am. St. Rep. 950.

Where the property belongs to a corporation, ownership may be alleged to be in person having actual charge, control and possession. McAnally v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 832.

Ownership of a room in a school dormitory and of the goods therein in the personal possession and charge of the occupant, should be alleged in her. Mays v. State, 50 App. 391, 97 S. W. 703.

Under C. C. P. art. 469, an indictment for burglary of a house belonging to a husband with intent to commit larceny therein, may allege that personal property belonging to the wife and which was stolen was in the possession of the husband, and that it was taken without his consent. Smith v. State, 53 App. 643, 111 S. W. 939.

12. — Joinder of counts and election.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 481.

Jurisdiction of district court after dismissal of count for burglary joined with count for misdemeanor, see C. C. P. art. 89 and notes.

13. — Proof and variance.—The means used in effecting the entrance must be proved as charged in the indictment. Thus, if force alone be charged, the evidence must be confined to, and must show an entrance by that means. Summers v. State, 9 App. 396; Hamilton v. State, 11 App. 116; Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462; Weeks v. State, Id. 466; Buntain v. State, 15 App. 485; Lott v. State, 17 App. 598. Where the indictment charged a burglary by "breaking and entering," but did not charge that the means used was either force, threats, or fraud, and did not charge whether the offense was committed in the daytime or in the nighttime, it was held that such indictment was sufficient to support a conviction for burglary by day or night, if the proof showed that the means used was force applied to the building; but if the burglary was in the daytime, no other force, except such as was applied to the building, would support a conviction. Carr v. State, 19 App. 635, 53 Am. Rep. 395; Martin v. State, 21 App. 1, 17 S. W. 430. Where the burglary charged is with intent to commit theft, the value of the property intended to be stolen need not be proved. Green v. State, 21 App. 64, 17 S. W. 262; Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462; Collins v. State, 20 App. 197.

The intent with which the house was entered must be proved as alleged in the indictment. Hamilton v. State, 11 App. 116; State v. Robertson, 32 Tex. 159.

Where an indictment for burglary with intent to commit theft unnecessarily designates the particular property defendant intended to steal, a conviction may be had, although the evidence shows that defendant knew nothing about such articles, if it clearly appears that he entered the house with the intent to commit theft. But where the indictment charges the theft of specific articles, the proof must correspond with the allegation or there will be a fatal variance. Black v. State, 18 App. 124.

Where W. had the exclusive care, control and management of the burglarized house, it was proper to allege the ownership in him, though the evidence showed that it belonged to another. Alvia v. State, 42 App. 424, 60 S. W. 551.

The court is inclined to the opinion that an allegation that a house burglarized in the daytime was a private residence was descriptive of the house and must be proved. Martinez v. State, 51 App. 584, 103 S. W. 930.

By force, threats, and fraud, although it fails to charge that the offense was committed by day or by night, will support a conviction if the proof shows that the entry was effected by actual force in the nighttime applied to the building. The occupancy of the owner's agent or clerk during the temporary absence of the owner is the occupation of the owner. Buchanan v. State, 24 App. 195, 5 S. W. 847.

To constitute a nocturnal burglary, under the statutes of this state, the house must have been entered by force, threats, or fraud. The indictment in this case charges that the defendant "did by force, in the nighttime, break and enter the house," etc. Held, that to authorize a conviction under this indictment, it devolved upon the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused entered the house by applying actual "force" to the building. In failing to so charge the jury, and in refusing to give a special instruction in substantial compliance with the rule announced, the trial court erred. There was not only a total absence of evidence on this trial tending to show an entry by breaking or by force, as alleged in the indictment, but the proof was positive that the entry was made through an open door. Held insufficient to support the conviction for burglary. Melton v. State, 24 App. 287, 6 S. W. 303.

Indictment for burglary charged that the house was entered by force at night. To warrant a conviction, it devolved upon the state to establish by affirmative proof the entry as alleged. Jones v. State, 25 App. 226, 7 S. W. 669.

Indictment charging a nocturnal burglary will authorize a conviction only upon proof that the burglary was committed in the nighttime. Instruction that the jury could convict upon proof that the accused committed the burglary either in the nighttime or daytime was material error. Guynes v. State, 25 App. 584, 8 S. W. 667. See, also, Turner v. State, 24 App. 12, 5 S. W. 511; Jones v. State, 25 App. 226, 7 S. W. 669; Coleman v. State, 26 App. 252, 9 S. W. 609; Painter v. State, 26 App. 454, 9 S. W. 774.

Indictment alleged the ownership of the house to be in E. W. Bullard. The ownership of the house was proved as alleged, and it was further proved that the said E. W. Bullard permitted his son to store corn in the said house. Held, that such proof does not amount to a variance between the allegation and the proof. Painter v. State, 26 App. 454, 9 S. W. 774.

The indictment described the money taken with unnecessary minuteness, but this having been done, it devolved upon the state to adduce proof in support of the allegation. Coffelt v. State, 27 App. 608, 11 S. W. 639, 11 Am. St. Rep. 205.

The indictment charged that the defendant took the money. The proof shows that, being put in fear of his life by the demonstrations and threats of the defendant and another, the injured party, when ordered to do so, delivered the money. Held, that such a delivery is a taking under our law. Coffelt v. State, 27 App. 608, 11 S. W. 639, 11 Am. St. Rep. 205.

Where indictment charges burglary with intent to commit rape, the specific intent must be proved. Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646; Allen v. State, 18 App. 120; Mitchell v. State, 33 App. 575, 23 S. W. 475; Mitchell v. State, 32 App. 479, 24 S. W. 280.

Where indictment charges in one count burglary at night and in another in the daytime, and the evidence shows breaking, the hour of entry is immaterial. Smith v. State, 34 App. 124, 29 S. W. 775.

When the person named as the owner of the stolen goods had exclusive control of them it is immaterial whether he was general or special owner. Smith v. State, 34 App. 124, 29 S. W. 775.

When ownership was alleged in a special owner it was held competent to permit the State to prove the want of consent of the general owner. Lega v. State, 36 App. 33, 34 S. W. 926, 35 S. W. 381.

Where indictment charges burglary with intent to commit theft, and evidence shows that he took nothing, but that he went into a room where a woman was sleeping, pulled up her gown and put his hand on her privates, the intent with which he entered the house was rape. Ford v. State (Cr. App.) 54 S. W. 763.

An indictment for burglary of community property must allege the ownership to be in the husband, and where it alleges it to be in the wife there is a variance. Jones v. State, 47 App. 126, 30 S. W. 530, 122 Am. St. Rep. 650.

Evidence that the house burglarized was a private dwelling where a family resided, constituted a variance from an indictment charging merely the night time burglary of a house. Martinus v. State, 47 App. 528, 84 S. W. 831, 122 Am. St. Rep. 709.

Where an indictment for burglary charges the entry without consent of the occupant of a house, occupancy is equivalent to possession, and embraced a chicken house on the premises of the prosecutor. Moore v. State, 48 App. 400, 88 S. W. 230.

Evidence that the proprietor of the house burglarized was merely a tenant was not a variance from an indictment alleging ownership and occupancy in him. Johnson v. State, 48 App. 339, 88 S. W. 813.

Where it appeared that the burglar entered the owner's room for the purpose of committing theft, evidence of the taking of a lodger's watch from the room of the latter was not a variance from an indictment alleging that the house was in the possession of and under the control of the owner, and that the burglar entered the same with the intent to steal personal property belonging to the owner. Johnson v. State, 48 App. 339, 88 S. W. 813.

A variance as to the initials of the alleged owner and occupant of the burglarized house held fatal. Williams v. State, 49 App. 105, 90 S. W. 876.

Where the indictment charged that the house was occupied by W, and that the entry was with intent to steal his property while the evidence showed that the house was occupied by W, and L, and that the entry was with intent to steal property in the possession of L, there was a variance. Roberson v. State, 51 App. 335, 101 S. W. 800.

Where the indictment merely alleges a burglary as denounced by articles 1303 and 1304, and the evidence shows a burglary of a private residence as denounced by article 1305, the variance is fatal to a conviction. Sedgwick v. State, 57 App. 420, 123 S. W. 702.

Under article 1333, providing that it is not necessary, to constitute "theft," that possession and ownership of the property be in the same person, and that one has possession who exercises actual care, control, and management of the property, whether lawfully or not, an allegation, in an indictment for breaking and entering a house with intent to take personalty, that such property belonged to a certain person, was supported by proof that he had the exclusive care, control, and management of the property. Clark v. State, 58 App. 181, 125 S. W. 12.

An indictment charging accused with burglary followed the language of the statute, and the evidence showed that accused was in the house just before it was closed, and was later found moving around therein by the night watchman and arrested, and accused testified that he went into the house during the day looking for employment, and fell asleep, and found himself locked up when he awoke. Held that, to constitute burglary under the statute, accused must have entered the house in the daytime or night by force, threats, or fraud, and remained concealed with intent to commit a felony or theft therein, and the facts shown do not constitute burglary; not showing that accused entered by force, threats, or fraud. Malley v. State, 58 App. 425, 126 S. W. 598.

An indictment for burglary in the ordinary form, under this article, is not sustained by proof of burglary of a private residence, since such burglary is expressly made a distinct offense, and indictment therefor should be under article 1305. Rodgers v. State, 59 App. 146, 127 S. W. 834.

Where an indictment charged defendant with burglarizing a house occupied by six persons, naming them, and the evidence showed occupancy by only five of them, there was a fatal variance. Grantham v. State, 59 App. 556, 129 S. W. 839.

There is no fatal variance between an indictment for burglary alleging that accused entered the house of prosecutor with intent to steal personal property belonging to him and the evidence that accused stole property belonging to a member of the family of prosecutor. Polk v. State, 60 App. 462, 132 S. W. 134.

An averment in an indictment for burglary with intent to steal that accused entered the house of prosecutor with intent to take his goods must be proved, and where there is a total absence of proof that the goods taken were taken without prosecutor's consent the conviction must be set aside. Moray v. State, 61 App. 547, 135 S. W. 569.

An indictment alleging specifically that a burglary occurred on the 12th day of February is supported by evidence showing that it was committed within the limitation and prior to the presentment of the indictment. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 183.

Under an indictment for burglary of a store alleged to belong to the prosecuting witness, proof that it was the store of the witness and his son was not error, where the witness testified that he was in charge of it. Whorton v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 300.

Where the indictment alleged that the burglarized storehouse was owned and occupied by M. and contained property owned by him, proof that M. and another had possession and control of the burglarized house and property therein did not constitute a variance. Powers v. State, 72 App. 290, 162 S. W. 832.

Though the indictment did not specifically allege that a suit of clothes and a target gun were stolen from a house by accused, who was charged with burglary, a witness may testify that such property was taken. Prata v. State (Cr. App.) 172 S. W. 974.

14. Presumptions and burden of proof.—Where two or more persons may be owners of property, the state may allege ownership in either and is only required to prove the want of consent of the alleged owner. If the others had given consent, this is a matter accused may prove. Skaggs v. State, 56 App. 79, 119 S. W. 106.

It is not essential that the state should prove the nonconsent of the owner, etc. Buchanan v. State, 24 App. 195, 5 S. W. 847.

There should be some evidence of guilty conduct besides the bare possession of the stolen property before the presumption of burglary will be superadded to that of the larceny. Jackson v. State, 28 App. 370, 13 S. W. 451, 19 Am. St. Rep. 839.

When it is certain that the parties entering the house did so for the purpose of theft and that they did steal property in the house it is not necessary to prove that they were afterward seen in possession of the property. Goldsmith v. State, 32 App. 112, 22 S. W. 405. The mere knowledge of the owner that entry is being made is not proof of consent. Robinson v. State, 34 App. 71, 29 S. W. 40, 53 Am. St. Rep. 701.

In a burglary case, where the burglarious entry was alleged to have been made with intent to commit the crime of theft, the want of consent of the owner of the property must be alleged and proved, and it may be shown by circumstances which would absolutely exclude every reasonable presumption that the owner gave his consent. Brown v. State, 58 App. 336, 125 S. W. 915.

In a burglary case, where accused gives an explanation of his recent possession of the stolen goods, the burden is upon the state to disprove such account to the satisfaction of the jury, and, if such explanation put in evidence is shown to be false, a conviction can be had. Hawthorn v. State, 62 App. 114, 136 S. W. 776.

Where it is shown that accused broke and entered a house, it may ordinarily be presumed that he did so with intent to commit theft, though at the time he was detected he had not appropriated any property. Vickery v. State, 62 App. 311, 137 S. W. 687, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 514.

In a trial for breaking into W.'s house with intent to commit rape upon R., the state was not bound to show that the entry was made without W.'s wife's consent, though it appeared that W. was absent at the time. Alsop v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 624.

See, also, on question of intent and presumption, Alexander v. State, 31 App. 359, 20 S. W. 756. Also, see Carr v. State, 24 App. 562, 7 S. W. 328, 5 Am. St. Rep. 905.

15. Admissibility of evidence—In general.—See notes under article 1307, post.

Recent unexplained possession of property burglariously taken is admissible against the defendant, to be considered by the jury with other facts and circumstances in evidence. Prince v. State, 44 Tex. 480; Payne v. State, 21 App. 184, 17 S. W. 463. Also his explanation of such possession is admissible in his behalf. Bond v. State, 23 App. 180, 4 S. W. 580.

Where the case was one of circumstantial evidence, evidence of the finding in defendant's possession of goods from the burglarized store and keys fitting one of the doors of the burglarized house was admissible. Lynne v. State, 53 App. 386, 111 S. W. 151.

Proof that some of the stolen property was found in the house of a third person cannot be considered against defendant, unless it is proved that the two acted together in the commission of the burglary, and that the third person had personal and exclusive possession, unexplained, and under a claim of ownership. Jackson v. State, 28 App. 143, 12 S. W. 701.

Where a conspiracy between K. and defendant was shown, evidence of the finding of some of the stolen property at K.'s house, shortly after the burglary, was admissible against defendant, though neither he nor K. was present. Jackson v. State, 23 App. 370, 13 S. W. 451, 19 Am. St. Rep. 839.

Evidence that the tracks trailed from the scene of the burglary correspond with those of defendant's horse is admissible. Goldsmith v. State, 32 App. 112, 22 S. W. 405.

On trial for robbery it was held competent for the State to prove by the sheriff that at the time of the commission of the offense he held an execution against defendant. Such evidence tended to show defendant's financial condition and hence to show his motive for committing the offense. Armstrong v. State, 34 App. 248, 30 S. W. 235.

The admission of evidence regarding the theft of property and specifying the articles taken from the house at the time the burglary was committed, held not error. Hays v. State, 36 App. 533, 38 S. W. 171.

Evidence that stolen goods were found under an outhouse on the lot of defendant's father shortly after the burglary was admissible. Lamater v. State, 42 S. W. 304, 38 App. 249.

Defendant charged with burglarious entry into a house with intent to commit the crime of theft. Before trial on the burglary case he pleaded guilty to the theft; held, such plea was admissible against him on the trial of the burglary case. Johnson v. State, 39 App. 625, 48 S. W. 70.

On trial for burglary evidence of a pistol taken from the burglarized house and found on a co-defendant is admissible. Terry v. State, 39 App. 628, 47 S. W. 654.

Evidence that one who was in jail when the burglary was committed and who subsequently escaped therefrom with defendant, was subsequently found in possession of property stolen from the burglarized house, was admissible against defendant. Riding v. State, 40 App. 452, 50 S. W. 698.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence that the goods alleged to have been stolen were found in defendant's sleeping room was admissible to show possession of the goods by defendant. Gass v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 73.

A chattel mortgage executed by defendant three years before the burglary was improperly admitted, it not being shown how it was or could be pertinent to the issue. Denton v. State, 42 App. 427, 60 S. W. 670.

Where one of the owners of property stolen, though a witness, fails to give direct and positive testimony of his want of consent to the taking, it will not be inferred from the other circumstances. Wisdom v. State, 42 App. 579, 61 S. W. 926.

On a trial of an indictment for burglary, alleging that it was committed with the intent to steal, without describing the property taken from the house burglarized, evidence that certain articles were stolen from the house at the time of the burglary is admissible on the question of intent. Moseley v. State, 43 App. 559, 67 S. W. 414.

The house having been entered by the unlocking of the door, evidence that defendant, who on the day after the burglary sold an article taken from the house, which he claimed to have bought from another, had in his pocket seven or eight keys, some of which were skeleton keys, is admissible as a circumstance. McCoy v. State, 48 App. 30, 85 S. W. 1072.

Testimony that a watch found in defendant's possession belonged to the occupant of a room in the burglarized house was admissible to identify defendant and connect him with the burglary and to show the intent with which the burglary was committed. Johnson v. State, 43 App. 339, 88 S. W. 813.

On a prosecution for burglary, the owner of the burglarized premises being a witness, his want of consent to the taking of the property stolen must be proved by him. Caddell v. State, 49 App. 133, 90 S. W. 1013, 122 Am. St. Rep. 806.

Evidence that witness, on the night prior to the burglary, went to the building, carefully examined the lock, and tried the door to see if the same was securely fastened, was properly admitted. Tally v. State, 49 App. 91, 90 S. W. 1113.

While the want of consent of the owner of property stolen may be proved in a prosecution for burglary by circumstantial evidence, such evidence cannot be resorted to, if positive or direct proof is available. Brown v. State, 58 App. 336, 125 S. W. 915.

In a prosecution for burglary, it may be shown that a witness, by direction of defendant or on information received from him, obtained money from certain persons with whom defendant had left it, and turned it over to the sheriff, who returned it to the prosecutor, though the particulars of what occurred between the witness and the persons from whom the money was so obtained are immaterial. Winkler v. State, 58 App. 564, 126 S. W. 1134.

A witness may state that he measured tracks on the ground, and may state the character of such tracks, and describe the peculiarity of shoes worn by accused. Boyman v. State, 59 App. 23, 126 S. W. 1142.

Where, on a trial for the burglary of a store, the evidence showed that a daughter of accused had been in business, and that many articles seized at her home where accused lived were merchandise which she had left over after quitting business, it was error to permit the state to prove by the sheriff that, when he went to her home to get the goods to carry them to the store, the daughter did not claim any of the goods, nor sue to recover them, because her action was not a circumstance against accused. Elkins v. State, 59 App. 157, 127 S. W. 833.

In a burglary case, evidence of a witness that she had a trunk in the burglarized house on the day the clothing alleged to have been stolen was taken from the house, that when she left in the morning the trunk was locked, and, when she returned in the evening, the lock had been broken off the trunk, was admissible as part of the res gestæ, and as a circumstance to show that somebody had been in the house. Kubacak v. State, 59 App. 165, 127 S. W. 836.

Evidence that the house was closed up, the windows down, and the doors closed, and that it was left in that condition in the morning of the alleged burglary, and when persons returned in the evening they found articles gone, and found where the trunk of one of the occupants had been broken open, was sufficient to show circumstantially that somebody had been in the house, and testimony thereafter offered of a witness that he did not give his consent for accused or any one else to break open the house and get the goods alleged to have been stolen was admissible. Kubacak v. State, 59 App. 165, 127 S. W. 836.

In a prosecution for burglary, testimony by the officer who arrested defendant that he found on the premises occupied by the defendant three pistols and a lot of cartridges hidden in the barn was admissible. Bowen v. State, 60 App. 595, 133 S. W. 256.

Where, on a trial for burglary, the state's evidence showed that accused was at the place of the burglary on the night of its commission, and that he was in a city 30 miles distant early in the morning following, and that he met his mother at the train that morning and took charge of a trunk that she had checked at the place of the burglary which contained stolen goods, evidence of the movement of trains between the place of the burglary and the distant city, and that accused's mother checked a trunk to the distant city the morning after the burglary, was admissible. Spencer v. State, 61 App. 60, 133 S. W. 1049.

Accused and S. lived in D. about 30 miles from T. where the burglary was committed, while S.'s mother lived in T. The state's evidence was that accused and S. boarded the train at D. about 6 o'clock in the evening of the night of the burglary, saying that they were going to T., and they were seen in T. that night, accused being in the burglarized store that night. Between 3 and 5 o'clock the next morning, they were seen in D. and S. remarked, in accused's presence, upon being refused some money for which he asked another, that they would have plenty of money in the morning as "we have the goods." Freight trains passed between T. and D. between the hours accused and S. were seen in the two places, the trains going about five or six miles an hour through T. The morning after the burglary, S.'s mother went from T. to D. checking a trunk for D. and accused and S. met her at the train and S. gave an expressman a check for a trunk, and thereafter accused had the trunk taken to an alley and removed therefrom to a house where it was found with the clothes stolen from the burglarized store. One witness positively identified the trunk checked by S.'s mother at T. as that in which the goods were found. Held, that evidence by the expressman that the trunk hauled by him looked like that found in the house and had the same kind of a rope around it, and that S.'s mother got off the train at D. the morning after the burglary about the time the trunk check was given to him, as well as evidence by the station agent that the trunk in which the goods were found looked like that checked by him, as well as the evidence as to S.'s statement about having plenty of money, and the freight trains passing through D. the night of the burglary, and that accused and S. were in T. on that night, was admissible; every circumstance, however slight, bearing on the commission of the offense, being admissible, if relevant, in a case dependent on circumstantial evidence. Holland v. State, 61 App. 201, 134 S. W. 693.

Under an indictment charging burglary with intent to commit theft, without specifically alleging that the property found in defendant's possession was stolen from the burglarized house, evidence that a portion of the stolen property was found in defendant's possession was admissible, not only to show intent, but also to connect accused with the offense charged. Alinis v. State, 63 App. 371, 140 S. W. 227.

In a prosecution for burglary with intent to steal, evidence that defendant offered witness a case of eggs, alleged to have been stolen, at less than the market price is admissible. Johnson v. State, 63 App. 465, 140 S. W. 347.

In a prosecution for burglarizing a barn and stealing harness, a witness testified that, after the burglary, he received a telephone from a saloon, asking if he wanted to buy a set of harness, and that he did not know who the two men at the phone were, but told them he could not come to the saloon, when he was told to call up D., which he did, and accused and D. came to his barn, and, when he told them to bring the harness, D. said that they might be seen, and was told to bring it in the back way, and that accused and D. brought the harness, which was that stolen, in the back way, and witness purchased it. The evidence also showed that accused was with D. at the saloon. Held, that the evidence was admissible, as tending to show that accused and D. had burglarized the barn. Myers v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 1134.

That accused was found in possession of a ring stolen from the burglarized house was admissible though his possession was five months after the burglary. Moray v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 592.

In a prosecution for burglary of a dwelling house, a witness testified that a ring belonging to her which was lying on the dresser in her room in the burglarized house was stolen on the night of the burglary, and that she afterwards got it back from G., and identified it before the jury. G. testified that he got the ring from accused when he was arrested, and delivered it to such witness. Held, that the evidence of such witness was admissible. Moray v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 592.

Evidence that a purse with money in it which was on the machine in the room in which the occupant was asleep when the burglar entered it was found under the porch empty the next day was admissible in a prosecution for burglary with intent to commit theft. Moray v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 927.

In a prosecution for burglary of a private dwelling with intent to commit theft in which the owner testified that the purse stolen contained a silver dollar, two quarters, and a nickel, evidence was admissible that accused had on his person when arrested silver money consisting of those pieces in addition to a dime. Moray v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 927.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence was properly admitted that, when accused was arrested, he was going directly east on W. street, and not towards his boarding house on West Elm street. Moray v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 927.

In a prosecution for burglarizing a dwelling house in which the occupant had testified that she knew accused by his dress and clothing, but did not know whether he had on boots or shoes, a question, "If he had on boots, they were just like his pants?" was properly excluded. Moray v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 927.

Where, on a trial for burglary, the prosecutor testified that accused, when caught in the house burglarized, stated that he had just walked 30 miles, and was tired and hungry, and wanted something to eat, the testimony of witnesses that accused was in a store in the town in the forenoon, on the day of the burglary in the afternoon, and that the witnesses fixed the date by stating that the store was burglarized that night, was admissible to prove the falsity of accused's statements and to fix the time of his presence in the store, and, where the court so limited the testimony, accused could not complain on the ground that the testimony proved that he was guilty of burglarizing the store. Snodgrass v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1095.

In a prosecution for burglary, the officer who arrested the defendant was properly permitted to testify that when he made the arrest he took a revolver from the person of the defendant where such revolver was positively identified as one of the articles stolen from the house alleged to have been burglarized. Overstreet v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 899.

In a trial for burglary with intent to commit rape, it was not error to permit an occupant of the house to testify as to the condition of the room which accused entered through a window, as to mud being on the floor, etc. Alsip v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 624.

In a burglary trial it was proper to permit a witness for the state to testify that the house burglarized was his private residence, and to testify of whom his family consisted. Alsip v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 624.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence that one of three keys found stuck in the mattress in defendant's room would unlock the door of the house alleged to have been broken was admissible, whether the keys were thereafter lost or not. Hollis v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 853.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence of the general manager of the company whose building was entered, and of employes who had keys thereto, that defendant did not have their consent to enter, was admissible. Holmes v. State, 70 App. 214, 156 S. W. 1173.

In a prosecution for burglary of a building alleged to be the property of one H., who was shown to be the general manager of a coal company and in control of all its property, evidence that he was the general manager was admissible. Holmes v. State, 70 App. 214, 156 S. W. 1173.

Where on a trial for burglary the state showed by an accomplice that accused stated while in the building burglarized that he was trying to get some ribbon and had got some ribbon for his girl, and showed the larceny of ribbon, testimony that shortly after the burglary the girl accompanied by accused had ribbon of the kind stolen was admissible. Holmes v. State, 70 App. 423, 157 S. W. 487.

In a prosecution for burglary of a store, evidence by the owner that he thereafter received a box of knives of the same brand that he handled was admissible, where accused's accomplice had testified that the knives which accused stole and he and accused buried the day after the burglary were afterward removed by some one, and another witness testified that the knives returned to the owner were found under a schoolhouse near the burglarized store. Pinkerton v. State, 71 App. 195, 160 S. W. 87.

In a prosecution for burglarizing a store in the night, evidence that witness found the tracks of a buggy, horse, and men at the store and traced the tracks to a lot at the place in which accused lived, was admissible where such tracks were identified as being made by accused and those with him. Pinkerton v. State, 71 App. 195, 160 S. W. 87.

