CIVIL STATUTES, TITLES 1 TO 70

KANSAS CITY, MO.
VERNON LAW BOOK COMPANY
1922
PREFACE

The publisher of Vernon’s Sayles’ Civil Statutes of 1914, Vernon’s Criminal Statutes of 1916, and the 1918 Combined Supplement to those two works, presents, in three volumes, a second combined Supplement continuing to date those publications, with their various features. All laws of general application enacted by the fourth called session of the 35th Legislature, and by the regular and called sessions of the 36th and 37th Legislatures, have been included in this second Supplement. The new laws have been classified in accordance with the scheme of division adopted by the revisions of 1911. New provisions, which amend or supersede existing laws, are given the same numbers in the Supplement that the old laws bore in the original editions. Entirely new provisions are given lettered or hyphenated numbers, and placed in the titles and chapters to which their subject-matter relates. Notes and references have been made under article headings calling attention to new legislation affecting, but not directly amending or superseding, the old provisions. Thus the reader who has found a provision in the former editions may follow the article number into the Supplement, and will know at once whether any change has been made in the statute law on the matter in hand. If the article number is either omitted from the Supplement or is included for some other purpose, but contains no text or text note, he knows at once that no change has been made by the Legislature as to that subject-matter.

The annotations have been continued on the plan of the former editions down to and including 232 Southwestern Reporter. To facilitate ready reference from the old edition to the Supplement, the notes have been given the same numbers as they bore in the original edition.

The text of the new law is a literal copy of the published Session Laws. What may appear to be typographical errors in this work will be found on examination of the Session Laws to be an exact copy of the law as enacted and published.

A cumulative index of the entire living statute law of the state, Civil and Criminal, in a single alphabetical arrangement, is presented in Vol. 3 of this Supplement. This index carries the reader to the book of the Vernon system of annotated statutes in which is to be found the latest expression of the Legislature on each particular subject.

A cumulative historical table of statutes is set forth in Vol. 3, immediately preceding the index. This table embraces all the legislation of a general nature enacted since the adoption of the Revised Civil and Criminal Statutes of 1911. It refers the reader not only to the particular act for which he is searching, but to the subsequent legislation on the same subject.

The late amendments of the Constitutions of the United States and Texas are set forth in the front part of Vol. 1, immediately preceding the statute text. Cross-references appear under the various articles and sections of the state Constitution to articles of the statute where annotations citing the Texas Constitution have been treated.

The valuable matter in the appendix of the original editions has been continued in the Supplement.

CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF TEXAS

The Constitution was not annotated in Vernon's Sayles' Civil Statutes 1914, Vernon's Criminal Statutes 1918, or in the combined Supplement of 1918. However in those editions decisions construing or applying the Constitution were set forth in the body of the statute law under the corresponding subject-matter. In the present Supplement, we have set forth in skeleton form the various articles and sections of the Constitution, and placed thereunder cross-references which will serve to carry the searcher to the repositories of constitutional annotations in the body of the statute law. In addition to the references to article numbers in the statute, citation of many cases arising during the period of the present Supplement are given. By following the article references through the former editions of the annotated statutes the earlier cases on the constitutional subjects will be found. The new amendments of the Constitution are set forth herein at their appropriate places.

(a) The manufacture, sale, barter and exchange in the State of Texas, of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors or medicated bitters capable of producing intoxication, or any other intoxicant whatever except for medicinal, mechanical, scientific or sacramental purposes, are each and all hereby prohibited.

The Legislature shall enact laws to enforce this Section.

(b) Until the Legislature shall prescribe other or different regulations on the subject, the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, or medicated bitters, capable of producing intoxication, or any other intoxicant whatever, for medicinal purposes shall be made only in cases of actual sickness and then only upon the prescription of a regular practicing physician, subject to the regulations applicable to sales under prescriptions in prohibited territory by virtue of Article 598, Chapter 7, Title 11, of the Penal Code of the State of Texas.

(c) This amendment is self-operative and until the Legislature shall prescribe other or different penalties, any person acting for himself or in behalf of another, or in behalf of any partnership, corporation or association of persons, who shall, after the adoption of this amendment violate any part of this Constitutional provision, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall, upon conviction in a prosecution commenced, carried on and concluded in the manner prescribed by law in cases of felonies, be punished by confinement in the penitentiary for a period of time not less than one year nor more than five years, without the benefit of any law providing for suspended sentence. And the district courts and the judges thereof, under their equity powers, shall have the authority to issue, upon suit of the Attorney General, injunctions against infractions or threatened infractions of any part of this constitutional provision.

(d) Without affecting the provisions herein, intoxicating liquors are declared to be subject to the general police power of the State; and the Legislature shall have the power to pass any additional prohibitory laws, or laws in aid thereof, which it may deem advisable.

(e) Liability for violating any liquor laws in force at the time of the adoption of this amendment shall not be affected by this amendment, and all remedies, civil and criminal, for such violations shall be preserved. (Sec. 20, art. 16, adopted election May 24, 1919; proclamation

ARTICLE XVII

MODE OF AMENDING THE CONSTITUTION OF THIS STATE

Section 1.—See notes under art. 3036, Civil Statutes; State v. Vincent (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 402; Hamilton v. Davis (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 431; Koy v. Schneider, 110 Tex. 369, 218 S. W. 479.
SUPPLEMENT TO VERNON'S SAYLES' ANNOTATED CIVIL STATUTES OF THE STATE OF TEXAS

ADOPTION

1. How heir adopted.
2. Rights of adopted heir.
3. Parents may transfer authority, etc., how.
4. Parents thereafter barred, etc.
5. Right of adopted child to support, etc.

Nature of relation.—When adopted person acquires property by descent from his adopter, it is not because he is a child of the adopter, but because arts. 1. 2, put him in position of child with respect to inheritance. State v. Yturria, 109 Tex. 220, 204 S. W. 315. L. R. A. 1918F, 1079, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 291.

Agreement for adoption—Sufficiency.—When an instrument of adoption executed by a husband was not valid, and the wife on leaving him took with her the child sought to be adopted, the husband had no authority to take the child from his wife, and was under no obligation to maintain or support it. Royal Neighbors of America v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 476.

An instrument reciting that a member of a fraternal insurance order adopted an infant followed by the words "subscribed and sworn to before me," with the signature of a justice of the peace and ex officio notary, is not valid as an instrument of adoption. Within this article, in that it was not witnessed or acknowledged, so as to be admissible to registration, as in case of a deed; the jurat of the justice not reciting that it was subscribed and sworn to by the adoptive parent. 1d.

General reputation.—Plaintiff could not prove legal adoption by general reputation of adoption. Lane v. Sanders (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1918.

Civil and common law.—Adoption was unknown to common law, but was recognized from earliest days in civil law, under which it created relation of parent and child, with resultant rights and duties. State v. Yturria, 109 Tex. 220, 204 S. W. 315, L. R. A. 1918F, 1079, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 291.

Recording.—Under this article, the filing of the instrument constitutes the act of adoption, and not merely evidence of it, and without such filing there is no adoption and no legal rights conferred. Sanders v. Lane (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 946.

Inheritance by adopted child.—When adopted person acquires property by descent from his adopter, it is not because he is a child of the adopter, but because this article and the preceding article put him in position of child with respect to inheritance. State v. Yturria, 109 Tex. 220, 204 S. W. 315, L. R. A. 1918F, 1079, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 291.

Adoption does not constitute person member of family, nor confer privileges or impose duties of parent and child, but merely puts adopted person in position, with respect to succession to estate of adopter, that natural child would occupy, except that, as against child born in wedlock, adopted person cannot take more than one-fourth. Harle v. Harle, 109 Tex. 214, 204 S. W. 317, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 186 S. W. 674.

Art. 3. Parents may transfer authority, etc., how.—The parent or parents of a child who is to be adopted, as provided in Articles 1 and 2 of this Title, may, by an instrument in writing, duly signed and authenticated or acknowledged as deeds are required to be, or where such parent or parents have voluntarily abandoned such child and left such child to the care of others, for a period of at least three years, or voluntarily left such child to be cared for by charity, for a period of at least three years, and such child shall be adopted as provided in Articles 1 and 2 of this Title, shall be held to have transferred their parental authority and custody over said child so adopted to the party so adopting such child. [Acts 1907, p. 103; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 62, § 1, amending art. 3, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment.

Art. 4. Parents thereafter barred, etc.—After the execution of such an instrument of writing duly acknowledged or authenticated, as aforesaid, or after having abandoned such child for a period of at least three years, and after the adoption of such child by another, the parents shall thereafter be barred from exercising any authority, control or custody over the person of such child or its estate, as against the party so adopting him. [Acts 1907, p. 103; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 62, § 1, amending art. 4, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Powers of court.—District court, in suit over custody of minor children by maternal grandmother against grandaunt, has authority to require adoptive parents of little girl, grandaunt and her husband, to allow child to visit in home of grandmother, where she might see her brothers and sister. Kirby v. Morris (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 295.

Art. 5. Right of adopted child to support, etc.

See Royal Neighbors of America v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 475, note under art. 1.
ARTICLE 9. [3] [3] Form of oath, etc.

By corporation.—In view of arts. 4928-4964, 5504, corporations may make affidavits through their officers and agents when such affidavits are required. Simmons v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 338.

Art. 10. [4] Oaths, etc., generally by whom administered.

Justice of the peace.—Under this article, because complaint charging defendant with gameing was sworn to by sheriff before justice of the peace, that of itself did not give justice jurisdiction to try case. Wrenn v. State, 82 Cr. R. 642, 200 S. W. 844.

Deputies.—While the general rule is that a deputy may do what his principal officer might, the deputy cannot verify in the name of his principal where a duty such as taking oaths pertains to the deputy individually. Goodman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 279, 212 S. W. 171.

Art. 11. [5] [5] Affidavit may be made by agent or attorney.

Knowledge of facts.—Under this article an affidavit for a continuance because of the absence of material witnesses may be made by the applicant's attorney, and he need not state that he had personal knowledge of the matters therein stated. Doll v. Mundine, 84 Tex. 315, 19 S. W. 394.

Partners.—Any member of partnership has authority to make affidavit for firm in all matters and suits where required. Davidson v. Jones, Sullivan & Jones (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 571.

Poverty affidavit.—Where judgment for husband and wife was reversed, and cause remanded, with costs to appellant, the filing of wife's affidavit of inability to pay costs or give security, in which she did not purport to act as husband's agent, as authorized by this article, but merely excused his failure to join therein, was not sufficient compliance with art. 1633, requiring such affidavit by "party against whom costs are adjudged," to warrant issuance of mandate without costs; the affidavit of all parties being necessary under the statute. Hambleton v. Dignowity (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 957.

Sufficiency in general.—Under this article, an instrument which is not signed by the affiants, and which does not recite that the necessary oath was administered to them, is not an affidavit. Gordon v. State, 29 Tex. App. 410, 16 S. W. 337.

Authority of attorney of interested party.—A purported bystander's bill of exceptions sworn to before the defendant's attorney can in no circumstances be considered. Bostick v. State, 81 Cr. R. 404, 195 S. W. 862; Same v. State, 81 Cr. R. 412, 195 S. W. 863; Ex parte Bostick, 81 Cr. R. 411, 195 S. W. 531.

Denial of an application for a continuance, complying with the statute and setting out material evidence, on ground that appellant was illegally sworn by one of his attorneys, where no objection thereto was taken, was improper. Waites v. State, 82 Cr. R. 501, 200 S. W. 350.

An affidavit attached to a motion for new trial cannot be taken by attorney for accused. Ingram v. State, 83 Cr. R. 215, 202 S. W. 741.

If art. 4649, requiring that petitions for injunctions be verified, applies to a divorce proceeding, wherein district court, by art. 4639, has special authority to make temporary orders respecting property of parties, verification of petition for divorce, irregular in that it was before notary public who was an attorney of record, is subject to amendment, and does not defeat jurisdiction of district court to enter order prohibiting disposition of property of community estate. Ex parte Gregory, 86 Cr. R. 115, 210 S. W. 294.

However improper it may be, an attorney who is a notary may swear his client to an affidavit for an attachment. Lundy v. Little (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 538.

Took effect March 1, 1921.

Art. 14½kk. Definitions.—Definitions, as used in this Act:
(a) The term "agricultural products" shall include horticultural, viticultural, forestry, dairy, livestock, poultry, bee and any farm and ranch products;
(b) The term "member" shall include actual members of associations without capital stock and holders of common stock in associations organized with capital stock;
(c) The term "association" means any corporation organized under this Act; and
(d) The term "person" shall include individuals, firms, partnerships, corporations and associations. Associations organized hereunder shall be deemed non-profit, inasmuch as they are not organized to make profits for themselves, as such, or for their members, as such, but only for their members as producers. This Act shall be referred to as the "Co-operative Marketing Act." [Id., § 2.]

Art. 14½l. Who may organize.—Five or more persons engaged in the production of agricultural products may form a non-profit, co-operative association, with or without capital stock, under the provisions of this Act. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 14½ll. Purposes.—An association may be organized to engage in any activity in connection with the marketing or selling of the agricultural products of its members, or with the harvesting, preserving, drying, processing, canning, packing, storing, handling, shipping, or utilization thereof, or the manufacturing or marketing of the by-products thereof; or in connection with the manufacturing, selling or supplying to its members of machinery, equipment or supplies; or in the financing of the above enumerated activities; or in any one or more of the activities specified herein. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 14½m. Preliminary investigation.—Every group of persons contemplating the organization of an association under this Act, is urged to communicate with the Commissioner of the State Markets and Warehouse Department, who will inform it, whatever a survey of the marketing conditions affecting the commodities to be handled by the proposed association indicates regarding probable success. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 14½mm. Powers.—Each association incorporated under this Act shall have the following powers:
(a) To engage in any activity in connection with the marketing, selling, harvesting, preserving, drying, processing, canning, packing, storing, handling or utilization of any agricultural products produced or delivered to it by its members, or the manufacturing or marketing of the by-products thereof or in connection with the purchase, hiring, or use by its members of supplies, machinery or equipment, or in the financing of any such activities; or in any one or more of the activities specified in this Section. No association, however, shall handle the agricultural products of any non-member.

(b). To borrow money and to make advances to members.

(c). To act as the agent or representative of any member or members in any of the above mentioned activities.

(d). To purchase or otherwise acquire, and to hold, own and exercise all rights of ownership in, and to sell, transfer, or pledge shares of the capital stock or bonds of any corporation or association engaged in any related activity or in the handling or marketing of any of the products handled by the association.

(e). To establish reserves and to invest the funds thereof in bonds or such other property as may be provided in the by-laws.

(f). To buy, hold and exercise all privileges of ownership, over such real or personal property as may be necessary or convenient for the conducting and operation of any of the business of the association or incidental thereto.

(g). To do each and everything necessary, suitable or proper for the accomplishment of any one of the purposes or the attainment of any one or more of the objects herein enumerated; or conducive to or expedient for the interest or benefit of the association; and to contract accordingly; and in addition to exercise and possess all powers, rights and privileges necessary or incidental to the purposes for which the association is organized or to the activities in which it is engaged; and in addition, any other rights, powers and privileges granted by the laws of this State to ordinary corporations, except such as are inconsistent with the express provisions of this Act; and to do any such thing anywhere. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 14 1/2 nn. Members.—(a) Under the terms and conditions prescribed in its by-laws, an association may admit as members, or issue common stock, only to persons engaged in the production of the agricultural products to be handled by or through the association, including the lessees and tenants of land used for the production of such products and any lessors and landlords who receive as rent part of the crop raised on the leased premises.

(b). If a member of a non-stock association be other than a natural person, such member may be presented by any individual, associate officer or member thereof, duly authorized in writing.

(c). One association organized hereunder may become a member or stock-holder of any other association or associations organized hereunder. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 14 1/2 nn. Articles of incorporation.—Each association formed under this Act must prepare and file Articles of incorporation, setting forth:

(a). The name of the association.

(b). The purposes for which it is formed.

(c). The place where its principal business will be transacted.

(d). The term for which it is to exist, not exceeding fifty (50) years.

(e). The number of directors thereof, which must not be less than five (5) and may be any number in excess thereof, and the term of office of such directors.

(f). If organized without capital stock, whether the property rights and interests of each member shall be equal or unequal; and if unequal, the Articles shall set forth the general rule or rules applicable to all members by which the property rights and interests, respectively, of each member may and shall be determined and fixed; and the association shall have the power to admit new members who shall be entitled to share in the property of the association with the old members, in accordance with such general rule or rules. This provision of the Articles of incorporation shall not be altered, amended, or repealed except by the written consent or the vote of three-fourths of the members.

(g). If organized with capital stock, the amount of such capital stock and the number of shares into which it is divided and the par value thereof. The capital stock may be divided into preferred and common stock. If so divided, the Articles of incorporation must contain a statement of the number of shares of stock to which preference is granted and the number of shares of stock to which no preference is granted and the nature and extent of the preference and privileges granted to each.

The Articles must be subscribed by the incorporators and acknowledged by one of them before an officer authorized by the law of this State to take and certify acknowledgments of deeds and conveyances; and shall be filed in accordance with the provisions of the general corporation law of this State; and when so filed the said Articles of incorporation, or certified copies thereof, shall be received in all the courts of this State, and other places, as prima facie evidence of the facts contained therein, and of the due incorporation of such association. A certified copy of the Articles of incorporation shall also be filed with the Commissioner of the State Department of Markets and Warehouses. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 14½20. Amendments to articles of incorporation.—The Articles of incorporation may be altered or amended at any regular meeting or at any special meeting called for that purpose. An amendment must first be approved by two-thirds of the directors and then adopted by a vote representing a majority of all the members of the association. Amendments to the Articles of incorporation when so adopted shall be filed in accordance with the provisions of the general corporation law of this State. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 14½200. By-laws.—Each association incorporated under this Act must, within thirty (30) days after its incorporation, adopt for its government and management, a code of by-laws, not inconsistent with the powers granted by this Act. A majority vote of the members or stock-holders, or their written assent, is necessary to adopt such by-laws. Each association under its by-laws may also provide for any or all of the following matters:

(a). The time, place and manner of calling and conducting its meetings.

(b). The number of stock-holders or members constituting a quorum.

(c). The right of members or stock-holders to vote by proxy or by mail, or by both, and the conditions, manner and effects of such votes.

(d). The number of directors constituting a quorum.

(e). The qualifications, compensation and duties and term of office of directors and officers; time of their election and the mode and manner of giving notice thereof.

(f). Penalties for violations of the by-laws.

(g). The amount of entrance, organization and membership fees, if any; the manner and method of collection of the same, and the purposes for which they must be used.

(h). The amount which each member or stock-holder shall be required to pay annually or from time to time, if at all, to carry on the business of the association; the charge, if any, to be paid by each member or stock-holder for services rendered by the association to him and the time of payment and the manner of collection; and the marketing contract between the association and its members or stock-holders which every member or stock-holder may be required to sign.

(i) The number and qualification of members or stock-holders of the association and the conditions precedent to members of ownership of common stock; the method, time and manner of permitting members to withdraw or the holders of common stock to transfer their stock; the manner of assignment and transfer of the interest of members, and of the shares of common stock; the conditions upon which, and time when membership of any member shall cease. The automatic suspension of the rights of a member when he ceases to be eligible to membership in the association, and mode, manner and effect of the expulsion of a member; manner of determining the value of a member's interest and provision for its purchase by the association upon the death or withdrawal of a member or stock-holder, or upon the expulsion of a member or forfeiture of his membership, or, at the option of the association, by conclusive appraisal by the board of directors. In case of the withdrawal or expulsion of a member the board of directors shall equitably and conclusively appraise his property interests in the association and shall fix the amount there in money, which shall be paid to him within one year after such expulsion or withdrawal. [Id., § 10.]

Art. 14 1/2p. General and special meetings; how called.—In its by-laws each association shall provide for one or more regular meetings annually. The board of directors shall have the right to call a special meeting at any time, and ten per cent of the members or stock-holders may file a petition stating the specific business to be brought before the association and demand a special meeting at any time. Such meeting must thereupon be called by the directors. Notice of all meetings, together with a statement of the purposes thereof, shall be mailed to each member at least ten days prior to the meeting; provided, however, that the by-laws may require instead that such notice may be given by publication in a newspaper of general circulation published at the principal place of business of the association. [Id., § 11.]

Art. 14 1/2pp. Directors; election.—The affairs of the association shall be managed by a board of not less than five directors, elected by the members or stock-holders from their own number. The by-laws may provide that the territory in which the association has members shall be divided into districts and that the directors shall be elected according to such districts. In such a case the by-laws shall specify the number of directors to be elected by each district, the manner and method of re-apportioning the directors and of re-districting the territory covered by the association. The by-laws may provide that primary elections should be held in each district to elect the directors apportioned to such districts and the result of all such primary elections must be ratified by the next regular meeting of the association.

An association may provide a fair remuneration for the time actually spent by its officers and directors in its service. No director, during the term of his office, shall be a party to a contract for profit with the association differing in any way from the business relations accorded regular members or holders of common stock of the association, or to any other kind of contract differing from terms generally current in that district.

When a vacancy on the board of directors occurs, other than by expiration of term, the remaining members of the board, by a majority vote, shall fill the vacancy, unless the by-laws provide for an election of directors by district. In such a case the board of directors shall immediately call a special meeting of the members or stock-holders in that district to fill the vacancy. [Id., § 12.]
Art. 14½q. Election of officers.—The directors shall elect from their number a president and one or more vice-presidents. They shall also elect a secretary and treasurer, who need not be directors, and they may combine the two latter offices and designate the combined office as secretary-treasurer. The treasurer may be a bank or any depository, and as such shall not be considered as an officer but as a function of the board of directors. In such case the secretary shall perform the usual accounting duties of the treasurer, excepting that the funds shall be deposited only as authorized by the board of directors. [Id., § 15(13).]

Art. 14½qq. Stock; membership certificates; when issued; voting; liability; limitations on transfer and ownership.—When a member of an association established without capital stock, has paid his membership fee in full, he shall receive a certificate of membership.

No association shall issue stock to a member until it has been fully paid for. The promissory notes of the members may be accepted by the association as full or partial payment. The association shall hold the stock as security for the payment of the note, but such retention as security shall not affect the members’ right to vote.

Except for debts lawfully contracted between him and the association, no member shall be liable for the debts of the association to an amount exceeding the sum remaining unpaid on his membership fee or his subscription to the capital stock, including any unpaid balance on any promissory notes given in payment thereof.

No stock-holder of a co-operative association shall own more than one-twentieth of the issued common stock of the association; and an association, in its by-laws, may limit the amount of common stock which one member may own to any amount less than one-twentieth of the issued common stock.

No member or stock-holder shall be entitled to more than one vote.

Any association organized with stock under this Act may issue preferred stock, with or without the right to vote. Such stock may be redeemable or retirable by the association on such terms and conditions as may be provided for by the Articles of incorporation and printed on the face of the certificate.

The by-laws shall prohibit the transfer of the common stock of the association to persons not engaged in the production of the agricultural products handled by the association, and such restrictions must be printed upon every certificate of stock subject thereto.

The association may at any time except when the debts of the association exceed fifty per cent. (50%) of the assets thereof, buy in or purchase its common stock at book value thereof as conclusively determined by the board of directors and pay for it in cash within one (1) year thereafter. [Id., § 14.]

Art. 14½r. Removal of officer or director.—Any member may bring charges against an officer or director by filing them in writing with the secretary of the association, together with a petition signed by ten per cent of the members, requesting the removal of the officer, or director in question. The removal shall be voted upon at the next regular or special meeting of the association, and by a vote of a majority of the members, the association may remove the officer or director and fill the vacancy. The director or officer against whom such charges have been brought shall be informed in writing of the charges previous to the meeting and shall have an opportunity at the meeting to be heard in person or by counsel and to present witnesses; and the person or persons bringing the charges against him shall have the same opportunity.

Art. 14 1/2ss. Marketing contract.—The association and its members may make and execute marketing contracts, requiring the members to sell, for a period of time, not over ten years, all or any specified part of their agricultural products or specified commodities, exclusively to or through the association or any facilities to be created by the association. The contract may provide that the association may sell or resell the products of its members, with or without taking title thereto; and pay over to its members the re-sale price, after deducting all necessary selling, overhead and other costs and expenses, including interest on preferred stock, not exceeding eight per cent per annum, and reserves for retiring the stock, if any, and other proper reserves; and interest not exceeding eight per cent per annum upon common stock.

The by-laws and the marketing contract may fix, as liquidated damages, specific sums to be paid by the member or stock-holder to the association upon the breach by him of any provisions of the marketing contract regarding the sale or delivery or with-holding of products; and may further provide that the member will pay all costs, premiums for bonds, expenses and fees in case any action is brought upon the contract by the association; and any such provisions shall be valid and enforceable in the courts of this State.

In the event of any such breach or threatened breach of such marketing contract by a member, the association shall be entitled to an injunction to prevent the further breach of the contract, and to a decree of specific performance thereof. Pending the adjudication of such an action and upon filing a verified complaint showing the breach or threatened breach, and upon filing a sufficient bond, the association shall be entitled to a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction against the member. [Id., § 17.]

If such corporations are warehousing corporations, they may issue legal warehouse receipts to the association or to any other person and such legal warehouse receipts shall be considered as adequate collateral to the extent of the current value of the commodity represented thereby. In case such warehouse is licensed and bonded under the laws of this State or the United States, its warehouse receipts shall not be challenged or discriminated against because of ownership or control, wholly or in part, by the association. [Id., § 22.]

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

Alien enemies.—A proceeding for appointment of permanent administrator of the estate of a deceased, who left no property in the state, the only reason for the appointment being to prosecute a suit for the benefit of the heirs who are residents of Austria-Hungary, will be suspended until the end of the war, in view of Trading with the Enemy Act.
to alien enemies the right to maintain suits in courts of the United States. Galveston, H.

The prosecution of a proceeding by an alien enemy being against public policy, it is the duty of the court to stay the proceeding when the fact that plaintiff is an alien enemy is made to appear at any stage of the proceeding, and it is not necessary that any plea or exception should be made by defendant. 1d.

While the court, upon the fact being made to appear that plaintiff was an alien enemy, might be authorized to dismiss the proceedings, the less harsh practice of suspending proceedings until the end of the war is now the proper practice. 1d.

That the terms of office of the present District Judge and District Attorney in the three counties of the said Fourth Judicial District shall in no way be interfered with by the provisions of this Act, and they shall continue to hold such office for which they were originally elected until their successors have been lawfully chosen and qualified. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 33, § 2.]

That all process or writs of any kind issued to or out of any of the courts of each of the respective districts prior to the time when this law shall become effective shall in no way be invalidated, but shall in every way be valid and shall be considered as having been made returnable to the next term of the court in the county from which they are returnable. That all process issued out of the District Court of the counties of said district before this Act takes effect is hereby made returnable to the terms of said court, as fixed by this Act, and all bonds heretofore executed, and the recognizances entered of record in said court shall bind the parties for their appearance, or to fulfill the obligation of such bonds and recognizances at the terms of said court as fixed by this Act, and all process heretofore returned, as well as all bonds and recognizances heretofore taken in the District Courts of the Sixty-second Judicial District shall be as valid as if no change had been made in the time of holding said courts in the counties of said district. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 11, § 2.]

That should the District Court in any of the counties of said district be in session under existing laws when this Act takes effect, the same shall continue and end its terms under such existing laws, and all process, writs, judgments and decrees shall be valid, and shall not be effected by the change in the time of holding the courts in the district, by this Act. [1d., § 3.]

Sec. 4 of the act repeals all laws in conflict. The act took effect Aug. 6, 1921.

11. Time of docketing case.—Appeal from county court of Harris county held, under arts. 3635, 3636, and art. 30, subd. 11, and in view of Acts 34th Leg. (1st Called Sess.) c. 19 (Supp. 1918, art. 30, subds. 23, 80), though not docketed until after second term of Sixty-First district court, not subject to dismissal, being docketed before second term of other districts. Bundie v. McCrabb (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 365.

12. The Twelfth Judicial District of Texas shall be composed of the Counties of Trinity, Leon, Walker, Madison and Grimes, as now constituted, and the District Courts shall be held therein as follows:

In the County of Trinity, on the third Monday in February and September of each year, and may continue in session four weeks.

In the County of Leon, on the fourth Monday after the third Monday in February and September of each year, and may continue in session four weeks.

In the County of Walker, on the eighth Monday after the third Monday in February and September of each year, and may continue in session four weeks.

In the County of Madison, on the twelfth Monday after the third Monday in February and September of each year, and the terms of Court convening on the Twelfth Monday after the third Monday in February may continue for three weeks and the terms of court convening on the twelfth Monday after the third Monday in September may continue four weeks.

In the County of Grimes, on the third Monday in June and on the sixteenth Monday after the third Monday in September of each year, and may continue in session for six weeks. [Acts 1905, p. 55; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 67, § 1.]

16. Judicial notice of time of sessions.—The Court of Civil Appeals must take judicial knowledge of the time for holding sessions of the district court in Montague county, in the Sixteenth judicial district and also that a determination of a primary election contest cannot take place at a regular session thereof until after the November election. Pollard v. Speer (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 620.

18. Explanatory.—Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 4, though dealing with the 29th Judicial district alone, purports to amend sec. 3 of Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 45. The latter act had reference to the 18th and 29th districts and appears in the 1918 Supplement under art. 30, subd. 18. The amendment would seem to supersede the provision as far as the 18th district is concerned.
20. Constitutionality of statute.—Acts 35th Leg., c. 96, § 19 (Supp. 1918, art. 30, subds. 20, 85) providing that if court in Twentieth and Eighty-Fifth judicial districts is in session by virtue of existing laws at time act becomes effective, the act will not be operative until after term shall have expired or be terminated by order of judge, is not unconstitutional as delegating to judge power to suspend laws contrary to Const. art. 1, § 28. Hughes v. State (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 640.

23. See note under subd. 11.

27. The 27th Judicial District of this State shall be composed of the counties of Bell, Lampasas and Mills, and the terms of the court shall be held therein each year as follows:

In the County of Lampasas, on the sixth Monday after the first Monday in March and on the first Monday in September, and may continue in session three weeks.
In the County of Mills, on the 9th Monday after the first Monday in March and on the fourth Monday in September and may continue in session three weeks. Provided this Act shall not go into effect until the first Monday in June A. D. 1918, upon which date it shall be in full force and effect. [Acts 1913, p. 115, § 1; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 33, § 1.]
Took effect March 25, 1918.

That all process, writs and bonds issued, served or executed prior to the taking effect of this Act and returnable to the terms of said court as heretofore fixed by law in the several counties comprising said district are hereby made returnable to the terms of said court in the several counties as fixed by this Act, and all process heretofore returnable, as well as all bonds and recognizances heretofore entered into in any of said courts, shall be valid and binding as if no such change had been made by this Act in the times of holding said terms of court; provided, that if any court in any county of said judicial district shall be in session at the time this Act takes effect, such court shall continue in session until the term thereof shall expire or be adjourned under the provisions of existing laws. Thereafter the courts of said county or counties shall conform to the requirements of this Act. [Acts 1913, 1st C. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 117, § 4; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 82, § 4; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 7, § 4.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 5 of Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 7, repeals all conflicting laws. The act took effect July 15, 1919.

66. Extension of term.—Acts 34th Leg. c. 139, did not authorize the extension of the March term of the district court of Hill county beyond the end of the seven weeks specified, because the business of the grand jury was not finished, and an indictment returned during extension would be invalid (per Davidson, J.). Alexander v. State, 84 S. W. 778.

While an order entered on minutes may not have been necessary to extend a regular term of district court under Acts 34th Leg. c. 139, such order did not destroy power existing under such statute or bring extension within art. 1726, authorizing extension on different grounds and requiring an order. Id.

Acts 34th Leg. c. 139, authorized extension of March term of district court of Hill county beyond end of seven weeks specified, where business of grand jury was unfinished, and an indictment returned during extension was not invalid for that reason, but was returned into open court as required by Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 445. Id.

Article 56. [47] [42] Right to arbitrate.

Construction of statute.—Statutes providing for arbitration should be liberally construed. Temple v. Riverland Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.

What constitutes agreement for arbitration.—Agreement of the owners of certain surveys that, in view of doubt and uncertainty as to boundaries, a certain surveyor should resurvey them, and that they should be bound by the result, held one of arbitration. Robbs v. Woolfolk (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 223.

Common law arbitration.—A recital in the contract that it should be filed with the clerk of the court in accordance with the statute, etc., showed a statutory as distinguished from common-law arbitration; the statutes by implication being incorporated into the agreement. Temple v. Riverland Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.

Art. 58. [49] [44] Agreement to be filed in court having jurisdiction.

Waiver as to filing.—While arts. 58, 59, provide that an agreement for statutory arbitration shall be filed with the clerk such a matter of procedure may be waived. Temple v. Riverland Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.

Art. 59. [50] [45] Day of trial to be designated by justice or clerk, etc.

Filing agreement—waiver.—While arts. 58, 59, provide that an agreement for statutory arbitration shall be filed with the clerk such a matter of procedure may be waived. Temple v. Riverland Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.

Art. 62. [53] [48] Procedure on trial.

Swearing witnesses.—While arbitrators' failure to swear witnesses before giving their testimony and to comply with the arbitration agreement was an irregularity, yet where the witnesses were recalled and sworn as to the statements they had made, and no special injury to complaining party is shown, and no fraud, unfairness, or impartiality was participated in by the arbitrators, the award will be considered just and equitable. Angus v. Beggs (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 707.

Art. 63. [54] [49] Award to be written out, filed and entered as judgment.

Number of arbitrators acting.—Where the parties agree upon the number of arbitrators, they are entitled to the judgment of each, and the neglect or refusal of any one to act will render an award made by others invalid. Beirne v. North Texas Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 301.

Filing.—Where defendants the unsuccessful parties to an arbitration proceeding made no exception below on the ground that the arbitration agreement was not filed with the clerk as required by statute, the appellate court will presume that it was waived. Temple v. Riverland Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.

Conclusiveness of award.—An arbitration agreement as to boundaries is valid, and the award subject to impeachment only as in other cases. Robbs v. Woolfolk (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 232.

Objections to award.—Where the merits of the decision of arbitrators was not attacked, but defeated party alleged generally that he was improperly excluded from the hearing, and not allowed to cross-examine witnesses, and that if given a fair opportunity he could show want of indebtedness, objection is too general to prevent judgment on the award. Angus v. Beggs (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 707.
Art. 63

ARBITRATION

Action on award.—On a common-law arbitration, action may be required on the award to establish it and secure judgment; but in case of statutory arbitration the award under this article, is entered as the judgment of the court, and the court performs no judicial function, its duties being merely ministerial. Temple v. Riverland Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.

Setting aside award.—While arbitrations are favored in law, and every reasonable intendment will be indulged in to support them a showing of fraud, bias, or intimidation will avoid an award. Anderson Bros. v. Parker Const. Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 677.

In the absence of gross and palpable error in award, charges of fraud of arbitrator are not sustained by evidence of the merits of the controversy submitted. Robbs v. Woolfolk (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 232.

If an award conforms to submission, it may be impeached only for fraud, partiality, misconduct, or gross mistake committed on the part of the arbitrator to the manifest injury of the party complaining. Id.

Art. 65. [56] [51] Appeal from an award.

Right of appeal.—Where no right of appeal is reserved, the award is final and conclusive, and no appeal can be taken from the judgment entered thereon; but if such right is reserved presumptively the dissatisfied party may appeal from the decision of the district court hearing the appeal from the decision of the arbitrators. Temple v. Riverland Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.

Failure to appeal.—If no right of appeal is reserved, the decision of the arbitrators under this article becomes final, and the award on motion will be made the judgment of the court unless impeached on equitable grounds as fraud. Temple v. Riverland Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.
TITL E 8
ARCHIVES

CHAPTER ONE
ARCHIVES OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE

Art. 82. What shall be considered archives of the general land office.

What constitutes archives or public documents.—Under Act April 24, 1871, providing for the obtaining of the acts and charters of the town of Guerrero among others, and filing the same as records in the general land office, a statement purporting to have been made in 1831, and showing to whom lands had been previously granted in Guerrero, and who then owned them, is not such an "act, charter, or grant" as was authorized to be obtained and filed as a record in the general land office, though it was an archive of Guerrero. Downing v. Diaz, 80 Tex. 426, 16 S. W. 49.

Under this article instruments deposited or filed in a General Land Office do not become archives thereof, unless their deposit or filing was authorized by law. Landry v. Robinson, 110 Tex. 295, 219 S. W. 819.

Affidavits for a duplicate certificate filed to meet the requirements of Rev. St. 1873, arts. 3883-3885, and approved by the land commissioner, who issued a duplicate certificate thereon, became archives of the land office, and certified copies thereof were as admissible in evidence as the originals. Magee v. Paul, 110 Tex. 470, 221 S. W. 254, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 325, and answers conforming to (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1118.

An original duplicate copy of a testimonio of Mexican land in Texas was the private property of the grantee or his assignee, and neither it nor a copy thereof became an archive of the land office, by reason of its being filed in such office. Ross v. Sutter (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 273.

A map, not filed in the surveyor's office or the General Land Office, does not become an archive in either office, and is not admissible to determine boundaries in trespass to try title. Land v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 801.

Art. 83. Effect to be given to archives deposited.

Admissibility as evidence.—This article does not affect admissibility of archives as evidence, when they are relevant. Texas Mex. Ry. Co. v. Jarvis, 69 Tex. 527, 7 S. W. 210.

Art. 90a. Loan of archives to University of Texas.—That County Commissioners and other custodians of public records are hereby authorized, in their discretion, to lend to the library of the University of Texas, for such length of time and on such conditions as they may determine, such part or parts of their archives and records as have become mainly of an historical value, taking a receipt thereof from the librarian of the University of Texas; and the librarian of the University of Texas is hereby authorized to receipt for such records as may be transferred to the said library, and to make copies thereof for historical study. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 43, § 2.]

Explanatory.—Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment. Sec. 2 of the act provides for certification by the librarian of the University to copies of public records in his custody, and is set forth, post, as art. 5707a.
Art. 91. [71] General assignment, how made and construed; preferences void.

6. Instruments operating as assignments.—Where sellers and buyers agreed that proceeds of note representing part of consideration for goods should be applied to payment of any and all debts or claims against goods, held, that creditors of sellers had an interest in note; were entitled to judgment for proportional share of their claims. Warren v. Parlin-Orendorf Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 586.

Agreement whereby purchaser deposited purchase price in bank, deposit to be paid to approved creditors of vendor on checks signed by both, did not amount to an assignment for benefit of vendor’s creditors. Posey v. Provident Nat. Bank of Waco (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 555.

A deed of trust authorizing the trustees to take possession of and at the end of 90 days sell the goods and lands conveyed and distribute the proceeds among the grantor’s creditors, any surplus to be returned to the grantor, is in legal effect only a mortgage with a power of sale. Hall v. Conine (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 825.

10. Partnership.—Under Sayles’ Civil St. art. 65a, providing that every assignment by an insolvent debtor or in contemplation of insolvency, shall inure to the equal benefit of all creditors, an assignment by a firm is not brought within the statute unless it is shown that each of the partners is insolvent. Hudson v. Eisenmayer Milling & Elevator Co., 79 Tex. 461, 15 S. W. 385.

12. Property included and sufficiency of description.—Where corporation did not make general assignment for creditors, but made chattel mortgage or conveyance in trust to private trustee for creditors, title to cause of action against director for corruptly disposing of assets was vested in trustee. Millsaps v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 292.

16. Preference of creditors, conditions, and directions as to management of trust.—Where one agrees to pay debts of another from a specified fund in consideration of the transfer of property, he is bound to distribute the fund pro rata among the creditors, and upon failure of the debtor to transfer part of the property the transferee can withdraw from the fund an amount equaling the value of the property not transferred, but must pro rata the balance, unless some creditors are paid in full without knowledge of the partial failure of consideration; priority of maturity date of obligations being immaterial. American Nat. Bank of Houston v. American Loan & Mortgage Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 169.

A deed of trust empowering the trustees to sell, for the benefit of certain creditors, the debtor’s stock of merchandise and fixtures and his interest in certain land, creates a prior lien in favor of all the creditors mentioned, and one only of them is not, by virtue of a writ of garnishment served on the trustees after they took charge of the debtor’s merchandise, and the levy of a writ of attachment on the land, entitled to any preference in the distribution of the proceeds of the sale of the land on foreclosure of a vendor’s lien thereon by the trustees. Hall v. Conine (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 825.

17. Operation and effect as to creditors.—Father, having expressly assumed payment of son’s debt in consideration of the conveyance to father of certain land, was liable to son’s creditor unless debt was barred by limitations. Bell v. Swim (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 470.

24. Bona fide purchasers from assignee.—Although the title which an assignee takes under a general assignment for benefit of creditors is not better than that which the assignor had, and generally only such title will pass to a purchaser under the assignee, whether immediate or remote, yet where a purchaser upon the faith of the record pays value, without notice of a secret equity with which the property was affected at the time of the assignment, he acquires such title as the record discloses the assignor owned. Etheridge v. Campbell (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 441.

Art. 92. [72] Assignment acknowledged, etc.; inventory.

Schedules and inventory.—Under a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, all the property of the debtor, except that exempt from forced sale, passes to the assignee, whether included in the inventory or not. Etheridge v. Campbell (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 441.
Art. 95. [75] How and when consenting creditors may accept.

Necessity of acceptance.—Although creditors of sellers did not know, at time of its creation of trust in note given as part consideration for goods, they had a right thereafter to affirm it and to enforce it in their favor, and, when they affirmed trust, they were no longer simple contract creditors. Warren v. Farlin-Grendorf Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 586.

Art. 96. [76] Where assignee shall reside and his preliminary duties and bond approved by county or district judge.

Approval of bond.—As the district judge is authorized by statute to remove an assignee and appoint his successor, he is the proper person to approve the bond of the successor. Perry v. Stephens, 77 Tex. 246, 13 S. W. 984.

Arts. 101-103.

Art. 105. [85] Dividend declared, etc.

See Kaufman v. Wolf, 77 Tex. 250, 13 S. W. 987.

5. JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS IN CASES OF LUNACY

Art. 150. [128] [106] Apprehension.—If information in writing and under oath be given to any county judge that any person in his county is a lunatic, or non compos mentis, and that the welfare of himself or of others requires that he be placed under restraint, or that such lunatic is a convict confined in the state penitentiary, and such county judge shall believe such information to be true, he shall forthwith issue his warrant for the apprehension of such person, or, upon the filing of such complaint before any justice of the peace, said justice may issue the warrant for the apprehension, returning said complaint and warrant to said county judge; and said county judge shall fix a day and place for the hearing and determining of the matter, which place shall be either in the court house of the county or at the residence of the person named, or at the state penitentiary, if he be a state convict, as the county judge may deem best for such person. [Acts 1903, p. 236; Acts 1899, p. 172; Acts 1876, p. 138.]

See notes following art. 165a in Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, and in Supplement of 1918.

Explanatory.—Acts 33d Leg. ch. 163, amended Rev. St. 1911, arts. 150 to 165, inclusive, so as to make them read as set forth in Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 150-165a, and repealed all laws in conflict with the amendatory act. The Court of Civil Appeals in White v. White, 183 S. W. 369, and in Loving v. Hazelwood, 184 S. W. 555, held such amendatory act invalid, in that the substitution of a commission for a jury violated the constitutional right of trial by jury. The Supreme Court, on writ of error in the White Case, reported at 108 Tex. 570, 196 S. W. 508, upheld such decision, but declined to discharge the prisoner on the ground that subsequent proceedings had been taken under the former law to obtain an adjudication of insanity. The refusal to discharge the prisoner under the circumstances would seem to be a judicial recognition of the revival of the old law by the infirmity of the new. The old law is therefore set forth herein as a part of the statute law of the state.

Constitutionality of act of 1913.—Const. U. S. Amend. 14, is not necessarily violated by an act substituting a commission for a jury in determining sanity, provided such provisions are in accord with the due course of law of the land; but there having been under statute right to jury trial in lunacy proceedings at date of adoption of Const. art. 1. §§ 15, 19, 29, providing that "right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate," etc., Acts 33d Leg. c. 162, amending Rev. St. 1911, arts. 150-165, substituting a commission for a jury in such proceeding, is invalid. White v. White, 198 Tex. 570, 196 S. W. 508, L. R. A. 1918A, 339.

Where defendant was adjudged a lunatic by a commission purporting to act under Acts 33d Leg. (1912) c. 163 (Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 150-156, 159-165), the adjudication is without force as a judgment, where the statute was subsequently declared unconstitutional. Burton v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 989.

Nature of proceedings.—Proceedings to determine insanity are of a civil, not a criminal, nature. White v. White, 198 Tex. 570, 196 S. W. 508, L. R. A. 1918A, 339.

Art. 151. [129] [107] The writ and its requisites.—The warrant provided for in the preceding article shall run in the name of the "State of Texas," shall be directed to the sheriff or any constable of the county; and the officer receiving it shall forthwith take into custody the person named therein, and at the designated time and place have him before the county judge for trial and examination. [Id.]

Art. 152. [130] [108] Jury to be summoned.—At the time of issuing the warrant mentioned in the preceding article the county judge shall also issue an order to the sheriff or constable, directing him to summon a jury of six competent jurors of the county, to be and appear before such judge at the time and place designated in said order, for the hearing and determination of the matter. [Id.]

Art. 153. [131] [109] Cause to be docketed, etc.—The cause shall be docketed on the probate docket of the court in the name of the state of Texas as plaintiff, and of the person charged to be insane as defendant. The county attorney shall appear and represent the state on the hearing; and the defendant shall also be entitled to counsel; and in proper cases the county judge may appoint counsel for that purpose. [Act Aug. 15, 1878, p. 138, § 1.]

Art. 154. [132] [110] Jury impaneled and sworn.—At the time appointed for the hearing, or at any other time to which the proceeding may have been postponed, the cause shall be called for trial and a jury of six men impaneled, to whom shall be administered the following oath:

"You and each of you do solemnly swear, (or affirm) that upon all the issues about to be submitted to you in the matter of the state of Texas against A B, you will a true verdict render according to the evidence. So help you God."

Art. 155. [133] [111] Special issues to be submitted.—After the evidence is heard the county judge shall submit the matter to the jury upon the following special issues:

1. Is A B, the defendant, of unsound mind?
2. If the defendant is of unsound mind, is it necessary that he should be placed under restraint?
3. If you answer both the foregoing questions in the affirmative, then what is the age and nativity of the defendant?
4. How many attacks of insanity has he had, and how long has the present attack existed?
5. Is insanity hereditary in the family of defendant or not?
6. Is defendant possessed of any estate, and, if so, of what does it consist and its estimated value?
7. If the defendant is possessed of no estate, are there any persons legally liable for his support? If yea, name them. [Act Aug. 15, 1876, p. 138, §§ 1–2.]

Art. 156. [134] [112] Verdict.—The jury shall return plain answers in writing to the issues named in the preceding article, but, if they find either the first or second issue in the negative, they need not determine further, and the defendant shall be discharged.

Art. 157. [135] [113] Judgment.—Upon return of a verdict finding that the defendant is of unsound mind, and that it is necessary that he be placed under restraint, judgment shall be entered adjudging the defendant to be a lunatic, and ordering him to be conveyed to the lunatic asylum for restraint and treatment.

Art. 158. [136] [114] Reimbursement to the state from lunatics not indigent.—The special issues submitted to the jury, with the answers thereto, shall be incorporated in the judgment, and, if it be found that the defendant is possessed of property, or that some other person is legally liable for his support, the county judge may, from time to time, upon request of the superintendent of the lunatic asylum, cite the guardian of such lunatic, or other person legally liable for his support, to appear at some regular term of the county court for civil business, then and there to show cause why the state should not have judgment for the amount due it for the support and maintenance of such lunatic; and, if sufficient cause be not shown, judgment may be entered against such guardian or other person for the amount found to be due the state, which judgment may be enforced as in other cases.

Art. 159. [137] [115] Limitation as to amount and procedure.—The state, in cases provided for in the preceding article, shall in no instance recover more than five dollars per week for the support of any lunatic, and the certificate of the superintendent of the lunatic asylum as to the amount due shall be sufficient evidence to authorize the court to render judgment.

Art. 160. [138] [116] County attorney to represent state.—The county attorney shall appear and represent the state in all cases provided for in the two preceding articles.

Art. 161. [139] [117] Warrant to convey lunatic to asylum.—Immediately after any person is adjudged a lunatic, the county judge shall communicate with the superintendent of the asylum, and, if notified by the latter that there is a vacancy in the institution or that the patient can be accommodated, he shall issue his warrant to the sheriff or some other suitable person, directing him to convey the lunatic to the asylum without delay, which warrant shall prescribe the number of guards to be allowed, in no case to exceed two, and shall be executed with all convenient dispatch. [Act Aug. 15, 1876, p. 139, § 3.]

Art. 162. [140] [118] Relative or friend may give bond, etc.—No warrant to convey a lunatic to the asylum shall issue if some relative or friend of the lunatic will undertake, before the county judge, his care and restraint, and will execute a bond in a sum to be fixed by the county judge, payable to the state, with two or more good and sufficient sureties to be approved by the county judge, conditioned that the party giving such bond will restrain and take proper care of the lunatic so long as his mental unsoundness continues, or until he is delivered to the sheriff of the county or other person, to be proceeded with according to law; which bond shall be filed with, and constitute a part of, the record of the proceedings, and may be sued and recovered upon by any party injured, in his own name. [Act Aug. 15, 1876, p. 138, § 1.]

Art. 163. [141] [119] Record made up and forwarded.—The proceedings in any inquisition of lunacy shall be entered of record in the probate minutes of the county court by the clerk thereof; and before any patient is sent to the asylum the county judge shall cause a complete transcript of the proceedings to be made up and certified by the clerk of the county court under the seal of said court, which transcript he shall forward by mail to the superintendent of the asylum. [Act Aug. 15, 1876, pp. 138, 139, §§ 1, 3.]

Art. 164. [142] [120] Suitable clothing to be provided.—Before sending any patient to the asylum, the county judge shall take care that the patient is provided with two full suits of substantial summer clothing and one full suit of substantial winter clothing. [Act Aug. 15, 1876, p. 139, § 3.]

Art. 165. Fees of officers in lunacy cases.—In judicial proceedings in cases of lunacy, as prescribed in this chapter, in each case the sheriff and county clerk shall be allowed the same fees as are now allowed said officers for similar services in misdemeanor criminal cases, the county attorney shall be allowed a fee of five dollars, provided, that such fees shall be allowed only when a conviction is obtained; said costs to be paid out of the estate of the defendant, if he shall have an estate sufficient therefor, otherwise said costs shall be paid out of the county treasury; and the jurors in such cases shall be allowed fifty cents each, to be paid out of the county treasury. Justices of the peace who may take complaints, issue warrants and subpoenas in such lunacy cases, shall receive the same fees as are now allowed them by law for taking complaints, issuing warrants and subpoenas in criminal misdemeanor cases. Constables shall receive for executing warrants and serving subpoenas in lunacy cases the same fees as are now allowed them by law for similar services in criminal misdemeanor cases; such fees to be paid upon conviction out of the estate of the defendant, if he shall have an estate sufficient therefor, otherwise the same shall be paid by the county upon an account approved by the county judge. The superintendent of said home shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars per annum. [Acts 1891, p. 14; Acts 1895, p. 42; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 78, § 1, amending art. 206, Rev. Civ. Cumulative of other provisions.—This Act shall be cumulative of the provisions of Chapter 167, Acts of the Regular Session of the Thirty-sixth Legislature, relating to the Superintendent of the Confederate Home, and particularly cumulative of the provisions of Section nine (9) thereof [Art. 7150½h]. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 208½. Transfer of wives of inmates from Confederate Woman's Home to Confederate Home. —That any woman who is the wife of a Confederate soldier, and who is an inmate of the Confederate Woman's Home, and whose husband is an inmate of the Confederate Home, and who became the wife of such soldier prior to his admission into the Confederate Home, may, on her request, be transferred from the Confederate Woman's Home to the Confederate Home and may remain as an inmate of the Confederate Home with her husband so long as her husband remains an inmate of that institution, and while such inmate she shall be entitled to the same care, support, maintenance and privileges, and be subject to the same discipline, rules and regulations, as other inmates of that institution; but the wife of any Confederate soldier so transferred to the Confederate Home shall be immediately transferred back to the Confederate Woman's Home on the death of her husband, or whenever for any reason her husband ceases to be an inmate of the Confederate Home, or whenever in the judgment of the governing board of the Confederate Home it will be to the interest of the individual, or of that institution, to make such transfer. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 44, § 1, adding art. 208½ to Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Said building board shall have plans and specifications for said building and sanatorium prepared by the Chief of Division of Design, Construction and Maintenance of the State Board of Control, and said building board is authorized to do all things necessary to construct and establish this sanatorium; provided, that the building board and architect shall take into consideration all buildings, equipment and improvements now on said site and shall not duplicate the same except where necessary. It is the purpose of this Act to provide for a sanatorium that will accommodate at least six hundred (600) patients and the Superintendent and necessary employees, taking into consideration the buildings, equipment and improvements now on said tract of land; and the architect whose plans and specifications are accepted shall be the supervising architect in the construction of said sanatorium; said architect shall act at all times under the supervision and control of said building board; said architect shall execute bond payable to the State of Texas at Austin, Texas, in a sum to be fixed by the building board and to be approved by said board, with good and sufficient sureties, conditioned that said architect shall be liable and bound to pay to the State of Texas all damages it may sustain by reason of defective plans or specifications or any willful failure or negligent performance of duty on the part of said architect. The compensation of said architect shall be fixed by the building board provided in Section Two of this Act; provided that the State shall not be limited to one recovery upon said architect's bond or any contractor's bond hereinafter provided for, if not exhausted, and it shall be authorized to bring as many actions as may be necessary until said bond, or bonds, be exhausted.
The surety or sureties on any bond provided for in this Act shall be any surety or indemnity company authorized to do such business under the laws of the State of Texas. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 18, § 3.]

The bids may be so arranged that the buildings, equipment or other items may be bid upon by items or units. [Id., § 4.]

Eighty per cent. of the materials shall be paid for when actually delivered on the grounds and the same per cent. for labor when done, payable monthly, to be payable only on the certificate of the supervising architect approved by said board, and the remaining twenty per cent. to be paid when said sanatorium, buildings, equipment or work undertaken by the contractor shall have been completed to the entire satisfaction of said board and architect and according to contract and plans and specifications. Provided, that the Comptroller shall not issue any warrants except upon itemized statements sworn to by the contractor or contractors and approved by said supervising architect and said board, which shall be filed with the Comptroller. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 239\(1/4\)e. Management by Board of Control; superintendent; salary and bond; operation of present sanatorium.—The Sanatorium herein created shall be operated, controlled and managed by the Board of Control of this State through a Superintendent and said Board of Control shall appoint a Superintendent for said sanatorium who shall reside at the sanatorium and who shall have authority to appoint and employ necessary employees, assistants and servants and for which appropriations shall be made by the Legislature. The salary of said Superintendent shall be Five Thousand ($5,000.00) Dollars per annum and in addition thereto he shall be entitled to living quarters, heat, light, fuel and water. Said Superintendent shall be required to give bond in the sum of Five Thousand ($5,000.00) Dollars, conditioned upon the faithful performance of his duties and he shall take the Constitutional oath of office. Provided, that the present sanatorium on said site, or so much thereof as practicable, shall be at once prepared by said building board for operation and shall immediately be operated by the Board of Control through the Superintendent provided for pending the completion of the entire sanatorium and the entire sanatorium shall be completed as soon as possible thereafter and put in operation. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 239\(1/4\)ee. Lease to United States.—The Board of Control of the State of Texas may and are hereby authorized to enter into negotiations and make any agreement with the accredited representatives of the United States Government, the United States Public Health Service, or other Federal agent or agency for the purpose of leasing, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to lease to the United States Government any or all of said American Legion Memorial Sanatorium of Texas for disabled tubercular ex-service men and women for such time and on such terms as in the judgment of said Board of Control may seem proper.

In the event no such lease or rental contract is made and entered into, as herein provided, then said sanatorium shall be operated, controlled and managed as provided by this Act and by Chapter 18 of the General Laws of the Regular Session of the Thirty-seventh Legislature. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 56, § 2, adding § 6a to Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 18.]

Art. 23914f. Rule of civil service to apply.—The purpose of this bill being to bring about the best results for World War Veterans who are afflicted with this disease, and for the general welfare of the State, it is hereby expressed that it is the desire of this Legislature that the physicians, Superintendent, and others connected with this sanatorium whose appointments are herein provided for, they, and each of them, shall be permitted to hold their respective offices and employment during the term of their good behavior, and that they be removed only for cause, which cause shall be determined by the Board of Control; and that such persons shall be under, as nearly as possible, the rule of civil service, to the end that they may be taken entirely out of politics. Provided, that nothing in this Section shall be construed as intending to violate the Constitution fixing the terms of officers. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 18, § 7.]

Art. 23914g. Physicians as advisory board.—Three competent, licensed physicians, citizens of this State, experienced in the treatment of tuberculosis, shall be appointed by the Governor of Texas who with the State Health Officer as chairman shall constitute the advisory board to advise with the Superintendent in the management of the sanatorium herein created and in the treatment and care of the patients afflicted with tuberculosis. The members of said Advisory Board shall serve without compensation, but shall be entitled to be reimbursed for necessary traveling expenses, including hotel bills, incurred in the performance of duty under this Act. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 23914h. Building board not to act until title perfected.—The building board herein provided for shall not proceed to perform its duties prescribed in this Act unless and until the tract of land and all improvements thereon shall be deeded to the State of Texas as herein provided and the title hereto has been passed upon and approved by the Attorney General of Texas, and until such time the sanatorium herein provided for shall not be operated as a State institution. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 23914i. Rules and regulations; admission of patients; priority; charges.—The Superintendent and Advisory Board are hereby authorized to promulgate rules and regulations for the operation and maintenance of the Sanatorium herein created, and shall prescribe rules for the admission of patients to said hospital; provided, however, in all cases, priority and preferential rights of admission to said hospital shall always be given to honorably discharged veterans of the World War. After such preference and priority shall be given, if there should be further available beds, then any bona fide citizens of this State who has been such for at least six (6) months next preceding the date of his application, having tuberculosis, shall be entitled to be admitted into the sanatorium herein created upon application to the Superintendent; provided, that if such person shall make affidavit which affidavit shall never be required of any honorably discharged veteran of the World War, that he or she is unable to pay for admission and treatment, such person shall be admitted and treated free of charge. Such affidavit shall be taken as prima facie evidence of the fact that such person is unable to pay. In the event the applicant shall not make an affidavit and is able to pay not exceeding Five ($5.00) Dollars per week, a charge of not exceeding Five ($5.00) Dollars per week shall be made for treatment of each such person; and in the event the applicant is able to pay more than Five ($5.00) Dollars per week, he or she shall be required to pay not exceeding Ten (10.00) Dollars per week.

Provided further that the Superintendent of the Sanatorium shall enter into contract or agreement with the United States Government or any authorized agent, agencies or representatives thereof to accept into said sanatorium and treat any person otherwise eligible having tuberculosis, whereby the sanatorium shall be compensated for treatment or service rendered such persons in such sum as may be agreed upon by both parties and as authorized and provided for by the laws of the United States, and the rules and regulations as are now or may be hereafter promulgated by the United States Public Health Service or other Federal agent or agency. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 56, § 3, amending § 10, Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 18.]

Took effect Sept. 5, 1921.

Art. 239 1/4j. Cases admitted; test period.—Any person having tuberculosis and otherwise eligible shall be eligible to be admitted for treatment in the sanatorium herein created whether such person has inebriant, moderately advanced or far advanced tuberculosis; provided, that the Superintendent shall not be precluded from entering and keeping in the sanatorium any person otherwise eligible for observation and tests a reasonable length of time sufficient to determine whether such person has tuberculosis or not, where there are symptoms indicating that the applicant may have tuberculosis. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 18, § 11.]

Art. 239 1/4k. Appropriation; how expended.—The sum of One Million, Five Hundred Thousand ($1,500,000.00) Dollars is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the Treasury of the State of Texas not otherwise appropriated to be used, first to the discharge of all liens and incumbrances and equip and put in operation the present sanatorium now located near Kerrville and mentioned in Section 1 of this Act [art. 239 1/4] and then in constructing such additions, buildings, equipment and other necessities as provided for in Section 3 of this Act [Art. 239 1/4b]. The necessary traveling and other expenses of the building board herein provided for shall be paid out of said appropriation. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 239 1/4l. Existing contracts not impaired.—It is not the intention of this Act to impair the obligation of any contract already entered into relative to the sanatorium or any part thereof, upon said tract of land, and the building board is hereby expressly authorized to take into consideration any such present contracts and make any arrangements or agreements with any contractor now having a contract relative to said sanatorium in order to carry out the purposes of this Act. [Id., § 13.]

Art. 239 1/4m. Rules and regulations.—The Superintendent of the sanatorium acting with the Advisory Board herein created shall make rules and regulations for the conduct of the sanatorium. [Id., § 14.]
ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT

ATTACHMENT

Article 240. [186] [152] Attachments may be issued by whom.

See Davis v. Robinson, 70 Tex. 294, 7 S. W. 748; First Nat. Bank of Stephenville v. McClellan (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 724.

Affidavits — Affidavit by agent or attorney—An attachment affidavit, signed by a member of the plaintiff firm, which merely recited that he was a member of the firm, is sufficient; the affidavit on its face showing his authority to make the oath. Lundy v. Little (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 538.

— Indebtedness and amount.—Plaintiff had a contract with defendant by which he was to sell goods for the latter in a certain territory, and to accept as compensation commissions on the amount of goods sold; the defendant to have the right to reject any sale on account of any lack of responsibility of the purchaser. Held, in an action for the breach of such contract by defendant in refusing to allow plaintiff to carry out the contract, that under the provision of this article requiring an affidavit for an attachment to state the amount of the demand due plaintiff, an attachment was not authorized; such contract not affording any certain standard by which the amount of damages could be ascertained and the amount thereof averred in the affidavit. Hochstadler v. Sam, 78 Tex. 315, 11 S. W. 408.

In view of the provision authorizing attachment only on affidavit that defendant is justly indebted to plaintiff a creditor of deceased could not maintain attachment against property of deceased's widow, alleged to have been fraudulently conveyed to her by deceased during his lifetime. Moore v. Belt (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 225.

Where contingency was to take place at the expiration of the contract, and plaintiff set forth the contract, which showed that defendant had breached contract and rendered it terminated, held, that court erred in abating attachment on grounds that it was levied on a contingency, while affidavit stated that defendant was justly indebted. Paxton v. Trabue (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 399.

— Converting property to money.—Delay of 14 days intervening between execution of affidavit and bond for writs of attachment and garnishment, the ground of the attachment being that defendant was about to convert his property into money to place it beyond the reach of creditors, held not to authorize the inference that the facts stated in the affidavit, though necessarily somewhat transient, had ceased to exist when the affidavit and bond were filed. Miller v. L. Wolff Mfg. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 215.

— Fraud in incurring debt.—Where defendants indebted to a bank on notes are shown to have conspired to obtain money from the bank upon worthless security, and that the bank relying thereon, advanced the money, such fraud held to constitute a basis for attachment of defendants' property under subd. 12. Lancaster v. Corsicana Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 580.

Art. 243. [189] [155] Attachment may issue on debt not yet due, but no judgment until debt becomes due.

Cited, Hochstadler v. Sam, 73 Tex. 315, 11 S. W. 408.

Art. 244. [190] [156] Plaintiff must give bond with security.

Cited, Petty v. Lang, 81 Tex. 238, 18 S. W. 999.

Sureties.—Attachment bond signed by attorney without leave of court is not void or voidable: Lundy v. Little (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 538.

Objection to the sufficiency of sureties on attachment bond on ground they were nonresidents cannot be taken on a motion to quash, but must be taken by plea in abatement. Lundy v. Little (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 538.

Objection to the sufficiency of sureties on an attachment bond on ground they were nonresidents cannot be taken on a motion to quash, but must be taken by plea in abatement. Id.

Defenses.—In action on attachment bond, testimony of deputy sheriff, who filled cut bond, held to require verdict against sureties, who contended that bond read for smaller amount when their signatures were obtained. Knox v. Horne (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 259.

Amount recoverable for wrongful attachment.—Damages for wrongful attachment are limited to those directly and proximately resulting from the seizure, and hence a levy on lands generally affords no ground for actual damages. Spillman v. Weston (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 557.

Exemplary damages.—Under a plea in reconvention for malicious attachment, where plaintiff had sustained no actual damages, no exemplary damages were recoverable. Spillman v. Weston (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 557.

Costs and attorney fees.—Where malicious attachment prevented negotiation of loan making defendant unable to meet payment on prior loan, holder of which employed attorney and advertised land for sale, attorney's fees, advertising expenses, and bonus paid money lender held not recoverable, being too remote. Spillman v. Weston (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 557.

Cross-action for conversion.—In suit on a note, with attachment levied upon defendants' joint property, defendants, claiming exemption, were entitled by plea in reconvention to ask judgment against plaintiff for value of property levied upon treating it as conversion. Kiggins v. Henne & Meyer Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 494.

By bringing such cross-action defendants abandoned the property to plaintiff and it became his property. Id.

Art. 247. [193] [159] Attachment abated for want of affidavit or bond.

Form of objection.—Objection to the sufficiency of sureties on an attachment bond on ground they were nonresidents cannot be taken on a motion to quash, but must be taken by plea in abatement. Lundy v. Little (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 538.

Defects in affidavit.—A writ of attachment cannot be abated, because allegations of affidavit therefor falsely state causes for the attachment. Paxton v. Trabue (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 399.

On motion to abate attachment on ground that demand at date of institution of suit was only a contingent one, allegation of affidavit for attachment that debt was due and owing is controlling. Id.

Party entitled to move for abatement.—This article does not give a claimant of the property levied on the right to move in abatement. Roos v. Lewyn, 5 Civ. App. 893, 23 S. W. 450.

Art. 250. [196] [162] Form of the writ.

Amendment of writ.—Rule allowing amendment of writs of attachment to remedy clerical errors does not permit correction of clerical error in reciting in writ amount in excess of jurisdiction of court. McDaniel v. Cage & Crow (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1078.

Art. 252. [198] [164] Duty of sheriff, etc.

See Kanaman v. Hubbard, 110 Tex. 580, 222 S. W. 151, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 160 S. W. 394.

Extent of liability.—There is no authority under Texas law for assessment of attorney's fees against creditors or sureties on sheriff's indemnity bonds taken under this article, when sued for conversion, unless the bonds so provide. Coppard v. Gardner (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 620.

Art. 254. [200] [166] Property subject to attachment.

In general.—A writ of attachment may not be legally levied upon any property except such as is subject to levy under execution. Hoffman v. Rose (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 424.

Ownership in general.—Where sale is procured by buyer's fraud or misrepresentation, seller's right to retake goods is superior to the claim of an attaching creditor, where the goods remain with buyer; for the subsequent attaching creditor obtains no better right to the property than the fraudulent buyer. Blount-Decker Lumber Co. v. Farmers’ Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 247.

The interest of one of several devisees in the land devised may be attached for a debt owing by the devisee. Sewell v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 530.

Since a vendor who reserves in his deed a lien for part of the purchase price retains no interest in the land subject to sale under execution, his interest is not subject to attachment under this article. Traders’ Nat. Bank v. Price (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 160.

Trusts and assignments.—Although it was the intention of attaching creditors to sell the interest of the beneficiary of a spendthrift trust, leaving the trustee’s possession undisturbed during the existence of the trust, such sale cannot be sanctioned but will be enjoined, as the testator’s intention cannot be thus defeated by a sale of any part of the

A stock of merchandise was assigned to plaintiff for the purpose of protecting him from liability as surety on a bond. The written assignment, which authorized him to sell the goods and deposit the proceeds until an adjustment should be made of the liability on the bond, to indemnify himself therefrom for his liability and to return the unsold goods to the assignor if he should be released from the bond, was duly recorded, and plaintiff took possession. A creditor of the assignor took the goods from him on attachment. Held, that plaintiff had a right of action against the creditor for the amount of his liability on the bond. Schmick v. Bateman, 77 Tex. 326, 14 S. W. 22.

Property pledged or mortgaged.—Under art. 3744, providing that goods and chattels pledged, assigned, or mortgaged as security may be levied upon and sold on execution against the pledgor, etc., property mortgaged or pledged is not exempt from attachment and, while the mortgagee or pledgee cannot be deprived of possession, he cannot claim of or resist a levy, where his right of possession has not been interfered with. Briggs v.
Briggs (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 511.

Art. 255. [201] [167] Levy, how made.

See Kanaman v. Hubbard, 110 Tex. 560, 222 S. W. 151, affirming judgment (Civ. App.)
160 S. W. 304.

Cited, Schmick v. Bateman, 77 Tex. 326, 14 S. W. 22.

Art. 256. [202] [168] Personal property to remain in the hands of officer, unless.

Liability of plaintiff for acts of officer.—As under arts. 252, 255, 256, the sheriff’s possession of property attached at the instance of the plaintiff is no more subject to control of the plaintiff as to the manner in which he keeps the same than to direction of defendant, and as levy of a writ of attachment does not satisfy the debt, plaintiff is not responsible under the law for any injury to the attached party due to misconduct or negligence of the sheriff; but the sheriff’s wrong is an injury to both parties to whom the sheriff and the sureties on his bond may be caused to respond. Kanaman v. Hubbard, 110 Tex. 560, 222 S. W. 151, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 160 S. W. 304.

Art. 258. [204] [170] Replevy by the defendant.

Judgment on bond.—In an action by attachment on a verified account, where defendant was served with process, but after repleving the property did not appear, it was proper to enter judgment on the account against defendant and the sureties on the replevin bond without further evidence in support of the account or foreclosure of the attachment lien. Yount v. Dorsey, 85 Tex. 95, 19 S. W. 1922.

In rendering judgment in attachment suit, against sureties on a replevy bond for value of attached automobile, the court, in view of this article, need not find as to its

Proof of title in another than defendant.—In an attachment suit wherein an automobile was levied on and defendant retained possession by a replevy bond, defendant cannot prove it belonged to a firm, and that the attachment was therefore invalid because not made as prescribed by art. 3743. Wells v. Cloud (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 331.

Art. 264. [210] [176] Return of the writ.

Direction for return instant.—A direction for the return of a second writ of attachment instant is not ground for quashing it, under this article. Panhandle Nat. Bank
v. Still, 84 Tex. 359, 19 S. W. 479.

Art. 265. [211] [177] Requisites of the return.

Sufficiency of return.—Under the provision requiring the sheriff’s return to “describe the property attached with sufficient certainty to identify it,” a levy describing two tracts of land each as a certain tract containing 150 acres, more or less, on which is located the new town of M., in L. county, state of Texas, along the line of the said S. A. & A. P. Ry., including all of the right, title, and interest of said railway company in and to any and town lots and blocks heretofore laid off upon said tract, said interest being such as has been deeded, sold, released, or contracted to said railway company, or to any person as trustee for them, by S. B. M., of F. county, Tex., less such portions as have been heretofore legally disposed of by them, and donated and set apart for right of way and depos-tory purposes, is insufficient. Since, if it intended to describe a survey, it should have pointed out what survey was meant, or, if not, it should have described each lot and

Art. 267. [213] [179] Attachment creates a lien.

Lien in general.—The effect of a levy of attachment is to create a lien upon the property, but there is no satisfaction of the plaintiff's debt until the property is sold under the judgment foreclosureing the lien. Kanaman v. Hubbard, 110 Tex. 569, 222 S. W. 351, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 160 S. W. 394.

Independent of the operation of registration statutes, the lien of an attaching creditor is limited to the actual interest which the debtor has in the estate, and only through such statutes can a creditor acquire a better right or higher title than his debtor had. Traders' Nat. Bank v. Price (Com. App.) 169 S. W. 166.

Creditors who attached the interest of their debtor in certain lands, in which the record showed he had only a vendor's lien, but which in fact had been reconveyed to him by an unrecorded deed, thereby secured a lien upon the title given him by the deed. Id.

Although this article provides that a valid attachment levy on land shall create a lien from the date of the levy, it is immaterial that the service of the citation by publication on the owner, a nonresident, was not completed until some time after the levy; and a purchaser from him, after the levy, but before the completion of the service, takes subject to the lien. Cloud v. Levy, 259, 259 S. W. 765.

Chattel mortgagee of attached cordwood, by his agreement with the attorneys for plaintiff and defendant mortgagee that the wood might be sold and the proceeds turned over to him in escrow awaiting final judgment, held not to have waived his mortgage lien, superior to the attachment lien of plaintiff, nor to have done anything to estop him from asserting his lien after proper surrender of the fund in his hands or its deposit in court. Loya v. Bowen (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 474.

See Vost v. Dorsey, 33 S. W. 1003.

Jurisdiction.—In view of this article in action involving $499, commenced, with levy of attachment, in district court of Harrison county, after Acts 32d Leg. c. 54 (Vernon's Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 1811-55), conferred such jurisdiction judgment entered in that court after Acts 33d Leg. c. 53, retransferring jurisdiction to county court, was void. Jackson v. Lancaster (Civ. App.) 139 S. W. 1179.

Under this article a justice court, in suit within its jurisdiction, has authority to decree a foreclosure of attachment lien on real estate, and direct an order of sale of the land; Const. art. 5, § 8 not conferring exclusive jurisdiction on district courts. Baker v. Pitlik & Mayer, 100 Tex. 237, 265 S. W. 922.

Under this article a justice court possesses authority to enforce by express foreclosure a lien acquired on land by levy of attachment from the court, decreeing the foreclosure, although there is no valid objection to the method provided by said article for enforcement of attachment lien by mere judgment recital of issuance and levy of attachment followed by execution. Id.

County court has power to foreclose an attachment lien. Bracht v. Adamson (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 624.

An attachment issued out of the county court can be levied upon real estate, in view of this article, providing for enforcement of the lien of attachment issued from a county court and levied on land. Sewell v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 530.

Judgment.—Before the adoption of this article, requiring the judgment to show an express foreclosure of the lien, the judgment was admissible, though it did not show the condemnation of the property, in the absence of any shewing therein that the attachment had been abandoned. Harris v. Daugherty, 74 Tex. 1, 11 S. W. 921, 15 Am. St. Rep. 512. See also Pensacola Savings Wallace v. Bogel, 66 Tex. 572, 2, S. W. 96.

In suit by plaintiff, who had farmed land together with defendant, to recover an amount due him, the trial court did not err in rendering judgment on defendant's replevy bond, and also for foreclosure of the attachment lien. Coopwood v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 604.

Nonresident.—Proper judgment in attachment and garnishment proceedings against nonresident not personally appearing would be to limit judgment's execution to specific property attached or garnished. Burrow-Jones-Dyer Shoe Co. v. Gerlach Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 750.

An attachment lien on land of a nonresident defendant, duly served personally by notice as provided by statute, can be foreclosed, though the defendant was not informed by the nonresident notice served on him that foreclosure was sought. Lane v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 499.

Sale.—Under arts. 267, 268, the effect of a levy of attachment is to create a lien upon the property, but there is no satisfaction of the plaintiff's debt until the property is sold under the judgment foreclosureing the lien. Kanaman v. Hubbard, 110 Tex. 569, 222 S. W. 351, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 160 S. W. 304.

Art. 269. [215] [181] Judgment when property is reprieved.

Judgment in general.—In an attachment suit there was no error in rendering judgment against sureties on the replevy bond for the value of an automobile as estimated by the sheriff when bond was given, together with interest, as such judgment is plainly authorized by this article. Wells v. Cloud (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 321.

In rendering judgment in attachment suit, against sureties on a replevy bond for value of attached automobile, the court, in view of art. 253, need not find as to its value.

Judgment against sureties on a replevin bond follows as a matter of law, without notice to them, after judgment against their principal, under this article. Tripllett v. Hendricks (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 754.

By suit by plaintiff, who had farmed land together with defendant, to recover an amount due him, the trial court did not err in rendering judgment on defendant’s replevy bond, and also for foreclosure of the attachment lien. Coopwood v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 504.

Default judgment.—In an action by attachment on a verified account, where defendant was served with process, but after repleving the property did not appear, it was proper to enter judgment on the account against defendant and the sureties on the replevin bond without further evidence in support of the account or foreclosure of the attachment lien. Vogt v. Dorsey, 85 Tex. 90, 19 S. W. 1013.

Article 270. [216] [182] Order of court when attachment quashed; pending appeal, property may be repleived.

See Blum v. Addington (Sup.) 9 S. W. 82.

CHAPTER TWO

GARNISHMENT

Article 271. [217] [183] Writ of garnishment, who may issue and when.

Although garnishment proceeding under art. 271, is ancillary to main action, yet in view of articles 274, 293, 299, it is suit between judgment creditor and garnishee, in which the “amount in controversy” affecting jurisdiction is “the amount of plaintiff’s judgment, with interest and costs,” and where plaintiff’s judgment is less, but with interest called for by the judgment exceeds, $100, art. 1589, providing amount in controversy shall be “exclusive of interest and costs,” does not apply. Fannin County Nat. Bank v. Gross (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 187.

Buyers, after having paid drafts, were not estopped in their action for rescission from garnishing proceeds in hands of a bank in process of transmission to other bank with which drafts had been deposited for collection. Commercial Nat. Bank of Hutchinson, Kan., v. Heid Bros. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 806.

Attachment basis of proceeding.—In an action in which an original attachment has been issued, an application for a writ of garnishment, under subd. 1 of this article, is fatally defective if it does not state that an original attachment has issued in the suit, and the omission cannot be cured by amendment, article 273 providing that the application shall state inter alia the facts authorizing the issue of the writ. Scuffle v. Gulf, C. & S.F. R. Co., 143 Tex. 473, 191 S. W. 148. Under subds. 1 and 3, and arts. 272, 273, providing that writ of garnishment cannot be issued without bond unless affidavit or application shows that attachment has been issued or judgment rendered, an application for writ, or the affidavit, must show the facts. National Bank of Commerce of Amarillo v. A. Walker Brokerage Co. (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 174.

Property or fund in possession of garnishee and ownership thereof in general.—Where a construction contract was satisfactorily completed by contractor's successor, money due the contractor when he quit was subject to garnishment by his creditors. Zimmerman Land & Irrigation Co. v. Rooney Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 135 S. W. 501.

Where widow traded her homestead, advancement of $455 by man who thereafter became her husband and his assumption of mortgage of $900 on property received in exchange was sufficient consideration for having notes executed by other trading party made payable to such husband, so that debt represented by them could not be garnished as her property. Simms-Newsmore Co. v. Main (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 251.

Where S. shipped plaintiff's goods to him, and drew draft on him in favor of G. with bill of lading attached, for more than plaintiff owed, the bank through which draft was collected for G. is not liable to plaintiff as garnishee of S. Smith v. Houston Nat. Exch. Bank (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 181.

The fact that money was deposited in the name of another, when standing alone, will make a prima facie case of ownership by such other; but where it appears that control of deposit was reserved by an agreement that it was to be paid out on checks drawn by the depositor as agent for the other, and the depositor on being garnished hastily withdrew the deposit and transferred it to the name of still another person, the court will find, in a garnishment proceeding, that the money belonged to the depositor. Hulsizer v. First State & Commerce Bank of Robinson (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 684.

Where a business was sold under agreement whereby the buyer deposited in a bank the purchase price, to be paid out by creditors of the seller on checks signed by both buyer and seller, no part of the deposit was garnishable as belonging to the seller until such credits as he had approved by signing checks jointly with the buyer had been paid. Foscoe v. Provident Nat. Bank of Waco (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 555.

Community funds in names of joint tenants may be garnished in aid of judgment against husband. Sanborn v. First State Bank of Mt. Calm (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 571.

In a garnishment proceeding evidence held insufficient to support a finding that funds held by the garnishee belonged to the debtor against whom plaintiff had filed suit. Denison Bank & Trust Co. v. People's Guaranty State Bank of Tyler (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 561, 562.

Where a bank acquires title to a draft with bill of lading attached by crediting the amount to consignor's account, and the consignee pays the draft, being compelled to do so before receiving the bill of lading by the United States Food Administration, and the shipment is not as guaranteed, and a judgment is obtained against the consignor, the consignor cannot recover the amount of damages due him in a garnishment against the bank. F. A. Kadane & Co. v. Security Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 508.

Even if a joint undertaking, whereby two persons were to furnish money and a third, M., was to buy and sell hogs, and the three divide profits equally, did not constitute a partnership, the proceeds of a sale are not subject to garnishment for an individual debt of M.; his interest in the funds being contingent on there being a profit, determinable only after settlement of the indebtedness of the joint undertaking. Brown v. Cassidy-Southwestern Commission Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 832.

A partnership fund is not subject to garnishment for the individual debt of a member of the firm, especially where the firm's assets are insufficient to satisfy its debts. Id. Debt due one as trustee is not subject to garnishment for his individual debt, though his creditor has no prior notice of the trust. Id.

Where judgment debtor gave bank a draft for collection, but his account was credited with the amount of the draft, and it was sent to another bank for collection, the latter was agent for the first bank, and immediately upon collection of the draft by the agent bank itself, the former, and the first the closed affair, the absolute owner of the proceeds of the draft, and judgment creditor could not deprive the first bank of its property by garnishment proceedings against the agent bank. Provident Nat. Bank of Waco v. Cairo Flour Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 498.

In garnishment proceeding by a judgment creditor, evidence held to show that money in a bank paid on draft was not the property of the judgment debtor, but was the property of another bank which was payee in a draft drawn upon the plaintiff by the judgment debtor. Id.

Where agent, engaged in loaning principal's money, deposited checks from principal payable to him as manager in a bank in his own name, the funds belonged to the principal and were not subject to garnishment in third party's action against agent. King & King v. Porter (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 468.

Claims by third persons. — A contractor's assignment of his contract rights, under which the assignee claimed only balance due after contractor's debts were discharged, does not prevent contractor's creditors from subsequently garnishing amounts due him under the contract. Zimmerman Land & Irrigation Co. v. Rooney Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 201.

That a judgment obtained by intervenor in garnishment proceedings against the debtor had been appealed is immaterial, where intervenor also had another judgment exceeding face of its claim which had not been appealed. Id.

ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT

_Facts in evidence showing that seller shipped goods to its own order and assigned its account against buyer, and delivered draft on buyer with bill of lading to assignee, who intervened in garnishment proceedings, held to support court’s finding that the proceeds of draft in hands of bank to which assignee had sent it for collection belonged to assignee intervenor, and could not be reached by seller’s creditor._ Gateway Produce Co. v. Sunset Fresh & Produce Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 654.

_Indebtedness of garnishee.—Where parties agreed that principal of notes should not be paid, but interest should be paid until payee’s death, makers were liable in garnishment proceedings for interest due when garnishers’ answers were filed, but not thereafter._ Shropshire v. Alvarado State Bank (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 577.

_Evidence held sufficient upon which to base a finding that when the garnishment writ was served the owner, garnishee, was indebted to contractors, defendants in garnishment, so that there were funds belonging to the latter in garnishee’s hands when the writ was served._ Hall v. Nunn Electric Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 452.

_Where the contractor and the owner had settled by letters the amount due on the construction of an irrigation plant when the owner was made garnishee in an action against the contractor, the objection that the demand was unliquidated and not subject to garnishment must fail._ Id.

_The judgment must be a personal one upon which execution might issue._ Id.

_Judgment in rem against nonresident by publication after attachment and garnishment proceedings against property in state binds only the property attached, and does not support garnishment proceedings instituted after entry of such judgment in rem._ Id.

_When fair hearing for writ of garnishment is held at the same time as the main suit or prior to final judgment, it is ancillary to and part of the main suit, and the court will take judicial knowledge of the proceedings in the main suit and consider them together; but where the original suit is terminated at the time of the institution of the garnishment proceeding by the petition by the garnishee, the judgment is set up as the basis for a valid writ and defendant joins issue by denying the existence of a judgment, the court is not authorized to enter judgment without proof of a valid, subsisting, and unsatisfied judgment._ Tripplett v. Hendricks (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 754.

_A dormant judgment—one not kept alive by issuance of execution—will support a writ of garnishment._ Id.

_Garnishment proceeding should not be dismissed because of appeal in the main case, but should be continued to await result of appeal._ Farmers’ State Bank of Merkel v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 268.

_Where defendants perfected their appeal by a cost bond only, thus coming within art. 2100, declaring that in such case the bond shall not have the effect to suspend the judgment, but execution shall issue thereon as if no appeal had been taken, the trial court has jurisdiction to entertain garnishment proceedings pursuant to art. 271, subd. 3, for, even if the word “execution,” instead of being accepted as any means appropriate for the enforcement of the judgment, should be taken in its strict sense, the article indicates that proceedings for enforcement of the judgment are not suspended, and hence, though garnishment, which is a species of execution, be deemed not within the strict letter of the act, it is permissible._ Durham v. Scrivener (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 282.

_The garnishment authorized by subd. 3, where plaintiff has a judgment and makes affidavit that defendant has not within his knowledge property in his possession subject to execution, to satisfy the judgment, is merely ancillary to the main case, and depends upon the existence of a final judgment execution of which has not been suspended by appeal or otherwise._ Id.

_When the judgment on which a garnishment proceeding was based became dormant after the court had obtained control over the funds in the hands of the garnishee did not prevent maintenance of the proceeding, and could not be complained of by one claiming the money garnished._ Childs v. Gearhart (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 762.

Affidavits.—In affidavit or sworn application for writ of garnishment, averment of title of garnishment, the National Bank of Commerce of Amarillo, Texas, is not allegation of residence of garnishee required by art. 271, subd. 2, and art. 272. National Bank of Commerce of Amarillo v. A. Walker Brokerage Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 174.

_An affidavit, “G. being first duly sworn on oath says that he is attorney for plaintiff in the foregoing and attached application for writ of garnishment against the National Bank of Commerce, Houston, Texas, wherein Four Acre Oil Company is plaintiff, and he states under oath upon information and belief that the facts therein stated are true,” was insufficient under art. 271, subd. 3, and art. 273. Four Acre Oil Co. v. National Bank of Commerce (Civ. App.) 296 S. W. 711.

Nonexistence of property subject to execution.—Under the statute plaintiff in a suit for debt against more than one defendant, as a suit against maker and indorser of notes, cannot call a stranger into court on writ of garnishment of a fund as the maker’s, subjecting such stranger to inconvenience of proceeding and possible hazard, if either defendant has property within the state subject to execution from which the demand may be made; it being requisite that affidavit state “defendants” (not merely defendant) have no property within state._ Buerger v. Wells, 110 Tex. 566, 222 S. W. 151, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) Wells v. Globe Fire Ins. Co., 157 S. W. 299.
Art. 272. [218] [184] Bond when no attachment has issued and no judgment has been rendered.

Bond.—Garnishment proceedings may be maintained after judgment obtained, without giving bond. Szanto v. First State Bank of Mt. Calm (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 571.

In other suits—Garnishment bond has performed its function when suit in which it was filed has been dismissed and cannot be used in new suit for purpose of procuring another writ against different garnishee. National Bank of Commerce of Amarillo v. A. Walker Brokerage Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 174.

Art. 273. [219] [185] Application for the writ, etc.

Sufficiency of application in general.—Under art. 271, subds. 1, 3, and arts. 272, 273, providing that writ of garnishment cannot be issued without bond unless affidavit or application shows that attachment has been issued or judgment rendered, an application for writ, or the affidavit, must show the facts. National Bank of Commerce of Amarillo v. A. Walker Brokerage Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 174.

An affidavit, "G. being first duly sworn on oath says that he is attorney for plaintiff in the foregoing and attached application for writ of garnishment against the National Bank of Commerce, Houston, Texas, wherein Four Acre Oil Company is plaintiff, and he states under oath upon information and belief that the facts therein stated are true," was insufficient under art. 271, subd. 2, and this article. Four Acre Oil Co. v. National Bank of Commerce (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 711.

Garnishment affidavit, under art. 271, subd. 2, and art. 273, is not required, in view of art. 276, to state amount of indebtedness claimed. First Nat. Bank of Stephenville v. McClellan (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 794.

A special exception to part of an application for a writ of garnishment, alleging that "said judgment is still in force and satisfied," should have been sustained upon the ground that the allegations were contradictory. Tripplett v. Hendricks (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 754.

Where all the statutory requirements of an affidavit for garnishment have been met, that affidavit contains other allegations is immaterial. Szanto v. First State Bank of Mt. Calm (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 971.

The requirement of statute that affidavit for garnishment state garnishees' residence is satisfied by statement that as a firm they are engaged in business in a certain county. Sunset Wood Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 921.

Alienation in application for garnishment that garnishee was a corporation duly incorporated under the laws of Texas with its offices and principal place of business "in Mexia, Limestone county, Tex.," was a sufficient allegation that its residence was in Mexia, Limestone county, Tex. Sanders v. Farmers' State Bank of Mexia (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 635.

The name of the president of a bank was no essential part of application for garnishment proceedings against the bank as garnishee, and it was immaterial that it was misspelled and that the names were not idem sonans. Id.

Art. 274. [220] [186] Case shall be docketed, etc.

Defects and amendment.—Under this article, and in view of article 280, held that a writ of garnishment should not be quashed where it otherwise conformed to the statute, because the name of the plaintiff appeared in an interrogatory as to how much the garnishee was indebted, instead of the name of defendant. Wasson v. Harris (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 758.

Where a writ of garnishment, through a clerical error, contained the name of plaintiff instead of defendant in an interrogatory as to how much the garnishee was indebted, etc., held that plaintiff should be allowed to correct the error by amendment, though of course the amendment would not relate back to the date of service of the writ, and only funds belonging to the defendant which the garnishee had in his possession at the date of amendment would be impounded. Id.

Art. 276. [222] [188] Form of writ.

Cited, Gause v. Cone, 73 Tex. 239, 11 S. W. 162.

Defects in form.—Garnishment affidavit, under art. 271, subd. 2, and art. 273, is not required, in view of article 276, to state amount of indebtedness claimed. First Nat. Bank of Stephenville v. McClellan (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 794.
Art. 276 ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT (Title 11)

Service on Jack Reed of garnishee process directed against Jack Reeves will not support judgment against Reed, in the absence of a showing that he was the person intended to be sued and such showing is not made by return reciting service on Reed nor by default, interlocutory and final judgments against Reed, though the judgment recited that such person was known by both names. Reed v. McCutcheon & Church (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 717.

The personal pronoun "he" in a writ of garnishment, which evidently referred to a bank the name of which preceded it, held manifestly a typographical mistake and entirely immaterial. Sanders v. Farmers’ State Bank of Mexia (Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 632.

Art. 277. [223] [189] Writ to be dated, etc.

Art. 278. [224] [190] Sheriff, etc., to execute and return writ forthwith.

Return.—Return on writ of garnishment, showing it was served on officer of garnishee bank by sheriff of county, held conclusive of question whether it was in fact served by one interested in judgment and not officer of county, in absence of pleading raising question, motion to quash writ, etc. Wise v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 377.

Art. 279. [225] [191] Effect of service of writ; defendant may replevy.

Effect of service.—Under the provision that “from and after the service of such writ of garnishment it shall not be lawful for the garnishee to pay to the defendant any debt, or to deliver to him any effects,” where a writ of garnishment and summons are issued but not served upon the garnishee, his subsequent appearance and answer give the court no jurisdiction of the fund. Insurance Co. of North America v. Friedman Bros., 74 Tex. 56, 11 S. W. 1046.

Lien or rights acquired.—Where chattel mortgagee was entitled to lien on part of proceeds of insurance policy, if proceeds of policy had not been exempt from garnishment, service of writ on insurance company would have conferred on mortgagee right to such proceeds to extent of their lien superior to right of holder of vendor’s lien. Walter Connally & Co. v. Hopkins (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 656.

Garnishment cannot confer higher right than that of defendant in original suit, and plaintiff in garnishment succeeds to rights of original defendant against garnishee. Hubbard, Slack & Co. v. Farmers’ Union Cotton Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 381.

Payments or transfers by garnishee.—The assignee of a judgment occupies no better position than the judgment creditor, and, if he took the assignment after service of judgment on the judgment debtor, he took it subject thereto, and, if he has failed to require his assignor to file the replevy bond under this article, or to take other steps to protect himself, he cannot complain of delay in collection of his judgment by reason of the garnishment proceeding. O’Brien v. Barcus (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 941.

A judgment debtor who had been garnished in an action against his creditor is entitled to restrain action on the judgment unless he will tender the excess of the amount of the judgment over the claim of plaintiff in garnishment, in view of art. 279, which prevents garnishees from paying any debt to the defendant in garnishment after service of writ. Id.

Where interveners procured a transfer from one acting for the garnishment debtor, contractor, for the benefit of interveners’ principal, he took the construction contract as originally made between the owner and the contractor and the amount due thereon as fixed sum onere, and interveners acquired no better right to the debt for constructing the irrigation plant than the contracting corporation had, and the prior service of garnishment writ prevented voluntary payment by owner, and the superior right to the money was in garnishor. Hall v. Nunn Electric Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 452.

Where a debtor borrowed money for farming purposes from a bank which kept such money on deposit subject to check and a creditor garnished the bank, the debtor repleving the funds in the bank on a replevy bond payable to the creditor, the bank, not having applied the funds garnished to its debt from the debtor, cannot do so after the service of garnishment and the replevy of the property; it being fully protected by the replevy bond. Osceola Mercantile Co. v. Nabors (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 931.

Replevy by defendant.—Where defendant, sued for debt, other parties as a firm being garnishees, did not give replevy bond to replevy effects or debts garnisheed, but filed what was intended as such bond, made payable to the garnishee partners and not to plaintiff, default judgment against garnisheed firm was proper, though sureties on ‘replevy bond’ were not made parties. Army Bank of Ft. Sam Houston v. Sunset Wood Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 222.

Where an action was commenced and writ of garnishment issued, the principal defendant, who did not file a replevy bond, cannot, under this article, raise objections to the writ which might have been urged by the defendant in garnishment. Wasson v. Harris (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 758.
In garnishment the debtor under the statute may make such defense as the garnishee could have made, but he cannot defend on the ground that the garnishee might have exercised rights which it waived. Osceola Mercantile Co. v. Nabors (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 991.

Art. 280. [226] [192] Answer to the writ must be in writing, under oath and signed.

Sufficiency of answer.—Garnishees having interposed no exceptions or pleas to plaintiff's attempt to hold them liable in the garnishment proceeding on a direct liability of them to him, objection thereto is not available on appeal. Smith v. Houston Nat. Exch. Bank (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 151.

Defendant is never required to allege and prove facts required to be alleged by plaintiff; a rule applying to a garnishee. Wilkens & Lange v. Christian (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 253.

Answer of garnishee held not construable as admitting indebtedness by him to defendant debtor when the writ was served. 1d.

—Defense.—Garnishee has same rights in defending against the process of time of service that he would have had in suit against him by the debtor. Wilkens & Lange v. Christian (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 263.

—Interpleading third persons.—A garnishee may file an answer in a garnishment suit admitting the debt and make the defendant, judgment plaintiff in another court, a party to the garnishment suit, deposit the money in the registry of the court in which the garnishment is pending, and enjoin the enforcement of the judgment in the other court. North British & Mercantile Ins. Co. of London & Edinburg v. Klaras (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 208, reforming judgment (Civ. App.) Klaras v. North British & Mercantile Ins. Co. of London & Edinburg, 208 S. W. 584.

In a garnishment proceeding, it was proper for the court, on application of the garnishee, to bring in adverse claimants to the fund. Commercial Nat. Bank of Hutchinson, Kan., v. Held Bros. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 106.

Interrogatories.—Under art. 274, and in view of this article, held that a writ of garnishment should not be quashed where it otherwise conformed to the statute, because the name of the plaintiff appeared in an interrogatory as to how much the garnishee was indebted, instead of the name of defendant. Wasser v. Harris (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 758.

Art. 281. [227] [198] Garnishee to be discharged on his answer, when.

See King & King v. Porter (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 646.

Art. 282. [228] [194] Judgment by default, when.—The garnishee shall in all cases after lawful service file an answer to the writ of garnishment on or before appearance day of the term of the court to which such writ is returnable and should the garnishee fail to file such answer to said writ as herein required, it shall be lawful for the court, at any time after judgment shall have been rendered against defendant, and on or after appearance day, to render judgment by default, as in other civil cases against such garnishee for the full amount of such judgment against the defendant, together with all interest and costs that may have accrued in the main case and also in the garnishment proceedings, provided that the answer of such garnishee may be filed as in any other civil case at any time before such default judgment is rendered. [P. D. 159; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 105, § 1, amending art. 282, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 2 of the act repeals arts. 283-292, Rev. Civ. St. 1911, and all laws in conflict. The act took effect April 2, 1921.

Arts. 283-292. [Repealed.]

Judgment against garnishee.—Proper judgment in attachment and garnishment proceedings against nonresident not personally appearing would be to limit judgment's execution to specific property attached or garnished. Burrow-Jones-Dyer Shoe Co. v. Gerlach Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 250.
Art. 293. [239] [205] Judgment against the garnishee when he is indebted.—Should it appear from the answer of the garnishee or should it be otherwise made to appear and be found by the court that the garnishee is indebted to the defendant in any amount, or was so indebted when the writ of garnishment was served, the court shall render judgment for the plaintiff against the garnishee for the amount so admitted or found to be due to the defendant from the garnishee, unless such amount is in excess of the amount of the plaintiff’s judgment against the defendant with interest and costs, in which case, judgment shall be rendered against the garnishee for the full amount of the judgment already rendered against the defendant, together with interest and costs of the suit in the original case and also in the garnishment proceedings; and if the garnishee fail, or refuse to pay such judgment rendered against him, execution shall issue thereon in the same manner and under the same conditions as is or may be provided by law for the issuance of execution in other cases. [P. D. 157; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 105, § 3, amending art. 293, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Tore effect April 2, 1921.

Right to judgment.—After the replevy of a fund garnished, the garnishee is but a nominal party, and no judgment can be rendered against him except as to the amount due, and that it was repleved, and no execution can be awarded against him. Osceola Mercantile Co. v. Nabors (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 991.

In a garnishment proceeding by a judgment creditor against a bank to impound money collected under a draft, wherein another bank intervened and proved ownership of the draft, plaintiff was not entitled to a judgment against the intervening bank, although it was indebted to the judgment debtor; no writ of garnishment having been sued out against the intervening bank. Provident Nat. Bank of Waco v. Cairo Flour Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 499.

Amount of judgment.—Where the disclosure showed an amount due defendant “for the use of herself and children in proportion to their several interests in the land sold,” plaintiff was entitled to judgment for the amount of defendant’s interest after deducting the undivided interest of the children. Moursund v. Fries, 84 Tex. 554, 19 S. W. 775.

Art. 294. [240] [206] Judgment against the garnishee for effects.

Art. 296. [242] [208] Judgment against incorporated companies, etc., for shares of stock or interest.

Sale of pledged stock.—Stock held as collateral security is property and effects subject to garnishment under this article. Smith v. Traders’ Nat. Bank, 14 Tex. 457, 12 S. W. 113.

Lien on stock.—Under this and the following article, service of a writ of garnishment on a corporation gives the plaintiff a quasi lien on the shares of stock owned by the defendant, and a sale under a judgment in the suit passes title as against a subsequent garnishment, though the judgment in the latter suit is rendered first. Harrell v. Mexico Cattle Co., 73 Tex. 612, 11 S. W. 863.

Art. 298. [244] [210] Effect of such sale.

Art. 299. [245] [211] Plaintiff may traverse answer of garnishee.

Controverting the answer.—An objection that garnisher incontroverting answer did not allege, that the garnishee and intervener knew that the trustee held the construction contract under which the debt was garnished for any other person than himself held not well taken; such allegation being unnecessary, where it was alleged that such trustee was holding it in trust for the contractor corporation. Hall v. Nunn Electric Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 452.

Art. 300. [246] [212] Defendant may traverse the answer. See King & King v. Porter (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 648.

Art. 301. [247] [213] Trial of issue on controverted answer. See Phenix Ins. Co. of Brooklyn v. Willis, 70 Tex. 12, 8 S. W. 825; 8 Am. St. Rep. 666; General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Lawson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 346. Scope of issues.—In garnishment proceeding strictly, the only issue properly determinable, as between plaintiff and garnishee, is whether garnishee was indebted or had in its possession effects belonging to defendant in the main action. Smith v. Houston Nat. Exch. Bank (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 151.

Art. 302. [248] [214] Trial of issue on controverted answer when garnishee is a foreign corporation or resides in another county.—Should the garnishee be a foreign corporation, not incorporated under the laws of the State of Texas, and should its answer be controverted, the issues thus formed shall be tried in the court where the main suit is pending, or was tried; but if the garnishee whose answer is controverted be not a foreign corporation and reside in some county, other than the one in which the main case is pending, or was tried, then upon the filing of a controverting affidavit by any party to the suit, the plaintiff may file in any court in the county of the residence of the garnishee having jurisdiction of the amount of the judgment in the original suit, a duly certified copy of the judgment in such original suit and of the proceedings in garnishment, including a certified copy of the plaintiff's application for the writ, the answer of the garnishee, and the affidavit controverting such answer, and the court wherein such certified copies are filed shall try the issues made as provided by law. [P. D. 161; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 105, § 4, amending art. 302, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Jurisdiction.—Under arts. 283, 284, 290, 292, 300, 301-305, where corporation, resident of D. county, without residence in H. county or agent there, was garnisheed on judgment obtained in H. county, and its answer was controverted, district court of H. county had no jurisdiction of garnishment cause. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Lawson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 346.

Where garnishee bank filed its plea to have matter heard in the district court of its domicile, the court had no authority other than to discharge the bank or send the matter for adjudication to some court in the county where the bank was domiciled, and a judgment entered after the said was void and subject to collateral attack. Reed v. First State Bank of Purdon (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 323.

Presumption on appeal.—See Swearingen v. Wilson, 2 Civ. App. 157, 21 S. W. 74; notes under art. 3687, rule 12.

Art. 303. [249] [215] Case to be docketed and notice to issue.

Art. 306. [252] [218] Current wages not subject to garnishment.

What are wages.—Money due an attorney for legal services is not exempt from garnishment, under Const. art. 16, § 28, providing that "current wages for personal services" shall be exempt, nor under this article. First Nat. Bank of Cleburne v. Graham (App.) 22 S. W. 1101.

Under Const. art. 16, § 28, providing that current wages for personal service shall not be subject to garnishment, wage of $75 a month, totaling $300, agreed upon by widow and decedent's manager and brother as fair compensation to defendant for taking charge of decedent's business during his illness, was exempt as "current wages for personal service," though at time agreement for services was made no particular compensation was agreed on; purpose of the provision being to exempt wage until due and in possession of earnings, as the law provided, if he is unable to collect, exemption continues until he can collect, in exercise of ordinary diligence. Lee v. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 283.

Nonresidents.—Non-residents of the state are entitled to the benefit of Const. art. 16, § 28, and this article. Bell v. Indian Live Stock Co. (Sup.) 11 S. W. 344, 3 L. R. A. 642.

ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT

Extent of disclosure.—Under this article, a garnishee who is indebted to the principal defendant for current wages is bound to disclose the facts showing the exemption where the principal defendant has not voluntarily appeared, and has not been formally cited to appear, in the garnishment proceeding, though arts. 276, 277, in terms, require the garnishee to answer only as to the fact of indebtedness. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Whipple, 77 Tex. 14, 19 S. W. 639, 8 L. R. A. 321, 19 Am. St. Rep. 734.

Art. 307. [253] [219] Costs.

Allowance of costs.—A garnishee is not entitled to attorney’s fees, where it erroneously denied, and litigated its indebtedness. Zimmerman Land & Irrigation Co. v. Rooney Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 261.

Defendant bank being a stakeholder or garnishee as to plaintiff’s deposit, it was entitled to recover an attorney’s fee of $100 against garnishor where by reason of his conduct in suing out garnishment bank was caused to expend that amount. Reed v. First State Bank of Purdon (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 253.

A garnishee on discharge is entitled to recover his attorney’s fees of plaintiff. Wilkens & Lange v. Christian (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 253.

Costs of an unsuccessful claimant in garnishment should not be adjudged against plaintiff in garnishment, though he is unsuccessful because of the claim of another (art. 2031). Brown v. Cassidy-Southwestern Commission Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 492.

A bank should have been allowed a reasonable attorney’s fee for filing an answer as garnishee under this article, where it had no property of judgment debtor in its hands. Provident Nat. Bank of Waco v. Cairo Flour Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 492.

Art. 323. [261] [226] Persons convicted of felony shall not be licensed.

Art. 324. [262] [227] Misbehavior or contempt, how punished.

Contempt.—That defendant's attorney in a criminal case stated in the presence of the court to a witness on cross-examination, "All you know about it is you want to put J. B. in the penitentiary," did not justify the court in fining him for contempt, Ex parte Heidingsfelder, 84 Cr. R. 204, 206 S. W. 351.

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Malpractice or misconduct.—An attorney, who remarked that "Germany is going to win the war, and I hope she will," was not guilty of "dishonorable conduct" within this article; such conduct being clearly outside the scope of the attorney's relations. Lotto v. State (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 553.

Effect of change in statute.—Where a statute giving grounds for disbarment of an attorney was construed by the court of final jurisdiction and was thereafter re- enacted without material change, to give the statute a new construction disbarring an attorney on a new ground would be in effect disbarring the attorney by a law not previously prescribing the offense. Lotto v. State (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 553.

Art. 328. [266] [231] Citation, how issued and when served.

Appearance as waiving defects.—In an action to disbar an attorney, appearance in court was a waiver of any defects in the service. Lotto v. State (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 553.

Art. 331. Barratry, forfeiture of license by, etc.

Barratry.—A stipulation, in a contract of employment of attorneys, to the effect that the client could not settle his claim without the attorneys' consent did not render the contract void as against public policy. Wichita Falls Electric Co. v. Chandler & Bryan (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 649.

Art. 332. [269] [234] Penalty for refusing to pay over money.

Parties who may proceed by motion.—Company which guaranteed lawyer would turn over moneys collected, on account of lawyer's failure to pay collection to collecting agency or to owner of account, whereby company was cast in judgment, held not entitled to invoke against lawyer the provision of this article, that attorney who fails to pay over money may be proceeded against on motion against party injured. United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Huffmaster (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 337.

Art. 333. [270] [235] Allowed to inspect papers.

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

234. Acting as surety.—As the rule prohibiting attorneys from becoming sureties without leave of court is only directory, an attachment bond, signed by an attorney, is not void or voidable. Landy v. Little (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 533.

3. Retainer and authority.—Where counsel who represented firm admitted in writing on the firm's appeal that members of firm authorized filing of answer to petition filed by attorneys for the firm, the admission conceded all required to satisfy Court of Civil Appeals that firm was before trial court and before Court of Civil Appeals by the appeal. Wooster v. Hoecker (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 332.

Statement of attorney for administratrix that he thought she would pay claim when she got the money held not to bind her or estop her from pleading limitations against the claim. Butler v. Fechner (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1126.

While accused may agree to waive the introduction of crimincative facts, if the waiver is warranted by law, counsel cannot agree to such waiver. Sullivan v. State, 83 Cr. R. 477, 204 S. W. 1169.

As against objection to bond, attorneys by whom names of sureties were signed there- to are presumed authorized to do so. Dysart v. Wichita Falls, R. & Ft. W. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 277.

As a general rule, the authority of an attorney to represent his client continues as to all matters regarding the enforcement of judgment. Hamilton v. Hamilton (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 69.

In a suit against executors for an accounting, in which appointment of receiver was asked because of danger that property would be lost, defendants could not complain of finding as one ground for appointment that executors refused to follow the history of the property after it was delivered to the executor and residuary legatee of the estate of decedent's widow, where the refusal was by their attorney. Richardson v. McCloskey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 323.

6. — Termination of employment.—While ordinarily the employment of attorneys terminates on the rendition of final judgment, a judgment does not become final until at expiration of term at which it is entered, and in the absence of a special agreement between attorney and client, the employment lasts until the expiration of term as far as modification of judgment and notice thereof is concerned. Kentz v. Kentz (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 290.

Though in a proper case the attorney continues to represent his client until the judgment actually rendered by the court has been entered on motion for such judgment nunc pro tunc, the record should show that the attorney had express authority to continue to represent his client, where the judgment nunc pro tunc was entered two years after the first entry of final judgment, and in the meantime client had removed her residence to another state. Hamilton v. Hamilton (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 69.

As a general rule, the authority of an attorney to represent his client ceases when the case is finally disposed of; that is, when final judgment is entered therein. Id.

9. — Notice to attorney.—That attorney for judgment creditor knew of prior unrecorded deed given by debtor would not, under principles of agency, bind judgment credi- tor whose abstract of judgment was recorded. Ives v. Culton (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 619.

That attorney who secured judgment had equitable interest in fund to be derived 84 therefrom held to make him merely co-owner with judgment creditor, so that his knowledge could not be imputed to the client. Attorney's knowledge of agreement, whereby deeds were placed with him in escrow, held not the knowledge of one subsequently employing him to pass on the title to land conveyed by one of such deeds. Dowdy v. Furtner (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 647.

Where an attorney employed to prosecute a suit on a note was advised of the pendency of bankruptcy proceedings against the maker, such attorney entered the military service of the United States and did not communicate the defense to plaintiff, knowledge of the attorney could not, under the rules applicable to principal and agent, be imputed to plaintiff. Lynch v. McKee (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 484.

Knowledge acquired by an attorney prior to his employment by a client could not be imputed to the client. Ives v. Culton (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 321.

13. — Agreements of counsel.—Under Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 22, permitting defendant to waive any right except trial by jury, one accused of homicide is bound by an agreement of his counsel to the giving of a charge defining malice aforethought after the argument. Jacobs v. State, 85 Cr. R. 505, 213 S. W. 628.

Attorneys are authorized to stipulate concerning any facts to be established by the evidence. Richmond v. Sangster (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 713.

15. Liability to client.—Although an attorney orally promised to permit his client to redeem property the attorney had purchased under tax sale, out of which the attorney's fees were to be paid, yet when the client, without offering to redeem, refused an offer from another for the full value of the property, the attorney's obligation terminated. Ives v. Teichman (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 646.

19. Compensation.—Under contract between attorneys and client, held, that the attorneys became the equitable owners of one-half of the judgment obtained by them for their client. C. W. Hail & Co. v. Hutchins, Campbell & Hutchins (Civ. App.) 394 S. W. 269. Where the parties held insufficient funds to show bad faith or gross negligence such as would entirely bar an attorney from recovering compensation, although he erroneously advised an alien that he could hold title to land in Oklahoma. Morales v. Cline (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 754.

The judgment of a bank holding that plaintiff's attorney had agreed to pay plaintiff against a third party. If the bank collected the full amount on foreclosure, profits made by the bank upon selling the property could not be credited on the foreclosure judgment in order to show that the entire judgment was collected. People's Sav. Bank v. Marrs (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 447.

Under an agreement to pay certain attorney's fees if the entire amount of judgment, which included such attorney's fees, should be collected from a third person, if the full judgment were collected the attorney would be entitled to interest not merely from the date of collection, but from the date of the judgment since collection of the judgment would include interest, which it provided should bear from its date. Id.

20. — Fees in certain causes.—Where land was sold, resold to one who did not assume payment of the vendor's lien, and part of it again sold by him to defendant, who as part consideration assumed payment of the sum of $4,784, with interest accrued and to accrue, representing part of the unpaid principal sum due on the vendor's lien notes, assuming and agreeing to pay on the principal and interest of the notes an amount equivalent to $23 a lot on each lot conveyed to him, defendant was liable to the holder of the vendor's lien notes for the specific amount on the principal and interest thereof, but was not liable for attorney's fees. Allen v. Traylor (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 945.

21. — Services contrary to public policy.—The public appearance by an attorney employed by a county before the river and harbors committee of Congress, to explain and urge its approval of a proposed improvement without attempt to use personal influence, is not "lobbying," as a contract for such services is entirely contrary to the public policy. Galveston County v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 560.

Attorney cannot recover for services in procuring reinstatement of lease of coal lands by the Interior when such lease is out of order; the contract to procure such order being void, illegal, and contrary to public policy. Brandenburg & Brandenburg v. Moroney (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 714, conforming to Supreme Court's answer to certified questions, 110 Tex. 536, 221 S. W. 925.

23. Recovery of attorney fees.—In receivers' proceedings, held, that petitioner alone was liable for attorney's fees for filing original petition, in view of agreement for settlement. J. B. Farthing Lumber Co. v. Greenwood (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 312.

28. Contracts for compensation.—Contracts between attorneys and client are scrutinized closely because of the relation existing between them, but where contract is reasonable, and where attorney has taken no unfair advantage and has made full and fair disclosure of facts, client is liable thereon. Laybourn v. Bray & Shiplett (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 610.

Attorney and clients have the right to abrogate original contract of employment and enter into new contract in absence of fraud or undue influence on part of attorneys exercised by reason of their relation to client. Id.

31. Contingent fees — Creation of interest in litigation.—In suit to cancel oil lease executed by plaintiffs, husband and wife, wherein their attorney intervened to enforce lien on proceeds in hands of defendants, declaral of equitable lien on leasehold interest of a defendant in favor of attorney held erroneous in view of contract between attorney and plaintiffs, contemplating attorney should acquire no vested interest prior to forfeiture of lease and second lease for best price obtainable. Finkelstein v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 461.

A contract, employing an attorney to bring suit on a promissory note for the attorney's fees provided for in the note, the client to receive the full amount of principal and interest before the attorney should receive any of the proceeds as fees, amounted to an equitable assignment of an interest in the cause of action and judgment to the attorney.

A contract between attorney and client, "In order to secure the services as attorneys in the case of the death of my husband, J. D. K., I hereby set over to said attorneys one-third of same against all parties," etc., did not provide for a contingent fee, but was an assignment of a one-third interest in the case, rather than any amount or judgment which might be recovered by prosecuting the litigation. Wichita Falls Electric Co. v. Chancellor & Bryan (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 649.

32. — Client's right to compromise. — Contract by litigants with their attorney not to compromise lawsuit is against public policy, and null and void. Browne v. King (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 884.

Husband and wife, suing to cancel their oil lease, had power to compromise suit without consent of their attorney, though they had contracted with him not to do so, and defendant lessees were not liable to attorney for such breach of contract by his clients unless in compromising defendants acted with wrongful purpose. Finkelstein v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 401.

If oil lease was an absolute nullity, breach of agreement by lessors, husband and wife with their attorney, not to compromise suit to cancel lease without consent of attorney, entitled him to judgment against husband for damages if compromise was made with intent to deprive attorney of fee, though wife was not bound by agreement, not having power to contract. Id.

In suit to cancel oil lease executed by plaintiffs, husband and wife, wherein plaintiffs' attorney intervened to enforce his contract with them, declaring on agreement made by plaintiffs with defendant lessees, defendants cannot be held on such agreement except in accordance with its terms, including their stipulation to pay all claims as attorneys' settled against plaintiffs by suit or compromise, the compromise having established nothing against plaintiffs. Id.

33. Attorney in fact. — Where attorney in fact was employed to sue to recover land, for which he was to receive half of land recovered or half the proceeds, and his principals compromised the suit, defendant was not liable for attorney's proportionate share of amount of compromise. Browne v. King (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 884.

35. Evidence. — In an action by attorneys against opponent of their client, who fraudulently compromised with their client, evidence held to show that defendant had actual notice of plaintiffs' one-third interest in their client's cause of action. Wichita Falls Electric Co. v. Chancellor & Bryan (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 649.

ATTORNEYS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY

Chap. 1. District attorneys.

1a. Criminal district attorney of Harris county.

Chap. 2. County attorneys.

3. General provisions applicable to both district and county attorneys.

CHAPTER ONE
DISTRICT ATTORNEYS

Art. 338. Legislature may provide for election of.

Power of legislature.—Under Const. art. 5, § 21, and art. 4, § 22, relating to county and district attorneys, the Legislature has no power to pass an act which will exclude them from their rights to prosecute all actions for the state. Maud v. Terrell, 109 Tex. 97, 200 S. W. 375.

Art. 340a. Salary and fees.—In any county having a population in excess of one hundred thousand inhabitants, according to the last census of the United States, and according to any United States Census which may hereafter be taken, the district attorney of such county shall receive a salary of $500.00 from the State of Texas, as provided in the Constitution of Texas, and all fees, commissions and perquisites earned by such office; provided, that the amount of such salary, fees, commissions and perquisites to be so received and retained by him shall not exceed the sum of $6,000.00 in any one year; and provided further, that all salaries, fees, commissions and perquisites so earned and received by such office in excess of $6,000.00 during each and every fiscal year shall be paid into the county treasury of said county in accordance with the terms and provisions of the maximum fee bill, except as to such portion of such excess as shall be used and expended in the payment of salaries to deputies, assistants and stenographers as hereinafter provided. [ Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 64, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 47, § 2.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment. See Harris County v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 792.

Art. 340b. Assistant district attorneys; stenographer; salaries.—Such district attorney, in connection with, and for the purpose of conducting his office in such county, shall be, and is, hereby authorized to appoint six assistant district attorneys, two of whom shall receive a salary not to exceed three thousand dollars per annum, and one of whom shall receive a salary not to exceed twenty-four hundred dollars per annum and three of whom shall receive a salary not to exceed twenty-one hundred dollars per annum, all salaries payable monthly. He shall also be authorized to employ a stenographer, who shall receive a salary not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per annum, payable monthly, and two investigators, who shall each receive a salary not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars per annum, payable monthly. The salaries of the assistants, deputies and stenographer and investigators above provided for shall be paid by said county by warrant drawn upon the general funds thereof. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 47, § 3.]

Art. 340c. Same; additional assistants and employés; salaries.—Should such district attorney be of the opinion that the number of deputies, assistants and stenographer above provided for are insufficient or inadequate for the proper investigation of crime and the efficient performance of the duties of said office, he may, with the written consent of the county judge of said county, to be spread upon the minutes of the commissioners' court, appoint such additional assistants and employés as may be so authorized by such county judge, such additional assistants and employés to receive salaries of not exceeding eighteen hundred dollars per annum each, to be paid monthly; provided, however, that if at any time the county judge shall be of opinion that such additional assistants and employés, or any of them, are not necessary he may, by written declaration spread upon the minutes of the commissioners' court, withdraw, amend or qualify his written authority previously given for the appointment of such additional assistants or employés, the same to become effective on the first day of the next succeeding month; provided however, that said county judge shall give to such district attorney ten days written notice of his intention to so amend or qualify such written authority. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 340d. Same; salaries; how paid.—The salaries for the additional assistants and employés as above provided for herein, shall be paid out of the excess fees collected by such district attorney and his office, which would otherwise go to said county, a detailed, itemized statement under oath of which he shall include in his annual report as provided to be made in the maximum fee bill; and in no event shall said county be liable for the salaries of such additional assistants or employés. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 340e. Same; oath of office; duties; removal.—The assistant district attorneys above provided for, when so appointed, shall take the oath of office, and be authorized to represent the State in any court or proceeding in which such district attorney is or shall be authorized to so represent the State, such authority to be exercised under the direction of said district attorney, and such assistants, deputies, stenographer and investigator, whether regular or additional, shall be subject to removal at the will of said district attorney. Each of said assistant district attorneys shall be authorized to perform any official act devolving upon or authorized to be performed by such district attorney in said county. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 340f. Same; counties to which act applies.—The provisions of this Act shall apply to every district attorney within the State of Texas within counties of a population of more than one hundred thousand, to be determined as above provided, whether said district attorney be of and for a judicial district called and known by number, or whether called and known as a criminal judicial district or whether of and for any court called or known as a criminal district court; and whether such district attorney be called and known as a district attorney, or a criminal district attorney, or the criminal district attorney of any named county or court. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 340g. Same; repeal.—All laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed, whether referred to herein or not; provided, however, that this act is not intended, and shall not be considered or construed as repealing or affecting Chapter 121, Page 315, Acts of the Thirty-fifth Legislature, Regular Session, except in so far as it applies to the amount of fees to be retained by the Criminal District Attorney of Dallas County, Texas, and as to the amount and method of payment of salaries to the assistant criminal district attorneys, special assistants and stenographer employed in the office of the Criminal District Attorney of Dallas County, Texas, and Chapter 167 of the Acts of the regular session of the Thirty-fifth Legislature of the State of Texas, appearing on page 378 thereof, but shall be cumulative thereof; and provided further, that the same shall be cumulative of all laws not in conflict with the provisions hereof. [Id., § 8.]

CHAPTER ONE A

CRIMINAL DISTRICT ATTORNEY OF HARRIS COUNTY

Article 345a. Criminal district attorney of Harris county, etc.
See Harris County v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 792.
Authority of city attorney.—A city attorney in Harris county may prosecute cases in the city court under state law, where the district attorney is disqualified or refuses to act, in view of this article. Monk v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 194.

Article 345b. District attorney; how commissioned; salary and fees.
See Harris County v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 792.
Effect of city ordinance.—An ordinance of the town of Magnolia Park, in Harris county, fixing the fees of the city attorney in criminal cases to be taxed against the defendant, but providing that no fees should be taxed unless the city attorney prosecuted in person, will not be construed as forbidding fees to be taxed in favor of the district attorney of such county, allowed him under arts. 345a, 345b; Code Cr. Proc. 1911, arts. 1177, 1179, 1180. Monk v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 194.
Although a city in Harris county could, under Code Cr. Proc. 1911, art. 1177, provide that no fees should be allowed attorneys prosecuting criminal cases in the city court, it could not fix a fee to be taxed in cases prosecuted by the city attorney, and then deny the district attorney of the county a right to fees, in view of arts. 345a, 345b, and Code Cr. Proc. 1911, arts. 1179, 1180. Id.

Article 345c. What fees to be retained, etc.
Fees to be paid over to county.—Money collected by the district attorney of a county as fees for discharging his duties on behalf of the state did not belong to the county. Harris County v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 792.
Under this act the district attorney for the criminal district court of Harris county is bound to pay over to the county only the part of the fees earned by him he is expressly directed to pay over, and may retain all others, whether earned in the court or not. Id.

COUNTY ATTORNEYS

Article 346. [280] [245] Election and term of office.

Power of Legislature.—Under Const. art. 5, § 21, and art. 4, § 22, relating to county and district attorneys, the Legislature has no power to pass an act which will exclude them from their rights to prosecute all actions for the state. Maud v. Terrell, 109 Tex. 97, 209 S. W. 375.
Art. 347. [281] [245a] May appoint assistants.

Administrating oath.--In view of this article, giving assistant county attorney the same authority to administer oath as county attorney possesses, complaint was invalid where jurat recited that complaint was sworn to and subscribed before the county attorney by his deputy (following Arbetter v. State, 79 Cr. R. 487, 196 S. W. 769). Goodman v. State, 85 Cr. R. 279, 212 S. W. 171.

While the general rule is that a deputy may do what his principal officer might, the deputy cannot verify in the name of his principal where a duty such as taking oaths pertains to the deputy individually. Id. A complaint reciting: "Sworn to and subscribed by R. A. D. [the affiant], before me, on this 18th day of October, 1918, County Attorney of Ellis County, Texas. W. H. F., Assistant County Attorney, Ellis County," etc., sufficiently showed the affidavit was taken by W. H. F., the assistant county attorney. Dickerson v. State, 85 Cr. R. 378, 212 S. W. 497.

Art. 348. [282] [246] Vacancy in office, how filled.

Power to remove and declare vacancy.—Under Const. art. 5, § 24, only the district court, and not the commissioners' court, may remove the county attorney from office or declare a vacancy in his office, although under section 21 the commissioners' court may fill a vacancy existing in such office pending next general election. Hamilton v. King (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 953.

Legislative regulation of duties.—Rev. St. 1911, arts. 7487-7502, relating to collection of taxes, is not unconstitutional as interfering with the rights of district or county attorneys, because the words allowing county tax collectors to "sue" and "commence an action" will be construed to mean to institute actions and assist where the attorneys so desire. Maud v. Terrell, 109 Tex. 97, 200 S. W. 375.

Art. 351. [285] [248] Bond and oath of.

CHAPTER THREE

GENERAL PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO BOTH DISTRICT AND COUNTY ATTORNEYS

Art. 306. Shall institute proceedings against officers, when, etc. 363. To institute quo warranto proceedings.

Article 366. [300] [260] Shall institute proceedings against officers, when, etc.

Authority to prosecute action in name of state.—Neither arts. 366, 368, nor any other statute conferred any right upon a county attorney to bring an action in behalf of a county by his deputy, county judge, and clerk from allowing officers to buy postage stamps out of county funds. Edmondson v. Cumings (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 428.

The provision authorizing district or county attorney to institute proceedings against any officer intrusted with the "collection or safe-keeping of any public funds," who is abusing the trust confided in him, held to empower district attorney to bring action against county judge for money appropriated as salary from county funds in the keeping of the county treasurer; the county judge not being intrusted either with the keeping or the collection of such funds, and the proper proceeding in such case being against the treasurer, and not the county judge. Bexar County v. Davis (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 558.

Under this article district attorney may bring an action against county treasurer to recover loss sustained by reason of payments made under a statute which has been declared void by the Supreme Court, regardless of whether the prosecution is directed by the treasurer, under arts. 1506, 1506, or the commissioners' court. Id.

Art. 368. [302] To institute quo warranto proceedings.

See Edmondson v. Cumings (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 428.

Art. 369. [303] [261] Admission made by, shall not prejudice the state.

BANKS AND BANKING

BANKS

Article 370. Banks, incorporated how.

Incorporation under special act.—A banking corporation attempted to be organized under a prior special act after the adoption of Const. 1876, art. 16, section 16 of which prohibited the organization of such corporations, was illegal and nonexistent, despite its attempted organization was after the amendment of 1904 authorizing the incorporation of banks by general laws. Davis v. Allison, 100 Tex. 440, 211 S. W. 980.

Where banking corporation authorized by special act was not organized before adoption of Const. 1876, art. 16, section 16 of which prohibited organization of such corporations, it had no legal existence when organized after 1904, despite the constitutional amendment of that date authorizing the incorporation of banks by general laws, and subscribers to its stock, in suit by a receiver to enforce their subscriptions, were not estopped to defend on the ground that there was no legal corporation, despite Rev. St. 1911, art. 1138. Id.

National banks.—A national bank, being incorporated by the federal government, and subject to its laws in its organization and issuance of stock, is subject to the federal statutes, which are supreme and controlling; if the federal and state provisions on any point with reference to national banks conflict, the state rules must yield. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Stamford v. Stevenson (Conn. App.) 221 S. W. 384.

Art. 375. Capital stock prescribed; to be fully paid up.

Rights of persons induced to purchase stock by fraud.—Where seller of bank stock is a director of the bank and claims to be familiar with the business affairs thereof, buyer is entitled to rely upon seller's representations as to the value of such stock, without making an investigation, although he could have ascertained, by such investigation, the falsity of the representations. Barber v. Keeling (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 139.

Where bank stockholder was induced to acquire stock through misrepresentations of transferor, the transaction was voidable and not void. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 729.

A banking corporation attempted to be organized under a prior special act after the adoption of Const. 1876, art. 16, section 16 of which prohibited the organization of such corporations, was illegal, and nonexistent, despite its attempted organization was after the amendment of 1904 authorizing the incorporation of banks by general laws, and agreements to subscribe to its stock were unenforceable as between the company and the subscribers. Davis v. Allison, 109 Tex. 440, 211 S. W. 980.

Estoppel to deny powers.—Irrespective of arts. 375, 378, 546, as to powers of banks, a bank was estopped to plead ultra vires to avoid its purchase of an account against one indebted to it, where it delayed disavowal of such purchase until the debtor's assets were shown insufficient to meet price paid for account. Bay City Bank & Trust Co. v. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 344.

Ultra vires acts.—Where creditor bank agreed with debtor, insolvent coal company, to purchase and pay for coal sufficient to supply company's trade and pay operating expenses, president of company to act as bank's agent for sale and delivery, and net proceeds from business to be applied to company's debt to bank, title to coal purchased pursuant to such agreement, and turned over to the president of the company, remained in the bank as between it and the company, although agreement was ultra vires as to bank. Spadra-Clarksville Coal Co. v. Security Nat. Bank of Dallas (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 290.

Creditor of insolvent coal company would have no greater right to levy upon and sell coal purchased by bank, another creditor, pursuant to agreement with company to supply its trade, than the coal company would have to claim ownership therein, although agreement through which bank acquired coal was ultra vires to its charter. Id.
Art. 376  BANKS AND BANKING  (Title 14) ultra vires of a bank cannot be the basis of an action against or a defense by, the banks; but the government alone may complain, in a proceeding to forfeit bank's charter, that bank exceeded its charter powers. id.

In an action against a bank officer personally and against the bank for breach of contract for sale of cotton, petition held not to show cause of action, since the transaction is ultra vires; it not being alleged that the bank had, when contracting, any cotton to deliver, or would in due course of business acquire such cotton as collateral to any loans made; it not being within the bank's power to engage in buying and selling for future de-

Art. 377. Cash reserve.—Every banking corporation chartered under the laws of this State with a capital stock of less than twenty-five thousand dollars and which does not become a member of a Federal Reserve Bank under the laws of the United States, shall at all times have an amount of cash on hand and cash due from other banks equal to at least twenty per cent. of the aggregate amount of its demand deposits; and every bank, not located in a central reserve city, having a capital stock of twenty-five thousand dollars or more, and which do not become members of a Federal Reserve Bank under the laws of the United States, shall at all times have an amount of cash on hand and cash due from other banks, equal to at least fifteen per cent. of the aggregate amount of its demand deposits. Whenever the reserve of any bank as hereinbe-fore required shall fall below the amount specified above for its class, then such bank shall not make any new loans or discounts until it shall by collection restore its lawful reserve. Such reserve fund, or any part thereof, together with the current receipts may be kept on hand or on deposit payable on demand in any bank or banking association of the State of Texas, or any bank, banking association or trust company regularly chartered and operating under the laws of any State or under the laws of the United States, approved by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, and having a paid up capital stock of fifty thousand dol-ars or more, but the deposit in any one bank or trust company shall not exceed twenty per cent. of the total deposits, capital and surplus of the bank making the deposit. [Acts 1905 S. S. p. 491; Acts 1907, p. 60,

Explanatory.—The title and enacting part describe the act amended as having been "passed at the Second Called Session of the Thirty-third Legislature and approved October 19, 1914," etc., whereas the act was passed at the Third Called Session of the named properly make a loan to a partnership of which its president, a large stockholder, was a

LOAN AND BROKERAGE COMPANIES

Art. 385a. Corporation to loan money and act as trustee.
Art. 385b. Capital paid in; statements; examination and taking possession of by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking.

Article 385a. Corporations to loan money and act as trustee.—Corporations may be created for any or all of the following purposes, to-wit:
To accumulate and lend money, purchase, sell and deal in notes, bonds, and securities, but without banking and discounting privileges. To act as Trustee under any lawful express trust committed to them by contract and as agent for the performance of any lawful act. But no corporation organized hereunder shall act as agent or trustee in the consolidation of or for the purpose of combining the assets, business, or means of any other persons, firms, corporations or associations, nor shall such corporation as agent or trustee carry on the business of another. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 83, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 385b. Capital paid in; statements; examination and taking possession of by Commissioner of Insurance and Banking.—No corporation created under this Act shall be authorized to engage in or carry on any such business unless it shall have an actual paid in capital of not less than $10,000, and providing that each corporation organized under this Act shall publish in some newspaper of general circulation in the county where it has its principal place of business, on or before the first day of February of each year, a statement of its condition on the previous thirty-first day of December, in such form as may be required by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, showing under oath its assets and liabilities. That a copy of this statement shall be filed with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking and a fee of $10.00 paid that officer for filing the same.

That it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking to examine, or cause to be examined, such corporation annually. The said corporation shall pay the actual traveling expenses, hotel bills, and all other actual expenses incident to such examination, and a fee therefor not exceeding one-eighth of one per centum of its actual paid in capital.

If upon examination it shall appear that the assets of said corporation, exclusive of its said capital paid in, are less than its liabilities, the said Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall notify it thereof in writing, and if the said corporation shall not within thirty days from receipt of said notice restore and make good such impairment of its capital, then it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking to take possession of the said corporation and its property and to wind the same up and distribute its assets in accordance with the provisions of the law of this State with reference to the winding up of the affairs of banks incorporated under its laws. And if it shall appear from such examination that said corporation has exceeded its corporate powers or has been guilty of an unlawful act or acts, the said Commissioner shall, in writing, notify the said corporation to cease such act or practice and to conduct its business in accordance with law and its charter powers, and if such corporation shall fail or refuse for a period of thirty days thereafter to comply with such notice, then it shall be the duty of the said Commissioner of Insurance and Banking to take possession of the said Corporation and its assets and wind it up and distribute the said assets as hereinbefore provided. [Id., § 2.]

CHAPTER FIVE

BANK DEPOSIT GUARANTY LAW

Art. 445. What banking, etc., corporations may protect depositors.

County as deposito.—Under art. 2440 et seq., and the bank deposit guaranty law, a county which deposited its funds in bank held not entitled to assert any superior claim over other creditors in distribution of assets of bank after its insolvency. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 542.

Art. 446. Bank, etc., electing guaranty fund method, to pay what and when for creation of fund.—For the purpose of creating a Depositors' Guaranty Fund any such bank or trust company which shall elect to secure its deposits under the Depositors' Guaranty Fund provided for in this chapter, if its application is approved by said Board as prescribed by Article 451, shall pay to said Banking Board on January 1, 1910, one per cent. of its daily average deposits for the preceding year ending November 1, 1909, not including United States, State or other public funds, if otherwise secured. Annually after the first payment to said fund, each bank and trust company subject to the provisions of the guaranty fund plan of this chapter, shall pay to said Board one-fourth of one per cent. of its daily average deposits for the year ending November 1st, of the preceding year, as above defined, which amount shall be added to said guaranty fund; provided, that when the amount available in said guaranty fund shall reach the sum of five million dollars, the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking shall notify all banks and trust companies subject to the provisions of this chapter, at least thirty days before the next annual payment, of that fact and thereafter the banks and trust companies participating shall not pay any further amount into said fund until said fund shall be depleted. In the event of the depletion of said fund from any cause so that it falls below five million dollars or below the amount of the guaranty fund on January 1st preceding, or in the event of necessity to meet an emergency at any time, said Banking Board shall have authority to require the payment for the current year of two per cent. of such daily average deposits, or such part thereof as may be necessary to restore said fund to the maximum above named, or to its amount as of January first preceding, or to meet the emergency; but no bank or trust company coming under the provisions of this chapter shall ever be required to pay more than two per cent. of its daily average deposits for any one year; provided, further, that the first payment herein provided for by any bank which shall hereafter elect to secure its deposits under the Depositors' Guaranty Fund shall be made by said bank to said Banking Board.

