Allegation of petition of fence owners for injunction against defendant's interfering with their possession by tearing the fence down, etc., that defendant's entry on the land was unlawful and wrongful, held a mere conclusion of the pleader, and not entitled Allegations of gross abuse of discretion by road commissioners of fraud, etc., in petition of taxpayers to enjoin construction of road along route, which commissioners prior to election agreed to adopt, held not mere conclusions of the pleader, in view of the allegations of facts involved; for only ultimate facts need be stated in pleadings, and details and minute circumstances should be omitted. Tippett v. Gates (Civ.App.) 228 S.W. 702.

In an action by a city to restrain the maintaining and operating of a filling station, allegations that the construction and maintenance of a filling station would necessarily constitute a public nuisance held but conclusions of the pleader and equivalent to an allegation that the threatened acts would constitute a nuisance per se. City of Electra v. Cross (Civ.App.) 225 S.W. 795.

A statement in a petition for an injunction that commissioners' court violated the law in selecting bank as depository was but a statement of a legal conclusion, and was short of the statement of any fact showing that there was an abuse of discretion in selecting such bank. Hurley v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Sour Lake (Civ.App.) 229 S.W. 663.

Good pleading requires that, in stating the grounds of a will contest, facts should be averred and not conclusions, and when grounds of contest embrace fraud, duress, or undue influence, a subsequent will, revocation, or the like, such matters, not being ultimate facts but conclusions of law to be drawn from facts, must be pleaded, not in the language of the statute, but the facts relied on must be stated. Ater v. Moore (Civ.App.) 231 S.W. 457.

3. Conclusions of law from facts alleged.—Plaintiff having pleaded facts fully, it was unnecessary to state legal effect thereof. Rockhill Country Club Co. v. Nix (Civ.App.) 198 S.W. 155.

In suit for reasonable value of services petition which alleged facts upon which law raised implied promise to pay was sufficient; it being unnecessary, in view of art. 1819, to allege a promise to pay. Lumsden v. Jones (Civ.App.) 205 S.W. 375.

Where the written evidence on which it was alleged that defendant had guaranteed payment of a note was fully set out in the petition, the petition alone could be looked to in support of plaintiff's liability. Hopkins v. Schallert (Civ.App.) 186 S.W. 219.

An injured servant need not in his complaint set out evidence, but where he states the injuries and the cause thereof, it is sufficient. Palermo Bros. v. Capps (Civ.App.) 196 S.W. 276.

In an action for loss of stock in shipment, it was not necessary that letter from defendant's claim agent, stating that stock died while in defendant's possession, be pleaded to make it admissible. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Booth (Civ.App.) 290 S.W. 198.

In an action for money paid to insurance company, upon verbal promise to make a loan and issue a policy, the basis of the recovery was the company's breach of agreement, and plaintiff was not required to set out the application for insurance, which was a matter of evidence. Trammell v. San Antonio Life Ins. Co. (Civ.App.) 290 S.W. 796.

In suit for destruction of crops by cattle through negligence in not having sufficient fences, plaintiff was not required to plead his evidence as to the condition of the fence. Corn v. McNutt (Civ.App.) 230 S.W. 1052.

7. Certainty, definiteness, and particularity.—In action for breach of contract for farm lease, paragraph of complaint, alleging as damages what plaintiff would have saved in living expenses by occupying the farm, held not sufficiently specific to enable defendant to be prepared to meet such allegations, and subject to special exceptions. Prince v. Blisard (Civ.App.) 210 S.W. 301.

Petition for negligence of railroad company as to gate in right of way fence, through which stock escaped onto the track, held subject to special exception as too general, vague, and indefinite. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Simmons (Civ.App.) 214 S.W. 563.

In action by foreman of ranch, to recover salary, advancements, etc., allegations in support of plaintiff's claim for moneys advanced and for commission on sales from the ranch, held subject to special exception on account of their generality, in the absence of allegation that plaintiff was unable to prove details or further information as to the advancements, and in possession of mere allegation he was unable to make a detailed statement of sales from ranch. Negociacion Agricola y Ganadera de San Enrique, S. A., v. Love (Civ.App.) 220 S.W. 224.

An allegation that, although those in charge of train saw, or should have discovered, that team was frightened, they continued to cause the whistle to blow, etc., does not raise the issue of discovered peril, and is demurrable, since to allege that one or the other of two things is true is not to affirm the truth of either. Baker v. Galbreath (Civ.App.) 211 S.W. 626.

10. Consistency or repugnancy.—Petition, claiming damages for injuries alleged to wholly disable plaintiff, and seeking damages for breach of contract for continued

Allegation that board of directors of defendant bank approved all portions of preliminary sketches, prepared by plaintiff architect, being inconsistent with remainder of count to effect that plaintiff was directed to complete plans and specifications, in accordance with the preliminary schedule theretofore approved, trial court properly sustained special exception. Reuter v. Nixon State Bank (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 715.

12. Scandalous matter and false allegations.—If plaintiff, knowing facts which would in law defeat venue, makes allegations which would cost venue, such allegations are in law fraudulent. Payne v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 557.

13. Pleading written instruments.—Copying guardianship bond in petition, and alleging that sureties were indebted and liable to plaintiffs, would not show execution of the bond by the sureties. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 676.

The petition on which a judgment was based which described the vendor's lien notes sued on as the last four of the series of six notes giving the amount and due date of each sufficiently is the notes to sustain the judgment against petition to vacate. Strickland v. Higginbotham Bros. & Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 425.

In contractor's action against an irrigation district for balance due on construction work, an objection that the written contract declared upon was not set out verbatim in his pleadings is without merit. Peyton Creek Irr. Dist. v. White (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1060.

15. Parol evidence to vary, add to, or explain writing.—Allegations that a contract "does not clearly state the minds of the parties" and "does not speak the truth of the agreement, and the minds of the parties did not meet in said writing, but did meet and agree to the effect," etc., held sufficient to allege a mutual mistake so as to warrant admission of parol testimony as to the actual agreement. Eldora Oil Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 723.

When a petition is not attacked by special exception, every reasonable intendment will be read into its allegations to sustain it. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World, V. Piper (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 649; Jackson v. Greenville Composite Co. (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 321; Aynesworth v. Peacock Military College (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 866.

Where a petition alleged that a debt was created prior to conveyance, but the actual dates showed that it was not, the special allegations controverted the general. Missouri v. Belt (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 225.

A suit, under art. 3915, to recover four times the amount of excessive fees charged by a county surveyor, is one for a penalty, and the petitions is subject to strict construction. Redus v. Blucher (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 613.

Where a petition is the first time attacked in the appellate court on grounds which could have been raised by general demurrer, every reasonable presumption will be indulged in favor of the sufficiency of the petition. Williams v. Atkinson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 759.

In action against telegraph company for failure to deliver telegraphic reports of prize fight, petition held to plead cause of action to recover expenses in preparation for exhibition at which reports were to have been read, and for special damages, and not to recover for loss of profits by reason of the breach of contract. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Jeffries (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 781.

In an action for transfer to deliver notes and accounts purchased at a public sale, a petition alleging that defendant's agent agreed to let plaintiff have the notes and accounts for a specified sum if he would not bid, and that he did not bid because of such agreement, but permitted defendants to purchase the property relying upon such agreement, was susceptible of no other construction than that plaintiff would have continued to bid but for such promise. Taylor v. Latevers (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 557, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 651.

Plaintiff who alleges in his petition that the land in controversy is in El Paso county, Tex., is not in a position to question the jurisdiction of the district court of such county over the subject-matter. Schoonmaker v. Clardy (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1112.

20. Designation of court and term.—A petition entitled in district court of Dallas county, Tex., giving the name of the parties and addressed "To the Honorable the District Court of Dallas County, Texas, — Judicial District of Texas," was not insufficient as far as to the court, where it was filed in the fourteenth judicial district, and no effort was made to try it in any other court, and it did not appear that defendants were deceived or misled as to where the cause was to be tried, and default judgment based upon such petition is valid. Miller v. Trice (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 229.

21. Names, description, and capacity of parties, and venue.—Although style of case did not designate parties as plaintiff and defendant, held that it may on general demurrer be presumed from style that party first named is plaintiff, and other, defendant. Russell v. Koennecke (Civ. App.) 187 S. W. 1111.

Petition as a whole held to show that it was against a county within the statute of limitations although the name of the county was omitted in the introductory paragraphs. Rusk County v. Linden (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 478.

Under art. 3021, requiring election contestants to give contestants notice in writing of intention to contest, and to deliver to them a written statement of the grounds, which does not refer to this article prescribing the requisites of a petition, a copy of a copy of the petition filed in a contest case is not required, and the fact that the copy served does not name the contestees does not invalidate the proceedings; it affirmatively appearing that the contestees were not misled. Kennison v. Du Plantia (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 118.

Upon pleas of privilege, it devolves upon plaintiff only to plead a cause of action arising in whole or in part in the county of suit, or an offense or trespass committed therein, or that the acts relied on, or a part of them, occurred there, and it is not necessary to prove all the elements finally fixing liability upon the defendant. First Nat. Bank v. Childs (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 307.

Fraudulent allegations as to venue, see Payne v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 377; note 12.

22. Statement of cause of action in general.—The allegations of a plaintiff's petition must be sufficient to constitute a legal basis on which to predicate judgment in his favor. Medley v. Lamb (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 1048.

A complaint charging violation of an ordinance must state facts which, if true, amount to a violation of the ordinance. Ex parte Jonischkes (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 952.

The purpose of a petition is satisfied if it apprises the court and the opposite party of the facts on which plaintiff intends to rely as constituting his cause of action. Hicks v. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 348.

23. Theory and form of action.—In action by tenant to recover share in amount paid landlord for pasturage, petition held not objectionable as setting up two separate causes of action, contract and tort, but to state cause of action for money had and received. Cooke v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 642.

Petition alleging contract to sell land and a lease of other lands, false representations as to condition of which the lease could be renewed, the making of a deed, and a purported assignment of the lease, and that a certain part of the recited consideration of the deed was for the assignment, and seeking damages, held for, and not to recover on a contract. Harris v. Mann (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 156.

Action by seller of jewelry against buyer and latter's surety on replcy bond given when property was repleved from seizure under writ of sequestration held not to seek to enforce surety's statutory liability on bond, but rather to seek recovery, either on the bond as a common-law obligation, or for conversion. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Harless (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 397.

A petition in an action against a corporation by a purchaser of stock held one for damages for fraud and deceit, and not one for rescission of a contract. Texas Co-op. Inv. Co. v. Clark (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 356.

Petition held to state cause of action for injunction to restrain removal of oil-drilling equipment and casing delivered to plaintiff under an executed contract, and not an action for specific performance of an executory contract to drill well. Hinton v. D'Yarметt (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 518.

An action by defendant to prevent another from recovering damages, arising from breach of the lease, with the broken end of the lease being a new separate cause of action. W. & A. Co. v. Usrey (Civ. App.) 687 S. 836.

A petition in an action against a corporation by a purchaser of stock held one for damages for fraud and deceit, and not one for rescission of a contract. Texas Co-op. Inv. Co. v. Clark (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 356.

Petition held to state cause of action for injunction to restrain removal of oil-drilling equipment and casing delivered to plaintiff under an executed contract, and not an action for specific performance of an executory contract to drill well. Hinton v. D'Yarmett (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 518.

An action by defendant to prevent another from recovering damages, arising from breach of the lease, with the broken end of the lease being a new separate cause of action. W. & A. Co. v. Usrey (Civ. App.) 687 S. 836.
When petition indicates on face that joinder is not calculated to consume too much time and confuse jury, alternative cause of action being sustainable by same testimony, and when case may be submitted on special issues, rule should not be enforced. Id. Where separate causes arising under different state of facts are alleged in the alternative in separate counts, there is no joinder of causes. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Gaines (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 691. The question of misjoinder of causes of action is a matter largely within the discretion of the trial judge. Spitzer v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 589.

Suits for damages arising from two distinct torts between the same parties may be joined. Headington Auto Co. v. Hood (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 501.

Joinder of all causes of action arising between the same parties in the same right and growing out of the same transaction is favored. Pease v. State (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 269.

Quo warranto to ousted defendant from office to which plaintiff was elected was properly joined with cause of action to recover salary paid defendant. Id.

27. — Injuries to person, property, or reputation.—An action held not objectionable as misjoining an action for slander with a count for wrongful conduct inducing defect in the condition of property or breach of promise to marry plaintiff. But merely to state an action for slander alleging breach of marriage promise as one of its results. Vogt v. Guidry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 650.

28. — Causes of action arising out of contract.—The vendor in an executory contract for the sale of land can, on purchaser’s default, either sue for the land or for the purchase money, and the better practice is to unite his causes of action, pleading and praying in the alternative. Stone v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 5.

Vendor may sue for specific performance and to foreclose vendor’s lien in same action. Gambrell v. Yarbrough (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 287.

One wrongfully prevented from fully performing contract after he has entered upon performance may elect either to sue on the quantum meruit or for breach, but he cannot do both. Ouachita Oil & Refining Co. v. Lee Farm Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 518.

An action for breach of two sales contracts were properly joined to avoid a multiplicity of suits, regardless of whether venue as one contract was properly laid in the county in which the action for breach of other was properly brought. Landry v. F. S. Almy Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 175.

A landlord’s action for excessive freight charges, demurrage charges wrongfully exacted, and damages for shortage of coal delivered, were properly joined, since all grew out of contracts of shipment and were ex contracts, and between the same parties. Payne v. White House Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 417.

30. — Contract and tort.—Causes of action for fraudulent representation that land was subject to irrigation and for failure to furnish water for irrigation held repugnant and contradictory, and properly alleged only in the alternative. Closner & Sprague v. Acker (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 421.

A cause of action upon a written contract for price of potatoes could properly be joined with a cause of action for damages against any company or railroad company for negligence, if any, in a shipment of the potatoes. Trevathan v. Gulf, M. Hail & Son (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 447.

A landlord’s causes of action against the tenant for rent and for wrongful removal of a fence are properly joined as matters growing out of the same transaction and subject-matter. Marshall v. Magness (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 541.

The general rule is that two causes of action, one based on contract and the other on tort, cannot be joined. Id.

But where the two causes of action arose out of the same transaction they may be joined. American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Struwe (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 534.

A servant’s petition which sets up two causes of action, one in tort against the master for injuries from negligence, and the other against an insurer on a contract indemnifying the master from liability on account of bodily injuries, is bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action. Owens v. Jackson-Hinton Gin Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 762.

One injured in a collision with a motorcar may in the same action join the owner of the vehicle and an insurer, even though the insurer was liable only after judgment had been awarded against the owner, and the cause of action against the owner sounded in tort and that against the insurer was based on contract. American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Struwe (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 534.

In an action upon insurance policy and upon a contract of renewal by the insurer’s agency, the plea in abatement by the members of such agency, asking a dismissal because of the improper joinder of causes of action, was properly sustained, and the cause of action alleged in the plea against the agency severd from the cause of action against defendant, as it was improper to join two actions, one for debt and the other sounding in tort. American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 727.

A mortgagee has no right to a judgment foreclosing his lien against mortgaged property in the hands of a purchaser from the mortgagor, and in the same suit recovery for conversion of that property, the right to suit for conversion being based on the assumption that his security has been destroyed or impaired, and if he pursues both remedies in the same suit it should be by an alternative pleading. Smith v. Wall (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 759.

31. Parties and interests involved in general.—There is no misjoinder of causes of action, nor of parties, where, in proceedings to contest an election of two school trustees, two defeated candidates are contestants against the two successful ones; all parties interested adversely to the contestees being proper parties plaintiff. Kendall v. Du Plantis (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 118.

32. Claims or liabilities in different capacities.—The commissioners' court of Henderson county having wholly supplanted the officials of the several road districts, one having claims against two road districts might properly join the same in an action against the commissioners' court. McDonald v. Axtell (App.) 181 S. W. 549.

A. Actions against executors and their sureties, one for waste and misapplication of funds, and another to set aside a conveyance of lands of the estate, fraudulently procured, to one of the sureties, with the collusion of the executors, held properly consolidated as against the objection of misjoinder of parties. Bain v. Costs (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 571.

33. Joint or common interest of plaintiffs.—Where all plaintiffs in suit to recover land asked for cancellation of former judgment against them and for repossession of their respective separate tracts, and one plaintiff also asked damages, there is a misjoinder of parties plaintiff, since they have separate demands and stand in different relations to defendants. Clegg v. Temple Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 646; Clegg v. Temple Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 971, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 646.

Where the brother of two sisters as their agent sent a telegram announcing their father's fatal illness, held, that it was not improper for the two sisters to join in a suit for delay in delivering which precluded their attendance at the funeral. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Morrow (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 689.

The several owners of separate parcels of land composing a large tract cannot maintain a joint suit for the entire tract, but each must sue for his respective part. Allen v. Vizard (App.) 212 S. W. 556.

Where members of association contracted in its name for orange crates, without specifying how many crates each member was to receive, the members who suffered damages because of defendant's failure to furnish a sufficient number of crates could properly all sue in a single action, and also join in the suit of action, and action in the name of the association. Mayhew & Isbell Lumber Co. v. Valley Wells Truck Growers Ass'n (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 225.

There was no misjoinder of causes of action and of parties in suit against defendant who had hired stock for a corporation to be formed, agreeing to drill for oil on certain land and to deliver the well as drilled to a specified depth, to the company; the claim of each separate purchaser having been assigned to plaintiffs, who owned jointly all the claims arising out of the sales of stock to each of the purchasers named, including plaintiffs themselves. Frye v. Wayland (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 975.

34. Joint or common liability of defendants in general.—Where plaintiffs show they are entitled to estate as minors which has been administered by two guardians, and that one or both guardians are liable, and that there will be controversy between guardians as to which caused loss to plaintiffs, plaintiffs are not required to bring separate actions. King v. Ragsdale (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 269.

35. Liabilities of codefendants on contracts.—In suit on joint and several note, with attachment and levy on defendants' joint property, an amendment alleging a subsequent cause of action against one of such defendants was not objectionable as being a misjoinder of causes of action. Kiggins v. Henne & Meyer Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 484. Amended petition asking judgment on note against one of such defendants, purchased after commencement of suit, was not objectionable as misjoinder of parties. Id. In broker's action for commission for effecting an exchange of properties while acting for both parties to the exchange, held, that there was no misjoinder of causes of action. Hull v. Eidt-Summerfield Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 480.

In suit upon oral contract for commissions against a father and son who acted jointly in combining their different tracts, entered into a written contract of exchange and were to receive a joint deed, there was no misjoinder of parties defendant. Id.

36. Corporation or partnership and members, officers, and other interested persons.—There was no misjoinder of parties plaintiff and causes of action because a corporation, which borrowed at usurious interest, and its stockholder, the indorser of its notes, sued together to recover separate penalties from the payee, especially after the payee filed his cross-action and sought to recover against both the corporation and its indorser. Sugg v. Smith (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 365.

37. Codefendants in actions for equitable relief.—Where petition to recover land sought cancellation of a judgment, recovery of several distinct tracts, and damages against one defendant, there is a misjoinder of parties defendant, since cancellation of judgment is separate from damage relief sought. Clegg v. Temple Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 646.

42. Splitting cause of action.—Under contract to pay $240 rental for year at $20 a month, each month's rent was separate and distinct demand; and landlord could elect to sue therefor separately. Neal Commission Co. v. Radford (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1052.

A wife injured by contact with an electric wire on going to the aid of her husband, who had come in contact therewith and who died from his injury, can maintain a suit for her own injuries, and a separate suit for his death. Abilene Gas & Electric Co. v. Thomas (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 660.
43. Reference from one part of petition to another or to other instruments.—In a suit to enjoin obstructions in certain streets, a petition, alleging that plaintiff was the owner of certain blocks forming part of a large body of land which had been dedicated to the public, and that all conveyances of lots had recognized the plan of dedication, and naming the streets alleged to be constructed, held sufficiently to identify the premises, since the map might be referred to, although not made a part of the petition. Zoeller v. Offer (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 1115.

44. Right of plaintiff.—The facts alleged in the petition must not only show some wrong or dereliction by defendant, but also some consequent injury to the personal or property rights of plaintiff; otherwise courts would continually be called upon to decide moot questions. Richardson v. Mayes (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 546.

Petition whereby the purchaser of an automobile sought to recover from an indemnity insurer held subject to general demurrer, plaintiff purchaser not having been a party to the policy, but a stranger, and it never having been transferred or assigned, held, so far as the petition showed. Indemnity Co. of America v. Mahafey (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 861.

45. Ownership, title, or possession.—One doing business under a trade-name could sue in his individual name on a note payable under the trade-name, without alleging or proving a transfer. Jones v. S. G. Davis Motor Car Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 701.

46. Matter of inducement and performance of conditions.—In stockholders' suit, facts alleged showing defendants constitute majority of directors, or that directors or majority are under control of wrongdoing defendant, so that refusal of directors to sue in name of a contract by defendants may be inferred, held sufficient without alleging any demand. Millsaps v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 202.

In suit against Texas Employers' Insurance Association under Employers' Liability Act of 1913, arts. 5546b-5546zzzz) allegation in petition that notice of injury had been given employer and insurance association "in due time" was equivalent to allegation it was given "as soon as practicable," as required. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Mummey (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 251.

In suit for professional services rendered by plaintiff architect, allegations of petition held not to show that plaintiff had fully performed his part of the contract. Reuter v. Nixon State Bank (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 715.

Petition in action on insurance certificate, not alleging that the conditions precedent to entitle beneficiary to the sum named in the policy have been complied with, was insufficient, where such failure was not cured by answer. Sovereign Camp of Woodmen of the World v. Cooper (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 550.

In action against city for personal injuries and for damages to property, the giving of notice of claim of damages required by Dallas Charter, art. 14, § 11, must be affirmatively alleged, being a condition precedent to the right of action. City of Dallas v. Shows (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 632.

A contract, whereby citizens of a town agreed to make certain payments to and do certain things for railroad upon completion and operation of railroad, being an entire contract, a railroad contractor suing on the citizens' notes could not recover without alleging performance of the contract. Wellington Railroad Committee v. Crawford (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 151.

In an action on notes conditional upon completion of railroad contractor suing notwithstanding failure to complete road within required time could not avoid such condition upon ground of breach of contract making such completion impossible without pleading such breach. Id.

Where plaintiff seeking cancellation of his deed alleged that his predecessors had conveyance of the property in consideration to him and his associates, and that plaintiff became the owner of 1/120th, it was not necessary for him to allege that he and his associates had made the deferred payments called for in his deed. Holland v. De Walt (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 216.

Where plaintiff agreed to convey his interest in certain land incurred by two judgments, a petition seeking to recover the specified consideration, is not defective for failing to allege tender of a conveyance, where defendants had acquired plaintiff's interest by purchase from one of the judgment creditors. Fleming v. Stringer (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 801.

A petition to recover purchase price of land incumbered by two judgments held not sufficient because not alleging tender of performance before the specified date by plaintiff owner and by a judgment creditor who had an interest in the land. Id.

50. Act, omission or liability of defendant—Co-defendants.—Where petition alleged the making of contract by defendants without specifying which of the defendants made the contract or when and where contract was entered into, and where the transactions under such contract extended over a period of months, defendants were entitled to have plaintiffs plead specifically both when and where the representations and agreements alleged were made, and to allege that plaintiff was the only defendant and to allege the promises and agreements relied on. Hartwell v. Fridner (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 231.

51. Statutory actions.—A petition, in an action in which penalties are sought to be recovered, should state all the statutory requirements with the same degree of certainty as is required in an indictment in a criminal case. Redus v. Blucher (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 612.

Petition for statutory penalty for collecting and receiving usurious interest held not subject to general demurrer. Dean v. Maxfield (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 466.
52. Duplicity and multifariousness.—Whether or not a petition is multifarious is largely for the discretion of the court. Hudmon v. Foster (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 362.

The rule against multifariousness, the improper joining in one suit of distinct and independent matters, is to be construed with, and so as not to restrict, the policy of avoiding multiplicity of suits. So that the matters relied on for recovery in the petition growing out of the same transactions, exceptations on a ground of multifariousness, should not be sustained, and plaintiff put to necessity of separate actions. Hudmon v. Foster (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 346.

53. Anticipating defenses.—In an action for purchase price, the contract appearing complete on its face as set out in petition, and providing seller would protect buyer should the order run less than the amount specified, the condition was for buyer's benefit, and petition need not allege that any particular quantity was ordered, such being strictly a defensive matter. Planters' Oil Co. v. Hill Printing & Stationery Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 175.

A complaint on fraternal benefit policy need not allege that beneficiary had an insurable interest in the insured's life, since the lack of such interest is a matter of defense. Hand v. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 713.

Allegations that a car left with defendants for repairs was sold after notice, under acts 5667, and that certain accessories had been converted, etc., held to state a good cause of action, although not alleging that plaintiff was entitled to possession of the car or had tendered the charges due, since the petition did not admit that charges were due or that sale was legal, and in any event the allegations alleging the conversion of accessories rendered the petition good at least in part. J. C. Kilgore & Co. v. Whitaker (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 445.

54. — Negativing contributory negligence or other fault.—In a petition for injuries to a man thrown from a fire wagon by a defect in the street, an allegation that plaintiff was lawfully entitled to be on or attempt to get there, at the time of the accident, is sufficient, as against a general demurrer, as an allegation that plaintiff had a right to ride on the fire wagon. City v. Austin v. Schlegel (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 281.

57. — Statute of frauds and limitations.—Petition of assignors for benefit of creditors against the assignee based on right to surplus and fraudulent disposition of assets by the assignees, filed 15 years after the fraud, held to show probable knowledge of the facts, so that was it showing no excuse or justification for delay, it was subject to special statute of limitations. Cord v. Bass (Comm. App.) 225 S. W. 192, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Bass v. McCord, 178 S. W. 998.

A petition to recover for the deficiency in land conveyed to plaintiff which alleged that he discovered the mistake as to the quantity just before he began the action, held sufficient to raise a question for the jury whether plaintiff was excused from having an earlier survey of the land made, so that it was error to dismiss the petition because recovery was barred by limitations. Hohertz v. Durham (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 549.

58. Admissions.—In action by purchaser's assignee to recover money deposited on contract, allegation in petition held not to admit that vendor furnished an abstract within time allowed by contract, but to allege merely that purchaser made timely objections to defects in title. J. M. Frost & Sons v. Cramer (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 828.

Though the assignee of a purchaser's interest, suing to recover a deposit, admitted the purchaser's timely receipt of abstract, contrary to undisputed evidence. It would be unjust to hold the purchaser bound to accept title shown by abstract or forfeit deposit. Id.

If petition contained prayer for cancellation of instruments unaccompanied by prayer for general relief, such special prayer determines the nature and object of the suit. Griner v. Trevino (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 947.

The cause of action depends upon the facts stated, rather than upon the specific relief prayed for. Where there is a general prayer for relief. Id.

A prayer for "general relief" is just as comprehensive in its scope as the prayer for "such other and further relief, judgments and degrees, legal and equitable, such as he may be entitled to under the facts in this case," etc. Texas Co-op. Inv. Co. v. Clark (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 245.

Misrepresentations pleaded by plaintiff in an action against seller of unsound cattle, taken in connection with defendant's pleading that he was only an agent of plaintiff, held, under plaintiff's prayer for general relief, to entitle him to recovery upon the theory of fraudulent misrepresentations by defendant as plaintiff's agent. Graves v. Haynes (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 668.

In an action by an injured servant against the insurer of his master, the servant is not entitled to recover compensation at a greater rate per week than that prayed for in the petition. Home Life & Accident Co. v. Corsey (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 464.

Under this article, where there were allegations of ownership and delivery to defendant and demand for their possession, accompanied by tender of storage charges and of special daily damages until return of the property, a demand for the properties was involved, although no specific demand therefor was made, and the writ of sequestration was warranted by the prayer for general relief. If the special prayer be misconstrued. White v. Texas Motor Car & Supply Co. (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 155.

61. — Interest and costs.—Where broker sued associates for share in commission fraudulently concealed from him, and asked general relief, interest, being allowable as part of his damages, was properly included in the judgment, which did not exceed the amount sued for. Foster v. McKay (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 606.

In action for purchase price, plaintiffs may recover interest without a special prayer therefor, especially where there is a plea for general relief. Trevarthen v. G. M. Hall & Son (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 447.

Where, under facts found, as matter of law plaintiff is entitled to interest as part of his damages, court should grant it to him on prayer for general relief. Wiess v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 486.

In suit against city for overflow of sewer, and injury to automobile by street spray, where petition held to be insufficiently disclosed that interest was not included in the amounts sued for, so that interest could not be deemed to be included in the prayer for general relief; and there being no specific prayer for interest, the petition could not be deemed to claim interest. City of San Antonio v. Pfeiffer (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 267.

64. Exhibit—Variation between pleading and exhibits.—Where a written instrument is made part of a petition, court will, on demurrer, give to instrument the legal effect to which it is entitled, and legal effect will control when allegations of petition and recitals of instrument as to legal effect are found in conflict. Rowles v. Hadden (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 239.

65. Copy of account.—A petition was not insufficient in that itemized bill of certain expenses attached thereto did not on its face state purpose for which the several amounts were expended, nor the date of each such expenditure, where the general purpose of expenditures was alleged, and it was stated that each and all of them were made at the special instance and request of defendant. Ferguson v. Mansfield (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 234.

69. Pleading damages in general.—In action by lessee for wrongful dispossession, allegation that plaintiff was wrongfully deprived of use and benefit of land with its improvements and raising a crop thereon, and thereby greatly damaged, was sufficient as alleging a proper measure of damages. McCauley v. McElroy (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 317.

In an action for damages in that plaintiff was discharged from his employment by reason of a notice sent by defendant to his employer falsely claiming he was indebted to defendant, allegations as to difficulty of securing other employment, etc., and that he suffered much chagrin, humiliation, distress of mind, mental pain, and agony, held a sufficient basis for the recovery of damages. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 616.

In an action for fraud in exchange of property, plaintiff must set forth the necessary facts to be considered in measuring damages. Medley v. Lamb (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1948.

In such action proof of values of the property is not available in the absence of allegations of such values. Id.

In an action for a seller's fraudulent representations, though the petition shows that notes were given for the purchase price, the failure to allege their payment and present status does not preclude plaintiffs from maintaining a suit if recoverable damages are otherwise alleged. Webb v. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 499.

In a buyers' action for false representations in the sale of a tractor, allegations that a plow purchased for use with the tractor was worthless to them, because the tractor could not be operated successfully and they had no other means of using it, but not alleging that it had no market or intrinsic value, or that plaintiffs had offered to return it, did not warrant a recovery of the price of the plow. Id.

70. Pleading general or special damages.—In the law of libel, general damages are those which naturally, proximately, and necessarily result from publishing the libel, and are recoverable in general averment (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 400.

A purchaser who contracts to purchase land from one who has no title can, in the absence of fraud, recover only the amount paid on the contract, if any, and such special damages as including the loss of his bargain as he may allege and prove. Garcia v. Yasgurrr (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 236.

Petition of store employee against the company operating the store alleging a slander by having charged her with theft held to state a cause of action, the utterance of statement complained of being slander per se, so that the petition did not need to allege special damages. Foley Bros. Dry Goods Co. v. Mc-Clain (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 452.

71. Personal injuries and physical suffering.—In an action for injuries resulting in death, allegations in the complaint as to poverty stricken condition of plaintiffs and as to details of decedent's injury should, upon exception, have been stricken. Dallas Hotel Co. v. Fox (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 647.

72. Issues, proof, and variance in general.—Proof in personal injury actions should correspond with allegations of the complaint, and material injuries not alleged should not be proven. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Crouch (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 781.

Allegations and evidence held to support a charge as to reasonable value of time lost and diminished earning power. Texas Electric Ry. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 823.

75. Extent of direct and consequential injuries to brain, nervous system or senses.—In action for damages sustained while attempting to board street car, statement in describing how injuries affected injured person that she "had bells in her head" was not inadmissible, although injury to the head had not been pleaded. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Crouch (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 781.

In an action for personal injury, where the petition alleged, among other injuries, that plaintiff was suffering from "neurasthenia," medical testimony as to ocular symptoms, such as that plaintiff, after reading a short time, became tired and unable.
78. Loss of earnings or services.—Passenger's pleading held sufficient, in the absence of special exception on the specific ground, as an allegation of loss of time, to support recovery thereof, where the evidence disclosed the loss of time. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Moer (Civ. App.) 130 S. W. 268.

Petition by consignee who was contractor to recover for railroad company's refusal to seasonably deliver shipments to connecting carrier held not sufficient to warrant contractor's recovery for his own loss of time. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 769.

80. Impairment of earning capacity.—In personal injury action, petition, describing injuries and alleging that, "By reason thereof the plaintiff has been rendered unable to follow his said business, and permanently injured," to his damages, etc., held to justify recovery of damages for diminished earning capacity. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Scripture (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 269.

82. Loss of or damage to property.—Petition, in action for loss of guest's baggage, was not sufficient to special exception for failure to show whether the figures set opposite the various articles represented the price, the market value, a reasonable value, or the extent of value, since it is enough to allege the damages. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 162.

In action for delay in shipment of live stock, an allegation that the market had declined below that at time cattle should have arrived, and that cattle had lost in weight and market appearance, was sufficiently specific allegation of damage sustained. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Maniby (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 15.

In an action for damages from street improvement, it is permissible to set out in the petition the definite injuries, the property taken and destroyed, its intrinsic character and peculiar value and adaptability for specific purposes, though it is neither necessary nor proper to set out in minute detail all the surrounding circumstances. Richey v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 214.

In an action for damages by overflows, refusal to sustain special exceptions to parts of the pleadings and amendment, especially with relation to the failure to advise defendants of the character of the crops it was claimed plaintiff was prevented from raising by virtue of the overflows, held erroneous. Payne v. Cummins (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 1118.

83. Issues and proof.—In an action against a railroad for injuries to plaintiff's land through overflows, where the claim was for permanent injury to the entire land, the averments were sufficient to admit proof of partial injury as against exceptions that the pleadings did not apprise defendants of the area or quantity permanently injured. Payne v. Cummins (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 1118.

84. Damages from breach of contract in general.—Allegations that defendant telegraph company erroneously duplicated message to plaintiff's brokers for purchase of cotton, causing them to close his account, and that plaintiff when notified of such action could not countermand it because of deranged wire service, etc., do not affirmatively show that plaintiff failed to minimize his losses. Pearlstone v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 860.

Averment of general notice to railroad company of damages that would result from refusal to seasonably deliver cars to connecting carrier held sufficient averment as to notice and marketability by consignee who was contractor for loss of his own time. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 769.

Where count seeking recovery on allegation of mutual mistake of parties to a sale of land in supposing the tract sold to contain 128 instead of 114 acres did not allege the value of the 14 acres of shortage, testimony with respect to its value was not available to plaintiff. Gillispie v. Gray (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 726.

Allegation of general damages is sufficient to entitle purchaser to recover the difference between value of land as it would have been if vendors had performed contract to make extensive and permanent improvements and its value in consequence of vendors' failure to perform. Zimmerman v. Keith (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 248.

A petition to recover for the deficiency of land received by plaintiff in exchange for his land, which alleged the value per acre of both tracts and the total consideration given by plaintiff as well as the acreage represented and actually received, sufficiently alleges that the land received was of less value than that given so as to furnish a basis for recovery of damages. Hoheertz v. Durham (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 549.

85. Loss of profits.—In an action by the purchasers of a thrasher for misrepresentations inducing the purchase, testimony as to loss of profits held admissible in view of the allegations of the petition, against which general demurrer alone was filed. Hart-Parr Co. v. Krizman & Maker (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 535.

In action against telegraph company for breach of contract to furnish telegraphic reports of prize fight, allegation that plaintiffs would have received a large sum of money on sale of tickets held insufficient to show that plaintiffs were damaged in a legal sense and entitled to special damages. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Jeffries (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 781.

87. Expenses incurred.—An employed nurse for wrongful discharge as breach of contract, who failed to plead expenses incurred in effort to secure other employment, could not recover such expenses, though testimony showed the amount thereof. Consumers' Lignite Co. v. James (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 715.
In an action against a carrier for refusing to transport a passenger, a petition alleging fraud, in a specified sum, including item for medical expenses, but not alleging that she paid the sum claimed, or assumed to pay it, or that it was a reasonable charge, did not support a recovery for such item. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 74.

A petition held sufficiently to allege that defendant had notice that plaintiff would suffer mental anguish in case message advising stepson of illness of plaintiff's husband was not properly transmitted. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 75.

In an action by the buyers for fraudulent representations, where the petition showed that notes were given for the purchase price, and did not allege their payment or present status, allegations that they purchased new parts on the representation that they would get credit for them does not authorize a recovery of the amounts paid, where it is not alleged that they were not given credit on the notes. Webb v. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 277 S. W. 493.

An averment that plaintiff was "obliged" to pay and become liable for medicines and medical treatment in the sum of $200 was sufficient, in absence of special exception, as an averment of the reasonableness of the expenditure; the word "obliged" being synonymous with the word "compelled," which implies reasonableness. Texas Electric Ry. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 823.

In a personal injury action, the plaintiff was entitled to recover only the reasonable cost of her medical bill, etc., and the pleadings should be so framed as to show that the items thus involved are reasonable, and the charge of the court should limit the recovery. Interstate Casualty Co. of Birmingham v. Hogan (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 384.

88. — Proof and variance.—In purchasers' action for misrepresentations, testimony as to the value of items of expense alleged to have been paid held inadmissible in the absence of allegation that the amount paid was the reasonable value. Hart-Parr Co. v. Krawitz & Maler (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 835.

89. Mental suffering.—See Stein v. Greenbaum (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 809.

In an action for conversion of personal property, where no injury to person is alleged, plaintiff can recover no damages for mental anguish. Dunn v. Wilkinson (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 59.

92. Exemplary damages.—In an action for damages occasioned by defendant falsely sending written notice to plaintiff's employer that defendant had an assignment of plaintiff's wages, allegations concerning nature of defendant's business, held proper and material as tending to show the degree and deliberateness of the act; the petition containing a prayer for exemplary damages. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 680.

In order to recover exemplary damages, the act which constituted the cause of action must be actuated by or accompanied with some evil intent, or be the result of such gross negligence, such disregard of another's rights, as is deemed equivalent to such intent; and, when the bad intent is not a necessary inference from the act charged, it must be alleged. Bassham v. Evans (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 446.

In action against defendants who had obtained possession of premises by means of sequestration proceedings to which plaintiff had not been made a party, allegations showing a conscious disregard of plaintiff's rights by defendants held to authorize exemplary damages. Id.

In action for wrongfully obtaining possession of premises by sequestration proceedings, where the allegations of the petition may have sufficiently charged a willful or evil intent and gross disregard of plaintiff's right, but the petition alleged plaintiff "has suffered mental distress on account of his being deprived of the use of the said building for his said mother and father," and that he had been damaged in a sum equal to the rental value, etc., the petition would not support a recovery of exemplary damages, in which form only could damages for mental distress be recovered. Id.

93. Allegations as to amount of damages.—Judgment on item sued for could not be for more than claimed in petition. Garrett v. Dodson (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 675.

Petition of plaintiff which, having extended credit to corporation on faith of false statements made to commercial agencies, sought to recover against corporate directors, properly alleged that dividends in bankruptcy amounted only to 19 per cent. of plaintiff's claim. Durham v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 138.

97. — As to value.—In an action for conversion of a note, an allegation of its face value is a sufficient allegation of its value. Farmers' State Guaranty Bank v. Piereson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 424.

In an action for fraud in exchange of lands, plaintiff must allege the value of any moneys and other personal property received in the transaction; such allegation being as necessary as an allegation as to the value of the realty. Medley v. Lamb (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1048.

98. — Interest on amount of recovery.—In suit on draft, petition and prayer held to afford basis for verdict for plaintiff for interest from due date until date of judgment in addition to principal sum. Stacy v. Raywood Canal & Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 568.

Plaintiffs' petition, alleging their damages to be value of hay burned by defendant railroad, to wit, $5,312.50, "together with interest from said 25th day of December, 1915, at 6 per cent. per annum," authorized recovery of value of hay as alleged and interest as computed. Texas & Pacific Ry. Co. v. Eldridge Carter & Son (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 540.

Where interest is not claimed by the pleadings, none can be recovered. City of San Antonio v. Pfeiffer (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 267.
In an action, for value of steers killed by defendant's trains, in the amount of $115, brought in justice court, interest thereon is not recoverable eo nomine, but only as an item of damages, and must be pleaded, or otherwise it is not a matter in controversy, to be added to the amount sued on in determining jurisdiction. Hufsttler v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 485.

In an action for injuries to a shipment of goods, where interest was not claimed on the damages from date of delivery of the damaged goods, the awarding of such interest was erroneous. Baker v. Lyons (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1890.

When interest as damages is sought, it need not be specially pleaded, but the damage claimed in the pleadings must be sufficient to cover the loss at the time of the accrual of the cause of action, with interest from that date to the time of the trial. Southern Gas & Gasoline Engine Co. v. Adams & Peters (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 945.

Pleading particular facts or issues—Assumption of obligation.—A petition, alleging that plaintiff sold to A. certain merchandise, "which account is still wholly due and unpaid," and that the property of A. was transferred to J. and was transferred by J. to defendant, and that "the consideration of said bill of sale and transfer in bulk was $220, the assumption of the payment * * * * of the accounts against J. and A., including the account of plaintiff which is sued on herein," stated a cause of action. Texas Auto Supply Co. v. Magnolia Petroleum Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 629.

Consideration or want thereof.—Petition, in action on insurance certificate, was not defective for failure to allege consideration. Sovereign Camp of Woodmen of the World v. Cooper (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 550.

In suit to cancel a mineral lease, where defendant set up a written option to lease, and, while denying she had executed such instrument, plaintiff, in avoidance by supplemental petition, pleaded that the option contract on which it was based had no consideration, and that the option was duly presented by the pleadings. Texas Co. v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 509.

A petition, assailing an option agreement on the ground that the consideration is inadequate, should specifically allege that the consideration was inadequate, and the facts showing its inadequacy, together with the excuse for giving the option upon the consideration agreed upon. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

One suing on contract must plead, as well as prove, a valid consideration for the undertaking: none being presumed. J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Jamison (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 948.

A complaint alleging that defendant agreed that, if plaintiff would advertise certain stock in newspapers, defendant would reimburse plaintiff for all sums so expended, and plaintiff, relying upon such agreement, so advertised the stock and expended a certain sum, was not subject to the criticism that it failed to show a consideration for the alleged promise of defendant, or that the contract alleged, being unliquidated and uncertain as to its duration, was void for uncertainty. Elmendorf v. Mullenk (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 164.

Conspiracy.—In an action against fire insurance companies for conspiring to prevent plaintiff from obtaining insurance by slanderous communications made to the companies by their agents, the petition should be sufficiently specific to put defendants on notice as to what they would have to be prepared to meet on the trial. Palatine Ins. Co. v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1014.

Customs and usages.—In action by tenant under a lease for one year to recover from his landlord's grantee money received for pasturage, evidence that it was custom for tenant to get Johnson grass after cutting crop held not admissible, in absence of pleading to that effect. Cooke v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 612.

Discovered peril.—Petition, in an action against a railroad company for the death of one run down by a train, held, as against general demurrer, to sufficiently aver discovery of peril. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. McGill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 335.

To invoke the doctrine of discovered peril, it must be pleaded. Baker v. Shaffer (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 549.

In action for injuries in a crossing accident, pleadings which failed to assert the actual discovery by defendant's agents of plaintiff's perilous situation in time to have averted the accident by the use of means at their command commensurate with their own safety are lacking in one of the essential elements of discovered peril. Id.

Estoppel.—In suit on promissory note given for price of land by unmarried woman, who had subsequently married and gave renewal note, petition held not to show estoppel on defendant's part to deny that she had permanently separated from her husband when she gave note. Sewell v. Walton (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 371.

Fraud and mistake.—Where plaintiff, having extended credit to corporation in reliance on false financial statements made by corporation to commercial agencies, sued directors on theory that they were guilty of fraud or negligence in permitting false statements, it was unnecessary for petition to allege that either corporation or directors were subscribers to mercantile agencies, or that it was deceived. Durham v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 128.

In action by servant for injuries, averments held sufficient to avoid release on ground of false representations, as against general demurrer. Reasoner v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co., 109 Tex. 204, 203 S. W. 592.

Fraud is never presumed, but must always be proven, and the facts and circumstances relied on must be set out, so that in construing a petition it may be determined whether the facts and circumstances alleged amount to fraud. Burchill v. Hermenezer (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 767.
In action to recover money paid for stock in oil company, general allegations with reference to fraudulent representations as to existence of oil under the land held not to sustain judgment in plaintiff's favor.

Allegations that a lease of oil lands which lessors sought to cancel was granted defendant in trust for a purchaser, to be returned to lessors if the corporation was not formed, and that after the corporation project was abandoned defendant assigned an interest to his co-defendants, charges a breach of duty by trustee which constitutes legal or presumptive fraud.

Hickernell v. Gregory (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 691.

Allegations by defendant, in exchange of properties, and that but for such false representations the trade would not have been consummated, should be clear.

Thrasher v. Walsh (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 961.

Petition for recovery of an amount paid under false representations for cancellation of his oil and gas lease, that defendant misrepresented that he was a soldier in the army, held not a misrepresentation of law, but one of fact.

Ware v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 593.

Petition for recovery of an amount paid under false representations for cancellation of an oil and gas lease held good as against general demurrer.

Petition in a suit to cancel an oil and gas lease made to defendant as trustee on the ground of misrepresentation by defendant's agent in procuring the lease that a lease was desired by a going oil company for immediate drilling on the land held insufficient to state cause of action on the ground of fraud.

Cooper v. Casselberry (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 231.

Vendor's complaint, in an action against purchaser, alleging that purchaser misrepresented that maker of notes received in part payment was solvent, that deed of trust had been executed on certain land to secure such notes, and that such land was of certain value, held to state a cause of action for deceit.

Rea v. Luse (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 310.

Homestead exemption.—One seeking to enforce a trust deed upon property alleged to be the homestead need not specially plead abandonment of the maker of the trust deed by his wife, in order to avail himself of such abandonment.

Murphy v. Lewis (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1059.

Invitation or license.—Petition, alleging that a boy carrying lunch to one of defendant's employees was killed by falling into an unguarded pit near footpath used by pedestrians with defendant's knowledge, held to show an implied invitation to use the premises, and not a mere license.

Jurisdictional facts.—Allegations of jurisdictional facts relating to subject-matter of suit, contained in petition, of themselves, confer jurisdiction which will be retained until defendant allege and proves that allegations were made for fraudulent purpose of conferring jurisdiction.

To obtain divorce and recover separate property and community interest, objection that allegations failed to show that plaintiff wife had resided in county, and had been actual bona fide inhabitant of the state for 12 months, might be good as far as suit for divorce is concerned, but would have no pertinency so far as suit for property is concerned.

Coss v. Coss (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 127.

In suit for cancellation of instruments with reference to cutting of guayule from land in Mexico, petition held to disclose that court had jurisdiction of persons of defendants, and that a fraud had been committed against plaintiff for which a remedy could be afforded by requiring defendants to recover to plaintiff.

Proof as to inhabitancy of state and residence of county, required by art. 4632, is as essential as any other fact in a divorce case, and though the question is not raised by plea in bar above, the plaintiff must prove, and not merely aver, the fact of part of his case.

In wife's divorce action, petition alleging husband and wife to be bona fide inhabitants and resident citizens of the state, that wife was a resident inhabitant of county in which suit was brought, that husband was a resident of a specified county in the state, and that each had been so for more than 12 months next immediately preceding the institution of the suit, held sufficient.

A petition in any suit must affirmatively allege the facts showing that the court has jurisdiction.

Marriage.—In the absence of allegation that plaintiffs, claiming homestead, were married, the fact of marriage cannot be presumed from the fact that plaintiffs settled on the land claimed as homestead, resided there, and raised crops thereon.

Ariza v. Clark (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 373.

Notice or knowledge.—In action for damages due to failure to promptly deliver to her son a telegram with reference to serious condition of plaintiff's daughter, the fact that the company had notice that the telegram was sent for benefit of plaintiff's son held to sufficiently appear from petition.

Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Barrett (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 978.

Plaintiff's allegation held sufficient allegation of notice to defendant that plaintiff was claiming bale of cotton, or its value or proceeds, to satisfy his landlord's lien, as against general demurrer.

An allegation in a petition to cancel an oil lease that the officer who took the acknowledgment was the agent of lessor and interested in the lease was sufficient to show that lessees were charged with notice of his disqualification, and sufficient predi-

116½. — Nuisance.—Pleading that oil and gasoline are high explosives, and that they were placed upon defendant's property, which is situated upon a public street in a thickly settled portion of a city, held to charge a public nuisance. McGuffey v. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 435.

117. Ordinances.—Petition charging railroad with negligence "in violating the ordinance of the city" * * * in running at a much greater rate of speed than is permitted and allowed by said ordinance, duly enacted and in force at the time of the accident," is sufficient to notify defendant that the ordinance will be offered in evidence, and a good pleading thereof, at least in the absence of special exception. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Boyed (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 219.

120. — Proximate cause.—In a suit against the seller of gasoline labeled "Coal Oil" by one injured by an explosion after purchasing it from a retailer who had bought it from defendant, a general demurrer to the petition on the ground that it affirmatively appeared that the defendant's act was not the proximate cause of the injury, held without merit. Colen v. Saenz (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 492.

Allegations of petition against electric power company for injuries to horseman, who became entangled in ungarded guy wire in or near a roadway, held not to have made plaintiff's own acts in riding out of the roadway and on the guy wire the proximate cause of his injury. Athens Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 421.

In an action against a city for injuries caused by a defect in the streets to one riding on a fire wagon, a petition held not demurrable as alleging negligence by the driver of the fire wagon as the sole or concurrent cause of plaintiff's injury. City of Austin v. Schiegel (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 291.

In actions for injuries to a bus passenger in collision with truck, petition held sufficient, as against general demurrer to show that the negligence was the proximate cause. Interstate Casualty Co. of Birmingham v. Hogan (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 334.

122. — Tender and offer of equity.—When transaction out of which a conveyance results is in consideration by grantor, the grantor, if he elects to rescind and reclaim land, must restore or offer to restore what he has received, and should by his pleading inform the court as to such facts. Grundy v. Greene (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 964.

In action by lessors to cancel oil lease, if petition specifically alleged payment of consideration, plaintiffs should have alleged an offer or tender to return payment made before suit or alleged an excuse for not making tender. Davis v. Burkholder (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1101.

In an action for specific performance, an amended petition, alleging in substance that plaintiff had been at all times since making the contract, ready, willing, and able to perform his part and to accept conveyance, and to pay for the same and to assume vendor's payment of mortgage, held sufficient as against objection of failure to allege tender. Ward v. Graham (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 281.

In a suit to rescind an oil and gas lease for alleged fraud, plaintiff lessor must plead an offer and tender of the rentals which were paid by the defendant lessee. Varnes v. Dean (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1817.

In an action to cancel a deed on the ground that it was procured through misrepresentations, a statement in plaintiffs' petition that, if they were required to pay money received as a condition precedent to recovery they were ready to do so, held not a tender. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Production Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 450.

In an action for a rescission of a settlement, plaintiff is not obliged to tender back the money received in settlement where, in any event, he would be entitled to retain that amount either by virtue of the settlement or of the original liability. Smith v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. (Com. App.) 232 S. W. 290.

122½. — Title and possession.—In action to determine plaintiff's interest in property left by grandfather and grandmother, involving question of whether certain property was community property, petition referring to grandfather's will and probate thereof and inventory of property thereunder, together with partition suit in which such property was alleged to be community property and judgment therein, held to sufficiently allege that property was community property. Slavin v. Greer (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 479.

In an action for conversion of ores removed from a mining claim, the general allegation that plaintiff was the owner of the claim is sufficient as against general demurrer. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 585.

123. — Waiver and ratification.—Where plaintiff agreed to begin work at once and complete repair of bridge within 100 days, time was of the essence, and there could be no recovery in the absence of pleading or proof that plaintiff had been released. Palo Pinto County v. Beene (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 866.

124. Pleading in particular actions.—In suit by corporate stockholders, pleading held to allege that company had made chattel mortgage for benefit of creditors, allegation being almost tantamount to statement that company had effected composition. Millsaps v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 292.

In guest's action for loss of baggage, complaint held good as against a general exception. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 164.

In suit by commissioner of insurance and banking to enforce liability of present and former officers of a national bank, held, that pleadings filed were sufficient to authorize judgment against the former stockholder for full amount sued for. Austin

In an action against one who had caused the discharge of plaintiff by falsely and maliciously giving notice to the employer that she had an assignment of plaintiff's wages, allegations that defendant was engaged in conducting a usurious business in the name of the company, and that defendant by falsely claiming was owned by a nonresident, were proper and material where defendant was sought to be held liable for acts done by the loan company as her agent. Evans v. Mexican Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 380.

In an action by attorneys to recover one-third of amount paid by defendant to client, who had assigned interest in a cause of action in order to secure services, it was not necessary to plead and prove all the facts which would have been necessary in the original action to entitle their client to recover. Wichita Falls Electric Co. v. Chancellor & Bryan (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 649.

The probate court has the exclusive jurisdiction for the settlement of estate of deceased parties, and a creditor who seeks payment of his debt outside of an administration is a nonresident, has not been authorized to sue in probate court as bring him within some of the exceptions to the ordinary rules of proceeding. Faulkner v. Reed (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 945.

125. Account. — Petition by the buyer of merchandise to recover from the seller the difference between what the seller had agreed to account for, on account of sales made by him after the transaction, but before possession changed, and the amount which he had actually accounted for, was not defective, because it did not state whether the contract between the seller and buyer was oral or in writing. Adams v. Sims (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 837.

127. Against bailor. — In suit against defendant compress company for damages to cotton, held plaintiff's petition sufficiently alleged relation of bailor and bailee for hire in absence of special exception. Jackson v. Greenville Compress Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 324.

128. Against carriers of goods and live stock. — Where shipper of cattle suing for damages in transit alleged carrier received cattle for shipment, received reward in payment for services, and caused damage by its negligence, there was sufficient allegation of common-law liability of carrier. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Reed (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 410.

It is not necessary for the plaintiff, in an action for damages to an interstate shipment resulting from defective refrigerator cars, to either allege or prove negligence of the carrier. Nabors v. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 276.

In petition for damages to cattle, allegations that the railroad was negligent by reason of delays on sidings and switches, rough handling, and sudden stop of train because of collision, or near collision, with motorcar or section hand car, resulting in damage to cattle, held sufficient, as against objection that allegations were too general and did not specify in what the alleged negligence consisted. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Sanders (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 540.

129. Against connecting carriers. — Petition to recover for defendant's failure to seasonably deliver shipment to connecting carrier held not to open exception to ground of vagueness of allegations as to shipments, in view of former trial. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 70.

To recover from a terminal carrier the damages to shipment caused by preceding carriers, plaintiff must plead that the shipment was on a contract for through carriage, recognized, acquiesced in, or acted upon by the carriers so as to bring the case within arts. 731, 732. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Cox (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 1943.

131. Against cities and other municipal corporations. — In suit on city warrants petition held insufficient to show a compliance with Const. art. 11, § 5, 7, as to making provision for interest and sinking fund when debt is created, or that debt was to be satisfied out of current revenues for the year, or some fund within the immediate control of the city. American Roads Machinery Co. v. City of Ballinger (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 265.

Petition in an action on a warrant given in 1912, and payable in 1916, as consideration for a traction engine, held not to sufficiently aver at the time of creating the debt provision had been made for levying and collecting a sufficient tax to pay the same. J. L. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Camp County (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1.

In a contractor's action against an irrigation district to recover for the price of work done, a petition charging the organization, existence, and functioning of the defendant district under the statute, the making and delivery of written contract through its board of directors under attestation by its secretary, and the attachment of its corporate seal, the construction and completion of the work, and its acceptance held sufficient, as against a general demurrer objecting that the petition did not specifically allege the performance of the detailed procedure described by arts. 190, 191; 107—85 to 107—87, 5107—83, 5107—92. Peyton Creek Irr. Dist. v. White (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1090.

133. Against sureties. — In an action against the surety on a constable's bond by one falsely imprisoned by the constable, the petition, which alleged that the constable as such arrested plaintiff for disturbance of the peace committed in the presence of the constable, and also alleged that the latter took plaintiff in custody on the plea that he was guilty of such offense, as against general demurrer sufficiently showed that the constable was acting in his official capacity. National Surety Co. v. Masters (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1123.

The petition, which disclosed that the arrest was made at a dance for disturbance of the peace or disorderly conduct in a public place, deemed by the constable to constitute a misdemeanor, empowering plaintiff's arrestee charged as against general demurrer that the constable arrested plaintiff for what he construed to be an offense classified as a breach of the peace. Id.

In suit upon guardianship bond, petition as against sureties was defective, where there was no allegation in the bond, that they executed it to comply with the terms thereof. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 679.

Allegation that sureties on guardianship bond became liable and indebted to plaintiffs on the bond does not imply a failure on the part of the sureties to discharge their liability and indebtedness. Id.

Complaint, aided by every reasonable intendment, held to present a suit on an absolute guaranty, and so to support a judgment on that theory. Smith v. Cummer Mfg. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 335.

Against telegraph and telephone companies.—In action for failure to deliver message of fatal illness, where complaint failed to allege possibility of delivery on any other than the day when sent, or that any subsequent delivery would have enabled plaintiff to have attended the funeral, or to have seen his sister alive, and the judge found no negligence on that day, judgment for the plaintiff could not stand. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Tartar (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 559.

In an action against a telegraph company for failure to deliver a death message, petition held to state a cause of action as against a general demurrer. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 868.

Petition against telegraph company, for failure to deliver message, held demurrable as not alleging sufficient facts to show contract by telegraph company to transmit and deliver message, and as not sufficiently alleging facts to show existence of company's duty to transmit and deliver. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 748.

In action for failure to promptly deliver telegram informing plaintiff that sender would sell his interest, failure to deliver promptly re-sulting in the other partner withdrawing his consent, so that plaintiff could not purchase, complaint held to state a cause of action. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Dorough (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 252.

Agg­eations, in a petition for damages for mental anguish caused by failure to promptly deliver a death message to plaintiff's son, held to sufficiently state what facilities the son could avail himself of in reaching a certain point, and the son was properly permitted to testify to the route he took, which, if the telegram had been promptly delivered, would have carried him there in time. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 781.

In an action by the addressee for failure to seasonably deliver a message announcing the fatal illness of his mother, allegations that in the usual and customary routes of travel the addressee, had the message been promptly delivered, could have reached his mother in time to have found her rational, are sufficient. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McCormick (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 270.

To entitle sendee to recover damages for failure to promptly deliver a telegram announcing the death of a relative, it devolved upon him to allege and prove that, if the telegram had been promptly delivered, he could and would have attended the funeral. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Mobley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 611.

Allegations that "plaintiff would have been enabled to attend the funeral of his mother," and he suffered much pain and anguish "because of the impossibility of reaching the burial place of his mother before she was buried, because of the delay in the delivery of said telegram," did not sufficiently show that the sendee would have attended the funeral, had the telegram been promptly delivered. Id.