Where the only contested issue, in a prosecution for burglary, was whether the prosecuting witness had given defendant permission to enter her house and take the money therefrom, in order that he might leave town, evidence that, on the day after the alleged offense, defendant wrote the witness a postal card, stating where he had gone, when he would return, and that he had got the money, was material on that issue, and its exclusion was erroneous. Lopez v. State (Cr. App.) 167 S. W. 844.

Sufficiency of circumstantial evidence in general, see notes under C. C. P. art. 783.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction. Pinkerton v. State, 71 App. 195, 160 S. W. 87; Rogers v. State, 43 Tex. 406; Langford v. State, 17 App. 445; Green v.

To support a conviction for burglary, it devolves upon the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt, not only the burglarious entry of the house, but the specific criminal intent alleged in the indictment. See the statement of the case for evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for burglary with intent to rape, because, even if sufficient to show the entry into the house, it is wholly insufficient to establish that specific intent. Coleman v. State, 26 App. 252, 9 S. W. 609; Mitchell v. State, 32 App. 479, 24 S. W. 280; Mason v. State, 47 App. 403, 83 S. W. 689.

Evidence held sufficient to support a conviction of burglary with intent to commit theft. Mullens v. State, 35 App. 149, 32 S. W. 691; Moore v. State, 52 App. 364, 107 S. W. 355; Johnson v. State, 63 App. 465, 140 S. W. 347.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of burglary of a storehouse. O'Fallin v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 897; Powers v. State, 72 App. 290, 162 S. W. 832.

That a house was broken and entered in the night time by raising a window by one who failed to show any excuse, and that there was valuable property there to be taken, and no other known desired object, supported a finding that the intent was to steal. Franco v. State, 42 Tex. 276.

Where the evidence showed that the defendant took off his shoes and entered the house through an open door, without the consent of any one, it was held that it did not show an entry by means of fraud, that being the means charged in the indictment. Hamilton v. State, 11 App. 116.

Where the intent alleged was to commit a rape by force, and the evidence was that one of three females in the house was awakened by some one touching her foot, and screamed, and a man ran out of the house when she screamed, it was held insufficient to prove an intent to commit rape. Hamilton v. State, 11 App. 116.

To warrant an inference of guilt of theft from the circumstance of possession of recently stolen property, such possession must be personal and exclusive; must be unexplained, and must involve a distinct and conscious assertion of property by the defendant. Field v. State, 24 App. 422, 6 S. W. 200; Jackson v. State, 28 App. 370, 13 S. W. 451, 19 Am. St. Rep. 839; Jackson v. State, 28 App. 143, 12 S. W. 701. See the statement of the case for evidence which under this rule, is held insufficient to support a conviction for burglarious theft. Field v. State, 24 App. 422, 6 S. W. 200.

See the statement of the case for the substance of evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for burglary, inasmuch as it fails to establish an entry by force. Jones v. State, 25 App. 226, 7 S. W. 669.

Proof that a house was burglariously entered, and certain articles stolen therefrom, which were soon after found in the possession of defendant, who appropriated them to his own use, and made no explanation of his possession, will warrant a conviction. Morgan v. State, 25 App. 513, 8 S. W. 487.

The specific intent charged must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt by facts and circumstances which lead with reasonable certainty to the conclusion sought and not left to speculation and surmise. Mitchell v. State, 33 App. 575, 28 S. W. 475; Allen v. State, 18 App. 120.

For evidence of possession of stolen property held insufficient, see Green v. State (Cr. App.) 31 S. W. 386; Munson v. State, 34 App. 498, 31 S. W. 387.

Where a store was broken into late at night, after the owner was asleep and the lights extinguished, and defendant fled as soon as the occupants were aroused, an intent to steal might be inferred. Mullens v. State, 35 App. 149, 32 S. W. 691.

Instruction authorizing conviction on proof of possession of stolen goods, held erroneous. Franks v. State, 36 App. 149, 35 S. W. 977; Hayes v. State, 36 App. 146, 35 S. W. 983; Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 276.

When the circumstances render it reasonably certain that defendant put the goods where they were found there may be a conviction without positive testimony as to his possession. McDaniel v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 324.

Evidence that the janitor of a public school had charge and control of the building and its contents from 4 p. m. until 8 o'clock the following morning during which time the burglary was committed, authorized the jury to find that he was the owner of books stolen therefrom as alleged, though the general property in the books was shown to be in the pupils. Lamater v. State, 38 App. 249, 42 S. W. 304.

Evidence held to show that a burglary was committed with intent to commit theft and not for the purpose of making an assault with intent to murder. Pilot v. State, 38 App. 515, 43 S. W. 112, 1024.

The mere possession of recently stolen property without evidence of a breaking is not sufficient to prove a burglary. Strickland v. State (Cr. App.) 78 S. W. 689; Hollis v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 853.

Unexplained possession of goods taken from a burglarized house is sufficient to connect the possessor with the burglary. Nightengale v. State, 50 App. 3, 93 S. W. 531.

Evidence, on a prosecution of an employé in the store claimed to have been broken into, held insufficient to sustain a conviction, his testimony that he was drunk, went to sleep, and was locked into the store, not being controverted. Burrell v. State, 50 App. 336, 97 S. W. 706.

Evidence of the identity of a fan, taken under circumstances constituting burglary, with a fan taken by defendant to a certain place, defendant making no explanation, but only a denial, warrants a conviction of burglary. Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 496.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction as an accomplice to a burglary. Hall v. State, 52 App. 250, 106 S. W. 379.

Evidence that defendants were seen near the burglarized house a short time before, without positive identification of the goods alleged to have been taken, is insufficient to support a conviction. Love v. State, 58 App. 270, 124 S. W. 932.

In a prosecution for forcibly breaking and entering a house in the nighttime with intent to steal, evidence held to sustain a judgment of conviction. Clark v. State, 58 App. 181, 125 S. W. 12.

Where accused was not seen with the stolen property until 3½ months or more after the house from which the property was stolen was claimed to have been entered, the possession was too remote to come under the rule that, where accused is found in possession of the property shortly after the burglary, this will ordinarily justify the jury in believing him guilty. Menchaca v. State, 58 App. 198, 125 S. W. 20.

Where possession by accused of property stolen at the time of the burglary charged is relied on to connect accused with the burglary, the jury should acquit accused, where his explanation that he bought the goods was true, or where there was a reasonable doubt as to that fact. Roberts v. State, 60 App. 20, 129 S. W. 611.

Where a burglarious entry is shown, possession of the property stolen recently after the burglary is sufficient to connect the person in possession with the burglary, and unless he explains the possession the jury may find him guilty of burglary. Roberts v. State, 60 App. 20, 129 S. W. 611.

Where accused, charged with burglary, gave an account of his possession of the property stolen, showing that his possession was innocent, the state must show that his statement was false, or he must be acquitted; but where the state overcame his explanation, or where there was evidence of sufficient weight to authorize the jury to believe that his statement was untrue, a conviction was authorized. Roberts v. State, 60 App. 20, 129 S. W. 611.

Evidence, in a prosecution for the burglarious entry of a house, with the intent to commit rape, held to support a conviction. Smith v. State, 60 App. 81, 131 S. W. 313.

Where a house has been burglarized, evidence of accused's unexplained possession shortly afterwards of goods taken from the house is sufficient to sustain a conviction. Hawthorn v. State, 62 App. 114, 136 S. W. 776.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of burglary of a house in the daytime, not at night. Wright v. State, 63 App. 664, 141 S. W. 228.

The state on a trial for burglary may, to justify a conviction, rely on recent possession by accused of property taken from the burglarized house, but where accused gives an account of his possession which is reasonable, and shows that he came into possession honestly or by any other means than by himself taking it from the house, or a principal in the transaction, the state, to justify a conviction, must overcome his explanation which can be done by circumstances of the transaction. Williams v. State, 64 App. 494, 142 S. W. 878.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of burglary of a house in the nighttime with intent to steal. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 634; Taylor v. State, 52 App. 190, 107 S. W. 58.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction for burglarizing a dwelling house with intent to commit theft therein. Moray v. State (Cr. App.) 145 S. W. 927.

Where, on a trial for the burglary of a cornerrib, the evidence showed that accused had a sack of corn a night or two after the alleged burglary, and that he had not raised any corn of his own, but the owner of the crib did not show that he owned any corn, or had any in the crib, at the time of the alleged burglary, a conviction was not sustained by the evidence. Gross v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 579.

Evidence, in a prosecution for burglary of a saloon in the nighttime, and the taking of money, whisky, weapons, etc., held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Turner v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 992.

Evidence held insufficient to connect accused with the burglary for which he was tried. Acosta v. State, 70 App. 1, 155 S. W. 251.

Evidence which was purely circumstantial held sufficient to warrant a conviction for burglary and the larceny of oats from a barn. Wilson v. State, 71 App. 330, 158 S. W. 1114.

In a prosecution for burglary and the larceny of oats from a barn, where the theory of the defense was that he bought the oats from the owner's brother, evidence held sufficient to show that if he did purchase them, he knew that the brother had no authority to sell them. Wilson v. State, 71 App. 330, 158 S. W. 1114.

Evidence that a house was broken into and goods taken therefrom, that accused and his companion, when accosted by the officers, admitted the taking, or at least informed the officers where the goods were, accompanied the officers to such place, and turned the goods over to them, and that accused was wearing a stick-pin, which was one of the articles stolen, supported a conviction for burglary; there being no controversy as to an entry by force. Kimball v. State, 71 App. 482, 160 S. W. 380.

Two saloons having been raided at the same time, evidence merely that defendant had some whisky shortly after, and that he said it came from the raid, is insufficient to convict him of burglary of one of the places, though whisky of that kind was in such saloon; it not being shown the same kind was not in the other. Jobe v. State, 72 App. 163, 161 S. W. 966.

Evidence, in a prosecution for burglarizing a storehouse, held to show at most that M. and another had control and possession of the burglarized building. Powers v. State, 72 App. 290, 162 S. W. 332.

Evidence, in a prosecution for burglary, held sufficient to show defendant's criminating possession of goods taken from a store, though they were actually in the grip of another. Lewis v. State, 72 App. 377, 162 S. W. 866.

Evidence held to warrant a conviction of burglary of a private residence at night. Curtis v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 559.

Evidence, in a prosecution for burglary, held sufficient to show a nighttime burglary. Lewis v. State, 72 App. 377, 162 S. W. 866.

Where one at night, by stealth, enters the private residence of another, with no right to do so or legal excuse, the evidence of intent to steal, sufficient to support a conviction for burglary, may be slight and circumstantial, in the absence of anything to indicate that the entry was made with any other intent. Black v. State (Cr. App.) 165 S. W. 571.

Where the state relies for conviction of burglary only on recent possession of stolen property by accused to connect him with the burglary, such possession must be exclusive, or possession by accused and others who may have been connected with the burglary. O'Fallin v. State (Cr. App.) 169 S. W. 897.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence held sufficient to show that accused broke in, and did not find the door open. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 1161.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence held insufficient to support a conviction of breaking and entering a certain freight car with intent to commit theft while in a certain county. Park v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 516.

31. Questions for jury.—Where one count charged a daytime and the other a night time burglary of a private residence, and the evidence left it in doubt as to whether the house was entered in the night or in the daytime, but showed that it was entered at some time, and the jury convicted under the second count, defendant could not complain that the evidence was insufficient, as the jury had a right to select the count under which they would find a verdict. Lewis v. State, 52 App. 20, 105 S. W. 194.

Evidence on a prosecution for burglary held sufficient to go to the jury on the question of defendant being the perpetrator of the crime. Griffith v. State, 62 App. 642, 138 S. W. 1016.

Evidence on a prosecution for burglary held sufficient to go to the jury on the issue of the crime having been committed in the nighttime. Griffith v. State, 62 App. 642, 138 S. W. 1016.

32. Instructions in general.—See note under article 1310, post.

Where a blacksmith shop was burglarized and a brace taken therefrom, and the evidence tended strongly to show that the brace was not taken with intent to permanently appropriate it to the taker's use, but merely for the temporary purpose of using it in effecting an entry into a storehouse which was burglarized on the same night, it was material error to fail to charge that to constitute the intent to commit theft, there must have been an intent to appropriate the property permanently to the taker's use and benefit. Wilson v. State, 18 App. 270, 51 Am. Rep. 309.

Charge must be confined to the evidence. Burgess v. State, 33 App. 9, 24 S. W. 286; Levine v. State, 22 App. 683, 3 S. W. 660; Niederluck v. State, 23 App. 38, 3 S. W. 573.

An instruction defining the term "entry" as meaning every kind of entry but one made by the free consent of the occupant, or one authorized to give such consent, was not erroneous as authorizing a conviction, though there was no breaking, the court having defined "breaking" and stated the necessary elements of breaking to constitute the entry burglarious. Montgomery v. State, 55 App. 502, 116 S. W. 1160.

Where the indictment charged a burglary with intent to commit rape by fraud, the court charged, "fraud must consist in the use of some stratagem, as an attempt to have carnal intercourse with a woman when she is asleep." Held erroneous, because it announces in effect that an attempt to have carnal intercourse with a woman when she is asleep, per se, constitutes fraud, which is not correct, and because the stratagem referred to in art. 1066 of the Penal Code, applies only in case the woman is married. King v. State, 22 App. 650, 3 S. W. 342.

In burglary to commit rape the court must in effect charge the jury as to the character of the force necessary to accomplish rape, and instruct them that it is essential they should find that defendant intended to use such force before they would be authorized to convict. Turner v. State, 24 App. 12, 5 S. W. 511; McCleavland v. State, 24 App. 202, 5 S. W. 664; Frown v. State, 27 App. 330, 11 S. W. 412; Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646; Mitchell v. State, 32 App. 479, 24 S. W. 280.

A special charge of the court was requested by the accused to the effect that if the jury found that there were large openings in said buildings, so situated as to admit of an easy entrance without force, and that the same could have been naturally used for said purpose and had been used for said purpose, and that at the time said property was taken an entry was made through either of said openings or unfinished ends, then the defendant is not guilty. Held, that the trial court did not err in refusing the said special charge, because, as the openings referred to were unusual places of entry, an entrance through either of them would be a burglarious entrance. Painter v. State, 26 App. 454, 9 S. W. 774.

Under an indictment charging a burglary by force, threats, and fraud, an instruction as to an entry effected by each of such means is reversible error where the evidence conclusively shows that it was accomplished by the use of force alone. Miller v. State, 28 App. 445, 13 S. W. 646.

Two joint defendants being on trial, the court charged that if the jury believed the "defendants T. and H., or either of them, did at nighttime by force enter a house, etc., with the fraudulent intent then and there to commit theft, then you should find them guilty of burglary, and assess their punishment," etc. Held, that the charge was erroneous in that it authorized a conviction of both defendants upon proof of the guilt of either. Hays v. State, 30 App. 472, 17 S. W. 1063.

Where an indictment for burglary contained two counts, one for a daytime and one for a nighttime burglary, and the evidence showed the burglary to have been committed in the nighttime, and also showed conclusively that the crime, if committed at all, was committed at night, held, that the court properly limited and restricted the jury, in their findings, to a nighttime burglary. Coates v. State, 31 App. 257, 20 S. W. 585. And on charge, see, also, Serio v. State, 22 App. 633, 3 S. W. 784; Painter v. State, 26 App. 454, 9 S. W. 774. On trial for burglary with intent to murder it is only necessary to define murder and malice. Stinnett v. State, 32 App. 526, 24 S. W. 908.

Appellant asked the court to instruct the jury "that the state must prove the want of consent of the wife and daughter of the proprietor in his absence." The indictment alleged the possession in one V., and the evidence supported the allegation. The instruction was properly refused. Willis v. State, 33 App. 168, 25 S. W. 1119. When the evidence tends to show that defendant, at the time the burglary was committed, was at a place several miles distant, the court should instruct the jury upon the law of alibi. Conway v. State, 33 App. 327, 26 S. W. 401.

When the indictment charges burglary at night, and the evidence is plain, it is not error to refuse a charge on "daytime." Aguillar v. State, 26 S. W. 405. Where the house had two rooms, and one was leased, it is proper to charge that the one retained by the lessor was her house. Reed v. State, 34 App. 597, 31 S. W. 404.

In instructing as to the force necessary to consummate a daytime burglary, it is not error to use the statutory illustrations, though there is no evidence that the particular character of the force contained in the illustrations was used. Sparks v. State, 34 App. 86, 29 S. W. 264.

Instruction as to entering and breaking; held, sufficient. Peryda v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 981.

An instruction to acquit if the intent to steal was formed after entering the house, based on the theory that the goods might have been taken when defendant in the evening entered the house for a legitimate purpose, was properly refused where the evidence showed that the property was stolen some hours later, and not at the time of the entry in the evening. Riding v. State, 40 App. 452, 50 S. W. 698.

In a prosecution for murder committed in the perpetration of a nighttime burglary, the court properly instructed on the law of nighttime burglary. Hedrick v. State, 51 S. W. 252, 40 App. 532.

Where there was testimony that the owner of the house entered consented to the entry and theft, a charge to acquit if this was the case was sufficient without charging as to accomplices, since the owner could not be an accomplice to a violation of his own possession. Duke v. State, 42 App. 3, 57 S. W. 652.

Where prosecution is based upon force actually applied to the house entered, yet if the evidence shows that the door of the house was open, it is error not to present a distinct substantive charge upon the law presenting his defense. A negative charge is not sufficient. Duke v. State, 42 App. 3, 57 S. W. 653, 654.

The charge need not define "an unusual place of entry." This is a question of fact for the jury. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 58 S. W. 100.

Where one count charged a day time and the other a night time burglary of a private residence, but the proof without controversy showed only a night time burglary, it was error to submit the question of a day time burglary. Jones v. State, 47 App. 126, 80 S. W. 530, 122 Am. St. Rep. 680.

An instruction, on a prosecution for burglarizing a car, to acquit if defendant entered it for the purpose of sleeping therein, and not with intent to commit theft, is erroneous as both these contingencies were not necessary to exonerate him from a charge of burglary, but either was enough. True v. State, 48 App. 631, 89 S. W. 1066.

A charge that if defendant entered the house on the invitation of another party, for the purpose only of sleeping there, he would not be guilty, was erroneous, as the court should have instructed that, if defendant entered the house for any other than a fraudulent intent to steal, the jury must acquit. Bird v. State, 49 App. 96, 90 S. W. 651, 122 Am. St. Rep. 803.

Where, on a prosecution for burglary, it appeared that the owner was dead, it was not error for the court to instruct the jury that the owner's want of consent might be shown by circumstantial evidence. Jackson v. State, 49 App. 215, 91 S. W. 788.

Where it appeared that the burglary was committed in the nighttime, there was no reversible error in inserting in the charge the general statutory definition of burglary, without limiting the entry to one at night. Jackson v. State, 49 App. 215, 91 S. W. 788.

The court should define the term "force." Watson v. State, 49 App. 371, 92 S. W. 807.

In a case of daytime burglary it is necessary for the court to charge as to an actual breaking, because if the entry be accomplished in the day time by breaking externally, it must be an actual breaking. Bates v. State, 50 App. 568, 99 S. W. 551.

Where trousers which disappeared and were subsequently found in defendant's possession, were hung where no one outside the house could get them without getting a portion of his body into the house, or lifting them out with some instrument, an instruction that an entry might be made by the introduction of any instrument into the house for the purpose of taking personal property, and that an actual breaking was not necessary, but that there must be some degree of force however slight, and that the entry through an unusual place, such as a window, constituted force, was proper. Hays v. State, 51 App. 111, 100 S. W. 926.

On a prosecution for burglary committed in the nighttime, there was no error in refusing a requested instruction that, in order to convict the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant entered the house in question by applying actual force to the building. Hays v. State, 51 App. 111, 100 S. W. 926.

Where, on a trial for burglary accompanied by the larceny of money of the value of about $10, accused testified that he and his codefendant went to the house burglarized; that the codefendant knocked on the door, and said he thought he heard some one in the house call, saying "Come in"; and that the codefendant went in and committed the larceny, the court was required to charge on the theory that there was no breaking and that accused was guilty only of a misdemeanor for the larceny. Stout v. State, 51 App. 569, 103 S. W. 391.

In a trial for burglarizing a private residence in the nighttime, it was not improper to omit to define a nighttime burglary and a private residence, where it clearly appeared that the burglary occurred after dark, and that the building was a private residence. Johnson v. State, 52 App. 201, 107 S. W. 52.

It was proper to refuse to instruct that, if the house was in charge or control of one other than the prosecuting witness, stated in the indictment to be the owner, at the time of the burglary, defendant should be acquitted, since if both were in possession, occupying the house as a private residence, it was sufficient to charge the ownership in the prosecuting witness. Johnson v. State, 107 S. W. 52, 52 App. 201.

Where, in a trial for burglary with intent to commit rape, prosecuting witness testified that she was awakened by the presence of some one in her room, and observed at the foot of her bed some one who had raised the mosquito bar on the bed, and had his head and shoulders under it, with his hand on witness' foot, and that she screamed, and the intruder immediately fled, aggravated assault should have been given in charge. Ballentine v. State, 107 S. W. 546, 52 App. 369.

Where the evidence showed that prosecutor lived alone in a house; that he left it in the morning, closing the door; that there was no latch on the door; that he did not come back before noon, when he found his gun was missing and the door standing open; and that accused had been seen near the house with a gun in his possession—a charge that if accused by force entered the house, without the consent of the prosecutor, and with the intent to fraudulently take personal property therein, he was guilty of burglary, was sufficient, though it did not define "entry" or "force." Brown v. State, 119 S. W. 312, 56 App. 87.

Where the state, in a prosecution for burglary, puts in evidence defendant's confession that the window was open, and that he merely reached into the house and took the money in question out through the opening, without any breaking, it is bound by such confession, unless impeached; and defendant is entitled to an instruction on the question of necessity for the use of force to constitute burglary, as defined by article 1308. Winkler v. State, 58 App. 564, 126 S. W. 1134.

Where circumstances are relied upon to show a burglary, and the evidence leaves it uncertain whether the house was entered and money taken during the day or at night, an instruction that the offense of "burglary" includes every kind of entering without consent of the owner or occupant, and that it is not necessary that there should be an actual breaking, except where entry is made in the daytime, is erroneous, as the question of force is ignored. Winkler v. State, 58 App. 564, 126 S. W. 1134.

An instruction, in a prosecution for burglary of a store, stated that if the jury believed that accused, at the time and place stated, by force or breaking at night, or by breaking in the daytime, entered a house occupied by another with intent fraudulently to take corporeal personal property therein and belonging to such person, from his possession, without his consent, with intent to deprive him of the value thereof, and appropriate it to accused's use and benefit, and that accused at the time had discretion sufficient to understand the wrongfulness of his act, they should find him guilty as charged, but if the jury did not find these facts to be established they should acquit. Held, that the charge given required the jury to find all of the elements of theft in order to convict, so that the court was not required to technically define theft in a separate charge. Ragsdale v. State, 61 App. 145, 134 S. W. 234.

Where, in a prosecution for burglary with intent to kill, the court withdrew a count alleging burglary of a private residence with intent to kill under article 1305, because the evidence did not clearly show that the house was a private residence, and submitted the count charging burglary at night with intent to kill, as defined by article 1303, any error in withdrawing the count was favorable to defendant and therefore not reversible under Code Civ. Proc. art. 743; the evidence being sufficient to convict under the count submitted. Hopkins v. State, 61 App. 590, 135 S. W. 553.

In a trial for burglary that the court in defining burglary gave the statutory definition was not error, where, in a charge applicable to defendant, it instructed that by the term "breaking" was meant that the entry must be made with actual force, and that, as the burglary was alleged to have taken place in the daytime, the jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the entry was made by force in the daytime, or they could not convict. Kinhead v. State, 61 App. 651, 135 S. W. 573.

Where the occupant of a burglarized house was not the real owner of the goods stolen therefrom, but had charge thereof for the owners, who had left them with him to be pressed, they were sufficiently his property as owner to authorize a charge that, if accused did by force and breaking in the nighttime unlawfully enter the house occupied by such person, as charged in the indictment, with the intent to commit theft, he should be found guilty of burglary. Turner v. State, 62 App. 65, 136 S. W. 486.

Prosecutor, having opened a rival soda water factory to defendant, the latter informed him that others had tried to run an opposition factory but had been put out of business. A few nights thereafter defendant while intoxicated broke in the door of prosecutor's place of business, and when arrested he was found inside the building with a bottle of oil and a wrench. There was also evidence that prosecutor's machinery had been tampered with and was leaking. Held, that the court erred in refusing to charge that, before defendant could be convicted of burglary, the jury must believe that he broke and entered the house with the specific intent to commit either the crime of arson or theft, and if he broke and entered for any other purpose, or merely to destroy property therein, or to mingle oil in prosecutor's carbonator, he was not guilty, and in charging, in response to the jury's request for additional instructions, that, if defendant broke and entered the house with intent to commit theft, then the offense of burglary with intent to steal would be complete, though no theft was actually committed. Vickery v. State, 62 App. 311, 137 S. W. 687, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 514.

An instruction in a burglary case should expressly require a finding that the person from whom the property was taken was its owner, though that fact is evident from the evidence. Majors v. State, 63 App. 488, 140 S. W. 1095.

In a prosecution for breaking and entering a storage room in the custody of C., an instruction that, if C. had the key and exclusive right and means of entry, then he in law would be the "occupant," was correct and was not objectionable as charging that C. was in fact the occupant of the room burglarized. Kinney v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 783.

Where, on a trial for burglary, prosecutor testified that accused entered the house burglarized by opening a door, and that a gold scarf pin was lost the evening of the burglary, and accused denied entering the house, and the court charged that the jury must find that the entry was made with intent to steal, the refusal to charge on the issue of intent to steal conceived after entering into the house was proper. Snodgrass v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1095.

In a prosecution for burglary of a house the court properly refused a requested charge that the jury must be satisfied whether the entry was in the daytime or in the night, before they could convict. Parker v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 108.

On a trial for breaking and entering a harness house and stealing a saddle, bridle, and blanket, where it was shown that a horse was stolen from a lot at the same time, evidence as to accused's possession of the horse shortly afterwards was admissible, and hence its admission and the refusal of an instruction to disregard it were proper. Stephens v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 1001.

