	822e. Using roads in violation of orders of road superintendent.
	826. Wilful obstruction of public ditch or diversion of water.

Article 812. [480] Of roads, streets or bridges.

1. Offense.—The obstruction of a public highway is a nuisance. Santa Fé Town-Site Co. v. Norvell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 960.
A commissioners' court has no authority under arts. 1370, 2241, 6859, 6860, 6861, to lease any portion of the public highways for oil and gas wells, which will necessarily be obstructions thereof, notwithstanding such portion of the highway has been acquired by purchase and not condemnation, or the lessee also holds a lease from the owner of the fee of the land over which such portion of the highway runs as a right of way. Boone v. Clark (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 607.

19. Indictment.—An indictment need not allege that the road was a first or second-class road, since, if it were a third-class road, that fact would be matter of defense. Conner v. State, 21 Tex. App. 176, 17 S. W. 157.

22. Evidence—Sufficiency.—In a prosecution for obstructing a public road, evidence held to sustain conviction. Howard v. State, 86 Cr. R. 288, 216 S. W. 168.

24. Instructions—Wilful.—In a prosecution for obstructing a public road, the definition of "wilful" by the court in his charge that by the term it was meant that defendant knew at the time of the alleged obstruction that the road was public, and that the obstruction was placed, if it was obstructed, with an evil intent, held sufficient. Howard v. State, 86 Cr. R. 288, 216 S. W. 168.

Art. 814. Name of owner of automobile or motor vehicle to be registered.

Effect of violation.—Failure of automobile driver to register car and place number thereon, held not to make him liable for damages in collision; there being no causal connection between such failure and the collision. Mumme v. Sutherland (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 395.

Art. 815. Speed of, regulated.

See Figueroa v. Madero (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 271.

Repeal.—Acts 35th Leg. c. 207, regulating speed of motor vehicles, repeals Acts 30th Leg. c. 96 (Vernon's Pen. Code, art. 815), providing that municipalities could fix their own speed ordinances. Ex parte Wright, 82 Cr. R. 247, 199 S. W. 486.

Burden of proof.—Although it was not necessary to allege upon what street accused drove his automobile at an unlawful rate of speed, yet where a certain street was alleged, it was necessary to prove it was on that particular street. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 274, 198 S. W. 964.

Excessive speed as negligence.—The effect of this article is to make it negligence per se to drive an automobile at a greater speed than 18 miles an hour, and, if plaintiff's violation of such statute was the direct and proximate cause of the collision with defendant's interurban car at a street crossing, plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. Southern Traction Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 457.

Art. 816. Not to be operated as to endanger life or limb.

See Figueroa v. Madero (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 271.

Art. 820a. Operation of motor vehicle without number and seal; false seal or number; venue of prosecution; disposition of fines.

Construction of act in general.—Acts 35th Leg. c. 190, and chapter 207, as amended by Acts 1st Called Sess. 35th Leg. c. 31, creating state highway department, and providing for licensing of motor vehicles, held not a revenue measure, though the amounts realized from license fees greatly exceed expense of administering law. Atkins v. State Highway Department (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 226.

Amount of license.—Where evidence did not show, and there was nothing in Acts 35th Leg., c. 190, and chapter 207 as amended by Acts 1st Called Sess. 35th Leg. c. 31, providing for licensing of motor vehicles, to show that licenses were excessive, it must be presumed they were reasonable. Atkins v. State Highway Department (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 226.

Civil actions.—Operation of an automobile in violation of arts. 820a-820yy, is negligence per se when an accident is caused by the violation, and supports a civil action for damages for injuries inflicted by the person operating the machine. Flores v. Garcia (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 743.

In an action for injuries sustained in a collision with automobile, it was not improper to plead arts. 820a-820yy, in hæc verba on the theory that it would improperly influence the minds of the jury. Id.

In an action for injury sustained by plaintiff in a collision with defendant's automobile which he alleged was being operated in violation of arts. 820a-820yy, an instruction that such statute had no application, and that the jury should not consider it in arriving at their verdict, was properly refused. Id.

Art. 820aa. Operation of motor vehicles without number displayed; false or fictitious plate; motorcycles; plates to be kept clean and distinct.

Offense.—In a prosecution under art. 820aa, as amended, against the president and general manager of a corporation, based on the operation by the corporation of a motor car on which the seal assigned by the highway department was not displayed, it is a defense that defendant procured a seal for such car, as he did for all the others, and gave orders for its attachment, which orders were not carried out through a change in the personnel of the corporation's servants, and that defendant was ignorant that the car was operated without a seal. Axtell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 264, 216 S. W. 394.

Art. 820aaa. Operating motor vehicle for hire without registration and license.—Any person or agent of any person, or any agent or officer of any firm or corporation who operates any commercial motor vehicle or interurban commercial motor vehicle in carrying passengers or freight for hire between any cities, towns or villages of this State when such vehicle has not been duly registered and licensed as required by the next preceding section of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction, be fined in any sum not less than $25 and not exceeding $200; and each day such vehicle is so operated shall constitute a separate offense. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 113, § 3 (§ 16b).]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 820b1. Driving unmarked state motor vehicle.—Any person, driving any automobile, truck or other motor vehicle belonging to the State of Texas upon the streets of any town or city, or upon the highways of this State, without the inscription specified in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 7012½bb, Civil Statutes, ante], printed thereon, shall be fined in any sum not less than Twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars, nor more than One Hundred ($100.00) Dollars. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 59, § 2.]

Art. 820b2. Use of state motor vehicle for purposes other than state business.—Any person who shall use any automobile, truck or other motor vehicle owned by the State of Texas, for any purpose except in the transaction of business for the State of Texas, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be fined any sum not less than Five ($5.00) Dollars nor more than Five Hundred ($500.00) Dollars. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 820b3. Operating motor vehicle without proper number plate.—(a) Any person operating, or as owner permitting to be operated, on the public highways of this State, any motor vehicle during any calendar year, except the first calendar year after a renumbering is ordered as provided for herein, to which motor vehicle for the current year there is not attached a registration seal assigned for said vehicle, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred ($200.00) dollars. Any person who shall operate, or as owner permit to be operated, a motor vehicle with a number plate or seal issued for a different motor vehicle attached thereto, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred ($200.00) dollars. Any person who shall operate, or as owner permit to be operated, any motor vehicle to which there is not attached a license number plate or pair of license number plates issued for said vehicle, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred ($200) dollars. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 44, § 1.]

Explanatory.—This article and the two articles following constitute subdivisions (a), (b), and (c) of section 18, chapter 190, Acts 1917, 35th Leg., as amended by Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 44. The first part of the section is set forth, ante, as art. 7012½b, Civil Statutes. Took effect November 15, 1921.

Art. 820b4. Operation of motor cycle without proper seal.—(b) Any person operating, or as owner permitting to be operated, on the public highways of this State, any motorcycle during any calendar year to which motor cycle there is not attached a registration seal assigned to said motor cycle, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred ($200.00) dollars. [Id.]

See note under art. 820b3.

Art. 820b5. Improper use of number plate or seal; cleaning marks.—(c) No person shall attach to or display on any motor vehicle any number plate or seal assigned to a different motor vehicle or assigned to it under any other motor vehicle law other than by the Highway Department of this State, or any registration seal other than that assigned for the current year, or a homemade or fictitious number plate or seal. All letters, numbers and other identification marks shall be kept clear and distinct and free from grease or other blurring matter so that they shall be plainly seen at all times during daylight. Any person violating any provision of this Section shall be fined in sum not more than two hundred ($200.00) dollars. [Id.]

See note under art. 820b3.

Art. 820b6. Operation of motor bus without compliance with registration law.—Any owner of a motor vehicle with a seating capacity of more than seven passengers who shall fail or refuse to comply with this Section [Art. 7012½, Civil Statutes] shall be fined in any sum not more than two hundred ($200.00) dollars. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. ch. 131, § 1 (§ 16); Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 52, § 1 (§ 16).]

Art. 820b7. Violation of regulations as to weight of loads, tires, and rear view mirrors.—Any person or persons driving or operating or permitting to be operated any vehicle whose gross weight exceeds the maximum weights prescribed herein, or which is not equipped with a rear view mirror or whose tire equipment does not meet the requirements of this act [Art. 7012½, Civil Statutes, ante] shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding two hundred ($200.00) dollars. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 131, § 1 (§ 16); Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 52, § 1 (§ 16).]

Art. 820b8. Violation of order of road officers to refrain from use of road at certain times.—Any party guilty of violating the provisions and directions of such order of the county road superintendent or road supervisor [Art. 7012½, Civil Statutes, ante] before or after it has been so approved by such judgment of the county judge shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined in any sum not exceeding $200.00. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 52, § 1 (§ 16).]

Art. 820d. Lights on motor vehicles, motorcycles, and bicycles; glaring lights prohibited.—It shall be unlawful for any person to operate an automobile, motorcycle or bicycle, upon the public highways of this State, at night time, whose front lamps shall project forward a light of such glare and brilliancy as to seriously interfere with the sight of, or temporarily blind the vision of the driver of a vehicle approaching from an opposite direction. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 207, § 9; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 161, § 1a.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Validity.—Acts 36th Leg. (1919) c. 161, § 1a, amending this article, held void for indefiniteness; the glare and brilliancy not being described by any standard, in view of Penal Code, art. 6, and Const. art. 1, § 10. Griffin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 498, 218 S. W. 494.

Art. 820i. Permitting operation by unlicensed chauffeur.

Chauffeur.—A salesman for an oil company, who first used a horse-drawn vehicle and later used an automobile truck to transport the oils which he sold, it being his custom to take orders and deliver goods immediately, was not a chauffeur, where such salesman received a regular salary and no compensation for operation of the automobile truck, section 25 of the act defining a "chauffeur" as any person whose business or occupation is that of operating a motor vehicle for hire, hence such salesman could not be convicted of operating an automobile for hire without a license. Matthews v. State, 85 Cr. R. 469, 214 S. W. 339.

Art. 820k. Law of the road.—(a) The driver or operator of any vehicle in or upon any public highway in this State, shall drive or operate such vehicle in a careful manner with due regard for the safety and convenience of pedestrians and all other vehicles or traffic upon such highway, and wherever practicable shall travel upon the right hand side of such highway. Two vehicles which are passing each other in opposite directions, shall have the right of way and no other vehicle to the rear of either of such two vehicles shall pass or attempt to pass such two vehicles. On all occasions the driver or operator of any vehicle on or upon any public highway in this State shall travel upon the right hand side of such highway unless the road on the left hand side of such highway is clear and unobstructed for a distance of at least fifty yards ahead.

(b) Vehicles proceeding in opposite directions shall pass each other to the right, each giving to the other one-half of the road as nearly as possible.

(c) Vehicles overtaking other vehicles proceeding in the same direction, shall pass to the left thereof and shall not again drive to the right until the road is reasonably clear of such overtaken vehicle.

(d) It shall be the duty of the driver, rider, or operator of a vehicle about to be overtaken and passed, to give way to the right in favor of the overtaking vehicle on suitable and audible signal, given by or on behalf of the operator, driver or other person in charge and control of such overtaking vehicle, if such overtaking vehicle be a motor vehicle.

(e) Excepting where controlled by such traffic ordinances or regulations enacted by local authorities, as are permitted under this Act, the operator of a vehicle approaching an intersection on the public highway shall yield the right-of-way to a vehicle approaching such intersection from the right of such first named vehicle.

(f) It shall be the duty of the person operating or in charge of an overtaking vehicle to sound audible and suitable signal before passing a vehicle proceeding in the same direction.

(h) In all passing and overtaking, such assistance shall be given by the occupants of each vehicle respectively to the other as the circumstances shall reasonably demand in order to obtain clearance and avoid accident.

(i) Every person having control or charge of any motor vehicle or other vehicle upon any public highway and approaching any vehicle drawn by horse or horses, or any horse upon which any person is riding, shall operate, manage and control such motor vehicle or other vehicle in such manner, as to exercise every reasonable precaution to prevent the frightening of any such horse or horses and to insure the safety of any person riding or driving the same; and if such horse or horses appear frightened, the person in control of such motor vehicle or other vehicle, shall reduce its speed, and if requested by signal of the hand, by the driver or rider of such horse or horses, shall not proceed further toward such animal or animals unless such movement be necessary to avoid injury or accident, until such animal or animals shall be under the control of the rider or driver thereof.

(j) The person in control of any vehicle moving slowly along upon any public highway, shall keep such vehicle as closely as possible to the right hand boundary of the highway, allowing more swiftly moving vehicles reasonably free passage to the left.

(k) The person in charge of any vehicle in or upon any public highway, before turning, stopping or changing the course of such vehicle, shall see first that there is sufficient space for such movement to be made in safety, and if the movement or operation of other vehicles may reasonably be affected by such turning, stopping or changing of course, shall give plainly visible or audible signal to the person operating, driving or in charge of such vehicle of his intentions so to turn, stop or change said course.

(l) Before attempting to pass any railroad train, interurban car or street car stopped for the purpose of receiving or discharging passengers, every operator in charge of a motor vehicle or motor cycle approaching the same from the rear and proceeding in the same direction shall bring such motor vehicle or motor cycle to a full stop and shall not start up or attempt to pass until the said railroad train, interurban car or street car has finished receiving and discharging its passengers; provided that cities of ten thousand inhabitants and over may provide by ordinance for the establishment of safety zones for the use and safety of such passengers contiguous to such railroad, interurban or street car tracks, and may maintain and establish such safety zones at such places and may provide by ordinance for the regulation of traffic in passing such safety zones, and when such safety zones are so established and ordinances are passed to regulate the traffic in passing same, the provisions of this subdivision requiring motor vehicles and motor cycles to come to a full stop until said railroad train, interurban car or street car has finished receiving and discharging its passengers, shall not apply at the places where safety zones are so established.

(m) Every motor vehicle, when moving along such portions of the road where the curvature of the road or highway prevents a clear view for a distance ahead of one hundred yards, shall be held under control, and the operator thereof in approaching curves or sharp turns in the road shall give a warning by his gong or other adequate signaling device.

(n) Police patrols, police ambulances, fire patrols, fire engines and fire apparatus in all cases while being operated as such, shall have the right-of-way with due regard to the safety of the public; provided that this provision shall not protect the driver or operator of any such vehicle or his employer or principal from the consequences of the arbitrary exercises of this right to the injury of another. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 207, § 16; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 161, § 2; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 53, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S. ch. 53, amending subd. (L) of this article, took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment. The act amends subdivision L of sec. 16, Acts 35th Leg. ch. 207, as amended by Acts 1919, 36th Leg. ch. 161.

See Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 232.

Validity.—This article is obnoxious to the rule which requires some degree of certainty in informing one accused of crime of the nature of the accusation against him, and such provision is inoperative and unenforceable in so far as it undertakes to define an offense, in view of Pen. Code 1911, arts. 1, 3. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 566; Snider v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 146.

Offenses.—If operator of an automobile, who collided with a buggy, did not see the buggy by reason of his lights suddenly going out, and did not know that the buggy was in front of him, and was going slow and about to stop to fix his lights, he could not be held liable for not having given the passing or approaching signal required. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 566.

Indictment, information, or complaint.—A complaint charging that defendant, having control of a motor vehicle, while approaching a horse on which two persons were riding did operate the vehicle so as to frighten the horse and cause the persons to be thrown, is insufficient to state an offense; for the pleading should state the names of the parties thrown from the horse so as to put defendant on notice. Pinion v. State, 87 Cr. R. 86, 219 S. W. 831.

An information stating that accused "did then and there, while driving a motor vehicle upon a public highway in said state and county, attempt to pass another vehicle by overtaking said vehicle, without then and there sounding audible and suitable signal before passing said vehicle going in the same direction," held to sufficiently charge the offense of failing to give signal on passing another vehicle. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 566.

Evidence.—Testimony that defendant and another were occupying the motor vehicle which frightened a horse is insufficient to show that defendant had control of the motor vehicle. Pinion v. State, 87 Cr. R. 86, 219 S. W. 831.

Effect of violation.—Where plaintiff was injured while passenger in jitney by collision with defendant's automobile, which violated traffic ordinance in not passing center of street intersection before turning to the left, negligence of the jitney driver in violating the speed ordinance was no defense, unless defendant's negligence had not concurred with the jitney driver's negligence in causing the injury; the jitney driver's negligence not being plaintiff's negligence. Zucht v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 684.

A truck driver cannot be relieved from the consequences of his failure to take proper action after discovering plaintiff's peril by claiming that he acted in an emergency, where the emergency was created by his own violation of the traffic laws and ordinances. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 232.

Liability on ground of negligence.—If defendant caused injury to plaintiff, a jitney passenger, by collision with the jitney, by turning his automobile to the left before reaching the center of the street intersection, in violation of the traffic ordinance requirement, his act was negligence per se. Zucht v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 684.

Civil actions—Questions for jury.—Whether plaintiffs suing for personal injuries could have seen defendant's automobile before driving on the bridge, which was too narrow for passing, and used due caution to prevent the collision, was for the jury. Melton v. Manning (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 488.

— Instructions.—If unlawful turning of defendant's automobile to left before reaching center of street intersection was cause of collision with jitney, injuring plaintiff, passenger in the jitney, it was the proximate cause, whether it was the sole cause or concurred with the jitney driver's negligence, and instruction submitting the issue whether such turning was the cause of the accident was sufficient, without submitting the issue whether the jitney driver's negligence caused the collision. Zucht v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 684.

Art. 820/. Duties as to crossing of railroad tracks.

Application.—View of railroad crossing is "obscured," requiring one approaching such a crossing in a motor vehicle to proceed at not more than six miles an hour, etc., when one approaching is not able to see train at sufficient distance to enable him to take necessary steps for his safety. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Harrington (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 685.

This article is inapplicable to one struck at a crossing where the view of the approaching train was obstructed. Schaff v. Bearden (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 503.

This article does not apply to one merely riding in an automobile as a guest or companion, but having no control over the driver, and it would apply to such a one only when the driver's negligence should be imputable to him. Baker v. Streater (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1039.

A finding that automobilist could have crossed a railroad in safety, if he had reduced the speed of his car to 6 miles per hour, was not irreconcilable with a finding acquitting him of contributory negligence; the crossing not being obscured and this article not applying. Hines v. Richardson (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 889.

Burden of proof.—In an action for injuries in a collision between a train and an automobile, the burden is on defendant to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the driver of the automobile violated this article, requiring him to reduce his speed to six miles per hour. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 277.

Evidence.—In an action for death in a collision between a train and an automobile, evidence by defendant's witnesses that the automobile was running 15 miles an hour when approaching the crossing, but they could not say whether it reduced speed, and by plaintiff's witnesses that it was running very slowly, held to support special verdict, finding that speed was reduced to six miles an hour. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 277.

Instructions.—In action against railroad for death at crossing of one driving automobile on plaintiff's request, court should have defined "crossing," and "view of the crossing," so that jury could have applied facts. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Harrington (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 685.

In an action for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff, struck by defendant's railroad train at a crossing while riding in an automobile driven by another, where there were special findings that plaintiff exercised ordinary care for his own safety, and was not engaged in a joint enterprise with the driver, refusal to submit the question of whether the automobile was slowed down to a speed not greater than six miles an hour within 30 feet of the crossing, held not reversible error; the findings of the jury being conclusive. Baker v. Streater (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1039.

Acts constituting negligence.—Although the violation of the law regulating the speed of automobiles operated on highways is negligence per se, and is punishable criminally, yet such negligence is not actionable for damages unless it was the proximate cause of the injury. Schoellkopf Saddlery Co. v. Crawley (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1172.

It is negligence per se to run an automobile upon a highway at a greater rate of speed than that permitted by statute and renders the driver liable for damages resulting therefrom. Carvel v. Kusel (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 941.

Evidence that defendant's automobile was being operated on a city street at a speed of 20 miles an hour when a collision occurred warranted the jury in finding that he was operating the car negligently as a matter of fact and guilty of negligence per se as a matter of law. Flores v. Garcia (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 743.

Art. 820r. Local regulations prohibited; exceptions.

See McCutcheon v. Wozencraft (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 733.

Repeal.—This article repeals art. 815, providing that municipalities could fix their own speed ordinances. Ex parte Wright, 82 Cr. R. 247, 199 S. W. 486.

One being prosecuted under a city ordinance for speeding at the time this act, relating to speed of automobiles, went into effect, should be discharged under art. 16, because such act contains no saving clause as to pending actions. Id.

Validity of ordinances.—Municipal ordinance, licensing operation of automobiles for hire, held not in conflict with this act. Ex parte Parr, 82 Cr. R. 525, 200 S. W. 404.

Ordinance of Dallas of August 2, 1918, entitled one regulating local street transportation, and excluding from a certain zone regular lines of jitneys, held not in conflict with or repugnant to this act. Gill v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 209.

Plaintiffs' business of leasing or hiring driverless automobiles to the general public held to be of a public nature, to contemplate and in fact make use of the streets of defendant city, and to affect the public welfare, so as to be subject to license and reasonable regulation by the city. City of San Antonio v. Besteiro (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 472.

Art. 820t. Acting as chauffeur without license, etc.

Chauffeur.—An American soldier in active service, though he is required to operate a motorcycle with due care, is not a chauffeur within the state statute, and need not procure a state license as chauffeur. American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Struwe (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 534.

Violation as negligence.—That plaintiff, who was operating a motorcycle, had not procured a state license as a chauffeur will not excuse negligence of defendant in running down plaintiff with motorcar. American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Struwe (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 534.

Art. 820ww. Disposition of fines collected.—Fines collected for violations of any of the provisions of this Act shall be used by the municipality or the counties in which the same are assessed, and to whom the same are payable, in the construction and maintenance of roads, bridges and culverts in the City or County where such convictions are had, and for the enforcement of the Traffic Laws regulating the use of the public highways of this State by motor vehicles and motorcycles. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 207, § 37; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 161, § 3.]

Art. 820y. Provisions cumulative.

Pending prosecutions.—One being prosecuted under a city ordinance for speeding at the time this act, relating to speed of automobiles, went into effect, should be discharged under art. 16, because such act contains no saving clause as to pending actions. Ex parte Wright, 82 Cr. R. 247, 199 S. W. 486.

Art. 820yy. Penalty for violation of certain of foregoing provisions.

Art. 820z. Arrest without warrant.

Art. 820zz. Speed of commercial vehicles.—Commercial motor vehicles of the kinds and weights specified in this section shall not be operated on the public highways of this State at greater rates of speed than herein prescribed, as follows:

(A) Commercial motor vehicles equipped with pneumatic tires or cushion wheels.

Maximum Weight in Pounds, Including Gross Weight of Vehicle and Load:	Speed Limit Miles per hour:
2,001 to 4,000.....	18

8,001 to 10,000.....	10

Any person who shall operate a commercial motor vehicle at a greater rate of speed than that herein allowed shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not less than ten ($10.00) dollars nor more than two hundred ($200.00) dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not more than thirty (30) days. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 131, § 3; Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 52, § 3.]

See arts. 7012½-7012½a-2, civil statutes, ante.

Art. 820zzz. Operation of unregistered commercial vehicles; weight of loads.—Any owner of a commercial motor vehicle or trailer who operates or permits the same to be operated on the public highways of this State without having first registered such vehicle or trailer as provided for in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 7012½ Civil Statutes, ante] or any such owner who operates or permits to be operated a commercial motor vehicle trailer that is loaded with a load weighing over ten per cent in excess of its registered carrying capacity, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by fine not exceeding two hundred ($200.00) dollars for each offense. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 131, § 5; Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 52, § 5.]

without the knowledge and consent of said Association for the purpose of catching or killing any bird or birds or for the purpose of taking any bird or bird eggs or for the purpose of destroying any bird nests or bird eggs; it shall be unlawful for any person whomsoever to catch, kill or maim any bird or birds on any such leased area or to catch, kill or maim any bird or birds on or above said area by any means whatsoever even though such person may be above or outside of such leased area; it shall be unlawful for any person whomsoever to discharge any firearms or other explosive on or above any leased area, or to land, tie or anchor any fishing boat within any such leased areas; provided, nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit any representative, agent or employe of said Association from catching, killing or destroying within any such leased area any bird or birds and any animal that may be known to prey upon bird life or bird eggs nor to prohibit such representative, agent or employe from taking bird eggs and catching and carrying away any bird or birds for propagation or conservation or scientific purposes only, nor to prohibit persons from taking refuge on any leased area on account of storms. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 20, § 3.]

Art. 923v. #### Article 924. [530] "Forgery" defined.

See Pope v. State (Cr. App.) 219 S. W. 1119; Hale v. State (Cr. App.) 219 S. W. 1119.

1. Nature and elements of offense.—Where defendant forged a note with intent to defraud, the offense was complete, though the note was not delivered to the payee. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

In a prosecution for forgery consisting of writing in a check a larger amount than authorized by its maker, the fact that the defendant used an innocent agent to fill out the fraudulent check which defendant indorsed did not release defendant. Duncan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 191, 215 S. W. 853.

3. — Nature and apparent efficacy of instrument.—It is settled law that a forged instrument must be such as, if true, would create, increase, diminish, discharge, or defeat a pecuniary obligation or would transfer or in some manner affect property. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

Even though county superintendent of public schools could not execute a negotiable order to a bank to pay certain money to T., if such order was payable to "T., or bearer," and T. indorsed the same, he thereby guaranteed genuineness thereof, and would be liable, although unenforceable against bank or maker, so that false indorsement of payee's name would constitute forgery. Carrell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 554, 209 S. W. 158.

A duplicate deposit slip can become the subject of forgery. Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 640, 218 S. W. 750.

4. — Particular instruments.—A defendant, who, with intent to injure and defraud, signed seller's name to an order without lawful authority was guilty of forgery. Chadwick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 842.

8. Swindling distinguished.—In a prosecution for forgery committed by the insertion in a check of a larger amount than defendant was authorized by maker to insert, the contentions of the defendant, appellant, that such acts would make a case of swindling and not of forgery, cannot be sustained, since if he so exceeded his authority it would constitute forgery and not swindling, and if the case be one of swindling or forgery it must be prosecuted as forgery. Duncan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 191, 215 S. W. 853.

In a prosecution for forgery by writing into a check a larger amount than authorized by its maker, the action of an employé of another bank in ascertaining from the payee bank, at the defendant's request, whether or not the payee bank would pay any amount filled in, did not change the crime from forgery to swindling; there being nothing to show that the maker of the check authorized the payee of bank to make such statement to the officer of the other bank. Id.

16. Indictment—Description of or setting forth instrument in general.—That a forged instrument is legally sufficient to create, increase, diminish, discharge, or defeat a pecuniary obligation or to transfer or affect property must appear either from the face of the instrument or by additional averments in the indictment of extrinsic facts necessary to charge forgery. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

An indictment for forgery of a check or passing a forged instrument held not ambiguous for failure to show that the check was such an instrument as would diminish the obligation or transfer the property to the party whose name appeared as signer. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 329.

18. — Facts extrinsic to instrument.—In prosecution of tax collector for forgery, indictment for forgery of items on delinquent tax report, after its approval by commissioners' court, and certificate, in view of Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 1402-1498, permitting a credit for delinquent taxes, was insufficient where it did not expressly allege that defendant was a tax collector. Powell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 584, 204 S. W. 439.

Where alleged forged instrument did not show on its face how it might work fraud, the indictment should contain averments of extrinsic facts disclosing how the instrument would create a liability and an indictment alleging that defendant sent a telegram reading, "Send jewelry here. 304 Main Ave.," signed by the name of another, without averments of extrinsic facts, was insufficient, since instrument did not disclose how a liability might arise. Young v. State, 84 Cr. R. 179, 206 S. W. 197.

An indictment for forgery setting out a written instrument which on its face would have created, increased, diminished, discharged, or defeated any pecuniary obligation, or would have transferred or in any manner affected any property whatever, requires no explanatory averments. Martin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 89, 209 S. W. 668.

Forged instrument, reading, "Fort Worth, Texas, May 4, 1918. Received of the Fort Worth National Bank $100.00 for account of I N Bank, Groveton," with signature, held within this article, defining "forgery," so that indictment for forgery setting out such instrument required no explanatory averments. Id.

19. — Designation or description of parties.—An indictment which sets out the forged note by its tenor need not allege that the payee, a bank, is a corporation; the bank not being the injured party. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

Failure of indictment for forgery to embrace averments explaining the words, "I N Bank, Groveton," the forged instrument being an acknowledgment of the receipt of $100 for the account of I N Bank, held not to render the indictment subject to quashal on motion. Martin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 89, 209 S. W. 668.

An averment in an indictment for forgery and for passing a forged instrument of the name of the person to be defrauded was unnecessary. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 329.

21. — Issues, proof and variance.—Under indictment for forging name of railroad's agent to bill of lading, in violation of art. 1547, punishable by confinement for not less than 5 nor more than 15 years, conviction could not be had on showing violation of this article, denouncing crime of ordinary forgery, penalty for which, under article 936, is imprisonment for not less than 2 or more than 7 years. Crouch v. State, 84 Cr. R. 221, 206 S. W. 525.

If, in a prosecution for forgery, there is an effort to show the words of the instrument declared on mean anything other than what they naturally import, the variance is available on objection to the evidence. Martin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 89, 209 S. W. 668.

There is a fatal variance between an indictment charging forgery of the name "Bickerell" to a check and proof that the name forged was "Bicknell." Wallace v. State, 87 Cr. R. 527, 222 S. W. 1104.

In a prosecution for forging a check given in payment for a hat, there was no variance because the check offered in evidence bore the words "a satisfied customer" following the signature, as they were not a part of the instrument, and it was not necessary to incorporate them. Criner v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 860.

In prosecution for forgery of check, indorsements on check at the time it was offered in evidence did not authorize objection upon the ground of variance; the indorsements not being a part of the document declared upon. Mettall v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 315.

24. Evidence—Admissibility.—Passing forged check with knowledge of forgery is circumstance against defendant charged with forgery. Johnson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 585, 200 S. W. 522.

In prosecution of superintendent of schools for forging names of payees on checks drawn by him, evidence that money drawn on had been deposited in bank was material and admissible. Carrell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 554, 209 S. W. 158.

In a prosecution for forgery committed by defendant's writing a larger amount than authorized in a check payable to defendant, signed by prosecuting witness, evidence with reference to a note prosecuting witness had signed with defendant and had to pay showing the defendant's indebtedness to the prosecuting witness held proper as bearing upon the question whether witness gave defendant authority to draw on such witness for the sum placed in the check. Duncan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 191, 215 S. W. 853.

In a prosecution for forgery consisting of writing a larger amount in a check than the maker signing it had authorized defendant to write, defendant's indorsement of the check was proper evidence. Id.

Evidence that a fictitious name was signed to the instrument is a circumstance against its genuineness. Mettall v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 315.

27. — Weight and sufficiency.—In prosecution of two defendants for forgery, evidence held to support a conviction of one only. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

Evidence held insufficient to show definitely defendant's connection with forgery alleged. Sanders v. State, 83 Cr. R. 110, 201 S. W. 411.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of forgery of a duplicate deposit by change of date and amount, defendant denying making the change; expert opinion that alteration was in his handwriting being based on a single figure, and his wife testifying to having made the alteration for an innocent purpose. Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 640, 218 S. W. 750.

In a prosecution for forging the name of another to a check, evidence held sufficient to support verdict of guilty, the forgery being indisputable, as well as the fact that defendant presented and cashed the check on the date it was written, falsely representing that he was the payee named, and writing as his the payee's name on the back, while his undisputed handwriting was before the jury for comparison. Bird v. State, (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 749.

Evidence held to sustain conviction of forgery of check. Mettall v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 315.

In the absence of direct evidence, circumstantial evidence is available to prove forgery. Id.

28. Instructions and questions for jury.—In prosecution for forgery, in which defendant was charged with having forged seller's name to order, instruction submitting the question whether defendant was authorized to act for seller held improper, in that the submission therein of whether defendant's representations that seller handled millinery supplies were fraudulent, and as to whether they induced buyer to make order, and to pay half of the freight, confused the issues. Chadwick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 842.

Art. 926. [532] Intent to injure, etc., necessary.

Offense.—In every contested forgery case a fraudulent intent on part of accused must be shown. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560.

Where defendant, at the request of another, who represented that he could not write, drew a check and signed the name of a third person, and defendant acted innocently and without any intention to defraud, he is not guilty of a forgery. Flores v. State, 86 Cr. R. 267, 216 S. W. 185.

Art. 933. [539] Filling up over signature.

Offense.—In a prosecution for forgery committed by the insertion in a check of a larger amount than defendant was authorized by maker to insert, the contentions of the defendant, appellant, that such acts would make a case of swindling and not of forgery, cannot be sustained, since if he so exceeded his authority it would constitute forgery and not swindling and if the case be one of swindling or forgery it, must be prosecuted as forgery. Duncan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 191, 215 S. W. 853.

In a prosecution for forgery by writing into a check a larger amount than authorized by its maker, the action of an employé of another bank in ascertaining from the payee bank, at the defendant's request, whether or not the payee bank would pay any amount filled in, did not change the crime from forgery to swindling; there being nothing to show that the maker of the check authorized the payee of bank to make such statement to the officer of the other bank. Id.

Charge.—In a prosecution for forgery consisting in defendant's writing in a check signed by prosecuting witness and placed in defendant's hands a larger amount than authorized, an instruction that if defendant had the right to fill in the check for any amount, or believed he had that right, or there was a reasonable doubt upon these propositions, the jury should acquit, held sufficient. Duncan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 191, 215 S. W. 853.

Art. 936. [541] Penalty.

See Crouch v. State, 84 Cr. R. 221, 206 S. W. 525.

Separate offenses.—As the Code makes forgery and the passing of a forged instrument distinct crimes with different punishments, a person may be separately tried for forging and for uttering the same instrument; and an acquittal of the former is no bar to a conviction of the latter. Hooper v. State, 30 Tex. App. 412, 17 S. W. 1066, 28 Am. St. Rep. 926.

Art. 937. [542] Passing forged instrument.

Cited, Reyna v. State, 26 Tex. App. 666, 14 S. W. 455; Crouch v. State, 84 Cr. R. 221, 206 S. W. 525.

Offenses.—As the Code makes forgery and the passing of a forged instrument distinct crimes with different punishments, a person may be separately tried for forging and for uttering the same instrument; and an acquittal of the former is no bar to a conviction of the latter. Hooper v. State, 30 Tex. App. 412, 17 S. W. 1066, 28 Am. St. Rep. 926.

One who presents a false check to a paying teller, and disappears when the teller steps into another part of the bank, without accepting the check or paying the money thereon, and calls an officer, is guilty of attempting to pass a forged instrument. McConnell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 409, 212 S. W. 498.

The forged instrument includes a forged check made either by the person passing it or by another. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 237, 238.

Guilty knowledge that the instrument was forged is an essential element of the offense of passing a forged instrument under the statute as it was before the enactment of the statute. Id.

Indictment.—An averment in an indictment for forgery and for passing a forged instrument of the name of the person to be defrauded was unnecessary. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 329; Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

Where a count of an indictment charges an attempt to pass a forged instrument on a certain person, and also charges that he "did pass" it, without stating whom he passed it on, the latter part is fatally defective, and should be regarded as surplusage. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 534, 197 S. W. 589.

Both an attempt and a passing may be charged conjunctively in the same count; both being embraced in the same definition and made punishable in the same manner. Id.

In an indictment for passing a forged check, which is an ordinary commercial instrument, no purport clause is necessary. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 237, 238.

A check is complete without indorsement, so that an allegation that the indorsement thereon was false is unnecessary in an indictment for passing a forged check. Id.

An indictment for forgery of a check or passing a forged instrument held not ambiguous for failure to show that the check was such an instrument as would diminish the obligation or transfer the property to the party whose name appeared as signer, nor as showing the check to have been drawn on two banks. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 329.

Indictment charging that defendant did "unlawfully attempt to pass as true to O. a forged instrument in writing, * * * which said instrument in writing the said G. [defendant] then and there knew to be forged," held sufficient as against contention that it did not allege in the statutory language, that defendant "knowingly" attempted to pass the instrument; the allegation that he knew it to be forged being sufficient. Jennings v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 525.

Indictment charging the defendant with attempting to pass a forged instrument, must allege that defendant knew at the time he passed or attempted to pass the instrument that it was forged. Id.

Issues, proof and variance.—In a prosecution for passing a forged instrument, the instrument must be introduced in evidence and that fact appear in the record. Pyor v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 374; McConnell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 409, 212 S. W. 498.

In a prosecution for passing a forged instrument, there was a fatal variance between an indictment charging the passing of a draft dated January 18 and evidence showing the passing of a check dated January 20. Pyor v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 374.

Proof that the forged instrument which defendant is charged with passing was drawn on the "First National Bank of Corsicana" constituted a fatal variance from the indictment, averring that it was intended for the "First National Bank of Waco," Burks v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1094.

Evidence showing that the forged instrument defendant is charged with passing was passed to "I. W. Kestner" constituted a clear variance from the indictment, alleging that defendant passed the instrument to "I. W. Kiersky." Id.

In prosecution for attempting to pass a forged instrument, the proof must show that defendant knew at the time he passed or attempted to pass the instrument that it was forged. Jennings v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 525.

Evidence—Admissibility.—In prosecution for passing forged check, where prosecuting witness whose name appeared therein denied its authenticity, evidence that he occasionally gambled for money was properly rejected, where no effort was made to show that check in question was result of such transaction. Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

In prosecution for passing forged check, which defendant claimed he received as consideration for his assignment of lease, testimony that witness told defendant he had no right to sublease land was proper, tending to show that lease alleged to have been transferred was of little value. Id.

In prosecution for passing forged check, where it appeared in general way that defendant was insolvent, defendant's evidence that neither prosecuting witness, whose name appeared on check, nor bank which gave defendant credit on account of deposit, had instituted civil suit against him was properly excluded. Id.

In prosecution for passing forged check, that defendant was familiar with signature of prosecuting witness whose name was appended to check, and that he claimed to have received it in consideration of his assignment of lease, but was unable at trial to produce assignee, were admissible. So was defendant's possession of forged instrument evidence against him, and testimony by payee-indorser that check was not given to him or indorsed by him was admissible. Id.

— Sufficiency.—Evidence held to sustain conviction of passing forged check. Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

In prosecution for passing forged check, evidence held sufficient to sustain finding of guilty. Barnes v. State, 83 Cr. R. 207, 202 S. W. 949.

In prosecution of county judge for passing forged check pursuant to approval by commissioners' court of account with fictitious person, evidence held to sustain conviction. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560.

Art. 943. Mutilate, destroy, deface any book, record, etc.

Offense.—The written answers of applicants for teachers' certificates to questions asked on examination, which must be forwarded to the state superintendent of education and kept by him until delivered to the state board of examiners for grading, are papers required by law to be kept by a state officer, so that their malicious destruction is a felony. Smith v. State, 87 Cr. R. 219, 220 S. W. 552.

After the answers of applicants for teachers' certificates to the examination questions had been delivered to an employé of the state superintendent, they were thereafter in his keeping, so that one who procured them from the express company, by which they were shipped to the state superintendent, and destroyed them, was guilty of destroying documents in the keeping of a public officer. Id.

Indictment.—In an indictment for violation of this article, the commission of the offense by altering, changing, mutilating, destroying, and injuring the documents may be alleged conjunctively, though they are inconsistent with each other. Smith v. State, 87 Cr. R. 219, 220 S. W. 552.

Where the prosecution relied on the destruction of documents in the keeping of a state officer for conviction, it was not necessary to allege the manner of destruction, and allegations of alteration were surplusage, so that the indictment was not invalid for failure to state the manner of alteration. Id.

Art. 946a. Forgery of will.—It shall be unlawful for any person to execute what purports to be the Last Will and Testament of another, without the consent of such other person, and any person so offending shall be guilty of forgery and shall be punished by confinement in the State Penitentiary for a term of not less than two years, nor more than seven years. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 72, § 1.]

Art. 946b. Same; limitation of prosecutions.—Prosecutions under this Act may be begun at any time after the commission of said offense and within five years after the death of said purported testator but not thereafter. [Id., § 2.]

CHAPTER TWO

FORGERY OF LAND TITLES, ETC.

Art.
947. "Forgery of patents," etc., defined.

Art.
949. Knowingly uttering forged instruments.

Article 947. [550] "Forgery of patents," etc., defined.

Cited, Crouch v. State, 84 Cr. R. 221, 206 S. W. 525.

Indictment.—An indictment charging the intent of defendant in aiding in the forgery of a deed, to be to injure and defraud, charges this offense. Roberts v. State, 85 Cr. R. 196, 211 S. W. 219.

Art. 949. [552] Knowingly uttering forged instruments.

Cited, Crouch v. State, 84 Cr. R. 221, 206 S. W. 525.

CHAPTER FIVE

Art. 977m. False packing or fraudulent certificate of classification.

Validity.—This article is not so indefinite as to be unconstitutional or violative of art. 6, the quoted words having a clear meaning as required by arts. 9 and 10, in view of Code Cr. Proc. arts. 58 and 59. Ex parte Montgomery, 86 Cr. R. 636, 218 S. W. 1042.

Offense.—This article prohibits the false packing of bale of cotton with intent to defraud by placing sand, earth, stones, or other foreign substances in the bale of cotton or in some other way doing something to such bale of cotton that the reasonable result would be to defraud the persons dealing therewith. Ex parte Montgomery, 86 Cr. R. 636, 218 S. W. 1042.

Indictment or information.—In prosecution for falsely packing, an indictment or information should charge the particular matter constituting the act or fraud relied on by the state in a given case, by charging that defendant with intent to defraud did falsely pack a bale of cotton by then and there placing certain sand, earth, stones, or other foreign substance in said bale of cotton so that the reasonable result thereof would be to defraud the persons dealing with said bale. Ex parte Montgomery, 86 Cr. R. 636, 218 S. W. 1042.

VIOLATIONS OF UNIFORM WAREHOUSE RECEIPTS ACT

Art. 977o. Issue of warehouse receipt when goods have not been received.—A warehouseman, or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouseman, who issues or aids in issuing a receipt knowing that the goods for which such receipt is issued have not been actually received by such warehouseman, or are not under the actual control at the time of issuing such receipt, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for such offense by imprisonment not exceeding five years, or by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by both. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 126, § 50.]

Explanatory.—This article, and the five articles next following, constitute part IV of the Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act (Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 126, p. 215). For the remainder of this act, see ante, Civ. St. arts. 7827½–7827½zzz.

Art. 977p. Issue of receipt containing false statements.—A warehouseman, or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouseman, who fraudulently issues or aids in fraudulently issuing a receipt for goods knowing that it contains any false statement, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both. [Id., § 51.]

Art. 977q. Issue of duplicate receipt without marking same.—A warehouseman, or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouseman, who issues or aids in issuing a duplicate or additional negotiable receipt for goods knowing that a former negotiable receipt for the same goods or any part of them is outstanding and uncanceled, without plainly placing upon the face thereof the word "Duplicate," except in the case of a lost or destroyed receipt after proceedings as provided for in Section 14 [Civ. St. Art. 7827½g], shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding five years or by a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars, or by both. Issue of receipt not stating ownership in certain cases.—Where there are deposited with or held by a warehouseman goods of which he is owner, either solely or jointly or in common with others, such warehouseman, or any of his officers, agents, or servants who, knowing this ownership, issues or aids in issuing a negotiable receipt for such goods which does not state such ownership, shall be guilty of a crime, and upon conviction shall be punished for each offense by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by both. [Id., § 53.]

Art. 999<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>m. Change of venue on application of state.—When the provisions of this Act have been violated by any person or persons and the grand jury of the county in which the offense was committed have returned an indictment the district judge in whose court the indictment may be returned shall grant a change of venue upon motion made by the Attorney General representing this State, or at his direction, or by the local prosecuting attorney. The motion for a change of venue shall be sufficient if it sets out that the offense charged is prohibited by the provisions of this Act, and that on account of local conditions, preferences, prejudices or influence, it is the opinion of the Attorney General that a fair and impartial trial can not be had in the county where the indictment is found. Upon the filing and presenting of such motion it will be the duty of the district judge in whose court such case may be pending to immediately issue a proper order changing the venue of such case to such other county as the court may select not subject in the opinion of the Attorney General to like conditions and objections. [Id., § 14.]

Art. 999<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4n</sub>. Attorney General to assist in prosecution.—The Attorney General, when directed by the Governor, shall assist the district or county attorney in the prosecution of all offenses committed within the territory embraced by said proclamation for all violations of the provisions of this Act. [Id., § 15.]

Art. 999<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4o</sub>. Martial law need not be declared; use of State Rangers.—The provisions of this Act shall be effective without a declaration of martial law. The State Rangers may be used in the enforcement of the provisions of this Act; if a sufficient number of Rangers are not available the Governor is authorized to employ any number of men to be designated as special Rangers and such men shall have all the power and authority of the regular Rangers, and shall be paid the same salary as the Rangers are paid, and such salaries shall be paid out of the appropriation made to the executive office for the payment of rewards and the enforcement of the law. [Id., § 16.]

Art. 999<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4p</sub>. Martial law may be declared; act cumulative; repeal.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed as limiting the power and authority of the Governor to declare martial law and to call forth the militia for the purpose of executing the law, when in the judgment of the chief executive it is deemed necessary so to do. This Act shall be construed as cumulative of existing laws of this State, and shall not be held to repeal any of the same except where in direct conflict herewith. [Id., § 17.]

Civil liability.—Where one purchased coal oil from a merchant for the purpose of resale, it becomes the merchant's duty, not only to the purchaser, but to the public, to deliver coal oil, and not gasoline. Cohn v. Saenz (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 492.

Art. 997 $\frac{7}{8}$ a. Marking packages.—It shall hereafter be unlawful for any person, firm, association of persons, corporation or carrier selling or transporting for hire any gasoline, benzine, naphtha or other highly inflammable substance made from petroleum to fail to plainly mark the packages containing the same in accordance with the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission unless such regulations should conflict with the provisions of this Act. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 997 $\frac{7}{8}$ b. Name of manufacturer to be shown.—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, association of persons, corporation or carrier selling or transporting for hire any gasoline, benzine, naphtha or other similar product of petroleum, to fail to truly label in large letters showing the name of the manufacturer and the place of manufacture of the products, any tank car, barrel, cask, tank wagon, receptacle or reservoir in which any petroleum product shall be shipped or stored within this State, or from which sales or delivery of the same are to be made. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 9997/8h. Sealing inaccurate measuring devices.—It shall be the duty of the inspector to seal and forbid the use of any inaccurate measuring device until such time as the defeat is corrected. The breaking of said official seal shall be prima facie evidence of a violation of this Act and it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, association of persons, corporation or carrier, to refuse to permit the inspector provided for in this Act, to inspect and seal, if deemed necessary, any such measuring device, or to break the seal after being placed by such inspector. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 9997/8i. Commencement of prosecutions.—The Food and Drug Commissioner, or his inspectors, or any person duly appointed by him for that purpose, shall make complaint and cause proceedings to be commenced against any person for the violation of any provision of this Act, and in such case he shall not be obliged to furnish security for costs. The Food and Drug Commissioner, or his inspectors, or any person by him duly appointed for that purpose shall have in the performance of their duties the power to inspect any factory, store, sales-room, car, warehouse, premises or place where he has reason to believe petroleum products are made, prepared, stored, sold, transported, or offered for sale or exchange, and take samples, and test measuring devices. Stat. arts. 143¼a, 143¼b], or whoever falsely marks or labels any agricultural seeds under Section two of this Act, or “mixture” under Section three of this Act, or whoever shall prevent the Commissioner of Agriculture, or his duly authorized agents from inspecting said seeds and collecting samples as provided in Section seven of this Act [Civ. When the Commissioner of Agriculture believes, or has reason to believe, that any person has violated any of the provisions of Section two, three and eight of this Act, he shall cause notice of such fact together with full specification of this Act or omission constituting the violation, to be given to said person, who either in person or by agent or attorney, shall have the right under such reasonable rules and regulations as may be prescribed by said Commissioner of Agriculture to appear before said Commissioner of Agriculture and introduce evidence, and said hearing shall be private. ## CHAPTER ONE

ASSAULT AND ASSAULT AND BATTERY

Art. 1008. "Assault and battery" defined. 1009. Intent presumed, and "injury" defined. 1012. Any means capable of injury sufficient.	Art. 1013. "Coupled with an ability to commit" defined. 1014. When violence does not amount to. 1015. Degree of force permissible. 1016. Verbal provocation no justification. 1020. Abusive language an offense.

Article 1008. [587] "Assault and battery" defined.

Cited, Gordon v. State, 23 Tex. App. 219, 4 S. W. 833.

Offense.—Custom for superintendent of schools of city to chastise pupils existed in violation of principles of civil law and of provision of Criminal Code denouncing use of unlawful violence upon another's person, and custom was not defense to superintendent when sued for assault by pupil whom he chastised. Prendergast v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 246.

Where collision between defendant's automobile and that in which injured party was riding was an accident brought about by defendant's negligence and without intent to commit an assault, there could be no conviction under statute defining assault and battery. Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 481, 200 S. W. 384.

In prosecution of passenger for murder of street car conductor, where there was evidence that the conductor, while the car was in motion pushed passenger off from platform, causing him to fall on his back, instruction that, if the conductor ejected passenger, causing him bodily pain, "such as was reasonably calculated to produce passion," the passenger could not be convicted of a higher degree of homicide than manslaughter, held erroneous, since such ejection from car constituted an assault and battery, and was sufficient to reduce the crime to manslaughter without specific proof of pain and without proof that it was calculated to produce passion. Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

One who presents at another a shotgun, whether loaded or unloaded, with the intent to alarm and under circumstances calculated to effect that object is guilty not of an aggravated assault, but of simple assault. Hall v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 690.

Indictment—Inclusion in other offense.—In a prosecution for shooting at another with a shotgun, simple assault was not involved, and failure to submit it as an issue was not error. Gillum v. State, 83 Cr. R. 396, 204 S. W. 225.

Both by statute and under decisions conviction may be had for simple assault under a charge of aggravated assault. Simpson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 277, 220 S. W. 777.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for assault, evidence that defendants ordered prosecuting witness to desist in working upon a public road, one having in his possession a large rock and the other a stick, and threatening him with injury if he failed, held to show an offense. Haverbekken v. State, 86 Cr. R. 260, 291, 216 S. W. 397, 398.

As bearing on malice, it may be shown that as a result of the trouble, the day before the assault, between the person assaulted and defendant, charged with the assault, defendant had been discharged from his employment. Mayes v. State (Cr. App.) 222 S. W. 571.

Art. 1009. [588] Intent presumed, and "injury" defined.

See Harper v. State, 84 Cr. R. 345, 207 S. W. 96; Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

Offense.—A man's taking hold of a woman without her consent, and in such a way as to cause in her a sense of shame, or a disagreeable emotion of the mind, is sufficient to constitute an assault, and the slightest degree of force would constitute a battery. Poldrack v. State, 86 Cr. R. 272, 216 S. W. 170.

Evidence.—Evidence that defendant grabbed the alleged injured female with one hand, and put his other hand on her body at or near her privates, accompanying such acts with an insulting proposal to her, if believed by the jury, would justify a verdict of guilty of assault and battery. Poldrack v. State, 86 Cr. R. 272, 216 S. W. 170.

Art. 1012. [591] Any means capable of injury sufficient.

See Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

Art. 1013. [592] "Coupled with ability to commit" defined.

See Hunt v. State (App.) 13 S. W. 858.

Cited, Flournoy v. State, 25 Tex. App. 244, 7 S. W. 865.

Requisites of offense.—Defendant and his brother, being armed with rifles, intercepted an editor on the public road, and demanded a written retraction of an article reflecting on defendant's brother. The editor hesitated, whereupon defendant threw a shell into his rifle, and the retraction was signed. Held, that the offense of assault was complete. Ray v. State (Cr. App.) 21 S. W. 540.

If defendant shot merely to frighten deceased, not to injure him, he committed a simple assault only, under this article. Teague v. State, 84 Cr. R. 169, 206 S. W. 193.

Charge.—On trial for aggravated assault, instruction, in the language of subd. 3, as to use of weapon in angry manner, held not fundamental error, as authorizing conviction for offense not charged. Clayton v. State, 81 Cr. R. 385, 197 S. W. 591.

Art. 1014. [593] When violence does not amount to.

See Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

2. Parent and child.—It is statutory that a father has the right of moderate correction of his child. Walden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 523.

4. Teacher and pupil.—Teacher may lawfully inflict on pupil who has violated rules of school corporal punishment by chastising him in moderate and humane manner, but the superintendent of schools of city of Marshall, incorporated by Sp. Acts 31st Leg. c. 6, was not a "teacher" and if he was as such a public officer, he did not therefore have a right to chastise a pupil in the high school; such right not being conferred by law on any public officer as such. Prendergast v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 246.

Where superintendent of schools of city was not authorized by rules of school board as superintendent to take control of high school to exclusion of teachers therein, because he did so he had no right as teacher to inflict corporal punishment on pupil. Id.

Though a moderate correction of a pupil by his teacher does not amount to an assault and battery, under Pen. Code 1879, art. 490, § 1, yet, if the teacher exceeds his authority, he may be convicted of an assault. Spear v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 125.

Vernon's Ann. Pen. Code 1916, art. 1014, requires that punishment of a pupil by a teacher be moderate, but what is moderate punishment in a given case is to a large extent a question of fact or a mixed question involving fact. Harris v. State, 83 Cr. R. 468, 203 S. W. 1089; Gibson v. Same, 83 Cr. R. 215, 203 S. W. 1091.

For the purpose of chastising a pupil, a school-teacher may take him beyond the schoolhouse or grounds. Dill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 49, 219 S. W. 481.

Under the statute authorizing a school-teacher to punish his pupils moderately, if the punishment passes beyond that point, and is immoderate, or for the purpose of revenge, or maliciously done, the right does not exist, and the right of self-defense in the pupil obtains. Id.

6½. Preventing offense.—If defendant shot plaintiff for the purpose of preventing theft, burglary, etc., on his premises at night, and it reasonably appeared by plaintiff's acts or words coupled with acts that it was plaintiff's purpose to commit one of such offenses, the shooting was justifiable. Ater v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 222.

7. Defense of property.—Where title to house was in dispute and defendant was in possession, his use of force to prevent entry by one which another claimant was attempting to put in possession, held not an assault. McGlothlin v. State, 82 Cr. R. 374, 198 S. W. 784, L. R. A. 1918C, 530.

8. Arrest.—An officer making a lawful arrest may use reasonable means necessary, taking care that the force used is commensurate with the necessity. Harper v. State, 84 Cr. R. 345, 207 S. W. 96.

In a prosecution of a town marshal for aggravated assault and infliction of serious bodily injury, evidence held to sustain a finding that the injured party was not making a forcible resistance to arrest. Id.

SUBD. 6

9. Self-defense.—Where prosecuting witness struck defendant on head with fist, but when defendant drew his pistol retreated, and was fired at by defendant after he had got some distance up the street, and after he had gotten into an automobile and started away, defendant was guilty of assault. Faubian v. State, 83 Cr. R. 234, 203 S. W. 897.

The criminal law rule that a defensive assault is justifiable when it reasonably appears to the aggressor that he is about to be assaulted whether his antagonist contemplated an assault or not does not apply in civil actions for assault, and the aggressor must prove that plaintiff was culpably responsible for the deceptive appearances to escape liability. Chapman v. Hargrove (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 379.

If complainant reached for a singletree with a view of hitting appellant, who then grabbed it, the jury, if they so believed, should have acquitted appellant of assault, and such questions were for the jury. Mathis v. State, 84 Cr. R. 347, 206 S. W. 528.

If defendant's wife made an assault upon him or was trying to assault him at the time, he had the right to use necessary force to escape, and would not be guilty of assault. Hays v. State, 84 Cr. R. 349, 206 S. W. 941.

Where complaining witness made an unlawful assault upon defendant which produced a reasonable apprehension of death or serious bodily injury at hands of complaining witness in defendant's mind, an attack by defendant upon complaining witness to protect himself from the danger or apparent danger was in justifiable self-defense. Ware v. State, 86 Cr. R. 505, 217 S. W. 946.

10. — Charge.—Although the rule is that it is unnecessary to charge on threats not made antecedent to difficulty but as a part of it, yet, where victim between first encounter and the one in question made a threat which was heard by defendant, the jury should in connection with charge on self-defense be informed as to the law of threats. Turner v. State, 84 Cr. R. 267, 206 S. W. 689.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, the issues being presented in the form of assault to murder, aggravated assault, simple assault, and self-defense, the court erred in limiting defendant's right of self-defense to the question of danger of death or serious bodily harm as applied to the question of simple assault, and should have presented self-defense so as to meet the case as made by the facts; the right not depending under all circumstances, on whether defendant's life was in danger or his body threatened with serious danger. Jupe v. State, 86 Cr. R. 573, 217 S. W. 1041.

Art. 1015. [594] Degree of force permissible.

See Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

Art. 1016. [595] Verbal provocation no justification.

See Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

Verbal provocation.—Though complainant's language was of provoking nature, mere words did not justify an assault, though they may be given as a matter of extenuation. Mathis v. State, 84 Cr. R. 347, 206 S. W. 528.

Art. 1020. [599] Abusive language an offense.

Offense.—A recognizance which states that defendant is charged with the offense of using abusive language in a manner calculated to provoke a breach of the peace is not sufficient, since the language, to constitute an offense, must be used to or in the presence of the person likely to be provoked to a breach of the peace. Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 708.

Article 1022. [601] Definition.

IN GENERAL

1. Offense.—Where collision between defendant's automobile and that in which injured party was riding was an accident brought about by defendant's negligence and without intent to commit an assault, there could be no conviction under statute defining aggravated assault. Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 481, 200 S. W. 384.

Where accused, in vigorous assaults on him by deceased and companions, had one hand cut and the other broken, if accused fought not for the purpose of killing, but for the purpose of resisting the assaults, he would not be guilty of punishable homicide in killing deceased, but at most of aggravated assault. Lozano v. State, 83 Cr. R. 174, 202 S. W. 510.

5. — Inclusion in other offenses.—Accused may be convicted of aggravated assault, although evidence would sustain conviction for assault with intent to murder. Munoz v. State, 81 Cr. R. 629, 197 S. W. 871.

Under Code Cr. Proc. arts. 771, 772, defendant under 21 years of age, indicted for assault with intent to rape, could be convicted of an aggravated assault on the female; the proof showing indecent familiarity with the person of the female against her will and without her consent. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

5½. Self-defense.—In a prosecution for aggravated assault, where defendant claimed to have fired the shot in defense of his brother, the circumstances surrounding the beginning of the affray between the brother and the prosecuting witness, which were unknown to defendant, did not affect his right to defend his brother. Carson v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 997.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, the issue of mutual combat as a limitation upon the right of self-defense does not arise alone from the fact that the parties to the affray were mutually engaged in it, but arises out of an antecedent agreement to fight, and the agreement must be proved by direct testimony or inferred from circumstances. Id.

6. Evidence.—In a prosecution for aggravated assault, evidence held sufficient to support a conviction. Odom v. State, 82 Cr. R. 580, 200 S. W. 833.

In prosecution for aggravated assault, testimony as to all that occurred held admissible. Bennett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 268, 202 S. W. 730.

In prosecution for aggravated assault, where assaulted party was stabbed by defendant and another, testimony as to wounds doctor found was admissible, though wound under arm seemed to have been inflicted by person other than defendant. Id.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of aggravated assault by a school teacher by reason of the manner of punishing a pupil. Harris v. State, 83 Cr. R. 468, 203 S. W. 1089; Gibson v. Same, 83 Cr. R. 215, 203 S. W. 1091.

In prosecution for aggravated assault, evidence that prosecutrix's general reputation in community for chastity and virtue was bad held admissible. Kerr v. State, 83 Cr. R. 474, 204 S. W. 107.

In prosecution for assault to murder, defended on ground of self-defense, conviction for aggravated assault held contrary to the evidence. Ware v. State, 86 Cr. R. 505, 217 S. W. 946.

Evidence held to sustain verdict of aggravated assault. Lang v. State, 86 Cr. R. 644, 218 S. W. 764.

In a prosecution for an aggravated assault, the exclusion of evidence that the person assaulted was a common thief was not error, in view of the court's qualification, stating that all that was attempted to be shown by defendant's witness was that while such person worked for witness some lumber was stolen. Hahn v. State, 87 Cr. R. 22, 218 S. W. 1058.

Evidence held sufficient to identify defendant as the person committing an aggravated assault. Mayes v. State, 87 Cr. R. 512, 222 S. W. 571.

7. Charge.—In prosecution for assault to murder, evidence held to require a charge on aggravated assault, although defendant relied on self-defense. Bolin v. State, 83 Cr. R. 590, 204 S. W. 335.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rob, where the indictment included a charge on aggravated assault, the issue of aggravated assault should be submitted to the jury. Smiley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 528, 222 S. W. 1108.

In prosecution of an infant for assault with intent to rape, a charge that he could be convicted of no higher grade of offense than simple assault was properly refused. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, evidence defendant armed himself when his brother called for help on being attacked by prosecuting witness, and that the attack was resumed when defendant appeared with his gun and dared prosecutor to hit his brother, does not raise the issue of mutual combat as limiting the right of self-defense, so that it was error to give an instruction on that issue. Carson v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 997.

9. Conviction of simple assault or assault and battery.—Both by statute and under decisions conviction may be had for simple assault under a charge of aggravated assault. Simpson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 277, 220 S. W. 777.

9¼. Assault on officer.—To constitute an aggravated assault on an officer, it must appear that the person assaulted was an officer in the discharge of his duties, and that the assault was made as an interruption of his official duties. Curlin v. State, 84 Cr. R. 602, 209 S. W. 666.

One who shot and wounded an officer, believing that he was attempting to rob him, is not guilty of assault with intent to murder, or even of an aggravated assault. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

9½. Evidence.—Evidence that defendant accosted a justice, while latter was going from the post office to his office with some papers, before going out to show a man some land, and struck him down on receiving an affirmative answer to question whether the justice was going to issue certain papers in his official capacity, held insufficient to show an aggravated assault on an officer in the discharge of his duties. Curlin v. State, 84 Cr. R. 602, 209 S. W. 666.

9¾. Charge.—In a prosecution for assault to murder a police officer who had defendant in custody, requested special charge that defendant was guilty of an aggravated assault only if his action in shooting at the officer was prompted by passion resulting from an illegal arrest held properly refused as without support in evidence. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

19½. Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient as to decrepitude of assaulted party to sustain conviction of aggravated assault. Whitener v. State, 83 Cr. R. 281, 203 S. W. 48.

SUBD. 5

21. Offense.—In order to convict of aggravated assault upon a female, it is not necessary to show that there was created in mind of prosecutrix a sense of shame or other disagreeable emotion of mind. Hopson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 619, 209 S. W. 410.

In order to convict one of aggravated assault upon female, it is not necessary to show that indecent familiarity injured person of prosecutrix. Id.

Where defendant, for the purpose of freeing himself from deceased when she would not let him go until he had paid her for sexual privilege accorded, choked her to death without any purpose to kill, the offense would be aggravated assault. Lang v. State, 86 Cr. R. 644, 218 S. W. 764.

In prosecution for aggravated assault, sole ground of aggravation charged being that injured party was a female, accused should be afforded the benefit of the law as applied in criminal cases of an honest mistake of fact if the prosecuting witness was wearing the apparel of a man and presented the appearance of one, and accused was misled into the belief that she was a man, without fault or want of care upon his part, since such mistake would have mitigated the offense. Vyoral v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 889.

An assault by an adult man upon a child can be justified on the right to protect property from trespass only if the circumstances made the assault necessary. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 414.

22. — “Adult” and “child.”—A boy of 17 years is not an “adult male.” Galbraith v. State (App.) 13 S. W. 607.

In prosecution for aggravated assault on female, that female was not adult would not render assault simple assault. Hopson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 619, 209 S. W. 410.

29. Indictment—Assault on female.—A complaint that C. S. did commit the offense of aggravated assault upon the person of his wife, M. S., without alleging that C. S. is an adult male, charges a simple assault only, and will not support an information for aggravated assault. Schrader v. State (App.) 17 S. W. 1101.

A complaint which charged that defendant, “an adult male, did unlawfully commit aggravated assault in and upon the person of one Mary Loo D., the said _____ then and there being a female,” sufficiently charged that the person assaulted was a female. Dickerson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 378, 212 S. W. 497.

30. — Assault on child.—A count, charging an aggravated assault by an adult male upon a child, need not allege the means used in committing the assault. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 414.

32. Evidence.—In prosecution of a school-teacher for aggravated assault on a pupil, the accused may testify as to intent with which whipping was given, but his statement will not be conclusive against other evidence tending to contradict it. Harris v. State, 83 Cr. R. 468, 203 S. W. 1089; Gibson v. Same, 83 Cr. R. 215, 203 S. W. 1091.

33. — Assault on wife.—On the trial of a man for assaulting his wife, the physical facts testified to, and the testimony of the wife in connection with her res gestæ statements, held amply sufficient to support a conviction of aggravated assault. Needham v. State, 82 Cr. R. 78, 197 S. W. 988.

Under evidence of wife that she was about to strike defendant husband, and that he either struck her with his fist or hand and ran, and that she chased him with a view of giving him a beating with a club, husband would not be guilty of aggravated assault. Hays v. State, 84 Cr. R. 349, 206 S. W. 941.

34. — Assault on female.—Evidence held to warrant a finding that defendant in assaulting a female was not acting in self-defense. Nobles v. State, 83 Cr. R. 46, 200 S. W. 1090.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault on a female, that defendant went to the female's house after the assault and said that he would bust her jaws was admissible to show whether he intended to injure her at the time of the assault, or struck her in self-defense. Id.

35. — Assault by parent.—In prosecution of father for aggravated assault on seven year old son, the son's testimony that “he hit me on the jaw with his fist and kicked me with his foot” held insufficient to sustain conviction, being insufficient to create presumption of physical injury or immoderate punishment. Walden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 523.

37. Charge—Assault on female.—In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, where it appeared that the assault was made on the female in the presence and plain view of a number of people at a public gathering, it was error to refuse an instruction as to aggravated assault. Everett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 407, 199 S. W. 631.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault on a female, it was error to refuse to charge that, even if defendant committed an assault, but did not use any unlawful violence with intent to injure her, to acquit him, and to refuse to instruct on self-defense, where defendant testified that the assault was made in self-defense. Nobles v. State, 83 Cr. R. 46, 200 S. W. 1090.

In prosecution for aggravated assault, held that, under circumstances, court should have charged that if jury believed defendant placed arm around prosecutrix without intention to injure her or her feelings, and with probable grounds to believe act would not be objectionable to her, to acquit. Kerr v. State, 83 Cr. R. 474, 204 S. W. 107.

In prosecution for assault to rape, court's charge on aggravated assault held sufficient, rendering it unnecessary to give special requested charge upon that subject. Morris v. State, 84 Cr. R. 100, 206 S. W. 82.

In prosecution for murder, court did not err in submitting issue of aggravated assault in view of defendant's statement in his confession that he did not intend to kill deceased, but choked her in order to free himself. Lang v. State, 86 Cr. R. 644, 218 S. W. 764.

40. Offense.—Assault upon female child in which defendant took improper liberties is aggravated assault; being one disgracing her. Cirul v. State, 83 Cr. R. 8, 200 S. W. 1088.

The terms of subd. 6, stating that any assault becomes aggravated when the instrument or means used is such as inflicts disgrace, etc., are broad enough to make the act of a male person, guilty of indecent familiarity with a female without her consent and against her will, an aggravated assault. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

41. Evidence.—In a prosecution for assault to rape, resulting in conviction of aggravated assault, evidence held to show that the treatment of the injured female by defendant produced feelings of constraint and shame and such humiliating emotions of the mind in her. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

42½. Charge.—An instruction that if defendant, convicted of aggravated assault on a female, did not intend to injure prosecutrix or cause her a sense of shame or other disagreeable emotion, or if he had good reason to believe his advances would not create a sense of shame, or if in fact they did not create a sense of shame, defendant would not be guilty of a higher offense than simple assault, held not to state a correct principle of law, nor warranted by the evidence. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

In a prosecution for assault to rape, resulting in conviction of aggravated assault where there was testimony without contradiction that defendant placed his hands on prosecutrix's limbs without her consent, omission of the court to tell the jury that they must believe the assault was with an instrument or means which could inflict disgrace, held harmless to defendant; such an assault as defendant committed being uniformly held to be with such means and instrument. Id.

43. Offense.—That owner of cattle inflicted a minor injury to defendant's fence in hurriedly crossing the fence to head off his cattle did not justify defendant, who was 6 feet 2 inches in height, weighing 200 pounds, in beating cattle owner, who weighed only 150 pounds, until unconscious, with a rock and a stick. Price v. State, 87 Cr. R. 163, 220 S. W. 89.

49. Evidence—Serious Injury.—In prosecution for aggravated assault, evidence held insufficient to show character of seriousness required to render assault aggravated. Royston v. State, 81 Cr. R. 514, 196 S. W. 542.

In prosecution of town marshal for aggravated assault, evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that a "serious bodily injury" was inflicted. Harper v. State, 84 Cr. R. 345, 207 S. W. 96.

In prosecution for aggravated assault, where it was charged that serious bodily injury had been inflicted, evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction. Young v. State, 86 Cr. R. 621, 218 S. W. 754.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, evidence that defendant struck prosecuting witness with a pitchfork making a gash four inches long in his head, laying the bone bare, and rendering prosecuting witness unconscious or semiconscious for 24 hours, the wound being a serious one calculated to produce death, was sufficient to support a finding of guilty of aggravated assault in that serious bodily injury was inflicted. Knight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 134, 220 S. W. 333.

SUBD. 8.

51. Offense.—Where a person shoots at one who tells his father in his presence that his mother and his father's wife were sustaining illicit relations with another person, he would only be guilty of manslaughter if he killed him, and in the absence of a killing only an aggravated assault. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 479, 208 S. W. 660.

Where defendant provoked the difficulty with the intent to injure the deceased, but with no intent to kill him or do him serious bodily harm, and afterwards fired upon him for the protection of his own life against a threatened assault by the deceased, conviction cannot be for a higher grade of offense than aggravated assault. Thompson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 144, 210 S. W. 800.

If the action of defendant in shooting at an officer who had him in custody was prompted by passion resulting from a legally adequate cause, that is, an illegal arrest, his offense was not assault to murder, but merely aggravated assault. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

Defendant negro, who to repel a threatened assault by a white man with rocks struck the white man on the arm with a pistol, the pistol slipping and cutting the other's head, was not guilty of an aggravated assault, where he refrained thereafter from using the pistol either as a bludgeon or to shoot. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 15, 218 S. W. 1052, 8 A. L. R. 1316.

If defendant was not actuated by malice aforethought, he was not guilty of assault with intent to murder; if he had the specific intent to kill under circumstances that would have constituted manslaughter, his assault, which failed to kill, did not constitute assault to murder, but was an aggravated assault. Thurogood v. State, 87 Cr. R. 209, 220 S. W. 337.

If defendant was not actuated by malice aforethought, he was not guilty of assault with intent to murder; if he had the specific intent to kill under circumstances that would have constituted manslaughter, his assault, which failed to kill, did not constitute assault to murder, but was an aggravated assault. Id.

One who presents at another a shotgun, whether loaded or unloaded, with the intent to alarm and under circumstances calculated to affect that object is guilty not of an aggravated assault, but of simple assault. Hall v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 690.

52. Deadly weapon.—A shotgun usually can be considered a "deadly weapon," but not necessarily so. Teague v. State, 84 Cr. R. 169, 206 S. W. 193.

A pistol used as a bludgeon is not a "deadly weapon" per se. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 15, 218 S. W. 1052, 8 A. L. R. 1316.

If the use of a pocket-knife in the manner in which it was used did not show evidently an intention to kill, the law excludes the idea that defendant who used the knife did intend to kill, and there is no presumption of intention to kill under such circumstances, and the offense would not be higher than aggravated assault, though death actually resulted. Dill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 49, 219 S. W. 481.

In prosecution for murder evidence as to deadly character of weapon and nature of difficulty held to warrant a charge on aggravated assault. Hollman v. State, 87 Cr. R. 576, 223 S. W. 206.

55. Indictment and information.—Where an information charging aggravated assault with a gun did not allege that the gun was presented under circumstances not amounting to an intent to maim, nor that it was presented with the intent to alarm under circumstances calculated to effect that object, and the pleader used the word "anger" instead of "angry," it was not error to refuse to quash the information, the pleader having charged a complete offense when he alleged that defendant, with a gun, the same being a deadly weapon, did commit an aggravated assault, under which the court would be authorized to charge on simple assault on the theory that the weapon was used to alarm. Hall v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 690.

58. Evidence.—On trial for an aggravated assault, it appeared that defendant held an uncocked gun in his left hand, so that he could have fired it at S., while his brother cursed and threatened S., but he made no effort to shoot; and that he created in S.'s mind an apprehension of bodily harm. Held, that as no violence was attempted, nor any gestures accompanied with words made, which showed an immediate intention on the part of defendant to inflict violence on S., he was not guilty. Flournoy v. State, 25 Tex. App. 244, 7 S. W. 865.

In prosecution for assault to murder, issue of aggravated assault held properly submitted. Price v. State, 87 Cr. R. 163, 220 S. W. 89.

In prosecution of a negro for assault to murder a white man, who, with others, was searching the premises of his friend, for stolen hogs, in view of circumstances and evidence, held, that trial court should have instructed at defendant's request on issue of aggravated assault. Thurogood v. State, 87 Cr. R. 209, 220 S. W. 337.

59. — Deadly weapon.—In a prosecution for wife murder by defendant, shown to have been committed with a hammer, in the absence of evidence that there was no intention to kill, the issue of aggravated assault was not raised, so as to require submission thereof to the jury. Beaupre v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 517.

61. Charge.—On trial for aggravated assault with a gun, instruction as to defendant's right to carry the gun held not called for. Clayton v. State, 81 Cr. R. 385, 197 S. W. 591.

On trial for homicide committed in a fight with a pocketknife, held, that court should have charged on aggravated assault. Dugan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 422, 199 S. W. 616.

In view of arts. 1147-1149, where accused struck deceased with ax handle, held, that charge on aggravated assault should have been given. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

In prosecution for murder or negligent homicide in first degree, court should have instructed on question of aggravated assault on theory that, if defendant shot to hit, the No. 4 shot with which his gun was loaded, in combination with the distance at which he thought he was from deceased, were not calculated to kill. Teague v. State, 84 Cr. R. 169, 206 S. W. 193.

In homicide prosecution, charge on provoking difficulty should inform jury that, if defendant provoked the difficulty with the intent to injure the deceased, but with no intent to kill him or do him serious bodily harm, and afterwards fired upon him for the protection of his own life against the threatened assault by deceased, conviction could not be for a higher grade of offense than aggravated assault. Thompson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 144, 210 S. W. 800.

In homicide prosecution, where there was evidence raising the question of provoking the difficulty, court in charging on aggravated assault properly instructed jury that if the killing was under sudden passion, without intent to kill, with weapon not reasonably calculated to inflict death or serious bodily injury, and defendant had not provoked difficulty and was not justified, he would be guilty of no higher offense than aggravated assault. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

62. Self defense or defense of another.—If defendant negro fired upon officers under the defensive theory, to protect his friend from an assault made on him by either or both officers, defendant was not guilty of assault with intent to murder, though he may have fired too quickly, or have fired under circumstances showing no deliberation, which may constitute aggravated assault. Thurogood v. State, 87 Cr. R. 209, 220 S. W. 337.

63. Offense.—Defendant who twice struck the prosecuting witness in the jaw with his fists, knocking him down, without causing serious bodily injury and without causing an abrasion of the skin, held not guilty of aggravated assault by premeditated design and by a use of means calculated to inflict serious bodily injury. Adair v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 413.

If defendant charged with manslaughter had provoked the difficulty, and had done so with the intention to produce an occasion whereby he might assault deceased, and if the assault actually made by him was under the influence of sudden passion or excitement, and with an instrument not calculated or likely to produce death, he would not be guilty of a higher grade of offense than an aggravated assault, even though he did provoke the difficulty. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

Art. 1022a. Willful driving of motor vehicle against another.

Construction and operation in general.—As this article, relative to aggravated assault by gross negligence of operator of motor vehicle, did not become effective until July, prosecution begun in January preceding could not be sustained. Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 481, 200 S. W. 384.

The purpose of this article, held not to be to change the law of homicide, but to add a new clause to the law of aggravated assault. Worley v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 391.

Indictment or information.—In prosecution for aggravated assault by collision on highway, information held insufficient for failure to charge that defendant either "willfully or with gross negligence" collided with another vehicle. Tarver v. State, 83 Cr. R. 275, 202 S. W. 734.

Art. 1024. [603] Punishment.

Discretion.—The extent of the punishment where guilt is established rests in the discretion of the jury, unless the jury is waived, as it may be in misdemeanor cases, in which case it is in the discretion of the trial judge, and the appellate court will not review the exercise of such discretion. Wagner v. State, 87 Cr. R. 47, 219 S. W. 471.

Excessive punishment.—Where defendant without provocation, pursuant to a previously conceived plan, came up behind prosecuting witness and struck him down with beer bottle, verdict assessing punishment at $500 fine and imprisonment in county jail for 12 months is not excessive so as to be subject to review on appeal. Odom v. State (Cr. App.) 200 S. W. 833.

Where defendant pleaded guilty to an aggravated assault, and the evidence shows he stabbed the person named in the breast with a pocketknife striking a rib, and the record discloses no extenuating circumstances except that defendant is aged, punishment by a $200 fine and 60 days in the county jail as assessed by the jury will not be set aside as excessive. Joseph v. State (Cr. App.) 204 S. W. 320.

CHAPTER TWO A

ASSAULT WITH PROHIBITED WEAPON

Article 1024a. The offense defined.

Offense.—A conviction for assault, under an indictment charging that defendant, while unlawfully carrying or having about his person a pistol, did make an assault, etc., is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, for the two offenses are entirely distinct, and averments as to unlawfully carrying a pistol might be rejected as surplusage, particularly as this article, expressly provides for punishment of an assault while unlawfully carrying a pistol. Young v. State, 87 Cr. R. 184, 222 S. W. 1103.

Evidence.—In prosecution for assault with prohibited weapon, held error to exclude accused's testimony that he feared the prosecutor, and asked protection from officers, which was refused. Brinkley v. State, 82 Cr. R. 150, 198 S. W. 940.

Offense of assault with prohibited weapon held, in connection with art. 475, relating to unlawfully carrying weapons, not established by evidence. Id.

Art. 1026. [605] With intent to murder.

1. Offense.—Defendant, who, with another, had gone to steal a farmer's seed cotton in a wagon standing in a field guarded by the farmer, and who, after their arrest by the farmer, and while he was forcing them at pistol point to go to his house, shot at him with intent to kill, held guilty of assault to murder. Daggett v. State, 84 Cr. R. 455, 208 S. W. 171.

If the action of defendant in shooting at an officer who had him in custody was prompted by passion resulting from a legally adequate cause, that is, an illegal arrest, his offense was not assault to murder, but merely aggravated assault. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

2. — Intent.—Where defendant provoked the difficulty with the intent to injure the deceased, but with no intent to kill him or do him serious bodily harm, and afterwards fired upon him for the protection of his own life against a threatened assault by the deceased, conviction cannot be for a higher grade of offense than aggravated assault. Thompson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 144, 210 S. W. 800.

If the action of defendant in shooting at an officer who had him in custody was prompted by passion resulting from a legally adequate cause, that is, an illegal arrest, his offense was not assault to murder, but merely aggravated assault. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

If defendant negro fired upon officers under the defensive theory, to protect his friend from an assault made on him by either or both officers, defendant was not guilty of assault with intent to murder, though he may have fired too quickly, or have fired under circumstances showing no deliberation, which may constitute aggravated assault. Thurogood v. State, 87 Cr. R. 209, 220 S. W. 337.

One who shot and wounded an officer, believing that he was attempting to rob him, is not guilty of assault with intent to murder, or even of an aggravated assault. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

3. — Malice.—If defendant was not actuated by malice aforethought, he was not guilty of assault with intent to murder; if he had the specific intent to kill under circumstances that would have constituted manslaughter, his assault, which failed to kill, did not constitute assault to murder, but was an aggravated assault. Thurogood v. State, 87 Cr. R. 209, 220 S. W. 337.

11. Indictment—Intent and malice.—An indictment, alleging that defendant made an assault upon I. J. with intent to kill the said I. J., sufficiently charged assault with intent to murder, although the word "murder" was not used. Johnson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 474, 208 S. W. 520.

13. — Issues, proof and variance.—Under an indictment charging an assault upon M. with the intent to murder him, the state could prove that the shot which wounded him was fired at E. with intent to murder E.; the fact that M. was the victim rendering it no less an assault with intent to murder. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122.

15. Evidence.—In prosecution for assault to murder brother of assaulted person was improperly permitted to take off coat and exhibit it to jury, indicating where it was cut and blood which resulted from wounds he received from defendant's brother. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 252, 202 S. W. 737.

In a prosecution for assault to murder a police officer having defendant in custody, testimony of another officer that when he pulled defendant from the car in which he was riding with the assaulted officer he asked him what he shot the latter for, and defendant told him "the damn policeman had tried to shoot him," was admissible as res gestae. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, wherein defendant set up self-defense, testimony of defendant's wife as to knife cuts on his shirt sleeve was legitimate. Jupe v. State, 86 Cr. R. 573, 217 S. W. 1041.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder resulting in conviction of aggravated assault, testimony of an eyewitness as to the conduct and language of defendant and the assaulted party at the time of the conflict and immediately before was admissible as original testimony against defendant. Kirkland v. State, 86 Cr. R. 595, 218 S. W. 367.

Evidence as to defendant's general reputation for honesty and fair dealing was not admissible, in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder a peace officer, who stopped accused in the nighttime and interrogated him as to his destination; officer not making any accusation against accused when accosting him, and accused being permitted without restriction to introduce evidence as to his general reputation as a peaceable, law-abiding, and quiet citizen. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

16. — Intent and motive.—In prosecution for assault to murder, that after assault, when assaulted person's brother fell on bed, defendant said, "God damn you, I will kill you, too, while I am at it," was admissible against defendant as bearing on intent. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 252, 202 S. W. 737.

In prosecution for assault to murder, resulting in conviction of aggravated assault, if state had proved defendant had been named as corespondent in divorce petition which assaulted person had filed against his wife, fact would not have been admissible, in absence of circumstances bringing it to defendant's knowledge. Faubian v. State, 83 Cr. R. 234, 203 S. W. 897.

18. — Circumstances reducing grade of offense.—In prosecution for assault to murder committed on a merchant, defendant's testimony that, on morning of the assault, and before he saw the merchant, he conversed with another merchant who had a mortgage on defendant's crop, and that such other merchant told him that he had got supplies already from the merchant assaulted, and that he would refuse further credit until such other bill was paid, was inadmissible for defendant, not tending to justify or mitigate offense. Simmons v. State, 87 Cr. R. 270, 220 S. W. 554.

19. — Threats against accused, and character of person assaulted.—In prosecution of defendant for assault with intent to murder his son-in-law, evidence that victim had married defendant's daughter to avoid a prosecution for seduction and that he had undertaken to produce an abortion upon her held admissible as explanatory of a conversation between defendant and victim just preceding difficulty and as bearing upon question of who began difficulty. Bolin v. State, 83 Cr. R. 590, 204 S. W. 335.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, the good reputation of the prosecutor was not admissible in evidence as an original proposition. Jupe v. State, 86 Cr. R. 573, 217 S. W. 1041.

20. — Sufficiency.—In prosecution for shooting at another, evidence held sufficient to warrant conclusion that defendant intended to kill so as to justify verdict of guilty of assault to murder. Gillum v. State, 83 Cr. R. 396, 204 S. W. 225.

In prosecution for assault to murder, evidence held sufficient to sustain jury finding that accused, in shooting, intended to kill. Carter v. State, 84 Cr. R. 333, 206 S. W. 936.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, contention that defendant's gun was "lame" when he assaulted the officer was not borne out by the record, in view of his own testimony that the gun was in the same condition as when hunting with it the previous day, etc. Drawhorn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 600, 209 S. W. 415.

Evidence held sufficient to support verdict of guilty of assault to murder through striking deceased with a knife. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

Evidence held to warrant submission of issue of assault to murder. Price v. State, 87 Cr. R. 163, 220 S. W. 89.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of assault with intent to murder. Reese v. State, 87 Cr. R. 245, 220 S. W. 1096.

Where prosecuting witness testified that, when he was having trouble with one negro, another negro cut him in the back of the neck, and one of the two cut him in the front of the neck, and also three times in the hip, a conviction of assault with intent to murder was justified. Douglas v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 326.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder an officer, evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

21. Charge.—In view of presumption of innocence, evidence establishing facts which if true, would mitigate or excuse assault to murder, required an instruction on the law applicable thereto, regardless of the source from which the evidence came, and notwithstanding it presented a defensive theory out of harmony with that advanced by defendant. Knight v. State, 84 Cr. R. 395, 207 S. W. 315.

22. — Intent and malice.—In prosecution for assault to murder, committed while defendant was under arrest by farmer for having attempted to steal seed cotton, court properly refused charges on justification from apprehension of bodily injury, passion, etc., uncalled for by evidence. Daggett v. State, 84 Cr. R. 455, 208 S. W. 171.

Where in beginning of difficulty accused's father alone was in danger when defendant shot at prosecuting witness, and where later father was not present, when defendant again shot at the prosecuting witness, it was reversible error for the court to charge simply that if defendant shot to defend himself, or in defense of another, he would be entitled to an acquittal. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 479, 208 S. W. 660.

23. — Grade of assault.—In a prosecution for assault to murder a police officer who had defendant in custody, refusal to defendant of his requested special charge that he was guilty of an aggravated assault only if his action in shooting at the officer was prompted by passion resulting from an illegal arrest held properly refused as without support in evidence. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, held, that court properly refused to charge on an affray. Price v. State, 87 Cr. R. 163, 220 S. W. 89.

Art. 1027. [606] "Bowie-knife" and "dagger" defined.

"Bowie knife."—Where an indictment charged an assault with intent to murder with a bowie knife, and the evidence showed an assault with a butcher knife, there was no variance. Hernandez v. State, 32 Cr. R. 271, 22 S. W. 972.

Art. 1029. [608] With intent to rape.

Cited, Gordon v. State, 23 Tex. App. 219, 4 S. W. 883.

1. Offense.—An assault with intent to rape involves an assault upon a woman with intent to gratify defendant's passion at all events, notwithstanding resistance on her part. Charles v. State, 81 Cr. R. 457, 196 S. W. 179.

Where an assault with intent to rape is made, abandonment of the attempt is no excuse. Everett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 407, 199 S. W. 631.

2. — Female under age of consent.—In prosecution for assault to commit rape on a girl under 15 years of age, force and consent are not material issues. Reese v. State, 83 Cr. R. 394, 203 S. W. 769.

In assault with intent to rape, female being under age of consent, only so much force is required as may be necessary to effect penetration. Wooldridge v. State, 86 Cr. R. 348, 217 S. W. 143.

One who takes hold of a child under 15 years of age and handles her in such a manner as, under the circumstances, demonstrates a present intent to at once so subject the child to his power, she consenting or not, so as to accomplish the act of intercourse, is guilty of an assault with intent to rape a child under the age of consent. Carter v. State, 87 Cr. R. 299, 221 S. W. 603.

Defendant, who did not touch 13 year old prosecutrix, but who made improper proposals to her and unsuccessfully pursued her, held not guilty of assault with intent to rape. Armstead v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 519.

6. Indictment.—An indictment alleging that defendant did then and there attempt to ravish a female under the age of 15 years other than his wife is sufficient to charge an assault with intent to rape, for the word "attempt" is more comprehensive than the word "intent," implying both the purpose and an actual effort to carry that purpose into execution, and hence it includes an intent. Cirul v. State, 83 Cr. R. 8, 200 S. W. 1088.

7. — Included offenses.—Where an assault is made, conviction cannot be had for an attempt to rape. Miller v. State, 84 Cr. R. 168, 206 S. W. 524.

9. Evidence.—A girl being assaulted may use every means in her power to cause assailant to desist, and threats to tell, whether of the assault then being made or of other matters, if made in an effort to defend against assault or before it is ended, may be given in testimony. Hensley v. State, 85 Cr. R. 260, 211 S. W. 590.

11. — Other acts and transactions.—In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape a female under the age of consent, court properly admitted testimony of a meeting between defendant and the prosecutrix on the night preceding that of the alleged assault, as against an objection that it related to a different time and place, since it tended to show the relations of the parties leading up to the occasion of the alleged assault. Gibbs v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1107.

14. — Physical condition, complaints and declarations of female.—In prosecution for assault with intent to rape defendant's daughter, daughter's testimony that just before defendant ceased his attack she said, "If you don't stop treating me like you are, I am going to tell the way you always treated me ever since I was little," was admissible as part of res gestæ. Hensley v. State, 85 Cr. R. 260, 211 S. W. 590.

In prosecution for assault with intent to rape daughter, evidence of witness who saw defendant push daughter back on the bed, that daughter said at such time, "Papa, if you don't quit that I will tell something on you that will cause my brother to kill you," was admissible as part of res gestæ. Id.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a charge of assault with intent to rape a girl under 15 years of age. Thompson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 524, 200 S. W. 168; Carter v. State, 87 Cr. R. 299, 221 S. W. 603.

Whether physical condition of defendant, due to use of intoxicants, was such that he could not commit assault with intent to rape, held, under the evidence, for the jury. Morris v. State, 84 Cr. R. 100, 206 S. W. 82.

Evidence held to sustain conviction of assault with intent to rape 16 year old daughter. Hensley v. State, 85 Cr. R. 260, 211 S. W. 590.

In prosecution for assault with intent to rape, evidence as to the nonage of prosecutrix held sufficient. Wooldridge v. State, 86 Cr. R. 348, 217 S. W. 143.

Conviction of assault with intent to rape held warranted, although prosecutrix testified that defendant had sexual intercourse with her, while a doctor who examined her testified that in his opinion a man could only have had partial intercourse. Id.

Evidence held insufficient to support a conviction of assault with intent to rape by force, in not authorizing a finding of intent to use such force as would overcome any opposition that might reasonably be made under the circumstances. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 225.

16. Charge.—In prosecution for assault to rape, court's charge on aggravated assault held sufficient, rendering it unnecessary to give special requested charge upon that subject. Morris v. State, 84 Cr. R. 100, 206 S. W. 82.

A charge requested by defendant in a prosecution for assault with intent to rape a female under the age of consent held properly refused as being confusing. Gibbs v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1107.

17. — Grade of assault.—In a prosecution for assault with intent to rape, where it appeared that the assault was made on the female in the presence and plain view of a number of people at a public gathering, it was error to refuse an instruction as to aggravated assault. Everett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 407, 199 S. W. 631.

In prosecution for assault to commit rape, evidence held not to call for instruction on aggravated assault. Reese v. State, 83 Cr. R. 394, 203 S. W. 769.

In prosecution for assault to commit rape, it was error for the court to submit to the jury the law of attempt to commit rape. Miller v. State, 84 Cr. R. 168, 206 S. W. 524.

Art. 1030. [609] With intent to rob.

Offense.—To sustain conviction of assault with intent to rob, the evidence must show a specific intent to rob. Smiley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 528, 222 S. W. 1108.

If defendant made assault on prosecuting witness solely for the purpose of obtaining money which defendant in good faith believed prosecuting witness owed him, he was not guilty of assault with intent to rob, though he used force or threats, which, in the absence of the claim of right in good faith made, would have amounted to an assault with intent to rob. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 317.

Variance.—Under a count charging an assault to rob two persons jointly, the defendant cannot be convicted if the assault was made on only one of such persons. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 317.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of assault with intent to commit robbery. Moffett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 284, 202 S. W. 960.

In prosecution for assault with intent to commit robbery, in which defendant claimed that he was merely attempting to enforce payment of debt owed him by prosecuting witness, the question of whether defendant's claim was made in good faith or as a pretext to cover fraudulent intent held for the jury. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 317.

Charge.—In a prosecution for assault with intent to rob, where the indictment included a charge on aggravated assault, the issue of aggravated assault should be submitted to the jury. Smiley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 528, 222 S. W. 1108.

Art. 1031. [601] In attempt at burglary.

Art. 1032. [611] Ingredients of the offense.

Cited, Gordon v. State, 23 Tex. App. 219, 4 S. W. 883.

Indictment.—Under Const. art. 1, § 10, guaranteeing accused the right to demand the nature and cause of the accusation, in charging an assault with intent to commit another offense, it is necessary only to allege such matters as bring the offense within the definition of an assault coupled with an intention to commit such other offense, naming it, without giving the constituent elements of the offense intended to be committed. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122.

CHAPTER FOUR

OF MAIMING, DISFIGURING AND CASTRATION

Article 1033. [612] "Maiming" defined.

Offense.—A front tooth is a member of the body within the comprehension of the maiming statute. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

Self-defense.—The principle of self-defense is not limited to cases of homicide, but may be a defense to maiming. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for maiming, testimony of prosecuting witness that he was called before the federal grand jury to testify against defendant, and that he saw defendant at the time of the latter's trial, in connection with defendant's statements at the time of the assault, was admissible to show defendant's motive. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

In a prosecution for maiming evidence of a threat made by defendant a few minutes before the difficulty, in sight of prosecuting witness, held admissible, it being reasonably certain that the latter was meant, though no one was named. Id.

In a prosecution for maiming, evidence held insufficient to justify submission of the law as to an act resulting from uncontrollable rage, sudden resentment or terror, rendering accused incapable of cool reflection. Id.

Charge.—In a prosecution for maiming, the truth of defendant's testimony as to his having been informed of a threat against him by prosecuting witness, and as to a demonstration indicating an intention to cut defendant just prior to the assault, was for the jury, its status as an issue of fact not being destroyed because supported by defendant's testimony alone (Vernon's Cr. St. vol. 2, p. 481), so that the court erred in not charging affirmatively on the law of threats in connection with self-defense. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

In a prosecution for maiming, there was no error in refusing to instruct the jury touching defendant's right to seek the injured party for an explanation as to certain charges made by him, such an instruction being required only where the court qualifies the right of accused to act in self-defense. Id.

In a prosecution for maiming, a charge defining a "willful act" as one done with evil intent, and "malice" as denoting a wrongful act intentionally done without just cause or excuse, was sufficient on the question of intent. Id.

In a prosecution for maiming, where there is no question as to the loss of a member of the body nor of justification, the only question being whether the injury was inflicted willfully or maliciously, there was no error in refusing a charge on simple assault. Id.

FALSE IMPRISONMENT

Article 1039. [618] "False imprisonment" defined.

Offense.—The fact that defendant's employé commanded plaintiff, who was suspected of shoplifting, to return to defendant's store, and laid one hand on plaintiff's arm, whereupon plaintiff returned without objection or resistance, does not show "false imprisonment" which requires detention by violence or threat. S. H. Kress & Co. v. De Mont (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 520.

CHAPTER SIX

OFFENSES AGAINST MINORS

Art.		Art.
1050.	Employment in dangerous or immoral occupations.	1053. Permitting minor to remain in pool room, etc.
1050e.	Employment of children under 15 in certain occupations prohibited; penalty.	1054. Selling or giving intoxicating liquor to minor.
1050f.	Employment of children under 17 in certain occupations prohibited; penalty.	1055a. Causing, etc., delinquency of minors.

Article 1050. Employment in dangerous or immoral occupations.

Construction and operation in general.—In view of Acts 35th Leg. c. 103, § 121 (Vernon's Ann. Civ. St. Supp. 1918, art. 5246—30), the Workmen's Compensation Act does not apply to infants employed around dangerous machinery in violation of this article. Waterman Lumber Co. v. Beatty (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 448.

Act March 6, 1917, arts. 1050e—1050f, regulating and prohibiting child labor, repealed this article. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 998.

Prohibited employments.—A log-loading machine, track-laying outfit, or a locomotive engine propelled by steam, is a "dangerous machine." Waterman Lumber Co. v. Beatty (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 448.

This article held inapplicable to employment by railroad of call boy who was required, in the discharge of his duties, to pass over and upon numerous tracks, frogs, and switches; railroads not being "other establishment using dangerous machinery," within the statute, in view of the ejusdem generis rule of construction. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 998.

Violation as negligence.—Employment of a servant under 15 years of age to work around dangerous machinery is negligence per se, and a servant may recover although not engaged at the very place of work he was primarily employed to do. Waterman Lumber Co. v. Beatty (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 448.

Tram railroads, log-loading appliances, and an engine, permanently used in manufacturing logs into lumber, were a part of the defendant lumber company's establishment, so as to make the company liable to such minor for injuries received while sanding the track from the footboard of the engine. Waterman Lumber Co. v. Beatty, 110 Tex. 225, 218 S. W. 363.

Employer's violation of this article was not prima facie evidence of negligence on part of employer in action for injuries to infant employed in violation thereof, where such statute at the time of the trial had been repealed by Act March 6, 1917, arts. 1050e—1050f. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 998.

Art. 1050e. Employment of children under 15 in certain occupations prohibited; penalty.

Repeal.—This act repealed art. 1050, prohibiting the employment of children under 15 years of age in particular work. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 998.

Art. 1050f. Employment of children under 17 in certain occupations prohibited; penalty.

Art. 1053. Permitting minor to remain in pool room, etc.

Offense.—That the owner of a billiard hall may be guilty of permitting a minor to play pool or billiards therein, it is necessary that he must have known the minor played and permitted him to do so. Wright v. State, 86 Cr. R. 434, 217 S. W. 152.

Art. 1054. Selling or giving intoxicating liquor to minor.

Offense.—In a prosecution for selling liquor to a minor, it appeared that the father sent his boy, 12 years old, for the liquor purchased, but did not give written authority for the same. Held, that the vendor violated this article. Yakel v. State, 30 Tex. App. 391, 17 S. W. 943.

Alcohol is an intoxicating liquor, and it is an offense to sell it to a minor without the written consent of his parents or guardians, though he intended to burn it in a lamp used by his customers in lighting cigars purchased by them from him. Rucker v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 902.

In prosecution for giving intoxicating liquors to minor, state must show that defendant knew of minority. Earnest v. State, 83 Cr. R. 41, 201 S. W. 175.

Art. 1055a. Causing, etc., delinquency of minor.—If any person shall in any manner cause, encourage or contribute to the delinquency of any minor who is under the age of seventeen years, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine in any sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the County Jail no exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. By the term "Delinquency" as used in this article is meant the using of tobacco in any form, the drinking of intoxicating liquor, the taking of such minor into a house or place where prostitutes or lewd women are permitted to resort or reside, or knowingly permitting any such minor to remain in any such house or at any such place, the forming of the habit of using any harmful or injurious drug, or any act which tends to debase or injure the morals, health or welfare of such minor. In all prosecutions under this clause of the statute, the general reputation of the women who resort or reside or who may be found at any such place for chastity, may be admitted in evidence. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 52, § 1.]

CHAPTER SEVEN

OF KIDNAPING AND ABDUCTION

Art.

1059. "Abduction" defined.
1060. Of female under fourteen.

1062. Punishment.

Article 1059. [629] "Abduction" defined.

Degree of offense.—In a prosecution for abduction, where the indictment did not charge that after the abduction defendant married the girl, and it appeared that he abducted her with the intent of forcing her into a marriage with himself, he was guilty only of a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and a charge authorizing a conviction for felony pursuant to art. 1062, denouncing abduction with intent of forcing the woman into prostitution, was erroneous. De Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 21, 218 S. W. 1047.

Art. 1060. [630] Of female under fourteen.

See Mason v. State, 29 Tex. App. 24, 14 S. W. 71.

Degree of offense.—In a prosecution for abduction, where the indictment did not charge that after the abduction defendant married the girl, and it appeared that he abducted her with the intent of forcing her into a marriage with himself, he was guilty only of a misdemeanor, punishable by fine, and a charge authorizing a conviction for felony pursuant to art. 1062, denouncing abduction with intent of forcing the woman into prostitution, was erroneous. De Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 21, 218 S. W. 1047.

RAPE

Art.	Art.
1063. "Rape" defined.	1067. Penetration only need be proved.
1064. Definition of "force."	1069. Punishment.
1065. What threat sufficient.	1070. Conviction may be had for attempt.
1066. "Fraud" defined.

Article 1063. [633] "Rape" defined.—Rape is the carnal knowledge of a woman without her consent, obtained by force threats or fraud, or the carnal knowledge of a woman other than the wife of the person having such carnal knowledge with or without consent, and with or without the use of force, threats or fraud, such woman being so mentally diseased at the time as to have no will to oppose the act of carnal knowledge, the person having carnal knowledge of her knowing her to be so mentally diseased; or the carnal knowledge of a female under the age of eighteen years, other than the wife of the person, with or without her consent, and with or without the use of force threats or fraud. Provided, that if the woman is fifteen years of age or over, the defendant may show in consent cases, she was not of previous chaste character' as a defense. [O. C. 523; Acts 1891, p. 96; Acts 1895, p. 79; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 50, § 1.]

4. Offense—Capacity to consent.—If prosecutrix was insane at the time of the act, under the statute defendant's offense would have been rape. Cokeley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 256, 220 S. W. 1099.

5. — Female under age of consent.—Though the age of consent was elevated after defendant's alleged act of intercourse, such change cannot affect the offense of statutory rape. Jackson v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1110.

In a prosecution for statutory rape upon a girl between 15 and 18 years of age, no conviction can result where it is shown that the prosecutrix was of previous unchaste character; the use of the word "defense" in such statute precluding any other meaning. Norman v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 991.

A "chaste woman," signifies one who has had no carnal knowledge of men as applied to an unmarried woman, and an "unchaste unmarried woman" is one who has had carnal knowledge of men. Id.

8. Indictment.—An indictment for assault with intent to rape, alleging "did then and there unlawfully in and upon" L., "a female, make an assault with the intent then and there," etc., sufficiently alleges that the injured party is a female. Scitern v. State, 87 Cr. R. 112, 219 S. W. 833.

9. — Female under age of consent.—In prosecution for carnal knowledge of female under 15, in violation of this article, it was necessary for state to allege that prosecutrix was under 15 at time of offense. Nolan v. State, 84 Cr. R. 150, 206 S. W. 92.

It is not necessary that an indictment charging rape upon a girl under 18 years of age negative her previous unchastity nor to refer to the matter of consent. Kerley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 163.

In an indictment for statutory rape, an allegation that prosecutrix was under 15 years of age was favorable to accused, the statutory age of consent being 18 years, as thereby the pleader placed a greater burden on the state than required by law; and was not objectionable on the ground that an acquittal thereunder on proof that prosecutrix was over 15 would not bar a subsequent prosecution by indictment charging her to be under 18. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

In an indictment for statutory rape, an allegation that prosecutrix was under 15 years of age was favorable to accused, the statutory age of consent being 18 years, as thereby the pleader placed a greater burden on the state than required by law. Id.

19. Evidence—Character of female.—Accused's defense in his trial for rape, asserting that prosecutrix had intercourse with another person on the night in question and not with accused, was sufficient to justify introduction by state of evidence supporting general reputation of prosecutrix for chastity. Woods v. State, 83 Cr. R. 332, 203 S. W. 54.

In a prosecution for rape, it was error to exclude evidence of specific acts of immorality, and that prosecutrix was in the habit of bestowing her carnal favors indiscriminately, as affecting her credibility and as a mitigating fact affecting the penalty. Calhoun v. State, 85 Cr. R. 496, 214 S. W. 335.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, it was proper, after defendant had asked prosecuting witness if any one else had been familiar with her, to permit her to state that no one else had had carnal connection with her prior to this offense. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 673.

In a prosecution for statutory rape upon a female between 15 and 18 years of age defendant was entitled to supplement direct evidence tending to show unchaste character in the prosecutrix by showing circumstances such as are often used by the prosecution in the proof of sexual relations, such as declarations of the prosecutrix, her association and relations with other men, and her opportunities for improper relations. Norman v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 991.

In a prosecution for statutory rape upon a female between the ages of 15 and 18, where the defense was previous unchaste character, accused had the burden of showing her unchaste character, not by reputation, but by specific acts. Id.

In a prosecution for statutory rape upon a female between 15 and 18 years of age, evidence of the want of chastity prior to the time she attained the age of consent was available to show previous unchaste character as a defense. Id.

20. — Age of female.—In prosecution for carnal knowledge of female under 15, testimony of doctor, who examined prosecutrix that he would take her to be less than 15, her relatives being available as witnesses, but not testifying to her age, was insufficient to prove case beyond reasonable doubt. Nolan v. State, 84 Cr. R. 150, 206 S. W. 92.

22. — Other offenses.—In a prosecution for statutory rape, it was incompetent to introduce in evidence circumstances showing that defendant had been guilty of illicit intercourse with his wife prior to their marriage, since it tended to prove a different offense and was calculated to prejudice the rights of the defendant. Norman v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 991.

24. — Incriminating circumstances.—It was proper to admit proof describing the ground and the finding of the woman's comb on the day after the offense was alleged to have been committed. Charles v. State, 81 Cr. R. 457, 196 S. W. 179.

In a prosecution for assault on rape, it was error to permit prosecutrix to testify over objection that subsequently defendant came to her mother's house, and she hid from him because of fear; such testimony not being res gestæ, nor otherwise shown admissible. Scitern v. State, 87 Cr. R. 112, 219 S. W. 833.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, matters showing the movement and situation of prosecutrix at times she was met by defendant anterior and leading up to the crime were admissible, and it was not objectionable to permit her to state that her father and elder brother were away from home at the time of these occurrences; it appearing that she first reported them to neighbors and officers. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 673.

That prosecutrix in statutory rape case was not personally present or connected with a transaction such as what occurred when accused came out to her father's home in his automobile on the Sunday following the alleged rape, or that the transaction occurred after the commission of the offense, would be no ground of objection to evidence thereof, if it shed light on the rape. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

In prosecution for statutory rape, where prosecutrix had testified that the intimacy between herself and accused was confined almost exclusively to rides with him in his automobile, and that he had taken her out several times, and had her out in his car on the occasion of the alleged intercourse, the fact that he came to her home with his car a few days thereafter would be an admissible fact. Id.

In prosecution for statutory rape, where prosecutrix had testified that the intimacy between her and accused was confined to rides with him in his automobile, testimony of prosecutrix's brother that the same man who had taken prosecutrix out several times in his car came to the front of the house where prosecutrix lived with her family, and that on that occasion her father talked rough to him, was admissible, no details of the conversation being given. Id.

26. — Female's condition, complaints and declarations.—In prosecution for rape, defendant may show that on being taken in charge prosecutrix said her brother was in room with her, and that she changed accusation to defendant, when told that otherwise her brother would be prosecuted, but that if it were defendant he alone would be prosecuted. Mizell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 241, 197 S. W. 300.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, evidence that prosecutrix, just after the alleged offense told the witness what had occurred, is admissible as outcry. McIntosh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 417, 213 S. W. 659.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, testimony of prosecutrix, who just after the alleged offense told the witness what had occurred, is admissible as sustaining the prosecutrix, in view of the effort of the defendant to show that the whole transaction was simulated, and that the prosecution was the result of animus against him. Id.

In prosecution for rape on child under age of consent, appearance and condition of prosecutrix becomes material, where there is denial of fact of intercourse, and testimony of experts is always admissible to show conditions rendering intercourse with some one likely. Anderson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 230, 220 S. W. 775.

28. — Articles connected with commission of offense and physical conditions about locus in quo.—Admission of testimony describing the scene of the assault on rape, and the evidences thereof upon the ground, held without error. Morris v. State, 84 Cr. R. 100, 206 S. W. 82.

In prosecution for assault with intent to rape, testimony of witness for state that after he and others were informed of what had happened they went directly to prosecutrix's house and made investigation, found a hat, found blood on each of two beds, etc., held admissible. Grace v. State, 84 Cr. R. 338, 206 S. W. 938.

In prosecution for rape on child under age of consent, testimony of witness who discovered defendant in the act, and of a deputy sheriff as to physical indications at spot held admissible as corroboration of prosecutrix as showing acts of intimacy, and as tending to rebut defendant's testimony. Anderson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 230, 220 S. W. 775.

32. — Sufficiency in general.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction of rape. Pickereil v. State, 81 Cr. R. 326, 195 S. W. 191.

Evidence in prosecution for rape of a child nine years old held insufficient to show penetration beyond a reasonable doubt. Galaviz v. State, 82 Cr. R. 377, 198 S. W. 946.

Where the examination of a prosecuting witness shows that her testimony on which a conviction for rape is based was induced by threats and coercion, her testimony is not sufficiently creditable to sustain a conviction. Venable v. State, 84 Cr. R. 354, 207 S. W. 520.

A conviction for rape of defendant's stepdaughter under 15 years of age, where prosecutrix denied the intercourse, cannot be sustained on the theory that suspicious circumstances induced the jury to believe defendant guilty, where intercourse is positively denied by prosecutrix, and there is no evidence except remote circumstances tending to impeach her. Doherty v. State, 84 Cr. R. 552, 208 S. W. 932.

In a prosecution for rape of a 15 year old girl, evidence held sufficient to prove defendant's guilt beyond controversy. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

In prosecution for rape on insane woman, competent evidence held insufficient to prove act of intercourse by defendant. Cokeley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 256, 220 S. W. 1099.

In a prosecution for rape on a girl under 15, verdict held not subject to attack on appeal for want of sufficiency of testimony. Jackson v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1110.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of the crime of rape upon a girl between 13 and 14 years of age. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 173.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, evidence held to show defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, so as not to warrant setting aside the verdict and remanding for new trial. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 213.

33. — Corroboration of female.—Evidence corroborating complaining witness' testimony held sufficient to justify conviction for rape. Charles v. State, 81 Cr. R. 457, 196 S. W. 179.

The court will scrutinize with extreme care the testimony of the injured female, but such rule will not be used where her testimony is sufficiently corroborated. Id.

In a prosecution for rape, evidence that at a time remote from that of intercourse prosecutrix, in absence of defendant, showed witness place where intercourse took place, and told him what occurred there, was of a hearsay nature, in no way corroborative of the girl's testimony, and inadmissible. Villafranco v. State, 84 Cr. R. 195, 206 S. W. 357.

Testimony by 13 year old prosecutrix as to penetration, though scrutinized with more than ordinary care, as required, held sufficient evidence of offer by defendant to buy off prosecution, being corroborative of the girl's story, notwithstanding inconsistent statements made by her to the justice of the peace, for which she offered a reasonable explanation. Blackmon v. State, 87 Cr. R. 173, 220 S. W. 93.

Corroboration of prosecutrix is not required by law to support a conviction of statutory rape, and her credibility, like that of other witnesses, is a question for the jury in view of Code Cr. Proc. art. 786, making the jury the judge of facts and weight of evidence. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 213.

Corroboration of prosecutrix is not required by law to support a conviction of statutory rape. Id.

36. Charge.—Although indictment for rape included offense of assault with intent, a request, submitting lesser charge was properly refused, where evidence did not raise the question. Charles v. State, 81 Cr. R. 457, 196 S. W. 179.

The court's refusal to give a special charge requested by defendant that the jury be instructed not to consider the evidence of force, or that there was blood or wounds on the 15 year old injured female, was proper where the indictment contained counts charging rape both statutory and by force. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

Force as element of offense.—In rape or assault with intent to rape, female being under age of consent, only so much force is required as may be necessary to effect penetration. Wooldridge v. State, 86 Cr. R. 348, 217 S. W. 143.

Evidence.—In view of this article and art. 1065, evidence in rape trial held not to justify taking it away from jury. Woods v. State, 83 Cr. R. 332, 203 S. W. 54.

Art. 1065. [635] What "threat" sufficient.

Evidence.—In view of art. 1064, and this article, as applicable to rape, evidence in rape trial held not to justify taking it away from jury. Woods v. State, 83 Cr. R. 332, 203 S. W. 54.

Art. 1067. [637] Penetration only need be proved.

Penetration as element of offense.—To constitute rape, it is unnecessary that the penetration should be perfect, nor that there should be an entering of the vagina or rupture of the hymen; the entering of the vulva or labia being sufficient. Mirick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 388, 204 S. W. 222.

The law requires penetration as an element of rape, but not to any particular extent. Blackmon v. State, 87 Cr. R. 173, 220 S. W. 93.

Penetration is an essential element of the crime of rape. Mullins v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 164.

See Stevenson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 21, 201 S. W. 1018.

Extent of punishment.—In prosecution for rape, evidence of want of consent by prosecutrix held not sufficient to warrant the imposition of the death sentence. Calhoun v. State, 85 Cr. R. 496, 214 S. W. 335.

Charge.—In a prosecution for rape, it was proper to submit to the jury the death penalty, although the prosecutor stated that he would not insist upon the death penalty. Kerley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 163.

Art. 1070. [640] Conviction may be had for "attempt."

Attempt.—In prosecution for assault to commit rape, it was error for the court to submit to the jury the law of attempt to commit rape. Miller v. State, 84 Cr. R. 168, 206 S. W. 524.

Where an assault is made, conviction cannot be had for an attempt to rape. Id.

CHAPTER NINE OF ABORTION

Art.	Definition and punishment.	Art.	Attempt at.
1071.	Definition and punishment.	1073.	Attempt at.
1072.	Furnishing the means; an accomplice.

Article 1071. [641] Definition and punishment.

2. Offense.—One who gave a pregnant woman medicine, and told her not to use it until he gave her instructions with reference to its use, was not guilty of abortion, if she used the medicine when he was not present and without his instructions, and procured an abortion. Tonnahill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 517, 208 S. W. 516.

3. Principals and accomplices.—One who has been unduly intimate with a female, and arranges with a physician for an abortion, and takes the female to the physician, is guilty as a principal, although not actually present on occasion of premature birth; what was done being result of conspiracy. Hammett v. State, 84 Cr. R. 635, 209 S. W. 661, 4 A. L. R. 347.

Under an indictment charging that an abortion was procured by administering medicine calculated to produce an abortion, and did then and there destroy the life of the fetus in the womb, and did then and there by the use of the means aforesaid procure an abortion, a conviction could not stand for procuring a premature birth by such means. Tonnahill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 517, 208 S. W. 516.

5. — Different counts, duplicity and election.—A count charging that defendant furnished to A., a pregnant woman, an instrument for the purpose, on A.'s part, of procuring an abortion of herself therewith, he knowing the purpose intended by said A., and said means being calculated to produce that result, and did, by means of such instrument so furnished, procure an abortion of A., was bad for duplicity. Wandell v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 27.

7. Evidence.—In prosecution for abortion, victim's testimony on direct examination that certain medicines had been procured from doctor other than defendant was immaterial. Earnest v. State, 83 Cr. R. 257, 202 S. W. 739.

Under an indictment charging that an abortion was procured by administering medicine calculated to produce an abortion, and did then and there destroy the life of the fetus in the womb, the burden was on the state to show beyond a reasonable doubt that the child was alive at the time of the administration of the medicine, and that the medicine was administered for the purpose of destroying the fetus while in the womb. Tonnahill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 517, 208 S. W. 516.

Testimony by prosecutrix which, if believed, showed cessation of menstruation after several acts of intercourse and operations by defendant, who stated a baby had started, but he got it, after which menstruation began again, is admissible and is sufficient to sustain the conviction though contradicted by defendant. Earnest v. State, 87 Cr. R. 651, 224 S. W. 777.

There are no established rules by which pregnancy may be established in a prosecution for abortion, and where the evidence showed cessation of menstruation after intercourse and a statement by defendant, when he operated on prosecutrix, that a baby had started, the conviction cannot be reversed for failure to establish pregnancy. Id.

Art. 1072. [642] Furnishing the means; an accomplice.

Indictment.—A count charging that defendant furnished to A., a pregnant woman, an instrument for the purpose, on A.'s part, of procuring an abortion of herself therewith, he knowing the purpose intended by said A., and said means being calculated to produce that result, and did, by means of such instrument so furnished, procure an abortion of A., was bad for duplicity. Wandell v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 27.

Means used.—The means used need not almost produce an abortion. Hunter v. State, 81 Cr. R. 471, 196 S. W. 820.

Evidence.—The defendant was charged with administering cotton root tea for the purpose of producing an abortion. Expert witnesses for the state testified that, while the books said that an abortion was liable to follow the administration of cotton root tea, they knew nothing of it by personal observation, and thought that as administered to the prosecuting witness by defendant it would not produce an abortion. Held that, the jury should have found for the defendant. Williams v. State (App.) 19 S. W. 897.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of attempted abortion. Hunter v. State, 81 Cr. R. 471, 196 S. W. 820.

Indictment.—An indictment conforming strictly to the statute is sufficient. Hunter v. State, 81 Cr. R. 471, 196 S. W. 820.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Article 1084. [654] Body of deceased must be found.

Corpus delicti.—In prosecution for murder, two things were necessary to make out defendant's guilt, namely, death of deceased, and the criminal connection of defendant therewith. Davis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 15, 209 S. W. 749.

Evidence.—In prosecution for homicide, evidence held sufficient to establish corpus delicti, although no witness testified to seeing the body after the killing, notwithstanding this article. Johnson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 376, 203 S. W. 903.

Where the evidence showed that death necessarily resulted either from suicide or the criminal agency of another, the only motive for either being to avoid the disgrace of pregnancy by defendant, and that when last seen alive deceased was in good health and appearance and going away on a trip for which she made careful preparation, and when next seen her dead body was floating in deep water in a river, with baling wire so wrapped about her legs as to make walking impossible, with a loop suggesting use of a weight, the body showing results of strangulation, and her laundry bag, also wired, was near the body, the corpus delicti was established. Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

3. BY OFFICERS IN THE PERFORMANCE OF A DUTY, AND BY OTHER PERSONS UNDER CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES

Article 1092. [662] By officer in execution of lawful order.

Homicide by posse member.—In a prosecution for murder committed upon a negro in course of an unjustifiable assault made by defendant as a member of a posse and other members upon the wife of deceased, refusal of the trial court to instruct on the law of justifiable homicide held not erroneous, the homicide not having been justifiable under any phase of the evidence. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

Art. 1094. [664] Qualification of the foregoing.

5½. Private citizens making arrest.—A private citizen, while engaged in making an unlawful arrest and restraining the person arrested by threats with a pistol, loses the right of perfect self-defense. Rutland v. State, 224 S. W. 1088.

SUBD. 5

7½. Manner of executing process.—Where a posse member knew that his companions were making an illegal assault upon a negro's wife to compel her to reveal the whereabouts of a criminal, though he was ignorant of the particular character of the force used by his companions, his ignorance did not render lawful his acts in attempting to restrain the negro with a shotgun when he was endeavoring to go to the assistance of his wife, nor render justifiable the killing of the negro. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

4. DEFENSE OF PERSON OR PROPERTY

Art. 1105. [675] In preventing other felonies.

See Cochran v. State, 28 Tex. App. 422, 13 S. W. 651; Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390; Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

IN GENERAL

2. Theft at night.—Though deceased and his companions apprehended defendant and attempted to capture him while he was assisting in theft of watermelons at night, he was not justified in killing deceased. Davis v. State, 81 Cr. R. 450, 196 S. W. 520.

Statute justifies killing of thief while property is being stolen at night or thief is within gunshot of place where taken. Teague v. State, 84 Cr. R. 169, 206 S. W. 193.

In prosecution for murder growing out of defendant's discovery of deceased in his corncrib at night, defendant might show that deceased did not have sufficient corn to have fed his stock for the time shown, and keep it in condition shown, and have remaining the amount shown, as it would tend to show that deceased was stealing defendant's corn, when caught by defendant. Fread v. State, 85 Cr. R. 121, 210 S. W. 695.

If defendant shot plaintiff for the purpose of preventing theft, burglary, etc., on his premises at night, and it reasonably appeared by plaintiff's acts or words coupled with acts that it was plaintiff's purpose to commit one of such offenses, the shooting was justifiable. Ater v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 222.

2½. Charge.—In prosecution for murder and negligent homicide at night, court should have instructed jury that if defendant shot intentionally to kill or wound deceased when taking defendant's sugar cane, or within gunshot of where it was taken, the killing was justifiable under the statute, defendant's testimony raising the issue. Teague v. State, 84 Cr. R. 169, 206 S. W. 193.

Where evidence tended to show a homicide, justified as committed on a person taking the slayer's property at night while at place of taking, the qualification of an instruction thereon by stating that, if defendant killed deceased in pursuance of a previously formed design, and not to prevent theft of his corn, the killing would not be justified, was erroneous. Fread v. State, 85 Cr. R. 121, 210 S. W. 695.

Where facts tended to show a killing, justified as committed upon deceased while he was taking defendant's property at night while at place of taking, an instruction that former thefts by deceased would not justify the homicide was erroneous, where there was no contention that defendant's arrest and shooting of deceased was for past thefts, as his act would be attributed to the theft at time of the killing rather than to former thefts. Id.

3. Threats by deceased.—Where evidence in murder case shows that language of deceased at time of killing may have given color to his acts, charge on self-defense should be so framed as to give accused benefit of language, as well as acts of deceased. Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161.

4. Charge.—In homicide prosecution, wherein accused relied on self-defense, court's refusal to instruct jury to consider language as well as acts of deceased, in determining question of whether accused was justified in shooting deceased, held prejudicial error, where there was a conflict in evidence as to conduct of the parties immediately preceding homicide, and there was evidence that deceased, immediately before slaying accused with a knife said "D——n you, I will kill you." Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161.

5. Reasonableness of apprehension.—The law of self-defense requires that the jury should view the matter of apparent danger from the standpoint of the accused. Standifer v. State, 85 Cr. R. 394, 212 S. W. 954.

Homicide is permissible in repelling an assault where death or serious bodily injury is to be apprehended. Petty v. State, 86 Cr. R. 324, 216 S. W. 867.

In homicide prosecution defendant upon ground of self-defense, refusal to give requested instruction on apparent danger with reference to the words of deceased at time of the difficulty held reversible error. Williams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 280, 221 S. W. 287.

In a murder prosecution defended on ground of self-defense, instruction on apparent danger held objectionable, in that it did not permit jury to consider the words of deceased at the time of the difficulty, as well as his acts. Id.

10. Defense of another.—In prosecution for murder, defendant setting up that he acted in defense of his son, deceased having insulted the son and put his hand to his hip, when defendant struck and killed him with a breast yoke, it was improper to instruct on the law of excessive force; charge relating to an issue not raised by evidence. Mitchell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 25, 209 S. W. 743.

Where there was evidence that deceased shot defendant's sister, and at once advanced toward her, and while so advancing was himself shot by defendant, it was a question for the jury as to whether the shooting was justifiable, and failure to instruct thereon was reversible error. Thomas v. State, 85 Cr. R. 42, 210 S. W. 201.

If a negro assaulted a posse member who, with others, was committing an unlawful assault upon the negro's wife to compel her to reveal the whereabouts of a criminal, the attack was provoked by the posse member's unlawful acts, and killing of the negro by him to avert injury to himself was unlawful, as the negro had a right to protect his home and family, and to resist unlawful detention of his own person also attempted. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

Where defendant's evidence showed that he shot deceased while the latter was holding a revolver against his brother and attempting to shoot and threatening to treat the brother like he had treated defendant's father, it was error to refuse to permit defendant to show that the deceased had assaulted and severely injured his father, in order to show what deceased meant by such threat. White v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 511.

11. Charge.—Evidence in murder prosecution held to raise no issue as to whether deceased was robbing or attempting to rob defendant of his cotton at the time of the killing, upon which issue an instruction was requested. Davis v. State, 84 Cr. R. 282, 206 S. W. 690.

SUBD. 6

12 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Charge.—In a prosecution for murder, an instruction as to the permissibility of homicide, when inflicted to prevent maiming or disfiguring, was error, where there was no evidence of any purpose of maiming or disfiguring. Cotton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 387, 217 S. W. 158.

SUBD. 8

16. Theft by night.—A killing is not justified, though theft be committed, or though the accused believe it to have been committed, if in killing the thief accused acted upon malice, and not to prevent the theft or the consequences thereof. Surges v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1103.

Evidence held to raise the issue whether accused, in killing deceased, acted upon the reasonable belief that deceased had stolen his whisky, so as to require a charge as to justifiable homicide in case of theft by night. Id.

17. Recovery of property.—One giving chase to another who has stolen his money is justified in trying to recover his money, and may go even to the extent of shooting the person who has taken it. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

Art. 1106. [676] Presumption from the use of weapons.

Presumption as to Intent.—Where defendant had discovered deceased in his corner at night, and had undertaken to arrest and hold him for the officers, if deceased was about to secure a gun from his wife, the presumption would be that he intended to kill defendant, or to inflict serious bodily injury. Fread v. State, 85 Cr. R. 121, 210 S. W. 695.

Charge.—Where there was testimony that accused, in attack by deceased and companions, had been knocked down with rocks and his left hand broken and his right hand cut, he was entitled to charge that, if the weapon used in the assault upon him was such as to produce a reasonable apprehension of death or serious bodily injury, jury should regard such attack as being for the purpose of killing him or inflicting upon him such serious bodily injury. Lozano v. State, 83 Cr. R. 174, 202 S. W. 510.

In a murder case, where defendant claimed that deceased attacked him with an open knife, an instruction was not erroneous as failing to use the term "deadly weapon," where the length and size of the knife was described. McDougal v. State, 84 Cr. R. 424, 208 S. W. 173.

In prosecution for assault with intent to murder, facts held to raise issue of actual danger so as to require a charge on presumption of intent to kill from use of deadly weapon by injured party. Castle v. State, 84 Cr. R. 593, 209 S. W. 416.

Where defendant had discovered deceased in his corner at night, and had undertaken to arrest and hold him for the officers, the court should have charged that, if deceased was about to secure a gun from his wife, the presumption would be that he intended to kill defendant or to inflict serious bodily injury. Fread v. State, 85 Cr. R. 121, 210 S. W. 695.

Paragraph of charge to the effect that if, when deceased was shot by defendant, deceased's brother made or was about to make an attack upon defendant, or defendant's father, with a gun capable of producing death or serious bodily injury, the law presumes that the deceased's brother intended to kill or to inflict serious bodily injury upon defendant, defendant's father, or both of them, held not objectionable. Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390.

In a prosecution for homicide, wherever the presumption from the use of a weapon by deceased against defendant becomes an issue, and request is made for a charge, thereon by defendant, such charge should be given in proper form. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

In a homicide case, there being evidence that deceased threatened to kill accused and fired at him once and was in the act of firing again when he was shot, an appropriate instruction upon the presumption arising from the use of deadly weapons should have been given. Medford v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 504.

Art. 1107. [677] In protecting person or property from attacks.

Cited, Mays v. State (App.) 19 S. W. 504.

1. Defense of person or property.—The law with reference to resort to other means, or no more force than necessary, does not apply to self-defense, actual or apparent. Blacklock v. State, 81 Cr. R. 511, 196 S. W. 822.

Where there was evidence that defendant pursued deceased for a peaceable settlement of a difficulty by calling to him that he wanted a peaceable settlement, the question of perfect self-defense is raised, and the proposition should have been given in the charge. Hammonds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 387, 198 S. W. 944; Hokes v. Same, 82 Cr. R. 271, 198 S. W. 945.

If deceased intended to kill defendant, or it reasonably appeared to defendant that such was deceased's purpose, killing was justifiable. Aycock v. McQuerry (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 873.

One does not forfeit his right of self-defense by reason of his intentions, unaffected by his acts, or words evincing his design to put his intentions into execution. Raspberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 393, 208 S. W. 168.

Defendant, who discovered deceased in his corncrib stealing corn, and who attempted to arrest him as authorized by Code Cr. Proc. arts. 259-263, when deceased's wife, at his request, came with a shotgun, had right to prevent deceased from securing it and using it, and court should have so charged. Fread v. State, 85 Cr. R. 121, 210 S. W. 695.

Every one has the right to protect his property from unlawful violence. Barklay v. State, 85 Cr. R. 512, 213 S. W. 642.

In a homicide case, where accused was charged with shooting deceased while struggling with her husband, accused's right to rely on self-defense plea held independent of whether discharge of pistol was accidental. Merritt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 565, 213 S. W. 941.

In a prosecution for murder, contentions of the state and defendant held to present the issues of murder, manslaughter, and self-defense. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

Where an assault is of such character that no serious injury is to be apprehended, one assaulted must resort to other reasonable means at hand of preventing injury before he can be justified in taking the life of his antagonist. Petty v. State, 86 Cr. R. 324, 216 S. W. 867.

Under the statute authorizing a school-teacher to punish his pupils moderately, if the punishment passes beyond that point, and is immoderate, or for the purpose of revenge, or maliciously done, the right does not exist, and the right of self-defense in the pupil obtains. Dill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 49, 219 S. W. 481.

If a school-teacher took his pupil beyond the schoolhouse and grounds not to chastise him as a student for a violation of rules, but out of revenge, or to inflict unnecessary and immoderate punishment in a cruel way, the pupil's right of self-defense inured, as viewed under the circumstances as he saw them at the time, and not as the jury saw them when he was tried for manslaughter. Id.

Where plaintiff's conduct on defendant's premises after 11 at night indicated that he was there for the purpose of committing theft, burglary, etc., and he was shot by defendant, the provision that all other means must be resorted to for the prevention of the injury, did not apply. Ater v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 222.

2. Defense of habitation.—A negro had a right to procure arms if necessary, to protect his home and family against an illegal assault by posse members endeavoring to discover the whereabouts of a criminal. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

3. Resisting arrest.—Whether a de facto sheriff killed by accused had received information warranting arrest of accused without warrant, and whether accused knew of the fact that deceased was an officer, held for the jury. Burkhardt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 228, 202 S. W. 513.

Unless accused who shot a de facto deputy sheriff knew the capacity in which deceased was acting and his ground for making the arrest, he was not bound to submit to arrest without warrant. Id.

If one arrested for offense was unaware of the officer's official character and the officer had no time to disclose it, flight would not deprive the accused of the right to defend against an effort to recapture him. Id.

A private citizen, while engaged in making an unlawful arrest and restraining the person arrested by threats with a pistol, loses the right of perfect self-defense, and cannot insist on instructions covering such right in a prosecution for killing the arrested person. Rutland v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1088.

4. Defense of another.—If defendant negro fired upon officers under the defensive theory, to protect his friend from an assault made on him by either or both officers, defendant was not guilty of assault with intent to murder, though he may have fired too quickly, or have fired under circumstances showing no deliberation, which may constitute aggravated assault. Thurogood v. State, 87 Cr. R. 209, 220 S. W. 337.

Fact that negro stopped when posse member first ordered him to do so, and afterwards advanced threatening injury to posse member if he obstructed his progress to his home, where other members of posse were illegally assaulting his wife to compel her to reveal whereabouts of a criminal, did not confer upon posse member the right to kill the negro, and, in restraining the negro by an assault with a shotgun, he was guilty of a continuous assault, which negro had right to resist. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

5. Provoking contest, and impairment of self-defense.—Although defendant provoked difficulty, he did not forfeit his right to defend against a deadly assault, unless he intended to kill or inflict serious bodily injury. Aycock v. McQuerry (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 873; Sheely v. State, 83 Cr. R. 127, 201 S. W. 1012.

The right of self-defense is qualified under the law of provoking difficulty, where accused intended to provoke difficulty for purpose of causing deceased to attack, and thereupon to kill or do him serious bodily harm. Burkhardt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 228, 202 S. W. 513.

To cut off self-defense on ground of provoking difficulty, accused must have intended to provoke the difficulty, for the purpose of causing deceased to attack, and thereupon to kill him or do serious bodily harm. Roberson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 238, 203 S. W. 349.

A person may bring on a difficulty, which results in homicide, without forfeiting the right of self-defense, even if the act by which it was brought on was wrongful. Id.

If defendant obtained a knife and went to where deceased was with a view to engaging in a difficulty with him, and did some act that brought about the difficulty, he had no right to use knife in self-defense. Torrez v. State, 83 Cr. R. 475, 204 S. W. 228.

Calling a person a "son of a harlot" would be sufficient provocation to preclude self-defense if inducing cause of difficulty. Trevino v. State, 83 Cr. R. 562, 204 S. W. 996.

Where accused invited deceased to go out on the gallery after being struck by deceased, and where, after going out on the gallery, deceased pushed accused off the gallery, whereupon accused called deceased a son of a harlot, accused will not be deemed to have provoked the difficulty, the deceased having taken first step toward the trouble. Id.

Defendant, who discovered deceased in his corncrib stealing corn, and who attempted to arrest him, as authorized by Code Cr. Proc. arts. 259-263, when deceased's wife, at his request, came with a shotgun, had the right to prevent deceased from securing it and using it. Fread v. State, 85 Cr. R. 121, 210 S. W. 695.

Where defendant determined to kill deceased and armed himself with a shotgun for that purpose, and, on seeing deceased, presented the shotgun, and by words indicated a hostile intent reasonably calculated to cause deceased to make a counter demonstration, defendant had no right to make the demonstration so induced the cause for killing deceased, and the law of self-defense was not involved. Beck v. State, 85 Cr. R. 578, 213 S. W. 662.

Issue of provoking the difficulty, justifying instruction thereon, does not arise from evidence which is merely conflicting as to who made the first attack. Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161.

Where one procured a gun to protect himself or himself and his son from unlawful violence, and such preparatory act caused an unlawful attack upon him, and in his own necessary self-defense he shot and killed the assaulting party, he was not guilty of any offense. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175.

An intent to provoke deceased to attack accused in order to produce occasion to kill deceased is an essential element in the law of provoking the difficulty, but the mere existence of such intent, in the absence of some word or action reasonably calculated to effect the end intended, is insufficient. Richards v. State, 86 Cr. R. 414, 216 S. W. 888.

Defendant did not forfeit his right of self-defense by the mere act of arming himself and seeking an interview with deceased to bring about a peaceful adjustment of their difficulties. Id.

Whether or not the persons involved in an affray had previously conspired to kill the other person fought with, the mere fact that they may have conspired to kill him if they were attacked on their part by him when acting inoffensively did not debar them from the right of self-defense. King v. State, 86 Cr. R. 407, 216 S. W. 1091.

Evidence in homicide held to raise only the issues of murder and justifiable homicide, and not the issue of "provoking the difficulty," the law of which arises only where deceased was the attacking party, and his attack was brought about by the words or acts of accused, intended to bring on the attack, in order that advantage might be taken thereof by him to slay his adversary and escape the consequences; hence submission of such issue was improper. Carter v. State, 87 Cr. R. 200, 220 S. W. 335.

If a negro assaulted a posse member who, with others, was committing an unlawful assault upon the negro's wife to compel her to reveal the whereabouts of a criminal, the attack was provoked by the posse member's unlawful acts, and killing of the negro by him to avert injury to himself was unlawful, as the negro had a right to protect his home and family, and to resist unlawful detention of his own person also attempted. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

Where the acts and conduct of defendant are the cause of the attack on him, the question of provoking the difficulty is one of fact for the jury. Hollman v. State, 87 Cr. R. 576, 223 S. W. 206.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant fired three shots as rapidly as they could be fired from a pistol, there was no question of abandonment of the difficulty by the deceased simply because deceased was in the act of turning, which placed his side to defendant, when the last shot was fired; hence it was error to limit defendant's right of self-defense by charging on the subject of abandonment of the difficulty. Lovett v. State, 87 Cr. R. 548, 223 S. W. 210.

A party may have a perfect right of self-defense, though he himself is not entirely free from blame or wrong in the transaction; if his blamable or wrongful act was not intended to produce the occasion, and was not an act which was reasonably calculated to produce the occasion or provoke the difficulty, his right of self-defense was complete, though his act was not blameless. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

One may seek a party with intent to provoke a difficulty, but he does not forfeit his right of self-defense unless after he has found his adversary he does provoke the difficulty by words or acts or both; the aggressor must not only have intended to provoke an attack to gain the vantage ground of apparent defensive, but he must do or say something to cause his adversary to make the attack, and his acts or words must be reasonably calculated to effect the object. Id.

Defendant could not claim the law of perfect self-defense, if his own wrongful act in first shooting at deceased produced or brought about the situation in which he subsequently shot and killed deceased. Carlile v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

5½. Right to arm oneself.—The act of defendant in obtaining a knife to defend himself against the aggression of deceased, who had previously assaulted him, in case deceased should again attack him, did not defeat the right of self-defense, where defendant did nothing to bring on final difficulty resulting in killing. Torrez v. State, 83 Cr. R. 475, 204 S. W. 228.

7. Threats by defendant.—That defendant had made antecedent threats did not deprive him of the right to defend himself. Legrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In prosecution for murder of sister's husband after the husband had assaulted and seriously injured his wife and had threatened to kill her entire family, and after the wife had taken refuge with defendant, in which defendant claimed to have shot from his house in defense of himself, sister, and others of the family while deceased was advancing toward the house, the court's failure to instruct on the law of homicide in defense of one's person in a case wherein the accused relies upon threats accompanied by a demonstration, where no special charge was asked correcting the omission, and where the fatal shot and the infliction of the injuries from which death appeared to result took place after deceased had fled from the premises pursued by defendant, held not reversible error. Bean v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 776.

9. Evidence on issue of self-defense.—Under plea of self-defense, evidence that deceased's daughter drank liquor and solicited men to purchase it for her and that she was an immoral person held admissible; defendant having testified that she was leading his daughter into such conduct. Henley v. State, 81 Cr. R. 221, 195 S. W. 197.

Defendant's statement that he struck because he was afraid, when deceased reached behind him, he was going to get a gun or something and do him injury, shoot or kill him, presents the question of apparent danger, with right of self-defense. Blacklock v. State, 81 Cr. R. 511, 196 S. W. 822.

That deceased's father met defendant after difficulty, and defendant drew knife, looked daggers at him, and appeared angry, held inadmissible. Wallace v. State, 82 Cr. R. 588, 200 S. W. 407.

In prosecution for murder, evidence held to sustain conviction, in that it showed defendant killed deceased to rob him, and not in self-defense. Vestal v. State, 83 Cr. R. 184, 202 S. W. 94.

In prosecution for murder, evidence held to raise issue of self-defense. Torrez v. State, 83 Cr. R. 475, 204 S. W. 228.

Evidence of the defendant as affected by that of other witnesses and surrounding circumstances held to present an issue of fact from which the jury was authorized to determine that defendant did not shoot deceased in self-defense. Ward v. State, 83 Cr. R. 518, 204 S. W. 322.

On the issue of self-defense, defendant should have been permitted to show that deceased had the reputation of being a quarrelsome, contentious, and overbearing man, and that defendant knew of such reputation. Lacey v. State, 83 Cr. R. 607, 204 S. W. 433.

In prosecution for murder, evidence held to authorize submission of question of defendant's provoking difficulty. Flewellen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 568, 204 S. W. 657.

In prosecution for murder, evidence held sufficient to justify submission to jury of question of whether accused provoked the difficulty. Trevino v. State, 83 Cr. R. 562, 204 S. W. 996.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, claimed by defendant to have been committed in defense of his brother, evidence as to his brother's insanity was admissible on the question of defense of a relative. Holland v. State, 84 Cr. R. 154, 206 S. W. 89.

In homicide prosecution defended on ground of self-defense and involving questions whether the difficulty was initiated by the demonstration of the deceased or by defendant's assault, jury was entitled to consider previous difficulties and the relation of the parties and their mutual expressions of ill-will against one another. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In prosecution for homicide, defendant setting up self-defense, the state properly asked witnesses as to the location of bullet holes in the clothing worn by deceased at the time of the fatal difficulty. Alsop v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195.

In prosecution for murder, defendant setting up self-defense, the state was properly permitted to ask a witness if he knew the general reputation of deceased in his community for being a quiet, peaceable man, over objection that alternative was not included in, and that something was omitted from, the question. Id.

Where defendant shot deceased immediately after deceased had shot defendant's sister, and while he was advancing toward her, evidence that deceased had a bottle of whisky in his pocket held immaterial, and its exclusion not error. Thomas v. State, 85 Cr. R. 42, 210 S. W. 201.

Where defendant prosecuted for murder pleaded self-defense and claimed that deceased had come to the place in question to carry out a threat to kill defendant before sundown, testimony of the wife of deceased, explaining her husband's presence by detailing his intention, undisclosed to defendant, to meet witness at that place for the purpose of accompanying her home, was inadmissible. Standifer v. State, 85 Cr. R. 394, 212 S. W. 954.

Evidence held insufficient to support conviction for manslaughter in that it showed that defendant fired the shot that killed deceased from a position on the floor to which he had fallen after having been shot by deceased. Berrian v. State, 87 Cr. R. 284, 221 S. W. 282.

To the issue of self-defense, depending on defendant's view of the incidents of the present event (trouble growing out of deceased's criticism of defendant's failure to buy Liberty Bonds), in the light of his knowledge of deceased's character, evidence of defendant's intense patriotism, existence of many disloyalists in the community, the stabbing of a friend of defendant by one of them, existence of feeling in the community against disloyalty, and defendant's opposition to disloyalty, known and resented by the disloyal was irrelevant. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 305, 221 S. W. 607.

In prosecution of wife for killing her husband, defended on ground of self-defense, trial court properly allowed to come before the jury the various difficulties, quarrels, threats, and encounters constituting the course of conduct between husband and wife; such matters including a conversation wherein the husband asked his attorney for advice on killing his wife, being competent on the controverted question of self-defense. Ott v. State, 87 Cr. R. 382, 222 S. W. 261.

It is permissible, though not necessary, for defendant in homicide, claiming reasonable belief that deceased was armed, and making a demonstration preparatory to attack, and relying in part on alleged statements of deceased to him that deceased had been the aggressor in difficulties with named persons, to support this by evidence of such attacks on such persons having been made. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583.

In a prosecution for murder resulting in conviction of manslaughter, evidence held to sustain the conviction, not being conclusive on the issue of killing in self-defense. Ivens v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1095.

In homicide prosecution in which defendant claimed to have acted in self-defense, evidence held to sustain conviction. Perea v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 305.

In a homicide case, where plea was self-defense, deceased having fired a shotgun at accused, evidence that deceased had purchased the shotgun for one of his sons was improperly admitted, where the matter was unknown to the accused, as it tended to impair his rights of self-defense. Medford v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 504.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence held not to raise the issue of different phases of the law of self-defense based on the two shots fired by defendant. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

In prosecution for manslaughter, evidence held to require a finding that defendant acted in self-defense from an assault with a deadly weapon in the hands of an intoxicated and dangerous man. Spain v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 325.

12. Charge.—See Skaggs v. State, 31 Cr. R. 563, 21 S. W. 257.

A charge that "homicide is justifiable, also, in the protection of the person against any other unlawful and violent attack besides those mentioned; * * * and in such cases all other means must be resorted to for the prevention of the injury; and the killing must take place while the person killed is in the very act of making such unlawful and violent attack,"—is correct. Miller v. State, 27 Tex. App. 63, 10 S. W. 445.

Instructions on self-defense held to sufficiently present the idea that appearances of danger were to be considered from defendant's standpoint. Bivens v. State, 82 Cr. R. 278, 198 S. W. 962.

An instruction on self-defense held erroneous, as submitting the self-defense theory from the standpoint of the jury rather than from the standpoint of defendant. Hays v. State, 82 Cr. R. 427, 199 S. W. 621.

Instruction to view issue of self-defense from defendant's viewpoint, and that, if it reasonably appeared to defendant that deceased was drawing a weapon, the shooting was justified, and that, if there was reasonable doubt as to defendant's belief, he should be acquitted, sufficiently presented self-defense, in spite of previous instruction leaving appearances at time of shooting to jury's and not defendant's viewpoint. Adler v. State, 83 Cr. R. 72, 201 S. W. 177.

It was not error to refuse to specially charge that a man living with his wife in a house of ill fame was just as much entitled to defend himself from unlawful attack as any one else, although some of the jurors had stated that such fact would influence them. Houston v. State, 83 Cr. R. 190, 202 S. W. 84.

There being testimony that accused was suddenly attacked, accused was entitled to instruction that if the jury believed that accused killed deceased, and not in self-defense, but that means used were not of a nature calculated to produce death, they should find accused not guilty of homicide, unless there was an intention on his part to kill and he was not acting in self-defense, but that accused could be found guilty of aggravated assault and battery, unless acting in self-defense, and in the latter case could not be convicted of any offense. Lozano v. State, 83 Cr. R. 174, 202 S. W. 510.

In prosecution for murder, court's charge on self-defense held to amply submit defendant's claimed self-defense. Flewellen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 568, 204 S. W. 657.

In prosecution of bank president for murder of state commissioner of banking, who had just closed his bank, instruction on self-defense held sufficiently to apply law to facts. Watson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 115, 205 S. W. 662.

Although defendant testified that he shot twice to protect his father, and that the third shot was accidental, held, in view of other evidence, that court should have instructed on defendant's right to defend himself as well as upon his right to defend his father. Knight v. State, 84 Cr. R. 395, 207 S. W. 315.

Where in beginning of difficulty accused's father alone was in danger when defendant shot at prosecuting witness, and where later father was not present when defendant again shot at the prosecuting witness, it was reversible error not to limit charge as to self-defense to the second difficulty. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 479, 208 S. W. 660.

In homicide prosecution involving self-defense issue, instruction on the law of self-defense held proper. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In murder trial, where issue of self-defense was made prominent by the facts, instruction on insulting words or conduct to female relative as justification held reversible error, as placing burden upon accused to prove justification to reduce the degree from murder to manslaughter, and then in substance instructing that, if this were not done, accused would be guilty of murder, thus excluding the issue of self-defense. Wood v. State, 85 Cr. R. 268, 211 S. W. 782.

In prosecution for homicide wherein defendant set up a defense of property in his rental possession, a charge that if he went to ask deceased why he was working thereon and to desist, and carried a gun, and that, if deceased rushed toward defendant and from deceased's acts, character, etc., defendant had a reasonable apprehension of serious bodily injury or fear of death, and acted thereon and shot deceased, held to fairly and fully cover self-defense as made by the evidence. Barklay v. State, 85 Cr. R. 512, 213 S. W. 642.

In trial for murder of street car conductor who had ejected accused from the street car, it was proper to refuse to charge anything with reference to the street car company's rules, which were unknown to accused and could not have influenced his conduct, as such instruction would confuse the issues. Mickle v. State, 85 Cr. R. 560, 213 S. W. 665.

A charge on manslaughter was not unduly restrictive of accused's right of self-defense, where the reference in such charge to self-defense was not an attempt to define the law of self-defense, but to direct the jury's attention to the fact that they should keep the law and facts as to self-defense in mind for accused's benefit. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

The state's case being a killing from malice, and defendant's theory being that deceased came in a threatening attitude to where he was working, and he thought his life was in danger, and he defended from that standpoint, the necessity to resort to other means of defense are not to be charged. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 422, 214 S. W. 353.

In a prosecution for murder there was no need for special charges telling the jury that they could consider the weakened condition of accused's mind in deciding whether to him the danger of death or serious bodily injury was real or apparent, the court having instructed that defendant be discharged if the conduct of the deceased produced in accused's mind a reasonable apprehension of fear of death or serious bodily injury, viewed from accused's standpoint alone. Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101.

In a homicide case, evidence held not to require the court to charge on self-defense. Albrecht v. State, 85 Cr. R. 519, 215 S. W. 327.

A charge that homicide is justifiable in protection of the person against any unlawful and violent attack, but in such case all other means must be resorted to for the prevention of the injury, held erroneous; the evidence showing that from defendant's standpoint the attack upon him was one calculated to kill or seriously injure him, in which case defendant was not required to resort to any other means than force. Petty v. State, 86 Cr. R. 324, 216 S. W. 367.

Where self-defense is urged, it is incumbent on the trial court to instruct the jury that in determining the issue the matter should be viewed from the standpoint of the accused, and this is true, though the issue be raised by the testimony of the accused alone. Nader v. State, 86 Cr. R. 424, 219 S. W. 474.

In a prosecution for manslaughter against a pupil who killed his teacher while being chastised, the issue being raised of the pupil's right of self-defense on account of improper chastisement, instruction on the pupil's right of self-defense held improper as not presenting the case from his standpoint, but from that of the jury. Dill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 49, 219 S. W. 481.

In a prosecution for manslaughter against a pupil who killed his school-teacher while being chastised, where the issue was raised whether the teacher's attempted punishment of the pupil passed beyond proper limits to bring into existence the pupil's right of self-defense, charges were required on such issue. Id.

In homicide prosecution defended upon ground of self-defense, refusal to give requested instruction on apparent danger with reference to the words of deceased at time of the difficulty held reversible error. Williams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 280, 221 S. W. 287.

Instructions on self-defense and communicated threats were properly refused, where it was stated therein that it made no difference and the jury would not consider whether deceased was an officer or not; his status as an officer being an element in the case, though not changing the nature of the offense. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

In a prosecution of a wife for killing her husband, charge on self-defense, which in applying the law to the facts directed the jury specifically to the theory of the case on which defendant predicated her right of self-defense, held not erroneous, though submitting the converse of defendant's theory that the mere belief she was in danger in the absence of reasonable grounds did not excuse her. Ott v. State, 87 Cr. R. 382, 222 S. W. 261.

In a prosecution for homicide, charge on self-defense held not open to criticism. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

In a homicide case, where defendant used rifle and deceased a shotgun, and there was evidence that during the encounter both the accused and deceased changed their positions, the state contending that between the first and second shots fired by the accused the movement by the deceased had the effect to increase the distance between the parties, court erred in failing to instruct the jury upon the phase of the law of self-defense which accords the accused the right to continue to shoot so long as the danger continues. Medford v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 504.

A charge that, if the jury believed from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that "defendant, acting with * * * as principal, * * * shoot with a gun, and thereby kill" deceased, but if the jury further believed that at the time of so doing deceased had made, or was about to make, an attack on defendant or his principal which caused defendant to have a reasonable expectation or fear of death or bodily harm, and that, acting under such reasonable expectation, he shot and killed, defendant should be acquitted, is not objectionable as confusing and erroneous. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

Considering the entire charge, where the court charged that if defendant, acting with another as a principal, killed deceased, nevertheless he should be acquitted if deceased had made, or was about to make, an attack on either, which, as viewed from his standpoint, caused defendant to have a reasonable expectation or fear of death or bodily injury to himself or his principal, defendant cannot complain of the charge on the theory that it unduly restricted the right of self-defense to such force as was reasonable or necessary. Id.

Where defendant, who was present when his son killed deceased, was accused of murder, and defendant testified that when the shooting occurred he was sitting in his automobile, the son having alighted and engaged in the fatal encounter, the facts were not sufficient to warrant a charge on the right of defendant to act in his own self-defense. Id.

In a prosecution for murder, presentation in the charge on behalf of defendant of separate legal phases pertaining to his right of self-defense at the time he fired his second or third shot held not necessary. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

In prosecution for murder, failure to instruct at defendant's request that he had right to continue to shoot as long as the danger continued, as viewed from his standpoint, was not error, where such charge was rendered unnecessary by the circumstances, including an instruction that, if the first shot inflicted mortal wounds, and in firing it appellant was acting in self-defense, they would not consider as a circumstance against him that he fired additional shots, where the evidence showed that each of the wounds was fatal, there being no evidence to require the requested instruction. Boaz v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 790.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant claimed that deceased, who with others had beaten up one of defendant's friends, made a threatening motion, and that, becoming frightened, he shot and killed, a charge that if at the time defendant killed deceased the latter had made or was about to make an attack upon defendant, or that it reasonably appeared from defendant's standpoint that deceased had made or was about to make an attack upon him, defendant should be acquitted, etc., was a fair presentation of defendant's case. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 309.

13. — Provoking contest.—Whenever it becomes necessary in the opinion of the trial court to charge on the law of provoking the difficulty, it is necessary always that the converse of that proposition be also given to the jury. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952; Hammonds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 387, 198 S. W. 944; Hokes v. Same, 82 Cr. R. 271, 198 S. W. 945.

In prosecution for murder, fact that defendant may have struck first blow will not justify charge on self-defense, qualified with charge on provoking difficulty in absence of evidence of intent to bring difficulty on to provoke attack in which defendant intended to kill or injure deceased. Martinez v. State, 81 Cr. R. 627, 197 S. W. 872.

That accused was alleged to have been criminally intimate with deceased's wife did not warrant submission of self-defense limited by provoking difficulty, on theory that such intimacy provoked the difficulty. Sheely v. State, 83 Cr. R. 127, 201 S. W. 1012.

In prosecution for murder of deputy sheriff who was attempting to prevent escape of accused after arrest for burglary, held error to qualify the charge on self-defense by the issue of provoking the difficulty in absence of evidence that accused fled with intent to provoke difficulty. Burkhardt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 228, 202 S. W. 513.

Where the court properly defined and explained what acts establish provoking the difficulty, and further gave accused's requested charge submitting the converse thereof, according to his defensive theory, the original charge was not defective in failing to submit such theory. Roberson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 238, 203 S. W. 349.

Evidence held to warrant charge on provoking the difficulty. Id.

If accused, after provoking the difficulty, abandon it, and it is renewed by deceased, the court must instruct on the law of such abandonment. Id.

In homicide prosecution, charge on provoking difficulty should inform jury that, if defendant provoked the difficulty with the intent to injure the deceased, but with no intent to kill him or do him serious bodily harm, and afterwards fired upon him for the protection of his own life against the threatened assault by deceased, conviction could not be for a higher grade of offense than aggravated assault. Thompson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 144, 210 S. W. 800.

In a homicide prosecution issue of provoking the difficulty held not in the case, so that a charge thereon was improperly given. Redwine v. State, 85 Cr. R. 437, 213 S. W. 636.

In prosecution for assault with intent to murder, where there was testimony for the state that defendant was armed with a pistol when he came to the injured party, and that he used insulting language and was in the act of drawing his pistol when the other party struck at him, it was not error to qualify defendant's right of self-defense by instructing on the law of provoking the difficulty. Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 493, 213 S. W. 658.

Charge on provoking the difficulty is proper, where first attack was made by deceased, but was induced by words and conduct of accused reasonably calculated and intended to provoke an attack, to be used by accused as an occasion for harm to deceased. Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161.

Charge on provoking the difficulty held improper under the evidence, which was insufficient to raise the issue. Id.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence held sufficient to warrant an instruction given on the matter of accused's provoking the difficulty leading to the killing, and question as to whether defendant's acts and statements were for purpose of provoking attack was for the jury. Parker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 222, 216 S. W. 178.

The act of defendant, who with others was working on a public road, in lying down on a pallet which deceased claimed as his bed and refusing upon request to surrender it, was not unlawful, and where it did not appear to have been intended or reasonably calculated to provoke assault by deceased, an instruction on provoking the difficulty was not appropriate. Petty v. State, 86 Cr. R. 324, 216 S. W. 867.

In a prosecution resulting in conviction of manslaughter, instruction qualifying defendant's right of self-defense by a charge on provoking the difficulty held not justified by evidence. Richards v. State, 86 Cr. R. 414, 216 S. W. 888.

In prosecution for assault to murder, where trial court gave defendant his unlimited right of self-defense, and gave no charge on provoking the difficulty, a charge that no verbal provocation (defendant having called the assaulted person by an insulting term, and thereby provoked him to strike) would justify an assault was not called for. Simmons v. State, 87 Cr. R. 270, 220 S. W. 554.

In a prosecution for homicide, evidence tending to show that defendant provoked difficulty held sufficient to authorize the court to limit the right of self-defense by charging on the provoking of the difficulty. Shrum v. State, 87 Cr. R. 486, 222 S. W. 575.

Where the presence and conduct of defendant caused the difficulty, whether intended or not, a charge on provoking the difficulty was proper. Hollman v. State, 87 Cr. R. 576, 223 S. W. 206.

In prosecution for murder of husband of woman with whom defendant had been maintaining illicit relations, correct submission of case held to have required a charge, qualifying right of self-defense by one on law of provoking difficulty, accompanied by one advising jury when they might reduce grade of homicide to that of manslaughter if decedent was provoked to attack defendant by language used with reference to decedent's wife. Barber v. State, 87 Cr. R. 585, 223 S. W. 457.

If conductor's assault on passenger was provoked by the passenger's words and acts, the court, in prosecution of passenger for murder of conductor, should have qualified the charge on self-defense by a charge on the law of provoking the difficulty. Mickie v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

In a prosecution for homicide committed on one whom defendant believed to have maligned his sister, the trial court having embodied in the charge no qualification of the right of perfect self-defense, his refusal to instruct on the law applicable to defendant's right to arm himself and seek deceased for an explanation was not error. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

In a prosecution for homicide, a proper instruction on provoking the difficulty is to the effect that if defendant by his own willful and wrongful acts engaged deceased in a quarrel to provoke a difficulty with the intention to kill deceased, etc., and if defendant did some act, or used some language, or both, with the unlawful purpose to produce the occasion and bring on the difficulty, and such acts or language or both were reasonably calculated to provoke the difficulty, and deceased was caused to attack defendant, and defendant, in pursuance of his original intention, struck deceased and injured him, defendant could not avail himself of his plea of self-defense, but would be guilty either of manslaughter or aggravated assault. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, charge on provoking the difficulty held erroneous as giving the jury no measure or guide with reference to what wrongful acts or conduct on defendant's part would amount to provoking the difficulty and as leaving the jury to grope in the record and pick out any act which they might believe wrongful or blamable. Id.

See, also, Vernon's Code Cr. Proc. 1916, art. 735n66.

13½. — Right to procure arms.—An instruction that, if defendant armed himself and pursued deceased with the intention of taking his life, he could not justify on the ground of self-defense, is insufficient; as some act or word indicating that purpose or to provoke the deceased is necessary. Hammonds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 287, 198 S. W. 944; Hokes v. Same, 82 Cr. R. 271, 198 S. W. 945.

Having limited accused's right of self-defense by charge on provoking difficulty, court should have instructed as to possession of revolver, where accused was a traveler, whose possession was not unlawful, and the meeting with deceased was casual. Roberson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 238, 203 S. W. 349.

In prosecution for murder, where court gives no charge at all on provoking difficulty, he should not give any charge on defendant's right to arm himself in preparation for any attack, or contemplated attack, by deceased upon him. Davis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 539, 204 S. W. 652.

In a prosecution for murder, the court having given the jury an instruction on the law of self-defense without in any way qualifying it, there was no error in refusing to instruct the jury that appellant had a right to arm himself and seek the deceased for an explanation or discussion of the previous difficulty. Hollman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 371, 212 S. W. 663.

In prosecution for assault with intent to murder, refusal to incorporate in instruction on self-defense charge that, in seeking assaulted party to peaceably adjust their difficulties, the fact that defendant first armed himself would not deprive him of his right to defend against an unlawful attack, was erroneous, in view of their previous encounter, the other party's communicated threats, and his hostile attitude, and the fact that he struck at defendant with a deadly weapon. Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 493, 213 S. W. 658.

In homicide prosecution, court, having given an unqualified charge upon the law of self-defense, was not required to instruct jury upon defendant's right to arm himself before seeking deceased for interview as to deceased's misconduct with his (defendant's) wife. Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

Instructions that defendant had the right, together with his father, to seek deceased or his brother for the purpose of having an interview in regard to any difference of feed crop raised by deceased on farm of defendant's father, and the right to arm himself against any attack which might be made upon him or his father, held not subject to objection that it was too restrictive of defendant's right to arm himself and seek his assailant for an interview. Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390.

In prosecution for assault to murder, held, that there were no facts to warrant a charge on the right to arm one's self in anticipation of danger when engaged in a lawful enterprise. Price v. State, 87 Cr. R. 163, 220 S. W. 89.

Defendant's act in sharpening a borrowed pocketknife, opening it, and carrying it up his sleeve when going to meet the person ultimately assaulted was not "arming" himself as contemplated by Texas law, a pocketknife not being a "weapon," and a charge on right to arm himself was properly refused in his prosecution for assault to murder, as contemplating erroneous idea his acts were justifiable. Simmons v. State, 87 Cr. R. 270, 220 S. W. 554.

In murder prosecution involving self-defense issue, where the evidence showed that deceased had threatened to kill defendant when the opportunity was afforded, and that defendant was on his own premises when he procured his pistol, refusal of requested charge that defendant had the right to arm himself in anticipation of an attack from deceased held error. Williams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 280, 221 S. W. 287.

In a prosecution for murder, defendant's requested special charge that he had a right to arm himself on account of threats by decedent held properly refused as without evidence to support. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772.