Took effect Nov. 15, 1921.

Art. 453. Commissioner may wind up affairs of bank, etc.

Discretion of commissioner.—Under art. 453, and art. 459, the questions whether it is necessary to enforce such liability, and, if so, to what extent, are referred to the judgment and discretion of the commissioner of banks and his decision is conclusive. Harris v. Briggs (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 726.

Effect of delay in taking action.—Where a bank, being unable to meet its obligations, transferred its assets to another, which assumed its liability to creditors, the delay of the commissioner of banking for nearly four years in appointing a special agent to take charge of the bank, and in making an assessment against stockholders, did not affect his right or authority to act under arts. 453, 459. Harris v. Briggs (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 726.

Art. 454. No bank, etc., notified, shall have a lien on or charge against assets, etc.

Right of surety company to urge off-set as against commissioner.—Bonding and surety companies, by commissioner of insurance and banking, for an insolvent bank, on bond of whose cashier surety company had gone, held not entitled to offset against commissioner claim against bank arising from judgment against it, the surety company, on its guaranty of bank as county depository, which claim against bank was acquired after commissioner's administration had begun. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 542.

Art. 457. Shall collect debts, etc.

Art. 458. On order of court, etc., may sell, etc., bad debts, or real or personal property.

Art. 459. May enforce liability of stockholders if, etc.

Power and duty to collect assessments in general.—The liability of stockholders of a bank, under art. 552, and the power of the commissioner of banking to enforce it under art. 459, do not depend on whether the bank has assets, or whether the special agent appointed to act for the commissioner is able to take possession of them. Harris v. Briggs (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 726.

Where a bank, being unable to meet its obligations, transferred its assets to another, which assumed its liability to creditors, the delay of the commissioner of banking for nearly four years in appointing a special agent to take charge of the bank, and in making an assessment against stockholders, did not affect his right or authority to act under arts. 453, 459. Id.

Under art. 459, the commissioner, if he makes an assessment, shall collect the same from all stockholders if it is possible to do so. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 723.

Until an agent to liquidate bank is elected at stockholders' meeting called by commissioner of insurance and banking, under art. 474, the commissioner is authorized to collect assessment of stockholders' liability, under arts. 459, 552, and 556. Id.

Calling meeting.—In commissioner's action to enforce personal liability of bank stockholders, under arts. 459, 555, and 556, the commissioner's failure to call a meeting of stockholders, under art. 474, is no defense. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 723.

Real owner liable.—Under arts. 459, 552, and 556, the real owner of bank stock at time of bank's failure can be assessed and held liable for bank's debts, although not stockholder of record. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 723.

Transfer of stock.—Bank stockholder who transferred stock under misrepresentation is not liable for stockholders' liability assessment, under arts. 459, 552 and 556, after stock has been transferred, the transaction being voidable and not void. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 723.
Where the commissioner of insurance and banking, after having determined that it was necessary in order to settle debts of insolvent state bank to levy a 100 per cent assessment against the stockholders, sent notice thereof to defendant, who had transferred his stock less than a year prior to date of bank's default, with demand for payment, no further proceedings were necessary as a condition precedent to suit. Austin v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 277; Same v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 282; Same v. Yates (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 282.

This article, when construed with other articles, is broad enough to confer on the commissioner of insurance and banking authority to enforce the liability of a former stockholder who has transferred his stock less than one year before date on which bank made default in payment of debts. Id.

Subscriptions induced by fraud.—That bank stockholder was induced to acquire stock through misrepresentation of former holder, where there was no fraud perpetrated by bank, is no defense in action to enforce stockholders' personal liability upon bank's insolvency, under arts. 459, 552, and 556. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 723.

Art. 470. Guaranty fund to receive its portion of dividends, with interest.

Art. 473. Bank aggrieved may enjoin proceedings by commissioner.

Art. 474. Continued liquidation by commissioner decided by stockholders.

Failure to call meeting.—In commissioner's action to enforce personal liability of bank stockholders, under arts. 459, 552, and 556, the commissioner's failure to call a meeting of stockholders, under art. 474, is no defense. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 723.

Art. 486. Depositors paid in full out of guaranty fund, etc.

See Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. Austin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 542.

Deposits otherwise secured.—Under this article, one bank's deposit with another, evidenced by a certificate of deposit and secured by bond of depositary bank, with sureties, was a secured deposit, unprotected by the Depositors' Guaranty Fund, "deposits otherwise secured" excepted by statute, meaning secured otherwise than by Depositors' Guaranty Fund Act, including art. 486. Austin v. First National Bank of Teague (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 832.

Article 517dd. Expense of investigation on application for charter —When application is made for the organization of a State bank, the applicants shall be required to pay to the Commissioner of Insurance of Banking of the State all actual necessary expenses incurred by the Department of Insurance and Banking in making an investigation of such application not to exceed fifty dollars. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch.
Took effect 90 days after June 15, 1920, date of adjournment.

Art. 521. Appointment and compensation of examiners; general liquidating agent; removal.—The Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, from time to time, shall appoint such number of State bank examiners as may be necessary to make the examination of banking corporations required and allowed by law, which number shall at no time exceed the ratio of one examiner for each forty banking corporations then subject to examination under the laws of this State; and the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking may also designate any one of said State bank examiners as a general liquidating agent, with his office in the banking department, for the purpose of liquidating any one or all State banks in the process of liquidation and for the purpose of conducting such liquidation under the direction of the said Commissioner. The salary of each of said State bank examiners and of the general liquidating agent shall be for their first year of employment in the Department at the rate of Two Thousand Four Hundred ($2,400.00) Dollars per year, and such salary shall be increased by the sum of Two Hundred ($200.00) Dollars per year for each year of continuous service in the Department until the maximum salary of Three Thousand Six Hundred ($3,600.00) Dollars shall be reached, and in addition to the salaries above specified, they shall receive all necessary traveling expenses, and it is provided that bank examiners and liquidating agent now in the employ of such Department shall have the period of past continuous employment counted in determining their rate of pay; said State bank examiners and the general liquidating agent may be discharged and removed by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking. The entire salary of the general liquidating agent may be assessed by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking against any bank or banks in liquidation in amounts proportionate to the salary and time required of the general liquidating agent in such liquidation, and may be collected and paid into the State Treasury as fees.
[Acts 1905, S. S., p. 505; Acts 1909, 2d S. S., p. 424, § 33; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 65, § 1.]
Sec. 2 provides that the act shall not become effective until Sept. 1, 1921.

Art. 521a. [Superseded.]
Explanatory.—Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 65, § 1, amends Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 205, §
5, so as to read as set forth above (art. 521), and to be known as art. 522.

Art. 523. Duties of commissioner in cases of certain derelictions, etc., of banks, etc.; duties of attorney general.

Appointment of receiver.—In suit against a bank to recover funds held in escrow for plaintiff and others, facts alleged in the petition held sufficient to justify immediate ap-

Art. 530  Directors may appoint and remove officers, etc.; authority of officers, etc.; acts without authority void.

Sale, pledge or indorsement of bills and notes.—Under this article the cashier of a bank, authorized by a duly entered resolution, had authority to contract to pledge the bank's bills receivable for payment of an indebtedness. Houston Nat. Exch. Bank of Houston v. Gregg County (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 865.

Art. 539.  Loans limited.

Amount that may be loaned to one person.—Where bank had loaned debtor the full amount it was permitted by law to loan one person, the act of its vice president in causing it to discount a note executed by him and another for accommodation of such debtor was not a fraud on the bank as having increased such debtor's indebtedness to bank in violation of banking laws; the debtor not being liable on such note. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank, 109 Tex. 555, 213 S. W. 584.

Even if bank, having loaned debtor the full amount it was permitted by law to loan one person, had discounted note by third parties upon which such debtor was an avowed obligor, the matter of overloan would not affect validity of loan, being a matter solely between the bank and the government.—Id.

That a national bank, through the device of discounting accommodation paper of controlling stockholders of a company, exceeded its legal loaning capacity to such company is no defense to the makers of the accommodation paper when sued on one of their notes, the matter of overloan being solely between national government and bank. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank of Dallas (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 409.

Art. 546.  Bank, etc., not to employ its money in trade, etc.

See Bay City Bank & Trust Co. v. Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 344.

Art. 547a.  Powers of trust companies.—Any trust company organized under the laws of the State with a capital of not less than five hundred thousand dollars shall, in addition to all other powers conferred by law, have the power to purchase, sell, discount and negotiate with or without its endorsement or guaranty, notes, drafts, checks, bills of exchange, acceptances, including bankers' acceptances, cable transfers and other evidences of indebtedness; to purchase and sell, with or without its endorsement or guaranty, stocks, bonds, securities, including the obligations of the United States or of any States thereof; to issue debentures, bonds and promissory notes, to accept bills or drafts drawn upon it, but in no event having liabilities outstanding thereon at any one time exceeding five times its capital stock and surplus; provided, however, that with the consent in writing of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, they may have outstanding at any one time ten times the capital stock and surplus; and generally to exercise such powers as are incidental to the powers conferred by this Act. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 49, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after June 15, 1920, date of adjournment.

Art. 551.  Bank, etc., shall not make voluntary assignment, etc.

See Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. Austin (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 542.

What constitutes assignment.—The transfer, by a bank unable to meet its obligations, of all of its property and assets as security to another bank, which assumed its indebtedness, was not a voluntary general assignment of the business and affairs of the bank, in violation of this article. Harris v. Briggs (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 726.

Failure of banking commissioner to act.—Where the F. Bank, being unable to meet its obligations, transferred all of its assets to the C. Bank, which assumed the indebtedness of the F. Bank, if it thereupon became the duty of the commissioner of insurance and banking to take possession of such assets, under this article, his failure to do so did not render null and void, as contrary to public policy, such contract, which required the F. Bank to repay any amount not realized by the C. Bank from such assets. Harris v. Briggs (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 726.

Art. 552.  Stockholder's liability for debts of bank, etc., defined.

Liability of and assessment against stockholders.—Until an agent to liquidate bank is elected at stockholders' meeting called by commissioner, under art. 474, the commissioner is authorized to collect assessment of stockholders' liability under arts. 459, 552, and 556. The consequence of failure to call a meeting of stockholders, under art. 474, is no defense. His determination is conclusive, but if he makes an assessment he must collect the same from all stockholders if it is possible to do so. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 723.

The real owner of bank stock at time of bank's failure can be assessed and held liable for bank's debts, although not stockholder of record. Id.

Cons. art. 16, § 16, defining liability incident to ownership of stock in banking corporations, is self-executing. This article does not extend the liability of a former stockholder of an insolvent banking corporation beyond the limits fixed by Cons. art. 16, § 16; the words "each stockholder of such corporation," occurring in the article of the statute, meaning stockholders owning and holding shares at time of default. Austin v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 277; Same v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 282; Same v. Yates (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 283; Same v. Huffman (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 283.

The liability of stockholders of a bank, under this article, and the power of the commissioner of banking to enforce it under art. 459, do not depend on whether the bank has assets, or whether the special agent appointed to act for the commissioner is able to take possession of them. This article construed as applying only to debts contracted by the bank in the ordinary course of business, an indebtedness for money borrowed to pay debts so contracted is contracted in the ordinary course of business, and the stockholders are liable. Harris v. Briggs (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 726.

Subscription obtained by fraud.—That bank stockholder was induced to acquire stock through misrepresentation of former holder, where there was no fraud perpetrated by bank, is no defense in action to enforce stockholders' personal liability upon bank's insolvency, under arts. 459, 552, and 556. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 723.

Effect of transfer of shares.—Bank stockholder who transferred stock under misrepresentation is not liable for stockholders' liability assessment, under arts. 459, 552, and 556, after stock has been transferred, the transaction being voidable and not void. Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 723.

Under Cons. art. 16, § 18, and this article, the liability of a stockholder, who transferred his stock within less than one year prior to date on which bank made default in payment of its debt, was not secondary but the same, as to debts existing at the time of transfer, as to those of present stockholders. Austin v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 277; Same v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 282; Same v. Yates (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 283; Same v. Huffman (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 283.

Art. 554. Receipt of deposits or creation of debts while insolvent.

What constitutes creation of debt.—The transfer by a bank of all of its property and assets as security to another bank, which assumed its liabilities to creditors, did not create a new debt in violation of Code Civ. Proc. art. 522, and this article. Harris v. Briggs (C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 726.

Art. 556. Who liable where stock held by executor, etc.

See Brooks v. Austin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 723.

Art. 561. Business of solvent corporation may be closed, how.

See Sayles v. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Abilene (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 823.

Art. 562. Who may accept provisions of this title, and how.

Art. 564. Increase of stock for excessive ratio of deposits to stock and surplus, required; penalty.—If, from the sworn statement of the average daily deposits of any state bank or banking corporation, organized under or subject to the general banking laws of this State, for the year ending on the first day of November, 1920, or of any subsequent year, filed with the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, as provided in this Title, it shall appear that such average daily deposits for such year amounted to more than five times the capital stock and surplus of such bank on November 1st of such year, if the capital stock of such bank is not more than ten thousand dollars, ($10,000.00), or more than six times such capital stock and surplus, if the capital stock is more than ten thousand dollars, ($10,000.00), and less than twenty thousand dollars, ($20,000.00), or seven times the capital stock and surplus, if the capital stock is twenty thousand dollars, ($20,000.00), or more and less than forty thousand dollars, ($40,000.00), or eight times such capital stock and surplus, if the capital stock is forty thousand dollars, ($40,000.00), or more and less than seventy-five thousand dollars, ($75,000.00), or nine times such capital stock and surplus, if the capital stock is seventy-five thousand dollars, ($75,000.00), or more and less than one hundred thousand dollars, ($100,000.00), or ten times such capital stock and surplus, if the capital stock is one hundred thousand dollars, ($100,000.00), or more; then, in any such case, it shall be the duty of the State Banking Board to require that such state bank shall, within sixty days thereafter, increase its capital by twenty-five per cent, thereof; provided, that the State Banking Board may relieve, or refuse to relieve, any such bank from such order on showing to said board of conditions applying to and relating to the increase of the average daily deposits in such bank, which said board may find to justify such relief or not to justify such relief; and it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking to immediately furnish such state bank or banking corporation with a certified copy of the order making such requirement, as well as any order granting or refusing to grant relief from such requirement; and upon receipt of the order making such requirement, the directors of such state bank or banking corporation shall, within the time required, cause such increase to be made in the capital stock; and if the same is not done within such time, it shall be unlawful for such bank to thereafter receive any deposits at any time when its total demand and time deposits and savings accounts shall in the aggregate amount to more than the limitation herein placed upon deposits. [Acts 1909, 2 S. S., p. 423, § 27; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 54, § 1, amending art. 564, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 2 of the act is penal in its nature and is set forth post as art. 531a, Penal Code. The act took effect April 2, 1921.

Art. 567. No bank, etc., to own over ten per cent. of stock of another, or loan on its stock, etc.

National bank.—It is not illegal for one national bank to loan money and take a note therefor secured by the stock of another national bank. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Stevenson (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 564.

Art. 574. Bonds of officers and employés of banks.

Set-off by surety company.—Bonding and surety company sued by commissioner of insurance and banking, administering insolvent bank, on bond of whose cashier surety company had gone, held not entitled to offset against commissioner claim against bank arising from judgment against it, the surety company, on its guaranty of bank as county depository, which claim against bank was acquired after commissioner's administration had begun. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 542.

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

Deposits in general.—Where a business was sold under agreement whereby the buyer deposited in a bank the purchase price, to be paid out to creditors of the seller on checks signed by both buyer and seller, no part of the deposit was garnishable as belonging to the seller until such creditors as he had approved by signing checks jointly with the buyer had been paid. Fescue v. Provident Nat. Bank of Waco (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 553.

A check may be certified by a bank by cashier writing thereon the word "Good" and signing his name. Priddy v. Green (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 243.

In suit by next friend of a minor against a bank to recover money deposited with the bank by the minor's mother, the money having been so blended and intermingled by the mother with her own funds that it could not be specifically designated, and it having been transferred to the son long after it was transferred to the bank by the mother, evidence held not to show that plaintiff was the owner of it. Watson v. First State Bank of Dallas (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 233.

Where mortgagor shipped mortgaged cattle to commission firm, and where the commission firm placed net proceeds in bank with instructions to credit the amount "By direction of: H. [mortgagor], a/o J. [mortgagor]. Deposited by S. [commission firm]." To the following bank: S. [owner of mortgage notes]"—and where advice card from bank in which the proceeds were so deposited to bank owning notes stated: "We credit your account $4,316.60 [amount of proceeds]. By direction of: H. [mortgagor], a/o J. [mortgagor]"—the bank owning note was required to credit proceeds to mortgagor's account toward payment of mortgage note, and not to mortgagor's account, to be drawn out and used by it as it saw proper. Stockyards Nat. Bank v. Wilkinson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1049.

Relation between bank and depositor.—By a deposit in a bank, the relation of creditor and debtor is created. Padgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1046.
The making of a general deposit with a bank creates the relation of debtor and creditor between the bank and the party in whose name the deposit is made. Meador v. Rudolph (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 126.

Application of deposits to debts due bank.—Bank's right of set-off does not apply to special deposits. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank, 199 Tex. 555, 213 S. W. 584.

Where bank discounted note made by its vice president and a comaker for accommodation of vice president's bank, to whom it had loaned full amount allowed by law, and agreed, through vice president, to apply to payment of such note deposits made by debtor for such purpose, it was chargeable with vice president's knowledge of agreement, the agreement not being inimical to bank's interest as prejudicial to bank's equitable right of set-off of debtor's deposits to his prior indebtedness, since the deposits to which the agreement applied were to be made in the future and for the express purpose of paying the note; and bank's right of set-off would not in any event apply to such special deposits. Id.

A bank has a right to apply money in its hands belonging to an insolvent debtor to the obligations due by him to the bank. Osceola Mercantile Co. v. Nabors (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 991.

Payment of check or draft.—Where plaintiff acquiesced in charging against his account check drawn in due course of business, and stolen from him, without his fault, held, that he could not have recourse against defendant, which paid check in first place and transmitted it to bank on which it was drawn, Cherbonnier v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Lubbock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 309.

Payment of forged or altered instruments.—Plaintiff, by issuing check, cast on bank duty to pay it, or, if indorsed by payee, duty to ascertain genuineness of indorsement, unless plaintiff knew payee was fictitious person, in which case payment to any holder was authorized. Commonwealth Nat. Bank v. Hawes (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 859.

A bank against a depositor the payment of any check upon the forged indorsement of the payee. Padgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1046.

A bank cannot charge against a depositor the payment of any check when the forged indorsement of the payee. Id.

Where a bank check is drawn in favor of a fictitious payee, whom the drawer in good faith and without fault believes to be a real person, and such check is fraudulently indorsed by another in the name of the payee, the payment thereof cannot operate as payment of any part of the bank's debt to the depositor. Id.

Where a bank has an agreement with a depositor, to apply to payment of deposits made by the depositor and to the payment of any check upon the forged indorsement of the payee, yet, where the depositor draws a check in so negligent a manner that it can be raised without exciting the suspicion of a prudent and cautious man, and the bank pays the amount so raised, the depositor and not the bank must bear the loss himself; hence an answer setting up such facts in an action against the bank should not be stricken on exception. First Nat. Bank of Newsom v. J. C. Walling & Son (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1080.

A telegraph company issuing a draft or order, in effect waiving identification of the payee, by indorsement of its authorized agent that payee was identified by him, is liable to bank paying it, whether or not the person presenting it and indorsing it was the payee. Mackay Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Fort Worth Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 244.

Special deposits.—Deposit in bank made by contractor to build school through another bank in which he deposited completion payment held a general, not a special, deposit. Wise v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 977.

Where a national bank agreed with defendants, its vice president, and another controlling stockholder in a company, to which the bank already had lent the legal limit, that deposits made by the company after the bank had discounted defendants' paper executed for the accommodation of the company, would be applied only in payment of such paper, deposits made pursuant to the agreement were special deposits for a particular debt, not creating the relation of debtor and creditor between the bank and the company. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank of Dallas (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 409.

Deposit in bank to credit of another person, to be delivered to such person by bank upon payment being successful in pending suit against him, was not a special deposit in its restrictive sense, requiring the thing deposited to be safely kept and the identical thing returned, but was a special deposit in the sense that it was for a specific purpose, making bank liable to third party upon payment to depositor in violation of the contract between the parties with reference to the deposit. Meador v. Rudolph (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 126.

Collections.—A bank that held a draft for 27 days without notifying the payee of non-payment when instructed to give notice by wire was guilty of negligence and liable for resulting loss. Terrell v. Commercial Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1133.

In an action to recover for the negligence of a bank in failing to promptly notify drawer of the nonpayment of draft, measure of damages is amount drawer would have recovered on debt from drawer if promptly notified. Id.

Unless shown by the evidence that the drawer of a draft would have realized something on a debt from the drawer, but for the negligence of the bank in withholding notice of non-payment, only nominal damages can be given. Id.

In an action against a bank for negligently failing to collect a draft, the measure of damages is compensation for the injury thereby suffered, which is not necessarily the face of the draft. Buckholts State Bank v. Graf (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 858.

Where a bank, plaintiff's agent, had forwarded a draft to defendant bank which was accepted and paid by defendant's cashier's check, but defendant subsequently stopped delivery of its check before it was received by the first bank, facts held to support a finding that the first bank merely acted as plaintiff's agent, and was not therefore a proper party to the suit as a purchaser of the draft. Farmers' Guaranty State Bank of Joplin v. Reddick & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 257.

A bank was the sole agent of the lessor for the reception of money under a lease providing that it should terminate if lessee should fail to begin operations for an oil well on or before a certain date "unless the lessee on or before that date shall pay or tender to the lessor or to the credit of the lessor in the F. Bank, the sum of $25." Texas Co. v. Wimberly (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 286.

It is not negligence for a correspondent bank which has received a check from another bank for collection, to forward it to the drawee bank for collection, in keeping with its custom and without reason to apprehend that the check would not be duly remitted for, where such bank is the only bank at the place of payment. Waggoner Bank & Trust Co. v. Gamer Co. (Sup.) 213 S. W. 927, 6 A. L. R. 615.

When a bank with which a check is deposited has presented it to the drawee bank for payment, and payment is refused, it need thereafter make no further presentment; its ordinary duty, in the absence of instructions, being only to promptly notify the owner of the check of its dishonor and to return the check to him. Id.

Where a check drawn by a third party is deposited by the payee in a bank to the payee's credit, the bank is under no absolute obligation to collect it, being merely charged with the duty of using due diligence for its collection and due care in selection of an agency for the purpose so that, when it forwards the check for collection in accordance with business custom to a reputable correspondent, it will not be liable for negligence if the drawee bank fails to pay it. Id.

When a bank with which a check is deposited has presented it to the drawee bank for payment, and payment is refused, it need thereafter make no further presentment. Id.

A bank, undertaking the collection of commercial paper sent it by another bank for collection, is liable for any loss resulting to the sending bank from the collecting bank's negligence in failing to make the collection. Central Exch. Nat. Bank of Waco v. First National Bank (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 699.

When a bank undertakes to collect negotiable paper, intrusted to it for that purpose, the relation of principal and agent is thereby established; the bank becoming the agent for collection. Id.

Where a note which has been surrendered by the bank to which it has been intrusted for collection, in exchange for a check, as, upon dishonor of the check, been recovered without its vitality or security having been in any way impaired, the bank is not liable to the owner of the note unless to the extent of any actual loss that may have been occasioned by its act. Id.

Where an owner of a checking account in a bank draws a check in his wife's name by her consent, she also having a checking account, and delivers such check to another as payment, and the drawee deposits check for collection in a bank which forwards it to a correspondent, but the correspondent fails to present it to drawee bank for payment, and returns it with a notation, "No act," whereupon the original payee institutes a criminal prosecution, the collecting bank and its correspondent are not liable in an action by the payee for false imprisonment unless they could have foreseen or reasonably anticipated the institution of such criminal proceedings. Cherry v. Preston (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1100.

Absolute owner of a draft was the owner of the money after the draft was collected by a bank. Provident Nat. Bank of Waco v. Cairo Flour Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 499.

Whether title to proceeds of draft collected by bank for depositor is in the bank or the depositor depends on the intention of the parties, but, in the absence of any evidence of intention, the bank takes title immediately upon crediting the depositor with the amount of the proceeds; the bank being authorized by custom to credit depositor therewith. Commercial Nat. Bank of Hutchinson, Kan., v. Held Bros. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 896.

A bank which accepts paper for collection acquires no title to the paper, but in such case acts as a collecting agent for the depositor, who retains title. Id.

Where a bank credited a depositor of drafts for collection with the amount of the drafts subject to collection, the proceeds thereof, after collection by a correspondent bank which has in other bank in the correspondent bank with which the drafts had been deposited, belonged to such bank, and not to the depositor: the collection having discharged the condition upon which the credit had been given. Id.

Failure of creditor bank to notify its debtor that a note had not been paid until after the death of one to whom the debtor had intrusted funds for its payment and who had misappropriated them, held not actionable negligence available as a defense in an action on the note. Shaw v. First State Bank (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 325.

It is not within the apparent scope of cashier's authority to speak for the board of directors. Id.

The building of a two-story brick building, or the making of a special contract for professional services of an architect, are not the ordinary financial business of a bank within the rule that cashier has apparent authority to bind the bank in such business. Id.

A bank must necessarily act through its officers and agents, and, if defendants signed a note by reason of misrepresentations on the part of such officers and agents, their acts must be imputed to and were the acts of the bank, and defendants were, as against the

Where one is vice president and general manager of a bank, his knowledge of terms of agreement entered into on behalf of bank by him with makers of note discounted by bank would ordinarily be chargeable to bank. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank, 109 Tex. 555, 213 S. W. 584.

If a bank's cashier exceeded his authority from the bank in writing in a false amount in a blank note given by the bank's customer to cover overdrafts, the customer could defeat the bank's suit on the note for such improper amount, the bank being chargeable for the cashier's imputation to himself and the bank. Goree v. Uvalde Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 620.

The cashier of a bank having large authority is an agent of the bank within the scope of his authority, but when he exceeds it the bank will not be bound. id.

Where a bank's customer made out blank notes to cover overdrafts, in filling in such notes for the amount of the overdrafts the bank's cashier was agent for the customer, and not for the bank. Id.

In depositor's action against bank for deposits misappropriated by bank's cashier, who, having paid draft on bank, charged amount thereof against depositor's account without depositor's authority, bank could have avoided liability to depositor for such amount by proving that the depositor actually received the benefit of the payment. National Surety Co. v. Atascosa Ice, Water & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 597.

It was not within the scope of the agency of the cashier of a bank to make loans in the name of the bank for depositors, and the bank was not bound by his acts in making such loans. Monahan v. Uvalde Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 640.

If a bank had known that its cashier had authority to draw out money deposited in a loan account of plaintiff, the fact would not have charged the bank with notice the cashier was loaning or pretending to loan such money for plaintiff, nor make the bank liable for the cashier's conversion of it. Id.

Though a bank knew plaintiff had deposited his money, and that its cashier had authority to draw it whenever he desired, the bank was not charged with knowledge its cashier had authority from plaintiff to lend the money for him, nor that the cashier had misappropriated plaintiff's money to his own use, and had forged notes to hide his crime; any action by cashier being adverse to bank, preventing imputation of his knowledge to it. Id.

Notice to a bank officer or one having for the bank general supervision of the business embracing a certain transaction was notice to the bank. Id.

The express authority of the president by the bank of the general power to issue its drafts, which power may be expressly given by board of directors or conferred by established custom, and which, if no restriction is placed on it, includes authority to issue drafts in payment of his own debts, is assumed to be lawful in the absence of opposing facts. Ft. Worth Nat. Bank v. Harwood (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 487.

-- Individual interest.--Bank which has discounted note executed to it by its vice president and a third party for the accommodation of bank's debtor, to whom it had loaned full amount allowed by law, cannot recover upon note after having violated its agreement made through vice president to apply to payment of note deposits made for such purpose by debtor; vice president's knowledge of agreement being imputable to bank notwithstanding his personal interest. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank, 109 Tex. 555, 213 S. W. 584.

Where bank, having loaned debtor full amount it was permitted by law to loan to one person, not knowing that third party would advance to such debtor the amount of such lender under bank's agreement, through such vice president, to apply to payment of note deposits made by debtor for such purpose, vice president's knowledge of agreement was imputable to bank, notwithstanding his personal interest in transactions, being sufficiently incompatible with that of bank to lead third party to think vice president would withhold information from bank. Id.

The bank of which defendant was cashier was not the undisclosed principal in a contract signed by him in his own name, where plaintiff, the obligee, refused to accept the bank's obligation, but demanded the personal obligation of the signers as the principals thereon. Edwards v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 278.

Where there has been collusion between cashier of bank and a depositor to secure services of cashier adversely to the bank, it is not liable for misappropriation by the cashier of funds drawn out under authority of the depositor to be used to detriment of bank by cashier in making individual loans for depositor. Holmes v. Uvalde Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 640.

Where money is deposited in bank, and the cashier is authorized and paid as an individual by the depositor to act for the depositor in making loans, which acts, if performed by the bank, would be ultra vires, the depositor cannot recover from the bank for the peculations and conversions of the cashier. Id.

Where the president of a bank acted as an individual and not as an officer of the bank in purchasing defendant's cotton and promising to deposit the proceeds in the bank to his credit, the bank was not responsible to the defendant for his failure to deposit the proceeds to defendant's credit, though he deposited them to his own credit; it not appearing that any of the other officers knew anything about the nature of the transaction until long afterwards. Hull v. Guaranty State Bank of Carthage, (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 810.

Liability of officer or employé to bank.—A bank's clerk, who negligently reported a customer's balance, so that the customer drew out more than he was entitled to...
to, was liable to the bank for damages to it through his negligence, regardless of any liability of the customer. Commercial State Bank v. Van Hutton (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 362.

Accommodation paper.—A bank, as an accommodated party, cannot maintain an action against accommodation makers of note. Brady v. Cobbs (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 802.

Other duties and liabilities.—In suit to recover damages for wrongful failure of defendant bank to make timely remittance in payment of premium on life policy, evidence held insufficient to show that defendant was negligent in not remitting on the day in question. Washington v. Austin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 382.

In suit to recover damages for wrongful failure of defendant bank to make timely remittance in payment of premium on life policy, evidence held to show contributory negligence on the part of plaintiffs. Id.

In an action against a bank in the nature of conversion of two vendor's lien notes, deposited by plaintiff as collateral for his note, but claimed by defendant also to secure another note on which plaintiff was indorsed, evidence held to sustain a finding that the indorsed note had been paid out of the assets of the maker under an agreed transfer and assignment thereof to the bank. First State Bank of Ben Franklin v. Hamer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 222.

Where after divorce a husband sold land in which his former wife had a half interest as community property, and thereafter the wife sued a bank on its cashier's check indorsed to the husband, and representing half the price of the land, the bank was under no obligation to the foreign executor of the husband's estate, or to the estate itself, to set up limitations against the wife's claim, the executor and estate having been represented by an attorney selected by him, having been fully informed of all facts, and having had opportunity to qualify as executor in Texas and defend the suit. Baber v. Houston Nat. Exch. Bank (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 156.

There is no rule of law that requires a bank or any one else to withhold funds owing to another person upon the ground that they have knowledge of the fact that some one else has an unsatisfied judgment against such other person. Provident Nat. Bank of Waco v. Cairo Flour Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 495.

The creditor may not apply a payment to a debt arising after payment, without an agreement or direction to such effect. First Nat. Bank v. Rush (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 378.

When a bank gives unqualified credit for a draft attached to bill of lading, it becomes the owner thereof, and any funds collected thereon, and is not liable for any failure of the shipment to fulfill the terms of the contract between the seller and the purchaser, under U. S. Comp. St. § 8604. Farmers' State Bank of Kenefick v. A. F. Hardie & Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 524.

Where a bank as plaintiff's agent had the defendant bank transmit money to a Chicago bank and wire that bank to pay it to a named person on his delivery of a bill of lading covering 10 automobiles, and the defendant bank had knowledge through a letter from another Chicago bank that the telegram had been misdelivered, and after knowledge thereof did not take steps to inform the original Chicago bank of the bill of lading requirement, and the money sent was paid without securing the bill of lading, and no goods were ever received by the plaintiff in return for the money, the negligence of the defendant bank was the proximate cause of the loss, and it was liable. Deport Hardware Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 902.

Defendant bank, failing to inform a paying bank of the condition on which the money transmitted was to be paid, could not be relieved from its own negligence by the agreement of another bank as agent of plaintiff to relieve it from any loss in transmitting the money. Id.

Puig v. Rodriguez (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 291.

Prince v. Colvin (Civ. App.) 128 S. W. 637.

Under this article, the remedy of the holder of a promissory note to secure and fix the liability of an indorser by suit against maker is a cumulative remedy, and is not exclusive to fix such liability by protest and notice under the law merchant. McCamant v. McCamant (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 118.

Insolvency or non-residence of maker.—Insolvency of the maker excuses compliance with this article. McCamant v. McCamant (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 118.

Evidence of bankruptcy proceedings against the maker of a note, testimony by the tax assessor and the county clerk that he had no property of record and unsatisfied judgments against him held sufficient to sustain finding that he was insolvent, so that failure to sue him at the first term after the note's maturity did not discharge the indorser. Cochran v. Sellers (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 351.

Bill of exchange.—A check payable at a future date is a "bill of exchange." Schenck v. Foster Building & Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 877.

Where note contained clause that maker, sureties, indorsers, and guarantors severally waived protest and diligence in bringing suit, failure of plaintiff indorsee to protest the note at maturity, or bring suit at first or second term of court after maturity, was no defense to defendant payees, who transferred the note to plaintiff by indorsement, "Protest and diligence waived." Archenhold Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 988.

Art. 582. Assignee may sue in his own name.

5. Right of action by assignee.—Under this article, in an action on an assigned note it was not necessary that the pleader state in detail the circumstances of the transfer of the note, though it was not indorsed. (Per Eoyce, J.) California State Life Ins. Co. v. Kring (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 372.

In an action on a note and lien the fact that plaintiff is not the real owner and holder of the note is not a matter of defense, either in bar or in abatement, and where the note itself shows the rights of plaintiff it's sue as at law, an inquiry as to whether there was an equitable owner aside from and behind the legal ownership is not essential to the right of defendants, unless there is a matter of defense between defendants and equitable owner, and even if it does appear, such defense will not exclude the note and indorsements thereon as evidence. El Paso Townsite Co. v. Watts (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 299.

Id.; and indorsed in another bank, was nonnegotiable and subject to the defense of failure of consideration in the hands of third person to whom the deposit bank transferred it in payment of a draft. Id.

15. — Special provisions.—Notes given as part payment of bonus to railroad and made conditional upon completion of certain grade before certain time were nonnegotiable, and contractors to whom railroad had transferred notes had no greater rights against makers than railroad itself would have enjoyed. Wellington Railroad Committee v. Crawford (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 151.

17. Bona fide purchasers in general.—One who, without knowledge or information of any defense against original holder, purchases note for value before maturity, is protected as an innocent holder. Commercial Guaranty State Bank v. Crews (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 391.

Where a corporation purchased notes from original payee under a contract whereby it only contracted to collect such paper as it could, it was not an innocent purchaser for value before maturity. National Trust & Credit Co. v. Olafson, 498 S. W. 908. If indorsed notes, more than sufficient to pay them, indorsee was under duty to apply funds on obligation created by indorsement of notes, as well as by payee's written guaranty of payment, for which purpose percentage of face value of paper was retained by indorsee, effect of contracts being that payee, indorser, and guarantor agreed that, if makers did not pay on presentment, then it would. Commercial Security Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 728.

Where consideration for notes failed, and indorsee of payee company had notice thereof in possession of funds of payee company reserved to secure notes, it was under duty to satisfy its claim against makers from funds of payee company, and makers are not liable to it. Id.

Where a bank conveyed a large parcel of land for urban property and received vendor's lien notes for the difference, its assets were taken over by a second bank, and thereafter title to part of the land failed, held, that the second bank could not under the agreement, etc., be deemed a bona fide purchaser of the notes, but must be deemed to have held them for the benefit of the creditors, etc., of the first bank. Warren v. Partin-Orendorff Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 586.

Where sight draft was overdue when purchased by plaintiff, it was subject to the defense of fraud which arose from the payee's use of the funds. Where mortgagee's application for loan appointed payee named in mortgage note as her "agents to procure or make a loan for me," third party with notice of such appointments was bound to take notice of the extent of the special authority so granted, and was not warranted in inferring that payee had loaned mortgage the amount represented by the note, and had the right to transfer note as collateral for a loan from third party to payee; the words "procure" and "make" being synonymous. Fidelity Trust Co. v. Fowler (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 923.

Merely because a bank's draft is issued by its president in payment of his Individual debt, the creditor is not as matter of law charged with duty of inquiry as to whether it had been paid for, though the president's power to issue drafts, whether in payment of his own debt or to another, is conditioned on the bank's being paid therefor; the pre-

Lewis v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 855.

Harrison v. First Nat. Bank of Lewisville (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 576.

28. Defenses as against bonâ fide purchaser.—Where innocent purchaser of vendor's lien note was also a purchaser of property at its sale under trust deed, although sale was void because purchaser had notice that prior deeds were intended as mortgages, he could still foreclose lien of his vendor's lien note to enforce payment of note. Moore v. Chamberlain, 109 Tex. 64, 195 S. W. 1135.

A bill of exchange drawn by a married woman is void and unenforceable in the hands of a transferee, whether before or after maturity, irrespective of whether the transferee paid value without notice. Schenck v. Foster Building & Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 577.

30. Want or failure of consideration.—If purchaser, who had knowledge that note had been given for machinery, title to which was to remain in payee, also knew or was charged with notice that machinery had been warranted and might wholly fail to meet warranties, he could not become innocent purchaser. Hart v. Keokuk Sav. Bank (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 419.

That consideration for note was sale of stock in corporation which subsequently became insolvent would not be a defense, especially where the note was in the hands of an innocent purchaser for value. Bresley v. Samuels (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 684.

Foster v. Iowa City State Bank (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 733.

Where a contract, attached to a note as part thereof, provides that the note is not to become a binding obligation until the contract is performed, the detachment of the contract from the note before performance is a material alteration, invalidating the note in hands of an innocent purchaser. Commercial Security Co. v. Hull (Civ. App.) 312 S. W. 986.

Where plaintiff purchased a note before maturity for a valuable consideration, without notice of any defect or alteration therein, he was, under this and following articles, entitled

To hold a note founded upon an illegal consideration unenforceable in the hands of a bona fide holder, there must be a constitutional or statutory provision which expressly or by unavoidable inference declares it or the transaction out of which it is a part to be void. Washu v. Smhey, 109 Tex. 398, 211 S. W. 565, 4 A. L. R. 1320.

Where notes were given a corporation in payment of stock, and the corporation issued the stock, they are void under Const. art. 12, § 6, and are unenforceable even in the hands of an innocent holder. Masterson v. Turnley (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 425.

4. Future earnings or profits — Under contracts.—Assignment of wages to be subsequently earned was void as to any wages thereafter earned by assignor in any other employment than that in which he was engaged at the time the assignment was executed, where subsequent employment by any particular employer was not contemplated by parties in making assignment; such wages having no actual or potential existence at time assignment was entered into. McKneely v. Armstrong, 109 Tex. 365, 210 S. W. 192.

Where wages to be earned by an existing or known and identified employment are assigned, there may be a reasonable expectation by the parties that the wages will be earned and, such possibility or expectancy being coupled with an interest, the thing assigned has a potential existence, and the assignment is valid. McKneely v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 175.

An assignment of "any sum of money due, or which may become due, as salary or wages for any subsequent month, or months, within the period of four years from the date of this instrument, from any person, firm, or corporation whomever for whom I may work," was not valid as to wages earned in an employment other than that in which the servant was when he executed the assignment, and not then anticipated. Id.

11. On contracts.—A broker, even pending a suit to recover commissions, may assign his claim to another, either in whole or in part. Christian v. Dunavent (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 875.

19. Equitable assignments.—An equitable or constructive assignment of a fund does not depend upon any particular form of words, but may be created by any language or act making an appropriation of the fund. C. W. Hahl & Co. v. Hutchenson, Campbell & Hutcherson (Civ. App.) 136 S. W. 282.

The assignment, by client to attorney, of note as collateral for a specified indebtedness, did not constitute an equitable assignment of client's interest in the note to the extent of the client's indebtedness to professional services not included in specified debt, where parties did not agree that pledged note was to cover such debt. Thomson v. Findlater Hardware Co., 109 Tex. 233, 265 S. W. 831, 2 A. L. R. 1486.

An agreement between a bank and its attorney that attorney's fees should be incorporated in for-closure judgment to the extent of 10 per cent. of the principal and interest, held to constitute an equitable assignment to the attorney of so much of the judgment as represented attorney's fees. People's Sav. Bank v. Marra (Civ. App.) 296 S. W. 847.

A transaction by which a bank loaned money to contractors for payment of wages due laborers, which money was so used, held not to constitute an equitable assignment of labor debts, nor subrogate the bank to the laborers' claims against contractor's surety. Hess & Skinner Engineering Co. v. Turney (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 171.

An agreement by which laborers were paid partly in cash and partly in board, but not showing that the laborers agreed that any part of their wages should be paid for groceries, or that they knew such were brought from claimant, does not constitute an equitable assignment of laborers' wages to claimant. Id.

20. — Check or order.—Acts of contractor to build schoolhouse in drawing checks on funds he had in bank held not to constitute equitable assignment of fund in favor of payees. Wise v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 977.

22. — Agreement to appropriate or pay.—An agreement whereby merchants were to furnish to laborers goods for which their employers were to pay from wages due amounted to an equitable assignment of the claims for wages. Hess & Skinner Engineering Co. v. Turney (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 171.

its bond "in consideration of the execution of said bond" held supported by a valuable consideration. Hess & Skinner Engineering Co. v. Turney, 110 Tex. 148, 216 S. W. 621.

27. Existence and validity of assignment.—Father's letter to his attorney showing his knowledge of transfer of note by his son, and directing attorney to procure additional security for benefit of another, sufficiently showed his ratification of son's transfer of note. Slaughter v. Morton (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 897.

28. Right to contest.—If plaintiff, after discovering that the vendor's notes transferred to plaintiff by defendant for plaintiff's property were not good notes and well secured as represented by defendant, tried to sell the notes to third persons, and, as defendant's agent, tried to sell to third persons the land he had conveyed to defendant, he waived the fraud practiced upon him by defendant and ratified the contract. Kleinh v. Willmann (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 15.

29. Priorities between assignments.—Assignment by bridge-building contractor of balance retained by county on his contract, to bank, to secure its advance of a sum which contractor used to pay laborers' wages, was superior in equity to prior assignment of the same fund to contractor's surety to secure it against liability on its bond, which had been previously executed, since surety parted with nothing of value as consideration for the assignment. Hess & Skinner Engineering Co. v. Turney (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 171.

In order that a prior assignment may have precedence over a subsequent assignment, notice of former assignment must have been given to the holder of the fund prior to the subsequent assignment. Id.

Where a construction contract authorized the board of road commissioners to retain 15 per cent. of the monthly estimates, and the surety on the contract was subrogated to and had assigned to it the rights of the board, the contractor's assignment of the remaining 85 per cent. of its assignee's rights to the assignee as the contractor was carrying on the work and not in default. O'Neil Engineering Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 1091, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) First Nat. Bank v. O'Neil Engineering Co., 176 S. W. 74.

Where contract for the construction of a road authorized the board of road commissioners to retain 15 per cent. of the monthly estimates, and provided that the remainder should be paid on or before the fourth Monday of the month following that in which the work was performed and the warrant for the work done on the previous month, although approved on the 4th day of the month, had not been delivered on the 8th day of the month, when the contractor defaulted and a bank which had an assignment of warrants to become due demanded payment, held, that the board was warranted in retaining the amount because of default, so rights of the surety to which had been assigned all sums retained, etc., were superior to those of the bank. Id.

Where equitable assignments are shown to have attached to funds of a contractor in the owner's hands at a time when no notice of lien claimants had been brought home to him, such equitable assignments attach to the funds, and impound them for the benefit of the assignees in the order of the priority of date. Rotsky v. Kelbly Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 558.

Where funds due contractor are equitably assigned, impounding dates from the date of the assignment. Id.

Since a mortgage is only security for a debt and follows it into the hands of any transferee of the note evidencing the debt, a mortgage became valid as soon as notes made payable to maker were indorsed and transferred by him. Howard v. Stahl (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 826.

Where there is an assignment of a particular fund, the assignee takes the title of the assignor to that which is assigned, but he obtains no greater right in or title to the fund than exists in the assignor. O'Neil Engineering Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 1091, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) First Nat. Bank v. O'Neil Engineering Co., 176 S. W. 74.

32. Rights of assignee as against debtor.—Where a litigant assigns to his counsel an interest in a claim or cause of action, each has the right to adjust or compromise his respective interest, and assignor's adjustment or compromise of entire claim or cause of action is not binding on assignee if the party against whom the claim or cause of action exists has actual or constructive notice of the assignment. Irby v. Andrews (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 289.

A live stock commission merchant, after settlement with and payment to a customer for sale on commission, is not liable to pay outstanding drafts drawn against the funds or proceeds arising from the sale in the absence of notice of any outstanding obligation, such as a draft assigning the fund. Schweers-Kern Live Stock Commission Co. v. Kothmann (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 593.

33. Rights of assignee as against assignors or rights of persons.—Where the consideration for assignment of proceeds of insurance policy was then existing indebtedness of assignor to assignee, assignee is not entitled to protection as innocent purchaser of claim evidenced by policy. Walter Connolly & Co. v. Hopkins (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 656.

Where party wall contract bound assignees of parties, benefits, as well as burdens, ran with each lot, and subsequent grantee of one who built it at his own cost was entitled to recover part of cost on its use by grantee of adjoining owner. McCormick v. Stoneheart (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 882.
Art. 583  BILLS, NOTES AND OTHER WRITTEN INSTRUMENTS  [Title 16]

Under party wall agreement, assignee of party whose lot remained vacant, who used wall as benefit of contract, was liable for its cost.  It.

If car of lumber, and the proceeds thereof when it should be sold, were assigned to seller of unmanufactured logs by buyer before it was delivered to company which purchased from buyer, proceeds of car belonged to seller of logs, though buyer owed company which purchased from him amount less than price of car, and fact that lumber was afterwards delivered to company purchasing from buyer, which was notified of assignee, would not authorize court to deduct amount owing company by buyer of unmanufactured logs from proceeds received from sale of car of logs by it. Hickory Jones Co. v. Meffan (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 745.

In view of this article and art. 584, bank having taken valid assignment of cotton receipts issued by public weigher, and having thereby and by agreement with assignor or pledgor of receipts as security acquired title to cotton, under art. 7830, public weigher, on breach of official duty in delivering cotton to assignor or pledgor without requiring surrender of receipts, must respond to bank, in suit in its own name, for its loss. Taliaferro v. Brady Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 174.

Under art. 7825, as amended by Acts 35th Leg. (1918) 4th Called Sess. c. 95, and art. 7839, public weigher, who delivered cotton to owner without taking up cotton tickets, was not liable to bank to which former owner had transferred tickets as collateral without indorsements subsequent to the sale of the cotton, since the tickets, not having been indorsed, were not negotiable instruments in hands of bank under art. 7830, and since the bank as a mere assignee, under arts. 583 and 584, acquired no rights not held by assignor at time of assignment. Carter v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Seymour (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 265.

Art. 584. [309] [267] Assignee of non-negotiable instrument may sue in his own name.

Construction and operation in general.—In view of art. 583, and this article, bank having taken valid assignment of cotton receipts issued by public weigher, and having thereby and by agreement with assignor or pledgor of receipts as security acquired title to cotton, under art. 7830, public weigher, on breach of official duty in delivering cotton to assignor or pledgor without requiring surrender of receipts, must respond to bank, in suit in its own name, for its loss. Taliaferro v. Brady Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 174.

Equities and defenses between original parties.—Where, in a suit by the assignee of an insured policy, the defense is set up that the property covered by the policy has been conveyed subsequent to such assignment to a third party by the assignor and original holder of the policy in violation of the express terms of the policy, this defense is not invalidated by art. 583 and this article. Swenson v. Sun Fire Office, 68 Tex. 461, 6 S. W. 60.

Under art. 582, and this article, a check on one bank payable to drawer, and not to order or bearer, and containing a restrictive indorsement for deposit only, and deposited in another bank, was nonnegotiable and subject to the defense of failure of consideration in the hands of third person to whom the deposit bank transferred it in payment of a draft. Sweetwater Ice & Cold Storage Co. v. Continental State Bank of Sweetwater (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 740.

Action in name of assignor.—A justice of the peace cannot render a judgment binding on the assignees of labor claims sued for in the name of the assignors, unless the assignees are made parties. Pena v. Baker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 426.

Diligence.—In an action by the holders of a non-negotiable bill of exchange indorsed to them for value by defendants, plaintiffs, under this article and art. 585, must show due diligence to collect the same. Kampmann v. Williams, 70 Tex. 588, 8 S. W. 310.

Art. 585. [310] [268] Waiver of diligence is not to be shown by parol.

Parol evidence inadmissible.—In an action by the holders of a nonnegotiable bill of exchange indorsed to them for value by defendants, plaintiffs, under art. 584, and this article, must show due diligence to collect the same; and where no suit had been brought thereon until the third term of court after the cause of action against such indorser had accrued, and no excuse for such delay had been alleged in the original petition, parol testimony is not admissible to prove that defendants released plaintiffs from their obligation to use such diligence. Kampmann v. Williams, 70 Tex. 588, 8 S. W. 310.

Art. 587. [312] [270] Assignor, indorser, etc., may be sued alone when.

Suit against maker and guarantor not separable.—In view of this article, and art. 1842, as to prerequisites of judgment against indorsers, an action by the payee against the maker, and a guarantor by separate instrument, for delinquent interest and attorney's fees, prior to maturity of the note, is not separable so as to entitle nonresident guarantor to removal to the cause. Fairin & Orendorff Implement Co. v. Frey (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 1143.

Art. 588. [313] [271] Assignment, how put in issue.

Application of statute.—In suit against plaintiff's bank to recover money paid on forged indorsement of check drawn by plaintiff, where plaintiff did not file affidavit charging Indorsement was forgery, genuineness of Indorsement was not required to be assumed; this article having no application. Commonwealth Nat. Bank v. Hawes (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 859.

This article, and art. 1906, subd. 9, requiring a denial under oath of genuineness of Indorsement or assignment of note, were not intended to dispense with proof of an administrative authority to sell or assign, as required upon an order of court, so that absence of any verified denial of administrator’s assignment thereof to plaintiff did not dispense with proof of its validity. Webb v. Reynolds (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 914.

Necessity of denial under oath.—Under this article, a sworn pleading is necessary to question the genuineness or sufficiency of an Indorsement on a note as a transfer thereof. Intertype Corporation v. Sentinel Pub. Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 548.

General denial insufficient.—Under this article a general denial only will not authorize evidence attacking the validity of the assignment, and, even if such evidence is admitted the pledge may be disposed of. Grounds v. Sloan, 73 Tex. 661, 11 S. W. 48.

Sufficiency of proof.—Under this article assignment of note by a party company by Indorsement of Secretary to plaintiff was sufficient to show title in plaintiff to note, sued on by him, no verified plea of non est factum being filed by defendant. Dennan v. Kaplan (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 729.

Art. 589. [314] [272] Consideration, failure of, when it constitutes a defense.

2. Necessity of consideration.—Where defendant induced settlement between father and mother, divorce suit pending between them they contesting title of property, whereby father conveyed community land to defendant under parol trust to reconvey, beneficial title to mother, no consideration was necessary to sustain deed from defendant to her. Winfree v. Winfree (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 345.

The breach of the principal’s oral promise without consideration to the broker to complete a contract whereby broker lost commissions from other contracting party did not entitle plaintiff to damages. Hume v. Williams (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 723.

In suit to recover damages for wrongful failure of defendant bank to make timely remittance in payment of premium on life policy, where evidence failed to show that agreement to remit on the day in question was based on a valuable consideration, there could be no recovery based upon contract liability. Washington v. Austin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 332.

When a claim is based upon a liquidated demand, payment and acceptance of less than the entire sum due, in the absence of some new consideration, does not bar recovery of the balance or release in full of the claim due is without consideration. First Texas Prudential Ins. Co. v. Connor (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 417.

A mere promise by a carrier to pay for goods lost, for which it was not liable, not in the nature of a compromise, is not binding upon carrier, because without consideration. Mistrot-Calahan Co. v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 775.

Oil lease held to have conferred upon the lessee, not an estate in land, but only a license or option to enter upon and develop it for oil and other minerals, to support which option a consideration was necessary. Hitzon v. Gilman (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 140.

A deed from parent to child, or from child to parent need not be supported by a valuable consideration. Bishop v. Williams (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 512.

3. Adequacy.—Generally where consideration is sufficient to be denominated valuable, courts are not concerned with relative value of properties exchanged. Griffin v. Bell (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 1034.

Ordinarily, so long as it is something of real value in the eyes of the law, whether or not the consideration is adequate to the promise is immaterial in the absence of fraud, the slightest consideration being sufficient to support the most onerous obligation, since it is competent for the parties to make whatever contract they please in the absence of fraud, deception, or illegality. Hitzon v. Gilman (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 140.

In the absence of fraud or deceit upon the lessors, a recited consideration of one dollar for an oil lease, if actually paid, was sufficient, not only to support the option to develop, but also to support such subsidiary options as the privilege of paying rents instead of drilling, etc. Id.

It is not necessary that the consideration for a contract be adequate in point of actual value, the slightest consideration, in the absence of fraud, being sufficient to make the most important agreement binding. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

Inadequacy of compensation is not alone sufficient to render a contract invalid. Id.

An option given lessee in an oil lease to surrender the lease, after the well has been finished and is producing oil in paying quantities, on the payment of $100 to the lessor, was sufficiently compensated by a consideration, where the lease recited that the sum of $14,35, paid to lessor, was "in full satisfaction of any and every privilege granted." Hunter v. Gulf Production Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 163.

A valuable consideration will support an option to buy or lease oil lands. McKay v. Tally (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 167; Same v. Fulgham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 171.

Parties competent and able to agree, and who have agreed upon $1 as a consideration for an option lease on oil lands, should be held to their agreement, in absence of fraud or some other fact rendering the contract inequitable. Id.

Lessee’s payment to lessor of $1 held a sufficient consideration to support oil lease. McKay v. Lucas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 172.

It cannot be said that $1 was an inadequate consideration for an oil lease, in the ab-
art. 589  Bills, notes and other written instruments (Title 16) sense of a showing as to the value of the lease. McKay v. Kilcrease (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 177.

An oil lease providing that the lessee might prevent forfeiture from year to year by paying to the lessor $13.50 a year "until such well is commenced (which must be under two years from date)," held not invalid as giving the lessee the right to perpetually prevent the appearing out of the main purpose of the lease by the payment of yearly rentals without limitation of time. Id.

A judgment canceling an oil lease for want of consideration cannot be sustained where it was undisputed that the lease was given in lieu of a former lease for which $1 was paid. Johnson v. Skelton (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 352.

An oil and gas lease is not subject to attack as invalid for want of consideration because only $1 was paid at the time it was procured. Lone Star Gas Co. v. McCullough (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1114.

In the absence of undue influence, or fraud inducing execution of oil and gas lease, the cash consideration of $1 will not be treated as a nominal consideration only, but is sufficient to support an option giving the lessee to continue the lease by construction of a well or payment of annual rentals. Leath v. Humble Oil & Refining Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1022.

The fact that a lessee of 160 acres of oil lands did not bind himself to pay rentals or to drill a well did not render lease void, and the cash consideration of $32 paid therefore was a valuable and sufficient consideration to support all the rights conveyed, including the unconditional lease for two years and optional continuance for five years by paying stipulated rentals. Morris v. Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 981.

Lessee's payment of $1,000 to lessor on execution of oil lease held sufficient consideration to vest in him option to either drill or pay lessor $1,000 annually in lieu thereof. Buie v. Porter (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 999.

Where a lessee made no down payment as a consideration for execution of an oil, gas, and sulphur lease, though $300 was the recited down payment, but made the lessor's wife a present of $10 in view of her coming some distance to execute the lease rather than have the lessee go out to her farm, the lease had only a nominal consideration, and should be considered a mere optional right to acquire an interest in the land. Varnes v. Dean (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1017.

A $1 consideration actually paid is sufficient to support an oil lease, particularly where the leased land is in an undeveloped territory, and one of the apparent material inducements to the execution of the lease is that the territory may be developed. Richmond v. Hog Creek Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 565.

4. Written contract importing consideration.—See notes under art. 7093.

Agreement between defendant, father and mother suing for divorce, and other children, resulting in making trust deed whereby legal title to community property was vested in defendant to keep parents out of court or to effect settlement, held sufficient consideration for defendant's subsequent conveyance to his mother. Winfree v. Winfree (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 245.

Submission to physical examination by one who had made "John Doe" application was sufficient consideration to support agreement to issue policy. Capital Life Ins. Co. of Denver, Col., v. Driscoll (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 872.

A written contract guaranteeing payment of overdue note, held void because without consideration, was a fraud on creditors. Bank & Trust Co. v. Conner (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 630.

A sum paid plaintiffs by defendants in advance for option to develop oil lands held not only consideration for privilege extending over first term of six months, but for all rights, conditional and unconditional, conferred, including conditional right to claim extension of option. Mafft v. Bell (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1034.

Where D. accepted, in renewal of J.'s note, note signed by J. and L. as principals, D.'s agreement, with L.'s consent, made at the time of extending the renewal note, that D. would let J. work off the debt on D.'s farm, was without consideration, where it did not appear that any advantage accrued to D. on account of such promise. Lee v. Durham (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1171.

Resumption of marriage relation by wife after separation is not a valid consideration for deed from him to her. Tanton v. Tanton (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 429.

A benefit to the party promising, or some trouble or prejudice to the party to whom the promise is made, is a sufficient consideration. Chandler v. Lilley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

Where owner of oil leases assigns shares of stock and his interest in certain oil leases in consideration of assignee's agreement to drill test well, and purchaser from assignee in interest in the contract assumes obligation of drilling well, but after commencing work refuses to continue, whenupon contract is modified so as to permit owner himself to drill equipment furnished by such purchaser, the preceding contracts and proceedings constitute a sufficient consideration for modified contract. Hinton v. D'Yar-mett (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 518.

The time and money expended by a life insurance agent in establishing agencies, being contemplated by the express terms of the contract, constitutes a sufficient consideration for the agent's option to terminate the employment contract upon 90 days' notice. Merchants' Life Ins. Co. v. Griswold (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 807.

The nominal consideration of "one dollar" is sufficient to sustain an option in a gas lease. Emde v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 572.

A conveyance of land may be supported upon marriage contract by the grantor and defendant, Hanes v. Hanes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 2d. 116.

A loss or detriment to the promisee is a sufficient consideration for a promise. Texas Co. v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 306.

Where a landowner's promise to an oil company to hold open her proposal to lease lands to do so for the date of receipt of the abstract by the company, was not induced by the idea that the company might incur an expense in having her title examined, the $25 paid by the company to its attorney for such services was not valuable consideration supporting owner's option to lease. Id.

Agreement between oil lessors and an oil company, assignee of part of the original lease from the lessee, held merely intended to relieve the oil company from hazard of default in payment of rentals on the part of any sublessee other than the company, and to extend the time within which it would be required to drill a well on its quarter section until a certain date; the advance payment accompanying the agreement not constituting sufficient consideration to the lessors to support the original lease in so far as the interest of the company was concerned. Hitson v. Gilman (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 140.

In the law of contracts, the promisor's motive in making the promise is not a consideration for the promise. Hunter v. Gulf Production Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 163.

Recitation in a contract that $1 was paid as a consideration creates an obligation to pay, if in fact it was not actually paid, and such obligation may be enforced, and will support a contract. McKay v. Tally (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 167; Same v. Fulgham (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 171.

Plaintiff's release of liability for personal injuries, made in a recited consideration of $1 and defendant's promise to employ plaintiff as a trucker for one day at the usual rate of pay, was without consideration where the $1 was not paid, and was properly excluded in plaintiff's action. Fitts v. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 158, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Fitts, 188 S. W. 258.

If land is conveyed to be used for oil purposes, the promise to pay the purchase money, a conveyance of the land by grantee to a third party or a reconveyance to grantor in consideration of cancellation of notes would be valid and binding, and would divest grantee of all title and right to possession; the moral obligation to pay the notes or reconveyance consideration. Hall v. Edwards (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 167, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 674.

Where an oil and gas lease recited that it was given in consideration of $1 and the lessee's agreement to start a well within three-fourths of a mile of the tract, the provision for starting the well, the territory being undeveloped and known as wildcat, is part of the consideration for the lease. Leath v. Humble Oil & Refining Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1022.

A promise to do or not to do something which would be a detriment to the promisor or a benefit to the promisee is a sufficient consideration to support the contract, even though its performance was dependent upon a condition contemplated by the parties which might reasonably occur, though it had not yet occurred. Burt v. Deosam (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 354.

6. Mutual promises.—Seventy dollars cash paid plaintiffs by defendants being adequate consideration for option granted defendants to develop mineral resources of plaintiffs' oil land, contract executed between parties held not subject to cancellation on account of unilateral character: it imposing no obligation on defendants to exercise option. Griffin v. Bell (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1334.

A contract is unilateral, when one party furnishes no consideration to the other and does not obligate himself to do anything which may result in injury to himself or benefit to the other. Smith v. Robert (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 227.

Where there has been partial or full performance of a unilateral contract, such performance operates as a sufficient consideration, and renders the contract binding upon the other party. Id.

Cordoning that contract for purchase of gravel was unilateral and lacking in mutuality when made, where thereafter appellants incurred considerable expense looking to performance, and paid to appellees or their vendors a considerable sum of money, which was received in part performance, the contract was binding upon all parties. Id.

A unilateral contract is not supported by a sufficient consideration, and unless there has been some performance, or other equitable reasons to prevent, either party may declare the contract null and void. Id.

A mutual promise is a sufficient consideration, if concurrent in point of time. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

S. under whom appellees claimed; having accepted from appellants numerous payments of money under the contract, and appellees having incurred at least some expense in pursuance of the contract, the contract is not unilateral in the sense that it is not binding upon appellees. Edwards v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 672.

A contract is not void because it is terminable at the option of one of the parties if there is a valid consideration for such option. Merchants' Life Ins. Co. v. Grieswold (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 807.

A contract which bound an insurance company to employ an agent for five years, and bound the agent to work for that period unless the contract should be sooner terminated in one of the methods stipulated, and providing for compensation by a percentage on new and renewal insurance premiums, held not void for want of mutuality.

A contract between an insurance company and its agent was not rendered unilateral by a stipulation under which the agent could terminate the contract at his option by giving 90 days' notice in writing of his intention to do so, nor was the contract made thereby one at will on the part of the agent. Id.

Where members of a truck growers association entered into a contract for the purchase of orange crates, whereby the first consignment of crates was paid for in cash, additional crates to be paid for at a named figure, the contract, not being separable, and the cash payment being not merely the payment of a pre-existing obligation but a consideration supporting the entire order, was not void for want of consideration and lack of mutuality, regardless of whether it was optional with the truck growers to take additional crates. Mayhew & Isbell Lumber Co. v. Valley Wells Truck Growers' Ass'n (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 225.

A written contract for the construction of a house was not unilateral and unenforceable because signed only by the person for whom the house was to be constructed, where it was accepted by the other party and acted upon by him by building the house. Benson v. Ashford (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 285.

Under contract whereby plaintiff for consideration of one dollar and a certain per cent. of minerals "does hereby grant and convey to said lessee the oil, gas, sulphur and other minerals under said land," lessee to begin and prosecute the work of mining within a given time, held, the obligations were mutual and not unilateral. Price v. Biggs (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 236.

Stipulation in oil lease, giving lessee the option to terminate lease at any time "in consideration of the money paid at the delivery hereof," held not void for lack of mutuality, where $150 was paid lessee at time of execution of lease, and $110 paid as rental thereunder, the payment of such money constituting a valuable consideration for option. Jackson v. Pure Oil Operating Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 959.

An agreement founded on a consideration is not void for want of mutuality because one party has an option and the other none. Foster v. Wright (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1090.

Where defendant, a landowner who had maintained a waterworks system from a well on his property, sold the well and surrounding land to plaintiff, agreeing that plaintiff might use the pipes so long as he would supply defendant with water, etc., held that the fact that the contract was optional with plaintiff, and not with defendant, did not render it void for want of mutuality. Id.

Mineral lease giving lessee option of commencing a well on the land during the year or paying a rental for privilege of deferring commencement of well for another year held not void for want of mutuality, since lessee, upon failure to commence well during the year, paid lessee a cash consideration for extension of lease for another year. Tatsum v. Fulton (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1058.

Mutual promises may constitute a valuable consideration to support a contract, but to have such effect the promises must not only be mutual, but must also be concurrent, certain, not vague and indeterminate, and must impose a legal liability on each promisor. Hitson v. Gilman (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 149.

Where an oil lessee agreed to commence drilling a well within six months, or to pay to the lessors 25 cents per acre per annum as rentals until a well should be commenced, there was no clear promise on the lessee's part either to drill a well or to pay the specified rentals at any time to serve as consideration for the lease on the theory of mutual promises. Id.

An option provision in an oil lease, although unilateral, is binding on the maker, if it is supported by a sufficient consideration paid, and can be enforced to the same extent as any other contract. Hunter v. Gulf Production Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 163.

The agreement by an oil lessee to explore for oil or to pay the agreed rental is sufficient consideration for the lease, so as to render the lease enforceable against the lessee. Friddy v. Green (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 215.

An option contract, based on an independent consideration, is not invalid, as unilateral; hence where an oil and gas lease was supported by an independent consideration, an option of abandonment on payment of $5 is not invalid. Corsicana Petroleum Co. v. Owens, 110 Tex. 588, 222 S. W. 154, reversing judgment Owens v. Corsicana Petroleum Co. (Civ. App.) 169 S. W. 192.

An oil and gas lease, granted for valuable consideration, though the sum was small, whereby the lessee had the right to prospect on the land and to seven-eighths of oil, etc., found, and also in lieu of the lessee's right of good title to the entire oil, held constructible for the lease, would extend time for completion by making quarterly payments of approximately $30, is not invalid, even though the lessee had the option of abandonment on payment of a nominal sum. Id.

Where an oil and gas lease, executed on an independent consideration, gave lessee option of abandoning the same on payment of $5, the lease is not invalid, as inequitable or unilateral, where it was distinctly provided that the surrender should not affect existing rights. Id.

Contract giving defendant the exclusive right to act as plaintiff's salesman in a certain territory held unilateral and unenforceable, in absence of allegation that defendant bound himself to buy any amount of goods from plaintiff, or that contract was for a definite time and could not be abandoned at will by defendant. Ft. Smith Couch & Bedding Co. v. George (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 235.

Lease conveying the mineral in described land, reciting that "this grant is not intended as a mere franchise," executed in consideration of $125 paid at time of execution and $290 subsequently paid, and providing for a forfeiture on lessee's failure to drill within specified period and the prevention of such forfeiture for one year by payment of specified amount, held not void for want of mutuality. Von Hatzfeld v. Haubert (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 220.

Oil and gas lease, even though void in the beginning for want of mutuality, will not be held void for want of mutuality after lessee has executed the contract by entering upon land and exploring for oil and gas and by drilling a productive well at considerable expense. Id.
An agreement whereby lessees delivered oil and gas lease to bank under agreement that lessees have specified time in which to examine the title held not a mere option lacking mutuality, but an escrow agreement with an irrevocable agreement void for lack of consideration; the reciprocal rights and obligations of the parties furnishing a sufficient consideration. Pearson v. Kirkpatrick (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 407.

An agreement whereby lessees delivered oil and gas lease to bank under agreement that lessees have specified time in which to examine the title held not a mere option lacking mutuality. 1d.

Oil and gas lease, requiring lessee to begin drilling within one year and to prosecute work with reasonable diligence, held not void for want of consideration, such promise by lessee being a sufficient consideration for the rights and interest granted by lessors. McCaskey v. Schroek (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 418.

Where an oil and gas lease purported to be an agreement between a mother and all her children as lessors and the lessee on the other part for a total lump consideration, and did not purport to be a divisible contract whereby the lessee would acquire lease on the undivided interest of each lessor that might execute the instrument if the others did not, the lessee could have refused to be bound after lessors other than the mother and one son refused to execute it, the mother and son on their part were not bound. Watson v. Cloud (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 807.

In a contract for the sale and purchase of cotton, the buyer's promise to buy is sufficient consideration for the seller's promise to sell, so that the seller cannot avoid liability on the contract on the ground that the stated consideration of $1 was never paid to him. Harness v. Luttrall (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 810.

Oil and gas lease executed for an independent and valuable consideration of $621.50 for a definite term of five years, held not void because of want of mutuality, whether the right granted the lessee was an option or an interest in land, and regardless of the lessee's right to surrender. Patton v. Texas Pac. Coal & Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 857.

A mineral lease, the consideration of which was recited to be $1 and an obligation on lessee's part to begin and prosecute the work of putting down wells in the same block in which lessor's lands were situated and on lands in the vicinity within a certain time, such stipulations not having been inserted through fraud, accident, or mistake, held supported by a sufficient consideration, regardless of whether the $1 was in fact paid or not; the obligations as to prosecution of work being mutual, and not unilateral. McCaskey v. McCall (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 432.

A mutual promise amounts to a sufficient consideration if concurrent in point of time. Id.

A lease whose sole consideration was the promise of lessee's agent that a well should be sunk on the premises within a year was void, the promise not being binding on lessee, and no well having been sunk. Burt v. Deorsam (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 534.

A provision in a lease that the lessee would drill a well on the premises, if a well was drilled within 200 feet of any boundary thereof which produced a stipulated quantity of oil per day for 30 days, is sufficient consideration to uphold the lease. Id.

A mineral lease, the consideration of which was recited as $1 and an implied agreement by an oil lessee to drill on the premises if oil in paying quantities is struck on adjacent premises, an express promise to drill if a well producing specified quantities of oil was drilled within a certain distance of the premises may require drilling under conditions which would not raise the implied promise to drill, and is therefore sufficient consideration to support the lease. Id.

Where a contract for the sale of a business required that the cash payment be made within 37 days, an agreement extending the time for such payment because the lessor's consent to the assignment of a lease had not been obtained did not require any new consideration. A contract or conveyance of minerals mutual promises express sufficient to support the extension. Lewis Bros. v. Pendleton (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 502.

A party to a contract to engage in the show business was bound thereby after it had been so far performed by both parties that other party had assumed obligations thereunder; the contract was unilateral. Faulkner v. Reed (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 945.

Where the oral consideration of an oil and gas lease is development, and the lease fails to impose on the lessee any obligation to develop, lessee acquired no title, but only a right to develop, which may be revoked any time by lessor prior to entry by lessee, assuming that only a nominal consideration has been given for the lease. Canon v. Scott (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1042.

Contract whereby owner conveyed minerals in consideration for a nominal cash payment and grantee's agreement to pay a royalty as the oil is brought to the surface, and whereby it was provided that a well was to be drilled within 30 days or a payment of $50 a month made at grantee's option, held a unilateral contract, which the grantee might ignore without damages; the grantee had only right in such case being to claim a forfeiture. Marnett Oil & Gas Co. v. Munsey (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 847.

Agreement by grantee to sink a designated number of wells within a stipulated time would have been a sufficient consideration for the conveyance of minerals. Id.

7. Property and rights therein.—A mere belief of a right to land is a sufficient consideration for a deed for a half interest given in settlement of a suit involving title to such land. Davenport v. Shepherd (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 729.

Receipt for property by railroad which "released and relieved" receiver "from all liabilities" was supported by a consideration, and implied a promise to pay liabilities occasioned by negligence of receiver, and could be set on by injured employers. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Webber (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 519.
8. Rights under contracts—Subsidiary provisions.—Where, in a contract supported by a sufficient consideration, an option is given to one of the parties the option is valid and enforceable, though there is no independent or specific consideration therefor. Blaffer & Farish v. Gulf Pipe Line Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 89.

The original consideration for an oil lease will also support an agreement in the lease that the lessee might surrender the lease at any time. McKay v. Kilcrease (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 177.

In a contract for the sale of the fuel oil necessary to operate the buyer's plant during the ensuing year, a provision, stating that in consideration of the purchase of all the oil the seller gave the buyer the option to buy the oil needed during the two succeeding years on the terms therein stated, was a valid option for sufficient consideration. Texarkana Pipe Works v. Caddo Oil & Refining Co. of Louisiana (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 586.

9. Release or abandonment of rights.—Promissory notes executed by defendant to take the place of pre-existing debt due by another to plaintiff are supported by consideration of surrender of the previous note. Van Wermor v. Gallier (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 367.

Where a contract for right to exhibit motion pictures was rescinded by a contract to return films and lobby display, other party to return cow that had been given in part payment for right, the new contract was supported by valid consideration. Nations v. Williams (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 1176.

Where broker without principal's knowledge acted for the other party, her waiver of commission, if the principal would make a certain contract, was no consideration for his promise to make it, since she was not entitled to any commission from the principal. Hum v. Bogle (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 673.

Act of creditor in releasing portion of attorneys' fees stipulated in notes did not constitute consideration for compromise contract to pay attorney an amount agreed to be accepted by him was less than fair compensation for services rendered by attorneys. Sugg v. Smith (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 363.

Extinguishment of an old contract to pay a piano in advertising was a sufficient consideration for a new contract whereby the balance was to be paid in money. De Arcy v. South Texas Music Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 381.

Services of an attorney, grantees in a deed on condition subsequent, in successfully defending a criminal prosecution against grantor's former husband, with assent of present owner, would support grantor's contract to release to attorney her claim to reconveyance of property arising out of happening of condition subsequent. Arnold v. Scharff (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 326.

In action on promissory notes held by innocent purchaser, release of liability on contract, return of earnest money, and loan of money on sale of stock by payee to maker, held ample consideration for note. Braley v. Samuels (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 684.

Where the owner of cattle covered by a chattel mortgage sold part of the cattle, accepting a part payment of $150, and the purchaser before delivery resold them to a third party, and it appeared that neither the original purchaser nor his vendee knew of the existence of the mortgage at the time of the sale but that upon obtaining knowledge thereof they agreed with the mortgagee's agent that the proceeds upon sale in a certain market should be paid to the mortgagee, who was thereupon to release the mortgage, the payment of the $150 constituted a consideration for the agreement to release, since, if the original purchasers had refused to carry out the contract in event that the mortgagee should have insisted on its rights, it could have required the return of the payment, and the agreement to release deprived them of such right, and also because by the agreement the mortgagee, which was the real vendor, relinquished all its rights to such payment. Lee v. Clay, Robinson & Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 219 S. W. 1099.

The settlement of a distinctly recognized controversy of the parties to oil lease as to who was entitled to forfeiture was a sufficient consideration for a new and modified agreement, providing for forfeiture on failure to drill well within specified time. Von Hatsfeld v. Haubert (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 220.

A contract of sale, like other contracts, may be modified by agreement of the parties as to any of its terms or conditions, and generally such a contract may be modified without a new consideration, the consideration of the original contract being deemed sufficient, and a subject consideration may be found in a release or waiver of claims under the old contract, or a disadvantage imposed on one of the parties, or the mutual agreement of the parties. Berkman v. D. M. Oberman Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 883.

10. Pre-existing liability.—Where real estate agents wanted vendor to collect purchaser's first note, and vendor agreed to extension of purchaser's note if purchaser would satisfy brokers, and purchaser satisfied them by giving his note and taking up vendor's note, there was a sufficient consideration for purchaser's note to brokers. Ettor v. Starck & Eichelberger (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 142.

In bank's suit on notes, finding by jury in response to issue that when smaller note was executed defendant was indebted to bank was in effect a finding of consideration for such note. Gregory v. Corpus Christi Bank (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 305.

11. Compromise and settlement.—Where maker of note was solvent, an unperformed promise by a lesser sum as full payment was without consideration. S. A. Pace Grocery Co. v. Guynes (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 794.

While consideration is essential to an accord and satisfaction, slight modification of status of parties is sufficient. Id.

Where solvent maker of note, not having sufficient funds for payment, borrowed the money, the expense being no greater to borrow only part than to borrow all, such expense was not consideration for agreement to accept a part of debt in full payment. Id.
Claim that judgment was based upon false testimony, and that alleged judgment debt was not a valid judgment debt, was not supported by evidence to take the case out of the rule that part payment does not constitute sufficient consideration for promise to release entire claim. Irby v. Andrews (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 290.

Settlement of indebtedness on open account bearing 6 per cent. interest, and execution of notes extending time of payment and providing for 8 per cent. interest, and 10 per cent. increase in the event of collection by an attorney, is supported by a valuable consideration and is binding upon the parties. Southland Life Ins. Co. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 430.

If a lawyer who purchased land at an execution sale believed that he had acquired title under his deed and filed suit against the judgment debtor claiming it as a homestead, there was a valuable consideration for a settlement whereby the land was divided and deeds exchanged. O'Fiel v. James (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 371.

The settlement of a debt for less than its face under a composition of creditors is valid as a complete discharge; and, where the debtor thereafter gave one creditor a note for the amount of the debt, less that paid on settlement, such note was not supported by consideration. Irwin v. State Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 274 S. W. 248.

The settlement of a debt for less than its face under a composition of creditors is valid as a complete discharge; and, where the debtor thereafter gave one creditor a note for the amount of the debt less that paid on settlement, such note was not supported by consideration. Id.

Where a series of notes were given in the settlement of an old obligation for which the makers were liable as sureties, a provision in the last note that in event of payment of the other notes it should be surrendered without payment will be presumed supported by consideration. Cooper Grocery Co. v. H. T. Hamrick & Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 358.

12. Forbearance.—Promise by purchaser at mortgage foreclosure sale to reconvey land to owner upon owner's payment of purchase price, where as a result of such promise owner refrained from having land sold in parcels, by means of which several hundred acres would have been saved from sale, was based upon a good consideration. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

Where insurer under a health policy waived its legal right to cancel the policy, upon the execution by insured of a release covering disability caused by hernia, which release became a part of the insurance contract, such waiver constituted a sufficient consideration for the release. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Florence (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 471.

13. Extension of time of payment.—Extension of time for payment of debt was sufficient consideration for depositing of shares of stock by father to secure notes of his son. Pattillo v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Stamford (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1064.

If there be no outside consideration, a mutual agreement for extension of a note, in order to be valid, must bind both parties, the creditor to forbear the collection of his debt until the stated time, and the debtor to continue to pay interest to such time, and if by the terms of such agreement it should bind only the creditor to forbear, but allow the debtor to discharge the debt at any time and stop running of interest, the agreement is without consideration. Clland v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 690.

14. Forbearance to sue or defend.—Plaintiffs' forbearance to sue corporation on contract to repurchase stock was consideration for note executed by company's president, a large stockholder. Base v. Wallace (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 506.

17. Benefit to third person.—Where defendant signed note as accommodation, it was not necessary that any consideration pass directly; consideration moving and supported by principal being sufficient. Gilbreath v. Cage & Crow (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 972.

18. Performance of legal obligation.—A debtor's payment of a liquidated amount presently due and to which he has no defense that can be urged in good faith or with color of right, is not itself a sufficient consideration to sustain creditor's release of other liquidated claims. Fidelity & Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. Mountcastle (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 862.

Agreement that if attorney liable to his client on notes, would continue to pay interest during client's life, notes would be canceled on client's death, was void, as attorney was already obligated to pay interest. Bright v. Briscoe (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 153.

Where suit which attorneys had agreed to prosecute was abandoned by mutual agreement, attorneys were not required to defend the client in action brought against him by adverse party; and a contract to so do for stipulated fee was based on a good consideration. Laybourn v. Bray & Shifflet (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 630.

A clause reinstating insured, who was in good health, to the effect that insurer would not be liable for more than the reserve of the policy if the insured should commit suicide within a year, was void for want of consideration, where the policy provided that the company would reinstate the policy at any time upon evidence of 'insurability satisfactory to the company and payment of all arrears'; such reinstatement being no more than the performance of insurer's legal obligation. Missouri State Life Ins. Co. v. Hearne (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 789.

A promise to do some act which the promisor is otherwise legally obliged to do is not a sufficient consideration to support a contract. Burt v. Deosam (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 354.

Compounding offenses. — Defendant, who charged plaintiff with stealing, and, under threat of violence and perjury, forced him to assign vendor's lien notes, and secured conveyance from buyer from plaintiff, could not keep fruits of duress as against plaintiff on ground both were in pari delito in contracting to stifle prosecution. Mallard v. Day (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 245.

A conveyance of real property by defendant to plaintiff in consideration of dismissal of criminal proceedings based on the seduction of plaintiff by defendant's son, and of the marriage of defendant's son and plaintiff, is void, and will not form the basis of a suit in trespass to try title. Effect of partial illegality. — Where contract grows out of and is connected with illegal or immoral act, court of equity will not enforce it; and if contract is in part only connected with illegal transaction, and growing immediately out of it, it is equally tainted by it. Dodd v. W. T. Rawleigh Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 131.

If a part of an agreement is to use the subject-matter or a part of it for an unlawful purpose, the contract is void. Bonnie & Co. v. Blankenship (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 934.

Where stock of trust company was sold on credit, buyer giving his note, both for price and for amount borrowed from trust company, purchase of stock and borrowing of money being separable transactions, buyer's promise to repay borrowed money was not vitiated by ultra vires contract for sale of stock. Where land is conveyed upon several considerations one of which is illegal, as requiring dismissal of criminal proceedings against grantor's son, but the grantee is not put in possession, and the contract remains executory, a suit for specific performance will not lie. — Id.

Where a grantor conveyed real property to grantee in consideration of the dismissal of criminal proceedings for seduction of grantee by grantor's son, and of the marriage of the son to grantee, the contract was not divisible, and the conveyance was vitiated by the illegal consideration relative to dismissal of the criminal proceeding. — Id.

While a promise on several considerations, one of which is unlawful is void, where one for a legal and valuable consideration agrees to perform two acts which are severable, one of which is lawful and the other unlawful, the contract may be enforced as to that for which it was lawful to contract and held void as to the other. Wicks v. Connors, 119 Tex. 532, 251 S. W. 938, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 171 S. W. 744.

Senger v. Futch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 681.

When money has been paid on an illegal contract, it can be recovered as long as the contract remains executory. Trammell v. San Antonio Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 736.

Though courts will not assist in enforcing illegal contracts, yet where an illegal contract has been executed in whole or in part by the acts of the parties themselves and suit is not brought for the purpose of enforcing the contract itself, the rights and titles thus acquired will be recognized. Coburn v. Coburn (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 248.

The sale of real estate to plaintiff for plaintiff's use in conducting the business being an illegal transaction, defendant, in plaintiff's suit to recover possession of the piano as having been taken from plaintiff's possession by force, could not set up that the chattel mortgage on the piano, given by plaintiff to secure notes for the purchase price, gave defendant the power, as assignee of the mortgagee, of replevin and sale. — Id.

A realty broker, party to a contract to pool commissions with others void as against public policy, held not precluded from invoking the rule avoiding such contract as against the claims of another broker, who represented the other principal, for his share of the commission. Williams v. Knight Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 755.

The doctrine of "he who comes into equity must come with clean hands" will not be applied to enable a party to an illegal contract to set up his own wrong to avoid his obligations, but in such cases the court will close its doors to both parties. Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Coonrod (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1099.
34. Relief to parties not in pari delicto.—If it is against public policy for an employer to contract to pay a doctor a salary and retain the medical fees allowed by the insurance association under Workmen's Compensation Act, pt. 1, § 7 (Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 5246k), physician entering into such a contract is in pari delicto and cannot sue the employer for such fees, having received and retained his salary, since he cannot affirm in part and repudiate in part. Sherrill v. Union Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 149.

In an action to recover money paid to an insurance company under its agent's agreement to furnish a loan and policy, which contract was not fulfilled by the company on the ground it was illegal and ultra vires, the contract being executory, plaintiff could recover, since the parties are not in pari delicto. Trammell v. San Antonio Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 786.

If the issuance by defendant insurance company of stock for plaintiff's note was a violation of Const. art. 12, § 6, plaintiff is as much a party to violation as defendant, and he cannot recover interest paid on note in view of the maxim that "where both parties are equally in fault the condition of the defendant is preferable." Warner v. Smyer, 190 Tex. 398, 211 S. W. 385, 4 A. L. R. 1320.

A realty company, which acted as mere middleman in bringing together two realty brokers who effected a sale, is entitled to the one-third of the two commissions received by the brokers agreed by them to be paid it for assistance rendered in consummating the sale, though on account of lack of knowledge of their principal, the agreement of the brokers to pool commissions was invalid as against public policy. Williams v. Knight Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 755.

35. Further or subsequent agreement.—Even though an agreement between a mortgagee and another creditor of mortgagor that such creditor should participate with the mortgagee in the property acquired by such foreclosure in mortgagee, the illegality of such agreement was no defense to third parties in their note to such creditor for the full amount of his claim against the mortgagee, which note was given by them as part payment on their purchase from the mortgagor of the property acquired by such foreclosure. Francklow v. Ullmann, Stern & Krause (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 797.

Though an agreement is made by brokers representing two principals to pool or divide commission, and without the knowledge of the principals, yet a broker may enforce collection of the commission on his principal if so is it not necessary for him to plead and prove violation of the rule against secret sharing or pooling of commissions. Williams v. Knight Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 755.

36. Failure of consideration.—Where an injured servant gave a release for his injuries, reciting the consideration of three days' employment, the release was valid and enforceable, although he never presented himself for work, where the employer held himself in readiness to give him employment. Schaff v. Strickland (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 335.

Where defendant, who gave note for automobile represented to be new, discovered that it was old, giving a renewal note and payment of part of the note after discovering the misrepresentation prevented his pleading failure of consideration in an action on the note. Adams v. Overland Automobile Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 267.

Where a corporation for stock in which defendant gave his note sold its entire assets and abandoned business, the note was not collectible since the consideration failed. Sheld v. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 211.

National Trust & Credit Co. v. Oliver (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 608.

Where note was not delivered to defendant until notes given therefor were paid, defendant is in no position to plead failure of consideration because of nondelivery of stock in action by indorsee on note first due; nothing having been paid on any of notes, Zapp v. Spreckels (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 786.

Although plaintiff, who owned land on both sides of stream, had consented for a consideration to defendant's taking water through pipes on plaintiff's land, where consideration had failed, plaintiff would have the right to prevent defendant's use of pipes. King v. Schaff (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1639.

Under an agreement to turn over stock in consideration that the transferee will pay the debts of the transferor, including a note guaranteed by him, upon a failure of delivery of part of the stock the rights of the owner of the note, as beneficiary, are subject to the equities of the original parties. American Loan & Mortgage Co. v. American National Property Houston (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 146.

There is no failure of consideration for note executed by defendant to plaintiff bank for money loaned, with which to buy stock, however valueless the stock, though the money was paid out therefor by plaintiff's cashier; he in such transaction being defendant's accredited agent. Clardy v. American Trust & Savings Bank (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 990.

That consideration for note was sale of stock in corporation which subsequently became insolvent not be a defense. Briley v. Samuels (Civ. App.) 312 S. W. 834.

Where owner's agreement with broker provided that owner's note to broker should be canceled upon purchaser's failure to pay purchase price of notes, and by mutual understanding between owner, broker, and purchaser land trade was canceled and the land reconveyed to the owner, there was no consideration for owner's note to broker; the

Where the Mexican seller of cattle to Americans reduced the price to the buyers solely in consideration of an export duty claimed by them to be levied by the Mexican government, which duty was in fact not levied, the sole consideration for the reduction of price in a subsequent agreement, failed, and the seller cannot recover the amount of the reduction. Barreda v. Craig, Thompson & Jeffries (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 177, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Craig, Thompson & Jeffries v. Barreda, 208 S. W. 868.

Where inducing consideration for oil and gas lease to lessors was the development of the mineral resources of the land in the section where lessors' land is situated and the covenant on the part of lessee to drill well, lessee's failure to pay the $1 named as consideration was immaterial. McCuskey v. Schrock (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 418.

Issuance to plaintiff of stock in corporation formed to take over a mine, which corporation had no money paid in and no assets, the mine never having been transferred to the corporation, held without consideration, and therefore not performance of an agreement to transfer to plaintiff, payee of a note, in payment of balance due on note, an interest in the mine or a certificate of stock, for the amount due on the note, in a corporation to be formed to take over the mine. Wrenther v. Parks (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 513.

Where mortgage company assumed payment of specified obligations in consideration of a transfer and conveyance of bank stock, and a substantial part of the stock was received, the partial failure of consideration did not invalidate the contract, but was a defense pro tanto thereto. American Nat. Bank of Houston v. American Loan & Mortgage Co. (Com. App.) 238 S. W. 165.

Where the buyer within the time provided for in his executory contract, for the purchase of an interest in an oil, gas and mineral lease, approved the title and tendered the balance of the consideration and demanded a deed, but the seller was unable to perform, for the reason that his option contract to purchase from the record owner, which he assigned to the buyer, had expired. The buyer was entitled to recover the amount paid as for failure of consideration. Wilcox v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 1164.

38. Effect of want or failure of consideration.—Plaintiff held unable to ask for cancellation of draft in equity, and to be heard to complain there was failure of consideration in that one of items of account compromised was unfounded, without offering to do what was equitable. Stacy v. Raywood Canal & Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 246 S. W. 588.

That the maker of a note did not read it when he signed it, would not preclude him from showing fraud and failure of consideration between the original parties. Stevens v. Gustine Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1126.

Even if surety company's general agent unequivocally promised to pay commissions to local agents, where company was bound to another, it would not be bound by promise, since it would be without consideration. American Surety Co. v. Sheerin (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1120.

Where owner of land, upon selling it, gave to broker, who had assisted in procuring the purchaser, the owner's note, which was to be surrendered by the broker to the owner if notes representing the first three installments of the purchase price of the land were not paid, and later the land sale was canceled and the land reconveyed to the owner, but the owner's note to the broker was transferred by the latter to an innocent purchaser before maturity, which recovered thereon, the owner was entitled to recover over against the broker. Gillean v. First State Bank of Barry (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 896.

Assuming that $1 received as consideration for an option to lease oil lands was not sufficient consideration, the question of want of consideration was eliminated by the payment of a rental for the extension of the option. McKay v. Tally (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 167; Same v. Fulgham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 171.

Acceptance of rentals provided for in an oil lease on failure of lessee to drill a well constituted a sufficient consideration for the optional privileges granted, and made the contract, which originally had only a nominal consideration of $1, valid. Broyles v. Gilman (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 655.

An agreement, wholly unsupported by consideration, is unenforceable between the parties, being of no higher effect than any other written obligation. Irwin v. State Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 246.

See Hodges v. Roberts, 74 Tex. 517, 12 S. W. 222.

In general.—An indorser's liability is contingent upon presentment of note for payment, and in event of nonpayment, protest, and due notice to indorser. State Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth v. Y. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 841.

Strict compliance with conditions upon which indorser's liability is contingent is essential in order to hold the indorser. Id.

Time for protest.—Under art. 593, and this article, to fix the liability of the indorser of such paper it should be protested on the last day of grace. Carey-Lombard Lumber Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Frisco (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 258.

Waiver of protest.—Failure to present a check for payment is no defense, where presentment was not made because of defendant's own request. Merriman v. Swift & Co. (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 775.

The waiving of presentment for payment, protest, and notice does not increase the original liability of the indorser, but merely renders unnecessary the performance of these acts to fix such liability. State Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth v. Vickery (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 841.

Art. 593. [318] [276] [Superseded.]

See post, art. 6001a[85].

Arts. 5933-5695, as amended in 1913, relating to period of limitations for enforcement of vendor’s lien and for recovery of land by a vendor who has reserved title, did not repeal this article, or affect the applicability of this article to notes secured by deeds of trust and mortgage (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 687.

As respects limitations, vendor’s lien continued, not only to date of maturity specified in note secured thereby, but also during the three-day period of grace provided for by this article. Hoard v. McFarland (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 687.

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

3. Execution and delivery.—A bill of sale is not executed until it has been signed and delivered. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 540.

Intent of the grantors in bill of sale is controlling question in determining whether delivery has been made. Id.

The validity of a contract for the sale of cotton was not affected by the fact that the seller did not obtain a copy thereof, and it was not a condition to the buyer’s recovery, as for seller’s breach, that seller had obtained such copy; the general rule as to delivery of written instruments not requiring that a copy or duplicate of a mutual agreement be delivered to each of the parties to render the agreement effective. Templeman v. Close (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 187.

In action against joint makers of note, in which one of the makers disclaimed having signed note, evidence held to warrant finding that such maker’s signature to note was genuine. Hill v. Liberty State Bank (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 325.

Where a note contained a stipulation that under certain contingencies it should be surrendered to the maker without payment, the payee cannot avoid the provison on the theory that it did not sign the same. Cooper Grocery Co. v. H. T. Hamrick & Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 356.

4. Form of note.—A mere recital in a contract order that the purchase price of the goods might be paid in notes attached thereto did not make the payee’s obligation a condition precedent. McFarland v. Gilles (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 506.

7. Designation of time of payment.—Filing of holder’s petition in suit on series of notes is prima facie evidence of election to treat them all as due according to privilege given in notes. Rowe v. Daugherty (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 240.

Term “day,” as used in enactments or contracts, means 24 hours from midnight to midnight of the same day, except when restricted. Dallas County v. Reynolds (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 702.

A note payable in installments, and providing that on default of any installment the entire debt may be declared due, does not become due by the nonpayment of an installment in the absence of a declaration to that effect by the holder. Drinkard v. Jenkins (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 353.

The only difference between the date of maturity of a paper payable at sight and one payable on demand is that in the former it is a recognized custom to allow three days of grace. San Antonio & Oil Co. v. Gulf Coast Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 190.

Where a note given to purchaser by vendor and another, to guarantee vendor’s completing title, provided for maturity a year from date, and provided that, “if title is cleared on or befor[e] such due date, ‘this note becomes null and void, otherwise it shall remain in full force and effect,’” if such note be deemed a contract of guaranty, it matured at its due date, where title had not then been cleared although there was then pending an action to clear title by the vendor. Stamps v. Platt (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 47.

Where note given to purchaser by vendor and another, to guarantee vendor’s completing title, provided for maturity a year from date, and provided that, “if title is cleared on or before such due date, ‘this note becomes null and void, otherwise it shall remain in full force and effect,’” the fact that there was on such due date a suit pending at vendor’s expense to clear the title did not prevent the note from maturing at such date, for the only way to avoid its payment in money at maturity was for the vendor to clear the title before the note’s due date. Id.

Where neither a note nor the contract pursuant to which it was executed fixed a day of payment, the general rule that a promissory note in which no time is specified for payment is due on demand applied, and suit could be brought thereon after payment demanded and refused. Crenshaw v. Stallings (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 653.

Where a series of notes, secured by vendor’s lien, provided that, on default in payment of the he&rsquo; should declare all due, suit by an administrator, into whose hand the notes came after default in the payment of the first, is sufficient notice of election to declare the whole series due. Duenkel v. Amarillo Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 676.

In compromise of an obligation for which it was liable as surety, defendant executed 124
a series of 19 notes payable monthly, all of which provided that in event of default plaintiff might declare the entire series due and gave plaintiff the same option if defendant went out of business. The last note provided that, should all of the other notes of the series be paid at maturity, it would be surrendered without payment. For considerable time defendant acquiesced in delays in payment of the notes, and on plaintiff making objection to delay in paying of the ninth note defendant paid all of the notes except the last, and sold its business. Held, that, as plaintiff's acquiescence in delay in payment of previous notes was a waiver of its right to declare the entire series due because of delay in payment of the ninth note, and as defendant, instead of again selecting, paid all of the notes, plaintiff could not declare the last note due because defendant sold its business; the purpose of that restriction being merely to secure payment. Cooper Grocery Co. v. H. T. Hamrick & Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 556.

Where payee of a series of notes payable monthly, which provided that the entire series might be declared due in event of delay in payment of one, acquiesced in delay in payment of several notes, it thus waived its right to declare the next note of the series due, but, if the maker, after objection and attempt to declare succeeding notes due, again defaults, the right revives. Id.

Id. to amount to be paid as liquidated damages on maker's breach of contract bore no maturity date did not affect its validity, the date of maturity in such case being the date on which maker repudiated the contract, which date was to be ascertained by the evidence. Nesbitt v. Hudson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 746.

A promise to accept a draft will, under certain conditions, be treated as tantamount to an acceptance. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1149.

An acceptance of a draft may be implied from the drawee's conduct. Farmers' Guaranty State Bank of Jacksonville v. Burrus Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 400.

10. Effect.—Where the drawer of a bill of exchange presents it to his bank which transmits it to defendant bank, which pays it by its cashier's check under an agreement with the drawee, including the remittance in an addressed and stamped envelope, and mails it, such action makes defendant's acceptance a finality, depriving both it and the drawee of the right to withdraw the acceptance given. Farmers' Guaranty State Bank of Jacksonville v. Burrus Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 400.

11. Unaccepted bill or check.—Where the buyer of goods sent his check for an amount which would be adjusted due to the seller by the settlement of one, or the acquiescence in delay without accepting it in full settlement as specified by the buyer, since the buyer is liable for that amount in any event, and his liability for the balance claimed by the seller can be determined in an action to recover the rest of the purchase price. Bershansky v. Empire Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 1845.

12. Validity.—Under Const. art. 12, § 6, prohibiting the issuance of corporate stock except for property actually received, the giving of a note for stock is not a valid payment, but neither the stock issued nor the note given is void. Thompson v. First State Bank of Lubbock, 199 Tex. 432, 211 S. W. 977.

13. Fraud, duress, and mistake.—Transactions in which person financially interested in railroad loaned money on defendant's interstate's note, which money intestate then delivered to railroad as a bonus or donation, held not fraudulent, though railroad then paid plaintiff a debt from the money received. Handley v. Adams (Civ. App.) 135 S. W. 888.

Bad faith held not shown in transaction whereby one financially interested in proposed railroad loaned money on note which borrower thereupon gave to railroad as gruntuity or donation. Id.

A settlement by defendant railroad company with plaintiff for the death of her husband held result of fraud and coercion and amount, being inadequate, could not be sustained. Southern Traction Co. v. Rogan (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1132.

Buyer, who signs sales contract, thinking it provided for payment of freight charges by seller, when it plainly stated freight was to be paid by buyer, cannot avoid contract, where the mistake is not mutual. Detroit Steel Products Co. v. Houston Printing Co. (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 894.

14. Alteration.—Where in the written contract between maker and payee it was agreed that the note might be detached from such contract, such detachment on the perforated lines is not an alteration. Iowa City State Bank v. Milford (Civ. App.) 289 S. W. 881.

Where perfumes were sold, and seller's agent entered on margin of order, "One ask showcase free," such words did not alter written order to which buyer's note was attached. Forest v. City State Bank (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 725.

Where contract for sale of perfume gave seller authority to detach from order note signed by buyer, when seller approved order and shipped goods, buyer was not released from liability on note by seller's so doing. Id.

Any material alteration of an instrument destroys its obligation and renders it unenforceable, and any alteration causing the instrument to speak differently in legal effect from that which it spoke originally is a "material alteration." Commercial Credit Co. v. Gill (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 594.

A contract order for the purchase of goods payable by a series of negotiable notes, providing that the payee might detach the notes from the order, being consistent, contemporaneous agreement, authorized the payee to detach the notes. Id.

The payee's detachment of a series of negotiable notes from a contract order permitting their detachment was not a material alteration rendering the notes void. Id.

Any alteration causing the instrument to speak different in legal effect from that which it spoke originally is a "material alteration." Id.

Right does not pend on signatures to a petition for the organization of county, purpose being to preserve them from obliteration, is not a material alteration. Earnest v. Woodlee (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 962.

Where a contract, attached to a note as part thereof, provides that the note is not to become a binding obligation until the contract is performed, the detachment of the contract from the note before performance is a material alteration. Commercial Security Co. v. Hull (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 986.

A change or alteration of a note by stranger thereto does not change the status of the parties as evidenced by the original instrument, and cannot relieve the matter from his obligation thereunder. Rus v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Sealy (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 955.

152. Reformation.—See notes under art. 3637, rule 28.

16. Indorsement and transfer in general.—Indorsement intended to be partial only, and not as to whole amount of note, is void. Adams v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 578.

One exchanging land for other land and certain mortgage bonds had a right to rely on representations of the other party to the effect that the bonds were secured by a first mortgage, and that there were no other liens against the mortgaged property, and it was not necessary to preserve his cause of action for damages, to make any investigation. Moore v. Beasley (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 957.

19. Liability on indorsement.—It is general rule that where indorsement is for transfer only, indorser is not responsible. Wheelock v. Mayfield (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 473.

Where a note is indorsed by the payee in blank, any holder has prima facie the right to institute a suit and recover in his own name. Howard v. Stahl (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 826.

Though under an indorsement on a draft, "Pay any bank or banker or order," the indorsee may have sufficient title to support an action against the drawer or acceptor, such right does not render indorsee liable on its own subsequent indorsement made in furtherance of collection. Tradesmen's State Bank v. Ft. Worth Elevators Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 666.

Where the comaker of a note secured by chattel mortgage was not discharged as a surety he is, as to the mortgagee who had assigned the mortgage and indorsed the note which it secured, the principal debtor, and the payee and indorser of the note was only secondarily liable. Self Motor Co. v. First State Bank ofCrowell (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 428.

20. Compelling resort to security.—In action on notes by security company to which payee company had indorsed, evidence held sufficient to support jury's finding that plaintiff had on deposit with it sufficient money or funds belonging to payee company to pay notes after they were dishonored. Commercial Security Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 728.

22. Indorsement without recourse.—Where tenant executed to landlord rent note for specified year, and note was indorsed to bank by landlord, and by such bank without recourse to plaintiff, plaintiff was entitled to judgment on note against tenant and landlord. Evans v. First Quarterly State Bank of Southmayd (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1171.

Where vendor's lien notes were indorsed without recourse in part payment of stock which was retained as collateral by corporation, held that indorser was not discharged by failure to make him a party to a suit to foreclose lien, and stock was liable for balance due on notes after foreclosure sale. Cattlemen's Trust Co. v. Cantrell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 354.

Where note was sold and assigned by indorsement on the note "without recourse" and by a further written assignment containing covenant that assignor was owner with the right to sell and assign, "and that there is now owing thereon the principal sum" naming it, with interest, followed by special agreement that no recourse was to be had against assignor as assignor or surety for the payment of the obligation, there was an express, as well as implied, warranty of the debt, which was in no wise impaired by the form of indorsement and assignment. Newton v. Houston Hot Well Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 960.

An indorser "without recourse in any way" is liable to bona fide holder of note executed by husband and wife, and taken on strength of wife's signature, which was a forgery. Miller v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 565.

27. Liability of guarantor.—A contract of guaranty to pay certain notes and overdrafts, it being duty of creditors to turn over same to an attorney to be selected by guarantors for collection by suit, and, if money should not be made by execution, guarantors were to pay same upon transfer of judgment to them, refusal of guarantors to reduce the note and overdrafts to judgment, and a denial of liability thereon, was a breach of such contract which authorized the creditors to treat the contract as at an end, except for the purpose of bringing suit thereon for its breach. Bank of Miami v. Young, (Com. App.) 205 S. W. 656.

Under a contract of guaranty to pay notes, where it was duty of creditors to turn notes over to attorney to be selected by guarantors for collection by suit, and, if money could not be made by execution, guarantors were to pay same upon the due transfer of the judgment to them, upon refusal of the guarantors to reduce notes to judgment and their denial of liability thereon, the measure of damages was prima facie the face value of the notes. Id.

Under a contract of guaranty to pay certain notes and overdrafts, creditors, on failure of debtors to pay, to turn over the same to an attorney to be selected by the guarantors for collection by suit, and, if money could not be made by execution, guarantors to reduce the notes and overdrafts to judgment and their denial of liability thereon, the creditors were not called upon to reduce the notes and overdrafts to judgment, but could recover the face thereof on offering to assign the notes and overdrafts to the guarantors, subject only to any abatement by reason of circumstances of which they could reasonably have availed themselves. Id.

The indorsement on the back of a draft by a bank to which it was forwarded for collection, "Pay any bank or banker, all previous indorsements guaranteed," merely guaranteed the genuineness of the prior indorsements and did not guarantee payment of the draft. Tradesmen's State Bank v. Ft. Worth Elevators Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 656.

Since defendant occupies the position of a guarantor who made a separate contract with plaintiff in which the contractors did not join, the court must look to the language of the contract to determine the extent of liability of the guarantor. Acme Brick Co. v. West (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 476.

The guarantor is entitled to a strict construction of his contract, and can stand upon its own terms. Id.

Under contract whereby defendant guaranteed that contractors "will pay for the brick under and according to the contract above," defendant would not be liable for damages arising from failure of contractors to promptly receive all brick. Id.

See, also, notes under Title 199.

294. Construction in general.—Where tenant gave landlord rent note for specified year, in landlord's hands note was merely evidence of lease contract, and did not sever rents from lease until it passed out of his hands. Evans v. First Guaranty State Bank of Southmayd (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1171.

Contract for sale of cattle located in Mexico to be delivered in United States at expense of buyers held to admit of doubt as to intention of parties as to when title should pass, so that construction placed thereon by parties should control. Craig, Thompson & Jeffries v. Barreda (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 688.

In construing contract for sale of land, court must look to all parts of instrument and surrounding circumstances to ascertain intention of parties in making use of particular words and phrases and in making contract as whole. Bailey v. Burkitt (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 725.

Where the particular words exhaust the class, the general words must be construed as embracing something outside the class, as there is nothing ejusdem generis left. Richardson v. Nesbit (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 899.

The law must be read into every contract. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. Trussed Concrete Steel Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1176.

Two or more writings, executed contemporaneously between the same parties, and in reference to same subject-matter, must be deemed one instrument, and as forming the same contract. Lawton v. Nesbit (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 277.

A proviso or exception incorporated in a written instrument will be construed as a limitation upon the language which precedes it. Frost v. Smith (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 892.

Land contract must be construed as a whole, and cannot be paragraphed and paragraphs construed in severity without reference to each other, where it is apparent that they are correlative and interdependent. Davenport v. Sparkman (Com. App.) 208 S. W. 668.

Negotiable instruments are contracts, and subject to the same rules of construction. Schenck v. Foster Building & Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 577.

Apparently conflicting clauses must be reconciled by a reasonable interpretation, and in case of variance the one which contributes most essentially to the contract is entitled to the most consideration. Price v. Biggs (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 286.

A contract may be construed as a whole, and be given a construction, if it can be reasonably done from the terms used and from the instrument as a whole that will give effect to the manifest intention of the parties. Travellers' Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Scott (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 53.

Stipulation of contract should not be construed so as to be without any effect, if it is possible to harmonize or give effect to the entire instrument. Langenb v. Crespi & Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 144.

In the interpretation of a contract, the instrument should be read and considered as a whole. Hunter v. Gulf Production Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 163.

In construing an instrument, every part thereof must be taken to ascertain the intention of the parties to it, and the form used will not so much control as the relation of the parties and their intentions. Benton v. Jones (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 192.

A contract fairly open to two constructions, one of which will make it legal and one of which will make it illegal, must always be given the construction which makes it legal. Wicks v. Converse, 110 Tex. 532, 221 S. W. 938, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 127 S. W. 774.

The court's only function is to construe the language of the contract in the sense in which such language is ordinarily used, putting itself in the position of a contracting party, with the objects in view the nature of the business and the ends sought, and determine what contract the parties made, consistently, if possible, with their intention, but not what contract they had in mind to make or thought they had made. Western Indemnity Co. v. Southern Surety Co. (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 179, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) Southern Surety Co. v. Western Indemnity Co., 190 S. W. 857.

When a contract is reasonably susceptible of a construction which will make it valid and binding, such construction should be given rather than one rendering it void. Blackwell v. Scott (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 334.

Where two clauses of a contract are inconsistent and conflicting, they must be construed so as to give effect to the intention of the parties as collected from the whole instrument, and apparently conflicting provisions must be reconciled, if possible by any reasonable interpretation; it being necessary for this purpose to consider the entire instrument and the surrounding circumstances. Penn v. Hare (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 527.

Where two clauses in a contract are so repugnant that they cannot stand together, the first will be retained and the second rejected, unless the inconsistency is so great as to avoid the instrument for uncertainty, and this rule is more readily applied where the instrument is apparently carelessly drawn. Id.

The words, "Payable at Marfa, Texas," stamped with a rubber stamp at the head of the written contract at the time of its execution, intended and understood by the parties as meaning a term of the contract, held as against objection that it could not be considered a part thereof because the contract was clearly expressed in the body thereof. Allison v. Harnic (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 482.

The most fundamental rule to be observed in the construction of a written instrument of any kind, as an instrument of conveyance, is to ascertain and give effect to the intention of the parties as shown by the language, and to give effect to every part of the writing, if possible without violence to the manifest intention evidenced by the instrument as a whole. Gray v. Producers' Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 240.

Contracts should be construed most strongly against the maker. Pledger v. Business Men's Accident Ass'n of Texas (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 110.

Intention which is the object sought by construction of a contract, and which, when discovered, governs in determination of rights and obligations of the parties, is not a secret unexpressed intention, but the intention finding expression in the language used. Trinity County Lumber Co. v. Ocean Accident & Guarantee Corporation (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 114.

The intention of the parties is to be ascertained as expressed by the language used, but not the intention which may have existed in the minds of the parties, but not expressed by their language. Slavens v. James (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 317.

To arrive at the very intention of the parties is the object of investigation and interpretation of any contract. Barber v. Herring (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 472.

A contract will not be construed so as to render it invalid if it can be so construed to sustain its validity without violating the accepted canons of construction. Trinity Portland Cement Co. v. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. (Com. App.) 232 S. W. 453.

Where it is clear that a word has been written into an instrument inadvertently, and it is inconsistent and repugnant to the meaning of the parties as shown by the whole instrument, it will be treated as surplusage and rejected altogether. Id.

For a contract to call for construction, it is not necessary that the words to be interpreted shall be themselves ambiguous. Texas Pac. Coal & Oil Co. v. Harris (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 277.

In all rules of construction of contracts, the dominant purpose is to ascertain, if it be possible, what was in the minds of the parties to the contract at the time it was made. Id.

A party will be held to that meaning which he knew the other party to the contract supposed the words to bear. Id.

Where a contract for the shipment of high density cotton was upon a printed form for the shipment of standard cotton, a provision on the back of the form covering the payment of additional freight if the cotton did not conform to the weight stated for standard cotton is applicable to the shipment of high density cotton, except as to the provision stating the weight. Elder, Dempster & Co. v. Weld-Neville Cotton Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 109.

29. Construction as to parties—Joint or several.—Evidence that deeds recited that interest accruing on purchase-money notes was to be guarantors' support while they lived and should be paid until grantors both died, and that notes were unconditional in terms, sustaining that surviving payee was entitled to entire interest. Shropshire v. Alvarado State Bank (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 977.

30. Principles, sureties, or guarantors.—Facts that notes were given as part payment upon a joint contract of sale and lease of a ranch by plaintiff to defendant constitutes an alleged surety on one of notes a principal maker. Boyd v. Urrutia (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 341.

Where one who was not a mere indorser, but a principal maker, places his name upon a note to serve purposes of his own, he is not entitled to the rights of a mere indorser or surety. Id.
Printed notice on paper on which contract was written that defendant was responsible for defect in business not to prevent liability on the contract where no principal was disclosed. Dorman v. Boehringer (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 669.

Where J. gave T., as payment or security for note he owed him, note payable by W. and M. to J. did not become principal obligor on the W. and M. note, by indorsing it, because T. did not thereby get an extension of time, but was only surety thereon. Wilson v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 341.

32. Accommodation parties.—Relation to other makers.—A bank, as an accommodated party, cannot maintain an action against accommodation makers of note. Brady v. Cobbs (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 802.

33. Liability.—That note was given to payees merely for purpose of having it indorsed by them to aid in further negotiation of the note to some other person did not, in absence of agreement that note should be discounted by payees and no other person, release accommodation maker from liability upon theory that it was never delivered to payees, and therefore never became a valid obligation against accommodation maker, where accommodation maker's credit was extended for the purpose of enabling the other makers to procure money. Rabb v. Seidel (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 867.

Where several persons jointly interested in property transferred to a third person, who executed notes, the transaction being for the accommodation of one of the grantors, the grantee, upon the deed of conveyance being declared a mortgage, was entitled to have the entire property applied to payment of the notes before being required to respond personally thereon. Harris v. Hamilton (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 273, reversed (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 999.

34. Collateral agreements.—An agreement that, if plaintiff attorney would continue to attend to business of payee as he had done, notes given by attorney to payee would be canceled at payee's death, held too uncertain to warrant specific performance. Bright v. App. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 358.

An agreement that certain notes were to be paid only from damages recovered by the maker from his vendor of premises, and if the court should hold the maker not entitled to damages the notes should be canceled and surrendered to the maker without payment, held valid. Sides v. Knox (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 35.

Where a payee sued on notes and contract with maker that the notes should be paid only out of a special fund to be recovered by maker as a set-off against his vendor's mortgage, evidence that the claim was disallowed, and that through error the maker did not pay the full amount of the mortgage and costs upon foreclosure, is insufficient to entitle plaintiffs to recover. Dufekel v. Amarillo Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 670.

36. Extension and agreements to extend.—In an action on notes and to foreclose vendor's lien securing the same, evidence held insufficient to establish an agreement that, on payment of a portion of the notes, the remainder should be canceled as a moral lien, etc., there being nothing to show that defendant accepted any proposals as to such arrangement. Duenkel v. Amarillo Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 670.

37. Effect.—Agreement extending time for payment of notes, providing in part that maker shall "pay off and discharge said indebtedness" and notes "sufficient to sustain a finding that there was an agreement to purchase the stock and to discharge the note executed therefor. Reeves v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 745.

40. Effect.—Agreement extending time for payment of notes, providing in part that maker shall "pay off and discharge said indebtedness" and notes "sufficient to sustain a finding that there was an agreement to purchase the stock and to discharge the note executed therefor. Reeves v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 745.

42. Defenses against payee.—In the absence of an agreement to do so, no duty rests upon a creditor to notify his debtor that the debt has not been paid, although past due, so that the fact that the creditor did not notify the debtor that a note had not been paid until after the death of a third party to whom defendant had indorsed it for payment, and who had misappropriated them, did not avail as a defense in an action on the note. First State Bank of Abilene v. Shaw (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 442.

43. Payment, tender or release.—Consideration is necessary in order to bind owners of notes to a verbal release of the maker. Rowe v. Daugherty (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 240.

A notice by consignee subsequent to premium to present the filling of the order does not invalidate or impair a note given prior to shipment for the price thereof. Iowa Citi State Bank v. Milford (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 882.

Defendant, with money received as a gift from his uncle, discharged a note, secured by a mortgage, on certain personal property. To prevent personal property from being foreclosed, defendant placed the note in his uncle's private box at the bank, with which he did business. Instead of the note marked paid, defendant requested the holder to indorse it without recourse. Held that, as it was the intention of defendant to discharge the note, and as the moneys which he used for that purpose were his own, the note was not a valid asset in the hands of the uncle, notwithstanding defendant's purpose to deceive other creditors, and so it did not pass to a legatee under the uncle's will. Oberthier v. Oberthier (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 1165.

Where at maturity of note to bank by husband and wife, wife notified bank of her desire to pay and bank accepted intention not to surrender collateral, her separate property, and pledged to secure such note, unless separate debt of husband to bank were also paid, formal tender by wife of amount due on her note was not necessary. Texas Bank & Trust Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 357.

An error in payment protested or transferred one note to plaintiff, and give credit on another held by defendant on which he was surety held compromise and settlement of suit, although defendant failed to enter credit on latter note; the allowance of credit being effective by mere agreement, without entry thereof on the note. Bost v. Barringer (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 751.

Where the descriptive words of a compromise agreement pleaded by defendants in suit upon a note exhausted claims arising upon a contract, the rule of ejusdem generis did not apply to the release of all claims or demands of every kind and character against the estate of the deceased maker of note. Richardson v. Nesbit (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 689.

A tender by the maker to the payee of a note does not constitute a tender as to the holder of the note, where the maker knows that the payee no longer has any authority in the matter. Thomas v. Derrick (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 390.

A contract of release of liabilities entered into between a group held to include a release of individual personal notes from one to another, and not to imply only the release of such claims as were held by the signers collectively or as a group. Nesbit v. Richardson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 555.

The payment of a note or other obligation is complete when money intended for its payment or charge has reached the hands of an agent authorized to receive it. Shaw v. First State Bank of Abilene (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 325.

44. Application of payments.—Where a company solicited its controlling stockholders to execute a demand note to be discounted for its benefit with a national bank, agreed to by them to be applied solely to meet the note, to which the bank agreed, and subsequently sufficient deposits were made to pay off the note, though the bank wrongfully applied them to another debt, the bank cannot recover against the accommodation makers on the note, which, in legal contemplation, has been paid. Gaskins v. Union Nat. Bank of Dallas (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 499.

45. Recovery of payments made.—Buyer's failure to make complaint in writing 10 days after he had begun operating engine, as required by contract, held not to defeat his right to show failure of consideration, and to have cancellation and recovery of amount paid. Southern Engine & Pump Co. v. Teneha Light & Power Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 969.

46. Agreement to pay note and novation.—"Novation" is execution of a new obligation for an existing one either between same or different parties, the consideration being discharge of old contract. Guaranty State Bank of Timpson v. Wm. D. Cleveland & Sons (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 929.

Purchase-money notes, purchased by defendant pursuant to agreement with vendee to carry debt, held not novated, merged, and extinguished by subsequent transactions between parties interested, evidenced by judgment, deeds and notes canceled by later decree, so as to deprive defendant of right to recover on them. Nobles v. Long (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 752.

Where holders of notes against newspaper publishers made contract whereby one of the holders was to sell advertising space, collect proceeds, and divide proceeds among holders to apply on notes, the contract merely provided method of payment of notes and was not a novation. Pyle v. Park (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 652.

Contract whereby first party agreed to make collections and make monthly payments of a portion of amount collected to second party, to apply toward payment on notes held by latter against third party, did not create trust relation between second party requiring first party to apply collections to payment of second party's notes to bank with which he had deposited third party's notes as collateral. Id.

Be purchaser of land, who had assumed, as part of the consideration, a deed of trust thereon can be proceed against personally on the secured notes, the land which is the primary fund for payment thereof must be exhausted by sale under the deed of trust. Farmers & Merchants' State Bank of Ballinger v. Cameron (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 723.

47. Evidence.—In suit for specific performance of oral contract to cancel notes given by plaintiff, an attorney, to his client, since deceased, evidence must show affirmatively that plaintiff comes with clean hands, that contract was beneficial to deceased, and that plaintiff has performed fully and fairly. Bright v. Ericson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 183.

Evidence held to sustain judgment for cancellation of deed of trust on ground that note secured was paid either to bank which owned it or to its authorized agent. Turner v. Gregory (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 615.

The presumption that a note which has long been past due has been paid is not a conclusive presumption, and the fact that the vendor holding such note conveyed the land on which he retained a lien to another is sufficient to authorize a finding that the note had not been paid. Rooney v. Porch (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 245.

In an action for note, evidence held to sustain finding that plaintiff did not agree to take an interest in a mine, nor accept certificate of shares in a corporation formed to take over the mine, in payment of balance due on note. Wrenther v. Parks (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 513.

50. Attorney's fees—Right in general.—If notes given as part of purchase price of land provide for payment of attorney's fee, if suit is brought, it is not error to award at-

In a suit on a promissory note, attorney's fees may be allowed, notwithstanding the absence of proof as to amount agreed upon for collection. Van Worn A. Gallier (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 207.

A mortgage contract for payment of money provides for reasonable attorney's fees, "when incurred," such fees are incurred when it becomes necessary to place claim in hands of attorneys for collection. Schutze v. Tabeau (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 342.

In action on notes, held that, on the pleadings, judgment for attorney's fees was not erroneous, and no showing when there was no provision in the hands of attorneys, and no proof that plaintiff had promised to pay the attorneys, or that the attorney's fees were reasonable. Duenkel v. Amarillo Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 670.

In a suit on a note brought by trustee to whom it had been indorsed, where judgment went for plaintiff, it was proper to enter judgment for attorney's fees, despite defendant's contention that there was no evidence, either that the note had been placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, or that the amount allowed was reasonable. Gray v. Stolley (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 856.

Where a purchaser of an oil lease executed notes for a portion of the purchase price which was stipulated for an attorney's fee, the vendor is entitled to an action against him for the amount, in which the purchaser did not recognize the obligation of the notes to claim the attorney's fee provided for by the notes, though the purchaser recovers damages for deceit, which are to be offset against his liability for the balance of the purchase money. Pickrell v. Imperial Petroleum Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 412.

51. — Nature of claim.—Obligations to pay attorney's fees, stipulated in notes, are contracts for indemnity only, and obligee is entitled to collect only a fair amount as fees, the less that has been stipulated. Sing. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 58 S. W. 553.

52. — Against whom recoverable.—Where a chattel mortgage indorsed and transferred the notes secured by the mortgage, it was obligated as indorser, to pay the face value thereof and no more, and, in a suit against it by the transferee, was not liable for attorney's fees provided for only in the mortgage. Fulwiler Electric Co. v. Finance Corporation of Illinois (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 267.

53. — Placing with attorney for collection.—If mortgage notes are delivered to trustee under trust deed to institute foreclosure proceedings as such trustee and not as assignee, holders of notes are not entitled to attorney's fees stipulated for in notes. Oak Cliff State Bank & Trust Co. v. Comroy (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 659.

An attorney having a paper for collection is not precluded from acting as trustee in the instrument creating the lien on the security, and the fact that he acted as such trustee would prevent him from collecting the attorney's fees provided for on the face of the note. Gunter v. Merchant (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 691.

54. — Bringing suit.—In a suit on a promissory note, attorney's fees may be allowed as provided for in the note, without allegations and proof that it was necessary to place the same in the hands of attorneys for collection. Van Worn A. Gallier (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 207.

55. — Tender to avoid.—Plaintiff in an action on notes providing for attorney's fees is not entitled thereto; the action being prematurely brought, and defendant having made tender when notes were due. Brooks v. Long (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 510.

Where notes given for purchase price of land contained only the usual stipulations regarding payment of attorney's fees, refusal of vendor and payee to accept payment of the first note when it became due, at which time the maker of the notes and his vendee were ready and able to pay, estopped the payee from claiming attorney's fees. Eason v. Fowler (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 375.

56. — Amount.—Under sale contract providing that if claim arising from buyer's failure to accept goods should be placed with attorneys for collection the buyer should pay 10 per cent, on contract price of goods as attorney's fees, held, that such fees should be computed on the actual amount sought for the breach. Early-Foster Co. v. M. M. Graves Co., Inc. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 214.

Where a note bearing 10 per cent, interest, provided for the costs of collection, including attorney's fees, and there was evidence that plaintiff had agreed to pay his attorney the usual fee of 10 per cent., which was a reasonable sum, it was not error to allow an attorney's fee of 10 per cent., instead of 6 per cent. Stanton v. Security Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 854.

58. — Reasonableness.—Though a provision in a note for the payment of 10 per cent, as attorney's fees in case the note is placed in the hands of an attorney, or suit is brought, is in the nature of a contract for indemnity rather than liquidated damages, the amount so fixed may be recovered, in the absence of pleading and proof that it is unreasonable or unconscionable. Marti v. Wooten (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 417.

59. — Right of action on note.—A creditor of sellers by reducing debt to judgment, after creation of a trust in note, held not to have elected to pursue a different remedy than that which he had by virtue of agreement between sellers and buyers, whereby trust was created in favor of sellers' creditors in note given as part consideration for the goods. Warren v. Parlin-Orendorff Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 586.

Where plaintiff failed to schedule note to bankrupt proceeding and interpellatory papers, when plaintiff, instead of a saloon business to defendants and had the note for the price 131.
made payable to a liquor company to which he expected to sell it, there was no election of remedies, preventing suit on the note, by first suing the liquor company for the price of the business sold, but merely a mistake of remedy. Wahl v. Ramsey (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 559.

Where plaintiff sold a saloon business to defendants and had the note for the price made payable to a liquor company, to which he expected to sell the note, he was the equitable owner, and could sue on the note in his own name. Id.

Holder of legal title to note in trust for another could sue thereon in his own name, or the suit could be brought in the name of the beneficial owner. Rabb v. Seidel (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 607.

64. Conversion of note.—Where notes were delivered to a contractor, who agreed to build a house, pay the owner a certain sum, and buy the material of a lumberman who signed the contractor's bond, in absence of allegation that the lumberman did not intend to perform, plaintiff could not recover from the lumberman as for conversion of the notes. Wilkison v. Bradford (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1094.

The measure of damages for the conversion of a negotiable note is the amount prima facie due on the face of the note. Farmers' State Guaranty Bank v. Ferson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 424.

If one converts a note to his own use, the measure of damages is prima facie the face value of the note, and it devolves upon the defendant to show that it was of less value. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 368.

Wrongful discharge.—When employer assigns grounds for discharge of employé, he cannot afterwards justify it on other grounds which were not at the time made basis of termination of contract. Levy v. Jarrett (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 333.

CHAPTER ONE

GENERAL PROVISIONS AND REGULATIONS AS TO THE ISSUE OF BONDS

Art. 606. Election on bonds required.
Art. 610. Proposition submitted, how.
Art. 616. Courthouse, jail, bridge, and road bonds, authorized.

Article 605. Election on bonds required.

In general.—The powers of commissioners' courts in relation to the building of county roads, except as to the limits of taxation therefor, are governed wholly by general laws, following the command of Const. art. 11, § 2, particularly this article and arts. 606, 610, 2241, and art. 2242, which follows the amendment of Const. art. 8, § 5, limiting the amount of levy. Lasater v. Lopez, 110 Tex. 179, 217 S. W. 372.

Submission to taxpayers.—This article and arts. 786, 787, 2912, as respects time during which polls shall be open and when they shall close, are directory. Kempen v. Bruns (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 643.

In view of this article and art. 2912, held, that bond election is not invalidated by holding polls open until 7 p. m., in spite of arts. 786, 787, as to election of mayor and aldermen. Id.

Under the referendum provisions of the Ft. Worth charter, only qualified electors paying property taxes may vote at an election to issue bonds, and the bond issue cannot be attacked on the ground that the electors were restricted to such persons. City of Ft. Worth v. Cureton, 110 Tex. 590, 222 S. W. 531.

Result of election submitting to qualified voters of city the selection of a park site to be purchased with the proceeds of bonds authorized held merely advisory; the city council not being bound by its result, but entitled to disregard the same and make such purchase of lands for parks as appealed to its judgment. City of Beaumont v. Matthew Cartwright Land & Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 589.

Where the commissioners' court a few days before an election on the proposition to issue road bonds entered an order specifying that certain roads should be constructed, but such order was not included in the official notices, the fact that voters relied on the order and were thus induced to vote for issuance of the bonds does not deprive the commissioners' court of authority to repeal the order and dispose of the proceeds of the bonds in improving other roads. Strength v. Black (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 758.

Where prior to an election on the proposition to issue road bonds the commissioners' court made an order reciting that if the issue should carry particular roads should be improved, the order was provisional, and may be altered, repealed, or amended by the court, and under this article and art. 619, bonds can issue only after an election authorizing them, and hence, until executed, the commissioners' court had power to alter or repeal such order. Id.

Warrants.—Instruments reciting that they are warrants issued to contractor for labor and material, and constituting orders upon the county treasurer to pay such contractor, and intended to be warrants, are simply warrants and not "bonds" within statutes regulating issuance of bonds. Lasater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1030.

The commissioners' court of a county can, under art. 2241, subd. 8, issue interest-bearing warrants maturing annually in future years, limited only by Const. art. 11, § 7, in spite of this article and art. 610, relating to bonds. Id.

Art. 2241 empowers the commissioners' court of county which has not adopted art. 6966 to build a road and create an indebtedness to be paid by interest-bearing warrants in future years, although a bond issue under this article and art. 610, for such purpose, has been voted down in an election. Id.

Evidence of indebtedness of a county to a contractor in form of negotiable bonds, with interest coupons attached, for construction of courthouse, but designated "county courthouse warrants," in view of minutes of commissioners' court disclosing its intention, were warrants, and not bonds. Headlee v. Fryer (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 213.

Counties cannot borrow money to erect a courthouse by issuing warrants and selling them in advance of contracting legal indebtedness for the courthouse, but can borrow...
Art. 606  BONDS—COUNTY, MUNICIPAL, ETC.  (Title 18)

the money only by issuing bonds with the approval of the taxpayers. Ashby v. James (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 752.

Art. 606. Proposition submitted, how.—The proposition to be submitted for the issuance of bonds shall distinctly specify the purpose for which the bonds are to be issued, the amount thereof and the rate of interest, and shall further state the maturity of the bonds to be issued, or that the bonds may be issued to mature serially within any given number of years, not to exceed forty years, within the discretion of the governing body issuing the same. All elections heretofore held wherein the proposition or propositions submitted provide that the bonds should be issued to mature serially within any given number of years within the discretion of such governing body, or to mature in a certain number of years, are hereby validated, and such bonds may be issued to mature serially, the maturity thereof not to extend beyond the time stated in the proposition submitted and to otherwise conform to the proposition voted on at such election. Provided that this Act shall not apply to any city where the authority to issue its bonds under Chapter 9 Acts Thirty-seventh Legislature is at this time in litigation. [Acts 1899, p. 258, § 2; Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 23, § 1, amending art. 606, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 2 of the act repeals all laws in conflict. Took effect Aug. 21, 1921. Ch. 9, Acts 37th Leg., referred to, is set forth, post, as arts. 51, 52, 52a, 925, 925a.

Form of submission.—Under this article the commissioners' court in submitting proposition for issuance of bridge bonds must state the purpose in the order for election and in the notice of election. Moore v. Coffman, 169 Tex. 32, 200 S. W. 874.

Where commissioners' court in submitting question of bond issues stated purpose to build bridges, and furthermore stated specific locations, statement of location could not be disregarded as surplusage, but was essential part of purpose of bonds. 10.

Under this article and arts. 627-633, the purpose of an election for issuance of county bonds for roads can be determined only from order of commissioners' court for election and from the notices therefor, and commissioners' campaign statements cannot be considered.

If a bond election vote is cost on notice of one kind of bonds, bonds with different terms are not authorized. City of Amarillo v. W. L. Slayton & Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 967.

Under this article and art. 629, requiring that the proposition submitted to the electors of a county for the issuance of bonds for road construction, as authorized by art. 637a, subd. 3, 4, as amended by Acts 57th Leg. (1919) c. 38, shall distinctly specify the purpose for which the bonds are to be issued, and that notice of such election shall be given, it is necessary that the purposes of the election should appear in the official notice, so where the purpose stated was to determine whether bonds should be issued to the amount of $1,750,000 to purchase improved roads, etc., and construct others, an order of the commissioners' court, made a few days before election, specifying that if the bond issue should carry, certain roads should be improved, which was not incorporated in the election notice, will not control disposition of the funds derived from the bond issue.

Where plaintiff had agreed to dispose of a city's bonds upon their approval by plaintiff's attorneys and the proposition submitted to the voters stated that the issue was "not to exceed $75,000," plaintiff's attorneys were justified in refusing to approve of the bonds because of a Court of Civil Appals case deciding that such a submission did not comply with the statute where the Supreme Court on appeal held the decision of such proposition unnecessary, but did not disaffirm the opinion thereon. Grant v. City of Mineral Wells (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 504.

Art. 610. [877] Courthouse, jail, bridge, and road bonds, authorized.—The County Commissioners' Court of any county in this State is hereby authorized and empowered to issue the bonds of said county for the following purposes:

1. For the erection of the county court house and jail, or either, for the purchase of suitable sites within the county and the construction of buildings thereon, as schools or homes for dependent and delinquent boys and girls, or for either one or both of said sexes, as said Commissioners' Court may determine.

2. For the purchasing or constructing bridges for public purposes, within the county or across a stream that constitutes a boundary line of the county, or for the purpose of improving and maintaining the public roads in the county; provided, that this article shall not be construed as authorizing the Commissioners Court to issue bonds for any of said purposes without submitting the same to a vote of the people of said county as provided in the preceding articles of this chapter; provided, further, that when the commissioners' court deem it advisable to issue bonds for both the purchase or construction of bridges, and the improvement and maintenance of the public roads, both questions may be submitted and voted on as one proposition. [Acts 1911, p. 204, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 47, § 1, amending art. 610, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Explanation. — Sec. 2 of the act repeals all laws in conflict. The act took effect March 21, 1921.

Powers of commissioners. — Under this article, a county has no authority to issue bonds for the erection of a jail and courthouse combined, which is to be permanently used as a jail only, and to be used as a courthouse only until a separate courthouse shall be built. Nolan County v. State, 82 Tex. 182, 17 S. W. 523.

Issuance of warrants. — Art. 2241 empowers the commissioners' court of county which has not adopted art. 6066 to build a road and create an indebtedness to be paid by interest-bearing warrants in future years, although a bond issue under this article and art. 635 for such purpose has been voted down in an election. Lasater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1928.

The commissioners' court of a county can under art. 2241, subd. §, issue interest-bearing warrants maturing annually in future years, limited only by Const. art. 11, § 7, in spite of this article and art. 606, relating to bonds. Id.

This article, authorizing commissioners' courts to issue negotiable county bonds for public road purposes, did not amount to an annulment of the court's authority to issue nonnegotiable county warrants for the same purpose. Lasater v. Lopez, 110 Tex. 179, 217 S. W. 373.