137. Allusions and notes.—A complaint, alleging that defendant executed and delivered certain checks to plaintiff drawn upon a named bank, payable to plaintiff's order and in amounts on dates specified, was not subject to general demurrer. Merriman v. Swift & Co. (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 775.

A complaint, alleging that defendant executed certain checks for a valuable consideration and delivered them to plaintiff, and that "defendant is indebted to the plaintiff thereon and by reason thereof," is not insufficient as failing to allege a promise to pay: (quoting Words and Phrases, Second Series, Indebted—Indebtedness). Id.

Plaintiff in action on vendor's note and vendor's lien note, alleging the appointment of vendor's foreign administrator, who transferred all notes to one S., and that note in suit was put in escrow by administrator and another did not allege title under S. or any ownership by S., and the word "transferred" meant the written indorsement thereon, and not a legal assignment and delivery, or that the transfer to S. postdated the escrow agreement. Webb v. Reynolds (Com. App.) 297 S. W. 914.

Under art. 582, providing assignee may sue in his own name, in an action on an assigned note, it was not necessary that the pleader state in detail the circumstances of the transfer of the note, though it was not indorsed. (Per Joyce, J.) California State Life Ins. Co. v. Kring (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 372.

Where plaintiff in suit on note is payee, and the note is indorsed by him in blank does not make it necessary that plaintiff allege and prove ownership of note, such indorsement not raising a presumption against title of holder. Holland v. Wood (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 774.
In a suit on a note given in consideration of the establishment and maintenance of a professorship of four wooden ships and the construction and the direction of the government, performance of the consideration held sufficiently alleged. Bell v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1107.

In an action on a guardian's bond conditioned for the faithful performance of the guardian's duties, where the petition alleged failure of the said guardian to account for certain funds, it was sufficient as against the objection that it contained no allegation as to performance on the part of the sureties, as no duty of performance was imposed on them. Wyatt & Wingo v. White (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 154.

In a suit against a guardian to take oath, give bond to be fixed by the county judge, present the oath and bond to the judge for his action, and file the oath and bond when approved by the county judge, an averment in an action on the bond that it had been filed was sufficient to include the intermediate steps, including the fixing of the amount by the judge and the approval of the bond by him. Id.

In an action on a guardian's bond, an allegation that the guardian invested the trust fund without orders of the court and appropriated it to his own use sufficiently charged a failure to faithfully discharge his duties and rendered unnecessary any averment of nonpayment of the penalty of the bond. Id.

139. — Breach of contracts in general. — To recover money on a contract, petition must show breach thereof, and, failing to do so, is subject to general demurrer. Hart-Parr Co. v. Paline (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 822.

Complaint alleging breach of agreement as to conditions for entry of judgment in suit No. 18163a in Fourteenth District Court of Dallas County for purpose of foreclosing plaintiff's right of redemption, sufficiently identified action in which the alleged judgment was entered. Id.

Where plaintiff alleged contract by which he permitted judgment to be entered in foreclosure suit against him, on condition that defendants would reconvey, and that they refused to reconvey and dispossessed him, it was unnecessary to allege that by judgment they acquired title to land. Id.

Petition alleged ordinary transaction of purchase by plaintiff from defendant of 15 bales of cotton, and plaintiff's making a contract for resale calling for delivery on same date, held not to show on face that transaction was a gambling one. Dixon v. Winters (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1103.

In suit for professional services rendered by architect, petition held not to allege fully, clearly, and consistently what plaintiff had contracted to do, so that it was insufficient when tested by special exceptions. Reuter v. Nixon State Bank (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 715.

Employer suing to recover hospital expenses from employer who had deducted "hospital fee" from monthly wages of employees had burden of alleging and proving that fees were collected as a present hospital fund, to be used in case of sickness, and that employer had on hand a sufficient amount of the funds to pay the expenses. Couchesne v. Brown (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 674.

In action against shipping agent for delay in furnishing ship petition pleading duty to furnish ship by last of February, and claiming damages for delay from March 1, held not to sustain claim that shipping agent breached contract in January. Langhcn v. Crepli & Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 444.

A petition asking for specific performance of an oil lease, or, in the alternative for damages, held to state a cause of action for damages for failure to assign the leases as provided in contract, as against a general demurrer. Bolis D'Arc Creek Oil & Gas Co. v. Southwestern Oil Corporation (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1115.

Petition by the foreman of ranch to recover salary, moneys advanced, etc., held not subject to general exception, but rather to state a cause of action. Negaclacion Agricola y Ganadera de San Enrique, S. A., v. Love (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 224.

In suit for compensation for publishing the delinquent tax list under a contract providing for payment as the taxes were paid, a petition, alleging that a reasonable time for payment of the debt had expired, sufficiently alleged, as against general demurrer, the failure of the county to perform its duty to proceed expeditiously to the enforcement of the obligation of the taxpayers. Potter County v. Boesen (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 948, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 181 S. W. 787.

Petition in action on contract must state the time at which defendant should have performed, and if the contract specified no time for performance, it should be performed on request or in a reasonable time, and that such request was made or that a reasonable time has elapsed. J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Janison (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 995.

Petition in action on contract must aver every material part of it, or so much as is essential to the cause of action, as the material facts of a contract cannot be presumed. Id.

The contract for breach of which damages are sought must be pleaded with such particularity that the damages resulting must flow as a natural sequence of its breach. Id.

Petition of selling agents alleging a contract not specifying the date commissions were to be paid, but alleging that, though often requested, defendant company wholly failed, and refused to pay commissions earned, sufficiently charged noncompliance with the implied stipulation to pay commissions within a reasonable time, and stated a cause of action. Paine v. Hart-Parr Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 121.

Petition in action to recover a money judgment, in the alternative to recover a leasehold interest in described reality, held not to show on its face, to render it demonstrably unenforceable, the alleged contract with defendant, failure to contect of a former lease was willfully guilty of any act or combination of acts denounced
In contractor's action against an irrigation district for balance due on construction work, objection that the written contract document was not set out verbaticm in his pleadings, and that it was not averred that the law regulating such contracts had been complied with, is without merit. Peyton Creek Irr. Dist. v. White (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1069.

A motion that the contract showed authority of agent was limited to estimating the work and labor performed and the materials furnished, and did not confer on him the right to accept the work which was a nondelegable duty imposed by statute upon the agents, is not well taken. Where the pleading asserts that the work was accepted by the district's board of directors. 1d.

140. — Breach of contract of sale.—Where land is conveyed in gross, the purchaser takes the risk as to the acreage and cannot recover a shortage without allega-
In an action for purchase price, the contract as set forth in the petition held contain the necessary elements to constitute a valid written contract under the averments of a petition when tested by demurrer. Planters' Oil Co. v. Hill Printing & Stationery Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 192.

In an action for purchase price, a petition alleging that buyer executed the contract set out in the petition held sufficient as against a general demurrer, since the word "executed," in a legal sense, includes delivery and implies a completed contract. 1d.

Petition of the purchaser of land, suing for a shortage in acreage, held to show that the sale was by the acre and not in bulk. Gillispe v. Gray (Civ. App.) 214 S. W.
736.

Petition held not to show on its face that the purchaser was guilty of negligence as a matter of law in failing to discover the shortage before the day when possession was delivered to him. 1d.

Allegation of petition that defendant agreed and bound itself to extend to plaintiff a line of credit, merchandise is not a sufficient statement of a con-
A petition to recover consideration for plaintiff's interest in land incumbered by

Allegation that the land was part of a specified league in a certain county, and was the land conveyed to a named judgment, creditor by sheriff's deed, etc., held a sufficient description as against a general demurrer. 1d.

In vendor's action for breach of contract of purchase of land, petition disclosing the sale of the land, vendor's compliance with all the terms thereof, and the purchaser's refusal to perform, held sufficient as against general demurrer. Colley v. Alamo Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 555.

A petition for the recovery of earnest money paid on a contract for the purchase of land, which alleged that the securing of a federal loan was a condition precedent and that such loan was not procured because the vendor, in violation of his agreement, required the proceeds to be applied on purchase-money notes, was sufficient to support a

142. — By broker for commissions.—Petition, in suit to recover broker's commissions, held good as against a general demurrer. Britton v. Eagan (Civ. App.) 196 S.
472. W. 972.

In a broker's action for a commission for effecting an exchange of properties, value not entering into the exchange not had for failure to allege the value of the Realty broker, suing for commission earned in selling land, was required to allege, and prove affirmatively, to establish his case, that he was procuring cause of sale. Buck

Petition alleging exclusive right by broker to sell property until certain date, and sale by owner, subsequent to such date, to purchaser procured by broker, but failing to allege that purchaser was procured by broker within the period during which he had exclusive right to sell, failed to state cause of action. Aukerman v. Bremer (Civ. App.)
209 S. W. 261.

A petition brought by a partnership, was not demurrable, as alleging a contract made by an individual plaintiff, where petition in fact alleged a contract with a partnership, notwithstanding an immaterial allegation that defendant had listed his land

No actual sale having been consummated, the broker must allege and prove that he procured a purchaser ready, able, and willing to purchase at the price and upon the terms provided in the contract between himself and the owner. Webb v. Harding (Com.
App.) 211 S. W. 927.

Where it is alleged that the seller actually sold the premises to a purchaser whom the broker was negotiating upon specified terms, it is not necessary to allege that the proposed purchaser was ready, able, and willing to buy. Williams v. Atkinson (Civ.
App.) 214 S. W. 504.

Petition, alleging that the broker procured a purchaser who agreed to purchase and entered into written contract, etc., and took possession of the premises, and that the broker was the efficient procuring cause, held sufficient to support a judgment in the broker's favor. 1d.

Petition held good against demurrer, sufficiently alleging that the purchaser could pay cash, notwithstanding statements as to the contract whereby the broker was to procure a loan for the purchaser, so that the defense that the purchaser could not pay cash must be raised by answer. Covington Realty Co. v. Reedy (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 691.

By or against corporations or associations in general.—Stockholders' complaint good as ground for action for dissolution of the corporation. Crow v. Cattlemen's Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1047.

Allegations that a national bank guaranteed a seller's compliance with a contract, that it had been the bank's custom to extend credit to the seller, that the bank received exchange of notes and money paid by the seller, must be sufficient and held not to show that bank had not such a sufficiently direct interest in the transaction as would avoid the defense that its guaranty was ultra vires. First Nat. Bank v. Crespi & Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 755.

In the absence of pleading and proof to the contrary, the court must assume that a corporation, if it was authorized to make notes and create a lien to secure them, had the authority to agree on an extension of due dates, and one suing on the note and to foreclose the lien need not allege that the corporation had the power to agree to such extension. El Paso Townsite Co. v. Watts (Civ. App.) 527 S. W. 709.

Where an association adopted and ratified the act of plaintiff broker in effecting a sale of its property, it was permissible to plead that the contract of sale was made by the association. Waurika Oil Ass'n No. 1 v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 264.

By, or against insurance company or order.—In an action against an insurer for loss by fire of 405 bales of cotton, it was not error to overrule a special exception to the complaint for the reason that the identity of said bales by tag number or otherwise was not disclosed, where the complaint set out the date and place of the fire, and the cotton was in storage in a warehouse owned by plaintiffs. Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 736.

Allegations that plaintiff made a "John Doe" application and was instructed to make formal application and he would be accepted, that plaintiff submitted to examination and was passed, was not rejected, was refused policy by the "John Doe" application, sufficiently show that examination conformed to the "John Doe" application. Capitol Life Ins. Co. of Denver, Colo., v. Driscoll (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 872.

Alleging that the dwelling in which property was located was totally destroyed by fire, and that proof of loss of such property was thereafter furnished insurer, was sufficient, as against general demurrer, to show destruction by fire of the goods insured. United Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Talley (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 633.

Where plaintiffs right to recover on a life insurance policy did not depend upon whether defendant was an ordinary life insurance company or fraternal benefit association, it was unnecessary for the petition to allege what kind of life insurance the defendant was authorized to issue. Hand v. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 718.

In suit on a fraternal benefit policy, a petition alleging that policy was in defendant's possession, and stating its substance and effect, held sufficient. Id.

In an action on burglary and theft policy, an allegation that property was feloniously abstracted from the interior of plaintiff's residence was sufficient, especially when not challenged by demurrer, to cover a loss by theft, as distinguished from burglary. National Surety Co. v. Murphy (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 461.

In an action by a beneficiary under a supplemental life policy, providing for double liability in case of accidental death, burden was on plaintiff to allege and prove that the deceased came to his death by accident within the policy. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 591.

A clause, not in the same part of a life policy in which an insurer promises to pay to the effect that Insurer will not be liable in event of suicide, is in the nature of a condition subsequent, or a proviso which, if relied on to defeat a recovery must be sufficiently plead and proved by the insurer. Id.

A petition on fraternal life policy, alleging that insured had paid specified premiums, the death of insured, etc. held sufficient, especially as insurer's answer admitted issuing policy and recognized insured as one of its members. Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., v. Little (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 574.

By or against husband or wife or both.—As against general demurrer, the petition held sufficient to allege that decedent and plaintiff were husband and wife, and that the property involved was acquired during the existence of the marital relation and was community property. Winters v. Duncan (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 219.

Petition against husband and wife on note executed by wife in purchase of piano states no cause of action against her, though it alleges purchase was for benefit of separate estate, but discloses facts showing conclusion is erroneous. Bledsoe v. Barber (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 369.

In a husband's action for injuries to his wife under art. 1539, the petition need not allege that the suit is brought by the husband as agent of the wife or for her benefit. Pullman Co. v. Cox (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 599.

By or against officers.—A petition to compel the acting comptroller of Texas to reinstate a retail liquor license held, as against general demurrer, to sufficiently allege the license was rescinded and vacated. Tittle v. Bartholomew (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 176.

Cancellation or rescission.—A purchaser's petition, in action to cancel contract that vendor stated the land would not overflow, that such statements were false and known to be false, etc., held sufficient. Bureau v. Gaston (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 255.

In absence of exception, plaintiff's averment that he placed on record instrument Allegations in petition setting up the title of plaintiff specially, and asking for cancellation of deed and possession of land assigned, held sufficient. Hensley v. Pena (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 427.

In suit to rescind contract for sale of land, vendor's petition alleging that superior title was in him, that defendants unlawfully entered premises and ejected plaintiff and were withholding from him the land, stated a cause of action. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 199.

In suit praying for cancellation of instruments with reference to cutting of guayuile from land in Mexico, petition held to disclose that a fraud had been committed against plaintiff for which a remedy could be afforded by requiring defendants to re-convey. Griner v. Trevino (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 947.

Petition seeking cancellation of deeds executed to defendant to secure dealings in cotton futures was not subject to general demurrer because of allegation of plaintiff's knowledge that money was to be used for illegal purpose, where it did not appear from petition that plaintiff was in pari delicto with defendant, as the cancellation of the deeds would not be in furtherance of the illegal transaction. Sanger v. Futch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 681.

In buyer's action to recover the value of a mule sold, the petition, being in the alternative praying for damages in event that it should be held that plaintiff could not rescind did not justify submitting the issue of breach of warranty of soundness. Fulwiler Electric Co. v. Jinks Mcgee & Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 490.

Petition, by owner of 1/16 interest in the oil, gas, and other minerals on and under certain lands (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 604, to defendants, held to state a cause of action in its allegations of misrepresentations by defendants. Holland v. De Wait (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 215.

Petition by a sister to set aside deeds given by her to her brother, on ground of her mental and general overreach by the brother, held sufficient as against special exceptions which were practically general demurrers. Duckels v. Dougherty (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 720.

In a suit to cancel oil and gas leases and to recover 25 cents an acre deposited to guarantee performance by the lessee, the petition stated no cause of action for the recovery of the deposit, where it merely alleged that defendants deposited 25 cents an acre "on the above-described lands and on the lands of the plaintiffs, which amount aggregated $2,500." Huber v. Smith (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 329.

152. Conversion.—Petition held to state cause of action as against sheriff and another for conversion of property which sheriff sold on execution to plaintiff and turned over to other defendant. Buckholts State Bank v. Thallman (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 687.

Allegations in mining company's petition for conversion of ore, held sufficient on general demurrer to be basis of cause of action. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 68.

Allegations that plaintiff was owner of named claim in Arizona, and that defendants entered upon "the" claim and extracted ores therefrom, was meager as to ownership of plaintiff, and, if specially excepted to, plaintiff should have been required to amend. Id.

153. Covenant or warranty.—In a suit on a breach of warranty by one who had exchanged lands, plaintiff must allege eviction or that the title is such that eviction will certainly follow. Campbell v. Jones (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 710.

In action on warranty of heating system, allegations in general terms that the respondent gave of work and materials necessary in reconstructing the heating systems, so as to remedy the defect, was a certain sum, were not sufficient on special exceptions. Nunn v. Brillhart (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 862.

159/4. Divorce.—Accurate pleading should be demanded before the marriage relation is dissolved. Rowden v. Rowden (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 302.

In an action for divorce and division of community property, it was only necessary for plaintiff, wife, to allege that such property was acquired by joint labor during their marriage under art. 4623, and husband's general denial and plea of limitations was insufficient to permit a defense that they lived part of the time in a state where the wife had no shares in such property, and he should have pleaded such facts and pleaded and proved the laws of such state to warrant such issue. Bobbitt v. Bobbitt (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 478.

In a wife's suit for divorce, a petition alleging habitual indifference, neglect, and failure to support, continual and habitual abuse, refusal to support wife and their minor children, or to buy them clothes, and acts humiliating to the wife, held sufficient in connection with a trial amendment stating times and details of the matters alleged. Ervin v. Erwin (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 334.

156. Establishment and enforcement of trusts.—An amended petition, alleging that an attorney, who had purchased property sold for taxes, had done so as to retain for his client, defendant, but which fails to allege defendant's ownership and right of possession for consideration for the agreement, does not show an enforceable trust. Ivey v. Teichman (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 695.

A petition alleging that plaintiff deposited her money with defendants as trustees to invest and reinvest it for her, and seeking damages for a misapplication of a part of the funds, need not allege that any specified amount was deposited. Murphy-Bolinas Land & Loan Co. v. McKibben (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 650.

158. False imprisonment or malicious prosecution.—A petition, alleging institution against plaintiff of seven successive chattel mortgage foreclosure suits in furtherance of a conspiracy to unlawfully extort money from plaintiff, held not to state cause of action. In absence of allegation of facts showing that plaintiff suffered by such suits interfering with her person or property. Pyle v. Cardwell, 110 Tex. 572, 222 S. W. 153, answers to certified questions confirmed to (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 542.

159. — Foreclosure of liens.—Petition by vendor of mining plants, seeking foreclosure of deed of trust on machinery subsequently installed therein by buyers, held sufficiently to describe such machinery. Murray Co. v. Jackson Oil & Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 517.

162. — Inducing breach of contract or discharge of employee.—Complaint alleging that defendant is wholly responsible for and was acting with defendant contractors "in the wrongful rejection of mud bricks" held sufficient on general demurrer, though there was no allegation of express malice or bad faith on the part of defendant in causing contractors to breach their contract. Acme Brick Co. v. West (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 476.

In suit to enjoin construction of bed spring and mattress factory, petition alleging merely that the operation of such a factory would "constitute a nuisance and would work great hurt, inconvenience, discomfort and damage" to the plaintiffs and their neighbors, without alleging wherein it would constitute a nuisance or cause inconvenience or injure plaintiffs or their property, held insufficient. Haynes v. Hedrick (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 550.

A petition by a city to restrain the construction and maintenance of a filling station and an adjacent store alleged facts which differentiate the filling station in question from a business of that kind as ordinarily conducted, and the facts relied on must show with reasonable certainty that a nuisance will result. City of Electra v. Cross (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 795. Petition for injunction against a live stock barn charging erection and use would constitute a nuisance by creating filth, offal, excrement, etc., on the lots, held to state a cause of action for injunction. Jacobs & Wright v. Brigham (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 249.

Injurious from obstruction or diversion of water.—In action against railroad and receiver for damage by overflow of obstructed rainfall, where petition alleged obstruction was due to negligent construction of road originally, as well as to negligence of receiver, cause of action was stated against railway. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Tuggle (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 910.

In an action against a railroad company for damages due to overflow caused by the construction of a railroad across a natural drain, complaint held sufficiently to allege that the backwater filled a bayou, and combined with the water naturally flowing down such bayou as to flood plaintiff's farm. Johnson v. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 288.

Injuries in construction and operation of railroads.—A petition that plaintiff passenger was forced and compelled by defendant carrier's conductor of whom he was in fear to leave a moving train, etc., held not to present conductor's action in inspiring fear in plaintiff as an independent ground of negligence. Brown v. Houston. E. & W. T. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 986.

Where petition alleged that view at crossing in village was obstructed by cars and temporary depot, it was not error to overrule special exception to the petition charging negligence in failing to have a flagman or watchman at the crossing. Panhandle & S. P. Ry. Co. v. Tuggle (Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 747.

Where plaintiff had to rely upon circumstantial evidence to establish killing of horse, and it was impossible to allege specific act done or omitted constituting negligence, he could rely upon general allegation of negligence. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Claybon (Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 488.

Petition alleging ownership of lot abutting city street and defendant's construction of railroad viaduct in part of street, without owner's consent and without compensation, held not to state a cause of action. Southern Traction Co. v. Fears (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 856.

In an action against a railroad for loss of animals killed by trains operated by receivers, facts necessary to fix liability upon railroad, receivers having been discharged, must be pleaded and proved. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Wilhite (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 765.

Injuries in operation of street railroads.—Petition, averring that plaintiff stepped partly on track to signal interurban car, and, upon receiving what she understood was the usual response that it would stop, was struck and injured by the car passing at a great speed, does not show on its face that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. Texas Electric Ry. v. Hooks (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 654.

Injuries to servant.—Complaint alleging injuries from defective machinery held not demurrable. Palermo Bros. v. Cuppa (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 275.

Petition held not to show that deceased was employed in interstate commerce. Id.

In action for death, allegation that defendant was a part of the F. System did not sufficiently point out fact that deceased was employed in interstate commerce. Id.
In action for injuries when sledge hammer flew off handle, petition, though not expressly charging that employer knew that it could have been known by exercise of ordinary care, held not subject to general demurrer. Santa Fe Tie & Lumber Preserving Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 164.

A petition alleging generally that a motor-driven sheet metal shears was defective, and that those particular defendants, working particularly within defendant's knowledge, was sufficient. Wichita Falls Motor Co. v. Meade (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 71.

A petition alleging that plaintiff, a minor, 17 years old, was employed by defendant, that he was required to perform services in a cotton gin, that the machinery was negligently built, and that plaintiff was not warned of the danger, that he was not warned, and that as a result he sustained injuries, held, as against general demurrer, sufficient to state a cause of action. Pelipchyk v. Borden (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 177.

General allegations as to a manhole being an unsafe place to work and as to master's failure to warn a servant as to the possibility of an explosion when an iron bucket used by him struck a hard substance, should be construed with reference to an explosion of gas and as to the cause thereof, specifically alleged to have been the striking of the bucket against the wall of the manhole. Ebersole v. Sapp (Com. App.) 208 S. W. 156.

An allegation "that it was the duty of defendant to properly light said mine, and that it failed to perform said duty, that, if it had been properly lighted, plaintiff might have discovered that the switch was turned wrong, and might have avoided injury," was not subject to general demurrer. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Sherbey (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 758.

An allegation that railroad employees, including plaintiff, protested to the foreman and the company against handling timbers with an insufficient force, but the foreman refused to furnish more men and directed the work to be done by himself, thereby assuring the men that they could perform the work with safety, is not subject to an exception as stating no ground of negligence nor excuse for proceeding to move the timber with knowledge of insufficient number of men. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Breckinridge (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 868.

In an action for a railroad employee's death by derailment from a cause not known to plaintiff, a general allegation that it was through the negligence of defendants was sufficient, without alleging the negligence of the engineer and manner of construction. Hill v. Valley (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 492.

169. — Interpleader.—Pleadings as a whole, under principle that lessee may not deny landlord's title, held to disclose such interest in those brought in by interpleader by one sued by lessee in oil lease for price of oil as to entitle them to hearing on issue of forfeiture of lease. Kirlicks v. Texas Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 637.

In an action against a fraternal insurer, where parents of a deceased member, sought recovery on the ground that the beneficiary named was not the adopted child, the insurer's answer asserting its willingness to pay, but that the beneficiary had filed a suit in another state, and that it did not know to whom to pay, and therefore prayed that the rights of the parties be determined, was in the nature of a bill of interpleader, and did not plead the pendency of another suit. Royal Neighbors of America v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 476.

171. — Judgment, equitable relief against.—In suit by former insane person to set aside judgment in her receiver's suit denying cancellation of her deed, to cancel deed, etc., allegations of fraud chargeable to a defendant held sufficient to form basis of judgment for relief prayed. McKenzie v. Frey (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1009; Same v. Sutton (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 868.

In suit to set aside judgment for want of service, where judgment and return showed service, facts constituting meritorious defense should have been alleged. Godshalk v. Martin (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 335.

A wife's suit to set aside divorce decree, in so far as dividing community property, as having been procured by husband's fraud, controlled by art. 4634, is it necessary to comply with fundamental rules of pleading, but the court should likewise construe pleadings so as to give effect to any real equities. Celli v. Sanderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 179.

In a suit to set aside a tax judgment and sale thereunder because no citation had been served on plaintiff, notwithstanding the return recited of service, it was not necessary for plaintiff to allege that the falsity of the return was due to any action on the part of defendant. Harrison v. Sharpe (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 721.

The rule that one who seeks to set aside a judgment improperly rendered by default must state that he has a good defense to the cause of action has no application to a suit to set aside a tax judgment and sale thereunder on the ground that no notice or citation was served on the owner. Id.

In order to have a final judgment vacated or set aside at a subsequent term, the petition must disclose some legal or equitable ground for the granting of such relief. Skinner v. Waits (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 844.

In an action to set aside part of a judgment on the ground that plaintiff was never served with notice recited in the judgment, or any other process, it was not necessary to specifically allege that the return on the notice was false. Becker v. Becker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 542.

172. — Libel or slander.—Where a communication is qualifiedly privileged, the inference of malice is rebutted prima facie, and it devolves upon the party complaining to allege and prove malice. Koehler v. Dubose (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 238.

In an action against a credit company for placing plaintiff's name in a list of debtors, it was necessary to set out the words in the list, with such innuendoes as were necessary. Henderson v. Credit Clearing House (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 370.

Where alleged slanderous words are susceptible of an innocent as well as a defamatory meaning, plaintiff should allege use of words in a defamatory sense, and also that words conveyed defamatory meaning to hearers. Providence-Washington Ins. Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 666.

A libel suit being based on language or its equivalent, a complaint should put the court in possession of the libelous matter published. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 680.

Allegation that defendant published and delivered to plaintiff's employer a statement in writing wherein defendant alleged and stated that she "had an assignment of wages and power of attorney on him, the plaintiff, to the extent of $15, providing for an attorney's fee of $10 additional," sufficiently disclosed a libel under art. 5595: the rule being satisfied with any allegation that discloses the very language used, whether purporting to be quoted from the writings or not. Id.

In an action for libel, an "innuendo" in pleading is an explanation of defendant's meaning in the alleged libelous words by reference to some antecedent matter; its office being to aver the meaning of the language of the publication of which complaint is made, and the colloquium identifying the person to whom it was intended to be applied. Express Pub. Co. v. Wilkins (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 614.

Alleged libelous words must be capable of the meaning ascribed to them by the innuendo; moreover it cannot introduce new matter, or enlarge the natural meaning of the words, to give them a forced and unreasonable construction. Id.

Plaintiff cannot place, by innuendo, a construction on the alleged libelous letter of which it is not fairly susceptible. Fuson v. Abilene Gas & Electric Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 208.

An allegation in petition for slander that defendant, speaking to plaintiff and to the people generally, uttered the words claimed to be scandalous, is subject to exception, as not being definite as to whom outside of plaintiff the words were spoken. Vaceck v. Trojack (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 585.

A petition, charging defendant with falsely accusing plaintiff with the theft of money and inducing defendant's brother to break off his engagement to marry plaintiff, held sufficient as to statement of slanderous words and the effect of the same. Vogt v. Guildry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 656.

Mandamus.—In mandamus to compel clerk of court to issue writ of possessory, petition was demurrable where it showed upon its face a controversy between plaintiff and others over title and none of such persons were made parties. Pain v. McCain (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 888.

In mandamus by district attorney to compel the judge and clerk of a city court to permit plaintiff to prosecute all criminal cases and to require the clerk to tax fees in plaintiff's favor, it was not necessary to specifically plead the statutes giving him such power. Monk v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 194.

Mandamus should not be granted unless the petition shows every fact necessary to entitle relator to the relief sought. City of Amarillo v. W. L. Slayton & Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 967.

Money received or money paid.—Amended petition, in action to recover interest in advertising contract conveyed by defendant to third person with fraudulent intent, held to entitle plaintiff to recover his interest in the proceeds. Pyle v. Park (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 243.

Petition by county for use of road district against bank to recover judgment on account of amount paid bank to discharge indebtedness of contractor held insufficient to state cause of action as to recovery of amount received by county due to contractor. Shepherd State Bank v. San Jacinto County (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 324.

Negligence in general.—In wards' suit against guardian and sureties, as against general defenser, averments that guardian negligently made deposits without authority from court, and continued deposits negligently when he knew, or could have known, deposits were liable to be lost, held to charge liability. Kunz v. Ragsdale (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 269.

Although failure of county treasurer to examine returned checks and discover forged indorsements was not specifically alleged as negligence, it was a circumstance to be considered under the general allegation of negligence in the payment of fraudulent claims, particularly where there were 143 forged checks. Peadgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1946.

In suit for death of a son about seven years old due to his falling into an open, unguarded well on defendant's vacant property, allegations of petition held to state a cause of action. Flippen-Prather Realty Co. v. Mather (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 121.

A petition in an action for personal injuries sustained in an explosion of gasoline purchased from a retailer as coal oil, who had purchased it from defendant, designating the substance sold "as gasoline or some other highly explosive substance similar to gasoline," held sufficient. Cohn v. Saenz (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 492.

Petition, alleging that electric shock resulting in death was proximately and directly caused by negligence of defendant "in permitting a dangerous, excessive, and deadly current of electricity to traverse the wire running to and into said house of deceased," sufficiently alleged manner in which injury occurred; the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur being applicable. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Britzow (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 702.

Allegations of petition of horseman injured by electric power company's guy wire in or near a roadway held sufficient to aver an act of negligence on the part of company. Atlantic Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 421.

In depositor's action against bank for negligence in collection of check on which payment had been stopped, petition held insufficient. In that it was not alleged that nor corporate stock, allegations that the stock was limited, that an equal not sufficient to pay the check, and that check would have been paid if payment thereunder had not been stopped. Bingham v. Emanuel (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1015.

178. — Negligence in use of street.—A complaint charging the owner of an automobile with falling to drive on the right-hand side of the traffic pole on a street was insufficient to charge driving on the wrong or left side of the pole. Ex parte Jonischke's (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 522.

179. — Quieting title.—A petition in a suit to remove a cloud from title held to sufficiently allege that the execution of the sheriff's deed under which plaintiff claimed made pursuant to an order of sale. Bish v. Rule (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 512.

180. — Recovery of land.—Petition specially alleging a continuous chain of acts by conspirators to accomplish the transfer of land for a valuation held to state cause for action of recovery of the land, whether facts alleged constitute the basis for a constructive trust or whether the right to recover is upon the theory of rescission for

183. — Replevin.—To entitle one to recover in replevin, he must allege either that defendant wrongfully deprived him of possession of property, or that he wrongfully

184. — Services on implied contract.—Where an agent is denied recovery for services rendered after his principal's death, he cannot recover for prior services thereunder in the absence of proper pleading of quantum meruit or of part performance, since the contract is not divisible. Beckham v. Scott (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 137.

187. — Specific performance.—In a suit for specific performance of a contract to convey corporate stock, allegations that the shares of stock were limited, that an equal amount of other shares could not be purchased on the same terms, or at all, and that plaintiff was familiar with the affairs of the corporation, and was desirous of obtaining 188. — Taxes and assessments.—Pt. Worth Charter, c. 12, § 15 (Special Acts 31st Leg. c. 31), making improvement certificate prima facie evidence of regularity, held to relate to proof only, and not to relieve certificate owner from proper pleadings to show

A petition in an action on a certificate of assessment which was attached and made a part thereof held to state a cause of action although the ordinances, resolutions, and other matters were not copied in the petition, and each act or step taken was not pleaded in detail, in view of art. 1011. Elsmendor v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 225 S.
W. 631.

189. — Trespass.—In suit for damages based on destruction of crops by cattle, allegation that a general stock law was in effect in the county justified proof that a live stock and had been adopted in that county, prohibiting stock from running at large.

191. — Wrongful discharge from employment.—An allegation that principal refused to pay the plaintiff agent's salary, and notified plaintiff that he would not pay him in the future, held to allege a breach of contract, but not in law a discharge. Coch-

Employer's petition, stating that defendant employer agreed to give 30 days' notice before discharging him or give one month's additional pay, and that plaintiff was discharged without such notice or additional pay, held good against a general demurrer.

192. — Wrongful levy.—Owner attacking sequestration proceedings to which he was a party as being wrongfully sued out would be required to negative the grounds stated in the affidavit and state his damages occasioned by such wrongful act, and, if he desires punitive damages, to allege that it was willful, malicious, or the like, and

193. — Issues, proof, and variance.—Where appellee pleaded and proved theory upon which he sought to recover, he will not be permitted to recover on theory made by evi-

Where it was not alleged that a parent had authority to sue to annul the marriage of a minor child under the laws of another state, such fact cannot be shown. Thompson v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 176.

Where the petition alleged that defendant misrepresented that he was going to drill a well on a block of land of which plaintiffs' property would form part, misrepresentations, established by the evidence, that lessee would assign to another who intended to and thereafter did drill a well, did not conform to the pleadings, and plain-

194. — Allegations which must be proved in general.—Plaintiff, in action for damages for injuring plaintiff's stock, pleading that sendees were his agents, was not, in the absence of any issue raised in that respect, bound to develop by pleading or proof the details of the agency as to authority to insert provision in the sales contract for forfeiture; authority in such respect being collateral. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Southwick (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 987.

Where a petition, seeking recovery under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 657-8665), was sufficient to authorize recovery independent of that act, the fact that the allegation of employment in interstate commerce was not sus-

Where defendant pleaded a general denial, any admissions thereafter pleaded in the answer would not lift the burden from plaintiff of proving his case against the general denial. Peterson v. Graham-Brown Shoe Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 735.

197. — Materiality to issue in general.—In an action to enjoin one who has sold his business and good will to a corporation from soliciting his former customers or dealing with them, the right of the corporation to oust him as president and general manager, and stop his salary, presents questions foreign to the issues involved. Sheehan v. Sheehan-Hacklely & Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 666.

198. — Parties or other persons.—Where plaintiff alleged that a grantor and her husband settled a divorce case, and such grantor gave a deed to defendant with the understanding that on the death of the husband a one-half interest should be deeds to plaintiff's father, the land granted being the homestead and community property, there was no variance as to parties to the agreement, though the husband was not a party; no claim of that kind being made. Hall v. Hall (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 636.

In an action for commission on sale of cattle, that petition alleged that sale was made to R. and H., and proof showed that contract of sale as finally made was to R. and C. C. brothers, and H. and sons, held not a fatal variance. Lumsdien v. Jones (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 275.

There is no fatal variance between lease executed by husbands alone, and petition of husbands and wives for rent, expressly alleging that it was executed, coupled with allegation that it was executed on behalf of all the plaintiffs. Lovelady v. Harding (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 923.

Since petition alleged plaintiff's name as Mrs. G. C. B., wife of G. C. B., deceased, contention that judgment should not be entered for her for the reason that the evidence shows her name to be Ole Mae B., will be overruled. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Bristow (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 702.

In an action for damages by one tarred and feathered, where plaintiff alleged that certain of the defendants had placed a placard on him, he should not have been permitted to testify that a certain other defendant had placed the placard on him, in the absence of a trial amendment. Walker v. Kellar (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 792.

An action for libel not being against defendants as members of a county council of defense, or against the council, so far as the petition stated, exclusion of testimony as to who were the members of the council was immaterial and not reversible error. McBroom v. Weir (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 858.

In a suit to cancel oil and gas leases and recover a deposit where the deposit was with the First State Bank of T. and it was alleged that the contract so provided and much bank was made a party but the contract provided for deposit in a bank at M., the pleadings and proof did not correspond. Huber v. Smith (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 339.

When plaintiff alleges that two parties to a contract made him a promise, although under the rule at common law that a joint promise, yet the allegation necessarily means that each of the original parties, and, he can recover against one upon proof that he promised, although he fails to prove the promise of the other. Friddy v. Childers (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 172.

201. — Written instruments.—That petition described note as payable to iron works company and note introduced in evidence was payable to iron works did not constitute a variance where parties concerned used names interchangeably. Harty v. Keokuk Sav. Bank (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 419.

The petition, in an action for rent, alleging written lease of second and third floors of building, lease offered in evidence in terms of second floor, is subject to objection of fatal variance. Lovelady v. Harding (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 931.

An allegation that a surety company's representative agreed to pay a certain commission to its agent on certain business obtained by him would have permitted proof either of an oral or written agreement. National Surety Co. v. Murphy (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 465.

There was a fatal variance between a note reciting that it was given in payment of a liquor business purchased from a third party and a petition alleging that it was given in consideration of a business sold by plaintiff to defendant, and not showing that the note was negotiable, or that it was secured by a chattel mortgage or payable at a bank. Wahl v. Ramsey (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 559.

Where recovery for the amount of a draft drawn by one to whom cattle were delivered by payee could not be had on allegations either of acceptance of the draft by defendant's bookkeeper, or of receipt and retention of the proceeds of cattle, no recovery could be had on the ground, not alleged although supported by evidence, that defendant gave the draft drawer authority to draw the draft on them. Schweers-Kern Lumber Co. v. Stock Commission Co. v. W. K. Sloan (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 540.

204. — Effect of variance to mislead or surprise.—In an action on a judgment rendered in another county, the judgment was properly admitted in evidence, although the petition did not state that an attachment had been issued in the case; failure to so allege not constituting a misdescription of the judgment, nor constituting any surprise, no benefit having ever accrued to the plaintiff in consequence of the attachment. Willis v. Pegues (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 96.

There was no fatal variance between allegation and proof in an action against a city for personal injuries on a sidewalk, in that the petition alleged that there was an elevation on the sidewalk from which plaintiff stepped, whereas, according to plaintiff’s testimony, she stumbled over the elevation; there being no objection nor any claim of surprise or that the city was misled. City of Ft. Worth v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 125.

A variance in pleading and proof is material only when it tends to mislead or surprise the adverse party, and hence pleading that note was executed and delivered to plaintiff, and introducing in evidence a note payable under a trade-name, was not prejudicial, where the execution of the note admitted in evidence was conceded in defendant’s pleading, and the material issue was partial failure of consideration, in view of a supplemental petition, alleging that plaintiff was doing business under such trade-name. Jones v. S. G. Davis Motor Car Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 791.

Where the variance between pleading and proof of a contract amounted merely to a misdescription, it is fatal only if the misdescription tends to mislead and surprise the adverse party. McConnell v. Payne & Winfrey (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 355.

207. Ownership or title.—Where plaintiff sued as sole owner of certain cows to recover variance death, and the proof was that he was a joint owner, he could not recover. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kuehn (Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 494.

Where plaintiff, suing on notes, alleged that it acquired them by written transfer, and evidence showed that there was no indorsement or writing, there was nevertheless no variance, in view of the statute 585 and 194; as proof of variance, evidence of ownership, especially where the original payee was a party. Lewis v. Farmers & Mechanics’ Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 588.

In a boundary dispute, where petition referred to plaintiff’s survey as being 1,900 varas, but also distinctly referred to lines evidenced by iron pipe corners, that a slight excess over 1,900 varas was shown to exist between the corners was not a fatal variance. Hankins v. Dilley (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 549.

In an action by tenants for forcible and wrongful eviction, the allegation by plaintiff in their supplemental petition that the property, detained by defendant landlord was purchased jointly and jointly owned by them was sufficient to warrant proof of the fact. Evans v. Caldwell (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 512.

208. Nature and form of contract and performance or breach thereof in general.—Pleading and proof in vendee’s action after failure of title to a portion of the land, to sustain a variance therefrom, and to admit a variance as to consideration. Farmers & Merchants’ State Bank & Trust Co. v. Cole (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 949.

In action for alleged balance due under contract, where plaintiff failed to allege stoppage to rescind by accepting the articles sold, evidence of such acceptance was irrelevant. Bonett-Brown Sales Service Co. v. Denison Morning Gazette (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1044.

In suit for specific performance of an oral contract of payee, since deceased, to cancel notes in consideration of legal services rendered and to be rendered, held there was no fatal variance between contract alleged and contract proven. Bright v. Briscoe (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 183.

A petition against a water company to compel it to furnish water under a contract did not raise issue that it was defendant’s duty to supply water sufficient to provide to lease land, where it was not alleged that defendant was not a public service corporation, or that the price asked for water required in excess of that contracted to be delivered was unreasonable. Rowles v. Hadden (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 251.

Where case alleged was that owner of cattle, was to pay for value of grass leased in the possession, evidence that cattle taken by owner or possessor of land to pasture was so much per head was properly excluded. Marshall v. Magness (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 541.

In suit for breach of warranty of title, allegations that the price paid for all the land was $8,000, and that the price paid for the land to which the title failed was $25 an acre, held sufficient to admit evidence of the price paid for all the land, whether in money or property, and of the proportional part of such price represented by the land lost. Nordeutt v. Hume (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 157.

In action on contract against four defendants, allegation that defendants made the contract without specifying by which of defendants it was made, and where and when it was entered into, would have been sufficient to support proof of such contract had no special exception been urged thereto. Hartwell v. Fridner (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 281.

In subcontractor’s action for damages sustained because of contractor’s refusal to furnish gravel, where petition alleged an express agreement by contractor to furnish gravel, proof of a contract whereby whereby contractor did not either expressly or impliedly agree to furnish gravel was not admissible; such proof being a material variance from contract pleaded. Id.

Under the rules of common-law pleading there would be a variance preventing recovery between allegations that a contract of employment was made with an individual and a corporate defendant, and that services were rendered for such parties, and evidence that the contracts were with the corporate defendant alone, and the services rendered for it alone. Negociacion Agricola y Ganadera de San Enrique, S. A., v. Love (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 224.
It is elemental that one suing upon a contract must recover upon the contract alleged, and, if he proves a contract essentially different, the variance is fatal. McConnell v. Payne & Winfrey (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 255.

In suit to recover purchase-money payment, if the pleadings were such that defendant vendors were permitted to show that the written contract sued on was never executed or present pleading, under their proof, on any other contract, though similar in some of its terms. Stokes v. Waller (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1085.

Where an attorney, alleged a verbal agreement on the part of deceased to cancel certain notes in consideration of "legal services theretofore and thereafter to be rendered," and the evidence showed such promise if plaintiff would continue to do defendant's work, as long as decedent lived, there was no material variance. Briscoe v. Bright's Adm'r (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1092.

209. — Express and implied contracts.—The proof in action for transmitting telegrams being that the charges were the usual and customary rates, recovery must be regarded as had on a quantum meruit; and it is immaterial that plaintiff, pleading it was under Interstate Commerce Commission's jurisdiction, and charges based on its order, but at trial waiving this contention, did not prove his case on Commission's order and filed in office. Early-Foster Co. v. Mackay Telegraph Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1172.

Where broker sued for compensation upon an alleged express contract alone, he could not recover on quantum meruit or an implied contract to pay the reasonable value of his services. Read v. Farquharson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 335.

A cause of action upon a quantum meruit is different from a cause of action on an express contract, and, unless the causes are pleaded in the alternative or in different counts, evidence cannot be introduced on the cause not so pleaded. Thames v. Clesi (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 195.

210. — Action by broker for commissions.—There is a variance, where proof and allegations in petition, in broker's action for commissions, differed as to amount one party to proposed trade was to pay to the other. Britton v. Eagan (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 972.

In an action wherein commissions and damages for refusal to receive cattle were sought, where it was pleaded that the cattle were purchased as agent, proof that the sale was consummated through a commission company as shipper, and that the cattle were sold at the cost price, plus $10 a car commission and expenses, was not a material variance; measure of damages being the same. Hollis Cotton Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Marrs & Leake (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 367.

Where broker alleged defendants jointly contracted to pay a commission for the sale of land, and court found on sufficient evidence that defendants had listed the land and agreed to pay a commission as alleged, there was no variance on the ground that the evidence showed a several obligation by each defendant to pay a commission on his part of the land. Keithley v. Ward (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 413.

A complaint, alleging that defendant, the second broker with whom plaintiff listed lands, agreed in event of sale to pay plaintiff one-half of a percentage of the purchase price, is not supported by proof that defendant agreed to split commissions. Porter v. Cox (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 84.

In an action for commissions, the facts established by the evidence must be substantially the same as those pleaded by plaintiffs to justify recovery. Miller & Biggarstaff v. Burke (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 310.

In an action for commissions on sale of a farm, proof as to the details of sale introduced by plaintiff brokers held in variant from their pleadings, so that verdict was properly directed against them. Id.

Evidence that defendant seller should receive $5,000 or $10,000 for his land and receive the balance January 1, 1919, when the trade was to be consummated, no notes being executed, held new to prove alleged, that land was sold for notes and cash enough to enable defendant owner to cash the notes. Id.

Where brokers alleged that they were employed to procure a purchaser for $6,000, $1,000 in cash, the balance on time, and the jury found that the property was listed at $6,000, $5,000 in cash, and the balance on time, the variance was fatal, for the terms were material. McConnell v. Payne & Winfrey (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 355.

The petition being on an express contract to pay a certain commission for effecting sale on stipulated terms, recovery cannot be had on any basis other than such contract. Mitchell v. Smith (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 1114.

An allegation, in an action for obtaining a purchaser for land, that the land was listed with plaintiff and the purchaser procured by him and his agent, was sustained by proof that the land was listed with a third person, who was an agent of plaintiff unknown to the defendant, and that the agent performed the services. Christian v. Dunavent (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 875.

211 1/2. — Action for divorce.—In a wife's suit for divorce, evidence that the husband cursed the wife on different occasions and cursed a third person in her presence has been held admissible under the petition, especially where the case was tried by the court, who was capable of separating the material testimony from the immaterial. Erwin v. Erwin (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 884.
213. Action for wages.—In a servant's action for unpaid wages there is no material variance between the contract of employment and the allegation of wages due made on or before September 4, 1917, and proof that it was made about June 1, 1918. Lone Star Shipbuilding Co. v. Daniels (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 225.

214. Actions against insurance companies or orders.—In an action for death benefit, judgment roll in divorce action held admissible to prove first wife was not divorced allegedly until deceased's lawful wife at time of his death, Kinney v. Tri-State Telephone Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 227, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1180.

215. Action against telegraph company.—A petition, held to show agreement to deliver in the telegram allegations of obtaining alter message to addressee at the station to which it was transmitted, and hence a showing that he was at the station was unnecessary. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Kilgore (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 593.

216. Action to rescind or cancel.—In an action to recover corporate stock transferred, allegations in trial court in view of facts, contention of variance cannot be sustained. Stuart v. Meyer (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 615.

In action by purchaser to cancel sale of lots, where plaintiff testified in answer to direct question that he relied upon personal promise of defendant's agent to effect resale of lots at profit, he could not recover for fraud upon alleged fraudulent representation as to size of lots. Milam v. Launder (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1071.

In an action to cancel oil lease executed by husband and wife, on the ground that wife was induced to sign and acknowledge deed by assurances that leasee merely was her representative in order to assist him in obtaining leases on other lands, held that evidence tended to support allegation. McEntire v. Thomason (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 563.

In an action to set aside the transfer of plaintiff's interest in an oil and gas lease, where the fraud alleged in the petition, a fatal variance was not created by evidence showing that the title to the lease was subject to a parol trust. Zundelowitz v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 598.

Before inadequacy of consideration may be shown, where cancellation of a contract is sought on the ground of fraud, it should be alleged that such fraud induced the agreement for the consideration named. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 154.

223. Actions for negligence in general.—In action for alleged malpractice of a substitute sent by physician, where no pleading was filed by plaintiff, alleging that substitute was held out as defendant's partner, it would be immaterial on the question of defendant's liability whether defendant represented that the substitute was his partner. Moore v. Lee, 109 Tex. 391, 211 S. W. 214, 4 A. L. R. 185.

In an action for personal injuries due to an explosion of gasoline sold as coal oil, and alleged to have been used in a lamp, evidence that it was a lantern that exploded was not error. "Lamp" incl. a lantern. Cohn v. Saul & Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 192.

A petition in action for loss of barges at wharf which, after charging several negligent omissions in protecting barge, contained clause "or otherwise protect said barges," is broad enough to let in proof of any negligent omission causing loss of barges. Freeport Town-Site Co. v. S. H. Judgins & Sons (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 287.

In an action against an electric light and power company for injuries from a guy wire, allegations of the petition, held sufficient on general demurrer to place the wire either in a street or close upon it, so that proof establishing the company's duty to protect travelers from such injuries, and that plaintiff's injuries were the direct and proximate result of breach of such duty, was admissible. Athens Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 421.

Where a carrier sent away and had repaired automobile injured in shipment, and consignee then refused it, proof in consignee's action should have been limited to value of machine at time of its return after being repaired; its subsequent liability as warehouseman not being pleaded. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Iversen (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 908.

There is no variance between proof that defendant carrier delayed shipments at junction point with another carrier at certain date, and allegations that goods were delivered to defendant a month previous to such date. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 332.

Petition by consignee seeking to recover for carrier's refusal to reasonably deliver to connecting carrier held, in view of former trial, sufficient to warrant admission of evidence as to shipments delayed. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 709.

In action against initial carrier for negligent delay, where there was no allegation of negligence by connecting carrier, evidence that connecting carrier's failure to deliver shipment sooner was due to congestion of traffic, and not negligence, was ma- 484 terial to show delay by initial carrier, if any, was not proximate cause of loss, and to controvert plaintiff's contention of negligent delay by connecting carrier. Id.

Where a stock shipper, trampled by frightened animals, on a loading chute alleges particularly in a complaint for injuries that the light causing the fright came from a trainman's lantern, he is limited to the particular act of negligence specified. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 275.

In action by passenger for injuries sustained when stepping from step of passenger coach to platform, held there was no fatal variance between plaintiff's pleading regarding the cause of her injury and the proof adduced in support thereof. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 420.

In a passenger's action for injuries due to exposure after derailment, his allegation that defendant was negligent "in the matter of the building, erection, and maintenance of the track, roadway, and embankments, and the careless and negligent operation of said car," was not a charge of specific acts of negligence compelling him to prove the exact negligence alleged, instead of relying on the presumption of negligence arising from the derailment. Dowdy v. Southern Traction Co. (Com. App.) 218 S. W. 1092.

Where the plaintiff alleged and the evidence showed that a passenger was compelled to vacate a warm bed and take a cold berth, it was immaterial how the berth became cold, and, in the absence of contributory negligence with respect to an open window, the carrier was not entitled to have the damages sustained by reason of the slip in the petition did not allege negligence respecting the open window. Pullman Co. v. Cox (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 599.

There can be no recovery against a terminal carrier, under arts. 731, 732, for loss occasioned by prior carriers, where a through contract was not pleaded, even though the evidence established such contract. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Cox (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1045.

225. — Action for injuries to servant.—In a railroad employe's action for injuries, due to a defective guard rail on a vestibule door, he was limited in his proof to the defect alleged, and could not prove the guard rail defective, because not properly latched. Blackman v. San Antonio & A. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 412.

In an action by a servant for personal injuries, it was error to admit evidence of incompetency of another who caused the injury, in the absence of an allegation that the employer knew of such incompetency. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Sherbey (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 758.

A switchman thrown from the roof of a wrecking car, who alleged conjunctively that negligence of the engineer speeding up with a jerk, and negligence of the railroad in failing to couple air brakes with the engine, caused his injuries, could recover on proof of the former but not on negligence alone: it being shown to be the efficient cause of the injury. Baker v. Grace (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 299.

In view of inclusiveness of general allegations of railway receiver's negligence in furnishing defective pick, employe held entitled to have cause determined by jury in accordance with theory presented by his evidence that pick was so defectively tempered that when struck against a steel rail, it threw off a sliver. Freeman v. Wilson (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 551, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 189 S. W. 1190.

226. — Actions for injuries in operation of railroads.—Where plaintiff alleged that horse was killed by negligent operation of defendant's train, he could not recover, in absence of evidence showing manner of death. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Texas v. Claybon (Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 488.

Where a railroad has its right of way properly fenced, it is necessary, to admit proof that hogs were killed on the track, to allege that the railroad was negligent. Texas v. Lovett (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 498.

The proper conclusion from allegations of petition, special exception to which of indefiniteness had been overruled, being that plaintiff expected to show that fastening of gate in defendant's right of way fence, was insufficient or had become out of repair, plaintiff's testimony that there was no fastening on the gate when it was installed should not have been received. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Simmons (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 562.

Allegations that the conductor caused trespasser to fear for his life so that he jumped from a moving freight train, are not supported by evidence that conductor told him to get off without violent gestures, or profanity, where plaintiff testified that he was not afraid of the conductor. Baker v. Cobb (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 214.

In a personal injury action against a street railroad, where plaintiff alleged that defendant had refused to pay, plaintiff's testimony that he had not been paid anything, and had made a demand for settlement, was proper to support the allegation of nonpayment. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1013.

Art. 1828. [1192] [1196] Defensive matters pleaded by plaintiff.

Replication or subsequent pleading.—If contract between gas company and customer avoiding liability for injuries from explosion was obtained by duress, and was without consideration, same was entitled, in her action for injuries, to allege and prove such facts in avoidance. Southern Western Gas & Electric Co. v. Cobb (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1116.

Employé, suing for injuries and seeking to avoid employer’s defense of assumed risk by evidence of promised to remedy conditions, must specially plead such promise. Schaff v. Hendrick (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 542.

In action for death at crossing, giving of defendant’s requested special charge on contributory negligence as proximate cause of injury, which ignored issue of discovered peril and inability to exercise ordinary care because of terror, was not erroneous, where such issues were not pleaded in answer to pleader of contributory negligence. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Harrington (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 655.

In suit to cancel a mineral lease, where defendant set up a written option to lease whereby it was granted 25 days in which to accept the lease, naming from receipt of abstracts of title, and, while denying she had executed such instrument, plaintiff, in avoidance by supplemental petition, pleaded that the option contract on which it was based had no consideration, etc., want of consideration for the option was duly presented by the pleadings. Texas Co. v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 390.

In suit by heirs of a deceased wife against the sureties on the bond given by the husband as community survivor, allegation of the amended petition, held an insufficient answer to defendant sureties’ plea of the statute of limitations. Simons v. Ware (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 858.

Estoppel to be available against the defense of ultra vires must be pleaded. W. C. Bowman Lumber Co. v. Pierson, 110 Tex. 543, 221 S. W. 939, 11 A. L. R. 547, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 133 S. W. 618.

In partition suit, in which defendant claimed title to the entire tract by adverse possession under the 10-year statute, the fact that plaintiff had acquired title of owners who had reached their majority less than 10 years before the filing of the suit, to be available to defeat defendant’s title by adverse possession, should have been specially pleaded under this article; for such provision was intended to apply limitations pleaded by the defendant. Didier v. Woodward (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 562.

Verification.—In absence of exception in the trial court to failure to verify plaintiff’s plea by supplemental petition, want of verification can avail defendant appellant nothing. Texas Co. v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 390.

Issues, proof and variance.—In action for price for cattle specified in original contract, later reduced by seller on buyers’ refusal to perform where seller did not answer buyers’ plea with charge that any modification was induced by mistake or fraud, Court of Civil Appeals cannot consider such theory. Craig, Thompson & Jeffries v. Barreda (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 385.

In an action to recover land and rental defended on the ground of title by agreement or estoppel, plaintiff may offer evidence in rebuttal under a general denial, which is interposed by statute, but when he offers evidence in avoidance, he must plead the facts relied upon to avoid defendant’s pleaded title. Davies v. Rutland (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1114.

Art. 1829. [1193] [1197] Denial of special defenses presumed.

Impaired denial.—Under this article, as originally enacted, where the coverture of a female defendant is pleaded, the fact is in issue without a general denial. Brooks v. Pegg (Sup.) 8 S. W. 585.

And evidence to rebut a special plea, settling up failure of consideration of a note sued on, is admissible without a replication. Fagan v. McWherter, 71 Tex. 567, 9 S. W. 577.

And where defendant pleads the destruction of cotton without negligence on its part, and proves the destruction, plaintiff is entitled to introduce evidence to show its negligence and to recover if negligence is proved, even though he does not allege it. Texas Elevator & Compress Co. v. Mitchell, 78 Tex. 64, 14 S. W. 275.

Under the amendment by Acts 34th Leg. c. 101, where insurer, in action on fire insurance policy, pleaded nonpayment of insured’s premium note, insured, assuming the burden of proving payment, had the right to prove it under his implied general denial. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Clark (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 229.

The law supplies the merely formal denial of all material averments of defense pleaded in the defendant’s answer in avoidance of a cause of action set out in a petition, and imputes to the plaintiff a denial of the purely defensive matters pleaded by defendant. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1013.

Decisions under Act of 1913.—In action against carrier for loss of goods, where answer denied delivery and set out in detail the circumstances under which the bill of lading was issued, the facts so alleged were not to be taken as confessed, in default of the pleading, in such a case as here before facts not already in issue by allegations of the petition, and alleging affirmatively the converse of what plaintiff has alleged amounts merely to a denial and not “special matter of defense.” Braas v. Texarkana & Ft. Smith Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 218 S. W. 1048.

Doe as a defendant who set up affirmatively defensive matter in the answer has the burden of proving such matter. Davies v. Rutland (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 235.

CHAPTER THREE A

VERIFICATION OF PLEADINGS

Articles 1829a, 1829b.

Decisions under repealed act.—Where no objection was made in an action for personal injury that a plea that plaintiff assumed the risk had not been denied, until after the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff, the defendant must be held to have waived any right to have the plea taken as confessed, under the Verified Pleading Act of 1913 (Acts 33d Leg. c. 127). Denison Cotton Mill Co. v. McAmlis (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 442.

In an action against a master for injuries, where plaintiff alleged that defendant was a private corporation and had more than five persons in its employ, and such allegation was not denied, the fact stood admitted under Verified Pleading Act of 1913. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Moreno (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 444.

CHAPTER FOUR

VENUE OF SUITS

Art. 1830. Venue, general rule.

1833. When plea sustained, order changing venue, record transmitted.

Article 1830. [1194] [1198] Venue, general rule.

General rule.—The difference in wording in the various exceptions to the general rule indicates that the Legislature had in mind the differing significations of the terms "may," "must," and "shall," and presumably used those terms in relation to the subject of venue advisedly. Mitchell v. Hancock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694.

He who claims the benefit of an exception in the statute relating to venue must bring himself clearly within such exception. Lee v. Gilchrist Cotton Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 977.

An action by an attorney to recover fees, brought in the county court, is controlled as to venue by this article, and it was therefore error, in overruling defendant's plea of privilege, to base the decision upon art. 2208, subd. 4, relating to venue in justice courts. Fears v. Fish (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 507.