In a prosecution for homicide committed on one who defendant believed had maligned his sister, evidence held insufficient to present the issue of defendant's right to arm himself and ask an explanation of deceased to call for instruction thereon. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

Where defendant and his son met deceased on the highway, and the son, who, in accordance with his usual custom, was traveling armed, shot deceased, who had insulted his wife, the fact that in the charge the court told the jury that the son had the right to approach deceased and demand an explanation of the insult did not warrant a charge that the son, before seeking the interview and explanation, had the right to arm himself. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

14. — Mutual combat.—Where deceased brought on the trouble and followed it to its conclusion, accused not being to blame at any point from any view of the evidence, the issue of abandonment of the difficulty was not in issue, although appellant attempted in good faith to leave the vicinity; hence failure to charge thereon was not error. Campbell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 89, 206 S. W. 348.

In a prosecution for murder, an instruction as to mutual combat held not supported by evidence. Cotton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 387, 217 S. W. 158.

15. — Threats by deceased.—In a prosecution for murder, evidence showing previous threats of deceased, the court should have charged on subject of self-defense viewed in the light of threats. Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 347, 197 S. W. 196.

Where one accused of murder proved that deceased's threats against his life had been communicated to him, it was error to refuse instruction on communicated threats. Sheely v. State, 83 Cr. R. 127, 201 S. W. 1012.

Where accused relies on self-defense on communicated threats accompanied by an overt act without actual attack, the charge on self-defense should be accompanied by and connected with a charge on the law of threats, but if actual attack is relied upon, the law of threats may be separately charged. Roberson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 238, 203 S. W. 349.

See, also, Vernon's Code Crim. Proc. 1916, art. 735, n. 67.

16. — Defense of another.—In submitting question of defense by accused of his brother, it is proper to instruct that, if the jury believed that defendant killed deceased in defense of his brother, or if they had a reasonable doubt thereof, to acquit. Holland v. State, 84 Cr. R. 154, 206 S. W. 89.

In a homicide case, held error, in view of the evidence, to refuse to instruct as to the right of accused to arm himself and interpose in a difficulty to protect his son from unlawful violence. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, defendant claiming that he had acted in defense of his brothers, in view of the facts in evidence, despite defendant's testimony that he shot because the other party made a motion to shoot him, held, that the trial court should have embodied in the charge on request defendant's right to act in defense of his brothers. Medina v. State, 87 Cr. R. 81, 219 S. W. 453.

17. — Defense of property.—It was not error to refuse a requested charge that, if defendant shot to stop or scare a man he had theretofore seen in his house, he could not be guilty, where there was no evidence of such intention. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

In a trial for homicide, evidence held not to call for a charge that defendant would be justified in committing homicide in defense of his property, if in defense thereof deceased made an unlawful attack upon defendant, from his standpoint, or was injuring or destroying defendant's property. Barklay v. State, 85 Cr. R. 512, 213 S. W. 642.

Charge on defense of property should not have been given, there being no fact showing defendant was defending against an attack on his property. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 422, 214 S. W. 353.

Art. 1108. [678] Retreat not necessary.

Cited, Gonzales v. State, 30 Tex. App. 203, 16 S. W. 978.

Retreat.—The doctrine of retreat is not applicable to cases of imperfect self-defense, and hence its omission is not error in this case. Carter v. State, 30 Tex. App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944.

One acting in self-defense may pursue his adversary so long as he considers himself in danger. Taylor v. State, 85 Cr. R. 468, 213 S. W. 985.

Charge.—In prosecution for murder, evidence held not to entitle defendant to a charge that he had right to advance on deceased if it reasonably appeared to him that it was necessary for his self-protection. Flewellen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 568, 204 S. W. 657.

In a homicide case, refusal of requested instruction that accused might pursue his adversary in self-defense so long as he considered himself in danger held reversible error, where evidence raised such issue. Taylor v. State, 85 Cr. R. 468, 213 S. W. 985.

Where accused killed deceased after he had unlawfully arrested him, and was restraining him by threats with his pistol, when he claimed deceased made a motion as if to attack him, it was not error for the court to omit to instruct the jury that accused was not bound to retreat. Rutland v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1088.

It was error to refuse a request to charge on the law of retreat; for, although not applying to defendant's theory of defense that he shot deceased to save the life of defendant's brother when himself in no danger, yet the evidence showed that the brother was in combat, and the law of retreat was applicable to him. White v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 511.

Art. 1109. [679] Requisites of the attack.

See Boyd v. State, 28 Tex. App. 137, 12 S. W. 737; Carter v. State, 30 Tex. App. 551, 17 S. W. 1102, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944.

Cited, Gonzales v. State, 30 Tex. App. 203, 16 S. W. 978.

Attack and danger.—Where a plea of self-defense is interposed in a prosecution for homicide, it is fundamental that the killing must be viewed from the standpoint of defendant, as understood by him at the time he acted. Singleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 401, 216 S. W. 1094; Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161; Williams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 230, 221 S. W. 287; White v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 511.

Whether defendant, who had shot in self-defense, was justified in shooting the second time, depends upon whether he continued to shoot under apprehension of danger, and not upon whether sufficient time elapsed between first and second shots in which to determine that danger had ceased. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

Where nothing appears in evidence which could have caused defendant to think deceased was making an unlawful attack upon him, there was no error in refusing to charge on self-defense. Thomas v. State (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 201.

If deceased had abandoned the conflict, accused was in no immediate danger, and was not justified in shooting deceased, but where deceased, after having stabbed defendant, ran apparently toward a building, making it appear to defendant that he intended to get pistol and renew conflict, the deceased had not, as a matter of law, abandoned the conflict. Thompson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 144, 210 S. W. 300.

Upon the question of whether deceased had abandoned conflict at the time accused fired shot, the intentions of deceased should be judged by their appearance from the accused's standpoint at the time he fired. Id.

Where defendant shot deceased while discussing deceased's insulting conduct toward defendant's wife, and after deceased had made demonstration as if to draw a pistol, the killing was in self-defense from the standpoint of apparent danger. Barrett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 101, 215 S. W. 853.

The theory of self-defense must be viewed from the defendant's viewpoint; and, where he shot deceased, who was holding and trying to shoot accused's brother, the fact, unknown to accused, that the pistol was so broken that it could not be discharged, did not destroy his plea of defense of the brother. White v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 511.

If it appeared to defendant charged with murder, viewing it from his standpoint, from the acts or words coupled with the acts of deceased and defendant's other assailants, that his (defendant's) life was in danger, he had a right to act on such appearances in his own defense. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

Where deceased verbally objected to defendants' aiding a companion who was being beaten by a third person, such verbal objections did not warrant defendants in using force against deceased. Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 827.

Evidence.—In prosecution for murder, where defendant claimed that he did not shoot until deceased moved his hand to his right side, the position of the arm of deceased was a material inquiry on issue of self-defense, and the coat worn by deceased at the time of the homicide was relevant on that issue. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

In homicide prosecution, sheriff may generally testify as to whether he found a weapon on the body of deceased upon reaching the scene of the homicide, especially if apparent danger is the basis of self-defense; objections to such testimony, upon ground as to length of time that had elapsed since the killing and the opportunities for others to take weapons away affecting the weight, and not the admissibility of such testimony. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 148, 220 S. W. 1108.

On a trial for homicide, the fact that deceased was unarmed was admissible to support the state's theory that he was not the aggressor. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

Evidence held not to raise any issue whether accused in shooting deceased, acted upon a reasonable apprehension of danger; it not appearing that deceased made any threat or demonstration of hostility, other than the fact that he started to walk in the door of the room where accused was. Surges v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1103.

In a prosecution for murder committed by killing one who defendant thought had maligned his sister, the state's theory being that deceased made no demonstration at the time, and that there was no act from which defendant could reasonably draw the inference he was in danger of attack, under the circumstances it was competent for the state to show that deceased was not armed. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

Charge.—In homicide prosecution defended on ground of self-defense and involving question of whether sufficient time elapsed between first and second shot for defendant to determine whether danger to his life had ceased, an instruction on the law, authorizing defendant to continue to shoot until the danger ceased as viewed from his standpoint, would have been proper. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In homicide prosecution, court properly refused instruction to acquit if first shot was fired in self-defense and insufficient time had elapsed between the first and second shot for defendant to determine that danger had ceased; defendant's right to continue shooting having been dependent upon whether he in fact shot second time under apprehension of danger which phase the requested instruction ignored. Id.

In prosecution for murder, charge that reasonable apprehension of death or serious bodily injury will excuse a person in using all necessary force to protect himself, whether or not there is actual danger, if he acts on a reasonable apprehension of danger from his standpoint at the time, held not erroneous. Alsip v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195.

In a prosecution for murder, charges held to fairly present to the jury the law of the case as to apparent danger, and the right of the accused to have the jury view the case from his standpoint in determining whether he acted in his own self-defense. Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101.

In homicide prosecution, where there was evidence that deceased had made demonstration to draw pistol before defendant had fired, instructions, merely referring to such demonstration in its effect upon reducing offense to manslaughter and limiting the right of self-defense to real attack without charging on self-defense from standpoint of apparent danger, held error. Barrett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 101, 215 S. W. 888.

A charge on self-defense should be applicable to the facts; and where the self-defense proposition is based on apparent and not real danger, a charge on real danger should not be given. Id.

In a prosecution for murder, an instruction as to self-defense held erroneous as not clearly stating that the act of defendant, alleged to have been in self-defense, must be viewed from defendant's standpoint at the time. Singleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 401, 216 S. W. 1094.

Charge that if, when deceased was shot by defendant, deceased's brother made or was about to make an attack upon defendant or defendant's father with a gun, the law presumes that deceased's brother intended to kill or to inflict serious bodily injury on defendant, defendant's father, or both of them, when read in connection with preceding paragraph of charge, held not subject to objections that it did not give defendant right to act in self-defense, whether attack was lawful or unlawful, if it reasonably appeared to him that there was danger of loss of life or serious bodily injury to him or his father, or both. Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390.

In a murder prosecution defended on ground of self-defense, instruction on apparent danger held objectionable, in that it did not permit jury to consider the words of deceased at the time of the difficulty, as well as his acts. Williams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 280, 221 S. W. 287.

On a trial for homicide, instructions withdrawing from the jury's consideration the fact that deceased was unarmed were properly refused, where such fact was admissible to support the state's theory that he was not the aggressor. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

The court's general charge on apparent danger, in view of those on the subject requested by defendant and given, held sufficient. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 305, 221 S. W. 607.

In a prosecution of a wife for killing her husband, charge on self-defense, which in applying the law to the facts directed the jury specifically to the theory of the case on which defendant predicated her right of self-defense, held not erroneous, though submitting the converse of defendant's theory that the mere belief she was in danger in the absence of reasonable grounds did not excuse her. Ott v. State, 87 Cr. R. 382, 222 S. W. 261.

In a case in which there is an absence of evidence of any fact upon which the jury could predicate a finding that, as viewed from the standpoint of the accused at the time, there existed in his mind a reasonable apprehension or fear of death or serious bodily harm, the court is justified in refusing to charge the jury upon the law of apparent danger. Surges v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1103.

In a case in which the evidence presents the theory of self-defense upon apparent danger only, a charge embodying the law of self-defense against actual attack will not suffice. Id.

In a prosecution for murder, charge of the trial court that, in determining if defendant acted in self-defense, the jury should view the transaction from his standpoint at the time, held a clear presentation of the law applicable to the facts in the case. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

In a prosecution for murder, special charge requested by defendant on the matter of the appearance of danger as viewed from defendant's standpoint held improper, as tending to convey the idea that the whole transaction, the whole case, should be viewed from defendant's standpoint; it is only the question of the appearance of danger that must be viewed from defendant's standpoint. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

In a prosecution for murder, charge held erroneous as failing to submit the issue of self-defense based on apparent danger. Carlile v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

In a prosecution for homicide, a requested instruction on self-defense against apparent danger need not be given, where the evidence showed that the danger, if any existed, was actual, and not merely apparent. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 847.

Art. 1110. [680] Circumstances justifying in defense of property.

Defense of property.—Even if deceased was trespassing when drilling in wheat on stubble land which defendant claimed he had not turned back to his landlord, that would not give defendant a right to kill deceased, and much less would he have such right, where deceased, as defendant came toward him with a gun, turned his team on other land, and was drilling 25 steps from edge of defendant's stubble. Barklay v. State, 85 Cr. R. 512, 213 S. W. 642.

If deceased was drilling in wheat on land in defendant's rental possession, and that that was such injury to property as to give a right to kill to prevent it, defendant, under the statute, must have used every effort in his power to repel the aggression before killing and have killed deceased while he was in very act of making the unlawful and violent attack, and, where deceased before killing had gone to other land, there was no right to kill in defense of property. Id.

A negro had a right to procure arms if necessary to protect his home against an illegal assault by posse members endeavoring to discover the whereabouts of a criminal. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

Charge.—In a prosecution for homicide on accused's premises, an instruction undertaking to set forth the rights of accused with reference to preventing deceased from entering his premises, qualified by the statement, "If you believe from the evidence that the said P. [deceased] was on said land without authority and not on a peaceful mission," was erroneous, as making it incumbent on accused to determine the undisclosed purpose of deceased in entering his premises, since the rights of accused must be determined from the things that took place, and not any undisclosed purpose that may have been in the mind of deceased. Rasberry v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1093.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

OF EXCUSABLE HOMICIDE

Article 1111. [681] Definition.

Accident.—If one killed his assailant in lawful self-defense, and in doing so accidentally killed his own wife, he is not guilty of the murder. Spannell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 418, 203 S. W. 357, 2 A. L. R. 593.

In a homicide case, where accused was charged with shooting deceased while struggling with her husband, accused's right to rely on self-defense plea held independent of whether discharge of pistol was accidental. Merritt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 565, 213 S. W. 941.

Where defendant fired a shot at one person with malice, intending to kill him, the fact that it wounded another, whom he did not intend to kill, would not excuse him from liability for assault with intent to murder. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122.

Evidence.—Where two persons were killed in one transaction, the fact that more than one shot was fired does not, as a matter of law, render it insusceptible of proof that both were killed by one act, in one case intentional and in the other accidental, since a series of shots may be fired with one volition. Spannell v. State, 83 Cr., R. 418, 203 S. W. 357, 2 A. L. R. 593.

Instructions.—The refusal of a requested charge that, if defendant shot to stop or scare a stranger he had just seen at his house, he should be acquitted, was not error, where defendant did not claim he shot merely to scare, and the court, at defendant's request, authorized acquittal if the jury found defendant called on the intruder to stop, and that his pistol was accidentally discharged. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

Where accused was charged with killing deceased by discharging a pistol while struggling with her husband, an instruction on negligent homicide, making accused's guilt depend on whether he knew deceased was in danger of being killed, is erroneous where there is no evidence that accused knew deceased was in same room when struggle took place. Merritt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 565, 213 S. W. 941.

1. IN THE PERFORMANCE OF A LAWFUL ACT

Article 1114. [684] In the performance of a lawful act.

Offense.—One who overturned a boat with knowledge that a boy therein could not swim, causing the boy's death, was guilty of negligent homicide. Gribble v. State (Cr. App.) 210 S. W. 215, 3 A. L. R. 1096.

In view of art. 41, an intoxicated person is held to the same degree of caution in the handling of a pistol or other deadly instrument as is required of a sober person. Haynes v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1100.

Indictment or information.—The offense is sufficiently charged by an indictment alleging that defendants, while engaged in running an engine, did back the engine negligently, without giving warning, and without looking to see if any one was likely to be injured, and by said negligence one M. was struck and killed, and that his dangerous position might have been known by defendants if they had used that care and caution which one of ordinary prudence would use under like circumstances, there being an apparent danger of causing the death. Anderson v. State, 27 Tex. App. 177, 11 S. W. 33, 3 L. R. A. 644, 11 Am. St. Rep. 189.

In a prosecution for negligent homicide by use of an automobile, an indictment omitting the element of apparent danger required by art. 1116, and being deficient in describing the act relied on, held insufficient. Worley v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 391.

Evidence.—In prosecution for negligent homicide, evidence held not to show a variance in that allegation was that defendant ran his automobile into and hit the person of deceased, while the proof showed that her person was struck by a part of the buggy, with which the automobile collided. Hoffman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 11, 209 S. W. 747.

Evidence regarding the circumstances under which accused, who had been drinking intoxicants and using narcotics to some extent, shot a negro who refused to secure gasoline for an automobile, etc., held not to present the issue of manslaughter or negligent homicide, but only murder and temporary insanity. Cundiff v. State, 86 Cr. R. 476, 218 S. W. 771.

Charge.—In prosecution for homicide, based upon defendant's negligent operation of an automobile, held, under the evidence, that court erred in failing to either give special requested charge accurately applying law of accidental homicide or embodying its substance in main charge. Hoffman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 11, 209 S. W. 747.

In charging negligent homicide, through the driving of an automobile, the particular act relied upon should be set up, and it should appear from the indictment that all the elements of the offense charged exist, among which is that declared in art. 1116, relating to apparent danger, and also that declared in article 1119, relating to apparent intention to kill. Worley v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 391.

Art. 1115. [685] "Lawful act" defined.

A "lawful act" is an act not forbidden by the penal law, and which would give no just occasion for a civil action. Teague v. State, 84 Cr. R. 169, 206 S. W. 193.

One turning over a boat, thus drowning a child, if guilty of negligent homicide, is guilty of such crime in the first degree, the causative act not being a misdemeanor, nor, per se, cause for a civil action. Gribble v. State (Cr. App.) 210 S. W. 215, 3 A. L. R. 1096.

Art. 1116. [686] Must be an apparent danger of causing death.

Charge.—See Worley v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 391.
Instruction on negligent homicide requiring jury, in order to convict defendant of such crime, to believe that there was apparent danger of causing death held proper. Haynes v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1100.

Art. 1117. [687] How distinguished from excusable homicide.

Charge.—In homicide prosecution, involving the issue of negligent homicide, instruction defining negligence as the failure to exercise that degree of care and caution which a man of ordinary prudence would use under like circumstances held proper. Haynes v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1100.

Art. 1119. [689] Must be no apparent intention to kill.

Instructions.—See Worley v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 391.

Where a husband, on trial for the murder of his wife, was shown to have been in a quarrel with a neighbor in the former's door-yard, and was waving a pistol, and threatening, without any apparent intention, to shoot, and his wife was shot upon coming to the door, and urging him to come in, and her dying declarations were that the shooting was accidental while trying to take the pistol from her husband's hand, it was error to refuse to instruct the jury on the law of negligent homicide. Howard v. State, 25 Tex. App. 686, 8 S. W. 929.

Art. 1120. [690] Homicide must be consequence of the act.

Charge.—Where a husband, on trial for the murder of his wife, was shown to have been in a quarrel with a neighbor in the former's door-yard, and was waving a pistol, and threatening, without any apparent intention, to shoot, and his wife was shot upon coming to the door, and urging him to come in, and her dying declarations were that the shooting was accidental while trying to take the pistol from her husband's hand, it was error to refuse to instruct the jury on the law of negligent homicide. Howard v. State, 25 Tex. App. 686, 8 S. W. 929.

2. IN THE PERFORMANCE OF AN UNLAWFUL ACT*Art. 1122. [692] "Of second degree" defined, etc.

Charge.—In homicide prosecution, involving the issue of negligent homicide, instruction defining negligence as the failure to exercise that degree of care and caution which a man of ordinary prudence would use under like circumstances held proper. Haynes v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1100.

Offense.—In prosecution for negligent homicide, mental condition produced by intoxicants could not justify an illegal act in and of itself; but it might do so, combined with two blows on the head, both of which knocked defendant down. Haynes v. State, 84 Cr. R. 6, 204 S. W. 430.

Art. 1124. [694] "Unlawful act" includes what.

Unlawful act.—One turning over a boat, thus drowning a child, if guilty of negligent homicide, is guilty of such crime in the first degree, under art. 1124; the causative act not being a misdemeanor, nor, per se, cause for a civil action. Gribble v. State (Cr. App.) 210 S. W. 215, 3 A. L. R. 1096.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to require submission of issue of negligent homicide in the second degree. Merke v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

Charge.—In a homicide case, where the issue of negligent homicide in the second degree was submitted, court erred in failing to instruct the jury that it must appear that there was apparent danger resulting from the unlawful act of accused in firing the pistol. Steen v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 529.

Art. 1125. [695] Homicide in an attempt at felony not negligent.

Offense.—If defendant with malice shot at another and unintentionally killed his own wife, he would be guilty of her murder. Spannell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 418, 203 S. W. 357, 2 A. L. R. 593.

Art. 1127. [697] In a trespass, etc., how punished.

Art.	Art.
1128. Definition of.	1134. General character of female in issue.
1129. "Under influence of sudden passion" explained.	1135. Discretion of jury in such cases.

Article 1128. [698] Definition of.

Cited, Spearman v. State, 23 Tex. App. 224, 4 S. W. 586.

Elements of offense.—To reduce homicide to manslaughter, it is essential that there be sudden passion arising from adequate cause. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123; Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 527.

Where one shoots at another under a reasonable apprehension or fear of death, and disables him, and then in sudden passion, aroused by adequate cause, fires a second and fatal shot, before he has had reasonable cooling time, he is guilty of manslaughter. Anderson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 242, 221 S. W. 285.

Where accused shot a person approaching him, mistakenly believing it to be a man the killing of whom the circumstances would have been manslaughter, he can be convicted of manslaughter. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

The only difference between murder and manslaughter is the difference in the mental attitude of defendant at the time of the killing; murder, under the Penal Code of Texas, including every degree of homicide, and of assault, as murder, manslaughter, assault to murder, and aggravated assault. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

Where a person from whom money has been stolen is chasing the person who took it, and, while agitated by reason of the theft, kills a third person who he believes is interfering to prevent his recovery of the money, he could not be guilty of any higher offense than manslaughter. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

If defendant charged with manslaughter had provoked the difficulty, and had done so with the intention to produce an occasion whereby he might assault deceased, and if the assault actually made by him was under the influence of sudden passion or excitement, and with an instrument not calculated or likely to produce death, he would not be guilty of a higher grade of offense than an aggravated assault, even though he did provoke the difficulty. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

If the jury believe the killing was pursuant to a formed design which had remained in the mind of defendant from the time of his first shooting at deceased, and which actuated him in the later fatal encounter, they should find him guilty of murder; but if they believed he had in good faith abandoned the difficulty, though he was in the wrong, and that when he fired the fatal shot he was actuated by sudden passion, and not by malice, they could find him guilty of no more than manslaughter. Carlile v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

Evidence.—Evidence held to show, at most, only manslaughter, and not murder. Alanis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 391, 200 S. W. 169.

Evidence held to sustain conviction of the crime of manslaughter. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 131, 205 S. W. 943.

Evidence held sufficient to support verdict of manslaughter, by defendant, who killed deceased in a quarrel that arose during a game of craps. Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 185, 206 S. W. 362.

Where accused, convicted of manslaughter was charged with killing deceased by discharge of a pistol with which he hit at her husband, evidence held not to sustain a conviction. Merritt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 565, 213 S. W. 941.

Evidence that accused sought the meeting with deceased and was the aggressor in the encounter held to sustain a conviction for manslaughter though accused claimed threats and an attack with a knife by deceased. Bocknight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 428, 222 S. W. 259.

The state is not concluded by evidence that the whipping of the children of deceased by defendant did not cause ill will between the parties, but can offer evidence of that incident as the cause of the killing, notwithstanding that testimony. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 671.

In prosecution for manslaughter, where defendant introduced evidence to show that his reputation from his boyhood was good both for truth and veracity and for his being a peaceable and law-abiding citizen, held that the state could show his prosecution about 17 years before on a seduction charge, but that testimony that he had been arrested for seduction 17 years prior thereto was inadmissible, because not showing that such felony charge was legally made by way of indictment or complaint, or that the arrest was by virtue of capias or warrant. Lasater v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 949.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, testimony of decedent's wife as to the location of the wound on his head with reference to a torn place in his cap held admissible. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

In a prosecution for manslaughter through killing of defendant's paramour, action of the trial court in declining to allow a witness to testify that deceased told her she was engaged to defendant held not erroneous; the testimony of the state's witnesses showing that defendant and deceased had been going together for a couple of years, and were practically living together at the time of the killing. Mobley v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 531.

Instructions.—In a prosecution for murder, evidence showing previous threats of deceased, the court should have charged on subject of manslaughter viewed in the light of threats. Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 347, 197 S. W. 196.

In a murder trial, where there was evidence of self-defense, an instruction on adequate cause arising from assault and battery by deceased, causing defendant pain and bloodshed capable of creating sudden passion, and rendering him incapable of cool reflection, was erroneous where it failed to apply the law to the facts and instruct in connection therewith on the law of manslaughter. Long v. State, 84 Cr. R. 529, 208 S. W. 922.

In homicide prosecution, defended on ground of self-defense, and involving question of whether danger to defendant had been passed before he shot the second time, refusal of instruction as to law of manslaughter applicable in event that jury found first shot was justified, and second was not, was error; for, if second shot had been fired after danger had ceased but under the influence of a sudden passion, defendant's offense might not have been higher than manslaughter. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In homicide prosecution involving question of whether defendant was guilty of murder or manslaughter, court should so frame its charge as to leave no question that, if there is a doubt between murder and manslaughter, conviction should be for no higher grade of offense than manslaughter. Id.

In a homicide prosecution, where defendant, after having been severely beaten in a general fight, fled from the house, and in the face of a threat to shoot him fired a shot which killed a child in the house, it was error in an instruction on manslaughter to limit the provocation to the acts of the person defendant intended to kill. Rodgers v. State, 85 Cr. R. 338, 212 S. W. 166.

Instruction on manslaughter limiting provocation to the time of the killing held misleading, the trouble at the time being but a renewal of that of the evening before, and it being permissible to consider the two together, Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 422, 214 S. W. 353.

In a prosecution for murder, defendant seeking to reduce the offense to manslaughter on the theory that he was attacked by decedent and another, one or both, general charge on manslaughter, construed as a whole, held to present the issue in such manner as not to injure defendant by limiting reduction of the offense to manslaughter only if defendant was attacked by both decedent and the other, not by one alone; the parts complained of not fairly presenting their relation to the general charge. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

A charge that when an act committed is the unlawful intentional homicide of a different person from the one intended, and is without malice aforethought, and is done while the mind is under the immediate influence of sudden passion arising out of an adequate cause, the charge, if a crime is of no higher grade than manslaughter, was not injurious to defendant; the word "intentional" not affecting the sense of the charge. Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390.

In a homicide case where a third person was killed by accused while chasing one who had stolen his money for the purpose of recovering the same, accused believing such third person to be interfering to prevent his recovering his money, a charge that if accused killed in defense of his property he would not be guilty of any higher offense than manslaughter was too limited, as he was not trying to defend his property, but was chasing another to recover money after it had been stolen. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

In a prosecution for murder, where accused testified that he first shot at deceased when 20 steps away, because he thought he was reaching for a gun, and that deceased kept on advancing, and defendant fired the fatal shot when deceased was 4 steps away, and the state's witnesses testified that accused shot at deceased when he was 50 feet away, and, upon deceased falling to the ground, advanced and fired into the body, killing him, the court erred in its charge on manslaughter in failing to instruct on the law of cooling time as between the firing of the first and second shots. Anderson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 242, 221 S. W. 285.

In a prosecution for homicide, issue of manslaughter as raised by the evidence held sufficiently presented by the court's instruction, particularly in view of the absence of requested instructions. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

In a prosecution for homicide, held, the jury should have been charged that if the conduct and language of deceased, or deceased and his son, either alone or in connection with any previous abuse or assault by deceased, on defendant, aroused in defendant's mind such a degree of anger, rage, resentment, or terror as rendered him incapable of cool reflection, and the facts and circumstances were sufficient to have produced such state of mind in a person of ordinary temper, there was adequate cause, and, if the killing occurred under such circumstances, defendant was guilty of manslaughter, unless he was acting in self-defense. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

In a prosecution for murder, it was not error to refuse charges that if a statement was made by defendant's accomplice, which aroused in defendant's mind such passion as to render it incapable of cool reflection, he would be guilty only of manslaughter; there being no evidence to support them, and they ignoring the theory of principals. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 312.

Where, on a trial for homicide, acts and words of deceased prior to his assault on one of defendant's companions appeared, reference to which might aid a presumption of sudden passion, a general charge on manslaughter, including all the facts and circumstances, should have been given, and a charge limiting the jury's consideration of what might be deemed adequate cause to the one matter of assault and battery was too restrictive. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

— Necessity for submission of issue.—In prosecution for murder, held that issue of manslaughter should have been submitted. Walker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 482, 214 S. W. 331; Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192; Steen v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 529; Carlisle v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

Manslaughter should be charged, where the evidence raises a doubt as to whether same is in the case. Steen v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 529; Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671; Pickens v. State, 86 Cr. R. 657, 218 S. W. 755.

Evidence held insufficient to warrant submission of issue of manslaughter. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123; Grissom v. State, 87 Cr. R. 465, 222 S. W. 237.

If the case is either murder or perfect self-defense, it is not error to fail to charge on manslaughter. Thomas v. State, 84 Cr. R. 330, 206 S. W. 846; Pickens v. State, 86 Cr. R. 657, 218 S. W. 755.

Where deceased invited defendant to come outdoors with him, subsequent to a quarrel at a Christmas celebration, and made an attack upon him with a knife, the issue of manslaughter should have been submitted to the jury. Hays v. State, 82 Cr. R. 427, 199 S. W. 621.

Where instrument in homicide is not per se deadly weapon, manslaughter need not be submitted on proof of sudden passion without proof of adequate cause arousing such passion. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

In trial for murder arising out of difficulty at house at which deceased lived with his wife, where it appeared that defendant shot deceased, and where he claimed self-defense on the ground that deceased was trying to get a weapon from a drawer, there was no issue of manslaughter. Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381.

In a prosecution for murder, it was not error to refuse to submit the question of manslaughter, where neither adequate cause nor passion was shown under the evidence. Beaupre v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 517.

Refusal to charge on manslaughter cannot be justified on the ground that the defendant said he shot in self-defense, since defensive issues arise from the whole case and are not controlled by the evidence of accused. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

In a prosecution for murder, it was error to refuse an instruction with reference to the law of manslaughter, where it appeared that decedent was defendant's landlord and that the killing occurred after decedent had attempted to collect rent from defendant for a parcel of ground which he was entitled to hold rent free. Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 371, 216 S. W. 884.

Where the evidence in homicide prosecution raises the issues of self-defense and manslaughter, and a charge is demanded upon both issues, the omission of instruction as to manslaughter is error. Pickens v. State, 86 Cr. R. 657, 218 S. W. 755.

Evidence regarding the circumstances under which accused, who had been drinking intoxicants and using narcotics to some extent, shot a negro who refused to secure gasoline for an automobile, etc., held not to present the issue of manslaughter or negligent homicide, but only murder and temporary insanity. Cundiff v. State, 86 Cr. R. 476, 218 S. W. 771.

In prosecution for murder of husband of woman with whom defendant had been maintaining illicit relations correct submission of case held to have required a charge, qualifying right of self-defense by one on law of provoking difficulty, accompanied by one advising jury when they might reduce grade of homicide to that of manslaughter if decedent was provoked to attack defendant by language used with reference to decedent's wife. Barber v. State, 87 Cr. R. 535, 223 S. W. 457.

In a prosecution for murder, where the state's theory was that defendant and his brother had brought on the quarrel, and defense's theory was that deceased had done so, and was shot by defendant while trying to shoot defendant's brother, it was error to fail to instruct on and submit the issue of manslaughter. White v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 511.

Accused may assert that killing was attributable to another cause than passion, and still it becomes the duty of the trial court to submit manslaughter, and leave to the jury the ascertainment of whether or not the killing was the result of passion, and whether or not such cause was adequate, where the facts of the case in evidence fairly tend to indicate a homicide resulting from any such emotion of the mind as rendered it incapable of cool reflection, and this may be true in a prosecution of one shooting another in an automobile, but asserting that he was shooting at a tire. Steen v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 529.

Where defendant and deceased got into a dispute over turkeys, and in the course thereof deceased insulted the wife of defendant's son, and the son, in the presence of defendant, when the parties subsequently met on the highway, shot deceased, a charge on manslaughter was necessary, defendant being prosecuted for murder on the theory that he was a principal, notwithstanding defendant asserted that the son shot in defense of himself, for the state's evidence tended to show that defendant was in a passion over the loss of his turkeys, and that at the time of the killing deceased was taking turkeys to market, for under the state's own theory defendant might have been in such a passion as to be incapable of cool reflection. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

If the case is one either of murder or perfect self-defense, it is not error to fail to charge on manslaughter; but where the case becomes involved from the issues raised, and it is claimed the killing resulted from a fight, and the facts of its inception or progress become controverted issues raising the question of self-defense, the issue of manslaughter almost universally becomes pertinent. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

If there is evidence which, however weak or inconclusive it may seem to the court, tends to prove facts from which the jury may deduce a finding of manslaughter, it is error to fail to charge on it. Id.

Evidence of previous difficulties and of fear and excitement of defendant accompanying assaults and threats by deceased, though not sufficient to constitute adequate cause, held, on the evidence, to require the submission of the issue of manslaughter. Theriot v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 777.

Art. 1129. [699] "Under the influence of sudden passion" explained.

Cited, Meuly v. State, 26 Tex. App. 274, 9 S. W. 563, 8 Am. St. Rep. 477; Maxwell v. State, 31 Tex. Cr. R. 119, 19 S. W. 914.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for homicide where accused claimed passion aroused by probable cause, declarations by him prior to the homicide expressing fear of trouble with deceased because he had whipped latter's children, and seeking permission to carry a pistol, were admissible on behalf of the state to illustrate the mental attitude of de-defendant toward the deceased and as bearing on his motive. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 671.

Charge.—In prosecution for murder, refusal to defendant of charge that if his mind was enraged with reference to conduct of girl he killed, and killing occurred while his mind was so enraged, jury should consider it a ground for manslaughter, held not error. Coates v. State, 83 Cr. R. 309, 203 S. W. 904.

In a prosecution for murder, resulting in conviction of assault to murder, instruction on manslaughter held not too restrictive as requiring provocation to have arisen at the time of the killing, as a charge cannot be judged by isolated paragraphs. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

There can be no proper charge instructing the jury to find one guilty of manslaughter which omits to submit to them the issue as to whether or not the mind of the accused was in such condition as to render it incapable of cool reflection. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 312.

Art. 1130. [700] "Adequate cause" explained.

See Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

Adequate cause.—In the absence of provocation occurring after defendant and deceased met and settled their differences, matters occurring prior thereto cannot constitute adequate cause to reduce the killing to manslaughter. Bell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 475, 213 S. W. 647.

Court did not err in defining adequate cause in its charge on manslaughter to be "such as would commonly produce a degree of anger, rage, resentment, or terror in a person of ordinary temper sufficient to render the mind incapable of cool reflection," although the accused was subject to epileptic fits and was nervous and irritable. Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101.

Evidence.—In homicide prosecution, jury could consider, not only what occurred on day of homicide, but also what preceded that day upon question of whether there was sufficient and adequate cause to reduce the homicide to manslaughter. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

Charge.—An exception to the court's charge on manslaughter as allowing the jury to consider only the provocation arising at the time cannot be sustained, where the court further charged that, in determining the adequacy of the provocation, the jury should consider all the evidence in determining the condition of the defendant's mind. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

A charge on manslaughter in regard to adequate cause held not too restrictive. Albrecht v. State, 85 Cr. R. 519, 215 S. W. 327.

In a prosecution for murder, an instruction as to facts reducing the offense to manslaughter, enumerating as adequate cause any act or words, or both, on the part of the deceased, which of themselves or together with any other facts and circumstances were from defendant's standpoint calculated to produce in his mind emotion rendering it incapable of cool reflection, held too restrictive and to unduly limit the facts which might be considered as reducing the offense to manslaughter. Cotton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 387, 217 S. W. 158.

In a prosecution for homicide, where there was evidence that deceased abused and assaulted defendants and was larger and more powerful than they were, etc., a charge which confined the jury in deciding whether there was any adequate cause to whether an assault causing pain and bloodshed had been committed was too restricted. Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 827.

Art. 1131. [701] What are not adequate causes.

See Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

Adequate cause.—Insulting words or gestures are not adequate cause such as would render a killing manslaughter. Albrecht v. State, 85 Cr. R. 519, 215 S. W. 327.

Taken separately, neither threats nor insulting words nor battery slight in its nature constitute an adequate cause within statute on manslaughter. Pickens v. State, 86 Cr. R. 657, 218 S. W. 755.

The enumeration of matters constituting adequate cause in arts. 1131 and 1132, is not, in view of arts. 1130 and 1138, exclusive of others. Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 827.

Charge.—In a homicide case; where accused took the stand himself and testified that he shot deceased "because I was trying to defend myself," and nowhere claimed that any language used by deceased affected him in any way or made him angry, he cannot complain that a charge on manslaughter was too restrictive in that it stated that insulting words are not adequate cause. Albrecht v. State, 85 Cr. R. 519, 215 S. W. 327.

Art. 1132. [702] What are.

See Howard v. State, 23 Tex. App. 265, 5 S. W. 231; Pitts v. State, 29 Tex. App. 374, 16 S. W. 189; Bibb v. State, 83 Cr. R. 616, 205 S. W. 135; Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

Cited, Gonzales v. State, 30 Tex. App. 203, 16 S. W. 978.

In general.—Other causes may produce manslaughter passion, besides those named in the statute. Steen v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 529; Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 827.

Subdivision 1—Charge.—In prosecution of passenger for murder of street car conductor, where there was evidence that the conductor, while the car was in motion pushed passenger off from platform, causing him to fall on his back, instruction that, if the conductor ejected passenger, causing him bodily pain, "such as was reasonably calculated to produce passion," the passenger could not be convicted of a higher degree of homicide than manslaughter, held erroneous, since such ejection from car constituted an assault and battery and was sufficient to reduce the crime to manslaughter without specific proof of pain and without proof that it was calculated to produce passion. Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

An instruction on manslaughter stating that an assault and battery which caused pain and bloodshed would be adequate cause, held, under the facts of the case, the failure to define assault and battery was not reversible error. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

Subdivision 2—Charge.—Charge on manslaughter giving, as adequate cause, an attack by deceased on defendant threatening death, is erroneous; such matter constituting self-defense. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 422, 214 S. W. 353.

In a prosecution for murder, wherein defendant testified that the killing was either manslaughter or in self-defense because he was attacked both by the person killed and another, an excerpt from a charge on manslaughter, that the killing was of such grade, if decedent and the other had combined, and the defendant believed they had, to do defendant some injury, and the conspirator with decedent had given the latter a knife to use against defendant, held not erroneous as unduly limiting reduction of the offense to manslaughter only by an attack on defendant from both decedent and the other. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

Subdivision 3—Evidence.—In a prosecution for homicide, evidence that defendant shot deceased under the mistaken belief that he was shooting a man who had been in the house with the wife of accused after midnight held sufficient to sustain a conviction for manslaughter. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

In a prosecution for murder, claimed to have been committed as the result of passion reducing the crime to manslaughter, evidence of deceased's criminal intimacy with defendant's wife was admissible to corroborate evidence that she communicated such fact to defendant before the killing. Bereal v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 252.

— Charge.—In prosecution for homicide, evidence that accused, when greatly excited, mistook deceased for a man who had been in the house with accused's wife after midnight, held to require an instruction on manslaughter. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

Art. 1133. [703] For insult to female, killing must be immediate.

Words constituting insult.—Where the killing has taken place because of insulting conduct towards defendant's wife, the killing will be imputed to the last insulting conduct, rather than to prior acts or conduct, or previously occurring matters. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Bibb v. State, 83 Cr. R. 616, 205 S. W. 135.

Where person shoots at one who tells his father in his presence that his mother and his father's wife was sustaining illicit relations with another person, he would only be guilty of manslaughter if he killed him. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 479, 208 S. W. 660.

The question as to whether language used by deceased was insulting to defendant's female relatives, to reduce the killing to manslaughter committed under adequate provocation, seems to be one for the court and not the jury. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 527.

Where defendant, charged with murder, testified that deceased asked him why in h— he didn't get a divorce from that woman (meaning his wife), that she didn't care anything for him, etc., and that, when defendant asked him what he meant, deceased replied, "By G—, you know how you are living, don't you?" and that when defendant stated his family affairs had nothing to do with deceased, deceased replied, "I guess, by G—, it has," and that deceased then kicked him out of the automobile in which they were sitting and started after him, when he (defendant) secured deceased's gun and shot deceased, such testimony did not call for a charge on manslaughter as based on insulting words toward a female relative. Id.

Language used by deceased, claimed by defendant to have been insulting toward his wife, so that under the statute the killing was under provocation, and constituted manslaughter only, must be interpreted in the light of the surrounding circumstances and relation of the parties. Id.

Insulting language when used by deceased toward defendant's female relative is, as a matter of law, cause sufficient to excite passion reducing the offense to manslaughter. Id.

Insulting language, when used by deceased toward defendant's female relative, is, as a matter of law, cause sufficient to excite passion reducing the offense to manslaughter, but whether it does or does not excite passion is a question of fact for the jury. Id.

The language used by deceased in calling defendant a "son of a bitch" will not support a charge on manslaughter that insulting words as to a female relative was adequate cause. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

Proximity to killing.—Where accused and deceased met in the forenoon and had a difficulty about deceased's having sent accused's wife an insulting letter, mere fact that accused was not then prepared to kill deceased, but did kill him on the next meeting did not justify charge on manslaughter. Adler v. State, 83 Cr. R. 72, 201 S. W. 177.

Deceased's insulting conduct toward defendant's wife to reduce a crime to manslaughter must have occurred at the time of the killing, or defendant must have killed deceased as soon thereafter as informed thereof, and upon first meeting. Barrett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 101, 215 S. W. 858.

Defendant eliminates manslaughter by testifying that, after he was told by his wife of an assault on her by deceased, and before the time of the killing, he met deceased, and they then were friendly, and that he would not have killed, but for deceased's hip-pocket play. Gray v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 513.

Where defendant, convicted of murder, after learning of the purported insulting conduct of deceased toward defendant's female relative talked with deceased on numerous occasions, even in defendant's own home, it was not error to refuse to instruct on manslaughter because of sudden anger due to such conduct. Prestidge v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 217.

Where at the time deceased insulted defendant's daughter-in-law defendant did not resent the insult, and his son thereafter in his presence killed deceased, the insults would not reduce the homicide to manslaughter. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

When it is sought to reduce a homicide to the grade of manslaughter by reason of insulting language or conduct to a female relative, it must appear that the killing took place immediately upon the insult, or so soon as the party killing met with the party killed after having been informed of such insults; hence the jury are not entitled to consider an insult to a female relative to determine whether the conditions surrounding a killing were sufficient to reduce the offense to manslaughter, where it did not occur at the first meeting after the person killing learned of the insult. Id.

Truth of reports.—Defendant who shot deceased after having been informed of deceased's insulting conduct toward his wife, believing information to be true, may have been under sufficient provocation, regardless of whether information was true. Barrett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 101, 215 S. W. 858.

In a prosecution for homicide where defendant claimed killing in passion aroused by insults by deceased to defendant's wife, the jury in passing upon the issue of adequate cause for the passion are not to be governed by whether deceased was in fact guilty of the acts or words charged, but whether defendant had been informed that such was the case and believed it to be true, since the consequence of information received and believed upon the mind of defendant is the same whether the information is false or true. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 671.

Evidence.—In a homicide case, where the accused brought out on cross-examination of witnesses for the state res gestæ statement of accused immediately after the killing that trouble was caused by deceased, who had broken up the family of the accused, there was sufficient indication to the state that accused would rely upon insulting words to a female relative; and the state was privileged to prove the general character of accused's wife, for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of the provocation and to show specific occasions of misconduct on the part of the wife of which the husband had knowledge. Bibb v. State, 86 Cr. R. 112, 215 S. W. 312.

Where daughter of defendant in homicide case informed him that deceased had outraged her, and did not tell him any of the attendant circumstances, it was error to permit the state to go into all the incidental matters and environments that occurred between the daughter and the deceased, as matters unknown to defendant could not affect him or weigh upon his mind, viewed from the standpoint of adequate cause and sudden passion. Lovett v. State, 87 Cr. R. 548, 223 S. W. 210.

In a prosecution for homicide where the state had introduced declarations of accused showing fear of trouble with deceased because he had whipped the latter's children, it was error to exclude declarations of accused offered by him tending to corroborate his testimony that deceased had insulted his wife and that he killed deceased in heat of passion engendered thereby. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 671.

In a prosecution for homicide where defendant claimed passion aroused by insults to his wife, the state could introduce evidence that accused had whipped the children of deceased to show the cause of the difficulty. Id.

In a prosecution for homicide where accused claimed provocation arousing passion, evidence that deceased declared an intention to try to establish improper relations with the wife of accused, that the wife was friendly, and deceased did not fear accused, were admissible. Id.

In a prosecution for murder committed by killing one who defendant believed had maligned his sister, evidence held as a matter of law not insufficient to support conviction of murder as against contention that manslaughter only was shown. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

Charge.—In murder trial, where issue of self-defense was made prominent by the facts, instruction on insulting words or conduct to female relative as justification held reversible error, as placing burden upon accused to prove justification to reduce the degree from murder to manslaughter, and then in substance, instructing that if this were not done, accused would be guilty of murder, thus excluding the issue of self-defense. Wood v. State, 85 Cr. R. 268, 211 S. W. 782.

In homicide prosecution, where there was no evidence of provocation at time of killing, and only evidence thereof was as to deceased's insulting conduct toward defendant's wife, some time prior to the killing, instruction on provocation at time of killing held improper. Barrett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 101, 215 S. W. 858.

In a prosecution for homicide where the evidence showed that defendant's wife had told defendant deceased insulted her just before he left the city and that while away deceased had written to defendant's wife and that defendant killed deceased when he first met the latter on his return to the city, while the state sought to show that deceased had not been guilty of the conduct charged by defendant's wife, an omission to charge, as requested, that in determining the issue of probable cause the jury should not consider the truth of the charges against deceased, was error. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 671.

In a prosecution for homicide committed on one whom defendant believed to have maligned or made indecent proposals to his sister, instructions as to manslaughter referring to the effect of rage in defendant produced by the provocation of information of decedent's conduct held not erroneous as conveying the idea that the right of defendant growing out of alleged insulting conduct towards or words relating to his sister depended on the existence of such conduct or words in fact, but special charge requested by defendant on the effect of provocation, through information as to decedent's conduct, in reducing the offense to manslaughter, held erroneous as omitting the essential ingredient of a passion in defendant such as rendered the mind incapable of cool reflection. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

In a case of homicide, where there is evidence that deceased used toward the female relative of defendant insulting language or conduct, in view of the statute, it is incumbent on the court to instruct the jury in unmistakable terms that such insulting language or conduct would be adequate cause to reduce the mind of defendant to a state rendering him incapable of cool reflection, thus reducing the offense to manslaughter. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 527.

In a prosecution for murder, special charge requested by defendant on manslaughter held incorrect; it embracing a clause telling the jury that insulting words of the person killed toward a female relative was "adequate cause," while there was no testimony justifying such a charge, etc. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

Art. 1134. [704] General character of female in issue.

See Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 527.

Evidence.—In a homicide case, where the accused brought out on cross-examination of witnesses for the state res gestæ statement of accused immediately after the killing that trouble was caused by deceased, who had broken up the family of the accused, there was sufficient indication to the state that accused would rely upon insulting words to a female relative; and the state was privileged to prove the general character of accused's wife, for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of the provocation and to show specific occasions of misconduct on the part of the wife of which the husband had knowledge. Bibb v. State, 86 Cr. R. 112, 215 S. W. 312.

In murder prosecution where defendant sought to mitigate offense on ground that deceased had insulted defendant's wife, evidence that defendant's wife had been guilty of specific acts of immoral conduct with another person of which defendant had knowledge prior to the killing was admissible. Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

In a murder prosecution, where defendant sought to reduce the crime to manslaughter because of sudden passion on learning of deceased's criminal intimacy with defendant's wife, where her conduct had been good for seven years, except with deceased, evidence that she had, prior to marriage, been an inmate of a house of prostitution was not admissible. Bereal v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 252.

Art. 1135. [705] Discretion of jury in such cases.

Art. 1137. [707] "Adequate cause" must produce the passion.

Cited, Johnson v. State, 26 Tex. App. 631, 10 S. W. 235.

Adequate cause and passion.—In ascertaining whether there was sufficient passion engendered to reduce homicide to manslaughter, because of deceased's insulting conduct toward defendant's wife, the jury's belief as to whether there was adequate cause for provocation is not the criterion; that question depending upon effect thereof upon defendant's mind. Barrett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 101, 215 S. W. 858.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for homicide where accused claimed passion aroused by probable cause, declarations by him prior to the homicide expressing fear of trouble with deceased because he had whipped latter's children, and seeking permission to carry a pistol, were admissible on behalf of the state as bearing on his motive. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 671.

Art. 1138. [708] Provoking contest with intent to kill, not manslaughter.

See Roberson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 238, 203 S. W. 349; Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 952; Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 327.

Provoking contest.—Where a contest was sought, brought about, and provoked by defendant for the apparent purpose of killing deceased, held, that it was not manslaughter. Melton v. State, 24 Tex. App. 47, 5 S. W. 652.

If accused heard that deceased had been circulating reports about him, he had the right to go to deceased to talk the matter over, and, if he believed this might bring on a difficulty, to arm himself for protection without forfeiting his right of self-defense. Parker v. State, 81 Cr. R. 397, 196 S. W. 537.

If a deceased is pursued with a less purpose than to kill or inflict serious bodily injury, the law of imperfect self-defense is not barred, and the culpability under such circumstances is less than murder. Hammonds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 337, 198 S. W. 944; Hokes v. Same, 82 Cr. R. 271, 945.

Deceased's assault on defendant would not be sufficient, even though it produced pain or bloodshed, to reduce the offense to manslaughter, if defendant provoked the assault with the intention of killing or seriously injuring deceased by conduct reasonably calculated to provoke it. Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

When defendant alone or with others uses abusive language to deceased, who thereupon makes an assault and is killed, it is proper to submit to the jury the issue of provoking the difficulty. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

Charge.—In a prosecution for murder, resulting in conviction of manslaughter, where the court charged submitting the issue of provoking the difficulty from the standpoint of the state, in connection therewith the converse of the charge on defendant's request should have been fully submitted. Garner v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 339.

In a prosecution for murder, resulting in conviction of manslaughter, only the mitigating and justifying acts being in controversy, not the killing, the words and conduct of defendant immediately preceding the assault made by deceased which resulted in his death held to render appropriate a charge upon the law of provoking the difficulty. Id.

On a trial for homicide, an instruction on manslaughter which in part was in the identical language of this article, held not open to the objections that it was too restrictive, and stated that, if defendant's companions provoked the difficulty, defendant's offense would not be manslaughter. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

See Washington v. State (App.) 16 S. W. 653; James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

2. Offense defined.—Under Act Cong. Aug. 29, 1916, § 3, art. 92 (U. S. Comp. St. § 2308a [92]), a soldier of the United States who murders a citizen of the state offends against both the military and the state laws, and may be tried in the state courts. Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509.

In determining whether or not a homicide case is bailable, the decisions of the courts before the change in the law eliminating degrees of murder, may be looked to. Ex parte Cole (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 175.

If the jury believe the killing was pursuant to a formed design which had remained in the mind of defendant from the time of his first shooting at deceased, and which actuated him in the later fatal encounter, they should find him guilty of murder; but if they believed he had in good faith abandoned the difficulty, though he was in the wrong, and that when he fired the fatal shot he was actuated by sudden passion, and not by malice, they could find him guilty of no more than manslaughter. Carlile v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

4. — Malice as element.—One who deliberately uses a deadly weapon in such reckless manner as to evince a heart regardless of social duty and fatally bent on mischief, as is shown by firing into a moving railroad train upon which human beings necessarily are, cannot shield himself from consequences by disclaiming malice. Banks v. State, 85 Cr. R. 165, 211 S. W. 217, 5 A. L. R. 600.

To constitute murder, it is not essential that any specific malice by the killer be directed toward the person killed, but it may be toward a group of persons as well as toward an individual, and may exist without former grudges or antecedent menaces. Id.

The intentional doing of any wrongful act in such manner and under such circumstances as that the death of a human being may result therefrom is "malice." Id.

If defendant was not actuated by malice aforethought, he was not guilty of assault with intent to murder; if he had the specific intent to kill under circumstances that would have constituted manslaughter, his assault, which failed to kill, did not constitute assault to murder, but was an aggravated assault. Thurogood v. State, 87 Cr. R. 209, 220 S. W. 337.

One may by reckless shooting be guilty of murder of person killed thereby without specific intent. Haynes v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1100.

In order for a killing to amount to murder, it is unnecessary that defendants should have a design to kill at the time they went to deceased's place of business, and special charges declaring that such intention was necessary, etc., were properly refused. Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 827.

5. — Degrees under former law.—See Zwicker v. State, 27 Tex. App. 539, 11 S. W. 633; Musick v. State, 21 Tex. App. 69, 18 S. W. 95.

against the peace and dignity of the state," is sufficient to charge the offense of murder. Scott v. State, 31 Cr. R. 363, 20 S. W. 755.

An indictment, alleging that defendant killed deceased "in some way or manner and by some means, instruments, and weapons to the grand jurors unknown," is sufficient as against an objection that it does not allege the means by which the murder was committed. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

13. — Proof.—In a trial for murder committed with a stick, which the indictment described with unnecessary particularity, the trial court correctly instructed the jury that it was sufficient if they believed the proof showed that the stick used was substantially the same as described in the indictment, in view of the rule that proof is sufficient, if it shows that the weapon charged in the indictment and the one proved to have been used are such that the nature and result of their use would be the same. Gilbert v. State, 85 Cr. R. 597, 215 S. W. 106.

22. Evidence—Presumption and burden of proof.—In a prosecution for murder, defendant is held responsible for what he does, his purpose in doing it, and intent and motive moving him to do the act. Sharp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 256, 197 S. W. 207.

24. — Admissibility of evidence as to malice and intent.—In a prosecution for murder, where state had showed a reconciliation between deceased and defendant and its cessation, as tending to show malice, defendant could show reasons therefor. Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 347, 197 S. W. 196.

In a prosecution for homicide, testimony of a prior difficulty during which accused had a knife in his hand was admissible as tending to show the state of mind of accused. Lowe v. State, 83 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986.

The state, claiming killing of white landlord by negro renter, in the rented field, on the afternoon after trouble between the parties the night before when the negro was ordered to leave the place, was deliberate, and bringing out the fact of defendant's absence from the field in the forenoon, and his return thereto with his gun, he to meet this could show, not only that in the forenoon he went to town to consult with white friends as to what he should do, but that they advised him he had a right to remain with his crop. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 422, 214 S. W. 353.

In prosecution for wife murder pursuant to alleged conspiracy between defendant and others, formed prior to defendant's marriage to deceased, whereby defendant, a young man, was to marry deceased, a wealthy old woman, and thereafter murder her to obtain her money, testimony that about two years prior to killing, and before defendant's marriage to deceased, defendant and another person tried to induce witness to marry a wealthy old woman, obtain her property, and thereafter dispose of her, and divide the property between witness, defendant, and the other person, held admissible on question of the conspiracy, not being too remote. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

In a prosecution for murder of mother-in-law, where the state in making out its case contented itself with proving the killing, and in no way adverted to relations between defendant and his wife, and defendant, after the state rested, introduced witnesses to show that relations between defendant and wife were more than ordinarily pleasant, and that deceased was attempting to cause a separation so that wife could become a moving picture actress, and state's theory was that any act on deceased's part advising or wishing to bring about a separation was on account of defendant's unwarranted cruelty, state was properly permitted to introduce any circumstances tending to show cruel treatment of the wife, not only on the question of motive, but on the direct issue joined as to defendant's conduct and treatment of wife, and state could also ask concerning such circumstances on cross-examination of defendant. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 497.

Though defendant had put his reputation in evidence as a law-abiding citizen, objection to evidence of the state that 15 or 20 years before the homicide defendant was given to fighting and was regarded "as a holy terror," should have been sustained; the interregnum between defendant's fighting capacity as a youngster and the time of the killing being too remote. Burkhalter v. State, 85 Cr. R. 282, 212 S. W. 163.

In murder prosecution, examination of defendant as to the number of times he had been separated from his wife before he had even seen deceased held error, having no bearing upon the killing. Hurst v. State, 86 Cr. R. 375, 217 S. W. 156.

In a prosecution for murder, it was not error to refuse to allow witness to testify that defendant was a man of ordinary hearing, where deceased's threats, directed toward defendant, were proven to have been made within five feet of defendant, some half hour before shooting, and in the absence of contrary proof it is a legitimate assumption that threats were in defendant's hearing. Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 515.

Testimony of county attorney that tracks near the scene of the killing had been made by a shoe about No. 8 or 9 in size, and that in his judgment defendant's boots made the tracks on the ground, held inadmissible in absence of something more definite in the witness' testimony showing proximity of tracks to body of victim. Burkhalter v. State, 85 Cr. R. 282, 212 S. W. 163.

Where witness testified that he heard a party running through a field on the night of the murder, subsequent evidence showing there were tracks of a person running across the field and also describing tracks corresponding to those which would have been made by the witness claimed to have been in the field was admissible upon the question of the identity of the slayer. Gilbert v. State, 85 Cr. R. 597, 215 S. W. 106.

In a prosecution for murder, where deceased was killed by defendant after quarrel over a statement that defendant was out in a pasture at a certain time with a certain woman, evidence was properly admitted showing that witness saw tracks of men and women, cigar stubs, etc., in the pasture in question, which corroborated the state's claim that defendant was at such place at such time. Parker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 222, 216 S. W. 178.

32. — Means or instruments used.—In action for murder where defendant's accomplice testified to having killed deceased with hammer while repairing deceased's automobile, a hammer and hatchet found in deceased's automobile after her death held properly exhibited to jury. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1446.

Evidence of tracks at the scene of the homicide is admissible, notwithstanding the tracks were not found immediately after the homicide. Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

A witness, who had measured accurately the footprints of person slaying another and the shoe of accused, could testify to such measurements. Charles v. State, 87 Cr. R. 233, 222 S. W. 255.

The state's testimony showing that tracks near the scene of the killing appeared to be boot tracks, etc., it was not error to ask defendant when a witness, relative to his ownership of a pair of boots prior to the homicide, and testimony of another witness, in which he stated that he saw defendant exchange a pair of boots with a third person some time prior to the homicide was admissible. James v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 941.

32½. — Clothing and wounds of deceased.—Exhibiting deceased's bloody clothing to witnesses who were examined concerning the clothing held error, though they were not directly introduced in evidence. Dozier v. State, 82 Cr. R. 321, 199 S. W. 287.

In a prosecution for murder, it was not error to allow witnesses to describe wounds on the bodies of deceased and another person also killed by accused, and to state that such wounds or some of them were on the backs of the bodies. Hardy v. State, 86 Cr. R. 515, 217 S. W. 939, 8 A. L. R. 1357.

In a prosecution for murder of defendant's mistress, evidence showing there were marks or spots on the woman's body held admissible as going to show the physical condition of the body. Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 55, 219 S. W. 821.

33. — Subsequent incriminating or exculpatory circumstances.—Testimony of deceased's wife that watch was just like her husband's, and that in her judgment it was his, was admissible. Vestal v. State, 83 Cr. R. 184, 202 S. W. 94.

Under the rule that circumstances are admissible which tend to prove the issue, and incidents are legitimate which would be irrelevant depending upon direct testimony, and that circumstances may be established where they tend to make the proposition more or less probable, where there was evidence that deceased was killed in an automobile in such manner that his hair and blood probably would have been upon it, and that the hair and blood found on a certain car at a garage two days after the killing were similar to that found upon the objects with the body of deceased, it was proper for the state to trace the car by evidence from the time it was found with blood on it back to the time it left the garage before the homicide in a different condition, without proof that an individual in whose possession it was shown to be during such time was a conspirator with accused. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

In a prosecution for murder of defendant's mistress, evidence that at defendant's request, probably while he was under arrest, the room where the killing took place was searched, and jewelry given by defendant to deceased found there, as he had suggested, held admissible as one of the physical facts accompanying the tragedy. Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 55, 219 S. W. 821.

Where there was testimony that defendant and deceased's wife had been guilty of illicit relations, and where the wife had died shortly after the husband had been killed, wife's will made subsequent to the commission of the crime, at a time when the defendant was in jail, devising a large portion of her estate to the defendant, held inadmissible. Cates v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 953.

In a prosecution for wife murder, the trial court properly permitted a witness to testify as to the finding and taking possession of a hammer in defendant's barn some 24 hours after the injury was inflicted on deceased, and in describing the condition of the hammer with reference to blood and hair upon it, etc., the proof as to the character of the wounds on deceased's head and as to finding the hammer in the barn being sufficient predicate for such testimony. Pounds v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 633.

Exhuming and examination of bodies in homicide cases ought not to be allowed in any case, unless it is imperatively demanded under the circumstances and is necessary for the due administration of justice, and where defendant's theory of the killing of her husband was that he was standing up and the state's theory was that he was lying in bed, held, that court did not err in denying a motion that the body of deceased be exhumed so as to ascertain for the purpose of the jury's knowledge the course of a wound. Shields v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 779.

Where it was the theory of the state that defendant became indignant because one of his friends was beaten up by the hotel proprietor and his employees, one of whom was deceased, testimony that defendant stated he pursued the hotel proprietor through 40 rooms to kill him was admissible. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 309.

Testimony of officers that after the shooting they found defendant in a large meat box was admissible as evidence of flight and concealment; defendant's contention that his action merely expressed his fear of a mob being a matter for the jury, and affecting only the weight of the evidence. Carlile v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

34. — Cause of death.—Where the state's theory was that appellant killed deceased and threw her body in a river, and the defense urged suicide, evidence that deceased was cheerful, in a good humor, jolly, and apparently in good spirits continuously for several days prior to her disappearance was admissible, as tending to disprove defense of suicide. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

In a prosecution for murder, where the defendant claimed the deceased committed suicide, it was error to exclude the evidence of a witness that upon a pleasure trip deceased suddenly became despondent and withdrew from the circle of friends and told witness that she did not care to live, and evidence by a physician that he had told deceased that she had syphilis, and was incurable, but testimony that deceased and state's witness engaged in carnal intercourse with various men was inadmissible. Crow v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 148.

35. — Incriminating others.—In murder prosecution based upon circumstantial evidence, testimony that family of deceased's wife was hostile to him is admissible on theory that a member thereof may have committed crime, where such family lived near scene of murder and a man was seen walking toward their house soon after crime. Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 359, 195 S. W. 1147.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence by defendant that his son had been sent to the penitentiary for killing deceased was improper. Curry v. State, 85 Cr. R. 443, 213 S. W. 268.

When the actual killing is done by another, the mere presence of accused does not deprive him of the privilege of having his criminal connection with the offense determined by the rule of circumstantial evidence. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 411, 213 S. W. 639.

Although, where the evidence is wholly circumstantial, testimony showing the opportunity and motive of persons in such proximity to the murder as to render the fact of weight in determining the identity of the slayer, or in excluding the accused, should be received, yet, where a witness positively identified defendant as the party who struck the fatal blow, it was not error to reject defendant's offer to prove deceased's reputation for violence in an attempt to show that one other than accused had opportunity and motive to commit the offense. Gilbert v. State, 85 Cr. R. 597, 215 S. W. 106.

Where state relies upon circumstantial evidence to prove that defendant committed the crime, testimony tending to show that other persons who were near at hand at the time of the homicide had a motive to destroy the life of deceased is admissible, but must be legal evidence and not the hearsay declarations of the deceased or others, unless they amount to a confession of guilt. James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

36. — 'Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence held to sustain conviction of murder. Tiger v. State, 81 Cr. R. 614, 197 S. W. 716; Williams v. State, 81 Cr. R. 416, 195 S. W. 860; Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381; Franklin v. State, 82 Cr. R. 604, 200 S. W. 398; Castoreno v. State, 82 Cr. R. 592, 200 S. W. 401; James v. State, 84 Cr. R. 244, 206 S. W. 515; Wallace v. State, 84 Cr. R. 329, 206 S. W. 845; Gilbert v. State, 84 Cr. R. 616, 209 S. W. 658; Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390; Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 620, 218 S. W. 759; Watson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 189, 220 S. W. 329; Grissom v. State, 87 Cr. R. 465, 222 S. W. 237; Haley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 519, 223 S. W. 202; Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 527; Thomas v. State, 82 Cr. R. 609, 200 S. W. 402; Finch v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 528.

Circumstantial evidence held not sufficient to support conviction of murder. Wilkie v. State, 83 Cr. R. 490, 203 S. W. 1091; Sloan v. State, 83 Cr. R. 464, 204 S. W. 332.

In prosecution for murder committed by one engaged in theft at night, evidence held to sustain verdict of guilty. Davis v. State, 81 Cr. R. 450, 196 S. W. 520.

Evidence held insufficient to show express malice on the part of accused in killing deceased. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

Evidence held to show that when accused struck deceased on the head with an ax handle, it was his intent to kill him. Id.

Evidence in a homicide case held insufficient for submission of the issue of murder. Miles v. State, 82 Cr. R. 489, 200 S. W. 158.

Evidence held to show, at most, only manslaughter, and not murder. Alanis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 391, 200 S. W. 169.

Evidence, in a homicide case in which the sole defense was self-defense, held sufficient to support a conviction, depending on the credit given witnesses. Pollard v. State, 83 Cr. R. 647, 200 S. W. 838.

Although motive is not always necessary to be shown in a murder trial, yet if existent it is a circumstance to be considered by the jury with other facts. Wilkie v. State, 83 Cr. R. 490, 203 S. W. 1091.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that defendant put poison in whisky and killed deceased. Fults v. State, 83 Cr. R. 602, 204 S. W. 108.

In a prosecution for the murder of an 18 year old Mexican boy by a soldier, who was a passenger in his automobile, circumstantial evidence held sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. Parish v. State, 85 Cr. R. 75, 209 S. W. 678.

Evidence held insufficient to show that defendant shot, or participated in shooting, resulting in death of deceased. Davis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 15, 209 S. W. 749.

The mere presence of accused at the time and place of the homicide does not justify his conviction. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 411, 213 S. W. 639.

Where the evidence showed that death necessarily resulted either from suicide or the criminal agency of another, the only motive for either being to avoid the disgrace of pregnancy by defendant, and that when last seen alive deceased was in good health and appearance and going away on a trip for which she made careful preparation, and when next seen her dead body was floating in deep water in a river, with baling wire so wrapped about her legs as to make walking impossible, with a loop suggesting use of a weight, the body showing results of strangulation, and her laundry bag, also wired, was near the body, the corpus delicti was established. Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

Evidence held sufficient to establish that deceased was pregnant by defendant, and that he had arranged to meet her and take her away on the night of her disappearance, that he was the only person who had motive and opportunity to kill her, and that she did not commit suicide. (Per Prendergast, J.) Id.

In murder prosecution where actual killing had been done by person other than accused, evidence held sufficient to prove accused was connected with the killing, either as accomplice or as a principal. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

In a prosecution for murder of defendant's mistress, evidence held sufficient to authorize verdict of guilty despite defendant's claim that the shooting with an automatic pistol belonging to the woman was accidental or suicidal. Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 55, 219 S. W. 821.

A verdict of guilty of murder held sustained by evidence and, the weight thereof being primarily for the jury, the appellate court will not disturb the verdict. Watson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 189, 220 S. W. 329.

Where it appeared that defendant killed decedent with a shotgun from ambush, and that ill feeling had existed between the parties preceding the homicide, and a fresh provocation had taken place on the day of the killing, evidence held to support a verdict of guilty. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

In a prosecution for murder by causing deceased to drink whisky containing strychnine poison, evidence, including defendant's statements in nature of confession, held insufficient to prove beyond a reasonable doubt a conspiracy between defendant and his two brothers to murder deceased; no motive being shown. Baugus v. State, 87 Cr. R. 551, 223 S. W. 224.

In a prosecution for murder involving the issue of defendant's identity as the slayer, incriminating circumstances disclosed by evidence held to sustain a conviction. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 687.

Evidence held to raise the issue of murder, so as to justify the giving of an instruction therein. Wade v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 489.

In a prosecution for wife murder, evidence that defendant killed the woman with a hammer held sufficient to sustain conviction. Pounds v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 683.

Evidence held to show that defendant's presence was accounted for in a manner consistent with her innocence. Giles v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 765.

Evidence on prosecution for murder held to authorize submission of the issue of defendant's participation as a principal. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 786.

Evidence that deceased was cut dangerously a number of times, once in the lungs and once near the heart, that defendant was one of his assailants, and that shortly afterward he was seen washing blood from his knife, was sufficient to justify submission of the issue of death by cutting at the hands of defendant. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 312.

Evidence held sufficient to support a conviction of murder of one participating in threats directed towards deceased and acting with others in bringing on a fight and participating with them in the fight, though he was not the man who fired the actual shot. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

37. Charge.—Where there is no evidence that defendant shot deceased, the shooting having been done by one with whom defendant was in company, it was error to instruct to find defendant guilty if, with malice aforethought, he killed deceased by shooting him with a pistol. Walsh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 208, 211 S. W. 241.

In a prosecution for murder, resulting in conviction of assault to murder, deceased not having died until 30 days after he was cut by defendant, a requested charge that the jury should find defendant not guilty of murder or assault to murder, but should consider simply whether or not he was guilty of manslaughter or aggravated assault, or not guilty, held properly refused, in view of the record. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

Where the evidence showed that defendant acted a leading part, and there was no evidence other than his own suggesting a different motive than that of his accomplices, it was not error to refuse to charge that defendant was not bound by their motive, intent, or acts unless he knew of and agreed thereto. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 312.

Where there was evidence that defendant and two others a week before a homicide agreed to "get" deceased, and that defendant participated with others after they reached the restaurant where the crime was committed and after the difficulty began, a requested instruction that he would not be guilty of murder, though present and participating in the offense, unless he knew when he went to the restaurant that his companions intended to take deceased's life or inflict upon him serious injury, was inapplicable, since, if defendant acts with others knowing their unlawful design, he becomes equally guilty with them, no matter at what stage of the conspiracy he entered it. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

39. — Malice.—Instruction that "malice in its legal sense denotes a wrongful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse" was correct, and criticism that word "legal" should have been used instead of "just" is hypercritical. Flewellen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 568, 204 S. W. 657.

An instruction as to malice aforethought was not erroneous in failing to define the terms "will in law justify, excuse or extenuate the homicide" and "without just cause or excuse." McDougal v. State, 84 Cr. R. 424, 208 S. W. 173.

40. — Degrees under former law.—Since Acts 33d Leg. c. 116, § 1, amending the statutes, so as to do away with the degrees of murder, it is improper for the court to charge on the different degrees. Nelson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 219, 206 S. W. 361.

Art. 1141. Punishment.

See Ex parte Walker, 28 Tex. App. 246, 13 S. W. 861.

Punishment and assessment thereof.—Facts in a trial for murder occurring in a sudden quarrel between defendant and his coworkers, held not to justify death penalty. Liggon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 514, 200 S. W. 530.

Punishment by death was justified where the murder was committed by unprovoked shooting into a moving train. Banks v. State, 85 Cr. R. 165, 211 S. W. 217, 5 A. L. R. 600.

A ten-year sentence upon conviction for murder in a case involving the issue of temporary insanity from use of morphine and whisky held warranted by the evidence. Cundiff v. State, 86 Cr. R. 476, 218 S. W. 771.

Art. 1143. [713] Evidence of threats and deceased's character admissible, when.

See Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

Threats by deceased.—Defendant, in a trial for murder, asked for a continuance on account of absent witnesses, by whom he proposed to show threats, made by deceased the day before the killing against defendant's life, and that these threats were communicated to defendant before the killing. No testimony was offered to show that deceased manifested any intention to execute his threats at the time of the homicide. Held, that the court did not err in disallowing a continuance. Ellis v. State, 30 Tex. App. 601, 18 S. W. 139.

It is always permissible to prove uncommunicated threats, where question as to who began difficulty is an issue. Bolin v. State, 83 Cr. R. 590, 204 S. W. 335.

In prosecution for homicide, facts raising issue as to who began difficulty, defendant in such connection had right to prove uncommunicated threats by deceased. Marshall v. State, 84 Cr. R. 201, 206 S. W. 356.

In a prosecution for murder, evidence of a witness that shortly before the homicide he saw and heard deceased point through the door and say, "There goes a man I am going to shoot a hole through, I will put his lights out," was admissible, and the fact that no name was used by deceased could only affect the weight of the testimony, where the witness said that when the statement was made he looked through the door and saw no one except defendant. Parker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 222, 216 S. W. 178.

Deceased's statement to be admissible need not amount to a direct threat against defendant, if it shows the state of mind or animus of deceased toward defendant. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 189.

Proof that threats made by deceased were communicated to the defendant may be made by any person who heard the communication. Id.

Character of deceased or person assaulted.—In prosecution for murder, defendant's testimony as to deceased's conduct at chicken garden held admissible. Henley v. State, 81 Cr. R. 221, 195 S. W. 197.

Testimony of defendant's daughter of communication of deceased to defendant that defendant could not take his own daughter from deceased's house held admissible. Id.

Inquiries concerning reputation of deceased for 12 years prior to the birth of accused, his son, are too remote and inadmissible. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 368, 195 S. W. 595.

In homicide prosecution, testimony as to the reputation of the deceased is generally not introducible as original testimony, but, if there have been previous threats by deceased, communicated to defendant, and there is an issue of apparent danger in connection with the threats, the reputation of deceased could be shown by the state, except where the threats are part and parcel of the immediate difficulty. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 148, 220 S. W. 1108.

— Specific acts.—Specific acts of violence committed by deceased on others, when known to the person accused of having killed deceased, are admissible on the issue of self-defense. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 368, 195 S. W. 595.

In prosecution for murder, where accused alleged deceased had insulted accused's wife, conceding specific acts of unchastity or bad conduct on deceased's part could have been shown, offer to show that accused had been informed that deceased had caused a man and wife to separate was too indefinite. Adler v. State, 83 Cr. R. 72, 201 S. W. 177.

Accused's attempt to prove the character of deceased, for whose murder he was being tried, by evidence of certain vile remarks by deceased concerning women, was improper; evidence of particular acts being inadmissible for that purpose. Spannell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 418, 203 S. W. 357, 2 A. L. R. 593.

In homicide prosecution where deceased had been guilty of misconduct toward defendant's wife, evidence that deceased had separated from his wife on account of his "running around after other women" held admissible. Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

Evidence sought to be introduced by defendant that before the time deceased was killed there were a number of other people living in the neighborhood who were on bad terms with him, and who had had trouble with him was properly excluded, where such persons were not named, nor their whereabouts on the day of the homicide given. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

In homicide prosecution, where the defendant did not claim to have any knowledge regarding any illicit relations between deceased and man killed by defendant immediately prior to deceased's death, and did not claim to have been influenced in killing deceased by any such illicit relationship, testimony as to such illicit relations held inadmissible as against contention that it would shed light on how defendant viewed threats made by deceased immediately before defendant killed her. Perea v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 305.

— Rebuttal by state.—A witness who has testified to good reputation of deceased may be asked on cross-examination as to having heard or known of incidents inconsistent with such reputation. Patterson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 169, 202 S. W. 88.

In homicide prosecution, statement by defendant on cross-examination that deceased was a bad negro and had a gun, being state's testimony, was not sufficient basis for introduction by state of testimony as to reputation of deceased for peace and quietude. Barrett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 101, 215 S. W. 858.

In homicide prosecution, testimony that deceased had told witness that he was in trouble with another man's wife, or with other men's wives, and was going to have to leave the neighborhood, or would either get killed or have to kill somebody, without particularizing as to whose wife was referred to, was not sufficient ground for introduction by state of evidence as to deceased's reputation for peace and quietude in the community. Id.

In homicide prosecution, the state would be entitled to show good reputation of the deceased, where such reputation has been put in issue by defendant. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 148, 220 S. W. 1108.

Where defendant introduced testimony to establish deceased's reputation as a violent and dangerous man and justified the homicide by claiming that the conduct of deceased previously and at the time of the killing created a reasonable apprehension of death, the admission of evidence that deceased was about 61 years old was not error. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

Charge.—In homicide prosecution involving question of whether defendant was led to shoot by deceased's demonstration in view of previous threats, it was not incumbent upon court to qualify or limit the purpose for which evidence of threats was before the jury. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In homicide prosecution involving self-defense issue, where there was evidence that deceased had made threats against defendant's life, court's refusal to give requested instruction on law of communicated threats was error. Thompson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 144, 210 S. W. 800.

In a homicide case, court properly refused to instruct that, if one has made threats and at the time of the homicide did something showing the intention of executing such threats, his slayer should be held not guilty; such an instruction not being full and correct statement of the law. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175.

In a prosecution for homicide, where self-defense was claimed and there was evidence that accused had been informed of threats against him by deceased, an instruction on threats should include his right to act on such information, though the threats were not in fact made by deceased. Rutland v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1088.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, where the question is in issue who began the difficulty, and the issue of self-defense is involved on such question, the trial court's failure to charge on uncommunicated threats is erroneous, unless the matter is of no importance in the case. Aycock v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1099.

In homicide prosecution where there was testimony that deceased had threatened defendant and had twice made attacks on him within the hour preceding the homicide, court's refusal to charge on the law of threats in connection with self-defense held error. Collins v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 189.

If there is evidence of communicated threats and of an overt act by deceased at the time of the homicide not amounting to an actual attack, the court should charge the jury affirmatively on the law of threats in connection with self-defense. Id.

Defendant in homicide case could not criticize a charge relative to threats, where the jury was pointedly told that if deceased had made threats against defendant and it appeared to her from her standpoint at the time that by acts, or words coupled with acts, he manifested an intention to execute such threats, she would be justified in killing him and should be acquitted. Shields v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 779.

A charge in a prosecution for homicide, where evidence of threats by deceased had been admitted, which, after using the language of the statute, explained that it meant some act or word which reasonably indicated to defendant that the threatened attack had then commenced to be executed, was erroneous, as imposing on defendant a greater burden than the law required. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 847.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO HOMICIDE

Art.	Art.
1147. Means or instruments used must be considered.	1150. If evil or cruel disposition be exhibited.
1149. If in sudden passion not with deadly weapon.

Article 1147. [717] Means or instruments used must be considered.

See Garrett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 64, 198 S. W. 308; Hoover v. State, 87 Cr. R. 372, 222 S. W. 244.

Deadly weapon.—A stick, described as a black jack limb about two or three feet long and about as big as witness' wrist, with which defendant struck and killed deceased, was not per se a deadly weapon, and its character as such was a question of fact. Hollman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 371, 212 S. W. 663.

A pocketknife, with which homicide was committed, was not per se a deadly weapon, and its character as such and defendant's intent were questions of fact. Dugan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 422, 199 S. W. 616; Dill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 49, 219 S. W. 481.

A shotgun usually can be considered a "deadly weapon," but not necessarily so. Teague v. State, 84 Cr. R. 169, 206 S. W. 193.

A stick, described as a black jack limb about two or three feet long and about as big as witness' wrist, with which defendant struck and killed deceased, was not per se a deadly weapon, and its character as such was a question of fact, notwithstanding death resulted from the blow struck with it; and it was error for the court, after having its attention called thereto, not to charge the substance of Pen. Code 1911, art. 1147, providing that "if the instrument be one not likely to produce death it is not to be presumed that death was designed, unless from the manner in which it was used such intention evidently appears." Hollman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 371, 212 S. W. 663.

A pistol used as a club is not per se a deadly weapon. Merritt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 565, 213 S. W. 941.

A shotgun at such long range as to make it apparent that death or serious bodily injury could not result from its use would not be legally a deadly weapon. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175.

In a prosecution for murder, resulting in conviction of assault to murder, requested instructions eliminating the issue of murder and assault to murder held properly refused, in view of evidence showing that defendant assaulted deceased with a knife having a blade 2½ inches long. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

Merely because death results from an instrument or weapon used to strike, there is no necessary conclusion that the weapon used was a deadly weapon. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 15, 218 S. W. 1052, 8 A. L. R. 1316.

Whether a weapon can be deemed a "deadly weapon" is usually for the jury, to be determined according to its size and means whereby it has been used, the relative sizes and strength of the parties, and all the surrounding circumstances. Price v. State, 87 Cr. R. 163, 220 S. W. 89.

A weapon may become deadly when from the manner of its use it is calculated to inflict death or serious bodily injury, but it is unnecessary that an injury be inflicted which is likely to produce death or give rise to apprehension before the weapon be deadly. Id.

In a prosecution for murder, where the weapon used was a wooden stick about three feet long, three inches in diameter at one end, and tapering to two inches at the other end, such club was not per se a "deadly weapon." Hoover v. State, 87 Cr. R. 372, 222 S. W. 244.

An empty quart bottle is not per se a dangerous weapon. Tolston v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1098.

Weapon or means used as evidence of Intent.—Where defendant in murder case set up self-defense, the knife with which the killing was done was admissible to show intent, where not shown to be a deadly weapon per se. Houston v. State, 83 Cr. R. 190, 202 S. W. 84; Hamilton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 90, 201 S. W. 1009.

In murder prosecution, involving self-defense issue, presumption of intent from character of weapon used, was inapplicable, since, the killing by defendant being admitted, defendant's intent was not in issue; the only question being whether homicide was lawful or unlawful. Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161.

The use of a weapon calculated to produce death does not always carry with it the presumption of an intent to kill or inflict serious bodily injury, as the manner of use of the weapon must always be taken into consideration. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175.

Where one strikes another with a weapon calculated to produce death or serious bodily injury there is an absolute presumption that former intended to kill or seriously injure the latter. Ware v. State, 86 Cr. R. 505, 217 S. W. 946.

Where the means used to kill deceased were not in their nature ordinarily calculated to produce death, being a pocketknife, the law presumes that defendant was not guilty of homicide, unless there is showing of an intention to kill. Dill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 49, 219 S. W. 481.

In a prosecution for murder, where one is shot with a certain gun in the hands of accused, it is usually material to show that accused had the gun in his possession, the purpose for which he had it, and the kind of ammunition with which it was loaded. Woods v. State, 87 Cr. R. 354, 221 S. W. 276.

In prosecution of husband for murder of wife, who died from peritonitis, claimed to have been caused by internal injuries sustained on being beaten and kicked by husband, death would not be imputed to husband, unless a specific intent to kill manifestly appeared at the time he beat wife, or unless it was the necessary consequence of the weapon used or means employed. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 521.

Charge.—Where accused struck deceased with ax handle, held, that charge on aggravated assault should have been given. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

In prosecution for homicide alleged to have been committed with a hoe and a stick of wood, since the weapon was not per se a deadly weapon, a charge that the intent to kill was not to be presumed except from the manner in which the weapon was used should have been given. Lowe v. State, 83 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986.

There being testimony that accused committed the killing with a knife in repelling a severe assault by deceased and companions, he was entitled to a charge on aggravated assault, based on the statute that the instrument or means with which a homicide is committed are to be taken into consideration in judging of the intent, etc. Lozano v. State, 83 Cr. R. 174, 202 S. W. 510.

If defendant's weapon was used so as to show evident intention to kill deceased, and there is no evidence that such was not defendant's intention, it is not error to fail to charge on this article. Coates v. State, 83 Cr. R. 309, 203 S. W. 904.

Where there was evidence that deceased had his knife in his hand, but no evidence describing the knife upon which the jury could predicate a finding that it was a deadly weapon, the failure of the court to instruct the jury on the presumption of intent to kill by the deceased, arising from his use of deadly weapon, was not error. Hollman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 371, 212 S. W. 663.

This article is not to be made the basis of a charge against accused in any case of homicide, since it conflicts with charge on presumption of innocence, necessary in every case. Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161.

In a prosecution of a pupil for killing his teacher by the use of a pocketknife when chastised, instruction that in connection with other facts in evidence the means by which the homicide was committed were to be taken into consideration in judging defendant's intent, and, if the instrument was not likely to produce death it is not to be presumed death was designed, unless from the manner used the intention evidently appeared, held erroneous. Dill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 49, 219 S. W. 481.

In a prosecution of a pupil for killing his teacher with a pocketknife while being chastised, defendant pupil's contention being merely that he did not intend to take a serious thrashing, and used his pocketknife, not to kill, but in self-defense, the provision that the instrument whereby a homicide is committed is to be considered in judging of the intent of the offending party, etc., should have been given in the charge to the jury. Id.

In prosecution for murder, where deceased was killed with one blow of a wooden club, which was not per se a deadly weapon, it was error to refuse to instruct affirmatively that unless the jury found that in the manner used the stick was a deadly weapon, conviction should not be returned unless the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that at the time the blow was struck defendant had the specific intent to kill deceased, in view of evidence that only one blow was struck, and that defendant did not intend to kill. Hoover v. State, 87 Cr. R. 372, 222 S. W. 244.

Art. 1149. [719] If in sudden passion not with deadly weapon.

See Garrett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 64, 198 S. W. 308; Miles v. State, 82 Cr. R. 489, 200 S. W. 158; Hoover v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 982.

Charge.—Where there was evidence that the killing was committed in repelling by use of a knife a sudden and exciting attack by deceased and companions, accused was entitled to charge based on statute providing that, where a homicide occurs under the influence of sudden passion, but by means not in their nature calculated to produce death, the slayer is not deemed guilty unless it appears that there was an intention to kill, but may be prosecuted for any grade of assault and battery. Lozano v. State, 83 Cr. R. 174, 202 S. W. 510.

Where defendant had given testimony raising issue of whether he had acted under immediate influence of sudden passion, court's instruction as to reduction of offense to aggravated assault held fatally defective because of omission to charge that where deadly weapon was not used and blow resulted from uncontrolled passion or excitement, defendant was not guilty of higher offense than aggravated assault. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

In homicide prosecution, where there was evidence raising the question of provoking the difficulty, court, in charging on aggravated assault, properly instructed jury that, if the killing was under sudden passion, without intent to kill, with weapon not reasonably calculated to inflict death or serious bodily injury, and defendant had not provoked difficulty, and was not justified, he would be guilty of no higher offense than aggravated assault. Id.

Where accused was charged with killing deceased by discharge of a pistol during a struggle with deceased's husband, the substance of this article should have been charged. Merritt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 565, 213 S. W. 941.

In a prosecution of a pupil for killing his teacher by the use of a pocketknife when chastised, instruction that in connection with other facts in evidence the means by which the homicide was committed were to be taken into consideration in judging defendant's intent, and, if the instrument was not likely to produce death, it is not to be presumed death was designed, unless from the manner used the intention evidently appeared, held erroneous. Dill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 49, 219 S. W. 481.

Art. 1150. [720] If evil or cruel disposition be exhibited.

OF OFFENSES AGAINST REPUTATION

Chap. 1. Of libel. 2. Of slander. 3. Sending anonymous letters.	Chap. 4. Of false accusation and threats of prosecution.
--	---

CHAPTER ONE

OF LIBEL

Art. 1151. "Libel" defined. 1170. Corporations cannot be libeled.	Art. 1179. This title relates only to penal action.

Article 1151. [721] "Libel" defined.

3. Publication.—Generally, a newspaper publisher may, when done in good faith and without intent to injure, print and circulate any item, whether true or false, without pecuniary or criminal liability other than that arising from loss of confidence and esteem in the minds of the public, but he is responsible for an abuse of that privilege and may be punished for the publication of a libel. Wortham-Carter Pub. Co. v. Littlepage (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1043.

5. Indictment, information and complaint.—Where an alleged libel was printed in a foreign tongue, the information charging the offense of libel should, after setting out the alleged libelous article, contain an English translation thereof according to the tenor of the article, which should not be interspersed with innuendoes or explanatory statements. Drozda v. State, 86 Cr. R. 614, 218 S. W. 765.

An information setting out an alleged libelous article published by defendant in a foreign tongue which related to the Bohemian National Alliance held insufficient to state an offense, not showing to what particular persons the libelous statements were directed. Id.

6. — Innuendo.—An indictment, which set out a newspaper article that charged fire was of an incendiary origin, held insufficient to charge offense of criminally libeling the person named in the indictment as the one against whom it was directed, notwithstanding Code Cr. Proc. 1916, art. 472; there being no innuendo showing the applicability of the article to the one claimed to be libeled or that the diatribe in the article against Jews was directed against him. Potter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 380, 216 S. W. 886.

An innuendo in an information charging libel is to explain, not to extend, what has gone before, and it cannot extend the meaning of words, although in a particular case it may more precisely fix the meaning either of preceding or subsequent words. Drozda v. State, 86 Cr. R. 614, 218 S. W. 765.

Art. 1170. [740] Corporations cannot be libeled.

In general.—A corporation as such cannot be criminally libeled. Potter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 380, 216 S. W. 886.

Art. 1179. [749] This title relates only to penal action.

See Lights v. State, 21 Tex. App. 308, 17 S. W. 428.

OF SLANDER

Art. 1180. Definition and punishment.	Art. 1181. Procedure in prosecution for.

Article 1180. [750] Definition and punishment.

1. Nature and elements of offense.—Excitement at time of making a slanderous remark as to chastity of female is admissible as bearing upon issue of intent, but not as a defense, unless it amounted to temporary insanity. Pickerell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 68, 198 S. W. 303.

Evidence that defendant, who was too far away to distinguish whether something "white" on the track "was a bunch of women, horses, or cows," remarked that it was just a bunch of whores following the soldiers, is insufficient to convict defendant of wanton or malicious slander of two women in the group. Lutker v. State, 83 Cr. R. 347, 203 S. W. 53.

3. Privileged statement.—In a prosecution for slander, the fact that the person to whom the slanderous statement was made was a friend of defendant held not to make it privileged, under the rule applicable where a relative of the injured female making inquiry of accused as to reported utterances is told what had been said. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 304.

6. Indictment and information and proof thereunder—Innuendo.—In a prosecution for slander, a statement that “Mr. F. and Mrs. R. are sleeping together, and they will not marry as long as they are sleeping together without marrying,” held sufficient in itself to impute a want of chastity to Mrs. R., so that innuendo averments were unnecessary. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 304.

7. — Proof and variance.—In a prosecution for slander, defendant having said that a third person had “knocked up” the female in question, where it was necessary to allege the meaning of such words, it was necessary for the state to prove meaning, and what the witness who heard the statement understood by the same. Russell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 179, 211 S. W. 224.

8. Evidence.—In prosecution for slander by imputing want of chastity to Mrs. W—— T—— by use of words: “Will Tingle burned our barn, and his damned whore helped him plan it. Will’s wife is no account”—evidence tending to connect W. T. with burning defendant’s barn was not relevant. Kelly v. State, 81 Cr. R. 408, 195 S. W. 853.

In prosecution for slander of female, it was incompetent to show that, subsequent to offense charged, female’s reputation became bad. Pickerell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 68, 198 S. W. 303.

In prosecution for female slander, evidence to effect that accused told a witness that female in question had slighted him is admissible as showing motive or malice of accused in making statement for which prosecuted, but should be restricted by court to that purpose. Russell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 179, 211 S. W. 224.

9. Charge of court.—In a prosecution for slander of a female, special charge, requesting court to define “wantonly” and “willfully,” should have been given. Kelly v. State, 81 Cr. R. 408, 195 S. W. 853.

Art. 1181. [751] Procedure in prosecution for.

Lasky v. State (App.) 18 S. W. 465.

Charge.—On a prosecution for slander by imputing want of chastity to a female, where there is evidence that the general reputation for chastity of the female alleged to have been slandered is bad, it is error to refuse an instruction that if the jury believed this evidence they should acquit. Shaw v. State, 28 Tex. App. 236, 12 S. W. 741.

In prosecution for slander of a female, it was proper to instruct that if defendant relies on unchastity in female as a defense he has the burden of proving it by a preponderance of the evidence. Pickerell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 68, 198 S. W. 303.

CHAPTER THREE

SENDING ANONYMOUS LETTERS

Article 1182. Prohibited, penalty for so doing.

Indictment, information or complaint.—An indictment charging the offense of sending an anonymous letter the words and tenor of which reflected upon the chastity, good character, and reputation of the recipient, without setting out the letter, but merely alleging that the words and tenor violated the statute, is insufficient. Rudy v. State, 81 Cr. R. 272, 195 S. W. 187.

Evidence.—In prosecution for sending anonymous letter reflecting on chastity and good reputation of recipient, another anonymous letter alleged to have been written by defendant and received by the same person, was admissible in evidence. Rudy v. State, 81 Cr. R. 272, 195 S. W. 187.

OF FALSE ACCUSATION AND THREATS OF PROSECUTION

Article 1187. [754] Threats of prosecution to extort money.

See Houston Ice & Brewing Co. v. Harlan (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 1090.

OF ARSON

Art.	Art.
1208. Exceptions.	1210. Punishment.
1209. Part owner cannot burn.

Article 1208. [764] Exceptions.

Offense.—If the owner of a house in a town or city employs another to burn it for him, the agent is guilty of arson. Johnson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 82, 197 S. W. 995.

Art. 1209. [765] Part owner can not burn.

Tenant in possession.—A tenant in possession of a house under a lease is a part owner; and an indictment against him for arson in burning the building must allege such tenancy, and the particular facts making the burning arson, under art. 1208, as that there was property of another in the house, or that the life of some person was endangered by the burning. Mulligan v. State, 25 Tex. App. 199, 7 S. W. 664, 8 Am. St. Rep. 435.

Effect of amendment.—Where the conviction was had, and the appeal taken, prior to an amendment of the statute by Acts 35th Leg. c. 145, so as to reduce the minimum penalty for arson from five to two years, the fact that the appeal was heard after the statute became effective did not entitle accused to a reversal. Johnson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 82, 197 S. W. 995.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF, [CRUELTY TO ANIMALS, TRESPASS, ETC.]

Art.	Art.
1229. Obstructing railway track, etc.	1254. Cut, destroy or injure levee.
1230. Killing animal to injure owner.	1254a. Destroying or defacing corner, line, mark, etc., in connection with levee.
1231. Cruelty to animals.	1255. Entering upon inclosed land of another to hunt or take fish.
1232a. Using boat without consent of owner.	1255a. Hunting on enclosed and posted lands containing 2000 acres or more.
1232b. Same; punishment.	1255b. Same; punishment; proviso.
1234. Robbing orchards, gardens, etc.	1255c. Same; necessity of posting.
1235. Destroying fruit, corn, etc.	1259a. Taking or driving motor vehicle belonging to another.
1240. Injuring fence, leaving open gates, etc.	1259aa. Operation of motor vehicle of another without his consent.
1241. Where stock law adopted, what constitutes offense.
1242. Wantonly and wilfully, etc., cutting, etc., fence.
1243. Unlawful to remove party fence.
1246. Dogging stock when fence insufficient.

Article 1229. [785] Obstructing railroad tracks, etc.

Evidence.—Evidence held sufficient to corroborate defendant's confession as to his guilty connection with the commission of the crime. Clark v. State, 85 Cr. R. 153, 210 S. W. 544.

Art. 1230. [786] Killing animal to injure owner.

See Smith v. State, 23 Tex. App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773; McCleskey v. State (App.) 13 S. W. 997.

Cited, Owens v. State, 25 Tex. App. 552, 8 S. W. 658; Hurley v. State, 30 Tex. App. 333, 17 S. W. 455, 28 Am. St. Rep. 916; Lynn v. State, 33 Cr. R. 153, 25 S. W. 779.

Offense.—The provisions of arts. 1230, 1231, and 1246, relating to killing of animals, define separate offenses, each containing elements distinct from the other. Choate v. State, 87 Cr. R. 328, 221 S. W. 980.

If one who willfully kills an animal with intent to injure its owner may be convicted, although at the time the animal was killed it was on defendant's premises, inclosed with an insufficient fence, such conviction can be sustained only upon proof of intent to injure the owner, and such intent cannot be inferred from the mere fact of injury; the inference being that the animal was killed in defense of the property upon which it was trespassing. Choate v. State, 87 Cr. R. 328, 221 S. W. 980.

In a prosecution for killing a hog, where one count, under this article, 1230, charged killing with intent to injure the owner, and the other, under art. 1231, charged willful and needless killing, defendant may justify on the ground that the hog was trespassing in his field, regardless of the fact that the field was insufficiently fenced, the information not charging the offense of killing an animal trespassing on land inclosed by an insufficient fence denounced by art. 1246, and the court's failure to present the defense raised by requested charges and objections to evidence is error. Id.

Indictment, information or complaint.—A complaint charging that defendant did "unlawfully and willfully wound a horse" belonging to another, without alleging the intent, did not charge the offense under this article. Ex parte Phillips, 33 Cr. App. 126, 25 S. W. 629.

Evidence.—Evidence held to warrant a finding that defendant put the dogs on the swine, with intent to injure the owner. Shirley v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 42.

Art. 1231. [787] Cruelty to animals.—Every person who overdrives, willfully overloads, drives when overloaded, overworks, tortures, torments, deprives of necessary sustenance, unnecessarily or cruelly beats, or needlessly mutilates or kills, or carries in or upon any vehicle, or otherwise in a cruel or inhumane manner, or causes or procures to be done, or who having the charge or custody of any animal unnecessarily fails to provide it with proper food, drink or cruelly abandons it, shall, upon conviction be punished by fine of not more than two hundred ($200.00) dollars. [O. C. 714; amended Acts 1901, p. 289; Acts 1913, p. 168, ch. 88, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 59, § 1.]

Cited, Lynn v. State, 33 Cr. R. 153, 25 S. W. 779.

Offense.—The provisions of arts. 1230, 1231, and 1246, relating to killing of animals, define separate offenses, each containing elements distinct from the other. Choate v. State, 87 Cr. R. 328, 221 S. W. 980.

In a prosecution for killing a hog, where one count, under art. 1230, charged killing with intent to injure the owner, and the other, under this article, charged willful and needless killing, defendant may justify on the ground that the hog was trespassing in his field, regardless of the fact that the field was insufficiently fenced, the information not charging the offense of killing an animal trespassing on land inclosed by an insufficient fence denounced by art. 1246, and the court's failure to present the defense raised by requested charges and objections to evidence is error. Id.

Art. 1232a. Using boat without consent of owner.—It shall be unlawful for any person to use in this State, without the consent of the owner thereof, any boat of any size, character or kind, or to remove therefrom any motor or part thereof, oar or oars, row-locks, oar locks, anchor, anchor chain or anchor rope, paddles, seats, planks, polls, or any rigging whatsoever belonging to such boat, and which boat is capable of being used or operated on any bay, lake, river, or body of water or any part thereof in this State. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 72, § 1.]

Art. 1232b. Same; punishment.—Any person violating the provisions of this Act shall upon conviction be fined in any sum not less than Five -$5.00- dollars, and not more than One Hundred -$100.00- dollars. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1234. [790] Robbing orchards, gardens, etc.

Indictment or information.—Where the information charged defendant with the theft of 10 bushels of pears, and the facts and testimony showed that he gathered them from the orchard of the prosecuting witness, the prosecution should be had under this article, in terms making such act punishable. Busey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 23, 218 S. W. 1048.

Art. 1235. [791] Destroying fruit, corn, etc.

Offense.—A malicious destruction of property must be willful, and if defendant was rendered unconscious or so deranged in mind from being struck on the head as to be incapable of forming the evil intent or acting with legal malice required to make the act criminal, he should not be punished. Haag v. State, 87 Cr. R. 604, 223 S. W. 472.

Art. 1240. [794] Injuring fence, leaving open gates.

See Martin v. State (App.) 16 S. W. 749.

Cited, Bybee v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 824.

Offense.—Court will not adjudicate question of title or rightful ownership of fence; the pivotal question being the actual possession thereof, and not title or ownership. Bray v. State, 87 Cr. R. 146, 219 S. W. 1102.

One who cuts fence while in actual possession thereof is not liable for malicious mischief, though another party, not in actual possession, is the owner and entitled to possession. Id.

Evidence.—In prosecution for unlawfully breaking, pulling down, and injuring fence of another without his consent, evidence held insufficient to prove possession of fence by person in whom ownership was alleged. McCullers v. State, 86 Cr. R. 247, 216 S. W. 182.

Where it was charged that defendant had torn down and removed a fence by cutting, evidence of title or ownership of the fence was inadmissible; the question being one of possession, and the evidence in such cases being confined to possession, rather than to ownership. Bray v. State, 87 Cr. R. 146, 219 S. W. 1102.

Evidence showing that defendant, and not prosecuting witness, was in actual possession of fence at time of alleged commission of crime, held fatal to conviction. Id.

Art. 1241. Where stock law adopted, what constitutes offense.

See Smith v. State, 23 Tex. App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773.

Indictment or information.—A complaint and information are insufficient, where they do not allege a legal petition for an election by the commissioners' court for the election, the order by the county judge declaring the result of the election as provided by law, and a proclamation by publication or otherwise for 30 days of the result of the election. Alsobrook v. State, 86 Cr. R. 271, 216 S. W. 167.

Information charging that defendant caused cattle to go within inclosed lands of T. without T.'s consent should have alleged want of consent of the other renters or possessors of the land in the inclosure including the owner, he having rented to T. and others for shares of the crops. Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 468, 217 S. W. 945.

Evidence.—Conviction of causing cattle to go within inclosed lands without consent is unsupported by evidence, defendant having authority from the owner of the land who rented to others for shares of the crops. Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 468, 217 S. W. 945.

In a prosecution for permitting stock to run at large in county in which the stock law had been adopted, failure to prove the adoption of the law within the territory where in the offense is charged to have been committed is fatal to conviction. Cline v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 668.

Art. 1242. [795] Wantonly and wilfully, etc., cutting, etc., fence.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for wantonly and wilfully cutting fences not defendant's own, evidence held insufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 35, 204 S. W. 640.

Art. 1243. [796] Unlawful for owner of party fence to remove.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to support conviction for removing the fence belonging to another. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 496, 208 S. W. 515.

Art. 1246. [799] Dogging stock when fence insufficient.

See Smith v. State, 23 Tex. App. 357, 5 S. W. 219, 59 Am. Rep. 773.

Offense.—The provisions of arts. 1230, 1231, and 1246, relating to killing of animals, define separate offenses, each containing elements distinct from the other. Choate v. State, 87 Cr. R. 328, 221 S. W. 980.

In a prosecution for killing a hog, where one count, under art. 1230, charged killing with intent to injure the owner, and the other, under art. 1231, charged willful and needless killing, defendant may justify on the ground that the hog was trespassing in his field, regardless of the fact that the field was insufficiently fenced, the information not charging the offense of killing an animal trespassing on land inclosed by an insufficient fence denounced by art. 1246, and the court's failure to present the defense raised by requested charges and objections to evidence is error. Id.

Art. 1254. Cut, destroy or injure levee.—Any person or persons who shall wrongfully or purposely cut, injure, destroy, or in any manner impair the usefulness of any levee or other reclamation improvement, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding one year; or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Acts 1909, p. 152; Acts 1915, 34th Leg., ch. 146, § 40; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 44, § 58.]

Art. 1254a. Destroying or defacing corner, line, mark, etc., in connection with levee.—Any person or persons who shall wilfully destroy or deface any corner, line, mark, bench mark or other object fixed or established in connection with the work herein authorized, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not less than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment. [Acts 1915, 34th Leg., ch. 146, § 41; Acts 1918, 36th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 44, § 59.]

Art. 1255. [804] Entering upon inclosed land of another to hunt or take fish.

Indictment or Information.—An information alleging that a certain named person was the lessee of the pasture on which defendant hunted, and negating consent by the owner, lessee, proprietor, and agent in charge, cannot be sustained on the theory that the named lessee was intended by all those terms. Boubel v. State, 87 Cr. R. 360, 221 S. W. 290.

An information for hunting in a pasture without consent should inform the accused whether the prosecution is brought under art. 1255a, prohibiting hunting in pastures of more than 2,000 acres or under this article, applying to pastures of 2,000 acres or less. Id.

Evidence.—An information, alleging that the pasture on which accused was hunting had been leased to a named individual, who did not consent to the hunting, is not supported by proof that the pasture was under the charge or management of one of two agents of the lessee who were not named in the information. Boubel v. State, 87 Cr. R. 360, 221 S. W. 290.

See Boubel v. State, 87 Cr. R. 360, 221 S. W. 290.

Evidence.—In prosecution for hunting upon inclosed lands of another without his consent, where defendant was informed against and tried under the statute relating to the larger class of inclosures (arts. 1255a, 1255b, and 1255c), but the evidence shows that if he violated the law it was by hunting on the smaller class of inclosures (art. 1255), the judgment will be reversed. Spencer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 197, 215 S. W. 966.

Art. 1255b. Same; punishment; proviso.

See Spencer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 197, 215 S. W. 966.

Art. 1255c. Same; necessity of posting.

See Spencer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 197, 215 S. W. 966.

Art. 1259a. Taking or driving motor vehicle belonging to another.

Validity.—Acts 34th Leg. c. 105, amending Acts 33d Leg. c. 100, § 1, so as to omit words "shall steal or" with reference to taking of motor vehicles and which was republished with said words omitted, held valid under Const. art. 3, § 36. Ex parte Jackson, 83 Cr. R. 55, 200 S. W. 1092.

Offense.—Under this article, which originally made it a misdemeanor to steal, take, drive, or operate any vehicle, but which after it was construed by the court as making larceny of an automobile misdemeanor regardless of its value, in view of art. 1344, was amended in 1915 so as to omit the word "steal" therefrom, the word "take" in the amended act is not, in view of the evident purpose of the Legislature in making the amendment to be given the same meaning as "steal," notwithstanding art. 1331, defining taking under the definition of theft. Hunt v. State (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

Indictment or Information.—An information and complaint for using another's automobile without his consent was not duplicitous because it charged in one count that accused had driven and operated, and caused to be driven and operated, said car. Pelz v. State (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 154.

Evidence.—Defendant cannot complain of owner of buggy taken being allowed to testify to its value, where punishment inflicted was that provided for a minimum value. Fitzgerald v. State, 82 Cr. R. 130, 198 S. W. 316.

Art. 1259aa. Operation of motor vehicle of another without his consent.

See Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 255, 206 S. W. 684.

1262. Driving sheep affected with scab or other contagious disease.	1284i. Burying or burning carcasses of animals dying of disease.
1265. Permitting sheep with scab to run at large.	1284k. Failure or refusal to dip or treat animals quarantined.
1284c. Special quarantine districts for particular diseases, etc.	1284l. Removal of animals after notice of quarantine.
1284f. Penalty for violation of act.	1284m. Failure to dip animals in mode required by law.
1284g. Failure to dip animals.
1284h. Tick eradication; election.

Article 1262. Driving sheep affected with scab or other contagious diseases.

Art. 1265. [812] Permitting sheep with scab to run at large.

See Labbe v. Corbett, 69 Tex. 503, 6 S. W. 808.

Art. 1284c. Special quarantine districts for particular diseases, etc.

Indictment or Information.—Under arts. 1284c, 1284f, 1284g, indictment for failing to vaccinate hogs for cholera held insufficient, where not alleging the making or promulgation of any rule by the live stock sanitary commission. Rayburn v. State, 81 Cr. R. 610, 197 S. W. 714.

Art. 1284f. Penalty for violation of act.

Indictment or Information.—Under arts. 1284c, 1284f, 1284g, indictment for failing to vaccinate hogs for cholera held insufficient, where not alleging the making or promulgation of any rule by the live stock sanitary commission. Rayburn v. State, 81 Cr. R. 610, 197 S. W. 714.

Art. 1284g. Failure to dip animals.

Indictment and Information.—Under arts. 1284c, 1284f, 1284g, indictment for failing to vaccinate hogs for cholera held insufficient, where not alleging the making or promulgation of any rule by the live stock sanitary commission. Rayburn v. State, 81 Cr. R. 610, 197 S. W. 714.

Art. 1284h. Tick eradication, election.

Validity.—The provision authorizing the Live Stock Sanitary Commission to require the dipping of cattle exposed to fever-carrying tick within nine months prior to the passage of the act, and making violation of such direction a misdemeanor, is not an ex post facto law. Walker v. State (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 513.

Art. 1284i. Burying or burning carcasses of animals dying of disease.

Cited, Rayburn v. State, 81 Cr. R. 610, 197 S. W. 714.

Art. 1284k. Failure or refusal to dip or treat animals quarantined.

—Any person, company or corporation owning, controlling or caring for any cattle, horses, mules, or asses which have the fever-carrying tick (margaropus annulatus, Say,) upon them or upon any one of them, or that are exposed to the said fever-carrying tick, or that are on any premises or other place on which the fever-carrying tick is known to exist, or that have, some time within nine months next preceding the issuance of the written direction to dip hereinafter provided, been exposed to the said fever-carrying tick or been on said premises or other place on which the fever-carrying tick is known to exist, who shall fail or refuse to dip any of said cattle, horses, mules or asses at such time and in such manner as directed in writing by the Livestock Sanitary Commission, or its chairman, as provided for in this Act [Arts. 7314k—1 to 7314k—5, 7314l, Civil Statutes, ante], shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than twenty-five dollars, nor more than one hundred dollars, and each day of such failure or refusal shall be a separate offense. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 60, § 15; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 38, § 1 (§ 15).]

See Ex parte Matthews, 87 Cr. R. 511, 223 S. W. 230.

Validity.—The Tick Eradication Law is not invalid on the ground that it prescribes two penalties for the same offense; the offense punished by this section being refusal to dip cattle after proper notification, while that set out in section 22 (post, art. 1284m) is for failure to use dip of the strength and kind officially prescribed. Gandy v. State, 87 Cr. R. 197, 220 S. W. 339.

This article held invalid, as denial of due process, for lack of definite provision for notice to cattle owner. Ex parte Leslie, 87 Cr. R. 476, 223 S. W. 227.

Where defendant's cattle had ticks on them, and had been exposed to the tick subsequent to the date the law became effective, the prosecution might be maintained though the nine-month clause were ex post facto, as it was separable from the other provisions and did not destroy them. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 513; Lee v. Same (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 515.

Regulations.—Where official inspection disclosed that there were ticks in the locality and the county, it was proper to require the dipping of cattle without an inspection of all the animals therein. Page v. Tucker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 534.

Proclamation of live stock commission, conferring power on agents to discriminate in enforcing this act, held not authorized by the statute. Ex parte Leslie, 87 Cr. R. 476, 223 S. W. 227.

Offenses.—Where defendant was not, in writing, notified to dip his cattle, horses, and mules to eradicate fever ticks until after the filing of the complaint and information, he cannot be convicted on account of failure. McGee v. State, 82 Cr. R. 129, 198 S. W. 302.

Sickness and physical inability to take cattle to the dipping vat on the date directed is a defense to a prosecution under Tick Eradication Law, such law not being immune from the application of rules of reasonableness. Gandy v. State, 87 Cr. R. 197, 220 S. W. 339.

The date of an alleged offense under the Tick Eradication Law, consisting in failure to dip cattle, should correspond with the date in the written notice served. Felchack v. State, 87 Cr. R. 207, 220 S. W. 340.

Indictment, information, or complaint.—An information and complaint which fails to allege notification in writing of the time and manner such dipping was required to be done by the commission is fatally defective. Smith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 281, 211 S. W. 944.

It is sufficient to substantially charge that the election was legal and held in a certain county to determine whether said county should prosecute the work of tick eradication, at which election the majority of legal votes were cast in favor thereof, and thereafter said law was put in effect as prescribed by statute, and thereafter on named date in said county and state a named person was the owner and caretaker of certain animals specified, and refused to dip such animals after being directed to do so by the live stock sanitary commission at the time and manner set out. Emberline v. State, 85 Cr. R. 399, 212 S. W. 952.

Tick Eradication Law does not require allegation and proof that cattle of accused were infected with ticks, or that they have been inspected, in order to sustain a prosecution thereunder. Walker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 186, 222 S. W. 569.

A complaint for violation of the Tick Eradication Law, which alleged that the failure and refusal of defendant occurred within the county, that he was ordered to dip the cattle in the county, and that he then and there owned and controlled the cattle, but did not directly allege that the cattle at the time were situated within the county, is insufficient. Cornelius v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 564.

In a prosecution for violation of the Tick Eradication Law, which can be made effective within a particular county either by a local option election or by proclamation of the Governor, the complaint must allege that the law was in effect in the county by one or the other of those means. Id.

Charge.—In a prosecution for refusing to dip cattle as directed by the Live Stock Sanitary Commission, an instruction that the execution of such an order might be delayed by filing a written protest, but that when such step was not taken, the jury would determine if defendant was ordered to dip his cattle in conformity to law, and, if he unlawfully and willfully failed and refused to comply, did not make his right to defend dependent on the filing of a protest, but was favorable to defendant as tending to guard rather than to impinge his rights. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 513; Lee v. Same (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 515.

Charge instructing the jury that territory where it was alleged that defendant refused or failed to dip his cattle was in the zone quarantined by order of the Live Stock Sanitary Commission as promulgated in Proclamation No. 17 by the Governor, held not erroneous; it being a question of law for the court to determine the effect of the Governor's proclamation not set out in the statement of facts, while, if there was no issue as to the territory covered, he was within his province in directing that the territory where the cattle were situated was within the quarantine zone. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 545.

Where the information charged that defendant's stock had been inspected and found infected with ticks, but did not allege the stock had been exposed to the fever tick within 9 months, special charge, given at the prosecuting attorney's request, authorizing the jury to find defendant guilty if the stock were found to be infected with tick or had been exposed to other cattle infested with ticks, was erroneous, as authorizing conviction for an offense not charged. Id.

Art. 1284l. Removal of animals after notice of quarantine.

Verdict.—The verdict and judgment in a prosecution must be specific and definite, and if it be desired to state in the verdict that the fine fixed as punishment is so many dollars per animal, such verdict must further find affirmatively that accused is guilty of moving a specific number of such animals. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 522.

Art. 1284m. Failure to dip animals in mode required by law.

Validity.—This article is not invalid as prescribing unreasonable and excessive penalties. Page v. Tucker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 584.

The Tick Eradication Law is not invalid on the ground that it prescribes two penalties for the same offense; the offense punished by section 15 (ante, art. 1284k) being refusal to dip cattle after proper notification, while that set out in this article is for failure to use dip of the strength and kind officially prescribed. Gandy v. State, 87 Cr. R. 197, 220 S. W. 339.

OF BURGLARY

1303. "Burglary" defined.	1313. Burglary of private residence at night, distinct offense.
1304. Same.	1314. "Private residence" defined.
1305. "Burglary of private residence" defined.	1315. Burglary with explosives.
1306. "Entry" defined.	1316. Punishment for same.
1307. Further defined.	1317. Other offenses committed after entry punishable.
1308. "Breaking" defined.	1319. Actual breaking necessary in case of domestic.
1309. "House" defined.	1320. Attempt at burglary, how punished.
1312. Punishment for burglary of private residence.

Article 1303. [838] "Burglary" defined.

See Hammons v. State, 29 Tex. App. 445, 16 S. W. 99; Bigham v. State, 31 Cr. R. 244, 20 S. W. 577; Shackelford v. State, 83 Cr. R. 371, 203 S. W. 600.

See Shackelford v. State, 83 Cr. R. 371, 203 S. W. 600; Fitzgerald v. State (Cr. App.) 219 S. W. 1119.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—Act of receiving stolen property some hours after it was taken from house with knowledge that it was stolen would not make recipient principal in burglary, although he could be prosecuted for receiving fruits of crime. Robertson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 378, 195 S. W. 602, 6 A. L. R. 853.

One who by force in the nighttime breaks and enters the house of another with intent to commit a theft therein is guilty of burglary. Sodors v. State, 81 Cr. R. 506, 195 S. W. 1146.

Defendant was not guilty of burglary unless he was one of the parties connected with the entry of the burglarized house either by actual entry or as a principal within the terms of the statute. Cummings v. State, 87 Cr. R. 154, 219 S. W. 1104.

3. Intent.—Defendant was guilty of burglary in unlawfully breaking and entering store or house with intent to steal, though state does not prove he stole anything. Love v. State, 82 Cr. R. 411, 199 S. W. 623.

One accused of burglary was not guilty, if he in good faith believed he had the consent of the owner to enter for the purpose for which he did enter, notwithstanding the owner testified that accused did not have his consent. Parsons v. State, 84 Cr. R. 177, 206 S. W. 196.

Entry into a woman's sleeping apartment by cutting a screen door was burglarious if made for the purpose of rape upon her. Hays v. State, 86 Cr. R. 469, 217 S. W. 938.

Where police officers, believing gambling to be going on behind a closed door attempted to enter, and the hand of one was caught in the door, and was struck at by one inside the door, and he thereupon fired a shot through the door angling towards the floor, there was no burglary; for to constitute "entry" one shooting through a door must intend to commit a felony or theft. Nalls v. State, 87 Cr. R. 83, 219 S. W. 473.

5. Breaking and entry.—The fact that defendant was a domestic servant of the owner of the house burglarized was immaterial, where his service was that of a delivery boy and he had no authority in the house at night. Connor v. State, 85 Cr. R. 98, 210 S. W. 207.

6. Nonconsent.—Where a building and property therein was in the control of G. L., the building belonging to an estate in which G. L. and several others were equally interested, and the property in the building belonging to a corporation, state, in a prosecution for burglary, need not allege or prove that the property was taken without the consent of such other interested persons; indictment having alleged that G. L. was the owner and in possession of both the premises and property, and testimony showing that no one else had anything to do with the management of the property. Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 618, 215 S. W. 97.

Evidence that owner of residence, who died previous to trial of indictment charging attempt to enter private residence with intent to commit theft, was notified by his sister that a man was on the porch trying to pry off a screen from window opposite her room, and that he called the police, is sufficient to show his want of consent. Freeman v. State, 86 Cr. R. 331, 216 S. W. 878.

10. Indictment in general.—The defendant was indicted for "that he did * * * break and enter a house * * * with the intent to commit theft, and did then and there fraudulently take from the house" certain property, from the possession of, and without the consent of, one W., etc., and was found guilty of burglary. Held, that while the indictment does not charge all the elements of the theft he intended to commit, it does charge all the elements of the theft he did commit, and is sufficient to sustain a conviction for burglary. Williams v. State, 24 Tex. App. 69, 5 S. W. 838.

Indictment for burglary of building not a private residence, which alleged that defendant broke and entered, but did not allege whether it was a daytime or nighttime burglary, charged a nighttime burglary, and court correctly tried case on such theory. McNew v. State, 84 Cr. R. 594, 208 S. W. 528.

11. — Allegations as to ownership and occupancy.—When one leaves the state and asks another to look after his house and property, an indictment may allege ownership in the one left to care for the house. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

Where the property of D. and S. was taken from their room, if a burglarious entry was made of said room, it might support a conviction under a count alleging that the burglarized premises belonged to D., and that the property intended to be taken was his. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 580, 218 S. W. 1051.

In prosecution for burglary of a mule barn, averment that the building was under the control of specified person held sufficient as against objection that it should have been alleged to be owned, occupied, and controlled or put under the care, control, and management of such person; "control" and "management" being synonymous, and control meaning to manage, govern, to have authority over, etc. Hasley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 444, 222 S. W. 579.

Where the proof showed that the owner of a store at the time of a burglary was in the hospital and an employee had full control carrying on the business of buying and selling during the owner's absence, possession was in the employee, and possession should have been laid in him. Ratcliff v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 857.

Allegation and proof of ownership of partnership property by either partner is sufficient. McGoldrick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 851.

Though the real ownership of the stolen property is in a corporation, if possession is in an individual, it is sufficient to name him as the owner. Id.

12. — Joinder of counts and election.—Indictment held not duplicitous, as charging both burglary of residence at night and another breaking and entering of house. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

In indictment for burglary, alleging that defendant did "break and enter," "in the daytime and at night," was not duplicitous. Young v. State, 84 Cr. R. 232, 206 S. W. 529.

13. — Proof and variance.—The ordinary burglary indictment will not support a conviction for breaking a private residence, nor will an indictment for breaking a private residence sustain a conviction for any other burglary. Miller v. State, 81 Cr. R. 237, 195 S. W. 192.

Allegation of indictment for burglary that offense was committed April 30th would not preclude state from proving it was on some other date within period of limitation from time indictment was found. Stegall v. State, 82 Cr. R. 117, 198 S. W. 311.

Where defendant was indicted for burglarizing a house with the intent to take the property of H., proof that he took the property of D. and S. therefrom is insufficient. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 580, 218 S. W. 1051.

Where a burglary indictment alleged that defendant entered the building without the owner's consent, and the owner was not a witness, and it was not shown by circumstances that he had not consented to the entry, such error was fatal. Id.

Possession of a house by a discharged soldier occupying it for a few days and sleeping in it at night during absence of his uncle and aunt, the owners, was sufficient to justify allegation of possession in him in a prosecution for burglary of the house. Cummings v. State, 87 Cr. R. 154, 219 S. W. 1104.

Where the proof showed that the owner of a store at the time of a burglary was in the hospital, and an employee had full control, carrying on the business of buying and selling during the owner's absence, possession was in the employee, and both ownership and possession were alleged to be in the owner, there was a variance, for possession should have been laid in the agent. Ratcliff v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 857.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence held not inconsistent with averment of ownership of stolen property. McGoldrick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 851.

Tracks corresponding to those of defendant on trial for burglary may be shown. Ditto v. State, 83 Cr. R. 220, 202 S. W. 735.

Evidence that defendant had in his possession two new tires was admissible as a circumstance against him, although identity of such tires with those obtained in exchange for casings which were the fruits of burglary was not definitely established. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 524, 208 S. W. 924.

In a prosecution for burglary, there was no error in permitting proof that accused was in possession of a rope stolen from an outhouse at the same time the property described in the indictment was taken from the house. Carneal v. State, 86 Cr. R. 274, 216 S. W. 626.

In a prosecution for burglary of a county poor farm, defendant being charged with having stolen hams and sausage meat, testimony of the superintendent of the farm, after examining in the presence of the jury the sausage meat found in defendant's house, that it was his and had every appearance of the sausage meat taken from his meat house, etc., was admissible. Rippey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

In prosecution for burglary of mule barn, involving issue of whether person named in indictment had control, evidence of such person as to who employed and discharged the men who worked on the place held admissible on question of ownership and control of the property taken and the building burglarized. Hasley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 444, 222 S. W. 579.

In a prosecution for burglary committed by defendant and another, testimony of the officers who made the arrest as to finding some of the stolen property in a room where defendant and his companion were found sleeping together on the same cot, some of the stolen property having been found under the cot and some lying on the clothes of defendant and his companion on the floor, was admissible. Garcia v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 938.

State*, 83 Cr. R. 220, 202 S. W. 735; Manuel v. State, 83 Cr. R. 223, 202 S. W. 736; Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 156.

Evidence that a house was burglarized and property taken, and that a short time thereafter accused was found in possession of the stolen goods and pawned them, is sufficient to connect the accused with the burglary. Richardson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 38, 204 S. W. 638; Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 386, 212 S. W. 505; Smith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 355, 212 S. W. 660; Wayland v. State, 86 Cr. R. 522, 218 S. W. 1065.

Evidence that a burglary had been committed and property stolen February 25, and that some of the stolen goods was found April 4 in a house occupied by defendant and his wife and by a man with opportunity equal to that of defendant, and not showing defendant's personal possession or conscious assertion of property, is insufficient to sustain a conviction. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 609, 218 S. W. 1049; Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 580, 218 S. W. 1051.

Defendant's statement that he entered another's house at night, showing an entry through an open door, raised the question that the house may have been open. McInish v. State, 82 Cr. R. 141, 198 S. W. 780.

Evidence held to show defendant was person who broke glass out of store door and entered. Love v. State, 82 Cr. R. 411, 199 S. W. 623.

While tracks corresponding to those of defendant, in connection with other evidence, may be shown, they are not alone sufficient to convict of the offense of burglary. Ditto v. State, 83 Cr. R. 220, 202 S. W. 735.

In prosecution for burglary of crib to steal cotton seed, when guilt depended on identification of such seed, evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 461, 208 S. W. 522.

That a house is shown to have been broken in a burglarious manner, and defendant recently thereafter is found in possession of property identified as coming from the house, is evidence of guilt, though not conclusive, but before conviction can be predicated on such theory, the fact of the burglary must be demonstrated. Davidson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 433, 208 S. W. 664.

In a prosecution for burglary of a store, circumstantial evidence that defendant did not have the owner's consent to enter and take the property held sufficient to support conviction. Meredith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 239, 211 S. W. 227.

In a prosecution for burglary, where the one who broke and entered the premises was not identified, and the only evidence to connect defendant with the offense was his possession of a knife which the owner of the premises identified as having been taken, such evidence will not support a conviction where defendant explained his possession, and the evidence tended to show that the knife was taken from him a few days before the burglary, when he was arrested for fighting. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 386, 212 S. W. 505.

Evidence that defendant was found in a neighboring town in possession of an overcoat exactly similar to one taken from the burglarized store, that he had on no overcoat the afternoon of the burglary, and carried tools and keys in his cap with which entrance to the burglarized store could be effected, that he tried to secretly dispose of articles corresponding with those taken when the overcoat disappeared, held, in the absence of explanation or attempted explanation, sufficient evidence to sustain a verdict of guilty. Smith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 355, 212 S. W. 660.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction of burglary with intent to commit rape, defendant having merely cut his way into the woman's sleeping apartment through a screen door, and, when she awakened, having used no force, despite opportunity. Hays v. State, 86 Cr. R. 469, 217 S. W. 938.

The discovery of pistols and flashlights on premises occupied by defendant and others, and upon which the stolen goods were found, is evidence tending to connect the defendant with the burglary. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 609, 218 S. W. 1049.

In prosecution for entering a garage at night and stealing automobile casings, evidence held insufficient to identify tires found in defendant's possession as those stolen from the garage. Wayland v. State, 86 Cr. R. 522, 218 S. W. 1065.

Where the state relies for a conviction upon the circumstance that accused is found in possession of property recently stolen from burglarized premises, the identity of the property in his possession must be established. Id.

In a prosecution for burglary of a county poor farm, defendant being charged with having stolen certain hams and sausage meat, evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction. Ripsey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

To convict of burglary it is not necessary to show that defendant took all of the property missing from the broken premises. Id.

The unexplained possession of recently stolen property which will authorize a conviction must be exclusive possession by the accused or by an accomplice or coconspirator. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 587, 219 S. W. 835.

Evidence that the burglar was tracked to defendant's house, and that property stolen in previous burglaries was found therein, held insufficient to sustain a conviction of burglary where it appeared that a relative of defendant's wife also lived in the same house. Id.

In a prosecution for burglary, in which defendant claimed to have purchased from a third person the stolen property found in his possession, evidence held insufficient to sustain such defense. Revels v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 689.

Evidence that accused in the nighttime fired into a private residence containing an occupant and accused's declarations at time the shots were fired held to sustain a conviction for burglary by discharging firearms into a dwelling with intent to kill, although accused denied such intent. Felder v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 374.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence consisting of comparison between defendant's tracks made after he was arrested and those found near the burglarized store held sufficient to sustain conviction. Osby v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 322.

Evidence that money taken from house at time of burglary was found on defendant's premises, in an envelope which had been addressed to him, the morning after the crime had been committed, that defendant had been in the vicinity of the premises about the time that the crime was committed, and that he had known that the money was in the house, held sufficient to sustain conviction of burglary. Criswell v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 948.

Evidence that, the morning after a burglary was committed, accused pawned a suit of clothes stolen by the burglars in a town in another state to which he could have gone after the burglary, held sufficient to sustain a conviction of burglary. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 865.

In a prosecution of one as principal in a burglary, evidence held sufficient to identify the property stolen. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 410.

In a prosecution for burglary, a witness' testimony that he was vice president of the concern from which the property was stolen did not show that it was owned by a corporation. McGoldrick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 851.

31. Questions for jury.—Where defendant's intention was to steal when he broke and entered is for jury. Love v. State, 82 Cr. R. 411, 199 S. W. 623.

The sufficiency of the evidence to identify an overcoat found on defendant as having been taken from the burglarized store was one for the jury. Smith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 355, 212 S. W. 660.

32. Instructions in general.—In prosecution for burglary of barn in nighttime, indictment merely charging entry by breaking, trial court did not err in simply telling jury that, if defendant entered by force, he was guilty, omitting to define "breaking." McNew v. State, 84 Cr. R. 594, 208 S. W. 528.

In a prosecution for burglary, where the house was burglarized at night, if at all by defendant, and not in the daytime, the trial court should not submit a count of the indictment charging daylight breaking of a private residence. Cummings v. State, 87 Cr. R. 154, 219 S. W. 1104.

In prosecution for burglary of mule barn, alleged to have been under the control of manager of the plantation, refusal to instruct to acquit defendant if the barn was under the care, control, and management of specified person held proper under evidence that such person was a mere employé under the manager. Hasley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 444, 222 S. W. 579.

Instructions that, if defendant's companion burglarized a residence, and if there was a reasonable doubt whether defendant was not present and did not participate, he should be acquitted, though he afterwards came into possession of some of the stolen property, held to sufficiently present defendant's theory that he did not participate. Hendrix v. State, 87 Cr. R. 482, 222 S. W. 980.

34. — Possession of stolen property and explanation.—In a prosecution for burglary, the trial court should have charged on defendant's theory that he purchased certain of the stolen goods from a witness offered in explanation of his possession. Cummings v. State, 87 Cr. R. 154, 219 S. W. 1104.

Where defendant, when arrested on charge of burglary, was silent as to his possession of the goods, his testimony that later, while in jail, he was asked for money taken, and returned it, and offered to return the clothes, saying they were given to him by his companion, who was there in jail, it was not error to refuse an instruction on reasonable explanation of his possession at first opportunity. Hendrix v. State, 87 Cr. R. 482, 222 S. W. 980.

In prosecution for burglary, in which defendant claimed to have purchased the stolen property which had been found in his possession, instruction as to his explanation of the possession of such property held, not only sufficient, but in favor of defendant, in view of additional charge directly submitting the issue of his account of his possession of the stolen goods. Revels v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 689.

In a prosecution for burglary, court did not err in charging, "if you believe from the evidence in this case beyond a reasonable doubt that stolen property that had been recently taken from said building, if any was found in the defendant's possession, and if you believe that the defendant got the same from M., and if you fail to believe beyond a reasonable doubt the defendant was a principal to the said burglary, if any, as principal is defined in this charge you must find the defendant not guilty." Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 410.

Art. 1305. [839a] "Burglary of private residence" defined.

Offense.—Art. 1307, defining "entry" as used in burglary, is not to be read into arts. 1305, 1312, and 1313, as to burglary of a private residence. Miller v. State, 81 Cr. R. 237, 195 S. W. 192.

— Intent.—Breaking a house for the purpose of engaging in a fist fight or committing a misdemeanor except the crime of theft is not the definition of burglary of a private residence at night. Miller v. State, 81 Cr. R. 237, 195 S. W. 192.

Indictment.—Nighttime burglary of a private residence being a separate offense from other burglaries, an indictment must conform to the definition and charge a private residence burglary at night with a purpose or intent of committing a felony or theft, and shooting into a house to injure it does not charge a felony. Miller v. State, 81 Cr. R. 237, 195 S. W. 192.

The ordinary burglary indictment will not support a conviction for breaking a private residence, nor will an indictment for breaking a private residence sustain a conviction for any other burglary. Id.

Indictment for burglary of residence at night held not defective for using the word "steal," in place of the statutory word "theft," for failing sufficiently to allege intent to steal property of value, for failing to allege that the residence was a building or room, for failing to charge previously formed felonious intent, or for failing to charge that the property accused intended to steal was in the possession of the owner of the residence. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

Proof and variance.—Where indictment alleged burglary of private residence at night, proof was admissible to show that such private residence was a building or a room, in view of art. 1309, defining a house as any building of whatever material. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

Where indictment for burglary of residence at night could in no case have sustained a conviction for any other burglary whatever, and the evidence showed only a burglary of a private residence at night, there was no variance. Id.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence held to sustain conviction of burglary of a private residence at night. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

In prosecution for burglary of residence in nighttime, evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction. Solomon v. State, 83 Cr. R. 319, 203 S. W. 50.

Evidence that accused climbed the porch of a private residence, and while attempting to pry off the screen on a window the occupant of the room opposite screamed and accused ran away, is not sufficient to convict of an attempt to enter a private residence with intent to commit theft. Freeman v. State, 86 Cr. R. 331, 216 S. W. 878.

Art. 1306. [840] "Entry" defined.

Nonconsent.—Evidence that owner of residence, who died previous to trial of indictment charging attempt to enter private residence with intent to commit theft, was notified by his sister that a man was on the porch trying to pry off a screen from window opposite her room, and that he called the police, is sufficient to show his want of consent. Freeman v. State, 86 Cr. R. 331, 216 S. W. 878.

Art. 1307. [841] Further defined.

Construction and operation in general.—This article is not to be read into arts. 1305, 1312, and 1313, as to burglary of a private residence. Miller v. State, 195 S. W. 192.

This article does not create a new offense or change the definition of the offense of burglary, but simply extends the enumeration of the manner of "entry." Nalls v. State, 87 Cr. R. 83, 219 S. W. 473.

Shooting into house.—Shooting at one on the porch of a house in continuance of a fight and wounding him and his wife, who is in the house does not constitute burglary. Hunt v. State, 82 Cr. R. 471, 200 S. W. 151.

To constitute burglary by discharging firearm into a house, there must be a breaking accompanied by an intent to commit a felony. Shackelford v. State, 83 Cr. R. 371, 203 S. W. 600.

Where police officers, believing gambling to be going on behind a closed door, attempted to enter, and the hand of one was caught in the door, and was struck at by one inside the door, and he thereupon fired a shot through the door angling toward the floor, there was no burglary; for to constitute "entry" one shooting through a door must intend to commit a felony or theft. Nalls v. State, 87 Cr. R. 83, 219 S. W. 473.

Proof and variance.—To constitute offense under indictment charging burglary by discharging a firearm into a house with intent to injure S., "then and there being in said house," it must be shown that S. was in house when shot was fired. Shackelford v. State, 83 Cr. R. 371, 203 S. W. 600.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence held sufficient to establish burglarious entry. Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

Art. 1308. [842] "Breaking" defined.

Burglarious breaking.—If defendant entered a barn to steal maize in the nighttime by force applied to the building, as by pushing open a door held shut only by friction, in law this act amounted to a "breaking." McNew v. State, 84 Cr. R. 594, 208 S. W. 528.

Burglary may be committed by entering a room which is closed, although the outer doors of the house are open. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

The use of keys to enter a building is the use of sufficient force as applied to it to constitute burglary. Ripsey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

Where the closed door of the building was forcibly opened to gain entry, force was applied to the building, so that a charge authorizing conviction if defendant entered by force was proper. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 587, 219 S. W. 835.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In a prosecution for burglary, testimony of the owner of the burglarized house that his storehouse was broken into about the 23d of March held sufficient to support the action of the trial court in submitting to the jury the statutory definition of breaking. Osby v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 322.

Charge.—On the trial of a person indicted for burglary, committed by breaking and entry "by force," threats, and fraud at night, it appeared that the doors of the building, and of a room from which an article was stolen, were open, through which defendant entered. Held, that it was error to charge that an entry into a house in the nighttime through an open door, without the consent of the owner and with intent to steal, was a forcible entry, and was burglary. Costello v. State (Cr. App.) 21 S. W. 360.

In a burglary case, court properly refused to give a special charge with reference to whether the doors were open or not, instruction only mentioning "doors of the house," omitting entirely the submission of the question as to whether the "doors of the room, in which the property was stored, were open." Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

Art. 1309. [843] "House" defined.

What constitutes "house."—A sheriff's office is a "house," and hence an indictment which charges defendant with breaking into the sheriff's office, and also into a vault therein, is sufficient, though it does not use the precise language of the statute, and allege the sheriff's office to be a house. Bigham v. State, 31 Cr. R. 244, 20 S. W. 577.

Where indictment alleged burglary of private residence at night, proof was admissible to show that such private residence was a building or a room. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

A stockroom situated on the sixth floor of a building, used and occupied by a dry goods company, walls of which were made of wire and beaver board, was a "house" within the meaning of the burglary statute. Douglas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 536.

Charge.—Where, in a burglary case, the undisputed evidence shows that the structure burglarized came within the term "house," as defined, it is not error to charge that it was a house. Willis v. State, 33 Cr. R. 168, 25 S. W. 1119.

Art. 1312. [845a] Punishment for burglary of a private residence.

See Miller v. State, 81 Cr. R. 237, 195 S. W. 192.

Art. 1313. [845b] Burglary of private residence at night distinct offense.

See Miller v. State, 81 Cr. R. 237, 195 S. W. 192.

In general.—Under arts. 1303, 1304, 1305, 1312, and 1313, held, that the ordinary burglary indictment will not support a conviction for breaking a private residence, nor will an indictment for breaking a private residence sustain a conviction for any other burglary. Miller v. State, 81 Cr. R. 237, 195 S. W. 192.

Art. 1314. [845c] "Private residence" defined.

Residence.—A kitchen about 16 feet from bedrooms which were used by the family and connected therewith by plank walk, used both as a kitchen and dining room, must be deemed a part of a private residence. Hornbuckle v. State, 86 Cr. R. 352, 216 S. W. 880.

Occupancy.—Where owner left his dwelling closed up and went to a distant state, leaving his household goods stored in one room of his house, his stock in the pasture, feed in the crib, etc., the house was "occupied" within the meaning of the burglary statute; the actual corporeal presence of the alleged occupant not being necessary. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

It is not necessary that there should be some one actually living in the house in order to constitute "occupancy." Carneal v. State, 86 Cr. R. 274, 216 S. W. 626.

Indictment.—Indictment for burglary of residence at night, held not defective for failure to allege that the residence was a building or room. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

Art. 1315. Burglary with explosives.

Indictment and variance.—Where an indictment charged the use of nitroglycerine, dynamite, or gunpowder, the averment of means was descriptive, and it was essential that the state prove the use of one of the named explosives. Jolly v. State, 87 Cr. R. 288, 221 S. W. 279.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Circumstantial evidence raising suspicions against accused, but establishing no facts which could not be explained in a manner consistent with his innocence, held insufficient to sustain a conviction of burglary with the use of explosives. Jolly v. State, 87 Cr. R. 288, 221 S. W. 279.

In a prosecution for burglary with the use of nitroglycerine, dynamite, or gunpowder, evidence that the sound was such as might have been made by dynamite, and that a fuse with which dynamite could be exploded was found near the scene, held insufficient to show the means by which the offense was committed. Id.

Separate offenses and former jeopardy.—Burglary and theft committed by one person in the same transaction can be punished as separate offenses. Rust v. State, 31 Cr. R. 75, 19 S. W. 763.

A conviction of a theft alleged to have been committed at the time of a burglary is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the burglary. Loakman v. State, 32 Cr. R. 563, 25 S. W. 22.

Art. 1319. [848] Actual breaking necessary in case of domestic.

Domestic servant or inhabitant.—One whose duties do not entitle or require of him free access to the house, or room which he burglarized is not a domestic servant or inhabitant of such house or room. Douglas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 536.

A house porter whose work lies within a building or part of a building is a domestic servant of the building or part thereof. Id.

Charge.—In a prosecution of a janitor for burglary of a stockroom, evidence held insufficient to raise the issue of domestic servant, upon which a special charge was requested by defendant. Douglas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 536.

Art. 1320. [849] Attempt at burglary; how punished.

Offense.—Under an indictment charging an attempt to enter a private residence with intent to commit the crime of theft, both allegation and proof of intent as to theft are necessary. Freeman v. State, 86 Cr. R. 331, 216 S. W. 878.

Article 1327. [856] "Robbery" defined and punished.

1. Nature and elements of offense.—"Putting in fear," to support a conviction of robbery, must be sustained by evidence of acts or conduct or words or circumstances reasonably calculated to effect that result. Easley v. State, 82 Cr. R. 238, 199 S. W. 476.

Though one who plays at a gambling game, and loses money under the rules of the game, and surrenders it to his adversary, may be guilty of robbery, when he regains the money by force, yet if he was induced to part with his money through deceit and fraud, he would not be guilty, as one obtaining personal property by false pretenses is guilty of theft under article 1332. Temple v. State, 86 Cr. R. 219, 215 S. W. 965.

Where the demonstrator of an automobile was induced by trick to leave it and enter a house, where he was threatened with a pistol and bound, and the prospective purchasers then took the car, the demonstrator retained "possession," until the others took actual possession of it so that they obtained possession by force, and not by trick. Clark v. State, 87 Cr. R. 107, 220 S. W. 100.

The acquisition of the property without force by a trick is not robbery. Id.

Where indictment contains both robbery by assault and use of deadly weapons, that part, charging the use of deadly weapons, which merely enhances the punishment, is not essential; and it is within the power of the state to abandon that phase, and prosecute on the other. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

The crime of robbery by assault is a felony, but not capital, but becomes capital when deadly weapons are used. Id.

Where defendant, who was armed with a pistol, by threats forced the custodian of bank funds to open the vault, the fact of the custodian's consent does not change the offense from robbery. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

An acting together in the robbery of several persons makes all the participants guilty, without proof of any particular agreement directed at one of the injured parties. Searcy v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 799.

2. Distinguished from theft.—The animus furandi is an element of robbery as it is of theft, and both in theft and robbery the taking of goods upon a bona fide claim of right may negative any intent to steal. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 317.

7. Indictment.—Indictment held not duplicitous because charging that property was taken by assault, violence, and putting in fear, and also by using and exhibiting a pistol. Lay v. State, 82 Cr. R. 202, 198 S. W. 291.

An indictment for robbery alleging defendant assaulted another by exhibiting a firearm, etc., is not objectionable as duplicitous, for the robbery statute does not denounce two offenses, and an indictment may properly refer to the exhibition of a firearm as aggravation. Crouch v. State, 87 Cr. R. 115, 219 S. W. 1099.

An indictment charging that defendants "did then and there unlawfully in and upon A. make an assault, and then and there by said ———, fraudulently and against the will of the said A., take from the person," etc., was insufficient to charge robbery, since it omitted the allegation that defendants took the property by means of an assault. Shoemaker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 518.

8. — Proof and variance.—The rules with reference to the allegation and proof of ownership in the offense of robbery are not more restrictive than those pertaining to the offense of theft. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

10. Admissibility of evidence in general.—In a robbery prosecution, if there was any fact relevant to the question of how the stolen watch came to be in defendant's house where it was found, which had defensive weight, defendant could offer it in evidence. Fitzgerald v. State, 87 Cr. R. 34, 219 S. W. 199.

In a robbery prosecution it was proper to receive evidence that the watch stolen was found in a house occupied by defendant, the weight of such testimony being for the jury, and it was immaterial from what source the officers learned the whereabouts of the watch. Id.

In prosecution for robbery, evidence held insufficient to show assault or violence. Easley v. State, 82 Cr. R. 238, 199 S. W. 476.

In a prosecution for robbery by use of firearms, evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Beard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 205, 220 S. W. 342.

In prosecution for robbery where defendant claimed an alibi, the testimony of prosecuting witness and evidence as to similarity of tracks with defendant's footprints held sufficient proof of identification to sustain conviction. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 415.

The exactness with which footprints made by defendant's shoes correspond to peculiar foot prints leading from place of robbery is high character of evidence of identification. Id.

In a prosecution for bank robbery, where a bank employee was named as owner, evidence held to establish that he had a special property, being custodian of the funds. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

Evidence held to warrant a conviction of robbery by putting in fear of life or bodily injury, notwithstanding defendant, who with his confederate was masked, did not display firearms, or in any wise injure the party robbed. Horn v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 693.

15. Charge of court.—Failure to instruct as to defense, if defendant was induced to part with his money and place it under the control of his adversary in a gambling game through deceit and fraud, he would not be guilty of robbery in regaining possession, was error. Temple v. State, 86 Cr. R. 219, 215 S. W. 965.

In a prosecution for robbery, where the indictment laid ownership in one having custody of the property, the failure to submit the question of ownership held not error; the undisputed evidence establishing the same. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

Where defendant, who was armed with a pistol, by threats forced the custodian of bank funds to open the vault, the fact of the custodian's consent does not change the offense from robbery, and a charge on lesser degrees is unnecessary. Id.

In a prosecution for robbery, where the court told the jury that they must find that defendant, who admitted taking property from prosecuting witness, put him in fear of life or bodily injury, and if they had a reasonable doubt they should acquit, the refusal of requested charge that, if defendant took the property, but did not put the witness in fear of life or bodily injury, they should acquit, held proper; the issue not being raised by the evidence. Horn v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 693.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—Neither asportation nor actual manual possession is necessary to constitute the crime of theft. Harris v. State, 29 Tex. App. 101, 14 S. W. 390, 25 Am. St. Rep. 717.

If defendant received stolen horse, but was not present when it was stolen, and did not participate in original taking, he was not guilty of larceny merely because a receiver. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

Mere receipt of property, knowing it to have been stolen, does not constitute larceny. Rosalez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 134, 206 S. W. 95.

There may be two separate and distinct unlawful takings of property, so as to make two separate offenses. Gardner v. State, 84 Cr. R. 586, 208 S. W. 920.

Where accused instructed by telephone an innocent agent to sell for him prosecutor's wagon, the offense was theft, though accused was not bodily present when it was sold. Berdell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 310, 220 S. W. 1101.

5. Possession and ownership and want of consent.—Defendant was not guilty of larceny of cattle from father and son unless taking was without consent of father as well as of son. Gomez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 92, 206 S. W. 86.

Where cotton was stolen by defendant from the owner's premises in his temporary absence, such absence did not change the ownership and control of the stolen property, so as to justify a directed verdict on the ground that the property was not taken from the owner's possession. Watkins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 412, 207 S. W. 926.

If defendant, at the time of the commission of his claimed offense of stealing timber, taken from a barn leased to him, had the care, control, and management of the barn from which the timbers were charged to have been taken, conviction could not result. Fleischman v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 397.

7. Intent.—In a prosecution for cattle theft, it was error to refuse to charge that, if defendant believed himself or a member of his family the owner, they should acquit. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

The only intentions of the taker of property as to the property which are material are those in his mind when the property came into his possession. Hartman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 582, 213 S. W. 936.

9. Compared with and distinguished from other offenses.—Where an employé of one having custody of property belonging to a railroad took and removed freight, possession of which he had by reason of his employment, held that the offense was theft, and not embezzlement. Bonatz v. State, 85 Cr. R. 292, 212 S. W. 494.

The taking of goods by errand boy from employer's store at a time when he was not delivering such goods to customers was theft, and not embezzlement, the boy having no care, control, or custody of the goods at such time. Hoyt v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 936.

14. Indictment, complaint and information—In general.—Under an indictment in ordinary form for theft of horses a conviction will lie for "fraudulently driving from its accustomed range live-stock not his own." Foster v. State, 21 Tex. App. 80, 17 S. W. 548.

In prosecution for automobile theft in which defendant was charged as a principal only, he could not be convicted of the offense of receiving and concealing stolen property. Seebold v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 328.

18. Intent.—Taking with intent to appropriate to use or benefit of taker being an essential element of theft, and such intent therefore being required by Code Cr. Proc. art. 454, to be stated in the indictment, it not doing so, but stating that taking was with intent to appropriate to use and benefit of the owner, was bad. Arocha v. State, 86 Cr. R. 656, 218 S. W. 759.

19. Asportation and fraudulent taking.—Information for misdemeanor theft alleging that defendant "did unlawfully take, steal, and carry away," etc., did not use language supplying the omission of the word "fraudulently." Phillips v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 400.

Complaint and information charging misdemeanor theft without alleging that the property charged to have been stolen was "fraudulently" taken was defective in substance, and such defect may be raised by motion in arrest of judgment or in the Court of Criminal Appeals for the first time. Id.

20. — Ownership and possession and want of consent.—Brother of owner of property who obtained it for purpose of sending it to the owner held at least a special owner, so that indictment for theft properly alleged his ownership. Ward v. State, 32 Cr. R. 133, 197 S. W. 1102.

Where indictment for larceny alleged ownership in railroad station agent, no conviction could be had without proof either that he owned it or had possession and control as agent of the railroad. Butler v. State, 83 Cr. R. 354, 203 S. W. 597.

Where an indictment for the theft of one head of cattle alleged ownership in a certain person, it was necessary to prove such allegation. Gomez v. State, 83 Cr. R. 599, 204 S. W. 638.

In prosecution for theft of cattle from two owners, defendant was not entitled to acquittal because proof showed owners owned property as a partnership and not as individuals only. Gomez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 92, 206 S. W. 86.

Where the property stolen is community property and the spouses are living together, the ownership is properly laid in the husband. Greenwood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 548, 208 S. W. 662.

Where the owner of an automobile sold it and received a check in payment but was to keep the car until the purchaser could call and get it and it was stolen while in the possession of the original owner, the ownership, so far as the prosecution for larceny was concerned was properly alleged to be in the original owner; he having the control, care and management of the property. Torrence v. State, 85 Cr. R. 310, 212 S. W. 957.

In larceny prosecutions, while ownership may be generally alleged to be in the general or special owner, under the statute ownership must be alleged to be in the party who has the actual control, care, and management of the property, and it is not sufficient to allege ownership only in the real owner, although an allegation that possession is in the real owner does not detract from the indictment. Id.

In prosecution for theft, complaint failing to allege from whose possession the alleged stolen property was taken held fatally defective. Taylor v. State, 86 Cr. R. 463, 217 S. W. 937.

Where a mother sent a watch to her son by parcels post, and the package reached the son's office in bad condition, with wrapper broken, so that the mail carrier who brought it was told claim would be made if anything was missing, and thereafter the watch in a small box was found by the janitor of the building in front of the elevator on the floor on which the son had his office, at the time of the finding of the watch by the janitor, its care was in the mail carrier, with whom it would remain until delivery, and in prosecution of the janitor for larceny of the watch, ownership thereof should have been alleged in such carrier in the alternative with the son. Holland v. State, 87 Cr. R. 89, 219 S. W. 458.

If the name of true owner of a hog stolen while on the range or commons be not known to the grand jury and cannot be ascertained by them, it is proper to allege ownership and possession in an unknown owner. Griffin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 194, 220 S. W. 330.

20½. — Proof and variance.—In prosecution for theft of junk brass from railroad, proof of identity of property, found in possession of junk dealer and claimed to have been received from defendant, was necessary. Kellum v. State, 82 Cr. R. 635, 200 S. W. 343.

That name of owner of stolen calf was J. L. P. and not J. R. P., as alleged, was not material variance. Phillips v. State, 83 Cr. R. 16, 200 S. W. 1091.

Where the property stolen is community property and the spouses are living together, the ownership is properly laid in the husband, and evidence establishing it as community property makes no fatal variance. Greenwood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 548, 208 S. W. 662.

Where, according to the evidence, S., the owner of cattle stolen, placed them in the pasture of H., controlled by one T., who looked after the place, and to both of whom, under Rev. St. art. 5664, rent was due from S. under their pasturer's lien, and ownership was alleged to be in S., there was a variance, and the indictment should have alleged ownership in T., or real ownership in S. and special ownership in T. Rabe v. State, 85 Cr. R. 373, 212 S. W. 502.

There is fatal variance between a larceny indictment alleging that stolen cotton was in possession of a landlord and proof that tenant had possession and control of cotton under agreement that one-half net proceeds from its sale belonged to landlord as rental. Bergfeld v. State, 85 Cr. R. 489, 213 S. W. 986.

There is fatal variance between a larceny indictment alleging that stolen cotton was owned and in possession of a landlord and proof that tenant had possession and control of cotton under agreement that one-half net proceeds from its sale belonged to landlord as rental. Id.

No matter what amount of other property accused may be shown to have stolen at the time and place alleged, such proof will not support a conviction for theft, unless it also appears that the property described in the indictment was stolen. Garratt v. State, 87 Cr. R. 12, 218 S. W. 1064.

In prosecution for theft of property from ranch, where allegation of ownership was laid in person in whose care, control, and management the property had been left by the real owner, it was unnecessary, in order to sustain case, to show want of consent and knowledge of the real owner. Narango v. State, 87 Cr. R. 493, 222 S. W. 564.

There is no variance between allegations that defendant stole diamonds and proof that the diamonds taken by him were set in rings. Mathason v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 548.

In a prosecution for the larceny of an automobile, evidence that defendant, while in custody under a charge in the county court for taking the car broke jail and fled, was admissible in the district court; the cases not being separate or distinct, but involving the same act and the same facts. Torrence v. State, 85 Cr. R. 310, 212 S. W. 957.

In a trial on a charge of the theft of casing from an abandoned oil well alleged to have been taken and sold by defendant, wherein he denied any guilty connection with the matter and offered evidence of an alibi, checks given for the payment of the casing in the profits of which defendant shared were admissible. Davis v. State, 87 Cr. R. 425, 222 S. W. 236.

Testimony as to the ease with which the parts of a certain make of automobile could be detached and that witness was positive that a part in defendant's possession was on witness' car when stolen, was admissible. Berry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 559, 223 S. W. 212.

In a prosecution for larceny of an automobile, evidence that when the car was found in possession of accused stencils adapted to change the number of the car were also found in it was admissible, whether the stencils were left in the car by the original owner or were placed therein by accused. Godby v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 516.

In a prosecution for theft of an automobile parked on a street, testimony of the owner that it was his custom to park his car at the place from which it was stolen was relevant, as a circumstance bearing on the merits of the case. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 160.

In a prosecution for larceny of wheat, the owner of the wheat can show quantity which he sent to an elevator, where he did not remember the number of bushels, by stating the amount of money he received for the wheat and the price per bushel, since the jury could determine the quantity of wheat from such evidence by a mathematical computation. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 784.

In a prosecution for the theft of a hog, evidence as to how long defendant had lived at the place in question, and how many hogs he had brought into the country, and how many hoggens he had built, held not inadmissible, since hoggens are not contraband or suspicious property ordinarily. Stone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 818.

25. — Burden of proof.—Where stolen goods are found in possession of accused, who explains that he has gotten them from another, state has burden of disproving truth of his explanation. Solomon v. State, 83 Cr. R. 319, 203 S. W. 50.

Where defendant's explanation of possession of stolen automobile contained no contradiction or weaknesses which of themselves would destroy it, the state had the burden of proving that the explanation was unreasonable or untrue. Knott v. State, 87 Cr. R. 117, 219 S. W. 825.

In prosecution for theft of automobile, the state was required to prove that the car which had been proved to have been in defendant's possession was the one claimed to have been stolen. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 775.

26. — Intent.—Where servant was directed to kill one head of cattle belonging to his master, evidence that he made a mistake, and killed an animal belonging to another, would not show fraudulent intent; the color of animal directed to be killed and that killed being about the same. Reimer v. State, 84 Cr. R. 142, 206 S. W. 91.

29. — Identity of property.—Testimony as to the number of an automobile bought by the witness the morning following the theft, and which was the number of the stolen machine, was admissible to show the identity of the car. Hamilton v. State, 82 Cr. R. 544, 200 S. W. 155.

Testimony as to finding papers along road where stolen automobile was driven which were identified, claimed, and delivered to the owner held admissible to identify car. Id.

Testimony that witness was positive that a part in defendant's possession was on witness' car when stolen was admissible. Berry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 559, 223 S. W. 212.

Testimony that the numbers on the engines of certain automobiles ran serially, and that a book of such numbers for several years was authentic, and evidence of certain numbers of certain years' make, corroborating the testimony, was admissible. Id.

Testimony to the number on the engine of an alleged stolen automobile, that it had been tampered with and bore a number much higher than any put out by the maker of that kind of automobiles, was admissible. Id.

32. — Want of owner's consent.—In prosecution for theft of cattle from father and son, father being dead at time of trial, his want of consent to taking could be proved by circumstantial evidence. Gomez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 92, 206 S. W. 36.

Where the owner of alleged stolen property is present and testified before the jury, and fails to give direct and positive testimony as to want of consent to the taking of the property, such want of consent will not be inferred from other circumstances in evidence. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 775.

33. — Possession of stolen property.—Proof that accused was in possession of property at any time after it was stolen may be considered by jury on question of his guilt. Pritchard v. State, 82 Cr. R. 219, 199 S. W. 292.

Possession of recently stolen property is but a circumstance, and involves a charge on the law of circumstantial evidence. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

Where the stolen automobile was dismantled after being taken, a jack and bolt shears and automobile parts found in defendant's possession were properly introduced to show fraud in taking and in dismantling the car, and to identify it, though the jack and shears and some of the parts were not identified by the owner as his property. Clay v. State, 85 Cr. R. 128, 210 S. W. 968.

In a prosecution for theft from a millinery store burglarized by defendant, testimony of the owner of the store that she saw a stolen dress on defendant's wife, or mistress, held admissible. Brown v. State, 86 Cr. R. 8, 215 S. W. 323.

To constitute legal possession of stolen property, so as to give rise to an inference of guilt, the property need not be in the hands, house, or premises of the alleged possessor, who may have the same secreted on another person's premises, or out on the commons, and nevertheless be in actual care, control, and management, in which case he is legal possessor. Marable v. State, 87 Cr. R. 28, 219 S. W. 455.

Where stolen groceries were taken from a crib two or three miles from defendant's house, by a person who bought from defendant, after being shown the way and the place by a negro boy, the facts were sufficient to charge defendant with possession of the property after it was stolen, to give rise to an inference of guilt against him. Id.

From the recent possession of a part of the stolen property, theft of the whole may be inferred and a conviction sustained. Perry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 559, 223 S. W. 212.

Where H., guest in a hotel, missed some money from his room after defendant, a bell boy, and a woman had left it, the delivery of the money to H. by the woman, on defendant conducting him to her room, is admissible on prosecution for the theft. Tillman v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 165.

In a prosecution for theft, possession of the stolen property to give rise to an inference of guilt must not only be shown to have been recent and unexplained, but also personal and exclusive in the party or parties sought to be charged; discovery of the property in the presence of a group of people one of whom is defendant, unaccompanied by evidence of an acting together, thus of guilt, as a principal or accomplice on the one hand, or of evidence satisfactorily fixing possession in defendant, does not support a conviction for theft as to any one of such persons. Frazier v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 324.

Proof that stolen tools were on premises belonging to and under control of the father of one accused of theft and receiving stolen goods, in an outhouse with other tools, would not justify an inference of guilt on the part of the accused, in the absence of any assertion of ownership by the accused. Lemon v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 388.

Evidence that the stolen calves had been pastured in the county in which the prosecution was instituted and had disappeared therefrom and had been traced to defendant's possession in another county is sufficient to sustain a conviction for theft in the county in which the prosecution was begun, though there was no direct evidence of a taking in that county. Stiles v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 805.

In a prosecution for the theft of a pig, where the pig in question and another were brought to defendant's premises at the same time, on the claim of right and good faith, and he let two different parties have the pigs, because they claimed them, although still claiming them as his own, testimony that he voluntarily gave up the pigs to these parties held not erroneously admitted. Stone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 818.

34. — Explanation of possession.—Granting that the fact that, in anticipation of an inspection, defendant caused goats, not belonging to him, to be taken out of his herd and placed in another pasture, constituted proof of possession of recently stolen property, which unexplained might, with other evidence, justify inference of theft, such inference was met by proof that goats came into defendant's possession through instrumentality of others who stole them. Gardner v. State, 84 Cr. R. 586, 208 S. W. 920.

Where defendant's possession of stolen goats was fully explained by the state in a manner which showed that he was not present at their taking and took no part in the actual theft, his theft could not be inferred from possession. Id.

In a prosecution for theft of an automobile, where the state proved sale by defendant of a car alleged to have been the one stolen, but offered in evidence a licensee of the car sold which showed a sale of that car to defendant by the licensee, such licensee raised the issue of explanation of the possession of stolen property and entitled defendant to a charge thereon. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

35. — Sufficiency to convict.—Circumstances held to justify finding that the killing of a cow had the requisite elements of the crime of theft as defined by this article and art. 1331. Gold v. State, 81 Cr. R. 611, 197 S. W. 1110.

Evidence held sufficient to support a finding that the carcass of a cow found was the one alleged to have been stolen by defendant. Id.

On a trial for the theft of an automobile, evidence held sufficient to establish defendant's guilt. Hamilton v. State, 82 Cr. R. 544, 200 S. W. 155.

Evidence held to sustain conviction of horse theft. Thomas v. State, 82 Cr. R. 656, 200 S. W. 522.

Evidence held sufficient to show that defendant and his accomplice actually stole car, and that defendant was a principal with his accomplice, even if latter himself personally did the stealing. Smith v. State, 83 Cr. R. 485, 203 S. W. 771.

Evidence held to show that ownership of stolen automobile was as alleged, and was not in the keeper of wagon yard where the automobile was temporarily stored, so as to warrant conviction of larceny. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 282, 203 S. W. 773.

Circumstantial evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction of theft of one claiming to have been given the articles by another to sell. Jones v. State, 83 Cr. R. 444, 203 S. W. 1101.