This article authorizing commissioners' courts to issue negotiable bonds for constructing county roads, and previous statutes, permitting them to issue nonnegotiable interest-bearing county warrants, relate to using the county's credit in distinctly different ways and evidencing its debt by instruments of a clearly different nature, both as to legal import and effect, and hence are not so antagonistic as to warrant the construction that the later act repeals the former acts. Id.

Art. 613. [880] Bonds to be based on and limited by taxable values. — The issue of bonds under this chapter shall be based upon the taxable values of the county according to the last approved assessment, and shall be limited as follows: courthouse and jail bonds shall be limited to an amount not exceeding two per cent. of said taxable values; bridge bonds shall be limited to an amount not exceeding one and one-half per cent. of said taxable values. In determining the amount of the bonds of the respective kinds to be issued, previous indebtedness for said several purposes shall be considered. The total indebtedness of any county shall not be increased by any issue of bonds to a sum exceeding five per cent. of its said taxable values. [Acts 1893, p. 112; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 54, § 1, amending art. 613, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment.

Art. 619. [918d] Conditions precedent, etc.

Examination by Attorney General. — Suit, to restrain issuing of bonds for improvement of a public highway, was properly dismissed, where at time petition was filed bonds were in the hands of the Attorney General for examination under art. 632, it being the duty of the Attorney General, under this article, to pass upon questions raised by petition. Smith v. Reeves (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 816.

Where plaintiff sued to recover a good faith deposit made on a contract to dispose of a city's bonds after refusing the bonds because of his attorney's adverse opinion, the contract providing for acceptance upon his attorney's approval only, where the grounds of objection were entertained seriously by the Attorney General; the matter being a debatable question upon which attorneys might differ as to the bond issue's legality, the opinion cannot be condemned as unfounded or wanting in good faith. Grant v. City of Mineral Wells (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 844.

Art. 625. [918f] Certificate of Attorney General, etc.

Effect of certificate. — County bonds, authorized under this article, which makes a certificate of approval of the Attorney General and their due registration prima facie evi-

Bona fide purchasers.—Where bona fide purchasers held municipal bonds reciting their issuance under specified city ordinance recorded in certain book, etc., the city is estopped from claiming that bonds were issued under a subsequent ordinance. A mayor authorized to issue municipal bonds held authorized to insert a recital that their issuance was pursuant to a specified ordinance. Id.

CHAPTER TWO

PARTICULAR PROVISIONS AND REGULATIONS AS TO THE ISSUE OF BONDS

1. FOR PUBLIC ROADS—CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE OF

Art. 627. Power to issue road, etc., bonds and levy tax for interest and sinking fund.

627c. Denominations of bonds; interest rate; maturity; sale.

627d. Political subdivision not be created out of territory of district having outstanding road bonds.

627g. Issue of bonds where district bonds have been issued, etc.

627h. Cancellation or revocation of bonds issued.

627hh. Previous bond elections not invalidated.

638. Road district not liable for torts.

639. County commissioner to be ex officio superintendent; powers.

640. Bids to be taken on contract work; contract to be let to lowest and best bidder; right to reject.

641. County operating under special road tax law, may take advantage of provisions.

2. FOR CAUSEWAYS, VIADUCTS, BRIDGES, ETC., CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE AND USE OF

655. May condemn land of railway, etc.

1. PUBLIC ROADS—CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE OF

Article 627. Power to issue road, etc., bonds and levy tax for interest and sinking fund.

Purpose of issue.—Under art. 626 and this and following articles, the purpose of an election for issuance of county bonds for roads can be determined only from order of commissioners' court for election and from the notices therefor, and commissioners' campaign statements cannot be considered. Grayson County v. Harrell (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 160.

Disposition of proceeds.—In view of this chapter, relating to the creation of road districts, and arts. 637, 638, relating to suits by and against them, and article 639, relating to their power to contract, a road district fund, derived from the sale of bonds legally issued for maintaining roads, is subject to payment of damages for breach of contract made by the proper officers to carry out the authorized purposes for which the bonds were voted. Horn v. Matagorda County (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 934.

Contractors having contracts with road districts or other public corporations have the same ordinary remedies as are open to parties to private contracts.—Id.

That a road district fund derived from the sale of bonds may become subject to recoveries for breach of contract, and so be dissipated without accomplishing the purposes for which raised, is no defense to an action against the district by a contractor for breach of contract, the taxpayers having their remedy against the officers acting for the district. Id.

Districts which may issue bonds.—Under Const. art. 3, § 52, as amended in 1904, providing that any county, any political subdivision of a county, any number of adjoining counties, or any political subdivision of the state or any defined district, may upon vote of two-thirds of the taxpayers issue road bonds, the term defined “district” means a defined area in a county, and less than a county, etc., although under the section a county, as well as a defined district, may issue road bonds, construction of roads being a county purpose: the limitations as to amount of taxes which could be levied being removed, not only from road district, but from counties. Bell County v. Hines (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 556.

Art. 628. Election for; propositions, restrictions and requirements; provision as to interest.

See Bell County v. Hines (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 556; Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1010.

Powers of commissioners.—Where, after district road bonds had been issued, under this article and arts. 631, 632, the commissioners' court, on voter's petition, made order determining that the bonds could not be sold at par, repeating the order authorizing their issuance and canceling the bonds, mandamus would not lie, nearly five years thereafter, to compel reissuance of the bonds. Jackson v. McAllister (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 671.

Where district roads bonds are issued under this article and arts. 631, 632, the commissioners' court, as incidental to the express power over roads given by art. 2241, and the "control" and "custody" of the bonds given by art. 632, has power to determine the manner and methods to be adopted in order to effect a sale, and when it is not reasonably possible to sell them at par. Id.

Art. 629. Notice of election.

See 1918 Supp., arts. 60161/4-60161/4c, as to newspaper publication instead of posting. Frizzell v. State, 30 Tex. App. 42, 16 S. W. 751; Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1010.

Purpose of notice.—Under art. 606 and this article, requiring that the proposition submitted to the electorate of a county for the issuance of bonds for road construction, as authorized by art. 637a, subds. 3, 4, as amended by Acts 58th Leg. (1919) c. 35, shall distinctly specify the purpose for which the bonds are to be issued, and that notice of such election shall be given, it is necessary that the purposes of the election should appear in the official notice, so where the purpose stated was to determine whether bonds should be issued to the amount of $1,750,000 to purchase improved roads, etc., and construct others, an order of the commissioners' court, made a few days before election, specifying that if the bond issue should carry, certain roads should be improved, which was not incorporated in the election notice, will not control disposition of the funds derived from the bond issue. Strength v. Black (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 758.

Art. 630. Time, place and manner of holding election.

See Frizzell v. State, 30 Tex. App. 42, 16 S. W. 751; Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1010.

Art. 631. If election carried by two-thirds vote, bonds to be issued.

See Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1010.

Powers of commissioners.—Where district roads bonds are issued under this article and arts. 628, 631, the commissioners' court, as incidental to the express power over roads given by art. 2241, and the "control" and "custody" of the bonds given by art. 632, has power to determine the manner and methods to be adopted in order to effect a sale, and when it is not reasonably possible to sell them at par. Jackson v. McAllister (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 671.

Two-thirds vote.—In suit to contest election on issuance of bonds by road district, held, that court properly decreed attempted creation of district was null and void, thus declaring true result of election, at which more than one-third of voters voted against proposition. Baskin v. Walschak (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 747.

In suit contesting election as to whether road district should issue bonds, evidence held to support findings that 28 voters, returned as voting for issuance of bonds and levy of tax, in fact voted against issuance and levy. Id.

Art. 632. Bonds, term, interest, examination, registry, custody; sale; disposition of proceeds; disbursement, regulation of.

Sale of bonds at discount.—Where, after district road bonds had been issued, under this article and arts. 628, 631, the commissioners' court, on voter's petition, made order determining that the bonds could not be sold at par, repeating the order authorizing their issuance and canceling the bonds, mandamus would not lie, nearly five years thereafter, to compel reissuance of the bonds. Jackson v. McAllister (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 671.

Sale of bonds on credit.—Under Loc. & Sp. Acts 33d Leg. (1913) c. 70, providing that road district bonds should be sold to the highest bidder for cash, a sale and purchase of the bonds partly on credit, or deferred installment payments, was void. People's Guaranty State Bank of Tyler v. Castle (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 519.

Where bank bought road district bonds under Loc. & Sp. Acts 33d Leg. (1913) c. 70, partly on credit or deferred installment payments, and obtained title to the bonds and sold them to another bank, the first bank, even though the sale and purchase of the bonds was void, was liable in debt to the county for the bonds. Id.

Where bank bought road district bonds under Loc. & Sp. Acts 33d Leg. (1913) c. 70, partly on credit, or deferred installment payments, and sold the bonds to another bank, the sale by the road district and purchase of the bonds by the first bank being void because the credit, the bank to the county was in the nature of a debt, and an order to presently command the delivery of any money by such bank to the depository of the county could not exist; no money being actually on deposit in the bank. Id.

Custody and control of bonds.—Where district roads bonds are issued under this article and arts. 628, 631, the commissioners' court, as incidental to the express power over roads given by art. 2241, and the "control" and "custody" of the bonds given by art. 632, has power to determine the manner and methods to be adopted in order to effect a sale, and when it is not reasonably possible to sell them at par. Jackson v. McAllister (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 671.

Suit, to restrain issuing of bonds for improvement of a public highway, was properly dismissed, where at time petition was filed bonds were in the hands of the Attorney General for examination under this article; it being the duty of the Attorney General, under art. 619, to pass upon questions raised by petition. Smith v. Reaves (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 546.

Diversion of fund.—If proposition on which county bonds were voted specified the roads to be improved, commissioners' court could be enjoined by taxpayer from diverting funds to other roads. Grayson County v. Harrell (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 160.

Any agreement by the commissioners' court, tending to preclude it from full and free exercise of its discretion as to the roads to be improved with the proceeds of bonds voted to be issued for improvement of roads generally, would be against public policy. Id. As the law constitutes the commissioners' court a board to designate the particular roads of a locality to be improved with the proceeds of road bonds, an order, made prior to election, which designated the particular roads to be improved at any subsequent time, if fairly done, may be changed, and no previous contract would prevent. Strength v. Black (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 758.

Expenditure of funds.—Under the special road law of Navarro county, the discretion with reference to the handling of funds from road bonds of road district No. 1 and road district No. 12 is lodged solely in the road board of such districts. The road boards of such districts are given exclusive care and management of the expenditure of such funds. Montfort v. Commissioners' Court of Navarro County (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 421.

Arts. 633-636.

See Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 1010.

Nature and liability of road districts and boards of road districts.—The board of a road district under Sp. Acts 33d Leg. c. 55, held a "quasi public corporation." Tyree v. Road Dist. No. 5 Navarro County (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 644.

Upon contracts within the scope of the powers of road districts or other public corporations by their proper officers, such corporations are held liable in the same manner as private corporations or natural persons, and such contracts cannot be breached with impunity, even when the Legislature has assumed to authorize it. Horn v. Matagora County (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 934.

Art. 637a. County may issue bonds to compensate districts for bonds issued; election; tax.—Whenever in any political subdivision or defined districts in any county in this state bonds have been issued under the authority of Chapter 2, Title 18, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911, or any amendments thereto, or under authority of any special county road law, and thereafter bonds are voted by the entire county for the purposes hereinafter authorized, such political subdivisions or defined districts first issuing bonds may be fully and fairly compensated by the county in an amount equal in value to the amount of district bonds issued by such districts, and which shall be done in the form and manner hereinafter prescribed:

(1) It shall be the duty of the commissioners court, upon the presentation of a petition signed by two hundred and fifty resident property taxpaying voters of the county, whether residing in such road district or districts, or not, to order an election under the provisions of Chapter 2, Title 18, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, 1911, to determine whether or not the bonds of such county shall be issued for road construction purposes as authorized by subdivision 3 and 4 of this article.

(2) Such county bonds to be issued in such an amount as may be stated in the petition and order of the commissioners court, but within the limitations of the constitutional and statutory provisions; and at such election there shall also be submitted to the resident property taxpaying voters of the county the question as to whether or not a tax shall be levied upon the property of said county subject to taxation for the purpose of paying the interest on said bonds and to provide a sinking fund for the redemption thereof.

(3) Where such road district or districts have by the requisite vote of the qualified property taxpaying voters thereof authorized the issuance of bonds, and the same have not been issued and sold, or, if sold and the proceeds have not been expended, at the time the election is to be ordered for the entire county, then the proposed county bonds shall be issued for the following purpose: "The issuance of County bonds for the construction of district roads and the further construction, maintenance and operation of macadamized, graveled or paved roads and turnpikes, or in aid thereof, throughout such county." If the proposition to issue such county bonds for said purpose shall receive the necessary favorable vote as is now provided by law, and said bonds shall have been approved and issued, then so much of the bonds so issued by the county as may be necessary to fairly and fully compensate such road district or districts shall be set aside by the commissioners court for that purpose; provided, that in the event such district bonds have not been issued and sold, then so much of the bonds so issued by the county as may be necessary to fairly and fully compensate such road district or districts shall be set aside by the commissioners court for that purpose; provided, that in the event such district bonds have not been issued and sold, then so much of the bonds so issued by the county as may be necessary to fairly and fully compensate such road district or districts shall be set aside for that purpose, and the same shall be sold and the proceeds applied to the construction, maintenance and operation of the roads within and for such road district or districts as contemplated by the election or elections theretofore held within and for such road district or districts, and such unsold district bonds thereupon become totally void, and it shall be the duty of the commissioners court of such county to immediately cancel and destroy such unsold district bonds; provided, however, that in the event such district bonds have been sold, then an exchange of a like amount of said county bonds may be made with the holder or holders of said district bonds as provided in subdivision 1 of Article 637b of this chapter, but if the commissioners court should find that such exchange cannot be made, then so much of the county bonds as may be necessary shall be transferred and placed to the credit of the interest and sinking fund account of such road district or districts in conformity with the procedure prescribed by subdivision 2 of Article 637b hereof.

(4) Where such road district or districts have issued bonds for the construction of public roads therein and the proceeds derived from the sale of the bonds have been applied to the construction of roads within and for such districts, then such district roads may be merged into and become a part of the general county system of public roads and such road district or districts shall be fully and fairly compensated by the county in an amount equal in value to the amount of bonds outstanding against such road district or districts at the time the bonds are issued by the county, and the proposed county bonds shall be issued for the following purpose: "The issuance of county bonds for the purchase of district roads and the further construction, maintenance and operation of macadamized, graveled or paved roads and turnpikes, or in aid thereof, throughout such county." In the event the proposition to issue such county bonds shall receive the necessary favorable vote as is now provided by law, and said bonds shall have been approved and issued, then so much of the bonds so issued by the county as may be necessary for that purpose shall be set aside and exchanged for a like amount of outstanding district bonds, or the same may be transferred and placed to the credit of such road district or districts for the purpose of paying and retiring such district bonds as the same may mature. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 203, § 2, adding art. 637a; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d
C. S., ch. 38, § 1, amending art. 637a.]

Took effect July 25, 1919.
See Bell County v. Hines (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 556.

Purpose of issue.—Under arts. 606, 629, requiring that the proposition submitted to the electors of a county for the issuance of bonds for road construction, as authorized by subds. 3, 4, of this article, as amended by Acts 36th Leg. (1919) c. 38, shall distinctly specify the purpose for which the bonds are to be issued, and that notice of such election shall be given, it is necessary that the purposes of the election should appear in the official notice, so where the purpose stated was to determine whether bonds should be issued to the amount of $1,750,000 to purchase improved roads, etc., and construct others, an order of the commissioners' court, made a few days before election, specifying that if the bond issue should carry, certain roads should be improved which was not incorporated in the election notice, will not control disposition of the funds derived from the

Art. 637b. Use of and exchange of bonds for outstanding bonds.—If the proposition to issue such county bonds shall receive the necessary favorable vote as is now provided by law, and said bonds shall have been approved and issued, the taxes theretofore levied and collected in any road district or districts shall from that date be dispensed with as hereinafter provided, and the bonds so set apart by the commissioners court shall be used exclusively for the purpose of constructing the roads in any such subdivisions or districts or for the purpose of purchasing or taking over the improved roads in any such subdivisions or districts, as the case may be. The exchange of such county bonds for such outstanding district bonds shall be made in one of the following methods, to wit:

(1) An exchange of said bonds may be made with the holder or holders of any outstanding district bonds. The agreement for such exchange shall be evidenced by order of the commissioners court authorizing the same and by the written consent of the holder or holders of such district bonds, properly signed and acknowledged, as provided for the acknowledgment of written instruments by the laws of this state, which said order of the commissioners court, written agreement properly executed by the holder or holders of such district bonds, together with the county bonds to be given in exchange, shall be presented to and approved by the Attorney General of the State and shall bear his certificate of approval before the exchange is finally consummated. When such exchange of county bonds for district bonds shall have been consummated, it shall be the duty of the commissioners court to cancel and destroy said district bonds, and thereafter no tax shall ever be levied or collected therefor under the original election in such subdivisions or districts and the sinking funds then on hand to the credit of any such subdivisions or districts shall be passed to the sinking fund account of such road district or districts an amount of county bonds equal in value to the amount of outstanding district bonds. The order of the commissioners court authorizing the deposit of county bonds for the credit of the interest and sinking fund account of such road district or districts, together with the county bonds so authorized to be deposited, shall be presented to and approved by the Attorney General of the State and shall bear his certificate of approval before such deposit of county bonds shall be made and credit passed to such road district or districts. After such county bonds shall have been deposited for the credit of the interest and sinking fund accounts of any such road district or districts the sinking fund then on hand to the credit of such road district or districts shall be passed to the credit of the sinking fund account of the county and the commissioners court shall no longer levy and collect the taxes provided for under the original election for said bonds in such road district or districts, but in lieu thereof the said court shall, from the taxes levied for the purpose of providing the necessary interest on the county bonds hereinafore provided for, pay annually the interest on said county bonds deposited for the credit of such road district or districts, detaching the coupon therefor, and said payment of interest shall be passed to the credit of the interest account of such road district or districts as the owner or owners of said county bonds, and the funds so realized by said road district or districts shall be used by the commissioners court for the purpose of paying the interest on all such outstanding district bonds. It shall also be the duty of the commissioners court to set aside annually, from the taxes levied to provide the necessary sinking fund for such county bonds, the necessary sinking fund for the retirement of said county bonds and upon the maturity of said county bonds the commissioners court shall pay said bonds in full and said payments shall be passed to the credit of the sinking fund of such road district or districts and the funds so realized by said road district or districts shall be used by the commissioners court to pay in full all outstanding district bonds. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 203, § 2, adding art. 637b; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 38, § 1, amending art. 637b.]

Art. 637c. Denominations of bonds; interest rate; maturity; sale. —The county bonds issued for the purpose contemplated in subdivisions three and four of Article 637a shall be issued in similar denominations, bearing the same rate of interest, having the same date or dates or maturity and with similar options of payment as the outstanding district bonds, it being the intent hereof that said county bonds shall in every respect be similar to said district bonds, except they shall be county obligations instead of district obligations, and shall be dated on a date after the date of the election at which they were authorized; and the county bonds issued in excess of the amount required to exchange, offset and retire said outstanding district bonds shall be issued and sold in the manner now provided by law and may mature serially or otherwise at the discretion of the commissioners court and may run for a term not to exceed forty years and such bonds shall bear not more than 5½% interest per annum, and the proceeds thereof shall be credited to the available road fund of the county and shall be expended by the commissioners court in constructing, maintaining and operating macadamized, graveled or paved roads and turnpikes or in aid thereof throughout such county. The issuance and sale of the bonds herein authorized and the levy and collection of taxes therefor shall be conducted as now required by law, except as herein otherwise provided; and provided further that the necessary expense incident to the issuance of said bonds may be paid out of the proceeds from the sale thereof. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg. ch. 203, § 2, adding art. 637c; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 38, § 1, amending art. 637c.]

Art. 637d. Political subdivision not to be created out of territory having outstanding bonds.—Where a political subdivision or defined road district of a county has heretofore been established and issued bonds or is hereafter established and issues bonds, no political subdivision or defined road district shall thereafter be created or established overlapping the same territory or embracing any part thereof while any of the bonds of such political subdivision or defined road district are outstanding and unpaid, except as hereinabove provided for the county as a whole:

Provided that in the event the boundaries of any defined road district hereafter created or established overlap or embrace any part of the territory or area of another defined road district or road districts theretofore created or established, such road district shall be invalid only as to that portion thereof which overlaps or embraces any part of the territory of a defined road district or road districts theretofore established, and it shall be the duty of the commissioners court of the county in which such conflicting road districts are situated to pass a nunc pro tunc order accurately defining the boundaries of the subsequently created road district in conformity to the boundaries of such contiguous road district or road districts.

Provided further that all defined road districts in this state heretofore attempted to be established where the territory already embraced therein overlaps any portion of the territory embraced within the boundaries of another defined district or road district theretofore formed or established are validated in all respects, except as to that portion thereof which overlaps or embraces any part of the road district or road districts first created or established, and it shall be the duty of the commissioners court of the county in which such districts are situated to pass a nunc pro tunc orders accurately defining the boundaries of the road district attempted to be created or established so as to conform to the boundaries of the contiguous road district of road districts;

And provided that all regular and proper proceedings and orders had made in the issuance of bonds or proposed bonds in such defined road districts attempted to be established prior to the taking effect of this Act are hereby in all things validated, ratified and confirmed; provided that this Act shall in no way affect or repeal any provision of any special road law heretofore enacted for any county. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 203, § 2, adding art. 637d; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 18, § 1.]

Explanatory.—The act amends "article 637d of section 2, chapter 203, General Laws of the Regular Session of the 55th Legislature." The act took effect March 29, 1918.

Art. 637g. Issue of bonds where district bonds have been issued, etc.—Where any county in this State has already voted bonds for the purpose of purchasing or taking over district roads in any road district or districts within such county, and it shall appear that at the time such county election was held any one or more of such road district or districts has not issued and sold the road district bonds theretofore authorized by a vote of the qualified voters therein, then the commissioners court of such county may issue the county bonds already authorized in the election held throughout the county for the purpose of purchasing or taking over such district roads, and such county bonds so issued shall as to amount, rate of interest, date or dates of maturity, and options of payment conform in every respect
Art. 637h. Cancellation or revocation of bonds issued.—In the event any bonds hereetofore voted or that hereafter may be voted by an[y] county or political subdivision or defined district of any county, under the provisions of Chapter 2, Title 18, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911, and amendments thereto, or under authority of any special county road law, shall have remained unsold and the Commissioners Court shall find that the bonds cannot be legally sold in conformity with the law, then it may, or, upon petition of a two-thirds majority of the qualified property tax-paying voters of such county or political subdivision or defined district thereof, as shown by the records in the office of the County Tax Collector, shall, order an election for the purpose of submitting the question of the cancellation and revocation of said bonds to a vote of the qualified property taxpaying voters of such county or political subdivision or defined district thereof and the said election shall be ordered, held and conducted in the same form and manner as that at which such bonds may have been originally voted and authorized, and in the event the result of such election for the cancellation and revocation of such unsold bonds shall show that two-thirds of the qualified resident property taxpaying voters of such county or political subdivision or defined district of such county voting at such election have voted for the cancellation and revocation of such unsold bonds, the result of such election shall be duly declared by the commissioners court of the county in which such election shall have been held, the returns of such election and the result thereof duly entered of record in the minutes of the commissioners court of such county and immediately thereupon such unsold bonds shall become totally null and void and it shall thereupon become the duty of the commissioners court to cancel and destroy such unsold bonds by burning and shall forward a certified copy of their minutes showing such destruction and [can]cellation to the Comptroller of Public Accounts, who shall thereupon cancel the registration of said bonds, as shown on the records of his office. It shall further be the duty of the commissioners court of such county immediately to re-adjust all existing tax levies to properly meet the conditions resulting from the cancellation and revocation of such unsold bonds and to relieve the taxpayers of such county or political subdivision or defined districts of such county of any further or existing tax levy previously made for the purpose of paying the interest on said bonds and providing a sinking fund for the redemption thereof; provided that where any taxes have been levied and collected in the name of the county or political subdivision or defined district thereof in anticipation of the sale of such bonds, such taxes so far as unexpended shall in the event of the cancellation and revocation of such unsold bonds and on order of the commissioners court duly entered of record be returned to the taxpayers ratably after deducting the compensation of the tax assessor, tax collector and county treasurer in connection therewith, and any other claims properly chargeable against such taxes and proper receipts for all sums so refunded to be taken and filed by the County Treasurer. Provided further that in the event a two-thirds majority of such qualified resident property taxpaying voters voting at said election be not in favor of the proposition for the cancellation and revocation of such unsold bonds, the result of such election shall nevertheless be declared and entered of record in the same manner as though the result thereof had shown a two-thirds majority for the cancellation and revocation of such bonds. [Id., § 2, adding art. 637h.]

Art. 637hh. Previous bond elections not invalidated.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed as invalidating any bond elections previously ordered or held within and for any county in this state or any political subdivision or defined district of any county under the provisions of Chapter 2, Title 18, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911, and amendments thereto, or under authority of any special county road law. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 638. Road district not liable for torts.

See Horn v. Matagorda County (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 924; Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 1010.

Art. 639. County commissioner to be ex officio road superintendent; powers.

See Horn v. Matagorda County (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 924; Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 1010.

Art. 640. Bids to be taken on contract work; contract to be let to lowest and best bidder—Right to reject.

See Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1010.

Powers of board.—Navarro County Road Law 1913, § 23, as to "when * * * board shall begin its construction, or let its contract for the construction," construed, in view of sections 19, 20, 26, 30, 32, 34, and 35, to permit road district board to improve roads by contract awarded upon competitive bids or by purchasing material and employing labor and having work done under its own supervision. Edens v. Road Dist. No. 1 of Navarro County (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 791.

In action to enjoin construction of road ordered by road district under Navarro County Road Law 1913, evidence held to show that the board in ordering road and letting contract substantially complied with the law. Id.

Evidence held insufficient to show flagrant and gross abuse of discretion and authority, or willful intention of committing wrong, by board of road district in ordering construction of certain road. Id.

Road district board has discretionary power to locate and construct pike roads which can be interfered with by injunction only where action sought to be enjoined is so arbitrary and devoid of merit as to be fraudulent, and the result of gross abuse of discretion implying not merely error of judgment but perversity of will, passion, prejudice, partiality, or moral delinquency. Id.

Submission to competition.—Art. 226a, requiring commissioner's court, before entering into a contract requiring the expenditure of $2,000 or more, to submit the contract to competitive bids, held not applicable to county's contract with civil engineers for professional services in connection with the construction and maintenance of public highways and roads in proceedings under Rev. St. tit. 18, c. 2, as amended in 1917, in view of this article and arts. 1460-1498, 2571, 5535, 5972, and 1498c, and in view of the purpose of the statute, and the absurdity of letting contracts for professional services of a technical nature through competitive bidding. Hunter v. Whiteaker & Washington (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1096.

Rights of subcontractor.—Under contract authorizing road district to withhold certain percentage of amount due contractor, and, if road cost more than contract price, to apply retained amount on excess cost, a subcontractor of an insolvent contractor who failed to finish his contract, is not entitled to be paid from retained amount until roads covered by contract have been completed. Compensation of assessor.—The general tax law allows, as compensation to the assessor of state and county taxes, a percentage on the valuation of property assessed, "two-thirds" of which to be paid by the state, and one-third by the county. Gen. Laws 1889, p. 89, authorizing counties to fund their indebtedness, provides that "all taxes levied under this act shall be assessed and collected in the same manner, and by the same officers whose duty it is to assess and collect the state tax, and they shall receive for their services one-fourth the rate of commissions allowed for assessing and collecting the state tax." Held, that the assessor levying a tax to meet the funded indebtedness of a county is entitled to receive, as compensation, one-fourth of the rate paid by the state for like services under the general tax law. Art. 698 Sinking fund of county, city, town, school district or school community to be invested in United States, state, city or town bonds, provided, etc.

Article 698. Sinking fund of county, city, town, school district or school community to be invested in United States, state, city or town bonds, provided, etc.—The Commissioners Court of any county, the city council of any incorporated city or town, and the board of trustees of any independent school district, or any other school district or school community, in the State of Texas, are authorized and empowered, whenever they may deem it advisable, to invest any sinking fund or sinking funds now on hand or hereafter acquired for the redemption and payment of any outstanding bonds of such county, city or town, or independent school district, or any other school district or school community, in bonds of the United States, war-savings certificates and certificates of indebtedness, issued by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States and in bonds of the State of Texas, of any county of the State of Texas, or of any incorporated city or town; provided, that no such bonds shall be purchased which, according to their terms, mature at a date subsequent to the time of maturity of the bonds for the payment of which such sinking fund was created; and provided, further, that in the event any commissioners court, city council or board of trustees is unable to purchase any securities of the character above mentioned, which mature at a date prior to the time of maturity of the bonds for the payment of which such sinking fund was created, then they are authorized, in their discretion, to invest such funds in the bonds of any independent school district, or of any other school district or school community authorized to issue bonds, under the same restrictions as herein mentioned. [Acts 1905, p. 25, § 1; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 75, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 27, 1918, date of adjournment.

Art. 700. Draft on sinking fund not to be honored by treasurer except for interest, redemption or investment.

Application.—Where a county treasurer defaulted, and it is impossible to ascertain which funds were depleted, his successor cannot be compelled by mandamus to pay the full amount of funds due to a drainage district although he may have wrongfully paid orders from other funds; this article and art. 2608, being inapplicable. Nueces County Drainage Dist. No. 2 v. Garrett (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1000.
TITLE 19
BRANDS, TRADE-MARKS, ETC.

Art. 706b. Confusion with other mark or name to be avoided.

Art. 706c. Restraining unlawful use of mark or name.

Article 703. [308a] Trade-marks, etc.

Trade-names.—Words, such as "Union Painless Dentists," may become so associated with the business or avocation of certain persons in a certain locality, as to lose their primary meaning and come to signify the business carried on by such persons and constitute a trade-name. Aultz v. Zucht (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 475.

That the same name may have been used in other cities by other persons will not deprive users of protection against its use in the city in which it has been used exclusively by them until it has come to stand for their business. Id.

Evidence held to support finding that the words "Union Painless Dentists," in view of circumstances surrounding their use, were so similar to the words "Union Painless Dentists" as to mislead the public and to make the use thereof constitute unfair competition. Id.

That partners in the dental business under a trade-name permitted a corporation organized by them to use such name in the business of dealing in and manufacturing dental supplies, which constituted no competition with their practice of dentistry, did not prevent them from asserting their right to the use of such name in conducting the dentistry business, against persons infringing thereon in conducting the dentistry business. Id.

Nature and essentials of trade-mark rights.—An article need not be actually manufactured by the owner of the trade-mark, it being enough that it is manufactured under his supervision and according to his directions, thus securing both the right of the owner and the right of the public. Coca-Cola Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 791.

A trade-mark, patent, or copyright is property in the sense that it has a commercial value, and may be sold as other property, but it is not an article of commerce in the sense that it may be consumed by the purchasing public. Id.

Legislation by Congress.—Where Congress has legislated under U. S. Const. art. 1, § 8, providing for monopolies in the matter of patent rights, trade-marks, and copyright, no state can nullify its acts. Coca-Cola Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 791.

Restrictions upon assignees.—The owner of a patent right, copyright, or trade-mark, having the exclusive right to manufacture and sell the article protected thereby, and being under no legal obligation to grant such right to another, may impose upon his assignee such restrictions as he may see proper, and to which his assignee will agree, including the price at which the article may be sold, the territory in which it may be manufactured and sold, the material that may be used in its manufacture or in connection therewith. Coca-Cola Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 791.

Restrictions upon vendees.—The owner of an article protected by patent, copyright, or trade-mark, when he has manufactured and sold the same, cannot impose restrictions upon his vendee as to the future sale of the same, since, having parted with his ownership therein, it enters the channels of trade as an article of commerce, and is thereafter beyond his control. Coca-Cola Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 791.

Art. 706a. Dairies and milk distributors may acquire trade-mark or trade-name.—Any person, firm or corporation engaged in the dairying business, or in the distribution or sale of milk requiring the use of bottles, may file in the office of the County Clerk of the county in which it is expected such person, firm or corporation will sell or distribute milk, a fac simile or description of the name or names, trade name, mark or design used by such person, firm or corporation for advertising purposes, and cause such fac simile or description to be published in a public newspaper published in such county for three successive weeks, and the act of filing and publication shall operate to secure to such dairyman, milk distributor or milk dealer, sole and exclusive right to use in said county or counties said name or names, trade name, mark or design. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 81, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Sections 5 and 6 impose criminal penalties, and are set forth, post, as arts. 1399e, 1399f, Penal Code. The act took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.
Art. 706b. Confusion with other mark or name to be avoided.—No name or names, trade name, mark or design shall be filed by the County Clerk as aforesaid that could probably be mistaken for a name or names, trade name, mark or design already of record, provided further that all persons, firms or corporations now using a name or names, trade name, mark or design shall have thirty days time after this law takes effect in which to file such name, or names, trade name, mark or design under provision of this Act before the same can be claimed by others. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 706c. Restraining unlawful use of mark or name.—Any person, firm or corporation having adopted a name or names, trade name, mark or design, as provided herein, may proceed by suit to enjoin the use of said name, or names, trade name, mark or design by any other person, firm or corporation, and all courts having jurisdiction thereof shall grant injunction to restrain the unlawful use thereof. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 706d. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Culwell (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 457.

105. — Stock awaiting transportation.—Where horses to be shipped were overheated in a "cutting out" process made necessary by the railroad's negligence in permitting water troughs to overflow, rendering the pen muddy, such road was liable for consequent injuries to the horses in transit. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Culwell (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 457.

109. — Stock awaiting transportation.—Where horses to be shipped were overheated in a "cutting out" process made necessary by the railroad's negligence in permitting water troughs to overflow, rendering the pen muddy, such road was liable for consequent injuries to the horses in transit. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Culwell (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 457.

110. — Stock awaiting transportation.—Where horses to be shipped were overheated in a "cutting out" process made necessary by the railroad's negligence in permitting water troughs to overflow, rendering the pen muddy, such road was liable for consequent injuries to the horses in transit. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Culwell (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 457.

111. — Stock awaiting transportation.—Where horses to be shipped were overheated in a "cutting out" process made necessary by the railroad's negligence in permitting water troughs to overflow, rendering the pen muddy, such road was liable for consequent injuries to the horses in transit. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Culwell (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 457.

112. — Stock awaiting transportation.—Where horses to be shipped were overheated in a "cutting out" process made necessary by the railroad's negligence in permitting water troughs to overflow, rendering the pen muddy, such road was liable for consequent injuries to the horses in transit. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Culwell (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 457.
Art. 707. CARRIERS

Allowance of damages by reason of extra feed held not supported by evidence. Lan
Clark (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 682.

Evidence showing that cattle in carrier's exclusive control, were sound when delivered to carrier and upon arrival were injured, made prima facie case of negligence. Ft.
ment of shipper that animals were strong enough to make trip, and that they died before they reached their destination, and that the car in which they were loaded was improperly bedded, and not a safe car to transport cattle, was sufficient to show

Railroad's failure to explain delay is of itself clothed with probative force on the ques-

210 S. W. 852.

Testimony as to death of mare from lockjaw, held insufficient. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry.

Evidence held sufficiently definite and certain as to the number and kind of animals injured and the amount of damages to sustain a verdict for plaintiff. Rio Grande, E. P.

Evidence held insufficient to show negligence in failing properly to ventilate the box car in which plaintiff's horses were shipped. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Culwell (Civ.
App.) 216 S. W. 457.

In action for damages from shrinkage in live stock because of negligence in keeping stock confined in cars without water pending delay in transportation, evidence held not to justify finding by reason of increased market value during the delay. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry.
Co. of Texas v. Cleft (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 682.

Evidence held to warrant a finding that delay was due not to act of God, but to negli-Blackstone & Slaughter (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 298.

Evidence held sufficient to warrant finding that damage to sheep from being kept in muddy pens was due to carrier's negligence. Id.

Evidence that cattle were delivered to defendant railroad and by it delivered to consignee in unclean pens sufficiently establishes that the railroad placed them in the pens at least in the absence of an explanation by defendant. Hines v. Davis (Civ. App.) 225
S. W. 862.

In an action for damages to a shipment of hogs, evidence held sufficient to warrant a finding of negligence in failure to properly bed the car and to drench the hogs with water, whereby some of the hogs died. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Griffith (Civ. App.)
226 S. W. 688.

113. — Damages.—Measure of damages to a shipment of live stock is difference between the value of the animals at destination had they been properly and promptly transported and their value as actually delivered. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Gib-693; Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Helms Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 597; St. Louis & S. F.
R. Co. v. White, 110 Tex. 585, 222 S. W. 963, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 169 S. W. 1128; 1117; Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Frunty (Sup.) 230 S. W. 396.

As to damages for loss of prize money caused by delay in transportation of animals in-

Amount of damage sustained by shipper of cattle from carrier's negligence in transit, plus 6 per cent. interest from date of loss, is correct measure of shipper's damage at date he recovers judgment against carrier. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Reed (Civ. App.)
203 S. W. 410.

For negligent delay in loading live stock for shipment, the elements of damage would include, both the value of the lost weight and the depreciation in value of the remaining

Measure of damages for injuries to animals in transit is difference between their mar-et market value at destination, if transported without negligence, and their real and intrinsic value at destination in the condition in which they were delivered; the evidence being there was no market value. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Helms Bros (Civ. App.) 210 S.
W. 863. Cost of feed and care after injury, and price afterwards received for animals at a point other than destination, had no proper place in applying the true measure of dam-caster v. Whittle (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 534.

If on account of delay cattle were damaged in appearance and lost in weight by reason of "loss of fill," reasonably in contemplation, such loss of fill may properly be shown

116. Liability for damage to goods by mob.—Under this article, carrier is not liable for depreciation in the value of goods, resulting solely from inevitable delay in their

Art. 708. [320] [278] Carriers can not limit their responsibility.

Marcolich (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 582.

5. Carrier cannot escape liability for failure to perform its duty to furnish suitable cars because the shipping contract required the shipper to bed, inspect, and accept the cars. Mexico Northwestern Ry. v. Williams (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 476; Mexico Northwestern Ry. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 712.

10. Negligence or misconduct.—In the absence of proof to the contrary, it will be presumed that the loss of and injury to goods in an intrastate shipment was caused by the negligence of the carriers, so that the limitation of liability in the contract is not valid under this article. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. v. Cox (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1045.

15. Limitation of amount of liability.—Under this statute, a railroad company which transports goods within the state but fails to deliver them, is liable for their value at destination less transportation charges, although the bill of lading provides that, in event of loss, the value or cost at the point of shipment shall govern the settlement. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. v. Booton (App.) 15 S. W. 909.

Provision in bill of lading as to the value of the property being that at point of shipment, having reference only to loss or damage, does not affect measure of damages for conversion. International & Great Northern Ry. v. Kansas City Produce Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 254.

Art. 709. [321] [279] Bound to carry goods, when.

As to breach of a contract to furnish cargo, see Elder, Dempster & Co. v. Weld-Neville Cotton Co. (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 102.
Art. 710. [322] [280] Must give bill of lading.

1. Bills of lading in general.—A railroad company incurs the penalty by giving a bill of lading for lumber describing it as "a car-load" only, when the shipper demands that the weight be stated. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Cuteman (App.) 14 S. W. 1866.

2. Whereby carrier's agent, pursuant to consignee's letter, reshipped goods over defendant railway, advising consignee thereof, held sufficient compliance with statute.

5. Construction and operation of bill.—Mere fact that weighing of wheat was done by a third person did not relieve carrier of liability when it delivered less quantity, where it accepted such weight and entered it on the bill of lading. Baker v. H. Dittinger Roller Mills Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 788.

6. Where carrier proves that it delivered all the wheat received which was carefully weighed and checked at destination when it was found to weigh less than the bill of lading states, the carrier is not liable for the discrepancy. Id.

8. Shipment from one state to another is an "interstate shipment" between carrier and shipper, though the bill of lading indicated it was intrastate. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. T. P. App. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 147.

9. Shipping receipt and bill of lading, held insufficient to establish delivery to the carrier of all the goods that were in the boxes when the owner, some time before, delivered them to the storage company for storage. Hines v. Warden (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 357.

10. Trade custom of bills of lading.—As to negotiation, see Guaranty State Bank of Tinsman v. Wm. D. Cleveland & Sons (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 939.

11. Bank to which shipper of cotton by shipper's order bills, indorsed and delivered to bank with drafts on purchasers in favor of bank, bank crediting amount of drafts to shipper on books, held to have become vested with title as owner or pledgees. Hubbell, Slack & Co. v. Farmers' Union Cotton Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 681.

12. Indorsement held not a guaranty of payment of draft, nor the quantity or quality of the goods, the fact that they exist, or the genuineness of the bill of lading. Tradesmen's State Bank v. Ft. Worth Elevators Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 666.

15. Bona fide purchasers.—Where a carrier issued a bill of lading, complying with arts. 715, 718, in exchange for initial carrier's bill of lading, routing over its lines to destination, and same was transferred to an innocent purchaser for value, it became incontestable under art. 719, and the carrier was liable for loss of shipment by delayed transportation, although it did not receive shipment until long after issue of bill of lading, because routing was changed without its knowledge. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Clement Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 120.

16. Plaintiff held an innocent holder for value of a bill of lading. Id.

17. Where bill of lading issued by carrier and attached to draft drawn on purchaser of carload of wheat, that shipper carried was intrastate carrier is estopped from asserting interstate character of shipment as against purchaser who paid draft without knowledge that carload was originally shipped from another state. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Clement Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 317.

18. Where drafts of drafts with forged bills of lading attached pays payee who is innocent holder for value, it cannot thereafter, on discovering that goods have not been shipped and that bills of lading are fictitious, recover its loss from payee. Howe Grain & Mercantile Co. v. A. B. Crouch Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 946.

19. Where payee of drafts with bill of lading attached, upon receiving drafts gave the drawer unconditional credit on its books for the amount of the drafts, the bank was owner and holder of the drafts, and not merely the drawer's collecting agent, though it might have applied amount upon drawer's pre-existing debt, or upon nonpayment might have claimed right to charge amount back against drawer. Id.

20. Where drawer in transferring drafts to payee bank assigned bills of lading purporting to be issued to drawer, bank, in forwarding drafts, with attached bills of lading, to drawee, was not a guarantor of signatures attached to bills of lading. Id.

21. Connecting carrier issuing bill of lading for interstate shipment, held liable to innocent purchaser who paid draft, notwithstanding shipment was transported by another carrier due to change in routing. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Plano Milling Co. (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 190.

22. Contracts for transportation.—Where seller authorized railroad to allow buyer to inspect goods without advance payment of draft and delivery of bill of lading, without stipulating in what particular place and manner the inspection should be made, the railroad did not violate instructions by placing the car containing the goods on the privately owned track of buyer adjacent to buyer's warehouse for the purpose of enabling buyer to properly inspect paper-work.-Fitzgerald v. Fox Bros. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 379.

10. Authority of agents and employees.—A railroad station agent has authority to contract to furnish freight cars at a certain time and place. Texas Midland R. R. v. O'Kelley (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 152.

Where a railroad's agent exceeded authority in issuing bill of lading purporting to bind the road to transport certain owning line property it had not and never afterwards acquired possession of, but the road, by attempting to perform, adopted its agent's act, it was liable for damage resulting from negligent failure to transport and deliver within reasonable time. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Piano Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 533.

It was within the scope of the authority of a railroad's agent to issue a bill of lading binding it to take up a carload of corn from its connecting carrier and to continue the carriage from its destination under bill of lading issued by the original carrier to a new destination.

10% Interstate shipment.—Where grain was shipped from Missouri to a point in Texas, and the Texas purchaser, on paying the draft with bill of lading attached, sold the grain to a purchaser in another part of Texas, and defendant railroad company before delivery of the shipment issued a bill of lading for transportation to the new destination, that shipment was interstate. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Piano Milling Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 100.

13. Delivery to carrier.—Issuance of bill of lading by a carrier adds nothing to the binding force of the contract of carriage, and verbal agreement to accept and transport a car of designated freight, which is being loaded when the agreement is made, becomes a complete acceptance of the shipment when the loading is finished. Hines v. Steele (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 606, holding acceptance of shipment of cotton complete despite additional loading.

14. Ownership, custody, and control of goods.—The owner of material may sue a carrier for delay during transit, although shipment was made in another's name. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 332.

The shipper of goods consigned to himself with draft attached to bill of lading, not having with said ownership, may sue the carrier for delivering them to another without payment of the draft. International & Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Kansas City Produce Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 254.

When goods are delivered to the carrier at a point of delivery to be transported to another point, they become the property of the buyer. Lee v. Gilerchrist Cotton Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 977.

15. Transportation and delivery by carrier.—The consignee is obliged to accept goods when duly tendered by carrier, although damaged in transportation if not rendered totally valueless. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Iverson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 905.

16. Delay in delivery.—Where buyer accepted engine shipped by defendant by paying draft attached to bill of lading, railway company, and not defendant, was liable for delay occurring thereafter. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Lochridge & Denny (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 256.

Presentment of bill of lading before delivery.—Where shipping company, knowing Mexican law required delivery to custom house, induced plaintiff to ship lumber with bill of lading with draft attached, agreeing to surrender lumber only on surrender of bill of lading, and delivered lumber to custom house, which delivered it without bill of lading, company was liable for the loss. South Texas Lumber Co. v. Wolvin Line (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1128.

The carrier delivering goods shipped without production of the bill of lading and payment of the draft attached is liable for conversion. International & Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Kansas City Produce Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 254.

21. Liability for failure or refusal to deliver.—Under the statute, a carrier is liable for misdelivery made in good faith and without negligence, unless error was caused by consignor. Missouri Iron & Metal Co. v. Texas & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1267.

Mere nondelivery of property lawfully in possession will not constitute conversion, as there must be a demand and refusal. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Talmage (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 862.

A carrier which delivered cotton to a compress company instead of the named consignee, taking a receipt from it to hold it for the consignee, was guilty of a conversion and liable for its destruction by fire while so held by the compress company. Hines v. Jordan (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 633.

Where, at the time of trial, railroad had been returned to private ownership, the Director General is no longer a proper party to a cause of action for conversion, arising during federal control, for the action should proceed against the President pursuant to Act Cong. Feb. 28, 1920, and the United States is not a proper party except through said agent. Id.
24. Actions for failure to deliver or misdelivery—Sufficiency of evidence.—Evidence that goods were not delivered was made, in cases of transactions with consignor, etc. held prima facie proof of such person’s authority to receive goods. Missouri Iron & Metal Co. v. Texas & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1067.

In action by consignee of hay against railroad for damages from failure to permit adequate inspection, evidence held to show notation on bill of lading. “Allow inspection,” is universally understood by shippers and railroads to mean side-door inspection. Houston, T. & N. Ry. v. Rateliffe (Ch. App.) 267 S. W. 525.

Evidence held insufficient to prove that the goods taken under attachment were those shipped by plaintiff. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. McKie (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 737.

In an action involving issue of whether shipper had instructed railroad to deliver shipment, evidence held to sustain finding for shipper. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Waskom Coal Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 280.

Finding that the consignee did not waive misdelivery held warranted. Hines v. Jordan (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 633.

26. Loss or Injury to goods.—Railroad held not liable for loss of oil by reason of the valve being open when the top of tank was removed at destination; the tank being filled by plaintiff. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Oriental Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 601.

Where precooling of refrigerator cars took place after delivery of fresh vegetables to carrier, precooling and icing cars is attributable to, not to shipper, but to carrier. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Sprague (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 657.

If a carrier receives the quantity of wheat stated in the bill of lading, and delivers a less quantity, it is liable for the difference. Baker v. H. Dittlinger Roller Mills Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 788.

When a common carrier receives goods for shipment, it insures their delivery in accordance with bill of lading, unless the loss is occasioned by act of God, or of a public enemy, or by reason of inherent defect or vice of goods or animals, or on account of fault of consignee. Mistrout-Calahan Co. v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 775.

Railroad accepting perishable goods requiring cars and equipment of a peculiar kind, undertakes, in the absence of some fact changing the nature of the undertaking, that it has such cars and equipment, and that it will properly use them in the transportation of such property. Pt. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Strickland (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 419.

Ordinarily a carrier’s liability for injury to a shipment will cease when goods are refused by consignee, although damaged. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Iversen (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 908.

If carload of apples was not rendered worthless in transit, it was consignee’s duty to accept on arrival, and if he wrongfully refused, he should suffer loss incident to further holding of apples until they could be lawfully disposed of by railway. Quannah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Novit (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 496.

Where something required by law, or contract, remains to be done by the shipper after the goods are put into the hands of the carrier, before they are transported, the carrier does not become liable until the goods are ready for shipment, a rule which does not require the shipper to give notice that the shipment is ready for transportation, where the carrier has already been informed that it will be by the time the carrier can move, and has agreed to transport it. Hines v. Steele (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 606.

Where cattle have been placed in defendant’s pen for immediate shipment over defendant’s railroad, and part of them have actually been placed on the cars, the cattle are in the custody of defendant as a carrier, and not as a warehouseman. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Trawick, 80 Tex. 270, 15 S. W. 568.

Where a seller of wheat shipped it by rail to his order, with a draft and bill of lading attached, and the carrier delivered it to a wharf company, which was the agent of the purchaser authorized to receive it, the carrier thereafter owed no legal duty relative to the protection of the wheat. Ft. Worth Elevators Co. v. Keel & Son (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 481.

31. Deviation.—Where agent of carrier consented to cause diversion of shipment and secured change in destination, and by negligently giving erroneous directions concerning consignee caused loss, carrier was liable. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Cummer Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 617 holding on rehearing that failure of carrier correctly to designate consignee was not proximate cause of loss.

32. Directions of shipper.—When shipment is in charge of owner's representative, and carrier obeys his instructions, it is not liable for resultant damage. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Persky (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 606.

35. Act of God, vis major, or inevitable accident.—An act of God, which releases carrier, is one resulting from such force in nature as could not reasonably have been foreseen and provided against (Words and Phrases, vol. 1, p. 118). Mistrot-Calahan Co. v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 775, holding carrier liable for loss of goods, where, after storm had begun and water was rising, carrier could by use of reasonable diligence have removed goods to a place of safety.

Storm held proximate cause of loss of shipment by fire. Ft. Worth Elevators Co. v. Keel & Son (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 481.

Evidence held insufficient to show that there was no leakage in a car carrying wheat. Baker v. H. Dittlinger Roller Mills Co. (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 798.

The requirement that the consignee to recover for loss of goods must show that they were delivered to the carrier does not require the proof to be such as to shut out every possibility of error, but requires only such proof as will convince a reasonable man. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Rosenthal Dry Goods Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 167, holding proof sufficient.

Evidence held to show carload of rice became wet and was damaged during transportation. Texas & P. O. B. Co. v. Pipkin (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 757.

In action for loss of goods by fire while awaiting transportation, plaintiff makes a prima facie case of negligence by proof of delivery of the goods to the carrier and non-delivery by the carrier at destination. Brass v. Texarkana & Ft. Smith Ry. Co., 110 Tex. 281, 18 S. W. 1040.

Testimony that goods were delivered by warehousemen to initial carrier in good order, coupled with a bill of lading acknowledging receipt of the goods apparently in good order, was sufficient to show delivery to initial carrier in good order. Baker v. Lyons (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1099.

41. Damages.—Where injury to goods in transit does not render them worthless, the shipper refusing to accept them, while not entitled to recover their value, may recover for the injury. Patterson & Roberts v. Quannah, A. & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1163.

Carrier notified that delay would cause plaintiff's employer to be idle, held liable for special damages. Quannah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 522.

In action for damages to carload of apples, measure of damages is difference in market value of apples in condition in which they arrived and value at time and in condition they would have arrived but for carrier's negligence. Id.

Where plaintiff did not receive carload of apples in damaged condition, so that expense of retailing was not incurred, market value of apples, if sold at retail, was not proper measure of recovery from railroad. Id.

In an action for damages from delay or detention, the actual injury to the property is the measure of damages. Funhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Talmage (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 382.

Where railroad had no notice of any special or contract price and the consignee buyer refused to accept shipment because not delivered within a reasonable time, held that damages sustained by seller and consignor was the difference between the market value of the goods including freight charges at the time they should have been delivered and their market value at the time plaintiff afterwards disposed of them. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Westbury (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 582.

The measure of damages for loss of household goods is their actual or reasonable value at destination as distinguished from a fanciful or sentimental value. Hines v.
Art. 710 CARRIERS

Carriers.-When household goods in use are injured while being transported by a carrier, the measure of damage is the difference in the actual value just prior to and just subsequent to the injury. Empire Transfer & Storage Co. v. Botto (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 347.

Art. 711. [323] [281] Liability as warehousemen, etc.

Where a carrier repaired automobile injured in shipment, and consignee then refused to accept it, the company thereafter held it only as warehouseman. Houston & T. Ry. Co. v. Iversen (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 608.

Carrier becoming a warehouseman is liable as such for permitting a shipment to remain in a leaky car, though the carrier has no depot or warehouse at the place of destination. Hines v. First Guaranty State Bank of Aubrey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 665.

Under this and the next article, an initial carrier who contracts to transport the goods to destination and there deliver to consignee is liable as a warehouseman for damages to goods while remaining in the car in which they were shipped, after their transport by a connecting carrier. Id.

Cotton compress as agent.—Where a railroad without a suitable warehouse unloaded cotton at a compress company’s warehouse, and placed it in charge of the manager, the compress company was the agent of the railroad, and the negligence of its employees causing destruction of the cotton by fire is attributable to the railroad. Wichita Valley Ry. Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 465.

Consignee of cotton by rail were bound by the custom and usage of the railroad in making delivery of cotton at a compress company’s warehouse. Id.

A railroad company remains liable as a common carrier for goods not discharged from its car, though a third person has agreed with the consignee to unload them, and the car is at the place of discharge; there being no agreement by the consignee to receive the goods on the car, and no notice, or diligence to give notice, of the arrival of the car at that place. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Haynes, 72 Tex. 175, 10 S. W. 388.

Written notice to the consignee of goods from the carrier of their arrival is not necessary, where the consignee has actual notice of the fact. Wichita Valley Ry. Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 465.

The carrier issuing a through bill of lading which, under this article, makes it liable until the goods are delivered, may bind itself to transport beyond its own line under article 731, but its liability as carrier is limited under article 712. If it uses due diligence to notify the consignee and the goods are not taken by the consignee within a reasonable time after such notice, after which time the carrier is liable only as warehouseman. Hines v. First Guaranty State Bank of Aubrey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 668.

Where the consignee’s agent was notified of the arrival of the goods but did not attempt to remove the goods for four days thereafter, a reasonable time for removal had expired, and the carrier was liable only as warehouseman. Id.

Art. 712. [324] [282] Diligence as to delivery.

Notice.—See notes under art. 711.

Consignee of cotton who intends to sell it to other dealers at destination, cannot hold railroad by strict liability as carrier after due notice that it had been unloaded at compress company’s warehouse, when he fails to show any effort to relieve the railroad of its responsibility; the railroad being liable under art. 712, only as a warehouseman. Wichita Valley Ry. Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 465. See, also, Hines v. First Guaranty State Bank of Aubrey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 668.

Art. 713. [325] [283] Shall forward in good order, etc.

Commencement of liability as carrier.—See note 30 under art. 710.

After cattle have been delivered to and accepted by a railroad company for immediate shipment, the company is liable as a common carrier for damages to the cattle from the time of delivery to it, though statute provides that the shipment shall be considered as having commenced from the time of signing the bill of lading (East Line & R. R. Ry. Co. v. Hall, 64 Tex. 615, followed. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 496, and Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. McCorquodale, 71 Tex. 46, 9 S. W. 89, distinguished). International & G. N. R. Co. v. Dimmit County Pasture Co., 5 Civ. App. 186, 23 S. W. 754.

Art. 714. [326] [284] Shall feed and water live stock.

Duty and liability of carrier in general.—If the stock is transported in cars not properly constructed for feeding and watering, then it becomes the duty of the carrier to furnish places where the stock may be unloaded, watered, and fed, without injury, in any kind of weather. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. McRae, 82 Tex. 614, 18 S. W. 673, 27 Am. St. Rep. 925.

The term “fill,” used in relation to shipments of live stock, means feeding and watering stock just prior to sale so as to increase their weight and thus enhance their value. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. West Bros. (Com. App.) 297 S. W. 918.

Where railroad’s agents, knowing that train was delayed, refused to permit shipper to unload stock for feed and water, and where because of such refusal the stock stood in... cars at certain station for about 17 hours without water, the railroad was negligent, even though the delay was unavoidable. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Cliftt (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 682.

If a shipment be under a shipper's order bill of lading, it is a conversion by carrier to turn the car over to the consignee before payment of the draft. Patterson & Roberts v. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1163.

Art. 724. Duties and powers of railroad commission.

726. Notice of such sale.

Art. 725. [327] [285] Unclaimed freight may be sold, when and how.

See Ball v. Beaty (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 552.
Art. 726. [328] [286] Notice of such sale.

See 1918 Supp., arts. 6016½-6016¾, as to newspaper publication instead of posting. Ball v. Beatty (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 552.

Art. 729. [331] [289] Carrier shall sell perishable property, when.

Conversion.—If goods shipped be perishable, and the carrier sells in conformity with the statute, it is not liable for conversion if it tenders the balance of proceeds of sale, after deduction for demurrage and advertising charges. Patterson & Roberts v. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1163.

A verdict for carrier should not be permitted, it appearing it sold the goods under the statute as to perishable property, and, after demurrage and advertising charges, has a balance belonging to plaintiff. Id.

CHAPTER FOUR

CONNECTING LINES OF COMMON CARRIERS

Art. 731. Connecting lines of common carriers defined.

—All common carriers in this State, over whose transportation lines, or parts thereof, is transported any freight, baggage or other property received by either of such carriers for shipment or transportation between points in this State, on a contract for carriage recognized, acquiesced in, or acted upon by such carriers shall, with respect to the undertaking and matter of such transportation be considered and construed to be connecting lines; and such lines shall be deemed and held to be agents of each other, each the agent of the others, and all the others the agents of each, and shall be deemed and held to be under a contract with each other and with the shipper, owner and consignee of such property for the sage and speedy transportation thereof from point of shipment to destination; and such contract as to the shipper, owner or consignee of such property shall be deemed and held to be the contract of each of such common carriers. The provisions of this Act shall apply whether the routine of such freight, baggage or other property be chosen by the owner or his agents, or by the initial carrier to whom such property is delivered and in any suit brought hereunder, the rights, duties, liabilities of the parties shall be determined by the initial contract executed by and between the owner, shipper or his or her duly authorized agents and the initial carrier, unless it be proved that a subsequent contract supported by a valuable consideration moving to the owner or shipper, in addition to that of the initial contract, was executed by such owner, shipper or his or their duly authorized agents with a subsequent connecting carrier handling the shipment, and the transportation of a caretaker shall not be deemed to be such valuable consideration. In any of the courts of this State, any bill of lading, waybill, receipt, check or other instrument issued by either of such carriers, or other proof showing that either of them has received such freight, baggage or other property for shipment or transportation, shall constitute prima facie evidence of the subsistence of the relations, duties and liabilities of such carrier as herein defined and prescribed, notwithstanding any stipulations or attempted stipulations to the contrary by such carrier, or either of them and any stipulation contained in any contract contrary to any of the provisions of this Act shall be void. [Acts 1895, p. 186, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 165, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Through shipment and duties and liabilities of initial carriers in general.—Shipment having been on a through bill of lading, each of the carriers is responsible for damages to the goods in transit. Patterson & Roberts v. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1183.

In action against carrier for refusing to forward goods via a connecting line, an erroneous statement of route in billing does not excuse defendant, who knew such statement was erroneous and refused to forward for other reasons. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 332.

Carrier was liable for negligence in diverting shipment, resulting in loss of the goods, though negligence of agent was not sole cause of loss, but concurred with that of connecting carrier. Texas Midland R. Co. v. Cummer Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 617.

In suit against initial carrier for damages to shipment of cattle, held, there was no "through shipment" within the statute. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Lock (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 181.

A bill of lading in which the blanks left for stations named on the railroad company's line were not filled, held a contract for through shipment between points within the state within the meaning of the statute, notwithstanding the bill provided it was not to be treated as a through shipment to a point off company's road. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Texas and Pacific Bros. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 244.

Where a connecting carrier transporting a shipment of live stock delivers it to another road acting as its agent, and not as a connecting carrier, to be switched to stockyards for unloading at destination, the initial carrier is liable for injuries sustained during such switching operations; the destination of the shipment being the stockyards and not the railroad yards. Rio Grande, E. P, & S. F. R. Co. v. Kraft & Maderø (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 981.

A carrier should notify a shipper of stock of a crowded and congested condition at a connecting point which would cause delay in shipments, and, failing to do so, such congested condition would be no excuse for delay in shipment. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Hasse (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 448.

Carrier, having contracted to deliver a shipment of stock to certain parties at a certain point, could not delegate its duty to provide proper facilities for delivering the stock in question to a switching company and thereby escape liability for the negligence of the switching company, under art. 6687. Id.

Switching company, although a transportation company, held not a connecting carrier. Id.

Where carrier undertook transportation and delivery of stock at a certain point and employed a switching company as its agent and instrumentality to make the delivery, the switching company was its agent for whose negligence it was as much liable as for negligence occurring on its own line, and it was liable for damages to the cattle and loss occasioned by unreasonable delay. Id.

Connecting carrier by acting on bill of lading for a through shipment issued by the initial carrier, receiving the goods, and not issuing a bill of lading of its own, makes it its own. International & Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Kansas City Produce Co. (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 254.

Where cattle were shipped by initial carrier and other connecting carrier, the initial carrier was liable for the entire damages sustained in the shipment; but each of the connecting carriers was liable only for such damages as may have resulted in consequence of its own negligence. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Hill (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 952.

To recover from a terminal carrier damages caused by preceding carriers, plaintiff must show shipment on a contract for through carriage, recognized, acquiesced in, or acted upon by the carriers. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Cox (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1043.

A terminal carrier was not liable at common law for shortage in the quantity of oats in a car as stated in a diversion order issued by it on the original bill of lading, where the loss occurred before the car was delivered to it, and it is not made liable for such loss by any statute, whether the shipment was Interstate or intrastate. Lancaster v. Smith (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 460.

Notice of special damages.—Under the statute, notice to initial carrier that hogs shipped on through bill of lading are to be exhibited binds connecting carrier. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Bell (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 322.

Under joint contract for shipment of hogs, knowledge of one carrier that they are for exhibition purposes binds other. Id.

The statute is inapplicable to carrier transporting hogs under separate contract, and such carrier is not bound by knowledge of carrier from whom it received shipment.

—Id.

Interstate commerce.—On the adoption of the Carmack Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8604a, 8604aa), all laws and regulations of the various states affecting interstate transportation of freight were superseded and the federal control under the amendment became exclusive. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Miller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 546.

The terminal carrier cannot waive provision as to damages of the standard form bill of lading issued as required by an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission pursuant to the Carmack Amendment of the Interstate Commerce Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8604a, 8604aa). Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Reichardt & Schulte Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 266.

Consignees held entitled to recover from terminal carrier for damage only on basis stipulated by bill of lading. Id.

Terminal carrier held required to respond only for such damages as occurred to the shipment on its own line. Id.

Consignees' damages must be apportioned. Id.

Where a shipment of live stock is interstate, the terms of the original bill of lading issued by the initial carrier cover the entire transportation and the liability of the initial carrier, notwithstanding that new bills of lading are issued by the connecting carrier. Rio Grande, E. P. & S. F. R. Co. v. Kraft & Madero (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 981.

Railway Company paying for such switching services, and issuing a through bill of lading to the shipper held the initial carrier, within the Carmack Amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8604a, 8604aa), and was liable for damages to the shipment in transit. Houston & T. W. T. Ry. Co. v. Houston Packing Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 316.

Limitation of liability to carrier's own line.—Where a road acting as agent of initial carrier switched shipment of poultry from initial carrier's tracks at destination to place of business of shipper, the initial carrier was liable, for damage from delay and rough handling in switching, though bill of lading limited liability to damage on own line. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Wright-Herndon Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 216.

A shipper's order bill of lading which provided that the rights of shipper and all carriers transporting the grain were to be fixed thereby as to the entire transportation between points necessitating the use of two connecting lines, is a "through bill of lading," within the statute making carriers jointly liable, notwithstanding it stipulates otherwise. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Kemp (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 695.

Where defendant initial carrier, which refused to enter into contract for through shipment, required a contract limiting liability to damage occurring on its own lines, and agreed only to transport to the end of its lines, there could be no recovery for loss or injury occurring on lines of connecting carrier. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Lock (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 181.

Initial carrier may limit its liability for damages to loss or injury to shipments occurring on its own line of railway. Id.

Where live stock was shipped over the lines of connecting carriers, but each carrier made an independent contract with the shipper, the initial carrier, limiting its liability to its own line, was not liable for damages accruing upon the lines of the connecting line. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Hallam (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 899.

Where cattle were shipped over three lines under a contract that "the carrier shall not be held or deemed liable for anything in connection with said stock beyond its own line of road, and in no event shall one carrier be liable for the negligence of another," such contract "to inure to the benefit of all carriers," the liability of a connecting carrier was confined to such damages as might result from its own negligence, and there was no joint liability. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clarendon Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 866.

The initial carrier was liable for the entire damage, where cattle were lost while the shipment was in its hands and there was shrinkage by reason of delay on all of the lines. Id.

Where initial carrier limited its liability to damage occurring on its line and did not receive goods on through contract, it was not jointly liable under the statute with connecting carriers for damages to shipment during transportation; art. 1549, subd. 25, providing for apportionment of damage between the carriers, being applicable in such case. Crenwelge v. Ponder (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 145.

Pleading.—See notes under art. 1327.

Sufficiency of evidence.—Terminal carrier's O. K. on goods received from connecting carrier, the same being damaged when received by consignee, held to show that damage occurred while goods were in terminal carrier's possession. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 244.

In action for damages to horses shipped, from rough handling and delay, evidence held to sustain verdict against initial carrier as well as connecting carriers. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Gibbons (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 322.
Art. 732, does not relieve party suing of the burden of alleging and proving the negligence of other connecting line upon which the cause of action is based. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 552.

Art. 732. [331b] Liability of connecting lines.—For any damage for injury or damage to, or loss or delay of, any freight, baggage or other property sustained anywhere during the transportation over connecting lines or either of them, as contemplated and defined in the next preceding Article of this Chapter, either or all of such connecting carriers as the person or persons sustaining such damage may elect to sue therefor in this State, shall be held liable to such person or persons. The provisions of Article 1830, subdivision 25 of the Revised Civil Statutes of 1911, allowing an apportionment of damage, shall not be applicable to suits brought by such person or persons under the provisions of this Act, except upon the plaintiff’s request. Any carrier or carriers held liable under the provisions of this Act, shall be entitled in a proper subsequent action to recover the amount or any loss, damage or injury it has been required to pay under this Act, from the carrier or carriers through whose negligence, the loss, damage or injury was sustained, together with all costs of suit; and for the purpose of such recovery, it shall only be necessary that the carrier against whom judgment was had to show, which carrier or carriers caused the loss or damage and produce satisfactory evidence, that the judgment rendered against it has been paid; and in this latter action between the carriers, the provisions of Article 1830, subdivision 25 shall be applicable. [Acts 1895, p. 186, § 2; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 165, § 2.]

CHAPTER FIVE

PIPE LINES

Article 732½. Certain persons, etc., declared to be common carriers.

Right of way.—Corporations operating public pipe lines being common carriers may use way reserved in plat and deed. Gulf Sulphur Co. v. Ryman (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 319.
CERTIORARI TO THE COUNTY COURT

Art. 733. Certiorari to county court, issued when.

Art. 734. Application for.

Article 733. Certiorari to county court, issued when.

Cited, United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. of Baltimore, Md., v. Lowry (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 522.

On certiorari by wards to review sale of ward’s land on application of guardian, it cannot be determined whether or not an order of a certain date recited in deed to purchaser was in fact never made; and a finding as to the existence of the order is surplusage. Schwind v. Goodman (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 579, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Goodman v. Schwind, 186 S. W. 282.

— Discretionary power of court.—Certiorari to set aside a guardian’s sale of ward’s land because he became clerk of the probate court, held not a matter of right. Schwind v. Goodman (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 579, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Goodman v. Schwind, 186 S. W. 282.

Art. 734. [333] [291] Application for.

Pleading.—An order confirming administrator’s sale of land for one-fourth of its actual value is so grossly unjust to the heirs as to be subject to revision by certiorari, though petition for certiorari does not allege fraud or mistake. Lee v. Benzies (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 768.

Petition for certiorari to revise proceedings for partition of a decedent’s estate held not subject to general demurrer. Reynolds v. Prestidge (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 358.

There is no misjoinder of causes of action, though the right of petitioner under the will to land partitioned to others is asserted. 1d.

— Amendment.—An amendment, alleging that there was no order of a certain date, is abandonment of the cause of action for relief from such order. Schwind v. Goodman (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 575, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Goodman v. Schwind, 186 S. W. 282.

Art. 739. [338] [296] Citation as in ordinary cases.

Art. 740. [339] [297] Trial de novo; judgment to be certified below.

Trial de novo.—The proceedings in the district court are not collateral attacks upon the decision in the probate court, and the latter may be reviewed without the probate court having an opportunity to correct its errors. Lineh v. Broad, 70 Tex. 92, 6 S. W. 761.

The district court is confined to facts alleged, as well as grounds of error specified, in the application. McAllen v. Wood (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 433.

CERTIORARI TO JUSTICES' COURTS

Art. 742. Certiorari to justices' courts.

Art. 743. On order of the county or district court or judge.

Art. 744. Affidavit of sufficient cause.

Art. 745. What application for certiorari must show.

Article 742. [341] [299] Certiorari to justices' courts.

Discretion of court.—Certiorari to review a justice court judgment is not granted as a matter of right. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Boyce (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 112.

Mandamus.—Writs of mandamus will not be issued where there is a clear legal remedy, as by certiorari, by which the statute authorizes a cause to be removed from justice court to the county court. Hardin v. Hamilton (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 679.

Art. 743. [342] [300] On order of the county or district court or judge.

Necessity and requisites of affidavit.—An affidavit by one not shown to be petitioner's attorney, or to have knowledge of facts alleged in petition, is insufficient. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Boyce (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 112.

Art. 746. [345] [303] What application for certiorari must show.

Want of jurisdiction.—Where petition for certiorari merely states the value of the property involved, and not what plaintiff in his pleading in a justice court alleged it to be, and there is no claim of fraud, it will be presumed that plaintiff stated a case within the jurisdiction of the justice court. Brown v. Green (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 357.

Injustice to applicant.—Petition held to show prima facie, that an injustice had been done by justice's judgment rendered in petitioner's absence without his negligence. Nelson v. Hart (Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 831.

Petition for certiorari to justice court alleging that uncontradicted evidence showed plaintiff in replevin was owner and entitled to possession of diamond in question, held to set forth substance of facts showing that injustice had been done. Hall v. Collier (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 880.

A petition for certiorari to the justice court should state sufficient facts to show that another trial would probably result in a different judgment, so that mere general averments of no liability are insufficient. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Boyce (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 112.

Negligence of applicant.—A petition for certiorari to review a justice court default judgment showing an alleged excuse for absence from the trial, but setting up no sufficient excuse for failure to appear or answer, is insufficient. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Boyce (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 112.

Petitioner for certiorari, held not chargeable with his attorney's neglect to present and sustain plea of privilege. Poole v. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 706.

Negligence of defendant's attorney in allowing default judgment to be entered, does not defeat defendants' right to certiorari. Hill v. Pavelka (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 709.

Art. 748. [347] [305] Bond with sureties required.

Necessity and requisites of bond.—A condition, that the applicant shall prosecute his suit to effect, will be stricken out as surplusage. Nehms v. Draub (Civ. App.) 22 S. W. 996.

Art. 754. [353] [311] Motion to dismiss at first term.

Grounds for dismissal.—Motion to dismiss certiorari must be confined to statutory grounds. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Lochridge & Denny (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 266.

Hearing of motion.—Neither petition for dismissal of certiorari directed to justice of peace nor court's order as to time when writ was ordered can be contradicted by affidavit or oral evidence. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Lochridge & Denny (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 266.

Dismissal as reviewing judgment below.—Final judgment rendered by justice of the peace, vacated when a petition for certiorari was granted by county court, is not revived by the dismissal of the cause by the county court. Texas Novelty Advertising Co. v. Bay Trading Co. (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 729.

Art. 759. [358] [316] New matter may be pleaded, etc.

New cause of action, defense, set-off or counterclaim.—Plea of sheriff, proceeded against for not turning over to execution creditor money collected under execution, acknowledging the collection, but averring that he had applied the money on an execution against such creditor, not setting up any cause of action against plaintiff, is not one of "set-off" or "counterclaim," but is a permissible new plea in confession and avoidance (quoting Words and Phrases, Set-Off; see, also, Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Counterclaim). Branscum v. Reese (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 871.

In suit in justice court by a bank on a check against the maker and the payee, who had deposited the check for collection, it having been lost, the maker refusing to give a new one, so that the bank charged back the payee's account, the evidence showing that defendant maker was liable on the check to defendant payee, and both the bank and the payee having secured judgments against him, by amending his pleadings in the county court, asking judgment in his favor against defendant maker for the amount of the check, defendant payee sought neither to enlarge nor change defendant maker's liability, and the amendment was proper under this article. R. W. Taylor & Co. v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1102.

Art. 760. [359] [317] Trial de novo.

Trial de novo.—Where justice of peace sent up record on certiorari on one defendant's petition, and writ was properly issued, reciting that both defendants had petitioned, court acquiring jurisdiction of entire cause. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Lochridge & Denny (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 266.

Where plaintiff took nonsuit against one defendant, who had removed case on certiorari, this did not affect writ as to other defendant. Id.
CITIES AND TOWNS

GENERAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO CITIES

Art. 762. Cities, towns and villages may accept provisions of this title. Any incorporated city, town or village in this State containing 600 inhabitants or over, including those incorporated under Chapter 14 of this Title, or Chapter 11 of Title 18 of the Revised Statutes of 1895, and other laws, general and special, and any incorporated city, town or village of whatever population containing one or more manufacturing establishments within the corporate limits, and which may be subject to the provisions of the Act known as “Chapter 23 of the Acts of the Regular Session of the 34th Legislature, Page 38,” which was approved by the Governor on February 25th, 1915, or any amendments thereto, may accept the provisions of this Title relating to cities and towns, in lieu of any existing Charter, by a two-thirds vote of the Council of such city, town or village, which action by the Council shall be had at a regular meeting thereof, and entered upon the journal of their proceedings, and a copy of the same, signed by the Mayor and attested by the Clerk or Secretary under the corporate seal, filed and recorded in the office of the Clerk of the County Court in which such city, town or village is situated, and the provisions of this Title shall be in force, and all acts theretofore passed incorporating said city, town or village which may be in force by virtue of any existing Charter, shall be repealed from and after the filing of said copy of their proceedings, as aforesaid. When such city, town or village is so incorporated as herein provided, the same shall be known as a city or town, subject to the provisions of this Title relating to cities and towns, and vested with all the rights, powers, privileges, immunities and franchises therein conferred.
Art. 762 [Acts 1881, p. 115; Acts 1885, p. 57; Acts 1915, 34th Leg., ch. 34, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 66, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

App. v. City incorporated under title 22, c. 14, which formerly provided for the organization of a "town or village" containing 200, and less than 1,000, inhabitants, cannot reorganize under this chapter, even though it has increased to more than 1,000 inhabitants. Harness v. State, 76 Tex. 566, 13 S. W. 553.

Effect of special charter.—Provisions of city charter specially granted to city by Legislature have the same force and effect as any other positive statutory law of the state. Cawthon v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 736.

2. Power of legislature.—The Legislature has power to grant cities special charters, and clothe them with authority to carry out the purposes of the charter, provided that the power granted shall not violate any provisions of the Constitution, or be in derogation of any general law of the state, and are reasonable and not arbitrary and oppressive. Ex parte Stallcup (Cr. App.) 220 S. W. 847.

4. Powers—in general.—Municipalities or other legislative instrumentalities may exercise only such legislative powers as are expressly or by implication delegated to them by the Legislature. Lindsay v. Dallas Consol. St. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 207.

A city has no vested rights in powers conferred upon it or its officers for civil, political, or administrative purposes. Houston v. Gonzales Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 963.

7. Incidental.—A municipal corporation possesses powers necessarily or fairly implied in or incident to powers expressly granted and powers essential to accomplishment of declared purposes of corporation, not simply convenient, but indispensable, and any reasonable right to existence of power is resolved by courts against corporation. Choice v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 733.

15. Contracts.—For lighting, water supply, etc.—It is the duty of municipal governments to furnish citizens with water, lights, streets, and other public conveniences necessary for their protection and benefit; but it may contract with some other person or corporation to perform that service for it. Neal v. San Antonio Water Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 35.

23. Provision for payment of debts.—A warrant evidencing an attempt by a city to incur a debt without at the same time complying with the constitutional provision requiring the levy of a tax to meet interest and sinking fund is absolutely void. City of Aransas Pass v. Eureka Fire Hose Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 330.

Debts for the ordinary current expenses of a city payable within a year out of the incoming revenues do not come within the purview of Cost, art. 11, § 7, providing that no debt shall be incurred unless provision is made for levying and collecting a tax to pay the interest and provide sinking fund, and hence a warrant given for fire hose with the intention that it be paid out of the current revenues did not come within the purview of such constitutional inhibition. Id.

In an action on a warrant in payment of purchase price for hose, evidence held to justify a finding that the purchase price was to be paid out of current revenues of the city for the year. Id.

23½. Proprietary or governmental capacity.—In hauling sand with its teams and distributing it generally, the city of Houston was simply acting in its proprietary capacity, and in adjusting claims for damages arising therefrom it continues to act in that capacity, and the courts recognized the distinction between proprietary and governmental capacity. Cawthorn v. City of Houston (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 701.

27. Actions by or against.—A claim for salary on ground of illegal discharge is not of the class of claims of which under the charter notice must be given as a condition precedent to right to sue. City of San Antonio v. Newnam (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 191.

While remedies, remedial rights, and process are subject to legislative control, to control law, requiring presentation of claim to the city council for redress precedent to suit for injunction for irreparable injury, would make it invalid, as amounting to a denial of all remedy. El Paso Union Passenger Depot Co. v. Look (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 714.

El Paso City Charter, § 71, providing that no suit of any nature shall be maintained against the city, without proving and proving previous application to city council for redress being in derogation of common-law right, must be strictly construed. Id.

As provisions requiring notice are in derogation of common right and should be construed with reasonable strictness and not extended by implication, the provision in the San Antonio charter that before the city should be liable for damages of any kind the person injured or some one in behalf of such person shall give written notice held to apply to personal injuries, and not injuries to property. City of San Antonio v. Pfeiffer (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 207.

A municipal corporation can seek protection of the public rights by injunction in a court of equity on the same footing as private persons and corporations may seek redress. Sutherland v. City of Winnehoro (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 63.

The provision of Houston City Charter, art. 9, § 11, that before suing the city and within 90 days after personal injury, party shall have the mayor and city council notified of the injury, is in derogation of common law, and should be construed with reasonable strictness, and applies to city employees as well as others. Cawthorn v. City of Houston (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 701.

Such provision will be upheld, and must be strictly complied with, and is only a prerequisite to the assertion in court of a claim of liability by the injured party. Id.

In a personal injury action against the city, where the negligence complained of resulted in the caving in of a sand bank upon the plaintiff while he was hauling sand for the city, such provision is applicable. Id.

The mayor and commissioners of the city are not prohibited from waiving the requirement and they should be permitted to do so, a waiver being the voluntary relinquishment of a known right. Id.

A city commissioner authorized by the mayor and commissioners to approach a claimant for personal injuries and offer him a compromise and invite him to their office to discuss it, may be deemed authorized to waive strict compliance therewith. Id.

Whether or not the mayor and council intended to waive strict compliance with such requirement, where the mayor and commissioners, through their agent, one of the commissioners, so conducted themselves so as to full claimant into a sense of security and cause him to think they were waiving such charter provision, the city is estopped to assert noncompliance therewith. Id.

Under such provision, notice is a condition precedent to right of action, so that plaintiffs, suing the city, must affirmatively allege the prescribed notice, if applicable to the facts pleaded, unless the city has waived the provision or become estopped from asserting it. Id.

Art. 770. May purchase, construct and operate systems inside or outside limits, and regulate, etc.

Personal injuries.—Galveston City Charter, § 47, exempting the city from personal injury liability, is limited to injuries caused by or in the prosecution of public improvements within the city, and does not extend to an injury occurring outside the city to a servant assisting in constructing a water main authorized by section 34, paragraph R. Leslie v. City of Galveston (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 438.

Art. 773. [384] [343] Limits of corporation to remain the same until extended, etc.

Extension of limits.—The town of Nacogdoches was reincorporated in 1859, and its corporate organization kept up at intervals till 1882. In 1887, steps were taken as for the original incorporation of a city or town, with boundaries larger than those of the original town. Held, that the corporation created in 1859 could not be presumed to be dissolved by the failure to elect officers; and that as Rev. St. art. 240, provides the only manner in which a city or town may surrender its corporate existence, and reincorporate under the general law, and article 343 provides that the boundaries of such a city shall remain as they were fixed by the former charter, unless additional territory be afterwards annexed in the manner therein prescribed, the proceedings had in 1887 did not create a corporation, nor dissolve the one previously existing. State v. Dunson, 71 Tex. 65, 9 S. W. 103.

Power of Legislature to extend city limits could by statute be delegated to the voters of the city. Cohen v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 265 S. W. 787.

Art. 773a. Cities of 100,000 and under 150,000 may amend their charters so as to extend limits.—Any city having a population of one hundred thousand and under one hundred and fifty thousand, as shown by the last United States census, shall have the power and authority to amend its charter so as to extend its boundary limits by annexing additional territory adjacent and contiguous to such city where the territory so annexed does not include any incorporated city or town having more than five thousand inhabitants according to last United States census. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 101, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 49, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Took effect Nov. 15, 1921. Sec. 5 of the act repeals all laws in conflict. The title, but not the enacting part, purports to amend Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 101.

Art. 773b. Same; submission to voters.—The Legislative or governing body of any city having a population of one hundred thousand and under one hundred and fifty thousand, may, upon its own motion, and shall upon the petition of at least ten per cent. of the qualified voters of said city as shown by the last preceding general election, submit such proposed amendment to a vote of the qualified voters of such city of one hundred thousand or more population, which election shall be held as provided by Chapter 147 of the Acts of the Regular Session of the Thirty-third Legislature. [Vernon’s Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 1096a], [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 101, § 2; Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 49, § 2.]

Art. 773c. Effect of adoption of amendment.—In the event such amendment is adopted by a majority vote of those voting at such election and such annexed territory shall include any incorporated city or town of five thousand inhabitants, or less, then, from and after the adoption of such amendment, the incorporation of such city or town of five thousand inhabitants or less, shall be abolished and shall cease to exist and all record books, public property; public buildings, money on hand, credit accounts and other assets of the annexed incorporated city or town shall become the property of said larger city and shall be turned over to the officers thereof, and by such annexation the officers existing in the smaller municipality shall be abolished and the persons holding such offices shall not be entitled to further remuneration or compensation.

All legal outstanding liabilities of such smaller city shall be assumed by the enlarged city, and whenever such annexed city or town shall have on hand any bond funds for public improvements and not already appropriated or contracted for, such money shall be kept in a separate special fund and devoted to public improvements in the territory for which such bonds were voted, and shall not be diverted or used for any other purpose. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 101, § 3; Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 49, § 3.]

Art. 773d. Revenues of annexed city or town.—After such annexation all claims, fines, debts and taxes due or payable to the annexed city or town shall thereupon become due and payable to said larger city and shall be collected by it; provided that in the event taxes for the current year shall have been duly assessed prior to said annexation, then, the amount so assessed shall remain as the amounts due and payable from the inhabitants of such annexed city or town for such current year. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 101, § 4; Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 49, § 4.]

Art. 776a. Validating incorporations.—That each charter and each act of incorporation adopted by the qualified voters of cities of over five thousand inhabitants that have incorporated under Chapter 147, page 307, Acts of the Regular Session of the 33rd Legislature, 1913, prior to December 15, 1915, and filed in the office of the Secretary of State, the population of which was less than five thousand inhabitants, as shown by the United States Census of 1910, but which, at the time of the adoption of the charter or act of incorporation, was in excess of five thousand inhabitants according to an official census taken under the direction and supervision of the city council, be and the same are hereby validated and are hereby declared to be in full force and effect the same as if adopted in strict compliance with the requirements of said Chapter 147, page 307, Acts of the Regular Session of the 33rd Legislature, 1913, and this Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 68, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 27, 1918, date of adjournment.

Proceedings not validated.—This act cannot validate an amendment to a home rule charter extending the boundaries of the city which was unconstitutional. City of Waco v. Higginson (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 1981.

Art. 781. [574] [503] Adjoining inhabitants may become part of city, how.

Cited, Koy v. Schneider, 110 Tex. 389, 221 S. W. 880.
Manner of voting.—Under this article, the vote need not be by ballot, but may be by any method satisfactory to the voters and the council. (Graham v. City of Greenville, 67 Tex. 62, 2 S. W. 742, followed.) State v. City of Waxahachie, 81 Tex. 626, 17 S. W. 348.

Art. 783a. Cities on navigable streams and under special charters may extend limits; may acquire land for improvement of navigation, etc.

Construction of railroad.—This article does not authorize a city upon passage of an ordinance thereunder to construct a steam railroad along a street included in the extended limits. City of Orange v. Rector (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 555.

Art. 783c. Cities may lease oil or mineral lands.—Any town or City in this State, which has been, or may hereafter be chartered or organized, under the General Laws of Texas, or by Special Act or Charter, in which said City or town may own oil or mineral lands, shall have the power and right to lease such oil or mineral lands for the benefit of such town or city, provided that such town or city shall not lease for such purposes any street or alley or public square in said town or city, or any land therein dedicated by any person or persons to public uses in such town or city; and provided further that no well shall be drilled within the thickly settled portion of any city or town, nor within two hundred (200) feet of any private residence. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 117, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

CHAPTER TWO

OFFICERS AND THEIR ELECTION

| Art. 784 | Municipal government to consist of certain officers to be elected, etc. |
| Art. 785 | Manner of electing officers, etc. |
| Art. 786 | Election and term of office of mayor and aldermen. |
| Art. 787 | Time of holding election, and returns thereof. |

Article 784. [387] [344] Municipal government consists of what.

Reduction of salary.—In view of this article, and art. 816, as to salaries of city officers, council could not reduce salary of city attorney, which had been fixed by ordinance after adoption of commission plan of government, the charter of which provided that present city attorney should hold over. City of Brownsville v. Kinder (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 446.

Letting office to highest bidder —A city charter, if it purports to authorize the letting by contract to the highest and best bidder of the office of city treasurer, etc., to that extent is unconstitutional. City of Corpus Christi v. Mireur (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 528.

Art. 785. [388] [345] Manner of electing officers, etc.

Art. 786. [389] [346] Election, etc., of mayor and aldermen.

See Kempen v. Bruns (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 643; note under art. 787.

Art. 787. [390] [347] Time of holding election, and returns thereof.

Statute directory.—In view of arts. 605, 2912, this article, and art. 786, as to time during which polls shall be open and when they shall close, are directory. Kempen v. Bruns (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 643.

Bond elections.—In view of arts. 605, 2912, held, that bond election is not invalidated by holding polls open until 7 p. m., in spite of this article and art. 786. Kempen v. Bruns (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 643.
Art. 795. [563] [492] Resignation of officers.
See State v. Brinkerhoff, 66 Tex. 45, 17 S. W. 109; note under art. 797.

Art. 796. [564] [493] Power of city council to remove officers.

Removal—Grounds.—In an action by a removed city officer to recover salary, the burden is upon such officer, to show that reasons for his dismissal, filed by the mayor in compliance with the provision of the city charter, were not the true reasons. Braden v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 282.

In an action against a city for salary by its marshal removed by the mayor, evidence tending to show that he was removed for political reasons and not for incompetency, as stated by the charges filed in accordance with charter, held sufficient to sustain verdict for marshal. City of San Antonio v. Newnam (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 128.

Proceedings for removal.—Where a clerk of a corporation court was removed by the mayor and the removal was thereafter approved by the council, the removal was then effective even though the removal by the mayor was improper by reason of the failure to have reasons for the removal filed at such time. Braden v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 282.

When paper containing the reasons of the mayor of a city for removing the city marshal was placed in the hands of the city clerk for filing as required by the charter, the mayor had complied with the law, and failure of the clerk to file the paper did not render the removal or discharge illegal. City of San Antonio v. Newnam (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 138.

Removal of employés.—The right of a municipal corporation is the same in regard to removal of its employés as is that of an individual or private corporation in the absence of statute. San Antonio Fire Fighters' Local Union No. 84 v. Bell (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 906.

Art. 797. [396] [352] Vacancy, how filled.
Cited, by Goodwin, 69 Tex. 55, 5 S. W. 678.

Resignations.—This article recognizes that resignations may be made; and the election by the city council, of one holding the office of secretary, to the office of recorder, is a sufficient acceptance of his resignation from the former office to enable him to qualify for the latter. State v. Brinkerhoff, 66 Tex. 45, 17 S. W. 109.

Art. 801. [399] [355] City council composed of mayor and aldermen, etc.
See Jones v. State (Cr. App.) 23 S. W. 796.

CHAPTER THREE

DUTIES AND POWERS OF OFFICERS

Art. 806. Powers of the mayor.
806. Powers of the mayor.
809. Duties and powers of the marshal.
809a. Certain cities may dispense with office of marshal, etc.

Art. 812. Powers of city council over officers.
812a. Cities of over 150,000 may fix salaries of certain officers.

Article 806. [403] [359] Powers of the mayor.

Institution of suits.—A suit, begun by the mayor of a city for an injunction to restrain the construction of a proposed warehouse encroaching on a street, which suit was thereafter approved and order prosecuted by the council at a called meeting, is sufficiently authorized by the city. Sutherland v. City of Winnieboro (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 63.

Removal of officers.—Under power in charter for mayor to discharge appointee for any reason he may deem sufficient, discharge for unfitness is valid if mayor thinks him unfit, though he be fit. City of San Antonio v. Newnam (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 191.

Power given a mayor by charter to appoint to office carries with it power to discharge, subject to limitations in the charter. Id.

That an appointee discharged by mayor was fit, and that there were political reasons for discharge, does not prove the mayor believed him fit, making discharge for unfitness invalid. Id.

That a mayor has political reasons for which he might desire the discharge of an appointee, but which under the charter he cannot make for such reasons, does not prevent him making the discharge for another reason. Id.

Art. 809. [407] [483a] [363] Duties and powers of the marshal.
See Pratt v. Brown, 80 Tex. 608, 16 S. W. 443.

Art. 809a. Certain cities may dispense with office of marshal, etc.

Suits against constable.—In a suit for injunction based on an alleged unlawful execution sale by a constable, who had been subsequently appointed town marshal, a complaint failing to show that such constable had qualified as town marshal, and acted as such, held not to state a cause of action; it affirmatively appearing that such constable was acting under the provisions of this article. Torno v. Hochstetler (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 623.

Art. 812. [411] [367] Powers of city council over officers.

Employment of attorney.—A city may, in its discretion, employ any available attorney to represent it before the courts, regardless of what duties may have been assigned to the city attorney. Sutherland v. City of Winnabro (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 63.

Art. 812a. Cities of over 150,000 may fix salaries of certain officers.

—that the municipalities of this State, having a population of more than one hundred and fifty thousand according to the last United States census next preceding the fixing of such salaries or compensations or the enactment of the ordinances prescribing and fixing the same, organized under any special Act of this State or under and by virtue of Constitutional provisions of this State, shall have, and there is hereby delegated to them, respectively, power and authority, acting by and through their respective governing authorities, to fix and prescribe from time to time, and to alter, modify and change the same, a salary or compensation of not exceeding the following sum or amount, anything in any charter of such municipality or any special law to the contrary notwithstanding, to wit:

(1) An annual salary or compensation to be paid the city or corporation judge not exceeding four thousand dollars; city attorney not to exceed six thousand dollars, and city auditor not to exceed four thousand dollars. No salary or compensation of said officers shall be decreased after being fixed and prescribed by said governing authorities during the term of office for which he is elected or appointed. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 21, § 1.]

Took effect June 17, 1920.

CHAPTER FOUR

22 SUPP. V.S.CIV.ST.TEX.—12

177

870. May license hackmen and prescribe their compensation, etc.

872. May license, etc., billiard tables, etc.

877a. May issue warrants to meet current expenses; interest or discount; limit of amount.
Article 816. [569] [498] Salary of officers shall be fixed by city council, etc.

Right to salary.—For a city officer illegally discharged to recover salary, it is not necessary for him to tender his services. City of San Antonio v. Newsam (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 191.

Reduction of salary during term.—In view of arts. 816 and 784, council could not reduce salary of city attorney, which had been fixed by ordinance after adoption of commission plan of government, the charter of which provided that present city attorney should hold over. City of Brownsville v. Kinder (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 446.

Appropriation for salary.—Where ordinance appropriated money “until further commanded by order of the city council” to pay city attorney’s salary, it must be presumed that the appropriation was made within this article, and was intended to provide for payment of officers to be elected in the following year. City of Brownsville v. Kinder (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 446.

Article 817. [464] [418] Power to pass, etc., ordinances, etc., and other powers.

1. Not subject to judicial control except, etc.—A city council, when acting upon subjects over which it has the power to legislate, is an entirely independent lawmaking body, and cannot be interfered with or subjected to inquiry by the courts as to its motives, reasons, or purposes in enacting ordinances. Houston Electric Co. v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 198.

Where the purpose of bonds was to enable the city issuing them to acquire and improve lands for public parks, the matters of how much of the fund was to be spent for the purchase of lands, and how much for their improvement as parks, were of necessity within the control of the city council, whose discretion in the premises is free from judicial control. City of Beaumont v. Matthew Cartwright Land & Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 589.

4. Ordinances in general.—An ordinance is not a “law” in one sense of the word, but is a local law enacting from legislative authority and operative within its sphere as effectively as general law of the sovereignty (citing Words and Phrases, vol. 6, p. 5924; Second Series, vol. 3, p. 77). Choice v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 753.

Under Charter of the City of Beaumont, §§ 14, 41, 45, 76, purchase and improvement by city of land for public park with funds raised by sale of interest-bearing bonds are acts of permanent legislative in regard to which must be evidenced by ordinance duly passed by the city council, and not by its mere resolution. City of Beaumont v. Matthew Cartwright Land & Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 589.

5. — Enactment.—It was not necessary that an ordinance regulating jitney buses passed at three regular meetings of board of commissioners, etc., as required by city charter in the case of ordinances granting franchises; such ordinance not granting a franchise. City of Dallas v. Gill (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1144.

In view of Dallas City Charter, art. 5, subd. 1, art. 2, § 8, subd. 7, art. 2, § 8, subd. 27, and art. 8, § 1, as to powers of board of commissioners and of voters under initiative and referendum, ordinance for licensing jitneys, passed on referendum, held invalid as invading powers of board. Lindsay v. Dallas Consol. St. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 207.

7. — Amendment.—San Antonio ordinance of August 27, 1917, regulating automobiles used for hire, is not invalid as seeking to amend an ordinance by reference to its title. Craddock v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 138 S. W. 634.

Const. art. 3, § 36 prohibiting amendment or revival of statutes by reference to title, held inapplicable to municipal ordinances. Ex parte Parr, 82 Cr. R. 525, 288 S. W. 494.

8. — Repeal.—Laredo city ordinance of May 19, 1884, providing for payment of bonds by revenue derived from taxation, sale of lots, etc., was not repealed by unconstitutional ordinance of December 22, 1884, providing that entire amount be raised by tax levy of 45 cents per $100 in violation of constitutional amendment limiting such levies to 25 cents per $100. City of Laredo v. Frishmuth (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 190.

A city has power to abolish by ordinance a particular street stand for vehicles established by prior ordinance, in the absence of a showing of unreasonableness. Ex parte San Antonio, 57 Cr. R. 200, 220 S. W. 547.

9. — Validity in general.—San Antonio ordinance of August 27, 1917, regulating automobiles used for hire, is not invalid for failure to state, either in preamble or body the existence of an emergency. Craddock v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 634.

That board of commissioners may act arbitrarily under authority granted by city charter or an ordinance does not render ordinance void. Crossman v. City of Galveston (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 128.

A city ordinance, unless expressly authorized by the Legislature, must be reasonable. Invader Oil & Refining Co. of Texas v. City of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 618.

9/4. Title.—The requirement that the title of an act shall embrace its subject does not apply to municipal ordinances. Craddock v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 634.

Rules testing the constitutionality of statutes, in regard to stating the purpose of statute in the caption thereof, are not generally applied to city ordinances. Ex parte Adlolf, 80 Cr. R. 12, 216 S. W. 277.

A caption "An ordinance providing for the proper care of West Hill Cemetery, making it a misdemeanor for persons other than employees of the city of Sherman to do any work therein for the purpose of digging graves or dressing and keeping the lots therein, and prescribing a penalty therefor," does not state a double purpose. Id.

10. Partial invalidity.—Laredo city ordinance of December 22, 1883, is entirely void, since provision authorizing tax levy of 45 cents per $100 in violation of constitutional limitation, is an inseparable part of ordinance all of whose provisions are connected in subject-matter. City of Laredo v. Frishmuth (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 190.

Invalidity of ordinance regulating business of pawnbrokers and junk dealers as to penalties imposed upon pawnbrokers, held to render it void both as to pawnbrokers and junk dealers. Ex parte Goldburg, 82 Cr. R. 475, 200 S. W. 386.

11. Police regulations in general.—Ordinance prohibiting picketing for the purpose of persuading persons from entering places of business to transact business is not unreasonable, vague, or uncertain. Ex parte Stout, 82 Cr. R. 153, 198 S. W. 967, L. R. A. 1918C, 277.

El Paso charter, § 2, empowering city to protect health, life, and property, and to preserve order and security of city and inhabitants, gave power to prohibit loitering or walking back and forth in front of places of business for purpose of persuading persons from entering. Id.

Ordinance regulating business of junk dealers, requiring books of record, reports to chief of police, keeping of each lot separate for two days, and restricting business to hours between 6 a. m. and 7:30, etc., held invalid for unreasonableness. Ex parte Goldburg, 82 Cr. R. 475, 200 S. W. 386.

Legislature may confer upon municipal corporations, by special charter, police powers necessary for protection of public health, safety, and morals. Crossman v. City of Galveston (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 128.

Ordinances authorizing policemen of a city to make arrests without warrant for all violations of law, passed under the charter of the city empowering it to pass such ordinances, are legal. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kriegel (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 1671.

18. Conflict with statute.—Ordinance allowing a moving picture show to remain open on Sunday cannot suspend Pen. Code 1911, art. 302, prohibiting them to run on Sunday with certain films. Zucarro v. State, 82 Cr. R. 1, 197 S. W. 982, L. R. A. 1918B, 554.

A business authorized or regulated by state law cannot be prohibited by ordinance, otherwise than by grant of power in its charter and in accordance with state law or constitutional provisions. Ex parte Goldburg, 82 Cr. R. 475, 200 S. W. 386.

Municipal ordinances on subject as to which there is no state law cannot prescribe penalties, unless authorized by state law, and without express charter authority to levy penalties ordinance must conform to any general statute authorizing penalties. Id.

Penalties under ordinances which are same as state law must conform strictly to penalties prescribed by state law, and cannot exceed them, and must not conflict with state law or Constitution. Id.

Ordinance of city of El Paso imposing penalty for violation of ordinance regulating pawnbrokers different from that imposed by Pen. Code 1911, art. 641, held void, as to penalty imposed; there being no charter authority therefor. Id.

A city by its ordinance cannot set aside the state penal laws prohibiting houses of prostitution. Levy v. State, 84 Cr. R. 493, 208 S. W. 667.

21. Right to question validity.—One charged with operating an automobile for hire without a license in violation of an ordinance was in no position to question the validity of the ordinance by reason of the authority therein given to revoke the license. Ex parte Parr, 82 Cr. R. 525, 200 S. W. 404.

Art. 818. [559] [488] Style of ordinances.

Enacting clause.—Under charter of city of Brownsville, requiring that ordinances begin with words "Be it ordained by the city of Brownsville," an ordinance so beginning was not void because it did not begin "Be it ordained by the council of the city of Brownsville." City of Brownsville v. Fernandez (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 112.
Art. 819. [557] [486] Ordinances, when and how published.

Application.—City ordinance requiring construction of sidewalks by owner or by city at his expense held not to impose penalty or forfeiture within this article. City of Lampasas v. Huling (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 215.

Art. 821. [558] [487] Published ordinances admissible in evidence.

Ordinances admissible.—Regulating speed, etc., of train.—In view of this article, the testimony of the mayor and secretary of a city that an ordinance, limiting the speed of trains, was passed, published, and recorded was sufficient to authorize its admission. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Harling (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 207.

Evidence of ordinance.—It was not error to permit the mayor of the city to testify that an ordinance introduced in evidence was in force and effect at a specified time. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Harling (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 207.

In city's suit to recover from property owner cost of constructing cement sidewalk, where agreed facts stated that the ordinance was passed by city council on given date, and city put in evidence book of minutes of council which set out ordinance in full and showed it was duly passed, proof of enactment of ordinance was sufficient. City of Lampasas v. Huling (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 213.

Art. 824. [568] May prescribe duties of officers, etc.

Cited, Gress v. City of Lampasas, 74 Tex. 195, 11 S. W. 1086.

Art. 833. [458] [412] May prevent and punish the keeping of disorderly houses, etc.

Conflict with state law.—See Levy v. State, 84 Cr. R. 493, 208 S. W. 667; notes under art. 817.

Art. 838. [448] [404] May do, etc., to promote health and suppress disease.

Cited, Tugwell v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co., 74 Tex. 480, 9 S. W. 120.

In general.—The power to require licenses for the protection of the public health, decency, and morals may be exercised by the state directly, or it may be done indirectly by a municipal corporation created by the state and clothed with such authority. Han­zal v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 237.

Power granted to municipalities and other agents of government to prescribe rules for prevention of diseases and the preservation of health is not a delegation of authority which is prohibited by the Constitution. 1d.

Vaccination of school children.—An ordinance, in a city with 30 per cent. Mexican population, denying children the right to attend school unless vaccinated for smallpox, was not unreasonable, although at the time there was only one case of smallpox in the town. City of New Braunfels v. Waldschmidt, 109 Tex. 302, 207 S. W. 303.

Under this article, council had power to pass ordinance denying children right to attend school unless vaccinated for smallpox. 1d.

Such ordinance was not inconsistent with the law for compulsory education exempting from its requirement "any child whose bodily condition is such as to render attendance inadvisable." 1d.

And it did not deprive pupils or parents of liberty or property without due process of law, under Const. U. S. Amend. 14, and Const. Tex. art. 1, § 19, nor violate Const. Tex. art. 1, § 6. 1d.

Power to pass ordinances concerning vaccination to prevent disease may be delegated to a municipal corporation. Zucht v. King (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 267.

A city, under its broad powers to enforce vaccination, may require vaccination of all school children for smallpox, even though there is no epidemic. 1d.

A health regulation of a city, requiring school children to be vaccinated against smallpox, is not open to inquiry by the courts as to its reasonableness, any more than the reasonableness of an act of the Legislature. 1d.

Ordinance requiring that all school children be vaccinated against smallpox, is not invalid as denying any pupil rights and privileges without due process of the law of the land. 1d.

Such ordinance is not invalid as dealing with a special class, the classification being reasonable, notwithstanding conditions in Mexican quarter of the city and crowding together of people in street cars, jitneys, theaters, churches, passenger depots, etc. 1d.

That other pupils are not vaccinated and are permitted to attend school under similar circumstances, contrary to the ordinance, only shows that the officers are not performing their public duty, and cannot affect the validity of the ordinance. 1d.

The welfare of the many is far superior to those who resist enforcement of an ordinance requiring vaccination against smallpox, and fear of one declining and resisting its enforcement that vaccination would endanger his health is immaterial as far as validity of the ordinance is concerned. 1d.

Regulation of barber shops.—The requirement of an ordinance that no sleeping or living room shall be kept or maintained in connection with any barber shop, or place where the trade of barbering is conducted, is not unconstitutional as denying due process

It was not necessary that an ordinance, permitting health officer to deny license to a barber having an infectious, contagious, or communicable disease, give a definition of such diseases. Id.

An ordinance providing for the licensing of barbers by health officer is not rendered unconstitutional by reason of the fact that it provides for an appeal to an illegal tribunal, the courts still being open to any barber seeking a redress for any supposed wrong. Id. An ordinance providing for the regulation and inspection of barber shops and appliances, and the periodical examination of persons engaging in the occupation of a barber to ascertain if they are free from any infectious, contagious, or communicable disease and any veneral disease in a communicable form, and requiring the payment of license fees to cover the cost of inspection, does not deny due process of law nor equal protection of the law. Id.

Such ordinance held not unreasonable. Id.

When a power to license is given by a city ordinance the intention must be that regulation is the object, unless there is something in the language of the grant, or in the circumstances under which it is made, indicating with sufficient certainty that the raising of revenue by means thereof was contemplated. Id.

Art. 844. [453] [408] May define nuisances and punish persons guilty thereof, etc.

Nature of nuisance.—Anything that works hurt, inconvenience, or damage, or which is done to the hurt of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments of another, is a nuisance, and it is not necessary that the annoyance should endanger health; it being sufficient if it occasion that which is offensive to the senses, and which renders the enjoyment of life and property uncomfortable. Brewster v. City of Forney (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 176, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 636.

"Nuisance at law" is act, thing, or omission, or use of property in and of itself a nuisance, permissible under no circumstances; "nuisance in fact" is one which becomes nuisance by reason of circumstances. Shamburger v. Scheurrer (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1063.

The construction and maintenance of a filling station where gasoline and oil are stored in large quantities and vehicles are required to cross the sidewalk is not a nuisance per se. City of Electra v. Cross (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 795.

Power to define and abate nuisances in general.—A city ordinance declaring it a misdemeanor punishable by fine to keep stalls, etc., within the city limits for service, is invalid, such keeping not being a nuisance per se, and its prohibition, therefore, not being authorized by arts. 383, 403, or 408. Ex parte Robinson, 30 Tex. App. 493, 17 S. W. 1067.

Provision of an ordinance that certain buildings shall be and are declared a nuisance would not invalidate a further provision prescribing procedure for determining whether a building is in fact a nuisance. Crossman v. City of Galveston (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 128.

Under Galveston Charter 1905, and ordinance enacted pursuant thereto, held, board of commissioners had power after full and fair hearing to declare a dilapidated wooden building a nuisance and order an abatement, although building was erected before establishment of fire limits, in view of powers given by this article. Id.

A city council has power to declare what shall be a nuisance, and to abate the same and to impose fines upon parties who may continue or suffer nuisances to exist. City of Forney v. Mounger (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 240.

The abatement of a nuisance by a city must be limited by its necessity, and no unnecessary injury to property must be permitted. Id.

Neither a city by ordinance nor the Legislature of the state has constitutional authority to denounce as a nuisance any business otherwise lawful and to prohibit the same, unless such a business constitutes a nuisance in fact. City of Electra v. Cross (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 795.

Art. 845. [447] [403] May abate nuisances.

See Ex parte Robinson, 30 Tex. App. 493, 17 S. W. 1057; note under art. 844.

Unnecessary abatement.—That the owner of stables permits filth to accumulate therein, so as to constitute a nuisance, does not authorize the municipality to destroy the buildings themselves, such destruction not being necessary to abate the nuisance arising from the filth, in view of arts. 845 and 846. City of Forney v. Mounger (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 240.

Art. 846. [450] [405] May compel the cleansing of premises.

Art. 847. [459] [413] May require owner of drain, sink, etc., to fill up, cleanse, etc., the same, and punish for failure to do so.

Cited, City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 703. 181
Art. 848. [451] [406] May direct the location of certain establish­ments, etc.

Gasoline filling stations.—A city ordinance relative to the construction and maintenance of gasoline filling stations, providing that any person, firm, or corporation violating any provision should be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, etc., was in effect, and to be construed as not and favorably and equitably for him. Invader Oil & Refining Co. v. City of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 616.

A city ordinance relative to the construction and maintenance of gasoline filling stations should not be held to operate against and affect an oil and refining company, which had obtained all permits necessary for erection of a filling station prior to passage of the ordinance. 1d.

Reference in section 2 of ordinance of city of Fort Worth regulating the construction and maintenance of gasoline filling stations to consideration by the commissioners of how long existing filling stations have been in operation, and consent or acquiescence in their location by adjacent owners, etc., held to be to filling stations already in operation, but which had not secured permit under any ordinance. 1d.

Art. 849. [452] [407] May regulate the burial of the dead, etc.

Cemetery.—The powers of municipal bodies, under legislative authority, to adopt reasonable regulations with reference to public cemeteries, cannot be questioned. Ex parte Adlof, 86 Cr. R. 13, 215 S. W. 222.

The validity of regulations promulgated by a municipal corporation with reference to public cemeteries, like other police regulations where not exceeding constitutional limitations, is tested by their reasonableness as applied to the subject to which they relate. 1d.

Regulations concerning public cemeteries are sustained upon the view that their enactment is to preserve the public health. 1d

An ordinance of a city making it a misdemeanor for one to dress and take care of graves and lots in a public cemetery for compensation, without the consent of the superintendent thereof, was unconstitutional, because not uniform in its application to all owners of lots, no condition being specified as to how the consent of the superintendent should be given. 1d.

Such ordinance was also unreasonable and unconstitutional, being an unlawful restraint upon a useful and harmless avocation. 1d.

The right to enter a cemetery for the purpose of burying the dead, under reasonable restrictions and regulations, is accompanied by the right to care for the grave, subject to like reasonable regulations, and to employ an agent for such purpose. 1d.

Art. 851. [445] [401] May tax, etc., dogs.

Regulating running at large.—An ordinance entirely prohibiting owners of dogs from allowing them to run at large is valid. Pettus v. Weyel (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 191.

Uncertainty of an ordinance in prescribing the conditions under which an owner of dogs may let them run at large does not invalidate it, since exceptions from an offense previously stated need not be prescribed with the same certainty as that necessary to state the offense. 1d.

Art. 854. Control over streets, alleys, etc.; work on streets by inhabitants; vacation of alleys.

See Bordagas v. Higgins, 1 Civ. App. 43, 19 S. W. 446; note under art. 857.

4. Law of the road.—Violation of city ordinance prohibiting an automobilist from passing a standing street car constituted negligence per se. Ward v. Cathey (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 289.

The duty under a city ordinance for a vehicle turning from its course at a street intersection to yield right of way to a vehicle keeping a straight course is not qualified so as to authorize making the turn merely, because, viewed from the standpoint of the driver, it reasonably appeared to him to be safe. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 252.

11. Control over streets and sidewalks thereon.—City given absolute control of its streets by Legislature may wholly prohibit use of its streets for prosecution of any private business or grant use with such restrictions as it deems proper. Peters v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 298.

A portion of a public road, being by incorporation or extension of a city embraced within its limits, is thereafter a street of the city, with all the rights of the county therein, and no longer subject to county control. Feris v. Bassett (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 233.

Land claimed by individuals, if once a county road, having by extension of a city become a street thereof, subject to its exclusive control, the county is neither a necessary nor proper party to suit to enjoin interference with possession and use thereof. 1d.

15. Grant of franchises and privileges in streets—Power of city.—Rights to run over the streets of a city to be granted to motorbus operators under the terms of proposed ordinances held not to come within the meaning of the term "franchise," as used in Dallas City Charter, § 8, subd. 2, giving the city power to confer on any person or corporation franchises or rights to use the property of the city to furnish any general public service, etc. McCutcheon v. Wescraft (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 733.
Art. 854a. Charter may authorize sale of squares, parks, streets, etc.

Rights of city's vendor.—If a city has authority to sell its parks, the sellers of land to the city for park purposes have no vested right in the maintenance of a park on the land. City of Beaumont v. Matthew Cartwright Land & Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 589.

Art. 855. [426] [382] May prevent the incumbering of streets, etc., and cause unsafe buildings to be removed, etc.

Art. 856. [550] [479] City council may cause dangerous buildings, etc., to be removed.

City ordinances, empowering mayor and other officials on due notice and hearing to remove buildings within fire limits of city which are in such condition of dilapidation as to be nuisance in tendency, to promote fires, are valid. Id. That a city council declares that buildings are a nuisance in fact is not a final determination of the question, but the owner may have it adjudicated in a suit for damages. City of Forney, Munger v. City of Galveston (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 240.

If city council, in the exercise of its powers to abate a nuisance, destroys or authorizes the destruction of buildings which in fact are not a nuisance, the municipality is liable for damages sustained by the owner. Id.

That the owner of stables permits filth to accumulate therein, so as to constitute a nuisance, does not authorize the municipality to destroy the buildings themselves, such destruction not being necessary to abate the nuisance arising from the filth, in view of Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1814, arts. 845 and 846, giving the city the power to compel the cleansing of the premises. Id.

Art. 857. [420] [376] May construct bridges, etc., sewers, sidewalks, etc.

Liability of city in respect to sewers and drains—in general.—If a sewerage plant could not be constructed and operated, however compelling the necessity for it, without doing injury to the property of a citizen, then the city must stand the loss, and is bound to compensate the citizen for the damage suffered. Brewster v. City of Forney (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 175, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 636.

— Defects in sewers and drains.—Evidence held sufficient to show that defendant city had notice, or in the exercise of ordinary care should have had notice, of defective condition of manhole into which plaintiff pedestrian fell and to warrant finding that plaintiff was not negligent, and was not acting in violation of the spirit of an ordinance forbidding use of street by pedestrians. City of Ft. Worth v. Weisler (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 296.

Nuisance in general.—Municipality is liable for its torts or creation of nuisance in construction and operation of its sewage disposal plant, whether or not careless or negligent in such construction or maintenance. Brewster v. City of Forney (Civ. App.) 156 S. W. 636.

In action against defendant town for damages due to maintenance of septic tank, evidence held sufficient to make an issue whether alleged nuisance existed and was regularly occurring and permanent. Town of Jacksonville v. McCracken (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 380.

Evidence that death of plaintiff's son was caused by alleged nuisance held sufficient for submission of question to jury. Id.

The construction and operation of a sewerage system by a city was a nuisance, where it made a citizen's place undesirable as a residence and decreased its value. Brewster v. City of Forney (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 175, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 636.

— Sewer polluting water course.—A municipal corporation may be enjoined from maintaining and operating a sewage disposal plant or tank which causes the sewage flowing into it, thereby polluting a stream, where the structure can be so enlarged or added to as to stop the continuance of the nuisance; for in operating a sewer a city exercises a corporate power, as distinguished from a governmental function. City of Pittsburg v. Smith (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1113.

— Notice of defect and of claim for damages.—City of Dallas Charter, art. 14, § 11, requiring written notice of injury as a condition precedent to a suit against a city for such injury, is valid. But the requirement is in derogation of common right, and will be construed with reasonable strictness, and not extended by implication beyond its own terms or held to apply to such damages as are not within its clear intent. Notice is a condition precedent though the injury was the result of an act of the city itself. City of Dallas v. Shows (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 633.

Construction of sidewalks.—Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 357, 376, which regulate the construction of sidewalks in cities, and fix the liability of the owners of the abutting property, assessments for sidewalks, when imposed by a city ordinance, are special taxes, for which the homestead may be sold, as other lands. Bordages v. Higgins, 1 Civ. App. 43, 19 S. W. 446.

In this article, the city council has power to provide that the lien on the abutting property for the cost of construction may be enforced by suit in a court of competent jurisdiction. (20 S. W. 184, reversed.) Bordages v. Higgins, 1 Civ. App. 43, 20 S. W. 720.

A city ordinance declared the cost of a sidewalk a lien on the property, and provided for collection in the manner provided for other tax sales, but reserved any right or authority the city might have to collect the assessments by suit. Held, that a suit to enforce the city's lien by sale of the property was not authorized by this article. City of Bonham v. Preston (Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 391.

Legislature could authorize municipal corporation to charge owner of city lot with cost of constructing sidewalk in front of it, without reference to whether lot was benefited by improvement or not; such action not amounting to taking of property without due process. City of Tyler v. Cain (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 473.

Ordinance providing for construction of cement sidewalks by the property owner, or, on his default, by the city, under supervision of public improvement committee of city council at owner's expense, held not void as delegation of council's legislative powers. Id.

Such ordinance, together with notice served on defendant owner, held sufficient in their description of kind and grade of sidewalk required. Id.

Art. 860. [444] [400] May establish pounds, etc.

Invasion of authority by county.—Legislature, by special charter granted City of Dallas (Sp. Acts 30th Leg. c. 71), having given it right and authority to control, regulate, prohibit or prohibit and regulate running at large of stock within its bounds, as well as control of streets and public grounds, county cannot invade its territory in attempt to exercise authority by a local option election. Cowand v. State, 83 Cr. R. 298, 202 S. W. 961.

Art. 860a. May prevent keeping animals for breeding purposes.—The city council of any duly incorporated city or town shall have the authority to pass such ordinance or ordinances as may be necessary to prevent any person, corporation or association of individuals from keeping for breeding purposes a jack, bull or stallion within the corporate limits of such city or town, and may prescribe such penalty for the violation of such ordinance or ordinances as they may deem sufficient and necessary for their proper enforcement. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 75, § 1.]

Torekt effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 861. [442] [398] May prevent, etc., horse-racing, etc.

Fixing maximum speed.—It is within the province of the legislative officials of city to fix a maximum speed on the city streets, provided such speed is not in excess of that
Art. 863. [460] [414] May control, etc., the laying of railway tracks, etc.

Rights of franchise holder.—Street railway having valid franchise to use city streets has such an interest in the use of the city streets that it may sue to restrain the use thereof by jitneys licensed under alleged invalid ordinance. Lindsey v. Dallas Consol. St. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 207.

Effect of non-observation, etc., upon liability of railroad.—The violation of a statute or ordinance regulating the speed of electric cars is negligence per se. Southern Traction Co. v. Kirksey (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 792.

Art. 865. [418] [374] To provide city with water, etc.

Municipal plants—Liability for injuries.—Under deed to right of way for city water supply pipe line, giving right to repair pipe line under waters of pond on grantor's land, city was liable for damages from unnecessarily draining pond entirely, if the pipe line could have been repaired without draining all the waters and killing fish. Town of Jacksonvile v. Ragsdale (Civ. App.) 252 S. W. 774.

Conveyance to city of riparian rights.—Under the rule that when a thing is granted everything essential to its beneficial use passes, a city in its corporate capacity held a riparian proprietor, and entitled to riparian rights in a stream which it had dammed for a municipal water supply, such rights, if not existing otherwise, having been conveyed to the city by conveyance from persons under whom parties in possession adversely to the city claimed through subsequent conveyances. Grogan v. City of Brownwood (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 552.

A city to which riparian owners conveyed land with the right to erect a dam for reservoir purposes, the conveyance reserving to the grantors and their assigns the right to use water in the stream as they might deem fit, held entitled to priority in its use for its inhabitants of water for domestic purposes, though not to sell to railroads, when the stream was so low on account of drought that there was insufficient water for such use. City against subsequent grantee owners claiming the right to use water for irrigation, and therefore entitled to injunctive relief. Id.

Deed from riparian proprietors to city of land wherein to erect a dam for reservoir purposes held not to have reserved to the grantors and their assigns the right to use the waters in the stream or bayous for irrigation purposes, which use might deprive the city of power to supply its inhabitants with water for domestic uses. Id.

Art. 869. [427] [383] May tax, etc., certain occupations.

Regulation of stailons.—A city ordinance declaring it a misdemeanor punishable by fine to keep stallions, etc., within the city limits for service, is invalid, such keeping not being a nuisance per se, and its prohibition, therefore, not being authorized either by Rev. St. arts. 403, 408, empowering cities to abate nuisances or by article 383 empowering cities to “regulate” occupations and callings. Ex parte Robinson, 39 Tex. App. 493, 17 S. W. 1057.

Art. 870. [430] [386] May license, etc., hackmen, and prescribe their compensation, etc.

Regulation of hackmen, jitneys, etc.—Validity.—City given absolute control over its streets by Legislature has power to prohibit use of jitneys on any street or confine their use to certain streets. Peters v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 989.

An ordinance prohibiting jitneys, other than those operating from A. to U., from using certain streets, is not an unwarranted discrimination rendering ordinance invalid. Id.

San Antonio ordinance of August 27, 1917, regulating and licensing automobiles used for hire, other than jitneys, is not unconstitutional. Craddock v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 634.

A municipal corporation has the same power of regulation over automobiles used for hire on special trips as over regularly licensed jitneys operated over fixed routes. Id.

Under Dallas City Charter, art. 2, § 2, subd. 1, article 2, § 3, subds. 21, 33, and article 2, § 7, subd. 4, an ordinance regulating and licensing jitney busses and requiring a surety bond by the operators was valid. City of Dallas v. Gill (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1141.

The requirement that applicants for licenses to operate automobiles for hire should furnish bond or indemnity insurance in the sum of $10,000 held not unreasonable on its face. Ex parte Parr, 56 Civ. R. 537, 280 S. W. 464.

It was not improper classification to provide in one ordinance for the licensing of jitneys operating over particular routes, and in another ordinance for the licensing of service cars confined to no particular route. Id.

An ordinance requiring a license to operate automobiles for hire was not rendered invalid by a provision therein giving authority to revoke the license. Id.

An ordinance forbidding jitneys within a certain zone does not create a monopoly, in violation of Const. art. 1, §§ 1, 26, in favor of street railways. Gill v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 209.

Nor does it in violation of Const. art. 1, §§ 17, 19, and Const. U. S. Amend, 14, take property and privileges, without due compensation or process of law, of jitney companies which, under former ordinances and statutes, made investments in the business; their use of the streets being the exercise of a mere license revocable at the will of the licensor. Id.

Ordinance of Dallas of August 2, 1918, entitled one regulating local street transportation, and excluding from a certain zone regular lines of jitneys, held not in conflict with or repugnant to Acts 53d Leg. c. 196, creating a state highway department, or chapter 207, regulating operation of motor vehicles, in view of section 22 of the former (Supp. 1918, art. 7012 1/2h), and section 23 of the latter, reserving to local authorities power to license and regulate the use and operation of vehicles for hire. Id.

An ordinance regulating use of streets by jitneys, passed in the exercise of delegated power, is not void an exercise of legislative power reserved for Const. art. 3, § 1, to the state. Id.

The exercise by city of powers delegated to it under authority of provisions of the Constitution to regulate local street transportation is not in violation of the state’s right of government provided for by Const. art. 1, § 1, even if it has application to the state’s internal affairs. Id.

Plaintiffs’ business of leasing or hiring driverless automobiles to the general public held to be of a public nature, to contemplate and in fact make use of the streets of defendant city, and to affect the public welfare, so as to be subject to license and reasonable regulation by the city, under art. 7012 1/2h, and Vernon’s Ann. Pen. Code Supp. 1918, art. 820r, and San Antonio Charter, §§ 90, 95, 99. City of San Antonio v. Besteiro (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 472.

The business of renting driverless automobiles to the public for temporary use over the streets of defendant city is not the “private use” by an individual of his property over which the police power of the city cannot be exercised. Id.

The streets of a city are controlled and under the supervision of the city for the benefit of its inhabitants, and those who live within its limits have a right to carry on business in a legitimate way, and unless an ordinance relating to use of streets by passenger motor vehicles violates some guaranteed right under the constitutional law of the state, it cannot be held unreasonable or arbitrary. Ex parte Stallcup, 87 Cr. R. 203, 220 S. W. 547.

The right of a railroad company to grant exclusive privilege to one company to solicit transportation of passengers and baggage upon its own grounds was not affected by a city ordinance attempting to establish hack stands and provide other regulations relating to the subject, since the city’s authority under the statute could extend no further than to its streets and public ways and to regulations, if any necessary, tending to afford travelers with sufficient accommodation; there being no claim of any insufficiency in this case. Clisbee v. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 235.

Liabilities for injuries.—Under city ordinance owner of jitney bus and surety on bond, held liable for injuries to pedestrian from defective condition of bus when driven by agent of person operating for owner on percentage basis. Western Indemnity Co. v. Berry (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 245.

Review of reasonableness of regulation.—City having authority to regulate operation of automobiles for hire, the court cannot declare its regulations unreasonable, unless such unreasonableness is clearly apparent. Ex parte Farr, 82 Cr. R. 525, 200 S. W. 491.

Art. 872. [431] [387] May license, etc., billiard tables, etc.

Ordinances—Validity—Pool rooms.—The power a city has to prescribe the hours during which the business of pool halls may be conducted depends on its charter. Ex parte Perkins (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 411.

Under this article, constituting part of the charter of the city of Bowie, the city is without power to prescribe the hours during which the business of pool halls may be conducted, the charter excluding the idea it was intended to confer power to regulate amusement licensed by the state, and not named in the charter. Id.

Saloons.—Ordinance of city establishing saloon district was not void because it failed to provide penalty for violation. City of Brownsville v. Fernandez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 112.

When authorized by its charter, a municipal corporation may by ordinance duly enacted designate the localities within its corporate limits wherein the sale of intoxicating liquors licensed under the state law may be sold and make it unlawful to sell elsewhere within the bounds of the city, and the Constitution does not restrict the power of the Legislature to prescribe a penalty for refusal to observe such city regulations. Terretto v. State, 86 Cr. R. 188, 215 S. W. 329.

Art. 877a. May issue warrants to meet current expenses; interest or discount; limit of amount.—Any incorporated city or town in this State, whether incorporated under the General Laws of this State, or incorporated by special charter adopted in the manner provided by law, and having a population of 161,000 or more according to last U. S. census, may, through its board of commissioners of city council, provide for the payment of its current expenses for any current fiscal year, or for any portion of such fiscal year, by the issuance of warrants drawn against the current revenues of said city or town for such fiscal year, and if no funds are available to pay such warrants at the time of the issuance thereof, the board of commissioner or city council of such city or town may provide for the payment of interest upon such warrants, or may provide for the payment of a discount thereon; provided that such interest or discount shall never exceed an amount equal to six per centum per annum upon the face of such warrants for the period of time intervening between the date of the issuance of such warrants and the time of payment thereof, and provided further that in no event shall the board of commissioners or city council provide for the issuance of warrants upon which interest or discount is to be paid, in excess of eighty per cent. of the estimated revenues of said city or town for such fiscal year after the deduction of all interest upon the bonded indebtedness of such city, or town, to be paid out of the revenues for such fiscal year, and such sums as may be required to be paid into any sinking fund or into any special fund or any special trust fund of said city or town, out of its revenues for such fiscal year. Such warrants shall be dated and numbered consecutively as they are issued, and shall become a lien upon the revenues of said city or town for such fiscal year, available for the payment thereof, and shall be paid consecutively according to their respective dates and numbers as funds for the payment thereof become available. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 15, § 1.]

Sec. 2 repeals all laws in conflict. The act took effect Aug. 18, 1921.

Art. 878. [416] [372] Power to provide special funds for special purposes, etc.

Division of funds.—Under this article, the city has no power to loan money realized from the sale of water-works bonds, and the bondsmen of the city treasurer are entitled to an injunction restraining him from carrying out an agreement to loan such fund. City of Bonham v. Taylor, 81 Tex. 59, 16 S. W. 555.

Art. 879. [466] [420] To appropriate revenues and for what purposes; to issue bonds, etc.

Limitation of amount.—In ascertaining the amount of bonds outstanding under this article, those issued in aid of a railroad are to be included, and a sum of money in the city treasury applicable to the bonds could not properly be deducted. City of Waxahachie v. Brown, 67 Tex. 319, 4 S. W. 207.

Art. 880. [467] [421] City bonds shall specify, what.

Interest and sinking fund.—Provision of statutes with relation to issuance of city bonds, which specifically requires the city to provide a fund to pay interest and create a sinking fund, has no application to a case where no bonds were issued, but the debt simply evidenced by city warrants. American Roads Machinery Co. v. City of Ballinger (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 265.

Where certain high school bonds issued by a city were to bear interest from May 1, 1914, it was proper that provision should be made to pay interest and create a sinking fund for the year 1914, though the bonds were not sold until June, 1915. Concho Camp, No. 66, W. O. W. v. City of San Angelo (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 1106.

Division of proceeds.—Bonds issued by a city by virtue of an election pursuant to ordinance for the acquisition and improvement of lands either within or without the city for public parks could not be used for any other purpose. City of Beaumont v. Matthew Cartwright Land & Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 889.

Land purchased by city with bonds issued solely for the acquisition and improvement of lands for parks became impressed with park purposes, and cannot be used by the city for any other purpose, though the deed to the city was a general warranty deed without reservations and without covenants dedicating the lands to park purposes. Id.

Having sold land to a city for a valuable consideration, with no covenant dedicating it to any special purpose, though the land was paid for with park bonds, the sellers parted with all their interest, and had no vested right in the improvement of the land for park purposes and in the maintenance of a park on it. Id.

Art. 881. [468] [422] Bonds shall be signed, etc., and payable where and when, etc.—Said bonds shall be signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the City Secretary, and payable at such place or places, as may be fixed by ordinance of the City Council or governing body of the city or town. [Acts 1875, p. 256, § 78; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 9, § 4.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 6 of the act repeals Rev. Civ. St. 1911, arts. 881, 882, and art. 925, as amended, and all laws in conflict.

Art. 882. Same; interest; maturity; payment; purposes of issue. —Any city or town providing for improvements mentioned in the two preceding Sections [Arts. 925, 925a], shall have the power to issue coupon bonds therefor in such sum as it may deem expedient, to bear interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum, and to mature serially or otherwise, not exceeding forty years from their date, and shall provide for payment of the interest on, and principal of bonds heretofore issued and of all bonds issued under this Act, except for indebtedness incurred prior to September 25, 1883, out of the taxes herein authorized, and the limitations now provided by law upon the amount of bonds that such cities may issue, shall not apply to bonds issued under this Act. Within the meaning of this Act shall be included building sites and buildings for the public free schools and institutions of learning within such cities and towns which have assumed or may hereafter assume the exclusive control and management of the public free schools and institutions of learning within their limits, and the cities and towns hereinbefore mentioned may issue coupon bonds therefor under the terms of this Act. [Acts 1909, 2 S. S., p. 444; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 9, § 3.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 6 of the act repeals Rev. Civ. St. 1911, arts. 881, 882, and art. 925, as amended, and all laws in conflict.

Art. 882a. Same; submission to voters; approval and registration; validation.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to authorize the issuance of such bonds without submitting the same to a vote of the qualified property taxpaying voters as now required by law, and such bonds shall be submitted to the Attorney General for approval and to the Comptroller for registration, as now required by law; and all elections held in such cities and towns at which any such bonds were authorized to be issued prior to the taking effect of this Act, are hereby validated, and such bonds may be issued under the terms of this Act; and nothing in this Act shall be construed to in any manner affect any school tax heretofore voted in any such city or town in accordance with any previously existing law. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 9, § 5.]

Art. 884. [483] Interest and sinking fund tax to be levied, interest paid and bonds sold at not less than par.

Sale of bonds.—On stipulation in bid for purchase of city bonds that transcript of proceedings leading up to issuance of bonds should be satisfactory to bidder's attorney, where attorney's opinion was unfavorable there was no obligation on bidder. City of Amarillo v. W. L. Slayton & Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 967.

Attorney's unfavorable opinion is assailed by city as fraudulent, or mere pretense, burden is on city to prove such matter or matters of fact. Id.

Bidder's good-faith money was not forfeited to city if the condition was not complied with by furnishing attorney transcript of proceedings leading up to bond issue which should satisfy him. Id.

Objection of attorney that notice of election provided that bonds amounting to $50,000 payable serially, one to forty years, should be issued, while two series actually were issued, one for $40,000, from one to forty years, and one for $10,000, one to ten years, held not trivial. Id.

Evidence held insufficient to justify finding that bidder's attorney acted in bad faith. Id.

Evidence held not to show want of good faith on the part of plaintiff in referring the legality of the bonds to attorneys named, nor want of good faith on the part of such attorneys, the plaintiff being legally entitled to terminate the contract on their opinion regardless of motive. Grant v. City of Mineral Wells (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 854.

Where plaintiff sued to recover a deposit made to show good faith in carrying out a contract to dispose of the defendant city's bonds subject to the approval of plaintiff's attorneys, if they in good faith rendered an opinion that the bonds were invalid and plaintiff in good faith acted thereon plaintiff could recover, even though the objection to the bond issue be groundless, there being no reservation for approval by any other at—
Art. 890. [465] [419] May pass ordinances to fund debt, etc.
See City of Waxahachie v. Brown, 67 Tex. 519, 4 S. W. 207; note under art. 879.

CHAPTER FIVE CORPORATION COURTS

Article 903. Corporation court created.

Art. 904. Jurisdiction.

Art. 921. Appeals to what courts; trial de novo; appeals, how governed.

Power of legislature.—Under Const. art. 5, §§ 1, 5, 16, 19, 22, the Legislature, by the charter of the city of Texarkana, section 131, defining powers and duties of corporation court of the city and section 144, as amended by Loc. & Sp. Laws 31st Leg. c. 96, and Sp. Laws 33d Leg. c. 65, had power to limit the right of appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeals from the corporation court, by stipulating that, unless fine exceeds $25, the judgment of the corporation court shall be final. Ex parte Bennett, 85 Cr. R. 315, 211 S. W. 934.

Appellate jurisdiction.—In view of Const. art. 5, §§ 1, 22, and Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 903, 904, 921, and Code Cr. Proc. 1911, arts. 101, 894, 897, an appeal may be taken to county court from corporation court, upon conviction of violation of a city ordinance, not constituting an offense defined by the Penal Code. Taylor County v. Jarvis (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 405.

Art. 922. Until organization of corporation courts, municipal court as now established has jurisdiction, but thereafter abolished.