Should any question arise in justice court with reference to venue not covered by art. 2208, the court must be governed by any provision of this article applicable thereto.

This chapter furnishes the rule of venue for district and county courts. Randall v. Harris (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 569.

When a cause of action which would be cognizable in the justice court is combined with other causes of action, and suit thereon is brought in the district or county court, the venue is to be determined by the provisions of the statute providing for suits in the district and county courts.

Right to maintain suit away from residence of defendant, who pleads privilege, must depend on existence of facts which constitute exception to statute, and not upon mere allegation of facts. Bledsoe v. Barber (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 369.

Cases not within exceptions to general rule.—That before suit can be brought the matter in controversy must be submitted to some board or referee, or must have some order or certificate or other matter of some department of state, does not give that place venue of a suit afterwards brought; hence in a suit under the Employers' Liability Act, the fact that plaintiff was obliged, under the act, to submit the claim to the accident board in a given county did not give such county venue of a suit on the liability. Ozbolt v. Lumbermen's Indemnity Exchange (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 158.

In action to enjoin actions to construe an agreement to place money in bank to be distributed among purchasers of land if a railroad was not built, where bank had not contracted to pay the money in the county in which the action was brought, and the instrument did not require payment of money in such county and the suit did not involve the title to land in such county, the bank's plea of privilege should have been granted. State Nat. Bank of San Antonio v. Lancaster (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 883.

Allegations and proof by plaintiff college that its contract with its student was made in the county of suit, and that by a telegram sent to it in such county defendant bank agreed to pay the check sued on did not show a case within any of the exceptions to this article. Sinton State Bank v. Tyler Commercial College (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 170.

Jurisdiction of an action against a nonresident defendant, based on the fact that such action was joined with other actions against the same defendant cannot be sustained, where the court did not have jurisdiction over the actions to which it was joined, none of them falling within the exceptions of this article. First Nat. Bank of Coleman v. Gates (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 726.

Seller's cause of action for breach of a sale's contract was properly joined with cause of action for breach of a similar contract, in order to avoid a multiplicity of suits, regardless of whether venue as to former contract was properly laid in the county in which the action for breach of latter contract was properly brought. Landa v. F. S. Almira Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 176.

Residence.—In action against partners residing in another county where one of defendant partners removed, after plea of privilege, to county in which it was brought, held, that court properly refused to sustain the plea, on plaintiff's filing an amended petition showing such removal. Avery v. Llano Cotton Seed Oil Mill Ass'n (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 351.

In suit for specific performance of contract to convey land, proper venue is county of residence of defendants when they set up plea of privilege. Ballard v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 305.

In habeas corpus to determine proper custody of children, which was in effect merely a civil action, respondents, upon proper showing, have the right to a change of venue to the county of their residence. Lucid v. McDowell (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 203.

A city cannot maintain a suit for taxes against a nonresident taxpayer, where the case is not within any exception to this article. Wilson v. City of Belton (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 366.

Statutes regulating to change of venue to county of defendant's residence should be liberally construed to effect such purpose. Brooks v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 288.

Suit to oust trustees of a county line school district from exercising or asserting any corporate right, franchise, privilege, or jurisdiction over that portion of the school district taken from a district in G. county, was an attack upon the corporate existence of the district, and the district, through its trustees, had the privilege of being sued in C. county, if the situs of the district fixed by arts. 2815a and 2815b. State v. Waller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 322.

A general rule is that no person who is an inhabitant of the state shall be sued out of the county in which he has his domicile. id.

The general rule prevails in all cases except cases coming clearly within one of the recognized exceptions: id.

One who sues a defendant in a county other than that of his residence must bring his case clearly within the exceptions to the general rule. Valdespino v. Dorrance & Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 469.

The right to maintain a suit in a county away from the residence of domicile of a defendant who pleads his privilege depends upon the existence of facts which constitute the exceptions to the statute, and not upon the mere allegation of facts. First Nat. Bank v. Coleman v. Gates (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 726.

The privilege to be sued in the county of one's residence is a valuable right, and, in order to maintain a suit against him in some other county facts authorizing it must be clearly shown. Russell v. Green (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 445.

The right is of too much value to be wrested from one, except by suits instituted in good faith under one of the exceptions to the general rule. Hutchison v. R. Hamilton & Son (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 564.

Intention of a party to fix his domicile at a particular place at some future time is not sufficient to give him a domicile at that point, where not evidenced by any acts or even declarations to that effect. Gallagher v. Gallagher (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 616.

Where defendant had a single residence located partly in C. and partly in L. county, his residence and domicile for purposes of venue was in both counties, and under this article, he could be sued in either. Smith v. Farmer (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 456.

Where a purchaser of an automobile was sued for the purchase price and counterclaimed for damages against the distributor who had attempted to repair it under a claim of warranty, held, that the cause of action on the counterclaim was distinct from the controversy in the main suit, which was with the selling firm and was in personam, and the distributor was entitled to trial in the county of his residence in view of this article. Coats v. Williams (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 961.

Contract fixing venue.—Insurance contracts, see notes to subd. 29.

Buyer of tractor was not bound by agreement fixing venue in case of action growing out of the purchase of the tractor, where he had not expressly or impliedly authorized such agreement; hence seller's plea of privilege to be sued in such county instead of the county where the representations were made, was properly denied. Texas Moline Flow Co. v. Grimminger (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 747.

When venue to a lawsuit cannot be fixed by the statute regulating venue, and such agreement will not be enforced by the courts. Winniford v. Holloman (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 1114.
Objections and waiver.—Record held not to show that appellant has not waived its right to insist upon plea of privilege, or that the trial court erred in overruling it. International Travelers’ Ass’n v. Votaw (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 227.

Where, after plea of privilege was filed, the court entered on his docket, “Rule for costs invoked by defendant,” which was not carried into the minutes, but at a later term, at which the plea was sustained, was entered nunc pro tunc, such rule was a waiver of such plea. Torno v. Cochran (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 725.

In view of subd. 5, parties to a bond had the right to waive the privilege of being sued in the county of their domicile, and were not precluded therefrom by art. 2098, Howard v. Barthold & Casey (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 378.

To obtain the benefits of subd. 17, the privilege must be claimed seasonably and in due order of pleading, otherwise it will be deemed to have been waived. Kieschnick v. Martin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 948.

Mere entry of rule of costs by trial court, with proviso that it was without prejudice to defendant’s rights with reference to his plea of privilege, was not a waiver of plea of privilege under Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, § 1, art. 1903. Murphy v. Dabney (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 981.

The judgment of the court entered on a verdict of the jury in no wise reflected its action at the previous term on the plea of special privilege, and excepting to that judgment did not amount to an exception to its ruling on the plea. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Webber, 109 Tex. 583, 210 S. W. 677.

Plea of privilege may be waived by failure to present them to the trial court within the time allowed by law. Eddleman v. Wafford (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 221.

Where plea of privilege was filed but neither the judgment of the court nor any other portion of the record disclosed any action by the trial court thereon, it will be presumed the plea was waived. Id.

Where there was no cause of action against wife, her failure to plead privilege could not deprive nonresident husband of right to insist there was no exception to the venue statute authorizing suit against him in such county. Bledsoe v. Barber (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 365.

Under this article, and in view of rule 24, for district and county courts (142 S. W. xix), relating to dilatory pleas, the failure of defendant to call to the attention of the trial court its plea of privilege at the term at which it was filed is a waiver thereof, notwithstanding the amendment of art. 1903, by Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 176. Auds Creek Oil Co. v. Brooks Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 319.

As a defendant who pleads privilege must comply with art. 1903, as amended by Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 176, the failure of such defendant, when demurrer to the plea is filed, to call the same to the attention of the trial court warrants the court in treating the plea as waived. Id.

That land was situated in a county other than that in which the suit to recover possession was brought presents merely a question of venue that can be waived, and in absence of a plea presenting that issue, the court can render judgment for recovery of the land. Lawright v. Reese (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 270.

If an executor, who resides in a county other than that in which the will was probated, can only be sued in the county of probate, under subd. 6 of this article, he waives that right by failure to present a plea of privilege in the court below, and cannot raise the question on appeal. Lobit v. Marcoulides (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 767.

Agreement waiving citation, held not to cut off right to file a plea of privilege to be sued in the county of residence; the alleged waiver constituting an appearance only. Winniford v. Holsman (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 4114.

Where a plea of privilege is filed when suit is brought to enjoin execution it shall be brought in the county where the judgment was rendered, is one of venue only, and not of jurisdiction; so defendant may waive his privilege. Martin v. Kieschnick (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 330.

Rigot is not waived though the general demurrer filed contemporaneously with the plea in abatement precedes it in the arrangement in the answer, though art. 1902 allowing a defendant to plead as many several matters as he shall think necessary for his defense provides that he shall file them all at the same time “and in due order of pleading.” Id.

Participation in cause in general.—If a defendant pleads over against a codefendant, he thereby waives his plea of privilege. Carlisle v. Prost-Llewellyn Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 733.

Where appellant prior to renewed plea of privilege filed application for continuance, which was passed on at same term, she waived right to urge privilege. Hambleton v. Dignowity (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 864.

Under this article, where a plea of privilege is overruled and a bill of exceptions taken, the presentation of a counterclaim and an answer is not a waiver of the privilege. Griffith v. Gohiman, Lester & Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 233.

An annoyance does not constitute an abandonment of a plea of privilege, where the motion shows that defendant was insisting thereon, and the judgment of the court continuing the hearing on the plea shows that it was continued without prejudice. Ozobt v. Lumbermen’s Indemnity Exchange (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 188.

In suit on notes secured by chattel mortgage, wherein appellants prayed that cause be removed to E. county, that prayer would be taken as waiver by the defendants residing in C. county that cause should be removed to that county, as alleged in their plea of privilege. Poole v. Farm-Building Ass'n (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 351.

Where defendant's plea of privilege in justice court was overruled during December term, and the cause taken to county court on February 19th following certiorari returnable to the March term, and where motion to dismiss certiorari which was filed during the March term was not disposed of until June 2d, when motion to strike out plea was made, there was no waiver of plea in county court. Poole v. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 706.

If defendant's pleading as a whole conclusively shows he does not intend to waive his plea of special privilege for change of venue, no waiver should be held because he did not specifically state that his plea to the merits was subject to such plea of privilege being overruled; but where he alleges a duty, a subsequent breach thereof on plaintiff's part, loss suffered thereby, specifies the nature and amount of damages, and asks affirmative relief, he waives his plea of special privilege. McClintic v. Brown (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 546.

Where defendant, following his allegations of a duty and breach thereof on plaintiff's part, and consequent damage to defendant, prayed for affirmative relief, and the pleading was sufficient to have sustained the judgment on defendant's plea in reconvention, he must be held to have asked affirmative relief in a manner to waive his plea of privilege. Id.

Defendant, by answering to merits upon codefendant's cross-petition, submitted himself to court's jurisdiction and waived plea of privilege, notwithstanding dismissal as to plaintiff and misjoinder of plaintiff's cause of action with that of codefendant. McClure v. Fair (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 683.

Where at term to which case had been continued a defendant filed a full answer to the merits of the original defendant's cross-action against him, and there was no allegation or statement in the answer or any part of the record that the answer was filed subject to such defendant's plea of privilege, he waived it. Griffin v. Sawyer (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 857.

Defendant's claim of privilege asserted by plea in abatement, is waived by invoking action on general demurrer, and abiding by court's act in sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the action; whereas, if it had merely sustained the plea of privilege, it would under art. 1833, have transferred the case. Martin v. Kieschnick (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 236.

Cross-complaint.—While defendant does not waive his plea of privilege to be sued in the county of his residence by pleading generally to the merits, subject to the plea, his privilege is waived by filing a cross-action demanding affirmative relief. McClintic v. Brown (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 540.

A defendant after he has asked affirmative relief in a suit brought against him in another county other than that of his residence, etc., cannot successfully plead his privilege, but the mere filing of a plea for affirmative relief after the plea of privilege is not a waiver. Whisnant v. Kurtz (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 977.

Where defendant, having pleaded his privilege, filed an answer praying that a railroad company be impleaded as a defendant, and citation was served on such company, defendant's plea to be sued in the county of his residence was waived. Id.

2. Transient persons.
See Kennedy & Gafford v. Reppond (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 140; notes to subd. 4.

3. Non-residents and persons whose residence is unknown.
See Claiborne v. Pickens (App.) 16 S. W. 867.

Non-residents.—See Kennedy & Gafford v. Reppond (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 140; notes to subd. 4.

Under this subdivision, where a defendant resides without the state, suit may be brought in the county in which the plaintiff resides. Hines v. Avant & Coughran (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 821.

4. Several defendants residing in different counties; effect of assignment.

Residence of co-defendants.—See Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank of Comanche v. Lillard Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 260; notes to subd. 5.

Under this subdivision, an action on a railway company's bond conditioned to return certain subscriptions in aid of the construction of the road on default of such construction cannot be commenced against the sureties of the bond in S. county, it appearing that the sureties resided in T. county, and that the railroad had no domicile in S. county. Red River & Gulf Ry. Co. v. Blount, 6 Civ. App. 282, 22 S. W. 830.

In a suit to restrain the operation of a cotton gin as a nuisance, nonresident defendants are not privileged to be sued in the county of their residence where their superintendent of construction is a resident of the county and is positively interested in the establishment of the gin. Moore v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 212.

Where suit to rent account because of usury, etc., was brought in county where two of defendants resided, pleas of privilege of nonresident defendants were properly overruled. Bomar v. Smith (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 964.

Lumber purchase transaction held such that the liability of defendants was joint so as to permit suit on the account against both of them in the county where either resided. Carlisle v. Frost-Llewellyn Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 735.

In mechanic's lien action, defendant contractor's residence gave court jurisdiction as against pleas of privilege filed by other defendants. Cruz v. Texas Glass & Paint Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317.

This subdivision applies only where the cause of action as to all parties is the same. Id.

In mechanic's lien action, defendant contractor's residence gave court jurisdiction as against pleas of privilege filed by other defendants. Cruz v. Texas Glass & Paint Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317.

Suit was properly brought against all defendants in county of one defendant's residence, unless there was misjoinder of parties and causes of action. Kunz v. Ragsdale (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 269.

A suit for injunction to enforce compliance by a railroad company with a contract to establish and maintain division headquarters at a particular town, in which the company and an individual who was a proper party were joined as defendants, was properly instituted in the county of the individual defendant's domicile instead of that of the company under this article, and art. 4653, as the injunction was an ancillary proceeding. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. City of Ennis (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 258.

Where in compliance with his contract, E. procured Q. to convey land to plaintiff, E. receiving the consideration, the contract to convey was satisfied by the joint act of E. and Q., and an action for breach of warranty could be brought against both E. and Q. in the county where Q. resided, in view of this subdivision. Estes v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 441.

Where all the defendants residing within the county obtained a favorable judgment on plea of limitation, the court's jurisdiction was not destroyed as to remaining defendants, when the first defendants were not fraudulently implicated, for plaintiff was not bound to anticipate the interposing of the plea. Strait Bros. v. Chaney (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 219.

In an action against the seller of hay and the receivers of the railroad which carried it, for loss resulting from delivery of an inferior quality of hay, short in weight, the trial court erred in overruling plea of privilege of the seller of the hay; the railroad receivers not residing in the county of suit, to make this subdivision applicable, and the contract not being written to bring the cause under subd. 5. Watson v. Howe & Bros. Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 84.

Where purchaser of automobile from resident defendants surrendered possession to a nonresident and then brought sequestration proceedings against such nonresident and the resident sellers, plaintiff cannot, because subds. 2 and 3, allowed the action as to the nonresident to be brought in the county of his residence, maintain the action as to the resident defendants in such county; for there is no exception destroying the privilege of codefendants in case one of them is not a resident, as in case of residents. Kennedy & Cafford v. Reppond (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 146.

Vendor's action for purchase price placed in escrow against purchaser and bank with which money was deposited was properly brought in the county in which the bank was situated, under this subdivision; the bank being a proper defendant in such case. Gambrell v. Tatum (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 287.

County where codefendant suable.—Where rice growers sued a corporation which had sold them rice on cause of a lien acknowledged because of an omission by an irrigation company, which was also made a defendant, the action was properly brought in a county where the corporation had an agent, in view of subds. 4 and 24. Trousdale v. Southern Rice Growers' Ass'n (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 322.

An action against private corporation in the same right, and on a joint contract made with plaintiff may be sued where the corporation may be sued. Danciger v. Smith (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 909.

In an action against an association, its trustees and members for breach of its bond not specifying the place of payment, where the association and some of the individuals were nonresidents of the county, suit could not be maintained against the individual nonresident defendants under this subdivision, notwithstanding that the company was suable in such county by virtue of having an agent therein. Cotton States Petroleum Co. v. Brittson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 742.

Improper joinder.—See McCauley v. McElroy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317; notes to subd. 9.

Fact that petition for conversion does not show that defendants, other than sheriff and one other, participated in or are liable for conversion, affords no reason for transferring case to county in which defendants reside. Buckholts State Bank v. Thallman (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 687.

Defendant corporation, sued for breach of its implied warranty of seeds sold, could not properly join, by cross-action, another from whom it purchased the seed, and thereby defeat owner of other's privilege to be sued in his own county. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Boatenhamer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 972.

A defendant cannot be sued out of the county of his residence by the joinder in the suit of unnecessary and improper parties defendant, resident within the county where suit is brought. Shaw v. Stinson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 605.
Art. 1830  COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN

Nor by an improper joinder of a cause of action against such nonresident defendant with a cause of action against a resident defendant, and with which the nonresident defendant is in no wise connected. Id.

When it is sought to sustain the venue of a suit against a nonresident on the ground that the defendant resides in the county, the cause of action against the nonresident is connected, and at least connected, to the cause of action against the resident defendant, and with which the nonresident defendant is in no wise connected. Id.

In action against bank, which honored a second draft drawn by a borrower from plaintiff, etc., held that though the borrower resided in the county where suit was instituted, defendant’s plea of privilege to be sued in the county in which it did business could not be overruled, on the theory that defendant bank and the borrower were joint tortfeasors or converters of the fund. Id.

Where cross-action by one defendant against codefendants is severable from plaintiff’s cause of action, codefendants are entitled to have venue, as to cross-action, changed to county of their residence, where main action was brought in county in which defendant bringing cross-action resided. McClure v. Fair (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 653.

This subdivision contemplates a real defendant, and one against whom the plaintiff has a cause of action. Gambrell v. Tatum (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 237.

It applies only where there is a joint cause of action against the several defendants; and it is not enough to show a valid cause of action against each, or a liability of one or the other in the alternative, though the causes of action grow out of the same subject-matter. Danciger v. Smith (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 909.

It does not allow persons who are nonresidents of the county in which action is brought, and who would not be proper parties to the action, to be there sued by the original party by bringing them in by cross-action in a contract of indemnity. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Littlejohn (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 595.

Under Negotiable Instruments Act, §§ 132, 135, an alleged oral acceptor of a draft is not a proper party to an action against the drawer, and where the alleged acceptor resided in another county than the drawer resided and action was begun, the action as to it must be transferred, under art. 1903, as amended April 2, 1917, regardless of plaintiff’s allegation that the acceptor was estopped from setting up the statute of frauds. First Nat. Bank v. Sanford (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 650.

Defendant’s plea of privilege should have been sustained, though action was brought in the county of the residence of the codefendant under this subdivision, where there was no cause of action stated against codefendant. Bingham v. Emanuel (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1015.

An action against an unincorporated association and its members, cannot be maintained in the county of the residence of one of them under this subdivision, where he is neither a necessary nor a proper party. Cotton States Petroleum Co. v. Britton (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 742.

Stockholder of association who meddled with the assets or proceeds of the sale of its properties and converted the money to his own use, was, so far as plea of privilege was concerned, properly joined in an action by a creditor against the association, having the right to call him for an accounting, and it was immaterial that stockholders were not personally liable for debts of association. Smith v. Payne (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 784.

Assignment of cause of action.—Under amendment of this subdivision by Acts 33d Leg. c. 177, agreement by the drawee of a draft to accept the same on presentation by an assignee of the draft rendered the drawer jointly liable with the maker to the assignee so that suit could be brought in the county where the maker resided. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148.

Where one of the defendants assigned to plaintiff his right of action against a nonresident defendant, held that action could not, under this subdivision, be maintained in the county in which the assignor resided, for as the assignment was necessary to give plaintiff a right of action, venue could not, under Act 1912, be obtained in that fashion. First Nat. Bank of Coleman v. Gates (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 720.

5. Contract in writing to be performed in a particular county.

See Hutchison v. R. Hamilton & Son (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 861; note to subd. 7; Clarke v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 253 S. W. 578; Union Woolen Mills v. Starke (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 357.

Place of performance.—Action for balance due on contract was properly brought in county in which payment was to be made, though defendant did not reside therein. Allison v. Hamle (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 483; Gambrell v. Tatum (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 287.

Under this provision, a cause of action suable in the county of defendant’s domicile only, cannot be joined with a cause suable also in the county where the obligation on which it is based was to have been performed, so as to compel defendant to submit to the jurisdiction of the court of the latter county against his plea of privilege. Allison v. Harris (Sup.) 11 S. W. 577.

Where an action based on a written contract, which specifies the place of its performance, is commenced in the county specified in the contract, the venue will not, on the application of defendant, be changed to the county of defendant’s residence, under this subdivision. Burleson v. Lindsey (Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 729.

Where plaintiff accepted draft attached to bills of lading upon telephone agreement that shippers would protect such advance, an action to recover difference between advance and selling price after defendant’s default is not on a written contract to be performed in plaintiff's county within this subdivision. Sanders v. George M. Hexter Cotton Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 269.

Where defendant shipped cotton from his county to that of plaintiffs consigned to himself, and forwarded bills of lading to plaintiffs with drafts calling for advances, there was no writing to perform any obligation in plaintiffs' county under this article. Griffith v. Gohman & Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 223.

Overruling of defendant's plea of privilege is error, unless he had contracted in writing to make payment of the note sued on in county where sued. Poindexter v. First State Bank of Richland (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 809.

Under the rule that guarantor in writing of the payment of note according to its tenor and legal effect may be sued in county where note is payable, guaranty of payment of a debt evidenced by a note is not within the rule. Id.

A letter from a wholesaler in D. county to a retailer in N. county to book a carload of flour was not an offer to perform any agreement in N. county so as to authorize a suit to be brought in N. county. Denton Milling Co. v. Green (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 262.

If a broker negotiates contract for sale of grain by phone, reduces the terms of the contract to writing and mails each party a copy, and neither objects, there is a "contract in writing," within this subdivision. Kelsey v. Early Grain & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 849.

Defendant's application for membership in a trade association plaintiff's letter confirming a trade and specifying F. county as the place of performance together with arbitration committee's award in plaintiff's favor, held a "contract in writing" to perform the contract obligation in P. county, within this subdivision. Id.

Where there was no written contract to be performed in the county where suit was begun and such county was not that of defendant's residence, held, that under this article, the county court of such county was without jurisdiction. Brown Grain Co. v. Walker (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 859.

An implied promise to perform a contract in a county other than that of defendant's residence will not place the venue of a suit thereon in such county. Valdespino v. Dorran & Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 649.

Suit on an oral contract to return overpayments, if any, on a sale of cotton upon being scaled and weighed in the county of the purchaser's residence, cannot be brought in such county under this subdivision. Id.

Where plaintiff sold hay to defendant f. o. b. at a point in Galveston county, but drafts with bill of lading attached were to be sent to county of defendant's residence, held, that the contract cannot be construed as one to be performed within Galveston county, the expression "f. o. b." cars implying no promise to pay in Galveston county. Harris v. Moller (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 961.

Contract for sale of hay held performable, in Bexar county, at least under amendment, whereby seller agreed to deliver in said county, despite clause that all obligations pertaining were payable at point in Grayson county. Garrett v. J. A. Hughes Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 785.

Contract for sale of stock of goods situated in certain county and providing for deposit as forfeits of certified checks with bank situated in such county was by implication partly to be performed in such county, and buyer under this subdivision, waived privilege of being sued for breach in county of his residence. Cecil v. Fox (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 964.

Order for potatoes to be shipped to N. county held not to constitute contract in writing to pay for potatoes in N. county, so as to prevent buyer from having seller's action against price removed for courts of defendant's domicile. Trenavan v. G. M. Hall & Son (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 447.

Where obligee's action against guarantor and principal was brought in the county in which principal agreed to make payment, and where there was no allegation that guarantor had guaranteed that payment would be made in such county, and neither guarantor nor principal were domiciled therein, guarantor, in view of subds. 4, 5, was entitled to have place of trial changed to the county of its domicile. Farmers' & Merchants' Nat. Bank of Comanche v. Lillard Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 260.

When architects on the theory that they were negligent in superintending construction, or in drawing plans, and that such negligence resulted in unsafe construction which caused the house to be destroyed by fire, held, under this subdivision, that suit might be maintained in the county where the house was located, though it was other than the county of defendants' residence. Pressnell v. Adams (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 357.

In action for commission for procuring a loan held, that defendant did not contract in writing to perform the obligation sued on in D. county, within this subdivision. Russell v. Green (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 448.

If this exception is relied on, the contract must contain an express agreement to perform in the county where the venue is laid, or the court must be able to say that the contract necessarily imports an obligation to perform in the county where suit is instituted. Id.

But though contract may not plainly specify that it is to be performed in a certain place, yet if contract by its terms leads to no other conclusion but that it is performable in that place, then jurisdiction will be given to that place. Cecil v. Fox (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 954.

If the terms of a written contract are such that it must necessarily be performed in a certain county, suit can be maintained thereon in such county. Valdespino v. Dorran & Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 649.
In determining whether one has contracted in writing to perform an obligation in a particular county within this subdivision, the written contract alone can be looked to; parol provisions of the contract being immaterial. Russell v. Green (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 448.

In view of subds. 5 and 12, venue of an action to foreclose a vendor's lien may be laid in the county where the land is situated. Hurst v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 284.

Any right to hold B. and R. responsible on joint note of I. and C. alleged to be a partnership obligation of all, being independent of the promise, they are entitled to the venue of the transaction, as to the county of their residence, though the note is payable in the county where action is brought. Rutledge v. Evans (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 218.

In suit on note executed by wife, where petition discloses no obligation of wife, it cannot confer venue in county where payable as to husband, resident in another county under this subdivision. Bledsoe v. Barber (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 369.

In suit on wife's note in the county where it was payable, though plaintiff pleaded agency of wife for husband and asserted it in controverting affidavit to husband's plea of privilege, plaintiff still remained under necessity to prove it to show contract sued on was that of husband, so that action was properly brought in county of execution under this subdivision. Id.

An agreement or promise to pay for articles purchased in a county other than the promisor's residence, in order to fix the venue in such county, must be in writing and plainly provide for such performance in the other county, under this subdivision. Tex. Supply Co. v. Clarke (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 573.

Where contract for the sale of farm machinery required the purchaser, in a case of breach to pay liquidated damages at Dallas the courts of that county have jurisdiction under this subdivision; hence defendant was not entitled to have the suit removed to the county of his residence. Southern Flow Co. v. Dunlap Hardware Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1029.

Where goods were sold in county by written instrument by defendants, who fraudulently represented themselves the owners, and who obtained payment by draft on bank in such county, the venue was properly laid in such county, though defendants did not reside therein, under subds. 8, 7: the contract having been made to be performed, and having in fact been performed in such county. Harris v. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1118.

Defendant, knowing from school catalogue that all payments at plaintiff's school were payable in the county of the school, his answer to plaintiff's inquiry as to "enrollment per catalogue" that he would send his boy, followed by his doing so, and making a payment at such place, rendered him liable to suit there for the balance, though he lived in another county. Peacock Military College v. Scroggins (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 232.

In an action brought in Houston county on an injunction bond filed in suit in Travis county, where there was no showing that the bond was payable in Houston county, and it was not shown that it was payable therein as a matter of law, it was error to overrule defendant's plea of privilege to be sued in Travis county. Eyres v. Crockett State Bank (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 265.

Where, under original contract for sale of land, all papers were to be delivered in Wichita Falls, where each seller lived, any suit on such original contract would have to be filed by the buyers in Wichita county, under this article. Clarke v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 878.

Where a contract for the sale of machinery was made and consummated in Dallas and called for delivery, and the property was delivered in Dallas, the cause of action for nondelivery of the machinery was without then arose, and the venue was in that county, though its worthlessness became apparent on a practical demonstration in another county. Avery Co. of Texas v. Walker (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 693.

Buyer's action against seller for nondelivery, contract being for sale of cotton seed f. o. b. cars at a point in C. county and for payment of price there, held properly brought in C. county, under this article. Watson v. Landa Cotton Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 242.

Where a portion of the purchase price was deposited in escrow with a bank, the vendor's action to recover such amount was properly brought in the county in which bank was situated under this subdivision, since the contract, in so far as it related to the payment of that portion of the purchase price so deposited, was to be performed in such county. Gambrell v. Tatum (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 287.

Where written rental contract was executed by defendants and sent to plaintiffs, who returned it for more formal execution, which defendants refused to make, but defendants had gone into possession and both parties had performed their agreements, the contract, whether signed or not, would be effectual to deprive the defendant of his privilege. Union Woolen Mills v. Starke (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 357.

Where defendant, who alleged that the written contract was executed by defendants and sent to plaintiffs, who returned it for proper execution, but that defendants refused to re-execute it, does not show the execution of a written contract which would defeat defendants' plea of privilege. Id.

Where contract for the sale of cattle was oral, and the check given in payment was not payable in A. county, and defendant was a nonresident of A. county, there was no ground for laying the venue of an action on the contract in A. county. Whisnant v. Kurtz (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 977.
Where corn was sold over the telephone by residents of Karnes county, to be shipped to Kerr County, the contract was made there and to be performed there, and the venue of buyer's action was properly changed to such county, though buyer wrote the terms of the contract down and sent a letter of confirmation to sellers stating corn was to be billed to a point in Williamson county and demand drafts with bills of lading attached would be paid on presentation. Gottlieb v. Ainsworth (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 341.

The venue statute does not contemplate that the party bringing the suit on a contract in writing may rely on the terms of the contract as to performance by himself, but the venue depends on whether the adverse party has agreed to perform in the county of suit. Gottlieb v. Dismukes (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 732.

Where defendant telephoned an offer to sell corn to plaintiff, weight statements, bill of lading, and demand draft to be sent to W. county for delivery to and payment by plaintiff and the offer was accepted with agreement to send confirmative contract, which was sent accordingly embodying the terms of the agreement, and was retained by the defendant without objection, the contract was in writing within this subdivision. Id.

Where a contract for sale of corn by defendant, of G. county, f. o. b. there to plaintiff in W. county, weight statements, bill of lading, and demand draft on plaintiff to be sent to W. county for delivery to and payment by plaintiff, the contract was performable in its most essential features in W. county within this subdivision. Id.

In a contract for the sale of hay, a provision that all claims under the contract were to be paid at a designated place, held not to relate to the claim of the seller against the buyer for the purchase price, so that the contract was not to be performed by the buyer in the county where the claims were payable, and the buyer is entitled to be sued in the county of its residence. Strawn Merchandise Co. v. Texas Grain & Hay Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1094.

Seller's action for breach of a written contract by which seller had sold goods to be shipped to specified city was properly brought in the county in which such city was located under this subdivision; the contract being performable in such county. Landa v. F. S. Alinsa Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 175.

Objections and waiver.—See notes at head of article.

6. Executors, administrators, etc.

Representatives included.—A survivor in community is not included within the provision of this subdivision. Hurst v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 204.

Actions included.—A creditors' suit to collect a judgment from income payable under testamentary trust was not to establish 'a money demand against the estate' within this subdivision. Nunn v. Titche-Goettinger Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 890.

Objections and waiver.—See notes at head of this article.

7. Cases of fraud, and defalcation.

Place of commission of fraud or defalcation.—In an action on a promissory note, where the answer makes a non-resident company co-defendant, on the ground that the note was procured by its agent by a fraud committed in the county of the maker's residence, in which the suit is brought, and asks judgment against the company, the court has jurisdiction of the company, under this subdivision, though it had no office in that county. First Nat. Bank of Cleburne v. Turner (App.) 15 S. W. 710. Under this subdivision, suit may be brought against a vendor for having fraudulently represented that he was in a county where the sale was made, though he resided in another county. (Boothe v. Feist [Sup.] 15 S. W. 729, followed.) Boothe v. Feist (Sup.) 19 S. W. 338.

A suit to rescind a contract of sale because of seller's misrepresentations was properly brought in county where misrepresentations had been made in view of this subdivision. Calloway v. Boone & Collier (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1174.

In an action to recover money paid, wherein defendant set up a plea of privilege based on its residence, and plaintiffs filed a controverting plea, stating payment made to defendant of certain notes procured from them by the fraudulent representation that, unless they gave such notes, plaintiffs' kinman would be criminally prosecuted, which representations were made in a county other than that of defendant's residence, the plea of privilege was erroneously granted, since venue should have been laid in the latter county, under subds. 7 and 28. Richardson v. Beckham Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 142.

Habeas corpus to recover possession of grandchild, of which petitioners were wrongfully deprived by fraudulent representations to the grandchild inducing her to leave the state, is not a suit in which the fraud alleged is the gist of the action, within this subdivision. Slaughter v. Oakes (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 405.

Where broom corn seed was purchased to be delivered in the county of plaintiff's residence, in which county alleged fraudulent representations were made, the courts of that county on a plea of privilege by defendant corporation must be held to have jurisdiction of a suit for damages for fraud and deceit regardless of any defenses which defendant, though a nonresident of the county, might make as to the merits. Texas Seed & Floral Co. v. Hairrill (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 539.

Where plaintiff's own agent induced the maker of a note to draw a second draft... which the defendant bank honored and plaintiff paid, held that though the fraud of plaintiff occurred in the county in which the defendant bank did business, a right of action for such fraud was so disconnected with the right of action against defendant bank that its plea of privilege, made under this article, must be sustained. First Nat. Bank of Coleman v. Gates (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 720.

Davidson held insufficient to establish any fraud of defendant in procuring absolute deed as security, failing to show suit was maintainable, under this article, in the county of plaintiff's residence. Adams v. Wallace (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1072.

Where pledgee lived in H. county, where pledge was made and property held, and plaintiffs repaid the borrowed money, defendant agreeing to deliver the pledged diamonds in F. county, where he delivered inferior diamonds, defendant was guilty of conversion in H. county, and where plaintiffs kept the diamonds and brought action for damages, the venue was in H. county, and not in F. county, under this exception. Brooks v. Hamilton (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 28.

Where goods were sold in county by written instrument by defendants, who fraudulently represented themselves the owners, and who obtained payment by draft on bank in such county, the venue was properly laid in such county, though defendants did not reside therein, under subds. 5, 7. Harris v. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1118.

Suit by the assignee of the cause of action against defendant on implied warranty of title, and for false representations as to title was properly brought in the county where the property was when defendants sold it and where it was delivered and paid for and where the fraud in selling without title was alleged to have been perpetrated, though defendant filed plea of privilege. Harris v. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 258.

In an action for fraud in renting plaintiff pastures which contained grass or shrubs that were injurious to cattle, held, that the court erred in overruling a plea of privilege although notes given under the contract were payable in the county where action was brought, and some of them were paid there, and cancellation of the remaining notes. Hill v. Hutchison v. R. H. S. W. S. 864.

This provision does not extend to an action to impose, a constructive trust on mineral rights which the parties guilty of fraud acquired in exchange of the lands thus acquired, and then transferred to the wife of one of them, but such suit, not being based on the original fraud, must be brought in the county of the wife's residence. Reeves v. Shook (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 429.

Where lands conveyed by plaintiffs were exchanged for mineral rights, and plaintiffs, asserting they were induced to convey by fraudulent misrepresentations, sought to subject to a constructive trust the mineral rights, venue should be laid in the county of the record owner's residence, where the fraudulent conversion occurred. Id.

Plaintiff, to sustain the venue, on the ground the action is for fraud perpetrated in the county in which suit is brought, is not required to prove the fraud, but merely that a transaction which might constitute actionable fraud occurred in such county. Edmonds v. White (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 819.

Stock purchaser's action to recover purchase price on ground of fraudulent representations inducing the purchase, in view of this subdivision, was properly brought in the county in which the fraudulent representations were made, notwithstanding defendant's residence in another county. O'Neill v. Garrison (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 612.

Contract fixing venue.—See notes at head of article.

8. When attachment sued out or levied.

See Claiborne v. Pickens (App.) 16 S. W. 867: see, also, notes to subd. 9.

Wrongful suits and writs.—Under this subdivision, action for malicious prosecution and an action of attachment, in which plaintiff had a beneficial interest was properly brought in the county where levy was made, since, if the right to sue on one of the causes existed in that county, venue of the suit was properly there. Headington Auto Co. v. Hood (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 511.

9. Cases of crime, offense, or trespass.

Trespass.—Under this subdivision, the district court has jurisdiction of an action for a trespass charged to have been committed in the county, though none of the defendants reside in that county. Campbell v. Trimble, 75 Tex. 270, 12 S. W. 863.

Under this subdivision, an action for wrongful levy cannot be maintained against the sheriff's indemnitors, in a county other than that of their residence, unless the charge of misconduct against the sheriff is sustained. Hillard v. Wilson, 76 Tex. 180, 13 S. W. 25.

The injury to a pregnant woman from a wrongful assault in her presence, being in the nature of a trespass on the person of the plaintiff, is within this subdivision. Hill v. Kimball, 76 Tex. 210, 13 S. W. 59, 7 L. R. A. 618.

Under this subdivision, an action for the wrongful seizure of property under a writ of attachment may be brought in the county where the seizure took place, though none of the defendants are residents of such county. Perry v. Stephens, 77 Tex. 246, 13 S. W. 594.

Since there are no accessories in trespass, but all parties concerned are principals, and a trespass is any unauthorized entry upon the realty of another to the damage thereof, where one defendant leased land to plaintiff, and the other three defendants were in possession and refused to yield possession, their act, though an unauauthorized entry, when not connived in by the lessor, did not make her a trespasser or a joint tortfeasor to be sued in the county of her residence notwithstanding this subdivision. McCauley v. McElroy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317.

Under this subdivision, suit may be brought in the county where a person is run over and killed by an automobile, negligently driven by the owner's agent acting within the scope of his authority, "trespass" being "some wrongful act committed, and not merely a tort resulting from the negligent omission to perform a duty." Campbell v. Wylie (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 590.

Suit for damages through defendant's having procured absolute deed which he represented he would treat as security, while he intended to and did convey to an innocent purchaser, was not maintainable in the county of plaintiff's residence, where the deed was procured, on ground that defendant committed a trespass there within the meaning of this article. Adams v. Wallace (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1079.

Where a druggist ordered elixir from a drug company located in another county, and the company in good faith delivered certain poison to a carrier in that county for transportation to the druggist, the delivery was in such county, and the druggist's cause of action for breach of contract and injuries from drinking the poison arose there; drug company's conduct not constituting an "offense," "crime," or "trespass," within this subdivision. Guhn v. Texas Drug Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 507.

A petition, alleging that defendant willfully and maliciously instituted criminal proceedings against plaintiff on the charge of forgery and that on such charge plaintiff was imprisoned in the county jail, did not state a cause of action for libel and slander, but for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment, within this subdivision. Knox v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 461.

Petition for recovery for offense or "trespass" consisting of threat of criminal prosecution and abuse, or other overt acts, held to constitute an action in trespass within the exception to the venue statute. First Nat. Bank v. Childs (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 807.

10. Suits for personal property.
Cited, State v. Waller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 322.

Suit for personal property.—Parties who acquired notes after action to recover possession thereof had been brought, having acquired their rights pendente lite, were in no position to assert right to be sued in the counties of their respective residences. Wellington Railroad Committee v. Crawford (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 151.

12. Foreclosure of mortgage or other liens.
Foreclosure.—Under this subdivision, an action on notes and to foreclose chattel mortgage was properly brought in county where a part of the mortgaged property was situated. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 478.

Where a complaint in a suit by a city to foreclose a lien for taxes failed to allege that the property was in the county at the time of the commencement of the suit, it was error to overrule a plea of privilege; defendant being a nonresident. Wilson v. City of Belton (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 366.

In view of subs. 5 and 12, venue of an action to foreclose a vendor's lien may be laid in the county where the land is situated. Hurst v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 234.

Under the express provision of this subdivision, suit to recover on notes and foreclose a trust deed or mortgage securing them may be brought in the county where the land is situated, though defendant resides in another county. McGhee v. Shely (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 422.

Art. 5664, giving owners of pastures a lien on animals for pasturage, does not give the owner of a leased pasture a lien on the animals pastured thereon by the lessees, and the lessees are not deprived of their privilege to be sued in their own county under this subdivision. Broad & Pearce v. Cage (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 104.

Vendor's action to recover purchase price placed in escrow, and in the alternative for the foreclosure of his vendor's lien, was properly brought in the county in which the land was situated under this subdivision. Gambrell v. Tatum (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 287.

13. Suits for partition.—Suits for the partition of lands or other property may be brought in the county where such lands or other property or a part thereof, may be, or in the county in which one or more of the defendants reside, and any such suit for partition of lands or any other property may be brought and prosecuted in the county of the residence of any one or more of the defendants, notwithstanding any one or more of such defendants may assert an adverse interest in such property, or claim to be the owner thereof, or seek to recover the title to the same, provided that nothing herein shall be construed to fix venue of any suit whose real purpose is to recover the title to land other than in the county where such land, or part thereof, may lie, but whenever on the trial of the case, the co-tenancy of the parties or any of them is established, or becomes an issue of fact, it shall not be held that the real pur-

Took effect March 20, 1919.

Actions included.—Where petition, in trespass to try title, was insufficient, but set up cause of action for performance of contract to convey, venue must be determined as though the object of the suit was specific performance alone. Ballard v. Ellerd (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 305.

A suit to cancel a mineral lease, which conveyed to the defendant plaintiffs' mineral rights in the land, the purpose of which was to recover an interest in land and to quiet the title, was within this subdivision. Thomason v. Ham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 561.

In suit to foreclose vendor's lien, a cross-action by one defendant against codefendants, averring that plaintiff had made some kind of a contract with another for sale of the land, from which he sought to remove the cloud, was within the obvious scope of this subdivision. Shaw v. Stinson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 565.

The venue of a suit which was primarily to recover possession of land, though injunction is asked as relief ancillary to the main suit, is governed by this subdivision, not by art. 4653, requiring suits for injunction to be brought in the county of defendant's residence. Evans v. Hudson (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 491.

Where vendor's agreement to pay vendor's broker was extinguished by new agreement whereby commission was deposited in bank to broker's credit, to be paid on certain contingency, if bank wrongfully turned over the deposit to the purchaser, broker's cause of action against purchaser, if any, was for wrongful appropriation, and the venue of such action would be the county of purchaser's residence, instead of county in which land sold was situated. Meador v. Rudolph (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 520.

A suit by persons claiming to own undivided interests in land under an oral agreement with defendant, and claiming that they had been ejected by defendant, for rectification of judgment for rents and damages, was governed as to venue by this subdivision. Galbreath v. Farrell (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1015.

A suit by the owners of gas leases which vested in the lessees an interest in the lands, to have removed a cloud on their title cast by instruments filed by defendant and to have the title and possession quieted, is properly brought in the county where the land is situated under this subdivision. Stemmons v. Matthai (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 364.

Suit to obtain cancellation of an oil and gas lease held within this subdivision. Texas Co. v. Tankersley (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 672.

In a vendor's action to correct description in recorded deed on the ground of mutual mistake, and praying for that and for other relief, general and special, legal and equitable, petition held broad enough to authorize correction of description, if facts warranted, and removal of cloud cast by deed on land not intended to pass thereby, so that the suit should be treated as in the nature of an action to quiet title, falling within this subdivision. Babno v. Compton (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 240.

Objections and waiver.—See notes at head of article.

15. Breach of warranty.

See Estes v. Ferguson, 203 S. W. 941; note to subd. 4.

Application of statute.—Under this subdivision, when such an action is so brought, a plea of personal privilege by one co-defendant, to be sued in another county, where he resides, cannot be sustained. Carruthers v. Johnson (App.) 17 S. W. 1885.

17. Injunctions, etc.

Application in general.—In action against sheriff and others for misdelivery of property sold on execution, conspiracy, conversion, etc., court of another county than that in which execution was issued had no power to cancel credit on plaintiff's judgment, or to reattack costs taxed against plaintiff in sheriff's favor. Buckholts State Bank v. Thallman (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 657.

Under subsds. 17 and 30, and article 4653, suit to enjoin execution of judgment not void must be brought in county in which judgment was rendered, but where the judgment attacked is void it may be attacked in any court. Price & Beard v. Eastland County Land & Abstract Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 478.

Objections and waiver.—See notes at head of article.

24. Private corporations, associations, etc.

Cited, State v. Waller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 322.

Application in general.—Effect of stipulations in contract, see notes at head of article, and notes to subd. 29.
If the courts of J. county had venue and jurisdiction to try cause against corporation succeeded by warranty as a result of alleged breach of warranty notes shipped, the venue for the entire cause of action, with its several items of damages, was in said county. Beaumont Cotton Oil Mill Co. v. Hester (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 702.

Where there are no express provisions as to venue of civil actions against a certain class of corporations, general statutes relating to venue will govern as to such actions. State v. Waller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 322.

So much of General Orders Nos. 18 and 18a issued by the federal Director General of Railroads in 1918, as undertook to fix the venue of personal injury suits against the Director General was invalid. Hines v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 648.

The venue of suits against the Federal Agent on causes of action arising out of the operation of any particular railroad by the government is that fixed by law for the prosecution of such suits on such causes of action as if they had arisen against such carrier, under Federal Transportation Act 1920, § 206. Payne v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 537.

Agency, representative, or office.—See Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 690; notes to art. 1851.

Under this subdivision, an action against a railway company on its bond conditioned to return certain subscriptions was properly begun in S. county. It appeared that its treasurer and agent had an office in S. county, where he kept the money and some of the books of the company. Red River, S. & W. Ry. Co. v. Blount, 3 Civ. App. 282, 22 S. W. 930.

When the Legislature has not given a local habitation to a corporation in establishing it, it should be sued where it has its place of business and where its principal business is transacted. State v. Waller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 322.

Terms of commission contract and evidence held to constitute corporation local agents of foreign corporation, so that suit against foreign corporation was properly brought in county in which agents were located, as authorized by art. 1850, § 24, and art. 1851, the new foreign corporation had main office in other county. Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 690.

Where rice growers sued a corporation which had sold rice for them for proceeds unpaid because of a lien asserted thereon by an irrigation company, which was also made a defendant, the action was properly brought in a county where the corporation had an agent, in view of subds. 4 and 24. Trousdale v. Southern Rice Growers' Ass'n (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 322.

A local merchant, who sold machinery to a corporation having its headquarters in another county, was an agent or representative of the corporation; hence under this subdivision, action for breach of warranty might be maintained in the county wherein plaintiff and the merchant resided. Avery Co. of Texas v. Wakefield (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 875.

The term "local agent," as used in the statute relating to venue, means a person who represents a corporation in the promotion of the business for which it was incorporated, etc. Id.

Where an unincorporated common-law association has an agent and representative in a certain county, it is not entitled to be sued in another county wherein its headquarters are located, in view of this subdivision. Cotton States Petroleum Co. v. Britton (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 742.

Railroad line within county.—Under this subdivision, a railway company may be sued in a county through which it operates its road, and in which it has an agent, though the cause of action arose in another county. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Horne, 69 Tex. 643, 9 S. W. 440.

Under this subdivision, and Act April 2, 1887, the district court of S. county, through which the road of a railroad corporation extended, had authority to appoint a receiver, though the principal office of the corporation was in A. county. Bonner v. Hearne, 75 Tex. 242, 12 S. W. 38.

Place where cause arose in general.—Under Act Cong. Aug. 29, 1916, and Act March 21, 1918, section 9, the President's appointment of a Director General, and the orders of the Director General Nos. 18, 18a, and 26. In effect requiring suits against carriers under federal control to be brought in the county wherein plaintiff resided at the time of the injury, or where the cause of action arose, and prohibiting trial of a suit brought in any other county, are valid. Rhodes v. Tatum (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 114.

A "cause of action," within this provision, is not confined to the genesis of the right, and does not comprise every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove each fact, but it embraces every fact necessary to be shown in order to recover. San Jacinto Life Ins. Co. v. Boyd (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 482.

Under this statute, plaintiff, bringing action in good faith, is entitled to invoke the venue that accords with the allegations in its petition, regardless of possibility that venue may fall with the suit upon plaintiff's failure to sustain the merits of the suit. Diamond Mill Co. v. Adamr-Childers Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 176.

This exception did not require granting a change of venue where, under the evidence on the plea, the acts chiefly resulting in the injuries alleged by the plaintiff were performed, if at all, in the county where suit was brought. First Nat. Bank v. Childs (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 807.

Place of contract or performance.—Within this subdivision, the cause of action for a breach of contract consists of the contract and its breach, and the requirement that part of the cause of action must have arisen in the county where the suit is brought is satisfied by proof that the contract was made in that county. Early-Foster Co. v. A. P. 499.

Under this subdivision, where defendant corporation fails to sell produce consigned to it by plaintiff as agreed with him by its agent, an action therefor may be brought in the county in which the agreement was made. Western Wool Commission Co. v. Hart (Sup.) 20 S. W. 131.

In suit against corporation domiciled in another county, held, under evidence, that contract was consummated in T. county, so that court properly overruled plea of privilege, although breach did not occur in such county. In view of this subdivision. Cuero Cotton Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Feeder's Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 73.

Under article, a private corporation may be sued for breach of contract to furnish goods in the county where the contract was made through its agents, and the goods were to be delivered, even if it had to be ratified by it; part of the cause of action arising there. Cummer Mfg. Co. v. Kellam Bros. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 463.

Under this subdivision, a private corporation may be sued in a county wherein it failed to deliver goods pursuant to a contract made therein by its authorized agents and ratified without change. Cummer Mfg. Co. v. Lilly (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1010.

Where contract for sale of hay was made at Bexar county, the seller being private corporation, buyer's suit for breach could be brought in Bexar county, under this subdivision. J. A. Hughes Grain Co. v. Jelm Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 730.

Where contract of sale was entered into in D. county, and seed was sent by common carrier to K. county, and buyer was damaged in latter county from fact that seed was not that contracted for, cause of action arose in K. county, under this exception, only in case delivery was in K. county. Texas Seed & Floral Co. v. Schnoutze (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 452.

Petition held not to state primarily a suit for rescission of contract for delivery of peanuts, weights and grades "guaranteed" at destination, but a cause of action for breach of contract occurring in county of destination, so, the cause of action arose there within this subdivision. Beaumont Cotton Mill Co. v. Hester (Civ. App.) 310 S. W. 702.

Under this subdivision, suit against defendant corporation for breach of implied warranty of kind of seeds sold by it was properly brought in the county where the seeds were planted and the damage from their failure occurred. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Boettenhamer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 972.

Under this subdivision, suit against defendant corporation for breach of implied warranty of kind of seeds sold by it was properly brought in the county in and around which he was to perform services, and for part of which he was paid in the county, in which he made his office headquarters; "arose" referring to every fact which has arisen and inures in the cause of action. San Jacinto Life Ins. Co. v. Boyd (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 452.

Under this statute, an action against corporation seller for refusal to deliver was properly brought in county in which the negotiations for the goods were made, and the purported acceptance by buyer of seller's offer was mailed, and to which goods were to be transported. Diamond Mill Co. v. Adams-Childers Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 176.

Where a contract of employment, made by a corporation with its employee, is made in a certain county, venue of a personal injury action against the corporation is properly laid within such county, within this subdivision. C. C. Slaughter Cattle Co. v. Pas- trana (App.) 217 S. W. 779.

Where company agreed by telephone to sell cotton seed oil, and subsequently the sale was confirmed in writing by the seller at its domicile, and the contract sent to the purchaser and accepted by it in the county of its domicile, acceptance took place in the latter county, and action for breach was properly brought in such county, within this subdivision. Houston Packing Co. v. Cuero Cotton Oil & Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 394.

Where plaintiff in C. county offered iron for sale, acceptance of final offer of private corporation was in C. county, and the "cause of action or part thereof" arose in C. county, and the county court of such county had jurisdiction of an action for the price. Under this exception. Texas Supply Co. v. Clarke (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 578.

As respects venue, a contract with an incorporated college by letters and telegrams was made in C. where plaintiff's letter and telegram, accepting defendant's offer by letter and telegram, was sent from C. Ayewsworth v. Peacock Military College (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 866.

Part of cause of action for breach of a warranty made at the time of oral sale held to arise in the county of buyer's residence, within this subdivision; hence, though defendant's headquarters were in another county, action might be maintained in the county of plaintiff's residence, notwithstanding he signed a writing purporting to order the tractor to be shipped from without the state. Avery Co. of Texas v. Wakefield (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 875.

Where plaintiff, of H. county, sued corporation domiciled in G. county, alleging that through his agent he ordered winter turf oats, and that they proved to be common white oats, the court held to have erred in overruling defendant's plea of privilege under this exception. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Shook (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 955.

Under subds. 24, 28, defendant corporation having agreed to pay plaintiff an agreed commission for finding buyer for oil, he may sue it in a county in which he found one who accepted the terms, though defendant failed to sign the contract with the cus-tomber, which was to be done in another county. Duncan v. Smith (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 909.

The contract is made at the place where the acceptance of the offer is given. Early-Foster Co. v. A. P. Moore’s Sons (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 787.

An acceptance of an offer communicated over the telephone by the acceptor in one county and to which the offeror in another county was made by the offeror in the county to which the offeror was, so that, for purpose of venue, the contract was made in that county. Id.

25. Suits for damages against two or more railroad, etc., companies or receivers, etc.

In general.—In so far as General Orders 18 and 18a of the Director General of Railroads, relating to the venue of suits against carriers while under federal control, restrict the right created by Congress to maintain a suit in any court of competent jurisdiction, they are invalid. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Lovick, 110 Tex. 244, 218 S. W. 485.

The order of the Director General of Railroads that suits against carriers while under federal control be brought in the county or district where plaintiff resided, or the cause of action accrued, is contrary to the act of Congress (U. S. Comp. St. 1918, U. S. Comp. St. Ann. Supp. 1919, §§ 3115%h-3115%). Providing that actions may be brought as now provided by law.” Pullman Co. v. Uribe (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 189.

In view of Federal Control Act March 21, 1918, § 10 (U. S. Comp. St. 1918, U. S. Comp. St. Ann. Supp. 1919, § 3115%), passenger’s action for injuries sustained during federal control was not required to be brought either in the county in which the accident occurred or in the county in which passenger lived, as commanded by General Orders of Director General Nos. 18 and 18a, since the state law authorized maintenance of such suit in another county. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Turner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 383.

Injury to freight or other property.—This subdivision does not require the apportionment of damage, where defendants have not filed pleadings asking apportionment. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Kemp (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 605.

In an action against connecting carriers for damage to shipment under this subdivision, the last carrier is presumed to have been at fault and has burden of proving itself not at fault, or proving the proportion of damage for which it was not at fault, in which case the burden of proof is shifted to the next preceding carrier to acquit itself in the same way. Crenwelge v. Ponder (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 145.

Where initial carrier limited its liability to damage occurring on its line and did not receive goods on through contract, it was not jointly liable under art. 731, with connecting carriers for damages to shipment during transportation; this subdivision being applicable in such case. Id.

Where shipment was made on through bill of lading over several lines, the last of which extended into the county where suit was brought, held, that court erred in not sustaining a plea of privilege filed by other railroads, where the shipment had been taken by a sheriff before it had ever been delivered to the terminal carrier; the ship­ment not being “transported” by such last carrier within the meaning of this subdivision. Payne v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 537.

A petition, brought in the county to which the terminal railroad alone ran, and which alone had representatives or agents therein, must allege “transportation” by such railroad in order to bring the case within this subdivision, which would permit the other roads to be sued where they were not otherwise suable. Id.

26. Suits for personal injuries, against railroad corporations, assignees, receivers, etc.

Application in general.—By virtue of General Orders, Nos. 18, 18a, and 50 of the Director General of Railroads, suit may be brought against the Director General in the county where plaintiff resides, though the railroad involved in the suit does not run through the county. Hines v. Avant & Coughran (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 821.

Agency.—Agents of a subsidiary domestic railroad company having a principal office in a certain county were not representatives of the foreign railroad, owning majority of stock in subsidiary road, to render foreign company suable for personal injuries in that county. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Stevens (Sup.) 206 S. W. 921; Same v. Ayers (Sup.) 206 S. W. 922.

Railroads included.—Where several railroads were under one management and each operated trains over the road of the other, the court had jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the parties and properly enjoined one of the companies whose road was out of the state but which was operating its trains over the road of the other within the county when it injured plaintiff. Louisiana Western R. Co. v. White (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 754.

28. Foreign, private or public corporations, etc.

Application in general.—See Duncan v. Smith (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 909; notes to subd. 24, 26, 27.

Under this paragraph, and arts. 1861, 1862, a foreign railroad corporation which main­tained a general manager within the state of Texas, who by letter and telegram directed 501 the movement of its trains in other states, and under whom there was a force of em-

In an action to recover payment on certain notes procured by fraudulent representation made in a county other than that of defendant's residence, the plea of privilege was erroneously granted, since venue should have been laid in the latter county, within

A foreign railway company is not suable in a county in which it has no agency or representative for injuries sustained by a nonresident occurring in another state. Atch-
270, 206 S. W. 222.

29. Fire, marine, life and accident insurance companies.

Application in general.—Jurisdiction of a suit against a life insurance company in a county where it has an agent, under subd. 24, is not affected by this subdivision, nor by Rev. St. art. 2892, relating to the county, venue, and manner of service in suits against

Stipulations in policy.—Stipulations between an accident insurer and its policy holder for exclusive venue in the county of the insurer's residence do not control, under subd.
543, 212 S. W. 630.

An insurance company cannot enforce a provision of its policy and by-laws prohibiting the multiplicity of its policies elsewhere than in the county of its domicile; such contract stipulation being contrary to public policy. International Travelers' Ass'n v. Powell, 109 Tex. 550, 212 S. W. 931.

30. Venue prescribed by particular law.

Venue expressly given.—Under art. 1830, subds. 17 and 30, and art. 4653, suit to enjoin execution of judgment not void must be brought in county in which judgment was rendered, but where the judgment attacked is void it may be attacked in any court.

Art. 1832. If plea sustained, no dismissal, but transfer.

See Poindexter v. First State Bank of Richland (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 509; Brooks
v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 258; United States Fidelity &
Guaranty Co. of Baltimore, Md., v. Lowry (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 222.

Transfer.—See Camp v. Gourley (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 671; notes to art. 1833.

After order allowing change of venue under arts. 1832, 1833, plaintiff must effect

Where a suit was brought for circulation of a libel in T. county against defendant domiciled in M. county, and defendant pleaded privilege, and plaintiff in an amended petition alleged circulation of the libel in H. county without praying removal thereto, and the court found it had not been circulated in T. county, the case should have been transferred to M. county, and it was error to transfer it to H. county, in view of arts.
1832, 1833, 1902, and art. 1903 amended by Acts 35th Leg. c. 176. Shear Co. v. Neely
(Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 573.