In a prosecution for theft of 20 goats, evidence held to sustain conviction. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

In prosecution for theft of 200 pounds of cotton by the owner's employé, evidence held sufficient to show that defendant stole the cotton with intent to deprive the owner of its value and to appropriate it to his own use and benefit. Watkins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 412, 207 S. W. 926.

Evidence held to support verdict of guilty in cattle theft prosecution. Mueller v. State, 85 Cr. R. 346, 215 S. W. 93.

Evidence held sufficient to support defendant's conviction of theft of lard and sugar from a wholesale grocery store. Marable v. State, 87 Cr. R. 28, 219 S. W. 455.

Evidence that prosecutor's wagon was left in an alley behind defendant's hotel, that defendant instructed another to sell it for him and knew that the proceeds of the sale had been applied to his benefit, and that three days thereafter prosecutor discovered his wagon was gone and defendant admitted that he had sold it, is sufficient to prove a taking of the wagon. Berdell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 310, 220 S. W. 1101.

In a prosecution for theft of property over the value of $50, evidence held to warrant the jury in concluding that defendant was the person who took the property, notwithstanding defendant's explanation of his possession of the stolen goods. Alarcan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 458, 222 S. W. 982.

36. — Insufficiency to convict.—Evidence held not to sustain conviction for hog theft. Dowdell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 472, 213 S. W. 649; Strickland v. State, 81 Cr. R. 643, 197 S. W. 1104; Rosalez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 134, 206 S. W. 95.

On a trial for hog theft, evidence indicating that defendant took possession of the hog to protect his crop held insufficient to show a fraudulent taking, even if sufficient to show that he subsequently killed the hog. Brooks v. State, 82 Cr. R. 242, 199 S. W. 472.

In prosecution for hog stealing, evidence held insufficient to establish accused's possession of ham alleged to have been from the stolen hog. Rosalez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 134, 206 S. W. 95.

Evidence, in a prosecution for the theft of a hat alleged to have been in possession of a milliner and sold to a third party who left it in the store, held not to show ownership in the milliner either general or specific so as to support a conviction. Isaac v. State, 84 Cr. R. 192, 206 S. W. 346.

Evidence, in a prosecution for the theft of a hat, held not sufficient to sustain a conviction. Id.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction for theft of a hog, the showing of defendant's possession of the stolen animal being not such as to justify inference of guilty. Frazier v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 324.

In a prosecution for stealing a hog which had been placed in possession of a third person for breeding purposes, circumstantial evidence, tending to show that a hog of similar description to that stolen had been seen in defendant's possession, held insufficient to sustain a conviction. McGowan v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 323.

Evidence that defendant was one of several drivers hauling wheat for prosecuting witness, and that he disposed of a load of wheat for his own account under suspicious circumstances, but which did not show clearly that the owner's wheat was short or that any shortage could have been caused only by theft, held insufficient to sustain a conviction for theft of the wheat. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 784.

37. Questions for jury.—Question of intent, being raised by the evidence in larceny, should be submitted, notwithstanding defendant's drunkenness. Riddick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 291, 202 S. W. 947.

In prosecution for stealing one head of cattle belonging to unknown owner, defense being that defendant killed the animal under the authority and for the benefit of his master, evidence held insufficient to warrant submission of question of defendant's guilt. Reimer v. State, 84 Cr. R. 142, 206 S. W. 91.

Possession of recently stolen property is but a circumstance, and calls for a charge with reference to explanation of possession. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

In a prosecution for larceny from the owner, evidence that defendant, when stolen cotton was found in his possession, stated that he had bought it, and later that he took it thinking it would be all right with the owner, and that he intended to pay for it, justified an instruction on explanation of possession of property recently stolen. Watkins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 412, 207 S. W. 926.

In prosecution for theft of cow claimed by defendant as his own, where only issue was ownership, defendant was entitled to charge submitting that issue unincumbered with a charge on explanation of possession of property recently stolen. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 504, 208 S. W. 339.

To authorize charge on possession of recently stolen property and consequent explanation, it must appear that property was stolen and recently found in possession of defendant, who gave explanation sufficient, if believed, to disconnect him with the crime; but the question does not arise when the issue is one of title claimed by defendant. Id.

In a prosecution for misdemeanor theft, an instruction on the law relating to the possession of property recently stolen held proper and not prejudicial to defendant. Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, it was error to refuse to charge that if jury believed the animal stolen to be the property of defendant, or one of his family, or there was reasonable doubt of it, or if defendant believed himself or a member of his family the owner, they should acquit. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

Charge held sufficient presentation of issues in a prosecution for theft of an automobile. Clay v. State, 85 Cr. R. 128, 210 S. W. 968.

Where there was no evidence that defendant made any explanation of his possession of recently stolen property, but he testified on the trial that part of it belonged to himself, a charge on the theory of explanation of possession of recently stolen property was not called for, but the defense appearing from the testimony should have been pertinently submitted. Garrett v. State, 87 Cr. R. 12, 218 S. W. 1064.

Care, control, and management are not necessarily exclusive in one person, but may be joined in several, within the comprehension of the law of theft; and, unless the evidence raises the issue of exclusive care, control, and management in some person other than the one named as the owner in the indictment, it is not necessary to present such issue to the jury. Hasley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 444, 222 S. W. 579.

In a prosecution for theft of an automobile, evidence held not to render it incumbent upon the court to charge the jury in an affirmative way that an absence of intent on the part of the accused at the time he took the car to appropriate it to his own use would require an acquittal. Escobedo v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 377.

In a prosecution for stealing a hog which had been left in the care of a third person, it was error to refuse to instruct that, unless the hog taken by defendant belonged to the alleged owner, an acquittal must result, although the jury might believe that the owner had lost a hog of the same description. McGowan v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 323.

In a prosecution for theft of an automobile, where the state proved the theft of a car and the sale a few days later by defendant of a car of the same make, but the prosecuting witness had not seen the car sold so that he could not identify it as his own, it was error to refuse a requested instruction to acquit unless the jury believed that the automobile sold by defendant was the one which had belonged to prosecuting witness. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

In prosecution for automobile theft, instruction on the law relating to explanation of possession of recently stolen property held sufficient. Seebold v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 328.

In a prosecution for theft of cattle, where the evidence showed the stolen cattle had been in defendant's possession, but he denied the taking and claimed to have purchased them from another, he was entitled to a charge requested by him that the offense of receiving stolen goods was a distinct offense from the theft of the goods, and that he could not be convicted of receiving where the indictment charged only the theft. Stiles v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 805.

Art. 1330. [859] Property must have some value.

Cited, Shaw v. State, 23 Tex. App. 493, 5 S. W. 317.

Value of property.—Defendant, if going with others to an abandoned oil well and taking therefrom certain casing of the value of over $50 and selling it, would be guilty of theft. Davis v. State, 87 Cr. R. 425, 222 S. W. 236.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for misdemeanor theft, evidence held sufficient to show that the quilt top stolen had a value. Thomas v. State, 85 Cr. R. 246, 211 S. W. 453.

Art. 1331. [860] Asportation not necessary.

Construction and operation in general.—Under art. 1259a, which originally made it a misdemeanor to steal, take, drive, or operate any vehicle, but which after it was construed by the court as making larceny of an automobile misdemeanor regardless of its value in view of article 1344 was amended in 1915 so as to omit the word "steal" therefrom, the word "take" in the amended act is not, in view of the evident purpose of the Legislature in making the amendment, to be given the same meaning as "steal," notwithstanding this article. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

Taking and asportation.—Any taking of property without the owner's consent and with the present intent to deprive the owner of its value and to appropriate the same by the taker is "theft"; and asportation is not necessary to make out the offense. Hartman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 582, 213 S. W. 936.

Where an automobile was temporarily left in the garage while the owner was about his business in the vicinity, a claim of ownership and possession thereof by another person was a taking of the automobile rendering such person guilty of theft. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1105.

Evidence.—Circumstances held to justify finding that the killing of a cow had the requisite elements of the crime of theft as defined by P. C. art. 1329, and this article. Gold v. State, 81 Cr. R. 611, 197 S. W. 1110.

Art. 1332. [861] The "taking" must be wrongful.

See Taylor v. State, 32 Cr. R. 110, 22 S. W. 148; Temple v. State, 86 Cr. R. 219, 215 S. W. 965.

1. Offense under this article in general.—If defendant obtained possession of horse, he is charged with having stolen, with consent of owner, there was no theft. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, that defendant's wife took the animal stolen and put it in their inclosure in defendant's absence, and without his consent, does not constitute him an original taker, notwithstanding he subsequently sold the animal, believing himself or a member of his family to be the owner. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

In prosecution for theft of an automobile casing from a garage, in which defendant claimed that he took the casing in absence of the owner, but in the presence and with the consent of a watchman in charge, and with intent to pay for the same, and did thereafter so offer to pay, it was error to refuse to charge that, if defendant entered the garage and took the casing with the consent of one in charge, and without fraudulent intent, he was not guilty. Beach v. State, 85 Cr. R. 64, 210 S. W. 540.

If accused took the alleged stolen horse for his temporary use only, intending to return it, he would not be guilty of theft. Hartman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 582, 213 S. W. 936.

Proof of an appropriation and that possession of the alleged stolen property was obtained with the owner's consent either by false pretext or with a present intent to appropriate it will authorize a conviction. Gibson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 462, 214 S. W. 341.

In prosecution for felony theft, by false pretext, in that defendant had found a pocketbook and wanted money to make change so that contents could be equally divided between himself and another and prosecuting witness, thereby inducing his surrender of money, the fact that he was to share in contents was no defense. Id.

The acquisition of the possession of property by false pretext is "theft," if done with the intention to appropriate, followed by an appropriation. Gordon v. State, 85 Cr. R. 641, 214 S. W. 980.

Where a person got a pistol from his sister, she delivering it to him with the request that he dispose of it, giving as a reason that she did not want it about the place, he was not guilty of theft; the sister not telling him that it belonged to her husband. Adams v. State, 85 Cr. R. 648, 215 S. W. 301.

In a prosecution for theft of cotton claimed by defendant to have been purchased by him, though he did not pay the price, the question in the case was what was defendant's intent when he appropriated the cotton. Mills v. State, 87 Cr. R. 655, 224 S. W. 780.

3. Offense distinguished from swindling or embezzlement.—The rule in swindling cases that the false representation must be as to something present or past has no application in a case where the charge is theft by false pretext. Gibson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 462, 214 S. W. 341.

The distinction between swindling and theft by false pretext under this article depends upon whether injured party was induced to part or intended to part with both title and possession, in which case the offense is swindling; or whether he intended to part only with possession, in which case it is theft by false pretext. Id.

Where defendant's accomplice called complainant's attention to the fact that defendant was in the act of picking up a pocketbook, and it was agreed that the contents of the pocketbook be divided equally between the three, and defendant represented that the pocketbook contained a $500 bill and a $100 bill, and that it was necessary to have additional money to make change, so that the division might be effected, and complainant delivered $200 to defendant, defendant remarking, "You will get your money back and the $200," the $200 being appropriated by the defendant and his accomplice, the offense was theft, and not swindling. Gordon v. State, 85 Cr. R. 641, 214 S. W. 980.

The taking of goods by errand boy from employer's store at a time when he was not delivering such goods to customers was theft, and not embezzlement; the boy having no care, control, or custody of the goods at such time. Hoyt v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 936.

6. Appropriation of estray.—If defendant took possession of a hog for the purpose of protecting his crop and the original taking was not fraudulent, his subsequent appropriation or killing of the hog was not larceny. Brooks v. State, 82 Cr. R. 242, 199 S. W. 472.

8. Money paid by mistake.—Where accused was sent to a store to deliver 90 cents worth of oil, and by mistake was paid $9, and kept $8.10 of it, if, when receiving such money from storekeeper, he formed the criminal design to appropriate it to his own use, and did so appropriate it, the appropriation would be theft, but if he subsequently formed such fraudulent purpose, he could not be convicted under the general charge of theft. Campos v. State, 84 Cr. R. 216, 207 S. W. 931.

Where debtor by mistake gave creditor a check for an amount in excess of that actually due, and the creditor took the excess amount without the debtor's consent, with the intent to deprive debtor of the value thereof and to appropriate it to his own use and benefit, the creditor was guilty of theft of the excess amount, notwithstanding that the creditor was entitled to a portion of the amount of the check, the theft consisting of the appropriation of the excess amount, and not in the taking of the check itself, and it was immaterial that the creditor did not know the exact amount of the excess. Hedge v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 862.

A defendant, who by mistake of his debtor received a check for an amount in excess of that actually due, and who appropriated the entire amount to his own use, to be guilty of theft must have intended to appropriate the money at the time of receiving it, and must have appropriated the money without the intention to return it. Id.

A defendant, who by mistake of his debtor received a check for an amount in excess of that actually due, and who with knowledge thereof appropriated the entire amount, was guilty of theft regardless of whether debtor had consented to the possession or taking. Id.

10. Evidence.—In prosecution on indictment form for felony theft, evidence held to sustain finding that pretext of having found pocketbook and of wanting money so as to make change to divide contents equally between defendant and another and prosecuting witness, an aged, ignorant man, in fact induced his surrender of money which he expected to get back. Gibson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 462, 214 S. W. 341.

11. Charge of court.—In a prosecution for the theft of a hog, evidence held such as to render it error not to instruct jury that, if defendant in good faith believed that the hog belonged to him, he would not be guilty. Griffin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 194, 220 S. W. 330.

In a prosecution for theft of cotton, claimed by defendant to have been purchased by him, though he did not pay the price, the question in the case was, what was defendant's intent when he appropriated the cotton? and the jury should have been instructed that, if he believed he had a right to take it, he should be acquitted of theft, regardless of whether the minds of the parties completely agreed on the price of the cotton and the terms of sale or not. Mills v. State, 87 Cr. R. 655, 224 S. W. 780.

In prosecution for theft alleged to have been committed by the defendant, appropriating to his own use the excess amount of a check given to defendant in an amount in excess of that actually due by mistake of maker, instructions held sufficient to charge jury that defendant must have known that he was not entitled to the entire amount, and must have intended to take and appropriate the excess amount. Hedge v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 862.

Where the defendant claimed to have bought the property alleged to have been recently stolen and which was found in his possession, the jury should be charged that, if they believed he bought the car in question or had a reasonable doubt upon that issue, they should acquit. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

In prosecution for theft of a hog, in which both defendant and prosecuting witness claimed ownership of the hog, refusal of requested instruction that, "if you have a reasonable doubt as to the ownership of the hog described in the indictment, you will find defendant not guilty," held proper. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1005.

Art. 1333. [862] Possession and ownership need not be in same person.

Art. 1334. [863] Possession; how constituted.

Possession or ownership in general.—That the owner is out of state when property is stolen will not change the possession from him, if he did not leave it in the care, control, and management of another, or if the actual control, care, and management of another has not supervened. Griffin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 194, 220 S. W. 330.

The fact that a hotel guest who had left his wagon in a public alley back of the hotel placed the doubletree and some of the irons on the hotel premises, and asked accused if the wagon was in his way, does not establish that the wagon was no longer in the possession of the guest. Berdell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 310, 220 S. W. 1101.

A wagon left by its owner in a public alley back of a hotel remains in the custody and possession of the owner, even while he was temporarily out of the county, so far as the law of theft is concerned. Id.

In prosecution for theft of property taken from certain ranch, the allegation of ownership was properly laid in the manager of the ranch, in whose care, control, and management the property had been left by real owner. Narango v. State, 87 Cr. R. 493, 222 S. W. 564.

Care, control, and management are not necessarily exclusive in one person, but may be joined in several within the comprehension of the law of theft. Hasley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 444, 222 S. W. 579.

In a prosecution for theft of cattle from a pasture, ownership should be alleged to be in the person who had the care, control, and management of the pasture, and not in the owner of the pasture. Rabe v. State, 87 Cr. R. 497, 222 S. W. 1106.

When owner of whisky in bottles in cellar leased the property to another, turned over the key of the cellar to the lessee, and went on a trip, the lessee became the possessor, and at least in a qualified way, under his lease, the owner of the property, as against everybody, except the superior title in the lessor; and, in a prosecution for theft of the whisky from the cellar, ownership should have been alleged in the lessee. Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 167.

In a prosecution for theft of property jointly owned, the property must be alleged in one of the owners who has control and possession of it, and, if all are in possession, it can be alleged in either owner, but if one of the owners is in exclusive possession of it to the exclusion of the others, then it must be alleged in the party having the control, care, and management of it. Id.

Where one person had general supervision of all oil leases of a petroleum company, but no personal connection with a particular lease, an employé of the company in charge of the boring of a well on the farm covered by such lease should be named as owner, in an indictment for theft of a casing of the oil company on that farm. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 262.

In a prosecution for theft of an automobile belonging to the United States government which was put in possession of a construction company and was ordinarily under the control and management of a major supervising military work, the indictment properly named as the owner a captain, subordinate to the major, who was using the car for his own purpose and while so engaged parked it on the street from which the theft occurred. Escobedo v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 377.

When an express company received and receipted for goods, which were subsequently stolen, the company, under the law of theft, became the owner. Trinkle v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 754.

A car left temporarily in a garage while the owner is about his business in the vicinity is legally in the care, control, and general management of the owner, as well as the special owner for all purposes of prosecution for theft. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1105.

Where an owner of a hog placed it with a third person for a week for breeding purposes, and it was stolen during such time, but it appeared that the animal escaped or was taken from such third person by another than the defendant, the special owner had lost control of the animal, and an averment that the ownership was in the actual owner was proper. McGowan v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 323.

Animals on range.—A hog on the range or commons is in the possession of the owner, if such owner be the last person exercising care, control and management of it before the same is stolen. Griffin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 194, 220 S. W. 330.

Animals on their accustomed range are in the possession of their owner within the terms of the theft statute, and such possession need not be manual. Armstrong v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 485.

Proof and variance.—In prosecution for theft, variance between allegation placing ownership and possession of stolen goods in proprietor of store from which goods were stolen, and proof that at time of theft proprietor was in the hospital and that goods were under the care, control, and management of an employe, held fatal. Ratcliff v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 53.

There was no variance between allegation and proof as to ownership and possession in a prosecution for cattle theft from W., where G., who was W.'s foreman, testified he had only charge of the ranch under W.'s instructions, and could neither sell nor dispose of anything or move it from place to place, and that W. gave matters on the ranch his personal supervision most of the time, and W. testified that he had the actual care, control, and management of the cattle stolen. McClain v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 550.

Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to show that the alleged stolen property was that of the alleged owner. Mattison v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 951.

Charge.—Where on a trial for theft of hogs the state contended they belonged to a certain man, and when taken by defendant were on a certain range and bore a certain mark, while defendant claimed they were his hogs and were on a different range and bore a different mark at the time he took them and sold them, an instruction that the mere assertion of ownership of hogs on the range did not constitute possession was properly refused. Armstrong v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 485.

In a prosecution of a switchman for theft of goods, which he claimed he was taking from a car unloaded by consignee to proper railroad office when arrested, an instruction that if the jury believed the property was taken from the possession of the railroad agent they should convict, and another that if they believed from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant took the property from an empty box car, that the property belonged to the agent, they should convict, was error, since, if the consignee had finished unloading, and inadvertently left the property in the car it would be subject to the theft as lost property belonging to consignee, but not belonging to the freight agent. Monroe v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 995.

Art. 1335. [864] Theft of one's own property, when.

See Rabe v. State, 87 Cr. R. 497, 222 S. W. 1106.

Offense.—If defendant, at the time of the commission of his claimed offense of stealing timber, taken from a barn leased to him, had the care, control, and management of the barn from which the timbers were charged to have been taken, conviction could not result. Fleischman v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 397.

Art. 1338. [867] Animals of domestic breed included.

Dog.—A dog may become the subject of theft, and that, where he is shown to be worth at least $20, such theft is a felony. Hurley v. State, 30 Tex. App. 333, 17 S. W. 455, 28 Am. St. Rep. 916.

Art. 1339. [868] Particular penalties exclude general punishment.

Decisions under former law making theft of $20 a felony.—On a trial for theft of jewelry, where several articles of jewelry, of the value of more than $20, are traced to defendant's possession, but two of them only are identified as the property of the person named in the indictment, and their value is shown to be $16, and there is no evidence of the value of the other articles, there can be no conviction for felony. Clark v. State, 26 Tex. App. 486, 9 S. W. 767.

A dog may become the subject of theft, and that, where he is shown to be worth at least $20, such theft is a felony. Hurley v. State, 30 Tex. App. 333, 17 S. W. 455, 28 Am. St. Rep. 916.

Evidence.—Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction of theft of more than $50 worth of seed cotton. Crisp v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 392.

Art. 1341. [870] Petty theft; how punished.

Cited, Shaw v. State, 23 Tex. App. 493, 5 S. W. 317.

Punishment.—A judgment in a prosecution for misdemeanor theft, imposing on defendant a fine merely, is erroneous, since the statute makes misdemeanor theft punishable by imprisonment with fine, or else imprisonment without fine, but does not permit a fine alone. Thomas v. State, 85 Cr. R. 246, 211 S. W. 453; Busey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 23, 218 S. W. 1048.

Charge.—On an indictment it is error for the court to charge that, if the jury found defendant guilty, they would assess his punishment at not more than one year's imprisonment in the county jail, and a fine of not more than $500, since it omitted to charge as to the imprisonment without the fine. Irvin v. State, 25 Tex. App. 588, 8 S. W. 681.

Art. 1342. [871] General penalties not applicable when.

5. Value as determining degree of offense in general.—Where a part of the property described in an indictment for theft was not shown by the evidence to have been stolen, and the rest was not of the value of $50, a conviction for felony theft could not be sustained, though the evidence showed the theft of property not described in the indictment of a value larger than $50. Garrett v. State, 87 Cr. R. 12, 218 S. W. 1064.

7. Alleging and proving value.—Indictment alleging taking of a bale of seed cotton, "of the value of $100," sufficiently alleges its worth. Bell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 160, 205 S. W. 986.

In a prosecution for receiving and concealing stolen property, evidence held not sufficient to show that the property concealed was of the value of $50 or over, so as to make the offense a felony. Rutherford v. State, 85 Cr. R. 7, 209 S. W. 745.

If defendant was guilty of taking the prosecuting witness' automobile from one town to another, and the evidence showed that he took part of the alleged stolen property from the car, this would justify the conclusion that he took all of the property and took it at the same time, making him guilty of felony theft where the aggregate value exceeded $50, and it is immaterial that there was no direct proof of taking of the remainder of such articles. Bride v. State, 86 Cr. R. 535, 218 S. W. 762.

The loss of any considerable property at or about the same time, the taking of which may be attributed to accused, will support a verdict finding him guilty of felony theft of all such property. Garrett v. State, 87 Cr. R. 12, 218 S. W. 1064.

13. Charge of court.—Where there is a doubt from the evidence whether a sufficient amount of property described was taken at one time to constitute a felony, the trial court should submit the law of misdemeanor theft, and leave the question of fact to the jury. Garrett v. State, 87 Cr. R. 12, 218 S. W. 1064.

Art. 1343. [872] Voluntary return of stolen property.

Voluntary return in general.—A subsequent abandonment of, or a subsequent intention to abandon or return, the horse taken, is no defense to charge of theft of the horse. Hartman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 582, 213 S. W. 936.

The fact that the owner recovered a part of the property subsequent to the theft thereof would not reduce the grade of the offense below that of felony theft. Bride v. State, 86 Cr. R. 535, 218 S. W. 762.

Return after accused is found in possession or taken in the act.—Where $40 in money are stolen, a return by defendant, when arrested, of $28.75, some of which is in different denomination and kind from that stolen, is not a voluntary return. Powell v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 515.

The return of stolen property by the thief after arrest or after charge made of the theft is not a "voluntary return" within the statute. Hartman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 582, 213 S. W. 936.

In a prosecution for theft, where the evidence showed that defendant went behind the showcase in a store and took therefrom a tray containing diamond rings which he concealed beneath his coat, and that he was apprehended when he was on his knees trying to make his escape and the diamonds then taken from him, does not call for a charge on the voluntary return of stolen property. Mathason v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 548.

A party caught in the possession of stolen property cannot claim the benefit of this article. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1005.

Evidence.—In prosecution for the theft based upon theory that defendant took an automobile with intent to steal it, but made a voluntary return, evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction. Aeby v. State, 84 Cr. R. 231, 206 S. W. 685.

Charge.—In prosecution for theft of hog, where the evidence showed that defendant was caught in the possession of the hog, that he claimed ownership thereof, and that he refused to give it up until his brother had agreed to give him one in lieu thereof, failure to submit the issue of voluntary return of stolen property held not error; the facts being insufficient to present such issue. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1005.

Art. 1344. [873] "Steal" or "stolen" include what.

See Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

Art. 1345. [874] Stealing agricultural products.

Elements of offense.—If defendants took growing, standing corn of another without intent to steal it, or defraud owner, but merely to use in catching horses, they were not guilty of a fraudulent intent and conversion. Sampson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 594, 204 S. W. 324.

Products included.—Statute, prohibiting unlawful taking from owner of growing, standing, and ungathered corn, applies to growing standing corn, even if immature. Sampson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 594, 204 S. W. 324.

Indictment or information.—Information, charging that defendant unlawfully and fraudulently took from growing, standing, and ungathered corn, sufficiently charged statutory offense; since statutory offenses which may be committed in divers ways may be charged conjunctively, or a single phase may be charged. Sampson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 594, 204 S. W. 324.

Charge.—In prosecution for taking from owner standing corn, where there was evidence defendants took corn without fraudulent intent, court should have given instructions requested, submitting issue of lack of fraudulent intent. Sampson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 594, 204 S. W. 324.

Art. 1348. [877] Conversion by a bailee is theft.

See Parkinson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 176, 220 S. W. 774; Fleischman v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 397.

Cited, Willys-Overland Co. of California v. Chapman (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 978.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—Where defendant in prosecution for theft was sent by his employer to deliver oil, with a bill for 90 cents, and through the storekeeper's mistake, in thinking that the bill was for $9, was given that amount, and kept $8.10, there was no theft by bailee; the money not coming into defendant's possession by virtue of a contract. Campos v. State, 84 Cr. R. 216, 207 S. W. 931.

Where there was no trust relationship, there could be no offense of theft by bailee. Berdell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 310, 220 S. W. 1101.

4. Compared with and distinguished from other offenses.—The fraudulent taking of cotton by an employé engaged merely in weighing the cotton and paying other employés, where the owner and employer was absent for the day, constituted theft, and not embezzlement. Watkins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 412, 207 S. W. 926.

Where an employé of one having custody of property belonging to a railroad took and removed freight, possession of which he had by reason of his employment, held that the offense was theft and not embezzlement. Bonatz v. State, 85 Cr. R. 292, 212 S. W. 494.

That case in question may have constituted theft of property acquired by bailee would afford no reason why it would not also constitute embezzlement, under art. 1416. Landis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 381, 214 S. W. 827.

If defendant converted goods, appropriating them to his own use, the offense would come under this article, but if he had sold the goods belonging to another at the other's direction, and converted the money, the embezzlement statute (art. 1416) would apply. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 261.

6. Indictment and information.—If husband has left home, leaving wife in the exclusive control, care, and management of a hog, an indictment charging theft by conversion of the hog by a bailee should allege ownership in the wife and that the contract of bailment was made by her, instead of alleging ownership in husband and that the contract was made by her as his agent. Nugent v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 855.

Indictment charging theft by conversion by a bailee, alleging that the defendant had possession of a hog owned by a certain person by virtue of a contract of bailment with such person's wife, and had unlawfully converted it to his own use, without alleging that the wife was authorized by the owner to make the contract of bailment, held fatally defective. Id.

8. Evidence.—In a prosecution for embezzlement of money given by the prosecuting witness to defendant to purchase an automobile, evidence held to show that such money was used for the purchase of the machine and not appropriated to defendant's own use. Allen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 613, 204 S. W. 764.

Evidence held to show a typical case of embezzlement by the local manager of a company under art. 1416, and not bailee theft, under this article. Landis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 381, 214 S. W. 827.

11. Charge of court.—In prosecution for theft of automobile as bailee, special charge that if defendant had permission of the owner to sell the car or thought he had, he would not be guilty, though he retained the proceeds of sale, supplementing main charge written by court, fully protected defendant's rights. Parkinson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 176, 220 S. W. 774.

Art. 1349. [878] Receiving stolen property.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—One who receives property without knowing at the time that it was stolen, but who thereafter comes into possession of such knowledge, and conceals or destroys the property with intent to aid the thief to escape punishment, or with intent to deprive the owners of the property, is guilty of receiving and concealing stolen property. Rutherford v. State, 85 Cr. R. 7, 209 S. W. 745; Kahanek v. State, 83 Cr. R. 19, 201 S. W. 994; Falcone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 279, 206 S. W. 845.

Act of receiving stolen property some hours after it was taken from house, with knowledge that it was stolen, would not make recipient principal in burglary, although he could be prosecuted for receiving fruits of crime. Robertson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 378, 195 S. W. 602, 6 A. L. R. 853.

If the accused purchases goods in good faith, he is not guilty of receiving stolen goods, but, if he knew of the theft, the purchase would be no defense. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 113, 201 S. W. 1002.

Knowledge of fact that goods were stolen is an essential element of the offense of receiving stolen goods. Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 121, 201 S. W. 1006.

Defendant was guilty of receiving dead hogs that had been stolen by another only if he knew hogs were stolen when he assisted other in taking them home after they had been shot. Grace v. State, 83 Cr. R. 442, 203 S. W. 896.

In order to make receiving stolen goods a felony, it must be shown not only that the property lost was of the value required by statute, but that which actually came into the possession of accused was of sufficient value to make it a felony. Rutherford v. State, 85 Cr. R. 7, 209 S. W. 745.

The grade of the offense of concealing stolen property by one who, having received it innocently, sold part of it before learning of the theft is determined by the value of that only which he had in his possession when he learned it was stolen. Lockhead v. State, 85 Cr. R. 459, 213 S. W. 653.

If property was stolen, and defendant received or concealed it, knowing at the time it was stolen, he was guilty of an offense under the statute denouncing the reception or concealing of stolen goods. Kyle v. State, 86 Cr. R. 471, 217 S. W. 943.

Where two persons jointly steal the goods, one cannot be guilty of fraudulently receiving stolen property from the other. Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 190.

If one accused of receiving stolen property bought the property without knowledge of the theft, he should be acquitted. Donegan v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 857.

In a prosecution for receiving goods stolen from a railway freight warehouse, where the evidence showed that the goods were actually stolen by the person named in the indictment, the fact that two employees of the railroad working at the freight house connived at or aided the theft so as to be guilty of embezzlement does not prevent conviction under the indictment. Kluting v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 305.

2. Distinguished from theft or embezzlement.—Where an indictment charges theft of an automobile in one count, and receiving the automobile as stolen property in another count, a verdict, finding defendant guilty on both counts is improper; it being impossible for defendant, guilty of receiving a stolen automobile, to have stolen it himself. Moore v. State, 83 Cr. R. 302, 203 S. W. 51.

7. Indictment or information.—In indictment charging reception of stolen property, it is necessary to name parties from whom stolen property was received by defendant, if names are known, and, if not, grand jury is justified in alleging names are unknown to it. Kahanek v. State, 83 Cr. R. 19, 201 S. W. 994; Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 113, 201 S. W. 1002.

An information describing stolen goods as the property of G., "which had been theretofore acquired" by some one unknown to affiant, and in such manner that such acquisition was brought within the term "theft," was insufficient, in that it did not charge that defendant received goods from any one. Shipp v. State, 84 Cr. R. 623, 209 S. W. 656.

An information for receiving stolen property, alleging that person from whom goods were received was unknown, was insufficient, where officers knew from whom goods had been received, or had reasonable grounds for so believing, under Pen. Code, art. 1349. Id.

Allegations that the accused received stolen property "from some person to the grand jurors unknown," and that said property had been theretofore acquired by another in such manner as to make the acquisition theft, held sufficient to charge receiving and concealing stolen property. Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

9. — Proof and variance.—Where indictment for receiving stolen goods alleged defendant received property from two named persons, to convict it was necessary for state to meet allegations with appropriate evidence. Kahanek v. State, 83 Cr. R. 19, 201 S. W. 994.

The variance between the quantity of stolen property which the indictment charged had been received by defendant and that shown by the proof is not fatal to conviction, where a sufficient quantity of the property shown to have been stolen was found in defendant's possession to make the offense a felony. Kluting v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 305.

10. Evidence.—Evidence held to warrant conviction. Batts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 103, 201 S. W. 408; Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

Where one accused of receiving stolen goods set up that he bought the goods without knowledge or notice of the theft, the state had the burden of showing that the theory of purchase was false. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 113, 201 S. W. 1002.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen sheep, evidence held sufficient to support finding that defendant, while the sheep were on his premises, learned of theft of them. Wilson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 94, 210 S. W. 542.

In prosecution for receiving stolen sheep, in determining whether facts excluded every reasonable hypothesis except defendant's guilty knowledge of theft, defendant was entitled to have jury afforded privilege of considering evidence of his advanced age and infirmities due to sickness. Id.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen property, the bare fact that defendant received the property is not sufficient to show that it was stolen, but the possession of such property with other facts, was a circumstance from which the inference of guilty knowledge on defendant's part might be drawn. Grant v. State, 87 Cr. R. 19, 218 S. W. 1062.

Evidence of the circumstances under which accused received automobile tire casings which had been stolen, with his statements and admissions tending to show guilty knowledge, held sufficient to sustain a conviction for knowingly receiving and concealing stolen goods. Gunter v. State, 87 Cr. R. 74, 219 S. W. 452.

Proof that stolen tools were on premises belonging to and under control of the father of one accused of theft and receiving stolen goods, in an outhouse with other tools, would not justify an inference of guilt on the part of the accused, in the absence of any assertion of ownership by the accused. Lemon v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 388.

Court did not err in refusing a peremptory instruction, where the proof showed that for $11 accused bought a new silk dress worth $42.50, which had never been worn or used and was brought to her house by a negro in a handbag, he having been to her house before with other articles, and when the dress was found by the officers in her home it was taken from an ice chest. Joiner v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 333.

14. Charge of court.—In a prosecution for receiving stolen property, defended on ground that the property was purchased in good faith and without knowledge that it had been stolen, refusal to present such defense by affirmative charge on defendant's request therefor held error. Hoyt v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 936; Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 113, 201 S. W. 1002.

Where accused's ex-partner testified that accused told him he bought the goods, a defensive theory was raised which should have been submitted to the jury. Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 121, 201 S. W. 1006.

The better practice is to instruct the jury that such property must have been fraudulently received or concealed, as the case may be; but in absence of evidence that defendant's acquisition of property was for innocent purpose or under such circumstances as to raise doubt of his guilty intent, failure to insert "fraudulently" in portion of charge applying law to facts was not reversible error. Czernicki v. State, 85 Cr. R. 169, 211 S. W. 223.

Under indictment charging their reception from a particular individual after theft by another individual, an instruction authorizing conviction in case of defendant's reception of the property from anybody after theft by anybody was erroneous. Kyle v. State, 86 Cr. R. 471, 217 S. W. 943.

In a prosecution under indictment charging automobile theft in one count and the fraudulent receiving of stolen property in another count, where the state's testimony, if believed, proved that defendant helped to steal the automobile, and defendant's testimony, if believed, proved that he had purchased automobile in good faith, the submission of whether defendant had fraudulently received stolen property held error, since, under the evidence, he was either guilty of stealing the car or was a good faith purchaser thereof. Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 190.

Where defendant was charged with receiving a certain car stolen from a certain person, it was error to permit a conviction if defendant "received and concealed one automobile of the value of $550 and * * * knew that said automobile was acquired by theft," since, under such instruction, defendant could be convicted if he received any stolen car; there being evidence of his having received other cars. Kolb v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 210.

Evidence tending to show automobile casings were taken from the possession of the alleged owner by some third person, and that defendant's connection therewith was subsequent thereto, held to justify the submission to the jury of the count charging the receiving and concealing of stolen property. Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

In a prosecution for receiving goods stolen from a railroad freight agent, evidence that railroad employees who connived at the theft had checked the goods into the warehouse, or had trucked them in, does not authorize an instruction requested by defendant that, if those two employees had the care of the property at the time it was taken, and they consented to its taking, the defendant should be acquitted. Kluting v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 305.

17. Punishment.—Where defendant at different times received stolen articles from thieves, on no occasion of the value of $50, but in the aggregate exceeding that amount, his requested charges, presenting his theory, having support in the evidence, that each delivery constituted a separate sale and transaction, and stating that, if this was so, his offense, if guilty, would be misdemeanor, should have been given. Lockhead v. State, 85 Cr. R. 459, 213 S. W. 653.

Cited, Johnson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 33, 201 S. W. 187.

1. Nature and elements of offense.—In a prosecution for theft from the person by snatching the property so suddenly as not to allow time for resistance, evidence that the prosecuting witness resisted and that the money was taken in the struggle or a scuffle, if true, would entitle accused to an acquittal. Mayzone v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 55.

5. Indictment.—Indictment must allege that property was taken from person of another, and it is not sufficient to allege that it was taken "from the possession of the person" of another. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 31, 201 S. W. 186.

7. — Proof and variance.—Indictment charging money was fraudulently taken by defendant from person of another would not be supported by proof that such other lost his money in saloon and that defendant picked it up from floor. Bassett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 479, 204 S. W. 112.

8. Evidence.—In prosecution for theft from person, evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction. Faudoa v. State, 81 Cr. R. 653, 197 S. W. 1109.

Evidence that, shortly after alleged taking of watch from D. by defendant, he came into a café with it, stated it belonged to D., and that he wanted to find him to return it, is admissible on intent. Riddick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 291, 202 S. W. 947.

9. Charge of court.—A charge that the property must have been taken so suddenly as not to allow time for the person from whom the property is stolen to resist, and prevent the taking of such property from his person, is not objectionable because the word "prevent," in the latter clause of the charge, is not in the statute, and such charge was, as to the last clause thereof, beneficial to defendant. Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 24.

In prosecution for theft of a hog, evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction. Jackson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 329, 216 S. W. 866.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction of hog theft. Bradford v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 901.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, court properly permitted state to show that calf tracks and two horse tracks led from the pasture of prosecuting witness to that of defendant, being a circumstance tending to show human agency in the moving of the cattle. McClain v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 550.

In a prosecution for theft of one head of cattle, held that the court did not err in refusing a requested peremptory instruction of acquittal, based on insufficiency of testimony. Id.

Charge.—Court's charge, unobjected to on trial, authorizing imprisonment for not more than five years, held not reversible error. Grider v. State, 82 Cr. R. 124, 198 S. W. 579.

In prosecution for cattle theft, where only defendant's connection with cattle after they were taken was proved by direct evidence, and his possession was explained, court should have charged on circumstantial evidence. Rollins v. State, 83 Cr. R. 345, 203 S. W. 355.

Art. 1355. [883] Theft of sheep, goat, etc.; how punished.

Evidence.—Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction of sheep theft. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Charge.—The penalty for stealing sheep being different from that prescribed for theft generally of property of the value of $20 or more, a charge on a trial for the former crime giving the penalty prescribed for the latter crime is fatally erroneous, notwithstanding, the penalty being greater in the former case, the charge inures to the benefit of the accused. (Work v. State, 3 Tex. App. 233, overruled.) Spradling v. State, 30 Tex. App. 595, 17 S. W. 1117.

Art. 1356. [884] Wilfully driving stock from the range, theft.

Nature and elements of offense.—One taking a hog from the range or commons believing in good faith that it belonged to him would not be guilty of theft. Griffin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 194, 220 S. W. 330.

CHAPTER TWELVE

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE RECOVERY OF STOLEN ANIMALS AND THE DETECTION AND PUNISHMENT OF THIEVES

Article 1361. [889] Butchering unmarked or unbranded animals.

See Aston v. State, 27 Tex. App. 574, 11 S. W. 637.

ILLEGAL MARKING AND BRANDING AND OTHER OFFENSES RELATING TO LIVE STOCK

Article 1386. [913] Driving live stock from range.

Elements of offense.—One who is in charge of a large pasture owned by another, and who, under instructions from his employer, drives out of such pasture, at a point several miles from the place where they were turned in, cattle owned by a third person, and turned into such pasture without permission, is not guilty of "willfully driving cattle not his own from their accustomed range," though the owner of the cattle owns a few acres inclosed in the pasture, where he consented to the inclosure thereof, without reserving any right of pasturage, as defendant's act is not "willful," and the cattle are not on "their accustomed range." Wells v. State (App.) 13 S. W. 889.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

OFFENSES AGAINST LABELS, TRADE-MARKS, ETC.

Art.	Art.
1396a. Names or trade marks in milk cans, etc.; unlawful use of or refusal to return to owner.	1396d. Same; punishment.
1396b. Same; removal or defacing.	1396e. Sale of marked milk bottles.
1396c. Same; who is owner.	1396f. Use of marked milk bottles by person other than owner of trade mark.

Article 1396a. Names or trade marks in milk cans, etc.; unlawful use of or refusal to return to owner.—It shall hereafter be unlawful for any person, other than the lawful owner or owners, for the purpose whatever, to fill with milk, cream, butter or ice-cream any milk can, milk bottle, milk jar, butter box, ice cream can or ice cream tub or to mutilate or destroy without the consent of the owner of same, or to wilfully refuse to return or deliver to such owner, upon demand, any such milk can, milk bottle, milk jar, butter box, ice cream can, or ice cream tub branded or stamped with the name or trademark of such owner, or bearing any private mark in common use by such owner, or from which such brand or stamp or private mark or marks have been removed, cut off or defaced. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 78, § 1.]

Art. 1396b. Same; removal or defacing.—It shall hereafter be unlawful for any person within this State to remove, cut off, deface or obliterate the stamp or brand or private mark of any owner of any milk bottle, milk jar, butter box, milk can, ice cream can or ice cream tub, or to stamp or place other than brands or stamps or private mark on any such milk bottle, milk jar, milk can, butter box, ice cream can or ice cream tub, without the written permission of such owner. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1396c. Same; who is owner.—Any person or persons, firm or corporation, or joint stock association owning or using milk cans, milk bottles, milk jars, butter boxes, ice-cream cans or ice-cream tubs in his, her or their name or names, or private mark or marks in common use branded or stamped or placed on the same shall be considered the owner or owners thereof. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1396d. Same; punishment.—Any person violating Sections 1 and 2 of this Act [Arts. 1396a, 1396b] shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1396e. Sale of marked milk bottles.—Any person, firm or corporation who shall hereafter sell or offer for sale a bottle or bottle upon which such name [Arts. 706a–706f, Civil Statutes, ante], or names, trade name, mark or design appears shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, be fined in any sum not less than $10.00 nor more than $50.00, provided if such person shall be the owner of such name or names, trade name, mark or design, as shown by the record of the County Clerk of the county in which said bottle or bottles are offered for sale, he shall not be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor hereunder. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 81, § 5.]

Art. 1396f. Use of marked milk bottles by person other than owner of trade-mark.—Any dairyman, milk distributor or milk dealer who shall deliver or sell milk in a bottle bearing a name, or names, trade name, mark or design recorded as herein provided [Arts. 706a–706f, Civil Statutes, ante] without the consent of the owner of said name or names, trade name, mark or design, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not less than $1.00 nor more than $50.00. [Id., § 6.]

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

OFFENSES RELATING TO THE PROTECTION OF STOCK RAISERS IN CERTAIN LOCALITIES

Art. 1412. Clerk improperly recording brand.	Art. 1413. Agent of railroad, etc., receiving for shipment uninspected animals.

Article 1412. [934] Clerk improperly recording brand.

Cited, Massey v. State, 31 Cr. R. 91, 19 S. W. 908.

Construction and operation in general.—Where a carrier, after it has contracted to furnish cars at a certain time for the shipment of cattle, and after the shipper has prepared to deliver them, having them inspected as fast as they can be loaded, stops the loading, and gives the cars to another shipper, who has already had his cattle inspected, it is liable to the first shipper for the damages caused by the delay, and is not relieved from liability by this article. Receivers of International & G. N. R. Co. v. Wright, 2 Civ. App. 198, 21 S. W. 56.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

EMBEZZLEMENT

Article 1416. [938] Defined and punished.

See Grice v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 172.

Offense.—Where agent to collect note, after doing so, receiving from maker a check, deposited it in bank to his account, and failed to account therefor to his principal, he was guilty of embezzlement, whether or not he checked out more than $50 of the money for his own purposes at any one time. Powell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 163, 198 S. W. 317.

Where there was no trust relationship there could be no offense of embezzlement. Berdell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 310, 220 S. W. 1101.

If defendant received by virtue of his agency, and embezzled, more than $50 at a time, he was guilty of a felony, but, if the amount which he embezzled was less than $50, his offense was a misdemeanor. Grice v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 172.

Where a Grand Order of Odd Fellows suspended its local lodge, so that the agency of the secretary of the local lodge for the Grand Order ceased, his embezzlement of moneys received by him after such suspension of his lodge was not in his capacity as agent of the Grand Order, and he cannot be convicted thereof. Id.

Compared with and distinguished from other offenses.—The fraudulent taking of cotton by an employé engaged merely in weighing the cotton and paying other employés, where the owner and employer was absent for the day, constituted theft, and not embezzlement. Watkins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 412, 207 S. W. 926.

Where an employé of one having custody of property belonging to a railroad took and removed freight, possession of which he had by reason of his employment, held that the offense was theft and not embezzlement. Bonatz v. State, 85 Cr. R. 292, 212 S. W. 494.

That case in question may have constituted theft of property acquired by bailee under art. 1348, would afford no reason why it would not also constitute embezzlement, under article 1416. Landis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 381, 214 S. W. 827.

If defendant converted goods, appropriating them to his own use, the offense would come under art. 1348, defining theft by bailee; but if he had sold the goods belonging to another, at the other's direction, and converted the money, this article would apply. Moore v. State, 225 S. W. 261.

The taking of goods by errand boy from employer's store at a time when he was not delivering such goods to customers was theft, and not embezzlement, the boy having no care, control, or custody of the goods at such time. Hoyt v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 936.

Indictment.—An indictment charging that accused was a clerk or employee of a corporation is sufficient; the term employee being treated as surplusage. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 379.

Allegation that the property embezzled came into defendant's possession by virtue of his employment as clerk sufficiently charged a fiduciary relation and defendant's duty to receive and care for the money. Id.

Proof and variance.—In prosecution for embezzlement of agent to collect note, proof that defendant received check from maker, which he deposited to his own account and checked out for his own purposes, held not fatal variance from allegation of indictment that he embezzled lawful money of United States. Powell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 163, 198 S. W. 317.

It is essential in a prosecution for embezzlement that the proof show that the relation charged in the indictment existed, and that the property came into defendant's hands by virtue of the relationship, so that in a prosecution for the embezzlement of the funds of the Grand Order of Odd Fellows it was essential to show that the money was owned by the Grand Order, that defendant was its agent, and that he appropriated it to his own use. Grice v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 172.

Where an indictment charged that defendant converted money, it was essential that the proof sustain the allegation. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 261.

A "cashier," defined as a custodian of money of a bank, mercantile house, and the like, is not a "clerk," who is defined as one to keep accounts or records, a higher assistant in an office, so that there is a variance between an indictment charging accused with embezzlement of money, while clerk of a corporation, which charge must be construed under art. 10, by giving the ordinary meaning to the words, and proof that he was the cashier of the corporation, especially where the manager of the corporation expressly testified that he was not a clerk. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 379.

In a prosecution for embezzlement, there is a variance between the allegation in the indictment that accused was a clerk of a corporation and proof that he was cashier and bookkeeper for the corporation. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 382.

Evidence.—In prosecution of agent for embezzling principal's funds, evidence held sufficient to justify finding defendant was agent or employé of principal in collecting and receiving money on note. Powell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 163, 198 S. W. 317.

In prosecution for embezzlement of agent to collect note, evidence held to justify conclusion that between certain dates defendant drew out of his bank on small checks all money received by him from maker of note. Id.

In a prosecution for embezzlement of money given by the prosecuting witness to defendant to purchase an automobile, evidence held to show that such money was used for the purchase of the machine and not appropriated to defendant's own use. Allen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 613, 204 S. W. 764.

In prosecution for embezzlement by local manager of company's property on or about May 30, 1916, there was no error in admitting in evidence the sales slips for several days from the 22d to the 27th, inclusive, of said month. Landis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 381, 214 S. W. 827.

In prosecution for embezzlement by local manager of property of company, there was no error in admitting testimony of banker showing deposits which defendant had made to his individual account, the sole objection being that it was immaterial. Id.

Evidence held to show a typical case of embezzlement by the local manager of a company and not bailee theft, under art. 1348. Id.

In a prosecution for embezzlement, where it appeared that defendant was a constable, that he collected a fine from a third person for gambling, such third person giving him a check to pay the fine and costs to the justice of the peace, which he failed to do, claiming that the justice owed him a larger amount, a verdict finding defendant guilty of fraudulent appropriation of the money is without support in the evidence, where it does not appear that the check had been converted into money. Morrow v. State, 87 Cr. R. 287, 220 S. W. 1098.

In the prosecution of a constable for embezzlement of funds given him by a third person to pay a fine to the justice of the peace for gambling, evidence that both the justice and defendant made collection of fines and costs, and that each had a claim against the other, held to create an issue of fact as to whether defendant had a right to retain any of the funds collected as an offset to funds in the hands of the justice belonging to the defendant. Id.

In a prosecution for embezzlement, evidence that defendant was employed by an oil company as foreman to supervise the drilling of wells, that there was placed in his possession a quantity of casings, which he was directed to sell and deliver the money to his employer, that he sold the same, but deposited the money to his credit in the bank, and drew it out for his own use, held to show that the relation of principal and agent existed. Wray v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 808.

Charge.—In prosecution of agent for embezzlement of proceeds collected by him for principal, where there was evidence that it was contemplated that a separate remittance was not to be made by agent upon each sale or collection, but that the aggregate amount of the day's business was to be embraced in a single cashier's check, refusal to charge that the deposit by the agent of check received in payment of the account to his credit in the bank, unless done with fraudulent intent, would not be a conversion. held error. Herberg v. State, 87 Cr. R. 439, 222 S. W. 559.

In prosecution of agent for embezzlement by failing to remit amount of $70.10 collected for principal, where the memorandum accompanying the cashier's check sent to the principal by agent contained an item of $60.50 described as "cash sales collections," the meaning of which was not otherwise expressed, refusal to submit issue of whether the cashier's check remitted a portion of the $70.10, and to charge that conviction could not be for more than a misdemeanor offense if the amount appropriated was less than the sum of $50, held error. Id.

In a prosecution for embezzlement of money derived from the sale of goods, the defense of purchase should be submitted, upon defendant's request, in a specific and affirmative manner. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 261.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

OF SWINDLING AND THE FRAUDULENT DISPOSITION OF MORTGAGED PROPERTY

1. SWINDLING

1421. "Swindling" defined.

1422. Certain wrongful acts included.

1427. Punishment.

2. FRAUDULENT DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY, MORTGAGED OR SUBJECT TO LIEN

Art.

1430. Fraudulent disposition of mortgaged property.

1430b. Mortgagor of motor vehicle to inform mortgagee of location thereof.

1430c. Same; punishment for refusal.

Article 1421. [943] "Swindling" defined.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—Where defendant had another person pick up a pocketbook in street in view of prosecuting witness, which, upon being opened, showed a $1,000 bill, and prosecuting witness in consideration of a promise of defendant to change bill and give him one-third, gave defendant and his aide a certain sum of money, which was put in the pocketbook, and defendant and his aide went out to change the same and never returned, defendant was not guilty of swindling; mere false promises not being the basis of the crime of swindling. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 626, 209 S. W. 655.

A charge of obtaining land by false pretenses was properly withdrawn from the jury. Luce v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1095.

If the owner of drafts of the value of $2,500 was induced to part with them on his faith in the false and fraudulent representations made by defendant, defendant was guilty of swindling. Escue v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 483.

3. False pretense or promise and reliance thereon.—It is not essential to conviction for swindling that swindled party should have relied exclusively upon false pretenses. Whitehead v. State, 81 Cr. R. 278, 196 S. W. 851.

An indictment for swindling, alleging that defendant, who conducted a business college, had fraudulently represented himself to complaining witness to represent another business college wherein complaining witness had purchased a scholarship, held insufficient, where it failed to aver that complaining witness desired a certificate of scholarship in such other business college, and that the false representations had induced her to pay defendant for such certificate, thus showing the connection between the false pretenses alleged and the delivery of the money to defendant. Farmer v. State, 85 Cr. R. 440, 213 S. W. 669.

The rule in swindling cases that the false representation must be as to something present or past has no application in a case where the charge is theft by false pretext. Gibson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 462, 214 S. W. 341.

It is not necessary for a written instrument to be such as would stand the scrutiny of the courts to make it sufficient as a pretense on which one has been induced to part with his property in a swindling case; it being enough if the injured party relied on the instrument, and was thereby induced to part with his property. Escue v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 483.

Defendant, charged with swindling by selling an 85-cent time check for $84.15, was not guilty if the prosecuting witness knew, when he parted with his money, that the check given him was for only 85 cents. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1099.

In a prosecution for accomplice to theft by false pretenses, property having been taken from prosecuting witness through a conspiracy, it could not be said that false representations made by the coconspirators had no influence and were of no effect in inducing complaining witness to part with his money, because of the fact that at some stage in the transaction, complaining witness became suspicious and demanded of one of the coconspirators the return of the money which he had delivered to such coconspirator, and that, by apparent frankness and acquiescence at said time, the suspicions of complaining witness were allayed, and the confederate permitted to keep and appropriate the money. Gerber v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 334.

Where a swindler falsely represented to a railroad agent that he had loaded a car with pipe, and thereby procured a bill of lading, which he exchanged for another, showing a second shipment by himself to a consignee at another point, attaching to the latter a draft on such consignee, which he deposited with his bank for collection, and thereafter procured advancements against the draft by means of a forged telegram from the bank's correspondent, that the draft had been paid there was a sufficient compliance with the demand of the law that the injured party must have been induced to part with his property by false and fraudulent representations. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 525.

Where one charged with swindling by falsely representing to a railroad agent that he had loaded a car with pipe, thereby obtained a bill of lading, thereon, every step thereafter based on such bill was fraudulent, so that when he presented it to the agent at the point of destination the issuance by the latter, believing the bill was genuine, of another bill for reshipment to a consignee at a third point was but a substitution of one fraudulent bill for another. Id.

4. Acquiring or impairing property or right.—In swindling, the purpose and effect of the false pretenses is to acquire the title. Gordon v. State, 85 Cr. R. 641, 214 S. W. 980.

In a prosecution for obtaining money by fraudulent representations, it is no defense that the injured party was not deprived of his property because he recovered from defendant and his kindred the money so obtained. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 525.

6. Compared with and distinguished from other offenses.—The distinction between swindling and theft by false pretext under art. 1332, depends upon whether injured party was induced to part or intended to part with both title and possession, in which case the offense is swindling, or whether he intended to part only with possession, in which case it is theft by false pretext. Gibson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 462, 214 S. W. 341.

Where defendant's accomplice called complainant's attention to the fact that defendant was in the act of picking up a pocketbook, and it was agreed that the contents of the pocketbook be divided equally between the three, and defendant represented that the pocketbook contained a $500 bill and a $100 bill, and that it was necessary to have additional money to make change, so that the division might be effected, and complainant delivered $200 to defendant, defendant remarking, "You will get your money back and the $200," the $200 being appropriated by the defendant and his accomplice, the offense was theft, under art. 1332, and not swindling. Gordon v. State, 85 Cr. R. 641, 214 S. W. 980.

In a prosecution for forgery by writing into a check a larger amount than authorized by its maker, the action of an employé of another bank in ascertaining from the payee bank, at the defendant's request, whether or not the payee bank would pay any amount filled in, did not change the crime from forgery to swindling; there being nothing to show that the maker of the check authorized the payee of bank to make such statement to the officer of the other bank. Duncan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 191, 215 S. W. 853.

In a prosecution for forgery committed by the insertion in a check of a larger amount than defendant was authorized by maker to insert, the contentions of the defendant, appellant, that such acts would make a case of swindling and not of forgery, cannot be sustained, since if he so exceeded his authority it would constitute forgery and not swindling and if the case be one of swindling or forgery it must be prosecuted as forgery. Id.

8. Indictment and information.—An indictment must aver the acquisition of the property by defendant, and an averment that the property was delivered to defendant by the alleged swindled person is not sufficient. Cannon v. State (App.) 15 S. W. 117.

Indictment for swindling by selling personal property on false representation that it was unincumbered should definitely allege the connection between the false pretense and the acquisition of the money. Moore v. State, 81 Cr. R. 606, 197 S. W. 728.

In indictment for swindling by selling personal property on false representation that it was unincumbered, a mortgage held required to be set out with sufficient particularity to accurately describe it, but not necessarily in full. Id.

In indictment for swindling by selling property on representation that it was unincumbered, held, that it was necessary to directly aver existence and validity of mortgage and the existence of the debt. Id.

An indictment for swindling a corporation by drawing a check, should state the name of the particular person to whom the false representation was made. Fruitt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 148, 202 S. W. 81.

In prosecution for swindling by obtaining stock of goods by execution of note and mortgage on property not owned by defendant, indictment failing to allege that injured party was induced to part and did part with goods, that he relied on mortgage, that note and mortgage were delivered to him and accepted in exchange for goods, or that he delivered to defendant title or possession of goods, was fatally defective. Albertson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 574, 208 S. W. 923.

A complaint for swindling by giving a check on a bank without reasonable expectation it would be honored, which set out the check in part, but entirely omitted the signature thereto, is insufficient and should be quashed. Lord v. State, 87 Cr. R. 226, 220 S. W. 548.

An indictment for swindling, which charged accused with obtaining hotel furniture and equipment, insufficiently describes the property, since it cannot be determined therefrom whether the property referred to was fixtures or personalty. Luce v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1095.

An indictment which charged the obtaining of a deed to land without alleging the value of the deed was insufficient, though it alleged the value of the land in connection with an invalid charge of obtaining the land by false pretenses. Id.

An indictment for swindling, which alleged that the property was obtained by representations that the notes given therefor were a first and only lien upon certain land, is insufficient, where such representation was traversed in general terms, but no prior or additional lien was described. Id.

Indictment charging swindling alleging that "S. [defendant] did falsely pretend and fraudulently represent to the said J. [prosecuting witness] that he had in his possession a certain valid writing obligatory. * * * and did then and there, by means of said false pretense and fraudulent representation, fraudulently induce the said J. * * * to exchange his said $84.15 for the said pretended writing obligatory," held sufficient against objection that it was indefinite and uncertain as to whom the pronouns "he" and "his" related. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1099.

9. Proof and variance.—In a prosecution for swindling based upon defendant's false representations that he was connected with a business college in which complaining witness desired a scholarship, thereby inducing complaining witness to pay money for tuition in a different business college owned by defendant, evidence showing that the deceit was accomplished by defendant's course of conduct, and not by direct statements, held inadmissible under the allegations of the indictment. Farmer v. State, 85 Cr. R. 440, 213 S. W. 669.

In prosecution for swindling, the state must prove that defendant in fact collected the money which the information alleges that he collected from swindled person. Kraft v. State, 86 Cr. R. 484, 217 S. W. 1038.

In prosecution for swindling, allegations that defendant procured swindled person's check, and procured money thereon, did not support proof of swindled person's mother's check made payable to certain newspaper and drawn against mother's funds; there being a distinct variance between such proof and allegations. Id.

In a prosecution for swindling, where information charged defendant with having acquired and cashed swindled person's check, the check of swindled person's mother, drawn against the mother's money and signed in mother's name by the swindled person, held inadmissible, not being the check described in the information. Id.

In a prosecution for swindling by obtaining drafts by false pretenses, if it became necessary, in order to sustain the allegation of value of the drafts, to prove their execution by a bank or some person having authority from it, such proof was admissible under the general allegation of value of the instruments in the indictments. Escue v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 483.

In a prosecution for swindling, it was not essential to prove that the quantity of money received was that named in the indictment; any amount over $50 being sufficient to classify the offense as a felony. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 525.

10. Evidence.—Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction of swindling. Whitehead v. State, 81 Cr. R. 278, 196 S. W. 851.

In prosecution for swindling thereby securing mule and horse, evidence that some time after transaction accused bought farm and incurred large indebtedness thereon, giving a mortgage on stock which may have included horse and mule, is inadmissible. Id.

In a prosecution for swindling by false representations that defendant was connected with a certain business college, wherein complaining witness desired to purchase a scholarship, evidence held insufficient to support a conviction. Farmer v. State, 85 Cr. R. 440, 213 S. W. 669.

In a prosecution for swindling, where it was charged that defendant had acquired and cashed swindled person's check, and had thereby obtained money belonging to swindled person, evidence showing that the check received had in fact been the check of such person's mother and had been drawn against the mother's funds, and failing to show that defendant had collected money thereon, held not to sustain a conviction; there being no proof that defendant had received the money which the pleading charged him with receiving. Kraft v. State, 86 Cr. R. 484, 217 S. W. 1038.

In a prosecution for swindling by obtaining drafts through false pretenses, the trial court did not err in admitting such drafts in evidence, they having been described in the indictment, and the material question being whether or not they were of value and acquired by defendant by the means alleged. Escue v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 483.

In a prosecution for swindling by obtaining drafts by false representations, the mortgage given by defendant on certain animals was admissible, though the description of the property in the mortgage was not such as to make out a flawless contract; the mortgage in fact having been relied upon and accepted by the injured party in handing over his property. Id.

In a prosecution for swindling by selling an 85-cent time check for $84.15, where there was no testimony that any time checks had been lost, and there was testimony that the check was for services rendered during two weeks in January, that defendant had been sick for two weeks in January and had received his wages for other two weeks thereof, and that defendant in sale of check to prosecuting witness had made no statement as to the amount that was due him, exclusion of employer's testimony as to whether time checks were often lost or misplaced, and as to whether it sometimes took employer months to straighten out the record, and as to whether it was probable that defendant could have had more coming than was shown by the record, held proper. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1099.

In a prosecution for accomplice theft by false pretenses, where accused was charged with having held himself out to the prosecuting witness as secretary of the "Fort Worth Exchange," and thereby, with other conspirators, had obtained his money, trial court properly permitted a witness to testify that he was secretary of the "Fort Worth Grain and Cotton Exchange" at the time in question, and that the accused was not an employee of such exchange, it being the claim of the state that there was no such institution as the "Fort Worth Exchange," but that it was the purpose of accused to mislead the injured party into believing the former to be a bona fide officer of an exchange in the city of Fort Worth. Gerber v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 334.

Where a swindler obtained a bill of lading from a railroad company's agent by falsely representing that he had loaded a car with pipe and subsequently exchanged it for another the state was not estopped from setting up their false and fraudulent character on the ground they were in fact issued by agents of the company, and were to that extent genuine, the company being bound only to transport property in fact delivered to them; bills of lading carelessly issued by its agents upon false representations not being binding upon it. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 525.

Where defendant, accused of swindling, procured a bill of lading for a carload of pipe by representing to the agent of a railroad company that a car set aside for his use was so loaded, exchanged the bill for another, and attached the latter to a draft, which he deposited with a bank for collection, and thereafter forged a telegram from the bank's correspondent, advising that the draft had been paid, thereby procuring advancements, testimony of a fright conductor that he failed to pick up the car because it was empty was relevant; the burden being on the state to show fraudulent intent. Id.

In a prosecution for swindling, evidence held to show defendant's guilt; and, where there was direct evidence that defendant obtained a bill of lading by falsely representing to a railroad company's agent that he had loaded a car with pipe, that he made false representations to his bank as to a bill of lading and a draft attached thereto presented by him and as to a telegram received by him from his bank's correspondent certifying that the draft had been paid, there was no occasion to resort to circumstantial evidence.

12. Charge of court.—Evidence in a prosecution for swindling held to require requested instruction that if prosecuting witness relied on advice of others than accused, there could be no conviction. Whitehead v. State, 81 Cr. R. 278, 196 S. W. 851.

Art. 1422. [944] Certain wrongful acts included.

Subdivision 4—Validity.—This subdivision does not deprive accused of liberty without due process of law, and is not void for uncertainty nor because it makes condition subsequent to act of drawing check, etc., necessary element for conviction or subjects liberties of accused to caprice of different juries. Krueger v. State, 82 Cr. R. 404, 199 S. W. 629.

— Offense.—It is essential to prove that one drawing a check on a bank, not only had no funds in the bank, but also that he had no good reason to believe that the check would be paid. Pruitt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 148, 202 S. W. 81.

To be guilty of the offense of swindling denounced by subd. 4, it is not necessary that the check or order given by defendant be signed by him, and where defendant gives a check or order signed by another knowing that it is valueless, etc., he is guilty of the offense. Moore v. State, 87 Cr. R. 77, 219 S. W. 1097.

— Indictment.—An indictment for swindling a corporation by drawing a check, should state the name of the particular person to whom the false representation was made. Pruitt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 148, 202 S. W. 81.

If the party injured by the giving of a worthless check is an individual, it is only necessary to allege his name; but if the injured party is a corporation, that fact must be alleged, and the indictment is bad if it fails to allege whether it is an individual, partnership, corporation, or joint-stock company. Whitaker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 272, 211 S. W. 787.

An affidavit and information for swindling, by giving a check on a bank in which defendant had not funds, or any reasonable prospects of having funds, need not allege that the bank, which was not the injured party, was an incorporated bank or a copartnership. Id.

An indictment alleging that defendant obtained automobile tires giving a check signed by J. I. B., which he falsely represented to be good, though he knew that neither he nor J. I. B. had funds in the bank on which the check was drawn, etc., sufficiently charges the offense denounced by statute. Moore v. State, 87 Cr. R. 77, 219 S. W. 1097.

— Variance.—If the name only of a party injured by the giving of a worthless check is alleged, it is proper and sufficient to prove that the injured party was an individual; but if the proof under such allegations should show that the injured party was a corporation, there would be a variance. Whitaker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 272, 211 S. W. 787.

An information charging the swindling of one C. out of $10 by giving a worthless check, and alleging C. to be owner of property obtained, was not sustained by evidence that C., as an employer of a company, cashed the check with the company's money, where it was not shown that he was a special owner, having exclusive possession and management of such money. Id.

Where information for swindling by giving a worthless check alleged that one C. was the injured party from whom property was obtained, and was owner of property, it was necessary to prove that he was the owner and that it was obtained from him as his property, and proof that some other party was swindled by transaction would be a variance, defeating state's case. Id.

— Evidence.—Although indictment did not allege that defendant and another were partners, testimony that amount of draft drawn by defendant was deposited to credit of defendant and another, held admissible. Krueger v. State, 82 Cr. R. 404, 199 S. W. 629.

Evidence held sufficient to warrant conviction of swindling by drawing check with "no good reason to believe that such check will be paid" under Pen. Code 1911, arts. 1421, 1422. Pruitt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 148, 202 S. W. 81.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction against defendant, who gave in payment of property a worthless check, signed by a third person. Moore v. State, 87 Cr. R. 77, 219 S. W. 1097.

See Luce v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1095.

Art. 1429. [Repealed by Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 49, § 1.]*2. FRAUDULENT DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY MORTGAGED OR SUBJECT TO LIEN*Art. 1430. [950] Fraudulent disposition of mortgaged property.

Offense.—The gist of the offense of fraudulently disposing of mortgaged property is the fraudulent sale of the property, and any pleading of the mortgage is by way of inducement. Hardin v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 676.

Indictment.—An indictment for fraudulent disposal of mortgaged property need not set out the mortgage. Hardin v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 676.

An allegation in an indictment for fraudulently disposing of mortgaged property, that the mortgage was a valid, subsisting, and unsatisfied mortgage, sufficiently alleged that the same was for a consideration, and given to secure a debt. Id.

Variance.—It is not variance for an indictment for fraudulently disposing of mortgaged property to name less property than is named in the mortgage. Hardin v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 676.

Evidence.—In a prosecution for fraudulently disposing of mortgaged property, whether accused sold the property before or after the execution of the mortgage held for the jury, although accused testified without contradiction that he sold it in the morning of the day that he executed the mortgage, which was given in the afternoon. Hardin v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 676.

Art. 1430b. Mortgagor of motor vehicle to inform mortgagee of location thereof.—Every person, firm or corporation who shall hereafter purchase any motor vehicle or accessories therefor, giving a mortgage thereon to secure the purchase price thereof or any portion of same, shall, upon demand, notify the mortgagee or holder of such mortgage of the location of such motor vehicle or accessories therefor. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 128, § 1.]

Art. 1430c. Same; punishment for refusal.—Any person, firm or corporation who shall, upon demand, hereafter fail or refuse to notify the mortgagee or holder of a mortgage given upon any motor vehicle or accessories therefor purchased by him to secure the purchase price thereof or any portion of same, of the location of such motor vehicle, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction therefor shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, or by confinement in the county jail for a period of not more than sixty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1435. [955] Agreement must be positive.

Art. 1446. [966] Sending threatening letter.

Indictment.—An indictment charging that the accused sent and delivered a letter to one W., threatening to accuse him of a crime, and that he did so send the letter with intent to extort money, but not alleging that he delivered the letter with such intent, does not charge the offense of delivering a letter with such purpose. Landa v. State, 26 Tex. App. 580, 10 S. W. 218.

SEDUCTION

Art.	Art.
1447. Punishment.	1450. Abandonment after seduction and marriage, offense defined.
1448. "Seduction" how used.
1449. Marriage obliterates offense.

Article 1447. [967] Punishment.

See Daniels v. State (App.) 14 S. W. 395; Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

Art. 1448. [968] "Seduction," how used.

1. Nature and elements of offense in general.—To constitute seduction a man must, in addition to the promise of marriage, use some other means than a mere appeal to the lust or passion of the woman. Putman v. State, 29 Tex. App. 454, 16 S. W. 97, 25 Am. St. Rep. 738.

Contention that a woman who had been once seduced can never be seduced again so as to be entitled to damages therefor is without support. Freeman v. Bennett (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 238.

The fact that accused told the prosecutrix that he would marry her as soon as he got $300 was only a promise conditioned as to time, and did not prevent it being sufficient to render him guilty of seduction. Hunt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 622, 214 S. W. 983.

That defendant was a minor, under age and incapable of contracting marriage, did not render him immune from the law for seduction under promise of marriage. Stracner v. State, 86 Cr. R. 89, 215 S. W. 305.

If defendant seduced prosecutrix through a promise of marriage, it is immaterial that no definite time was fixed upon for the marriage. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

3. Justification or defense.—If prosecutrix was unchaste, defendant was not guilty of seduction. Gainer v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 830.

7. Evidence.—In a prosecution for seduction, testimony by the father of the prosecuting witness that he had received information that defendant was a married man was admissible as a circumstance showing defendant's intent and motive in visiting prosecuting witness. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

In a seduction case in which prosecutrix' chastity was challenged by evidence of acts of intercourse with parties other than defendant, the state could submit evidence of her general reputation. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence that prosecutrix's sister was the mother of a bastard and had murdered her husband was not improperly excluded, where it was shown that prosecutrix had not associated with such sister since prosecutrix was five years old. Stracner v. State, 86 Cr. R. 89, 215 S. W. 305.

In a prosecution for seduction, the child of defendant and prosecutrix cannot properly be introduced in evidence. Adams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 67, 219 S. W. 460.

8. — Sufficiency.—Evidence held to sustain verdict of guilty of seduction. Barlow v. State, 84 Cr. R. 173, 206 S. W. 198.

In a criminal prosecution for seduction, evidence of the previous character of the prosecuting witness and of the acts and promises of defendant held sufficient to sustain a conviction. Stracner v. State, 86 Cr. R. 89, 215 S. W. 305.

12. Charge of court.—In view of Code Cr. Proc. art. 789, in prosecution for seduction, court should have given defendant's requested special charge in appropriate language, informing jury that acts and declarations of accomplice subsequent to seduction could not be used for corroboration. Haney v. State, 81 Cr. R. 651, 197 S. W. 1102.

In a seduction prosecution, a refusal to charge on the theory that there was evidence that prosecutrix submitted to intercourse for reasons other than that alleged in the indictment was not error, where there was no evidence raising that issue. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

Where, in prosecution for seduction, prosecutrix testified to a state of facts which, if true, would justify a verdict of guilty, an instruction tantamount to a peremptory instruction for defendant was properly refused. Scoggins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 519, 208 S. W. 930.

In prosecution for seduction, in view of the evidence, defendant's requested special charge that, if prosecutrix did not rely solely on defendant's absolute promise to marry her, etc., it was the jury's duty to acquit, though a promise of marriage was made held properly refused. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

In a prosecution for seduction, instruction that before the jury could convict they must believe that defendant seduced prosecutrix by his promise to marry her, and not through her passion, held not erroneous. Id.

Art. 1449. [969] Marriage obliterates offense.

In general.—Where one who is under arrest for seduction marries the female alleged to have been seduced, he cannot afterwards, in a prosecution for bigamy, claim that such marriage was under duress, as marriage under such circumstances is provided for by this article. Medrano v. State, 32 Cr. R. 214, 22 S. W. 684, 40 Am. St. Rep. 775.

Art. 1450. Abandonment after seduction and marriage, offense defined.

Indictment.—Indictment for abandonment after seduction and marriage, must allege the particular court where the complaint for seduction was filed. Seely v. State, 83 Cr. R. 363, 203 S. W. 596.

CHAPTER THREE C

EMPLOYMENT OF FEMALES

Art.

1451h. More than nine hours labor per day in certain employments prohibited, proviso.

Art.

1451k. Seats for females.

Article 1451h. More than nine hours labor per day in certain employments prohibited, proviso.

See Parish v. State, 87 Cr. R. 397, 221 S. W. 1085.

Computation of time.—The employer of a café waitress did not violate this article, where the time within formal working hours which the employee in fact spent outside the café and under her own direction brought her hours of actual work within the statutory limits. Haddad v. State, 86 Cr. R. 592, 218 S. W. 506.

The time a café waitress was eating her meals in the café, she being subject to call to discharge her duties, is not to be eliminated from her hours of employment. Id.

Indictment or information.—An information, alleging that defendant was foreman or manager of a department of a certain store whose ownership or management was not alleged, held insufficient to charge that defendant was the agent of any employer. Parish v. State, 87 Cr. R. 397, 221 S. W. 1085.

Art. 1451k. Seats for females.

Validity.—This article held a lawful exercise of legislative authority since the Legislature in the exercise of police power has the right to pass laws to safeguard the health of women employes. Glanges v. State, 87 Cr. R. 158, 220 S. W. 95.

Indictment or information.—Information charging a restaurant keeper with failure to furnish female employes with suitable seats when not engaged in active duties, was not defective, though it also charged a failure to give notice required by such statute; the statute providing no penalty for violation of the provision requiring such notice. Glanges v. State, 87 Cr. R. 158, 220 S. W. 95.

CHAPTER THREE D

PROTECTION OF EMPLOYÉS IN FACTORIES, MILLS, ETC.

Article 1451n. Punishment for violations of act.—Any person, firm, or corporation, or any owner, manager, superintendent or other person in control or management of any factory, mill, workshop, mercantile establishment, laundry or other establishment, who shall violate any of the provisions of this Act [Arts. 5243<sup>7</sup>/<sub>8</sub>–5243<sup>7</sup>/<sub>8</sub>g, Civil Statutes] or who shall fail or refuse to comply with any order of correction provided for in Section 7 of this Act [Art. 5243<sup>7</sup>/<sub>8</sub>f, Civil Statutes], unless such order shall have been attacked and set aside as provided for in Section 8 of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction in any court of competent jurisdiction shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty-five ($25.00) Dollars, nor more than two hundred ($200.00) Dollars, or by not to exceed sixty (60) days in the county jail or by both such fine and imprisonment; and each day the law is so violated shall constitute a separate offense. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 58, § 9.]

The act took effect 90 days after March 27, 1918, date of adjournment. See note under art. 5243<sup>7</sup>/<sub>8</sub>, Civil Statutes, as to peculiarities of title of the act.

CHAPTER THREE E

WAGES AND LABOR CONDITIONS

Articles 1451s, 1451t. [Repealed].

Explanatory.—Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 160, is repealed by Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 118, § 1.

Validity.—This section is valid; the Legislature having the power to enact such laws for the welfare and betterment of the conditions of working men, women, and children. Poye v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 161.

This section did not impair the obligation of contract in violation of Const. U. S. art. 1, § 10; such statute having become a part of the contract of employment, nor violate the due process of law clauses of Const. U. S. Amends. 5, 14, and state Const. art. 1, §

CHAPTER THREE F

PROTECTION OF WORKMEN ON BUILDINGS

	1451zz. Punishment for violations of act.

Article 1451u. Temporary floorings on certain buildings in course of construction.—Hereafter any building three or more stories in height, in the course of construction or repairs, shall have the joists, beams or girders of each and every floor below the floor level where any work is being done, or about to be done, covered with planking laid close together, said planking to be of not less than one and one-half inches in thickness, in buildings that have steel framework, and what is commonly known as one-inch plank in all others where joists are set on two feet centers or less, to protect the workmen engaged in the erections or construction of such buildings from falling through joists, girders, and from falling planks, bricks, rivets, tools or other substances, whereby life and limb are endangered. Where any scaffolding is placed on the outside of any of said buildings over any public street or alley where persons are in the habit of passing, then said scaffolding shall be so constructed as to prevent any material, tools or other things from falling off and endangering the life of passersby. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 152, § 1.]

Art. 1451v. Same; removal.—Such flooring shall not be removed until the same is replaced by a permanent flooring in such building. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1451w. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 1451zz. Punishment for violations of act.—Failure upon the part of the owner, agent of the owner, general contractor or sub-contractors to comply with the provisions of this Act shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, and each day of such violation shall constitute a separate offence. [Id., § 7.]

TRUSTS—CONSPIRACIES AGAINST TRADE

Art.	Art.
1461a. Revival of permit to do business; procedure.	1461c. Same; costs.
1461b. Same; corporations excepted.	1463. [Superseded.]
	1478. Trade unions, etc., exempt. when.

Article 1461a. Revival of permit to do business; procedure.—Any foreign corporation not engaged in the manufacture or sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, which has heretofore, more than ten years prior to the passage of this Act, been convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of Title 130 of the Revised Statutes of Texas of 1911, and its right to do business has been forfeited thereunder, and which, under the judgment of any court in this State, was not assessed a penalty in excess of $3000.00, shall be permitted to revive its permit to do business in Texas under the following provisions and in the following manner;

(a) It shall file suit in the court where the original judgment was entered, making the Attorney General of Texas a party defendant thereto, and serve notice upon him ten days prior to the time said suit is called for trial of the filing thereof, furnishing him a copy of the petition filed.

(b) It shall establish to the satisfaction of the court that the judgment of conviction against it was had more than ten years prior to the passage of this Act, and that the penalty assessed against it, either in the suit which forfeited its right to do business in this State or in any other suit against it for violation of the provisions of said chapter, was not in excess of $3000.00.

(c) It shall establish to the satisfaction of the court that it has not violated in any respect the judgment of the court forfeiting its right to do business in this State, and that it has paid in full the penalty assessed against it.

(d) It shall establish to the satisfaction of the court that it has no connection at the time of the trial, and has had no connection since said judgment of conviction, with any person, firm or corporation engaged in violating the provisions of said chapter.

(e) And the court must find as a fact that the company doing business is not at the time engaged in any business in violation of the anti-trust laws of the State of Texas.

Any tax collector who shall knowingly accept an application for the registration of a motor vehicle from which the original engine number has been removed, erased or destroyed in any manner, and which does not have on it the number designated by the Highway Department, shall be subject to a fine in a sum not less than $10.00, and not more than $50.00. Art. 1617<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>c. Sale of motor vehicle without possession of receipt showing registration of engine number.—It shall be unlawful for any person acting for himself or any one else, to offer for sale or trade any second-hand motor vehicle in this State, without then and there, having in his actual physical possession the Tax Collector's receipt for the license fee issued for the year that said motor vehicle is offered for sale or trade. [Id., § 3a.]

Any person violating the provisions of Sections 3a, 3b, [Arts. 1617<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>c, 1617<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>d] or 3c shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum, not less than Ten Dollars ($10) or more than Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00), or by confinement in the County Jail for any term less than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment, and all moneys collected for such fines shall be placed in the Road and Bridge Fund of the County in which the violation occurs and the penalty is recovered. Art. 1617<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>g. Record of work done on motor vehicles in garages, etc.—It shall be the duty of every person, firm or corporation engaged in the business of operating a repair shop or garage of every kind, within this State, where the repairing, rebuilding or repainting of automobiles is carried on, or electrical work in connection with the repair of automobiles is done and performed, and also it shall be the duty of every person, firm or corporation engaged in the business of the purchase and sale of second hand or used automobiles within this State, to keep a well bound book in the office or place of business where said work is carried on, or said business conducted, in which shall be kept, in a clear and intelligent manner, a register of each and every repair or change in any automobile of every description so repaired or dealt in, by any of the parties mentioned in this Act. Provided that repairs of a value not exceeding One ($1.00) Dollar are hereby excepted. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1617<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>h. Same; contents.—Said register shall contain a substantially complete and accurate description of each and every car upon which there is performed said repairs, or upon which there is installed any new parts or accessories of any character, and where the said car is bought or sold as a used car, the said register shall particularly show in each of the cases mentioned, the make of the automobile, the number of cylinders, motor number, passenger capacity, model, and also the name, apparent age and sex and any special identifying physical characteristics of the party or parties claiming to be the owner or owners of the automobile, his or their usual place of address, and the State register number of such automobile. In case of the sale of a used or second-hand car by any dealer, or the owner or proprietor of any garage, a like register shall be made as to the name and address and description of said purchaser, the character and description of said car and the state register thereof. Said registers provided for herein shall be kept in a secure place and be subject at all times to the inspection of any peace officer desiring to examine the same or any party or parties interested in tracing or locating stolen automobiles. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 1617<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>i. Engine number to be stamped on new cylinder block.—Any owner of a motor vehicle registered in the State Highway Department, as provided by law, and of which motor vehicle the cylinder block has been so damaged as to make necessary the installation of a new cylinder block, shall cause the original engine number of the motor vehicle to be stamped with a steel die on the new cylinder block, and the garage or repair shop so installing the new cylinder block and impressing the number thereon, as herein provided, shall enter a record in a substantially bound book showing the name of the owner of such motor vehicle and his address, the engine number, and the registration number of the motor vehicle. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 1617<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>j. Inspection of records.—All records required to be kept by the provisions of this Act shall be reserved for a period of one year after the date recorded, and shall be open for the inspection of the public at all reasonable hours. [Id., § 8.]

REPETITION OF OFFENSES

Art.
1619. Subsequent conviction for felony.

Art.
1620. Third conviction for felony, how punished.

Article 1619. [1015] Subsequent conviction for felony.

Indictment.—Where an indictment charges defendant with forging a check described therein and proceeds to charge that theretofore defendant was convicted of a similar offense, it will be presumed on appeal that the purpose of the pleader in drawing the indictment was to secure an increased punishment. Stevenson v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 174.

Art. 1620. [1016] Third conviction for felony, how punished.

Indictment.—It is not sufficient in an indictment merely to allege that the prior offense or offenses is or are the same offenses, since there must not only be prior offenses but prior convictions, not of the same offense, but of offenses of like character as that for which accused is being tried. Brittian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 491, 214 S. W. 351.

An indictment attempting to set up former convictions for similar offenses, charging defendant with "unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors," held insufficient to charge a violation of the law so as to form a basis for enhanced punishment, as in charging an offense the indictment must follow the statute. Id.

Former convictions.—To secure enhanced punishment because of a repetition of offenses and previous convictions, there must not only be prior offenses but prior convictions, not of the same offense, but of offenses of like character as that for which accused is being tried. Brittian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 491, 214 S. W. 351.

Convictions justifying enhanced punishment under Pen. Code, art. 1620, must constitute a final disposition of the case, and, if the judgment for any reason be set aside and another trial awarded, there is no conviction. Id.

Where a suspended sentence is awarded by the jury in a criminal case, there is no final conviction. Id.

Art. 3. [3] Trial by due course of law.

Cited, Cooper v. State, 25 Tex. App. 530, 8 S. W. 654.

Art. 4. [4] Rights of accused persons.

Explanatory.—Sec. 10, art. 1, of the constitution, from which this provision was constructed, has been recently amended. See p. — preceding the Civil Statutes, ante.

1. In general.—Defendant, a negro, tried for murder of a white man, against whom mob influence was manifested in and about the courtroom and in the presence of the jury and toward the sheriff, held not to have had a fair and impartial trial as guaranteed by Bill of Rights, §§ 10, 15. Liggon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 514, 200 S. W. 530.

5. Indictment.—Under Bill of Rights, § 10, in view of section 29, an indictment, leaving out the words “by the” in the formal clause “by the authority of the state,” held fatally defective, so that court erred in not allowing amended motion for new trial for alleged discovery that indictment had been amended by inserting such omitted words. Alvarado v. State, 83 Cr. R. 181, 202 S. W. 322.

While Const. art. 1, § 10, declaring that defendant shall have the right to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, and a copy thereof, cannot be abridged by the Legislature, those articles of the Code of Criminal Procedure providing for the service of indictments on defendants are not invalid, being an extension of the constitutional provision and recognizing the right of a defendant in all cases to have a copy of the indictment. Venn v. State, 86 Cr. R. 633, 218 S. W. 1060.

Where purported indictment was preferred by an illegal grand jury, that had been impaneled and was acting without authority of law, the prosecution will be dismissed for want of a legal indictment; the act of such illegal grand jury being void. Brannan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 169, 219 S. W. 1096.

The court to which the venue of a case is changed acquires no jurisdiction, where the indictment was not transmitted to it, because it had been lost in the other court, and not substituted, since under Bill of Rights, § 10, no citizen can be tried for felony except upon an indictment, and the court to which the venue was changed, therefore, cannot grant an order for substitution of the indictment. Hollingsworth v. State, 87 Cr. R. 399, 221 S. W. 978.

Under Const. art. 1, § 10, guaranteeing accused the right to demand the nature and cause of the accusation, in charging an assault with intent to commit another offense, it is necessary only to allege such matters as bring the offense within the definition of an assault coupled with an intention to commit such other offense, naming it, without giving the constituent elements of the offense intended to be committed. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122.

7. Evidence against self.—Permitting state to prove that defendant made finger prints on paper which corresponded with prints on glass of window pane in burglarized premises was not violative of Bill of Rights, § 10, providing accused must not be required to give evidence. McGarry v. State, 82 Cr. R. 597, 200 S. W. 527.

Documents found in defendant's wallet comprising certificates that J. J. Wilson (not defendant's name, but name under which he registered at hotel in vicinity of burglary charged) was a deaf-mute, and worthy of assistance, and data connected therewith, were improperly received. Id.

Under Bill of Rights, Const. art. 1, § 10, providing that no man shall be compelled to give evidence against himself, when a witness makes known his objection in any language, the trial court should either desist or further inquire into cause of his hesitation and inform him of his privilege. Mathis v. State, 84 Cr. R. 514, 209 S. W. 150.

One arrested without warrant cannot be compelled to testify before the grand jury as to matters involving those for which he was arrested as against a claim of privilege. Ex parte Sanchez, 85 Cr. R. 380, 213 S. W. 271.

The introduction of a notebook, taken by the sheriff from the person of accused on his arrest, which notebook contained certain memorandum claimed to be incriminating, was not a violation of the constitutional guaranty against requiring accused to give evidence against himself. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

In a prosecution for burglary, defendant being charged with having stolen hams and sausage meat, testimony as to the finding of the meat at defendant's house in her absence when search was made after her arrest without her consent was admissible despite Bill of Rights, §§ 9, 10, guaranteeing citizens against unreasonable searches and seizures, and against being compelled to give evidence against themselves, also despite federal Const. Amendments 4 and 5, controversy as to identity of property going only to weight of evidence. Riphey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

Statements of defendant while under arrest which are found to be true and which aid in establishing his guilt are admissible against him, and while under arrest defendant may be compelled to place his feet in certain tracks, or his shoe may be removed from his foot and placed in certain tracks, for identification. Id.

9. Immunity.—In prosecution for adultery, the paramour is an accomplice, and a promise of immunity, to secure her testimony, to be binding, must be sanctioned by the court. Messenger v. State, 81 Cr. R. 465, 198 S. W. 330.

10. Persons entitled to claim privilege.—The paramour in adultery, being an accomplice, cannot be forced to testify or used against her consent. Messenger v. State, 81 Cr. R. 465, 198 S. W. 330.

11. Hearing.—In a prosecution for misdemeanor, the time allowed by statute to prepare for trial, the right to appear by attorney, as well as the right to have illegal evidence excluded, may be waived. Wagner v. State, 87 Cr. R. 47, 219 S. W. 471.

Where defendant's attorney resided in a county other than that in which the case was called for trial, and was engaged in the trial of cases in such other county at the time that the case was called for trial, court's refusal to postpone trial because of the absence of defendant's attorney, where such postponement would not have operated as a continuance, and where such failure left defendant without any attorney, held reversible error. Parham v. State, 87 Cr. R. 454, 222 S. W. 561.

Accused's right, under the Constitution, to have the benefit of counsel, is a valuable right which the courts will strictly enforce. Id.

13. Confrontation of witnesses.—One convicted of burglary could not for the first time on motion for rehearing contend that the agreed evidence of two state's witnesses who were absent was inadmissible on the ground that he was deprived of being confronted by the witnesses. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

Evidence coming to the jury otherwise than that introduced under supervision of presiding judge, as by the statement of a juror after a retirement, violates the constitutional provision declaring that one accused of crime shall be confronted with the evidence against him, as such conduct denies cross-examination. Weaver v. State, 85 Cr. R. 111, 210 S. W. 698.

17. — Testimony at former trial or in other proceeding.—Admissibility in general, see art. 783, notes 149-151.

Where witness testifying in former trial is out of state and cannot be reached, his former testimony may be proved and introduced without violating constitutional right to be confronted by witnesses. Robbins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 650, 200 S. W. 525.

Art. 5. [5] Protection against searches and seizures.

Right to search.—It is permissible to enter a house to search for and seize stolen property, such action not being an unreasonable search or seizure, though, when such entry is over objection, it can be allowed only when in accordance with prescribed forms, such as search warrants, etc. Riphey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

Use of results of search in evidence.—In a prosecution for burglary, defendant being charged with having stolen hams and sausage meat, testimony as to the finding of the meat at defendant's house in her absence when search was made after her arrest without her consent was admissible despite Bill of Rights, §§ 9, 10, guaranteeing citizens against unreasonable searches and seizures, and against being compelled to give evidence against themselves, also despite federal Const. Amends. 4 and 5, controversy as to identity of property going only to weight of evidence. Rippey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

One arrested and searched may not complain that what was found on his person was used in evidence against him. Id.

That defendant was arrested and held in custody without a warrant did not render testimony as to a comparison of footprints at place of crime with those voluntarily made by defendant while in custody inadmissible under the search and seizure clause of the Bill of Rights. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 415.

Art. 6. [6] Prisoners entitled to bail, except in certain cases.

Right to, and allowance of, bail.—A trial court's denial of bail in a murder case is accorded great deference on appeal. Ex parte Sparks, 81 Cr. R. 618, 197 S. W. 873.

Under Const. art. 1, § 11, providing that all prisoners shall be bailable unless for capital offenses when the proof is evident, the word "evident" means that unless it is clear not only that accused is guilty, but that the jury would probably assess capital punishment. Ex parte Hill, 83 Cr. R. 146, 201 S. W. 996.

Where one was charged by complaint with murder, and the statement of facts of the testimony at the examining trial, which was used by consent, indicated that other pertinent testimony might have been introduced, and it does not appear that the proof was so evident as to justify holding the prisoner without bail, bail will be granted. Ex parte Haley, 83 Cr. R. 538, 204 S. W. 330.

To justify denial of bail, the evidence must be clear and strong, leading dispassionate judgment to the conclusion that the offense was committed by accused, and that he would probably be punished capitally if the law was administered. Ex parte Townsley, 87 Cr. R. 252, 220 S. W. 1092.

Upon application for bail in a capital case, the same will not be denied unless the evidence is such that the court must conclude that upon a proper decision based thereon the applicant would receive capital punishment. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 945.

Where defendant, who had separated from his wife, who was at the home of her parents, came there to pay her money due her in the division of their property, and, apparently without provocation, shot her father, killing him, defendant can be refused bail without violence to his rights under the Constitution, having acted with "express malice," involving a deliberate mind and formed design unlawfully to kill, evidenced by external circumstances. Littleton v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 946.

— Proof.—Evidence held not such as to warrant denial of bail. Ex parte Hill, 83 Cr. R. 146, 201 S. W. 996; Ex parte Johnson, 84 Cr. R. 535, 208 S. W. 518; Ex parte Stevens, 85 Cr. R. 449, 213 S. W. 656; Ex parte Young, 87 Cr. R. 412, 222 S. W. 242; Ex parte Wade, 87 Cr. R. 500, 222 S. W. 979.

Under Const. art. 1, § 11, making all persons bailable unless for a capital offense when the proof is evident, burden is on the state to show that the proof was evident against one held without bail to answer a capital charge. Ex parte Townsley, 87 Cr. R. 252, 220 S. W. 1092; Ex parte Jones, 81 Cr. R. 646, 197 S. W. 997; Ex parte Ray, 86 Cr. R. 582, 218 S. W. 504.

The mere conflict of testimony will not necessarily entitle an accused to bail because conflicting testimony may be evidently not true by reason of mistakes or perjury. Ex parte Lewellen (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 326; Ex parte Young, 87 Cr. R. 412, 222 S. W. 242.

Where eyewitness testified that deceased was walking along a street, and accused approached him from behind, and, without a word of warning, struck him on the head with a metal pipe, inflicting a fatal blow, and, when deceased collapsed, walked calmly away until he reached a street corner, then fled at full speed, and medical expert testified that skull of deceased was crushed and that such a wound would kill any man, the court was justified in concluding that there was a killing upon express malice and that a capital offense had been committed, and bail was properly refused. Ex parte Ray, 86 Cr. R. 582, 218 S. W. 504.

Evidence, showing bad feeling and previous fight, in which deceased vanquished accused, and that accused shot deceased three times on meeting him, held insufficient to show that jury would probably inflict the death penalty so that accused was entitled to bail. Ex parte Townsley, 87 Cr. R. 252, 220 S. W. 1092.

Trial court held not in error in refusing to grant bail to defendant charged with killing his uncle. Ex parte Lebo (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 187.

Evidence in a habeas corpus proceeding held to raise the issue of self-defense, to entitle defendant charged with murder to bail. Ex parte Lewellen (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 326.

Where accused's theory of an accidental shooting would entitle him to bail and if his theory was rejected there would be an unexplained killing, held, that accused was entitled to bail. Ex parte Cole (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 175.

Where the verdict of the jury upon the former trial fixed the applicant's punishment at less than capital and testimony tending to show a conspiracy between the applicant and deceased's wife to kill deceased was erroneously admitted, the court cannot say that the jury upon another trial would be likely to inflict the death penalty, and the applicant should be admitted to bail. Ex parte Cates (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 396.

Art. 8. [8] Excessive bail, fines, etc., forbidden.

Construction and operation in general.—Under Const. Bill of Rights, § 13, and this article, forbidding cruel or unusual punishment, the appellate court can review the question whether the punishment is excessive. Calhoun v. State, 85 Cr. R. 496, 214 S. W. 335.

Art. 9. [9] No person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense.

1. In general.—Defendant, though convicted of assault and fined, is liable to exemplary damages in a civil suit; this not being a double punishment for the same offense, in view of Const. art. 16, § 26. Hartman v. Logan (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 61.

The Legislature may single out, of acts made penal by general laws, those having certain characteristics and make all acts having those characteristics more heavily penal than the others. Ex parte Roy, 85 Cr. R. 626, 215 S. W. 322.

In an indictment for statutory rape, an allegation that prosecutrix was under 15 years of age was favorable to accused, the statutory age of consent being 18 years, as thereby the pleader placed a greater burden on the state than required by law; and was not objectionable on the ground that an acquittal thereunder on proof that prosecutrix was over 15 would not bar a subsequent prosecution by indictment charging her to be under 18. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

5. Quashing or dismissing proceedings.—Where one count of the information charged wife desertion and the other desertion of his minor child, the fact that after introduction of evidence the prosecutor elected to ask for conviction upon the second count did not raise any presumption in favor of the defendant which would relieve him from prosecution under that count or cast doubt on his guilt. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 507.

6. Withdrawn count or issues.—Where an indictment contains two counts, and defendant pleads to the indictment, and after such plea and impanelment of jury a count is dismissed or abandoned by the state, and he is tried on remaining count, as to count so dismissed or abandoned he cannot be again tried. Mizell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 305, 203 S. W. 49.

7. Discharge of jury.—Where accused entered plea of not guilty before a sworn jury, jeopardy attached, and his plea of jeopardy after jury was discharged, and the case continued and transferred to another county for trial, should have been sustained. Villareal v. State, 82 Cr. R. 327, 199 S. W. 642.

8. Judgment void, set aside, or reversed.—In a prosecution for aggravated assault in which defendant was convicted only of the included offense of simple assault, it was error to fail to sustain a plea of former conviction thereof before a justice of the peace upon defendant's voluntary appearance before the state began a prosecution and plea of guilty, in the absence of proof of fraud therein, although the justice erroneously assessed a lower fine than allowed by statute. Beasley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 486, 208 S. W. 538.

9. Identity of offenses.—It is not always true that one transaction will constitute but one offense, but the volition must be identical. Ex parte Jones, 83 Cr. R. 12, 200 S. W. 1085.

11. — Murder.—Where defendant in shooting a man whom he killed accidentally killed his own wife, of whose murder he was acquitted, he cannot be prosecuted under a separate indictment for the murder of the other, for, since both resulted from the same act, there could be but one offense. Spannell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 418, 203 S. W. 357, 2 A. L. R. 593.

14. — Assault with intent to murder.—Where defendant fired at one person and wounded another, it was within the discretion of the state to charge an assault on both or either of them; but conviction or acquittal in one case would bar prosecution in the other. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122.

18. — Assault.—Accused's conviction for aggravated assault might be pleaded in bar of a subsequent prosecution for assault with intent to murder, if such higher offense was complete when lower offense was committed. Munoz v. State, 81 Cr. R. 629, 197 S. W. 871.

A plea of former conviction of simple assault will not bar a conviction of aggravated assault. Beasley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 486, 208 S. W. 538.

A conviction for assault, under an indictment charging that defendant, while unlawfully carrying or having about his person a pistol, did make an assault, etc., is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, for the two offenses are entirely distinct, and averments as to unlawfully carrying a pistol might be rejected as surplusage. Young v. State, 87 Cr. R. 184, 222 S. W. 1103.

40. — Drunkenness and disturbing peace.—Conviction for disturbing the peace by loud, vociferous language, etc., held not to bar conviction for assault by use of gun in an angry and threatening manner. Clayton v. State, 81 Cr. R. 385, 197 S. W. 591.

51. — Violation of liquor laws.—The conviction of the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors will not preclude a conviction for unlawful possession of such liquors, and this is so notwithstanding the two prosecutions were based on the same transaction. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 108; Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 109; Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 337.

That accused was convicted in United States District Court for selling liquor without license does not amount to former "jeopardy" barring prosecution in state court for pursuing business of selling intoxicating liquor in prohibition territory. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 283, 199 S. W. 466.

That accused was convicted of individual, unlawful sales of intoxicating liquors in prohibition territory does not bar prosecution for pursuing business of selling such liquors in such territory, and individual sales may be shown to establish latter charge. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 283, 199 S. W. 466.

On a plea of former jeopardy the fact that separate indictments charged accused with selling intoxicants to different parties does not necessarily establish separate offenses, where the sale might be made at the same time and jointly to both parties. Westbrook v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 750.

54. Waiver of defense.—In the absence of a plea of former jeopardy or former conviction, evidence showing that defendant had been convicted in federal court for the same transaction is immaterial. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 446, 196 S. W. 519.

General rule, requiring pleading of identity of transactions involved in two indictments, would not apply where the two indictments embraced but one act, and the difference was in name only, since the court would judicially know the proceedings on accused's application for habeas corpus under the first indictment, and pleading and proof would be dispensed with. Ex parte Jones, 83 Cr. R. 12, 200 S. W. 1085.

Adjudication by the court of matter pleaded as former jeopardy is necessary, where such plea is decided adversely by the court, and not submitted to the jury. Whitener v. State, 83 Cr. R. 281, 203 S. W. 48.

56. Burden of proof.—A plea of former jeopardy, setting out that after a trial had begun, defendant's plea entered, and evidence heard, the jury were wrongfully dismissed, raised a question of fact, and while the burden was on defendant to show an abuse of the court's discretion in discharging the jury, he had the right to show that the court erred therein, if possible. Chadwick v. State, 86 Cr. R. 269, 216 S. W. 397.

57. Evidence.—Where one on trial for murder alleged the killing was in self-defense, that while so defending himself he accidentally killed his own wife, of whose murder he was acquitted, evidence that both offenses were the result of a single act and volition was admissible. Spannell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 418, 203 S. W. 357.

The question whether accused, who had been acquitted of murdering his own wife, had killed her accidentally while shooting in self-defense at another, or whether the killings were separate acts, held sufficiently raised by accused's testimony to require submission to the jury. Id.

Upon plea of former jeopardy, the record of the former trial does not control to the extent that it is res adjudicata, but parol evidence should be heard to show such identity of the offenses. Id.

Art. 10. [10] Trial by jury shall remain inviolate.

In general.—Much latitude must be given in the administration of the law concerning juvenile crimes, but the authorities cannot be too careful to see that no right is lost to one accused of a violation of the law through ignorance of the legal and constitutional guaranties of trial by jury and to be represented by counsel. Ex parte Brooks, 85 Cr. R. 252, 211 S. W. 592.

Injunction against disorderly house.—Where an injunction against keeping of a disorderly house by relator had been issued after trial by jury, imprisonment ordered in contempt proceedings without jury trial for violation of the injunction is not illegal, though the act complained of was also a crime: Ex parte Houston, 87 Cr. R. 8, 219 S. W. 826.

Art. 19. [19] Conservators of the peace; style of process.

Cited, Jefferson v. State, 24 Tex. App. 535, 7 S. W. 244.

Art. 20. [20] In what cases accused may be tried, etc., after conviction.

See Sterling v. State, 25 Tex. App. 716, 9 S. W. 45, 8 Am. St. Rep. 452; Huey v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 186.

Cited, Hooper v. State, 30 Tex. App. 412, 17 S. W. 1066, 28 Am. St. Rep. 926.

Art. 21. [21] No conviction of felony except by verdict of jury.

1/2. Waiver in general.—Defendant could not be held to have waived any right guaranteed him by the law, where, unless he waived it, he would have met death by lynching at the hands of a mob. Liggon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 514, 200 S. W. 530.

1. Authority of attorney in general.—In a prosecution for violating the local option law, it was competent for defendant's attorney to waive proof of records showing that the local option law was in effect; such fact not being a criminative fact. Landers v. State, 85 Cr. R. 109, 210 S. W. 694; Sullivan v. State, 83 Cr. R. 477, 204 S. W. 1169.

One accused of homicide is bound by an agreement of his counsel to the giving of a charge defining malice aforethought after the argument. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

3/2. Conduct of trial in general.—One accused of homicide could agree to correction of the charge, and is bound by an agreement of his counsel to the giving of a charge defining malice aforethought after the argument. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

In a prosecution for misdemeanor, the time allowed by statute to prepare for trial, the right to appear by attorney, as well as the right to have illegal evidence excluded, may be waived. Wagner v. State, 87 Cr. R. 47, 219 S. W. 471.

4. Right to trial by jury.—See Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

The conviction of infant as a delinquent was not void, though the trial was without a jury, since delinquency is not a "felony" under art. 1197, as amended, and since in cases other than felony a jury may be waived under this article. Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520; Mince v. State, 86 Cr. R. 327, 216 S. W. 834.

Under the Constitution, and in view of this article, the right of trial by jury must be held inviolate. Crisp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 137, 220 S. W. 1104.

In a prosecution for murder, where, after jury had been impaneled, and trial had proceeded for some time, one of the jurors was excused with the consent of defendant, and the case thereafter went to its final conclusion with only 11 jurors, such action was fatal error, and necessitates reversal of the conviction; defendant cannot waive the constitutional requirement that a jury consist of 12 men. Dunn v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 893.

5. Objections to Jurors or jury.—All of the grounds of challenge for cause stated in the statute, including that of failure of a juror to be a householder or a freeholder, may be waived by the accused. McGowen v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 763.

6. Separation of jury.—In a felony case, that defendant could not waive the provision that, when the jury separated, each juror should be accompanied by a court officer. English v. State, 28 Tex. App. 500, 13 S. W. 775.

7. Evidence.—In trial for homicide, error in admitting defendant's statements on a preliminary investigation in which she was charged or suspected of the crime was not waived by fact that she took stand to explain the testimony or to lessen its consequences. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 443, 199 S. W. 636.

While counsel cannot agree to waive the introduction of criminative facts, accused may if the waiver is warranted by law. Sullivan v. State, 83 Cr. R. 477, 204 S. W. 1169.

2. DISTRICT AND COUNTY ATTORNEYS

Article 34. [34] Shall hear complaints, and what the same shall contain.

See Harper v. State, 82 Cr. R. 149, 198 S. W. 786; Halbadier v. State, 87 Cr. R. 129, 220 S. W. 85.

Authority to take complaint.—For a complaint to be taken before the assistant county attorney, without reference being made to the county attorney, is proper practice. Ealey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 648, 224 S. W. 771.

Requisites and sufficiency—Time and place of offense.—On motion in arrest, complaint charging date of offense as "on or about the third day of June, 1917," held insufficient and not curable by information alleging proper date. Macumber v. State, 82 Cr. R. 220, 199 S. W. 298.

A complaint for desertion of wife and child, which alleged that "in said county and state" defendant committed the acts complained of, with no reference elsewhere in the complaint to any county, is insufficient to show that the desertion occurred within the county where the prosecution was instituted. Freeman v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1087.

Designation and description of persons.—In prosecution of a father for neglect to support minor children where complaint begins, "Personally appeared before undersigned authority this affiant who after being duly sworn," etc., and was signed by affiant and properly sworn to before proper officer and attested by proper jurat, defendant's motion to quash it because affiant's name was not given in body of complaint was correctly overruled. Utsler v. State, 81 Cr. R. 501, 195 S. W. 855.

A complaint which charged that defendant, "an adult male, did unlawfully commit aggravated assault in and upon the person of one Mary Loo D., the said _____ then and there being a female," sufficiently charged that the person assaulted was a female. Dickerson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 378, 212 S. W. 497.

Art. 35. [35] Duty when complaint has been made.

See Terry v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 510; Halbadier v. State, 87 Cr. R. 129, 220 S. W. 85.

Art. 36. [36] May administer oaths.

Jurat.—Complaint was invalid where jurat recited that complaint was sworn to and subscribed before the county attorney by his deputy (following Arbetter v. State, 79 Cr. R. 487, 186 S. W. 769). Goodman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 279, 212 S. W. 171.

A complaint reciting: "Sworn to and subscribed by R. A. D. [the affiant], before me, on this 18th day of October, 1918, _____, County Attorney of Ellis County, Texas. W. H. F., Assistant County Attorney, Ellis County." etc., sufficiently showed the affidavit was taken by W. H. F., the assistant county attorney. Dickerson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 373, 212 S. W. 497.

Art. 37. [37] Shall not dismiss case, unless.

See Camron v. State, 32 Cr. R. 180, 22 S. W. 682, 40 Am. St. Rep. 763; Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

In general.—The state is not bound by the agreement of a prosecuting attorney to dismiss, where the agreement has not been approved by the court. Surginer v. State, 36 Cr. R. 438, 217 S. W. 145.

Art. 40a. County attorney of Jefferson county to represent state.—

The County Attorney of Jefferson County shall represent the State in all prosecutions pending in said county court of Jefferson County at Law, and shall be entitled to the same fees as now prescribed by law for such prosecutions. [Acts 1915, 34th Leg., ch. 29, § 6; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 27, § 6.]

4. PEACE OFFICERS

Art. 44. [44] Duties and powers of peace officers.

See Pratt v. Brown, 80 Tex. 608, 16 S. W. 443.

General powers and duties.—Searching for unknown criminals is not a part of their official duty, and a constable may recover a reward for the arrest and conviction of a criminal in his own precinct; the offer having been made publicly, and having induced the constable to make the search. Kasling v. Morris, 71 Tex. 584, 9 S. W. 739, 10 Am. St. Rep. 797.

Art. 45. [45] May summon aid when resisted.

OF THE JURISDICTION OF COURTS IN CRIMINAL ACTIONS

Chap.	Chap.
1. What courts have criminal jurisdiction.	3a. Criminal district courts.
2. Of the court of criminal appeals [and the supreme court].	3b. Criminal court of Port Arthur.
3. Of the district courts.	4. Of county courts.
	5. Of justices' and other inferior courts.

CHAPTER ONE*WHAT COURTS HAVE CRIMINAL JURISDICTION*Article 63. [63] What courts have criminal jurisdiction.

Jurisdiction over persons.—A soldier of the United States who murders a citizen of the state has no right to removal of a prosecution from a state court to a federal court under Act Cong. Aug. 29, 1916, § 3, art. 117 (U. S. Comp. St. § 2038a[117]), where it was not contended that the act was done under color of his office or status. Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509.

Prior to passage of Act Cong. Aug. 29, 1916, the jurisdiction of the military tribunals over offenses committed by soldiers of the United States army was not exclusive. Id.

Although under Act Cong. Aug. 29, 1916, military authorities have the prior right to try a soldier who murdered a citizen, the soldier who has committed the crime cannot object to being tried by a state court, where the military authorities have not asserted any right. Id.

Jurisdiction over subject matter.—Courts of this state have no jurisdiction to punish Mexican soldiers killing a United States soldier incidental to a battle in Texas between Mexican and United States troops during a state of war between this country and Mexico. Arce v. State, 83 Cr. R. 292, 202 S. W. 951, L. R. A. 1918E, 358.

Concurrent jurisdiction.—If justice court first acquired jurisdiction of prosecution for gaming, justice should have retained jurisdiction and disposed of case. Wrenn v. State, 82 Cr. R. 642, 200 S. W. 844.

OF THE COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS [AND THE SUPREME COURT]

Art.	Art.
68. Appellate jurisdiction described.	81. Reporter to return opinions.
69. Power to issue writs.	87. Article 86 construed.
70. Power to ascertain matters of fact.

Article 68. [68] Appellate jurisdiction.

Jurisdiction in general.—Court of Criminal Appeals has no jurisdiction to determine restraint and custody of minor under order of probate or district court; all of such matters being civil and within exclusive jurisdiction of civil courts. Miller v. State, 83 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 389.

A contempt proceeding, criminal in its nature, cannot be reviewed by the Court of Civil Appeals. Beverly v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 975.

Stare decisis.—As between the line of decisions of the court which the court believes to announce the law correctly and another line of decisions which appear to arrive at erroneous conclusions, it is court's duty to announce the error when its attention is called thereto, and to affirm its views of what the law really is. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

On the question of sufficiency of instructions as to corroboration of testimony of a seduced female, former opinions of the Court of Criminal Appeals, although valuable in their bearing on corroboration, were not controlling authority, where the question decided in such cases was not one relating to instructions. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

Art. 69. [69] Power to issue writs.

1. Habeas corpus—power in general.—Primarily the jurisdiction of Court of Criminal Appeals is appellate and generally where complete relief against any supposed error will be afforded by appeal the writ of habeas corpus is not available. Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

Under Const. art. 5, § 5, and arts. 69, 160, 174, 175, 181-183, Court of Criminal Appeals has jurisdiction to issue writ of habeas corpus in any case where person is illegally restrained of his liberty, and under Const. art. 5, § 3, and Rev. St. art. 1529, Supreme Court has concurrent jurisdiction where restraint grows out of civil case. Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

Where one is held in contempt proceedings on verbal order, and obtains writ of habeas corpus from Court of Criminal Appeals, court making order is without power to correct it, or to oust jurisdiction of Court of Criminal Appeals, which attaches by issuance of writ, by causing commitment to be issued. Id.

Where application for habeas corpus should have been presented to Supreme Court, restraint growing out of civil cause, but when application for writ was presented to Court of Criminal Appeals it did not contain copy of order or process against relator, but stated it could not be obtained, in compliance with art. 174, writ having been issued, it is duty of Court of Criminal Appeals to decide question. Id.

Generally speaking, Court of Criminal Appeals will not issue original writs of habeas corpus in cases where other courts have jurisdiction to do so. Id.

2. — Grounds for writ and allowance thereof.—Where accused was indicted for murder and was granted bail on application for habeas corpus, and a second indictment for robbery with a deadly weapon was based upon the same facts, failure to plead identity of the transactions cannot be supplied by second application for habeas corpus in such court, and an original application in the appellate court, not containing the facts made requisite to a valid second application by arts. 185 and 219. Ex parte Jones, 83 Cr. R. 12, 200 S. W. 1085.

3. — Necessity of application to lower courts.—Original writ of habeas corpus cannot be granted to secure release of woman committed to city farm because afflicted with syphilis on showing that both positive and negative results have come from various tests, since application for writ of habeas corpus to local courts would furnish the remedy. Ex parte Brooks, 85 Cr. R. 397, 212 S. W. 956.

5. — Delinquent children.—The Court of Criminal Appeals will not take jurisdiction of and inquire into the detention of a juvenile under a judgment by means of a writ of habeas corpus originally issued in such court, unless the judgment is absolutely void, but will relegate relator to his statutory remedy by appeal. Ex parte Brooks, 85 Cr. R. 252, 211 S. W. 592; Ex parte Davis, 85 Cr. R. 218, 211 S. W. 456.

6. — Contempt proceedings.—In contempt proceeding growing out of alleged failure to observe order in civil cause, Court of Criminal Appeals will refuse to grant writ of habeas corpus, relegating party to his remedy in Supreme Court. Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

Relator, adjudged guilty of contempt in controversy over custody of dependent child, under Civ. St. arts. 2184-2190, a civil proceeding, will not be granted habeas corpus by Court of Criminal Appeals, but relegated to civil courts in view of Const. art. 5, §§ 3, 5, and Rev. St. art. 1529. Ex parte Little, 83 Cr. R. 375, 203 S. W. 766.

Under Rev. St. art. 1529, original application for writ of habeas corpus to obtain release from restraint under order of district court adjudging relator in contempt for refusing to obey an injunction issued in a divorce proceeding, pending in the court, to which relation and his wife were parties, should have been addressed to the Supreme Court, not to the Court of Criminal Appeals. Ex parte Gregory, 85 Cr. R. 115, 210 S. W. 204.

Application for habeas corpus writ in cases of restraint for violation of an injunction should be made to the Supreme Court. Ex parte Houston, 87 Cr. R. 8, 219 S. W. 826.

Where relator violated a restraining order, and was imprisoned for contempt, the Court of Criminal Appeals will not entertain an application for a writ of habeas corpus, for Rev. St. art. 1529, gives the Supreme Court authority to entertain applications for writs of habeas corpus in cases in which the restraint grows out of a civil case. Ex parte Albritton, 87 Cr. R. 453, 222 S. W. 561.

9. Prohibition.—Where application for writ of prohibition to prevent interference with enforcement of statute was granted and temporary writ issued, but before the hearing on the permanent writ the statute had been declared void, the application would be dismissed. State v. Humphries, 81 Cr. R. 322, 195 S. W. 194.

Art. 70. [70] Power to ascertain facts.

In general.—Where papers are in record, and were not presented to clerk for filing within proper time, but after time had elapsed in which they should have been filed, fact can be shown. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

Motion to abate by Assistant Attorney General and county attorney supported by affidavit of county attorney and clerk of district court that appellant is dead will be granted. Burnett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 511, 204 S. W. 328.

Art. 81. [81] Reporter to return opinions.

Art. 87. [86] Article 86 construed.

Amount of fine.—Under express provision of this article, appeal to Court of Criminal Appeals will not lie in case appealed from inferior court to the county court, where a fine of less than $100 was there imposed. Perkins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 118, 198 S. W. 302.

Art. 95. Grand jury when selected shall discharge its duties as at a regular meeting.

Validity of indictment.—Indictment for murder, found at special term of court called by judge without giving 30 days' notice prior to time court was held, was valid. Davis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 539, 204 S. W. 652.

DALLAS COUNTY

Article 97ee. Practice in.

In general.—Despite provision that practice shall be same as on trial of other cases over which criminal courts of county have jurisdiction, under arts. 918, 919, appellant from conviction of misdemeanor in such county should have set out in recognizance penalty assessed, instead of following form provided in felony convictions by art. 903, and his appeal will be dismissed. Lawler v. State, 86 Cr. R. 534, 217 S. W. 383.

HARRIS COUNTY

Art. 97u. Criminal district attorney of Harris County; assistants and stenographer; salaries; oath; removal; powers of assistants; fees.

Validity.—Const. art. 5, § 1, specifically conferring on the Legislature power to enact a special law creating and providing for the organization of the criminal district court of Harris county, gave the Legislature power to include everything necessary to be done to such end, including provision for compensation to those who were to constitute the court, as the district attorney; the inhibition of Const. art. 2, § 56, against special laws regulating the affairs of counties, not applying. Harris County v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 792.

Negative determination by Legislature, that the statute, so far as undertaking to fix the compensation of the district attorney for the criminal district court for Harris county, was about a matter to which a general law could have been made applicable, held conclusive of the point, so that the statute was not violative of Const. art. 3, § 56, prohibiting any local or special law where a general law can be made applicable. Id.

TRAVIS AND WILLIAMSON COUNTIES

Held, that the indictment was not void because not found during or returned in a court in session. Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

Where defendant was indicted for murder on June 17th and on June 26th was arrested and released by the sheriff on bail bond, held that, where the indictment was found by the grand jury of the district court of Bowie county, the criminal district court of Bowie county, created by this act, which went into effect June 26th, is without jurisdiction to adjudge a forfeiture of the bond taken by the sheriff without authority; the criminal district court having no incumbent for more than two months after the act went into effect. Morrow v. State, 86 Cr. R. 354, 216 S. W. 1100.

Jurisdiction.—Criminal district court of Bowie county has not original jurisdiction of the prosecution of a misdemeanor of which the county court did not have exclusive original jurisdiction prior to the creation of the criminal district court. Eaton v. State, 85 Cr. R. 610, 215 S. W. 99.

The criminal district court has not original jurisdiction of prosecution for selling adulterated milk, justice court having jurisdiction thereof in view of Pen. Code, arts. 698-716, prescribing punishment of fine of not more than $200. Eaton v. State, 85 Cr. R. 612, 215 S. W. 100.

[Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 28, § 3; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 8, § 3.]

Art. 97 $\frac{3}{4}$ b. Validity of original section.—Since the criminal district court, created by Acts 35th Leg. (4th Called Sess.) c. 28, was in effect a district court within the Constitution, the provision of that act authorizing a jury of 6 in a trial for misdemeanors is contrary to the constitutional requirement that the jury in a district court shall be composed of 12 men. Rochelle v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 838; Shipp v. State (Cr. App.) 222 S. W. 840; Bennett v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 841.

OF THE SUPPRESSION OF OFFENSES AFFECTING REPUTATION

Article 159. [149] On conviction for libel, court may order copies destroyed.

See Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 939.

OF THE SUPPRESSION OF OFFENSES AGAINST PERSONAL LIBERTY

Article 160. [150] Writ of habeas corpus.

See Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

1. Nature and scope of remedy in general.—The merits of a case involving guilt or innocence of an accused is not a proper subject of inquiry in a writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Rogers, 83 Cr. R. 152, 201 S. W. 1157.

Relator, held under order of city health officer by virtue of quarantine regulation established in accordance with Civ. St. art. 4605½, under a statement of order of arrest that according to information of health officer she is affected with gonorrhoea, had the right to have the legality of her detention inquired into in a habeas corpus proceeding. Ex parte Hardcastle, 84 Cr. R. 463, 208 S. W. 531, 2 A. L. R. 1539.

Where a relator in habeas corpus is held under a judgment regular on its face and against which no direct attack is made, the question of the jurisdiction of the court to enter such judgment is the only one that can be considered. Ex parte Davis, 85 Cr. R. 218, 211 S. W. 456.

Where the Assistant Attorney General moves to dismiss application for habeas corpus, accompanying the motion with affidavit of sheriff of county alleged by relator to have him in custody that he has never had relator in his custody in any way, there being also attached to the motion the official certificate of the county clerk that no commitment or warrant of any kind has ever issued for relator, the writ will be denied, and the application dismissed, since the writ of habeas corpus will not issue unless the party applying for it appears to be illegally restrained in some manner. Ex parte Jonischkies (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1092.

3. Substitution for other remedy.—The Court of Criminal Appeals will not take jurisdiction of and inquire into the detention of a juvenile under a judgment by means of a writ of habeas corpus originally issued in such court, unless the judgment is absolutely void, but will relegate relator to his statutory remedy by appeal. Ex parte Brooks, 85 Cr. R. 252, 211 S. W. 592; Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 389; Ex parte Davis, 85 Cr. R. 218, 211 S. W. 456.

Primarily jurisdiction of Court of Criminal Appeals is appellate, and generally, where complete relief against any supposed error will be afforded by appeal, the writ of habeas corpus is not available. Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

Whether an indictment contains irregularities will not be passed upon on habeas corpus; that being a question which court refuses to consider except upon appeal. Id.

Where accused had been charged with murder and had been granted bail in such prosecution and was then prosecuted for robbery of the same person at the same time, his contention that the transactions were identical was available on plea of former jeopardy in the second prosecution, but not on application for habeas corpus to require the granting of bail. Ex parte Jones, 83 Cr. R. 12, 200 S. W. 1085.

Where defendant contended that he could not be convicted of felony for his theft of motorcar, but only of misdemeanor, he is entitled to obtain relief from conviction of felony by appeal, and not by habeas corpus. Ex parte Jackson, 83 Cr. R. 55, 200 S. W. 1092.

The Court of Criminal Appeals should not encourage or permit collateral attacks by habeas corpus on judgments in cases where the matters complained of should properly be brought by appeal. Ex parte Roya, 85 Cr. R. 626, 215 S. W. 322.

Where the county court authorized the probation officer to take charge of a dependent child pending a motion for a new trial, such action, if error, could be corrected only upon motion for new trial or upon appeal, but not by means of writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 251.

While the court ordinarily declines to permit the functions of an appeal to be impinged by a writ of habeas corpus, the rule does not apply to the case of a mere child whose parents were not notified of the proceedings and who had no opportunity to prepare for an appeal. Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386

Where relator has failed to perfect his appeal from judgment of conviction, relief can be had on application for habeas corpus only if the judgment is void for failure of facts stated in the complaint to constitute an offense. Ex parte Ballard, 87 Cr. R. 460, 223 S. W. 222.

6. Enforcement of speedy trial.—Where one indicted for gaming gave bail bond which was declared forfeited, and he thereafter, being in jail, offered to plead guilty, but the plea was refused, he was not entitled to discharge on writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Bostick, 81 Cr. R. 411, 196 S. W. 531.

7. Invalidity or irregularity of proceedings in general.—Habeas corpus is proper remedy for boy under 17, after dismissal of indictment, sentenced by court to Boys' Industrial School as delinquent without complaint or information against him. Ex parte Ramseur, 81 Cr. R. 413, 195 S. W. 864.

Where relator had been indicted for murder, and had been granted bail, and was then indicted for robbery with firearms involving the same transaction, and refused bail on his application, fraud or bad faith cannot, on habeas corpus, be imputed to the grand jury returning the indictment in the robbery case, or the court and county executive officers. Ex parte Funk, 85 Cr. R. 527, 213 S. W. 655.

Where relator, having been indicted for murder and granted bail, was then indicted for robbery with firearms, whether the offense of murder and the offense of robbery are identical transactions is a question of fact, dependent upon evidence produced before the trial court on the trial of such cases, and cannot be considered on application for habeas corpus. Id.

Judgment committing applicant to sheriff's custody, not shown to be void, cannot be reviewed on habeas corpus proceedings. Ex parte Smith, 110 Tex. 55, 214 S. W. 320.

Where applicant does not contend that he was adjudged guilty without evidence being heard, and does not bring up all the evidence, the court's refusal to sustain his defense is not reviewable on habeas corpus proceeding. Id.

A habeas corpus proceeding by one convicted of a crime is a collateral attack upon the judgment of conviction, and a presumption of validity is to be indulged in favor of the judgment. Ex parte Adlof, 86 Cr. R. 13, 215 S. W. 222.

Where, shortly after the court's refusal to discharge from custody relator, convicted of swindling, whose conviction was reversed on appeal and the prosecution ordered dismissed, the grand jury returned another indictment against relator, he is not held under the court's order that he be held to await the action of the grand jury to file a new indictment, but under an indictment pending against him, and he cannot obtain his discharge by habeas corpus. Ex parte Albertson, 86 Cr. R. 129, 215 S. W. 453.

Where it appears that no complaint was filed or that no warrant or capias was issued, or in the case of an infant with parents living in the vicinage that no notice was given them and no opportunity afforded for a trial by jury, or to be represented by counsel of the infant's or the parents' choice, the judgment may be attacked by habeas corpus. Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386.

Where a judgment convicting a minor of delinquency recites a sufficient complaint and information, and there is nothing conflicting with such recital, the law, requiring proceedings shall begin by complaint and information, is not therefore shown disregarded, and the conviction is not subject to collateral attack on habeas corpus. Guinn v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 233.

9. Void or voidable judgment.—Habeas corpus is not a method of appeal, and is a collateral attack which cannot be invoked where there have been mere irregularities in proceedings of another court, but only where the judgment of such other court is absolutely void. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 251; Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 199 S. W. 637; Ex parte Adlof, 86 Cr. R. 13, 215 S. W. 222, Ex parte Roach, 87 Cr. R. 370, 221 S. W. 975.

A judgment may be attacked as void by habeas corpus if matters alleged in the attack are such as, if true, the trial court would have been without jurisdiction either of the person of the relator or of the subject-matter, or to render the particular judgment. Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386.

Where a judgment, properly entered and duly certified, fixed the time of confinement upon conviction of a minor of delinquency, such judgment cannot be impeached in a collateral proceeding in habeas corpus by a memorandum made by the trial judge on his docket on the ground that the memorandum constituted a judgment and did not fix the time of confinement. Guinn v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 233.

In the absence of some extraordinary reason therefor, it is the practice of this court to refuse to determine a question of fact upon an application for a writ of habeas corpus, so that a judgment, convicting a minor of delinquency, will not be declared void upon the ground that notice was not served upon the parents as required, in the face of a recital in the judgment that such jurisdictional notice was given. Id.

10. Invalidity or insufficiency of indictment, information, or complaint.—When indictment regularly presented attempts to charge an offense defined by Code, a discharge on habeas corpus will not be awarded, however irregularly the offense may be charged, though, if offense charged is unknown to the law, accused will be discharged. Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

An indictment charging that liquors were unlawfully transported into prohibited territory, would sufficiently charge an offense to suffice, on application for habeas corpus, unless there was no law on which the prosecution could be founded. (Per Morrow, J.) Ex parte Fulton, 86 Cr. R. 149, 215 S. W. 331.

Defendant convicted in county court of violating an ordinance can attack the judgment of conviction by original application to the Court of Criminal Appeals for writ of habeas corpus on ground that the complaint was void, in that it charged no act which could be held penal. Ex parte Jonischkies (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 952.

11. Former jeopardy.—Where relator, after being acquitted of one charge of murder, was indicted on another, he cannot by habeas corpus raise the issue of autrefois acquit; the appropriate remedy being by special plea entered in the court in which the second indictment was pending. Ex parte Spanell, 85 Cr. R. 304, 212 S. W. 172.

14. Invalidity of ordinances.—In habeas corpus proceeding by one convicted under an ordinance which could not be held valid from any angle, the relator will be discharged. Ex parte Adlof, 86 Cr. R. 13, 215 S. W. 222.

15½. Custody of children.—Where a district court in divorce proceedings has determined the custody of minor children, such court has not the exclusive authority to change its determination, but habeas corpus before another court will lie by the husband against the wife under changed conditions to obtain a modification of the order as to custody. Foster v. Foster (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1064

1. DEFINITION AND OBJECT OF THE WRIT

Art. 161. [151] What a writ of habeas corpus is, etc.

See Childers v. State, 30 Tex. App. 160, 16 S. W. 903, 28 Am. St. Rep. 399.

Art. 163. [153] Not invalid for want of form.

See Stirman v. Turner (App.) 16 S. W. 787.

2. BY WHOM AND WHEN GRANTED

Art. 165. [155] By whom writ may be granted.

Jurisdiction.—The district court has jurisdiction under Const. art. 5, §§ 8, 16, of a proceeding in habeas corpus to determine question of the custody of a minor, notwithstanding the county court, under Civ. St. arts. 4091, 4122, had appointed a guardian, who had taken the custody of the minor; for the district court, as a court of equity, had jurisdiction to determine whether the guardian was fulfilling his duty and exercising his authority in a manner conformably to the best interests of the minor. Anderson v. Cossey (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 624.

Art. 167. [157] After indictment, returnable, where, etc.

In general.—A habeas corpus proceeding seeking bail must be made returnable in the county where the offense was committed. Ex parte Mitchell, 81 Cr. R. 517 196 S. W. 540.

Art. 169. [159] When the applicant is charged with misdemeanor.

In general.—Under the express provisions of this article, applications for writs of habeas corpus in misdemeanor cases should be made to the county judge. Ex parte Smallwood, 87 Cr. R. 268, 221 S. W. 293.

Art. 174. [164] Requisites of petition.

See Ex parte Smith, 23 Tex. App. 100, 5 S. W. 99; Ex parte Alderete, 203 S. W. 763.

Requisites of petition.—Where petitioner sought a writ of habeas corpus to obtain the custody of his minor children, he should, if relying on a divorce decree awarding the custody of the children to him, plead the decree. Cox v. Cox (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 627.

Habeas corpus proceedings to recover the custody of a minor child are in the nature of a civil action to determine the right to such custody in which the public has no concern, and the rights of the parties are to be determined as in any other civil action, so that the petition should plead facts necessary to petitioner's right to custody and those showing the incompetency of the other party. Vickers v. Faubion (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 803.

In a proceeding by a husband against his divorced wife for a writ of habeas corpus to determine custody of minor daughters originally awarded to the wife, petition held to allege developments after the decree materially altering the conditions then prevailing sufficient, in the absence of special exception, to sustain the writ as against a plea in abatement. Foster v. Foster (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1064.

Petition as pleading, not evidence.—Application for writ of habeas corpus in and of itself is not evidence of any of allegations therein stated, but is mere pleading, which must be proved like other allegations to entitle party to relief sought. Ex parte Clark, 82 Cr. R. 192, 198 S. W. 954; Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386.

A record consisting only of the application for habeas corpus with a copy of the capias attached, and containing no complaint, statement of facts, or other proof showing the prosecution against relator, and accompanied by no brief, so that it cannot be determined under which section of Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 60 (Civ. St. arts. 7314-7314q), the prosecution was brought, does not raise the question of the constitutionality of any of the sections of that act, and application will be dismissed for insufficiency of the record. Ex parte Smallwood, 87 Cr. R. 268, 221 S. W. 293.

Art. 175. [165] The writ shall be granted without delay, unless, etc.

Art. 177. [167] Judge may issue a warrant of arrest, when.

Extradition.—Where, in habeas corpus proceeding to obtain release from sheriff, it appears by the return that relator before issuance of the writ had been delivered to another person for the purpose of taking him to another state in obedience to a requisition, application will be dismissed. Ex parte Ranger, 85 Cr. R. 651, 215 S. W. 301.

Application for writ of habeas corpus seeking relief from writ of requisition will be dismissed, where it appears that since the granting of the writ the applicant has voluntarily submitted himself to the jurisdiction of the courts of the state issuing requisition, has pleaded guilty, and has been sentenced. Sanders v State, 86 Cr. R. 202, 215 S. W. 856.

Where a requisition shows that an affidavit has been made against the accused in the demanding state, and that a demand has been made upon the Governor of the state of the forum, which certifies that the affidavit is authentic, the requirements of the law are met, and it is immaterial, on habeas corpus to secure the release of one held under an extradition warrant, that the prosecuting attorney of a county of the demanding state was allowed to testify that certain acts constitute an offense under the law of that state. Ex parte Roselle, 87 Cr. R. 470, 222 S. W. 248.

One attacking on habeas corpus a warrant for extradition, which is regular on its face, etc., has the burden of showing that the prima facie case of regularity was not in accordance with the facts. Id.

Objection to the jurat of a justice of the peace affixed to the affidavit, a copy of which accompanied the Governor's extradition warrant, and which affidavit was certified as authentic by the Governor of the demanding state, on the ground that it did not state the number of the justice's precinct, will not be considered in habeas corpus proceedings, where there was nothing to show that in the demanding state a complaint sworn to before a justice of the peace was void, unless he stated in his jurat the number of his precinct, for, even though there was a technical defect in the jurat, it might be amended. Id.

In habeas corpus proceedings a fugitive from justice arrested under an extradition warrant will not be discharged because of substantial defects in the pleadings of the state, under the laws of the demanding state. Id.

In habeas corpus proceedings brought by one arrested on an extradition warrant, the question of identity is always one to be considered. Ex parte Jowell, 87 Cr. R. 556, 223 S. W. 456, 11 A. L. R. 1407.

Evidence in habeas corpus proceedings remanding for extradition should have that degree of certainty which would justify the magistrate to commit the accused. Id.

Where relator in habeas corpus proceedings had been arrested on an extradition warrant issued by the Governor at the request of the Governor of Montana, refusal of an application for continuance to take depositions to show that he was not in the state of Montana at the time of the alleged offense nor thereafter was error, since, if the application for continuance was true relator was entitled to his discharge. Id.

Where extradition warrant issued by Governor contained the recital, "And whereas, said demand is accompanied by a copy of said affidavit, duly certified as authentic, by the Governor of said state," a presumption arose in favor of the legality of the extradition warrant, and the burden was on the alleged fugitive to show in a habeas corpus proceeding that no proper affidavit accompanied the requisition papers and that the Governor was not in possession of the proper papers authorizing the issuance of the warrant. Ex parte Gradington (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 781.

Art. 181. [171] The words "confined," imprisoned, etc.

Cited, Ex parte Fulton, 86 Cr. R. 149, 215 S. W. 331.

See Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

Art. 183. [173] The writ of habeas corpus is intended to be applicable, when.

Cited, Ex parte Fulton, 86 Cr. R. 149, 215 S. W. 331; Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

Cases in which remedy may be invoked.—Where, when application for habeas corpus was filed, sheriff had no commitment for relator, and was holding him under verbal order of trial judge, writ should have been granted. Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

Where there is nothing but the application for habeas corpus, which shows that defendant was placed in jail following an adjudication that he was in contempt of the district court for refusing to answer questions before a grand jury, the Court of Appeals is unable to decide upon what the judgment was rendered, and must dismiss the application upon the presumption that the commitment was regular, and was based upon proper facts. Ex parte Berry, 85 Cr. R. 204, 210 S. W. 799.

Where the act penalized for contempt is beyond the jurisdiction of the trial court to punish, the Court of Criminal Appeals will review the case and relieve under a writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Kemper, 86 Cr. R. 251, 216 S. W. 172.

Art. 184. [174] Person committed in default of bail is entitled to the writ, when.

Time for application.—Where during the trial accused presented application for writ of habeas corpus so as to try to get bail during the further pendency of the trial, the application was properly refused as coming too late. Mirick v. State, 84 Cr. R. 388, 204 S. W. 222.

Art. 185. [175] Person afflicted with disease may be removed, when.

Cited, Ex parte Jones, 83 Cr. R. 12, 200 S. W. 1085.

3 SERVICE AND RETURN OF THE WRIT, AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON

Art. 190. [180] How the returns shall be made.

See, Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

Art. 192. [182] Custody of prisoner pending examination on habeas corpus.

Release on bail.—Order of Court of Criminal Appeals releasing relator on bail pending decision whether writ of habeas corpus should be issued or not did not suspend trial court's power to have written on minutes judgment it had rendered. Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

Art. 201. [191] Where party is indicted for capital offense.

See Ex parte Smith, 23 Tex. App. 100, 5 S. W. 99.

Determination of question.—In determining whether or not a homicide case is bailable, the decisions of the courts before the change in the law eliminating degrees of murder may be looked to. Ex parte Cole (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 175.

Art. 204. [194] Action of court upon examination.

Determination of case.—Relator, who was arrested for violating the anti-vice law and remanded in habeas corpus proceedings, having been discharged since notice of appeal was given to court on appeal, motion of Attorney General to dismiss appeal should be sustained. Ex parte Stedham, 84 Cr. R. 523, 208 S. W. 930.

On original application for habeas corpus, the Court of Criminal Appeals will not inquire into correctness of trial court's judgments on questions of fact. Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520.

On application for habeas corpus by infant convicted as a delinquent and sentenced to criminal training school or reformatory it will be presumed that the parents were given the required notice and, in the absence of a showing as to a request for the submission of the question of suspended sentence at the time of the trial, that the judgment of the court was proper, as against contention that court should have suspended sentence. Id.

Art. 205. [195] If the commitment be informal or void, etc.

See, Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

Defective commitment or warrant.—Where defendant is held for trial under indictment for murder, the court will not order his discharge on habeas corpus merely because the commitment or warrant of arrest was informal. Ex parte Nelson, 84 Cr. R. 570, 209 S. W. 148.

Art. 206. [196] If there be probable cause to believe an offense has been committed.

Probable cause.—In habeas corpus proceedings for discharge of prisoner charged with violation of Disloyalty Act, § 1 (Pen. Code, art. 173½), court will not discharge prisoner, though complaint does not set out the language used, or show wherein it was calculated to provoke a breach of the peace, and does not allege that it was used in the presence and hearing of a United States citizen, where there is probable cause to believe an offense has been committed. Ex parte Acker, 85 Cr. R. 364, 212 S. W. 500.

Art. 210. [200] Costs of the proceedings, how disposed of.

Persons liable.—The court will not tax costs against the sheriff, who merely arrested relator on a warrant issued by the proper authorities. Ex parte White, 82 Cr. R. 85, 198 S. W. 583.

Items taxable as costs.—Relator should not be taxed with costs of a stenographer employed by the adverse parties, when other stenographers were employed by the court. Ex parte White, 82 Cr. R. 85, 198 S. W. 583.

Where relator in habeas corpus acted from a belief that the law under which he was confined was unconstitutional, he should not be taxed with the clerk's fees and the Attorney General's fees. Id.

The relator in habeas corpus is properly taxed with the costs of witnesses and sheriffs made after the writ was sued out. Id.

Art. 211. [201] If the court be in session, the clerk shall record the proceedings.

See, Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

4. GENERAL PROVISIONS

Art. 216. [206] A person discharged before the indictment shall not be again imprisoned, unless, etc.

See Morrow v. State, 86 Cr. R. 354, 216 S. W. 1100.

Subsequent arrest.—Where Court of Criminal Appeals determined facts authorized judgment of district court under which relator was held, it having been entered in record, and relator's discharge being on ground that when order of Court of Criminal Appeals was made there was no judgment entered or process issued authorizing his detention, order discharging from custody is no impediment to subsequent enforcement of judgment of district court by proper process. Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 358, 203 S. W. 763.

Art. 217. [207] A person once discharged or admitted to bail may be committed, when.

Bail on second arrest.—Where defendant, who had been charged in justice court with murder, was remanded to jail without bail, and on habeas corpus proceedings was released, held, that the sheriff was not authorized, where defendant was thereafter indicted for murder and arrested on capias, to accept bail, and a bond so accepted was without authority. Morrow v. State, 86 Cr. R. 354, 216 S. W. 1100.

Art. 219. [209] A party may obtain the writ a second time, when, etc.

Second application.—Where accused was indicted for murder and was granted bail on application for habeas corpus, and a second indictment for robbery with a deadly weapon was based upon the same facts, failure to plead identity of the transactions cannot be supplied by second application for habeas corpus in such court, on an original application in the appellate court, not containing the facts made requisite to a valid second application. Ex parte Jones, 83 Cr. R. 12, 200 S. W. 1085.

Offense without the state.—One who steals property in another state, and brings it into Texas, may be tried and punished in Texas. McKenzie v. State, 32 Cr. R. 568, 25 S. W. 426, 40 Am. St. Rep. 795

Where a swindler obtained a bill of lading by falsely representing that he had loaded a car with pipe to be shipped to a point in another state where he exchanged the bill for another, showing a second shipment to another point, and deposited with such bill a draft on the consignee for collection, and obtained advancements against such draft by means of a forged telegram, advising that the draft had been paid, the fact that a prosecution might have been had in the state where the original bill was obtained did not prevent the courts of the state wherein the subsequent fraudulent transactions occurred from having jurisdiction. Taylor v State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 525.

1. GENERAL RULES APPLICABLE TO ALL CASES OF BAIL

Article 315. [303] Definition of "bail."

Bail or recognizance.—Mere fact that to end of appellant's recognizances were signed names of appellant and sureties, under circumstances that judgment entering recognizance recited appellant and sureties came into open court and were properly recognized, as required by statute, did not constitute it a bail bond. Dickey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 154, 198 S. W. 309.

Art. 316. [304] Definition of "recognizance."

Recognizance.—Mere fact that to end of appellant's recognizance were signed names of appellant and sureties, under circumstances that judgment entering recognizance recited appellant and sureties came into open court and were properly recognized, as required by statute, did not constitute it a bail bond. Dickey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 154, 198 S. W. 309.

A recognizance, "This day came into open court W., defendant in the above entitled and numbered cause, who together with S., J., and T., sureties, acknowledged themselves jointly and severally indebted to the state of Texas, * * * conditioned that the said W., who stands charged with the offense of a felony, to wit, unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors, in this court, shall appear before this court from day to day and from term to term of the same, and not depart therefrom without leave of this court in order to abate a judgment of the Court of Criminal Appeals of the state of Texas in this case," is such as is required for the appearance of an accused, but is not the recognizance required upon appeal under arts. 902, 903, nowhere stating that accused has been convicted of any named offense. Westbrook v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1104.

2. RECOGNIZANCE AND BAIL BOND

Art. 320. [308] Requisites of a recognizance.

Cited, Reed v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 969.

Appearance.—Where convicted defendant recognized February 16th to appear before district court on 1st day of July and there to remain to answer on charge by indictment, etc., to abide judgment of Court of Criminal Appeals, recognizance was insufficient as not requiring defendant to appear before district court from time of entering into it. Clay v. State, 83 Cr. R. 527, 204 S. W. 330.

Art. 321. [309] Requisites of a bail bond.

6. Form and requisites in general.—Bail bonds are statutory, and the terms of the statute must be strictly followed. Turpin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 96, 215 S. W. 455.

Where there is a difference between the date of execution and approval of a bail bond, the date of execution controls. Raymond v. State, 87 Cr. R. 178, 220 S. W. 88.

5. Designation of offense.—A bond naming offense of “violating the local option law” created no liability on the surety, since it neither stated that the offense was a felony, nor named an offense eo nomine prescribed by law. Anderson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 130, 201 S. W. 994; Saunders v. State, 86 Cr. R. 322, 216 S. W. 870.

Where a bail bond set out that defendant committed a felony by attempting to export munitions of war into Mexico in violation of the Presidential Proclamation of March 12, 1914, held that the bond was sufficient, having set out that the offense was a felony, which was all that was required by the statute, notwithstanding the original proclamation of President Taft, under the Congressional Resolution of March 14, 1912, making a violation a felony, had been revoked before March 12, 1914; a similar proclamation having been issued by President Wilson before and in effect at the time the offense was alleged to have occurred. United States v. Buchanan (D. C.) 255 Fed. 915.

Bail bond describing the offense with which the principal was charged as “unlawfully keeping intoxicating liquor in violation of law, a felony,” held sufficient in the description, all that is necessary being to state that defendant is charged with a felony or misdemeanor; the remainder of the descriptive language used in the bond might be treated as surplusage. Briggs v. State, 87 Cr. R. 473, 222 S. W. 246.

Art. 325. [313] In what manner bail shall be taken.

See Cockrell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1097.

Art. 326. [314] Property exempt from sale shall not be liable for, etc.

See Cockrell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1097.

Art. 329. [317] Rules for fixing amount of bail.

Amount of bail.—In an ordinary case of arson, where it appeared that accused could not get any one to go bail for more than $1,500, the court erred in requiring a bond for $6,000. Ex parte Bowman, 83 Cr. R. 598, 204 S. W. 329.

3. SURRENDER OF THE PRINCIPAL BY HIS BAIL

Art. 336. [324] Sheriff, etc., may take bail bond, when.

See Russey v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 974.

Art. 337. [325] Sheriff, etc., not authorized to take bail in felony case when court is in session.

Unauthorized bail.—Where bail bond was taken and approved by sheriff during the term, forfeiture thereof will not be sustained; no bond having been fixed by the court either by an order entered upon the docket or verbally. Turpin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 96, 215 S. W. 455.

Where the indictment charged the offense of murder, which is a capital offense on its face, the sheriff is not authorized to fix and take bail himself, and, where the sheriff did take bail without authority, the bond is void and cannot be forfeited on scire facias. Morrow v. State, 86 Cr. R. 354, 216 S. W. 1100.

Art. 339. [327] Sureties are severally bound, etc.

Judgment.—A judgment against sureties on bail bond must follow the statute and decree sureties jointly and severally liable, and it is not enough to render judgment only specifically against each surety for the amount stipulated in the bond. Saunders v. State, 86 Cr. R. 322, 216 S. W. 870.

4. BAIL BEFORE THE EXAMINING COURT

Art. 343. [331] Reasonable time given to procure bail.

See Hollingsworth v. State, 87 Cr. R. 399, 221 S. W. 978.

Action for refusal.—In an action against a sheriff and his sureties for refusing plaintiff reasonable time to furnish bail, an instruction that it was the sheriff's duty to prepare the bail bond was not required under evidence showing that plaintiff prior to his incarceration was never ready to give bond. Russey v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 974.

Art. 345. [333] When accused is ready to give bail, a bond shall be prepared, etc.

Authority to take bail.—Magistrate had authority, while his court was in session, to take bond of one accused of felony. Ex parte Evans, 81 Cr. R. 366, 195 S. W. 861.

Duty to prepare bond.—In an action against a sheriff and his sureties for refusing plaintiff reasonable time to furnish bail, an instruction that it was the sheriff's duty to prepare the bail bond was not required under evidence showing that plaintiff prior to his incarceration was never ready to give bond. Russey v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 974.

Art. 346. [334] Accused shall be liberated upon giving bond.

Right to liberty.—Where justice of peace, while his court was in session, approved bond of one accused of felony, accused was entitled to discharge from custody. Ex parte Evans, 81 Cr. R. 366, 195 S. W. 861.

Art.

409. Any person may challenge, when.
416. Oath of grand jurors.
- 419a. Bailiff's compensation.

Article 389. [377] Shall select grand jurors.

Race discrimination.—Where both accused and deceased were negroes, evidence held not to show race discrimination, as alleged, in selecting grand and petit jurors, in that no negroes were selected. Roberts v. State, 81 Cr. R. 227, 195 S. W. 189.

Art. 400. [388] When less than 12 attend, court shall order others summoned.

Construction and application in general.—The statute authorizing the court to summon talesmen in the original organization of the grand jury does not apply to a discharge of or to the absence of one of the grand jurors after the body has been impaneled, so that where the grand jury took a recess from the 17th of January to the 17th of February, and on January 23d were reconvened by the court, ten of the jurors only responding to the call, that the court summoned other citizens to take the place of the two absent jurymen invalidated the organization of the grand jury, and an indictment found by the jury when so organized was a nullity. Wright v. State, 86 Cr. R. 434, 217 S. W. 152.

Art. 409. [397] Any person may challenge, when.

Time of making challenge.—An objection that one of the grand jurors was a non-resident of the county in which the indictment was found cannot be raised against the indictment. Lienburger v. State (Cr. App.) 21 S. W. 603.

Although accused did not object to array of grand jurors, he is not too late in presenting that question after return of indictment. Roberts v. State, 82 Cr. R. 227, 195 S. W. 189.

Art. 416. [404] Oath of grand jurors.

Cited, Murchison v. State, 24 Tex. App. 8, 5 S. W. 508; Addison v. State, 85 Cr. R. 131, 211 S. W. 225.

Secrecy as to proceedings.—Indictment found after state's and district attorney, sheriff, and chief of police were before grand jury discussing whether to proceed by injunction or indictment, was invalid. McGregor v. State, 83 Cr. R. 35, 201 S. W. 184.

In homicide prosecution where it was alleged in the indictment that grand jury did not know the means by which deceased was killed, it was not error to permit foreman of grand jury to testify as to the efforts made by the grand jury to ascertain such means and their inability to do so. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

In a murder prosecution, it was not error to refuse to require the district attorney to deliver certain written statements in his possession containing testimony of witnesses before the grand jury, such statements not being public documents, and accused having no right to inspect them. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

— Confession before grand jury.—Confession is not inadmissible merely because made before grand jury. Oliver v. State, 82 Cr. R. 529, 197 S. W. 185.

Art. 445. [433] Indictment shall be presented in open court.

Extension of term.—Under art. 974, fixing the terms of the criminal district court of Travis county, and Civ. St. art. 1726, authorizing extension of term until the conclusion of a pending trial, indictment found during such extension was not void, because not found during or returned in a court in session. Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

Acts 34th Leg. c. 139 (Civ. St. art. 30, subd. 66), authorized extension of March term of district court of Hill county beyond end of seven weeks specified, where business of grand jury was unfinished, and an indictment returned during extension was not invalid for that reason, but was returned into open court. Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 75, 204 S. W. 644.

Acts 34th Leg. c. 139, did not authorize the extension of the March term of the district court of Hill county beyond the end of the seven weeks specified, because the business of the grand jury was not finished, and an indictment returned during extension would be invalid (Per Davidson, J.). Id.

Special term.—An indictment cannot be attacked where found at a special term, because a term of court was then in session in another county in same district. Fisher v. State, 81 Cr. R. 568, 197 S. W. 189.

Art. 446. [434] Presentment to be entered of record, etc.

Filing and record in general.—The transcript of a case entitled "The State of Texas vs. Arch English. No. 154," which recited that the grand jury presented, in open court, "the following bill of indictment, which was thereupon ordered to be filed, to-wit, 'The State of Texas vs. ———. File No. 172,'"—failed to show the return of an indictment marked "No. 154." English v. State (App.) 18 S. W. 678.

Article 447. [435] Felonies presented by indictment only.

Cited, Pitner v. State, 23 Tex. App. 366, 5 S. W. 210.

Necessity of indictment.—The accusation against the principal in bail bond being by complaint for a felony in the district court, the forfeiture of the bond is invalid, since accusation should have been by indictment. Turpin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 96, 215 S. W. 455.

Art. 449. [437] All offenses must be presented by indictment or information.

Necessity of indictment or information.—A complaint and information in county court or an indictment in district court are necessary to sustain a conviction. Turman v. State, 81 Cr. R. 320, 196 S. W. 181.

The information is a prerequisite to a prosecution in the county court for keeping a disorderly house for the purpose of men and women meeting for sexual intercourse. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 326, 198 S. W. 958.

No prosecution for a criminal offense can be had except upon complaint or indictment. Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386.

Art. 450. [438] An indictment is what.

See Kennedy v. State, 86 Cr. R. 450, 216 S. W. 1086.

Meaning and requisites of indictment in general.—An indictment, partly printed and partly written, is not invalid. O'Bryan v. State, 27 Tex. App. 339, 11 S. W. 443.

Joinder of parties.—Where offense is joint or jointly charged, state does not meet allegations of information by showing it was committed by separate acts of alleged joint actors, and, under such circumstances, indictment or information cannot combine two as jointly acting together. Sampson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 594, 204 S. W. 324.

Art. 451. [439] Requisites of an indictment.

1. In general.—It is wholly unnecessary that an indictment allege the penalty for the crime. Bashara v. State, 84 Cr. R. 263, 206 S. W. 359.

When an indictment in a murder case contains more than one count, and the first count is abandoned, the formal parts thereof will be applied to the second count as against the objection that such count is defective, in lacking the formal headings and the other necessary matter to make it legal. Ellis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 529, 213 S. W. 264.

An indictment charging that defendant "did then and there unlawfully and willfully attempt to procure, and did procure, and was concerned in procuring," a female named as an inmate of a house of prostitution, although following the words of the statute, held insufficient as not disclosing the acts or omissions of accused by which he was charged to have procured the female inmate. Kennedy v. State, 86 Cr. R. 450, 216 S. W. 1086.

The rule that it is sufficient if the indictment follows the language of the statute applies only where the indictment is framed under a statute which defines the acts constituting the offense in a manner that will inform accused of the nature of the charge, the test being, not that the indictment follows the statute, but that it is a compliance with the law prescribing the requisites of an indictment, an "indictment" being a written statement of the grand jury accusing person therein named of some act or omission which by law is declared to be an offense, such offense to be set forth in plain and intelligible words, in view of arts. 450, 451, and Const. art. 1, § 10. Id.

2. Commencement.—Under Bill of Rights, § 10, in view of section 29, an indictment, leaving out the words "by the" in the formal clause "by the authority of the state," held fatally defective, so that court erred in not allowing amended motion for new trial for alleged discovery that indictment had been amended by inserting such omitted words. Alvarado v. State, 83 Cr. R. 181, 202 S. W. 322.

An indictment, commencing "in the name and by the authority of the state of Texas," is a literal compliance with this article, where such words are in quotation, and is sufficient, although the word "the" does not precede the word "authority" in Const. art. 5, § 12, relating to style of writs and process, where the words are not in quotation. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

3. Presentation and act of grand jury.—Indictment alleging, "The grand jury of C. county, Tex., upon their oaths present in the district court thereof, at the March term, A. D. 1917," sufficiently shows that grand jury was duly organized at court then in session. Carrillo v. State, 81 Cr. R. 636, 197 S. W. 998.

Where an indictment recited that it was found by the grand jury organized at the October term, the indictment was returned on November 21st, and on accused's application the venue was changed on November 24th, a motion then made to quash the indictment on the ground that there was a misnomer of the term of court at which it was returned was properly overruled, for the statement of the term of court at which the indictment was presented is not one of the statutory requirements, but is, at most, a matter of form, available only on motion to quash presented in due time, and under art. 630, it is contemplated that an exception to the form of the indictment should be made in the court in which the indictment is filed before the venue is changed. Finch v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 528.

7. Jurisdiction and venue.—Where an indictment shows it was brought by the grand jury of M. county, that M. county had adopted the local option liquor law, and alleges defendant did "then and there" violate said law, the words "then and there" held to refer to M. county. Bashara v. State, 84 Cr. R. 263, 206 S. W. 359.

An information for desertion of wife and children, which alleged that defendant in the county of the prosecution married and became the father of the children, and that he deserted them, is insufficient to show that the desertion occurred within the county, so that a motion to quash the information should have been sustained. Freeman v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1087.

Where an indictment alleged that defendant, in the county of Johnson, was then and there a person who had theretofore married a woman who was then and there his lawful wife, etc., and while she was alive married another woman, etc., it sufficiently alleged that the alleged bigamous marriage took place in Johnson county. Burgess v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 182.

10. Time and limitations.—An indictment charging that the offense alleged therein was committed on a specified day, which is the same as that in which the indictment was returned and filed, and containing no allegation that it was committed prior to the presentment, is fatally defective. Andrews v. State (App.) 14 S. W. 1014; Gill v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 578.

The offense of engaging in the business of selling liquors in prohibition territory, laid by the indictment as committed on or about a certain day, embraces a period of three years prior and up to the filing of the indictment. Jackson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 333, 200 S. W. 150; White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 286, 199 S. W. 1117.

An indictment for assault to rape, which alleges that the offense was committed "on or about the 8th day of December, one thousand eight hundred and nine," is substantially defective. Reed v. State (App.) 13 S. W. 865.

The facts may show that the offense was committed either before or after the alleged date, provided the date fixed in the indictment precedes the return of the indictment so that there was no fatal variance where indictment charged that burglary was committed on December 1st, and the evidence showed that accused was on the 18th of the same month found in possession of property which came out of the burglarized house. Connor v. State, 85 Cr. R. 98, 210 S. W. 207.

The date alleged in an indictment for violation of the local option law is not binding, and the state may show any date within the period of limitation as the date of the sale on which it elects to seek a conviction. Venn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 158, 210 S. W. 535.

Indictment charging burglary held sufficient without specific allegation that offense was committed anterior to presentation of indictment, where it appeared from recitals in the indictment that the date of the offense alleged was before indictment was filed. Dixon v. State, 86 Cr. R. 406, 216 S. W. 1097.

The date on which the offense is alleged to have taken place must be a date anterior to the filing of the indictment. Id.

An indictment for violating the local option law, alleging that on a certain date the sale of liquor had been prohibited in a certain county, that on that date defendant unlawfully engaged in the business of selling liquor, and that on a date more than a year later he made certain specific sales, without alleging that prohibition was still in effect, was not defective; the state not being bound by the specific dates alleged. White v. State, 86 Cr. R. 420, 217 S. W. 389.

The date of an offense is practically immaterial, provided the offense is alleged to have been committed prior to filing of the indictment and within the period of limitation. Id.

An indictment, presented on August 31st, which charged the offense of passing the forged instrument to have been committed on July 31, and anterior to the presentment, is not subject to attack on the ground that it fails to charge facts showing that the offense was committed anterior to the presentment. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 237, 238.

11. — Proof.—Where indictment was returned April 23, 1917, charging an offense on December 24, 1916, which was a misprint for December 24, 1915, evidence was properly admitted as to the offense on December 24, 1915, which was within the period of limitation and prior to the indictment. Vann v. State, 84 Cr. R. 97, 206 S. W. 80.

The evidence must show that defendant's illegal sale of intoxicating malt liquor occurred prior to the filing of the indictment therefor. Wales v. State, 85 Cr. R. 391, 212 S. W. 503.

12. Statement of offense.—If, eliminating surplusage, the constituent elements of the offense are so averred as to apprise defendant of the charge against him and to enable him to plead the judgment in bar of another prosecution for the same offense, the indictment is good. Jennings v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 525.

13. — Setting out written instruments.—Where a written instrument enters into an offense as a part or basis thereof or when its proper construction is material, the instrument should be set out in the indictment. Rudy v. State, 81 Cr. R. 272, 195 S. W. 187.

17. Conclusion.—Where an indictment failed to conclude with the words "against the peace and dignity of the state" or any equivalent declaration, it was void under Const. art. 5, § 12, declaring that prosecution shall be carried on in the name of the state of Texas and shall conclude "against the peace and dignity of the state." Revill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 1, 218 S. W. 1044.

It is not necessary to the validity of an indictment that the signature of the foreman appear thereon, and the same may be amended under the court's direction by attaching the foreman's name after filing. Searcy v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 319.

Art. 452. [440] What should be stated in an indictment, etc.

Cited, Jones v. State (App.) 19 S. W. 677.

Proof.—Wherever descriptive averments are made in indictment, whether necessary or not, proof must meet them, and all necessary allegations must be met by corresponding evidence. Kahane v. State, 83 Cr. R. 19, 201 S. W. 994.

In a trial for murder committed with a stick, which the indictment described with unnecessary particularity, the trial court correctly instructed the jury that it was sufficient if they believed the proof showed that the stick used was substantially the same as described in the indictment, in view of the rule that proof is sufficient, if it shows that the weapon charged in the indictment and the one proved to have been used are such that the nature and result of their use would be the same. Gilbert v. State, 85 Cr. R. 597, 215 S. W. 106.

Art. 453. [441] The certainty required.

Cited, Barner v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 559; Johnson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 33, 201 S. W. 187.

1. Certainty in general.—The indictment should set out the particular offense charged with such certainty as that a presumptively innocent man, seeking to know what he must meet, may ascertain fully therefrom the matters charged against him. Hardin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 220, 211 S. W. 233, 4 A. L. R. 1308.

Indictment for burglary must allege whatever is necessary to be proved with such certainty as will put the accused on notice and enable him to plead the judgment rendered in bar of subsequent prosecution for the same offense. Hasley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 444, 222 S. W. 579.

The whole indictment must be looked to to ascertain whether it lacks certainty. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1099.

10. Violation of liquor law.—To show prohibition law was in effect, an indictment need only allege that a prohibition election was held, that the result was declared by an order of the commissioners' court, and that an order was made prohibiting the sale of liquor. Wright v. State, 83 Cr. R. 415, 203 S. W. 775.