CHAPTER SIX
TAXATION

Art. 923. [484] [425] Ad valorem tax.

Cited, Ferris v. Kimble, 75 Tex. 476, 12 S. W. 689.

Strict construction.—The grant of taxing power to any county or district by the Legislature should be construed with strictness; the presumption being that the Legislature has granted in clear terms all it intended to grant. State v. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 820.

Power to levy.—Municipalities have no inherent power to tax. State v. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 820.
Property taxable.—The charter of the city of Austin held to authorize taxation of personal property situated within its borders. City of Austin v. Great Southern Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 482.

Vessels, derricks, horses, and wagons used in business of dredging and marketing mud shell, permanently situated at places other than city of Galveston, under control of owners permanently residing at such places, were not subject to Galveston's personal property tax under Galveston City Charter, § 54, though Galveston was place of owner's residence, and though tugboats were registered for port of Galveston under U. S. Comp. St. § 5719, and discharged cargoes thereat, and though property was not taxed at place of its situs. City of Galveston v. Haden (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 766.

Art. 924. [485] May levy and collect tax for improvements, buildings, etc.

Tax for support of schools.—In view of arts. 924, 925, a tax to pay off bonded indebtedness for erection of school buildings was not a school tax, within the meaning of Const. art. 7, § 3, limiting amount of levy of school taxes. Houston v. Gonzales Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 962.

Where, by Sp. Laws (1st Call. Sess.) 1913, c. 14, creating the Gonzales independent school district, which included all of the lands within the city of Gonzales as well as additional territory, school property in the city of Gonzales passed to the new district subject to a necessary tax of 17 cents per $100 to satisfy bonds issued by the city under authority of this article, held, that the 17-cent tax was a tax within Const. art. 7, § 3, and as the taxing power of the city was restricted by article 8, § 9, to 25 cents for city purposes and 25 cents for the erection of public buildings, the district could not levy taxes up to the 40-cent limit authorized, but was restricted to 33 cents. Houston v. Gonzales Independent School Dist. (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 467.

Art. 925. [486] Cities of 5,000 or less may levy tax for interest and sinking fund on certain bonds; for current expenses, permanent improvements, roads, etc.—The City Council or governing body of any city or town in this State having a population of five thousand or less shall have power by ordinance to levy, assess and collect an annual ad valorem tax sufficient to meet the interest and sinking fund on all indebtedness legally incurred prior to the adoption of the Constitutional Amendment of September 25, 1883, regarding the power of cities and towns to levy and collect taxes, etc., and may also levy, assess and collect such taxes as such City Council or governing body may determine, not to exceed for any one year one and one-half per cent of the taxable property of such city or town, for current expenses and for the purpose of construction or the purchase of public buildings, water works, sewers, and other permanent improvements, within the limits of such city or town, and for the construction and improvement of the roads, bridges and streets of such city or town within its limits. [Acts 1909, 2 S. p. 444; Acts 1917, 35th Leg. 3d. C. S., ch. 14, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 9, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Presented to Governor on 11th day of February, A. D. 1921, but not signed by him nor returned, with objections, within time prescribed by Constitution, and thereupon became a law without his signature.

Constitutionality.—If this article, as amended is invalid in so far as it applies to cities constituting independent school districts which have extended their limits for school purposes, such invalidity does not invalidate the amended section when applied to a city constituting an independent school district of the same boundaries. City of Rockdale v. Cureton (Sup.) 229 S. W. 852.

Amount dependent on valuation of property, etc.—Where municipal liability may be paid from cash on hand or a special fund, no debt is incurred within Constitution, limiting tax which may be levied to pay certain municipal debts, since object of limitation is merely to prevent exorbitant taxation. City of Laredo v. Frishmuth (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 190.

Tax of 45 cents per $100 levied by city of Laredo, violates constitutional amendment of 1883 (see Acts 18th Leg. p. 135) limiting such taxation to 22 cents per $100. Id. Assessment of benefits held not invalid, because property will thereby be subjected to a tax in excess of the constitutional limit. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 592.

Where Const. art. 11, § 5, constitutes city's grant of power to levy taxes, it can levy them to extent of 2½ per cent. of taxable property, and deal with funds as provided by charter. Williamson v. Cayo (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 643.

In view of arts. 924, 925, a tax to pay off bonded indebtedness for erection of school buildings was not a school tax, within the meaning of Const. art. 7, § 3, limiting amount of levy of school taxes. Houston v. Gonzales Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 963.
Under Const. art. 7, § 3, exempting from the limitation on the amount of school district tax incorporated cities or towns constituting independent districts, and the amendment of this article, a city acting as independent school district can issue bonds for school buildings exceeding the amount of city indebtedness limited by Const. art. 8, § 9. City of Rockdale v. Cureton (Sup.) 229 S. W. 852.

In view of arts. 882, 924-926, and 927, levies to pay off funding bonds and obtain funds to pay off a judgment on street improvement bonds held not to have constituted limitation on the power of the city to levy taxes for street improvements to the extent of 15 cents on the $100. Concho Camp, No. 66, W. O. W. v. City of San Angelo (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 1106.

Art. 925a. Cities of over 5,000 may levy taxes for interest, sinking fund, current expenses, improvements, etc.; limitation.—The City Council or governing body of any city in this State having more than five thousand inhabitants, unless otherwise provided in its special charter granted by the Legislature or adopted by the people, shall have power by ordinance to levy, assess and collect an annual ad valorem tax sufficient to meet the interest and sinking fund on all indebtedness legally incurred prior to the adoption of the Constitutional Amendment of September 25, 1883, regarding the power of cities and towns to levy and collect taxes, etc., and may also levy, assess and collect such taxes as such City Council or governing body may determine, not to exceed for any one year two and one-half per cent. of the taxable property of such city, for current expenses and for the purpose of construction or the purchase of public buildings, water works, sewers, and other permanent improvements, within the limits of such city, and for the construction and improvement of the roads, bridges and streets of such city within its limits. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 9, § 2.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 6. of the act repeals Rev. Civ. St. 1911, arts. 881, 882, and art. 925, as amended, and all laws in conflict.

Art. 926. [487] [426] Cities of 10,000 inhabitants and over to levy and collect tax; validating act.

See Werner v. City of Galveston, 72 Tex. 22, 7 S. W. 726; Concho Camp, No. 66, W. O. W. v. City of San Angelo (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 1106.

Application of tax.—Under Rev. St. art. 426, a city of more than 10,000 inhabitants, which had no special charter, was authorized to levy a tax of one half of 1 per cent. for protection against fire, one fourth of 1 per cent. for improving the streets, and one fourth of 1 per cent. for paying its outstanding indebtedness, where the whole levy did not exceed the statutory limit, since the application of the tax fund is left to the discretion of the city authorities, in the absence of special statutory directions. Muller v. City of Denison, 1 Civ. App. 295, 21 S. W. 391.

Art. 928. [490] [429] Occupation tax.

Constutionality—Discrimination.—An ordinance requiring barbers to pay a license for purpose of inspection, etc., was not discriminatory because a higher charge was made in proportion against shops with a small number of chairs than against those with a greater number, such difference in proportion showing rather that the inspection of a small shop would cost more in proportion than the inspection of a large shop. Hanzal v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 237.

— Tax for revenue.—When a power to license is given to a city ordinance the intention must be that regulation is the object, unless there is something in the language of the grant, or in the circumstances under which it is made, indicating with sufficient certainty that the raising of revenue by means thereof was contemplated. Hanzal v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 237.

Art. 931. [493] [432] Power of city council to provide for assessing, etc., taxes.

When two-thirds vote required.—Cities incorporated under arts. 1006-1017, cannot levy special tax for local improvements evidenced by paving certificates unless ordinance levying tax be consented to by two-thirds of aldermen elected in view of this article. Celaya v. City of Brownsville (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 153.

Art. 937. [498] [437] Taxes for payment of indebtedness.

CHAPTER SEVEN

ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION OF TAXES

Article 938. [499] [438] Power of city council to provide for collection of taxes.

Suits for taxes—Limitation.—Under a city charter providing four-year limitation against tax suits from time taxes become due, the taxes for each year form a separate cause of action. Young v. City of Marshall (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1180.

Art. 938a. City may authorize county assessor to act for city.—Any incorporated city, town or village in the State of Texas is hereby authorized by ordinance to authorize the county assessor of the county in which said city, town or village is located to act as tax assessor for said city, town or village, or to authorize the tax collector of the county in which said city, town or village is situated, to act as tax collector for said city, town or village. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 62, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Art. 938b. Duties of county assessor.—When an ordinance is passed making available the services of the county tax assessor to such city, town or village, it shall be the duty of the tax assessor of the county in which said city, town or village is situated to assess the taxes for said city and perform the duties of tax assessor for said city, town or village according to the ordinances of said city, town or village and according to law. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 938c. County tax collector shall collect city taxes.—When an ordinance is passed availing such city, town or village of the services of the county tax collector, it shall be the duty of said collector of the county in which said city, town or village is situated to collect the taxes and assessments for said city, town or village and turn over as soon as collected to the city depository of said city, or other authority authorized to receive such taxes or assessments, all taxes or moneys collected for said city, town or village according to the ordinances of said city, town or village and according to law, less his fees hereinafter provided for, and shall perform the duties of tax collector of said city, town or village. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 938d. Mode of assessment.—The property in said city, town or village taking advantage of this Act shall be assessed at the same value as it is assessed for county and state purposes. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 938e. Commissions of assessor and collector.—When the county assessor and county collector are required to assess and collect the taxes in any city, town or village, they shall respectively receive one per cent. of the taxes collected for assessing and collecting the same. [Id., § 5.]
Art. 941. [410] [366] Assessor and collector, powers, duties, bond, etc.

Bond—Sureties not released, etc.—The giving of a new bond by the city assessor, pursuant to Rev. St. 1579, art. 366, does not release the sureties on the bond already existing from liability for defaults of the principal to that date. Loyd v. City of Ft. Worth, 82 Tex. 249, 17 S. W. 612.

Description of property.—Description of property in municipal tax assessment held sufficient under the rule that description is sufficient when it furnishes the means by which the property can be identified from the description itself or by the use of the extrinsic evidence. City of San Antonio v. Terrill (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 361.

Sufficiency of a tax assessment description is measured by same rules as apply to conveyances and partition decrees. Garza v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 488.

Art. 943. [503] [443] Unrendered property shall be ascertained, etc., by assessor.

Cited, State v. Dunson, 71 Tex. 65, 9 S. W. 193.

Description of unrendered property.—A tax assessment description of unrendered land held sufficiently definite to support a tax judgment, where owners readily identified and rendered it for taxation under same description, except that acreage and value of land was decreased. Garza v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 488.

Art. 944. [504] [444] Assessment for back taxes.

See City of San Antonio v. Terrill (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 361.

Power to assess.—Sp. Laws 1909, c. 90, amending the charter of the city of Austin and giving the city assessor authority to have any property omitted from assessment listed and assessed according to the rule of taxation of the years it was omitted, covers all omitted property, whether the omission was made before or after the passage of the law: for the word "heretofore," therein used, should be read "theretofore." Millers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 927.

The city of Austin, under its charter (art. 12, § 2, subd. 24), as amended March 24, 1909, had authority to authorize property to be listed and assessed according to the rate of taxes only for the years it had "heretofore" been operated, without authorizing or providing for the assessment or collection of the taxes. Texas Fidelity & Bonding Co. v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 818.

Under its charter the city of Austin had power to make, for a period of more than two years back, assessments of securities of a fidelity and bonding company, also doing a casualty insurance business, deposited with the state treasurer as required by Acts 29th Leg. c. 127 (Rev. St. 1911, art. 1121, subd. 27) and Acts 22d Leg. c. 117 (Vernon's S.B. Ann. CIV. St. 1914, arts. 4942a-4942e), which had been omitted from taxation. Id.

Notice.—A property owner cannot complain that notice was not given him by a municipality that his property was placed on its assessment rolls for prior years as property omitted to be taxed during such years, where he does not claim that the value of the property was improperly assessed, or that any injury was suffered from the failure to give notice. Millers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 823.

Interest and penalties.—Taxpayer was not liable for interest or penalties on back taxes, where he could not have paid the taxes because collector refused to accept payment therefor unless payment was also made of taxes erroneously assessed; a tenant of such taxes having been unnecessary, because position taken by collector rendered it a useless proceeding. City of Galveston v. Haden (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 766.

Personal judgment.—Where unrendered land was assessed in husband's name until 1909, and was then, rendered in his wife's name, it will be presumed that wife did not acquire title until that year, and no personal judgment for taxes prior to 1909 can be had against her. fees for such attorney or special attorney for the bringing of such suit as are now by law provided for and allowed county and district attorneys for the bringing of suits on behalf of the State and county for the collection of delinquent taxes; provided that in no case shall such city or town be liable for such fees. Armstrong v. Mission Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 895.

CHAPTER EIGHT

FIRE DEPARTMENT

Article 965. [523] [453] City council may regulate and control the erection of wooden buildings.

Fire limits—Regulations as to buildings.—Ordinance making it unlawful, "except when otherwise ordered by the board of commissioners," to erect wooden buildings within certain limits, is valid, and confers power upon commissioners, by issuing building permit, to authorize building of wooden structure within limits specified. Focke, Wilkens & Lange v. Heffron (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1027.

Galveston Charter 1905, conferring power upon board of commissioners to establish fire limits and to regulate erection of buildings and to remove same after proper proceedings, held not to be discriminatory per se against individual citizen. Crossman v. City of Galveston (Civ. App.) 284 S. W. 192.

Under Galveston Charter 1905, held board of commissioners had power to adopt ordinance declaring buildings "within fire limits which became dilapidated nuisances and prescribing procedure for determination whether a building has in fact become a nuisance. Id.

That board of commissioners granted permission for repair upon some wooden buildings within fire limits of city held irrelevant on issue whether they abused their discretion in denying defendants right to repair their building. Id.

A prohibition against erection of wooden buildings within fire limits of an incorporated city, or removal of such buildings by proper authorities when found to be nuisances in the manner provided by law, is not an unreasonable taking of private property for public use within purview of Const. U. S. or Texas Constitution. Id.

Art. 971. [529] [459] May control, etc., the storing of gunpowder, etc.

Explosives as nuisances.—The storing of highly dangerous explosives in a public place or near a private residence may or may not constitute an abatable nuisance, such question depending upon the manner in which the business is conducted. McGuffey v. Pierce-Pordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 535.

Oil and gasoline tanks situated in a thickly built portion of a city, in close proximity to many wooden buildings, held to constitute a private nuisance. Id.

a dependent of said deceased, or otherwise until such award of the trustees shall have been set aside or revoked. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 978½l. Determination as to right to retirement and pensions. — The said board shall consider all cases for the retirement and pension of members of the fire, police, and fire alarm operator's department rendered necessary or expedient under the provisions of this Act, and all applications for pensions by widows and children under 16 years of age, and of dependent father, mother, brother or sister, and the said trustees shall give written notice to persons asking a pension to appear before said board and give such evidence under oath as he, or they, may desire and may introduce testimony of witnesses, and any person who is a member of either of said departments and who is a contributor to said fund, as hereinafter provided, may appear either in person or by attorney and contest the application for participation in said fund by any person claiming to be entitled to participate therein and may offer testimony in support of such contest and the president or chairman of said board shall have power and authority to issue process for witnesses and administer oath to said witnesses to examine any witness as to any matter effecting retirement or a pension under the provisions of this Act. Such process for witness shall be served by any member of the police, fire, and fire alarm operator's departments and upon the refusal or neglect of any witness to attend and testify when required, he or she may be compelled to attend and testify, as in any judicial proceeding, and any witnesses knowingly making a false statement to the said board on any material matter shall be guilty of perjury and punished accordingly as provided in the laws of this State. [Id., § 13.]

Art. 978½m. CHAPTER NINE
SANITARY DEPARTMENT

Art. 979. [537] [467] City council may appoint health physician, etc.

Powers of health officers.—In an ordinance regulating barbers, and providing for a license and physical inspection, etc., the commissioners of the city of San Antonio were vested with the authority, under City Charter, § 99, to place the power of deciding what may be an "infectious, contagious, or communicable disease" to its health officer. Han­sal v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 237.
An ordinance, giving health officer power to deny a barber infected with disease, etc., a license, need not provide that any barber seeking redress for any supposed wrong might invoke the aid of some court, since adequate remedies for all wrongs are provided by the laws of the state. Id.
The board of health of the city of San Antonio is the public agency through which the city council acts to determine the necessity arising to put the ordinance concerning vaccination of school children against smallpox in effect as to its provisions, and there is no delegation of legislative power to the board of health. Zucht v. King (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 297.

Art. 984. [542] [472] Cities of 35,000 inhabitants may cleanse city, etc.

Cited, City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 703.

Art. 997. No license until examination passed.—The licenses shall not be issued to any person to carry on or work at the business of plumbing, or to act as an inspector of plumbing, until he shall have appeared before an examining or supervising board for examination and registration, and shall have successfully passed the required examination. [Acts 1897, p. 236; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 134, § 1, amending art. 997, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]
Explanatory.—Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment. The title and enacting part of the act make no mention of adding an article to be known as 997a.

Art. 997a. Application of act.—Provided, that the provisions of this act shall not apply to cities of less than five thousand inhabitants. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 134, § 1.]

Art. 998. [Repealed by Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 134, § 2.]

STREETS AND ALLEYS

Article 999. [544] [474] Power of city council to have streets, etc., graded, etc.

6. Costs, how assessed—Abutting property.—In assessing a third of the costs of a paving improvement against a landholder, the fact that the city does not pay one-third of the costs, because by ordinance a traction company pays for part of the street, does not invalidate the assessment under the statute. Keller v. Western Paving Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1077.

8. Liability of city for injury to property.—In a suit for damages caused by change of grade of street, where value of premises was $3,500, verdict for $1,500 for damage to the real property and for $1,000 for discomfort and $500 for suffering of plaintiff's wife was excessive, and should be reduced to the amount allowed for injury to the real estate. City of Ft. Worth v. Ashley (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 336.

In suit for damages to plaintiff's property due to defendant city's acts and omissions in paving streets whereby surface water was diverted to where it collected in front of plaintiff's lot, evidence held to warrant the jury in finding that defendant city was negligent in the respects stated. City of Greenville v. McAfee (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 752.

9. Liability for defective streets—Duty to repair.—It is the duty of a city to see that its streets be made and maintained in a reasonable safe condition for use by the public. City of Dallas v. Halford (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 725.

91/2. — Persons to whom liable.—A city's duty to keep its streets in a reasonably safe condition is not limited to the protection of travelers in the ordinary mode of traveling, but extends to one traveling in an unusual or infrequent mode, if he is not thereby guilty of contributory negligence. City of Austin v. Schlegel (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 291.

In a suit for injuries to one riding on the fire wagon, based, not on the theory that the city furnished plaintiff an improper place to ride or that its employé, the driver, was negligent, but upon the city's negligence in repairing its streets, a defect in which caused plaintiff to be thrown from the wagon, it was immaterial how or why plaintiff was riding on the wagon, unless it was contributory negligence for him to do so. Id.

Where the driver of a fire wagon slowed up in response to plaintiff's signal to permit plaintiff to ride on the wagon, and the city owed plaintiff, as such invitee, the same duty with respect to the care of its streets as it did to the other occupants of the wagon. Id.

10. — "Streets" as to which liable.—In an action for injuries on a sidewalk, where the evidence showed that the street was one of the public thoroughfares, that the city had assessed and collected taxes on the abutting lot, and that one of its duly constituted officers had fixed the grade for the pavement put down in front of a lot adjoining the abutting lot, there was prima facie proof that the walk was a public sidewalk of the city and under the supervision and control of its duly constituted officers. City of Ft. Worth v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 123.

11. — Responsibility for defects.—A city is charged with the legal duty to exercise ordinary care to see to it that a place used as public sidewalks is kept in a reasonably safe condition for pedestrians, even though the city has never attempted to construct a sidewalk at such place. City of Ft. Worth v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 123.

If it was the duty of a city to erect and maintain a barrier on a street at a point where a jitney bus left the street and plunged into a ravine, it is immaterial to the city's liability under the facts whether the ravine was private or municipal property. City of Dallas v. Maxwell (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 429.

12. — Care required.—A city is under the legal duty to exercise ordinary care to maintain its sidewalks in a reasonably safe condition for public travel. City of Ft. Worth v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 123.

13. — Notice of defect or obstruction.—City of Dallas Charter, art. 14, § 11, requiring actual knowledge or written notice to city of defect in public street, highway, or grounds or public works of city causing damage to "person or property" at least 24 hours prior to injury, and requiring "person injured" to give notice of injury before city shall be liable for "damages of any kind," construed to require notice of injury only in case of personal injury, and not in case of injury to property. City of Dallas v. Shows (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 633.

16. — Precautions against injury.—It is the duty of a city to erect railings or barriers along its streets at places where they are necessary to make the same safe for drivers in the use of ordinary care. City of Dallas v. Maxwell (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 429.

17. — Proximate cause of injury.—Where plaintiff was injured by collision with team of horses caused to run away by fall of wheel into hole negligently permitted to remain in city street, by which fall the doubletree became unfastened and fell on one of the horses, frightening them, it could not be said as matter of law that the city's negligence was not the proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. City of Ft. Worth v. Patterson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 551.

One is liable for consequences of negligent act which, in probable and natural course of events, results in injury, notwithstanding injury could not have been reasonably contemplated. Id.

Intervention of unforeseen and unexpected cause alone is not sufficient to relieve a wrongdoer from consequences of negligence, if such negligence directly and proximately co-operators with the independent cause in the resulting injury. Id.

Intervention of independent cause interrupting continuity of train of results flowing from negligent act and of itself alone in regular sequence causing injury, will render the negligent act nonactionable. Id.

Neither instinctive act of an unreasoning animal nor the impulsive, involuntary act of a sentient being, directly brought about by a negligent act, will break line of causation of consequences for which the negligent actor is liable. Id.

Negligence of defendant city through its contractor for street repair in failing to plug a pipe causing a sinking or depression at the top of an abandoned catch-basin held not the proximate cause of injury to a female pedestrian who stepped there and fell to her injury. Peterson v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 558.

That driving of a jitney bus was negligent, which negligence concurred with that of the city in not erecting a barrier in causing the car to leave the street and plunge into a ravine, does not relieve the city of liability for injuries to a passenger, the driver's negligence, concurring with the negligence of the city, having been the proximate cause of the accident. City of Dallas v. Maxwell (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 425.

18. — Contributory negligence of person injured.—If a pedestrian knows of an obstruction across a sidewalk, and fails to use ordinary care, and is injured thereby, his negligence bars recovery. Butler v. City of Conroe (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 557.

Notice of injury to mayor and city council by Houston City Charter, § 11, cannot be waived by street and bridge commissioner, or by any commissioner or number of commissioners or member of city council, but, if subject to waiver, can be waived only by the city council and the mayor jointly. Cawthon v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 796.

That injured party was invited to present claim for damages to city council, but failed to do so because of inability to get council together, does not constitute waiver. Id.

That plaintiff's injury was due to negligence of street and bridge commissioner of city, and that the commissioner had actual knowledge of the injury, did not dispense with written notice, the purpose of notice being not merely to notify city of the fact of the injury, but to give city the information required to be conveyed by the notice. Id.

21. — Sufficiency of evidence.—In an action against a city by a jitney bus passenger, injured when car left street and plunged into a ravine, evidence held sufficient to sustain the jury's finding that plaintiff did not know or fully appreciate and understand the dangers incident to the use or attempted use of the street at the particular point of vehicular traffic. City of Dallas v. Maxwell (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 429.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain the jury's finding that the city's negligence in failing to erect a barrier at the point was the proximate cause of the accident and the injuries complained of. Id.

Art. 1001. [546] [476] Property levied on and sold for taxes for improvements, when and how, etc.

Art. 1002. [547] [477] Suit against owner of property for improvement tax, when, etc.

In general.—A condemnation proceeding could be instituted by a city only by petition presented to the judge of the county court describing the land, giving the names of the owners, etc., the petition setting forth that which would give jurisdiction. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 305.

Power of eminent domain in general.—In suit to enjoin city of Dallas from taking property for public improvement, the city must allege and prove an effort to agree on the compensation with the property owner. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Under Dallas charter as to condemning property, property owner held entitled to invoke equitable jurisdiction of district court on question of whether effort was made to agree with the property owners. Id.

Until the statutes requiring notice to the landowner are complied with, the commissioners in a city’s condemnation proceedings have no authority to assess damages or to make a report, and the county court has no jurisdiction to declare condemnation. City of Dallas v. Waterworks, (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 266.

Constitutionality of statutes.—Act April 8, 1889, entitled “An act to amend an act to regulate the condemnation of property for water mains, is unconstitutional in so far as it authorizes the condemnation of land for reservoirs for waterworks. Adams v. San Angelo Waterworks Co., 66 Tex. 485, 25 S. W. 605.

Provisions of Dallas charter for condemning property for street improvement held not invalid, because making the award conclusive without a trial by jury. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Charter held not to authorize the taking of property without a hearing or trial before a locally constituted tribunal. Id.

Charter held not to authorize the taking of property without adequate compensation, or the absorbing of the compensation by offsetting the cost of acquiring the property. Id.

Not invalid, because making the award conclusive without an appeal. Id.

Provision for appointment of special commissioners to determine damages held constitutional and authorized under further provision that statute as to condemnation by railroads shall be extended therein. Id.

Compensation—Necessity.—Damages to land on dry waterway from discharge from city's septic sewer tank, operated under legislative authority, were not taking, damaging, or destroying of property for public use, required by Const. art. 1, § 17, to be adequately compensated, where such discharge did not constitute nuisance. Brewster v. City of Pomona (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 66.

Measure.—Where land is taken by a city for a waterworks, the measure of damages is the market value of the land taken and the difference, if any, of the market value of the remainder of the tract just before and after the condemnation thereof. City of Rosebud v. Vitek (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 729.

The expense and value of any labor necessary to restore improvements on remaining land and injury to the land to its use as a homestead were proper for consideration by the jury in determining the market value, but it was improper to permit the jury to consider these elements of damage for any other purpose than to determine the difference in market value before and after the taking. Id.

When an unlawful entry on land has been made by a city, and the land is afterwards condemned by the city, the owner is entitled to recover the value of the part taken as of the date the entry was made, and the damages which will be caused to the remainder of the land by reason of the condemnation of part. City of San Antonio v. Fike (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 639.

Where a city, before proceeding to condemn land, destroyed the sidewalk adjacent thereto, such destruction was an independent tort, as much as any improper or negligent construction on the land would have been, and no recovery therefor can be had by the property owners in the city's condemnation proceedings. Id.

If a sidewalk had been destroyed under condemnation proceedings by a city, involving the appropriation of the lot to which it was appurtenant, the owners of the lot could recover for its appropriation, whether viewed as having given added value to the land taken or to the entire lot. Id.

In ascertaining damages to property affected by street improvement, the special benefits to the particular property should be considered, while general benefits to the public should be excluded, and that other property on the same street was damaged or benefited in the same way would not exclude such damages or benefits from consideration. Richley v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 214.

Where a city condemned a portion of a lot on which permanent improvements had been erected, leaving the owner insufficient area to accommodate the entire building as it existed, the owner can recover as part of her damages the value of the portion of the improvements taken or the cost of removal and reconstruction of the building to conform to the new size of the lot. City of San Antonio v. Fike (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 911.

Evidence.—In a proceeding by a city to condemn land for a waterworks, evidence held insufficient to sustain a verdict of the jury as to the amount of damage suffered. City of Rosebud v. Vitek (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 729.

In a suit against a city for damages resulting from street improvement and to recover for land alleged appropriated by the city, evidence held to justify the jury's finding that no part of plaintiff’s land was taken and appropriated. Richley v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 214.
Art. 1003  CITIES AND TOWNS (Title 22)

Notice of claim.—In action for overflow of land caused by change in grade of city street, ballot, plaintiff was entitled to recover without giving notice of claim as required by charter in view of Const. art. 1, § 17. City of Ft. Worth v. Ashley (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 307.

Appointment of commissioners.—Despite Charter of the City of Dallas, art. 11, § 5, appointment of commission in the city's condemnation proceeding, under art. 6508, was not invalid for lack of agreement between the parties as to the commissioners, though the application should state a failure to agree or an excuse therefor, as by showing that the landowner is a minor. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 305.

Necessity of report.—County court entertaining a city's condemnation proceedings without a report of the commission, after first acquiring jurisdiction under the statutes, could not condemn the land. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 305.

Remedies as to obstructions.—The means of free egress and ingress through an alley to a lot and buildings thereon is as much property as the lot itself, and is a right appurtenant to the lot, and the existence of an alley, being an inducement to purchase, enters into the consideration as between grantor and grantee, and an encroachment on the alley constitutes a particular injury, to the special damage to the lot owner, different from that suffered by the general community. Shelton v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 967.

Damage.—In suit to have strip of land declared a street and for damages, evidence held to show that plaintiff had suffered no such damages as alleged. Swilley v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1001.

Liability of persons other than city for defects in streets.—In action against waterworks company for injuries received when plaintiff stepped into hole in sidewalk, where cut-off box had been placed, evidence held insufficient to show defendant installed box or left it in unsafe condition at time of accident. San Antonio Water Supply Co. v. Castle (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 300.

Where railway terminal company had been granted permit by city to construct sewer, company owed a public duty to see that refilling was properly tamped, in compliance with ordinance to leave street or sidewalk in as good order as before. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. v. Scheppelman (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 167.

Not relieved from liability for personal injuries to pedestrians from defects in refilling excavation city had taken over sewer system. Id.

Evidence held to justify finding that defect in sidewalk causing injury did not exist prior to construction of sewer. Id.

Evidence held to show that construction company did not leave street and sidewalk in good condition. Id.

Water supply company under contract to furnish water, giving the company the exclusive control of the repairing and installing of pipes and appurtenances, including curb cock box between mains and property lines, but providing that it should not be liable for damages not growing out of its own independent, unlawful acts, was not liable for injuries to pedestrian from curb cock box negligently installed by owner. Neal v. San Antonio Water Supply Co., (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 35.

Negligence in use of street.—Where driver pushed flagman on track causing latter's injury, defendant must have been guilty of negligence proximately causing injury either alone or concurrently with railroad to be held liable. Sulzberger & Sons Co. of America v. Page (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 928.

It is duty of all persons rightfully on street to use care not to injure others rightfully there. Id.

Traveling public have no right to go across railway crossing without using ordinary care to avoid injuring flagman. Id.

In an action for personal injuries resulting from defendant's automobile colliding with plaintiff's wagon on a city street, evidence held insufficient to justify a finding that the driver of the car was negligent in the manner charged. Pace v. Moore (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 238.

Although automobile dealers allowed their demonstrator to use demonstration car for his own enjoyment, they would not be liable for injury done by him while so driving 204 the car; he not being in the master’s business in such driving any more than any one who might hire or borrow the car. Van Cleave v. Walker (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 767. They would not be liable for accident occurring to third person while demonstrator was returning the car to the garage; for the fact that it was demonstrator’s duty to return the car after such use would not make his acts in doing so acts within his employers’ service, but the return would be but an incident to the use. Id.

In action against automobile owner for injuries caused by driver’s negligence, evidence held insufficient to show that driver was engaged in owner’s business at time of accident, Parmele v. Abdo (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 359.

In action by jitney passenger for injuries from collision with defendant’s automobile, evidence held to support verdict for plaintiff. Zucht v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 684.

In an action by plaintiff, who was run down by an automobile, evidence held to warrant findings that plaintiff was free from negligence, while the driver of the motorcar was negligent. Merchants’ Transfer Co. v. Wilkinson (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 891.

In an action for personal injuries through being struck by defendant’s automobile operated by its driver, evidence as to whether the driver was acting within the scope of his employment held insufficient to support a verdict for plaintiffs. City Service Co. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 140.

Contributory negligence.—If flagman at railway crossing failed to use ordinary care in keeping lookout and warning driver of wagon, which negligence proximately caused flagman’s injury latter could not recover damages therefor. Sulzberger & Sons Co. of America v. Page (Civ. App.) 95 S. W. 928.

If driver did not exercise ordinary care, thereby forcing crossing flagman into danger, and to save driver’s life flagman acted upon impulse of moment and was injured thereby, flagman will be excused from contributory negligence. Id.

One stepping from a sidewalk to board a street car is not required to anticipate that an automobile would approach and attempt to pass the entrance into the street car in violation of a city ordinance. Ward v. Cathey (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 289.

A pedestrian who left curb to enter street car was not negligent in turning from street car back in direction of curb, being terrorized by wrongful act of automobilist in passing a standing street car in violation of a city ordinance. Id.

Damages.—An award of $5,000 in favor of plaintiff, who was struck by an automobile, cannot, where there was no claim of passion or prejudice on the part of the jury, be held excessive merely because plaintiff received more salary after the accident than he did before. Merchants’ Transfer Co. v. Wilkinson (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 891.

Article 1006. Powers acquired by accepting benefits of this chapter, and by whom.

Cited, Fest v. Western Paving Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1079.

Effect of amendment of charter.—The powers granted under this chapter were not lost to a city adopting amendments under the Acts of 1913, c. 147 (arts. 1096a-1096l) by the provisions of such statute, notwithstanding that the powers granted by this chapter were not copied into the amendments adopted. Keller v. Western Paving Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1077.

Art. 1008. Governing body to order improvement of highways, etc. | Art. 1014. | Governing body may correct mistake, etc.; in assessment proceedings, etc.; may reassess, etc. |
|-----------------|------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Ordinance or resolution for improvement.—Where the statutory requirements with respect to hearing and notice of a hearing before levy of assessments for public improvements were complied with (art. 1013), the inadvertent omission of the passage of a resolution by the city council ordering the improvement, as required by a procedural ordinance, did not invalidate the assessment. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Entry of judgment on minutes.—Where a city charter does not provide that a judgment of the board of commissioners of a city providing for a street improvement shall be entered on the minutes, the failure to enter such formal judgment is not conclusive that it was not in fact rendered. City of Ft. Worth v. Capps Land Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 491.

Power to contract.—Inhibition of Const. art. 11, § 5, and of Abilene Charter, art. 4, § 4, held not to prohibit city’s contracting for repairs to, or for permanent improvements of streets, to be paid for out of available funds then on hand. Sayles v. City of Abilene (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1006.

Art. 1009. Cost of improvements, how paid, etc.; assessments.

Assessment against abutting property—Amount.—The three-fourths of the cost of paving a street which can be assessed against property owners under this article, is three-fourths of the entire cost of the paving, though a street car company was compelled by its franchise to pave part of the street. Sullivan v. Roach-Manigan Paving Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 444.

The requirement that the cost be paid partly by the city, if mandatory, is satisfied by the payment for paving the street intersections only where the assessment against the street car company under art. 1010 reduced the cost to the abutting owners below three-fourths of the total cost. Id.

An answer alleging that the property owners were required to pay two-thirds of the entire cost of paving between street intersections, the street car company paying the other third, which was more than it was required to pay under its franchise, and the city paying only for paving the street intersections, with no showing of relative costs of the three, did not determine whether the portion assessed against the property owner exceeded three-fourths of paving company was not required to do, does not raise the issue whether the entire paving, or only that which the street car company was not required to pave, was the basis for determining the proportion assessable against the owners. Id.

Art. 1010. What cost assessed against railroad, etc.; special tax lien; enforceable, how.

See Sullivan v. Roach-Manigan Paving Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 444; note under art. 1009.

Art. 1011. Cost, how assessed; certificates; costs; attorney's fees; liens.

Cited, City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 783.

Validity of statutes.—Provisions of Dallas charter as to assessing benefits for street improvement held not invalid, because making the assessment conclusive without an appeal. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Power of city.—A city may levy special assessments for a public improvement before the compensation to be paid for private property to be taken or damaged is ascertained. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Under this act, city is not authorized to assess benefits and levy special paving tax against owners of property in one district for purpose of paving paving contractor for paving streets in another district. Celaya v. City of Brownsville (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 153.

City cannot assess property owners for benefits to reimburse it for funds derived from sale of bonds voted by taxpayers for paving streets and expended by city in paying for improvements made on such streets. Id.

Where a city charter made it the duty of the board of commissioners to order a street paved whenever the owners of 60 per cent. of the property abutting thereon should present a written petition therefor, and provided that assessment should be paid in five installments, and a petition for paving signed by the owners of more than 60 per cent. was filed, the board of commissioners cannot disregard it, and, acting under their general authority, order improvements and provide for payment of the assessment within 30 days after acceptance of the work. Wooten v. Texas Bitulithic Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 248.

Under a city charter authorizing proceedings to assess the cost of street improvements against benefited property and its owners, if the amount is not agreed upon, it is unnecessary to show that the city made efforts to secure agreement with the property owners before proceeding to make the assessments. City of Dallas v. Atkins, 110 Tex. 627, 225 S. W. 170, affirmer judgment (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

An assessment made entire assessment for improvements in street due when engineer should certify that he accepted the work, and, if not paid at that time, deferred installments should bear interest, did not conflict with statutes. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 621.

Adoption of ordinance.—Cities Incorporated under this act cannot levy special tax for local improvements evidenced by paving certificates unless ordinance levying tax be consented to by two-thirds of aldermen elected in view of article 931. Celaya v. City of Brownsville (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 153.

Assessments—Validity.—Assessment of benefits held invalid as to property owners with whom city had agreed to make no assessment in consideration of donation of land.
where in reliance thereon property owners did not offer evidence as to the value of the land. Wooten v. Texas Bitulithic Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Though the contract for paving a street called for pavement to the south line of an intersecting street, and the pavement constructed extended only to the north line, held that, as the contract made the charter and ordinances of the city a part thereof, and all of the provisions by the board of commissioners, etc., showed that the pavement was to extend only to the north line of the intersecting street, the assessment for such paving was not open to attack on that ground. Wooten v. Texas Bitulithic Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 248.

Where an assessment for street paving was invalid ab initio because the board of commissioners of the city attempted to act under their general authority without following the provisions applicable because property owners had petitioned for the improvement, the fact that act of the board did not prejudice one holding a mortgage on abutting property held not to validate the assessment. Id.

Where assessment was against "M. and children" the reference to children held not mere surplusage, and the court by a recital in its judgment in an action on the certificate was not justified in treating the entire proceedings as if they had been actually conducted on the theory that M. was the sole owner, merely because an assessment against M. alone would have been binding on all the owners. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Joint assessment.—Assessment of benefits without separating interests of life tenants and owners of fee, or interests of different joint owners, held improper. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

An assessment against joint owners of property for benefits to it by street improvements must separate the amount of the liability of each owner. City of Dallas v. Atkins, 110 S. W. 223, 225, affirmed, en banc, judge, ent (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Statutes relating to assessments for improvements contemplate joint assessment against those, who, as tenants in common, own a parcel of land which is subject to assessment. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Personal liability.—See Spears v. City of San Antonio, 110 Tex. 618, 223 S. W. 186, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) City of San Antonio v. Spears, 206 S. W. 703; note under art. 1012.

A personal liability cannot be imposed against a married woman for an assessment of benefits for a street improvement on the homestead owned in her separate property right. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Under Dallas charter personal liability may not be imposed upon owners of property upon which assessments for public improvements are levied. Id.

This act, providing for the assessments of the cost of improvements against abutting owners, and that the cost shall be a personal liability of the owner, includes, within the term "owner," married women. City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 703.

In view of Rev. St. art. 5505, subd. 3, providing that the masculine includes the feminine, no inference can be drawn from the use of the masculine gender in this act, that married women are not included among those personally liable for a special assessment. Id.

Lien.—Art. 5905 (Acts 224 Leg. [1st Called Sess.] c. 27, § 1), relating to renewal and extension of liens, does not apply to a paving certificate, in view of Const. art. 5, § 35. City of Ft. Worth v. Rosen (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 84.

Where a city charter provided that on the day fixed for hearing any person owning or having any interest in the property proposed to be assessed for paving should have the right to be heard, held that the provision of the charter making the lien of paving superior to that of a mortgage was not invalid. Wooten v. Texas Bitulithic Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 248.

Certificates.—Validity.—Where all improvements for which paving certificates were issued had been completed and paid for by city, with proceeds from bonds issued therefor, certificates were not legally issued, and never became valid obligations against property owners. Celaya v. City of Brownsville (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 133.

Sufficiency of description.—A certificate of assessment for improvements in street described the land abutting 50 feet on the north side of West Josephine Street in the city of San Antonio, being in acres in new city block No. A2, sufficiently described the property, since it furnished means by which the property could be identified by the use of extrinsic evidence. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Where a parcel of land abutting on a street being improved was owned by M. and three of her children, a certificate of assessment was not invalid which described the owners as "M. and children." Id.

Actions.—In proceeding against a property owner to recover the cost of a paving improvement, the certificate of special assessment was admissible as part of the plaintiff's cause of action pleaded. City of Ft. Worth v. Capps Land Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 491.

Petition, in action on paving and curbing certificates issued by city, alleging it adopted a special charter pursuant to Acts 32d Leg. c. 147 (arts. 196a to 196d), that the street in front of defendant's property was paved and curbed, and the certificates issued therefore, all in compliance with the powers given in the act and charter, held not subject to demurrer or exceptions. Dillon v. Whitley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 229.

There was prima facie proof of plaintiff's ownership, claimed in his petition, of the certificate for curbing, issued by the city to another, sued on; it having at the trial been in his possession and introduced in evidence without objection. Id.

A petition in an action on a certificate of assessment which was attached and made a part thereof held to state a cause of action although the ordinances, resolutions, and other matters were not copied in the petition, and each act or step taken was not pleaded in detail, in view of this article. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Joint owners of land need not all be made parties to an action on a certificate of assessment for street improvements, the interest of each being liable for the entire tax. Id.

Actions on improvement certificates are not governed by the four-year statute of limitations, relating to vendor’s and deed of trust liens. City of Ft. Worth v. Rosen (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 953.

Prima facie evidence.—Certificates issued by city for street improvements are prima facie evidence of the amount of indebtedness due by a property owner. Dillon v. Whitley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 329.

A certificate of assessment for improvements in street when introduced in evidence establishes a prima facie case, hence it is not necessary for plaintiff in an action on such a certificate to also introduce the ordinance levying the assessment and authorizing the issuance of the certificate. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

The provision of this article, that a certificate of assessment containing certain recital of facts shall be prima facie evidence of the facts thus recited, does not violate Const. art. 3, § 66, subsecs. 16, 30. Id.

Rate of interest.—In judgment upon a street paving certificate a provision that the aggregate sum should bear interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum was erroneous so as providing that interest should bear interest at 6 per cent. certificate not so providing. Frankenstein v. Rushmore & Gowdy (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 189.

A judgment upon a certificate of assessment providing for 8 per cent. interest only bears 6 per cent. interest. In view of Rev. St. 1911, arts. 1021, 4911. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Setting aside sale.—In suit to set aside constable’s sale of realty to foreclose street improvement lien, any incumbrance at time of sale should have been considered in determining whether or not defendant purchased at grossly inadequate price. Dubois v. Lowery (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 888.

If purchaser at constable’s sale to foreclose street improvement lien was not in adverse possession of the land in good faith when he made improvements, he was not entitled to recover value of improvements in suit against him to recover land. Id.

Attorney’s fees.—This chapter is not unconstitutional as violating the due process clause of the state and federal Constitutions, merely because it authorizes the collection of attorney’s fees for foreclosure of a paving lien. Keller v. Western Paving Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1077.

A statute and ordinance authorizing recovery of attorney’s fee in an action on a special assessment paving certificate does not violate the due process of law clause of the Constitution. Sullivan v. Roach-Manigan Paving Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 444.

The provision of this article, granting authority to provide for the recovery of attorney’s fees on the action for certificates of assessments for improvements, is valid. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Such provision is not limited or affected in any way by art. 2178. Id.

Art. 1012. No lien on exempt property; owner personally liable, etc.

See Spears v. City of San Antonio, 110 Tex. 528, 228 S. W. 165.

Exemption of homesteads.—Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 275, 276, which regulated the construction of sidewalks in cities, and fixed the liability of the owners of the abutting property, assessments for sidewalks, when imposed by a city ordinance, were special taxes, for which the homestead might be sold, as other lands. Bordages v. Higgins, 1 Civ. App. 413, 39 S. W. 446.

The constitution exempts homesteads from forced sale for the payment of assessments for local city improvements, and such an assessment against the homestead is void. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Special assessment for paving under this article, created no lien upon the homestead premises of a property owner and her husband. City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 703.

Since the homestead is protected under the Constitution, failure of homestead owners to appear and contest special assessments for public improvements does not estop them from interposing a plea of homestead. Id.

The Constitution forbids the creation of any lien on homestead property for the cost of street improvements benefiting the property. City of Dallas v. Atkins, 110 Tex. 627, 228 S. W. 170, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 633.

Personal liability.—Arts. 1011, 1013, authorize a personal judgment against a married woman, who owned as her separate estate property abutting on the improved street, which was the homestead of herself and her husband; her estate, under art. 5902, subd. 1, not excluding her from the general term “owner.” Spears v. City of San Antonio, 110 Tex. 618, 223 S. W. 168, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) City of San Antonio v. Spears 206 S. W. 703.

Under Dallas City Charter, art. 11, § 6, providing that the cost of improvements shall be paid by the owner of the property in the immediate vicinity and benefited thereby, the city can assess the benefits to homestead property against the owner personally. City of Dallas v. Atkins, 110 Tex. 627, 223 S. W. 170, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.
A married woman is subject to personal assessment for benefits to her separate property, even though such property is the homestead. 11

Art. 1013. Notice and hearing before assessment, etc.; no assessment in excess of benefit.

See Spears v. City of San Antonio, 110 Tex. 618, 222 S. W. 156, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) City of San Antonio v. Spears, 206 S. W. 703; notes under art. 1011.

Cited, City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 703.

Benefit to property.—A special assessment for a local improvement must not exceed the amount of benefits conferred. City of Dallas v. Atkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 593.

Dallas city charter held not to impose the cost of property condemned for street improvements on property owners without requiring that assessment shall not exceed benefits. 11

An agreement between a city and a paving contractor before a hearing before the council was had, wherein it was agreed that the city would only pay one-third of the costs, did not invalidate the assessment on the ground that it bound the paving company to assess absolutely against the owners two-thirds of the cost of the paving regardless of benefits. as the paving company, if it desired, could assume the risk of the benefits being equal to two-thirds. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Notice—Sufficiency.—Though no notice of the proposed paving of a street was given a mortgagee, held, that publication in a newspaper of notice of the proposed paving was sufficient to bind the mortgagee; the city charter, which provided for notice, declaring that service of notice by advertisement should be conclusive. Wooten v. Texas Bitulithic Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 248.

This article, does not require notice of a hearing for assessment of improvements to correctly state in every instance the name of each person who owns an interest in abutting property. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

A notice of hearing before levy of special assessments for local improvements was void for unreasonableness in failing to state the names of three persons who had an interest in a parcel of land instead of describing them as the children of a joint owner named. 11

The failure to give personal notice of a hearing before levy of assessments would not affect the validity of the proceeding. 11

— Deprivation of rights.—That a delay of 7 months occurred between the making of a contract for street paving by the board of commissioners and the submission to the board of the engineer's report was not a jurisdictional defect, and did not deprive a property owner of his rights as to notice of the character and extent of the burden to be placed on his property. City of Ft. Worth v. Carps Land Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 491.

Hearing.—Rev. St. 1911, art. 1013, relating to hearings before assessment for improvements, does not violate the due process of law provision of the Constitution because it provides for a hearing before the governing body of the city. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

That the city engineer without notice to owners made a plat and statement showing the total estimate of the cost and improvements and the division thereof according to his measurements of the abutting lots, and that such plat and statement were examined and approved by the council under a procedure ordinance of the city, prior to hearing was not a denial of a full and fair hearing guaranteed by this article, being merely preliminary steps. 11

Effect of notice and hearing.—See Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio, 223 S. W. 631; note under art. 1098.

Waiver of objections.—A married woman whose property was assessed for a special improvement could not complain that her husband, who had no interest in the property, was joined with her in the assessment, the error being a mere irregularity which, not having been urged at the proper time, will not be permitted to invalidate the certificate. City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 703.

Provisions of city charter, which vests a board with judicial functions to determine assessments for street improvements, that objection thereinto, unless filed with the board before hearing is closed, shall be deemed waived, do not in case of one given notice deprive him of property without due process in contravention of Const. U. S. Amendments 5, 14. Dillon v. Whitley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 329.

Art. 1014. Governing body may correct mistake, etc., in assessment proceedings, etc.; may reassess, etc.

Conflict with charter.—Arts. 1014 and 1017, held not in conflict with the city charter (Sp. Acts 22d Leg., c. 51), providing for the "improvement district plan" for paving streets, but inapplicable. Carwile v. Childress (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 308.

Reassessment—Power to make.—Under Ft. Worth Charter, c. 14, § 13, providing that errors in levying assessments may be corrected by reassessment, the city has right to reassess property to correct errors of description or in name of owner. Texas Bitulithic Co. v. Henry (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 221.

Fact that real owner was made party defendant in original suit on improvement certificate against party in whose name property was originally assessed is not sufficient to show that city or contractor knew at that time who was true owner of property, where reason for making defendant and others parties is not shown. 11

Where a street assessment was made after due notice to objecting abutting owner, 22 Supp. V. S. Civ. St. Tex.—14 209 and after he had an opportunity to be heard in opposition thereto, and it did not appear from the record that the sum assessed was in excess of what the city had a right to assess, held that the city was authorized to make reassessment or final assessment to correct a previous erroneous one. Carwlile v. Childress (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 398.

—— Time for making.—Where no period of limitations has been fixed either by charter or law, city may make reassessment if it discovers the error in its first assessment and improvement certificate within a reasonable time. Texas Bitulithic Co. v. Henry (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 221.

In absence of proof as to reasons for delay of almost five years in discovering defective description in first assessment and having reassessment made, such delay held not unreasonable. Id.

Irregularities in reassessment proceedings held waived by failure to present them in written protest before board of commissioners, etc. Id.

Art. 1015. Suit to set aside or correct assessment.

Cited, City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 703.

Validity of statutes.—A charter provision for an appeal within 10 days from the order of city council overruling the protest of a property owner to a paving improvement did not constitute a taking of property without due process of law, in violation of Const. art. I, § 19. City of Ft. Worth v. Cappa Land Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 481.

Provisions of city charter, which vests a board with judicial functions to determine assessments for street improvements, that one failing within 10 days after closing of the hearing to institute suit to contest validity of the assessment shall be barred from contesting in any other proceeding, do not in case of one given notice deprive him of property without due process. In contravention of Const. U. S. Amend 5, 14. Dillon v. Whitley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 329.

A street paving assessment is not invalid because the proportion to be assessed against the abutting owners was determined by city officials, who were interested in preserving the city funds in view of this article, and the statutes and ordinances authorizing such apportionment do not violate due process of law contrary to Const. art. 1, § 19. Sullivan v. Roach-Manigan Paving Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 444.

This article does not violate any constitutional provision. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 621.

Appeals.—Though a city charter provided that any person interested in property assessed for street improvements should not institute suit to contest the validity of the assessment after a time fixed, the assessment can be collaterally attacked where the board of commissioners of the city did not acquire jurisdiction under the charter to levy the assessment. Wooten v. Texas Bitulithic Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 248.

Objection that an assessment for improvements was invalid because the city council had not by resolution ordered the improvement must be made on the hearing, or in a suit brought within 30 days thereafter, as provided in this article. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Art. 1016. Referendum on adoption of provisions of this chapter; ordinances to carry out same.

Constitutionality.—This act is not invalid as a delegation of legislative power. City of San Antonio v. Spears (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 703; Carwlile v. Childress (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 308; Frankenstein v. Rushmore & Gowdy (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 182; Spears v. City of San Antonio, 110 Tex. 618, 223 S. W. 166, affirming judgment City of San Antonio v. Paving Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 703.

It does not violate Const. art. 2, § 1, vesting the legislative power in the Legislature and article 1, § 28. Sullivan v. Roach-Manigan Paving Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 444; Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

This act is not unconstitutional in that art. 1016 provides for a delegation of legislative power to the people of the various cities of the state; the act being an amendment of existing charters which the inhabitants may accept or reject. Keller v. Western Paving Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1077.

Effect of other legislation.—That the result of an election whereby a city adopted the provisions of this act, was not canvassed until after the effective date of Acts 33d Leg. 1913, c. 147 (arts. 1090a to 1096d) did not invalidate the election, and the powers given by the 1909 act were vested in the city by virtue of the election. Frankenstein v. Rushmore & Gowdy (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 183.

Irregularities in election.—That no notice was posted of a city election to adopt this act, other than a copy of the resolution, or that the resolution "did not limit the qualification of the voters as provided in the act," were not such irregularities as would invalidate the election, where it was not shown that any one entitled to vote failed to do so because of such irregularity, or that any one not entitled to vote did so. Carwlile v. Childress (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 398.
Art. 1017. Provisions of this chapter cumulative; subordinate to special charter.

Art. 1017a. Special assessment or reassessment where other assessment was erroneous or void; procedure.—In any case in which the public funds of any city or town may have at any time heretofore been, or may hereafter be expended, or its vouchers or certificates issued to any contractor, or any contract made therewith, for the special improvement, raising or lowering the grade of, opening, straightening, widening, paving, constructing, or grading of any street, avenue, alley, sidewalk, gutter or public way, or any part thereof, and if for any reason, no part of the cost of such improvement has been borne by the abutting property or paid by the owner or owners thereof, either because an attempted assessment and enforcement thereof for the same was erroneous or void, or was so declared in any judicial proceeding; the City Council of [or] Commission, or other governing body of any city or town shall have the power to proceed at any time to specially assess, or reassess, such abutting property with such amount of the cost of such improvement as it deems proper but in no event shall the amount exceed the special benefits such property receives therefrom by enhanced value thereto, the amount of such special benefits to be determined on a basis of the condition of such improvement as it exists at the time of such assessment, or re-assessment; provided, that no such assessment, or re-assessment, shall be made without at least ten days written notice and an opportunity to be heard on such question of special benefits given to the owner or owners of such abutting property, provided that such notice may be served either personally or by publication in some newspaper of general circulation, published in said city or town; and provided, further, that the governing body of any such city or town shall have full power and authority to provide for all procedure, rules and regulations necessary or proper for such notice and hearing and to levy, assess and collect such assessment, or re-assessment; and provided, further, that such assessment, or re-assessment shall be and constitute a lien upon such abutting property and a personal charge against the owner or owners thereof, which amount shall not be construed as becoming due, or having become due, before such assessment or reassessment is properly made in accordance with the provisions with this Act: Provided that such assessment or re-assessment as herein before provided shall be begun within three years after the completion of improvements contiguous to the property against which assessment or re-assessment is made and not thereafter, provided that in cases of re-assessments where the question of validity of the original assessment may be, or may have been, in litigation, the period of time during which it may be, or may have been, in litigation shall not be considered in computing said period of three years within which assessment or re-assessment shall be made; and provided, further, that any such assessment or re-assessment made by the governing body of any city or town with less than 5,000 inhabitants may equal the entire cost of side-walk, curb and gutter, and the cost of any street improvement, exclusive of street intersections, and such governing body of such town, in making such assessment or re-assessment, shall follow the procedure prescribed in Articles 999 and 1,000 of the Revised Civil Statutes of the State of Texas of 1911, in so far as applicable, but no such assessment or re-assessment shall be made in excess of the special benefits in enhanced value conferred there­by on the property abutting such improvement, or until the owner or owners of such property shall have had notice, as provided above, and opportunity to contest such issue before such governing body under such rules and regulations as may, by ordinance, be prescribed by it, and such assessment, or re-assessment shall be and become due and payable in equal annual installments not less than five in number; provided that the owner of such property shall have the right to appeal from the de­cision of the governing board of any such town or city to the court of competent jurisdiction within twenty days after such re-assessment shall have been made, and upon failure to do so in said period, such assess­ment shall be final and conclusive upon such owner and property; and provided further, that the provisions of this Act be cumulative of all powers heretofore granted to any city or town either by general or special Act; and provided, further, that all Charter provisions of all cities and towns in this State heretofore adopted, relative to the subject covered by this bill and they are hereby validated. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 47, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after July 22, 1919, date of adjournment.

CHAPTER ELEVEN A

PARKS

Article 1017½. Levy of tax for parks.

City acting as trustee.—Houston city charter, empowering city to maintain parks, authorizes it to accept management of park in trust for benefit of colored people of Harris county. Woods v. Bell (Civ. App.) 135 S. W. 902.

Where park intended for benefit of colored people of Harris county had been managed through trustees elected by such beneficiaries, but was in imminent danger of being seized by creditors, a court of equity has jurisdiction to transfer its control to city of Houston, which would discharge indebtedness and manage it for original purposes. Id. Evidence of various trustees of a park devoted to benefit of colored people held to sustain finding that revenue derived from park would be insufficient to pay indebtedness already accrued and current expenses. Id.

Article 1017½c. Improvement of parks.

Construction of sidewalk as diversion.—In view of Special El Paso City Charter, §§ 54, 55, providing that property acquired by the city for park purposes shall be inalienable, and for the construction and repair of sidewalks and crossways thereon, the construction of a sidewalk on a 14-foot strip on the edge of a park, for the use of a party with whom the city was adjusting a lawsuit, is a diversion of park property which may be enjoined. Look v. El Paso Union Passenger Depot Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 917.

CHAPTER TWELVE

PUBLIC UTILITY CORPORATIONS, RATES AND CHARGES—REGULATION BY COUNCIL, ETC.

Article 1018. City council may regulate rates.

Retrospective operation of ordinance.—Where a city ordinance made the price of gas a certain amount, with the privilege of a 10 per cent. discount if paid before a certain date, a later ordinance, omitting the privilege of a discount and providing an additional 10 per cent. for delay in payment, could not be applied retrospectively, under Const. art. 212.
CHAPTER FOURTEEN
TOWNS AND VILLAGES

Art. 1033. [579] [506] May be incorporated, when.

Cited, Ex parte Tummins, 32 Cr. R. 117, 22 S. W. 409.

Right to reorganize.—A town organized under this chapter, when it provided for the organization of a "town or village" containing 200 and less than 1,000 inhabitants, cannot reorganize under chapter 1, even though it has increased to more than 1,000 inhabitants, Harness v. State, 76 Tex. 566, 13 S. W. 535.

Art. 1034. [580] [507] Towns and villages incorporated, when.

Cited, State v. Goodwin, 69 Tex. 55, 5 S. W. 678.

Territory included.—Under this article, a town at the time of its attempted incorporation could not include within its corporate limits any "territory" that was not intended for strictly town purposes. State v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 623.

Inclusion within a town of several hundred acres of vacant and unoccupied lands by the incorporators of such town would not alone render the incorporation invalid. Id.

Incorporation of a town comprising some 1,050 acres held illegal and an attempted fraud on account of the inclusion of 76 acres of land comprising an oil field and used for the purpose of extracting oil from the earth by means of wells with their accompanying derricks and other machinery. Id.

Validation of incorporation.—Where plaintiff claimed title under a conveyance by the officers of the town of San Elizario, held that, even if an attempt to incorporate the town in 1879 under general statute was of no effect, the special charter not having been repealed, the title was validated by Acts 21st Leg. Special Laws (8 Gammel's Laws, p. 3371), and Acts 34th Leg. (1st Called Sess.) c. 12, § 1 (Supp. 1918, art. 5393a). Perez v. Cook (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 686.

Incorporation for school purposes.—See Furr v. State, 6 Civ. App. 221, 24 S. W. 1126; notes under art. 2859.

Order for election.—Under this article, the county judge cannot withhold the order of election because the boundaries marked by the petitioners include territory which is outside the actual limits of the town or village, and such order is not conclusive that the territory was properly embraced. Ewing v. State, 81 Tex. 172, 16 S. W. 872.

Order, purporting to be the only notice of election to determine whether town should be incorporated, signed by county judge, held a valid and sufficient order for the election. State v. Troell (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 610.

Where county judge, in response to petition, ordered election on specified date to determine whether town should be incorporated, and that election was temporarily restrained, he could order another election on dissolution of the injunction, without new petition. Id.

Judicial inquiry.—The boundaries of a municipality incorporated under this article, may be inquired into by the courts, as such municipalities are not established by special legislative enactments. Ewing v. State, 81 Tex. 172, 16 S. W. 872.
Art. 1037. [582] [509] Officers appointed to hold election.

See 1918 Supp., arts. 6016 1/2-6016 3/4c, as to publication in newspaper instead of posting.

Notice of election.—Requirement of this article, that election shall be held after ten days' notice, is directory. State v. Troell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 610.

That 102 of 115 town electors voted at election to determine whether town should be incorporated is proof of actual notice, and, in the absence of fraud, the election was not invalid for failure to advertise it for ten days. Id.

Fact that promoters of town election to determine whether town should be incorporated procured order for election without ten days' statutory notice in order to beat neighboring town election did not invalidate the election when the judge acted fairly and without corrupt motive. Id.

Art. 1041. [586] [513] Duty of county judge to make entry, etc.

Cited, Ex parte Tummins, 32 Cr. R. 117, 22 S. W. 409.

Art. 1043. [588] [515] Election of mayor, etc.
Cited, Ex parte Tummins, 32 Cr. R. 117, 22 S. W. 409.

Art. 1068. Duty of railroad to keep in condition for travel portion of roadbed and right of way crossed by streets; penalty.

Duty to make repairs and liability arising therefrom.—City seeking penalty for railroad's failure to construct street crossing under this article, could not recover in the absence of demand for work on the roadbed, as well as on right of way. City of San Marcos v. International & G. N. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 785.

Fact that in condemnation suit by city against railroad the land involved was condemned did not estop railroad from showing its true boundary, which failed to include all the land, so that its repairing the street would not have connected with the city's improvements and it was not liable for the penalty. Id.

This article does not authorize action for the penalty against a receiver. City of San Marcos v. International & G. N. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 458.

Mere fact that receiver was appointed under federal statutes, requiring him to operate the road according to state laws, did not render him liable for penalty. Id.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT

Art. 1070. Election to determine.
Art. 1071. Commissioners, powers and duties.
1071. Clerk, etc., appointment, etc.

Article 1070. Election to determine.—Whenever ten per cent. of the qualified voters of any incorporated city or town in this State, having a population of over five hundred inhabitants and less than five thousand inhabitants, incorporated under the provisions of Chapter 1, Title 22, of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911, or any previous general law, or hereafter incorporated under any general law, or of any incorporated town or village in this State having a population of more than five hundred inhabitants and less than one thousand inhabitants incorporated under the provisions of Chapter 14, Title 22, of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911, or any previous general law, or hereafter incorporated under any general law, shall petition in writing the mayor of said city or town, or the mayor of such town or village as the case may be requesting that an election be ordered to determine whether such city or town, or such town or village, shall adopt the commission form of government, the mayor shall order an election within such city or town, or town or village, to determine whether or not the commission form of government shall be adopted. Thirty days' notice of such election shall be given by posting three written or printed notices of same at three public places in such city or town, or in such town or village, and by publishing such notice in some newspaper published therein if there be one. If any unincorporated city or town in the State of Texas having a population of over five hundred and less than five thousand inhabitants, or any unincorporated town or village in the State of Texas having a population of more than two hundred and less than one thousand inhabitants, shall desire to be incorporated under the commission form of government as herein provided, an election to determine whether such incorporation may be had shall be called by the County Judge under the provisions herein governing incorporated cities and towns, and incorporated towns and villages, and notice of such election shall be given as herein provided, and if satisfactory proof is made that the city or town, or town or village, contains the requisite number of inhabitants, it shall be the duty of the County Judge to make an order for holding an election on a day therein stated, and at a place designated within the city or town or town or village for the purpose of submitting the question to a vote of the people. [Acts 1913, p. 36, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 60, § 1, amending art. 1070, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Takes effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

See 1918 Supp., arts. 6016½-6016¾c, as to newspaper publication instead of posting.

Art. 1074. Clerk; appointment, bond, duties and powers; city attorney, police and other officers, etc.

Removal of officers and employees.—Where city commissioners of Dallas removed firemen under a provision of the charter providing that firemen could hold their positions during good behavior, and should not be removed except for such cause as, in the opinion of the board of commissioners, rendered them unfit, after an opportunity to be heard, the extent of the power of the courts, is to inquire whether or not the commissioners exceeded their lawful authority so that their action may be treated as a nullity; and, if there might be fairly said to be any ground for difference of opinion as to whether the acts charged would be a sufficient cause, the courts cannot interfere. McNatt v. Lawther (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 566.

It cannot be said that the action of the city commissioners of the city of Dallas in removing city firemen joining a labor union in violation of a rule of the department was arbitrary or capricious. Id.

Under the charter of the city of San Antonio the city commissioners have the absolute power of the removal of employees if it is done publicly and on written charges; and, if their action is not based on fraud or corrupt motives, it cannot be restrained, but, of course, such charges must not be frivolous or trivial, for such charges would be fraudulent.

San Antonio Fire Fighters' Local Union No. 34 v. Bell (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 566.

Under the charter of the city of San Antonio, providing that "any appointive officer or employee may be removed or discharged only by a majority vote of the commissioners on charges preferred in writing and after a public hearing of such charges by said commissioners," the offenses for which employees may be removed are lodged in the discretion of the commissioners, and no one can attack the exercise of that discretion without showing a gross abuse of it, or fraud, after the removal or discharge has taken place. Id.

Even if an appeal were permitted from a decision of the city commissioners of San Antonio, removing city employees after a public trial required by the city charter, the court could not review the exercise of executive discretion: but only in the absence of some essential formality or apparent arbitrary oppressive and fraudulent action, and not upon the questions of fact, could the removal be inquired into by the court. Id.

Art. 1075. Powers and duties of board of commissioners.—The board of commissioners of all incorporated cities or towns, or towns or villages, of over five hundred and less than five thousand inhabitants, and all unincorporated cities or towns or villages having a population of over five hundred and less than five thousand inhabitants incorporating under and adopting the commission form of government under the provisions of this chapter shall have all the authority and powers, and be subject to all the duties, granted and conferred under Chapters 1 to 13, both inclusive, of Title 22 of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911, except where same may conflict with some provisions of this chapter herein contained. In incorporated towns and villages of more than two hundred and not more than five hundred inhabitants, adopting the commission form of government under the provisions of this chapter, and in unincorporated towns and villages of more than two hundred and not more than five hundred inhabitants, incorporating and adopting the commission form of government under the provisions of this chapter; the board of commissioners shall have the authority and powers, and be subject to all the duties, granted and conferred under Chapter 14 of Title 22 of the Revised Civil Statutes of 1911, except where same may conflict with some provision of this chapter herein contained. [Acts 1913, p. 36, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 60, § 1, amending art. 975, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Arbitrary action.—That board of commissioners may act arbitrarily under authority granted by city charter or an ordinance does not render ordinance void. Crossman v. City of Galveston (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 128.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

ABOLITION OF CORPORATE EXISTENCE

Art. 1077. [617a] Abolition of corporation provided.

Abolition of school district.—Where school district was declared duly incorporated, etc., and was operated for some time, held, it could only be abolished by election, as provided by arts. 1077, 1078, 228, and not by nonuser. Harbin Independent School Dist. v. Denman (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 176.

Art. 1078. [617b] Petition and election to abolish, provided, etc.

Art. 1079. [617c] Qualified voters at such election; duty of county judge.

Constitutionality.—Const. art. 6, § 2, giving the right of suffrage, with certain restrictions and exceptions, to all persons not disqualified under section 1, does not apply to municipal elections, in view of section 3; and hence the provision of this article, that at an election on the question of abolishing the corporate existence of a municipality only resident property taxpayers may vote, is not invalid. Bonham v. Fuchs (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1112.

The provision requiring the names of voters at an election on the question of abolishing the corporate existence of a municipality to appear on the last assessment roll, is not invalid. Id.

If such provision is invalid, its invalidity does not destroy the entire statute. Id.

Contest of election.—In a proceeding to contest an election on the question of abolishing the corporate existence of a municipality, a petition alleging that challenged voters were not taxpayers was not subject to demurrer, even though the provision of this article, requiring the name of the voters to appear on the last assessment roll, was invalid. Bonham v. Fuchs (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1112.

Art. 1080. Receiver of abolished corporation; appointment; bond, etc.

See 1918 Supp., arts. 6016 1/2-6016 1/2c, as to newspaper publication instead of posting; Cited in dissenting opinion, San Antonio & A. F. Ry. Co. v. Blair, 108 Tex. 454, 194 S. W. 1153.
Art. 1095. [617g] Public buildings of abolished corporations.

Mandamus under former law.—Act April 13, 1891, provides that, if any de facto corporation shall be declared void by any court of competent jurisdiction, the commissioners' court shall provide for the sale of its property and the settlement of its debts, and for the time being levy and collect taxes from the inhabitants of said corporation. The act further provides that upon the reincorporation of the de facto corporation all property owned by it shall belong to the new corporation, which shall be liable for the debts of the old corporation. Held that, whether the act was valid or not, a petition for mandamus to compel the commissioners to levy a tax to pay the salaries of officers of a city, the incorporation of which had been declared void, was fatally defective where it failed to allege that the city had not been reincorporated. Kwing v. Commissioners' Court of Dallas County, 83 Tex. 465, 19 S.W. 259.

Art. 1096. [615] [540] Corporation may be abolished, how.

Cited, State v. Goodwin, 69 Tex. 55, 5 S.W. 678.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

CITIES HAVING MORE THAN 5,000 INHABITANTS—ADOPTION AND AMENDMENT OF CHARTER

Art. 1096a. May adopt or amend charter; election; limitations of charter and ordinances; taxation; debts.

Constitutionality.—Const. art. 11, § 5, declaring cities of more than 5,000 inhabitants may have their charters granted or amended by special act of the Legislature, did not deprive the Legislature of the power to enact a general law applicable to the class of cities specified. Carville v. Childress (Civ. App.) 215 S.W. 306.

Act March 29, 1917, incorporating the city of Plainview, violates Const. art. 11, § 5, in that it would deprive the inhabitants of that city of the right to adopt or amend their charter by a majority vote of the qualified electors thereof. State v. Vincent (Civ. App.) 271 S.W. 402.

Construction of language.—The language of the home rule amendment to the Constitution was not written for lawyers and judges alone, and is to be interpreted according to its usual and popular meaning. City of Waco v. Higginson (Civ. App.) 226 S.W. 1081.

Amendments authorized.—Where city charter required consent of property owners on certain street to the granting of franchise entitling street railroad to make extension thereon, the amendment of the city charter so as to authorize the board of commissioners to order such extension without abutting owners' consent held not unconstitutional, under Const. art. 11, § 5, and arts. 196a, 196b, the making of such amendment not constituting the granting of a franchise, but merely the taking away from such abutting owners by amendment authorized by the Legislature the right previously given to prevent granting of franchise by withholding consent. Jones v. Dallas Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S.W. 867.

Amendments prohibited within two years.—The change of the boundaries of a city from those specified in its home rule charter so as to include additional territory is an amendment and alteration of the charter which cannot be made within two years after the adoption of charter under Const. art. 11, § 5, construing that provision either according to the meaning of its language, the construction placed thereon by the Enabling Act, arts. 106a-106e, or in the light of the history of legislation showing that the boundaries of a city were usually fixed by its charter. City of Waco v. Higginson (Civ. App.) 226 S.W. 1084.

This act is merely a legislative construction of the home rule amendment to the Constitution as empowering the cities to fix their boundaries in their charters, and was not intended to, nor could it, empower the cities to change their boundaries more frequently than they were permitted to amend their charters by the constitutional amendment. Id.

A city cannot amend its charter by changing its boundaries within two years after the adoption of the charter, though at the election at which the charter was adopted the voters also ratified a resolution directing a city to make the boundary change. Id.

Restrictions on taxation.—See City of Ft. Worth v. Cureton, 110 Tex. 590, 222 S. W. 531; note under art. 1096c.

Const. art. 8, § 5, relating to levy of city taxes in any one year, is not applicable to cities of 5,000 inhabitants, operating under special charter. Williamson v. Cayo (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 643.

Art. 1096b. Commission to frame new charter; submission to voters, etc.

What constitutes majority vote.—Under Const. art. 11, § 5, providing that cities having more than 5,000 inhabitants may, by a majority vote of the qualified voters, adopt or amend their charters, a majority of the votes polled at the election is sufficient. Shaw v. Lindsay (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 238.

Under this article, first and fifth of the proposed amendments to city charter, each of which received majority of votes cast on such amendments, but not majority of votes at whole election, held carried. Id.

Effect of mailing copy of ballot.—Where copy of ballot was mailed to each voter 30 days before election in a city wherein proposed charter changes under Home-rule Amendment were determined, it could not be said, after election, in suit to contest it, that voters did not act with clear understanding of the scope and character of each amendment. Shaw v. Lindsay (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 238.

Collateral attack on election.—In action involving the right of a street railroad to remove tracks from certain streets and extend system in other street in which it was claimed that the city had a right to authorize such extension under the charter as amended, the validity of the election at which the charter was amended will not be inquired into under art. 1096c, since the result of the election cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding. Jones v. Dallas Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 807.

Art. 1096c. Mayor or chief executive to certify copy of adopted charter or amendments to secretary of state; record; judicial notice, etc.

Judicial notice of charter.—Under this article, when a city has adopted a charter as authorized therein and it has been recorded as therein provided, no proofs are required thereof, but judicial notice must be taken of it. Dillon v. Whitley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 329.

Due recording of charter is prerequisite to taking of such notice. Faye v. Whitley (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 581.

Despite this article, it is at least highly advisable that copy of charter be offered in evidence in any case involving consideration thereof. Id.

Art. 1096d. Full power of local self government; enumerated powers.—That for the purpose of promoting the public health, safety, order, convenience, prosperity and general welfare the governing authorities of cities or towns having more than five thousand inhabitants may provide that such cities and towns shall be divided into zones or districts, may regulate the location, size, height, bulk and use of buildings within such zones or districts, may establish building lines within such zones or districts or otherwise, and may make different regulations for different districts for any such city or town and may thereafter alter the same.

That the governing authorities of any such city or town may be authorized by their charter to create a Commission or Board for the purpose of carrying out the powers of this Act or may provide for the creation of a Board of Appeals or Review for the purpose of hearing and deciding on appeals from and reviewing any order, requirement, decision or determination of the governing authorities in carrying out the powers and authority conferred hereunder.

That the powers conferred by this Act may be adopted by any city having a population of five thousand or over, provided the authority and power herein conferred shall never be construed to be a limitation of the power and authority of any such city making or amending any charter under the provisions of the Home Rule Act. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 87, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Took effect April 2, 1921. The act amends "article 1096d, chapter xvi of Acts of 1913) Civil Statutes of the State of Texas, relating to the Home Rule of Cities or towns having more than five thousand inhabitants by adding thereto the following powers."

Constitutionality.—The Legislature had the power to confer authority on the city of Dallas to regulate and license jitney busses. City of Dallas v. Gill (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 1144.

Power to extend city limits, previously vested in the Legislature, could, by amendment of the Constitution, be vested in the voters of the city. Cohen v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 265 S. W. 757.

Annexation of territory.—See Cohen v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 265 S. W. 757; note to art. 1096d.

Sale of liquor.—Under Brownsville City Charter, § 22, providing for establishment of saloon districts, facts that district established had more residences than business houses, and that limits without district contained more business houses than residences, held not to warrant conclusion ordinance establishing district was void as unreasonable. City of Brownsville v. Fernandez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 112.

Ordinance of city establishing saloon district was not void because it failed to provide penalty for violation. Id.

Assessment for improvements.—See Dillon v. Whitley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 329; note under art. 1011.

Taxing power.—The amendment to the Ft. Worth charter, adopted June 17, 1919, pursuant to Const. art. 11, § 5, as amended, which allowed additional taxes for general school purposes, etc., did not diminish the city's general taxing power fixed by the charter at $1.75 per $100. Which, however, included the school tax limited to 50 cents per $100, and, hence, a bond issue cannot be rejected on the ground that the taxing power was so reduced. City of Ft. Worth v. Cureton, 110 Tex. 559, 222 S. W. 591.

Regulation of automobiles for hire.—Under this act, municipal ordinance, imposing license fee for operating automobiles for hire, held a valid exercise of the police power, and not an imposition of an unauthorized occupation tax. Ex parte Parr, 82 Cr. R. 625, 200 S. W. 404.

City having authority to regulate operation of automobiles for hire, the court cannot declare its regulations unreasonable, unless such unreasonable is clearly apparent. Id.

An ordinance requiring a license to operate automobiles for hire was not rendered invalid by a provision therein giving authority to revoke the license. Id.

It was not improper classification to provide in one ordinance for the licensing of jitneys operating over particular routes, and in another ordinance for the licensing of service cars confined to no particular route. Id.

Requirement that applicants for licenses to operate automobiles for hire should furnish bond or indemnity insurance in the sum of $10,000 held not unreasonable on its face. Id.

Building regulations.—Dallas City Charter, art. 1, § 3, requiring new plats in cities to conform to abutting streets and lots, and Building Code, § 2, requiring new plats to maintain the established frontage, are within the police power, and not subject to attack on constitutional grounds. Haisell v. Ferguson, 169 Tex. 144, 202 S. W. 317.

Property owners in Dallas must, without compensation, submit to City Charter, art. 1, § 3, and Building Code, § 2, as to maintaining frontage of lots. Id.

Control of parks.—While the city of El Paso has exclusive control over its parks and may lay out sidewalks therein where necessary for park purposes, such right does not extend to diverting park grounds to general street and sidewalk purposes. El Paso Union Passenger Depot Co. v. Look (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 745.

While the city of El Paso may not delegate its authority and control of public parks to create in a union depot company a vested right to keep and maintain the same and prohibit the city's control and improvement thereof, yet the city may contract for maintenance of park. Id.

Regulation of cemeteries.—The city of Sherman, under its general powers conferred in its charter adopted under this act may enact reasonable regulations for the government of public cemeteries. Ex parte Adlof, 86 Cr. R. 13, 215 S. W. 222.

Delegation of powers.—In an ordinance regulating barbers, and providing for a license and physical inspection, etc., the commissioners of the city of San Antonio were vested with the authority, under City Charter, § 59, to place the power of deciding what may be an "infectious, contagious, or communicable disease" to its health officer. Hanzel v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 237.

Art. 1096d. City, in fixing charges under franchise, may consider fair value of property.—That any city having a special charter, or a charter adopted or amended under the provisions of Chapter 147 of the General Laws passed at the Regular Session of the Thirty-third Legislature, or under any amendments thereto, and having authority under its charter to determine, fix and regulate the charges, fares or rates of compensation to be charged by any person, firm or corporation enjoying

Art. 1096d. Former powers preserved, etc.

Failure to embrace powers in charter.—Under this article, the powers so preserved are not lost if an election be held under the act to amend an old charter, and such powers are not expressly written into the amendment. Frankenstein v. Rushmore & Cowdy (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 189.

The powers granted under arts. 1006-1017, relating to public improvements, were not lost to a city adopting amendments under this act, notwithstanding that the powers granted by arts. 1006-1017, were not copied into the amendments adopted. Keller v. Western Paving Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1077.

A paving ordinance is not void under this act, because the city charter, which had been amended since the passage of that law, failed to embrace within it and to make a part thereof the powers sought to be exercised by the ordinance as required by this article. Sullivan v. Roach-Manigan Paving Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 444.

Art. 1096i. Penalties for obstruction or incumbrance of streets, etc.; street franchises, etc.

Grant of franchise.—A right that properly may be denominated a franchise must be granted by the sovereignty (under our system of government, the legislative department thereof), and be of such a nature that, without the express legislative authority contained in the grant, it could not be lawfully exercised by the grantee. McCutcheon v. Wozencraft (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 732.

Art. 1096j. Validation of charters and amendments to charters adopted under this chapter.

Validation of annexation.—If the voters of a city had not been given power to extend city limits by amending its charter, without vote of the inhabitants of the outlying territory required by Rev. St. 1911, art. 781, then such an attempt, subsequent to enactment of Acts 33d Leg. c. 147 (arts. 1096a-1096i), was rendered effectual by this act, and Acts 35th Leg. c. 30, § 1 (art. 1096k). Cohen v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 757.

Art. 1096k. Validation of charter amendments.

See Cohen v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 757; note under art. 1096j.

Art. 1096kk. Validating incorporations.—That each charter and each act of incorporation adopted by the qualified voters of cities of over five thousand inhabitants that have incorporated under Chapter 147, page 307, Acts of the Regular Session of the 33rd Legislature, 1913, prior to December 15, 1915, and filed in the office of the Secretary of State, the population of which was less than five thousand inhabitants, as shown by the United States Census of 1910, but which, at the time of the adoption of the charter or act of incorporation, was in excess of five thousand inhabitants according to an official census taken under the direction and supervision of the city council, be and the same are hereby validated and are hereby declared to be in full force and effect the same as if adopted in strict compliance with the requirements of said Chapter 147, page 307, Acts of the Regular Session of the 33rd Legislature, 1913, and this Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 68, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 27, 1918, date of adjournment.

Proceedings not validated.—This act cannot validate an amendment to a home rule charter extending the boundaries of the city which was unconstitutional. City of Waco v. Higginson (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1084.
Art. 1096/. Validation of charters and amendments to charters adopted under this chapter.—That each charter, and amendment to a charter, adopted by any city of more than Five Thousand inhabitants in this State, or where such city has amended or attempted to amend or adopt such charter, since the enactment of Chapter 147, Acts of the Regular Session of the Thirty-third Legislature, 1913, and all proceedings had with reference thereto, are hereby validated, and are hereby declared to be in full force and effect, the same as if adopted in strict compliance with the requirements of said Chapter 147, Acts of the 33rd Legislature, and this Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 52, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 1096m. Validation of elections and of municipal proceedings and contracts.—That in all cases where an election has been held in any city of more than five thousand inhabitants in this State for the purpose of voting on the question of the adoption of a charter or amendment of charter of said city, and a majority of the qualified voters of such city voting on the question have voted in favor of such charter or amendment, such election and all proceedings of the governing authorities in relation thereto are hereby validated and confirmed, notwithstanding such proceedings may not have been in strict conformity with the provisions of Chapter 147 of the Acts of the Thirty-third Legislature of 1913, and notwithstanding any irregularity in the form of ballot, or that several amendments may have been submitted on the same ballot: and all such charters and amendments which have been approved by the majority of the legal voters as aforesaid, and copies of which have been filed in the office of the Secretary of State, are hereby validated, approved and confirmed, the same as if adopted in strict compliance with the requirements of said Chapter 147 of the Acts of the Thirty-third Legislature and other laws applicable thereto; and all proceedings taken or contracts entered into by the governing authorities of such cities pursuant to any such charter or amendment are hereby validated. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg., 3d C. S., ch. 18, § 1.]

Took effect June 16, 1920.

Art. 1096n. Validation of charters and amendments to charters.—That each charter, and amendment to a charter, adopted by any city of more than five thousand inhabitants in this State, or where such city has amended or attempted to amend or adopt such charter, since the enactment of Chapter 147, Acts of the Regular Session of the Thirty-third Legislature, 1913, and all proceedings had with reference thereto, are hereby validated, and are hereby declared to be in full force and effect, the same as if adopted in strict compliance with the requirements of said Chapter 147, Acts of the Thirty-third Legislature [Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914, arts. 1096a–1096j], and this Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 39, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

CONSOLIDATION OF CITIES

Article 1096½. Certain cities may consolidate.

Art. 1103. Conveyances must be in writing, signed and delivered.

1. Necessity of writing in general.—Under this article, an oral contract by one who owns land certificates, and who has located the land, intending to apply for patents, whereby he agrees to convey a part of such land to another in consideration of services as an attorney, and a decree of partition obtained by the latter setting off the land to him, cannot be pleaded as a defense in a suit by one who received a deed from the owner before the suit for partition was begun. Masterson v. Little, 75 Tex. 652, 15 S. W. 154.

A conveyance in settlement of the grantor’s interest in other land was not in conflict with this article. Kamolph v. Junker, 1 Civ. App. 517, 21 S. W. 551.

One cannot divest himself of title to land by mere declarations that he does not own or claim any of it. Hardin v. Wansley (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1031.

Under allegation of adverse possession, defendant could not show as against prima facie case that the property had been conveyed to him by parol by one who had been in adverse possession, where it appeared that if the statute of limitations had operated at all in the grantor’s favor it had operated long enough to perfect title in him, which title could not be divested by parol, in view of this article. Campbell v. Castle (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 484.

The ratification of an unauthorized mortgage must be evidenced by a written instrument, under arts. 1103, 3965. Texas Moline Plow Co. v. Klapproth (Com. App.) 299 S. W. 392.

Without the intention of abandonment, the mere nonuser of an easement created by grant will not extinguish it. Henderson v. Le Duke (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 655.

Where landowner engaged in an enterprise with owners of other lands to build a pumping plant on his land, and the plant was erected on the faith of his promise that it should be a permanency, and the plaintiff sold his interest to associates, expressing a willingness to make the license or easement perpetual in writing, equity will not allow the permission to use his premises to be revoked, even though it amounted to a mere license. Markley v. Christen (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 150.

An “easement” implies an interest in land and a “license” does not. Id.

3. — Lease.—Oil lease for five years and longer, giving the lessee, his heirs, and assigns right to sink wells, lay pipes, erect tanks, etc., conveys an estate of inheritance within this article, “estate,” in the statute, meaning any quality of interest from that of absolute owner to naked possession, and “inheritance” meaning the method by which children or relatives take property from another at his death; and this is so, whether the lease is termed a conveyance, grant, or lease, or a “demise,” which signifies a conveyance either in fee for life or for years. Priddy v. Green (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 243.

A lease giving right to enter and remove oil and gas, whether considered a contract to lease for a term more than one year, or a contract conveying an interest in the land must be in writing. Id.

Under arts. 1103, 3965, an assignment of a lease for more than one year must be in writing. Lewis Bros. v. Pendleton (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 502.

A 10-year lease giving lessee the right to enter on the land, to drill wells and erect buildings, etc., necessary to save and take from the land oil, gas, or other minerals, is such an estate in the land that under this article, a conveyance of it must be in writing, subscribed and delivered by the party disposing of the same. Texas Co. v. Tankersley (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 672.

A lease of lands for more than one year is a conveyance under this article. Canon v. Scott (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1042.

4. — Gifts.—To constitute a valid gift inter vivos, there must be a gratuitous and absolute transfer of the property from the donor, taking effect immediately, and fully executed by delivery and acceptance. Martin v. Martin (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 188.
Alleged parol gifts asserted for the first time after the death of the donor to be upheld are not supported by evidence that is clear, certain, and free from uncertainty. 1d.

One seeking to recover upon an alleged parol gift must establish, by full, clear, and satisfactory evidence, a gift of the land, the terms and conditions of which must be shown free from ambiguity, and not merely an expression of an intent to make the gift at a future time. 1d.

Evidence held insufficient, the terms of the gift not being clearly shown, and no making of improvements of substantial value being disclosed. 1d.

It is necessary to the validity of a parol gift of land that possession be delivered and valuable improvements made with the knowledge or consent of the donor, and the mere taking of possession and making of improvements of insignificant value is not sufficient where the value of the rents exceeds that of the improvements. 1d.

A parol gift of land will be sustained and enforced when clearly proven, and when possession has been taken and valuable improvements made on the faith of it, notwithstanding temporary absence; it appearing there was no abandonment. Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 492.

In order for a break in the continuity of possession to destroy the gift, it must appear, either that there was noncompliance with the conditions of the gift or an abandonment of the property, and hence instruction that there could be no recovery unless possession was continuous was properly refused, where it appeared that the donee left the land temporarily with the consent of the donor, and that thereafter he returned and resumed possession without objection. 1d.

Title to land will pass by verbal gift accompanied by possession and improvements by the donee. Reid v. King (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 906.

Defendants had failed totally to discharge the burden of showing that they made valuable improvements on the property of a character that materially enhanced its value. Leonard v. Cleburne Roller Mills Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 685.

A parol gift of land may be established by a fair preponderance of the evidence just as in any other civil action. Carleton-P Ferguson Dry Goods Co. v. McFarland (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 268.

Payment of taxes on land by alleged donor after date of alleged parol gift is a circumstance tending to refute an allegation of gift, but it is not conclusive. 1d.

Were it to be held that father made parol gift of land to daughter, conduct of a partnership business on the premises by the father and the daughter's husband was not necessarily a denial of the right of possession in the daughter through her husband. 1d.

Possession of property taken and held by husband of donee for and in behalf of his wife in reliance on a parol gift to her is sufficient, especially where that possession is shared in part by the wife in person, and donor during entire period of possession recognized ownership of land in the wife. 1d.

In an action to have land given by parol to daughter applied to pay grantor's debts, contention of plaintiff that improvements were not sufficient because less than the rental value of the land was untenable, where the rentals of the land up to the time the first improvements were made did not equal one-half the cost of such improvements. 1d.

5/2. — Interest under contract.—Letter to vendors, advising them to foreclose their vendor's lien, held not inoperative as abandonment of rights under contract on ground that it was insufficient as a relinquishment of an interest in real estate acquired under such agreement because not in the form of or sufficient as a deed as required by this article, writer having no title or present interest in the property to convey, but only a parol agreement to acquire an interest. Daugherty v. Rosberry (Civil. App.) 229 S. W. 924.

6. Appointment of agent.—Authority to make an executory contract for the sale of real estate need not be in writing. Armstrong v. Palmer (Civil. App.) 218 S. W. 627.

A written proposition in the form of a letter was sufficient to create a perpetual easement in the land, where it was in fact a power of attorney to a third person to sell such an interest in the land, and there was in fact a conveyance made by such third person under the authority given by such letter. Markley v. Christen (Civil. App.) 226 S. W. 150.

7. Power as conveyance.—Power of attorney to bring suit for certain land, agreeing that attorney should have "one-half of the amount of land so recovered and one-half of the proceeds of any and all sales," etc., did not convey one-half the land, but merely interest in proceeds. Browne v. King (Civil. App.) 196 S. W. 884.

One claiming interest in land under power of attorney from plaintiff, who deeded to defendant in settlement of action, cannot, on intervening, recover by merely showing record title in plaintiff, but must further show that defendant had not perfected title under recorded deed or by adverse possession as alleged. 1d.

Instrument, whereby landowners authorized agent to sign their names to contract with third person in disposal of their land, owners agreeing in consideration of agent's services and moneys expended in negotiating the transaction to accept a number of acres out of certain public school lands for their equity in the land disposed of, did not pass any legal or equitable title to the agent or agents in the public school lands conveyed by the instrument to the owners. Vauter v. Greenwood (Civil. App.) 12 S. W. 269.

8. Authority of agent.—A power of attorney, authorizing one to bargain and sell property, does not give power to execute a deed of trust. Texas Moline Plow Co. v. Klapproth (Com. App.) 208 S. W. 392.

A power of attorney authorizing lawyer to assign and handle property for client's best interests, etc., does not authorize attorney to make another his associated agent.
and attorney in fact and assign property to pay already accrued debts of such attorney in fact. Miers v. Trevino (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 715. The assignee must take notice of the powers of attorney and their recitals and whether assignment was within usual scope of assignors' powers. Id.

A general authority to sell given an agent does not give the authority to barter. Federal Supply Co. v. Wichita Sales & Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 879.

9. — Termination of agency.—Where agent is authorized to sue for land or to sell it, to have share out of proceeds or property recovered for his services, his powers are not coupled with an interest, and authority may be revoked at principal's will, even though, by the agreement, declared to be exclusive and irrevocable. Browne v. King (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 884.

A power of attorney to lease land and collect rents, being for personal services not coupled with an interest, was revoked by the principal's death, and the agent cannot recover thereunder for services rendered thereafter. Beckham v. Scott (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 127.

A bare power of attorney, in which the agent's only interest is in the performance of his services therein contracted to be rendered in order that he loan the stipulated compensation, is revocable at the will of the grantor unless the power is given as security or is coupled with an interest. Bryan v. Ross (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 524.

Where a client gave his attorney a written power to sue for and recover lands, and assigned a two-thirds undivided interest as compensation, the attorney after part performance had acquired such an interest in the land sued for as to constitute an interest in the subject-matter of the power and to prevent revocation by the grantor. Id.

Such contract was intended as security, and the power was not revocable after a partial performance by the attorney. Id.

12. Dedication, requisite of.—Where road had long been used as public roadway, a judgment sanctioning agreement that road be opened up and dedicated as a public road, in connection with another judgment ordering road to be opened and an obstruction removed and the acts of the parties to the judgment, owners of land upon which right of way was located and public officials treating road as public highway, constituted a dedication to public use. Santa Fé Town Site Co. v. Norvell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 960.

The judgment was not invalid as an infringement upon exclusive rights of commissioners' court to lay out public road. Id.

Dedication must be unequivocal before even use can create a dedication. City of Pearsall v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 327.

To dedicate a piece of land for the purpose of a highway it must appear from the acts and declarations of the owner that such dedication was clearly and unmistakably intended by him, and that the public, has acted in reference to and upon the faith of such acts and declarations. Id.

Where owners of land deeded it to church trustees for a cemetery, and thereafter members of the church and public were interred in the land, there was a dedication to cemetery purposes, and so long as it continued fit for such purposes it was the duty of the church through its trustees to execute the trust and maintain the cemetery for the benefit of the public, and persons having their dead buried therein had the right to invoke the aid of equity to restrain destruction, spoliation, or disturbance of the graves, as by an oil company's drilling a well under conveyance from the trustees. Barker v. Hazel-Fain Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 874.

Evidence, sufficiency of.—Evidence held insufficient to show that alleged road was ever dedicated or accepted by the county. Ex parte Land & Irrigation Co. v. Urbahn (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 926.

17. — Designation in maps or plats.—Deed stating that all streets and alleys are dedicated to the public generally, and especially to the city, that red lines on map designate public sidewalks, and that green shadings indicate private parking between the sidewalk and curbing, would constitute a dedication to the public of an easement in sidewalk space, but not in strip designated private parking. Summit Place Co. v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 145.

If intention of maker of map was to include sidewalk space and private parking space as portions of corner lots, such intention was adopted by the owner when it recorded the map. Id.

Where title to land dedicated as alley was obtained by defendant by limitation under art. 5683, defendant did not re dedicate land to city by sale of property with reference to map filed in deed records, where no mention was made of the alley, and where owner had not made or recorded plat. City of Pearsall v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 327.

Acceptance.—Where triangular piece of land, dedicated to street purposes, was thereafter incorporated within limits of city, which improved portion of street, but not triangular parcel, there was sufficient acceptance of dedication by city. Newton v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 705.

The dedication of streets and alleys to the use of the public in a town site is not renounced by the city, acceptance being not a matter of number of inhabitants to organize a municipal government. Roaring Springs Townsite Co. v. Paducah Telephone Co., 109 Tex. 452, 212 S. W. 147.

Where land has been platted, and the plat recorded, showing certain streets thereon, purchasers of lots described with reference to the plat acquire easements in the streets as designated, even though there has been no acceptance by the city. Sherman Slaughtering & Rendering Co. v. Texas Nursery Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 478.

21. Operation and effect.—Where public square had been donated to city for use of public without reservation, construction thereon of building for county fuel and water-closets for use in connection with courthouse held nuisance, which would be abated by adjoining owner's acquiescence in use for courthouse not authorizing extension of unauthorized use. McBride v. Rockwall County (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 226.

Where land was sold and conveyed with reference to alley, purchaser acquired by dedication easement in such alley, which became charged with incidental servitude, and purchaser could have alley kept open. Barclay v. Dismuke (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 564.

Where alley was dedicated as inducement to purchaser, purchaser is not required to plead and prove special injury to his property. Id.

Previous dedication of sidewalk, by map duly recorded, and by reference made a part of deed, precludes grantees from using sidewalk space for building purposes. Summit Place Co. v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 145.

The general rule that a dedicatory may impose such restrictions as he may see fit on making a dedication of his property to a public use is subject to the limitation that the restriction be not repugnant to the dedication or against public policy. Roaring Springs T tornado-site Co. v. Paducah Telephone Co., 190 Tex. 458, 212 S. W. 147.

Trustees of a church, grantees in a deed of land for cemetery purposes, vested with fee-simple title, and authorized by their governing authority to sell part of the land, had no authority to convey the land to an oil company in consideration of one-eighth of its capital stock instead of money. Earker v. Hazel-Paint Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 874.

Where owners of land dedicated it to trustees of a church for cemetery purposes, and the dedication was completed by use of the land as a cemetery, persons having their dead buried thereon can protect not only as against the graves, no and against the grantor and trustees of the church, but also as against an oil company holding the deed of the trustees, for which it had paid cash consideration before proceeding to drill an oil well on the land. Id. Where an owner of land subdivides it, land subsequent to the initial use and be used as a right of way for pipe lines, and there is nothing in the deed restricting its use to private pipe lines, such right of way may be used as by such any person or corporation operating a public pipe line, such corporations being common carriers and having the right of eminent domain. Gulf Sulphur Co. v. Ryman (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 316.

Abutting property owners may enjoin the use of land dedicated to a public purpose for any other than the purpose for which it was dedicated. Id.

22. Tenancy in common—Mutual rights and liabilities.—One tenant in common may maintain action to establish title and to recover possession against his cotenant, when the latter has ousted him of possession of the property owned in common. Duncanson v. Howell (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 222, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) Howell v. Duncanson, 195 S. W. 240.

There can be no recovery for rent against co-owner in possession in absence of evidence of a demand on co-owner for the use of the land. Guarantee Mercantile Co. v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 543.

23. Rights as to third persons.—One of two joint tenants cannot make a valid contract of sale of the entire title without the consent of the other. Dodge v. Lacey (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 406.

Title of a tenant in common to an undivided interest in the land involved in an action to establish title and to recover possession was sufficient to warrant recovery of the entire tract as against a trespasser, though such right does not exist as against a cotenant. Duncanson v. Howell (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 222, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) Howell v. Duncanson, 195 S. W. 240.

The right of one cotenant to appropriate or convey specific part of common property does not depend upon agreement or assent of his co-owners, but conditioned solely upon the right being exercised without prejudice or injury to co-owners, and, having been so exercised, the grantee is entitled upon partition to have such specific part. Gosch v. Wrona (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 218.

A tenant in common may dispose of a specific described portion of the common property if such disposition is made with due regard to the rights of his cotenant, and a purchaser of such specific portion of the property acquires full title if it is of no more value than the interest of the seller, and cotenant is not injured by the partition. Brown v. Brown (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1058.

A deed from one tenant in common to a specific part of the common property will be recognized and the purchaser thereof protected by setting apart to him the specific part so conveyed, if this can be done without prejudice to the other owners. Lasater v. Ramirez (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 955.

Where there remains a sufficient estate out of which the interests of the nonjoining tenants can be satisfied, the remaining acreage being exactly the same in kind and value as the tract sold, the nonjoining tenants cannot be prejudiced, and the right of the purchaser should be enforced. Id.
The right of the purchaser to a specific tract conveyed to him does not depend upon the nonjoining tenants' assent to or recognition of the sale, nor is it created through estoppel, but is conditioned solely upon whether its enforcement would prejudice the other owners. 1d.

Since the right of the purchaser does not depend upon their assent or upon estoppel, it is immaterial that a nonjoining tenant, against whom it is sought to enforce the right, is mentally incompetent, or that an estoppel cannot arise from his conduct, where his rights will not be prejudiced by the sale. 1d.

The conveyance may be ratified by the other cotenant and made to operate as a partition or conveyance in severality, and the cotenant or tenant may recognize such deed by conveying in like manner the remainder of the common property by metes and bounds. Starr v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 660.

Where a widow who took an undivided one-half interest in land, title to which was in her husband at the time of his death, conveyed a portion less than her half, and it appeared that the lands conveyed acre for acre were of no greater value than the other property, the widow's conveyance passed good title, notwithstanding there had been no partition and children were entitled to the other undivided one-half interest. Zabawa v. Allen (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 664.

29. Trusts—express.—That an attorney was mistaken as to the rights of his clients, in filing a suit to establish a lien on land instead of showing an express trust, will not defeat those rights if afterwards properly alleged and proved, but only goes to the weight to be given the evidence. McRide v. Briggs (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 341.

Trusts may be created by conveyance or assignment to the donee, or by transfer to third persons upon declared terms, or upon declarations which fasten a beneficial interest, but retain the legal title in the donor; language showing unequivocally an intention they ask is just and equitable._guest (Civ. App.) 306 S. W. 547.

A parol agreement to acquire interest in land for the joint benefit of the parties, where the deed was taken in the name of one, is enforceable as a trust upon the legal title. An agreement of parties seeking to effect such an agreement was not a consideration paid for the joint interest in land. Schultz v. Scott (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 830.

Where a nephew deposited money with his uncle on the latter's proposal that he would place the money at interest or in the bank for him, the relation of debtor and creditor was not created, but the uncle's holding of the money was as an acknowledged trustee. Allen v. Pollard, 109 Tex. 536, 212 S. W. 468.

An express trust may be ingrafted on a deed conveying the absolute title by parol testimony. Robinson v. Faville (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 316.

The right to use money deposited with defendants in trust and to receive commissions for its investment and reinvestment is sufficient consideration to sustain the trust contract. Murphy-Bolanz Land & Loan Co. v. McKibben (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 650.

Where land was conveyed to defraud, hinder, and delay creditors, the sale being a mere pretense, and grantor died and grantee conveyed the property to a third person in trust for the estate of the original grantor, the trust thus created was valid and enforceable. Hughes v. Hughes (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 970, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 191 S. W. 342.

Where employer claimed to have paid employee, on termination of employment, an amount in excess of that due, and made an agreement with employee pursuant to which employee deposited such amount in a bank in his own name as trustee, upon employer's agreement to make a prompt payment to employee's account with employer, there was no trust created between employer and employee either expressly, constructively, or by implication of law. Mexican Coal & Coke Co. v. Ruckman (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 347.

The rule that the facts which show a trust in land must exist at the time of the execution of the deed, and that no prior or subsequent verbal agreement will create a trust, is true only of resulting trusts and not of an express trust. Graves v. Graves (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 543.

30. Resulting trust.—To create a resulting trust, the consideration must be paid, and the trust arise at the very time title is acquired. Guest v. Guest (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 547; Vaello v. Rodriguez (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1052.

In suit to establish resulting trust in land, plaintiffs must disclose all facts and circumstances connected with transaction in question, so as to make it manifest that remedy they ask is just and equitable. Blumenthal v. Nussbaum (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 272.

A verbal agreement to pay part of the purchase price of lots, title to be taken jointly, made prior to delivery of deed to defendant's husband alone as grantee, will subject the property to the confidence or trust confided in defendant's husband. McRide v. Briggs (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 341.

Where it was verbally agreed that title should be taken jointly to lots, it is immaterial, in an action by one to have a trust declared, that the other had taken a deed in his own name. 1d.

Where plaintiff and defendant agreed to jointly acquire land, defendant to furnish all the money and to be thereafter repaid by plaintiff, defendant, in taking the title in his own name, held an undivided one-half interest in trust for benefit of plaintiff. Johnston v. Johnston (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 469.
Where plaintiff loaned money to defendant to buy land for defendant, who agreed to repay the money, then the resulting trust, to create which the trust instrument must be made at the time of purchase. Aaron Frank Clothing Co. v. Deegan (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 471.

Where wife out of her own separate property furnished all money invested in land, a resulting trust between husband and wife with legal effect vested equitable title in wife. Chalk v. Daggett (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1557.

A resulting trust arises where one party furnishes money to buy property which is transferred or conveyed to another. Vaello v. Rodriguez (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 1082.

Where a father purchased land during his second marriage for a consideration paid from proceeds of sale of three tracts, one belonging to the community of the second marriage, one to the issue of his first marriage, and one which was his separate property, a resulting trust was created in the purchased land in favor of the children of the first marriage. Highsway v. Head (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 561.

A resulting trust in land must result, if at all, at the time deed is taken and the legal title vests in the grantee, and no oral agreement and no payment made before or after the title is taken will create it. Burns v. Veritas Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 440.

Where the conveyance is made to one person, the mere fact that he has agreed to purchase or hold it for another, who has not paid anything or only a small part of the purchase price, does not create a resultant trust in the latter's favor, or where it does not appear that any valid consideration was given for such agreement. Id.

Where ten men and plaintiff contributed property to organize a company, and one of the trustees purchased an option on oil lands, and later along with others, organized a corporation which took over the oil lands, no trust held to result in favor of plaintiff none of his property or interest in any way inducing the new corporation, to advance the money to purchase the land, even though the company was incorporated upon a conspiracy to squeeze out plaintiff's interest. Id.

A resulting trust will not exist unless the transaction is such at the moment the title passes that the trust will result from the transaction itself, and one who has paid no money or had none paid on his account, either actual or constructive, cannot claim a resulting trust. Id.

A resulting trust will be implied only where it is consistent with the intention of the parties as to the time of the acquisition of the property. Id.

Where an agreement is made at the time of the transaction to hold property on a different trust from that which would arise by implication of law, a resultant trust will not arise. Id.

After the death of a husband, where he has contract to secure title for his client will be regarded in equity as holding legal title for client. Home Inv. Co. v. Strange, 109 Tex. 342, 195 S. W. 848.

Defendant, who obtained assignment of vendor's lien notes from plaintiff by duress, held them as trustee for plaintiff, charged with sum paid to third person in discharge of plaintiff's debt, and, having used notes to acquire land, held undivided interest in it as constructive trustee for plaintiff. Mallard v. Day (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 245.

Even if a trustee could question the validity of the alleged oral trust on which the land was conveyed to him, equity would enforce a constructive trust against him for the protection of the wronged beneficiaries. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Harbaugh (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 406.

The only heir of deceased, on discovering a will making bequests to others and naming him as executor, concealing its existence, and taking and using as his own all the property, became a trustee for the others. Van Orden v. Pitts (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 530.

Where a person acquires legal title to land by means of an intentionally false and fraudulent verbal promise to hold same for a certain specified purpose, or to convey, and thereby retains, uses, and claims property as his own, so that the transaction is in fact a scheme of actual deceit, a constructive trust results. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

A mere verbal promise to purchase and convey land does not create an ex maleficio trust; positive fraud accompanying the promise, and by means of which the acquisition of the legal title was obtained, being necessary. Id.

Generally, where legal title to property has been acquired through actual fraud, misrepresentations, concealments, taking advantage of one's necessities, or under circumstances rendering it unconscionable for holder of legal title to retain beneficial interest, equity impresses a constructive trust. Id.

When land is purchased at execution sale under prior fraudulent verbal promise to hold property for benefit of owner and reconvert upon payment of the amount advanced, and purchaser, having obtained property for much less than actual value, retains the land as his own, a constructive trust results in favor of former owner. Id.

Where a mother induced her daughter to execute deed by promise to make will devising estate to daughter, equity will enjoin a trust on the deed upon mother's refusal to fulfill promise, without an allegation of fraud. Robinson v. Faville (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 316.

It is no defense that such promise can be enforced against mother's estate upon her death, since mother may dispose of property before her death. Id.

Where conspirators fraudulently procured conveyance from plaintiffs for a small valuation, court in rendering judgment establishing a constructive trust in favor of plaintiffs could not decree that such judgment be satisfied by payment by defendant to plaintiffs of certain sum per acre; such conveyance being void, and plaintiffs having the superior equitable substantial title with which they cannot be compelled to part. Scarr-

Where, through misrepresentations, plaintiffs were induced to convey land, and mineral rights obtained in exchange for the lands were conveyed to the wife of one of the parties, the wife's rights are not affected by the misrepresentations, unless she had not, through her own consent, liability as a constructive trustee cannot be fixed in an action against her husband and collaborator in his fraud, but must be fixed in an action to which she is a party. Reeves v. Shook (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 429.

32. Sufficiency of evidence.—Proof of an express trust must be clear and satisfactory. Faust v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1061; Watts v. McCloud (Civ. App.)
205 S. W. 331; Rudasill v. Rudasill (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 983; Carl v. Settegast (Civ.
App.) 211 S. W. 506.

Evidence that corporation managing park for benefit of colored people had been

Evidence held not to show that grantee held the land in trust for the grantor. Fa-

Evidence held insufficient to establish trust in land for money loaned to pay purchase money. Aaron Frank Clothing Co. v. Deegan (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 471.

Evidence held to sustain finding that a deed to testator's son on settlement of a will was made on condition that he would divide the land between himself and plaintiffs. St.
Louis Union Trust Co. v. Harbaugh (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 496.

In an action to enjoin a parol trust upon a deed absolute in form, an instruction that such trust must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, or of the most convincing and positive character, would be erroneous. Carl v. Settegast (Civ. App.)
211 S. W. 508.

Evidence held insufficient to make out a case of resulting trust. Vaeillo v. Rodriguez
(Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1082.

In a suit by judgment debtor, who asserted that on the creditor's promise to allow an additional period for redemption the debtor waived his right to have the land sold in small parcels and that as a result of the agreement there was no competitive bidding, evidence held sufficient to sustain the jury's finding of such promise and the creation of a parol trust. Riley v. Chandler (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 361.

Recitals in deed from son to mother held sufficient to support finding in trespass to try title by mother against son's widow that son held property in trust for mother and that she paid greater part, if not all, of purchase money for lots and house thereon, with agreement she should stand in son's name but be her property. Witt v. Witt (Civ. App.)
224 S. W. 277.

As an abstract proposition it is no longer the rule that a parol trust cannot be esblished by the testimony of one witness. Graves v. Graves (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 543.

In an action by a son against father to have a trust declared in land, plaintiff claiming an undivided interest, evidence held sufficient to support a verdict for plaintiff. Id.

36. Title and rights of parties.—Where two heirs agreed to acquire joint title to property, in which they had an interest and pay each of the other heirs $40 and did acquire the property by foreclosure, right of one of the purchasers to compel the other to make division of the property, title to which had been taken in the other's name, was not affected by failure to pay the other heirs $40 each. Johnston v. Johnston (Civ. App.)
204 S. W. 493.

Under no circumstances can a trustee claim or set up a claim to the trust property averse to the cestui que trust, or deny the title of the cestui que trust, as a trustee must assume the validity of a trust under which he acts. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v.
Harbaugh (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 496.

One could not, by reason of the wrong of trustees, in which he participated, making him a trustee, acquire the property free from the equitable title, as he would be stopped from setting up the invalidity of a contract to which the beneficiaries were not parties. Id.

Where a vendor of land agreed to deposit $50,000 with trustees to be paid as bonus

Where the executors of vendor sought to recover the amount on the theory that a reasonable time had expired without the construction of a railroad, purchasers who because of their interest intervened are not entitled to attorney's fees out of the corpus of fund because the trustees represented them and persons similarly situated. Id.
Beneficiary though null juris may rely on the honesty and fair dealing of trustees, or recover relief when the trust relationship is abused. Murphy-Bolanz Land & Loan Co. v. McKibben (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 650.

Ordinarily, the measure of damages for breach of faith by trustee in purchasing land for the beneficiary is the difference between the value of the land at the time of the purchase and the contract price. Id.

37. — Power of sale and management. — Trustees cannot sell the trust estate without the express or implied authority conferred upon them by the instrument creating the trust. W. El Paso Land Improvement Co. v. Witherland 201 S. W. 223.

No particular form of words is necessary to create a power of sale but it is essential only that the intent to create the power appear. Id.

Deed to trustee, the habendum clause of which was to the trustee, his successors or assigns, and granting other rights to the trustee and those for whom he holds title, "and his or their assigns," created a power to sell. Id.

If a trustee is empowered by the instrument creating the trust to sell, he may be compelled to specifically perform. Id.

Where father, in whose name legal title was taken to land purchased with funds of sons, sold land, sale would include equity of sons, and it is presumed that purchaser took land free from equity. Highsaw v. Head (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 175.

Trustees should be allowed out of trust fund expenses of litigation concerning such fund when forced on them; hence trustees of fund, deposited by vendor of land as a bonus to first railroad coming through are entitled to attorney's fees out of fund, where it was the duty of the executor of the vendor to recover the fund. West Texas Bank & Trust Co. v. Matlock (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 937.

All trustees must join in an act, or one must act for all, thus becoming the agent of the others. Brann v. City of Laredo (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 329.

One of several trustees in whom confidence has been reposed jointly, with no power given him, either expressly or by implication, to act singly, cannot sell the entire title to the trust property without the consent of the others. Dodge v. Lacey (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 496.

A trustee is not permitted to manage the trust property so as to gain any advantage directly or indirectly, beyond his lawful commission, and for breach of such duty the beneficiary is entitled to claim all gains and to charge the trustee with all losses. Murphy-Bolanz Land & Loan Co. v. McKibben (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 650.

Where trustees to invest money for plaintiff acted as agents for vendor who sold property to plaintiff and collected a commission from the vendor, they were guilty of a breach of trust; for which they are liable. Id.

The acceptance by the beneficiary of property purchased with trust funds in breach of trustees' duty is not a ratification of trustees' act, unless made after full knowledge of facts. Id.

Where trustees induced the beneficiary to accept a purchase with trust funds of property for whose owner they were agents and represented that they could sell the property by severing different payments became due, which they knew she could not meet, but they failed to make the resale and plaintiff lost the property, the trustees were liable for the amount of trust funds invested, not merely for the difference between value and contract price and the commission they received from the vendor. Id.

38. — Misappropriation. — Where land purchased with money of sons was sold by father, in whose name legal title was standing, sons could rightfully claim proceeds or follow them into any other property in which they were shown to have been invested. Highsaw v. Head (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 155.

Where father later purchased other land, with proceeds of land sold, land purchased became impressed with same trust as attached to land sold. Id.

Where plaintiff advanced funds to enable the borrower to purchase 123 cattle, and, in a letter to the seller, gave notice to defendant, the latter notified plaintiff that he contemplated the purchase of such number of cattle, defendant who applied a portion of money to a debt due from the borrower selling 83 cattle held liable therefor; the same being a trust fund, appropriating it with knowledge of its character. Witherspoon-McMullen Live Stock Commission Co. v. North Texas Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 278.

The measure of damages for the misappropriation or misapplication of trust funds by the trustee, where the fund is beyond reach, is the sum misapplied with legal interest from the date of misappropriation. Murphy-Bolanz Land & Loan Co. v. McKibben (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 650.

Purchasers of land from a trustee with knowledge of the trust take the property subject thereto, and both the cestui que trust and the trustee may recover the property. Hughes v. Hughes (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 970, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 191 S. W. 742.

A court of equity may reach trust property in the hands of any person not innocent. Bain v. Coats (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 571.

40. — Revocation and termination. — Where a vendor agreed to deposit $50,000 with trustees to be paid by them as a bonus to the first railroad constructed through the property, held that the vendor was entitled to have the fund revert to him if the trust should terminate within a reasonable time without attainment of object. West Texas Bank & Trust Co. v. Matlock (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 937.

It was proper for the vendor to insist that the trustees' bond should provide for return of the money within a reasonable time if no railroad was constructed, for if such provision were not incorporated in the agreement, the trust would be invalid under Const. art. 1, § 26, as creating a perpetuity. Id. 213 S. W. 320.

49. Avoidance of deed.—Facts held to show that vendor, who had commenced proceeding to foreclose lien, subsequently rescinded the sale by agreement with vendee, thus dispensing with notice and demand, so that subsequent conveyance to defendant was valid. Walls v. Cruse (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 240.

A general warranty deed for a stated consideration, evidenced in part by a note and retaining a vendor's lien is an executory contract under which superior legal title remained in the vendor, and vendee's refusal to pay the unpaid purchase price authorized vendor to claim an immediate rescission. In suit to cancel deeds given by a sister to her brother soon after the death of their mother, findings of the court canceling the deeds on ground of mental weakness of grantor at time of conveyance, inadequacy of consideration, and general overreaching by the brother, and that deeds were not ratified, held not sustained by the evidence. Dunlop (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 720.

50. Conditions precedent.—Where plaintiff, insane person, deeded away land, receiving no money, while none of purchase notes were delivered to her, defendant by fraud obtaining possession of instruments, plaintiff was not called upon to make tender back deed to deeded. McKenzie v. Whitaker (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1009; Same v. Sutton (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012; Same v. Winters (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012.

In suit to rescind sale for fraud and cancel deeds, notice and demand prior to suit is not necessary, but bringing of suit with offer to restore what plaintiff has received is sufficient. Perkins v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 551.

When a party dealing with an insane person acts in good faith and without knowledge of the insanity, he must, to avoid the transaction, return the consideration received in specie if possible. Wisdom v. Peek (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 210.

In action by grantor's heirs to cancel deed made in consideration of grantee's promise to support and maintain grantor during his lifetime, it was unnecessary, as a basis for the action, to offer or tender the return of any consideration; none having been paid in money or property at execution of deed. One who had conveyed his interest in land to his attorney cannot rescind the contract because of the attorney's breach of faith, without offering to restore the consideration. Head v. Moore (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 362.

Where a mother conveyed leased property to a son to defraud lessee, who could be removed on a sale of the property, the scheme being that the son convey after danger of suit was past, equity will not set aside the sale for the benefit of other children claiming under the mother, and it is immaterial that the deed was without consideration. Rogers v. Rogers (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 489.

52V2. Inadequacy of consideration.—Where, in payment of indebtedness of about $1,000, land was conveyed which was worth about $1,500, the difference between its value and the indebtedness was not so great as to require court to set aside deed for inadequacy of consideration alone. Grundy v. Greene (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 964.

Evidence held to show that plaintiff intentionally and without mistake of facts executed and delivered quietclaim deed. Smith v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 220.

In action for breach of covenant against incumbrances, defendant is precluded from relief from the contract on the ground of mutual mistake, where he noticed the oversight or mistake at time he signed deed. Neely v. Lane (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 154.

Without culpable negligence on part of a grantor, and where the rights of innocent third parties do not intervene, one executing a deed in ignorance of its character and contents and delivering it under the impression that it was for another purpose, under certain conditions, may be relieved from its terms. Grundy v. Greene (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 964.

Though husband did not know full legal effect of a deed conveying a lot to his wife as her separate property, where it was partly intended by him to defraud creditors, its effect, was not a mistake of fact of either party or the attorney preparing the conveyance. Markum v. Markum (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 835.

Duresis.—Duresis sufficient to warrant the cancellation of a deed may be practiced upon a person by threats of criminal prosecution against a near relation if the anxiety and fear of disgrace excited by such threats are so potent as to overcome the free will and choice of the person affected. Pirat Guaranty State Bank of Clyde v. Tipton (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 963.
A bank cashier who represented to a mother that the bank would refuse to honor checks drawn by her sons unless she conveyed her property to the bank, and that as a result of refusal to honor the checks the sons would be arrested and thrown into jail, practiced such duress as to warrant cancellation of the conveyance: it being unnecessary that the representation was to be by the person practicing the duress. A threat by employer to resort to fidelity bond for loss by embezzlement did not constitute duress such as would require the cancellation of a deed made by employee's wife to her homestead, although the inevitable result of carrying out the threat would be to put in motion the processes of the criminal law: employer not intending to exact an unconscionable bargain. Houston Ice & Brewing Co. v. Harlan (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 1099.

In an action by a married woman, evidence held insufficient to warrant submission of issue of duress, to the jury.

In suit by daughter against father, question of fraud held for jury. Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 566.

Proof that as result of fraud purchaser obtained possession of property and deprived vendor of its revenue for an entire season was sufficient showing of actual damage. Posey v. Hanson (Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 731.

Proof that notes given by purchaser are worth only small percentage of their face value was sufficient showing that plaintiff was actually damaged. Id.

One who constituted another her agent to purchase land for her was bound by such agent's knowledge as to character and value of land. Patterson v. Bushong (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 962.

Evidence held insufficient to show fraud upon the part of the widow of a partner of plaintiff, in settlement of a suit with plaintiff, when she was deemed a half interest of the land to which plaintiff claimed defendant's husband had given him a deed, which was lost. Davenport v. Shepherd (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 729.

Before deed can be canceled for fraud, facts and circumstances ought to be brought forth which would clearly lead a fair and reasonable mind to conclusion that fraud was actually perpetrated. Smith's Heirs v. Hirsch (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 754.

In suit to cancel deed, evidence held insufficient to show fraud. Id.

To cancel deed or other contract on ground of fraud, there must have been false representation of material fact, which must have been believed to be true by party deceived, who must have relied on representation. Janes v. Stratton (Civ. App.) 283 S. W. 386.

Where the owner of land received the proceeds of sale thereof with knowledge that her agents were the real purchasers, she is not entitled to cancellation of her deed executed to one of them on the ground that they abused their relation of trust and confidence. Samuel v. Branche (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 841.

Daughter's deed to mother made upon mother's promise to make will devising her estate to daughter will not be canceled upon mother's refusal to make such will, unless mother made the promise with the design and intention of disregarding it. Robinson v. Faville (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 316.

A grantor may rescind an executed conveyance in consideration of a representation and promise by grantee to perform some act in the future and which the grantee refuses to perform, where the representation and promise were made for the purpose of defrauding and deceiving the grantor without any intention of performance, and the failure is without excuse. Long v. Calloway (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 414.

Alleged misrepresentations, made after the delivery of the deed, need not be considered. Campbell v. Turley (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 528.

Where divorced wife, in anticipation of remarriage to former husband, agreed to convey land in consideration of husband's promise to discharge a lien, but was induced to sign deed reciting a different consideration relying on the promise that husband would do the right thing by her, her remedy, on husband's refusal to discharge lien, was not limited to a legal action, but, could bring action in equity to cancel deed. Moore v. Moore (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 78.

Plaintiff who conveyed to defendants under misrepresentations his interest in certain mineral lands held not to have waived his right to rescind by permitting defendant grantees to make an annual rental payment to keep alive plaintiff's and their rights; plaintiff having brought suit immediately after learning of the fraud. Holland v. De Wait (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 216.

Where the deed from plaintiff's predecessors conveyed title in the absence of evidence requiring finding by the trial court that plaintiff had ever parted with his interest so acquired other than by his deed to defendants sought to be canceled, plaintiff's suit could not be defeated on the claim there was no evidence showing he had any interest in the property. Id.

Defendants who procured by fraud and misrepresentations conveyance from plaintiff of his interest in mineral lands held entitled to judgment against them in his suit for cancellation for the $1 paid to him by them on execution of deed to them, and for the $25 paid by them to plaintiff's predecessor to continue in effect the conveyance from such predecessor to plaintiff and his associates. Id.

If a deed was procured by grantee's fraud in misrepresenting its contents to grantors, one of whom could not read or speak English, cancellation of the deed was authorized. Stephenson v. Arceneaux (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 729.

Where there was a parol agreement that ground rents under a prior oil and gas lease were not payable under mineral deed, and grantee and his attorney misrepresented the effect of the deed, on which representations the grantees relied, the grantees cannot avail himself of a right thus acquired by fraud, which avoided the legal effect of the deed so far as concerned the future rentals. Walker v. Ames (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 665.

A representation that an instrument conveying minerals, oil and gas constituted a lease and not a conveyance was in the nature of a mere legal opinion, and was not ground for cancellation of the conveyance, in the absence of evidence to indicate that defendants knew the representation to be false, or that it was made with any purpose to deceive or mislead. Richmond v. Hog Creek Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 565.

It was not ground for cancellation of a conveyance of oil and gas, coal and other minerals, that grantees, or lessees, falsely and fraudulently represented that the instrument amounted to no more than a license to enter on and explore for oil and gas, with the incidental privileges of entering thereon, laying pipes, lines, etc., since plaintiffs were not prejudicially affected. Id.

See arts. 2972a-2973c, and notes.

57. — Mental incapacity.—Evidence held sufficient to show that grantor at time of execution of deed was in a condition of senile dementia and unable to comprehend sufficiently the consequences of his act. Wisdom v. Peek (Civ. App.) 279 S. W. 210.

In a suit to cancel deeds on the ground that the grantor was of unsound mind, defendants are not chargeable with rent except from the date of their occupancy. Sherwood v. Sherwood (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 555.

In action to foreclose deed of trust defended on the ground that grantor was insane at the time of its execution, evidence held to require submission to jury of whether the deed of trust had been ratified during subsequent lucid intervals. White v. Holland (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 611.

60. Necessity and requisites of delivery and acceptance.—When the grantor offers a deed for record he constructively delivers it to the grantee. Russell v. Beckert (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 607.

There is valid delivery of deed, supporting innocent purchase from grantee, where it was placed in escrow, and delivered by depositary in accordance with escrow agreement, though execution of deed and such agreement was induced by fraud of grantee. Lynn v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 865.

A deed takes effect only from its delivery. Grimm v. Williams (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1119.

For a deed to operate as a conveyance, there must have been delivery with intent and purpose on the part of the grantor to relinquish control of the deed. Eckert v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 317.

It must be delivered into the control of the grantee with the intent of the grantor that it shall become operative as a conveyance. McIntire v. Thomason (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 563; Hapgood v. City Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 772.

An actual manual delivery of deed is not necessary if the intention to deliver appears, and such intention may be evidenced by the facts and circumstances shown. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 976.

The mere handling of a deed to a grantee for inspection does not amount to a delivery, for intention is the essence of delivery. Aggers v. Blackburn (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 424.

To operate as a transfer of title to land, there must be a delivery of the deed thereto, and the delivery must be made with the intention that it shall take effect as a conveyance. Benavides v. Benavides (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 566.

Delivery of a conveyance is just as necessary as its execution to give it legal effect. Townsend v. Day (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 283.

Where a deed was handed to grantee to be transmitted to a depositary, who was to hold the same in escrow, there was no delivery. Aggers v. Blackburn (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 424.

An acceptance is necessary to make a delivery effective. Id. If deed was never accepted by grantee, it did not convey grantor’s interest to her. Javies v. Stratton (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 386.

Delivery of a deed expressing consideration of love and affection to an agent, who delivered it to the grantee, who had it recorded, was a sufficient acceptance. Smith v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 229.

The delivery of a deed is essential to its validity, and an undelivered deed passes no title. Hapgood v. City Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 775.

63. — Persons to whom delivery may be made.—Delivery of a deed expressing consideration of love and affection to an agent who delivered it to the grantee who had it recorded was a sufficient delivery. Smith v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 220.

Act of both parties to exchange of lands in leaving deeds with third party to have revenue stamps attached, held to constitute actual delivery of the deeds to the respective parties entitled to them. Kanmer v. Startz (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 693.

That one of parties to exchange of lands took possession by force of deeds placed in hands of third party to have revenue stamps affixed thereto did not invalidate deeds, where delivery to third party constituted sufficient delivery thereof. Id.

A grantor who delivered a deed to a third person, with directions it should not be delivered to the grantee until his death, held to have retained control of the same, so the deed never became effective, the grantor having otherwise disposed of the land by will. Eckert v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 317.

That a deed properly executed is found in possession of the purchaser is prima facie evidence of delivery, but such evidence may be affirmatively rebutted by the testimony of the grantor that she did not execute the deed. Hensley v. Pena (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 427.
In action on fire policy wherein insurer claimed policy was voided by change in title, evidence held to show deed back to plaintiff, executed by husband and wife to whom he had sold, became effective as conveyance when delivered to plaintiff. Springfield Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 784.

In trespass to try title based on a deed to plaintiff's decedent from his mother, evidence held insufficient to show delivery and acceptance. Benavides v. Benavides (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 566.

Evidence held not to support a finding that defendant claimed and had possession of the property subject to the legal effect of the deed. Id.

Evidence held to sustain a finding of the jury that one claiming land under a lost deed and claiming that he refused to accept a deed to the timber deeds with the county clerk or authorize any one else to file it. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 177.

Evidence held to entitle the lessor to a directed verdict on the issue of delivery. Aggers v. Blackburn (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 424.

67. Redelivery, effect of.—The destruction or loss of a deed or its redelivery to the grantor does not divest legal title in the grantee or reestablish it in the grantor, unless equity demands. Robinson v. Mooring Dry Goods Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 585.

Under this article, where the purchaser of land and his wife had received title by reason of the seller's deed to them, mere delivery of the deed back to the seller did not divest them of title, and reestablish to the seller, to effect a conveyance in writing back to the seller was necessary. Cooper v. Hinman (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 972.

The delivery of an unrecorded deed to grantor by a trustee without grantee's knowledge or consent held insufficient to reinvest grantor with title; such delivery being insufficient unless both parties intended at the time of delivery that title should pass. Mason v. Hood (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 468.

A delivery, made to a third person of a deed or instrument conditional on the performance of an act or the happening of an event whereupon it is to be delivered to the grantee, is an escrow. Townsend v. Day (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 283.

A valid contract of sale is necessary to render the deposit of a deed in pursuance of the same a genuine "escrow" (citing Words and Phrases, Escrow). Simpson v. Green (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 375.

An escrow is a written instrument importing a legal obligation which is deposited by grantor, promisor, obligor, or his agent with a stranger or third party to be kept by the depository until the performance of a condition or happening of a certain event, and then to be delivered over to the grantee, promisee, or obligee, and has no application to money placed in the hands of another to be applied as directed by the owner. Stonewall v. McGown (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 859.

681/2. Operation and effect.—When deed is placed in escrow, grantee is entitled to delivery only upon strict compliance with terms of agreement, and substantial compliance is not sufficient. Grimm v. Williams (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1119.

Where purchaser of land who was in default executed deeds which were held in escrow, and were not delivered unless he failed to obtain an irrigation contract, in which case the vendor was given an option to declare deeds to be absolute conveyances, or sell the land under judicial sale, title did not pass by virtue of the deeds, which were unrecorded, on the purchaser's failure to perform. J. C. Engelman Land Co. v. La Blanca Agr. Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 653.

A escrow agreement covering all lease provided, that lessee should accept good record title as shown by abstract, and, that if he had objections to title and pointed them out, and they could not be cured within reasonable time, contract should be at an end, regardless of character of title to be furnished, the life of the agreement depended solely upon either or the other of the two actions to be taken by the lessor. Mackenzie v. Pugh (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1010.

Where a portion of the purchase price is deposited in escrow either of the parties, to recover amount thereof, must show performance of conditions entitling him thereto. Gambrell v. Tatum (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 287.

But vendor was entitled thereto upon the performance of the conditions to be performed by him, notwithstanding purchaser's failure to perform his part of the contract by payment of the balance of the cash consideration. Id.

Where a contract provided that the depository was authorized to repay his deposit to the buyer on proof that the title had been shown to be bad "as per the opinion of" the buyer's attorney, the parties did not intend that the banking company should sit as a court to determine the badness of the title was bad, but that the opinion of the buyer's attorney was the means whereby the fact to be proven. Lea v. Heigerson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 992.

A deed which is complete on its face and is sufficient to pass title, without any conditions therein stated, cannot be delivered to the grantee to be held in escrow. Parker v. Sorell (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 819; Springfield Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 784; Manton v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 551.

If delivered to him it becomes an operative deed, freed from any condition not expressed in the deed itself. Manton v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 951.
It takes effect on delivery despite his agreement that it shall not be effective as conveyance until he has done certain things. Springfield Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 784.

70. — Revocation.—An escrow held waived by acquiring in delivery of deed, surrendering possession, and obtaining the other papers placed in escrow. Dowdy v. Purcell (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 647.

An escrow agreement cannot be revoked by one of the parties. Kanner v. Startz (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 603.

It is an attribute of an escrow that its deposit should be irrevocable by the devisor, pending performance of conditions of its deposit. Blue v. Conner (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 533.

To render the deposit irrevocable, and thus constitute deposit of the instrument an escrow, there must be a binding contract touching the subject-matter of the deposit. Id. The depository becomes in a sense a trustee for both parties of the transaction, and neither may withdraw the deed until the happening of the condition upon which it was deposited, or until after a reasonable time given for the performance of the condition. Townsends v. Day (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 292.

Where there is a prior verbal contract of sale, and the recitals in the deed placed in escrow, in themselves or in connection with other writings submitted therewith, meet the requirements of the statute of frauds, the deed so deposited is a genuine escrow, and therefore irrevocable, and the prior verbal contract is thereby rendered enforceable. Simpson v. Green (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 376.

71. — Time of taking effect of deed.—Deed deposited in escrow does not become operative, and passes no title, until condition has been performed or event has happened upon which it is to be delivered to grantee. Pennsylvania Fire Ins. Co. v. Stockattell (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1096.

Where a grantor parts with all control over his deed when he delivers it to a third person for delivery to the grantee on the grantor's death, the conveyance takes immediate effect, and vests in the grantee, title to commence after the grantor's death. Eckert v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 217.

Where a deed was delivered in escrow, on condition that it should not be effective until certain acts were performed by the grantee, such condition was a condition precedent to the taking effect of the grant. Manton v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 951.

Where a landowner who conveyed property to a city for a street, and received a valuable consideration, insisted that the deed should be held in escrow until the city widened a certain street according to its agreement, held that, as the failure of the city to widen the street within the time limit fixed did not injure the grantor or his property, such failure did not prevent the passage of title, for the condition should be treated as a condition subsequent. Id.

A deed placed in escrow to be delivered on compliance with specified conditions becomes effective on the fulfillment of the conditions, though there is no actual delivery. Sykes v. Fischl (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 217.

Where delivery is to a third person in escrow for delivery to grantee upon compliance with specified conditions, a delivery as directed relates back so as to divest the title of the grantor from the first delivery. Id.

A deed delivered in escrow in deposit does not convey title until the conditions are performed, and until that time the contract is executory. Blue v. Conner (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 555.

A written contract, whereby, a husband and wife obligated themselves to execute and deliver a deed conveying one-half of the minerals under a certain tract of land, the deed to be executed in escrow until examination and approval of title and payment, is an executory contract; no title passing to the grantee until performance of the conditions of the escrow agreement. Crabb v. Bell (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 623.

Execution of deed by a husband to his wife and its delivery by the husband to a third person, with instructions to place the grantee’s name, to have it recorded in case anything happened to him, had the legal effect to vest title to the property conveyed in the wife. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 970.

74. Operation of conveyance in general.—If deed was forged, it conveyed no interest. Janes v. Stratton (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 386.

A deed, when executed, relates back to the date of the contract of sale of the realty and fixes the right of the parties as of that date. Alexander v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 205.

Where a grantor who delivered a deed to a third person, with directions that it should not take effect until his death, retained control of the same, the property, on death of the grantor, passed to the grantee if not otherwise disposed of. Eckert v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 317.

Parties making and accepting a deed to realty are bound by its terms. Blue v. Miller (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 630.