Under this article, no party properly in suit can be dismissed from the action on

Under this article, the plea being by defendants in cross-action brought in by crossbill of original defendant on an original cause of action against them alone, the cross-action alone is properly transferred. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Littlejohn (Civ.
App.) 238 S. W. 565.

Requiring election.—When defendants raised question of misjoinder of causes of action in connection with plea of privilege to be sued in other county, if court thought there was misjoinder, it should have required plaintiff to elect between causes of action, and determined question of venue after election had been made, etc. Buckholts

Art. 1833. When plea sustained, order changing venue, record transmitted.

See Poindexter v. First State Bank of Richland (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 509; Brooks
v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 258; Shear Co. v. Neely (Civ.
App.) 214 S. W. 573; Lewis & Knight v. Florence (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1116.

Transfer in general.—Although defendant secured transfer of cause on plea of privilege, it was plaintiff's duty to see that transfer was actually effected within rea-

After order allowing change of venue under arts. 1832, 1833, plaintiff must effect actual transfer within reasonable time. Id.
Where after change of venue was ordered plaintiff was informed by clerk that papers could not be found, it was plaintiff's duty to ascertain from clerk of other county whether transfer had been effected. Id.

That defendant's counsel inquired of clerk regarding change of venue ordered did not show acquiescence in plaintiff's delay in having records transferred. Id.

This article is directory merely, and need not be strictly complied with where cross-action alone is transferred, and cross-bill and answer to original action is in the same paper. National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Littlejohn (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 596.

Defendant's claim of privilege to have action determined in another county, asserted by plea in abatement, is waived by his invoking action of the court on the general demurrer, and abiding by its act in sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the action; whereas, if it had merely sustained the plea of privilege, it would under this article, have transferred the case. Martin v. Kieschnick (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 330.

Several defendants.—If there is misjoinder of parties and causes of action in suit brought in county of one defendant's residence, transfer of entire case to another county in which another defendant resides is erroneous. Kunz v. Ragsdale (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 265.

In view of arts. 1832 and 1833, where a suit for rescission of a contract was brought against several parties, and the plea of privilege interposed by one of them was sustained, it was error to dismiss as to one of the parties upon the merits, but the entire case as to all parties should have been transferred to the court wherein that defendant resided who successfully made plea of privilege. Camp v. Gourley (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 671.

When a separate cause of action is improperly attempted to be joined by defendant's cross-action against an additional party, the transfer of the cause against such party to the county to his residence does not carry the other cause to such county. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Boatenhamer (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 972.

Where defendant filed a cross-action against other parties who filed a plea of privilege, and plaintiff pleaded misjoinder of causes by reason of such cross-action, and plea of privilege improperly sustained, but plea of misjoinder was not sustained, the cross-action should not have been dismissed, but should have been transferred to proper county for trial. Braley v. Samuels (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 684.

As to two defendants living in different counties and each entitled to succeed on his plea of privilege, one agreeing to transfer of the cause to the county of the other's domicile, transfer should be made thereto as to both. Rutledge v. Evans (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 218.

Where the controversies between plaintiff and one set of defendants and those between plaintiff and another set of defendants are severable, one set may succeed on their pleas of privilege, though plaintiff is entitled as against the others to have the action tried where brought. Id.

Under this article, where the plea of part only of defendants is sustained, all papers relating to the cause of action against them are to be sent, though this includes papers relating to the cause against the others. Id.

Appeal.—There being sufficient facts to justify the findings, determination of the jury against a defendant on an issue of fact on plea of privilege is conclusive against him on appeal. Rutledge v. Evans (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 218.

The appellate court on appeal from judgment against pleas of privilege has power to send part of the case where the trial court should have sent it, and return the other part to the trial court for trial. Id.

PARTIES TO SUITS

Art. 1835. Suits by and against counties, etc.

1836. Suits by executors, etc.

1837. Suits for land against decedents.

1838. Suits for wife's separate property.

1840. Against husband and wife, for necessaries, etc.

1841. For wife's debts, etc.

1842. Several obligors to any contract may be joined, etc.

Art. 1843. Parties conditionally liable may be sued, when.

1844. Sheriffs, etc., sued may make indemnitors parties.

1845. Sureties on official bonds, when joined.

1848. Additional parties may be brought in, when.

Article 1835. [1196] [1200] Suits by and against counties, cities, etc. Actions by or for use of county.—Where no statute gives county or district attorneys power to sue in behalf of a county, the commissioners' court alone has the right to determine whether a suit shall be brought. Edmondson v. Cumings (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 428.
Art. 1835  COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN

Suit against county.—Where the commissioners' court refuses to allow a claim against the county, the remedy is by direct suit against the county. Martin v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 653.

Garnishment and execution.—Execution should not be awarded against municipal corporation on judgment secured by holders of municipal bonds.—City of Laredo v. Pringle (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 190.

Liability and consent of state to be sued.—When the state makes a contract, it is bound as much as a citizen would be bound by a like contract, notwithstanding the state cannot be sued without permission. State v. Elliott (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 695.

Art. 1836. [1197] [1201] Suits by executors, etc.

Authority of administrator to sue.—To cancel deed.—An administrator cannot sue to set aside a conveyance made by his intestate with intent to defraud creditors, though the estate is insolvent, as the fraudulent grantor could not have done so, and under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1201, the administrator can sue only in those cases in which his intestate could have so done. Wilson v. Demander, 71 Tex. 609, 9 S. W. 678.

Jurisdiction of suit.—District court had jurisdiction of suit by administrator with will annexed to have partitioned and set aside to estate, for purpose of administration, as against children of former wife, interest of estate in certain land, and authority to render decree establishing interest of parties and decreeing land incapable of partition and ordering it sold in view of arts. 1836, 6111. Boese v. Parkhill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 120.

Executor or administrator need not be joined, when.—In trespass to try title brought by heirs of owner against his widow's devisees, it was not error to refuse to join the executors under the widow's will; such executors having no interest in the property. Stiles v. Hawkins (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 89.

In trespass to try title to deceased's homestead, it is not necessary to join administrator, especially where a previous suit had determined creditors and administrator had no interest in the property. Clark v. Scott (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 728.

Right of heirs to sue.—Failure of administrator of the seller of lands, mortgage on which was foreclosed, so that the consideration failed, to bring suit until the cause of action against the buyer was barred, authorized the seller's daughter, as heir, inheritor of the debt against the buyer, to bring suit, though the administrator may not have been discharged. Smith v. Price (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 836.

Heirs not necessary parties, when.—See East v. Dugan, 79 Tex. 329, 15 S. W. 273; notes to art. 1837.

In view of this article, it was not necessary, in suit by administrator with will annexed to partition land of estate in which children of deceased's second wife had certain interest, to make children of deceased's third and surviving wife parties, to bind them by decree entered. Boese v. Parkhill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 120.

Art. 1837. [1198] [1202] Suits for land against decedents.

Construction.—The plaintiff company brought suit against the executors and heirs of B. H. E. to quiet the title to certain land. Held, that under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1202, the heirs were necessary parties to the suit. Russell v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 65 Tex. 646, 5 S. W. 660.

Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1202, 1943,—a mortgage creditor may sue the executor for foreclosure, without making the heirs of the deceased mortgagee parties. Howard v. Johnson, 69 Tex. 655, 7 S. W. 522.

The heirs are not necessary parties to an action to cancel a tax-deed by the executor and sole devisee, in which defendant files a plea in reconvention in the nature of a counter-action of trespass to try title in view of Rev. St. 1879, art. 1202. Lufkin v. City of Galveston, 73 Tex. 340, 11 S. W. 340.

Though under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1201, an administrator or executor may sue to recover land without joining the heirs, yet when the defendant in such a suit asks affirmative relief in his answer he becomes a plaintiff to the extent of such relief, and, if he fails to comply with the requirements of art. 1202, by making the heirs of the estate parties, a judgment in his favor will not operate to divest the title of the estate. East v. Dugan, 79 Tex. 329, 15 S. W. 273.

Art. 1839. [1200] [1204] Suits for wife's separate property.

Cited, Lee v. Turner, 71 Tex. 264, 9 S. W. 149.

Actions by husband.—A husband, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1204, may sue alone to have declared a vendor's lien on land alleged to have formerly belonged to the husband and his wife, and to have been sold by them to defendants. Meyer v. Smith, 2 Civ. App. 37, 21 S. W. 995.

If land conveyed to a wife by deed reciting it to be her separate property was held in trust for husband, a suit could be maintained by him, if it was necessary to set aside or correct deed before suing for the interest claimed. Markum v. Markum (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 835.

This article is not in conflict with or repealed by Acts 36th Leg. (1917) c. 104, art. 4021, and the husband may therefore sue for personal injury to the wife, though the damages are her separate property under Acts 34th Leg. (1915) c. 54, art. 462a.

Pullman Co. v. Cox (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 559.

In a husband's action for injuries to his wife under this article, the petition need not allege that the suit is brought by the husband as agent of the wife or for her ben-et.

The authority conferred on the husband by this article, to sue for the recovery of the wife's separate property, only makes him her agent for the protection of her property and confers no authority to interfere with her management, control, or dispos-tion of the property. Id.

Actions by wife.—By the terms of arts. 1839, 4621, the wife may sue in her own name by authority of the court when the husband fails or neglects so to do, and when the wife is abandoned by the husband or he refuses to sue she may prosecute suit in her own name for the protection of rights of person or property; but, in order to enable the wife to sue alone, she must not only allege failure or neglect on the part of her husband to join her in the suit, but also that the property is her separate estate. Dar-more v. Darragh (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 522.

Joinder of husband and wife.—Where a husband joins with his wife in a suit for her separate property, and a judgment is rendered against him, he may alone prosecute an appeal, since he is authorized by Rev. St. 1879, art. 1204, to sue either alone or jointly with his wife for the recovery of her separate property, and the appeal is in effect a continuation of the suit for the wife's benefit. Corley v. Renz (Civ. App.)
24 S. W. 925.

Husband having no interest in subject-matter, being joined with his wife to meet requirements of law, is only "nominal party," and where he alone executes appeal bond appeal will not be considered. Boese v. Parkhill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 120.

Suits as to community property.—Where a trunk containing baggage of the husband and wife, most of which was community property, and part of which belonged to the wife, was lost by the innkeeper, both husband and wife could sue to recover the damage in the same suit. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 164.

When a husband is proven untrue to the trust conferred on him by the laws of the state in the management of the community property, and is ruthlessly defrauding his lawful wife of her means of support and lavishing her property on the companion of his lust, the outraged wife should have the courts thrown open for her protection.
Coss v. Coss (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 127.

A wife is not a necessary party to suit upon a note given for a community debt and to foreclose a mortgage on community property. Chandler v. Young (Civ. App.)
216 S. W. 484.

In such action a husband has the right to answer for his wife, though she has not been cited. Id.

A husband has no right to appear for his wife in such action, so as to give the court jurisdiction to render personal judgment against the wife. Id.

In a suit by the vendor to recover under his reserved title land sold to the com-unity of a husband and wife, the wife is not a necessary party. Lewright v. Reese
(Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 270.

The wife is not a necessary party to trespass to try title against the husband as to community property, though he is insane, they having children so that title to the property does not pass to her by reason of his insanity, and she not having given the bond necessary for exclusive management and control to pass to her. Howell v.
Fidelity Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 181.

Wife is not a necessary party to an action against husband to try the title to, affect an interest in, or foreclose a lien on community real estate. Cooley v. Miller (Com.
App.) 228 S. W. 1056.

Art. 1840. [1201] [1205] Against husband and wife, for necessaries, etc.

Liability for necessaries.—That husband has furnished wife with whom minor children are living sufficient money for necessaries for herself and the children, held not to defeat his liability to person furnishing necessaries for the children. Sanger Bros.
v. Trammell (Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 1175.

Art. 1841. [1202] [1206] For wife's debts, etc.

Construed.—The husband must be joined in action against a married woman for negligent performance of her contract with the tenant of her 'separate property for repairs thereof, whereby the tenant's goods were injured. Whitney Hardware Co. v.
McMahan (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 1117.

Evidence.—In a suit to cancel a deed, brought against a feme sole, evidence held sufficient to prove the coverture of the woman prior to judgment, rendering the judgment ineffectual for lack of joinder of her husband. Powell v. Dyer (Civ. App.) 227
S. W. 731.

Art. 1842. [1203] [1207] Several obligors to any contract may be joined, but, etc.

Construction and application.—In view of art. 587, as to suing indorsers jointly with the principal obligors, and this article, an action by the payee against the maker, and a guarantor by separate instrument, for delinquent interest and attorney's fees, prior to maturity of the note, is not separable so as to entitle nonresident guarantor to removal of the cause. Parlin & Orendorff Implement Co. v. Frey (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1143.

Under arts. 1842 and 1897, a judgment cannot ordinarily be had against a person secondarily liable until a judgment is had against the principal obligor. Snyder v. Slaughter (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 574.

May sue one or more joint promissors.—Under arts. 1842, 1843, 6336, 6337, creditor company properly joined in one suit its debtor and the surety who signed with the debtor a purported guaranty of account. Dodd v. W. T. Rawleigh Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 131.

Additional parties.—If the holder of the note sued guaranteeing indorser, alleging that the maker was only an accommodation maker, it was right of the guaranteeing indorser to have the maker made a party for the determination of that issue. Moore v. Belt (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 225.

Pleading.—Under Vernon’s Sayles’ Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 1842, 1897, plea by principal of bond, contractor for building, which will release him if established, will also release sureties and will inure to their benefit whether or not urged in separate plea. Garrett v. Dodson (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 675.

When principal and sureties are sued in same action on same contract, if principal pleads facts showing nonliability, whether same facts are pleaded by sureties, they can urge on appeal nonliability under principal’s plea. Id.

Dismissal of parties.—Where action to foreclose chattel mortgage was brought against mortgagor and purchasers of the mortgaged property, the purchasers cannot complain of the dismissal of the suit as to the mortgagor, who had not been served with citation as joint obligors upon a contract, and it was immaterial that such purchasers had asked for a judgment over against the mortgagor, the rendition of a personal judgment against the mortgagor not being essential to the foreclosure, and art. 1897, having no application. Smith v. Wall (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 769.

Art. 1843. [1204] [1208] Parties conditionally liable may be sued when.

In general.—Under arts. 1842, 1843, 6336, 6337, creditor company properly joined in one suit its debtor and the surety who signed with the debtor a purported guaranty of account. Dodd v. W. T. Rawleigh Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 131.

If the holder of the note sued guaranteeing indorser, alleging that the maker was only an accommodation maker, it was right of the guaranteeing indorser to have the maker made a party for the determination of that issue. Moore v. Belt (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 225.

By this article, any surety or guarantor may be sued without joining his principal, when the latter resides beyond the limits of the state. Simons v. Ware (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 858.

Under arts. 1842, 6336, 6337, only in case of a conditional guaranty, and not where the guaranty is absolute, need the principal be sued before the guarantor, or joined in the action against him. Smith v. Cummer Mfg. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 338.

Insolvency of principal.—Indorsers on a note secured by vendor’s lien are discharged if the maker is not sued as required by art. 579, before expiration of second term of court, and it is not shown that the land is of no value as security for the debt, under this article. Prince v. Colvin (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 637.

Art. 1844. [1204] [1208] Sheriff, constable, etc., sued for damages, may make indemnitors parties, etc.

Construction and operation.—On appeal from a refusal of continuance to obtain service under this act, where the record shows an order granting the sheriff leave to make the principal and surety parties defendant, it will be presumed that the order was made upon such a proper showing of facts bringing the case within the statute as would authorize the granting of a continuance, although this does not appear affirmatively of record. Raines v. Herring, 63 Tex. 468, 5 S. W. 389.

Where a sheriff availed himself of this statute, and judgment having been rendered against the sheriff, and also directly against the creditor in favor of the plaintiff, only the creditor appealed, a reversal as to the creditor would necessitate a reversal as to the sheriff. Hamilton v. Prescott, 72 Tex. 565, 11 S. W. 548.

Art. 1845. [1205] Sureties on official bonds, when joined.—In any suit brought by the State of Texas, or any county of said State, or any city, or any independent school district of said state against any officer, who has held an office for more than one term, or against any depository which has been such depository for more than one term, or has given more than one official bond, the sureties on each and all such bonds may be joined as defendants in one and the same suit, whenever it is alleged in the petition that it is difficult to determine when the default sued for occurred and which set of sureties on such official bonds is liable therefor. [Acts 1891, p. 86; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 19, § 1, amending art. 1845, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 1848. [1208] [1209] Additional parties may be brought in.

Bringing in new parties—in general.—In action against receiver of railroad company for death of passenger injured by express company's truck which, being left close to tracks, was struck by approaching train, receiver, having no right of action against express company, cannot implead it as defendant. Andrews v. Rice (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 666.

In city's action to recover delinquent taxes not assessed until after defendant bought the land under warranty deed, it is proper to permit the answer to make the warrantors parties in the absence of affirmative showing of delay by so doing. City of San Antonio v. Terrill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 361.

Purchaser of property subject to mechanics' lien, in suit by indorsor of notes upon and to enforce lien, had right on timely application to make party original contractor, who subsequently purchased property from original owner, who gave notes and lien, but waived right by proceeding to trial without making application. Hartfield v. Greber (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 85.

In a suit to foreclose a vendor's lien, a stranger to the notes holding an adverse claim to the estate conveyed by plaintiff cannot be made a party for the purpose of trying his adverse claim. Shaw v. Stinson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 905.

The courts will not allow a party to be joined in when the issue to be joined is on separate contracts in which there is no privity between the parties, and where to sustain the cause requires separate allegations; but where there is such a privity that no harm will result and where no material or substantial change or other unnecessary burden is imposed, the parties will be held properly joined. National Surety Co. v. Atascosa Ice, Water & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 597.

Where exception to petition to determine riparian water rights had been properly sustained, and there was no offer to amend, there was no error in refusing continuance to bring in riparian owners and contractual water right owners under this article, there being no case left to continue, and such owners not being necessary parties to the suit. Ward County Water Improvement Dist. No. 2, v. Ward County Irr. Dist. No. 1 (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 665.

Application and proceedings thereon.—The substitution of federal agent appointed under Transportation Act 1920 as defendant, though made without notice held sufficient where such notice was waived by an appearance by the attorneys who signed the pleadings for the Director General and represented the agent at the trial, making objection and taking bills of exceptions. Payne v. White House Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 417.

Mode of bringing in new parties.—An amendment may introduce new parties plaintiff or defendant. Foster v. Wright (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1090.

Rights and liabilities of parties brought in.—In trespass to try title, defendants' vendor being in court, and having made separate answer, defendants were properly allowed to plead his covenants of warranty to them, and to ask judgment against him thereon in the event of a judgment against them for the land, under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1206 and 4788. Kirby v. Estill, 75 Tex. 484, 12 S. W. 807.

Time for bringing in new parties.—If objection is made, additional parties cannot be brought in after the case is called for trial, though no delay will be caused thereby, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1209. Reagan v. Copeland, 78 Tex. 551, 14 S. W. 1031.

When party sought to be impleaded by defendant was not a necessary party, denial of defendant's petition to implead such party, filed shortly before trial and more than year after filing of plaintiff's petition, was not abuse of trial court's discretion. Andrews v. Rice (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 666.

Substitution.—Plaintiff, in an action for injury to a railroad employee during federal control, pending at termination of federal control, is not deprived of a vested right by Act Cong. Feb. 28, 1920, § 206, providing for substitution of different agent as defendant to represent the government; this relating merely to the remedy. Hines v. Collins (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 332.

Though the President under Act Cong. Feb. 28, 1920, § 206, appoints the Director General as agent against whom action may be brought or prosecuted after termination of federal control, there should be a formal substitution of him in his capacity as agent in an action pending at termination of federal control, in the absence of voluntary appearance by his duly constituted agents acting for him in his new capacity. Id. 507
1. Persons who may or must sue as plaintiffs—Capacity and interest in general.—Vendor who has received no part of the consideration has sufficient title to maintain a suit to remove cloud from the title. Masterson v. Pullen (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 537.

A taxpayer cannot sue to cancel bonds of an irrigation district without alleging and proving that the board of directors has refused to sue. White v. Fahring (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 193.

Generally a person may assume a fictitious or artificial business name, or even the real names of other natural persons, in making contracts; and, where the contract is not inconsistent with such theory, recovery may be had by the person really contracting under the assumed name. Martin v. Hemphill (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 383.

A married woman has no legal capacity to sue as next friend on behalf of her minor son, where her husband, who is the minor's stepfather, refuses to sue or join in the suit. Carroll v. Embry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 575.

9. — Agent.—A broker has no such interest in a written contract between the principals as would entitle her to specific performance, even assuming that one principal was entitled to that remedy. Hume v. Bogle (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 673.

The undisclosed principal may sue a third party, with whom his agent has contracted, to enforce his rights under the contract. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Boatem­hamer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 972.

12. — Extent of interest.—Where bailee brings an action for damages to property the right to recover for damages beyond those suffered by him as bailee or lessee must rest upon the theory of agency and, if defendant settles with the owner the bailee can only recover the amount of his own damage. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Hunter (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 1107.

13. Trustee and others holding legal title.—Where a trust deed was silent as to the purposes of the trust and the identity of the cestui, it would be presumed that the trustor was empowered to sue and be sued in his own name. Schuster v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 327.

Where trustee seeks to repudiate the trust, the beneficiary may sue to enforce the trust. Warren v. Parlin-Orendorff Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 588.

14. Numerous parties, one or more suing for all.—Class suits may be maintained in which one or more persons in a particular class, having a common interest in the subject-matter, sue in behalf of themselves and all others of the class. City of Dallas v. Armour & Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 222.

Persons named in the record in a class suit are parties; but others of the class, although interested, are not parties. Id.

15. Persons who may join as plaintiffs—in general.—To recover for services as a joint cause of action, plaintiffs must show a copartnership or other interest giving such right. Paine v. Eckhardt (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 459.

Where plaintiffs who had each purchased a half section of land agreed jointly with lessee, that he should have grass for grazing purposes, the relation of landlord and tenant was established, and plaintiffs were properly joined as plaintiffs in action for rent. Marshall v. Magness (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 641.

In suit to enjoin live stock inspectors from requiring the dipping of cattle several cattle owners had the right to join in asking the relief sought. Castleman v. Rainey (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 630.

19. Persons who must join as plaintiffs—in general.—In suit to cancel, for fraud, deeds of plaintiff and his son-in-law, which conveyed lands owned by them, all of which plaintiffs were authorized by his son-in-law to contract for, it was not necessary to join them as parties. Perkins v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 551.

In a death action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665), all beneficiaries must be joined in a single suit, and thus the question of negligence vel non must be determined as to all. Davis v. Wight (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 26.

In an action to cancel an oil lease in the absence of evidence showing a transfer of some interest in the land or the leased premises to plaintiff, there was clearly a defect of parties plaintiff. McKay v. Peterson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 178.

A conveyance of part of the land by plaintiff pending a suit in trespass to try title did not abate the suit as to the land conveyed or make the grantee a necessary party to the litigation. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 177.

22. — Partners, when.—In action for trespass to property owned by two brothers, both should join. Bassham v. Evans (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 446.

22 1/2. — Trustees and beneficiaries.—While the beneficiary is usually a necessary party in suits by or against a trustee to recover trust property, he is not where it may be presumed that it was the intention to invest the trustee with power to prosecute and defend suits in his own name. Schuster v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 327.
In suits by or against a trustee for recovery of trust property, cestuis que trust are generally necessary parties. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 540.

Where a note is held for the benefit of another, the beneficial owner is not a necessary party to the suit, nor need holder of legal title sue as trustee or state that he sues for the benefit of the equitable owner. Rabb v. Seidel (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 607.

24. Actions for broker's commissions.-Realty broker, not party to a firm of brokers, but commonly associated with them, and entitled to even division of commission sued for by firm, was neither necessary nor proper party. Hodde v. Malohe Real Estate Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 347.

In action by brokers for commission, brokers' agent who was to get a part of the commission was not a necessary party plaintiff, since he was not a partner. Brady v. Richen & Casey (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 170.

Though broker agreed to pay another a proportion of his commission, he may, there being no privilege of contract between the third person and the landowner, recover the entire commission, the third person not being a necessary party. Waurika Oil Ass'n No. 1 v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 364.

A broker could recover a commission for the sale of land listed with his agent, though the person with whom the sale was consummated was the broker's agent, and the agent was neither a necessary nor proper party. Christian v. Dunavent (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 875.

25. Actions on contract.—Notwithstanding a third person received part of the proceeds of a note, he was not a necessary party to an action on the note when his name did not appear on its face. Moore v. Belt (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 225.

Where a fund placed in bank was to be divided between plaintiff and defendant, and other persons for whom they were attorneys in fact, such other persons were not necessary parties to an action by plaintiff to recover his and their shares. Ferguson v. Mansfield (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 234.

34. Persons who may be joined as defendants—in general.—When the plea of misjoinder of parties or question of proper parties is urged, a very large discretion is allowed the courts. National Surety Co. v. Atascosa Ice, Water & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 697; Bain v. Coats (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 571.

In action on contract for sale of assets of a bank which provided for redemption of real estate, parties defendant held properly joined. Langford v. Power (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 662.

In suit against bank by clerk, bank counterclaiming for damages when its customer withdrew more money than he was entitled to through negligence of clerk, estate of customer was a proper but not a necessary party. Commercial State Bank v. Van Hutton (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 363.

In county's action on county treasurer's bond, where it was claimed by drainage district that portion of funds turned over by county treasurer to his successor belonged to district, drainage district and its commissioners and depositary were proper parties defendant. Nueces County v. Gussett (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 725.

As the owner of defendant, no positive general rule can be formulated as to what constitutes multifariousness; the question depending upon the circumstances of each case, id.

The rights of all parties in the subject of litigation should be settled in one suit, where the introduction of parties defendant does not prejudice the rights of those who have already commenced the litigation. id.

The assignee of a mortgage is properly joined in suit to compel acceptance of the balance due thereon and release of the mortgage, in order to adjust the equities between the parties and secure to mortgagee perfect right of redemption upon payment of the balance due. Morrow v. Gorter (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 164.

In a servant's personal injury action, allegations that the master is insolvent, and that the law affords plaintiff no remedy, do not authorize the making of the master's indemnity insurer a party. Owens v. Jackson-Hinton Gin Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 573.

Whenever the right to recover against one defendant, under allegations of the petition, would preclude the right to recover against another joined as defendant, there is a "misjoinder" of parties defendant. Bain v. Coats (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 571.

27. Principal and agent.—In an action by a maker of notes for fraud, and to cancel the notes, a bank in possession solely for collection, having no right or title, was not a proper party defendant. Hutchison v. R. Hamilton & Son (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 864.

To set aside conveyances and contracts.—That a master's indemnity insurer securing a release of liability might be injured by the cancellation of the release in the servant's suit against the master for damages does not warrant making the insurer a party. Owens v. Jackson-Hinton Gin Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 762.

43. Joint tort-feasors.—Generally, where an injury has been sustained by reason of the concurrence of two or more persons, a suit may be maintained against them jointly or separately. Hulce v. Welch (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 631.

When two or more persons participate in concerted action to commit a common tort and accomplish their purpose, they become "tort-feasors." Anderson v. Smith (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 142.

45. Persons who must be joined as defendants—in general.—All persons interested in the object of a suit whose rights will be directly affected by the decree must be made parties. Stahlman v. Riordan (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 726; Hitson v. Gilman (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 140; Nall v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 719.
Where persons who may be interested consent to decree, or disclaim all interest, they are not necessary parties, unless their presence is required for protection of other parties, and error in omitting them originally is cured by subsequent consent or disclaimer. Hale v. McKenzie (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1004.

In trespass to try title wherein title depends on a mortgage with an incorrect description carried through to the sheriff's deed, the mortgagor, or his legal representative, is a necessary party to a reformation of such mortgage. Alafita Lumber Co. v. Mudgett (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 337.

A "necessary party" is one who is so vitally interested in the matter that a valid decree cannot be rendered without his presence as a party. Bingham v. Graham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 105.

In suit for payment for supplies furnished receiver during operation of business by receiver, failure to make the holders of labor liens, who had instituted the receivership proceeding, parties to such action, did not render petition subject to special exception, since, if bondholders, who were joined as defendants, were entitled to contribution from such labor lienholders toward satisfaction of claims for receiver's supplies, they should have asserted such equity, to make such labor lienholders parties to the suit. Maytown Lumber Co. v. Nacogdoches Grocery Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 644.

Joint owners of land need not all be made parties to an action on a certificate of assessment for street improvements, the interest of each being liable for the entire tax. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 621.

Land claimed by individuals, if once a county road, having by extension of a city become a street thereof, subject to its exclusive control, the county is neither a necessary nor proper party to suit to enjoin interference with possession and use thereof. Peris v. Bassett (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 232.

Necessary or indispensable parties include all persons whose interests will necessarily be affected by any decree that may be rendered. Barmore v. Darragh (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 822.

The district court has no jurisdiction to construe an instrument affecting the title to land, unless all persons who would be affected by the judgment have been made parties to the action so as to be bound by the judgment. State Nat. Bank of San Antonio v. Lancaster (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 883.

When a landowner conveyed an undivided interest to another retaining a vendor's lien, and such executed conveyance and gas lease, and subsequently reconveyed to his grantor, who then conveyed to plaintiffs, in a suit by plaintiffs to set aside the lease neither the original owner nor the maker of the lease were necessary parties; both having the same interest, and the maker of the lease having filed a disclaimer at a former trial. Canon v. Scott (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1042.

46. — Actions on contract.—Where purchaser of land who failed to make installment payments induced third person to take over his rights, and vendor executed deed to purchaser who executed deed to third person simultaneously, the effect of the transaction was a sale by vendor to third person, and third person in suing for shortage in acreage should bring action on such theory. Taylor v. Hill (Com. App.) 243 S. W. 36, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 183 S. W. 836.

Where a contract provided for payment by the vendor of a commission to a broker, and for payment of one-half of the cash deposit in event of forfeiture, the broker was not a necessary or proper party to an action to forfeit the cash payment; his interest being contingent. Kollaer v. Puckett (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 914.

48. — Principal and surety.—In action under art. 4982, to recover a penalty for collection of unsuccessful interest on notes, paid by makers, since such payments did not inure to surety's benefit and paid nothing thereon, he was not a necessary party. Dean v. Maxfield (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 46.

50. — Against corporation.—While the receiver of an insolvent corporation appointed under subd. 3, takes interest owner had at time court took jurisdiction, and valid existing liens cannot be affected unless lienholder is party to suit, it is not necessary to make general creditors parties. Guaranty State Bank & Trust Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 960.

50%. — Stockholders suits.—In suit by stockholders to recover property wrongfully disposed of by director, company, dissolution of which was not set up nor established, was not only proper but necessary party, and assignee of company, as private trustee to pay specified debts, was not proper party. Millsaps v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 202.

In suit by stockholders of an oil company, a joint-stock association, against trustees, alleging insolvency and misappropriation of trust funds, etc., and praying for appointment of receiver, held, that the association, while a property party, was not a necessary party. Bingham v. Graham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 105.

51. — Suits by or against partnerships.—Two of four partners, with whom another member, who had assumed indebtedness, had settled claim for contribution, held not necessary parties to suit against such assuming partner by fourth partner to recover difference between what he had paid and amount he was liable to contribute. Chalk v. Collier (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 572.

52. — Suits to cancel instruments or set aside sale.—Transferor of purchase-money note is not necessary party to vendor's suit to cancel conveyance for fraud, as, if he has valid lien to secure note, and desires to foreclose it, judgment cannot affect his rights. Nell v. Frey (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1006. Same v. Sutton (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012; Same v. Winters (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012.
Where all taxes due the state have been paid to it, it is not a necessary party to a suit by a former owner to set aside a tax judgment and sale thereunder. Harrison v. Sharpe (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 731.

In a suit to set aside an execution sale, judgment could not be rendered requiring the sheriff to repay the money in his hands to the execution debtor, where he was not a party. Wagoner v. Hudler (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 860.

Where father and son executed an oil lease, the son owning an undivided interest, was an indispensable party to an action to cancel the lease on the ground that the land was the homestead of the parents. McKay v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 176.

Where a bank not only retained notes for fraud, but also seized the proceeds, where a bank in possession solely for collection, having no right or title, was not a proper party defendant. Hutchinson & Son v. R. Hamilton & Son (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 864.

Where plaintiffs were induced by misrepresentations to convey lands, and the lands were exchanged for mineral rights, the ultimate grantee of such mineral rights is not a necessary party to an action for cancellation or damages for deceit. Reeves v. Shook (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 429.

55. Principal and agent.—In action against real estate agent to recover a deposit in a bank as earnest money on a sale of land, party plaintiff and part by the agent, that the owner of the land, as principal, was a necessary and proper party to the suit, and there was no error in rendering judgment against the owner, as well as the agent and the bank; but the judgment should provide that a payment to the plaintiff by the bank of the amount of the deposit should be in full satisfaction of the entire judgment. Ballew & Huston v. Blakeny (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 495.

62. Trial of right of property.—Where a chattel mortgagor had no interest in the crop covered by the mortgage, he is not a necessary party in foreclosure suit to issues raised by claimants of the crop against the mortgagee who had seized it. Smith v. Coburn (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 344.

A conveyance of part of the land by plaintiff pending a suit in trespass to try title did not abate the suit as to the land conveyed or make the grantee a necessary party to the litigation. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 177.

645 1/2. Injunction suits in general.—Where tax board made improper valuation of railroad property, and railroad sought injunction restraining assessment, but suit was dismissed and later railroad sought injunction solely against county attempting to enforce assessment, there was no fatal defect of parties. Baker v. Druesedow (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1043.

State tax board having certified its findings assessing railway property to various counties was not necessary party to suit to enjoin collection of taxes levied on their assessment, which was void and illegal. Id.

In taxpayer's suit to enjoin payment of monthly allowance to certain county officers, such officers were necessary parties. Veltmann v. Sator (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 539.

Contractors are indispensable parties to a suit by taxpayers to enjoin city making payment to the contractors, on the ground of invalidity of the contract; so, unless they are joined, the court should not proceed otherwise than to dismiss the suit. Brown v. City (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 565.

70. Foreclosure proceedings.—Where the payee of vendor's lien notes indorsed without recourse to corporation as part payment for stock and left shares with corporation to secure payment, he was not a necessary party to subsequent foreclosure suit by corporation against maker. Cattlemen's Trust Co. v. Cantrell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 354.

Where deed from mortgagor, subsequent to execution of mortgage and prior to its foreclosure, was at once recorded, rights of parties holding under such deed could be divested in the foreclosure proceedings only if they were made parties. Browne v. King (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 884.

In suit to foreclose mortgage at common law, it is unnecessary to make debtor a party where he has parted with his interest in property, unless personal judgment against him is sought and plaintiff may proceed against purchaser alone. Hartfield v. Greber (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 85.

Original contractor, payee of notes and beneficiary of mechanic's and builder's lien, who subsequently purchased property, assuming payment of notes, was not necessary party to proceedings to foreclose lien in sense that failure to make him party rendered foreclosure void. Id.

Where vendee sold land subject to incumbrances, he was neither a proper nor a necessary party to an action by the vendor to foreclose. Rector v. Brown (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 792.

One purchasing land subject to a vendor's lien is not a necessary party to the foreclosure of the lien. Howell v. Townsend (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 975.

The maker of a vendor's lien note who had transferred the property was a necessary party to a suit to foreclose, though a nonresident. Spitzer v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 599.

Where a corporation, dissolved by insolvency, which had transferred its assets to trustees for the benefit of creditors, had not parted with all interest in property against which foreclosure was sought, its representatives were necessary parties. Leyhe v. Leyhe (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 377.

Where notes payable to bearer secured by deed of trust were deposited with maker's creditor as security for debt, senior mortgagee with no actual notice thereof was not chargeable with constructive notice requiring it to make such creditor a party to foreclosure proceedings, though deed of trust was of record, and by inquiry it
71. Interpleader.—Bank, whose cashier’s check for land sold by a divorced husband belonging to community was sued on by the wife after the husband’s death, held to have the right, after it had been enjoined from paying the check to the husband’s former wife by the court, to notify the executor to appear and assert his claim, and thus relieve itself of further liability to the executor, if the court found the fund belonged to the wife. Barber v. Houston Nat. Exch. Bank (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 186.

In an interpleader suit by a life insurance company against the executor of insured’s estate and a third person claiming the proceeds of a life policy, payable “to the executors, administrators or assigns” the widow was not a necessary party. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Osborne (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 815.

72. Persons entitled to intervene and grounds of intervention—In general.—Landowners may intervene propitiously to enjoin location of road as adopted by district board though board has power to defend. Tyree v. Road Dist. No. 5, Navarro County (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 644.

Discretion as to number allowed to intervene in proceeding affecting the general community interest, the number not materially adding to the costs, will not be interfered with. Id.

A city in suit by landowners to enjoin county officials from interfering with plaintiffs’ possession of land may make itself a party and have the land in controversy adjudged its property, and plaintiffs enjoined from interference with its use as such. Feris v. Basset (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 233.

Landowners and taxpayers in a road district are interested in the subject-matter of a suit, which is where a road shall be located, so as to be entitled to intervene. Tyree v. Road Dist. No. 5, Navarro County (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 644.

The buyer of purchase-money notes pending suit between the vendor and the purchaser can prosecute the suit in the name of the vendor without becoming a party thereto. Pickrell v. Imperial Petroleum Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 412.

80. Application to intervene.—Mechanic’s lien defendant, who answered original petition, was bound to take notice of materialman’s intervention. Cruz v. Texas Glass & Paint Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 819.

81. Mode and form of intervention.—In a proceeding for appointment of a receiver and administrator in case of insolvency corporation, held, that creditor by a motion to vacate receivership and dismiss that part of proceeding thereby became a party. Guaranty State Bank & Trust Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 960.

Motion to vacate receivership which also raised issue of insolvency of corporation and right of court to administer its assets was in effect an intervention. Id.

Where plaintiff repurchased his cause of action and filed his petition after the original purchaser had filed suit thereon, objection that plaintiff had not made himself party to the suit is untenable. Fleming v. Stringer (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 501.

123. Duties of intervenors.—Where intervenor by plea resists plaintiff’s alleged rights, in respect to pleading and proof the intervenor occupies position of defendant, and must be governed by rules applicable to defendants. Kinney v. Tri-State Telephone Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1180.

Where one sued his employer for wages, and employer set up assignment to defendant, and defendant, who was also sued, appeared and filed the assignment, she thereby ratified the unauthorized act of another in giving notice of such assignment to the employer, and was bound thereby in an action by plaintiff for damages for discharge from employment by reason of such notice. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 690.

821/2. Defects and grounds of objection to parties in general—Necessity of objection.—No court should render a judgment or a decree, where it is apparent that all parties are not before it, and should itself raise the objection and refuse to proceed to judgment. Barmore v. Darragh (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 522.

84. Time for objection.—Nonjoinder of parties, presented for first time after judgment, will not support motion in arrest, but must be specially pleaded before trial. Hail v. McKenzie (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1094.

A plea of misjoinder of parties and causes of action, filed after the jury was impaneled, is too late. Anderson v. Rich (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 640.

86. Want of capacity or interest.—Plaintiff’s authority to sue for the use and benefit of another cannot be raised by general demurrer, but only by plea in abatement. Perkins v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 214 W. 551.

Objection that the widow, instead of the administrator of the deceased husband, was suing to recover lands which belonged to the community, and also constituted the homestead, should be raised by plea in abatement. Whitaker v. McCarty (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 572.

87. Nonjoinder of parties plaintiff.—In action for trespass wherein plaintiff’s co-owner should have been joined as a party, plaintiff in absence of a plea in abatement may recover in proportion to his interest. Bassham v. Evans (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 448.
09. — Misjoinder of parties defendant.—In a suit to recover land, plaintiff cannot plead misjoinder of parties and causes of action as to defendants' cross-actions to recover the land after dismissing his petition, to which all of the cross-complainants except one were made defendants. Anderson v. Rich (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 540.

91. — Misnomer or misdescription.—A misnomer of defendant can be taken advantage of only by plea in abatement, and cannot be urged for the first time on appeal. Gilles v. Miners' Bank of Cartersville, Mo. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 170.

The misnomer of a corporation defendant has no different effect from the misnomer of an individual defendant, the misnomer of either which cannot mislead merely entitling defendant to abate the proceeding until the misnomer can be corrected. Ableine Independent Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Williams (Sup.) 229 S. W. 847.

94. Waiver of defects and objections—Nonjoinder of parties plaintiff.—Defendant in partner's suit in individual capacity to recover partnership funds, who failed at proper time to have plaintiff's partner brought in as party, and his rights determined, waived nonjoinder of parties. Hale v. McKenzie (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1004.

96. — Nonjoinder of parties defendant.—Where defendant was sued as an individual and answered as such and went to trial, he waived his privilege to join other persons as parties defendant on the ground that they were partners and jointly liable. Goodman v. Republic Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 466.

Allegations in an answer by one of several directors of an insolvent corporation, the others not being served, could not destroy the effect of allegations of plaintiff's petition which showed that all the directors were necessary parties. Leyhe v. McKenzie (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 377.

97. — Misjoinder of parties defendant.—Where plaintiff sued a partnership, which filed a cross-complaint against T., who in turn filed a cross-complaint against an elevator company, the latter's plea of misjoinder to the cross-action of the partnership held waived by its answer on the merits to the cross-complaint of T. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. v. Simpson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 352.

CHAPTER SIX

PROCESS AND RETURNS

Art. 1850. Requisites of citation: when to issue.
1852. Citation shall contain, what.
1853. Defendant out of county to have copy of petition.
1854. Citation where sheriff is a party.
1856. Service of citation within the county.
1857. Service without the county.
1860. Against incorporated companies, etc.
1861. Foreign corporations served.
1862. In suits against foreign corporations, cumulative mode.
1862a. Service on foreign railway corporations.
1862b. Same.
1863. Against partners.
1864. Return of citation.
1865. Alias process.
1866. Time of service of citation.

Article 1850. [1212] [1213] Citation to issue, when.

Nature of citation.—The citation is the act of the court through its proper officer commanding the appearance of defendant at the time and place named to answer to plaintiff's petition, having the dignity of original character and weight of superior authority, while the petition alone bears neither verity nor authority. Moran Oil & Gas Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1031.

When process "issued."—A process is not "issued" until it is sent forth from the clerk's office under his sanction and authority and given to an officer, or to some one else to give to an officer, for the purpose of being served. Ferguson v. Estes & Alexander (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 465.

Effect of process.—A defendant, having been brought regularly into court by process, is in legal contemplation in court until the final disposition of the cause. Wagley v. Wagley (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 493.

Art. 1852. [1214] [1215] Citation shall contain what.—Such citation shall be directed to the sheriff or any constable of the county where the defendant is alleged to reside or be, and shall command him to summon the defendant to appear and answer the plaintiff's petition at the next regular term of the court, stating the time and place of holding the same. It shall state the date of the filing of the plaintiff's petition, the file number of the suit, the names of all the parties and the nature of the plaintiff's demand, and shall contain the requisites prescribed in article 2180; provided that where under the law it is necessary to accompany such citation with a certified copy of plaintiff's petition it shall not be necessary for the citation to state the nature of plaintiff's demand. [Acts 1854, p. 53, § 9; 1846, p. 363, § 10; 1866, p. 199, § 1; P. D. 1430-31; revision April, 1879; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 124, § 1, amending art. 1852, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

See Lauderdale v. R. & T. A. Ennis Stationery Co., 80 Tex. 496, 16 S. W. 308.

Requisites and sufficiency in general.—Courts should not dismiss a suit by reason of the citation being fatally defective, but should continue the case, so that service might be perfected. Farmers' State Bank of Merkel v. Briggs (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 267.

Indicating date of filing petition.—Under this article, citation stating petition was filed on a certain day and month, "A. D. 191," is insufficient. Sypert v. Rogers Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 261 S. W. 1102.

The provision of this article, requiring the citation to state the date of filing of plaintiff's petition, is mandatory, and a citation failing to give the date of the petition, or incorrectly stating the same, is insufficient to support a judgment by default. National Ben Franklin Fire Ins Co. v. Scott (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 604.

Indicating names of parties.—Under this article, service of citation, in action against residents of the county and residents of another county, had upon the latter, was insufficient to warrant judgment by default against them, where citation named none of defendants except one of resident guarantors. Bridges v. Hollifield (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 766.

Garnishee process, see Reed v. McCutcheon & Church (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 174; note to art. 276.

A citation, describing the action as one "wherein W. is plaintiff," but setting out in full plaintiff's petition showing action in his capacity as executor, held sufficient to support a default judgment for W. as executor. Crutcher v. Williams (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1115.

Under arts. 1850-1853, citations mentioning plaintiffs only as "E. J. Anderson et al." held insufficient to support default judgment, though served with copies of plaintiffs' petition. Moran Oil & Gas Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1081.

Indicating nature of plaintiff's suit or demand.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1215, where plaintiff brought an action to recover land, and also made his grantor, M., a party defendant, praying that, in the event his title failed, he might have judgment against M. for the purchase money, a citation stating: "The nature of the plaintiff's demand is * * * for the title and possession of (describing the property); for damages in the sum of $500, for costs, and general relief" held insufficient as against M. Miles v. Kinney (Sup.) 8 S. W. 542.

A citation in an action on a note, and for foreclosure of a mortgage, which so states the nature of the demand, complies with Rev. St. 1879, art. 1215, though it describes the land as part of "section 19," while the petition, as filed, describes it as part of "quarter section 19." Loungeway v. Hale, 73 Tex. 495, 11 S. W. 537.

This article does not require setting out of detailed statement of cause of action. How v. Clark (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 431.

A citation, describing cause as "a suit on three promissory notes executed by J. in favor of the F. bank, aggregating the sum of $4,731.65, deposit having been made in the bank of the same," held to sufficiently state the nature of the plaintiff's demand hereunder. Farmers' State Bank of Merkel v. Briggs (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 267.

Under this article, the nature of the demand must be stated sufficiently in the citation to notify the defendant of the character of the demand made against him, and while the citation need not state the cause of action with the same particularity as the petition, it must correctly state the general nature of the plaintiff's demand. Id.

Mode of objection.—There being no defect in original citation to defendant, if he wished to take advantage of defect in copy, it should have been done by motion to quash supported by proof, and not by exception. Schelicher v. Schmidt (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 185.

Art. 1853. [1215] [1216] Defendant out of county to have copy of petition.

See Sanders v. City Nat. Bank (Sup.) 12 S. W. 110; Lauderdale v. R. & T. A. Ennis Stationery Co., 80 Tex. 496, 16 S. W. 308.

Art. 1854. [1216] [1217] Citation where sheriff is a party.

Service by deputy sheriff.—Where sheriff is a party, or interested, citation should be addressed to any constable and a citation served by a sheriff through his deputy, on either the sheriff or his codefendant, is erroneous, and will not support a judgment by default. Mansfield v. Ramsey (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 330.

But where in suit against a sheriff and judgment creditor the judgment creditor objected only to the service on the sheriff by the deputy, objection that under this article sheriff could not serve his codefendant was waived. Id.

Art. 1856. [1218] [1219] Service of citation within the county.

Necessity of personal service.—That personal service of citation on defendant is difficult to obtain does not dispense with its necessity. Gordon v. Reeder (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 983.

Copy to each defendant.—The return of an officer serving process is insufficient under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1219, unless it shows that a true copy thereof was delivered to each one of the several defendants named therein. Rutherford v. Davenport (App.) 16 S. W. 110.

Art. 1857. [1219] [1220] Service without the county.

See Sanders v. City Nat. Bank (Sup.) 12 S. W. 110.

Service of uncertified copy.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1220, the return must show that the copy delivered to the defendants was certified, and it is not sufficient to state that “a copy of the petition” was delivered, though the citation recites that a certified copy accompanies the citation, and is to be served with it. Lauderdale v. R. & T. A. Ennis Stationery Co., 80 Tex. 609, 16 S. W. 110.

Under this article, where the officer serving citation on a defendant who was temporarily residing without the county in which action was brought delivered such defendant only an uncertified copy of the petition, and no copy of a supplemental petition, it was error to render judgment by default. Lazarus v. Barrett, 5 Civ. App. 5, 23 S. W. 832.

Art. 1860. [1222] [1223] Against incorporated companies and joint stock associations.

Service—Local agent.—Return of service of citation, in an action against an insurance company, which shows a delivery in person to its local agent of a true copy of the writ, is sufficient to show service upon the company. United Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Talley (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 653.

Art. 1861. [1223] Foreign corporations, how served.—In any suit against a Foreign, Private or Public Corporation, Joint Stock Company or Association, or Acting Corporation or Association, citation or other process may be served on the President, Vice-President, Secretary or Treasurer, or General Manager, and in any such suit upon any cause of action arising within the State of Texas citation or other process may also be served upon any local or traveling agent, or traveling salesman, within the State, of such Corporation, Joint Stock Company or Association, or acting Corporation or Association. [Acts 1885, p. 79; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 115, § 1, amending art. 1861, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1819, date of adjournment.

Service—Local agent.—Foreign corporation held for purpose of citation within the state when plaintiff's cause of action for personal injury accrued, and never without it during the two years thereafter, in view of this article, so that under art. 5697, subd. 8, and art. 5702, action was barred; it at all times having local soliciting agents, on whose orders, when approved at the home office, it shipped. Alley v. Bessemer Gas Engine Co. (C. C. A.) 262 Fed. 94.

A “local agent,” within this article, is one at a given place or within a district. Id.

E., who had been furnished by a foreign insurance company with blank applications for insurance, supplied some to A., who solicited insurance from plaintiff, took his application, delivered a policy to plaintiff, and collected and paid over the premium. Held, that A. was the company's agent, within Gen. Laws Sp. Sess. 1879, p. 35, and service of summons on him in an action against the company was sufficient, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1223. Southern Ins. Co. of New Orleans v. Wolverton Hardware Co. (Sup.) 19 S. W. 615.

Terms of commission contract with foreign corporation and the evidence adduced held to constitute corporation having the contract local agents, so that suit against foreign corporation was properly brought in county in which agents were located, as authorized by art. 1830, subd. 24, and art. 1861, though foreign corporation had main office in other county. Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 896.
If terms of contract constitute party local agent of foreign corporation, within art. 1830, subd. 24, stipulation of contract that agent has no authority to accept process, etc., is of no effect. Id.

Where the petition alleged a cause of action against a foreign fire insurance company having an agent in Texas, said agent being a partnership, a return reciting service or non-service of the partners will not support a default judgment under this article, the return not affirmatively showing that partner served was a local agent. National Ben Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Scott (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 694.

--- On general manager.—Under art. 1850, par. 28, and arts. 1861, 1862, a foreign railroad corporation which maintained a general manager within the state, who by letter and telegram directed the movement of its trains in other states, and under whom there was a force of employees, is “doing business within the state,” and service on such general manager is sufficient. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Weeks (D. C.) 248 Fed. 970.

Art. 1862. In suits against foreign corporations, cumulative mode.

Art. 1862a. Service on foreign railway corporations.—Service may be had on foreign railway corporations in addition to the means now provided by law by serving citation upon any train conductor who is engaged in handling trains for two or more railway corporations where one of said railway corporations is a foreign railway corporation and the other railway corporation is a domestic corporation, if said conductor handles and operates trains over such foreign and domestic corporations' tracks across the State line of Texas, and on the track of the domestic corporation within the State of Texas, or upon any agent who has an office in Texas who sells tickets or makes contracts for the transportation of passengers or property over any line of railway, or part thereof, of such foreign railway corporation or company. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 156, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 1862b. Same.—For the purpose of obtaining service of citation on foreign railway corporations, conductors who are engaged in handling trains and employed by a foreign railway corporation and a domestic corporation, and who operate such trains across the State line of Texas, and agents engaged in the selling of tickets or making contracts for the transportation of property, as described in Section 1 of this Act [Art. 1862a], are hereby designated as agents of such foreign railway corporations or companies upon whom citation may be had. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 1863. [1224] [1224] Against partners.

See Frank v. Tatum, 87 Tex. 204, 25 S. W. 499; Moran Oil & Gas Co. v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1631.

Art. 1864. [1225] [1225] Return of citation.

Manner of service—Parties served.—Sheriff's return reciting service on "Jack Reed also known as Jack Reeves," notwithstanding the presumption that service was made on the person named in sheriff's return, is not a sufficient showing that Jack Reed was the person intended to be sued. Reed v. McCutcheon & Church (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 174.

Conclusiveness of return and impeachment thereof.—Where the sheriff makes return that a citation, which directed him to serve a corporation, was served on the secretary thereof, in accordance with Rev. St. 1879, art. 1223, further proof that the person served was the secretary is not necessary, before judgment by default. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Wells, 3 Civ. App. 307, 23 S. W. 31.

Party's testimony that he was not served and testimony of his wife that she did not know, but that papers were left for him which she did not know whether he saw or not, held insufficient to overcome return. Godshalk v. Martin (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 635.

Evidence must be clear and satisfactory to impeach officer's return. Crawford v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 375.

Failure to identify defendant as party served with citation would not furnish such corroboration of her denial of service as to make it clear, satisfactory, and convincing that she was not served. Id.

In a suit to set aside a tax judgment and proceedings thereunder, evidence held to corroborate plaintiff's testimony that no citation or process in the tax suit had ever been served on her notwithstanding the recitals of the return. Harrison v. Sharpe (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 731.

Corroborating evidence to impeach the return of a citation must be from other sources than from the witness who requires corroboration. Id.

Number of witnesses.—Two witnesses are required to set aside a deputy sheriff's return on a service of citation, or one witness corroborated by strong, clear, and satisfactory circumstances. McBride v. Kaubach (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 576; Harrison v. Sharpe (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 731.

The testimony of the officer must be met by the oath of two witnesses, or of at least one with strong corroborating circumstances, but such rule is not to be applied so as to deprive a person of the right to have the jury pass on the credibility of witnesses. Becker v. Becker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 512.

Art. 1866. [1227] [1227] Alias process.

To another county.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1227, where the return to a citation was that defendant was not found, and plaintiff filed a "suggestion to the clerk," asking that the citation issue to another county, the clerk had authority to issue an alias citation to such county without leave of court, and a copy of the "suggestion" needed not to be served with the copy of the petition. Gillmour v. Ford (Sup.) 19 S. W. 442.

Art. 1867. [1228] [1228] Time of service of citation.

See Guerra v. Guerra (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 360: notes to art. 1850.

Service after return day.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1228, a service after the return day is a nullity, and a judgment by default thereon is erroneous. Harrington v. Harrington (App.) 16 S. W. 638.

Art. 1868. [1229] [1229] Same.

Service after return day.—In view of this article, default judgment granting divorce was erroneous, where notice to serve wife as nonresident was issued November 24th, returnable the 27th, but was not delivered to her until December 5th. Sparkman v. Sparkman (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 252.

Art. 1869. [1230] [1230] Citation to defendant without state.—Where the defendant is absent from the State, or is a non-resident of the State, the clerk shall, upon the application of any party to the suit, his agent or attorney, address a notice to the defendant requiring him to appear and answer the plaintiff's petition at the time and place of holding court, naming such time and place. Its style shall be, "The State of Texas," and it shall give the date of the filing of the petition, the file number of the suit, the names of all the parties and shall state that a copy of the plaintiff's petition accompanies the notice, but such notice shall not be required to state plaintiff's cause of action. It shall be dated and filed, and attested by the clerk, with the seal of the court impressed thereon; and the date of its issuance shall be noted thereon; a certified copy of the plaintiff's petition shall accompany the notice. [Acts 1875, p. 170, § 2; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 136, § 1, amending art. 1869, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1910, date of adjournment.

Constitutionality.—Arts. 1869-1873, are not violative of due process of law clauses of the federal and state Constitutions, so far as they authorize the rendition of a personal judgment against a citizen of the state upon personal service of process upon him while temporarily absent from the state. Beck v. Becker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 542.

Construed, how.—Statutes authorizing constructive service of citation are strictly construed. Gordon v. Reed (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 983.

Must be addressed to whom.—Under this article, a writ issued to sheriff directing him to summon defendant is void, and handing such writ to defendant outside state confers no jurisdiction. Givens v. Givens (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 877.

Contents of notice.—Judgment against nonresident secured by attaching property within state and serving process under this article, is not invalid because notice or citation did not show that defendant's property had been attached. Mann v. Brown (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 438.

An attachment lien on land of a nonresident defendant, duly served personally by notice as provided by statute, can be foreclosed, though the defendant was not informed by the nonresident notice served on him that foreclosure was sought. Lane v. First Nat.

Bank (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 490.

Waiver of objections.—Defendants, non-residents, were served with notice of suit as provided by Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1230, 1231, and moved to quash the writ for defects appearing upon the face of the notice and in the manner of the service, but did not impeach the validity of such notice. Held that, having in their power to set up several objections to the process with the view to having it, they, in effect, abandoned all objections not alleged, and the invalidity of the notice could not be thereafter urged.

to art. 1869.

Art. 1873. [1234] [1234] Effect of such service.

Effect of service in general.—Where the property of a non-resident is attached, and service had on him at his residence in the manner provided by Rev. St. 1879, art. 1230 et seq., and he appears and pleads want of jurisdiction, the court has power to enter judgment against and order execution to be levied on the property attached. Barnett
v. Rayburn (App.) 15 S. W. 537.

Where nonresident's property has been attached and process served under this article, resulting lien and sale is unaffected by fact that judgment was rendered by

Art. 1874. [1235] [1235] Citation by publication.—Where any to a suit, his agent or attorney, shall make oath at the time of the institution of such suit, or at any time during its progress that any party defendant therein is a non-resident of the State, or that he is absent from the State, or that he is a transient person, or that his residence is unknown to affiant, the clerk shall issue a citation for such defendant, addressed to the sheriff or any constable of the county in which such suit is pending. Such citation shall contain a brief statement of the cause of action, and shall command the officer to summon the defendant by making publication of such citation in some newspaper published in his county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, once in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day thereof. [Acts 1848, p. 106, § 13; Acts 1875, p. 170, § 1; Acts 1879, ch. 96, p. 103; P. D.
25; Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 13, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 109, § 1, amending art. 1874, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

In general.—Where plaintiff, before case was finally called for trial, ascertained he was unable to get personal service on nonresident defendants not served, it was his duty to proceed within reasonable time to procure service by publication. Cain v.
Wharton (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 962.

Service by publication as on a transient person gives the court no jurisdiction over her person, unless she is in fact a transient. Gordon v. Reeder (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 983. That suit for delinquent taxes was against the nonresident owner and his unknown heirs, the petition specifically reciting the suit was brought pursuant to Acts 24th Leg. c. 12, relating to the collection of delinquent taxes, did not bring it within arts. 1874, 1875, as to service of citation, instead of art. 788. Rousse v. Settegast (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 219.

Must be strictly followed.—Statutes authorizing constructive service of citation are strictly construed. Gordon v. Reeder (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 983.

Statement of cause of action—In general.—A citation published in an action to foreclose a lien on notes, accounts, contracts, etc., should, under this article, contain such a description of the collateral as is necessary to identify it. Leyhe v. Leyhe (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 377.

Description of the collateral as "certain notes, accounts, contracts for the sale of merchandise and choses of action assigned, transferred, and sold to her (the plaintiff) by L. P. Co.," held insufficient. Id.