Art. 454. [442] Particular intent; intent to defraud.

4. "Knowingly."—Indictment charging that defendant did "unlawfully attempt to pass as true to O. a forged instrument in writing, * * * which said instrument in writing the said G. [defendant] then and there knew to be forged," held sufficient as against contention that it did not allege in the statutory language that defendant "knowingly" attempted to pass the instrument; the allegation that he knew it to be forged being sufficient. Jennings v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 525.

7. Intent to defraud.—Taking with intent to appropriate to use or benefit of taker being under Penal Code, art. 1329, an essential element of theft, and such intent therefore being required by this article, to be stated in the indictment, it not doing so, but stating that taking was with intent to appropriate to use and benefit of the owner, was bad. Arocha v. State, 86 Cr. R. 656, 218 S. W. 759.

Art. 456. [444] Allegation of name.

Cited, Fisher v. State, 81 Cr. R. 568, 197 S. W. 189.

1. In general.—A complaint and information describing the accused as "one Persqual" are fatally defective. Persqual v. State (App.) 8 S. W. 477.

It is error for the court to decide as matter of law that a person was correctly described as "Mrs. C. Davis" on proof that her husband's name was C. Davis, but the question should have been submitted to the jury to find whether she was known by the name "Mrs. C. Davis." Davis v. State (App.) 11 S. W. 647.

In prosecution for slander, information which failed to give either Christian name or initials of injured party, or state that they were unknown, held defective. Kelly v. State, 81 Cr. R. 408, 195 S. W. 853.

Indictment for perjury, charging defendant with falsely testifying before the grand jury investigating his relations with an unmarried woman, one Bradshaw, he being a married man, was not bad because, where it spelled the name Bradshaw correctly some 20 times, it once misspelled it Bardshaw, and under such indictment evidence of defendant's intimacy with the woman was admissible. Hardin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 220, 211 S. W. 233, 4 A. L. R. 1308.

Where the name of accused is originally properly set out in an information, and afterward referred to as the "said" party, a variance in the spelling or setting out of the name is of no importance. Estrada v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 685.

3. Suffix "Jr." or "Sr." as part of name.—The suffix "Jr." or the suffix "Sr." form no part of a name, and may be regarded as surplusage. Hardin v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 676.

5. When name is unknown.—In indictment charging reception of stolen property, it is necessary to name parties from whom stolen property was received by defendant, if names are known, and, if not, grand jury is justified in alleging names are unknown to it. Kahanek v. State, 83 Cr. R. 19, 201 S. W. 994.

An indictment for receiving stolen goods should allege either the name of the thief or that his name was to the grand jurors unknown. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 113, 201 S. W. 1002.

Charge submitting case should conform to indictment, charging, "some person to the grand jury unknown," and should not authorize conviction on intent to kill "any" person. Cannon v. State, 83 Cr. R. 154, 202 S. W. 83.

The state having alleged that property was received from some person to the grand jury unknown, it was necessary to prove it. Moore v. State, 84 Cr. R. 256, 206 S. W. 683.

To justify indictment alleging that defendant received property from some person to the grand jurors unknown, it must be shown that grand jury did not know, and could not have ascertained by reasonable diligence, from whom alleged stolen property was received by defendant. Id.

Where defendant claimed to have purchased automobile from specified person, and grand jury had in its possession, at the time it returned the indictment, the bill of sale to defendant from such person, it was error for the grand jury to charge defendant with fraudulently receiving the automobile from an unknown owner, without charging that he had received it from the person from whom he claimed to have purchased it in good faith. Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 190.

6. Names held to be the same or idem sonans.—Indictment for perjury committed in trial for arson, alleging that burned building was owned by "said" Virgil Tidwell and two others, where indictment showed that, whether name was "R. B.," "R. V." or "Virgil," the same person was meant, held not misleading or prejudicial. Herndon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 232, 198 S. W. 788.

"McPherson" and "McPherson." Hardy v. State, 86 Cr. R. 515, 217 S. W. 939, 8 A. L. R. 1357.

There is no material variance between a name as stated in the indictment and the name established by evidence, if they may be sounded alike without violence to the letters in the different spelling, or if they are pronounced rather indiscriminately one way or the other, and the difference in spelling is slight. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 510.

"Hodge," and "Hodges." Id.

"J. H. Alphian," and "J. H. Alphin." Escobedo v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 377.

9. Corporation.—An indictment which sets out the forged note by its tenor need not allege that the payee, a bank, is a corporation; the bank not being the injured party. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

If the name only of the party injured by the giving of a worthless check is alleged, it is proper and sufficient to prove that the injured party was an individual; but if the proof under such allegations should show that the injured party was a corporation, there would be a variance, and if the injured party injured is alleged to be a bank, the indictment is bad, if it fails to allege whether it is an individual, partnership, corporation, or joint-stock company. Whitaker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 272, 211 S. W. 787.

An affidavit and information for swindling, by giving a check on a bank in which defendant had no funds, or any reasonable prospects of having funds, need not allege that the bank, which was not the injured party, was an incorporated bank or a copartnership. Id.

14. Theft.—That name of owner of stolen calf was J. L. P. and not J. R. P., as alleged, was not material variance. Phillips v. State, 83 Cr. R. 16, 200 S. W. 1091.

15. Violation of liquor law.—In prosecution for procuring and delivering intoxicants to persons enlisted in military forces of the United States, verdict of jury held to solve, in favor of the state, any question of variance as to names of soldiers to whom liquor was given and names charged in indictment. Crosby v. State, 85 Cr. R. 297, 212 S. W. 168.

Art. 457. [445] Allegation of ownership.

See Gomez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 92, 206 S. W. 86.

In general.—Indictment charging embezzlement of money belonging to "Mesquite Camp No. 575, Woodmen of the World, a fraternal order and society," is insufficient; name showing that owner was not a natural person, and status of owner not being averred. Green v. State, 82 Cr. R. 420, 199 S. W. 622.

In prosecution for unlawfully breaking, pulling down, and injuring fence of another without his consent, that fence was in possession of person in whom ownership was alleged, and that such person did not consent to breaking down of fence, is essential to conviction. McCullers v. State, 86 Cr. R. 247, 216 S. W. 182.

In a prosecution for receiving and concealing stolen property, an instruction that the ownership and possession of the property alleged to have been stolen might be alleged in the person having the actual care, control, and management of the same, though another individual or corporation was the general owner, held correct. Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

On a trial for the theft of and the receiving and concealing of certain stolen automobile casings, testimony of the superintendent of the company from which they were taken was admissible to sustain the allegation of ownership and possession of the casings in him as an individual; it showing that he had the actual care, management, and control of the same. Id.

The rules with reference to the allegation and proof of ownership in the offense of robbery are not more restrictive than those pertaining to the offense of theft. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

General and special ownership.—Where indictment for larceny alleged ownership in railroad station agent, no conviction could be had without proof either that he owned it or had possession and control as agent of the railroad. Butler v. State, 83 Cr. R. 354, 203 S. W. 597.

Evidence held to show that ownership of stolen automobile was as alleged, and was not in the keeper of wagon yard where the automobile was temporarily stored, so as to warrant conviction of larceny. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 282, 203 S. W. 773.

An information charging the swindling of one C. out of $10 by giving a worthless check, and alleging C. to be owner of property obtained, was not sustained by evidence that C., as an employer of a company, cashed the check with the company's money, where it was not shown that he was a special owner, having exclusive possession and management of such money. Whitaker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 272, 211 S. W. 787.

Where, according to the evidence, S., the owner of cattle stolen, placed them in the pasture of H., controlled by one T., who looked after the place, and to both of whom, under Rev. St. art. 5664, rent was due from S. under their pasturer's lien, and ownership was alleged to be in S., there was a variance, and the indictment should have alleged ownership in T. or real ownership in S. and special ownership in T. Rabe v. State, 85 Cr. R. 373, 212 S. W. 502.

Where the owner of an automobile sold it and received a check in payment but was to keep the car until the purchaser could call and get it and it was stolen while in the possession of the original owner, the ownership, so far as the prosecution for larceny was concerned was properly alleged to be in the original owner; he having the control, care and management of the property. Torrence v. State, 85 Cr. R. 310, 212 S. W. 957.

In larceny prosecutions, while ownership may be generally alleged to be in the general or special owner, under the statute ownership must be alleged to be in the party who has the actual control, care, and management of the property, and it is not sufficient to allege ownership only in the real owner, although an allegation that possession is in the real owner does not detract from the indictment. Id.

There is fatal variance between a larceny indictment alleging that stolen cotton was in possession of a landlord and proof that tenant had possession and control of cotton under agreement that one-half net proceeds from its sale belonged to landlord as rental. Bergfeld v. State, 85 Cr. R. 489, 213 S. W. 986.

When one leaves the state and asks another to look after his house and property, an indictment may allege ownership in the one left to care for the house. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

Where a mother sent a watch to her son by parcels post, and the package reached the son's office in bad condition, with wrapper broken, so that the mail carrier who brought it was told claim would be made if anything was missing, and thereafter the watch in a small box was found by the janitor of the building in front of the elevator on the floor on which the son had his office, at the time of the finding of the watch by the janitor, its care was in the mail carrier, with whom it would remain until delivery, and in prosecution of the janitor for larceny of the watch, ownership thereof should have been alleged in such carrier in the alternative with the son. Holland v. State, 87 Cr. R. 89, 219 S. W. 458.

An indictment for robbery which named a special owner in possession is sufficient; consequently, though money stolen from a bank belonged to the corporate bank, the indictment is sufficient where an employee of the bank who was special custodian and had a special property therein was named as owner. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

In a prosecution for burglary, though the real ownership of the stolen property is in a corporation, if possession is in an individual, it is sufficient to name him as the owner. McGoldrick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 851.

Joint or common ownership.—Where an indictment alleges the ownership in one person, proof that the property was owned jointly by him and others does not constitute a variance. Pitts v. State (App.) 14 S. W. 1014.

Where the property of D. and S. was taken from their room, if a burglarious entry was made of said room, it might support a conviction under a count alleging that the burglarized premises belonged to D., and that the property intended to be taken was his. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 580, 218 S. W. 1051.

In a prosecution for burglary, allegation and proof of ownership of partnership property by either partner is sufficient. McGoldrick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 851.

Ownership by husband or wife.—Where the property stolen is community property and the spouses are living together, the ownership is properly laid in the husband. Greenwood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 548, 208 S. W. 662.

Estate ownership.—Ownership of a horse stolen from a ranch was properly alleged to be in one J. A. M., where the proof showed it belonged to the M. estate, of which J. A. M. was one of the heirs, and that J. A. M. had charge of the ranch properties and stock owned by the estate, although he had a hired foreman on the particular ranch who looked after the ranch when J. A. M. was not there; for such possession, care, and control as the foreman had of the horse was merely that of a servant and employé, and joint with that of J. A. M. Hartman v. State, 35 Cr. R. 582, 213 S. W. 936.

Where a building and property therein was in the control of G. L., the building belonging to an estate in which G. L. and several others were equally interested, and the property in the building belonging to a corporation, state, in a prosecution for burglary, need not allege or prove that the property was taken without the consent of such other interested persons; indictment having alleged that G. L. was the owner and in possession of both the premises and property, and testimony showing that no one else had anything to do with the management of the property. Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 618, 215 S. W. 97.

Unknown ownership.—If the owner of stolen goods is alleged to be unknown in the indictment for the larceny, and on trial the evidence shows the name of the owner, the state is required to go further, and show that the grand jury did not know the name of the owner, and could not by reasonable diligence have obtained such information. Trinkle v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 754.

In a prosecution for larceny of automobile tires, the indictment, in the count under which the conviction occurred, alleging theft from an unknown owner, such conviction cannot stand, where it appears that for purposes of the law of theft the goods, when stolen, were owned by an express company, which had received and receipted for them, and that the jury by the exercise of due diligence could have discovered the facts and laid the ownership properly in the indictment. Id.

Allegations that the accused received stolen property "from some person to the grand jurors unknown," and that said property had been theretofore acquired by another in such manner as to make the acquisition theft, held sufficient to charge receiving and concealing stolen property. Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

Art. 458. [446] Description of property.

In general.—An indictment alleging the theft of "on" horse was sufficient, as words not essential to constitute the offense may be rejected as surplusage. Barner v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 559.

Indictment for theft of a bale of cotton, giving its value, need not allege its weight. Bell v. State, 34 Cr. R. 160, 205 S. W. 986.

Description of property in indictment for theft as "one bale of seed cotton, of the value of $100," is sufficiently specific. Tolbert v. State, 84 Cr. R. 159, 205 S. W. 987.

A description of property, which is merely a classification, without stating the number and kind of the property is insufficient. Luce v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1095.

Art. 460. [448] Certainty; what sufficient.

See Todd v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 515.

Cited, Barner v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 559; Bigham v. State, 31 Cr. R. 244, 20 S. W. 577; Johnson v. State, 33 Cr. R. 33, 201 S. W. 187; Wright v. State, 33 Cr. R. 415, 203 S. W. 775.

2. Notice of offense charged in general.—The indictment should set out the particular offense charged with such certainty as that a presumptively innocent man seeking to know what he must meet may ascertain fully therefrom the matters charged against him. Hardin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 220, 211 S. W. 233, 4 A. L. R. 1308.

Art. 462. [450] "Public place;" allegation of.

In general.—Written complaint, charging the offense of drunkenness in a public place as substantially prescribed by Pen. Code, art. 204, held sufficient. Harper v. State, 82 Cr. R. 149, 198 S. W. 786.

Art. 464. [452] Selling intoxicating liquor; sufficient allegations as to.

In general.—Under indictment for following business of selling intoxicating liquors in prohibition territory, whether alleging unlawful sales to other persons or not state may prove such other sales to show offense charged. Mackey v. State, 81 Cr. R. 630, 199 S. W. 482.

An indictment, that defendant gave intoxicating liquor to one named, "then and there being under the age of 21 years, without the written consent of the parent. * * * of the said —, against the peace," etc., was too uncertain as to who was the minor and as to consent. Earnest v. State, 33 Cr. R. 41, 201 S. W. 175.

An indictment need only allege that a prohibition election was held, that the result was declared by an order of the commissioners' court, and that an order was made prohibiting the sale of liquor. Wright v. State, 33 Cr. R. 415, 203 S. W. 775.

Art. 465. [453] Perjury; sufficient allegation for.

3. Grand jury proceedings.—In an indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed before a grand jury, the allegations must show that the matter under investigation was a violation of law. Carpenter v. State, 31 Cr. R. 298, 195 S. W. 199.

An indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed before the grand jury should allege that the jury was investigating whether an offense had been committed in the county, since it has no right to investigate a crime in another county, rape excepted. Id.

Indictment for perjury before grand jury investigating charge of illegal liquor selling, alleging prior prohibition election, was not bad for omitting specifically to allege that liquor selling was unlawful at date of investigation. Timmins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 263, 199 S. W. 1106.

Indictment for perjury before grand jury investigating charge of illegal liquor selling in a certain county was not defective in failing to show that inquiry was confined to transactions taking place in that county. Id.

An indictment for perjury, charging that defendant made false statements before the grand jury which was investigating his relations with an unmarried woman, he being a married man, did not need to allege that defendant, or some other person, was in fact guilty of some crime, as adultery, in the matter about which he falsely testified. Hardin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 220, 211 S. W. 233, 4 A. L. R. 1308.

4. Jurisdiction and authority to administer oath.—An indictment for perjury or false swearing need not set up with particularity the facts showing the jurisdiction of the court in which the oath was charged to have been administered, or of the officer alleged to have administered the oath; but it is essential that averment be made, at least in substance, that the officer who administered the oath was qualified, etc. Green v. State, 86 Cr. R. 556, 217 S. W. 1043.

5. Oath.—In a prosecution for false swearing, the indictment should allege directly the administering of an oath, and it is insufficient that it appears inferentially from the jurat that the oath was administered by a notary public. Green v. State, 86 Cr. R. 556, 217 S. W. 1043.

6. Setting forth testimony or statement in writing in general.—In an indictment for perjury, it is always necessary to allege distinctly and clearly what the false testimony was upon which the alleged offense is based and to traverse it. Carpenter v. State, 81 Cr. R. 298, 195 S. W. 199.

In indictment for perjury by testimony that another had signed an order for goods, before the grand jury investigating a charge of forgery against the witness, it is advisable to set forth the alleged forged order. Id.

An indictment for perjury held to allege sufficiently that defendant testified to the matter assigned as perjury. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 418, 208 S. W. 345.

8. Use of words deliberately and willfully.—In indictment for perjury, setting out an indictment for arson, in trial of which perjury was committed, omission of word "willful" from charging part of indictment for arson did not render indictment fatally defective, so that defendant could not be convicted of perjury. Herndon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 232, 198 S. W. 788.

9. Materiality of testimony or statement.—Indictment for falsely testifying before the grand jury, in a prosecution for forgery, that another than the witness then accused had signed an order for goods, alleging that it was, before the grand jury, a material inquiry whether another had signed the order, was insufficient; the material inquiry being whether accused had signed the order. Carpenter v. State, 81 Cr. R. 298, 195 S. W. 199.

Indictment for perjury committed before grand jury held insufficient, in that it failed to show materiality of false testimony, or that matters inquired about could become a matter for investigation of grand jury. Alt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 337, 203 S. W. 53.

Indictment for perjury by testifying falsely to a material issue relating to the presence of one C. at a certain place and time where an assault was committed, held insufficient where it did not, allege that C. committed the assault. Morris v. State, 83 Cr. R. 521, 204 S. W. 106.

An indictment for perjury held to allege sufficient facts from which the materiality of the alleged perjured testimony could be inferred. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 418, 208 S. W. 345.

12. Proof and variance.—Indictment for perjury charging defendant with falsely testifying before the grand jury investigating his relations with an unmarried woman, one Bradshaw, he being a married man, was not bad because, where it spelled the name Bradshaw correctly some 20 times, it once misspelled it Bardshaw, and under such indictment evidence of defendant's intimacy with the woman was admissible. Hardin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 220, 211 S. W. 233, 4 A. L. R. 1308.

Art. 468. [456] Description of money, etc., in theft, etc.

Embezzlement in general.—An indictment charging embezzlement by the appropriation of "certain money, to wit, $6,667, which said money was of the value of $6,667," sufficiently described the property. Wray v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 808.

Art. 471. [459] Proof not dispensed with.

In general.—The proof must correspond with the material allegation. Hoffman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 11, 209 S. W. 747.

Art. 472. [460] Libel; indictment for.

In general.—An indictment, which set out a newspaper article that charged fire was of an incendiary origin, held insufficient to charge offense of criminally libeling the person named in the indictment as the one against whom it was directed, notwithstanding this article; there being no innuendo showing the applicability of the article to the one claimed to be libeled or that the diatribe in the article against Jews was directed against him. Potter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 380, 216 S. W. 886.

Art. 473. [461] Disjunctive allegations.

In general.—Information, charging that defendant unlawfully and fraudulently took from growing, standing, and ungathered corn, sufficiently charged statutory offense, since statutory offenses which may be committed in divers ways may be charged conjunctively, or a single phase may be charged. Sampson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 594, 204 S. W. 324.

The word "or," in Disloyalty Act, § 1, forbidding the use of language in the presence and hearing of another person of and concerning the United States of America, etc., which language is disloyal to the United States of America, etc., or is of such nature as to be reasonably calculated to provoke a breach of the peace, etc., was intended to be and should be read "and," and each element of the offense must be charged conjunctively. Fromme v. State, 85 Cr. R. 366, 212 S. W. 501.

Where there are various ways set forth in a statute by which an offense may be committed, an indictment may charge the various methods conjunctively. Black v. State, 86 Cr. R. 253, 216 S. W. 181.

Violation of liquor law.—An indictment or information, conjunctively charging the various phases of the statute prohibiting the selling or giving of intoxicating liquors to soldiers, including giving, selling, procuring, and all other means, is proper. Wales v. State, 86 Cr. R. 183, 217 S. W. 384.

Unlawfully practicing medicine.—Complaint and information for unlawfully practicing medicine, preferred under Pen. Code, arts. 750, 755, averring conjunctively several matters in articles defining offense, and following substantially an approved form, were sufficient. Reum v. State, 84 Cr. R. 225, 206 S. W. 523.

Art. 474. [462] Statutory words need not be strictly followed.

Cited, Johnson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 33, 201 S. W. 187.

Following language of statute in general.—In adultery prosecution, indictment containing no allegation that the habitual carnal intercourse was "without living together" held fatally defective; such words being statutory statement and requirement. Haley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 591, 209 S. W. 408; Yates v. State, 84 Cr. R. 590, 209 S. W. 407.

Pen. Code, 1022, subd. 2, defines an aggravated assault to be when committed "in any place of religious worship, or in any place where persons are assembled for the purpose of innocent amusement." Defendant was charged of an assault "at Hickory Grove school-house." Held, that since "at" conveyed the same meaning as "in," the charge was sufficient. (Augustine v. State, 20 Tex. 450, and State v. Nolan, 8 Rob. [La.] 517, followed.) Blackwell v. State, 30 Tex. App. 416, 17 S. W. 1061.

Generally an indictment following the language of the statute is sufficient, but where a written instrument enters into an offense as a part or basis thereof or when its proper construction is material, the instrument should be set out in the indictment. Rudy v. State, 81 Cr. R. 272, 195 S. W. 187.

Indictment for burglary of residence at night held not defective for using the word "steal" in place of the statutory word "theft." Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

Words of statute, or others of similar or more potent force, must be used in indictment. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 31, 201 S. W. 186.

Complaint for wife desertion, following the language of the statute, and alleging that defendant deserted his "wife," naming her, held not insufficient as failing to allege defendant was married. Turner v. State, 84 Cr. R. 605, 209 S. W. 406.

A complaint and information for violating the Sunday law, stating that defendant was a dealer "of" wares and merchandise, instead of "in" wares and merchandise, as used in the statute, was not invalid. Helms v. State, 84 Cr. R. 621, 209 S. W. 657.

An indictment attempting to set up former convictions for similar offenses, charging defendant with "unlawfully selling intoxicating liquors," held insufficient to charge a violation of the law, so as to form a basis for enhanced punishment under Pen. Code, art. 1620, as in charging an offense the indictment must follow the statute. Brittian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 491, 214 S. W. 351.

The rule that it is sufficient if the indictment follows the language of the statute applies only where the indictment is framed under a statute which defines the acts constituting the offense in a manner that will inform accused of the nature of the charge, the test being, not that the indictment follows the statute, but that it is a compliance with the law prescribing the requisites of an indictment. Kennedy v. State, 86 Cr. R. 450, 216 S. W. 1086.

Since an indictment in the language of the statute is frequently insufficient even if the statute attempts to describe but one offense, the fact that an indictment charging several distinct offenses was in the language of the statute defining those several offenses does not make it valid. Todd v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 515.

Negating exceptions or exemptions.—An information for selling milk adulterated by adding water, under Pen. Code, art. 706, declaring it unlawful for any person to sell or expose for sale adulterated or impure milk, containing proviso that skimmed milk may be sold if the can or package it is taken from is marked "skimmed milk," was not defective because containing no negative allegation that the sale was not a sale of skimmed milk so marked, as the statute contains no proviso authorizing a sale of water. Quarternick v. State, 84 Cr. R. 40, 204 S. W. 328.

It is not necessary that an indictment charging rape upon a girl under 18 years of age negative her previous unchastity. Kerley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 163.

Art. 476. [464] Defects of form do not affect trial, etc.

Cited, Johnson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 33, 201 S. W. 187.

2. Effect in general.—Insufficiency of indictments or complaints as to matters of substance may be availed of for first time in Court of Criminal Appeals. Yates v. State, 84 Cr. R. 590, 209 S. W. 407.

If an indictment or information is defective in some matter of substance, it will not support a judgment, and an attack may be made for the first time in appellate court. Woodard v. State, 86 Cr. R. 632, 218 S. W. 760.

3. Spelling, handwriting and grammar.—An indictment charging a violation of the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in prohibition territory, omitting the letter "i" in the middle of the word "intoxicating," when first used, held not open to attack. Bird v. State, 84 Cr. R. 285, 206 S. W. 844.

In prosecution for swindling by obtaining stock of goods by means of note and mortgage on property not owned by defendant, the mere variance of one letter in copying mortgage into the indictment, whereby the word "become" was spelled "becoke," would not be material. Albertson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 574, 208 S. W. 923.

That the pleader in writing the complaint in a prosecution for misdemeanor theft spelled the word "corporeal," "carporeal," does not render the indictment invalid. Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

A complaint and information which charged defendant with unlawfully carrying a "pistle" will be construed as charging defendant with unlawfully carrying a pistol, and the rule of bad spelling will apply, notwithstanding it was contended that the word "pistle" was an obsolete word meaning a letter. Garza v. State, 87 Cr. R. 537, 222 S. W. 1105.

Incorrect grammar, bad spelling, bad handwriting, and the use of words not technically in their correct sense or places will none of them make an indictment bad, unless they cause the thing intended to be charged to lack sense or certainty. Westbrook v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1104.

An indictment under the Dean Law, relating to sales of intoxicating liquors, was not bad by reason of using the word "or" instead of the word "nor" in the expression, "Not for mechanical, scientific, or sacramental purposes." Id.

Under the Dean Law, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, the use of the word "and" between the words "scientific" and "sacramental" in an indictment instead of "or," in negating the statutory exceptions, does not render the indictment void, particularly since such words may be used interchangeably and such use places no additional burden on the defendant, the state being required to prove that a sale was not under any of the statutory exceptions. Bell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 232.

Indictment charging swindling alleging that "S. [defendant] did falsely pretend and fraudulently represent to the said J. [prosecuting witness] that he had in his possession a certain valid writing obligatory, * * * and did then and there, by means of said false pretense and fraudulent representation, fraudulently induce the said J. * * * to exchange his said $84.15 for the said pretended writing obligatory," held sufficient against objection that it was indefinite and uncertain as to whom the pronouns "he" and "his" related. Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1099.

5. Typographical error.—Though the first letter of the word "February" was so indistinct or blurred as to appear to be "R," instead of "F," in the date in an indictment of the commission of a crime, the defendant was not misled thereby. Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 57, 198 S. W. 326.

7. Omissions.—The signature of the foreman of the grand jury to an indictment is a matter of form, and its omission will not invalidate the indictment. Searcy v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 799; Robinson v. State, 24 Tex. App. 4, 5 S. W. 509.

Failure of information, charging defendant with desertion of minor children, to allege the children to be in destitute and necessitous circumstances, as required by Pen. Code, art. 640a, is available to defendant on appeal, notwithstanding that question was raised for the first time by a motion in arrest of judgment, filed more than two days after the conclusion of the trial in the lower court; such information being fatally defective. Woodard v. State, 86 Cr. R. 632, 218 S. W. 760.

8. Surplusage or redundancy.—See Smith v. State, 87 Cr. R. 219, 220 S. W. 552.

Allegations not essential to constitute the offense, and which might be entirely omitted without affecting the charge against defendant, and without detriment to the indictment, are treated as mere surplusage and may be entirely disregarded. Jennings v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 525.

Indictment charging that defendant did "unlawfully attempt" to pass a forged instrument, and that he did "pass or attempt to pass" the instrument as true, held not bad for repugnancy, it being apparent that the defendant was charged with attempting to pass the instrument, the words "pass or" being surplusage. Id.

If a count in an indictment contains inconsistent allegations, both of which cannot be true, and there is no means of ascertaining from the face of the indictment which is meant, the indictment is bad for repugnancy, but, if it can be ascertained from the face of the indictment which is meant, the unnecessary part may be disregarded as surplusage. Id.

In an indictment for statutory rape, an allegation as to assault upon prosecutrix could be eliminated as surplusage without affecting the pleading. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

The use of the words "the same," instead of the word "said," did not render indictment bad where both words could be entirely eliminated from the indictment and it would still charge a complete offense. Seebold v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 328.

9. Repugnancy.—If a count in an indictment contains inconsistent allegations, both of which cannot be true, and there is no means of ascertaining from the face of the indictment which is meant, the indictment is bad for repugnancy. Jennings v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 525.

Indictment charging that defendant did "unlawfully attempt" to pass a forged instrument, and that he did "pass or attempt to pass" the instrument as true, held not bad for repugnancy. Id.

10. Duplicity.—The fact that the court submitted to the jury only one of the several distinct offenses charged in one count of the indictment does not cure the defect in the indictment. Todd v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 515.

Charging a number of distinct felonies in one count of an indictment violates the right of accused under Bill of Rights, § 10, to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, since an offense is but one act or omission forbidden by positive law under Pen. Code, art. 53, so that the defect is not a matter of form, but of substance, and warrants a reversal. Id.

12. Failure to allege date of local option election.—In prosecution for sale of intoxicants in prohibition territory, held that, after motion to quash indictment, and district attorney's motion to amend by inserting date on which prohibition election was held, court properly permitted amendment by insertion of date before announcement to try case on merits. Flores v. State, 82 Cr. R. 107, 198 S. W. 575.

In prosecution for violation of local option law, where information did not state whether election for local option was held before or after violation was made a felony, motion to quash should have been sustained as one of form. Shipley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 278, 208 S. W. 342.

13. Denial of motion to quash counts not submitted.—Where defendant was indicted on a count for forgery and on another for passing a forged instrument, and moved to quash the first, which the state dismissed, and conviction was had on the second, no reversible error is presented, even if conceded that the forgery count was subject to demurrer. Churchill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 193, 220 S. W. 326.

18. Forgery.—In an indictment for passing a forged check, an allegation that the check bore an indorsement was surplusage, but it did not render the indictment insufficient, even though the indorsement thereon was genuine. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 237, 238.

20. Assault and rape.—In an indictment for statutory rape, an allegation that prosecutrix was under 15 years of age was favorable to accused, the statutory age of consent being 18 years, as thereby the pleader placed a greater burden on the state than required by law; and was not objectionable on the ground that an acquittal thereunder on proof that prosecutrix was over 15 would not bar a subsequent prosecution by indictment charging her to be under 18. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

Art. 477. [465] Definition of an information.

Construction and operation in general.—Under the provision that an information contain the name of the person accused, or it be stated that his name is unknown, and give a reasonably accurate description of him, and article 456, a complaint and information describing the accused as "one Persqual" are fatally defective. Persqual v. State (App.) 8 S. W. 477.

Art. 478. [466] Requisites of an information.

Requisite 2.—Although by Civ. St. 1811—170, the court created was denominated "the county court of Wichita county at law," it was by the use of the words "at law" in its designation that such court was differentiated in name from the county court already in existence, so that an information stating its presentment in "the county court of Wichita county at law" was not defective as not conforming to the requirement, that from the information it must appear to have been presented in a court of competent jurisdiction, where the distinguishing words "at law" were preserved throughout all the pleadings. Pelz v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 154.

Information for unlawfully carrying a pistol presented in the "county court at law of Wichita county" was not subject to quashal on the ground the court was designated by act of the Legislature as the "court of Wichita county at law." Dodaro v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 394.

Requisite 4.—An information charging that "— did then and there" commit the offense charged was fatally defective. Minchen v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 712.

Requisite 5.—Where complaint charged offense of using indecent language over telephone as committed in Wichita county, information founded thereon charging such offense in county of — will not support conviction. Mays v. State, 83 Cr. R. 218, 202 S. W. 733.

Requisite 6.—An information, alleging an offense committed subsequent to the date it purports to have been filed, is bad. Winn v. State, 87 Cr. R. 485, 223 S. W. 230.

Where the complaint and information, sworn to on February 12, 1920, alleged that theft of property of the value of less than $50 was committed on February 11, 1920, and the state's evidence proved that the offense was committed on March 9th, thereafter, the variance was fatal. Estrada v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 685.

Requisite 7.—An information, alleging that prosecuting witness stated accused threatened to take his life, etc., held insufficient because not positively alleging accused's commission of offense, but only that affiant charged him with it. Janks v. State, 81 Cr. R. 493, 196 S. W. 182.

In prosecution for selling property on false representation that it was unincumbered, failure to directly allege existence and nonpayment of debt secured by mortgage held fatal; an inferential allegation not being sufficient. Moore v. State, 81 Cr. R. 606, 197 S. W. 728.

Art. 479. [467] Shall not be presented until oath has been made, etc.

Cited, Owens v. State, 25 Tex. App. 552, 8 S. W. 658.

2. Necessity of complaint in general.—A misdemeanor cannot be prosecuted in the county court without a complaint as a predicate for the information. McDonald v. State, 86 Cr. R. 304, 216 S. W. 166; Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 326, 198 S. W. 958; Adair v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 413.

It is not necessary that the presentation for contempt be supported by an affidavit, but it may be made by the prosecuting attorney in his official capacity. Ex parte Kahn (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 797.

4. Variance between complaint and information.—Variance between date of offense as alleged in complaint and that charged in information held fatal. Kelly v. State, 81 Cr. R. 408, 195 S. W. 853.

5. Authority to make complaint.—The Court of Criminal Appeals cannot assume from mere identity of names that the maker of a complaint for adultery was the same person as the woman named in the complaint as the adulteress, to sustain defendant's contention that such woman was an accomplice, and therefore not a credible person. Halbadier v. State, 85 Cr. R. 593, 214 S. W. 349.

In view of art. 795 and this article, the wife is not a credible witness, and is not competent to make complaint supporting an information against her husband for disturbing the peace of third parties. Stribling v. State, 86 Cr. R. 195, 215 S. W. 857.

Any person, including an accomplice, who is competent to testify against defendant is a "credible" person. Halbadier v. State, 87 Cr. R. 129, 220 S. W. 85.

6. Authority to take complaint.—For a complaint to be taken before the assistant county attorney, without reference being made to the county attorney is, under art. 34, proper practice. Ealey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 648, 224 S. W. 771.

7. Force and requisites of complaint.—Allegations in complaint would not aid information defective in substance. Kelly v. State, 81 Cr. R. 408, 195 S. W. 853.

A complaint that defendant kept a house to be used by "mer for the purpose of meeting by mutual appointment made by another for the purpose of sexual intercourse" does not state an offense, and is a variance from information charging it was done for the purpose of men and women meeting for such intercourse. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 326, 198 S. W. 958.

A complaint for adultery made "upon evidence and belief" of affiant was good and sufficient to support an information. Burnett v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 239.

8. Time and place of offense.—In a prosecution for aggravated assault a complaint alleging that the offense was committed on July 4, "191," was fatally defective. Oyervides v. State, 82 Cr. R. 201, 198 S. W. 786.

In prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, proof to sustain conviction must show that the unlawful carrying was before the filing of complaint. Cassi v. State, 86 Cr. R. 369, 216 S. W. 1099.

11. Verification.—A complaint forming the predicate for an information, the jurat to which is signed "D. L., County Attorney, by O. B. B., Assistant County Attorney," is insufficient, for, while either the county attorney or his assistant could administer the oath, the county attorney could not administer it by his assistant. (Per Davidson, J.; Prendergast, P. J., contra.) Arbetter v. State, 79 Cr. R. 487, 186 S. W. 769.

Under art. 10, because complaint charging defendant with gaming was sworn to by sheriff before justice of the peace, that of itself did not give justice jurisdiction to try case. Wrenn v. State, 82 Cr. R. 642, 200 S. W. 844.

Where the affidavit or complaint on which an information is founded is signed by an incompetent person, it is void, and the whole proceedings based thereon falls. Halbadier v. State, 87 Cr. R. 129, 220 S. W. 85.

13. Amendment and correction of complaint.—Allegation in complaint that offense was committed on July 4, "191," held not cured by the information. Oyervides v. State, 82 Cr. R. 201, 198 S. W. 786.

Although jury had been sworn, where oral motion to amend was made in open court and testimony in connection with it showed that officer before whom affidavit was made complied with law, court did not err in permitting complaint to be amended by adding thereto the jurat; it being unnecessary to make motion in writing. Nichols v. State, 84 Cr. R. 522, 208 S. W. 931.

Where a complaint for misdemeanor is sufficient except for an amendable defect but there is a variance between the complaint and information as to the time of the offense, a new information may be filed based on the complaint. Stockton v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 514.

14. Taking advantage of defects on appeal.—The Court of Criminal Appeals cannot assume from mere identity of names that the maker of a complaint for adultery was the same person as the woman named in the complaint as the adulteress, to sustain defendant's contention that such woman was an accomplice, and therefore not a credible person; all presumptions favoring the legality of proceedings in trial courts. Halbadier v. State, 85 Cr. R. 593, 214 S. W. 349.

On appeal from a conviction, question as to whether complaint was defective and did not support information may not be reviewed, where no motion to quash was filed and motion in arrest of judgment did not urge such ground, but because appellant claimed the evidence was insufficient; the attention of the court being first called to the defects in an amended motion for new trial, filed more than a month after the judgment was rendered. Burnett v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 239.

Art. 481. [469] Indictment, etc., may contain several counts.

5. Allegations in count as supplying defects in others—Commencement and conclusion.—When an indictment in a murder case contains more than one count, and the first count is abandoned, the formal parts thereof will be applied to the second count as against the objection that such count is defective, in lacking the formal headings and the other necessary matter to make it legal. Ellis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 529, 213 S. W. 264.

15. Theft.—It is proper to charge in separate counts of the same indictment the theft of and the receiving and concealing of stolen property. Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

15½. Forgery.—The fact that forgery and uttering a forged instrument are charged in separate counts in the same indictment does not render the indictment duplicitous. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 329.

17. Duplicity.—Misdemeanors of riot and of unlawful assembly were chargeable in same complaint and same information. Ligon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 147, 198 S. W. 787.

A complaint charging defendant with having taken part in an unlawful assembly with reference to two separate persons is not defective as charging separate and distinct offenses; unlawful assembly being one offense, though committed against two persons. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 505, 199 S. W. 1092.

An indictment containing but one count, in which two different and distinct felonies with different penalties are completely alleged, is bad for duplicity. Crouch v. State, 84 Cr. R. 221, 206 S. W. 525.

Information charging a restaurant keeper with failure to furnish female employes with suitable seats when not engaged in active duties as required by art. 1451k, was not defective, though it also charged a failure to give notice required by such statute; the statute providing no penalty for violations of the provision requiring such notice. Glanges v. State, 87 Cr. R. 158, 220 S. W. 95.

The rule that, when several ways are set forth in the same statute by which an offense may be committed, they may be charged conjunctively in the same count in the indictment, applies only where the statute defines but one offense, and not where it defines several distinct offenses, some of which did not involve the others. Todd v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 515.

An information and complaint for using another's automobile without his consent was not duplicitous because it charged in one count that accused had driven and operated, and caused to be driven and operated, said car. Pelz v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 154.

19. — Misdemeanors in general.—In misdemeanor cases, the state may charge separate and distinct offenses in different counts. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 507.

20. — Misdemeanor and felony.—Information charging defendant with being delinquent child within juvenile delinquent law, held not duplicitous as charging felonies and misdemeanors. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 339.

21. — Unlawful practice of medicine.—Complaint and information for unlawfully practicing medicine, preferred under Pen. Code. arts. 750, 755, averring conjunctively several matters in articles defining offense, and following substantially an approved form, were sufficient. Reum v. State, 84 Cr. R. 225, 206 S. W. 523.

22. — Violation of liquor law.—In indictment for following business of selling intoxicating liquors in prohibition territory, allegations that defendant made other and different sales of liquor in violation of law were not improper, and did not render indictment bad. Mackey v. State, 81 Cr. R. 630, 199 S. W. 482.

Allegation that defendant "did then and there, unlawfully and knowingly, directly and indirectly, purchase for and procure for, and did then and there give and deliver, and did then and there cause to be given and delivered," is in the terms of the statute, and contention that indictment is duplicitous because of such allegation cannot be sustained. Crosby v. State, 85 Cr. R. 297, 212 S. W. 163.

An indictment charging that defendant received, transported, exported and delivered, solicited, and took orders for and furnished intoxicating liquors charges a number of separate and distinct felonies in the same count, some of which were not involved in some of the others, and produced confusion and uncertainty as to the offense intended to be charged, so that the indictment was bad for duplicity, though all the offenses charged therein were stated disjunctively in the same statute. Todd v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 515.

25. — Forgery.—Under Pen. Code, art. 937, providing punishment for any person who shall "pass" or "attempt to pass" a forged instrument, both an attempt and a passing may be charged conjunctively in the same count; both being embraced in the same definition and made punishable in the same manner. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 534, 197 S. W. 589.

In an indictment for violation of Pen. Code, art. 943, the commission of the offense by altering, changing, mutilating, destroying, and injuring the documents may be alleged conjunctively, though they are inconsistent with each other. Smith v. State, 87 Cr. R. 219, 220 S. W. 552.

27. — Assault and robbery.—Under statute relative to robbery, indictment held not duplicitous because charging that property was taken by assault, violence, and putting in fear, and also by using and exhibiting a pistol. Lay v. State, 82 Cr. R. 202, 198 S. W. 291.

An indictment for robbery alleging defendant assaulted another by exhibiting a firearm, etc., is not objectionable as duplicitous, for the robbery statute, declaring that, if any person by assault or violence or by putting in fear of life or bodily injury shall fraudulently take from the person or possession of another any property with the intent to appropriate the same to his own use he shall be punished, etc., and, when exhibiting a firearm or other deadly weapon, the punishment shall be death or confinement, etc., does not denounce two offenses, and an indictment may properly refer to the exhibition of a firearm as aggravation. Crouch v. State, 87 Cr. R. 115, 219 S. W. 1099.

An indictment charging the offense of robbery with firearms was not vulnerable to motion to quash as duplicitous in that it charged two separate and distinct offenses; i. e., robbery by force and the placing in fear of bodily harm of the persons robbed and robbery with firearms, which may be punished by death. Roberto v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 890.

28. — Murder.—An indictment for murder may, in a single count, charge the murder of two or more persons by the same act. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122.

30. — Burglary and theft.—Indictment held not duplicitous as charging both burglary of residence at night and another breaking and entering of house. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

In indictment for burglary, alleging that defendant did "break and enter" "in the daytime and at night," was not duplicitous. Young v. State, 84 Cr. R. 232, 206 S. W. 529.

33. Election.—Where one count charged sale of personal property on false representation that it was unincumbered, and another count a fraudulent disposition of mortgaged property, held, that the failure to require an election was not error. Moore v. State, 81 Cr. R. 606, 197 S. W. 728.

In prosecution by complaint and information for offense of unlawful assembly, there being several counts charging offense, while defendant was also charged with riot, trial court properly refused to require state to elect as between offenses charged in several counts. Ligon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 147, 198 S. W. 787.

34. — What constitutes.—In Texas, the trial judge, by selecting the count in the indictment on which the jury shall pass, elects for the state. Shipp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 328, 196 S. W. 840.

Where, under indictment charging swindling and fraudulent disposition of mortgaged property, only the count charging swindling was submitted, held, that this was equivalent to an election. Moore v. State, 81 Cr. R. 606, 197 S. W. 728.

40. — Assault to murder, maiming, disturbing the peace, and robbery.—Where indictment contains both robbery by assault and use of deadly weapons, that part, charging the use of deadly weapons, which merely enhances the punishment, is not essential; and it is within the power of the state to abandon that phase and prosecute on the other, under Pen. Code 1911, art. 1327. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

Where an indictment charged both robbery by assault and robbery by use of deadly weapons, action of the state in announcing that that part of the indictment making it a capital case would not be insisted upon, when sanctioned by the trial judge by confining the accused to 10 peremptory challenges, amounted to a dismissal of that part of the indictment which made the case capital, or at least amounted to an election upon the part of the state to abandon that part of the indictment, which did not prejudice its right to proceed with the remainder, which charged a felony not requiring a special venire. Id.

42. — Rape.—Court correctly refused to require state to elect between count charging forcible rape, and count charging rape upon girl under 15 years of age. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 158, 198 S. W. 298.

Where accused was charged with rape, and evidence showed that he raped the victim and also held her while another also raped her, if he desired the state to elect the offense, it was incumbent on him to move for election. Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014.

Art. 482. [470] When indictment or information has been lost, mislaid, etc.

See Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381.

1. Constitutionality.—This article does not violate Const. art. 1, § 10, providing that "no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense, unless on indictment of a grand jury." Withers v. State, 21 Tex. App. 210, 17 S. W. 725.

10. Suggestion of loss and proceedings thereon in general.—Where there is no intimation in the record that a copy substituted for a lost indictment was not a substantial copy of the original, no error is shown by the substitution by order of the court on written motion. Mirick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 388, 204 S. W. 222.

15. Notice.—Substitution for a lost indictment is a judicial act, which must be upon notice giving defendant the right to contest the substitution. Hollingsworth v. State, 87 Cr. R. 399, 221 S. W. 978.

Art. 483. [471] Order transferring cases.

Authority and jurisdiction.—County court held without jurisdiction of prosecution transferred from district court, where transcript from district court did not show presentation of any indictment against defendant. Herenz v. State, 82 Cr. R. 438, 199 S. W. 618.

As indictment must be presented in district court county court can only acquire jurisdiction by order of transfer as required by statute. Dalton v. State, 82 Cr. R. 614, 200 S. W. 385.

Order.—An order of the district court transferring a case to county court, reciting that grand jury came into open court and through their foreman delivered to the court the following indictment, to wit: "The State of Texas v. Will Venn, File No. 4558"—sufficiently shows that indictment was filed in district court. Venn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 158, 210 S. W. 535.

Record on appeal.—Where a prosecution for a misdemeanor was begun by an indictment returned to the district court, which did not have jurisdiction, a conviction in county court cannot be sustained where the record does not show that the cause was transferred to the county court by order of the district court. Harper v. State, 84 Cr. R. 345, 207 S. W. 96.

Art. 484. [472] What causes shall be transferred to the justice of the peace at county seat.

See Herenz v. State, 82 Cr. R. 438, 199 S. W. 618.

Order of transfer.—Where a prosecution for a misdemeanor was begun by an indictment returned to the district court, which did not have jurisdiction, a conviction in county court cannot be sustained where the record does not show that the cause was transferred to the county court by order of the district court. Harper v. State, 84 Cr. R. 345, 207 S. W. 96.

Bill of costs.—A bill of costs accruing in the district court, which accompanies an indictment in its transfer to the county court, need not be itemized. Venn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 158, 210 S. W. 535.

1. OF ENFORCING THE ATTENDANCE OF DEFENDANT AND OF FORFEITURE OF BAIL

Article 488. [476] Bail forfeited, when.

Art. 489. [477] Manner of taking a forfeiture.

1. Judgment nisi in general.—Since, under arts. 488–643, judgment nisi on forfeiture of bail bond is interlocutory, and does not become final, in view of arts. 490, 493–498, until citation is entered, dismissal of motion to set aside judgment nisi left such judgment in statu quo, and the order was not appealable, in view of arts. 504, 960, and art. 2078, providing that appeals lie only from final judgments. Burgemeister v. State, 83 Cr. R. 307, 203 S. W. 770.

Recitals in a judgment forfeiting a bail bond as to service of citation will not on direct attack, as writ of error, prevail against recitals in the sheriff's return. Saunders v. State, 86 Cr. R. 413, 217 S. W. 148.

7. Dismissal as to principal or co-surety.—On scire facias to forfeit a bail bond pending appeal, the trial court did not err in dismissing as to the principal. Swim v. State, 86 Cr. R. 576, 218 S. W. 761.

10. Variance between judgment and bond.—There was a fatal variance between a judgment nisi, declaring upon a bond requiring an appearance before the district court to answer upon a charge by indictment, and a bond entered in obedience to an order of the magistrate, binding over accused to answer any accusation that might be preferred by a grand jury; no indictment having been returned at the time of the execution of the bond. Raymond v. State, 87 Cr. R. 178, 220 S. W. 88.

The names of the parties, including the sureties to defendant's appearance bond, are an essential part of judgment nisi on such bond when forfeited, and, on effort to make the judgment final, a variance in that the judgment nisi named three sureties, while the bond proved on trial names only two of such three, is a matter so material as to render the bond inadmissible. Fitzgerald v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1096.

In scire facias on a forfeited bail bond, variance between the name of defendant in the indictment judgment nisi, and bail bond is fatal. Uppenkamp v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 544.

Art. 490. [478] Citation to sureties.

See Burgemeister v. State, 83 Cr. R. 307, 203 S. W. 770.

Function of citation or scire facias.—In cases of forfeiture of bail bond, the scire facias writ serves a dual purpose: First, as citation of the sureties; second, as the state's pleading—there being no more necessity of putting it in evidence than to put in the citation and petition in a civil suit. Uppenkamp v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 544.

In cases of forfeiture of bail, in so far as the scire facias writ performs the office of the petition, the state is bound by the essential matters therein stated, and the allegation and proof must substantially correspond; the proof being the indictment, bail bond, and judgment nisi against defendant. Id.

Art. 491. [479] Requisites of citation.

See Saunders v. State, 86 Cr. R. 413, 217 S. W. 148.

In general.—The citation need not recite that a capias had issued for the arrest of defendant, nor that he had been arrested. Conner v. State (App.) 9 S. W. 63.

Requisite 3. Name of principal, etc.—The names "Joe Oppenkamp" and "Joseph Uppenkamp" are not idem sonans, to avoid variance between the scire facias writ in proceedings on a forfeited bail bond and the proof, consisting of the indictment, bail bond, and judgment nisi; the scire facias naming defendant as "Joseph Uppenkamp," the indictment naming him as "Joe Oppenkamp," the bail bond naming him as "Joseph Uppenkamp," and the judgment nisi using both names. Uppenkamp v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 544.

Requisite 5. Forfeiture of bond.—A scire facias being both a petition and citation, where it describes a judgment nisi declaring a forfeiture on a bail bond as having been taken on a certain date, it is error on the trial to allow the state to introduce a judgment of forfeiture of a different date, the variance being fatal. Highsaw v. State (App.) 19 S. W. 762.

Citation to sureties on forfeited bail bond not naming amount for which the forfeiture was taken held insufficient. Curfman v. State, 81 Cr. R. 323, 195 S. W. 194.

On scire facias to forfeit bail bond pending appeal in a felony case, citation held to have sufficiently recited the term of court at which the forfeiture was taken, and the amount of the forfeiture. Swim v. State, 86 Cr. R. 576, 218 S. W. 761.

Art. 492. [480] Citation shall be served and returned as in civil actions.

1. Service and return in general.—Judgment of forfeiture cannot be entered against the sureties on a bail bond who were not served with citation. Saunders v. State, 86 Cr. R. 413, 217 S. W. 148.

A judgment against sureties on a bail bond, rendered on default, cannot be sustained, where the scire facias upon which the final judgment was rendered was served only upon one of them, in view of Vernon's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. 1916, art. 492. Saunders v. State, 86 Cr. R. 464, 217 S. W. 949.

9. Insufficient return and citation.—A judgment against sureties on a bail bond, rendered on default, cannot be sustained where the return on the scire facias was: "Came to hand the 20th day of January, 1919, at _____ o'clock _____m, and executed March 29, 1919, by delivering to Dan Skeans in person a true copy of this writ. [Signed] Tom Ford, Sheriff Cooke County, Texas"—such return being insufficient. Saunders v. State, 86 Cr. R. 464, 217 S. W. 949.

Sheriff's return on such citation reading, "Came to hand on the 23d day of January, 1920, and executed on the 2d day of February, 1920, by delivering to the within names," and containing the names of such sureties, held insufficient to support a judgment by default against the sureties. Grammer v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 165 (2 cases).

A default judgment against sureties on bond of an accused who failed to appear must be reversed where it does not appear from the officer's return that the sureties were each served with copy of the scire facias writ. Finley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 420.

Art. 493. [481] Citation may be served by publication.

See Burgemeister v. State, 83 Cr. R. 307, 203 S. W. 770.

Art. 497. [485] Cases shall be placed upon civil docket.

Cited, Pleasants v. State, 29 Tex. App. 214, 15 S. W. 43.

New trial, writ of error or appeal.—The failure of parties appealing from judgments on forfeited bail bonds to file briefs in the appellate court or in the trial court as required by District and County Courts Rule 102 (142 S. W. xxiv), and Civil Courts of Appeals Rule 29 (142 S. W. xii), requires dismissal of the appeal for want of jurisdiction. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 409; Swim v. State, 86 Cr. R. 576, 218 S. W. 761.

To obtain relief at the hands of the Court of Criminal Appeals from the trial court's refusal to grant motion of surety on a bail bond for rehearing or new trial after default judgment against him, it must be affirmatively shown that the discretion of the trial court has been abused. Briggs v. State, 87 Cr. R. 473, 222 S. W. 246.

Art. 499. [487] Proceedings shall not be set aside for defect of form, etc.

Amendment or correction.—In scire facias on a forfeited bail bond, where there was a fatal variance between the scire facias writ and the proof, consisting of the indictment, bail bond, and judgment nisi, in that the scire facias named defendant as "Joseph Uppenkamp," while the indictment and judgment nisi named him as "Joe Oppenchamp," on notice to the sureties and proper proof, the state could have had amendment to the judgment nisi to make it speak truth, if the two parties named in the judgment and bond were identical. Uppenkamp v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 544.

Art. 500. [488] Causes which will exonerate from liability on forfeiture.

Cause 1. Invalidity of bond.—The accusation against the principal in bail bond being by complaint for a felony in the district court, the forfeiture of the bond is invalid, since accusation should have been by indictment. Turpin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 96, 215 S. W. 455.

Cause 3. Sickness of principal.—Where it was not shown that the principal either appeared or gave cause for not appearing, the fact that his failure to appear was not due to his fault was no defense. Markham v. State, 33 Cr. R. 91, 25 S. W. 127.

Other causes.—That the principal defendant is innocent, or the indictment defective, or barred by limitation, is no defense. United States v. Davenport (D. C.) 266 Fed. 425.

Art. 501. [489] Judgment final, when.

7. Judgment final in general.—Since judgment nisi on forfeiture of bail bond is interlocutory, and does not become final, until citation is entered, dismissal of motion to set aside judgment nisi left such judgment in statu quo, and the order was not appealable. Burgemeister v. State, 83 Cr. R. 307, 203 S. W. 770.

The omission of the name of the defendant from a judgment forfeiting his bail bond would not render it void so that it was subject to collateral attack. Fleming v. Bonine (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 364.

Art. 502. [490] Judgment final by default, when.

Default judgment.—Judgment of forfeiture cannot be entered against the sureties on a bail bond who were not served with citation. Saunders v. State, 86 Cr. R. 413, 217 S. W. 148.

Art. 503. [491] The court may remit, when.

Defendant's request.—Upon nonattendance of defendant's subpoenaed witness, defendant's failure to have attachment issued, constituted lack of diligence. Morse v. State, 85 Cr. R. 83, 210 S. W. 965.

4. SERVICE OF A COPY OF THE INDICTMENT

Art. 551. [540] Copy of indictment delivered to defendant in case of felony.

See Abrigo v. State, 29 Tex. App. 143, 15 S. W. 408.

Cited, Revill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 1, 218 S. W. 1044.

Validity.—While Const. art. 1, § 10, declaring that defendant shall have the right to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, and a copy thereof, cannot be abridged by the Legislature, those articles of the Code of Criminal Procedure providing for the service of indictments on defendants are not invalid, being an extension of the constitutional provision and recognizing the right of a defendant in all cases to have a copy of the indictment. Venn v. State, 86 Cr. R. 633, 218 S. W. 1060.

Accused not in custody.—Where defendant was at large on bond, held that, while he was entitled to service of indictment on demand, he was not entitled to two days' delay for preparation for trial upon his demanding service of indictment. Revill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 1, 218 S. W. 1044.

Where defendant was not under bond nor under arrest when the indictment was returned, but was at a later term arrested and gave bond, he was entitled to have a copy of the indictment served upon him before he could be forced to trial. Venn v. State, 86 Cr. R. 633, 218 S. W. 1060.

Sufficiency of copy.—Defendant's motion that he had not been served with copy of indictment, and asking postponement for service, was correctly overruled, where indictment as served merely omitted letter "e" in the word "corporeal" describing property defendant had intended to steal. McNew v. State, 84 Cr. R. 594, 208 S. W. 528.

Waiver.—The right of a defendant to have a copy of the indictment served upon him, which is guaranteed by Const. art. 1, § 10, can be waived only by the defendant, and such waiver cannot be made by his counsel. Venn v. State, 86 Cr. R. 633, 218 S. W. 1060.

Where defendant was not under bond or under arrest at the time the indictment was returned, and at a subsequent term he was arrested and gave bond, but nothing was done because the presiding judge was disqualified, defendant's act in giving bond was not a waiver of his right to have a copy of the indictment served upon him when arrested, and so he was entitled on demand thereafter to have a copy of the indictment served upon him before he could be forced to trial. Id.

Where one indicted for embezzlement was not served with a copy of the indictment, but obtained one from the clerk, when released on bond, at which time his case was continued until a later term, the failure to serve the copy while he was in jail, though the statute is mandatory, did not require a reversal; the object of the statute being to afford the accused the opportunity of examining the indictment before pleading, and defendant having waived service. Wray v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 808.

Art. 552. [541] Service of copy and return of writ.

See Abrigo v. State, 29 Tex. App. 143, 15 S. W. 408; Harris v. State, 32 Cr. R. 279, 22 S. W. 1037; Venn v. State, 86 Cr. R. 633, 218 S. W. 1060; Wray v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 808.

Art. 553. [542] When defendant is on bail in felony.

See Abrigo v. State, 29 Tex. App. 143, 15 S. W. 408.

In general.—Where defendant was not under bond nor under arrest when the indictment was returned, but was at a later term arrested and gave bond, he was entitled to have a copy of the indictment served upon him before he could be forced to trial. Venn v. State, 86 Cr. R. 633, 218 S. W. 1060.

Defendant on bail.—Where no copy of the indictment had been served on accused, it appearing that before it was returned he had been arrested and given an appearance bond, held that, where accused demanded service of a copy of the indictment before trial, the refusal of the court to direct service was reversible error; accused being entitled to service of a copy even though he was at liberty on bond. Revill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 1, 218 S. W. 1044.

Under the statute, where defendant was at large under bond when indictment was returned, and had not been in jail since executing his first bond, and so was entitled to demand a copy of the indictment at any time, he could not delay demanding it till case was called, and then have two days to plead it. Mayer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 512, 222 S. W. 571.

Where one indicted for embezzlement was not served while in jail with a copy of the indictment, but his attorney, on his release on bail, procured a copy from the clerk and advised him of the nature of the accusation, the failure to serve him personally will not work a reversal; the law not requiring service on him in person while at large. Wray v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 808.

5. OF ARRAIGNMENT AND OF PROCEEDINGS WHEN NO ARRAIGNMENT IS NECESSARY

Art. 555. [544] No arraignment of defendant, except, etc.

Time for arraignment.—It is not error to arraign accused after the jury is sworn individually and collectively. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 79.

Venue.—Where defendant in a homicide case is regularly arraigned in the district court of the proper county, failure to arraign him in a county where venue was first made is an irregularity which does not require reversal. English v. State, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

Art. 556. [545] An arraignment; for what purpose.

See Morris v. State, 30 Tex. App. 95, 16 S. W. 757.

Cited, McGrew v. State, 31 Cr. R. 336, 20 S. W. 740; Smith v. State, 21 Tex. App. 227, 17 S. W. 471.

Art. 557. [546] No arraignment until two days after service of copy, etc.

See Morris v. State, 30 Tex. App. 95, 16 S. W. 757.

Cited, Venn v. State, 86 Cr. R. 633, 218 S. W. 1060.

Time for arraignment.—The court, when an accused is confined in jail without trial, and especially when he wants to plead guilty to a misdemeanor, ought to accept the plea of guilty. Ex parte Bostick, 81 Cr. R. 411, 196 S. W. 531.

Where defendant was at large on bond, held that, while he was entitled to service of indictment on demand, he was not entitled to two days' delay for preparation for trial upon his demanding service of indictment. Revill v. State, 87 Cr. R. 1, 218 S. W. 1044.

Postponement of trial.—That a criminal case has been continued for the term is not sufficient ground for refusing to take a plea of guilty. Ex parte Bostick, 81 Cr. R. 411, 196 S. W. 531.

There was no merit in defendant's motion to quash array and jury panel, on ground that the trial court, on defendant's objection that he had not been allowed two days after arrest to file written pleadings, etc., reset his case for the week following and directed jurors present and regularly drawn to report back for duty on the following Monday, which they did, with some exceptions properly filled by talesmen summoned by the sheriff under the court's direction. Halbadier v. State, 85 Cr. R. 593, 214 S. W. 349.

Art. 558. [547] Court shall appoint counsel, when.

See Morris v. State, 30 Tex. App. 95, 16 S. W. 757.

Appointment of counsel.—Defendant, convicted of assault to murder, having had the benefit of consultation and advice from counsel of his own choice, who abandoned his case when the trial was ready to begin, and of counsel appointed by the court in preparing an application for suspended sentence, and of another counsel appointed by the court to aid in selecting a jury, cannot plead that he was thereby misled into believing that such counsel would continue their services, when, so far as is shown, they withdrew when they had finished the task requested of them by the trial court, without any misunderstanding. Holden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 803.

It was not obligatory on the court to appoint counsel for one accused of crime, unless he be charged with a capital offense, or it appear that he is insane, or that he desires an application to be presented for a suspended sentence. Id.

Art. 559. [548] Name as stated in indictment.

Cited, Smith v. State, 21 Tex. App. 277, 17 S. W. 471.

Effect of misnomer.—Where defendant in a criminal case does not complain that his name is incorrectly stated or spelled in the indictment until a motion for new trial is filed, he has waived such point. Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 217, 216 S. W. 172.

Where defendant in a prosecution for cattle theft was indicted under the name of "Bargas," to which he pleaded without objection, he could not on appeal contend that his true name was "Vargas," and that hence there was a variance. Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 231, 216 S. W. 173.

That defendant's name, Gonzales, was misspelled "Gonzilas," was no ground for quashing the indictment, since accused on suggestion could have had his name, properly spelled, inserted. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

Art. 560. [549] If defendant suggests different name.

See Boren v. State, 32 Cr. R. 637, 25 S. W. 775.

In general.—Where defendant has been indicted under the name of "John Myatt," and at the trial suggests that his name is "Marion Myatt," the failure of the court to substitute defendant's correct name in the indictment is reversible error. Myatt v. State, 31 Cr. R. 523, 21 S. W. 256.

In a prosecution for forgery, defendant's suggestion during the trial that the name which he was charged with having forged was his true name, did not deprive the state of its right to prove that the name so suggested was not in fact defendant's correct name. Chadwick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 842.

Art. 563. [552] Indictment read.

Art. 565. [554] Plea of guilty not received, unless, etc.

In general.—In a prosecution for murder, where the defendant pleaded guilty, and the court submitted the case to the jury to find the degree and assess the punishment, counsel agreed that only evidence of the sheriff would be submitted, and the court asked certain questions in relation to his plea. Held, that such questions did not violate such agreement. Burton v. State, 33 Cr. R. 138, 25 S. W. 782.

The charge and judgment showing that, before receiving the plea of guilty, on which defendant was convicted, he was admonished of the consequences of his plea, and defendant having merely filed a motion for new trial, alleging the judgment and verdict were contrary to the law and evidence, there is nothing to review. Kimball v. State, 84 Cr. R. 161, 205 S. W. 989.

Construction and effect of plea.—A plea of guilty under the Texas practice admits all the criminal facts alleged, and evidence is admitted only to enable the jury to determine the penalty. Gipson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 364, 216 S. W. 870; Bell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 363, 216 S. W. 879; Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 366, 216 S. W. 881.

Sanity of accused.—The question of sanity, when such plea is offered, is solely for the court, and relates only to the mental condition when accused makes his plea, and not to such condition when the offense was committed. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

A written plea filed by defendant's attorneys alleging insanity is inconsistent with defendant's plea of guilty, so that the court could not accept the plea of guilty and at the same time accept the plea that accused was insane when he committed the offense. Id.

Where after plea of guilty, it appears at the hearing to assess the punishment that defendant was insane when he committed the offense or that for any other reason he was not guilty, the court should permit the withdrawal of the plea of guilty and enter a plea of not guilty. Id.

Art. 566. [555] Jury shall be impaneled, when.

Construction and operation in general.—In a prosecution for the small misdemeanor of gaming, evidence is not required under plea of guilty as in felony cases. Ex parte Bostick, 81 Cr. R. 411, 196 S. W. 531.

Evidence.—Where defendant entered a plea of guilty to a charge of the unlawful manufacturing of intoxicating liquors, and was assessed the lowest penalty, he is not in a position to urge as a ground for reversal the insufficiency of the evidence to prove his guilt. Coats v. State, 86 Cr. R. 234, 215 S. W. 856; Terretto v. State, 86 Cr. R. 188, 215 S. W. 329.

Where the evidence introduced was sufficient to enable the jury to determine that the defendant on his plea of guilty should receive the lowest punishment provided by law, the case may not be reversed for lack of sufficient evidence to show guilt. Terretto v. State, 86 Cr. R. 188, 215 S. W. 329.

Defendant, who pleaded guilty to charge of assault with intent to kill, cannot complain of the refusal of a continuance because of the absence of a witness whose testimony could not affect the punishment, but was admissible solely on the issue of guilt. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

The assessment of the lowest punishment by the jury precludes questioning the sufficiency of the evidence, at least where there is legal evidence to support the judgment. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 237, 238.

Art. 567. [556] Same proceedings in respect to name of defendant in all cases.

See Chadwick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 842.

6. OF THE PLEADINGS IN CRIMINAL ACTIONS

Art. 569. [558] Defendant's pleading.

In general.—A written plea filed by defendant's attorneys alleging insanity is inconsistent with defendant's plea of guilty, and is not authorized by arts. 569 and 572, or by article 581, so that the court could not accept the plea of guilty and at the same time accept the plea that accused was insane when he committed the offense. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Art. 570. [559] Motion to set aside indictment, etc., for what causes only.

Cited, Trevino v. State, 27 Tex. App. 372, 11 S. W. 447.

4. Presence of unauthorized person.—An objection to the want of qualification of a grand juror after indictment found cannot be entertained, this article not being applicable in such case. Lacy v. State, 31 Cr. R. 78, 19 S. W. 896.

"Deliberating" means weighing with view of decision, mutual discussion, and examination for and against. McGregor v. State, 83 Cr. R. 35, 201 S. W. 184.

Indictment found after state's and district attorney, sheriff, and chief of police were before grand jury discussing whether to proceed by injunction or indictment, was invalid. Id.

5. Defects in preliminary proceedings.—That prosecuting witness testified after start of trial that he would not have sworn to complaint charging accused with "habitual" carnal intercourse, if he had known that complaint so charged, is not sufficient to quash complaint, where prosecuting attorney stated that he read over the entire complaint to prosecuting witness before he signed. Webb v. State, 86 Cr. R. 337, 216 S. W. 865.

Where a complaint was read over to prosecuting witness before he swore to it, the burden of proof is on accused, on motion to quash because prosecuting witness would not have signed complaint had he known what it contained, to show fraud. Id.

7. Race discrimination.—In trial of negro for murder of a white man, there was no error in the court's refusing to quash the indictment because no negroes were on the jury commission or on the grand jury. Mickle v. State, 85 Cr. R. 560, 213 S. W. 665.

8. Defects in indictment or information in general.—Failure of indictment for forgery to embrace averments explaining the words, "I N Bank, Groveton," the forged instrument being an acknowledgment of the receipt of $100 for the account of I N Bank, held not to render the indictment subject to quashal on motion. Martin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 89, 209 S. W. 668.

13. Want of jurisdiction.—Motion to dismiss, alleging court had no jurisdiction because the suit was instituted in justice court, and was still pending therein, did not prove itself. Wrenn v. State, 83 Cr. R. 642, 200 S. W. 844.

Art. 572. [561] Only special pleas for defendant.

See Huey v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 186.

1. Same offense.—A plea of former jeopardy, setting out that after a trial had begun, defendant's plea, entered, and evidence heard, the jury were wrongfully dismissed, raised a question of fact; and, while the burden was on defendant to show an abuse of the court's discretion in discharging the jury, he had the right to show that the court erred therein, if possible and, if not satisfied with the ruling, to bring the matter up for review. Chadwick v. State, 86 Cr. R. 269, 216 S. W. 397.

On a plea of former jeopardy the fact that separate indictments charged accused with selling intoxicants to different parties does not necessarily establish separate offenses, where the sale might be made at the same time and jointly to both parties. Westbrook v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 750.

8. Evidence.—The burden is upon the accused to prove his defense of former jeopardy. Spannell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 418, 203 S. W. 357, 2 A. L. R. 593.

The question whether accused, who had been acquitted of murdering his own wife, had killed her accidentally while shooting in self-defense at another, or whether the killings were separate acts, held sufficiently raised by accused's testimony to require submission to the jury. Id.

Where defendant in county court was convicted of gaming on complaint sworn to before assistant county attorney, and information based thereon filed originally in county court, overruling of defendant's motion to dismiss, setting up prosecution was for same offense for which complaint had been filed in justice court, such complaint not being attached to motion and no evidence being introduced on such plea, was not reversible error; after introducing evidence on point, defendant not calling for ruling or asking charge thereon. Wrenn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 146, 206 S. W. 94.

9. Other pleas.—A written plea filed by defendant's attorneys alleging insanity is inconsistent with defendant's plea of guilty, and is not authorized by arts. 569 and 572, or by art. 581, so that the court could not accept the plea of guilty and at the same time accept the plea that accused was insane when he committed the offense. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Art. 573. [562] Special plea must be verified.

Verification.—In prosecution for gaming, court properly overruled defendant's plea of former conviction, which was not sworn to. Wrenn v. State, 82 Cr. R. 642, 200 S. W. 844.

Art. 575. [564] Exceptions to the substance of an indictment.

See McDaniel v. State, 24 Tex. App. 552, 7 S. W. 249.

Motion.—Under art. 847 and this article, the validity of the statute creating the trial court cannot be attacked by motion in arrest of judgment. Victor v. State, 86 Cr. R. 462, 217 S. W. 698.

Art. 576. [565] Exceptions to the form of an indictment.

See McDaniel v. State, 24 Tex. App. 552, 7 S. W. 249.

Grounds of exception.—An information purporting to have been presented by a district attorney is not invalidated by reason of the want of the official signature of the county or district attorney. Jones v. State, 30 Tex. App. 426, 17 S. W. 1080.

In prosecution for violation of local option law, where information did not state whether election for local option was held before or after violation was made a felony, motion to quash should have been sustained as one of form. Shipley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 278, 208 S. W. 342.

Signature of foreman of grand jury is not essential to validity of indictment; signature of another as acting foreman being sufficient. Parkinson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 176, 220 S. W. 774.

Motion.—Where an indictment recited that it was found by the grand jury organized at the October term, the indictment was returned on November 21st, and on accused's application the venue was changed on November 24th, a motion then made to quash the indictment on the ground that there was a misnomer of the term of court at which it was returned was properly overruled, for the statement of the term of court at which the indictment was presented is not one of the statutory requirements, but is, at most, a matter of form, available only on motion to quash presented in due time, and under article 630, it is contemplated that an exception to the form of the indictment should be made in the court in which the indictment is filed before the venue is changed. Finch v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 528.

Art. 577. [566] Motions, etc., shall be in writing.

Verbal motion.—If verbal motion to quash had been made prior to trial, with an agreement to reduce it to writing and later file it, it would be in ample time, and the fact that it was filed subsequently and judgment entered subsequently did not affect the situation. Shipley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 278, 208 S. W. 342.

Art. 578. [567] Two days allowed for filing written pleadings.

Cited, Venn v. State, 86 Cr. R. 633, 218 S. W. 1060.

Time allowed.—Defendant not arrested under substituted complaint and information until put on trial, held then entitled to two days in which to plead, though complaint was filed more than six days before trial. Arrelano v. State, 82 Cr. R. 128, 198 S. W. 314.

Art. 580. [569] Defendant may file written pleadings at any time, etc.

In general.—Where trial court offered to permit defendant to file plea of former conviction as of date before making his announcement of ready, but refused to permit him to withdraw announcement, defendant refusing to file plea for that reason, there was no error. Gomez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 92, 206 S. W. 86.

Art. 581. [570] Plea of guilty; how made in felony case.

Cited, Burgemeister v. State, 83 Cr. R. 307, 203 S. W. 770.

In general.—A written plea filed by defendant's attorneys alleging insanity is inconsistent with defendant's plea of guilty, and is not authorized by arts. 569 and 572, or by this article, so that the court could not accept the plea of guilty and at the same time accept the plea that accused was insane when he committed the offense. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Art. 582. [571] Plea of guilty in misdemeanor.

See Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

In general.—Where relator, having been convicted of a misdemeanor in a city court, and having had a fine entered against him, removed from the county, and wrote to the county attorney, of such county, inclosing $4 to be applied on his fine, but the county attorney construed it as an instruction to plead guilty of an offense in justice court, and a purported judgment was entered in justice court on relator's plea of guilty by the county attorney for a fine of $1 for an offense not named, there being no complaint or other papers in the cause except a capias pro fine, under which relator was arrested, the justice court acquired no jurisdiction to render judgment against relator, and the judgment was void. Ex parte Grimes, 81 Cr. R. 405, 195 S. W. 858.

Waiver of jury.—Defendant, an ignorant negro, was charged with aggravated assault on a female, and, when brought into court and asked by the prosecuting officer what he was going to do, said he slapped her and reckoned he was guilty, whereupon, in reply to the judge's inquiry, he stated that he would plead guilty and the judge fixed a somewhat severe sentence, after prosecuting officer had stated that defendant was a bad negro and should have heavy punishment. Held, that the facts were insufficient to sustain waiver of jury trial, and defendant should have been granted a new trial, in view of the hasty conduct of the trial and of the fact that the state improperly brought in issue the question of his character and reputation. Wagner v. State, 87 Cr. R. 47, 219 S. W. 471.

A jury may be waived in misdemeanor cases. Id.

7. OF THE ARGUMENT AND DECISION OF MOTIONS, PLEAS AND EXCEPTIONS

Art. 593. [582] In cases of felony.

See Turner v. State, 21 Tex. App. 198, 18 S. W. 96.

Art. 597. [586] When exception is on account of form.

See Flores v. State, 82 Cr. R. 107, 198 S. W. 575.

See Osborne v. State, 23 Tex. App. 431, 5 S. W. 251.

In general.—Where an indictment recited that it was found by the grand jury organized at the October term, the indictment was returned on November 21st, and on accused's application the venue was changed on November 24th, a motion then made to quash the indictment on the ground that there was a misnomer of the term of court at which it was returned was properly overruled. for, under arts. 451, 576, 597, the statement of the term of court at which the indictment was presented is not one of the statutory requirements, but is, at most, a matter of form, available only on motion to quash presented in due time, and under article 630, it is contemplated that an exception to the form of the indictment should be made in the court in which the indictment is filed before the venue is changed. Finch v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 528.

Art. 598. [587] Amendment of indictment or information.

Matters of form.—In prosecution for sale of intoxicants in prohibition territory, held that, after motion to quash indictment, and district attorney's motion to amend by inserting date on which prohibition election was held, court properly permitted amendment by insertion of date before announcement to try case on merits. Flores v. State, 82 Cr. R. 107, 198 S. W. 575.

Matters of substance.—In prosecution for slander, where information was defective for variance, and in failing to state given name or initials of injured party, such defects could not be cured by amendment. Kelly v. State, 81 Cr. R. 408, 195 S. W. 353.

Allegation in indictment as to county in which offense was committed is matter of substance. Patterson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 157, 205 S. W. 986.

Error in indictment, alleging that defendant appeared before grand jury on a certain date and testified falsely to something which did not occur, until a subsequent date, was a matter of substance and not of form, and could not be held immaterial or cured by amendment. Johnson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 243, 206 S. W. 527.

Defendant's right to amendment.—Defendant, charged with perjury, had right on request to have indictment changed by obliteration of alias. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

Art. 599. [588] Amendments, made how.

Mode of amendment.—In prosecution for sale of intoxicants in prohibition territory, held that, after motion to quash indictment, and district attorney's motion to amend by inserting date on which prohibition election was held, court properly permitted amendment by insertion of date before announcement to try case on merits. Flores v. State, 82 Cr. R. 107, 198 S. W. 575.

Art. 601 [590] Former acquittal or conviction; when a bar and when not a bar.

See Cooper v. State, 25 Tex. App. 530, 8 S. W. 654.

8. OF CONTINUANCE

Art. 605. [594] For sufficient cause shown.

1. Discretion of court.—Continuance in a criminal trial is not a matter of absolute right, but is for the sound judicial discretion of the trial judge. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

2. Grounds in general.—Where defendant had practically two days between service and trial, and was unusually well equipped with experienced attorneys with more than ordinary knowledge of the persons summoned as veniremen, motion to postpone trial to give additional time to investigate veniremen was properly overruled. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

The court did not err in refusing a motion for continuance, in that all but five of the jurors on the bench disqualified; tit. 8. c. 4, providing for the formation of juries in cases less than capital, specifically taking care of any case where, from any cause, the number of jurors in the box or in the panel is reduced below the number required. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

In prosecution for murder the fact that Court of Criminal Appeals had not acted on application for bail was not sufficient ground for continuance. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

3. Other prosecution pending.—Where accused's conviction on charge of selling intoxicants was pending, his trial upon a separate indictment, charging a similar sale at the same time to another person, should be postponed pending determination of the appeal, in order that if the judgment be affirmed the accused might interpose a plea of former jeopardy. Westbrook v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 750.

6. Physical and mental condition of accused.—In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, held, that court did not err in denying a motion to allow accused to withdraw his announcement of ready and continue the cause, in that defendant was suffering from a wound and could not talk loudly. In the absence of a showing that the jurors did not hear the witness; court qualifying the bill by stating that accused spoke perfectly distinctly and showed no evidence of any illness whatever. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

7. Want of preparation.—In rape case, held that it was error not to allow attorneys appointed by the state more than two days to prepare their defense. Jones v. State, 84 Cr. R. 4, 204 S. W. 437.

It cannot be asserted for the first time on appeal that defendant was hurried into his trial. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 533, 223 S. W. 217.

Where the only ground for an application for postponement of trial was that accused had been so recently arrested and that his counsel had been engaged in another trial up to the morning of the instant trial, refusal of postponement was not error where it did not appear that accused was not given his statutory two days between the date of the arrest and his trial or that he had been injured by the refusal of postponement. Felz v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 154.

8. Local prejudice.—Where accused negro had killed a white man and, in the 10 days between the killing and the trial, such strong public sentiment was created against accused by publicity given the state's side of the case that the authorities deemed a strong guard of soldiers necessary for accused's protection, his motion for continuance should have been granted or change of venue ordered. Mickle v. State, 85 Cr. R. 560, 213 S. W. 665.

9. Absence of counsel.—In prosecution for larceny where experienced counsel selected by appellant and familiar with the case conducted it skillfully, refusal to continue case because of absence of leading counsel was not an abuse of trial court's discretion. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

Where defendant, who had been on bail nearly a year, asked continuance, stating he was without counsel, and immediately thereafter his counsel appeared, although not informed of trial date, and cause was set for another day, and during trial defendant's counsel after moving for postponement left to engage in trial of another case in which he had been employed subsequent to setting case, held that defendant was not deprived of counsel. Johnson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 567, 208 S. W. 928.

Where accused was represented by two able attorneys, who represented him in trial with zeal and ability, order overruling motion for continuance on account of absence of chief counsel will not be held reversible error. Carrell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 554, 209 S. W. 158.

The absence of one of defendant's counsel at the beginning of the trial was not ground for continuance where other and able counsel were present and defendant's rights were fully and fairly protected. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

Art. 608. [597] First application by defendant for a continuance.

½. Application in general.—In absence of an affirmative showing that an application for continuance is the first, it is presumed that it is a subsequent application. Mitchell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 560, 222 S. W. 983.

1. Name and residence of witness.—Application for continuance based on absence of witness must state residence of witness, and the time when he left the county of his residence, if temporarily absent therefrom. Mills v. State, 84 Cr. R. 515, 204 S. W. 642.

Court did not err in refusing an application for a continuance because service had not been had upon certain witnesses, where the application was general in its terms and indefinite as to witnesses and residences; witnesses being only described as "Big Boy," "Red," etc. Beard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 205, 220 S. W. 342.

An application for continuance for absence of witnesses, not stating the address or residence of any of such witnesses, the same not appearing from the attached subpoenas nor stating that the residence of said witnesses is unknown, is fatally defective. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

Court did not abuse its discretion in denying an application for a continuance by reason of absence of witnesses whose names were alleged to be unknown, where accused in his testimony named several residents of the city who knew such absent persons and their whereabouts. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 986.

SUBD. 2

4. Diligence and excuse for delay in general.—Diligence to secure attendance of witness whose absence was made ground of motion for continuance held insufficient. Walker v. State, 83 Cr. R. 484, 204 S. W. 227; Jeffries v. State, 82 Cr. R. 42, 198 S. W. 778; Mason v. State, 83 Cr. R. 528, 204 S. W. 331; Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772.

Defendant's motion for continuance on account of absence of witness was properly overruled, where no diligence to secure attendance of witness was shown. Wrenn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 146, 206 S. W. 94; Castleberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 271, 206 S. W. 353; Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

In prosecution for assault to murder, court's action in overruling defendant's motion for continuance to secure testimony of three witnesses, who resided in city where case was tried, two or three being present at trial and not put on stand, held proper. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

An application for continuance based on absence of witness must state facts showing that due diligence had been used in effort to obtain the witness. Mills v. State, 83 Cr. R. 515, 204 S. W. 642.

On application for continuance for absence of unsubscriptions witness upon ground that diligence in procuring witness was unnecessary in view of agreement with opposing attorney that it would be unnecessary to subpoena witness in all cases pending against defendant, such agreement was addressed to the sound discretion of trial court in the nature of an equitable showing for continuance. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560.

In a prosecution for seduction, where defendant applied for a continuance on the ground of absent witnesses, and it appeared that witnesses whom it was stated would testify to a material matter were in France with the American Expeditionary Forces, and that by no diligence could their testimony have been obtained, defendant without any showing of diligence is entitled to a continuance. Bosley v. State, 86 Cr. R. 619, 218 S. W. 750.

The presumption is that an application for a continuance was properly overruled, and the action of the trial court will be sustained where the only showing of diligence to procure the testimony of absent witnesses is that an attachment was issued and appearance bond given more than a year prior to trial, with no showing as to whether they appeared or what subsequently became of them, especially where the materiality of the testimony is not made apparent so as to render it probable that defendant was injured. Mann v. State, 87 Cr. R. 142, 221 S. W. 296.

It is incumbent on applicant for a second continuance for absent witness to allege or show what diligence has been exercised. Mitchell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 530, 222 S. W. 983.

The burden is on defendant, moving for continuance for the absence of a witness, to show the use of necessary diligence to procure her attendance. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772.

Where continuance was granted at the July term for absence of certain witnesses, refusal to grant a second continuance for absence of same witnesses during the following January held proper, where there was no showing of an effort to procure the attendance of such witnesses until January. Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105.

Refusal of the fourth application, for continuance for absence of witnesses, where application did not show when witnesses had been served with subpoenas, or that witnesses had ever appeared, held proper; no diligence being shown. Bell v. State, 88 Cr. R. 64, 224 S. W. 1108.

Where it did not appear that absent witness was present or served with process at the preceding term of the court, or the one at which the trial was had, and where witness had not been summoned in any manner during the term at which trial was had, and where testimony of witness on examining trial was different from that expected from him according to application for continuance, refusal of application held proper. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

In a prosecution for murder, defendant's application for a continuance to secure the testimony of absent witnesses should have been granted; the witnesses being at some unknown point in another part of the state, so that it was impossible to secure their attendance without a postponement, and the evidence showing that efforts to secure their attendance were made in good faith and diligently pursued. Giles v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 765.

Where about 14 days elapsed between the filing of indictment for murder and issuance of defendant's subpoena, which was returned not executed in about three days, and the case was set for trial about 10 days thereafter, during which time no further effort was made to secure the witness' attendance, and the affidavit of the witness attached to the motion for new trial indicates that he was at San Antonio, in the army, so that a casual inquiry at camp headquarters would have disclosed his whereabouts, held that affidavit indicates that by exercise of diligence the defendant could have secured the witness' attendance, and hence was not entitled to a continuance. Boaz v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 790.

5. Process.—Where the offense occurred June 19, 1915, and process by defendant for witnesses was not issued until January, 1917, a few days before the trial, and it was never returned, refusal of a continuance for the absence of such witnesses was not error. Clay v. State, 81 Cr. R. 293, 195 S. W. 600.

Placing process in hand of constable instead of sheriff held not a want of diligence. Dozier v. State, 82 Cr. R. 321, 199 S. W. 287.

Where witness absent because of illness was served with process in ample time and at the same time as other witnesses who attended, held, that there was no lack of diligence. Id.

Where process for all witnesses was issued at the same time and served on all but one, who had left the state, held, that there was no want of diligence. Id.

Discretion of court in overruling defendant's application for continuance on account of absence of witnesses was not abused where trial took place October 1st, and subpoenas for absent witnesses were not issued until 29th of September. Marshall v. State, 82 Cr. R. 623, 200 S. W. 836.

Application for continuance must show what was done with process for absent witness, whether it was served, and when it was returned. Id.

Where the homicide occurred in August, 1916, the indictment was returned January 5, 1917, a subpoena for an absent witness was not applied for until July 6th, and a new subpoena issued on July 24th, and returned on 2d of August, there was no sufficient showing of diligence to warrant a continuance when the trial was called for August 1st. Lowe v. State, 83 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986.

Under indictment returned January 4th, when case was called for trial July 20th, issuance of process for witness on June 26th did not show sufficient diligence to warrant continuance, where accused knew of the testimony and the witness' absence at an earlier date. Watson v. State, 201 S. W. 988, 83 Cr. R. 131.

Where an indictment was returned in September and process was not asked for a known witness until six days before the trial in November, there was not sufficient diligence to entitle defendant to a continuance. Coprew v. State, 83 Cr. R. 151, 202 S. W. 81.

Where a subpoenaed witness moved to another county before the term of court at which the case was called for trial, party moving for continuance because of absence of such witness has not exercised proper diligence in effort to secure his attendance if witness was not again subpoenaed in the county to which he had moved. Mills v. State, 204 S. W. 642, 83 Cr. R. 515.

Defendant, arrested on the 13th and tried on the 28th of the same month, failed to show diligence entitling him to new trial, where he had no process issued for absent witnesses until three days before trial. Payne v. State, 84 Cr. R. 2, 204 S. W. 765.

Where accused was indicted nearly a year before trial, but issued subpoena for absent witness only a few days before trial, and the testimony would have been only for impeachment, continuance was properly denied, in view of court's statement that the witness would not have testified as alleged. Porter v. State, 84 Cr. R. 164, 205 S. W. 985.

Where defendant was arrested April 25, 1917, indicted for murder October 12th following, and tried May 28, 1918, and state contested his motion for a continuance to procure attendance of his wife as a witness on ground of no diligence, held there was no error in denying motion; he having procured no process for wife until May 11, 1918. McClendon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 259, 206 S. W. 686.

Where defendant was indicted April 18th and tried September 7th and a subpoena for a witness was returned May 2d unexecuted, the subsequent diligence, based upon inability to learn witness' whereabouts when he was in an adjoining state and corresponding with persons in defendant's neighborhood, was so insufficient as to warrant overruling motion for continuance. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

Continuance on ground of absence of witness was properly refused, where application for subpoena was filed only three days before the trial, though defendant was indicted more than two weeks prior thereto, and there was no showing of issuance of subpoena, or service or attempted service upon witness, and no reason given for witness' non-appearance. Albertson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 574, 208 S. W. 923.

Upon nonattendance of defendant's subpoenaed witness, defendant's failure to have attachment issued, under art. 536, constituted lack of diligence. Morse v. State, 85 Cr. R. 83, 210 S. W. 965.

Failure to apply for subpoenas until the 15th of the month, where the prosecution began on the 9th, held lack of the diligence required to warrant continuance on ground of absence of witness. Id.

Where refusal to grant continuance upon ground of absence of witness is complained of, record should disclose whether or not the subpoena was returned, and, if returned, the information therein imparted should appear. Id.

Application for continuance on ground of absence of witnesses was properly denied, where application, stating that witnesses for whom subpoena had been issued were without the state, did not state when or how information as to their absence reached defendant, nor when subpoenas were sent to the respective counties to which issued, nor by whom sent, if at all, and where subpoenas were not attached or in evidence, nor accounted for in any way, and no showing is made as to when the witnesses left the state nor that they had been or were recently in the counties in which subpoenas were issued. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

Upon application for continuance, because of the absence of a witness, where process was issued for the witness in July, 1918, and defendant knew that such witness was in the United States Army in Camp Travis, and the witness was home on a furlough about Christmas, 1918, and January 1, 1919, and was in the county, and defendant's father then saw and talked with the witness and asked him to attend the trial, but then made no effort to secure process, there was insufficient diligence shown to require a continuance in February, 1919. Stracner v. State, 86 Cr. R. 89, 215 S. W. 305.

Where defendant duly subpoenaed his wife to testify in his behalf, and at the time of trial moved for a continuance on account of her absence, and it appeared that the sheriff, when he attempted to bring her in by attachment, found her in bed in an advanced condition of pregnancy, defendant's motion for continuance on the ground of absence of his wife, who was a material witness, should have been granted. McDonald v. State, 86 Cr. R. 304, 216 S. W. 166.

Where indictment was filed on January 4, 1919, and soon afterwards subpoenas were issued for a number of witnesses, but one for L. was not procured until February 8th, and was returned not served, witness not being found within the county, and the case was called for trial February 15th, a motion for continuance on account of the absence of L. was properly overruled, where no reason or excuse was shown for failure to sooner secure the issuance of the subpoena for L. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

Where indictment was returned September 3 and arrest made on September 4 and accused issued subpoena for witness on September 6, and trial began on September 8, court erred in refusing to grant a continuance, where service could not be had upon the witness because temporarily absent from the county; the testimony of the witness being material. Torez v. State, 86 Cr. R. 465, 217 S. W. 948.

Where the application for continuance failed to show when a subpoena for an absent witness was issued, and no date was mentioned nor copy of subpoena attached, the denial of defendant's motion for continuance to procure the testimony of such witness was not error, as legal diligence was not shown. Hughes v. State, 86 Cr. R. 611, 218 S. W. 1048.

Diligence to procure the attendance of a witness, for whose absence a second application for continuance of a trial for homicide was made, was not shown, where it appeared that after the first continuance defendant saw the witness, but did not get out process for his appearance, relying on his promise to appear. Bocknight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 428, 222 S. W. 259.

Where indictment for hog theft was returned in March, 1919, and no process was taken out by defendant for a witness until March, 1920, and subpoena then issued was not served, while it is not shown that any process was ever issued for another witness, though he had received instruction from the court to return for trial, the diligence in attempting to procure the attendance of such witnesses was insufficient to call for continuance on account of their absence. Bradford v. State, 88 Cr. R. 122, 224 S. W. 901.

Where application for continuance for absence of witness did not show that effort was made to obtain presence of witness at preceding term of court, and did not give date of subpoena issued at term at which trial was had, and where such witness was not served with process at the latter term, and, though it was stated that he could be procured in 24 hours, no attachment or other process was asked for witness, and no further effort made, to obtain his testimony, refusal of application held proper, sufficient diligence not having been exercised. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

A motion for a continuance for the absence of witnesses who were duly subpoenaed to appear at the preceding term from which the case was continued on the state's motion, which did not show whether the witnesses appeared at the former term, did not negative the right of defendant to have attachment issued for the witnesses to which he would have been entitled if they had failed to appear when subpoenaed, and therefore does not show the diligence necessary to entitle him to continuance. Godby v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 516.

Where defendant was indicted in March, and the case was set for trial on September 16th and tried on September 17th, and process for absent witnesses was not issued until September 14th, and the witnesses were in town on the 16th, when defendant's co-defendant was tried and no attachment was issued for them, the diligence was not sufficient, and the overruling of the motion for a continuance did not require a new trial, especially where their testimony on the question of alibi would have been cumulative. Suber v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 314.

Where an indictment returned August 16th was set for trial for August 23d, and postponed to August 24th, subpoenas for absent witnesses first obtained on August 23d were too late to authorize a continuance because of the absence of the witnesses. Armstrong v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 485.

Where process was not issued for witnesses until two months after indictment and arrest, and was returned not executed four months prior to trial, no sufficient diligence was shown to require the granting of a motion for continuance to secure the testimony of the witnesses, in the absence of an explanation of the delay in issuing process or the failure to renew efforts to secure the attendance of the witnesses. Shamblin v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 241.

Where defendant appellant was arrested and placed in jail in October, indicted in November, employed counsel December 4th, and the case was set for December 6th, and defendant was previously brought from jail and informed by the court that, if he would give the names of his witnesses to the clerk, process would be issued for them, which he failed to do, no diligence was shown warranting a continuance for not being able to secure a witness from another county. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 508.

An application for a continuance; filed August 10, 1920, after indictment in May, showing that no subpoenas were issued for the absent witnesses until August 9, 1920, the day before the case was set for trial, did not show diligence, and a continuance was properly refused. Freddy v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 533.

In a prosecution for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor, where a continuance because of the absence of defendant's wife, was asked, a showing that the wife had been duly subpoenaed, but was not able to appear because of illness, as certified to by a doctor, held sufficient as to diligence. Byrd v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 399.

In a prosecution for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor, where a continuance was asked for the absence of a witness, diligence did not sufficiently appear upon a mere showing that a subpoena had been asked but had not been served. Id.

The failure of accused to avail himself of the compulsory process to which he is entitled to compel the attendance of a witness in his behalf defeats his right to a continuance because of the absence of such witness. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 759.

The issuance of subpoena for the absent witness in another case against the same defendant, which did not secure the attendance of the witness, is not sufficient diligence to entitle accused to a continuance of the case on trial. Id.

In a prosecution for robbery, an application for a continuance for the absence of a witness, failing to show the date of issuance of subpoena, held insufficient. Searcy v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 799.

7. Deposition.—Denial of continuance for absence of witness to secure whose testimony state proposed that defendant could take his deposition, etc., held not erroneous. Watson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 115, 205 S. W. 662.

Where defendant, prosecuted for murder, had a subpoena issued for a witness, a resident of the county, and the return of subpoena disclosed that witness had left a year before, and was in the army, so that the return indicates that knowledge of his departure, if not possessed by defendant appellant, could have been acquired by the use of diligence, and witness' deposition taken, and if the subpoena had been issued soon after indictment, such information would have come to defendant in time to secure the witness, defendant was not entitled to continuance because of lack of diligence. Boaz v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 790.

8. Facts expected to be proved, and their materiality in general.—As the fact that a wife refused to give up custody of her young children does not relieve the husband from his legal duty to support and maintain them when they are in destitute and necessitous circumstances, in prosecution under such statute a refusal of motion to continue on account of absence of a witness who would testify to wife's refusal was not reversible error. Utsler v. State, 81 Cr. R. 501, 195 S. W. 855.

In prosecution for bigamy, application for continuance to enable defendant to prove by his brother that second marriage was consummated under duress was properly overruled, where there was no evidence of duress. Beck v. State, 82 Cr. R. 21, 198 S. W. 144.

Where testimony of two absent witnesses would have been inadmissible, overruling motion for continuance was not reversible error. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 286, 199 S. W. 1117.

Defendant's application for continuance to secure testimony of two witnesses held properly denied for failure to show materiality of testimony. Marshall v. State, 82 Cr. R. 623, 200 S. W. 836.

Where two were indicted together and filed statutory affidavits, and defendant was tried first, trial resulting in a hung jury, and thereafter other indicted person was convicted, there was no error on defendant's second trial in refusing to postpone trial to enable defendant to obtain testimony of convicted person. Hammitt v. State, 84 Cr. R. 635, 209 S. W. 661, 4 A. L. R. 347.

Application for a continuance because of absence of witness should be genuine and truthful, and should state as accurately as possible what witness would testify to. Glascoe v. State, 85 Cr. R. 234, 210 S. W. 956.

The court did not err in refusing a continuance on the ground of absence of witnesses, where diligence as to one witness was insufficient, and the court states that it was not shown that witnesses would give alleged testimony, and it was evident that the absent testimony would not, if present, have brought about a different result. Carneal v. State, 86 Cr. R. 274, 216 S. W. 626.

In a prosecution for murder, on defendant's application for a continuance to secure the testimony of absent witnesses, the state could not contest the truth of the absent testimony, but only defendant's diligence to secure the same; the application being her first. Giles v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 765.

An application for a continuance must not only set out the facts expected from the absent witness, but must make it appear that they are material, and showing their relevancy. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

On an issue as to whether prosecuting witness in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder made a threatening demonstration before defendant fired, where it was agreed that an absent witness was with prosecuting witness a few moments before the firing began, it was not so improbable that he saw what took place as to justify ignoring an application for a continuance to procure his testimony. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 506.

It was error to deny a continuance on the ground that the absent witness whose testimony was sought would not corroborate defendant's theory, in view of uncontroverted evidence of ill feeling between the parties, a previous difficulty between them, prosecuting witness' conduct in arming himself, threats by him, and defendant's description of his conduct immediately prior to the assault. Id.

10. Selling liquor.—In a prosecution for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor, evidence of absent witnesses held material, so that it was error to refuse a continuance on the ground of the absence of such witnesses. Byrd v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 399.

In a prosecution for having in possession equipment for manufacturing intoxicating liquor not for medicinal, etc., purposes, denial of continuance to procure the testimony of witnesses to the fact that the equipment was on the premises when defendant took possession of them held not erroneous, as such evidence could furnish no defense. Thielepape v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 769.

11. Assault and homicide.—Where state claimed deceased was killed with pistol of defendant's father, defendant held entitled to continuance for absence of the father, who would have testified as to keeping the pistol in a locked trunk, to which he carried the key. Dozier v. State, 82 Cr. R. 321, 199 S. W. 287.

Where defendant and the assaulted person were friendly before a shooting, and immediately after drove home together in a friendly manner, it was error to refuse a continuance to obtain testimony of such assaulted person, that he did not think defendant was shooting at him, and as to what was said between the two immediately after the shooting. Covington v. State, 83 Cr. R. 22, 201 S. W. 179.

In prosecution for homicide, absence of witness expected to prove that the wound penetrated straight in, and that therefore deceased was standing straight when accused stabbed him. was not sufficient ground for continuance; it being immaterial whether wound was straight or slanting or whether deceased was stooping or standing straight at time of stabbing. Mills v. State, 83 Cr. R. 515, 204 S. W. 642.

Continuance should have been granted for absence of witness who would have testified that the assaulted person said that the shooting was accidental. Mitchell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 36, 204 S. W. 767.

Upon the question of deceased's being armed, where defendant's motion for postponement of murder trial to secure a witness shows no material conflict between what he wanted to prove by the witness and what other witnesses stated, the refusal to postpone was not reversible error. Castleberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 271, 206 S. W. 353.

In a prosecution for murder, it was not error to refuse a continuance because of the absence of a witness who would merely testify to an admission by deceased of misconduct toward defendant's wife; such admission not being material unless communicated to defendant. Beck v. State, 85 Cr. R. 578, 213 S. W. 662.

12. — Insanity.—In prosecution for murder, court properly overruled defendant's application for continuance to procure testimony of witness by whom defendant expected "to prove that he was present on the night of the killing, and saw defendant immediately after the killing, and would testify that defendant was insane at the time," statement being too general. Coates v. State, 83 Cr. R. 309, 203 S. W. 904.

A witness who was not an expert could not state her conclusion as to defendant's insanity without first giving the facts on which the opinion was based, so that an affidavit for continuance because of the absence of such witness which merely stated she would testify accused was insane was insufficient. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, testimony by an absent witness that defendant was subject to attacks of temporary insanity, though relevant, would not be of controlling importance to justify continuance, where the witness could not testify to defendant's mental condition at the time of the assault, and other witnesses had testified to his periods of insanity. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 759.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, where the defense was insanity, held not within discretion of trial judge to overrule an application for continuance on account of absence of a witness on the question of insanity where there was sufficient diligence and absent witness' testimony was probably true, was material, and likely to change the result. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 762.

13. — Self-defense.—In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, the testimony of a witness who was with prosecuting witness at the time of the assault was of such materiality on the issue as to whether the latter presented a gun in an offensive attitude before defendant fired as to render it incumbent on the court to grant defendant's application for a continuance to procure his testimony. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 506.

14. — Threats.—In a prosecution for murder, it was not error to refuse a continuance because of the absence of a witness who would merely have testified to uncommunicated threats; there being no issue of self-defense. Beck v. State, 85 Cr. R. 578, 213 S. W. 662; Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

There having been no lack of diligence, and it not appearing the testimony could be procured from other source, known to defendant, continuance should have been granted for absence of witness who would testify that a few days before the homicide deceased told him he was going to kill defendant with a gun he was carrying, and that he (witness) told this to defendant two days before the homicide. Bell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 475, 213 S. W. 647.

15. Rape.—In rape trial, continuance asked to secure testimony of absent witness that prosecutrix had taken a man into her room was improperly refused. Woods v. State, 83 Cr. R. 332, 203 S. W. 54.

17. Burglary.—Where evidence was that defendant assisted in a burglary by hauling off and concealing the goods, there was no error in refusing a continuance on the ground that the other, if present, would testify that he committed the burglary. Coprew v. State, 83 Cr. R. 151, 202 S. W. 81.

In prosecution for burglary committed on the 13th of the month, where defendant claimed to have purchased the stolen property found in his possession from an employé of a certain café on the 6th day of the following month, refusal to continue trial for absence of café proprietor on affidavit that the proprietor would testify merely that he had an employé with a specified name on the 26th and 27th days of the month during which the burglary took place, in absence of attempt to identify the employé so named as the man from whom the defendant claimed to have purchased the property or attempt to produce him at the trial as a witness or otherwise, held proper. Revels v. State, 88 Cr. R. 36, 224 S. W. 689.

18. Robbery.—In prosecution for being accomplice, to a robbery, applications for continuance by accused held properly denied; it not appearing that the testimony of absent witnesses, if given, would have affected or changed the verdict convicting accused. Slaughter v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 172.

In a prosecution for robbery, where the state contended that defendant and other negroes, broke into a boarding car, robbing Mexicans therein, the denial of a continuance because of the absence of a witness who would testify that a few minutes before the trouble arose he saw several Mexicans and negroes gambling, and shortly thereafter he heard a commotion, held not error, as such evidence, if admitted, would not have resulted in a more favorable verdict for defendant, it being entirely possible gambling preceded the robbery. Hardy v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 1097.

19. Theft.—Refusal of continuance in prosecution for larceny for absence of witness is not error; his promised testimony being immaterial. Hollis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 612, 204 S. W. 432.

Testimony by absent witnesses that on a certain date they heard another make arrangements with accused to transport an automobile but not identifying that automobile with the one accused was charged with having stolen, and which fixed the date of the conversation as subsequent to the date accused was arrested when in possession of the car, would not have materially affected the verdict so as to entitle accused to a continuance. Godby v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 516.

Where an automobile stolen from a city street was found the next morning in defendant's possession, with the license tags missing and the engine number mutilated, and defendant claiming that he was employed by T. to drive the car, but his own testimony did not show that T. had any opportunity to mutilate the engine number without his knowledge or participation, the refusal of a continuance because of the absence of a witness, who would have testified that defendant and T. came to his garage together in the car for gasoline and oil, was not ground for reversal. Clowers v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 226.

21. Seduction.—In a prosecution for seduction, refusal of a continuance on the ground that an absent witness would have testified that the hotel wherein prosecuting witness and another girl stayed three months before the offense was a disorderly house held not an abuse of discretion. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

In a prosecution for seduction, defendant was not entitled to a continuance for failure to procure a witness by whom he intended to prove that witness had kept company with prosecutrix and had sexual intercourse with her, where defendant did not allege whether such acts occurred before or after the alleged seduction, since, if after, the evidence was immaterial. Stracner v. State, 86 Cr. R. 89, 225 S. W. 305.

22. Cumulative testimony.—Refusal of continuance for absence of witnesses was not error, where other witnesses at the trial testified to the same facts that absent witnesses would have testified to. Bell v. State, 88 Cr. R. 64, 224 S. W. 1108; Armstrong v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 485.

The absence of witnesses who testified at a former trial on behalf of defendant to facts to which several other witnesses did testify at the second trial, some of them more strongly for defendant than the absent witnesses, does not give a right to a continuance. English v. State, 87 Cr. R. 507, 224 S. W. 511.

The rule that a continuance will not be granted for absence of witness whose testimony will be merely cumulative does not apply to the first application for a continuance or to testimony in corroboration of the husband or the wife or a near relative of the accused. Sherwood v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1101.

On defendant's first application for a continuance, the fact that the testimony of absent witnesses would be cumulative does not as a rule enter into the question. Suber v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 314.

The rule as to cumulative testimony is not to be applied strictly to first applications for continuance. Byrd v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 399.

23. Corroborating testimony.—A continuance to get impeaching testimony was properly refused, where other witnesses testified to the same matter. Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 57, 198 S. W. 326.

Testimony to support that of another witness occupies the same position, so far as continuance to obtain it is concerned, as impeaching evidence. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

25. Impeaching testimony.—Ordinarily a continuance will not be granted to procure the testimony of absent witnesses, where such testimony merely goes to the impeachment of the state's witness. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 948; White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 286, 199 S. W. 1117; Castleberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 271, 206 S. W. 353.

Where accused was indicted nearly a year before trial, but issued subpoena for absent witness only a few days before trial, and the testimony would have been only for impeachment, continuance was properly denied, in view of court's statement that the witness would not have testified as alleged. Porter v. State, 84 Cr. R. 164, 205 S. W. 985.

Testimony that state's witness, an accomplice, had stated he and not defendant had committed the burglary charged, was hearsay as to defendant and admissible only to impeach the witness if he denied the statements, and a continuance to obtain such testimony was properly denied. McNew v. State, 84 Cr. R. 594, 208 S. W. 528.

The refusal of the trial court to grant a continuance to procure impeaching evidence is rarely reviewed. Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

The refusal of the trial court to grant a continuance on account of the absence of a witness whose testimony would only have gone to the impeachment of one of the state's witnesses held not an abuse of discretion, particularly where it would be doubtful whether the alleged evidence of the absent witness would be admissible, as it related to an immaterial inquiry. Id.

In a prosecution for homicide, where continuance was asked because of an absent witness, evidence by the absent witness that he was present at the time and did not hear a remark by defendant to his brother concerning their pistols to which a witness for the state testified is not impeaching testimony only, but was admissible to negative the fact that accused made the remark. English v. State, 87 Cr. R. 507, 224 S. W. 511.

26. Alibi.—Action of trial court in denying new trial to defendant, convicted of horse theft, on account of denial of continuance to procure testimony of witnesses who would prove alibi, held correct. Cooley v. State, 83 Cr. R. 340, 203 S. W. 356.

Where, after motion by county attorney to quash depositions, on the ground that art. 824, as to preliminary affidavit, had not been complied with, defendant presented an application for a continuance and as one of the reasons therefor stated that clerk of court who issued commission was without the state, but if present would testify that the affidavit was filed, held, that defendant was entitled to continuance to obtain testimony of clerk, though a witness appeared and testified as to alibi; the depositions in question being sufficient if believed to establish an alibi. Barton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 198, 215 S. W. 968.

In prosecution for automobile theft in which defendant claimed an alibi, refusal of first application for a continuance for absence of witness, who would have corroborated testimony of defendant's wife that defendant at time of the commission of the crime was not in the town in which the crime was committed, was error, notwithstanding cumulative nature of the testimony. Sherwood v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1101.

Where defendant, prosecuted for burglary, asked a continuance to secure a witness in another county to testify that he saw defendant at a place 80 or 90 miles distant from the burglarized house on the preceding night, the continuance was properly denied for immateriality of the testimony, since the defendant could easily have traveled that distance by train or other conveyance during the night. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 508.

27. Admissions to prevent continuance.—Court did not err in refusing to continue trial upon ground of absent witness, where the facts to which witness would have testified were admitted by state to be true. Glascoe v. State, 85 Cr. R. 234, 210 S. W. 956.

Where defendant's motion for continuance upon ground of absent witness is denied, state may thereafter admit the truth of facts to which such witness would have testified, since it could have called the witness himself. Id.

Defendant's motion for continuance on the ground of the absence of a female witness, who, though duly subpoenaed, was unable to attend on account of her physical condition, cannot be denied because of the offer of the state to merely admit that if she were present, she would testify as claimed by defendant. McDonald v. State, 86 Cr. R. 304, 216 S. W. 166.

Admission by district attorney after the conclusion of the testimony that absent witness would have testified as indicated in an application for a continuance, and that his testimony was true, cannot relieve any error of the court in overruling the application for continuance, as such admission by the state's attorney must be made at the time of overruling a continuance as a means of avoiding such continuance. Charles v. State, 87 Cr. R. 233, 222 S. W. 255.

Introduction of written testimony of absent witnesses was not a waiver by accused of his motion for a continuance, where court asked state's counsel if he intended to offer to permit the use of the written testimony before the jury, and received an affirmative reply, and informed the counsel for the accused, in the absence of jury, that, in the event he failed to read the testimony, he would permit comment upon such failure in argument, accused protesting the ruling and asserting his continued reliance upon his motion for continuance. Medford v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 504.

An application for a continuance because of the absence of witnesses which complies with the statute and shows such reason for continuance or postponement as the trial court would be bound to grant cannot be defeated by an admission on the part of the state that the absent witnesses named in the application would, if present, give the testimony set out in the application; it being necessary that the admission embrace not only the fact that the witnesses would give the testimony, but that the facts were true. Id.

Court did not err in denying an application for a continuance because of the absence of defendant's wife, where the district attorney said that he was willing to admit that the wife, if present, would testify as stated by defendant, and that her testimony was true, and that defendant might make such statement to the jury any time during the trial, if he desired. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

28. Cause of absence of witness.—In prosecution for slander by imputing want of chastity, defendant held entitled to continuance for unavoidable absence of witness under subpoena, injured in automobile accident while on his way to attend trial. Lemcke v. State, 83 Cr. R. 273, 202 S. W. 744.

In ruling on an application for continuance because of the absence of a witness, the court is not bound to accept a telegram from a physician that the witness could not appear because of the sickness of his child. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 759.

29. Delay.—An application for continuance on the ground of the absence of witnesses, which merely stated that it was not made solely for delay, is insufficient. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 948.

SUBD. 6

30. Probability of securing attendance of witness.—A requested continuance in order to secure the attendance of an absent witness held properly refused, in view of the witness' testimony before the grand jury, failure to show diligence in securing her attendance, and the probability that she had entirely disappeared. Cundiff v. State, 86 Cr. R. 476, 218 S. W. 771.

Where defendant immediately after indictment obtained and promptly forwarded to proper officers subpoenas for certain witnesses, and where defendant's application for continuance stated the residence of such witnesses, and the returns of the officers did not indicate that such witnesses were not residents of the counties named, refusal of continuance was error, notwithstanding judge's opinion that the witnesses were transient persons and there was no probability of securing their attendance. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 317.

A continuance because of the absence of a witness who is a fugitive from justice should be refused. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

32. Discretion of court.—Exercise of trial court's discretion as to continuance is subject to review, but generally reversal for an abuse of discretion by the trial court in refusing a continuance will take place only where from the evidence at the trial the appellate court believes that if the absent witness had testified a more favorable verdict to the accused would have resulted. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

Where abuse of the discretion vested in trial court with reference to denying an application for continuance is charged, the presumption is in favor of the correctness of his ruling until its vice is affirmatively shown. Morse v. State, 85 Cr. R. 83, 210 S. W. 965.

Court held not to have abused its discretion in refusing to grant a second application for continuance by reason of absence of witnesses. Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 618, 215 S. W. 97.

In a homicide case, a continuance requested in order to secure an absent witness cannot be refused solely upon the ground that the witness had been indicted and hence was disqualified, where it appears that the indictment was secured by the district attorney with the sole purpose of bringing her back as a witness. Cundiff v. State, 86 Cr. R. 476, 218 S. W. 771.

The truth of the first or any subsequent application for continuance on the ground of the absence of witnesses is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and the denial of an application will not be held reversible error, unless the record leads to the conclusion that had the absent witness been present the result would have been different. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 948.

33. Denial of continuance as ground for new trial—In general.—In prosecution for pandering, held, new trial should have been granted; continuance to procure testimony contradicting wife, chief state witness, having been denied. Eppison v. State, 82 Cr. R. 364, 198 S. W. 948.

Denial of continuance because of absence of witness held not an abuse of discretion, where there was no probability of securing her personal attendance and an opportunity to procure her testimony by other means had been declined. Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292.

Trial court held not to have erred in overruling defendant's motion for continuance grounded on absence of witnesses, nor in refusing him new trial because thereof. Walker v. State, 83 Cr. R. 484, 204 S. W. 227.

To motion for new trial for refusal of continuance for absence of witness should be attached her affidavit that she would have testified as alleged. Hollis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 612, 204 S. W. 432.

Denial of an application for continuance of murder trial to procure witnesses, which does not show where they reside or to what county the subpoenas were to issue, or that such testimony could not be secured from others present, or account for the delay in issuing other than because of impeaching testimony, held not an abuse of discretion. Castleberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 271, 206 S. W. 353.

The court did not err in refusing a continuance on the ground of absence of witnesses, where diligence as to one witness was insufficient, and the court states that it was not shown that witnesses would give alleged testimony, and it was evident that the absent testimony would not, if present, have brought about a different result. Carneal v. State, 86 Cr. R. 274, 216 S. W. 626.

A conviction will not be reversed for denial of a motion to continue or postpone which was not sworn to by accused or by any one for him. Wallace v. State, 87 Cr. R. 527, 222 S. W. 1104.

Where developments on the trial showed that witnesses named in application for continuance were in a position to have known the facts attributed to them in the application, and where it did not appear on motion for new trial that the absent witnesses were unwilling to testify the court should have granted a new trial. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 317.

Where defendant was charged with a violation of the liquor law, and the state's witness testified that defendant was operating a still in a pasture, the denial of continuance on the ground of an absent witness, who, defendant asserted, would testify that about the time fixed by the state's witness there was no still in the pasture, was not error, in view of the fact that no affidavit of the witness was attached to the motion, that subpoenas were not applied for until four days after defendant's arrest, and that there was other testimony to support defendant's contention that there was no still in the pasture. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 948.

34. — Materiality, truth, and effect of absent testimony.—Where continuance is properly overruled for want of diligence, motion for new trial because of absent testimony should only be granted when it is reasonably probable that a more favorable verdict would have resulted. Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292.

Where there was sharp issue of fact touching immediate incidents of homicide, it was error to deny motion for new trial for refusal of continuance on account of absence of witness, whose absence was satisfactorily accounted for, and whose testimony, if believed, might have resulted in verdict of acquittal. Hughes v. State, 83 Cr. R. 550, 204 S. W. 640.

Refusal of an application for a continuance in a criminal case is not authorized because of affidavits controverting the truth of the purported testimony. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

Where an affidavit for continuance for the absence of two witnesses set out their proposed testimony as identical, and one of them became a witness for the state and told a different story from that set out in the application, the court below was justified in concluding that the absent witness, if present, would testify the same as the witness who had testified. McKinney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 105, 210 S. W. 700.

On application for continuance upon ground of absence of witness, where it plainly appears from other testimony that the absent witness would not testify as alleged, or that such testimony is improbable, and not likely true, the application for continuance is properly denied. Glascoe v. State, 85 Cr. R. 234, 210 S. W. 956.

In a prosecution for murder, denial of continuance for the absence of the witness stabbed by defendant at the time of the killing held not error, the facts expected to be proved by such witness on the face of the record not probably being his testimony. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

A new trial need not be granted because of the absence of a witness for which continuance was refused, unless it was reasonably probable that with his presence a verdict more favorable to accused would have resulted, and the probable truth of the testimony of the absent witness must therefore be made to appear. Bocknight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 428, 222 S. W. 259.

In prosecution for placing poison in drinking water with intent to injure and kill another, where most of the state's testimony tending to show the commission of the offense involved defendant's wife in one way or another, and where wife, if present, would have given very material testimony, refusal to grant continuance for absence of wife because of illness held reversible error. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

Where it appeared only inferentially that an absent witness was in a position to hear a remark by accused to which a witness for the state testified, and the fact that he would testify that he heard no such remark was not supported by an affidavit of the witness, there was no showing of abuse by the trial court of his discretion in denying the motion for continuance because of the absence of such witness. English v. State, 87 Cr. R. 507, 224 S. W. 511.

Where witnesses who had better opportunities for knowing defendant than the absent witness and were friendly to defendant testified, but were not questioned as to his sanity, the denial of a continuance for the absence of the witness can be sustained on the ground that it was not shown that, if present, she would testify that defendant was insane, or that, if she did so testify, her testimony would be probably true. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Defendant, who pleaded guilty to charge of assault with intent to kill, cannot complain of the refusal of a continuance because of the absence of a witness whose testimony could not affect the punishment, but was admissible solely on the issue of guilt. Id.

Where defendant, who was charged with a violation of the liquor laws, applied for continuance on the ground of the absence of a witness who, he asserted, would contradict testimony of the state's witness that defendant was operating a still in a pasture, the denial of the motion on the ground that the absent testimony, viewed in the light of the record, was probably not true, or would not have changed the result, held not an abuse of discretion. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 948.

Where defendant, prosecuted for burglary, asked a continuance to procure a witness to testify to having seen him 80 or 90 miles distant from the burglarized house on the preceding night, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to refuse a continuance, inasmuch as there was positive evidence of disinterested witnesses that defendant appellant was near the scene of the burglary on the morning of the day alleged, so that the court would have been justified in concluding the expectant testimony was probably untrue. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 508.

The court cannot deny a new trial for error in overruling a continuance to procure the testimony of absent witness, where sufficient diligence was shown, because the court does not believe, in view of the testimony given at the trial, that the claimed testimony of the absent witnesses was true, where affidavits of those witnesses attached to the motion for new trial stated their testimony, since the court cannot substitute his decision as to the weight and truthfulness of the testimony for that of the jury. Mathason v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 548.

In passing upon a motion for new trial, based in part on the refusal of a continuance, the trial court may take into consideration the likelihood that the absent witnesses named in the application for continuance would not have testified as stated, or that their testimony, if so given, would not likely be true. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, where prosecutrix's age was the vital issue in the case, and it clearly appeared that she was a person of perverted and depraved morals, held that accused should not have been deprived of any legitimate testimony, however slight, that might tend to contradict her, or to show that her testimony as to her age was not true, so that it was error to deny continuance to procure testimony of absent witnesses as to her age, even though she claimed that she had also had intercourse with them, and had told them at the time she was over the age charged. Id.

In passing upon a motion for new trial based in part on the refusal of a continuance, the trial court may take into consideration the likelihood that the absent witnesses named in the application for continuance would not have testified as stated. Id.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant was convicted of manslaughter, and the evidence tended to show that he struck and killed deceased to gratify his revenge, the refusal of a second continuance because of the absence of a witness who would testify to a communicated threat was not error, for, while it is sometimes error to refuse an application for a continuance to secure a witness who will testify to a threat, yet, as the entire record indicated that no different result could have occurred had the absent witness been present and testified, the refusal of the continuance was not error. Hoover v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 982.

Art. 609. [598] Subsequent application by defendant.

Construction of application.—Where a continuance was refused, but the court allowed an adjournment, a supplemental motion for a continuance on the day adjourned to was a second application. Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 57, 198 S. W. 326.

In absence of an affirmative showing that an application for continuance is the first, it is presumed that it is a subsequent application. Mitchell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 530, 222 S. W. 983.

Procurement of testimony from other source.—On a second application for continuance, it must be alleged and shown that absent testimony cannot be procured from any other source known to defendant. Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 618, 215 S. W. 97; Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 57, 198 S. W. 326; Cortez v. State, 82 Cr. R. 143, 198 S. W. 781; Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381; Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Defendant's application for second continuance to procure testimony of three absent witnesses was properly denied, where his testimony showed he might have proved same matters otherwise than by witnesses named. Cortez v. State, 82 Cr. R. 143, 198 S. W. 781.

A second continuance was properly refused, where no diligence was shown to secure the witness, and other witnesses testified to the facts expected to be testified to by the absent witness. Mitchell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 530, 222 S. W. 983.

Where defendant made a second application for continuance because of the absence of his sister, who would testify he was insane, but at the trial he introduced two brothers-in-law with whom he was associated before the offense more closely than with the absent sister, and neither was asked any questions tending to show the insanity of defendant, there was no showing that the evidence could not have been obtained from sources other than the absent witness, so that the denial of continuance was not shown to be erroneous. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Cumulative testimony.—Denial of a second continuance on account of absence of defendant's wife and another witness was not error, where it was made to secure cumulative testimony. Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381.

The denial of a second motion for continuance filed by defendant, who was accused of murder, on the ground of the absence of a witness to whom deceased made threats, which were communicated by the witness to defendant, was error, and cannot be sustained on the theory that the testimony of such witness was merely cumulative because other witnesses testified to threats; it appearing the absent witness was the only one who had communicated the threats, and that defendant had to rely solely on his testimony as to the communication thereof. Dunn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 299, 212 S. W. 511.

Where the testimony of an absent witness as to a previous difficulty between defendant and deceased was merely cumulative, other witnesses testifying to the main facts, although there was some difference as to the minor details, a second continuance will not be granted. Hoover v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 982.

Diligence.—A second application for a continuance, stating that defendant had made diligent inquiry, and exerted all means in his power to find the exact location of a witness, and had located him in D., and no process was issued after a prior application, where there was a return that witness was out of the county, did not show diligence. Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 57, 198 S. W. 326.

Denial of second continuance on account of absence of defendant's wife and another witness was not error, where there was a lack of diligence in procuring their attendance. Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381.

Art. 610. [599] Defendant shall swear to his application.

Application.—Denial of an application for a continuance, complying with the statute and setting out material evidence, on ground that appellant was illegally sworn by one of his attorneys, where no objection thereto was taken, was improper. Waites v. State, 82 Cr. R. 501, 200 S. W. 380.

A conviction cannot be reversed by reason of refusal of trial court to grant a verbal application for a postponement of the case, or a continuance, whether made before or after trial had commenced. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

Art. 612. [601] Statements in application may be denied under oath, etc.

See Woods v. State, 83 Cr. R. 332, 203 S. W. 54.

Denial.—It is error to permit the state to traverse accused's application for continuance because of absent witnesses, not only as to diligence, but also as to the fact of the presence of the witnesses at the scene of the crime, and to permit the state to introduce witnesses on a hearing of the traverse to show the said absent witnesses were not present at the scene of the crime. Mickle v. State, 85 Cr. R. 560, 213 S. W. 665.

Art. 613. [602] Proceedings when denial is filed.

Denial of grounds of application.—It is error to permit the state to traverse accused's application for continuance because of absent witnesses, not only as to diligence, but also as to the fact of the presence of the witnesses at the scene of the crime, and to permit the state to introduce witnesses on a hearing of the traverse to show the said absent witnesses were not present at the scene of the crime. Mickle v. State, 85 Cr. R. 560, 213 S. W. 665.

Trial of issue.—Although state may controvert and court determine accused's diligence, it is not within court's province on such hearing to pass upon weight of evidence accused desires from absent witness. Woods v. State, 83 Cr. R. 332, 203 S. W. 54.

In a prosecution for burglary, court properly sustained an objection to a question by defendant's counsel as to whether or not it was not a fact that he had inquired about a great number of people, and none of them would be positive whether they saw him at a place other than the place of the crime; the purpose of the inquiry being to show the materiality of testimony of absent witnesses, the fact that a great many people could not remember whether defendant was at a certain place not being an excuse for his failure to subpoena all those whom he knew would be cognizant of his presence there. Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 618, 215 S. W. 97.

Affidavits.—Where affidavit used by state in accused's motion for new trial was lost, state could not substitute new affidavit therefor after court's adjournment. Jeffries v. State, 82 Cr. R. 42, 198 S. W. 778.

Art. 616. [605] Continuance after trial commenced, when.

See Williams v. State, 24 Tex. App. 32, 5 S. W. 658.
Cited, Roach v. State, 21 Tex. App. 249, 17 S. W. 464.

Application.—A conviction cannot be reversed by reason of refusal of trial court to grant a verbal application for a postponement of the case, or a continuance, whether made before or after trial had commenced. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

Grounds.—Court did not err in denying motion to withdraw his announcement of ready for trial on ground that previous to trial state witness had told defendant's counsel that he had only bought liquor from defendant once at certain place, but on trial testified to another sale of liquor at different place; there being nothing to indicate that defendant could secure testimony, and no statement concerning truth of record sale of liquor. Powers v. State, 83 Cr. R. 462, 204 S. W. 325.

Where defendant, charged with murder, lost testimony of desired witness, because witness was indicted for complicity in same offense, but defendant did not move for postponement on ground of surprise, he could not for first time set up matter in his motion for new trial. Defendant should have moved for postponement, and then have demanded witness' trial first. Alsop v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195.

Surprise.—Refusal of accused's motion to withdraw his announcement of ready for trial to obtain pardon of convict witness because of surprise on being informed that such witness was convict, held not error. Simpson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 389, 196 S. W. 835.

There was no error in refusing continuance or postponement to enable a witness, objected to as a convict, to produce his pardon from another county, where defendant knew of the conviction, and so was not surprised, as stated in application. Thompson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 148, 205 S. W. 988.

A motion to postpone a murder trial to secure the testimony of a witness, without disclosing any efforts to procure the witness between adjournment of trial on Saturday evening and filing motion Monday morning, held to contain none of the elements of surprise required to authorize a continuance. Castleberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 271, 206 S. W. 353.

Where defendant's witness testified to seeing deceased put his hand in his bosom and seeing a pistol handle therein at the time the fatal shot was fired, and the state by cross-examination and summoning grand jurors laid the foundation for impeachment by proving he testified otherwise before grand jury, early in the trial, such was notice to defendant to secure his character witnesses, and he cannot complain that he was refused a postponement therefor. Id.

Discretion of court.—The granting of a postponement is a matter resting largely in the discretion of the trial court. Minor v. State, 86 Cr. R. 362, 216 S. W. 864.

Where defendant answered ready, and after the introduction of testimony asked for a postponement on the ground that his wife was ill with typhoid-malarial fever, but it appeared that she had been sick for two weeks before beginning of trial, which did not occupy more than 2½ hours, held, that the trial court's denial of postponement was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

9. DISQUALIFICATION OF THE JUDGE*Art. 617. [606] Causes which disqualify judges.

Counsel.—A judge who, while holding the office of district attorney, heard the complaint of the prosecuting witness, reduced it to writing, caused it to be signed and sworn to by him, and attested the same, has acted as counsel for the state, and is therefore disqualified from presiding at the trial of defendant for the offense charged in the complaint. Terry v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 510.

One who, as assistant county attorney, under duties prescribed by Pen. Code, arts. 426-428, assisted the grand jury is disqualified, as having been counsel for the state, to sit as judge. Patterson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 169, 202 S. W. 88.

Effect of disqualification.—A judge disqualified to try a criminal case may nevertheless set it upon the docket but he cannot decide how many special veniremen shall be drawn nor preside when list from which jury is to be selected are drawn as provided by art. 661. Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 359, 195 S. W. 1147.

Order changing venue made on judge's own motion under Code Cr. Proc. art. 626, being made by judge disqualified to sit in case, is void; judicial discretion being involved. Patterson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 169, 202 S. W. 88.

Art. 618. [607] Proceedings when judge of district court is disqualified.

Cited, Patterson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 169, 202 S. W. 88.

Validity and construction in general.—Conceding the authority of the Legislature to pass laws facilitating the exercise of the right of the parties under Const. art. 5, § 11, to select a person to try the case in lieu of a disqualified judge, such laws cannot be inconsistent with the terms or restrictive of the right given by the Constitution so that this article is invalid so far as it makes such right conditional on the impossibility of securing a judge by exchange of districts, and the parties may select a person to try the case without complying with that article. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

A special district judge elected by the bar to try a particular criminal case on the disqualification of the regular district judge under Const. art. 5, § 11, held not to have power to sit as judge, he not having been selected by the attorneys in the case under Civ. St. arts. 1676, 1677; art. 1678, providing for election by the bar only when the regular judge is absent or unable to preside, not applying. Strahan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 324, 221 S. W. 976.

Selection by agreement.—Where the parties by agreement appointed an attorney to try the case pursuant to Const. art. 5, § 11, the fact that the Governor thereupon appointed him did not detract from the force of his selection by the parties. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

10. CHANGE OF VENUE

Art. 626. [613] District judge may order change of venue on his own motion, when.

Cited, Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 347, 197 S. W. 196; Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Stevens, 109 Tex. 262, 206 S. W. 921.

Power and duty of court in general.—A defendant cannot obtain a change of venue for the prejudice of the judge before whom the prosecution is commenced, there being no provision therefor in the statutes. Johnson v. State, 31 Cr. R. 456, 20 S. W. 985.

Where trial for murder resulted in a hung jury, judge on his own motion for ample grounds stated in his order properly changed venue to district court of another county. Flewellen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 563, 204 S. W. 657.

The provisions of the venue statute prescribing means for either the state or accused to obtain a change of venue, and Code Cr. Proc. art. 629, making special provision for change of venue in cases where unsuccessful efforts have been made to obtain a jury, are not limitations upon the power vested in the trial court to change venue on its own motion when satisfied that a trial alike fair and impartial to the state and accused cannot be had. English v. State, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

Order for change of venue.—Order changing venue made on judge's own motion being made by judge disqualified to sit in case, is void; judicial discretion being involved. Patterson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 169, 202 S. W. 88.

Trial court having power, granted by Const. art. 3, § 45, to change venue, failure to observe the provision requiring reason to be embraced in order, does not vitiate it, in absence of abuse of discretion. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 213, 220 S. W. 326.

Plea to jurisdiction because order changing venue designated court to which case was sent as "criminal district court, place 2, Dallas county," instead of "No. 2," held properly overruled; "place" being surplusage. Haley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 519, 223 S. W. 202.

A change of venue as to one jointly indicted changes the venue as to all. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

The regularity or irregularity of a recognizance made on change of venue cannot affect the validity of the order changing the venue; it being the order which confers venue on the new forum, and not the recognizance. Haley v. State (Cr. App.) 223 S. W. 208.

3. Grounds in general.—A defendant cannot obtain a change of venue for the prejudice of the judge before whom the prosecution is commenced, there being no provision therefor in the statutes. Johnson v. State, 31 Cr. R. 456, 20 S. W. 985.

4. Local prejudice.—In prosecution for assault to murder, court's finding there existed no such prejudice as entitled defendant to change of venue, held supported by preponderance of evidence; there being no abuse of discretion, such as would authorize Court of Criminal Appeals to reverse for failure to change venue, under article 634. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

Where accused negro had killed a white man and, in the 10 days between the killing and the trial, such strong public sentiment was created against accused by publicity given the state's side of the case that the authorities deemed a strong guard of soldiers necessary for accused's protection, his motion for continuance should have been granted or change of venue ordered. Mickle v. State, 85 Cr. R. 560, 213 S. W. 665.

5. Dangerous combination against accused.—Where about 95 per cent. of those summoned as jurors had prejudged a murder case, and a strong combination of influential people in the county had gone so far as to threaten those who signed defendant's bond, held, in view of the fact that officers of the law had whipped witnesses in an endeavor to make them testify against defendant, that defendant was entitled to a change of venue. Finks v. State, 84 Cr. R. 536, 209 S. W. 154.

10. Hearing and determination.—Where the evidence on defendant's motion for change of venue bearing on the issue of prejudice and combination in the county was conflicting, the motion is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

State*, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

Art. 630. [617] Application may be made before announcing ready for trial, etc.

Time for filing application.—An application for change of venue on the ground of prejudice after nine jurors had been selected was too late. Mirick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 388, 204 S. W. 222.

Disposition of other motions and pleas.—A motion to quash made after the venue had been changed was too late, since all special pleas and exceptions must, in view of this article, be presented before change of venue is had. Fitzgerald v. State, 87 Cr. R. 34, 219 S. W. 199; Scitern v. State, 87 Cr. R. 112, 219 S. W. 833.

Where an indictment recited that it was found by the grand jury organized at the October term, the indictment was returned on November 21st, and on accused's application the venue was changed on November 24th, a motion then made to quash the indictment on the ground that there was a misnomer of the term of court at which it was returned was properly overruled, for, under arts. 451, 576, 597, the statement of the term of court at which the indictment was presented is not one of the statutory requirements, but is, at most, a matter of form, available only on motion to quash presented in due time, and, under this article, it is contemplated that an exception to the form of the indictment should be made in the court in which the indictment is filed before the venue is changed. Finch v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 528.

Art. 632. [619] Where adjoining counties are all subject to objection.

Cited, Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Stevens, 109 Tex. 262, 206 S. W. 921.

In general.—Finding of court in order changing venue of his own motion, into county not adjoining that in which prosecution was commenced, because of prejudice against the accused, is presumed to speak the truth, and will not be revised on appeal unless it be affirmatively shown that accused was materially injured by such change of venue, and unless bill of exceptions stating facts be filed at the time, under article 634. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

Art. 632b. Change of venue in certain cases.—In case it should appear to the judge before whose court the defendant stands charged with a violation of this Act that either the State or the defendant can not obtain a fair and impartial trial in the community, it shall be his duty to change the venue either of his own motion or on application of the attorney representing the State or defendant, said case to be transferred to an adjoining county if similar conditions do not there exist, and if similar conditions appear to exist in all the adjoining counties as those authorizing the change of venue, then the judge shall order said case transferred to a court of competent jurisdiction in some county of the State where the State and the defendant can obtain a fair and impartial trial. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 70, § 2.]

Took effect 90 days after March 27, 1918, date of adjournment.

For section 1 of this act, see ante, Civ. St., art. 7136a.

Art. 633. [620] Application for change of venue may be controverted, how.

Form and sufficiency of controverting affidavits.—Where accused's motion for change of venue on both grounds authorized by art. 628, as to change of venue, was contested by state's affidavits attacking the means of knowledge of his compurgators, it was not necessary that the contesting affidavits also attack the credibility of such compurgators; the contest applying to both grounds of motion. Parker v. State, 81 Cr. R. 397, 196 S. W. 537.

In prosecution for murder, where state controverted application for change of venue, and it was shown by a number of witnesses, who were acquainted throughout the county, that defendant could obtain a fair and impartial trial therein, and the only witness who testified that defendant could not obtain a fair and impartial trial was related to defendant, the trial court properly denied the application. Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390.

Where the issue made by the state, based on an affidavit attacking the credibility and means of knowledge of defendant's compurgators in his application for change of venue, was in statutory form, the court did not err in overruling defendant's demurrer thereto. Carlile v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

Scope of issues.—On the hearing of evidence on the issue of change of venue, the trial court commits no error in enlarging the scope of the hearing to extend beyond the question of the credibility and means of knowledge of defendant's compurgators and in hearing evidence as to the existence of prejudice in fact. Carlile v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

Burden of proof.—Where state opposed application for change of venue, defendant had burden of establishing existence in county of alleged prejudice against him. Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390.

Art. 634. [621] Order of judge shall not be revised on appeal, unless, etc.

Review on appeal in general.—In the absence of arbitrary action or abuse of discretion in denying change of venue, the judge's decision will not be overturned. Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014; Parker v. State, 81 Cr. R. 397, 196 S. W. 537; Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 213, 220 S. W. 326.

In prosecution for assault to murder, court's finding there existed no such prejudice as entitled defendant to change of venue held supported by preponderance of evidence; there being no abuse of discretion, such as would authorize Court of Criminal Appeals to reverse for failure to change venue. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

Where evidence heard on application for change of venue was not filed and verified during term at which case was tried, court on appeal is not privileged to consider it. Hamilton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 90, 201 S. W. 1009.

In prosecution of bank president for murder of state commissioner of banking, denial of motion for change of venue on ground of impossibility of having fair trial in county, held not to require reversal, in view of facts stated in judge's qualification of defendant's bill. Watson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 115, 205 S. W. 662.

Finding of court in order changing venue of his own motion under Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 632, into county not adjoining that in which prosecution was commenced because of prejudice against the accused, is presumed to speak the truth. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

The Court of Criminal Appeals will not conclude the trial court has abused the discretion confided in him in the disposition of matters such as change of venue, unless injury appears. Carlile v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

Objection and exception.—Assignment of error to change of venue will not be sustained, where appellant did not take exception when venue was changed. Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 347, 197 S. W. 196; Alarcan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 458, 222 S. W. 982.

Though it affirmatively appears from order that trial judge changed venue without believing fair trial could not be had in county, Court of Criminal Appeals has no jurisdiction to review matter, unless it appears defendant excepted to order; otherwise the presumption he acquiesced prevails. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 213, 220 S. W. 326.

In view of art. 744, Rev. St. art. 2059, independently of this article, no review of such order can lawfully be made on appeal unless it is shown that defendant objected below. Id.

No error in defendant's recognizance on change of venue is brought up for review where no objection was raised to the jurisdiction of the trial court except by plea to the jurisdiction setting up that the order changing venue incorrectly designated the court to which the case was sent. Haley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 519, 223 S. W. 202.

Pleas to the jurisdiction in cases whose venue has been changed will not be entertained by the new court, or by the Court of Criminal Appeals unless the matter complained of was preserved by proper bill of exceptions taken in the court a quo. Id.

Error in a change of venue must be excepted to in the court from which the change is made, and cannot avail in a plea to the jurisdiction of the court to which such venue is changed. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Bill of exceptions.—Bill of exceptions containing evidence, to denial of change of venue on account of prejudice, filed more than a month after court adjourned for the term, and without showing that the delay was caused by the court officers, cannot work reversal of conviction. Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014.

Bill of exceptions to overruling of motion to change venue, signed by county attorney, but not by defendant's counsel, nor approved by court, and not containing statement of facts except in question and answer form, held not to be considered. Coates v. State, 83 Cr. R. 309, 203 S. W. 904.

Statement of facts introduced on motion for change of venue, attached to statement of facts on appeal, was not statement of facts such as is required in bill of exceptions to ruling on motion to change venue. Id.

Finding of court in order changing venue of his own motion, under art. 632, into county not adjoining that in which prosecution was commenced, because of prejudice against the accused, is presumed to speak the truth, and will not be revised on appeal unless it be affirmatively shown that accused was materially injured by such change of venue, and unless bill of exceptions stating facts be filed at the time. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

Art. 635. [622] Clerks' duties in case of change of venue.

See Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Requisites of transcript.—The court to which the venue of a case is changed acquires no jurisdiction, where the indictment was not transmitted to it, because it had been lost in the other court, and not substituted, since under Bill of Rights, § 10, no citizen can be tried for felony except upon an indictment, and the court to which the venue was changed, therefore, cannot grant an order for substitution of the indictment. Hollingsworth v. State, 87 Cr. R. 399, 221 S. W. 978.

Supplying deficiencies in transcript.—The court to which the venue of a criminal prosecution is changed may order certiorari to bring up missing papers, or original or certified copies, from the court from which the case was transferred. Hollingsworth v. State, 86 Cr. R. 399, 221 S. W. 978.

See Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Papers required to be copied.—This article does not require the clerk to make a copy of testimony taken on a preliminary examination; and, therefore, it was no objection to the admission of parol evidence of such examination that a certified copy from the clerk was not produced nor accounted for. Byrd v. State, 26 Tex. App. 374, 9 S. W. 759.

Art. 637. [624] If defendant is on bail, shall be recognized.

See Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Order.—An order directing a change in venue should also either direct that defendant be placed in custody or fix the amount of the recognizance, and it would be incomplete in the absence of such recital. Haley v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 208.

Defective recognizance.—Mere fact of a defective recognizance on change of venue would not render void a judgment of a court of otherwise competent jurisdiction, and it was immaterial that such a recognizance given on change of venue bound accused to appear before "the district court of Dallas county," and not before criminal district court No. 2 of said county; there being no such court in existence as the district court of Dallas county. Haley v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 208.

Objections to recognizance.—The trial court is the proper place to present objections to the recognizance on change of venue. Haley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 519, 223 S. W. 202.

Art. 639. [626] If defendant be in custody.

Order.—An order directing a change in venue should also either direct that defendant be placed in custody or fix the amount of the recognizance, and it would be incomplete in the absence of such recital. Haley v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 208.

8. Of the depositions of witnesses and testimony taken before examining courts and juries of inquest.

OF THE MODE OF TRIAL

Art.

644. Jury the only mode of trial, when.
 645. Jury shall consist of what number.
 645b. Same; Criminal District Court of Tarrant County.
 645c. Same; Criminal District Court of Bowie County.

Art.

646. Defendant must be personally present, etc.
 648. Defendant on bail.
 650. Criminal docket shall be kept.
 653. Defendant required to plead.

Article 644. [631] Jury the only mode of trial, when.

Cited, Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

Art. 645. [632] Jury; when of twelve, when of six.

In the district court.—The Constitution requires a jury of 12 men for misdemeanor trials in the criminal district court of Bowie county, and the Legislature was not authorized to provide for a trial before a jury of 6. Bennett v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 841; Shipp v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 840.

Since the criminal district court, created by Acts 35th Leg. (4th Called Sess.) c. 28, was in effect a district court within the Constitution, the provision of that act (§ 8) authorizing a jury of 6 in a trial for misdemeanors is contrary to the constitutional requirement that the jury in a district court shall be composed of 12 men. Rochelle v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 838

Art. 645b. Same; Criminal District Court of Tarrant county.—Said Criminal District Court of Tarrant County shall try all misdemeanor cases coming before it with six jurors instead of twelve jurors, unless a jury be waived by the defendant. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 77, § 8.]

Art. 645c. Same; Criminal District Court of Bowie county.—Said criminal district court of Bowie County [Arts. 97 $\frac{3}{4}$ –97 $\frac{3}{4}$ i4] shall try all misdemeanor cases coming before it with six jurors instead of twelve jurors, unless a jury be waived by the defendant. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 28, § 8; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 8, § 8.]

Explanatory.—The court above referred to is abolished as of Dec. 31, 1922. See art. 97 $\frac{3}{4}$ i4, ante.

Art. 646. [633] Defendant must be personally present, etc.

See Powers v. State, 23 Tex. App. 42, 5 S. W. 153.

Presence during particular proceedings.—Gen. Laws 1907, c. 139, § 9, specifically amends White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. art. 647, being now article 660, Vernon's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. 1916, so that it no longer requires that a special venire be drawn in "open court," and there is no law giving defendant's attorney right to be present at such drawing, but the fact that the defendant's counsel was then absent at the court's request did not show that the court was not open when the drawing was made in the courtroom, in the presence of court and clerk. Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

When a juror has been sworn in a capital case he is impaneled and the trial judge cannot excuse him in the absence of the defendant, and it was error for the trial judge to dismiss a colored juror because of objections by white jurors outside of court and by agreement with the attorneys for the state and defendant. Crow v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 148.

The law permits a juror in a criminal case to file an affidavit presenting certain excuses making it unnecessary, in that instance, for him to appear in person; and unless these affidavits are on file, veniremen should not be excused except in open court and in defendant's presence. Id.

Art. 648. [635] Defendant on bail.

See notes under art. 900, post.

Art. 650. [637] Criminal docket shall be kept.

See Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 986.

Art. 653. [640] Defendant required to plead.

OF THE DRAWING OF JURORS, AND OF THE SPECIAL VENIRE IN CAPITAL CASES

Art.	Art.
655. Definition of a "special venire."	661a. Special venire how summoned.
656. State may obtain order for special venire, etc.	664. Certain officers to select jurors.
657. Defendant may obtain special venire, when.	667. In case no jurors, or not a sufficient number have been selected, etc.
658. Order of court shall state what, and writ shall issue accordingly.	668. Service of writ.
659. Capital cases may be set for particular day.	669. Return of writ.
660. Manner of selecting special venire.	670. Sheriff shall be instructed by court as to summoning jurors.
660a. Same.	671. Defendant served with copy of list, etc.
661. Same.	672. One day's service of copy before trial.

Article 655. [642] Definition of a special venire.

See Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Cited, Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 359, 195 S. W. 1147.

In general.—A special venire, which was executed by the sheriff, will not be vacated because improperly directed to the "sheriff or any constable," instead of the sheriff. (Suit v. State [Tex. App.] 17 S. W. 458, followed.) Jackson v. State, 30 Tex. App. 664, 18 S. W. 643.

Where accused requested the court to direct the sheriff to continue his efforts to summon the men designated on the special venire panel who had not been served, he cannot justly complain of the service by the sheriff of all men found on the list, including those taken from the list of summoned jurors in response to accused's motion to quash on the ground they were irregularly served. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

The court was not required to sustain accused's motion to quash special venire, relating to jurors irregularly served, but present in court in obedience to the venire writ. Id.

Capital case.—That jury imposed imprisonment, instead of death in capital case, does not affect the right of the defendant to a venire in accordance with law relating to capital cases. Clayton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 57, 201 S. W. 172.

Number served or appearing.—Where officers lawfully drew 150 jurors for special venire, of whom sheriff served 92, the others being out of the county or not found after diligent search, and none were excused before the case was called for trial and only those having legal exemptions were excused, save those excused by consent of the parties, and no juror was forced upon defendant, who did not exhaust his challenges, there was no error. Hubert v. State, 83 Cr. R. 448, 203 S. W. 900.

In a homicide case, where a special venire of 50 men were regularly ordered for appearance, but only 35 were served with summons to appear, the fact that all the veniremen were not summoned did not require the court to quash the venire. Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509.

Where a special venire of 50 men was ordered for appearance, but only 35 were served with summons, it was error for the court to dismiss the 35 veniremen and order a new venire, when both the accused and the state were ready for trial and no motion was made to quash. Id.

That out of 500 persons named in the special venire list only 200 men were summoned, and approximately 100 excused for good cause, leaving only about 100 men from which to select a jury, does not show want of diligence justifying quashal of the writ on that ground. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

In the absence of proof of lack of sufficient diligence, accused must show, to require quashal of the venire for nonservice on part of the list, that the number of jurors available under the venire was insufficient to enable him to obtain an impartial jury. Id.

Art. 656. [643] State may obtain order for special venire, etc.

See Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Art. 657. [644] Defendant may obtain special venire, when.

See Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Cited, Roberts v. State, 30 Tex. App. 291, 17 S. W. 450.

In general.—In a capital case, the accused is entitled to a special venire, and may demand such at the time the case is called for trial. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

Art. 658. [645] Order of the court; writ.

See Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Order.—A judge disqualified to sit in a criminal case cannot decide how many special veniremen shall be drawn, nor preside when list from which jury is to be selected are drawn as provided by art. 661. Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 359, 195 S. W. 1147.

Assuming that an entry nunc pro tunc of order to clerk to issue venire writ may not be made except there be some written evidence of the original order, a written memorandum made by the judge at the time, and in addition thereto a venire writ issued by the clerk at the time the order was made, certifying under the seal of the court that the order had been made, was a compliance with this requirement. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 986.

Art. 659. [646] Capital cases may be set for particular day.

See Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Art. 660. [647] Manner of selecting special venire.

See Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

In general.—The court judicially knows that El Paso is a large city situated on the border of the state, and that veniremen in such county are not listed by jury commissioners, but are listed by drawing from a wheel the names of taxpayers. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

Gen. Laws 1907, c. 139, § 9, specifically amended White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. art. 647, being now art. 660, so that it no longer requires that a special venire be drawn in "open court," and there is no law giving defendant's attorney right to be present at such drawing, but the fact that the defendant's counsel was then absent at the court's request did not show that the court was not open when the drawing was made in the courtroom, in the presence of court and clerk. Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

Code Cr. Proc. 1895, art. 647, relating to the drawing of special venires, was repealed by the amendment of the Jury Law of April, 1907, whereby such section was rewritten, and by Code revision of 1911, whereby such article as amended was brought forward as art. 660, while the original article was omitted from the Code. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Art. 660a. Same.—Whenever a special venire is ordered in counties not using the wheel system, and to which Article 660, Revised Code of Criminal Procedure of 1911 is not applicable, all the names of all the persons selected by the jury commissioners to do jury service for the term at which such venire is required shall be placed upon tickets of similar size and color of paper, and the tickets placed in a box and well shaken up; and from this box the clerk, in presence of the judge, in open court, shall draw the number of names required for such special venire, and shall prepare a list of such names in the order in which they are drawn from the box, and attach such list to the writ and deliver the same to the sheriff. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 37.]

Took effect March 7, 1919.

Art. 661. [647a] Same.

Drawing the venire.—A judge disqualified to sit in a criminal case cannot decide how many special veniremen shall be drawn under art. 658, nor preside when list from which jury is to be selected are drawn, as provided by this article. Taylor v. State, 81 Cr. R. 359, 195 S. W. 1147.

Where there were 84 jurors selected for term of court and 60 were discharged without being drawn or serving on a venire, the drawing of the remaining 24 and the adding of 24 names by the sheriff, in a capital case, was not a compliance with this article, and a conviction cannot stand. Clayton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 57, 201 S. W. 172.

Where in a murder trial all the names on the regular venire except 20 had been drawn for other special venires and the clerk placed the names of such 20 jurors in the box with the names on the special venire list, mixing them thoroughly and drawing therefrom the special venire in another case, and from the remaining names drawing the special venire for the murder trial, 9 of the men so drawn being among the 20 remaining in the regular venire list, a motion to quash the special venire because not drawn in accordance with law was properly overruled. Cotton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 337, 217 S. W. 158.

Jurors selected for jury service during the term must first be economized and used, and until this has been done a list of jurors drawn for special venire list are not authorized to be placed in the jury box and drawn to serve on special venire, and where the names of all the petit jurors and those specially drawn for special venire service are all placed in the box at once, a special list drawn therefrom including some of each kind of jurors was not a proper venire. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

In a murder prosecution, it was not error to order a special venire drawn from the list prepared by the jury commissioners, in view of arts. 656, 658, 659, 661, 661a, Rev. St. arts. 5135, 5136, and Const. art. 1, § 15. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Art. 661a. Special venire, how summoned.

See Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Art. 664. Certain officers to select jurors.

Constitutionality.—Equal protection of laws is not denied colored persons by Constitution, which grants discretion to certain officers in selection of jurors which can be used to abridge right of such colored persons to serve on such juries, when it is not shown that their actual administration is evil. Roberts v. State, 81 Cr. R. 227, 195 S. W. 189.

Art. 667. [649] In case no jurors or not a sufficient number.

In general.—Arts. 644-654, constitute rules for drawing juries in capital cases, and complaint of failure of court to resort to jury wheel for talesmen cannot be sustained, in view of this article, where there is a failure to select jury from special venire. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

Art. 668. [650] Service of writ.

In general.—In a prosecution for murder, defendant's motion to quash the venire because the provision requiring the sheriff executing the writ of special venire verbally to summon the veniremen in person, was not observed, was properly denied, where all the special venire summoned by mail were either in attendance on the court or had been excused for sickness or other legal cause. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

Art. 669. [651] Return of writ.

In general.—In the absence of any challenge on the part of accused of sufficiency of sheriff's return, a general statement that jurors not summoned could not be found after diligent search would be sufficient; but since accused challenged conclusion that jurors could not be found after diligent search, the court erred in overruling motion to quash venire, without requiring sheriff to make an amended return, showing at least in a general way what efforts he had made to summon the unsummoned jurors. Whittington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 1, 215 S. W. 456.

Art. 670. [652] Sheriff shall be instructed by court as to summoning jurors.

See Rodriguez v. State, 23 Tex. App. 503, 5 S. W. 255.

Art. 671. [653] Copy of list of jurors shall be served on defendant, etc.

Errors in names.—Where four names on a copy of special venire served on defendant were misspelled or a wrong initial given, and such jurors were excused without the objection of defendant on trial for murder and without use of his challenges which were not exhausted, and he asked no attachment for them, such errors in names were immaterial. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

A heavy penalty assessed held not to show that defendant, convicted of murder, was injured by not having a copy of the special venire sooner, where the record shows the jury were selected from the regular venire, and that defendant did not exhaust his challenges. Id.

Where the state exhausted a challenge in each instance of variance between the name of the juror as shown on the original venire and the officer's return and copy, and where no service was shown on the juror drawn, defendant waived his right to have such juror attached and brought in, defendant is not entitled to have quashed the service on him of a purported copy of the jurors summoned on account of variance between the return and copy. Hardy v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 1097.

Art. 672. [654] One day's service of copy before trial.

In general.—Out of the list of 60 included in a special venire but 50 were summoned, and of these only 33 attended. Held, that it was error to proceed to select a jury from those in attendance without first issuing process to compel the attendance of the other 17 venire men. Cahn v. State, 27 Tex. App. 709, 11 S. W. 723.

Where defendant had practically two days between service and trial, and was unusually well equipped with experienced attorneys with more than ordinary knowledge of the persons summoned as veniremen, motion to postpone trial to give additional time to investigate veniremen was properly overruled. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

OF THE FORMATION OF THE JURY IN CAPITAL CASES

Art. 673. Names of jurors to be called, etc.	Art. 691. Number of challenges in capital cases.
676. Persons summoned as jurors may claim exemption, how and when.	692. Challenge for cause.
677. May be excused by consent of parties.	693. Evidence may be heard, etc.
680. Defendant may challenge array, when.	695. No juror shall be impaneled, when.
686. Court shall proceed to try qualifications of persons summoned.	697. Judge shall decide qualifications of jurors.
687. Mode of testing qualifications.	698. Oath to be administered to each juror.
690. A peremptory challenge.	699. Court may adjourn persons summoned, etc., but jurors, when sworn, should not separate, unless, etc.

Article 673. [655] In capital cases, names of jurors to be called, etc.

Cited, Osborne v. State, 23 Tex. App. 431, 5 S. W. 251; Rodriguez v. State, 23 Tex. App. 503, 5 S. W. 255.

In general.—In view of this article, and arts. 674 and 675, relating to their oaths and excuses, and arts. 686–688, relating to challenges and qualifications, it was error to refuse defendant appellant's requests to call all veniremen and hear their general excuses so it might be known who were to be examined on their voir dire, so he could exercise his challenges intelligently. Crow v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 148.

In a prosecution for murder the trial court should not have called in the jurors four at a time, instead of all, and sworn and tested them primarily and received their excuses, since this left both state and defendant to act in the dark with reference to other veniremen, and is improper practice. Id.

Art. 676. Persons summoned as jurors may claim exemption, how and when.

In general.—The law permits a juror in a criminal case to file an affidavit presenting certain excuses making it unnecessary, in that instance, for him to appear in person; and unless these affidavits are on file, veniremen should not be excused except in open court and in defendant's presence. Crow v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 148.

Art. 677. [658] May be excused by consent of parties.

Cited, Livar v. State, 26 Tex. App. 115, 9 S. W. 552.

Art. 680. [661] Defendant may challenge array, when.

Grounds.—Where both accused and deceased were negroes, evidence held not to show race discrimination, as alleged, in selecting grand and petit jurors, in that no negroes were selected. Roberts v. State, 81 Cr. R. 227, 195 S. W. 189.

It appearing that the jurors summoned responded, and that, after eliminating those properly excused for good cause, there remained about 100 veniremen, and that in selecting the jury the appellant did not exhaust his peremptory challenges, and no objectionable juror having been forced upon him, there was no prejudicial error in overruling the motion to quash the venire. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

There was no merit in defendant's motion to quash array and jury panel, on ground that the trial court, on defendant's objection that he had not been allowed two days after arrest to file written pleadings, etc., reset his case for the week following, and directed jurors present and regularly drawn to report back for duty on the following Monday, which they did, with some exceptions properly filed by talesmen summoned by the sheriff under the court's direction. Halbadier v. State, 85 Cr. R. 593, 214 S. W. 349.

The failure of some of the veniremen to respond is not a ground for quashing the writ of venire. Clark v. State, 87 Cr. R. 107, 220 S. W. 100.

Art. 686. [667] Court shall proceed to try qualifications of persons summoned.

In general.—It was error to refuse defendant appellant's request to call all veniremen and hear their general excuses so it might be known who were to be examined on their voir dire, so he could exercise his challenges intelligently. Crow v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 148.

Art. 687. [668] Mode of testing qualifications.

Cited, Hunter v. State, 30 Tex. App. 314, 17 S. W. 414.

In general.—Persons who have legally declared their intention of becoming citizens are not, by reason of their foreign birth, disqualified to act as jurors. Abriego v. State, 29 Tex. App. 143, 15 S. W. 408.

In a verbal address, delivered while testing jurors for the week as to their qualifications, the court should not have discussed the question of reasonable doubt, and how from the viewpoint of the court it ought to be considered. Redwine v. State, 85 Cr. R. 437, 213 S. W. 636.

Art. 690. [671] A peremptory challenge.

Nature of right to challenge.—In a prosecution for rape, where the court, on statement by the prosecutor that he would not insist on the death penalty, improperly denied accused the right to 15 peremptory challenges and restricted him to 10, and the record showed that accused desired to challenge five other jurors after exercising his peremptory challenges, the denial was error, for such jurors will be deemed objectionable, for, as relating to a peremptory challenge, a juror is "objectionable" if the accused desiring to eliminate him makes known his wish in a timely and orderly manner. Kerley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 163.

Failure to exercise all challenges.—Where officers lawfully drew 150 jurors for special venire, of whom sheriff served 92, the others being out of the county or not found after diligent search, and none were excused before the case was called for trial, and only those having legal exemptions were excused, save those excused by consent of the parties, and no juror was forced upon defendant, who did not exhaust his challenges, there was no error. Hubert v. State, 83 Cr. R. 448, 203 S. W. 900.

Where venireman was excused upon peremptory challenge, and the court offered to restore the challenge to accused, no error appeared, even though the juror was subject to challenge for cause. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

Error of court in failing to sustain challenge for cause does not require reversal, where the juror was excused on peremptory challenge of accused, and the court allowed an additional peremptory challenge. Whittington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 1, 215 S. W. 456.

Art. 691. [672] Number of challenges in capital cases.

Denial of right.—The arbitrary denial of the right to 15 peremptory challenges in a prosecution for rape which is punishable by death or imprisonment in the penitentiary is a denial of a fair trial, even though the prosecutor stated that he would not insist on the death penalty. Kerley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 163.

Art. 692. [673] A challenge for cause may be made for what reason.

See Nalley v. State, 28 Tex. App. 387, 13 S. W. 670,

4. In general.—That defendant did not know that one of the jurors was not a householder or freeholder, and thereby subject to challenge at the time he was accepted, will not of itself require the granting of a new trial. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

5. In general.—Refusal to grant new trial, when it was disclosed that one of the jurors who had rendered verdict of guilty of murder was an unpardoned convict, requires reversal of judgment. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

Verdict of conviction returned by jury whose foreman had been convicted in court of United States of a felony and remained unpardoned must be set aside; "conviction," as used in statute, including conviction in another jurisdiction. Amaya v. State, 87 Cr. R. 160, 220 S. W. 98.

8. In general.—Where contention that insanity of juror rendered verdict void was not raised below, it will not be considered. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

SUBD. 8

16. Trial of similar case.—Jurors who served in a prosecution for violation of local option law, in which a verdict of guilty has been rendered against defendant, could not be challenged for cause in a later prosecution for a violation of the local option law against the same defendant, where the violation charged was sale at a different time, and to different parties and under different circumstances. Venn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 151, 210 S. W. 534.

SUBD. 11

21. Circumstantial evidence.—Where defendant, accused of murder, was not present at the time of the killing, and where his guilty connection therewith was more an issue in the case than the fact of death, the fact that there was an eyewitness to the actual homicide, or that a person who fired the shot declared that defendant had hired him to so do, did not take the case from the domain of circumstantial evidence, and authorized challenge for cause for conscientious scruples of jurors. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

SUBD. 12

23. In general.—When the jurors had qualified by saying that they had no prejudice against the defendant, it was not error to exclude the question: "Have you, from hearsay or otherwise, so prejudged the defendant that you think him such a person as would be likely to commit the offense?" Messic v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 626.

That a juror, upon his examination, misled the defendant with reference to his being impartial, without a showing that defendant learned of juror's prejudice subsequent to his acceptance, is insufficient for a new trial. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

Where defendant in murder case lived in house of ill fame with his wife, it was proper to ask the jurors if such fact would influence them, as a basis for a peremptory challenge, but not for disqualification. Houston v. State, 83 Cr. R. 190, 202 S. W. 84.

Evidence that a juror was in favor of a felony conviction, although other jurors favored acquittal or conviction of an aggravated assault with a fine of only $25, the jury finally agreeing on conviction of an aggravated assault with a fine of $100, is not sufficient to show that the juror was prejudiced. Samino v. State, 83 Cr. R. 481, 204 S. W. 233.