Where land was conveyed and a note taken for the price and the deed contained a recital that if the grantor died before the note was due then he willed the note to the grantee, the transaction was not a gift of the land or of the note to the grantee, but a sale of the land and an agreement to pay therefor conditioned on the grantor living until maturity of the note. Newcom v. Ford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 591.

By an option contract the optionee did not acquire any title to the land involved, but at most secured only the right to acquire an interest in the land by complying, at his election, with the stipulations on his part. Roberts v. Armstrong (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 371.
Reformation, grounds of.—Where an improper description is put in a mortgage, and foreclosure is had, and the mistake is carried into the sheriff's deed, the sheriff's deed cannot be reformed, but to get title the mortgage itself should be reformed and another foreclosure had. Alfalfa Lumber Co. v. Mudgett (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 337.

Where title to a house on land conveyed by warranty deed is reserved by parcel, a court having jurisdiction will reform deed to include reservation. Robbins v. Winters (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 149.

Where a deed of gift from father to sons described certain lands not owned by the father, having been fraudulent, the sons cannot have the deed reformed to describe adjoining land then owned by the vendee as being the land intended; since the sons, having paid no consideration, have no standing in equity to reform the deed. Browne v. Gorman (Civ. App.) 288 S. W. 385.

A deed will not be reformed on the ground of mistake, where the mistake was not mutual. Henson v. Peterson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 126.

Where a party executing preliminary contract accepted a deed providing for his keeping open a permanent roadway on land conveyed, in the absence of showing of fraud or excuse for failure to read the instruments, reformation thereof could not be had on the ground of accident, fraud, or mistake. Arden v. Boone (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 265, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 187 S. W. 995.

Where deeds correctly described a tract of land in accordance with the field notes, but by mistake the grantor put the grantees in possession of a different tract, and such possession was retained long enough to give title to the tract, there was no basis for a correction of the field notes. Krause v. Hardin (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 319.

Where a father and children were entitled to undivided interests in land, and, sale having been negotiated, the father without authority from his children undertook to point out the premises sold, his representations are not binding on the children, and the deed which clearly described the premises, but did not include a portion of the lands pointed out, will not be reformed as to them. Compton v. Franks (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 385.

Evidence.—To show mutual mistake, claimed by lessor, for reformation of lease describing leased building as No. 10, evidence that the building occupied by lessee under the lease was No. 11 is admissible. Lovelady v. Harding (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 923.

Parol evidence is not admissible to reform a deed describing by field notes land that did not belong to grantor, to make it describe adjoining land then owned by grantor but which the deed in no way describes. Browne v. Gorman (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 385.

Relief.—In suit to reform a deed, court in denying reformation will not construe deed solely for the purpose of relieving an uncertainty regarding its legal effect. Henson v. Peterson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 226.

Purchaser or creditor, without notice, not to be affected.

See Lewis v. San Antonio Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 288 S. W. 552; notes to art. 6524.

Conveyance of the greater estate passes the less.

Interest of grantor conveyed.—A deed, if not voidable on account of fraud, conveyed whatever interest, legal or equitable, the grantor had in the premises. Janes v. Stratton (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 386.

In law when an inferior title is vested in the holder of a superior title, the inferior is merged in the superior, and ceases to exist, but equity will preserve the inferior title and prevent a merger, when such was the intention of the parties to the transaction at the time, and no injustice will be done thereby. West v. McCellen Loan & Investment Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 913.

An estate deemed a fee simple, when.

Cited, Stilles v. Japhet, 84 Tex. 91, 19 S. W. 450.

Estates or interests created in general.—The largest estate that the terms of a deed with all its parts harmonized will permit of will be conferred upon grantee. Stevens v. Galveston H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 629.

A deed conveying "all that certain acerelation, alluvian and riparian right" east of a described lot, together with a War Department permit to fill in the riparian right, and erect whatever the grantee desired, held not to convey title to the fee of the submerged land, but merely a right in vendee to fill in and acquire title from the state in himself. Westervelt v. Meuly (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 680.

Actual entry upon land is not necessary to give title or settle, or to give a more perfect title, the right of possession being the incidental to and growing out of the title. Hall v. Edwards (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 167.

The owner of the fee may separate his estate in the surface from the minerals underneath, and sell the one and reserve the other. States Oil Corporation v. Ward (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 259.
The rule that an absolute disposition may be limited by a subsequent clause in a will, where the intention is clearly expressed, is not affected by this article. Barmore v. Darragh (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 472.

While mere words of conveyance alone, though apt and usual, will not fix the character of the estate if from the context as a whole the plain intention was otherwise, in the absence of any such contextual indications the chosen words will neither be disregarded nor given other than their usual meaning in the trade, business, or transaction to which they relate. Davis v. Texas Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 549.

Fee simple.—Evidence that property was conveyed to certain parties as trustees for collection of rents, and that trustees controlled it in such capacity, sustains finding that colored people owned beneficial interest, instead of fee-simple title, in property. Woods v. Bell (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 902.

Deed to son, on cash consideration and further consideration that stepchild of son should receive a share of property, as if she were female child of son, passed fee-simple title and did not create any estate in stepdaughter or his own children. Delano v. Delano (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1145.

The use of the word “forever” in the granting or habendum clause of a deed does not generally have the effect of enlarging the estate granted, if the instrument as a whole shows that the fee-simple title was not intended to be granted. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Bunn (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 830.

A conveyance of timber though the habendum clause used the word “forever,” held not to grant the fee-simple title to the timber, together with the necessary interest in the land for its sustenance, but to contemplate a removal within a reasonable time. Id.

Deed to trustees of a church “for a public cemetery,” to have and to hold to themselves, successors, heirs, and assigns forever, held to vest in the church fee-simple title to a land, so that it could not be said by the. circumstances did the trustees or church have power to sell. Barker v. Hazel-Fain Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 874.

A deed to a county judge “for school purposes,” wherein the habendum clause was, “To have and to hold the above-described premises, together with all and singular the rights and appurtenances thereof, in any wise belonging, unto the said C. county Judge, his successors in office, heirs and assigns, forever,” held a conveyance of the fee-simple title in trust for the schools of the district, especially in view of arts. 1196, 1107. Wilson v. County School Trustees of Eastland County (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 663.

Limitation to heirs, issue, etc.—A deed conveying land to R. for her natural life, and at her death to her children or the remainder to B in the present possession of the property, with a reservation of the life interest in R. and the remainder to her children surviving her or the descendants of children whom she might survive, the word “descendants” being construed as a word of purchase and not of limitation. Vassar v. Manning (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 926.

Conditional limitations.—Despite the rule in Shelley’s Case, a deed with the proviso that, if the grantee dies first, title shall pass to another, is valid. Runge v. Freshman (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 254.

Exceptions and reservations.—Landlord who conveyed land by general warranty deed, containing no recital reserving rents, could not retain any interest therein by merely keeping in his possession a rent note executed by his tenant, which was simply an evidence of his lease contract with the tenant. Evans v. First Guaranty State Bank of Southmayd (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1171.

Where landowner conveyed timber, with provision for extension of time for removal and heirs conveyed land except timber reversion rights in timber did not pass to grantee, and heirs of original owner alone are entitled to receive consideration for extension of period of removal. Adams v. Fidelity Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1034.

Whatever was granted by apt terms has been granted a reservation or restriction which might result in destroying the subject-matter of the conveyance will be declared void and ineffective. Grogan v. City of Brownwood (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 552.

Though a conveyance reserved all coal and minerals, a subsequent deed from the same grantors to the same grantee passed title to oil, petroleum, and gas, the absence of an express reservation. Luse v. Penn (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 303.

Where an owner of land has subdivided it and sold according to a plat showing a strip reserved for a pipe line, and such reservations are made in the deed, such owner cannot thereafter drill for oil within such strip, regardless of whether the fee is in him or not. Gulf Sulphur Co. v. Ryman (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 310.

Deeds “excepting and reserving all coal and mineral and the right to prospect, mine and remove the same,” and retaining “the coal and mineral in said described land and the right to work and remove the same” held to reserve title to the oil, petroleum, and gas. Luse v. Parmer (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1011.

The clause in a deed that grantor was “to continue using said lot as she has always done, so long as she may live,” did not, as a matter of law, constitute a reservation of the life estate. Ahrens v. Lowther (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 255.

Deed whereby grantor reserved the right to enter and prospect for coal and minerals, etc., and to open up mines, borings, etc., providing that coal and minerals taken from such mines and borings should be the property of the grantor, held not to have retained title to the minerals in place under the surface. States Oil Corporation v. Ward (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 250.

A grantor may by reserving to himself the mineral rights in land and conveying to the grantee only the surface rights effectually separate the two estates. Lyles v. Dodge (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 316.

A “reservation” is a clause in a deed creating or reserving something out of the thing granted that was not in existence before, while an “exception” is something existing before as a part of the thing granted, and which is excepted from the operation of the conveyance (citing Words and Phrases, Exception.) Donnell v. Otts (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 864.

Where sons of the grantor in a deed excepting mineral rights conveyed the land by warranty deeds, which, being without limitation, conveyed full fee-simple title, under this article, they and those in privity with them were estopped from claiming as against their grantees their share inherited from the grantor in the mineral rights so excepted. Id.

In a general warranty by grantor and wife of 160 acres, a clause reciting that the grantor did "reserve and hold all minerals of all and any kind (except stone coal) that may be on the aforesaid land for my own use and benefit" held not a mere personal reservation or license in favor of the grantor and ending at his death, but an exception of the oil and minerals in the land, wholly withdrawing the mineral rights from the operation of the conveyance, so that the mineral interest passed to his heirs. Id.

Conditions and restrictions.—A deed with conditions held to invest the grantee with an estate upon condition subsequent, the right of forfeiture of which was personal to the immediate grantor, so that, when the condition was not fulfilled and the grantor died, the land fell to another person, such person had no cause of action. Perry v. Smith (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 1013.

Where deed granted use of an alley over plaintiffs' land and provided that the title should revert if building were not constructed, and defendant refused to construct the building, plaintiffs were not precluded from recovering the premises because they had not opened the alley, since this would have been useless under the circumstances. Brown v. McKinney (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 565.

Recovery may be had upon noncompliance with conditions subsequent, where right to such recovery is clearly reserved in the deed or appears from necessary intention. Waco Development Co. v. McNeese (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 464.

But a substantial compliance with the terms of the condition will satisfy the law and prevent a forfeiture of title. Manton v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 951. The estate is defeated only at the election of the parties who can take advantage of the breach, and not on the mere happening of the condition. Arnold v. Scharff (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 226.

No one can take advantage of a breach of the condition except the grantor or his heirs. Tickner v. Luse (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 578.

The fee passes by the deed and the law requires some act on the part of the grantor for its termination. Id.

Conditions subsequent are not favored in law. Waco Development Co. v. McNeese (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 464.

When it is doubtful whether a conveyance is made on a condition subsequent or on the covenant of the grantee, the latter interpretation will be adopted. Weiss v. Cliborn (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 596; Robinson v. Faville (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 316.

When the declared purpose for which the property shall be used is a matter that will insure to the special benefit of the grantor, the courts are more inclined to treat the conveyance as a condition, rather than when the use is for the benefit of a special class of persons or the public at large. Stevens v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 639.

The mere use of technical terms which ordinarily denote a limitation or a condition subsequent is an unsafe test of the true nature of the estate granted; the word "proviso" or "provided" itself being sometimes taken as a condition, sometimes as a limitation, and sometimes as a covenant. Id.

Language ordinarily importing a limitation or condition subsequent will be construed most strictly against grantor on the ground that law does not favor forfeitures. Id.

Where there is a doubt from the language of the entire instrument whether its fair construction imports a limitation or condition which would make a condition subsequent determining the estate only upon some act of the grantor tantamount to re-entry, the deed must be construed to import the latter as being in a sense less onerous upon the grantee. Id.

The general rule is that where a deed is to take effect on the performance of a condition by the grantee, and the grant is without other consideration, no title will pass until the condition is performed; but where other conditions have been performed, and especially where full value has been paid, the condition will be considered a condition subsequent. Manton v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 954.

Where warranty deed in exchange of properties conveyed fee-simple title, but collateral written agreement provided grantee should recover if within fifteen years title to property received by grantor from them should fail, such collateral agreement merely ingrained on deed a condition subsequent, on happening of which grantor would be entitled to re-conveyance, and did not prevent vesting of title and right to possession in grantee subject only to defeat on happening of condition. Arnold v. Scharff (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 326.

Mother's promise to make will giving estate to daughter inducing daughter to execute deed to mother was a covenant, and not a condition. Robinson v. Faville (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 316.

A conveyance of a one-half interest in minerals, providing that the agreement should be null and void if minerals in paying quantities were not shown to exist within a year, held a deed absolute to an undivided fee to the mineral in the land upon a condition subsequent, imposing a covenant. Tickner v. Luse (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 578.

A will, which gave land to testatrix's nephew "H. (with express understanding that his sisters are to have a home there whenever they need one), to have and to hold his heirs and assigns forever provide he comply with the conditions herein mentioned, but if the building be divided equally between the parties, each shall have a right to "keep open" a way to enter or leave the premises, subject to be used by pedestrians, and failure to comply therewith renders the fee null and void. If the building be divided unequally, the right to "keep open" a way to enter or leave the premises, subject to be used by pedestrians, shall belong to the party having the greater interest, and failure to comply therewith renders the interest of the other party null and void. If the building be divided unequally, the right to "keep open" a way to enter or leave the premises, subject to be used by pedestrians, shall belong to the party having the greater interest, and failure to comply therewith renders the interest of the other party null and void.

4. Deed or executory contract.—Contract for sale or lease, whereby seller promised he would make deed only on buyer’s making specified payments, which in fact were never made, was not "deed of conveyance." Bailey v. Burkitt (Clv. App. 201 S. W. 755.)

Conveyance of 2 acres of 100 acres obtained of a third person, held a deed conveying a present, undivided interest in the 100 acres, with right of selection, and not an executory contract of sale of 2 acres to be selected within 30-day period, rights under which would lapse and be lost by failure to exercise such right of selection within the 30-day period. Gray v. Producers’ Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 240.

5. DEED mortgage, or conditional sale.—Whether a conveyance absolute on its face with an agreement for a mortgage or a conditional sale will depend upon

A deed in trust to secure a debt is in legal effect a mere mortgage with power of

Where purchaser, execute quitclaim deed to the vendor as security the time the payment is extended for one year, the vendor agreeing for demolition the deed from record, the deeds, although absolute on their face, was a mortgage or security for the debt. Morrow v. Gorter (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 164.

The existence of a debt is indispensable to existence of a mortgage. Masterson v.ginners’ Mut. Underwriters’ Ass’n of Texas (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 283.

That an instrument in form a deed may be considered a mortgage, a debt from grantor to grantee, created before or at the time of the execution of the instrument, must have continued. Mercer v. McMurty (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 699.

Whether a conveyance of land to mortgagee was a conditional sale or mortgage held a question of fact. Holmes v. Tennant (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 313.

For a deed absolute on its face to be a mortgage, it must have been so understood and intended by both of the parties at the time of its execution. Young v. Blain (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 851.

6. — Evidence.—Evidence held to show it was the intention that a deed absolute should constitute a mortgage. Mason v. Olds (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1040.

Evidence held to show a warranty deed was a mortgage, and not a conditional sale. Zano v. Veia (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 215.

Evidence held to support a finding that the debt sued for was secured by mortgage. Ewing v. Schults (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 625.

In suit by daughter to partition her parents’ land, evidence held to justify the trial court’s finding that the daughter’s deed, delivered to defendants’ predecessor with the grantee blank, was not intended, as she claimed, as a mortgage. Hopkins v. Walters (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 515.

When a conveyance of land grows out of a pre-existing debt or loan of money, it must clearly appear that such debt is extinguished or it will be held that the conveyance is a mere change in the security. Holmes v. Tennant (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 313.

7. — Estates and interests of parties.—A mortgagor of land remains the owner thereof and holds it subject to the rights of the mortgagee. Holmes v. Tennant (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 313.

Whether the mortgagee or one holding his interest under a will, is not entitled, in a suit by mortgagor to have a trust declared in the land, to invoke the defense of stale demand. Id.

9. Quitclaim.—Where the grantee in a quitclaim deed intended for security only himself quitclaimed the land to his daughter, who acquired it with notice, the effect was to assign to her the security. Morrow v. Gorter (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 164.

Quitclaim deed to aid title to a company under which both parties claimed, held to relate back to deed from the company’s remote grantor to its predecessor in title. Thornton

An instrument in the form of a quitclaim deed, held simply a release of any claim that a sale under a trust deed was invalid. Benton v. Jones (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 133.

The intention of the parties, as appears from the language used, must prevail in determining whether a conveyance was a warranty or a quitclaim deed. Green v. West Texas Coal Mining & Developing Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 548.

Where ambiguity as to whether a conveyance was a warranty or a quitclaim deed arises from the language used, the court must look to the circumstances surrounding the parties at the time of the conveyance, to aid it in determining the intention which controls. Id.

The use of the word “quitclaim” is not conclusive evidence as to the character of the conveyance. Id.

The words “all of our interest,” in a deed by owners of a homestead, of minerals, nothing else appearing, would have rendered the conveyance a quitclaim deed. Id.

Mineral deed executed by owners of a homestead interest, containing in the granting clause the words “bargain, sell, and convey,” and in the habendum clause “to have and to hold the above-described mineral interest,” and in the warranty clause the words “warrant and forever defend all and singular the said mineral interest,” held a warranty deed, and not a mere quitclaim. Id.

A quit claim deed conveys no more than the present interest of the grantor in the land described, and does not extend to an interest subsequently accruing. Gulf Production Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 121.

A conveyance by grantor of all their right, title, and interest in certain described lands, followed by the habendum clause of a general warranty deed, is a deed to the

11. Alteration.—In action on purchase-money notes wherein defendant introduced deed which by alterations and interpolations recited that he had not assumed payment thereof, evidence held to justify conclusion that the alteration and interpolations had been made by defendant after execution and delivery of the deed, without the knowledge
12. Recital of consideration.—Where a deed recited a receipt of consideration, the burden is upon the party suing to cancel it for lack of consideration to show that the consideration was not paid. Russell v. Beckert (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 607.

13. Recital as to parties.—Where a deed executed and delivered after death of the person named in the granting clause as one of the grantors was signed and acknowledged by a person shown by extrinsic evidence to be heirs, but the deed did not identify the parties as such, it did not pass the interest of such heirs. Le Blanc v. Jackson (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 687.

One who signs a deed, but does not appear on the face thereof to be a party thereto, or whose name is not recited in the premises thereof, is not bound thereby. Creosoted Wood Block Paving Co. v. McKee (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 822.

Instruments creating liens on real estate of whatever character are conveyances thereof, and hence the same rule applies. Id.

Where land was conveyed to "Sheldon E. Bell," and thereafter by "E. S. Bell," the initials "E. S.," even though both conveyances were of great antiquity, cannot be deemed idem sonans with the name "Sheldon E." Dittman v. Cornelius (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 109.

Deed executed by married woman and her husband, reading that they, "for and in consideration of $60 to us in hand paid by J. L. M., the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, have granted, sold, and conveyed and by these presents do grant, sell, and convey unto the said -----", conveyed to J. L. M. Hopkins v. Walters (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 516.

County judge is a sufficiently definite grantee in a conveyance of a fee-simple title in trust for the schools of the district in which the land was situated. Wilson v. County School Trustees of Eastland County (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 693; and see note to art. 1106. A conveyance to a fictitious person was inoperative, and the title remained in the grantor. Johns v. Wear (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1098.

Every part of the deed must be given effect if it can be done. Stevens v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 639; Scheller v. Groesbeck (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1092.

A deed should be construed according to its apparent intent as gathered from the entire instrument. In the absence of ambiguity on the face of the instrument, Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Orange County (Civ. App.) 266 S. W. 539.

Where parties to instrument in writing have by their acts and conduct placed a construction upon the same showing the intention, such acts and conduct should be given strong weight in arriving at such intention, and, in the absence of clear language indicating intention inconsistent with acts and conduct, the courts should adopt the construction placed upon instrument by parties themselves. Id.

If deed contains conflicting clauses, which cannot be reconciled, the clause will be retained which gives the greatest estate, and the clause in conflict therewith rejected. Summit Place Co. v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 145.

Where a deed or other written instrument contains clauses that are inconsistent with each other, such clauses, if possible, should be reconciled so that the intention of the maker as disclosed by the whole instrument shall be given effect, and this intention must not be defeated by a literal interpretation of any of the words of the instrument. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Bunn (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 530.

The intention of the maker must be ascertained from the instrument as a whole, and to ascribe, to each clause, a meaning that is proper to the subject-matter embraced in the instrument and the conditions surrounding the parties. Id.

The court in construing language of deed susceptible of different constructions will consider the transaction, the pecuniary situation of the parties, the state of the thing granted, for purpose of ascertaining the true intent. Stevens v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 639.

In determining the character of the estate granted, the court will consider, not merely the uses for which the property was designated in the conveyance, but the relation of the grantor to those uses. Id.

A deed should be so interpreted as to give effect to the intention of the parties. Id.

If any of the terms used in a deed seem to contradict the manifest intention clearly indicated by the deed as a whole, the intention must govern. Id.

To warrant a departure from the general rules of construction and to give deeds a meaning not fairly deducible from the language employed, the circumstances should be such as to impel the conclusion that the parties intended other than their expressed language would ordinarily imply. Id.

Whenever possible, all parts of a deed must be given effect, and all the language of the deed must be retained and construed so as to harmonize and make effective every word and sentence, but where uncertainty or conflict arise if every word is literally accepted, the main intent of the parties, which is to be gathered from the language of the deed, allowing consideration of connected extrinsic facts to make certain what was intended by the parties, shall completely control. Scheller v. Groesbeck (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 553.

When a deed or contract is reasonably susceptible of a construction which will make it valid and binding, such construction should be given rather than one rendering it void. Blackwell v. Scott (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 334.
It cannot be said there is a patent ambiguity in a deed if the court, placing itself in the position of the parties, can ascertain what they meant. Id. In construing deeds, resort must be had to the general rule that that is certain which may be made certain. Townsend v. Day (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 285.

If the language of a clause of a deed, as the habendum, cannot be harmonized with the rest of the instrument, such interpretation will be adopted as is most favorable to the grantee. Hopkins v. Walters (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 316.

The entire habendum clause of a deed may be rejected, if repugnant to other clauses, and defeating the conveyance, as through its recital that the grantee is to hold the premises "unto the said [grantors], their heirs," etc., since a repugnant clause will not be given effect to destroy the deed. Id.

Where ambiguity as to whether a conveyance was a warranty or a quitclaim deed arises from the language used, the court must look to the circumstances surrounding the parties at the time of the conveyance, to aid it in ascertaining the intention which controls. Green v. West Texas Coal Mining & Developing Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 649.

The intention of the parties, as appears from the language used, must prevail in determining whether a conveyance was a warranty or a quitclaim deed. Id.

The cardinal rule for construction of a written instrument as a deed is to arrive at the intention of the parties. Scheller v. Groesbeck (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1092.

All instruments in a chain of title when referred to in a deed will be read into it. Id.

Property conveyed.—Nothing passed by deed except what is described in it, whatever the intention of the parties may have been. Browne v. Gorman (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 335; Bule v. Miller (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 650.

In determining the sufficiency of a description in a deed, whatever can be made certain is certain. Zoeller v. Offer (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 1119; Pope v. Witherspoon (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 837.

Where a deed refers to land as that granted by certain instrument on file in General Land Office, such other instrument becomes part of deed. McDougal v. Conn (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 627.

A deed reciting that grantor conveyed a certain tract or parcel of land, "the title and possession was by George Antonio Nixon, commissioner for said colony, on the 16th day of March, A.D. 1835, and for more particular description of said reference is hereby made to title or on file in the Gen. Land Office, and where the deed on file in the Land Office definitely described the land, was sufficient. Id.

Where deed was made in republic of Texas, and referred to deed on file in General Land Office, without stating of what state or country General Office was department, merry deeds of words "of the republic of Texas" did not raise ambiguity. Id.

An instrument signed by P. transferring all his right "to the within deed," being recorded immediately after a deed to P. may be found to have been indorsed on such deed, and to be a conveyance of the land described in that deed. Conrad v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1181.

A deed held on its face to sufficiently describe land to be admissible in evidence. Ludwig v. Murray (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 321.

Deed showing obvious omission of two calls of description which might be supplied with reasonable certainty held not void for patent ambiguity. Fortenberry v. Cruse (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 522.

Description of land in deed as 1,000 acres lying on "west of a half" of named league held not to disclose patent ambiguity rendering deed void in view of record supplying omission. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Lane (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 216.

Where a deed described land by metes and bounds, chain of title, and reference to prior deeds, and by a name which was erroneous, the nominal description could not control, to make those purchases at execution sale of land described by name innocent purchasers. Roberts v. Dreyer (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1097.

Where a deed specifically described land by giving the chain of title and reference to records, a general description by name could not control. Id.

Where deed inaccurately described land by metes and bounds, and erroneously described it by a name, and the land named was sold under execution against the grantee, it was immaterial what were the intentions of the grantor and grantee, since the land sold in execution was not in fact included in the deed. Id.

Deed conveying part of a survey, and containing 640 acres more or less, being a one-half undivided interest out of the survey, held to convey an undivided one-half interest in the survey and not any specific number of acres unindivided out of the survey. Reid v. Plaine (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 415.

There being a repugnance between the general and particular descriptions in a deed, the latter will prevail. Tucker v. Angelina County Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 149.

Where a particular description is followed by a general description, the latter yields. Where it is possible, the real intention must be gathered from whole description. Scheller v. Groesbeck (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1092.

In trespass to try title, where plaintiff claimed under a deed conveying 871 1/2 acres, evidence held to sustain findings that the deed did not convey a 100-acre tract previously sold to another. Delta Land & Timber Co. v. Spiller (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 414.

A grant of 640 acres, located by course and distance, with no markers called for or identified, will not embrace lands not included in the 640 acres, or take the grant to lines and corners not called for, merely because the parties believed that the survey would embrace such lines and corners. Bule v. Miller (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 630.

A deed of trust on "about three-fourths of an acre of land on the H. G. survey, in Milam county, Texas, three miles north of S. G. Texas," etc., held sufficiently to describe the property, and therefore not void. Thordarson Mercantile Co. v. Continental Gin Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1059.

"22 SUPP. V. CIV. ST. TEX. — 16 241
In suit for lot 4 of a subdivision, the southeast quarter, evidence held to sustain the finding that a deed between plaintiff's remote grantors conveyed the southwestern quarter of lot 4, a mistake recognized in a subsequent power of attorney. Masterson Irr. Co. v. Owen (Civ. App.) 215 S.W. 62.

The undivided interest referred to in a mortgage of "the following land in T., and being therewith owned by C., in and to the estote of S.: said land consisting of three residences * * * and one 12-acre tract and one 8-acre tract." is limited to the particular lands mentioned; and there is not embraced a lot, on which was neither of the houses, and which was part of neither of the two tracts, though part of S.'s lands. Craig (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 530.

Where the description of a deed to plaintiff's predecessor was a result of mistake, and it did not follow a survey then made, plaintiff, if a purchaser without notice, would take to all the limits of the description in the deed, regardless of the rights of the vendor to have the deed reformed as against his predecessor. Swann v. Mills (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 850.

Deeds conveying, "certain piece, parcel and quantity of land on Dickinson bayou in the county of Galveston, containing one hundred and fifty acres, being a part of the original tract," * * * and by S. to 4, or the mouth of the said bayou," held void, being insufficient to describe a particular tract with the certainty required to pass title. Penney v. Booth (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 439.

A deed for a given number of acres out of a larger tract of land with the right of the purchaser to select its location on the larger tract is valid provided such selection is made by the purchaser. Id.

A deed for a proportionate part of a larger tract without the stipulation therein that the particular land conveyed is to locate the land conveyed.

Deed describing land as the "Sam J. Whitney survey" held insufficient to vest grantee with title to land in the "Samuel J. Whithey survey," as against subsequent innocent purchaser for value from grantor; such names not being idem sonans. Conn v. Southwestern Settlement & Development Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 615.

Description in a deed "the entire point W. or S. W. of Nixon's Bayou that Scott's gin and shippard was on, adjoining the above specified tract or parcel of land of 100 acres, held to describe the entire body of land lying west and southwest of the bayou and west of a bay down to its mouth, adjoining the 150 acres specified in the deed for a distance of 325 feet just north of the bay. Blackwell v. Scott (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 334.

Deed held to have pointed out with sufficient definiteness 160 acres in a survey of which grantors conveyed a one-tenth interest; a description being sufficient if it furnishes means of identification. Hopkins v. Walters (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 516.

A deed conveying all mineral to be found on certain lands held to have conveyed all the minerals in the land, "and all other minerals that may be found by the said [grantor] or his assigns or the purchase of such minerals specifically mentioned. Green v. West Texas Coal Mining & Developing Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 548.

In action of trespass to try title, a deed which fails to describe what section is conveyed is insufficient to show boundaries. Land v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 801.

A deed conveying all the interest that the grantor had or might thereafter have by inheritance, will, or otherwise in the lands, belonging to a named estate is sufficient to authorize the admission of the trust deed in evidence in a suit to foreclose it upon land of the estate subsequently partitioned to grantor. Shaw v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 529.

Field notes of grant referred to in deed would be read into deed. Temple Lumber Co. v. Mackechnay (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 177.

Description of land in deed as "4,000 acres of land lying and being in Sabine county on the south side of the Sabine river and known as the grantee originally made to A."

would have been sufficient to pass title to the entire grant, even though the grant contained about 5,500 acres. Id.

Where a specified tract of land is named, the entire tract passes, although it exceeds the quantity mentioned in deed, the deed in such case being sufficient to charge a subsequent purchaser with notice as to the entire tract. Id.

A deed which conveyed the fee also included the oil, gas, and minerals. Taylor v. County School Trustees of Eastland County (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 675.

The grantor owned a league of land in Jasper county and labor of land in Liberty county, a deed to a league of land in county of Liberty which referred to previous conveyances wherein the league and labor were referred to as the "city and league and course" did not, though the grantee later attempted to convey both parcels of land, include the labor. Scheller v. Groesbeck (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1995, reversing judgment Scheller v. Groesbeck (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 353.

A description of land in a judgment or conveyance is sufficient, if by it the true location of the land may be ascertained, and if it contains an erroneous or false call or designation or description, or other detail, and by omitting or disregarding such there remains sufficient description by which the land may yet be identified and located, the judgment or conveyance is effective. De Guerra v. De Gonzalez (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 895.

Where plaintiff exchanged property with defendant for lot represented by defendant to be 114 feet wide, but which plaintiff alleged was only 98 feet wide, held that deed, when construed as a whole, vested in plaintiff the fee to sidewalk space and title to private parking, so that lot was 114 feet wide as represented. Summit Place Co. v. Terrill (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 145.
Whether the grantee of a right of way is entitled to a way unobstructed by gates or bare depends upon the terms of the grant, the nature and situation of the property, and the manner in which it has been used. Arden v. Boone (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 265, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 187 S. W. 985.

An owner of land abutting on a private easement, who has purchased on the faith that the easement was perpetual, is entitled to have the easement kept open. Gulf Sulphur Co. v. Ryman (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 310.

Where an owner of land subdivided it, and reserved in the deed a right of way for a pipe line, the right to have the use of such strip of land restricted to the purposes for which it was dedicated is a valuable one to the abutting owners, and passes to purchasers regardless of whether the fee to the strip be conveyed by their deeds. Id.

Where land has been platted, and the plat recorded, showing certain streets thereon, purchasers of portions described with reference to the plat acquire easements in the streets as designated, even though there has been no acceptance of the dedication by the city. Sherman Slaughtering & Rendering Co. v. Texas Nursery Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 475.

The city had not taken over the property, or had not worked of graded streets shown on a recorded plat, does not evidence abandonment of an easement over the streets by purchasers of lots and blocks with reference to the plat. Id.

Where a portion of a parcel of land was conveyed with the verbal understanding that the vendee could use an alleyway to reach the rear of a building, and the right to use such alleyway affected the purchase price, and the vendee constructing a building in reliance thereon, and the vendor permitting the use of such alleyway by defendant for some time, the vendee could enforce his right to use such alleyway under the verbal agreement, being actually executed. Handal v. Cobo & Doosl (Civ. App.) 249 S. W. 67.

Where the owner of a tract subdivided it between his children, and prior to the subdivision there were public roads bounding it giving convenient access to the church, school, gin mill, and store used by the occupants, and private ways over the land intersecting the roads, the parties living otherwise be cut off by other subdivisions had the right to demand access to and the use of the prior existing private roads over other subdivisions, under the rule that partition of real estate among heirs carries with it implication the same right of way from one part to and over the other as had been plainly and obviously enjoyed by the common ancestor. Leathers v. Craig (Civ. App.) 278 S. W. 995.

But they could not sit by and permit themselves to be cut off by their kindred and then demand of the owner of an adjoining tract that he give them an outlet over his land, under art. 6876, a new road not being a road of necessity. Id.

Crops pass by sale of land, if they belong to owner at sale, and where neither buyer of land from landlord nor buyer’s grantee had notice of execution by tenant and transfer by landlord to bank of rent note at date of purchase, crops belonged to them as against bank’s assignee. Evans v. First Guaranty State Bank of Southmayd (Civ. App.) 180 S. W. 1171.

If it was not intended by parties, in giving and accepting trust deeds, that nursery stock on land conveyed should become permanent acquisition to soil, such stock would be personalty, and would not be affected by trust deed liens. Colonial Land & Loan Co. v. Joplin (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 626.

Evidence held to show that it was intention of parties that such nursery stock should remain personal property. Id.

Nursery stock on land conveyed by trust deed, which had no value unless transplanted and sold annually, held personal property, and not subject to lien of trust deed. Id.

Where the vendor instructed his agents to sell, but said nothing of reserving the crops and the agents sold, telling the purchasers that nothing had been said and the crops would go to them, the crops, unsevered at the time the sale was consummated, passed to the purchasers. Holloman v. Bishop (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1000.

As a rule, growing crops are part of the soil, and pass with the land. Id.

Though standing timber is generally regarded as part of the realty, the owner by contract can constructively cause a severance, and for purposes of mortgage or sale convert it into personalty. Downey v. Dowell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 585.

Though annual crops, the fruits of industry, so long as they are attached to the land, pass with the deed thereto unless actually or constructively severed, yet they are for general purposes classed as personal property. Roberts v. Armstrong (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 371.

18. Fixtures.—A conveyance of land by deed containing no reservation of fixtures passes title thereto to the purchaser, regardless of a verbal sale or disposition of such fixtures. Alexander v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 265.

The purchaser of land by virtue of his deed acquired title to a pump, rods, and trough which had been affixed to the reality so as to become a part thereof. Boyd v. Hurd (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 339.

Title to personally which had become part of realty was in vendor of land, subject to vender’s right to pay the price, falling in which the title, free from any equity in the vendor, passed to his successor, with title to the fixtures constituting a part of the land. Id.

Where a renewal of a deed of trust, given after the mortgagor had installed machinery under a contract with the seller that it should remain personalty until paid for, did not specify the machinery, but provided that the renewal should cover the same property, in-

(Title 24)

Included in the original deed of trust, the deed of trust did not include the machinery, unless it became part of the reality as a fixture. Murray Co. v. Simmons (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 461.

Art. 1108. [629] [553] Other forms and clauses valid.

Covenants in general.—Deed conveying a designated quarter, section, “containing 160 acres,” and reciting a consideration of $1 and four notes, held to convey land in bulk and not by the acre with quantity warranted. Nicholson v. C. C. Slaughter Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 716.

Where the covenant of a deed is qualified as being subject to a mortgage, the deed is treated as applying only to the equity of redemption, which is all that the deed purports to convey. Campbell v. Jones (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 710.

Covenants of title.—Where land is sold in bulk and not by the acre with the quantity warranted, the warranty of title does not include a warranty of quantity, and purchaser is not entitled to a reduction in the price for a deficit in quantity in the absence of fraud or mistake. Nicholson v. C. C. Slaughter Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 716.

While, if one sells land which he does not own, the purchaser may obtain relief in equity, if it is shown that the grantor has assumed a deed which by its terms does not include some of the land pointed out, the purchaser cannot recover upon the warranty for it is only where there is failure of title to part of the land which the deed purports to convey that the covenant of warranty is broken. Compton v. Franks (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 988.

Assumption of incumbrances.—Where grantee under a warranty deed assumed payment of “$21.60 due the N. Co. payable $12.24 monthly,” deed was not inconsistent with a finding that grantee did not assume payment of interest on the $721.60. Askew v. Bruner (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 152.

Taking a deed subject to a mortgage does not import a promise on the part of the purchaser to pay the mortgage. Campbell v. Jones (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 710.

Covenants running with the land.—A covenant of warranty runs with the land, to the grantee, his heirs and assigns, and is available by a subsequent grantee, claiming title through a quitclaim deed or a sheriff’s deed, or both. Flaniken v. Neal, 67 Tex. 629, 4 S. W. 212.

A collateral agreement between vendor and purchaser, whereby the vendor agreed to furnish electricity, gas, water, sewers, and street car service, is not a covenant running with the land and does not inure to the benefit of the assigns of the first purchaser. Lakewood Heights Co. v. McCulleston (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1105.

Persons entitled to enforce covenants.—In cases of breach of covenant in a warranty deed, notice of adverse claim or incumbrance covenanted against does not affect right of covenantee. Askew v. Bruner (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 152.

That grantee in a warranty deed had knowledge of existence of incumbrances, not excepted in the deed, did not preclude him from relying on the covenant against incumbrances. Neeley v. Lane (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 154.

An intermediate owner of land has no right of action for the breach of the covenants of a warranty deed, until he has been made a party to the claims of his covenants. McPike v. Smith (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 515.

Where a vendor of a riparian right does not warrant title to the submerged land, but merely the title and right necessary to acquisition of title from the state, no recovery by the purchaser can be had for breach of warranty in the absence of any evidence of eviction or threatened suit by the state. Westervelt v. Meuly (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 650.

Purchaser could not recover for shortage in acreage against remote grantor on warranty of title, where purchaser had only an equitable title, subject to vendor’s liens, and remote grantor had settled for deficit with intermediate purchaser. Nicholson v. C. C. Slaughter Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 716.

Performance or breach.—Judgment in favor of holder of vendor’s lien notes foreclosing lien he asserted against land did not constitute breach of covenant of general warranty by grantee of purchaser, who conveyed to others. Davis v. Teal (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1166.

Complete failure of title does not amount to mere shortage in acreage, for which action for breach of covenant will not lie. Shannon v. Childers (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1050.

Action of state in forfeiting a survey which entirely conflicted with prior surveys amounts to a constructive eviction, breaching a covenant of warranty in a deed thereof.

Evidence held insufficient to show breach of vendors’ covenant to deliver peaceable possession of land, and to defend against paramount claims, incumbrances, and adverse possession. Adams v. Carter (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 781.

Any incumbrances which would compel payment of any amount in excess of exception stipulated in a warranty deed would be a breach to that extent of covenant against incumbrances. Askew v. Bruner (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 152.

An unexpired lease is a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment. Morriss v. Hesse (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 710.

Covenants have no right to presume that a superior title will be asserted until he actually feels its pressure upon him, and cannot recover money spent voluntarily in perfecting title. Hilburn v. Matheney (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 746.

Waiver of breach.—The fact that the purchasers of lots in a restricted residential subdivision made no objection to a temporary building on one lot used as a real estate office by the owners of the subdivision, and later occasionally used for elections, schools, and social gatherings, does not establish acquiescence in the use of that lot for business purposes. Wilson Co. v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 703.

Duty to defend suit.—It is the duty of a warrantor, when made a party to a suit, or when notified of a suit in which his warrantee is sued for the title to the land, the title to which he has contracted to defend, to come in and defend such title, and if he fails to do so he cannot complain that his warrantee has failed to make such defense. Brader v. Zbranek (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 331.

Damages for breach.—Where title to only part of land sold under general warranty of title fails, vendor is liable upon his warranty for damages bearing some proportion to whole purchase money as value of the part as to which title fails bears to the whole premises, estimated at prices paid. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Ewing (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1163; Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank & Trust Co. v. Cole (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 948; Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank & Trust Co. v. Cole (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 254.

Between the immediate parties, the proper measure of damages for breach of a covenant of general warranty of title, in an executed contract for the sale of real estate, is the purchase money paid, with interest, where there has been a total failure of title. Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank & Trust Co. v. Cole (Civ. App.) 175 S. W. 949; Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Ewing (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1163.

Where warrantors, by payment of $5,000, obtained for their warrantees good title to only 125 out of 329 acres of land warranted, they were entitled to release from only 125/329 of their warranty liability, and not to the extent of $5,000 absolutely. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Ewing (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1163.

A grantee, receiving from tenant lease money or part of the crops, is chargeable with what he so receives, as an offset to his claim, under covenants in his deed, for the value of the use of the land during the time he is deprived thereof by reason of the tenant's possession. Morriss v. Hesse (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 710.

In an action for breach of covenant against incumbrances consisting of an outstanding lease, interest was properly allowed on the amount by which the value of the use and enjoyment of the land was diminished by occupation of the premises by the lessee. Id.

For breach of warranty of title the warrantee is entitled to recover the price paid for the conveyances, and where the price is paid in property, the value of the property is admissible. Northcutt v. Hume (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 157.

In an action for breach of warranty of title of land conveyed in an exchange of properties, evidence held sufficient to show that the price paid is necessary for plaintiff to warrantee the plaintiff for all the land conveyed to him was $8,000. Id.

In an action for breach of warranty of title of lands conveyed in an exchange of properties, evidence held sufficient to show the proportional part of the price paid by plaintiff warrantee represented by the part of the land to which title failed, though there was no direct evidence that the land was all of similar quality or equal value. Id.

Art. 1109. [630] [554] Must be witnessed or acknowledged.

Non-compliance with statute.—Plaintiff, in an action against the heirs of his deceased grantor, under Rev. St. art. 4351, sought to prove for record an instrument purporting to convey, by donative, conveying certain of his deceased, or the instrument contained all the essential elements of a conveyance of real estate, except that it was not acknowledged by the grantor nor attested by subscribing witnesses, as required by this act. Held, that a demurrer to the petition was properly overruled, since the instrument, though it might not take effect as a conveyance, was effectual as a contract to convey, on which a conveyance could be enforced under Rev. St. art. 561, and as such was entitled to record. Howard v. Zimpelman (Sup.) 14 S. W. 99.

In suit to cancel deed given by deceased widow, original deed, 30 years old, executed by widow and husband, held admissible as receipt of widow, although acknowledgment was defective. Smith's Heirs v. Hirsch (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 754.

A joint lease or other conveyance by husband and wife is valid without acknowledgment, unless the property conveyed was the homestead. Johnson v. Russell (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 352.

In case of a deed by a party competent to execute it, neither the acknowledgment nor record is necessary to make it a valid and binding obligation. McCracken v. Sullivan (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 336.

Whether a lost deed was duly acknowledged by the grantor was immaterial where the execution was proved as at common law. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 177.

Art. 1110. [631] [555] Conveyance by sheriff or other officer will pass title, when.

Conveyance by officer in general.—The fact that the best evidence of a sheriff's authority to sell is not available, and that proper predicate has been laid for secondary evi-
Art. 1110 CONVEYANCES

...does not alter the rule that recital in a sheriff's deed is not competent evidence of his power to sell. Richards v. Rule (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 915.

Whether a sheriff's deed was executed by virtue of the requisite authority may be established by competent secondary evidence, and the question is not foreclosed by the fact that the execution docket contains no entry of the issuance of an order of sale. Id.

Description of land.—Where an improper description is put in a mortgage and foreclosure is brought into the sheriff's deed, the sheriff's deed cannot be reformed, but to get title the mortgage itself should be reformed and another foreclosure had. Alfaifa Lumber Co. v. Mudgett (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 357.

Art. 1111. [632] [556] Estates in futuro.

Cited, Concho Camp No. 65, W. O. W. v. City of San Angelo (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1106.

Purpose of statute.—This article was enacted to abrogate the common-law rule that a freehold to commence in futuro could not be conveyed, and has reference to estates in expectancy other than estates in reversion and remainder. Glenn v. Holt (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 684.

Remainders and reversions.—"Remainders" are created by deed or devise, whereas "reversions" are created by operation of law, and, regardless of how many estates are carved out of the owner's entire estate, a reversion will be left, provided they do not amount in quantity to his original estate, and as to all the estate except the particular part granted or devised the original owner remains the owner as he originally was. Glenn v. Holt (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 684.

Where a deed from husband to wife granting a life estate to the wife provided the parties should live together as husband and wife, and further provided that if no issue be born to grantor or his wife the conveyance was intended to vest title, after termination of the life estate, in "my legal heirs in the same manner as they would inherit under the law," a reversion in fee remained in the grantor upon his dying without issue. Id.

Where grantor died without issue, the heirs could not take as contingent remaindermen, since a contingent remainder cannot be limited to the grantor's heirs, and such estate continued in the grantor as a reversion in fee, which could be conveyed by him. Id.

Art. 1112. [633] [557] Implied covenants.

See Ballard v. Carmichael, 83 Tex. 355, 18 S. W. 734.

Cited, Lindsay v. Freeman, 83 Tex. 259, 18 S. W. 727; Peterson v. McCauley (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 826.

Implied covenants in general.—Decree of partition created statutory warranty in writing similar to general warranty expressed in deed, and such statutory warranty cannot be enlarged or restricted by parol evidence. O'Connor v. Sanchez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1005.

Parties to partition wherein decree was founded on mutual mistake of matter could sue either upon statutory warranty or in equity, and allege two causes alternatively in same pleading. Id.

When the words 'grant' or 'convey' are used in a deed, the deed warrants against all incumbrances, in view of this article. Robinson v. Street (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 648.

The assignors, of a gas and oil lease do not warrant their title where the assignment contains no express covenants of any kind, since covenants for title are not implied in a mere assignment of a lease, so that the assignors are not liable to the assignee for failure of the title. White v. Murphy (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 641.

If by the use of the words "grant and convey" in the assignment of an oil and gas lease a covenant against incumbrances and prior conveyance by the assignors is implied under this article, such a covenant would not protect the assignee against a cancellation of the lease for fraud of the assignors in obtaining it. Id.

Art. 1113. [634] [558] Incumbrances include what.

Implied covenants.—An unexpired lease constitutes an incumbrance. In that it entitles the tenant to a right or interest, to the diminution of the value of the land conveyed. Morris v. Hess (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 710.

Art. 1114. [635] [559] Conveyance of separate lands of the wife, how made.

See Ballard v. Carmichael, 83 Tex. 355, 18 S. W. 734.

Cited, Ikard v. Thompson, 81 Tex. 265, 16 S. W. 1019.

Conveyance and contract to convey in general.—See Haynie v. Stovall (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 792; note to art. 1115.

Although husband procured money under express agreement that wife would join him in trust deed, where she alone signed, deed was invalid, and neither husband nor wife, in foreclosure, were estopped from denying its validity; there being nothing to show fraud on wife's part. First State Bank of Tomball v. Thimkham (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 880.

This article necessarily includes by implication the power of the wife to incumber her estate, when joined by her husband, and accordingly she may mortgage it to secure the husband's debts. Red River Nat. Bank v. Ferguson, 109 Tex. 287, 265 S. W. 923.

Wife's acknowledgment.—A joint lease or other conveyance by husband and wife is valid without acknowledgment, or if the wife's acknowledgment is defective, unless the property conveyed was the homestead. Johnson v. Russell (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 352.
Where an oil lease executed by husband and wife was acknowledged by wife while containing blank for description, lease was not operative, despite wife's parol authorization of a third person to fill blank, and was void under Art. 605, as required by law and as stated in the certificate. Dickson v. Bank of Tex. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 401.

A deed by a married woman must be acknowledged in a prescribed manner, and without such acknowledgment is absolutely void, and no court can give validity to it by judgment proving it. McCracken v. Sullivan (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 338.

In an action by a wife to cancel a deed executed by her and her husband, evidence held insufficient to support a finding that notary public took acknowledgment as required by law and as stated in the certificate. Dendiger v. Martin (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 105.

In order for a married woman to convey her separate property or her homestead, it is necessary that her acknowledgment be taken to the instrument by an officer authorized to do so in the manner required by statute. Richmond v. Hog Creek Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 563.

An instrument, executed by the heirs, confirming a distribution of the property by the executor, cannot operate as a conveyance of an interest of a married woman in the property, where she was not examined separate from her husband in taking her acknowledgment, as required by arts. 6905, 1114. Waller v. Dickson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 895.

Art. 1115. [636] [560] Conveyance of homestead, how made.

See notes under art. 3786 in edition of 1914 and 1918 Supplement.

Conveyance and contract to convey in general.—Under this article, a married woman may convey her homestead through an attorney in fact, by a power of attorney, executed jointly with her husband in the manner prescribed in this article. Warren v. Jones, 69 Tex. 462, 6 S. W. 775.

Unless there is reasonable necessity for such action by husband alone, he cannot convey or mortgage homestead to cancel or adjust equities. Church v. Hayner (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 711.

Sale of standing timber on homestead lands of husband and wife, made by husband alone, while not joining in conveyance, passed title to against subsequent buyer of timber, from husband's grantee of lands; use of lands as homestead not having been interfered with or value impaired by sale of timber. Downey v. Dowell (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 585.

Where oil lease executed by husband and wife, covering their homestead, was signed and acknowledged by the wife merely for the purpose of enabling lessee to secure other leases, and without intent on her part to convey her rights in the homestead, and lessee had notice thereof, the lease was inoperative as a conveyance of an interest in the homestead, in view of arts. 1116, 5802, and 5804. McEntire v. Thomason (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 563.

Where the husband alone contracted to convey land used as a homestead, the grantee was clearly entitled to enforce his contract under the rules governing ordinary actions for specific performance of parol contracts to convey land after the land had ceased to be a homestead. Hudgins v. Thompson, 109 Tex. 433, 211 S. W. 586.

A contract to convey a homestead is not one for which specific performance may be decreed. Terry v. Crabb (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 528.

Under arts. 1102, 1114, 1115, a husband to execute an oil lease on homestead property, in which the wife of the husband has not joined, is void. Haynie v. Stovall (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 792.

Though husband and wife signed and acknowledged an oil and gas lease of their homestead and placed it in escrow, contract still being executory up to actual delivery with intent to vest title, specific performance cannot be decreed. Jackson v. Scoggins (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 362.

An executory contract to convey the homestead cannot be specifically enforced against the wife, Crabb v. Bell (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 622.

Deed executed by husband and wife, owners of a homestead in the land, conveying all minerals therein, held a joint conveyance. Green v. West Texas Coal Mining & Developing Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 548.

A husband's deed to his wife of their homestead property, without her joinder, the conveyance being intended to take effect on the contingency that something happened to the husband, on happening of which the conveyance was to be recorded, was not such a sale and conveyance of the homestead as is inhibited by Const. art. 16, § 50, and by this article, the deed not being void because the property was a homestead. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 970.

Where plaintiff and his father-in-law jointly bought a parcel of land, the title being taken in the name of plaintiff, and the two families moved on the land, plaintiff's conveyance to his father-in-law on partition cannot be attacked because his wife did not join; the homestead right attaching only to plaintiff's undivided interest in the land. zabaw v. Allen (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 654.

Under Acts 33d Leg. (1913) c. 32 (arts. 4621, 4622, 4624), even if a married woman had made a contract in writing, properly acknowledged, to convey a lot which was her separate property and the homestead of herself and husband, she could not be bound thereby, for she could repudiate and refuse to comply with it up to the time she declared to the broker that she did not wish to execute it as a contract, and that her acknowledgment that she sold the property was only a contract beforehand in regard to her right to retract so as to deprive herself of that right. Collv v. Harris (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 855.

Where a wife, when requested by broker to join her husband in signing contract to sell their separate property, has no further interest in the property and the husband, refused to do so but authorized her husband to sign it, the broker was charged with notice of the fact that her parol contract to sell was an absolute nullity. Id.

When landowner lists homestead with broker, and a purchaser is found, ready, willing, and able to accept it, he cannot avoid liability to the broker for commissions on the ground that his wife refuses to execute a deed. Cotten v. Williams (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 572.

Wife's homestead interest is neither an "incumbrance" nor a "defect in the title," such as would prevent recovery of commissions from the husband. Id.

What constitutes homestead.—One who has been in the peaceable, and adverse possession of land for more than 10 years, occupying it as his homestead, thereby acquires a title such as a valid transfer can only be made in the manner prescribed by statute for the conveyance of a homestead. Bridges v. Johnson, 69 Tex. 714, 7 S. W. 566.

Abandonment of homestead.—There was no difference between the power of a husband to abandon a part and his power to abandon all of the homestead, either of which he alone may do if acting in good faith. Hudgins v. Thompson, 109 Tex. 433, 211 S. W. 586.

Under Const. art. 16, § 50, it is only the homestead which the husband is forbidden to sell, and land having once been used for the purposes of a home retains its homestead character until lost by abandonment. Id.

Where an insolvent decedent gave a mortgage upon his land, subsequently married, made it his and his homestead, and after abandoning it, gave, without his wife's joiner, a new trust deed, and some time later re-established such homestead, the mortgage lien is superior to the homestead exemption rights of the widow and children. Investors' Mortgage Co. v. Newton, 162 Tex. 478, 162 S. W. 971.

A husband, acting in good faith, may select the homestead, and when he has acquired a new home, and his wife has removed with him to the newly acquired homestead, a prior deed made by him without her concurrence to the former homestead becomes as to the homestead an estoppel, and the wife's interest only ceases when a new homestead has been acquired and she removes thereto. Fisher v. Gulf Production Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 450.

Insanity of husband or wife.—Art. 4621 applies to a conveyance of the homestead, which was the wife's separate property, though the husband was insane, where the conveyance was not made or necessary for the support and maintenance of either the husband or wife. Lawson v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 657.

Separation.—Const. art. 16, § 50, exempting homestead, does not protect a married man who executed a deed of trust, though he was married and was occupying the property as a residence of which he excluded his wife, with the intention never to return. Murphy v. Lewis (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1659.

Abandoned wife, without minor children or single daughters living with her, or other constituent members of family, may mortgage her homestead. Williams v. Farmers' Nat. Bank of Stephenville (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 1083.

Sentence of husband to penitentiary is equivalent to abandonment of wife. Id.

Acknowledgment by wife.—Where mortgagee canceled mortgage in consideration of conveyance to him, and thereafter reconveyed to mortgagees, and accepted vendors' lien notes, the fact that wife of one of the mortgagees did not acknowledge deed until after reconveyance did not, in the absence of fraud, affect its validity, even though it conveyed the homestead. Jones v. Flink (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 777.

In an action to cancel an oil lease of a homestead between the original lessors and lessees, alleging that the separate acknowledgment of the wife of lessor was not taken as required is sufficient, without alleging fraud or imposition in the taking of the acknowledgment. Hamilton County Development Co. v. Sullivan (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 118.

In order for a married woman to convey her homestead, it is necessary that her acknowledgment be taken to the instrument by an officer authorized to do so in the manner required by statute. Richmond v. Hog Creek Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 563.

See Pierce v. Fort, 60 Tex. 464.

Ratification.—A mutual will of a husband and wife, giving the survivor a life estate and upon his or her death devising the homestead in fee to an adopted child and a son of a deceased adopted child, when adopted and ratified by the widow, who survived, vested an undivided half interest in the homestead in each of the named remainders. Rossetti v. Benavides (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 208.

Where a husband and wife contracted to sell their homestead and the wife subsequently refused to join, notwithstanding that with the proceeds of the sale they had acquired a new homestead, their act in accepting the purchase money with full knowledge of the material facts held a ratification, precluding them from recovering for false representations inducing the execution of the earnest money receipt by the wife. Fisher v. Gulf Production Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 450.

Repudiation.—Where a conveyance by a husband and wife of a homestead was not duly acknowledged by the wife, the execution and delivery of a subsequent deed while the husband still held the land and had acquired no other homestead was a repudiation of the attempted sale to the first grantee. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 177.
Estoppel.—Married woman's title to homestead cannot be divested by estoppel, worked by conduct of husband, to which she is not a party. Barclay v. Disnuk (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 364.

Where plaintiff, in reliance upon written and verbal statements of defendants, that lot No. 11 alone was their homestead, made a loan secured by a mortgage on lot No. 12, defendants first defrauded them of that lot No. 12 was in fact their homestead. Turrentine v. Doering (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 892.

Where defendants were not occupying lots 11 and 12, or in such physical possession thereof as would give notice of homestead character, plaintiff could safely, in making a loan and relying on their statements as to intention to make lot No. 11 their sole homestead.

Fraud and coercion.—In a suit by grantor to recover damages based upon certain fraudulent representations by which he and his wife had been induced to convey their homestead, evidence held to sustain finding that he did not rely upon the alleged fraudulent representation, but upon a written guaranty. Gilson v. Allen (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 671.

Easements and incumbrances.—Where claimants were occupying premises as homestead at time of attempted execution of lien thereon by executing deed of trust, attempted lien was void. Hart v. Hulsey (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 302.

Existence of purchase-money lien against homestead did not authorize husband alone to deal with property by giving deed of trust, as if it were not a homestead. Church v. Hayner (Civ. App.) 301 S. W. 717.

Deed of trust covering homestead, given by husband alone, unless given to acquire it, or pursuant to agreement as to its acquisition, or unless he had power to give it in adjusting equities against homestead, cannot be sustained. Id.

Under Const. art. 16, § 59, and Rev. St. art. 5631, held, that sale of homestead under trust deed given to secure notes, executed in payment of improvement of homestead, under contract signed by husband and wife, was valid. Bowles v. Bennett (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 82.

Deed of trust on homestead to secure payment of note given by husband and wife to contractor to erect building is invalid where there is no contract in writing for work and material, though money secured on note is afterwards used to improve homestead. Herring v. Barber (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 142.

If land was homestead of husband at time of conveyances from him, and conveyances were intended as mortgages, and grantee had notice of facts when they acquired their several interests, conveyances were void. James v. Stratton (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 386.

An instrument, creating a lien in favor of street paving contractor, purporting in its premises to be from "M. and his wife," was binding on wife, where she signed and acknowledged that she was the wife of M., the person described, named, and referred to in the premises. Cresoted Wood Block Paving Co. v. McKay (Civ. App.) 311 S. W. 832.

Rights of purchasers and mortgages.—Under Const. art. 16, § 59, in absence of showing of diligence by making inquiry by purchaser at trustee's sale, possession of tenants of prior grantor who held homestead held notice that his deed and a subsequent deed were intended as mortgages, and hence trustee's deed was void, and not voidable. Moore v. Chamberlain, 109 Tex. 64, 195 S. W. 1135.

Duty of purchaser in respect to private examination of wife by notary, see Pierce v. Port, 69 Tex. 484.

Where a grantor by deed absolute, but in fact a mortgage, conveys a homestead, but is in possession at the time of a subsequent conveyance by his grantee, or a subsequent grantee in chain of title, the purchaser has notice of his title. Mason v. Olds (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1949.

That a deed absolute was of record at the time plaintiff purchased from a subsequent grantee was not determinative of the sufficiency of notice of the claim of mortgage given by reason of the defendant's occupancy as a homestead of the premises. Id.

At the suit of trial court to recover homestead executed by husband alone, husband and wife had right to pay defendant amount of husband's note given for part of purchase money to husband's vendor; husband never having made default, and defendant, after receiving quitclaim deed, and as part consideration, having paid husband's vendor amount of note. Clark v. Tuller (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 605.

Where wife of joint owner of land having homestead right failed to sign lease or option to develop for oil, failure could only be involved to limit rights of lessees or optionees, not as ground for cancellation. Griffin v. Bell (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 1034.

While an executory contract for the sale or lease of a homestead signed and acknowledged by both husband and wife in the manner required for the conveyance of such property will not be specifically enforced, damages may be recovered for breach of such contract by way of alternative relief. Blue v. Conner (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 533.

Art. 1116. [637] [561] Failing as a conveyance, shall be valid as a contract.

Insufficient conveyance as contract.—An instrument which contained all the essential elements of a conveyance of real estate, except that it was not acknowledged by the grantor or attested by subscribing witnesses, as required by art. 1109, though it might not take effect as a conveyance, was effectual as a contract to convey, on which a conveyance could be enforced under this article, and as such was entitled to record under art. 6352.

Howard v. Zimpelman (Sup.) 14 S. W. 69.

Whether there was such intention to convey that a deed conveyed title as a contract for conveyance of land under this article, held for the jury under the evidence, though defendants admitted they signed the instruments. Vauter v. Greenwood (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 269.
Merger of contract in deed.—Where plaintiff contracted to sell defendant "the Angelus Hotel," the delivery of a deed which failed to embrace all of the land occupied by the hotel, and acceptance of such deed in ignorance of such fact, was a fraud preventing the application of the doctrine of merger of contract in deed. Crawford v. El Paso Land Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 233.

Assignment of contract.—Instrument assigning a purchaser's interest under a contract of sale for a valuable consideration duly signed and acknowledged was a valid contract conveying purchaser's interest, and admissible in action for deposit, J. M. Frost & Sons v. Cramer (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 858.

Art. 1136. Certain corporations exempt from provisions.
Article 1120. [641] [565] Private corporations may be created.

Acceptance of charter.—Legislative grant of a corporate charter by special act without its acceptance does not constitute a contract between the company and the state investing the company with legal existence. Davis v. Allison, 109 Tex. 449, 211 S. W. 989.

Art. 1121. [642] [566] For what purposes corporations may be created.—The purposes for which private corporations may be formed are:

17a. To contract for the erection, construction, or repair of any building, structure, or improvement, public or private and erect, construct or repair same or any part thereof, and to acquire, own, prepare for use, any materials for said purposes. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 39, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

28. The construction or purchase and maintenance of mills, gins, cotton compresses, grain elevators, wharves, and public warehouses for the storage of products and commodities, and the purchase, sale and storage of products and commodities by grain elevator and public warehouse companies, and the loan of money by such elevator and public warehouse companies, and to act as general commercial brokers and as customs brokers in the United States and foreign countries. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 17, § 1, amending art. 1121, sec. 28, Rev. Civ. St.]

That all corporations heretofore organized under said section 28, Article 1121, of the Revised Civil Statutes of the State of Texas be, and they are hereby, vested with the additional power provided by this Act. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 17, § 2.]

Took effect June 16, 1920.

77. A private corporation may be formed and chartered for the establishment and maintenance of garages with authority to purchase, sell store, house, rent, operate, repair, and otherwise deal in automobiles and other motor vehicles and their accessories, provided that the right to operate shall not conflict with the ordinances of any incorporated city or town in which they shall operate; gasoline and oils necessary to the operation of motor vehicles. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 7, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

78. A private corporation may be formed and chartered for the establishment and maintenance of drilling companies, with authority to own and operate drilling rigs, machinery, tools and apparatus necessary in the boring, or otherwise sinking of wells in the production of oil, gas or water, or either, and the purchase and sale of such goods, wares and merchandise used for such business, and declaring an emergency. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 8, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, adjournment.

79. A private corporation may be formed and chartered for the construction, building and manufacture of aeroplanes, including all classes of flying machines, to buy, sell and otherwise deal therein, and to operate, or have operated any such machines for the purpose of carrying passengers and freight, both or either, including United States mail, from and to any point in this State and subject to the laws thereof, to and from any point in any State of the United States, or any foreign country, with the right to acquire by purchase, or otherwise, and to maintain all necessary starting and lighting grounds and fields. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 9, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, adjournment.

80. Private corporations may be formed for the purpose of accepting, guaranteeing, enforcing, becoming surety upon, buying, selling, contracting with reference to or otherwise dealing in acceptances, bills of exchange, bills of lading and warehouse and other receipts growing out, or to be used in aid, of the transportation, warehousing, distribution, or financing, in either domestic or foreign trade, of readily marketable, stable, non-perishable, agricultural products and so executed or supported as to be secured upon or to represent such products in amounts at least equal in clear market value to the amount of the financial undertaking of such corporations upon or on account of such instruments. Any such corporation may also buy, sell, endorse, contract with reference to, or otherwise deal in, acceptances of approved banking corporations, not secured upon nor representing any such products, but eligible for re-discount to, or for purchase in the open market by, Federal Reserve Banks; provided however the total liabilities to any corporation chartered under this Act of any such banking corporation, on account of any such unsecured acceptances, shall at no time be permitted to exceed ten per cent. of the unimpaired capital of such corporation chartered under this Act. No corporation shall be chartered under this Act with authorized capital stock of less than $500,000.00, nor shall the authorized capital stock of any such corporation be reduced by amendment, to less than $500,000.00. By readily, marketable, staple, non-perishable, agricultural products are meant those classes of agricultural products which are subject to such constant dealing in ready markets as to make their values easily and definitely ascertainable and realizable on short notice and which are not ordinarily subject to substantial depreciation in quality within the period of immaturity of the obligations which they secure or by which they are represented. Each corporation chartered under this Act shall invest and keep invested in obligations of the United States of America, the State of Texas, or political sub-divisions or incorporated cities of the State of Texas, not less than one-half of its paid in capital.

No corporation formed under this Act shall enter into any contract or contracts of acceptance, guaranty, endorsement or suretyship when its obligation thereon in connection with its entire existing obligations and indebtedness primary or secondary, fixed or contingent, shall exceed five times its then unimpaired capital and surplus; provided however, if previously authorized in writing so to do by the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, it shall be lawful for such corporation to enter into such contract or contracts when its obligations thereon in connection with its said entire then existing obligations and indebtedness shall not exceed ten times its said capital and surplus and shall not exceed the limits fixed by the written authorization issued by such Commissioner, and all such contracts and obligations entered into in violation hereof shall be unenforceable against such corporation; provided further that those obligations, to pay which at maturity, any such corporation has been furnished funds by other parties liable thereon, need not be considered in determining the amount of its existing obligations and indebtedness under this paragraph, provided, however that nothing contained in this Act shall prevent the enforcement of any such prohibited obligations by any holder who has acquired the same in due course, for value, before maturity, and without notice of its infirmity.

It shall be lawful for any private corporation formed under Title 25 of the Revised Statutes of Texas and for any banking corporation or trust company (excepting Savings Banks) formed under Title 14 of the Revised Statutes of Texas to hold stock in corporations chartered under this 252

Act and in corporations chartered under the laws of the United States or any state thereof and principally engaged in financing domestic or foreign trade in any such agricultural products, in amounts not to exceed in the aggregate, ten per cent. of the capital and surplus of such private corporation, banking corporation or trust company, nor to exceed ten per cent. of the capital stock of such corporation in which such stock is to be held; provided, however, no banking corporation or trust company shall acquire stock in such corporation without express written authorization therefor from the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking of the State of Texas, under such rules and regulations as he may provide, except in payment of debt, and if it shall acquire same in payment of debt, it shall promptly dispose of same unless expressly permitted to retain same by such Commissioner of Insurance and Banking.

Corporations formed under this Act shall be subject at all times to the supervision and control of the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking of the State of Texas and shall conform to all lawful regulations of such Commissioner. No such corporation shall begin business until authorized so to do by such Commissioner after satisfactory showing made that such corporation has complied with the law, and thereafter it shall make such reports to such Commissioner and be subject to such periodical visits and examinations under his direction, and shall pay fees therefor, all as in the case of State Banking corporations under existing law. Said Commissioner shall have such powers with reference to taking charge of such corporations, liquidating same, and for like causes, as are possessed by him with reference to State banking corporations. No partial invalidity of this Act in any other respect shall be effective to impair any of its provisions authorizing the formation of corporations hereunder, defining their powers, and authorizing private corporations, banking corporations and trust companies to hold stock in them, subject to the limitations of this Act. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., 2d C. S., ch. 4, § 1.]

For section 2 of this act see post, Penal Code, art. 1907b. The act took effect July 9, 1919.

81. For the organization of companies with authority to subscribe for, purchase, invest in, hold, own, assign, pledge and otherwise deal in and dispose of shares of capital stock, bonds, mortgages, debentures, notes and other securities, obligations, contracts and evidences of indebtedness of corporations organized under the laws of the State of Texas or of any other State.

Provided, however, no company organized under the provisions of this Act shall be authorized to subscribe for, purchase, invest in, hold, own, assign, pledge or otherwise deal in or dispose of the shares of capital stock, bonds, mortgages, debentures, notes or other securities, obligations, contracts or evidences of indebtedness of any two or more corporations engaged in the same line of business that are in competition with each other. Provided, further, that the powers and authority conferred under the provisions of this Act shall in no way affect the provisions of the Anti-trust laws of this State. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 136, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

82. For the purpose of manufacturing ice and nonintoxicating beverages and in connection therewith the operation of a general storage business; provided, that no beverage of any kind prohibited by any law of this State from being manufactured, sold or stored, shall be so manufactured, stored or in any manner kept in the possession of any company so incorporated. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 47, § 1.]
Establishments incorporated under this subdivision shall be subject to and pay two franchise taxes. [Id., § 2.]

Took effect Nov. 15, 1921.

Purposes for which may be created—Several and distinct purposes.—A corporation held not organized and conducted for two purposes, contrary to law, its charter stating it is for educational purposes, though providing it shall be controlled by a religious denomination. Lightfoot v. Pointdexter (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1152.

Subdivision 21.—See Taylor v. Dunn, 80 Tex. 562, 18 S. W. 732.

Cited, Knight v. Oldham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 567.

Subdivision 25.—A corporation, organized for the purpose of buying and selling goods by wholesale and retail, has power to sell goods by taking orders from the customer, sending them to the wholesaler, and having him ship goods directly to customer. Sheehan v. Sheehan-Hackley & Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 665.

Subdivision 36.—Where defendant club might lawfully dispense liquor to its members and guests so far as Penal Laws are concerned, the state was not entitled to restrain it from so dispensing the same on the ground that such was not within its corporate powers, since a corporation may transact all such subordinate and connected matters as are, if not essential, at least very convenient to the due prosecution of its main undertaking. Country Club v. State, 116 Tex. 40, 214 S. W. 296, 5 A. L. R. 1185.

Subdivision 37.—Under its charter the city of Austin had power to make, for a period of more than two years back, assessments of securities of a fidelity and bonding company, also doing a casualty insurance business, deposited with the state treasurer as required by this subdivision, and Acts 52d Leg. c. 117 (Vernon's Schedules Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 4942a-4942c), which had been omitted from taxation. Texas Fidelity & Bonding Co. v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 818.

A corporation may be appointed and act as executor: the creation of such corporations being authorized by this subdivision. Simmons v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 338.

Subdivision 39.—Construction of prior acts.—See McGee Irrigating Ditch Co. v. Hudson (Sup.) 22 S. W. 967.

Subdivision 60.—The Workmen's Compensation Act (Vernon's Ann. Civ. St. Supp. 1918, arts. 5246-1 to 5246-91) and this act having been passed at the same session of the Legislature, and within a few days of each other, it is to be presumed that they are intended with the same spirit and actuated by the same policy, and they should be construed each in the light of the other. Eastern Texas Electric Co. v. Woods (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 498.

The Workmen's Compensation Act (Vernon's Ann. Civ. St. Supp. 1918, arts. 5246-1 to 5246-91) in its application to an electric company operating a lighting and power department, as well as a street railway and an interurban railway, held not repealed by this subdivision. Id.

Subdivision 72.—An ice company has no power of eminent domain. Van Valkenburgh v. Ford (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 405.

Evidence that a corporation was incorporated under the laws of Texas and operated two cotton gins and an ice plant under the same charter and authorized its secretary and manager to operate mills without specifying the kind of mills was sufficient to show that it was incorporated under this subdivision. Bishop Mfg. Co. v. Sealy Oil Mill & Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 202.

A corporation organized under this subdivision, though conducting a cotton seed oil business, would not be authorized to conduct a general trading business in cotton seed or to contract for the sale of cotton seed, where it did not then own the seed, and the sale was not based upon any estimate of the amount of seed which could reasonably be expected to be acquired from customers of the gin. Id.

A corporation incorporated under this subdivision, and operating cotton gins had power to contract for the sale of cotton seed acquired from its customers and to contract for the sale of seed acquired by means of ultra vires contracts for the purpose of preventing a loss. Id.

Residence.—A corporation's ·residence" in legal contemplation is the place where it maintains its office and transacts its business—its principal place of business. Sanders v. Farmers' State Bank of Mexia (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 635.
Art. 1122. [644] [568]. Charter must be subscribed and acknowledged.—The charter of an intended corporation must be subscribed by three or more persons, two of whom at least must be citizens of this State, and must be acknowledged by them before an officer duly authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds; provided, that all charters may be subscribed by married women who may also be stockholders, officers and directors thereof; and that acts contracts and deeds as such stockholders, officers and directors shall be as binding and effective for all the purposes of said corporation as if they were males; and the joinder and consent of their husbands and privy examinations separate and apart from them shall not be required. [Acts 1887, p. 103; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 132, § 1 amending art. 1123, Rev. Civ. St.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 1125. Private corporations for profit must subscribe full amount of stock, etc.

Payment.—A corporate charter may be procured when entire stock has been subscribed and 50 per cent. of capital paid in, although certain subscribers had not paid half of their subscriptions. Stringfellow v. Panhandle Packing Co. (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 250.

Estoppel to deny recital.—Creditor dealing with corporation has right to assume its capital will be or has been paid in accordance with law, the capital constituting a warranty for the extension of credit, and, on the corporation's insolvency, becoming a trust fund for creditors. Thompson v. First State Bank of Amarillo, 106 Tex. 419, 211 S. W. 977.

Where original incorporators and subscribers, in their affidavit in application for charter, set forth, as fully paying for stock subscribed by them, payments partly in merchandise and partly in cash, they could not claim, as a defense to their liability for the amounts recited as cash, which were, in fact, not paid, that their valuation in such affidavit of the merchandise turned over by them was too low. Park v. Rich (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 947.

Persons signing corporate charter and affidavits that stock had been fully subscribed and that they had paid 50 per cent. of their stock subscriptions may be held to a performance of their subscription agreements by state or corporation. Stringfellow v. Panhandle Packing Co. (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 250.

Art. 1127. Satisfactory evidence defined.

Effect of false statement.—Where incorporators and subscribers made affidavit that the stock was fully subscribed and paid, caused the corporation's books to so show, had stock issued to themselves as fully paid and nonassessable, and represented, in sale of the stock, that it was fully paid, purchaser paying full face value therefor, but, although they had paid for the stock the amount of merchandise recited in their affidavits, the cash amounts recited as paid were in fact not paid by them, the question of their good faith in their sale of the stock was immaterial on the question of their liability for amounts unpaid on their stock. Park v. Rich (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 947.

Art. 1128. Secretary of state may require other evidence.

Effect of acceptance by Secretary of State.—Acceptance by the secretary of state of the valuation of an oil lease, placed upon it by incorporators who received stock on such valuation, renders such valuation prima facie correct, and it can only be called in question in case of fraud. Peden Iron & Steel Co. v. Jenkins (Civ. App.) 303 S. W. 180.

Art. 1129. Certain corporations exempt from provisions.—Corporations created under subdivisions 21, 29, 37, 53, 54, and 60 of Article 1121, as well as corporations formed for the construction, purchase and maintenance of mills and gins, having a capital stock of not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, mutual building and loan associations, corporations formed for the construction, purchase, maintenance and operation of cotton mills, and also waterworks, ice plants, electric light plants and cotton warehouses in cities of less than ten thousand inhabitants are exempt from the provisions of Articles 1125 to 1128, inclusive. [Acts 1901, p.
Art. 1129  CORPORATIONS—PRIVATE  (Title 25
18; Acts 1897, p. 192; Acts 1907, p. 309, § 1; Acts 1920, 36th Leg., 3d C.
S., ch. 45, § 1.]

Takes effect 90 days after June 18, 1923, date of adjournment.

Art. 1130. Subscriptions and payment of stock required of excepted corporations.

Art. 1131. [645] [569] Must be filed with secretary of state, etc.

Cited, Rio Grande Cattle Co. v. Burns, 82 Tex. 50, 17 S. W. 1043.

Art. 1132. [646] [570] Corporation shall exist from time of filing charter, etc.

Cited, Rio Grande Cattle Co. v. Burns, 82 Tex. 50, 17 S. W. 1043.

Art. 1133. [647] [571] Charter may be amended, how.

Cited, Rio Grande Cattle Co. v. Burns, 82 Tex. 50, 17 S. W. 1043.

Effect of amendment.—An authorized change in the name of a corporation has no right to the endorsement of the bank, which was also void, and the charter to new company, formed to unify business of borrowing companies, the new company could not maintain itself as a fact of usury in contract between lender and borrower companies, transaction not constituting an "amalgamation," "merger," or "consolidation" of borrow-

Art. 1137. Renewal and consolidation of two or more such corporations, etc., how.

What constitutes consolidation.—Where borrowing companies conveyed all their property to the lender to satisfy indebtedness, which was frivolous, and the lender conveyed to a new company, formed to unify business of borrowing companies, the new company transaction not constituting an "amalgamation," "merger," or "consolidation" of borrowputed collaterally.

Who may question corporate existence.—Under this article, a person who has entered into a rental contract with a corporation as such is estopped to deny its corporate existence in an action against him to recover rents and for the possession of the leased premis-

Forfeiture of charter.—In suit by corporate stockholders to recover assets of company wrongfully disposed of by director, court improperly declared charter forfeited, where-state was not party, and record showed company was still existing, not showing that plaintiffs, as individuals, or that the corporation itself, ratified illegal acts. Millsaps v.

Illegal corporation.—If a company, which assumed to be a corporation by amending the charter of an old and defunct corporation, exercising powers prohibited by the law after it was in business, was neither a de jure nor de facto corporation, persons purchasing stock could attack its existence collaterally. Crow v. Cattlemen's Trust Co.
(Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1047.

Where banking corporation authorized by special act was not organized before adoption of Const. 1876, art. 16, section 16 of which prohibited organization of such corporations, it had no legal existence when organized after 1904, despite the constitutional amendment of that date authorizing the incorporation of banks by general laws, and subscribers to its stock, in suit by a receiver to enforce their subscriptions, were not es-topped to defend on the ground that there was no legal corporation, despite this article.
Davis v. Allison, 199 Tex. 340, 211 S. W. 950.

Where charter was obtained from territory of Arizona for bonding and insurance company, which was never organized in Arizona in compliance with its laws, but was atttempted to be organized in Texas, where most of its stockholders and directors resided, and virtually all of its business was subsequently done, the pretended corporation was a fraud on the states of Arizona and Texas, and the company's pretended directors were li-ses as individuals or partners to a company of Texas on a bridge contractor's bond.
Scharbauer v. Lampasas County (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 468.

Art. 1139. [650] [574] Legislature may alter, reform or amend.

2. Corporate powers and liabilities—In general.—See also, art. 1164 and notes. Corporations can transact only such business and perform only such acts as are authorized by the express terms of their charters, or by necessary implication. National Equitable Soc. v. Alexander, 220 S. W. 184; Richardson v. Bermuda Land & Live Stock Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 746; Kaplan Dry Goods Co. v. Sanger Bros. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 489; Eddleman v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 217 S. 4. It is no defense to an action to enjoin the grantor of the good will of a business from soliciting his former customers in Mexico and neighboring states not to do further business with his grantee, that latter, a corporation organized in Texas, has no power to do business in that territory, since such a corporation may lawfully transact the business for which it is organized in another state or foreign country. Sheehan v. Sheehan-Hackley & Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 665.

5. A gift to a college for erection of a chapel is not void on the ground that the college, being incorporated for educational purposes, cannot own and control a building used for purpose of conducting religious services. Lightfoot v. Poindexter (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1152.

6. An act of a corporation is properly said to be "ultra vires," when it is beyond the powers conferred upon the corporation. Richardson v. Bermuda Land & Live Stock Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 746.

7. In the case of grants by the Legislature to corporations, public or private, only such powers and rights can be exercised by the companies under them as are clearly embraced within the words of the act or derived therefrom by necessary implication; regard must be had to the object; any ambiguity in terms being resolved in favor of the public. Eastern Texas Electric Co. v. Woods (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 498.

8. Incidental.—A corporation has implied authority to do whatever is reasonably necessary to carry out the purposes of its existence. Taylor Cotton Oil Co. v. Early-Foster Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1173; Hollis Cotton Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Marrs & Lake (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 367.

9. The doctrine of ultra vires ought to be reasonably understood and applied, and whatever may fairly be regarded as incidental to, or consequential upon, those things which a corporation has been authorized to do ought not, unless expressly prohibited, be held by judicial construction to be ultra vires. Texas Fidelity & Bonding Co. v. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 144.

11. To enter into partnership.—No valid partnership agreement can be made between a corporation and an individual and it is immaterial that individual is owner of most of stock of corporation. Vineyard v. Miller Land Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 692.

"22 SUPP.V.S.CIV. ST. TEX.—17 257
10. — Indemnity, guaranty, and suretyship.—It is ultra vires of a corporation, not given express authority, to enter into contracts of guaranty or suretyship not in furtherance of its business. Ingram v. Texas Christian University (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 669.

A corporation organized for sole purpose of conducting mercantile business has no authority to pledge its assets to pay debts other than its own. Kaplan Dry Goods Co. v. Ranger Bros. (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 485.

A lumber company to sign contractor's bond as an indirect means of securing sale to the contractor is ultra vires. W. C. Bowman Lumber Co. v. Pherson, 110 Tex. 543, 221 S. W. 959, 11 A. L. R. 547, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 129 S. W. 412.

A corporation in the brief, having engaged not in furtherance of its railroad business, to indemnify a railroad on account of claims for damages growing out of negligence in the construction, maintenance, or operation of a spur track running to the brick plant was not ultra vires. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Diamond Press Brick Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 202, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 188 S. W. 32, and judgment modified (Sup.) 226 S. W. 140.

12. — Taking notes, etc.—In the absence of pleading and proof to the contrary, the court must assume that a corporation, if it was authorized to make notes sued on and to create a lien on property to secure them, had the authority to provide for their payment and to agree on an extension of due dates of the notes and the lien, and one suiting on the note and to foreclose the lien need not allege that the corporation had the power to agree to such extension. El Paso Townsite Co. v. Watts (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 709.

13. — Sales.—A company chartered to do cotton oil business had power to estimate year's output of "linters," estimate being reasonable and in good faith, and to contract to sell output on such estimate. being bound to deliver number of bales estimated. Taylor Cotton Oil Co. v. Early-Poster Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1179.

A corporation and maintain contractor to operate and maintain coal oil mills, etc., and to sell "cotton seed and any and all products and by-products," had the power to purchase cattle to be fed on hills at a time when there was practically no market for the hills. Holllis Cotton Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Marris & Lake (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 397.

18. — Contract in general.—It is not beyond the power of the ordinary private corporation to agree to repay money delivered to it by another and claimed by third parties in case it is determined that such third parties are in law entitled thereto. Eddleman v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 221.

A contract is empowered to enter into contract to enable it to carry on the business and accomplish the purpose of its existence, unless prohibited by law or the provisions of its charter. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Diamond Press Brick Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 204, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 188 S. W. 32, and judgment modified (Sup.) 226 S. W. 140.

16. Contracts before incorporation or organization.—The promoter of a corporation to be formed stands in a fiduciary relation toward it, and to the subscribers to its stock. Cator v. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 140.

Where property was sold to a corporation acting through its manager, was purchased for the use and benefit of the corporation, and the latter ratified the contract and the security mortgages by accepting and using the property, it is estopped to deny the validity of the security instruments, though they were executed prior to its legal organization as a corporation, and its successors are also bound by such ratification and estoppel. Thorndale Mercantile Co. v. Continental Gin Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1069.

17. — Liability for contracts of promoters.—A contract by a promoter in which he attempts to bind the future corporation, without a present existence, and to create a liability against it, cannot be enforced against the corporation unless and until adopted by it. Cator v. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 140.

A corporation is not bound by agreement made by its promoters and organizers, though the services rendered thereunder resulted in benefit to the corporation. Hart-Toole Furniture Co. v. Shahan (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 181.

A corporation would not be liable to plaintiff in damages occasioned by its organizers wrongfully inducing or persuading the breach of a contract by persons who had agreed to purchase lands in a venture in which plaintiff was to have an interest, even though such organizers are liable in damages for such wrong. Burns v. Veritas Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 446.

18. — Rights on contracts of incorporators.—A corporation may, after its organization is complete, adopt a contract made by its organizers where the services rendered thereunder resulted to its benefit. Hart-Toole Furniture Co. v. Shahan (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 181.

An inventory, made under agreement with the organizers of the corporation, of a stock of furniture on which the organizers desired to bid, was for the corporation's benefit though it did not acquire the furniture and furnishes sufficient consideration for the corporation to adopt the contract of its organizers. Id.

21. — Ultra vires contracts.—Except in cases where the rights of the public are involved, the plea of ultra vires, whether interposed for or against a corporation, will not be allowed to prevail when it will not advance justice, but will accomplish a legal wrong. Hollis Cotton Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Marris & Lake (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 587; Eddleman v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 221.

The question of whether a corporation acted ultra vires in the face of an expressly or implied statutory prohibition cannot be raised in litigation between it and a private party, but only by the state in a direct proceeding to forfeit the franchise or to punish it 258

Undertaking of furniture company, which sold porch swings, to hang swing sold customer, was not ultra vires, so that no liability could attach to company for damages from negligent hanging. Rick Furniture Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 99.

Multiplications against exceeding corporate powers to make such acts illegal as well as ultra vires. Hollis Cotton, Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Marrs & Lake (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 367.

If a corporate act is in express violation of statute, as distinguished from being merely beyond, by express statement, conferred powers, the corporation nevertheless violates the plain letter of the law, one so dealing with the corporation must take notice of the law and the statutory limitations placed upon the charter power. Richardson v. Bermuda Land & Live Stock Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 746.

Evidence held to show that the purchase and sale of cotton seed in the open market by the secretary and manager of a corporation operating cotton gins was a speculative venture, indulged in for the purpose of making the profit thereon, and was not designed or intended to foster the ginning business but insufficient to show that the purchase of cotton seed in the open market from persons other than customers of the gin was essential to the successful operation of the gin. Id.

An ultra vires and unauthorized contract made by an agent of a corporation is not rendered valid by reason of the fact that it is a substitute for a similar contract and merely extends the time of performance. Id.

22. Property and conveyances—Power to convey.—In absence of collusion between a grantor corporation and its grantee to defraud grantor's creditors, deed from solvent corporation conveys good title, stripped of equitable lien claimed by grantor's creditor, whose deed was not issued in good faith at time of conveyance, whether or not grantee had notice of claim. C. R. Miller & Bro. v. Mummert (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 279.

27. Shareholder's purchase from or sale to corporation.—Where a large stockholder undertook to sell all the property of a corporation though another had been duly appointed agent for sale, and fraudulently succeeded in getting corporation to give option to one who was his paid dummy, and then had option assigned to him and sold the property at a large profit over the option, and with the president, also a large stockholder, who had become acquainted with the fraud, fraudulently secured ratification of the sale, they were liable to the genuine stockholders as for secret profits of a trustee, regardless of fact whether stockholder was a duly appointed agent or not. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 373.

The doctrine that a stockholder may deal with the corporation the same as any stranger has the qualification that the transaction is free from fraud and not unfair to the corporation itself. Id.

31. Estoppel to deny corporate powers of corporation.—Where a corporation is the vendor, the vendee cannot set up its want of capacity to take and hold land as a defense to an action to recover the purchase price of land sold to him. Westbrook v. Missouri-Texas Land & Irrigation Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1154.

Where a contract with a corporation void because ultra vires and forbidden by statute was wholly executory, no ground of recovery against sureties on theory of estoppel existed. Zorn v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 541.

Where the corporation ordered cattle, and the cattle were actually shipped, corporation was estopped to set up as a defense that it had no power to purchase cattle, in an action for damages and commissions, although shipper again took possession and sold another purchaser at the best possible market price. Hollis Cotton Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Marrs & Lake (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 367.

Defense of ultra vires is not available, where the ultra vires act has been a benefit to the corporation seeking to avail itself thereof, or has worked legal wrong, injustice, or loss to other contracting party. Kaplan Dry Goods Co. v. Sanger Bros. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 485.

Where a national bank, to which a cotton oil company owed more money than was permissible under the banking laws, connived with the president of the oil company in his taxation of a feed company which ultra vires executed its note to the bank for the amount of the oil company's indebtedness, such bank cannot set up, in the feed company's suit to cancel note and deed of trust securing it, that the company is estopped to urge the ultra vires character of the transaction; the bank not having been misled. Taylor Feed Pen Co. v. Taylor Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 549.

Where plaintiff's lease, according to its expressed stipulations, was subject to terms of defendant corporation's prior lease, plaintiff was in no position to say that the right acquired by defendant under its lease to dispose of water to the public for domestic use was beyond its charter powers, and therefore valid. Osborn v. Texas Pac. Coal & Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 359.

32.—By receiving and retaining benefits.—Where a corporation has borrowed money and used it to advantage for three years, it is estopped to set up that the loan was for an unlawful purpose and ultra vires, especially where there is a presumed finding that the lender did not know of the unlawful use. Carter-Mullaly Transfer Co. v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 791.
A corporation which guaranteed a note and received a benefit therefrom could not set up the ultra vires character of its guaranty as a defense to an action for delinquent interest and attorney's fees on the note. Parlin & Orndorff Implement Co. v. Frey (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1143.

An insurance company securing money under and by means of an ultra vires act or contract is not justified in appropriating it and refusing to pay it back. Trammell v. San Antonio Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 186.

When a litigant seeks to set up the defense of equitable estoppel, by reason of benefits received, against the illegal and ultra vires acts of the corporation, it must appear that the corporation, in the operation of its franchise rights and powers, derived the benefit in the line of its necessary business and operation. Richardson v. Bermuda Land & Live Stock Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 746.

A private corporation was not estopped to set up the defense of ultra vires to its note, executed to a railroad in consideration of the future extension of the railroad through the county where the corporation, owned lands, by its having received the benefit of such extension, which was in fact built, since it received no such benefits until after the execution of the note. Id.

If a railroad corporation, to assist the federal government, advanced on behalf of its employees subscription money for bonds issued by the government in time of war, under an agreement that certain sums should be withheld from monthly salaries until the amount due on the employees' subscriptions had been paid, the railroad corporation, under a plea of ultra vires, could not escape delivery of the bonds to the employees after they had been paid for. Chambers, Watson & Wilson v. Hines (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 200.

Art. 1141. Unpaid stock payable when; proof of payment.

Trust fund.—The liability of shareholders of a corporation to contribute the amount of their shares as capital, is ordinarily treated in equity as assets like other legal claims belonging to the corporation. Mitchell v. Hancock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694.

See notes under art. 6469.

In general.—Where trust company gave shares of its stock, as part consideration for note, note was void in view of Const. art. 12, § 6. Commonwealth Trust Co. v. Hardee (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 261.

An agent selling stock for corporation having entered into void contract to accept notes for stock in violation of Const. art. 12, § 6, it will be presumed that parties acted thereafter in accordance with its terms. Cattlemen's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth v. Swearingen (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 586.

While an agreement between a corporation and stock subscriber that it will accept his promissory note in payment for stock is of no force as between the parties, in view of Const. art. 12, § 6, neither a note nor stock issued under it is utterly void since the wording found only in that clause which says that all previous increases of stock shall be void, it must be assumed that the Legislature deliberately omitted the word from the clause as to corporation not issuing stock except for "property actually received," etc. Washer v. Snyder, 109 Tex. 398, 211 S. W. 986, 4 A. L. R. 1520.

A corporation may not sell stock for corporation stock was to pay into surplus funds of the company in consideration for permitting him to subscribe was not such a payment on the "capital stock" as is contemplated in Const., art. 12, § 6, and this article. Giving note or other obligation for subscription price in general.—Evidence held to support finding that maker was not induced to execute note by promise that corporate stock would be issued to indemnify him against his payment and that stock had not been issued in payment of note on which money was loaned which borrower gave railway company as a bonus or donation. Handy v. Adams (Civ. App.) 136 S. W. 885.

Where company had never been incorporated, and stock was not to be delivered until notes were paid, notes, reciting that they were given for stock in company, were not given for stock issued in corporation, within meaning of Constitution and statutes making notes so given invalid. Commercial Guaranty State Bank v. Crews (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 502.

In suit by maker to cancel note and trust deed on ground that, as note was given in part for stock of defendant trust company, it was void, evidence held sufficient to support jury finding that shares of stock belonged to company, were issued by it out of its capital stock, and that note was made payable to it. Commonwealth Trust Co. v. Hardee (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 201.
Evidence held to show that stock of corporation was issued to defendant in consideration of notes sued on, and not for money paid or property actually received within Const. art. 12, § 6, so that notes were void as between original parties. Patterson v. Onion (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 227.

Under Const. art. 12, § 6, prohibiting the issuance of corporate stock except for property actually received, the giving of a note for stock is not a valid payment, but neither the stock issued nor the note given is void. Thompson v. First State Bank of Amarillo, 109 Tex. 419, 211 S. W. 977.

Promissory note of a subscriber which only evidenced his liability on his subscription in another form, constituted, not payment, but merely a promise to pay, and was not "property actually received" within Const. art. 12, § 6, prohibiting the issuance of corporate stock except for such property. Id.

The integrity of a corporation and the interests of the public demand that the assets of the corporation consist of something more than its stockholders' debts, and therefore it cannot accept a stock subscriber's note in payment for his stock in view of Const. art. 12, § 6. Washer v. Smyer, 109 Tex. 398, 211 S. W. 985, 4 A. L. R. 1220.

Where stock subscription contract, whereby subscriber gave note to corporation and made no cash payment, contained proxy authorizing named person to vote at stockholders' meetings, and referred to "amount paid" and to "sale price of the stock herein purchased" and where collateral agreement was entered into whereby the "stock" was taken as collateral security for subscriber's note, and where corporation issued certificate to subscriber, entered subscriber's name on stock book, and thereafter recognized subscriber as a stockholder, the note was unenforceable, the transaction being in violation of constitutional provision prohibiting issuance of stock except for money, labor or property. Turner v. Cattlemans' Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Com. App.) 315 S. W. 831.

In an action by plaintiff on notes issued to a trust company, where the petition alleged the corporate existence of the company, and the case was submitted on such theory, plaintiff cannot complain of the refusal of a directed charge on the theory that the trust company was not organized at the time the notes were executed, and, hence, the notes were given for its stock, they were not invalid under Const. art. 12, § 6. Master­son v. Turnley (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 428.

Evidence held not to show that a note was given in payment for unpaid corporate capital stock. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Shieid (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 196.

Issuance of stock in payment for property.—While in a broad sense a note is "property," it is not such within Const. art. 12, § 6, providing that no corporation shall issue stock except for "property actually received"; said section meaning property readily capable of being applied to debts of corporation. Washer v. Smyer, 109 Tex. 398, 211 S. W. 985, 4 A. L. R. 1220.

Where corporation had authorized capital stock of $20,000, all of which had been paid in money with exception of $5,000, which had been paid for by transfer of land of the reasonable value of that amount, its stock was legally issued. Braley v. Samuel (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 884.

Conveyance of land to corporation for stock of value largely in excess of actual value of land does not constitute payment for such stock. Donoho v. Carville (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 553.

Securities may be used in payment for corporate stock, and are not inhibited by Const. art. 12, § 6, or this article, "securities" being property (citing Words and Phrases, "Property"). Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Hollifield (Com. App.) 220 S. W. 532, 184 S. W. 728, 184 S. W. 184.

General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Moseley, 110 Tex. 529, 222 S. W. 961, reversing judgment of Civ. App.) 174 S. W. 1031.

Delivery of stock to purchaser.—Provisions of Constitution and laws, forbidding acceptance of anything for capital stock of corporations except money, property, or labor, are not violated, so as to be a defense to notes given on subscription to capital stock, where there has been no "issue of stock" which requires actual or constructive delivery of certificates. Smith v. McAdams (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 985; Smoot v. Perkins (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 978.

Where company had never been incorporated, and stock was not to be delivered until notes were paid, notes, reciting that they were given for stock in corporation, were not given for stock issued in corporation, within meaning of Constitution and statutes making notes so given invalid. Commercial Guaranty State Bank v. Crews (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 901.

Evidence held to sustain finding that there was sale and delivery of stock in exchange for notes within meaning of Const. art. 12, § 6, although there was no manual delivery, and certificate of stock was not made out for year. Cattlemen's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth v. Swearingen (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 596.

Action on nine-month note given in purchase of stock, in absence of showing that stock sold was of same corporation as defaulting parties' stock, was not unauthorized by Const. art. 12, § 6, prohibiting issuance of corporate stock except for money paid and labor done or property received. McCoy v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 1138.

Contract for purchase of increase of capital stock was not, where stock was not to be delivered until notes given therefor had been paid, an executed sale so as to be void under Const. art. 12, § 6, this article, and art. 4725, subd. "e," and arts. 4726, 4729, prohibiting issuance of stock except for money paid, etc.; "issue" meaning delivered. Zang v. Stockholders (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 792.

Contract for sale of trust company stock on credit, purchaser giving his note covering price of stock and amount borrowed from trust company, held ultra vires and void, there being actual delivery of stock with intention to have title vest in buyer, who delivered it back to trust company as collateral security for note. Rousseau v. Everett (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 469.

Constitutional provisions prohibiting corporation from issuing stock except for money paid, labor done, or property received, applies not only where certificate has been issued, but where a subscriber as stockholder by permitting him to exercise rights of a stockholder. Turner v. Cattlemen's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 821.

In action on a promissory note given for the purchase price of corporate stock evidence that the corporation made out a stock certificate which was not delivered to the maker of the note, that dividends on the stock were credited against interest due on the note, etc., held to make a jury question whether the stock had been "issued" in violation of the constitutional provision that no corporation shall issue stock except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received. Wilson v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 805.

Where a certificate for corporate stock, subscribed but not paid for, was delivered to a trustee for the corporation who attached it to the note of the subscriber in accordance with a contract whereby the stock was to be pledged as collateral security for the note and to be sold if the note was not paid, with no provision that the certificate was not to be delivered until fully paid for, the stock was issued in violation of the constitutional declaration that no stock should be issued, except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received. Kanaman v. Gaahagan (Sup.) 220 S. W. 141.

Note secured by mortgage.—Notes for stock amply secured by deed of trust on real estate are "property" actually received, for which by Const. art. 12, § 6, stock may be issued. Penwell v. Schramm (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 359; General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Moseley, 110 Tex. 529, 222 S. W. 961, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 174 S. W. 1031; Prudential Life Ins. Co. of Texas v. Pearson (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 967, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 188 S. W. 513.

Under Const. art. 12, § 6, there could be no recovery by a corporation on a note given for stock issued though collateral security was deposited, since the transaction was illegal. Shield v. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 211.

Note of a subscriber to corporate stock in an insurance company, secured by valid deed of trust on real estate to which the subscriber has title, accepted by the corporation in payment for the stock, is "property actually received." General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Moseley, 110 Tex. 529, 222 S. W. 961, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 174 S. W. 1031.

Note of subscriber to corporate stock in an insurance company, secured by valid deed of trust on real estate to which the subscriber has title, accepted by the corporation in payment for the stock, is "property actually received" within the meaning of Const. art. 12, § 6. Prudential Life Ins. Co. of Texas v. Pearson (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 967, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 188 S. W. 513.

Under Const. art. 12, § 6, providing that no corporation shall issue stock or bonds except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received, a corporation might recover on a subscriber's note secured by first lien on land double in value the amount of the note. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Shield (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 196.

Pledge of stock as security for note.—Where national bank stock purchaser executed note payable to bank other than that issuing stock, and stock was deposited with such bank as security for payment of note, and thereafter purchaser executed note payable to bank, stock issued to former bank, note executed to latter bank, where note received the stock, the transaction was void under statutes and act of Congress prohibiting issuance of stock in consideration of note, notwithstanding execution and delivery of prior note. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Stamford v. Stevenson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 614.

Stock in banking corporation.—Where a bank took a note for a subscription to its stock, which it issued in the name of the subscriber, instead of the subscriber's proxy, as required by law, and paid, appointing dividends to subscriber from date of making certificate recognizing subscriber's proxy as void, and sending him notices as a stockholder, the transaction was void. Citizens v. Const. art. 12, § 6, and this article. Pruett v. Cattlemen's Trust Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 563, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Cattlemen's Trust Co. of F. Worth v. Pruett, 184 S. W. 716.

Where the president of plaintiff's national bank, to assist defendant in the purchase of the bank's stock, arranged with another bank to make defendant a loan, to be evidenced by his note indorsed by the president of plaintiff bank personally, and further secured by the bank stock to be issued to defendant, and the note was prepared and signed by defendant and indorsed by the president of plaintiff bank and accepted by the other bank, which issued the amount of the note to the credit of plaintiff bank subject to its check, and sent in a slip showing the same, and the stock was issued to defendant, who indorsed it in blank and forwarded it to the other bank to be deposited as collateral security for his note, the facts constituted a payment for the stock in money to plaintiff bank as conclusively as would have an actual transfer of cash, and plaintiff bank can recover on the last of notes given it by defendant when it took up his note from the other bank. Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Stevenson (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 564.

Stock in insurance company.—In suit by subscriber to stock in insurance company to recover money paid and to cancel notes claimed to have been given for stock in violation of Constitution, art. 12, § 6, and this article, evidence held to show subscriber became

Art. 1158. [660] [584] Trustees to be elected to control religious corporation.
In general.—See Wallace v. Wells (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1111.

Art. 1159. [661] [585] Directors shall have general management, etc.

4. Management of corporate affairs.—While the directors of a corporation, subject to limitations of charter and by-laws, have as much control of its business affairs as an individual has over his own business, their power is no greater. Merchants' Life Ins. Co. v. Griswold (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 807.

In suit in trespass to try title by oil and gas lessors against the lessee, a corporation, it was not necessary for defendant lessee to show that its president or board of directors formally accepted the lease: the fact that it paid into the deposito:- bank the agreed rent at the agreed time being sufficient evidence of acceptance of the lease by it. Patton v. Texas Pac. Coal & Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 857.

Under this article, and art. 1212, relating to religious societies, where there were never two separate and distinct "Churches of Christ" established in a town, but were at all times merely two factions of the same church, the majority faction of which, in the manner authorized by such church as the proper method, elected new trustees on a specified date, such election took away all authority previously existing in other and former trustees. Wallace v. Wells (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1111.

4½. Liability of stockholder.—This article does not, in the absence of any by-laws on the subject, authorize the directors to enforce an unpaid subscription before the capital stock is all taken. Orynski v. Loustaunan (Sup.) 15 S. W. 674.

This article does not authorize issuance of stock at less than par value, nor relieve the subscribers from responsibility to creditors for the difference between the amount paid and the par value. Mathis v. Pridham, 1 Civ. App. 65, 20 S. W. 1915.

6. Corporate property, funds, etc.—Conversion.—In action for conversion of tools claimed to have been acquired from defendant corporation for shares of its stock, held there was no authority, express or implied, to vice president to make trade. West Texas Supply Co. v. Dunivan (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 165.

7. — Purchase and sale of.—Though an instrument executed by the president of a private corporation years after it had forfeited its right to do business declaring a so-called oil lease owned by the corporation null and void and releasing the land covered thereby bore the corporation's seal and recited that the corporation was acting through the president, it amounted to such an assumption by him of unusual, exceptional, and extraordinary power outside the ordinary course of affairs and beyond his apparent or express authority as to involve those claiming under the release the duty of inquiring as to the existence of the power and the facts bringing it into being, and they could not claim to be innocent purchasers. Davis v. Texas Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 846.

8. Individual profits, etc., from corporate business.—It is a general rule that an officer whose interests are adverse cannot bind the corporation except as to innocent parties, nor are acts of manifest bad faith on the part of the officer binding on the corporation, and strangers who participate in such wrong against the corporation may not profit thereby. Harwood v. Ft. Worth Nat, Bank (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 484.

Where president and stockholder of corporation discovered that another stockholder had fraudulently secured an option for sale of all the property of the corporation to a dummy, and had sold the property after taking an assignment of the option at a large profit, and president entered into fraudulent scheme and secured ratification of the sale, judgment in action by stockholders to recover secret profits was properly awarded against president as well as other stockholder, though president received no part of the secret profit. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 272.

The fact that H. was director and general manager of a company which held a lease from M. conditioned to become void if a paying quarry was not established on the land in two years did not require him, though knowing M. intended to forfeit the lease for non-performance of the lease, to inform the others interested in the company of such fact, or prevent him, on the forfeiture being declared, from individually taking a new lease free of any interest therein of such others, so long as the failure to develop the quarry was due to no fault of his, but only to the company's inability to finance it. Green v. Hall (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 182.

9. DEALINGS WITH CORPORATION OR SHAREHOLDERS.—Where the owner of nearly all the shares of a corporation agreed with the president and one of the directors that they would not create any liabilities against the corporation, the fact that they advanced money to the corporation would not make the corporation liable therefor. Newton v. Houston Hot Well Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 360.

10. Officers, Etc., of Different Corporations.—Where Ohio company organized company in Texas, for transacting its business in that state, and appointed a general manager, who leased a building for term, corporation was liable for rent the same as if it had done business in its own name. John Church Co. v. Martinez (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 486.

That some of the stockholders of one corporation owned stock in another independent corporation did not make the corporations liable for each the acts of the other. Harper v. Fitch & Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 182.

10½. Actions—By stockholders.—In stockholder's suit, if facts alleged show defendants constitute majority of directors, or that directors or majority are under control of wrongdoing defendant, so that refusal of directors to sue in name of corporation on request be inferred, stockholders' action may be maintained without demand. Millsaps v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 292.

In stockholder's suit against directors on behalf of company, petition must allege and evidence show plaintiff has made a good-faith effort to obtain action by the corporation, or he must allege and prove such a state of facts as makes it clear that an appeal to the directors or stockholders would have been useless. Barthold v. Thomas (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 506.

12. Between Shareholders and Officers.—In suit by corporate stockholders, evidence held sufficient to sustain jury's finding that defendant, director, improperly dominated and controlled by majority of directors. Milleaps v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 905.

In all suits by stockholders brought to redress wrongs done to corporation by directors, the corporation is a necessary party defendant. Barthold v. Thomas (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 506.

For wrongs committed by corporation directors in management of company, a stockholder must seek his remedy, in the first instance, before suing, through the corporation itself by application to the directors and stockholders, and, if unsuccessful, may then bring suit for the company for its benefit, not his personal benefit. Id.

13. Representation by Officers and Agents.—A corporation is charged with the acts of its principal officers in transactions after its organization. Burns v. Veritas Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 440.

14. Who May Represent.—A private corporation with limited power of operating, drilling or producing oil was not liable for medical services rendered its employé upon request of another employé having no authority to bind the corporation. Producers' Oil Co. v. Green (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 68.

The term "general manager" imports general authority to perform all reasonable things in conducting the usual and customary business of his principal. Hinton v. D'Yar-mett (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 518.

15. Actual or Apparent Authority.—It is within general scope of authority of claim agent of railroad company to refuse or allow a claim against his principal. Galves-ton, Harris & Beaumont Co. v. Booth (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 195.

16. Contracts.—General manager of oil-drilling corporation had authority to modify contract under which the corporation was obligated to drill well for owner of oil lease so as to permit owner to drill well with equipment and casing furnished by the corporation. Hinton v. D'Yar-mett (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 518.

17. Purchases, Sales, and Warranties.—A bill of sale, which does not mention a motor sales company nor any member of that firm as grantor, but specifically states that the automobile sold was the property of H., and on its face purports to be made and executed by H., who warrants the title, although bearing the names of the company and H. in the place for signatures, construed as from H., and not from the company. Rowe v. Guderian (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 960.

In trespass by city to try title to land claimed to have been conveyed to city by defendant corporation through its president owning three-fifths of the stock of the corporation, the deed from the corporation to the city by such president was admissible in evidence, even though deed was not authorized, since the deed conveyed at least three-fifths interest in the property; the president being owner of three-fifths of the corporate stock. Bun v. City of La­r­alo (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 329.

Conveyance of corporation's property by president owning three-fifths of the stock without authority from board of directors conveys a three-fifths interest in the property. Id.

General manager of corporation selling lighting plant had power to modify terms of contract so that buyer would retain from price a stated amount until guaranty of a machine was made good. Ware v. Fairbanks-Morse Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 211.

A president of a private corporation, years after it had forfeited its right to do business, was authorized to execute a release of land covered by an oil grant owned by the corporation without any consideration to the corporation and without the knowledge or participation of any other stockholder or director or any action by the corporation's governing body. Davis v. Texas Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 548.

21. — Collections and payments.—The fact that money was received by the director of a creditor company, as a dividend on the bankruptcy of the debtor company, such director never in fact paying all the money to his company, nor applying it to a corporate purpose for the benefit of the company, gave no ground for the recovery of such dividend from the creditor company to a bank holding the note of such company. Taylor Feed Pen Co. v. Taylor Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 850.

22. — Bonds and mortgages.—The fact that a chattel mortgage by secretary-treasurer of a corporation is not with apparent authority, since such officer is not ordinarily authorized to make such acts. Peyton v. Sturgis. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 205.

A corporation may appropriate its property to secure payment of its debts when solvent, authority to do so does not inherently exist in any officer. Id.

Where cotton oil company's indebtedness to bank exceeded amount permitted by banking laws, and president of such company formed a feed company with dummy directors, the execution by such feed company of note, secured by deed of trust on all its property to bank to cover other company's excess indebtedness, the bank having full knowledge of the scheme, was ultra vires. Taylor Feed Pen Co. v. Taylor Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 850.

27. — Estoppel to deny authority or acts.—Where the railroad which gave its notes had ratified prior notes made by the vice president and general manager, who had absolute control, contracted for labor, and sometimes paid for it, it was liable and could not deny his authority. Bryan College Interurban Ry. Co. v. Kropp (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 733.

Where, from inception of corporation existence, secretary-treasurer was in active and exclusive management of corporation's affairs until its assets were disposed of, corporation would estop such officer to deny authority to execute a chattel mortgage to secure a note representing a pre-existing corporate debt. Peyton v. Sturgis (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 205.

Corporation being estopped to deny authority of secretary-treasurer to execute a chattel mortgage to secure a note, representing a pre-existing corporate debt, defendant, purchaser of mortgaged property, would be estopped in suit to foreclose mortgage, since defense urged by him is that of corporation. Id.

Ordinarily a corroboration may not deny that its agent possesses the authority he appears to have, or that which is necessarily implied from his office. F. L. Shaw Co. v. Dalton Adding Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 833.

28. — Ratification and repudiation.—The assent or approval of a corporation to acts done in its name may be inferred in the same manner that the assent of a natural person may be, and where a corporation, with full knowledge of the unauthorized act of its officers or agents, acquiesces therein, it thereby ratifies them, especially where the acquiescence results in prejudice to a third person. Harwood v. Ft. Worth Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 266 S. W. 484.

Directors of corporation, by acquiescence in conveyance of property of the corporation through the president without authority from the board as a body, ratified the conveyance. Bunn v. City of Laredo (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 320.

Where a contract in the name and behalf of a corporation is made by one lacking authority, or by one of its general officers whose personal interests in the transaction are adverse to those of his corporation, the corporation, after having received, through another source full knowledge of all the terms and provisions of the agreement, may ratify, adopt, and confirm it, in which event it will be bound thereby in all respects. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank, 169 Tex. 555, 213 S. W. 584.

29. — Notice to officers and agents as affecting corporation.—A corporation charged with the acts or knowledge of its principal officers in transactions after its organization is estopped to deny such knowledge to the agents or principal officers, under the doctrine of estoppel. Burns v. Veritas Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 440.

30. — Notice of authority of agents, etc.—Where the act by which a corporation is sought to be bound is out of the usual course of its business, those dealing with its agent are bound to inquire as to agent's authority and deal with him otherwise at their peril. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Dallas Chamber of Commerce (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 206.

Corporations can be bound by their agents only when acting within the scope of their authority, and those dealing with such agents are not only chargeable with notice of, but in case of controversy have the burden of showing authority assumed to have been in fact possessed. Producers' Oil Co. v. Green (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 68.

31. — Evidence as to authority—Sufficiency.—Evidence held insufficient to show that defendant as branch house manager of a branch house of a machine company's branch house merchandising authority to sign an agreement that it would save plaintiff harmless from loss in promoting, financing, and conducting a national corn show. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Dallas Chamber of Commerce (Civ. App.) 296 S. W. 206.

That agent of threshing machine company signed his name as branch house manager was insufficient to show his authority to make agreement to save plaintiff harmless from loss in conducting national corn show, where there was nothing to show the character of the company's business or the extent of the agent's authority. Id.

In physician's action against corporation for professional services rendered employe of the corporation, evidence held insufficient to sustain finding that employer who had made arrangements for the rendition of such services had authority to bind the corporation. Producers' Oil Co. v. Green (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 68.
33. Тorts—Scope of authority.—Where local manager of company started on trip to post office in company’s automobile with another employee to mail report to company, a duty of his employment, and, after making a stop on the other employee’s personal business, started to go on, and negligently injured a pedestrian, the company was liable, though, after mailing the report, he intended to journey on to his home, and though the use of the automobile was after business hours. Pierce-Purdie Oil Ass’n v. Brading (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 767.

If a servant’s deviation from his instructions amounts to an entire abandonment of the employer’s business, the employer is not liable for injuries by the servant during such deviation, but if the deviation is a mere incident to a duty of the service, and after termination of it authorized service is resumed, the master is liable. Id.

Records as evidence.—That person’s name appears upon stock book as owner of stock is evidence of ownership. Turner v. Cattleman’s Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 831.

Art. 1162. [653] [577] May borrow money.

Notes—Officers authorized to execute.—While a corporation may mortgage its property to secure payment of its debts when solvent, authority to do so does not Inherently exist in any officer. Peyton v. Sturgis (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 265.

Where a manager of branch office of corporation, who had no authority to sign notes or borrow money for the branch business, by means of notes signed in the business name of the branch obtained money sufficient to cover in part shortages and paid said money to the corporation, the corporation which in good faith received the money without notice of the manager’s wrongful act is not liable to the payee. Guaranty Bank & Trust Co. v. Beaumont Cadillac Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 638.

Facts held Insufficient to show apparent authority of branch office manager to borrow money on notes signed in business name of branch. Id.

Art. 1164. [665] [589] Corporation restricted to objects of its creation; may contribute to certain enterprises not political; pending suits.

In general.—This article, being the law of the land, was in contemplation of law known to one who entered into a forbidden contract with a corporation. Zurn v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 544.

This article is but declarative of the general rule. Ingram v. Texas Christian University (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 608.

Where railroad company owned fee in strip on which its road was constructed, it could not be restrained from extracting oil therefrom, notwithstanding this article. Crowell & Conner v. Howard (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 911.

This article is merely declaratory of common law, by which corporations are strictly confined in their powers to the limits and purposes for which created. Hollis Cotton Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Mears & Lake (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 367.

Corporate purposes.—Where purpose of corporation was dealing in building material and to purchase and sell such material as is necessary in transaction of its business, a contract made by it to construct improvements on a lot, not being within purposes of corporation, was void for all purposes. Zurn v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 544.

The execution for the debt of another is beyond the corporate powers, in view of this article. Newton v. Houston Hot Well Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 960.

See, also, art. 1140, and notes.

Division of funds.—An agreement by a Texas corporation to exchange property owned by it for lands in Texas, which were not needed in any business it was authorized to transact, and were not taken in due course of business to secure the payment of a debt, would have been not merely ultra vires, but wholly void, though the exchange was for the purpose of winding up its affairs, paying debts, and distributing its assets. Jackson v. Western Union Tel. Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 598.

Where a building and loan association made a loan to one not a member by taking his note therefor and 2 per cent. per month interest thereon, the transaction was a discounting, and in violation of a provision of its charter that it should not lend money at a greater rate of interest than 12 per cent., or to any person other than its own members; and under this article such a note is void, and no action can be maintained on it. Anderson v. Cleburne Building & Loan Ass’n (App.) 16 S. W. 298.

Solvent mercantile corporation was not bound by its agreement to pool its earnings with earnings of other insolvent corporations for purpose of paying the debts of the several concerns, the only purpose being to lend financial aid to other concerns, in violation of this article, and the ultra vires act thereby contemplated being of no benefit to the corporation, and working no loss to the other concerns. Kaplan Dry Goods Co. v. Smith (App.) 214 S. W. 485.

The execution of a note by a land and live stock company to pay a railroad contractor a certain sum upon the completion of a railroad line adjacent to the company’s land was within the power of the corporation. Richardson v. Bermuda Land & Live Stock Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 347.

Art. 1164 CORPORATIONS—PRIVATE

Art. 1165. [665] [580] Restrictions upon creation of debts.

Debts permitted.—This article renders ultra vires note of private corporation organized for failing and stock raising, executed to a railroad in consideration of the future construction of a railroad into the country where such private corporation had large land holdings; such an indebtedness not being one for "money paid or labor done" for the corporation. Richardson v. Bermuda Land & Live Stock Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 746.

A note by a land and live stock company to pay a certain sum on the completion of a railroad line adjacent to its land, being so conditioned as to prevent the use of its means or assets, until the facilities contracted for were delivered, was not within the prohibition of this article. Richardson v. Bermuda Land & Live Stock Co. (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 337.

Accommodation paper.—The execution of paper by a corporation for the debt of another is beyond the corporate powers. Newton v. Houston Hot Well Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 906.

Art. 1166. [666] [590] Stock of corporation is personal estate.

Nature of property.—The tangible property belongs to the corporation, the stockholders having intangible interests in the corporate business. Turner v. Caterpillar's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 831.

The stock of a corporation prior to issuance is the common property of the incorporators. Id.

Certificate of stock.—Title to certificate of stock may not carry with it title to the stock itself, and the stock remaining in possession of the corporation may be subjected to the satisfaction of process by third parties seeking to appropriate it to the payments of the debts due by the shareholder. Turner v. Caterpillar's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 831.

Transfers of stock.—Where bank had direct information from a third person that he claims an interest in shares of corporate stock taken by the bank as collateral, the bank is bound by such notice, and takes the risk of third person's successful assertion of his claim. Western Nat. Bank of Hereford v. Walker (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 544.

Where agents acting within the apparent scope of their authority in selling corporate stock made a sale by means of false and fraudulent representations, the principal was liable therefor, whether authorizing such acts or not. Bankers Trust Co. v. Calhoun (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 826; Same v. James (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 590.

The stock, being in the possession of the corporation, is transferable only on its books upon presentation of proper evidence of a transfer of ownership. Turner v. Caterpillar's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 831.

Fraud.—Where one exchanging corporate stock for lands misrepresented its value at $75 per dollar, he cannot defend the other party's action for damages from the fraud on the ground that inquiry and investigation been made the falsity of the representation would have been discovered. McDonald v. Lastinger (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 829.

Whether the party who exchanged corporate stock for lands, misrepresenting the value of the stock, knew that he was making a false representation, is immaterial to his liability to the other party if such other party in fact believed the representations to be true, relied on them, and closed the transaction on the faith thereof. Id.

Whether one transferring corporate stock for lands positively knew after discussion that the stock was not only worth 75 cents on the dollar, but had such market value, and the other party had no knowledge on the subject, and believed and relied on the statement, such statement as to value by the party exchanging the stock was a representation of fact rather than of opinion, and therefore actionable. Id.

False statements made by the seller to the purchaser of a share of an oil company conveying the capacity of a well, though made on information, are actionable. Philpott v. Edge (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 293.

A false statement to the purchaser of a share of an oil company by the seller concerning the capacity of an oil well, as to which the seller stated he had received a confirmatory telegram from one in whom the purchaser had confidence, is a misstatement of a material fact, giving a cause of action. Id.

Actions on stock contracts.—Generally the remedy for a breach of a contract to sell stock in a corporation is an action for damages but where justice requires it, an action can be maintained for specific performance of a contract to sell stock in a corporation. Amelio v. Cavitt (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 766.

In an action against a bank for conversion of corporate stock pledged, evidence held sufficient to sustain a finding that the bank had notice that plaintiff was the true owner of the stock, which was pledged as collateral by another. First Nat. Bank v. Kerr (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1106.
Art. 1169. [667] [591] Directors may require payment of stock.

In order to bring into existence by subscription to stock the relationship of stockholder there must be some sort of contract in which the subscriber obtains the right to demand and exercise the privileges of a shareholder. Id.

In ascertaining whether subscriber became stockholder, the intention of the parties at the time subscription was taken and accepted must be determined from the facts as they may be affected by the subsequent conduct of the parties. Id.

In suit to cancel notes given on subscription to corporate stock, in absence of pleading raising issue as to construction of "securities" as used in subscription contract providing for payment in cash or securities, general signification of word should be followed. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Hollifield (Com. App.) 220 S. W. 322, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 184 S. W. 776.

4. Liability of subscriber.—In corporation's action on note given for stock issued, where defendant set up abandonment of business by sale of the assets, he could testify that one holding general proxy was instructed to vote against the sale. Shield v. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 211.

In suit to recover money paid for oil stock on the ground of fraud, the claim that in taking out the charter of defendant company the total capital stock had been paid for by the defendants (thus deprived of their payment) so that it was an unlawful subscription contract, if any, and that therefore plaintiff would not be bound, was no defense, where individual defendants bore such relation to the corporation that they could be considered the corporation itself, so that the tender of the stock for which they subscribed would be a valid tender in behalf of the corporation. Burchill v. Hermansmeyer (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 809.

7. Subscriptions obtained by fraud.—A delinquent subscriber to corporate stock after failure of corporation cannot ordinarily complain that his subscription was obtained through fraud of the promoters, officers, or agents of the corporation. Mitchell v. Hancock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694.

A nominal director of a corporation may rely on statements of the president, who was salesman and financial agent, as to solvency of the corporation, so as to set up fraud in action for purchase of stock. Robinson v. Aldredge (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 411.

Where unauthorized agent, by fraud and false representations, secured subscription to stock and directors, knowing he had assumed to act, and, without disclosing true facts to subscriber, sent notice requiring payment for stock, and accepted a note therefor, subscriber could have his contract and note canceled for fraud and misrepresentation of agent. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Pierce (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1104.

Representations having reference to future merely, however much relied on, do not constitute cause of action or ground of defense against action by principal of agent who made representations on note given for corporation stock purchased in reliance on such representations. McCoy v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1128.

To hold that oral agreement whereby defendants agreed to return to plaintiff money paid for oil stock in an oil company where it was not developed as a fraud, plaintiff must prove that defendants at the time they made the agreement did not intend to fulfill it, but to deceive plaintiff and induce him to advance the moneys which he seeks to recover. Burchill v. Hermansmeyer (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 767.

Where a subscriber seeks to recover money paid for stock on the ground of fraudulent representation as to existence of oil under company's land, that defendants represented that other oil companies were seeking to purchase their property was immaterial if made long after plaintiff had advanced the sums of money he seeks to recover. Id.

To recover stock in oil company paid for stock on fraudulent representation as to existence of oil under the land, held, that the representations of the defendants to the effect that the oil did exist were false, and the corporation's stock was worth more than the consideration paid for it, was enough to authorize action for rescission. Id.

A corporation is chargeable with fraudulent representations of its agents made for the purpose of procuring subscriptions, the rule applying to subscription contracts entered into between the subscriber and promoter prior to incorporation, when such contracts have been adopted by the corporation. Cater v. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 140.

Where one company acted as promoter of another, and procured by misrepresentations a subscription to the latter's stock, as between the promoting company and the subscriber the fraud of the company was ground for rescission, and the organized company for whose benefit the subscription contract to its stock was made through its acceptance or adoption acquired no higher right than that of the promoting company. Id.

A corporation by subscription to its capital stock procured by one technically not its agent through fraudulent misrepresentations made without its authority, not only adopts the act of such a one in receiving the subscription, but also impliedly adopts and becomes responsible for any fraudulent representation made to induce the subscription, whether or not it is without knowledge or notice of the fraud, and cannot defend the stockholder's suit for rescission. Id.

Where an agent selling corporate stock made misrepresentations to prospective purchaser as to the returns from the stock, such representations, though partaking of the nature of opinion and of promissory character, are actionable, and hence admissible in an action to recover not only payments on the ground that subscription was induced by false representations but also exemplary damages. Texas Co-operative Inv. Co. v. Clark (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 220.

Representations by agent selling corporate stock that the company was one of the best in Texas, that the dividends which it would declare would pay off the note by the time it matured, that the company would put expert salesmen in the territory adjacent to defendant's bank to sell insurance and allow him 50 per cent. of the first year premium and the company could keep the cash, held to be expressions of opinion or promises to do something in the future which would not be a good defense to the note; the company being solvent. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Shield (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 196.

In suit to recover money paid for oil stock on the ground of fraud, mere acquiescence on the part of a defendant in plaintiff's belief in spirituality would not constitute a badge of fraud, but to support the charge of fraud there must be evidence that such defendant induced such belief, or played thereon by some false and deceitful practice, and thus induced plaintiff's action when he would otherwise not have so acted. Burchill v. Hermmseyer (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 869.

A stockholder who has enjoyed the fruits of that relation and received dividends held not estopped, after failure of the corporation to rescind his subscription contract because obtained by false representations. 1d.

Where a stockholder, induced to subscribe by fraudulent misrepresentations of the promoter, had no knowledge of the fraud when he transferred his stock, he did not thereby waive his right to rescind his subscription. Cator v. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 140.

A subscriber who gave a note for corporate stock waived any defense as to false representations and promises, where, after the corporation failed to comply with its promises, he continued to pay interest on the note and acted as director. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Shield (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 196.

10. — Estoppel.—Plaintiff held not estopped to secure cancellation of subscription contract and notes and deed of trust given for stock, on the ground that they had been secured by fraudulent representations, where he brought suit before the corporation was declared insolvent, and was not guilty of laches, and no creditor of the corporation became such after he subscribed for the stock. Mitchell v. Hancock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694.

A stockholder who has enjoyed the fruits of that relation and received dividends held not estopped, after failure of the corporation to rescind his subscription contract because obtained by false representations. 1d.

Where a stockholder, induced to subscribe by fraudulent misrepresentations of the promoter, had no knowledge of the fraud when he transferred his stock, he did not thereby waive his right to rescind his subscription. Cator v. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 140.

A subscriber who gave a note for corporate stock waived any defense as to false representations and promises, where, after the corporation failed to comply with its promises, he continued to pay interest on the note and acted as director. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Shield (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 196.

11. — Effect of fraud and remedies of subscriber.—Where a contract to subscribe to corporate stock stipulated that an amount was paid the promoters in consideration of their agreement to organize and incorporate the company free from expense to stockholders, and none of the amount was paid or received by the company, on rescinding his subscription for misrepresentations a stockholder was not entitled to recover the amount from the organized company. Cator v. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 146.

In suit to rescind a stock subscription, where the company to which plaintiff had assigned his certificate was made a party defendant, judgment ordering surrender of the certificate for cancellation held effectually to protect the main defendant, the company whose stock was sought to be canceled, being tantamount to a tender and return by plaintiff of the certificate. 1d.

13. Withdrawal or cancellation.—Evidence that stock subscribers selected certain of their number to effect incorporation, etc., held to establish that original subscriptions were not abandoned and that committee was merely acting in representative capacity. Stringfellow v. Panhandle Packing Co. (Com. App.) 218 S. W. 250.

14. Release or discharge.—Where committee appointed by stock subscribers to complete company's incorporation falsely made affidavit that each had paid half of his subscription and secured charter, the original subscribers could elect to complete payment for stock or recover money already paid. Stringfellow v. Panhandle Packing Co. (Com. App.) 218 S. W. 250.

Where plaintiff, after having subscribed for corporate stock on installments, gave a further contract to defendant's agent, paying the promoter's agent, put money to the bank to issue the certificate, and defendant refused to issue the stock, such failure of defendant warranted plaintiff in refusing to pay installments on her earlier subscriptions, and excused her from provisions of the contract that payments made should be forfeited in case of default. Texas Co-operative Inv. Co. v. Clark (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 220.

Subscriber for stock, who does not consent to a change in the subscription, is released if the corporation, which is afterwards formed for a greater or less amount of capital stock than agreed upon, seeks to enforce the subscription. Wrathe v. Parks (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 313.

1½. Certificate.—Upon issuance of a certificate to subscriber, evidencing the definite interest in the common fund existing in the individual, the possession of the stock evidenced by the certificate does not pass from, but is retained by the corporation, the certificate being simply the evidence in the hands of subscriber on which he may be able to base an assertion of interest in the common fund. Turner v. Cattlemen's Trust Co. of Ft. Worth (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 831.

Issuance of certificate is not essential in order to create relation of shareholders, which may arise by reason of the contract duly made, and to vest in the subscriber the privileges attendant upon relationship of stockholder, which he may exercise and enjoy with the consent of the company. 1d.

The certificate of stock is not the stock, but is only evidence in the hands of the shareholders that the corporation recognizes him as owning an interest therein, and is not the stock nor to the transfer of the stock nor the right by shareholder. 1d.

19. Estoppel to allegé invalidity.—A stock subscriber waived defense that subscription agreement and statute required each subscriber to pay half of his subscription before incorporation, where he actively assisted in incorporating company with knowledge of facts. Stringfellow v. Panhandle Packing Co. (Com. App.) 219 S. W. 236.

Corporation, by accepting stock subscription, by recording subscriber as stockholder, by permitting him to attend and vote at stockholder's meetings, and by paying over to him dividends, manifests an intention to recognize him as a stockholder. Id.

Though the organization of a corporation under the laws of Arizona, instead of under the laws of Texas, as provided in a stockholder's contract, was a departure from the terms of the contract sufficient to warrant its cancellation at the suit of the stockholder, the transfer of his stock after he had acquired knowledge of such departure was a waiver by him of his right of cancellation on such ground. Cator v. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 149.

Corporation which had issued stock to trustee to be delivered to employee on said date with right of cancellation on termination of employment prior to such date held to have had knowledge of employee's cessation of employment for a sufficient period of time prior to cancellation to have waived the right of cancellation, since the records of the corporation showed that employee was no longer in its employment, and since the corporation was charged with knowledge of such records. Donoghue v. Lee (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 957.

Art. 1170. [668] [592] Stock forfeited, when and how.

Art. 1173. [676] [600] Corporation may convey lands, how.
See Shropshire v. Behrens, 77 Tex. 275, 13 S. W. 1043.

Execution of deed.—A conveyance, signed and acknowledged by the president of a Texas corporation as such, which complied with this article, and art. 1108, though voluntary and to the stockholders of the corporation, one of whom was the president, will pass title in the absence of objection by a then existing creditor; the corporation not appearing as defendant. City of Ft. Worth, Tex., v. National Park Bank of New York (C. C. A.) 261 Fed. 817.

Effect of noncompliance with requirements.—This article does not make such deed invalid and inadmissible in evidence, though not acknowledged or proved as therein required. Kimmarle v. Houston & P. C. Ry. Co., 76 Tex. 696, 12 S. W. 598.

Where corporation's attempted assignment of property to private trustee for sale for creditors was void as conveyance under statute, being common-law mortgage, it was not void as such because of company's failure to authenticate it by corporate seal. Millsaps v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 202.

CHAPTER THREE A

SALE OF CORPORATE STOCK

Art. 1174a. Corporations affected by act; etc. Art. 1174d. Granting or refusing permit; etc.

Article 1174a. Corporations affected by act; etc.

Construction of act in general.—Agreement by corporation to pay plaintiff 10 per cent. of the subscriptions obtained to the capital stock held not invalid, as in violation of this act; there being no showing that the amounts were to be paid out of sums received from the subscribers, this conclusion being strengthened by the fact that plaintiff, when receiving payments in cash, did not deduct the amounts claimed. Thaninish v. Brewton Transfer & Auto Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 300.

Art. 1174d. Granting or refusing permit; etc.

Commission contract.—Agreement by corporation to pay plaintiff 10 per cent. of the subscriptions obtained to the capital stock held not invalid, as in violation of this act; there being no showing that the amounts were to be paid out of sums received from the subscribers, this conclusion being strengthened by the fact that plaintiff, when receiving payments in cash, did not deduct the amounts claimed. Thaninish v. Brewton Transfer & Auto Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 300.
CHAPTER FOUR

LAND—ACQUISITION, ETC., OF, RESTRICTED

Article 1175. Purchase of land, unless necessary to business or to secure debts, prohibited.

In general.—An agreement by a Texas corporation to exchange property owned by it for lands in Texas, which were not needed in any business it was authorized to transact, and were not taken in due course of business to secure the payment of a debt, would have been not merely ultra vires, but wholly void, though the exchange was for the purpose of winding up its affairs, paying debts, and distributing its assets. Jackson v. Western Union Tel. Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 598.

A gift to a college for erection of a chapel is not void, on the ground that the college, being incorporated for educational purposes, cannot own and control a building used for purpose of conducting religious services. Lightfoot v. Poindexter (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1152.

The purchase of real estate by a corporation for the purpose of compromising a demand against it for breach of contract was ultra vires, and its agreement to pay a debt secured by a lien on the land was not binding. National Equitable Soc. v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 184.

The purchase of land by a corporation and the assumption of an indebtedness secured by a lien thereon may have been regarded by it, and may in fact have been, a profitable investment in determining the corporation's power and authority to so obligate itself. Id.

Article 1176. [749c] Excess of land over necessary amount to be alienated, when.

See Jackson v. Western Union Tel. Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 598.

Article 1177. [749a] Certain corporations forbidden to acquire lands.

See Jackson v. Western Union Tel. Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 598.

In general.—This article, and art. 501e, permitting irrigation companies to acquire land, are not irreconcilable, and the former does not implyly repeal the latter. Westbrook v. Missouri-Texas Land & Irrigation Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1154.

CHAPTER EIGHT

LIABILITY OF STOCKHOLDERS AND DIRECTORS

Article 1198. [671] [595] When and how stockholders may be made liable on execution.

Liability as stockholders—In general.—In a suit by a judgment creditor of a corporation against a stockholder to establish liability on the part of the stockholder, the judgment against the corporation is not only evidence, but, in the absence of fraud or lack of jurisdiction, conclusive evidence, of fact that the corporation was indebted to the plaintiff. Butcher v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 289.

Where incorporators and subscribers made affidavit that the stock was fully subscribed and paid, caused the corporation's books to so show, had stock issued to themselves as fully paid and nonassessable, and represented, in sale of the stock, that it was fully paid, purchaser paying full face value therefor, but, although they had paid for the stock the amount of merchandise recited in their affidavits, the cash amounts recited as paid were in fact not paid by them, the question of their good faith in their sale of the stock was immaterial on the question of their liability for amounts unpaid on their stock. Park v. Rich (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 947.