Affidavit.—An erring wife, by leaving her husband, cannot fix his domicile at the place of her own residence, to enable her, after removal to a foreign state, to make accurate affidavit of her residence there in her divorce suit, based on substituted service. Richmond v. Sangster (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 723.

An unverified petition for the foreclosure of a lien for street improvements, not accompanied by an affidavit, does not authorize service of unknown owners of the property by publication, under this article, as amended by Acts 1917, c. 13. Turner v. Maury (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 255.

"Transient person."—Woman who had no fixed place of residence, but lived around over state with her three or four children, though she could not call either of her children's homes own, was not a "transient person" within this article. Gordon v. Reeder (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 983.

Will not sustain personal judgment.—A personal default judgment rendered against a nonresident served by publication is void. Reed v. First State Bank of Purdon (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 222.

Art. 1875. [1236] [1236] For unknown heirs or stockholders of defunct corporation.—Where any property of any kind in this State may have been granted or may have accrued to the heirs as such, of any deceased person, or to the stockholders of any defunct corporation, any party having a claim or cause of action against them relative to such property, if their names be unknown, may bring his suit or action against them, their heirs or legal representatives, describing them as the heirs of such ancestor, naming him or unknown stockholder of such corporation and if the plaintiff, his agent, or attorney shall make oath at the time of the institution of such suit, or at any time during its progress that the names of such heirs or stockholders are unknown to the affiant, the clerk shall issue a citation for such heirs or stockholders, addressed to the sheriff or any constable of the county in which such suit is pending. Such citation shall contain a brief statement of the cause of action, and shall command the officer to summon the defendant by making publication of such citation in some newspaper published in his county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, once in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day thereof. Provided that in cases of citation by publication as provided for in this and in the foregoing articles, it shall not be necessary to state in the citation the details and particulars of the cause of action; provided that in suits by publication involving land it shall be sufficient in making the brief statement of the cause of action in such citations to state the kind of suit, the number of acres of land involved in the suit, or the number of the lot and block of any other plat description that may be of record if the land is situated in a city or town, the survey on which the land is situated, the county in which said land is situated, and the special pleas, if any, which are relied upon in such suit. [Acts 1866, p. 125, § 1; Acts 1848, p. 106, § 26; P. D. 5460, 26; Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 13, § 519
Art. 1875. Courts—District and County—Practice in (Title 37)

Took effect 90 days after March 15, 1915, date of adjournment. See Rosette v. Settles (Civ. App.) 390 S. W. 219; notes to art. 1874.

Presumption as to appearance.—Where plaintiff made unknown heirs parties defendant, as provided by this article, it must be presumed on appeal that unknown heirs appeared and answered where attorney signed answer as answer of all defendants and court did not appoint an attorney ad litem to represent unknown heirs, as required by article 1941. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 190.

Conclusiveness of judgment.—In an action against the heirs of a deceased person by one having a claim against them relative to such property, under 2 Pasch. Dig. art. 5406, a judgment for plaintiff concludes all who claim by inheritance in the succession of the deceased, whether inheriting immediately from him or as successors of those so inheriting Sloan v. Thompson, 4 Civ. App. 419, 23 S. W. 613.

Art. 1876. [1237] [1237] Citation by publication to contain some requisite as other writs.

Art. 1878. [1238] [1238] Return of citation by publication.

Showing manner of service.—Where there were two citations in the record, but it did not appear in the officer’s return nor in the certificate of the printer, in what county the citation was published, nor in the return that publication was made on the date stated by the printer, the return was insufficient to confer jurisdiction under this article. Turner v. Maury (Civ. App.) 244 S. W. 226.

Art. 1880. [1240] [1240] Acceptance of service of process.

Cited: Low v. Felton, 84 Tex. 375, 19 S. W. 693.

Acceptance and waiver—Failure to object.—Failure to notify defendant of an intervention is waived, where not raised until after trial. Cruz v. Texas Glass & Paint Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 819.

Effect.—Where divorce was granted at a special term, on defendant husband’s appearance, reciting he agreed “that this cause may be taken up at any time for trial,” was filed, without laying over 10 days, but on the day of its filing, and at plaintiff’s instance, plaintiff could not, on the ground of collusion in procuring the decree by default or the lack of jurisdiction of the court, set the divorce aside notwithstanding arts. 1889, 1897, 4633; for art. 1714, excepting divorce cases from those may be tried in vacation, does not except them from being tried at special term under art. 1720. Guerra v. Guerra (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 566.

Art. 1881. [1241] [1241] Entering appearance in open court.

What constitutes appearance and effect thereof in general.—A motion by a defendant for an order requiring plaintiff to give security for costs constitutes a voluntary appearance by defendant, and is a waiver of any defect in the service of citation on him. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Hale, 109 Tex. 251, 206 S. W. 75.

In an action tobar an attorney, appearance in court was a waiver of any defects in the service. Lotto v. State (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 563.

Where a person sui juris appeared, answered, and pressed his interest in a suit concerning title to land, it was wholly immaterial whether or not citation had ever been served upon him. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 221.

Plea of privilege.—Under art. 1903, as amended by Acts 55th Leg., c. 176, and in view of arts. 1832 and 1833, and notwithstanding art. 1910, defendant, after filing plea of privilege, is not required to appear until he receives notice of a contest and of order setting a day for hearing; the filing of plea being appearance for purpose of plea. Brooks v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 228.

Continuance.—A motion to continue constitutes a general appearance. Republic Oil & Gas Co. v. Owen (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 319.

Plea to jurisdiction.—Since all defensive pleadings are styled the “answer,” a special plea to the jurisdiction, filed by a nonresident, is a sufficient appearance to confer jurisdiction under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1342. (York v. State, 77 Tex. 867, 11 S. W. 896, followed.) N. K. Fairbanks Co. v. Blum, 2 Civ. App. 478, 21 S. W. 1009.

Special appearance is unknown to Texas practice, and filing by a defendant of any defensive pleading, as a plea of privilege, and later an answer, though only to challenges jurisdiction, constitutes appearance and submission to jurisdiction of forum. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Stevens, 108 Tex. 262, 206 S. W. 921; Same v. Ayers, 109 Tex. 270, 206 S. W. 922.

The court does not acquire jurisdiction over the person of a defendant by his appearance for the purpose alone of questioning the jurisdiction. Schleiher v. Schmide (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 186.

Voluntary appearance of defendant foreign corporation to attack the court’s jurisdiction constituted an appearance subjecting its person to the jurisdiction of the court. Roberts v. Stewart Farm Mortgage Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1108.

General appearance.—A "general appearance" is entered whenever defendant invokes the jurisdiction of the court in any way on any question other than that of the court's jurisdiction, without being compelled to do so by previous rulings sustaining the jurisdiction. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Hale, 109 Tex. 251, 206 S. W. 75.

Art. 1882. [1242] [1242] Answer constitutes appearance.

In general.—See N. K. Fairbanks Co. v. Blum, 2 Civ. App. 479, 21 S. W. 1099; notes to art. 1881.

Where defendant appeared and answered, judgment against him will not be set aside because no citation was served upon him. Dickinson v. Comstock (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 863.

Where, in Injunction suit, defendant filed an answer to the entire petition, in obedience to a notice of the court, both parties thereafter appearing before the judge in chambers, who heard the evidence and refused the temporary writ, such answer constituted an "appearance," under this article, rendering unnecessary the issuance of a citation, as required by article 4662, where not dispensed with by art. 4662. City of Seymour v. Montgomery (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 237.

A defendant, who appeared by an attorney and filed an answer to a cross-action, thereby made an appearance for all purposes, and it was not necessary for plaintiff to serve him with citation, although petition was not served upon him. Hickman v. Swain (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 941.

By filing a general answer defendant waived the issuance and service of citation and was thereby submitted to the jurisdiction of the court, and was bound by any judgment thereafter rendered. Hines v. Mills (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 777.

Answer by nonresident.—In action by decedent's creditor against nonresident administrator, heirs, and heirs' grantees, to foreclose creditor's lien under arts. 3351, 3456, on land that had vested in the heirs under art. 3225, and had been sold by heirs to grantees, where there was no other creditor and no heirs not parties to such action, administrator, heirs, and grantees, by filing answers, subjected themselves to the jurisdiction of the court, and waived all pleas of privilege or venue. Faulkner v. Reed (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 845.

Failure to defend.—Mechanic's lien defendant cannot destroy court's jurisdiction, which was attached to him, by leaving state and instructing his attorney to make no further defense. Cruz v. Texas Glass & Paint Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 819.

Art. 1883. [1243] [1243] Motion constitutes appearance, when.

See Republic Oil & Gas Co. v. Owen (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 319.

Motion as appearance.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1243, when a motion to quash a defective citation is passed to another term, without action on the part of the court, the defendant will be treated as having appeared at the next term after the motion was made. Feibelman v. Edmonds, 69 Tex. 334, 6 S. W. 417.
Hereunder a plea to the jurisdiction may be filed at succeeding term by a defendant who appeared at the prior term to set aside a default judgment rendered on insufficient service. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Adams (App.) 14 S. W. 1015.

Under arts. 1883, 1936, 1938, held that the trial court did not err in hearing proof on a writ of inquiry and rendering judgment instead of permitting defendant to file answer and introduce testimony on the merits, as though no default judgment had been rendered. Mach v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 275.

Art. 1885. [1245] [1245] No judgment without service of process, etc.

Process to sustain judgment—Necessity of process.—Where attorney purporting to act for party in arranging compromise judgment was not in fact his attorney and person for whom he purported to act was never served with citation, and never appeared, judgment against him will be set aside, irrespective of fraud. Winfree v. Winfree (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 246.

Where sheriff's return of "Not found" affirmatively showed a defendant was not served with citation, judgment against him was unauthorised. Holland v. Wood (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 309.

A judgment rendered without service of process is void, though the return shows legal service, and the judgment recites legal service, whether or not plaintiff was guilty of fraud or collusion in procuring a false return. Godshalk v. Martin (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 535.

Judgment against plaintiff on cross-bill, supported by judgment record silent on question of service on plaintiff or his appearance, is not nullity. Elastun v. Scanlan (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 765.

Plea in reconvention or a cross-bill held a suit within this article. Jarratt v. McCarty (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 712.

Where plaintiff fails to appear without notice of defendant's cross-action, defendant was not entitled to judgment on the cross-action, but merely to dismissal of the suit for want of prosecution, since plaintiff was not required to take cognizance of an in-
CHAPTER SEVEN

ABATEMENT AND DISCONTINUANCE OF SUIT

Art. 1886. [1246] [1246] Suit not to abate where plaintiff dies, if, etc.

Art. 1888. Death of defendant.

Heir can be made party, when.—The words "in a proper case," as to revival against heirs, mean where there is no administration and no necessity for any, or where it would be legally impossible to have an administration. Saner-Ragley Lumber Co. v. Spivey (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 878.

Actions which survive.—An attachment does not abate, nor is its lien lost, by defendant's death, after the levy of the writ, and before the rendition of judgment, under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 179, 1248. Rogers v. Burbridge, 5 Civ. App. 67, 21 S. W. 300.

Art. 1891. [1251] [1251] Death between verdict and judgment.

Death before final judgment.—Where husband for whom interlocutory divorce judgment had been rendered died before entry of final judgment but after expiration of the year he was required to wait before final judgment could be entered, the final judgment where not entered nunc pro tunc had no validity as a judgment. Kinney v. Tri-State Telephone Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 252, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1180.

Husband necessary party.—Where a feme sole is sued, but marries while the suit is pending and before judgment rendered the husband must be impleaded as a defendant under this article, before an effective judgment can be rendered, a requirement not affected by Acts of 1913, c. 32, enlarging the rights of married women; the burden to see that the requirement is met being on plaintiff. Powell v. Dyer (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 731.
Art. 1894. [1254] [1254] Suit to the use of another.

Right to sue for another's use.—Although plaintiff's son-in-law was a necessary party to the suit, yet in view of this article, this requirement would be met if it were proper for plaintiff to conduct the suit for the use and benefit of his son-in-law. Perkins v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 551.

Objections.—Plaintiff's authority to sue for the use and benefit of another cannot be raised by general demurrer, but only by plea in abatement. Perkins v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 551.

Art. 1896. [1256] [1256] Where some of defendants not served.

Dismissal as to party not served.—In a suit on a forfeited recognizance, the state may dismiss as to a surety who has not been cited and proceed to judgment against the principal and the other surety, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1256, though diligence has not been used to obtain service. Pleasants v. State, 23 Tex. App. 214, 15 S. W. 42.

In an action against one not in the state and who was not personally served, evidence held to show that he was a resident of New York, and so the action was properly dismissed as to him. Prince Line, Limited, of Newcastle, England, v. Steger (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 223.

Art. 1897. [1257] [1257] Discontinuance as to principal obligor.

In general.—In a suit on an alleged contract for defending C. who did not join in the contract, but allowed his official position to be used by his co-defendants to test the question of removal of a county-seat, C. was not the principal obligor within the meaning of Rev. St. 1879, art. 1257. Keesey v. Old, 82 Tex. 22, 17 S. W. 928.

Under arts. 1842 and 1897, a judgment cannot ordinarily be had against a person seeing to its execution until a judgment is had against the principal obligor. Snyder v. Slaughter (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 974.

Where action to foreclose chattel mortgage was brought against mortgagor and purchasers of the mortgaged property, but dismissed as to the mortgagee, who had not been served with citation, as the parties were not sued as joint obligors upon a contract, this article had no application. Smith v. Wall (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 759.

Pleading.—Under arts. 1842, 1897, plea by principal of bond, contractor for building, which will release him if established, will also release sureties. Garrett v. Dodson (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 675.

Under arts. 1842, 1897, plea by principal of bond, contractor for building, which will release him, will also inure to sureties' benefit whether or not urged in separate plea. Id.

Art. 1898. [1258] [1258] Discontinuance in vacation.

Cited, Keesey v. Old, 82 Tex. 22, 17 S. W. 928.

Art. 1899. [1259] [1259] Discontinuance as to defendants served, etc.

See Schmick v. Noel, 72 Tex. 1, 8 S. W. 82.

In general.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1259, in a suit against C. and others on a contract to defend a suit against one who was not a party to the contract, but allowed his name to be used, the dismissal as to C. was proper; it not being shown that his co-defendants were thereby injured. Keesey v. Old, 82 Tex. 22, 17 S. W. 928.

Error is not shown by the fact that, after verdict was returned in favor of plaintiff, he was permitted to dismiss as to one of the defendants as to whom the jury found no finding, where such defendant was disposed of by the judgment. Buchanan v. Gribble (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 899.

In an action for conversion brought against a partner by former partners, a defendant who had never been a member of the partnership and had no interest in the controversy was properly dismissed. Christian-Holmes Cedar Co. v. Dewees Cedar Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 681.

Plaintiffs had the right to dismiss from their suit two parties not shown by the bill of exceptions to have had any interest, and defendants had no right to interfere to prevent such dismissal. Prairie Oil & Gas Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 886.

Where the court had indicated that he would allow the plea of special privilege of one defendant, but not of another, plaintiff could, before the decision, dismiss as to the one whose plea was to be allowed. First Nat. Bank of Jacksonville v. Childs (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 807.

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

Discontinuance in general.—Common-law rule that if plaintiff leave "chasm" in prosecution of his suit it was discontinued by operation of law has been abrogated in this state. Hinkle v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 311.

Grounds of abatement.--Where action is brought in Texas on a judgment rendered in Indiana, from which an appeal is pending, and the right to sue therein in Indiana is not shown, the action is governed in that respect by the laws of Texas. Van Natta v. Van Natta ( Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 907.

Though the President, as a war measure, pursuant to Act Cong. Aug. 29, 1916, § 1 (U. S. St. S'Cas.), assumed control of the railroads, such control is no ground for the abatement of suits on causes of action accruing before governmental operation. El Paso & S. W. Ry. Co. v. Havens ( Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 444.

Failure or refusal to submit to examination after loss does not bar recovery, but must be shown, and until the condition of recovery is complied with; and is therefore to be pleaded in abatement, and not in bar, and, if the plea be sustained, its only effect is dismissal of suit as prematurely brought. Humphrey v. National Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 750.

Transfer of cause of action.--A conveyance of part of the land by plaintiff pending a suit in trespass to try title did not abate the suit as to the land conveyed. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams ( Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 177.

Dissolution of corporation.--Dissolution of a corporation under arts. 1206-1208, did not abate a suit pending against the corporation, or deprive the court of power to render judgment. Butcher v. J. J. Case Threshing Mach. Co. ( Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 880.

Another action pending.--A prior pending suit to enjoin further transfer of a note in hands of bank and for cancellation of such note will abate action by bank upon note. Camp v. First Nat. Bank ( Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 217.

A prior suit pending between same parties involving same cause of action, when interposed by a plea in abatement in proper form, will abate subsequent suit, where facts are undisputed. Id.

Plea of another action pending is not available where plaintiff in one suit is defendant in other, and defendant in one is plaintiff in other. McCoy v. Bankers' Trust Co. ( Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1133.

Where defendant upon a plea of another suit pending did not sustain the burden of proving that he filed his amendment, making plaintiff a party at an earlier hour than plaintiff's suit was filed on the same day, his plea was properly overruled. Bragg v. Bragg ( Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 992.

Trespass to try title to section 18, depending on whether L. got title by sale under judgment in suit to foreclose lien erroneously naming section 18, is not abated by pendency of suit to set aside the judgment, and for reformation and foreclosure on the proper land. Anderson v. Lockhart ( Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 218.

The pendency of a prior suit between the same parties and involving the same subject-matter does not necessarily deprive another court of equal dignity and jurisdiction of the power to try a case, though commenced after the institution of a former suit, though comity requires court in subsequent action to sustain a plea in abatement presented before court has tried the case. Phillips v. Phillips ( Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 243.

When plea of abatement is urged on ground of pendency of another suit in another court, plaintiff is required to elect which suit he will prosecute, and if he fails to do so the court will dismiss the suit in which the plea is filed. Ward v. Scarborough ( Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 1107.

Where purchaser brought suit for cancellation of vendor's lien notes for fraud, the vendor, though he could seek recovery on the notes by cross-action in the same suit, can also bring an independent suit to recover on the notes in the district in which they are payable. Spark v. Laaster ( Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 345.

Involuntary dismissal.--Where a plaintiff fails to appear in person or by attorney, and the cross-action is the only judgment which should be rendered is one dismissing for want of prosecution, and court cannot render judgment on the merits. American Surety Co. v. Thach ( Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 314; Scarborough v. Ward ( Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 506; Farr v. Chittim ( Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1679.

Motion to dismiss for want of prosecution after allowance of change of venue to address of discretion of trial court. Hinkle v. Thompson ( Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 311.

Where plaintiff, suing to set aside judgment, took no action since early in January, 1916, to procure service by publication on nonresident defendants not served, and case was not finally called for trial till January term, 1916, court did not abuse discretion in dismissing for want of prosecution. Cain v. Wharton ( Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 952.

In action against alleged joint-stock company where plea in abatement for lack of service on the officers was sustained, in the absence of showing that plaintiffs declined to make further efforts to procure service, it was error to dismiss the case. Crow v. Cattlemen's Trust Co. ( Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1947.

Where the court on a plea in abatement dismissed the petition on the ground that the corporation sought to be dissolved was at least a de facto corporation, the fact that plaintiffs who had failed to serve officers of company failed to ask for time in which to complete service, did not bar them from asking on appeal that the case be reversed for failure to allow such time. Id.

Where, after the court held that plaintiff could prove damages that accrued under proceeds of the petition, plaintiff announced he would offer no evidence, that was an abandonment of the case, authorizing a judgment of dismissal in

Although inference might be drawn from preliminary recitals in an order that court intended to dismiss as to all parties, yet order would not effect a dismissal as to defendants whose names were omitted in decree of dismissal proper; names of other defendants being given. Hickman v. Swain (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 448.

Where, on vacating a judgment rendered at a former term in a partition suit, for fraud or mistake owing to defect of parties, by a bill of review, the plaintiffs were given an opportunity to make proper parties and to secure and introduce their evidence, but refused to do so, the cause was properly dismissed. Farrias v. Delgado (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 610.

Notwithstanding art. 1944, a suit in which there is no pleading for affirmative relief by defendants should be dismissed for want of prosecution if plaintiff fails to appear at time set for trial, not tried in plaintiff's absence, and judgment on the merits rendered for defendants. Chittim v. Farr (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 638.

Where plaintiff fails to appear without notice of defendant's cross-action, defendant was not entitled to judgment on the cross-action, but merely to dismissal of the suit for want of prosecution, since plaintiff, though bound to take notice of the pleadings and procedure in answer to the charges made in the original petition, was not required to take cognizance of an independent claim which might be asserted in the suit as a matter of convenience. Commercial Credit Co. v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 205.

In action on note where answer set forth fraud and failure of consideration and prayed that plaintiff take nothing by its suit, that the notes be canceled, and that defendant recover his costs, plaintiff's failure to appear did not entitle defendant to a judgment granting such relief, the answer not presenting a counterclaim or cross-action, the only proper judgment in such case being dismissal of the suit. 1d.

Cross-action of one defendant against another is properly dismissed on plaintiff's motion, where to permit its prosecution would necessitate continuance of the cause, and where there is a suit pending between one defendant and the predecessor in interest of the other involving the subject-matter of the cross-action. Ward County Water Improvement Dist. No. 2 v. Ward County Irr. Dist. No. 1 (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 665.

Where the amount recoverable is reduced by exceptions to an amount below the jurisdiction of the court, and plaintiff fails to amend the proper judgment is one dismissing the cause for want of jurisdiction, and not one which would bar a recovery in a court of competent jurisdiction. Webb v. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 499.

Courts should not dismiss a suit by reason of the citation being fatally defective, but should continue the case, so that service might be perfected. Farmers' State Bank of Merkel v. Briggs (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 267.

A garnishment proceeding should not be dismissed, on motion of the garnishee, on the ground that the main or original suit has been dismissed, but should be continued to await the result of an appeal in the original suit. Farmers' State Bank of Merkel v. First Nat. Bank of Anson (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 268.

— Reinstatement.—Plaintiff's statement that it was not his intention to abandon prosecution after delay in effecting change of venue is not conclusive in application to reinstate cause. Hinkle v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 211.

In application to reinstate cause after failure to perfect change of venue ordered, held that refusal to hear testimony of plaintiff's attorney was not abuse of discretion. 1d.

That defendant could have taken depositions of scattered witnesses is not conclusive that he would have suffered no injury by reinstating cause after defendant's failure to prosecute it. 1d.

Where an action in trespass to try title was dismissed for plaintiff's failure to file a cost bond, the court is without jurisdiction to reinstate the same at a subsequent term. Osborne v. Younger (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1089.

Where evidence tending to show that plaintiff was pursuing a course of tactics tending to delay the case was sufficient to support action of court in dismissing the case, court's refusal to reinstate the case will not be disturbed on appeal. Guyer v. Chapman (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 217.

CHAPTER EIGHT
PLEADINGS OF THE DEFENDANT

Art. 1902. Answer may include several matters; due order of pleading; general demand.
Art. 1903. Requisites of plea of privilege; prima facie proof; controveting plea by plaintiff; service; hearing; appeal.
Art. 1904. To be filed, when.

Art. 1905. In cases of citation by publication.
Art. 1906. Certain pleas to be verified by affidavit.
Art. 1907. Plea of payment, counter claim, etc.
Art. 1908. General denial need not be repeated.
Art. 1909. Pleas to be filed in due order.
Art. 1910. Certain pleas to be determined during the term at which filed.
Article 1902. Answer may include several matters; due order of pleading; general denial.

Inconsistent pleas and duplicity.—Plaintiff is permitted, in different counts, to present inconsistent pleas, asserting right in one to recover on facts stated, and to claim in another that, if facts are not as previously alleged, but as stated in such other, he is entitled to relief against another defendant. Buckholts State Bank v. Thalman (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 657.

In action by an employé of a third person for injuries, allegations of supplemental answer, that plaintiff had accepted compensation under Workmen's Compensation Act could not be used to nullify general denial, in view of this statute as one plea, though contradictory in terms, cannot be used to destroy another. Lancaster v. Hunter (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 765.

Paraphrase in answer alleging an oral contract held not demurrable notwithstanding another paragraph setting out exhibits and alleging, in the alternative, that if defendant is mistaken as to the contract being verbal, nevertheless plaintiff breached the contract. Id.

It was permissible to combine the legal plea of trespass to try title with the plea in equity to reform a judgment, by making it properly describe land the title to which is questioned, though they are distinct, separate causes of action. Gulf Production Co. v. Palmer (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1017.

Admissions.—Under answer and admissions made to obtain right to open and close, plaintiff's right to recover penalty and attorney's fee held admitted, and judgment thereof for properly entered, though demand was not alleged or approved. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Hicks (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 616.

Statement in abandoned pleading in conflict with other allegations in same pleading does not constitute admission. San Antonio Water Supply Co. v. Castle (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 300.

City's answer pleading “not guilty of the wrongs, trespasses, and injuries, complained of," did not admit possession of plaintiffs' premises, where the suit against the city was not for title and possession, nor in trespass to try title, but merely to recover for land alleged appropriated. Richey v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 214.

Answers describing defendants as receivers of the respective railroads, were admissions that they were receivers at the time the answers were filed. Baker v. Lyons (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1090.

In an action to recover land, admissions in answer which followed a plea of not guilty, making it incumbent on plaintiff to show a prima facie right to the property, will not support a judgment in favor of plaintiff and relieve him of the burden of showing a prima facie case. Davies v. Rutland (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 235.

Where there was no general denial by defendant, but merely a denial of such matters as were not admitted, the trial court properly overruled objection to the admission in evidence of portions of the answer containing certain admissions. Coopwood v. Woford (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 504.

Where the facts pleaded by defendant properly constituted a plea in confession and avoidance, evidence in support thereof was admissible notwithstanding defendant's admission of plaintiff's cause of action under grant of district and county courts (142 S. W. xx). Rawlings v. Ediger (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 163.

— Failure to traverse or deny.—Facts alleged by petition not controverted by answer are to be taken as true on appeal. Needham v. Arno Co-op. Irr. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 857.

A general allegation, not specially denied in the answer, of insolvency of the maker of the note, will not prevail over a specific, alleged, and proven fact of a lien on land not apparently of less value than the note, in an action against indorsers. Prince v. Colvin (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 877.

Where plaintiff alleged damages from defendant's breach of contract to lease land on shares, and defendant replied that he had cultivated in a farmerlike manner and harvested crops of a specified value, mere absence of general or special denial as to the damages did not admit amount alleged in petition. Thompson v. Fieming (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1134.

Denials.—In an action by scire facias on the bond of a person held to answer to an indictment for swindling, a general denial renders it necessary for the state to produce the bond in evidence under this article. Baker v. State, 21 Tex. App. 355, 17 S. W. 255.

In suit to collect taxes, correctness of defendant taxpayer's verified rendition of property could not be attacked by general denial; same formality being required as when attacking a note. Pfeiffer v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 932.

Where plaintiff, in personal injury suit, alleged that consignment was in defendant's railroad car, and that it was negligent in failing to have car repaired, defendant's gen-

In suit by vendor to rescind contract for sale of land for failure to pay all of purchase-money note, defendants' answer alleging not guilty raised issues of waiver and laches. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 199.

Defendants' denials denying the existence of a written contract, raises the issue of whether such contract ever existed, although contract was not pleaded by plaintiff, and evidence tending to show whether it existed is competent. Eller v. Newcom (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 408.

A general denial only put plaintiff on proof of the allegation of his petition in order to make a prima facie case. W. R. Case & Sons Cutlery Co. v. Canode (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 396.

In mandamus by district attorney to compel judge and clerk of the city court to permit him to prosecute criminal cases, where the judge specially denied that he refused to permit the plaintiff to prosecute cases, but did not deny an allegation in a verified supplemental petition that he purposely set cases so that plaintiff or his assistants could not be present, the district court was authorized, in the absence of other evidence, to find that the judge refused to recognize plaintiff's right. Monk v. Crooker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 194.

In an action by a creditor under arts. 2971-2973, against one receiving stock in bulk, the defendant was entitled to prove, under a general denial, that there was no liability on its part under the Bulk Sales Law. John T. Barbee & Co. v. American Brewing Ass'n (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 334.

Where defendant pleaded a general denial, any admissions thereafter pleaded in the answer, and not the burden of proving his case against the general denial. Peterson v. Graham-Brown Shoe Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 737.

In a suit to compel an irrigation plant to furnish water at reasonable rates, orders in a previous suit, wherein the plant was sold at judicial sale free from all easements, were admissible under the general denial. McBride v. United Irr. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 498.

In an architect's action to recover for plans and specifications, any proof admissible under defendant was not authorized in that his agent, employed by the architect, and that he acted in excess of his authority, was admissible under general denial, so that this part of the answer cannot be termed a special defense. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Roquemore (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 679.

In an action on a supplemental insurance policy, providing for double liability in event of accidental death, insurer under a general denial could introduce evidence that the death was purposely self-inflicted. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 591.

In an action by a merchant to recover overdrafts by his salesman, the contract of employment and evidence to show commissions not credited to the salesman are admissible under the general denial, as directly contributing to the defense and not in the nature of a confession and avoidance or affirmative matter. Newton, Weller & Wagner Co. v. Hocker (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 233.

In action against former administrator and his surety for an accounting as to a note owing by the administrator to decedent, a defense by the surety that the former administrator was insolvent if it constitutes a defense as against art. 3373, is not avail ing to the surety, unless there is a general denial of the sufficiency thereof being insufficient. American Surety Co. of New York v. Norton (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 437.

Where one is sued as receiver, or in any other special capacity, the averments of the petition as to that relation are to be taken as true, without proof, unless specially denied in the answer, notwithstanding a general denial. Baker v. Clement Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 679.

In action where plaintiff on a vendor's lien note where plaintiff by a supplemental petition alleged that defendant had possession of the note through mistake and that he owed the note and had not paid it, evidence to explain his possession and show that it was not through mistake was admissible under a general denial. Id.

In an action on a vendor's lien note, a general denial was a sufficient pleading to support a judgment for defendant, assuming that a special plea was insufficient. Id.

Plaintiff, having pleaded ownership and right to possession of cattle as basis of his right to recover them, must prove one or the other; and defendant could rely on a general denial, and when plaintiff failed to prove his right to recover, defendant need not prove title in another. Terrazas v. Holmes (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 848.

Where the petition alleged that plaintiff held under a certain deed attached thereto, a general denial requires plaintiff to prove the deed under which he claimed, regardless of a subsequent statement that the deed referred to in the petition was procured by fraud. Shumaker v. Byrd (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 817.

Where petition in action on note was good as against a general exception, and where the note was produced, court's refusal, after entry of default, to permit defendant to file answer, consisting of a general exception and general denial, held not error; no defense being shown thereby. Mach v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 275.

Waiver.—Waiver of any issue of title under general denial in specific performance held sufficiently shown, by further pleading, in connection with his not objecting of the county at the time suit was instituted and at the time the plea was signed and sworn to, was sufficient. Poole v. Pierce-Pordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 706.

In a suit to cancel a mineral lease, allegations in defendant's plea of privilege under this article, that none of the exceptions of art. 1530 or 2308 existed, and that the suit was not concerning land or to quiet title thereto, held to show no intention to deny plaintiff's allegations as to defendant's acquisition from the plaintiffs of the mineral lease. Thomason v. Ham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 581.

This article requires denial of facts, and not denials involving mere conclusions of law drawn from an interpretation of plaintiff's petition. Whether or not a plea to cancel a mineral lease is one coming within art. 1530, subd. 14, providing for venue of suits concerning land, is a legal question, and defendant's allegation in his plea of privilege, that it was not such a suit is a mere conclusion of law, id.

Defendant's plea of privilege need not state that defendant has a meritorious defense; the right to change of venue being a statutory and not an equitable right. Brooks v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 288.

Defendant's plea of privilege, based on allegations of privilege, which defendant's plea of privilege did not negative exceptions contained in subdivisions 24 and 29 of art. 1830, it was properly overruled in view of this article. International Travelers' Ass'n v. Powell, 109 Tex. 556, 212 S. W. 951.

Defendant's plea of privilege, held to negative the possible exceptions to exclusive venue in the county of one's residence. Coca-Cola Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1087.

In an action against a landlord and a party claiming a lien on plaintiff's money, an allegation that the plaintiff, as a mere suberferge for wrongfully fixing venue, made fraudulent and not charge conversion, does not charge conversion and stakeholder to fix wrongfully the venue of the suit. Trousdale v. Southern Rice Growers' Ass'n (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 322.

Where a plea of privilege was denied as to original petition, the issue raised by plea of privilege to any amended petition was too late, having already been adjudicated; it not being alleged in the second plea or shown by the evidence or record that the cause of action set out in the amended petition was different from that pleaded in the original petition. Planters' Cotton Oil Co. v. Godwin-Humphreys Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 642.

While a prima facie proof of privilege is prima facie privilege, if a plea to cancel a mineral lease is granted, a 'proper plea of privilege' must be put in issue the jurisdictional factual alleged, and this rule is not changed by the Amendment of 1917. Knox v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 461.

If allegations are made which, if true, confer venue on all defendants, it is necessary for a plea of privilege to aver that these allegations are fraudulently made. Payne v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 537.

Controverting plea or affidavit.—Under Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, § 1, defendant's plea of privilege held tantamount to complete and detailed denial under oath of jurisdictional facts. Plaintiff's motion denials, where plea of privilege was required, that plaintiff's motion was gratuitous, and that defendant's plea was not sufficient, held by court to have been overruled. Smith v. Gulf Refining Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 330.

Where court, on overruling demurrer to plea of privilege, instructed plaintiff to file controverting affidavit, refusal stated in affidavit or collared privilege of to file hearing, unless plaintiff requested time to file controverting affidavit, plaintiff by not filing controverting affidavit or requesting time as required by this article, as amended, waived the right to file controverting affidavit, and was not injured by court's refusal to defer the case until subsequent term. Coca-Cola Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1087.

Where two defendants filed pleas of privilege, and plaintiff, by filing a controverting affidavit, only as to one of them, both of the pleas should have been sustained under Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 176, and the cause as to both defendants transferred since the trial court on its own motion cannot enter an order of severance and transfer same in so far as it affected the defendant, whose plea was not controverted. Masterson v. O'Fiel (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1117.

Under Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 176, where no contest of defendant's plea of privilege is filed by plaintiff by way of controverting plea under oath, plea of privilege establishes right to be sued in the county of residence, and the court no longer has jurisdiction over defendant's person. Haylett v. Rose Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 143.

Where the original and amended petitions showed the suit was brought in the proper county, and the original controverting affidavit alleged facts which fixed the venue in that county, there was no occasion for plaintiffs to file an amended controverting affidavit. Stenmon's v. Mathal (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 364.

Plaintiff's controverting pleas to defendant's plea of privilege to be sued in county of his residence held sufficient, in connection with the petition made a part thereof to fix the venue in the county in which action was brought, under art. 1830, subd. 4. Perkins v. Texas Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 756.

Conceding that petition alleged misrepresentations as to quality of corn sold by defendant, resident in another county, the case was not brought within the exception of fraud in the general venue statute where the controverting plea did not set out specifically the facts relied on nor refer to the petition for the facts. Gottlieb v. Dismukes (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 792.

As a plea controverting a plea of privilege to be sued in another county was not insufficient because not specifically alleging facts required by statute, where it pleaded that the suit was founded upon an offense and trespass committed by defendants in the county as set out in the petition to which reference was made. First Nat. Bank of Jacksonville v. Childs (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 507.

Defendant, under Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 176, defendants did not have sufficient notice of plaintiff's plea controverting their plea of privilege merely because counsel for plaintiff denied defendants' attorneys that he was filing such controverting plea, called the attention of one of defendants' attorneys to the fact of filing, showed it to him, and mailed an exact copy of the controverting affidavit and notation of the judge setting the matter for hearing to defendants' attorneys. McGhee v. Maxey (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 735.

Demurrer to plea.—Defendant, duly cited, must take notice of the filing of demurrer to its plea of privilege just as of any other pleading. Auds Creek Oil Co. v. Brooks Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 319.

Evidence—Burden of proof.—The burden is on a plaintiff, suing another in a county other than his residence, not only to allege, but prove, facts which would take the suit out of the general rule as to venue, where the defendant files a plea of privilege. Hutchinson v. R. Hamilton & Son (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 564; Masterson v. O'Fiel (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1117; Strawn Merchandise Co. v. Texas Grain & Hay Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1094.

Under this article, a defendant's plea of privilege is prima facie proof of his right to a change of venue, and the burden is on plaintiffs to show that the venue is rightly laid. Cotton States Petroleum Co. v. Britton (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 742; Clarke v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 878; Reece v. Langley (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 509.

Under this article, defendant's plea of privilege was prima facie proof of its right to have the case transferred to another county for trial. Sinton State Bank v. Tyler Commercial College (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 170; Payne v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 537.

Where defendant's plea of privilege alleged facts necessary under art. 1830 to entitle it to be sued in another county, and there was nothing in the record showing that plaintiff's exception to statute, being within exception to statute, was not made to show his cause of action came within one of the exceptions. Reliance Life Ins. Co. v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 354.

Where in habeas corpus defendants' plea of privilege was not controverted, the plea itself prima facie evidence of their right to a transfer, in view of Acts 35th Leg. c. 176. Lucid v. McDowell (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 260.

In suit on money demand filed subsequent to Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, plea of privilege of one defendant was prima facie proof of his right to change of venue, and, in absence of controverting plea and proof, plea should have been sustained. Morrison v. Richards (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 205.

In action on notes, where there was a sworn plea of privilege under this article, as amended, and issue joined as to such authority, plaintiff was bound to sustain his claim that defendants had bound themselves to pay notes in county of venue, and without any evidence thereof court was required to sustain plea. Ray v. W. W. Kimball Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 321.

Under this article, as amended, the averments of a verified plea of privilege that he was a resident of a county other than the one in which suit was brought are prima facie proof of the facts averred, and must be accepted as true, where the controverting answer filed by plaintiff attempted to defeat the plea solely on the ground that contract on which suit was brought was to be performed in the county where the venue was laid. Harris v. Moller (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 961.

Where no affidavit controverting defendant's plea of privilege under Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, § 1, was filed, trial court should have promptly granted change of venue; plea being prima facie proof of statements made. Murphy v. Dabney (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 981.

Defendant's plea of privilege, where no controverting plea was filed, and no evidence offered to bring action within the purview of art. 1830, subd. 7, relating to actions for fraud, should have been sustained, in view of Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, making plea prima facie proof. Griffin v. J. W. & J. R. Bryan (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 246.

Defendant's plea in justice court of special privilege to be sued in his own county and precinct, under Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, constituted prima facie proof of right of change of venue, and the facts therein alleged must be taken as true, in the absence of a controverting plea specifically setting out facts relied upon to confer venue. Gilvin v. Gulf Refining Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 330.

Under Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, held prima facie proof of right to change of venue, despite a superscription statement characterized by clerical error, so that, in the absence of plaintiff's controverting affidavit, the cause must be transferred. E. S. Witt & Sons v. Stith (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 673.

Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, making a verified plea of privilege prima facie proof of defendant's right to change of venue, applies to pending actions, as well as those thereafter instituted. Walker v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 713.

When defendants in an action for conversion filed written plea of privilege under oath, and alleged that none of the exceptions to exclusive venue existed, the plea controverting this article, and plaintiff filed controverting affidavit to the plea, an issue was joined, and in the absence of proof on either side the trial court should have sustained the plea. Hayes v. Penney (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 571.

In view of Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 176, where no other evidence than a plea of privilegs and contest were submitted, the burden was upon contestant, and it was error to overrule the plea; contest without other proof not alone being sufficient to offset the plea. Texas Supply Co. v. Bankers' & Merchants' Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 838.

Under this article, as amended, in action against husband and wife on note executed to secure privilege of husband constituting prima facie proof, and it devolved on plaintiff to file controverting affidavit and introduce evidence showing right to sue in county. Bledsoe v. Barber (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 369.

Though plaintiff pledged agency of wife for husband in executing note, and asserted it in controverting affidavit, plaintiff still remained under necessity to prove, it to show contract sued on was that of husband, so that action was properly brought in county of execution, art. 1830, subd. 5. Id.

Pleas of privilege under this article are prima facie proof of defendants' right to change venue, and the verified controverting plea joins the issue, and the burden is upon plaintiff to show that the trial court had jurisdiction of the defendant, and in the absence of such proof plea should prevail. Eyre v. Crockett State Bank (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 265.

Under this article, as amended, the burden is on plaintiff to prove allegations of his controverting affidavit, and where plaintiff offered no such proof it was error to overrule the plea. Standard Rice Co. v. Broussard (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 322.

A defendant, in suit, in form to partition land, filing a plea of privilege, in due form and verified, under this article, as amended, plaintiff must not only contest the plea by controverting affidavit, but support the contest by proof, though the plea made the unnecessary averment of false and fraudulent allegation in the petition that the suit was one for partition only. Watson v. Watson (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 569.

In an action claimed by plaintiff to be one for malicious prosecution and false imprisonment, under plea of privilege not denying the jurisdictional grounds but alleging the conclusion that the action was for libel and slander, plaintiff was not required to offer proof to sustain the venue. Knox v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 461.

On plea of privilege, plaintiff to sustain the venue on the ground that it was an action for fraud perpetrated in county, under art. 1830, subd. 7, was not required to prove the fraud, but merely that a transaction which might constitute an actionable fraud occurred in county where the suit was filed; the question of whether plaintiff sustained an injury and the extent of such injury being the matters to be determined in a trial on the merits. Edmonds v. White (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 819.

It is the facts, and not the averments of plaintiff's pleadings, which are determinative, and when defendant under this article, as amended, asserts the privilege, he is entitled as a matter of law to have the cause of action transferred unless plaintiff by controverting plea not only alleges, but by testimony proves to the contrary. First Nat. Bank v. Sanford (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 566.

Under this article, plea of privilege constituted prima facie proof, and when the controverting affidavit was filed, the burden rested on plaintiff to show that one defendant, acting as agent of another, had employed plaintiff to sell land, and not only had promised that the other defendant would pay commission, but that he would also be liable individually. Sargent v. Wright (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 781.

-- Admissibility.--While general rule is that a plea of privilege is inadmissible as evidence, where defendant's plea was introduced without objection, court was authorized to consider it in so far as it tended to prove defendant's residence in another county. J. M. Grocery Co. v. Flynn (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 215.

Evidence that defendant delivered a draft and certain vendor's lien notes to plaintiff for purpose of paying indebtedness sued upon was immaterial and irrelevant upon question of defendant's right to change of venue. Id.

In an action to recover land in which plaintiffs claimed to own undivided interests, evidence of facts contrary to the fact that the land was situated in the county in which the suit was brought was proper, but proof of facts other than the situation of the land was incompetent under defendant's plea of privilege. Galbreath v. Farrell (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1015.

-- Sufficiency.--In an action based on alleged fraudulent representations as to the title to land in the county, evidence by plaintiff, on plea of privilege, held not to sustain his allegation of fraud. Masterson v. O'Fiel (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1117.

Buyers of land, suing sellers in a county other than that of their residence, relying on art. 1830, subd. 5, held not to have overcome prima facie proof made by sellers in their pleas of privilege. Clarke v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 578.

In action for fraud, evidence on plea of privilege held sufficient to sustain plaintiff's right to bring action in county in which it was filed, on the ground that the fraud was perpetrated therein. Edmonds v. White (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 819.

In an action for breach of contract brought in the county where the seller was located, evidence, on a plea of privilege to be sued in another county, held to show that the controversy was caused by the seller's acceptance of a counter proposition made by the buyer after rejecting the seller's offer. Early-Foster Co. v. A. F. Moore's Sons (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 787.

In an action against a bank and its attorney, evidence tending to show that the attorney acted with the bank's doing alleged acts constituting trespass, and tending to show ratification or acquiescence, held sufficient to overcome the prima facie right to change arising from the sworn plea of privilege. First Nat. Bank v. Childs (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 807.
Waiver of plea.—See Murphy v. Debnay (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 381; Auds Creek Oil Co. v. Regional Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 319; notes to art. 306.

Hearing and determination.—Where defendant filed his plea of privilege in the justice court at the September term, plaintiff was not compelled to file a controverting plea until the October term, and the defendant did not waive his right by failing to call up such plea hearing before the October term, in view of Acts 55th Leg. c. 176. Girvin v. Gulf Redlining Co. (Civ. App.) 311 S. W. 330.

That plaintiff permitted court to prematurely try issue on a plea of privilege filed under this article, as amended, and thus waived his controverting affidavit, would not render judgment sustaining the plea, where the judgment must be reversed for other reasons. Hurst v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 284.

It is proper and not an abuse of discretion to first take up and dispose of the plea of privilege. Rutledge v. Evans (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 218.

There is nothing in this article, which expressly requires the court to determine a plea of privilege in advance of the trial on the merits, where the evidence thereon would disclose the facts necessary to determine the fact questions raised by the plea and controverting affidavit, and such a determination of the plea was in the discretion of the court. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. v. Simpson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 352.

Upon hearing of a plea of special privilege, it is not proper to express any opinion upon matters which are for determination upon the trial upon the merits. First Nat. Bank v. Childs (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 867.

Notice.—Under this article, where no controverting plea or affidavit was filed to plea of privilege, and no notice was given defendant of contest or hearing thereon, court could not render default judgment upon defendant's failure to appear. Brooks v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 288.

Effect of sustaining plea.—Under this article, as amended, the sustaining of plea of privilege in county of residence does not affect the suit, simply changes the venue. Brooks v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 311 S. W. 288.

Appeal—Right to appeal.—Where plaintiff contested plea of privilege by special and general demurrers, entry of order after hearing "that the general demurrer * * * be sustained," and that the "plea of privilege be, and the same is, overruled," and adjudging costs against defendant, was sufficient to support an appeal under this article. Cecil v. Fox (Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 954.

Under this article, as amended, an appeal lies from an order overruling a plea of privilege. Adams v. Wallace (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1079.

This article, as amended, is subordinate to and must be construed in harmony with art. 2076, limiting appeals from county court to Court of Civil Appeals to cases involving more than $100, exclusive of interest and costs. Moss v. Bross (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 343.

And it is subordinate to and must be construed in harmony with art. 2391, which limits appeals where the controversy exceeds $20. Id.

Under this article, as amended, the right of appeal is given from an order overruling the plea of privilege made by a justice of the peace, the same as from that made by any other court. McKay v. King-Collie Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 591.

Where the trial court neither sustained nor overruled pleas of privilege, but only overruled their motion for order transferring the cause and asking the court to sustain pleas of privilege and to transfer the cause, such order was merely interlocutory, from which there is no right of appeal, under this article, and art. 2078. Seale v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 288.

Effect of appeal.—Where plea of privilege was sustained, whereupon defendant excepted and gave notice of appeal, it was not error to try the case before determination of the appeal; the only effect of the notice being to suspend the transfer of the case under this article, as amended. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Boatenhammer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 972.

Failure to appeal.—Under the statute the Court of Civil Appeals has jurisdiction to review on writ of error the action of the county court in overruling plea of privilege, the right given by this article, as amended, to appeal from judgment sustaining or overruling such a plea, not being exclusive. Bennett v. Rose Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 143.

In view of this article, defendant waived the right to have the action of the trial court in overruling his plea reviewed when he failed to prosecute an appeal from the order overruling the plea. Hill v. Brady (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 146.

Disposition of appeal.—Where it is clear that judgment should have been rendered sustaining plea of privilege under this article, as amended, the appellate court on reversing the order will not remand, but will render judgment sustaining the plea and directing transfer to the proper county as provided by art. 1833. Lewis & Knight v. Florence (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1116.

Art. 1904. [1263] [1263] Answer to be filed, when.

Time for filing in general.—Plaintiff, on the fifth day of the term, moved for judgment by default, when an attorney stated that he had been retained in the case, and asked leave to file an answer forthwith, which was refused, and plaintiffs' motion was granted. Held, that under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1263, 1289-1282, he was entitled to the whole of the fifth day in which to file his answer, and that the judgment was erroneously entered. (Railway Co. v. Scott, 66 Tex. 552, 1 S. W. 683, followed.) Rowe v. Spencer, 70 Tex. 78, 8 S. W. 60.

Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1290, as amended by Laws 1891, p. 94, and 1362, as amended in 1894, defendant has the whole of the second day of the term to file his answer; and, while the appearance docket is called on the second day, yet judgment for default cannot be taken until the third day; repeal by implication not being favored in law. McKay v. Barlow (App.) 18 S. W. 650.

Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1290, as amended by Act April 13, 1891, amending art. 1290, to make the second day of the term appearance day, and, if defendant did not appear when his case was called on the second day, judgment was properly rendered against him. Graham v. Miller (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 1107.

Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1263 and 4835, it was error to render judgment by default against the claimant of attached property on the second day of the term, though that was designated as appearance day by Laws 1891, p. 94, c. 76. Martin v. Hartnett (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 963.

At July 12, 1891, amending Rev. St. 1879, art. 1290, so as to substitute the second for the fifth day of the term, as appearance day, repealed the conflicting provision of art. 1283, requiring defendants served more than five days before term to answer, on or before the fifth day, and authorized the entry of defaults on the second day under arts. 1281, 1282. Martin v. Hartnett, 86 Tex. 517, 25 S. W. 1115; reversing (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 963.

Notice of filing.—While plaintiff in an action for breach of contract is charged with notice of any pleading filed by defendant in answer to his claim, plaintiff is not required to anticipate and take notice of any claim which defendant may assert against him by plea in reconvention. Jarratt v. McCarty (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 712.

Art. 1905. [1264] [1264] Answer in cases of citation by publication.

Art. 1906. [1265] [1265] Certain pleas to be verified by affidavit.

Subdivision 2.—Under subd. 2 and 3, where bank sued as guardian, and there was no plea putting in issue its capacity to sue as such, there was no necessity for any proof as to its capacity, and it is unnecessary to inquire whether evidence of proceedings culminating in appointment and qualification of bank as guardian was properly admitted. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 679.

Subdivision 3.—See Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 679.

Cited, Richardson v. Allison (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 252.

Subdivision 6.—In an action by alleged partners, owners of cattle shipped by one of them, the partnership, not being denied under oath, need not be proved under this article. Good v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Sup.) 11 S. W. 854, 4 L. R. A. 901.

It was not necessary for defendant, under this subdivision, to deny under oath the existence of a partnership between it and another company, when not alleged in the petition. Smith v. Western Union Tel. Co., 84 Tex. 309, 19 S. W. 441, 31 Am. St. Rep. 59.

Where defendant was sued individually, and not as partner, his denial of partnership between himself and one who contracted with plaintiff need not be verified. Markowitz v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 988.

Subdivision 7.—In view of arts. 1822, 1906, where defendants in an action on notes answered and failed to raise the issue that the plaintiff bank was not duly incorporated, they could not raise such question by motion to set aside the judgment. Sayles v. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Abilene (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 823.

Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1265, subd. 8, where the mortgagor pleads a general denial, not verified by oath, no proof of the execution of the mortgage is necessary as to him. Chator v. Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., 71 Tex. 558, 18 S. W. 250.

It was not necessary for defendant, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1265, subd. 8, to deny, under oath, the execution of a written contract with it for the transmission of a message, when not alleged in the petition. Smith v. Western Union Tel. Co., 84 Tex. 359, 19 S. W. 441, 31 Am. St. Rep. 59.

If defendant desired to place in issue either signing or delivery of bill of sale pleaded by plaintiff, it was necessary for him to deny same under oath as required by this article. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 549.

Though in a suit in a note assigned a verified plea of non est factum was hardly in compliance with subd. 8, in absence of objection below, it may be considered as regular in form. 1973, First Nat. Bank v. Mifflord (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 583.

Under subd. 8, and article 3710, defendant in suit for taxes held bound to deny under oath that rendition of property was made by it, to be entitled to deny that it made rendition. North American Dredging Co. of Nevada v. State (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1965.

Where the sender of a telegram telephoned the message and the telegraph agent, without the sender's knowledge, wrote it upon one of its forms, a verified reply denying the execution of a written contract by the sender was not necessary. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 592.

The absence of a sworn pleading questioning genuineness of a written instrument does not dispense with its production in court; and, where a written instrument is declared on and there is a general denial, it is necessary to establish plaintiff's case for his honor of the instrument in evidence. Webb v. Reynolds (App.) 207 S. W. 914. Art. 588, and art. 1906, subd. 9, were not intended to dispense with proof of an administrator's authority to sell or assign, as such authority, under art. 3450, depends upon an effectual or sworn verified denial of any entailed assignment thereof to plaintiff did not dispense with proof of its validity. Id.

Subdivision 10.—Effect of sworn plea, see Newton v. Newton, 77 Tex. 568, 14 S. W. 157.

Under this subdivision an affidavit that the answer is true "to the best of [affiant's] knowledge and belief" is insufficient. Cates v. Maes (App.) 14 S. W. 1066.

In an action by a stockholder against the officers and managers of a private corporation, where an unverified answer set up that the stock was donated to plaintiff, and no consideration was ever paid for it, that evidence was not admissible under defendant's plea in view of this subdivision. Piecett v. Abney, 84 Tex. 645, 15 S. W. 859.

The court held to have erred in refusing to instruct that a shipper, by his contract of shipment, had waived all claims for damages previously accrued, since, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1266, subd. 10, the want of consideration for such contract could be set up only by proper plea supported by affidavit, which was not done in this case. Gulf, U. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Wright, 1 Civ. App. 402, 21 S. W. 80.

Subdivision 11.—The rule that the justness of the account cannot be impeached unless a counter affidavit is filed does not mean that ownership of the debt is conceded by failing to file an affidavit. Intertype Corporation v. Sentinel Pub. Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 548.

Art. 1907 [1266] [1266] Plea of payment, counter claim, etc.

Payment.—An answer, in an action on a note, which alleges various payments to plaintiff's attorney, who had the note for collection, and final payment to such attorney, but fails to state the times or amounts of such payments, or how made, is insufficient, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1266. Hanna v. Broussard, 3 Civ. App. 481, 23 S. W. 85.

In a suit against former administrator and his surety for an accounting as to a note owing by such administrator to his decedent in order that the presumption of payment from undisputed testimony that the note had been seen in the administrator's possession three days before testator's death, and that it was the community property of decedent and decedent's wife, may be availing, such defenses must be advanced in the same way, as provided in arts. 1906, 1907. American Surety Co. of New York v. Norton (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 437.

Set-off or counterclaim.—In a vendor's action for the price, allegations held sufficient in view of the prayer for general relief, to authorize the court to allow a set-off to the amount that vendor was entitled to recover. Westbrook v. Missouri-Texas Land & Irrigation Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1154.

In action for price of a tractor, where defendants counterclaimed for damages to their crops and prayed an amount in excess of that awarded, interest on the amount awarded could be allowed in the absence of a specific prayer therefor. Southern Gasoline Engine Co. v. Adams & Peters (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 676.

In trespass to try title, where there was no pleading on the part of defendants of the payment of specific taxes and no prayer for any set-off, the court did not err in refusing to award defendants the damages awarded plaintiff's taxes paid by defendants, in view of this article. Watts v. McCloud (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 381.

In an action on note where answer set forth fraud and failure of consideration and prayed that plaintiff take nothing by its suit, that the notes be canceled, and that defendant recover his costs, plaintiff's failure to appear did not entitle defendant to a judgment granting such relief, the answer not presenting a counterclaim or cross-action, Commercial Credit Co. v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 298.

Art. 1908. [1267] [1267] General denial need not be repeated.

Operation.—Under direct provisions of this article, a general denial is not required to be repeated when plaintiff amends his pleading. Trimble v. Hawkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 224.

Denial of material allegations in an original petition would not have to be repeated because such allegations are repeated in amended petition. Id.

Art. 1909. [1268] [1268] Pleas to be filed in due order, etc.

Cited, Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. City of Ennis (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 256.

In general.—Under arts. 1909 and 1910, requiring pleas to be filed in due order, etc., a plea of privilege waives right to thereafter plead to court's jurisdiction over subject-matter. San Antonio Drug Co. v. Red Cross Pharmacy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 324.

Agreement in open court that case might be transferred to another county, as if on plea of privilege, held equivalent to plea in so far as waiving right thereafter to plead to court's jurisdiction over subject-matter. Id.

To obtain the benefits of the venue provision of art. 1839, subd. 17, the privilege must be claimed seasonably and in due order of pleading, otherwise it will be deemed to have been waived. Kieschnick v. Martin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 948.

Chap. 8) COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN Art. 1910

One who presents a plea of privilege at a different time from that fixed by statute and rule of court has the burden of showing that his plea has not been abandoned by his previous neglect. Poole v. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 766.

If special exception presenting defendants' privilege of being sued in the county of their residence was filed for the first time in the amended answer, it came necessarily too late, and a plea of special privilege was not filed in due order. Edelman v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 221.

A plea in abatement should precede a general demurrer, as such a plea cannot be sustained and still have an adjudication on the merits—which result from the sustaining of a general demurrer and a refusal to amend. Becker v. Becker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 542.

Where the record showed that a plea in abatement based on misjoinder of causes of action was not disposed of until the date on which judgment was rendered, it will be assumed that the plea was not filed in time and hence was waived. McDonald v. Axtell (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 563.

Under arts. 1902, 1909, 1910, 1947, and rules 7 and 24 for District Courts (143 S. W. xvii, xix), as to order of pleas in abatement, where, in action on fire insurance policy, failure of insured to submit to examination was not pleaded except as one of several special defenses, it was not filed in due order, as a plea in abatement, and not being called up at the first term of court, and no special ruling being asked thereon before a trial on the merits, the plea was waived. Humphrey v. National Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 750.

Answer to merits as waiver of matter in abatement.—Where two railway companies filed a joint answer, not complaining of misjoinder of causes of action, and subsequently filed separate answers, pleading misjoinder in abatement, the objection was waived. Mississippi K. & T. Ry. v. Baker Bros. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 244.

Generally, when a defendant answers in bar before he presents his dilatory plea, he will be held to have waived his plea of privilege. McClure v. Palr (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 683.

Where defendant pleaded in abatement that the plaintiff, a minor, was not represented by next friend, etc., an answer to the merits after the overruling of the plea in abatement is a waiver of the plea in abatement. Gross v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 764.

Where plaintiff was given a judgment against a partnership, and the partnership a judgment against T., and T. against the defendant appellant, T. was, in respect to his cross-action against appellant, a plaintiff controlling the cause as an independent suit, and by answering the cross-action on the merits appellee waived his plea of special privilege as against the defendant partnership. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. v. Simpson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 352.

Art. 1910. [1269] [1269] Certain pleas to be determined during the term at which filed.

Construction and application.—Where court sustained defendant's plea of privilege, but set aside order on plaintiff's motion, and passed cause to next term, and defendant failed to appear at such term, and no order was made with respect to such plea, by failing to appear and present his plea of privilege defendant waived it, and it was overruled by operation of law. Hill v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 957.

Where record does not indicate that pleas of privilege were called to court's attention during two years, they will be considered waived. Cruz v. Texas Glass & Paint Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 819.

Plea of privilege is waived, where no action was taken during term in which it was filed, and it was not continued without prejudice. Id.

Under this provision, failure to determine plea of another action pending at term at which it is filed, in absence of showing that court business prevented, waives plea. McCoy v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1133.

Error, if any, in disposing of plea of other action pending, is harmless, where pleader's failure to have such plea determined at term at which it was filed waived plea. Id.