24. Race prejudice.—Where an alleged criminal libel contained a diatribe against Jews and it appeared that four or five members of the jury panel were of the Jewish race or connected with them and would have admitted that they would be prejudiced against one criticizing the Jews as a race, defendant was entitled to bring out such matter on voir dire examination, and his challenge against such persons for cause should be sustained. Potter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 380, 216 S. W. 886.

27. Prejudice against offense.—Where a talesman, when tested as to his qualifications as a juror in a prosecution for violating the local option law, stated positively he would not under any circumstances accord accused the benefit of the suspended sentence law, the statement was a cause for challenge. Fernandez v. State, 82 Cr. R. 129, 198 S. W. 301.

Prejudice against the offense with which defendant is charged is not bias or prejudice against him, made ground of challenge for cause. Bartlett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 468, 200 S. W. 339.

31. Opinions of jurors in general.—Where, although the environment of a juror was such as to have given him opportunity to have formed some opinion touching the merits of the case, nothing was disclosed which would have made him subject to challenge for cause, and he was excused on peremptory challenge and no objectionable juror was forced on accused, and he failed to exhaust his peremptory challenges, no error was shown. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

This subdivision does not require the trial court to act independently of a challenge of a juror for cause by either party, but to accurately prescribe the test which shall be legally sufficient to sustain such challenge when made. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

33. Basis of opinion.—Juror, who, after having been summoned as a venireman, had been told by a friend that accused in his opinion was guilty and ought to be hung, and who on examination stated that he understood that the information had been obtained from those who knew more about it than the friend did, though the friend knew something of the facts, was a biased juror, and challenge for cause should have been sustained, although he disclaimed the formation of any opinion and the possession of any bias or prejudice. Whittington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 1, 215 S. W. 456.

That juror had formed an opinion did not render him incompetent, if the opinion was formed by mere reading, or if it appears to the court that such reading will not influence him in arriving at any verdict. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

40. Fixity of opinion.—If a juror declares on his voir dire that he has an opinion which will not affect his verdict, the court has large judicial discretion to declare him competent. Bartlett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 468, 200 S. W. 339.

In prosecution for theft of automobile, two jurors who had formed opinion as to defendant's guilt from talking with prosecuting witness were subject to challenge for cause, though they stated they could try case on evidence. Collins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 228, 206 S. W. 688.

DECISIONS IN GENERAL

43. In general.—Accused cannot complain on motion for new trial that the court did not discharge a juror, whose examination showed him subject to challenge for cause, where the juror was accepted by accused with full knowledge of the matter set up in the motion for new trial. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

There is no duty on the court of his own motion to discharge a juror whose examination shows him subject to challenge for cause, unless one of the parties sees fit to make such challenge, in view of arts. 636, 695. Id.

50. Examination of jurors.—The trial court in its discretion may refuse to allow jurors to be asked questions in hypothetical form. Houston v. State, 33 Cr. R. 190, 202 S. W. 84.

Where an alleged criminal libel contained a diatribe against Jews and it appeared that four or five members of the jury panel were of the Jewish race or connected with them and would have admitted that they would be prejudiced against one criticizing the Jews as a race, defendant was entitled to bring out such matter on voir dire examination, and his challenge against such persons for cause should be sustained. Potter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 380, 216 S. W. 886.

51. Time to raise objection.—If accused accepts a juror after learning that he has an opinion and refuses to challenge him for cause, he cannot afterward complain that the juror was not fair and impartial. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

It is too late after verdict to complain of errors committed in the impaneling or organization of the jury. Id.

Art. 693. [674] Other evidence may be heard.

In general.—The granting or rejection of defendant's request to have veniremen excluded from the courtroom during the examination of others on their voir dire is largely within the trial judge's discretion, depending on the convenience of the courtroom and other facilities, but granting such request is proper practice, and preferable. Crow v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 148.

Art. 695. [676] No juror shall be impaneled, when.

In general.—Refusal to grant new trial, when it was disclosed that one of the jurors who had rendered verdict of guilty of murder was an unpardoned convict, requires reversal of judgment. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

Verdict of conviction, returned by jury whose foreman had been convicted in court of United States of a felony and remained unpardoned, must be set aside; "conviction" as used in statute, including conviction in another jurisdiction. Amaya v. State, 87 Cr. R. 160, 220 S. W. 98.

Waiver of objections.—All grounds of challenge for cause may be waived, except that the proposed juror has been convicted of theft or felony, or that he is under indictment for theft or felony, or that he is insane or so physically defective as to render him unfit. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

In a prosecution for bank robbery, where a venireman stated that he had an opinion and was a director of the bank robbed, whereupon the district attorney asked that such juror be excused, and defendant's counsel objected on the ground that the indictment named another as owner, and that the record did not disclose any interest of the bank which would disqualify the juror, defendant cannot be granted a new trial because such person served as juror, though the evidence showed that the funds stolen belonged to the bank, for he waived any disqualification. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

Art. 697. [678] Judge shall decide qualifications of jurors, etc.

In general.—Where accused waives his grounds of challenge for cause and accepts a juror, the trial court may not of his own motion stand said juror aside and proceed without him. McGowen v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 763.

Art. 698. [679] Oath to be administered to each juror.

Cited, Anderson v. State, 32 Cr. R. 528, 24 S. W. 897.

Necessity of oath.—A conviction by an unsworn jury is a mere nullity. Crisp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 137, 220 S. W. 1104.

Sufficiency of oath.—Omission of the words "So help me God" from oath administered to jurors in criminal action held fatal, and to require that verdict be set aside; such words being an essential part of the oath, under art. 714. Crisp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 137, 220 S. W. 1104; Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

Art. 699. [680] Court may adjourn persons summoned, etc., but jurors, when sworn, shall not separate, etc.

In general.—In a prosecution for murder, resulting in conviction of manslaughter, where, after ten jurors were selected, impaneled, and sworn, one of them was permitted by the court, without consent of defendant or his counsel, and without being accompanied by an officer, to go to his home, about a mile distant, where a member of his family was sick, and there remain away from the courthouse, separated from the other members of the jury, for about an hour, such action was error, necessitating reversal as in violation of the mandatory provisions of the statute. Garner v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 389.

Art. 706. [686] When number is reduced, etc., by challenge, others to be drawn, etc.

Art. 714. [694] Oath to be administered to jurors.

In general.—The failure to swear, in a body, the jury in a criminal case, is fatal to a conviction. Stephens v. State, 33 Cr. R. 101, 25 S. W. 286

Omission from form of oath administered to jury of "So help you God," made a part thereof by this article, held fatal; the quoted words being a material part of the prescribed oath. Crisp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 137, 220 S. W. 1104; Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

Article 717. [697] Order of proceeding in trial.

1. In general.—It is error to admit evidence without having the information read; the defendant being required to plead to the information only, and not the complaint. Messenger v. State, 81 Cr. R. 465, 198 S. W. 330.

The court having selected the count on which defendant should be tried, constituting an election, the whole information should not have been read to the jury. Dodd v. State, 82 Cr. R. 139, 198 S. W. 783.

It is not error to arraign accused after the jury is sworn individually and collectively. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 79.

The provision requiring the indictment to be read to the jury on the trial of a criminal case, is mandatory and not directory merely. Theriot v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 777.

4. In general.—Preliminary statement of prosecuting attorney, as to what he expected to prove, including defendant's statement, held not objectionable, on ground that such statement was made by defendant while in jail without warning. Herndon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 232, 198 S. W. 788.

An accused may demand of the state to make a statement of its case before the introduction of testimony, and require it to develop its case upon the original showing, so that defendant on his defensive propositions would have the state's full case to meet. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 479, 208 S. W. 660.

In a prosecution for murder, where the evidence was circumstantial, the trial court should have required the state to make a statement of its case on request of defendant. Walsh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 208, 211 S. W. 241.

In a prosecution for murder, failure of the trial court to require the district attorney to make an opening statement held harmless, no injury being disclosed by the record. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

It was not error to refuse to instruct the jury not to consider the preliminary statement of the prosecuting attorney as evidence where such statement appears throughout to be stating facts which the state expected to show by witnesses, and nothing therein appears to make it probable or possible for the jury to consider that the attorney was testifying as a witness. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 673.

This subdivision is directory; but when facts are shown, indicating that the refusal of a request that the state make such an opening statement was injurious to defendant, such refusal will be held error. Wray v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 808.

5. In general.—Permitting the state to withdraw evidence, held error, regardless of whether the evidence was introduced by the state or elicited by accused on cross-examination of the state's witness. Le Master v. State, 81 Cr. R. 577, 196 S. W. 829.

Where defendant was charged with sale of liquor in October and sales were also shown in November, December, and January, motion to require election on which it would rely should have been granted, and if sale in October was selected, evidence of other sales should have been withdrawn. Gustamente v. State, 81 Cr. R. 640, 197 S. W. 998.

An accused may demand of the state to make a statement of its case before the introduction of testimony, and require it to develop its case upon the original showing, so that defendant on his defensive propositions would have the state's full case to meet. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 479, 208 S. W. 660.

6. Order of evidence.—Where state offered a writing in evidence, and on defendant's objection, but before a ruling by the court, it was withdrawn, accused had no right to vary sequence of introduction of testimony so as to compel introduction or reception of such writing in his behalf while state was introducing its testimony. Taylor v. State, 85 Cr. R. 101, 210 S. W. 539.

The order of testimony is not fixed by ironclad rules, and is confided largely to the discretion of the trial courts, and their actions regulating the same will ordinarily be upheld unless by some unusual variance from the customary procedure some injury appears probable. Barnard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 365, 221 S. W. 293.

In a prosecution for murder, court did not abuse its discretion in permitting a witness to testify, after defendant had closed his evidence in chief, that deceased was manager of her farm on which accused was a tenant, and that on one occasion when a misunderstanding came up over the division of pecans accused became very angry and insisted that deceased was the one who was causing him the trouble; it not appearing that the court refused accused the privilege of introducing evidence upon the matter. Id.

The order of introduction of testimony is almost wholly discretionary with the trial court, and appellate court will not review its action, unless it is made to appear that injury had probably resulted. Hasley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 444, 222 S. W. 579.

Defendant, who claims to have had insufficient education and mentality to understand the statement made by him at examining trial, is not entitled to introduce evidence of such lack of mentality at time of admission of statement in evidence, to support objection thereto, but will be required to wait and produce such evidence as a part of his defense to enable jury to pass on the weight, if any, to be attached to the statement. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

7. Eyewitnesses.—The state is not bound to introduce all or any of the eyewitnesses to a transaction. Berrian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 367, 212 S. W. 509.

SUBD. 5

8. In general.—Though court should control and limit defendant's opening statement, the privilege of making such statement, when properly asked and not abused, cannot be denied. Dugan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 422, 199 S. W. 616.

That defendant's motion for leave to make an opening statement was accompanied by a written memorandum outlining his proposed statement did not militate against his right to make it. Id.

A defendant who relied on insanity at the time of the commission of the offense cannot, under guise of stating the defense relied on, read an affidavit setting forth his insanity. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 989.

SUBD. 6

9. Number of witnesses.—Where defendant offered evidence of his previous good character for honesty and truthfulness, and, after witnesses had been introduced along that line, state admitted his reputation was as claimed, the practice, to save examining a great number of witnesses, was proper. Watson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 115, 205 S. W. 662.

SUBD. 7

11. In general.—The receipt of evidence in rebuttal, though out of its order, is discretionary. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

In a prosecution for murder, resulting from a blow with a club, the admission of evidence that an eyewitness was asked some five minutes later, and after the assailant had run away, if he knew who struck the blow, and he stated he did, if hearsay, was not reversible error, where the same evidence came without objection from other sources, and the appellant in developing the case made it pertinent as bearing upon the credibility of witness by trying to show that the witness had stated that the assailant was one other than defendant; a reversal not being authorized by the admission of competent and relevant evidence coming out of its order. Gilbert v. State, 85 Cr. R. 597, 215 S. W. 106.

The common-law rule does not apply in criminal cases; therefore, in a prosecution for robbery, where some of the victims testified in chief, defendant cannot complain that after closing his case the others testified, on the theory that such testimony was not rebuttal. Hardy v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 1097.

12. Admissible rebuttal.—In prosecution for passing forged instrument, where defendant gave testimony as to his financial resources, evidence as to status of his account with grocer was properly received in rebuttal. Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

CONDUCT OF TRIAL IN GENERAL

13. In general.—Arrest of defendant's witness for perjury on leaving stand, and next day procuring him to testify for state, after impressing him that unless he did so he would be sent to penitentiary, was improper. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

17. Conduct of judge.—See art. 787 and notes.

18. Misconduct of prosecuting attorney.—Permitting the state to exhibit one by one sixteen bottles of whisky in presence of the jury, after defendant had admitted every material and admissible fact that could have been established by the exhibition of the whisky, was error. (Per Gaines, Special Judge.) Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 75, 204 S. W. 644.

A remark by the prosecuting attorney, while examining a witness, that he was laying a predicate for a perjury case, was prejudicial, where the witness had failed to give testimony adverse to the state, and therefore could not be contradicted or impeached. Bell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 197, 206 S. W. 516.

There was no error in that county attorney offered in evidence inquest proceedings compelling accused to make an objection in presence of jury, where no statement was made by county attorney of contents of said papers and court promptly sustained defendant's objection and told jury not to consider the matter. Gilbert v. State, 84 Cr. R. 616, 209 S. W. 658.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant stated that his brother, who was present, was crazy about half the time, and refused the offer of the prosecution to introduce a purported written statement by the brother, argument of the prosecutor that it was a fair inference from the fact the brother did not testify, and that defendant would not agree for his written statement to be introduced, that it was adverse to him, was improper, and aggravated the impropriety of the attempt by the prosecution to get the statement before the jury. Dunn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 299, 212 S. W. 511.

In prosecution for murder resulting in conviction of assault to murder, where a witness testified that he did not remember that after the difficulty he heard defendant's son say to defendant, "You ought not to have cut him," and where counsel for the state, after the witness' denial that he had not testified to the contrary before the grand jury, was permitted to produce a book not placed in evidence, purporting to contain grand jury evidence, which the witness was requested to look at and to read to himself, which he did, and then reiterated his statement that he did not remember, there was no error. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

The prosecuting attorney should not announce before the jury that he was ready in five cases pending against the defendant. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

19. — Improper questions.—Prosecutor's objectionable remarks in cross-examination of defendant's witness held no ground for reversal, where court told jury not to consider such remark. Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 433, 200 S. W. 381.

In prosecution for assault to murder, resulting in conviction of aggravated assault, state's question to defendant as to whether he had been named as correspondent in divorce petition of assaulted person against wife held improper. Faubian v. State, 83 Cr. R. 234, 203 S. W. 897.

Where attorney for state asked improper questions of jury after it had come in court for a reading of some of the testimony, the court's reprimand and its order that he take his seat left such remarks without prejudice. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 323, 204 S. W. 999.

Browbeating and making innuendoes against defendant's witnesses in their cross-examination held not a fair way of examination, and not conducive to a fair trial. Newman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 556, 213 S. W. 651.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, held that the conduct of the state's attorney in asking objectionable questions was such as to deny defendant a fair trial and to necessitate reversal. McIntosh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 417, 213 S. W. 659.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, where the trial court excluded original testimony as to the good reputation of prosecutor, he should not have permitted the county attorney, on cross-examination of witnesses, subsequently to introduce the same matter. Jupe v. State, 86 Cr. R. 573, 217 S. W. 1041.

In prosecution for bigamy, involving issue of whether defendant was married to alleged first wife, conduct of prosecuting attorney in asking defendant if he had not been warned by a certain neighbor that his course of conduct would likely get him into the penitentiary, where objection thereto was sustained by court, held not ground for reversal. Ahlberg v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 253.

The prosecuting attorney should not have repeated a question to a witness after the court had ruled thereon, sustaining objection. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 161.

20. — Prejudice.—Where the whole course of the state's attorney throughout the trial was such as to prejudice the rights of defendant, improper questions, the very asking of which was prejudicial, being propounded, and it appeared from the verdict that such conduct might have affected the result, judgment of conviction will be reversed for misconduct, though objections to some questions were sustained, and some questions the jury were instructed not to consider. McIntosh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 417, 213 S. W. 659.

22. Restrictions on defendant's counsel.—Where defendant's counsel repeated question which had been asked and answered several times, after court had directed him not to repeat it, the action of the court in assessing a fine of $25 against the attorney and in requiring the fine to be paid held proper. Redwine v. State, 87 Cr. R. 387, 221 S. W. 605.

Art. 718. [698] Testimony allowed at any time before argument.

See Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999; Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105.

In general.—Where accused's wife described the knife with which he killed deceased, and her description was not controverted, and the evidence then closed, it was not an abuse of discretion to decline to open the evidence the next day for the admission of the knife. Anselmo v. State, 82 Cr. R. 595, 200 S. W. 523.

The court trying a prosecution for failure to support minor children did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant leave to take the stand and explain a part of the testimony in regard to which he contended the prosecuting attorney, then making the closing argument for the state, was in error. Curd v. State, 86 Cr. R. 552, 217 S. W. 1043.

Under the statute, the court had authority to permit testimony to be introduced after the evidence had closed, and before argument had begun. Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105.

When it appears that the ends of justice will be subserved by the introduction of testimony, the privilege of introducing such evidence any time before argument is closed should not be denied, in the absence of some reason therefor; the discretion permitted the court by such statute being a judicial one. Mandosa v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 169.

In a prosecution for theft, court erred in refusing to open the case, after the evidence was closed and before the argument was completed, upon defendant's offer to introduce evidence that a witness for the state made an effort to induce the owners of the stolen property to forego a prosecution and offered to pay for the property. Id.

Time for receiving evidence.—It was certainly too late, after the jury had retired to consider their verdict, to again reopen the case to hear further testimony. Ming v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 29.

Art. 719. [699] Witnesses placed under rule.

In general.—The matter of excusing a witness from the rule is one confided to the sound discretion of the trial court, and the action of the court in excusing a witness from the rule will not be reviewed on appeal, unless it appears from the bill of exceptions that discretion of the court has been abused. Clark v. State, 85 Cr. R. 153, 210 S. W. 544.

Exemptions from rule.—The rule should not be enforced as to attorneys engaged in the particular case on trial. Boatmeyer v. State, 31 Cr. R. 473, 20 S. W. 1102.

Where murder trial was attended by great crowd, so that assistance of sheriff in keeping order was necessary, trial court properly exercised discretion in refusing to have sheriff placed under rule with other witnesses. Vestal v. State, 83 Cr. R. 184, 202 S. W. 94.

An interpreter, who has listened to the testimony of other witnesses, is not, by reason thereof, incompetent to testify as to a confession of accused, where the testimony of such other witnesses and that of interpreter did not relate to same facts. Trevino v. State, 83 Cr. R. 562, 204 S. W. 996.

If defendant wishes to use his wife as witness, he must observe the rules of the court in reference to placing witnesses under the rule. Jupe v. State, 86 Cr. R. 573, 217 S. W. 1041.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder one S., where the record disclosed that the occurrence was a shooting in which J., a brother of S., participated, the court abused its discretion in permitting J. to remain in the courtroom, where accused invoked the rule, merely because he was considered an injured party, and the state desired to have his aid in the conduct of its case. Freddy v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 533.

Testimony of witnesses violating, or not under, rule.—Whether witness who has been in the courtroom while under the rule should be permitted to testify is within the judicial discretion of the court. Wagley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 504, 224 S. W. 687; Fitzgerald v. State, 82 Cr. R. 130, 198 S. W. 315; Shamblin v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 241.

The presence of a witness during part of the examination of another was not error, where he appears to have been brought in only for the time necessary to inquire of the witness whether he identified him as the person to whom defendant had handed the pocketbook which the defendant was accused of stealing. Greenwood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 548, 208 S. W. 662.

Refusal to permit a witness who had been in the courtroom during the trial, in violation of the rule, to testify to a matter of impeachment of the prosecutrix in seduction, was a matter within the sound discretion of trial court, and court on appeal will not reverse case; no abuse of discretion being shown. Scoggins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 519, 208 S. W. 930.

Where it is not shown that court abused its discretion in permitting a witness who was under the rule to testify after violating the rule, and the witness before giving his testimony was interrogated and declared that he had heard none of the testimony, and accused after such interrogation made no further objection to the witness, there was no reversible error. Patterson v. State. 85 Cr. R. 643, 215 S. W. 308.

In a prosecution for wife murder, there was no error in permitting a witness to testify for the state after he had been sworn with the other witnesses, and ordered placed under the rule, though such witness remained in the courtroom during the time the other witnesses were testifying, he being county attorney and the state's assistant in the prosecution of the case. Pounds v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 683.

Where a witness was summoned after trial began, and came into the courtroom and remained some hours without the knowledge of any one apparently connected with the case, it was not an abuse of the trial court's discretion to permit such witness to testify. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

Art. 724. [704] Order of argument.

1. Limiting time.—Where case had required less than two hours to try, and court stated that it was his opinion that 25 minutes was ample time for argument, it was not error so to limit time. Gray v. State, 82 Cr. R. 27, 197 S. W. 990.

Where the introduction of evidence in a trial for abortion occupied a little over four hours, a limitation of the time for argument to an hour and a half to each side was not unreasonable, or an abuse of the trial court's discretion. Earnest v. State, 87 Cr. R. 651, 224 S. W. 777.

3. Control by court.—The manner of argument by attorneys in criminal prosecution is a matter within the discretion of the court. Cagle v. State, 82 Cr. R. 347, 200 S. W. 153.

5. Scope of argument.—Where defendant was convicted of theft of a carburetor from an automobile upon the testimony of a witness who stole the carburetor and whom defendant had helped, it was error not to permit counsel to address the jury on the matter of corroboration of accomplice's testimony. Newton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 508, 217 S. W. 939.

7. Illustrations.—In prosecution for murder, it was not error to allow state's counsel in his argument to draw rough sketch of roads, fences, fields, and pastures described by witnesses, touching scene of homicide; sketch not being handled by jury, but merely used as illustration. Borror v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

In trial for murder, remark of counsel for state that case reminded him of first assassination, referring to story of Cain and Abel, was not improper; state's theory being that homicide was assassination. Id.

Allowing state's attorney to put on deceased's coat and have colleague take accused's position, where no objection was made at the time, was not error. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 79.

10. Matters outside of issues.—The argument of the prosecuting attorney that no effort had been made to attack defendant's reputation because such attack was not permitted by law, while not commendable, held not ground for reversal. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596, Lee v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 261.

Where evidence showed that bootlegging was prevalent in territory mentioned, an argument based on such evidence was proper. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 286, 199 S. W. 1117.

In prosecution of former train porter for burglary, argument that the oldest train porter on a certain railroad had been sent to the penitentiary was improper. Ditto v. State, 83 Cr. R. 220, 202 S. W. 735.

In a prosecution of a negro for larceny of cotton, a statement by the county attorney to the jury that they knew "that last fall cotton was good, and any negro could have had money sufficient to go to the Dallas fair," did not constitute reversible error. Watkins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 412, 207 S. W. 926.

In prosecution for swindling by giving worthless check, wherein defendant testified that he expected to deposit funds in time to meet it and was prevented from doing so, prosecutor's statement that it was a frequent offense and that there were many poor checks in district attorney's office, notwithstanding statement of defendant's attorney that defendant had said he had offered to pay check, was unjustified. Whitaker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 272, 211 S. E. 787.

Statement of state's counsel in a homicide case: "Let's call a halt. There are too many murders committed in W. county. The records of this county show that six murders have been committed in W. county within the last six months, and four within four miles of the courthouse"—was improper, where such matters were not before the jury. Gusters v. State, 87 Cr. R. 181, 220 S. W. 92.

A remark of state's counsel in his argument, referring to the testimony of an accomplice, "A grand jury of your county heard his statement, and upon his statement they have said he was guilty," was not legitimate argument. Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 509.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, where the case was submitted solely on the question of aggravated assault, a statement by the prosecutor that, if defendant had not been guilty, his attorney would not have filed an application for a suspended sentence, is reversible error, as the court failed to instruct the jury to disregard the statement, for, in case of a felony where defendant applies for suspended sentence, that fact cannot be argued as guilty circumstance, and when the question of felony was passed out of the case by elimination of the charge of assault to murder, the question of suspended sentence was also eliminated. Tamaya v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 146.

Prosecuting attorney's remark to the jury that "other juries have heretofore disbelieved such a defense as this defendant has interposed" held improper. Seebold v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 328.

On a trial for murder, a remark of the state's attorney that a jury in the same county had assessed the death penalty against one conspiring to kill another exceeded the limits of proper argument, but did not call for reversal where it was in reply to argument of defendant's counsel that he would not be guilty of murder because he did not fire a shot, and he was given only a penalty of seven years; there being no request for charge to disregard the remarks. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

11. Facts not in evidence.—In absence of evidence, it is error for district attorney in opening argument to say, "You know the defendant is guilty, because the officers have been 'chousing' him for the last five or six years for violating the local option laws." Lagow v. State, 81 Cr. R. 460, 197 S. W. 217.

County attorney's reference in argument that witness called by defendant was not a witness at a former trial held not error as having basis in facts. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 158, 198 S. W. 298.

In a prosecution under a city ordinance it was erroneous for county attorney in his argument to state that the ordinance had been passed, in the absence of proof. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 274, 198 S. W. 964.

In prosecution for incest with his niece, where the letter in evidence did not state that she had given birth to a child, or was about to do so, or suggest the existence of such letter, an inference used in argument that she had written and that defendant had received such letter was not justified. Hollingsworth v. State, 82 Cr. R. 337, 199 S. W. 626.

In prosecution for unlawful gaming in a private residence, argument of counsel as to defendant, "He comes here with a grown boy; he sometimes lets play his hand, and asks an honest jury to turn him loose," was not improper, being based on the evidence or inferences therefrom. Cagle v. State, 82 Cr. R. 347, 200 S. W. 153.

There being evidence that deceased was stabbed in breast, and that there was an absence of provocation, remark of county attorney that defendant drove his knife into heart of deceased without provocation will not justify reversal. Hamilton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 90, 201 S. W. 1009.

County attorney must confine himself in argument within rule of discussion as to facts admitted. Carroll v. State, 83 Cr. R. 369, 203 S. W. 599.

Where the district attorney desires to testify, he should take the stand, be sworn, and make the statements under oath as any other witness. Walker v. State, 84 Cr. R. 136, 206 S. W. 96.

In a prosecution for arson by burning defendant's own ties and lumber yard, in the total absence of evidence to show that the lumber market was bad at the time, and that defendant would have profited by collecting the fire insurance, statement of a prosecuting attorney in closing argument that just before the fire the lumber market was bad, etc., held an infringement of defendant's rights. Kelley v. State, 86 Cr. R. 281, 216 S. W. 188.

In a prosecution for seduction, statement of private prosecuting counsel in argument that it was said they had not corroborated prosecutrix, but that she claimed she wrote to defendant to help, and that instead of coming back to marry her, as he had promised, he merely sent her abortive medicine, held improper, in the absence of evidence other than prosecutrix's as to the correspondence. Adams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 67, 219 S. W. 460.

In a prosecution for seduction, where the child of the parties was not introduced in evidence, the remarks of private prosecuting counsel about the resemblance of the child to defendant were improper. Id.

Where a state's attorney's statement was tantamount to a statement that the fact sought by his question, which was objected to, was the truth, and that defendant's counsel knew it and did not want the truth to come out, the question having assumed matters outside the record, his statement was improper and prejudicial, and the Court of Criminal Appeals will not speculate as to the amount of the injury. Scitern v. State, 87 Cr. R. 112, 219 S. W. 833.

The argument of counsel for the state that defendant killed an old man 61 years old with his leg shot off, and his comment on the objection of defendant's counsel to such argument, were improper, where there was no evidence that deceased's leg was shot off. Patterson v. State, 37 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

In a prosecution of a switchman for the theft of automobiles tires from a car, where he claimed that he had taken them from a car unloaded by consignee, and was taking them to a railroad agent when arrested, a statement of the district attorney that it was the duty of the defendant to note the number and initial of all cars in which freight was left, and report it to the yard office, held not error, as against the objection that there are no rules requiring employes to take number and initial of cars. Monroe v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 995.

Where one accused of robbery claimed to have been at home asleep at the hour the same was committed, as his father and others in the house knew, and his father was not used as a witness by either party, though summoned by the defense and present in court, argument by the district attorney that defendant's father was not put on the stand because he had told the arresting officer, before he knew his son was arrested, that defendant did not get home until 10 o'clock the night of the robbery, and because he was already "sewed up," was harmful error, though the court reprimanded the attorney and verbally instructed the jury not to consider the argument, no evidence having been introduced that any such conversation occurred between defendant's father and the officer. Stanchel v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 120.

Reference by the prosecuting attorney in argument to immaterial testimony brought out on cross-examination of one of defendant's witnesses, consisting of the witness' opinion that defendant would kill deceased, was improper and called for admonition from the court. Theriot v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 777.

12. — Excluded evidence.—In a prosecution for threatening to take life, remarks by prosecuting attorney that a year before the act charged defendant had been interviewed by the postmaster and sheriff regarding his alleged seditious language, evidence of which had been excluded, called for reversal. Young v. State, 86 Cr. R. 594, 218 S. W. 505.

13. — Incorrect statement.—Bill of exceptions to statement of prosecuting attorney that evidence showed certain facts, when in fact such facts were covered by counsel's agreement as to what absent witnesses would testify to, does not show error, where court submitted to jury what the agreement was. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

Where the evidence fully justified reference to accused's acts in throwing rocks at deceased just before the murder, that the county attorney imputed such testimony to the wrong witness was not error. Redick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 225, 202 S. W. 743.

14. — Character of witness.—In prosecution for murder, remark of district attorney that accused had not informed H., "one of the best men in the county" of the shooting, as to which fact there was no testimony, was not error. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

16. Comment on evidence.—In a prosecution for perjury, evidence that defendant got a certain female drunk on whisky which he was charged with having testified falsely to have bought from a certain person, having told the girl that he bought it one place but for her to say he got it somewhere else, being admitted without objection as res gestæ, it was proper for the district attorney to comment thereon. Allen v. State, 82 Cr. R. 416, 199 S. W. 633.

In prosecution for murder by shooting, argument by state's attorney that it was matter of common knowledge that shots are often deflected from straight course on striking object, held not error as improper comment, in absence of expert testimony. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, where state's witness testified without objection that appellant was in possession of a pistol and struck witness on the head with it, and defendant testified that he had no pistol, but struck witness with a stick, the prosecuting attorney was warranted in making comment upon such evidence in his argument. *Patterson v. Remarks and speeches of prosecuting attorney in argument held not to manifest that there was the fair trial guaranteed by the laws. Newman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 556, 213 S. W. 651.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, held that the conduct of the state's attorney in asking objectionable questions and in indulging in prejudicial argument was such as to deny defendant a fair trial and to necessitate reversal. McIntosh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 417, 213 S. W. 659.

In a prosecution for wife murder, closing argument of the district attorney, "has the defendant established to a reasonable and moral certainty that the deceased was killed by the jack," the claim of the state being that the killing was with a hammer by defendant and not by the kicking of the jack, held not prejudicial to defendant, in view of repeated instructions by the court as to the burden of proof, presumption of innocence, etc. Pounds v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 683.

Where defendant introduced an adjudication of insanity, but such judgment was void, the law under which it was passed having been declared unconstitutional, comments by the prosecutor on the invalidity of the judgment, if deemed improper, were not so obviously harmful that the error might not be counteracted by an instruction to disregard the same. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 989.

Though the evidence, as bearing on defendant's credibility, showed merely that he had been convicted of robbery, inaccurate statement of county attorney in argument that it showed he was convicted of robbery with firearms, having been promptly corrected, was not prejudicial. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 786.

The misquoting by one of the attorneys for the state of the testimony of a deceased witness where manifestly a mistake, and immediately corrected, is no ground for reversal; the jury being instructed to disregard it. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 309.

35. — Cure by verdict.—On a trial for murder, a remark of the state's attorney that a jury in the same county had assessed the death penalty against one conspiring to kill another exceeded the limits of proper argument, but did not call for reversal where it was in reply to argument of defendant's counsel that he would not be guilty of murder because he did not fire a shot, and he was given only a penalty of seven years; there being no request for charge to disregard the remarks. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

37. Necessity of objections or exceptions.—If argument of the prosecutor was improper, objection should have been made to it in open court. Gillespie v. State, 85 Cr. R. 4, 210 S. W. 967.

38. Necessity of request for charge.—Unless remarks of counsel in argument are obviously of nature to impair rights of accused, they will not authorize reversal, though improper, in absence of special charge requesting their withdrawal. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003; Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939; Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772; Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 989.

On trial for incest with defendant's daughter, remarks of district attorney concerning defendant held not such as could not have been cured, and hence defendant should have sought their withdrawal by a special charge. Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292.

Where defendant's counsel privately stated to court that he excepted to remarks in argument of state's attorney, but did not request, verbally or in writing, that jury should be instructed not to consider such remarks, defendant cannot complain of them on appeal. Alsop v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195.

Where the prosecution by an offer to admit a purported written statement of defendant's brother as to the homicide brought out the fact of the statement, and the attorney for the prosecution argued that the refusal of defendant to allow the same to be introduced warranted an inference that it was unfavorable, such argument was obviously so harmful that it would have been futile to withdraw it, so the fact that defendant, after his objection was overruled, did not request withdrawal of the same by special charge, was not a waiver of objection. Dunn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 299, 212 S. W. 511.

In a misdemeanor case, special charges must be asked in writing directing the jury not to consider remarks made by prosecutor. Lemcke v. State, 86 Cr. R. 336, 217 S. W. 150.

Improper remark of counsel for state, referring to the testimony of an accomplice, "A grand jury of your county heard his statement, and upon his statement they have said he was guilty," held harmless, in the absence of a showing that accused endeavored to have a written special charge read to the jury withdrawing the remark; knowledge that the witness testified before the grand jury being brought to the jury during the conduct of the trial in a legitimate manner. Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 509.

When an improper argument is used by the state, defendant can present to the trial court his request in writing that the jury be instructed that such argument in narrated respect is improper, and that the jury shall disregard it, which would present the matter in the Court of Criminal Appeals for review. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

In a prosecution for having in possession intoxicating liquor not for medical, etc., purposes, in violation of the Dean Law, argument of state's counsel, when he had before him three bottles, two containing the liquor in question and one empty, also a funnel, "Look at that stuff, put a pistol beside it, then you would have a picture of unlawful weapons," held not so materially injurious to defendant as to require reversal in the absence of request for instruction that the jury do not consider it. Rainey v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 118.

In general.—Orders overruling one defendant's motion to sever from another, and granting latter's motion that the former be tried first, deprived first defendant of no right given by this article, and, there being no agreement between defendants as to order of trial, court, under art. 727, was authorized to direct it. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

In general.—Orders overruling one defendant's motion to sever from another, and granting latter's motion that the former be tried first, deprived first defendant of no right given by art. 726, entitling him to separate trial, and, there being no agreement between defendants as to order of trial, court, under this article, was authorized to direct it. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

Right to severance.—In view of Pen. Code, art. 91, and Code Cr. Proc. art. 791, defendant, charged by information with unlawful assembly, codefendants being charged therewith by separate informations, having complied with this article, in making his application for severance, trial court was without discretion to overrule it without sufficient reasons, shown in record. Ligon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 147, 198 S. W. 787.

The granting of motion for severance at a previous term was not res judicata, and the trial judge could grant a motion of the other defendant for severance and change the order of trial, especially where the second defendant was sick and could not be tried. Young v. State, 84 Cr. R. 232, 206 S. W. 529.

Where the cases of defendants indicted for same crime were pending in separate counties and different jurisdictions, the trial court did not err in overruling the application of one for a severance, since in such case the granting of the motion would have amounted to a continuance. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

Art. 728. [708] Order in which they will be tried, etc.

In general.—Where separate trials were ordered, it was not error to deny a motion that the defendant, who was sick in bed, be tried first, where to grant the motion would have required continuance. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

Art. 729. [709] May dismiss as to one who may be witness.

See Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

In general.—Where two men were indicted for arson, but the county attorney sought dismissal as to one defendant, the other could not complain that the failure to try the codefendant without immunity resulted in depriving him of his codefendant's testimony. Johnson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 82, 197 S. W. 995.

Questions of law and fact.—In a perjury prosecution, where there was evidence that there was somewhat of an understanding between defendant and certain witnesses that they should lie before the grand jury, it was error not to submit the question as to whether the witnesses were accomplices to the jury. Melton v. State, 81 Cr. R. 604, 197 S. W. 715.

Question of defendant's guilt, testimony being conflicting, was for jury. McHam v. State, 81 Cr. R. 623, 197 S. W. 873.

Wherever a plea of former jeopardy is interposed, and facts are introduced in its support, court should submit it to jury. Villareal v. State, 82 Cr. R. 327, 199 S. W. 642.

If there is issue as to whether defendants acted together as principals, court should submit question to jury for their decision under appropriate instructions. Bennett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 268, 202 S. W. 730.

Where two persons were killed in one transaction, the fact that more than one shot was fired does not, as a matter of law, render it insusceptible of proof that both were killed by one act, in one case intentional and in the other accidental, since a series of shots may be fired with one volition. Spannell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 418, 203 S. W. 357, 2 A. L. R. 593.

If there is some evidence which supports the theory of adequate cause, and that a killing was on account of passion arising therefrom, the court is not the judge of its possible truth, and should leave it to the jury. Nelson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 219, 206 S. W. 361.

If there is some evidence which supports the theory of adequate cause, and that a killing was on account of passion arising therefrom, the court is not the judge of its possible truth, and should leave it to the jury, submitting the issue of manslaughter in an instruction. Id.

In homicide prosecution, the truth or falsity of defendant's testimony raising issue of whether he acted under immediate influence of sudden passion is a question for the jury, under appropriate instructions, and not for the trial court. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

In murder trial the question whether accused intended to provoke deceased to assault him, and whether what accused did and said was reasonably calculated to so provoke deceased, held for the jury, despite accused's statement that he had no intention to kill or to provoke the difficulty with deceased. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

In murder trial the question whether accused's mind was in a condition rendering him incapable of cool reflection held for the jury. Id.

In a criminal prosecution, the matter of defendant's age, raised by his affidavit of juvenility, was for the court alone. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

In a homicide prosecution the question of sanity is one for the jury. Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101.

In a prosecution for murder committed by striking deceased with a stick, in which the indictment described the stick with unnecessary particularity, evidence held such that the identity of the stick and its dimensions as meeting those set out in the indictment were questions for the jury. Gilbert v. State, 85 Cr. R. 597, 215 S. W. 106.

In a prosecution for murder, question as to whether defendant's acts and statements were for purpose of provoking attack was for the jury. Parker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 222, 216 S. W. 178.

Whether the evidence of the accused be true or false is a question for the jury under proper instructions. McCormick v. State, 86 Cr. R. 366, 216 S. W. 871.

In a prosecution for murder, it was not error to submit to the jury question whether certain admissions by defendant, when brought from jail to execute his appearance bond, were made while he was under arrest, the jury to disregard such statements if they should find that he was under arrest, but to consider them if he was not then under arrest; the question being a close one as to the facts. Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 371, 216 S. W. 884.

In a prosecution for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, the credibility of the witnesses is for the jury. Surginer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 438, 217 S. W. 145.

In prosecution for murder, question of whether deceased's daughter, with whom defendant was at time of killing, had been kept away by defendant, and whether daughter was a probable witness, so as to constitute defendant a principal, held questions of fact for jury. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

In prosecution for murder, question of whether at the time of the killing by person other than defendant, defendant was doing his part in furtherance of a common design to murder held for the jury under the evidence. Id.

In the prosecution of a constable for embezzlement of funds given him by a third person to pay a fine to the justice of the peace for gambling, evidence that both the justice and defendant made collection of fines and costs, and that each had a claim against the other, held to create an issue of fact as to whether defendant had a right to retain any of the funds collected as an offset to funds in the hands of the justice belonging to the defendant. Morrow v. State, 87 Cr. R. 287, 220 S. W. 1098.

In a prosecution for rape of a woman claimed to be mentally unsound, the court should have submitted the question of insanity to the jury by appropriate instructions. Cokeley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 256, 220 S. W. 1099.

In a prosecution for rape of a daughter under 18 years of age, held, that it was the duty of the trial court to submit the case to the jury. Higgins v. State, 87 Cr. R. 424, 223 S. W. 241.

In prosecution for placing poison in water with intent to injure another, whether defendant's wife was a conspirator, acting with defendant in an effort to kill such person, or seriously injure him by poisoning him, held a question for the jury, under instructions from the court. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

Whether mental condition exists, which will render a killing manslaughter, and whether causes in evidence are such as are calculated to produce such passion in the mind of an ordinary person, are questions of fact for the jury, and are not to be decided by the court. Steen v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 529.

In prosecution for assault with intent to commit robbery, in which defendant claimed that he was merely attempting to enforce payment of debt owed him by prosecuting witness, the question of whether defendant's claim was made in good faith or as a pretext to cover fraudulent intent held for the jury. Barton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 317.

In prosecution of passenger for murder of street car conductor, in which it was claimed that the conductor had committed an assault on the passenger by pushing him off the car while it was in motion, and that such assault was sufficient to reduce the crime to manslaughter, the question of whether the assault caused the passenger to suffer pain held for the jury. Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

In prosecution of passenger for murder of conductor, in which it was claimed that conductor had pushed passenger off moving car, question of whether such assault produced in the passenger's mind a sudden passion of fear, rage, or resentment and rendered it incapable of cool reflection, and whether the passenger killed the conductor while under the influence of such sudden passion, held questions for the jury. Id.

In a prosecution for robbery, where the indictment laid ownership in one having custody of the property, the failure to submit the question of ownership held not error; the undisputed evidence establishing the same. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

State* (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 419.

If there is evidence which, however weak or inconclusive it may seem to the court, tends to prove facts from which the jury may deduce a finding of manslaughter, it is error to fail to charge on it. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

In prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, defended on the ground that defendant was a traveler at the time of his arrest, and as such entitled to carry a pistol, the question of whether defendant's journey had ceased, or had been deflected from, at the time of his arrest, held for the jury. Witt v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 395.

— Admissibility of evidence.—Whether a confession is voluntary is, on conflicting evidence, for jury for solution. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 177; Robertson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 378, 195 S. W. 602, 6 A. L. R. 853; Young v. State, 82 Cr. R. 257, 199 S. W. 479.

Where a confession was signed by defendant in presence of district attorney, only the question of its voluntary character was for the jury. Sharp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 256, 197 S. W. 207.

No error appears in admission of written confession on its face filling legal requirements, when the prosecuting attorney before whom it was made testified that proper legal warning was given, and that no promise or threat was made, and that the confession was freely and voluntarily made, especially where the court submitted to the jury the question whether the confession was freely and voluntarily made. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

Where defendant whose statement is introduced in evidence presents evidence denying that he was warned it would be used against him, or denying its voluntary character, the question of the voluntary character of the statement must be submitted to the jury. Hardin v. State, 85 Cr. R. 220, 211 S. W. 233, 4 A. L. R. 1308.

Where there is doubt as to whether victim at time of making dying declaration believed he was in danger of death in such manner as required by statute, the question should be submitted to the jury. Walker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 482, 214 S. W. 331.

In homicide prosecution, where defendant testified that he was induced to sign confession by sheriff's promise of release and immunity from prosecution, court, upon defendant's request, should have submitted question of whether confession was voluntary. Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

What is an arrest or custody is a question of law, and under this article, the evidence being uncontroverted and raising no issue of fact, it is for the court to decide whether confession was made while accused was in the custody of an officer, relative to its admissibility under article §10. Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

Where the single fact which would render a confession or declaration of one accused of robbery admissible was the identity of the property found by reason of a declaration or confession with that taken, it was the duty of the court to submit to the jury this question of fact and make the admissibility of the question depend on its solution by the jury; the identity of property found with that stolen being a controverted fact. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 416, 222 S. W. 553.

Review.—Credibility of witnesses and weight to be given their testimony is for jury and conviction cannot be reversed because appellate court would have found differently from jury. Johnson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 61, 200 S. W. 832.

Issue as to sale of whisky in local option territory having been submitted to the jury in a charge not complained of, their finding upon conflicting evidence, approved by the trial court, will not be disturbed. Jacobs v. State, 84 Cr. R. 564, 208 S. W. 917.

1. NECESSITY, NATURE, REQUISITES AND SUFFICIENCY OF CHARGE

½. Construction of statute in general.—Acts 35th Leg. c. 177 (Civ. St. art. 1974), does not amend procedure in criminal cases, which is embodied in Acts 33d Leg. c. 138 (Code Cr. Proc. arts. 735, 737, 737a, 743). Barrios v. State, 83 Cr. R. 548, 204 S. W. 326.

1. Law applicable to case in general.—A charge should not be given in a criminal case unless there is evidence to raise the issue submitted. Merritt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 565, 213 S. W. 941; Green v. State, 84 Cr. R. 162, 205 S. W. 988; Barrett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 101, 215 S. W. 858; Grissom v. State, 87 Cr. R. 465, 222 S. W. 237.

It is a duty of the trial court to charge on all the issues made by the testimony, no matter whether the same are raised by the testimony of the accused or some other witness. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175; McCormick v. State, 86 Cr. R. 366, 216 S. W. 871; Thurogood v. State, 87 Cr. R. 209, 220 S. W. 337

The charge must follow the allegations in the indictment and submit only for the consideration of the jury such allegations. Miller v. State, 81 Cr. R. 237, 195 S. W. 192.

An instruction to convict if defendant became unlawfully indebted to the bank of which he was president, without stating that he must have become indebted through a secret partnership alleged in the indictment, held erroneous. Le Master v. State, 81 Cr. R. 577, 196 S. W. 829.

Whether or not the jury might believe the testimony of a defendant, he is entitled to have the case passed on the facts as shown, under appropriate instructions. Collins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 24, 198 S. W. 143.

Notwithstanding evidence was conflicting, where it was sufficient to raise an issue in state's behalf, it had a right and it was duty of court to submit such issue. Flewellen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 568, 204 S. W. 657.

The charge of the court must conform to the charges contained in the indictment. Moore v. State, 84 Cr. R. 256, 206 S. W. 683.

In view of presumption of innocence, evidence establishing facts which, if true, would mitigate or excuse assault to murder, required an instruction on the law applicable thereto, regardless of the source from which the evidence came, and notwithstanding it presented a defensive theory out of harmony with that advanced by defendant. Knight v. State, 84 Cr. R. 395, 207 S. W. 315.

It is error to charge on issue adverse to defendant, when issue is not suggested or raised by facts. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 504, 208 S. W. 339.

Refusal to charge on manslaughter cannot be justified on the ground that the defendant said he shot in self-defense, since defensive issues arise from the whole case and are not controlled by the evidence of accused. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

In a criminal prosecution wherever the evidence presents an issue or theory favorable to the accused, the trial court should fairly and freely submit such issue for the consideration of the jury under appropriate instructions. Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 371, 216 S. W. 884.

In a case in which the evidence raises the defensive theory in an affirmative way, it is incumbent upon the court to so submit it. Escobedo v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 377.

The charge must always be conformed to the facts and issues arising in a particular case on trial. Aycock v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1099.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, where prosecutrix testified positively to but one act of intercourse between defendant and herself at a fixed date, and defendant positively denied any such act at any time, the trial court did not err in not telling the jury they could not convict if the act took place before the law raising the age of consent to 18 years became effective, since there must be some substantial evidence calling for an instruction before it becomes the court's duty to instruct. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 673.

In a prosecution for theft of an automobile, where identity of an automobile taken from accused's wife by the deputy sheriff and shipped into the state with the stolen car was vital to state's case, trial court was not warranted in refusing to read to the jury a special charge affirmatively presenting this phase of the law. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 406.

All defenses clearly raised should be affirmatively submitted. Horn v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 693.

In a prosecution for murder, resulting in conviction of manslaughter, where the court charged submitting the issue of provoking the difficulty from the standpoint of the state, in connection therewith the converse of the charge on defendant's request should have been fully submitted. Garner v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 389.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, it was not error for the main charge to fail to instruct on the law applicable to defendant's right to defend his daughter, where there was no evidence requiring such a charge. Rodriguez v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 512.

The accused in a criminal case is entitled to have his theory presented pertinently, plainly, and affirmatively. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 811.

4. Application of law to facts.—See Ice v. State, 83 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

In prosecution of bank president for unlawfully borrowing money through a loan made to a firm of which he was a secret member, held error to instruct on the law of partnership without applying such law to the facts. Le Master v. State, 81 Cr. R. 577, 196 S. W. 829.

Instructions of a court in criminal cases should not contain abstract propositions of law, as they might mislead. Reagan v. State, 84 Cr. R. 468, 208 S. W. 523.

7. Definition of offense.—An instruction that if defendant, by any means set out in statute on pandering, caused a certain woman to enter or remain in house where prostitution was encouraged or allowed, he would be guilty of pandering, is erroneous, where many means enumerated in statute were not charged nor proven. Briscoe v. State, 81 Cr. R. 419, 196 S. W. 183.

In prosecution for statutory rape, where the indictment charged that prosecutrix was under 15 years of age, a charge that "In so far as the charge in this case is concerned, rape is the carnal knowledge of a female under the age of 15 years, other than the wife of the person having such carnal knowledge" was not error, for if the case as pleaded in the indictment meets the requirements of the law a charge conforming thereto is also good. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

8. Offenses or counts thereof alleged.—State, through trial judge, having selected second count of indictment as that on which jury should pass, charge should have submitted issues under allegations of such count. Shipp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 328, 196 S. W. 840.

9. Definition or explanation of terms.—Where count charging fornication while living together was abandoned, case being submitted only on count charging offense without living together, accused held not entitled to have term "living together" defined in charge. Mosley v. State, 82 Cr. R. 16, 198 S. W. 146.

In prosecution for sale of intoxicants in prohibition territory, held, that court's failure to define felony, in charging on jury's right to recommend suspended sentence, was not erroneous; proof showing defendant had never been convicted of felony. Flores v. State, 82 Cr. R. 107, 198 S. W. 575.

In prosecution for perjury, court on request should have given charge defining words "willfully" and "deliberately" in connection with perjury. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

In a prosecution for murder, an instruction as to malice aforethought was not erroneous in failing to define the terms "will in law justify, excuse or extenuate the homicide," and "without just cause or excuse." McDougal v. State, 84 Cr. R. 424, 208 S. W. 173.

In prosecution for burglary of barn in nighttime, indictment merely charging entry by breaking, trial court did not err in simply telling jury that, if defendant entered by force, he was guilty, omitting to define "breaking." McNew v. State, 84 Cr. R. 594, 208 S. W. 528.

In a prosecution for wife desertion, the words "justification," "destitute," and "necessitous," used in the statute and the charge, did not require explanation or definition by the court. Turner v. State, 84 Cr. R. 605, 209 S. W. 406.

In a prosecution for obstructing a public road, the definition of "willful" by the court in his charge that by the term it was meant that defendant knew at the time of the alleged obstruction that the road was public, and that the obstruction was placed, if it was obstructed, with an evil intent, held sufficient. Howard v. State, 86 Cr. R. 288, 216 S. W. 168.

In prosecution for bigamy involving issue of whether defendant was married to alleged first wife, instruction that "agreement to become husband and wife may be expressed or implied," and that an "implied agreement" is one "where the conduct of the parties with reference to each other and the subject-matter is such as to induce the belief, if any, that they mutually intend to do that which their acts indicate they have done," held not misleading, in view of evidence and special charges given, notwithstanding use of term "implied agreement," such term as used merely denoting the character of evidence by which the agreement was to be established. Ahlberg v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 253.

In a prosecution for robbery, where the indictment alleged that the property stolen was money, and the evidence showed it was $20, $10, and $5 bills, it was unnecessary for the court in its charge to define money for the term money must be presumed lawful money of the United States. Guyon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 408.

In a prosecution for homicide, where it appeared that deceased objected to defendants' aiding their companion when he requested them to pull off the third person who was beating him, a requested special charge that, if deceased interfered, defendants were entitled to use such force as was necessary to prevent him from interfering with their aid, was misleading in not defining the term "interfering" particularly, where it did not appear whether the interference was merely verbal or not. Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 827.

12. Presumptions, burden of proof and reasonable doubt.—See notes under art. 785.

14. Time and place of offense.—In a prosecution for incest, refusal to amend an instruction authorizing conviction if act of intercourse took place "on or about the day alleged in the indictment," by stating the jury must believe the act to have occurred within three years anterior to filing of indictment, was error, where there was evidence of an act more than three years prior thereto. Wingo v. State, 85 Cr. R. 118, 210 S. W. 547.

In a prosecution for the theft of cattle, evidence that the cattle were pastured in the county in which the prosecution was begun and were thereafter traced to defendant's possession in another county, without any direct evidence of the taking of the cattle in the county of the prosecution, required the submission to the jury of the issue of venue. Stiles v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 805.

19. Limitations.—In a prosecution for violating local option law, where the defense of limitations was interposed, the court should have instructed that, if the liquor was obtained on the date claimed by defendant, they should acquit, or, if they had a reasonable doubt, they should acquit; it not being sufficient to charge with reference to limitations generally. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 555, 204 S. W. 231.

20. Insanity or intoxication.—See notes under Pen. Code, arts. 39-41.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, it was not error, where the evidence failed to show that defendant had never been adjudged insane or that his insanity, if any, was permanent, to refuse to charge on the presumption of insanity at the time of the offense. Holland v. State, 84 Cr. R. 144, 206 S. W. 88.

In a criminal prosecution, where there was evidence that defendant was under the influence of intoxicating liquors, it was error to refuse to instruct following the statute (Pen. Code, art. 41), that, while intoxication or temporary insanity therefrom would not excuse the offense, it should be considered in mitigation of penalty. Haag v. State, 86 Cr. R. 604, 223 S. W. 472.

Where defendant pleaded guilty to assault with intent to murder, and no evidence was introduced at the hearing for assessment of penalty tending to show insanity at the time he committed the offense, it was not error for the trial court to refuse to submit that issue, though accused had some time subsequent to his plea of guilty filed with the clerk a written plea of insanity. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

22. Alibi.—On trial for theft of automobile, evidence held to justify instruction on alibi. Hamilton v. State, 82 Cr. R. 544, 200 S. W. 155.

In trial for assault to murder, evidence held to require instruction on alibi. Soria v. State, 83 Cr. R. 343, 203 S. W. 57.

An instruction on principals that: "If so, then the law is that all are alike guilty, provided the offense was actually committed during the existence and execution of the common design and intent of all, whether in point of fact all were actually bodily present on the ground when the offense was actually committed or not"—was properly given, although defendant was attempting to prove an alibi. Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509.

Where the state claimed that there was a conspiracy to rent an automobile and kill the chauffeur, testimony of accused that he accompanied the automobile party, and that the killing took place while he was at a house 100 yards away, the automobile having stopped, did not call for an instruction on the issue of alibi. Id.

In a prosecution for homicide, where the evidence was wholly circumstantial, and there was substantial evidence of alibi, and also to effect that others might well have killed deceased, the failure of the court to present to the jury such questions of defense, as well as its failure to instruct that, if the jury had a reasonable doubt on the evidence as to whether any other person than defendant killed deceased, they should acquit, was error. James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 107, 215 S. W. 459.

The mere fact that defendant denied her guilt of burglary of a county poor farm, and stated she was not at the farm after a certain date about a month before the alleged burglary, did not necessarily warrant a charge on alibi, where she did not attempt to state where she was on the date of the burglary, nor show such fact by any evidence. Ripsey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

23. — Sufficiency.—In trial for assault to murder, instruction that, if evidence raises or leaves reasonable doubt as to accused's presence at scene of difficulty at time it occurred, to acquit defendant and say by verdict not guilty, was sufficient in form. Soria v. State, 83 Cr. R. 343, 203 S. W. 57.

In a seduction case, an instruction, "If you believe from the evidence that the offense charged was committed, and that the prosecutrix had sexual intercourse with some male person, or if you have reasonable doubt as to whether defendant was present at the time or not, you will give him the benefit of such doubt and find him not guilty," held sufficient to justify refusal of a special charge requested, which presented the law of alibi no more clearly than the given charge. Hunt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 622, 214 S. W. 983.

26. Acts and declarations of conspirators and codefendants.—If conspiracy is shown or defendants acted together, court is authorized to charge on that phase of law, though charge would be erroneous if such evidence was not in case. Bennett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 268, 202 S. W. 730.

In a prosecution for homicide committed as the result of an alleged conspiracy to assault deceased, it was error to fail to charge that acts and declarations of a conspirator in defendant's absence was inadmissible to establish a conspiracy. Holland v. State, 84 Cr. R. 144, 206 S. W. 88.

In a prosecution for manslaughter resulting from an alleged conspiracy to whip deceased, an instruction that the acts and declarations of conspirators could only be considered on the question of intent was improper, as being too restrictive. Holland v. State, 84 Cr. R. 154, 206 S. W. 89.

In a criminal case, where evidence of the acts or declarations of a coconspirator have been admitted and where the issue of conspiracy is contested, the court must affirmatively charge the jury that they must not consider, as against the accused, the acts or declarations of the alleged coconspirator, unless it be shown beyond a reasonable doubt that there was in fact a conspiracy, or an acting together of the parties in such criminal enterprise. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

27. Accomplices and testimony thereof.—See notes to art. 801, post.

28. Admissions and confessions.—See notes under art. 810, post.

29. Purpose and effect of evidence.—In prosecution for perjury, where state introduces proceedings in trial on which perjury was committed, if result of such trial was adverse to testimony of defendant charged with perjury, court must limit effect of evidence, otherwise such charge is unnecessary. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

In prosecution for wife murder, declarations of deceased showing her state of mind toward defendant are admissible, but the scope of such evidence should be limited to such purpose, and not used as proof of the facts stated. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

31. — Limiting effect of impeaching evidence.—An instruction that the fact that a witness was indicted could be considered alone upon the question of his credibility held sufficient to limit impeaching testimony. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

Court did not err in failing to limit in his charge to the jury testimony offered by accused to impeach a state witness. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 246 S. W. 674.

33. — Limiting proof of other offense.—In a prosecution for slander of a female, it is proper to admit testimony as to statements by accused at different times from that alleged, as tending to show that statement for which he is prosecuted was wantonly and maliciously made; but the court must instruct that jury cannot consider such evidence for any other purpose, and that it should not be considered at all unless it has been shown to the satisfaction of the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that such statements were in fact made. Russell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 179, 211 S. W. 224.

In prosecution for passing forged instruments, where there was evidence of collateral transactions in which defendant had passed similar forged instruments, instructions held to limit jury's consideration of such evidence to proof of forgery and guilty knowledge. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560.

An admission drawn from accused, in a prosecution for theft from the person, that he had been arrested for arson, was available only for impeaching purposes, and it was error for the court not to so instruct the jury. Rosa v. State, 86 Cr. R. 646, 218 S. W. 1056.

In prosecution for automobile theft, where there was testimony by police officers who had arrested defendant for theft of tool joints, after having driven to scene of crime in the stolen automobile, the testimony of such officers should be appropriately limited in the charge of the court. Parham v. State, 87 Cr. R. 454, 222 S. W. 561.

In a prosecution for theft of one head of cattle, if evidence is admitted that other stolen cattle were found in possession of the accused, aside from that alleged in the indictment, the court must not only limit the jury's consideration of such evidence to one of the well-settled exceptions to the rule concerning proof of commission of other crimes, but should also instruct the jury that they can consider same for no purpose, unless they believe beyond a reasonable doubt that such property was stolen within the definition of that term. McClain v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 550.

In a prosecution for theft of one head of cattle, if evidence is admitted that other stolen cattle were found in possession of the accused aside from that alleged in the indictment, the court must limit the jury's consideration of such evidence to one of the well-settled exceptions to the rule concerning proof of commission of other crimes. Id.

36. Circumstantial evidence.—Failure and refusal to charge on circumstantial evidence on trial for theft held error where there was no evidence other than circumstantial. Henderson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 620, 197 S. W. 869; Johnson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 585, 200 S. W. 522; Smiley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 528, 222 S. W. 1108.

Where evidence establishing defendant's guilt was circumstantial, it was necessary for court to give charge on subject. Love v. State, 82 Cr. R. 411, 199 S. W. 623; Renfro v. State, 82 Cr. R. 197, 198 S. W. 957; Bell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 197, 206 S. W. 516.

Court held justified in not charging law of circumstantial evidence. Castoreno v. State, 82 Cr. R. 592, 200 S. W. 401; Ellis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 529, 213 S. W. 264.

Evidence held to bring one accused of burglary in such juxtaposition to the offense as to render unnecessary instruction upon circumstantial evidence. Soders v. State, 81 Cr. R. 506, 195 S. W. 1146.

An instruction that if the jury believed a statement of accused they should acquit but that the falsity thereof need not be proven by positive testimony, but might be "shown to be false by circumstantial evidence," was not error. Gold v. State, 81 Cr. R. 611, 197 S. W. 1110.

Testimony on prosecution for theft from the person held to be equivalent to direct testimony of the taking, so that instruction on circumstantial evidence was not necessary. Cleveland v. State, 82 Cr. R. 439, 200 S. W. 152.

In prosecution for hog theft, evidence held to connect accused with offense as principal, so that it was not error to fail to instruct on law of circumstantial evidence. Wilson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 593, 204 S. W. 321.

In prosecution for selling intoxicants, where, to overcome testimony of purchaser and of defendant and his wife, and to establish sale, state relied on circumstances, and in reaching conclusion of guilt jury should have been guided by charge as to law of circumstantial evidence, refusal of the court to so instruct was error. Canales v. State, 84 Cr. R. 212, 206 S. W. 347.

In abortion case, where prosecuting witness testified fully to acts and conduct of both defendant and physician procured by defendant to perform abortion, court properly refused a special charge setting forth law of circumstantial evidence. Hammett v. State, 84 Cr. R. 635, 209 S. W. 661, 4 A. L. R. 347.

In a murder trial, there being evidence that accused was driving the automobile from which his son shot deceased, but no evidence that accused said anything to his son, or did anything except drive the car at time of the killing, and the alleged fact that he advised or encouraged the killing resting only on inference from facts shown, it was accused's right to have the jury instructed on circumstantial evidence, that in applying such inferences the supporting facts must be consistent with each other, consistent with accused's guilt, inconsistent with his innocence, and inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis save guilt, and to have the jury know that the trial judge recognized there was no direct evidence that accused either advised or encouraged the killing. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 411, 213 S. W. 639.

Where the facts proven are in such close relation to the main fact as to make them equivalent to direct testimony, a charge on circumstantial evidence is unnecessary. Id.

There being, on prosecution for theft of a car, afterwards recovered from H., no direct testimony that it was the one testified to as having been sold by defendant to H., charge on circumstantial evidence should have been given. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 573, 214 S. W. 347.

In a prosecution for embezzlement where there was direct evidence that accused received the money in his official capacity, but his conversion thereof was only shown by inferences from the accounts kept by him, it was error to refuse a requested charge on the question of conviction on circumstantial evidence alone. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 379.

In a prosecution for embezzlement of funds intrusted to defendant as cashier and bookkeeper, it was error to omit the charge on law of circumstantial evidence. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 382.

Where the facts showing the burglary were proven only by circumstances, and the identity of the accused was also dependent upon the same character of testimony, largely relating to the color of his clothes, it was reversible error not to submit the law of circumstantial evidence. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 508.

In a prosecution for homicide, where both of the defendants took part in the fatal killing, a charge on circumstantial evidence was unnecessary. Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 827.

38. — Admissions and confessions by accused.—Where an undisputed confession of defendant was in evidence, and his objections thereto on the ground that it was secured by improper methods were overruled, refusing a charge on circumstantial evidence was proper. Johnson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 82, 197 S. W. 995.

A charge on circumstantial evidence held required in burglary, where defendant confessed not that he broke G.'s store, but had his goods and got them from his store. Winn v. State, 82 Cr. R. 316, 198 S. W. 965.

Admissions, accompanied by explanatory statements, which were not specific admissions of taking of property charged to have been stolen, did not take case out of rule of circumstantial evidence. Rollins v. State, 83 Cr. R. 345, 203 S. W. 355.

In murder trial, charge on law of circumstantial evidence is required only where state relies on circumstantial evidence alone, and is not necessary where accused admits homicide. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

It is not error to refuse to submit the law of circumstantial evidence in a case where there is a confession of the accused, though testified to by one admitted to be an accomplice, such testimony taking the case out of the domain of circumstantial evidence. Fitzgerald v. State, 87 Cr. R. 34, 219 S. W. 199.

Where defendant admitted that he had sold prosecutor's wagon, but claimed a belief of ownership, a charge on circumstantial evidence was not necessary. Berdell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 310, 220 S. W. 1101.

The confession of defendant, testified to, being definite, no charge need be given on the law of circumstantial evidence. Tillman v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 165.

In a prosecution for larceny, where there was evidence that accused had admitted the taking of the property, a charge on circumstantial evidence was not required. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 232.

In a prosecution for theft, where defendant's confession contained definite and direct statements that he took the automobile alleged to be stolen and appropriated it to his own use, and the owner testified to facts showing a taking without his consent, the case could not be treated as one resting upon circumstantial evidence alone. Escobedo v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 377.

39. — Evidence of eyewitnesses.—In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, a statement by the person assaulted that, after the gun was fired and he had been shot, he turned, looked, and recognized defendant's face by the flash of the gun, was insufficient to take the case out of the rule of circumstantial evidence, and hence defendant was entitled to an instruction thereon. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 392, 221 S. W. 1083.

In a prosecution for murder, direct testimony, showing that defendant and his accomplices pursued, shot, and cut deceased, made it unnecessary to charge on circumstantial evidence; such being necessary only when the case depends wholly thereon. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 312.

In a prosecution for embezzlement, where the evidence was direct and uncontradicted that defendant sold his principal's property and appropriated the money to his own use, no charge on circumstantial evidence was required. Wray v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 808.

Where there was direct and positive proof that defendant and his companions addressed provocative statements to deceased, and that he struck one of them, whereupon they all closed in upon him, and there was testimony that one of defendant's companions had an automatic pistol, and that an empty freshly exploded shell was picked up where the fight took place after it was over, that only one shot was fired, and that no other persons were engaged in the affair, the facts proved were in such close relation to the main fact as to who fired the fatal shot as to make them equivalent to direct testimony and to render a charge on circumstantial evidence unnecessary. Monday v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 831.

40. — Testimony of accomplices.—Where an accomplice gave direct testimony that accused was a conspirator in a plan to murder, and that he participated in the homicide, the court was not required to charge on the law of circumstantial evidence. Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509.

44. — Possession of property and explanation thereof.—Possession of recently stolen property is but a circumstance, and involves a charge on the law of circumstantial evidence. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

In prosecution for cattle theft, where only defendant's connection with cattle after they were taken was proved by direct evidence, and his possession was explained, court should have charged on circumstantial evidence. Rollins v. State, 83 Cr. R. 345, 203 S. W. 355.

The possession of stolen property by defendant charged with having received it, with other facts, was a circumstance from which the inference of guilty knowledge on defendant's part might be drawn, but was merely an inference, and, when relied on for conviction, required a charge on the law of circumstantial evidence where demanded by defendant. Grant v. State, 87 Cr. R. 19, 218 S. W. 1062.

45. — Sufficiency of charge.—Charge on circumstantial evidence held sufficient, though terse. Love v. State, 82 Cr. R. 411, 199 S. W. 623.

Charge on circumstantial evidence which did not state that each circumstance necessary to conclusion of guilt must be proven by competent evidence was proper, in view of last paragraph. Id.

There being evidence that accused was driving automobile from which his son shot deceased, and the alleged fact that he advised killing resting only on inference, it was accused's right to have the jury instructed on circumstantial evidence, that in applying such inference the supporting facts must be consistent with each other, consistent with accused's guilt, inconsistent with innocence, and inconsistent with any reasonable hypothesis save guilt, and to have the jury know that the trial judge recognized there was no direct evidence that accused either advised or encouraged the killing. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 411, 213 S. W. 639.

48. Failure to call witness or produce evidence.—See notes under art. 790, post.

49. Co-defendants.—Where two parties were separately indicted for the same offense but tried jointly, the court should have charged the law separately as to each case. Mayzone v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 55.

51. Principals and accessories.—See Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509; Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

Sufficiency of instructions, see notes under Pen. Code, art. 74.

Defendant's confession as to theft of automobile held to justify an instruction on the law of principals; it showing that some or all of the other participants were principals with defendant. Hamilton v. State, 82 Cr. R. 544, 200 S. W. 155.

Where evidence showed that accused raped the victim and held her while another raped her, accused's instruction that conviction could be had only for actual rape by personal intercourse, on theory that indictment would not support a conviction on the law of principals, was properly refused. Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014.

If there is issue as to whether defendants acted together as principals, court should submit question to jury for their decision under appropriate instructions. Bennett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 268, 202 S. W. 730.

In prosecution for hog theft, evidence held to connect accused with offense as principal so that it was not error to fail to instruct as to distinction between accomplices and principals. Wilson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 593, 204 S. W. 321.

Where the state's theory was that defendant and one who was with him each shot deceased, a charge on the law of principals that, if defendant was present and urged his associate to kill deceased, he was guilty held improper. Finks v. State, 84 Cr. R. 536, 209 S. W. 154.

In prosecution for unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, where defensive theory raised by evidence was that accused was not interested in sale, but acted solely for accommodation of purchaser, it was error for court, in addition to submission of such issue, to instruct on law of principals embodying substance of Pen. Code, art. 74. Chance v. State, 85 Cr. R. 62, 210 S. W. 208.

In a prosecution for the theft of an automobile subsequently recovered from a third party who claimed to have purchased it, evidence held to show that defendant assisted in the sale and was a principal, so as to justify the court in charging with reference to the law of principals. Torrence v. State, 85 Cr. R. 310, 212 S. W. 957.

In prosecution for murder where there was evidence of defendant's connection with the killing both before and after the commission of the crime, court properly gave instruction upon the law of principals. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

Where a witness testified to a joint robbery by himself and defendant, the court did not err in charging on the question of principals. Fitzgerald v. State, 87 Cr. R. 34, 219 S. W. 199.

In a prosecution for burglary, certain hams and sausage meats stolen having been found in defendant's possession, in view of testimony as to the presence of one other than defendant and his participation in whatever was done by her in connection with the burglary, the trial court properly submitted the law of principals as applied to such other defendant. Rippey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

In a prosecution for burglary, in view of absence of showing of previous conspiracy to commit the burglary between defendant and a witness, and lack of testimony to connect the witness with the crime, trial court's charge on principals held improper. Cummings v. State, 87 Cr. R. 154, 219 S. W. 1104.

In a prosecution for homicide, where there was evidence that, during an altercation between accused and the husband of deceased, accused's son fired the shot that killed the deceased, court erred in refusing to instruct that, before the jury could render a verdict of guilty against accused, they must believe beyond a reasonable doubt that the shot which killed deceased was fired out of a gun in the hands of accused; no issue as to whether accused and son were acting together as principals being presented by the instructions given. Rasberry v. State, 88 Cr. R. 13, 224 S. W. 1093.

The facts justify a charge on the law of principals, on a prosecution for theft, there being evidence that H., in defendant's presence, took some money from a roll between the mattresses of his bed and gave it to defendant, that defendant returned with a woman, and, after they left, the roll was missing, that defendant then found and took H. to the woman's room, and she returned the money, and defendant confessed. Tillman v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 165.

In a prosecution for robbery, where it was the state's theory that defendant and several others were acting together, held that there was no error in charging on the law of principals. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

Where defendant was present when his son shot and killed deceased, held, under the evidence, that the state was entitled to have the law of principals submitted. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

52. Grade or degree of offense.—See notes under articles of Penal Code defining particular offenses.

In criminal prosecutions, where there are any circumstances that would mitigate or reduce the offense to a lower grade than that of which accused was convicted, he is entitled to the benefit of such circumstances under appropriate instructions from the court as to the law applicable thereto. Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 371, 216 S. W. 834.

66. Self defense—Provoking difficulty.—See Pen. Code, art. 1107, notes 12-17.

74. Punishment.—A charge was erroneous in predicating the authority to recommend suspension of sentence upon proof that defendant "merited it." Morris v. State, 82 Cr. R. 13, 198 S. W. 141.

Instruction as to amount of fine omitting the word "fine," in view of another instruction requiring the jury to fix the fine at not more than a certain sum, held not fundamental error. Harper v. State, 82 Cr. R. 149, 198 S. W. 786.

75. Manner of arriving at verdict.—Where a charge is given, cautioning the jury in a criminal case not to find their verdict by lot or chance, the jury should be admonished that they must first ascertain the fact that defendant is guilty. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

Instruction that the result of a former trial did not concern jurors, and was not to be mentioned or considered, held an appropriate precaution against misconduct of the jury. Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

The practice in prosecution of giving an instruction warning the jury against finding a verdict by lot is proper. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 160.

77. Time for giving instructions.—In a verbal address, delivered while testing jurors for the week as to their qualifications, the court should not have discussed the question of reasonable doubt, and how from the viewpoint of the court it ought to be considered. Redwine v. State, 85 Cr. R. 437, 213 S. W. 636.

79. Form and language in general.—See Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

81. Repetition.—In a seduction case, it is unnecessary that the prosecutrix be corroborated as to every material fact, and it is not proper to single out isolated facts in the case, which are admissible in making out the state's case, and apply the law of accomplice testimony to each such bit of evidence. Hunt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 622, 214 S. W. 983.

In the absence of special reason therefor, in a prosecution for homicide, it was not essential that the doctrine of reasonable doubt be appended to each paragraph of the charge, where a correct instruction on the law of reasonable doubt was embraced in the charge. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

83. Confused or misleading instructions.—In a prosecution for manslaughter alleged to have been committed following a conspiracy between three brothers to assault deceased, an instruction that if defendant's brother knew nothing of the difficulty between defendant and deceased, "and" knew nothing of any conspiracy, defendant should be acquitted, was erroneous, since he might have known of the difficulty, and still not entered into the conspiracy. Holland v. State, 84 Cr. R. 144, 206 S. W. 83.

84. Inconsistent or contradictory instructions.—Where accused requested instruction to acquit if he did not have specific intent to kill, it was proper to refuse instruction submitting manslaughter; the two instructions being contradictory. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

87. Examination of charge by counsel and objections thereto.—Where there were no exceptions reserved to charge at or before its reading to jury, refusal of two special charges requested cannot be reviewed. Bega v. State, 81 Cr. R. 635, 197 S. W. 1109.

Where accused failed to object to failure to charge on aggravated assault, and requested no special charge, but after all argument was concluded asked such a charge, it was properly refused. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

Where no exceptions were reserved to the charge before it was read to the jury, the allegation in the motion for new trial that the charge was erroneous cannot be considered. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 536, 200 S. W. 398.

Under statute it is necessary to have exceptions to charge filed before it is read to jury, which cannot be done on motion for new trial unless matters complained of are of fundamental nature. Wilson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 593, 204 S. W. 321.

Where one indicted for murder makes no objection to submission of issue of manslaughter, he waives his right to complaint thereof on appeal. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

An exception to the charge because paragraph 4 was on the weight of the evidence is too general to be reviewed. Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

Where no exception was taken to charge despite express provision of statute that if there is an objection which defendant desires to present on appeal he must make his objection known in writing before the charge is read to the jury, defendant cannot come before Court of Criminal Appeals for first time and attempt to argue incorrectness of charge. Farris v. State, 85 Cr. R. 86, 209 S. W. 665.

Defendant cannot complain of charge, or of failure of the Court of Criminal Appeals to discuss it in its former opinion, where no exceptions were taken to it, or any other part of the charge, prior to reading to the jury. Alsop v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195.

Where the court trying a prosecution for receiving stolen goods on written objection to certain portions of his charge by defendant's counsel eliminated such portions but did not after such material alteration submit charge to defendant's counsel before reading to jury, his failure so to submit charge was reversible error. Czernicki v. State, 85 Cr. R. 169, 211 S. W. 223.

In prosecution for assault to murder an officer, contention that the trial court erred in failing to limit purpose for which evidence was admitted of fact of defendant's indictment for offense for which he was arrested by assaulted officer because the indictment had been returned on the day on which the evidence was offered held not tenable. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

Errors in charges, not properly excepted to, will not be considered by the Court of Criminal Appeals, unless fundamental. Flores v. State, 86 Cr. R. 235, 216 S. W. 170.

On appeal in a criminal case, to authorize the consideration of objections to the charge, or the refusal of special charges, the record must disclose that the requirements of arts. 735, 737, 737a, and 743, providing for presentation of charges to the court, were fulfilled. Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 217, 216 S. W. 172.

This article should not be given so technical a construction as to deny the right of review on appeal, where a substantial compliance is shown and its end practically accomplished. James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

Defendant's exception to court's charge limiting testimony of certain witness, which was sufficient to inform court of wherein defendant considered instruction faulty and to afford an opportunity to correct it, held sufficient. Id.

Where no exceptions were taken to charge in criminal case before argument as required by statute, such matters cannot be reviewed. Watson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 189, 220 S. W. 329.

An assignment of error to a charge of the court cannot be considered where no exception to the charge was taken before it was read to the jury, as required by statute, unless the error in charge was of a nature which would go to the very foundation of the conviction. Bridges v. State, 88 Cr. R. 61, 224 S. W. 1097.

An error of the court in charging the jury, not excepted to, will not be considered, unless it is of a fundamental nature, and goes to the basis of the case adversely to what the law is or ought to be. Johnson v. State, 88 Cr. R. 136, 224 S. W. 1103.

Court's charge, given at the state's request, will not be considered on appeal, where defendant did not object thereto in writing. Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105.

In the absence of a showing either from statements connected with and part of the special charges as presented, or else in the bill of exceptions taken to their refusal, that such charges were presented to the trial court before argument, the rule which imputes correctness to the trial court's action until the opposite is shown compels the Court of Criminal Appeals to sustain action in refusing even a proper special charge as presented too late. Berlew v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 518.

Where objections are taken to the charge before being read to the jury, they must be verified in some way so as to inform the appellate court that such procedure actually occurred, and the fact that the caption of a paper purporting to contain such exceptions recites that it contains the objections presented before the charge was read is not a verification of the trial court of the fact of such presentation, and unless there be some such verification apparent on the paper, or by the bill of exceptions as the law directs, the appellate court cannot consider them. Gibson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 538.

Before the appellate court can consider an objection to the court's charge, under Vernon's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. 1916, art. 735, it must have been made in writing and presented to the trial court before the charge was read to the jury. Id.

Before the appellate court can consider an objection to the court's charge, it must have been made in writing and presented to the trial court before the charge was read to the jury, and the record must affirmatively show such fact. Id.

Where the record did not show that any objections in writing were filed or exceptions taken to the charge before it was read to the jury, an alleged error not of a fundamental character cannot be reviewed though exceptions were subsequently presented and the matter called to the attention of the court on motion for new trial. Castleberry v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 216.

Unless objections are filed to the court's charge pointing out specific errors complained of, they cannot be considered on appeal. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 176.

The court's charge will be presumed to have met defendant's approval, in absence of objection thereto or request for special instruction. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1005.

II. DISCUSSION OF FACTS, WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE, AND SUMMING UP TESTIMONY

89. Weight of evidence in general.—In prosecution of second husband for desertion of wife, it was error to instruct concerning former husband that presumption of death from seven years' absence was absolute, being on weight of evidence, and it is immaterial that under Pen. Code, art. 482, wife would be exempt from conviction of bigamy. Barrios v. State, 82 Cr. R. 548, 204 S. W. 326.

In prosecution of bank president for murder of state commissioner of banking, instruction that under facts commissioner had right under law to close bank and take charge of its affairs, held not charge on weight of evidence. Watson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 115, 205 S. W. 662.

Requested special charge that there was no evidence showing, or tending to show, that a witness for accused instigated or was connected with the homicide, if given, would have been a comment by the court on the weight to be given the facts. Wood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 187, 206 S. W. 349.

A special requested charge which was on weight of testimony was properly refused. Gribble v. State, 85 Cr. R. 52, 210 S. W. 215, 3 A. L. R. 1096.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to commit murder, instruction on venue held erroneous as on the weight of the testimony. King v. State, 86 Cr. R. 407, 216 S. W. 1091.

In prosecution for forgery, in which defendant was charged with having forged seller's name to order, instruction submitting the question whether defendant was authorized to act for seller held on the weight of the testimony. Chadwick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 842.

91. Comment on facts or evidence in general.—The court's conduct, during a prosecution for murder, in examining one of the witnesses for the state and eliciting damaging testimony by reminding witness of the contents of a written statement witness had made, tending to lead jury to think court considered defendant guilty, was improper under the statute. Anderson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 261, 202 S. W. 944, L. R. A. 1918E, 658.

In prosecution for passing forged instrument, where there was evidence of a collateral transaction reproduced from testimony of a witness on a former trial, court's statement, upon defendant's request for instruction limiting effect of such testimony, that he had not limited the consideration of such testimony in such respect before, and that "I believe the jury understands the matter of all the checks about as clearly as I can make it," held not any unauthorized comment upon evidence, where it does not appear that jury was informed of the result of former trial. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560.

Where accused claimed he killed deceased while temporarily insane from using narcotics and intoxicants, the court's remark that he did not recollect testimony that accused had taken a fourth morphine tablet held not to infringe the statute forbidding the court to comment on the weight of the evidence. Cundiff v. State, 86 Cr. R. 476, 218 S. W. 771.

93. Opinion or belief as to facts.—In prosecution for abortion, trial court violated statute in expressing before jury opinion with reference to testimony of victim as to why she had procured certain money. Earnest v. State, 83 Cr. R. 257, 202 S. W. 739.

In a murder case, where defendant relied on self-defense and claimed that decedent was advancing toward him with a drawn knife, an instruction that decedent would be presumed to intend to inflict death or injury "(provided he used any such weapon or means)," objected to as indicating the court's opinion that decedent was not using a weapon, held not erroneous. McDougal v. State, 84 Cr. R. 424, 208 S. W. 173.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, it was error to instruct the jury not to find the verdict by lottery or chance, since the idea was conveyed that the verdict would be unfavorable to defendant. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

Verbal communications of court with jurors touching the case on trial, after the retirement of the jury, should be attempted only upon rare occasions and impelled by soundest reasons, and an effort should be made to avoid impressing jury that court entertains any impression of the case which he wishes them to know. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In prosecution for murder, defendant setting up that he acted in defense of his son, deceased having insulted the son and put his hand to his hip, when defendant struck and killed him with a breast yoke, it was improper to instruct on the law of excessive force; charge relating to an issue not raised by evidence, and calculated to impress jury with idea that, in the opinion of the court, force used was excessive. Mitchell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 25, 209 S. W. 743.

In homicide prosecution, where it was claimed defendant had shot deceased after deceased had abandoned the conflict, charge on provoking difficulty held objectionable, as suggesting that in the opinion of the court the defendant was wrong in the beginning, and that he invited contest with deceased in order to kill him, particularly where evidence as to who was aggressor in the beginning was conflicting. Thompson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 144, 210 S. W. 800.

In prosecution for theft, when evidence of defendant's possession of other recently stolen property appears in the record, it is court's duty to limit such testimony, and to point out specifically the evidence to be limited, without expressing opinion on weight of such evidence. Mueller v. State, 85 Cr. R. 346, 215 S. W. 93.

Granting the declarations of deceased and other surrounding circumstances are sufficient to show defendant's presence when deceased drank the whisky alleged to have contained poison and caused death, defendant's guilty knowledge would be a jury question, and implication in the trial judge's instruction that, in his opinion there was evidence which, if believed, would support theory of conspiracy, was necessarily prejudicial and erroneous. Baugus v. State, 87 Cr. R. 551, 223 S. W. 224.

An instruction that a prosecution for theft may be maintained in the county in which the property was taken or into or through which it may have been carried is not an indication of the court's belief that accused actually took the property, and is not on the weight of evidence. Armstrong v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 485.

In a prosecution for murder, instruction that the question of defendant's guilt must not be determined by lot or chance, and, in case of conviction, the punishment must not be determined in any such manner, held not error as conveying the impression the court was of the opinion defendant would be convicted. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

94. Inferences from evidence.—In a prosecution for seduction defendant's requested special charge that the fact of continuous association between him and the prosecutrix was not sufficient evidence to corroborate a promise of marriage held properly refused as on the weight of the evidence. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

In homicide prosecution involving issue of whether killing was in sudden passion reducing crime to manslaughter, requested instruction that there was evidence that the deceased had, prior to the homicide, killed defendant's brother and that jury could find from such killing that defendant at the time he killed deceased was in a state of mind incapable of cool reflection, held properly refused, where the killing of defendant's brother had taken place some years before the killing of deceased, and where defendant and deceased had met on several occasions during such time, since such instruction would have been a charge on the weight of evidence. Ray v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 528.

96. — Possession of stolen property and explanation thereof.—A charge requested by defendant to the effect that possession alone of recently stolen property was not sufficient to warrant a conviction was upon the weight of the testimony and was properly refused. Stiles v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 805.

98. Assumption as to facts.—The court could not assume, as a matter of law, that a witness who merely exchanged whisky and money between defendant and another was an accomplice to the sale, where the evidence thereof was doubtful. Fisher v. State, 81 Cr. R. 568, 197 S. W. 189.

In a prosecution under a city ordinance it was erroneous for court in its instructions to state that ordinance had been passed, in absence of proof. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 274, 198 S. W. 964.

It is never correct to assume a fact adversely to defendant in charging the law of the case. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 504, 208 S. W. 339.

In a prosecution for conspiracy to commit murder, instruction on venue held erroneous as assuming that, in an assault by defendant's coconspirators upon the husband of one of them against whom the alleged conspiracy to kill was directed, such coconspirators were in the wrong and were not acting in self-defense. King v. State, 86 Cr. R. 407, 216 S. W. 1091.

99. — Admitted or uncontroverted facts.—In prosecution for aggravated assault upon female, court may assume in its charge fact that defendant is adult male person and prosecutrix a female, unless evidence controverts issue. Hopson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 619, 209 S. W. 410.

It is proper for court to assume as true any fact which is not controverted. Mueller v. State, 85 Cr. R. 346, 215 S. W. 93.

100. — Facts established by testimony.—Where accused claimed he killed deceased while temporarily insane from using narcotics and drinking whisky, the court's reference to tablets used by accused as morphine was not erroneous, in view of testimony by accused's wife that they were one-fourth grain morphine tablets. Cundiff v. State, 86 Cr. R. 476, 218 S. W. 771.

103. — Truth or weight of evidence.—In prosecution for cattle theft, charge on accomplice testimony held erroneous, as assuming defendant was guilty, if accomplice testimony was true. Standfield v. State, 84 Cr. R. 437, 208 S. W. 532.

106. — Intent.—In prosecution for homicide, instruction, making it basis of manslaughter conviction if defendant went to scene of difficulty with the intent to whip or inflict injury upon deceased less than death, held erroneous as making unwarranted assumption of fact. Marshall v. State, 84 Cr. R. 201, 206 S. W. 356.

In a homicide prosecution, instruction on provoking the difficulty held erroneous, as assuming the fact that defendant did so for the purpose of killing or whipping deceased. Redwine v. State, 85 Cr. R. 437, 213 S. W. 636.

107. — Time and place of offense.—In prosecution for hog theft, charge with reference to theft in A. county, or within 400 yards of line, and bringing hogs into N. county, held erroneous as on weight of evidence. Strickland v. State, 81 Cr. R. 643, 197 S. W. 1104.

108. — Facts connected with crime charged in general.—In prosecution for incest, charge that if jury believed that parties were uncle and niece they would be within statute was not erroneous as assuming facts. Griffin v. State, 83 Cr. R. 137, 202 S. W. 87.

Where defendant and his witness both denied that they had been living together as husband and wife, and the matter there ended, an instruction that the jury might consider such fact for the purpose of attacking credibility of the testimony of witness was erroneous, as assuming that they had been living together. Finks v. State, 84 Cr. R. 536, 209 S. W. 154.

In prosecution for homicide, defendant's request to charge that each juror must place himself in defendant's position, and determine from all facts, as they appeared to defendant, whether or not his apprehension of death or serious injury was reasonable, held properly refused as on weight of evidence, as assuming defendant had fear of death or injury. Alsop v. State, 95 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195.

A special requested instruction relating to alibi in a prosecution for seduction held on the weight of the evidence, as assuming as a fact that accused's evidence tended to show him at another place than that of the commission of the offense when the same was committed. Hunt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 622, 214 S. W. 983.

109. — Character of article used in committing offense.—In a prosecution for placing poison in water with the intent to injure and kill another, instruction, charging jury to acquit defendant if it believed or had reasonable doubt that some person other than defendant "mixed and mingled the noxious potion and substance, if any, with water," held not objectionable, as against contention that it was on the weight of the evidence, and assumed that the substance found in the water was poison. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

In a prosecution for homicide, the court properly refused defendant's requested special charge that if deceased was advancing or about to advance upon defendant with a hammer, the law presumed deceased intended to kill defendant, or to inflict some serious bodily injury, etc.; the request improperly assuming the hammer was that character of instrument upon which the law bases the intent of the person using it. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

110. — Commission of offense.—In prosecution for theft of a cow, where defendant claimed the animal as his own and the only issue was ownership, a charge on possession of recently stolen property and consequent explanation was erroneous, as assuming that animal had been stolen and that an explanation of defendant's possession had been given. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 504, 208 S. W. 339.

112. — Commission of other or related offense.—Where state relied for conviction on sale of intoxicating liquor in October, instruction that evidence of sales by defendant in November, December, and January could be considered as tending to show system was erroneous as being on weight of evidence. Gustamente v. State, 81 Cr. R. 640, 197 S. W. 998.

Where defendant and his associate, both Texas rangers, in attempting to enter a building where they suspected gambling was in progress, shot and killed one of the occupants, an instruction which referred to burglary of the building was erroneous; there being no evidence that defendant or his associate had any intention of burglarizing the premises. Bloxom v. State, 86 Cr. R. 562, 218 S. W. 1063.

116. Comments on conduct or character of accused.—In negligent homicide case, where it appeared that defendant was intoxicated and had received two blows on the head, an instruction that danger from use of pistol would have been known to defendant, if he had exercised ordinary prudence, held on weight of evidence. Haynes v. State, 84 Cr. R. 6, 204 S. W. 430.

118. Directing verdict or declaring law if jury believe the evidence.—In a prosecution for murder, instruction applying the doctrine of principals, and directing jury to convict if they believed from evidence that certain facts were true, held a charge on the weight of the evidence. Walsh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 208, 211 S. W. 241.

119. Directing verdict, or declaring law if certain facts are found.—A charge, if defendant did "make an assault upon said L. * * * with the intent * * * to ravish * * * her * * * you will find the defendant guilty," was not on weight of evidence. Reese v. State, 83 Cr. R. 394, 203 S. W. 769.

123. Purpose and effect of evidence—Impeaching evidence.—Evidence which is competent for impeachment only may properly be limited, but court in so doing should observe the legal restrictions against charging on the weight of the evidence and against misleading the jury by erroneous construction. James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

Where testimony contradicted witness, presenting a conflict for the solution of the jury, instruction authorizing jury to consider such testimony only in so far as it affected the testimony of such witness was error; such testimony not having impeached witness. Id.

124. — Evidence of other acts or offenses.—Charge as to testimony by defense witness that evidence of his previous indictment, trial, and acquittal for the same killing "was admitted * * * for the sole purpose of affecting the credibility of the witness, * * * and you shall consider it for no other purpose," was erroneous, as a charge upon weight of evidence. Lozano v. State, 83 Cr. R. 174, 202 S. W. 510.

In prosecution for cattle theft, instruction limiting jury's consideration of evidence as to other recently stolen cattle found with the cattle charged to have been stolen held not on weight of evidence. Mueller v. State, 85 Cr. R. 346, 215 S. W. 93

In prosecution for theft wherein the state put in evidence of extraneous offenses to connect defendant with the offense and to show his purpose in being connected with it, a charge that jury might consider evidence of the theft of other property at same time and place, to establish the identity in developing the res geste of alleged offense or to prove defendant's guilt by circumstances connected with the theft or to show his intent as to property charged to have been stolen, was erroneous, as being on the weight of the evidence. Davis v. State, 87 Cr. R. 425, 222 S. W. 236.

126. Documentary evidence.—Where the state introduced the motor license transferred by defendant when he sold the car alleged to have been stolen and thereby entitled defendant to a charge on the purchase of the car by him as shown by the license, a requested charge that the jury must accept as true the statements contained in the license, unless the evidence showed them to be untrue beyond a reasonable doubt, and that the testimony of an accomplice alone was insufficient to disprove those statements, was properly refused as on the weight of the evidence. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 406.

134. Corroboration of witness.—In a prosecution for seduction, defendant's requested special charge that the fact of continuous association between him and the prosecutrix was not sufficient evidence to corroborate a promise of marriage held properly refused as on the weight of the evidence, and not presenting a correct proposition of law. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

147. Degree of crime.—In prosecution for murder, an instruction that the killing would not be manslaughter if it was done from hatred or revenge, or by previous design, and not on account of insulting conduct towards defendant's wife, was erroneous as being on the weight of the evidence. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Bibb v. State, 83 Cr. R. 616, 205 S. W. 135.

In prosecution for aggravated assault, instruction that, if the jury believed defendant was guilty of an assault but had reasonable doubt whether the assault was aggravated, it should acquit of aggravated assault and convict of simple assault, held not objectionable as on the weight of the evidence or as requiring the jury to convict. Mathis v. State, 84 Cr. R. 347, 206 S. W. 528.

151. Self defense.—In prosecution for homicide, instruction that, if defendant went to scene to provoke difficulty with deceased, he lost right of self-defense, etc., held charge on weight of evidence as assuming proposition adverse to defendant. Marshall v. State, 84 Cr. R. 201, 206 S. W. 356.

III. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF CHARGE

154. Construction and effect of charge as a whole.—The charge must be construed as a whole. Anderson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 207, 217 S. W. 390; Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101; Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

All parts of a charge must be looked to in an effort to arrive at the correct decision as to whether a particular portion is erroneous. Mobley v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 531; Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

Construed in connection with remainder of the charge, one paragraph held not erroneous as making defendant's right of self-defense depend not upon his acts, but upon his unexecuted intentions. Raspberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 393, 208 S. W. 168.

Error cannot be predicated on a phrase taken from a paragraph of the charge which as a whole is correct. Hollman v. State, 87 Cr. R. 576, 223 S. W. 206.

In a prosecution for manslaughter by the killing of defendant's paramour, instruction on manslaughter, in view of entire charge, held not erroneous, as on the weight of evidence and assuming that defendant did the killing, a disputed issue. Mobley v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 531.

155. Correction of instructions, and error in instructions cured by other instructions given.—In trial for murder, a charge on self-defense, objectionable as submitting the issue of actual danger alone, was cured in a special charge at defendant's request fairly submitting the law of apparent danger. Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381.

Where the court properly defined and explained what acts establish provoking the difficulty, and further gave accused's requested charge submitting the converse thereof, according to his defensive theory, the original charge was not defective in failing to submit such theory. Roberson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 238, 203 S. W. 349.

In prosecution for larceny from person, special charges, given at defendant's request, held to cure error by implication in charge that if jury believed person robbed dropped money on floor, and it was picked up by one other than defendant, they should acquit. Bassett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 479, 204 S. W. 112.

Where a requested charge substantially covering defendant's theory was given, it would cure the omission in the main charge. (Per Gaines, Special Judge.) Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 75, 204 S. W. 644.

In prosecution for wife desertion, defendant introducing evidence to meet contention that he was not justified, special charge at request of state submitting issue of ratification of marriage void for duress, held erroneous, as withdrawing issue of justification from jury. Boattenhamer v. State, 84 Cr. R. 210, 206 S. W. 344.

While it might be proper to charge that jury should not regard a plea for suspended sentence as evidence of guilt, it was not fatal to refuse to so charge, where court instructed that, if jury convicted defendant, they could then consider question of a suspended sentence. Campbell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 89, 206 S. W. 348.

In a prosecution for murder, an instruction objected to as shifting to defendant the burden of proving that his intent in provoking the difficulty was to inflict on deceased some lower degree of injury than death or serious bodily harm, held not to require reversal in view of other instructions and of the evidence. McDougal v. State, 84 Cr. R. 424, 208 S. W. 173.

An exception to the court's charge on manslaughter as allowing the jury to consider only the provocation arising at the time cannot be sustained, where the court further charged that, in determining the adequacy of the provocation, the jury should consider all the evidence in determining the condition of the defendant's mind. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

Error of charge, authorizing conviction on accomplice testimony if it was believed and was corroborated by testimony tending to connect defendant with the offense, is not available, another charge correcting its defect of not also stating that it was necessary that accomplice testimony in connection with the other evidence should show defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, being given at defendant's request. Lockhead v. State, 85 Cr. R. 459, 213 S. W. 653.

A charge on manslaughter was not unduly restrictive of accused's right of self-defense where the reference in such charge to self-defense was not an attempt to define the law of self-defense, but to direct the jury's attention to the fact that they should keep the law and facts as to self-defense in mind for accused's benefit, and the law of self-defense was fully given in other paragraphs of the charge. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

Where defendant, who was present when his son killed deceased, was charged with murder, an instruction that, if defendant and his son had entered into an agreement to kill deceased, and agreed to act together in so doing, and had previously formed a design in which the minds of the two united and concurred in the common intent to take the life of deceased, and in pursuance of said common intent of both, defendant, acting in conjunction with his son, took the life of deceased, then he was guilty of murder, is not erroneous, but any possible error was cured by a special charge that defendant could not be a principal in the killing unless he knew his son's intent to unlawfully kill and, knowing such intent, aided, etc. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

Where defendant, convicted of aggravated assault, was not content to rest his case upon an exception to the general charge for not submitting self-defense, and corrected the error by requesting a special charge thereon, which was given, he is without well-grounded complaint. Rodriguez v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 512.

Art. 736. [716] Charge shall not discuss the facts, etc.

See notes under art. 735; Surrell v. State, 29 Tex. App. 321, 15 S. W. 816; Flores v. State, 86 Cr. R. 235, 216 S. W. 170.

Cited, Green v. State, 32 Cr. R. 298, 22 S. W. 1094.

Art. 737. [717] Either party may ask written instructions.

See Surrell v. State, 29 Tex. App. 321, 15 S. W. 816; Flores v. State, 86 Cr. R. 235, 216 S. W. 170; Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 217, 216 S. W. 172.

1. In general.—A request in a homicide case to instruct the jury to acquit if they believed appellant's mind incapable of cool reflection, and that he killed deceased in a sudden passion, and that such state of mind was caused by deceased, could have reference only to the defense of insanity, and could not be considered a request to charge on the issue of manslaughter. Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101.

2. Application of amendatory act.—Acts 35th Leg. c. 177 (Civ. St. art. 1974), does not amend procedure in criminal cases which is embodied in Code Cr. Proc. arts. 735, 737, 737a, 743. Barrios v. State, 83 Cr. R. 548, 204 S. W. 326.

3. Necessity for request.—In misdemeanor case, ordinarily a defective charge, where no special charge is requested, is not reversible error; but where charge is affirmatively wrong, and exception is properly taken and shown by proper bill, though no special charge is requested, Court of Criminal Appeals cannot hold there is no reversible error. Boattenhamer v. State, 84 Cr. R. 210, 206 S. W. 344.

Failure to charge on aggravated assault in a prosecution for assault to murder is not reversible error, in the absence of requested instructions. Patten v. State, 84 Cr. R. 584, 209 S. W. 664.

Failure to charge on aggravated assault in a prosecution for assault to murder is not reversible error, in the absence of requested instructions or exceptions. Id.

In prosecution as delinquent child through guilt of aggravated assault, it was not fundamental error that trial court submitted issue of aggravated assault without defining off-nse or telling jury its elements, or what was necessary to constitute aggravated assault. Simpson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 277, 220 S. W. 777.

In a prosecution for assault to rape, resulting in conviction of aggravated assault, where the facts called for no charge on simple assault and defendant did not request one, there was no error in failing to give such a charge, though defendant was a minor. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

An objection upon defendant's appeal from a conviction of murder that the court erred in not submitting the issue of manslaughter on the ground of deceased's insulting conduct toward defendant's female relative is not available where defendant's counsel requested no special charges thereon. Prestidge v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 217.

The court trying a homicide case would not be justified, unless fortified with a request or an equivalent exception, in departing from the approved practice in framing his charge of embracing a qualifying instruction that if the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt accused was guilty of some grade of culpable homicide, but had a reasonable doubt as to whether it was murder or some lower grade of the offense, no conviction can be had of the higher grade. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

Failure to charge as to accomplice testimony is not reversible error, unless there is an exception to the instructions given for such failure, or there is a refusal of a special charge submitting such issue, and the matter cannot be raised upon motion for new trial or appeal for the first time. Joiner v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 333.

4. — Definitions.—In a homicide case, if the court's charge on manslaughter, in defining adequate cause as being such as "would commonly produce a degree of anger, rage, resentment, or terror in a person of ordinary temper sufficient to render the mind incapable of cool reflection," was insufficient, in that the evidence showed accused to be subject to epileptic fits and nervous and irritable, he should have offered some other definition. Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101.

5. — Defenses.—An objection upon defendant's appeal from a conviction of murder that the court erred in not submitting the issue of manslaughter on the ground of deceased's insulting conduct toward defendant's female relative is not available where defendant's counsel requested no special charges thereon and reserved no exceptions to failure to so instruct. Prestidge v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 217.

In a prosecution for homicide committed on one who defendant believed had maligned his sister, in the absence of requested special charge presenting manslaughter defensively in connection with the charge of murder, instruction on manslaughter that if the jury believed from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was laboring under such a degree of anger, rage, etc., as to render his mind incapable of cool reflection, produced by information as to decedent's improper proposals to defendant's sister, etc., the killing was manslaughter, held not error. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

6. — Admissibility and effect of evidence.—Witnesses who procured the sale of whisky to a soldier to secure evidence against defendant are not accomplices as a matter of law, and the necessity for corroboration of their testimony cannot be considered on appeal, in the absence of a requested charge or exception to the charge given; the error not being fundamental within arts. 735, 737, 737a, 743. Huggins v. State, 85 Cr. R. 205, 210 S. W. 804.

Failure to charge on circumstantial evidence is not reversible error, where no objection is taken to the court's charge, nor a special instruction presented. Charles v. State, 85 Cr. R. 534, 213 S. W. 266.

If a phase of the argument of opposing counsel, in the opinion of counsel for defendant, required an additional charge from the court on circumstantial evidence, a request for it should have been made. Canales v. State, 86 Cr. R. 142, 215 S. W. 964.

In a prosecution for burglary, where the testimony of the examining magistrate as a witness made an issue of fact as to whether defendant had been properly warned before he made a statement, counsel for defendant should have requested an instruction that, if the jury believed the witness had informed defendant the statement could be used either for or against him, they could not consider the statement for any purpose; but, no such request having been made, there was no error in the failure so to instruct. Garcia v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 938.

7. — Limiting evidence to purpose.—In prosecution for attempt to rape defendant's daughter, where there was evidence of threats made by daughter during the assault to tell of other treatment by defendant admitted as part of res gestæ as evidence of resistance, defendant to protect himself against inference of other assaults from evidence of such threats should have requested instruction limiting jury's consideration of the evidence to its legitimate purpose. Hensley v. State, 85 Cr. R. 260, 211 S. W. 590.

In prosecution of an accomplice where evidence proving principal guilty is introduced as a part of the case against accomplice, the accomplice should ask to have such evidence limited to its proper use if he desires to have its use so limited. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

An accused cannot complain that admission of testimony would affect the character of the accused if the evidence is, otherwise admissible, but accused has the right to request a charge limiting the purpose for which same is admitted, if such be the probable or possible result of the testimony. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

Failure of the court to limit in his main charge testimony offered by accused to impeach a state witness, if such a limitation were proper, was not error, where such main charge was not excepted to, and no special charge was asked presenting the issue. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

8. — Fuller instructions.—In trial for cattle theft, instruction on reasonable doubt held sufficient, where accused did not present special charge embodying matter in different language. Simpson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 389, 196 S. W. 835.

In prosecution for seduction, embodiment of law of corroboration in general way in charge was sufficient, in absence of request for additional instructions. Haney v. State, 81 Cr. R. 651, 197 S. W. 1102.

In a murder case, where self-defense was set up, it was not error to fail to give a specific instruction, calling attention to evidence relating to the character of deceased as a violent and dangerous man, where other instructions were broad enough to include evidence of character, and if specific reference was desired, it was incumbent on defendant to seek it by special charge. McDougal v. State, 84 Cr. R. 424, 208 S. W. 173.

In absence of demand for more specific instruction, a charge that testimony of the injured female in a seduction prosecution must be corroborated is sufficient. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

In a prosecution for homicide, issue of manslaughter as raised by the evidence held sufficiently presented by the court's instruction, particularly in view of the absence of requested instructions. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

In so far as an issue of manslaughter was raised upon a general proposition of the existence of facts and circumstances which would arouse a man of ordinary temper to that degree of anger, rage, or sudden resentment or terror as to render him incapable of cool reflection was submitted to the jury, if appellant defendant desired a more specific instruction thereon, his failure to request it precludes his objection. Prestidge v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 217.

If defendant was not satisfied with a paragraph of the court's charge, a special instruction should have been asked by him. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

11. Time for request.—The refusal of an instruction, though correct, is not ground for reversal, unless the record discloses facts showing its presentation before the main charge was read, though in the record the charge states that it was requested and closes with its refusal. Harper v. State, 86 Cr. R. 446, 217 S. W. 703.

Where special charges on manslaughter and suspended sentence were asked, but it does not appear when they were presented to the court, acting upon the presumption that the trial court followed the law, the appellate court must uphold the action of the trial court in refusing such charges, for the reason that they came too late, if for no other reason. Grissom v. State, 87 Cr. R. 465, 222 S. W. 237.

Refusal of requested instructions will not be considered on appeal, in absence of record showing when special charges were presented to the court, whether before the main charge was read or afterwards, or whether before the argument was begun or concluded. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

Where it does not appear from the record whether the special charges were presented and refused before the main charge was read to the jury, supposed errors in the refusal of such charges cannot be considered by the Court of Criminal Appeals. Berlew v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 518.

13. Erroneous requests.—The court's refusal to give a special charge requested by defendant that the jury be instructed not to consider the evidence of force, or that there was blood or wounds on the 15 year old injured female, was proper where the indictment contained counts charging rape both statutory and by force. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, defendant's requested special charge, "If you find as a fact or believe from the evidence that the defendant T. at the time of and during the commission of the alleged assault did not act with malice aforethought, and that the acts alleged to have been committed by him were not preconceived or studied purposely to so act, and were not performed in a manner showing a heart fatally bent on mischief, then, if you so find, you will disregard the charge of intent to murder, and only consider this case from the standpoint of the defendant's guilt or innocence of the charge of aggravated assault," imposed an unnecessary burden on the accused, as it required the jury to believe affirmatively that he did not act with malice aforethought, and that his acts were not preconceived, and its refusal was not error. Freddy v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 533.

14. — Applicability to evidence.—The court is not required to submit a theory of any case unless there is evidence in the case raising such issue. Albrecht v. State, 85 Cr. R. 519, 215 S. W. 327; Bega v. State, 81 Cr. R. 635, 197 S. W. 1109.

In prosecution for burglary, charge held properly refused as inapplicable to facts. Bega v. State, 81 Cr. R. 635, 197 S. W. 1109.

In prosecution for pandering, held, as main charge failed to present theory raised by defendant's evidence, court's refusal of charge presenting such theory was error. Eppison v. State, 82 Cr. R. 364, 198 S. W. 948.

In a murder case, a charge which is merely an abstract statement of the law of circumstantial evidence, without any application or attempted application to the facts, is properly refused. Ellis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 529, 213 S. W. 264.

In a criminal prosecution, the matter of defendant's age raised by his affidavit of juvenility being for the court alone, and it was proper to refuse to tell the jury they could not convict if they believed him under 14 years of age at the time of the alleged offense, where there was no question as to his being of sufficient age to make him legally responsible. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

In a homicide case, where defendant's testimony tended to show that he shot in self-defense, and manslaughter was brought in issue by testimony indicating that defendant was the aggressor, defendant cannot complain, where the court correctly charged on his right of self-defense, that it did not specifically mention that he had the right to shoot, from the viewpoint of manslaughter, if he suffered pain, etc., on being shot, for such an instruction would have been an undue limitation on the right of self-defense. Shrum v. State, 87 Cr. R. 486, 222 S. W. 575.

In prosecution for placing poison in water with intent to injure and kill another, where there was evidence making it a question for the jury as to whether defendant's wife had conspired with him in an effort to kill or injure such other person, court properly refused to instruct jury not to consider evidence as to threats against such person made by defendant's wife. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

In a prosecution for being interested in a gaming house, where there was no testimony offered as to the general reputation of the place, the trial court properly refused to give defendant's requested special charges that, while general reputation might be admissible to show the character of the place, it could not be used to establish defendant's connection therewith. Watson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 753.

In every criminal case it is necessary that a demand for the submission of an issue be based on facts in evidence whose legitimate effect would be to raise such issue. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 527.

In a prosecution for manslaughter through killing of defendant's paramour, special charges, requested by defendant, that if he fired the shot, and did not intend to kill deceased, and that if he shot her accidentally, he was not guilty, were properly refused, where they were covered by the main charge, and where there was no suggestion in the evidence supporting the theory of a shot fired by defendant without intent to strike deceased. Mobley v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 531.

15. — Singling out evidence.—In a prosecution for playing at cards at a place other than a private residence, an instruction that, "You are instructed as to what is legal and competent evidence as given in the court's general charge that it means evidence of fact, and not of circumstance, and unless you believe beyond a reasonable doubt that it has been proved by a preponderance of the evidence that defendant was guilty as charged, * * * you will find him not guilty," held properly refused, as in the nature of a bill of exceptions to evidence. Maguire v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 683.

In a prosecution for playing at cards in a place other than a private residence, an instruction that statements by defendant when in custody of an officer are not admissible unless he is properly warned that they might be used as evidence against him, held properly refused, as in the nature of an objection to evidence. Id.

16. — Weight of evidence.—In a prosecution for murder, it was not error to refuse a charge on the weight of the evidence which assumed that the killing was done by a companion. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 312.

17. Modification of requests.—In a prosecution for robbery where the evidence tended to show that defendant put the owner of the stolen property in fear, and that the owner delivered the property to him, it was proper to add to a requested special charge that if the property was taken with the consent of the owner the jury should acquit, that if the owner would not have delivered except that he was placed in fear, the taking would be without his consent. Horn v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 693.

It was not error to refuse a requested special charge substantially covered by main charge. Alsop v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195; Gribble v. State, 85 Cr. R. 52, 210 S. W. 215, 3 A. L. R. 1096; McHam v. State, 81 Cr. R. 623, 197 S. W. 873; Parker v. State, 83 Cr. R. 81, 200 S. W. 1083; Smith v. State, 83 Cr. R. 485, 203 S. W. 771; Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343; Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926; Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 618, 215 S. W. 97; McCormick v. State, 86 Cr. R. 366, 216 S. W. 871; Erwin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 71, 219 S. W. 827; Hasley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 444, 222 S. W. 579; Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 463; Gibson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 538; Castleberry v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 216; Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1099; Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

Where the court submitted the unlimited right of self-defense, unqualified by the question of provoking the difficulty, it was not error to refuse the special requested charge on accused's right to arm himself and seek the deceased for an explanation. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 363, 195 S. W. 590; Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319; Simmons v. State, 87 Cr. R. 270, 220 S. W. 554; Ott v. State, 87 Cr. R. 382, 222 S. W. 261; Pollard v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 56.

Where a general instruction that the burden was upon the state to show defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt was embraced in the general charge, and the jury were instructed fully on the law of threats, requested instructions which were no more than substantial repetitions of the main charge on such matters were properly refused. Boaz v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 790; Rodriguez v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 512.

In prosecution for slander, requested special charge calling jury's attention particularly to words used in information which are alleged to have imputed want of chastity to a female, and advising jury that the interpretation and meaning of these words is for them, should have been given, notwithstanding general charge submitting meaning of language. Kelly v. State, 81 Cr. R. 408, 195 S. W. 853.

A special charge on the subject of alibi was properly refused, where the issue was fairly submitted in the main charge. Fisher v. State, 81 Cr. R. 568, 197 S. W. 189.

Where court charged that, although it was found that defendant was engaged in the business of unlawfully selling intoxicants, he should be acquitted unless it was found that he made two sales to parties named in indictment, it was not error to refuse special charge that state must prove two sales as alleged. Head v. State, 82 Cr. R. 211, 198 S. W. 581.

Where court's general charge covered law of reasonable doubt, there was no error in refusing special requested charge to effect that jury must believe beyond reasonable doubt that two sales of liquor were made as charged in indictment. Id.

An instruction on self-defense held erroneously refused, where instructions given did not cover all the theories brought out by the evidence. Hays v. State, 82 Cr. R. 427, 199 S. W. 621.

In perjury trial, refusal of special charge to acquit if finding that accused because of intoxication was unable to remember the facts as to transactions testified to before grand jury, on which testimony the prosecution was based, was not error, where the court elsewhere covered the matter. Timmins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 263, 199 S. W. 1106.

Requested instruction that to convict of murder defendant must be proved to have had the specific intent to kill was fully covered by general instruction that the jury must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was actuated by malice aforethought, and with specific intent to kill. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

In prosecution for assault on rape, court's charge on aggravated assault held sufficient, rendering it unnecessary to give special requested charge upon that subject. Morris v. State, 84 Cr. R. 100, 206 S. W. 82.

In a homicide case, assumption in special charge as to interference by deceased in an attempted reconciliation between defendant and his wife held not warranted, further than as submitted in the main charge. Roach v. State, 84 Cr. R. 471, 208 S. W. 520.

In a prosecution for theft of grain, where defendant's possession was explained only by his borrowing money from witness to buy the grain, and defendant requested a special charge relating to explanation, given instructions that if the jury believed defendant was not present and did not break into the house, but subsequently received the property or they had reasonable doubt as to his presence, or believed that defendant did not buy the grain, they could not convict, held to sufficiently present defendant's rights. Vaughn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 483, 208 S. W. 527.

Charges already given should not be repeated. Alsop v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195.

Instruction that if it reasonably appeared to defendant from his standpoint that deceased was about to take his life, or do him serious injury, he was justified in the killing, taken in connection with main charge on self-defense, held to sufficiently instruct jury to view situation from defendant's standpoint, so as to justify refusal of a special charge. Id.

In a seduction case, an instruction, "If you believe from the evidence that the offense charged was committed, and that the prosecutrix had sexual intercourse with some male person, or if you have reasonable doubt as to whether defendant was present at the time or not, you will give him the benefit of such doubt and find him not guilty," held sufficient to justify refusal of a special charge requested, which presented the law of alibi no more clearly than the given charge. Hunt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 622, 214 S. W. 983.

In a prosecution for murder there was no need for special charges telling the jury that they could consider the weakened condition of accused's mind in deciding whether to him the danger of death or serious bodily injury was real or apparent, the court having instructed that defendant be discharged if the conduct of the deceased produced in accused's mind a reasonable apprehension of fear of death or serious bodily injury, viewed from accused's standpoint alone. Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101.

In a criminal trial, it is not error to refuse defendant's instructions on circumstantial evidence, which matter was covered by the main charge. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

In a prosecution for an assault upon a woman, an instruction that before they could convict the jury must believe that the assault was committed "as alleged in the indictment" was sufficient, and justified refusal of requested charges thereon. Poldrack v. State, 86 Cr. R. 272, 216 S. W. 170.

Where the main charge, together with the several special charges given at request of defendant, appellant, fully and fairly submitted the issues involved, there was no error in refusing other special charges requested by defendant. Dollar v. State, 86 Cr. R. 398, 216 S. W. 1089.

In murder prosecution, where state did not rely upon evidence of defendant's admission to show that defendant had killed deceased, there being other circumstances to connect defendant with the killing, and court instructed jury on law of self-defense on apparent danger and threats and gave specific instruction covering the defense's theory suggested in the exculpatory statements connected with the admission introduced by the state, court's refusal to instruct that burden was upon the state to disprove exculpatory statements contained in such admission excusing homicide on grounds of self-defense held not error. Pickens v. State, 86 Cr. R. 657, 218 S. W. 755.

An exception to the charge because it failed to limit certain testimony to proof of intent cannot be sustained where the court gave a special requested charge restricting the effect of the testimony more than defendant was entitled to ask. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 587, 219 S. W. 835.

In a prosecution for transporting liquor into state on defendant's person, instruction presenting defendant's theory he had found liquor and was taking it to police station, that if his explanation was reasonable and true or a reasonable doubt existed on the issue to acquit him held proper and to obviate need of special charges requested. Amaya v. State, 87 Cr. R. 160, 220 S. W. 98.

In a prosecution for larceny, the charge that if the jury found accused bought the wagon from another than prosecutor, or believed it was included in goods sold to him, or if the jury entertained a reasonable doubt of such matters, they should acquit, sufficiently presented the defense of belief of ownership, so that requested charges thereon were properly refused. Berdell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 310, 220 S. W. 1101.

On a trial for pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquors, an instruction that it was not sufficient that defendant had liquor in his possession when arrested, and that he made several sporadic sales, but that he must sell it as a business proposition or as his principal business, was properly refused where the court charged that it must be shown that such occupation or business occupied a part of his time and attention as a business or calling pursued for the purpose of profit or gain, as this was a sufficient and correct statement of the law. Mann v. State, 87 Cr. R. 142, 221 S. W. 296.

Where the court gave a charge not restrictive of defendant's perfect right of self-defense and also a charge on communicated threats, requested charges, singling out various matters in evidence and instructing as to their effect, were not called for. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

In a prosecution for homicide, the trial court in the main charge having instructed that defendant was in no event bound to retreat in order to avoid the necessity of killing deceased, it was not incumbent upon him to repeat it in a special charge. Ott v. State, 87 Cr. R. 382, 222 S. W. 261.

There was no error in refusing special charges on self-defense which merely embraced, in varying phraseology, the same subject-matter covered by the main charge and other special charges given. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583.

In prosecution for murder, refusal of special charge that defendant could not be convicted of murder, if he had not intended to shoot or kill deceased, held proper, in view of instructions given fully covering such subject. Haynes v. State, 88 Cr. R. 42, 224 S. W. 1100.

In a prosecution for forgery of the name of another to a check, the trial court having submitted the case fully and fairly and told the jury that unless they believed beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant made the check in question they should find him not guilty, special charges, in substance that it must be shown that defendant himself wrote the check in question, and that his execution of it must be shown in some other way than by comparison of handwriting, etc., were properly refused defendant. Bird v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 749.

In prosecution for murder committed by throwing an empty quart bottle at deceased, where the court in applying the law to the facts used the expression, "deadly weapon" in both the murder and manslaughter paragraphs in his charge, but nowhere defined what constituted a deadly weapon, refusal of requested instruction that the bottle was not itself an instrument likely to produce death, on the ground that it was covered by the general charge, held error. Tolston v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1098.

It was not error in a robbery case to refuse a requested charge as to intent, where such matter was sufficiently covered by the charge given. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 320.

In prosecution for statutory rape, where the court pointedly told the jury that if they found from the evidence that defendant was not present at the place and date fixed, but was at another place, they should acquit, defendant's special charge that if the jury found that the intercourse, if any, between appellant and prosecutrix took place some 20 days previous to that date, they should acquit, was unnecessary. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 673.

On a trial for stealing an automobile which defendant claimed he was hired by T. to drive, requested charges as to defendant's intent at the time the car was taken, his belief that it belonged to T., and that a fraudulent intent formed subsequent to the taking would not make him guilty of theft, held sufficiently covered by the main charge. Clowers v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 226.

In a prosecution for forgery, the refusal of a requested instruction that, if the defendant did not know the checks received from another and which he passed were forged, he would not be guilty, held not reversible error where the proposition in a negative way was in substance embraced in the main charge. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 329.

In a prosecution for forgery and for passing a forged instrument, refusal of a special instruction that the jury should acquit unless they believed beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant intended to injure the party whose name was signed to the instrument held not error where the requested charge was not materially different from that given by the court in its main charge. Id.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, where the defendant claimed to have shot prosecuting witness in defense of his brother, a special charge submitting the issue of defense of the brother in a definite and affirmative way should have been given, though the court, in a general way, in his main charge on self-defense, applied it to the defense of the brother. Carson v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 997.

In a prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, where the court directed the jury not to consider the testimony of the state's witnesses as to what they thought with reference to the intentions of defendant on occasions when he placed the pistol against the side or breast of a witness, this sufficiently covered the proper portion of defendant's requested charge that the jury should not regard testimony of state's witnesses that defendant placed the pistol against the side or breast of one of them, and what he said in that connection, or regard the testimony of the witnesses as to what they thought of his intentions. Dodaro v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 394.

In prosecution for homicide, it was not error to refuse a requested instruction that jury should place themselves as nearly as they could in the place of defendant at time of homicide, and view all facts as they appeared to him, from his viewpoint, and not as they appear to jury now, where the court had instructed on the right to defend from apparent danger. Boaz v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 790.

In prosecution for murder, where the jury was instructed that the defendant had a right to use any means at his command to protect himself from deceased, who had threatened his life, and that he was not bound to retreat, it was not error to fail to repeat the instruction at the request of the defendant, in reference to instruction on the law of communicated threats. Id.

Where, in prosecution for murder, the jury were instructed upon self-defense against apparent, as well as real, danger, and upon defendant's right to act upon a demonstration by deceased manifesting an intent to carry out a threat, it was not incumbent upon court to instruct that defendant had right to defend himself in anticipation of an attack by deceased, particularly where it was instructed that defendant had right to seek deceased, and in doing so to arm himself. Id.

Refusal of a requested charge covering defendant's claim that he did not participate in the robbery was not error, being substantially covered by a charge that, if defendant was engaged in gambling at the place of the robbery, and a dispute arose, and subsequently some other person committed the crime, in which defendant did not participate, he would not be guilty. Hardy v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 1097.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen goods, a requested special charge that defendant could not be convicted unless he knew the goods were stolen when he received them was properly refused, where it was given almost word for word in the main charge. Kluting v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 305.

In a prosecution for murder, a charge that defendant could only be tried on the motive actuating him, and that he was not bound by the motive, intent, or acts of his associates, unless he knew and agreed to the same, was covered by the main charge that if the jury believed beyond a reasonable doubt that either of them killed deceased, though defendant was present, it should still find him not guilty, unless he knew of their unlawful intent, and aided or encouraged them. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 312.

In a prosecution for maiming, where the court charged on aggravated assault, and instructed the jury to acquit if they had reasonable doubt as to whether defendant's act was done willfully and maliciously, there was no error in refusing a charge that if defendant called off prosecuting witness with no intent to maim him, and a fight resulted, he was not guilty. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

In prosecution for automobile theft in which defendant was indicted as a principal, refusal of requested charges on the law of principals held not error, in view of charge given by court. Seebold v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 328.

In a prosecution for manslaughter through killing of defendant's paramour, special charges, requested by defendant, that if he fired the shot, and did not intend to kill deceased, and that if he shot her accidentally, he was not guilty, were properly refused, where they were covered by the main charge, and where there was no suggestion in the evidence supporting the theory of a shot fired by defendant without intent to strike deceased. Mobley v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 531.

In a prosecution for homicide, a requested charge on self-defense against apparent danger was practically covered by the charge on threats, which was combined with a charge on threatened attack, and told the jury the matter must be viewed from defendant's standpoint. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 847.

19. Repetition of special requests already given.—Refusal of requested charge covered by other charge given was not error. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 415; Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959.

In prosecution for murder, where court's charge on self-defense, together with defendant's special charge, which court gave, correctly presented and applied such question to evidence, it was unnecessary to give any other of defendant's special charges on subject. Davis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 539, 204 S. W. 652.

The refusal of a requested charge that, if defendant shot to stop or scare a stranger he had just seen at his house, he should be acquitted, was not error, where defendant did not claim he shot merely to scare, and the court at defendant's request, authorized acquittal if the jury found defendant called on the intruder to stop, and that his pistol was accidentally discharged. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

In prosecution for theft of a hog, in which defendant claimed ownership of the hog, refusal of requested instruction that, "If you have a reasonable doubt in your minds, arising from the evidence, that the defendant knew the hog described in the indictment was not his hog, you should acquit him," held proper, in view of given instruction that, "Although the jury may believe from the evidence that the hog belonged to S. [prosecuting witness], yet if the jury believe (or have a reasonable doubt in the matter) that defendant took the hog, honestly believing at the time of the taking that it was his own hog, then in that event the essential element of fraudulent intent would be lacking, and defendant should be acquitted." Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1005.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, where in a special charge the law of self-defense was given without any limitation, and from the evidence no need appears for a charge on defendant's right to arm himself either to protect himself or his daughter, it was not error to refuse his charge that one may arm himself on his own premises, and in case of real or apparent danger to himself or some of his family may use such arms. Rodriguez v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 512.

Art. 737a. Correction of charge after objections thereto; no further charge after argument begins, except, etc.; review.

See Grider v. State, 82 Cr. R. 124, 198 S. W. 579; Lowe v. State, 83 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986.

In general.—Acts 35th Leg., c. 177, Vernon's Ann. Civ. St. Supp. 1918, art. 1974, does not amend procedure in criminal cases which is embodied in c. 138, Code Cr. Proc., arts. 735, 737, 737a, 743, and special charges refused and not brought up for review by bills of exceptions cannot be considered. Barrios v. State, 83 Cr. R. 548, 204 S. W. 326.

Where the court trying a prosecution for receiving stolen goods on written objection to certain portions of his charge by defendant's counsel eliminated such portions but did not after such material alteration submit charge to defendant's counsel before reading to jury, his failure so to submit charge was reversible error. Czernicki v. State, 85 Cr. R. 169, 211 S. W. 223.

Time for reading.—Where accused failed to object to failure to charge on aggravated assault, and requested no special charge until after state's final argument was concluded, such request was properly refused. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, where the court, on retirement of jury without request, no improper argument having been made or additional evidence given, verbally instructed them not to discuss the fact that defendant did not testify, nor to arrive at the verdict by chance, such instruction constituted reversible error. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

Improper argument.—In a misdemeanor case, special charges must be asked in writing directing the jury not to consider remarks made by prosecutor. Lemcke v. State, 86 Cr. R. 386, 217 S. W. 150.

When an improper argument is used by the state, defendant can present to the trial court his request in writing that the jury be instructed that such argument in narrated respects is improper, and that the jury shall disregard it, which would present the matter in the Court of Criminal Appeals for review in a proper case, defendant not being entitled to additional charges, after or during argument, to settle differences as to construction of the language or effect of the allegations made by state's counsel. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

Review.—To review denial of a special charge the record should show that it was presented to the trial judge before the main charge was read, that an exception was reserved to its refusal, and either in the bill of exceptions or the motion for new trial there should be given the reasons appearing in the record why instruction should have been given. Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

On appeal in a criminal case, to authorize the consideration of objections to the charge, or the refusal of special charges, the record must disclose that the requirements of arts. 735, 737, 737a, and 743, providing for presentation of charges to the court, were fulfilled. Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 217, 216 S. W. 172.

Refusal of requested instructions will not be considered on appeal, in absence of record showing when special charges were presented to the court, whether before the main charge was read or afterwards, or whether before the argument was begun or concluded. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 207.

Art. 738. [718] Charges shall be certified by judge.

See Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

In general.—Instructions offered and refused at a trial which results in a mistrial, but which are not presented or called to the attention of the court at the next trial, are waived, and constitute no part of the record, as this section relates to charges given or refused on the particular trial only. Bracken v. State, 29 Tex. App. 362, 16 S. W. 192.

Statute is mandatory that charges given in criminal cases be certified. Payne v. State, 83 Cr. R. 287, 202 S. W. 958.

Art. 739. [719] No charge in misdemeanor, except, etc.

See Boattenhamer v. State, 84 Cr. R. 210, 206 S. W. 344.

Necessity of request.—Trial courts are not required to charge the jury in misdemeanor cases, except upon request of one or both sides of the cause; and even then they can be required only to give, with or without modification, or to refuse, such charges as are requested in writing. The refusal of special charges does not impose upon the court the duty of giving an independent charge. Sparks v. State, 23 Tex. App. 447, 5 S. W. 135.

In the absence of request, a written charge is unnecessary in a prosecution for a misdemeanor. Odom v. State, 82 Cr. R. 580, 200 S. W. 833.

In misdemeanor cases, omissions in the charge should be supplied by requested charges. Cross v. State, 85 Cr. R. 430, 213 S. W. 638.

A charge is not required in a misdemeanor case unless requested. Stroud v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 256.

Necessity of request to raise question on appeal.—Omissions in the charge in a misdemeanor case cannot be reviewed in the absence of the refusal of a request to correct them. Odom v. State, 82 Cr. R. 580, 200 S. W. 833.

In prosecutions for misdemeanor, errors in the charge, unless fundamental, must not only be excepted to, but special charges correctly presenting the matters complained of must be presented, and refusal excepted to and brought to the Court of Criminal Appeals by proper bills of exception. Simpson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 277, 220 S. W. 777.

A conviction of misdemeanor theft as principal, where the evidence showed guilt as accomplice, is not reversible where there was no exception to the charge for failure to define principals and no special instruction presented embodying such definition, though such conviction would be reversed if it were a felony. Berdell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 310, 220 S. W. 1101.

In a misdemeanor case, to warrant review, it was necessary that defendant take exception to an erroneous charge and ask a corrective charge. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

Art. 740. [720] No verbal charge, except, etc.

See Boattenhamer v. State, 84 Cr. R. 210, 206 S. W. 344.

Oral charges.—In murder trial, verbal instruction that jury must consider case solely on evidence, and disregard arguments not based thereon, was not error, in absence of request for written instruction. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, where the court, on retirement of jury, without request, no improper argument having been made or additional evidence given, verbally instructed them not to discuss the fact that defendant did not testify, nor to arrive at the verdict by chance, such instruction, being verbal, constituted reversible error, in view of arts. 735, 737a, 738, 740. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

Verbal communications of court with jurors touching the case on trial, after the retirement of the jury, should be attempted only upon rare occasions and impelled by soundest reasons, and an effort should be made to avoid impressing jury that court entertains any impression of the case which he wishes them to know. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

The scope of testimony cannot be controlled by verbal instructions, statute requiring charges to the jury to be written. Bloxom v. State, 86 Cr. R. 562, 218 S. W. 1068.

Art. 743. [723] Judgment not to be reversed unless error prejudicial, etc.

See Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292; Lowe v. State, 83 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986; Rosa v. State, 86 Cr. R. 646, 218 S. W. 1056.

II. HARMLESS ERROR

4. Decisions under former statute.—Code Crim. Proc. 1879, art. 685, which provides that a conviction in a criminal cause will be reversed for any erroneous instruction if excepted to at the time of the trial, applies only to instructions that are prejudicial to defendant, and not to those which are harmless, or beneficial to him. Green v. State, 32 Cr. R. 298, 22 S. W. 1094.

(A) Instructions Given

5. In general.—Error in an instruction in a case wherein accused was convicted required a reversal, where it was speculative as to what the verdict would have been under a correct instruction. Le Master v. State, 81 Cr. R. 577, 196 S. W. 829.

Error of the charge in reversing the rule as to burden of proof is emphasized by the fact that it is a case of circumstantial evidence, and that there was no charge on that phase of the law. Claunch v. State, 82 Cr. R. 114, 198 S. W. 307.

In proceeding under juvenile delinquent law, inaccurate charge as to time for which the delinquent might be committed, which was in defendant's favor, held to present no error. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 389.

In a prosecution for incest, error in permitting the jury to determine whether prosecutrix was an accomplice was necessarily prejudicial, where court instructed that, if the jury found her to be an accomplice, corroboration was necessary to sustain the conviction; there not being sufficient facts to comply with the law requiring corroboration. Bohannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 8, 204 S. W. 1165.

7. Errors in form.—In a prosecution for homicide committed on one who defendant claims he thought had maligned his sister, charge of the court substantially presenting the issues made by the record, though not as aptly framed as it might have been held harmless to defendant. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

8. Invited error.—In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant, a striker, killed a guard, defendant cannot complain that the main charge failed to treat his right to picket, etc., where his request dealing with the subject was given. Shrum v. State, 87 Cr. R. 486, 222 S. W. 575.

An instruction substantially the same as a special charge requested by defendant, if erroneous, was invited error. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

9. Clerical errors.—On trial in January, 1917, instruction giving date of alleged assault as June, 1917, instead of June, 1916, held not reversible error. Clayton v. State, 81 Cr. R. 385, 197 S. W. 591.

15. Inapplicability to evidence—Instruction not supported by evidence.—Limitation of right of self-defense by a charge on provoking the difficulty without evidence to justify it is prejudicial error. Burkhardt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 228, 202 S. W. 513; Faubian v. State, 83 Cr. R. 234, 203 S. W. 897; Carter v. State, 87 Cr. R. 200, 220 S. W. 335.

Even though a charge be not called for by the facts, there will be no reversal for giving it unless it appear that in some way harm might have resulted therefrom. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 786.

19. Errors harmless under the evidence.—In a prosecution for selling liquors in dry territory an instruction that conviction could be had upon proving sale to any one of the four named in the indictment, though error, was not ground for reversal, where the evidence clearly proved sale to all four. Price v. State, 83 Cr. R. 323, 202 S. W. 948.

In prosecution for receiving or concealing stolen goods, in absence of evidence that defendant's acquisition of property was for innocent purpose or under such circumstances as to raise doubt of his guilty intent, failure to insert "fraudulently" in portion of charge applying law to facts was not reversible error. Czernicki v. State, 85 Cr. R. 169, 211 S. W. 223.

In a prosecution for burglary, exceptions to a charge based upon the submission of want of consent of the occupant are not tenable, where it is affirmatively shown that the property was taken without consent. Carneal v. State, 86 Cr. R. 274, 216 S. W. 626.

In prosecution for a crime actually committed by another, the giving of an incorrect charge on the law of principals is not reversible error, if the unquestioned proof shows that accused was a principal under any phase of the statute defining principals, but mere proof that accused was present at time of commission of crime is not sufficient to render such charge harmless. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

Error in omitting from a charge that it was sufficient if the jury found the prosecutrix was the same person mentioned in the indictment, the restriction that the names should be idem sonans was not reversible error, where the names were idem sonans and the certainty of the person intended was clear. Davis v. State, 88 Cr. R. 7, 224 S. W. 510.

Testimony by defendant, which showed that he had arrested and disarmed deceased before the shooting, and that, after he forbade deceased to enter jail, where he might procure a pistol, deceased made a motion toward accused as if to attack him, does not show justification for killing deceased in self-defense, even if the arrest were lawful, so that error in instruction on the right of perfect self-defense was not prejudicial to accused; error, if any, being in defendant's favor. Rutland v. State, 88 Cr. R. 114, 224 S. W. 1088.

In a prosecution for homicide, where the evidence did not raise the issue of perfect self-defense and the instruction on manslaughter was not objected to, the failure of the court in his charge on threats to include the right to act on information of threats.

which were not in fact made, was not prejudicial to accused, and where a charge requested by him, which was given, contained the same omission. Id.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, where it conclusively appeared that the girl was under the then existing age of consent at the time of the alleged intercourse, instructions which were erroneous in applying the subsequent and increased age to the offense were harmless. Jackson v. State, 88 Cr. R. 225, 224 S. W. 1110.

In prosecution for bigamy involving the issue of whether defendant was married to alleged first wife, objections to court's charge in reference to common-law marriage held harmless, in view of sufficiency of evidence to prove a statutory marriage. Ahlberg v. State, 88 Cr. R. 173, 225 S. W. 253.

Where no phase of the law of self-defense was suggested by the facts, accused could not complain that the instruction upon self-defense as given applied to actual danger alone, and that the court failed, upon request, to embody the law of apparent danger. Surges v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1103.

In a prosecution for assault to rape, resulting in conviction of aggravated assault where there was testimony without contradiction that defendant placed his hands on prosecutrix's limbs without her consent, omission of the court to tell the jury that they must believe the assault was with an instrument or means which could inflict disgrace, within Pen. Code, art. 1022, subd. 6, held harmless to defendant; such an assault as defendant committed being uniformly held to be with such means and instrument. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

20. Error favorable to accused.—In prosecution for murder, where, if defendant's theory was believed, offense was manslaughter, instruction to acquit if theory was believed was erroneous in accused's favor, and no ground for reversal. Davis v. State, 81 Cr. R. 450, 196 S. W. 520.

In a homicide case wherein accused relied upon Pen. Code, art. 1132, subd. 4, and article 1133, reducing the offense to manslaughter when it happens on the first meeting after the use of insulting words to a female relation held not reversible error to give a general charge on manslaughter, and then call the jury's attention to insulting conduct as adequate cause; the charge being favorable to defendant. Bibb v. State, 86 Cr. R. 112, 215 S. W. 312.

In a prosecution for burglary, where the burglar was tracked to defendant's house and stolen property found therein, an instruction to acquit if the jury had a reasonable doubt whether the offense was committed by a relative living in defendant's house was favorable to defendant, since they might have acted jointly. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 587, 219 S. W. 835.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant struck deceased with a club and killed him, a paragraph of the main charge stating that the instrument should be considered in judging the intent of the party offending, and if it was one not likely to produce death it is not to be presumed that death was designed, was not objectionable on the theory that the court in that connection should have given Pen. Code art. 1149, it appearing that the court gave a special charge in which that article was copied, as well as other special charges that the instrument used, a piece of wood, was not per se a deadly weapon, and that, if the jury had a reasonable doubt whether defendant had the specific intent to kill, he should be convicted only of aggravated assault, unless acquitted on the ground of self-defense, the charges as a whole being sufficiently favorable to defendant, and in some particulars unduly favorable. Hoover v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 982.

23. — Submission of lesser offense.—In a prosecution for aggravated assault by an adult male upon a child, the submission of simple assault is favorable to accused, and he cannot complain thereof on appeal. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 414.

29. Effect of verdict.—In homicide prosecution, instruction authorizing conviction of aggravated assault when testimony raised self-defense and justification was harmless, where defendant was not convicted of aggravated assault. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

In a prosecution for maiming, the rejection by the jury of defendant's theory of self-defense did not cure the error committed in failing to charge as to the effect of communicated threats made by the injured party followed by an overt act at the time of the assault. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

30. — Conviction of lesser offense.—In prosecution for assault to commit rape, error in submitting the law of attempt to commit rape was harmless, where the jury acquitted accused of both offenses and convicted of aggravated assault. Miller v. State, 84 Cr. R. 168, 206 S. W. 524.

Exceptions to a charge on aggravated assault will not be considered, where the jury acquitted of that offense and convicted of simple assault. Mathis v. State, 84 Cr. R. 347, 206 S. W. 528.

In homicide prosecution alleged errors in charging as to what facts would reduce an unlawful killing from murder to manslaughter was harmless where defendant was convicted of manslaughter. Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959.

In homicide prosecution, court's error in limiting jury's consideration to what occurred on day of homicide upon question of whether there was sufficient cause to reduce the homicide to manslaughter was harmless, where defendant was convicted of only manslaughter and given the lowest punishment therefor. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

The fact that one charged with murder is found guilty of manslaughter does not show that the court erred in submitting the law of murder to the jury. Barnard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 365, 221 S. W. 293.

The jury having found defendant guilty only of manslaughter and assessed the lowest punishment, giving of instruction on murder was harmless. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 305, 221 S. W. 607.

Where accused was indicted for assault to murder, but was convicted only of an aggravated assault, he was acquitted of the charge of assault to murder, and cannot complain of the court's charge on that offense. Wheeler v. State, 87 Cr. R. 646, 224 S. W. 782.

Where defendant was convicted only of manslaughter, he cannot complain that the charge on manslaughter was too restrictive. Hoover v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 982.

Errors in charge as to matters relating to the law of murder and the law of manslaughter are immaterial on appeal, where defendant was convicted of manslaughter and her punishment fixed at the minimum allowed by statute. Shields v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 779.

31. — Punishment.—Although a charge was erroneous regarding recommendations for suspension of sentence, it was harmless where the sentence assessed was beyond the limit touched by art. 865d, relating to suspended sentences. Morris v. State, 82 Cr. R. 13, 198 S. W. 141.

An erroneous charge in a prosecution for manslaughter could not have been harmless, assuming defendant to be guilty of manslaughter, where the punishment assessed exceeded the minimum. Nalls v. State, 87 Cr. R. 83, 219 S. W. 473.

Where defendants' punishment was fixed at imprisonment for a term less than would under the old law have applied to murder in the first degree, the failure of the charge to define express malice which distinguishes murder in the first degree from that of the second is immaterial; the degrees in murder having been abolished. Pinkerton v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 827.

43. Cure by other instructions.—In a prosecution for manslaughter, instruction on manslaughter, if erroneous as on the weight of the evidence and assuming that defendant did the killing, a disputed issue was harmless, where the remainder of the charge plainly negated the fact inferred, and the error was not reversible, within this article. Mobley v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 531.

(B) Failure on Refusal to Give Instructions

44. In general.—See Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344; Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

Failure to instruct that defendant should be acquitted of unlawfully borrowing money from a state bank of which he was president, though his secret membership in a firm, unless the partnership existed as alleged, held fatal error where the evidence as to the existence of the partnership was conflicting. Le Master v. State, 81 Cr. R. 577, 196 S. W. 829.

Where alleged accomplice's testimony was merely cumulative, a reversal will not be had upon court's failure to instruct on subject of accomplice testimony. Fisher v. State, 81 Cr. R. 568, 197 S. W. 189.

In prosecution for engaging in business of unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, where evidence of reputation was admitted, error in failing to confine it to issue of suspended sentence was prejudicial. McGary v. State, 82 Cr. R. 54, 198 S. W. 574.

In a prosecution for unlawfully selling liquor, where the district attorney remarked that the evidence showed that defendant was "running a disorderly house, a place where you could take lewd women and drink beer," refusal to instruct the jury to disregard the argument, if error, held harmless where jury assessed lowest punishment. Le Gois v. State, 83 Cr. R. 460, 204 S. W. 320.

In homicide prosecution, court's failure to charge on assault to murder was harmless, where defendant was convicted of manslaughter, since jury by such conviction showed its disagreement with theory that there was malice aforethought, which is an essential element of assault to murder. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

Whenever the state's reliance is upon circumstantial evidence alone, it is incumbent upon the court to instruct as to the rules of circumstantial evidence, and such instruction is not discretionary. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 411, 213 S. W. 639.

In prosecution for having sold meat of hog that had died otherwise than by slaughter, refusal to instruct on law of accomplice testimony, single sale proved having been by testimony of one whom jury could find to have been an accomplice, held important enough to require reversal. Cozine v. State, 87 Cr. R. 92, 220 S. W. 102.

Where the court charged on manslaughter that if defendant was laboring under such a degree of anger, etc., as to render his mind incapable of cool reflection produced by any or all of the acts or words of deceased, or both, or by such words or acts in connection with all other facts and circumstances proved, and if such acts, words, and conduct alone or in connection with other facts and circumstances constituted adequate cause, etc., a requested charge on cooling time between a conversation and the killing would have been to defendant's disadvantage as limiting the scope of the inquiry permitted by the charge given. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

The exclusion of evidence of defendant's intoxication, admissible under Pen. Code, art. 41, in mitigation of punishment, and refusal to instruct thereon, was not harmless error. Haag v. State, 87 Cr. R. 604, 223 S. W. 472.

Where testimony of an accomplice is not favorable to the state, it is not error to fail or to refuse to charge on such testimony. Ealey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 648, 224 S. W. 771.

In the absence of matters in the record to the contrary, the presumption in favor of the correctness of the court's ruling in failing to charge on the law of accomplice testimony and circumstantial evidence prevails. Bolton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 326.

It cannot be said that failure of trial judge to charge on the law of accomplice's testimony was not calculated to injure rights of one convicted of the sale of intoxicating liquor under the Dean Prohibition Law, in that accused made a confession which was introduced in evidence; there being no evidence other than that of accomplices to show that there had been any sale of liquor, except the confession. Robert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 230.

In a prosecution for forgery, the refusal of a requested instruction that, if the defendant did not know the checks received from another and which he passed were forged, he would not be guilty, held not reversible error, where the proposition in a negative way was in substance embraced in the main charge, and where the refusal was not calculated to injure the defendant. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 329.

Unless it affirmatively appears in the bill of exceptions that carrying of a pistol by defendant charged with murder was for a purpose or under circumstances permitted by law, the presumption in the Court of Criminal Appeals would be in favor of the correctness of the ruling of the trial court in refusing a charge that defendant had a right to carry the pistol. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 532.

In a prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, the testimony of the purchaser, an accomplice, being essential to sustain the state's case, error in refusing defendant's requested charge defining an accomplice and instructing that the purchaser was such, and that his testimony uncorroborated could not form the basis of conviction, requires reversal of judgment of conviction. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1002.

III. OBJECTIONS AND EXCEPTIONS

Decisions prior to act of 1897

45. Necessity of exception.—An alleged error in refusing a special charge will not be reviewed in the absence of a bill of exceptions. Screws v. State (Cr. App.) 23 S. W. 796.

(C) Decisions under Act of 1913

61. Applicability of act.—Acts 35th Leg. c. 177 (Civ. St., art. 1974), does not amend procedure in criminal cases which is embodied in Acts 33d Leg. c. 138 (Code Cr. Proc. 1916, arts. 735, 737, 737a, 743). Barrios v. State, 33 Cr. R. 548, 204 S. W. 326.

On appeal in a criminal case, to authorize the consideration of objections to the charge, or the refusal of special charges, the record must disclose that the requirements of arts. 735, 737, 737a, and 743, providing for presentation of charges to the court, were fulfilled. Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 217, 216 S. W. 172.

62. Objections and exceptions.—A bill of exceptions is necessary to enable the appellate court to review objections to the charge. Bird v. State, 84 Cr. R. 285, 206 S. W. 844; Wallace v. State (Cr. App.) 200 S. W. 1088; Spohn v. State, 33 Cr. R. 219, 202 S. W. 732; Richardson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 38, 204 S. W. 638; Nicolatte v. State, 85 Cr. R. 245, 211 S. W. 456; Thompson v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 224.

A charge not fundamentally defective will not be considered on appeal, where no exception was taken, and it was attacked for first time in motion for new trial. Wright v. State, 83 Cr. R. 559, 204 S. W. 767; Grissom v. State, 87 Cr. R. 465, 222 S. W. 237; Tamaya v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 146; Boaz v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 790.

Objections to charge in court below were necessary for review on appeal. Davis v. State, 81 Cr. R. 450, 196 S. W. 520.

Where complaints of charge and refusals of requests are not covered by bills of exceptions, and, in absence of statement of facts, charge is applicable to state of facts that may have arisen under evidence, as set forth in allegations and indictment, conviction will be affirmed. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 538, 196 S. W. 952.

Where evidence as to insanity was very meager in prosecution for assault with intent to murder, and no exception was taken to omission to charge on that phase of case, there was no reversible error. Parsons v. State, 81 Cr. R. 654, 197 S. W. 997.

In prosecution for cow theft, punishment prescribed by Pen. Code, art. 1354, being imprisonment for not more than four years, court's charge, unobjected to on trial, authorizing imprisonment for not more than five years, held not reversible error. Grider v. State, 82 Cr. R. 124, 198 S. W. 579.

Objection that there was a conflict in the instructions held not available where no bill of exceptions was taken. Hamilton v. State, 82 Cr. R. 544, 200 S. W. 155.

In prosecution for wife's desertion, where husband claims wife had another husband living, evidence being conflicting, it was affirmative error to charge that presumption of death after seven years' absence was absolute, and exception to such charge was reviewable, although no bill of exceptions was reserved to refusal of special correcting charge. Barrios v. State, 83 Cr. R. 548, 204 S. W. 326.

It is error of a fundamental nature to authorize a conviction for any other offense than that charged, whether there was an exception reserved or not to the action of the court in so charging. Moore v. State, 84 Cr. R. 256, 206 S. W. 683.

Submitting the issue of manslaughter in a homicide case, although not warranted by the facts, is not error of which appellant can complain in the absence of an exception to the charge. Love v. State, 85 Cr. R. 30, 209 S. W. 660.

Failure to charge on aggravated assault in a prosecution for assault to murder is not reversible error, in the absence of requested instructions or exceptions. Patten v. State, 84 Cr. R. 534, 209 S. W. 664.

Lack of timely exception to failure to charge law of accomplice testimony does not prevent reversal for failure of evidence to corroborate accomplices, a point which can be raised whether charge was given or not. Pitts v. State, 85 Cr. R. 14, 210 S. W. 199.

Witnesses who procured the sale of whisky to a soldier to secure evidence against defendant are not accomplices as a matter of law, and the necessity for corroboration of their testimony cannot be considered on appeal, in the absence of a requested charge or exception to the charge given; the error not being fundamental. Huggins v. State, 85 Cr. R. 205, 210 S. W. 804.

Failure to charge on circumstantial evidence is not reversible error, where no objection is taken to the court's charge, nor a special instruction presented. Charles v. State, 85 Cr. R. 534, 213 S. W. 266.

In a prosecution for homicide, where no exception was taken by defendant to a charge on his right to seek deceased in a peaceable manner to require an explanation of his drilling on land claimed to be in defendant's possession and to arm himself, no error was presented. Barklay v. State, 85 Cr. R. 512, 213 S. W. 642.

In a prosecution for cutting fences, misdirection of the jury as to the punishment to be awarded, resulting in infliction of a penalty of two years, greater than the minimum of one year fixed by law, held fundamental error, reviewable despite the absence of proper exception to the charge. Flores v. State, 86 Cr. R. 235, 216 S. W. 170.

Where there was no exception to the court's charge, a claim of failure to submit the proposition, in a homicide case, in reference to self-defense, that the occurrence must be viewed from defendants' standpoint, cannot be considered on appeal. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175.

In a prosecution for attempting to pass a forged instrument, any error of the court in charging the jury that the testimony of a witness upon whom defendant also attempted to pass the forged instrument was admitted before them only for what they might consider it to be worth upon the issue of the fraudulent intent of defendant, if erroneous by reason of being upon the weight of the evidence, was not so fundamental as to require the court to reverse, in the absence of an exception. Johnson v. State, 88 Cr. R. 136, 224 S. W. 1103.

Where not a single bill of exceptions was reserved by defendant to the court's failure to instruct the jury that certain witnesses were accomplices, the Court of Criminal Appeals is forced to conclude that the refusal of such charges was acceptable to defendant as was the refusal of the court to correct his main charge. Berlew v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 518.

Failure of the court to limit in his main charge testimony offered by accused to impeach a state witness, if such a limitation were proper, was not error, where such main charge was not excepted to, and no special charge was asked presenting the issue. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

Failure to charge as to accomplice testimony is not reversible error, unless there is an exception to the instructions given for such failure, or there is a refusal of a special charge submitting such issue, and the matter cannot be raised upon motion for new trial or appeal for the first time. Joiner v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 333.

The court cannot, on appeal from a conviction of homicide, review the trial court's charge on threats of which no complaint was made. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 847.

63. — Requests.—An omission to charge is not subject to review in the absence of exception or proffered special charge at the time of trial. Merka v. State, 82 Cr. R. 550, 199 S. W. 1123.

In prosecution for murder with a weapon not per se deadly, failure to charge that intent to kill could not be presumed from the use of the weapon was an omission not reviewable in the absence of specific exception or of request for and refusal of the charge. Lowe v. State, 83 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986.

In misdemeanor case, refusal of requested charge on circumstantial evidence cannot be reviewed, where there was no exception to given charge for omission to charge on circumstantial evidence. Berry v. State, 83 Cr. R. 210, 203 S. W. 901.

Special charges refused, and not brought up for review by bills of exceptions, cannot be considered. Barrios v. State, 83 Cr. R. 548, 204 S. W. 326.

In absence of bill of exceptions reserved to failure to give charge not showing from contents or anything connected with it whether it was presented to court before or after main charge or after case was concluded, Court of Criminal Appeals cannot consider action of trial court. Farris v. State, 85 Cr. R. 86, 209 S. W. 665.

Refusal of requested instructions must be presented to appellate court for review by bill of exceptions. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560.

In a prosecution for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor, where no exception was taken to the action of the trial court in failing to charge as to accomplices, and no special charge was asked presenting such issue, such failure was not reversible error. Byrd v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 399.

64. Time for objections and exceptions.—See art. 735, note 87.

Under the statute the court's charge must be excepted to in due time, so that the supposed errors which are pointed out may be corrected and the cost and delays of appeal lessened, and failure to do so except in due time cures all errors in the charge not fundamental. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

65. — Motion for new trial.—The charge and judgment showing that, before receiving the plea of guilty, on which defendant was convicted, he was admonished of the consequences of his plea, as required by art. 565, and defendant having merely filed a motion for new trial, alleging the judgment and verdict were contrary to the law and evidence, there is nothing to review. Kimball v. State, 84 Cr. R. 161, 205 S. W. 989.

Where no instruction was asked, and no exception to the failure of the trial court to charge the law of accomplice testimony was taken, except in the motion for new trial, it came too late under the statute. Pitts v. State, 85 Cr. R. 14, 210 S. W. 199.

Where no exceptions were taken to the charge, and there were no bills of exception to the introduction of any evidence, questions raised by the motion for new trial, presenting error in the charge or the reception of evidence, cannot be reviewed. Tamaya v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 146.

66. Sufficiency of objections and exceptions.—Where it does not appear from defendant's requested special charge, or from the bill of exceptions taken to its refusal, whether it was presented or refused before or subsequent to reading of charge to jury, Court of Criminal Appeals cannot consider the matter. Alsup v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195; Lee v. State, 83 Cr. R. 532, 204 S. W. 110; Payne v. State, 84 Cr. R. 2, 204 S. W. 765; Green v. State, 84 Cr. R. 162, 205 S. W. 988.

It is essential that a bill of exceptions specifically show testimony of witness claimed to be an accomplice, upon which subject a requested instruction was refused. Fisher v. State, 81 Cr. R. 568, 197 S. W. 189.

In prosecution for assault with intent to murder, objection that court failed to charge Pen. Code, arts. 1147, 1149, as to means used and influence of sudden passion, held sufficient to present question of sufficiency of charge given. Garrett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 64, 198 S. W. 308.

Bill of exceptions complaining of court's charge presents nothing for review, where there was no statement of facts showing evidence upon which charge was based. Pritchard v. State, 82 Cr. R. 219, 199 S. W. 292.

Objection that instruction on principals conflicted with charge on alibi held not available where only objection was that no charge on principals was authorized. Hamilton v. State, 82 Cr. R. 544, 200 S. W. 155.

Bill of exceptions to giving instruction that if defendant did not voluntarily make confession, or if the jury had reasonable doubt whether he made it voluntarily, it could not be considered, as qualified by the court "that no exception was made to this charge at the time, and no special charge was asked, and the charge is all right anyhow," shows no error. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

Mention of failure to charge on manslaughter contained in the brief, but not in the bill of exceptions and reference thereto in the objections to court's charge was too general to be considered. Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381.

Bills of exception, merely stating that defendant asked certain charges, which were refused not showing by charges or bill why they should have been given, and not stating any evidence to show that charges were applicable to evidence, were indefinite. Lee v. State, 83 Cr. R. 532, 204 S. W. 110.

The objection to the court's charge for failure to submit the issue of manslaughter, "because the issue was properly raised by the testimony adduced on the trial," is too general to present any error. Thomas v. State, 84 Cr. R. 330, 206 S. W. 846.

Exceptions to court's charge held sufficient to require consideration, on appeal, of whether court erred in charging on possession of recently stolen property and consequent explanation where only issue was ownership of the property. Cannon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 504, 208 S. W. 339.

In the absence of any statement of the grounds upon which defendant regarded his requested charge applicable, embraced within the exception to its refusal or the motion for new trial, the matter is not so presented as to demand attention on appeal. Vaughn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 483, 208 S. W. 527.

Exception of appellant from conviction of cattle theft to paragraph of charge complained of as assuming that appellant was guilty, if accomplice testimony was true, held sufficiently specific in pointing out error complained of. Standfield v. State, 84 Cr. R. 437, 208 S. W. 532.

An exception to the charge because paragraph 4 was on the weight of the evidence is too general to be reviewed. Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, an exception to the court's refusal to charge, as requested, that the jury might acquit if they believed the animal stolen to be the property of defendant or one of his family, or if defendant believed himself or a member of his family the owner, held sufficient to call the court's attention to the error. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

A bill of exception complaining of refusal of court to give certain special charges will not be considered, where it fails to show whether charges were asked before argument began, or after it ended, or at what step of proceeding. Taylor v. State, 85 Cr. R. 101, 210 S. W. 539.

The ground of exception that the court did not allow defendant sufficient time to review a charge after it was written and before being read to the jury, reciting that the charge was handed to defendant's counsel at 11 o'clock in the evening, and that they were given until 8:45 the next morning to examine it, held insufficient, as too general. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

The appellate court will not search the entire record, to ascertain if a bill of exceptions is well founded, and a bill to the court's charge, stating no grounds of exception and no facts, is insufficient. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

Where the various exceptions of defendant to the court's charge, certified as a bill of exceptions, showing presentation and action upon them in due time, are in separate paragraphs, each paragraph being specific and complying with statute, the fact that all are contained in one paper, the subdivisions being segregated and numbered, each sufficient to advise the trial court and the Court of Criminal Appeals of the complaint directed at the charge and the refusal of a special charge, does not vitiate the exception nor warrant the court in ignoring it. Clark v. State, 86 Cr. R. 585, 218 S. W. 366.

Exceptions to failure to charge on alibi cannot avail; the bill not showing the evidence required such charge, and there being no authenticated statement of facts. Pilgrim v. State, 87 Cr. R. 6, 219 S. W. 451.

Exception to court's charge on self-defense that "because said charge fails to instruct the jury fully and as they should be instructed, with reference to the law on self-defense, the evidence in said cause adduced before the jury having shown that the issue of self-defense is the principal issue in said case," held too general for consideration on appeal. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

Where objections are taken to the charge before being read to the jury, they must be verified in some way so as to inform the appellate court that such procedure actually occurred, and the fact that the caption of a paper purporting to contain such exceptions recites that it contains the objections presented before the charge was read is not a verification of the trial court of the fact of such presentation, and unless there be some such verification apparent on the paper, or by the bill of exceptions as the law directs, the appellate court cannot consider them. Gibson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 538.

Where record contains what purports to be exceptions to the court's charge, but the same are marked by the trial court "Overruled," and there does not appear anywhere a showing that such objections were properly presented to the trial court before he read his charge to the jury, they cannot be considered. Gibbs v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1107.

Though the bill of exceptions stated that defendant excepted at trial to a portion of the charge, yet, as it nowhere appeared in the record that the exception was presented in writing or that an objection was made in writing, objections to the charge cannot be reviewed; for, when exceptions are taken to the charge before being read to the jury, they must be verified in some way as to inform the appellate court such procedure actually occurred. Castleberry v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 216.

67. Misdemeanors.—In misdemeanor cases main charge, if erroneous, must be excepted in order to get a review of an accurate special charge presented and refused. Pickerell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 68, 198 S. W. 303.

In prosecutions for misdemeanor, errors in the charge, unless fundamental, must be brought to the Court of Criminal Appeals by proper bills of exception. Simpson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 277, 220 S. W. 777.

Art. 744. [724] Bill of exceptions.

See Rust v. State, 31 Cr. R. 75, 19 S. W. 763.

1. Rulings which may be made subject of bill of exceptions.—A bill of exceptions to the trial court's action in modifying a bill prepared by accused is permissible if it clearly presents the original bill, the trial court's objectionable action, and reasons why deemed objectionable, and was presented to, and approved by the trial court or by bystanders cognizant of the facts. Kilpatrick v. State, 85 Cr. R. 172, 211 S. W. 230.

Where, after disposition of the case and overruling of motion for new trial, the trial judge inserted in the record affidavits of absent witnesses without reopening the case or notifying defendant, such affidavits being inserted by so-called bills of exception, they may not be considered by the appellate court. Bosley v. State, 86 Cr. R. 619, 218 S. W. 750.

2. Necessity of bill of exceptions.—Where there is neither a statement of facts nor bill of exceptions and nothing presented which can be reviewed in the absence of these, a conviction will be affirmed. Newton v. State (Cr. App.) 199 S. W. 467; Wallace v. State (Cr. App.) 197 S. W. 869; Moye v. State (Cr. App.) 198 S. W. 961; Oliver v. State (Cr. App.) 199 S. W. 466; Casey v. State (Cr. App.) 203 S. W. 901; Sweeney v. State, 84 Cr. R. 58, 205 S. W. 335; Linthecum v. State, 85 Cr. R. 247, 211 S. W. 456; Wall v. State (Cr. App.) 215 S. W. 300; Bradley v. State (Cr. App.) 221 S. W. 1086; Ramirez v. State (Cr. App.) 222 S. W. 1106; Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 515 (three cases); Petty v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1098; Dyer v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 326; Franklin v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 392; Perkins v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 821.