The right of set-off, conferred on bankrupt's debtor by federal Bankrupt Act July 1, 1898, § 88 (U. S. Comp. St. § 9652), does not apply to the creditor of a bankrupt corporation, who is also a stockholder and indebted to the corporation on an unpaid stock subscription. Cochran v. Monteth (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1065.
Unpaid subscriptions.—Subscribers for stock with option of reselling were not liable on subscription contract for debts of corporations, where they rescinded subscription before the enfranchisement of the corporation and its organization, and before any liability to any creditor or stockholder was incurred. Donoho v. Carwile (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 553.

Effect of transfer of stock.—Where promoter of land development corporation turned land over to corporation in return for stock in value largely in excess of actual value of land, and thereafter made compromise agreement with other stockholders whereby he surrendered his stock and resigned as president in consideration of corporation conveying land to him, such agreement terminated his liability as stockholder. Donoho v. Carwile (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 553.

Art. 1200. [670] [594] Directors liable for debts of corporation, when and to what extent.

Negligence.—The directors of a corporation are liable to its creditors for losses resulting from their negligent acts, but the rule as to such liability is largely relative. McCallum v. Dollar (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 259.

CHAPTER NINE

INSOLVENT CORPORATIONS

Art. 1202. Attorney general, etc., to bring quo warranto, etc., to forfeit charter or cancel permit; receiver, payment of indebtedness as affecting suit, etc.

Liability of directors.—Corporate directors are personally liable for damages sustained by reason of insolvency of corporation, when a person is induced to extend credit by false representations, either knowingly made, or which in exercise of ordinary care the directors should have known were false, and in an action against them recovery cannot be defeated because credit was not wholly extended in reliance upon representations. Durham v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 138.

In action against corporate directors by plaintiff which extended credit to corporation when insolvent, relying on false statements issued to mercantile agencies, defendants cannot escape liability because identical statements rendered to commercial agencies were not transmitted; it appearing that material contents were made known to plaintiff. Id.

Plaintiff, who claimed a corporation refused to deliver automobiles stored in its garage, cannot, upon insolvency and dissolution of the corporation, recover against directors personally, where they owed nothing on stock subscriptions, and where, as trustees after dissolution, they had no property of the corporation in their hands, unless they negligently continued to hold automobiles after dissolution, and then only for such depreciation as occurred after dissolution. White v. Texas Motor Car & Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 441.

Claims against insolvent corporation.—Where a corporate judgment debtor was insolvent, and had ceased to do business when execution was levied on its property, the judicial sale conveyed no title as against the rights of other creditors of the corporation. Houston v. Shear (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 976.

Where a corporation has become insolvent and ceased to do business, the title to its property is vested in its officers in trust for the benefit of creditors; but when its debts are paid the trust is discharged, and presents no impediment to title acquired under judicial sale. Id.

When a corporation becomes insolvent and ceases to be going concern or takes steps which substantially incapacitate it from continuing business, all its assets and property become a trust fund for benefit of creditors, subject only to rights of other creditors holding prior valid liens. Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 690.

Art. 1203. Stockholders or creditors may sue to dissolve when; by leave of court, with notice, etc.

Receiver.—In suit by a stockholder in a company against it and directors for appointment of receiver and to restrain the directors from making sale of the assets of the company under an alleged fraudulent deed of trust, appointment of a receiver on ex parte hearing held improper, in view of Rev. St. art. 1202, and the insufficiency of the verification of the petition. Alto Cotton Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Berryman (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 513.

22 Supp. V. S. Civ. St. Tex.—18 273
CHAPTER TEN

DISSOLUTION OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS

Art. 1205. [680] [604] Corporation is dissolved, how.

See Sayles v. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Abilene (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 823.

Acts of incorporators.—Under this article, and arts. 1206, 1207, though the dissolution and transfer of corporate property to the directors was effected through the agency of the stockholders, yet it was a transfer by the corporation of all of its property, in the nature of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, and amounted to an act of bankruptcy within Bankruptcy Act, § 3, subd. a (4), as amended by Act Feb. 5, 1906, c. 487, § 2 (U. S. Comp. St. § 9331). Moody-Hornman-Boelhauve v. Clinton Wire Cloth Co., 158 C. C. A. 609, 246 Fed. 653.

The filing by a Texas corporation, which had paid or was able to pay all its creditors, of a petition for dissolution, does not authorize the creditors to have the corporation adjudged an involuntary bankrupt. W. H. Baker, Inc., v. Monarch Wholesale Mercantile Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 794.

Abatement of action.—After a corporation has been dissolved, no judgment can be entered against it, although suit may have been pending at the time of dissolution. White v. Texas Motorcar & Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 441.

Forfeiture—Grounds.—Act of mercantile corporation in entering pool to lend financial aid to other concerns, in violation of art. 1164, ante, may form the basis of a suit to forfeit its permit or license. Kaplan Dry Goods Co. v. Sanger Bros. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 485.

An adjudication of insolvency dissolved a corporation, so that it could not thereafter be sued, and the directors became trustees to wind up its affairs, under this and the following articles, and suit could not be maintained to establish a corporate liability against any of such trustees singly; the directors acting collectively as trustees. Leyhe v. Leyhe (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 377.

An adjudication of insolvency dissolved a corporation. Id.

Proceedings to enforce.—Failure of corporation to pay franchise tax does not ipso facto work dissolution. Millsaps v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 292.

Under art. 7399, corporation’s failure to pay franchise tax does not bring about a forfeiture of its charter, but merely established a ground for forfeiture which could only be taken advantage of by the state and used as a basis for a judicial forfeiture. Bunn v. City of Laredo (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 250.

Art. 1206. [682] [606] Unless receiver appointed, president, etc., to be trustees, and close business.—Upon the dissolution of any corporation, unless a receiver is appointed by some court of competent jurisdiction, the president and directors or managers of the affairs of the corporation at the time of its dissolution, by whatever name they may be known in law shall be trustees of the creditors and stockholders of such corporation, with full power to settle the affairs, collect the outstanding debts, and divide the moneys and other property among the stockholders after paying the debts due and owing by such corporation at the time of its dissolution, as far as such money and property will enable them after paying all just and reasonable expenses; and to this end, and for this purpose they may in the name of such corporation, sell, convey and transfer all real and personal property belonging to such company, collect all debts, compromise controversies, maintain or defend judicial proceedings, and to exercise the full power and authority of said company over such assets and properties; and the existence of every corporation may be continued for three years after its dissolution from whatever cause for the purpose of enabling those charged with the duty to settle up its affairs; and, in case a receiver is appointed by a court for this purpose, the existence of such corporation may be continued by the courts so long as in its discretion it is necessary to suitably settle up the affairs of such corporation; provided that the dissolution of a corporation shall not operate to abate, nor be construed as abating any pending suit in which such corporation is a defendant, but such suit shall continue against such corporation and judgment shall be rendered as though the same was not dissolved, and in case no receiver has been appointed for said corporation, suit may be instituted on any claim against said corporation, as though the same had not been dissolved, and service of process may be obtained on the president, directors, general manager, trustee, assignee, or other person in charge of the affairs of the corporation at the time it was dissolved by whatever name they may be known in law, and judgment may be rendered as though the corporation had not been dissolved and the assets of said corporation shall be liable for the payment of such judgment just as if said corporation had not been dissolved. [Acts 1907, p. 311, § 4; P. D. 5970; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 56, § 1, amending art. 1206, Rev. Civ. St.]

Took effect 90 days after July 22, 1919, date of adjournment.

See East Line & Red River R. Co. v. State, 75 Tex. 454, 12 S. W. 690; Sayles v. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Abilene (Civ. App.) 109 S. W. 525.

Application.—On the forfeiture of the charter of a railroad company because of its failure to construct, equip, and operate ten miles of road within two years from its incorporation, its property rights survive for the benefit of those who may have right to, or just claim on, its assets. Sulphur Springs & Mt. P. Ry. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. Ry. Co. in Tex. 500, 292 S. W. 197.

Appointment of receiver.—As the public are interested in the proper management of the property of a dissolved railroad company, the court may, in adjudging the forfeiture of the franchise of such a company at the suit of the state, appoint a receiver or make any other order that may be necessary to the enforcement of its judgment, although the state may not be a creditor of the company. Texas Trunk R. Co. v. State, 83 Tex. 1, 18 S. W. 199.

Effect of dissolution.—Though the dissolution and transfer of corporate property to the directors was effected through the agency of the stockholders, yet it was a transfer by the corporation of all of its property, in the nature of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, and amounted to an act of bankruptcy within Bankruptcy Act, § 3, subd. a (4), as amended by Act Feb. 5, 1903, c. 487, § 2 (U. S. Comp. St. § 9587). Moody-Hornmann-Bouehawwe v. Clinton Wire Cloth Co., 158 C. C. A. 608, 246 Fed. 653.

The filing by a Texas corporation, which had paid or was able to pay all its creditors, of a petition for dissolution, does not authorize the creditors to have the corporation adjudged an involuntary bankrupt. W. H. Baker, Inc., v. Monarch Wholesale Mercantile Co. (C. C. A.) 269 Fed. 794.

Where a solvent corporation is dissolved, leaving debts due to creditors, and assets are distributed among stockholders, remedy is, in the absence of actual fraud, against stockholders under this article. C. R. Miller & Bro. v. Mummert (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 570.

Dissolution of a corporation did not abate a suit pending against the corporation, or deprive the court of power to render judgment; the dissolution under such statutes being a qualified one. Butcher v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 980.

An adjudication of involvency dissolved a corporation, so that it could not thereafter by sued, and the directors became trustees to wind up its affairs, and suit could not be maintained to establish a corporate liability against any of such trustees singly; the directors acting collectively as trustees. Leyhe v. Leyhe (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 577.

Trustees to close business.—Ordinarily forfeiture of corporation's charter does not place the property of the corporation in the hands of one officer to act as trustee for creditors and stockholders with authority to sell lands, without authority of board of directors. Bunn v. City of Laredo (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 320.

Ordinary dissolution of corporation places all the property in the hands of the president and directors as trustees for the benefit of directors and stockholders; it being necessary for directors to join president in conveyance of the corporation's real estate.

If stockholders and directors of dissolved corporation were in constructive possession of property as trustees, and were liable as the corporation would have been but for dissolution, judgment for damages for detention of such property in favor of the owner could not be rendered against them, where they owed nothing on stock subscriptions, and the corporation was wholly insolvent prior to dissolution and no property or assets thereof came into their hands after dissolution; such trustees being responsible only to creditors and stockholders, and their liability being limited to the extent of its property coming into their hands. White v. Texas Motor Car & Supply Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 138. 275
C O R P O R A T I O N S — P R I V A T E

(Title 25)

Directors of a dissolved corporation are individually liable to the owner of automobiles for their unlawful detention by the corporation where they were nonresidents, knew nothing concerning the automobiles, and never had them in their possession as individuals. Id.

Art. 1217.

Art. 1221.

Article 1212.  [713] [637]
Powers and privileges of.

Officers.—Under Rev. St. art. 1159, and this article, where there were never two separate and distinct "Churches of Christ" established in a town, but were at all times merely two factions of the same church, the majority faction of which, in the manner authorized by such church as the proper method, elected new trustees on a specified date, such election took away all authority previously existing in other and former trustees. Wallace v. Wells (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1111.

It cannot be assumed that the charter of a church, in granting to the board of trustees power to make by-laws, gave the trustees authority to enact by-laws in contravention of the statutes relating to corporations, as power to exclude a majority of the church members displacing the board of trustees. Id.

Liability for torts.—In suit against hospital association for refusal of physician to give plaintiff, injured railway employé, treatment, held, there could be no recovery, as funds contributed by plaintiff and others were held in trust for purpose of giving medical relief and could not be applied to payment of damages. Davis v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 603.

In a personal injury action against a sanitarium, facts in evidence held to show as a matter of law that the defendant was purely a public charity such as is exempt from liability for the negligent acts of its employé which resulted in plaintiff's injury, so that instructed verdict for defendant was proper. Barnes v. Providence Sanitarium (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 588.

Acts of employees.—An institution of purely public charity is not liable in damages for the negligent acts of its employés, although it is liable for injuries resulting from failure to exercise ordinary care in selecting and retaining employés. Barnes v. Providence Sanitarium (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 588.

Art. 1217.
May acquire and hold land and personality necessary for sites, etc.

Art. 1221.
Grand body may provide in charter what, etc.
CHAPTER TWELVE
EDUCATIONAL CORPORATIONS

Article 1226. [708] [632] Directors, etc., may make by-laws, etc.

Powers of officers and directors.—Lease for building to be used by auxiliary school of medicine, held valid, where authorized by executive committee of university and signed by business manager and secretary where never repudiated by board of trustees. Ingram v. Texas Christian University (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 608.

Where a business college reserved the right to require its students to board in homes approved by the college, the word “board” means lodging, and the college might require a student to change her lodgings. Castleberry v. Tyler Commercial College (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1112.

Regulations.—Where a written contract between a pupil and a business college provided that the school reserved the right to require students to board in homes approved by college, a pupil who refused to change her place of residence when requested by the college might be refused further instruction until she changed her residence as required, and such pupil cannot demand that she be given 3½ months’ instruction under the provision that if a student disregards regulations, the scholarship would be limited to that period. Castleberry v. Tyler Commercial College (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1112.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
TELEGRAPH CORPORATIONS

Art. 1231. May set poles, etc., across public roads, etc.

Article 1231. [698] [622] May set poles, etc., across public roads.

Construction and application in general.—A corporation organized for the express purpose of operating a long distance telephone line has the power and may be treated as “created for the purpose of constructing and maintaining such line,” within this article. Roaring Springs Town-Site Co. v. Paducah Telephone Co., 100 Tex. 452, 212 S. W. 147.

Rights in and use of streets, roads, and other public places.—Streets in a town site which have been dedicated to public use by the town-site company, which has reserved a right to grant the use of such streets to telephone companies, are subject to the operation of this article, since the dedication of streets and alleys to the use of the public in a town site is not rendered invalid by want of acceptance by the municipality, there not being sufficient number of inhabitants to organize a municipal government. Roaring Springs Town-site Co. v. Paducah Telephone Co., 169 Tex. 452, 212 S. W. 147.

Consent of municipality.—A long distance telephone company may use the streets of a city for its poles without the consent of the city, subject only to regulations as to where the same shall be placed, but a local telephone exchange has no right to use the streets without permission of the municipal authorities. Texas Telephone Co. v. City of Mart (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 497.

Payment for use of streets or roads.—A license to use streets granted to a telephone company by the authorities of a municipality must be compiled with so long as the company accepts the benefits. Texas Telephone Co. v. City of Mart (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 497.

Art. 1232. [699] [623] May enter upon lands, etc.

Construction in general.—Vernon’s Sayles’ Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 1283a—1283f, as to the incorporation of gas, electric current and power companies, in providing, by art. 1283d for condemnation by such company in the same manner and method as is provided by law in the case of railroads, pipe lines, and telegraph and telephone lines, does not extend to gas, electric current and power companies the benefits of art. 6531, allowing a railroad, in a suit against it by the owner of land, to litigate the question of condemnation, in view of this article and art. 1906; art. 6531 being a special provision, and therefore not included by the adoption by art. 1283d of general provisions as to condemnation by railroads, etc. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co v. Malone (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 217, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 809.
CHAPTER FOURTEEN

TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANIES

Art. 1237. Corporations owning lines, etc., shall arrange for transfers, etc.

Art. 1238. Telephone companies, etc., shall connect lines at common points, etc.

Article 1237. Corporations owning lines, etc., shall arrange for transfers, etc.

Validity of requirement.—Order of Childress city council, pursuant to this article, requiring physical connection between two phone companies and interchange of service, held not to take property of either company without due process of law or just compensation. Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. State, 109 Tex. 337, 207 S. W. 308.

Art. 1238. Telephone companies, etc., shall connect lines at common points, etc.

Liability for nondelivery of message.—Where a telephone company was a domestic corporation domiciled in J. county and had no property in J. county, its transfer over its switchboard to another telephone company, with which it had an agreement to pay for connections, and with which it was required to make physical connections, of a call for a party in J. county, held not to support a contention that defendant had contracted to deliver the message in J. county so as to make one company liable for the negligence of the other and authorize suing defendant in J. county. Texarkana Telephone Co. v. Blisard (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 213.

Art. 1240. City council, etc., to hear and determine whether transfers be necessary and just, etc.

Validity of order.—Order of Childress city council, requiring physical connection between two phone companies and interchange of service, held to authorize fair toll rates in addition to connection charge fixed therein, and not to warrant requiring one company to accept, from other, calls originating on its own line. Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. State, 109 Tex. 337, 207 S. W. 308.

Art. 1241. Companies to comply with order, etc.

Action for penalty.—Where two phone companies, ordered to make physical connection and interchange service pursuant to Acts 50th Leg. (1st Ex. Sess.) c. 12, refused to do so, complaint of state seeking penalty therefor held not demurrable for failure to allege, as was the fact, that one company had attempted to comply. Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. State, 109 Tex. 337, 207 S. W. 308.

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL.

1. Regulation of rates, charges and conditions.—Act Cong. June 18, 1910, c. 590, conferring power on Interstate Commerce Commission to pass on reasonableness of regulations of interstate telegraph companies, does not make such companies' regulations, establishing measure of their liability for negligent nondelivery of interstate messages, controlling until they are declared to be unreasonable by commission after complaint duly made. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bailey, 108 Tex. 427, 196 S. W. 516.

7. What law governs.—In suits based upon interstate messages, laws of the state where the message originates must determine whether mental anguish alone can be regarded as an element of actual damages. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Epley (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 528; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bailey, 108 Tex. 427, 196 S. W. 516; Mackay Telegraph & Cable Co. v. Martin (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 133.

Interstate Commerce Commission has no power to promulgate rules of law as to measure of liability of telegraph companies for negligent nondelivery of interstate messages. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bailey, 108 Tex. 427, 196 S. W. 516.

Where a telegram was sent from another state into Texas, and through the negligence of the office in Texas was not delivered, the measure of damages is governed by the state decisions and not the federal decisions, and mental anguish is an element of actual damage. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 592.

Where there was continuous transmission of a telegraph message from a place in Mississippi to a place in Texas, the message was interstate commerce. Mackay Telegraph & Cable Co. v. Martin (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 133.

The right of recovery for mental anguish due to failure of defendant's agent in Arkansas to send death message to plaintiff in Texas must be referred to the Arkansas statutes (Kirby's Dig. § 1947), as construed by the courts of that state, and, since the Arkansas courts following the federal Supreme Court would deny recovery in suit for

DAMAGES FOR MENTAL ANGUISH ALONE, THERE CAN BE NO RECOVERY IN THE TEXAS COURTS. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Epler (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 55 Epler

Act Cong. June 18, 1910, fixed the status of interstate telegraph companies as that of common carriers, and they are not only subject to requirements of Interstate Commerce Acts, but are entitled to have their liabilities determined by the law as administered by the United States courts. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McDavid (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 853; but that statute does not supersede all state laws as to their liability for negligent nondelivery of interstate message and as to right of such company to stipulate for exemption from such liability. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bailey, 108 Tex. 177, 196 S. W. 516.

9. Contracts for service or facilities.—If plaintiff did not own telephone wires, he had no right, title, or interest therein, and if he had no right of user on telephone poles sold to defendant telephone company, he cannot complain of the removal of the wire and has no cause of action for being excluded from use. Miller v. Sanders Independent Telephone Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 900.

A contract is created when the company accepts the benefits of the franchise, and an injunction against rates in excess of those permitted by franchise contract will not be denied, on the theory that plaintiff had adequate legal remedy, nor because labor and materials had increased, as that contract was not longer profitable. Texas Telephone Co. v. City of Mart (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 497.

Rate fixed by Postmaster General Texas Telephone Co. v. City of Mart (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 497.

12. Receipt and acceptance of messages.—Evidence held to show message was delivered to the company's agent. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Carver (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 333.

14. Delivery of messages, and failure to deliver or misdelivery.—Where the government under federal statutes has taken control of a telegraph company's lines, and operates them, the company is not liable for delay or failure to deliver a message. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 903; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Conditt (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 214; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 877.

A telephone company is not liable for failure to perform its agreement to locate a person to whom it was to deliver the message, unless its agreement was founded on a consideration. Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Payne (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 898.

Misunderstandings of charges permitting a verdict for defendant telephone company if it exercised ordinary care in delivering message by adding "unless it was received and transmitted under special contract" were erroneous as imposing a greater duty than the law requires. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McCormick (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 270.

It is the duty of telegraph company to exercise due diligence in attempting to deliver a message announcing the serious illness of the mother of sendee. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1052.

15. Delivery to person other than addressee.—Company, which failed to deliver message reading: "Mr. J. S. Mother dead. Come home at once"—held liable to J. V. S. the mother, with some standing delayed delivery to J. W. S., his father, at same address, having been put on inquiry by word "mother" and by agent's conversation with sender. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Streeter (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 940.

Where telegraph company received a message announcing the fatal illness of the addressee's mother for delivery to a special contractee and a delay in delivery to the company in whose care the message was sent was insufficient; it appearing that the addition was merely for the convenience of the telegraph company. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McCormick (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 270.

16. Delivery outside of city or free delivery limits.—It was not necessary for a telegraph company to make a manual delivery of a telegram addressed to G. "Telephone care Moore's Bluff Pumping Plant," although the telephone lines were not in working order; plant being situated seven miles from the town where the telegram was sent. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Gribbon (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 182.

19. Forwarding or retransmission.—Where telegram was addressed, "H. S. P., N. C. R. Co., 414 O. St.," the full duty of the telegraph company was not discharged by delivering telegraph at such address, at which its messenger learned that the addressee was no longer at that address, and was given his correct address. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Frewitt (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 316.

Where a telegram was sent to a town and was to be delivered by telephoning it to the sendee at another point, it was the duty of the telegraph company to use reasonable care to deliver it to the sendee by telephoning it, and the fact that receiving agent attempted once to telephone the sendee, and was interrupted by the telephone company that the line was out of order, did not necessarily acquit the telegraph company of the duty of later making a further effort to transmit the message by telephone. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Utterton (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 182.

21. Effect of mistake or vagueness in or wrong address of addressee.—Notwithstanding a mistake in initials of addressee, it is the telegraph company's duty to use ordinary care to make reasonable delivery of the message, and negligence in the discharge thereof is actionable. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Frewitt (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 316.

Where the message was directed to address where telegraph company's agent 270 was informed the addressee did not live, being resident, however, in the vicinity, it was duty of company, not only to seek to deliver telegram at address, but, when it ascertained address was not there, to make at least some effort to ascertain whereabouts by making due inquiry, failing of which a finding of negligence would be justified. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Carver (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 333.

22. Nature and contents of message and relationship between sender and addressee, and notice thereof to company.—Where telegraph company received notice from the face of the message that death message was for the son, and not the father, it was under the duty of exercising ordinary care to make delivery to the son. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Streeter (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 949.

A telegraph message by R. to J. that "mother died at 6:30 p. m." was on its face sufficient to give the telegraph company notice that deceased and J. were mother and son. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Streeter (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 949.

Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 976.

A telegraph message by R. to J. that "mother died at 6:30 p. m." was on its face sufficient to give the telegraph company notice that deceased and J. were mother and son. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 976.

Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 976.

A telegraph message by R. to J. that "mother died at 6:30 p. m." was on its face sufficient to give the telegraph company notice that deceased and J. were mother and son. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 976.

23. Nature and contents of message, and relationship between sender and addressee, and notice thereof to company.—Where telegraph company received notice, from the face of the message that death message was for the son, and not the father, it was under the duty of exercising ordinary care to make delivery to the son. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Streeter (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 949.

24. Delay.—Evidence that the initial company did not have the message on its file of transmitted messages held insufficient to show delay by it. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Allen (App.) 221 S. W. 1167.

Nature and contents of message, and relationship between sender and addressee, and notice thereof to company.—In an action against a telegraph company for delay in failing to deliver a message to a son that his mother is dead, it is not necessary that the company have distinct notice of the relationship, where the language of the message itself puts the company on inquiry. And a message from R. to J. that "mother died at 6:30 p. m." charged the telegraph company with notice that J. would probably desire to attend the funeral, and should have anticipated that he would have sent a message requesting postponement. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Johnson (Sup.) 226 S. W. 671.

25. Delay.—Evidence that the initial company did not have the message on its file of transmitted messages held insufficient to show delay by it. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Allen (App.) 221 S. W. 1167.

26. Delay.—Evidence that the initial company did not have the message on its file of transmitted messages held insufficient to show delay by it. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Allen (App.) 221 S. W. 1167.

27. Nature and contents of message, and relationship between sender and addressee, and notice thereof to company.—In an action against a telegraph company for delay in failing to deliver a message to a son that his mother is dead, it is not necessary that the company have distinct notice of the relationship, where the language of the message itself puts the company on inquiry. And a message from R. to J. that "mother died at 6:30 p. m." charged the telegraph company with notice that J. would probably desire to attend the funeral, and should have anticipated that he would have sent a message requesting postponement. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Johnson (Sup.) 226 S. W. 671.

28. Delay.—Evidence that the initial company did not have the message on its file of transmitted messages held insufficient to show delay by it. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Allen (App.) 221 S. W. 1167.

Nature and contents of message, and relationship between sender and addressee, and notice thereof to company.—In an action against a telegraph company for delay in failing to deliver a message to a son that his mother is dead, it is not necessary that the company have distinct notice of the relationship, where the language of the message itself puts the company on inquiry. And a message from R. to J. that "mother died at 6:30 p. m." charged the telegraph company with notice that J. would probably desire to attend the funeral, and should have anticipated that he would have sent a message requesting postponement. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Johnson (Sup.) 226 S. W. 671.

29. Errors.—One who telegraphs quotation of price to another, with whom he had previously corresponded by mail, makes the telegraph company his agent, and so must settle with the addressee on the price erroneously transmitted, accepted by addressee, and can recover the loss of the company. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Chihuahua Exchange (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 364.
sender and not of the company. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Holcomb (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 509.

35. Contributory negligence.—Mispelling by sender of telegram of name of addressee, though resulting in delay in delivery, does not prevent recovery, if by exercise of ordinary care the company, after learning the correct name, could have delivered in time to prevent the injury; it not being a proximate cause. Parham v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 839.

The failure of a brother, knowing sister to be critically ill, to go to her without receiving telegram that she could not live did not preclude him from recovering for negligent delay in delivery of telegram preventing his presence at the funeral; the telegraph company's negligence, and not his negligence, being the proximate cause of his failure to be present. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 244.

36. Prevention of damage from default or error.—If, through error in transmission of owner's telegram to real estate agents, too low a price for land was given them, and owner was not bound by the contract of sale made by the agents at such price, he could not, after discovery of the mistake, carry it out and hold telegraph company liable. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Southwick (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 937.

One who has entered into contract of sale of his land below its value, through mistake in transmission of telegram, being entitled to abandon his contract on forfeiture of a certain sum as damages, may not perform and recover of telegraph company greater damages. Id.

37. Proximate cause of loss or damage.—Testimony of sendee in a telegram announcing the death of a relative that he could have taken an earlier train, which would have placed him in the city in time to have attended the funeral of his relative, if the telegram had been promptly delivered, was insufficient on which to base a finding that he would have taken the earlier train. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Mobley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 611.

Where a telegraph company negligently failed to deliver money transmitted to plaintiff to enable him to return home by train, and plaintiff, being destitute and unable to work, made his way home on foot with occasional rides, the negligence of the company, and not the attempt to return home on foot, was the proximate cause of plaintiff's mental suffering during the journey. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1021.

38. Limitation of liability.— Those who deal with telegraph corporations are entitled, if they insist upon it, to have their messages transmitted and delivered free from all conditions or limitations, except those imposed by the law of the land. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 392.

Stipulation limiting telegraph company's liability for error in unreported message does not exempt the company from liability, where error in transmission was due to company's negligence, but merely requires proof by sender that company was negligent. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Ferguson Bros. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 416.

40. Requirement of repetition.—An interstate telegraph company may limit its liability in damages for negligence of its servants in transmitting unreported interstate messages involving different rates. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McDavid (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 855.

41. Of amount of liability.— Stipulation of telegraph company limiting its liability for damages for nondelivery of message, whether caused by negligence of its servants or otherwise, to $50, in absence of payment of additional charge based on greater value, is void under law of this state or of Tennessee. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bailey, 168 Tex. 427, 169 S. W. 516.

42. Notice and acceptance of conditions and persons bound thereby.—Where sender of telegram telephoned to the company's agent, who wrote it upon blanks containing provisions limiting liability, such provisions were not binding as a part of the contract. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Prewitt (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 316.

Telegraph operator taking message over phone for transmission held not agent of sender to bind party with conditions on back of slip limiting liability. Id.

A rule of a telegraph company that telegrams should be written on certain forms, and the stipulations on the back of such forms, were not binding on the sender of a telegram, had he relied thereon, who telephoned a message, although his agent recorded the message upon one of such blanks. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 592.

Stipulation on back of telegraph blank as to damages for nondelivery held not binding in Texas. It not appearing plaintiffs had any notice, as required by Interstate Commerce Act, of any such regulation. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Morrow (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 659.

45. Persons entitled to damages—Sender.—Defendant telegraph company which erroneously duplicated plaintiff’s message to his brokers for purchase of cotton, causing them to use his standing deposit in closing his account, etc., cannot avoid liability upon ground that it is responsible only to brokers with whom alone it contracted. Pearlstone v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 869.

The rule that a telegraph company is not liable to the sender on account of a purchase by the sendee through errors in a message has no application to an action by the sender who has been assigned the claim of the sendee and the purchase by the sender of a telegram for a valuable consideration of the claim of the sendee due to error in message does not extinguish the claim against the telegraph company, in an action by the sender as assignee. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Janko (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 889.

46. Addressee.—That sender and sendee of telegram arbitratured a loss caused by error in a message before a board, which decreed that they should share in loss equally, did not estop the sendee from suing the telegraph company. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Love & Walters (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 889.

47. Personal.—Where a telegram was sent a divorced woman notifying her of the death of her former husband, a son of the addressee and the deceased in charge of the addressee was entitled to damages occasioned by failure of the telegraph company to deliver the message, where the telegraph company had oral notice that deceased had a minor son in charge of the addressee. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Hultton (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 255.

50. Actions for damages—Evidence.—In action by plaintiff for damages due to failure to promptly deliver to her son a telegram with reference to serious condition of plaintiff’s daughter, testimony held sufficient to charge defendant with notice that plaintiff sender had an interest in prompt transmission and delivery. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 976.

Transmission of message so that the word “here” read “there” was not evidence in itself sufficient to justify finding that telegraph company was negligent in transmission of message. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Ferguson Bros. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 446. Evidence held to sustain verdict finding telegraph company negligent in failure to deliver message announcing death of addressee’s brother in time to permit addressee to attend funeral, notwithstanding error in statement of addressee’s name. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Holcomb (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 569.

Evidence held insufficient to show that failure to promptly deliver telegram sent by a bank with which plaintiff had pledged stock to secure note to one who had agreed to advance money to pay off note and redeem stock notifying him that, if loan was not retired, collateral would be sold, was the proximate cause of the loss due to acquisition or sale of stock by the bank. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Haynes (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 260.

In an action against a telegraph company for delay in transmission of a death message, evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that the person who received the telegram by telephone from the person sending it to plaintiff was one for whose negligence the telegraph company was liable. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 270.

In action for failure to deliver a telegram informing plaintiff that seller would sell his interest in a partnership, evidence held to show that plaintiff sustained damages as the proximate result of defendant’s negligence. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Dorough (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 282.

In action for failure to promptly deliver a telegram informing plaintiff that seller would sell his interest in a partnership, failure to deliver resulting in sale not being consummated, would sell his interest in a partnership, failure to deliver resulting in sale not being consummated, there was competent evidence to sustain judgment for damages, based upon the difference between the agreed price and the market value of the business and the occurrence of the negligent act, evidence sufficient to support verdict for $250 for vexation, annoyance, and inconvenience caused plaintiff subscriber by reason of his telephone being wrongfully disconnected by defendant company. Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Riggs (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 463.

In an action for damages from delay in delivering a telegram sent to the addresssee in care of a company, testimony of messenger boys that it was the habit of one of them to deliver such messages to the company’s manager, and that the other boy believed he delivered the message to such manager, who was not called as a witness for plaintiff, though present, constituted prima facie proof that the message was offered to the manger. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Price (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 869.

51. Instructions and province of court and jury.—In an action against a telegraph company for failing to deliver a message, refusal to submit a charge asking a verdict for defendant on a finding that a stipulation in the contract whereby notice of damages was not to be given within 95 days was reasonable held error. Western Union Telegraph Co. v.

53. Rights of action and conditions precedent.—Where telegraph company failed to deliver message notifying plaintiff to have his brother come to wait on their father, plaintiff had no cause of action on theory that he was personally deprived of privilege of going to see his sick father. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Goodson (Civ. App.) 202
S. W. 766.

Where filing of response to telegram with telegraph company made a binding contract, there could be no recovery against it for failure to transmit the response. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 748.

54. Defenses.—Where plaintiff sent telegram to brother that he was coming town on a certain train, and, if his father’s physical condition was not better, brother should meet him at the train, and plaintiff would stop off, and the message was never delivered, the subsequent negligence of the brother in not notifying plaintiff of his father’s dying condition would not bar recovery. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Huffman
(Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 183.

55. Grounds and elements of compensatory damages in general.—Where by reason of a telegraph company’s neglect to deliver a purchaser’s message relative to holding cattle for delivery the seller declined to deliver them, the measure of damage, in the absence of notice of special damages, is the difference between the market value and contract price at the place of delivery, and in case there is no difference there can be no recovery.
Western Union Telegraph Co. v. George P. Brittian & Sons (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 296.

56. Notice or knowledge of circumstances and effect thereof.—Telegraph company which was commissioned to deliver a message “Send Oscar at once to help wait on his father. Lida sick,” was chargeable with notice of relationship of parties, purpose of message, necessity of prompt transmission, and of probable injury from delay. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Goodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 766.

57. Recovering of damages from a seller, by a purchaser to a seller, in a telegraph message, “I am sick, can’t come now. Will let you know later,” and “Will be there,” in connection with statements that he had a contract whereby the addressee was to deliver cattle, and that he wanted to send a message to have the addressee hold them, held not notice that the purchaser would suffer special damages for loss of profits on the purchase and shipment of the cattle, delivery of which was refused by reason of nondelivery of messages. Western Union Telegraph Co. v.
George P. Brittian & Sons (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 296.

Where owner of hogs sent message to prospective buyer stating: “Can see hogs today.
Over thirteen thousand pounds. Come today”—informing telegraph company’s agent to rush the message through, as he expected prospective buyer to come on the train the same morning to get the hogs, as he had them ready and waiting for buyer, the company did not have notice that special damage would result from nondelivery of message, and the failure to promptly deliver it, preventing the buyer from buying the hogs, did not entitle the buyer to recover the profits he would have made if he had purchased the hogs at the prevailing market price. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Sanders (Civ. App.) 219 S. W.
536.

The purpose of a telegraphic message as known to the parties or as fairly disclosed in view of the relationship between the persons concerned must determine what damages may reasonably be regarded as within the contemplation of the parties from delay in delivery.
Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Johnson (Sup.) 226 S. W. 671.

Whatever would have been a natural and probable result to the sender of a telegram advising her son of the impending death of his stepfather from delay in delivery preventing the son’s reaching her until after her husband’s burial may be justly deemed to have been within the company’s contemplation, but it will not be held to the anticipation of an unnatural or improbable result. Id.

58. Direct or indirect consequences.—Even if plaintiff’s telegram was merely an approximate quotation of price, this is immaterial as regards plaintiff’s right to recovery of telegraph company for transmitting a lower price, sendee ordering plaintiff to buy, and he doing so at market price, resulting in a complete and fully executed contract. Western

If telegraph company assumed duty to transmit telegram accepting, though not unconditionally, a contractual offer, and negligently failed to transmit delivery to party making the offer, the latter could recover any damages proximately resulting from his failure to make an acceptance or counter proposition, providing he could show he would have consummated contract on terms of telegram of acceptance. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 748.

59. Damages for mental suffering.—Allowance of damages for mental distress in ac-ction for negligent nondelivery of interstate telegraph message does not impose direct burden upon interstate commerce. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Bailey, 108 Tex. 427, 196 S. W. 516.

In action for negligent nondelivery of interstate telegraph message, damages for mental distress may be recovered, where negligence occurs in this state, and such damages are recoverable under law of state from which message is sent. Plaintiff could not recover from telegraph company for mental anguish suffered by his wife, where, on learning that his wife, away from home, among strangers desired to bring on her mother's body, he wired her funds, which she received in time to take train she desired, that is caused, then learned, that day was delayed causing her apprehension; anguish resulting from apprehension of a situation which did not occur. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Deaver (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 972.
CORPORATIONS—PRIVATE

Mental anguish is an element of actual damage, for which compensation may be recovered upon breach of a contract to prevent delay in delivering a telegram, where such anguish is the natural and direct result of such breach. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1022.

To authorize recovery for mental suffering, the injury must naturally follow the negligent act, and be obviously contemplated by the parties, so that to render a telegraph company liable for mental distress, resulting from negligent failure to transfer money by telegram, it must be shown that the company was informed of the circumstances which would render mental suffering probable in the event of negligence in transmission. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1071.

Where plaintiff's mother informed the telegraph company, when she delivered money for transmission to plaintiff, that he had just escaped from an insane asylum, and the money was to be held for a beneficiary, the company's negligent failure to prevent delay, been told of the importance of the telegram and urged to try and have it delivered. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1022.

As distinct cause of action or element of damage.—No recovery for mental anguish can be had by reason of failure to attend the burial of a relative, in the absence of proof of physical injury, as a result of failure to promptly deliver an telegram. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Price (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 569.

Interstate Commerce Act prevents recovery for mental anguish. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Kilgore (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 593.

Where a mother sent money to her destitute son to enable him to return home, and informed the telegraph company of his condition, her mental suffering, due to his failure to return by train when the money was not delivered, and continuing during three weeks, is such suffering as entitles her to recovery of damages for breach of contract. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1022.

Injury to the feelings, sensibilities, or emotions, caused by the negligence or fault of another, constitute actual damages for which recovery may be had, and the rule applies to telegraph companies the same as to others. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1094.

Messages relating to sickness, death or burial in general.—In an action for damages for delayed telegram preventing plaintiff's attendance at a funeral, an issue as to amount of credit for physical and mental damage plaintiff would have suffered if she had been present to the funeral, to be deducted from the recovery by plaintiff, held properly refused. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McEachin (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1884.

Damages for mental anguish caused by failure to promptly deliver a death message may be recovered without showing that the telegraph company received a valuable consideration for transmitting it. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 781.

In action against telegraph company for failure to deliver a death message, plaintiff addressee could recover damages arising both from physical pain and mental anguish, which were in contemplation of parties when message announcing dying condition of addressee's mother was sent. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Carver (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 333.

Where plaintiff was visiting his father, who was a subscriber of defendant telephone company, and while so visiting his child became ill, and by the direction of his father he attempted to use defendant's line to call a physician, and defendant negligently failed to connect him with the physician, he could not recover damages for mental anguish by reason of the child's death; it not appearing that there was any contract on the part of the telephone company to perform that particular service, and for the further reason that the circumstances could not have reasonably been foreseen. Lawson v. Haskell Telephone Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 390.

Where plaintiff sent a message to her son informing him of the impending death of his stepfather and asking him to come at once, her mental distress from his absence was a natural consequence of delay in delivery of the telegram which should have been reasonably anticipated by the telegraph company. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Johnson (Sup.) 226 S. W. 671.

Where plaintiff's wife and stepdaughter went away for the summer, and the wife developed blood poisoning, necessitating an operation from which she died, and defendant 284 telegraph company did not deliver to plaintiff messages from his stepdaughter announcing the condition, sending money and that plaintiff come at once, the suspicion and fear of plaintiff after receiving a wire announcing his wife's death was reflex suffering in anticipation of the suffering of the wife and daughter too remote and speculative to support actionable damage therefor, as was a delay of 12 hours in preparation of the body of plaintiff's wife for burial claimed to have been caused by the delay in communicating with him. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Waller (Sup.) 222 S. W. 487.

62. — Messages relating to sickness, death, or burial as affected by relationship of parties. — Where sender of telegram had written his brother that he was going to pass through town and would wire him before starting, and that his brother should meet him at the telegraph office and telegraph, "Meet me at train 6 p. m. I am going to M. . . ." — telling the agent all the circumstances, and the telegram was not delivered, damages for distress of mind suffered by the sender, because of failure to see his father before he died were not too remote. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Huffman (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 183.

Mental suffering resulting from failure to see the remains of one's father and be present at his funeral, due to delay or failure in transmitting a telegram, is ground for the recovery of damages. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Fulton (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 286.

A telegram company is not liable for the mental distress suffered by the sender of a telegram as a result of delay in delivery unless it had notice that a probable consequence of delay would be suffering of mental distress by her. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 571.

There is no presumption that mental anguish will be suffered by failure to receive a death message where deceased and the addressee are not related in degrees of father, mother, brother, or sister, and by such failure addressee is deprived of the privilege of attending the funeral. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 1111.

63. — Messages relating to sickness, death, or burial as affected by contract and notice to company. — Where plaintiff wrote, "Come at once, death message, mother," and defendant's agent changed the wording to, "Mr. J. not expected to live, come at once, Mother," the messages, taken together, constituted notice that the message was sent in the interest of the deceased, the mother, and that she would likely suffer mental anguish if it should not be delivered promptly, and therefore deprive her of the presence of her son, the addressee. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 781.

Where a telegram is a death message, the telegraph company must take notice of the interest of the deceased party and the addressee, and, if such notice is that of father, mother, brother, or sister, the company will be presumed to know that mental anguish will probably be suffered if the addressee does not promptly receive the message. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 1111.

In an action for damages in delivering a telegram sent in delivering a telegram informing plaintiff, who was deceased's aunt, of the death and time of burial, where the relationship of the addressee to deceased did not appear from the telegram itself, and the telegraph company was not notified thereof, a general demurrer to plaintiff's petition should have been sustained. Id.

64. — Measure or amount of damages in general. — That sender of telegram paid to sendee half of loss caused by error in message did not render the telegraph company liable to sendee for less than the whole loss. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Love & Walls (Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 859.

65. — Inadequate or excessive damages. — Verdict of $1,250.64 for mental suffering resulting from being deprived of opportunity to be with and nurse a sister during her last illness and to be present at the burial was excessive, and will be reduced to $500. Western Union Telegraph v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 843.

In an action against a telegraph company for damages by reason of delay in a message whereby plaintiff was prevented from attending the funeral of her father, a verdict of $1,627 held not excessive. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Parham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 740.

Verdict of $500 for vexation, annoyance, and inconvenience caused plaintiff subscriber by reason of his telephone being wrongly disconnected by defendant company held not excessive as to show passion or prejudice. Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Rigs (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 403.

A verdict for $1,550 against a telegraph company for negligent failure to deliver a telegram to plaintiff so that plaintiff could send his brother to the bedside of his sick father was excessive and should be reduced to $500. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Goodson (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 158.

One thousand dollars damages was not excessive for mental anguish, caused a mother by failure to promptly deliver a message to her son, so that he could come to her in her bereavement on the death of her husband. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 781.

A verdict awarding $500 damages for mental suffering caused by breach of contract to transmit money to plaintiff's son to enable him to come home when he was in destitute circumstances, a result of which he had to work his way home, held not excessive. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1052.

Verdict for $1,500 recovered by daughter against a telegraph company for failure to deliver message announcing dying condition of her mother, whereby she was prevented from attending funeral, held not excessive. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Carver (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 338.

A verdict for $1,500 for mental anguish suffered from failure to promptly deliver a telegram announcing illness of plaintiff's mother held excessive, and reduced to $750. Plaintiff held received the message in time to attend the funeral. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1052.

CHANNEL AND DOCK CORPORATIONS

Condemnation.—See McGee Irrigating Ditch Co. v. Hudson (Sup.) 22 S. W. 967.

Art. 1251. [723] [644c] Dock corporations; added powers.

Liability.—In an action by a purchaser of wheat against the seller, the carrier, and a wharf company to which it had been delivered, for its loss by fire occurring through flood waters reaching a car of unslacked lime at a point to which the wharf company had been forced to move the cars in an effort to protect them, held that the wharf company could not be charged with anticipation of the severity of the storm, and was not obligated to go to great expense to raise its track beyond the level of flood waters of previous storms. Ft. Worth Elevators Co. v. Keel & Son (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 481.

CHAPTER TWENTY BRIDGE AND FERRY CORPORATIONS

Article 1279. [718] [642] Distance between bridges and ferries regulated.

Right to operate.—A ferry company does not, by virtue of its incorporation acquire the right to operate a ferry between the points named in its articles, without first obtaining a license from the commissioners' court of the proper county. Tugwell v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co., 74 Tex. 480, 9 S. W. 120.

GAS AND WATER CORPORATIONS

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE A GAS, ELECTRIC CURRENT AND POWER CORPORATIONS

Injuries from use of property.—Verdict for defendant, in action based on claim that plaintiff's team which ran away was frightened by articles which defendant had piled on the road, held supported by evidence. Smith v. Texas Power & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 405.

Art. 1283d. Condemnation of property; poles; pipes.

Eminent domain.—Individuals operating light companies have no power of eminent domain. Van Valkenburgh v. Ford (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 405.

In a proceeding to condemn land for the use of electric power lines, the provision that lines shall be constructed upon suitable "poles" means either wood or metal poles, and in view of the land being subject to overflow, and the necessary carrying of numerous wires and the distance between poles, the statute must be construed to include towers as well as "poles." Stemm v. Dallas Power & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 322.

This article does not extend to gas, electric current and power companies the benefits of art. 6531, allowing a railroad, in a suit against it by the owner of land, to litigate the question of condemnation, in view of Rev. St. arts. 1235d, 1236. art. 6531 being a special provision, and therefore not included by the adoption by art. 1235d of general provisions as to condemnation by railroads, etc. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. v. Malone (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 277, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 809.

Injuries from defects in lines—Negligence of company.— After erection of a telephone pole in close proximity to electric light pole, it became electric company's duty to remove high-voltage wires to outer ends of crossbeams for protection of telephone linemen and to inspect insulation of wires. City of Weatherford Water, Light & Ice Co. v. Veit (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 956.

Evidence held sufficient to show that electric light company was negligent in maintenance of high-voltage wires causing injuries to a telephone lineman. *Id.

Maintaining electric light and power plant transmitting 37,000 volts over wire constructed over public road, without ammeter, circuit breaker, or ground detector, is gross negligence, and the operators must be held to have anticipated severe shock or death from breaking of wire without shutting off the current. Abilene Gas & Electric Co. v. Thomas (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1027, 211 S. W. 600.

If an electric power company's guy wire was so situated with reference to a roadway and so near as to be adjoining it, and if its situation with reference to the known general uses of the roadway was such that the company might have foreseen by the exercise of reasonable care that some injury would probably result to persons traveling the roadway if the wire was not shielded, the company was guilty of negligence toward a horseman injured thereby. Athens Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 453.

Where an electric power company had a right of way across plaintiff's land, and erected a tower to support its wires thereon, and thereby had a right to use the land immediately under the tower, it might to that extent be said to be the owner of the land occupied by the tower. Where plaintiff's 14 year old son, for his amusement, climbed the tower and was killed by the electric current, the boy was a trespasser. McCoy v. Texas Power & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 623.

Where defendant power company had erected a tower to support its wires on plaintiff's land under a grant of right of way, and plaintiff's 14 year old son, for his amusement, climbed the tower and was killed by the current, defendant was not liable on the ground of maintaining a nuisance attractive to children, notwithstanding that no warning had been placed by defendant on the tower. *Id.

Contributory negligence.— A telephone lineman could assume that defendant's high-voltage wires were fixed to crossbars in usual manner indicating their dangerous or harmless nature. City of Weatherford Water, Light & Ice Co. v. Veit (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 956.

A horseman driving cattle along a public road which had no sidewalks, in the evening, was not confined to the traveled part of the road, where the wagons had made ruts, or even to the graded portion, with reference to subjecting an electric power company to liability for injuries to him from an unguarded guy wire in or near the roadway. Athens Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 421.

Assumption of risk.— A telephone lineman working on a pole adjacent to electric light pole was not required to discover that high-tension wires were uninsulated. City of Weatherford Water, Light & Ice Co. v. Veit (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 956.

Evidence held sufficient to sustain verdict that deceased came to his death by reason of receiving a shock from an excessive current of electricity, while attempting to attach an electric iron to a socket in his residence. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Bristow (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 702.

"Proximate cause" is that which in a natural and continuous sequence, unbroken by any new independent cause, produces the event, without which the event would not have occurred; it not being necessarily the cause which by measure of space or time stands next in proximity to the occurrence. Athens Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 421.

Art. 1283f. May not discriminate.

Discontinuance of service.— The act of a lighting company in discontinuing service without notice upon user's default for past month's service, held proper, where contract provided for discontinuance on default, and it was immaterial that the amount due was not in excess of deposit by user to secure performance. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 266.
CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE CEMETERY CORPORATIONS

Article 1286. Incorporation and powers; charter to state what.

“Cemetery” defined.—A cemetery is a place set apart, either by municipal authority or private enterprise, for the interment of the dead, the term including not only lots for depositing the bodies of the dead, but also avenues, walks, and grounds for shrubbery and ornamental purposes. Ex parte Adolf, 86 Cr. R. 13, 216 S. W. 222.

A cemetery does not lose its character as such because further interments in it have ceased or become impossible, but remains subject to the use so long as the bodies remain buried, or until they are moved by public authority, friends, or relatives. Barker v. Hazel-Fain Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 874.

Article 1289. Power to acquire and hold land, etc.

Title to land.—The fact that a cemetery is subject to spray of oil from adjacent wells does not necessarily render it unfit for cemetery purposes, and if the spraying is to such an extent as to constitute a nuisance, it is a wrong of which persons having relatives and other dead buried there can doubtless complain, and does not justify an oil company, under conveyance from the trustees of the church holding title to the cemetery, in drilling for oil within its confines. Barker v. Hazel-Fain Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 974.

Article 1293. Corporation may make by-laws and regulations.

Article 1298. City council may control location of cemetery and limit price of lots.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR OIL, GAS, SALT, ETC., COMPANIES

Article 1305. Powers of corporations.

Liability for injuries.—In action against an oil company for negligence in leaving oil barrels not completely emptied in the rear of a grocery store, where during a fire burning the store and other buildings the barrel exploded and injured plaintiff while assisting in extinguishing the fire, a directed verdict for defendant held proper; the evidence showing that defendant used the same method as other oil companies in delivering, emptying and removing their oil barrels. Williams v. Gulf Refining Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 959.

Article 1306. Right of condemnation; pipes, pipe lines.—Such corporation shall have the right and power to enter upon, condemn and appropriate the lands, rights of way, easements and property of any person or corporation, and shall have the right to lay its pipes and pipe lines across and under any public road, provided that no pipes or pipe lines shall be laid parallel with and on any public highway, closer than fifteen feet from the improved section thereof except with the approval and under the direction of the Commissioners Court of the County in which such public highway is located, or under any railroad, railroad right of way, street railroad, canal or stream in this State, and to lay its pipes and pipe lines across or along and under any street or alley in any incorporated city or town in this State, with the consent and under the direction of the board of Aldermen or city council of such city or town. The manner and method of such condemnation shall be the same as is provided by law in the case of railroads; provided, that such pipes or pipe line shall not pass through or under any cemetery, church or college, school house, residence, business or storehouse, or through or under any building in this State except by the consent of the owner or owners thereof; and provided, further, that all such pipes and pipe lines, when same shall pass through or over the cultivated or improved lands of another, shall be well buried under ground at least twenty inches under the surface, and such surface shall be properly and promptly restored by such corporation unless otherwise consented to by the owners of such land; provided, further, that if such pipes or pipe lines shall be laid over or along any uncultivated or unimproved lands of another, and such lands shall thereafter become cultivated or improved, such pipes or pipe lines shall be buried by said corporation as hereinbefore provided, within a reasonable time after notice by the owner of such lands, or his agent, to said corporation or any agent thereof; and provided, further, that whenever such pipes or pipe lines shall cross any public road or highway, railroad, street railroad, or street or alley, the said pipes and pipe lines shall be so buried and covered as not to interfere with the use and occupancy of such road, highway, street or alley by the public, or use and occupancy of such railroad or street railroad by the owner or owners thereof. [Acts 1899, p. 202, § 4; Acts 1915, ch. 152, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 146, § 1.]

Construction of article.—Arts. 12S3a-12S3f, as to the incorporation of gas, electric current and power companies, in providing, by art. 12S3d, for condemnation by such company in the same manner and method as is provided by law in the case of railroads, pipe lines, and telegraph and telephone lines, does not extend to gas, electric current and power companies the benefits of art. 6531, allowing a railroad, in a suit against it by the owner of land, to litigate the question of condemnation, in view of Rev. St. art. 1232, and this article 6531 being a special provision, and therefore not included by the adoption by art. 12S3d of general provisions as to condemnation by railroads, etc. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. v. Malone (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 217, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 509.

Eminent domain.—In condemnation proceedings for an oil pipe line, special damages on ground that oil would contaminate water supply for cattle, and that persons inspecting the pipe line would frighten cattle from drinking at their usual places, cannot be recovered, because too speculative and remote. Texas Pipe Line Co. v. Hildreth (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 583.

Art. 1306a. Same.—Every person, firm, corporation, limited partnership, joint stock association, or association of any kind whatsoever owning, operating or managing any pipe line, or any part of any pipe line within the State of Texas for the transportation of crude petroleum that is declared to be a common carrier by and is subject to the provisions of Chapter 30 of the General Laws passed by the Thirty-fifth Legislature approved February 20, 1917, shall have the right and power of eminent domain, in the exercise of which he, it, or they may enter upon and condemn the lands, rights of way, easements and property of any person or corporation necessary for the construction, maintenance or operation of his, its, or their common carrier pipe line, the manner and method of such condemnation and the assessment and payment of the damages therefor to be the same as is provided by law in the case of railroads; and shall have the right to lay his, its or their pipes or pipe lines across and under any public road, provided that no pipes or pipe lines shall be laid parallel with and on any public highway, closer than fifteen feet from the improved section thereof except with the approval and under the direction of the Commissioners Court of the County in which such public highway is located, or under any railroad, railroad rights of way, street railroads, canal or stream in this State, and along and under any street or alley in any incorporated city or town in this State with the consent and under the direction of the board of aldermen or city council of such city or town, and such other rights in the matter of laying pipes and pipe lines as are conferred by Article 1306 of Chapter 24, Title 25 of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911 as amended by this Act, upon corporations organized under said Chapter 24, subject, however, to the conditions, limitations and restrictions therein stated. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 146, § 2.]

Art. 1306b. Same.—Every person, firm, corporation, limited co-partnership, joint stock association or associations of any kind whatsoever owning, operating, or managing any pipe line, or any part of any pipe line within the State of Texas for the transportation of fuller's earth for the public for hire, the same are hereby declared to be common carriers, and shall have the rights and power of eminent domain, and may condemn the necessary sights, rights of way and easements, under the same terms, and subject to the same conditions as are conferred by Sections 1 and 2 of this act, on like persons natural or otherwise, owning, operating or managing crude petroleum pipe line or lines. [Id., § 2a.]

Sec. 3 repeals all conflicting laws. The act took effect March 31, 1919.

Art. 1308. Discrimination unlawful.

Liability for discrimination.—In an action to recover from a gas company for discrimination as to rates, facts held to support a contention that industrial consumers were subjected to a contract restriction permitting the shutting off of gas in event of low pressure, not placed upon domestic consumers. Cock v. Marshall Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 464.

In an action against a gas company, unlawful discrimination, even if proved, would not justify a judgment for damages for plaintiff in the absence of allegation and proof of an overcharge. Id.

Art. 1308b. Corporations for storing salt water, etc.—In the mode provided in Chapter 2 of Title 25 of the Revised Statutes of Texas of 1911 corporations may be created for the purpose of gathering, storing, and impounding water containing salt or other substances produced in the drilling and operation of oil and other wells, and to prevent the flow thereof into streams at times when the latter may be used for irrigation. tion between such producers under like conditions. Corporations interested in the proper disposition of such waters may subscribe for, own, and vote stock in the corporations which may be created hereunder. [Id., § 3.]

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

Misrepresentations.—Where plaintiff, when he signed written application for loan contract in defendant co-operative loan contract society, and paid installments knew that false representations of defendant's agents were unauthorized, he could not recover in a suit, defendant not having led him to believe that representations were authorized or later ratified them. Reegen v. National Equitable Soc. of Belton (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 157.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS

Art. 1314. Permit to do business, etc., in state must be obtained and how; purposes; foreign corporations.

Article 1314. Permit to do business, etc., in state must be obtained, and how; limitation as to purposes; showing as to stock by foreign corporations.

Power of state to regulate.—Proceedings to dissolve a corporation can be brought only in the courts in which the corporation was created. Mitchell v. Hancock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694.

A law of the state to which a foreign corporation had voluntarily subjected itself would necessarily be binding on its shareholders and other creditors, and any one standing in the stead of the corporation. Phillips v. Peru (Sup.) 229 S. W. 849.

Right to sue and defend without permit.—When construed in connection with this article, art. 7399, providing that a corporation failing to pay its annual franchise tax in advance as required by art. 7394 shall thereby forfeit its right to do business and be denied the right to sue or defend in any of the courts of the state, and that in any suit against it on a cause of action arising before forfeiture no affirmative relief shall be granted, the forfeiture of a foreign corporation's permit does not prevent its recovery in an action brought by it before the forfeiture for breach of a contract while it was authorized to do business, though such construction establishes a different rule for foreign corporations as plaintiffs from that applying to them as defendants. Deveny v. Success Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 295.

Interstate commerce.—A foreign corporation which ships goods into the state for sale or commission, held engaged in interstate commerce, and not in transacting business in the state, within Rev. St. 1911, art. 1314. Eastman v. Tiger Vehicle Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 336.

Laws of Texas authorizing foreign corporation to transact business or to maintain a suit therein by obtaining a permit to do so have no application to cases where corporation's business constitutes interstate commerce. Merrim & Millard Co. v. Cole (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1064.

Assuming a single sale of a machine by a foreign corporation was made wholly within the state, it was, nevertheless, in interstate commerce. Dempster Mill Mfg. Co. v. Humphries (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 981.
Where defendant gave order for machinery to a third person, who without authorization transmitted it to foreign corporation, and after the machine arrived defendant agreed to and did give a new order "on the terms stipulated in the original order," there was a ratification of the interstate contract which permitted recovery by the foreign corporation. It had received no permit to do business within the state. Id.

A foreign corporation manufacturing its products in another state, and selling them in Texas through the medium of soliciting or sales agents upon written orders forwarded to the one in the other state was engaged in interstate commerce, and was not transmitting business in Texas, and, in order to maintain suit to enforce rights growing out of such sales, need not obtain a permit. F. L. Shaw Co. v. Dalton Adding Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 535.

A foreign corporation manufacturing its products in another state and selling them in Texas through the medium of soliciting or sales agents upon written orders forwarded to the factory in the other state was engaged in interstate commerce. Id.

A foreign corporation has the right, without obtaining a permit to do business in the state, to collect a debt incurred in the transaction of interstate commerce, and, having accepted a promissory note of a third person in part payment of such debt, may sue thereon in the state, although the note of the third person, who had dealings with the purchaser of the corporation's goods, had made the note payable direct to the corporation. Crisp v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 531.

A contract for the delivery of peaches by Texas sellers to a common carrier in Texas for transportation to the buyer in Louisiana constituted interstate commerce, and the Texas statute, requiring the Louisiana buyer, a corporation, to have a permit to do business in Texas, does not apply. C. S. Martin & Son v. John Bonura & Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 41.

Where a contract between a manufacturer of medicines provided for sale of its products at its place of business in Illinois to one in Texas, the contract was interstate, and the manufacturer was not required to obtain a license as foreign corporation to do business in Texas, and Saturday Night Co. v. Marshall (Civ. App.) 286 S. W. 556.

Where product was manufactured in another state and shipped to the purchaser in the state, the transaction was interstate commerce, and the manufacturer and seller was not required to obtain a permit in order to lawfully carry on such commerce. Cadell v. J. R. Watkins Medical Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 226.

Timber company which sold stock for note to its agent to sell stocks, and transacted no other business in state, did not "do business" in state. Denman v. Kaplan (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 728.

Sale and installation of gasoline container and pump by a foreign corporation held a transaction of business within the state by it. Bryan v. S. F. Bowser & Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 189.

That a foreign corporation reimbursed a purchaser of its goods for rent paid for premises in which the property was stored and for money paid for signs advertising the goods, and furnished a truck for the delivery of goods, retaining the ownership, but requiring the purchaser of the goods to pay the expenses of the upkeep, does not conclusively prove that the corporation was transacting business in the state, being only evidence of such fact. Crisp v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 531.

A foreign corporation, manufacturing articles and shipping them to purchasers in Texas, was not doing business within the state by reason of its having an agent in the state who collected and adjusted accounts, and could maintain an action without procuring a permit. Caddell v. J. R. Watkins Medical Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 226.

A foreign corporation which had never gone beyond the promotion stage, and which had never done any business except to sell stock and to acquire through such sales some personal property, and which was in the process of liquidation, was not "doing business" in the state. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 346.

Art. 1318. [746] No such corporation can maintain any suit, unless.

A foreign corporation which had never gone beyond the promotion stage, and which had never done any business except to sell stock and to acquire through such sales some personal property, and which was in the process of liquidation, was not "doing business" in the state. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 226.

A foreign corporation, which had not attempted to engage in business within the state after its permit was forfeited for failure to pay the annual license tax, must be assumed to have voluntarily withdrawn from business within the state and cannot be denied the right thereafter to collect by suit in the state courts an account accruing to it while lawfully engaged in business within the state. Deveny v. Success Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 296.

This article does not render void contracts made by a foreign corporation doing business without a permit, but merely prevents the corporation from enforcing any of its rights by action. Temple v. Riverbank Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 605.

An arbitration is the investigation and determination of matters of difference between parties by one or more impartial persons chosen by the parties and called arbitrators or referees, and results in the substitution of a private tribunal for
The courts, an “arbitration” is not an action within this article; and hence, where the arbitrators made an award in favor of such a foreign corporation, it is entitled to have the award, the proceeding being statutory, entered up as a judgment of the court. Id.

Pleading and proof as to compliance with statute.—A petition by a foreign corporation, which contains no allegation that the transaction involved constituted business done in the state, was not subject to a general demurrer because it contained no allegation that plaintiff had a permit to do business in the state. Crisp v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 531; Fennell v. Trinity Portland Cement Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 726; Hquston Oil Co. of Texas v. W. R. Pickering Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 582.

Where foreign corporation’s pleadings did not show that business out of which cause of action arose was transacted in Texas, allegation as to permit to do business held surplusage, not needing to be proved. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 478.

In shipper’s action against railroad, pleas unexcepted to, held sufficient to present defense plaintiff had forfeited right to do business in state. Texas Packing Co. v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 129.

A foreign corporation suing to recover possession of buggies, an interstate shipment, under a conditional sale, made a chattel mortgage by statute need not allege and prove a permit from the state; there being nothing to show that it was engaged in doing business in the state. Moore-Hustead Co. v. Joseph W. Moon Buggy Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1022.

Under Rev. St. 1911, art. 1319, an insurance company is not subject to articles 1314 and 1319, prohibiting a foreign corporation without permit to do business in the state from maintaining a suit in any court in the state. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 368.

TITLE 27
COUNTER CLAIM

Art. 1325. Counter claim may be pleaded, when.

1. In general.—Bank's right of set-off does not apply to special deposits. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank, 109 Tex. 555, 212 S. W. 584.

A party cannot by direct action, or by way of set-off or counterclaim, recover money voluntarily paid with a full knowledge of all the facts and without any fraud, duress, or extortion, although no obligation to make such payment existed. Hunt County v. Greer (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 605.

In an action on note given for difference on exchange of land for corporate stock, in which defendant cross-claimed for misrepresentation, asking cancellation and damages, defendant's jures must be pleaded. McDonald v. Lastinger (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 829.

"Recoupment" is the right to set off unliquidated damages, while the right of "set-off," as distinguished from recoupment, comprehends only liquidated damages, or those capable of being ascertained by calculation. Alkay v. Bessemer Gas Engine Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 962.

3. Set-off of judgments.—Plaintiff, suing on note, was not entitled to have defendants' judgment, for value of exempt property converted by attachment and levy, offset by its judgment on note. Kiggins v. Henne & Meyer Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 194.

Courts voided an power to set off mutual judgments, such power depending, not upon statute, but upon the general jurisdiction of the court over its suitors. Pierson v. Farmers' State Guaranty Bank (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 739.

8. Subject-matter of counter claim in general.—In action by contractor on improvement certificate, cross-claim for damages to defendant's property in course of plaintiff's work was proper. Faye v. Whitley (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 551.

Where plaintiff sold a tractor on condition that it should not be liable for damages in the use thereof, either original or consequential, defendants could, in an action for the purchase price, set off the loss to their crops owing to the defects in the tractor. Southern Gas & Gasoline Engine Co. v. Adams & Peters (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 676.

In suit on a note, with attachment levied upon defendants' joint property, defendants, claiming exemption, were entitled by plea in reconvention to ask judgment against plaintiff for value of property levied upon treating it as conversion. Kiggins v. Henne & Meyer Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 494.

Where a plaintiff settles with one tort-feasor, but does not release his cause of action, another tort-feasor is entitled to have such payment credited as an off-set, pro tanto, against damages that may be recovered against him. City of Austin v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 111.

The civil-law doctrine of compensation is applied only in cases of running accounts between merchants and by analogy to running accounts between other parties, and does not apply to a claim by a debtor to his creditors, who had purchased property at a prior execution sale for much less than its value. Nelson v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 388.

Immature obligation of plaintiff to defendant cannot be interposed as defense to present demand, but equity permits such defense when plaintiff is insolvent. Wilkens & Lange v. Christian (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 253.

Where plaintiff contracted to deliver a piano, silverware, and advertising matter, to be given away as prizes in connection with defendant's business, and bound itself, in the event the annual sale of merchandise did not amount to a certain sum to refund 3 per cent. of the deficiency of such sale, defendant's attempt to cancel the order and failure to accept immediately the shipment upon its arrival and failure to pay notes promptly when they became due, resulting in their being placed in the hands of an attorney, held not to be such a material breach of contract as to preclude defendant from setting up as against notes remaining unpaid an amount due him under plaintiff's promise to refund, defendant otherwise having tried in good faith to live up to the terms of the contract and make sales. Brenner Mfg. Co. v. Watkins (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 522.

9. Vendor and purchaser.—The buyer has various remedies for relief from contracts induced by fraud, among which is the right to confirm the contract after knowledge of the fraud, and reconvene for damages when sued upon the contract. Alba-Malakoff Lignite Co. v. Hercules Powder Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 554.
10. Parties to and mutuality of cross-demands in general.—The defendant may set up an unliquidated demand, if it is connected with or grows out of a contract on which the plaintiff declares, and not only defeat the claim sued on, but may obtain judgment for an excess over that claimed by plaintiff. Alley v. Bessemer Gas Engine Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 963.

11. Demands of one or more co-defendants.—In a suit by the assignee of a draft for two cars of cotton seed against both drawer and drawee and against a railroad for conversion of such seed, the claim of the railroad against the drawer for freight had no connection with fixing the liabilities of parties to the draft, and was neither a counterclaim nor an offset. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 1145.

Art. 1326. [751] [646] Requisites of the plea.

Art. 1327. [752] [647] Judgment over in defendant's favor, when.

Right to judgment.—Under Rev. St. arts. 1325-1330, the defendant may set up an unliquidated demand, if it is connected with or grows out of a contract on which the plaintiff declares, and not only defeat the claim sued on, but may obtain judgment for an excess over that claimed by plaintiff. Alley v. Bessemer Gas Engine Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 963.

Art. 1328. [753] [648] Judgment for costs, how determined.

Art. 1329. [754] [649] Certain and uncertain damages not to be set off against each other.
In general.—In suit on note, where defendant counterclaimed for plaintiff’s breach of contract to pay reasonable value of time in performance of services and expenses, value of the time and amount of expenses being alleged, items so claimed were not unliquidated. McKinney v. Southwestern Liquor Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1167.

A petition alleging a final enforceable judgment in favor of plaintiff as against defendants and a final enforceable judgment in favor of defendants as against plaintiff, without showing whether the two suits grew out of the same transaction or if defendants’ judgment was upon a liquidated claim, and that alleged insolventy of defendants, justified issuance of temporary injunction against levy of execution. Piercy v. Farmers’ State Guaranty Bank (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 726.

In suit against bank by clerk to recover deposit, bank could set off its claim against clerk for money it was led to pay its customer through its teller on account of clerk’s negligence in having overstated balance to customer’s credit, bank’s claim being “liquidated.” Commercial State Bank v. Van Hutton (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 262.

Liquidated demand as set off in action on unliquidated claim.—In action against railroad for damages to curload of apples in transit, railway can recover unpaid freight, and may set off amount due as freight charges. Quinnah, A. P. Ry. Co. v. Novit (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 496.

In action for conversion of ore, converters are not entitled to offset expenses of shipment, etc. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 68.

In an action against a defendant by former partners for conversion of certain timber, where defendant sought to set off payments made by him for defendant’s benefit to object to the offset of a liquidated demand against damages arising from tort constituted a waiver. Christian-Holmes Cedar Co. v. Dewees Cedar Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 681.

It was error for the court in an action for conversion of property exempt from forced sale to a family, to set off against damages allowed to plaintiff a debt due by plaintiff to defendant. Mason v. Green (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 829.

Unliquidated demand as set off in action for unliquidated damages.—A grantee, receiving from tenant in possession of the granted premises lease money or part of the crops in lieu of lease money, is chargeable with what he so receives as an offset to his claim, under covenants in his deed, for the value of the use of the land during the time he is derived thereof by reason of the tenant’s possession. Morris v. Hesse (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 710.

Unliquidated claim as set off in action on certain demand.—Where plaintiff’s claim was unliquidated, founded upon a breach of covenant, he was not entitled to have it set off against the judgment, although the estate of the decedent was insolvent. Howard v. Randolph, 73 Tex. 464, 11 S. W. 496.

In suit on notes evidence balance due on price of land, vendee could not plead in offset unliquidated damages for misrepresentations of agent who sold land. Binder v. Milikin (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 239.

In seller’s action against buyer on a verified account, the court had jurisdiction of buyer’s plea in reconvention for unliquidated damages for breach of contract giving buyer exclusive selling rights in certain territory, the amount pleaded and set off 296.
in such case being founded on a cause of action arising out of, incident to, or connected with seller’s cause of action. Pt. Smith Couch & Bedding Co. v. George (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 325.

Defendant’s cross-action against plaintiff and brokers, who had represented plaintiff and defendant in execution of land exchange contract to recover damages for fraud and conspiracy inducing defendant to enter into such contract, held proper in plaintiff’s action for liquidated damages for defendant’s refusal to perform the contract, since the counterclaim, though based upon a tort, was connected with and arose out of the same transaction as plaintiff’s cause of action, and since the only liability arising out of the transaction in the event of such fraud was that of plaintiff and the brokers. Nesbitt v. Hudson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 746.

Art. 1330. [755] [650] Matters incident to plaintiff’s cause of action may be set off.

In general.—As against a claim for standing timber converted by a mortgagee prior to foreclosure, the mortgagor may set off damages to his security for the act of plaintiff in cutting other timber from the land. Chavez v. Schairer (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 892.

In a suit by the assignee of a draft for two cars of cotton seed against both drawer and drawee and against a railroad for conversion of such seed, the claim of the railroad for freight against plaintiff had no connection with fixing the liabilities of parties to the draft, and was neither a counterclaim nor an offset. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148.

In suit by assignee of part of series of notes secured by vendors’ liens, cross-bill against the assignor and an irrigation company for fraud in the sale of the land and for failure to furnish water for irrigation held maintainable. Closner v. Sprague v. Acker (Civ. App.) 240 S. W. 421.

Where after default in payment of note settled by mortgage parties agreed to an extension, and that mortgagee should have possession, held, that breach of latter agreement arose out of plaintiff’s cause of action on notes, and could be set off as counterclaim. Montgomery v. Gallas (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 982.

In suit on a note given for the difference between the values of corporate stock and farm lands exchanged, it was permissible for defendant, the former owner of the farm lands, and maker of the note, to bring a cross-action against plaintiff for misrepresenting the value of the corporate stock, such cross-action having arisen out of, and been incident to, or connected with, the liquidated demand sued on. McDonald v. Lastinger (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 829.

In an action by landlord on notes for money advanced to purchase farming implements on which plaintiff then had a landlord’s lien and a chattel mortgage lien, tenant was entitled to set up his unliquidated damages for breach of an oral agreement of the plaintiff landlord to lease defendant a certain other tract of land by way of counterclaim in the form of a cross-action, all growing out of the same transaction. Hulshizer v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 668.

Defendant’s cross-action against plaintiff and brokers, who had represented plaintiff and defendant in execution of land exchange contract to recover damages for fraud and conspiracy inducing defendant to enter into such contract, held proper in plaintiff’s action for liquidated damages for defendant’s refusal to perform the contract, since the counterclaim, though based upon a tort, was connected with and arose out of the same transaction as plaintiff’s cause of action, and since the only liability arising out of the transaction in the event of such fraud was that of plaintiff and the brokers. Nesbitt v. Hudson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 746.

Liquidated or unliquidated demands.—A claim for damages for the malicious institution of criminal proceedings by the seller of goods against the purchaser, for alleged false and fraudulent representations as to solvency, in the faith of which they were obtained, is not a “cause of action arising out of or incident to, or connected with” the seller’s cause of action for the purchase price. Pittman v. Keith (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 85.

In action by contractor on improvement certificate, cross-action for damages to defendant’s property in course of plaintiff’s work was proper. Pate v. Whitely (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 581.

The defendant may set up an unliquidated demand, if it is connected with or grows out of a contract on which the plaintiff declares, and not only defeat the claim sued on, but may obtain judgment for an excess over that claimed by plaintiff. Allen v. Bessemer Gas Engine Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 963.
TITILE 28

Article 1331. [756] [651] Legislature may create counties.

CHAPTER TWO

Article 1356. [780] [667] Old county shall organize new one.

See State v. Alcorn, 73 Tex. 387, 14 S. W. 663; State v. Cook, 73 Tex. 496, 14 S. W. 966.

Organization proceedings.—Under arts. 1356, 1357, 1361, 1362, 2911, 2950, 2932, the county judge may order an election for the election of officers for a newly organized county without waiting until the next general election. Earnest v. Woodlee (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 962.

An order entered in the commissioners' court reciting the presentation of a petition for organization of a county, "and the court being of the opinion that the petitioners are entitled to the relief prayed for, and that E. county should be organized," and then proceeding to lay off the county into election precincts, etc., was sufficient. Id.

Article 1357. [781] [668] Election to be ordered when and by whom.

See State v. Alcorn, 73 Tex. 387, 14 S. W. 663; State v. Cook, 73 Tex. 496, 14 S. W. 967.

Order for election.—The county judge may order an election for the election of officers for a newly organized county without waiting until the next general election. Earnest v. Woodlee (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 963.

Effect of irregularity.—The fact that the county judge fails to canvass the returns and declare the result of an election to organize a county and choose the county-seat, as he is required to do, does not invalidate the election, when it appears by other evidence what the result actually was. Ewing v. Duncan, 81 Tex. 239, 16 S. W. 1909.

Article 1359. [783] [670] New county subject to old until organized.

Control pending organization.—Runnels county was created out of part of Bexar county by Act Tex. Feb. 1, 1858, which defined the boundaries of the new county, and provided for its organization, but the organization did not take place until February 12, 1859. Held, that the registration in Bexar county, February 17, 1858, of a deed of land lying in that part of Runnels county which at the passage of the act of February 1, 1858, constituted a portion of Bexar county, is notice to subsequent purchasers. Lumpkin v. Muncy, 66 Tex. 311, 17 S. W. 732.

Article 1361. [785] [672] County attached to another may be organized, how.—When any unorganized or disorganized county has been attached to another county for judicial purposes or other purposes, and desires to be organized or reorganized, a petition expressing such desires, signed by not less than seventy-five qualified voters, residing in such unorganized or disorganized county may be presented to the commissioner's court of the county to which such unorganized or disorganized county is attached, and thereupon it shall be the duty of said court to proceed without delay to the organization or reorganization of such county, as the case may be in the same manner as hereinbefore provided for the organization of new counties. Art. 1366. [790] [677] Suits against.

Presentation of claim.—Where one has presented a claim against the county to the commissioners' court, as authorized by law, and they have allowed the same, and ordered a warrant to be drawn, a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel issuance of the warrant cannot be defeated on the ground that there is an adequate remedy by suit against the county. Callaghan v. Salliwax, 5 Civ. App. 236, 23 S. W. 837.

The action of a commissioners' court in preventing the formation of a quorum to act upon a claim presented against a county held a neglect or refusal to audit the claim so as to authorize suit against the county. Cobb & Gregory v. Dies (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 418.

Art. 1371. [795] [682] Contracts with a county valid.

Cited, King v. Ireland, 68 Tex. 682, 5 S. W. 499.

Art. 1373. [797] [684] Agents to contract for county may be appointed.

Appointment of agents.—A contract between county authorities and an attorney fixing the compensation of the attorney for services in procuring the consent of the government to aid in constructing a sea wall within the county and to procure rights of way and other necessary titles is not invalid as a grant of extra compensation contrary to Art. 3, § 53, though part of the services had been rendered before the contract was signed, where total compensation was less than the reasonable fee for the services. Galveston County v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 560.

Ratification of acts of person acting as agent.—The acceptance by the commissioners' court of the services of an attorney rendered under a contract made in behalf of the county by the county judge and chairman of the finance committee is a ratification of the contract which makes it binding on the county, though it was not formally approved by the commissioners' court. Galveston County v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 560.

COUNTY FINANCES

CHAPTER ONE
GENERAL PROVISIONS

Art. 1408. [827] [938] Receipt of collector for tax rolls.
See Powell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 584, 204 S. W. 439.

Art. 1409. [828] [939] How the collector may discharge his indebtedness.
See Powell v. State, 83 Cr. R. 584, 204 S. W. 439.

Art. 1421. [840] [951] Clerks, etc., shall report fines, judgments and jury fees monthly.

Art. 1423. [842] [953] Fines imposed and judgments rendered by justices shall be charged against them, etc.

Art. 1427. [846] [956] Any officer collecting money for county shall report the same.

Report as notice.—In action against county judge and sureties on his bond to recover money due plaintiff county, a demurrer to petition because action was barred by limitations was properly sustained, where supplemental petition in avoidance failed to show defendant's fraudulent concealment of cause of action preventing bringing of an action, in view of this article, and art. 1434, relating to judge's statements, report to county clerk, and examinations. Marion County v. Rowell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 983.

Art. 1432. [851] [961] County treasurer shall register claims against the county.
In general.—Where the county commissioners' court has allowed a claim against a county for services under a contract for superintending construction of a courthouse, it is not necessary that the claim shall be registered by the treasurer, as this article, does not contemplate that claims against the county shall be registered by the treasurer, unless they are such, upon their face, as he is authorized to pay off. Callaghan v. Salliway, 5 Civ. App. 239, 23 S. W. 837.

If sum of claims, representing ordinary county expenses, amounted to as much as it reasonably could be expected current revenues would amount to, ordinary expenses there-
Art. 1433. [852] [962] Claims shall be classified.

Cited, Carroll v. Williams, 109 Tex. 155, 202 S. W. 504.

Art. 1436. [855] [965] Claims shall be numbered, in what order.

Art. 1437. [856] [966] Order in which claims shall be paid.

Art. 1438. [857] [967] Classification of county funds.

Application.—Art. 1440, empowering the commissioners’ court to transfer money from one fund to another, hold to apply only to statutory funds classified by this article, and not to those raised by taxation under Const. art. 8, § 9. Carroll v. Williams, 109 Tex. 155, 202 S. W. 504.

Art. 1439. [858] [968] Commissioners’ court may create other classes of funds, etc.

In general.—A valid debt may be created by a county without complying with Const. art. 11, § 7, requiring that it provide for payment at the time it is created where it has a fund on hand under its control from which it contemplates the debt shall be paid, though it was not in fact paid therefrom. Austin Bros. v. Patton (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 702.

Art. 1440. [859] [969] Said court may transfer one class of funds to another, except, etc.

Transfer of funds.—This article applies only to statutory funds classified by art. 1433, and not to those raised by taxation under Const. art. 8, § 9. Carroll v. Williams, 109 Tex. 155, 202 S. W. 504.

This article, even if applicable to money raised by taxation, would not permit transfer where levy was ostensibly for one purpose, but really for the transfer. Id.

A special tax, collected to repair a courthouse and jail, cannot be transferred to the general fund or road and bridge fund to pay current claims, but can be used only for the repair of the courthouse and jail. Sanders v. Looney (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 280.

Art. 1446. [865] [975] County treasurer shall keep accounts, etc.

Cited, Wharton County v. Ahldag, 84 Tex. 12, 19 S. W. 291.

Transfer of vouchers.—Vouchers issued for salary, payable by the county treasurer, are not negotiable paper, and therefore, though the treasurer pay them without taking them up and punching them, one who afterwards buys them without notice cannot hold the treasurer liable for his loss, as being occasioned by the treasurer’s negligence. Stringer v. Morris, 82 Tex. 39, 17 S. W. 926.

Art. 1453. [870] [980] District judge shall appoint committee to examine finances, etc.

See Marion County v. Rowell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 983.

Art. 1459. [876] [986] Warrants issued against county by judge or court shall be attested by clerk, etc.

Existence of debt.—That warrants for county improvements recited that the work had been done did not add anything to them, or estop the county from the defense that it had not been done, or turn the warrants into bonds within statutes regulating their issuance. Lasater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1059.

A warrant drawn on the county treasurer in 1912 payable to the drawee in 1916, given for the purchase price of a traction engine, came within the definition of a debt under Const. art. 11, § 7, forbidding the incurring of debt unless provision is made at the time of executing the warrant for levying and collecting sufficient tax to pay the same. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Camp County (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1.

Warrants which county commissioners proposed to issue and deliver to contractors to pay for work and materials in the construction of a courthouse are void, where the contract for the contractor’s services was illegal, and the materials and labor had not been purchased or performed so as to create a debt against the county. Ashby v. James (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 732.

Creation of debt by warrant.—The issuance of county bonds by commissioners’ courts is governed by the laws on that subject, and their evasion is not to be countenanced, and the use of warrants cannot be availed of for their circumvention; but where the instruments are in truth warrants lawfully issued as such, and no effort was made to cheat.
Art. 1459  COUNTY FINANCES  (Title 29)

any law, the law relating to bonds is inapplicable. Lasater v. Lopez, 110 Tex. 173, 217 S. W. 373.

Counties cannot borrow money to erect a courthouse by issuing warrants and selling them in advance of contracting legal indebtedness for the courthouse, but can borrow the money only by issuing bonds with the approval of the taxpayers. Ashby v. James (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 732.

Warrants or bonds.—Instruments reciting that they are warrants issued to contractor for labor and material, and constituting orders upon the county treasurer to pay such contractor, and intended to be warrants, are simply warrants and not "bonds" within statutes regulating issuance of bonds. Lasater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1659.

Evidence of indebtedness of a county to a contractor in form of negotiable bonds with interest coupons attached, for construction of courthouse, but designated "County Courthouse Warrants," in view of minutes of commissioners' court disclosing its intention, were warrants and not bonds. Headlee v. Fryer (Civ. App.) 266 S. W. 212.

Where instruments issued by the commissioners' court as evidence of the county's debt for construction of roads have controlling features, which are those of warrants, the fact that interest coupons were attached to them, as is ordinarily the case with bonds, is not determinative of their nature. Lasater v. Lopez, 110 Tex. 173, 217 S. W. 373.

Negotiability of warrants.—The customary county warrants issued for public improvements, whether interest-bearing or not, have not the character of negotiable instruments, but are a convenient mode of conducting the county's authorized business, and do not protect an innocent holder from defenses of which he has no notice. Lasater v. Lopez, 110 Tex. 173, 217 S. W. 373.

Warrants may be issued by a county to pay for a county courthouse, but they are not negotiable paper, and are only evidence of the debt owing by the county, so that their issuance can be enjoined at the suit of a taxpayer where the contract in payment for which they were to be issued was invalid. Ashby v. James (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 732.

[Id., § 18.]
Art. 1498½q. Contracts between counties; tax; termination of contract.—The Commissioners' Court of any county, wherein a county free library has been established under the provisions of this Act, shall have full power and authority to enter into contracts or agreements with the Commissioners' Court of any other county to secure to the residents of such other county such privileges of such county free library as may, by such contract, be agreed upon, the same to be paid into the county free library fund, and thereupon the inhabitants of such other county shall have the privileges of such county free library as may by such contract be agreed upon; and the Commissioners' Court shall have full power and authority to enter into a contract with the Commissioners' Court of another county wherein a county free library has been established, under the provisions of this Act, and shall have power to provide for and to set aside a county free library fund, in the manner already set out; for the purpose of carrying out such contract. But the making of such contract, shall not bar the Commissioners' Court of such county from establishing a county free library therein, and upon the establishment of such county free library such contract may be terminated upon such terms as may be agreed upon by the parties thereto, or may continue for the term thereof. [Id., § 19.]

Art. 1498½r. Contract for service of established library; election: termination.—Instead of establishing a separate county free library, upon petition of a majority of the voters of the county, the Commissioners' Court shall have the power and are hereby authorized to contract for library privileges from some already established library. Such contract shall provide that said established library shall assume the functions of a county free library within the county with which the contract is made, including incorporated cities and towns therein. Such contract shall also provide that the librarian of such established library shall hold, or secure a county librarian's certificate from the State Board of Library Examiners. The Commissioners' Court may contract to pay annually into the library fund of said established library such sum as may be agreed upon. Said sum shall be paid out of the county library fund provided for in Section 12 of this Act [Art. 1498½j]). Either party to such contract may terminate the same by giving six months notice of intention to do so. Property acquired under such contract shall be subject to division at the termination of the contract upon such terms as are specified in such contract. [Id., § 20.]

Art. 1498½s. Joint county libraries.—Where found to be more practicable two or more adjacent counties may join for the purposes of this Act, and establish and maintain a free library under the terms and provisions above set forth for the establishment and maintenance of a county free library. In such cases the combined counties shall have the same powers and be subject to the same liabilities as a single county as provided in this Act. The Commissioners' Courts of the counties which have combined for the establishment and maintenance of a free library shall operate jointly in the same manner as does the Commissioners' Court of a single county in carrying out the provisions of this Act. Should any county desire to withdraw from such combination, it shall be entitled to a division of property in such proportion as agreed upon in the terms of combination at the time such joint action was taken. [Id., § 21.]

Art. 1498½t. Discontinuance of library.—After a county free library has been established, it may be disestablished in the following manner: Upon petition of a majority of the voters of that part of the county maintaining a county free library, asking that said county free library system be no longer maintained, it shall become the duty of the Commissioners’ Court upon the termination of existing contracts to call in all books and movable property of the defunct county free library, and to have the same sorted, inventoried, and stored under lock and seal in some dry and suitable place in the county court house. [Id., § 22.]

Art. 1498½u. Partial invalidity.—In case any section of this Act, and any provision therein, is found unconstitutional or invalid for any reason, the same shall in no wise affect the remaining sections and provisions of this Act. [Id., § 23.]

LAW LIBRARIES

Art. 1498½. To what counties act shall apply.—This Act shall apply to all counties in the State having a population in excess of 200,000 persons and containing a city having a population of over 160,000 persons as ascertained by the United States census last preceding the action of the Commissioners Court authorized by this Act. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., 1st C. S., ch. 19, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Took effect Aug. 21, 1921. This act repeals Acts 1921, 37th. Leg., ch. 61, authorizing the establishment of a law library in Bexar county.

Art. 1498½a. Commissioners court may establish library.—The Commissioners Court of any such county shall have power to establish, maintain and operate a law library in such county. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1498½b. Commissioners Court may establish library and provide for its maintenance.—The Commissioners Court of any such county may establish and provide for the maintenance of such county law library on its own initiative, and appropriate the sum of $20,000.00 or such part thereof as it may deem necessary, to establish properly such library, and shall appropriate each year such sum as may be necessary to properly maintain and operate such county law library, which shall be established, maintained, and operated at the county seat. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1498½c. Custodian; bond; compensation.—Upon the establishment of a county law library the Commissioners Court shall employ a custodian or custodians of such library and shall require such custodians to execute and deliver a bond or bonds in such sum as may be fixed by such court payable to the County Judge, and his successors in office, of such county, and conditioned upon the faithful performance of his duties by the principal obligor. Such custodians shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by the Commissioners Court. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1498½d. Rules and regulations.—The Commissioners Court shall have power to make all rules and regulations necessary or proper for the establishment, maintenance, operation and use of said library not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of this State. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1498½e. Gifts and bequests.—The Commissioners Court of any county is hereby authorized and empowered to receive on behalf of the county any gift or bequest for such county law library. The title to all of such property shall be vested in the county. Where any gift or bequest is made with certain conditions, and accepted by the county, these conditions shall be administered as designated by the donor. [Id., § 6.]
Art. 1498\%f. Funds; claims.—All funds of the county law library shall be in the custody of the County Treasurer of such county, or other official who may discharge the duties commonly delegated to county treasurers. They shall constitute a separate fund and shall not be used for any other purpose than those of such county law library. Each claim against the county law library shall be acted upon and allowed or rejected in like manner as other claims against the county. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 1498\%g. Partial invalidity.—In case any section or part thereof in this Act is found unconstitutional or invalid for any reason, such invalid section or part thereof shall in no manner be held to affect any other section or portions of said Act. [Id., § 8.]

Sec. 9 of the act repeals Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 61, and all laws in conflict.

TITLE 30
COUNTY TREASURER

Art. 1499. Election and term of office.
Art. 1500. Oath and bond of.
Art. 1504. Appointee's oath, bond.
Art. 1505. Shall receive moneys belonging to counties, etc.

Article 1499. [919] [987] Election and term of office.

Term.—County treasurer's term of office did not begin before election, within art. 7038, providing salaries of officers shall not be diminished during term of office, though political complexion of county was so predominately Democratic that only real contest was in primaries.—Carver v. Wheeler County (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 537.

Art. 1500. [920] [988] Oath and bond of.

Validity of bond.—Bond of treasurer of county, in which the words substituted for words of the statute were equivalent thereto, held not invalid as statutory bond on ground that it was not conditioned as statute required.—Morris County Nat. Bank v. Parrish (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 539.

Liability on bond.—The bond required by this article is the same as that required by arts. 3728, 3729; and that the duties of the treasurer with regard to the permanent school fund, consisting of the proceeds of school lands, both with regard to the securities and the moneys belonging to such fund, were covered by the general bond. Kempner v. Galveston County, 75 Tex. 216, 11 S. W. 188.

Actions on bond.—Approval by commissioners' court of bond of county treasurer. If necessary to its validity, could be shown otherwise than by entry on minutes of court. Morris County Nat. Bank v. Parrish (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 539.

In county's action on county treasurer's bond, where it was claimed by drainage district that portion of funds turned over by county treasurer to his successor belonging to district, drainage district and its commissioners and depository were proper parties defendant.—Nueces County v. Gussett (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 725.

Art. 1504. [925] [993] Appointee shall take oath and give bonds.
See Rochelle v. State (Cr. App.) 252 S. W. 538.

Art. 1505. [926] [994] Shall receive moneys belonging to county, etc.
Cited, Wharton County v. Ahldag, 84 Tex. 12, 19 S. W. 291; McKinney v. Robinson, 84 Tex. 489, 19 S. W. 696; Nueces County v. Gussett (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 725.

Control by commissioners and judge.—The commissioners' court cannot authorize the county judge to receive and disburse funds, though raised by the county for a special purpose—Bastrop County v. Hearne, 76 Tex. 563, 8 S. W. 302.

It was no defense to the action against S. that he had devoted the proceeds of the bonds before their sale to the payment of the contractor for the erection of the courthouse, at the request of the county judge, and upon the latter's promise that the county would reimburse S. upon final settlement, as the county judge had no authority to bind the county.—Nolan County v. Simpson, 74 Tex. 218, 11 S. W. 1098.

Art. 1506. [927] [995] Shall keep true accounts and superintend collection of money, etc.

Suits for debts due county.—Under art. 366, district attorney may bring an action against county treasurer to recover loss sustained by reason of payments made under a statute which has been declared void by the Supreme Court, regardless of whether the prosecution is directed by the treasurer, under arts. 1565, 1568, or the commissioners' court. Bexar County v. Davis (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 558.

Art. 1507. [928] [996] Shall report to commissioners' court.
Cited, Wharton County v. Ahldag, 84 Tex. 12, 19 S. W. 291; McKinney v. Robinson, 84 Tex. 489, 19 S. W. 696.

Art. 1509. [930] [998] Shall not pay out money except, etc.

Validity of order.—Warrant issued by clerk of district court against the county treasurer, pursuant to order of the judge, does not come from an officer authorized by law to issue it, without which this article forbids such treasurer to pay any money out of the county treasury. Martin v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 653.

Effect of payment.—Where a county depositary credits to the county the amount of a check drawn by county tax collector and deposited by county treasurer, it cannot be charged back to the county upon dishonor of the check. Watson v. El Paso County (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 126.

Where a county judge approved fictitious claims against the county, on which the county clerk issued warrants on which, in turn, the county treasurer issued checks, which, after payees' signatures were forged, the county depositary bank paid, and the county commissioners, after discovery of the fraud, took no steps to hold the bank accountable, the bank's payment was not the sole proximate cause of loss, and all such officers are jointly and severally liable therefor. Padgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1046.

This article gives treasurer no discretion to make payments without being authorized by certificate or warrant, and he is liable for so doing, regardless of custom whereby county treasurer paid claims without first obtaining warrants or certificates. Nueces County v. Gussett (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 725.

Mandamus.—Under this article, and art. 2241, subd. S, commissioners' court having refused to allow an account, the district court, though under Const. art. 5, § 8, having jurisdiction and general supervisory control over the commissioners' court, cannot, by original and direct mandamus proceeding against such treasurer, compel him to pay the claim. Martin v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 653.

whether trial court erred in excluding testimony offered to impeach grantee's testimony as to the valuation placed by him upon the property conveyed, and fact that grantor held conveyance on a bond of the question not being one of substantive law. Slaton v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 955, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) Citizens' Nat. Bank of Plainview v. Slaton, 189 S. W. 742.

A question in shipment does not turn on the admission or rejection of testimony relating to the extent of the damage, an assignment complaining of the admission of such testimony does not present a question of substantive law. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Vaughn (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 206, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 191 S. W. 145.

Holding of Court of Civil Appeals that judgment roll was inadmissible in evidence to prove no divorce had been granted to deceased's first wife, under allegation that she was his lawful wife at the time of his death, held reviewable by Supreme Court, being based upon a legal conclusion in contravention of established rule in the state. Kinney v. Tri-State Telephone Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 227, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1180.

Assignments of error, not presenting questions of substantive law, are not within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, on writ of error to Court of Civil Appeals. Texas City Transp. Co. v. Winters (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 541, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 366.

A question as to the correctness of trial court's action in refusing to allow plaintiff to withdraw its announcement and file a supplemental petition is one of practice, not within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to review on writ of error to Court of Civil Appeals. City of Ft. Worth v. Rosen (Sup) 225 S. W. 933.

In an action against a railroad under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Code, Title 45, § 51 et seq.) for switchman, assigned error to jury, complaining of the exclusion of certain testimony of defendant railroad's engineer giving his opinion of the manner in which plaintiff received his injuries, does not present questions of error not within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Estes (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 1087.

Questions of Law or Fact.—Where relator, seeking to compel issuance of prospecting permit, alleged the land had been surveyed, which the defendant denied, there was an issue of fact necessary to be determined as determining rights of the parties, beyond the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, on an original application for mandamus. Wagner v. Robison, 109 Tex. 114, 201 S. W. 171.

A ruling of the Court of Civil Appeals in a particular case that there was some evidence warranting the submission of a given issue to the jury, or that there was no evidence justifying its submission, is not within this article, unless it can be fairly regarded as so flagrantly wrong as to amount to a virtual denial and abrogation of established rules of law. Decker v. Kirliks, 110 Tex. 90, 216 S. W. 385.

In an action for death, an assignment of error complaining of the refusal to give a special charge directing a verdict for want of evidence of negligence presents purely a question of law, not within the final jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals. Southern Pac. Co. v. Walters, 110 Tex. 496, 221 S. W. 264, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 157 S. W. 423.

Importance of Error.—Ruling of Court of Civil Appeals that issues both of an entire forfeiture and a partial forfeiture of oil lease should have been submitted to jury held, even if erroneous, not so clearly wrong as to bring it properly within the Supreme Court's jurisdiction. Decker v. Kirliks, 110 Tex. 90, 216 S. W. 385.

The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction of writ of error to a Court of Civil Appeals in an action for failure of guaranty that cattle sold were immune from tick fever, brought against a seller and its agents, where the claimed error of the Court of Civil Appeals was in holding admissible certain evidence of custom as to making such guarantees, having found that the alleged guaranty was not made, and the decision of the point by the jury not having turned on the evidence of custom. Hart v. Ytura Cattle Co. (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 551.

Cases Involving Interlocutory Injunctions.—Supreme Court has jurisdiction to grant writs of error in appeals from interlocutory orders granting injunctions under Vernon's Statutes Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 4644, 4645, 4646, such not being of that class of cases in which determination of the Court of Civil Appeals is final under this article. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Village Mills Co. 109 Tex. 160, 202 S. W. 725.

Questions Determined.—Where the Court of Civil Appeals reversed a judgment for plaintiff on the ground that the evidence showed plaintiff's decedent was guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law, and did not dispose of questions of admissible evidence relating to the admission of evidence, held that, the Supreme Court, which reversed a judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals on writ of error, will not determine the questions undetermined, and will remand the case to the Court of Civil Appeals for that purpose. Kirskey v. Southern Traction Co., 110 Tex. 190, 217 S. W. 139.

Where it does not appear that the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals has become final—that is, it does not appear that a motion for rehearing has been overruled, and that time has expired for application for writ of error to the Supreme Court, or that appellee has failed to file motion for rehearing—it cannot be said, on motion to dismiss appellee's writ of error in the Supreme Court sued out subsequently to taking of appeal to the Court of Civil Appeals, that the judgment of such latter court is res judicata of the assignments presented in the Supreme Court. Ward v. Seabourn (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1107.

The Supreme Court is without jurisdiction to pass on questions not of substantive law, though it has acquired general jurisdiction over the case. Texas City Transp. Co.

Concurrent jurisdiction.—Where it appears that the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals over an appeal attached prior to the suing out of writ of error in the Supreme Court by appellee who might have presented his contentions in the Court of Civil Appeals, the Court of Civil Appeals has jurisdiction, and the writ of error in the Supreme Court will be dismissed, since, where two courts have concurrent jurisdiction, that which first acquires jurisdiction will retain it. Ward v. Scarborough (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1107.

The rule of comity between courts of concurrent jurisdiction does not depend for application on whether any judgment that may be rendered in the case first instituted could be pleaded in bar in the second suit as a former adjudication, the proper test being whether or not the court in which the first suit was filed has acquired jurisdiction of the same parties and some subject-matter of controversy. Id.

Decisions under the prior law.—Since, under the constitution, the supreme court’s jurisdiction extends only to questions of law, in cases within the appellate jurisdiction of the court of civil appeals, and art. 1011, confined such jurisdiction to questions of law in cases wherein the latter court has appellate, but not final, jurisdiction, section 32 of the act organizing the courts of civil appeals, providing for certificates of “dissent as to any conclusion of law” from said courts to the supreme court, does not oblige the court of appeals to certify a dissent on a question of fact. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ramey, 86 Tex. 455, 25 S. W. 406.

Art. 1522. Writ of error; certification of questions.

Mode of review in general.—See Texas Transp. Co. v. Winters (Com. App.) 224 S. W. 1087. Where petition for writ of error was filed under this act, it is governed wholly by such act. Freeman v. Wilson (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 551, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 1199.

Decisions under prior law.—Act April 13, 1892, provided that a judgment of the court of civil appeals shall be conclusive on the facts and law in the following cases, nor shall a writ of error be allowed thereon from the supreme court, to wit, (1) any civil case appealed from the county or district court, of which, under the constitution, the county court would have had original or appellate jurisdiction, except in probate matters, etc. Art. 1011, Rev. St., as amended by the act of the same date, provided that the supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction, coextensive with the limits of the state, which shall extend to questions of law arising in all civil cases of which the courts of civil appeals have appellate, but not final, jurisdiction. Art. 1011a provided that all causes shall be carried up to the supreme court by writs of error issuing to the courts of civil appeals upon final judgment, and not upon judgments reversing and remanding causes, except in certain specified cases. Held not to mean that a writ would lie to any final judgment, but only that it would not lie to a judgment which was not final.—Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Trinity County Lumber Co., 85 Tex. 406, 21 S. W. 539.

Art. 1522a. When act takes effect; pending proceedings.

In general.—Art. 1545e, must be construed with this article and when so construed a motion for rehearing on application for writ of error to Supreme Court on ground of conflicting decisions of Courts of Civil Appeals, will not be granted where alleged conflicting opinion was rendered after decision in case wherein writ of error is sought. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Redditt, 169 Tex. 211, 294 S. W. 106.

Art. 1523. [944] [1011d] Court to make rules, etc.

Adoption of rules.—The Supreme Court can make an order of court amending the rules for admission to the bar by adding to the list of law schools whose graduates are exempt from examination without announcing the order from the bench in open court. In re Orders in Chambers (Sup.) 226 S. W. 1075.

Rule 5.—See Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Ablon, 110 Tex. 235, 218 S. W. 1039; notes under art. 1542.

Rule 23.—See Brown v. Martin (Sup.) 7 S. W. 68.

Rule 24.—See Brown v. Martin (Sup.) 7 S. W. 68; Tudor v. Hodges, 71 Tex. 392, 9 S. W. 443; Lambert v. Williams, 2 Civ. App. 413, 21 S. W. 108.

Art. 1524. [947] [1014] To prescribe rules of practice.

Construction and operation of rules in general.—A rule, deliberately adopted, declared, and uniformly followed by a court, should not be abandoned except upon the most urgent reasons.—Gearheart v. State, 81 Cr. R. 540, 197 S. W. 187.
Where the Supreme Court in its rules interprets a statute, such interpretation is binding on the Court of Civil Appeals. Marvin v. Kennison Bros. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 831.

Conflict with statute.—Court rule 101a. (159 S. W. xi), if it intended to prevent review of record because there was no motion for a new trial, would be inconsistent with legislative enactment, and hence beyond the power of the Supreme Court, the procedure for criminal appeals being prescribed by statute. Sessions v. State, 34 Cr. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

Art. 1525. [945] [1011e] May ascertain jurisdictional facts.

Art. 1526. May issue certain writs.

Mandamus.—This article sufficiently complies with the constitutional requirement in Const. art. 5, § 3, as to specifying the cases for issuance of the writ of mandamus, and confers the original jurisdiction to issue such writ provided for in the constitution. Pickle v. McCall, 86 Tex. 212, 24 S. W. 268.

After the precincts of a county had adopted the local option law, the commissioners' court ordered an election for the whole county under the law. At the suit of two liquor dealers, the district court entered a rule requiring the commissioners to show cause why they should not be prohibited from making any decision as to the result of the election, basing its action on the ground that the election would be void if the electors of said precincts were allowed to vote. Held, that the Supreme Court would not issue a mandamus compelling the district judge to vacate his order, thus substituting its judgment for that of the district judge; and especially where there was a right of appeal. State v. Morris, 86 Tex. 226, 24 S. W. 393.

Supreme Court has no power to award original writ of mandamus against county judge, who is not an "officer of the state government" within statute. Bostic v. County Judge of Rockwall County, 108 Tex. 421, 195 S. W. 136.

The Supreme Court, under Const. art. 5, § 3, may issue writ of mandamus to require district court to enforce judgment, although prior thereto the Court of Civil Appeals under art. 1525, has issued a writ of mandamus directing court to retry case. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Muse, 109 Tex. 322, 207 S. W. 897, 4 A. L. R. 613.

Supreme Court in original mandamus is without power to direct commissioners of insurance and banking to act in disregard of final judgment of district court having jurisdiction of subject-matter and of bonding company, especially where the acts of the commissioner in relation to bonding company would involve exercise of discretion. Matthai v. Clark, 110 Tex. 114, 216 S. W. 856.

Supreme Court, in original mandamus will not direct appointment of receiver by trial court, nor direct trial court to issue injunction. Matthai v. Clark, 110 Tex. 114, 216 S. W. 856.

Mandamus, while a strictly legal remedy, will be refused, by analogy to the principles of equity, in aid of those who do not come into court with clean hands; that is, those who have violated conscience or good faith or other equitable principles in their prior conduct connected with the controversy. Westerman v. Mims (Sup.) 227 S. W. 178.

Issues of fact.—Where relator, seeking to compel issuance of prospecting permit, alleged the land had been surveyed, which the defendant denied, there was an issue of fact necessary to be determined as determining rights of the parties, beyond the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, on original application for mandamus. Wagner v. Robinson, 109 Tex. 114, 201 S. W. 171.

Art. 1527. [948] [1015] May punish contempt.

Art. 1528. [949] [1016] May issue mandamus to compel district judge to proceed to trial.

Validity.—Since Const. art. 5, vests appellate power in the Supreme Court, and not in the several judges, the clauses of this article, attempting to confer this power "upon '92 SUPP.V.S.CIV.ST_TEX. 21 321
Art. 1529. May issue writs of habeas corpus when and to admit to bail.

Civil suit.—Under Const. art. 5, § 5, and Code Cr. Proc. 1911, arts. 69, 100, 174, 175, 181-183, Court of Criminal Appeals has jurisdiction to issue writ of habeas corpus in any case where person is illegally restrained of his liberty, and under Const. art. 5, § 3, and Rev. St. 1911, art. 1529, Supreme Court has concurrent jurisdiction where restraint grows out of civil case. Ex parte Alderate, 83 Cr. R. 328, 205 S. W. 765.

Relator, adjudged guilty of contempt in controversy over custody of dependent child, under Vernon’s Statutes, Annot. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 2184-2186, a civil proceeding, will not be granted habeas corpus by Court of Criminal Appeals, but relegated to civil courts, in view of Const. art. 5, §§ 3, 5, and Rev. St. 1911, art. 1529. Ex parte Little, 83 Cr. R. 355, 205 S. W. 769.

Original application for writ of habeas corpus to obtain release from restraint under order of district court adjudging relator in contempt for refusing to obey an injunction issued in a divorce proceeding, pending in the court, to which relator and his wife were parties, should have been addressed to the Supreme Court, not to the Court of Criminal Appeals. Ex parte Gregory, 85 Cr. R. 115, 210 S. W. 264.

Application for habeas corpus writ of cases of restraint for violation of an injunction should be made to the Supreme Court. Ex parte Houston, 87 Cr. R. 8, 219 S. W. 826.

Where relator violated a restraining order, and was imprisoned for contempt, the Court of Criminal Appeals will not entertain an application for a writ of habeas corpus, for Rev. St. art. 1529, gives the Supreme Court authority to entertain applications for writs of habeas corpus in cases in which the restraint grows out of a civil case. Ex parte Albritton, 87 Cr. R. 453, 222 S. W. 581.

CHAPTER SIX

THE WRIT OF ERROR—PROCEEDINGS TO OBTAIN, ETC.

Art. 1540. [942] [1011b] Petition for writ of error; requisites of and bond.

Petition—Requisites.—Under Supreme Court Rules, No. 1, § c (159 S. W. viii), it is essential to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to review a case on error to the Court of Civil Appeals, for the application for writ of error to show that a motion for rehearing was filed in the Court of Civil Appeals presenting the points on which the writ is asked. Knodel v. Equitable Life Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 941, dismissing writ of error (Com. App.) 193 S. W. 123.

Right of review.—The holding of the Court of Civil Appeals that the giving of a charge was error, not having been called in question in the application for writ of error to that court, is not before the Commission of Appeals for review. Pullman Co. v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 741.
Art. 1541. [942] [1011b] Filing, time of, etc.
See Martin v. Granger (Sup.) 265 S. W. 725.
Time of filing petition.—By filing successive motions for rehearing, the time allowed for filing petition for writ of error cannot be extended. Henningsmeyer v. First State Bank of Conroe, 109 Tex. 118, 195 S. W. 1137.
It is essential to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court that the petition for a writ of error be filed in the Court of Civil Appeals within 30 days from the overruling of a motion for a rehearing. Faw v. Miller (Sup.) 212 S. W. 992.

Art. 1542. [942] [1011b] Petition with record, etc., to be forwarded; etc.

Art. 1542a. Notice to defendant in error; copy of application to be delivered, etc.
In general.—This article is directory; and Supreme Court, upon failure, through oversight, of attorney to comply therewith, instead of dismissing, will direct delivery of copy of application to attorneys for defendant in error, and specify time in which to reply thereto.
Martin v. Granger (Sup.) 265 S. W. 726.

Art. 1542b. Defendant in error may file reply, etc.
See Martin v. Granger (Sup.) 265 S. W. 725.
Filing answer without reservation.—Where the answer to an application for a writ of error did not reserve the right of oral argument, under court rule 5 (159 S. W. x), the Supreme Court may proceed without oral argument or unnecessary delay to decide the case. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Ablo, 110 Tex. 356, 218 S. W. 2090.

Art. 1543. Referring case back to Court of Civil Appeals for findings of fact.

Art. 1544. Grant of writ of error or answer of questions.
Effect of grant or denial of writ.—Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review action of Court of Civil Appeals in granting supplemental motion for rehearing of motion to vacate judgment of affirmance, made after Supreme Court had refused writ of error, thus affirming original judgment of affirmance of Court of Civil Appeals and trial court. Gammel Statesman Pub. Co. v. Ben C. Jones & Co. (Comm. App.) 206 S. W. 931.
Supreme Court by denying writ of error will be presumed to have concurred in the conclusion reached by the Court of Civil Appeals.—Milner v. Gatlin (Civ. App.) 311 S. W. 617.
Notations made on granting writs of error express only the tentative opinion of the court.—Ball v. Beaty (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 552.

Art. 1545. [942] [1011b] Bond required, when.

Art. 1545a. Good cause to be shown for award of writ of error.
See Scott v. Shine (Sup.) 202 S. W. 736.
Cited, In re Subdivision Six of Supreme Court Jurisdiction Act of 1917 (Sup.) 201 S. W. 390.

Art. 1545b. Designation of three justices of the Courts of Civil Appeals.
Validity in general.—Acts 1917, c. 76, authorizing the Chief Justice or any two other justices of the Supreme Court to designate a committee of justices of the Courts of Civil Appeals to pass upon petitions to the Supreme Court for writs of error, is constitutional. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Blair, 108 Tex. 434, 196 S. W. 502, 1153.
Authority of legislature.—The Legislature has power to give to the Courts of Civil Appeals the authority of determining when an appeal from their judgments shall lie. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Blair, 108 Tex. 434, 196 S. W. 502, 1153.
The Legislature, which inaugurated writ of error practice as method whereby appellate jurisdiction of Supreme Court may be acquired, and lodged in it authority of determining merits of the grounds advanced for issuance of writ, may change that method. —Id.

Since, under Const. art. 5, § 6, the Legislature may confer generally on Courts of Civil Appeals other jurisdiction than that specifically conferred by the Constitution, it may impose additional judicial duties on the justices, such as that of passing on petitions to the Supreme Court for writs of error.—Id.

Since, under Const. art. 5, § 3, Legislature may limit and change appellate jurisdiction of Supreme Court. Legislature may, in absence of any constitutional provision as to how such jurisdiction may be invoked, establish mode of appeal and declare that authority of determining right to have it entertained shall rest on a committee of judges of Courts of Civil Appeals.—Id.

Effect of designation.—This article does not create a court, but simply adds certain duties to those of justices already existing, to be discharged by them only in their capacity as such. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Blair, 198 Tex. 434, 196 S. W. 952, 1153.

The Court of Civil Appeals, from which members of committee which passes upon petitions to Supreme Court for writs of error are appointed will not by such appointment be disabled from performing their functions, since majority of members constitute a quorum for dispatch of business.—Id.

Art. 1545e. Supreme Court may also act on applications; must act on certain applications.

Cited, In re Subdivision Six of Supreme Court Jurisdiction Act of 1917 (Sup.) 201 S. W. 596.

In general.—Motion for rehearing on application for writ of error to Supreme Court on ground of conflicting decisions of Courts of Civil Appeals under this article and art. 1322a, will not be granted where alleged conflicting opinion was rendered after decision in case wherein writ of error is sought. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Redditt, 199 Tex. 411, 204 S. W. 166.

CHAPTER SEVEN

PROCEEDINGS IN CASES IN THE SUPREME COURT

Article 1546. [967] [1033] Trial to be on questions of law only.

Cited, Falls Land & Cattle Co. v. Chisholm, 71 Tex. 523, 9 S. W. 478.

Questions that can be considered.—The Supreme Court, while not empowered to revise the conclusions of fact of the court of appeals, may consider the evidence, in rendering its decision. Clarendon Land, Investment Agency Co. v. McClelland, 86 Tex. 179, 25 S. W. 1100, 22 L. R. A. 105.

Where the Court of Civil Appeals affirmed a judgment, refusing to consider the errors assigned, and a writ of error was granted, the whole case is before the Supreme Court for determination. Harlington Land & Water Co. v. Houston Motor Car Co. (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 145.

A loss under a fire policy cannot properly be treated by the Supreme Court as total, where the case was submitted and determined on issues which would have been immaterial had the loss been total. Delaware Underwriters v. Brock, 199 Tex. 425, 211 S. W. 779.

The Supreme Court will not decide moot questions in an injunction suit merely to ascertain who is liable for costs. Brown v. Fleming (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 482.

The appellate court should consider the evidence in the light most favorable to the party obtaining the verdict. Kirksey v. Southern Traction Co., 110 Tex. 190, 217 S. W. 139.

On writ of error to a judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals, reversing a judgment of trial court because there was no evidence to sustain verdict, the question for determination is not the sufficiency or preponderance of the evidence, but whether there is any evidence to raise the issue, and if there was such evidence the verdict of the jury must be reinstated. West Lumber Co. v. Goodrich (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 183, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Goodrich v. West Lumber Co., 182 S. W. 341.

Where the action was tried below solely as one for breach of contract, it will be so disposed of on appeal. Brown v. Sears (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 173.

In an action in trespass to try title, questions brought up on error held to have become merely academic, the parties having settled and adjusted their differences, so that the cause should be dismissed. Moore v. American Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 518.

Findings of fact by court sitting without jury are not conclusive on appeal, where there is a statement of facts appears in the record; and, where the Court of Civil Appeals has not passed on their sufficiency to support the judgment, the cause should be remanded for it to pass thereon. Temple Hill Development Co. v. Lindholm (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 521.

Treating the question as to the sufficiency of the proof to clearly and satisfactorily establish the contract as one of law, only, the evidence must be viewed most strongly in support of the trial court’s judgment in favor of the contract. Briscoe v. Bright’s Adm’r (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1082.

Assignments of error.—The Supreme Court cannot review the decision of the Court of Civil Appeals, unless the specific assignments contained in the petition for writ of error. Van Orden v. Pitts (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 830.

The Supreme Court, on error to the Court of Civil Appeals, which erroneously reversed judgment for plaintiff, on the ground that a certain refusal instruction should have been given, properly reversed the judgment where another instruction, not given, was substantially the same as the refused instruction, and thereby contained an assignment of error to failure to give it. Parham v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 830.

An appellant may adopt either the assignments of error set out in his motion for new trial or the assignments filed independently of those in the motion. Temple Hill Development Co. v. Lindholm (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 321.

Appellant is not restricted to the assignments in the motion for a new trial, but may file assignments of error independently of those specified in such motion. Harlan v. Acme Sanitary Flooring Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 248.

On writ of error, the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is limited to the questions of law presented in the application, and it cannot review even fundamental errors which are not so presented. Town of Jacksonville v. McCracken (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 264.

Questions not raised in Court of Civil Appeals.—Where shipper sued initial, connecting, and terminal carrier, and judgment went for plaintiff as against terminal carrier on theory of verbal contract made with it, and shipper did not appeal or assign cross-assignments in Court of Civil Appeals, though terminal carrier appealed, on further appeal by shipper from adverse judgment to Supreme Court shipper would be held to have abandoned his cause of action against the other defendant. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. West Bros. (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 918.

Where the trial court overruled all exceptions to the petition, thus holding it sufficient, and no error on appeal to the Court of Civil Appeals was assigned to the ruling, the Supreme Court, on error to review the judgments of the trial court and Court of Civil Appeals, should treat the petition as if no objection to its sufficiency had been made. Northcutt v. Hume (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 157.

Where the Court of Civil Appeals in its disposition of the case did not consider assignments of error presented by appellants relating to certain testimony, the Supreme Court is without jurisdiction of such assignments. Mills v. Mills (Sup.) 231 S. W. 697.

Findings of fact below supported by evidence in the record will not be disturbed by the Supreme Court on writ of error. Eagle v. Sabine Valley Timber & Lumber Co., 109 Tex. 178, 200 S. W. 942, 6 A. L. R. 1426.

Supreme Court is bound by findings of fact of Court of Civil Appeals that a reasonable time for performance of the contract in suit had elapsed. Bush v. Merrill (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 834.

The jury determines the credibility of the witnesses, and they may disregard the testimony of an unimpeached and uncontradicted witness because of interest or bias shown by the witness or because the manner of testifying raises a doubt as to the truth so that such evidence does not warrant a conclusion by appellate court contrary to the verdict. Pope v. Beauchamp, 110 Tex. 271, 219 S. W. 447.

If there is evidence in the record raising the issue of fact found by the trial court and the Court of Civil Appeals, the Supreme Court is bound thereby. Commonwealth Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Hollfield (Com. App.) 220 S. W. 322, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 184 S. W. 776.

The conclusion of the Court of Civil Appeals that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence is binding on the Supreme Court. Nussbaum v. Blumenthal (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 944, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) Blumenthal v. Nussbaum, 155 S. W. 275.

Where the Court of Civil Appeals reversed and remanded a judgment on the theory that the verdict was unauthorized by the evidence, its conclusion on the facts will not be disturbed on writ of error. Moss v. Rishworth (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 225, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) Rishworth v. Moss, 191 S. W. 845.

On a claim of title by adverse possession, where the facts necessary to constitute limitation were found by the trial court and approved by the Court of Civil Appeals, the Supreme Court was precluded from passing upon the question; it being purely one of fact. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Olive Sternenberg & Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 834, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 237. Same v. Patterson (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 838, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1460.

The rule that findings of the Court of Civil Appeals as to questions of fact are binding on the Commission of Appeals is applicable and binding only as to issues which are clearly found, and finding upon which is material and controlling in the decision of the case. Brewster v. City of Forney (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 175, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 658.

The Supreme Court is bound by the finding of the Court of Civil Appeals, reversing judgment of trial court entered on verdict of jury, where evidence was conflicting. Rea v. Lusse (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 210.

Determination by Court of Civil Appeals as to insufficiency of evidence to sustain the verdict is binding on the Supreme Court on writ of error to review the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals. Wisdom v. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 344.

The Supreme Court, on writ of error to review judgment of Court of Civil Appeals, will not consider questions of fact, the Court of Civil Appeals having exclusive jurisdiction. Haynes v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 361.

Cited, In re Orders in Chambers (Sup.) 296 S. W. 1075.

Denial of writ of error.—Decision of Supreme Court denying writ of error to review decision of Court of Civil Appeals sustaining sufficiency of petition to state cause of action as against general demurrer was binding on subsequent appeal involving sufficiency of same petition. Sanger v. Futch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 681.

Stare decisis.—The foreign court is the only tribunal competent to decide upon either the common or statute law of its own state. Lamb v. Hardy, 199 Tex. 411, 211 S. W. 445. Decisions of the Supreme Court of state of Oklahoma are not declaratory of the common law as it existed in Oklahoma territory, since the Supreme and Circuit Courts of the United States possessed revisory control over the judgments of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma territory.—Id.
Erroneous rule laid down in former opinion will not be upheld under rule of stare decisis, where no injurious or unjust consequences will result from failure to follow it. Dalton v. Allen, 110 Tex. 68, 215 S. W. 439.

The sufficiency of the petition as against a general demurrer was settled by a former appeal, in which a judgment sustaining a general demurrer was reversed and writ of error denied. Potter County v. Boesen (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 948, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 191 S. W. 787.

Under the rule that courts of equity will depart from rigid rules of law when necessary for the ends of justice, a decision of the Supreme Court in a case at law will not be extended, so as to preclude the doing of justice. Brokaw v. Collett (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 799.

Where plaintiff had agreed to dispose of a city's bonds upon their approval by plaintiffs' attorneys and the proposition submitted to the voters stated that the issue was "not to exceed $75,000," plaintiffs' attorneys were justified in refusing to approve of the bonds because of a Court of Civil Appeals case deciding that such a submission did not comply with the statute where the Supreme Court on appeal held the decision of such proposition unnecessary, but did not dis affirm the opinion thereon. Grant v. City of Mineral Wells (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 564.

Where inspector of trespass has determined that deed was admissible and sufficient to show superior title, such holding will be adopted by this court in later case between parties similarly situated where identical deed is sought to be introduced in evidence. Henneeman v. Nora Mills Co. (Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 664.

A judgment of the Supreme Court of Texas that Act Cong. June 18, 1919, c. 269, does not supersede the state law as to the liability of a telegraph company for negligence in delivery of an interstate message is controlling authority upon the Court of Civil Appeals until the contrary is held by the Supreme Court of the United States. Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Prewitt (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 218.

Although the Supreme Court might have rested its decision upon one proposition only, where it went further and declined another, its decision thereon is binding on Court of Civil Appeals. Park v. South Bend Chilled Flow Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 543.

Where the Court of Civil Appeals has declared invalid a mortgage or lien attempted to be given by owner on stock in trade without change of possession, does not apply to a lien resulting from a conditional sale, the Court of Civil Appeals is bound by such decision.—Id.

In applying laws of another state authorizing recovery for mental anguish for negligence in delivery of an interstate telegram message, held that a decision of the Supreme Court of this state, that state laws were not superseded by Congress, contrary to a decision in the other state, would be followed and recovery allowed.—Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Southwick (Sup. App.) 214 S. W. 987.

Decision of the Supreme Court as to constitutionality of statute is binding upon Court of Civil Appeals. Pears v. Gafford (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 675.

The Court of Civil Appeals in an interstate telegram case, must follow decision of Supreme Court, in absence of decision by federal Supreme Court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Southwick (Sup. App.) 214 S. W. 987.

Where the effect of an act of Congress has not been authoritatively settled by the Supreme Court of the United States, the Court of Civil Appeals will follow the decisions of the state Supreme Court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Kilgore (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 693.

Decision of United States Supreme Court involving application and construction of a federal statute held decisive, in suit in state court, that switching between stations is as much a part of interstate transportation as movement across state line, and that right of reservation by an employee, killed while switching, is in his personal representative. Pope v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas, 109 Tex. 311, 207 S. W. 514.

The decisions of the federal courts are controlling on a state court in determining whether a federal statute had taken effect at the time an interstate shipment was made. Kansas, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Horrell (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 659.

The construction placed upon state law by state courts will control, notwithstanding similarity to act of Congress, in absence of cases from United States courts construing act of Congress or the state law. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Stamford v. Stevenson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 644.
The decisions of the United States Supreme Court are controlling on a state court in determining a carrier’s liability for the loss of an interstate shipment, is limited to the declared value. Henderson v. Wells Fargo & Co. Express (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 362.

If the Supreme Court of the United States may entertain jurisdiction of action for damages, or loyalty to send damages upon the courts of Texas, Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Epley (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 525.

In view of Carmack Amendment (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8604a, 8604aA), the state Supreme Court will adopt the rule of liability for damages to interstate shipment laid down by the United States Supreme Court, notwithstanding the state court is of the opinion that the contrary rule previously adhered to by the court is the souther and more just rule. Cleburne Peanut & Products Co. v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 270, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 184 S. W. 1073.

Dictum.—Court of Civil Appeals would not feel bound by dictum of the Supreme Court. Bukowski v. Williams (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 343.

[975] [1049] Judgment on affirmance or rendition, etc. —Whenever the Supreme Court, on the trial of a cause brought from any Court of Civil Appeals, shall affirm the judgment or decree of such Court, or when said Court shall proceed to render such judgment or decree as should have been rendered by the Court of Civil Appeals, said Supreme Court shall, at the same time, render judgment against the Plaintiff in Error and the sureties, on his appeal, or Supersedes Bond, for the performance of said judgment or decree as rendered, (a copy of which bond is to always accompany the transcript of the record) and the Supreme Court shall make such disposition as to the costs as they may order. Arno Co-op Irr. Co. v. Pugh (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 470.

On review of a judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals affirming a judgment in favor of defendant, where the trial court was not warranted in rendering a judgment against the plaintiff on account of contradictory findings of the jury in answer to special issues, the Supreme Court cannot render judgment in favor of plaintiff on the findings, although the contradictory findings of the jury were found under an incorrect definition in the
COURT—SUPREME

In a suit by a subscriber to corporate stock to cancel note and deed of trust given therefor, wherein receiver of company sought to recover on note in so far as it was given as a subscription to surplus, record held in such condition as to authorize rendition of full and deed of trust; subscriber alleging all necessary facts to show receiver was holder of note which fell due before receiver's plea in reconvention was filed. Mitchell v. Porter (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 197, reversing judgment (Civil App.) 194 S. W. 581.

Remand of cause in general.—Where court erroneously directed verdict without two essential findings, which the evidence would have sustained, but as to which it was not conclusive, the court on appeal could only remand the cause. Horn v. Western Union Telegraph Co., 109 Tex. 229, 265 S. W. 521.

In an action involving title to land and the foreclosure of vendor's lien notes, where evidence was insufficient to support a recovery, but on another trial additional evidence might be offered, held, that judgment would be reversed and cause remanded. Bailey v. D. Sullivan & Co. (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 906.

Where plaintiff claimed under a sheriff's deed, but the issue of the sheriff's authority to execute the deed was not fully developed, notwithstanding two prior trials, held, under circumstances, that a judgment for plaintiff, who did not show the sheriff's authority, should be reversed, and the cause remanded, instead of judgment being rendered for defendant. Richards v. Rule (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 912.

Where shipper of cattle sued initial connecting and terminal carriers elected to recover from terminal carrier, which sought judgment over against connecting carriers, but under the Carmack Amendment to the Hepburn Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 5694a, 5694aa) and under the pleadings and evidence the recovery over, it was not necessary to remand the cause as to connecting carrier on reversal of judgment for plaintiff against terminal carrier. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. West Bros. (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 218.

In trespass to try title involving two distinct issues of fact, first, identity of the original grantee of the title, second, title by limitation in defendant's remote vendor, where the court rendered judgment for defendant on the finding for it on the title by limitation issue, so that defendant was not in a position to have the court pass on the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict on the identity of the grantee issue, there could be a new trial on the whole case on remand by the Supreme Court after rendition of judgment for plaintiff by the Court of Civil Appeals. Houston Oil Co. v. Billingsley (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 248.

Where, on reversal of a cause, it seems probable that the ends of justice may be better subserved by remand than by rendering judgment, the former course should be pursued, notwithstanding that it is apparent that a full consideration of the cause necessitates amendment of the pleadings. Camden Fire Ins. Co. v. Yarbrough (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 842.

Where defendant made no objection that an action to recover community property, which was also the homestead, should have been by the administrator of the deceased husband instead of by the widow, and damages for withholding duly assessed by a jury, appeared to be less than might well have been assessed, a judgment in action on supersedeas bond brought by the widow will not, in view of her rights, be reversed and the cause remanded, the only effect of which would be to prolong the litigation and increase the costs. Whitaker v. McCarty (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 372.

Where court remanded, the case was disposed of in defendant's demurrer to the petition on reversal by Supreme Court of district court and Court of Civil Appeal affirming judgment should not be directed for plaintiff, but cause should be remanded. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Diamond Press Brick Co. (Sup.) 226 S. W. 140.

Where the findings of fact, and the court concludes that the ends of justice may be better served by reversal and remanding the cause to the trial court, the same may be done. Graves v. Griffin (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 512.

On writ of error to review judgment of Court of Civil Appeals, where there are assignments of error questioning the sufficiency of the evidence to support the court's findings on material issues, the Supreme Court will on reversal remand the cause to the Court of Civil Appeals in order that it may consider such assignments. Board of Trustees of Robstown Independent School Dist. v. American Indemnity Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 385.

Where the Court of Civil Appeals reversed and remanded a cause on the ground that an issue of negligence was erroneously submitted, and the Supreme Court found that such issue was properly submitted, held, that the Supreme Court could not set aside the judgment of the Court of Appeals and affirm that of the district court, but must affirm the judgment of the Court of Appeals and remand the cause for further proceedings in accordance with opinion of Supreme Court. Tisdale v. Fanhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 133.

Where the Supreme Court has reversed judgment of Court of Civil Appeals and remanded the cause to the district court, and it is learned that the Court of Civil Appeals did not pass on certain assignments regarding testimony, the judgment remanding to the district court will be changed to a remand to the Court of Civil Appeals. Mills v. Mills (Sup.) 231 S. W. 697.

Affirmation of trial court.—Where the Court of Civil Appeals reversed and rendered the judgment of the trial court, and made no finding of fact which would defeat recovery, the Supreme Court may reverse such judgment and affirm that of the trial court. Gammage v. Gamer Co. (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 388.

Where the Court of Civil Appeals does not find against any fact essential to plaintiff's recovery and the Supreme Court does not approve its conclusions of law on which it based its judgment reversing a judgment for plaintiff, its judgment will be reversed and the judgment of the trial court affirmed. Cox v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Sup.) 222 S. W. 984, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Cox, 159 S. W. 144.

Where the determination by the Court of Civil Appeals that the evidence was insufficient to sustain the verdict of an injured employee was erroneous, but the Court of Civil Appeals made findings of fact under which the injured employee was not entitled to recover, the trial court's judgment cannot be affirmed on writ of error to the Court of Civil Appeals, but the cause must be remanded for a new trial. Smith v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. 132 S. W. 290.

Dismissal.—On appeal from a judgment of the county court in an action begun in justice court wherein the appeal bond was not filed in time so as to give the county court jurisdiction, the judgment of the county court should be reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to dismiss, and it is improper to reverse and dismiss the appeal, thus charging the successful party with payment of costs. Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Rainey (Sup.) 232 S. W. 281.

Proceedings after remand.—Where shipper sued initial, connecting, and terminal carriers for injuries to shipment of live stock, but all causes of action were abandoned except as against terminal carrier and judgment went for plaintiff on theory of verbal contract with terminal carrier, though acts of negligence were also alleged, on reversal and remand for invalidity of contract shipper could recover on another trial on theory of negligence. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. West Bros. (Com. App.) 297 S. W. 918.

Art. 1553. [972] [1043] No reversal or dismissal for want of form.

Rendering judgment.—On error to the Court of Civil Appeals it is the duty of the Supreme Court to dispose of the whole case, and reverse or affirm the judgment of the trial court as the law may demand. City of Austin v. Nalle, 85 Tex. 520, 22 S. W. 668. Appellate court has no legal authority to modify judgment so as to make return of purchase money condition precedent to enforcement, where amount of purchase money has not been assumed by jury. Home Inv. Co. v. Strange, 199 Tex. 94, 145 S. W. 2d 484. On appeal in trespass to try title, where it appeared judgment for plaintiff should not have been had without return of certain sums expended by defendant, the judgment will be modified on motion by plaintiff by crediting defendant with amounts expended, where evidence is undisputed as to amount, although jury made no finding thereon. Home Inv. Co. v. Strange, 199 Tex. 342, 204 S. W. 314, modifying judgment on rehearing 195 S. W. 449, which reversed (Civ. App.) 152 S. W. 510.

Where trial court of its own motion instructed a verdict against plaintiff without giving plaintiff any opportunity to offer an instruction under his denial of plaintiff’s allegations, on appeal, judgment cannot be rendered by appellate court in favor of plaintiff. Moore v. Jenkins, 199 Tex. 401, 211 S. W. 975.

Harmless error.—Supreme Court Rule 62A (149 S. W. x) was not intended to deprive the Supreme Court of the power to determine for itself whether any erroneous action of the trial court was of such character as amounted “to such a denial of the rights of the plaintiff as was reasonably calculated to cause and probably did cause the rendition of an improper judgment.” Weisner v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (App.) 297 S. W. 904.

One not prejudiced by an award is in no position to complain of it on appeal. Han­rick v. Hanrick, 110 Tex. 50, 214 S. W. 321.

Art. 1555. [976] [1050] Mandate to issue, when.
Cited, City of Austin v. Nalle, 85 Tex. 520, 22 S. W. 668.

Art. 1557. [976] [1050] Affidavit of inability to pay or secure costs.

Sufficiency of affidavit.—This article is satisfied, in the absence of timely objection, by affidavit of a party on behalf of herself and husband made a party pro forma, she also stating he was away in the army. Dignowity v. Fly, 110 Tex. 615, 253 S. W. 163, enforcing former judgment, 110 Tex. 613, 210 S. W. 505.

Art. 1559. No mandate to be taken out after twelve months, in case of reversal and demand; certificate and dismissal.

Right to mandate.—Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act (U. S. Comp. St. 1918, § 3978(d)), authorizes the appellate court to grant a motion of an appellee, requesting it to instruct the clerk to issue a mandate, although costs had not been paid within one year from the reversal of a judgment in favor of appellee. It appearing that appellee entered the military service of the United States, before he became aware of reversal of his judgment, and served overseas until within three months of filing his motion, notwithstanding this article. Kuehn v. Neugebauer (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 258.