Where a plea of privilege, filed in the county court, was continued by agreement, the order reciting "without prejudice to" defendant's right to such plea, the continuance was not a waiver of the plea. Torno v. Cochran (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 755.

Where the record shows that, while a cause was continued for several terms, this was done by agreement and without prejudice to defendant's plea of special privilege to be sued in county of his residence, such continuance does not constitute waiver of the plea. Jointex v. First State Bank of Richland (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 599.

In view of art. 1910, and district court rule 24 (142 S. W. xix), as to dilatory pleas, it is duty of party filing plea in abatement to call trial court's attention to its term to which it is filed, and failure to do so will be held a waiver of such plea. Texas Packing Co. v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 120.

Plea in abatement, or other dilatory plea, must be disposed of during term to which it is filed, except where business of court will not permit, or where plea is passed without prejudice, with consent of parties. Id.

If trial court's failure to enforce rule, that failure of party filing plea in abatement to call court's attention to its term to which it is filed will be held a waiver of plea, is reversible error, where it is made to appear there was no sufficient reason for trial court's action. Id.

Where it appears plea in abatement was not disposed of at term to which filed, if trial court had held plea was waived, in absence of showing of record as to why it was not disposed of, Court of Civil Appeals would sustain action below on presumption no sufficient reason existed for failure to dispose of plea. Id.

A motion by defendant for a continuance does not constitute an abandonment of a plea of privilege, where the motion shows that defendant was insisting thereon, and the judgment shows that it was continued without prejudice. Ozbolt v. Lumbermen's Indemnity Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 158.

Where defendant's plea of privilege in justice court was overruled during December term, and the case taken to county court on February 19th following certiorari returnable to the March term, and where motion to dismiss certiorari which was filed during the March term was not disposed of until June 2d, when motion to strike out plea was made, there was no waiver of plea in county court. Poole v. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 706.

Under art. 1910, as amended by Acts 35th Leg. c. 176, and in view of arts. 1832 and 1833, and notwithstanding art. 1910, defendant, after filing plea of privilege, is not required to appear until he receives notice of a contest and of order setting a day for hearing; the filing of plea being appearance for purpose of plea and proof of rights asserted. Brooks v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 288.

In view of a rule of the district court authorized by arts. 1910, 1945, where there was no reason why exceptions to defendant's second amended answer were not presented by plaintiff when the docket was called for such purpose during the first week of the term at which the case was tried, the refusal of the trial court to consider such exceptions was proper. Conner v. McAfee (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 646.

Under this article, and in view of rule 24, for district and county courts (142 S. W. xix), the failure of defendant to call to the attention of the trial court its plea of privilege at the term at which it was filed is no waiver thereon. See the amendment of article 1903, by Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 176. Auds Creek Oil Co. v. Brooks Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 319.

When a case was continued to another term without declaring it was without prejudice to a defendant's plea of privilege, or without anything in record showing it was passed by agreement, or that business of court was such that plea could not have been disposed of at term had it been called to its attention, there was a waiver by defendant of his plea of privilege. Griffith v. Sawyer (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 687.

The mere filing of plea of privilege, without calling the attention of a court to it until long after the case has been tried, does not require the court to set aside its judgment and dismiss the suit. Phillips v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 248.

When a wife who was acting as husband was accused of defrauding plaintiff, where his plea in abatement, but failed to call court's attention thereto until long after the judgment was rendered, and where there was nothing to indicate fraud, concealment, or deception, the court did not err in overruling the plea. Id.

Under this article, and rule 24 (142 S. W. xix), the defendants by permitting the cause to be continued to succeeding terms without calling the court's attention to pleas in abatement urging plaintiff's legal incapacity by reason of its having no permit to do business in the state and demanding action thereon waived such pleas. Texas Packing Co. v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 1095.

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

See Tucker v. Angelina County Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 149.

1. Necessity of pleading in defense in general.—Ordinarily, defendant seeking exception from liability under statutory proviso has burden of pleading such exception.

Parties claiming a right by prescription to divert waters from a stream were not required to plead or prove that the parties against whom the right was claimed and those under whom they claimed were free from disabilities, as the law presumes a grant, and such presumption involves a grantor sui juris. Martin v. Burr (Sup.) 228 S. W. 648.

4. Style of pleadings.—That an answer was without allegation showing its character, is not ground for reversal, it on its face adopting the answer of another, and thus clearly indicating the claim of firm ownership of funds garnished as those of an individual. Brown v. Cassidy-Southwestern Commission Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 833.

5 1/2. Matters of evidence.—In an action for wrongful death of plaintiff's alleged common-law husband, it was not incumbent upon defendants to plead the evidence to show that plaintiff had never married the deceased, and they could produce evidence to prove that the deceased was the lawful husband of another by a prior existing marriage. Lopez v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 695.

10. Plea to the jurisdiction.—In suit praying for cancellation of instruments with reference to cutting of guayule in land in Mexico, plea to jurisdiction held not to go to the jurisdiction of the court to inquire into the question of fraud, but to the power of the court to grant cancellation of instruments. Griner v. Trevino (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 947.

In materialman's action on paving contractor's bond required under art. 6394f, the defense that materialman's action was prematurely brought should be raised by plea in abatement. Fennell v. Trinity Portland Cement Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 796.
Proof as to incontestability of state and residence of county, required by art. 4632, is as material as any other fact in a divorce case, and though the question is not raised by plea in abatement, it is not waived, but the plaintiff must allege and prove residence as part of his case. Gallagher v. Gallagher (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 516.

In an action to set aside part of a judgment on the ground that plaintiff was never served, that he had been dismissed because he was not pleaded with certainty demanded by law, held a plea in abatement, and no more than a special exception. Becker v. Becker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 642.

In an action on notes where it was sought to foreclose a vendor's lien, the sustaining of the defendant's plea to the answer held warranted despite the contention that an estoppel was set up the assignment merely calling into review the action of the court in striking out that portion of the pleading alleging extensions which was really a plea in abatement. Duenkel v. Amarillo Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 670.

If suit is brought prematurely, the matter must be shown and established by the defense, and the fact does not render the petition, otherwise good, demurrable. Palme v. Hart-Parr Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 121.

14. Denials—General denial.—Threats made and communicated are admissible under self-defense plea; but, before admitting evidence of the general character of the assaulted party as a justification, there must be a proper pleading putting it in issue, and evidence to support it, being the general rule that matters in justification cannot be pleaded under the general issue. Pfueger v. Schoen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1500.

16. Cross-complaint against plaintiff.—In action on notes given for price of land, cross-bill, alleging that the notes were given in payment for land on condition and under representations of plaintiff that the land would be irrigated adequately, and that the irrigation was not adequate, was demurrable for failure to allege that plaintiff did not intimate or did not induce to enter into the contract with misrepresentation. Lott Town & Improvement Co. v. Harper (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 452.

If a fence was defendant's property at the time plaintiff had writ of injunction issued to prevent removal thereof, defendant was entitled to file cross-action for damages. Anderson v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 784.

Where plaintiff sued to prevent defendants' interference with a fence, although the writ of injunction became functus officio at the convening of the term of court at which it was returnable, and plaintiff kept the property, the suit was still pending, and a cross-claim could be filed. Id.

Cross-action in divorce suit alleging "cruel, harsh, and inhuman treatment," though in words of statute, does not state cause of action for divorce; it being necessary to state the facts and circumstances. Rowden v. Rowden (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 305.

In an action to recover lands, answer in the usual form of an answer setting up affirmative matter, to the effect that plaintiff was bound by his lines as run by a surveyor, etc., and concluding with a prayer that defendant go hence without day and recover his costs, must be treated as an answer and not as a cross-action. Davies v. Rutland (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 235.

In action to foreclose vendor's lien where defendant in cross-action pleaded damages for breach of contract with plaintiffs, and set out contract purporting to have been made with other parties, without showing how plaintiff's liability accrued, court did not err in sustaining general demurrer. Zimmerman v. Keith (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 288.

In an action on a written lease of a farm and dairy stock, an exception to allegations in defendant's cross-bill that plaintiff failed to furnish an engine as agreed should have been sustained, plaintiff not having so agreed under the written contract, in the absence of a showing in the cross-bill of a new contract on a valuable consideration. Hall v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1110.

In an action on purchase-money note, a cross-petition alleging that the note and other obligations given for lots purchased from plaintiff, located at a distance from defendant's residence, and that plaintiff falsely represented the lots had a 50-foot frontage, and that curbing and sidewalks would be installed, stated cause of action as against general demurrer. Dingman v. Pahl (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 446.

In a seller's action for a balance due, the buyer's cross-bill, setting up the seller's failure to deliver during the month of July on the ground that the subsequent delivery caused greater expense in hauling, is open to exception; there being nothing to show that the contract was made with reference to the special circumstances. Myrick v. Tollivar (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 255.

In action to foreclose vendor's lien, purchasers' cross-bill, alleging that the vendor guaranteed sufficient irrigation for the land, that the land had not been adequately irrigated, and that the purchaser had sustained damages by reason thereof, held good as against general demurrer. Harper v. Lott Town & Improvement Co. (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 188.

In a suit in the nature of a bill of review to set aside a judgment of divorce, testimony showing grounds for a divorce was admissible as a reply to plaintiff's pleadings and proof that there was no cause of action for divorce, independent of the cross-demand for divorce. Harris v. Harris (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 224.

17. Cross-complaint against codefendant.—In an action against a partner, the latter's cross-petition, to enforce a settlement and fix liability of a silent partner, alleging existence of partnership and that firm assets have all been disposed of, held sufficient. Lester v. Park (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 734.

In depositor's action against bank for deposits wrongfully misappropriated by bank's cashier, it was proper for the bank by cross-action to join surety on cashier's bond; the depositor's right to recover against the bank and bank's cashier for recovery involving the same facts and issues. National Surety Co. v. Atascosa Ice, Water & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 597.
In a suit by a bank on a partnership note, a cross-action by one of the partners against the other, seeking an accounting as to partnership matters not related to the note in suit, is foreign to the plaintiff's suit, and should be dismissed on plaintiff's objection. Stanton v. Security Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 854.

19. Construction of pleading.—Any doubt as to the proper construction of a prayer of answer will be solved in favor of the judgment. Poole v. Cage (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 509.

22½. Conclusiveness of allegations.—In a suit to foreclose a mortgage, where defendant pleaded a tender and testified that the tender was to cover principal, interest, taxes, and some attorney's fees, he could not, on appeal, question plaintiff's right to declare the whole of the principal due, or to recover taxes and reasonable attorney's fees. Martí v. Wooten (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 447.

23. Theory of defense.—In action on notes for price of engine and fixtures, answer alleging parol agreement to take back the engine and fixtures in settlement of the last two notes, and that plaintiff had taken the engine and was claiming it, held not a plea of accord and satisfaction as distinguished from payment. Barcus v. J. J. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 478.

In a suit for specific performance of a compromise agreement, whereby defendant agreed to deed 2,806 acres of land, an answer held not a plea for rescission of the contract on the ground of fraud, mutual mistake, or mistake of defendant, accompanied by inequitable conduct of plaintiffs, but simply a plea that the contract did not express defendant's intention. Flores v. Flores (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1157.

Under answer in suit for title and possession of an automobile, trial court authorized to treat defendant's claim as a suit for conversion of the car. Hyway Motor Co. v. Saulsbury (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 322.

In action to foreclose vendor's lien, cross-bill, alleging that the vendor guaranteed sufficient ground water for irrigation and that the land had not been adequate, held to set up an action for breach of contract, and not an action based upon fraud. Harper v. Lott Town & Improvement Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 188.

In an action against a fraternal insurer, answer held in the nature of a bill of interpleading; and not a plea of the pendency of another suit; and hence, where without objection to the jurisdiction of the Texas courts over the nonresident minor the rights of the parties were adjudicated, the insurer cannot complain. Royal Neighbors of America v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 473.

24. Withdrawal or abandonment of pleading.—The pendency of wife's divorce action, in one instance, did not affect the jurisdiction of district court of other county in husband's divorce action, though wife filed plea of abatement in husband's action, where court's attention was not called thereto until after rendition of judgment. Phillips v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 243.

25. Variance between pleading and proof.—In divorce actions the courts will not quibble as to whether evidence showing plaintiff not entitled to divorce is supported by the pleadings. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 602.

In suit to enjoin construction of certain houses on land adjoining that owned by plaintiffs, allegation that the houses which plaintiffs were threatening to build would constitute a public and private nuisance held a conclusion of the pleader. Worm v. Wood (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1016.

In an action by a lessor of stock to recover one-half the difference in value between animals dying and those replacing them, as required by the agreement, an allegation in the answer that “the death of said cattle was wholly due to plaintiff's negligence” was a conclusion and insufficient. Hall v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1110.

32. — Inconsistent allegations.—An express allegation, in an action for breach of contract to purchase cattle, that cattle tendered were fully according to contract, is alone sufficient, when tested by a general demurrer, to show that plaintiff tendered cattle which in all respects complied with his contract obligations, and it is not lightly to be presumed that such an averment is contradicted and overruled by other allegations. Laxson v. Scarborough (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1029.

Such allegation was not overthrown by an allegation that on account of severe weather conditions the cattle had greatly deteriorated in value; the word “deteriorated” sometimes being used as a synonym for the word “decline," in view of district and county court rule 17 (142 S. W. xviii). 1d.

33. — Irrelevancy and surplusage.—In buyer's action for seller's failure to deliver the other allegations that the buyer falsely represented he was solvent and of large means were immaterial, where it appeared from the seller's pleading that after learning of the buyer's insolvency he failed to repudiate the contract, but voluntarily acted on it, making an effort to carry it into effect and claiming its benefits; so that the court did not err in sustaining exceptions to such allegations. Fentzer v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 844.

37. Pleading particular facts or defenses—Abandonment or breach of contract.—Vendor's pleadings in action involving purchaser's right to specific performance, held not to support a claim of forfeiture and abandonment of or failure by purchaser to perform contract. Occidental Life Ins. Co. v. Montgomery (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 193.

37/2. Accord and satisfaction.—An answer alleging a bona fide controversy over the amount due and a draft upon the defendant for the amount, if payment be made, with which the draft is paid, shall be sufficient. In the absence of such payment or of such draft, the court may in its discretion order the attachment of all property of the defendant to enforce the payment of the amount due. Miller Bros. & Co. v. H. Lesinsky Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 992.

39. Another action pending.—In an action against a fraternal insurer, the insurer's answer held in the nature of a bill of interpleader, and not to plead the pendency of another suit. Royal Neighbors of America v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 476.

41. Assumption of risk.—In an action for injuries to servant, the defendant must plead and prove its defense of assumed risk. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hasselbusch (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 268.

44. Consideration and want or failure thereof.—In an action on notes given for price of engine, held, that failure of consideration was sufficiently pleaded and shown to defeat right of plaintiff to recover. Southern Engine & Pump Co. v. Teneha Light & Power Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 268.

45.- Coverture.—Defense of coverture need not be pleaded where the petition discloses the disability. Shannon v. Childers (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1030.

In suit by a married woman against a warehouseman for loss of goods, plaintiff cannot object to judgment on cross-action for storage fees, where she did not plead coverture as a defense to such cross-action, and in a supplemental petition alleged facts showing that the goods were her separate property, that she had separated from her husband, and that she had power to make the contract of storage. Lowery v. McCrary Transfer & Storage Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 736.

46. Damages and mitigation thereof.—In an action for breach of contract of employment, burden of pleading and proving facts showing mitigation of damages by reason of employee's earnings after termination of contract is upon employer. Minnix v. Pittsburgh & Ohio, etc., R. R. Co. (Sup. Ct.) 201 S. W. 1059.

While it may be that an injured person must show reason for failure to use adequate means to effect a recovery and mitigate his damages rather than to aggravate them, it is the better practice for defendant to plead special facts showing contributory negligence by plaintiff in aggravating his injury. Baker v. Cobb (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 314.

In a servant's action the defense that the servant was negligent in the treatment of his injuries or in failing to observe and obey the instructions of his attending physician must be pleaded to be available. West Lumber Co. v. Keen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 625.

In an action for the conversion of ore taken from a mining claim by trespassers, the purchasers cannot recover for their expenditures on the ore, where they did not plead nor prove the items of such expenditures. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 567.

47. Discharge of surety.—In action against sureties where defense is alteration of obligation, the sureties must plead and prove facts entitling them to a discharge by reason of alteration. Southland Life Ins. Co. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 460.

48. Estoppel, waiver, and ratification.—In an action on note and trust deed securing it, in the absence of plea of estoppel, the issue of estoppel under trust deed was properly withheld from the jury. Murphy v. Lewis (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1059.

A waiver of the right to insist that a tender was of too small an amount by refusing it on other grounds must be specially pleaded. Martl v. Wooten (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 447.

In a suit to cancel an oil and gas lease, defendants' pleas of after-acquired title by plaintiff, and of estoppel through the acceptance of annual rentals held sufficient. Smith v. Bateman (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 831.

Defendant in answer to charge of fraud, being entitled to set out in answer history of transaction, may allege plaintiff's statement of value, though it constitute only plaintiff's opinion. Brooks v. Long (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 518.

In an action for goods sold and delivered an allegation, pleaded on information by defendant, that defendant's intestate signed the contract under a mistake of fact as to contents thereof, due to misrepresentations held insufficient to raise the issue of fraud or mutual mistake. Detroit Steel Products Co. v. Houston Printing Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 884.

A plea, whereby defendant sought to avoid an agreement for release, alleging that she executed it with a certain understanding and under a certain belief as to its legal import, is insufficient as a plea of mutual mistake. Lovejoy v. Harding (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 833.

A plea whereby defendant sought to avoid an instrument, alleging that she was induced to sign by contemporaneous oral agreement and that she executed it with the understanding and under the belief that such was its legal import, and that she was not indebted in the amount named in it, is insufficient as a plea of fraud. Id.

To have entitled a railroad company to relief, against its contract to transport a carload of corn, on the ground of mistake, the road must have set up such mistake in its pleadings. Chicago & O. W. Ry. Co. v. Plano Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 832.

In action to foreclose chattel mortgage, defendant having admitted indebtedness in writing and execution of mortgage, the court could have properly excluded evidence tending to show that defendant was in jail when he executed the mortgage; there being no allegations. Boll v. Bumburg (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 428.

In the absence of exceptions, the allegations of an answer of a fraternal insurer held sufficient to raise the issue that the applicant was guilty of fraud in falsely representing that he was not engaged in the saloon business. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World v. Willette (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 609.

A contract for materialman's lien on a homestead being complete on its face, evidence to show that contract was invalid because resting partly in writing and partly in parol, was inadmissible under a pleading only that there was no valid lien, and not pleading omission of material part of the agreement by fraud, accident, or mistake. Lipscomb v. Adamson Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 228.

In a seller's action against buyers of machinery, an allegation of the answer that plaintiff knew the character of work the machine was intended to do was material on the issue of fraud in inducing defendants to contract. Browning Engineering Co. v. Willette (Com. App.) 224 S. W. 151.

Buyer's allegations as to the defects which prevented it from doing the work for which it was intended held proper on the issue of fraud inducing sale, and not subject to exception as not being included in the contract or lacking in definiteness and certainty. Id.

In an action for liquidated damages, because of defendant's refusal to consummate a land exchange transaction, defendant's allegations held sufficient to sustain proof that the contract was obtained pursuant to a conspiracy between plaintiff and brokers to defraud defendant. Nesbitt v. Hudson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 746.

In suit for title to an undivided one-quarter interest in and to all gas, oil, and other minerals in a certain 160 acres of land, the petition alleging that defendants executed and delivered to plaintiffs a general warranty conveyance to the minerals, but after loss of such conveyance prior to registration refused to give a substituted conveyance, and the answer enumerating facts constituting fraud, but not specifically, charging fraud, where the facts charged in the answer relative to plaintiffs' standing by while defendants made a miscalculation of royalties in the lease constituted fraud, it was proper for the court to permit defendants to testify to anything which tended to prove their allegations. Morris v. McGough (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1092.

In suit for title to an interest in gas, oil, and other minerals in a certain 160 acres of land, the petition alleging that defendants executed and delivered to plaintiffs a general warranty conveyance to such minerals, but after loss of such conveyance prior to registration refused to give a substituted conveyance, answer enumerating facts constituting fraud, but not specifically charging fraud, held good as against general demurrer. Id.

Fraud must be specifically alleged, and if defendant, in action by broker to recover commissions, wished to set up the defense that an agent of plaintiff, with whom the land was listed, whom he did not know to be an agent, made the fraudulent statement that he was not connected with plaintiff, he must specifically allege such fraud. Christian v. Dunlap (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 876.

In a suit to foreclose a lien executed by a husband and attacked by wife as in fraud of her homestead rights, the wife's pleadings held to abandon her homestead claim in a particular tract of property and place her entire claim for homestead on another tract. Bell v. Franklin (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 181.

Where an oil and gas lease was attacked on the ground of insufficient acknowledgment, in that the notary who took the acknowledgment was interested therein, being agent of the lessee, a specific averment that the leased property alleged to belong to a husband and wife constituted the homestead of the lessors is necessary. Cooper v. Casselberry (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 241.
54. Illegality of contract.—In an action on county road warrants, an answer that the materials for which the warrants were issued were purchased in contravention of Const. art. 11, § 7, held to set up a good defense as against plaintiff's general demurrer. Austin Bros. v. Patton (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 702.

In buyer's action for failure to deliver cotton contracted for, the seller's plea that it was contemplated that contract might be set aside by payment of the difference in price, without actual delivery of and payment for the cotton, held sufficient pleading of illegality to render admissible parol evidence that the contract was a "future contract." Fenter v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 844.

61. Negligence and contributory negligence.—Contributory negligence is matter of defense which must be pleaded and proved, except where plaintiff in pleading or developing his case pleads or develops contributory negligence. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Ash (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 685.

In order for a defendant to recover on contributory negligence, he must prove negligence in the way he specially pleaded it, and the court is restricted to grounds alleged in the answer. Texas Midland R. R. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 340.

In an action by a father for death of his son against the latter's employer, in the absence of plea of contributory negligence, there was no basis for submission of the issue. West Lumber Co. v. Hunt (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1106.

63. Notice or knowledge of facts.—In suit by bank, assignor of cotton receipts issued by public weigher, against weigher and sureties for breach of duty in releasing cotton without surrender of receipts by assignor, where weigher and sureties did not make, in trial court, defense that there was no indorsement on the receipts, a verdict held not justified. Taliaferro v. Brady Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 174.

An answer, in an action by landlord on notes to foreclose lien, wherein defendant sought, in effect, to cancel the notes by pleading, in answer, that plaintiff had notice of the kind of crops that defendant intended to plant on the tract which plaintiff inter refused to let. Hulshizer v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 653.

64. Payment.—Though allegations as to parol agreement to take back engine if notes for price were not paid would have been bad under parol evidence rule, held, that pleading as a whole showing the engine had been taken back had the effect of showing a discharge of the unpaid notes. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 478.

In an action concerning the right of mortgagee to foreclose, landowner was not entitled to show that the mortgage note had been paid, where he did not plead payment. Well v. Miller (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 142.

In suit by a national bank on a note executed for accommodation purposes by controlling stockholders in a borrowing company, allegations as to loan to company and the device adopted to enable the bank by discounting defendants' paper to exceed the legal limit held properly pleaded as matter of inducement leading up to the agreement of the bank to apply deposits by the company solely to any accommodation paper. Goldstein v. Union Nat. Bank of Dallas (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 409.

It was proper also to plead that a prior note, executed under the same agreement, had been discharged in such manner. Id.

Defendants, under the answer, held entitled to introduce in evidence entries made in the bank book of the company by the receiving teller of the bank. Id.

In a life insurance company's action on assigned lien notes secured by its policies, also on a policy loan note, where defendant did not plead agreement that the amount collected on a policy should be applied first to payment of the balance due on a particular vendor's lien note, defendant's oral testimony to such effect was inadmissible. Slaughter v. Texas Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1109.

66. Res judicata.—In a suit to compel an irrigation plant to supply water at a reasonable rate, it was not error to admit decrees in a previous suit whereby the irrigation plant was conveyed to purchasers at a judicial sale free from easements, notwithstanding an exception to a plea of res judicata was sustained. McBride v. United Irr. Ass'n (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 496.

Where a judgment for defendant was not entered upon the minutes and a new trial was awarded at a subsequent term, resulting in a judgment for plaintiff, defendant was not required to plead the judgment first entered in bar to further proceeding upon the second trial. Etna Ins. Co. v. Dancer (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 962.

The defense of a former judgment must be presented in bar, and not in abatement of the second suit. Whiteman v. Whiteman (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 888.

68. Tender and offer of equity.—In an action on a life policy, where it appeared that plaintiff had been tendered, through her attorney, more than three months before the suit was brought, the full amount the company had received, and liability for which it admitted, no proof of tender was necessary. Illinois Banks' Life Ass'n v. Floyd (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 967, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Floyd v. Illinois Banks' Life Ass'n of Monmouth, Ill., 192 S. W. 607.

An answer, admitting part of the claim sued on and pleading waiver of formal tender of the amount admitted, must also plead the deposit in court of the amount admitted to be due. Miller v. Poit (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 399.

68½. Title and ownership.—In suit between creditors involving title to coal purchased by defendant creditor to supply debtor coal company's trade, allegation of ownership in defendant and coal company's possession as its agent was, in the absence of exceptions requiring a particularization of claim of title, sufficient to admit proof of

70. Defense or relief in particular actions.—In an action by a creditor under arts. 3971-3972, against one receiving stock in bulk, a special answer, as against a general demurrer, held to sufficiently allege that there had been no sale in violation of such statute. John B. & W. Brewing Ass'ns v. American S. & L. Corp. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 253.

72. — Against railroad companies.—The issue of failure of caretakers to properly look after cattle shipped was not raised where, though the railway pleaded specially the stipulations of the shipping contract obligating the shipper to attend and take care of his cattle, there was no allegation of breach of this condition, nor any charge of contributory negligence in this respect. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Buck (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 891.

73. — Against surety.—Sureties on administrator's bond sued thereon are not entitled to any credit, as for commissions of administrator, they neither pleading nor showing any such commissions were due and owing him. Smith v. Belding (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 562.

In an action by the payee of a promissory note against the surety, the promise of the payee to the surety to bring action against the maker which promise was not kept constitutes no defense where not alleged. Fisher v. Russell (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 143.

75. — By broker for commissions.—In realty broker's action for commission, defendant's answer held not subject to exception on ground it did not negative plaintiff's earning cause of sale. Buck v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 244.

76. — By foreign corporation.—Defense that plaintiff corporation had not obtained permit to do business in Texas, held not available when raised for the first time on appeal without being pleaded in the court below. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 478.

76/2. — By or against counties.—In an action on county road warrants issued for materials, an answer setting up that the materials were sold to the county in view of a special road law and subject to its provisions, and that plaintiff knew that such materials were to be used in certain designated road districts which were not districts from the funds for which plaintiff attempted to recover, held to set up a good defense. Austin Bros. v. Patton (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 702.

78. — For breach of promise to marry.—In suit for breach of marriage promise, previous unchastity of plaintiff must be pleaded as a defense. Freeman v. Bennett (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 238.

78/4. — For cancellation.—In action to cancel deed, it is defendant's duty to plead specifically such sums as he contends should be paid him if rescission is granted. Wisdom v. Peek (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 210.

78/2. — For divorce.—Plaintiff husband's connivance in his wife's adultery is an affirmative defense in so far as it is unnecessary for plaintiff to prove negative connivance, and defendant cannot introduce evidence thereof unless the issue is made by the pleadings. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 662.

784. — For injunction.—In a suit to enjoin a cotton gin, exceptions to the answer alleging that the gin was a public necessity, etc., held properly overruled, though none of the allegations, standing alone, was sufficient to constitute a defense, as the case was one calling for a consideration of all facts, circumstances, and conditions. Oliver v. Forney Cotton Oil & Ginning Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1094.

79. — For injuries to servant.—If city did not employ five men so as not to come within the Employers' Liability Act, such matter should be alleged and proved by the city. Dunaway v. Austin St. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1157.

In an action for injuries to linemen's assistant when motorcar was derailed, evidence of prior derailments from the same cause was admissible, even in the absence of allegations thereof, to show the master's knowledge of the defects in the car. Mackay Telegraph & Cable Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 226.

Exemption from provisions of Workmen's Compensation Act must be alleged and proved. Pullman Co. v. Ransaw (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 122.

81. — For services.—In an action by an engineer for services rendered in supervising construction of highways, the answer setting up that the roads were improperly built and that the engineer failed to keep a maintenance fund, held open to exceptions made, and hence such portion of the answer was properly stricken. McDonald v. Axtell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 563.

85. — On bonds and notes.—In an action on a note, defendant, having pleaded extension agreement as an affirmative defense, had the burden of alleging and proving all facts essential. Rhett v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 606.

In an action on notes and to foreclose vendor's lien, the answer which set up an agreement that the maker should procure a loan and pay off part of the series and that the rest should be postponed to a second lien, held insufficient to state a defense, because not alleging facts sufficient to establish a binding agreement. Duenkel v. Amarillo Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 670.

In an action on a note, wherein defendant pleaded failure of consideration, it was not error to allow defendant to show that a third person owned an interest in the note, whether such fact was pleaded and shown in the presentation of the real defense that defendant had not received the consideration and that an agreement had been made for rescission and for cancellation and return of the note. Rawlings v. Ediger (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 163.

86. On contracts in general.—Answer alleging that alleged right of plaintiff "was never agreed or contemplated by" contract between the parties, "nor was there any provision therein" conferring such right, was not subject to exception as attempting to construe the written contract. Armstrong v. Gifford (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 722.

In action on notes for price of engine and fixtures, where answer alleged that plaintiff had not the return of the engine, alleged in a tendered back at the same place and in the same condition as when delivered, held unnecessary. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 478.

In action for purchase price of tractor, answer alleging that the engine as a whole and throughout all of its parts showed defective material and workmanship, and that it gave way, further specifying a number of parts which broke, was not indefinite and uncertain. Southern Gas & Gasoline Engine Co. v. Adams & Peters (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 676.

When lumber company enters into two piling contracts with same party and accepts 300 extra pieces under and as part performance of the contracts, in latter's action to recover balance due, the company cannot urge on appeal that it is liable as to excess only an implied contract, where it did not plead or urge such defense during trial. Bay Lumber Co. v. Snelling (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 763.

In suit to recover rental value of premises held by defendant under agreement with plaintiff's grantor, answer alleging defendant's possession and plaintiff's notice of agreement between defendant and plaintiff's grantor, etc., held not subject to general demurrer. Rine v. Haney (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 812.

In a contractor's action for balance due for construction work, the rejection of defendant's testimony held not error, there being no allegation by the defendant that it had been induced to enter the contract by the fraud of plaintiff, nor that he represented that the house would build it would be of any use or value to defendant; the material issue being merely whether the work was done as contracted. Peyton Creek Irr. Dist. v. White (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1060.

87. On insurance contracts.—In an action on an insurance policy wherein company claimed a reduction of loss because of a co-insurance clause, defendant was not entitled to such reduction, where it did not plead the clause nor prove facts showing it was entitled to the reduction. Camden Fire Ins. Ass'n v. Wandel (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 289.

Judgment against a bonding company could not be assailed on appeal because the company had been dissolved and its charter forfeited after suit was instituted, where nothing that the company disclosed that such fact. Texas Fidelity & Bonding Co. v. Elliott (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 301.

Where fidelity insurance company did not plead damage by delay in giving notice of defeasance, or that the principal had disposed of his property between the giving of notice and the time when it should have been given, whether the notice actually given was within a reasonable time was immaterial. Western Indemnity Co. v. Free and Accepted Masons of Texas (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1092.

Where defendant insurer, did not plead insured's failure to furnish proofs of loss, and there was no evidence on the question, it could not be raised on appeal. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Clark (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 229.

A plea by bonding company that claimant had waived his rights to share in indemnity by permitting judgments to be collected for the maximum amount of the insurance is sufficient if claimant in defense of the claimant after such judgments. Darrah v. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1101.

Defendant beneficial association cannot invoke breach of warranty involved in alleged misrepresentation in application of member, where such breach is not pleaded. Knights and Ladies of Priceless Life, Inc. v. Russel (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 159.

The failure of insurer, which terminated a policy, to plead condition authorizing it to terminate, will not prevent it from defeating recovery of premiums already paid, on the theory there was a breach of contract, on the ground that the policy allowed it to terminate the risk, thereby constituting part of the contract alleged to have been breached. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Ball (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 71.

In an action on a policy, insuring an automobile while being transported by water, the defense of breach of implied warranty of seaworthiness of ferry was waived by failure to set it up by pleading or otherwise. American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Fox (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 92.

A clause, not in the same part of a life policy in which an insurer promises to pay upon the death of insured the effect that insurer will not be liable in event of suicide, is in the nature of a condition subsequent, or a proviso which defeats as a defeasance clause, and which, if relied on to defeat a recovery under the policy, must be sufficiently pleaded and proved by the insurer. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 591.

In an action on a life insurance policy, an allegation by defendant that insured "died by his own hand" held equivalent to alleging that he intentionally took his own life. Illinois Bankers' Life Ass'n v. Floyd (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 567, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 567.

In an action on a life insurance policy containing a suicide clause, where it appeared that insured committed suicide 33 days after the issuance of the policy, an answer denying liability for the face of the policy and admitting liability for repayment of all insurer had received from insured, with tender of such amount, held good on general demurrer. Id.

Where fraternal society by-law required the member on change to a more hazardous occupation to give notice and pay an additional rate of assessment, the beneficiary was not required to allege and prove that the member died during the 30 days following the change and before a regular assessment fell due, the society having the burden of alleging and proving that the member died subsequent to the expiration of such 30-day period, and after the regular assessment had become due. Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., v. James (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 435.

Answer alleging that the deceased member changed occupation and died while engaged in new occupation without payment of increased rate, without alleging that the regular rate had become due prior to the member's death, held insufficient to show that the member had been suspended at the time of his death. Id.

Answer alleging that the deceased changed his occupation without giving the society notice thereof, and that he died while engaged in the new occupation, without alleging that deceased died more than 30 days after the change of occupation, held insufficient to present defense.

To avail itself of the failure of insured to submit to examination after loss under a fire policy, insurer must not only plead the policy clause providing for examination, but must plead and prove that it fixed a reasonable time and place for such examination. Huffman v. National Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 756.

Where it is not alleged that representations made in the application for a life insurance policy were false, the policy will not be forfeited on such ground, as forfeitures are not favored and should never be permitted except under full allegation and proof. Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., v. Hubbard (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 828.

89. — Specific performance.—In a suit in which plaintiffs sought specific performance of a compromise agreement, answer held wholly insufficient to authorize proof of an intention other than that deducible from the language of the instrument. Flores v. Flores (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 1157.

In an action for specific performance of contract to convey an oil lease, answer alleging plaintiff, to bind the bargain, gave a check on a nonexistent bank, and that she had no bank deposit as claimed, coupled with the fact that plaintiff did not return as agreed and deposit the sum in cash, and made no attempt to enforce the contract for a long time, is not open to demurrer. Greenameyer v. McFarlane (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 612.

Where defendant, in an action for specific performance, asserted that the agreement was unenforceable under the statute because not in writing, the contention that the description was insufficient unless specifically pleaded. Watson v. Watson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 890.

89 1/2. — To foreclose liens and mortgages in general.—Title not being in issue, in suit to foreclose a mortgage lien, the limitation title of defendant purchaser from the mortgagor cannot be set up as a defense. R. B. Templeman & Son v. Kempner (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 236.

In suit to foreclose lien for an improvement loan on the homestead, the husband's trustee in bankruptcy having answered without asking any affirmative relief except as to costs, the question to whom the residue of the fund after paying plaintiff's debt shall go is not raised, and is not proper for determination. Turville v. Book (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 814.

In an action to foreclose a deed of trust on real estate, there was no reversible error in directing a foreclosure as to a defendant who disclaimed there being no plea as to him. El Paso Townsite Co. v. Watts (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 709.

90. — To foreclose mechanic's lien.—In action to foreclose contract lien, plaintiff's failure to prove compliance with the contract did not render judgment of foreclosure invalid; noncompliance with contract being a matter of defense. Johnson v. Barker (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 348.

91. — To foreclose vendor's lien.—The vendor of land may recover the land on his reserved legal title, notwithstanding the payments and improvements by the purchasers, unless the purchasers assert their equities. Lewright v. Reese (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 270.

CONTINUANCE

Article 1917. [1276] [1276] Continuance not to be granted, except, etc.
Cited, St. Louis & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Woolum, 84 Tex. 570, 19 S. W. 782.

In general.—Where plaintiff voluntarily invoked the jurisdiction of the court, and the case has been pending for 11 years, the court properly denied his motion for continuance on ground that it was uncertain whether land in question was in the United States or Mexico, and that the case should be deferred until report of joint boundary commission should fix true boundary. Schoonmaker v. Clardy (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1112.

Where exception to petition to determine riparian water rights had been properly sustained on the ground that it was not alleged plaintiff owned the rights, and there was no offer to amend, there was no error in refusing continuance to bring in owners, there being no case left to continue, and such owners not being necessary parties to the suit under art. 1848. Ward County Water Improvement Dist. No. 2 v. Ward County Irr. Dist. No. 1 (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 665.

Court did not err in refusing to postpone a hearing to a future day of the term on the ground that on a former partial hearing of the case in another district it developed that other parties than plaintiff owned or had an interest in the noted sued on, since the court could, on the hearing, determine the question. El Paso Townsite Co. v. Watts (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 709.

It was proper to refuse a continuance in an action for slander causing breach of the promise of marriage, because of pending action by plaintiff for such breach of marriage promise, since the judgment in such case could not bar or mitigate the damages. Vogt v. Guidry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 606.

Amendment of pleadings.—Where the affidavits relied on to show that defendant was estopped to set up limitations were before the court it will not be said as a matter of law that the court abused its discretion in overruling a motion for continuance to plead estoppel. City of Pt. Worth v. Rosen (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 84.

Where on the day the case was called for trial plaintiff filed amendment which presented new and material issues, the denial of defendant's motion for a continuance on the ground of surprise and to obtain material testimony was erroneous; it not appearing defendant was negligent. Indiana Silo Co. of Texas v. Bigham (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 274.

Where, on the morning of the trial of an action for breach of contract plaintiff made an amendment inserting further allegations of damage the denial of a continuance was not an abuse of discretion. Osage Oil & Refining Co. v. Lee Farm Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 518.

Process.—In suit on promissory note and to foreclose vendor's lien, there was no error in overruling defendant's motion for continuance to perfect service upon defendant, made a party by amended answer, where cause was filed July 12, 1912, but co-defendant was not sought to be made party until May 24, 1916. Baldwin v. Drew (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 636.

Absence of party.—It is the legal duty of a party to an action to keep himself posted as to the setting of the case for trial, and to be present to testify and aid his counsel. Adams v. Overland Automobile Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 207.

Where plaintiff was his most material witness and he was in the military service, his attorney's due application for continuance for his testimony should have been granted, and refusal was ground for a new trial. Vaughn v. Charplot (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 950.

Absence of counsel.—Where continuance because of the absence of one of defendant's attorneys was refused, the trial court held not to abuse its discretion where there was nothing to indicate that defendant was deprived of any defense or that it was not ably and fully represented. Early-Foster Co. v. El Campo Rice Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 964.

Where defendant's attorney was forced to trial in other actions, held, that defendant should have been granted a continuance, the time being too short to engage other attorneys, and defendant's attorney being particularly familiar with the facts, regard-
Application for evidence.--Refusal to postpone a civil trial to enable plaintiff to find a misplaced deposition and introduce it in evidence, held within the sound discretion of the court under art. 1917. Owensboro Wagon Co. v. San Antonio Tire & Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 761.

Absence of witness or evidence.--In a suit to abate a nuisance, it was error to deny a continuance to obtain the testimony of certain witnesses, where the witnesses were material; statutory diligence was shown, and there was no controverting affidavit as to diligence. City of Seymour v. Montgomery (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 257.

It was not error to refuse continuance for a witness, where no process was issued, and where he was an expert witness as to the proper construction of a building, and others testified, and doubtful others could have been found to testify concerning the matter. Goodman v. Republican Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 466.

Competency or materiality.--In action on notes given by the husband and his partner for a debt due the wife of the latter, continuance was refused where asked to secure testimony of absent witnesses that the partnership was dissolved prior to the giving of the notes. Stewart v. Watts (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 324.

In a suit involving title to land it was not abuse of discretion to refuse continuance to enable defendant to obtain a corporation report evidence that a corporation had dissolved, and its property thereby vested in those claiming under its only stockholders, where there was, up to that point in the trial, no evidence that plaintiffs were the sole stockholders. Holmes v. Tennant (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 788.

Refusal of continuance for absence of witness is not error, where it appears that his testimony was not of a character that would have brought about a different result. Parker v. Harrell (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 542.

In a suit to cancel an oil and gas lease wherein plaintiffs' attorney intervened to enforce his contract for compensation, overruling of defendants' application for continuance held not justified on ground that desired evidence of one defendant, tending to show that in his dealings with the lease he had merely acted for accommodation, would have been immaterial. Finkelestein v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 461.

Cumulative evidence.--Where a continuance to obtain evidence was denied, there was no abuse of discretion where all the material facts alleged in the motion as a basis for continuance were proved by other testimony. Carter-Mullaly Transfer Co. v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 791.

There was no error in denying continuance, where testimony of absent witnesses would have been merely cumulative. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Lancaster (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 666.

Contradictory evidence.--In a suit against contractor and surety for nonperformance of contract, a motion by surety because contractor was not present to testify contract had been complied with was properly overruled, where surety had exercised no diligence to procure his attendance. American Surety Co. v. Camp (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 758.

In a suit to recover balance on check drawn on defendant bank, in refusing continuance on account of absence of drawer, whom plaintiff desired as witness, trial court held not to have abused discretion; plaintiff having made no effort to take witness' deposition, though knowing he had moved to another state. Palfruiers Mercantile Co. v. Citizens State Bank (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 546.

Where subpoena was issued September 25th, and sheriff was permitted to delay return showing the witness temporarily absent, until October 12th, and nothing was done until trial on October 23rd, no attempt being made to take his deposition, the return showing where witness could be found, there was a lack of diligence, and it was not an abuse of discretion to deny continuance. Ayo v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 973.

Where no effort had been made to take deposition of absent witness, a resident of another county, no such diligence had been exercised to procure the evidence of such witness as to justify postponement. Goffinet v. Broome & Baldwin (Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 587.

Because of want of diligence, there was no error in refusing a defendant postponement on suppression of deposition of himself, the only witness on issue of payment, the case having been called for late in the term, the depositions having been returned shortly before trial, and he in taking the deposition having been attorney for the other defendants. Barcus v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 205.

In suit on policy, court held not to have erred in overruling defendant's application for continuance because of absence of witnesses; the witnesses not having been subpoenaed, no effort having been made to take their depositions, and application not stating that due diligence had been used. Bankers' Health & Accident Ass'n v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 230.

Court properly refused to continue trial to permit defendant to obtain a copy of the statutes of another state where trial was held almost three years after filing of original petition. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Pipkin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 757.

Court properly refused continuance on ground of absence of witness, where trial was held almost three years after original petition was filed, and witness was not subpoenaed until two days before trial, and no explanation was given for delay. Id.

The statute on continuance requires not only that due diligence be alleged in motion, but that it be shown, and where it is apparent that the applicant was not duly diligent in ascertaining what witness' answers in his deposition would be and in securing the deposition, denial of continuance was not an abuse of discretion. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Harris Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 256.

When defendant in his petition set forth his version of a conversation with an agent of defendant, the court did not err in refusing a continuance on account of the absence of an employee in the office wherein the conversation took place, defendant having taken a deposition of the agent, but having failed to take a deposition of the witness in question. Standard Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Buckingham (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 531.

A motion for continuance, based on absence of nonresident witnesses, was properly overruled, where no effort had been made to take their depositions, and their testifying at a previous trial was read. Statman v. Stout (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 256.

It was not error to refuse continuance for a witness, where no process was issued. Goodman v. Republican Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 456.

It is not error to overrule a motion for continuance for a witness residing out of the county of trial who has not been served by subpoena and from whom no deposition has been taken. Hardin v. Hanson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 365.

Where plaintiff had three months within which to have process issue court's refusal to continue the case upon the ground that supplemental interrogatories had been propounded to such witness, who had failed to answer them, in order to prosecute legal process to compel such witness to testify, was not error: sufficient diligence not having been shown. Gateway Produce Co. v. Sunset Fruit & Produce Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 654.

Where no commission was issued and placed in the hands of an officer authorized to take depositions, the party asking for a continuance to procure witness' evidence cannot be said to have used due diligence, although his adversary waived the issuance of a commission. Short v. Walters (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 161.

Surprise.—A litigant must be prepared to prove such issues of fact as he might reasonably foresee from the nature of the case, and is not entitled to withdraw announcement of ready on the ground of surprise as to such matters, in the absence of any misleading acknowledgment or declaration of the adverse party. City of Ft. Worth v. Rosen (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 84.

One suing on a paving certificate is held chargeable with notice of a stipulation in such certificate, and the city charter, that such certificate became wholly due on default on one installment, and cannot claim surprise on introduction of evidence under pleadings to show that installment was paid after due date.

Discretion of court.—An application for continuance is not statutory, but is addressed to the discretion of the trial court. Lamar v. Hildreth (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 167; Goodman v. Republic Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 466.

Where an application for continuance is not statutory, the party is not entitled to continuance as a matter of right, but the application is addressed to the sound discretion of the court, exercise of which will not be reviewed unless a pronounced abuse is shown. Huson v. Cade (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 483; Smith v. Potts (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 450.

Where parties agreed on trial date, defendant's attorneys' application for continuance on ground of defendant's absence from city held not a statutory application, but dependent on discretion or court. Adamus v. Overland Automobile Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 207.

Discretion of trial judge in method of control and disposition of docket of his court is large, and, unless continuance on his own motion is so unreasonable as to be clear abuse of discretion, he cannot be regarded as refusal to proceed with trial pursuant to law. Matagorda Canal Co. v. Styles (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 562.

Action of trial judge in continuing on his own motion cause involving water rights, until board of water engineers, in pending proceeding, had determined rights of parties, held not an abuse of discretion or refusal to proceed with trial pursuant to law. Id.
Where a motion for continuance was based upon the absence of a material witness, and was in form and manner in compliance with the statutory requirements, the question of granting or overruling the motion was within the sound discretion of the trial court. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Harris Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 265.

Refusal to continue trial in action against railroad for injuries sustained in Illinois, upon motion of defendant, was held to be within the sound discretion of the trial court, General Order No. 25, was discretionary. Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Ryan (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 642.

In view of Act Cong. March 21, 1918, § 10 (U. S. Comp. St. 1918, U. S. Comp. St. Ann. Supp. 1918, § 3115â€4), court did not abuse its discretion in refusing a third continuance of action against a railroad for injuries sustained in Illinois, notwithstanding order of Director General where suit had been brought before railroads were placed under Director General's control. Id.

General Order No. 26 of the Director General of Railroads, making the continuance of a case for the period of federal control dependent on a showing that the just interests of the government would be prejudiced by a trial, if within the power of the Director General, does not deprive the trial court of power to exercise discretion in determining the sufficiency of the showing of prejudice. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Lovick, 110 Tex. 241, 218 S. W. 489.

Where action was begun against a railroad in a county other than that of plaintiff's residence or that in which the cause of action arose, held that it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse an abatement and continuance for the period of federal control of the railroad under General Orders Nos. 18 and 18a of the Director General, on the ground that it would be necessary to bring two switchmen and an engineer engaged in hauling war materials and troops to the county of the trial as witnesses. Id.

Application for continuance of witness not living in county in which suit was pending, was not before the sound discretion of the trial court. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Turner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 383.

In an action for breach of contract, the question whether defendant was entitled to a continuance on account of an amendment made the morning before trial which enlarged the cause of actions as to damages in the district and county courts (143 S. W. xvii.), a matter to be adjudged by the trial court. Osage Oil & Refining Co. v. Lee Farm Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 618.

When an application for continuance shows that the means provided by law to secure testimony have not been used, the application is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court and, unless it clearly appears that such discretion has been abused, the case should not be reversed for overruling the application. Short v. Walters (Civ. App.) 251 S. W. 161.

Discretion of court in granting or refusal of continuance will not be interfered with unless it has been abused. Alderete v. Mosley (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 261; Gateway Produce Co. v. Sunset Fruit & Produce Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 654.

In suit against father and daughter, where father died before he was cited and daughter's motion for dismissal on ground that she was married, was granted, where plaintiff made no motion for continuance to make husband party, he cannot complain that court failed to continue cause for such purpose. City of Ft. Worth v. Cotton (Civ. App.) 188 S. W. 1015.

Discretion of court in passing on application for continuance on grounds not statutory will not be reviewed unless abused. Adams v. Overland Automobile Co. (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 207; Hutson v. Cade (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 438.

Where defendant's motion for continuance for absent witnesses was excepted to on ground that there is no pleading on which to predicate the testimony, that testimony was not material, and that no diligence was shown, and court overruled motion without showing basis of his ruling, court's ruling is available as error, on appeal, notwithstanding defendant's statement of insufficiency of testimony under general denial, since it will be assumed that defendant would have amended pleading if motion had been overruled on such ground. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 552.

In support of the action of the trial court in refusing continuance, every presumption of its correctness consistent with the record is to be indulged. Hutson v. Cade (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 438.

Where there was evidence tending to show that plaintiff was pursuing a course of tactics tending to delay the case, court's refusal to continue the case will not be disturbed. Gayer v. Chapman (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 217.

Art. 1918. [1278] [1278] Application for continuance, requisites of.

Affidavits and motion for continuance.—Trial court held within judicial discretion in overruling application of defendants for continuance, which was not in writing, where failure to put in writing and to verify was not waived by plaintiffs. Lynch v. Bernhardt (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1051.

The action of the trial court in refusing continuance on account of engagement in trial of suit of defendant and his claimed necessity of witness had not reversible error; there being no showing that any process had been issued for the witness, that effort had been made to take his or defendant's deposition, of what he or defendant would have testified to, etc. Hutson v. Cade (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 438.

Amendment.—Where application for continuance claiming surprise as to new matter in amended petition served five days before trial, did not show that time was 548 too short to procure testimony, no error was shown in refusing continuance. Hahl v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 792.

Although defendant, filed his amended answer and cross-bill only three days before trial, held, there was no abuse of discretion in denying continuance to enable plaintiff to prepare for trial, where she failed to state in her motion, that by a continuance she could probably obtain testimony to contradict alleged new issues presented. Lefever v. Lefever (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 842.

Materiality of evidence.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1278, an application for a continuance, not showing what movant expected to prove by the witnesses, was properly denied. Rubrecht v. Powers, 1 Civ. App. 262, 21 S. W. 318.

Diligence.—In an application for continuance to obtain testimony of certain witnesses, no abuse of discretion by the court was shown in denying same, as to one witness, as to whom no statutory diligence was shown. City of Seymour v. Montgomery (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 237.

Court did not err under this article. In denying an application for a second continuance on a second trial more than three years after the first trial, where application did not show that absent witnesses had been notified that the cause had been set down by trial or were requested to attend, nor that any fee had been paid or tendered them. Moore-Hustead Co. v. Joseph W. Moon Buggy Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 162.

In action involving a boundary dispute, refusal of continuance to permit defendant to have a survey made of the land was not an abuse of discretion, in absence of showing that such survey could not have been previously made. Barlow v. Greer (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 301.

Absence of witness.—Trial court held within judicial discretion in overruling application of defendants for continuance, where testimony of defendants whose absence was basis of application was not shown to be necessary. Lynch v. Bernhardt (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1061.

Where application for continuance on ground of illness of witness did not state how long illness had existed, so as to excuse failure to take deposition, or that he could have added testimony on former trial which was introduced in evidence. Its refusal was not error. Hahl v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 792.

An application for continuance for absent witness cannot be treated as a second application merely because it was first presented on the day the case was called for trial, and again on the date to which the case has been reset, where such postponement of the trial was not based on the application. City of Seymour v. Montgomery (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 237.

Application for continuance for absence of witness after trial had already been continued to permit deposition of witness to be taken, stating that witness was ill and not able to testify by deposition without giving opinion of physician as to ability of witness to make and execute a deposition and held properly refused. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Turner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 583.

An application for continuance, which is not statutory, and therefore addressed to the court's discretion, should state that the applicant expected to procure the testimony by the next term of court, otherwise denial of continuance is not error. Short v. Walters (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 161.

Determination of application.—On motion for continuance trial court should act on facts in evidence as to whether a defendant was malingering by feigning illness, instead of his own impression on facts outside record. Alderete v. Mosley (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 261.

Affidavits used in answer to a motion to postpone a hearing may be considered by the trial court. City of Ft. Worth v. Rosen (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 84.

CHAPTER ELEVEN
STENOGRAPHIC REPORTERS

Art. 1923. Duties of reporters.
1924. Same.
1925. Compensation of reporter: how paid; preparation of transcript on request of parties; duty of reporter.
1925a. Compensation of court reporter of 86th judicial district.
1925b. Compensation of court reporters for 3d, 39th, and 50th judicial districts; poverty affidavit to secure transcript.
1925c. Compensation of court reporters in 88th and 91st judicial districts.
1926. Reporters to make transcript for any person; compensation.

Art. 1930. Special stenographer appointed, when.
1931. Compensation of special stenographer.
1932. Stenographer for county court, etc., in civil cases, appointed when; oath; compensation.
1933. In felony cases reporter to keep stenographic record to be made when and how; transcript for appointed attorney, when, and compensation for same.
Article 1923. Duties of reporter.

Loss of notes.—That the official reporter had lost the shorthand notes which he was required to take and preserve under arts. 1922 and 1923, so that he could not prepare a statement of facts, and that the attorneys who represented appellant at hearing had moved from the county, held not to entitle appellant to reversal, where appellant made no showing of an attempt to proceed under arts. 2065, 2112, 2157, 2158. Crenshaw v. Montague County (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 569.

Art. 1924. Same; preparation of transcript; compensation.

Cited. Ex parte Freyd, 83 Cr. R. 465, 204 S. W. 113.

Effect of failure to transcribe.—Upon a motion for affirmance of judgment for failure to file statement of facts, that court reporter failed to transcribe testimony in form required by this article, did not excuse appellant, where neither attempt to mandamus reporter nor to make statement of facts from memory under art. 2068 was made. Pruitt v. Blessi (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 714.

Loss of notes.—See Crenshaw v. Montague County (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 569; notes to art. 1923.

Fee as costs.—Under Arts 23d Leg. c. 119, §§ 5, 6, amending arts. 1924, 2070, where narrative form of testimony was transcribed by stenographer on request of appellant his fee is not taxable as cost of appeal. Schallert v. Boggs (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 601.

Art. 1925. Compensation of reporter; how paid; preparation of transcript on request of parties; deputy reporter.—The official shorthand reporter of each judicial district in this State shall receive a salary of one thousand eight hundred dollars per annum, in addition to the compensation for transcript fees as provided for in this Act, said salary shall be paid monthly by the commissioners court of the county, out of the general fund of the county, upon the certificate of the district judge. In judicial districts in this State composed of two or more counties said salary shall be paid monthly by the counties of the district in proportion to the number of weeks provided by law for holding court in the respective counties in the district. When any party to a civil suit reported by any such reporter shall desire a transcript of the evidence in said suit, said party may apply for same and shall indicate whether he desires same in question and answer form or in narrative form. In the event said transcript should be ordered made in narrative form, then such reporter shall make the same up in duplicate narrative form and shall receive as compensation therefor the sum of twenty cents per hundred words; and no statement of facts shall be made up in question and answer form or charge made therefor, except when requested by the parties to the suit. It is especially provided, however, that the necessity for a deputy official shorthand reporter is to be entirely left to the discretion of the district judge of the judicial district. [Acts 1911, p. 264, § 8; Acts 1917, 35th Leg., ch. 189, § 1; Acts 1917, 35th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 27, § 1; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 79, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 111, § 1; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 47, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Took effect 30 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment. Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 47, § 1, amends § 8, chapter 119, General Laws, Regular Session, 32d Leg. 1911, as amended by chapter 189, Regular Session 35th Leg., and as amended by ch. 27 of First Called Session of the 35th Leg. and as amended by ch. 79 of the Fourth Called Session of the 35th Leg. and as amended by ch. 111 of the Regular Session of the 35th Leg. Sec. 2 of the act repeals "all laws and parts of laws in conflict with section 8, chapter 119. of the General Laws of the State of Texas, passed by the regular session of the Thirty-Second Legislature of the State of Texas, 1911, and as amended," as set forth above.

This act supersedes the following local and special acts fixing the compensation of official stenographers in particular districts:

Acts 1919, 36th Leg. ch. 100, relating to the 4th judicial district;
Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 8, relating to the 5th judicial district;
Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 13, relating to the 6th judicial district;
Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 15, relating to the 7th, 13th, and 36th judicial districts.

Inability to pay for transcript.—Under Acts 32d Leg. c. 119, §§ 5, 8, 9, and 14, arts. 1924, 1925, 2671, 1926, 1933), official court stenographer upon application of a defendant who had been defended by his own attorney alleging his inability to pay for transcript or to give security therefor would be directed to prepare a transcript of his
Art. 1925a. Compensation of court reporter of 80th judicial district.—The official court reporter of the Eightieth Judicial District of Texas shall receive the same salary and compensation for transcript fees as court reporters for the other district courts in Harris County; and such salary shall be paid monthly by the counties of the district in proportion to the number of weeks provided by law for holding court in the respective counties. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 19, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment. The following note appears in the Session Laws:

"Note.—The record of the above Senate Bill No. 32, in both the Senate and the House Journals, shows that said bill as introduced and read in both Houses, considered and reported on by appropriate committees, and thereafter regularly considered and finally passed by each House, was in good form, and contained the required enacting clause, and said journals fail to show that any motion or amendment was offered or adopted in either House to strike out the enacting clause. Said journals disclose that the omission of the enacting clause from the enrolled bill, now on file in the office of the Secretary of State, is an error of the enrolling clerk of the Senate. The situation presented in reference to this Act is the same as that in reference to Senate Bill No. 91, Chapter 32 of this volume, and the Attorney General's Department has given an opinion to the effect that, in view of the regular history of the proceedings on that bill in the Legislature, failure of said enrolling clerk to enroll the enacting clause in the bill does not invalidate same. C. D. Mims, Secretary of State."

Art. 1925b. Compensation of court reporters for 3rd, 39th and 50th judicial districts; poverty affidavit to secure transcript.—The official shorthand reporters of the Third, Thirty-ninth and Fiftieth Judicial Districts of Texas shall receive a salary of eighteen hundred dollars per annum in addition to the compensation for transcript fees, as heretofore or may hereafter be provided for by law; such salary shall be paid monthly by the commissioners courts of the counties composing said districts out of the general fund of said counties upon the certificate of the district judge, in proportion to the number of weeks provided by law for holding court in the respective counties of said districts; provided, that when any criminal case is appealed and the defendant is not able to pay for a transcript, as provided for by law, or to give security therefor, he may make affidavit of such fact, and upon the making of such affidavit, the court shall order the official shorthand reporters to make such transcript in duplicate and deliver it, as provided by law in civil cases, but the official shorthand reporters shall receive no pay for same; provided, that should any affidavit so made by such defendant be false, he shall be prosecuted and punished as is now provided by law for making false affidavits. In any civil case where the appellant or plaintiff in error has made the proof required to appeal his case without bond, such appellant or plaintiff in error may make affidavit of such fact, and upon the making and filing of such affidavit, the court shall order the official shorthand reporters to make a transcript as provided in other cases, but the official shorthand reporters shall receive no pay for the same; provided, that should any such affidavit by such appellant or plaintiff in error be false, he shall be prosecuted and punished as is now provided by law for making false affidavits. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 52, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment. Sec. 2 of the act repeals all laws in conflict.