W. 207; Hamilton v. State (Cr. App.) 198 S. W. 291; Rodgers v. State, 82 Cr. R. 143, 198 S. W. 574; Martinez v. State, 82 Cr. R. 404, 199 S. W. 629; Burkhardt v. State (Cr. App.) 200 S. W. 840; Price v. State, 83 Cr. R. 300, 202 S. W. 948; Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 204 S. W. 334; Amason v. State (Cr. App.) 208 S. W. 917; Meyer v. State, 85 Cr. R. 168, 212 S. W. 504; Dixon v. State, 86 Cr. R. 406, 216 S. W. 1097; White v. State, 86 Cr. R. 420, 217 S. W. 389; Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 213, 220 S. W. 326; Eddleman v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 421; Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 1096.

W. 192; Lucas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 144, 215 S. W. 299; Dixon v. State, 86 Cr. R. 406, 216 S. W. 1097; Tamaya v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 146.

Accused held entitled to reversal of conviction for petty theft, where without his fault he was deprived of a statement of facts and bills of exception. Ward v. State, 82 Cr. R. 386, 200 S. W. 378.

It is only through bills of exception, and the statement of facts when new trial is refused, that the court is apprised of occurrences at the trial, and, in view of art. 938, court can consider as ground for reversal only matters presented for review as so required. Anselmo v. State, 82 Cr. R. 595, 200 S. W. 523.

In absence of a bill of exceptions, no alleged errors in the admission or rejection of evidence, the charge, or the argument of the counsel can be reviewed. Odom v. State, 82 Cr. R. 580, 200 S. W. 833.

The assignments of error in a criminal prosecution should be brought up by bills of exception, verified by the trial court or proved up by bystanders. Perez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 184, 206 S. W. 192.

A record which does not contain a statement of facts or bill of exceptions cannot be considered on appeal. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 213 S. W. 671.

In the absence of bills of exceptions and statement of facts, the Court of Criminal Appeals must presume the rulings of the trial court on the admission and exclusion of evidence to have been correct. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 411.

Where defendant charged with unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor pleaded guilty, and his punishment was fixed at the minimum penalty for such offense, the Court of Criminal Appeals will not consider his appeal, in absence of statement of facts or bills of exceptions, but will affirm the judgment. Armstrong v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 322.

Where the record contains no statement of facts, and the only bills of exceptions appearing are not signed or approved, and an examination of the indictment and charges show no error, and there is no error complained of in the motion for new trial which can be considered in the condition of the record, the judgment must be affirmed. Marshall v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1103.

Where there is no statement of facts or bills of exceptions in the record, the evidence will be presumed to have been sufficient to authorize the verdict of conviction. Sessums v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 224.

Neither motion for new trial, statement of facts, nor bills of exceptions are necessary to give jurisdiction of appeal from conviction for robbery. Connell v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 502.

On appeal in a criminal case, objections are considered only as made and shown by the bill of exceptions. Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 509.

5. — Denial of continuance.—Refusal of continuance will not be reviewed in absence of bill of exceptions. Lewis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 159, 202 S. W. 86; Spurlock v. State, 81 Cr. R. 626, 197 S. There was no error shown in refusal of continuance because of the absence of an alibi witness for whom no process had issued, where no bill of exceptions was reserved to the overruling of the application. Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 261, 216 S. W. 183.

Where no bill of exceptions was reserved complaining of the overruling of a motion for continuance, and disclosing the reasons upon which the action was based, the question cannot be reviewed. Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380.

6. — Proof of venue.—See notes to art. 938.

Although under art. 938, question of venue of crime shall not be considered unless it became question on trial, and is brought up by bill of exceptions, where venue was one of contested issues and remained a part and parcel of main trial, it is not necessary to reserve bill of exceptions. Phillips v. State, 83 Cr. R. 16, 200 S. W. 1091.

7. — Rulings and objections respecting jurors.—Affidavit to the effect that defendant, a Mexican in locality where there were many qualified Mexicans, was tried and indicted only by Americans in violation of Const. U. S. Amends. 14 and 15, in absence of any showing in the record that it was presented to court or that evidence was received, cannot be noticed on appeal. Carillo v. State, 81 Cr. R. 636, 197 S. W. 998.

Where there was a motion to quash the venire on the grounds that a jury commissioner was not a freeholder in the county and that the commissioners were not residents of different portions of the county, and there is no statement of facts or bills of exception, and no exception was reserved, and the grounds are not verified or established by evidence, so far as shown by the record, conviction will be affirmed. Bowen v. State, 87 Cr. R. 657, 224 S. W. 776.

9. — Rulings respecting indictment, information or complaint.—In a prosecution for swindling through obtaining drafts by false pretenses, the fact that the mortgage given by defendant to the injured party mentioned a note as secured by the mortgage, which note was described as due November 20, 1920, while the indictment, after setting out the mortgage, further alleged that defendant executed a note, also set out in the indictment, the due date of which was November 20, 1919, held not fundamental error. Escue v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 483.

10. — Conduct of trial in general.—Matters relating to manner of trial, including those pertaining to selection of jury or argument of counsel, are not reversible on appeal, unless verified by bill of exceptions, though defendant was without counsel in court below. Odom v. State, 82 Cr. R. 580, 200 S. W. 833; Harper v. State, 86 Cr. R. 446, 217 S. W. 703; Jones v. State, 88 Cr. R. 30, 224 S. W. 888.

In the absence of bill of exceptions it will be presumed that there were no irregularities in the trial. Wims v. State, 85 Cr. R. 657, 215 S. W. 304; Stroud v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 256; Connell v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 502.

12. — Misconduct of prosecuting attorney.—Alleged improper argument of state's counsel, not verified by bill of exceptions or certified by the trial judge, cannot be reviewed. Hunt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 7, 200 S. W. 1090; Shields v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 779.

14. — Misconduct of jury.—To review question of misconduct of jury in hearing evidence from one or more of the jurors not introduced during trial, set up as ground for new trial, it is necessary that such evidence as was introduced should be perpetuated either in statement of facts or a bill of exceptions, reciting facts, approved by judge and filed during term. Lopez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 422, 208 S. W. 167.

Complaints of misconduct of the jury, which are not supported in the record by bills of exception setting forth such matters, cannot be considered on appeal. Shields v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 779.

15. — Rulings on evidence.—Rulings on evidence cannot be reviewed in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts. Spurlock v. State, 81 Cr. R. 626, 197 S. W. 873; Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292; Pritchard v. State, 82 Cr. R. 219, 199 S. W. 292; Farris v. State, 85 Cr. R. 86, 209 S. W. 665; Surginer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 438, 217 S. W. 145; Wallace v. State, 87 Cr. R. 527, 222 S. W. 1104; Holloway v. State, 88 Cr. R. 126, 224 S. W. 1102.

Questions and answers set out in motion for new trial and not verified by the trial court held not reviewable without a statement of facts or bill of exceptions. Ramirez v. State, 81 Cr. R. 367, 195 S. W. 599.

Introduction of testimony charged to have been illegal are matters which could be brought before Court of Appeals only by bill of exceptions. Daumery v. State, 82 Cr. R. 231, 199 S. W. 291.

An objection to a question to a defendant on cross-examination as to whether he had not broken jail and ran away that he was in jail for robbing a party other than the one he was being tried for robbing was a mere statement of the ground of objection, and should have been verified. Hicks v. State, 82 Cr. R. 254, 199 S. W. 487.

That the merits of admission of evidence of another crime may be reviewed, the state of the evidence affecting its admissibility must be shown by statement of facts or bill of exceptions. Lozano v. State, 83 Cr. R. 597, 204 S. W. 323.

In prosecution for murder, defended on ground of insulting conduct to accused's wife, where witness testified that the wife had secured a divorce, objection to such evidence in that it was in a county other than that of her residence, so that the divorce would have been invalid, not verified as required, was insufficient. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 131, 205 S. W. 943.

Where there is no evidence in the record and no bill of exceptions reserved in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, the appellate court cannot review the proposition that the verdict of the jury was contrary to law and the evidence, in that the court erred in permitting a witness to state that defendant, previous to the assault, had cut his wife. Johnson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 474, 208 S. W. 520.

Where the fact that a witness was permitted to state what defendant told him while under arrest was set forth only in defendant's motion for new trial, and no bill of exceptions was preserved in regard thereto, it cannot be considered on appeal. Drawhorn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 600, 209 S. W. 415.

If defendant desired to object to introduction of testimony, it was his duty to have excepted to such action, and to have embodied exception in bill approved and filed within 30 days after adjournment of court, or else to have brought before Court of Criminal Appeals, in a legal way, some sufficient excuse. Farris v. State, 85 Cr. R. 86, 209 S. W. 665.

One dissatisfied with the rulings of the court in a criminal case as to the receipt or rejection of evidence must, to obtain review, bring the matter before the Court of Criminal Appeals in a bill of exceptions, certified in the manner provided by law, and it is not sufficient to complain of the court's rulings on motion for new trial. Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 217, 216 S. W. 172.

Necessity for bill of exceptions, to action of trial court in admitting evidence, as a predicate for review, exists though examination of record on appeal shows that on proper objection reception of testimony would have been error; there being a presumption that matters not complained of in a bill of exceptions are waived unless fundamental error. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 213, 220 S. W. 326.

In prosecution of defendant indicted as an accomplice, where declarations of principal are admitted to prove principal's guilt as a part of the case against defendant, an objection to the use of such evidence to prove defendant guilty must be brought to appellate court by exception and bill. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

In prosecution of defendant indicted as an accomplice, where declarations of principal are admitted to prove principal's guilt as a part of the case against defendant, an objection to the use of such evidence to prove defendant guilty must be properly raised and presented to the trial court. Id.

A complaint that the court committed error in admitting statement of accused made while he was under arrest was too indefinitely presented for consideration, where the testimony was not specified nor the circumstances attending its admission stated, and record failed to disclose that accused presented a bill of exceptions to the court's ruling in admitting the testimony. Holland v. State, 88 Cr. R. 46, 224 S. W. 1088.

Complaint that accused was compelled to answer questions on certain subject cannot be considered on appeal, where the questions are not set out in the bill of exceptions. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

Appellate court cannot review a contention that state on cross-examination of wife of one of the defendants went farther than the direct examination would permit, where such matter is not brought forward by bills of exception; such matters not being fundamental error that may be raised at any time or in any way. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 176.

There being legal evidence adduced on trial sufficient to sustain the conviction appealed from, the Court of Criminal Appeals would not be authorized to overturn the judgment, even though it found hearsay testimony in the record, in the absence of a bill of exceptions complaining of the court's ruling in admitting it. Crisp v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 392.

16. — Verdict contrary to law and evidence.—In absence of a statement of facts or bill of exceptions containing the testimony, appellate court cannot pass upon the complaint in the motion for new trial that the judgment is contrary to the law and the evidence. Garcia v. State (Cr. App.) 217 S. W. 943; Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 203 S. W. 767; Green v. State, 84 Cr. R. 485, 208 S. W. 514; Christopher v. State (Cr. App.) 210 S. W. 799; Starnes v. State, 86 Cr. R. 145, 215 S. W. 302; Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 217 S. W. 939; Jones v. State, 88 Cr. R. 30, 224 S. W. 888; Stroud v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 256.

Motion for new trial having raised questions of insufficiency of evidence and refusal of instructions, there is nothing to review, where evidence is not in record and no bill of exceptions was reserved. Ramsey v. State (Cr. App.) 197 S. W. 869.

Where the record on appeal from conviction of burglary is without bill of exceptions or exceptions to the charge of court, the court is limited to the question made by the motion for new trial, that the evidence is insufficient. Richardson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 38, 204 S. W. 638.

Where there are no bills of exceptions complaining of any action of the trial court, its officers or the jury that rendered the verdict, or any statement of facts embodying the evidence, it will be presumed that proceedings in homicide case were regular, and that evidence justified a conviction and sentence of death assessed. Jones v. State, 84 Cr. R. 471, 208 S. W. 523.

16½. — Defective verdict.—This article does not, in view of art. 773, making it the duty of the jury to refuse to receive a defective verdict, make failure to object to a defective verdict a waiver of such defect. Moore v. State, 83 Cr. R. 302, 203 S. W. 51.

The objection that the verdict does not support the judgment is fundamental in view of art. 837, subd. 9, and article 853, and can be raised for first time on appeal without bill of exceptions. Id.

19. — Evidence heard and proceedings had on motion for new trial.—Where defendant's motion for new trial was overruled after hearing the evidence thereon, and such evidence was not presented by any bill of exceptions, error in the court's action was not shown. Drawhorn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 600, 209 S. W. 415; Epperson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 245, 199 S. W. 478; Lewis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 285, 199 S. W. 1091; Pace v. State, 83 Cr. R. 368, 203 S. W. 595; Glascocoe v. State, 85 Cr. R. 234, 210 S. W. 956; Ross v. State, 85 Cr. R. 340, 212 S. W. 167; Salazar v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 528; Payne v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 802; Cone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 816.

In absence of bill of exceptions, grounds of motion for new trial cannot be considered. Spohn v. State, 83 Cr. R. 219, 202 S. W. 732; Spurlock v. State, 81 Cr. R. 626, 197 S. W. 873; Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014; Young v. State (Cr. App.) 202 S. W. 509; Brown v. State (Cr. App.) 219 S. W. 825.

Evidence heard on any motion of accused will not be considered unless preserved either by bill of exceptions or a statement of facts approved and filed during term time. Reyes v. State, 81 Cr. R. 588, 196 S. W. 532.

Where there is nothing in motion for new trial that can be considered in absence of facts and bills of exception, the judgment will be affirmed. Avery v. State, 83 Cr. R. 80, 200 S. W. 832.

Matters of fact set up in motion for new trial which are not verified by bill of exceptions or statement of evidence filed during term cannot be reviewed. Odom v. State, 82 Cr. R. 580, 200 S. W. 833.

That bill of exceptions is reserved to overruling of motion for new trial and embodies the motion does not authorize court to consider matters thereunder, except in cases where proof is heard as to allegations of fact, and such evidence is embodied in bill of exceptions with motion for new trial. Id.

Where evidence on hearing of motion for new trial was not preserved by bill of exceptions or statement of facts, it must be assumed that conclusions of trial judge that facts aliunde the record set up in motion were not sustained by evidence were correct. Berry v. State, 83 Cr. R. 210, 203 S. W. 901.

Court of Criminal Appeals is not in position to pass on correctness of ruling of trial court in denying defendant's motion for new trial based in part on newly discovered evidence, where evidence which influenced action of court is not preserved by bill of exceptions or statement of facts; presumption being that, if affidavits attached to motion were used in evidence, they were met by controverting facts supporting court's action. Mitchell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 25, 209 S. W. 743.

Where evidence heard upon motion for new trial is not presented by statement of facts or bill of exceptions filed during the term, but it appears the court heard evidence in overruling the motion, the presumption is indulged on appeal that the facts heard justified the conclusion reached. Slade v. State, 85 Cr. R. 358, 212 S. W. 661.

20. Substitutes for bill of exceptions.—Arts. 744, 844, and other statutes providing the requisites of bills of exceptions and statements of facts, constitute the statutory means in criminal cases for bringing questions before the appellate court for review, and a motion for a new trial is unnecessary, except as to questions not raised by bills of exceptions or statement of facts. Sessions v. State, 81 Cr. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

This court cannot refer to statements of facts to supply omissions of fact in bills of exception. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 153, 198 S. W. 298.

Although appellant on motion for new trial complained of overruling of his motion for continuance, where he took no bill to court's action, the ruling cannot be reviewed. Morse v. State, 83 Cr. R. 153, 201 S. W. 1158.

A bill of exceptions reserved to action of court in overruling motion for new trial setting out an application for a continuance does not add any strength to it, where there was no exception to the overruling of the application. Mason v. State, 83 Cr. R. 528, 204 S. W. 331.

A purported transcript of what occurred on the trial as shown by the stenographer's notes and certified to by the stenographer, but not presented to or approved by the judge, cannot be considered; since to constitute a bill of exceptions it must be first approved by the court certifying its correctness, and must be filed, either in term time or within such time as may be authorized by law. Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 231, 216 S. W. 173.

On appeal from a conviction of manslaughter, the reversal of the judgment on the ground that evidence of corrupt acts of defendant's relatives, who were not witnesses, was improperly admitted, held not objectionable as a decision on deductions from matters appearing from the statement of facts, and not the bills of exceptions, and so the decision was not open to attack on the ground that it violated this article. Nader v. State, 86 Cr. R. 424, 219 S. W. 474.

A bill of exceptions to overruling of a motion for new trial will not suffice to bring up for review trial proceedings to which exceptions should have been taken at time of their occurrence. Watson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 189, 220 S. W. 329.

A bill of exceptions is necessary to a review of court's refusal to grant a motion for a continuance, and a recital of exception taken in the order overruling such motion will not take the place of a bill of exceptions. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

A motion for new trial will not take the place of a bill of exceptions. Holloway v. State, 88 Cr. R. 126, 224 S. W. 1102.

Overruling of an application for continuance, not perpetuated by bill of exceptions, cannot be considered further than as shown by a motion for a new trial and state's controversion. Pruitt v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 525.

Questions presented in an amended motion for new trial, after conviction of forgery, referring to bills of exceptions as having been taken during the trial, cannot be reviewed, where the record does not contain the bills of exception. Begonia v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

Matters appearing in motion for new trial not presented by bills of exceptions will not be considered on appeal. Reid v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 408.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, though a bill of exceptions to certain testimony elicited by the state from a defense witness on cross-examination was insufficient, and failed to state the facts and circumstances surrounding the giving of the evidence, the Court of Criminal Appeals properly looked to the statement of facts to further investigate the matter. Mobley v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 531.

21. Form, requisites, and sufficiency of bill.—A bill of exceptions must be complete within itself, and exhibit such facts as will show the error complained of. Rippey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463; Vann v. State, 84 Cr. R. 97, 206 S. W. 80; Venn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 158, 210 S. W. 535; Clark v. State, 85 Cr. R. 153, 210 S. W. 544; Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 359; Plummer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 487, 218 S. W. 499; Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Where bill of exception does not show evidence on which court overruled motion for new trial, the evidence will be presumed, on appeal, to have been sufficient to have sustained such ruling. Mills v. State, 83 Cr. R. 515, 204 S. W. 642; Green v. State, 84 Cr. R. 162, 205 S. W. 988.

A bill of exceptions held too uncertain and vague for consideration. McCoy v. State, 81 Cr. R. 518, 196 S. W. 543.

Where record contains no statement of facts proved and no evidence, and bills of exception and grounds for motion for new trial cannot be intelligently revised, conviction will be affirmed. Burrage v. State, 81 Cr. R. 638, 197 S. W. 997.

Where the bill of exceptions showed that testimony was heard in passing on a motion for new trial for misconduct of the jury, but the record did not set it out, the denial of new trial will not be reviewed. Martin v. State, 82 Cr. R. 269, 198 S. W. 149.

This court cannot presume that objections in bills of exception are statements of fact. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 158, 198 S. W. 298.

There is a presumption that lower court ruled correctly, and bills of exception must negative this and show material error. Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

A bill of exceptions complaining of a number of things which occurred on trial as being said by state's counsel and court, will not be considered, where it is so general that court is unable to tell from the language what bill was intended to refer to. Gilbert v. State, 84 Cr. R. 616, 209 S. W. 658.

Where neither of appellant's two bills of exceptions set out fact showing error in ruling of trial court, the same cannot be considered on appeal. Davis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 15, 209 S. W. 749.

The utmost legal effect that can be given bills of exceptions which are not in themselves sufficient to show not only the objection, but also the facts showing the propriety of such objection, is to consider them in the light of general demurrers. Venn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 158, 210 S. W. 535.

A bill of exceptions, stating that appellant objected to fact that prosecutrix held her baby while testifying, etc., but stating no ground of objection nor any of the attendant facts, nor how the matter was presented, cannot be considered, because not stating the facts necessary to enable the court to review it intelligently. Stracner v. State, 86 Cr. R. 89, 215 S. W. 305.

The mere statement of the grounds of objections in a bill of exceptions is not a certificate of the judge that the facts stated are true, and defendant must incorporate sufficient evidence in the bill, to verify the truth of the objections. Quinney v. State, 86 Cr. R. 353, 216 S. W. 852.

Grounds of objection in bill of exceptions will not take place of the necessary statement of facts to show that objection is well taken. Dollar v. State, 86 Cr. R. 333, 216 S. W. 1087.

Bills of exceptions should be sufficient to disclose the error complained of without the aid of the statement of facts, but, where the record contains a statement of facts, the bill should not be construed so strictly as to defeat the purpose of the law requiring bills of exceptions, in view of Rev. St. art. 2059, providing that no form shall be required, and art. 2060, authorizing a reference to the statement of facts. Plummer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 487, 218 S. W. 499.

A statement of the reason for objecting to court's ruling does not comply with Civ. St. art. 2059, providing that the objection to the rule shall be stated with such circumstances, or so much of the evidence as may be necessary to explain it, and no more, and the whole as briefly as possible, but the facts showing the relation of the ruling to the case must be stated in a manner to disclose that they are facts certified to by the trial judge. Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

Appellate court may refuse consideration of a bill of exceptions where the statement of exceptions does not set forth the ground thereof. Gibson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 538.

Bills of exception which do not comply with the rule may not be considered by the Court of Criminal Appeals. Crisp v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 392.

It is not the duty nor does the law require the Court of Criminal Appeals to search through the record in order to determine whether or not a matter complained of in an insufficient bill presents error, as the bill must within itself show error on the part of the trial court, and must sufficiently set out the proceedings and attendant circumstances to enable the court to know certainly that an error was committed, and ordinarily the statement of facts will not be looked to in aid of a defective bill unless the trial court refers to it in his explanation. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 497.

The statement of grounds of objection by appellant is not tantamount to a showing that such grounds are in fact proved, and the facts must appear in the bill of exceptions, which show the error complained of, it not being enough for the defendant to say that he objects because a statement was made out of his presence, at a time when the party making the same was across the street, and that appellant did not hear it; this being merely a statement of his objections. Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 515.

22. — Excuse for defects.—Court's failure to limit testimony is not available on appeal, where no exception was taken to court's failure to so do, even though defendant was unlearned in the law, was not represented by an attorney, and did not know how to take advantage of the situation by excepting. Parham v. State, 87 Cr. R. 454, 222 S. W. 561.

24. — Rulings respecting jurors.—Bill of exceptions to refusal to allow certain questions to a juror on his voir dire examination is inoperative; it not showing he served. Bartlett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 468, 200 S. W. 339.

Bill of exceptions to exclusion of question to veniremen not showing it would have elicited an answer disqualifying them is insufficient. Id.

Bill reciting merely that juror had admitted saying before trial that accused "had killed a good boy in another county and sworn lies to get out of it" presents no error, since it fails to show that such fact was not known to accused before the jury was accepted. Adler v. State, 83 Cr. R. 72, 201 S. W. 177.

In a prosecution for murder, denial of defendant's motion to quash the venire on various grounds held not to present error or require revision in view of the bill of exceptions merely repeating some of the grounds of the motion, but containing no facts and not showing what evidence was introduced in regard to the matter and in qualification thereto by the court. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

25. — Denial of continuance or postponement.—A bill of exceptions to the refusal of the trial court to postpone or continue the case, because of the absence of a witness named, presents no error where the record contains no application for such continuance, and no order overruling the same, and the bill sets up nothing that appellant expects to prove by the witness, and nothing with regard to the diligence used to obtain his presence at the trial. Lemcke v. State, 86 Cr. R. 386, 217 S. W. 150.

26. — Putting witnesses under the rule.—A bill of exceptions, stating that a witness who was under the rule was permitted to testify after violating the rule, was incomplete, where the nature of the evidence given by the witness was not disclosed by the bill. Patterson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 643, 215 S. W. 308; Wagley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 504, 224 S. W. 687.

Where accused on appeal complained that court abused its discretion in permitting a witness to testify who had remained in the courtroom after the rule had been called for, the burden was on him to reveal in his bill of exceptions circumstances from which an abuse would appear. Shamblin v. State, 88 Cr. R. 589, 228 S. W. 241.

28. — Misconduct of prosecuting attorney.—Bill of exceptions complaining of reference of county attorney to former trial, held insufficient as containing no statement of facts but simply grounds of objection. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 158, 198 S. W. 298.

Exception complaining that prosecutor referred to accused as "bootlegger" held, in view of qualification of bill of exceptions, not to show error. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 283, 199 S. W. 466.

Bill of exceptions complaining that county attorney in opening argument said he would rely on testimony of certain named witnesses without discussing the testimony or the law, and after defendant's attorney concluded his argument the county attorney made an original argument discussing all the facts and the law, but not showing what the concluding argument of the county attorney was, shows no error. Cagle v. State, 82 Cr. R. 347, 200 S. W. 153.

Bill of exceptions as to counsel's remarks with reference to accused's failure to place witnesses on stand to prove good reputation was too indefinite; it not stating facts, or whether reputation was an issue. Anderson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 276, 202 S. W. 953.

A bill of exceptions complaining of a number of things which occurred on trial as being said by state's counsel will not be considered, where it is so general that court is unable to tell from the language what bill was intended to refer to. Gilbert v. State, 84 Cr. R. 616, 209 S. W. 658.

Where bill of exceptions shows objections to argument of counsel as commenting on failure of accused to testify, but does not show as a fact that accused did not testify, it is insufficient, as grounds of objections are not statement of facts. Quinney v. State, 86 Cr. R. 358, 216 S. W. 882.

Bills of exceptions, complaining that remarks by counsel were unsupported by the evidence, must show that there was no evidence which justified the remarks, and are insufficient, where the statements of counsel were not verified, otherwise than by statement of court that he instructed jury not to consider the remarks; the mere objection that the testimony did not justify the remarks not being sufficient. Shrum v. State, 87 Cr. R. 486, 222 S. W. 575.

No indirect reference by state's counsel in argument to defendant's failure to testify is shown by bill of exceptions, reciting that said counsel, after stating that H. testified to a confession by defendant, continued: "No one has denied this. Now, how are you * * * going to say H., is not telling the truth"—it not affirmatively showing that defendant did not testify, nor negating the fact that there were others present. Tillman v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 165.

A bill of exceptions, complaining of improper argument by prosecuting attorney, should disclose, not only the argument that is complained of, but such pertinent facts as may be necessary to enable the court to determine whether the error has been committed, and, if so, whether it is such as authorizes a reversal of the case. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

A bill of exceptions must make reasonably apparent the error complained of, and if the objection be to counsel's argument, the bill should affirmatively show that it is not in answer to something said by counsel for the accused, or was not based on some evidence, and that it was the statement of some matter hurtful to the accused, and not properly before the jury, or for some reason inflammatory or abusive and calculated to injure accused. Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 515.

29. — Rulings on evidence.—See Gibson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 538.

A bill of exception to the admission of evidence to require consideration must show what the action of the court was, the subject of it, and its relation to the case. Marshall v. State, 85 Cr. R. 131, 210 S. W. 798; Williams v. State, 81 Cr. R. 416, 195 S. W. 860; Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 158, 198 S. W. 298; Wheat v. State, 82 Cr. R. 441, 199 S. W. 620; Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014; Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583; Rainey v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 118.

Unless bills of exceptions to the admission of evidence show what the answers of witnesses were, the appellate court will not understand that answers were made. Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 547; Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 57, 198 S. W. 326; Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162; Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

State*, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292; Mirick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 388, 204 S. W. 222; Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 547.

State* (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 497; Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 158, 198 S. W. 298; Knight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 134, 220 S. W. 333; Perea v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 305.

On appeal from conviction for rape, bill of exceptions urging that statement of prosecutrix after offense was not part of res gestæ, held insufficient, it not excluding idea that statement was sufficiently close to bring it within rule. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 158, 198 S. W. 298.

State*, 82 Cr. R. 358, 198 S. W. 959.

State*, 83 Cr. R. 133, 201 S. W. 989.

A bill in a rape case complaining that on cross-examination defendant was asked if his wife did not slap a couple of little girls on the street because of his improper conduct towards them, that he objected because it was immaterial, irrelevant, and calculated only to prejudice his rights, and the objection was overruled, was too meager to require that it be passed on. Mirick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 388, 204 S. W. 222.

The qualification of a witness is a matter for the court, and defendant's bill of exceptions that a nonexpert witness was allowed to testify to course of bullets in deceased's body should contain sufficient verified facts to negative the presumption in favor of the court's ruling. Castleberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 271, 206 S. W. 353.

In a prosecution for murder, bills of exceptions to testimony that witness smelled whisky on appellant's breath on the day of the homicide, objected to as immaterial, irrelevant, and highly inflammatory, held to present nothing showing injury; since bill of exceptions must not only state the ground of objection, but make apparent the injury claimed. Parker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 222, 216 S. W. 178.

In a prosecution for theft, a bill of exceptions against the admission of testimony claimed to have been in the nature of a confession made while under arrest, unaccompanied by the statutory formalities, which fails to show that defendant was under arrest at the time, and does not sufficiently show the surrounding facts to advise the Court of Criminal Appeals of the materiality of the evidence sought to be excluded, presents no error. Petterson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 265, 216 S. W. 186.

A bill of exceptions, complaining that prosecutrix in the statutory rape case was allowed to answer questions as to the relations between herself and defendant at a previous time, held insufficient to present the complaint that the state was allowed to introduce evidence of criminal acts barred by limitations not showing what was the answer of the prosecutrix. Lucas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 439, 216 S. W. 396.

Where a bill of exceptions consists of a large number of questions and answers, to all of which a general objection was made, and the questions and answers, anterior to one seeking to connect defendant with the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors inquired about, were but preliminary, the bill should be considered as presenting the latter objection to prosecuting witness' testimony of a sale of whisky by one other than defendant. Surginer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 438, 217 S. W. 145.

In a prosecution for theft of a purse, complaint cannot be made of the refusal to hear evidence that accused had issued a subpoena for a person described as C. on the ground that the latter was the offender and had admitted the fact to accused's wife, and that he desired to prove that he had a subpoena issued in order to corroborate his wife's testimony, which was not objected to by the state, where, as presented, the record leaves the inference that the proof desired would have disclosed a self-serving act on the part of the appellant; there being evidence that C. was an accomplice or co-principal, and there being no effort to show in the bill that the subpoena was directed to the place of residence of C., nor the date of its execution. Rogers v. State, 86 Cr. R. 418, 217 S. W. 148.

In a prosecution for murder, bill of exceptions to admission of evidence that a witness took a searchlight and went to the scene of the homicide an hour or two after and made diligent search, but failed to find any stick or other weapon, presented no matter of possible injury, in absence of other facts set out in the bill, since if such matter was not material, facts showing lack of materiality should be stated. Cotton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 387, 217 S. W. 158.

Bills of exceptions, disclosing that the only character of objection made is that the evidence is immaterial, irrelevant, and prejudicial, will not be considered, because such objections are too indefinite, and require an inspection of the entire statement of facts and record. Id.

Bill of exceptions containing a continuous narration of the exceptions taken to the testimony of five different witnesses is multifarious, and appellate court may decline to consider it. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

A bill of exceptions complaining of the introduction of testimony should not ordinarily set out the objectionable testimony in the form of questions and answers, and such mode of preparing bill of exceptions should be resorted to only when the character of the testimony is such that it is deemed necessary to reproduce it in that form in order to correctly present it. Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 626, 219 S. W. 829.

The practice of reproducing in bill of exceptions the testimony of a witness in question and answer form is to be avoided, except when such a reproduction is necessary to explain the meaning, notwithstanding Civ. St. art. 2059, requiring bill of exceptions to state the objection to the ruling or the action of the court with such circumstances, or so much of the evidence as may be necessary to explain it, and no more, and the whole as briefly as possible. Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

In homicide prosecution, bill of exceptions complaining of sheriff's testimony that he found no weapon on the body of the deceased at the time that he reached the scene of the homicide, without showing at what time he reached the body, held not to present error. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 148, 220 S. W. 1108.

A bill of exceptions, reciting, "Whereupon defendant then and there objected to the introduction of anything that defendant may have said to the witness, and to any statement that is claimed Mr. Woods may have made in that barber shop at any time after Mr. Lloyd went to the door of the barber shop," is too general; no ground of objection whatever being stated. Woods v. State, 87 Cr. R. 354, 221 S. W. 276.

A bill of exceptions reciting that a witness was testifying that he lived about one-half mile from the place where deceased was killed, and that he had not heard a gun "over there" before he left for C. and that on cross-examination district attorney asked witness if he could hear a gun from where deceased was killed to C., did not show any injury to defendant; the answer of the witness not being stated. Charles v. State, 87 Cr. R. 233, 222 S. W. 255.

A bill, reciting that the state "sought to bring out by B. matters concerning some cotton that deceased claimed to have lost some 10 months before the killing, and deceased claimed that defendant was implicated in getting the cotton," and that the witness was permitted to testify to a conversation he had with defendant with reference to the matter, did not show that the admission of such testimony was error; it not appearing what the conversation was. Id.

A bill in a homicide case, reciting that a state's witness was asked "concerning a matter of the deceased losing some seed cotton some 10 months before the killing, the deceased having charged defendant with the theft of the seed," was insufficient to present the matter for consideration, the bill not stating defendant's objection, the answer to the question, nor any of the facts and circumstances that would show whether the matter was material or not. Id.

A bill of exceptions, so indefinite that it cannot be fully understood what was its purpose and to which part of the testimony set out, part of which, at least, was admissible, objection was urged, will not avail. Mayer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 512, 222 S. W. 571.

Viewed in the light of testimony in the statement of facts held that the record, fairly construed, did not bear the interpretation that, as complained in bill of exceptions, the opinion of witness was taken as evidence. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583.

Where defendant on cross-examination of prosecuting witness asked whether or not witness had not formerly testified as to a certain matter, no complaint can be made of refusal of court to permit an answer, where evidence was not offered to prove the former testimony, purpose being to attack the credibility of the witness, especially where the intended introduction of the impeaching evidence was dependent on the witness answering, "No," and a bill reciting that defendant expected to offer the evidence, not stating what the testimony would have been nor how it would have been dependent upon affirmative or negative answer, presented no error. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Bill of exceptions containing objection and exception to all of the testimony of certain witness was properly overruled, where a part of such testimony was competent and material. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

A bill of exceptions complaining of admission of evidence which discloses that a great part of testimony set out is material, and that it contains pertinent evidence, is not sufficient to present any matter for review. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

Bills of exceptions, complaining of the reproduction of the testimony of a witness on the ground that a proper predicate had not been laid, without stating the facts with reference to the predicate, held insufficient to present error; the appellate court having no right to go to the statement of facts. Revels v. State, 88 Cr. R. 36, 224 S. W. 689.

A bill of exceptions to the exclusion by the court of a question asked a witness for the state to lay a foundation for impeachment, which was excluded by the court because the statement was immaterial, is too indefinite for consideration where the bill does not show how the matter came up, or explain its relation to the case and to the testimony, and where the evidence is not before the appellate court, the matter will not be reviewed. Wheeler v. State, 87 Cr. R. 646, 224 S. W. 782.

In a homicide case, a bill that the court erred in not permitting accused to ask a witness on cross-examination, "Well, how'd you come to get that stick?" to which the witness would have answered that accused had told him when he received it that deceased had assaulted the wife of accused with it, did not show error, where it did not show that the declaration would have come within the rule of res gestæ. Allen v. State, 88 Cr. R. 32, 224 S. W. 891.

A bill of exceptions in a forgery case, complaining that court erred in sustaining an objection to a question as to whether a certain person was honest, held too indefinite for revision, not stating what the witness would have answered. Johnson v. State, 88 Cr. R. 136, 224 S. W. 1103.

In homicide prosecution bill of exceptions, complaining of court's refusal to permit witnesses to answer certain questions without stating the answer witness would have made, or what was to have been proved by the witness, held too indefinite for consideration. Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105.

The court's ruling admitting defendant's confession, must be presumed correct; the bill of exceptions not showing conditions rendering it inadmissible. Tillman v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 165.

A bill of exceptions to the overruling of an objection to a question as leading must exclude all facts which would render such a question proper, and is insufficient where the statement that the witness was not unfriendly or hostile to the state was made merely by way of objection to the question, and not as a statement of fact in the bill of exceptions. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 173.

Bill of exceptions, complaining of admission of dying declaration for insufficiency of predicate, not stating that it contains all of the predicate upon which declaration was admitted, was defective, it being necessary for such bill to contain, and state that it does contain, all the predicate. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 521.

Where defense was insanity, a bill complaining that court would not permit defendant to show that defendant and a cousin who was insane were very much alike in general build, disposition, and character held too indefinite to be considered. Pruitt v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 525.

In a prosecution for assault with a knife, reversible error was not shown in permitting a doctor to testify that if the knife had cut the jugular vein the assaulted party would have bled to death unless relief had come; it not being stated in the bill how such matter related to the facts of the case, especially where the description of the knife was not shown. Id.

A bill of exceptions consisting of 15 pages of questions and answers interspersed with some 14 or 15 objections, many of the questions and answers apparently being admissible and no objection being made thereto, concluding with a statement of exceptions without any specified grounds, held not to be considered because too general, and because containing a large amount of matter that was admissible, and consisting of questions and answers of the witness, which is not in conformity with the rule. Gibson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 538.

On appeal from conviction of forgery, in the absence of bill of exceptions reserving and presenting the facts, question whether a strip of paper on which defendant had written certain names was inadmissible because at the time he was under arrest and unwarned is not before the Court of Criminal Appeals in such a way as calls for review; it being necessary to bring up by exceptions facts sustaining contentions as to inadmissibility of evidence. Bird v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 749.

In a prosecution for highway robbery, where it was the state's theory that defendant and a certain woman were acting together, and defendant testified that he had not known her before the crime, whereupon the prosecuting attorney asked, "If she says you did, she is mistaken?" a bill, complaining of such remark, failed to show prejudice, where it did not disclose whether such woman had or had not made the statement referred to, and it was not otherwise disclosed in what manner the remark of the prosecuting attorney might have prejudiced the accused. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

A bill of exceptions in a prosecution for highway robbery, complaining of proof by the state that a codefendant had been convicted and sent to the penitentiary for the crime of highway robbery, did not show error, where it did not appear that the conviction of the codefendant grew out of the same transaction as that involving the accused. Id.

A bill of exceptions complaining that accused was required to answer the question, "I will ask you if it is not true that it was discussed in that conversation (having reference to a conversation inquired about by the state) that you had been gambling and had repeatedly given checks and turned them down, and when that was found out you got mad at them too," did not show error, where it did not state what answer accused made, nor presented the connection or setting of the question. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

Where, over objection that it was immaterial, irrelevant, and prejudicial, the state, in a prosecution for violating the Dean Law, was allowed to ask whether defendant had not previously been indicted for violation of the liquor laws, and there was no statement in the bill of exceptions showing that the indictments were for felonies, the ruling must be deemed correct, for, if the bill of exceptions does not show affirmatively that evidence is not admissible, the presumption is necessarily in favor of the correctness of the trial court's ruling. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 948.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, a bill of exceptions reciting that, over objection that it was immaterial, irrelevant, and prejudicial, it was brought out on cross-examination that defendant some time before the difficulty was in company with a negro under indictment for swindling, but that the negro was not a party to the difficulty or connected with it, does not show that the ruling was wrong and harmful, though the statement of facts disclosed that the testimony was not used; for the mere fact that the negro was not present at the difficulty did not negative the presumption in favor of the trial court's ruling that it was material to determine where defendant was at the time and place mentioned. Mucker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 328.

Where a bill of exceptions showed that, after stating that he worked at H., accused was asked if he had seen C. or B. since this trouble, but did not show that the question was answered, or what the answer would have been, and that district attorney then asked if accused did not know as a fact that they were down there, and that he answered "he heard that they were down there," no ground of objection to the last question appearing, the bill indicated no error. Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 547.

Bill of exceptions showing that accused, after stating that he stayed at his mother's a certain length of time, on cross-examination was compelled to answer the question, "Then where did you go?" to which he answered that he went to work for the G. Company near H., held not to show error; the only objection being that the evidence was immaterial and irrelevant. Id.

A bill of exceptions showing that sheriff was testifying in rebuttal for state and said that on Sunday after the homicide he found a bullet in a rafter in the east end of the house, to which an objection was made that it was not in rebuttal and was too remote, did not show error, where no facts were stated therein from which it could be determined whether the evidence was in rebuttal or too remote. Id.

Bill of exceptions complaining of court's refusal to permit witness to answer certain question without stating the ground of objection, the pertinency of the inquiry, the answer witness would have given, nor other facts enabling the appellate court to pass intelligently upon the matter, held insufficient. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1005.

Where it appeared from the bill of exceptions that excluded evidence proffered by defendant was both relevant and material, it was not necessary that the bill expressly so state; a reasonable and substantial compliance with the law concerning bills of exceptions being sufficient. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 110.

The weight of a ruling, denying defendant the right to prove exculpatory statements made by him in connection with inculpatory statements brought out by the state, cannot be appraised on appeal, when the bill of exceptions does not show what declarations were excluded. Id.

In a prosecution for theft of seed cotton, bill of exceptions to the admission of evidence, reciting that defendant objected to the answer of a witness to the question when he had his cotton weighed how much did he have, unless he weighed the cotton himself, as it would be hearsay, stating that the objection was overruled by the court, and not undertaking to show what the answer of the witness was, or whether he ever answered the question at all, did not comply with the rule, and it was also incomplete in that it did not state the connection in which the question was asked, nor the relevancy of it to the issue involved in the case. Crisp v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 392.

A bill in a homicide case showing that witness was asked if she ever heard deceased make any "threats relative to whether or not she had attempted or would attempt to take the life of appellant," to which she replied, "Well, at one time when she was talking of him she says she started to kill him once, and she wished to God she had," and that answer was objected to by the state and withdrawn by the court, did not show error, where it was absolutely silent as to why such testimony was admissible. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 497.

In a prosecution for murder of mother-in-law, who had prevailed upon defendant's wife to leave him, a bill of exceptions showing that defendant offered to testify as to preparation he and his wife had made in expectation of the birth of a baby, in the way of clothing, baby carriages, etc., to show the condition of defendant's mind when deceased told him his wife could not go back to him, and that the state objected to his going into details, but did not object to his stating that preparations had been made, and that counsel thereupon stated that "they wanted it all or none," and that the objection was sustained, did not show error, where it did not disclose what defendant would have testified. Id.

On appeal from a conviction for burglary, the burden was on appellant to show by his bill of exceptions that testimony of the arresting officer as to the discovery of the stolen property and appellant's confession while under arrest was not admissible as res gestæ. McGoldrick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 851.

30. — Rulings relating to instructions.—See note 66 under art. 743.

31. — Misconduct of jury.—Alleged error in declining to grant a new trial because of misconduct of jury after having taken evidence upon motion must be presented to appellate court by bill of exceptions containing the facts and evidence. Glascoe v. State, 85 Cr. R. 234, 210 S. W. 956.

32. Allowance of time to prepare bill of exceptions.—Under Vernon's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. 1916, arts. 744, 845, where time for filing bills of exception as extended had expired before last order extending time, bills filed within period allowed by last order cannot be considered. Parker v. State, 83 Cr. R. 81, 200 S. W. 1083.

33. Approval and signature of judge.—A bill of exceptions prepared by defendant but not approved by the trial judge or verified by bystanders cannot be considered. Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292; Deando v. State (Cr. App.) 196 S. W. 540; Haverbekken v. State, 82 Cr. R. 633, 200 S. W. 524; Anderson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 276, 202 S. W. 953; Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772.

A purported transcript of what occurred on the trial as shown by the stenographer's notes and certified to by the stenographer, but not presented to or approved by the judge, cannot be considered. Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 231, 216 S. W. 173.

Where there was no bill of exceptions relating to the matter, a paper purporting to contain exceptions to ruling of court on objection to the charge, not having the approval of the trial court but being marked, "refused," cannot be considered on the ground that it was indorsed "refused" by mistake. Gibson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 538.

A bill reciting that exception was reserved to the remark of counsel, and that appellant asked court to instruct jury to disregard it, will be considered on appeal, although the presiding judge marked it "Refused," the bill being filed by the clerk and certified by him as a part of the record and bearing evidence of having been presented to the trial judge, and he having indorsed thereon no reasons for his refusal to allow it, or filed any bill in lieu of it. Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 509.

Where a transcript is not certified to by the clerk and the bills of exceptions are not approved by the judge, and the statement of facts is neither signed by the attorneys nor the judge, an appeal must be dismissed without passing upon the merits, under Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 929; Rev. St. 1911, art. 2114. Ray v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 396.

34. — Mode and sufficiency of approval.—Where the trial court approved defendant's bill of exceptions to certain testimony with the statement, "Objection made, but no exception taken," followed by his signature and the usual language in approval of the bill, the Court of Criminal Appeals must consider such bill as approved; if in fact no bill of exceptions was taken, the trial court should have refused to approve the bill. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

It is in serious doubt whether the court intended to approve exceptions where the exceptions and special charges are all included in the same document indorsed "refused" by the court. Howard v. State, 86 Cr. R. 288, 216 S. W. 168.

35. — Qualification or correction by court.—Where appellant accepts a bill of exceptions as qualified by the court, he is bound thereby. Waters v. State, 81 Cr. R. 491, 196 S. W. 536; Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 79; Wrenn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 146, 206 S. W. 94; McNew v. State, 84 Cr. R. 594, 208 S. W. 528; Beasley v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 748; Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 865.

When accused excepted to the qualification of a bill of exceptions, and requested another bill, finally prepared by the court, it was incumbent upon him, if such bill was not correct, to interpose objection, prepare another bill, and prove it up by bystanders. Clay v. State, 81 Cr. R. 293, 195 S. W. 600.

Court's finding, qualifying the bill, on matter of comment on defendant's failure to testify, that such comment did not occur, is not conclusive on Court of Criminal Appeals, but will not be disturbed, where all jurors except one testified there was no such comment. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

Where a bill of exceptions is qualified, the qualification controls, and the two together control the statement of facts, where there is a conflict between the bill and the evidence. Fults v. State, 83 Cr. R. 602, 204 S. W. 108.

When bill of exceptions is found in record with qualification by the trial court, consent of appellant to such qualification is presumed in absence of objection and exception to the qualification authenticated and brought up in record. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

When a bill appears in the record qualified over appellant's objection, qualification may be disregarded and bill considered approved as prepared by appellant, and, if qualification is in substance a rewriting of bill, it may be treated as the court's bill. Id.

The court cannot without appellant's consent qualify a bill prepared by him. Id.

A trial court cannot approve a bill of exceptions tendered by counsel in a criminal case with any qualifications not agreed to by counsel; the proper practice being to mark the bill refused, return it to counsel, and prepare and file what the court deems a sufficient bill. Kilpatrick v. State, 85 Cr. R. 172, 211 S. W. 230.

If bills of exception were merely marked "Refused" by the trial court, without explanation or qualification, under circumstances fairly calling for a bill prepared by the trial court, or else for explanation, the Court of Criminal Appeals will regard the refusal as purely arbitrary; but where qualifications or explanations are appended to the bills, and no exceptions taken, the court will be governed in its consideration of the matters by such explanations. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772.

The trial judge had no right to qualify appellant's bill of exceptions over appellant's objections, and, if bill of exceptions was not acceptable to the judge, he should have followed statutory procedure. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 415.

The Court of Criminal Appeals will consider the lower court's explanation in approving a bill of exceptions as correct, unless in some legitimate way appellant then made his objection to such explanation, or shows that he was deprived of his right or opportunity to do so. Perea v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 305.

Where counsel for accused refused to agree to the qualifications of his bills by the trial judge, but, after the trial judge had marked them refused, had them filed by the clerk, whereupon the judge again inserted the qualifications and had the bills refiled, accused is not entitled to have the bills considered either as they were originally drawn, or as qualified, under Civ. St. arts. 2063-2067, made applicable to criminal prosecutions by this article. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 865.

Where the defendant refused to accept the qualifications of the judge to his bills of exceptions which practically amounted to new bills, and the judge stated that he did not make out and file other bills, but adopted those corrected and explained as the bills he approved, those bills can be treated as bills prepared in lieu of refused bills. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

36. — Preparation of bill by judge.—It is duty of appellant to prepare his bill of exception, and then it is duty of the judge to allow appellant's bill of exceptions or to file in lieu thereof a bill prepared by him. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

Where the record recited that the trial court refused defendant's bill of exceptions and then prepared and filed a new one, it being the duty of the court to file and present a correct bill of exceptions, in the absence of same in the record the refused bill will be considered as though approved and filed. Drawhorn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 600, 209 S. W. 415.

Where a bill of exceptions is prepared by accused and presented to the trial judge in time, it is his duty, if he disagrees with its correctness, to file with it a bill which presents the true record, and, where the trial judge fails to adopt such procedure and files a bill marked "refused," the accused is entitled to either have the bill considered, or to have a reversal because it is denied him. Rosa v. State, 86 Cr. R. 646, 218 S. W. 1056.

38. — Conclusiveness and effect of approved bill.—Incorporation in bill of exception of grounds of objection is not a certificate of the judge that the facts which form the basis of the objection are true, merely showing that such an objection was made. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405; Quinney v. State, 86 Cr. R. 358, 216 S. W. 882.

Where there is a conflict between the bill of exceptions and the statement of facts, the court on appeal will treat the bill as correctly reflecting the record. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 131, 205 S. W. 943.

Where the bill of exceptions sets forth remarks of the district attorney as to defendant's failure to procure witnesses to prove his reputation, but also sets forth a statement of the district attorney denying making such remarks and stating fully what was said by him, there was no reversible error shown. Drawhorn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 600, 209 S. W. 415.

Where bill of exceptions complaining of remarks of prosecuting attorney contained approval and explanation by court setting forth entirely different statement than appellant claimed, and no bill of exceptions was taken by appellant to the bill as approved and explained, the court on appeal will accept the court's statement in the approval as correct. Glascoc v. State, 85 Cr. R. 234, 210 S. W. 956.

Where bills of exception have merely been marked refused, and so appear in the record, the Court of Criminal Appeals may consider affidavits, but not so when such affidavits are only in contradiction of explanation or qualification of such bills. Wilson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772.

Where the trial court, refusing to approve a bill of exception, states he does not remember the transaction, the Court of Criminal Appeals will accept the statement. Id.

Trial court's approval of bill of exceptions, reciting that defendant's statement introduced by state in evidence was objected to because defendant did not have sufficient intelligence to understand the statement, held not approval of existence of facts stated therein, but a mere statement by court that such were the grounds of objection urged. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

Where the defendant refused to accept the bills of exceptions as qualified by the court and thereafter ascertained that the qualified bills had been filed, his proper course was to move to withdraw them from the files, with a request to cancel the qualifications and mark them refused, and a further request that the judge prepare bills in lieu thereof, and then, if the judge declined to do so, defendant could have resorted to proper bystanders' bills or have shown by affidavits that he had been denied his bills. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

A defendant who accepts a bill of exceptions prepared by the court is bound thereby. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

Where defendant appellant claimed he had not been served with a correct copy of the indictment filed, the copy not appearing to have been signed by the foreman of the grand jury, and his bill of exceptions not stating that the original indictment was so signed, but such copy of the indictment was certified by the clerk as a true copy, the Court of Criminal Appeals will not go beyond the bill in finding whether the recitals in it were true or not. Searcy v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 319.

39. Proof by by-standers.—A defendant and his attorneys are not such "bystanders" as the law contemplates, so that bills of exceptions verified by them are not entitled to considerations as bystanders' bills. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869; Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

Trial court, in homicide case, probably abused its discretion in requiring accused's counsel to whisper his objections regarding prosecuting attorney's misconduct, since Const. art. 1, § 10, guarantees a speedy public trial and right to be heard by counsel, and a bystanders' bill of exceptions could not be made, pursuant to Rev. St. arts. 2066, 2067, in case court and attorneys failed to agree upon objections or ruling so made. Weige v. State, 81 Cr. R. 476, 196 S. W. 524.

Appellant, to controvert bill of exceptions prepared by trial judge, has the right to file a bill verified by bystanders. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

Bystanders' bill of exceptions to court's qualifications of the bill of exceptions, filed after the trial, is in time, under Civ. St. art. 2067, allowing such a bill if appellant is dissatisfied with that filed by the judge. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 131, 205 S. W. 943.

The Court of Criminal Appeals is not authorized to consider exception attempted to be preserved by bystanders' bill, where the affidavit to such bill is signed by two persons instead of three as required by statute. Gillespie v. State, 85 Cr. R. 4, 210 S. W. 967.

A trial court cannot approve a bill of exceptions tendered by counsel in a criminal case with any qualifications not agreed to by counsel; the proper practice being to mark the bill refused, return it to counsel, and prepare and file what the court deems a sufficient bill, and counsel may then have his bill authenticated by bystanders. Kilpatrick v. State, 85 Cr. R. 172, 211 S. W. 230.

Where the trial court refuses to permit appellant's counsel to show in his bill of exceptions what certain rejected evidence was, appellant has a right to offer to the court his bill showing such rejected testimony, and upon the court's refusal thereof to have the same proved up by bystanders as provided by law. Knigt v. State, 87 Cr. R. 134, 220 S. W. 333.

Objections to remarks of the district attorney during his argument should have been taken by exception at the time, and not by subsequently offering on motion for new trial to introduce evidence of bystanders as to such argument. Bridges v. State, 83 Cr. R. 61, 224 S. W. 1097.

41. Filing of bill of exceptions.—A bill of exception in the record cannot be considered; there being a failure to show its filing. Bartlett v. State, 82 Cr. R. 468, 200 S. W. 839.

Where exceptions of defendant to refusal to give requested instruction were presented to court, and became papers of case at time, and were deposited with papers and clerk, there was sufficient filing, and order instructing clerk to place file mark on them as of date of filing was not filing back. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

If there is any contest insisted upon in Court of Criminal Appeals as to filing bill of exceptions, real condition of things should be made to appear by proper order of trial court. Id.

Where requested instructions refused by trial court are shown to have been indorsed by him as refused on particular day at time of trial, Court of Criminal Appeals will take date as correct, and fact of clerk's having failed to put file mark on them at that time does not affect legality of filing of exceptions. Id.

Bills of exception, not filed by the clerk of the trial court, will not be reviewed. Roach v. State, 84 Cr. R. 471, 208 S. W. 520.

Where the bills of exceptions tendered by accused are refused and returned to him or to his counsel, he ought not to file or attempt to file them with the clerk, but should rely upon the judge preparing proper bills in lieu thereof. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 865.

Bills of exceptions which have been refused by the trial judge can only be considered on appeal when the record shows they were filed by the trial judge's orders, or where the record is silent with reference to the filing and the court of appeals presumes that the clerk would not have filed the bill except by order of the judge. Id.

43. Necessity of objection, exception, or other presentation in trial court in general.—Defendant held not wanting in diligence to maintain rights on trial in relation to admission of testimony as to general reputation for veracity without being allowed to interrogate witnesses as to whether they were testifying from general reputation or particular knowledge. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

Where contention that insanity of juror rendered verdict void was not raised below it will not be considered. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

Insanity, or such mental condition as shows nonresponsibility for crime, first presented by affidavit on motion for rehearing cannot be considered by Court of Criminal Appeals. Avery v. State, 83 Cr. R. 80, 200 S. W. 832.

Allowing state's attorney to put on deceased's coat and have colleague take accused's position where no objection was made at the time, was not error. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 79.

In view of this article, independently of art. 634, no review of an order for change of venue can lawfully be made on appeal unless it is shown that defendant objected below. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 213, 220 S. W. 326.

Though it affirmatively appears from order that trial judge changed venue without believing fair trial could not be had in county, Court of Criminal Appeals has no jurisdiction to review matter, unless it appears defendant excepted to order; otherwise the presumption he acquiesced prevails. Id.

Failure to swear a deputy sheriff sent out after talesmen, is an irregularity which must be excepted to at the time, and cannot be presented for the first time in a motion for a new trial. Knight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 134, 220 S. W. 333.

In prosecution of defendant indicted as an accomplice, where declarations of principal are admitted to prove principal's guilt as a part of the case against defendant, an objection to the use of such evidence to prove defendant guilty must be properly raised and presented to the trial court, and brought to appellate court by exception and bill, in order to be considered by appellate court. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

The Court of Criminal Appeals is called on to pass on the correctness of the ruling of the trial court on evidence, and his ruling must be invoked on the admission of evidence. Holloway v. State, 88 Cr. R. 126, 224 S. W. 1102.

If defendant felt that the state made an improper statement of its case in the beginning, he should have objected thereto at such time, and there is no rule authorizing the granting of his subsequent request to question the jury, or for the discharge of any juror who might be willing to state that he had concluded from the opening statement that accused was guilty. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 673.

In a prosecution for homicide, where, after the court informed the venire from which a jury was to be drawn that the suspended sentence law was much abused, etc., defendant was given the right to challenge for cause any juror who said he had a prejudice against such law, and no motion was made to quash the panel on account of the lecture, the act of the court, while improper, is not reversible error. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

46. Objection or exception to preserve grounds for new trial.—Where defendant, charged with murder, lost testimony of desired witness, because witness was indicted for complicity in same offense, but defendant did not move for postponement on ground of surprise, under art. 616, he could not for first time set up matter in his motion for new trial. Defendant should have moved for postponement, and then have demanded witness' trial first. Alsop v. State, 85 Cr. R. 36, 210 S. W. 195.

Art. 745. [725] Jury in felony case shall not separate until, unless, etc.

Consent of defendant.—A judgment of conviction of a felony cannot stand where the court below with the consent of the accused permitted the jury to separate and go to their respective homes and spend the night, none of them being accompanied by an officer. Dibbles v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 768

What constitutes separation.—That one juror went to bed in a room over the room in which the jury deliberated, leaving the others in the lower story would not, where he had no communication with outsiders, and was not outside the building in which the jury was confined, disclose such separation as would justify reversal under the statute. Wood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 187, 206 S. W. 349

Where, while leaving courthouse at night, a juror went down a stairway by mistake, but immediately retrned and rejoined the other jurors in response to prosecuting attorney's direction, there was no misconduct of the jury nor such forbidden separation as is embraced by this article. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

Prejudice in general.—Where it appears that a temporary separation of one juror from his fellows could not have affected verdict or impartiality of trial, reversal is not authorized. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

In a prosecution for assault on murder, state's evidence held sufficient to show that a separation of the jury caused by one juror going upstairs in an elevator in company with a district judge could not reasonably have resulted in injury to defendant. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

Separation of the jury being forbidden by the statute, when it occurs the burden is on the state to show no injury reasonably could have resulted to defendant. Id.

Separation before being sworn.—It is not erroneous, in the absence of any other showing, to allow jurors chosen, but not sworn, to separate, or that such jurors separate of their own accord, or that the court does not instruct them; this article relating only to "after the jury has been sworn and impaneled." Coffey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 57, 198 S. W. 326.

— Capital case.—In a prosecution for murder resulting in conviction of manslaughter, where, after ten jurors were selected, impaneled, and sworn, one of them was permitted by the court, without consent of defendant or his counsel, and without being accompanied by an officer, to go to his home, about a mile distant, where a member of his family was sick, and there remain away from the courthouse, separated from the other members of the jury, for about an hour, such action was error, necessitating reversal as in violation of the mandatory provisions of the statute. Garner v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 389.

Art. 746. [726] In misdemeanor case jury may separate.

In general.—In a prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, it was not error to allow the jury to separate pending the trial. Stewart v. State (Cr. App.) 23 S. W. 683.

Art. 748. [728] No person shall be with jury or permitted to converse with them.

Construction and operation in general.—This article carrying into effect the provisions of Const. art. 1, § 15, is mandatory, and in a misdemeanor case permits the jury to converse with another person only when allowed to separate by the court but not about the case, and in a felony case does not permit a juror to converse with any person on any subject except by permission. Mann v. State, 84 Cr. R. 109, 204 S. W. 434.

This article should be strictly enforced. Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959.

Prohibited conversations.—That father of complaining witness talked with officer in charge of jury while jury was in room is not alone sufficient to warrant reversal. Phillips v. State, 83 Cr. R. 16, 200 S. W. 1091.

That an old man who inadvertently entered the jury box, and upon learning he was out of place, excused himself and left, did not show injurious conversation by members of jury with an outsider. Hamilton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 90, 201 S. W. 1009.

Questions by state's attorney to jury after it had come into court with a request that some of the testimony be read held not such a conversation with jury as is inhibited by the statute. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

Communications with jurors, except within statutory limitation, are improper, and should not be permitted. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

Discussions between deputy sheriffs and jurors as to what is being considered by the jury, or as to who on the jury stands for this or the other side, are not proper. Golden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 813.

Consent of defendant.—That after the jury had been impaneled one of the jurors, whose wife was sick, was, with permission of the court and consent of defendant and one of his attorneys, allowed to communicate with his family, held without injury to accused. Wood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 187, 206 S. W. 349.

Prejudice.—Where it is claimed in a criminal trial that the jury has violated this article, the burden is on the state to show by testimony other than that of the jurors that no injury has occurred. Mann v. State, 84 Cr. R. 109, 204 S. W. 434.

Conversation of juror with another person without court's permission, will be presumed upon conviction to have been injurious to defendant, but such presumption can be overcome, burden being upon the state to satisfy court that no injury has resulted. Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959.

Receipt by a juror of information that members of his family were sick will not authorize a reversal of a judgment of conviction, where the facts reject any presumption of injury obtaining by reason of his conversing with outsiders. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

Art. 749. [729] Punishment for violation of preceding article.

Persons punishable.—Juror and person with whom he converses without court's permission, in violation of art. 748, is guilty of contempt under this article. Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959.

Art. 751. [731] Jury may take all papers in the case.

In general.—This article is not mandatory, and it is not error for the trial judge not to send out an alleged forged instrument when not called for by the jury. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

Unless it is made to appear that articles which are in evidence and taken to the jury room were used by the jury in any different manner than accorded with the testimony, or that some new fact hurtful to accused was thereby discovered, the matter will not be revised on appeal. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 497.

Evidence.—Permitting the jury to take in their retirement a door introduced in evidence was not error. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583.

In a prosecution for having in possession equipment for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor not for medicinal, etc., purposes, equipment found on defendant's premises being admissible, the court properly allowed it to remain in the courtroom until the case was concluded; after it had been properly offered in evidence, the jury, had they desired, would have had the right to take the equipment to the jury room for further examination during deliberations. Thielepape v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 769.

Art. 753. [733] Jury may communicate with the court.

Cited, Rudder v. State, 29 Tex. App. 262, 15 S. W. 717.

In general.—Verbal communications of court with jurors touching the case on trial, after the retirement of the jury, should be attempted only upon rare occasions and impelled by soundest reasons, and an effort should be made to avoid impressing jury that court entertains any impression of the case which he wishes them to know. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

Art. 754. [734] Jury may ask further instruction.

See Willis v. State, 24 Tex. App. 586, 6 S. W. 857.
Cited, Rudder v. State, 29 Tex. App. 262, 15 S. W. 717.

Art. 755. [735] Jury may have witness re-examined, when.

Cited, Rudder v. State, 29 Tex. App. 262, 15 S. W. 717

Art. 756. [736] Defendant shall be present, when.

Cited, Powers v. State, 23 Tex. App. 42, 5 S. W. 153; Rudder v. State, 29 Tex. App. 262, 15 S. W. 717.

Art. 759. [739] Disagreement of jury.

Coercion of verdict.—It was error for the court, when the jury reported that it stood 11 to 1, but could not agree, to say: "Gentlemen. it seems that you are practically agreed. I will have to send you out again, and I would not be authorized under the law to discharge you just yet." Hughes v. State, 81 Cr. R. 526, 197 S. W. 215.

In a prosecution for violation of the local option law, where the court erroneously excluded testimony offered to show motive of the state's witness, defendant should have been granted a new trial, where it further appeared that the jury, upon inquiry by the judge as to whether they had reached a verdict, assumed that if verdict was not shortly reached they would be confined over Sunday, and that the jury rendered a verdict of guilty within a few hours, although at the time of the inquiry a majority were in favor of acquittal. West v. State, 86 Cr. R. 296, 216 S. W. 186.

Where jury agreed as to defendant's guilt soon after retirement but for more than 32 hours disagreed as to whether they should give defendant the benefit of suspended sentence, the action of the court in sending for jury and instructing them that the trial of cases was expensive, that he could not see why jurors could not agree, in asking the two jurors who had not found the evidence clear enough to agree to a conviction without suspended sentence, if they thought they could ever agree to a verdict, and in stating that jury should retire and try to get a verdict and that it was the court's desire that they get a verdict, held ground for reversal upon appeal from judgment of conviction without recommendation of suspended sentence, since such two jurors might have construed the court's remarks as evidencing a desire on the part of the court that they should agree to what the others had agreed on. Golden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 813.

OF THE VERDICT

Art. 763. Definition of "verdict." 767. When jury have agreed, etc. 770. Verdict must be general. 771. In offenses of different degrees. 772. Offenses consisting of degrees.	Art. 773. Informal verdict may be corrected. 774. Where jury refuse to have verdict corrected. 782. Conviction of lower, acquittal of higher offense.

Article 763. [743] Definition of "verdict."

Nature and requisites of verdict—Mistakes of grammar and spelling.—In prosecution of person named Missouri Lee for illegally selling liquor, verdict spelling defendant's given name as "Mururee," and the word "assess" as "assee," to which no objection was taken when verdict was rendered and received, did not invalidate conviction. Lee v. State, 83 Cr. R. 532, 204 S. W. 110.

Responsiveness to issues.—A conviction cannot be authorized for an offense not set forth in the indictment. Moore v. State, 84 Cr. R. 256, 206 S. W. 683.

The jury are presumed to have expressed their finding with reference to the charge of the court, unless in their verdict they state something which shows that such was not the intention. Lewis v. State, 86 Cr. R. 135, 217 S. W. 695.

Different counts.—Where an indictment charges theft of an automobile in one count, and receiving the automobile as stolen property in another count, a verdict, finding defendant guilty on both counts is improper; it being impossible for defendant guilty of receiving a stolen automobile, to have stolen it himself, and such verdict will not support a judgment of conviction for the theft. Moore v. State, 83 Cr. R. 302, 203 S. W. 51.

Sufficiency of writing.—A verdict written with a lead-pencil is sufficient. Ellis v. State, 30 Tex. App. 601, 18 S. W. 139.

Impeachment of verdict.—It would be against public policy to permit impeachment of a verdict by testimony that after agreeing to the verdict a juror desired to retract. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

Art. 767. [747] When jury have agreed, etc.

Length of deliberations.—In a trial for murder the fact that the jury brought in a conviction in about 20 minutes would not authorize a reversal. Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381.

Art. 770. [750] Verdict must be general.

3. Requisites and sufficiency of verdict in general.—It is the duty of the courts to give the language used in a verdict every reasonable intendment in upholding the same. Lewis v. State, 86 Cr. R. 135, 217 S. W. 695.

Where information against defendant as a delinquent child made four specifications of delinquency, of which three were submitted and general verdict rendered, verdict should be referred to any charge correctly pleaded and submitted to jury, if supported by evidence. Hogue v. State, 87 Cr. R. 170, 220 S. W. 96.

4. — Verdicts held sufficient.—In prosecution for cattle theft resulting in verdict of guilty, jury's failure to find defendant not guilty of receiving stolen property, as court had instructed at defendant's request, held not erroneous, in view of their subsequent finding to that effect pursuant to court's repeated instruction and their verdict of not guilty. Gomez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 92, 206 S. W. 86.

12. Finding of guilt—Different counts.—Where one of several counts in an information is invalid for not being supported by the complaint and the evidence tends to support the offense attempted to be charged in such count, and there is a general verdict, a conviction will be set aside. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 326, 198 S. W. 958.

Where an indictment charges theft in one count, and receiving stolen property in another, a general verdict of guilty will support a judgment of guilty under either count. Moore v. State, 83 Cr. R. 302, 203 S. W. 51.

Where jury convicted under two counts for keeping a disorderly house, but imposed one penalty only, the conviction will be sustained if the evidence was sufficient as to either or both. Claunch v. State, 83 Cr. R. 378, 204 S. W. 436.

Where there was a general verdict of guilty, without special reference to either of two counts of an indictment, the court on appeal may apply the verdict to either of the two counts. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624.

Where indictment was in two counts, one charging theft, and the other receiving and concealing the property, and a general verdict of guilty was returned, and the trial court properly applied the verdict to the count charging theft, and rendered judgment accordingly. McCormick v. State, 86 Cr. R. 366, 216 S. W. 871.

Where the indictment contains two counts, and there is a general verdict of guilty, the verdict applies to either of the counts, and, if one is defective the verdict will be upheld under the other. Escue v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 483.

15. Assessment of punishment—Province of jury.—Juvenile delinquent law, fixing maximum and minimum punishment and giving right to trial by jury, requires that jury shall fix punishment, and commitment by the court was unauthorized and void. Ex parte Pruitt, 82 Cr. R. 394, 200 S. W. 392; Ex parte McLoud, 82 Cr. R. 299, 200 S. W. 394.

In prosecution for murder, fixing penalty was matter for jury; this court having no power or authority to fix penalty. Tiger v. State, 81 Cr. R. 614, 197 S. W. 716.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, under Pen. Code 1911, art. 1024, fixing punishment at not less than $25 nor more than $1,000, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than one month or more than two years, or by both fine and imprisonment, the extent of the punishment where guilt is established rests in the discretion of the jury, unless the jury is waived, as it may be in misdemeanor cases, in which case it is in the discretion of the trial judge, and the appellate court will not review the exercise of such discretion. Wagner v. State, 87 Cr. R. 47, 219 S. W. 471.

18. — Excessiveness of punishment.—That this court might have rendered a more merciful verdict would not alone authorize it to set aside the verdict. Davis v. State, 81 Cr. R. 450, 196 S. W. 520.

Punishment for offense of assault to murder was within exclusive province of jury, and, in absence of error or evidence tending to show verdict was result of and enhanced by passion and prejudice, it will not be disturbed on appeal solely on account of extent of punishment. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

Assessing punishment being in the discretion of the jury, a verdict within the limits of the statute is rarely set aside as excessive. Jones v. State, 83 Cr. R. 444, 203 S. W. 1101.

Art. 771. [751] When offense of different degree is charged.

See Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

Offenses for which conviction may be had.—An indictment charging assault with intent to rape includes, though not describing the means used to commit the lesser offense, a charge of aggravated assault. Cirul v. State, 83 Cr. R. 8, 200 S. W. 1088.

Where one charged with murder failed to complain at trial of charge on manslaughter, conviction of manslaughter will not be reversed. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

In view of Pen. Code, arts. 1433, 1434, 1435, and 1439, if a conspiracy was to kill another, it was included within conspiracy to commit murder. King v. State, 86 Cr. R. 407, 216 S. W. 1091.

Specifying grade or degree of offense.—Where information charged only aggravated assault, but upon the trial the evidence was such as to present the theory of both aggravated assault and simple assault, and the court instructed the jury upon the law of both offenses, a verdict, "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty as charged in the information, and assess his punishment at a fine of $25," was not indefinite or defective. Lewis v. State, 86 Cr. R. 135, 217 S. W. 695.

The decision of the degree of offense is for the jury. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

Art. 772. [752] Offenses consisting of degrees.

See Lewis v. State, 86 Cr. R. 135, 217 S. W. 695.

Subdivision 1.—A conviction of aggravated assault and battery may be had under an indictment for murder in the second degree, which charges defendant with killing the deceased "by striking, beating, bruising, and wounding him with a stick," independently of the provision, that murder shall include all assaults. Bean v. State, 25 Tex. App. 346, 8 S. W. 278.

Where one charged with murder failed to complain at trial of charge on manslaughter, conviction of manslaughter will not be reversed. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

One can be convicted of an assault to murder under an indictment charging murder. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

Subdivision 2.—An indictment charging assault with intent to rape includes, though not describing the means used to commit the lesser offense, a charge of aggravated assault. Cirul v. State, 83 Cr. R. 8, 200 S. W. 1088.

The offense of assault with intent to rape includes aggravated assault. Miller v. State, 84 Cr. R. 168, 206 S. W. 524.

Defendant under 21 years of age, indicted for assault with intent to rape, could be convicted of an aggravated assault on the female denounced by Ann. Pen. Code, art. 1022, subd. 6; the proof showing indecent familiarity with the person of the female against her will and without her consent. Hand v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 194.

Subdivision 13.—Where act is done with intent to commit crime, and tending, but failing, to effect commission, it is attempt to commit ultimate crime. Shipp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 328, 196 S. W. 840.

Art. 773. [753] Informal verdict may be corrected.

Matters which may be corrected.—The jury cannot be recalled, after they have been discharged, to substitute a valid for an invalid verdict. Ellis v. State, 27 Tex. App. 190, 11 S. W. 111.

Verdict finding defendant guilty on first count of indictment, where such count had not been submitted, held properly sent back for correction, by substitution of the word "second" for "first." Barnes v. State, 83 Cr. R. 207, 202 S. W. 949.

In prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, court did not err in permitting jury in open court, when returning the verdict, to correct it by inserting words "as charged in the indictment." Lewis v. State, 84 Cr. R. 499, 208 S. W. 516.

Review.—Art. 744, making necessary a bill of exception to any decision, opinion, order, or charge that is to be reviewed on appeal, not applying to the form or substance of a verdict, does not, in view of this article, make failure to object to a defective verdict a waiver of such defect. Moore v. State, 83 Cr. R. 302, 203 S. W. 51.

Art. 774. [754] If jury refuse to have verdict corrected.

Cited, Barnes v. State, 83 Cr. R. 207, 202 S. W. 949.

Art. 782. [762] Conviction of lower is acquittal of higher offense.

Conviction of lower as acquittal of higher offense.—Where accused was tried under counts for rape and incest, and both were submitted to the jury, which affirmatively found the defendant guilty of rape, there was an acquittal on the charge of incest. Mizell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 305, 203 S. W. 49.

In a prosecution for murder committed February 8, 1911, at which time murder was divided into two degrees, where a trial in 1911 resulted in a hung jury, but a subsequent trial resulted in a conviction of murder in the second degree, the acquittal of murder in the first degree by conviction in the second degree did not, on a subsequent trial, preclude a trial for murder, and require a trial for manslaughter only. Beaupre v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 517.

Previous conviction of manslaughter invalid because the verdict was rendered by a jury not sworn as required by law, cannot avail defendant to escape subsequent conviction of murder on the claim, in support of plea of former acquittal, that when one is tried under an indictment including several degrees of an offense, conviction of a smaller, as of manslaughter, operates as acquittal of a higher degree, as of murder. Huey v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 186.

1. GENERAL RULES

Article 783. [763] Rules of common law shall govern, except, etc.

Cited, Carroll v. State, 32 Cr. R. 431, 24 S. W. 100, 40 Am. St. Rep. 786; Williams v. State, 82 Cr. R. 48, 198 S. W. 316.

4. Judicial notice—In general.—The courts know as a matter of history of current events attending the recent trouble between the United States and Mexico wherein a column of troops under Gen. Pershing invaded that country and incidental fights and battles occurred in connection with the invasion. Arce v. State, 83 Cr. R. 292, 202 S. W. 951, L. R. A. 1918E, 358.

It is a matter for judicial cognizance and knowledge that the battle at San Ygnacio which occurred during the recent trouble between this country and Mexico was never disavowed by the Mexican de facto government. Id.

5. — Matters of common knowledge.—It is matter of common knowledge that, in storing and handling cotton seed and sorghum seed, the fact that the two kinds have become in some degree intermingled would not be a peculiarity or distinguishing feature establishing the identity of seed from one bale of cotton from seed from another. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 461, 208 S. W. 522.

It is well known that the characters of the men who frequent places where intoxicating liquor may be easily obtained and drinks are dispensed is not expected to be of the best weight. Surginer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 438, 217 S. W. 145.

6. — Geographical facts.—The court judicially knows that the city of Dallas is in Dallas county by reason of the statute, which fixes that place as the location of the Court of Civil Appeals. Sherman v. State, 83 Cr. R. 205, 202 S. W. 93.

Where proof shows the violation of the local option liquor law in Waco, the court will take judicial knowledge that Waco is in McLennan county. Bashara v. State, 84 Cr. R. 263, 206 S. W. 359.

As affecting the materiality of newly discovered evidence of defendant's presence in one town on the day of an alleged theft in another, the court judicially knows the distance, and that defendant's presence in both towns on that day was possible. Berry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 559, 223 S. W. 212.

The Court of Criminal Appeals will take judicial notice that Desote is not the county seat of Eastland county, Tex. Searcy v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 799.

8. — Laws and ordinances.—Courts do not take judicial knowledge of the holding and results of elections of putting in force local option laws in a given territory. Cline v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 668; Lagow v. State, 81 Cr. R. 460, 197 S. W. 217.

The courts cannot take judicial notice that any city has any given ordinance. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 274, 198 S. W. 964.

Under Charter of Ft. Worth, c. 11, § 6, the Court of Criminal Appeals is authorized to take judicial cognizance of the terms of chapter 3, § 3, authorizing policemen to make arrests without warrant on representation by a credible person that a felony has been committed, etc. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

Courts have no judicial knowledge of the existence of city ordinances nor their terms, and where they enter into a transaction, proof of them is essential. Terretto v. State, 86 Cr. R. 188, 215 S. W. 329.

Courts will take judicial cognizance of a proclamation of the Governor given under Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 60, § 7 (Civ. St. art. 7314e), but will not take judicial cognizance of the fact that a local option election has been held under such section, or that such law is in force in any particular territory. Felchack v. State, 87 Cr. R. 207, 220 S. W. 340.

9. — Organization and terms of courts and judicial proceedings.—Where defendant attacked an indictment for statutory rape on the ground that it was returned by the grand jury of Smith county, but charged that the offense was committed in Wood county, the courts will take judicial notice that the two counties are in the same judicial district, and that art. 254, allowing such a prosecution to be commenced and carried on in any county of the judicial district in which the offense was committed, was applicable. McIntosh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 417, 213 S. W. 659.

The court judicially knows that El Paso is a large city situated on the border of the state, and that veniremen in such county are not listed by jury commissioners, but are listed by drawing from a wheel the names of taxpayers, under art. 660. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

A Court of Criminal Appeals will take judicial notice that when an indictment was returned one who was later appointed as district judge was then district attorney. Strahan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 324, 221 S. W. 976.

The Court of Criminal Appeals has judicial knowledge that a particular person was not a judge of a given district. Dawes v. State, 87 Cr. R. 452, 222 S. W. 560.

The Court of Criminal Appeals judicially knows there are two district criminal courts in Dallas county, and that in the designation of only one does the number "2" occur. Haley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 519, 223 S. W. 202.

10. — Public officers.—Courts will take judicial cognizance of a proclamation of the Governor given under Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 60, § 7 (Civ. St. art. 7314e). Felchack v. State, 87 Cr. R. 207, 220 S. W. 340; Mulkey v. State, 83 Cr. R. 1, 201 S. W. 991.

Proof of violation of proclamation of Governor defining quarantine areas, etc., which did not purport to show that regulations had been prescribed by live stock sanitary commission, held not sufficient to support conviction of violation of rules and regulations of commission; for court cannot take judicial notice that rules proclaimed were those of commission. Mulkey v. State, 83 Cr. R. 1, 201 S. W. 991.

11. — Intoxicating beverages.—In a prosecution for the unlawful manufacturing of intoxicating liquors, where defendant admitted that he made whisky, further proof was not required to show that the whisky was intoxicating. Coats v. State, 86 Cr. R. 234, 215 S. W. 856; Grandberry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 232, 216 S. W. 164.

The court will take judicial notice that whisky is intoxicating. Bashara v. State, 84 Cr. R. 263, 206 S. W. 359.

13. Presumptions.—Presumptions cannot form the basis of other presumptions. Wilkie v. State, 83 Cr. R. 490, 203 S. W. 1091; Davidson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 433, 208 S. W. 664.

That free dipping vats have not been provided by the county does not excuse an owner of cattle from refusing to obey the tick eradication statute; the presumption being that the commission would refuse to order cattle dipped in any vat where exorbitant charges were attempted. Emberline v. State, 85 Cr. R. 399, 212 S. W. 952.

The Court of Criminal Appeals cannot assume from mere identity of names that the maker of a complaint for adultery was the same person as the woman named in the complaint as the adulteress, to sustain defendant's contention that such woman was an accomplice, and therefore not a credible person within art. 479. Halbadier v. State, 85 Cr. R. 593, 214 S. W. 349.

Since it is the duty of the clerk of court to have the affidavit required by art. 824, preliminary to issuing commission to take deposition, the presumption obtains prima facie at least that the affidavit was present before the commission was issued. Barton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 198, 215 S. W. 968.

If property be taken in such a manner as to make it reasonably appear that all was taken at or about the same time and place, and the proof shows that defendant took a part of it, it will be presumed that he took all of such property. Bride v. State, 86 Cr. R. 535, 218 S. W. 762.

In the state of Texas chastity is presumed. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

The presumptions are in favor of the validity of a judgment convicting relator of juvenile delinquency in a collateral proceeding by habeas corpus. Guinn v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 233.

Injury from a given act will not be presumed unless the proof is such as to make apparent such fact. Walden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 523.

14. Relevancy of evidence—In general.—To meet testimony of defendant that deceased cursed and swore at him, testimony that deceased had year before joined church, and had not sworn since, is inadmissible. Huey v. State, 81 Cr. R. 554, 197 S. W. 202.

Testimony of merchant, father of deceased, as to details of business transactions with defendant's father, held inadmissible. Wallace v. State, 82 Cr. R. 588, 200 S. W. 407.

That defendant's bill at decedent's father's store was unsatisfied at time of trial, and that deceased's lodge dues were paid by member of his family after he was stabbed held inadmissible. Id.

In prosecution for defendant for assault with intent to murder his son-in-law, evidence that victim had married defendant's daughter to avoid a prosecution for seduction and that he had undertaken to produce an abortion upon her held admissible as explanatory of a conversation between defendant and victim just preceding difficulty. Bolin v. State, 83 Cr. R. 590, 204 S. W. 335.

In prosecution for murder, testimony of witness present at shooting that after he had gone for help he became scared to go back, was inadmissible as immaterial, irrelevant, and prejudicial. Walker v. State, 84 Cr. R. 136, 206 S. W. 96.

In a prosecution for violation of the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in prohibition territory, evidence as to the number of defendant's family held immaterial. Bird v. State, 84 Cr. R. 285, 206 S. W. 844.

Evidence that the sheriff and constable brutally beat defendant's cook in an endeavor to make her testify against defendant, and that she was placed in jail without process, is admissible to show how the witness was treated and the attempt to force her to make statements which she said were untrue. Finks v. State, 84 Cr. R. 536, 209 S. W. 154.

In homicide prosecution, evidence that witness was present at the examining trial was not objectionable. Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959.

In a larceny prosecution, that an officer identified the purse stolen as the purse identified by a witness, when as a matter of fact such purse was not identified, does not render such evidence inadmissible. Charles v. State, 85 Cr. R. 534, 213 S. W. 266.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, evidence of prosecuting witness' good reputation is not admissible unless such reputation has been attacked. Knight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 134, 220 S. W. 333.

16. — Time and place of criminal act.—In a prosecution for violating local option law, testimony as to a conversation with defendant tending to prove that the transaction took place on a certain date is material on the question of limitations. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 555, 204 S. W. 231.

17. — Evidence creating prejudice against accused.—Wife of deceased, who did not see the difficulty, but only heard a remark of deceased, should not have been allowed to testify that she was confined in bed with an infant, as it could serve only to influence the jury from sympathy; she and deceased being white, and defendant a negro. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 422, 214 S. W. 353, 18. — Circumstantial evidence.—See Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 640, 218 S. W. 750; James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

That defendant in homicide case had knowledge that deceased was nearly blind may be shown from circumstances. Clayton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 57, 201 S. W. 172.

Admissions, accompanied by explanatory statements, which were not specific admissions of taking of property charged to have been stolen, did not take case out of rule of circumstantial evidence. Rollins v. State, 83 Cr. R. 345, 203 S. W. 355.

In prosecution for theft of cattle from father and son, father being dead at time of trial, his want of consent to taking could be proved by circumstantial evidence. Gomez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 92, 206 S. W. 86.

To render evidence admissible in a case depending on circumstantial evidence, it is enough that it tends to prove the issue or constitute a link in the chain of proof, though standing alone it might not justify a verdict; and in such cases incidents may be legitimate evidence, which would be deemed irrelevant in a case depending on direct testimony. Haley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 629, 209 S. W. 675, 3 A. L. R. 779.

In prosecution for receiving stolen sheep, state's dependence being on circumstances alone, it was permissible for defendant to introduce every relevant circumstance from which a conclusion could be drawn, favorable to his innocence. Wilson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 94, 210 S. W. 542.

Evidence in proof of a conspiracy to commit crime will generally, from the nature of the case, be circumstantial. Burow v. State, 85 Cr. R. 133, 210 S. W. 805.

Where positive and direct evidence is attainable, it is not permissible for the state to resort to circumstances to verify or prove a fact. Meredith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 239, 211 S. W. 227.

When the actual killing is done by another, the mere presence of accused does not deprive him of the privilege of having his criminal connection with the offense determined by the rule of circumstantial evidence. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 411, 213 S. W. 639.

Under the rule that circumstances are admissible which tend to prove the issue, and incidents are legitimate which would be irrelevant depending upon direct testimony, and that circumstances may be established where they tend to make the proposition more or less probable, in a murder trial where there was evidence that deceased was killed in an automobile in such manner that his hair and blood probably have been upon it, and that the hair and blood found on a certain car at a garage two days after the killing were similar to that found upon the objects with the body of deceased, it was proper for the state to trace the car by evidence from the time it was found with blood on it back to the time it left the garage before the homicide in a different condition, without proof that an individual in whose possession it was shown to be during such time was a coconspirator with accused. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

Proof of conspiracy as basis for admission of evidence of acts and declarations of coconspirators, see Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

19. — Allibi.—Where defendant claimed that he was some miles from the place of the killing at such a time that it would have been impossible for him to have fired the fatal shot, testimony by one who saw defendant as to the time it would have taken to have ridden from the place of the killing to the point where defendant was seen is admissible. Finks v. State, 84 Cr. R. 536, 209 S. W. 154.

20. — Incriminating others.—See Curry v. State, 85 Cr. R. 443, 213 S. W. 268; Gilbert v. State, 85 Cr. R. 597, 215 S. W. 106; James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

One accused of crime may show that another person committed the offense with which he is charged, where the guilt of such other would be consistent with the innocence of accused, but the proof must be by competent evidence. Walsh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 208, 211 S. W. 241; Greenwood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 548, 208 S. W. 662.

Where identity of offender is in issue or his connection with offense controverted, it is generally permissible to introduce evidence of acts and declarations of third parties which tend to show that they and not accused committed offense. Chenault v. State, 83 Cr. R. 104, 201 S. W. 657; Jackson v. Same, 83 Cr. R. 106, 83 Cr. R. 653.

In a prosecution for the sale of intoxicants in violation of the local option prohibition law, where there were two sales of the same whisky, one by defendant to a stool pigeon, and one by the stool pigeon to the officer who employed him, evidence that the stool pigeon had been indicted for making the sale to the officer, and convicted on his plea of guilty, held inadmissible, not being a relevant or material fact on the issues on trial. Canales v. State, 86 Cr. R. 142, 215 S. W. 964.

Where circumstantial evidence is relied on to prove the guilt of defendant, he may introduce evidence tending to show that another having motive to commit the offense was in such proximity that he might have been the author. Kelley v. State, 86 Cr. R. 281, 216 S. W. 188.

In a prosecution for theft of turkeys, evidence that a witness for the state made an effort to induce the owners to forego a prosecution and offered to pay them for the turkeys was admissible as tending to exculpate defendant and to emphasize the suspicion cast by circumstances upon him. Mandosa v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 169.

It is in all cases proper to prove by competent evidence that the offense was committed by a person other than the accused. Id.

22. Transactions to which accused is not a party—Evidence held inadmissible.—See Standifer v. State, 85 Cr. R. 394, 212 S. W. 954.

In a prosecution for murder committed after a quarrel between defendant and deceased over a statement made by deceased that defendant had been out in a pasture with a woman, evidence that such woman was not present at the trial, although the state had applied for process for her appearance, and the return of the officer that she could not be found, was wrongly admitted, where no effort was made to connect defendant with the witness' failure to appear. Parker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 222, 216 S. W. 178.

In prosecution for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors in local option territory, testimony of prosecuting witness that another had sold him whisky at defendant's place of business was inadmissible, where it was not shown that defendant was present when such sale was made, nor that he authorized or knew of the same, and where such sale is not the basis of present prosecution. Surginer v. State, 86 Cr. R. 438, 217 S. W. 145.

Mere corruptive or compromising efforts, words, or acts of friends or relatives, attempted in behalf of accused, whose own connection therewith does not appear, are not admissible against him. Nader v. State, 86 Cr. R. 424, 219 S. W. 474.

In a prosecution for homicide, it was not permissible to show the manner in which the body of deceased was buried, or that he was a pauper, buried at the expense of the county, and that he was wrapped in a bloody sheet and buried without clothes on; accused not being present when any of such things occurred. Gusters v. State, 87 Cr. R. 181, 220 S. W. 92.

In a prosecution for homicide, it would not be proper for the state to show that there had been six murders in the county within six months and four within four miles of the courthouse. Id.

In a prosecution for receiving and concealing stolen property, it was improper to permit the alleged thief to testify over objection that he had broken into other stores than the one from which the goods in question were taken, where accused was not connected with such other thefts and did not contend that the property in question was not stolen by the alleged thief. Joiner v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 333.

It is not proper in a criminal prosecution to permit the admission of evidence of acts of persons other than the accused not in the presence or hearing of the accused. Id.

23. — Evidence held admissible.—In prosecution under Pen. Code, art. 506a, for inducing D. to become an inmate of a house of prostitution kept by defendant and her husband, testimony of P., a prostitute, that she went to house in question and registered and occupied a room therein for the purpose of prostitution was admissible, though defendant was not present in the lobby of the house when P. entered and defendant's husband assigned P. a room. Dollar v. State, 86 Cr. R. 398, 216 S. W. 1089.

24. — Indictment, acquittal or conviction of third persons.—It is not proper in a prosecution for highway robbery to permit the state to prove that a codefendant has been convicted and sent to the penitentiary for highway robbery. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen goods, where the state proved the theft of the goods from the railroad warehouse by the party alleged in the indictment, defendant could not offer evidence of conviction of railroad employees for embezzlement arising out of the same transaction, where such employees were not witnesses in the case. Kluting v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 305.

26. Conduct of accused subsequent to offense.—In the prosecution of a state bank president for unlawfully becoming indebted to the bank by being a member of a partnership which borrowed money from the bank in the name of two others, it was error to admit evidence of transactions after the alleged offense tending to show a partnership at that time. Le Master v. State, 81 Cr. R. 577, 196 S. W. 829.

In prosecution for swindling, where bankruptcy schedule by defendant, made after alleged swindling, was introduced, objection that the debts therein were contracted after the alleged swindling held sufficient to render the schedule inadmissible. Whitehead v. State, 81 Cr. R. 278, 196 S. W. 851.

27. — Flight or resisting arrest.—Where one went to a picnic with several others, and several persons were robbed by members of the party at about the same time, and defendant was arrested for one of the robberies and broke jail and fled, evidence of such flight was admissible on a prosecution for robbing one of the other persons. Hicks v. State, 82 Cr. R. 254, 199 S. W. 487.

Testimony of witnesses who claimed that when they went to arrest defendant they saw him at distance and called to him is not subject to objection that there was no proof that defendant heard them; there being evidence that defendant was within hearing distance, and that he was aware that burglary had been discovered. Burnett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 97, 201 S. W. 409.

In prosecution for perjury committed on writ of habeas corpus for bail in a homicide case, evidence as to defendant's evasion of process to bring him in as witness on trial for homicide was not admissible against him on theory he was fugitive. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

In a prosecution for the larceny of an automobile, evidence that defendant, while in custody under a charge in the county court for taking the car broke jail and fled, was admissible in the district court; the cases not being separate or distinct, but involving the same act and the same facts. Torrence v. State, 85 Cr. R. 310, 212 S. W. 957.

Where, in a prosecution for theft of a hog, officers who were searching his premises found the alleged stolen hogs and arrested defendant, evidence that defendant fired at the officers when an attempt was made to search him was admissible. Griffin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 194, 220 S. W. 330.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, evidence that defendant, who had accompanied the person assaulted to the hospital, refused to wait until a third party could take him home in his automobile, but returned home immediately, held inadmissible to show flight. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 392, 221 S. W. 1083.

Proof that defendant failed to appear in accord with a bail bond or recognizance is admissible against him. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 213.

29. — Suppression or fabrication of evidence.—In prosecution for passing forged instruments, that defendant, after being indicted, attempted at night to get into the courthouse to gain access to the papers involved was admissible, and the details were admissible on the question of whether his intent was simply to inspect the documents or to destroy evidence. Fry v. State, 83 Cr. R. 500, 203 S. W. 1096.

Testimony of woman who accompanied defendant after shooting as to conversation with him held admissible as tending to show that defendant was trying to "fix" her so that she would testify in his behalf to what was not true. Flewellen v. State, 83 Cr. R. 568, 204 S. W. 657.

In a homicide case, it was error to permit the sheriff to testify that certain women desired as witnesses had disappeared, and to show in connection with his testimony subpoenas for them, together with the sheriff's return thereon stating that they could not be found, where there was nothing to show that accused had been instrumental in causing their disappearance. Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509.

In murder prosecution, where defendant's claim that the killing occurred during second interview with deceased as to a second act of misconduct of deceased toward defendant's wife was denied by prosecution, evidence of a statement of witness to defendant, following first misconduct of deceased and prior to second misconduct, that defendant had lost his right to act when he first met deceased after receiving information as to first misconduct, was admissible to show motive for fabrication of evidence as to the second interview. Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

In murder prosecution, where witnesses to the killing were on terms of friendly intimacy with defendant until about two months after the killing, when they began to talk to different parties about defendant's guilty connection with the killing, and were shortly thereafter murdered, evidence tending to show that defendant killed such witnesses to suppress their testimony held admissible. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

In a prosecution for receiving goods known to have been stolen, where the defendant denied that the goods were brought to him by the thief in accordance with a previous understanding, and denied guilty knowledge, evidence of defendant's possession of other stolen property was competent to show his intent and guilty knowledge. Kluting v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 305.

In a prosecution for the theft of a hog, where the defense was an innocent connection with the pig and the denial of any fraudulent intent, and a belief that the pig was one bought by him from another, and defendant's wife had testified that the two shoats were brought to and placed by the defendant at the same time, the fact of defendant's possession of the alleged stolen property, and also his possession at the same time of other stolen property, would be admissible, the latter as rebutting his claim of possession in good faith, so it was not error to admit testimony that the other pig belonged to a party other than defendant. Stone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 818.

In prosecution for forgery, involving the issue of whether the name defendant was charged with having forged was his true name, testimony regarding similar transactions with others, in which defendant represented that his name was another name than that charged to have been forged, held admissible to show intent and system. *Chadwick v. In prosecution for receiving stolen goods, where accused relied on the theory of purchase in good faith, the state should have been permitted to show a long course of dealing with one accustomed to burglarize stores, by which accused purchased such stolen goods, on the theory that a series of acts of the nature of that involved in the offense charged may be proved to determine intent. (Per Morrow, J.) Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 113, 201 S. W. 1002.

In a prosecution for theft of an automobile, the theft by defendant of other automobiles can only be shown by the state where it appears in developing the res gestæ, becomes necessary to connect the defendant with the case on trial, shows intent if that is an issue or tends to show a system as distinguished from systematic crimes; and evidence of other thefts is not admissible without one of those elements, though such thefts were committed in pursuance of the same conspiracy under which the theft in the case on trial occurred. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 869.

In a prosecution for robbery, where defendant was not charged with robbery by firearms, testimony of the arresting officer that defendant was armed with an automatic pistol at the time of arrest the night after the robbery was inadmissible, as it did not tend to connect defendant with the offense charged, shed no light on his intent or identity in connection therewith, and had no bearing on showing system. Stanchel v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 120.

In prosecution for forgery, involving the issue of whether the name defendant was charged with having forged was his true name, testimony regarding similar transactions with others, in which defendant represented that his name was another name than that charged to have been forged, held admissible to show intent and system. Chadwick v. State, 86 Cr. R. 337, 216 S. W. 865.

Where accused seeks the benefit of the suspended sentence act, it is not necessary that the fact that he had never been convicted of a felony be proved by the record, since a record may be the best evidence of an affirmative fact but is not required to negative the existence of a given fact. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 57.

67. — Official records.—The fact that a witness was a deputy district clerk at the time of a certain criminal prosecution could be established by oral testimony of such witness and that of district clerk under whom he worked without introducing records of appointment. *Roberts v. St. art. 7314e). Emberline v. State, 85 Cr. R. 399, 212 S. W. 952.

State* (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 305.

70. — Conveyances, contracts and other instruments.—Where a witness for the state, in a prosecution for the theft of and receiving and concealing of certain stolen automobile casings, gave from memory the serial number of one of said casings, the fact that there was a list, invoice, or written memorandum containing said numbers did not make his statement secondary evidence, he having merely stated his knowledge of a fact. Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

71. — Books of account.—In prosecution of agent for embezzlement by failing to remit proceeds collected for principal, principal's employé who had charge of the keeping of its books was not competent to state his conclusions touching the contents of the book in the absence of the production of the books and the verification by him of their correctness, by testifying that the account of particular sale had not been collected. Herberg v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

As a general rule the opinion of a witness is not admissible to interpret the written or spoken language of another. Ochoa v. State, 87 Cr. R. 318, 221 S. W. 973.

In a prosecution for homicide, where a witness as to decedent's dying declaration, when asked whether decedent said anything to indicate whether or not he thought he was going to die, stated he did not "know just the words, but he meant," and on objection and direction to tell the substance stated decedent thought he would die, such testimony was not objectionable as the witness' conclusion. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

In prosecution for assault with intent to murder, where defendant, on cross-examination of assaulted officer, asked what accused told him concerning what he was doing at the time he was accosted by the officer, to which the officer replied, "He did not say he was doing anything; he said he was going home," to which counsel replied, "Going home, is not that doing something?" and an objection was sustained to the last question, the court instructing defendant's counsel that he would permit him to prove that defendant said he was going home, but not draw any conclusion from the statement, there was no error. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 509.

135. — Questions of law.—In a prosecution of a switchman for stealing automobile tires from a box car, where defendant claimed to have found them in a car which had been unloaded by consignee, and the state alleged ownership in the freight agent, the sustaining of the state's objection to a question asked such agent as to whether he would be responsible for things left in the car by consignee was not error, since it called for testimony as to a proposition of law rather than fact, and the test of ownership in the special owner under an indictment for theft is not whether such owner would be responsible for loss. Monroe v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 995.

136. Admissibility of opinions of nonexperts.—Proof of insanity, see notes under Penal Code, art. 40.

Witnesses who had known defendant intimately for years may give their opinion that when they arrested him, immediately after the offense, he was not insane. Long v. State, 82 Cr. R. 312, 200 S. W. 160.

137. — Province of jury.—In homicide prosecution, question asked defendant's sister whether it was not a fact that she, her father, and defendant had had no intention of pleading insanity until after the examining trial, and people had testified that the reputation of witness and defendant for virtue and chastity was bad, leading them to think that their plea of insult to female relative was broken down, and answer thereto that witness "knew it at the examining trial," and "as soon as we employed our lawyer," did not invade province of jury. Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959.

Questions of district attorney as to whether the questions asked the victim while he was making dying declaration were such as would lead victim to make any particular answer, as well as the answer of witness, was but a conclusion upon a question for the jury to decide, and should have been excluded. Walker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 482, 214 S. W. 331.

On a trial of an alleged accomplice to a murder committed by his paramour, she should not have been permitted to testify that expressions used in defendant's letters to her referred to the contemplated poisoning of deceased, where she stated no rule by which she was able to determine that the language of the letters meant other than the words and context would indicate, as defendant's meaning was to be ascertained by the jury from the letters and surrounding circumstances. Ochoa v. State, 87 Cr. R. 318, 221 S. W. 973.

In a homicide case, where accused killed deceased with a rifle, claiming that he shot in self-defense, in that deceased was firing at him with a shotgun, and that some of the shot hit him, the distance that the shotgun would kill or seriously injure one became the proper subject of inquiry, although opinion testimony as to such matters should not be used to deprive the accused of the privilege of having the jury solve the question of self-defense by consideration of the matters as they reasonably appeared to him at the time. Medford v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 504.

138. — Impressions from collective facts.—In a murder trial, the admission of conclusion of deceased's brother that deceased was not armed is not erroneous, where the witness put the jury in possession of all the facts upon which he based such statement. Castleberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 271, 206 S. W. 353.

The opinion of witnesses was admissible as to the extent of defendant's intoxication, which would not excuse the offense, but might mitigate the punishment in view of Pen. Code, art. 41. Haag v. State, 87 Cr. R. 604, 223 S. W. 472.

139. — Identity of persons and things.—A witness who has made measurements of the tracks and the foot or shoe of the defendant or who has made some comparison, as placing shoe in tracks, or who has detailed peculiarities in tracks, which correspond with shoes or with proven or admitted tracks of defendant, may give opinion as to similarity of tracks. Mueller v. State, 85 Cr. R. 346, 215 S. W. 93.

Testimony of foreman of ranch to the effect that he saw calf tracks and two horse tracks leading from one pasture to another was properly admitted, as he was competent to give an opinion as to whether certain tracks were calf and horse tracks. McClain v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 550.

In a prosecution for having in possession intoxicating liquors not for medical, etc., purposes, in violation of the Dean Act, testimony of a witness that from his experience in manufacturing, drinking, and handling whisky, he could tell that the bottle shown him contained homemade whisky, and that it was intoxicating, held admissible. Rainey v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 118.

In a prosecution for having in possession intoxicating liquors not for medical, etc., purposes, in violation of the Dean Act, testimony of a state witness, who said he was acquainted with the smell of whisky and had smelled lots of it, that the bottles taken from defendant's car, from their odor, contained whisky, and testimony of another witness, who said he had not much experience with whisky, but that in his judgment that shown him was whisky, was also admissible. Id.

In a prosecution for having in possession equipment for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor not for medicinal, etc., purposes, testimony that liquor in a bottle found in defendant's car was of the same kind as that in jugs in his barn did not involve any question of expert testimony. Thielepape v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 769.

140. — Time.—In a prosecution for murder of defendant's wife, testimony of a witness that in his opinion defendant could not possibly have gotten home, committed the murder, and gone out and summoned help within the time charged, was properly excluded. Beaupre v. State (Cr. App.) 206 S. W. 517.

141. — Cause and effect.—In a prosecution for murder, where there was some conflict in the testimony as to whether two shots were fired simultaneously, one by deceased and the other by accused, and as to who fired first, a witness may be allowed to testify that an automatic pistol of the caliber of that of deceased, in shooting smokeless powder would make very little noise. Berrian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 367, 212 S. W. 509.

142. — Facts forming basis of opinion.—Where insanity is an issue, it is competent for the state to call witnesses to prove the conversations and conduct of an accused, not admitting guilt, while in jail, as a basis for an opinion as to the sanity or insanity. Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014.

Witness, after stating that he found a panel of the door broken out or removed, could state that one could reach through the space and remove the latch so as to open the door. Elliott v. State, 83 Cr. R. 366, 203 S. W. 766.

Where facts are detailed showing the individuality of a particular track in question and that the admitted or proven track immediately connected with the accused possessed the same marks or characteristics, the fact that the same was not measured is only an objection to the probative force and not the admissibility of opinion evidence. Mueller v. State, 85 Cr. R. 346, 215 S. W. 93.

In cattle theft prosecution witnesses, with much experience in tracking cattle and horses and who gave peculiarities of tracks at different places, were properly permitted to testify that in their opinion the horse's tracks which accompanied tracks of stolen cattle were the same as tracks made by horse ridden by defendant, having stated the facts on which their testimony was based. Id.

Where the deputy sheriff testified that he saw the tracks of three persons at the place where the animal was stolen, the tracks of one making a deeper impression in the mud than the other, testimony by such deputy that he observed defendant's tracks through a thin layer of sand on the sidewalk of the courthouse, and that they resembled the tracks at the place of the theft, was inadmissible; there having been no measurement and no other peculiarity mentioned indicating that defendant made the tracks. Casanova v. State, 87 Cr. R. 63, 219 S. W. 478.

On the trial of an alleged accomplice to a murder, where the alleged murderer confessed, and letters from defendant to her were admitted in evidence, and she testified that defendant in a previous conversation arranged to refer to deceased in his letters by a fictitious name, her testimony that such name in one of the letters referred to deceased was admissible. Ochoa v. State, 87 Cr. R. 318, 221 S. W. 973.

In prosecution for theft of property of the value of more than $50, involving issue as to value of property taken, admission of testimony by prosecuting witness as to the value of a certain razor enumerated in the indictment as a part of the alleged stolen property was not error, where such razor was under the care, control, and management of prosecuting witness, though he testified that the razor belonged to another party. Narango v. State, 87 Cr. R. 493, 222 S. W. 564.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, court erred in permitting witness to testify that certain horse tracks which he saw at one place were similar to those seen by himself at another place, over the objection that no peculiarity in such tracks was shown, and nothing stated by which same could be identified. McClain v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 550.

143. Subjects of expert testimony.—Proof of insanity, see notes under Penal Code, art. 40.

Proof of handwriting, see notes under art. 814, post.

Testimony of qualified expert that finger prints on paper admitted to be defendant's were identical with those on broken window in burglarized premises, made by same person, was admissible. McGarry v. State, 82 Cr. R. 597, 200 S. W. 527.

It was permissible for president of bank, which was depository for years of school funds, to explain meaning of language of check drawn by county superintendent of schools, set out in indictment for forgery, superintendent being charged with having forged name of payee thereto. Carrell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 554, 209 S. W. 158.

In prosecution for rape on child under age of consent, appearance and condition of prosecutrix becomes material, where there is denial of fact of intercourse, and testimony of experts is always admissible to show conditions rendering intercourse with some one likely, and in all cases where evidence of other acts between parties would tend to shed light on conditions testified to, testimony of other acts is admissible. Anderson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 230, 220 S. W. 775.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, testimony of a medical witness as to the character of the instrument with which the fatal wound was inflicted held admissible. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

144. — Cause and effect.—On trial for murder, held that qualified witness should have been permitted to testify that axe could not have inflicted the fatal wound, because it would have made a wound of a different appearance. Boozar v. State, 82 Cr. R. 72, 198 S. W. 295.

In prosecution for murder, a surgeon who attended deceased from shortly after shooting until his death, and who testified as to the wound, the range of the bullet, and the place of entry, may testify as an expert that a bullet, if fired into a man lying on a fence, could have taken the range taken by bullet that killed deceased. Houseton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 453, 204 S. W. 1007.

A physician may testify as an expert to the nature of a wound and its probable cause and effect. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 15, 218 S. W. 1052, 8 A. L. R. 1316.

In prosecution for murder committed by throwing a bottle at deceased, involving issue of whether defendant had an intent to kill when he threw the bottle, question to the physician as to whether an empty quart bottle, thrown 30 feet and striking a man square on the top of the head, was likely to produce death, held to call for improper expert testimony, it calling for a mere conjecture, and not an opinion founded on fact or knowledge acquired as a physician. Tolston v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1098.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, a physician's testimony that penetration of female organs by the male organ would probably rupture the hymen held properly excluded, where there was no evidence of an examination of prosecutrix having been made, or testimony offered as to the condition of the private parts of prosecutrix. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 673.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, testimony of a medical witness as to the character of the instrument with which the fatal wound was inflicted, together with his opinion as to the cause of death, held admissible. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

145. Competency of experts.—Generally speaking, the decision of the trial judge as to the qualification of an expert to give testimony is not reviewable. Anselmo v. State, 82 Cr. R. 595, 200 S. W. 523.

In a homicide case, a physician may testify as an expert as to gunshot wounds, though his knowledge is derived alone from the study of books, and he had had no practical experience. English v. State, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

Witnesses, who stated that they were familiar with children and their ages by reason of having been managers for a number of years of an orphanage and who had seen prosecutrix soon after alleged rape and had known her intimately since, were competent to testify that in their judgment she was 12 or 13 years of age. Wooldridge v. State, 86 Cr. R. 348, 217 S. W. 143.

A physician may testify as an expert to the nature of a wound. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 15, 218 S. W. 1052, 8 A. L. R. 1316.

146. Examination of experts.—In a prosecution for murder of defendant's mistress, where defendant's medical witness testified as to the dislocation of the woman's left shoulder, his testimony, elicited by the state, that it was not an unusual thing that the shoulder could be relocated, as was testified by a physician for the state, was legitimate and proper. Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 55, 219 S. W. 821.

In a prosecution for homicide, where the doctor who saw deceased testified as to the course of the bullet, it was not improper on cross-examination to show him clothing worn by deceased, and question as to where the bullet entered, it appearing that this witness testified to much experience with gunshot wounds, etc., and the same general knowledge which would qualify him to express an opinion as to the entry and exit of a bullet in the body would qualify him to testify as to entry of a bullet through the clothing. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

147. — Facts forming basis of opinion.—Physician's testimony as to defendant's sanity, based on observation of and conversation with defendant while in jail, was admissible whether defendant was warned or not, as to use of physician's testimony against him, not being of criminative character in connection with case on trial. Coates v. State, 83 Cr. R. 309, 203 S. W. 904.

In prosecution of a negro for aggravated assault by using his pistol as a bludgeon on a white man, so-called expert testimony of a physician that such a weapon used by a strong man as a bludgeon could inflict serious fatal injury or even death was inadmissible as elicited by a hypothetical question not based on the particular facts. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 15, 218 S. W. 1052, 8 A. L. R. 1316.

149. Evidence on former trial or hearing.—Testimony of accused, see note 7 under art. 790.

As violating constitutional guaranty of confrontation of witnesses, see art. 4, note 17.

In theft prosecution, incriminating testimony given by accused on previous trial for theft is admissible. Taylor v. State, 82 Cr. R. 210, 199 S. W. 289.

Testimony of witness at examining trial since removed from state is admissible at trial. Young v. State, 82 Cr. R. 257, 199 S. W. 479.

Testimony of witness in proceedings before a magistrate or coroner's inquest, who was then aware that he was charged or suspected of crime under investigation, cannot be received against him upon his trial for same offense, unless he was warned. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 443, 199 S. W. 636.

In trial for homicide, testimony of defendant on an investigation wherein she was charged or suspected of the crime, offered to fix culpability upon her, held not admissible on ground that it was merely exculpatory. Id.

Where witness testifying in former trial is out of state and cannot be reached, his former testimony may be proved and introduced without violating constitutional right to be confronted by witnesses. Robbins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 650, 200 S. W. 525.

Defendant's silence on first trial when witness absent on second trial testified defendant at time of affray involved made remark indicating murderous intent does not render admissible, on second trial, testimony of absent witness as to such remark. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 252, 202 S. W. 737.

Testimony given before the examining court by witness who at time of trial was in Mexico was admissible upon the trial. Modello v. State, 85 Cr. R. 291, 211 S. W. 944.

Where a defendant in a homicide case was present at the examining trial, it is not error to reproduce the testimony of a witness given at such trial who has since died; such witness having been cross-examined in defendant's interest. English v. State, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

On the second trial of a homicide case, the former testimony of decedent's wife, who died before the second trial, was properly admitted. Mitchell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 530, 222 S. W. 983.

The testimony of a witness on former trial may be reproduced where since such witness has testified he has died or has removed beyond the limits of the state or become insane or is prevented from attending the trial through the acts of accused. Yingo v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 858.

The testimony of a witness who died since a former trial may be reproduced by another witness. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 309.

The testimony given at a former trial by a witness, who had removed from the state and whose return thereto was indefinite, held admissible on the subsequent trial. Brent v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 845.

150. — Preliminary proof.—Showing that testimony at examining trial of witness since removed from state was not reduced to writing by magistrate with formality required by art. 300, necessary for oral proof thereof over the objection that the written testimony was the best evidence held sufficient. Young v. State, 82 Cr. R. 257, 199 S. W. 479.

In absence of predicate laid for testimony of absent witness on former trial by showing his death or removal, it was not competent to reproduce former testimony. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 252, 202 S. W. 737.

Proof that witness was living in other state held a sufficient predicate for the reproduction of her former testimony. Revels v. State, 88 Cr. R. 36, 224 S. W. 689.

In a prosecution for incest, predicate laid for the reproduction of testimony on former trial held insufficient; the showing being that the witness was not present at the trial and no one knew where he was or why he was absent. Wingo v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 858.

A letter written by a witness, who had testified at a former trial, but who had since moved to another state, stating that such other state is her present and future home, but expressing a desire at some indefinite future time to return, held insufficient to warrant rejection of the testimony given at former trial, offered in evidence on ground that witness had since moved beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Brent v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 845.

151. — Method of proof.—One may read his notes of testimony at examining trial of witness removed from state; he thus in effect refreshing his memory. Young v. State, 82 Cr. R. 257, 199 S. W. 479.

In prosecution for murder of a daughter, refusal to admit in evidence transcribed stenographer's notes taken by a private stenographer of defendant's counsel at the examining trial showing that a witness' statement as to what accused said with reference to killing whole family was not just the same as testimony at trial, held not error. Anderson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 276, 202 S. W. 953.

Where the stenographer testified to the correct transcription of her lost notes on testimony of former trial, and that the narrative statement of a deceased witness offered in the second trial was correct, and the statement of facts was agreed on as correct on appeal in the first trial, the statement was admissible to prove the former testimony of such witness. Mitchell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 530, 222 S. W. 983.

152. Weight and sufficiency of evidence.—In criminal prosecution, conflicts in testimony of prosecuting witness go to its weight, but not its sufficiency, to sustain conviction. Parker v. State, 83 Cr. R. 81, 200 S. W. 1083.

The defense of "alibi" arises when there is evidence that accused was at a point where he could not have been guilty of participating in the offense. Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509.

The jury was authorized to reject or disbelieve defendant's testimony and that of his witnesses on controverted matters. Lagow v. State, 85 Cr. R. 69, 210 S. W. 211.

The mere presence of accused at the time and place of the homicide does not justify his conviction. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 411, 213 S. W. 639.

Where facts are detailed showing the individuality of a particular track in question, and that the admitted or proven track immediately connected with the accused possessed the same marks or characteristics, the fact that the same was not measured is only an objection to the probative force of opinion evidence. Mueller v. State, 85 Cr. R. 346, 215 S. W. 93.

Proof of defendant's bad reputation for honesty cannot support his conviction, in the absence of facts of sufficient cogency to prove his guilt of the offense involved. Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 640, 218 S. W. 750.

In prosecution for robbery where defendant claimed an alibi, the testimony of prosecuting witness and evidence as to similarity of tracks with defendant's footprints held sufficient proof of identification to sustain conviction. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 415.

The exactness with which footprints made by defendant's shoes correspond to peculiar foot prints leading from place of robbery is high character of evidence of identification. Id.

153. — Circumstantial evidence.—See art. 1140, note 36; Meredith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 239, 211 S. W. 227.

Circumstantial evidence, to convict, must be sufficiently strong to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except guilt of accused. Wilkie v. State, 83 Cr. R. 490, 203 S. W. 1091; Dowdell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 472, 213 S. W. 649; Wales v. State, 86 Cr. R. 183, 217 S. W. 384.

Venue in a criminal action may be shown by circumstantial evidence. Allen v. State, 82 Cr. R. 416, 199 S. W. 633; Phillips v. State, 83 Cr. R. 16, 200 S. W. 1091.

It is not essential that any one of the proven circumstances shall be sufficient to support conviction, if the verdict of conviction is supported beyond a reasonable doubt by the combined and cumulative force of all of the incriminating circumstances established. Finch v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 528; Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

In prosecution for hog theft, circumstantial evidence held insufficient to connect defendant with original taking by another, or to show that he committed the theft. Grace v. State, 83 Cr. R. 442, 203 S. W. 896.

Circumstantial evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction of theft of one claiming to have been given the articles by another to sell. Jones v. State, 83 Cr. R. 444, 203 S. W. 1101.

Testimony of prosecuting witness in a prosecution for seduction as to intercourse may be corroborated by circumstantial evidence. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

Illicit sexual intercourse can be proved by circumstantial evidence. Cox v. State, 84 Cr. R. 49, 205 S. W. 131.

In order to convict on circumstantial evidence, it is not essential that the circumstances proved should to a moral certainty exclude every hypothesis that the act may have been committed by another person, known or unknown. Parish v. State, 85 Cr. R. 75, 209 S. W. 678.

When conviction depends upon circumstantial evidence alone, it is essential to prove each necessary fact beyond a reasonable doubt before it can become the basis of any inference adverse to accused, although each fact thus proved need not, standing alone, be of sufficient weight to establish guilt. Id.

Direct evidence is not per se better than circumstantial evidence. Berrian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 367, 212 S. W. 509.

Mere suspicious circumstances will not support a conviction, as there must be evidence overcoming the presumption of innocence and excluding every other reasonable hypothesis except guilt. Tolbert v. State, 86 Cr. R. 459, 217 S. W. 153.

To sustain a verdict in a criminal case based upon circumstantial evidence alone, each fact necessary to a conviction must be established by competent evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

In a homicide prosecution, it was the province of the jury, in determining the question of defendant's identity as the slayer, to consider all the circumstances proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Wilson v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 687.

155. — Conclusiveness of evidence on party introducing it.—Where the state puts in exculpatory statements, they will be taken as true until the state discharges the burden of proving them untrue. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 113, 201 S. W. 1002.

The state is bound by declaration of accused introduced by it only when there is no other evidence upon which the jury may base their rejection of any part of such statement. Banks v. State, 85 Cr. R. 165, 211 S. W. 217, 5 A. L. R. 600.

Where the state through its own witnesses introduced defendant's declarations showing that defendant had killed deceased, and detailing in a manner in substantial harmony with defendant's own testimony the incidents and causes of the homicide, by the introduction of such statements the state became bound to the truth of all of them not disproved by evidence before the jury. Richards v. State, 86 Cr. R. 414, 216 S. W. 888.

157. Reception of evidence in general.—Conversation had by defendant's wife with police officers, when she went to arrest defendant for assault, would not be admissible on the theory that the court used it in reference to graduating the punishment or assessing the penalty. Hays v. State, 84 Cr. R. 349, 206 S. W. 941.

One offering a writing as evidence may at any time withdraw same before it reaches the jury. Taylor v. State, 85 Cr. R. 101, 210 S. W. 539.

There being no question of the sufficiency of the predicate laid by the state for the introduction of defendant's statement made at examining trial, the trial court will admit the statement, and if defendant thereafter desires to place before the jury evidence combating the voluntary character of the statement or the sufficiency of the warning, or in any way affecting the admissibility of the statement, he may do so, and have the jury instructed not to consider the statement if they find it inadmissible under the rules laid down. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

159. Compelling calling of witnesses.—The state is not bound to introduce all or any of the eyewitnesses to a transaction. Berrian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 367, 212 S. W. 509.

161. Offer of proof.—Where defendant on cross-examination of prosecuting witness asked whether or not witness had not formerly testified as to a certain matter, no complaint can be made of refusal of court to permit an answer, where evidence was not offered to prove the former testimony, purpose being to attack the credibility of the witness, especially where the intended introduction of the impeaching evidence was dependent on the witness answering, "No." Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

An accused cannot complain that admission of testimony would affect the character of the accused if the evidence is otherwise admissible. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

162. Limiting effect of evidence.—In prosecution of bank president for unlawfully borrowing money from bank, held, that the court should have limited evidence of subsequent transaction to its effect as tending to show existence of partnership of which president was a member, declared on in the indictment. Le Master v. State, 81 Cr. R. 577, 196 S. W. 829.

In homicide prosecution involving question of whether defendant was led to shoot by deceased's demonstration in view of previous threats, it was not incumbent upon court to qualify or limit the purpose for which evidence of threats was before the jury. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In prosecution for receiving stolen sheep, in determining whether facts excluded every reasonable hypothesis except defendant's guilty knowledge of theft, defendant was entitled to have jury afforded privilege of considering evidence of his advanced age and infirmities due to sickness, and court's action in limiting such evidence to amount of punishment was unauthorized. Wilson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 94, 210 S. W. 542.

All of the confession of defendant charged with having received or concealed stolen goods bearing on other matters than those charged in indictment should be limited by instruction to question of guilty knowledge, or, if defendant claims that his acquisition of the property was other than with guilty knowledge or intent, the other facts may be considered by the jury as bearing on the question. Czernicki v. State, 85 Cr. R. 169, 211 S. W. 223.

In prosecution for slander of female, evidence, to effect that accused told a witness that female in question had slighted him, is admissible as showing motive or malice of accused in making statement for which prosecuted, but should be restricted by court to that purpose. Russell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 179, 211 S. W. 224.

163. — Impeaching evidence.—Although denied by accused on cross-examination, the court was not required to limit to impeachment purposes testimony admissible in rebuttal. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

In a prosecution for slander of female, evidence as to the act of a witness, a brother of accused, in arming himself and going to where the father of prosecutrix lived, and as to what took place there, being admissible to show bias, interest, and motive of such witness, where occurring out of the presence of accused, the effect of such testimony should be restricted by the court to the question of bias, interest, and motive of the witness. Russell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 179, 211 S. W. 224.

Evidence which is competent for impeachment only may properly be limited, but court in so doing should observe the legal restrictions against charging on the weight of the evidence and against misleading the jury by erroneous construction. James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

Testimony as to the reputation of witnesses for truth and veracity required no limitation, being usable for no other purpose other than as affecting the credibility of such witnesses. Id.

Where state's witness gave no testimony touching certain witnesses for defendant, but merely testified as to good reputation for truth and veracity of another witness for the state, whose testimony conflicted with the testimony of such witnesses for the defense, instruction limiting consideration of testimony of first mentioned witness to its effect upon the credibility of such defendant's witnesses, including defendant himself, held reversible error. Id.

164. — Evidence of other offenses.—The jury's consideration of evidence of extraneous offenses, admitted under one of the exceptions to the general rule against such evidence, must be limited by the charge to the purpose for which the evidence is admissible. Czernicki v. State, 85 Cr. R. 169, 211 S. W. 223.

It is only when proof of the collateral offense is such as that the jury might use it improperly to convict, or that it might reasonably result in harm to appellant, that it is necessary to limit the effect for which such evidence was introduced. Bonneau v. State, 85 Cr. R. 434, 213 S. W. 272.

In trial for seriously threatening prosecuting witness after an altercation in which witness had slapped defendant, the evidence of prosecuting witness and another that defendant had told them that years before he had told a man that if he whipped defendant he would kill him, and that such man did whip defendant, and that he killed him, could not have been considered by jury, except to show that threat involved was seriously made, so that it was not necessary to limit purpose for which it was admitted. Id.

In prosecution for theft, when evidence of defendant's possession of other recently stolen property appears in the record, it is court's duty to limit such testimony. Mueller v. State, 85 Cr. R. 346, 215 S. W. 93.

In prosecution for passing forged instrument where there was evidence of defendant having passed similar forged instrument in a saloon, defendant was not entitled to instruction that the fact that transaction took place in saloon should not be taken as evidence of guilt; this being a mere detail incident to the introduction of the evidence of other offenses. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560.

There was no error in failing to limit purpose for which evidence that defendant had been indicted for a felony was admitted, where a special charge on the matter was requested and given. Shields v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 779.

165. Cumulative evidence.—In a homicide prosecution, where six or seven acquaintances of defendant testified, and where the state in open court without limitation had admitted that defendant's reputation for peaceableness and veracity was good, court's refusal to hear further testimony as to defendant's reputation was not error, even though defendant had sought the benefit of the suspended sentence law. Wagley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 504, 224 S. W. 687.

167. Admission of evidence dependent on preliminary proof.—In prosecution for passing forged check, where prosecuting witness whose name appeared therein denied its authenticity, evidence that he occasionally gambled for money was properly rejected, where no effort was made to show that check in question was result of such transaction. Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, declarations of alleged conspirators in defendant's absence to prove a conspiracy to assault deceased cannot be considered, before a conspiracy is found beyond a reasonable doubt. Holland v. State, 84 Cr. R. 154, 206 S. W. 89.

In homicide trial, where the defense was largely predicated upon the fact that the fatal difficulty arose over certain rubber goods which were exhibited to accused at the time of the difficulty, the admission of testimony that witness had examined the contents of a pocketbook taken off deceased immediately after the difficulty, that he failed to find such articles therein, was not harmful error, since much of the testimony of accused and his witnesses was directed to showing that these articles were in deceased's possession. Gillespie v. State, 85 Cr. R. 4, 210 S. W. 967.

Testimony of county attorney that tracks near the scene of the killing had been made by a shoe about No. 8 or 9 in size, and that in his judgment defendant's boots made the tracks on the ground, held inadmissible in absence of something more definite in the witness' testimony showing proximity of tracks to body of victim. Burkhalter v. State, 85 Cr. R. 282, 212 S. W. 163.

In homicide prosecution, testimony that defendant had sought to borrow a pistol from witness was admissible, without laying a predicate, to impeach defendant, being original testimony to show preparation for the homicide. Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

As a predicate for introducing proof of tracks at the scene of the homicide, it is not incumbent on the state to introduce evidence to negative their presence there before the homicide. Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

Unless it be admitted or placed beyond question that a party making a statement offered in evidence was at the time mentally unsound, the trial court will not undertake to stop the orderly progress of the trial court in order to determine what was his mental condition. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

168. — Admissibility of preliminary proof.—Where in a prosecution for procuring a female to become an inmate of a house of ill fame, testimony that she left place of accused and went to home of another was admissible as a predicate for further testimony that he attempted to induce her to return. Dollar v. State, 86 Cr. R. 333, 216 S. W. 1087.

169. — Sufficiency of preliminary proof.—Where in a prosecution for procuring a female to become an inmate of a house of ill fame it was shown that female left the house and went to the home of a Mr. L., testimony of the female that she heard a conversation between accused and Mrs. L. when she was about six feet away in another room with open door was a sufficient predicate to admit the conversation. Dollar v. State, 86 Cr. R. 333, 216 S. W. 1087.

In a prosecution for murder of defendant's mistress, the fact that defendant telephoned the police station on the night of the killing in order to reach the officers was admissible, where defendant in his confession stated that he called the officers, and he also testified to the fact on the witness stand; he being thus sufficiently identified as the party who did the talking. Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 55, 219 S. W. 821.

170. Objections to evidence.—If defendant desired to object to introduction of testimony, it was his duty to have excepted to such action. Farris v. State, 85 Cr. R. 86, 209 S. W. 665.

In a prosecution for robbery, where the court improperly permitted the state to introduce evidence of other criminal acts by defendant subsequent to the robbery charged, defendant's requested instruction not to consider any such testimony was a proper method to request the withdrawal and exclusion of the illegal testimony. Cano v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 1097.

In a prosecution for maiming, an answer to a question put to prosecuting witness as to whether he was called upon by the sheriff to assist him was not reviewable, though not responsive and relating to matters foreign to the issue; no objection having been made, and no instruction to the jury not to consider same having been requested. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

An assignment objecting to the testimony of a justice of the peace as to statements made just after the shooting by the defendant, convicted of assault to murder, where the felony was committed in view of such witness, cannot be considered, in the absence of any objection made on the trial of the case, particularly where there was no question as to defendant's having shot the injured party, and such statements were probably admissible as res gestæ. Holden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 803.

171. — Sufficiency of objection.—Objection to evidence that it is irrelevant, immaterial, and prejudicial is too general, unless obviously the evidence is inadmissible for any purpose. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583; Sherman v. State, 83 Cr. R. 205, 202 S. W. 93; Jones v. State, 83 Cr. R. 444, 203 S. W. 1101; Woods v. State, 87 Cr. R. 354, 221 S. W. 276.

A general objection to the testimony of a witness, a part of which is material and competent, will not avail. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046; Whitehead v. State, 81 Cr. R. 278, 196 S. W. 851.

In prosecution for murder, where defendant objected to whole of deceased's statement to his wife to which she testified, part of it alone being admissible, admission of evidence was not error. Davis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 539, 204 S. W. 652.

Where the trial court could not know what were the grounds of objection by defendant to a statement made by a witness, general objection thereto was properly overruled. Houser v. State, 87 Cr. R. 296, 222 S. W. 240.

172. — Effect of failure to object.—Though attorney could not bind accused by agreement for admission of testimony given on examining trial by witnesses absent at the trial, the admission of such evidence without objection did not vitiate the conviction, since counsel could have objected to such evidence. Roberson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 238, 203 S. W. 349.

Court on appeal will not consider alleged errors in the admission of evidence, where no objection to the evidence was made in lower court, though appellant is represented by different attorney on appeal. Clark v. State, 85 Cr. R. 153, 210 S. W. 544.

To invoke the rule with reference to the inadmissibility of circumstantial evidence, where positive and direct evidence is attainable, it is necessary to urge it at trial, any failure to object being a waiver; but conviction cannot stand unless the evidence is sufficient to overcome the presumption of innocence and to establish necessary facts. Meredith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 239, 211 S. W. 227.

In a prosecution for murder, impeachment of defendant's witness by proof by her own cross-examination that she was unmarried and was the mother of a child was not reversible error in the absence of objection. Curry v. State, 85 Cr. R. 443, 213 S. W. 268.

Where a question was asked and answered without objection and there was no claim that there was any misunderstanding or reason for not objecting before the answer, court did not err in refusing to withdraw the answer. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

That one had been convicted of a crime may be proven by parol testimony, in the absence of objection that it is not the best evidence. Corzine v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 686.

When evidence is admitted without objection, the same or equivalent evidence from other witnesses will not be rejected. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 786.

One may not allow an objectionable question to be asked, and speculate as to its answer, or wait therefor, before making objection. Stone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 818.

173. — Motions to strike out.—General exceptions for irrelevancy and immateriality of testimony, facts not being shown so as to explain how the matter came into the case, will not be sustained, where testimony is admissible for some purpose. Wheat v. State, 82 Cr. R. 441, 199 S. W. 620.

In a murder trial, evidence that, three months before, accused stated that he had killed two men, and if the jury convicted him he would get some of them, should have been stricken as immaterial to any issue, notwithstanding absence of proper objection to the predicate question upon which it was based. Hardy v. State, 86 Cr. R. 515, 217 S. W. 939, 8 A. L. R. 1357.

Motion to strike out objectionable testimony must be made upon ground presented when witness offered to testify. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

In homicide prosecution where bones, hair, clothing, etc., of deceased were not found until long after killing, court properly refused to strike out evidence of witnesses who found the bones, hair, etc., because of the fact that they were unable to state positively that same were those of deceased. Id.

In homicide prosecution, testimony that a bribe had been offered to draft board to secure defendant's classification, where not responsive to question asked and where harmful and irrelevant, should not have been permitted to remain in the record against protest of defendant. James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

In a prosecution for having in possession intoxicating liquor not for medical, etc., purposes, where the state's attorney asked a witness, "What first attracted your attention to the defendant?" and the witness answered, "I was standing at the fountain, watching for him," etc., if such answer was objectionable, the proper procedure would have required motion to strike it out as unresponsive, and objection to the question asked was not well taken. Rainey v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 118.

Where the state abandoned a question to which objection was made and then asked a question, which the witness answered before objection was made thereto, the objection, made after the answer without motion to exclude the evidence, presents no error on appeal. Kluting v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 305.

174. Waiver or cure of error in admitting or excluding evidence.—Defendant held not wanting in diligence to maintain rights on trial in relation to admission of testimony as to general reputation for veracity without being allowed to interrogate witnesses as to whether they were testifying from general reputation or particular knowledge. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

In trial for homicide, error in admitting defendant's statements on a preliminary investigation, in which she was charged or suspected of the crime, was not waived by fact that she took stand to explain the testimony or to lessen its consequences. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 443, 199 S. W. 636.

In prosecution for burglary, the error in allowing statement made by accused before the grand jury of an incriminating nature to go to the jury was not cured by withdrawing such evidence in the court's charge. Stephens v. State, 83 Cr. R. 50, 201 S. W. 406.

It was improper for the state to offer a purported written statement by defendant's brother, who saw the homicide, for such statement was hearsay, as was the fact that the brother had made a statement, and the impropriety was not cured because the attorney for the prosecution brought out the facts by an inquiry as to whether defendant would consent to the introduction of the statement. Dunn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 299, 212 S. W. 511.

Evidence being admitted over accused's objection, he may cross-examine in respect thereto without loss of his objection and bills of exception. Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

In a prosecution for misdemeanor, the right to have illegal evidence excluded may be waived. Wagner v. State, 87 Cr. R. 47, 219 S. W. 471.

Where there is testimony of witnesses to a fact without objection, objection to the same testimony from other witnesses cannot be sustained. Campbell v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 695.

Art. 784. [764] Rules of statute shall govern, when.

Proof of records and recorded instruments—Necessity of filing and notice.—In a prosecution for adultery, where the identity of defendant's marriage license was proven by the clerk, but its execution was not proven by any one else, it was inadmissible in evidence because not filed among the papers for three days and notice given by the prosecution to defendant. Halbadier v. State, 85 Cr. R. 593, 214 S. W. 349.

Art. 785. [765] Defendant presumed to be innocent; reasonable doubt.

4. Presumption of innocence.—There are no presumptions against one accused of crime; the presumptions all being in favor of the accused. Walden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 523.

6. — Overcoming presumption.—Conviction cannot stand, unless the evidence is sufficient to overcome the presumption of innocence and to establish necessary facts. Meredith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 239, 211 S. W. 227.

Conviction cannot stand unless the evidence is sufficient to overcome the presumption of innocence and to establish necessary facts. Id.

Mere suspicious circumstances will not support a conviction, as there must be evidence overcoming the presumption of innocence and excluding every other reasonable hypothesis except guilt. Tolbert v. State, 86 Cr. R. 459, 217 S. W. 153.

The accused in a criminal case is presumed innocent, and, to overcome such presumption, there must be evidence proving an offense has been committed. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

Proof that defendant failed to appear in accord with a bail bond or recognizance is admissible against the accused, and it will be presumed that a jury understood that bail is simply a means to assure accused's presence and creates no presumption of guilt. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 213.

In a prosecution for theft, circumstances held not of sufficient cogency to overcome presumption of innocence. Lemon v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 288.

7. — Operation and effect of presumption.—The presumption, arising from state's absence of effort to show that stolen goods found in house occupied by defendant and others were found in the part occupied by defendant or were in his exclusive possession, is in consonance with the presumption of innocence, and not against it. Russell v. State, 86 Cr. R. 609, 218 S. W. 1049.

9. — Necessity of instructions.—In view of presumption of innocence, evidence establishing facts which, if true, would mitigate or excuse assault to murder, required an instruction on the law applicable thereto, regardless of the source from which the evidence came, and notwithstanding it presented a defensive theory out of harmony with that advanced by defendant. Knight v. State, 84 Cr. R. 395, 207 S. W. 315.

Charge on presumption of innocence is necessary in every case. Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161.

11. Reasonable doubt in general.—In a prosecution for manslaughter, declarations of alleged conspirators in defendant's absence to prove a conspiracy to assault deceased cannot be considered, before a conspiracy is found beyond a reasonable doubt. Holland v. State, 84 Cr. R. 154, 206 S. W. 89.

When conviction depends upon circumstantial evidence alone, it is essential to prove each necessary fact beyond a reasonable doubt before it can become the basis of any inference adverse to accused, although each fact thus proved need not, standing alone, be of sufficient weight to establish guilt. Parish v. State, 85 Cr. R. 75, 209 S. W. 678.

In prosecution for receiving stolen sheep, in determining whether facts excluded every reasonable hypothesis except defendant's guilty knowledge of theft, defendant was entitled to have jury afforded privilege of considering evidence of his advanced age and infirmities due to sickness. Wilson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 94, 210 S. W. 542.

The state must make out its case by competent evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Berrian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 367, 212 S. W. 509.

The case being one of circumstantial evidence, the evidence must exclude every reasonable hypothesis, except that of guilt of accused. Dowdell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 472, 213 S. W. 649.

In a criminal prosecution, where there is a doubt as to the testimony, the defendant is entitled to the benefit thereof. Jones v. State, 86 Cr. R. 371, 216 S. W. 884.

Conspiracy, as basis for admission of acts and declarations of co-conspirators, must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

12. — Particular offenses.—Penetration is an element of rape and must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, though penetration made need not be of any particular depth. Galaviz v. State, 82 Cr. R. 377, 198 S. W. 946.

Evidence on prosecution for carrying a pistol, claimed by defendant to have been handed to him by a person in the house, held insufficient to show guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Bogus v. State, 83 Cr. R. 356, 203 S. W. 597.

In prosecution for carnal knowledge of female under 15, in violation of Pen. Code, art. 1063, testimony of doctor, who examined prosecutrix that he would take her to be less than 15, her relatives being available as witnesses, but not testifying to her age, was insufficient to prove case beyond reasonable doubt. Nolan v. State, 84 Cr. R. 150, 206 S. W. 92.

In prosecution for burglary of crib to steal cotton seed, burden was on state to prove, beyond reasonable doubt, identity of seed found in oil mill, placed there by defendant, with seed stolen from crib. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 461, 208 S. W. 522.

To establish the offense of receiving stolen property, the evidence must show beyond a reasonable doubt that the property was stolen, and that thereafter defendant received it from the person alleged in the indictment with fraudulent intent, knowing it to have been stolen. Grant v. State, 87 Cr. R. 19, 218 S. W. 1062.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, evidence held to show defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, so as not to warrant setting aside the verdict and remanding for new trial. Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 939. Cook v. State, 88 Cr. R. 659, 228 S. W. 213.

Where manslaughter and self-defense are issues, the jury must find three things beyond a reasonable doubt before they are warranted in convicting for murder: First, that accused acted with malice aforethought; second, that the killing did not occur under circumstances reducing the offense to manslaughter; and, third, that accused was not acting in self-defense, and such matters may be embraced in the clause of the charge submitting murder. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

13. — Grade of offense.—Where the facts raise the issues, the accused is entitled to the benefit of the doubt on the facts as between the degrees of homicide and self-defense. Wood v. State, 85 Cr. R. 268, 211 S. W. 782.

In the giving of instructions all doubts as to degrees of homicide suggested by the testimony are resolved in favor of accused. Walker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 482, 214 S. W. 331.

14. — Venue.—Venue in a criminal action may be shown by circumstantial evidence, and need not be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Allen v. State, 82 Cr. R. 416, 199 S. W. 633.

Evidence with regard to venue of crime is not required to exclude reasonable doubt. Phillips v. State, 83 Cr. R. 16, 200 S. W. 1091.

15. — Necessity of instructions in general.—See McClain v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 550.

Where state puts in evidence defendant's exculpatory statements, it must disprove them to jury's satisfaction, and jury must be so informed. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

In prosecution for giving liquor to minor, in view of evidence it was error to refuse to instruct that state must prove beyond reasonable doubt that defendant knew person obtaining liquor was a minor. Earnest v. State, 83 Cr. R. 41, 201 S. W. 175.

Charge authorizing conviction on accomplice testimony if it was believed and was corroborated by testimony tending to connect defendant with the offense is defective; it should also state that it was necessary that accomplice testimony, in connection with the other evidence, should show defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Lockhead v. State, 85 Cr. R. 459, 213 S. W. 653.

In a prosecution for homicide, where the evidence was wholly circumstantial, and there was substantial evidence of alibi, and also to effect that others might well have killed deceased, the failure of the court to present to the jury such questions of defense, as well as its failure to instruct that, if the jury had a reasonable doubt on the evidence as to whether any other person than defendant killed deceased, they should acquit, was error. James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 107, 215 S. W. 459.

In a prosecution for murder, charge that, if jury found from the evidence that defendant unlawfully and with malice aforethought killed deceased, to find him guilty of murder, held erroneous, as not telling the jury that they must so find from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. Lewis v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 113.

16. — Sufficiency of instructions in general.—A request to instruct that, if jury have a reasonable doubt as to whether the defendant killed the deceased in self-defense, they should find him not guilty, was properly refused. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175.

In a prosecution for murder, an instruction that each fact necessary to the conclusion sought to be established must be proved by competent evidence beyond a reasonable doubt by facts, that is, the necessary facts to the conclusion must be consistent with each other and with the main fact sought to be proved, and the circumstances taken together must be of a conclusive nature leading on the whole to a satisfactory conclusion and producing in fact a reasonable and moral certainty that accused and none other committed the offense, held erroneous as failing to charge that the facts must show defendant's guilt and be inconsistent with any other theory than that of guilt. Reynolds v. State, 86 Cr. R. 453, 217 S. W. 151.

18. — Shifting burden of proof.—In a prosecution for manslaughter, instruction that if defendant struck and killed deceased, but without intention to kill, and defendant had not provoked the difficulty, or by his own wrongful acts had not produced the necessity of taking decedent's life, etc., then he was not guilty of a higher offense than that of an aggravated assault, held erroneous as shifting the burden of proof. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

19. — Sufficiency of application of law to whole case.—Error of charge authorizing conviction on accomplice testimony if it was believed and was corroborated by testimony tending to connect defendant with the offense, is not available, another charge correcting its defect of not also stating that it was necessary that accomplice testimony in connection with the other evidence should show defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, being given at defendant's request. Lockhead v. State, 85 Cr. R. 459, 213 S. W. 653.

21. Burden of proof.—In prosecution for slander by imputing want of chastity to injured party, burden was on state to prove defendant's guilt beyond reasonable doubt. Kelly v. State, 81 Cr. R. 408, 195 S. W. 853.

In prosecution for slander by imputing want of chastity to injured party by use of word "whore," burden held on state to prove innuendo. Id.

In prosecution for attempt to induce another to commit perjury, where indictment alleged all testimony in civil case given by other was true, etc., it was incumbent that state should prove truth of all testimony set out in indictment. Shipp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 328, 196 S. W. 840.

Where state puts in evidence defendant's exculpatory statements, it must disprove them to jury's satisfaction, and jury must be so informed. Coleman v. State, 82 Cr. R. 332, 199 S. W. 473.

Where the state puts in exculpatory statements, they will be taken as true until the state discharges the burden of proving them untrue. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Wool v. State, 83 Cr. R. 113, 201 S. W. 1002.

Where one accused of receiving stolen goods set up that he bought the goods without knowledge or notice of the theft, the state had the burden of showing that the theory of purchase was false. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Id.

In a murder prosecution, where the state, over defendant's objection, introduced evidence that the cause of the killing was insulting conduct towards defendant's wife, thus assuming the burden of reducing the offense to manslaughter, a judgment of conviction should be reversed. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Bibb v. State, 83 Cr. R. 616, 205 S. W. 135.

In prosecution for unlawfully practicing medicine, it devolves on state to prove defendant did not have license or diploma, with verification, and did not have it registered. Reum v. State, 84 Cr. R. 225, 206 S. W. 523.

Under an indictment charging that an abortion was procured by administering medicine calculated to produce an abortion, and did then and there destroy the life of the fetus in the womb, the burden was on the state to show beyond a reasonable doubt that the child was alive at the time of the administration of the medicine, and that the medicine was administered for the purpose of destroying the fetus while in the womb. Tonnahill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 517, 208 S. W. 516.

In a homicide case, held, that the state had not sufficiently met the burden imposed upon it to establish a case of murder in the first degree, so as to warrant the court in refusing the accused bail. Ex parte Johnson, 84 Cr. R. 535, 208 S. W. 518.

Since the burden is upon the state to show criminality, an instruction on justification from insulting words or conduct to a female relative was erroneous, where it placed the burden upon defendant to establish that at the time of the killing accused's mind was incapable of cool reflection. Wood v. State, 85 Cr. R. 268, 211 S. W. 782.

In murder prosecution, where defendant admitted killing deceased, but claimed to have done so in self-defense, burden was on state to prove an unlawful homicide, to overcome presumption of innocence. Dugan v. State, 86 Cr. R. 130, 216 S. W. 161.

Where witness for the state, being examined by the state, testified that five minutes after the shooting deceased told him that a certain person other than accused had shot him, the burden devolved upon the state to disprove the statement. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

Where defendant's explanation of possession of stolen automobile contained no contradiction or weaknesses which of themselves would destroy it, the state had the burden of proving that the explanation was unreasonable or untrue. Knott v. State, 87 Cr. R. 117, 219 S. W. 825.

Under indictment charging rape on woman mentally unsound, it was requisite for state to show: First, the act; and, second, mental unsoundness of the woman. Cokeley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 256, 220 S. W. 1099.

In prosecution for fraudulently receiving stolen property, where the state produced testimony as to statements of defendant showing that he bought the automobile from a certain person, that he paid such person for it, and received a bill of sale therefor, it was incumbent on the state to prove that defendant's theory that he was a good-faith purchaser from such person was false. Harper v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 190.

The burden is on the state, in a prosecution for homicide to prove the facts which show the homicide was unlawful, and which bring it within the higher, rather than the lower, grade of offense included in the indictment. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

In prosecution of father for aggravated assault upon his child, where the facts do not affirmatively make it appear beyond question that the assault was of such character as to remove it from the possible domain of punishment administered for corrective purposes, the state has the burden of proving that the violence inflicted was not for the purposes of restraint or correction. Walden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 523.

25. — Instructions.—In a prosecution for carrying concealed weapons, an instruction, "If you believe from the evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant had on his person a pistol, as charged, but that he was on his own premises and not in the street, then the defendant would be guilty of no offense," was erroneous, in that it put the burden on defendant to prove he was on his own premises. Sessions v. State, 81 Cr. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

In prosecution for slander of a female, it was proper to instruct that if defendant relies on unchastity in female as a defense he has the burden of proving it by a preponderance of the evidence. Pickerell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 68, 198 S. W. 303.

Instruction that, if the jury believe defendant was not at the place at the time, or have a reasonable doubt of the fact, they will acquit, reverses the rule as to burden of proof. Claunch v. State, 82 Cr. R. 114, 198 S. W. 307.

In prosecution for pursuing business of selling intoxicants in local option territory, instruction held erroneous in that it put the burden of proof on defendant. (Per Gaines, Special Judge.) Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 75, 204 S. W. 644.

Instruction that jury should consider whether defendant was guilty of manslaughter if it entertained a reasonable doubt of his guilt of murder, and instruction to find him guilty of manslaughter if jury believed from the evidence beyond reasonable doubt that defendant had killed deceased in sudden passion, held, when considered together, not to shift burden of proof to defendant, and to make plain that doubt as to whether defendant was guilty of manslaughter or murder should be resolved in favor of defendant. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, where charge on self-defense did not plainly show that burden of proof was upon state to establish facts constituting unlawful assault beyond reasonable doubt, it was error to refuse to correct charge. Castle v. State, 84 Cr. R. 593, 209 S. W. 416.

In murder trial, where issue of self-defense was made prominent by the facts, instruction on insulting words or conduct to female relative as justification held reversible error, as placing burden upon accused to prove justification to reduce the degree from murder to manslaughter, and then in substance, instructing that if this were not done accused would be guilty of murder, thus excluding the issue of self-defense. Wood v. State, 85 Cr. R. 268, 211 S. W. 782.

Granting the declarations of deceased and other surrounding circumstances are sufficient to show defendant's presence when deceased drank the whisky alleged to have contained poison and caused death, defendant's guilty knowledge would be a jury question. Baugus v. State, 87 Cr. R. 551, 223 S. W. 224.

In prosecution for placing poison in water with intent to injure and kill another, the question of identity of the contents of bottle, analyzed by witness, and found to be strychnine, as the powder thrown in the water and placed in bottle for purposes of being analyzed held for jury. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

In a prosecution for cattle theft, where accused lived in Kent county, held that the court was justified in the submission of the issue of theft in said county. McClain v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 550.

3. Weight of evidence and credibility of witnesses.—The credibility of witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony was solely for the jury. Burow v. State, 85 Cr. R. 133, 210 S. W. 805.

In a rape prosecution, where it becomes a question of veracity between prosecutrix and defendant, the questions of the weight of testimony and the credibility of witnesses are for the jury. Jackson v. State, 88 Cr. R. 225, 224 S. W. 1110.

State*, 84 Cr. R. 564, 208 S. W. 917.

In homicide prosecution, the truth or falsity of defendant's testimony, raising issue of whether he acted under immediate influence of sudden passion, is a question for the jury, under appropriate instruction, and not for the trial court. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

The court should not, in sustaining objection to evidence that sister-in-law of a witness whose character was sought to be impugned had given birth to three illegitimate children, have remarked that evidence was not admissible if woman had 700, meaning 700 illegitimate children; the statutes explicitly prohibiting the court from indicating his view of the evidence, and making the jury the exclusive judge of facts, weight of testimony, and credibility of witnesses. Burkhalter v. State, 85 Cr. R. 282, 212 S. W. 163.

Corroboration of prosecutrix is not required by law to support a conviction of statutory rape, and her credibility, like that of other witnesses, is a question for the jury in view of this article. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 213.

16. Conclusiveness of verdict—Verdict supported by evidence.—In view of article 566, relating to pleas of guilty in felony cases and giving the jury discretion in assessing punishment, where the evidence introduced was sufficient to enable the jury to determine that the defendant on his plea of guilty should receive the lowest punishment provided by law, the case may not be reversed for lack of sufficient evidence to show guilt. Terretto v. State, 86 Cr. R. 188, 215 S. W. 329.

Finding of the jury on questions of fact as to whether defendant, accused of receiving stolen automobile casings got them to put on the car of his cousin, or whether he shared in the money received from the cousin with which the casings were paid for, must be approved unless there is error in the record. Gunter v. State, 87 Cr. R. 74, 219 S. W. 462.

That the punishment may be more than appellate courts would have inflicted under the statement of facts would never be a reason for setting aside a verdict. Price v. State, 87 Cr. R. 163, 220 S. W. 89.

In prosecution for assault with intent to murder, where every issue possible in the case, assault to murder, aggravated murder, simple assault, and self-defense, had been submitted to the jury, held, court will not disturb the verdict of aggravated assault unless the record be devoid of evidence from which jurors, might have fairly reached their conclusion. Id.

Defendant having pleaded guilty, and lowest punishment having been assessed by jury, sufficiency of evidence to sustain conviction is not in question on defendant's appeal. Baldauf v. State, 87 Cr. R. 228, 220 S. W. 550.

While the Court of Criminal Appeals, under article 939, has the right to reverse conviction on account of insufficiency of the evidence, and it becomes its duty to do so if the guilt of accused is not made to appear with reasonable certainty, there is no fixed rule which will in all cases furnish a certain standard, and each case must in a measure be tested by its own facts. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

In a prosecution for rape of a daughter under 18 years of age, held, that it was the duty of the trial court to submit the case to the jury, and the duty of the appellate court, so far as the question of sufficiency of evidence was concerned, to uphold the verdict. Higgins v. State, 87 Cr. R. 424, 222 S. W. 241.

The appellate court will not disturb a conviction for theft of property over the value of $50, because the jury believed the state's evidence as to the value of the property to the exclusion of defendant's testimony, where the state's evidence would justify the conclusion of the jury. Alarcan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 458, 222 S. W. 982.

Unless it affirmatively appears that there was no evidence supporting the jury's finding as to the deadly character of the weapon used, or that such finding is against the weight of the testimony, it will be upheld. Mitchell v. State, 87 Cr. R. 530, 222 S. W. 983.

The sufficiency of circumstantial evidence of defendant's guilt of hog theft in the first instance was a question for the jury, and the duty of the Court of Criminal Appeals in its reviewing capacity is to determine whether there is any evidence in the record on which conviction may stand. Bradford v. State, §§ Cr. R. 122, 224 S. W. 901.

Where the question of defendant's guilt of murder was purely one of fact left to the jury under appropriate instructions by the trial court, their verdict of guilty is conclusive, in the absence of error in the record. Prestidge v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 217.

Where the truth and sufficiency of the reasons given by defendant for declining to dip his cattle pursuant to notice from the Live Stock Sanitary Commission were passed on by the jury and determined against him, the jury's decision held binding on the Court of Criminal Appeals under the evidence. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 513; Lee v. Same (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 515.

A verdict is not reviewable where there is evidence to support it. Poye v. State, (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 161.

That the jury might have found facts upon which to predicate a verdict finding defendant guilty of theft is not conclusive that a verdict finding him guilty of receiving and concealing the stolen property is unsupported by the evidence so as to warrant reversal. Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

On appeal from conviction of burglary, where there was evidence upon which the jury could base their verdict, the judgment of the Court of Criminal Appeals will not be substituted for that of the jury. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 410.

Court of Criminal Appeals will not reverse a case because of insufficiency of testimony, unless it appears that the judgment is without support, or is so manifestly against the great weight of the testimony as to make probable the fact of a verdict resulting from prejudice. Vogel v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 1096.

17. — Weight of evidence and credibility of witnesses.—Where the testimony of many witnesses that defendant is insane is not controverted, a conviction cannot stand. Gardner v. State, 85 Cr. R. 103, 210 S. W. 694; Kiernan v. State, 84 Cr. R. 500, 208 S. W. 518.

Where there is no substantial evidence supporting conviction, court on appeal will not hesitate to so decide. Davis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 15, 209 S. W. 749.

In homicide prosecution, the truth or falsity of defendant's testimony raising issue of whether he acted under immediate influence of sudden passion is not a question for the appellate court, but was for the jury. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

The Court of Criminal Appeals will not reverse a judgment of conviction unless there is such manifest lack of evidence as to make it apparent that the verdict was the result of prejudice, or that such verdict is against the weight of the evidence. Smith v. State, 85 Cr. R. 355, 212 S. W. 660.

Jurors are primarily the judges of the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony, and, unless there appears a manifest abuse of discretion, verdict should not be disturbed. Woodriddle v. State, 86 Cr. R. 348, 217 S. W. 143.

The Court of Criminal Appeals hesitates to interfere with the verdict in any case, but will do so when there is no sufficient evidence to sustain it. Hays v. State, 86 Cr. R. 469, 217 S. W. 938.

Although accused had a right to carry a pistol from his store to his home, where it is an issue whether it was lawfully carried under such circumstances, it becomes a matter for the decision of the jury, and if the facts tend to impeach defendant's honesty, conviction will not be disturbed on appeal, where the jury have resolved the facts against defendant. Moore v. State, 86 Cr. R. 502, 217 S. W. 1036.

On appeal in a criminal case, an argument that the conviction was had on perjured testimony cannot be considered, where enough facts were in evidence to justify the belief of the jury in the guilt of accused, and to support their finding; the credibility of the witnesses being ordinarily for the jury. Washington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 652, 218 S. W. 1043.

The question of the sufficiency of the state's testimony to corroborate an accomplice being primarily for the jury, and they having decided such matter against him, the verdict will not be disturbed on appeal. Fitzgerald v. State, 87 Cr. R. 34, 219 S. W. 199.

Though the verdict must not be lightly annulled in any case it is the duty of the Court of Criminal Appeals, under article 939, to set it aside and order another trial when the evidence, viewed in its strongest light from the standpoint of the state, fails to make guilt reasonably certain. Jolly v. State, 87 Cr. R. 288, 221 S. W. 279.

On appeal in a murder trial from a verdict based on circumstantial evidence alone, it will not be held that the evidence is insufficient because it is in part conflicting and in part the testimony of witness whose credibility has been assailed; the jury being, under this article, the judges of facts proved, weight of testimony, and credibility of witnesses. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

18. — Conflicting evidence.—Court of Criminal Appeals will not reverse judgment where the evidence is merely conflicting. Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959; Fox v. State, 83 Cr. R. 76, 201 S. W. 171; Vann v. State, 84 Cr. R. 97, 206 S. W. 80; Davis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 15, 209 S. W. 749; Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560; Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. The denial by defendant, charged with violation of local option law, of testimony of state's witness that he bought whisky from defendant and paid him $2.75 for it, formed issue of fact for jury's solution, which Court of Criminal Appeals is not justified in reversing. Ramos v. State, 83 Cr. R. 479, 204 S. W. 335.

The court on appeal will not attempt to decide cases by what might have been their judgment had they occupied the jury box, and, where the evidence is merely conflicting, the finding of the jury, made the exclusive judges of the credibility of witnesses and the weight of testimony, will not be disturbed. Scoggins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 519, 208 S. W. 930.

In homicide prosecution defended on ground of insanity, evidence held sufficiently conflicting to justify court of criminal appeals in refusing to disturb verdict of guilty. Mauney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 184, 210 S. W. 959.

Where the evidence connecting defendant with the murder was wholly circumstantial, and on several points directly in conflict, the credibility of witnesses and weight of their testimony was exclusively for the jury, and in determining whether the evidence sustains the conviction, it is necessary to look only to the incriminating testimony and the reasonable inferences therefrom. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

The case being one of circumstantial evidence, and the jury having found against defendant, the court on appeal will not set aside the verdict based on conflicting evidence, though alibi was strongly proven. Gordon v. State, 86 Cr. R. 262, 216 S. W. 184.

In reviewing sufficiency of evidence to support the verdict, it will be assumed all controverted questions were decided for the state; and, if evidence viewed on that assumption is sufficient, verdict will not be annulled for want of evidence. Reese v. State, 87 Cr. R. 245, 220 S. W. 1096.

The Court of Criminal Appeals will not interfere with the verdict when the evidence is conflicting, and will only act in such matters when the record is so bare of supporting facts as to lead it to conclude that the result must have come through some passion or prejudice, or when the verdict is such that a reasonable mind is unable to assent to the conclusion reached by the jury. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

Where there is sufficient evidence to identify defendant as the party committing the assault, conviction cannot be disturbed because of conflicting testimony tending to show he was at another place at the time. Mayes v. State, 87 Cr. R. 512, 222 S. W. 571.

21. — Approval of verdict by trial court.—When jury, under a proper charge, have convicted, and verdict has been approved by trial judge, and there is sufficient evidence in record, if believed, to sustain it, it will not be disturbed on facts, unless clearly wrong. Lee v. State, 83 Cr. R. 532, 204 S. W. 110.

State*, 84 Cr. R. 100, 206 S. W. 82.

State*, 84 Cr. R. 244, 206 S. W. 515.

State*, 84 Cr. R. 564, 208 S. W. 917.

State*, 85 Cr. R. 3, 210 S. W. 198.

Where, though his son did the actual killing, defendant, who was present, was indicted for and charged with murder as a principal, held in view of the fact that the only witness who testified that the two acted in concert was before the jury, and that the trial court denied new trial, conviction will not be set aside on the theory his testimony was unbelievable because such witness was ignorant and contradicted himself on cross-examination. Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

Art. 787. [767] Judge shall not discuss evidence offered, etc.

1. Remarks of judge in general.—In prosecution for unlawfully carrying pistol, where accused, who took stand on his cross-examination, stated to examiner that he wanted to be plainly understood and did not wish further examination like that, before, admonition by court to answer questions without other statement was not error. Pecht v. State, 82 Cr. R. 136, 199 S. W. 290.

The trial judge should maintain no partiality and should avoid impressing jury with any of his views. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

Remarks of the judge to the jury before the trial of one accused of robbery that they should pay close attention to the testimony, and thereby avoid controversy among themselves and reach a verdict more speedily and satisfactorily, were not reversible error, where the court on objection instructed the jury not to consider his statement as evidence, or as tending to show guilt or innocence, and the remarks were not calculated to prejudice the rights of the accused. Patterson v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 763.

The court's general instructions to the jury upon a voir dire, with regard to the suspended sentence law, which informed the venire from which the jury was to be drawn that the law had been badly abused, etc., was improper. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

3. Comments on evidence.—It was error under this article, for court, in overruling objection to evidence of prosecuting attorney, to state, "It will do so little harm that I believe I will admit the testimony," though the evidence was incompetent. Gribble v. State, 85 Cr. R. 52, 210 S. W. 215, 3 A. L. R. 1096.

Comments of court on matters material and admissible, where same are upon the weight of the evidence and in the presence of the jury, are error. Id.

In prosecution for receiving stolen sheep, court's remarks, in admitting evidence of defendant's advanced age and infirmities, that jury might take such matters into consideration in fixing penalty, were improper, under this article, as a comment on the evidence prejudicial to defendant. Wilson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 94, 210 S. W. 542.

The court should not, in sustaining objection to evidence that sister-in-law of a witness whose character was sought to be impugned had given birth to three illegitimate children, have remarked that evidence was not admissible if woman had 700, meaning 700 illegitimate children; the statutes explicitly prohibiting the court from indicating his view of the evidence, and making the jury the exclusive judge of facts, weight of testimony, and credibility of witnesses. Burkhalter v. State, 85 Cr. R. 282, 212 S. W. 163.