Relators under judgment of the Supreme Court in mandamus to the Court of Civil Appeals to issue mandate to the trial court, in a certain suit in which there had been a reversal, at any time within 12 months from the date of the judgment of the Supreme Court in that suit, on the payment of costs in that suit or the making of affidavit in lieu thereof, having become entitled to the mandate by seasonably filing such affidavit, and it not being contested within the 12 months, though filed more than 50 days before expiration thereof, their rights could not be defeated by the clerk, the adverse parties in the original suit, and the Court of Civil Appeals by means of a subsequent contest and hearing. Dignowity v. Fly, 110 Tex. 615, 253 S. W. 163, enforcing former judgment, 110 Tex. 613, 210 S. W. 505.

Computation of period.—The 12 months allowed by statute for taking out a mandate runs from the day of judgment of the Supreme Court, in a case reversed and remanded by the Court of Civil Appeals, in which a writ of error is denied. Dignowity v. Fly, 110 Tex. 615, 210 S. W. 505.

The judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals is not the "final judgment" required by this article, since the appeal, with or without supersedeas, continues a suit, depriving the judgment of the finality necessary for admission in evidence. Id.

Certificate of no mandate.—The clerk of the Court of Civil Appeals is not required to make certificate stating only the date of judgment reversing and remanding the judgment of the court below, and that no mandate had been taken out. Texas Co. v. Charles Clark & Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 251.

The jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals reversing and remanding a cause terminating with the expiration of the term in which such judgment was rendered and a motion for rehearing refused, such court has no original jurisdiction of a motion by appellee to require the clerk of that court to issue the certificate of no mandate taken out. Id.

Effect of failure to take out mandate.—Where judgment against defendant was reversed, if he desired to have matter retried in some action, he should have procured mandate within 12 months of decision on appeal, but, not having done so, he cannot, in another action by him, take advantage of dismissal of case from docket; parties stand as though no suit had ever been brought. Gilmore v. Ladell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 362.

Article 1561. [977] [1051] Motion for, when and how made.

Application.—A motion for rehearing the action of the Supreme Court in refusing a writ of error, which in effect charges the court with negligently considering the question involved and obstinately refusing to be governed by controlling authorities, will not be considered but will be stricken from the files. Batson-Milholme Co. v. Faulk, 195 Tex. 480, 211 S. W. 972.

Art. 1562-1565. [978-981] [1052-1055].

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
COMMISSION OF APPEALS

Art. 1579a. The members of said Commission of Appeals of the State of Texas shall have the same qualifications as are prescribed by law for the Judges of the Supreme Court of the State, and shall receive for their services the same salary to be paid in the same manner as are the salaries of the judges of the Supreme Court. The members of said Commission of Appeals shall, before entering upon the discharge of their duties as such, respectively, take the oath of office prescribed by the Constitution.

The concurrence of two of the judges of any section shall be necessary to the decision of any question or matter referred to them.

The term for which said Commission shall exist shall be from the first Monday in October, 1918, until the last Saturday in June 1923. Provided the term of office of the judges now appointed and acting upon said Commission of Appeals shall expire on the last Saturday in June, 1921, and the Governor is hereby empowered to appoint, at any time after this Act shall take effect, the judges of said Commission for the term beginning the last Saturday in June, 1921, and ending the last Saturday in June, 1923. Provided, further, that the names of the persons so appointed shall be submitted to the Senate for confirmation, if in session when such appointments are made, or if not in session, then to the first session of the Senate thereafter. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 81, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 34, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 119, § 1.]

Took effect 80 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Art. 1579b. Sections of commission; clerk; reference to sections. —Said Commission of Appeals shall be divided into, and it shall sit in, two sections to be known as Section A and Section B, each of which shall consist of three members, and the Governor, in making the appointments to membership on said Commission of Appeals shall designate for which section thereof the appointments are respectively made, and each section of said Commission of Appeals shall be a complete entity in and of itself and shall have all of the power and authority hereinafter conferred upon the Commission of Appeals; but there shall be only one clerk for said Commission of Appeals, and the entire Commission of Appeals shall sit and act together in the making and formulating of the rules of procedure hereinafter provided for. And when authority is given in this Act for the reference of any case to said Commission of Appeals, such case may be referred to either section thereof. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 81, § 2.]

Art. 1579c. Causes referred by consent. —Said Commission shall have the power to hear and pronounce award upon all Civil cases now and hereafter pending in the Supreme Court, wherein the parties or their attorneys may file consent, in writing, to the reference thereof to said Commission. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 1579d. Report on causes referred. —Said Commission shall report its conclusions or award to the Supreme Court in the cases so referred, and may accompany the same with a brief synopsis of the case and their opinion thereon; and the conclusions or award aforesaid shall be and become the judgment of said Supreme Court, and said court shall make and render such further order, judgment, or decree thereon as may be necessary or proper to make said award effective. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1579e. Opinions. —The opinion of said Commission in the cases so referred to it by consent, in writing, shall not be published in the reports of the decisions of the Supreme Court, nor shall the same have any further or other effect than to determine the particular causes wherein rendered, and shall have no force or effect or authority as precedent in other causes, unless otherwise decided by the Supreme Court. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1579f. Reference of causes by Supreme Court. —The Supreme Court is hereby authorized and empowered to refer to said Commission of Appeals of the State of Texas any case or cases now or hereafter pending before said Court, for examination and report thereon; and it shall be the duty of the Supreme Court, in order to relieve the docket of said Court of the great number of cases new [now] encumbering it, from time to time to refer to said Commission of Appeals so many of said cases now and hereafter pending in said Court as may be reasonably considered and acted upon by the same at the several sessions thereof, having respect in such reference to the length of time such cases have been pending as well as to promote an early disposition of the cases on the docket; provided, that when any case is referred by the Supreme Court to said Commission of Appeals, the counsel for both parties shall have notice thereof, and shall have the right to be heard upon the same as if said cause were tried by the Supreme Court, and said Commission of Appeals shall make rules regulating the hearing of causes submitted to them. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 1579g. Same; report to Supreme Court.—When said Commission of Appeals has considered and determined upon the proper disposition of any cases referred to the same, according to Section 6 of this Act [Art. 1579f], their opinion shall be submitted, together with a brief synopsis of the case, to the Supreme Court, and the record shall be returned herewith; the report so made may be used by said Supreme Court to facilitate it in reaching a conclusion upon the law and facts of the case. [Id., § 7.]

Effect of approval.—The approval by the Supreme Court of judgments recommended by the Commission of Appeals merely adopts the view of the Commission as to the determination to be made of the cause, and is not an approval of the opinion in the particular case, or the reasons therein for the Commission's conclusion. McKenzie v. Withers, 109 Tex. 235, 206 S. W. 502.

Art. 1579h. Same; opinions.—The opinion of said Commission of Appeals in cases referred to it by the Supreme Court, when adopted by said court, shall be published as the opinion thereof, as in other cases, unless otherwise directed by the Supreme Court. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 1579i. Refiling papers; costs.—In cases referred to the Commission of Appeals under this Act, the papers shall not be re-filed with said Commission of Appeals, and only such additional costs as may be essential to carry into effect the provision hereof shall be incurred by the parties to such cases by reason of the reference thereof. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 1579j. Sessions; stenographers; clerk.—Said Commission of Appeals shall hold its sessions in Austin, Texas, at the same time and place as the Supreme Court, but the said Commission of Appeals shall continue their work during the vacation of the Supreme Court in midsummer, subject, however, to the right of said judges of the Commission of Appeals to take a vacation, not to exceed eight weeks, during said period. They shall appoint as many stenographers not exceeding four, as said Commission may find necessary, and such stenographers shall perform the duties required of them by said Commission of Appeals, and each of whom shall receive an annual salary not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars. The salaries of said stenographers shall be paid in monthly installments, on warrants approved by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. The clerk of the Supreme Court shall perform the duties of clerk of said Commission of Appeals, and no extra fees shall be allowed the clerk of the Supreme Court, or his deputy, for services rendered said Commission save and except an additional compensation of fifteen hundred dollars per annum for such services, in addition to the compensation now allowed him by law, to be paid out of the fees of his office. [Id., § 10.]

Art. 1579k. Seal; records.—Said Commission of Appeals shall have a seal, being a star with five points and the words, “Commission of Appeals of the State of Texas” around the same. Regular dockets and minutes of all proceedings by or before said Commission of Appeals shall be kept, and the records and proceedings of courts of record, and all cases shall be docketed in the order in which they are transferred or referred by the Supreme Court. [Id., § 11.]
Art. 1579l. Writs and process; contempt.—Said Commission of Appeals shall have the right to issue writs of certiorari to perfect the record, and such process as the Supreme Court might issue to make parties, and shall have the power to punish for contempt. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 1579m. Practice and procedure.—All laws and rules regulating practice and procedure in the Supreme Court shall be of force in the practice and proceedings of said Commission of Appeals so far as the same are applicable, and all applications for rehearing in cases referred to said Commission of Appeals shall be made before and determined by the Commission of Appeals. [Id., § 13.]

Sec. 14 makes an appropriation. Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 34, sec. 1, also makes an appropriation.

Rehearing.—Since the Commission of Appeals acts only in an advisory capacity as to motions for rehearing, and such a motion must also be considered by the Supreme Court, oral arguments will not be heard by the Commission on rehearing, except in exceptional cases, where the motion raises a doubt in the minds of the members of the Commission as to the correctness of the original decision by them. First Nat. Bank v. Rush (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 931.

Art. 1579n. To cease, when.—The term for which the Commission of Appeals created hereby shall exist shall be from the first Monday in October, 1918, until the last Saturday in June, 1923. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 81, § 15; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 34, § 1 (§ 15); Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 119, § 1 (§ 15).]
TITLE 32

COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS

Chapter 1

JUDGES OF THE COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS

Article 1584. [1021] Disqualification of judges.

Validity of statute.—This article, does not conflict with Const. art. 5, § 11, providing for such certification when "any member" is disqualified, as under the liberal provisions of art. 5, § 6, the legislature is permitted to confer such jurisdiction on the court as it may deem best: and the fact, therefore, that one member is alone disqualified to try a case, does not prevent the other members from proceeding therewith. Naile v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 21 S. W. 375.

Disqualification in general.—That two of justices of this court were connected with appellant’s codefendant in local capacity held not to disqualify them. Gulf Coast Transp. Co. v. Standard Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 397 S. W. 874.

In insurance company’s suit on premium note assigned to it by another insurance company, Chief Justice of Court of Civil Appeals, holder of policies in assignor company, and whose son-in-law was its vice president and acting manager, and had discussed the transaction in his presence, was disqualified to sit in the case. California State Life Ins. Co. v. Kring (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 372.

A judge, who is a resident of a city and a taxpayer, although interested in a suit brought by certain persons in behalf of the taxpayers of the city as a class, is not a "party" to the suit, so as to be disqualified to hear it. City of Dallas v. Armour & Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 222.

Interest as taxpayer.—On appeal to the Court of Civil Appeals in condemnation proceedings instituted by a county, a judge who owns land in such county is not interested in the question to be determined within the meaning of this article. Herf v. James, 86 Tex. 230, 24 S. W. 396.

Judges, who are taxpayers of a city, although interested in a suit brought in behalf of the taxpayers of such city as a class to enjoin a proposed expenditure of the public funds and donation of land, they are not so immediately and directly "interested" as to be disqualified to try and hear the suit, under Const. art. 5, § 11, and this article. City of Dallas v. Armour & Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 222.

Chapter 2

TERMS OF THE COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS

Article 1588. [995] Quorum, what, and court adjourned, when.

Validity of statute.—This article is valid, though Const. art. 5, § 6, as amended in 1893, authorizing the establishment of such courts, does not prescribe the number requisite to constitute a quorum. City of Austin v. Naile, 85 Tex. 520, 22 S. W. 668.
CHAPTER THREE

JURISDICTION OF THE COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS

Art. 1589. Jurisdiction defined.

1589. Jurisdiction defined. Art. 1582. Issue writs of mandamus, etc.

Article 1589. [996] Jurisdiction defined.

Jurisdiction in general.—A contempt proceeding, criminal in its nature, cannot be reviewed by the Court of Civil Appeals. Beverly v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 975.

Where it appears that the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals over an appeal attached prior to the suing out of writ of error in the Supreme Court by appellee who might have presented them in the Court of Civil Appeals, the Court of Civil Appeals has jurisdiction, and the writ of error in the Supreme Court will be dismissed, since, where two courts have concurrent jurisdiction, that which first acquires jurisdiction will retain it. Ward v. Scarborough (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1167.

Appeals from county courts—Amount in controversy.—The court of civil appeals can take cognizance of an appeal from a county court only when the judgment appealed from shall exceed $100, exclusive of interest and costs, though the case was heard in the county court on appeal from a justice’s court without a trial de novo. (Williams v. Sima (Tex. App.) 18 S. W. 785, disapproved. Fevito v. Rodgers, 62 Tex. 531, explained.) Gulf C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Rodgers (Civ. App.) 22 S. W. 182.

Where plaintiff alleged he had paid $42.90, a sum of money, and that defendant was asserting an illegal claim for $25, the principal debt, and prayed for judgment for $41.60, and for cancellation of the debt, the amount was insufficient to give the Court of Civil Appeals jurisdiction. Watson v. Evans (Civ. App.) 186 S. W. 1170.

Justice court judgment being less than $100, and plaintiff’s amended petition claiming a larger sum on appeal to county court was insufficient to state cause of action, jurisdiction of county court was final. Gibson v. St. Anthony Hotel (Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 412.

Accrued interest on judgment sued upon is “interest” within subsec. 3, and cannot be included to make jurisdictional amount. Midland Casualty Co. v. Arnott (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 589.

Although garnishment proceeding under Rev. St. 1911, art. 271, is ancillary to main action, yet in view of arts. 274, 295, 299, it is suit between judgment creditor and garnishee, in which the “amount in controversy” affecting jurisdiction is “the amount of plaintiff’s judgment, with interest and costs,” and where plaintiff’s judgment is less than, but with interest the judgment exceeds, $100, this article does not apply. Panola County Nat. Bank v. Gross (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 187.

Where plaintiff sued in justice court for damages for negligent death on a certain date of a horse valued at $100, not asking for interest, the interest is not in controversy so that the Court of Civil Appeals is without jurisdiction. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Lyon (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 228.

In suit by a railroad’s employé for a month’s wages of $84.74, wherein the railroad cited in an assignee of plaintiff’s wages, who filed cross-bill seeking to recover, not only the month’s wages sued for by plaintiff, but the balance of $112.25 claimed by him under plaintiff’s assignment, $142.90 was the amount in controversy, and the Court of Civil Appeals has jurisdiction of the appeal. McKeeley v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 175.

Where in justice court defendant itemized the two amounts sued for as $90 and an unpaid balance of $15.60 for extra work, but stated the total amount due as $98.84, and defendant in his cross-action asked for judgment for $180 and costs, the amount in controversy brings the case within the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals. Mackay Telegraph-Cable Co. v. Proctor (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 647.

The question of jurisdiction of Court of Civil Appeals in case originating in justice court is fixed by the amount involved in the justice court. Id.

The Court of Civil Appeals has appellate jurisdiction over a real estate commission claim of $100 and interest, since interest is recoverable as damages, and not strictly as interest. Walker v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 715.

In the trial of a cause appealed from the justice to the county court, where notes introduced show that defendant was indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $280, but no suit was brought on these notes, and no judgment asked or rendered thereon, their only purpose in evidence being under the pleadings to show that appellant was indebted to appellee in an amount of $50 or less, for which plaintiff asked and secured judgment, the real amount involved was but $50. Robson v. McKinney (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 314.

The appellate court has no jurisdiction of an appeal from the county court in a suit originating in justice court for $80 damages and interest; interest being recoverable only for detention of money, and not as a distinct element of damages. Rhone v. Russell (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1113.

Where plaintiff sued out writ of garnishment after obtaining a judgment against defendant in the justice court, and where the only issue on appeal to the county court was the ownership of an amount less than $100 which was in the hands of the garnishee, as between the defendant and inter­venor claiming ownership, the “amount

Construction in general.—The supreme court, while not empowered to revise the conclusions of fact of the court of appeals, may consider the evidence, in rendering its decision. Clarendon Land, Investment Agency Co. v. McClelland, 86 Tex. 179, 23 S. W. 1100, 22 L. R. A. 165.

Art. 1620 does not apply to any cases in which, by this article, exclusive jurisdiction is conferred on the court of civil appeals. Herf v. James, 86 Tex. 229, 24 S. W. 336.

An action for divorce, in which one judge of the Court of Civil Appeals dissented from the opinion that the evidence was insufficient to warrant the decree for plaintiff, will not be certified to the Supreme Court, in view of this article, arts. 1521, and 1591, making it conclusive on law and fact in cases of divorce, especially when it would result in great delay in the determination of the case to certify it. McCrary v. McCrary (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 137.

Judgment conclusive on facts.—Excessiveness of verdict is ordinarily a question of fact, and the determination of the Court of Civil Appeals is final. Cotton v. Cooper (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 135.

Whether there is any evidence to support a jury's finding or verdict is purely a question of law, but where there is some evidence in support thereof, the question whether or not it is sufficient in the estimation of the trial court or of the Court of Civil Appeals to support a finding or verdict, is a question of fact, and not one of law, and the decision of the Court of Civil Appeals thereon is final, and not subject to review, in view of amended Const. art. 5, § 6, and this article. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Abilon, 110 Tex. 235, 218 S. W. 1030.

Art. 1591. [996] Same.

See Penn v. Bristoc County (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 990; Perry v. Greer, 110 Tex. 549, 221 S. W. 931; Braumiller v. Burke (Sup.) 230 S. W. 400.

Cited. In re Subdivision Six of Supreme Court Jurisdiction Act of 1917 (Sup.) 201 S. W. 290.

Construction in general.—Art. 1620 does not apply to any cases in which, by this article, exclusive jurisdiction is conferred on the court of civil appeals. Herf v. James, 86 Tex. 229, 24 S. W. 336.

Whether a case is one of boundary wherein the judgment of a Court of Civil Appeals is final, depends on the way in which it developed before the trial court, and not on the allegations of the parties and their pleadings alone. Braumiller v. Burke (Sup.) 230 S. W. 400.

The determination of whether the "case," which means suits, causes, or actions, is one in which the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals is final, should depend on the case made by the pleadings of the parties on which they went to trial, not on the questions controverted, at the trial; otherwise, in the same case on the same pleadings, the finality of the judgment rendered on appeal after different trials would depend on the evidence introduced at the particular trial. Braumiller v. Burke (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 997.

Cases within county court's jurisdiction.—The decision of the Court of Civil Appeals in a garnishment proceeding based on a judgment is final, where the amount in controversy in the original suit was within the jurisdiction of the county court, and the case does not fall within any of the exceptions provided in this article. Warren Hardware Co. v. Dodson, 110 Tex. 576, 222 S. W. 157, dismissing writ of error (Civ. App.) Dodson v. Warren Hardware Co., 162 S. W. 952.

On appeal from the judgment in an action to recover property of the value of $250 or its value, the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals is final, and the Supreme Court cannot review the same on error. Clay v. Marmar (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 84.

Where county court under the Constitution and but for art. 4653 would have had original jurisdiction of an action in which the judgment was rendered and jurisdiction of action to enjoin collection of such judgment, a judgment of Court of Civil Appeals upon appeal from district court in the injunction suit was final. Walker Grain Co. v. Ft. Worth Grain & Elevator Co. (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 398.

Subdivision 1 applies to adjunct or ancillary proceedings as well as to the original action.

Where a cause was appealed from a county court, the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals is conclusive upon questions of law or fact, except in probate matters and cases involving the revenue laws of the state, of the validity of a statute and questions presented, which are not within those exceptions, are not subject to review by the Supreme Court. Freeman v. W. B. Walker & Sons (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 637.

In a county court case, the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals is final, unless the Supreme Court has jurisdiction under art. 1625, because the decision of the Court of Civil Appeals is in conflict with the decision of the Supreme Court or a decision of another Court of Civil Appeals. First Texas State Ins. Co. v. Hightower, 110 Tex. 52, 214 S. W. 299.

While suit against a railroad for $616.06 was filed in the district court, it was cognizable by the county court, and the Supreme Court is without jurisdiction to review 338.

Where judgments of the Courts of Civil Appeals are made final by this article, as judgments in cases within the jurisdiction of the county courts, no writ of error lies to the Supreme Court under art. 1521. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Gregory (Sup.) 263 S. W. 1073.

Cases of boundary.—A suit for the conversion of timber on a tract of land, the boundaries to which were in dispute, is not a case of boundary within which the Court of Appeals has final jurisdiction, where the right to damages for the alleged conversion did not depend wholly upon the location of the boundary line, but upon the determination of the boundary in the boundary of the entire estate. West Lumber Co. v. Goodrich (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 183, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Goodrich v. West Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 182 S. W. 241.

Where a suit in trespass to try title to determine a boundary was joined with a cause of action for conversion of timber on the tract in controversy, the entire cause was not a case of boundary, and the Supreme Court has jurisdiction of an appeal therein, if the amount in controversy is sufficient. id.

Where the decision of an action in which plaintiff sought to recover land and to restrain interference with the possession thereof depended solely upon the location of a disputed boundary line, it was a "case of boundary" in which the decision of the Court of Civil Appeals is final. Maxfield v. E. C. Sterling & Sons, 110 Tex. 212, 217 S. W. 937.

Suit wherein plaintiff alleged he was the owner and in possession of a survey, describing it, and alleged that defendants wrongfully entered on and took possession of a part of the land consisting of a strip of about 10 acres of the east side, with prayer for judgment for possession of the strip and for damages, held a "case of boundary." Braumiller v. Burke (Sup.) 230 S. W. 400.

Although the Supreme Court might determine boundary disputes where necessary on other matters properly appealed in an action of trespass to try title, yet where the whole case does not depend upon the determination of the boundary controversies, the finality of the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals as to them should be respected. Kenedy Pasture Co. v. State (Sup.) 231 S. W. 683.

Upon error to review an action in trespass to try title, where the trial court's judgment on boundary disputes involved questions essentially of fact supported by evidence, the findings of the trial court and the Court of Civil Appeals are conclusive on the Supreme Court. id.

Where there was conflicting evidence as to the eastern boundary of certain property, and the issue was submitted to the jury, which found for the interveners, and the Court of Civil Appeals, in reviewing the evidence, found that it sustained the verdict, an assignment of error raising that issue should be overruled. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Choate (Com. App.) 232 S. W. 285.

An action to recover possession of land, claimed by plaintiff and which was in the possession of the defendants, and to recover substantial damages for the removal of timber and gravel therefrom by defendants, is not a boundary case, in which the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals is final, though plaintiff's right to recover depended upon the determination of the true location of the boundary line between his land and that claimed by two of the three defendants. Braumiller v. Burke (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 907.

Cases of divorce.—An action for divorce, in which one judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals disapproved the opinion that the evidence was insufficient to warrant the decree for plaintiff, will not be reversed or overruled by the Supreme Court, in view of arts. 1521, 1526, and this article, especially when it would result in great delay in the determination of the case to certify it. McCravy v. McCravy (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 157.

Contested elections.—Decision of Court of Civil Appeals affirming decision of trial court decreeing that relator recover the office of mayor is final. Pease v. State (Com. App.) 268 S. W. 192.

Art. 1592. [997] May issue writs of mandamus, etc.

Writs in aid of jurisdiction in general.—Since Court of Civil Appeals, under art. 3156, has no appellate jurisdiction of election contest for precinct office, such court has no power to issue an injunction restraining officers from placing respondent's name on official ballot in a primary election contest pending in district court, in view of this article. Pollard v. Speer (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 620.

Where it is necessary to issue a writ of injunction to maintain the status quo or to preserve the corpus of the subject-matter of the litigation pending appeal, the writ is in aid of the jurisdiction of the appellate court in which the appeal is pending. Ford v. State (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 490.

Under arts. 3639, 4050, 4080, 4083, and 4297, until a judgment of the district court, affirmed by the Court of Civil Appeals, appointing a guardian, has been certified to the clerk of the county court, filed, recorded, and docketed, and orders made by that court fixing the amount of the bond, approving the bond, appointing appraisers, and directing the issuance of letters of guardianship, the Court of Civil Appeals has jurisdiction, by proper process under this article, to require the execution of the judgment affirmed by it. Williams v. Foster (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 896.
Prohibition.—Prohibition will not issue to prevent lower court from entertaining suit to set aside, for fraud and perjury, judgment recovered by relator, on ground that petition in suit to set aside not state cause of action. State v. Stark (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 371.

Injunction.—Courts of Civil Appeals in Texas have no authority to issue original writs of injunction, but authority is conferred upon them by this article, to issue such writs where they may be necessary to enforce their jurisdiction. Ford v. State (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 490.

Court of Civil Appeals has jurisdiction of subject-matter of state's suit to restrain defendant from selling intoxicants at retail, that is, prohibition of the sale of intoxicants, despite adoption of prohibition amendment to Constitution of United States; amendment not being a complete law, and Congress having enacted no law for its enforcement, while it gives states concurrent power. Id.

Where defendants appealed merely by giving a cost bond, and plaintiff commenced garnishment proceedings, the Court of Civil Appeals will not issue writs of injunction and mandamus to restrain enforcement of the garnishment judgment, for such writs will only be issued to enforce its jurisdiction, and the garnishee not having appealed from the judgment in garnishment, and not being a party to the original suit, the Court of Civil Appeals’ jurisdiction is not involved. In such case defendants, if aggrieved by the garnishment judgment, whether it be final or interlocutory, have appropriate remedies in the trial court, and are not entitled to injunction or mandamus, issued by the Court of Civil Appeals; those writs being merely to protect its jurisdiction. Dur­ham v. Serevener (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 232.

Though the purchaser, against whom judgment had been rendered on vendor's lien notes, and who had appealed therefrom, with cost bond only, was financially unable to give a supersedeas bond, that fact does not authorize the Court of Civil Appeals to grant an injunction against the execution of the judgment pending the appeal. Spark v. Lasater (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 346.

Certiorari to bring up or correct record.—Where assignments have been lost or destroyed, and have been substituted for, as provided by Rev. St. 1911, arts. 215-2163, inclusive, the transcript on appeal can be perfected by certiorari. Hassell v. Rose (Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 845.

Under rules 8 and 11 of the Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xi), a motion by appellee to correct record made more than 90 days after filing of the transcript, was too late. Rhodes v. Coats (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 470.

In a proper case motions by appellee for certiorari to perfect record, made more than 30 days after the filing of the transcript, may be entertained, notwithstanding the Court of Civil Appeals Rules 8 and 11 (142 S. W. xi), but it will not be done where fundamental error is presented in the brief of appellant. Id.

Facts touching jurisdiction.—Court of Civil Appeals can take affidavits in aid of jur­isdiction, but can know whether county court had jurisdiction of appeal from jus­tice court only from record sent up from justice court. Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Independent Fruit Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 594.

Issue of whether later filing of bills of exceptions was due to appel­lee's fault, presented for the first time on appeal by affidavits, cannot be entertained. Elledge v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 207.

Assignment that judgment is not final, because not disposing of certain plaintiffs, would not be sustained, where appellants showed by affidavit that parties named in judgment were same parties as such plaintiffs, there being no contrary showing. Texas & P. Ry. v. Brothman Bros. Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 901.

Where court adjourned March 31st and a new term began April 2d, a motion for appeal and an affidavit in lieu of bond filed April 7th was timely under art. 2084, although the order granting the appeal was not entered until May 5th; the Court of Civil Appeals had no power to act under this article, to prevent matters of fact touching its jurisdic­tion. Phillips v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 77.

If the issue made on the question of settlement by the parties affected the jurisdic­tion of the Court of Civil Appeals it could consider, to determine the fact of jurisdic­tion only, the affidavits presented by appellant in opposition to appellee’s motion to affirm on certificate. Hedrick v. Matthews (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 424.

While Courts of Civil Appeals have power on affidavit or otherwise as thought proper to ascertain such matters of fact as may be necessary to proper exercise of their jurisdiction, the power is restricted to matters not appearing of record, and does not admit of facts contradicting the record. Williams v. Knight Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 755.

Extent of power conferred.—Court of Civil Appeals cannot issue writ of mandamus to district court to proceed with trial of cause pursuant to law, unless its action in continuing cause amounts to a refusal so to proceed. Matagorda Canal Co. v. Styles (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 562.

The Court of Civil Appeals may, by mandamus, compel a judge of the district court to proceed to trial and judgment in a cause “agreeable to the principles and

Sec. 2 repeals all laws in conflict. The act took effect 90 days after July 22, 1919, date of adjournment.

CHAPTER SIX

PROCEEDINGS IN CASES IN THE COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS

Article 1607. [1014] Case, how brought before the court for trial.

Errors that can be reviewed—in general.—Under this article, and article 1971, giving of peremptory instruction cannot be reviewed without objection if its propriety is doubtful, and a critical examination of the evidence is necessary. Hendrick v. Blount-Decker Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 171.

Appeal will be dismissed on the court's own motion, where absence of jurisdictional requirements appear on face of the record, though called to the court's attention by motion to dismiss, which need not be entertained. Horn v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 1101.

Where briefs have not been filed by any of the parties on appeal, the reviewing court can consider only fundamental errors. Holguin v. Woodlawn Real Estate & Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 899.
The jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals is limited to the review of error assigned in the manner prescribed by law and error of law apparent on the face of the record. Dimino v. Meador (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 294.

Reference to transcript, etc.—As statement of undisputed facts made by counsel for appellant is unchallenged, and facts therein stated are in accord with record, court on appeal may adopt statement as its finding of fact. Celaya v. City of Brownsville (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 192.

Errors apparent on face of record.—A judgment unsupported by pleadings is an error of law apparent from record's face, which Court of Civil Appeals will correct on its own motion. Zimmerman Land & Irrigation Co. v. Rooney Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 201.

Record disclosing that decree was void, because describing different tract of land than that sued for, shows fundamental error, reviewable for first time on appeal. Frick v. Giddings (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 230.

Error, to be reviewable without an assignment, where it must be discovered by an examination of the evidence, must be open and easily discovered by inspection. Hendrick v. Blount-Decker Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 171.

Error that judgment by default was without support of testimony was not "apparent on face of record," which it was duty of Court of Civil Appeals, to notice and correct without reference to whether validity of judgment was challenged below. Brown v. Greenspun (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 174.

Where record discloses error apparent on its face, judgment must be reversed and judgment rendered in appellant's favor, though assignments cannot be sustained. Ixvias v. Teal (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1166.

In action to recover automobile, in alternative for purchase price, with foreclosure of lien, plaintiff having sued out writ of sequestration and car having been replevied later by defendant, failure of verdict and judgment for plaintiff against defendant and sureties on replevin bond to find value of car held error apparent on face of record requiring reversal, though not raised in motion for new trial. Reeves v. Avina (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 729.

An error discovered by close scrutiny of the entire evidence is not "apparent," and there is no error of law where there is any evidence whatever to sustain a judgment. Stewart v. McLainster (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 704.

Where the pleadings are sufficient to sustain judgment, and the findings of the jury also sustain the judgment, there is no error of law apparent upon the face of the record, and the judgment, in the absence of a motion for new trial and other requisites for an appeal, cannot be assailed. Id.

An error which can be ascertained only by looking into the record and considering the evidence may not be considered without an assignment of error, as it is not an "error apparent upon the face of the record," which means that the error can be found upon looking on the face of the record, the fact pointed out showing good ground for the court to interfere. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Harises (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 307.

Where appellant not only did not file a motion for a new trial, but also failed to file assignments of error in the trial court as required by Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 1612, 2113, appellant was not entitled to complain of the judgment except for error "in law apparent on the face of the record," under this article. Elina Accident & Liability Co. v. Trustees of First Christian Church of Paris (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 357.

Whether a complaint that specified finding is without evidence to support it, is well founded or not, requires a careful reading of the entire statement of facts, and, where the existence of error is discoverable only in that way, it is not error "apparent on the face of the record" within the meaning of this article. Id.

See notes 10 and 11 under art. 1612, in 1914 edition and 1918 Supplement.

Fundamental errors.—Error in rendering judgment unsupported by evidence in that it was uncontroversed that insurance policy sued on was not effective until after the loss, held fundamental. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Patrick (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1650.

A judgment not conforming to the pleadings or based on insufficient pleadings is fundamentally erroneous, and should be revised, though there is no assignment. Hendrick v. Blount-Decker Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 171.

Where it cannot be said that answer discloses no defense, fundamental error is not apparent from pleadings, trial having resulted in verdict for defendant. Old Faithful Oil Co. v. McGiveran (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 219.

Failure of the court to find the value of each item in a judgment in replevin is not fundamental error requiring reversal. Gonzales v. Flores (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 551.

While the suggestion that a pleading is not good as against a general demurrer raises a question of fundamental error, the rule does not apply to objections raised by special exception. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1080.

In suit to foreclose chattel mortgage, failure to allege the value of the property mortgaged to secure the debt is fundamental error apparent of record, requiring reversal, whether or not there was an exception, plea, or other objection to the petition on that ground in the court below. People's Ice Co. v. Pharris (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 66.

No action of the court can be said to be fundamental error if to discover the alleged error an examination of the entire statement of facts must be made. Barkley v. Gibbons (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 161.

In an election contest, where court, by consent of both sides, heard and sustained, there was no appeal. Barker v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 543.

A fundamental error is one apparent upon the face of the record, and affidavits should not be considered. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 696.

Even were arts. 1970-1974, 2061, relating to the filing of objections and exceptions to giving and refusing of charges applicable when case is submitted on special issues, failure to object is an open question not waived by submission without objection, having been made ground of motion for new trial. Ab- lon v. Electric Express & Baggage Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 717.

Where defendant, by general demurrer and denial, merely joined issue on the facts, presenting in the Court of Civil Appeals for the first time question of the sufficiency of the pleadings, his action was permissible if the pleadings presented only one specific cause of action, and the judgment was founded on a fundamentally different one. Celli v. Sanderson (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 179.

When averment of complaint was sufficient to admit certain necessary evidence, which, in fact, was admitted on trial without exception to the pleading or objection to the evidence, objection to the sufficiency of the complaint is not one going to foundations of action, and comes too late in Court of Civil Appeals.

On appellee's plea for affirmance of judgment, Court of Civil Appeals is required to search the record for fundamental error, and a ruling sustaining exceptions to a petition and dismissing action, which in effect is a ruling that petition states no cause of action, if error, is fundamental error. Schulz v. Davis (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 634.

To base judgment in a conversion suit on the highest market price of the property converted is fundamental error, if such market value is not the proper measure of damages. Early-Foster Co. v. Mid-Tex Oil Mills (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 224.

Though complaint, not objected to, alleges facts showing that plaintiff should have sued in equity, and not on the law, as is done, there is no fundamental error; the evidence in the record not sustaining the allegations. Carver v. Caldwell (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 555.

Where defendants sufficiently presented the record in their briefs to make it apparent that it was error to peremptorily instruct a verdict for plaintiff, the matter may be reviewed as fundamentally erroneous. Hurstland & Water Co. v. Hous- ton Motor Car Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 145.

There was no motion for new trial in trial court, there can be no assignments of error except those based on fundamental error. Stewart v. McAllister (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 704.

Discrepancies between original and amended petitions will not be considered as fundamental error on appeal, where attention of trial court was not called thereto by defendants in their second amended original answer. Jones v. Fink (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 777.

A decree and proceedings in partition held not to show fundamental error, re- viewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts on the theory that the court in its first decree judicially determined that the land was susceptible of partition, and thereof in conformity to the report of commissioners ordered it sold, and thus violated art. 6101. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 242.

Though petition for partition alleged that one of the defendants was a minor without legal guardian, held that, though the record showed no appointment of a guardian ad litem, etc., for such defendant, no fundamental error appeared reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts, where the judgment of partition rendered two years later required another defendant, a minor, appeared by guardian ad litem and all of the other defendants by attorney. Id.

Where the jury's findings showed that one who had celebrated an invalid ceremonial marriage with deceased received more in rents out of his personal property than she had paid in securing title to certain lands in which she was given no share, held, that final decree of partition did not disclose fundamental error in her favor, reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts. Id.

In suit by lessor and sublessor of pasture lands, direction of verdict for plaintiffs, in view of testimony of a defendant, held not patently erroneous on an assignment of fundamental error in relation to the sublesses' plea that their cattle did not do well on the lands described in the sublease, and that the sublessor refused to furnish other lands as he had agreed to do. Russell v. Old River Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 705.

Where testimony admitted is wholly irrelevant and immaterial to any issue in the case and inadmissible upon any theory, the court's action in admitting it will be re- viewed notwithstanding absence of objection on a specific ground. Jones v. Texas Electric Ry. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 749.

Where the record showed that all exceptions were waived, appellant must base his attacks on a judgment on the proposition that the petition states no cause of action, and that it was fundamental error to render a judgment based upon it. Texas Auto Supply Co. v. Magnolia Petroleum Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 629.

By bill of exceptions the defendant objected to the charge, not made and presented to the court before the charge was read to the jury, are waived, and may not be considered on appeal to have constituted fundamental error. Myatt v. Agee (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 935.

In an action involving thousands of dollars, an error in calculation amounting to $145 will not be considered on appeal, where complaint is made there for the first time, even though the doctrine of fundamental error is applied. Koger v. Clark (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 484.
If lease set out in hue verb in petition for cancellation was void on its face for want of consideration, it was fundamental error apparent on record on the part of the court to sustain a general exception to the petition. Price v. Biggs (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 236.

In determining the scope of review, a "fundamental error" is one which does not require an examination and weighing of the evidence. First Nat. Bank v. Crespi & Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 760.

The petition by its allegations affirmatively showing the infirmity of the demand asserted, and therefore being subject to a general demurrer, a question of fundamental error, necessitating reversal, is presented. Where defendant filed no answer, offered no evidence, and has brought up no bills of exception, statement of fact, nor conclusions of fact and law. Martin v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 653.

Where the petition sought cancellation of an oil lease for fraud and failure of consideration with respect to the agreement to drill a well within six months, the omission of an express allegation that defendants failed to begin drilling within the time agreed is not fundamental error, and is cured by findings of the court to that effect. Hamilton County Development Co. v. Sullivan (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 116.

In an action by two members of a firm against a third for an accounting as to salaries paid to such third member under duress, evidence as to a threat made not in the exact words alleged in the pleading held admissible in absence of exception or objection, and a judgment entered thereon was not fundamental error. Shelton v. Trigg (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 761.

---Jurisdictional questions.---In the absence of any assignment, the court must ascertain the court's jurisdiction and revise the judgment, if rendered without jurisdiction, such a judgment being fundamentally erroneous. Hendrick v. Blount-Decker Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 171.

It is the duty of appellate courts to pass upon the jurisdiction of the trial court to render the judgment, whether the question is raised or not. Werner v. Needham (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 213.

Art. 1608. [1015] Transcript filed, when.

See Early-Foster Co. v. Mid-Tex Mills (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 1117.

Time for filing transcript—Statement of facts.---Document delivered to clerk of court on appeal will not be considered as a statement of facts, where not filed by plaintiff in error in the court below within 90 days from the date the citation in error was served, as required by this article and art. 2363. Billingsley v. Texas Midland R. R. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 498.

Under this article, where the transcript was filed as required, a statement of facts filed before the expiration of the time for filing the transcript was filed in time, though not presented to opposing counsel or to the court within 180 days after the court's adjournment. Early-Foster Co. v. Mid-Tex Mills (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 1117.

Defects in bond in general.---The court of civil appeals will permit a new bond to be filed in place of one which is defective in failing to specify that appellant shall pay all costs "which may accrue in the court of civil appeals and the supreme court." Corley v. Renz (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 1139.

Dismissal because of defective bond.---Where the motion to dismiss the appeal because of a defective bond is entered at the proper time to entitle the appellant to file a new bond, the same should be presented before the hearing of the motion. Texas Mexican Ry. Co. v. Cuhill (Civ. App.) 26 S. W. 45.

Grounds for affirmance in general.---Where 90 days were allowed to file statement of facts and bills of exception, and neither have been presented to the appellate court more than 6 months later, and no good reason for failure is offered, a motion to affirm will be granted. Brophy v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 415.

The appellee is not entitled to affirmance on certificate merely because the statement of facts is stricken from the record, since the only ground upon which there may be an affirmance on certificate is that specified in the statute. Texas Portland Cement Co. v. Lumpoff (Civ. App.) 284 S. W. 366.

Where the facts do not bring the case within the letter of the statute, which provides for an affirmance on certificate "in case the appellant or plaintiff in error shall fail to file a transcript of the record," etc., motion for affirmance on certificate will be denied. Loring v. Keith (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1114.

Excuses for failure to file transcript.---Upon a motion for affirmance of judgment for failure to file statement of facts within required time, that court reporter failed to transcribe testimony in form required by art. 1924, did not excuse appellant, where neither attempt to revise the transcript of the record nor to make statement of facts from memory under article 2068 was made. Pruitt v. Blesi (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 714.

Jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals having attached when appellant filed his supersedeas bond with the clerk of the county court, and the issues tried below being pending, the court will not consider the question whether there has been an agreement 344 to settle between the parties, though appellant in his affidavits in opposition to appeal's motion to affirm on certificate states facts tending to show such an agreement. Hedrick v. Matthews (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 424.

Time for filing certificate and motion.—Where appeal bond was filed March 8th, motion to affirm on certificate, filed July 23d, after expiration of term to which appeal was returnable, must be denied. Fontana v. T. S. Reed Grocery Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 335.

Effect of subsequent writ of error.—Where the appellant, after perfecting his appeal by filing and having approved a bond, neglects to file transcript, the appellee may during the term of court to which the appeal is taken have the case affirmed on certificate, even though the appellant has by writ of error required the proceeding to the appellate court and filed his transcript within the prescribed time. Texas Portland Cement Co. v. Lumparoff (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 366.

Judgment on certificate.—Where, on motion in Court of Civil Appeals to affirm on certificate, appeal bond executed with sureties accompanies certificate, cause being affirmed to parties, will be also affirmed against sureties. Burton v. Sells (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 357.

Art. 1612. Assignments of error; requisites of.

1. Construction and operation of statute in general.—This article pertains to civil cases only. Sessions v. State, 81 Civ. R. 424, 197 S. W. 718.

The statute provides that an assignment shall be sufficient which directs attention to the error complained of, the rule of the Supreme Court, providing that assignments shall be copied into the brief, should always be compiled with. Olguin v. Apodaca (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 166.

This article is to be liberally construed. Morrison v. Neely (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 728.

2. Necessity for assignment of errors.—In general.—The Court of Civil Appeals cannot take cognizance of an error not properly assigned, unless it be an error of law apparent on the face of the record, or a fundamental error. Nations v. Miller (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 742; Ogg v. Lord (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 503; Lewis v. Geddes (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 244.

Where assignments had been lost or destroyed, it was incumbent on appellant to substitute them as provided by arts. 2457-2463, inclusive. Hassell v. Rose (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 845.

Where appellant not only did not file a motion for a new trial, but also failed to file assignments of error in the trial court, appellant was not entitled to complain of the judgment, except for error "in law apparent on the face of the record," under article 1607. Etna Accident & Liability Co. v. Trustees of First Christian Church of Paris (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 537.

That a lease is unilateral and subject to revocation for reasons stated in petition cannot be raised on appeal when there were no assignments of this nature filed in the court below. Tatum v. Fulton (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1088.

Appellate courts in considering assignments of error, are confined to the reasons assigned and considerations themselves or in the germane propositions thereunder. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

Where the trial is before the court, as well as where it is before the jury, the assignments of error presented in the brief must have been incorporated in the record either as formal assignments or in the motion for a new trial under this article, and Courts of Civil Appeals Rules 23 and 29 (142 S. W. xii) McFarland v. Burk Burnett-Harris Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 571.

A matter not assigned as error cannot be reviewed. Royal Neighbors of America v. Pletcher (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 476.

5. Instructions.—One who asked a special instruction on contributory negligence, which would cure the omission of such issue from a paragraph of the charge, but did not assign error for the failure to give it, error of the court in omitting such issue from the charge, was waived. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Crump (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 827.

There being no assignment complaining of refusal to submit a correct instruction of the issue of fraud it is unnecessary for the court on appeal to decide whether the evidence is sufficient to raise such issue. Anders v. California State Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 497.

In an action against several defendants, where evidence was introduced by plaintiff against all of the defendants, but the court ruled that it was not admissible against certain defendants, refusal of the court to submit certain issues raised by such evidence is not ground for reversal as far as the defendants against whom the court ruled the evidence was not admissible are concerned, where there is no assignment of error in the brief bringing up for review the action of the court in ruling on the admissibility of the evidence, although such ruling was excepted to. Croom v. Croom (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 735.
Under art. 1607, and article 1971, as amended by Acts 33d Leg. c. 59, § 3, giving of error must be reviewed without assignment of error if its propriety is doubtful, and a critical examination of the evidence is necessary. Hendrick v. Blount-Decker Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 171.

Error in refusal of instruction, not assigned as error in appellate court, will be deprecated upon appeal. Eearl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 257 S. W. 716.

6. — Verdict, findings, or judgment.—Court's findings, where not challenged will be taken as true on appeal. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Ryan (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 642; Temple Hill Development Co. v. Lindholm (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 984.

A challenge in appellate brief do not challenge the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict, the Court of Civil Appeals is not called upon to do so by the oral argument of the parties on such question when the cause was submitted.

The action of the trial court in refusing to set the verdict aside cannot be reviewed, where not raised by an assignment of error. Gulf, Colo. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clements
(Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 625.

Where plaintiff sought to recover a balance due for cutting and baling hay under a contract whereby defendant was to pay $3 per ton for the first cutting and more for the second, and no special charge that, independent of plaintiff's right to recover for the balance due on the first cutting, he could not recover the amount claimed on the second cutting, was requested, and there was no assignment of error presenting that matter, the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to authorize a recovery for the second cutting was not presented. Cochran v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 253.

Where the findings that the contract of sale in suit was not an illegal future contract are not attacked in any of the assignments, they must be given effect, unless it can be shown that the evidence only appears to have been illegally held, so that the contract would have declared it illegal as a matter of law. Puckett v. Wilson Bros.
Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 642.

The appellate court cannot, in the absence of an assignment of error, review a finding that plaintiff was contributorily negligent as being unsupported by the evidence, such error not being fundamental. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Cook (Civ. App.)
214 S. W. 559.

A finding of fact will not be reviewed on appeal in absence of assignment of error attacking the finding. Lovelady v. County Board of School Trustees (Civ. App.) 214
S. W. 622.

Findings of fact by the trial court not assailed by any assignment of error are to be taken as facts by the Court of Appeals. Hines v. First Guaranty State Bank of Aubrey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 668.

9. Errors reviewable without proper assignment—Jurisdictional questions.—A jurisdictional question must be considered, though assigned as part of an assignment not germane to it. Erwin v. Erwin (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 834.

10. — Errors apparent on face of record.—See art. 1607, and notes.

Where record shows, as to plaintiff in error's assignment that the evidence was insufficient to raise an issue which was submitted to the jury, that there was evidence on the point, and no motion was made to set aside the findings of the jury, or predicated on any action of the court in that connection, the appellate court is not required to go into an exhaustive examination of evidence. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Choate (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 118.

Where no assignment of error or briefs of either party appear in the record, and fundamental errors are not apparent on the record, no judgment of the trial court will be affirmed. Laster v. Lefevre (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 654.

On appeal from a final judgment refusing relief in a suit to enjoin dipping of cattle, based upon the merits of the whole case, in the absence of assignments of error, the court will not consider any error but one of law apparent on the record in view of rule

Where plaintiff refused to go forward with his proof after court had sustained exceptions filed by defendant, and had overruled others in part and sustained them in part, action not reversed on appellate record and judgment of dismissal, even if error, could not be corrected by the Court of Civil Appeals, in absence of an assignment of error complaining of the form of the judgment, such error not being apparent on the face of the record. Munger Oil & Cotton Co. v. Beckham (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 128.

In an action to recover two tracts of land, brought by the children and heirs at law of the first wife of plaintiff's father against his children and heirs of deceased children by two subsequent marriages, where plaintiff's made no claim to one of the tracts, other than that it was the separate property of their mother by virtue of its having been purchased with her separate estate, the holding of the trial court that the tract was the property of the children of the second and third marriages, under a finding of fact that it was more than the value of the two tracts, was not error of law apparent on the face of the record, such as the appellate court would have jurisdiction of without its having been assigned. Roberson v. Hughes (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 734.

11. — Fundamental errors.—See art. 1607, and notes.

If the judgment is not supported by any pleading, its rendition is fundamental error, and it should be set aside on appeal, whether the error is assigned or not. Math-201 S. W. 216; Southwest Texas Oil & Gas Co. v. Boykin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 216.

Any error in ruling on a general demurrer to the petition is fundamental error, which will be considered on appeal, even if the assignment of error is insufficient.

Action of trial court in directing a verdict presents a question of fundamental error, which it is the duty of court of Civil Appeals to consider without any assignments. Pusey v. Munn (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 1124; Rowe v. Colorado & S. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 731; Earhart v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 573.

If persons who were indispensable parties to an effective disposition of the issues were not made parties, though this point is not raised in either court, the appellate court will not consider the error. Bonner v. City of Texarkana (Clv. App.) 227 S. W. 505; Bartlett v. State (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 656; Barmore v. Darragh (Clv. App.) 227 S. W. 522.

Error in sustaining general demurrer to answer was a fundamental error which it was the duty of the court to consider, though ignored by the parties in their briefs. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 478.

Assignments of error, not presented in a motion for a new trial or shown by the transcript, will not be considered, unless they present fundamental error. Hooker v. State (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 481.

In view of evidence, held, that there was no fundamental error apparent on the face of the record, reviewable without proper assignment, in the district court's holding that the board of school trustees acted wrongly in detaching territory from one independent district and adding it to another. Id.

Giving or refusal of peremptory instruction does not raise question of fundamental error. Id.

In the absence of proper assignments, all errors not apparent on the face of the record, except "fundamental errors," are waived, and errors are not fundamental, if it would be necessary to examine the entire statement of facts to decide on their merits. Riggs v. Balemee (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 613.

Error in instructing a special judge in the absence of the conditions for such election provided by Rev. St. 1911, art. 1678, is fundamental, and error need not be assigned. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ready (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1034.

Without proper assignments of error, court can only consider "fundamental error," which is error apparent of record and which lies at base of action. Hassell v. Rose (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 645.

Sustaining demurrer to petition presents fundamental error authorizing review without assignment of error, where judgment recites ruling, exception thereon, and notice of appeal. Pearlstone v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 860.

Insufficiency in judgment in boundary suit, in that it does not settle issue of boundary, is fundamental error necessitating reversal, though not assigned. Main v. Cartwright (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 847.

Though an assignment that a judgment is excessive is too general to require consideration, yet, where a judgment includes 10 per cent. interest without any authority therefor, the error is fundamental. The Homesteaders v. Stapp (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 734.

Assignment of error presenting overruling of defendant appellant's original motion for new trial as error, in that verdict and judgment were not sustained by evidence, on its face invites examination of entire record to determine insufficiency of evidence on each of the elements of fraud specified by plaintiff, and could not present fundamental error calling for reversal after judgment. Coli v. Sanderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 170.

Where a judgment does not conform to the verdict, it presents fundamental error, which the appellate court will review without assignment. Holmes v. Long (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 201.

A fundamental question is to be considered on appeal, regardless of the sufficiency of the assignment of error. McCoy v. Wichita Falls Motor Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 332.

An assignment of error which, with proposition under it, fails to indicate any error of which complaint is made presents a mere abstraction, instead of fundamental error. Falfurrias Mercantile Co. v. Citizens' State Bank (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 585.

A verdict of negligence against one on whom no legal duty rested to use care may be attacked on appeal in absence of assignment of error. Old River Co. v. Barber (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 758.

If exceptions to pleading were special exceptions and not assigned as error in compliance with this article, the appellate court would not be required to consider them, but where they are addressed to the merits and not the sufficiency of the allegations they are general demurrers, the overruling of which presents fundamental error. Richardson v. Terry (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 523.

In an action for delay in transmitting to plaintiff a message announcing the death of his brother, error in that the verdict for $1,120 was excessive held not fundamental so as to be reviewable by the Court of Civil Appeals under rule 29 (142 S. W. xii), without an assignment of error. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 720.

In garnishment proceedings, court's refusal to suspend trial of cause pending outcome of action by judgment debtor to set aside judgment is not fundamental error, and cannot be considered on appeal, in absence of assignment of error. Baras v. Murray Co. (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 673.

In garnishment proceedings to collect judgment, where judgment debtor intervened and moved to quash writ, rendition of judgment against judgment debtor as principal and sureties on repose bond did not show fundamental error, and cannot be considered on appeal, in absence of assignments of error under Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 1612. 1d.

In garnishment proceedings to collect judgment, wherein judgment debtor intervened and moved to quash writ of garnishment for defect in affidavit, court's refusal to sustain motion did not show fundamental error, and cannot be considered on appeal, in absence of assignment of error. 1d.

In garnishment proceedings to collect judgment, wherein judgment debtor intervened and moved to quash writ of garnishment for defect in affidavit, court's refusal to permit jury to pass on issue of fact raised by pleadings of intervenor and affidavit for garnishment did not show fundamental error and cannot be considered on appeal, in absence of assignment of error. 1d.

Where the pleadings did not raise an issue as to the facts but only regarding the proper construction of a contract which was fully set out and as to whether certain pleaded facts avoided defendant bank's defense that its guaranty was void because ultra vires, held, that the decision upon such issues may be reviewed under the doctrine of fundamental error without assignments of error. First Nat. Bank v. Crespi & Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 705.

Appellant rendered on plaintiff's failure to appear will be reversed on plaintiff's appeal therefrom, notwithstanding there was no motion for new trial nor assignment of error filed, since the rendition of such judgment, instead of a dismissal without prejudice for want of prosecution, was fundamental error. Commercial Credit Co. v. Neillson (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 285.

In an action for breach of warranty in the sale of an elevator disposed of on special issues, where the amounts expended by plaintiff in repairing the elevator were allowed as damages, such error was fundamental and may be considered by appellate court under art. 1626, though defendant did not assign same as error. Otis Elevator Co. v. Cook (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 546.

Appellant waived the question of nonjoinder of proper parties by failing to raise it in the lower court. Singham v. Graham (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 105.

A verdict under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665), which awarded deceased's children damages for expected benefits not alleged in the pleadings, nor supported by the evidence constitutes fundamental error, which may be considered, although the assignment of error presented a question of law, and did not complain that there was no evidence supporting the verdict. Hines v. Walker (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 837.

A failure of the record to indicate action on a general demurrer for want of facts does not prevent consideration of the sufficiency of the petition on appeal, since if it states no cause of action, the error would be fundamental. Dingman v. Pahl (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 446.

Appellate court may take cognizance of fundamental error in overruling defendant's motion for a peremptory instruction in an action on an invalid contract, although there was no assignment of the invalidity of the contract as a reason for granting a peremptory instruction. Caddell v. J. R. Watkins Medical Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 226.

The objection that special findings of the jury conflicted, and so did not support the judgment, presents a question of fundamental error which need not be assigned in the motion for new trial to be available on appeal. Kahn v. Cole (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 556.

In a suit to cancel oil and gas leases and recover a deposit made by the lessee to guarantee the performance of the contract, the failure of the petition to state a cause of action for the recovery of the deposit was fundamental error. Huber v. Smith (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 339.

It being the statutory duty of the trial court to render judgment in accordance with the verdict, unless the same be set aside by motion so as to do present a fundamental error which can and should be considered by the Court of Civil Appeals whether properly assigned or not. Stubbsfield v. Jones (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 729.

Where appellants by an independent proposition have called to the attention of the appellate court an issue which the court erred in refusing to submit to the jury, it becomes the duty of such court to review the case on the error thus assigned, regardless of assignments by appellants; the appellants in their brief disclosing all the facts necessary to show that it was fundamental error. Southwestern Settlement & Development Co. v. Village Mills Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 889.

An assignment, "The court committed material error in failing and refusing to give to the jury defendant's special requested peremptory instruction to find for the defendant," did not present fundamental error, so that it could be considered in the absence of an exception, and on failure to present by bill of exceptions, where it would require the court in its consideration to look to the evidence and statement of facts. Priddy v. Chilcote (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 172.

12. Necessity of presenting assignment in motion for new trial.—Where a ground of error in an assignment of error was not embodied in the motion for new trial, it cannot be considered on appeal unless the error is fundamental. McCaskey v. McCall (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 452; Patterson v. Bushong (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 962; Hooker v. State (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 481; Old Faithful Oil Co. v. McDeviner (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 249.

In a case tried prior to Acts 1913, c. 59, (arts. 1954, 1970, 1971, 1973, 1984a, 2061) requiring rulings in the giving or refusing of instructions to be specifically excepted to, it was not necessary that the refusal of a special charge be complained of as a motion for a new trial. Consequently it was not necessary that the assignment of error in relation thereto should refer to the motion. Southern Pac. Co. v. Walters, 221 S. W. 264, 110 Tex. 496, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 157 S. W. 533.

Under court rules 24 and 70 (142 S. W. xii, xxii), rules 1 and 101a (179 S. W. viii, xii), and this article, overruling of a plea of privilege for change of venue cannot be reviewed, where not set up in the motion for new trial. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Wehber (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 519.

An assignment of error which was not raised either in the motion for new trial or in any assignments filed in the trial court, but as copied in the brief is merely a quotation from a bill of exceptions shown in the transcript, cannot be considered. Evans v. Houston Oil Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 665.

An exception to pleading were special exceptions and not assigned as error in compliance with this article, the appellate court would not be required to consider them. Richardson v. Terry (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 523.

An assignment of error that the verdict is contrary to a great preponderance of the evidence, filed after the motion for new trial was overruled, cannot be considered, since it could have been presented in the motion for new trial Baker v. Williams (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 986.

Where no motion for new trial was filed, only questions going to the foundation of the action or apparent of record will be considered on appeal, and, in the absence of any such questions, none attempted to be presented in appellant's brief will be considered. Rountree v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 715.

An assignment of error not complained of in motion for new trial will not be considered on appeal. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 716.

Under Rule 101a (159 S. W. vii), governing the trial causes in the district court, which provides that in all cases in which a motion for new trial is filed the assignments contained in the motion shall constitute the assignments of error on appeal, the assignments specified shall be waived, the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the judgment cannot be reviewed where it was not presented by the motion for new trial original or amended, but was attempted to be presented by an independent assignment of errors filed after the overruling of the motion for new trial. Faye v. Woodville Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 916.

12a. Where motion for new trial unnecessary.—A motion for new trial in a case tried before the court is not necessary, but where a motion is made, the assignments in the motion constitute the assignments of error on appeal under this article, and where they are reconstructed they cannot be reviewed. Riggs v. Buleman (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 813.

Where a case is tried before court without jury, and appellant's motion for new trial is insufficient as an assignment of error, appellant is entitled to have considered formal assignments therefiled and duly incorporated in record. Hess & Skinner Engineering Co. v. Turney, 109 Tex. 206, 203 S. W. 593.

12b. Matters arising after motion for new trial.—Alleged errors based upon matters occurring after the motion for new trial is overruled may be raised by filing assignments of error in the trial court. Werner v. Needham (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 212.

Assignments of error not included in the motion for new trial cannot be considered on appeal, unless the error assigned arose after filing of the motion. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Harless (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 297.

12d. Copying of assignments contained in motion.—See Brown v. Martin (Sup.) 7 S. W. 68.

Assignments of error urged in the brief must be, at least, substantially copies of the assignments presented in the motion for new trial filed in the trial court, and an assignment of error not embraced in such motion cannot be considered. Ball v. Hensherson (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 361; Barkley v. Gibbs (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 191; Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Crump (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 227.

A variance in that an assignment of error is not a true copy of the assignment as it appears in the transcript, and which resulted from an error in copying which was slight and wholly unintentional, does not preclude the court in its discretion from passing upon the assignment. Texar & F. Ry. Co. v. Schelb (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 831.

Where a motion for new trial has been filed, the party appealing is confined to the matters therein assigned, under Court of Civil Appeals rule 24 (142 S. W. xii).—Boede­feld v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1027.

A proposition under an assignment of error which is not a copy of any ground set out in the motion for new trial, and does not show by the record where it may be found, nor that an exception was taken to the ruling thereon, will not be considered. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1050.

An assignment of error, though not a full copy of the ground set up in motion for new trial, will be considered; it will be considered under the propositions thereunder, but not to the full extent of the ground to direct the court's attention to, and make plain, the error intended to be assigned. Otis Elevator Co. v. Cameron (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 852.

An assignment of error is sufficient where it is a substantial, although not a literal, copy of the assignment in plaintiff's motion for new trial. Jones v. Texas Electric Ry. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 749.

In cases tried before the court without a jury, the objection is no longer available that assignments cannot be considered because they are not the same as contained in the motion for new trial and were not filed at the same time. Wyss v. Bookman (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 297.

An assignment, complaining of a charge in "that it makes the defendant liable for the injury alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff without reference to any negligence on the part of plaintiff that could attribute (contribute) to what was the true and proximate result (cause) of plaintiff's injuries," the words in parentheses, not being in the ground of error contained in the motion for new trial, will be considered; the changes not being material. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Crump (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 257.

Where the motion for new trial assigned error on the ground that the verdict was against the evidence, was vague, and was in conflict with the testimony, an assignment of error on appeal that it was the duty of the trial court to instruct the jury in writing will not be considered, for the assignment does not comply with this article. Dixon v. Haymes (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 441.

An appellant may adopt the assignments of his motion for a new trial or not, as he chooses. Barkley v. Gibbs (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 1099.

An error to refuse to submit an issue being identical in the main with the assignment in the motion for new trial, differing only in the reasons assigned why the issue should have been submitted is entitled to consideration. Green v. Hall (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 182.

An assignment of error which violates Rules for the Courts of Civil Appeals, Nos. 24, 25, and 31 (142 S. W. xii, xiii), in reference to briefing, on account of lack of reference anywhere in the assignment, or in the proposition and statement thereunder, to the portion of the motion for new trial in which the error is complained of, will not be considered. Kidd v. Smith (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 343.

Appellant's brief need not present the assignment in the motion for new trial, the statute being simply directory. Marvin v. Kennison Bros. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 831.

12e. Reconstitution of assignments.—The appellate court will not consider assignments which have been reconstituted or are incorrectly copied in the brief. Green v. Hall (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1175.

Where an assignment of error practically followed two assignments in the motion for new trial, the fact that it was a reconstituted assignment, and presented the refusal to give two, instead of one, requested charge, will not prevent consideration. Grand Lodge of Colored K. P. of Texas v. Allen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 675.

An assignment of error which is not a copy of the corresponding ground set out in the motion for new trial, but is a reconstitution thereof and presents practically the same question, will be considered. Mason v. Gantz (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 425.

Appellant may file assignments of error independent of and subsequent to the motion for a new trial, where those assignments identify and are in consonance with the errors raised in the motion. Barkley v. Gibbs (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 1099.

13. Right to assign errors.—In jury trials filing of motion for new trial is prerequisite to appellant's right to assign error in Court of Civil Appeals. Neeley v. White (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 991.

In action for death of shipper's employé against shipper and railroad, railroad could not complain on appeal of any errors relating to liability of shipper; such errors not affecting railroad. Rio Grande, E. P. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Guzman (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1102.

Where plaintiff appellant has no interest in a judgment rendered by one defendant against another, and neither defendant complains of that judgment, plaintiff's assignments of error attacking it will be overruled. Smith v. Coburn (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 344.

The holder of a note which was by the district court made subject to the costs and expenses of the receivership and to the vendor's lien notes subordinate to such certificates and costs, who did not appeal from the judgment, cannot, after it was reversed in part by the Court of Civil Appeals so as to give the vendor's lien notes priority over the receiver's certificates, assign error to the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals for failure to give his note also priority over the receiver's certificates, since he had elected to accept the judgment of the trial court. Littell v. Random Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 194.

In a suit to cancel an oil and gas lease, where the defendant assignee of the lease secured judgment against the defendant assignors, and the latter admitted error and secured reversal of that portion of the judgment, they were not interested in the portion of judgment canceling the lease for fraud, and their assignments of error to that portion will not be considered. White v. Murphy (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 841.

In a suit to enjoin an encroachment on an alley adjacent to plaintiff's lot, appellant cannot complain of that part of the decree voluntarily laying out a passageway for the use of the public over defendant's lot. Shelton v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 907.

The question of district court's want of jurisdiction on appeal from the county court can be raised in the appellate court on appeal from the district court. Warne v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 242.

15. Form and requisites in general.—Assignment of error covering 11 pages of the brief contains no argument and a statement of the case and an assertion of fact that the court did not consider the same as an appeal. Slaughter v. Morton (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 887.

Under court rule 29 (142 S. W. xii), the Court of Civil Appeals will not consider any assignment of error in the brief subsequent to the first where three is the next number after one. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1680.

It is a violation of rule 29 for Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiii) for an appellant to number assignments from 1 to 16, and then from 7 to 24, because that causes a duplication of assignments of the same number. Allen v. Crutcher (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 216.

Objection to the consideration of the fourth assignment of error, for the reason that appellant has erroneously numbered two assignments as the fourth, will not be sustained, and thereby deprive appellant of just ground of complaint. Varnes v. Dean (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1017.

Where the assignments of error were not consecutively numbered from first to last, as prescribed by Court of Civil Appeals Rule 29 (142 S. W. xii), were not consecutive, but were numbers not running consecutively, the Court of Civil Appeals would be justified in disregarding those assignments, but it may consider them. McCravy v. McCravy (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 157.

It is a violation of the rule requiring assignments of error to be numbered in a consecutive order to omit a number. Irwin v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 522.

In case of a jury trial, where filing of motion for new trial is a prerequisite to the right of appeal, Rule 24 of the Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xii) requires assignments of error to be set forth distinctly in motion for new trial, otherwise such assignments do not comprehend fundamental error which will be treated as waived. Celi v. Sanders (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 179.

Notwithstanding rules 24 and 25 of Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. vii), an assignment of prejudicial error in sustaining defendant's plea of limitation in an action on quantum meruit, not affirmatively specifying the grounds of error, would be considered, in view of the liberal rule adopted in reference to the briefing of cases. Thames v. Clesi (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 195.

Though assignments of error do not 'distinctly specify the grounds of error relied on,' as required by Court of Civil Appeal Rules 24, 25 (142 S. W. xii), they will be considered, being sufficient to call attention to the state of the record, and any error being one of law; there being no conflict in the testimony. Green v. Windham (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 726.

17. Certainty and definiteness—In general.—Assignment that court erred in entering judgment for plaintiff on jury's verdict for reasons set forth and fully stated in defendant's brief of exceptions to the court entering judgment for the plaintiff, by the verdict of the jury" was too general. Baldwin v. Drew (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 636.

An assignment of error that the verdict was contrary to the evidence and was not supported by it, in that plaintiff's testimony was not corroborated, but was contradicted. Isabell v. C. W. C. Munn Co. Westfall (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 299.

Assignments of error that the court erred in overruling an exception, as shown in defendant's exception to the charge as a whole, giving the transcript page, is too general and vague to be considered. Sullivan v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 194.

In action for damages to stock in shipment by delay of day in shipping 3 cars and of one day in shipping each of 2 bad order cars, where no damages could be assessed for the extra delay because of bad order under the findings of the jury, and the judgment did not show that any damages were allowed for the delay for bad order, and the assignment of error did not show that the judgment was in excess of the damages property assessable because 3 cars did not get into the first train, no error was shown. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Matsler (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 165.

Assignments of error that judgment is contrary to evidence and law applicable to case, that trial court erred in not granting plaintiff's prayer for temporary injunction on case-made, and that judgment is contrary to law and unsupported by evidence or any evidence, held too general to require consideration. Defferari v. City of Galveston (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 188.

Assignment, "The jury, after reading paragraph 4 of the court's charge, wherein their attention was specially called to paragraph 5, which was an instruction upon the weight of evidence and precluded the right of appellant to recover," contains nothing upon which a proposition of law can be founded and cannot be considered. Schiade v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 1113.

In trespass to try title, assignments of error that the court erred in rendering judgment on defendant's cross-action "because the defendants did not show title to the land described in their cross-action," and "because such judgment is contrary to the evidence," and that "the court erred in failing and refusing to render and enter judgment in this cause for plaintiff for the land sued for by him," describing it, and that "the court erred in admitting in evidence" certain survey field notes, were too general, and failed, as required by rules 24 and 25 of the Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xii), to specify distinctly the grounds of error relied on. Stein v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 166.

Assignments of error that are general and indefinite will not be considered. Merchants' Transfer Co. v. Wilkinson (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 891.

Assignment that court erred in admitting certain deeds in evidence will not be considered unless the assignment raises the general question. Washington v. Giles (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 459.

While the Court of Civil Appeals is liberal in passing upon all assignments, it cannot search the pleadings, transcript, and statement of facts for supposed errors that are not distinctly disclosed in the assignment itself or propositions thereunder. National Surety Co. v. Alaska Ice, Water & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 557.

Where it does not appear from the assignments, propositions, bill of exception, and statements just what the error asserted by a proposition was or how appellant was injured by the special issue complained of or its answer, the assignment will be overruled. United Land & Irrigation Co. v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 543.

18. Reasons and grounds of objection.—A ground set out in assignment of error in appellant's brief, which does not appear in the record as one having been filed in the court below, cannot be considered. McKay v. Lucas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 172.

19. Rulings on pleadings.—An assignment which presents error in overruling defendant's demurrer, both general and special, to the petition is too general to require consideration. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 1080.

Assignment of error complaining of overruling of motion to strike out an amended answer was deficient in failing to show what change was made in the pleading. Auilz v. Zucht (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 475.

An assignment of error asserting that the court erred in overruling, and not sustaining, plaintiff's general and special demurrers is too general to be considered, as it attempts to raise the court's action upon both general and special exceptions. Irwin v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 522.

21. Rulings as to evidence.—Assignments of error, not followed by concrete propositions, unsupported by bills of exception, and referring to evidence taken by deposition, but failing to show what parts objected to were read to the jury, cannot be considered. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 163.

Assignments of error to admission of evidence, merely referring to several bills of exceptions for the objections made, will not be considered. Schaff v. Scoggin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 788.

An assignment of error complaining of admission of evidence, but not undertaking to set out even the substance of either question or answer, is insufficient, under the rules of the court of appeals, to require consideration. Planters' Oil Co. v. Hill Printing & Stationery Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 192.

In trespass to try title, assignment of error that the court erred in admitting in evidence "certain survey field notes" was too general to be considered under Rules 21 and 25 of the Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xii). Stein v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 166.

Where error is assigned to the exclusion of evidence, the ground of objection offered to the excluded testimony must appear from the assignments. Guyler v. Guyler (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 604.

An assignment, complaining of court's failure to sustain objections "to the question propounded by plaintiff's counsel to Mrs. G. and her answer thereto, wherein said witness was asked as to her feelings for her mother, and as to what her relation was toward her mother, and was permitted to answer that she and her mother were specially devoted," held too general to require notice. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gressiam (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1052.

Assignments of error complaining of action of court in admitting certain testimony will not be considered where the proposition thereunder and the bill of exceptions show that the complaint made below was at the refusal to admit testimony offered by defendant. Haveberkenk v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 256.

Submission of issues to jury.—Defendants' assignment that court erred in submitting issue as to defect in gun used by servant in defendants' glass factory, because there was no testimony to show that the gun was defective, although general, was sufficient to present question that judgment should be reversed because of submission of such issue. Skeletor v. Wolfe (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 861.

Assignments of error objected to special issues as being on the weight of evidence, as assuming material facts, and as submitting more than one question in the same issue, were too general. Baker v. Herndon (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 165.

Assignment of error seeking to place the whole case before the Court of Civil Appeals by asserting the trial court erred in failing and refusing to submit all material issues on which there was controverted evidence, thereby denying defendant appellant its right to have determined material issues presented by the pleadings, is too general for any appellate court to consider. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Blumberg (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 734.

The court's failure to submit a particular issue is not properly before the appellate court for consideration where it does not appear from assignment of error that appellant requested the submission of any such issue or filed any written objections to the charge because it was not submitted. Washington v. G. J'a (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 459.

The court's failure to submit a particular issue is not properly before the appellate court for consideration where it does not appear from assignment of error that appellant requested the submission of any such issue or filed any written objections to the charge because it was not submitted. Washington v. G. J'a (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 459.

23. Instructions.—An assignment, stating merely that the court erred in giving a certain charge, is too general, and will not be considered. Lambert v. Williams, 2 Civ. App. 413, 21 S. W. 108; Shuler v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 445.

Assignment of error that the "court erred in failing to give the special charges." 382

Assignment of error "because court erred in instructing verdict contrary to law," held to violate Rev. St. art. 1812, requiring distinct specification of errors, and rules for preparing cause and briefs (142 S. W. xii). Shuler v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 446.

Assignment of error that "the court erred in failing to give special charges," numbering them, was insufficient because special charges requested and refused were not set out in assignment itself, nor in statement following same. Id. Where neither in the assignment of error nor in proposition thereunder was any specific ground given why error was committed, in refusal of requested instruction, such assignment need not be considered. Durham v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 135.

A motion for new trial and an assignment of error, on the ground that the trial court erred in instructing the jury to return a verdict for plaintiff in any amount, is sufficient to be considered on appeal. Harlington Land & Water Co. v. Houston Motor Car Co. (Com. App.) 200 S. W. 145.

An assignment of error on ground that trial court erred in instructing the jury to return a verdict for plaintiff in any amount is sufficient to be considered on appeal. Id.

Where asserted error was not apparent on face of record, it was necessary under statute that assignment of error, complaining of court's action, in order to entitle it to consideration, distinctly point out error relied on, which an assignment that court erred in refusing to give defendant's requested charge to return verdict for defendant did not do. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Harless (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 307.

Where an assignment submitted as a proposition did not state the objection to the charge, nor did any statement thereunder point out specific objection, the assignment cannot be considered. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Rustine (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 516.

An assignment of error that a court of record should instruct the jury contains nothing on which a proposition of law can be based, and cannot be considered. Dixon v. Haymes (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 441.

Assignments of error complaining of giving of certain charges or refusal of others, without stating even substance of charges, should not be considered; a reference to bills of exceptions without giving substance of them not complying with rules of Courts of Civil Appeals, and it not being incumbent on an appellate court to search record for matters that should be supplied by appellant. Holmes v. Uvalde Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 640.

An assignment of error complaining of a charge cannot be considered, where the assignment refers to a particular bill of exception for the charge and the charge is not there set out. United Land & Irrigation Co. v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 444.

The Court of Civil Appeals will reverse case on ground that an instruction was erroneous, notwithstanding failure to complain thereof by assignment of error, where court refused a proper charge, and such refusal is complained of by assignment of error. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smithers (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 657.

A requested charge, "You are instructed that the evidence introduced in this case is insufficient to sustain a verdict for the plaintiff, and you will therefore find for the defendants and so say by your verdict," is not in fact a charge, and, not presenting fundamental assignment, such assignment that the court erred in refusing to give "defendant's special requested peremptory instruction to find for the defendants" was too general to entitle it to consideration. Fiddy v. Childers (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 172.

An assignment of error to the conclusions of law, because from the facts the appellee was not entitled to the judgment given; or "that plaintiff, who sues for himself and co-tenant, * * * when the petition does not show that any claim is set up by plaintiff "for his co-tenants, nor are they made parties, nor do they claim anything," or an assignment that the judgment from the facts ought to have been for the appellant,—is insufficient. Tudor v. Hodges, 71 Tex. 222, 9 S. W. 443; W. W.

An assignment of error that the verdict is "contrary to the law and the evidence" is not sufficient, unless the error is fundamental, or imperatively requires a revision to prevent a manifest injustice. Bonner v. Whitcomb, 89 Tex. 173, 15 S. W. 899.

In damage action against building contractors, assignments of error that recovery of certain items was not authorized by contract or not sustained by proof, but not complaining of any ruling by court or of jury's verdict, are insufficient. Echols Bros. v. Stevens (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 365.

Where neither assignment of error nor proposition contended that defendant failed to establish truth of his plea of privilege to be sued in another county, or assailed verdict for defendant on ground that evidence was insufficient to support it, no question was presented on appeal. Obenhaus v. Allen (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 365.

22 SUPP., V. S. CIV. ST. TEX.—23 533
An assignment that "the verdict of the jury as to A. is excessive" is too general for consideration. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 694.

The question of sufficiency of the proof to sustain the findings of fact cannot be raised in assignments of error merely attacking the judgment for lack of such proof. Morrison v. Neely (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 586.

An assignment that the verdict is contrary to the preponderance of the evidence, and against the evidence, and shows that the jury either misunderstood the case or disregarded the evidence, is so general that the trial court could not have been thereby apprised of the theory on which plaintiff requested that the verdict should be set aside. Neill v. Dyer (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 296.

In partition suit, error, if any, in charging surviving husband with the entire sum taken by him from the separate funds of his children and applied on the purchase price of community property, his deceased wife's share in, in view of his children, could not be reviewed on an assignment of error, alleging error, in that the judgment was contrary to law in fixing a lien on his homestead in their favor to secure such sum, instead of determining their interest in said property in amount. Leach v. Leach (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 287.

In suit to cancel deed, assignment of error of plaintiff appellant that the court erred in the calculation of interest due on the notes sued on in a cross-action, and entering judgment erroneously and in excess of the sums due other than a $500 note sued upon, is too general, as is the proposition thereunder, the statement in the assignment of, holding what interest was allowed in the judgment, nor even the amount of the judgment. Powell v. Dyer (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 751.

Assignment of error to overruling motion for new trial because the verdict developed that it was arrived at on sympathy is insufficient; it not appearing to the direct attention of any evidence indicating that the jury were influenced by prejudice or sympathy. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Patterson (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 119.

Under rules 24, 29, and 30 of the Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xii, xiii), assignments of error attacking the court's conclusion of law that defendants and their predecessors had not established title by limitation were insufficient to warrant a review of the evidence on that issue. Carrington v. Carrington (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 1029.

25. Motions for new trial.—Assignment of error that the court erred in overruling motion for new trial, because the verdict of the jury is contrary to the great preponderance of the evidence and is not supported by the great weight of the evidence, specifying that the evidence shows that plaintiff's damages would have resulted independent of the negligence of defendant, was insufficient, in general. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Patterson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1026.

Assignment of error that "court erred in overruling defendant's motion for new trial because of error in giving paragraph 8 of the charge, as fully shown by defendant's written exceptions and objections filed thereto," was sufficient to permit its consideration on appeal. Id.

Assignment of error, complaining of trial court's refusal to set aside the verdict and judgment and to grant a new trial "because the verdict of the jury is contrary to the law and to the evidence," without specially pointing out the particular rulings complained of, held too general to be considered. Ft. Smith Coach & Bedding Co. v. George (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 335.

Assignments of error to overruling motion for new trial on the ground of the verdict being against the great weight of testimony as to certain matters held insufficient, in general, to the direct attention of any evidence, on the phase of the testimony to which received its attention when the defensive charges were given, and so to direct the court's attention to the error complained of, which is all that Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 1612, requires. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Patterson (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 119.

Assignment of error, complaining of denial of new trial for excessiveness of verdict, but not specifying in what particulars under the facts it is excessive, is too general. Id.

Assignments of error that court erred in rendering judgment because verdict of jury was unsupported by evidence or contrary to weight of the evidence will be overruled, since judgment must follow verdict, however erroneous it may be, and even though the verdict may be subject to attack on same grounds. Blackmon v. Texas Securities Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 599.

Assignments of error questioning the sufficiency of the law and evidence to support the verdict and judgment, which do not undertake to point out or show the insufficiency, are not entitled to consideration. Stephens v. Miller (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1651.

An assignment that a judgment is excessive is, in so far as excessiveness is con-

Assignment of error by one defendant to the rendering of judgment against it in favor of the other defendant as not warranted by facts in evidence, findings or law, being sufficient to direct court's attention to the error complained of, will be considered.

Assignments of error by the defendant, so not to be considered.

Assignment of error by the court in rendering judgment because the evidence is insufficient to support same,' or "because there was no evidence introduced in the trial to support the judgment," are too general and indefinite for consideration. Fisher v. Sands (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 260.

An assignment of error in a partition suit that "the court erred in rendering judgment which divested the plaintiff of the title to the land in controversy" is insufficient as being too general. Allen v. Williams (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 335.

An assignment of error attacking the evidence and not the pleading. Newcomb v. Ford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 592.

An assignment of error in rendering a judgment granting an injunction was too general to be considered. Ahrens v. Lowther (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 235.

An assignment that the court erred in not rendering judgment that plaintiff take nothing by her suit, that defendants go hence and recover of plaintiff all costs of suit, was too general to be considered. Id.

In order to present a question for decision, an assignment, that court erred in its judgment in some recital of fact or conclusion of law, should go further than to merely complain that such recital of fact or conclusion of law was erroneous. Ehmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Assignment that the court erred in holding that defendants were entitled to judgment on the pleadings and evidence, since such pleadings and evidence were sufficient to entitle plaintiff to judgment, is too general to require consideration on appeal. Sample v. Drake (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 555.

Assignment that the judgment rendered "is contrary to law and evidence in this case and is not supported by same but on the contrary was with plaintiff" held too general, failing to point out with any definiteness the error to which it is desired to direct the court's attention. Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. Montgomery (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 759.

A garnishment case had to be disposed of by a judgment of some character, and an assignment of error, complaining that any judgment whatever was rendered, was without merit. Childs v. Gearhart (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 702.

Where appellant grouped in its brief several specifications of error, to the effect that addressed error element should not have been missed, and that the question was one of law for the court, but left out the fact that the court had refused to give a directed verdict, the grouping was multifarious and the propositions not germane. W. xii, xiii), and cannot be considered. Boedefeld v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1027.

The rule that each ground of error relied on shall be separately presented in the briefs under an assignment of error is not complied with, where the assignments are treated as being part of and mixed up with the statement of facts, following a proposition which in turn follows an assignment. Powell v. Charco Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1178.

Assignment of error, divided into six separate paragraphs, each separately numbered, except the first, and each paragraph within itself being a separate assignment, which is followed by no statement whatever, except "See testimony V., S. F. 3 et seq., testimony E., S. F. 50 et seq., testimony H., S. F. 50 et seq.," is improper as multifarious,

W. xii, xiii), where it was followed by no proposition, since an assignment not itself a proposition and not followed by a proposition is waived. Denby Motor Truck Co. v. Mears (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 594.

36. Sufficiency of propositions in general.—Propositions following assignment of error, as to its being prejudicial in submitting special issues to give undue prominence to a party's theory, and that repeating issues renders the charge argumentative, held not distinct specifications of error required by court rule. Schaff v. Scoggins (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 758.

Assignments of error, assailing a verdict as excessive in the aggregate, with subjoined propositions thereon, was no right to recover at all, nor that other causes were responsible for the damage, could not be considered as to the subjoined propositions. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Patterson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1026.

In an action against defendant railroad for death of its brakeman when a car ahead had ceased, neither objection to the tract's charge or the burden of proof nor the proposition thereunder held sufficient to raise the point that the charge was erroneous as putting on defendant railroad the burden to prove that the car ahead was in a reasonably safe condition. Colorado & S. R. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 329.

In a suit to cancel vendor's lien notes under a contract in adjustment of differences under an earlier contract and for damages for false representations, propositions under assignment of error held insufficient to present any question as to the measure of damages, or the question whether they should be measured as of the date of the earlier contract or the date of the second contract. United Land & Irrigation Co. v. Fleming Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 843.

An assignment of error, "The court erred in overruling and in not sustaining plaintiff's plea in abatement to defendants' cross-action," was insufficient when supported only by the proposition that, "It is improper to permit a cross-action by defendants to be maintained on account of alleged improper filing of its pendens notice in a suit filed by plaintiff on a note disconnected with plaintiff's cause of action, especially where the alleged cross-action is unliquidated"; there being no argument under the assignment, and the statement simply referring the court generally to all the pleadings in the case. Nesbit v. Richardson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 595.

A proposition under an assignment of error asserting that letters against the interest of not attachable against him unless the proof shows, or tends to show, that they were written by him or by some one shown to be authorized by him to write them, does not raise the question that the apparent writer was not appellant's agent, but rather that the execution of the letters by the party purporting to sign them was not proved. Day v. Motor Truck Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 594.

A proposition following a too general assignment that the court erred in refusing defendant's requested peremptory instruction that, "If the evidence introduced on the trial is insufficient under any theory of the case to sustain a verdict for the plaintiff, the court should request the defendants to give peremptory instructions to the jury to find for the defendants, and a refusal to give such requested instruction is such error as will require a reversal of the case on appeal," did not specify wherein the evidence was insufficient and did not cure the defect in the assignment. Necessity of specific proposition.—A proposition under an assignment of error as to sufficiency of the petition in a telegraph company's appeal from a judgment for failure to deliver a death message held bad as being too general. In suit to cancel a deed, assignment of error of plaintiff appellant that the court erred in the calculation of interest due on the notes sued on in a cross-action, and entering judgment erroneously and in excess of the sums due other than $500 note sued upon, is too general, as is the proposition thereunder, the statement in the assignment not showing what interest was allowed in the judgment, nor even the amount of the judgment. Powell v. Dyer (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 731.

A proposition, "It was competent to prove by M. on cross-examination, if it was a fact, that he neglected his duty in the taking of the acknowledgments of another married woman to other oil and gas leases executed at the same time as the one in controversy, just as he neglected his duty in the taking of Mrs. R.'s acknowledgment," held too general to require consideration. Assignment of error not submitted as proposition, so that reasons relied on to show that judgment is erroneous are left to surmise, will not be considered. Kanner v. Sturts (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 603.

In an action on a life policy tried to the court, an assignment of error presented as a proposition held not sufficient, because including numerous errors in one assignment, to call in question any of the fact findings of the court, though sufficient to raise the question of law whether the facts found showed delivery of the policy and payment of the first premium which were required to make it a binding obligation. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Byrson (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 162.

An assignment of error can be treated as a proposition stating a principle of law only when such assignment, standing alone, announces a statement of a proposed legal principle, so assignments which do not announce a legal principle will be disregarded, when they are treated as propositions. Angelina County Lumber Co. v. Mast (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 596.

Where an assignment of error consisted of paragraphs from the motion for new trial complaining that the court erred in not sustaining objections to testimony, the paragraphs constituted no proposition, and the assignments will not be considered. Id.

Assignment of error submitted as proposition that court erred in refusing to grant defendant new trial, for reason set forth in specified paragraphs of defendant's amended motion for new trial, held insufficient, as not calling attention to any proposition of law, nor proposition not being itself proposition, and as unsupported, together with its propositions, by any statement showing truth of allegations of paragraph of motion for new trial. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Harless (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 307.

Under rule 59 of the Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xii), an assignment, submitted as a proposition, that “the court erred in overruling plaintiffs' motion to withdraw their announcement of ready for trial and continue this cause, as shown by plaintiffs' bill of exceptions,” etc., to which there was no proposition subjoined, cannot be considered, not being in itself a proposition. Holmes v. Tennant (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 798.

Assignment of error: “The fifth ground of motion for a new trial. In the third paragraph of the charge of the court the jury was instructed upon proximate cause, wherein they were told 'that it was that cause which in a continuous sequence unbroken by any new independent cause, and but for which the same would not have occurred'—contains no proposition of law or fact. Schkade v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 1113.

Assignment of error submitted as a proposition, without being followed by a specific proposition, that "it was error for the court to submit the charge to the jury at failed and refused to instruct the jury upon whom rested the burden of proof" without record references, and without setting out the charge given by the court, held too general for consideration. Holden v. Evans (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 146.

F. 5 et seq., testimony X., S. F. 60 et seq., testimony H., S. F. 30 et seq." is improper as multifarious, having propositions under each paragraph not germane to the assignment, and as not supported by adequate statements, and should not be considered, in view of the Rules for the Courts of Civil Appeals, Nos. 25, 26, and 30 (142 S. If you have stated that cattle were roughly handled. * * * then state whether or not you complained about this. * * * A. I did complain of this to the conductor and the brakeman" is not sustained by proposition that any statement made by the brakeman as to why the engineer was handling the train roughly would be an opinion of the witness. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Harris Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 255.

Propositions are not germane. An assignment of error that the judgment was contrary to the verdict cannot be sustained, where the proposition and statement thereunder merely tended to show that the verdict was not warranted under the evidence and charge, for such assignment merely challenged the sufficiency of the verdict to support the judgment, and not the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict. W. J. & F. J. Powers v. James (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 382.

In an action to quiet title to an oil lease, where the assignee of the lease assigned as error on appeal from an adverse judgment that as soon as he discovered rental was due he tendered the same, a proposition that there was no evidence showing that the well was not commenced within the time within which it was to be commenced, or the lease terminate in event of nonpayment of rent, is not germane to the assignment and cannot be considered. Ford v. Cochran (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1041.

An assignment of error complaining that the court erred in finding as a matter of law that an oil lease assigned to plaintiff was void for nonpayment of rent will not be reversed, where the proposition submitted complained of lack of proof that the lease contract had not been fully complied with; the proposition not being germane to the assignment of error which questioned the findings of fact, while the assignment questioned the conclusions of law based on the finding. Id.

41. Relevancy of proposition to case.—Where an assignment of error complained of a paragraph of the charge and the proposition thereunder complained that certain issues were not within the law as shown by objections filed, and the page of the transcript referred to showed more than one objection, but the proposition assailed the issues on entirely different grounds, no error was presented requiring a consideration of the assignment. Ater v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 222.

44. Reference in propositions to other propositions or to record or assignment.—An assignment which is not a distinct specification of error, but includes three or four propositions relating to different matters not related to each other, without setting out the bill or bills of exception, or referring to the record where they may be found, is insufficiently brief to require consideration over appellee's objection. 50. — References to record, assignment, or brief.—A reference in an assignment of error to a page of the record for a bill of exceptions, without giving it in full or at least the substance, is not the statement contemplated by rule 31 (142 S. W. xiii), and such assignment is defective. Stowers v. H. L. Stevens & Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 365; State ex rel. v. Groom (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 255; FalRRURIA'S Mercantile Co. v. Citizens' State Bank (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 566.

Court rule 31 (142 S. W. xiii), providing that propositions under assignments of error shall be followed by a brief statement, in substance, of the record bearing on it, complies with the rules of ordinary size, and where the record is voluminous, preventing compliance, and counsel has done his best by referring to the pages and lines of the record, the assignment will be considered. Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 756.

Reference, under proposition following assignment of error, to a statement of 100 pages in brief, reproducing evidence and pleadings, held not sufficient for a distinct specification of error, required by Courts of Civil Appeals, rule 31 (142 S. W. xii). Schaff v. Bougin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 758.

Assignment of error, statement under which refers to the evidence set out on preceding pages 24-132 of the brief, a part of which had no bearing on the issues presented, need not be considered the statement of the evidence being insufficient under rule 31 for the Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiii). Prince Line, Limited, of Newcastle, England, v. Steger (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 528.

Rule requiring there shall be subjoined to each proposition asserted in the brief a brief statement in substance of such proceedings, or part, contained in the record, as will be sufficient to explain and support the proposition, is not satisfied by a simple reference to the pages of the record where the evidence is located and a statement of the witnesses and other matters bearing on the proposition may be found; statement of substance of evidence at least being required as well. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Harless (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 307.

Statement, supporting assignment of error, which vaguely referred to other parts of the voluminous brief and the record, did not comply with the rules of the Courts of Civil Appeals as to such statements. Thompson v. Dodge (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 586.

Assignment of statement of error that the court erred in refusing to give a decision "upon the several demurrers set out in the several answers of defendants, filed in each of said causes," giving the numbers, "and in ruling that all such demurrers had been waived," is not in compliance with the rules of the Courts of Civil Appeals, being merely a reference to the record and other parts of the brief. Id.

An assignment of error in a personal injury action that instructions relative to medical expenses were not authorized by the evidence will not be considered, where it does not contain any statement as required by the rules, but merely refers practically to the statement of facts. Schauff v. Hollin (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 675.

While the reference to the bill of exceptions and to the motion for new trial may be a technical violation of rule 31 as to making statements, it will not prevent consideration of an assignment of error. Grand Lodge of Colored K. P. of Texas v. Allen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 675.

Where the assignment itself was a copy of the refused charge, and referred to the transcript page where the bill of exceptions showed the charge was requested and refused, such matters need not be repeated in the statement. Id.

An assignment of error to refusal of instruction, asserting that the testimony disclosed a certain fact followed by a reference to the entire statement of facts, was not sufficient under Rule 31 for Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiii) to entitle the assignment to be considered. Denby Motor Truck Co. v. Mears (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 994.

The Court of Civil Appeals will not examine the 62 grounds for a new trial to discover an assignment of error where statement under assignment failed to show what paragraph in the motion is used in the assignment. Stockyards Nat. Bank v. Wilkinson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1040.

Assignments of error complaining of action of court in overruling special exceptions, without a statement thereunder and without the special exceptions being set out, in substance or otherwise, and without record references being given or a showing made as to action taken on the exceptions, will not be considered. Holden v. Evans (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 146.

Assignments of error complaining of refusal to submit requested special issue will not be considered, where no record references are given in the statement under the assignment, or to the issues tendered, where the appellate court is unable to determine from the brief whether or not the issue tendered was embraced in the special issues actually given. Id.

Assignments of error, submitted as propositions, cannot be considered on appeal, where there is not a reference in appellant's brief to the transcript or statement of facts, in connection with statements made under such assignments, as required by rule 31 (142 S. W. xiii). Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brett (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 449.

51. — Reference from one statement to another.—In suit to set aside default judgment, an assignment, whose proposition is that plaintiff's failure to appear and answer was not chargeable to defendant's fraud, referring for statement to that of another assignment which contains none of the testimony on the issue of diligence, etc., must be overruled. Ramirez v. Martinez (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 380.

Statement under third assignment of error, "Same as under first assignment of error," which asserted court erred in instructing to find for defendants, held not in compliance with rules as to briefing, statement under first assignment covering four pages of typewritten brief, and including nearly all testimony. Willitt v. Tucker (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 751.

54. — Setting out proceedings, rulings, exceptions, and facts showing error and injury therefrom.—Rule 31 of Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiii) providing that a brief statement of proceedings shall be subjoined to each proposition in the brief, is complied with in the testimony, findings, and proceedings stated in abbreviated form. C. R. Miller & Bro. v. Mummert (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 270.

Assignments of error relating to errors in the admission or rejection of evidence cannot be reviewed, where the statements subjoined do not show that the errors were saved by bill of exceptions. Carter-Mullaly Transfer Co. v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 781.

If bill of exceptions to overruling of objection to question to witness does not, as it should, disclose what answer was, if question was in fact answered, etc., statement in support of assignment of error should. Munsey v. Marnet Oil & Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 688.

Objection to consideration of assignment that it violates rule 31 for Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiii), in that the statement subjoined does not quote from record trial court's action on special demurrer to petition, is well taken, where it would require search of record to determine action court took. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Munney (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 531.

In a cause tried prior to amendment of Vernon's S. Civ. Ann. Civ. St. 1911, art. 1974, by Acts 35th Leg. c. 157 (Supp. 1918, art. 1574), assignment complaining of refusal of requested charges will not be reviewed, unless statement shows exception at proper time with proper bill of exceptions and reference to page of record where the exception may be found, in view of court rule 31 (142 S. W. xiii). Continental Casualty Co. v. Chappell (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 739.

McDowall v. Central of New Mexico (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 719.

Matters presented by assignments to the admission of testimony are not reviewable by the Court of Civil Appeals, under Rules for the Courts of Civil Appeals. No. 31 (142 S. W. xii), where none of the statements show that any bill of exceptions was reserved, while in only two cases does it appear that any objection was made. Pawloske v. Kusch (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 496.

Assignments of error to the charge may be ignored, the statement following them, and having reference to them under the rules, failing to show that the objections were properly made, and the assignment was not tendered to the court's attention calling the court's attention calling the court's attention to the bill of exceptions. W. v. State (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 562.

W. xii), and will not be considered. Eldora Oil Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 758.

56. Setting out pleadings or averments therein.—Statement under assignment attempting to urge error in overruling general demurrer to petition in action by city against fire insurance company for taxes on certain property merely stating as to contents of petition that the petition alleges defendant's name to be "M. Mutual Fire Insurance Company" is insufficient under Court of Civil Appeals rule 31 (142 S. W. xii), and is an assignment of an exception based on proposition that "company" operating under Acts 38th Leg. c. 109, and by section 30 exempt from tax other than on gross premiums. Millers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 825.

75. Setting out instructions complained of.—An assignment of error, in a suit by a shipper against carriers for a shipment of cabbage damaged, to a certain paragraph of a charge, which does not show what paragraph contained and is not followed by any statement as to what such paragraph contained, cannot be considered on appeal. Rio Grande & E. P. Ry. Co. v. J. H. Russell & Son (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 539.

A statement under a proposition, which is confined to a statement of the pleadings and the issues sought to be raised, and does not undertake to set out the substance of the evidence bearing on the proposition, is insufficient. Thomas v. Derrick (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 140.

Court of Civil Appeals is not required to examine all the evidence contained in the assignment of facts to determine whether an assertion of an assignment of error is true, where it cannot be said that the error claimed is not one apparent on the face of the record. Id.

In an action for injuries to shipment of live stock, an assignment of error that account sales were admitted in evidence without preliminary proof need not be considered, where statement following assignment does not show what evidence was given in reference to account sales, and bill of exceptions is in same condition. Glover (Com. App.) 233 S. W. 597.

64. — Counter propositions in appellee's brief.—A counter proposition attacking finding of verdict on issue of limitations, which attacked the sufficiency of evidence to establish a trust in plaintiff's favor, was not a sufficient assignment to require a consideration of sufficiency of evidence. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Harbaugh (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 496.

65. — References to motion for new trial or other parts of record.—Assignment of error, stating that the error was complained of in the motion for new trial, followed by a reference to the transcript, giving the page containing part of the motion where such complaint was made, sufficiently complies with court rule 25 (142 S. W. xii). El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Lee, 110 Tex. 494, 221 S. W. 251, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 157 S. W. 748.

Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 164.

An assignment of error not being followed by a statement, reference to the petition to ascertain the allegations attacked through the special demurrer, the overruling of which is assigned as error, is not a compliance with the rule as to briefing. Millers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 825.

66. — Time for filing.—Consideration of assignments of error will not be refused because they and appellant's brief were not filed in the trial court in the time prescribed; it being apparent this occasioned no harm, and motion to dismiss appeal, with opportunity for counter showing, contemplated by Courts of Civil Appeals Rule 39 (142 S. W. xiii) not being filed. Otis Elevator Co. v. Cameron (Civ. App.) 296 S. W. 882.

67. — Filing and annexing to record.—Where examination of record shows the single assignment of error was not filed below, either in motion for new trial or otherwise, assignment cannot be considered under this article, rule 67 for District and County Courts (142 S. W. xxii), and rule 24 for Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xii). Lee v. Zielinski (Civ. App.) 187 S. W. 577.

68. — Including in transcript.—Assignments of error, not presented in motion for a new trial or shown by the transcript, will not be considered, unless they present fundamental error. Hooker v. State (Civ. App.) 187 S. W. 481.

Where findings of fact and conclusions of law were filed after the final judgment was rendered, appellants had the right to complain thereof by assignments of error presented in their brief, though not contained in the transcript, and not filed in the court below. Busbee v. Busbee (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 441.

70. — Cross-assignments — Right to assign.—Where plea of privilege was sustained as to one defendant and overruled as to others, and only the latter defendants appeal, plaintiff by cross-assignment cannot complain of the judgment as to the other defendants. 74. Scope and effect of assignment—Rulings on pleadings.—A plea in abatement, the overruling of which was assigned as error, must be considered as presented to the judge, and additional attempt to be made in the assignment cannot be considered. American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Struwe (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 534.

77. — Rulings as to evidence.—Question whether or not evidence was sufficient to support jury's verdict requiring decree of foreclosure of landlord's lien cannot be raised by assignment in lieu of judgment. Judgment foreclosing landlord's lien. Punta-zee v. Farmer (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 521.

Assignments of error sufficient to direct the court's attention to the fact that appellant claimed that the evidence was not sufficient to support the judgment held to present question as to sufficiency of evidence to support the findings of fact of the trial court, though the assignments do not directly and specifically attack the findings of fact. Morrison v. Neely (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 728.

80. — Verdict, findings, or judgment.—Assignment that trial court erred in its findings of fact presents nothing for review upon demurrer. Pearlstone v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 860.

82. Relation to record.—A complaint of the refusal of the trial court to suppress the deposition of a witness because he failed to answer certain cross-interrogatories pronounced will not be considered, where the record fails to show that the motion was seasonably made. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 781.

Assignments of error to the rejection of testimony are not entitled to consideration where the bills of exceptions do not show the objections made to the evidence nor the ground on which they were sustained. Ellerl v. Sodiers [Civ. App.] 222 S. W. 674.

An assignment that the court erred in sustaining defendant's exception to plaintiff's plea shows no error, where the statement in the brief and the record do not show any exception to the plea. Walker v. J. N. Hirsch Cooperage Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 116.

The overruling of plaintiff's exceptions to defendant's cross-action cannot be considered where the record fails to show that any of the exceptions were ever presented to the court or any ruling made thereon. Irwin v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 522.

Where there is no bill of exceptions, statement of facts, or assignment of errors in the record, judgment will be affirmed. Draper v. Hillen (Sup.) 10 S. W. 457.

Where assignment of error is not in conformity with rules 24a and 24c, court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xii) and this article, in that it does not set out particular error with sufficient certainty to identify it, etc., it cannot be considered. Tolivar v. Beaumont Traction Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 362.

Where there was no assignment that verdict for plaintiff was excessive, errors in instructions which could have caused an excessive verdict, and which had no bearing on question of liability, would not authorize a reversal. Southern Traction Co. v. Dillon (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 698.

Though the propositions in appellant's brief were not germane, yet, where the brief as a whole was sufficient to present the error relied upon for reversal, the matter should be reviewed by the appellate court, for the statutes and rules requiring errors to be assigned are primarily for relief of appellate courts, and should not be given a construction calculated to embarrass suitors. Harlington Land & Water Co. v. Houston Motor Car Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 145.

Where no assignments of error are brought up in the record, there is nothing upon which to base a brief; and, where the record fails to show that motion for new trial was filed, judgment will be affirmed. Burk v. Burk (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 495.

In an action against the charterer of a vessel, where the trial court, as a condition to overruling a motion for new trial, required the charterer to remit a judgment over in his favor, held that assignments of error predicated on the judgment in favor of the charterer should not be disregarded on the ground that that matter was no longer in the case, but should be treated as a general attack on the verdict and judgment. Prince Linfield, v. Steger (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 223.

In an action against several defendants, where evidence was introduced by plaintiff against all of the defendants, but the court ruled that it was not admissible against certain defendants, refusal of the court to submit certain issues raised by such evidence is not error for reversal as far as the defendant from the court ruled the evidence was not admissible are concerned, where there is no assignment of error in the brief bringing up for review the action of the court in ruling on the admissibility of the evidence, although such ruling was excepted to. Croom v. Croom (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 725.

Where all bills of exception and assignments of error were stricken from the record, and there was no fundamental error apparent In the pleadings, charge, or judgment, the judgment must be affirmed. Gulf Refining Co. v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 549.

Where there was no assignment of errors filed in the court below, except in the motion for a new trial, those in such motion should be copied in the brief, and while such copied assignment need not be letter perfect, a reconstructed assignment is insufficient, and authorizes the Court of Appeals to hold the assignment waived and abandoned under Court of Appeals, rule 29 (142 S. W. xii), notwithstanding appellant's statement that they were not waived. Schaaf v. Fancher (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 861.

Art. 1613. [1022] Docket of causes and disposition of same.

In general.—Where record on appeal was filed in the Court of Civil Appeals December 6th, and on December 8th the cause was set for submission on February 21st following of which appellant's counsel were duly notified on December 10th, but appellant left no brief at appellee's attorney's office until after office hours on February 19th, held, the appeal would be dismissed for failure to file briefs in time required by art. 211 and Court of Civil Appeals, although appellant's leading counsel being from another state, did not know of the requirement of the rules as to briefs. West Louisiana Bank v. Terry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 639.

Art. 1614. [1019] Appearance by brief, etc.—When any cause or suit may be taken up from any inferior court to the Court of Civil Appeals, by appeal, writ of error, or otherwise, it shall be lawful for the attorney of both plaintiff and defendant to file papers of said suit or cause, written, typewritten, or printed briefs or arguments, if written, not to exceed fifteen pages, and said court shall be required to notice the same as if it were the person appearing for said attorney and shall not dismiss any suit or cause where such brief or argument is filed, for want of further prosecution. [Acts 1909, S. S., p. 270; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 107, § 1, amending art. 1614, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

1. Necessity of briefs.—Assignments of error that the judgment is contrary to and not supported by the evidence, and that the court erred in giving judgment for plaintiff against defendant, for the reason, for the reason that the evidence is insufficient to support the contention of plaintiff complied with the contract sued on, without a brief are insufficient to require the Court of Civil Appeals to review them. Stump v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 602.

Failure to file statement of facts is not alone ground for affirmance; and, if the defendant in error desires to have an affirmance, it is necessary for him to file briefs in accordance with rule 42 for the Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiv), and where he fails to do so the court can only dismiss the writ of error for want of prosecution. Edwards v. Holder (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 480.

An appellant is not required to brief the cause to have his appeal considered, but in case of failure the court is left to make its own search of the record for error. Williams v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1117.

Though an assignment of error was poorly briefed, yet where the error was obvious, it will be considered. Kibby v. Kossler (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 277.

The action of the trial court in sustaining general demurrer to the petition constituted a holding that the facts stated in the petition, if proved, would not constitute a cause of action, a proceeding which raised the question of fundamental error and must be considered by the Court of Civil Appeals regardless of the proper briefing of the case. Elder v. Hamilton (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 243.

2. Form and requisites in general.—If appellant on appeal under art. 4644, from order on temporary injunction, elects under art. 4645 to brief the case, brief need not comply with rules for ordinary appeals. Tyree v. Road Dist. No. 5, Navarro County (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 644.

Where court is simply left to presume that exceptions were taken to admission of evidence complained of, and that proper bills were prepared, approved, and filed, in such condition of brief appelleant is not entitled to have ruling complained of reviewed. White v. Tucker (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 751.

3. Statement of case or of facts—In general.—An assignment that the court erred in sustaining defendant's exception to plaintiff's plea shows no error, where the statement in the brief and the record itself do not show any exception to the plea. Walker v. J. N. Hirsch Cooperage Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 1116.

In view of rule 31 (142 S. W. xii), court will not review submitted special issue on ground that it assumed facts where evidence was not incorporated in the brief. Strawm Coal Co. v. Trojan (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 256.

An instruction as to damages which limited jury in its award to damages accruing only up to time of trial (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 798, where appelleant refused. Where test of witnesses in contest as to insolvency is not set out in the brief, the court on appeal will not go to the statement of facts or the transcript for the testimony to pass on its admissibility. Nimitz v. Holland (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 244.

When a statement is made of the evidence in assignment of error in appelleant's brief, the brief should set out the evidence quoted from the statement of facts, and not merely to what the evidence as to what the evidence shows; such assignments being a matter for the court to decide. McKay v. Lucas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 172.

5. Setting out instructions.—Assignments of error to the refusal of the trial court to submit three special issues cannot be considered, where there was no statement of the special issues as they were presented to the court. Before the case was submitted to the jury, nor even that they were requested and refused by the court at any time. Walker v. J. N. Hirsch Cooperage Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 1116.

Assignments complaining of the argument of plaintiff's counsel in his closing speech, taken by the reporter and incorporated in a brief of exceptions, and copied at length in appellant's brief, were not so presented under the rules as to require consideration. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Swift (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 135.

Assignments of error urged in the brief must be, at least, substantially copies of the assignments presented in the motion for new trial filed in the trial court, and an assignment of error not embraced as to motion cannot be considered. Holland v. Henderson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 361; McFarland v. Burk Burnett-Harris Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 571.

Assignments of error are insufficient where they consist of the motion for new trial, and the paragraphs thereof are not copied in the brief as required by court rule 29 (142 S. W. x), but are radically revised or reconstructed. Waco Oil & Refining Co. v. Texas Refining Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 987.

Under Rules for the Courts of Civil Appeals, the No. 29 (142 S. W. xii), a brief where-in the assignments were numbered from 1 to 10, consecutively, omitting 4 and 5, was improper, as not numbering all the assignments consecutively. Russell v. Old River Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 706.

Where there are no assignments carried into the brief presenting the exclusion of evidence as error, it cannot be considered. Holmes v. Tennant (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 798.

Where there was no assignment of errors filed in the court below, except in the motion for a new trial, those in such motion should be copied in the brief, and while such copied assignment need not be letter perfect, a reconstructed assignment is insufficient, and authorizes the Court of Civil Appeals to hold the assignment waived and abandoned under Court of Civil Appeals rule 29 (142 S. W. xii), notwithstanding appelleant's statement that they were not waived. Schaff v. Fancher (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 861.

Claim of appellant in its motion for new trial that the verdict was excessive, not being brought forward in its brief, is to be considered abandoned. Dallas Power & Light Co. v. Edwards (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 910.

Assignments of error contained in the motion for new trial are not required to be copied in the brief, where subsequent assignments are copied and properly identify the paragraphs of the motion. Barkley v. Gibbs (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 1099.

Though the statute provides that an assignment shall be sufficient which directs attention to the error complained of, the rule of the Supreme Court, providing that assignments shall be copied into the brief, should always be complied with. Olguin v. Apodaca (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 166.
Assignments of error in appellant's brief which are reconstructed from the motion for new trial and copies of any assignments of error contained in the record are not entitled to be considered under art. 1612, and Rules 23 and 29 (142 S. W. xii) for Courts of Civil Appeals. Texas Blue Bonnet Oil Co. v. W. C. Jones Drilling Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 972.

12. Rev. St. art. 1911, art. 2013, appellant's brief need not present the assignment in the motion for new trial, the statute being simply directory. Marvin v. Kennison Bros. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 531.

Under Supreme Court rule 101 (142 S. W. xxvii), as amended to conform to art. 1612, appellant could present in his brief, without incorporating in the transcript, an assignment of error relating to the failure of the court after final judgment to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, as requested by appellant, the rule being a construction of the statute, and binding on the Courts of Civil Appeal.

Brief of appellant held not to contain assignments of error, though it referred to copies certain of the trial court's findings of fact and designated them assignments of error, such alleged assignments not charging that the trial court committed any error, and not being followed up by any proposition in the brief, as required by the rule, although it contained what were called propositions, which were mere recitals of certain testimony contained in the statement of facts, not asserting any proposition of law. Busbee v. Busbee (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 446.

9. Citation of authorities.—Under rule 36 (142 S. W. xiii) of the Court of Civil Appeals, it is improper to present in the brief letters and statements from universities and colleges of the United States as to the construction to be placed upon the language of a statute. Cobb v. Gregory v. Dies (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 457.

The statement of the brief that authorities will be found “in argument under separate cover” is not in compliance with Rules of the Courts of Civil Appeals, No. 36 (142 S. W. xiii), requiring the authorities to be annexed to each proposition with its statement, and at the end of it a reference simply to the authorities relied on, if any, in support of it, giving the order in which they should be cited. Thompson v. Dodge (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 556.

10. References to record.—Where there are references in plaintiff's brief reading, “S. of F. p. —,” it is not duty of Court of Civil Appeals to read entire statement of facts to verify statements in brief that certain facts were proved, such statements being followed by references. Caffrey v. Bartlett Western Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 810.

Brief, which clearly presented the points relied upon for reversal with sufficient references to the record to enable court to apply facts without unnecessary labor in searching the record, held sufficient, though rules, in some respects, were not technically complied with. Lee v. Gilechrist Cotton Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 977.

12. Printing and typewriting.—Briefs consisting of 19 pages, each of single-spaced typewritten matter, were not in compliance with the rules, and, in the absence of good excuse, the appeal will be dismissed. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 652.

A typewritten brief is “written” as distinguished from “printed,” and must be limited in its number of pages to 15, under Rev. St. art. 1614, and Rules of the Courts of Civil Appeals, No. 37 (149 S. W. x). Johnson v. Mangum (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 703.

13. Filing and time for filing—in appellate court.—Where record on appeal in divorce case was filed in Court of Civil Appeals, September 18, 1918, appellant's briefs, filed January 25, 1919, twelve days before case was submitted, and after appellant had been notified it was set for submission February 5th, were not filed in time required. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 652.

15. Defects, objections, and amendments.—An appellant's brief, violating rules of Court of Civil Appeals, will not be considered, except generally, though no objection has been made to it. Clegg v. Temple Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 946.

A brief on appeal which fails to comply with the rules will not be considered. Buvens v. Barden (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 333.

Failure to comply with rules of Supreme Court on subject of briefing cases, especially rules 29, 30, and 31 (142 S. W. xii, xiii), constitutes abandonment of assignment, resulting in affirmance, unless fundamental error is discovered. Caffrey v. Bartlett Western Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 810.

Appellees' brief, consisting of 53 pages, in gross violation of rules, will not be considered by Court of Civil Appeals. Lopez v. Vela (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1115.

16. Striking out brief.—A motion to strike out appellant's brief and assignments of error on the ground that they do not comply with the rules, and were filed too late to afford reasonable time to properly reply, will be overruled, where appellee has filed a comprehensive answering brief. Ward v. Compton (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 129.

17. Scope and effect.—Under rules 40, 41, for the Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiv), where appellants alone have filed a brief, the court must regard such brief as a proper presentation of the case without examining the record. Yates v. Buffalo State Bank (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 619; Hodge v. Keels (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 615; Blue v. Conner (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 553; Leather v. Craig (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 985.

Where defendant did not deny in brief that certain testimony stood uncontradicted, appellate court will accept statement as true in view of rule 41 (142 S. W. xiv). City of Weatherford Water, Light & Ice Co. v. Velit (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 986.

Where appellants make no statement, and do not file a supplemental brief contesting the statements made by appellees, the Court of Civil Appeals will take such statements as correctly reflecting the facts of the record. Russell v. Old River Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 705.

Under Supreme Rules of Court 40 and 41 (142 S. W. xiv), court will accept unchallenged statements of facts in appellant's brief as part of statement of facts. Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 690.

In addition, the giving of which is not assigned as error in appellant's brief, will not be considered; objection thereto having been waived. Bradshaw v. Brown (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1071.

Court of Civil Appeals rule 41 (142 S. W. xiv), that "whatever of the statement of the proposition * * * in his brief is not contested will be considered as acquiesced in," requires acceptance of a statement so made by appellant. Standard Rice Co. v. Broussard (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 322.

Where defendants, on appeal from an order overruling their plea of privilege, advanced a proposition as to the construction of Rev. St. art. 1330, exception S. which was conceded by plaintiff, the defendants cannot thereafter question the soundness of the proposition. Union Woolen Mills v. Starke (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 567.

Under rule 42 governing Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiv), providing that, when appellant or plaintiff in error fails to prepare a cause for submission, appellee may file a brief in the manner required of appellant, except shaping proposition to show correctness of Judgment, appellee's brief must be accepted as correct presentation of case. Reece v. LeRoy (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 500.

Execution by defendant in error of an agreement on file among the papers that plaintiff in error could file the transcript and record in the Court of Civil Appeals and file its briefs at any time before a specified date, and that defendant in error might file his briefs at any time prior to two weeks before submission of the cause, operated as an appearance in the Court of Civil Appeals by defendant in error. Indemnity Co. of America v. Mahaffey (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 861.

18. Failure to file, or to file in time—Effect in general.—Consideration of assignments of error will not be refused because they and appellant's brief were not filed in the time prescribed. Russell v. Old River Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 705; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 318; Hall v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1110.

Where briefs have not been filed by the parties on appeal, the reviewing court can consider only fundamental errors. Holguin v. Woodhawn Real Estate & Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 899.

A complaint that the briefs of plaintiff in error were not filed in time for defendant in error to file a brief cannot be entertained where defendant in error filed a brief. City of Aransas Pass v. Eureka Fire Hose Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 339.

19. Excuses.—An alleged verbal agreement by appellee's attorneys regarding the time of filing of briefs will not be considered, when disputed by appellee's attorneys, although undisputed verbal agreement would be recognized. Daniel v. Nixon (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 579; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 318; Hall v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1110.

Upon a motion for affirmance of judgment for failure to file brief within required time, that court reporter failed to transcribe testimony in form required by art. 1924, did not excuse appelleants, where no attempt to mandamus the reporter under article 2065 was made. Frutt v. Blesi (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 714.

20. Dismissal.—Where no briefs had been filed at the time writ of error was submitted, and no sufficient cause for the failure was shown, a motion to dismiss the writ for want of prosecution is well taken. Zarate v. Cantu (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 282; Burnett v. Foster (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 574.

Appellant failing to file brief, and appellee's brief not complying with Courts of Civil Appeals rule 42 (142 S. W. xiv), there must be a dismissal of appeal, instead of an affirmance. Ariana v. Clark (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 506; Stocking v. Laas (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 506.

Where no briefs are filed on an appeal from an order refusing to vacate a receiver, the appeal will be dismissed. Hamilton v. American Nat. Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 258.

Motion, under rule 39 (142 S. W. xii), to dismiss appeal for noncompliance with Rev. St. 1911, art. 2115, as to time for filing brief, held not governed by rule 6 (142 S. W. xi) as to time for motions affecting formalities in procedure. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Jefferson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 211.

No briefs having been filed by appellant, appellee's motion to dismiss appeal will be granted; there being no showing that a copy of appellant's brief was filed in trial court, or that there was a waiver of such filing. Kuehn v. Leubner (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 993.

Where appellant telegraph company claims that the federal law precludes recovery in an action for mental anguish arising on interstate messages, and that it is apparent on the face of the proceedings that appellee was not entitled to judgment, appeal will not be dismissed by reason of mere failure of one of the parties to brief the cause within the prescribed time; the claimed error being fundamental. Western Telegraph Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 218.

Rules for the Courts of Civil Appeals, No. 8 (142 S. W. xi), relative to time for filing motion to dismiss after filing of record in the Court of Civil Appeals, is without application when a question of jurisdiction is involved, and cannot apply to a motion to dismisses for failure to file briefs. Zarate v. Cantu (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 282.

CHAPTER SEVEN

HEARING CAUSES

Art. 1616. [1022] Hearing of cases, order of.
Dismissal for want of prosecution.—Where record on appeal was filed in the Court of Civil Appeals December 6th, and on December 8th the cause was set for submission on February 24th following of which appellant's counsel were duly notified on December 10th, but appellant left no brief at appellant's attorney's office until after office hours on February 19th, held the appeal would be dismissed for failure to file briefs in time required by art. 2113 and the rules of the Court of Civil Appeals, although appellant's leading counsel, being from another state, did not know of the requirement of the rules as to briefs. West Louisiana Bank v. Terry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 538.

Art. 1617. [1023] Cases decided in their order, except, etc.
Submission of causes.—Where defendant in error confesses the error, and moves to advance and determine the cause, which motion is consented to by plaintiff in error, the cause will be advanced and determined. Phoenix Fire Ins. Co. of Brooklyn v. Cain (Civ. App.) 21 S. W. 709.

Submission of an appeal will be postponed on motion filed prior to the submission to permit the taking of proper proceedings in the district court to perfect the record. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 478.

Art. 1618. [1026] Death does not abate, when.
Effect of death in general.—This article is not applicable, where the questions involved on the appeal have become moot by reason of the death of a party, such as in a divorce case. Ledbetter v. Ledbetter (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 576.

Under the practice adopted in the state which, in the absence of statute, must be followed, where a party dies after judgment in his favor, but before a writ of error is sued out, it is a necessary condition to review that the petition for error show this fact and ask for service on the executor or administrator if there be one, and, if not, state this fact, and show that there is no necessity for such a legal representative, and pray for citation against decedent's heirs, whose names and places of residence should be given since error cannot be sued out against a party who died after judgment. Saner-Ragley Lumber Co. v. Spivey (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 578.

The showing, where a successful party has died after judgment, but before error is sued out, that there was no administrator on his estate, and no necessity for any, so as to allow writ of error to be prosecuted against his heirs, should be made in trial court, in the petition for error, and cannot be first made in the appellate court, especially after the time for suing out the writ has expired. Id.
CHAPTER EIGHT
CERTIFICATION OF QUESTIONS TO SUPREME COURT, ETC.

Art. 1619. Questions of law certified to supreme court.

Art. 1620. Dissenting opinion; point of dissent certified to supreme court.

Article 1619. [1043] Questions of law certified to supreme court.

Certification of questions in general.—A motion to certify to Supreme Court will not be granted by the Court of Civil Appeals where a writ of error will lie to invoke the Supreme Court's jurisdiction. Marnett Oil & Gas Co. v. Munsey (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 867.

Questions which may be certified—Dependent on Arts. 1521, 1522.—On appeal to the court of civil appeals in condemnation proceedings instituted by a county, a judge who owns land in such county is not "interested in the question to be determined," within the meaning of the statute, and, where there is a dissent to his right to sit in such case, the cause will not be certified to the supreme court, because, though the question whether he is "interested," within the meaning of the Constitution, is raised, there is no question as to the "validity of a statute." Herf v. James, 86 Tex. 230, 24 S. W. 298.

Dependent on Art. 1591.—In cases where the decision of the Court of Civil Appeals is final, the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction of a certificate of dissent; but the appellate court may in such cases certify a question because deemed by it advisable, or because of conflict with the decisions of other Courts of Civil Appeals. Perry v. Greer, 110 Tex. 549, 221 S. W. 581; Wilson v. Giraud (Sup.) 195 S. W. 845.

Where Court of Civil Appeals concurred in original opinion and overruled motion for rehearing with a dissent, a certificate to Supreme Court, stating that order overruling rehearing motion was set aside on court's own motion and questions certified because of doubt regarding original decision, the certificate is not based on art. 1620, authorizing certificate where judge dissents, but on this article and the Supreme Court may decide the questions, though the case is within the final jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals. Wilson v. Giraud (Sup.) 195 S. W. 845.

The Court of Civil Appeals had the authority to certify question as to whether negligence of defendant was the proximate cause of the death of plaintiff's horse to the Supreme Court, either because it deemed it advisable to do so under this article, or because of probable conflict between its holding and that of other Courts of Civil Appeals under art. 1623, although the case was one of which its jurisdiction was final. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Lovell, 110 Tex. 546, 221 S. W. 929, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 179 S. W. 1111, and answers conformed to 223 S. W. 1024.

The Supreme Court has authority to answer a question certified by the Court of Civil Appeals, as one which such court deems it advisable to present, though the case in which the question arises falls within the final jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Tabor (Sup.) 230 S. W. 397.

Answer of Supreme Court.—Supreme Court's consideration of case on certified question from Court of Civil Appeals is restricted by statute, to the certified question, and its answer thereto must be made in the light of the certified facts. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank, 109 Tex. 555, 213 S. W. 584.

Since the certificate of questions to the Supreme Court does not, under the statute, authorize the transfer of the entire case, or substitute the Supreme Court's jurisdiction for that of the Court of Civil Appeals, the Supreme Court will express no opinion on certified questions as to the sufficiency of the evidence, excluding that not admissible, to support the trial court's judgment. Magee v. Paul, 110 Tex. 470, 221 S. W. 254, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 525, and answers conformed to (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1118.

It is statutory and settled practice in Supreme Court to confine its answer strictly to the very question certified to it by a Court of Civil Appeals. Roy v. Schneider, 110 Tex. 359, 221 S. W. 880, denying rehearing 110 Tex. 369, 218 S. W. 478.

Art. 1620. [1040] Dissenting opinion; point of dissent certified to supreme court.

Certification of questions in general.—In cases where the decision of the Court of Civil Appeals is final, the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction of a certificate of dissent. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Lovell, 110 Tex. 546, 221 S. W. 929, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 179 S. W. 1111, and answers conformed to 223 S. W. 1024; Herf v. James, 86 Tex. 230, 24 S. W. 396; Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Ramey, 86 Tex. 452, 25 S. W. 406; Wilson v. Giraud (Sup.) 195 S. W. 845; Perry v. Greer, 110 Tex. 549, 221 S. W. 581; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Tabor (Sup.) 230 S. W. 397.

Questions which should be certified.—An action for divorce, in which one judge of the Court of Civil Appeals dissented from the decision that the evidence was insufficient to warrant the decree for plaintiff, will not be certified to the Supreme Court, in view of arts. 1521, 1590, and 1591, especially when it would result in great delay in the determination of the case to certify it. McCrory v. McCrory (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 187.

Scope of review in Supreme Court.—In action for negligent delay in shipment of cattle, which judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals was reversed on the ground that the evidence did not support the conclusion that the defendant was guilty of negligence, and in which the Court of Civil Appeals concurred in the judgment of the lower court, the question of the sufficiency of the evidence as to which the Court of Civil Appeals dissents, as well as the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to warrant the judgment, on which they were also agreed, being exclusively within the jurisdiction of such court, Gates v. Fort Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. (Sup.) 232 S. W. 493.

Art. 1623. Conflict with decision of another court of civil appeals; question and record transmitted and certified to supreme court.

Duty and propriety of certification in general.—In a county court case, the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals is final, unless the Supreme Court has jurisdiction under this article. First Texas State Ins. Co. v. Hightower, 110 Tex. 52, 214 S. W. 299.

The Court of Civil Appeals had the authority to certify question as to whether negligence of defendant was the proximate cause of the death of plaintiff’s horse to the Supreme Court, either because it deemed it advisable to do so under art. 1519, or because of probable conflict between its holding and that of other Courts of Civil Appeals under article 1623, although the case was one of which its jurisdiction was final. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Lovell, 110 Tex. 546, 221 S. W. 929, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 179 S. W. 1111, and answers confirmed (Sup.) 223 S. W. 1024.

The question here involved is not the decision of the Court of Civil Appeals as to the facts, but the conflict between the decision of the Courts of Civil Appeals, mandamus to compel certification of the question to the Supreme Court will be issued; the Court of Civil Appeals having final jurisdiction over the case. Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Rainey (Sup.) 232 S. W. 251.

The conflict between the Courts of Civil Appeals, mandamus to compel certification of the question to the Supreme Court will be issued; the Court of Civil Appeals having final jurisdiction over the case. Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Rainey (Sup.) 232 S. W. 251.

Nature and extent of conflict in decisions.—Action to recover corporate stock transferred pursuant to a written agreement, holdings that plaintiff was not precluded from establishing a larger parol contract of which written transfer of stock to defendant was but a part, and that defendant bore a trust relationship to plaintiff, held not in conflict with decisions of other Courts of Civil Appeals. Stuart v. Meyer (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 615.

In determining what constitutes a conflict in opinions of appellate courts such as would warrant a certification of the question, the cases must be of such a nature that one would operate to overrule the other in case they were both rendered in the same court. Wilby v. Overland Co. of California v. Chapman (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 978.

A decision, merely sustaining a right of appeal from a judgment, in the absence of a motion to set aside a special verdict or for a new trial, is not in conflict with the decision that a review may be had on appeal of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the judgment, so as to give the Supreme Court jurisdiction, as the case appeared from the county court, where the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals is otherwise final. First Texas State Ins. Co. v. Hightower, 110 Tex. 52, 214 S. W. 299.

There is no conflict between decisions sustaining the right to attack findings of the court for insufficient support for avoidance, and a decision denying the right presenting special findings of the jury for lack of evidence to support them, so as to sustain the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in a county court case. Ibid.

In an action for land in which defendant pleaded a parol sale to him, holding that plaintiff was precluded from introducing under the general denial interposed by statute evidence showing that the property was a homestead of himself and his wife, and that the sale was therefore void, held not in conflict with another case holding that defendant had failed to establish prima facie title by agreement or entoppel as pleaded by him so that there was no necessity for avoidance, and the latter case need not be certified to the Supreme Court because of conflict. Davies v. Rutland (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1114.

Opinion of the Court of Civil Appeals, in a case involving a question of boundary, and therefore within its exclusive jurisdiction under art. 1591, held in conflict with opinions of other Courts of Civil Appeals so as to require certificate of questions to Supreme Court. Braumiller v. Burke (Sup.) 230 S. W. 400.

A decision that evidence of a marked line, which did not agree with the courses and distances in the field notes or with described monuments, is incompetent to contest the boundary established by the courses and distances, does not conflict with decisions of other Courts of Civil Appeals that a marked line, which was presumably made by the original surveyor, was evidence of the location of the boundary, though it was not on the map on the plot. Braumiller v. Burke (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 907.

Conflict with decisions of Supreme Court.—A conflict with a decision of the Supreme Court is not authority for certifying a question to the Supreme Court. Stuart v. Meyer (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 615.
Art. 1625. Action of supreme court on; effect and finality of.

Judgment after certification.—Where the Court of Civil Appeals certified a question to the Supreme Court, which answered it in the affirmative, affirming the opinion of the Court of Civil Appeals, such opinion of the Court of Civil Appeals, originally handed down, reversing and rendering the judgment, stands as the law of the case. Kanaman v. Gahagan (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 797.

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

Questions which should be certified.—Questions will not be certified by the appellate court to the Supreme Court unless some useful purpose will be served by doing so. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Peveto (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 552.

CHAPTER NINE

JUDGMENT OF THE COURT

Art. 1626. If judgment reversed, when remanded

Dismissal of appeal.—Where no motion was made by party to dismiss appeal because of defective bond, it is too late for court, after it has rendered judgment, to dismiss it upon its own motion. Slaughter v. Morton (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 897.

Appeal from judgment requiring school trustees to observe teacher’s contract will be dismissed, where contract term had expired. Hart v. Bigton (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 592.

Where the Court of Civil Appeals reversed judgment for defendant, it could not render judgment for plaintiff, where the amount of damages depended solely on the testimony of an interested witness, though such testimony was not contradicted. West Lumber Co. v. Goodrich (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 183, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Goodrich v. West Lumber Co. 182 S. W. 341.

Where appellees filed motion to enter judgment in their favor on the jury's verdict, disregarding certain findings on issues erroneously submitted, and refused to move for new trial, they cannot on appeal question the authority of appellate court to enter judgment in favor of appellants in accordance with the findings on such issues that the trial court should have entered. Kendrick v. Polk (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 526.
It is the duty of appellate court to render such judgment on the undisputed facts as the trial court should have rendered, where it clearly appears that the case was fully developed; and, where it clearly appears that no judgment can be rendered against defendant appellee, the court will not reverse and remand simply in order that other persons who might be liable be made parties defendant. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 877.

Where the record brings to the notice of an appellate court that necessary parties have been omitted from the suit, it will refuse to render a judgment, which would not be binding upon the parties and would render the action nugatory and vain. Barnmore v. Durrach (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 542.

On appeal in a suit for the construction of the will, where the only issue of fact was the determination of the persons included in the expression "families" used in the will, the petition, alleging that defendants were the only brothers and sisters of testator or the heirs of a deceased brother, and that they died without issue, the answer, admitting that the defendants were the only heirs at law of the testator, and an agreed statement of facts that the defendants were the only heirs at law of testator, sufficiently determined that defendants were the family of testator to warrant a rendition of judgment for them by the Court of Appeals without remand. Norton v. Smith (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 542.

The Court of Civil Appeals in reversing a case should not render judgment, unless the evidence was of such character that the district court should have directed a verdict. Mills v. Mills (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 915.

Where the testimony on the record as made does not raise the issue submitted to the jury, and the trial court should have instructed a verdict for the appellants, it is duty of Court of Civil Appeals to reverse the judgment of the trial court and render judgment, particularly since it affirmatively appears from the record both on pleadings and on evidence that appellants cannot strengthen their case on another trial. Gulf Production Co. v. Palmer (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1017.

Where the case had been fully developed showing plaintiff's action to be barred by limitations, the Court of Civil Appeals in reversing judgment for plaintiff will not remand the cause, but will render judgment for defendant. Dillard v. Dugger Grocery Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 360.

— Remand for new trial or further proceedings.—Judgment for defendant, in action by plaintiff as owner for possession of buggies, will be reversed, and plaintiff allowed to amend its petition to allege the proper grounds for relief, where the petition shows plaintiff to be in law a mortgagee entitled to relief. Joseph W. Moon Buggy Co. v. Moore-Hustead Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 328.

In trespass to try title, where it incidentally appeared that if proper parties were in the case the defendant might be entitled to affirmative relief by reforming a mortgage through which he was claiming, the judgment will not be reversed for the purpose of allowing defendant for the first time to make application to make additional parties. Alfalfa Lumber Co. v. Mudgett (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 337.

In an action to cancel a deed, and to restrain foreclosure of a vendor's lien thereon reserved in a note assigned to defendant, where judgment refusing relief against the holder of the note is reversed on facts showing plaintiffs are entitled to the relief asked, judgment will be entered without remand to enable defendant to recover a personal judgment on the note; no such relief having been demanded. Sessions v. Sanders (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 180.

Where the files were lost, and appellant made no attempt to substitute records under arts. 2157-2163, and his bills and assignments showed no error, he was not entitled to a new trial "in order to permit intelligent consideration by the Court of Civil Appeals." Massingill v. Moody (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 265.

Where a cause has been tried on an improper theory, the cause must be remanded, where it appears that, under a proper view of the case, the appellee might make out a case, although, as tried, he did not. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Langford (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1087.

Jttna Life Ins. Co. v. Dunken (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 241.

Where neither pleadings nor evidence in a chattel mortgage foreclosure in a county court showed the value of the property, the judgment will be reversed, with instructions to amend, and the cause will not be dismissed, on the ground that no jurisdiction is shown. Houston Harbor Sales Co. v. Levand (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 379.

In an action for injuries to a shipment of live stock, where plaintiff called all the witnesses, who knew anything about the accident, and the evidence was wholly insufficient to establish the railroad company's negligence, a judgment for plaintiff should be reversed without remand. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Hinnant (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 860.

Wrongful erection of $285.45, by his own admissions in testifying is not entitled to recover over $168.11, and it also appears that probably he is not entitled to recover in excess of $22.20, instead of reforming judgment for plaintiff for $200, the case will be reversed for new trial. Jennings v. Pollard (Civ. App.) 203 S.
W. 415.

Court on appeal is not authorized to reverse and remand to enable a party to amend his pleading. Bunn v. City of Laredo (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 675.