Instructions expressly requiring the jury to find that accused entered the house at night in order to convict, and charging in addition that if accused did not enter the house at night, or with the owner's consent, or not by force, or not for the purpose of committing theft, the jury should acquit, sufficiently charged that the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt that accused entered the house at night. Dennis v. State, 71 App. 162, 158 S. W. 1008.

The fact that one who with two others slept in a schoolhouse near the burglarized store on the night of the burglary had since moved to Oklahoma, and the sheriff could not find him in the county, and that knives from the burglarized store were found under the schoolhouse, did not authorize the submission of the issue that such person committed the burglary, where the persons sleeping at the schoolhouse with him testified that he was in the schoolhouse all night. Pinkerton v. State, 71 App. 195, 160 S. W. 87.

33. — Conformity to indictment.—See Ellis v. State, 57 App. 601, 124 S. W. 667.

Under an indictment charging burglary with intent to commit theft, an instruction that the jury should convict defendant if they believed that he broke and entered the house by force with intent to commit a felony or theft is erroneous, as authorizing conviction of an offense not specifically charged in the indictment. Emerson v. State, 114 S. W. 834, 54 App. 628; Williams v. State, 53 App. 2, 103 S. W. 371.

It was error to charge the provisions of the former statute providing increased punishment for burglary by force, where the indictment did not charge that the entry was by force. Hobbs v. State, 44 Tex. 353; Wilcox v. State, 45 Tex. 146.

The charge must conform to, and be limited by the specific offense set forth in the indictment. Thus, where the indictment charges a burglary by means of force alone, it is error to charge with reference to a burglary committed by means of threats or fraud. Lott v. State, 17 App. 598; Sullivan v. State, 13 App. 462; Weeks v. State, Id. 466; Buntain v. State, 15 App. 485; Levine v. State, 22 App. 683, 3 S. W. 660. So, where the indictment charges a burglary committed in the daytime, it is error to instruct as to a burglary in the nighttime. Bravo v. State, 20 App. 188; Mace v. State, 9 App. 110; Alexander v. State, 31 App. 359, 20 S. W. 736. See, also, Buchanan v. State, 24 App. 195, 5 S. W. 847. Where the indictment charges a burglary with intent to commit theft, the charge must give the law of theft, as well as that of burglary. Castenaga v. State, 11 App. 390; Simms v. State, 2 App. 110; Struckman v. State, 7 App. 581; Harris v. State, 51 App. 564, 103 S. W. 390. Where the indictment charges burglary with intent to commit theft, it was held that the court erred in refusing to instruct the jury that the intent to commit theft must have existed in the mind of the defendant at the very time he entered the house, and that if he first conceived such intent after entering the house he must be acquitted of burglary. Harris v. State, 20 App. 652.

On a trial for a night time burglary there was no error in defining "breaking" as applied to a day time entry. The character of force is the same. Daggett v. State, 39 App. 5, 44 S. W. 148, 842.

On a trial for night time burglary there was no occasion or necessary for the court to define the terms "force" or "entry." Dupree v. State, 56 App. 206, 119 S. W. 685.

The court must, in burglary cases, instruct the jury that the burglarious entry must be found to have been made with the specific intent charged in the indictment. Coleman v. State, 26 App. 252, 9 S. W. 609; Miller v. State, 28 App. 445, 13 S. W. 646.

The court instructed the jury that if the burglarized building was composed of two rooms separated by a partition wall and if the alleged owner lived in one room and had exclusive control and management of it, she would be the owner; held, sufficient. Reed v. State, 34 App. 597, 31 S. W. 404.

Where an indictment for burglarizing a school building alleged that the entry was with intent to steal property belonging to the janitor, the court properly charged that a person in direct control of a house and in exclusive charge and control of property was for the purposes of the law the occupant of such house and owner of such property. Lamater v. State, 38 App. 249, 42 S. W. 304.

In prosecution for entering a house through an open door during the day and remaining concealed until night, the issue of fraudulent entry must be submitted to the jury. St. Louis v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 889.

Where an indictment charged an entry without the consent of the occupant of the house, and the jury were instructed that to convict they must find an entry without the free consent of the occupant, a further instruction that if accused by force in the night entered the house, as charged in the indictment, with intent to commit theft, to find him guilty, was not erroneous, as authorizing his conviction regardless of whether he had prosecutor's consent to enter the house. Moore v. State, 48 App. 400, 88 S. W. 230.

Where defendant was charged with burglary of a house occupied by one W., with the intent to steal the property of W., the court should have instructed that, in order to constitute burglary, it was necessary that the goods taken be in possession of W., and that the entry was for the purpose of stealing goods possessed by him. Roberson v. State, 51 App. 335, 101 S. W. 800.

A count of an indictment charging a daytime burglary did not allege that it was a private residence, but simply charged a burglarious entry of a house belonging to G. with intent to commit theft. A court charging a nighttime burglary alleged that it was a private residence occupied by G. and his family. A charge authorized a conviction on proof of an entry and remaining concealed therein, which state of facts was not pleaded in the indictment. The conviction was under the count for daytime burglary. Held, under article 1304, that the error in the charge cannot be complained of by the defendant, since it could not have induced the jury to return a verdict of guilty. Fox v. State, 62 App. 430, 138 S. W. 413.

Where in a trial on an indictment alleging burglary in the daytime in the first count, and burglary in the nighttime in the second, the evidence clearly established nighttime burglary, and the court charged that defendant should be acquitted if it was not nighttime burglary, it was not error to submit the second count only. Shaffer v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 1061.

Where an indictment in one count charged a daytime burglary and in another a nighttime burglary, and there was evidence sufficient to support a conviction under the second count, but not under the first, an instruction submitting generally, the question whether accused broke and entered the house, without reference to either a daytime or nighttime burglary, was not erroneous, since the verdict being general the conviction would be imputed to the count sustained by the facts. Shornweber v. State, 70 App. 389, 156 S. W. 222.

Where an indictment alleged that the warehouse burglarized was the property of one H. whom all the testimony showed to be the manager of a coal company owning the warehouse, the fact that a negro who fed stock therefrom carried a key, and that another employé also carried a key, would not raise the issue that they were the owners of the property so as to require an instruction thereon. Holmes v. State, 70 App. 214, 156 S. W. 1173.

34. — Possession of stolen property and explanation.—On trial for burglary where defendant made no explanation, but when his possession was challenged, merely said he knew nothing about it; held, error for the court to charge on recent possession. Franks v. State, 36 App. 149, 35 S. W. 977; Jackson v. State, 28 App. 143, 12 S. W. 701; Carson v. State, 48 App. 157, 86 S. W. 1011.

In a prosecution for burglary, a charge on recent possession is not necessary, unless defendant gave an explanation of his possession when found in such possession. Gilford v. State, 48 App. 312, 87 S. W. 698.

Nor unless the explanation is reasonable. Connors v. State, 31 App. 453, 20 S. W. 981.

An instruction that if defendant was found in possession of stolen property recently after the burglary, and failed to give a reasonable account of his possession, the jury might consider these facts with all the other facts and circumstances to enable them to determine whether defendant was guilty, was sufficiently favorable to defendant. Prince v. State, 44 Tex. 480.

An instruction given at defendant's request in connection with another instruction given by the court held to sufficiently present the law as to defendant's explanation of his possession of stolen property. McCoy v. State, 48 App. 30, 85 S. W. 1072.

Where the indictment charged burglary and the theft of oats, and the defense relied upon was, that defendant had purchased the oats, which were found in his possession recently after the burglary, and there was evidence tending to show such a purchase, it was held that the court should have affirmatively and pertinently expounded to the jury the law in regard to this defense. Dond v. State, 23 App. 180, 4 S. W. 580; Shuler v. State, 23 App. 182, 4 S. W. 581.

An instruction that the jury might consider defendant's possession of the stolen property, if he failed to give a reasonable account thereof, was properly refused, as such possession might be considered whether he gave an account thereof or not. Payne v. State, 21 App. 184, 17 S. W. 463.

Where defendant claimed to have bought the bed he was charged with taking, the court charged the jury that if they had a reasonable doubt that the bed was the property of prosecutor, they would acquit defendant. Held sufficient. Threadgill v. State, 32 App. 451, 24 S. W. 511.

Where the only evidence was the recent possession of property stolen from the burglarized house, the court should have instructed on the law of circumstantial evidence. Robertson v. State, 33 App. 366, 26 S. W. 508.

A charge that if property was stolen and recently thereafter found in defendant's possession, and he made no reasonable explanation, a conviction was justified, was on the weight of the evidence. Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913.

Where defendant testifies as to how defendant came into possession, a charge on the effect of possession is necessary. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 371.

It is error to charge that if defendant made an explanation which was reasonable and probably true, his possession of the stolen property should not be considered unless such explanation is shown to be false, since the jury should be told to consider such testimony in defendant's favor, if the explanation is not shown to be false. Hayes v. State, 36 App. 146, 35 S. W. 983.

An instruction authorizing a conviction on the fact that defendant, shortly after the burglary, was found in possession of property taken in the burglary, on proof of the falsity of the explanation given by him, is on the weight of the evidence, and therefore erroneous. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 276.

On trial for burglary, defendant when found in possession of a pistol taken from the burglarized house, stated that he had bought it. The court instructed the jury that if they believed defendant had bought said pistol, or if they had a reasonable doubt concerning the matter, they would acquit him; held, sufficient. Hays v. State, 36 App. 533, 38 S. W. 171.

Charge as to explanation of possession; held, correct. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 989; Riding v. State, 40 App. 452, 50 S. W. 698.

An instruction that, if the jury believed the defendant's testimony that he bought the property from a third person, his possession thereof should not be considered as against defendant, was sufficiently favorable to him. Lamater v. State, 42 S. W. 304, 38 App. 249.

Where defendant claimed to have purchased property taken from the burglarized house and made that explanation when it was found in his possession, the failure to charge that if he had so purchased the property or if the jury had a reasonable doubt of that fact, they should acquit, was error. Alvia v. State, 42 App. 424, 60 S. W. 551.

An instruction that if property was stolen and recently thereafter found in the possession of defendant who at the time gave an explanation of his possession, reasonably consistent with innocence and probably true, the jury should accept such explanation and not consider such possession for any purpose, was erroneous, because if his explanation was correct the jury should acquit. Lovelace v. State, 45 App. 261, 76 S. W. 756.

An instruction that if defendant made an explanation of how he came by recently stolen property, which was reasonable and probably true and consistent with innocence, the jury should acquit, but if the state had shown such explanation to be false, the possession together with the explanation should be considered in connection with other circumstances, should have been given. Lovelace v. State, 45 App. 261, 76 S. W. 756; Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913.

A charge that if property was stolen and recently thereafter found in defendant's possession, and if defendant gave an explanation of his possession, appearing reasonable and probably true and consistent with innocence, then before such circumstances could be considered against defendant, the jury must be satisfied from the other evidence of the falsity of defendant's explanation, and if they were not so satisfied they would acquit, was erroneous, as directing a conviction if defendant's explanation was false. Hart v. State, 47 App. 156, 82 S. W. 652; Gilford v. State, 48 App. 312, 87 S. W. 698.

On a prosecution for burglary, where it was shown that a purse stolen was found at defendant's house, an instruction that, if defendant was in possession of the purse and gave no explanation, it was a circumstance against him was erroneous. Johnson v. State, 50 App. 116, 96 S. W. 45.

It was proper to refuse a requested instruction that the mere possession of stolen property was not sufficient alone to convict of burglary, but only a circumstance to be considered together with the other evidence. Hays v. State, 51 App. 111, 100 S. W. 926.

Where a witness testified that she saw defendant come out of the window of the house with a bundle which he stated was his clothing which the owner of the house would not let him have, the court should have charged that if he went into the house for the purpose of getting his own clothing and secured it and not the property of such owner, he would not be guilty of burglary. Harris v. State, 51 App. 564, 103 S. W. 390.

Where defendant claimed that he obtained possession of stolen property from another person, an instruction that if he was not present when and where the house was broken and the property taken, but got it from some other person, he would not be guilty, sufficiently presented his defense. Scott v. State, 53 App. 332, 111 S. W. 657.

Where there was no explanation of defendant's possession of stolen property, and the case did not rest alone on such possession, the court was not required to charge specifically as to the recent possession of stolen property. Young v. State, 113 S. W. 764, 54 App. 560.

Where, on a trial for burglary, the state relied on the fact that a ring taken from accused several months after the burglary belonged to the wife of the owner of the house burglarized, and accused proved that he had purchased the ring, the failure to charge as to his statement as to the purchase as testified to was reversible error. Moray v. State, 61 App. 549, 135 S. W. 569.

Where one accused of burglary was accosted by the owner when leaving the house and told to return a pair of shoes and a pistol, which he did, throwing them into the owner's buggy without explanation, and running away, it was proper to omit to charge upon the presumption arising from the possession of recently stolen property, as he made no explanation of his possession. Dixon v. State, 62 App. 53, 136 S. W. 462.

Shoes were stolen from a freight car, and the state's principal witness there- after attempted to exchange a pair of the stolen shoes at the store of the owner. The witness asserted that he had acquired the shoes from accused, and that accused claimed to have bought them. Accused, when questioned, denied the transaction, and that he ever had possession of the shoes. Held, that an instruction on the possession of stolen property and the reasonableness of the explanation was improper, not being warranted by the evidence; the statement, if any, made by accused in regard to his possession, having been given before his right was questioned. Handy v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 299.

Art. 1305. [839a] "Burglary of private residence" defined.—The offense of burglary of a private residence is constituted by entering a private residence by force, threats or fraud, at night, or in any manner by entering a private residence at any time, either day or night, and remaining concealed therein until night, with the intent, in either case, of committing a felony, or the crime of theft. [Act 1899, p. 318.]

See notes under article 1304, ante.

Private residence defined.—See article 1314, post, and notes.

Necessity of presence of occupants.—It is not necessary that the family be personally present at the time of the burglary, but it is sufficient if the house is actually used at the time as a private residence though the family be temporarily absent. Handy v. State, 46 App. 406, 80 S. W. 526.

Distinct offense.—Prosecution for burglarizing private residence must now be conducted under this article and not under article 1303. Harvey v. State (Cr. App.) 61 S. W. 492.

Prosecution for a day time burglary of a private residence cannot be maintained under this article. For this article to apply it must be a night time burglary of a private residence, or a day time entry of private residence and remaining concealed until night with the intent to commit a felony or crime of theft. Osborne v. State, 42 App. 557, 61 S. W. 491 and cases following it overruled. Williams v. State, 42 App. 602, 61 S. W. 395, 62 S. W. 1057.

A day time burglary of a house or the night time burglary of a house is a distinct and separate offense from the night time burglary of a dwelling house Martinus v. State, 47 App. 528, 84 S. W. 831, 122 Am. St. Rep. 709.

A burglary committed in the day time is not within the purview of this article and the indictment need not allege that the house is a private residence. Reyes v. State, 51 App. 420, 102 S. W. 422.

Where the indictment merely alleges a burglary as denounced by articles 1303 and 1304, and the evidence shows a burglary of a private residence as denounced by article 1305, the variance is fatal to a conviction. Sedgwick v. State, 57 App. 420, 123 S. W. 702.

A conviction cannot be had under article 1305, relating to burglary of a private dwelling, where the burglarized house is not alleged to be a private dwelling; that article and article 1312, relating to burglary in private residences, covering a distinct offense from that defined by article 1303, defining "burglary" as the entry into a house by force or fraud at night, or in the daytime and remaining until night, with intent to commit a felony, and article 1304, making it burglary to enter a house in the daytime with intent to commit a felony or theft—article 1313 providing that nothing in articles 1305 or 1312 shall repeal articles 1303 and 1304. Malley v. State, 58 App. 425, 126 S. W. 598.

An indictment for burglary in the ordinary form, under article 1303, is not sustained by proof of burglary of a private residence, since such burglary is expressly made a distinct offense, and indictment therefor should be under article 1305. Rodgers v. State, 59 App. 146, 127 S. W. 834.

Under articles 1305 and 1312, making burglary of a private residence with intent to kill a distinct offense, it must be alleged and proved that the building was occupied as a residence at the time of the offense by some person or persons. Hopkins v. State, 61 App. 590, 135 S. W. 553.

The offenses described in articles 1303 and 1305 were distinct offenses, and a conviction cannot be had under article 1303, if the house burglarized was a private residence. Alinis v. State, 63 App. 272, 139 S. W. 980.

An indictment for the burglary of a residence in the daytime need not allege whether the burglary was committed in the daytime or in the nighttime, since, where a residence is burglariously entered in the daytime, the punishment is the same as for any other ordinary burglary, and it is only the burglary of a residence in the nighttime that is made a separate and distinct offense. Snodgrass v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 1095.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 629.

Indictment must allege the burglarized house to be a private residence. Osborne v. State, 42 App. 557, 61 S. W. 491, 492; Fonville v. State (Cr. App.) 62 S. W. 573; Malley v. State, 58 App. 425, 126 S. W. 598.

When the indictment contains no allegation that the house burglarized was a private residence and the proof shows that fact the variance is fatal. Fonville v. State (Cr. App.) 62 S. W. 573, overruled by Williams v. State, 42 App. 602, 61 S. W. 395, 62 S. W. 1057.

An indictment under this article must allege the essential elements constituting burglary therein mentioned among other things, that the burglarized house was a private residence. Gilford v. State, 48 App. 312, 87 S. W. 699.

The indictment must allege that the building or room was occupied and actually used at the time of the offense as a place of residence and should name the person occupying and using it. Jones v. State, 50 App. 100, 96 S. W. 44; Johnson v. State, 50 App. 116, 96 S. W. 45; Lewis v. State, 54 App. 636, 114 S. W. 818.

An indictment charging the burglary of a house "then and there the private residence of S. and that said S. was then and there using said house as a private residence," sufficiently charges that the house entered was used as a private residence. Sedgwick v. State, 57 App. 420, 123 S. W. 702.

Allegations in an indictment that accused by force, threats, and fraud broke and entered a house occupied by another sufficiently alleged an ordinary night or day breaking, but did not allege burglary of a private residence at night. Ellis v. State, 57 App. 601, 124 S. W. 667.

Art. 1306. [840] "Entry" defined.—The "entry" into a house, within the meaning of article 1303, includes every kind of entry but one made by the free consent of the occupant, or of one authorized to give such consent; it is not necessary that there should be any actual breakage to constitute the offense of burglary, except when the entry is made in the day time.

See notes under 1307, post.

Cited, Dennis v. State, 71 App. 162, 158 S. W. 1008.

Art. 1307. [841] Further defined.—The entry is not confined to the entrance of the whole body; it may consist of the entry of any part for the purpose of committing a felony; or it may be constituted by the discharge of fire-arms or other deadly missile into the house, with intent to injure any person therein; or it may be constituted by the introduction of any instrument for the purpose of taking from the house any personal property, although no part of the body of the offender should be introduced.

Effect of statute in general.—While the general definition of burglary includes, in the breaking, intent to commit a felony, or the crime of theft, article 1307 is a limitation upon article 1303 and provides that where the entry is only of a part of the body, the crime intended to be committed after such breaking must be a felony. Under article 1303 this must be through an aperture made by the party. Jones v. State, 48 App. 336, 87 S. W. 1158.

This article does not abrogate the express terms of article 1303, but is simply an amplification upon and addition to, and explanation of the same. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 100 S. W. 383, 384.

Article 1307 is but an addition to articles 1303 and 1304, and under the three articles, burglary may consist of entering a house by force, etc., or in entering a house and remaining therein with the intent to commit a felony, or by the discharge of firearms into a house with the intent to injure the person therein, and the intention need not be to commit a felony. Railey v. State, 58 App. 1, 121 S. W. 1120, 125 S. W. 576.

Where defendant broke open the side of a railroad car, and entered in person, and took out some property, he was guilty, under the general statute, declaring one guilty of burglary who breaks and enters with intent to commit a felony or theft, and the value of the property was immaterial, as article 1307 was not applicable. Boyd v. State, 57 App. 647, 124 S. W. 651.

Burglarious entry in general.—Where the entry was made with the consent of the owner of the house, such consent being given by detectives, acting for said owner, it was held to be not a burglarious entry. Speiden v. State, 3 App. 156, 30 Am. Rep. 126. But where detectives merely facilitated the entry without suggesting the offense or originating the intent, the entry was held to be burglarious. Johnson v. State, 3 App. 590; Robinson v. State, 34 App. 71, 29 S. W. 40, 53 Am. St. Rep. 701.

Entry does not signify the entrance of the whole body. Nash v. State, 20 App. 384; Burke v. State, 5 App. 74; Franco v. State, 42 Tex. 276. To constitute a burglarious entry, the house must be entered by force, or by threats, or by fraud, whether the entry be in the daytime or in the nighttime. Ross v. State, 16 App. 554. To constitute burglary in the daytime the entrance into the house must be effected by actual force applied to the building. An entry in the daytime effected by threats or fraud, or by force, if such force be not upon the building, is not a burglarious entry. But if the entry be made at night, and be effected by force whether used upon the building or otherwise, or by threats, or by fraud, it is a burglarious entry. Carr v. State, 19 App. 635, 53 Am. Rep. 395; Martin v. State, 21 App. 1, 17 S. W. 430; Martin v. State, 1 App. 525.

An entry into a room with the owner's consent is not burglarious. Turner v. State, 24 App. 12, 5 S. W. 511.

As to an entry effected by fraud, see Neiderluck v. State, 23 App. 38, 3 S. W. 573; post, articles 1308, 1318 and 1319, and notes.

There was not only a total absence of evidence tending to show an entry by breaking or by force as alleged, but the proof was positive that the entry was made through an open door. Held insufficient to support a conviction. Melton v. State, 24 App. 287, 6 S. W. 303.

A special charge of the court was requested by the accused to the effect that, if the jury found that there were large openings in said building so situated as to admit of an easy entrance without force, and that the same could have been naturally used for said purpose and had been used for said purpose, and that at the time said property was taken an entry was made through either of said openings or unfinished ends, then the defendant is not guilty. Held, that the trial court did not err in refusing the said special charge, because, as the openings referred to were unusual places of entry, an entrance through either of them would be a burglarious entrance. Painter v. State, 26 App. 454, 9 S. W. 774.

An entry at night into a store during business hours with intent to conceal one's self; held, not a burglarious entry. Edwards v. State, 36 App. 387, 37 S. W. 438.

The slightest force, such as the opening of a door or the turning of a lock, is sufficient to constitute a burglarious entry. Hedrick v. State, 51 S. W. 252, 40 App. 532.

Where one breaks a window with the specific intent to enter there either with his hand or with his whole body, and thereafter takes thereout property of any value, he is guilty of burglary. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 100 S. W. 383; Williams v. State, 53 App. 2, 108 S. W. 371.

Where defendant broke open the side of a railroad car, and entered in person, and took out some property, he was guilty of burglary, and the value of the property was immaterial, as art. 1307 was not applicable. Boyd v. State, 57 App. 647, 124 S. W. 651.

Discharge of firearms.—Entry effected by discharging fire-arms in house. Melton v. State, 24 App. 287, 6 S. W. 303; Coleman v. State, 26 App. 252, 9 S. W. 609; Painter v. State, 26 App. 454, 9 S. W. 775; O'Brien v. State, 27 App. 448, 11 S. W. 459; Miller v. State, 28 App. 445, 13 S. W. 646; Walton v. State, 29 App. 163, 15 S. W. 646.

To discharge firearms into a house with intent to injure any person therein is per se burglary, and constitutes all the force and entry necessary and essential to that crime. Garner v. State, 31 App. 22, 19 S. W. 333.

Indictment for burglary by discharge of fire-arms held sufficient. Garner v. State, 31 App. 22, 19 S. W. 333.

Under article 1307, discharging firearms into a house with intent to injure a person therein, constitutes burglary per se, and in a prosecution therefor, evidence of the general bad reputation of the alleged injured person for peace and quiet in the community, going merely to corroborate testimony that he had assaulted accused's wife, and tending to show that the shooting was only an aggravated assault, and not an assault with intent to murder, was properly excluded. Railey v. State, 58 App. 1, 121 S. W. 1120, 125 S. W. 576.

It being per se burglary to shoot into a house with the intent to injure any person therein, it is immaterial whether accused, in a prosecution for such an offense, was guilty of assault with intent to murder, and it was not error to permit the prosecuting attorney to dismiss indictments charging accused with assault to commit murder before trying him for the burglary, arising out of the same transaction. Railey v. State, 58 App. 1, 121 S. W. 1120, 125 S. W. 576.

In a prosecution for burglary by shooting into a dwelling house, where accused claimed that prosecuting witness had struck accused's wife and called her insulting names, and prosecuting witness testified that he never used violent language towards any one, and that his wife was never violent in language or conduct, evidence, to impeach the prosecuting witness, of a person that he had once gone to prosecuting witness' residence, and that prosecuting witness, without provocation or excuse, had spoken in a loud and angry manner in Mexican, and acted in a violent manner, was inadmissible as evidence merely of previous altercations with other parties. Railey v. State, 58 App. 1, 121 S. W. 1120, 125 S. W. 576.

In a prosecution for burglary by shooting into a dwelling house in the night with intent to murder, in which the state relied upon circumstantial evidence to convict, every circumstance throwing light upon the commission of the offense was admissible in evidence, and the conduct, on the night of the shooting, of accused and the person claimed to have been with him when they rode past the house and shot into it, was admissible, as well as testimony of the similarity of the tracks made by horses passing that night and those made by the horses of accused and such other as they rode past the house next day. Windham v. State, 59 App. 366, 128 S. W. 1130.

A motion to quash an indictment for burglary by the discharge of firearms into a house in the nighttime, with intent to commit a felony in the house, in violation of article 1307, was properly overruled, where the indictment was drawn strictly in the form laid down in White's Ann. Pen. Code, art. 1436. (White's Ann. Pen. Code, 1911, p. 1236). Shetters v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 582.

On a trial for burglary, committed by shooting into a house with intent to injure a woman who had previously lived with and been "kept" by accused, a question asked the prosecuting witness as to why accused wanted her to live with him, and whether he wanted her to sleep with him, was neither irrelevant nor incompetent. Gradington v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 210.