In a prosecution for simple assault through having induced another to attack the assaulted party by agreeing to pay any fine, remark of the court that a witness stated that what he had said in the grand jury room was true, which ought to be enough to satisfy anybody, held erroneous as on the weight of the testimony. Lewis v. State, 86 Cr. R. 6, 215 S. W. 303.

Where accused sought a suspended sentence and introduced a witness who testified that accused had never been convicted of a felony, a statement by the court in cross-examining the witness that witness did not know what he was testifying, with a further statement that he would leave the testimony in the record but he thought there was a better way to prove the fact, was erroneous as a comment upon the testimony contrary to this article. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 57.

Where the court permitted evidence to be given, stating he regarded it as inadmissible, no proper connection having then been shown, and because of subsequent showing it became admissible, the court's comment was not one on the weight of evidence, forbidden by this article. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 320.

In a prosecution for wife murder, where a girl witness for the state, 11 years old, the first to be placed on the stand, showed agitation, and the court called the child to him and told her not to be excited or scared, but to take her time and to tell things as they occurred, such action of the court was not erroneous as constituting a comment or expression on the credibility of the witness and the weight to be given her testimony. Pounds v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 683.

7. Proceedings against witness or counsel.—In prosecution for murder, it was error for the court, on conclusion of testimony of defendant's witness, to call the deputy sheriff, who then took the witness to jail. Hughes v. State, 81 Cr. R. 526, 197 S. W. 215.

Arrest of witness during trial on charge of perjury, not made under direction of judge nor in presence or to knowledge of jury held not within rule requiring a reversal where court's arrest of witness indicates his view of the testimony. Steel v. State, 82 Cr. R. 483, 200 S. W. 381.

In prosecution for murder, it was not reversible error for court to instruct sheriff to tell witness who was under rule, to report to court before leaving courthouse, it not appearing that such instruction came to jury's knowledge. Borrer v. State, 83 Cr. R. 198, 204 S. W. 1003.

Where the trial judge mainly in the absence of the jury reminded prosecutrix in a rape case, a girl under 15 years of age, that he had power to inflict the death penalty and had just sent a woman to the penitentiary, and committed prosecutrix to custody overnight, and subsequently threatened to send her to jail unless she repeated former testimony which she said was false and induced by coercion and which she finally repeated, judgment of conviction must be reversed. Venable v. State, 84 Cr. R. 354, 207 S. W. 520.

In a homicide case, the remark by the court to an important witness, who said he could not remember whether he gave certain testimony before the grand jury or not: "I dislike very much to use any harsh measures with you in this matter. You are a young boy, and I do not like to be severe with you, but it occurs to me you can answer that question"—was error as being an expression of opinion by the court under this article. English v. State, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

8. Prejudice from remarks.—Court's statement, after a witness had testified to accused's statement that he would have excluded it, but that the question was already answered, was not reversible error, under this article, prohibiting the trial judge commenting on the weight of the evidence, where no prejudice is shown. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 368, 195 S. W. 595.

Whether any comment by the trial court upon the weight of testimony or credibility of witnesses in violation of this article, constitutes an infringement of the rights of accused so as to require reversal, will be determined, not by the language used or the fact that the comment is made, but by the consequences which probably result therefrom. English v. State, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

In prosecution for bigamy, involving issue of whether defendant was married to alleged first wife, where prosecuting attorney asked defendant if he had not been warned by certain neighbor that his course of conduct would likely get him into the penitentiary, action of court in stating, on objection to such question, that it occurred to the court that the proposition involved the giving of advice by a third party by which the appellant was not bound, held not a comment on weight of evidence or in any way harmful to defendant. Ahlberg v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 253.

2. OF PERSONS WHO MAY TESTIFY

Art. 788. [768] Persons incompetent to testify.

See Amaya v. State, 87 Cr. R. 160, 220 S. W. 98.

IN GENERAL

1. Disqualification in general.—Because prosecutrix in a statutory rape case claimed that certain absent witnesses had also had carnal intercourse with her would be no reason why the jury should not hear the witnesses speak upon the question of her age. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

SUBD. 1

6. Incompetency of insane person in general.—Under this article, insane woman upon whom a rape was charged could not testify in prosecution; law rendering her incompetent as witness. Cokeley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 256, 220 S. W. 1099.

SUBD. 2

11. Witnesses held competent.—A negro boy, who was close to the transaction testified to in a prosecution for rape, held a competent witness. Charles v. State, 81 Cr. R. 457, 196 S. W. 179.

13. Determination of competency.—It is a general rule of evidence that competency of children as witnesses is for the court's determination, as stated in this article. Charles v. State, 81 Cr. R. 457, 196 S. W. 179.

The competency as witnesses of girls of six and seven years of age was a question for the trial court, and his ruling is not to be overturned in the absence of abuse of discretion. Carter v. State, 87 Cr. R. 299, 221 S. W. 603.

SUBD. 3

16. Incompetency in general.—In a prosecution for murder, testimony as to declarations of person who had actually done the shooting, and with whom defendant had been in company, that defendant was not guilty was inadmissible, declarant being charged by indictment with the same offense, not being a competent witness under art. 791, and being disqualified under this article by his conviction for murder. Walsh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 208, 211 S. W. 241.

This article disqualifies one convicted of felony as a witness. Barber v. State, 87 Cr. R. 585, 223 S. W. 457.

Under this article, refusal to exclude testimony of witness who admitted on cross-examination that he had served a term in the penitentiary for cattle stealing and had not been pardoned held error. Corzine v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 686.

In a criminal prosecution, a witness for the state, who admitted that he was an escaped convict and had never been pardoned, was erroneously permitted to testify over defendant's objection. Joiner v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 333.

18. Nature of offense for which convicted.—In a murder case any witness may be impeached by showing that he has been convicted or properly indicted for a felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, but not for a charge of aggravated assault with a conviction for simple assault. Parker v. State, 83 Cr. R. 77, 201 S. W. 173.

19. What constitutes conviction.—One against whom a judgment of conviction for a felony has been entered, but against whom sentence has not been pronounced, as not "convicted" of a felony. Arcia v. State, 26 Tex. App. 193, 9 S. W. 685.

Under this article, in prosecution for theft of automobile, trial court properly overruled defendant's objection to accomplice's competency as witness, where accomplice had pleaded guilty to stealing car, but had not been sentenced. Smith v. State, 83 Cr. R. 485, 203 S. W. 771.

Where an appeal is taken from conviction of felony, defendant's civil rights, among them the right to testify as a witness, survive sentence until it becomes final on the appeal. Grant v. State, 87 Cr. R. 19, 218 S. W. 1062.

Under Pen. Code, art. 27, in a prosecution for receiving stolen property, defendant's accomplice, though the jury had rendered against him a verdict of guilty of a felony, was not disqualified as a witness, where he had not been sentenced when he testified. Id.

21. Conviction in another state.—The expression "other jurisdiction," in this article, is not to be limited to the tribunals of the United States exercising their jurisdiction in Texas, for such a construction would be a narrow and strained interpretation of the language used, and would not fully accomplish the legislative intent. Pitner v. State, 23 Tex. App. 366, 5 S. W. 210.

22. Impeaching witness by proof of conviction.—Conviction of felony may be interposed either as disqualification of witness, where there is no pardon, or, in case of pardon, as matter of impeachment. Ward v. State, 81 Cr. R. 567, 196 S. W. 840.

23. Restoration of competency by pardon.—The incompetency of one who has been convicted of a felony, but has not been pardoned, under this article, cannot be removed by time, but only by a pardon. Corzine v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 686.

23½. Competency of one under suspended sentence.—While, under Code Cr. Proc. arts. 865b, 865e, trial court would have no authority to suspend sentence of accused, convicted of felony in seven separate cases, he, not having been sentenced, was not disqualified as a witness under this article. Burnett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 97, 201 S. W. 409.

Defendant's accomplice in burglarizing and stealing from a millinery store, who was convicted of burglary and accepted the verdict with recommendation of suspended sentence and entered into recognizance for such sentence as required, held not a "convict," until final judgment or sentence was pronounced, within Pen. Code 1911, art. 27, to disqualify him as a witness. Brown v. State, 86 Cr. R. 8, 215 S. W. 323.

25. Proof of disqualification.—Party offering witness claimed to be disqualified as having been in penitentiary, waives right to demand that his disqualification be proved by record of conviction, by failing to assert it at proper time. Marshall v. State, 82 Cr. R. 623, 200 S. W. 836.

26. Proof of pardon.—See International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Ash (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 668.

Where a witness is objected to as a convict, to entitle him to testify, he must produce his pardon. Thompson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 148, 205 S. W. 988.

Relative to competency of witness convicted of felony, his term of service in penitentiary is not to be considered time occurring between the conviction and the time of his testifying. Mayer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 512, 222 S. W. 571.

Art. 789. [769] Female alleged to be seduced may testify.

7. Necessity of corroboration.—The reason for such a statute as this article, requiring corroboration of testimony of a seduced female, is not that she is an accomplice;

she being rather the victim of crime than its perpetrator. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

8. Extent of corroboration required.—In a seduction case, it is unnecessary that the prosecutrix be corroborated as to every material fact. Hunt v. State, 85 Cr. R. 622, 214 S. W. 983.

In a seduction case, it is unnecessary that the prosecutrix be corroborated as to every material fact, and it is not proper to single out isolated facts in the case, which are admissible in making out the state's case, and apply the law of accomplice testimony to each such bit of evidence. Id.

To sustain a seduction prosecution brought under Pen. Code, arts. 1447, 1448, the seduced female's testimony must be corroborated by other evidence tending to connect the defendant with both the carnal knowledge and the promise of marriage, in view of this article, requiring corroborative evidence "tending to connect the defendant with the offense charged," although the corroborative facts may be meager and may consist alone of circumstances. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

In a prosecution for seduction, the law requires corroboration of prosecutrix both as to the act of intercourse and the promise of marriage. Gainer v. State (Cr. App.) 322 S. W. 830.

9. Admissibility of corroborative evidence.—Acts and declarations of defendant's accomplice subsequent to alleged seduction could not be used for corroboration. Haney v. State, 81 Cr. R. 651, 197 S. W. 1102.

Letters identified only by the testimony of the prosecuting witness in a prosecution for seduction are not available to corroborate the truth of her testimony as to the elements of the offense. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

Upon trial for seduction, a subsequent act of intercourse coincident with a renewed promise of marriage at a fixed date within a short time is admissible to corroborate prosecutrix and as relevant to a controverted issue. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

In a seduction case, evidence that prosecutrix made dresses in preparation of marriage was provable as a corroborative circumstance which usually accompanies an engagement to marry. Id.

In a prosecution for seduction, corroboration of prosecutrix must come from facts and circumstances, independent of her testimony, tending to corroborate it as to the promise of marriage or sexual intimacy or both, and testimony of a third person that prosecutrix had told her (the third person) that she (prosecutrix) was engaged to defendant, prosecutrix having testified that she had so told the witness, was not corroborative of prosecutrix, but inadmissible as hearsay. Adams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 67, 219 S. W. 460.

In prosecution for seduction, the trial court properly refused defendant's requested special charge that no act, statement, or declaration of prosecutrix subsequent to the alleged seduction could be considered as corroborating her testimony. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

10. Sufficiency of corroboration.—In prosecution for seduction, evidence held to justify finding in favor of state on issue of corroboration. Haney v. State, 81 Cr. R. 651, 197 S. W. 1102.

Testimony of prosecuting witness in a prosecution for seduction as to intercourse may be corroborated by circumstantial evidence. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

In a prosecution for seduction, evidence of the prosecuting witness as to the promise of marriage held corroborated by a letter written by defendant. Id.

In a prosecution for seduction, testimony of prosecuting witness as to acts of intercourse held sufficiently corroborated. Id.

In a seduction prosecution the jury must decide what corroborating evidence is true and its efficacy in meeting the measure of the law. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

In a prosecution for seduction, it is not required by this article, that evidence corroborating the testimony of the injured female establish in and of itself the defendant's guilt. Id.

In a prosecution for seduction, defendant's requested peremptory instruction to return verdict of not guilty for lack of corroboration of the alleged injured female held correctly refused. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

Prosecutrix charging defendant with her seduction held sufficiently corroborated within this article. Id.

11. Instructions as to corroboration.—In view of this article, in prosecution for seduction, court should have given defendant's requested special charge in appropriate language, informing jury that acts and declarations of accomplice subsequent to seduction could not be used for corroboration. Haney v. State, 81 Cr. R. 651, 197 S. W. 1102.

A charge that prosecutrix in a seduction case was an accomplice, that the jury must not only believe her testimony was true, but that it showed defendant's guilt, and that her testimony must be corroborated by evidence other than her own, both as to sexual intercourse and promise of marriage, held correct, and not subject to objection that it authorized conviction if jury believed prosecutrix. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

The jury in a seduction prosecution should be told that the testimony of the injured female must be corroborated as to the marital contract and the carnal knowledge, in order to comply with this article, requiring corroboration; such instruction not extending the statute beyond its terms. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

The omission to state in charge that corroboration of testimony of the injured female in a seduction prosecution "is not sufficient, if it merely shows the commission of the offense," such language being used in art. 801, relating to accomplice testimony, was not error, as this article, requiring corroboration of the seduced female's testimony, controls. Id.

In absence of demand for more specific instruction, a charge that testimony of the injured female in a seduction prosecution must be corroborated is sufficient. Id.

In a prosecution for seduction, defendant's requested special charge that the fact of continuous association between him and the prosecutrix was not sufficient evidence to corroborate a promise of marriage held properly refused as on the weight of the evidence, and not presenting a correct proposition of law. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

In prosecution for seduction, instruction that corroborative evidence of prosecutrix need not be direct and positive held not erroneous. Id.

Art. 790. [770] Defendant may testify.

5. Effect of testifying—Credibility of defendant.—In homicide prosecution, the truth or falsity of defendant's testimony raising issue of whether he acted under immediate influence of sudden passion is not a question for the appellate court, but was for the jury. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

7. Use of evidence on subsequent trial.—In theft prosecution, incriminating testimony given by accused on previous trial for theft is admissible. Taylor v. State, 82 Cr. R. 210, 199 S. W. 289.

In view of this article, providing that defendant's failure to testify shall not be held against him, defendant's silence on first trial, when witness, absent on second trial, testified defendant, at time of affray involved, made remark indicating murderous intent, does not render admissible, on second trial, testimony of absent witness to such remark. White v. State, 83 Cr. R. 252, 202 S. W. 737.

Evidence as to the testimony given by defendant on a former trial is admissible. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 148, 220 S. W. 1108.

Where a defendant voluntarily takes the stand in his own behalf, his testimony is subject to the same rules as apply to other witnesses, and such testimony can be used against him at a subsequent trial of the same case, or on the trial of a different case arising from the same transaction, even though he was not warned before he gave the testimony. Roberts v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 759.

10. Examination of defendant—Cross-examination.—For purpose of showing motive and animus, held, it was proper on cross-examination of accused to show that prosecution of accused's brother-in-law by prosecuting witness for killing a cousin was cause of accused's unfriendly feeling toward prosecuting witness. Zarafonetis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 120, 198 S. W. 938.

In prosecution for assault to murder committed with pistol, it was improper on cross-examination to bring out that accused always carried pistol, and was armed when he passed house of the assaulted man on previous occasions before they had had trouble. Yancy v. State, 82 Cr. R. 276, 199 S. W. 470.

In prosecution for murder, in cross-examining defendant it was improper for the county attorney to ask, "Don't you know that you are swearing to a lie?" Redick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 225, 202 S. W. 743.

Although defendant is called as a witness for sole purpose of making proof to suspend his sentence, testifying merely to name, residence, and the fact that he had never been convicted of a felony, under this article, permitting him to testify, having taken the stand, he is subject to cross-examination in same manner as any other witness. Samino v. State, 83 Cr. R. 481, 204 S. W. 233.

It was improper on cross-examination to ask accused if his statement that he had not used an oath in a difficulty with deceased on the day preceding the homicide was as true as any of his other testimony. Wood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 187, 206 S. W. 349.

Where defendant in a murder case testified he had heard deceased had killed three men, but was not informed of the circumstances attending the homicides, and sought to prove the homicides by deceased's brother, this attack on deceased's character justified the state's cross-examination to develop the circumstances surrounding the homicides. Castleberry v. State, 84 Cr. R. 271, 206 S. W. 353.

In prosecution for seduction, permitting prosecuting attorney to ask defendant whether he was willing to marry prosecutrix was not error; it being an issue injected into the case by defendant. Scoggins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 519, 208 S. W. 930.

In a prosecution for murder, questions by the state's attorney as to whether defendant did not know that his son, who had been sent to the penitentiary for the homicide, denied the killing and testified that defendant fired the fatal shot, were improper; defendant not being present at the trial where his son was alleged to have so testified. Curry v. State, 85 Cr. R. 443, 213 S. W. 268.

Where one accused of murder was asked, on cross-examination, if he shot in self-defense when he shot deceased while crawling on his hands and knees and begging accused not to continue to shoot him, the eyewitnesses for the state having testified the shooting took place under those circumstances, and accused claiming that all his shots were in self-defense, such cross-examination was germane and not objectionable. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

In a prosecution for murder, counsel for state was properly permitted to cross-examine accused concerning statements made by him forming a part of the res gestæ. Woods v. State, 87 Cr. R. 354, 221 S. W. 276.

Evidence adduced on cross-examination of defendant in homicide, relying on a reasonable apprehension of danger, that he did not appeal to any one for protection when deceased brought a gun out is not obviously irrelevant and harmful. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583.

Accused, having offered himself as a witness, is, in general, subject to the same rules of cross-examination as other witnesses. Id.

11. — Harmless error.—In prosecution for robbery, where defendant was convicted on the testimony of accomplice witnesses and on inconclusive corroborating circumstances, and where defense rested almost alone on defendant's testimony denying guilt, refusal to permit defendant, who had been cross-examined as to his having pleaded guilty to embezzlement in previous prosecution, to explain upon redirect examination that his guilt was technical rather than moral, in that he had accepted checks instead of currency as postmaster, and that he had pleaded guilty to shield his wife from embarrassment, held reversible error. Boone v. State, 85 Cr. R. 661, 215 S. W. 310.

12. Impeachment of defendant.—In prosecution for murder, where defendant testified to facts on which self-defense was predicated, there was no error in allowing evidence that he was under the influence of intoxicants; such evidence bearing on the weight of his testimony. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

In a prosecution for theft, testimony of a telephone exchange operator concerning the working of his telephone, introduced with the view of impeaching defendant on his testimony as to his efforts to call the owner of the property by telephone before taking such property, held to be inadmissible, being largely matters of opinion and guesswork. Beach v. State, 85 Cr. R. 64, 210 S. W. 540.

In prosecution for murder of son-in-law, examination of defendant as to whether he had not whipped his wife held improper. Hurst v. State, 86 Cr. R. 375, 217 S. W. 156.

Where defendant was charged with pursuing the occupation of retail liquor seller in a county where the sale of intoxicants was forbidden, it was improper to allow the state to cross-examine defendant, who took the stand, as to whether a bill seeking an injunction and alleging that he was selling intoxicating liquors had not been filed, and whether he allowed decree to go by default. Alexander v. State, 86 Cr. R. 606, 218 S. W. 752.

In homicide prosecution, cross-examination of defendant as to a statement claimed to have been made by him with reference to the chastity of deceased's wife, objected to as extraneous matter, held proper to show the relation between the parties, and as impeaching testimony, in view of defendant's denial. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 148, 220 S. W. 1108.

Where deceased was at times a peace officer and was such at the time of the homicide, and defendant claimed he had harassed and pursued him for years and on the day of the killing had threatened to lock him up if he did not leave town and then threatened to kill him, cross-examination of defendant as to his guilt of various misdemeanors, which elicited some legitimate evidence, was not improper as an attempt to discredit accused by bringing before the jury damaging facts through irrelevant questions or questions not asked for the purpose of eliciting proof. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

Where a homicide case had been tried several times and on the last trial defendant gave in much detail his recollection of incidents occurring prior to the homicide, cross-examination, as to whether on the second trial he did not ascribe his absence of recollection of the incidents of the first trial to the fact that his mental condition was impaired by syphilis and drink, was not open to an objection for irrelevancy. Id.

In a prosecution for assault to murder defendant's wife, where defendant testified in his own behalf, and the sheriff testified he went to defendant's residence shortly after the trouble and arrested defendant, the state could not impeach defendant by showing by his own testimony, required over objection, that he did not make a statement to the sheriff at the time of his arrest, as he had testified, in fact made no statement, defendant having been asked nothing about the matter, and having said nothing about it to the sheriff, so that it was simply a question of silence. Thompson v. State, 88 Cr. R. 29, 224 S. W. 892.

In a prosecution for manufacturing intoxicating liquor in violation of the Dean Law, it was proper to allow the state to ask defendant, while a witness, if he had not been offering to get whisky for people about the time of the offense, and, having answered in the negative to show that he was making such offers. Russell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 948.

13. — Character or reputation.—Where a defendant seeks to prove a good reputation as a peaceable, law-abiding citizen, the state may prove his bad reputation, and, if defendant becomes a witness, he puts in issue his reputation for truth and veracity, while, if he moves for a suspended sentence, he opens generally the issue of his reputation. Alexander v. State, 86 Cr. R. 606, 218 S. W. 752.

15. — Accusation or conviction of crime in general.—Where accused takes the stand, he may be cross-examined as to his conviction of other offenses to impeach his credibility as a witness? Daniels v. State, 82 Cr. R. 17, 198 S. W. 147.

Defendant not having placed his character in issue, the county attorney should not have questioned him as to having been prosecuted in other counties, and his reason for leaving them, and as to the number of times he had been prosecuted where he was then living. Dodd v. State, 82 Cr. R. 139, 198 S. W. 783.

In prosecution for violating local option law, it was improper to permit defendant to be asked about pending or past cases involving misdemeanors, unless they involved legal or moral turpitude. Wrenn v. State, 82 Cr. R. 608, 200 S. W. 397.

Proof of crime, for the purpose of impeaching the defendant as a witness, should be confined to such offenses as are not too remote, and to those which are felonies or misdemeanors involving moral turpitude. Long v. State, 84 Cr. R. 529, 208 S. W. 922.

Where defendant testified in his own behalf, the state on cross-examination was authorized to show his previous conviction and suspended sentence as a means of affecting his credibility, though defendant had not placed his reputation before the jury as being an honest, law-abiding citizen. Gordon v. State, 86 Cr. R. 262, 216 S. W. 184.

An accused having assumed the attitude of a witness in his own behalf, it was the right of the prosecution to prove by legitimate means that he had been indicted and convicted of a felony, or of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude. Rosa v. State, 86 Cr. R. 646, 218 S. W. 1056.

It was prejudicial error, on the cross-examination of an accused, to permit the state to ask whether or not defendant had been convicted of crimes and misdemeanors at various times and places, and whether or not certain pictures and photographs were of him, when the state was without evidence with which to sustain the impeaching facts, in view of Code Cr. Proc. art. 743. Id.

An accused, when a witness, may be asked if he had not been charged with a felony. Haynes v. State, 88 Cr. R. 42, 224 S. W. 1100.

When defendant testifies in his own behalf, the state may ask him if he has been in the penitentiary, unless the prosecutor knows that such matter is too remote. Armstrong v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 485.

Questions asked defendant on cross-examination as to mere arrests for other offenses or charges not shown to be legal charges by complaint, information, or indictment are too general. Criner v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 860.

Whether he had been indicted for a felony may be asked defendant, and the fact that he answered that he was indicted for a misdemeanor does not make the question erroneous. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

16. — Accusation of particular offenses.—In a prosecution for perjury, it was admissible, as affecting credibility, to ask defendant on cross-examination if he had been charged with seduction. Allen v. State, 82 Cr. R. 416, 199 S. W. 633.

The offense of pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquor in prohibited territory being a felony, proof on cross-examination of the defendant that he had been indicted therefor was legitimate for impeachment purposes. Jennings v. State, 82 Cr. R. 504, 200 S. W. 169.

Proof that defendant had been charged in the federal court with the sale of intoxicating liquors without a license, such crime being a misdemeanor not imputing moral turpitude, was not admissible for the purpose of impeachment. Id.

In prosecution for violating local option law, it was improper to ask accused whether he had been charged with pandering, where the result of examination, as to such matter, showed that he had been arrested for being found in room with woman, which does not constitute pandering. Wrenn v. State, 82 Cr. R. 608, 200 S. W. 397.

In prosecution for horse theft, it was not error for the county attorney to ask accused if he was the same person who had been arrested for theft, where on redirect examination accused stated that he had pleaded guilty to theft but denied his guilt. Ingram v. State, 83 Cr. R. 215, 202 S. W. 741.

In prosecution for assault to murder, resulting in conviction of aggravated assault, state's question to defendant as to whether he had been named as correspondent in divorce petition of assaulted person against wife held improper. Faubian v. State, 83 Cr. R. 234, 203 S. W. 897.

In prosecution for failure to support wife and children, it was competent on cross-examination of defendant, as affecting his credibility, to show that he had been prosecuted for adultery; adultery being a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude. Morrison v. State, 85 Cr. R. 20, 209 S. W. 742.

Where defendant, who was charged with pursuing the occupation of retail liquor dealer in a county where sale was forbidden, took the stand, it was permissible for the state to inquire as to whether or not and how many times he had been indicted for selling whisky; it appearing that the indictments charged felonies. Alexander v. State, 86 Cr. R. 606, 218 S. W. 752.

In a prosecution for murder of defendant's mistress, the court properly permitted the state to prove by defendant that he had been indicted in nine felony cases of embezzlement; defendant qualifying his answer by the assertion he was not guilty. Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 55, 219 S. W. 821.

In prosecution for theft by bailee in violation of Pen. Code, art. 1348, it was competent for state to prove, as affecting defendant's credibility as a witness in his own behalf, that he had been indicted for a felony; proof being available even if followed by acquittal. Parkinson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 176, 220 S. W. 774.

Theft is an offense involving moral turpitude, and the fact that a legal charge thereof has been preferred against defendant is admissible as affecting her credibility as a witness. Criner v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 860.

A question asked defendant on cross-examination as to how many times she had been charged in the county court with theft was proper, as she could only be charged in such court by complaint and information or indictment. Id.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, asking the defendant whether or not he had been indicted for incest was permissible as affecting his credibility, and proof of the contents of the indictment and the name of the party with whom the incest occurred was not injurious to the defendant, who had admitted that he had been indicted for incest with such party. Rodriguez v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 512.

17. — Conviction of particular offenses.—Rule that accused's testimony may be impeached by showing previous convictions for theft or misdemeanors involving moral turpitude is inapplicable to a previous conviction of a misdemeanor for fighting and disturbing the peace, since such offense involves no moral turpitude. Taylor v. State, 82 Cr. R. 210, 199 S. W. 289.

In prosecution for robbery, evidence that defendant had pleaded guilty of embezzlement in a former prosecution was admissible as affecting his credibility. Boone v. State, 85 Cr. R. 661, 215 S. W. 310.

A witness for defendant, who applied for suspended sentence, having on his direct testified to knowing defendant for 25 years and that his reputation as a peaceable and law-abiding citizen was good, and on his cross-examination that he had not heard of defendant drinking and disturbing the peace, it was not error to allow the state on cross-examination of defendant to elicit his testimony that 16 years before he had paid two fines for drunkenness. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 305, 221 S. W. 607.

18. — Contradictory statements.—In prosecution for unlawful gaming in a private residence, where defendant denied telling the officers he had played but one game, an officer could state that defendant told him that only one game had been played. Cagle v. State, 82 Cr. R. 347, 200 S. W. 153.

In prosecution for the murder of one who took part in an altercation with defendant's friend at a hotel, testimony to the effect that defendant said he had been looking for the hotel proprietor for the purpose of killing him was properly received in rebuttal of defendant's testimony that his visits to the hotel were for another purpose. Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

In homicide prosecution, cross-examination of defendant as to a statement claimed to have been made by him with reference to the chastity of deceased's wife, objected to as extraneous matter, held proper to show the relation between the parties, and as impeaching testimony, in view of defendant's denial. Henry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 148, 220 S. W. 1108.

In a murder prosecution, where defendant testified that at the time of the homicide he was wearing boots, cross-examination by the state proving by him that he might have said on a previous trial that on Wednesday after the killing he had stated that he did not remember whether he had on boots or shoes on the day decedent was killed held not inadmissible as violating the rule against repeating statements of accused while under arrest and unwarned. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rob, defendant's confession, conflicting with his testimony as to his purpose in entering complaining witness' store held admissible as tending to discredit his theory of shooting such witness in self-defense after being assaulted. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 320.

Where defendant was asked as to certain portions of two applications for continuance signed by him containing statements contradictory to his evidence at the trial, and he claimed certain statements in both applications were untrue and offered certain explanations, held not error for the state to introduce such portions of each application as defendant was questioned about and which were contrary to his testimony. Brooks v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 673.

23. — Rebutting impeaching evidence.—In prosecution for robbery, where fact that defendant had pleaded guilty to embezzlement in former prosecution was elicited on cross-examination of defendant, defendant had the right, upon redirect examination, to explain the circumstances attending charge of embezzlement and his plea of guilty thereto in order to modify or destroy the effect upon his credibility of such testimony. Boone v. State, 85 Cr. R. 661, 215 S. W. 310.

In homicide prosecution where defendant testified on cross-examination that he had been indicted for theft from an express company and testified on redirect examination that he had been acquitted by the verdict of the jury, exclusion of his testimony that the express company had compromised his claim for unjust prosecution held proper; such evidence being hearsay and not affecting his veracity as a witness. Ray v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 523.

26. Contradicting defendant.—Where defendant, charged with illegally selling intoxicants, herself swore she never sold liquor to state's witness at any time, state had right to have its witness in rebuttal swear he did buy intoxicating liquor from defendant at other times, though particulars of sales would be inadmissible. Reed v. State, 82 Cr. R. 657, 200 S. W. 843.

In a prosecution for theft, defendant's testimony that he did not make inquiry as to the illness of the owner of the property stolen held to be an immaterial matter, not affording a basis for impeachment. Beach v. State, 85 Cr. R. 64, 210 S. W. 540.

In a prosecution for theft, defendant's testimony as to his efforts to call the owner of the property by telephone before taking such property held to be an immaterial matter, not affording a basis for impeachment. Id.

In prosecution for aggravated assault on a female child, who had testified that defendant at the time of the offense had exhibited obscene pictures to her, the state, in laying the predicate to prove that defendant had on various occasions exhibited obscene pictures to other girls, and in contradicting his denial of such transactions, infringed the rule against impeachment on an immaterial issue. Sine v. State, 86 Cr. R. 221, 215 S. W. 967.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, based on the ground that the person assaulted was a decrepit person, and that defendant was of robust health and strength, where defendant testified in his own behalf that he suffered a great deal from rheumatism, causing him to limp, and that he was not in robust health, the state might properly show that witnesses with opportunity to know had not seen him limp. Hahn v. State, 87 Cr. R. 22, 218 S. W. 1058.

27. Corroboration.—Evidence of accused on examining trial is not admissible to support his testimony when it has not been attacked. Greenwood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 548, 208 S. W. 662.

Statements made by accused cannot be testified to by him as corroborative of his testimony; such statements being only admissible to corroborate one impeached by proof of former contradictory statements. Medford v. State, 86 Cr. R. 237, 216 S. W. 175.

29. Reference by counsel to accused's failure to testify.—Where the court instructed that accused's failure to testify could not be taken against him, the prosecuting attorney was not thereby authorized to comment upon accused's failure to testify in view of this article. Sheppard v. State, 81 Cr. R. 522, 196 S. W. 541.

A statement, by the state's attorney in a murder case, that "defendant is guilty as shown by circumstances so strong that he could not face you and give you a satisfactory explanation," held reversible error under this article. Parker v. State, 83 Cr. R. 77, 201 S. W. 173.

Disregard of this article, prohibiting counsel alluding to or commenting on any failure to testify, requires reversal. Haley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 629, 209 S. W. 675, 3 A. L. R. 779.

This article held not violated, in murder trial, by state counsel's statement: "I don't know what took place in that automobile. Men who commit those crimes don't talk; but one of the men that was in that automobile is dead"—there being evidence that deceased, accused, and one C. were in the automobile, and C. having refused to testify, and the state contending that accused had admitted his presence in the automobile and his participation in the homicide. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

For the argument of counsel for the state to constitute an implied reference to accused's failure to testify, in violation of this article, the implication must be a necessary one, and where there is evidence or absence of evidence other than accused's testimony to which counsel's remarks may have reasonably been applied by the jury, the remark is not reversible error. Id.

30. — Reference to failure to deny or contradict testimony.—In prosecution for slander of female, statement by county attorney that slanderous words were not denied, was not erroneous as comment on defendant's failure to testify where it appeared that there were several witnesses present at time of slander, but none contradicted the state's witnesses. Pickerell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 68, 198 S. W. 303.

Where defendant in prosecution for assault with intent to kill was called as witness in his own behalf, it was proper for the state's counsel in his argument to the jury to comment on the fact that he had not been asked if he did the shooting of which he was accused. Samino v. State, 83 Cr. R. 481, 204 S. W. 233.

In a prosecution for seduction, statement of private prosecuting counsel in argument that prosecutrix had sworn to certain matters, and nobody denied it, held improper, as an indirect reference to defendant's failure to testify. Adams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 67, 219 S. W. 460.

In prosecution for seduction, statement of county attorney in argument that the court told the jury that before they could convict they must believe the woman's testimony was true, asking, "What is there to contradict it?" held not a reference to defendant's failure to testify transgressing the statute. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

Fact that assistant county attorney stated to jury that no testimony had been offered by defendant charged with seduction to contradict that of the state did not violate the statutory rule against referring to defendant's failure to testify. Id.

31. — Reference to lack of proof.—In prosecution for incest with his niece, the absence of inadmissible evidence that defendant had received a letter from prosecutrix informing him that she had absconded could not be used in argument as evidence of his guilt. Hollingsworth v. State, 82 Cr. R. 337, 199 S. W. 626.

The state could comment in argument, on failure of defendant in homicide, relying in part on alleged declaration of deceased to him of difficulties with named persons in which deceased was the aggressor, to avail himself of his privilege of proving by others the specific acts of violence attributed to deceased by his alleged declarations. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583.

Argument of state's attorney that no one had explained defendant's possession of stolen automobile, and that no explanation had come from him, was not comment on his failure to testify calling for reversal. Berry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 559, 223 S. W. 212.

Where no testimony was offered by defendant, charged with seduction, from any source, the fact was legitimate for comment by the state's attorney. Klepper v. State, 87 Cr. R. 597, 223 S. W. 468.

32. — Reference to failure to call witnesses or produce evidence.—Statement of prosecuting attorney, in argument, that if the tobacco was brought by or given to defendant he could have brought some one to testify thereto, which he had not done held not a reference to defendant's failure to testify. Garrett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 364, 203 S. W. 598.

In prosecution for larceny, question by state's attorney as to why defendant's counsel did not put defendant's boy on the stand and prove a certain fact held a legitimate argument under the record. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

Where defendant was jointly indicted with her husband for murder, and a severance was granted, state attorney's argument asking why defendant, if not guilty of murder, did not call her husband, who was then in court, and as to why she did not call witnesses to prove her innocence, allowed over objection, and without reprimand or instruction to disregard it, violated the statute, as being a direct reference to failure of both defendant and her husband to testify. Ross v. State, 85 Cr. R. 340, 212 S. W. 167.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant stated that his brother, who was present, was crazy about half the time, and refused the offer of the prosecution to introduce a purported written statement by the brother, argument of the prosecutor that it was a fair inference from the fact the brother did not testify, and that defendant would not agree for his written statement to be introduced, that it was adverse to him, was improper, and aggravated the impropriety of the attempt by the prosecution to get the statement before the jury. Dunn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 299, 212 S. W. 511.

Where defendant in homicide, claiming reasonable belief that deceased was armed and making a demonstration to attack, relied in part on alleged declarations of deceased to him that deceased was the aggressor in difficulties with named persons, the state on cross-examination of him could ask whether such persons, by whose testimony as to such attacks he could support his case, were present, or whether an effort had been made to secure their attendance. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583.

33. — Wife of accused.—Failure of wife of defendant charged with theft to testify with reference to telegram improperly admitted in evidence is not subject of comment in argument by county attorney. Carroll v. State, 83 Cr. R. 369, 203 S. W. 599.

In a prosecution for incest, where a witness on cross-examination denied having made a statement to the wife of defendant, held that, where there was nothing else to show that she knew of the transaction, etc., comment by the prosecutor on the failure of the defendant to put his wife on the stand was improper. Lankford v. State, 87 Cr. R. 435, 222 S. W. 567.

In criminal prosecution, where the only other witness to the crime was prosecutrix, statement by the district attorney that defendant, instead of putting his wife on the stand, was content to rely on his plea of not guilty, was improper as a reference to the failure of the defendant to take the stand himself. Id.

In a prosecution for murder of mother-in-law, state's counsel had the right to argue the failure of accused to use his wife as a witness, and to state that she alone was the only eyewitness to the killing except the defendant, and that she could tell how her mother was murdered by the defendant if he did not refuse to permit her to testify. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 497.

37. — Cure of error.—Argument of prosecution in adultery trial referring to accused's refusal to allow his wife to testify held reversible error, although jury were charged not to consider it. Green v. State, 83 Cr. R. 68, 201 S. W. 182.

38. — Review on appeal.—Where reference is made in argument by prosecuting counsel to defendant's failure to testify, it is not necessary that defendant request a special charge in order to complain on appeal. Adams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 67, 219 S. W. 460.

The Court of Criminal Appeals will uphold the action of the trial court in overruling motion for new trial grounded on statements in the argument of state's counsel relative to the failure of defendant to testify on his examining trial unless there is made to appear a clear abuse of the discretion necessarily confided in the trial court in such matters. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 527.

39. Instructions.—In a prosecution for cattle theft, where the court, on retirement of jury, without request, no improper argument having been made or additional evidence given, verbally instructed them not to discuss the fact that defendant did not testify, nor to arrive at the verdict by chance, such instruction, being verbal, constituted reversible error, in view of Code Cr. Proc. arts. 735, 737a, 738, 740. Winfrey v. State, 84 Cr. R. 579, 209 S. W. 151.

40. Reference by jury to failure to testify.—See Mizell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 241, 197 S. W. 300; Rabe v. State, 87 Cr. R. 497, 222 S. W. 1106; Stevenson v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 174; notes to art. 837, subd. 3.

Juror's remark that if he was being tried he would take the stand in his own defense held such an allusion to and comment on defendant's failure to testify as required a reversal. Boozier v. State, 82 Cr. R. 72, 198 S. W. 295.

Where on motion for new trial after full investigation court found upon conflicting evidence that jury did not misuse accused's failure to testify, such finding will not be disturbed. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

That the jury discussed the failure of an accused to testify in his own behalf is ground for reversal of conviction. Haynes v. State, 84 Cr. R. 6, 204 S. W. 430.

Where it appears from the jurors' own testimony that they discussed failure of accused to testify, the conviction must be reversed. Roberts v. State, 85 Cr. R. 196, 211 S. W. 219.

Evidence that two jurors were for acquittal until it was stated to them in the jury room that defendant had killed another man, whereupon they agreed to a conviction, and that certain jurors commented on defendant's failure to testify, shows misconduct requiring the granting of a new trial. Kilpatrick v. State, 85 Cr. R. 172, 211 S. W. 230.

In a prosecution for murder, misconduct of the jury in commenting on the fact that defendant had not testified, and in stating that it would have been better for defendant if she had told a lie about it than not to have taken the witness stand, held ground for reversal. Reynolds v. State, 86 Cr. R. 453, 217 S. W. 151.

Remarks by several jurors concerning defendant's failure to testify do not require a reversal, where the remarks were not made as any suggestion of guilt, under this article. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

The fact that the foreman stated that, if accused had any satisfactory defense, he ought to have gone on the stand, and that other jurors commented on his failure to testify, shows such misconduct of the jury as necessitates the reversal of the case. Barrow v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 53.

In a prosecution for violating the Prohibition Law, where defendant did not take the stand and introduced no evidence, the case being submitted on the state's evidence, it was such misconduct as to necessitate reversal for the jury to consider and discuss defendant's failure to take the stand, as well as to consider statements made by one of the jurors that defendant had been selling liquor for over 10 years and would continue, unless they convicted. Gates v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 170.

Where defendant had pleaded guilty to assault with intent to murder, thereby admitting all facts necessary to the conclusion of his guilt, an affidavit by a juror that several of the jurors during deliberation referred to defendant's failure to testify, but not showing that such failure was considered a circumstance against him, does not require the granting of a new trial for misconduct of the jury. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

In a murder prosecution, action of jurors in discussing during their deliberation defendant's failure to testify in violation of this article, held ground for reversal. Glenn v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 521.

Evidence given by jurors on motion for new trial held to prove that the jurors deliberating over a verdict discussed defendant's failure to testify in violation of this article, and that there was not merely a casual promptly suppressed reference thereeto. Id.

Art. 791. [771] Principals, accomplices and accessories.

See Renfro v. State, 82 Cr. R. 343, 199 S. W. 1096.

3. Incompetency in general.—One indicted as principal with defendant for same crime was not available to him as witness, under this article, or Pen. Code, art. 91. Terrell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 647, 197 S. W. 1107.

5. — Competency after acquittal or dismissal.—In view of arts. 37, 727, the provisions of this article, allowing severance of trial of codefendants, and making competent witnesses, in behalf of the others, such of them as are tried and acquitted, or as to whom the prosecution is dismissed, were not evaded, where the state, after a severance claimed and granted, dismissed as to the two codefendants first in order to be tried, without, at the same time, granting them immunity from further prosecution for the homicide of which they were accused. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

Testimony of one indicted as an accomplice is admissible after the prosecution against him has been dismissed, under this article and art. 792. Gerber v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 334.

8. — Identity of offense.—In prosecution for perjury committed as a witness at a trial, testimony of another witness at such trial, who had testified to substantially the same facts and who was also indicted for perjury, held admissible in absence of evidence that they had conspired to commit perjury; an indictment not rendering a witness incompetent unless as provided in this article, he is charged with being an accomplice, accessory, or principal to the offense for which the person is on trial. Welch v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 301.

9. — Declarations of co-defendant.—In a prosecution for murder, testimony as to declarations of person who had actually done the shooting, and with whom defendant had been in company, that defendant was not guilty, was inadmissible, declarant being charged by indictment with the same offense, not being a competent witness under this article, and being disqualified under art. 783 by his conviction for murder. Walsh v. State, 85 Cr. R. 208, 211 S. W. 241.

In a prosecution for robbery with firearms, where defendant did not testify, there was no error in the rejection of the testimony of another indicted for participation in the same offense, as to exculpatory statements made by him to the arresting officer at the time of his arrest, as he could not testify on defendant's behalf, and the arresting officer testified as to similar statements by defendant. Patterson v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 763.

11. Competency as witnesses for the state.—That accomplice was brought from jail to testify against defendant was no valid ground for objection to his testimony. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

An accomplice who had been found guilty by a jury, but against whom no sentence had been pronounced, was not an incompetent witness for the state in a prosecution for the unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquors. Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 229 E. W. 509.

12. — Competency of testimony.—In a prosecution for theft of an automobile, it was competent for an accomplice to testify that he had entered into an agreement with defendant to steal automobiles and that the car in question was taken by defendant to demonstrate how easy it was. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 860.

Privileged communications—In general.—In prosecution for rape defendant was improperly required to testify that his wife accused him of the crime, such evidence being as to a matter between defendant and his wife, which he could not be required to testify to. Villafranco v. State, 84 Cr. R. 195, 206 S. W. 357.

The law making the wife incompetent to testify against her husband as to privileged communications is purely statutory, being embodied in this article, and art. 795, while art. 640c makes husband or wife competent to testify to all relevant facts in a prosecution for wife desertion or for failure to support minor children. Curd v. State, 86 Cr. R. 552, 217 S. W. 1043.

In a prosecution for homicide, defendant having killed deceased after his daughter informed him that deceased had outraged her, it was error for the state to show on cross-examination that defendant's wife was continually nagging at him, and that she upbraided him for his real or supposed intimacy with other women; communications and family turmoils of such sort between husband and wife not being the subject of investigation, unless brought out by defendant. Lovett v. State, 87 Cr. R. 548, 223 S. W. 210.

Usually evidence as to family matters and troubles, if private matters between husband and wife or private communications from one to the other, is inadmissible. Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105.

In murder prosecution, where defendant testified on direct examination that he loved his wife, that they were not separated, and that deceased was the cause of the only trouble between them, rebuttal testimony as to wife's ownership of land and as to defendant's execution of notes and financial handling of the land for purpose of proving that defendant and wife were separated held admissible. Id.

Where witness for defendant was asked if he had not made contradictory statement to wife, the admission of wife's testimony as to such statement held reversible error, under this article. Bell v. State, 88 Cr. R. 64, 224 S. W. 1108.

— Competency of testimony after termination of relation.—Under this article, communications between husband and wife are privileged, even though at time of trial the husband and wife are separated or divorced. Bell v. State, 88 Cr. R. 64, 224 S. W. 1108.

Art. 795. [775] Same subject.

Cited, Roy v. State, 24 Tex. App. 369, 6 S. W. 186.

½. Amendment of article.—Vernon's Ann. Pen. Code 1916, art. 640c, making wife a competent witness against husband charged with wife desertion, held valid as against objection that Const. art. 3, § 36, providing that no law shall be revised or amended by reference to its title and requiring the amended section to be re-enacted and published at length, was not complied with, since such statute is complete within itself and is not an amendment of this article, notwithstanding its effect is to restrict the operation of the latter statute. Terrell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 240.

1. Witness for defendant.—In prosecution for murder, where defendant claimed to have been angered by the attentions of deceased to his (defendant's) wife, the wife's testimony as to conduct of deceased toward her was available to defendant, but not available to the state. Watts v. State, 87 Cr. R. 442, 222 S. W. 558.

2. — Cross-examination.—Defendant's wife having testified for him merely as to his alibi, allowing the state to ask her as to her improper relations with deceased was error; the state thus making her testify against her husband on new matter. Black v. State, 82 Cr. R. 358, 198 S. W. 959.

In prosecution for murder, where wife of accused testified on direct examination that deceased came to her house some days prior to the killing and detailed conversation that took place, she can be required on cross-examination to testify as to whether he was accompanied at such time by another person. Houseton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 453, 204 S. W. 1007.

In criminal prosecution, where wife of accused takes stand in his behalf, she may be cross-examined as to all matters germane and pertinent to her direct testimony. Id.

The state on cross-examination of defendant's witness, his wife, should not have been permitted to ask her as to trouble between them, or as to statement she made to him, not connected with or germane to her testimony in chief. Bell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 475, 213 S. W. 647.

In murder prosecution, where defendant's wife, testifying for defendant, had testified that deceased had insulted her, and that she had informed defendant thereof before the homicide, cross-examination as to whether the wife had not told her sister at a certain time and place that deceased had not insulted her, and that all they had against him was that he had taken defendant's pistol, held proper to impeach the wife. Bell v. State, 88 Cr. R. 64, 224 S. W. 1108.

3. — Impeachment and contradiction.—In rape trial, accused's wife, testifying for him, could not be impeached by evidence that she and accused were married after birth of one or more of their children; it being immaterial. Woods v. State, 83 Cr. R. 332, 203 S. W. 54.

In prosecution for murder, accused's wife, having testified on direct examination that deceased came to her home some days prior to the killing, may be cross-examined as to whether she had not, shortly after killing, stated that she had never seen deceased before day of killing; such testimony bearing on her credibility as a witness. Houseton v. State, 83 Cr. R. 453, 204 S. W. 1007.

In a prosecution for rape of defendant's stepdaughter, where she denied intercourse and defendant used as a witness his wife, who had been twice carried before the grand jury, it was improper, upon cross-examination, to ask her questions not germane to the direct examination, in an attempted impeachment to obtain statements imputed to her to effect that prosecutrix had stated that defendant had intercourse with prosecutrix. Doherty v. State, 84 Cr. R. 552, 208 S. W. 932.

Wife of accused being a voluntary witness for him may, like any other witness, be impeached by prior contradictory statements. Bell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 475, 213 S. W. 647.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, it was error to impeach testimony of defendant's wife on trial by means of a witness who testified to her contradictory statements before the grand jury, as a wife cannot be used in any way as a witness against her husband. Doggett v. State, 86 Cr. R. 98, 215 S. W. 454.

The wife of accused cannot be cross-examined on new matter not relevant to matters brought out on direct examination, such as threats by accused for the purpose of impeachment. Briscoe v. State, 87 Cr. R. 375, 222 S. W. 249.

It was legitimate cross-examination of defendant's wife, who, as witness for him, testified that it was late at night before the day of the killing that she told defendant of deceased's assault on her, after her insisting that her testimony was correct, and qualifiedly denying that at the examining trial she stated that she told him early in the evening, to produce and ask her to read her statement at the examining trial. Gray v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 513.

In murder prosecution, where defendant's wife, testifying for defendant, had testified that deceased had insulted her, and that she had informed defendant thereof before the homicide, cross-examination as to whether the wife had not told her sister at a certain time and place that deceased had not insulted her, and that all they had against him was that he had taken defendant's pistol, held proper to impeach the wife. Bell v. State (Cr. App.) 224 S. W. 1108.

A wife, testifying for her husband, may be impeached, as any other witness, by inconsistent statements, on a predicate relating to her testimony in chief. Id.

Defendant's wife, testifying in his behalf as to deceased's intimacy with her, may be impeached the same as any other witness by proof that deceased visited her on occasions which she denied. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

In a prosecution for homicide, where defendant's wife, who maintained undue intimacy with deceased, on cross-examination denied that she had sent her child out of the house at the time decedent had intercourse with her, it was proper for the state on denial to prove the contrary. Id.

Art. 976, was intended to aid the officers of the law to ascertain the facts, and even if this article does not prevent an examination of the wife under the former article, it does prevent the use of the wife's statement at the trial of accused even for the purpose of impeaching the testimony of the wife given at the trial in behalf of accused. Turner v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 801.

4. Incompetency as witness for state.—Where defendant shot and killed his wife and a man at same time with separate shots, dying declarations of wife are inadmissible in prosecution for killing man, under this article. Robbins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 650, 200 S. W. 525.

In prosecution for murder, statements by accused's wife to a third person as to the killing were not admissible, being testimony by a wife against her husband. (Per Davidson, P. J.) Bibb v. State, 83 Cr. R. 616, 205 S. W. 135.

In view of this article, and art. 479, requiring a written oath by some credible person charging the defendant with an offense before the presentation of an information, the wife is not a credible witness, and is not competent to make complaint supporting an information against her husband for disturbing the peace of third parties. Stribling v. State, 86 Cr. R. 195, 215 S. W. 857.

6. — Existence and severance of marriage relation.—The divorced wife of one accused of an offense is competent against him in any character of case, and she may testify to any matters which are not confidential communications; and the mere fact that she was his wife when the matters sought to be elicited occurred does not prima facie make such matters privileged. Curd v. State, 86 Cr. R. 552, 217 S. W. 1043.

10. Evidence of acts and declarations of spouse.—A husband and wife may conspire together to commit an offense, so that the acts and declarations of one not on trial may be admissible against the other. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

Art. 797. [777] Defendant jointly indicted may testify, when.

See Renfro v. State, 82 Cr. R. 343, 199 S. W. 1096.

Art. 801. [781] Testimony of accomplice not sufficient to convict, unless, etc.

Cited in concurring opinion, Shipp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 328, 196 S. W. 840.

1. Who are accomplices.—In a prosecution for the murder of a newly-born child begotten by defendant with his own daughter, the daughter, in the absence of evidence to so show, is not an accomplice, so that her testimony must be corroborated. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 285.

Prisoner in jail, who picked up from ground near window a file thrown there by defendant, was an "accomplice" of defendant, charged with having conveyed file to prisoner to aid him and others to escape, though, seemingly, one incarcerated, who merely accepts means provided by one outside to effect his escape, is not within the accomplice rule. Lagow v. State, 85 Cr. R. 69, 210 S. W. 211.

Where an accomplice of defendant called complainant's attention to the fact that defendant was picking up a pocketbook, and it was agreed that the contents of the pocketbook be divided equally between the three, and defendant represented that the pocketbook contained a $500 bill and a $100 bill, and that it was necessary to have additional money to make change, so that the division might be effected, and complainant delivered $200 to defendant, defendant saying, "you will get your money back and the $200," the complainant was not an "accomplice" of defendant in a prosecution under Pen. Code, art. 1332, for having appropriated the $200 delivered by complainant, and a conviction could rest upon his testimony alone; the theft of the money, which was supposed by complainant to be in a stolen pocketbook, being but an imaginary offense. Gordon v. State, 85 Cr. R. 641, 214 S. W. 980.

One who remained outside the burglarized house and kept watch while defendant entered it was an accomplice whose testimony must be corroborated. Brown v. State, 86 Cr. R. 8, 215 S. W. 323.

One is an "accomplice" witness, within this article, who is connected with the crime, if he is connected with the offense either as principal, accomplice, or accessory by some unlawful act or omission on his part, transpiring either before, at the time of, or after commission of the offense. Scales v. State, 86 Cr. R. 433, 217 S. W. 149.

Where defendant's hog died from being overheated, and he butchered and attempted to sell it through another, possession, distribution, and sale of meat by such other without knowledge it had not been slaughtered did not constitute him an accomplice in offense. Cozine v. State, 87 Cr. R. 92, 220 S. W. 102.

In prosecution for having had in possession, offering to sell, and having sold meat of hog that had died otherwise than by slaughter and so was unfit for food, owner of shop where meat was kept and another person who undertook to sell in vicinity, witnesses against defendant, held his "accomplices" within this article. Id.

As a general rule, all guilty participants in misdemeanor are "principals," and all principals are "accomplices" within this article. Id.

In a prosecution for the theft of oil well casing, one whom the state's evidence showed to have gone with defendant and to have taken the casing would be an accomplice, if defendant was guilty. Davis v. State, 87 Cr. R. 425, 222 S. W. 236.

One is not an accomplice who cannot be prosecuted for the offense with which the accused is charged. Burgess v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 182.

An "accomplice," as used in connection with the testimony of a witness who requires corroboration, includes all persons connected with the crime by unlawful act or omission transpiring either before, at the time of, or after the commission of the offense, and whether such witness was present or participating in the crime or not. Robert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 230.

As applied to a witness for the state, the term "accomplice" includes all persons connected with offense by unlawful act or omission transpiring either before, at the time of, or after the commission of the offense, and whether such witness was present or participated in the crime or not. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1002.

For evidential purposes, within this article, any person connected with the crime by unlawful act or omission either before, at, or after the offense is an accomplice, the term including principals and accessories alike. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 107.

2. — Knowledge and concealment of crime.—To be an accomplice witness, the witness must be criminally connected with crime on trial, and mere concealment of a crime, or of knowledge that a crime is to be or has been committed, does not make one having such knowledge an accomplice. Herndon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 232, 198 S. W. 788.

On trial for incest with defendant's daughter, another daughter who knew of the crime and failed to disclose it was not an "accomplice." Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292.

4. — Detectives and informers.—The fact that witnesses in a liquor prosecution were military police, and that the transaction was pursuant to their efforts to capture bootleggers, did not render their evidence insufficient upon the ground that they were accomplices. Mansfield v. State, 84 Cr. R. 182, 206 S. W. 195.

On a trial for pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquors, a detective employed by the county attorney and another whose services were procured by the detective, both of whom testified that they purchased liquor from defendant, but neither of whom made any other effort to induce him to engage in business, were not "accomplices" under this article. Mann v. State, 87 Cr. R. 142, 221 S. W. 296.

A witness against defendant charged with the sale of intoxicants who was furnished marked money, with which he said he bought whisky from defendant after the sale had been forbidden by constitutional amendment, was not an accomplice. Berlew v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 518.

5. — Receiving stolen goods.—This article applies to testimony of one who stole goods on prosecution of one he got to haul them away. Garcia v. State, 81 Cr. R. 316, 195 S. W. 196.

A state's witness who received from defendants property which it was claimed they obtained by a burglary must be deemed an accomplice, where he testified that when he received the property he thought it had been stolen, and conviction cannot be sustained, unless his testimony is corroborated. Davidson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 433, 208 S. W. 664.

In a prosecution for nighttime burglary of a private residence, where it was contended that defendant stole therefrom a can of lard, a witness whose testimony showed that on the night of the burglary he learned of defendant's possession of the lard, and after hearing of the burglary he received and hid it, is an accomplice witness. Hornbuckle v. State, 86 Cr. R. 352, 216 S. W. 880.

If a witness in a prosecution for burglary received certain of the stolen goods from defendant believing that they were stolen or having reason so to believe, he was a receiver of stolen property, and an accomplice when used as a witness. Cummings v. State, 87 Cr. R. 154, 219 S. W. 1104.

One who connects himself with a criminal enterprise at any stage becomes an "accomplice," and one who receives stolen property is an "accomplice." Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 337.

6. — Participation in sexual crimes.—Under this article, a woman consenting to an abortion on herself is so far an accomplice that the alleged principal cannot be convicted on her uncorroborated testimony. Wandell v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 27.

A prosecutrix, an accomplice in incest, cannot corroborate herself as to the act of intercourse by her own testimony that defendant ran away when she went before the grand jury. Bradshaw v. State, 82 Cr. R. 351, 198 S. W. 942.

A stepdaughter 19 years of age, who consents to intercourse, is an accomplice in a prosecution for incest. Id.

In prosecution for adultery, woman was an accomplice, and corroboration was necessary to conviction. Hammett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 536, 204 S. W. 226.

In abortion case, prosecutrix is not accomplice. Hammett v. State, 84 Cr. R. 635, 209 S. W. 661, 4 A. L. R. 347.

A general statement of prosecutrix that accused had carnal knowledge of her without her consent or that she resisted, or that it was had through force, fear, or threats, must be considered with all other testimony and facts, in determining whether she is an accomplice witness, and, if shown that the act could not have occurred without her consent or she did not oppose it, she is an accomplice, unless consent was obtained by duress or fraud. Wingo v. State, 85 Cr. R. 118, 210 S. W. 547.

Prosecutrix in statutory rape case is not an accomplice, so conviction may be had on her uncorroborated testimony. Lucas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 439, 216 S. W. 396.

Testimony by prosecutrix that she was opposed to the first act of intercourse would not exempt her from the rule of accomplice testimony, but this rule would operate if from the whole evidence it appeared that the act could not have occurred without her consent, and the denial of a charge so stating was error. Lawrence v. State, 87 Cr. R. 61, 219 S. W. 460.

In a prosecution for bigamy, where there was evidence that defendant told the second woman he married that he was already married, the refusal of a charge on accom-police testimony was error for the woman was a principal. Burgess v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 182.

Where incestuous relations extending over a period of many years existed between defendant and prosecutrix, his stepdaughter, 19 years of age, she was an accomplice within the rule as to accomplice testimony. McClure v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 774.

7. — Disorderly houses and pandering.—Within rule as to corroboration, one living in house, by procurement of proprietress, for immoral purposes, is "accomplice" of proprietress charged with keeping disorderly house. O'Brien v. State, 83 Cr. R. 39, 201 S. W. 179.

8. — Perjury and false swearing.—A witness in a prosecution for perjury, who was a participant in the purchase of a car knowing it to be stolen and in the commission of the perjury, if any, committed by defendant, to cover up such transaction, is an accomplice. Godby v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 192.

9. — Corroboration of seduced female.—The omission to state in charge that corroboration of testimony of the injured female in a seduction prosecution "is not sufficient, if it merely shows the commission of the offense," such language being used in this article, relating to accomplice testimony, was not error, as art. 789, requiring corroboration of the seduced female's testimony controls. Slaughter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 527, 218 S. W. 767.

10. — Violations of liquor laws.—Testimony of prosecuting witness that he met accused, who had whisky, and asked accused to sell him some, and that accused did so, did not show that witness was accomplice so as to require that he be corroborated under Pen. Code, art. 602. Gray v. State, 82 Cr. R. 27, 197 S. W. 990.

Testimony of witnesses who procured the sale of intoxicating liquor to soldier contrary to Penal Code, art. 610a, for the purpose of procuring evidence is subject to the general rule governing testimony of accomplices, the special rule in local option cases prescribed by Penal Code, art. 602, being inapplicable. Huggins v. State, 85 Cr. R. 205, 210 S. W. 804.

By Pen. Code, art. 602, a stool pigeon, who, at the direction of an officer, purchased intoxicating liquor from defendant, who sold it in violation of the local option prohibition law, was not an accomplice of defendant, to require corroboration of his testimony. Canales v. State, 86 Cr. R. 142, 215 S. W. 964.

A conviction for the unlawful selling of intoxicating liquors cannot be had under the Dean Law, in view of section 31 thereof, making purchase unlawful, and section 40, which seeks to compel offenders to testify, and of Pen. Code 1911, arts. 74-88, defining principals, accomplices, and accessories, where the witness purchasing the liquor was not corroborated as required by this article. Franklin v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 486.

The term "accomplice," as applied to witnesses, means one who either as principal, accomplice, or accessory is connected with the crime by unlawful act or omission before, at, or after the offense, and the Dean Law, enacted to enforce Const. art. 16, § 20, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, does not exempt the purchaser of intoxicating liquors from such witness rule, as did Pen. Code, art. 602. Id.

The rule prescribed by this article, that accomplice's testimony must be corroborated, applies, in a prosecution for the sale of intoxicating liquors, to witnesses purchasing; Penal Code, art. 588 $\frac{1}{2}$ , making the purchase unlawful, so that, even if the purchaser was not a principal offender with the seller, he is an offender, and his testimony would require corroboration, the identity of the offense not being essential. Franklin v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 487.

In a prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors under the Dean Law, witnesses purchasing the liquor from defendants were particeps criminis and accomplices, and a conviction cannot be had on the testimony of one of them without corroboration. Franklin v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 488.

In a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors in violation of the Dean Law, testimony of persons who participated in the purchase of the liquor is not alone sufficient to warrant a conviction, since this article is peremptory that a conviction cannot be had upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. Westbrook v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1104.

Under the Dean Prohibition Law, purchasers of liquor are "accomplices" of the person selling it, and their testimony must be corroborated to warrant a conviction. Robert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 230.

A sale of intoxicating liquor is the transfer of title of property from one person to another, and under the Dean Law the purchaser is connected with the sale and is an accomplice. Id.

Under the Dean Law, the purchaser of liquor illegally sold is guilty of a violation of the law, and is an "accomplice," and a conviction for unlawful possession on his testimony cannot be sustained, unless it is corroborated as required by law. Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 157, 158, 159.

On a trial for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, the purchaser of the liquor and one who furnished the money, participated in hiring an automobile to go for the liquor, and went with the purchaser to a point near defendant's residence, and jointly with the purchaser took charge of and used the whisky, were "accomplices" as a matter of law. Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 160.

In a prosecution for the unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors where witness testified that he drove for defendant an automobile in which the latter placed the liquor, if the witness knew that defendant was transporting whisky in violation of law, he was an accomplice whose testimony must be corroborated. Franklin v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 692.

In a prosecution for the unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors, where witness testified that he drove for defendant an automobile in which the latter placed the liquor, if the witness knew that defendant was transporting whisky in violation of law, he was an accomplice whose testimony must be corroborated, and whether he did so know was a question which should have been submitted to the jury, in view of Penal Code, arts. 588 $\frac{1}{4}$ a, 588 $\frac{1}{4}$ o, 588 $\frac{1}{4}$ qq. Id.

If another transported defendant down to the house of a third person knowing defendant was engaged in the illicit traffic in liquor, he was an accomplice of defendant in the offense of possessing intoxicating liquor not for medicinal, mechanical, etc., purposes, and, if the third person purchased the liquor from defendant, he was also an accomplice. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 999.

In a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquor to another in violation of the Dean Law, such other, the purchaser, is an accomplice of defendant. Id.

In a prosecution for the unlawful possession of equipment for the manufacture of intoxicating liquors not for medicinal, etc., purposes, a witness who helped defendant and another to make some whisky on the premises of such other was an "accomplice" requiring corroboration. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1003.

One who purchases liquor is an "accomplice," and so, in a prosecution based on his testimony, the refusal of a charge on accomplice testimony necessitates reversal. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 105.

In a prosecution for possession of intoxicating liquor not for medicinal, mechanical, scientific, or sacramental purposes, a purchaser of liquor will, under the Dean Law, be deemed an "accomplice," and a conviction cannot be had on his uncorroborated testimony, for the term "accomplice," as used in this article, is used in a different sense from the term as used in Pen. Code 1911. art. 79, and includes any person connected with the crime by unlawful act or omission transpiring either before, at, or after the commission of the offense, and under such definition purchaser is an accomplice. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 107.

One who receives or conceals property theretofore stolen by another, knowing it to have been so acquired, is an accomplice, within this article, though the offense was complete before the guilty connection of the receiver began. Id.

In a prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, the alleged purchaser was an accomplice whose testimony is insufficient to sustain the conviction in the absence of any corroborating facts. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 108.

A purchaser of intoxicating liquors is an accomplice with the seller, even though the prosecution against the seller is for unlawful possession. Id.

A purchaser of intoxicating liquor is an accomplice and a conviction against defendant who delivered the liquor cannot be based solely on his testimony, even though the sale was made by defendant's son, defendant delivering the liquor. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 109.

When a witness testifies in a prosecution for the sale of liquor or possession only of that liquor bought by such witness he is an accomplice, and the law of accomplice testimony is applicable. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 337.

One who connects himself with a criminal enterprise at any stage becomes an "accomplice," and one who receives stolen property is an "accomplice"; but a witness who purchased liquor from defendant other than that of which defendant is charged to have had unlawful possession was not an accomplice, and does not come within any of the rules of accomplice testimony. Id.

In a prosecution for the unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor, a state's witness who went to the home of a third person, saw defendant and another, and discussed the purchase of a quart of whisky, etc., was an accomplice witness as a matter of law, and under this article, his uncorroborated testimony would not support conviction. Id.

In a prosecution for the unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors, a state's witness who accompanied another such witness to the home of a third person, and saw the other witness talk to such person, but heard no part of the conversation, and testified that on their return to the home of the third person he saw another and defendant, defendant having a bucket in his hand, etc., was not an accomplice as a matter of law, he merely having taken a drink which was in possession of another, and the jury could find he was not an accomplice witness. Id.

Where a witness who testified against accused, charged with the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, admitted he drank some of the whisky purchased from accused, but disclaimed any connection with the purchase, it was not error to refuse to charge that the witness was an accomplice as a matter of law. Venn v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 822.

11. — Persons jointly indicted.—Where parties are jointly indicted and one of them turns state's evidence or testifies for the state, the court should submit a charge to the jury presenting the question of accomplice testimony and the necessary corroboration, although the witness so jointly indicted denies participation in the crime. Gusters v. State, 87 Cr. R. 181, 220 S. W. 92.

A witness for the state who admittedly was under indictment for the same offense as that with which defendant was charged was an accomplice in law, so that an instruction should have been given on the necessity of corroboration of an accomplice's testimony, though the defendant claimed to have innocently purchased the stolen cattle from the witness and the witness denied any connection therewith. Stiles v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 805.

12. — Evidence as to complicity.—In prosecution for perjury in testimony at trial of one for arson, evidence held not to show that a witness against defendant was in any sense an accomplice to perjury, or to arson of which defendant previously had been convicted, so as to make his testimony incredible without corroboration. Herndon v. State, 82 Cr. R. 232, 198 S. W. 788.

A general statement of prosecutrix that accused had carnal knowledge of her without her consent or that she resisted, or that it was had through force, fear, or threats, must be considered with all other testimony and facts, in determining whether she is an accomplice witness. *Wingo v. 13. — Questions for jury.—In prosecution for cattle theft, trial court properly submitted to jury question whether some, any, or all of certain witnesses were accomplices. Standfield v. State, 84 Cr. R. 437, 208 S. W. 532.

Where prosecutrix testified that she engaged in an incestuous relation with defendant through fear he would harm her, and gave evidence that he took advantage of his relationship to influence her to submit, which she did and kept silent, it was a question for the jury whether she was an accomplice witness, requiring corroboration as to commission of offense and defendant's connection therewith, under this article. Wingo v. State, 85 Cr. R. 118, 210 S. W. 547.

In view of the facts in a robbery prosecution, held that it was proper for the court to submit to the jury the question of whether a witness was an accomplice, it being the common practice to instruct that a witness is an accomplice if such fact plainly appears, but permissible to submit the question to the jury where the issue thereon is contested. Fitzgerald v. State, 87 Cr. R. 34, 219 S. W. 199.

State*, 87 Cr. R. 92, 220 S. W. 102.

Where the facts with respect to the participation of a witness in a crime are clear and undisputed, it is for the court to determine whether or not he is an accomplice; but that question is to be decided by the jury where the facts tending to connect the witness with the crime are disputed or susceptible of different inferences. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 523.

Whether a witness who participated in the crime was only a feigned accomplice, as claimed by the state, is a question for the court, where the facts are clear and undisputed and not susceptible of any inferences other than that of innocent intent. Id.

Innocent connection with the offense involved, while it will not render the witness an accomplice requiring corroboration, will often raise the issue of fact as to the character of his participation, and, where the issue is doubtful, its solution is for the jury under proper instruction. Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1002.

In a prosecution for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, whether the relation to the case of a witness who was the companion of the purchaser of whisky from defendant was such as required his corroboration as an accomplice, held a question of fact for the jury in view of the evidence. Id.

To justify conviction, jury must not only believe accomplice testimony to be true, and that it is corroborated, but such testimony, with other testimony, must make out case beyond reasonable doubt. Standfield v. State, 84 Cr. R. 437, 208 S. W. 532.

Under this article, jury were not authorized to convict defendant, charged with having conveyed file to prisoner in jail to aid him to escape, on testimony of such prisoner, an accomplice, unless they believed prisoner's testimony was true, that it showed, with other evidence, defendant's guilt, and was corroborated by other testimony tending to connect defendant with offense. Lagow v. State, 85 Cr. R. 69, 210 S. W. 211.

Contempt of court by the attempted bribery of jurors is punishable only by a fine and jail sentence, and would therefore be a misdemeanor, and no conviction can be had therefor on the testimony of an accomplice unless he is corroborated by independent evidence connecting accused with the offense. Ex parte Kahn (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 797.

15. Scope and extent of corroboration required.—Evidence sufficient to corroborate an accomplice need not be sufficient of itself to show guilt, but need only be material, and tend directly and immediately to connect accused with the offense. Huggins v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1102.

To obtain a conviction for unlawfully manufacturing intoxicating liquor on the evidence of an accomplice, it is not necessary that the corroborative testimony be sufficient of itself to convict, but the accomplice is sufficiently corroborated if the testimony "tends" to connect defendant with the commission of the offense; the word "tend" meaning "to have a leaning." Chandler v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 318.

State* (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1099.

Under this article, where a witness who admittedly participated in the offense claimed to have been only a feigned accomplice, but there was no evidence of that fact except his own testimony, though other evidence would have been available if it was true, it was error to refuse requested instructions submitting to the jury the question whether that witness was an accomplice whose testimony needed corroboration. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 523.

In a prosecution for murder, a charge that a witness, who came to the scene of the shooting two hours after it took place, and assisted in carrying deceased to his home, was an accomplice, was correctly refused, the fact that the justice of the peace filed complaints against all the parties who had anything to do with the transaction, including such witness, not necessitating such a charge as to him; there being no evidence to connect him with the shooting. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 312.

22. Sufficiency of instructions as to corroboration.—A charge that prosecutrix in a seduction case was an accomplice, that the jury must not only believe her testimony was true, but that it showed defendant's guilt, and that her testimony must be corroborated by evidence other than her own, both as to sexual intercourse and promise of marriage, held correct, and not subject to objection that it authorized conviction if jury believed prosecutrix. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

Charge on accomplice testimony, to be sufficient, should (1) define accomplice; (2) give statutory inhibition against conviction on uncorroborated accomplice testimony; (3) state that corroborated evidence must be as to some material matter, etc.; and (4) apply law to facts. Standfield v. State, 84 Cr. R. 437, 208 S. W. 532.

An instruction, in a prosecution for incest, held unduly restrictive in predicating the jury's right to find prosecutrix an accomplice witness upon belief that she "did voluntarily, and with the same intent which actuated defendant, unite with him in the alleged commission of the offense." Wingo v. State, 85 Cr. R. 118, 210 S. W. 547.

Charge authorizing conviction on accomplice testimony if it was believed and was corroborated by testimony tending to connect defendant with the offense is defective; it should also state that it was necessary that accomplice testimony, in connection with the other evidence, should show defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Lockhead v. State, 85 Cr. R. 469, 213 S. W. 653.

23. — Authorizing conviction on accomplice testimony tending to show guilt.—Instruction on accomplice's testimony that there must be other evidence than that of the accomplice "tending to connect" the accused with the offense charged held proper:

the words "tending to connect" having reference to the corroborated testimony and not to the accomplice's testimony. Middleton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 307, 217 S. W. 1046.

3. EVIDENCE AS TO PARTICULAR OFFENSES

Art. 806. [786] Perjury and false swearing; two witnesses, etc., required.

Sufficiency of evidence in general.—Under this article, held, on an indictment for perjury, that a witness whose general reputation for truth and veracity is bad, and whose testimony is directly contradicted by defendant and an unimpeached and disinterested witness, is not a "credible" witness, and his testimony, only slightly corroborated, is insufficient to support a conviction. Kitcken v. State, 29 Tex. App. 45, 14 S. W. 392.

Under this article, a person cannot be convicted of perjury on the uncorroborated testimony of one witness as to the falsity of the statement charged. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 974.

In prosecution for attempt to induce another to commit perjury by filing, in support of motion for new trial, affidavit falsifying testimony, falsity must be proved by two credible witnesses, or one credible witness, supported by statutory corroboration. Shipp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 328, 196 S. W. 840.

Falsity of accused's testimony before grand jury held established by two credible witnesses or one credible witness strongly corroborated, as required by this article. Timmins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 263, 199 S. W. 1106.

In perjury prosecution, where there was no proof of immunity agreement with a state's witness, but merely evidence from which such understanding could be inferred, such person was a competent witness within this article. Id.

Under this article, conviction of perjury cannot be sustained upon testimony of two accomplices, or upon the testimony of one credible witness and one accomplice. Melton v. State, 84 Cr. R. 398, 207 S. W. 316.

An accomplice in perjury who under oath admitted giving directly contrary evidence in a civil trial, and whose reputation for truth and veracity was shown to be bad, and who had been convicted of a felony, is not a "credible witness" within this article. Godby v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 192.

Evidence held not to show that the statement assigned as the basis for the perjury charged was sworn to by two credible witnesses or by one such, strongly corroborated by other witness as to such falsity, as required by this article. Id.

Instructions.—The provision of article 806, that no person shall be convicted of perjury, except on testimony of two credible witnesses, or of one strongly corroborated, must be stated in the instructions, on a trial for perjury. Wilson v. State, 27 Tex. App. 47, 10 S. W. 749, 11 Am. St. Rep. 180.

4. OF DYING DECLARATIONS AND OF CONFESSIONS OF THE DEFENDANT

Art. 808. [788] Dying declarations, evidence, when.

In general.—In prosecution of bank president for having murdered state commissioner of banking, statements by commissioner immediately after he was shot, also later, made to physicians called to attend him, held admissible as dying declarations. Watson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 115, 205 S. W. 662.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, dying declaration made by deceased held admissible in evidence. Mason v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 952.

Consciousness of impending death.—Deceased's dying declarations are inadmissible in absence of predicate laid by proof of decedent's consciousness of impending death. Wallace v. State, 82 Cr. R. 538, 200 S. W. 407.

To render a dying declaration admissible in prosecution for murder, decedent must have believed when he made the statement that he was going to die by reason of the wound inflicted and that he could not recover. Walker v. State, 84 Cr. R. 136, 206 S. W. 96.

In prosecution for murder, shooting having occurred in latter part of September, and death December 24th, decedent's dying declaration, purporting to have been made on November 6th, decedent having subsequently to declaration expressed belief he would get well, was inadmissible, there being no evidence decedent believed he was going to die immediately when he made statement. Id.

Statements of deceased shortly before death are admissible as dying declarations, where it clearly appears that he was aware of his physical condition, and did not believe that he could live. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

Where evidence showed deceased was told by his medical attendant that he must die, and he sent for a minister who administered the dying sacrament, and talked with his brother about his business, and expressed commiseration for his wife and children, a sufficient foundation was laid for admitting in evidence his dying declaration. Albrecht v. State, 85 Cr. R. 519, 215 S. W. 327.

Where deceased, cut in an affray by defendant, believed death to be near, and had no hope of recovery, and voluntarily made a dying statement, as appeared from the statement itself, such statement or dying declaration was admissible. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

Testimony that physician told deceased that his wound was a "serious one" and "he thought fatal" was not a sufficient predicate upon which to permit the introduction of a statement then made by deceased as a dying declaration. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

In homicide prosecution, evidence that physician told deceased that she could not live but two or three days, and that deceased about the same time told witness, to whom she made claimed dying declaration, that she did not expect to recover or get well, held a sufficient predicate for admission of the dying declarations. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 521.

The length of time elapsing between making of decedent's claimed dying declaration and the date of his death did not conclude the matter as to whether the declaration was admissible under this article, nor render it inadmissible. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

Signature.—Getting deceased's statements and then reducing them to what the county attorney called "the substance," which the deceased signed by mark after hearing it read, was hardly a compliance with the law as to dying declarations. Walker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 482, 214 S. W. 331.

Answers to interrogatories.—Questions to elicit a dying declaration are not prohibited by this article, and do not destroy the declaration unless their character is such as to lead the dying man to make a particular statement. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

Relevancy and competency of declaration.—Where defendant killed his wife and man at same time, dying declarations of wife are inadmissible in prosecution for killing man, under this article. Robbins v. State, 82 Cr. R. 650, 200 S. W. 525.

A dying declaration that defendant had put poison in whisky, which he gave to deceased, because it was so bitter, was not inadmissible as an opinion. Fults v. State, 83 Cr. R. 602, 204 S. W. 108.

Hearsay statements in dying declaration, such as statement that deceased and another heard defendant cock his gun, should have been excluded. Walker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 482, 214 S. W. 331.

A statement of deceased that he was glad that the officers got the right man, made when an officer said that he had "arrested the right man," was not admissible as a dying declaration. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

When the death of the declarant and the circumstances immediately connected therewith are the subjects mentioned, dying declarations are admissible. Woods v. State, 87 Cr. R. 354, 221 S. W. 276.

In a prosecution for murder, court did not err in permitting the state to introduce in evidence the dying declaration of deceased that he came to the place where accused was immediately preceding the shooting for the purpose of apologizing, over the objection of accused that it tended to prove an undisclosed purpose, where several witnesses and accused himself testified that deceased came into his shop just prior to the shooting, and stated that accused had judged him wrong, that he did not mean to insult the girl, and had come to settle the thing and get it squared; accused not shooting deceased upon any theory of apparent danger. Id.

In prosecution for wife murder, the admission, as dying declarations, of statements by deceased as to defendant's whipping and beating her on other occasions held error, since dying declaration should be confined to the immediate facts of the homicide. Hill v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 521.

The scope of a dying declaration is limited to actual facts pointing directly to the cause of death and the circumstances producing and attending it. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

Dying declarations, as introduced in evidence in prosecution for murder, held admissible, portions thereof as to what decedent and a woman were doing at the time, and what defendant said when he discovered them, tending to develop the res gestae of the offense and being inextricably mingled with the rest of the statement. Id.

Predicate for admission of declaration and method of proof.—In homicide prosecution, evidence that deceased prior to his death, knowing that he could not live, told witness "about the condition of his wife. He told me a few things. He wanted me to look after his family"—was admissible as tending to show deceased's mental condition at time of making statement and to rebut defendant's contention that he did not know what he was talking about at such time. Mason v. State, 85 Cr. R. 254, 211 S. W. 593.

The predicate for dying declaration as shown by testimony of witnesses held hardly in compliance with the law. Walker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 482, 214 S. W. 331.

Where there is doubt as to whether victim at time of making dying declaration believed he was in danger of death in such manner as required by statute, the question should be submitted to the jury. Id.

Wherever there is a doubt as to a dying declaration that involves a doubt as to the law and fact, the jury should be left untrammelled to decide whether a proper predicate had been laid, and instructed that if they do not so find they should not consider it. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

Evidence tending to establish the predicate required by this article, held sufficient to justify admission of the dying declaration. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

In a prosecution for homicide, testimony of a witness as to decedent's dying declaration that deceased got worse before making the declaration and told witness he knew he was going to die was admissible as embodying decedent's opinion on the matter of his approaching dissolution. Id.

When the evidence is conflicting, but sufficient, if believed, to establish the predicate required by this article, for a dying declaration, the practice of submitting the issue to the jury is pursued. Id.

Impeachment and contradiction.—In a homicide case where a witness for the state testified that five minutes after the shooting deceased told him that a person other than accused had shot him, the court erred in refusing to submit to the jury the question as to whether or not such third person and not accused killed deceased. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

Art. 809. [789] Confession of defendant.

Cited, Oliver v. State, 81 Cr. R. 529, 197 S. W. 185.

Art. 810. [790] When confession shall not be used.

1. Nature and sufficiency of confession as admission of guilt.—Evidence that, after his arrest, the defendant refused to divulge his name, was erroneously admitted, in view of the absence of proof bringing such evidence within the exceptions of this article. Carter v. State, 23 Tex. App. 508, 5 S. W. 128.

In prosecution for perjury at hearing on writ of habeas corpus for bail in homicide case, evidence that defendant, arrested for the killing, denied any knowledge of it, and his presence at time and place, held inadmissible as incriminating fact made without warning and without writing, though he testified in habeas corpus proceedings that he was present. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen goods, testimony that defendant, while under arrest, took the officers to a place where he represented they might recover the rest of the goods, part having been recovered already, though he stated that he did not know where they were, held inadmissible, as in the nature of a confession, in the face of the fact defendant had stated he did not know where the property was. Kyle v. State, 86 Cr. R. 471, 217 S. W. 943.

In a prosecution for burglary, property recently stolen and found in defendant's possession is admissible against him regardless of whether he was or was not under arrest when the same was found. Rippey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

Admission of a criminating fact, as that grips containing recently stolen goods are accused's property, is a "confession" within this article. Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

In a murder prosecution, testimony by the sheriff that after he arrested defendant and without warning him received from him a pair of shoes, which he subsequently used in comparison with tracks found about the scene of the homicide, did not constitute an infringement of the statutory rule against receipt of a confession from one who is under arrest and unwarned. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

In a prosecution for theft from a railroad car, a statement by defendant to arresting officer immediately after arrest, where nothing was said about pointing out the car, held inadmissible, as against contention that it was a part of a later conversation at the jail in which he agreed to point out the car. Monroe v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 995.

In a prosecution for robbery, testimony of an arresting officer that defendant offered to pay him to release him was inadmissible, under this article, the offer, if not a confession of guilt, laying the foundation for argument equally harmful, and being offered as an inculpatory fact. Stanchel v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 120.

In prosecution for forgery, defendant's written statement that he signed another's name to the check without authority from such other person, and without even knowing him, held admissible as a confession, as against contention that it did not connect defendant with the crime. Mettall v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 315.

2. Confession distinguished from exculpatory statements.—In a prosecution for embezzlement where the state introduced evidence of a declaration by defendant as to a deposit in his own name with the statement that the money resulted from a speculation, the latter statement was exculpatory, and it was error to refuse a requested charge that it was the state's duty to rebut such exculpatory statement and that it could not be considered against accused. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 382.

3. Admissibility of confession in general.—Where accused in attempting to avoid arrest for burglary shot the deputy sheriff, his confession to the burglary after arrest on both charges was admissible in the prosecution for murder, if material. Burkhardt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 228, 202 S. W. 513.

In prosecution for murder of deputy sheriff who attempted to prevent escape of accused after arrest for burglary, accused's subsequent confession to the crime of burglary was admissible on the question of motive. Id.

In a prosecution for receiving or concealing stolen goods, where the course of conduct detailed in defendant's confession might have had weight as bearing on his guilty knowledge or intent, the confession was admissible. Czernicki v. State, 85 Cr. R. 169, 211 S. W. 223.

In view of this article, in prosecution for rape on female under age of consent, confession showing only assault to rape, if any, held admissible to establish charge of rape. Anderson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 230, 220 S. W. 775.

The purpose of this article was to prohibit the proof of verbal confessions made while under arrest, which did not come within some of the exceptions named in the statute. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 177.

Where defendant was indicted for assault to rob and for murder, a confession tending to support the latter, when the state had elected the former, held admissible. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 320.

In a prosecution for theft from a railroad car, a statement by defendant to arresting officer immediately after arrest where nothing was said about pointing out the car, held inadmissible as against contention that it was a part of a later conversation at the jail in which he agreed to point out the car, and harmful under the circumstances, his explanation being that he was taking the goods to the proper railroad officer. Monroe v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 995.

5. Confession by party not in confinement or in custody.—Where one was examined as a witness in proceedings before a magistrate or on a coroner's inquest, and was then aware that he was charged or suspected of the crime under investigation, his testimony there cannot be received against him upon his trial for the same offense, unless he was warned. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 443, 199 S. W. 636.

Accused's testimony on such investigation, introduced to fix culpability upon some one, especially upon accused, and which placed her at the scene of the homicide in a position where she could have used the gun, and excluded the presence of everybody except herself and deceased was not admissible on the ground that it was merely exculpatory. Id.

In a trial for homicide, error in admitting the statements of defendant on a preliminary investigation in which she was charged or suspected of the crime was not waived by the fact that she took the stand to explain the testimony or lessen its consequences. Id.

An alleged oral statement, made by defendant when he was in the presence of two officers, who later took him into custody, that he was guilty, not having been reduced to writing, and signed in the presence of two disinterested witnesses, held not admissible as a confession, no warning having been given. Bonatz v. State, 85 Cr. R. 292, 212 S. W. 494.

As it is not necessary to make an arrest in formal words, and the fact of arrest can be shown by surrounding facts and circumstances, a defendant, who objected to the admission of a purported confession made at a time he was in the presence of two officers who would not have allowed him to escape, must be deemed under arrest. Id.

Though constable suspected that defendant had stolen or received stolen chickens when he went to defendant's restaurant and there found some chickens that had been killed and dressed, and would not have permitted defendant to escape, where defendant did not know of constable's state of mind, statements made by defendant in explanation of his possession were not statements within rule prohibiting use of confessions made by one under arrest, in absence of compliance with statute. Phillips v. State, 86 Cr. R. 624, 219 S. W. 454.

Where defendant called at the sheriff's office in response to a telephone message, and there made an alleged confession in response to an assertion by officer that his confederates had confessed, held that, though defendant was not formally placed under arrest until after his statement, he must be deemed to have been arrested at the time, so that the confession which was not reduced to writing in accordance with the statute was inadmissible. Casanova v. State, 87 Cr. R. 63, 219 S. W. 478.

In a prosecution for robbery, defendant's statement made to a justice of the peace when he was not strictly under arrest, but was suspected of crime and was being questioned with reference to it, and was not warned, was inadmissible. Buddy v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 323.

6. Confession while in confinement or in custody.—Under this article, defendant's statement of his connection with crime made before grand jury, where after arrest he was brought by jailer, is inadmissible. Oliver v. State, 81 Cr. R. 529, 197 S. W. 135.

Any inculpatory fact or circumstance involved in a statement by defendant while in jail or under arrest and when he has not been cautioned cannot be used as evidence against him in view of this article. Dover v. State, 81 Cr. R. 545, 197 S. W. 192.

A conversation between defendant and officers having him under arrest, detailing his conduct complained of, he not being warned, was inadmissible. Dodd v. State, 82 Cr. R. 139, 198 S. W. 733.

To exclude defendant's confession or incriminating statement, detention, legal or illegal, is sufficient, and it is not necessary that complaint or indictment be filed as basis of arrest. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

Statements of defendant to arresting officer are properly admitted over defendant's mere objection that they were made after his arrest; the officer testifying they were made before he had stated he intended to arrest. Hollis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 612, 204 S. W. 432.

Verbal statements concerning stolen property, made to arresting officer by defendant while he understood that he was under arrest, but before he was taken to jail, held to have been made by defendant while "under arrest," within this article. Clark v. State, 84 Cr. R. 390, 207 S. W. 98.

Under this article, it is unnecessary that arrest be made in formal words if it clearly appears from the surrounding facts. Id.

The uncontradicted evidence showing that when accused made his confession he was in fact under detention by officers, and nothing more being shown, he was in the "custody of an officer" within this article. Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

The court erred in permitting the sheriff to testify that he obtained a pistol from the home of accused's father and exhibited it to accused, and that he admitted that it was the pistol used in the robbery, the accused then being under arrest, unwarned, declaration not being reduced to writing, and pistol not being found by reason of the declaration. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 416, 222 S. W. 553.

Testimony of statements by defendant to police officers, amounting to a confession, made while he was under arrest without being warned and without being reduced to writing, held inadmissible. Parham v. State, 87 Cr. R. 454, 222 S. W. 561.

Statements made by accused while under arrest, some of which were made to the party having him under arrest and some of which were made to the grand jury, are all incompetent where the record shows that accused was not warned and that his statements were not reduced to writing and signed by him as required by this article. Mayzone v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 55.

Admission of testimony as to statements made by accused while in custody, not reduced to writing and made without accused being warned, held error, under this article. Deckerd v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 166.

The rule that, unless the confession made by defendant while being confined or in the custody of an officer came within the exceptions named in White's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. art. 790, which differed from the present statute only in not requiring a written, signed statement, it was inadmissible, applied to statements before the grand jury, but not to the reproduction of testimony given by defendant upon the trial of his case in open court. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 177.

In a prosecution for transporting and possessing intoxicating liquor in violation of the Dean Law, testimony of the officer who found defendant and wife in bed in his hotel, and two grips or suit cases filled with pint bottles of whisky in the room, as to the statement made to him by defendant concerning the grips and liquor, held inadmissible.

ble on the ground that defendant was under arrest or legal restraint and was not warned. Campbell v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 695.

7. — Caution.—An alleged oral statement, made by defendant when he was in the presence of two officers who later took him into custody, that he was guilty held not admissible as a confession, no warning having been given. Bonatz v. State, 85 Cr. R. 292, 212 S. W. 494.

In a prosecution for an assault with intent to murder, evidence that, after the difficulty, witness said to defendant, "You have liked to have got him," and that defendant replied, "I done the best I could," occurring when defendant was under arrest and was not warned, should have been excluded under the statute expressly forbidding introduction of admissions or confessions of one accused of crime made under such circumstances. Brown v. State, 85 Cr. R. 493, 213 S. W. 658.

Though defendant was not in fact in custody, still, where the circumstances surrounding him when and after he was directed by the constable to go before the county attorney were such as to indicate to him that he was in custody, written statements made by him before the county attorney about alleged stolen chickens in his possession were not admissible against him; it affirmatively appearing that no warning was given. Phillips v. State, 86 Cr. R. 624, 219 S. W. 454.

Sheriff's testimony as to defendant's declarations, made while under arrest and unwarned, held inadmissible. Chadwick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 842.

Any testimony as to what had been said and done by defendant while in jail without having been warned held error under this article. Brent v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 845.

8. — Voluntary statements before examining court.—Where defendant and another Texas ranger attempted to enter premises and in the course of the proceedings one of the occupants was shot, testimony by defendant and the other ranger on examination before a justice of the peace is inadmissible, where the parties were not warned; this being so regardless of whether they were under arrest or not. Bloxom v. State, 86 Cr. R. 562, 218 S. W. 1068.

9. — Voluntary character of confession in general.—A confession, to be admissible, must have been freely and voluntarily made, without compulsion or persuasion, or promise of immunity, or other improper influence. Johnson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 82, 197 S. W. 995.

In prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors in violation of law, testimony that defendant had told witness, a grand jurymen, that he had sold beer to prosecuting witness, and that he would plead guilty if witness would aid him in getting suspended sentence, held not inadmissible as involuntary confession. Goss v. State, 83 Cr. R. 349, 202 S. W. 956.

Incriminating statements of accused voluntarily appearing before grand jury and making the statements after having been duly warned in terms of law are admissible against him. Webb v. State, 86 Cr. R. 337, 216 S. W. 865.

Where the evidence shows without conflict that a confession was induced by coercion on the part of the officers in charge of the prisoner, the court should exclude it. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 177.

Where defendant, while under arrest, voluntarily made footprints for purpose of comparison with those at place of crime, evidence thereof was not incompetent because no warning was given. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 415.

10. — Threats, fear, promises or other inducements.—Confession, forced or extorted in any manner, whether by overpersuasion or promise or threats, is not voluntary. Robertson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 378, 195 S. W. 602, 6 A. L. R. 853.

In homicide prosecution where defendant testified he was induced to sign confession by sheriff's promise of release and immunity from prosecution, court upon defendant's request should have instructed jury to disregard confession if it was found to have been responsive to promises and threats, and inducements offered by sheriff. Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

In determining whether subsequent confessions are admissible, where former confessions were improperly obtained, the inquiry is whether, considering the degree of intelligence of the prisoner and the attendant circumstances, it is affirmatively shown that the effect of the primary improper inducement was so entirely obliterated from his mind that the subsequent confession could not have been in the slightest degree influenced by it, and if there is any doubt the confession must be excluded. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 177.

Where a written confession was made under domination of the same officer who had previously assaulted the prisoner in obtaining an oral confession, the presumption should obtain that the same influences which coerced the admission of guilt in the first place impelled the subsequent reaffirmance of the guilt, although at the time of the written confession there were no threats or violence used. Id.

Where a negro defendant, after being severely whipped and otherwise assaulted by the sheriff, made an oral confession, his subsequent written confession, made under domination of the same officer, held properly excluded, although at the time he signed the written confession there were no threats or violence used. Id.

11. — Written confession.—Officers are inhibited from becoming subscribing witnesses to confessions only when accused signs it by making his mark. Sharp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 256, 197 S. W. 207.

A confession wherein the statutory formalities have been complied with is not to be excluded because made in the presence of the grand jury, although where one is under arrest and makes a confession, not conforming to the statutory provisions, the fact that it is made in the presence of the grand jury does not render it admissible. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 177.

Defendant's confession, made before the grand jury while he was under arrest, coming within no exception named in the statute, and not reduced to writing, nor signed by defendant, was inadmissible. Id.

In a prosecution for keeping a gaming house, where it appeared that defendant had testified previously as to such house before the grand jury, his testimony not having been reduced to writing, as required by this article, held not admissible as a confession. Dodson v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 836.

12. — Truth of statement of inculpatory facts or circumstances.—Under this article, an oral statement so made by one accused of robbery, which led to the finding of the pistol claimed to have been used, was admissible. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 110; Patterson v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 763.

Under this article, the statement, made by one while in jail on the charge of burglary, that a certain article with which the building was broken into, and a certain article taken therefrom, would be found in a certain place under a building, is, in connection with evidence that they were so found, admissible against him. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 23 S. W. 687.

Where the fruits of a crime may alone have been discovered by reason of a confession, the confession is admissible whether or not in writing or signed. Elliott v. State, 83 Cr. R. 366, 203 S. W. 766.

Defendant's confession to having received stolen goods, which resulted in the finding and recovery of the property, made while under arrest, did not have to be made under warning, and reduced to writing, to be admissible in evidence against him. Kyle v. State, 86 Cr. R. 471, 217 S. W. 943.

Statements and admissions made by defendant which led to the finding of the alleged stolen property are admissible, though made under arrest and without warning. Hughes v. State, 86 Cr. R. 611, 218 S. W. 1048.

Statements of defendant while under arrest which are found to be true and which aid in establishing his guilt are admissible against him, and while under arrest defendant may be compelled to place his feet in certain tracks, or his shoe may be removed from his foot and placed in certain tracks, for identification. Rippey v. State, 86 Cr. R. 539, 219 S. W. 463.

Rule that a confession is competent when in or in connection with it statements are made which are found to be true and conduce to establish accused's guilt, such as finding stolen property, is inapplicable where officers found grips and opened them and observed their contents and intended to further examine them, and did so after, but not because of his statement that the grips were his, and there was no other evidence that they belonged to him. Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

In a prosecution for burglary where the whereabouts of the property taken was unknown until defendant made his confession, and was recovered as a result of such confession, the confession was admissible under this article, though the confession was procured by threats or persuasion after arrest and though defendant had not been warned. Singleton v. State, 87 Cr. R. 302, 221 S. W. 610.

A declaration of one accused of robbery leading to the discovery of money or property taken is admissible, although made while under arrest, without warning, and although induced by promise and not reduced to writing, but it is incumbent upon the state to prove identity of the money found and that taken. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 416, 222 S. W. 553.

In a prosecution for burglary committed by defendant and another, where defendant and the other made confessions in jail, describing the place where the stolen articles were hidden, and defendant's companion aided an officer in finding the articles in the place described by defendant, the confession and the facts with reference to finding the stolen articles were admissible against defendant under this article. Garcia v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 938.

In a prosecution for burglary, testimony of the arresting officer that defendant confessed, while under arrest, that he entered the house, took out the articles, and was hauling them off on a bicycle when arrested, and that he told him where the bicycle was, whereupon the witness found one of the stolen articles in a box tied to the bicycle, if res gestæ, was admissible. McGoldrick v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 851.

13. Confessions by co-defendants or by persons other than defendant.—For evidence of statements made by one with whom defendant was associated at the time of the killing to be admissible, it must appear that defendant was present and not under arrest at the time of making the statements and in such position that he was called upon to deny the same. Bloxom v. State, 86 Cr. R. 562, 218 S. W. 1068.

In prosecution of an accomplice, testimony as to declarations constituting confessions is not admissible on the theory that the person who made the declarations is a principal, and that declarations are admissible to prove his guilt as a part of the case against accomplice, where such person was not named in the indictment as principal. Id.

In a prosecution for receiving stolen property, confessions of the alleged thief, made out of the presence of the defendant, were admissible only in so far as it tended to establish that the property in question had been stolen, and was not admissible as to that portion relating to the sale of the property to defendant. Hoyt v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 936.

Where defendant and another acted together in burglarizing a store, and both made confessions, being together at the time they were made, so that the confessions were made in the presence of each other, the confessions of both or either would be admissible against defendant, if not otherwise objectionable. Garcia v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 938.

In prosecution for receiving stolen property, the confession of the thief, made out of court, that he had stolen the property and had sold it to accused, in whose possession it was found, was admissible to prove that he was the thief, but not admissible to prove that accused was the receiver of the stolen property. Donegan v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 857.

14. Preliminary evidence as to admissibility of confession.—Evidence held to show that alleged confession introduced by district attorney was not voluntary. Robertson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 378, 195 S. W. 602, 6 A. L. R. 853.

No error appears in admission of written confession on its face filling legal requirements, when the prosecuting attorney before whom it was made testified that proper legal warning was given, and that no promise or threat was made, and that the confession was freely and voluntarily made, especially where the court submitted to the jury the question whether the confession was freely and voluntarily made. Robinson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 570, 200 S. W. 162.

The proof that money discovered by reason of a declaration of one accused of robbery and under arrest is that which was taken from prosecuting witness, necessary to render the declaration admissible, may be made by circumstances. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 416, 222 S. W. 553.

18. Effect of confession.—The state placing statements of defendant before the jury is bound thereby, unless disproved. Blacklock v. State, 81 Cr. R. 511, 196 S. W. 822.

Where the state puts in a confession, some of which is exculpatory, the state is bound by the confession, unless it disproves exculpatory testimony. Sharp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 256, 197 S. W. 207.

In prosecution for murder, where the state introduced entire confession of accused, it was bound by statement therein, unless there was some other evidence upon which jury might base a rejection of statement. Davis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 15, 209 S. W. 749.

In trial for murder by shooting into passing train, where the state introduced accused's statement admitting shooting at the time with a certain caliber pistol, the state was not bound by part of his statement, stating that he shot into the ground and not at the train, where the proof showed that two pistols were used of different caliber, and that the bullet which killed deceased was of the caliber of accused's pistol. Banks v. State, 85 Cr. R. 165, 211 S. W. 217, 5 A. L. R. 600.

In prosecution for rape, statements and confession of defendant introduced by state were binding on it unless disproved. Cokeley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 256, 220 S. W. 1099.

As a general rule, where defendant's confession as a whole is inconsistent with the state's theory of conspiracy and directly opposed thereto in some parts, the state introducing it assumes the burden of disproving statements therein, if they are obstacles to conviction. Baugus v. State, 87 Cr. R. 551, 223 S. W. 224.

Where the state introduced a confession by defendant to prove the offense of rape, and the confession contained statements which negated penetration, the state was bound by the exculpatory statements contained therein unless disproved, and it was error for the court to refuse to instruct as to the force and effect of the exculpatory statements. Mullins v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 164.

Where the state introduced a confession by defendant to prove the offense of rape, and the confession contained statements which negatived penetration, the state was bound by the exculpatory statements contained therein, unless disproved. Id.

19. — Corroboration, and proof of corpus delicti.—Defendant's uncorroborated confession that, after being chased by an officer he fired one shot, which proved fatal, held insufficient to justify conviction for murder, assessing death penalty. Sharp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 256, 197 S. W. 207.

An uncorroborated confession without proof of corpus delicti will not warrant a conviction. Id.

Evidence as to there being surgical instruments and papers in stolen car and as to finding them along a certain road held admissible to corroborate defendant's confession as to the route he and others went in the stolen machine. Hamilton v. State, 82 Cr. R. 544, 200 S. W. 155.

Defendant's confession of his connection with the crime will justify conviction when the facts making out the substantive crime were shown otherwise. Clark v. State, 85 Cr. R. 153, 210 S. W. 544.

In prosecution for injuring or damaging railroad track in such manner as to endanger the lives of any person, in violation of Pen. Code, art. 1229, evidence held sufficient to corroborate defendant's confession as to his guilty connection with the commission of the crime. Id.

In prosecution for rape on insane woman, defendant's confession of the act, taking it in its fullest force, although it may be used to aid proof, cannot of itself be held to prove the corpus delicti. Cokeley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 256, 220 S. W. 1099.

The corpus delicti, or crime itself, cannot be established by confession alone of the party charged with the commission of the crime. Robert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 230.

In prosecution for forgery, defendant's confession was available to the state in aid of other proof to establish the corpus delicti. Mettall v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 315.

Where the corpus delicti is established, the identity of the accused may be established by his own confession. Id.

20. Charge.—Court should instruct that if a confession is used it shall all be taken together, and that, where the confession includes exculpatory statements which disprove state's case, it devolves upon state to show that they are false. McInish v. State, 82 Cr. R. 141, 198 S. W. 780.

In homicide prosecution where defendant claimed that the killing followed a second act of misconduct of deceased toward defendant's wife during a second interview of defendant with deceased after deceased had promised on first interview not to repeat misconduct, failure to submit question of voluntary character of confession to jury and instruct jury to disregard confession if not voluntary, there being evidence of confession being procured by promises and inducements, was reversible error, though confession was introduced in rebuttal only, where confession failed to mention second interview; it being effective to impeach defendant. Bozeman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 653, 215 S. W. 319.

In prosecution for rape on child under age of consent, where defendant testified he was not warned before making confession, and did not understand what he was saying, court properly instructed jury should not consider written confession for any purpose unless freely and voluntarily made after warning. Anderson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 230, 220 S. W. 775.

5. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Art. 811. [791] When part of an act, declaration, etc., is given in evidence.

See Payne v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 802.

Evidence admissible.—On a prosecution for murder, where a witness testified as to the threatening attitude and language of deceased towards defendant just before the shooting, it was error to permit the state to impeach the witness by introducing a part of the testimony given by him on a previous trial, which part failed to corroborate him as to such threats, and to refuse to admit another part thereof which agreed with his evidence in that respect. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 634.

Under this article, in prosecution for assault to murder, where county attorney stated that defendant, when he made statement about knife, also made statement about difficulty, that it was all same statement, etc., defendant's offer to prove balance of statement or conversation was improperly rejected. Davis v. State, 81 Cr. R. 625, 197 S. W. 871.

Affidavit of father of prosecutrix, made for school purposes, giving her birthday, having in statutory rape been introduced by the state, defendant could introduce another part of it giving the birthday of the next child only six months later. Ford v. State, 82 Cr. R. 639, 200 S. W. 841.

Under this article, where state introduced witness who reproduced portion of testimony given by defendant in former prosecution for burglary growing out of transaction involved, defendant had right to prove by same witness other facts testified to. Burnett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 97, 201 S. W. 409.

In prosecution for passing forged instrument, where defendant gave testimony as to his financial resources, evidence as to status of his account with grocer was properly received in rebuttal. Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

If defendant introduced isolated portions of witness' examining trial testimony as impeachment or in contradiction of her testimony on final trial, state had right to introduce such portions of her examining trial testimony as were explanatory of those put in evidence by defendant, but such portions as did not throw light on those introduced by defendant would not be admissible. Earnest v. State, 83 Cr. R. 257, 202 S. W. 739.

Whole of defendant's statement to officer, who came with search warrant to his house looking for stolen hogs, explanatory of defendant's possession, was admissible, state having introduced part of it, and part should not have been excluded on ground it was self-serving. Grace v. State, 83 Cr. R. 442, 203 S. W. 896.

In prosecution of defendant for assault with intent to murder his son-in-law, evidence that victim had married defendant's daughter to avoid a prosecution for seduction and that he had undertaken to produce an abortion upon her held admissible as explanatory of a conversation between defendant and victim just preceding difficulty and as bearing upon question of who began difficulty. Bolin v. State, 83 Cr. R. 590, 204 S. W. 335.

Admission of testimony which was part of a conversation between prosecutrix and her husband elicited by accused, cannot be error, in view of this article Morris v. State, 84 Cr. R. 100, 206 S. W. 82.

Where part of a conversation is brought out and the remaining portion of the conversation is necessary to make the preceding part clear or to explain the same, the remainder is admissible. Payne v. State, 85 Cr. R. 288, 212 S. W. 161.

When a witness in a criminal case is attacked by proof of a part of a conversation contradicting his testimony, the other side has the right to prove all that he said at the time relative to the same subject. Cotton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 387, 217 S. W. 158.

In a prosecution for the theft of an automobile, evidence of statement made by one defendant in a conversation with the owner when they offered to pay for the machine, wherein such defendant stated that he was out on suspended sentence and did not desire to get an additional term, held admissible as a part of a conversation brought out by defendant. Young v. State, 87 Cr. R. 27, 218 S. W. 1063.

In prosecution for assault with intent to kill, where there was evidence that accused had stated the injured party ought to be shot, testimony regarding what the person with whom he was conversing had said was admissible as part of the same conversation, and to make accused's statement understood by the jury. Beasley v. State, 88 Cr. R. 220, 225 S. W. 748.

In a prosecution for assault with intent to rob, where defendant claimed that he merely defended himself when assaulted by complaining witness, who testified on cross-examination that he had formerly accused defendant of burglarizing his store, and defendant introduced testimony of arresting officer on such former occasion as to results of his investigation, such witness' testimony on cross-examination that a place had been dug underneath the front door of a store, was admissible on a theory that, a part of the transaction having been admitted at the instance of one party, the remainder could be introduced by the other as explanatory, under this article. Flores v. State, 88 Cr. R. 349, 227 S. W. 320.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault occurring when defendant and his companion went to the store of the prosecuting witness, the state having introduced part of the transaction leading up to the assault, defendant was, under this article, entitled to introduce the whole of the transaction and show that the call was on account of an alleged insulting letter written by the complaining witness to the daughter of defendant's companion. Barnett v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 144.

An objection to the whole of an occurrence as detailed cannot be sustained if any part thereof would make more apparent the truth of the charge against accused. Id.

In prosecution for statutory rape, where prosecutrix had testified that the intimacy between herself and accused was confined almost exclusively to rides with him in his automobile, and that he had taken her out several times, and had her out in his car on the occasion of the alleged intercourse, the fact that he came to her home with his car a few days thereafter would be an admissible fact, so that an objection to the entirety of testimony of her father as to what occurred on such visit was not sustainable, part thereof being admissible. Id.

Under this article, one accused of robbery could prove that, in connection with certain inculpatory statements, proved by the state, he made other exculpatory statements. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 110.

Where the state, in a prosecution for robbery, used defendant's admission of having thrown away the pistol found at the scene of the robbery to incriminate him, defendant's right to introduce evidence explanatory of the admission could not be nullified by the state's claim that the part of the transaction and conversation introduced by it was exculpatory. Id.

Under this article, one accused of robbery may testify, in explanation of his admission of having thrown away the pistol and playing cards found on the scene of the robbery, that he told the arresting officer immediately after he was arrested that he won the money gambling, and, believing he was to be arrested for gambling, fled and threw away his pistol and the playing cards, and that he told the names of the others in the game and where they were, and requested the officer to go get them; the statute not being restricted to declarations that are part of the res gestæ, but embracing explanatory acts and declarations by the accused after his arrest. Id.

In a prosecution for murder, where defendant appellant introduced his wife as a witness, and proved by her that she had met deceased and occupied a hotel room with him for several hours with doors locked, it was proper for state, on cross-examination of the wife, to develop that at this meeting no criminal conduct took place, in view of this article. Boaz v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 790.

Evidence not admissible.—In criminal prosecution, evidence that defendant had told third party during conversation that the officers had told deceased to kill him, and that third party was going to get defendant into trouble, was inadmissible, where offered as independent testimony and not as part of any conversation drawn out by state, being self-serving. Lagrone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 609, 209 S. W. 411.

In a prosecution for burglary, an alleged accomplice who testified against defendant, and to the effect that, when his house was searched, he escaped to the residence of defendant in which were present defendant's wife and sister, should not, because asked what they said when told his house was being searched, have been allowed to testify that the women later requested him to run off so that defendant could escape. Payne v. State, 85 Cr. R. 238, 212 S. W. 161.

Where defendant's brother saw the homicide, and defendant testified on cross-examination that he didn't care if his brother was a witness, for, if he told the truth, it would not injure his case, but that the brother was crazy about half the time, such testimony did not warrant the introduction of a written statement by defendant's brother. Dunn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 299, 212 S. W. 511.

In a murder trial, a conversation between a witness and another out of the presence and hearing of the defendant was inadmissible as hearsay, and that the defendant asked a question of such witness which might have elicited the same matters, but was withdrawn before it was answered, was no reason for permitting the state to bring out such hearsay testimony over defendant's objections. Parker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 222, 216 S. W. 178.

In prosecution for assault to murder defendant's creditor, whom he cut with a borrowed pocketknife, where statement of blacksmith proved that short time after assaulted person demanded payment of his debt from defendant, latter was seen in blacksmith's shop, sharpening his knife on a whetrock, testimony of blacksmith on cross-examination by defendant that at the time he told the blacksmith, if his creditor would give him a little time, he would pay what he owed held inadmissible as self-serving. Simmons v. State, 87 Cr. R. 270, 220 S. W. 554.

Where, after the shooting, defendant left the scene of difficulty, going to his parents' home, some miles distant, and defendant explained his flight by testimony that his mother was ill, testimony that he told the friend who was carrying him away that he would allow the friend to surrender him and collect the reward was properly rejected as a self-serving declaration. Shrum v. State, 87 Cr. R. 486, 222 S. W. 575.

It appearing that the court permitted proof of all that occurred in a conversation between a witness and the deceased, in which the deceased threatened to go and kill the accused and his wife, there was no error in excluding part of the conversation in which the witness argued with deceased and endeavored to dissuade him from such purpose, especially where it is not contended that accused was aware of the conversation before the homicide. Allen v. State, 88 Cr. R. 32, 224 S. W. 891.

In a prosecution for homicide, where the state had introduced evidence of a difficulty between defendant's father and deceased, in which defendant stood by with a gun, defendant's offer in evidence of a complaint by him charging deceased with having slandered defendant's wife was not admissible, under this article, as an explanation of the previous trouble, where defendant had stated the previous trouble arose because of a remark deceased had made about his mother, and there was no showing that the slander of defendant's wife had any relation thereto, except a statement by defendant's counsel that he offered the evidence to show the insult of defendant's wife led up to the first difficulty. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 847.

Art. 814. [794] Evidence of handwriting by comparison.

See Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

Admissibility and effect of evidence as to handwriting.—In prosecution for sending anonymous letter reflecting on chastity and good character of recipient, testimony of experts that another letter and a communication known to have been written by accused were written upon the same typewriter was admissible under the rules of comparison of handwriting. Rudy v. State, 81 Cr. R. 272, 195 S. W. 187.

In prosecution for passing forged instrument where there was evidence of other forged instruments having been passed, and where the genuineness of defendant's signatures as indorsed on such instruments was fully established, comparison of the handwriting of the proven signature and that claimed to be forged might be made by experts or persons who had seen accused write, or by jury themselves under this article. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 73, 215 S. W. 560.

This article does not preclude proof of forgery by circumstantial evidence. Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 640, 218 S. W. 750.

In a prosecution for theft, where there was an issue of fact as to whether accused had indorsed a check delivered to an alleged coconspirator, an admitted signature of accused was admissible in evidence, under this article. Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 262.

In view of this article, and of the fact that the jury are the judges of the credibility of witnesses as well as the facts proven, the question whether defendant forged a check held properly submitted to the jury, notwithstanding defendant testified that he did not write the check, but received it from the alleged maker, and offered much expert testimony that it was the check of the maker. Cone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 816.

— Competency of witnesses.—In a prosecution for forgery a bank manager, who testified that he had been familiar with defendant's handwriting for over four years in connection with the banking business, qualified himself to testify as an expert that the alleged forged check was not drawn by defendant. Cone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 816.

Inspection.—Where the state introduced a handwriting expert to compare the writing in certain documents which were used in evidence, it was not error to overrule accused's motion to be allowed to inspect the documents, where all of the documents had been used in evidence at the examining trial, opportunity to inspect them was tendered accused's counsel when the motion was made, it was understood that the witness would be held to the conclusion of the trial, and, although the trial continued thereafter for nearly a week, no further demand was made and no experts introduced to contradict, although generally an inspection of such documents, when demanded, should be afforded. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

Art. 815. [795] Party may attack testimony of his own witness, when and how.

Cited in dissenting opinion, Messenger v. State, 81 Cr. R. 465, 198 S. W. 330.

Impeachment of witness.—Where state's case, as made by wife's testimony, was that she was about to hit defendant husband, when he struck her, if she made statements contradictory of this, or showing more aggravation than she stated, still it would be impeachment and could not be used as original evidence by the state in making out its case. Hays v. State, 84 Cr. R. 349, 206 S. W. 941.

It was not error to refuse to permit defendant to lay the foundation for impeachment of his own witness, who gave no damaging testimony against defendant, but merely failed to give the evidence defendant desired. Ice v. State, 84 Cr. R. 509, 208 S. W. 343.

Art. 816. [796] Interpreter shall be sworn to interpret, when.

Interpreters.—In a criminal proceeding, a partisan interpreter should not be used. Nader v. State, 86 Cr. R. 424, 219 S. W. 474.

Art. 824. [804] How defendant shall proceed, etc.

Affidavit.—Since it is the duty of the clerk of court to have the affidavit required by this article, preliminary to issuing commission to take deposition, the presumption obtains prima facie at least that the affidavit was present before the commission was issued. Barton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 198, 215 S. W. 968.

Affidavit required by this article, as a predicate for obtaining commission to take deposition, is to be regarded as an item of procedure going to the manner and form of taking depositions in a criminal case in view of Civ. St. art. 3676, and notes. Id.

Where county attorney had notice and filed cross-interrogatories and the clerk issued commissions and the depositions were taken and filed, motion made at a subsequent term to quash depositions on the ground that affidavit required by this article, as a predicate for obtaining commission, was not shown to have been made, should not have been entertained in view of Civ. St. art. 3676, made applicable to criminal cases by Code Cr. Proc. art. 822, affidavits having been filed embodying the facts required by art. 832, as a predicate for introduction of depositions. Id.

Art. 832. [812] Depositions shall not be read, unless, etc.

Cited, Childers v. State, 30 Tex. App. 160, 16 S. W. 903, 28 Am. St. Rep. 899.

Admissibility of depositions in evidence.—Upon a trial for horse-stealing, the prosecution offered the deposition of the alleged owner of the animals, after showing that the deponent was unable, from illness, to be present. Held, that under this article, and art. 834, relating to the admission of evidence and depositions in writing, the judge could exercise his discretion, and decide whether, in the interests of justice, it were better to read the deposition, or to adjourn the trial, in order to obtain the oral testimony of the witness. Collins v. State, 24 Tex. App. 141, 5 S. W. 848.

The return of attachments for a witness, issued to every county in the state, not executed because no such person resided in those counties, is not sufficient evidence of his removal out of the state to render his deposition admissible in a criminal prosecution under arts. 832-834, providing for proof of such removal by the prosecuting attorney or other credible person. Martinas v. State, 26 Tex. App. 91, 9 S. W. 356.

In a murder case it appeared that after the trial, at a previous term of the court of a person indicted with defendant and others for the murder, the state's most important witness went to Alabama. S. testified that he knew the witness; that she resided in Alabama, and might be on her way to Texas; that she stayed at his house a few days after such term of court, and then left, with the declaration that she was going to make her home with his brother in Alabama, the latter accompanying her; that six days ago he received a letter from his brother, inclosing a message from the witness in such state; that she had taken her household furniture with her; that he had written to her to be at court three days ago, and did not know whether she was on her way or not; and that she was 70 years old. Held, that the proof was sufficient to entitle the state to read the evidence of such witness taken before the examining court, under this article, and art. 834. Peddy v. State, 31 Tex. Cr. R. 547, 21 S. W. 542.

Where county attorney had notice and filed cross-interrogatories, and the clerk issued commissions, and the depositions were taken and filed, motion made at a subsequent term to quash depositions, on the ground that affidavit required by Code Cr. Proc. art. 824, as a predicate for obtaining commission, was not shown to have been made, should not have been entertained, in view of Civ. St. art. 3676, made applicable to criminal cases by Code Cr. Proc. art. 822; affidavits having been filed embodying the facts required by art. 832, as a predicate for introduction of depositions. Barton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 198, 215 S. W. 968.

Article 835. [815] Definition of "new trial."

Nature of remedy in general.—Question whether complaint was defective and did not support information may not be reviewed, where no motion to quash was filed and motion in arrest of judgment did not urge such ground; the attention of the court being first called to the defects in an amended motion for new trial filed more than a month after the judgment was rendered. Burnett v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 239.

Necessity of motion.—Court rule 101a (159 S. W. xi), relating to necessity of motion for new trial, does not control the authority of the court to pass on questions disclosed in the record on appeal. Sessions v. State, 81 Cr. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

Defendant's motion for new trial was not essential as basis for appeal. Daumery v. State, 82 Cr. R. 231, 199 S. W. 291.

Motion for new trial is not necessary to give jurisdiction of appeal from conviction for robbery. Connell v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 502.

SUBD. 1

Trial without counsel.—Where defendant had no attorney, insanity at the time of the alleged crime and trial is a good ground for a new trial on motion by relatives who became aware of the prosecution after conviction. Gardner v. State, 82 Cr. R. 38, 198 S. W. 312, L. R. A. 1918B, 1144.

Where defendant, who had been on ball nearly a year, asked continuance, stating he was without counsel, and immediately thereafter his counsel appeared, and cause was set for another day, and during trial defendant's counsel after moving for postponement left to engage in trial of another case in which he had been employed subsequent to setting case, held that defendant was not deprived of counsel. Johnson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 567, 208 S. W. 928.

Abandonment of case.—Abandonment of a defendant's case by his counsel is no cause for new trial, unless the defendant was deprived of counsel by the action of the state or some outside influence over which he had no control. Holden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 803.

Where defendant was not insane, and not charged with a capital offense, and his plea of suspended sentence was prepared, presented, and duly submitted to the jury, and it is not shown why counsel refused to proceed therewith, failure of counsel to appear and defend held not to warrant the granting a new trial. Id.

SUBD. 2

4. Denial of continuance.—See Cooley v. State, 83 Cr. R. 340, 203 S. W. 356; notes to art. 608.

5. Error in rulings on evidence.—In a prosecution for violation of the local option law, where the court erroneously excluded testimony offered to show motive of the state's witness, held that defendant should have been granted a new trial, where it further appeared that the jury assumed that if verdict was not shortly reached they would be confined over Sunday. West v. State, 86 Cr. R. 296, 216 S. W. 186.

6. Error as to instructions.—Under this subdivision, error in requiring assault by deceased producing pain to have been calculated to produce passion in defendant's mind held ground for new trial, and conviction for murder with death penalty assessed will be reversed. Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

Misconduct of court.—Where defendant pleaded guilty to a charge of assault upon his wife, under the impression that the county attorney had agreed that he should receive a fine of only $25, and the court took the matter under advisement, and, having talked with the wife and her physician, assessed a fine of $100 and 60 days in jail, held that, as the evidence on which the punishment was based was heard out of court, defendant was entitled to a new trial. Brooks v. State, 85 Cr. R. 431, 213 S. W. 646.

Verdict decided by lot.—Where the jury put down their several opinions as to the length of defendant's sentence, and divided by 12, to see what it would bring them to, the result being five and a fraction years, whereupon a juror moved that they fix defendant's punishment at six years, to which all assented, there was no error. Cockrell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 326, 211 S. W. 939.

Where jurors agreed to add up their preferences as to length of sentence and divide by 12, and quotient amounted to four years and five months, and thereupon it was suggested that the verdict be fixed at four years and there was a unanimous vote in favor of such term, held, there was no violation of this subdivision. Barnard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 365, 221 S. W. 293.

Improperly influencing assent to verdict.—Testimony of juror that, although he believed defendants not guilty, he acquiesced in verdict of guilty, because he wanted to go home was insufficient to authorize new trial. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

Bias or prejudice of juror.—That a juror, upon his examination, misled the defendant with reference to his being impartial, without a showing that defendant learned of juror's prejudice subsequent to his acceptance, is insufficient for a new trial. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

Evidence that a juror was in favor of a felony conviction, although other jurors favored acquittal or conviction of an aggravated assault with a fine of only $25, the jury finally agreeing on conviction of an aggravated assault with a fine of $100, is not sufficient to show that the juror was prejudiced. Samino v. State, 83 Cr. R. 481, 204 S. W. 233.

The court did not err in refusing to grant a new trial in a homicide case on account of a juror having stated that, if he was taken on the jury and the evidence showed that accused was guilty, he would break his neck. Salazar v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 528.

Deprivation of testimony.—Defendant, having on misinformation by the sheriff as to the name of the person who said defendant was not the person with the stolen property summoned the wrong witness, should be given a new trial for refusal of postponement till the next morning to get the witness. Claunch v. State, 82 Cr. R. 114, 198 S. W. 307.

SUBD. 6

1. In general.—See Waters v. State, 81 Cr. R. 491, 196 S. W. 536; notes to art. 840. A defendant is entitled to a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, if, in the light of the evidence itself on the trial, the absent testimony set out in the application for a continuance was material and probably true. Mireles v. State, 83 Cr. R. 608, 204 S. W. 861.

The rule with reference to cumulative evidence and strict diligence does not apply to the question of insanity, viewed in the light of newly discovered testimony. Walker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 441, 216 S. W. 1085.

2. Discretion of trial court.—The question of granting a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is largely left to discretion of the trial judge, and will not be disturbed, except where appellant shows the court abused its discretion. Lewis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 285, 199 S. W. 1091.

The decision of the trial judge overruling a motion for new trial, based on newly discovered evidence, is binding upon appeal, unless the appellate court is satisfied that the trial court abused its discretion. Gordon v. State, 88 Cr. R. 17, 224 S. W. 894.

3. Time of discovery.—Where defendant knew what witness would testify, if he told the truth, he cannot have a new trial on his testimony as newly discovered, though he, because he did not want to be mixed up in the case, would not before the trial say what his testimony would be. Hunter v. State, 81 Cr. R. 471, 196 S. W. 820.

In a murder trial, new trial would not be granted on affidavit of accused's daughter as to who shot first, nor affidavit as to character of wound on deceased, as newly discovered evidence, where both witnesses attended the trial and accused knew that his daughter was present at the killing and saw and heard all that occurred. Jackson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 597, 196 S. W. 826.

That witness would have testified that accused did not work for him at the time another witness said he did, and at the time of the sale of the whisky, was not newly discovered testimony, as accused knew such facts at the time of the trial. Coursey v. State, 82 Cr. R. 272, 199 S. W. 1091.

Testimony of a witness who heard the testimony of deceased's wife at the examining trial, with which it is desired to impeach the wife's testimony given at the regular trial, is not newly discovered, where defendant and his attorney were not only present at the examining trial, but introduced such evidence as there given into the regular trial, at which such witness under subpoena was also in attendance. Lewis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 285, 199 S. W. 1091.

Matters coming out on trial of defendant in trial in another county prior to trial in question cannot be newly discovered evidence. Phillips v. State, 83 Cr. R. 16, 200 S. W. 1091.

Evidence is not newly discovered in law, when the facts sought to be shown thereby could have been shown on trial, and the persons were all accessible, and could have testified at the trial. Williams v. State, 83 Cr. R. 26, 201 S. W. 188.

Where, in prosecution for passing forged check, defendant claimed to have received it in consideration for his assignment of lease, and testified that transaction occurred at meeting with assignee, alleged newly discovered testimony that defendant's brother-in-law was present and familiar with transaction is no ground for new trial, for defendant must have known it at time of trial, and, if true, would have produced brother-in-law. Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

The refusal of a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence did not warrant reversal, where it did not appear that the facts set out in the affidavits were unknown to defendant before the trial, at which the witnesses testified, nor that such evidence would have produced a different result. Mansfield v. State, 84 Cr. R. 132, 206 S. W. 195.

In a prosecution for murder of defendant's mistress, new trial was properly refused when asked on account of newly discovered evidence of the city marshal that decedent was a mean and vicious woman, who had previously attacked defendant two or three times, as such evidence could not be newly discovered so far as defendant was concerned. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 276, 216 S. W. 192.

Facts of which accused had knowledge before the trial cannot be considered as newly discovered evidence. Pruitt v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 525.

It was not error to overrule a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, where an absent witness would have testified to threats against defendant by one at whom he shot with intent to murder, which were communicated to defendant; defendant having known of them before the trial. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122.

4. Diligence in procuring evidence.—Under this subdivision, new trial for newly discovered evidence as to a date held properly refused, for failure to explain the failure to call certain witnesses or to seek a postponement. Hensley v. State, 81 Cr. R. 620, 197 S. W. 869.

New trial held properly denied, because of failure to account for defendant's alleged want of knowledge that the new witness knew the facts. Id.

Where accused's brother and sister were very familiar with him, and the brother testified on the trial, accused's motion for new trial, on the ground of newly discovered evidence by his sister, showing that he was of weak mind, disclosed no diligence. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 586, 200 S. W. 398.

The evidence of defendant's appropriation of his employer's car to his own use being unsatisfactory, he should be granted a new trial for the testimony of the person to whom he claimed to have rented the car, though he did not move for a continuance because he did not know his name or whereabouts, and the testimony being consistent with prior statements of defendant and testimony at the trial. Miller v. State, 84 Cr. R. 466, 208 S. W. 508.

Newly discovered evidence held not sufficient to require a new trial, where defendant's counsel had talked with the witnesses, but had failed to discover facts known by them, and did not place them on the stand. Patten v. State, 84 Cr. R. 584, 209 S. W. 664.

An accused is not entitled to a new trial upon the ground of newly discovered evidence, consisting of testimony of his wife and another woman, who were both present at court but were not put on stand. Taylor v. State, 85 Cr. R. 101, 210 S. W. 539.

Defendant should show why the evidence was not offered on the trial, or that it was unknown to defendant or his attorney and could not have been discovered by the use of reasonable diligence. Gerlich v. State, 86 Cr. R. 252, 216 S. W. 164.

A new trial will not be granted to enable defendant to show by an almanac the time the moon set on the night of the alleged crime, though the prosecuting witness claimed to have recognized him by the light of the moon, where the question of recognition and identity was an issue on the trial, and there is nothing to show that he did not know, or could not have discovered and brought out on the trial, the time that the moon set. Shaw v. State, 86 Cr. R. 520, 217 S. W. 942.

Diligence of defendant to discover, previous to trial, that a witness was a convicted felon, held sufficient to justify new trial. Barber v. State, 87 Cr. R. 585, 223 S. W. 457.

The rule denying a new trial, where due diligence to procure the evidence was not shown applies, notwithstanding defendant is in jail, at least unless it appears that there was no outside assistance available. Gordon v. State, 88 Cr. R. 17, 224 S. W. 894.

Where accused had counsel during the several months he was confined in jail, the want of diligence of that counsel to procure testimony is chargeable to accused, so that a motion for new trial, presented by different counsel, should show that the counsel who conducted the trial did not know of the new testimony. Id.

Accused must use diligence to secure witnesses before the appellate court is required to reverse a conviction by reason of the denial of the motion. Pruitt v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 525.

In a prosecution for murder, held, that no due diligence was shown as to the testimony of a witness claimed to have been newly discovered. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

If defendant desired testimony of a witness for whose newly discovered testimony he asks new trial, he should have taken steps during trial to procure such testimony; it having developed that she was present at the conversation to which she was to testify. He should have secured subpoena for her, and, if necessary, asked postponement in order to procure her presence. Id.

Testimony to support a defensive theory, otherwise resting upon defendant's testimony alone, being such as the law regards with favor, the absence of complete diligence to secure such testimony of absent witnesses does not necessarily justify the denial of a new trial. Giles v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 765.

Relative to new trial for so-called newly discovered evidence consisting of a statement by defendant as to his age, made to the assistant county attorney before his age became an issue, conceding defendant's ignorance of its importance, held no sufficient reason was shown why it should not have been ascertained by counsel. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 786.

6. Nature and purpose of evidence in general.—New evidence of an alleged eye-witness of the assault that defendant was retreating from an armed adversary, and shot in self-defense, is no ground for new trial, when it could easily have been produced before, only cumulates the testimony of defendant and three others, and is so questionable that on another trial it would not "probably produce a different result." Hickman v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 126.

In prosecution for unlawfully carrying knucks, it was error to overrule defendant's motion for new trial to procure attendance of witnesses who would swear positively that defendant did not have knucks at the time charged; due diligence being shown. Hargrove v. State, 81 Cr. R. 407, 195 S. W. 855.

Where conviction of burglary rested largely on tracks similar to those of accused at the scene of the burglary, and after conviction, a third person made affidavit that his house had been burglarized and a similar track found while accused was in jail, such testimony warranted new trial. Ditto v. State, 83 Cr. R. 220, 202 S. W. 735.

Where the evidence upon which defendant was convicted tended strongly to prove an alibi, and raise doubt as to his identity with the criminal, a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, supporting proof of mistaken identity, should have been granted. Lumpkin v. State, 84 Cr. R. 33, 204 S. W. 431.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, it was error to refuse a new trial, applied for on the ground that defendant had discovered that records disclosing the girl's age to be more than 15 years existed in Mexico. Mireles v. State, 83 Cr. R. 608, 204 S. W. 861.

There having been no lack of diligence, and it not appearing the testimony could be procured from other source, known to defendant, new trial should have been granted for absence of witness who would testify that a few days before the homicide deceased told him he was going to kill defendant, and that he (witness) told this to defendant two days before the homicide. Bell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 475, 213 S. W. 647.

In a prosecution for arson, defendant's motion for new trial on the ground of newly discovered testimony of two farmers, should have been granted, where circumstances were relied on to prove defendant's guilt, and the farmers' testimony tended to show that when defendant was in his house another person, admittedly an accomplice, was in proximity to the destroyed property under suspicious circumstances. Kelley v. State, 86 Cr. R. 281, 216 S. W. 188.

Denial of new trial for evidence that a state's witness, before the trial, had been requested by other witnesses for the state to join them in testifying against defendant, held proper, in view of the nature of testimony given by such witness, and the fact that having testified during trial such alleged new evidence was not new. Redwine v. State, 87 Cr. R. 387, 221 S. W. 605.

That a new trial was granted an accomplice witness after he testified for the state would not be newly discovered evidence, there being no agreement with him that a new trial should be granted in consideration of such act on his part. Shaw v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 509.

In a prosecution for seduction, held, that new trial should have been granted for newly discovered evidence that prosecutrix was unchaste, defendant and his counsel having used due diligence to procure the testimony of the witness, who testified, but suppressed the fact that he had had relations with prosecutrix. Gainer v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 830.

7. Relevancy, materiality, and competency.—Alleged newly discovered evidence that defendant had been informed by unnamed parties that state's witnesses had been paid $50 apiece to send whisky peddlers to penitentiary was hearsay. Hays v. State, 83 Cr. R. 398, 204 S. W. 229.

8. Cumulative evidence.—Though evidence on motion for new trial in prosecution for selling whisky to accused's father was partly cumulative, new trial held to be granted where it made stronger case as to the father's craziness and hostility towards his children. Harris v. State, 83 Cr. R. 107, 201 S. W. 405.

Where principal witness for defendant was favorably inclined toward defendant, and was attacked by state in such manner as to probably justify jury in doubting truthfulness of her testimony, refusal to continue trial for absence of two disinterested witnesses, who would have strongly corroborated testimony of such witness, on motion showing reasonable diligence, held error; the evidence not being merely cumulative. Beland v. State, 86 Cr. R. 285, 217 S. W. 147.

Where there was testimony that a man other than accused shot deceased, and that the other man's name was used in the altercation preceding the shooting, and that deceased first accused the other man, but when both were brought before him, identified accused, newly discovered evidence that the shot was fired by the other man is cumulative and the appellate court will generally not set aside the verdict for evidence of that character. Gordon v. State, 88 Cr. R. 17, 224 S. W. 894.

Testimony to support that of another witness occupies the same position, so far as continuance or new trial to obtain it is concerned, as impeaching evidence. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

In a prosecution for murder, testimony as to threats made by deceased shortly before the killing, held cumulative and not ground for new trial. Id.

In a prosecution for murder, the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in failing to grant a new trial for absence of witness who could give evidence of deceased's having admitted his correspondence with defendant's wife and defendant's jealousy, where it was disclosed by evidence without controversy that such clandestine correspondence was conducted, such being merely cumulative evidence upon an uncontroverted issue, and testimony of another witness of an uncommunicated threat, where there was also evidence of a communicated threat. Boaz v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 790.

9. Impeachment of witness.—A new trial will not be granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence which would go solely toward impeaching a witness. Lewis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 285, 199 S. W. 1091; Ballew v. State, 82 Cr. R. 398, 199 S. W. 1109; Paterson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 643, 215 S. W. 308; Washington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 652, 218 S. W. 1043; Redwine v. State, 87 Cr. R. 387, 221 S. W. 605; Henderson v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 535.

Refusing new trial, held not abuse of discretion, where newly discovered evidence would merely have impeached prosecuting witness' testimony by inconsistent statements. Ballew v. State, 82 Cr. R. 398, 199 S. W. 1109.

Motion for new trial of defendant charged with robbery, supported by affidavits showing prosecuting witness had made affidavit retracting essential inculpatory testimony, and had been convicted of forgery, should have been granted. McConnell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 634, 200 S. W. 842.

Alleged impeaching statements of witnesses out of court, conflicting with their testimony on trial, are generally treated as insufficient to require new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence. Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 185, 206 S. W. 362.

In prosecution for murder, where a witness against defendant was a convicted felon, and hence disqualified, so that his testimony could not have been used had such witness not sworn falsely as to his conviction, denial to defendant of new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence as to the witness' conviction held error. Barber v. State, 87 Cr. R. 585, 223 S. W. 457.

10. Conflicting or contradicted evidence.—Where testimony relied on for conviction was that of confessed accomplice and another witness under indictment for several felonies, new trial should have been granted for newly discovered evidence, directly contradicting testimony of accomplice material to case. Chenault v. State, 83 Cr. R. 104, 201 S. W. 657; Jackson v. Same, 83 Cr. R. 106, 201 S. W. 658.

It was not error to overrule a motion for a new trial where the newly discovered testimony of an absent witness as to an uncommunicated threat against defendant, made by one at whom he shot with intent to murder, was so contradictory that the court was justified in disregarding it. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122.

It was not error to overrule a motion for new trial on the ground of error in refusing a continuance, where the affidavits of absent witnesses denied that they would have given the testimony expected of them. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

11. Credibility and probable effect.—To require the Court of Criminal Appeals to review the action of the trial court in refusing a new trial for newly discovered evidence, it must appear that the evidence is probably true. Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, alleged newly discovered evidence tending to make out a case of self-defense, but lacking the probability of truth, held no ground for granting new trial. Odom v. State, 82 Cr. R. 580, 200 S. W. 833.

In prosecution for passing forged check which defendant claimed he received for his assignment of lease, and that he paid difference in money, alleged newly discovered testimony, which was probably not true, that defendant's wife saw him writing transfer of lease, and thereafter found that considerable sum of money was missing from his pockets, is no ground for new trial. Morgan v. State, 82 Cr. R. 615, 201 S. W. 654.

Where showing of diligence in procuring absent witness is insufficient, it is not incumbent upon court to order new trial, unless considered in connection with evidence adduced on the trial, it is reasonably probable that a result more favorable to accused would have been occasioned by the presence of the witness. Morse v. State, 85 Cr. R. 83, 210 S. W. 965.

In prosecution for theft of an automobile in W., newly discovered evidence that defendant registered a car at a point about 60 miles from W. on that day would not justify the inference it might produce different result; it being possible to reach W. in time to commit the theft. Berry v. State, 87 Cr. R. 559, 223 S. W. 212.

Where deceased and his companion positively identified accused as the man who fired the shot, and other witnesses also identified him, the appellate court cannot say that it was an abuse of discretion to deny a new trial for new evidence that the shot was fired by another on the ground that such evidence was improbable. Gordon v. State, 88 Cr. R. 17, 224 S. W. 894.

Testimony by a witness discovered since the trial that he saw the shooting through a window and that at the time another witness was holding defendant's right hand, which fact was not testified to by any other witness was not so probably true as to require a new trial. Mims v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 315.

In a prosecution for having equipment for making intoxicating liquor, where defendant admitted he brought the equipment, which he claimed had been given him by another negro, to his premises, newly discovered evidence that the new witness met two negroes carrying the equipment toward defendant's premises would not probably change the result, and does not require a new trial. Andres v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 503.

In a prosecution for murder, new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence consisting of testimony as to a threat made by deceased toward defendant held properly denied, as it would not be liable to produce a different result upon another trial. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

Receiving other testimony.—In a prosecution for murder, testimony of witnesses held to show that, after the jury had retired to deliberate upon the case, a juror made statements to them of facts stated to be of his own knowledge, not irrelevant or immaterial, and such as were testimony within the meaning of this article. Gilbert v. State, 85 Cr. R. 597, 215 S. W. 106.

In view of this provision, where a juror discussed facts known to him concerning the place where the murder was committed, the court will not speculate upon its effect upon the jury, but will reverse the case. Id.

The court should have granted a new trial in a robbery case where the jury in their retirement were informed that a coindictee had been convicted and his punishment assessed at confinement for five years, and such information was made the subject of discussion by the members of the jury before they arrived at a verdict. Hilliard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 416, 222 S. W. 553.

In a prosecution for manslaughter, testimony of all jurors held to lead to conclusion they had discussed on a number of occasions, the fact that defendant's brother had been convicted and given 5 years in the penitentiary, and that defendant had been tried once with a hung jury and again with a conviction and 12-year sentence. Cotton v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 943.

In such prosecution, discussion of defendant's former conviction, and with reference to his brother being convicted for the same offense, held prejudicial to defendant justifying a new trial under provision of this subdivision. Id.

Where testimony other than that used during trial is received by the jury after it has retired to deliberate, in violation of this subdivision, the accused, in order to obtain a new trial by reason thereof, is not required to show injury, but the state has the burden of showing that the fairness of the trial was not affected thereby. Hallmark v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 697.

That testimony other than that produced during trial is received by the jury after it has retired to deliberate is not ground for reversal, under this subdivision, where the fairness of the trial could not have been affected thereby. Id.

Action of jurors, during deliberations, in reading and discussing a newspaper article in which the defendant was charged in 19 other cases with burglary, theft, and receiving stolen property, and in discussing the fact not in evidence that defendant had been living with a prostitute, held misconduct. Golden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 813.

Statement by one juror to other jurors.—In prosecution for rape, it was ground for new trial for jurors before reaching verdict and to influence others to say that they knew the state's principal corroborating witness and that he was truthful. Mizell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 241, 197 S. W. 300.

Evidence that two jurors were for acquittal until it was stated to them in the jury room that defendant had killed another man, whereupon they agreed to a conviction, and that certain jurors commented on defendant's failure to testify, shows misconduct requiring a new trial. Kilpatrick v. State, 85 Cr. R. 172, 211 S. W. 230.

In homicide prosecution, juror's discussion of fact that accused had been indicted for another killing, and of fact that a codefendant had been previously tried and convicted, held misconduct justifying reversal. Luman v. State, 86 Cr. R. 298, 216 S. W. 395.

In a prosecution for violating the Prohibition Law, where defendant did not take the stand and introduced no evidence, the case being submitted on the state's evidence, it was such misconduct as to necessitate reversal for the jury to consider statements made by one of the jurors that defendant had been selling liquor for over 10 years and would continue unless they convicted. Gates v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 170.

This subdivision held applicable to statements made by one juror to another of facts not in evidence after jury has retired to deliberate. Hallmark v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 697.

Conversing with persons other than jurors.—Denial of new trial for misconduct of jurors and deputy sheriff in conversing about White boys, of which defendant was one, having been charged with counterfeiting, held proper. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 286, 199 S. W. 1117.

Communications with jurors, except within statutory limitation, are improper and should not be permitted, but to constitute error justifying new trial they must relate to the case and injury must follow, under this subdivision. Lowe v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 674.

Review.—Finding of judge on controverted testimony that there was no misconduct of jury or deputy sheriff in his conversation with them warranting new trial will not be disturbed on appeal. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 286, 199 S. W. 1117.

SUBD. 8

Misconduct in general.—In prosecution for rape, it was misconduct warranting new trial for jurors before reaching verdict, and to influence others, to refer frequently to accused's failure to testify, though others each time immediately said that that could not be considered. Mizell v. State, 81 Cr. R. 241, 197 S. W. 300.

That the jury, in their deliberations, referred to the fact that defendant during the trial dozed off to sleep and nodded several times, does not require a new trial. Wright v. State, 84 Cr. R. 352, 207 S. W. 99.

Under this article, the action of jurors, after retirement in a trial for murder and after a disagreement as to character of punishment, in stating instances in which the Governor had used pardoning power in urging the death penalty, is ground for a new trial. Weaver v. State, 85 Cr. R. 111, 210 S. W. 698.

Evidence that two jurors were for acquittal until it was stated to them in the jury room that defendant had killed another man, whereupon they agreed to a conviction, and that certain jurors commented on defendant's failure to testify, shows misconduct requiring the granting of a new trial. Kilpatrick v. State, 85 Cr. R. 172, 211 S. W. 230.

Conviction of manslaughter will not be reversed because in testing the qualifications of jurors some incidental reference was made to defendant's former conviction, and thereafter the jury, after its retirement, based on the information thus obtained, further made some casual reference thereto; the trial court having overruled motion for new trial on such account. Wood v. State, 86 Cr. R. 550, 217 S. W. 1037.

Where a number of jurors were in favor of a two-year sentence until the fact that accused had not testified was called to their attention by jurors, and after the matter was discussed for some time, and because of such discussion, agreed to a four-year sentence, court erred in not granting a motion for a new trial. Rabe v. State, 87 Cr. R. 497, 222 S. W. 1106.

In a prosecution for murder, where, after the jury retired, they stood ten for murder and two for manslaughter, an incidental remark by some one that if a man was convicted of manslaughter he could not thereafter be convicted of murder, was not such misconduct as would justify new trial under the statute. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

In a prosecution for forgery, where the jury considered testimony which had been withdrawn from their consideration, a new trial should have been granted. Stevenson v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 174.

In a prosecution for forgery, where the jury discussed the failure of defendant to testify, and the general reputation of the defendant, which had not been put in issue, a new trial should have been granted. Id.

Discretion of trial court and review.—Where on motion for new trial after full investigation court found upon conflicting evidence that jury did not misuse accused's failure to testify, such finding will not be disturbed. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

In prosecution for manslaughter, facts as to misconduct of jury held insufficient to justify disturbance of trial judge's finding that claim of misconduct did not call for new trial. Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 185, 206 S. W. 362.

A finding on motion for new trial as to improper discussion by the jurors will not be disturbed on appeal, unless it is clear that it is contrary to the evidence. Reese v. State, 87 Cr. R. 245, 220 S. W. 1096.

Findings by the trial court upon fact issues raised by testimony of jurors as to manner of arriving at verdict on motion for new trial are always upheld on appeal, unless it appears that the decision is manifestly wrong, under this article. Barnard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 365, 221 S. W. 293.

Evidence in general.—Where it is claimed in a criminal trial that the jury has violated art. 748, the burden is on the state to show by testimony other than that of the jurors that no injury has occurred. Mann v. State, 84 Cr. R. 109, 204 S. W. 434.

Affidavits and testimony of jurors as to misconduct.—It would be against public policy to permit impeachment of a verdict by testimony that after agreeing to the verdict a juror desired to retract. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 305, 199 S. W. 1113.

The discretion allowed the trial judge as to the method of ascertaining what occurred in the jury room is of such breadth that the fact that a leading question may have been asked would not furnish ground for reversal. Wood v. State, 84 Cr. R. 187, 206 S. W. 349.

The verdict cannot be impeached by affidavits of jurors that they or other jurors misunderstood the charge of the court. Bridges v. State, 88 Cr. R. 61, 224 S. W. 1097.

Testimony of jurors as to the deductions they drew from a remark of the county attorney on the trial was not admissible on motion for new trial, as proof thereof trenches upon the rule declaring them incompetent to impeach the verdict, under this article. Gonzales v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 405.

SUBD. 9

Conviction of degree of offense lower than that charged.—An indictment charging assault with intent to rape includes, though not describing the means used to commit the lesser offense, a charge of aggravated assault under arts. 771 and 772 and this subdivision. Cirul v. State, 83 Cr. R. 8, 200 S. W. 1088.

Judgment unsupported by verdict.—The objection that the verdict does not support the judgment is fundamental in view of art. 837, subd. 9, and article 853, and can be raised for first time on appeal without bill of exceptions. Moore v. State, 83 Cr. R. 302, 203 S. W. 51.

OTHER MATTERS RELATING TO NEW TRIALS

In general.—Refusal to grant new trial, when it was disclosed that one of the jurors who had rendered verdict of guilty of murder was an unpardoned convict, requires reversal of judgment, in view of arts. 692, 695, as to qualification of jurors. Russell v. State, 84 Tex. Cr. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

The special veniremen having been sworn individually as they were impaneled, the failure to swear them en masse was an irregularity not available when raised for the first time on motion for a new trial. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

Defendant, an ignorant negro, charged with aggravated assault, when asked by the prosecuting officer what he was going to do, said he slapped her and reckoned he was guilty, whereupon, in reply to the judge's inquiry, he stated that he would plead guilty, and the judge fixed a somewhat severe sentence, after prosecuting officer had stated that defendant was a bad negro and should have heavy punishment. Held, that the facts were insufficient to sustain waiver of jury trial, and defendant should have been granted a new trial. Wagner v. State, 87 Cr. R. 47, 219 S. W. 471.

Misconduct of third persons.—In prosecution for murder, demeanor of and remark by widow of deceased person to leading counsel for defendant while latter was closing his argument held not to require reversal, having been provoked by counsel himself. Watson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 115, 205 S. W. 662.

Where the district attorney and prosecuting officer threatened prosecutrix, a girl under 15 years of age, with a prosecution for perjury unless she repeated her testimony as given before court of inquiry and grand jury which she said was false and induced by coercion, and she was thus induced to testify, a conviction based thereon must be reversed. Venable v. State, 84 Cr. R. 354, 207 S. W. 520.

Defendant, convicted of aggravated assault and battery on his plea of guilty, and fined $100 and sentenced to 30 days' imprisonment, held not entitled to new trial on the ground that the prosecuting officer informed him through his lawyer that, if he would plead guilty to aggravated assault, the prosecution would be dismissed; the lawyer telling him that he did not know what his fine would be, but about $50 or $60 with costs. Franklin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 147, 215 S. W. 304.

Trial jury.—That defendant did not know that one of the jurors was not a householder or freeholder, and thereby subject to challenge at the time he was accepted, will not of itself require the granting of a new trial. Watson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 462, 199 S. W. 1098.

Review of rulings on motion.—See Ballew v. State, 82 Cr. R. 398, 199 S. W. 1109; notes to art. 938.

Art. 839. [819] Must be applied for within two days, except.

Time for filing.—Under this article, it is mandatory in misdemeanor cases that a motion for a new trial be filed within two days of conviction. Sessions v. State, 81 Cr. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

Under this article, it was error for the trial court, on an arbitrary rule of its own, not to hear evidence offered as justification for not filing within two days a motion for new trial, setting up misconduct of the jury. Kilpatrick v. State, 85 Cr. R. 172, 211 S. W. 230.

A showing that the verdict was returned on Saturday, that the following Monday was Christmas Eve, that the jurors when discharged departed to their various homes, that attorneys for accused and judge lived in different localities, and that the weather was inclement, was sufficient excuse for not filing a motion for new trial, setting up misconduct of the jury, within two days as prescribed by statute. Id.

Art. 840. [820] Motions for new trial shall be in writing.

Cited, Sessions v. State, 81 Cr. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

2. Statement of grounds.—The denial of defendant's application for continuance on the ground of absence of witnesses, residents of the county who were not summoned, will not be reviewed, where the motion for new trial did not complain of any injury or error in respect to them, and no affidavits of such witnesses were attached to the motion. Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

The Court of Criminal Appeals cannot consider a motion for new trial, not signed or sworn to, nor stating its facts in such a way as to make their truth a question to be considered, either by the trial court or the Court of Criminal Appeals. Hunter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 384, 216 S. W. 871.

6. — Charge of court.—In the absence of any statement of the grounds upon which defendant regarded his requested charge applicable, embraced within the exception to its refusal or the motion for new trial, the matter is not so presented as to demand attention on appeal in view of Acts 33d Leg. c. 138. Vaughn v. State, 84 Cr. R. 483, 208 S. W. 527.

Under art. 737a, as added by Acts 33d Leg. c. 138, to review denial of a special charge, either in the bill of exceptions or the motion for new trial there should be given the reasons appearing in the record why instruction should have been given. Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

6½. — Verdict contrary to law and evidence.—The charge and judgment showing that, before receiving the plea of guilty, on which defendant was convicted, he was admonished of the consequences of his plea, as required by art. 656, and defendant having merely filed a motion for new trial, alleging the judgment and verdict were contrary to the law and evidence, there is nothing to review. Kimball v. State, 84 Cr. R. 161, 205 S. W. 989.

7. — Newly discovered evidence.—Motion and affidavit for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence held too indefinite for consideration, and not within any rule authorizing a new trial for newly discovered evidence. Hays v. State, 83 Cr. R. 398, 204 S. W. 229.

9. Verification.—See Hunter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 384, 216 S. W. 871.

Under art. 837, subd. 6, motion for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence is properly overruled where it was not sworn to, affidavit of claimed witness and what she would testify is not attached, and failure to do so not explained, no evidence offered to support motion, no newly discovered facts, and no diligence shown. Waters v. State, 81 Cr. R. 491, 196 S. W. 536.

On motion on ground that defendant by his plea of guilty meant only that he killed deceased, and not that the homicide was unlawful, held, that motion should have been verified by affidavit or proof. Epperson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 245, 199 S. W. 478.

Grounds for new trial that appellant had been influenced to plead guilty under threats of other prosecutions cannot be considered in the absence of verification. Jackson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 181, 206 S. W. 192.

Motion must be sworn to by the party or his counsel. Young v. State, 86 Cr. R. 621, 218 S. W. 754.

Acknowledgment of motion must state that the person whose statement is being acknowledged was sworn or affirmed, or made such statement under oath or affirmation. Id.

Motion based on newly discovered evidence, alleging that the evidence was not known to accused or his counsel before the trial, must be verified by accused or his counsel, it being insufficient that the accompanying affidavit of the witness stated that he had not told accused or his counsel of his testimony, and had no reason to believe they knew of it. Andres v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 503.

Where a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is not sworn to, the appellate court cannot consider the motion. Fallon v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 170.

10. — Oath administered by attorney in case.—Refusal to grant a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence will not be considered on appeal, where the affidavits attached to the motion were sworn to before one of appellant's attorneys, and where the motion for the new trial was not duly sworn to. Steele v. State, 87 Cr. R. 588, 223 S. W. 473.

11. Amendment of motion.—The filing of an amended motion for new trial is generally within the sound discretion of the trial court. Alvarado v. State, 83 Cr. R. 181, 202 S. W. 322.

Under Bill of Rights, § 10, in view of section 29, an indictment, leaving out the words "by the" in the formal clause "by the authority of the state," held fatally defective, so that court erred in not allowing amended motion for new trial for alleged discovery that indictment had been amended by inserting such omitted words. Id.

12. Affidavits and other proofs in general.—See Waters v. State, 81 Cr. R. 491, 196 S. W. 536.

Affidavits made by accused in support of motion for new trial after such motion had been overruled will be stricken upon appeal. Jeffries v. State, 82 Cr. R. 42, 198 S. W. 778.

Though there was lack of diligence shown in application for continuance which justified trial court in overruling it, it, with affidavits supporting it, were proper factors to be considered on the motion for new trial. Eppison v. State, 82 Cr. R. 364, 198 S. W. 948.

Failure to attach supporting affidavit or evidence to motion for new trial for absence of witness does not absolve court from considering it, but bears on question whether refusal was reversible error. Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292.

Under arts. 840, 841, court was privileged to try motion for new trial on affidavits, declining to receive oral testimony. McConnell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 634, 200 S. W. 842.

Evidence not introduced by defendant charged with gaming on hearing of his motion to dismiss because suit was instituted in justice court, and was still pending therein, not offered until motion for new trial was heard, held introduced too late. Wrenn v. State, 82 Cr. R. 642, 200 S. W. 844.

To motion for new trial for refusal of continuance for absence of witness should be attached her affidavit that she would have testified as alleged. Hollis v. State, 83 Cr. R. 612, 204 S. W. 432.

Evidence, heard by court on motion for new trial on ground that indictment was not read to jury, held sufficient to sustain action of court in overruling motion. Trevino v. State, 83 Cr. R. 562, 204 S. W. 996.

Affidavit attached to motion for new trial is but a pleading, which authorizes introduction of supporting evidence, not being evidence itself, unless introduced as such on trial of motion in one of the ways specified. Lopez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 422, 208 S. W. 167.

In a prosecution for burglary, wherein an issue of insanity had been found against defendant, affidavits on a motion for new trial on that issue held to present evidence requiring a new trial notwithstanding that such evidence was, strictly speaking, not newly discovered evidence. Walker v. State, 86 Cr. R. 441, 216 S. W. 1085.

On a motion for new trial for error in refusing continuance for absent witness, a discrepancy between the affidavit of the absent witness, filed with the motion, and his testimony on the hearing of the motion, held a fact to be considered by the jury as bearing upon the credibility of his testimony, but not to authorize the trial judge to determine the issue of fact against the accused and deny the motion. Torez v. State, 86 Cr. R. 465, 217 S. W. 948.

13. Affidavits as to newly-discovered evidence.—An affidavit of only one witness to the effect that the main witness was hostile to accused was not sufficient to require the granting of a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence. Gerlich v. State, 86 Cr. R. 252, 216 S. W. 164.

An affidavit by accused alone that an absent witness would testify to threats by deceased, which accused testified were confirmed by a witness who was present, but which were denied by the dying declaration and by the witness who was present, do not establish the truth of the alleged testimony or the probability that it would affect the result sufficiently to show an abuse of discretion in denying the new trial. Bocknight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 428, 222 S. W. 259.

14. — By proposed witnesses.—See Waters v. State, 81 Cr. R. 491, 196 S. W. 536; Gill v. State, 84 Cr. R. 531, 208 S. W. 926.

Where testimony of absent witness as given in motion for new trial was different from that given in application for continuance, held, that failure to support motion by his affidavit or sworn statement prevented a review. Alexander v. State, 82 Cr. R. 431, 199 S. W. 292.

Failure to attach to motion, affidavit of the person whose testimony is alleged to have been newly discovered, renders motion insufficient. Gates v. State, 82 Cr. R. 603, 200 S. W. 397.

Where new trial is sought upon ground of newly discovered evidence, overruling of motion cannot be reviewed in absence of affidavits of purported new witnesses or satisfactory explanation of failure to produce them. Odom v. State, 82 Cr. R. 580, 200 S. W. 833.

New trial for newly discovered evidence is properly denied, where defendant failed to produce affidavits of absent witnesses on the hearing of the motion more than a month after conviction. Payne v. State, 84 Cr. R. 2, 204 S. W. 765.

Court did not abuse its discretion in denying a new trial for newly discovered evidence, where the motion was not accompanied by any affidavit of the new witnesses and a failure to produce them at the trial was not sufficiently accounted for. Patterson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 643, 215 S. W. 308.

Art. 841. [821] State may controvert truth of causes set forth.

See Lyons v. State (App.) 12 S. W. 740; Russell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 245, 209 S. W. 671.

Right of state in general to controvert grounds for new trial.—This article expressly allows state to take issue as to truth of causes set forth in motion for new trial. Jackson v. State, 81 Cr. R. 597, 196 S. W. 826.

Under this article, on motion for new trial based on overruling of motion for continuance because of absence of witness, state had right to show lack of diligence in procuring attendance of such witness. Mills v. State, 83 Cr. R. 515, 204 S. W. 642.

Effect of affidavits.—In a prosecution for maiming, an issue as to communicated threats made by prosecuting witness cannot be eliminated by an ex parte affidavit of the witness alleged to have communicated such threats, attached to the state's pleading denying the allegations contained in the motion for new trial, as affidavits attached to such a motion cannot be used as a substitute for testimony before the jury. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

Failure of state to take issue on motion.—When a motion for new trial, setting up newly discovered evidence, is properly sworn to, and the affidavits of the witnesses are attached, the same should be considered as properly before the trial court, and must be taken as true, unless the state sees fit to file its traverse under this article, and the court hears evidence upon the issue thus made. Washington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 652, 218 S. W. 1043.

Oral evidence.—By direct provision of statute, trial court may hear evidence on motion for new trial, either by affidavit or otherwise. Shipp v. State, 81 Cr. R. 323, 196 S. W. 840.

Under arts. 840, 841, court was privileged to try motion for new trial on affidavits, declining to receive oral testimony. McConnell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 634, 200 S. W. 842.

Scope of inquiry at hearing.—Inquiry into use made by jury of legitimate evidence is not proper on motion for new trial. Easley v. State, 82 Cr. R. 238, 199 S. W. 476.

Probable truth of testimony of absent witness may be looked into on motion for new trial, in connection with evidence adduced upon trial. Woods v. State, 83 Cr. R. 332, 203 S. W. 54.

Review of ruling on motion.—Where court tried motion for new trial on affidavits, declining to receive oral testimony, the only evidence which Court of Criminal Appeals can consider is affidavits and certified copies of records attached to motion and filed during term. McConnell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 634, 200 S. W. 842.

This article permits state to take issue with defendant on truth of grounds of motion for new trial, and when state does so, court hearing evidence and deciding against defendant, decision is conclusive on Court of Criminal Appeals, unless evidence on which trial judge acted is legally brought up for review. Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 185, 206 S. W. 362.

Where the statement in the motion for new trial that defendant had filed a plea of insanity was traversed as authorized by this article, and the record recited that the court heard evidence on the issue, but such evidence was not brought up on appeal, it must be presumed that the evidence supported the denial of the motion. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Where on motion for new trial on ground of misconduct of jury the evidence was conflicting, the trial judge's determination of the issue under provision of this article, will not be disturbed unless it appears to the appellate court that he had committed an error in his judgment thereon. Glenn v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 521.

Art. 843. [823] Effect of a new trial.

See Clark v. State, 23 Tex. App. 260, 5 S. W. 115.

Allusion to or consideration of former conviction.—In view of this article, held, defendant's counsel may not read to the court and jury the opinion of this court on a former appeal. Guest v. State, 24 Tex. App. 530, 7 S. W. 242.