Art. 1925c. Compensation of court reporters in 88th and 91st judicial districts.—Hereafter, the official shorthand reporters in and for the Eighty-eighth and Ninety-first Judicial Districts of Texas shall each receive for their services as such reporters a salary of Twenty-four Hundred Dollars per annum, in addition to the compensation for transcript fees as provided by law, said salaries to be paid monthly by the Commissioners' Court of the county constituting said Eighty-eighth and Ninety-first Judicial Districts upon accounts duly approved by the respective judges of said District Courts. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 140, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 2 of the act repeals all laws in conflict. The act took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Art. 1926. Reporters to make transcript for any person; compensation.

Art. 1930. [1295] [1295] Special stenographer appointed, when.
Appointment in criminal cases.—In the absence of a statute providing for the employment of a stenographer in criminal cases, as is provided by Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1296, 1298, in civil cases, on the application of a party, there is no error in the court's refusing to appoint a stenographer, though there be one present, and accused offers to pay his fees. Schoenfeldt v. State, 30 Tex. App. 656, 18 S. W. 640.

- Art. 1931. [1296] [1296] Compensation of special stenographer.
See Schoenfeldt v. State, 30 Tex. App. 656, 18 S. W. 640; note to art. 1930.

Art. 1932. Stenographer in civil case in county court; appointment; oath; compensation; other provisions applicable.
Taxation of costs.—Under arts. 1923, 2025, 2048, the trial court is authorized to adjudge costs of the stenographer against even the successful party, as where the stenographer was demanded by a defendant as to whom plaintiff admitted in open court he had no case. Brod v. Luce (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 555.

Art. 1933. In felony cases reporter to keep stenographic record, to be made when and how; transcript for appointed attorney, when, and compensation for same.

Character of judgment.—Where defendants, after the overruling of their objections to election of special judge, withdrew from the court room, a judgment against them by the special judge, treating their withdrawal as an abandonment of their defense, after hearing evidence and trying the case, would be treated as a judgment on trial, and not as a judgment by default. Webb v. Reynolds (Com. App.) 267 S. W. 214.

Plaintiff, in absence of answer, general demurrer having been sustained to that filed, was entitled to judgment by default. Bostick v. Haney (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 477.

Time of answering or filing answer.—Although defendants were cited to appear November 19th, in neither the court nor the case, by answer, nor any other motion, were defendants served before term to answer, to render default judgment October 13th, in view of Acts 35th Leg. c. 91, § 2, art. 30, changing term of court so that it began October 8th. Queiroli v. Simon & Dunlap (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 123; Queiroli v. Whitesides (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 122.

Plaintiff, on the fifth day of the term, moved for judgment by default, when an attorney asked leave to file an answer forthwith, which was refused, and plaintiff’s motion was granted. Held that, under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1281, 1280-1282, he was entitled to the whole of the fifth day in which to file his answer, and that the judgment was erroneously entered. (Railway Co. v. Scott, 66 Tex. 565; 1 S. W. 663, followed.) Rowe v. Spencer, 70 Tex. 78, 5 S. W. 60.

Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1280, as amended by Laws 1891, p. 94, and art. 1283, as amended in 1891, defendant had the whole of the second day of the term to file his answer, and while the appearance docket was called on the second day, yet judgment for default could not be taken until the third day. McKay v. Barlow (App.) 18 S. W. 650.

Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1283, 1290-1282, if defendant did not appear when his case was called on the second day of the term, judgment was properly rendered against him. Graham v. Miller (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 1107.

Act July 12, 1891, amending Rev. St. 1879, art. 1280, so as to substitute the second for the fifth day of the term, as appearance day, repealed the conflicting provision of Act July 12, 1891, requiring defendants served more than five days before term to answer on or before the fifth day, and authorized the entry of defaults under arts. 1281, 1282, on the second day. (24 S. W. 963, reversed.) Martin v. Hartnett, 86 Tex. 617, 25 S. W. 1116.

Construction and operation.—On the record and under arts. 1883, 1895, 1928, held that the trial court did not err in hearing proof on a writ of inquiry and rendering judgment instead of permitting defendant to file answer and introduce testimony on the merits, as though no default judgment had been rendered. Mach v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 276.

Art. 1938. [1284] [1284] Damages on liquidated demands, how assessed.

Liquidated damages.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1284, final judgment by default, on defendant’s failure to answer in action on note and to foreclose mortgage, was proper, as the action was on a liquidated demand. Loungeway v. Hale, 73 Tex. 496, 11 S. W. 137.

Where a contract provided that a $200 check deposited therefor was placed as a forfeit, defendant had the absolute right to arbitrarily refuse to carry out the sale and lose such amount, and plaintiff had no cause of action against such defendant; the deposit not being earnest or escrow money, but liquidated damages or forfeit. Richardson v. Terry (Civ. App.) 145 S. W. 326.

Where it cannot be ascertained from the face of the contract that the damages stipulated to be paid in case of a breach are excessive, and it cannot be determined from evidence whether the stipulated amount reasonably approximates the actual damages, the provision cannot be construed as a penalty. Walsh v. Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Paducah, Tex. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 550.

 Provision of contract of sale of land for deposit by each party of a sum to be paid, in case of his default, to the other party as his damages, precludes enforcement of the contract against the vendor electing to make such payment. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Southwick (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 987.

The provision of a building contract that the owner was to be allowed 15 a day for delay in completion as liquidated damages was valid. Wright v. A. G. McAdams Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 571.

Where a contract between a military school and the parent of a student provided for payment of the amount agreed upon for tuition and board, even though the student should withdraw, such provision cannot be treated as a penalty. Peirce v. Peacock Military College (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 191.

Where there was no fluctuation in the price of flour, and contracts prepared by the Food Administration provided, in event of buyer’s default, he should pay 25 cents per barrel as booking charge, the charge must be deemed liquidated damages, recoverable by the seller upon the buyer breaching the contract by failure to give shipping orders. Rock v. Keton (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 562.

Where each of the parties to a contract deposited a note payable to the other in escrow, having the understanding that the maker should become liable thereon on his failure to perform the contract, the actual delivery of the note to the payee was not 553 a prerequisite to the payee's right to sue thereon as the parties stood in the same relation to the note and contract as would have existed with reference to a sum of money representing liquidated damages and a contract of forfeiture left in the hands of a stakeholder. Nesbitt v. Hudson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 746.

A provision in a contract for the sale of oil and gas lease that the initial payment deposited in escrow, should be forfeited in the event of the buyer's nonperformance, is one for liquidated damages, and hence it is unnecessary to show actual damages. Garrard v. Cantrell (Civ. App.) 323 S. W. 911.

Where the parties agreed that in the event of the purchaser's nonperformance he should be held liable for liquidated damages, the fact that liquidated damages later made an equally advantageous sale is no defense to a claim for such damages. Kollae v. Puckett (Civ. App.) 323 S. W. 914.

Where a contract for the sale of land provided for forfeiture of a cash payment in event of the purchaser's failure to consummate the contract, the agreement was one for liquidated damages; it appearing that real estate fluctuated, and that the property also had a speculative value as trackage for a railroad. Id.

Proof of cause of action.—In an action against a surety company for amount of judgment rendered against plaintiff and costs of the suit wherein the judgment was rendered, held, that it was error, in the absence of proof of the amount of such judgment and costs, to render a default judgment for the amount thereof. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. Gulf, T. & W. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 276.

Art. 1939. [1285] [1285] On unliquidated demands, etc.

Inquest of damages.—On the record and under arts. 1885, 1936, 1938, held that the defendant err in instructing the jury that rendering judgment instead of permitting defendant to file answer and introduce testimony on the merits, as though no default judgment had been rendered. Mach v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 275.

Art. 1941. [1346] [1212, 1345] Procedure in case of service by publication where no answer, etc.

Presumptions.—Where plaintiff made unliquidated demands and, as provided by art. 1285, it must be presumed upon appeal that they appeared and answered, where attorney signed answer as answer of all defendants, and court did not appoint an attorney ad litem to represent unknown heirs, as required by art. 1941. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 189.

Attorney's fee as part of costs.—Under direct provisions of this article, court may award reasonable compensation to attorney appointed to represent a nonappearing defendant served by publication, and tax such compensation as costs. George v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 835.

Art. 1942. [1211] [1211] Guardian ad litem for minors, lunatics, etc.

Application and appointment in general.—The purpose in the appointment of a guardian ad litem is to secure the services of a disinterested person who will see that all matters affecting the interests of the party under legal disability are fully presented to the court. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 690.

The appointment as guardian ad litem of insane person being sued by grantees to whom she conveyed while insane, of person who had received a commission on the sale, was not calculated to develop full and disinterested presentation of the rights of the insane person. Id.

Appointment as guardian ad litem for a minor of her mother holding an adverse interest to her would be illegal. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 305.

Where the adult beneficiaries under the will of testator made a partition agreement which affected the rights of infants, it was proper, in a friendly partition action brought to carry the agreement into effect, to appoint a guardian ad litem for the infants, though the plaintiff in the partition action purported to act as their next friend, it appearing that he was a party to the agreement and seeking its confirmation, for, in such case, it is inappropriate that he be allowed to represent the infants. Brown v. Brown (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1968.

Duty and power of court.—Until service on a minor is had, the court has no power to appoint a guardian ad litem. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 305.

Powers of guardian.—The guardian ad litem representing an insane defendant should make no admissions against the interest of defendant, but should require that proper legal proof be made of the facts entitling plaintiff to the relief which he seeks. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 690.

Art. 4051, declaring that the provisions governing estates of decedents shall apply to and govern "such" guardianship, applies only to guardianships dealt with in the title, and not to minors represented only by guardian ad litem. Simmons v. Arlin, 110 Tex. 309, 220 S. W. 66, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 134.

Validity of judgment.—Where court, in action against insane person by grantees to whom she had conveyed while insane, rendered judgment confirming conveyance upon admissions by her guardian ad litem where fair price had not in fact been paid, insane person held entitled to relief against the judgment. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 690.

Judgment against infant defendants, for whom no guardians ad litem were appointed, is void, or at least voidable. Levy v. Roper (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 515.

Whether the subject-matter of the suit or to which court had jurisdiction, the defendants appeared and answered, the minor defendant by guardian ad litem, under this article, and the decision rendered was in accordance with the issues made by the pleadings, the judgment was not void. Crow v. Van Ness (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 539.

Compensation for services.—By virtue of the original citation in a suit against infants, they were before the court for purpose of any adjudication of the fees of their guardian ad litem which it had power to make. Simmons v. Arnim, 110 Tex. 509, 220 S. W. 66, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 184.

The having jurisdiction of infant defendants for award against them of the fee of their guardian ad litem and power to so award it, the judgment is not void, even if in that respect such guardian be regarded as their antagonist, and another guardian ad litem should have been appointed to represent them. Id.

Offer of plaintiff in the petition against infants that the costs of the suit be decreed against him does not take away the court's power under the statute to adjudge payment otherwise of the fee of the guardian ad litem of the successful infant defendants. Id.

Despite arts. 1942 and 2605, under art. 5048, judgment charging the fee of a guardian ad litem on the lands recovered for infants in the suit is not void, and this though the "good cause" be not stated on the record; this being at most but an irregular exercise of the court's power. Id.

Under this article, the fee allowed the guardian should be taxed as part of the costs of the suit, and, like other costs, follows the judgment and is taxed against the losing party. Brown v. Brown (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1688.

As regards partition between the adult beneficiaries under testator's will was fair and should have been confirmed, the fee of a guardian ad litem appointed for infant beneficiaries in partition action cannot be taxed against the adult parties, as they were entitled to have the land partitioned according to agreement, and hence, under this article, it should be taxed against the interest of the infants. Id.

Art. 1943. [1287] [1287] Suits called in their order, etc.

Call for trial.—A litigant cannot, as matter of right, have his case set down for trial by the bar committee of the county, especially where the court has made no order authorizing such committee to set the cases for call on the trial docket or to set this particular case, in view of this article. El Paso Townsite Co. v. Watts (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 789.

Trial out of order.—Though under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1181, 1182, 1287, 2978, causes should be placed on the general and jury dockets and tried in the order in which the petitions are filed, unless for good cause shown the court otherwise directs, yet the placing of a cause on the jury docket, and trying it in advance of a cause previously filed and preceding it on the general docket, are not reversible error, unless it is shown that injury resulted therefrom. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Shuford, 72 Tex. 196, 10 S. W. 468.

Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1287, where a defendant was served with process in a divorce suit in another state, and on the return-day the cause was called and passed without order, and a week later was taken up at plaintiff's instance, according to a long-established custom, and a trial was had, and in view of the nonresidence and absence of defendant, the allegations of fraud on the court, and the policy of the law encouraging defenses to actions for divorce, a new trial held to be granted. Bostwick v. Bostwick, 72 Tex. 482, 11 S. W. 178.

Art. 1944. [1288] [1288] To be tried when called, unless, etc.

Absence of party.—Defendants cannot prevent trial from commencing by filing answer and not appearing for trial. Garza v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 488.

Notwithstanding this article, a suit in which there is no pleading for affirmative relief by defendants should be dismissed for want of prosecution if plaintiff fails to appear at time set for trial, not tried in plaintiff's absence, and judgment on the merits rendered for defendants. Chittim v. Parr (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 688.

Refusal to proceed.—Where a case had been regularly called for trial, and both parties had announced themselves ready, and certain exceptions filed by defendant had been sustained, and others overruled in part and sustained in part, and where plaintiff did not take a nonsuit, or ask that the case be continued or postponed or placed at the end of the docket, but refused to go forward with his case, the only proper judgment the court could enter was one for nonsuit, under this article, and a judgment of dismissal would have been improper. Munger Oil & Cotton Co. v. Beckham (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 125.
Art. 1945. [1289] [1289] Day set for jury docket.
Cited, Cabell v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. 81 Tex. 104, 16 S. W. 811.

Demurrers and exceptions to pleadings.—In view of a rule of the district court authority under this article, there was no reason why exceptions were not presented when the docket was called for such purpose during the first week of the term at which the case was tried, the refusal of the trial court to consider such exceptions was proper. Conner v. McAfee (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 616.

Art. 1947. [1291] [1291] Issues of law and dilatory pleas, when tried.

Motions and dilatory pleas.—Under arts. 1902, 1903, 1910, 1947, and rules 7 and 24 for district courts (143 S. W. xvii, xix), as to order of pleas in abatement, where, in action on fire insurance policy, failure of insured to submit to examination was not pleaded, except as one of several special defenses, it was not filed in due order, as a plea in abatement, and not being called up at the first term of court, and no special ruling being asked thereon before a trial on the merits, the plea was waived. Humphrey v. National Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 750.

Discretion of court.—Under this article, it is within the discretion of the court to hearing evidence upon a defendant's plea in abatement, before hearing evidence upon merits of case. City of Ft. Worth v. Cotton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1015.

Art. 1948. [1292] [1292] Trial by the court.

Trial of special issues by jury.—An independent suit for a new trial to cancel a judgment and enjoin enforcement is an equitable proceeding, and answers of the jury as to issues submitted are merely persuasive, and not binding. Huddleston v. Texas Pipe Line Co. (Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 350.

Admissions.—In action for taxes, statement in agreed statement of facts held an admission that the property assessed was defendant's property. North American Dredging Co. of Nevada v. State (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1965.

Certification by court.—Where agreed statement of facts was not signed and certified by trial court to be correct as required by this article, motion to strike such statement will be granted. Lutcher v. Fuller (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 552.

Where an agreed statement of facts was stricken on appeal because not signed and certified to be correct, no order by trial court after expiration of term at which statement was submitted approving same would give it validity. IId.

Conflict in facts stated.—Where a case is submitted to court upon an agreed statement of facts under this article, and facts stated are in conflict, the court is authorized to resolve the conflict according to the dictates of his judicial conscience. Fuller v. Cameron (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 711.

Appeal.—An agreed statement of facts, on which a case is tried in the court below, and which the court embodies in its judgment, was sufficient, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1293, to authorize a revision of the judgment on matters growing out of such facts, in the absence of a statement of facts or findings of fact by the court, or an agreed case for appeal, under arts. 1333 and 1414. State v. Connor, 86 Tex. 132, 23 S. W. 1100.

Art. 1950. [1294] [1294] Cases brought up from inferior courts, tried de novo.
Cited United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. of Baltimore, Md., v. Lowry (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 222.

Art. 1951. [1297] [1297] Order of proceedings on trial by jury.
Cited, Brown v. Lessing, 76 Tex. 144, 7 S. W. 785.

Proof to show sufficiency of pleadings.—In an action to set aside part of a judgment, on the ground that defendant had never been served with notice or process, court was not authorized by this article, or otherwise, to hear testimony and require the plaintiff to introduce testimony for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not there was sufficient testimony contesting the service in the complaint to authorize the submission of such an issue to the jury. Becker v. Becker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 542.

Opening statements.—See Watson v. Watson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 899; notes at end of chapter.

Right to open and close.—In condemnation proceedings, held, defendants' admissions went far enough to entitle them to open and close. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Moebbe (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 503.

In action involving ownership of attached property claimed by third party, where court ruled that burden of proving title was upon claimant, claimant was entitled to open and conclude without invoking District and County Court Rule 31 (142 S. W. xx). Proest v. Smith (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 392.

In a proceeding by a city to condemn land for a waterworks, since the burden is upon a landowner, part of whose land was condemned, to show the amount of damage, he is entitled to open and conclude upon both the evidence and the argument. City of Rosebud v. Vitek (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 728.

After court hearing an appeal in eminent domain proceeding by city had granted property owners right to open and close on theory they had made agreement which placed burden on them, city waived no right by requesting charge that burden was on defendant. San Antonio v. Fiko (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 639.

The property owners' admission in open court on appeal after the conclusion of the introduction of evidence, dictated to the stenographer, if sufficient under rule 31 of the Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiii), came too late to entitle the owners to open and close. Id.

In an action under a policy, providing for double liability in event of accidental death, insurer was not entitled to demand the right to open and close by filing an admission under rule 31 for district courts (142 S. W. xiii), insurer claiming that death was by suicide, since the effect of such an admission was to admit that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 591.

Rule 31 for district courts (142 S. W. xiii) is simply one of practice and for the purpose to expedite the case and relieve the plaintiff of the necessity of proving his case upon consideration that the defendant take the burden. Id.

In trespass to try title, where defendants pleaded general denial and by way of cross-action set up limitation title to a portion of the land, but did not in accordance with district court rule 21 (142 S. W. xx), file a written admission of plaintiff's case other than as to the limitation title, they were not entitled to open and close, under this article. Carter v. Brown (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 292.

That trial court in such action charged that plaintiffs had established title to all of the land sued for, unless defeated by the plea of limitation, did not cast on defendants the burden of proof on the whole case so as to entitle them to open and close. Id.

Effect of admissions to obtain right.—Claimant of attached property, who alleged ownership, did not, by admitting, for purpose of opening and closing, that plaintiff's admitting, as set forth, under district and county court rule 31 (142 S. W. xx), admit that he was not owner of property. Frost v. Smith (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 392.

Where petition set up causes of action, on the plain life insurance policy and on supplementary policy providing double indemnity for accidental death, and defendant set up suicide, and filed an admission under rule 31 for district courts (142 S. W. xiii), defendant did not thereby admit that the death under the plain policy was an accident, although its effect was to admit that the death was accidental as far as the count on the supplemental policy was concerned. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 591.

Discretion of court as to order of proof.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1298, error could not be predicated, in the absence of a showing of an abuse of discretion, on the fact that plaintiff was allowed to introduce evidence out of order prescribed by this article. Polk v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 657.

Evidence dependent on preliminary proof.—Where witness has admitted that he has been convicted of a felony and sentenced, but subsequently pardoned, it is immaterial whether pardon is introduced before or after testimony is received. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Ash (Civ. App.) 304 S. W. 668.

It is often necessary to introduce evidence whose admissibility depends on other evidence subsequently to be introduced, and if such later evidence is not forthcoming the trial court will, on motion, or of its own volition, exclude the preliminary evidence. Bivins v. Oldham (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 140.

Evidence in rebuttal.—In trespass to try title, the plaintiffs traced title to their ancestor, proved his death, and rested. The defendants then offered a deed from the ancestor. In reply, the plaintiffs offered evidence that the grantee in this deed had received his deed from his ancestor. Held, that the evidence was admissible in reply under this article. Bounds v. Little, 79 Tex. 128, 15 S. W. 225.

In suit to enjoin the inspector of a county from requiring cattle to be dipped pursuant to the Tick Eradication Statute (art. 1311 et seq.), testimony that, instead of being harmful, the dipping of cattle is beneficial held admissible in rebuttal of testimony that dipping caused injuries to their milk and butter supply. Lewis v. Harrison (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 691.

Art. 1952. [1298] [1298] Additional testimony allowed, when.

Reopening case for further evidence.—Where district court on appeal from a justice of the peace's decision on a case heard and took evidence, and under advisement, a party was properly denied leave at date fixed for rendition of judgment to offer additional evidence, Cross v. Flewellen (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 500.

Refusal to postpone a civil trial to enable plaintiff to find a misplaced deposition and introduce it thereon. Fensterhahn v. Caruthers Hill held, held within the sound discretion of the court under this article. Owensboro Wagon Co. v. San Antonio Tie & Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 701.

Refusal to allow plaintiff's attorney to introduce in evidence a carbon copy of a deposition alleged to have been misplaced, held not an abuse of discretion hereunder. Id.

The admission of evidence after the case had been partially closed rests largely in

After close of evidence.—In action against receiver of railroad company, admission of evidence, after defendant had offered its evidence which tended to establish plaintiff's case, held not abuse of trial court's discretion. Andrews v. Rice (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 686.

The trial court is vested with a liberal discretion in reopening a case, after plaintiff has closed and defendant has declined to offer any testimony, and its action in regard thereto will not be reversed, unless it appears that complaining party has suffered injury. W. T. Wilson Grain Co. v. Fitch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 558.

Generally the question of reopening the evidence after the parties have rested lies in the discretion of the court. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Florence (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 471.

In an action on a health insurance policy, wherein defendant set up a release from liability for disability due to particular cause, it was error to exclude such release, where through inadvertence it was not formally offered in evidence until the close of the evidence, though trial court entertained view that release constituted no defense. Id.

Refusal to permit defendant to introduce testimony, on plaintiff's motion for a directed verdict on the ground that there was absence of proof as to certain facts, held not error where testimony as to such facts was not admissible under the pleadings. Sovereign Camp, W. O. W., v. James (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 435.

After argument begun or closed.—Where witness was taken suddenly ill and had to leave court, and the court refused a postponement, and, after plaintiff's counsel had made his opening argument, the witness was again tendered, the court should have allowed defendant opportunity to supply the proof, under this article. Ft. Worth & D. Ry. Co. v. Johnson, 5 Civ. App. 24, 2 S. W. 677.

Refusal to reopen case for introduction of deposition, after argument of law of case for two days, and announcement that it would not be introduced, held not abuse of discretion. Smith's Heirs v. Hirsch (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 734.

Recalling witnesses.—There was no reversible error in the action of the court permitting plaintiff to recall a witness and allowing him to testify regarding a conversation already detailed, although the evidence and argument by both sides had been closed. Pierce Oil Corporation v. Gilmer Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1116.

Art. 1953. [1299] [1299] Order of argument.

See Hittson v. State Nat. Bank of Fort Worth (Sup.) 14 S. W. 780.

Right to open and close.—See City of Rosebud v. Vitek (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 728; notes to art. 1951.

Where defendant who counterclaimed did not admit all facts essential to plaintiff's claim, held that under rule 31 (142 S. W. xx) for district and county courts, defendant was not entitled to open and close argument. Lott v. Ballew (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 645.

On appeal from condemnation award, the property owners were not entitled to open and close the argument because of admitting that certain ordinances were duly passed, not admitting the right of the city to exercise the right of eminent domain, nor of the legal sufficiency of the steps taken. City of San Antonio v. Fike (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 639.

This article gives the right to open and close the argument only to the party having, under the pleadings, the burden of proof on the whole case. Producers' Oil Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 349.

In an action by a seller, the burden of proof of the whole case rested on the seller, although the purchaser sought to avoid the contract by reason of fraudulent representations, and court erred in depriving seller of right to open and conclude argument, in view of art. 1953; District and County Court Rule 31 (142 S. W. xx); defendant not making the required admission. American Law Book Co. v. Fulwiler (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 881.

Demand therefor.—Where defendant filed the admission and request as provided by the rule, the trial court erred in refusing to grant right, the admission and request having been filed after announcement of ready for trial and impanelling of the jury, but before any pleadings were ready or evidence offered. Duke v. Walter (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 714.

Effect of obtaining right.—Error of instruction in placing the burden of proof on plaintiff, over his objection, is not invited, though plaintiff claimed and was allowed the opening and concluding argument to which under this article, the party having the burden of proof is entitled. First Nat. Bank v. Todd (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 322.

Art. 1954. Charge and instructions before argument.

See Southern Pac. Co. v. Walters, 110 Tex. 496, 221 S. W. 264, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 187 S. W. 763. 558
Art. 1955. [1301] [1301] Nonsuit may be taken, when.

Right to move.—The right to take a nonsuit is liberally construed by the courts. Weil v. Abel (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 735.

Plaintiff's right to take a nonsuit before a final decision is announced is a statutory right under this article, and is not a matter of discretion for the court. Id.

Announcement of decision.—Where court stated that he considered the demurrer to plaintiff's evidence well taken, but extended time for counsel for plaintiff to present authorities, plaintiff was entitled to take voluntary nonsuit, under this article, the court not having sustained demurrer. Weil v. Abel (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 735.

Where the court had indicated that he would allow the plea of special privilege of one defendant, but not of another, plaintiff could, before the decision, dismiss as to the one whose plea was to be allowed. First Nat. Bank v. Childs (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 807.

Art. 1957. [1303] [1303] Jury may take papers with them, except, etc.

Depositions and papers connected therewith.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1303, it is not error to refuse to send out a plat of the land in question, made by a witness, and attached to his deposition. Snow v. Starr, 75 Tex. 411, 12 S. W. 673.

Permitting view.—In personal injury action, action of deputy sheriff in taking the jury for a walk after it had been sent back to reconsider case after report of disagreement by the court and the accident held ground for reversal, since the taking of the jurors by the place of the accident was in effect the introduction of further testimony. Texas Midland R. R. v. Brown (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 915.

Art. 1960. [1306] [1306] Caution to the jury.

Necessity of exception.—A mandamus to compel a county judge, who tried a cause, to serve a bill of exceptions stating that he failed to comply with Rev. St. 1879, art. 1306, requiring him to admonish the jury, when about to discharge for the night, not to converse with any one on the subject of the trial, will not issue where no exception was reserved at the time, as required by art. 1355, or presented within 10 days after the close of the trial, as allowed by art. 1963. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Lockhart (App.) 18 S. W. 649.

Art. 1961. [1307] [1307] Jury may communicate with the court.

Art. 1962. [1308] [1308] May ask further instruction.

Instructions after retirement in general.—In suit to set aside a deed, it was not erroneous for the court to inform the jury after retirement of the legal results of their answers to issues submitted. Paville v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1061.

It is not only the right, but the duty, of the court to give the jury additional instructions in the case after they have retired, upon proper request being made therefor. Oates v. Maxcy (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 555.

In action involving boundary dispute, an instruction, in response to request from jury as to whether measurements in deeds immediately following first grant should be considered as circumstances to locate corner, held a direct answer to jury's question. Id.

General charge having said that plaintiffs could recover only if operation of defendant's mill caused this or that to be conveyed to plaintiffs' premises, etc., instruction, in answer to inquiry of jury, that defendant had right to operate its plant, but if in doing so it provided a condition materially disturbing and annoying persons of ordinary sensibilities, etc., it would be liable, could not have been considered authority for judgment for annoyance suffered by plaintiffs elsewhere than in their home. Id.

Whether or not the court should give additional instructions on request by the jury must be left to some extent to the discretion of the trial court, and a case will not be reversed on account of a ruling on such a request, unless abuse or injury is shown. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

Instructions during absence and without consent of party or his attorney.—It was illegal for the trial judge orally to advise the jury after their retirement without the knowledge or presence of plaintiffs, and such action is sufficient cause of reversal of the judgment whether or not it affected the verdict. Holman Bros. v. Cusenbury (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 65.

Mode of giving instructions.—Where court, upon written request from jury after it had retired, sent jury written answer containing further instructions, its failure to summon the jury into open court to further instruct it, as required by arts. 1961 and 1962, was not reversible error, in view of rule 62a (119 S. W. x), where written instruction was handed to officer in charge of jury, who handed instruction to jury foreman. Oates v. Maxcy (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 555.
Form of instruction.—An instruction that the findings of an arbitrator would be binding, unless he acts fraudulently and with bad faith, given in response to a question by the jury as to the effect of interest and partiality, held not erroneous, although a repetition of the main charge; the instruction following issues presented by the pleadings. Smith v. Bryan (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 359.

Urging or coercing agreement.—In a personal injury action wherein the jury failed to agree, a statement by the judge after the jury had retired as to the desirability of bringing in a verdict held not coercive. Texas Midland R. R. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 340.

In personal injury suit, in which testimony was sharply conflicting on material issue, keeping the jurors together from Thursday noon until Friday afternoon, after they had informed the court that they were unable to agree and asked to be discharged, and urging them to agree to avoid additional expense to the county, etc., requires reversal. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Barber (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 294.

While the trial judge is allowed considerable discretion in matters of keeping the jury together, he has no authority to insist upon an agreement in order to avoid additional expense to the county or personal inconvenience to jurors. Id.

Trial court’s remarks that jury might as well reach a decision, that it would save the court’s time, etc., and that regardless of their verdict the case would go to the higher courts, shown to have caused the minority members to agree to a verdict contrary to their judgment, held reversible error. Sunshine Oil Corporation v. Randall (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1090.

Remarks of judge varied in to hear report of jury after it had reported disagreement, held ground for reversal, being coercive. Texas Midland R. v. Brown (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 915.

DECISIONS RELATING TO SUBJECT IN GENERAL

3. Remarks and conduct of judge in general.—In a personal injury action, a statement by the court that he saw no benefit in so much medical testimony offered by defendant held incompetent, as a comment on the evidence, in violation of art. 1571. American Express Co. v. Chandler (Com. App.) 211 S. W. 1066; American Express Co. v. Chandler (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 364.

In action against stockholders of insolvent corporation by eliciting testimony held not to indicate bias or prejudice. Donovan v. Carwile (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 852.

Where plaintiff’s attorneys objected that defendant’s counsel had violated the order putting witnesses under the rule, and the court stated that their action appeared to be a violation of its spirit and intent, but later instructed the jury instance to disregard such remarks and the observations of the court thereon, the court’s remarks are not ground for reversal. Hines v. Xiezer (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 611.

Where in an action for personal injuries the parties agreed that physicians might measure in the jury’s presence plaintiff’s legs to determine whether one was shorter than the other. It was error for the judge to make measurements himself, and to state that the jury that one of plaintiff’s hips was higher than the other. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 382.

Where plaintiff’s counsel objected to the browbeating manner in which witness was being examined, remark of the court that he did not believe in such manner of excepting, and did not approve of it, etc., was not error, it was so trivial as not to be ground for reversal. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Nussbaum (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1102.

In a personal injury action, where a medical witness testified to facts directly contradictory of plaintiff’s case, a remark by the trial judge that he did not think so much medical testimony was beneficial, coupled with the further remark, when defendant took bill of exceptions, to call another doctor, and he would give a second bill of exceptions, was prejudicial error, notwithstanding in the charge the trial court admitted his error and withdrew the statement, for such remarks might well have influenced the jury. American Express Co. v. Chandler (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 1085.

The rules of the district court govern the conduct of counsel in the trial of causes, and they should be required to observe them though it be necessary to impose a penalty, but the trial court should be careful in making observations that may tend to influence the jury to one side or the other. S. Lightburne & Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Rockport (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 343.

6. Presence of jury during proceedings.—It is a matter within the discretion of the court whether the jury should be dismissed during a colloquy between counsel as to admission of evidence. Edens v. Cleaves (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 355.

11. Misconduct of jurors.—In action for personal injuries, it was flagrant misconduct for the jury in assessing damages to consider the fact that the plaintiff’s attorneys would receive 50 per cent. of the recovery, and to double their verdict on that account, and to consider items for expenses not submitted to it. San Antonio Traction Co. v. Mendez (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 691.

That some of jurors, in passing upon question of negligence of defendant’s agent, stated, in substance, that one of plaintiffs was more guilty of negligence than said agent did not show misconduct. Washington v. Austin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 382.

It was error and prejudicial to the jurors, who had retired, to obtain a dictionary by them, since no maker of dictionaries should ever be allowed to define legal terms to a jury, unless such definitions go through the medium of the trial judge, the only one authorized by law to give definitions and explanations to a jury. S. Lightburne & Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Rockport (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 342.

13. Misconduct of others affecting jurors.—Applause and laughter should not be permitted. V. Guindry (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 656.

16. Application of personal knowledge of jurors.—From a detailed statement of the position of the wife, her family, her ordinary duties and labor, the jury can ascertain the value of her services in the performance of household duties, as well as any witness. W. Worth v. Weisler (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 280.

In determining whether defendant's foreman was negligent in attempting to hold up a lumber pile by his own strength while men were working under it, the jury can look to their own experiences. Lancaster v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 297.

23. Arguments and conduct of counsel—Scope and effect of opening statement by counsel.—As art. 1931, subd. 4, permits the party having the burden of proof to state the nature of his claim or defense and facts relied on, it was not improper in an action for specific performance, where the widow of the plaintiff was substituted in his stead, for plaintiff's counsel to state the existence of the minor children of the marriage, and that defendant refused to consummate the agreement as the result of a conspiracy, there being nothing to show that such statements caused an improper verdict. Watson v. Watson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 899.

23½.—Scope of closing argument.—Rule 39 (142 S. W. xx), as to arguments of counsel, was not intended to prevent a proper reference in the closing argument to evidence heard, simply because counsel preceding has referred to the same evidence. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 164.

24. —Presentation of evidence.—It was prejudicial for counsel to inquire three times after adverse ruling whether witness had been paid anything for his injuries and it was unfair to counsel that he was not told he had paid such employer for former injuries at hands of same motorman. Strawn Coal Co. v. Trojan (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 236.

Act of counsel for plaintiff in replevin case in calling jury's attention to flaw in defendant's statement of plaintiff as to its identity, which act would have been proper in argument, was not admission of attorney's unwarned testimony. Hall v. Collier (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 850.

A case will not be reversed because an attorney asks an improper question to which an objection is sustained, unless it be made to appear that he did not ask it in good faith, but to influence the jury improperly, and that it was calculated to have that effect. Clayton v. Kerby (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1117.

25. —Limiting scope or time of argument.—The trial judge has wide latitude in controlling the argument, and only a flagrant abuse of such discretion will authorize reversal. Nimitz v. Holland (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 241.

26. —Statements as to facts, comments, and arguments in general.—In action against a railway company argument to jury that, “You would have stood out there with a shotgun and stopped them from building that side track,” but that plaintiff, a “nigger,” had to submit to it, was improper. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Green (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 655.

In case submitted on special issues counsel should not discuss in their argument to jury effect on judgment to be rendered by court of findings of jury on issues involved. Patterson v. Bushong (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 962.

Statement of plaintiff's counsel in closing argument to jury that reason that counsel for defendants wanted jury to answer first question “No” was because they knew that it would end the case, was improper. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 105.

Trial courts should compel counsel to confine their arguments to the facts applicable to the law. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Swith (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 135.

Remark of counsel that the jury might consider “the fatherly care the child was entitled to receive,” “up to the date it was twenty-one years of age,” in estimating pecuniary loss to child by wrongful death of father, held legitimate argument. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 696.

Statement of plaintiff's counsel, “Remember, if you want the plaintiff to recover, answer the first question, ‘No,’” held improper, since it ought not to be assumed that an impartial jury would return a verdict for either party. Merchants' Life Ins. Co. v. Griswold (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 807.

In action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8655-8665) statement by plaintiff's counsel that jury should answer certain special verdict “No,” since an answer “Yes” would mean that jury thought that employment was a fool in going upon tank on which he had been working at time of injury, held improper. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Long (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 212.

It is not improper for counsel in argument to state to the jury how much they think the plaintiff should recover. City of Dallas v. Maxwell (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 429.

27. —Stating or reading and commenting on proceedings in cause.—It was unnecessary to produce the memoranduum book of a party in corroboration of his statement as to entry made therein, and the trial court should not have permitted counsel to read the memoranduum book. First Nat. Bank v. Rush (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 373.

22 SUPP. V.S.CIV.ST.TEX.—36 561
29. — Arguing or reading law to jury.—Plaintiff's attorney, in closing argument, erroneously stated that laws of state required railroad to run trains on schedule time, that, in absence of proof to contrary, it re. it being duty of judge to inform jury as to law. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Harp (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 502.

If charge by court, similar to argument by counsel, would have been erroneous, it was error for court not to sustain defendants' objections to the argument as to matter of law. Id.

Counsel had the right to state to the court his understanding of the testimony in discussing the admissibility, and also the right to state to the jury what he considered to be the law of the case, if it was not contrary to any instruction given by the court. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Bristow (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 702.

A statement by plaintiff's counsel, that "the law of assumed risk is an infamous law and a bastard offspring of the doctrine of contributory negligence," was improper, and court erred in denying a new trial. Denison Cotton Mill Co. v. MaCamilis (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 442.

The reading of court opinions during argument to the jury is not to be encouraged or commended. Walker v. Kelby (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 726.

The reading during argument to the jury, in an action for tarring and feathering plaintiff because of his unpatriotic conduct, of portions of a court opinion criticizing a prosecution under a sedition statute, condemned as tending only to engender prejudice in the jury.

31. — Matters not sustained by evidence.—An argument: I will tell you that neither J. nor old man F. would swear a lie for this horse, another, and yet another. If you knew them like I do, you couldn't be made to believe so"—was improper, because an attorney should not make a witness of himself in his argument to the jury. W. T. Wilson Grain Co. v. Fitch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 556.

In servant's action for injuries, argument of plaintiff's counsel that there had been irregular things done in connection with case as shown by the record, which the speaker would not be guilty of, for the whole of defendant's plant, held justified by defendant's witness' testimony on cross-examination. Abilene Steam Laundry Co. v. Carter (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 671.

32. — Comments on evidence or witnesses.—Where defendant introduced record of plaintiff's conviction for theft in another state, argument of plaintiff's counsel that conviction should not be held against boy, who was motherless, uneducated, penniless, and wayward, and had been wrongfully convicted, was not improper. Mackay Telegraph & Cable Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 225.

In action against feed company for death of horse, caused by rat poison in feed, argument of plaintiff's attorney: "A specimen. A specimen of what, was men? Of that rat poison that F. got out of the feed that he bought from the W. Grain Company"—was proper. W. T. Wilson Grain Co. v. Fitch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 556.

In an action for breach of employment contract, the statement of defendant's counsel that the evidence would sustain a verdict for $25,000, there being nothing inflammatory in its character, was not misconduct, counsel having the right to present to the jury his deductions from the evidence. Merchants' Life Ins. Co. v. Griswold (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 607.

There being evidence that though Dr. M., was first called in by plaintiff to attend him, continuance of his attendance was at request of R., defendant's surgeon, statement of plaintiff's counsel in argument that R. sent M. to see plaintiff was unobjectionable. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. White (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 255.

Plaintiff's attorney had a right to comment on fact that self-interest of defendant's employe might prompt him to shield himself from a charge of negligence or inattentiveness to duty, and to argue that such fact could be taken into consideration in determining the credit to be attached to employe's testimony. Hines v. O'Brien (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 497.

33. — Comments on failure to produce evidence or call witness.—It is not improper for counsel to comment on failure of party to call known favorable witnesses for his opponent. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World, v. Martin (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 270.

The argument by plaintiff's counsel in a suit for personal injuries that, since defendant did not produce any witness to testify that plaintiff was warned of danger, it might be concluded that such fact did not exist, is a legitimate argument. Texas Electric Ry. v. Gonzales (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 347.

34. — Comments on character or conduct of party.—In the absence of showing of prejudice, held not error for plaintiff's counsel to state that the railroad would not hesitate to fire a man who had testified against it. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Schelb (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 851.

35. — Appeals to sympathy or prejudice.—It was highly improper, in mortgage foreclosure suit, for defendant's counsel to argue that the matter was of little importance to the bank as plaintiff, but of great importance to defendant, who was a poor widow, having no other property, and that, if the jury did not want the bank to have the property, it should answer a special issue in the affirmative. First National Bank v. Porter (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 463.

In action by widow on accident policy, conduct of counsel, in referring to the widow as a "poor old woman without friends and without money," and in criticizing insurer's counsel for objection to such remarks, held improper and prejudicial. Western Indemnity Co. v. MacKechnie (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 458.
In action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8655), statement of employee's counsel, in argument that he did not know whether the railroad company had any soul or not, and that no one kicked it about like it was kicking the plaintiff, held an appeal to the passion and prejudice of the jury and improper. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Long (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 212.

In action for death of son on a defective railroad locomotive, argument that any company which would have a deathtrap like that (the locomotive) to coin dollars with ought to have to confess negligence held improper, and not to be repeated on new trial. West Lumber Co. v. Hunt (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1166.

In answer to be the common-law wife of decedent, and as such entitled to one-half of the community property, argument based on result to plaintiff which stated that it would have the effect of bastardizing the issue is not improper, for the court cannot restrict arguments of counsel so that they cannot present the issues. Winters v. Duncan (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 219.

Injured employe's action for compensation against insurer, remarks during argument that the plaintiff was an old man without money and without friends, who had suffered a terrible accident, whose health was broken, and whose nervous system was impaired, and that the jury was his only place of refuge, and that the defendant was a rich and powerful insurance company, an artificial person without a soul, etc., held ground for reversal; such remarks tending to inflame the minds of the jurors against the defendant. Home Life & Accident Co. v. Jordan (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 862.

37. Reference to protection of defendant by insurance or other indemnity.—Where questions improper are raised of contributory negligence and contributary negligence of plaintiff's counsel in examining witnesses and during argument in pointedly intimating that insurance company was defending case held reversible error, though court charged that such intimations should be disregarded. Coon v. Manley (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 666.

In action for wrongful death, error for counsel eliding in argument by plaintiff that one who had investigated the accident said he was "working for the insurance company." Wichita Falls Motor Co. v. Meade (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 71.

In action for injuries sustained by plaintiff when meter box lid gave way, permitting introduction of evidence showing that defendant was insured in an indemnity company, held error and prejudicial to rights of defendant. Water, Light & Ice Co. of Weatherford v. Barnett (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 236.

38. Retaliatory statements and remarks.—Argument of attorney: "I will tell you that other J. nor old man F would swear a lie for this horse, another, and yet another. If you knew them like I do, you couldn't be made to believe so"—was not reversible, where in reply to argument of opposing counsel that F. was manufacturing and concealing testimony. W. T. Wilson Grain Co. v. Fitch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 556.

A defendant, whose counsel in his argument commented upon absence of a certain witness, and asked where he was, and why plaintiff had not brought him to court to testify, and then challenged opposing counsel to explain his absence, cannot complain where opposing counsel not only stated why witness was absent, but also that his depositions had been taken by plaintiff, and had been quashed. Sims v. Ford (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 669.

The rule that it is reversible error to permit an attorney to advise a jury what the legal effect of their answer to an issue would be is subject to the exception that a party, whose counsel improperly makes a libelous argument not called for, constitutes of argument not stated for that facts, will not be heard to complain of reply of adverse party's counsel thereto. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Huckabee (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 666.

In action for son's death, where defendant's counsel, after submitting issue of number in years. it would have continued to contribute to parents' support stated in argument to jury that their only answer thereto could be, "We don't know," parents' counsel had the right to tell jury to answer some number of years or none, and that answer, "We don't know," would have caused mistrust. id.

Assignments of error that statement of counsel for defendant in argument, informed jury of legal effect of answer to issue will be overruled; the argument being responsive to arguments of plaintiff appellant. Vaello v. Rodriguez (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1052.

Where the argument of counsel was improper because on a matter of fact not in issue and not submitted to the jury, but was not objected to upon that ground, and was supported by evidence, and was not objectionable upon the ground stated, overruling the objection was not error. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Bryant (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 556.

Where court fails, on its own motion, to confine counsel strictly to the evidence, under court rules 39 and 41 (142 S. W. xx), the opposing counsel has the privilege of presenting his point of objection, but is not required to do so to subsequently avail himself thereof. Western Indemnity Co. v. McKechnie (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 455.

An objection to argument of counsel and request for action by the court thereon is not necessary to authorize reversal, where the argument was so prejudicial in character that no action by the court could have removed the effect thereof from the jury. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 282.
Under Court Rules 39 and 41 (142 S. W. xiii, xiv), improper remarks of counsel in argument are available on appeal, notwithstanding failure to object; it being the duty of the court on its own motion to confine counsel to legitimate argument. Home Life & Accident Co. v. Jordan (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 802.

42. — Withdrawal or correction of objectionable matter.—Argument by railroad employes' counsel in which he adverted to fact that employe had wife and children, though trial court had not been instructed to do so, was not reversible error, on objection by counsel, that it was improper. Conceding that counsel's conduct was not correct, a party's plain statement was sufficient to call the trial court's attention thereto. Schaff v. Riha (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 210.

43. — Action of court.—Improper argument of counsel is no ground for reversal, where the court specifically instructed that the jury must find its verdict according to the pleadings and evidence and not the argument. W. C. Munn Co. v. Westfall (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 228.

Error held by a specific instruction not to regard the argument of counsel. Where argument was withdrawn by counsel, and court charged jury to disregard argument that counsel should consider whether estate should go to proponent, a disputable character, or to contestant, a mother, held not harmful. Beadle v. McRabb (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 355.

While it was improper for plaintiff's counsel to state that defendant's witness came from Mississippi to testify and make merchandise of his oath, the error was cured by express instruction by the trial court to disregard the language. Mackay Telegraph & Cable Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 225.

Conceding plaintiff's argument to have been beyond proper bounds, the error was cured by prompt instruction not to consider such remarks and by the withdrawal of such remarks. Sullivan v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 191.

Argument in trespass to try title, although highly improper, held not reversible, where jury was not influenced. Houston Oil Co. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 102.

In an action for wrongful death, inflammatory remarks by plaintiff's attorney as to the verdict which the jury should award held not reversible error in view of instructions not to consider them. Galveston H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Hill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 358.

Although remarks of counsel may have been stronger than the evidence warranted, there was no reversible error where the court cautioned the jury not to consider the remarks. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Terrazas (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 337.

In view of rules 39, 40, 41, for the district and county courts (142 S. W. xx), it is duty of district judge to keep counsel within the record, and not to jeopardize appellants' rights by inferentially sanctioning highly wrought and inflammatory argument. Houston Ice & Brewing Co. v. Harlan (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 779.

Reiterated statement in argument by plaintiff's counsel, without support in the evidence, that a doctor, who testified that there was nothing the matter with plaintiff, was a fake, held not prejudicial, the jury having been instructed to disregard it, and counsel having been twice fined for repeating it. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. White (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 265.

In trespass to try title, wherein a former owner had intervened, a statement of counsel in argument that he had made himself a party to protect his warranty held not reversible error in view of instructions not to consider it. Bishop v. Paul (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 435.

In a servant's action for injuries, argument of counsel as to an issue submitted respecting a plea of privilege held harmless, where the venue was nevertheless properly laid, and court instructed to disregard such improper argument. C. C. Slaughter Cattle Co. v. Pastrana (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 749.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
CHARGES AND INSTRUCTIONS TO THE JURY

Art. 1970. Court shall charge the jury, unless waived, etc.

1971. Requisitions of the charge; submission to parties; objections, etc.

1972. Charges need not be excepted to.

1974. Endorsement by judge on special instructions refused; as bill of exceptions; presumption on appeal; endorsement when instruction given or modified.

1975. Jury may carry charge, etc., with them.
Article 170. [1316] [1316] Unless waived court shall charge jury or submit issues of fact; failure to give time for examination, etc.

1. Necessity and propriety of instructions in general.—Art. 1985 did not relieve the court from the duty to comply with this article, where special issues were requested in due time. Dorsey v. Cogdell (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 303.

2. Issues and theories of case in general.—Where court's general charge fails to adequately instruct jury concerning vital principles affecting issues, it is the privilege of a litigant to request and have given a correct charge covering such matters. Beaumont S. L. & W. Ry. Co. v. Myrick (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 935.

3. Requested charge.—Requested charge that, if plaintiff's driving his automobile at a greater than the lawful rate of speed was the proximate cause of the collision with street car, plaintiff could not recover, embodied the court's instructions of law, and, being applicable to an issue not affirmatively presented by the main charge, should have been given. Southern Traction Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 457.

A defendant is entitled to a charge, when properly and seasonably requested, requiring the jury to find from the evidence established by the pleadings or other evidence, that the failure of any party (excusing group of facts) to perform or do or to prevent a lawful act, was the direct cause of the accident, and that the act or omission was negligent and a proximate cause of the injury or damage sustained. Inso v.筋 (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 388.

When plaintiff sought to rescind a conveyance on the ground defendant failed to carry out his agreement to grant plaintiff an oil and gas lease, and defendant insisted that he was to receive $1 per acre for the lease, the charge should present defendant's contention. Long v. Calloway (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 414.

In the trial court should instruct the jury that there was no controversy on a particular matter, which fact was admitted. First Nat. Bank v. Rush (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 378.

Both plaintiff and defendant have the right to prepare and demand charges presenting for the consideration of the jury a fact or group of facts which, if found to be true, establish in law some material issue; that is, they have the right to have the court explain to the jury the principles of law applicable to the very facts constituting a cause of action or defense. Haverbecken v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 256.

Duty to submit all the issues.—It is the duty of the court in the first instance to submit all the issues raised by the pleadings and evidence. Gulf Pipe Line Co. v. Hurst (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1024.

In servant's action for personal injury, charging violation of Federal Safety Appliance Act, wherein defendant pleaded accident, and there was evidence thereon, it was entitled to an affirmative charge upon that theory of its defense, though a general charge was given to the same effect. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Swift (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 135.

When a case is submitted on a general charge, issues of each party should be affirmatively submitted, but such is not the case if the submission is on special issues. Jackson v. Graham (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 756.

Where a case is submitted either under a general charge or upon special issues, a party is entitled to an affirmative presentation of an issue raised by pleadings and evidence. Sherrill v. Union Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 149.

In action for damages from collision between plaintiff's automobile and defendant's interurban car, failure to affirmatively present defense of contributory negligence, based on alleged voluntary instruction of plaintiff, would be a substantial denial of right if defendant had requested a correct charge. Southern Traction Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 296 S. W. 487.

In a servant's action, the refusal of a special charge, directing a verdict for the master unless a machine was in a defective condition, and unless the master had failed to use ordinary care with reference thereto, held error; the master being entitled to have the affirmative of the issue presented. Gammage v. Gamer Co. (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 300.

In personal injury case, defendant was entitled to an instruction in the affirmative form that, although defendant's brakeman committed the act charged by plaintiff, yet if jury further found the brakeman not guilty of negligence in so doing verdict should be for defendant: there being evidence raising the issue whether the act was negligent. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 773.

In action for injuries to employé, refusal to give employer's special charge grouping

A litigant, where he properly requests it, is entitled to have the facts clearly and affirmatively presented to the jury, and when a defendant presents a special charge group of certain facts which the jury may find from the evidence, the legal effect of which is to acquit, the court commits error in refusing to give such instruction; the general charge containing nothing specifically to indicate such defense. McElroy v. Dobbs (Civ. App.) 259 S. W. 674.

8. Presumptions and burden of proof.—It was error to refuse charge that burden of proof was on defendant as to certain issues, where instruction that burden was on plaintiff to make out case by preponderance of evidence was so placed that it led jury to believe that burden was on plaintiff as to all issues. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 540.

In an action against a charterer of vessel for failure to furnish cargo, held that the failure to charge that the burden was on the charterer to sustain the defense that the owner would have suffered no loss had it used any diligence in accepting other cargoes was not error. Prince Line, Limited, of Newcastle, England, v. Steger (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 232.

Unless the evidence shows a case without proof tending to show negligence, it is not error to refuse charge that negligence cannot be presumed from the mere fact of accident or injury, but is a fact that must be proven as any other fact in issue. Texas Electric Railway Co. v. Cribbs (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 837.

A court which has not instructed on the burden of proof should do so on request, if necessary for the better aid and guidance of the jury, though special issue have been framed so as to indicate the burden. Gorse v. Uvalde Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 620.

V. A father's action to recover his child from its maternal grandparents. It was error not to charge the jury that the burden was on defendants to prove that the plaintiff was disqualified or incompetent to have the care, custody, and control of his child. Clayton v. Kerbev (Civ. App.) 256 S. W. 1117.

An charge on the burden of proof is not necessary or proper in every case, but its propriety depends on the state of the evidence. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Preston (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 928.

In a suit to set aside a sheriff's sale on the ground that the purchaser had bid in the absence of the mortgagor, the burden was on plaintiff to show such agreement and a fraudulent conspiracy to stifle bidding, and failure to so instruct on proper request was reversible error. Jenkins v. Moore (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 886.

10. Purpose and effect of evidence.—In an action for flooding lands by negligent construction of a railroad bridge, where testimony that lower bridges were similarly constructed was admitted over defendant's objection, it was error to refuse to charge that jury should not award any damages as having resulted from the condition of bridges below plaintiff's land. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Speer (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 762.

A requested instruction to limit testimony to a particular issue was properly refused, where some of the testimony at least bore on other issues. Grice v. Herrick Hardware Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 502.

Where evidence of a conversation was admitted only because it was not conclusively shown that prior thereto defendants had possession of the strip in controversy, the court should instruct that if defendants were in possession prior to the conversation the agreement would not be binding upon him, but that if possession was secured by lessee by the contract with plaintiff the lessee's possession would not support defendants' pleas of laches. Grice v. Carter (Civ. App.) 247 S. W. 229.

Where action was brought against manufacturer and his alleged agent, an instruction that, unless the jury found that he was the manufacturer's agent, letters written by him should not be considered, was properly refused, as it would have been error to charge the jury that he could not be considered in determining the agent's liability. Denby Motor Truck Co. v. Mears (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 994.

11. Exclusion of evidence from consideration.—Instruction submitting the true measure of damages for conversion of ore, but not excluding inadmissible evidence of value at times other than when converted, is reversible error; where it cannot be determined whether such evidence influenced the verdict. Bartlesville Zinc Co. v. Compania Minera Ygnacio Rodriguez Ramos, S. A. (Civ. App.) 202 s. W. 1048.

The court did not err in charging the jury not to consider the decree of Pres. Carranza of Mexico enlarging ore, the conversion of which was the subject of the suit, where at such time he and Gen. Villa were acting together, and were contending with each other, and the defense claimed they were seized by Villa. Id.

In a wife's action for the death of her husband it was not error to charge that the jury should not consider in mitigation of damages the fact of her remarriage, inadmissible evidence as to such remarriage, having been admitted. Texas Electric Ry. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1061.

12. Circumstantial evidence.—Where a litigant relies on circumstantial evidence, it is not only proper, but it is his right, to have the court charge the jury that they may consider that character of testimony in determining the issue. Rounds v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 496.

15. Matters of law in general.—It is the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to the law applicable to the facts. Lillard Milling Co. v. Brooks & Few (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 686.
Ordinarily it is correct to instruct a jury as to what the law is on any particular issue submitted for their consideration. Carl v. Settegast ( Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 596.

16. Law applicable to particular issues or theories.—Where plaintiff sued, claiming contract with agent, who failed to disclose his principal, under which he performed work and labor, and sought recovery of contract price or in quantum meruit, held not error, under the evidence, to refuse a charge on quantum meruit. Allen v. Orear (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 670.

Where in action for goods sold wife living apart from husband after notice not to sell on his credit, evidence of conduct made question for jury as to equitable estoppel, held, that instructions on that subject should have been given. Sanger Bros. v. Trammell (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1175.

In action to cancel oil leases on ground of forfeiture, court properly submitted issue of defendant lessees' intention voluntarily to abandon grants. Munsey v. Marnet Oil & Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 686.

Evidence of breach of a logging contract held sufficient upon which to base instruction as to the amount and measure of damages. Liberty Hardwood Lumber Co. v. Stevens (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 869.

In an action against fire insurance companies for conspiring to prevent plaintiff from obtaining insurance by representations as to his character, it was error to refuse instruction that such representations made by an insurance agent to his company were conditionally privileged. Palatine Ins. Co. v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 1014.

In a passenger's action for ejection, instructions should cover the question whether the acts of the conductor were reasonable and necessary, and whether in fact plaintiff suffered humiliation, chagrin, and mortification. Southern Kansas Ry. Co. of Texas v. Wallace (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 565.

In action by husband for divorce for excesses, cruel treatment, or outrages held, under facts, that jury should have been instructed that, if conduct of defendant wife was due to her mental or physical condition, there would be no cruelty. McNabb v. McNabb (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 129.

Where contestants denied testator's capacity and the court submitted the question whether the testator was of sufficiently sound mind to understand his acts, refusal of charge as to mentality which a person must have to execute a will held not error, for it must be presumed that the jury knew what mentality was necessary for them to answer the question. Byrne v. Curtin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 465.

In an action for partnership accounting, it was material error to refuse special charge that profits were to be determined only upon business transacted before the purchase of plaintiff's interest by another, clearly indicated by the evidence. Hannes v. Raube (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 985.

In action to enjoin parol trust upon deed, court properly instructed jury that, if it was proved that no trust was intended, the failure to pay consideration named did not in itself constitute the transaction one of trust. Carl v. Settegast (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 566.

Where plaintiff alleged and testified that deed was procured by fraud, and where attack on deed upon ground of fraud was barred by statute of limitations, court properly instructed that suit was not brought to set aside for fraud. Id.

In suit by the landlord to enforce his right to rent out of the crops, where sequestration was warranted by facts, the tenant not having sought in his cross-action to recover damages on account of excessive levy, submission to the jury of any question relative to his right to recover damages was properly refused. Gaylor v. Monroe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 530.

The court should construe the jury a chattel mortgage in evidence and relied on as justification for mortgagee taking possession of the chattels. J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Jamison (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 998.

In trespass to try title, evidence that defendant's predecessor had been in possession under a deed and claim of ownership, and that the heirs of the original patentee had paid no taxes and claimed no ownership for more than 30 years, held to require an instruction as to the presumption of a sale. Chapman v. Dickerson (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 818.

In an action by a negro passenger shot in an altercation with the train auditor, who, according to plaintiff's testimony unwarrantedly cursed and abused him, and was threatening to shoot him at the time he grabbed the auditor's arm, a special charge presenting that issue was improperly refused, not being covered by the main charge. Wright v. Schaff (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 333.