Art. 1308. [842] "Breaking" defined.—By the term "breaking," as used in article 1304, is meant that the entry must be made with actual force. The slightest force, however, is sufficient to constitute breaking; it may be by lifting the latch of the door that is shut, or by raising a window, the entry at a chimney, or other unusual place, the introduction of the hand or any instrument to draw out the property through an aperture made by the offender for that purpose.

See notes under article 1304, ante.

Burglarious breaking.—The word "breaking" implies actual force, but not such force as must necessarily amount to violence. State v. Robertson, 32 Tex. 159; Anderson v. State, 17 App. 305; Franco v. State, 42 Tex. 276.

"Breaking" is constituted by an entry with actual force, which to constitute burglary in the daytime must be applied to the building. A daytime burglary can not be committed by force not applied to the building, nor by threats or fraud. But a burglary in the nighttime may be committed by force whether applied to the building or not, or by threats, or by fraud. Carr v. State, 19 App. 635, 53 Am. Rep. 395; Martin v. State, 21 App. 1, 17 S. W. 430. When the entry is at night an actual breaking is not necessary. And breaking a room in the house, after entering the house by an open door, may be burglary. Anderson v. State, 17 App. 305; Martin v. State, 1 App. 525. As to what will constitute a breaking by fraud, see Neiderluck v. State, 23 App. 38, 3 S. W. 573. Ante, articles 1308, post, articles 1318 and 1319 and notes. See, also, Williams v. State, 24 App. 17, 5 S. W. 655; Painter v. State, 26 App. 454, 9 S. W. 774; Garner v. State, 31 App. 22, 19 S. W. 333.

A window may or may not be a usual place of entering a house, but this is a question of fact to be solved by the testimony. A window elevated five feet or more above the ground would be an unusual place, especially where the person entering through it did so by climbing. Alexander v. State, 31 App. 359, 20 S. W. 756.

The pushing open of a closed door held in place only by the friction of the door itself is a sufficient breaking. Sparks v. State, 34 App. 86, 29 S. W. 264.

To enter a mill house by crawling through a small hole under the sill is a "breaking," that being an unusual place of entry. Knotts v. State (Cr. App.) 32 S. W. 532.

Opening a closed door of a house is a breaking sufficient to constitute burglary. Matthews v. State (Cr. App.) 38 S. W. 172. See, also, Martin v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 270.

Day time burglary is not circumscribed by the illustrations of force used in the statute. If the door be shut and simply held in position by its own pressure upon the side and facings, it is a sufficient force and breaking to constitute a day time burglary to push, pull or shove it open with burglarious intent. Duke v. State, 42 App. 3, 57 S. W. 652.

Entering a room through a transom by tearing away a curtain is a sufficient breaking. Holland v. State, 47 App. 623, 85 S. W. 798.

If the window glass through which the defendant inserted his hand, was already broken, under this article he would not commit a burglary even though he inserted his hand for the purpose of committing theft. Jones v. State, 48 App. 336, 87 S. W. 1157.

(See note to article 1304.)

The "force" required to constitute burglary under this article, may be by lifting the latch of a closed door, by raising a window, by entry at a chimney, or other unusual place, the introduction of a hand or any instrument to draw out the property through the opening made by the burglar for that purpose. Winkler v. State, 58 App. 564, 126 S. W. 1134.

Where the state, in a prosecution for burglary, puts in evidence defendant's confession that the window was open, and that he merely reached into the house and took the money in question out through the opening, without any breaking, it is bound by such confession, unless impeached; and defendant is entitled to an instruction on the question of necessity for the use of force to constitute burglary, as defined by article 1308. Winkler v. State, 58 App. 564, 126 S. W. 1134.

A "breaking" as an element of the crime of burglary means an entry made with actual force, although the slightest force, as by lifting the latch of a door that is shut, or the opening of a door that is shut or locked, or the raising of a window, is sufficient. Hollis v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 853.

Under this article the unlocking and opening of a locked door and an entry thus affected with intent to steal or with actual theft is a breaking, even though the offender after committing the theft should again close and lock the door, and leave it as he found it. Hollis v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 853.

By "breaking" into a house is meant that the entry must be made with actual force, but the slightest force is sufficient to constitute a breaking, as the lifting of a doorlatch, etc. Dennis v. State, 71 App. 162, 158 S. W. 1008.

Art. 1309. [843] "House" defined.—A "house," within the meaning of this chapter, is any building or structure erected for public or private use, whether the property of the United States, of this state, or of any public or private corporation or association, or of any individual, and of whatever material it may be constructed.

What constitutes "house."—A "house" is any "building" or "structure" of whatever material it may be constructed. A "building" is a fabric, or edifice constructed; a thing built, as a house, a church, etc. A "structure" is a building of any kind, but chiefly a building of some size, or of magnificence; an edifice. An "office" is a place where a particular kind of business, or service, for others is transacted; a house, or apartment in which public officers and others transact business; as the register's office; a lawyer's office. Under these definitions an apartment constructed of pickets, and situated in one corner of a hardware house, and used to keep the account books, money, etc., of a lumber company, and to transact the business of said company in, was held to be a "house" within the meaning of the preceding article. Anderson v. State, 17 App. 305. A sheriff's office is a house within the meaning of the statute. Bigham v. State, 31 App. 244, 20 S. W. 577. A fruit stand built in the shape of a piano box, but large enough for the proprietor to stand in while making sales is a house. Willis v. State, 33 App. 168, 25 S. W. 1119. An ordinary "smoke house" is included in the definition. Albritton v. State (Cr. App.) 26 S. W. 398.

The house alleged to have been burglarized was what is commonly called a header box on a harvesting machine, it is 14 feet long, 6 feet wide, 4 feet high on one side and 18 inches high on the other, and had a top or cover; held, that it was not a house. Williamson v. State, 39 App. 60, 44 S. W. 1107, 73 Am. St. Rep. 901.

The structure burglarized was made of a wagon sheet stretched over a ridge-pole, and nailed down on each side to plank, which formed the sides. One end was boxed up with boards, the other end closed with a wagon sheet and some boxes; held, such structure was a house. Henderson, J., dissenting from the opinion. Favro v. State, 39 App. 452, 49 S. W. 932, 73 Am. St. Rep. 950.

A shed was a house, within the burglary statute, though it was entirely closed by planking, and had no door, so that one could not enter without pulling off the planking. Crow v. State, 48 App. 25, 85 S. W. 1057.

A railroad car is not a "house" within the meaning of the law defining burglary, and an attempt to break and enter such a car is no offense. Summers v. State, 49 App. 90, 90 S. W. 310.

A show case 5 or 6 feet square and 6 or 8 feet high with a cover on same and a door located in the vestibule of a store house, is not a house, the breaking into and entry of which with felonious intent, constitutes burglary. Clark v. State, 56 App. 494, 120 S. W. 892.

Under this article, one compartment in a cold storage plant is a "house" within the statute, and one stealing meat stored therein is guilty of burglary. Jame v. State, 63 App. 559, 140 S. W. 1086.

A house alleged to have been burglarized was a storehouse with two wings. In one of the rooms hay had been stacked as high as the joists making a partition in the room, and here the beer stolen at the time of the burglary was stored. The parts of the room divided by the hay each had an outside entrance and were in the possession of different persons. A person could go from one part to the other by climbing over the hay through a space between the joists and the roof of the building. Held, that an instruction that each end of the room so divided was a separate "house," within the law relating to burglary, was proper. Kinney v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 783.

A harness house, which was a complete room with the door entered as the only entrance and which was made a part of a barn, was a "house" within the statute. Dennis v. State, 71 App. 162, 158 S. W. 1008.

The word "house," as used in article 1303, providing that the offense of burglary is constituted by entering a house by force at night, is given the most comprehensive meaning in view of article 1309, providing that the word shall mean any building or structure, of whatever material, erected for private use. Williams v. State, 72 App. 371, 162 S. W. 838.

A structure burglarized was a display window which was made a part of the building when it was constructed in that two of the outer walls of the window were the brick walls of the building, and the other was a wooden and brick structure partitioning off the showcase from the storeroom proper. The front of the show window was a glass window, raised from the bottom, and the window was from 9 to 18 inches deep and 5 or 6 feet high and wide, and the case contained four or five glass shelves for the goods, and was locked at the bottom of the window by a padlock. The showcase was outside of the store doors in the vestibule of the store, and there was no entrance to the showcase from the inside of the storeroom. Held, under this article that the show window was a "house" within article 1303, so as to make the forcible entry thereof burglary. Williams v. State, 72 App. 371, 162 S. W. 838.

A show case or show window which was made into and was a part of a house constituted a part of the "house," so that a breaking thereof and the taking of shoes therefrom was the breaking of a house. Lewis v. State, 72 App. 377, 162 S. W. 866.

Art. 1310. [844] "Day time" defined.—By the term "day time," is meant any time of the twenty-four hours from thirty minutes before sunrise until thirty minutes after sunset.

See notes to art. 1304, ante; Laws v. State, 26 App. 643, 10 S. W. 220.

Charge of court.—An instruction defining "nighttime burglary" should give a definition of "nighttime" as 30 minutes after sundown, and not before, as provided by statute. Moray v. State, 61 App. 549, 135 S. W. 569.

Evidence justifying submission of count.—Under this article, evidence that witness found a burglar in a room at about 10 or 15 minutes past 5 a. m. on a day in August, when the sun rose at about 18 minutes past 5 o'clock, was sufficient to justify submission of a count charging entry in the daytime. Long v. State, 53 App. 209, 127 S. W. 208, 21 Ann. Cas. 405.

Art. 1311. [845] Punishment.—The punishment for burglary shall be imprisonment in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than twelve years.

Explanatory.—The preceding article fixing the same punishment for all kinds of burglary was framed by the revisers of 1879 from articles 730, 731, 732, 733, O. C., which prescribed different punishments for different kinds of burglary; such as burglary of a dwelling house, burglary by force, burglary by the discharge of firearms, etc.

Art. 1312. [845a] Punishment for burglary of private residence.—The punishment for burglary of a private residence shall be by imprisonment in the penitentiary for any term of years not less than five. [Act 1899, p. 318.]

Statute as covering distinct offense.—A conviction cannot be had under article 1305, relating to burglary of a private dwelling, where the burglarized house is not alleged to be a private dwelling; that article and article 1312, relating to burglary in private residences, covering a distinct offense from that defined by article 1303, defining "burglary" as the entry into a house by force or fraud at night, or in the daytime and remaining until night, with intent to commit a felony, and article 1304, making it burglary to enter a house in the daytime with intent to commit a felony or theft—article 1313 providing that nothing in articles 1305 or 1312 shall repeal articles 1303 and 1304. Malley v. State, 58 App. 425, 126 S. W. 598.

Diurnal burglary.—If a burglary is committed in a private house in the day time, the fact of its being a private house does not change the punishment, which is imprisonment for not less than two nor more than twelve years. Holland v. State, 45 App. 172, 74 S. W. 763.

Nocturnal burglary.—A verdict of thirty years imprisonment was not cruel or excessive. Handy v. State, 46 App. 406, 80 S. W. 526.

Art. 1313. [845b] Burglary of private residence at night distinct offense.—Nothing in articles 1305 and 1312 shall be construed to alter or in any manner repeal articles 1303 and 1304, nor any part thereof, but shall be construed to make burglary of a private residence at night a separate and distinct offense from burglary, as defined in articles 1303 and 1304. [Id., 318.]

Distinct offense.—Acts 1899, p. 318 applies only to burglaries committed at night. A daytime burglary of a private residence is not affected but is left as an offense under article 1303 as simply the burglary of a house. Williams v. State, 42 App. 602, 61 S. W. 395, 62 S. W. 1057.

A conviction cannot be had under article 1305, relating to burglary of a private dwelling, where the burglarized house is not alleged to be a private dwelling; that article and article 1312, relating to burglary in private residences, covering a distinct offense from that defined by article 1303, defining "burglary" as the entry into a house by force or fraud at night, or in the daytime and remaining until night, with intent to commit a felony, and article 1304, making it burglary to enter a house in the daytime with intent to commit a felony or theft—article 1313 providing that nothing in articles 1305 or 1312 shall repeal articles 1303 and 1304. Malley v. State, 58 App. 425, 126 S. W. 598.

Under articles 1305 and 1312, making burglary of a private residence with intent to kill a distinct offense, it must be alleged and proved that the building was occupied as a residence at the time of the offense by some person or persons. Hopkins v. State, 61 App. 590, 135 S. W. 553.

Art. 1314. [845c] "Private residence" defined.—The term "private residence," mentioned in this and articles 1305 and 1313, shall be construed to mean any building or room occupied and actually used, at the time of the offense, by any person or persons as a place of residence. [Id., p. 318.]

What constitutes "private residence."—Where prosecutor was renting a room in a hotel and lived in it as a private residence, the room was a private residence within the statute. Holland v. State, 45 App. 172, 74 S. W. 763.

Burglary of a room in a school dormitory is of a private residence. Mays v. State, 50 App. 391, 97 S. W. 703.

There is no technical meaning as to what a private residence is. Where K. and another slept in a house which K. rented, insured and controlled, and in which he and others took their meals until about a week or ten days before the burglary, the house was a private residence. Johnson v. State, 52 App. 201, 107 S. W. 52.

It is necessary that somebody occupy the room or house burglarized as a private residence. Lewis v. State, 54 App. 636, 114 S. W. 818.

In a prosecution for burglary with intent to murder, in which error was alleged, in that the judge withdrew from the jury a count alleging burglary of a private residence with intent to kill under article 1305, evidence held insufficient to show that the house was occupied as a residence at the time of the offense. Hopkins v. State, 61 App. 590, 135 S. W. 553.

The house burglarized consisted of a storeroom, which was subdivided by a partition, the front room being a restaurant, the middle room being used as a kitchen, and the rear room as a sleeping apartment for the tenant, his wife, and daughter, and the entry was made in the middle room and the articles stolen therefrom. Held, that the only part of the building used as a private residence was the sleeping apartment, so that the burglary was not a burglary of a private residence. Alinis v. State, 63 App. 272, 139 S. W. 980.

An instruction in a prosecution for burglary which defines "private residence" as "a building actually occupied and used as a place of residence" is not erroneous, since placing the word "actually" before the word "occupied," instead of before the word "used," as in the statute, does not give to the words any different meaning. Dowling v. State, 63 App. 366, 140 S. W. 224.

A building burglarized consisted of a storehouse in which a restaurant was conducted. The storehouse was divided into three rooms. The first was used as a dining room, the middle room for cooking, and the rear room was occupied by prosecutor and his wife as a bedroom. The room entered, and from which the property was stolen, was the cookroom. Held, that the premises did not constitute a "private residence," and that accused was properly prosecuted under article 1304, declaring that he who enters a house in the daytime with intent to commit a theft by breaking is guilty of burglary, and not under article 1305, providing that the entry of a private residence, either in the day or night, shall constitute burglary. Alinis v. State, 63 App. 371, 140 S. W. 227.

Evidence in a trial for burglary of a dwelling held to show that it was the place of residence of the owner as charged, though he slept elsewhere most of the time. Payne v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 694.

A jewelry store in which was a little gallery about 10 feet above the floor curtained off as a sleeping apartment, with a railing around the gallery next to the store part, but without any partition, was not a "private residence" within the statute, which makes a distinction between ordinary burglary and the offense of breaking into a private residence. Shornweber v. State, 70 App. 389, 156 S. W. 222.

Art. 1315. Burglary with explosives.—Any person who shall commit burglary, as defined by the Penal Code of this state, and in the commission of the offense uses nitro-glycerine, dynamite, gunpowder, or other high explosives, shall be deemed guilty of burglary with explosives. [Act 1907, p. 210.]

Art. 1316. Punishment for same.—Any person who shall be convicted of burglary with explosives shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for not less than twenty-five years and not more than forty years. [Id., p. 210.]

Art. 1317. [846] Other offenses committed after entry punishable.—If a house be entered in such manner as that the entry comes within the definition of burglary, and the person guilty of such burglary shall, after so entering, commit theft, or any other offense, he shall be punished for burglary, and also for whatever other offense is so committed. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 180.]

Trial or conviction of burglary as bar to prosecution for theft.—Under article 1317, a previous trial for burglary does not prevent a prosecution for theft of the property claimed to have been taken in the burglary. Newton v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 638.

Under the express provision of article 1317, a conviction of burglary of a box car would be no bar to a prosecution for theft of goods after the entry had been effected. McDonald v. State, 70 App. 80, 156 S. W. 209.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 625.

Art. 1318. [847] Same subject.—If the burglary was effected for the purpose of committing one felony, and the person guilty thereof shall, while in the house, commit another felony, he shall be punishable for any felony so committed as well as for the burglary.

Constitutionality.—This article is constitutional. Smith v. State, 22 App. 350, 3 S. W. 238.

Prosecution and conviction of burglary and contemporaneous offenses.—See notes under article 1304, ante.

A conviction can not be had under the same indictment for both burglary and the felony or theft committed after entry into the house. Convictions for each offense can only be had under separate indictments. Howard v. State, 8 App. 447; Shepherd v. State, 42 Tex. 501; Robertson v. State, 6 App. 669; Struckman v. State, 7 App. 581; Smith v. State, 22 App. 350, 3 S. W. 238.

Burglary and theft committed in one and the same transaction may be prosecuted and punished as separate but not as joint offenses. Rust v. State, 31 App. 75, 19 S. W. 763; Alexander v. State, 31 App. 359, 20 S. W. 756.

Where a party is charged in separate indictments for burglary and theft committed after the burglarious entry, he may be tried for each offense and convicted of both offenses. Loakman v. State, 32 App. 563, 25 S. W. 22. Cases of Shepherd v. State, 42 Tex. 501; Robertson v. State, 6 App. 669; Struckman v. State, 7 App. 581; Howard v. State, 8 App. 447; Smith v. State, 22 App. 350, 3 S. W. 238, holding a different doctrine, are overruled.

A former acquittal of an attempt to commit rape is not a bar to a prosecution for an attempt to commit burglary for the purpose of committing rape, involving the same offense. Byas v. State, 41 App. 51, 51 S. W. 923, 96 Am. St. Rep. 762.

A party may be convicted of burglary and of the offense intended to be committed in the perpetration of the burglary, as well as any other offense committed at the time. Adams v. State (Cr. App.) 62 S. W. 1050.

One having been convicted of burglary, and sentenced, may also be convicted of theft committed in connection with the same burglary; they not being included offenses. Clark v. State, 59 App. 246, 128 S. W. 131, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 323.

The fact that an indictment for burglary alleged possession of the premises in one person and that an indictment for theft growing out of the same transaction alleged possession of the goods in another person would not necessarily present a variance. McDonald v. State, 70 App. 80, 156 S. W. 209.

Acquittal or conviction of burglary as bar to prosecution for theft, and vice versa.—Former jeopardy in general, see C. C. P. art. 9, and notes.

When the indictment charges burglary, and also charges the commission of theft, a conviction of the burglary operates as a bar to any further prosecution for the theft. Turner v. State, 22 App. 42, 2 S. W. 619; Miller v. State, 16 App. 417; Howard v. State, 8 App. 447. See, also, Williams v. State, 24 App. 69, 5 S. W. 833; Rust v. State, 31 App. 75, 19 S. W. 763.

When burglary and theft is charged in one indictment it is a bar to another prosecution. Crawford v. State, 31 App. 51, 19 S. W. 766.

Conviction of theft does not bar prosecution for burglary even if it grew out of the same transaction. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 60 S. W. 965; Fielder v. State, 40 App. 184, 49 S. W. 376.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence that accused had been acquitted of theft of the goods exhibited on the trial was not admissible as showing a second putting in jeopardy; the two defenses being distinct. Wallace v. State, 57 App. 354, 123 S. W. 135.

One having been convicted of burglary, and sentenced, may also be convicted of theft committed in connection with the same burglary; they not being included offenses. Clark v. State, 59 App. 246, 128 S. W. 131, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 323.

Acquittal of burglary as barring prosecution for receiving stolen property.—In a prosecution for receiving stolen property, it was not error to ignore a plea of former jeopardy based on an acquittal of burglary. Art. 1319. [848] Actual breaking necessary in case of domestic.

—An entry into a house for the purpose of committing theft, unless the same is effected by actual breaking, is not burglary when the same is done by a domestic servant or other inhabitant of such house; but a theft committed by such person after entering a house is punishable as in other cases.

“Domestic.”—“Domestics” are those who reside in the same house with the master they serve. The term does not extend to workmen and laborers employed out of doors. A domestic is a servant or hired laborer residing with a family. The preceding article includes both domestics and inhabitants, and does not extend to a servant whose employment is out of doors, and not in the house, or to a lodger or visitor, as distinguished from an inhabitant. Wakefield v. State, 41 Tex. 556.

A farm hand who sleeps and eats outside of the master’s house, though he performs chores inside of the house when directed, is not a domestic servant. Waterhouse v. State, 21 App. 663, 2 S. W. 889.

Where a man employed for certain work in a hotel, who performed no services in a saloon in the same building, under the same management, but operated separately from the hotel, unlocked the saloon door at night and entered to commit larceny, it was not error, on his trial for burglary, to refuse to charge as to domestic servants, since he was not a servant as to the saloon. Jackson v. State, 43 App. 260, 64 S. W. 864.

A farm tenant who sometimes worked in a store, but never about the store-keeper’s house, was not a “domestic servant,” so as to require submission of his status as such in a trial for burglary of the house. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 634.

“Inhabitant.”—An “inhabitant” is one who has a fixed residence as distinguished from an occasional lodger or visitor. Wakefield v. State, 41 Tex. 556; Ullman v. State, 1 App. 220, 28 Am. Rep. 405.

A “boarder” is not an inhabitant. Ullman v. State, 1 App. 220, 28 Am. Rep. 405.

Breaking and entry.—To constitute burglary by a domestic servant, or an inhabitant of the house, there must be an actual breaking. The mere lifting of a latch to effect an entry, is, in such case, not an actual breaking. But where such servant or inhabitant is acting with others in entering the house, an actual breaking is not necessary to constitute burglary as to him, and as to those acting with him. Neiderluck v. State, 23 App. 38, 3 S. W. 573; Alexander v. State, 48 App. 531, 89 S. W. 642, 122 Am. St. Rep. 771. Ante, articles 1307 and 1308 and notes.

The difference in an unlawful entry made by a stranger and by a domestic servant is, in the former case a constructive breaking is sufficient, while in the latter an actual breaking must be proved. Peters v. State, 33 App. 170, 26 S. W. 61.

Art. 1320. [849] Attempt at burglary; how punished.—If any person shall attempt to commit the crime of burglary, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than four years. [Act Feb. 11, 1860, pp. 100-01.]

Attempts and conspiracy to commit offense.—Defendant proposed the crime to another, who informed the owner of the premises sought to be burglarized. The owner told the informer not to hinder defendant but to let him come of his own free will, and the informer agreed with defendant to commit the burglary without intending its accomplishment. An actual attempt to enter was made. Held that defendant did not have the owner’s consent, and was guilty of an attempt. Robinson v. State, 34 App. 71, 29 S. W. 40, 53 Am. St. Rep. 701.

It is not burglary nor any other offense to “attempt” to break and enter a railroad car. Summers v. State, 49 App. 90, 90 S. W. 310.

Defendants, at night, burglarized, or attempted to burglarize, a store. They were armed to resist arrest. When detected by decedent and a third person they were asked to halt but made no inquiry of the object, and when called to halt a second time they shot and killed decedent. Neither of defendants knew, or could have known, that decedent and the third person did not have a warrant for their arrest. Held, that under articles 1303 and 1320, making a felony to commit the offense of burglary or to attempt to commit burglary, and C. C. P. art. 259, authorizing a peace officer or any other person to arrest without warrant when a felony is committed within his view, the issue of murder was raised. Stewart v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 1077.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 631.

An indictment charging defendant with attempting to break and enter a house with intent to commit the crime of theft, by attempting by force to raise a window was sufficient. Jones v. State, 53 App. 470, 110 S. W. 748.

Evidence.—Under articles 1320 and 1321, defining an attempt as an endeavor to accomplish burglary falling short of the ultimate design, evidence held to support a conviction for an attempt to commit burglary. Peters v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 563.

Art. 1321. [850] "Attempt" defined.—An "attempt," in the sense in which the word is used in the preceding article, is an endeavor to accomplish the crime of burglary carried beyond mere preparation, but falling short of the ultimate design in any part of it. [Id.]

OF OFFENSES ON BOARD OF VESSELS, STEAMBOATS AND RAILROAD CARS

Art.		Art.
1322.	Burglarious entry on board of vessel.	1325.	Rules, etc., of burglary applicable.
1323.	By actual breaking, in day time.	1326.	Theft by a servant on board punishable as such.
1324.	Other offense committed after entry punishable.

Article 1322. [851] Burglarious entry on board of vessel.—If any person, by any of the means enumerated in article 1303, shall at night enter any vessel, steamboat or railroad car, with intent to commit a felony or theft, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years.

See notes under following article.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 631a.

Art. 1323. [852] By actual breaking in daytime.—If any person shall, by breaking, enter a vessel, steamboat or railroad car in the daytime, with intent to commit a felony or theft, he shall be punished as prescribed in the preceding article.

Breaking as element of offense.—Whether the entry be by day or night there must be a breaking. If in the daytime the breaking must be an actual breaking applied to the building. Newman v. State, 55 App. 273, 116 S. W. 577.

Attempt.—The attempt to break and enter a railroad car is no offense under our law. Summers v. State, 49 App. 90, 90 S. W. 310.

Indictment.—See Hamilton v. State, 26 App. 206, 9 S. W. 687.

An indictment charging defendant with breaking and entering a railroad car occupied by K., with intent to steal the property of K. and H., is not defective because it does not allege the ownership of the car, or the right in which K. was occupying it. Pyland v. State, 33 App. 382, 26 S. W. 621.

Where it appears that the person named in the indictment as the owner of and in possession of the stolen goods had the exclusive control thereof, it is immaterial whether he was a general or special owner. Smith v. State, 34 App. 124, 29 S. W. 775.

Evidence.—Opinion, hearsay and best evidence, see notes under C. C. P., art. 783.

See Butler v. State, 52 App. 528, 107 S. W. 840; Hamilton v. State, 26 App. 206, 9 S. W. 687.