In a prosecution for violating the local option law, evidence that defendant had been convicted before under the same statute in another case held prejudicial in view of this article, and of testimony by the jury that they had taken it into consideration. Mann v. State, 84 Cr. R. 109, 204 S. W. 434.

State's attorney's reply to defendant's objection to introduction of certain testimony, "the fact is the court of criminal appeals has held all of these facts and circumstances are admissible," was not an allusion in argument to the former conviction, inhibited by this article. Morris v. State, 84 Cr. R. 100, 206 S. W. 82.

The conduct of one or more of the jurors in mentioning, at a time when the jury stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal, that defendant had been previously tried, and that such trial had resulted in a mistrial because the jury stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal, held ground for reversal. Pierce v. State, 87 Cr. R. 379, 222 S. W. 565.

Art. 844. [824] When new trial is refused, statement of facts, etc.

State* (Cr. App.) 203 S. W. 901; Miller v. State (Cr. App.) 204 S. W. 334; Sweeney v. State, 84 Cr. R. 58, 205 S. W. 335; Wall v. State (Cr. App.) 215 S. W. 300; Petty v. State (Cr. App.) 198 S. W. 291; Amason v. State (Cr. App.) 208 S. W. 917; Dixon v. State, 86 Cr. R. 406, 216 S. W. 1097.

Where the indictment, charge, and record are in conformity with law, and there are no bills of exception or statement of facts, the judgment will be affirmed. Bailey v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 515 (third case); Ramirez v. State (Cr. App.) 222 S. W. 1106; Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 1096.

Where indictment appeared regular, and instructions were not complained of by any bill of exceptions, and record contains neither a statement of facts nor a bill of exceptions, nothing is presented for review, and judgment of lower court will be affirmed. Martinez v. State, 82 Cr. R. 404, 199 S. W. 629; Rodgers v. State, 82 Cr. R. 143, 198 S. W. 574.

Where court trying charge of burglary heard all testimony on appeal, in absence of statement of facts, there being nothing contrary in record, Court of Criminal Appeals must assume that defendant's claimed alibi as to particular night charged would have availed him nothing. Stegall v. State, 82 Cr. R. 117, 198 S. W. 311.

It is only through bills of exception, as required by art. 744, and the statement of facts provided for by art. 844, that the court is apprised of occurrences at the trial, and, in view of art. 938, court can consider as ground for reversal only matters presented for review as so required. Anselmo v. State, 82 Cr. R. 595, 200 S. W. 523.

In absence of statement of facts and no error appearing on the face of the record, nothing is presented which can be reviewed. Pierce v. State, 84 Cr. R. 334, 206 S. W. 936.

Where there was a motion to quash the venire on the grounds that a jury commissioner was not a freeholder in the county and that the commissioners were not residents of different portions of the county, and there is no statement of facts or bills of exception, and no exception was reserved, and the grounds are not verified or established by evidence, so far as shown by the record, conviction will be affirmed. Bowen v. State, 87 Cr. R. 657, 224 S. W. 776.

Where defendant charged with unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor pleaded guilty, and his punishment was fixed at the minimum penalty for such offense, the Court of Criminal Appeals will not consider his appeal, in absence of statement of facts or bills of exceptions, but will affirm the judgment. Armstrong v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 322.

Where the record contains no statement of facts, and the only bills of exceptions appearing are not signed or approved, and an examination of the indictment and charges show no error, and there is no error complained of in the motion for new trial which can be considered in the condition of the record, the judgment must be affirmed. Marshall v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1103.

Neither motion for new trial, statement of facts, nor bills of exceptions are necessary to give jurisdiction of appeal from conviction for robbery. Connell v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 502.

In the absence of a statement of facts, the presumption in favor of the regularity of the conviction is ordinarily not overcome, unless the bill of exceptions is drawn so as to demonstrate that the procedure complained of was calculated to injure defendant. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 161.

In the absence of a statement of facts, only fundamental errors will be considered, and every presumption will be allowed in favor of the regularity of the conviction, the court's charge, the sufficiency of the evidence, and the correctness of the court's rulings. Searcy v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 319.

Where evidence on hearing of motion for new trial was not preserved by bill of exceptions or statement of facts, it must be assumed that conclusions of trial judge that facts aliunde the record set up in motion were not sustained by evidence were correct. Berry v. State, 83 Cr. R. 210, 203 S. W. 901.

Art. 841, permits state to take issue with defendant on truth of grounds of motion for new trial, and when state does so, court hearing evidence and deciding against defendant, decision is conclusive on Court of Criminal Appeals, unless evidence on which trial judge acted is legally brought up for review. Alexander v. State, 84 Cr. R. 185, 206 S. W. 362.

Court of Criminal Appeals is not in position to pass on correctness of ruling of trial court in denying new trial based in part on newly discovered evidence, where evidence which influenced action of court is not preserved by bill of exceptions or statement of facts; presumption being that, if affidavits attached to motion were used in evidence, they were met by controverting facts supporting court's action. Mitchell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 25, 209 S. W. 743.

In the absence of a statement of facts, it is impossible to tell on appeal whether the court committed error in refusing continuance, for the absence of a witness, for even though diligence may have been used, and the testimony might be material from the face of the application, yet in the light of the testimony given it might appear that no error was committed in refusing the continuance, and the witness' testimony might not affect the result. Searcy v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 319.

8. — Incompetency of jurors.—A bill of exceptions to the overruling of challenges to a juror, who stated that he had at one time formed an impression, yet, if selected, could lay same aside and decide the case according to the law and the evidence, held to present no error in the absence of a sufficient statement of facts. Maguire v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 683.

Where there is no evidence in the record and no bill of exceptions reserved in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, the appellate court cannot review the proposition that the verdict was contrary to law and the evidence, in that the court erred in permitting a witness to state that defendant, previous to the assault, had cut his wife. Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 683.

State* (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 319.

State*, 84 Cr. R. 332, 206 S. W. 943.

18. Statement of facts where motion for new trial is not filed.—Arts. 744, 844, relative to bills of exceptions and statements of facts, and other statutes providing the requisites of bills of exceptions and statements of facts, constitute the statutory means in criminal cases for bringing questions before the appellate court for review, and a motion for a new trial is unnecessary, except as to questions not raised by bills of exceptions or statement of facts. Sessions v. State, 81 Cr. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

See, also, notes to art. 846.

22. Approval, signing and authentication.—A statement of fact, though in form an agreed statement, but not signed by the prosecuting attorney, bearing a certificate signed by the judge: "The above examined, found correct, approved, and order filed as a statement of facts"—is sufficient. Miles v. State, 82 Cr. R. 489, 200 S. W. 153.

State*, 87 Cr. R. 284, 221 S. W. 282.

Where there is a conflict between the bill of exceptions and the statement of facts, the court on appeal will treat the bill as correctly reflecting the record. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 131, 205 S. W. 943.

26. Adoption of statement in other case.—Where two persons are indicted separately for complicity in the same crime and are tried simultaneously and identical transcripts in each case with but one statement of facts filed, the appellate court will treat the record not containing the statement of facts as being before it without such statement, as the record must be complete in each case. Patterson v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 763.

Where, the court adjourned July 20, 1918, after granting defendant 60 days from adjournment in which to file statement of facts and bills of exception, and before the expiration of such time granting an additional 30 days, a statement of fact and bills of exception filed October 19, 1918, were not within the 90-day period, and will not be considered. White v. State, 85 Cr. R. 23, 210 S. W. 199.

Where court adjourned in late August and appellant was given 30 days after adjournment for filing of bill of exceptions and statement of facts, and on September 16th was given an additional 30 days, and on October 11th secured order granting him "30 days additional from and after September 16th," bill of exceptions and statement of facts filed on November 4th will be considered; the final order, if literally construed, curtailing time granted by previous order. Clark v. State, 85 Cr. R. 153, 210 S. W. 544.

The court cannot, where defendant failed to file statement of facts and bills of exception within the time limited or to procure an extension, thereafter grant an extension, for an order granted after expiration of time is unavailing. Hart v. State, 86 Cr. R. 653, 218 S. W. 1054.

The motion of the Attorney General to strike from the files defendant's bills of exceptions, filed more than 90 days after the judgment, and which showed that the filing date had been corrected after the transcript was prepared for certification, will be denied where the corrected record showed that the time for filing the bills of exceptions had been duly extended, and that the bills were filed within such time, regardless of which filing date was correct. Mathason v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 548.

15. Effect of failure to present and file in time.—Bills of exception preserving facts relating to testimony heard on the motion for new trial, not being filed as required during the term, must be disregarded. Miles v. State, 82 Cr. R. 439, 200 S. W. 158; Williams v. State, 83 Cr. R. 26, 201 S. W. 188; Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014; Bogus v. State, 83 Cr. R. 356, 203 S. W. 597; Hart v. State, 87 Cr. R. 55, 219 S. W. 821.

Statement of facts introduced upon motion for new trial, where not filed during the trial term, will not be considered by the Court of Criminal Appeals under this article. Cates v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 953; Flores v. State, 81 Cr. R. 445, 195 S. W. 1150; Cooley v. State, 83 Cr. R. 340, 203 S. W. 356; McClendon v. State, 84 Cr. R. 259, 206 S. W. 686.

Under this article, the court is not authorized to consider bills of exception filed after the expiration of 90 days allowed by the court from the expiration of the term. White v. State, 84 Cr. R. 545, 210 S. W. 200; Washington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 327, 216 S. W. 869.

Bill of exception, disclosing facts on which rests contention that jury received evidence in its retirement, not having been filed during term, cannot be considered on appeal from conviction of murder. Martinez v. State, 81 Cr. R. 627, 197 S. W. 872.

Statement of facts containing testimony heard on motion for new trial and bill of exceptions based thereon, filed after adjournment of court, cannot be considered. Gray v. State, 82 Cr. R. 27, 197 S. W. 990.

A bill of exceptions, not filed in the time prescribed by this article, as extended by the district court by an order appearing in the record, must be disregarded. King v. State, 82 Cr. R. 145, 198 S. W. 782.

Where evidence heard on motions is contained in bill of exceptions filed after the term, it must be conclusively presumed it justified the court's action. Bogus v. State, 83 Cr. R. 356, 203 S. W. 597.

Under this article, a bill of exception filed more than two months after the court had adjourned for the term cannot be considered. Mirick v. State, 83 Cr. R. 388, 204 S. W. 222.

A purported statement of evidence heard on motion for new trial, not agreed to by attorneys or approved by court, and not filed until nearly three months after court adjourned, cannot be considered on appeal. Green v. State, 84 Cr. R. 162, 205 S. W. 988.

Where the term at which the trial was had ended May 25th, and time was extended until June 24th to file bill of exceptions, a bill of exceptions filed September 6th will not be considered. Howard v. State, 84 Cr. R. 253, 206 S. W. 525.

A statement of facts in a misdemeanor case cannot be considered on appeal, where not approved or filed until October 12th; term having ended August 3d. Grayson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 337, 206 S. W. 943.

Where the court heard evidence on a motion, in a murder trial, to quash a special venire and denied the motion, to which appellant excepted, but did not file his bill setting up the evidence until long after adjournment of that court term it cannot be considered on appeal. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

A statement of facts, which was not filed until one year and a half after the adjournment of the court term, cannot be considered. Erwin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 71, 219 S. W. 827.

See, also, notes to art. 844a.

18. — Striking statement or bill from record.—Where bills of exception are not filed within the time allowed, and no additional time is granted, a motion to strike must be granted. Harris v. State, 83 Cr. R. 301, 202 S. W. 958; Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 534, 197 S. W. 589; Lay v. State, 82 Cr. R. 202, 198 S. W. 291.

Where the court adjourned August 25th, and the statement of facts and bill of exceptions were not filed until November 24th, the statement will be stricken, being filed 91 days after adjournment. Sweeney v. State, 84 Cr. R. 58, 205 S. W. 335.

19. — Deprivation of statement of facts as ground for reversal.—Showing as to cause of failure to have statement of facts held not to establish diligence, entitling accused to reversal. Vastine v. State, 84 Cr. R. 214, 206 S. W. 191.

Where, through no want of diligence, appellant, on appeal in a misdemeanor case, is unable to obtain in due time a statement of facts from the judge, the judgment of conviction will be reversed. Evans v. State, 84 Cr. R. 577, 209 S. W. 147.

Where counsel for accused did not learn of the nonacceptance of his bill of exceptions by the court until five days after its presentment, or two days before adjournment, and was given no opportunity to have it authenticated by bystanders, such bill containing no indorsement of the court's refusal and no suggested corrections, accused was erroneously deprived of his bill, and the appellate court will either consider the original bill or reverse the case. Kilpatrick v. State, 85 Cr. R. 172, 211 S. W. 230.

20. Diligence and matters excusing failure to file in time.—An appellant in a murder trial who handed his statement of facts and bills of exception to the trial judge two days before the expiration of 90 days from the termination of the term, held not sufficient diligence to excuse appellant on the judge's failure to file the papers within the time required. Carpenter v. State, 83 Cr. R. 87, 201 S. W. 996.

Where stenographer, owing to shortage of help, failed to prepare statement of facts within required time, in order to bring accused within rule of diligence, he must have resorted to some means at hands of judge to compel stenographer to make out statement of facts within time. Vastine v. State, 84 Cr. R. 214, 206 S. W. 191.

Where stenographer fails to prepare transcript of evidence, necessary to enable defendant to prepare statement of facts and bills of exception, defendant should apply for mandamus to compel the preparation thereof, and if he does not do so, and the statement and the bills are not prepared within the time allowed, defendant has not exercised sufficient diligence. Hart v. State, 86 Cr. R. 653, 218 S. W. 1054.

Where the affidavits of accused that the statement of facts was presented to the trial judge within the time fixed by law for the approval and filing thereof were not controverted, the statement can be considered on appeal, though not filed until 18 months after adjournment of the term. Erwin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 71, 219 S. W. 827.

Where the statement of facts was not filed within the 90 days requisite in order to entitle it to consideration, and an affidavit of the trial judge assumed all responsibility for the delay on account of the pressure of business and sufficiently exonerated defendant from any want of diligence, and the statement of facts was agreed to and certified by the judge to be correct, it should be considered on appeal. Davis v. State, 87 Cr. R. 425, 222 S. W. 236.

In a prosecution for murder, where the evidence covers 37 pages of typewritten matter, in the absence of a contrary showing, it would appear that the evidence could have been prepared in a few hours and the absence of bill of exceptions showing the evidence is not thereby justified. Fowler v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 515.

Art. 845a. [Superseded.]

Explanatory.—Superseded by Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 47, § 1, amending Acts 1911, ch. 119, § 8 (as such section was amended by Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 189; Acts 1917, 35th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 27; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 79; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 111), so as to read as set forth in art. 1925, Civil Statutes, ante. The amendatory act makes no provision for a poverty affidavit, and hence that privilege seems to be taken away, except as to the Third, Thirty-Ninth and Fiftieth judicial districts, as to which districts there is a special act of a later date, set forth as art. 1925b, Civil Statutes, ante.

Affidavit of inability to pay.—Under Acts 32d Leg. c. 119, §§ 5, 8, 9, and 14 (Civ. St. arts. 1924, 1925, 2071, 1926, 1933), official court stenographer upon application of a defendant who had been defended by his own attorney alleging his inability to pay for transcript or to give security therefor would be directed to prepare a transcript of his notes and to file them with clerk of district court. Ex parte Fread, 83 Cr. R. 465, 204 S. W. 113.

Art. 845b. Duty of shorthand reporter to make transcript of evidence on request.

Cited, Ex parte Fread, 83 Cr. R. 465, 204 S. W. 113.

Art. 846. Shorthand reporter shall keep stenographic record; condensation, etc.

Cited, Ex parte Fread, 83 Cr. R. 465, 204 S. W. 113.

In general.—Where a petition for mandamus shows that appellant in a murder prosecution at the proper time and in the proper way moved to have the judge of the trial court command the reporter to make out a proper report of the testimony, which the court refused, and to which defendant excepted, the petition will be granted. Ellis v. State, 85 Cr. R. 529, 213 S. W. 264.

If defendant does not avail himself of the official stenographic record of trial, which should show exactly his objection or exception, he should at least present to the trial court a bill so embodying the substance of the matter that in fairness and in compliance with the direction of the statute the trial judge may be able to compare it with the stenographic account, and decline to approve the bill and file a correct one in place thereof. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772.

Condensation.—Statement of facts wholly in question and answer form will be stricken on appeal. Kitchens v. State, 83 Cr. R. 324, 203 S. W. 768; Ferguson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 272, 202 S. W. 733; Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 511, 204 S. W. 366; Thomas v. State, 85 Cr. R. 42, 210 S. W. 201; Emberline v. State, 85 Cr. R. 399, 212 S. W. 952.

A statement of facts in question and answer form is not a statement of facts within art. 844c, and cannot be considered on appeal. King v. State, 82 Cr. R. 145, 193 S. W. 782.

ARREST OF JUDGMENT

Article 847. [825] Definition of "motion in arrest of judgment."
Cited, Victor v. State, 86 Cr. R. 462, 217 S. W. 698.

Art. 848. [826] Must be made in two days, etc.

In general.—A motion in arrest of judgment must be filed within two days after conviction under this article. Burnett v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 239.

Art. 849. [827] Shall be granted for what cause.

In general.—Under this article, and art. 575, the validity of the statute creating the trial court cannot be attacked by motion in arrest of judgment. Victor v. State, 86 Cr. R. 462, 217 S. W. 698.

Defects in indictment, information or complaint.—It is too late after verdict on a motion to arrest judgment to complain that an indictment is bad for duplicity. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 534, 197 S. W. 589.

Failure of indictment under Penal Code, arts. 1421, 1422, for swindling, to state the name of the particular person to whom the false representation was made, cannot be questioned after verdict, under this article. Fruitt v. State, 83 Cr. R. 148, 202 S. W. 81.

In a prosecution under the prohibition law, objection on motion in arrest of judgment, claiming that court did not have jurisdiction because date of prohibition election was not alleged in indictment, was too late. Stone v. State, 84 Cr. R. 280, 206 S. W. 940.

An objection to a complaint for misdemeanor because the body of the complaint states that it is made by a different person than the one named in the jurat, though sufficient on motion to quash, comes too late on motion in arrest of judgment; the mistake being amendable. Stockton v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 514.

A judgment need not be arrested for the failure of the complaint to state, "In the name and by the authority of the state of Texas," where the prosecution was on an information based on the complaint, and the information contained that statement, though, if the prosecution had been based on the complaint itself, it would have been fatally defective. Bell v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 317.

Where information and complaint under the Juvenile Act charged seven distinct felonies in as many counts without specifying in six of them that defendant was under 17 years of age, but there was no motion to quash and no steps taken in regard thereto until after judgment convicting defendant as a juvenile, a motion in arrest of judgment was too late. Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

Complaint and information charging misdemeanor theft without alleging that the property charged to have been stolen was "fraudulently" taken was defective in substance, and such defects may be raised by motion in arrest of judgment or in the Court of Criminal Appeals for the first time. Phillips v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 400.

Variance between complaint and information.—A variance between the complaint and information for a misdemeanor as to the time of the offense is a matter of substance and can be raised by motion in arrest of judgment. Stockton v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 514.

Where defendant's name in a criminal complaint was spelled "Estreada," and in the information first as "Estrada" and subsequently as "Esteada" and "Estreada," the variance was not such as to be the subject of a motion in arrest of judgment. Estrada v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 685.

Art. 851. [829] Effect of arresting a judgment.

See Thompkins v. State, 87 Cr. R. 502, 222 S. W. 1103.

1. IN CASES OF FELONY

Article 853. [831] Definition of "judgment."

See Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380; Thompkins v. State, 87 Cr. R. 502, 222 S. W. 1103.

Cited, Woods v. State, 26 Tex. App. 490, 10 S. W. 108.

In general.—Failure of judgment from which appeal is taken to contain requisites of final judgment, required by this article, is fatal to the appeal. McCuin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 497, 217 S. W. 1038.

Form and requisites of judgment.—Under subdivision 3 of this article, a judgment which fails to show the plea is void, and no sentence can be pronounced thereon. Pate v. State, 21 Tex. App. 191, 17 S. W. 461.

Where record showed, "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty and assess his punishment. * * * G. Foreman"—followed by an order adjudging him guilty as found by the jury, etc., there was no such judgment shown to have been entered as is required by this article, where it failed to show that appellant entered any plea, or that a jury was impaneled, or any of such preliminary matters required by such statute. Hellman v. State, 87 Cr. R. 460, 222 S. W. 980.

The judgment reciting that defendant pleaded guilty and thereupon was admonished by the court of the consequences, but persisted in the plea, and, it plainly appearing that defendant is sane, the plea was accepted, sufficiently shows the court's finding that defendant was sane. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

One convicted under the Dean Act should be adjudged guilty of manufacturing, selling, etc., intoxicating liquor, not for medicinal, sacramental, or scientific purposes, and judgment and sentence should specify the particular acts for which the accused has been convicted, and a sentence and judgment for violating the "state-wide intoxicating liquor prohibition law" were defective, although Acts 4th Called Sess. 35th Leg. (1913) c. 24, is denominated by compiler as "State-Wide Intoxicating Liquor Prohibition." Carr v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 405.

Conformity to indictment, verdict, or other parts of record.—The objection that the verdict does not support the judgment is fundamental, in view of art. 837, subd. 9, and this article, and can be raised for first time on appeal without bill of exceptions. Moore v. State, 83 Cr. R. 302, 203 S. W. 51.

Record of judgment.—The appellate court acquires no jurisdiction of an appeal where the record does not show entry of a judgment in compliance with this article. Hellman v. State, 87 Cr. R. 460, 222 S. W. 980.

Correction of judgment.—If the proper place of confinement is not designated in a judgment finding one guilty of being a delinquent child, it may be corrected upon a motion for new trial or on appeal. Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380.

What constitutes final judgment.—Under this article, where the record on appeal only recites the return of the verdict, and judgment thereon, it does not disclose a final judgment from which an appeal will lie. Dowell v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 407.

In view of Const. art. 5, § 5, and Code Cr. Proc. arts. 853, 894, judgment dismissing prosecution held not appealable on behalf of accused. Ryan v. State, 81 Cr. R. 632, 198 S. W. 582.

Art. 854. [832] Definition of "sentence."

Cited, Ex parte Moseley, 30 Tex. App. 338, 17 S. W. 418.

Art. 856. [834] In cases of appeal, sentence shall be pronounced.

See Arcia v. State, 26 Tex. App. 193, 9 S. W. 685.

Cited, Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 40; Ryan v. State, 81 Cr. R. 632, 198 S. W. 582.

Judgment including sentence prerequisite to appeal.—See Dowdell v. State, 85 Cr. R. 472, 213 S. W. 649; Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380; Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 156, 157, 158, 159, 160; Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 826; notes to art. 929.

Court of Criminal Appeals has no jurisdiction of appeal where no sentence has been pronounced. Carrell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 536, 204 S. W. 334.

There is no right of appeal from a conviction if suspended sentence is awarded because of the want of a "final judgment," which is the sentence pronounced by the court upon the verdict. Thomas v. State, 87 Cr. R. 153, 219 S. W. 1100.

The "sentence" is the final judgment in a criminal case, and is necessary to the jurisdiction of the Court of Criminal Appeals over the appeal in a felony case, so that the appeal must be dismissed where the record does not show the sentence. Thompkins v. State, 87 Cr. R. 502, 222 S. W. 1103, motion to reinstate appeal denied, 87 Cr. R. 502, 224 S. W. 687.

Art. 862. [840] Two or more convictions of same defendant at same term.—When the same defendant has been convicted in two or more cases, and the punishment assessed in each case is confinement in the penitentiary or the county jail for a term of imprisonment, judgment and sentence shall be pronounced in each case in the same manner as if there had been but one conviction, except that in the discretion of the court, the judgment in the second and subsequent convictions may either be that the punishment shall begin when the judgment and sentence in the preceding conviction have ceased to operate, or that the punishment shall run concurrently with the other case or cases, and sentence and execution shall be accordingly. [Acts 1883, p. 8; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 20, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Application and purpose of article.—That accused has appealed from a previous conviction, and that the appeal has not been decided, does not prevent the imposition of a cumulative sentence on a subsequent trial for another offense as authorized by this article. Alsop v. State, 84 Cr. R. 208, 206 S. W. 345.

1½. INDETERMINATE AND SUSPENDED SENTENCES

Art. 865a. Indeterminate sentences of persons convicted of certain felonies.

See McLaren v. State, 82 Cr. R. 449, 199 S. W. 811; Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 57.

Reformation of judgment in appellate court.—Where the trial court on conviction for murder failed to apply this law, the judgment entering the sentence will be reformed so that it will provide for confinement in the state penitentiary within the period fixed by law as the minimum and maximum penalty for the offense. Wright v. State, 84 Cr. R. 352, 207 S. W. 99.

Art. 865b. Suspended sentence.

See Waters v. State, 81 Cr. R. 491, 196 S. W. 536; Williams v. State, 83 Cr. R. 26, 201 S. W. 188; Burnett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 97, 201 S. W. 409; Wilson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 148, 210 S. W. 802; notes to arts. 865c, 865e.

Time for application.—The expression "when the trial begins" within this article, means the announcement of ready for trial by both parties. Wilson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 148, 210 S. W. 802.

Where attorney for defendant did not announce himself ready for trial, and did not know that court entered on his docket an announcement of ready for both parties, but began preparation of an application for a suspended sentence, the application should have been permitted, and the question submitted to the jury. Id.

Right to suspension.—The right of suspended sentence is a substantial one, and should not be taken from the defendant in any case where he reasonably brings himself within the terms of the law and presents his application. Wilson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 148, 210 S. W. 802.

Crimes included in act.—See Ex parte Wilson, 85 Cr. R. 554, 213 S. W. 984.

Under Vernon's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. 1916, arts. 1195, 1197, the suspended sentence law held applicable to juvenile delinquency proceedings. Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520; Hogue v. State (Cr. App.) 220 S. W. 96.

"Accomplice to arson" is not "arson" within this article, and where the verdict on trial for "accomplice to arson" so directs, a suspended sentence should be granted. Martin v. State, 82 Cr. R. 199, 198 S. W. 956.

Under this article, it is only burglary of a private residence, and not burglary of a storehouse, which prevents the imposition of a suspended sentence. Ditto v. State, 83 Cr. R. 220, 202 S. W. 735.

Appellant having been convicted of murder, and the suspended sentence law not applying to that offense, the holding of the trial court that his application for submission of issue as to suspended sentence came too late could have resulted in no harm. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

There can be no suspended sentence following a murder conviction. Grissom v. State, 87 Cr. R. 465, 222 S. W. 237.

One being tried for being in unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor under the Dean Act is entitled to have the issue of suspended sentence submitted to the jury under this article. Carr v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 405.

Effect of previous conviction or prosecution.—Where trial took place in February, and accused sought to avail himself of this article, the court did not err in declining to submit such matter to the jury, where in October preceding the trial accused had been convicted of a felony, and his punishment fixed at two years in the penitentiary, with a suspension of sentence; it not appearing that there was any appeal from the prior conviction. Carter v. State, 88 Cr. R. 28, 224 S. W. 890.

Where defendant did not seek the suspension of his sentence, the pendency of another case against him alleged to have been founded on fictitious allegations, and the indictment found to prevent a suspended sentence, would be harmless, unless used against him, and the pendency of such indictment would be no impediment to his availing himself of the suspended sentence law. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 525.

Effect of suspension.—Where a suspended sentence is awarded by the jury in a criminal case, there is no final conviction under Pen. Code, art. 1620, authorizing enhanced punishment for former convictions of like offenses. Brittian v. State, 85 Cr. R. 491, 214 S. W. 351.

Art. 865c. Testimony as to defendant's reputation and criminal history.

See Ex parte Coots, 85 Cr. R. 334, 212 S. W. 173; notes to art. 865e.

Necessity and sufficiency of application by accused.—That failure to suspend sentence may be complained of on appeal, the record must show defendant's application for suspension necessary under this article. Lozano v. State, 83 Cr. R. 597, 204 S. W. 323.

Waiver of application.—An application for suspended sentence may be waived. Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095; Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520.

Submission of matter to jury.—Where defendant offers no testimony that she has never been convicted of felony, the refusal of the court to submit a charge on suspended sentence is proper under arts. 865b and 865c. Waters v. State, 81 Cr. R. 491, 196 S. W. 536.

Law accords accused right to have jury pass upon her plea for suspended sentence when filed in proper time. Fernandez v. State, 82 Cr. R. 129, 198 S. W. 301.

Proof as to prior reputation.—See Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 57.

Where a plea for suspended sentence is filed and the defendant takes stand in her own behalf, the state may, on cross-examination, prove her character, and the number of times she has been arrested for different offenses. Waters v. State, 81 Cr. R. 491, 196 S. W. 536.

Testimony that general reputation of defendant in community in which he lived is that he sells intoxicants was admissible on issue of suspended sentence, in view of this article. White v. State, 82 Cr. R. 286, 199 S. W. 1117.

Under plea for suspended sentence, the accused's character at the time of trial being under investigation, evidence is not limited to time preceding offense, but may include evidence of character at the time of trial. Williams v. State, 83 Cr. R. 26, 201 S. W. 188.

Where one convicted of murder made plea for suspended sentence under arts. 865b, 865c, witnesses could testify to various misdemeanors of accused for which she was arrested. Id.

In prosecution for assault to murder, evidence that ten years before assault defendant had a difficulty in another state, shooting a man, was too remote and inadmissible on question of right to suspension of sentence and to impeach defendant's reputation for veracity. Bolin v. State, 83 Cr. R. 590, 204 S. W. 335.

Evidence that, four or five years before, defendant and another had a fight at a baseball game and that both pleaded guilty in justice court and paid a fine, was inadmissible for such purposes. Id.

In a prosecution for burglary in which automobile tires were taken from a garage, it was error to admit evidence as to the disappearance of another automobile tire at a different time and different place. Sweeney v. State, 84 Cr. R. 58, 205 S. W. 335.

In prosecution of bank president for having murdered state commissioner of banking, testimony of defendant, elicited by cross-examination as to his indictment in 19 cases charging him with forgery in another county, etc., held admissible. Watson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 115, 205 S. W. 662.

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence that there were found in defendant's possession various articles such as are kept in grocery stores, and that he stated part had come from the burglarized store, in so far as relating to other burglaries committed by defendant held admissible. Hayes v. State, 85 Cr. R. 433, 213 S. W. 664.

Defendant, being prosecuted for theft, by asking for a suspended sentence, put his reputation in issue, and there was no error in allowing the state to prove that he had been convicted for playing poker. McCormick v. State, 86 Cr. R. 366, 216 S. W. 871.

Where a defendant seeks to prove a good reputation as a peaceable, law-abiding citizen, the state may prove his bad reputation, and, if defendant becomes a witness, he puts in issue his reputation for truth and veracity, while, if he moves for a suspended sentence, he opens generally the issue of his reputation. Alexander v. State, 86 Cr. R. 606, 218 S. W. 752.

Where defendant filed his plea for a suspended sentence, and evidence was admitted on behalf of the state attacking defendant's reputation and tending to show him guilty of other offenses, the court erred in failing to limit the purpose for which such evidence was admitted. Bride v. State, 86 Cr. R. 535, 218 S. W. 762.

While this article allows the state to prove the general reputation of defendant, where the issue of suspended sentence is presented by him, it is to be proved, as before, not by specific acts of misconduct but by competent evidence to show whether his reputation is good or bad, and specific acts become available only when pertinent on cross-examination. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 305, 221 S. W. 607.

In a murder trial, testimony by a witness that defendant in talking about honor said, "There is no such thing as honor, for any man will swear a lie if it is to his own interest," held inadmissible to show character. Strahan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 324, 221 S. W. 976.

Testimony by a witness that defendant refused to pay $15 for the hire of a mule held inadmissible upon defendant's reputation under such plea. Id.

Evidence that defendant had accused a third party of stealing his corn, and that defendant said he went out two or three times to kill such third person, although he did not go, held inadmissible on the question of defendant's reputation and character on such plea. Id.

In prosecution for homicide evidence that defendant had cut the buggy tires of the deceased was admissible on defendant's plea for suspended sentence, such evidence of other offenses not being limited to those involving moral turpitude. Hollman v. State, 87 Cr. R. 576, 223 S. W. 206.

Where defendant in homicide prosecution sought the benefit of the suspended sentence law, the inquiry as to defendant's reputation should relate to the time of the trial. Wagley v. State, 87 Cr. R. 504, 224 S. W. 687.

In a homicide prosecution, where six or seven acquaintances of defendant testified, and where the state in open court without limitation had admitted that defendant's reputation for peaceableness and veracity was good, court's refusal to hear further testimony as to defendant's reputation was not error, even though defendant had sought the benefit of the suspended sentence law. Id.

In such prosecution, exclusion of defendant's testimony that during the 2½ years subsequent to the killing he had been engaged in only legitimate occupations, had kept out of trouble and had provided for his family, held proper, such testimony being evidence of specific acts showing good conduct, and not merely his reputation. Id.

In murder prosecution, where defendant had filed a plea for suspended sentence, testimony that he had been in jail for shooting another negro, and had been convicted of aggravated assault, and had been connected with other misdemeanors, such as gambling, held admissible. Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105.

Refusal of court to permit evidence on the issue of suspended sentence could not have harmed an accused, where the verdict assessed imprisonment exceeding five years, a penalty above the term that would permit the suspended sentence law to operate, under this article. Cundiff v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 412.

An essential element in the suspended sentence statute is that which requires that there be proof that the accused has not previously been convicted of a felony. Id.

An honorable discharge from service in the war with Germany signed by United States officers under whose command accused served is admissible in a proper case upon the issue of suspended sentence. Id.

Where defendant, charged with selling an automobile, applied for a suspended sentence, the testimony of the sheriff as to collecting and paying fines to another sheriff who was holding defendant for using the automobile without license numbers was not error, though the complaints, informations, or indictments were not introduced; it appearing that defendant knew of the charges, authorized the payment of the fines, and told the sheriff how much he owed, and the evidence having been limited to the question of suspension of sentence. Clowers v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 226.

It is a rule of practice in all cases to allow the accused to prove his general good character in the community in which he lives as a peaceable law-abiding citizen, and when application is made for suspended sentence such evidence is in terms made pertinent by this article, and in a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, where such application was made, the court erred in sustaining an objection to the question, "Are and were you acquainted with the general reputation of the defendant in the community in which he has lived for being a peaceable law-abiding citizen?" Freddy v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 533.

In a prosecution for manslaughter through killing of defendant's paramour, defendant's army discharge, containing no statement relative to his general reputation or prior conviction of felony, was properly excluded, when offered by him as evidence tending to prove good character, as affecting his application for suspended sentence. Mobley v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 531.

Instructions.—Although a charge was erroneous regarding recommendations for suspension of sentence, it was harmless where the sentence assessed was beyond the limit touched by art. 865d. Morris v. State, 82 Cr. R. 13, 198 S. W. 141.

An instruction concerning suspended sentence held not erroneous as placing an undue limitation upon testimony introduced with reference to defendant's reputation. Gilbert v. State, 84 Cr. R. 616, 209 S. W. 658.

Since law of suspended sentences authorizes jury to consider whether accused has borne a good reputation, it is proper for court to instruct jury that they might consider such reputation for that purpose, as otherwise they would not be aware of this phase of the law. Id.

Recommendation by jury.—Where the lower court has wrongfully refused to suspend sentence in accordance with the verdict, the sentence on appeal will be reversed, with instructions to enter judgment suspending the sentence and take accused's recognition and discharge him. Martin v. State, 82 Cr. R. 199, 198 S. W. 956.

Where one accused of hog theft pleads guilty and prays for a suspended sentence, whether such sentence will be awarded is exclusively within the discretion of the jury, whose decision will not be reversed. Skelton v. State, 84 Cr. R. 193, 206 S. W. 346.

Reference to application in argument.—In a prosecution for assault to murder, where the case was submitted solely on the question of aggravated assault, a statement by the prosecutor that, if defendant had not been guilty, his attorney would not have filed an application for a suspended sentence, is reversible error, when the court failed to instruct the jury to disregard the statement. Tamaya v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 146.

Appealability of order for suspended sentence.—There is no right of appeal from a conviction if suspended sentence is awarded because of the want of a "final judgment," which is the sentence pronounced by the court upon the verdict. Thomas v. State, 87 Cr. R. 153, 219 S. W. 1100.

Conviction affecting competency as witness.—While, under arts. 865b and 865e, trial court would have no authority to suspend sentence of accused, convicted of felony in seven separate cases, he, not having been sentenced, was not disqualified as a witness, under art. 788, as to disqualification after conviction of felony. Burnett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 97, 201 S. W. 409.

Art. 865d. Form of judgment; "good behavior" defined.

See Morris v. State, 82 Cr. R. 13, 198 S. W. 141; Ex parte Coats, 85 Cr. R. 334, 212 S. W. 173; Carter v. State, 88 Cr. R. 28, 224 S. W. 890.

Art. 865e. Conviction of other felony; pronouncement of sentence.

See Carter v. State, 88 Cr. R. 28, 224 S. W. 890.

Conviction affecting competency as witness.—See Burnett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 97, 201 S. W. 409; notes to art. 865c.

Effect of expiration of sentence.—Under arts. 865c, 865e, and in view of arts. 865d, 865g, as well as Pen. Code, art. 2, one convicted of a felony, whose sentence is suspended, cannot, after the period of suspended sentence has expired, be imprisoned on that sentence because of a later charge of another felony, for that would violate the purpose of the statute. Ex parte Coats, 85 Cr. R. 334, 212 S. W. 173.

Art. 865g. Pendency of other charge; extension of suspension period.

See Ex parte Coats, 85 Cr. R. 334, 212 S. W. 173.

2. JUDGMENT IN CASES OF MISDEMEANOR

Art. 867. [845] Judgment when the punishment is fine only.

Form and requisites of judgment.—An appeal from a conviction of receiving stolen property of less than $50 in value will be dismissed, where the record disclosed nothing except the verdict, for no appeal will be considered until final judgment has been rendered, and the mere verdict was not a "final judgment" in a misdemeanor case within arts. 867 and 868. Donegan v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 166.

Attacking judgment on habeas corpus.—The validity of a judgment of conviction of a misdemeanor imposing a fine, which omits to order the issuance of an execution as provided hereby cannot be assailed on habeas corpus proceedings brought by the defendant. Ex parte Dickerson, 30 Tex. App. 448, 17 S. W. 1076.

Art. 868. [846] Judgment when the punishment is other than fine.

See Donegan v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 166; notes to art. 867.

Article 894. [872] Defendant may appeal.

Cited, Gibson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 435, 203 S. W. 893.

Application in general.—See Ex parte McLoud, 82 Cr. R. 299, 200 S. W. 394.

Arts. 894, 895, relating to appeals, being general, do not control the provisions of a special law relating to appeals from one particular court. Ex parte Bennett, 85 Cr. R. 315, 211 S. W. 934.

Nature of right.—There is no such thing as a right of appeal, except as the same may be conferred by the body of laws made up by the Constitution and legislative enactments; and, being wholly derived therefrom, such right moves only in channels fixed by such legal direction. Ex parte Bennett, 85 Cr. R. 315, 211 S. W. 934.

Decisions reviewable in general.—In view of Const. art. 5, § 5, and Code Cr. Proc. arts. 853, 894, judgment dismissing prosecution held not appealable on behalf of accused. Ryan v. State, 81 Cr. R. 632, 198 S. W. 582.

In view of Const. art. 5, §§ 1, 22, Civ. St. arts. 903, 904, 921, and Code Cr. Proc. arts. 101, 894, 897, an appeal may be taken to county court from corporation court, upon conviction of violation of a city ordinance, nor constituting an offense defined by the Penal Code. Taylor County v. Jarvis (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 405.

One charged with the unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquors who has entered a plea of guilty and has been assessed the lowest penalty is not in position to urge on appeal as a ground for reversal the insufficiency of the evidence to prove his guilt. Grandberry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 232, 216 S. W. 164.

Finality of judgment.—Under this article, the court has no jurisdiction of an appeal in the absence of final judgment, so that an appeal from a judgment nisi forfeiting bail bond must be dismissed. Bostick v. State, 81 Cr. R. 402, 195 S. W. 863.

Failure of judgment from which appeal is taken to contain requisites of final judgment required by art. 853, is fatal to the appeal. McCuin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 497, 217 S. W. 1038.

Contempt proceedings.—Under arts. 894 and 952, judgment punishing witness for violation of subpoena is not appealable; the only remedy being by habeas corpus. Long v. State, 82 Cr. R. 403, 199 S. W. 619.

Abatement of appeal.—Where, pending appeal from a conviction of a felony, defendant died, and that fact was made to appear by affidavit, the state's motion to abate the appeal will be granted. Rutherford v. State, 84 Cr. R. 503, 208 S. W. 917; Burnett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 511, 204 S. W. 328.

The death of one convicted of a felony pending his appeal from the conviction abates the appeal. Ward v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 947.

Art. 895. [873] Appeals from district and county courts.

See Ex parte Bennett, 85 Cr. R. 315, 211 S. W. 934; notes to art. 894.

Juvenile delinquency proceedings.—Appeal lies from conviction under juvenile delinquent law, directly to Court of Criminal Appeals. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 389.

Art. 895b. Appeals from criminal district court of Bowie county.—

Appeals and writs of error may be prosecuted from said Criminal District Court [Criminal District Court of Bowie county, ante, art. 973 $\frac{3}{4}$ ] to the court of criminal appeals in criminal cases and to the court of civil appeals, in the same manner and form as from district courts in like cases. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 28, § 14; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 8, § 14.]

Explanatory.—This provision will become ineffective after December 31, 1922, in view of the abolition of the court. See art. 973 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

Art. 896. [Superseded.]

Explanatory.—This article has been rendered inoperative by the amendment of art. 16, § 20, of the state Constitution, and by Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 78, ante, Penal Code, arts. 588 $\frac{3}{4}$ –588 $\frac{1}{2}$ tt.

Art. 897. [874] From justices of the peace to county court.

Appeal from corporation court.—In view of Const. art. 5, §§ 1, 22, Civ. St. arts. 903, 904, 921, and Code Cr. Proc. arts. 101, 894, 897, an appeal may be taken to county court from corporation court, upon conviction of violation of a city ordinance, not constituting an offense defined by the Penal Code. Taylor County v. Jarvis (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 405.

Art. 900. Bail not discharged until verdict or judgment; in misdemeanors no discharge until overruling of motion for new trial.

Right to liberty pending motion for new trial.—The amendatory act permits defendant, by virtue of his appearance bond in misdemeanor case, to remain free from custody pending motion for new trial. Ex parte Henderson, 81 Cr. R. 609, 197 S. W. 714.

Where one indicted for assault with intent to murder was convicted of aggravated assault, a misdemeanor, his case came within this article, as amended, and, being on bail, he was entitled to remain at liberty, unless surrendered by his bondsmen, until his motion for new trial was passed on. Ex parte Stevens, 86 Cr. R. 557, 217 S. W. 1040.

Art. 902. When defendant appeals and bail is allowed, shall be committed to jail, until he enters into recognizance.

See Westbrook v. State, 88 Cr. R. 466, 227 S. W. 1104; King v. State, 83 Cr. R. 304, 203 S. W. 52; notes to arts. 903, 904.

Failure to note on minutes.—Where defendant did what he could to have recognizance, and entered into it, as judge certifies, in open court, neglect of one of the officers of court to carry recognizance properly into minutes, will not deprive defendant of his appeal. Roberts v. State, 83 Cr. R. 139, 201 S. W. 998.

Setting aside recognizance.—Where accused on conviction gave notice of appeal and recognizance before he was sentenced, the court nevertheless had jurisdiction to set aside the recognizance and sentence accused and to require a new recognizance. Ingram v. State, 83 Cr. R. 215, 202 S. W. 741.

Art. 903. Form of such recognizance.

See Lawler v. State, 86 Cr. R. 534, 217 S. W. 383; Westbrook v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1104; Cockrell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1097; notes to arts. 904, 919.

Cited, Joseph v. State, 83 Cr. R. 522, 204 S. W. 320; Watson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 753.

Requisites of bond in general.—A recognizance which binds defendant to appear before the trial court "from time to time," instead of "from term to term," as required by Acts 1892, p. 38, is insufficient to give the court of criminal appeals jurisdiction on appeal. Forbes v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 1072.

Under statute requiring an appeal obligation to fix the time, an appeal recognizance requiring appellant to appear "instanter" before trial court, to await judgment of Court of Criminal Appeals, was not more onerous than statute authorized. Waites v. State, 82 Cr. R. 501, 200 S. W. 380.

Under this article, recognizance on appeal failing to provide that defendant shall abide the judgment of the Court of Criminal Appeals, or to stipulate that obligation shall be joint and several as to sureties, or to show that accused was convicted of felony is insufficient. Sanders v. State, 83 Cr. R. 110, 201 S. W. 411.

An appeal in a felony case will be dismissed where the recognizance neither binds appellant to abide by the decision of the Court of Criminal Appeals, nor shows the court in which the accused was tried, nor follows the form prescribed by this article. Lopez v. State, 85 Cr. R. 402, 212 S. W. 954.

See, also, notes to art. 919.

Statement of nature of offense and extent of punishment.—Where recognizance failed to state punishment assessed against accused, his appeal must be dismissed. Mosley v. State, 82 Cr. R. 16, 198 S. W. 146; Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

Bond reciting appellant was charged with offense of a felony, and had been convicted of such offense, failing to specify offense of which he was charged and convicted, was insufficient. McKey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 228, 220 S. W. 549; Singleton v. State, 87 Cr. R. 302, 221 S. W. 610.

Under this article, omission from recognizance in prosecution for sale of intoxicating liquor contrary to law of statement that defendant had been convicted, naming offense, held fatal. Goss v. State, 83 Cr. R. 349, 202 S. W. 956.

Recognizance required of one convicted of felony and desiring to appeal, being prescribed by this article, and article 320, having reference only to form of recognizance in a felony case pending in district court, must state more than that appellant was charged with and convicted of a felony, and must give the name of the offense. Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

The recognizance for appeal in a case of misdemeanor required by this article, must state the punishment. Young v. State, 87 Cr. R. 184, 222 S. W. 1103.

Where a recognizance is defective because not stating the offense of which appellant was convicted nor the punishment assessed, and is otherwise not in the form prescribed by decisions and this article, the appeal must be dismissed. Godby v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 192.

A recognizance held such as is required for the appearance of an accused under art. 315, but not the recognizance required upon appeal under arts. 902, 903, nowhere stating that accused has been convicted of any named offense. Westbrook v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1104.

Recognizance on appeal should recite the punishment awarded. Robert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 230.

Recognizance reciting that defendant "stands charged in this court with the offense by conversion, and who has been convicted of such offense," held insufficient, under this article, on appeal by a defendant convicted of theft by conversion. Nugent v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 855.

See, also, notes to art. 919.

Art. 904. Where defendant fails to enter into recognizance during term time, he may give bail in amount fixed by court, to be approved by sheriff.

See Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105; Cockrell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1097.

Cited, Watson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 753.

Approval of bond.—Under this article, the appeal bond in a criminal case must be approved by the court as well as by the sheriff. Chumley v. State, 83 Cr. R. 54, 201 S. W. 176; King v. State, 83 Cr. R. 304, 203 S. W. 52; Johnson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 376, 203 S. W. 903; Gray v. State, 88 Cr. R. 1, 224 S. W. 513.

An appeal bond filed in vacation must be approved by the district judge as well as the sheriff. Hunt v. State, 82 Cr. R. 471, 200 S. W. 1090.

Under this article, a convicted party may enter into recognizance during the term, or may enter into a bond during vacation to be approved by the sheriff and the judge who tried the case, though he is holding court in a county other than that in which conviction was had. Swim v. State, 86 Cr. R. 576, 218 S. W. 761.

Appeal bond, taken in vacation, not indorsed and approved by the trial court, held defective. Brown v. State, 88 Cr. R. 55, 224 S. W. 1105.

Effect of giving appeal bond in term time.—Appeal bond filed during term at which trial took place is not a compliance with art. 902, requiring a recognizance where case is appealed during term. King v. State, 83 Cr. R. 304, 203 S. W. 52.

Where defendant after conviction of felony and before expiration of the term gave an appeal bond which was approved by the sheriff and also by the district judge, the appeal must be dismissed, the appeal bond being without legal efficacy, and defendant having failed to enter into a recognizance under terms of statute. Hale v. State, 87 Cr. R. 119, 219 S. W. 1097.

Time of giving recognizance.—Under this article, and art. 903, a bail bond to a sheriff, executed during the succeeding term, held valid; it being unnecessary that such bond be executed in vacation, the words "and in vacation," within the statute, being words of inclusion, and not of limitation. Cockrell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1097.

Appeal bond after dismissal for defect in recognizance.—Appeal being dismissed because of recognizance for appeal not complying with art. 903, appellant will be allowed to file an appeal bond substantially as prescribed by article 904, and doing so appeal will be held to have been perfected, and will be reinstated. Willoughby v. State, 87 Cr. R. 40, 219 S. W. 468.

Art. 912. [880] When defendant escapes, pending an appeal.

Effect of escape in general.—Under this article, on defendant's escape from custody pending appeal, the appeal will be dismissed. Stanton v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 1104; Neeley v. State, 86 Cr. R. 204, 215 S. W. 857; Eberhardt v. State, 86 Cr. R. 230, 215 S. W. 966; Gaines v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 1097.

Where state moves to dismiss appeal from conviction on account of appellant's escape, and, accompanying motion, there is affidavit by sheriff, in compliance with art. 913, appeal will be dismissed pursuant to this article. Clay v. State, 81 Cr. R. 637, 197 S. W. 1106; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 218 S. W. 759.

Escape of an appellant in a criminal case deprives the appellate court of jurisdiction to pass on the merits of the case, and the appeal will be dismissed on motion of the state, accompanied by affidavit of the sheriff duly making the facts known. Ross v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 325; Campbell v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 105.

Under arts. 912, 913, appeal of defendant, convicted of burglary, who, pending such appeal, escaped from custody, with intention to escape permanently, held to be dismissed on motion of Attorney General. Gibson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 435, 203 S. W. 893.

Where appellant from conviction of murder, as appears by affidavit of deputy sheriff and jailer, made his escape from jail by overpowering jailer, and was later arrested and returned to custody, motion to dismiss appeal will be sustained. Boyd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 441, 203 S. W. 900.

Return to custody.—Where appeal was dismissed under arts. 912, 913, on account of the escape of appellant, recapture within ten days of his escape, while preventing a voluntary return, did not restore jurisdiction of the appeal. Gilbert v. State, 83 Cr. R. 348, 203 S. W. 892.

Motion for reinstatement.—See Clay v. State, 81 Cr. R. 637, 197 S. W. 1106; Gilbert v. State, 83 Cr. R. 348, 203 S. W. 892; Gibson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 435, 203 S. W. 893; Boyd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 441, 203 S. W. 900; Johnson v. State (Cr. App.) 218 S. W. 759; notes to art. 912.

Necessity and requisites of notice in general.—See Lorance v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 361; notes to art. 929.

Where record contains no notice of appeal, it will be dismissed. Baldwin v. State, 82 Cr. R. 243, 199 S. W. 468; Thompson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 18, 202 S. W. 91; Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 145, 215 S. W. 326; Garlington v. State, 85 Cr. R. 658, 215 S. W. 341; Moore v. State, 86 Cr. R. 549, 218 S. W. 366.

Without notice of appeal, the Court of Criminal Appeals has no jurisdiction under provisions of this article. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 122; Montgomery v. State, 81 Cr. R. 516, 196 S. W. 537; Cato v. State, 85 Cr. R. 659, 215 S. W. 301.

Under this article, an appeal must be dismissed in the absence of notice. Williams v. State, 87 Cr. R. 180, 220 S. W. 87; Albrecht v. State, 85 Cr. R. 519, 215 S. W. 327.

Under this article, notice of appeal is prerequisite to an appeal from judgment forfeiting bail. Bostick v. State, 81 Cr. R. 402, 195 S. W. 863.

Under this article, as amended, notice of appeal in criminal cases, must be given during the term. Castoreno v. State, 82 Cr. R. 621, 200 S. W. 1082.

Where there appears in the record no final judgment and no notice of appeal, the motion of the Assistant Attorney General to dismiss will be sustained, and the appeal dismissed. Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 145, 215 S. W. 326.

In order to perfect an appeal, it is imperative that a notice of appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeals be given by the appellant at the term at which his trial was had. Sauzeda v. State, 86 Cr. R. 461, 216 S. W. 1098.

A notice, given in open court, that defendant appeals to "the Court of Appeals" is insufficient, since there is no court of that name, and the appeal must be dismissed. Danley v. State, 88 Cr. R. 31, 224 S. W. 888.

An appeal from a criminal case must be dismissed, where the transcript discloses no order showing that the motion for new trial was ever acted on and shows no notice of appeal. Powell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1096.

An order overruling defendant's motion for new trial, reciting that he "gave notice * * * to the Court of Criminal Appeals," is insufficient as notice of an appeal to that tribunal. Donegan v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 166.

Upon appeal from an order refusing bail in the absence of a notice of appeal, the jurisdiction of the Court of Criminal Appeals does not attach. Ex parte Shearman (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 691.

Entry of notice.—In order to perfect an appeal, it is imperative that a notice of appeal be not only given by the appellant at the term at which his trial was had, but the same must also be entered in the minutes. Sauzeda v. State, 86 Cr. R. 461, 216 S. W. 1098.

The statement, "Notice of appeal given," at the conclusion of the order overruling the motion for a new trial in the record, is insufficient to give the Court of Criminal Appeals jurisdiction, such entry not showing to what court notice was given, nor that any notice of appeal was entered of record or carried into the minutes of the trial court. Id.

Art. 916. [884] Effect of appeal.

Cited in dissenting opinion, Sessions v. State, 81 Cr. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

Effect of appeal in general.—See Arcia v. State, 26 Tex. App. 193, 9 S. W. 685.

Under arts. 916, 929, Court of Criminal Appeals in reviewing refusal of new trial for newly discovered evidence cannot consider testimony in another trial occurring in another county after term at which appellant was convicted. Ballew v. State, 82 Cr. R. 398, 199 S. W. 1109.

Transfer of jurisdiction.—In view of Const. art. 5, § 5, Court of Criminal Appeals has jurisdiction when final judgment of conviction is entered and notice of appeal given and entered, and must enforce performance by officers in trial court of ministerial duties imposed upon them by mandatory statute regulating the perfecting of appeals. Ex parte Fread, 83 Cr. R. 465, 204 S. W. 113.

Pending appeal the district court was powerless to transfer cause to criminal district court, created by Acts 35th Leg. 4th Called Sess. c. 28, in view of this article. Walker v. State, 85 Cr. R. 482, 214 S. W. 331.

Under this article, the trial court, after adjournment of the term, can make no further orders in an appealed case, except to correct or substitute records. Cockrell v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1097.

Art. 918. [886] When defendant appeals in misdemeanor, must give recognizance.—When the defendant appeals in any case of misdemeanor from the judgment of the district or county court, he shall, if he be in custody, be committed to jail unless he enter into recognizance or bail bond as provided by law. If for any cause the defendant fails to enter into recognizance or bail bond during the term at which he was tried, but gave notice and took an appeal from such conviction, he shall be permitted to give bail and obtain his release from custody by giving, after the expiration of such term of court, his bail and bond to the sheriff with two or more good and sufficient sureties, in an amount to be fixed by the court, in which the defendant and his sureties shall acknowledge themselves jointly and severally indebted to the State of Texas in such sum, and upon the same condition as provided for in recognizance on appeal. But before the defendant shall be released on such bail bond the same must be approved by the sheriff or the judge trying the cause or his successor in office. When such bail bond is accepted and approved, the defendant shall be released from custody the same as though he had entered into recognizance during the term of court at which he was convicted. [O. C. 722; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 18, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

See Sanders v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 360; Lawler v. State, 86 Cr. R. 534, 217 S. W. 383; notes to art. 919.

Cited, Miller v. State, 21 Tex. App. 275, 17 S. W. 429.

Necessity of recognizance.—In order to give Court of Criminal Appeals jurisdiction of appeal from misdemeanor conviction, a recognizance must be entered into in open court before court adjourns for term at which conviction occurred, under this article. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 255, 206 S. W. 684.

Necessity that record show recognizance or defendant's imprisonment.—Under Code Cr. Proc. 1879, art. 851, where recognizance is not given, the record must affirmatively show that defendant is in jail pending the appeal, or the appeal will be dismissed. Trimble v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 688.

Where transcript contained copies of the appeal and recognizance, and clerk's certificate was to effect that it contained a correct transcript of trial proceedings, but where there was nothing to show an entry on the minutes of the court of the notice of appeal or the recognizance, as required by law, a motion to dismiss the appeal will be sustained. Rogers v. State, 85 Cr. R. 421, 213 S. W. 637.

Record on appeal, containing neither a recognizance, nor a showing that appellant was in custody nor a copy of the complaint on which the information was based, nor the final judgment, held defective. Young v. State, 86 Cr. R. 621, 218 S. W. 754.

Under this article, the record on appeal, to give the appellate court jurisdiction, must show either a recognizance or the affirmative fact that appellant has been continuously in jail since the overruling of his motion for new trial. White v. State, 87 Cr. R. 315, 221 S. W. 283.

A statement of the clerk in the transcript that the defendant is in custody of the sheriff is not sufficient to show that he has been continuously in jail since his motion for new trial was overruled. Id.

The amendment of this article by Acts 36th Leg. (1919) c. 18, does not change the rule that the record must show either a recognizance or continuous custody of defendant. Id.

Where there is no recognizance as required by art. 919, in the record, the Attorney General's motion to dismiss the appeal for want of a sufficient recognizance will be granted. Mills v. State, 87 Cr. R. 655, 224 S. W. 780.

Appeal bond or recognizance.—An appeal from conviction of a misdemeanor cannot be consummated by executing an appeal bond; the statute requiring a recognizance. Stephenson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 254, 206 S. W. 686; Turman v. State, 81 Cr. R. 320, 196 S. W. 181.

Where it does not appear affirmatively in the record that one convicted of a misdemeanor is in custody, an appeal bond is insufficient to give jurisdiction in the absence of a recognizance as prescribed by art. 919, under art. 920, relating thereto. Welch v. State, 82 Cr. R. 253, 199 S. W. 485.

Under this article, as amended, a defendant convicted of misdemeanor can secure release from custody pending the appeal by giving a bond conditioned as an appeal recognizance, and his release from custody under such bond will not affect the jurisdiction of the Court of Criminal Appeals. White v. State, 87 Cr. R. 315, 221 S. W. 283.

Approval of bond.—Under this article, as amended, it is sufficient where the sheriff approves the bond given on appeal from conviction of misdemeanor. Howard v. State, 86 Cr. R. 288, 216 S. W. 168.

Art. 919. [887] Form of recognizance.

See Curry v. City of Dallas (Cr. App.) 21 S. W. 930; Welch v. State, 82 Cr. R. 253, 199 S. W. 485; Mills v. State, 87 Cr. R. 655, 224 S. W. 780; notes to art. 918.

Cited, Ward v. White (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 312.

Requisites in general.—A recognizance which binds the principal to appear before the district court is fatally defective, where it fails to state the offense with which defendant is charged, and falls to require him to abide the judgment of the appellate court. Short v. State (Cr. App.) 25 S. W. 288.

Recognizance being fatally defective, motion of state to dismiss defendant's appeal will be granted. Zarafonetis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 120, 198 S. W. 938.

Under art. 920, the court cannot entertain an appeal from a conviction of aggravated assault, where the only record entry relative to the recognizance reads: "Recognizance fixed at $1,000.00. Made and executed by G. J. [defendant], N. A. J., and G. T. S."—not a compliance with article 919, prescribing the form of recognizance in misdemeanor cases. Jenkins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 266, 216 S. W. 183.

Statement of nature of offense and extent of punishment.—See Miller v. State, 21 Tex. App. 275, 17 S. W. 429; notes to art. 921.

A recognizance executed under Code Crim. Proc. 1879, arts. 851-853, to secure the release from imprisonment, pending appeal, of one who has been convicted of a misdemeanor not constituting eo nomine an offense, must recite the essential elements of the offense; and hence a recognizance given by one convicted of selling liquor in violation of the local option law, which fails to state that an election was held in the county or one of its subdivisions to determine whether or not the sale of liquor should be prohibited, and that as a result of such election the sale of liquor was prohibited, is fatally defective, as these are essential elements of the offense. Sanders v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 360.

The recognizance failing to set out the amount of punishment, as required by the statutory form, but only reciting charge of aggravated assault, and conviction of simple assault, appeal will be dismissed. Isler v. State, 82 Cr. R. 211, 198 S. W. 958.

In a misdemeanor case where the recognizance fails to name the offense for which conviction was had, as indicated in the form set out in this article, or state the penalty assessed, the appeal will be dismissed. Joseph v. State, 83 Cr. R. 522, 204 S. W. 320.

An appeal will be dismissed where the recognizance does not recite that appellant was convicted and the punishment awarded. Hayes v. State, 83 Cr. R. 596, 204 S. W. 330.

Recognizance, on appeal, which fails to recite the amount of punishment assessed, is fatally defective. Eaton v. State, 85 Cr. R. 610, 215 S. W. 99, Id., 85 Cr. R. 612, 215 S. W. 100; Id., 85 Cr. R. 611, 215 S. W. 101.

Where recognizance on appeal in a criminal case does not set out the amount of punishment assessed, as required by statute, the appeal will be dismissed. Durst v. State, 85 Cr. R. 609, 215 S. W. 221.

Despite act giving criminal district court of Dallas county jurisdiction of misdemeanor cases, which provides practice shall be same as on trial of other cases over which criminal courts of county have jurisdiction, under arts. 918, 919, appellant from conviction of misdemeanor should have set out in recognizance penalty assessed, instead of following form provided in felony convictions by article 903, and his appeal will be dismissed. Lawler v. State, 86 Cr. R. 534, 217 S. W. 333.

Under art. 923, a recognizance which fails to state the amount of punishment assessed by the jury is insufficient to give jurisdiction on appeal. Erwin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 71, 219 S. W. 827.

A recognizance for appeal from conviction of a misdemeanor which states the punishment merely as a fine of "one hundred" is insufficient, and the appeal must be dismissed. Young v. State, 87 Cr. R. 184, 222 S. W. 1103.

On appeal from conviction of being interested in a house and building where gaming tables and banks were kept and exhibited for purposes of gaming, defendant's recognizance, stating that he had been convicted of the offense of operating a gambling house, was insufficient; there being no such offense, eo nomine, and the recognizance not setting out the constituent elements of any offense known to the law. Watson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 753.

Recognizance on appeal reciting that appellant stands charged with "violation of the liquor law" is not sufficient to describe the offense for which he stands charged. Robert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 230.

Statement of obligation.—A condition of a recognizance reading, "If the said T. shall appear before this court from day to day and from term to term of the same, and not depart without leave of this court, in order to abide the judgment of the court of appeals of the state of Texas in this cause, then this recognizance to be valid, otherwise to remain in full force and effect," sufficiently complies with the statutory form. Zidek v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 143.

Where, the recognizance binds the appellant to "abide the judgment of the court of appeals," instead of to "abide the judgment of the court of criminal appeals," as required by Act 1892, § 32, the recognizance is fatally defective. Powers v. State (Cr. App.) 23 S. W. 795.

The appeal from a conviction for misdemeanor will be dismissed where the recognizance fails to comply with this article, in that it does not require defendant to appear before the trial court from day to day, and from term to term, in order to abide the judgment of the appellate court. (Howard v. State, 30 App. 680, 18 S. W. 790, followed.) Spencer v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 27.

Under the provision requiring recognizances to bind defendant who has been convicted in "this" court to appear before "this" court from day to day to abide the judgment of the court of appeals, a condition in the recognizance that he appear before "the" court is not sufficient. (Howard v. State, 18 S. W. 790, 30 App. 680, followed.) Harris v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 290.

Joint or separate recognizance.—It is not permissible for defendants, when jointly convicted, to enter a joint recognizance. Haverbekken v. State, 82 Cr. R. 633, 200 S. W. 524.

Art. 920. [888] Appeal shall not be entertained without sufficient recognizance.

See Welch v. State, 82 Cr. R. 253, 199 S. W. 485; Jenkins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 266, 216 S. W. 183; notes to arts. 918, 919.

Cited, Sanders v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 360.

Effect of non-compliance.—An appeal from a conviction for a misdemeanor will be dismissed where neither original nor additional recognizance is sufficient. Reynolds v. State, 82 Cr. R. 505, 199 S. W. 1092.

Where one convicted of misdemeanor entered into recognizance without sureties, but deposited money equal to amount of recognizance, appellate court has no jurisdiction of appeal, under this article, but may allow amendment by filing new bond or recognizance under article 923. Berry v. State, 83 Cr. R. 210, 203 S. W. 901.

Art. 920a. Appeals to what courts; trial de novo; appeals how governed.

Right of appeal and court to which lies.—Under Sp. Acts 30th Leg. c. 104, sections 131-144, creating a corporation court, Sp. Acts 31st Leg. c. 96, and Sp. Acts 33d Leg. c. 65, amending section 144, appellate jurisdiction from corporation court of Texarkana is taken away from county court, and where fine imposed does not exceed $25, there is no appeal, but where fine exceeds $25, exclusive appellate jurisdiction is in Court of Criminal Appeals. Bennett v. State, 83 Cr. R. 523, 204 S. W. 333.

Under Const. art. 5, §§ 5, 16, Legislature had right, in regulating appeals from corporation court of Texarkana, to restrict appeals to cases where fine imposed was more than $25. Id.

Art. 921. [889] Appeals from justices' and other inferior courts.—

In appeals from the judgments of Justices of the Peace and other inferior courts to the County Court, the defendant shall, if he be in custody, be committed to jail unless he give bond with good and sufficient security, to be approved by the court from whose judgment the appeal is taken, in an amount not less than double the amount of fine and costs adjudged against him, payable to the State of Texas; provided, said bond shall not in any case be for a less sum than fifty dollars, said bond shall describe the judgment appealed from with sufficient certainty to identify it, shall recite that in said cause the defendant was convicted on complaint, or information, charging him with a misdemeanor, and has appealed to the County Court, and shall be conditioned that the defendant shall well and truly make his personal appearance before the County Court of said county instanter, if said county court be then in session, and if said court be not in session then at its regular term, stating the time and place of holding the same, and there remain from day to day and term to term, and answer in said cause on trial in said Court. [Acts 1901, p. 291; Acts 1876, p. 167, secs. 37, 38; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 21, § 1.]

Took effect March 21, 1921.

Necessity and requisites of bond.—The bond given on appeal in a criminal case from a justice of the peace need not state the offense of which appellant was convicted, as is required by art. 919, in bonds given on appeals from the county and district courts, since this article, relating to bonds given on appeals from justices of the peace, does not require such statement. Miller v. State, 21 Tex. App. 276, 17 S. W. 429.

Art. 922. When appeal bond provided for in preceding article is filed, appeal is perfected.

Cited Zidek v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 143.

Necessity of notice of appeal.—Under Code Crim. Proc. 1879, art. 939, an appeal in a criminal case from a justice's court was properly dismissed where the record did not show that notice of appeal was given and entered on the justice's docket. Ball v. State, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 214, 20 S. W. 363.

Art. 923. When appeal bond or recognizance is defective, appellate court may allow appellant to file new bond.

See Erwin v. State, 87 Cr. R. 71, 219 S. W. 827; notes to art. 919.

Right to amend or file new recognizance.—In view of this article, two defendants, jointly convicted, have the right to amend their recognizance, which was defective by reason of being joint. Haverbekken v. State, 82 Cr. R. 633, 200 S. W. 524.

Where one convicted of misdemeanor entered into recognizance without sureties, but deposited money equal to amount of recognizance, appellate court has no jurisdiction of appeal, under art. 920, but may allow amendment by filing new bond or recognizance under article 923. Berry v. State, 83 Cr. R. 210, 203 S. W. 901.

A motion to dismiss an appeal in a criminal case because of a defective appeal bond will be overruled, where it appears that after being notified of the condition of the appeal bond a new bond was made by accused in accordance with statute and was properly certified to and filed with the clerk of the appellate court. Joiner v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 333.

State*, 83 Cr. R. 60, 224 S. W. 1098.

Where the record discloses there was no sentence of defendant convicted of forgery, his appeal must be dismissed. Pior v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 411.

An appeal from a conviction of receiving stolen property of less than $50 in value will be dismissed, where the record disclosed nothing except the verdict, for no appeal will be considered until final judgment has been rendered, and the mere verdict was not a "final judgment" in a misdemeanor case within arts. 867 and 863. Donegan v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 166.

4. Proceedings after verdict and judgment.—In the absence of a showing in the transcript that notice of an appeal has been given and entered of record in the court below, as required by Code Crim. Proc. 1879, art. 848, the court of criminal appeals will not infer such facts, either from the filing of the transcript in that court, or from appellant's entering into a recognizance in the lower court to abide the judgment on appeal, and the appeal will be dismissed. Lorance v. State (Cr. App.) 20 S. W. 361.

State*, 85 Cr. R. 421, 213 S. W. 637.

In order to perfect an appeal, it is imperative that a notice of appeal be not only given at the term at which his trial was had, but the same must also be entered in the minutes and so appear in the record sent to the appellate court. Sauzeda v. State, 86 Cr. R. 461, 216 S. W. 1098.

Recognizance, see Trimble v. State (Cr. App.) 22 S. W. 688; Young v. State, 86 Cr. R. 621, 218 S. W. 754; White v. State, 87 Cr. R. 315, 221 S. W. 283; notes to art. 918.

State*, 84 Cr. R. 334, 206 S. W. 936; Grayson v. State, 84 Cr. R. 337, 206 S. W. 943.

Where a transcript is not certified by the clerk, and the bills of exceptions are not approved by the judge, and the statement of facts is neither signed by the attorneys nor by the judge, an appeal must be dismissed, without passing upon the merits, under this article and Civ. St. art. 2114. Ray v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 396.

11½. Conclusiveness and construction.—It being a controverted issue, whether motion to quash was made before trial, so that it was timely, court on appeal will be governed by the record, showing that it was filed the day after conviction; appellant offering no evidence by affidavit. Shipley v. State, 84 Cr. R. 278, 208 S. W. 342.

Viewed in the light of testimony in the statement of facts held that the record, fairly construed, did not bear the interpretation that, as complained in bill of exceptions, the opinion of witness was taken as evidence. Messimer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 403, 222 S. W. 583.

12. Correction or alteration of record.—Defects in transcript of appeal may be cured and dismissed case reinstated, where defects were omissions of the clerk in failing to copy the necessary papers into the transcript. Thompson v. State, 83 Cr. R. 18, 202 S. W. 91.

Upon appeal from a conviction of desertion, where the Assistant Attorney General obtained from the proper authorities a duly certified copy of the complaint and had it filed with the record, the fact that there was no copy of the complaint incorporated in the record, is no ground for reversal or for dismissal of defendant's appeal. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 507.

13. Certiorari to perfect record.—Application for certiorari to perfect the record will be granted where based on defendant's having presented to the trial court a bill of exceptions for approval, which the court took, and, after keeping it awhile, qualified, and filed without notice to or consent of defendant, who filed exception accompanied by a bystander's bill showing the facts. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 308.

Where it is necessary, to entitle defendant to have his case considered by the Court of Criminal Appeals, that certain instruments and orders appear in the record, his application on sufficient showing for writ of certiorari to perfect the record in such respect will be granted. Frazier v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 324.

Where the record shows that the court overruled a motion for new trial, supported by several affidavits of newly discovered testimony, and that there was a contest thereon, and there were controverting affidavits, but does not show whether testimony was heard, such phase of the record need not be discussed. Stracner v. State, 86 Cr. R. 89, 215 S. W. 305.

In prosecution for robbery, where fact that defendant had pleaded guilty to embezzlement in former prosecution was elicited on cross-examination of defendant, court's refusal to permit defendant on redirect examination to explain circumstances under which he pleaded guilty cannot be reviewed on appeal, in absence of the facts which were before trial court. Boone v. State, 85 Cr. R. 661, 215 S. W. 310.

Where the testimony did not accompany the record, the insufficiency of the evidence to constitute, under the law, the offense of murder cannot be reviewed. Lacy v. State (Cr. App.) 215 S. W. 453.

Appellate court exercises great latitude towards appellants in matters merely technical, but cannot disregard matters which are mainly statutory and go to the very foundation of the appeal or the jurisdiction of the trial court. Young v. State, 86 Cr. R. 621, 218 S. W. 754.

Where an affidavit containing alleged newly discovered evidence claimed to be attached to the motion for new trial did not appear in the record, denial of defendant's motion on the ground of newly discovered evidence will not be reviewed. Shrum v. State, 87 Cr. R. 486, 222 S. W. 575.

A conviction for forgery cannot be reversed for variance between the forged name as alleged in the indictment and the name signed to the instrument, where the record does not show what name was signed to the instrument. Wallace v. State, 87 Cr. R. 527, 222 S. W. 1104.

On appeal, only matters of fact and matters of law which appear in the record may be considered. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Where there was a motion to quash the venire on the grounds that a jury commissioner was not a freeholder in the county and that the commissioners were not residents of different portions of the county, and there is no statement of facts or bills of exception, and no exception was reserved, and the grounds are not verified or established by evidence, so far as shown by the record, conviction will be affirmed. Bowen v. State, 87 Cr. R. 657, 224 S. W. 776.

Bill of exceptions to court's supposed refusal of a continuance is insufficient to warrant review where the record contains neither application for continuance nor court's order refusing it. Lucas v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 257.

A claim on appeal from a conviction as a juvenile held to present questions of fact incident to procedure on the trial, which the appellee court is bound to determine from the record and upon the presumptions as to the legality of judgments and cannot consider in the absence of bill of exception; record not affirmatively showing that court erred. Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

A bill of exceptions complaining of the court's action in overruling defendant's motion to quash the indictment cannot be considered where the record fails to show that any motion to quash was filed. Andres v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 503.

Where defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground of misconduct of a juror was overruled, and it appeared that the trial court heard evidence on the issue, its determination will be upheld, where such evidence was not preserved in the record. Cone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 816.

18. Presumptions in aid of record.—In the absence of the testimony heard by the court before denying new trial for misconduct of the jury, the presumption is that the court ruled correctly. Martin v. State, 82 Cr. R. 269, 198 S. W. 149.

Where statement of facts is silent as to certain evidence and bill of exceptions does not state whether it was on direct or redirect examination, it will be assumed to be on redirect, where it would be reversible on direct, but proper on redirect. Pickrell v. State, 82 Cr. R. 68, 198 S. W. 303.

Court having ruled witness competent, bill of exceptions not showing that witness was not an expert sufficiently to have testified on subject, reversible error held not shown. Zarafonietis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 120, 198 S. W. 938.

Where evidence on motion to correct date of judgment is not preserved, held, that it will be presumed that the evidence justified the overruling of the motion. Krauss v. State, 82 Cr. R. 231, 199 S. W. 472.

When bill of exceptions is found in record with qualification by the trial court, consent of appellant to such qualification is presumed in absence of objection and exception to the qualification authenticated and brought up in record. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

In prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, where the court submitted the issue of aggravated assault and the jury convicted of that offense, the presumption on appeal in the absence of the testimony is that the court properly submitted such issue upon evidence warranting its submission. Miller v. State, 84 Cr. R. 168, 206 S. W. 524.

Where Court of Criminal Appeals is not permitted to consider the evidence offered in support of a motion for a new trial it would conclude that trial court was justified in overruling it; the presumption in such case being in favor of correctness and regularity of trial court's action. McKinney v. State, 85 Cr. R. 105, 210 S. W. 700.

Where the record fails to show whether special charges requested were given or not, the legal presumption is that they were given. Starnes v. State, 86 Cr. R. 145, 215 S. W. 302.

Where no order on a motion to quash an indictment appears in the record, and the bill of exceptions only states that it was overruled, the presumption obtains that such motion was overruled by operation of law at the end of the term. Scitern v. State, 87 Cr. R. 112, 219 S. W. 833.

Where there is nothing in the bill of exceptions complaining of admission of evidence, to indicate that the evidence was irrelevant, the appellate court, in support of the court's ruling, will presume that it was relevant. Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

In absence of any statement in the bill of exceptions of the proceedings or attendant circumstances such as will enable the appellate court to know, as a certainty, that an error was committed, the court must presume that the trial court did not erroneously sanction the introduction of improper testimony, or permit prosecuting officer to transgress the rules controlling cross-examination of the appellant and his witnesses. Watts v. State, 87 Cr. R. 442, 222 S. W. 558.

On appeal from conviction of forgery, in the absence of bill of exceptions reserving and presenting the facts, question whether a strip of paper on which defendant had written certain names was inadmissible because at the time he was under arrest and unwarned is not before the Court of Criminal Appeals; it being necessary to bring up by exceptions facts sustaining contentions as to inadmissibility of evidence, in the absence of such bills the presumption being in favor of the legality of the action of the trial court. Bird v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 749.

Where the statement in the motion for new trial that defendant had filed a plea of insanity was traversed as authorized by art. 841, and the record recited that the court heard evidence on the issue, but such evidence was not brought up on appeal, it must be presumed that the evidence supported the denial of the motion. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Unless bills of exceptions to the admission of evidence show what the answers of witnesses were, the appellate court will not understand that answers were made, and if it is stated that an objection was made, but no ground of objection appears, such court cannot presume or infer that any were stated and cannot consider the bill. Lane v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 547.

In the absence of evidence introduced on hearing of defendant's motion for new trial, the presumption is that the trial court was satisfied with the facts set up in the controverting affidavit by the state, and the Court of Criminal Appeals must uphold his ruling as correct. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 552.

Where the assistant district attorney asked defendant on cross-examination how many times she had been charged in the county court with theft, where the record was insufficient to show that the question was improper, it cannot be presumed on appeal that he was purposely doing an improper thing in that there had been no legal charge filed against defendant. Criner v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 860.

An appeal in a felony case will not be dismissed, because the record shows neither a recognizance nor the fact that defendant is in jail; the presumption being, when the record does not contain a recognizance and bail bond, that defendant is in jail. Thomas v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 157, 159.

See, also, notes to art. 938.

19. Consideration of matters not shown by record.—Under arts. 916, 929, Court of Criminal Appeals, in reviewing refusal of new trial for newly discovered evidence, cannot consider testimony in another trial occurring in another county after term at which appellant was convicted. Ballew v. State, 82 Cr. R. 398, 199 S. W. 1109.

Remarks of prosecuting attorney in argument, made the basis of a sworn motion for new trial, will be taken on appeal as having occurred, there being no contest in regard to it, and no facts introduced on motion for new trial, notwithstanding affidavits of state's counsel and the trial judge which were forwarded to the appellate court after the record was filed. Anderson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 422, 214 S. W. 353.

Since the question whether defendant has been continuously in custody since his motion for new trial was overruled in a misdemeanor case affects the jurisdiction of the court of Criminal Appeals in the absence of a recognizance in the record, the court can consider an ex parte affidavit by the sheriff that defendant is not in custody. White v. State, 87 Cr. R. 315, 221 S. W. 283.

Affidavits filed after a trial, and after an order overruling a motion for new trial, are entitled to no place in the record, and to no consideration on appeal, and on rehearing will be ignored, the decision in the original hearing having been rendered without reference to the same. Keith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 321.

Art. 931. [897] Transcript, how forwarded.

In general.—Accused is not responsible for the record on appeal, it being the duty of the clerk of the trial court to make out and forward the transcript. Young v. State, 86 Cr. R. 594, 218 S. W. 505.

Time for preparation and filing.—A transcript, filed nearly 150 days after adjournment of trial court, is in plain violation of the duty enjoined on the district clerk by statute, requiring that transcripts be made out "at once" after adjournment, and forwarded to Court of Criminal Appeals. Washington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 327, 216 S. W. 869.

Where time for filing of bills of exception is extended, the transcript should not be made out until after the expiration of the extended period. Parham v. State, 87 Cr. R. 454, 222 S. W. 561.

Art. 938. [904] Judgment on appeal.

Cited, Bride v. State, 86 Cr. R. 535, 218 S. W. 762.

1. Scope of review in general.—It is only through bills of exception, as required by art. 744, and the statement of facts when new trial is refused, as provided for by art. 844, that the court is apprised of occurrences at the trial, and, in view of art. 938, court can consider as ground for reversal only matters presented for review as so required. Anselmo v. State, 82 Cr. R. 595, 200 S. W. 523.

Where the evidence is sufficient to sustain the conviction, and no exceptions are taken to the charge, or to introduction of testimony, no question is raised on appeal. Wallace v. State, 84 Cr. R. 329, 206 S. W. 845.

In passing on the merits of application for continuance, the Court of Criminal Appeals will look to the whole record, to ascertain if the facts stated as expectant from the absent witness appear likely to be true; also if there is a reasonable probability to procure them, and if they are procured that the testimony would be likely to produce a different result. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 625, 224 S. W. 772.

When the law has been administered and followed in a case brought before the Court of Criminal Appeals, the court's duty ends, and it cannot consider a claim that there are large appeals to humanity in the case. Barrientas v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 418.

In testing the soundness of the trial court's position in refusing to continue or to grant a new trial on the ground of absence of witness, the evidence on the trial, controverting the entity of the alleged absent witness, is available. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 986.

2. Affirmance, reversal, or dismissal in general.—Where appellant files an application to dismiss appeal, made in accordance with law, and showing appellant's desire for dismissal, appeal will be dismissed. Kroschewski v. State (Cr. App.) 215 S. W. 453; Prater v. State (Cr. App.) 219 S. W. 1096; Flournoy v. State, 87 Cr. R. 213, 220 S. W. 549; Polk v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 234; McCowan v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 936.

Where the conviction was had, and the appeal taken, prior to an amendment of the statute by Acts 35th Leg. c. 145, so as to reduce the minimum penalty for arson from five to two years, the fact that the appeal was heard after the statute became effective did not entitle accused to a reversal. Johnson v. State, 82 Cr. R. 82, 197 S. W. 995.

Where proceedings seem from transcript to have been regular, and there is no bill of exceptions or statement of facts, conviction will be affirmed. Caraway v. State (Cr. App.) 200 S. W. 401.

Relator, who was arrested for violating the anti-vice law and remanded in habeas corpus proceedings, having been discharged since notice of appeal was given to court on appeal, motion of Attorney General to dismiss appeal should be sustained. Ex parte Stedham, 84 Cr. R. 523, 208 S. W. 930.

The Court of Criminal Appeals has no power to direct that the day of sentence and term of imprisonment begin on the date of a defendant's conviction below. White v. State, 85 Cr. R. 28, 210 S. W. 199.

Where appeal from a conviction under Acts 35th Leg. 4th Called Sess. c. 8, creating offense of disloyalty, came up without any bills of exceptions or statement of facts in the record, and motion for new trial only questioned the sufficiency of evidence to support verdict, and court, on examination, finds that indictment appears to follow language of statute, and that language imputed to defendant, if uttered, violated the law, the conviction would be affirmed. Meyer v. State, 85 Cr. R. 168, 212 S. W. 504.

Where an appeal was dismissed because no judgment on the verdict or any order of the court directing the disposition to be made of the accused could be found in the record, the dismissal will be set aside when the record is perfected. Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380.

Where, on an appeal from an order refusing to release appellant from custody upon the ground that the evidence before the examining court was insufficient to authorize his detention, it is duly made to appear that pending the appeal the grand jury has found an indictment, growing out of the same offense, the appeal will be dismissed. Ex parte Scott, 86 Cr. R. 591, 218 S. W. 366.

Under art. 837, § 2, stating grounds for new trial, error of court in requiring assault by deceased producing pain to have been calculated to produce passion in defendant's mind held ground for new trial, and conviction for murder with death penalty assessed will be reversed. Mickle v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 491.

A judgment on a plea of guilty would be reversed on appeal if it was brought to the attention of the appellate court that the evidence at the hearing to assess the punishment showed insanity, but that leave to withdraw the plea of guilty was refused. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 679.

Where the trial judge after learning that counsel for accused had filed with the clerk bills of exceptions which the trial judge had previously refused, instead of preparing correct bills of exceptions as required by the statute, qualified the defendant's bills and had them refiled so that such bills could not be considered on appeal nor could accused have presented bystander's bills, the conviction will be reversed if the bills as tendered by accused presented questions which rendered the validity of the conviction doubtful. Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 865.

Before the Court of Criminal Appeals will order a reversal of a cause and entail the delay and expense of another trial, it must believe that wrong has been done which can be righted on another trial. Shields v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 779.

3. Presumptions in general.—It will be presumed on appeal that rulings of trial court are correct, where not shown in some way to be incorrect. Smith v. State, 82 Cr. R. 158, 198 S. W. 298; Vann v. State, 84 Cr. R. 97, 206 S. W. 80; Quinney v. State, 86 Cr. R. 358, 216 S. W. 882; Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

Discretion of court as to admissibility of witnesses who have violated rule will be presumed properly exercised, the contrary not appearing. Fitzgerald v. State, 82 Cr. R. 130, 198 S. W. 315.

Appellate court indulges presumption that rulings of trial court are correct, and burden is upon appellant by some authenticated record, usually by bill of exception, to overturn presumption. Thomas v. State, 83 Cr. R. 325, 204 S. W. 999.

It will not be presumed that grand jury found indictment without facts, especially where one of grand jurors testified to their investigation. Moore v. State, 84 Cr. R. 256, 206 S. W. 683.

Where the order overruling motion for new trial shows that the court heard evidence and thereon determined the motion should be overruled, the presumption in favor of the correctness of the court's ruling which is indulged on appeal implies that the evidence was sufficient to authorize the judgment rendered. Wright v. State, 84 Cr. R. 352, 207 S. W. 99.

Where a qualification by the trial judge of a bill of exceptions is criticized by appellant, but without taking an exception thereto, it will be presumed on review that the explanation was attached with appellant's approval; the law not requiring him to accept a qualified bill. Bryant v. State, 84 Cr. R. 343, 207 S. W. 930.

The utmost legal effect that can be given bills of exceptions which are not in themselves sufficient to show not only the objection, but also the facts showing the propriety of such objection, is to consider them in the light of general demurrers, from which it must follow that every reasonable intendment in favor of the legality of that to which objection is made must be indulged. Venn v. State, 85 Cr. R. 158, 210 S. W. 535.

The Court of Criminal Appeals cannot assume, from mere identity of names, that the maker of a complaint for adultery was the same person as the woman named in the complaint as the adulteress, to sustain defendant's contention that such woman was an accomplice, and therefore not a credible person, within art. 479; all presumptions favoring the legality of proceedings in trial courts. Halbadier v. State, 85 Cr. R. 593, 214 S. W. 349.

Upon a hearing to pass upon defendant's affidavit of juvenility, although the introduction of defendant's statement, while under arrest, may have been in violation of rules against the admission of confessions, the presumption obtains that there was sufficient legal testimony upon which the court based its judgment that defendant was more than 17 years of age. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

On appeal in criminal cases, charges of trial court must be considered as a whole, and the jury regarded as reasonable men, desirous of following instructions of the court in deciding cases according to their best judgment on their merits. Zimmerman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 630, 215 S. W. 101.

The Court of Criminal Appeals must presume that the jury followed an instruction. Gatlin v. State, 86 Cr. R. 339, 217 S. W. 698.

Where defendant did not file motion in arrest of judgment upon ground that information was fatally defective until two days after conclusion of trial, court on appeal, in absence of showing to the contrary, will assume that the trial court, in considering and overruling motion, concluded that there was sufficient excuse for failure to file motion sooner. Woodard v. State, 86 Cr. R. 632, 218 S. W. 760.

An appellant complaining of the admission of testimony has the burden of showing that the court's ruling was wrong. Williams v. State, 86 Cr. R. 626, 219 S. W. 829.

Trial court having power granted by Const. art. 3, § 45, to change venue, failure to observe art. 626, requiring reason to be embraced in order, does not vitiate it in absence of abuse of discretion, which, to receive attention on appeal, must appear in recognized form, presumption trial court did not transcend its authority otherwise obtaining. Baker v. State, 87 Cr. R. 213, 220 S. W. 326.

In reviewing sufficiency of evidence to support the verdict, it will be assumed all controverted questions were decided for the state. Reese v. State, 87 Cr. R. 245, 220 S. W. 1096.

Where accused introduced no evidence and the jury found him guilty, the evidence introduced by the state must, on appeal, be accepted as true. Jolly v. State, 87 Cr. R. 233, 221 S. W. 279.

The overruling of a motion for new trial by the trial judge will not be arbitrarily overturned, but the burden rests upon accused to overcome the presumption favoring the correctness of the decision. Bocknight v. State, 87 Cr. R. 423, 222 S. W. 259.

On appeal, it must be presumed that all necessary steps were taken to make a special term of court legal, in the absence of any pleading or proof to the contrary in the court below. Wilson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 538, 223 S. W. 217.

Finding of court in order changing venue of his own motion under art. 632, into county not adjoining that in which prosecution was commenced because of prejudice against the accused, is presumed to speak the truth. Sapp v. State, 87 Cr. R. 606, 223 S. W. 459.

Failure to support motion for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence, by affidavits and testimony of witnesses who knew the newly discovered facts, or to account for the absence of such proof, renders it insufficient to overcome presumption that in refusing new trial the trial court did not abuse his discretion. Holloway v. State, 88 Cr. R. 126, 224 S. W. 1102.

Proof that defendant failed to appear in accord with a bail bond or recognizance is admissible against the accused, and it will be presumed that a jury understood that bail is simply a means to assure accused's presence and creates no presumption of guilt. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 223 S. W. 213.

In a prosecution for murder, showing that defendant lived some 150 to 300 yards from the scene of the killing, was seen to start in the direction of his home and to reach it, was insufficient to overcome the presumption in favor of the correctness of the trial court's ruling in excluding statement on reaching home as not res gestæ. Moore v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 218.

Where accused complained that court abused its discretion in permitting a witness to testify who had remained in the courtroom after the rule had been called for, the burden was on him to reveal in his bill of exceptions circumstances from which an abuse would appear; there being a presumption in favor of the correctness of the ruling. Shamblin v. State (Cr. App.) 223 S. W. 241.

A claim on appeal from a conviction as a juvenile, held to present questions of fact incident to procedure on the trial, which the appellate court is bound to determine from the record and upon the presumptions as to the legality of judgments. Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

Where information and complaint under the Juvenile Act charged seven distinct felonies in as many counts without specifying in six of them that defendant was under 17 years of age, in aid of the presumption that the court below is correct, the judgment held to be sustained on the theory that the evidence supported the count which charged that defendant was under 17 years of age and that the court acted correctly in applying the facts to such count. Id.

In a criminal prosecution the burden is on the defendant appealing to show that a ruling admitting evidence was erroneous. Mucker v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 323.

Where an indictment charges that theretofore defendant was convicted of a similar offense, it will be presumed on appeal that the purpose of the pleader was to secure an increased punishment under Pen. Code, art. 1619. Stevenson v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 174.

There is a presumption in favor of the correctness of trial court's ruling that there was no misconduct of the jury. Eason v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 300.

In a prosecution for swindling, where the court overruled a motion to postpone trial until after the disposition of another pending case, on the ground the latter was founded upon fictitious allegations, and the indictment was found to prevent a suspended sentence in the swindling case, the presumption on appeal is that such allegations were not proved. Taylor v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 525.

In a prosecution for assault to murder, in the absence of a contrary showing, the presumption of the Court of Criminal Appeals necessarily would be in favor of the admissibility of statements made by the defendant to another after the shooting, not shown to have been made to an officer or to any person who had appellant in custody, or under other circumstances which would make the same inadmissible. Holden v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 803.

See, also, notes to art. 929.

4. Presumption as to proof of venue.—Under this article, it will be presumed that venue was proved unless it was a question of serious import upon the trial or unless contested or verified in a bill of exceptions. Sherman v. State, 83 Cr. R. 205, 202 S. W. 93; Bashara v. State, 84 Cr. R. 263, 206 S. W. 359; Bargas v. State, 86 Cr. R. 217, 216 S. W. 172; Cone v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 816.

Under this article, to review the question as to whether venue was proved, the bills of exceptions must certify either that venue was not proved, or set out all the evidence bearing on the issue. Allen v. State, 199 S. W. 633.

Despite this article, where venue was one of contested issues and remained a part and parcel of main trial, it is not necessary to reserve bill of exceptions. Phillips v. State, 83 Cr. R. 16, 200 S. W. 1091.

Venue is a matter fixed and controlled by statute (arts. 234-258), and under this article, court of criminal appeals by statutory command accepts the presumption that venue in the trial court was proven, unless the matter was there made an issue and the contrary made to appear, which fact must be shown by bill of exceptions properly presented. Haley v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 208.

5. Presumption as to impanelling and swearing of jury.—Where the file mark and seal were left off the special venire list, and with the court's permission the omission was supplied, it will be assumed, on appeal, in the absence of contrary evidence, that the amendment was properly permitted. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

9. Reformation and correction of judgment.—Under this article, a judgment declaring the defendant guilty of both burglary and theft, where the evidence sustains the charge of burglary but not that of theft, will be reformed on appeal so as to make it a conviction for burglary alone. Swartz v. State (App.) 18 S. W. 415.

Judgment committing male delinquent under 17 to state industrial school for boys for 5 years, not conforming to verdict committing him to juvenile training school for 5 years, will be reformed on appeal. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 389.

Where the trial court on conviction for murder failed to apply the Indeterminate Sentence Law (art. 865a), the judgment will be reformed so that it will provide for confinement in the state penitentiary within the period fixed by law as the minimum and maximum penalty for the offense. Wright v. State, 84 Cr. R. 352, 207 S. W. 99.

10. Review of discretionary action.—See Lewis v. State, 82 Cr. R. 285, 199 S. W. 1091; Ballew v. State, 82 Cr. R. 398, 199 S. W. 1109; Patterson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 643, 215 S. W. 308; Barnard v. State, 87 Cr. R. 365, 221 S. W. 293; Gordon v. State, 88 Cr. R. 17, 224 S. W. 894; notes to art. 837.

Generally speaking, the decision of the trial judge as to the qualification of an expert to give testimony is not reviewable. Anselmo v. State, 82 Cr. R. 595, 200 S. W. 523.

While leading questions are not generally permissible, ordinarily determination of their admissibility is within the discretion of the trial judge, reviewable only for abuse. Dodd v. State, 83 Cr. R. 160, 201 S. W. 1014.

When an application for continuance in a criminal case is overruled, the appellate court, in passing upon an alleged abuse of discretion, will look to the evidence adduced at the trial. Keel v. State, 84 Cr. R. 43, 204 S. W. 863.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, under Pen. Code, art. 1024, the extent of the punishment where guilt is established rests in the discretion of the jury, unless the jury is waived, as it may be in misdemeanor cases, in which case it is in the discretion of the trial judge, and the appellate court will not review the exercise of such discretion. Wagner v. State, 87 Cr. R. 47, 219 S. W. 471.

11. Law of the case.—In a prosecution for incest, it was error to admit in evidence a letter written by prosecutrix to defendant, where such letter had been decided on a former appeal to be inadmissible. Hollingsworth v. State, 85 Cr. R. 248, 211 S. W. 454.

A ruling on former appeal that certain evidence was properly admitted, which was not challenged by motion for a rehearing, became the law of the case, and, unless it was clearly wrong and harmful, could not be reviewed on the second appeal. English v. State, 87 Cr. R. 507, 224 S. W. 511.

14. Invited error.—As to instructions, see art. 743, note 8.

In a robbery prosecution, where the state merely offered proof of the finding of a stolen watch in defendant's house, and defendant, to give support to his objection thereto, introduced evidence that the officers learned of the whereabouts of the watch from a person who in turn got the information from an accomplice, defendant cannot seek a reversal because of the admission of the latter evidence. Fitzgerald v. State, 87 Cr. R. 34, 219 S. W. 199.

That appellant invited error in requesting the court to limit the testimony of certain state witnesses did not condone error of court in limiting the testimony of another witness over the express specific objection of the appellant. James v. State, 86 Cr. R. 598, 219 S. W. 202.

In prosecution for theft of automobile, where defendant asked a witness on cross-examination whether he swore defendant stole the car, he thereby invited the error in the witness' answer in the negative, but that he believed defendant stole it. Houser v. State, 87 Cr. R. 296, 222 S. W. 240.

15. Harmless error.—If witness was incompetent as having been in penitentiary, failure of defendant's bill of exceptions to show witness gave material testimony against him renders it impossible to determine supposed error was harmful. Marshall v. State, 82 Cr. R. 623, 200 S. W. 836.

Where an alleged accomplice made written statements before trial exculpating accused, and consented to give testimony inculcating him only on the day of trial, it was harmless error not to allow accused to inspect the previous written statements, where he had the benefit of them on cross-examination for the purpose of affecting the credibility of the testimony; the bill not disclosing that the statements were desired for any other purpose. Funk v. State, 84 Cr. R. 402, 208 S. W. 509.

An accused cannot complain that trial court instructed entire panel of jury, upon general phases of procedure, prior to calling any cause for trial, where nothing was said calculated to prejudice his rights. Hammett v. State, 84 Cr. R. 635, 209 S. W. 661, 4 A. L. R. 347.

Where defendant in a homicide case is regularly arraigned in the district court of the proper county, failure to arraign him in a county where venue was first made is an irregularity which does not require reversal. English v. State, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

In capital cases, the court will assume more latitude in dealing with technicalities and distinctions than in ordinary felony cases, and, when in doubt as to whether the trial was affected by prejudice and feeling, such doubt will be resolved in favor of another trial under different circumstances. Mickle v. State, 85 Cr. R. 560, 213 S. W. 665.

In a prosecution for murder, failure of the trial court to require the district attorney to make an opening statement as directed by art. 717, held harmless, no injury being disclosed by the record. Brown v. State, 87 Cr. R. 261, 222 S. W. 252.

Rulings on questions relative to competency of defendant's witness because of conviction of felony are unavailing, in view of his having been allowed to testify. Mayer v. State, 87 Cr. R. 512, 222 S. W. 571.

When the evidence in a homicide case is fairly well balanced, errors which may not have been otherwise of a serious import become of a grave nature, in view of the presumption of innocence and the legal doubt of guilt. Brookreson v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 375.

Error in admitting testimony of a boy who was incompetent to testify requires reversal, where his testimony was essential to make out the state's case. Anderson v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 414.

Under art. 566, requiring submission to the jury after plea of guilty to determine the amount of the punishment for a felony where there is discretion as to the punishment, the assessment of the lowest punishment by the jury precludes questioning the sufficiency of the evidence, at least where there is legal evidence to support the judgment. Gumpert v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 237, 238.

In a prosecution for embezzlement, facts held insufficient to show that the refusal of a request that the state make an opening statement as to the nature of the accusation and the facts expected to be proved, as directed by art. 717, subd. 3, was injurious to defendant. Wray v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 808.

18. — Denial of continuance.—Complaint cannot be made of the overruling of a motion for continuance on the ground of absence of a witness, where the witness appeared and testified. Davidson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 243, 216 S. W. 624; Charles v. State, 87 Cr. R. 233, 222 S. W. 255.

Where defendant in a manslaughter case applied for a continuance and thereafter the venue was changed, the court in granting the change stating that the order for continuance was vacated, any irregularity in the court's failure to make a formal and separate order setting aside the order of continuance was harmless error. English v. State, 85 Cr. R. 450, 213 S. W. 632.

Error in overruling an application for continuance was harmless, where matters which would be testified to by absent witness were placed before the jury by other witnesses. Charles v. State, 87 Cr. R. 233, 222 S. W. 255.

20. — Remarks and other acts of judge.—Court's statement, after a witness had testified to accused's statement that he would have excluded it, but that the question was already answered, was not reversible error, under art. 787, prohibiting the trial judge commenting on the weight of the evidence, where no prejudice is shown. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 368, 195 S. W. 595.

In view of Rev. St. art. 5722, providing that entry by county judge of fact of publication of result of local option election shall be sufficient prima facie evidence of such publication, a remark of judge that it is conclusive proof is harmless, where there is no contest about publication. Smith v. State, 81 Cr. R. 446, 196 S. W. 519.

Action of court in fining defendant's attorney $25 for repeating a question the fourth time after court had directed him not to so do, where the trial was not unreasonably delayed thereby, and where the particular evidence sought was fully elicited from the witness by the various answers, held not prejudicial to defendant. Redwine v. State, 87 Cr. R. 387, 221 S. W. 605.

In a prosecution for rape by force where the testimony of prosecutrix was uncorroborated and she had made no immediate complaint after the offense, comment by the court disparaging the testimony of defendant's witness to show that he had never been convicted of a felony cannot be held harmless, where the jury imposed a penalty of five years' imprisonment instead of the suspended sentence which accused requested. Rogers v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 57.

Remarks of the judge before the trial of one accused of robbery that jury should pay close attention to the testimony, and thereby avoid controversy among themselves and reach a verdict more speedily and satisfactorily, were not reversible error, where the court on objection instructed the jury not to consider his statement as evidence, or as tending to show guilt or innocence, and the remarks were not calculated to prejudice the rights of the accused. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 110.

21. — Misconduct of persons not connected with trial.—In a prosecution for murder of mother-in-law, a conviction will not be reversed by reason of the fact that defendant's wife, whom defendant would not permit to testify, sat in the courtroom, but away from defendant and his relatives, during the argument. Smith v. State (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 497.

22. — Rulings as to jurors.—If challenge for cause is well taken, and defendant, having exhausted peremptory challenges, is forced to take objectionable juror, he is entitled to reversal. Fernandez v. State, 82 Cr. R. 129, 198 S. W. 301; Collins v. State, 84 Cr. R. 228, 206 S. W. 688.

It appearing that the jurors summoned responded, and that, after eliminating those properly excused for good cause, there remained about 100 veniremen, and that in selecting the jury the appellant did not exhaust his peremptory challenges, and no objectionable juror having been forced upon him, there was no prejudicial error in overruling the motion to quash the venire. Jones v. State, 85 Cr. R. 538, 214 S. W. 322.

Where venireman was excused upon peremptory challenge, and the court offered to restore the challenge to accused, no error appeared, even though the juror was subject to challenge for cause. Moore v. State, 85 Cr. R. 403, 214 S. W. 344.

Where, although the environment of a juror was such as to have given him opportunity to have formed opinion touching the case, nothing was disclosed which would have made him subject to challenge for cause, and he was excused on peremptory challenge and no objectionable juror was forced on accused, and he failed to exhaust his peremptory challenges, no error was shown. Id.

Where four names on a copy of special venire served on defendant were misspelled or a wrong initial given, and such jurors were excused without the objection of defendant on trial for murder and without use of his challenges which were not exhausted, and he asked no attachment for them, such errors in names were immaterial. (Per Prendergast, J.) Porter v. State, 86 Cr. R. 23, 215 S. W. 201.

Error of court in failing to sustain challenge for cause does not require reversal, where the juror was excused on peremptory challenge of accused, and the court allowed an additional peremptory challenge. Whittington v. State, 86 Cr. R. 1, 215 S. W. 456.

Judgment will not be reversed for failure of court to require sheriff to amend return, so as to show efforts made to summon unsummoned juror, where it does not appear that accused suffered injury from failure of sheriff to amend return or from lack of diligence in executing writ. Id.

In a murder trial, error, if any, in overruling defendant's challenges to jurors, who stated that they had opinions regarding the case, held harmless, where defendant's peremptory challenges had not been exhausted. Cotton v. State, 86 Cr. R. 387, 217 S. W. 158.

Since an accused is entitled to that character of jury trial provided by law, it is reversible error to draw a jury in any other manner than that provided by law; the question of injury not entering into the case. Johnson v. State, 86 Cr. R. 566, 218 S. W. 496.

In a criminal prosecution where juror on his voir dire admitted that if selected he would enter the jury box with "a feeling against the defendant" and the challenge for cause was overruled and the juror excused on peremptory challenge, a bill of exceptions objecting thereto is not available when qualified by a statement that defendant failed to exhaust his challenges and no improper or prejudiced juror was forced on him. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 213.

As art. 691 gives the accused the right to 15 peremptory challenges in a capital case, the arbitrary denial of that right in a prosecution for rape which is punishable by death or imprisonment in the penitentiary is a denial of a fair trial, even though the prosecutor stated that he would not insist on the death penalty. Kerley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 163.

In a homicide case, it was prejudicial error for the court of his own motion to stand aside a juror, where accused waived his ground of challenge. McGowen v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 763.

24. — Refusal to place witnesses under rule.—Court's action in permitting witnesses to remain in courtroom after the rule has been invoked, and permitting them, each in the presence of the other, to testify as to statement by defendant written by one and signed as witness by the other, was harmless, where defendant himself admitted having made the statement. Clark v. State, 85 Cr. R. 153, 210 S. W. 544.

25. — Admission of evidence—Materiality and effect in general.—Where defendant's theory was that he was insane at the time of the assault, but not at the time of the trial, he could not complain that a doctor, who testified on cross-examination that the eyes of defendant were red and glaring after the cutting, on further inquiry by the state testified that defendant's eyes did not look on the trial like they did the day of the crime; such testimony being favorable to the defendant. Pruitt v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 525.

In prosecution of a father for refusal to support his minor children, testimony that he had paid his wife money for her support or that of children after complaint and information were filed would be in his favor, and would not tend to show any offense against him committed after prosecution was begun. Utsler v. State, 81 Cr. R. 501, 195 S. W. 855.

Where a state's attorney's statement was tantamount to a statement that the fact sought by his question, which was objected to, was the truth, and that defendant's counsel knew it, and did not want the truth to come out, the question having assumed matters outside the record, his statement was improper and prejudicial, and the court will not speculate as to the amount of the injury. Scitern v. State, 87 Cr. R. 112, 219 S. W. 833.

On a trial for pursuing the business of selling intoxicating liquors in prohibition territory where detectives testified for the state, the argument of the county attorney that the state was justified in employing persons as witness to apprehend a defendant who had been so smooth as to violate the law and evade other means of apprehension was not injurious to defendant where the lowest punishment permissible was given. Mann v. State, 87 Cr. R. 142, 221 S. W. 296.

Where defendant was convicted of murder and given 10 years' sentence, held that it was prejudicial error for the prosecuting attorney to tell the jury that if defendant was acquitted or awarded a suspended sentence it would be a stench in the nostrils of every citizen of the county. Id.

Prosecuting attorney's apostrophe to the various members of deceased's family who were present contributing to the sympathetic effect of his closing address, calculated to arouse the jury's sympathy, is improper in a murder trial, but where it contained no misstatement of any issue, and no objection was made thereto and no special charge on the subject requested, it does not constitute reversible error. Lasater v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 949.

In prosecution for statutory rape, where, when appellant asked the jurors on their voir dire if they had any prejudice against the crime of rape, the district attorney objected, saying he would not have a man on the jury who was not prejudiced against the crime of rape, but the trial court instructed the jury to disregard such statement, no injury resulted to accused, to whom the jury gave the lowest punishment allowed by law. Young v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 414.

In a prosecution for aggravated assault, where a juror stated that the defendant was guilty of incest and ought to be given 10 years, and was promptly reprimanded for the remark by the foreman, and upon the next ballot more of the jurors were in favor of an acquittal than before, held, that such remark was not shown to have prejudiced the defendant. *Rodriguez v. Proc. arts. 1017-1030. Escue v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 483.

Art. 939. [905] Cases remanded, when.

Reversal on the facts.—Though the verdict must not be lightly annulled in any case it is the duty of the Court of Criminal Appeals, under this article, to set it aside and order another trial when the evidence, viewed in its strongest light from the standpoint of the state, fails to make guilt reasonably certain. Jolly v. State, 87 Cr. R. 288, 221 S. W. 279.

While the Court of Criminal Appeals, under this article, has the right to reverse conviction on account of insufficiency of the evidence, and it becomes its duty to do so if the guilt of accused is not made to appear with reasonable certainty, there is no fixed rule which will in all cases furnish a certain standard, and each case must in a measure be tested by its own facts. Taylor v. State, 87 Cr. R. 330, 221 S. W. 611.

In a prosecution for statutory rape, evidence held to show defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, so as not to warrant setting aside the verdict and remanding for new trial under this article. Cook v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 213.

Remanding for new trial.—On appeal from conviction as a juvenile delinquent where in the record there is found neither indictment nor information, in the absence of which a conviction must fall, but a complaint is found upon which it is possible that information may yet be filed, the prosecution will not be dismissed, but the judgment will be reversed, and the cause remanded. Dias v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 165.

Art. 950. [916] Appeal in habeas corpus.

2. Decisions reviewable.—An appeal cannot be prosecuted from a refusal to grant a writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Smith, 85 Cr. R. 649, 215 S. W. 299.

This article contemplates that the appeal shall be taken from a decision of the trial judge or court after a hearing. Ex parte Lozano (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 59.

5. Requisites of transcript.—Under this article, a trial judge, who tries a habeas corpus case in vacation, where an appeal is taken, must himself certify to the record; it not being sufficient that it is certified to by the clerk. Ex parte Young, 87 Cr. R. 128, 219 S. W. 1102.

On motion to dismiss an appeal from a habeas corpus proceeding in vacation, in that the record was certified by the clerk, and not by the judge, as required by this article, a request of the accused that, if the state's motion is sustained, he be permitted to withdraw the transcript, in order that it may be certified to by the judge, will be granted. Id.

Where the record on habeas corpus appeal shows that relator was charged with murder and was held without bail to await indictment by the grand jury the omission of the formal commitment is immaterial. Ex parte Townsley, 87 Cr. R. 252, 220 S. W. 1092.

Under this article, where proceedings for habeas corpus are in vacation, the transcript, on relator's appeal from refusal to issue the writ, to be considered, must bear the certificate of the judge. Ex parte Lozano (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 59.

Where the transcript in a habeas corpus proceeding showed the application for the writ, the answer of the officers and the order denying bail, but no notice of appeal, the court had no jurisdiction. Ex parte Cates (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 396.

7. Statement of facts and bills of exceptions.—Contention of petitioner in habeas corpus that he objected to certain evidence is not available on appeal, it not being shown by bill of exceptions. Ex parte Williams, 84 Cr. R. 131, 206 S. W. 195.

8. Effect of appeal.—When notice of appeal in a habeas corpus case was entered, the Court of Criminal Appeals obtained jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the person of the relator for disposition of his appeal. Ex parte Davis (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 176.

Art. 952. [918] Habeas corpus, when heard.

Cited, Ryan v. State, 81 Cr. R. 632, 198 S. W. 582; Long v. State, 82 Cr. R. 403, 199 S. W. 619.

Art. 953. [919] Shall be heard upon the record, etc.

Review in general.—On appeal from an order denying bail to one charged with murder, the question is not whether the Court of Criminal Appeals would sustain a verdict inflicting capital punishment, but whether, in the opinion of such court a jury, in due administration of the law, would probably convict and inflict capital punishment. Ex parte Young, 87 Cr. R. 412, 222 S. W. 242.

Where there were two applications for a writ of habeas corpus based on different facts, and a general order was issued remanding relator to the custody of the sheriff, and it is not shown upon which application the order was made, nor whether any evidence was offered, the trial court's ruling will not be reviewed. Ex parte Davis (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 176.

Under such record, it was unnecessary to review a separate paper filed in the appellate court showing that, after notice of appeal was given, the relator had been carried into another state. Id.

Review of facts and comment on evidence.—In habeas corpus proceeding, the Court of Criminal Appeals, on reversing judgment remanding petitioner to custody without bail, and granting such bail, will express no opinion as to the weight of the evidence, inasmuch as the case is to be tried before a jury. Ex parte Beauchamp (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 634; Ex parte Argenta, 83 Cr. R. 41, 224 S. W. 391; Ex parte Steen (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 684.

Where a judgment denying an application for habeas corpus seeking discharge on bond must be affirmed, statement of facts and reasons for such conclusion will not be given, and the facts will not be discussed. Ex parte Smith, 85 Cr. R. 652, 215 S. W. 299.

On appeal from an order denying bail to one charged with murder, the court will not make a detailed statement and analysis of the evidence. Ex parte Young, 87 Cr. R. 412, 222 S. W. 242.

Art. 954. [920] Orders in the case.

Determination and disposition of case.—If there is anything in the record requiring the Court of Criminal Appeals in a habeas corpus case to reverse the action of the trial court, the appellate court could enter such judgment or make such orders as necessary to enforce its jurisdiction and to compel enforcement of its orders. Ex parte Davis (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 176.

The writ of habeas corpus is only for the purpose of relieving from illegal restraint, and where defendant's application was denied, and pending his appeal therefrom he was convicted of murder and sentenced to death, so that bail cannot be granted, the appeal will be dismissed. Ex parte Crow (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 147.

Reinstatement of appeal.—Where relator seeking habeas corpus to procure bail appealed from denial of his application, and pending appeal he was convicted and sentenced for murder, and his appeal was dismissed it may be reinstated on rehearing pending his appeal from the conviction, and determined on the merits after reversal of the judgment of conviction. Ex parte Crow (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 147.

Art. 960. [926] Appeal from judgment on recognizance.

Right to appeal.—Where defendant was charged with gaming, and a judgment nisi forfeiting his bail bond was entered, but there was no final judgment, there was nothing for review. Bostick v. State, 81 Cr. R. 404, 195 S. W. 862.

Since, under arts. 488-643, judgment nisi on forfeiture of bail bond is interlocutory, and does not become final, in view of arts. 490, 493-498, until citation is entered, dismissal of motion to set aside judgment nisi left such judgment in statu quo, and the order was not appealable, in view of arts. 504, 960, and Civ. St. art. 2073, providing that appeals lie only from final judgments. Burgemeister v. State, 83 Cr. R. 307, 203 S. W. 770.

Under arts. 960-962, sureties may take a default judgment against them on a bond to the appellate court for review either by direct appeal or by writ of error. Finley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 420.

Rules in civil cases apply.—Under this and the following articles, appeals in scire facias cases on a bail bond must be prepared for submission, and briefs must be filed, as required by the rules in civil cases. Mayer v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 403.

Art. 961. [927] Defendant entitled also to writ of error.

See Mayer v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 403; Finley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 420; notes to art. 960.

Art. 962. [928] Same rules govern as in civil cases.

See Finley v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 420; notes to art. 960.

Transcript.—Where transcript contains an indictment, order of transfer from district to county court, judgment nisi forfeiting bail bond, and bill of exceptions not approved by judge, but sworn to by bystanders whose affidavits were taken by defendant's attorney, and a certificate of commitment, the appeal will be dismissed. Bostick v. State, 81 Cr. R. 412, 195 S. W. 863.

Briefs.—Under arts. 497, 962, the failure of parties appealing from judgments on forfeited bail bonds to file briefs in the appellate court or in the trial court as required by District and County Courts Rule 102 (142 S. W. xxiv), and Civil Courts of Appeals Rule 29 (142 S. W. xii), requires dismissal of the appeal for want of jurisdiction. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 409; Kennedy v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 415.

Under arts. 891-893, appeals in scire facias cases on a bail bond must be prepared for submission, and briefs must be filed, as required by the rules in civil cases. Mayer v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 408.

On appeal from a judgment final on a forfeited bail bond, briefs must be filed by appellants in the lower court as well as in the Court of Criminal Appeals; such appeal being in the nature of a civil appeal. Grammer v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 165.

Use of statement at trial.—This article was intended to aid the officers of the law to ascertain the facts, and, even if art. 795, declaring a wife cannot testify against her husband, does not prevent an examination of the wife under this article, it does prevent the use of the wife's statement at the trial of accused even for the purpose of impeaching the testimony of the wife given at the trial in behalf of accused. *Turner v. Inquiry after conviction.—If it be claimed that defendant's mind is of such a character as to render him legally insane, the matter can be inquired into after as well as before trial for a criminal offense, and, on adjudication of the question in a lunacy proceeding, defendant can be sent to an institution for the insane, and not to the penitentiary. *Hunter v. ## TITLE 14 OF FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE

1105. Reward shall be paid by state.

Article 1088. [1051] Fugitive from justice delivered up, when.

2. Who are fugitives from justice.—One who was convicted under an indictment and was sent to prison and was paroled and broke the conditions upon which his freedom from confinement depended was in no better position than if he had escaped by force, and was subject to extradition. Ex parte Carroll, 86 Cr. R. 301, 217 S. W. 382, 8 A. L. R. 901.

Where a convict broke the conditions of his parole, and it was revoked by proper authorities, who directed his arrest, he could be extradited, although he remained in the state and did not flee to another state until his term of imprisonment would have ended; the lapse of time intervening before he left the state not satisfying the penalty against him. Id.

3. Requisition.—Where a Governor in his application for a requisition of a fugitive enumerates all documents attached thereto, and says, "which I certify to be authentic and duly authenticated according to the laws of this state," there is sufficient authentication of the complaint, affidavits and warrant, made in Arizona, included in the enumerated documents. Ex parte Jones, 82 Cr. R. 627, 199 S. W. 1110.

In extradition cases the test is the sufficiency in the demanding state of the affidavit filed with requisition. Ex parte Nix, 85 Cr. R. 307, 212 S. W. 507.

Where a requisition shows that an affidavit has been made against the accused in the demanding state, and that a demand has been made upon the Governor of the state of the forum, which certifies that the affidavit is authentic, the requirements of the law are met, and it is immaterial that the prosecuting attorney of a county of the demanding state was allowed to testify on habeas corpus that certain acts constitute an offense under the law of that state. Ex parte Roselle, 87 Cr. R. 470, 222 S. W. 248.

Under Act Cong. Feb. 12, 1793, on the subject of extradition, it is absolutely necessary and is an essential prerequisite that a requisition paper be accompanied by a certified copy of the affidavit or indictment. Ex parte Gradington (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 781.

6. Executive warrant.—Where warrant recited that Governor of demanding state had made known to Governor of this state that relator is charged "with the crime of false pretenses," the warrant made a prima facie case in habeas corpus proceeding, in view of rule that offense may be designated by name in general terms, and the trial court did not err in holding that warrant was not fatally defective in that it charged relator with "false pretenses," not denominated an offense in demanding state. Ex parte Nix, 85 Cr. R. 307, 212 S. W. 507.

Where the Governor did not attach to the warrant the various papers which he recites therein as furnished to him as the basis for the issuance of the warrant, it devolved upon relator in habeas corpus proceeding to show that the papers before the Governor were insufficient to authorize the issuance of the warrant. Id.

The certificate of the Governor of this state, that the Governor of the demanding state had made it known to him that relator was charged by complaint, and that the demand for his surrender was "accompanied by a copy of the complaint duly certified as authentic by the Governor" of the demanding state, was sufficient to put upon relator the burden of proving that demand was not accompanied by a copy of complaint duly certified, and it was not necessary that Governor's warrant be accompanied by complaint charging the offense. Id.

The issuance of an executive warrant by the Governor, the sufficiency of which is not questioned, establishes prima facie the authority of the officer to hold an alleged fugitive. Ex parte Carroll, 86 Cr. R. 301, 217 S. W. 382, 8 A. L. R. 901.

The issuance of an executive warrant by the Governor on requisition by the Governor of another state, alleging that the alleged fugitive had broken his parole, implies that the warrant was rightfully issued, and it was incumbent on the fugitive to prove the terms of the parole and that he did not break the conditions thereof. Id.

In an extradition case, it is not necessary that there be a certified copy of the indictment or of the complaint accompanying the Governor's warrant. Ex parte Roselle, 87 Cr. R. 470, 222 S. W. 248.

12. Presumptions and burden of proof.—The burden is on one being extradited to show that he had not been in the state applying for his delivery, where the application and warrant state that he stood charged with crime in such state. Ex parte Jones, 82 Cr. R. 627, 199 S. W. 1110.

Art. 1091. [1054] Complaint shall be sufficient, if it recites, etc.

Sufficiency of complaint.—An affidavit that defendant was a fugitive from justice from Arizona, where he obtained money under false pretenses in violation of the Penal Code of such state, and that he had fled from such state where he committed such offense, and is now in the state of Texas, and asking that a warrant be issued, was sufficient to support a warrant for extradition under this article. Ex parte Jones, 82 Cr. R. 627, 199 S. W. 1110.

Art. 1105. [1068] Reward shall be paid by state.

See Choice v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 753.

1. FEES AND COMPENSATION IN GENERAL

Article 1117a. [1119 and 1137, Rev. C. C. P. 1911] [1092] Fees in examining courts, etc.

Fees as "public money."—Fees of office received by district attorney out of state treasury under the provisions of Code Cr. Proc. arts. 1118, 1119, 1132-1134, are "public money," within Const. art. 3, § 51, prohibiting grant of public money to municipal corporations and others, but commissions on forfeitures of bail bonds, deducted under art. 1193, are not public money within such provision. Bexar County v. Linden (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 478.

Art. 1117b. [1120, Rev. C. C. P. 1911] Compensation allowed district attorneys of districts composed of two counties or more; assistant district attorney; salary; removal.—In addition to the five hundred dollars now allowed them by law, district attorneys in all judicial districts of this State composed of two counties or more shall receive from the State as compensation for their services, the sum of fifteen dollars for each day they attend the session of the district court in their respective districts in the necessary discharge of their official duty, and fifteen dollars per day for each day they represent the State at examining trials, inquest proceedings and habeas corpus proceedings in vacation; said fifteen dollars per day to be paid to the district attorneys, upon the sworn account of the district attorney, approved by the district judge, who shall certify that the attendance of said district attorney for the number of days mentioned in his account was necessary, after which said account shall be recorded in the minutes of the district court; provided, that the maximum number of days for such attendance and service for which the compensation is allowed shall not exceed one hundred and seventy days in any one year; and, provided further, that all fees in misdemeanor cases, and commissions and fees heretofore allowed district attorneys under the provisions of Article 1118 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and in Chapter 5 of the General Laws passed at the Special Session of the Twenty-fifth Legislature, in districts composed of two or more counties shall, when collected, be paid to the clerk of the district court, who shall pay the same over to the State Treasurer; provided, the provisions of this bill shall not apply to district attorneys whose last preceding annual report of himself or his predecessor shows that he or his predecessor making such report received in fees, under the criminal laws, over two thousand four hundred and ninety-five dollars. Provided, further, that in districts composed of two or more counties, and in which said district there is a county containing a city of thirty-five thousand population or over, according to the last federal census, the district attorney in such district shall, with the approval of the county commissioners court of such county, be authorized to appoint one assistant district attorney, who shall receive a salary of not to exceed one hundred and fifty dollars per month, such salary to be paid by such county, payable monthly; and provided, further that such assistant district attorney, when so appointed, shall take the oath of office, and be authorized to represent the State in such county, and such authority to be exercised under the direction of the district attorney, and such assistant district attorney shall be subject to removal at the will of the district attorney. Such assistant district attorney shall be authorized to perform any duty devolving upon the district attorney and to perform and exercise any power conferred by law upon the district attorney when by him so authorized. [Acts 1909, p. 238; Acts 1907, p. 326; Acts 1915, 34th Leg., ch. 127, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 70, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

2. COMPENSATION OF CLERK OF DISTRICT COURT, DISTRICT ATTORNEY, COUNTY ATTORNEY, SHERIFF AND CONSTABLES IN COUNTIES IN WHICH 3,000 OR MORE VOTES ARE CAST

Such compensation shall be paid in the same manner as the per diem and fees of District Attorneys and County Attorneys performing the duties of District Attorneys are now paid, provided that such additional compensation shall not be granted to any officer where the same will increase his entire compensation to more than five thousand dollars per annum. Article 1142. [1097] Allowance to sheriff for prisoners.—For the safekeeping, support and maintenance of prisoners confined in jail or under guard, the sheriff shall be allowed the following charges:

1. For each prisoner for each day, such amount as may be fixed by the Commissioners' Court provided the same shall be reasonably sufficient for such purposes and in no event shall it be less than forty cents per day for each prisoner, nor more than one dollar per day for each prisoner. Provided, however, that after January 1, 1923, the net profits shall constitute fees of office and be accounted for by the sheriff in his annual report as other fees now provided by law; and the sheriff shall in such report furnish an itemized verified account of all expenditures made by him for feeding and maintenance of prisoners, accompanying such report with receipts and vouchers in support of such items of expenditures and the difference between such expenditures and the amounts allowed by the Commissioners' Court shall be deemed to constitute the net profits for which said officer shall account as fees of office.

2. For necessary medical bills and reasonable extra compensation for attention to a prisoner during sickness, such an amount as the Commissioners' Court of the county where the prisoner is confined may determine to be just and proper.

3. The reasonable funeral expenses in case of death. [Act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 290, § 1; Act 1911, p. 107, ch. 64, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 19, § 2.]

Took effect 90 days after adjournment which occurred March 12, 1921.

Compensation for part of day.—Under Acts 32d Leg. c. 64, sheriff is entitled to full compensation for prisoner under his contract with commissioners' court, though prisoner is in custody only part of day. Dallas County v. Reynolds (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 702.

Sheriff is entitled to per diem allowance of 40 cents per day for a prisoner under his contract with commissioners' court, where a prisoner is in jail for any substantial part of a day. Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 451.

Profit or loss.—Under Civ. St. arts. 3881, 3888, 3889, 3894, 3895, 3897, 3903, and Code Cr. Proc. 1911, arts. 1142-1149, where commissioners' court within limitation prescribed, fixes allowance for support and maintenance of prisoners, sheriff must stand any loss, while any profit belongs to him. Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Allowance as fees.—Under Civ. St. arts. 3881, 3888, 3889, 3894, 3895, 3897, 3903, and Code Cr. Proc. 1911, arts. 1142-1149, held, that amounts allowed a sheriff by commissioners' court, within limitations prescribed by statute, for safe-keeping, feeding, and care of prisoners, cannot be included in estimating maximum amount of fees a sheriff may retain. Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Allowances made sheriff by commissioners' court for safe-keeping and maintenance of prisoners in jail are not "fees of office," within the maximum fee bill, and need not be reported or accounted for by him under provisions of said bill. Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 451.

Art. 1143. [1098] Allowance for jail guards and matrons.—The sheriff shall be allowed for each guard or matron necessarily employed in the safe-keeping of prisoners two dollars and fifty cents for each day; and there shall not be any allowance made for the board of such guard, or matron, nor shall any allowance be made for jailer or turnkey, except in counties of forty thousand population or more. In such counties of forty thousand population or more the commissioners' court may allow each jail guard, matron, jailer and turnkey four dollars and fifty cents per day. [Act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 290; Act 1909, p. 98; Acts 1915, 34th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 20, § 1; Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 68, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 122, § 2.]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

See Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Deputy sheriff as guard.—Under this article, despite its amendments in 1909 and 1915, the sheriff of a county of less than 35,000 population is not liable for moneys paid to him by authorization of the commissioners' court for hire of a deputy sheriff as a guard at the county jail, though there was only one deputy sheriff kept at the jail, so that the county contended he was the jailer and not a guard; the commissioners' court being unauthorized to pay the salary of a jailer. Cooper v. Johnson County (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 528.

Art. 1144. [1099] Sheriff shall pay what expenses, to be reimbursed by county.

See Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Art. 1145. [1100] Sheriff shall present account to district judge.

See McLaren v. State, 82 Cr. R. 449, 199 S. W. 811; Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Art. 1146. [1101] Judge shall examine account, etc.

See Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Art. 1147. [1102] Judge shall give sheriff draft upon county treasurer.

See Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Art. 1148. [1103] Account for keeping prisoners.

See Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Itemizing account.—Sheriff's accounts for keeping prisoners, giving name of each prisoner, number of days in jail, etc., held sufficiently itemized, within this article. Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 451.

Art. 1149. [1104] Commissioners' court shall examine account, and order draft, etc.

Re-opening order.—That sheriff, in presenting to commissioners' court his accounts, concealed actual cost of safe-keeping, etc., of prisoners, held not to authorize, on grounds of fraud and mistake, reopening of order in commissioners' court approving accounts. Harris County v. Hammond (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 445.

Art. 1154. [1109] Fees of county judge.

Dismissed actions.—Under this article, the county judge is not entitled to the specified fee for actions dismissed without trial. Brackenridge v. State, 27 Tex. App. 513, 11 S. W. 630, 4 L. R. A. 360.

Art. 1155. [1110] How collected.

Presentation of account as part of official duties.—Since this article makes it the duty of the county judge to present his certified account to the commissioners' court for his fees, an indictment for demanding fees not allowed by law does not charge an act outside defendant's official duty. Brackenridge v. State, 27 Tex. App. 513, 11 S. W. 630, 4 L. R. A. 360.

Art. 1162. [1117] Certificates for pay of jurors and bailiffs.

Issuance of certificate to assignee.—Under this and the following article, it was not the duty of the clerk of a district or county court to pass upon the validity of a transfer by a juror or bailiff of a claim against a county, and that the clerk could not be compelled by mandamus to issue to an assignee of such claim the certificate designated in the said statute, although evidencing only the right of the assignor to compensation. Face v. Ortiz, 72 Tex. 437, 10 S. W. 541.

Art. 1163. [1118] Drafts and certificates receivable for county taxes.

See Face v. Ortiz, 72 Tex. 437, 10 S. W. 541; notes to art. 1162.

CHAPTER FOUR

OF COSTS TO BE PAID BY DEFENDANT

2. IN THE DISTRICT AND COUNTY COURTS

- Art.
1169. [Superseded.]
1173. Fees of sheriff and other peace officers.

3. IN JUSTICES', MAYORS' AND RECORDERS' COURTS

- Art.
1177. Fees of state's attorney.
1179. In case of several defendants, and where defendant pleads guilty.
1180. No fee allowed attorney, etc.

2. IN THE DISTRICT AND COUNTY COURTS

Article 1169. [Superseded.]

Explanatory.—This article, relating to fees of county attorneys in local option cases, is rendered inoperative by the amendment of art. 16, § 20 of the state Constitution, and by Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 78, ante, Penal Code, arts. 588¼-588½tt.

Art. 1173. [1127] Fees of sheriff and other peace officers.—The following fees shall be allowed the sheriff and other peace officer performing the same services in misdemeanor cases to be taxed against the defendant on conviction:

1. For executing each warrant of arrest or capias, or making arrest without warrant, two dollars;
2. For summoning each witness, seventy-five cents;
3. For serving any writ not otherwise provided for, one dollar;
4. For taking and approving each bond and returning the same to the courthouse, when necessary, one dollar and fifty cents;
5. For each commitment or release, one dollar;
6. Jury fee in each case where a jury is actually summoned, one dollar;
7. For attending a prisoner on habeas corpus, when such prisoner, upon a hearing, has been remanded to custody or held to bail, for each days' attendance, two dollars;
8. For conveying a witness attached by him to any court out of his county, four dollars for each day or fractional part thereof and his actual necessary expenses by the nearest practicable public conveyance, the amount to be stated by said officer, under oath and approved by the judge of the court from which the attachment issued;

9. For conveying a prisoner after conviction to the county jail, for each mile, going and coming, by the nearest practicable route by private conveyance, ten cents a mile, or by railway, seven and one-half cents a mile;

10. For conveying a prisoner arrested on a warrant or capias issued from another county to the court or jail of the county from which the process was issued, for each mile traveled going and coming, by the nearest practicable route, twelve and one-half cents.

11. For each mile he may be compelled to travel in executing criminal process and summoning or attaching witness, seven and one-half cents. For traveling in the service of process not otherwise provided for, the sum of seven and one-half cents for each mile going and returning. If two or more persons are mentioned in the same writ, or two or more writs in the same case, he shall charge only for the distance actually and necessarily traveled in the execution of the same. [Act Aug. 23, 1876, p. 289, § 11; Acts 1895, p. 182; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 19, § 1.]

3. IN JUSTICES', MAYORS' AND RECORDERS' COURTS

Art. 1177. Fees of state's attorney.

Validity and construction of ordinance.—An ordinance of a town in Harris county, fixing the fees of the city attorney in criminal cases to be taxed against the defendant, but providing that no fees should be taxed unless the city attorney prosecuted in person, will not be construed as forbidding fees to be taxed in favor of the district attorney, allowed him under Civ. St. arts. 345a, 345b; Code Cr. Proc. arts. 1177, 1179, 1180. Monk v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 194.

Although a city in Harris county could, under this article, provide that no fees should be allowed attorneys prosecuting criminal cases in the city court, it could not fix a fee to be taxed in cases prosecuted by the city attorney, and then deny the district attorney of the county a right to fees, in view of Civ. St. arts. 345a, 345b; Code Cr. Proc. arts. 1179, 1180. Id.

Art. 1179. [1131] In case of several defendants, and where defendant pleads guilty.

See Monk v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 194; notes to art. 1177.

Art. 1180. [1132] No fee allowed attorney, etc.

Article 1193. [1143] Commissions allowed district and county attorneys.

Cited, Hedrick v. Sick, 73 Tex. 616, 11 S. W. 862.

Commissions as fees.—The word "fees," in Rev. St. 1911, art. 3883, relating to limitation of compensation of district attorneys, includes commissions on forfeited ball bonds. Bexar County v. Linden (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 478.

Commissions as "public money."—Fees of office received by district attorney out of state treasury under the provisions of arts. 1118, 1119, 1132-1134, are "public money," within Const. art. 3, § 51, prohibiting grant of public money to municipal corporations and others; but commissions on forfeitures of ball bonds, deducted under art. 1193, are not public money within such provision. Bexar County v. Linden (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 478.

1202. Probation officers; appointment, etc.

1203. Commitment of delinquent to care of proper person or institution or of probation officer, etc.

1206. Commitment of incorrigible boys to State Industrial School for Boys; petition by parent or guardian, etc.

COUNTY JUVENILE BOARDS

1207e. Board for certain counties created.

STATE JUVENILE TRAINING SCHOOL

Article 1195. [1145] Male persons under the age of seventeen accused of felony to be prosecuted as juvenile delinquents, etc.

See Ex parte Little, 83 Cr. R. 375, 203 S. W. 766.

2. Validity of statute.—Legislature in enacting criminal laws may take cognizance of the youth of offenders and make provisions modifying or exempting them from punishment, which classification is valid where it operates in a uniform manner upon the class. McLaren v. State, 82 Cr. R. 449, 199 S. W. 811.

Juvenile delinquent law, providing that males under 17, guilty of what would otherwise be a felony, shall be committed to an institution only during minority, etc., is a proper exercise of legislative authority. Ex parte Pruitt, 82 Cr. R. 394, 200 S. W. 392.

Juvenile delinquent law, arts. 1195, 1196, construed with Const. art. 5, § 5, defining jurisdiction of Court of Criminal Appeals, and Code Cr. Proc. art. 894, giving the right to appeal, is not void because denying the right of appeal. Ex parte McLoud, 82 Cr. R. 299, 200 S. W. 394.

In view of arts. 1195, 1198, 1200, the law defining delinquent children held valid as against the contention that it deprives an accused of the fundamental right to a trial by jury and to be heard by counsel. Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520.

4½. Construction and operation of statute in general.—Acts 33d Leg. c. 112, § 1, amending this article, and providing that, when male under 17 is indicted for felony, and statement is filed showing him under 17, the judge, if satisfied that he is under such age, shall dismiss prosecution and try him as a juvenile delinquent, is mandatory. McLaren v. State, 82 Cr. R. 449, 199 S. W. 811.

Civ. St. art. 5229, as amended by Acts 33d Leg. (1st Called Sess.) c. 6, § 9, is not in conflict with mandatory provisions of Acts 33d Leg. c. 112, § 1. Id.

Acts 33d Leg. c. 112, § 1, repealing a former provision, leaving a transfer of case of juvenile charged with felony to juvenile court to trial judge's discretion, repealed Rev. Civ. St. art. 2200, containing a similar provision. Id.

Art. 1206, designating a procedure whereby a parent may cause the restraint of an incorrigible juvenile, is not exclusive, but art. 1197, as amended, and this article, also designate procedure which the courts may follow. Ex parte Davis, 85 Cr. R. 213, 211 S. W. 456.

6. Indeterminate and suspended sentence.—See Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520.

6½. Practice and procedure in general.—Necessity of complaint or information, see Ex parte Ramseur, 81 Cr. R. 413, 195 S. W. 864; Ex parte Medrano, 81 Cr. R. 388, 195 S. W. 865; notes to art. 1199.

Prosecution and conviction under juvenile delinquent law is criminal, and not civil, case. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 389.

Much latitude must be given in the administration of the law concerning juvenile crimes, but the authorities cannot be too careful to see that no right is lost to one accused of a violation of the law through ignorance of the legal and constitutional guarantees of trial by jury and to be represented by counsel. Ex parte Brooks, 85 Cr. R. 252, 211 S. W. 592.

The contention that even though there is a failure to follow the procedure named and bring to the court's attention the claim of one accused of a felony to be tried as a juvenile, the legislative policy should nevertheless be given effect by refusing to send such accused person to the penitentiary is untenable. Slade v. State, 85 Cr. R. 358, 212 S. W. 661.

7. Trial of issue as to age.—Question of juvenility, where an affidavit is filed in accordance with this article, is one for the trial court preliminary to the trial by the jury. Lee v. State, 86 Cr. R. 146, 215 S. W. 326; Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

The matter of defendant's age raised by his affidavit of juvenility being for the court alone, it was proper to refuse to tell the jury they could not convict if they believed him under 17 years of age at the time of the alleged offense, where there was no question as to his being of sufficient age to make him legally responsible. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

Where one called for trial presents an affidavit of juvenility in accordance with the provisions of this article, and tenders testimony in support of the facts therein stated, the court is bound to give him a hearing upon such issue; although upon a former trial a former affidavit had been filed, and testimony heard by the court and the issue decided adversely to the accused, the issuable matter being the age of accused when brought to trial. Lee v. State, 86 Cr. R. 146, 215 S. W. 326.

Under this and the following articles, accused, seeking to have the case transferred to the juvenile docket, has the burden of establishing to the satisfaction of the trial judge that he is under 17 years of age. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 786.

11. Age at time of trial as controlling.—One who commits a felony while under 17 years of age, can under this article be tried in district court in same manner as one who was more than 17 years of age when offense was committed, if he is more than 17 when brought to trial. McLaren v. State, 85 Cr. R. 31, 209 S. W. 669.

Where defendant was tried in district court for a felony committed while he was under 17 years of age, and for that reason appellate court, under this article, reversed and remanded case, district court on second trial, defendant having passed age of 17 years, properly refused to dismiss prosecution or send it to juvenile court, but correctly retained jurisdiction. Id.

Had the issue been suggested on trial that defendant appellant was under 17 years of age at the time of the seduction, for which he was convicted, he could not have been relegated to the juvenile law relating to youths of that age, where he was 19 years of age when tried, so that the juvenile act did not apply, and he could be convicted of the felony. Stracner v. State, 86 Cr. R. 89, 215 S. W. 305.

15. Jury.—In prosecution of defendant between 16 and 17 years of age as a juvenile delinquent, under this article, the court had power to impose sentence without a verdict of a jury; a jury having been waived, and the prosecution not being for a felony. Lee v. State, 86 Cr. R. 203, 215 S. W. 856.

16. — Assessment of punishment.—Juvenile delinquent law, fixing maximum and minimum punishment and giving right to trial by jury, requires that jury shall fix punishment, in view of art. 770, and commitment by the court was unauthorized and void. Ex parte Pruitt, 82 Cr. R. 394, 200 S. W. 392.

17. Review.—Appeal lies from conviction under juvenile delinquent law directly to Court of Criminal Appeals. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 389.

Judgment committing male delinquent under 17 to state industrial school for boys for 5 years, not conforming to verdict committing him to juvenile training school for 5 years, will be reformed on appeal. Id.

The provision of this article, putting the burden of proof as to juvenility upon defendant and requiring that the judge be satisfied that accused is less than 17 years of age, places large discretionary power on the trial judge, and his decision will not be reviewed unless manifestly wrong. Jefferson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 614, 214 S. W. 981.

Where the evidence was conflicting as to whether defendant was under or over 17 years of age, the trial court's decision, based on sufficient evidence, is binding on review. Flores v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 320.

DELINQUENT CHILD, TO REGULATE THE CONTROL AND TREATMENT OF SAME

Art. 1197. Delinquent children.—The words "delinquent Child" shall include any male child under seventeen years of age, or any female child under eighteen years of age, who violates any law of this State, or who is incorrigible, or who knowingly associates with thieves, vicious or immoral persons, or who knowingly visits a house of ill repute, or who knowingly patronizes or visits any place where any gambling device is or shall be operated, or who patronizes any saloon or place where any intoxicating liquors are sold, or who habitually wanders about the streets in the night time without being on any business or occupation, or who habitually wanders about any railroad yard or tracks, or who habitually jumps on or off of any moving train, or who enters any car or engine without lawful authority, or who is guilty of immoral conduct in any public place. Any such child committing any of the acts herein mentioned shall be considered a "delinquent child," and shall be proceeded against as such in the manner hereinafter provided and as otherwise so provided by law so as to effect the object of this law. Any juvenile found by the Court or Jury to be a delinquent child shall be committed to the place or institution provided by law for juveniles, for an indeterminate period not extending beyond the time when such juvenile will reach the age of twenty-one years. A disposition of any child under this law or any evidence given in such case, shall not, in any civil, criminal, or other cause or proceeding whatever, in any court, be lawful or proper evidence against such child for any purpose whatever except in subsequent cases against the same child under this Act.

When an indictment is returned by the Grand Jury of any county charging any female juvenile under the age of eighteen years with a felony, the parent, guardian, attorney or next friend of such juvenile, or said juvenile herself, may file a sworn statement in court at any time before announcement of ready for trial is made in the case. When such statement is filed the judge of said court shall hear evidence on the question of the age of the defendant, and if he is satisfied from the evidence that said juvenile is less than eighteen years of age, said judge shall dismiss such prosecution and proceed to try the juvenile as a delinquent child, under the provisions of this Act.

If said juvenile be found to be delinquent, and sentence be not suspended as provided in the laws of this State in cases of felony on first offense, defendant on conviction shall be committed to the Girl's Training School, upon an indeterminate period not extending beyond the time that such juvenile will reach the age of twenty-one years, and the jury trying the case shall state in their verdict the time and place of commitment.

If a prosecution for misdemeanor is filed against a male under 17 years of age, or female under 18 years of age, the defendant or other person as named in Article 1195, may file affidavit, setting up her or his age, and on proof of such fact the prosecution shall be maintained against the defendant as a juvenile delinquent, without new charge.

Any proceeding under this Act begun by information and sworn complaint which states upon its face the age of the child as under seventeen years in the case of males and under eighteen years in the case of females, shall not be regarded as charging such child with a felony or a misdemeanor, but as a delinquent child, although such acts would otherwise charge a felony or a misdemeanor. A prosecution and conviction of a juvenile shall be regarded as a criminal, or a misdemeanor, case, and an appeal lies from such conviction directly to the Court of Criminal Appeals of Texas.

In any proceeding in any juvenile court under this Act the court or jury may substitute as a place of commitment any detention home, parental school, or school for girls or boys, established by any county, and the further disposition of the juvenile shall be governed as further provided for by the laws relating to delinquent children. [Acts 1907, p. 137, § 1; Acts 1913, p. 215, ch. 112, § 3; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 26, § 1.]

Took effect March 22, 1918.

See Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380; Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095; Scott v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1099.

Validity.—Provisions of the law defining delinquent and incorrigible children held not so incongruous and unintelligible that they cannot be understood or correctly enforced. Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520; Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

Juvenile delinquent law, defining juvenile delinquents and providing for trial, procedure, penalty, commitment, etc., held not so uncertain and indefinite within Pen. Code, art. 6, as to be invalid. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 339.

Construction and operation in general.—Art. 1206, designating a procedure whereby a parent may cause the restraint of an incorrigible juvenile, is not exclusive, but this article, as amended, and art. 1195, also designate procedure which the courts may follow. Ex parte Davis, 85 Cr. R. 218, 211 S. W. 456.

Under the provisions of the amendatory act of 1918, a female juvenile under 18 years of age charged with felony had the right to file a statement in court advising the judge of her claim that she was a juvenile, or to exercise her option to be tried under the indictment. Slade v. State, 85 Cr. R. 358, 212 S. W. 661.

Where the language of a statute relating to a female juvenile under the age of 18 years is the same as that relating to male juveniles under 17 years of age which had been previously construed, it must be presumed that the construction of such former statute indicates the legislative intent in the latter. Id.

Statutes defining delinquent children and creating juvenile courts, such as the amendatory Act of 1918, are beneficial and entitled to favorable construction. Hogue v. State, 87 Cr. R. 170, 220 S. W. 96.

The Act of 1918, providing for commitment of a minor girl charged with violation of the law to a juvenile reformatory instead of to the penitentiary, at her option or at the suggestion of other parties, merely provides a different punishment, but does not relieve her from liability to prosecution for perjury, and therefore does not render her incompetent as a witness. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 173.

What constitutes delinquency.—Under this article, as amended by Acts 35th Leg. 4th Called Sess. (1918) c. 26, a child under 17 years of age who "violates any law of the state" is a delinquent child, and the fact that defendant child made an assault upon a female child calculated to inflict shame and disgrace brought the case within the Delinquent Child Act, whether the assault was aggravated or simple. Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380.

"Incorrigible," used in the Act of 1918, in its general use means bad beyond correction or reform, but, in view of Pen. Code 1911, art. 10, it was not legislative intent that child to come within law must be bad beyond reform in absolute sense, but rather one whose reformation could not be effected by control to which he was subject. Hogue v. State, 87 Cr. R. 170, 220 S. W. 96.

Boy under 17 who cut another person with a knife, unless he did so in self-defense, was guilty of simple or aggravated assault, a violation of law, and became a delinquent under the Act of 1918. Simpson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 277, 220 S. W. 777.

Procedure in general.—See Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520; notes to art. 1198.

Where the county court sitting as a juvenile court, tried a complaint that a certain person was a dependent child before a jury, and adjudged such person to be a dependent child and the ward of the court subject to its orders until finally discharged or until attaining the age of 21 years, the proceeding was one to appoint a guardian for the dependent child. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 251.

On an information under the Act of 1918, charging defendant with being a delinquent child, and where a jury was demanded and impaneled and found defendant to be a delinquent child, the trial judge was without authority to fix the punishment, as defendant's guilt, as well as the amount of his punishment, was exclusively within the province of the jury. Gebhardt v. State, 87 Cr. R. 25, 218 S. W. 1047.

Consequences of conviction of a child of delinquency being to deprive him of liberty and withdraw it from paternal care, prosecutions are required, by the Act of 1918, to follow procedure in criminal cases. Hogue v. State, 87 Cr. R. 170, 220 S. W. 96.

Complaint and information.—See Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386; Hogue v. State, 87 Cr. R. 170, 220 S. W. 96; notes to Art. 1199.

Evidence.—In proceeding under juvenile delinquent law, testimony of sheriff that he had had defendant in jail several times for petty theft, and that he did not know when cases were tried, or know that he ever stole anything, was admissible as tending to prove state's main case against him. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 339.

In prosecution of child as delinquent because of aggravated assault, evidence held sufficient to support finding defendant was guilty through having committed assault with a knife, a deadly weapon, and having inflicted serious bodily injury. Simpson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 277, 220 S. W. 777.

In prosecution of defendant as a delinquent child for burglary, evidence of defendant's possession of cigars and tobacco of same kind as that stolen, but without identifying it as the particular cigars and tobacco stolen, held insufficient to support conviction. Woods v. State (Cr. App.) 225 S. W. 517.

Sentence and judgment.—A judgment in a juvenile prosecution committing a juvenile to a girls' training school without reciting the beginning or ending or duration of the confinement held void, under this article, as amended by the Act of 1918, requiring the judgment in a juvenile prosecution to specify both the time and place of confinement. Ex parte Roach, 87 Cr. R. 370, 221 S. W. 975.

A judgment of conviction of delinquency, showing that the minor appeared in person, that all interested persons received due notice, that a jury was waived, and that he entered a plea of guilty, held a sufficient compliance with the law, both in form and substance. Guinn v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 233.

Application of suspended sentence law.—See Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520.

In view of the Amendatory Act of 1918, children found delinquent are entitled to benefit of Suspended Sentence Law (art. 865b), and one proceeded against for first time should have been accorded privilege of having jury determine whether sentence should be suspended. Hogue v. State, 87 Cr. R. 170, 220 S. W. 96.

Review.—For claimed error in trial under juvenile delinquent law appeal should be resorted to, and not habeas corpus. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 339.

Where the court had jurisdiction to render the judgment and the law affords a remedy by appeal under the Amendatory Act of 1918, the Court of Criminal Appeals on an original application for habeas corpus cannot inquire into questions of procedure or sufficiency of evidence. Ex parte Davis, 85 Cr. R. 218, 211 S. W. 456.

Under this article, as amended by the Act of 1918, a juvenile convicted, no matter what the punishment, can appeal direct to the Criminal Court of Appeals. Ex parte Brooks, 85 Cr. R. 252, 211 S. W. 592.

As the juvenile law contains no provision governing appeals, appeals should be taken under the usual procedure in cases of felony or misdemeanor, as the case may appear, although such act contains a provision seeming to sweep away the distinction between misdemeanor and felonies when presented by complaint and information. Id.

An appeal by one found guilty of being a delinquent cannot be entertained where the appellate court cannot find in the record any judgment on the verdict, or any order directing the disposition to be made of the accused, under this article, as amended by the Act of 1918, and arts. 853-868. Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380.

While the court ordinarily declines to permit the functions of an appeal to be impinged by a writ of habeas corpus, the rule does not apply to the case of a mere child whose parents were not notified of the proceedings and who had no opportunity to prepare for an appeal, notwithstanding this article, as amended by the Act of 1918. Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386.

Art. 1198. Jurisdiction of district and county courts; jury trial; entry of findings; name of court.

Validity of law.—In view of arts. 1195, 1198, 1200, the law defining delinquent children held valid as against the contention that it deprives an accused of the fundamental right to a trial by jury and to be heard by counsel. Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520; Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

There is nothing in the Constitution inhibiting the Legislature from conferring on the county court the power to render a judgment as a juvenile court by this article, especially in view of Const. art. 5, § 1. Ex parte Davis, 85 Cr. R. 218, 211 S. W. 456.

Jurisdiction.—Under this article, and Civ. St. art. 1798b, held, that the county court of Dallas county at law, No. 2, has jurisdiction to render judgment as a juvenile court. Ex parte Fowler, 85 Cr. R. 436, 213 S. W. 271.

Waiver of jury trial.—A trial by jury may be waived by infant prosecuted under Juvenile Delinquent Act. Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

The conviction of infant as a delinquent was not void, though the trial was without a jury, since delinquency is not a "felony" under this article, as amended by the Act of 1918, and since in cases other than felony a jury may be waived under art. 22. Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520.

Art. 1199. Sworn complaint or information; requisites.

See McLaren v. State, 85 Cr. R. 31, 209 S. W. 669.

Complaint or information—Necessity.—Under arts. 1195, 1199, where 17 year old boy was indicted and pleaded he was under 17, and court dismissed criminal proceeding, and placed case on juvenile docket, judgment adjudging boy guilty, sentencing him to confinement in Industrial School, without complaint or information, was void. Ex parte Ramseur, 81 Cr. R. 413, 195 S. W. 864; Ex parte Medrano, 81 Cr. R. 338, 195 S. W. 865.

Under the statute, when indictment for felony is dismissed because defendant is under 17, he cannot be tried thereunder as delinquent, but complaint and information must be filed against him. Ex parte Ellis, 82 Cr. R. 641, 200 S. W. 840.

All prosecutions of a juvenile must be upon complaint and information, in view of Acts 35th Leg. 4th Called Sess. (1918) c. 26, amending art. 1197. Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386.

Requisites and sufficiency.—Information charging defendant with being delinquent child within juvenile delinquent law, held not duplicious as charging felonies and misdemeanors. Miller v. State, 82 Cr. R. 495, 200 S. W. 389.

Complaint need not allege that the child is white or black because a separate place of confinement is provided for negro delinquents, under arts. 1195-1207, 853-868, and Acts 35th Leg. 4th Called Sess. (1918) c. 26. Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380.

Information against female child under Acts 35th Leg. 4th Called Sess. (1918) c. 26, was sufficient in specifications she associated with named vicious and immoral persons, habitually wandered about streets at night without business or occupation, and had been guilty of immoral conduct through sexual intercourse in a specified public place with a named person, but insufficient in its bare charge she was an incorrigible child. Hogue v. State, 87 Cr. R. 170, 220 S. W. 96.

A complaint and information charging child to be "an incorrigible child" were too general; allegations of matters showing incorrigibility being necessary. Guerrero v. State, 87 Cr. R. 260, 220 S. W. 1095.

A complaint and information, charging one to be a delinquent child in "that he is guilty of immoral conduct in public places, to wit, the streets of San Antonio," were too general; allegations of matters showing immorality being necessary. Id.

Merely charging a juvenile with being a delinquent and incorrigible child is insufficient to constitute the basis of a valid judgment, under this article; an "incorrigible" being one who cannot be reformed. Ex parte Roach, 87 Cr. R. 370, 221 S. W. 975.

A charge that defendant, a minor, did habitually wander about the streets of a city in the nighttime without being on any business or occupation held a sufficient allegation of delinquency. Guinn v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 233.

Counts in information and complaint charging a felony were ineffective under the Juvenile Act where they did not specify that the party against whom they were filed was under 17 years of age. Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095.

Art. 1200. Proceedings on complaint; notice to parent or guardian, etc.

Validity of law.—See Gordon v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 1095; notes to art. 1198.

Notice to parent or guardian.—In a prosecution of an infant as a delinquent, the parent or guardian of the child must be notified. Ex parte Gordon (Cr. App.) 232 S. W. 520.

Setting time for hearing.—Proceedings under the juvenile law are intended to follow the general course of a criminal case, and, after complaint is filed and warrant or capias issued, a time certain should be set for a hearing or trial, at which both parties shall have opportunity to present such pleas or evidence as might be desired, in view of this article. Ex parte Cain, 86 Cr. R. 509, 217 S. W. 386.

Art. 1202. Probation officers; appointment, etc.—The County Courts of the Several Counties of this State shall have authority to appoint any number of discreet persons of good moral character to serve as probation officers during the pleasure of said court, said probation officers to receive no compensation from the County treasury except as herein provided. It shall be the duty of the Clerk of the court, if practicable, to notify the said probation officers when any child is to be brought before the court; it shall be the duty of such probation officer to make investigation of such case; to be present in court to represent the interest of the child when the case is heard; to furnish to such court such information and assistance as the court or judge may require, and to take charge of any child before and after the trial as may be directed by the court. The number of probation officers to receive compensation from the county, named and designated by the County court shall be as follows:

In Counties having a population of less than Seventy-five thousand, one probation officer may be appointed by the Commissioners Court when in their opinion such officer is needed, who shall receive a compensation of not to exceed twelve hundred dollars per annum, provided that in counties having a population of not less than thirty-five thousand and not more than seventy-five thousand and containing a city of more than twenty nine thousand population, one probation officer may be appointed by the Commissioners Court when in their opinion the services of such officer is needed, who shall receive a compensation of not to exceed twenty-four hundred dollars per annum. Expenses may be allowed such probation officers by the county in a sum not to exceed two hundred dollars per annum. The County Judge shall select such probation officers from a list of three furnished by a nominating committee composed of three members as follows: The County Superintendent of Public Instruction and the Superintendents or Principals of the two largest independent school districts in such county.

In counties having a population of more than seventy-five thousand, the county judge shall appoint not fewer than two probation officers from lists furnished him by the nominating committee as provided above. The Chief probation officer shall receive a salary of not to exceed twenty-four hundred dollars per annum, and necessary expenses not to exceed two hundred dollars per annum. Other probation officers shall receive salaries not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per year, and all necessary expenses not to exceed two hundred dollars per year.

In the appointment of all probation officers under the provisions of this act, the county judge may upon the nomination of the committee of three herein above provided for, select for such office any school attendance officer or officers of the county or of school districts in the county that may be provided for in any compulsory school attendance law now in force in this state, or that may hereafter be passed, and the salary and expenses of such joint probation officer or officers and attendance officer or officers shall be paid jointly by the county and school authorities upon any basis of division they may agree upon.

Probation officers receiving a salary or other compensation from the county, provided for by this act, are hereby vested with all the power and authority of police or sheriffs to make arrests and perform any other duties ordinarily required by policemen and sheriffs which may be incident to their office or necessary or convenient to the performance of their duties; provided that other probation officers may be vested with like power and authority upon a written certificate from the county judge that they are persons of discretion and good character and that it is the desire of the court to vest them with all the power and authority conferred by law upon probation officers receiving compensation from the county.

Salaries or compensation of paid probation officers permitted by this act shall be fixed by the county commissioners not to exceed the sums herein mentioned, and in any bills for expenses not exceeding the sums herein provided for, shall be certified by the county judge as being necessary in and about the performance of the duties of the probation officer or officers. It shall be the duty of the commissioners court of the county to provide the necessary funds for the payment of salaries and expenses of the probation officers provided for in this act. The appointment of probation officers as herein designated shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the County Court. Probation officers shall take an oath, such as may be required of other county officers, to perform their duties, and file it in the office of the clerk of the county court.

Nothing herein contained however shall be held to limit or abridge the power of the county judge to appoint any number of persons as probation officers. And upon a vote of the county commissioners court the county judge may appoint as many additional salaried probation officers as the court may direct. As a basis for the reckoning of the population of any county, affected by this section of the last federal census shall be used. [Acts 1907, p. 139, § 6; Acts 1913, p. 216, ch. 112, § 8; Act 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 91, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 51, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after July 22, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 1203. Commitment of delinquent to care of proper person, or institution or of probation officer, etc.

Term of commitment.—In view of this article, and Rev. Civ. St. art. 5231, limiting term of commitment to five years, a judgment committing a juvenile until he became 21 years of age was absolutely void, where infant was only 13 years of age. Ex parte Brooks, 85 Cr. R. 252, 211 S. W. 592.

Under Acts 35th Leg. (Fourth Called Sess. 1918) c. 26, boy under 17 who commits assault, simple or aggravated, is a delinquent child, and may be committed to training school for five years, though his older brother may be punished for offense only by fine, or fine and imprisonment in county jail. Simpson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 277, 220 S. W. 777.

Requisites and sufficiency of judgment.—Under Const. art. 5, § 17, juvenile delinquent law, construed with Pen. Code, art. 6, and Code Cr. Proc. art. 770, held, that order committing female delinquent child to Sister of order for an indefinite term, not beyond the age of 21, was void. Ex parte McLoud, 82 Cr. R. 299, 200 S. W. 394.

In view of this article, and Rev. Civ. St. art. 5231, a judgment committing a juvenile should state the length of time he is to be detained, and that he is not to be detained beyond the time he reaches the age of 21. Ex parte Brooks, 85 Cr. R. 252, 211 S. W. 592.

The word "person," in this article, requiring order or judgment of commitment to prescribe length of time and conditions of commitment, refers to institutions as well as persons, in view of Pen. Code, tit. 1, c. 2. Id.

Commitment to girls' training school, see Ex parte Roach, 87 Cr. R. 370, 221 S. W. 975; notes to art. 1197.

Civ. St. art. 5221, designates state institution for training of juveniles located at Gatesville as "the State Juvenile Training School," to be designated as "the Training School," and a judgment punishing a delinquent by designating such place of confinement and the term as an indeterminate period not to exceed five years or beyond the time when he shall have reached the age of 21, complies with the law. Guinn v. State (Cr. App.) 228 S. W. 233.

Correction of judgment.—If the proper place of confinement is not designated in a judgment finding one guilty of being a delinquent child, it may be corrected upon a motion for new trial or on appeal. Tippins v. State, 86 Cr. R. 205, 217 S. W. 380.

Effect of commitment to probation officer.—Where the court, acting upon a petition charging a certain person with being a dependent child, decreed the child to be dependent and issued an order of commitment to the probation officer of the county until further order, the effect was to make such probation officer the guardian of the dependent, in view of Rev. St. arts. 2184, 2189, and 2190. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 251.

Art. 1206. Commitment of incorrigible boys to State Industrial School for Boys; petition by parent or guardian, etc.

Remedy not exclusive.—This article designating a procedure whereby a parent may cause the restraint of an incorrigible juvenile, is not exclusive, but article 1197, as amended by Acts 35th Leg. (4th Called Sess.) c. 26, and article 1195, also designate procedure which the courts may follow. Ex parte Davis, 85 Cr. R. 218, 211 S. W. 456.

COUNTY JUVENILE BOARDS

Art. 1207e. Board for certain counties created.—In any county of this State having a population of one hundred thousand or over and containing a city having a population of seventy thousand or over, according to the last United States census, the judges of the several District Courts of such county, together with the County Judge of such county, are hereby constituted a Juvenile Board for such county. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg. ch. 16, § 1; Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 58, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 139, § 1.]