Where appellate court sustains exceptions to petition because cause of action has been defectively or insufficiently pleaded, it is proper to remand case to give oppor­

the time suit was tried, they having been amended pending appeal, so as to be en­

As the burden is on one claiming land by adverse possession for the period of limitation by fencing to identify the particular land to which he was entitled under plea of limitation, he cannot complain that on appeal the cause was remanded to afford him an opportunity to supply the defect by evidence without grant of new trial. Fielder v.
Houston Oil Co. (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 791.

Where court concludes that great preponderance of the evidence shows verdict to be excessive, but cannot determine to what extent it is excessive, court will

Where the record shows that plaintiff cannot recover for reasons other than those stated by the trial court, a new trial will not be ordered, though plaintiffs contended that they were misled by the decision of the trial court. McBride v. United Irc. Co.
(Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 896.

Where plaintiffs were unable to show that citations dated August 9, 1916, the day after the filing of the original petition, had been in fact issued by the clerk and due rigion used to obtain service on defendants, because plaintiffs' former attorney was then in military service, held, though judgment for plaintiffs must be reversed because the evidence did not show issuance of the citations and diligence sufficient to stop the running of limitations, the cause will be remanded, where plaintiffs asserted they would on retrial be able to prove by their former attorney that the citations had been in fact issued, etc. Ferguson v. Estes & Alexander (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 463.

When it appears that the case has not been argued and that the court's refusal to the truth of the allegations of defendants' plea of privilege, controverted by plaintiff, it becomes the duty of the Court of Civil Appeals to reverse and remand for trial of the issue, rather than to remand with instruction to make the transfer under the statute, though the aid of counsel should have been sustained, In the absence of proof on either side.

In an action on a fire policy, in the absence of evidence on the point, but of the necessary pleading of estoppel against defendant insurer to assert forfeiture of the policy by the minor's possession with the inventory clause, insurer's contention that the insurer is estopped will not be considered further than to determine whether, in view of the necessity of reversing, the cause should be remanded for amendment of the pleadings to make the issue of estoppel, and for subsequent trial on that issue. Camden

In an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665) by a widow, as administratrix, for the benefit of heirs and minor children, a judgement which awarded damages in favor of the widow and a minor son, but denied all recovery to a minor daughter who had married shortly after the death of her father, is error necessitating reversal of the entire judgment and a remand, for rule 62A is not applicable, the issue of negligence being a single one applicable to all of the beneficiar­

A correct judgment will not be reversed and remanded to permit appellant to ad­ determined, the judgment may be reversed, and the case remanded for trial upon such remaining issue. Pears v. Fish (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 507.

In lessor's action to cancel oil lease, where lower court found that the lease was executed by the husband alone and was a homestead, and where there were no pleadings setting up forgery, and no sufficient evidence to impeach the instrument, which appears to have been duly signed and acknowledged by both husband and wife, appellate court, in reversing judgment canceling the lease, will not render judgment for defendants, but will remand case. McKay v. Lucas (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 172.

Defendant, appellant, having cross-assignment judgment is erroneous and must be set aside, cannot contend it should be set aside in part and affirmed in part, there having been no separable issues, Court of Civil Appeals having right simply to reverse and remand for new trial, particularly where it appears evidence has not been fully developed, and cause was tried on incorrect theory of law. McWhorter v. Langley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 364.

On appeal from a judgment of the county court in a case within the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace, where the record does not show that the county court acquired jurisdiction by appeal from the justice, the Court of Civil Appeals should reverse the judgment and remand the case, with directions to dismiss it unless the lower court's jurisdiction was properly made to appear, not merely dismiss the appeal. Perry v. Greer, 110 Tex. 549, 221 S. W. 951.

Instead of dismissing appeal from judgment of the county court in a case in which, because of the small amount in controversy, it could have jurisdiction only on appeal from final judgment of a justice, the record not affirmatively showing that there was any trial or judgment in the justice court, and the parties having failed to supply the missing record, though having ample time after suggestion of the defect, judgment will be reversed, and cause remanded, with direction to dismiss, unless the jurisdiction fact be legally shown. Perry v. Greer (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 714.

In tenants' action to restrain landlord from taking further steps in court to obtain the possession, where the judge only passed on the sufficiency of the petition as against a general demurrer, and the case must be reversed. It may be ordered that the temporary restraining order issued by the Court of Civil Appeals shall remain in force until a further hearing on the application for temporary injunction shall be had by the trial judge, after remand. Doherty v. Connell, 228 S. W. 1019.

Baugh v. Baugh (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 796.

On reversing an order overruling a plea of privilege, where it is apparent from the record as a whole that proof of the location of a certain town can be supplied, the correctness of the decision of the case being dependent upon the location of such town, the cause will be remanded for a trial upon that issue so that the case may be fully developed. Cassidy-Southwestern Commission Co. v. Chapik Bros. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 215.

Where judgment for plaintiff in suit to cancel deeds for mental weakness of grantor and general overreaching by his brother, the grantee, must be reversed for insufficiency of evidence to sustain the findings of the court, but the facts may not have been fully developed, the cause will be remanded for a new trial. Duckels v. Dougherty (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 720.

Where cross-action of one defendant against another was dismissed without prejudice to the right of the first defendant to institute new suit for the damages claimed, such ruling in effect sustained the exceptions interposed by the second defendant to the cross-bill of the first, so that appeal of the first defendant is virtually an appeal from an order granting defendant's demurrer, and on reversal the cause should be remanded for trial of the issues raised by the cross-bill of the first defendant. R. W. Taylor & Co. v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1102.

Where insufficiency of proof to warrant submission of issue to jury requires a reversal of a judgment, but where the court is not of the opinion that the facts were developed to such an extent as to make it impossible for plaintiff to supply the missing links, the court on reversing judgment will not render judgment for defendant, but will remand the case for new trial. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Rich (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 671.

Where the statement of facts is obviously incomplete and does not contain important parts of the evidence, the Court of Civil Appeals, on reversing judgment of lower court, will not render judgment for adverse party, but will remand the case for another trial. Mills v. Mills (Com. App.) 226 S. W. 919.

It appearing that the findings of the jury were without support in evidence, the Court of Civil Appeals properly could do but one thing, reverse the judgment and remand the cause for new trial for error of the trial court in overruling appellants' motion for new trial. Tompkins v. Hooker (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 351.

On appeal in an action involving title to land, a prayer for reversal of the judgment and the privilege of going to the jury on an issue of limitation will not be granted where it is impossible to raise such issue upon another trial. Gulf Production Co. v. Faust (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1017.

Ordinarily, in cases of appeals from the county court, which had no jurisdiction on account of the amount of the matter in controversy, the proper practice is to reverse the judgment and remand, with instructions to the county court to dismiss the cause,

but where it was only by amended petition that the jurisdictional amount was exceeded, and defendant appellant, by exception, and in the motion for new trial, raised the jurisdictional question only in the most general terms, while the excess in amount was hidden by a miscalculation due to inadvertence, the Court of Civil Appeals will not order dismissal, but merely demand, that plaintiff may amend if he so desires. Gulf,

The Court of Civil Appeals, on reversing judgment for insufficiency of conflicting

(Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 141.

Where plaintiff in trespass to try title should not have been permitted to recover without offering to reimburse defendant, who claimed under mortgage foreclosure, the court on appeal will not render judgment for defendant, but will remand, that plaintiff have opportunity to amend and the court to adjust the equities. De Guerra v. De Gonzalez (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 896.

Proceedings after remand.—Where an appellate court has rendered a decision and remanded a cause, the district court should confine its trial to the issues remanded, and, the others being res judicata, it was error not to instruct jury to find in accordance

If an appellate court had no jurisdiction to render judgment, the plea of privi-

Co. (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 265.

On retrial, lower court is required to order obers of appellate court in remanding

The law of the case controlling the decision becomes authority, and is not oblit-dica, though the court was mistaken in the assumption of the premise of the decision upon which the law was announced. Allen v. Berkheimer (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 647.

Where the pleadings and facts on second trial were not identical with those on the first, the judgment and decision of the Court of Civil Appeals on the former appeal did not so finally and fully adjudicate both the law and the facts as to justify the trial court on the second trial in striking out the answer of defendants, containing both general denial and other defensive pleas, and in rendering judgment for plaintiff without proof of any facts except the value of the rents sued for. Roberts v. Armstrong (Com.
App.) 231 S. W. 371.

Construction and effect of judgment.—The Court of Civil Appeals has full control over its judgments during its term. Henningsmeyer v. First State Bank of Conroe, 109

Where on reversal judgment was rendered in trespass to try title giving defendant right to writ if plaintiff did not make certain payment within 12 months, and on detain possession, time within which payment could be made did not start running where writ of error was asked for, until application therefor had been passed on. Hume v.

Moore (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 381.

An opinion on a former appeal of a case which recited certain facts shown by the evidence as strongly tending to support the defense of settlement, but which stated in substance that the issue of such settlement was one of fact for the jury, did not justify the giving of an instruction on the issue of settlement which pointed out the circumstances so as to be on the weight of the evidence. Dodson v. Watson (Civ. App.)
225 S. W. 586.

An appellant, after judgment appealed from has been affirmed because of his failure

[Acts 1892, S. S., p. 25, § 37; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 23, § 2, amending art. 1627, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Art. 1628. [1024] No reversal for want of form.

2. Prejudice to rights of party as ground of review—In general.—To authorize the appellate court to reverse a judgment for error, it must appear that the error was reasonably calculated to, and probably did, injure the appellant. Lancaster v. Maya (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 676; Ferguson v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 305 S. W. 512.

In partition suit, where there was nothing in the record to indicate that appellant would have fared any better, had the court enlarged the interest of others in the property, instead of awarding them a money judgment, made a change against his interest, he could not complain. Leach v. Leach (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 287.

The rule that the admission of immaterial evidence requires reversal unless it appears that no injury could have resulted does not obtain in Texas, where the rule is that there shall be no reversal for error in course of trial unless the appellate court shall be of opinion the error complained of amounted to a denial of the rights of appellant, causing rendition of improper judgment. Rule No. 62a, 149 S. W. x.

In suit by purchasers of railway securities against seller, erroneous holding that interest coupons attached to bonds sold were included in exclusion of the contract of sale, held harmless to purchasers, where they had been credited therewith. West v. Carlisle (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 515.

5. Errors as affecting party not entitled to succeed in any event.—In an action of trespass to try title to land which plaintiff claimed, his wife acquired with community funds, where the jury found that such property was the separate property of the wife, the wife's acquiescence in the wife's right as to the time if it was community was harmless, and judgment for defendant will not be disturbed; plaintiff having utterly failed to make out any title. Moss v. Ingram (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 258.

In suit by purchasers of railway securities against seller, erroneous holding that interest coupons attached to bonds sold were included in exclusion of the contract of sale, held harmless to purchasers, where they had been credited therewith. West v. Carlisle (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 515.

A statement by the trial court that he was doubtful whether the evidence justified submission to the jury the issue whether the contract claimed by plaintiff was made was not prejudicial to plaintiff where the evidence would have authorized the court to refuse to submit the issue. Harrison v. Harrison (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 393.

7. Presumption as to effect of error.—Despite Rule 62a for Courts of Civil Appeals (149 S. W. x), injury will be presumed when trial court erroneously excluded evidence constituting foundation of action or defense under such circumstances that it cannot reasonably be expected that it can be supplied by other evidence. Morris County Nat. Bank v. Parrish (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 939.

Where an objection is made to argument of counsel not set out in the bill, concerning special instructions, but the court states that the same was almost incoherent, in view of court rule 62a and of the discretion of the trial judge, it must be presumed that the jury was not misled, but were governed by the charge of the court, unless made to appear otherwise. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Terrazas (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 387.

It must be presumed that jurors understood and obeyed the instruction of the court, and that a withdrawal of remarks either by the attorney making them, or a direction by the court to disregard them, has removed any prejudice caused, and cured the error, unless prejudice is shown. Id.

Ludtke v. Murray (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 321.

Where plaintiff in error claimed that answer to the special issues showed that the jury was actuated by prejudice, but no single fact or circumstance was pointed out tending to show that the jury was prejudiced, an assignment of error on the ground of such prejudice will be overruled. Du B.sm v. Tyler (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 211.

In suit by tenant to recover possession from a subtenant holding under a parol lease for the term of the original lease where the only theory on which plaintiff could recover was that he had secured a renewal of the original lease after the commencement of the action, plaintiff cannot complain of the judgment which correctly found for defendant on all other issues in the case, including costs. Adams v. Van Mourick (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 721.

If trial court gave seller of machines, sued by buyer for damages from fraud, credit for what buyer received from farmers who bought machines from it, seller cannot complain; it having profited to that extent. Texas Harvester Co. v. Wilson-Whaley Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 574.

Defendant cannot complain that the court's charge required the jury to find in favor of the plaintiff mere evidential facts as well as the material issues. Klein v. Stahl (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 553.

In an action on a certificate of assessment, if there was both a personal liability and a lien on land, no complaint could be made by certain defendants because the judgment relieved them from personal liability. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 631.

10. Technical or formal errors.—Where the only errors disclosed are technical, the judgment will not be reversed in view of rule 52a (149 S. W. x). Wofford v. Herndon (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 353; Kerwin v. Mead (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 677.

Where defendant insurer admitted actual receipt of proofs of loss before suit was filed, there could be no possible injury to it from premature filing of suit, where costs were adjudged against plaintiffs. Royal Ins. Co. of Liverpool, England, v. Humphrey (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 426.

Under the maxim de minimis lex non curat, an error of less than three dollars in the assessment of damages will not work a reversal. Foster v. Wright (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1090.

11. Parties.—Misjoinder of parties is not cause for reversal where no prejudice appears. Langford v. Power (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 662; Western Union Telegraph Co. v. 384 in trespass to try title, any error in permitting one to intervene and prosecute suit, though corporation plaintiff had been dissolved, leaving, as contended, no suit in which to intervene, furnishes no ground for reversal; intervener being in fact a plaintiff and there being nothing to indicate that course pursued prejudiced appellants. Edwards v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 247.

If a necessary party, for whose use and benefit plaintiff assumed to sue, were personally present at trial of the suit, directing the suit as far as it affected his interests, judgment would not bind him, and there would be no reversible error in refusing to make him an actual party of record. Perkins v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 551.

12. Process.—Where appellant sustained no injury from trial court's overruling of motion to quash distress warrant, reversible error is not shown. Thames-Forward Realty Co. v. Melaun (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 268.

'Supp. V. S. Civ. St. Tex.'--25 385

To act in rescind sale because of seller's misrepresentations regarding indebtedness which buyer assumed, error in admitting hearsay testimony as to size of such indebtedness is not rendered harmless by appellee testifying seller admitted making misrepresentations where seller denied making admission. Richardson v. Cantrell (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 702.

Where oil scouts admitted on the stand that an oil lease was worth what it could be sold for, it was harmless, if error, to allow the other party to show what oil leases and stock were selling for in the locality at the time. Feden Iron & Steel Co. v. Jenkins (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 180.

Admission of testimony as to telephone conversation, by witness to whom conversation had been related by one of the parties thereto, was not prejudicial to plaintiff, where only fact testified to by such witness, not testified to by the party who had related conversation to him, was a fact alleged by petition, and as to that fact party stated he could not remember. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 552.

Any error in admitting evidence of a fact which is presumed, with no evidence to the contrary, is harmless. Hughes v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 946.

Where defendant's witnesses contradicted plaintiff's testimony as to the rail which was being handled when plaintiff claimed to have been injured, and plaintiff in rebuttal testified that defendant's witnesses were correct and his testimony was incorrect, the admission of the original petition, which alleged the facts in accordance with the corrected testimony, if error, was not prejudicial to defendant. Hines v. Bost (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 698.

If evidence received was inadmissible, error, if any, became harmless where court properly took case from jury. Planters' Oil Co. v. Gresham (Clv. App.) 202 S. W. 145.

If clerical error in the copy of a judgment offered by plaintiff in evidence rendered the judgment inadmissible, defendant by offering a correct copy cured any such error, and no injury resulted to him. Wingham v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 469.

Assignments of error in permitting a surveyor to point out on a map where the lines covered by deeds would be according to the description become immaterial, where the deeds were held not admissible. Land v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 591.

A cause will not be reversed by reason of error in exclusion of evidence where appellant would not have prevailed in any event. Burlington Buggy Co. v. Usrey (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 654; Smith's Heirs v. Hirsch (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 754.

The relevancy of testimony as to cranial depressions being the result of injury, as determined by the trial judge, will be disturbed only where it appears that complaining party was deprived of substantial benefit by exclusion of proper testimony. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1149.

32. Demurrer to evidence, dismissal, nonsuit, or direction of verdict.—Direction of verdict held harmless. Leeper-Curl Lumber Co. v. Barbazon (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 516; Dutton v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 726; Hines v. Rush (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 973. That the trial court on defendant's motion discharged the jury and rendered judgment for defendant without a verdict was merely equivalent to instruction of verdict for defendant upon the facts and the judgment was proper, notwithstanding that the direction of verdict was erroneous in favor of plaintiffs was committed. Peterson v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 550.

34. Instructions to Jury—Prejudicial effect in general.—Instruction held harmless.

Art. 1628
COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS

It was illegal for the trial judge orally to advise the jury after their retirement without the knowledge or presence of plaintiffs and such action is sufficient cause for reversal of the judgment, whether or not it affected the verdict. Holman Bros. v. Cusenbary (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 65.

Failure to charge held prejudicial. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.

Where there was no assignment that verdict for plaintiff was excessive, errors in instructions which could have only caused an excessive verdict, and which had no bearing on question of liability, would not authorize a reversal. Southern Traction Co. v. Dillon (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 699; Neely v. Dublin Fruit Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 827; Duke v. Hatcher (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 575; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Miller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 246; Lancaster v. Fitz (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 739; Williams v. Williams (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 799; Empire Transfer & Storage Co. v. Botto (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 347.

Where court, upon written request from jury after it had retired for deliberation, sent jury written answer containing the further instructions, its failure to summon the jury into open court to further instruct it, as required by Rev. St. arts. 1961 and 1962, was not a reversible error, in view of rule 61a (49 S. W. x) where written instruction was handed to officer in charge of jury, who handed instruction to jury foreman. Oates v. Maxey (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 535.

Chap. 9) COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS

In action for servant's death, employer cannot complain of verdict apportioning damages among agents having a right of action, since the jury's sum judgment would protect it against any subsequent action. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Carpenter (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 270.

In a railroad's condemnation proceedings, where the jury found that the land was not increased in value by the taking of the part condemned, failure to require it to state the amount of any increase in the value of the rest of the owners' land was harmless. Gulf & Interstate Ry. Co. of Texas v. Stephenson (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 215.

The fact that a verdict was returned in accordance with the general charge, instead of an erroneous special charge tendered by plaintiff, does not constitute reversible error. Hines v. Davis (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 362.

Still the right of a party on proper demand to have findings of fact and conclusions of law filed in a case tried without a jury is one given by statute, the court on appeal cannot say that the failure to make them, or, having made them, to file them in time, is harmless error. Owen v. Smith (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 1171; Powers v. Schubert (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 123.

The finding of immaterial facts is not ground for reversal, if the judgment is not in conflict with the findings upon material issues. Stein v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 166; Howard v. Stahl (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 826.

Court's failure to file findings is not reversible error, when the record contains a statement of the facts from which it can be deduced that the appellant has not been prejudiced by such failure. Jackson v. Pure Oil Operating Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 955; Harlan v. F alfurrias Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 649.

Failure of trial court to expressly embrace undisputed facts in its findings, if error at all, was harmless. Davis v. Campbell Root Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 156.

41. Decisions on motion for new trial or rehearing.—Overruling of motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence was harmless, where it is manifest, from answers to the motion and from proceedings, that such evidence would not have been believed by the jury, and would not have changed result of trial, and where the findings by the jury with such evidence admitted would still have been overwhelmingly supported by facts. Carl v. Settegast (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 506.

Allowance of interest for one day longer than prayed, held such a trivial error that the, maxim, "de minimis non curat lex," applied. Sun Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Sutherland (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 506.

Failure of the court to find the value of each item in a judgment in replevin is not fundamental error requiring reversal. Gonzales v. Flores (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 851.

If the facts in mandamus did not show that defendant had denied plaintiff a right commanded by the judgment to be accorded him, the defendant was not prejudiced thereby, where the writ was properly granted upon other grounds. Monk v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 194.

43. Proceedings after judgment.—Where court was warranted in dismissing suit for lack of prosecution, failure to permit plaintiff to incorporate in bill of exceptions his amended petition, showing why he should be permitted to cite unserved defendants by publication was harmless. Cain v. Wharton (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 952.

In lessor's action against lessee and lessee's assignee, where only relief sought against lessee was cancellation of lease, the opening of default entered against lessee was harmless, where plaintiff alleged no valid ground for cancellation of lease as against assignee. Jackson v. Pure Oil Operating Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 959.

Plaintiffs' contention on rehearing, after a reversal of judgment in his favor, that the proceeding, which was in trespass to try title and to reform a judgment, was not to correct any error in the rendition of the judgment, but merely to correct an error in its entry, and that such cause of action was not subject to the four-year limitation, 393
Art. 1628  COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS (Title 32)
cannot avail where the pleadings under such construction would not raise any issue as to the ownership of the land in question. Gulf Production Co. v. Palmer (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1017.

Damages for delay.—In determining whether an appeal is one for delay only, the whole record should be looked to. Lundy v. Little (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 578.

Where no evidence was brought up in the record, although the judgment was rendered on evidence, and no assignment was briefied on a ground upon which the trial court had been called upon to act, the appeal will be deemed one for delay only, and 10 per cent. damages will be awarded respondent. Id.

An appellee's suggestion that the appeal was taken for delay opens the entire record for consideration. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Schwartz (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 977.

Art. 1631. [1029a] Suggestion of remittitur.

The Court of Civil Appeals, when of opinion that verdict is excessive, must indicate the excess, and allow remittitur, and not reverse the case. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Graves (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 979.

The authority given a Court of Civil Appeals to suggest a remittitur, and, on it being filed, to reform and affirm the judgment accordingly, applies where the judgment was on two special findings, and one of them, in the amount found, was not supported by the evidence, but there was evidence to authorize a finding in some amount, and though the assignment of error was that the finding was contrary to the evidence; the substance of the assignment being the excessiveness of the judgment. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 959, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 362.

Amount of recovery indicating passion or prejudice.—Rendition of verdict so large that it shows on its face that it is result of prejudice or passion constitutes error requiring reversal, unless suitable remittitur is entered. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 242.

A showing that verdict for death of plaintiff's daughter was grossly excessive alone would not be sufficient to authorize the Court of Civil Appeals to reverse judgment rendered on the verdict after remittitur, on the ground that the excessive amount indicated prejudice or passion of the jury not curable by mere remittitur; there must be some showing that the verdict was outrageously excessive to justify reversal. Houston Electric Co. v. Flattery (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 960.

Right to mandate.—Either party after decision of appeal by Court of Civil Appeals had right to procure issuance of mandate. Gilmore v. Ladell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 362.

Time for issuance.—Court of Appeals was without authority to act on supplemental motion of appellant for rehearing of motion to vacate judgment of affirmance, in substance a "motion for rehearing," within arts. 1633, 1641, not filed within time for motions for rehearing, and not acted on at term at which original judgment was rendered; Supreme Court having denied writ of error. Gammln Statesman Pub. Co. v. Ben C. Jones & Co. (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 931.

Order directing issuance of mandate within 12 months from certain date, "upon the paying of costs or making affidavit in lieu thereof," did not require motion for issuance of mandate within such time, but merely that costs be paid or affidavit in lieu thereof be made within the 12 months. Hambleton v. Dignowity (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 957.

Construction and effect of mandate.—Setting aside judgment as void on grounds not passed upon an appeal held not a violation of the judgment or mandate of the Court of Civil Appeals. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Abilene v. Overshiner (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 975.

Where court denied motion to set aside judgment, which had been affirmed, on ground that it was void, but temporarily suspended it and stayed execution and abstract, held that such suspension and stay was not a violation of the judgment and mandate of the Court of Civil Appeals. Id.

Art. 1635. [1036] Affidavit of inability to pay or secure costs.

Sufficiency of affidavit.—Where judgment for husband and wife was reversed and cause remanded, with costs to appellant, the filing of wife's affidavit of inability to pay costs or give security, in which she did not purport to act as husband's agent, as authorized by art. 11, but merely excused his failure to join therein, was not sufficient compliance with this article to warrant issuance of mandate without costs; the affidavit of all parties being necessary under the statute. Hambleton v. Dignowity (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 957.

CHAPTER TEN

CONCLUSIONS OF FACT AND LAW

Article 1636. Conclusions of fact and law to be filed, when.

Conclusions of fact and law.—Appellate court, in concluding that court erred in making findings, is not authorized to make a different finding, where the evidence is conflicting, its sole province in such case being to remand case for new trial. McGuffey v. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 555; State v. Elza, 199 Tex. 258, 206 S. W. 342.

Where there was no evidence to support a finding of fact by trial court, the Court of Civil Appeals was authorized to substitute its own finding and thereon reverse and render the judgment. Lieber v. Nicholson (Com. App.) 298 S. W. 512.

Where the Appellee Court found that a special verdict was supported by the evidence, it need not find evidentiary facts. United Sav. Bank v. Castro (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 222.

Conclusiveness of findings.—The Commission of Appeals is bound by the finding of the Court of Civil Appeals, if there is any evidence to sustain the finding. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 584.

The Supreme Court is bound by the finding of the Court of Civil Appeals, reversing judgment of trial court entered on verdict of jury, where evidence was conflicting. Rea v. Luse (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 310.

Opinion.—Where most of appellant's assignments presented questions of fact, and where the evidence supported the trial court's findings, and the findings in turn supported the judgment, it was sufficient for the Court of Civil Appeals to discuss merely those assignments which did not raise issues of fact; it being unnecessary for the court to pass on the several assignments specifically, notwithstanding arts. 1636, 1635, 1639. Cooper v. Newsom (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 568.

Article 1637. Reason for judgment to be stated, when.

Construction and application in general.—Judgment of Court of Civil Appeals in case of reversal need not state in mandate reasons for judgment, nor is it mandatory that certified copy of opinion of court accompany mandate. Baldwin v. Drew (Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 636.

Article 1638. Supplemental findings, motion for; refusal assignable as error.

Sufficiency of findings.—Where most of appellant's assignments presented questions of fact, and where the evidence supported the trial court's findings, and the findings in turn supported the judgment, it was sufficient for the Court of Civil Appeals to discuss merely those assignments which did not raise issues of fact; it being unnecessary for the court to pass on the several assignments specifically, notwithstanding arts. 1636, 1638, 1639. Cooper v. Newsom (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 568.

Article 1639. Court shall decide all issues of fact or law, and announce conclusions.

See San Antonio Public Service Co. v. Tracy (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 637.

1. Scope of review in general.—In view of Acts 34th Leg. c. 36, § 4 (art. 2748c) held, the contention on appeal that order of consolidation of common school districts was a nullity because not made upon petition of majority of electors of such districts will not be considered, where there was no allegation that consolidation was to establish a high school or schoolhouse. [Civ. App.] 196 S. W. 663.

Objections to rulings made for first time on motion for new trial cannot be reviewed on appeal. Texas-Mexican Ry. Co. v. Creekmore (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 652.

An appellee's suggestion that the appeal was taken for delay opens the entire record for consideration. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Schwartz (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 977.

On review of refusal of peremptory instruction the only question is whether there was no evidence as a matter of law, not the weight or sufficiency of evidence as a matter of law. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Cook (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 529.

2. — Matters considered in determining question.—Affidavit used in answer to a motion to postpone a hearing may be considered by the trial court, and the appellate court may look to the supporting affidavits to determine whether the trial court erred in overruling the motion. City of Ft. Worth v. Rosen (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 54.

The Court of Civil Appeals, in reviewing lower court's ruling on motion to set aside a default, cannot consider an affidavit which was not before lower court. Counts v. Southwestern Land Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 267.

The sufficiency of a petition challenged by general demurrer cannot be tested on appeal by any fact in evidence before the court, but must be tested by its allegations. Millers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 825.

Evidence, which the court excluded, after admitting it, without exception being made, cannot be considered by the appellate court under an assignment that the court erred in peremptorily directing a verdict, even though the evidence was improperly excluded. Jones v. S. G. Davis Motor Car Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 741.

The Court of Civil Appeals is without authority to consider evidence offered for the first time in that court affecting the issues passed on by the jury. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 177.

3. — Questions considered.—In trespass to try title, where appellee establishes record title, it is unnecessary to consider his claim of title by adverse possession. Houston Oil Co. v. Coffin (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 189.

In employee's action for injuries sustained before enactment of Workmen's Compensation Act, where all phases of assumed risk were specifically interposed by defendant on trial, appellate court has only to determine whether evidence bearing upon defense was practically without merit. Kirby Lumber Co. v. Hardy (Civ. App.) 186 S. W. 241.

A defendant against whom a default judgment had been rendered was precluded on proceedings in error from asserting any defense as to its liability, and was limited to the question of the amount of the judgment rendered. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. Gulf, T. & W. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 276.

Where defendant surety company's liability is founded on common-law principles, it is unnecessary to consider appellee's contention that it is also liable under statute pursuant to which it was incorporated. Texas Fidelity & Bonding Co. v. Rosenberg Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 366, denying rehearing 195 S. W. 298.

In suit against trustees of common school district to enjoin application of funds to build schoolhouse, held, the appellate court will only determine question of validity of order of consolidation. Mathis v. Pritchard (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 625.

On appeal from a judgment of a state court appointing a receiver, the assignments of error relating to the appointment of the receiver become moot questions, where a petition in bankruptcy has been filed within four months, and will not be reviewed. Carter-Mullally Transfer Co. v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 791.

On appeal by city from judgment denying relief in suit to collect taxes on viaduct on theory it was personally, appellate court need not, having determined viaduct was real property, determine further question whether it had been so dedicated by defendants to public as to exempt it from taxation. City of Texarkana v. Texas & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 804.

Assignments of error in admission of evidence, in view of fact that trial below was before court without jury, need not be discussed. McKinley v. Bone (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 298.

On appeal where petition is found demurrable, and case is to be remanded therefor, sufficiency of evidence will not be reviewed for purpose of rendering judgment. Hart-Parr Co. v. Paine (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 827.

Whether the trial court should have proceeded to trial without waiting for decision of appeal from overruling of plea of privilege to be sued in another county is an academic question, as decision thereof did not expedite a trial on the merits. Summer Mfg. Co. v. Kellam Bros. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 463.

It is unnecessary to determine the effect given to the jury's answer to a special issue concerning agreement of defendant to hold goods in warehouse, where neither such agreement nor claim for breach thereof were pleaded, and the cause must be reversed on other grounds. Coffin v. Green (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 708.

When a receiver for irrigation company determined water rates to be paid by landowners, the water rights of owners under contracts made with company was a moot question as to irrigation company, its president, trustee, receiver, and the holder of receiver's certificates, upon appeal by owners from judgment rendered on motion to intervene, alleging such of irrigation plant under court's order. McHenry v. Bankers Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 560.

Assignments urging that evidence is insufficient to sustain that part of decree canceling instruments need not be considered in view of the holding that such portion of decree must be set aside for want of jurisdiction. Griner v. Trevino (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 947.
Where, in an action to foreclose lien on piano, there was a judgment of foreclosure, but no finding of assignment of defendant on counter claim not covered by lien, on appeal by defendant from that part of judgment foreclosing the lien, he could not complain that judgment on counterclaim was not entered against sureties on sequestration bond given by plaintiff. De Arcy v. South Texas Music Co. (Civ. App.) 288 S. W. 581.

In suit by bank, assignor of cotton receipts issued by public weigher, against weigher and sureties for breach of duty in releasing cotton without surrender of receipts by assignor, where weigher and sureties did not make, in trial court, defense that there was no notice to weigher of assignment, it is not available to them on appeal. Taliaferro v. Brady Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 174.

Whether appellant, by making no objection to peremptory instruction given, waived objection to refusal of court to submit case upon requested issues not be passed upon, where the same result is reached in considering assignments of error based upon said refusal. National Equitable Soc. v. Revere (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 790.

Where appellee in his brief concedes that collateral is worthless and consents to reformation of judgment by striking out all mention of any lien, it is unnecessary to determine whether trial court, although it found the existence of a lien, could enter judgment of foreclosure, where jury did not so find. Id.

Where breach of warranty that silo would withstand ordinary winds was established by proof, court on appeal need not determine admissibility of evidence that other silos made by defendant failed to withstand wind. Bell v. Self (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 394.

Where case must be reversed and remanded because of the erroneous appointment of a receiver and error committed on the trial, it becomes unnecessary to pass upon other assignments or dismiss them. Hook v. Payne (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 283.

Since plea of privilege cannot be sustained, it is unnecessary to consider whether it was waived. Sykes v. Fischl (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 217.

Where the trial court disposed of a case solely on defendant's plea of privilege, although the case was also submitted to the jury on the merits, held, that on appeal by plaintiff transferring cause to another county, the question of venue will be disposed of. First Nat. Bank of Coleman v. Gates (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 720.

Since ruling with reference to release will result in an affirmance, regardless of conclusions on certain other questions, it is unnecessary to consider such other questions. Anderson v. California-Union Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 497.

Where there were sufficient pleadings and evidence on the issue of actual damages to justify the damages awarded, and the court made no special finding and no request was made of him, there being only a general finding against defendant for actual damages, assignments that court erred in considering certain items of damage alleged need not be considered on appeal. Chrome v. Gonzales (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 368.

Question as to effect of Const. art. 12, § 6, on liability of a stock subscriber not being involved in the case under consideration, or necessary to its decision, motion to express an opinion on the question will be overruled. Park v. Rich (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 146.

Where a tax sale of a minor ward's land is invalid, it becomes unnecessary on appeal to decide whether the general principle that one who owes the duty to pay the tax cannot acquire the title at a sale thereof is applicable to the guardian. Test v. Perry (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 650.

Where the trial court improperly directed a verdict in favor of plaintiffs in trespass to try title, held, that the appellate court will not review rulings on special exceptions to defendant's answer which set up a lease to the land involved from the holder of the record title. Canaday v. Scott (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 429.

Where a special jury finding that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence proximately causing his injury justifies the judgment entered, the verdict and judgment will be sustained on appeal without considering possible errors in other issues submitted to the jury. Temple v. National Traction Co. (Civ. App. Tex. W. 440.

It is unnecessary to determine whether the trial court erred in overruling a special exception to appellee's petition on the ground of indefiniteness, where, if held error, it must be treated as harmless within rule 42a (149 S. W. v). Zeltz Accident & Liability Co. v. Trustees of First Christian Church of Paris (Civ. App.) 240 S. W. 427.

Negligence is generally an issue for the jury, and certainly for the jury or trial court, and it is not the province of the Court of Civil Appeals to decide the fact of negligence. North Texas Gas Co. v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 254.

Where most of appellant's assignments presented questions of fact, and where the evidence supported the trial court's findings, and the findings in turn supported the judgment, it was sufficient for the Court of Civil Appeals to discuss merely those assignments which did not raise issues of fact; it being unnecessary for the court to pass on the several assignments specifically, notwithstanding arts. 1816, 1818, 1839. Cooper v. Newsom (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 568.

The Court of Appeals need not consider assignments of error entirely directed at deciding whether judgment could only become material on reversal, where it reaches a decision affirming action of the trial court in favor of defendant upon demurrer to plaintiff's petition, notwithstanding this article, as the law never requires the doing of a useless thing. Zucht v. King (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 267.

On an order sustaining a general demurrer and certain exceptions to appellant's petition, the judgment will be tested by the ruling on the general demurrer, and cannot be aided by fact that special exceptions may have been properly sustained. Fleming v. Stringer (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 801.

As an act to nullify the title acquired by the military government of Mexico, the Court of Civil Appeals may inquire only into the acts of the military government. to determine whether it acted in a given way on the subject-matter, and may not inquire into the validity of its acts. Terra zas v. Donohue (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 296.

Judgment based on untenable ground will not be set aside, if sustainable on another ground. McCaslin v. Veasy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1172.

On an issue of common-law marriage, where defendant's testimony was contradicted by his time books and payrolls as to plaintiff's being merely a cook, and not his wife, there was such conflict in the evidence that it required the weighing of testimony so that the court must accept part and reject part, the truth not being so manifest that it can be declared what it is in the face of a jury's finding, it being their problem to identify it from a mass of conflicts and contradictions. Bobbitt v. Bobbitt (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 478.

Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 177.

18. —Verdicts against weight of evidence.—A finding of fact by a jury will be set aside only where the verdict is so overwhelmingly against the preponderance of the evidence as to clearly show that such verdict was wrong, or was the result of some passion, prejudice, bias, or other improper motive or consideration. Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 736; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Fulghum (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 285; Angelina County Lumber Co. v. Maat (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 360; Nations v. Miller (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 742; Lobit v. Marcouilides (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 757; Sels, Schwab & Co. v. Shipman (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 842; Missouri, K. & P. Ry. v. Tex. Pattern (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 182.

Where evidence relating to jury's verdict on question of fact so clearly and overwhelmingly preponderates against verdict as to make it clear to appellate court that such verdict was wrong, it should be disregarded and set aside. Toole v. Moore (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 429; American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Frankel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1132; Grelle v. Grelle (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 114.

Where the verdict of the jury is so against the weight and preponderance of the evidence as to show that it is clearly wrong, it is the duty of the appellate court to reverse. Texas & N. O. Ry. Co. v. Wagner (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 377; Hines v. Roan (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1070.

Where there was evidence to sustain a verdict that the owner of a theater knew, or should have known, when accepting their services, in leasing theater, that brokers were the de-facto and not tenant's agents, the verdict will not be set aside, although the preponderance of the evidence appears otherwise. Brady v. Richey & Casey (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 176.

Court on appeal will not except in extreme cases, in which great preponderance of evidence shows conclusively that result reached by verdict is wrong, disturb jury findings. Jones v. Schnaufer (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 367.
Though the facts contrary to the verdict on their face unquestionably are of greater probative force than those in favor of the verdict, it does not follow that the latter facts will not support the verdict. Rachofsky v. Rachofsky (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1134.

In action on insurance certificate involving the question of whether insured's statement in application that he had never suffered from syphilis was misrepresentation, verdict (Civ. App.) held not manifestly contrary to the evidence as to justify reversal. Sovereign Camp of Woodmen of the World v. Cooper (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 550.

19. Amount of verdict. There is no fixed rule for measuring damages to be allowed for mental suffering, and, jury being exclusive judges of facts, it must clearly appear that verdict is excessive before an appellate court will be authorized to disturb a verdict. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Parham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 740; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Goodson (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 183.

A verdict will not be disturbed unless excessive. Texas Electric Ry. v. Whitmore (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 644.

Where there was substantial evidence to support amount of verdict, it is not subject to attack on appeal as excessive. Temple Trust Co. v. Pirtle (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 627.

Where carrier's liability for wrongful ejection of a passenger is established, the amount of damages found by the jury will not be disturbed unless excessive or indicative of passion or prejudice. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Snow (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 224.

Rendition of verdict so large that it shows on its face that it is result of prejudice or passion constitutes error, requiring reversal, unless suitable remittitur is entered. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 343.

The court on appeal, though believing that verdict is excessive, will not reduce it unless there were such circumstances connected with it as to justify conclusion that duty requires the court on appeal to reduce it. Baker v. Bell (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 245.

Where the jury found against contributory negligence, though the evidence almost conclusively established such negligence as a matter of law, and also rendered a verdict for $20,000 damages, which the trial court reduced to $12,000, the excessive verdict manifests such bias as indicates that the finding on contributory negligence may have also been due to bias and the verdict should be set aside. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 277.

In an action for personal injuries, a verdict cannot be set aside by the appellate court as excessive where the jury had before it facts which would support such a finding. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Jennings (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1113.

When it is not shown that the jury were in any respect improperly influenced to render their verdict as the sum awarded, the Court of Civil Appeals would not be justified in disturbing the verdict on the ground that the allowance for diminished earning capacity from a personal injury was excessive. Flores v. Garcia (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 745.

20. Approval of verdict by trial court. Where evidence upon plea of privilege to be sued in another county was contradictory, its determination was for the jury; and where trial judge refused to set verdict aside, the judgment will be affirmed. Obenhaus v. Allen (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 366.

Refusal of defendant's submitted instruction to direct a verdict was not error, where there was evidence satisfactory to the trial court to support a verdict for plaintiff. Liberty Hardwood Lumber Co. v. Stevens (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 869.

Appellate courts, having nothing to do with questions of the preponderance of the evidence, are authorized to set aside the verdict of a jury approved by the trial court only when the evidence so overwhelmingly preponderates against it as to show the jury was actuated by passion, prejudice, or other improper motive, and that the verdict is clearly wrong. Baker v. Grace (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 295.

When the trial court has not disturbed on appeal, on the ground that the testimony offered by appellant should be accepted as true, and that of appellees rejected as unworthy of belief; the credibility of witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony being a matter for the jury. Zuecht v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 684.

21. Successive verdicts. Where two verdicts had been found in favor of plaintiff and both trial judges upheld the verdict, on second appeal the court will not hold that the evidence is so clearly against the verdict as to authorize its reversal. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Fulghum (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 255.

Conclusiveness of findings of court in general. Where a question of fact is submitted to the court without a jury, a finding by the court is as conclusive as a verdict by the jury, and, if supported by evidence, is conclusive on appeal. Hadnott v. Hicks (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 359; Hart v. Hulsey (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 302; Hudmon v. Flowers (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 262; Bradford v. Moseley (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 171, reversing judgment of the App. Court); Moseley v. Bristan (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 824.

It is the duty of the trial court to determine the effect of the testimony, not of the Court of Appeals. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Munnay (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 251; Dimmock v. Cornelius (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 199.

Trial court's finding of uncontradicted testimony of witness is conclusive on Court of Civil Appeals. Cantwell v. Suttles (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 656.

In an election contest, a declaration in a judgment that parties referred to were qualified voters, except for certain reasons, would not constitute a finding of fact, but would be a conclusion of law; hence appellants would not be entitled to have it given controlling effect in disposing of the appeal. Barker v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 645.

In trespass to try title, in which defendants claimed as to all section sued for, except a specified 160 acres claimed under 10-year statute of limitation, held, that court's... finding with reference to true location thereof will not be disturbed. Miller Link Lumber Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 546.

Where statutes of a foreign country have been introduced in evidence, and lawyers of long practice in such country have testified as to meaning of section shown, question of existence of, and abstract meaning of, laws becomes a question of fact to be determined by trial court. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Carruth (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 984.

In the absence of conclusions of fact, the appellate court will impute to the trial court full verity to its findings, and, if there is any issue of fact sufficient to sustain the judgment, it will be done. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Knowlan Machine & Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 676.

The Court of Civil Appeals must conclude that the trial court who heard the evidence exercised, so far as he might legally do so, his right to pass on the credibility of the witnesses and to disbelieve such as he thought unworthy of belief. Pierce v. Foreign Mission Board of Southern Baptist Convention (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 146.

On appeal from judgment rendered after trial before court without a jury, the facts will be viewed most strongly in favor of court's verdict and judgment. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Hall (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 526.

Whether the operation of a train at a speed of 25 miles an hour over the principal crossing in a city or town of 1,200 to 1,400 inhabitants, which was near the depot and station was disturbed, by a long freight train, cut in the middle of the street and leaving a passage of only 16 feet for the use of the public, was negligence, was a question of fact for the trial court sitting without a jury. Baker v. Hodges (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 844.

In reviewing an assignment that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain a finding of fact, strongest probative effect must be given to the evidence tending to establish such fact. Hollis Cotton Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Marris & Lake (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 367; Richardson v. Harless (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 139.

Finding that covenant by railway company to maintain depot on land conveyed to it meant a passenger depot, there then being a passenger depot on the land, held not to be disturbed. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Mosel (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 621.

A finding that removal of railway depot was not more to the interests of a majority of the citizens of a town held not to be disturbed, though it appeared the largest portion of the town was nearer the new site. Id.

Unless trial court's finding is against great weight of evidence, it should be upheld by appellate court. Cantwell v. Suttles (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 658.

The Court of Appeals is bound by the district court's finding of fact, having evidence to sustain it, that it is not for the best interest of the people in a certain school district to be divided into two districts. Schula v. Davis (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 727.

Where a decree establishing trust in note given to a defendant, as representing commissions earned by plaintiff and the other defendants, and taken by such defendant, with knowledge of facts, and pursuant to conspiracy to cheat plaintiff, was authorized by findings supported by evidence, judgment will be affirmed. McAfee v. Sweepton (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 812.

In suit to foreclose judgment lien, whether property was community property, whether part of it was part of homestead, and whether former homestead was abandoned, held questions of fact, finding on which would not be disturbed when sustained by evidence. Jones v. Lanning (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 446.

There being no error in the judgment if a corner of survey owned by defendant was at point shown by plat in the record sent to court on appeal, and there being evidence authorizing a finding that the corner was at such point, judgment will be affirmed. Erwin v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 566.

Where the great preponderance of testimony sustains the findings of the trial court under assignment that "court erred in rendering judgment for defendants for the 100 acres of land, claimed by them under their limitation plea, because the evidence shows their occupancy thereof to have been under full recognition of the title of another," assignment will be overruled. Miller Link Lumber Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 546.

Where the trial court's finding that a grantor was of unsound mind when deeds were executed is supported by the briefs and statement of facts, it will not be disturbed. Sherwood v. Sherwood (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 565.

Whether a broker suing for commissions was the efficient procuring cause of a sale was a determination of the trial court; and, finding by the trial court that the findings are supported by evidence, they cannot be disturbed, though the Court of Civil Appeals might reach a different conclusion. Pioneer Land & Loan Co. v. Martin County v. Ebersol (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 423.
The trial court's finding on a pure question of fact, as the area left in a school district which was divided, will not be disturbed. Baker v. Davi (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 534.

In a suit to set aside a deed executed by husband and wife, a finding on ample testimony that the husband was insane when the deed was executed when conclusive on the Court of Civil Appeals. Law v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 687.

The appellate court cannot disturb the implied findings of the lower court clearly put in issue by the evidence. Nesbit v. Richardson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 556.

Judgment of trial court as to weight to be given testimony will not be disturbed on appeal. Glibreath v. Cage & Crow (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 972.

It is the province of the trial court, when a conflict in testimony appears, to weigh the testimony of the plaintiff v. Patton (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 562.

Trial court having found, on conflict in the findings in defendant's favor. Esser v. Kneupper (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 508.

Trial court's determination against plaintiff, on conflicting evidence, of the facts essential to the liability sought against master plumbers' association, on the ground of their complicity in the action of journeymen plumbers in leaving plaintiff's employ, is not reviewable. Sheehan v. Levy (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 229.

In a case tried to the court, the trial judge is the sole judge of the credibility of the witnesses, and the findings based on conflicting evidence executed on conflicting testimony, to the same effect as the verdict of a jury. Campbell v. Turley (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 528.

Where the trial court was compelled to determine an issue of fact upon diametrically opposed evidence and pass upon the veracity of the witnesses, it is the duty of the Court of Civil Appeals to uphold his finding. Hull v. Guaranty State Bank of Carthage (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 810.

26. — Findings of court against weight of evidence.—A finding of trial court will be conclusive even if appellate court should be of opinion that trial court did not find in accordance with preponderance of evidence adduced. Hardin v. Continental Casualty Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 655; Tucker v. McCullough (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 236.

The findings of a trial judge when supported by evidence are binding unless clearly wrong, or so opposed to the great preponderance of the evidence as to suggest that truth and justice have not been attained. Dugan v. Smith (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 654.

Instruction for services in suits for damages for properties between defendant and another, judgment for defendant held clearly against the great preponderance of the evidence, necessitating reversal. McClees v. Howell (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 972.

Court of Civil Appeals has nothing to do with question of preponderance of evidence, except in cases where preponderance against trial court's finding on question of fact is so clear as to suggest bias or prejudice. Beaumont Traction Co. v. Cooper (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 275.

Findings by the trial judge on material issues as to which there was a conflict in the testimony involved passing on the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be given their testimony, and such findings will not be disturbed on appeal, though against the testimony of the more numerous witnesses, unless contrary to overwhelming weight of the testimony. Deaton v. Hamilton County (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 377.

27. — Amount of recovery in court's findings.—On trial without jury, where the testimony variously indicated plaintiff's damages to be more or less than $500, the award of such a sum will not be reversed merely because no witness estimated the damages at exactly $500. Houston Co. v. Hinkins (Lumber Co. Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 237.

28. — Questions of fact on motions or other interlocutory or special proceedings.—There being sufficient facts to justify the findings, determination of the jury against a defendant on an issue of fact on plea of privilege is conclusive against him on appeal. Rutledge v. Evans (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 218.

Whether alleged newly discovered evidence could have been discovered before the trial, held a question of fact for the trial court. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Turner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 333.

On appeal from an interlocutory order appointing a receiver, the appellate court will not review the evidence. Richardson v. McCloskey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 153.
Art. 1639  COURTS OF CIVIL APPEALS (Title 32)

Where the evidence as to misconduct of jury was such as to make it a question of fact as to whether jury was guilty of misconduct, the Court of Civil Appeals will not review the court's action. W. T. Carter & Bro. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 889.

Finding of court on plea of privilege based on art. 1830, § 24, providing that suit against a corporation may be maintained in any county where the cause of action or part thereof arose, that contract was made in county of suit, will not be disturbed on appeal where sustained by evidence. Lakeside Irr. Co. v. W. C. Hedrick Const. Co. (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 1657.

30. Written opinions.—It is not proper for the Court of Civil Appeals to express an opinion on the weight or sufficiency of evidence on any issue to be subsequently tried by a jury. Lumsden v. Jones (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 358.

Art. 1640. Supreme Court shall return record for supplemental conclusions, when.

Matters considered on return.—Where, on reversal of a judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals, the Supreme Court remanded the case for determination of the sufficiency of the evidence not passed on by the Court of Civil Appeals, the case will not be reopened and re-examination of the whole controversy permitted in the Court of Civil Appeals. Hutchison v. Massie (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 655.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

REHEARING

Rehearing in general.—The appellate court is without jurisdiction to hear and determine, on motion for leave to file supplemental motion for rehearing, the issue of fraud in the rendition of the judgment by the trial court. Hunter v. Gulf Production Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 162.

A certified copy of the answer attached to the motion for rehearing cannot be considered, where it is not a part of the record before the Court of Civil Appeals. Wischkaemer v. Allen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1037.

Grounds for rehearing and requisites of motion.—A telephone lineman having recovered damages against electric company for injuries resulting from high-tension wires could not complain on rehearing of judgment of indemnity against employer. City of Weatherford Water, Light & Ice Co. v. Veit (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 986.

Motion for rehearing couched in disrespectful and discourteous language will be stricken from the record and files and dismissed. Walls v. Cruise (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 240.

Where the Court of Civil Appeals dismissed for want of jurisdiction because petition for writ of error had been filed more than 12 months after date of judgment, and appellant moved for rehearing on the ground that judgment had in fact been rendered later than was suggested of record, but did not request that the court hear any evidence on the point, and did not tender any evidence by affidavit, sworn plea, or sworn testimony, the motion for rehearing will be overruled, where affidavits of counsel, the county clerk, and trial judge make showing of the later rendition of judgment. Williams v. Knight Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 755.

A statement in the original opinion that there was no evidence that the defendant wife had ever met men in the dark is not contrary to evidence of her meeting men in the evening, where the witness testified he was mowing a lawn and saw the defendant at a distance of 200 or 200 yards, so that the statement need not be corrected on a motion for rehearing as misleading. McCravy v. McCravy (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 157.

Objections not previously urged.—Contention that landlord's lien was waived held not available on motion for rehearing, where guarantor pleaded that plaintiff had such a lien, and did not present the question of waiver by an assignment of error. Meacham v. O'Keefe (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1000.

Where, in all proceedings, up to filing of motion for rehearing, money in banks was treated as collections from operation of railway, not as proceeds of sale of property, Court of Civil Appeals will decline to consider it in any other light. West v. Carliele (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 515.

Where a case was fully briefed by both parties, and orally argued on original submission, no objection to an assignment for lack of bill of exceptions thereon was urged, the Court of Appeals was justified in considering the assignment on the appellant's uncontested statement, and is too late on motion for rehearing to consider the objection, in view of rules 40 and 41 of Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiv). Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.

Where plaintiff in error, in answer to motion to dismiss writ for failure to comply with art. 2115, by filing briefs in the lower court, made no effort to show that defendant in error will have ample time within which to brief the case, after judgment on the motion, and without excuse for not making timely answer, plaintiff in error cannot be heard on petition for rehearing or favored on his contention that his violation of the statute and Rules for the Courts of Civil Appeals, No. 39 (142 S. W. xiii), is without prejudice to defendants in error. Reilly v. Hanagan (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 797.

A question raised for the first time in argument on the motion for rehearing in the Court of Civil Appeals comes too late. Payne v. Harris (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 220.

Time for filing and excuse for delay.—A motion for rehearing in the court of civil appeals, made after the 15 days, will not be considered where the only excuse in that counsel were too busy to make it in time. Kneeland v. Miles (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 486.

In absence of showing that failure to file motion for rehearing in Court of Civil Appeals resulted from accident or some cause beyond control of plaintiffs in error in the Supreme Court, Supreme Court is not warranted in concluding Court of Civil Appeals, cognizant of all of the facts, erred in refusing permission to file motion for rehearing nunc pro tunc as of time when it should have been filed. Knodel v. Equitable Life Ins. Co. (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 941, dismissing writ of error (Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 1138.

Court of Appeals was without authority to act on supplemental motion of appellant for rehearing of motion to vacate judgment of affirmance, in substance a "motion for rehearing," not filed within time for motions for rehearing, and not acted on at term at which original judgment was rendered; Supreme Court having denied writ of error. Gammel Statesman Pub. Co. v. Ben C. Jones & Co. (Com. App.) 296 S. W. 631.

Appellant will not be permitted to file motion for rehearing after expiration of time provided for filing of motion, on the ground that delay in preparation of motion was caused by sickness in family of one of appellant's attorneys, where such sickness was not shown to have kept the attorney from his business, and where there was no showing why other attorneys for appellant, who had been given notice of court's opinion, could not have prepared and filed the motion. Alley v. Bessemer Gas Engine Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 965.

CHAPTER TWELVE

EXECUTION OF JUDGMENT

Judgment.—The district court has no jurisdiction over a motion to correct its judgment, which does not seek to correct any clerical error, but which is in fact a motion for a new trial, after the judgment has been affirmed by the Court of Civil Appeals and a motion for rehearing has been denied. Hardin v. Central Texas Exch. Nat. Bank of Waco (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 730.

Art. 1648. [1029] Appellant on reversal to recover costs of appeal.

Items taxable.—This article warrants the clerk of the appellate court, in taxing against appellee the costs of the transcript of the record of the county court, contained in the bill of costs sent up with the transcript. Eaker v. Guinn (Civ. App.) 22 S. W. 141.

THE JUDGE OF THE DISTRICT COURT

Article 1671. [1064] [1086] District judge, election of; qualification; residence.

Acceptance of incompatible office.—When one accepts an incompatible office with the one he holds, he may elect which to abandon, but when a judge accepts an office in the military service of the United States, his tenure as judge ceases by direct provision of Const. art. 16, § 12. Lowe v. State, 83 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986.

Art. 1675. [1068] [1090] Disqualification, causes of.

Cited, Grigsby v. May, 84 Tex. 240, 19 S. W. 343.

Interest in subject matter—in general.—Where a district judge acquired land before suit involving its title was filed, and disposed of it before case was tried, he had no such immediate and direct interest as disqualified him from trying case, even if he conveyed his interest by general warranty deed. Clegg v. Temple Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 646.

Execution purchaser of land subsequently sold under prior deed of trust, who thereafter was elected district judge, held not disqualified in an action involving such land. Lee v. British & American Mortgage Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 430.

Judge held not shown disqualified to try action on life policy because holding policy in the company, it not being shown payment of policy sued on would have any direct effect in any fund in which he might participate. Kansas City Life Ins. Co. v. Jinkens (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 772.

Interest in subject matter—in general. A judge should not try a case in which there is the least ground for his disqualification, and if error is ever made as to disqualification it should be in favor of disqualification rather than against it. Cotulla State Bank v. Herron (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 797.

Conditions given by Const. art. 5, § 11, for disqualification of judge, are exclusive, and prejudice of judge is not ground for disqualification. Berry v. State, 83 Cr. R. 210, 203 S. W. 901.

A Judge is not disqualified from proceeding with the trial of an action because he has already expressed an opinion therein. Montfort v. Davis (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 506.

Interest as taxpayer.—A judge is not disqualified, because a citizen and taxpayer, to sit in a suit to enjoin the city from expending money to construct a lighting plant. Williamson v. Cavo (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 795.

Art. 1676. [1069] Disqualification; exchange of district judges; special judge agreed upon, when; appointment by governor.

Construction and operation in general.—Conceding the authority of the Legislature to pass laws facilitating the exercise of the right of the parties under Const. art. 5, § 11, to select a person to try the case in lieu of a disqualified judge, such laws cannot be inconsistent with the terms or restrictive of the right given by the Constitution. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 55, 221 S. W. 506.

A special district judge elected by the bar to try a particular criminal case on the disqualification of the regular district judge under Const. art. 5, § 11, held not to have power to sit as judge, he not having been selected by the attorneys in the case under arts. 1676, 1677; art. 1678, providing for election by the bar only when the regular judge is absent or unable to preside, not applying. Strahan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 324, 221 S. W. 976.
Selection by parties.—Where the parties by agreement appointed an attorney to try the cause pursuant to Const. art. 5, § 11, the fact that the Governor thereupon appointed him did not detract from the force of his selection by the parties. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

Under Const. art. 5, § 11, providing that when a district judge is disqualified the parties may appoint a proper person to try the case, this article, is invalid so far as it makes such right conditional on the impossibility of securing a judge by exchange of districts, and the parties may select a person to try the case without complying with this article. Patterson v. State, 87 Cr. R. 95, 221 S. W. 596.

Art. 1677. [1070] Record to be made where special judge is agreed on or appointed.

See Strahan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 324, 221 S. W. 976.

Art. 1678. [1071] [1094] Special judge, when and how elected.

In general.—This article should be strictly construed to preserve the right of litigants to a trial before the regular judge. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ready (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1034.

This article, authorizing election of a special judge by the lawyers attending court when the regular judge is unwilling to serve, is valid, though Const. art. 5, § 7, merely authorizes the Legislature to provide for the holding of a court when the judge thereof is absent, disabled, or disqualified. Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 505.

A special district judge elected by the bar to try a particular criminal case on the disqualification of the regular district judge under Const. art. 5, § 11, held not to have power to sit as judge, he not having been selected by the attorneys in the case under arts. 1676, 1677; and this article not applying. Strahan v. State, 87 Cr. R. 324, 221 S. W. 976.

Absence, inability or unwillingness of regular judge.—Where the regular judge declined to try the case, but remained at his office and attended to other matters pending, he was not "unwilling to hold court," and the election of a special judge in such case was void. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ready (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1034.

Where the regular judge agreed to go to another place and aid in war work, expecting to be absent for some time, and had notified the clerk to have the attorneys elect a special judge, he was "absent."—Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 505.

Validity of acts of special judge.—A judgment rendered by a special judge elected without due warrant is a nullity. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ready (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1034.

The acts of a judge elected in the absence of the regular judge by the bar of a county are valid on the principle that he was a de facto officer, since he had possession of a legally constituted office under color of authority. Lowe v. State, 33 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986.

Termination of authority of special judge.—Where the regular judge became an officer of the National Guard, and the bar elected a special judge, and the regular judge thereafter went into the federal service, the special judge had power to continue the term already begun, in spite of Const. art. 5, § 23, art. 16, § 17, as to filling vacancies and tenure of office, since art. 16, § 12, prohibits one holding office under the United States from holding office under the state. Lowe v. State, 33 Cr. R. 134, 201 S. W. 986.

Where regular judge formed National Guard company, and the bar elected a special judge, and the regular judge, inducted into federal service, resigned as judge, the special judge had power to finish the work of the then unfinished term. Watson v. State, 33 Cr. R. 131, 201 S. W. 985.

The fact that the regular judge, after the election of a special judge, merely passed through the courtroom without intention of resuming his official duties, did not terminate his absence so as to invalidate the acts of the special judge. Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 505.

After plaintiff had announced ready for trial, and the special judge was waiting announcement by defendant, the trial had begun, so that the special judge might proceed therewith, though the regular judge returned at that time. 1d.

Art. 1682. [1075] [1098] Record of the election, etc.

Record.—The only record as to the appointment of a special judge was that he was selected by the state and the defendant, and was sworn to try the case of the state against the defendant. The clerk certified this to be found in his minutes, but it was entirely detached from any other proceedings in the case. Held, that the entry was too uncertain to show even a substantial compliance with the law. Smith v. State, 24 Tex. App. 260, 6 S. W. 40.

THE CLERK OF THE DISTRICT COURT

Article 1690. [1083] [1103] May appoint deputies.
See Kirby Lumber Co. v. Long (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 906.
Cited, Thompson v. Johnson, 84 Tex. 545, 19 S. W. 784.

Article 1691. [1084] [1104] Oath and powers of deputies.
Powers.—A deputy district clerk can take depositions only in the clerk's name by himself as deputy. Kirby Lumber Co. v. Long (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 906.

Article 1693. [1086] [1106] May administer oaths and take depositions.
Depositions.—A deputy district clerk can take depositions only in the clerk's name by himself as deputy. Kirby Lumber Co. v. Long (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 906.

Article 1694. [1087] [1107] Shall keep a record of proceedings, judgments and executions.
Record of judgments.—In order to perpetuate a ruling of the trial court on an exception to a plea of former conviction, where such exception is sustained, the judgment of the court thereon must be entered in the record, so that it may appear in the transcript. Rust v. State, 31 Cr. R. 75, 19 S. W. 763.

This article has reference to the amplified decree which goes upon the minutes, and not to the judge's docket entry. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

Where judge's name does not appear in the blank constituting part of the form required by district court rule 48 (142 S. W. xx1) following the judgment copied in the transcript, it will be presumed, for the purpose of giving court on appeal jurisdiction of the appeal, in the absence of such attack on the verity of the record as is permitted by law, that the clerk performed his duty in making out and certifying transcript as required by arts. 2108, 2114, and that judgment was entered under direction of judge under this article, since such direction may be oral. Id.

Article 1701. [1094] [1113] Indexes to all judgments.
Index.—A judgment duly filed and recorded, but not indexed, creates no lien on lands of the judgment debtor. Nye v. Gribble, 70 Tex. 458, 8 S. W. 608.

CHAPTER THREE
THE POWERS AND JURISDICTION OF THE DISTRICT COURT AND OF THE JUDGE THEREOF

Article 1705. [1098] [1117] Original jurisdiction of the district court.

Jurisdiction in general.—A court without jurisdiction over subject-matter can only dismiss cause. Burcum v. Gaston (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 257.
Where the amount in controversy was below the jurisdiction of the district court, its judgment thereon is void, and the question may be raised for the first time on appeal. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148.
Ordinarily, court's jurisdiction over subject-matter and parties, once fully attached
Art. 1705

COURTS—DISTRICT

in a cause, continues until all issues both of fact and of law have been finally determined.

Under Const. art. 5, § 8, giving the district courts jurisdiction over suits involving $500 or more, and Workmen's Compensation Act, § 5, the requirement that a suit to set aside an award be brought where the injury occurred is not jurisdictional, but relates only to the venue of another suit brought to be dismissed, but, upon defendant's application, should be transferred to the county where the injury occurred.

U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. of Baltimore, Md., v. Lowry (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 222.

3. Title to land.—Title and recovery of land and the barring of equity of redemption alone being involved, the district court has jurisdiction, though an administrator and guardian be defendants. Johnson v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 990.

Where title to a house on land conveyed by warranty deed is reserved by parol, a court having jurisdiction will reform deed to include reservation, but such jurisdiction is in the district court, and not in the county court. Robbins v. Winters (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 149.

Petition alleging that defendant was interfering with plaintiffs' right of possession of land sufficiently showed jurisdiction in the district court, under Const. art. 5, § 8, this article and arts. 1712 and 1713, since "title to lands is the means whereby the owner has possession, and "possession" means the actual control of the property and is prima facie evidence of and one of the elements of title, but is not title within such sections (citing Words and Phrases, Second Series. Title: see also, Words and Phrases, First and Second Series. Possession). Stewart v. Patterson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 785.

Where a judgment of the district court is rendered in an action of trespass to try title against an infant, her mother and her stepfather, held that the judgment divesting the infant of title in land which had been part of the community estate of her mother and her father, and which the mother had conveyed after her remarriage, was within the exclusive jurisdiction of the district court, not the county court. Van Ness v. Crow (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 572.

4. Liens on land—in general.—In suit on note for $300, 6 per cent. interest, and attorney's fees, and to foreclose vendor's lien, in which defendant filed a cross-action, seeking to recover $1,300, held that district court had jurisdiction, though plaintiff dismissed part of petition seeking to establish and foreclose vendor's lien. Baldwin v. Drew (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 836.

Under art. 285, a justice court, in a suit within its jurisdiction, has authority to decree a foreclosure of attachment lien on real estate, and direct an order of sale of the land; Const. art. 5, § 8, not conferring exclusive jurisdiction on district courts. Baker v. Pittink & Meyer, 109 Tex. 227, 205 S. W. 982.

5. Jurisdiction—exclusive.—In an action for recovery of chattel, the district court is without jurisdiction to entertain a suit under Art. 414, Tit. 2, and § 672, Tit. 12, Texas Rev. Civil Statutes, as an action for recovery of property involved in an action of contract or tort, and to set aside a judgment of foreclosure of a lien, and the rule would be the same as where the suit is one for recovery of personal property, the defendant claiming ownership as against the plaintiff in a proceeding to enforce a judgment of foreclosure of a lien. Kolb v. Gerson (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 983.

9. Actions involving chattels.—Under Const. art. 5, § 16, giving district court jurisdiction when amount exceeds $500, the district court is without jurisdiction of a suit on notes amounting to $330 brought against the maker, who had purchased an automobile from plaintiff, and against one to whom the maker had transferred the automobile even though the automobile was alleged to be of the value of $800, for in any event plaintiff could only recover $300. Kolb v. Gerson (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 987.

Where the district court was without jurisdiction of an action on notes, where it was alleged that the plaintiff had obtained possession of the automobile, the district court was without jurisdiction of the action on notes, where it was alleged that plaintiff had obtained possession of the automobile, the district court was without jurisdiction of a suit on notes amounting to $330 brought against the maker, who had purchased an automobile from plaintiff, and against one to whom the maker had transferred the automobile, and within the time allowed to file suit on the automobile, the amount involved being less than $500, held, that sequestration proceedings under which plaintiff obtained possession of the automobile were also beyond the jurisdiction of the district court and should be dismissed. Hall v. Gerson (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 988.

In suit to rescind contract for purchase of land and to recover amount paid as part of price, though undisputed evidence showed such part was only $400, petition alleging it was $500, sum sued for, was within jurisdiction of district court. Rascoe v. Myre (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 780.

The amount in controversy in any case is determined by the pleadings upon which the case is tried and is the largest amount for which judgment could be rendered upon such pleadings. King & King v. Porter (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 646.

13. Pleadings reducing amount.—Where the amount recoverable is reduced by exceptions to the different items of damage alleged to an amount below the jurisdiction of the court, and plaintiff fails to amend the proper judgment is one dismissing the cause for want of jurisdiction and not one which would bar a recovery in a court of competent jurisdiction. Webb v. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 499.

14. Recovery of less than jurisdictional amount.—In an action by a property owner against a city for damages for the destruction as a nuisance of stables, allegations that the improvements destroyed were worth $500, and that the rental value of the premises was $15 a month, and praying $500 vindictive damages, did not show that the amount of damages sought was below the jurisdiction of the district court, notwithstanding that the jury found the value of the premises to be $175, and the reasonable rental value $10 per month. City of Forney v. Mounger (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 240.

16. Joining claims.—Where plaintiff sued in his individual capacity for loss sustained by injuries to his child and as next friend of his child for such injuries, and the suit in his individual capacity, which was a separate and distinct cause of action, was for a sum less than the jurisdictional amount of the court, the suit in such capacity must be dismissed. Pettus v. Weyel (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 191.

17. Inclusion of interest.—In a suit to recover earnest money paid on an optional purchase of realty with interest, interest is part of damages, and must be considered as a part of amount in controversy in determining jurisdiction of district court. Mooser v. Tucker (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 259.

Under art. 4977, interest, although prayed for, was not recoverable in suit for damages under contract providing for $500 liquidated damages for breach, and district court had no jurisdiction, amount in controversy being exactly $500. Escue v. Hartley (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 359.

20. Incidental relief.—The recovery of damages already sustained through defendants' diversion of waters and discharging them on plaintiff's lands being incidental and the main purpose of plaintiff's suit being for an injunction, the amount of the damages alleged by plaintiff, $500, should not control the question of jurisdiction, and the district court has jurisdiction to try the case; such case not being within the exclusive jurisdiction of the county court on account of the amount alleged. Smith v. Kidd (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 348.

22. Contested elections.—Const. art. 5, § 8, as amended, in 1891, to give district court jurisdiction of contested elections, and arts. 3046-3078, prescribing rules by which contest may be tried, enlarged jurisdiction of district court, and did not limit its original power to try suit for office. Shipman v. Jones (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 329.

Jurisdiction of district court of contested election can be invoked only by compliance with Rev. St. 1911, arts. 3046-3078, executing Const. art. 5, § 8, conferring on district court jurisdiction of contested elections. Id.

Suits by duly elected treasurer of county against two persons, one of whom usurped office and illegally held it for year, when he resigned to make place for other, under appointment from county judge, held suits for an office, of which district court had jurisdiction, though Rev. St. 1911, arts. 3046-3078, was not complied with. Id.

Art. 1706. [1099] [1118] Jurisdiction in matters of probate.

Settlement of estates.—The district court has jurisdiction in matters relating to estates of deceased persons, when legal or equitable rights must be adjudicated, and the powers of the county court are inadequate to adjudicate them and administer complete relief. Fryckberg v. Scott (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 21; Slavin v. Greer (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 479.

District court has no jurisdiction to partition estate where administration proceedings are pending upon appeal to district court from county court, and questions raised in partition suit could have been raised in administration proceedings. Hutchens v. Dresser (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 969.

Where a suit for partition of property was begun after the death of one owner and before he was appointed as administrator for her estate and before application for probate of her will, the district court did not acquire equity jurisdiction to the exclusion of the court of probate, and could not by appointment of a receiver deprive the administrator of control of the property. Van Grindeberck v. Lewis (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 1049.

Action to determine plaintiffs' interest in property left by testator's grandfather and in the estate of plaintiffs' grandmother in the process of administration, involving title to such property and the question of whether the grandmother's administrator had converted the portion of the estate, and whether grandmother had title to certain property at time of her death, was within jurisdiction of district court, involving equitable rights not determinable by probate court under Const. art. 5, § 16. Slavin v. Greer (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 479. 415
Under arts. 1705, 1706, 1712, and arts. 3206, 3207, prescribing the jurisdiction of the circuit courts in probate matters, it has always been the policy to avoid multiplicity of suits, and when possible to settle in one suit such issues as could not have been settled in the probate court. Frickberg v. Scott (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 21.

Where the administratrix refused to obey an order of the county court to sell real estate to pay an allowed claim because others claimed prior rights in the property, the district court could hear a suit against the administratrix and the adverse claimants, to determine the rights of the parties and to order a sale of the property to be carried out under the direction of the county court, since there was no procedure by which the adverse claimants could be brought before the county court and their claims determined. Id.

The jurisdiction of the district court over a suit to cancel a conveyance of land, brought by some of the heirs against those to whom deed was made by the ancestor, is not dependent on proof that there were no deeds against the estate. Kibby v. Kessler (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 277.

Wills.—A suit by the heirs of a husband and wife to have a joint will treated as ineffective to dispose of the community property, to set aside a judgment establishing the title of trustees under such will, to annul a separate will of the wife, so far as it bequeathed her residuary estate, and for a partition of the property, was not within the jurisdiction of a federal court, since, assuming that the other relief could be obtained by an independent suit in equity in the state district court, the suit, so far as it sought to annul the will of the wife, was merely supplemental to the proceedings for the probate of the will, and cognizable only by the probate court under the Texas decisions. Sutton v. English, 246 U. S. 199, 35 Sup. Ct. 254, 62 L. Ed. 664.

Appellate jurisdiction.—District court has appellate jurisdiction only over administration of estates of deceased persons. Hutchens v. Dresser (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 985.

The rule of practice in cases appealed from the county court in matters of probate to the district court is that the latter court has only appellate jurisdiction to revise, declare void, and set aside orders and decrees of the county court; the district court must try the case de novo, and no enlargement of the issues as made by the pleadings in the county court will be permitted. Carr v. Froelich (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 137.

An order of the district court made and entered in the court of original jurisdiction before the jurisdiction of the appellate court can attach, and then only by appeal or certiorari. Minor v. Hall (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 784.

Control over minors.—The district court has jurisdiction under Const. art. 5, §§ 16, 17, of a habeas corpus to determine question of the custody of a minor, notwithstanding the county court, under arts. 4091 and 4122, had appointed a guardian, who had taken the custody of the minor; for the district court, as a court of equity, had jurisdiction to determine whether the guardian was fulfilling his duty and exercising his authority in a manner conformably to the best interests of the minor. Anderson v. Cossey (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 624.

Arts. 2184-2190, defining the jurisdiction of juvenile courts and prescribing the procedure as to dependent or neglected children, are not in violation of Const. art. 5, § 16, conferring upon the district court original jurisdiction over guardians and minors, and general jurisdiction over all causes of action for which a remedy or jurisdiction is not provided by law or Constitution, when considered in connection with section 16, giving the county court a power to appoint guardians of minors. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 263.

Control over commissioners' court.—The power given the district court by Const. art. 5, § 8, and this article, to supervise the proceedings of the commissioners' court on opening roads, permitted a full inquiry, on application for injunction to restrain opening a road by an interested landowner, as to the validity of the proceedings; the application for an injunction having the character of a direct attack. Haverbeken v. Hale, 109 Tex. 106, 204 S. W. 1162.

Under art. 1509, prohibiting payment by county treasurer, except on certificate or warrant from some officer authorized by law to issue it, and art. 2341, subd. 8, empowering and making it the duty of the county commissioners' court to audit and settle all accounts against the county and direct their payment, commissioners' court having refused to allow such an account, the district court, though under Const. art. 5, § 8, having jurisdiction and general supervisory control over the commissioners' court, cannot, by original and direct mandamus proceeding against such treasurer, compel him to pay the claim. Martin v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 653.

Despite Const. art. 5, § 8, under Laws 1918 (4th Called Sess.) c. 44, §§ 21-23, arts. 5584 1/2 and sect. supra, plaintiffs, attacking an order of the commissioners' court of a county creating a levee improvement district, held not entitled on the allegations of their petition to maintain their suit, in so far as it was to annul the report of the commissioners of appraisement assessing damages and benefits. Wilmarth v. Reagan (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 446.

Art. 1708. [1101] [1120] To punish contempts.

Cited, Ex parte Degeneg, 30 Tex. App. 566, 17 S. W. 1111.

Acts constituting contempt.—Though relator approached a brother-in-law of a juror summoned on jury for week and sought to have juror corrupted, yet where corruptive matters were never communicated to the juror, who was discharged from service, the district court had no jurisdiction to punish relator for contempt. Ex parte Kempner, 86 Cr. R. 251, 216 S. W. 172.
Proceedings to punish.—To hold one adjudged in contempt in custody, valid and entitles the judgment and commitment issued thereon, are necessary, and, in absence of commitment, any restraint is illegal. Ex parte Alderete, 83 Cr. R. 558, 293 S. W. 762.

Contempt proceeding for compensation to plaintiff by assessment against defendant and proceeding to recover the damages sustained by him through defendant's removal of a fence on plaintiff's land after time limited by judgment for plaintiff in his action to recover the land, was a proceeding of a civil nature; but in so far as the proceeding was to punish defendant by fine and imprisonment, in addition to forcing payment of damages, it was a criminal. Wexly v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 972.

Punishment.—A proceeding of defendant for contempt of court by removing a fence on plaintiff's land after the time limited in the judgment for plaintiff's action for the land did not warrant a civil judgment against defendant in redress of injuries to plaintiff resulting from the removal of the fence, a remedy which could be obtained only in a civil suit. Beverly v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 976.

Art. 1712. [1106] [1122] To hear and determine all cases of legal or equitable cognizance.

In general.—Contractor's bankruptcy does not deprive state district court of jurisdiction to distribute funds in owner's hands among mechanic's lien claimants and subcontractors. Gordon-Jones Const Co. v. Welger (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 881.

A state court was not precluded from jurisdiction for the judicial sale of property, where its judgment was undisturbed by any appropriate action of the bankrupt court, in which an involuntary petition was filed by judgment debtor's creditors, by taking actual possession of bankrupt's estate, or enjoining execution or sale, or even a suggestion or motion to stay, made in the state court. Houston v. Shear (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 976.

The remedy of specific performance is purely an equitable proceeding entirely different from any kind of relief known to and granted by the law, and belongs exclusively to the jurisdiction of courts of equity. Wilson v. Beaty (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 524.

Where a court once acquires jurisdiction over a controversy, it retains such jurisdiction for all purposes necessary to a final determination of the rights of the parties. L. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Davis (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 219.

When a court of competent jurisdiction has obtained jurisdiction of a cause, such jurisdiction cannot be ousted by a proceeding as to the same cause subsequently instituted in a court of concurrent jurisdiction. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 291.

In cases of transfers of property by a bankrupt within 4 months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, any state court, which would have jurisdiction, if bankruptcy had not intervened, can set aside the transfer. Koger v. Clark (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 494.

The exercise by district court of equity jurisdiction to protect the rights of parties in other courts is not an encroachment upon the jurisdiction of the other courts, even when it prevents such courts from proceeding with the trial of cases within their jurisdiction. Houston Heights Water & Light Ass'n v. Gerlach (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 634.

Under arts. 1705, 1706, 1712, prescribing the jurisdiction of the district court, and arts. 2506, 2507, prescribing the jurisdiction of the county and district courts in probate matters, it has always been the policy to avoid multiplicity of suits, and when possible settle such issues as could not have been settled in the probate court. Fryckberg v. Scott (Civ. App.) 278 S. W. 21.

When a court of equity has obtained jurisdiction of a bill for rescission, and a decree in accordance with the prayer is warranted, it will retain jurisdiction for the purpose of all the rights and claims of the parties growing out of the transaction complained of so as to do complete equity and leave nothing for future litigation which it can dispose of in the exercise of its equitable powers upon the parties before it. Wisdom v. Peek (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 218.

Where plaintiff and defendant had the exclusive right to use a patented process, and by contract divided their territory between themselves, a suit by plaintiff to enjoin defendant from using an unpatented improvement on such process in the territory allotted to plaintiff did not arise under the patent laws, but involved only a breach of contract and was within the jurisdiction of a state court. Southland Sweet Potato Curing & Storage Ass'n v. Beck (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 656.

Equity having the parties, the subject-matter, and the facts before it, will adjust in consonance with the rules of equity, the rights of the parties arising on the pleadings and the facts. Speer v. Lulrryme (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 174, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 911.

Courts of concurrent jurisdiction.—Where parties to state proceedings against a railroad company were different from parties in a federal suit involving same subject-matter, doctrine of comity between courts was inapplicable. Abilene & S. Ry. Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 876.

Federal court which appointed receiver held not to have exclusive jurisdiction over suit to enjoin railroad company from removing division headquarters from a town at which they were established pursuant to contract made by receiver. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. City of Ennis (Civ. App.) 301 S. W. 566.

Reservation of jurisdiction in decree of federal court, wherein validity and priority of claims on principles of equity were determined, held not to preclude court from passing on claim under art. 6645, against property sold by receiver. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Concrete Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 718.

Federal court whose receiver has taken possession of railroad company's property, held to have exclusive jurisdiction, and to be entitled to retain jurisdiction over property after it has been sold and delivered by receiver. id.

District court of one county has no jurisdiction of suit and to compel receiver of irrigation company to supply water upon terms other than those imposed by order of district court of another county appointing receiver, and to have such terms declared unreasonable, and to enjoin enforcement thereof, since an order granting such relief would constitute an interference with the possession, control, and management of the receivers appointed by another court. Mugde v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 819.

Non-resident parties.—District court has no jurisdiction to enjoin sale of non-resident's property pursuant to valid justice court judgment upon ground that property was exempt from execution. Mann v. Brown (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 438.

Causes of action arising outside of state.—It is only by virtue of the principle of comity that the plaintiff can ask the courts of Texas to enforce a transitory action which occurred in Arkansas. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Epley (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 528.

A passenger's action for money stolen from his suit case while riding in a Pullman car is transitory, and maintainable wherever a court may be found having jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter. Pullman Co. v. Uribe (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 189.

Where the necessary parties are before a court of equity, it is immaterial that the subject of the controversy, whether it be real or personal property, is beyond the territorial jurisdiction of that court, so long as it can compel the defendant, if it do according to the lex loci rei sitae all he could do voluntarily to give full effect to the decree against him. Roberts v. Stewart Farm Mortgage Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1108.

— Actions concerning chattels.—A suit to recover minerals unlawfully severed and converted in another state or the value of such minerals, where the petition is an independent cause of action for conversion or possession, the land on which the minerals lie will be in this state, and this right is not abridged or destroyed because it may be necessary to allege and prove right of possession. Copper State Mining Co. v. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. (Sup.) 277 S. W. 538; reversing Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 68. See, also, Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 856.

— Actions affecting lands outside of state.—The courts have no power to cancel a deed for land in another state or a foreign country. Griner v. Trevino (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 947.

Instrument purporting to convey right of entry upon lands in Republic of Mexico for purpose of severing guayule from soil, etc., purported to give an interest in land in Mexico, and courts of Texas would have no jurisdiction to decree cancellation, either under laws of Texas or under Statutes of the State of Coahuila, Republic of Mexico, arts. 6844, 3227 (book 3). id.

Effect of foreign laws.—Penal statutes authorizing recovery of penalty imposed at suit of private individual have no extraterritorial effect, and cannot be made the basis of a suit in another state. Clay v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 1072.

In servant's action for injuries, due to violation of federal Safety Appliance Act of March 2, 1893, the master's liability was enforceable in the courts of Texas, without reference to the laws of Louisiana, in which state the tort occurred. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Sprole (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 985.

The statutes of a state have no effect beyond its own limits. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Epley (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 528.

Laws of the state are not subordinate to the laws of another state touching property lawfully within its jurisdiction, and the enforcement of its laws against the deposit of a foreign corporation, and refusal to give up the deposit to the authorities of another state, would not violate the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution. Phillips v. Perue (Sup.) 229 S. W. 849.

Interstate commerce.—Interstate shipments.—The district court has jurisdiction of a suit to recover excessive freight charges and demurrage paid under protest, though the initial jurisdiction is with the Interstate Commerce Commission to fix and establish rules and rates; the suit being to recover charges demanded and paid in violation of the Interstate Commerce Commission's rule fixing demurrage charges and freight rates, and not to assess the rule as unreasonable. Payne v. White House Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 417.

Waiver or consent.—Jurisdiction over subject-matter cannot be conferred by agreement or estoppel. Burcum v. Gaston (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 257.
Art. 1714. Judge may exercise all powers, etc., in vacation, by consent of parties, except, etc.

Exercise of power in vacation.—Where a judge in vacation set down habeas corpus proceeding for hearing the respondents, who filed a plea of privilege to be sued in their own county, could not, by mandamus, compel the judge to hear and pass upon their plea when he preferred to continue the cause until term time. Lucid v. McDowell (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 203.

In a suit for a permanent mandatory injunction to abate a nuisance, an order entered in vacation, denying a temporary injunction, is not res judicata on final hearing; this article being inapplicable, as actions of this kind are controlled by the injunction statutes. City of Seymour v. Montgomery (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 257.

This article, excepting divorce cases from those triable in vacation, does not prevent divorce cases from being tried at special term under art. 1720. Guerra v. Guerra (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 360.

Right of appeal.—Where the district court, in term time, entered an order postponing the hearing on a motion to substitute receivers to a day certain beyond the term in another county, a provision in the order that the hearing should be had and considered as in term time did not operate to make the decision of the motion a judgment of the court from which an appeal would lie; arts. 1714, 1720, not being applicable. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Valley Reservoir & Canal Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 438.

Art. 1715. [1108] [1124] May alternate, etc.

Presiding in other districts.—This article gives a district judge authority to hear a habeas corpus case for, and at the request of, the judge of another district, who has been himself from the district after issuing the writ. Ex parte Angus, 29 Tex. App. 293, 12 S. W. 1099.

CHAPTER FOUR

THE TERMS OF THE DISTRICT COURT

Art. 1718. Terms of court.
1719. Special terms may be held, when:
1720. No new civil cases to be brought to special term.

Art. 1719. Adjourning of term, when and how made.
1720. Extension of term of court, when, etc., effect as to term in another county.

Article 1718. [1111] [1127] Terms of court.

Unauthorized terms.—All proceedings of a district court at a time when the holding of such court is unauthorized by law are null and void. Trabue v. Ash (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 415.

Art. 1720. Special terms may be held when; time; jury commissioners; grand and petit juries, etc.

Authority of judge to call special term.—The length of a special term of court may be longer than that authorized for a regular term, in the discretion of the judge. Trabue v. Ash (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 415.

Mandamus will not lie to compel the district judge to hold a special term of court under this article, since the statute clearly leaves the matter of calling such sessions to the discretion of the district judge. Pollard v. Speer (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 620.

Matters which may be considered.—Indictment for murder, found at special term of court called by judge without giving 30 days' notice prior to time court was held, was valid. Davis v. State, 53 Cr. R. 539, 204 S. W. 652.

Art. 1714, excepting divorce cases from those which may be tried in vacation, does not prevent divorce cases from being tried at special term under this article. Guerra v. Guerra (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 260.

Art. 1723. [1117] No new civil cases to be brought to special term.

Art. 1725. [1119] [1128] Adjournment of term, when and how made.

Failure of judge to appear.—Where the district judge appeared at 11:30 a. m. on the fourth day, he was authorized to proceed to hold court. Texas Mex. Ry. Co. v. Douglass, 69 Tex. 694, 7 S. W. 77.
Art. 1726. Extension of term of court when, etc., effect as to term in another county.

Validity and construction in general.—An indictment found during the extension of the term was not void because not found during or returned in a court in session. Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

While an order entered on minutes may not have been necessary to extend a regular term of district court under Acts 34th Leg. c. 139, such order did not destroy power existing under such statute or bring extension within Rev. St. 1911, art. 1726, authorizing extension on different grounds and requiring an order. Alexander v. State, 24 Cr. R. 75, 204 S. W. 644.

This article authorizes, not the calling of a new, distinct or independent term, but merely the continuance of same term, so that during period of extension court necessarily possesses the same power as during original term. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Muse, 109 Tex. 352, 207 S. W. 897, 4 A. L. R. 615.

Where court extended term "until the conclusion of said pending trial," an order made before entry of final judgment vacating order granting a new trial was rendered during such extended term; the granting of such motion before entry of final judgment being part of the trial. Id.

Where the district court, in term time, entered an order postponing the hearing on a motion to substitute receivers to a day certain beyond the term in another county, a provision in the order that the hearing should be had and considered as in term time did not operate to make the decision of the motion a judgment of the court from which an appeal would lie; arts. 1714, 1726, not being applicable. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Valley Reservoir & Canal Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 438.

CHAPTER FIVE

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RELATING TO THE DISTRICT COURT

Art. 1727. Minutes to be read and signed.

Art. 1729. Seal of the court.

CHAPTER ONE
THE COUNTY JUDGE

Art. 1736. Disqualification; causes of.
Relationship to party.—A judge who is the brother-in-law of a stockholder and president of a corporation is not disqualified to try an action to which such corporation is a party. Lewis v. Hillsboro Roller-Mill Co. (Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 338.

Relationship to surety.—A surety on an appeal bond is a "party" to an action, but in an action for damages for wrongful sequestration, judgment in original proceeding will not be held void on ground of disqualification of county judge because of relationship with surety on appeal bond. Fred Mercer Dry Goods Co. v. Fikes (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 830.

Art. 1737. Special county judge may be appointed by parties.
Right to appoint.—The amended judiciary article of the constitution, providing that "when the judge of the county court is disqualified in any case pending in the county court the parties interested may by consent appoint a proper person to try said case, or upon their failing to do so, a competent person may be appointed * * * in such manner as may be prescribed by law," does not require legislation to put in force that part which authorizes appointment by consent, and such appointment may be made, instead of transferring the case to the district court. Parker County v. Jackson, 6 Civ. App. 36, 23 S. W. 924.

CHAPTER TWO
THE CLERK OF THE COUNTY COURT

Art. 1745. Clerk pro tem. appointed when.
Construction and operation.—Where the clerk of the county court is one of the defendants, and files the petition and issues the citation, the latter should be set aside on motion of his co-defendant, though the clerk has entered into a stipulation that no advantage will be taken of the failure to appoint a clerk pro tem. Lewis v. Hutchison (App.) 15 S. W. 664.

Art. 1748. May appoint deputies.

Art. 1749. Oath and power of deputies.
Powers of deputies.—A sheriff's return in the matter of a school district bond election, bearing the jurat of the county clerk by his deputy, was authorized by this article. Mayhew v. Commissioners' Court of Coryell County (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 943.

As, the county clerk's deputies "shall act in the name of their principal and may do and perform all such official acts as” the clerk may perform, where, in proceedings to lay out a public highway, the notices issued, the appointment of the jury of view, and oaths of such jury were signed, sworn, and certified in the form, “B. Co. Clerk, by V. Deputy,” they were in proper legal form. Culp v. Commissioners’ Court of Coryell County (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 944.

Under arts. 1748, 1749, the division of the clerk’s office into departments, with a deputy over each in charge of particular business, does not limit the authority of any deputy, or prevent him from performing all such official acts as the clerk might perform. Jones v. MacCorquodale (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 58, 62; Same v. Maes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 62.

Art. 1752. [1142] [1149] Issue marriage licenses, and take oaths, depositions, etc.

CHAPTER THREE

THE POWERS AND JURISDICTION OF THE COUNTY COURT AND OF THE JUDGE THEREOF

Art. 1763. [1154] [1161] Exclusive original jurisdiction.

Nature and Incidents of jurisdiction in general.—County court has power to foreclose an attachment lien. Bracht v. Adamson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 624.

Requisite amount or value in controversy.—Action in the county court will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction; the petition, though to recover $600, on its face disclosing that no more than $70 can be recovered. Youngblood v. Independent Order of Puritans (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1116.

The district court is without jurisdiction of an action for conversion, based on seizure of property under an invalid execution, for exemplary damages in sum of $50, and for an injunction restraining sale, as the amount involved is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the county court. Ramsel v. Miller (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1050.

Set off or counterclaim.—In an action in the county court for water rent, a cross-action for damages for flooding of corn, placing the value of the corn destroyed at $400, was not a fraud on the court, where it was filed and the value fixed in good faith by defendant’s counsel, although the real value of the crop was $1,128.75. San Jacinto Rice Co. v. Ulrich (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 777.

Injunction.—Since art. 4643, subd. 2, gives county court jurisdiction to enjoin party to pending suit from doing some act as to the subject-matter which would render the judgment ineffectual, defendant, enjoined by county judge from threatened sale of $280 automobile reprieved, could not urge lack of jurisdiction because of the amount. Sweeney v. Alderete (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 367.

Under Const. art. 5, § 15, county court has jurisdiction to enjoin injury threatened to property alleged to be $100. City of Brownsville v. Fernandez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 112.

Pleading.—The value of the property in action to foreclose chattel mortgage being alleged in good faith, as found by the court, at an amount giving the county court jurisdiction, it is immaterial that the evidence on the trial showed it to be less. Hunter v. Marlin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 882.

In absence of any proof of fraud as to jurisdiction, averments in petition as to amount involved will establish jurisdiction of court. Jackson v. Sere (Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 664.

Where jury found that plaintiff had falsely stated his damages for killing of dogs at such sum as to give jurisdiction to county court, court was without jurisdiction, and proper judgment entry was one of dismissal, and not for defendants on merits. Stone v. Bare (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1107.

Where allegations of petition show an amount in controversy sufficient to give court jurisdiction, and the allegations are not attacked as fraudulent, the court has jurisdiction to give judgment or change venue. San Antonio Drug Co. v. Red Cross Pharmacy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 324.

Where it appears from face of petition for injunction in county court that such court had no jurisdiction over subject-matter of suit, Court of Civil Appeals has no jurisdiction over appeal from judgment of county court. Luhnig v. Scott (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 663.

Petition in suit on notes and for foreclosure of chattel mortgage disclosing sum sued for is less than $200, and containing no allegation of value of mortgaged property.
does not affirmatively allege facts showing county court has jurisdiction. Watts v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1061.

Where, in one count of petition, plaintiff sued for $150 as the value of a house, and in another count alleged house to be worth $250, and sued for that amount in conversion, the petition, on its face, did not show that less than $250 was involved, and was insufficient to give jurisdiction to county court. Robbins v. Winters (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 149.

In a petition in the county court for foreclosure of a mortgage on an automobile, an allegation that both parties agreed to a sale of the car for $150 and that plaintiff was damaged in the sum of $200 is insufficient to show the value of the automobile, on which the jurisdiction of the county court depended. Hodgkinson v. Hartwell (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 457.

Amount claimed or value of property.—The jurisdiction of the county court over a suit to foreclose a chattel mortgage is determined by the value of the mortgaged property, and not by the amount of the debt secured thereby. Hodgkinson v. Hartwell (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 457; Hunter v. Marlin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 82; Jackson v. Sore (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 664; Houston Harbor Sales Co. v. Levand (Civ. App.) 296 S. W. 279.

Where petition seeking foreclosure of chattel mortgage alleged that a third person set up some claim to the property, the value of the property, and not the debt due from mortgagor to mortgagee, was the amount in controversy, and if such value was not alleged, the petition not affirmatively show jurisdiction as to the third person. People's Ice Co. v. Pharis (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 66.

The amount of plaintiff's demand at the time of filing suit fixes the jurisdiction of the court, in the absence of fraudulent intent in making the allegation. W. R. Case & Sons Co. v. Canody (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 750.

In proceeding in district court of Robertson county under Acts 35th Leg. c. 96, § 14, where the return did not show the value of property levied on, which plaintiff was claiming, but the sheriff made an assessment upon the replevy bond given by plaintiff, and then assessed the value of the property, and it was agreed that such was its value, court properly overruled a motion to dismiss, on the ground that the value of the property in controversy was less than $200. Watson v. Schultz (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 598.

Constr. art. 5, §§ 16, 22, and art. 6882, the county court had jurisdiction over an appeal of landowner, whose land was taken for road purposes, from the award of the commissioners' court of $150 damages, though the appellant claimed $2,830 as the value of the land taken. Leathers v. Leon County (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 658.

Principal, interest and attorney's fees.—Where petition is doubtful as to recovery of $180 principal and interest thereon, together with 10 per cent. attorney's fees, which sufficed to make the amount in controversy in excess of $200, the amount is within the jurisdiction of the county court. Planters' Oil Co. v. Hill Printing & Stationery Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 192.

Action for $500 due on stock subscription contract and for 6 per cent. interest thereon due under art. 4977, if no specified rate having been agreed on, held not within jurisdiction of district court, being within exclusive jurisdiction of county court under Constr. art. 5, § 16, giving a county court exclusive original jurisdiction in civil cases when amount in controversy exceeds $200 and does not exceed $500 "exclusive of interest"; the 6 per cent. interest sued for being "interest" within such constitutional provision and not damages. Nueces Hotel Co. v. Ring (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 255.

Objections to jurisdiction.—To establish plea in abatement that plaintiff laid his damages in controversy, it is necessary to confer jurisdiction, evidence must show not only that property was of value less than jurisdictional amount, but that value laid was for fraudulent purpose of conferring jurisdiction. Stone v. Bare (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1102.

Art. 1764. [1155] [1162] Concurrent original jurisdiction.

Amount or value in controversy.—County court has no jurisdiction to issue writ of injunction, except where amount in controversy exceeds $200, and does not exceed $1,000, in value, exclusive of interest. Lulining v. Scott (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 665.

If petition of deceased's son claiming personal property mortgaged by deceased be treated as a suit against administrator for recovery of property, county court had no jurisdiction, alleged value of property being in excess of $1,000. Cavitt v. Beall Hardware & Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 798.

A cause of action for $32.35 as actual damages and $1,000 as exemplary damages was not within the jurisdiction of the county court. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 74.

Principal, interest and attorney's fees.—Where petition is doubtful as to when interest sought is to begin, it will be construed to begin when the judgment was rendered, where, if it began before such time, the court would not have had jurisdiction on account of amount involved. Magnolia Cotton Oil Co. v. Martin (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 199.

Language of Const. art. 5, § 16, providing that county court shall have concurrent jurisdiction with district court when matter in controversy shall not exceed $1,000, "exclusive of interest," applies only where interest is expressly given by statute, and county court had no jurisdiction of suit by subscribers to corporate stock on defendant's agreement to take stock off their hands after year if not satisfied; interest in addition to $1,000 prayed for by plaintiffs being merely damages, and contract not coming within art. 49. Bell v. C. J. Gerlach & Bro. (Civ. App.) 245 S. W. 470.

In action in county court for breach of implied warranty of seeds, a complaint alleging that if the seed had been as represented plaintiff would have produced five tons of broomcorn on his land, worth $200 a ton and above all expenses of raising and harvest would not have cost in excess of $1,000, and not asking for interest in any form. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Boatenhamer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 972.

— Pleading.—In the absence of allegation of fraudulent attempt to confer jurisdiction on the county court, finding that cotton destroyed was of value of $1,500 did not deprive the court of authority to render judgment for the amount claimed in the petition, which was within its jurisdiction. New Fenfield Townsite Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 788.

To render a complaint bad as asking recovery in excess of the court's jurisdiction, it must affirmatively appear that plaintiff sues for an amount in excess of the jurisdiction, and a prayer for general relief will be confined to that which the court has jurisdiction to grant. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Boatenhamer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 972.

The county court being a court of limited jurisdiction, it must affirmatively appear that the amount sued for is within the jurisdiction of the court, and defendant's general demurrer should have been sustained in an action by a piano company asking for judgment on promissory notes aggregating $300 and to foreclose a chattel mortgage lien on a piano given to secure the payment of the note, where the value of the piano was not stated by plaintiff in his petition. Tant v. Baldwin Piano Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 239.

The question whether the county court has jurisdiction of a civil action must be determined by the pleadings, and where defendant in action to foreclose a mortgage on an automobile desired to challenge jurisdiction of the county court on ground that automobile was of a value exceeding $1,000, he must do so by plea in abatement, charging that the value of the mortgaged property had been falsely and fraudulently represented to be less than it really was, in order to confer jurisdiction on the county court; and where no such plea was offered, the case cannot be dismissed on evidence that the automobile was of a value exceeding $1,000. Moon Automobile Co. v. Avery (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 511.

Under Const. art. 5, § 16, the county court has no jurisdiction of causes where the matter in controversy exceeds $1,000, exclusive of interest, the matter in controversy not being the amount prayed for or the amount stated generally in the petition, where the items going to make up the total value of damages are specifically stated, and the aggregate sum differs from the amount prayed for or stated generally, the total of the items specifically set out comprising the "matter in controversy" in case of such conflict. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hamriok (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 166.

Art. 1766. [1157] [1164] Jurisdiction denied in certain cases.

Involving title to land.—Where title to a house on land conveyed by warranty deed is reserved by parol, a court having jurisdiction will reform deed to include reservation, but such jurisdiction is in the district court, and not in the county court. Robbins v. Winters (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 149.

The county court has no jurisdiction of an action to recover or partition real property. Miller v. Fenton (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 631.

Where land had fraudulently conveyed away from a decedent's estate, only the district court could grant adequate relief. Bain v. Coats (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 571.

The county court had jurisdiction of suit by the vendor to recover from the vendor money paid by her on account of the vendor's breach in failing to deliver a certain gold bond as agreed when 24 monthly payments had been made; nothing in the vendee's pleadings involving title to the lot, and in protection of the vendor's right the court not being required to enter any order involving title. Harris County Inv. Co. v. Davis (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 761.

Art. 1767. [1158] [1165] Appellate jurisdiction.

Appellate jurisdiction—Amount in controversy.—On the recovery of claims against railroad companies, the attorney's fee is part of the matter in controversy, and not costs, within Const. art. 5, § 18; giving the county court jurisdiction of cases from justice courts when the judgment appealed from or the amount in controversy exceeds $20, exclusive of costs. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Werchan, 3 Civ. App. 478, 25 S. W. 30.

Art. 1771. [1162] [1169] Both law and equity powers.

Art. 1772. [1163] [1170] To grant remedial writs.

CHAPTER FOUR

THE TERMS OF THE COUNTY COURT FOR CIVIL AND PROBATE BUSINESS

Article 1776. [1167] Terms of the county court.

Terms for civil and criminal business.—Loc. & Sp. Acts 32d Leg. c. 104, creating the county court of Galveston county at law, and section 4, providing that the terms shall be held “as now established for the terms of the county court of Galveston county until the same terms may be changed by the commissioners’ court,” expressly adopts the provision made by the commissioners’ court prior thereto fixing the terms and duration of terms of county court of Galveston county so as to permit each term of the newly created court to remain in session until the time for the succeeding term to begin, and the different terms of court do not expire by operation of law within three weeks by reason of this article. Ex parte Miller, 85 Cr. R. 263, 211 S. W. 451.

Article 1777. [1168] Commissioners’ court may fix.

End of term for civil and probate business.—The order of the commissioners’ court of Galveston county made August 7, 1911, to the effect that the terms of the county court of Galveston county at law “are hereby changed, and that hereafter the terms of said court be and are fixed as follows: The terms of said court shall begin on the first Monday, etc., until otherwise ordered by this court,” purports to change only the part of the previous order fixing the term of the county court which refers to the number of terms and the dates on which they begin, and does not annul the part permitting a term to continue until the disposition of all of its business. Ex parte Miller, 85 Cr. R. 263, 211 S. W. 451.

Absence of judge.—Where the county judge was not present the first three days of a term of court, but appeared on the morning of the fourth day, opened his court, and proceeded to do business, this article was sufficiently complied with. Moore v. State, 87 Cr. R. 24, 218 S. W. 1069.

Art. 1804. Judge to be elected, when, etc.

Art. 1811—168. Shorthand reporter.—For the purpose of preserving a record in all cases for the information of the court, jury and parties, the judge of the County Court at Law of Tarrant County, Texas, shall appoint an official shorthand reporter, who shall be well skilled in his profession, shall be a sworn officer of the court and shall hold his office at the pleasure of the court; and the provisions of Chapter eleven of Title 37 of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911 relating to the appointment of stenographers for the District Courts shall, and it is hereby made to apply in all its provisions, insofar as they are applicable to the official shorthand reporter herein authorized to be appointed, and said reporter shall be entitled to the same fees and salaries and shall perform the same duties and shall take the same oath as are in said Chapter eleven of Title 37 provided for the stenographers of District Courts of this State, and also be governed by any other laws covering the stenographers of the District Courts of this State; provided, that the official shorthand reporter of said court shall not be required to take the testimony in cases where neither party litigant nor the judge demands it; but where the testimony is taken by said reporter a fee of three dollars shall be taxed by the clerk as costs in the case. Said reporter shall also as far as practicable, act as the official shorthand reporter of the County Court of Tarrant County for civil cases. [Id., § 12.]

Art. 1811—169. Transfer of causes.—As soon as may be after this Act takes effect, the Clerk of the County Court of Tarrant County, Texas, shall transfer to the docket of the County Court at Law of Tarrant County, Texas, all of the criminal cases then pending in the County Court of Tarrant County. The clerk shall note such transfers when made on the minutes of the County Court of Tarrant County, Texas. Thereafter, all new criminal cases filed in said county and coming within the jurisdiction of the County Court shall be placed on the docket of said County Court at Law. Until such time as the Commissioners’ Court shall direct, no civil cases shall be filed in or transferred to said County Court at Law; but when directed to do so by said Commissioners’ Court, the clerk of said county shall transfer from the docket of the County Court of Tarrant County for civil cases to the docket of said County Court at Law a sufficient number of civil cases to equalize the dockets of said two courts, and shall thereafter place new civil cases, as they are filed, on the docket of said County Court at Law in a ratio to be prescribed by said Commissioners' Court, which ratio may be changed or modified from time to time by order of said Commissioners' Court. [Id., § 13.]

CHAPTER NINETEEN

COUNTY COURT OF WICHITA COUNTY AT LAW

Article 1811—170. Court created.—That there is hereby created a court to be held in Wichita County, to be called the County Court of Wichita County at Law. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d S. S., ch. 5, § 1.]

Took effect June 8, 1920.

Designation of court.—Although the court created by this act was denominated "the county court of Wichita county at law," it was by the use of the words "at law" in its designation that such court was differentiated in name from the county court already in existence, so that an information stating its presentment in "the county court of Wichita county at law" was not defective as not conforming to the requirement of Code Cr. Proc. 1916, art. 478, subd. 2, that from the information it must appear to have been presented in a court of competent jurisdiction, where the distinguishing words "at law" were preserved throughout all the pleadings. Pelz v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 154.

Information for unlawfully carrying a pistol presented in the "county court of law of Wichita county" was not subject to quashal on the ground the court was designated by act of the Legislature as the "court of Wichita county at law." Dodaro v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 394.

Article 1811—171. The jurisdiction of the County Court of Wichita County at Law and the judge thereof shall extend to all matters of eminent domain, of which jurisdiction has been heretofore vested in the county court or in the county judge, but this provision shall not affect [affect] the jurisdiction of the commissioners court, or of the county judge of Wichita County as the presiding officer of such commissioners court as to roads, bridges, and public highways, and matters of eminent domain which are now within the jurisdiction of the commissioners court or the judge thereof. [Id., § 2.]

The county judge of Wichita County shall be the judge of the county court of Wichita County. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 1811—174. Election of judge; qualifications; tenure.—There shall be elected in said county by the qualified voters thereof, at each general election, a judge of the County Court of Wichita County at Law, who shall be well informed in the laws of the State, who shall hold his office for two years, and until his successor shall have duly qualified. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 1811—175. Bond and oath of judge.—The judge of the County Court of Wichita County at Law, shall execute a bond and take the oath of office as required by the law relating to county judges. [Id., § 6.]

[Id., § 11.]

TITLE 37
COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN

CHAPTER ONE
INSTITUTION OF SUITS

Article 1812. [1177] [1181] Suits commenced by petition filed with clerk.

Institution of suit.—Under this article, the statute of limitations ceases to run at the time of filing of petition, though more than two years elapse before any citation is issued; it not being shown that the delay was caused by plaintiff. Tribby v. Wokes, 14 Tex. 142, 11 S. W. 1089.

Under this article, persons are made parties to a suit by another filing a petition which states a cause of action with a bona fide intention that citation shall issue and be served. Hence contention that parties to two suits are not the same because two parties had not been served in one of suits is without merit. Camp v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 217.

Under this article, where petition was filed within period of limitations, whether plaintiff was guilty of laches because of delay in issuing and serving citation held a question for the jury. Godshalk v. Martin (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 536.

Delay in issuance and service of citation held to raise no presumption of laches making limitations applicable. Id.

Jurisdiction, within the rule that jurisdiction when attached cannot be taken away by subsequent proceedings in another court, cannot attach where no pleadings setting up the cause of action against any one is alleged. State Nat. Bank of San Antonio v. Lancaster (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 883.

Premature commencement.—An action on notes will not be defeated because brought before their maturity, where an amendment after maturity was made, declaring on the notes. Bryan College Interurban Ry. Co. v. Kropp (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 723.

Specific performance of a contract for sale and exchange of lands whereby defendant was to assume a contract with a water user's association under a government irrigation project, held not dependent on termination of litigation as to water rights. Sorenson v. Broadus (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 1098.

Matters arising after commencement of suit.—While the plaintiffs in trespass to try title must have title at the commencement of the suit, and one without title cannot sue for the use of another in such action, a conveyance pendente lite by plaintiff does not affect the progress or determination of the suit, and grantee is bound by the judgment rendered, and a judgment for plaintiff inures to grantee's benefit, and such conveyance does not constitute an outstanding title. Heard v. Vineyard (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 489.

A deed, which was executed after the suit was brought for conversion of ores removed from a mining claim, but which showed on its face that it was executed in lieu of a prior deed, which had been lost, was admissible in that suit in support of the evidence that plaintiff had purchased the claim from which the ore in controversy was removed before its attempted relocation by defendants. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 585.

Order of trial.—See Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Shuford, 72 Tex. 165, 10 S. W. 408; note to art. 1943.

Art. 1813. [1178] [1182] Duty of the clerk on receiving petition.
See Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Shuford, 72 Tex. 165, 10 S. W. 408; note to art. 1943.

Art. 1815. [1179] [1183] Clerk's file docket.
See Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Shuford, 72 Tex. 165, 10 S. W. 408; note to art. 1943.

Art. 1816. [1180] [1184] Civil suits not to be instituted on Sunday, etc., except.—No civil suit shall be commenced nor shall any process be issued or served on Sunday except in cases of injunction, attachment, garnishment, sequestration, or distress proceeding. [Act 1846, p. 363, § 2; Acts 1897, p. 84; P. D. 1424; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 99, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Criminal proceedings.—That the criminal complaint was filed on Sunday is not ground for quashing it. Eley v. State, 57 Cr. R. 648, 224 S. W. 771.

The performance of a contract by the sheriff's return on a special venire on July 4th could not vitiate the return. Clark v. State. 37 Cr. R. 107, 220 S. W. 100.

Service of notice to dip cattle, made on Sunday, was not illegal, despite this article, there being no such provision in the Code of Criminal Procedure. Williams v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 645.

DECISIONS IN GENERAL.

Right of action.—A "cause of action" cannot exist without the concurrence of a right, a duty, and a default; or, stated differently, an obligation must exist upon one party in favor of the other, the performance of which is refused (citing Words and Phrases, Second Series. Cause of Action). Beaumont Cotton Oil Mill Co. v. Hester (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 702.

Where there is no legal right interrupted, there is no cause of action. Harris v. Thomas (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1068.

Torts.—The mere filing of a civil action and the issuance of citation to defendant, even though maliciously and without probable cause, is not a tort which gives a right of action for damages; nor does the repeated filing of such actions in different jurisdictions for the same cause of action, and their dismissal when defendant appeared to defend, give such right of action. Pye v. Cardwell (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 542, conforming to answers to certified questions, 110 Tex. 572, 222 S. W. 153.

Demand as condition precedent to suit.—In order for vendor to recover on a breach of a contract to purchase land, he must show that he performed, or offered to perform, the obligations imposed by the contract upon him, provided such obligations were not independent, or some other valid reason for the failure of the plaintiff to perform, or offer to perform, them, existed. Echols v. Miller (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 605.

When an obligation to pay is complete, a cause of action at once arises, and no formal demand is necessary. Green v. Scales (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 274.

Election of remedies.—The mere bringing of an action which has been dismissed before judgment, in which no advantage has been gained or legal detriment occasioned, is not an election. Lewis v. Powell (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 737.

Where remedies were alternative and concurrent and not inconsistent, the pursuit of one will not exclude the other until a satisfaction is had. Palmer v. Bizzell (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 971.

Where after judgment for title and possession of an automobile plaintiff discovered that it had been transferred to third persons, and his judgment was unavailing, a new legal situation having arisen, an action for conversion cannot be defeated on the theory of the election of remedies. Id.

The doctrine of election does not apply unless the party has two valid and available remedies when he makes his election. Poe v. Continental Oil & Cotton Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 717.

A party does not have two remedies between which he must elect, where there is a valid defense to one of them, as where the remedy first sought is defeated by laches or limitations. Hartford Life Ins. Co. v. Patterson (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 814.

The mere institution of a proceeding is not such a conclusive election as will prevent the plaintiff from abandoning it and pursuing an inconsistent remedy. Id.

Change of remedy by Legislature.—No one can have a vested right, one that cannot be disturbed without the consent of the parties, in a remedy. Hoard v. McFarland (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 687.

The Legislature has the right to modify and change the judicial procedure by means of which contract rights are enforced, so long as the modification does not incidentally enlarge the burden of the debtor or diminish the vested rights of the parties in contracts then existing. Id.

Parties suable.—That a railroad is in the hands of the government is no defense against an action, under U. S. Comp. St. 1918, U. S. Comp. St. Ann. Supp. 1918, § 3115&c, 443.
and a suit for unlawful conversion of property may be brought directly against the Director General of Railroads; such suit being in no sense a suit against the Federal gov-

CHAPTER TWO
PLEADING IN GENERAL

Art. 1819. [1183] [1187] Pleadings defined.

Necessity and sufficiency in general.—Allegation of mutual mistake becomes immaterial where unilateral mistake of one party, known to other party, is sufficiently alleged.

It is necessary to plead law of other state. Kinney v. Tri-State Telephone Co. (Civ.
App.) 201 S. W. 1180.

To make estoppel of principal from setting up his agent's lack of authority available the other party, it must be pleaded by such other party in his action against the prin-362.

Subrogation, to be available, must be pleaded. Newton v. Houston Hot Well Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 960.

Fraud, to be available against an award, must be pleaded. Robbs v. Woolfolk (Civ.
App.) 234 S. W. 232.

In the absence of plea of either waiver or estoppel, no such issues were in the case.

Innocent purchase, for proof thereof to be available, must be pleaded. Kurz v. Solz
(Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 424.

Purpose and intent of pleader.—Intention of pleader could not alter legal effect of Matters judicially noticed.—Neither a statute, nor the charter of a city, which is made by one of its provisions an act of which all courts must take notice, need be

Matters of implication.—An allegation of facts which amounts to fraud is a sufficient allegation of fraud, though fraud is not alleged by name nor set out by the pleader as a legal conclusion from the facts. Hickernell v. Gregory (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 691.

Conclusions of fact or law.—It is sufficient to plead the facts relied on to show es-

A pleading setting up fraud must contain specific allegations of acts and conduct relied upon, and must be definite and certain. J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Flynn (Civ.
App.) 202 S. W. 322.

Whether or not a suit to cancel a mineral lease is one coming within art. 1830, subd.
14, providing for venue of suits concerning land, is a legal question, and defendant's allegation in his plea of privilege, that it was not such a suit is a mere conclusion of law.

A judgment cannot be based on a pleaded conclusion of law not warranted by the Fraud is not pleaded by a mere allegation that an execution was fraudulent, but the facts which would constitute the fraud must be pleaded. Branscum v. Reese (Civ. App.)

215 S. W. 671.

General allegations that a contract was executed through accident, mutual mistake, and fraud with respect to a certain feature thereof were ineffective as conclusions, where specific allegations of fact concerning such matter failed to show any accident, mutual

An allegation that a factory constitutes a nuisance, is the mere pleading of a con-

Certainty and consistency.—The particular facts relied upon as constituting estoppel should be pleaded with reasonable certainty. Smith v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 27.

It is duty of pleader to state facts on which he relies with such certainty and accuracv as will identify transaction on which reliance for recovery is based, so as to afford other party a reasonable opportunity for investigation with a view to meeting the issue.
W. 224.

There is no qualification or abridgment of the rights to plead matters that are inconsistent, if they be pleaded at the same time and in due order of pleading. Illinois Bankers' Light Ass'n v. Floyd (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 967, reversing judgment (Civ.
App.) Floyd v. Illinois Bankers' Life Ass'n of Monmouth, Ill., 192 S. W. 601.
Disjunctive allegations.—When two causes of action or defenses are pleaded in the disjunctive, one of which is good and the other is not, it amounts to no more than pleading the latter, because a pleading will be construed most strongly against the Construction of pleadings.—Specific allegations control those of a general nature.

American Law Book Co. v. Fulwiler (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 866; Millsaps v. Johnson (Civ.
App.) 195 S. W. 292.

Particular averments of doubtful meaning, at least in pleadings at law, must be

Issues, proof, and variance.—A party must first plead facts which proof offered tends to establish, before such proof will be admissible, or, if admitted without objection,

Evidence which finds no support in pleadings cannot be considered. Grand Lodge,

Under pleading charging that sale was in fraud of creditors, party was properly allowed to show that sale was constructively fraudulent to extent of difference between consideration paid and reasonable value of property, in that purchaser knew vendor was

The allegations and proofs must correspond. Allen v. Vineyard (Civ. App.) 212 S. W.
266.

In divorce actions the courts will not quibble as to whether evidence showing plaintiff not entitled to divorce is supported by the pleadings. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.
218 S. W. 692.

In broker's action on commission notes secured by lien reserved in deed, pleadings held to present issue of nondelivery of notes to broker. Speer v. Dalrymple (Com. App.
222 S. W. 174, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 911.

Art. 1820. [1184] [1188] Pleadings of an intervenor.

See Kinney v. Tri-State Telephone Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1190.

Sufficiency of pleading.—Where landowners intervened in receivership proceedings against irrigation company after sale of plant under order of court, and alleged water rights under contract with former owner, the court will not pass upon such question as against purchaser, where interveners did not plead an application to board of water

Art. 1822. [1186] [1190] Pleading charters and acts of incorporation.

Pleading corporate existence.—In action against an insurance company, allegation that defendant was "a mutual chartered company doing business in the state" was, as against a general demurrer, a sufficient allegation of defendant's corporate status, the words "mutual chartered company" ordinarily meaning an incorporated company. United Dental of incorporation.—See Sayles v. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Abilene (Civ.

App.) 199 S. W. 522; note to art. 1958.

Art. 1823. [1187] [1191] Pleading special act of the legislature.

Pleading city charter.—Neither a statute, nor the charter of a city which is made by one of its provisions an act of which all courts must take notice, need be pleaded.
Emsendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Art. 1824. [1188] [1192] Pleadings may be amended.

See Bomar v. Parker, 68 Tex. 435, 4 S. W. 599.

1. Necessity of amendment.—Where court considered amount insufficient to confer jurisdiction, plaintiff need not request permission to amend petition by making allegations of fraud more specific, since such request would have been useless. Burch v.
Gaston (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 257.

Where buyer reconvened for damages for misrepresentations and there was evidence that the goods were of some value, court will affirm judgment for seller on a directed verdict, notwithstanding that evidence showed that the difference in value of goods actually delivered and that contracted for was considerable, where buyer refused to amend pleading so as to ask judgment for the difference of the value of goods delivered and that contracted for. Alba-Malakoff Lignite Co. v. Hercules Powder Co. (Civ. App.) 219
S. W. 554.

2. Right to amend and subject-matter of amendment.—Where court dismissed suit, plaintiff having been lacking in diligence to procure service of nonresidents, it properly refused to permit filing of amended petition showing why plaintiff should have been permitted to cite unserved defendants by publication, and why case should have been

In suit on joint and several note, with attachment and levy on defendants' joint property, an amendment alleging a subsequent cause of action against one of such defendants was not objectionable as being a misjoinder of causes of action. Kiggins v.
Henne & Meyer Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 494.
If art. 4649, requiring that petitions for injunction be verified, applies to a divorce proceeding, with a district court, by art. 4629, has special authority to make temporary orders respecting property of parties, irregular verification of petition for divorce is subject to amendement, and does not defeat jurisdiction of district court to enter order prohibiting disposition of property of community estate. Ex parte Gregory, 85 Cr. 115, 219 S. W. 294.

An amendment may supply an allegation necessary to give the court jurisdiction, or correct statement of damages or change the capacity in which the plaintiff sues. Foster v. Wright (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1990.

When plaintiff sued a liquor company for the price of a saloon business and it interpleaded W. and wife on a note given for the price of such business and disclaimed any interest in the note or amount due, plaintiff was properly permitted, after citing W. and wife, to amend and assert a cause of action against them on the note. Wahl v. Ramsey (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 559.

In suit to enforce claim that devise was conditional, where the petition inferentially alleged that it was not the purpose to attack the will as probated, the trial court properly refused to permit plaintiffs to file an amended petition, in substance a suit to set aside probate of the will and to contest its probate in the district court over which that court had no jurisdiction. Minor v. Hall (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 784.

In suit to cancel an oil lease, the trial court did not err in permitting defendant lessee to amend its answer so as to show the true date when it complied with a provision of the lease by furnishing a copy of the reports of the expert who made a geological survey. Johnson v. Sunshine Oil Corporation (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 698.

3. Matters arising or discovered after original pleading.—An amendment may, under restrictions, introduce a new cause of action, or, in addition to the original cause, add one accruing after the suit was brought, and before the amendment was filed. Foster v. Wright (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1990.

Where in suit to foreclose vendor's lien it was first shown by answers and cross-action that widow of purchaser agreed with vendor and mortgagee to deed the land one-half to each on a payment to be made by mortgagee to vendor, to which plaintiff pleaded a fraud and a waiver of agreement, the failure of plaintiff to sooner plead abandonment could not operate as an estoppel as to such plea. Daugherty v. Rosebury (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 924.

4. New cause of action or defense.—In action on note where no fraud is alleged, an amendment to petition showing fraud presents a new cause of action. Mills v. Frost Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 199.

There was no fundamental repugnance nor irremedial inconsistency between original petition, praying, in the alternative, for foreclosure of vendor's lien and for judgment on the notes, and amended petition seeking foreclosure of lien and a judgment for the debt. Jones v. Fink (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 777.

Where original petition was amended only to the extent of changes due to a different stage having been reached in the progress of negotiations for exchange of properties, held, that different causes were not stated, and court did not err in overruling defendants' plea asking a transfer of cause to the county to which they had moved between the time of filing of original and amended petitions. Sykes v. Fischl (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 217.

Lockin v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 168.

Harlan v. Falfurrias Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 649.

Postponement of a trial is in the sound discretion of the trial court, and it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse to permit an amendment to be filed after evidence was in, setting up facts which were within the pleader's knowledge before the trial. Goodman v. Republic Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 466.

District Court Rule 27 (142 S. W. xix), regulating the filing of trial amendments, does not make the right to file a claim dependent upon the contingency that ex-

19. Amendments and effect of amendment.—Where plaintiff filed amended petition reducing claim to $3,000, nonresident defendants' application for removal to federal court held properly denied, although property attached under original petition was appraised at $10,000.—Skelton & Wear v. Wolfe (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 901.

The fact that amended original petition did not specify that the action was against executor as such will not be treated as a dismissal of the action as to him in his representative capacity, where the relief sought necessitated his presence in his representative capacity, and he continued to treat the action as involving his representative capacity. Richardson v. McCluskey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 324.

27. Supplemental petition.—Trespass to try title against a defendant holding notes secured by vendor's lien on land and a deed as purchaser at a sale under a deed of trust, was not charged held in equity by a suit in equity to cancel trustee's deed by supplemental petition. Waller v. Dickson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 853.

28. Supplemental answer.—In action by an employé of a third person for injuries wherein defendant answered by general denial, etc., supplemental answer, that plaintiff had accepted compensation under Workmen’s Compensation Act, could not nullify the general denial, in view of the statute permitting defendant to plead as many matters of law or fact as he may choose. Cooper v. Hinman (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 972.

In action on a life policy, which did not provide that the certificate of the attending physician and the findings of the coroner should be admitted in evidence to establish the cause of death, so that they were not admissible over objection, the trial court should have sustained plaintiff’s exceptions to the answer, which contained matters of evidence. Green v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 552.
3. — Matters not appearing on face of pleading.—Petition, not indicating on its face that suit was brought within 60 days after proof of loss, contrary to provisions of fire policy, was good against special exception on ground that it appeared that suit was prematurely brought. In suit by an infant, whose land was condemned by a city, to set aside the judgment of condemnation on the ground that she was not notified of the proceedings, etc., exception to the owner’s petition on the ground that certain facts alleged were immaterial, nugatory, and none of them immaterial or irrelevant, held properly overruled. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 305.

Shepherd State Bank v. San Jacinto County (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 324.

A general demurrer admits the facts pleaded to be true, but denies that they constitute the cause of action or ground of defense, and, if enough is stated to enable the court to see that a good cause of action exists, however defective, the insufficiency or defectiveness of the averment cannot be taken advantage of by a general demurrer. Sovereign Union, Woodmen of the World, v. Piper (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 649.

The "subject-matter" with reference to the court's jurisdiction concerns its power to hear and determine cases of the general class to which the proceedings belong, so that a special exception that the petition shows that the court has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter does not present the objection of nonjoinder of a necessary plaintiff. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1021.

On special exception that plaintiff's petition was insufficient because it failed to al­lege the performance or tender of performance of contract, the petition must be consid-

On exception to the petition, the court may take judicial notice of the citation and return thereon, as bearing on the question whether the action was effectively commenced within the period of limitations. Ben C. Jones & Co. v. West Pub. Co. (C. C. A.) 270 Fed. 663.

14. — Hearing and determination.—Where petition in replevin action did not allege that defendant wrongfully deprived plaintiff of possession, or wrongfully withheld possession and answer contained a general demurrer, it was duty of court of its own motion, if demurrer was not called to its attention, to hold that petition did not state cause of action. Miller v. Fenton (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 631.

15. — Effect of overruling.—After a general demurrer has been overruled, the pleader, to prevail, must establish by competent evidence the facts pleaded on a trial of the issues made. Roy v. W. W. Kimball Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 251.

16. — Effect of sustaining.—Where general demurrer to answer was sustained, defendant was left without answer, and plaintiff relieved of the burden of making proof of any matter pleaded. Bostick v. Hancy (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 477.

Bordages v. Burnett (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 326.

17. — Demurrer to amended pleading.—Where plaintiff's recovery was wholly by virtue of allegations in the petition as they existed at the time of filing of trial amendment, it was not necessary that defendant should have renewed exceptions to the petition when the trial amendment was filed in order to complain of too great generality in its allegations. Negociacion Agricola y Ganadera de San Enrique, S. A., v. Love (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 224.

19. Defects and objections and waiver thereof.—Assuming that suicide clause in life policy required beneficiary to plead a negative, failure to plead such negative was only a defect of pleading which could not be raised upon the introduction of evidence. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 591.

20. — Cures by subsequent pleading.—In an action by a mortgagee against a mortgagor and a subsequent mortgagee, the subsequent mortgagee, not pleading fraud in execution of plaintiff's mortgage, cannot profit by such an allegation by the mortgagee. John E. Morrison Co. v. Eley (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 103.

The objection, made on appeal, that a fact was not sufficiently pleaded, should be overruled, if all the pleadings, including one defendant's pleadings and plaintiff's reply to plea of privilege of another defendant, taken together, present such an issue. Pittmon v. Harrison Co. v. Boatenhamer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 214.

21. — Cure by pleadings of adverse party.—In suit on guardianship bond, averment in answer sufficiently showing that sureties signed as such would cure want of an allegation in petition that sureties executed the bond. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 675; Wyatt & Wingo v. White (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 154.

To a general demurrer to petition, it is sufficient answer that by plea of confession and avoidance defendant had admitted the cause of action, except as to specific matters therein set up. Rowe v. Daugherty (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 240.

Graves v. Hall (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 665.

22. — Waiver in general.—Though it is the better practice to present exceptions to pleadings setting up supposed immaterial issues, failure so to do does not necessarily constitute a waiver or an estoppel, and prevent objection to supporting proof when offered. Cooper v. Hinman (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 372.

The rule that failure to except to pleadings setting up supposed immaterial issues constitutes a waiver or an estoppel is applicable only when the issue pleaded could be saved by amending. 1d.

Where a corporation was sued by wrong name, and judgment by default taken in that name, neither the petition nor the citation leaving in doubt the identity of the party intended to be sued, the judgment was binding, since, if, knowing that suit had been brought against it, it elected not to interpose timely objection, it will be considered as having waived such mistake. Abilene Independent Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Williams (Sup.) 229 S. W. 847.

23. — Waiver of objections to petition or complaint in general.—Objections to sufficiency of petition to support judgment or justify recovery held reviewable, though not assigned in the trial court, as they presented questions of fundamental error. Turner v. Turner (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 526.

In action for commission by a firm of realty brokers, pleading that defendant owners voluntarily consummated sale with purchaser produced by plaintiff firm, on terms dissimilar to those specified by owners, though general, was sufficient to permit introduction of testimony, in absence of demurrer raising issue. Hodde v. Malone Real Estate Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 347.

Defendant, having failed to except to statement in justice court of plaintiffs' cause of action, either in that court or on appeal to county court, cannot ask reversal of judgment against him because of the imperfect statement. Kelly v. Collins (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 396.

Cell v. Sanderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 179.

Although averment that purpose of sending telegram to son announcing serious illness of his sister "was to notify her brother of her condition so that he might come to her immediately" was ambiguous, where it was not excepted to, it was permissible to construe averment to mean that plaintiff's purpose was to have son come immediately. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 876.

An insufficient petition will not be held sufficient on the ground that plaintiff's counsel understood from conversation with defendant's counsel that it would not be nec...

26. Waiver of objections to plea or answer.—Where the plaintiff, who had gone upon the carrier's platform to meet a passenger set up an ordinance regulating the moving and standing of express trucks on railroad platforms, and defendants filed no exceptions to the plea, objection made to the introduction of the ordinance came too late. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Lowery (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 605.

Citizens' Guaranty State Bank v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 271.

The objection that the cross-action by one defendant against another was foreign to plaintiff's suit so that there was a misjoinder of causes of action was waived, by failure to raise it by plea in abatement or by special exception, and it was error for the court on its own motion to strike out the cross-action. Stanton v. Security Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 864.

25. Failure to state cause of action.—Insufficiency of petition to state cause of action can be urged on appeal, though defendant did not present a general demurrer in lower court. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World v. Cooper (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 556.

In an action on a treasurer's bond, where the petition alleged the warrants drawn by the clerk were paid by the treasurer, while the proof showed the treasurer issued checks on the county depository therefor, is immaterial, where no objection to such evidence was made upon trial. Padgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1946.

In lessee's action for conversion alleged to have been committed by the lessor, evidence that the conversion was committed by the lessor's agent did not constitute such a variance that it could not be waived by defendant's failure to object. Henderson v. Beggs (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 55.

There was no fatal variance in an action for personal injuries on sidewalk, in that the petition alleged that elevation on the sidewalk from which plaintiff stepped to the sidewalk, whereas, according to testimony, she stumbled over the elevation; there being no objection on the ground of variance nor any claim of surprise or that the city was misled, and the essential element of plaintiff's petition being that the sidewalk was rough and uneven and unsafe for travel. City of Ft. Worth v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 123.

In an action by a surety who paid a balance due on notes, the complaint, which set out the facts of payment and the assignment of the notes to the surety, is sufficient to state a cause of action where not attacked by exception or otherwise, even though it proceeded on the erroneous theory that the sureties' rights were based on the notes, and in such case a judgment in favor of the surety cannot be questioned for insufficiency of the complaint. Dodgen v. McCrea (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 71.
CHAPTER THREE
PLEADINGS OF THE PLAINTIFF

Art. 1827. [1191] [1195] Requisites of the petition.

1. Matters of presumption or implication.—In a negligence case, the essential facts constituting the cause of action and fixing the liability of the defendant must be directly and distinctly alleged, and not left to be supplied by inference. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Mobley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 611.

2. Matters of fact or conclusions.—In an action against an indemnity company wherein the employer was insured, allegations that the employer did not fall within the exceptions from the operation of the act, and that plaintiff was an employer within the act and was entitled to compensation are conclusions of the pleader, and insufficient as against general demurrer. American Indemnity Co. v. Hubbard (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1011.

The following allegations have been held conclusions: In action for conversion of notes, allegations that plaintiff never parted with title, and that defendant knew plaintiff's purpose in transferring the notes to a third person, and that defendant in collecting the notes knowingly perpetrated a fraud upon plaintiff. Wilkinson v. Bradford (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1094. Allegation that corporation's charter and right to do business were forfeited for nonpayment of franchise tax. Bunn v. City of Laredo (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 320. In suit to enjoin execution, allegation that petitioner had been prevented by fraud from presenting his valid and meritorious defense was insufficient to enjoin the execution. Boykin v. Patterson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 611. In action against telegraph company for breach of contract to furnish telegraphic reports of a prize fight, allegations that plaintiffs were damaged in consequence of the failure and refusal of defendant to carry out its contract, without stating facts upon which such claim of damage was based. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Jeffries (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 781. Averments that, on failure of a third person to obtain a contract, title to the property involved became and was vested in defendant, which held deeds thereto. J. C. Engelmann Land Co. v. La Blanca Agr. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 653. Allegation in petition of plaintiff seeking injunction, that at the time of the organization of defendant and conveyance to its trustees of a certain survey, he owned an undivided fourth interest in the land. Townsend v. Durfee Mineral Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 876. Allegation, in depositor's petition against bank for delay in collection of check on other bank, "that if said check had been sent direct" to other bank "the same would have been paid." Bingham v. Emanuel (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1015. Averments in will contest that execution was procured by undue influence exerted by testator's wife, who possessed great influence over the testator, and that by her insistence and by her pleading she procured him to execute the will and to cut off contestants. Ater v. Moore (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 457.

But these are not conclusions: Allegations that by reason of his injury plaintiff's entire property and mental being suffered a severe shock. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 614. In suit on note and for foreclosure of chattel mortgage, averment that mortgaged chattel was of value of $350. Jackson v. Sere (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 604. In suit wherein the petition asked appointment of receiver, averment that the fund was in danger of being lost, diverted, misapplied, and put beyond the reach of the plaintiff and the court, being a reasoning inference from facts alleged. Temple State Bank v. Mansfield (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 154. Allegations stating the conclusion of fraud, but failing to state any facts constituting the fraud, was insufficient. Crawford v. El Paso Land Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 233.

Petition for divorce, merely alleging that defendant husband cursed and abused plaintiff unmercifully, a conclusion, held insufficient, under art. 4631. subd. 1, as to divorce for cruelty. Claunch v. Claunch (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 930.

In suit on warrants issued by defendant city, allegation in petition that warrants were given in lieu and substitution of other valid warrants was a mere conclusion, insufficient to show that warrants were valid. American Roads Machinery Co. v. City of Ballinger (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 265.

In a servant's action against the insurer for compensation, general conclusions as to the result of the injuries, would be sufficient, if followed by specific description of the injuries; but, where the attempted specification is about as general and indefinite as the conclusion, the petition is insufficient. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.