Where there were missed from a broken freight car, a lawn mower and a box of poultry food, two handles of the lawn mower being left in its broken box, evidence that a like box of food and lawn mower without handles, with other goods corresponding with goods missed from other cars, were found hidden on defendant's premises, was enough to show that the car had been entered, and the goods found taken therefrom. Dawson v. State, 25 S. W. 21, 32 App. 535, 40 Am. St. Rep. 791.

Where defendant is charged with burglarizing a car with intent to steal the property of certain persons, it is not error to permit proof of the character and ownership of the stolen property. Pyland v. State, 33 App. 382, 26 S. W. 621.

On trial of a person charged with breaking and entering a railroad car occupied by K., it was not error to permit the state to show want of consent of K., and that he was in control of the car at the time of the burglary. Pyland v. State, 33 App. 382, 26 S. W. 621.

In a prosecution for burglary of a freight car, evidence held to warrant a conviction. McDonald v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1061.

In a prosecution for burglary of a freight car, evidence held to warrant a finding that a certain conductor was in control and occupancy thereof at the time of the offense, as alleged in the indictment. McDonald v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1061.

It is not sufficient to convict defendant of burglary of a car, from which whisky of a certain brand was taken, that two months later, in a warehouse near there, a key to which he had, and to which he had to go for grain, he was seen drinking whisky of that brand, which he got from under the floor; it not being identified as the whisky taken from the car, and he testifying without contradiction that a certain person told him whisky was there, and to help himself. Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 309.

Instructions.—In a prosecution for burglary by entering a railroad car, where it appeared that accused, when found in the car, stated that he had reported the car as being open, and had been instructed by his foreman, S., to nail it up, and that he had gone in to see whether anything had been taken, and there was no pretense or claim that he had gone into the car at the direction of S., it was error to instruct that, if the jury was not satisfied by the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that accused's claim that he was in the car under the direction of S. when found there by witnesses named was untrue, they should acquit, since the charge was on a vital point, and was inapt, if not inaccurate, in submitting that phase of accused's case. Butler v. State, 107 S. W. 840, 52 App. 528.

New trial.—See notes to C. C. P. art. 837.

Art. 1324. [853] Other offenses committed after entry punishable.—If a vessel, steamboat or railroad car be entered in such manner as that the entry, if made in a house, would be burglary, and the person so entering shall commit theft or any other offense after entry, he shall be punished for the offense defined in article 851, and also for whatever other offense he may so commit.

See art. 1318, note.

Art. 1325. [854] Rules, etc., of burglary applicable.—The definitions, rules and explanations of terms in the preceding chapter are applicable to such terms in this chapter; and the rules prescribed in articles 1303, 1304, 1305, 1306 and 1307 of the preceding chapter shall also apply to similar cases on board of a vessel, steamboat or railroad car.

Indictment.—The rule that in charging burglary of a house it is sufficient to allege that it was done burglariously and without the consent of the occupant, without alleging the ownership or the right in which such occupant is occupying and holding is, under this article, applicable to burglary of a railroad car. Pyland v. State, 33 App. 382, 26 S. W. 621.

Art. 1326. [855] Theft by a servant on board punishable as such.—A theft on board a steamboat, vessel or railroad car, committed by a servant or employé, except in cases where there has been an actual breaking in, is punishable simply as theft.

CHAPTER EIGHT

OF ROBBERY

Art. 1327. "Robbery" defined and punished.	Art. 1328. Fraudulent acquisition of property by threats.
---	--

Article 1327. [856] "Robbery" defined and punished.—If any person by assault or violence or by putting in fear of life or bodily injury shall fraudulently take from the person or possession of another any property with intent to appropriate the same to his own use, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for life, or for a term of not less than five years; and, when a firearm or other deadly weapon is used or exhibited in the commission of the offense, the punishment shall be death, or by confinement in the penitentiary for any term not less than five years. [Act April 12, 1883, pp. 80–81; amend. 1895, p. 89.]

Explanatory.—The preceding article was article 743 of the original Code, and read as follows:

"Art. 743. If any person, by assault or by violence, and putting in fear of life or bodily injury, shall fraudulently take from the person of another any property, with intent to appropriate the same to his own use, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary, for a term not less than two, nor more than ten years."

It was amended by Act of November 12, 1866, and as then amended was adopted in the Revised Code (1879) as follows:

Art. 722. If any person by assault, or by violence and putting in fear of life or bodily injury, shall fraudulently take from the person or possession of another, any property, with intent to appropriate the same to his own use, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than ten years."

And thus the article remained until amended by the Act of April 12, 1883, after which it was the same as article 856 down to and including the first penal clause, and then read as follows: "When the offense is committed by two or more persons acting together, and a fire-arm or other deadly weapon is used or exhibited by either of them in the commission of the offense the person or persons so using or exhibiting the fire-arm or other deadly weapon shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for life or for a term not less than five years."

1. Nature and elements of offense.—It must be proved that the property taken belonged to some other person than the defendant. A party cannot be guilty of robbery in taking his own property, or property which he bona fide believes to belong to him. Smedly v. State, 30 Tex. 214; Barnes v. State, 9 App. 128.

The effect of the amendment of February 12, 1883, of article 722 (Code 1879) is to prescribe three separate, distinct, and independent modes in which the offense of robbery may be committed: 1, by assault; 2, by violence; 3, by putting in fear of life, or bodily injury. Violence, without the concurrence of either one of the others, is a mode in which the offense may be committed. Bond v. State, 20 App. 421; Leonard v. State, Id. 422.

Robbery by use of firearms is a capital felony. Burries v. State, 36 App. 13, 35 S. W. 164.

The indictment charged a robbery by means of assault, violence, and putting in fear. The proof shows that the defendant, at night, with his hat pulled down and his collar turned up, met the injured party and summoned him to throw up his hands, stating that he was an officer of the law and would arrest the injured party for being drunk and noisy; that the injured party (who testified that he was much alarmed) threw up his hands, and the defendant then took a roll of money from the pocket of the said injured party. Held, that the proof sustains an indictment for robbery by putting in fear, wherefore the trial court did not err in refusing a requested charge to the effect that the jury should acquit the defendant if they believed that he obtained the money by so personating an officer that the injured party, believing him to be an officer, permitted him to take the money. McCormick v. State, 26 App. 678, 9 S. W. 277.

Where money lost by defendant to the prosecutor in a gambling game, had been delivered to the prosecutor under the rules of the game without protest from defendant, the subsequent retaking of the money by defendant at the point of a pistol, was robbery. Blain v. State, 34 App. 417, 31 S. W. 368.

Robbery may be committed by assault as well as by putting in fear. Pendy v. State, 34 App. 643, 31 S. W. 647.

When no fear is excited prior to the robbery, there must, to constitute the crime, have been force or violence. Johnson v. State, 35 App. 140, 32 S. W. 537.

Property taken from a house in which the owner lived is taken from her possession, although it belonged to her son, and it is not necessary to prove want of the son's consent. Williams v. State, 37 App. 147, 38 S. W. 999.

Party cannot retake by force money that he has willingly delivered, on the ground that the money belonged to him. Carroll v. State, 42 App. 30, 57 S. W. 100.

Where, after making an arrest and taking the prisoner to jail, the officers, without asking his consent to be searched, rudely backed him against the wall and held his hands up, while one of them extracted money from his pocket, sufficient force was used to constitute robbery. Tones v. State, 48 App. 363, 88 S. W. 217, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1024, 122 Am. St. Rep. 759, 13 Ann. Cas. 455.

Conceding that officers making an arrest may search the prisoner and take valuables from him for the purpose of keeping them safely until he is enlarged, yet if they had the intent, at the time of finding valuables or money on him, to take the same, and used force to make the search, their right of search is not available to defeat a prosecution for robbery. Tones v. State, 48 App. 363, 88 S. W. 217, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1024, 122 Am. St. Rep. 759, 13 Ann. Cas. 455.

Officers who make a rightful arrest, and subsequently use violence and rob the party arrested, are not exonerated on account of the legality of the alleged arrest. Tones v. State, 48 App. 363, 88 S. W. 217, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1024, 122 Am. St. Rep. 759, 13 Ann. Cas. 455.

Where prosecutor, in anticipation of being robbed, carried marked money, in order to detect the robber, this was not such consent as absolved defendant from criminality. Tones v. State, 48 App. 363, 88 S. W. 217, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1024, 122 Am. St. Rep. 759, 13 Ann. Cas. 455.

It is not robbery for one to forcibly compel another to give up to him money which the former believes to belong to him. To constitute robbery the taker must have a fraudulent intent, and he must take another's property and not his own. Glenn v. State, 49 App. 349, 92 S. W. 806, 13 Ann. Cas. 774.

Where defendant leveled a pistol at prosecutor, and compelled him to draw a $10 bill from his pocket, whereupon defendant had the bill changed, and returned $2 to prosecutor, defendant was guilty of robbery, notwithstanding prosecutor owed defendant $$ for services, and defendant's acts were merely for the purpose of collecting his debt. Fannin v. State, 51 App. 41, 100 S. W. 916, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 744, 123 Am. St. Rep. 874.

A person was guilty of robbery by force where he took money from the prosecutor's pocket while the prosecutor was vomiting, and in a measure helpless, but nevertheless protested against the taking of the money and sought to prevent it. Williams v. State, 51 App. 361, 102 S. W. 1134, 123 Am. St. Rep. 884.

Where a person orders others to hold up their hands, and through fear of life they do so, and he goes through their pockets and takes money, he is guilty of robbery. Keys v. State, 60 App. 279, 131 S. W. 1068.

That a robber evidently intended to obtain money placed in the victim's coat the day before, and, taking the coat, carried it a short distance and threw it away, does not make the offense any less robbery. Brown v. State, 61 App. 334, 136 S. W. 265.

To constitute robbery, the taking need not be "without the consent of the owner and fraudulently done"; a taking by putting in fear of life or bodily injury being sufficient. Brown v. State, 61 App. 334, 136 S. W. 265.

Under article 1327, robbery may be committed by assault, by violence, by putting in fear of life, or by putting in fear of bodily injury. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 593.

Under article 1327, there are three modes in which the offense may be committed—by assault, by violence, and by putting in fear of life or bodily injury; each being a distinct mode of itself, whether connected and accompanied by either of the other two modes or not. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 186.

If accused had in fact won the money claimed to have been taken by him by robbery at the time the banker in a game of chance took the money and placed it in "the game," he would not be guilty of robbery if he picked the money up from the table and went off with it, even if the other elements of robbery were present. Palmer v. State, 71 App. 335, 160 S. W. 349.

If the party losing at cards voluntarily delivers the money lost to the winner's actual possession, the winner owns the money, so that the forcible taking of it from his possession may constitute robbery. Coker v. State, 71 App. 504, 160 S. W. 366.

2. Distinguished from theft.—The taking of property from the person by force and violence, is robbery instead of theft from the person. Gallagher v. State, 34 App. 306, 30 S. W. 557.

Snatching money from another's hand does not constitute robbery but would seem to be theft from the person. Johnson v. State, 35 App. 140, 32 S. W. 537.

3. Receiving money taken as offense.—It is no offense to receive property taken in robbery as it is in theft. Parker v. State, 40 App. 123, 49 S. W. 80.

Where the indictment charges several as principals in the commission of the offense, it need not allege that they "acted together" in the commission of the offense, or that they conspired together to commit it. Bell v. State, 1 App. 598.

It must be shown by appropriate averment that the property taken belonged to some person other than the accused, or that the person deprived of its possession was entitled thereto as against the accused. Barnes v. State, 9 App. 128; Smedly v. State, 30 Tex. 214. An indictment for this offense will not support a conviction for an assault with intent to murder. Munson v. State, 21 App. 329, 17 S. W. 251.

Robbery is simply aggravated larceny, and the same particularity should be observed in describing the kind of property as is required in indictments for theft. Winston v. State, 9 App. 143.

An essential element in the offense of robbery is, that the property was taken with the intent on the part of the taker to appropriate it to his own use, and an allegation of such intent is indispensable to the sufficiency of an indictment for this offense. Morris v. State, 13 App. 65. Under article 1327 as it read before last being amended, it was held that an indictment which charged that the robbery was perpetrated by putting the party robbed in fear of his life, etc., but did not allege that the putting in fear was accomplished by violence, was insufficient. Kimble v. State, 12 App. 420. See, also, Williams v. State, Id. 240. Under the article as it now is, such an indictment would be sufficient, the "putting in fear," etc., being of itself sufficient, without violence, to constitute a means of committing the offense. Bond v. State, 20 App. 421; Leonard v. State, Id. 422. It is not necessary to allege the value of the property taken or involved in the robbery. Williams v. State, 10 App. 8; Winston v. State, 9 App. 143. The indictment must charge an assault, or violence upon the person, and must be so certain as to the party against whom the offense was committed as to enable the defendant to understand who that party is. Parker v. State, 9 App. 251.

An indictment under article 1327 which substantially pursues the common law precedents for the offense of robbery, will be sufficient. Trimble v. State, 16 App. 115; Burns v. State, 12 App. 269. See the last cited case for an indictment held good, and the first cited case for an indictment held bad. See, also, Reardon v. State, 4 App. 602.

An indictment which did not allege that the party alleged to have been robbed was the party assaulted or put in fear of life or bodily injury, was insufficient. Trimble v. State, 16 App. 115.

It is a matter of substance that the possession of the property taken be properly alleged; held, that the use of the word "possession" for "possession" vitiated the indictment. Evans v. State, 34 App. 110, 29 S. W. 266.

The indictment charged that defendant did attempt to fraudulently take, etc.; held, that the word "attempt" as there used is equal to "intent," and the indictment is sufficient. Atkinson v. State, 34 App. 424, 30 S. W. 1064.

The indictment charged that the money taken was twenty dollars current money of the United States, a better description of which the grand jurors cannot give, etc. The evidence showed the money to be two ten and one five dollar bills; held, no variance. Harris v. State, 34 App. 497, 31 S. W. 382.

Indictment need not allege that the property taken was carried away. Thompson v. State, 35 App. 511, 34 S. W. 629.

The indictment alleged the property belonged to Mrs. B., the proof showed that the property belonged to a son of Mrs. B., but the son was at that time away from home and the property was in Mrs. B.'s possession; held, the indictment was sufficient. Williams and Gordon v. State, 37 App. 147, 38 S. W. 999.

Defendant was convicted in Graysen county for bringing property, acquired by robbery in the Chickasaw Nation, Ind. Ter., into this State, the indictment charged that defendant with violence took from the possession, etc.; held, insufficient. Smith v. State, 37 App. 342, 39 S. W. 933.

Two distinct offenses being defined in this article, if an indictment charges both offenses in the same count, it is duplicitous and bad. Murdock v. State, 52 App. 262, 106 S. W. 375.

See this case for indictment held to be good under this article. Flannagan v. State, 55 App. 162, 116 S. W. 55.

It is unnecessary that an indictment allege that the property was taken against the person's will, where it alleged that it was acquired by assault and violence, and by putting in fear of bodily injury, etc. Chancey v. State, 58 App. 54, 124 S. W. 426.

Under article 1327 it is unnecessary that an indictment allege that the property was taken against the person's will, where it alleged that it was acquired by assault and violence, and by putting in fear of bodily injury, etc. Chancey v. State, 58 App. 54, 124 S. W. 426.

An indictment for robbery under article 1327, which alleges that defendant unlawfully assaulted a person named, and by such assault, and by violence, and by putting such person in fear of life or bodily injury, and by using or exhibiting a pistol, fraudulently took from such person's possession without his consent certain described money, charges only the single offense of robbery by firearms, and is not duplicitous as charging both a capital and common felony. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 593.

An indictment under article 1327 alleged that accused, "with force and arms" by unlawfully using a firearm, fraudulently took personal property from the owner without his consent and with intent to appropriate the same to his own use. Held in view of article 1327 and C. C. P. art. 460, that "violence" was a general term including all sorts of force, synonymous with physical "force," and used interchangeably in relation to assault; that "violently" meant by or with "force"; that "violent" meant impelled with "force"; and hence that the term "with force and arms" sufficiently alleged that the robbery was effected by "violence" as used in the statute. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 186.

An indictment for robbery, under article 1327, must allege that the robbery was accomplished by means of an assault, or by violence, or by putting in fear of life or bodily injury, and, if it is sought to charge the graver grade of the offense, must allege also that a firearm or other deadly weapon was used in its commission. Robinson v. State (Cr. App.) 149 S. W. 186.

In order to authorize the jury to assess the death penalty for robbery, the indictment must allege that the robbery was committed by exhibiting firearms or deadly weapons. Dosh v. State, 72 App. 239, 161 S. W. 979.

Under Pen. Code 1911, art. 1327, defining "robbery" and increasing the punishment, if, in making the assault, a firearm or deadly weapon is used, an indictment that defendant did make an assault on J. S., and by said assault and by violence, and putting in fear of life by the use of firearms, did fraudulently take from S. certain property, charges but one offense—robbery by the use of firearms. Bell v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 966.

8. — Proof and variance.—Where an indictment charged the taking of certain coins and bills, "current money of the United States of America," such description, though unnecessary, must be proved. Coffelt v. State, 27 App. 608, 11 S. W. 639, 11 Am. St. Rep. 205; Early v. State, 113 S. W. 1036, 56 App. 61.

An indictment which charges the defendant as a principal will not warrant his conviction as an accessory. Golden v. State, 18 App. 637.

An indictment for robbery will not support a conviction of assault with intent to murder. Munson v. State, 21 App. 329, 17 S. W. 251.

Proof that the injured person delivered the money to defendant on his demanding the same, at the muzzle of a cocked pistol, supports the allegation that defendant "took" the money; and Pen. Code Tex. art. 1327 and not article 1328, applies. Coffelt v. State, 27 App. 608, 11 S. W. 639, 11 Am. St. Rep. 205.

Where the indictment charges taking of paper money and evidence shows the money was silver, the variance is fatal. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 221.

But where indictment charged the taking of twenty dollars and the proof showed the taking of fifteen dollars, there is no variance. Harris v. State, 34 App. 497, 31 S. W. 382. Where the indictment charged robbery by threats of violence, and the evidence showed actual violence used, there is no variance. Williams v. State, 34 App. 523, 31 S. W. 405.

Where indictment charges robbery by assault and putting in fear of life, State can prove that firearms were used. There is no variance. Carroll v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 100.

In a prosecution for ordinary robbery by assault, defendant cannot complain of a conviction therefor on the ground that the evidence shows that, if he committed a robbery, he used a pistol, making him guilty of a higher grade of offense. Wyatt v. State, 114 S. W. 812, 55 App. 73.

Under an indictment charging robbery by an assault and violence by putting the prosecutor in fear of life and bodily injury, evidence that defendant used a pistol as a bludgeon does not constitute a variance. Wyatt v. State, 58 App. 115, 124 S. W. 929, 137 Am. St. Rep. 926.

In a robbery trial there is no fatal variance between a charge that something over $11 was taken, and proof that it was $10 and some cents. Robinson v. State, 62 App. 645, 138 S. W. 704.

Though an indictment for robbery alleged that $74 in the form of $10 bills, $5 bills, and $2 bills were taken from prosecutor, it is sufficient to prove the taking of any part of the money. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 143 S. W. 621.

Where an indictment for robbery alleged that C. was robbed of $10, a fact that the proof showed that he was robbed of $14 was not a variance. Bracher v. State, 72 App. 198, 161 S. W. 124.

The variance between an indictment for robbery alleging that accused robbed prosecutor of one 10-cent piece, and the proof of the robbery of two 5-cent pieces, is fatal. McCaskey v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 338.

A charge that one robbed another of "lawful money of the United States" is sustained by proof that the accused took "dollars" in money. Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 968.

Remote evidence tending to identify the defendant as the perpetrator of the robbery, is admissible. Reardon v. State, 4 App. 602.

The injured party may testify that he surrendered the property because he believed he would be shot if he did not. Dill v. State, 6 App. 113.

Impleaded alone under article 1327, defendant objected to proof showing that he acted in concert with another. Objection properly overruled. Farris v. State, 26 App. 105, 9 S. W. 487.

Evidence that the sheriff had an execution against defendant was in this case held admissible to show motive. Armstrong v. State, 34 App. 248, 30 S. W. 235.

A State's witness, over defendant's objection, testified that the reason he noticed the parties charged with the robbery at his saloon was that some negroes bought a can of beer and got into a squabble over it, and while they were squabbling he noticed defendant drink some of the beer; held, under the circumstances of this case the evidence was admissible. Gallagher v. State, 34 App. 302, 30 S. W. 558.

Defendant objected to the testimony of certain witnesses, who identified him soon after the robbery was committed, as being the person whom they had seen near the place immediately before the commission of the offense, because he claimed he was taken before them by the sheriff and thereby forced to make evidence against himself. Inasmuch as the evidence showed that he went before the sheriff voluntarily; held, properly admitted. Land v. State, 34 App. 330, 30 S. W. 788.

Evidence that the money defendant was charged with taking had been previously won from him on a bet, is inadmissible. Blain v. State, 34 App. 448, 31 S. W. 368.

Where defendant was charged with having a pistol when he committed the offense, and denied ever having carried a pistol, it is competent to prove that he had a pistol after the robbery. Williams v. State, 34 App. 523, 31 S. W. 405.

The main State witness had testified that defendant was the person who robbed him; defendant had shown contradictory statements theretofore made by such witness; held, the State had a right to show that said witness stated soon after the commission of the offense that defendant was the person who robbed him. Kirk v. State, 35 App. 224, 32 S. W. 1045.

Testimony of a witness that on the day the robbery was committed he saw two men about six hundred yards away in a pasture, and that one of them was a tall man and the other a short man, is admissible with other circumstances to show that defendant and his accomplice, one of whom was tall and the other short, were in the vicinity. Angley v. State, 35 App. 427, 34 S. W. 116.

When tracks of two persons are discovered, one set made with number 9 and the other number 7 shoes, and the track made by one of the number 7 shoes has a peculiar mark showing an indentation in the sole, and there is evidence that defendant and another committed the offense and that defendant wore number 9 shoes and his accomplice number 7, evidence on the trial of defendant that his accomplice when arrested had on a shoe with a worn place in the sole corresponding to the mark in the track, is admissible. Id.

Where it is proved that at the time of a robbery one of two assailants had a red handkerchief, evidence is admissible, on the trial of defendant, to show that his accomplice when arrested had a red handkerchief in his pocket. Angley v. State, 35 App. 427, 34 S. W. 116.

Evidence that others had been seen near where the robbery was committed held, too remote. Thompson v. State, 35 App. 511, 34 S. W. 629.

Evidence that buried money was identified by an accomplice of defendant held sufficient to admit the money in evidence. Id.

Where a witness, at the time of the robbery, identified defendants, but failed thereafter, when he had an opportunity to do so, evidence that his reason for not identifying them was fear of his personal safety is admissible to explain conduct. Thompson v. State, 35 App. 511, 34 S. W. 629.

It was competent for the state to prove by the sheriff that when he heard of the crime he sent men to the hotels to see who came in, and to defendant's home, with instructions to watch, and that on the same night, prior to the arrest, he began to look for defendant, and the next morning went to the scene of the robbery to see if he could find defendant's pistol handle. Kirk v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 440.

It was not error to permit a witness to testify that, about 30 minutes after defendant and his co-conspirators had borrowed a gun of the witness, they passed near his residence, and that, while he was not definitely certain as to the identity of the parties as being the same who borrowed his gun, he took them to be the same parties. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 739.

When a robbery was committed by several parties, it is admissible to prove that when one of the parties was arrested part of the stolen property was in his possession, although defendant was not present when such property was found. Wyatt v. State, 38 App. 256, 42 S. W. 598.

On trial of two joint defendants for robbery, one of them, after going into the evidence, withdrew his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty. Afterwards his attorney was placed on the stand, and, over the other defendant's objection, was allowed to testify that he advised his client to plead guilty because he saw no defense for him, and had no hope of winning the case; held, error. Underwood v. State, 39 App. 409, 46 S. W. 245.

A robbery by one holding a knife over the victim while he took his money, another standing by pointing a pistol at the person robbed and his wife during such time, constitutes an entire transaction, and may be proved under an indictment for robbery by the use of firearms. Underwood v. State, 39 App. 409, 46 S. W. 245.

Evidence that other parties than defendant were placed in such relation to prosecutor that they might have been the guilty parties was admissible. Chancey v. State, 50 App. 85, 96 S. W. 12.

Where it appears, that defendant left his grips at his boarding house, evidence is admissible that they were afterwards surrendered to defendant's attorney, though defendant was not present, and there was no evidence that defendant directed such surrender. Tabor v. State, 52 App. 387, 107 S. W. 1116.

In a prosecution for robbery committed on a railroad train, the conductor's pass issued to defendant is admissible in evidence. Tabor v. State, 52 App. 387, 107 S. W. 1116.

On a trial for robbery in compelling the prosecutor to draw money from a bank and give the same to defendant, evidence is admissible that, just before going to the bank, defendant had, by putting the prosecutor in fear, taken a sum of money from him, and that defendant continued in control of the prosecutor until after the money was procured from the bank. Harris v. State, 55 App. 469, 117 S. W. 839.

Where the state relied on circumstantial evidence in a trial for robbery, it could show that accused on seeing the victim draw money from a bank the day before the robbery said, "Cap, that looks mighty good." Brown v. State, 61 App. 334, 136 S. W. 265.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rob, testimony by the prosecuting witness that he had his money in his shoe is admissible, where for that reason his assailants did not find it when they searched him. Chafino v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 546.

In a prosecution for robbery, evidence that defendant had no money prior to the date of the alleged robbery, but had money the day following, and paid back a loan, was admissible. Perry v. State (Cr. App.) 155 S. W. 263.

In a prosecution for robbery occurring during an assault of prosecutor under an alleged conspiracy in a place he was attempting to get evidence against as selling intoxicating liquors contrary to law, the state may show that defendant, the proprietor of the place, had a United States internal revenue license, and explained that he got it to avoid prosecution by the federal authorities. Phillips v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1004.

Where, on a trial for robbery, the state showed that accused shot prosecutor, and struck him over the head with a gun, and took a dog in the possession of prosecutor, and compelled prosecutor through threats and violence to pay him money, and accused denied that he struck prosecutor, testimony of a witness that he saw a man strike prosecutor, and the testimony of a physician that prosecutor had bruises on his chin made with a blunt instrument, and that his scalp had a "pulp appearance" and looked like it was lacerated by some blunt instrument, was proper rebuttal testimony. Raleigh v. State (Cr. App.) 163 S. W. 1050.

In a prosecution for robbery in being compelled by defendant and others to furnish money to buy bottles of whisky, where the evidence of the prosecuting witness and his reputation for truth and veracity were attacked, whisky bottles picked up at the place of the robbery were properly admitted in evidence. Bruce v. State (Cr. App.) 173 S. W. 301.

11. Other offenses as evidence.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 783.

12. Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence held to sustain a conviction of robbery. Robinson v. State, 62 App. 645, 138 S. W. 704; Fields v. State, 41 Tex. 25; Odle v. State, 13 App. 612; Makinson v. State, 16 App. 133; Bonn v. State, 20 App. 421; Williams v. State, 37 App. 147, 38 S. W. 999; Tabor v. State (Cr. App.) 107 S. W. 1116; Beard v. State, 44 App. 402; 71 S. W. 960; Jackson v. State, 60 App. 273, 131 S. W. 1076; Spiller v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 1164; Hendricks v. State, 72 App. 75, 160 S. W. 1190; Phillips v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 1004; Glasper v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 585; Contra, Kimble v. State, 12 App. 429; Barnett v. State, 17 App. 191; Golden v. State, 18 App. 637; Menear v. State, 30 App. 475, 17 S. W. 1082; Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 37 S. W. 739; Davis v. State, 37 App. 47, 38 S. W. 792, 66 Am. St. Rep. 791.

The mere presence of the accused at the robbery will not be sufficient evidence to warrant his conviction of the offense. Ring v. State, 42 Tex. 282.

Evidence supports conviction over defense of coercion. Ashworth v. State, 31 App. 419, 20 S. W. 982.

The prosecuting witness referred to the money taken as "my money" and "money in bills." An accomplice testified: "We got his money from him;" held, sufficient to support the charge of taking a certain number of dollars which passed current as money of the United States. Colter v. State, 37 App. 284, 39 S. W. 579.

Testimony of one robbed in the dark that judging from the man's size and voice, he was of the opinion that defendant was the guilty party, held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Walker v. State, 50 App. 221, 96 S. W. 35.

Evidence in a prosecution for robbery with firearms held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 593.

In a prosecution for robbery, evidence held to justify a conviction, notwithstanding defendant's evidence of alibi. Bracher v. State, 72 App. 198, 161 S. W. 124.

Evidence held insufficient to establish the identity of the person robbed with the person named in the indictment as having been robbed. Sparks v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 968.

In a prosecution for robbery by the use of firearms, where defendant repossessed himself of property taken from him under a writ of sequestration, evidence held to justify a finding that defendant knew that the person robbed was a constable and had such writ. Bell v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 966.

13. Questions for jury.—Question as to whether the money was obtained by assault and violence, or by putting witness in fear of bodily injury was properly submitted to the jury. Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 26 S. W. 1081.

In a prosecution for robbery charged to have been committed by "violence" and also by putting "in fear of life or bodily injury," evidence held to make both of such questions issues for the jury. Palmer v. State, 71 App. 335, 160 S. W. 349.

Harmless error in instructions, see C. C. P., art. 743 and notes.

When the defense is alibi, and the evidence conflicting, a charge that "if the accused did commit the robbery as charged in the indictment, or participated in the same," is not materially erroneous. Reardon v. State, 4 App. 602.

A charge which incorrectly instructs the jury as to the penalty for the offense is fundamental error, although such instruction be favorable to the defendant. Thus, where the offense was committed, after the last amendment of article 1327, and the court instructed the jury to assess the penalty prescribed by said article before it was amended, the error was held to be fundamental. Gardenhire v. State, 18 App. 565; Turner v. State, 17 App. 587. It was held error to charge the jury under an indictment for robbery that they might convict the defendant of an assault with intent to murder. Munson v. State, 21 App. 329, 17 S. W. 251. Where the defense was an alibi, and the evidence was conflicting, it was held not to be material error to charge "if the accused did commit the robbery as charged in the indictment, or participated in the same, you will find him guilty," etc. Reardon v. State, 4 App. 602; Williams v. State, 25 App. 76, 7 S. W. 661; Jenkins v. State, 28 App. 86, 12 S. W. 411; Graham v. State, 29 App. 31, 13 S. W. 1013. Where the court charged the jury to convict if they believed that defendant accomplished his crime by putting the injured party in fear of his life or "serious" bodily injury, held, if the charge was erroneous it was beneficial to defendant, and he could not complain. Green v. State, 32 App. 298, 22 S. W. 1094. Where the issue of intent has been fairly submitted to the jury and the evidence conflicting, verdict will not be disturbed. Rogers v. State, 32 App. 447, 24 S. W. 282. Where it is not averred that deadly weapons were used in the commission of the offense, it is error for the court to charge the jury in relation to the use of deadly weapons. Jackson v. State, 33 App. 281, 26 S. W. 194, 622, 47 Am. St. Rep. 30. Where force is used the court should charge the law of robbery, and not theft from the person. Gallagher v. State, 34 App. 302, 30 S. W. 558.

The jury were instructed that the punishment was confinement in the penitentiary for life, or not less than five years; that where a person not over 16 years old is convicted of a felony, and the punishment is five years or less, the judgment should be confinement in the state reformatory during his sentence; and if, therefore, they found defendant guilty, and not over 16, they should fix his punishment at confinement in the reformatory for life, or not less than five years. Held, that such instructions, being contradictory, were erroneous. Green v. State, 32 App. 298, 22 S. W. 1094.

Where an indictment for robbery was insufficient as to the allegation that the property was taken from the possession of prosecutor, it was reversible error to charge that, if defendant took the property from prosecutor's "person or possession," the jury should find him guilty. Evans v. State, 34 App. 110, 29 S. W. 266.

The fact that the indictment did not charge defendant with being an accomplice in a joint robbery did not render a charge applicable to principals improper. Gallagher v. State, 34 App. 306, 30 S. W. 557.

Where the theory of the defense was that defendant's companion assaulted prosecutor, that defendant merely intervened to prevent his companion from injuring the prosecutor, and that he had no knowledge of or part in the robbery, defendant was entitled to a charge that, if defendant grabbed prosecutor, or interfered to prevent an assault being made on prosecutor, and that alone was his intent, or if the jury had a reasonable doubt as to that being his intent, then they should find him not guilty. Bollen v. State, 48 App. 70, 86 S. W. 1025.

On a prosecution for robbery by an assault, where the court in its charge copied the statute on assault, the charge was sufficient without copying the statute defining assault and battery. Bollen v. State, 48 App. 70, 86 S. W. 1025.

The defendant was entitled to a charge that the taking of the money must be fraudulent, in the application of the law to the facts, though the statute on assault to rob was copied in the charge. Bollen v. State, 48 App. 70, 86 S. W. 1025.

Where prosecutor claimed that defendant took the money from his pocket by force while defendant claimed that prosecutor gave him the money for safe-keeping, it was not necessary to charge that a mere snatching of the money from the prosecutor did not constitute the offense. Williams v. State, 51 App. 361, 102 S. W. 1134, 123 Am. St. Rep. 884.

Where defendant was arrested 20 days after the robbery, and a package of money was then found on his person, which was identified as one taken at the time, the failure of the court to instruct that such possession was not so recent as would authorize the jury to consider it a circumstance against defendant was proper; the instruction on circumstantial evidence being sufficient. Tabor v. State, 52 App. 387, 107 S. W. 1116.

Where the alleged robbery grew out of a game of cards on which the money taken was bet and it was sharply contested as to which party was entitled to the money, it was error to refuse to charge that if accused took the money under an honest claim of right believing it was his property, the jury should acquit. Carr v. State, 55 App. 352, 116 S. W. 591.

An instruction held not objectionable as failing to require an acquittal unless the jury believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the property was taken with intent to appropriate it to defendant's benefit. Walling v. State, 55 App. 254, 116 S. W. 813.

In a prosecution for robbery, a requested charge that the term "lawful money" includes legal tender coin, or legal tender treasury notes of the United States, but excludes United States treasury warrants, bank bills, though they pass as current, and gold certificates, was properly refused as misstating the law. Jackson v. State, 60 App. 273, 131 S. W. 1076.

Where accused was charged with putting another in fear of his life by using a gun and fraudulently taking his coat from him, and the evidence showed that some one made the victim remove his coat and leave it on the ground, it was not error to refuse to instruct that if accused held the victim up with a gun, and caused him to remove and leave his coat, intending to steal money believed to be in the coat, he should be acquitted. Brown v. State, 61 App. 334, 136 S. W. 265.

It was not error to instruct that, if one by assault, violence, or putting in fear of life or bodily injury fraudulently takes from another any property with intent to appropriate it to his own use, he is guilty of robbery, and that, when a firearm is exhibited in committing the offense, the punishment must be death or imprisonment for not less than five years. Brown v. State, 61 App. 334, 136 S. W. 265.

In a prosecution for robbery with firearms, where the state showed that, after a game of cards, defendant compelled the state's principal witness to hand back money he had won in the game, a charge that if defendant presented a pistol at or toward the state's witness, and took from his possession the money described in the indictment without his consent, but did not intend to permanently appropriate it, or, if there was a reasonable doubt as to such intention, defendant should be acquitted, was not objectionable as authorizing a conviction, though defendant afterwards intended to repay the state's witness. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 593.

In a prosecution for robbery, where the indictment charged that accused robbed two companions, and evidence of both robberies was admitted, the charge properly required the jury to believe that accused robbed both of the companions of the property described before a verdict of guilty should be rendered. Compton v. State (Cr. App.) 148 S. W. 580.

Where, in a prosecution for robbery, the evidence without dispute showed that, if the defendant committed the offense at all, it was accompanied by assault, violence, and putting complainant in fear by pointing a revolver at him, defendant was not entitled to reversal of a conviction because an instruction defining the offense erroneously failed to require as an element thereof that the robbery must have been accompanied by assault, or putting the person robbed in fear of his life, or of bodily injury, as required by article 1327. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 150 S. W. 623.

An instruction in a robbery case that if accused assaulted another, and then and there by violence and putting in fear the said other did fraudulently take certain money from his possession and person, he would be guilty was not objectionable for failure to add "of life or bodily injury," where the indictment also charged that the robbery was committed by "violence"; it not being necessary, where violence was charged, to also instruct with reference to putting "in fear of life or bodily injury." Palmer v. State, 71 App. 335, 160 S. W. 349.

An instruction in a prosecution for robbery that if accused unlawfully made an assault upon another, and by putting him in fear of life or bodily injury did then and there fraudulently take from his person $50 in money, or any other sum, with intent to appropriate it to his own use, he would be guilty as charged, was correct. Palmer v. State, 71 App. 335, 160 S. W. 349.

An instruction charging the statute was improper for using the word "or" instead of the word "and," in stating the penalty when a firearm is used or exhibited. Coker v. State, 71 App. 504, 160 S. W. 366.

Where, in a prosecution for robbery by firearms, it appeared that the accused had previously lost the money at cards, it was improper to charge that, if accused retok the money under an honest claim of right, believing it to be his property, the jury should acquit. Coker v. State, 71 App. 504, 160 S. W. 366.

In a prosecution for robbery, it was proper for the court to define the word "wilful" and require that the jury find that the robbery was unlawful and wilfully committed, though the statute defining the offense does not in terms require that the robbery be wilfully done. Madrid v. State, 71 App. 420, 161 S. W. 93.

In a prosecution for robbery, where the evidence showed that the complaining witness had prevented his wife from making further loans and gifts to accused, who was her lover, a charge on the want of motive predicated on the ground that accused could obtain desired funds from the woman, was properly refused. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 178 S. W. 345.

16. Responsiveness of verdict.—A verdict that the jury find defendant "guilty of robbery and assess his punishment at confinement in the penitentiary for life" is responsive to an indictment charging simple robbery and robbery with a deadly weapon. Tabor v. State, 52 App. 387, 107 S. W. 1116.

17. Conviction of assault.—See notes under C. C. P., art. 771.

18. New trial.—See notes to C. C. P., art. 837.

Art. 1328. [857] Fraudulent acquisition of property by threats.—If any person, by threatening to do some illegal act injurious to the character, person or property of another, shall fraudulently induce the person so threatened to deliver to him any property, with intent to appropriate the same to his own use, he shall be punished by confinement in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years. [Act Feb. 12, 1858, p. 180.]

See notes under article 1327, ante.

See McCormick v. State, 26 App. 678, 9 S. W. 277; Miller v. State, 28 App. 445, 13 S. W. 646.

What constitutes offense.—To constitute the offense defined by article 1328 it must appear: 1. That the accused threatened to do some illegal act, injurious to the character, person, or property of another, and the indictment should aver the threats, and the illegal act threatened, with reasonable certainty. 2. That by means of such threats the accused fraudulently induced the person threatened to deliver to him certain property, which property should be described in the indictment as in an indictment for theft, alleging the ownership thereof, except that its value need not be alleged. 3. That the accused so obtained the property with the intent to appropriate the same to his own use. Williams v. State, 13 App. 285, 46 Am. Rep. 237.

Where money was delivered to defendant on his demand at the point of a cocked pistol, there was a taking within art. 1327, and not merely a delivery through fear within art. 1328. Coffelt v. State, 27 App. 608, 11 S. W. 639, 11 Am. St. Rep. 205.

A threat to accuse and prosecute a person of an offense of which he is guilty, though made by a person who did not see the commission of the offense, but only knew of it from information, is not a threat to do an illegal act; so that obtaining money thereby is not within this article. Davis v. State, 37 App. 47, 38 S. W. 792, 66 Am. St. Rep. 791.

Under the statute, the threat must be to do an illegal act; consequently the threat to do a legal act would not come within the offense defined. Burnsides v. State, 51 App. 399, 102 S. W. 118.

A false personation of an officer, a false charge that one had committed an offense and a threat to put him in jail whereby he is induced to pay the accused money to release him is sufficient to make out a case of robbery under this article. Burnsides v. State, 51 App. 399, 102 S. W. 120.

Indictment.—Willson's Cr. Forms, 481, 632, 932.

An information for extorting money by threats of prosecution under the local option law is insufficient when it fails to allege by proper averments that such law was in force, and does not allege an agreement between defendant and the other persons concerned in the extortion, to extort or make an agreement with the offender to obtain the money. Williams v. State, 51 App. 1, 100 S. W. 149.

Where indictment charges, with "an attempt" to fraudulently take, instead of with "intent," held sufficient. Runnells v. State, 34 App. 431, 30 S. W. 1065.

Where indictment described check, it was not necessary to allege its value. Williams v. State, 34 App. 523, 31 S. W. 405.

An indictment charging that the accused induced G. to pay him $500 by threatening to prosecute him for adultery is insufficient, unless it alleges that accused falsely charged G. with adultery, and negatives G.'s guilt, setting out the constituent elements of the offense of adultery, since if G. was guilty, a threat to prosecute him was not a threat to do an illegal act. Scales v. State (Cr. App.) 144 S. W. 263.

Charge of court.—The accused had the right to have his theory of the case presented to the jury, viz.: that he had been specially authorized by an officer to assist in making arrests, since, if the arrest was made in good faith, the subsequent taking of money from the one arrested would not be robbery under this article. It might be bribery or false personation of an officer. Burnsides v. State, 51 App. 399, 102 S. W. 120.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—A "theft" is the fraudulent taking of property with intent to deprive the owner of the value of it, and with intent to appropriate the property to one's own use and benefit. Kellar v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 723.

The doctrine of ultra vires cannot be invoked as a defense. Leonard v. State, 7 App. 417.

"Felonious" is not equivalent to "fraudulent" in the definition of theft. Sloan v. State, 18 App. 225, overruling Musquez v. State, 41 Tex. 226.

In a prosecution for theft, a charge instructing the jury that the killing of the animal constituted the offense was erroneous as the taking (if any) of the animal constituted the offense. Crowell v. State, 24 App. 404, 6 S. W. 318.

If the stolen hogs were placed in the pen built by defendant and afterwards escaped from the pen and were retaken by defendant it would be a second theft separate and distinct from the first, for which he might be prosecuted. Trimble v. State, 33 App. 397, 26 S. W. 727.

One who procures the agent of a railroad company to send him property of another is guilty of theft. Sikes v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 688.

One is guilty of theft who sells property of another and through an innocent third party delivers it to the purchaser. Lane v. State, 41 App. 558, 55 S. W. 831.

The offense is complete if the person aggrieved is engaged in his own business and not as a hireling. Nelson v. State (Cr. App.) 57 S. W. 645.

Under article 1329, where a person took an automobile from a private garage, and after riding around and hauling persons for hire returned it to an alley in the rear of the owner's house the same night, the taking did not constitute theft. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 547.

Where accused took possession of and tied a cow to a tree to be butchered, he was guilty of larceny, although she had not yet been sold or butchered. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 909.

To constitute theft under the statute, accused must have been connected with the original taking, as principal, and he must have been the taker. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 1094.

The taking of goods from different departments in a department store during a night pursuant to one purpose constitutes but one theft. Wilson v. State, 70 App. 631, 158 S. W. 516.

Where no valid levy of personalty of a debtor was made until a specified date, and possession was not taken by the sheriff until that date, an appropriation by the debtor of the personalty prior to that date was not larceny. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 732.

2. Subject of offense.—See articles 1332, 1337, and 1338, post, and notes thereunder.

3. Offenses included.—See C. C. P., art. 772, and notes thereunder.

4. Asportation.—See notes under article 1331, post.

5. Possession and ownership and want of consent.—See articles 1331-1335, post, and notes thereunder.

Property purchased and left in the store is in possession of the merchant, not his clerk. Burns v. State, 35 Tex. 724.

The widow is the "owner" of unadministered community property is her actual custody. Henry v. State, 45 Tex. 84. As is, also, a joint owner who has exclusive possession. Id. And if the owner temporarily deposits his property with another, the possession remains with him. Garling v. State, 2 App. 44.

Where the alleged owner had had possession of the cow, claiming her as his own, for two years, he had the superior title to her by limitation and the court correctly so instructed the jury. Brooks v. State, 38 App. 167, 31 S. W. 410.

Defendant intrusted with several bales of cotton deposited them in a warehouse, he afterward procured samples of two bales and sold them; held, this was not such actual possession as would support a conviction for theft. Johnson v. State, 34 App. 254, 30 S. W. 228.

It is no defense to a charge of cattle theft that the ownership of the animal had become vested in the county as an estray, when twelve months had not elapsed from the time of the estraying of such animal. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 123.

State need not prove want of consent of owner when property is in exclusive control of local agent. Wilson v. State, 37 App. 373, 35 S. W. 390, 38 S. W. 624, 39 S. W. 373.

In a prosecution for taking property alleged to belong to one of several joint owners, defendant could show that he took it with the consent of the others, and thereby defeat the prosecution. Lockett v. State, 59 App. 531, 129 S. W. 627.

In a prosecution for theft, it is necessary to show by evidence that defendant took the property without the owner's consent. McConico v. State, 61 App. 48, 133 S. W. 1047.

To establish ownership of property charged to have been stolen, the state must show exclusive control, care, and management in the claimed owner. Spiller v. State, 61 App. 555, 135 S. W. 549.

A railroad yardmaster having the care and control of freight at a certain point had the legal possession of goods in cars there. McDonald v. State, 70 App. 80, 156 S. W. 209.

One to whom the owner gave possession of property, on his false pretense that he would send back the money therefor, cannot be convicted of theft under Pen. Code 1911, art. 1329, including in its definition thereof a taking from the owner's possession "without his consent." Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 177 S. W. 85.

6. Theft of wife's goods by husband.—And a husband cannot commit theft of his wife's goods, unless there has been a divorce or a distinct separation, and the husband has clearly abandoned possession of her property and recognized her right to its exclusive possession. Overton v. State, 43 Tex. 616.

7. Intent.—See notes under article 1332, post.

The intent to appropriate the property must exist at the very moment of coming into possession of the same. Siemers v. State (Cr. App.) 55 S. W. 334; Pylee v. State, 62 App. 49, 136 S. W. 464.

The taking of the property must have been fraudulent, and with this taking must concur the intent to deprive the owner of the value of the same, and appropriate it to the taker's use and benefit. State v. Sherlock, 26 Tex. 106; Ridge-way v. State, 41 Tex. 231; Williams v. State, 12 App. 395; Tallant v. State, 14 App. 234. And see Muldrew v. State, 12 App. 617; Chance v. State, 27 App. 441, 11 S. W. 457.

Intent is an essential ingredient of theft, and must be alleged and proved. Guest v. State, 24 App. 235, 5 S. W. 840; Willis v. State, 24 App. 584, 6 S. W. 856; Blain v. State, 24 App. 626, 7 S. W. 239; Brown v. State, 28 App. 379, 13 S. W. 150; Lewis v. State, 29 App. 105, 14 S. W. 1008.

The evidence in this case tending to support the defense that the accused killed the alleged stolen animal by direction of his employer, the charge of the court was erroneous in not instructing the jury that, if they believed that the accused took the said animal by direction of his employer, for the use and benefit of his employer, believing at the time that his said employer owned or had a right to appropriate the animal, then the accused would not be guilty of theft, because of the absence of the fraudulent intent. Myers v. State, 24 App. 334, 6 S. W. 194. Other decisions hereunder: Bennett v. State, 28 App. 342, 13 S. W. 142; Earton v. State, 28 App. 483, 13 S. W. 783. The intent must be to permanently, and not temporarily, appropriate the property. Schultz v. State, 30 App. 94, 16 S. W. 756.

Intent to destroy or to appropriate to the use and benefit of some other person is sufficient. Stegall v. State, 32 App. 100, 22 S. W. 146, 40 Am. St. Rep. 761.

On trial for horse-theft the defense was that the horse had been taken in hope of a reward for his return, and not for the purpose of appropriating him to defendant's use; held defendant at least intended to deprive the owner of the value and appropriate him to his own use, so far as the reward was concerned, and was guilty of theft. Dunn v. State, 34 App. 257, 30 S. W. 227, 53 Am. St. Rep. 714.

If the object of the taker was to compel the party from whom the goods were taken to pay a debt, he is not guilty of theft. Young alias Burkett v. State, 34 App. 290, 30 S. W. 238.

A person taking an article with the intention of allowing the owner the value of the same on a settlement of accounts, is not guilty of theft. Young v. State, 37 App. 457, 36 S. W. 272.

The evidence showed that at the time defendant took the horse he was drunk, and that he took him for temporary use only, but afterwards sold him; held, if he did not at the time of the taking have the intent to appropriate the horse, the offense would not be theft. Cady v. State, 39 App. 236, 45 S. W. 568.

Where defendant testified in a case in which he was being tried for theft of cattle belonging to an unknown owner, that he had authority to take cattle belonging to Y., court should charge that if he believed the cattle belonged to Y. they should acquit. Melton v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 67.

Where, in a prosecution for stealing oats, accused and his wife testified that, when he took the oats from a field by which he was driving, he stated his intention to give his father-in-law, who accompanied him in another buggy, money to pay the owner for the oats, accused driving a scary team which he could not leave, it was error to refuse a requested charge that, if accused took the oats without fraudulent intent, with a view to paying for them, the jury should acquit. Pyles v. State (Cr. App.) 136 S. W. 464.

To authorize a conviction for theft, a specific intent must have existed in accused's mind at the very time of the taking. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 186.

That accused took a cow for another is no defense to a prosecution for larceny where it did not appear that he believed the cow belonged to the person for whom he acted. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 909.

A conviction for the offense of receiving stolen property can not be had under an indictment charging theft. Brown v. State, 15 App. 581; Chandler v. State, Id. 587; Gaither v. State, 21 App. 527, 1 S. W. 456; Wheeler v. State, 34 App. 350, 30 S. W. 913; Ferandez v. State, 25 App. 538, 8 S. W. 667; Gray v. State, 24 App. 611, 7 S. W. 339.

For distinction between "malicious mischief" and "theft," see Thompson v. State, 30 Tex. 356.

Under an indictment for theft, a conviction can be had for wilfully driving stock from accustomed range. Counts v. State, 37 Tex. 593; Bawcom v. State, 41 Tex. 189; Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242.

That the defendant, subsequent to the theft of the property, and with knowledge that it was stolen, aided the thief to dispose of it, or purchased it from the thief, are facts sufficient to support a conviction for receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen, but not to support a conviction for theft. Prator v. State, 15 App. 363.

The offense of theft from the person being essentially different from ordinary theft, a conviction thereof can not be had under an indictment for ordinary theft. Harris v. State, 17 App. 132.

Where indictment charges theft from the person only the defendant can not be convicted of petty theft. Roberts v. State, 33 App. 83, 24 S. W. 395.

Under an indictment for theft of cattle, the defendant may be convicted of the offense denounced by article 1356. Campbell v. State, 22 App. 262, 2 S. W. 825; Foster v. State, 21 App. 80, 17 S. W. 548; Smith v. State, 21 App. 134, 17 S. W. 558.

Though under an indictment charging theft of cattle in the usual form, a conviction may be had either for the theft defined in article 1356, or for the misdemeanor of driving cattle from their accustomed range as defined in article 1336, the verdict, to be sufficient, must show with reasonable certainty of which offense, the felony or the misdemeanor, the accused was found guilty. Guest v. State, 24 App. 530, 7 S. W. 242 (overruled by Long v. State, 39 App. 461, 46 S. W. 821, 73 Am. St. Rep. 954). And on the same subject, see Taylor v. State, 25 App. 96, 7 S. W. 861; Spoonemore v. State, 25 App. 358, 8 S. W. 280; Woods v. State, 26 App. 490, 10 S. W. 108; Lopez v. State, 28 App. 343, 13 S. W. 219.

If the owner is induced to part with his property finally, or to convey title thereto, the crime is swindling. But if possession only is obtained, and in such manner as is not adequate to pass the title thereto, but only its custody for a time, and thereafter is converted by the taker in pursuance of his original design, it is theft. Massey v. State, 31 App. 371, 20 S. W. 758.

A conviction for theft of a horse, on a general indictment for theft, is not supported by evidence that defendant borrowed the horse and thereafter converted him to his own use. Mangum v. State, 38 App. 231, 42 S. W. 291.

Defendant was an employé of prosecutor, prosecutor left him temporarily in charge of his store while he went to Dallas; soon after prosecutor left defendant took the goods charged to have been stolen and fled to Arkansas; held, he was guilty of theft and not embezzlement. Roeder v. State, 39 App. 199, 45 S. W. 570.

It is error to charge that defendant can be convicted of driving stock from accustomed range, under an indictment for theft. Chambers v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 261.

Indictment may include counts for theft and theft from the person, and conviction under the first count operates as acquittal of the second count. Hooton v. State, 53 App. 6, 108 S. W. 651; Flynn v. State, 47 App. 26, 83 S. W. 206.

Accused drove a herd of cattle to town for shipment to market. A third person drove another's cattle into the herd, and requested accused to take them to market and remit to him the money after a sale of the cattle. The third person was seen in conjunction with accused in driving the cattle. Held, that accused, if not engaged in the original taking, could at most be convicted of receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen. Lee v. State, 57 App. 177, 123 S. W. 389.

One who by means of false representations obtained money from another as an advancement for work, to be thereafter performed, and who failed to perform the work, was not guilty of theft of the money advanced though an indictment for swindling might lie. Taylor v. State, 64 App. 157, 141 S. W. 949.

Where accused was apprehended as he was loading stolen lard into a wagon on a railroad right of way, the court properly charged that he was not guilty of theft, unless he was connected with the original taking of the lard from the railroad car, since, if he was not so connected, he was only guilty of receiving stolen goods. Roman v. State, 64 App. 515, 142 S. W. 912.

The offenses of theft of property, of being an accomplice to the theft of such property, and of receiving and concealing the same property are entirely separate and distinct offenses, and, under an indictment charging one of such offenses, a party cannot be convicted of either of the others. Kaufman v. State, 70 App. 438, 159 S. W. 58.

The word "bailee" as used in the embezzlement statute, which punishes the fraudulent conversion by a bailee, does not include all bailments, but only those for the sole benefit of the bailor, where there is a fiduciary relation between the parties; hence as there must be a fraudulent taking to constitute the crime of theft denounced by article 1329, the conversion of property by a bailee, where the bailment is for mutual benefit, falls within the purview of article 1348, making such conversion an offense, being neither theft nor embezzlement. Johnson v. State, 71 App. 206, 159 S. W. 849.

The owner of certain personal property went to a bathing beach, and, before going in, deposited the property with the bathhouse keeper. R. in some way obtained possession of the check, presented it to the keeper, and obtained the property, and the next day part of it was found in accused's possession, concealed in a safety deposit vault. Held that the evidence showed pure theft on the part of R., and did not raise the issue of embezzlement. Goldstein v. State (Cr. App.) 171 S. W. 709.

Where the indictment alleged that the defendant "did kill, steal, take, and carry away a hog," it was held that the indictment charged the theft of a dead and not a live hog. Thompson v. State, 30 Tex. 356.

The word "feloniously" need not be used in the indictment. The word fraudulently characterizes the offense, and is indispensable in charging it. Prim v. State, 32 Tex. 157; Calvin v. State, 25 Tex. 793; Austin v. State, 42 Tex. 345; Conner v. State, 6 App. 455; Jorasco v. State, Id. 238.

If the proof upon which the state depends leaves it in doubt whether the offense is theft per se or wilfully driving stock from the range, the indictment should charge both in different counts. Smith v. State, 34 Tex. 612.

In general the indictment must charge the acts, intents, and omissions which enter into the definition of, and constitute the offense. Williams v. State, 12 App. 396; Hodges v. State, Id. 554; Young v. State, Id. 614; Muldrew v. State, Id. 617; Insall v. State, 14 App. 145. If two distinct offenses be charged in the same count, the indictment will be bad for duplicity. Hickman v. State, 23 App. 441, 2 S. W. 640; Heineman v. State, 22 App. 44, 2 S. W. 619. Where different articles are taken at the same time and place, although from different persons, such taking constitutes but one offense, and will support but one prosecution. Wilson v. State, 45 Tex. 76, 23 Am. Rep. 602; Quitow v. State, 1 App. 48, 28 Am. Rep. 396; Hozier v. State, 6 App. 542.

Indictment alleged the name both of accused and the owner as "Mack Brown." Good as an indictment. Brown v. State, 28 App. 379, 13 S. W. 150.

The affidavit and information for theft alleging that Chas. Davis was in possession of a ring, it having been lent to Geo. Davis by the owner, who unlawfully converted it to his own use, is defective; the allegations being inconsistent, as no connection is shown between the two Davises, and it cannot be told which one appropriated it. Davis v. State, 60 App. 108, 131 S. W. 315.

An indictment for a theft may charge it to have been accomplished in both the ways the statute states the offense can be committed. Wright v. State, 70 App. 73, 156 S. W. 624.

15. — Names of parties.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 456.

16. — Venue.—See notes under C. C. P. art. 451, subd. 5.

17. — Time of offense.—Proving as alleged, see post, notes under "Evidence."

A conviction is not void because different dates are alleged in two different counts. Shuman v. State, 34 App. 69, 29 S. W. 160.

18. — Intent.—In addition to the allegation that the property was fraudulently taken, it must be alleged that it was taken with the intent to deprive the owner of the value of the same, and to appropriate it to the use and benefit of the person taking. Peralto v. State, 17 App. 578; Tallant v. State, 14 App. 234; Jones v. State, 12 App. 424; Ridgeway v. State, 41 Tex. 231; State v. Sherlock, 26 Tex. 106. Where the allegation was that the property was taken with intent to deprive the owner of the value of the same, and to appropriate the value of the same, etc., using the word "value" in place of the statutory word "it," the allegation was held to be sufficient, though it would have been better to have followed the exact language of the statute. Thompson v. State, 16 App. 74; Barrett v. State, 18 App. 64. See C. C. P., art. 454. In charging the intent, it is not necessary to aver time and place separately to each intent, as "then and there to deprive the owner," etc., and "then and there to appropriate," etc. Harris v. State, 2 App. 102.

An indictment which alleges that accused fraudulently took personalty of prosecutor from the possession of prosecutor without his consent, and with the intent of accused to appropriate the property to his own use, is fatally defective for failing to allege accused's intent to deprive prosecutor of the value of the property. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 166 S. W. 1153.

19. — Asportation and fraudulent taking.—Asportation need not be alleged. Austin v. State, 42 Tex. 345; Coombes v. State, 17 App. 258 (overruling Martin v. State, 44 Tex. 172); Madison v. State, 16 App. 435; Doss v. State, 21 App. 505, 2 S. W. 814, 57 Am. Rep. 618 (overruling Lott v. State, 20 App. 230); Conner v. State, 24 App. 245, 6 S. W. 133; Coward v. State, 24 App. 590, 7 S. W. 332.

It need not be alleged that the property was carried away. It is sufficient to allege that it was fraudulently taken. Conner v. State, 6 App. 455; Prim v. State, 32 Tex. 157; Austin v. State, 42 Tex. 345; Hall v. State, 41 Tex. 287; Walker v. State, 3 App. 70.

It is indispensably essential to allege that the property was fraudulently taken. An allegation that it was feloniously taken will not be sufficient. The statute in defining the offense uses the word "fraudulent" to characterize the taking. Ware v. State, 19 App. 13; Spain v. State, Id. 469; Sloan v. State, 18 App. 225, overruling upon this point, Musquez v. State, 41 Tex. 226; Ortis v. State, 18 App. 282; McPherson v. State, 20 App. 194; Muldrew v. State, 12 App. 617; State v. Earp, 41 Tex. 487; Holley v. State, 24 App. 35, 5 S. W. 523; Chance v. State, 27 App. 441, 11 S. W. 457; Green v. State, 27 App. 570, 11 S. W. 636; Wilson v. State, 27 App. 577, 11 S. W. 638; Minter v. State, 26 App. 217, 9 S. W. 561; Johnston v. State, 25 App. 731, 9 S. W. 48; Moore v. State, 28 App. 377, 13 S. W. 152. See, also, Jorasco v. State, 6 App. 238.

It must be alleged (and proved) that the property was taken from the possession of the owner. Omission of the word "of" is fatal to the indictment. Riley v. State, 27 App. 606, 11 S. W. 642.

An information for theft, which does not charge that the property taken was taken from the possession of the owner, or of some one holding for him, is insufficient under the statute defining theft. Henley v. State, 61 App. 428, 135 S. W. 133.

Where the complaint and information in a prosecution for theft merely stated that the defendant unlawfully took one pair of lines, the property of one M., without his consent, and failed to charge a fraudulent taking, they were defective. Watt v. State, 61 App. 602, 136 S. W. 56.

A complaint and information charging theft, which does not allege that accused fraudulently took the property from the alleged owner, is fatally defective. Baldwin v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 701.

20. — Ownership and possession and want of consent.—See notes under article 1348, post, and C. C. P. arts. 456, 457.

An indictment is fatally defective if it fails to charge from whose possession the property was taken. Garner v. State, 36 Tex. 693; Garcia v. State, 26 Tex. 209, 82 Am. Dec. 605; Watts v. State, 6 App. 263; Case v. State, 12 App. 228; Reed v. State, 14 App. 662; Bailey v. State, 18 App. 426; Ryan v. State (Cr. App.) 176 S. W. 49.

The name of the owner or possessor must be correctly charged. The given name may be stated by initials. C. C. P. art. 456; Collins v. State, 43 Tex. 577 (overruling Brown v. State, 32 Tex. 125); Spoonemore v. State, 25 App. 358, 8 S. W. 280.

As to temporary possession. Blackburn v. State, 44 Tex. 457; Bailey v. State, 18 App. 426; Frazier v. State, Id. 434; Emmerson v. State, 33 App. 89, 25 S. W. 289.

The ownership of the property must be averred, or it must be averred that the name of the owner is unknown to the grand jury. Culberson v. State, 2 App. 324; Stone v. State, 12 App. 193; Maddox v. State, 14 App. 447.

Where possession is alleged to be in a person other than the owner of the property, it is not a valid objection to the indictment that it does not allege that the person in possession was holding the property for the owner. Alexander v. State, 4 App. 261.

The property belonging to a married woman, ownership and possession is properly alleged in the husband, and the indictment need not negative the wife's consent. Burt v. State, 7 App. 578; Sinclair v. State, 34 App. 453, 30 S. W. 1070; Coombes v. State, 17 App. 258.

Ownership and want of consent are ingredients and must be alleged. Williams v. State, 12 App. 395; Roberson v. State, 51 App. 335, 101 S. W. 800.

Alleging possession in the special owner, and the want of his consent, indictment need not allege possession of the actual owner nor negative his consent. Frazier v. State, 18 App. 434; Bailey v. State, 20 App. 68; Littleton v. State, 20 App. 168; Ledbetter v. State, 35 App. 195, 32 S. W. 903.

With regard to the allegations of ownership and possession, the following rules are deducible from the decisions: 1. The facts as they exist should be alleged, and if the facts be doubtful the pleader should resort to different counts, and thus meet the proof in whatever shape it may be adduced. 2. If A be the actual or general owner of the property, and had the same in his actual control, care, and management at the time it was stolen, both ownership and possession should be alleged to be in him, notwithstanding the property was in care of, and being used by the agent or servant of the owner. 3. If A be the actual or general owner, but B, at the time of the theft, had the actual control, care, and management of the property, the ownership may be alleged to be in either A or B, but the possession must be alleged to have been in B. In such case, it is better to allege both the ownership and possession in B, the special owner. Briggs v. State, 20 App. 106; Littleton v. State, Id. 168; Hall v. State, 22 App. 632, 3 S. W. 338; Frazier v. State, 18 App. 434; Bailey v. State, Id. 426; May v. State, 15 App. 430; Duren v. State, Id. 624; Wilson v. State, 12 App. 481; Hill v. State, 11 App. 132; Dreyer v. State, Id. 503; Pippin v. State, 9 App. 269; Walker v. State, Id. 38; Moore v. State, 8 App. 496; Skipworth v. State, Id. 135; West v. State, 6 App. 485; Jinks v. State, 5 App. 68; Fore v. State, Id. 251; Trafton v. State, Id. 480; Crockett v. State, Id. 526; Gaines v. State, 4 App. 330; Garling v. State, 2 App. 44; King v. State, 43 Tex. 351; Blackburn v. State, 44 Tex. 457.

The property belonging to a widow, non compos mentis, and her children, they living with the former's father, S., who had sole control and care of the property, and was guardian for the children, indictment should have alleged the taking from the possession of S., or, alleging the ownership in the widow and children, that it was taken from the possession of S., who was holding it for them. Briggs v. State, 20 App. 106.

Possession from which the property was taken must be alleged and at least substantially proved. Littleton v. State, 20 App. 168; White v. State, 33 App. 94, 25 S. W. 290; Mixon v. State, 28 App. 347, 13 S. W. 143; Hill v. State, 55 App. 407, 117 S. W. 823.

The indictment must allege that the property was taken without the consent of the owner. If the ownership of the property be alleged to be in A and the possession in B, the allegation must be that the property was taken without the consent of either A or B. Schultz v. State, 20 App. 308; Williams v. State, 19 App. 277; Atterberry v. State, Id. 401; Bailey v. State, 18 App. 427; Frazier v. State, Id. 434; Bland v. State, Id. 12; Williams v. State, 12 App. 395. When the indictment alleges a joint ownership of two or more persons, the non-consent of each owner must be alleged. It will not be sufficient to allege their want of consent jointly. McIntosh v. State, 18 App. 284; Taylor v. State, Id. 489. But where the indictment alleges the ownership to be in two or more persons not jointly, but separately, it is sufficient to allege that the property was taken without the consent of the owners. Smith v. State, 21 App. 96, 17 S. W. 560. The allegation as to want of consent should negative the consent of the alleged owner or owners, and the alleged possessor or possessors of the property, but it need not, and should not, negative the consent of persons not named in the indictment. It was formerly held that where there were both a general and a special owner of the property it was essential to allege and prove the want of consent of both, and that where both ownership and possession were alleged to be in the special owner, it was essential to prove not only his want of consent, but also the want of consent of the general owner. Jackson v. State, 7 App. 363; Wilson v. State, 12 App. 481; Bowling v.

State, 13 App. 338; Erskine v. State, 1 App. 405. But these decisions, in so far as they hold as above stated, were expressly overruled in Frazier v. State, 13 App. 434.

As to theft of property belonging to a corporation, see Stallings v. State, 29 App. 220, 15 S. W. 716.

Indictment must not only describe the corporation by its corporate name, but allege that it was a corporation, allege the name of the special owner from whose possession the property was taken and that he was holding the same for the corporation, negative his consent and aver that the property was taken with the intent to deprive the owner of the value of the same. Thurmond v. State, 30 App. 539, 17 S. W. 1098; White v. State, 24 App. 231, 5 S. W. 857, 5 Am. St. Rep. 879; Barnes v. State, 46 App. 513, 81 S. W. 735; Kersh v. State, 45 App. 451, 77 S. W. 790. But contra, see Price v. State, 41 Tex. 215.

Indictment should allege the want of consent of the party in possession, and also of the unknown owner. Swink v. State, 32 App. 530, 24 S. W. 893.

It is admissible in two different counts to charge the property as belonging to different persons. Pisano v. State, 34 App. 63, 29 S. W. 42; Shuman v. State, 34 App. 69, 29 S. W. 160; Smith v. State, 34 App. 123, 29 S. W. 774.

An indictment alleging in two different counts the property as belonging to different persons is not duplicitous. Pisano v. State, 34 App. 63, 29 S. W. 42.

An indictment for theft may allege, in one count, ownership and possession in one person, and in another, ownership in the same person and possession in another. Shuman v. State, 34 App. 69, 29 S. W. 160.

When the indictment alleges ownership in a person to the grand jurors unknown, the defendant in order to take advantage of lack of diligence in said grand jury in discovering owner, should show such lack of diligence at the trial in the court below. Logan v. State, 36 App. 1, 34 S. W. 925.

The indictment must negative the owner's consent to the taking. Long v. State (Cr. App.) 39 S. W. 674.

Where indictment alleges joint ownership, it must allege want of consent of each owner. Using the word "their" in the indictment is not sufficient. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 59 S. W. 891.

Though art. 457 of the C. of C. P. authorizes the allegation of ownership in either the actual or special owner, it is better practice, in most instances, to allege the ownership in him who has the actual control, care and management—in short, the possession—of the property. Shelton v. State, 52 App. 611, 108 S. W. 679; Frazier v. State, 18 App. 434 (overruling Erskine v. State, 1 App. 405); Jackson v. State, 7 App. 363; Bowling v. State, 13 App. 333; Williamson v. State, 13 App. 514; Wilson v. State, 12 App. 481.

An indictment for larceny, which alleges a joint ownership by two or more persons, must allege the nonconsent of each owner, and it is not sufficient to merely allege the want of consent jointly. Arseneaux v. State, 63 App. 566, 140 S. W. 776.

Although the keeper of an automobile garage had the care of a machine which was left there when not in use by the owner, his care or custody of the machine did not constitute ownership for the purpose of the allegation of ownership and taking without consent in a prosecution for theft of a part of a machine. Staha v. State (Cr. App.) 151 S. W. 543.

Where the owner of cattle placed them in the pasture of one J., who under Rev. St. 1911, § 5664, had a lien thereon for pasturage, J. was the special owner as against the real owner, and an indictment for their theft should have alleged ownership in J. or real ownership in the owner and special ownership in J. McKnight v. State, 70 App. 470, 156 S. W. 1188.

An indictment for the theft of property in possession of a renter should allege general possession in the owner's agent and special ownership in the renter, or ownership in the agent, or in the renter. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 164 S. W. 5.

Variance as to middle initial to the given name as charged and proved, is immaterial (Spencer v. State, 34 App. 65, 29 S. W. 159); but this rule does not extend to the first initial, unless it be shown that defendant was as well known by the name alleged as by his true name. C. C. P. art. 456; Willis v. State, 24 App. 487, 6 S. W. 200; Young v. State, 30 App. 308, 17 S. W. 413.

The fact that a bill of sale has been neither acknowledged nor recorded does not render it inadmissible in evidence. Lockwood v. State, 32 App. 137, 22 S. W. 413. See, also, note, post, as to evidence of ownership and possession.

On trial for theft of a cow it was proven by the State that defendant was seen one evening driving the cow towards his home; held, admissible to prove that next morning defendant's son was seen dragging the hide of the animal across defendant's yard. Brown v. State, 34 App. 150, 29 S. W. 772.

Evidence that accused made inquiry as to the ownership of the property is admissible. Green v. State (Cr. App.) 30 S. W. 220.

Evidence of quarrels between defendant and prosecuting witness is inadmissible. Tabor v. State, 34 App. 631, 31 S. W. 662, 53 Am. St. Rep. 726.

The evidence showed that defendant knew to whom the cattle belonged, and when the owner spoke of branding them, defendant told him it was not necessary, that he would protect his ownership; held, his defense of mistake was untenable. Lawrence v. State, 35 App. 114, 32 S. W. 530.

The State was allowed to prove that the cotton yard books showed that a certain bale of cotton was sold by defendant; held, error. Howard v. State, 35 App. 136, 32 S. W. 544.

On prosecution for theft of chickens it is error to allow witnesses to testify that they were on the same night watching their henroosts. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 33 S. W. 1079.

It was admissible to prove that part of the property was found on the ground near where defendant was arrested, also to prove that a negro who had been in the same cell with defendant was taken out and pointed out part of the property. Payton v. State, 35 App. 508, 34 S. W. 615.

It is admissible to prove that defendant sold a horse stolen on the same night of the alleged theft. Bonnors v. State (Cr. App.) 35 S. W. 650.

The fact that a complaint had been made against another person for the same theft is no evidence that defendant did not commit the theft. Bigham v. State, 36 App. 453, 37 S. W. 753.

A person charged with theft of property which he sold and claimed to have authority from the owner to sell, should be allowed to introduce, as tending to corroborate his statement, testimony that the owner had procured and tried to procure the services of other persons to sell such property. Kimball v. State, 37 App. 230, 39 S. W. 297, 66 Am. St. Rep. 799.

Evidence held properly excluded. Hart v. State (Cr. App.) 40 S. W. 495.

Evidence in horse-theft. Harvard v. State, 49 App. 290, 32 S. W. 804; Trevenio v. State, 48 App. 207, 37 S. W. 1162; Young v. State, 47 App. 468, 33 S. W. 808.

Where defendant claimed he obtained the mules in controversy from D., but testified that he had made no application for a subpoena for D., the jury could consider his failure to do so as bearing on the bona fides of his contention that he was an innocent purchaser of the property. Cleveland v. State, 57 App. 356, 123 S. W. 142.

In a prosecution for theft, evidence that on the day after defendant procured the money in question from prosecutor by false pretext, as prosecutor and witness were going down the street they came up to defendant, who thereupon ran, was admissible. Hawkins v. State, 58 App. 407, 126 S. W. 268, 137 Am. St. Rep. 970.

Where, on a trial for the larceny of a cow, the identity of the animal stolen was in dispute, the acts of the constable in watching the cow while tied in the woods during the greater part of a day are inadmissible as reflecting the opinion of the constable that the animal had been stolen, and that accused was connected with the offense. Richards v. State, 59 App. 203, 127 S. W. 823.

In a prosecution for theft, evidence held to sustain the charge of the indictment that the property taken was lawful current money of the United States of America. Bacon v. State, 61 App. 206, 134 S. W. 690.

In a prosecution for theft of a deed, evidence was admissible that accused executed a deed to the property conveyed by that claimed to have been stolen, in order to show that he was exercising acts of ownership under the stolen deed. Roberts v. State, 61 App. 434, 135 S. W. 144.

In a prosecution for theft of a cow which disappeared Saturday, where the theory of the prosecution was that the cow was killed by the accused on Monday, and as to which the evidence for the prosecution was only circumstantial, the rejection of evidence offered by the accused to show that, when the cow was found on Tuesday, she had been dead four or five days, is error, as the killing of cattle to secure the hide constitutes a theft of the cattle, but it is not a theft of an animal to remove the hide from a dead animal. Jackson v. State, 62 App. 106, 136 S. W. 783.

In a trial for stealing hides, based upon circumstantial evidence, any circumstance connecting accused with hides shipped and identified as including those stolen, or any misstatement by him concerning them while not under arrest, were admissible as bearing on his claim that he bought the hides from an unknown man. Davis v. State, 63 App. 453, 140 S. W. 349.

In a trial for stealing hides, based on circumstantial evidence, the state could show that hides found in a package which accused shipped with those stolen were stolen the night after the particular theft, and on the night before accused delivered the package for shipment, where accused claimed to have bought the hides in good faith from a stranger. Davis v. State, 63 App. 453, 140 S. W. 349.

In a prosecution for theft of a beef, testimony of a person who saw the property alleged to have been stolen in the pen of the defendant and told another person about it on a certain day, and of such other person that the first witness did so tell him, is admissible to show the time the beef was in the pen, and thereby disprove testimony of defendant to the effect that on the day before the witness saw the beef he purchased it from a traveler in another county. Chance v. State, 63 App. 602, 141 S. W. 113.

In the trial of a train newsboy for the theft of money from a passenger's hand bag left on the train, the conductor's testimony that, while he was looking for the hand bag after notice by telegram, a lady passenger told him that a lady left her hand bag, when defendant "buted in" and said, "Yes, I saw it lying there," was properly admitted. Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 897.

It was not error, in the trial of a train newsboy for theft of money from a hand bag left on the train by a passenger, to permit the passenger to testify that the money and hand bag were taken without her consent. Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 897.

In a trial for horse theft, it was not error to permit the state to show that witness met a man near prosecuting witness' home riding one horse and leading another, though his description of the man and the horses did not identify the man definitely as accused, nor either of the horses as the one stolen. Lester v. State (Cr. App.) 154 S. W. 554.

On a trial for theft of cotton, the testimony of a witness that he had seen mule tracks and that accused owned mules was admissible. Wilson v. State, 70 App. 340, 156 S. W. 204.

Where the state depended on circumstantial evidence to establish a larceny of cotton, that tracks leading to the door where the cotton was found had been rubbed out by the foot could be proved. Wilson v. State, 70 App. 340, 156 S. W. 204.

Where accused was on trial for the theft of horses delivered to prosecutor as a pledge to secure the release of a mortgage on a chattel awarded to prosecutor on the dissolution of the firm in which the parties were partners, evidence as to the formation of the firm and as to accused's representations that the chattel was not incumbered was admissible. Haley v. State, 70 App. 30, 156 S. W. 637.

On a trial for theft of cattle for which accused claimed to have a bill of sale, evidence that the general reputation for honesty of the notary before whom the bill of sale purported to have been acknowledged was a "little bad" should have been excluded. Turner v. State, 71 App. 477, 160 S. W. 357.

25. — Burden of proof.—See article 52, ante, and C. C. P. art. 785, and notes thereunder.

The evidence must show satisfactorily, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the accused took the property fraudulently, with the intent to deprive the owner of the value of the same, and to appropriate it to his, the accused's, use or benefit. The fraudulent intent with which the property was taken is the very gist of the offense, and without such intent there can be no theft. Such fraudulent intent must have existed in the mind of the accused at the very time that he took the property. If at the very time he came into the possession of the property, such fraudulent intent did not exist in his mind, such intent, subsequently formed, would not make the taking of the property theft. Hernandez v. State, 20 App. 151; Wilson v. State, Id. 662; Warren v. State, 17 App. 207; Winn v. State, Id. 284; Reed v. State, 8 App. 40, 34 Am. Rep. 732; Robinson v. State, 11 App. 403, 40 Am. Rep. 790; Ainsworth v. State, Id. 339; Wilson v. State, 14 App. 205; Wolf v. State, Id. 210; Knutson v. State, Id. 570; Deering v. State, Id. 599; McAfee v. State, Id. 668; Dow v. State, 12 App. 343; Landin v. State, 10 App. 63; Mullins v. State, 37 Tex. 337; Isaacs v. State, 30 Tex. 450; Billard v. State, Id. 367, 94 Am. Dec. 317; Quitow v. State, 1 App. 65; Johnson v. State, Id. 118; Clayton v. State, 15 App. 348; Ricks v. State, 19 App. 308; Martindale v. State, Id. 333. And such fraudulent intent must be to appropriate or convert the property permanently. An intent merely to use the property temporarily, without an intent to permanently appropriate it, is not such an intent as will constitute theft. Wilson v. State, 18 App. 270, 51 Am. Rep. 309; Loza v. State, 1 App. 488, 28 Am. Rep. 416; Johnson v. State, 36 Tex. 375; Blackburn v. State, 44 Tex. 457. The intent with which the property was taken is to be arrived at by considering all the circumstances, immediately or remotely attending the taking that may be relevant thereto. McNair v. State, 14 App. 78; Jinks v. State, 5 App. 68. The first and most important element or indicia of fraudulent intent is an attempt at concealment. Herber v. State, 7 Tex. 69. But there may be theft without any attempt at concealment, for the fraudulent intent may be shown to have existed, by proof of other facts. The manner of the taking is merely a circumstance more or less cogent, according to the other facts proved, to demonstrate intent. A taking may be with fraudulent intent, and theft, although it be open and public, and without any attempt at concealment. Billard v. State, 30 Tex. 367, 94 Am. Dec. 317; Isaacs v. State, Id. 450; Terrell v. State, 41 Tex. 463; Loza v. State, 1 App. 488, 28 Am. Rep. 416; Quitow v. State, Id. 65; Dignowitty v. State, 17 Tex. 521, 67 Am. Dec. 670. It is not theft to take a neighbor's horse openly in the streets of a city, and ride him a few miles in the country, with the intention, fairly manifested, to return him to the owner. McDaniel v. State, 33 Tex. 419. Nor is it theft to take property openly, in the presence of others, or of another claimant, under color of title, without fraudulent intent. Kay v. State, 40 Tex. 29; Boyd v. State, 18 App. 339. Nor to take it under an honest, though mistaken claim of right. Bray v. State, 41 Tex. 203; Thurman v. State, 33 Tex. 684; ante, art. 1336. Under such circumstances the evidence must show: 1. That the accused took the property. 2. That it belonged to the alleged owner. 3. That it was taken fraudulently by the accused, and without belief on his part that it was his own. Johnson v. State, 41 Tex. 608; ante, art. 1336. But it is not essential to constitute theft that the taker should know who is the owner of the property. It is sufficient if he knows that it is not his own, and takes it with a fraudulent intent. Lawrence v. State, 20 App. 536. When the property was obtained by false pretext, the evidence must show an appropriation of it by the accused. It will not be sufficient to show merely its temporary use by him. Berg v. State, 2 App. 148; ante, art. 1332. The mere fact that the accused rode an estray horse several days in the neighborhood, is not sufficient to show a fraudulent taking and permanent appropriation of the horse. Blackburn v. State, 44 Tex. 457. See, also, Johnson v. State, 36 Tex. 375; Pitts v. State, 3 App. 210. But an "estrays" is the subject of theft, and it is no defense that the animal was delivered to the accused by another person, who had taken it up and had not legally estrayed it. State v. Apel, 14 Tex. 428; Owens v. State, 7 App. 470. In Debbs v. State, 43 Tex. 650, it was held that if the accused honestly believed that the owner of an animal had forfeited his title to it, by a failure to brand it, the appropriation of such animal under such belief, would not be theft. But in the subsequent case of Lawrence v. State, 20 App. 536, it is held that the fraudulent taking of an unmarked sheep, goat, or hog is as much theft as though the same had been marked, and the doctrine laid down in the Debbs Case, supra, is overruled. It is competent for the state to prove the theft of other property at the same time and place as the property in question, if such proof conduces to establish identity in developing the res gesta, or to prove the guilt of the accused by circumstances connected with the theft, or to show the intent with which the accused acted with respect to the property for the theft of which he is on trial. Carter v. State, 23 App. 508, 5 S. W. 128; Mayfield v. State, Id. 645, 5 S. W. 161; Holmes v. State, 20 App. 509; Kelley v. State, 18 App. 262; House v. State, 16 App. 31; Jones v. State, 14 App. 85; McCall v. State, Id. 353; Long v. State, 11 App. 381; Davison v. State, 12 App. 215; Tyler v. State, 13 App. 205; Gilbraith v. State, 41 Tex. 567; Ivey v. State, 43 Tex. 425; Wright v. State, 10 App. 476; Webb v. State, 8 App. 115; Hardin v. State, Id. 653; Smith v. State, 21 App. 96, 17 S. W. 560; Smith v. State, Id. 133, 17 S. W. 558; Conley v. State, Id. 495, 1 S. W. 454. The state is not entitled to prove that accused had been "extradited" from Mexico on another charge. Fore v. State, 5 App. 251. Nor that he was a "county convict." Persons v. State, 3 App. 240. Nor that he had "conscripted" cattle found in his possession. Debbs v. State, 43 Tex. 650. The defendant may rebut the state's evidence tending to show fraudulent intent by any facts and circumstances which may tend to show that he took the property without such fraudulent intent. He is not restricted to proof that he owned the property, or had a legal right to take it. Wills v. State, 40 Tex. 69; Smith v. State, 41 Tex. 168; Bawcom v. State, Id. 189. Where the proof showed that the defendant was the hired hand of another person, hired to drive cattle, merely to prove that the stolen cattle were found in the herd which the defendant had in charge, is not sufficient to warrant his conviction of the theft. Allen v. State, 42 Tex. 517; Perry v. State, 41 Tex. 483. Contradictory statements are not sufficient evidence of crime, where the evidence shows that they were prompted by another motive than concealment of the guilt of the accused. Porter v. State, 43 Tex. 368. An indictment for the theft of cattle is sustained by proof that the cattle were killed with the fraudulent intent of appropriating their hides. Musquez v. State, 41 Tex. 226; McPhail v. State, 9 App. 164. It is permissible for a defendant charged with theft of animals, to prove his directions given to his employes in relation to the animals, for the purpose of rebutting fraudulent intent. Bawcom v. State, 41 Tex. 189. An unrecorded brand, or an unauthorized bill of sale, though inadmissible to prove title, may be competent to rebut a fraudulent intent. Long v. State, 1 App. 466.

If the possession of the property was obtained by the defendant from the owner lawfully and in good faith, its subsequent appropriation by the defendant to his own use, without the owner's consent, does not constitute theft. Lott v. State, 24 App. 723, 14 S. W. 277.

26. — Intent.—Property taken with intent to destroy, or for the benefit of some other person, will be sufficient to constitute the offense. Stegall v. State, 32 App. 100, 22 S. W. 146, 40 Am. St. Rep. 761. Proof that defendant took property to hold for reward is sufficient evidence of intent. Dunn v. State, 34 App. 257, 30 S. W. 227, 53 Am. St. Rep. 714.

It is error to exclude evidence tending to show that the article was taken temporarily and in sport. Colwell v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 615.

Where, in a prosecution for theft of cattle, the defendant claims to have purchased the property in good faith, and after the time of the alleged theft exhibited to the district attorney a bill of sale purporting to transfer title to the person from whom defendant claimed to have purchased, evidence to show that the seller in such bill of sale did not execute it, but that it was made by defendant and another, who remarked at the time of its making that it would clear defendant and put the person named therein as seller in the penitentiary, is admissible as bearing on the claim of purchase in good faith. Chance v. State, 63 App. 602, 141 S. W. 113.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, where accused claimed that he killed the animal in good faith, relying on an earmark, evidence as to the age of the mark was admissible. Roberts v. State, 64 App. 135, 141 S. W. 235.

Evidence, in a prosecution for horse theft, held to sustain a finding that the horses were taken with the intention of stealing them. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 146 S. W. 186.

In a prosecution for hog theft in which accused claimed that he believed the hog belonged to his father when he took it, the state could not show as an incriminative fact whether accused had ever attempted to institute civil proceedings to recover the hog from the alleged owner. Harris v. State, 71 App. 463, 160 S. W. 447.

Where defendant's only defense was that he thought the hog which he killed was his own, and no complaint was made as to the court's manner of submitting the question to the jury, a judgment of conviction is not "contrary to the law and evidence." Hall v. State, 72 App. 526, 162 S. W. 1154.

27. — Venue.—The indictment may allege the venue of the offense to be in the county of the prosecution, and such allegation will be sustained by proof that the property was stolen in any other county in the state, and brought by the thief into the county of the prosecution. C. C. P. art. 245. Cox v. State, 41 Tex. 1; Connell v. State, 2 App. 422; Cameron v. State, 9 App. 332; Roth v. State, 10 App. 27; Dixon v. State, 15 App. 480. This rule applies to all species of theft. Shubert v. State, 20 App. 320; McElmurray v. State, 21 App. 691, 2 S. W. 892; Clark v. State, 23 App. 612, 5 S. W. 178; Id. 23 App. 618, 5 S. W. 163. Except theft from the person, in which case the prosecution can be maintained only in the county where the property was originally taken. Gage v. State, 22 App. 123, 2 S. W. 638.

Venue must be alleged in the county of the prosecution, and it is met by proof that the offense was committed within 400 yards of the county line. Cox v. State, 41 Tex. 1; Cameron v. State, 9 App. 232; C. C. P. art. 237; McElroy v. State, 53 App. 57, 111 S. W. 948.

Where the proof was that the stolen animal was seen in its accustomed range, in C. county, one week before it was found in defendant's possession in another county, it was held that it was sufficiently proved that, when taken, the animal was in C. county. Ashlock v. State, 16 App. 13.

The allegation of venue must be proved, and on appeal, where there is a statement of facts in the record, unless such statement of facts shows proof of venue, the conviction will be set aside. Venue is an issue which must be affirmatively and not inferentially proved. Ryan v. State, 22 App. 699, 3 S. W. 547; Briggs v. State, 20 App. 106; Latham v. State, 19 App. 305; Bragg v. State, 17 App. 219; Winn v. State, 15 App. 169; Williamson v. State, 13 App. 514.

Under a general rule of venue and jurisdiction the proof must show a complete offense in the county where venue was laid. But by special provision the thief may be prosecuted in any county through, or into which he takes the property. West v. State, 28 App. 1, 11 S. W. 635. Formerly this rule could not apply to accomplices and accessories to theft, but does now under the amendment of April 4, 1889. Where defendant hired a horse in D. county and sold him in G. county, if the hiring was only a pretext to obtain possession of the horse, the venue was in D. county. Givins v. State, 32 App. 457, 24 S. W. 287.

Proof that property was stolen in another county and was found in possession of defendant in county of prosecution is sufficient to sustain conviction for bringing stolen property into the county. Lyon v. State (Cr. App.) 34 S. W. 947.

Where, on a trial for the theft of a horse, and for receiving the horse, knowing that it was stolen, and concealing it, there was no evidence that accused received or concealed the horse in the county, unless he stole it in the county, and the circumstances justified a finding that he committed the theft of the horse in the county, a conviction of receiving and concealing the horse in the county, but acquitting him of the theft thereof, was unwarranted by the evidence. Arrington v. State, 62 App. 357, 137 S. W. 669.

Evidence, in the trial of a newsboy for the theft of money from a satchel left on a train, held to sustain a finding that the crime was committed in the county of the trial. Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 152 S. W. 897.

28. — Time of offense.—It is not necessary to prove that the theft was committed on the day alleged, but it must be proved that it was committed at some time prior to the presentment of the indictment or information, and at a date within the period of limitation prescribed for a prosecution for the offense. Jackson v. State, 34 Tex. 136; Fisher v. State, 33 Tex. 792.

29. — Identity of property.—See Taylor v. State, 53 App. 615, 111 S. W. 151. Prior to the amendment of article 1353 in revising it, by omitting therefrom the words "gelding, mare, colt," it was held that where the indictment alleged the animal stolen to be a "horse," and the proof showed that it was a "gelding," or a "mare," or a "colt," there was a fatal variance, and the conviction could not be sustained. It was required that the allegation that the animal was a "horse," or a "gelding," or a "mare," or a "colt," must be strictly proved, and that one of these could not be alleged, and another proved. Banks v. State, 28 Tex. 644; Swindell v. State, 32 Tex. 102; Jordt v. State, 31 Tex. 571, 98 Am. Dec. 550; Gibbs v. State, 34 Tex. 134; Keese v. State, 1 App. 298; Lunsford v. State, Id. 448, 28 Am. Rep. 414; Persons v. State, 3 App. 241; Brisco v. State, 4 App. 219, 30 Am. Rep. 162.

But it is now only necessary to allege that the animal was a "horse," or an "ass," or a "mule," and a conviction will be sustained upon proof that it was an animal included within the generic word used. Valesco v. State, 9 App. 76; Johnson v. State, 16 App. 402; Davis v. State, 23 App. 210, 4 S. W. 590.

The property must be identified as the alleged stolen property by the best evidence attainable. Garcia v. State, 26 Tex. 209, 82 Am. Dec. 605. But positive identification of paper money may, under some circumstances, be dispensed with. Bagley v. State, 3 App. 163. The property described in the indictment must be proved as described. If the property be described with unnecessary particularity in the indictment, such description must nevertheless be proved, or the indictment will not be sustained. Hill v. State, 41 Tex. 253; Warrington v. State, 1 App. 168; Rose v. State, Id. 401; Watson v. State, 5 App. 11; Allen v. State, 8 App. 360; Simpson v. State, 10 App. 681; Davis v. State, 13 App. 215; Courtney v. State, 3 App. 258; McGee v. State, 4 App. 625; Cameron v. State, 9 App. 332; Gray v. State, 11 App. 411. But where the variance is as to surplusage, or as to immaterial matter, it will not be fatal. The rule requiring the descriptive averments in the indictment to be proved, is complied with when such averments are substantially proved, as that one identifies the other. Smith v. State, 7 App. 382; Sweat v. State, 4 App. 617; Wolf v. State, Id. 332; Meuley v. State, 3 App. 382; Stoneham v. State, Id. 594; Roth v. State, 10 App. 27; Hart v. State, 14 App. 657. When the indictment charges the theft of two or more animals or of several articles of property, a conviction may be had when the proof shows the theft of but one of the animals, or of but one of the articles described. Alderson v. State, 2 App. 10. As to identity of animals, see arts. 881, 883, and notes. The jury cannot leave the court room and inspect the alleged stolen property, even with the consent of the defendant. Smith v. State, 42 Tex. 444.

Description of money in an indictment as "ten dollars, lawful money" requires proof of coin. Warren v. State, 29 Tex. 369.

Sufficient to describe the stolen animal by the generic term "horse," "ass," "mule" or "cattle." But if the descriptive averments unnecessarily include color, brand or sex, such averments must be proved. Hill v. State, 41 Tex. 253; Coleman v. State, 21 App. 520, 2 S. W. 859; Loyd v. State, 22 App. 646, 3 S. W. 670; Smythe v. State, 17 App. 244.

Where an indictment charged theft of a bill issued by the Chatam National Bank, and the one offered in evidence purported to be issued by the Chatham National Bank, it was held that the variance was not material. Roth v. State, 10 App. 27.

"Bank-bills" include "bank-notes," and where the indictment alleged the theft of a bank-bill, and the evidence proved the theft of a bank-note, there was no variance. Roth v. State, 10 App. 27.

An indictment which alleged that the animal stolen was "an animal of the horse species," was held to be sufficient, but reprehensible pleading. Smythe v. State, 17 App. 244. It is unnecessary to further describe the animal in the indictment, than to allege that it was a "horse," an "ass," or a "mule." If it be more particularly described as by its color, or brand, or sex, the descriptive allegation must be proved, or a conviction cannot be sustained. Allen v. State, 8 App. 360.

The indictment in this case charges the theft of a "beef, an animal of the cattle kind." The proof shows that the alleged stolen animal was a cow. Held, that the term "cow" is embraced in the term "beef," and that there is no variance between the allegation and the proof. Smith v. State, 24 App. 290, 6 S. W. 40; Stewart v. State, 24 App. 418, 6 S. W. 317.

The indictment charged the appellant with the theft of "one head of neat cattle." The proof shows that the cow of the alleged owner, with her original ear-marks changed into the ear-marks of the appellant, was found in the pen of the appellant, the appellant and another being present. To the owner's claim of property the appellant asserted no counterclaim, nor did he offer any explanation of his possession, but helped to turn the cow out of the pen. Afterward, a yearling, the offspring of the cow, was found upon the range, both the brand and the ear-marks of the owner of the cow, originally upon it, having been changed to the brand and ear-marks of the appellant. Held, that the proof should have been made to designate which of the animals was referred to in the indictment, and the charge of the court should have limited the evidence respecting the other animal to the legitimate purpose for which it was received. For the same reason—that it does not identify the animal referred to in the indictment—the evidence is insufficient to support the judgment of conviction. Coward v. State, 24 App. 590, 7 S. W. 332.

Evidence of gold and paper money is admissible on trial for theft of silver money when the money was all taken at the same time. Davis v. State, 32 App. 377, 23 S. W. 794.

The indictment charged the defendant with stealing a sorrel mare, thin in order, without any particular marks or brands. Evidence that he was seen coming from the direction of the owner's residence riding such an animal, and that he did not own any animal of that description; held sufficient identification to support the verdict. Pearce v. State, 37 App. 643, 40 S. W. 806.

Evidence held sufficient to identify animal. Pierce v. State (Cr. App.) 36 S. W. 95.

A witness testified that he knew defendant's cattle well. Defendant should have been allowed to ask witness on cross-examination to state the size, sex, color and apparent age of each of his three cattle. Berry v. State, 37 App. 44, 38 S. W. 812.

On trial of theft of one head of cattle it is admissible to show that bones which appeared to be those of a beef corresponding in size to that alleged to have been stolen by appellant, were dug up on the place occupied by him. Foster v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 58.

In prosecution for theft of property belonging to unknown owner, court must charge jury to acquit unless State identifies property as property taken from possession of unknown owner. Melton v. State (Cr. App.) 56 S. W. 67.

Where brand recorded after the commission of the offense is admitted in evidence, the court should instruct the jury that it can only be considered for purpose of identity and not to prove ownership. Welch v. State, 42 App. 338, 60 S. W. 46.

Under an information describing the property stolen as "lawful money of the United States," proof of theft of silver certificates or national bank notes was a variance. Perry v. State, 42 App. 540, 61 S. W. 400.

When theft of 85 cents, lawful current money of the United States of America is charged, the evidence must show legal tender coin, or United States currency. Black v. State, 46 App. 107, 79 S. W. 311.

The descriptive averments of an indictment must be proved as they are alleged; and in a prosecution for theft, where the property taken was described in the indictment as current money of the United States of America, it was necessary to prove that it was such, and the testimony of the loser that it consisted of certain coins was insufficient. Rogers v. State, 58 App. 146, 124 S. W. 921.

Where the indictment alleged the larceny of a $5 gold piece of United States money, the state must not only prove that a $5 gold piece was stolen, but must show that it was United States money. Maxey v. State, 58 App. 118, 124 S. W. 927.

Where the information charged accused with the theft of $1, current money of the United States, of the value of $1, the state must prove that the money taken was current money of the United States; that allegation being descriptive. Johnson v. State, 58 App. 442, 126 S. W. 597.

An indictment for theft of a sack of walnuts will not be supported by proof that it was a sack of mixed nuts. Poston v. State, 58 App. 583, 126 S. W. 1148.

Where, on a trial for larceny, the identity of the alleged stolen property is in dispute, the acts and declarations of the prosecuting witness in relation to the property, subsequent to the theft, and at a time accused had parted with his possession, are inadmissible, though it is competent to prove by prosecutor the identity of the property. Richards v. State, 59 App. 203, 127 S. W. 823.

Where a complaint charged the stealing of certain personalty, and an information charged the stealing of other articles, though the testimony at the trial may have tended to show that accused stole the goods charged in the complaint, but there was no evidence in the record to show that he stole the articles described in the information, the conviction will be set aside. Randell v. State, 62 App. 524, 138 S. W. 118.

In a trial for stealing hides, it was proper to permit an officer to testify that, before recovering them from a package which accused had shipped, the owner described part of the stolen hides, and on afterwards opening the package found the hides described. Davis v. State, 63 App. 453, 140 S. W. 349.

Where lard compound was made of cotton seed oil and oleostearine, and was generally described as lard both in trade and among consumers, proof of the theft of such compound was sufficient to sustain a conviction under an indictment charging the theft of lard, though "lard" as defined by the dictionaries and the pure food law means a product of a hog. Roman v. State, 64 App. 515, 142 S. W. 912.

In a prosecution for stealing cattle, proof of the brand on the cattle, when not relied on to prove ownership, is admissible to identify the animals. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 571.

Under an indictment alleging the theft of a check indorsed by P. and delivered by him to a person named, the admission of evidence showing the theft of a check indorsed by a person other than P. and by such person delivered to the same named person is a variance between the allegation and proof, and is reversible error. Ferguson v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 592.

In a prosecution for the theft of cattle, the owner's testimony that the animal he lost had a certain brand, which was not shown to have been recorded, and that the hide of the buried animal looked like that of the animal lost but had cuts in it where the brands were, was admissible when offered, not to show ownership, but only to show identity of the hide with the animal missing. Elmore v. State, 72 App. 226, 162 S. W. 517.

In a prosecution for theft, evidence held insufficient to identify certain property in defendant's possession as that which was stolen. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 153 S. W. 851.

Under Rev. St. 1911, art. 7160, as amended by Acts 33d Leg. c. 69, providing that no brand on animals except such as are recorded shall be recognized in law as evidence of the ownership of the animals upon which it is used, but that this shall not apply in criminal cases, in a criminal case evidence as to unrecorded brands is admissible to prove ownership as well as identity. Turner v. State, 71 App. 477, 160 S. W. 357.

On a trial for cattle theft, evidence as to an unrecorded cattle brand was admissible on the question of identity, though prior to Acts 33d Leg. c. 69, amending Rev. St. 1911, art. 7160, such evidence was not admissible to prove ownership. Turner v. State, 71 App. 477, 160 S. W. 357.

Evidence of the brand on the cattle alleged to have been stolen is admissible in evidence to prove their identity, though such brand is not recorded; the court having charged that it was admissible only for that purpose, and not to establish ownership. Reynolds v. State, 71 App. 454, 160 S. W. 362.

The testimony of the owner of a stolen horse, positively identifying an animal found in the defendant's possession as his own, is sufficient to sustain a conviction on appeal, even though the preponderance of the evidence is the other way. Stewart v. State, 71 App. 480, 160 S. W. 381.

Proof of the theft of one of several articles described and alleged to have been stolen in an indictment would support a conviction. Schenk v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 357.

Where an indictment charged the theft of "one distributor leather belt," and a witness testified that he would call it a distributor leather belt or a distributor drive belt, the court had no authority to strike from the indictment such description because of alleged variance of testimony. Schenk v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 357.

Where an indictment described the theft of "one distributor leather belt," and the witness testified that "the distributor leather belt I refer to is a large leather belt attached to another part of the machinery and also the distributor and drives the distributor belt. I don't know what they call the leather belt, but I call it a distributor leather belt, or a drive belt. The distributor belt proper is a canvas belt that distributes the cotton"—it was not error to refuse to strike the testimony as tending to prove theft of a belt other than the one alleged. Schenk v. State (Cr. App.) 174 S. W. 357.

In a prosecution for the theft of goats, where the owner had testified as to brand of the goats he had lost, and as to the brand of those found evidence as to the condition of the brand and to facts tending to show that the original brand had been run over and the marks changed was admissible. Simonds v. State (Cr. App.) 175 S. W. 1064.

30. — Value of property.—O'Dell v. State, 44 App. 307, 70 S. W. 964.

As to proof of value, see, also, art. 1342, note.

When the value is alleged at so many dollars, the proof may be value in currency dollars. Hubotter v. State, 32 Tex. 479.

In proving value, any evidence from which the jury can infer the value of the property is admissible; as for instance what the owner testifies of its value to him; the opinions of witnesses acquainted with like property; what such property has brought at actual sale, etc. Martinez v. State, 16 App. 122; Cannon v. State, 18 App. 172; Saddler v. State, 20 App. 195; Rollins v. State, 32 App. 567, 25 S. W. 125.

The defendant is entitled to prove the market value of the hogs, in rebuttal of evidence adduced by the state as to value. Cannon v. State, 18 App. 172.

Where evidence showed value of saddle to be twenty-two dollars and that owner had refused that amount for same, held sufficient proof of value. Rollins v. State, 32 App. 566, 25 S. W. 125.

Where the verdict of the jury fixes the value of the stolen property at the highest estimate of a number of witnesses the verdict will not be disturbed. Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 28 S. W. 202.

Where one was convicted of theft of a $10 United States Currency bill, the fact that it was a $10 bill and United States Currency proves its value. Sowles v. State, 52 App. 17, 105 S. W. 178.

On trial for theft of a watch, the prosecuting witness may be allowed to state what she gave for it. McCoy v. State, 56 App. 551, 120 S. W. 858.

Evidence held to sustain a conviction of theft of personal property over the value of $50. Cabral v. State, 57 App. 304, 122 S. W. 872.

In a prosecution for theft of a deed, evidence was properly admitted as to the cost of having such a deed executed and acknowledged, and of the cost of having the deed in question prepared. Roberts v. State, 61 App. 434, 135 S. W. 144.

Evidence of various witnesses as to the value of the property stolen, ranging from $40 to $52, was sufficient to authorize a finding that the value was $50 or over. Frazier v. State, 62 App. 640, 138 S. W. 620.

Where, in a prosecution for theft of certain gloves, the prosecuting witness testified that defendant thereafter admitted taking them and paid him $1.75 for them was sufficient proof of value to justify the refusal of the charge that the state had failed to prove the value of the gloves, necessitating a verdict of not guilty. Hatfield v. State (Cr. App.) 147 S. W. 236.

One charged with theft of property worth over $50 cannot be convicted of a felony, where there is a doubt as to the value, and he is then entitled to an acquittal of the felony. Wilson v. State, 70 App. 631, 158 S. W. 516.

31. — Ownership and possession.—See Mixon v. State, 28 App. 347, 13 S. W. 143; English v. State, 29 App. 174, 15 S. W. 649; Sharp v. State, 29 App. 211, 15 S. W. 176; Otero v. State, 30 App. 450, 17 S. W. 1081; McGrew v. State, 31 App. 336, 20 S. W. 740.