In such action the refusal of charges submitting the question of the assault and insults held improper under the evidence and pleadings. Id.

Where the pleadings and testimony present an issue of whether adverse claimant recognized title paramount, it is error to refuse a requested correct special charge to the effect that such recognition would stop the running of limitations, when the cause was submitted on a general charge. Collins v. Megason (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 583.

In an action for commission on procuring an exchange of lands, held, in view of the evidence, that the court should have given at defendant owner's request a special instruction presenting the issue whether the land was exchanged by defendant owner through his own efforts. McElroy v. Dobbs (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 674.

17. Negligence.—In action against waterworks company for injuries received when plaintiff stepped into hole made by cut-off box, company was entitled to instruction presenting defense that defect was brought about by action of another. San Antonio Water Supply Co. v. Castle (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 306.
Where the judge did not define the rights and duties of the railroad company in the operation of its engine in respect to preventing the escape of fire, the refusal of a correct requested instruction covering that issue would be error. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 285.

In an action for a railroad employe's death by a derailment, where there was evidence of defective track, an instruction on master's duty in furnishing appliances was proper; the term "appliances" including a railroad track. Hines v. Kelley (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 492.

In an action for injuries to an elevator passenger, whose leg was caught in the door and held while the car descended, evidence held not to call for the submission of a charge on unavoidable accident. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Nussbaum (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 1102.

18. Agency and respondeat superior.—In an action for conversion of mortgaged automobile, where there was testimony that one of the defendants authorized the mortgagor to execute the mortgage, it was error for the court to refuse to give requested instruction requiring the jury to find whether or not such defendant authorized the mortgagor to execute such mortgage. Rowe v. Guderian (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 960.

22. Proximate cause.—In an action for injuries to a passenger while alighting, testimony that she fell because the porter had put his knee across the step held not to have made an issue as to unavoidable accident, to call for instruction thereon. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Courtney (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 835.

23. Fraud.—In grantee's action to enjoin sale on execution where there was evidence raising the issue of whether land exceeded in value the land conveyed in exchange, refusal to charge on fraudulent intent of grantor held error. Slaton v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 955, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) Citizens' Nat. Bank of Plainview v. Slaton, 189 S. W. 742.

25. Determination of amount of recovery.—It is trial court's duty to furnish jury elements of damage which may be considered by them. Southern Traction Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 188 S. W. 150.

In lessee's action for wrongful dispossession by third person, if he had agreed to sublet part of land, it was error to refuse to submit question of damages, limited by fact that he had so agreed. McCauley v. McElroy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317.

Where charges were correct, measure of damages was correct, with reference thereto, which would merely have had effect of explaining that "reasonable probability" did not mean "mere possibility," was properly refused. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 343.

In action for breach of marriage promise, plaintiff has right to have attention of jury specifically directed to fact that they might consider seduction and anguish it alone may have added in estimating her damages. Funderburgh v. Skinner (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 482.

In action for loss of use of personality for over two years, court should have given requested charge that the jury should not base their estimate on the daily, weekly, or monthly value of the use, but to determine the value of the use for the entire period, though testimony as to monthly value had been admitted without objection, and refusal was not justified because as there was no evidence of daily or weekly value of use, charge was on weight of evidence. Montgomery v. Callas (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 557.

28. Definition or explanation of terms.—In suit against railroad for damages by fire though it would have been proper for the court to define "market value," failure to do so was not reversible error. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Stearns (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 857.

22. Proximate cause.—In an action for injuries to a passenger while alighting, testimony that she fell because the porter had put his knee across the step held not to have made an issue as to unavoidable accident, to call for instruction thereon. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Courtney (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 835.

23. Fraud.—In grantee's action to enjoin sale on execution where there was evidence raising the issue of whether land exceeded in value the land conveyed in exchange, refusal to charge on fraudulent intent of grantor held error. Slaton v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 955, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) Citizens' Nat. Bank of Plainview v. Slaton, 189 S. W. 742.

25. Determination of amount of recovery.—It is trial court's duty to furnish jury elements of damage which may be considered by them. Southern Traction Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 188 S. W. 150.

In lessee's action for wrongful dispossession by third person, if he had agreed to sublet part of land, it was error to refuse to submit question of damages, limited by fact that he had so agreed. McCauley v. McElroy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317.

Where charges were correct, measure of damages was correct, with reference thereto, which would merely have had effect of explaining that "reasonable probability" did not mean "mere possibility," was properly refused. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 343.

In action for breach of marriage promise, plaintiff has right to have attention of jury specifically directed to fact that they might consider seduction and anguish it alone may have added in estimating her damages. Funderburgh v. Skinner (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 482.

In action for loss of use of personality for over two years, court should have given requested charge that the jury should not base their estimate on the daily, weekly, or monthly value of the use, but to determine the value of the use for the entire period, though testimony as to monthly value had been admitted without objection, and refusal was not justified because as there was no evidence of daily or weekly value of use, charge was on weight of evidence. Montgomery v. Callas (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 557.

28. Definition or explanation of terms.—In suit against railroad for damages by fire though it would have been proper for the court to define "market value," failure to do so was not reversible error. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Stearns (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 857.

In an architect's action for plans and specifications furnished defendant upon the authority of his general local agent, a requested instruction should have been submitted upon the term "apparent authority," which is technical and not easily understood by laymen (citing Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Apparent Authority). Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Roquemore (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 679.

In an action for the death of intending passenger struck by defendant's interurban car which passed the station at a high rate of speed, it was not error to refuse to define the word "control" as applied to the operation of the car. Texas Electric Ry. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1081.

Where the court had required the jury to find whether the negligence of the defendant directly caused the accident, it was not error to refuse a charge that the direct cause is the proximate cause without which the accident would not have happened, since "direct cause" needs no definition, and would be better understood than "proximate cause," and laid a heavier burden on plaintiff than a requirement to find proximate cause would have done. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 282.

In a suit to set aside an award to parents as dependents, for the death of their son, refused the trial judge to define the word "dependents" was not erroneous; the statute itself failing to define it. Southern Surety Co. v. Hibbs (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 303.

Where the court submitted correct issues as to whether defendant knew facts which would put a prudent man on inquiry as to restrictions and whether reasonable inquiry would have prevented at the restrictions using the term "constructive notice," it was not error to fail to define that term. Wilson Co. v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 703.

The legal question being whether certain funds were subject to garnishment, depending on whether a certain arrangement had been made and whether that arrangement 508 created a partnership, it was not necessary to define a partnership. Brown v. Cassidy-Southeastern Commission Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 833.

Where a special issue required the jury to find whether a cotton gin was within the part of the town set aside to gins and like industries, or in "reasonable proximity thereto," the quoted words did not need to be defined, as they are words of ordinary use. Olive v. Forney Cotton Oil & Ginning Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 902.

In a suit for commission on sale of cattle, the trial court did not err in failing to instruct as to the meaning of the term "procuring cause" (of sale); the words "efficient and procuring cause" as used not being technical. Lamaden v. Jones (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 353.

In an action against a railroad and others for damages to plaintiff's land through the spread of Johnson grass from a switch or spur line, it was unnecessary for the jury to define the meaning of "preponderance of the evidence." Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Blumberg (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 724.

29. General or special charge.—See notes to art. 1974a.

Art. 1971. [1317] [1317] Requisites of charge; submission to parties; objections, etc.

1. PROVINCE OF COURT AND JURY

(A) Questions of Law or Fact

1. Questions of law or fact in general.—In an action on notes given for work done on a railroad it was for the court, and not the jury, to state whether plaintiff sought recovery on the account or on the notes. Bryan College Interurban Ry. Co. v. Kropp (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 733.

In an action by county, through district attorney, a plea in abatement, denying the authority of the district attorney to institute and prosecute the suit, where there was no question of fact arising under the pleadings, should have been decided directly by the court as a matter of law, and not by the verdict of the jury. Bexar County v. Davis (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 555.

3. Preliminary or introductory questions of fact.—The question whether sufficient predicate for the introduction of testimony to establish the existence and loss of a deed has been established is a question of law addressed to the sound discretion of the court. Martinez v. Bruni (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 615.

Whether the conditions under which experiments were made so substantially similar to those under which an accident occurred as to authorize introduction of the result is for the decision of the trial court, and he has considerable latitude of discretion in deciding it. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Haywood (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 341.

The circumstances of the case must be clear and decisive to justify its withdrawal from the consideration of the jury. Pollack v. Perry (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 967; Texas Life Ins. Co. v. Legg (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 357.

It is only where reasonable and ordinary minds may arrive at different conclusions on any issue of fact that such issue should be submitted to the jury. Tatum v. Orange & N. W. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 348.

If issue of fact is raised as to any material question in case, it must be submitted to jury. Reeves v. Avina (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 729.

Court cannot peremptorily instruct verdict on any issue as against party, where there is some evidence in his favor on issue involved. Toole v. Moore (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 429.

In an action under federal Employers' Liability Act (7. S. Comp. St. 1916, §§ 8657-8655) for death of a brakeman, the judgment would be reversed on appeal from a directed verdict for defendants if the evidence, taken most favorably to appellant, would authorize reasonable minds to conclude that defendants' negligence proximately resulted in death. Rowe v. Colorado & S. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 711.
Although the evidence was not entirely plain and satisfactory, yet where it cannot be said that the law peremptorily called for the verdict, the court erred in directing a verdict against her. Walker v. Douglass (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 348.

In an action by an engineer for services rendered in supervising the construction of a highway, a peremptory instruction in his favor held warranted under the rule that, where there is no reason for ordinary minds to differ as to the conclusion to be drawn from the evidence, a peremptory instruction is proper. McDonald v. Axtell (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 563.

When a state of facts is presented from which an ultimate question must be drawn and reasonable minds might differ as to what conclusion should be drawn from the ultimate facts proven, the question is for the jury. Bradshaw v. Brown (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 767.

The court will not take a case from the jury and direct a verdict for defendant merely because the evidence preponderates, or greatly preponderates in favor of defendant. National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Weaver (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 754.

If a state of facts be such that all reasonable minds would draw the same conclusion, it presents a question of law for the court rather than a question of fact for the jury. Tisdale v. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 153.

Where, in an action for personal injury, a verdict could be predicated on a finding of negligence of fellow servants alone, there was no error in refusing a special charge directing a verdict for defendant on the ground that the charge of negligence on the part of defendant's foreman was not sustained. Payne v. Harris (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 350.

It is the duty of the court to instruct a verdict, though there be slight testimony, if its probative force is so weak that it only raises a suspicion of the existence of the facts sought to be established, and whether the testimony has more than such force is for the court. Mills v. Mills (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 100; Thames v. Clesi (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 196.

The trial court is the judge of the weight of the testimony. Rossetti v. Venavides (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 208.

It is province of jury to give such weight to the testimony as they think proper. West Lumber Co. v. C. R. Cummings Export Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 546.

Credibility of plaintiff as witness and weight of his testimony are for the jury. Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 567; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Gericke (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 745.

The question of whether there is any evidence is one for the court, and whether sufficient evidence is one for the jury. City of San Antonio v. Newman (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 128.

The trial court is the judge of the credibility of witnesses. Rossetti v. Benavides (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 208.

It is province of jury to pass upon credibility of witnesses and to give such weight to their testimony as they think proper. West Lumber Co. v. C. R. Cummings Export Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 546.

In view of Const. art. 1, § 15, preserving the right to jury trial, and art. 2034, limiting the number of new trials, it is the province of the jury to determine the credibility of witnesses and the weight of testimony, and the court may not assume its functions by deciding that testimony is entitled to no credit because overborne by contradictory testimony, or that it is so contradictory to circumstances and proof as to be improbable. Drew v. American Automobile Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 547.

The credibility of opinion evidence as to market value of an article is for the jury. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Hagpool (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 969.

8. Evidence.—Parties and persons interested.—In action by lessor to forfeit lease for non-payment of rent, as lessee was an interested witness jury were at liberty to disbelieve him. Crawford v. Texas Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 195.

Credibility of plaintiff as witness is for the jury. Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 567.

Where defendants admitted plaintiff's cause of action, except as it might be defeated by facts proven by defendants, and where such facts could not be proven without testimony of defendants themselves, it was not error to refuse a peremptory instruction for defendants. Turrentine v. Doering (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 802.

Credibility of a witness is a question for the jury, and the court cannot assume the 370.

Where a party, testifying concerning a transaction, introduced original entries made by him at the time covering the points involved, his testimony was taken out of the rule that the court cannot assume the truthfulness of the unsupported testimony of an interested party. Id.

Where a party's case is proven only by his own testimony, it is an issue of fact for the jury, even though it be undisputed and unimpeached. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barnwell (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 268.

No matter how positive and undisputed the testimony of an interested party may be, the question of his credibility must be submitted to the jury. Mills v. Mills (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 915.

The credibility of plaintiff as a witness and the weight to be given his testimony in view of his interest is for the jury. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Gerick (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 745.

There being no disputed issue of fact for the jury, a verdict may be directed. Meyer-Forster Realty Co. v. Read (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 587.

Under art. 6603, in action for killing stock on track, where undisputed evidence disclosed no adequate fence had been maintained, it was court's duty to direct verdict for plaintiff. S. v. Schirlemmer (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 294.

In an action for a commission for furnishing a buyer for land, evidence held not to warrant a directed verdict for plaintiff, although the contract was admitted but was claimed to have been annulled. Turner v. Garrard (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 635.

In action for damages for breach of contract to deliver oil, when facts were undisputed, peremptory instruction was proper. Planters' Oil Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 145.

Issues of fact should not be submitted to the jury for decision, when they are established by the evidence beyond controversy. Smith v. McBroom (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1120.

It is not error to peremptorily instruct jury on issue upon which evidence is uncontroverted, and it is the better practice to do so. Etter v. Stampp & Eliehberge (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 145.

Where defendant insurance company admitted that plaintiff had good cause of action except so far as it might be defeated by facts to be established, it was not error to refuse defendant's request to submit question whether or not attorney's fees sued for were reasonable; no evidence having been introduced upon that question. Zetna Life Ins. Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 348.

In action under lease for rent, tenant having vacated by reason of plaintiff's failure or inability to stop leaks in roof, court properly refused to submit issue whether or not holes made by sign braces erected by tenant caused roof to leak, where evidence that plaintiff had stopped all leaks caused by braces was uncontroverted. Ingram v. Fred (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 298.

In action of trespass to try title, it was not improper for the court to declare facts properly in evidence and undisputed as part of his findings without submitting to the jury. Martinez v. Brunil (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 655.

Where the facts were undisputed, except that a defendant testified one way on direct examination and another way on cross-examination, there was no question of fact for submission to a jury, but the court presented a question of law for the court. Turbeville v. Book (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 814.

10. Inferences from evidence.—A jury is not authorized to render a verdict merely upon inferences drawn by it, but such inferences must have basis in the evidence in order to be submitted. S. v. Orange & N. W. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 248.

The jury were the judges, not only of the facts proved, but of the inferences to be drawn therefrom, provided such inferences were not unreasonable. Stephenville, N. & S. T. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Com. App.) 208 S. W. 915.

That evidence concerning material issues was undisputed does not make them any the less issues of fact, as it is only when reasonable minds would not differ as to the inferences to be drawn from a given state of facts that the question becomes an issue of law. House v. House (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 322.

The duty to reconcile factual facts in evidence, or to adopt one or other theory shown by evidence, is on jury. Hodde v. Malone Real Estate Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 347; Jacobson v. Thomas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 652; Scheps v. Glenn (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 248.

A preponderance of evidence on one side or the other is not sufficient to justify a trial court in denying the right of trial by jury. Drew v. American Automobile Ins. Co.
Art. 1971  COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN

If there is any evidence tending to dispute defendant's evidence on issues, verdict cannot be directed for defendant. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Frankel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1132.

Though it is the duty of trial judge to set aside a verdict when it is contrary to great preponderance of the testimony, that rule does not affect the primary right to have the case submitted to the jury. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clements (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 622.

The giving of plaintiff's requested charges which were tantamount to peremptory instructions, when the only facts, which would in any event have entitled plaintiff there­to, were sharply controverted, would have been affirmative error. Fyle v. Park (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 658.

Affirmative matters of defense should be submitted to the jury, where the evidence is conflicting. Jackson v. Martin (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 4.

In case of disputed facts, the issue should be submitted to the jury. Young v. Blain (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 851.

12. Withdrawal of particular counts or issues.—Where plaintiff sued on contract, or in the alternative on a quantum meruit, although in his testimony he insisted that he only performed the services by virtue of the alleged contract. Gayer v. Chapman (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 485.

Where there were two defendants, and plaintiff's right to recover of them rested upon different grounds and was attempted to be sustained by different proof, the court properly refused peremptory instruction if he thought the evidence was sufficient to sustain plaintiff's claim as to one defendant. Priddy v. Childers (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 172.

14. Demurrer to evidence.—A motion to strike from the record all testimony introduced by the adverse party is very far-reaching, and should never be entertained, where there is any material testimony, however slight, bearing on issues under investiga­tion. Huishizer v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 658.

Where there was no evidence to support verdict for plaintiff, and motion to instruct verdict for a certain defendant was sustained, entering judgment without a formal jury finding is not erroneous. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

Action of a court, in peremptorily instructing a jury, held equivalent to a denial of the right of trial by jury and in violation of Const. art. 1, § 16. Buckholts State Bank v. Graf (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 855.

Where court was authorized to direct verdict, and in so doing directed verdict against one not served with citation, it was equally authorized to set it aside as to such person, and enter judgment accordingly. American Surety Co. v. Sheerin (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1120.

Where defendant's motion, made after plaintiffs had closed their evidence in chief, was overruled, and defendant then proceeded to introduce testimony, all rights to complain of the court's failure to grant the motion were waived. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Douthit (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 201.

Where matters were proven by the uncorroborated testimony of plaintiff, and defendant, with full knowledge thereof, was present in court, but did not dispute such testimony by any evidence, it was not error to give a peremptory instruction for plaintiff. Brown v. McKinney (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 565.

Where, under the evidence, plaintiff was entitled to some recovery, a general peremptory instruction denying any recovery was properly refused, even though plaintiff was not entitled to recover as to all of the amounts claimed. Cochran v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 253.

There being no issue to go to the jury, the trial court properly instructed a verdict for defendants. Rich v. Eason (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 581.

In an action on a life policy, providing for double liability in event of accidental death, where insurer set up defense of suicide, and filed an admission under district court rule 31 (142 S. W. xiii), and the court erroneously permitted it to open and close, it was error, after the case was submitted, to recall the jury and direct a verdict in favor of plaintiff on the ground that the defendant had admitted that the death was accidental, as the insurer was deprived of the right to move to withdraw the admission. Federal Life Ins. Co. v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 591.

Court has no power to take from jury an issue of adverse possession suit in trespass to try title, where there is a question of fact involved. Davis v. Cisneros (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 298.

Where damage to insured building was caused partly by an explosion and partly by fire, and where policy provided against liability for damage by explosion, verdict should have been directed for insurer in action on policy in which there was no evidence on which jury could base a finding as to amount of damage caused by the fire. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. v. Mims (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 738.

In an action for breach of contract to drill an oil well, where there were other elements of damage on which plaintiff was entitled to go to the jury, peremptory instruction should be refused, though plaintiff may not have been entitled to recover profits. Osage Oil & Refining Co. v. Lee Farm Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 518.

Plaintiffs, who stood by and saw defendants making a mistake in calculation as to royalties to be paid held guilty of fraud, and in their suit wherein defendants ask only the consideration in fact agreed, the trial court properly refused a peremptory instruction for plaintiffs. Morris v. McGough (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 1092.

17. Operation and effect of motion or request.—A motion by defendant for an instructed verdict, which was overruled, does not, like demurrer to the evidence, preclude defendant from proceeding with case. Hook v. Payne (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 286.

In a suit for personal injuries, a peremptory instruction to find that $500 of such commission was unpaid did not preclude court from finding for defendant on the issue of limitations. Campbell v. Wyatt (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 743.

(B) Particular Questions or Issues

18. In general.—In an architect's action for services, evidence held sufficient to go to the jury. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Roquemore (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 679.

In an action on a promissory note for corporate stock, evidence held to make a jury question whether the stock had been "issued" in violation of the constitutional provision that no corporation shall issue stock except for money paid, labor done, or property actually received. Wilson v. Bankers’ Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 862.

In action by lessees, entitled under lease to the necessary space to operate oil wells which they brought in, to restrain defendant, who had leased the land from owners, from interfering with plaintiffs' operation of their wells and for possession of certain land, question of whether the land in dispute was necessary space for operation of the plaintiffs' wells held for jury. Moore v. Decker (Com. App.) 220 S. W. 773, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 176 S. W. 816.

In a building contractor's action for a balance alleged to be due on an award of arbitration, which defendants sought to avoid on the ground of unfairness of one of the arbitrators and intimidations towards the board on the part of defendant, evidence held insufficient to require the court to submit the issues of fairness and intimidation to the jury. Anderson Bros. v. Parker Const. Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 677.

Whether a provision in a contract is one for a penalty, or liquidated damages, is one for the court, and not for the jury. Kollner v. Puckett (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 914.

19. Accord and satisfaction and settlement.—With conclusive evidence of a bona fide controversy over the amount due, and undisputed evidence that plaintiff cashed defendant's check sent with a letter stating it was in full payment, an instructed verdict for defendant upon the ground of accord and satisfaction was not error. Miller Bros. v. H. L. Hooks Co. (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 992.

Plaintiff's receipt, reciting that the amount "settles all accounts" "up to date," did not, as a matter of law, settle a claim based on check dated prior to the receipt, and by agreement not to be presented until after the date of the receipt. Weller v. Burns (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 861.

Evidence that plaintiff employee accepted certain checks after advising defendant employer that he was entitled to an extra month's pay, and that the employer stated he would receive it if he was entitled to it, etc., held to make the issue of accord and satisfaction and question of fact. Lone Star Shipbuilding Co. v. Daniels (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 225.

In buyer's action for nondelivery in which he claimed an agreed settlement by the terms of which seller was indebted for specified amount, question of whether such settlement had been entered into held for jury. Arminger v. City Nat. Bank of Paris (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 707.

In seller's action for balance of purchase price, the question of whether there had been an accord and satisfaction by seller's acceptance of an amount less than that first demanded by buyer of buyer's demand for certain deductions, held a question for the jury. Early-Foster Co. v. W. F. Klump & Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 1015.

19. Account and accounting.—In an action by a member of an association against its treasurer, after dissolution, evidence held not conflicting as to accounting between defendant and other members so that directing a verdict for plaintiff was not error. Bellew v. Jacobs (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 928.

20. Acknowledgment.—Whether a notary who takes an acknowledgment is financially or beneficially interested in ordinarily an issue of fact. Creosoted Wood Block Paving Co. v. McKay (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 822.

21. Adverse possession.—Evidence that house and improvements of adverse possession claimant were on one tract, and only minor and incidental improvements on a second tract, did not make his adverse possession beyond his actual possession a jury question. Bailey v. Kirby Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 221.

To try title, court properly submitted to jury question of plaintiff's claim of title by adverse possession to more of land than six acres which had been cultivated by plaintiff and predecessors. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Holland (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 665.

In trespasses to try title, where it appeared that plaintiffs asserted right to the land which it was claimed had not been asserted by their ancestors for 50 years, the question of the presumption of the grant by reason of the lapse of time should be submitted to the jury. House v. Stephens (Civ. App.) 186 S. W. 334.

In trespasses to try title, wherein plaintiffs claimed an equitable interest, held that whether there was such a repudiation of the trust and notice thereof to the beneficiary as made the alleged trustee's possession adverse, was for the jury. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Harbaugh (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 496.

Where defendant claimed title by adverse possession, whether defendant was a tenant of plaintiff held for the jury. Dolen v. Ledbetter (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 142, 1964.

Where plaintiff relied on adverse possession, held, that the question whether he had perfect adverse title to the entire premises, though he was only in possession of a portion, and did not render the whole for taxes, was for the jury. Martinez v. Bruni (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 655.

Where a tenant in common takes adverse possession of land, notoriously using and enjoying it adversely and claiming to own it, it becomes a question of fact for the jury as to whether limitations are not in favor of such tenant. Id.

An issue adverse to claim of title by limitations is raised when the possessor pays rent, or agrees to pay rent, for any part of the period, which becomes a question for the jury. Davis v. Cisneros (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 459.

The giving of crop mortgages by one in possession of land is not necessarily conclusive that he held the same adversely to others having an interest therein, but the question is for the jury. Liddell v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 256 S. W. 459.

Question whether heir entitled to a half interest and his successors had claimed the land adversely for a sufficient period to ripen into title held, under the evidence, for the jury, so that it was error to direct that an adverse title was established. Id.

Whether defendant had paid the taxes for five consecutive years as required by the statute held for the jury. Brownfield v. Brabson (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 491.

Whether plaintiff, claiming to have acquired title by adverse possession, had actual, continuous, adverse possession for a period of 10 years, held for the jury. Evans v. Houston Oil Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 751.

Where the evidence showed that a man occupied certain land as the avowed tenant of a married woman who held the land as her separate property, and the separate ownership of said land was open and notorious in the community, there was evidence tending to show nothing of adverse possession, and a peremptory instruction was properly refused. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Choate (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 285.

22. Agency and respondent superior.—Evidence held sufficient to raise a question of fact as to agent's apparent or implied authority to agree to deliver threshing machine parts within a specified time. J. F. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 922.

It is within the province of the court to determine whether under an ascertained state of facts an agency exists, but it is for the jury to determine the existence of facts sufficient to constitute agency. Daugherty v. Wiles (Com. App.) 207 S. W. 306.

In an architect's action to recover for plans and specifications furnished under an agreement with defendant's general local agent, held, that there is sufficient evidence to require the court to submit the issue of the agent's apparent authority. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Roquemore (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 675.

In an action against the owner of a theater by a bill poster for services, a peremptory instruction for plaintiff held not warranted by evidence on theory that one in possession of the theater and who hired plaintiff was defendant's manager. Markowitz v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 968.

Whether a bank had by its directors acquiesced in or ratified the issuance of drafts by its president, and hence was estopped to deny his authority, held, under the evidence, a question of fact. Ft. Worth Nat. Bank v. Harwood (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 497.

In shipper's action for loss of goods in which the undisputed evidence showed that a transfer company had been employed to receive goods from the railroad, and had sent his employee to get the goods, and that employee did get what he supposed to be the entire shipment, the question of whether such employee was an agent of the transfer company so as to warrant admission of his testimony that he signed delivery receipt thereon, and of the receipt itself, held for the jury. Hines v. Rush (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 57.

Where a landowner, who desired to take up vendor's lien note appointed the agent of a loan company to make payment and the holder sent the note accompanied by a receipt to the agent, misappropriated the funds, the question whether such agent was agent of the holder authorized to receive payment of the note, held, under the evidence, for the jury. Shaw v. First State Bank of Abilene (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 325.

In an action by a bank to recover an overdraft, evidence held to make an issue of fact whether the president of the bank in purchasing defendant's cotton and promising to put the proceeds in the bank to his credit was acting as president of the bank or individually. Hull v. Guaranty State Bank of Carthage (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 810.

23. Alteration of instrument.—In action to cancel oil and gas lease, held that under the evidence, it was reversible error to submit to the jury issue as to whether interlineations were made before or after the execution and delivery of the lease by striking out a six-months term and inserting a ten-year term. Smith v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 136.

Testimony of a car repairer that he had never worked with electricity, and that he was never given a wire on a piece of equipment, and that he did not know it was live wire, was sufficient to make the question of assumption of risk one for the jury. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. v. Wolkarte (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1023.

Evidence held insufficient to warrant direction of verdict for master, on ground that assumed the risk in riding on a flat car having no standards. Hargrove v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 185.
In an action by a railroad engineer for injuries occasioned by being struck by a mail crane while leaning out of his cab, whether plaintiff assumed the risk held for the jury. Southern Pac. Co. v. Berkshire (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 323.

Question whether conductor's negligence was the proximate cause of locomotive engineer, being under the evidence for the jury, it cannot be held as a conclusion of law that engineer assumed the risk. Pope v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas, 109 Tex. 311. 207 S. W. 514.

Foreman's statement, "Well, I will see," was insufficient as matter of law to sustain finding or a promise to repair defective condition. Schaff v. Hendrich (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 543.

In action for injuries sustained by plaintiff switch tender thrown under a moving train, because of stumbling over a pipe left in such position as to partially obstruct a path along the track, whether plaintiff assumed the risk held, under the evidence, for the jury. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Butts (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 419.

In an action by the engineer of a wrecker, the question whether he assumed the risk of injury from defective cables and from the fact that no outriggers were used before attempting to move a derailed box car, held, under the evidence, for the jury. Houston Belt & T. Ry. Co. v. Christian (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 816.

In an action by a switchman for personal injuries evidence held sufficient to go to the jury on the issue of assumed risk. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Lovick (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 293.

In action for injuries to a minor servant operating mangle, whether servant understood danger of her hand being drawn between rollers so that she assumed the risk, held for the jury. Hotel Dieu v. Armendarez (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 518.

In an action for death of an inexperienced servant caught by wheels of an electrically driven merry-go-round, which started because of a defective switch while he was making repairs, whether deceased assumed the risk held question for the jury. Hutchinson v. Amarillo St. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 581.

In an action for injuries to a railroad painter knocked from a scaffold by a vehicle passing on the street below, held, under the evidence, that it could not be said, as a matter of law, as he assumed the risk of injury from foreman's failure to keep a lookout. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Gericke (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 668.

Whether the departure of the engineer and the extent of operating a circular saw on a defective track top, and assumed the risk, held for the jury. Worden v. Kroeger (Com. App.) 219 S. W. 1094.

In action for death of employé of electric company from the breaking of a telephone pole, evidence held insufficient to show as a matter of law that employé assumed the risk. Halbrook v. Orange Ice, Light & Water Co. (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 587.

In an action for injuries to a railroad section foreman, when a hammer or hammer slivered and the piece struck his eye, question of assumed risk held for jury. Hines v. Flinn (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 679.

Assumption of risk by a trucker injured in unloading a truck in a required manner, after he had been assured of its safety by his foreman assisting in the work, held for the jury. Cox v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. (Sup.) 223 S. W. 564, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Cox. 159 S. W. 1042.

In an action by a railroad machinist's helper, for negligence in falling to provide an adequate force of men for handling parts of a locomotive, evidence held sufficient to warrant submission of the issue of assumed risk. Thornhill v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 490.

Evidence that an employé unfamiliar with the particular work, was riding on a work train behind a car insecurely loaded with poles, one of which fell off and knocked him from his car, does not conclusively show that he assumed the risk. Chicago, I. & O. Ry. Co. v. Trout (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 472.

Evidence held to make a question for the jury as to whether a brakeman on a work train, injured when the overhanging bottom and side of a dump car closed by gravity after dumping, realised and comprehended the danger. Schaff v. Morris (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 139.

In an action for the death of a railway fireman, killed when an engine left unattended on a side track ran upon the main track and collided with his engine, evidence held insufficient to show that a custom existed of leaving engines unattended, or that deceased knew of such custom, so as to charge him with assumption of the risk as a matter of law. Lancaster v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 524.

Where member of a railroad wrecking gang was injured by the tightening of a wire cable, evidence held not to show as a matter of law that in moving the cable he was acting on his own volition, and therefore assumed the risk. St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Reichert (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 550.

In an action for injury to railroad section hand, by lifting while assisting to move locomotive, on the track, evidence held to make assumption of risk a question for the jury. Olds v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 336.

Whether a railway shop laborer assumed the risk in lifting a heavy box with the help of fellow servants held an issue for the jury. Payne v. Harris (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 350.

In action under Federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665), for injuries to roundhouse hostler who slipped on water and grease on the floor of the engine cab, the question whether he assumed the risk held for the jury. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smithers (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 657.
In an action under Federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665) for injuries to a railroad roundhouse hostler who slipped and fell while descending from cab to ground, in which it was claimed that railroad was negligent in not having furnished lights, question of whether he assumed the risk held for the jury. Id.

If the evidence shows with such certainty that reasonable minds cannot differ that the defendant have known that his nearester was not taking precaution for his safety, charge denying recovery on the ground of assumption of risk would be proper. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Gericke (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 748.

27. Bills and notes.—Evidence held to present jury question whether plaintiff in action on note was the owner of the note. Lewis v. Farmers & Mechanics Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 888.

Telephoning to holder of note regarding extension, and failure of holder to keep promise to meet maker, did not even raise a question for the jury on the issue of agreement for extension. Thomas v. Derrick (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 140.

Whether purchaser of secured vendor's lien note had notice, constructive or actual, that note arose out of a simulated sale of a homestead, held for the jury. Brooker v. Wright (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 196.

Though the evidence showed purchase of a negotiable instrument originating in fraud before maturity and showed no notice by the purchaser of the fraud, it was a question for the jury whether she was a bona fide purchaser, where the evidence was not conclusive that she paid value. Pope v. Beauchamp, 110 Tex. 271, 219 S. W. 447.

Whether or not vendor's possession under unrecorded contract was such as should have caused a subsequent sale from the vendor on inquiry held for the jury. Aurelius v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 563.

In trespass to try title, where plaintiffs claimed under a deed conveying an undivided half interest executed in 1848, and defendants claimed under a deed executed in 1846, but until of assertion of the title of plaintiffs by plaintiff's predecessors in interest for more than 70 years, with payment of taxes and active steps towards protecting the lands from trespass, held sufficient to require the submission to the jury of plaintiffs' purchase in good faith for a valuable consideration without notice of the first conveyance. St. Brooks v. St. Brooks (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 699.

In an action to cancel a note and a deed of trust on the ground of never having received the money thereon from brokers, notwithstanding deed of trust recites that the brokers had paid off original vendor's lien notes, facts held to require submission of the issues of lender's good faith and notice. Steele v. Butler (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 596.

Whether one receiving a bank's drafts in payment of the president's individual debt was put on inquiry held a question of fact in view of evidence. Ft. Worth Nat. Bank v. Harwood (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 487.

28% Boundaries.—Acquiescence in boundary is question of fact for judge or jury. Lopes v. Vela (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 1111; Buie v. Miller (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 630.

What boundary was intended by a deed of part of a lot held a jury question. Rose v. Hays Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 140.

Location of eastern boundary line of certain survey held for the jury. Houston Oil Co. v. Choate (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 118.

While acquiescence in a boundary line raises a strong presumption that the line is correct, where there is no room to doubt the true location, a mere acquiescence in another line will not support a verdict based thereon. Buie v. Miller (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 630.

In suit between two school districts to fix their boundary line, evidence held to make the case one for the jury. Trustees of Dover Common School Dist. No. 66 v. Dawson Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 556.

30. Brokers' commissions.—In realty broker's action for commission, whether plaintiff was procuring cause of action held for jury. Buck v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 244; Moye v. Park (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 206.

The efficient and procuring cause of a sale is a question of fact to be determined by the court or jury trying the case. Ford v. Cole (Civ. App.) 186 S. W. 661.

In broker's action for commission, evidence held to make proper the submission of issue whether the defendant company attempted to terminate the agreement after negotiations were begun, but before sale, in good faith, and not to escape payment of commissions. Kirby Lumber Co. v. West (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 534.

In broker's action brought after real estate transaction had been rescinded for fraud, question whether broker who acted as agent for both parties was a party to such fraud or had notice thereof held for the jury. Speer v. Dalrymple (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 174, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 911.

Defendant, who broker, with whom defendant had listed lands, communicated information to defendant, evidence tending to show that the information given to defendant was the primary, proximate, and procuring cause of the consummation of the trade held to make a question for the jury. Barnes v. Beakley (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 631.

When plaintiff, with whom property had been listed, listed it with defendant, who effected a sale to his son, evidence held sufficient to carry to the jury plaintiff's contention that it was agreed that defendant should pay him one-half of a certain percentage of the sale price as commission. Porter v. Cox (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 84.

To submit to the jury the question of whether the brokers' fraud representations, where there was no evidence that defendant was misled and thereby induced to promise to pay the commissions, and he at time objected to the value of the property after inspecting it or sought to repudiate or alter his promise to plaintiff, but on the contrary confirmed it. Howell v. McCreless (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 214.

In suit to recover a commission from the owner of a farm and other brokers, held that the court did not err in directing verdict for defendant owner and the other intervening brokers, because the evidence presented no issue of fact as to who procured the sale. Busch v. Murray (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 289.

31. Cancellation, rescission, and abandonment of contracts.—In action to cancel oil leases for voluntary abandonment, whether lessees intended voluntarily to abandon held for jury. Munsey v. Marnett Oil & Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 665.

In suit to rescind contract for purchase of land, whether plaintiff owned superior title until he paid money was phrase money was paid whether he waived right to rescind was a question of fact. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 199.

In suit to rescind contract for sale of land for failure to pay all of purchase-money note, where plaintiffs answered that note had been fully paid, and that they had in good faith made valuable improvements, whether defendants believed purchase money had been fully paid was properly submitted. Id.

In action to cancel deeds alleged to have been executed as an accommodation without intention to pass title or possession, where defense was that deeds were executed in settlement of indebtedness, evidence held insufficient to entitle defendant to instructed verdict. Sanger v. Pudn (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 681.

In action involving contract whereby parties were to divide profits arising from purchase and sale of certain land, whether such contract was abandoned held for jury. First Nat. Bank v. Rush (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 521.

In a suit to set aside a deed because procured by fraud, a denial by defendant that he made any misrepresentations is evidence that the statements he made were true, requiring the submission of the issue to the jury. Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 565.

In a suit to forfeit an oil lease, evidence held insufficient to raise the issue of abandonment. Corsicana Petroleum Co. v. Owens, 110 Tex. 565, 222 S. W. 154, reversing judgment. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 192.

In purchaser's action to rescind question of misrepresentations held for the jury. Massier v. Milam (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 302.

Whether lessee abandoned lease by failure to drill wells held, under the evidence, question for the jury. Buie v. Porter (Civ. App.) 278 S. W. 599.

Usually it is a question for the jury whether there has been a forfeiture or abandonment of an oil lease, and, when there is a dispute as to the acts done, the court should not determine the question as a matter of law. Battle v. Adams (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 539.

In a suit to cancel an oil lease, evidence held to make questions of fact for the jury as to whether a well drilled within the required distance of lessor's lands by a third party was drilled under a contract with the lessee, and whether the lessee secured the drilling of the well. Id.

In trespass to try title, facts held insufficient for submission of question of whether there had been a rescission of a sale of the land by plaintiff's ancestor to defendant's predecessor. Davis v. Cox (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 987.

If the estate created by an oil grant was of such a nature as might be forfeited by abandonment, the question whether an abandonment had occurred was for the jury, where there was strong evidence to the contrary. Davis v. Texas Co. (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 618.

32. Carriage of goods and live stock.—Evidence regarding goods consigned to plaintiff by third party held to make a jury question whether goods belonged to plaintiff or third party during transit. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 332.

In an action for injuries to live stock in shipment, where there was a sharp conflict in the testimony as to their condition when shipped, the question of negligence must be submitted to the jury. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clements (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 223.

In action against railroad for failure to furnish car for shipment of live poultry within reasonable time after application therefor, as required by Interstate Commerce Act (U. S. Comp. St. § 8563, subd. 2), where there was evidence of shipper's application for such car, the question whether railroad furnished car within a reasonable time was for the jury. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Strickland (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 410.

In action by shipper of live stock against an initial carrier, it was not error to refuse a peremptory instruction for defendant, where there was evidence to show that some damage was inflicted upon defendant's line, for which it would be liable. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Hallam (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 509.

Testimony of a caretaker accompanying a shipment of cattle held insufficient to warrant submission of the carrier's negligence in handling the train. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Crowley (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 721.

In a shipper's action for damages from failure to ship certain mules according to contract wherein special damages were claimed, based upon a purchase for sale to the government, the question whether the mules would have passed inspection if they had reached destination, held, under the evidence, one for the jury. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Davis (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 773.

Evidence that it required 60 hours to transport cattle between specified points, whereas the usual and customary time was 50 to 50 hours, held to make the issue of delay a jury question. Hines v. Davis (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 882.

Sec. 32 Supp. V. S. Civ. St. Text.—37 577

Whether the railway in the exercise of ordinary care should have given the shipper information as to the probable congestion and inability to handle the cattle promptly, upon which he might not have made the shipment or might have unloaded his cattle in transit for the jury. Id. watered.

34. — Connecting carriers.—In an action against the terminal carrier of an interstate shipment of onion sets to recover damage by wetting in transit, evidence held sufficient to raise the issue as to whether or not some of the damage occurred before the sets came in on the terminal carrier's line. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Reichardt & Schulte Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 208.

It was not error, in a suit for damages to a shipment of cabbage, to instruct a verdict in favor of a connecting carrier, where there was no evidence of negligence on its part. Rio Grande & E. P. Ry. Co. v. J. H. Russell & Son (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 536.

36. Carriage of passengers—Performance of contract of carriage.—In an action against carrier for agent's mistake in selling ticket whereby passenger was carried to wrong station, submission of theory of contributory negligence, held proper. Walls v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 985.

In action for damages for railroad's failure to stop train upon signal by passenger with ticket, the question whether the railroad employees were negligent was for the jury. Nevill v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 523.

37. — Ejection.—In an action for injuries sustained through being shot by a deputy sheriff on being ejected from a train for nonpayment of fare, evidence held not to raise the issue of the carrier's liability, so that a directed verdict was proper. Samariano v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1049.

39. Community property.—In suit to set aside a sale, evidence held sufficient to take to the jury the issues whether the debts for which the sale was made were claims against the community property, whether the sale was free from constructive or whether it was with a view to the interest of the parties, so that a directed verdict was erroneous. Rice v. Lipsitz (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 293.

40. Consideration and want or failure thereof.—In action on written guaranty of note, where evidence as to valuable consideration for guaranty by extension of note was in main undisputed, issue of consideration was one of law for court. McDaniel v. Cage & Crow (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1078.

Seventy dollars cash actually paid for an option to explore and develop oil lands was sufficient to make the issue of valuable and adequate consideration one of fact to be passed on by the court or the jury. Griffin v. Bell (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1024.

41. Conspiracy.—Evidence, in an action for damages by one who was tarred and feathered, held to make it a question for the jury whether a defendant, who was present, was a conspirator, or in any way encouraged the assault. Walker v. Kellar (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 796.

42. Construction and effect of writings.—Lease contract being unambiguous, it was a court's duty to construe it. Wailing v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 332.

Refusal to submit to jury construction of defendant taxpayer's written rendition was proper; as construction was for court. Pfeiffer v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 932.

Whether letter authorized delivery of policy was question of law, where letter was unambiguous. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Garnier (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 989.

Both parties introducing testimony to show the meaning, according to commercial usage, of the words, "delivered" and "delivered for sale," in an ambiguous written contract, where sale of corn, defendant was entitled to submission of issue to jury. Martin Lumber Co. v. Samuel Hasting Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1076.

43. Oil and gas—Lease.—In suit to construe leases, oil was leased to be drilled, the measure of damages for failure of lessee to develop lease was cost of development, and the measure of the oil was the difference between the value of the property as improved and the cost of development. Taylor Co. v. Early-Foster Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1178.

44. Contract to convey an interest in an oil lease having been in writing, evidenced by telegrams, the issue of whether the seller's proposition had been unconditionally accepted and the trade consummated by the buyer is primarily one of law for the court. Langford v. Bivins (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 867.

Where an oil lease provided that, if the lessee began a well in the same general locality within one year and prosecuted it to completion with due diligence, the time employed should not be part of the time allowed for beginning operations on the particular land, and there was nothing else to indicate what was meant by the "same general locality."

its meaning was to be proved and determined by the jury, and the court could not hold as a matter of law that a well 14 miles from the land in question was in the same general locality. Sunshine Oil Corporation v. Randels (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 1090.

The construction of a grant as written is a question of law for the courts, unless some facts raised by Ankenenberg v. State (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 354.

Contract for sale of cotton linters "t. o. b." common points held not so unambiguous as to require court to hold as a matter of law that seller was required to pay freight charges, where shipments were made from other points at a less rate than common points. Early-Post Corp. v. W. & Pomp & Co. (Civ. App.) 279 S. W. 3012.

In determining whether a contract for sale of goods for resale violates the anti-trust statute (arts. 7796-7818), it is the province of the court to construe the original contract and also to construe facts found by the jury as to communications subsequent to the contract in connection with the original contract. T. W. Rawleigh Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 331 S. W. 799.

Where defendant admitted the execution of a deed, not pleading non est factum or that it was secured by fraud, but asserting that it was in fact a mortgage, evidence held insufficient to carry that issue to the jury. Young v. Blain (Civ. App.) 251 S. W. 352.

In a suit to enjoin defendant from conducting in her own name a millinery business sold to plaintiff, wherein defendant contended that the conveyance constituted nothing but a mortgage, the question held for the jury under conflicting evidence. Lomax v. Trull (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 861.

43. Contracts—Legality.—Whether contract for future delivery of grain was a gambling contract held a question for the jury in view of evidence of conversations, though the only communications theretofore was by correspondence, none of which tended to show any understanding other than expressed in the contract. Clark v. Merriam & Milward Co. (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 869.

44. — Making and terms of contract.—Whether plaintiffs' subscription to corporation stock, and loan from corporation to them secured by mortgage on land enabling purchase of stock, were valid and bona fide, held for the jury. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Pierce (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1194.

Question whether a certain written contract over existed is for the jury. Ellerd v. Newcom (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 408.

In landlord's action to restrain tenant from cutting maize stocks after heeding of feed, submission of issue as to whether landlord was to have stocks in consideration of furnishing tenant with tools and pasturage held unauthorized under the evidence. James v. Blake (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 546.

In action against insurance company whether employer agreed to work for employer as agent under its new plan of insurance with inferior contract, and company annulled the contract on account of agent's bad faith in going to work for another company, was an issue of fact for the jury, under the pleadings and evidence, which was sufficient to sustain a finding upon the issue for plaintiff. Merchants' Life Ins. Co. v. Grieswold (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 807.

In subcontractor's action for damages for inability to perform contract because of failure of contractor to furnish gravel, question of whether contractor orally agreed to furnish and have on hand sufficient gravel held for jury. Hartwell v. Fridner (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 221.

In an action against a church, a building contractor, the building committee, and the contractor's sureties, brought by one who furnished material, testimony held to raise the issue of an express contract between the materialman and the church and its committee. Burton Linto Co. v. First Baptist Church (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 913.

Evidence in support of a plea of reconvention for failure to deliver oil in accordance with what had been a sufficient request for delivery to the church, represented the buyer had accepted the option purchase, and whether the price stated in letters conformed to the option price which was dependent on the market price of crude oil. Texas Pipe Works v. Caddo Oil & Refining Co. of Louisiana (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 586.

45. — Construction and effect.—Where a deed with agreement for a reconveyance did not state whether grantor's notes would be satisfied in event of his failure to repurchase, the question of intention was for the jury. Wedgeworth v. Pope (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1721.

In an action on guaranty of accounts of mercantile corporation, intention of parties as to whether guaranty should continue as to accounts of new corporation, which took over assets and business of first, was question of fact. Cooper Grocery Co. v. Eppler (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 236.

In action to cancel deeds alleged to have been executed for accommodation of defendant in raising money, whether it was understood at time of execution that property was to vest in defendant, purely for purpose of enabling him to raise money, was an issue of fact for the jury. Sanger v. Futch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 651.

In action to cancel execution deed upon ground that grantor verbally promised to reconvey on payment of purchase price, the question of whether time was of the essence of such contract was one of fact for the jury under appropriate charge. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

In trespass to try title by brokers to recover lands as commission, whether there was such intention to convey that a deed conveyed title as a contract for conveyance of land under art. 1116, held for the jury under the evidence, though defendants admitted they signed the instruments. Vauter v. Greenwood (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 269.

In suit to restrain cutting of timber, the court properly submitted to jury what size timber was merchantable on the date of the timber deed, which conveyed only merchantable timber to be cut within a reasonable time, the question being for the jury to determine as to what size timber was in the minds of the parties when the word "merchants-ble was used. Southwestern Settlement & Development Co. v. May (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 183.

In an action against a church, a building contractor, the building committee, and the contractor's sureties, brought by one who furnished material personal liability of the church and the members of its building committee to the materialman held for the jury under the theory of First Baptist Church v. First芒果 Co. v. First芒果 Co.

In an action on an oil sale contract providing for payment of the "regularly established and published market quotations," evidence to as to the market quotations of a certain oil pipe line company being bona fide held sufficient to make a jury question as to their being regularly established market quotations. Taylor Oil & Gas Co. v. Pierce-Fordcye Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 467.

Where plaintiffs claimed that instrument in the form of a general warranty deed was in fact a mortgage and was void under Const. art. 16, § 50, because the land was a part of the ancestor's homestead, the question whether it was intended as a mortgage held for the jury. Davis v. Cox (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 987.

Whether is the essence of a contract is a question of fact for the jury unless the contract expressly makes it so or the subject-matter of the contract is such that a court will take judicial notice that the parties obviously intended that time should be of the essence. Taylor Milling Co. v. American Bag Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 782.

Expressions used in correspondence, held insufficient to show that, as a matter of law, time was of the essence of sales contract. id.

Performance or breach.—The question whether a marketable title as it appears upon record has been furnished is one of law. Moser v. Tucker (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 259.

In an action for breach of contract to pay for logs hauled, where evidence was conflicting as to which party breached the contract, the court erred in peremptorily instructing for defendant. Turner-Cummings Hardwood Co. v. Philip A. Ryan Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 301 S. W. 431.

Evidence held to make an issue for the jury on the question of forfeiture of an oil lease by failure to drill required wells and abandonment of operations. Kirlicks v. Texas Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 867.

The question of breach of contract and liability therefore should be submitted to the jury, unless the evidence is of such character that there is no room for ordinary minds to differ as to inferences to be drawn from it. Hamilton v. Wm. H. Swanson Film Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 577.

In a suit on an express contract to lay tile floors, evidence to show that the floor was laid in a neat and workmanlike manner, or substantially so, held insufficient to raise an issue for the jury so that peremptory instruction for defendant was proper. Thames v. Cleis (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 195.

In an action for contractor's breach of agreement, the submission of the issue as to whether plans of the building were drawn by the contractor or by its agent under the direction of the agent of a lessee, who was a party to the contract, held proper under the evidence. Stowers v. H. L. Stevens & Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 365.

In an action for a balance due under a contract to cut and bale hay, held that defendant's peremptory instruction was properly refused. Cochran v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 233.

In an action for personal injuries due to plaintiff's horse becoming frightened by an approaching train at a crossing and upsetting the wagon, evidence of plaintiff's exercise of due care, held to raise question for the jury. Texas Midland R. R. v. Butler (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 344.

In an automobile driver's action against railroad for injuries at crossing, whether automobile driver was contributorily negligent in failing to look and listen before crossing track held, under the evidence, for the jury. Beaumont, S. L. & W. Ry. Co. v. Myrick (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 932.

In an action against a railroad for death of plaintiff's son while driving an automobile at a crossing, question of son's contributory negligence held for the jury. Moore v. Beaumont, S. L. & W. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 471. Evidence, showing that decedent, while driving an automobile along a much-traveled highway, was struck by a car, which was behind schedule and approaching without warning, and that the view at the crossing was obstructed, held to require the submission of the issue of contributory negligence to the jury. Kerksey v. Southern Traction Co., 110 Tex. 196, 217 S. W. 135.

Whether a wagon driver killed at a crossing was negligent in failing to look and listen held, under the evidence a question for the jury. Trochta v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 218 S. W. 1018.

The mere fact that automobile driver approaching crossing continued over crossing after having seen approaching train did not as a matter of law make him contributorily negligent, but such fact should be considered by jury in connection with other circumstances. St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 281.

In an action by plaintiff, husband and wife for injuries to the wife and her automobile, evidence held sufficient to support finding either way on the issue of contributory negligence of the wife in failing to discover approaching motorcar in time to stop. Harrell v. St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 221, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Harrrell, 194 S. W. 971. Evidence which showed that automobile driver neither looked nor listened for an approaching car, but that his view was somewhat obstructed, held not to establish contributory negligence as a matter of law. Galveston-Houston Electric Ry. Co. v. Patella (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 615.

Ordinarily, where a person is injured on a road crossing by a railroad train, the question of contributory negligence is one for the jury. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Price (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 628.

In an action for the death of a pedestrian at a railroad crossing, contributory negligence held a question for the jury, notwithstanding evidence that he stepped on the track directly in front of the moving train without looking. Id.

The mere failure to look and listen before entering on a railroad track at a public crossing is not negligence as a matter of law: but whether, under the circumstances, a reasonably prudent man would have so acted is for the jury. Id.

In an action for the death of plaintiff's husband, where plaintiff and her husband were guests of the driver, evidence, held insufficient to establish as a matter of law negligence by plaintiff or her husband which contributed to his death. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 377.

Negligence in failing to look for an approaching train when about to cross a railroad track is not, as a matter of law, in every case, the proximate or contributing cause of an injury received when attempting to so cross a railroad track. Texas & N. O. Ry. Co. v. Wagner (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 277.

Where an automobile driver looked for trains when 53 feet from the track, his failure to look again at a point where he would have seen an approaching train was not contributory negligence as matter of law; the test being what an ordinarily prudent person would have done under the particular circumstances. Hines v. Arrant (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 767.

Where a train was late and an automobile driver thought it had passed, and there was evidence that he looked about 50 feet from the track and saw no train and that he was comparatively a new driver and most of his attention was absorbed in management of the car, the question of contributory negligence was for the jury, though if he had looked further he would have seen an approaching train. id.

Whether one killed at a railroad crossing was guilty of contributory negligence is an issue of fact under all the circumstances, not foreclosed necessarily by establishing that he did not look or listen. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Merchant (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 237.

56. — Persons injured while walking on or near railroad track.—The question whether one killed on a railroad track was in the exercise of such due care as would be expected of a reasonably prudent person is not a question of law for the court. Bar v. Lofots (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 395.

One using railroad tracks as a licensee held not negligent as a matter of law because he might have selected a safer route by walking in mud and water between the tracks. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Gober (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 305.

In a suit for the death of a pedestrian struck by an engine in defendant's railroad yards, held, that question of contributory negligence was for the jury. Schaff v. Groch (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 782.

In an action for the death of a pedestrian struck by locomotive while walking along path paralleling railroad tracks, contributory negligence held a question for the jury. Schaff v. Mason (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 285.

Lumber company's employé, in starting ahead of train on a velocipede knowing it was about to follow him or in falling to keep a lookout therefor held not negligent as a matter of law; having told the train engineer he was going ahead and having requested and been promised that a lookout would be kept. Kirby Lumber Co. v. Scourlock (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 975.

58. — Owner of property destroyed by fire set out in operation of railroad.—Evidence that plaintiff sacked kaffir corn about 125 feet from a railroad track, that it was of a dry and inflammable character, and not protected from sparks, requires the submission of the issue of contributory negligence. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 289.

The negligent failure of the driver of an automobile to yield the right of way to a street car, as required by city ordinance, resulting in a collision, is not imputable, as a matter of law, to one riding as a mere guest. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Benjamin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 496.

In an action against a street railroad company for wrongful death, where there was conflicting testimony as to whether deceased was guilty of contributory negligence, such issue was for the jury. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Terrazas (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 337.

61. — Person injured by defect in street or bridge.—Where motorcyclist claims that defendant's truck forced him to turn into a depression caused by defendant street railway's failure to properly pave near its tracks, testimony held to make his contributory negligence a jury question. Templeton v. Northern Texas Traction Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 440.

Question of negligence of a pedestrian in walking on a sidewalk known to be obstructed, rather than in the street, held for the jury. Butler v. City of Conroe (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 567.

Negligence of pedestrian, injured by falling over a known obstruction across the sidewalks, held a question for the jury. id.

62. — Last clear chance or discovered peril doctrine.—In an action for death of plaintiff's husband, question whether defendant's motorman was guilty of negligence after discovering husband's peril held, under evidence, for jury. Southern Traction Co. v. Rogan (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1105.

In action for death of one struck by train on trestle, evidence held to make issue of negligence after discovered peril for the jury. Young v. Texas & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1115.

In action for injury from collision between plaintiff's automobile and defendant's street car, motorman's negligence after discovery of plaintiff's peril held a jury question. Houston Electric Co. v. Schmidt (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 617.

In action for death of plaintiff's decedent, struck at public crossing, whether defendant did all in their power to avoid accident after observing deceased held, under evidence, for jury. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Luten (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 903.

In an action for death of operator of a motorcar, struck by defendant's train, it was not error to submit the issue of discovered peril, notwithstanding evidence that the engineer did not see deceased until too late was undisputed, since the jury might not have believed it. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Whitfield (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 356.

In action for injuries from unexpected moving of a train while plaintiff was attempting to cross between the tender and a coal car, whether the brakeman, upon seeing plaintiff between the cars, could have prevented injury, should have been submitted to the jury, where ordinary minds might have differed. Freeman v. Huffman (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 819.

Evidence, held to make a question for the jury whether, after discovering person in a position of peril, the operatives of an engine by use of the means at hand could have avoided injuring him. Almager v. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 782.

In a suit for the death of a pedestrian struck by an engine in defendant's railroad yards, held, on the evidence, that court erred in submitting question of discovered peril. Schaefer v. Gooch (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 782.

In an action for death of one who negligently drove upon a crossing whether the engineer after discovery of peril exercised the degree of care which a person of ordinary prudence would have exercised held a question for the jury. Trochta v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 218 S. W. 1058.

In an action for injuries to bicyclist who collided with a motortruck which turned at a street intersection across plaintiff's path, evidence of the truck driver and others held sufficient to warrant the submission of special issue whether driver discovered plaintiff's peril in time to have avoided the accident. Alamo Iron Works v. Frado (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 282.

In an action for injuries to a passenger in an automobile caught between two meeting street cars, evidence held not sufficient to take to the jury the issue of the motorman's negligence after discovering plaintiff's peril. Nicholson v. Houston Electric Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 632.

Where the testimony warranted the inference that a railroad engineer was looking ahead and that there was no obstruction, it was a question for the jury whether he saw automobile in time to avoid the collision, though he denied that he saw the automobile until it was on the track. Hines v. Arrant (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 767.

In an action for the death of a firebrakeman struck on the main track by a passenger train while his train was on a siding, testimony as to his attempt to jump across this danger held not to present the issue of discovered peril. Sorrell v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 768.

In suit for injuries to buggy driver struck by a car, it is for the jury to determine what measure of diligence is necessary on the part of the motorman to constitute the required care on his part to avoid injury to plaintiff after discovering his peril. Paris Transit Co. v. Fath (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1090.

Conversion.—In suit for conversion of ore, claimed to have been seized and sold in Mexico as a military necessity by Gen. Villa's fiscal agent, where there were circumstances showing the agent's private use of the ore, the question was for the jury. Bartlesville Zinc Co. v. Compania Minera Ignacio Rodriguez Ramos, S. A. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1948.

In an action against the directors of a corporation to recover the proceeds of cotton sold by the corporation as a commission merchant, which were alleged to have been misappropriated, the liability of the directors for negligence held for the jury. McCollum v. Dollar (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 259.

In corporation's action against liquidator for conversion of note, the question whether he had been guilty of collusion with a surety, whom he had failed to sue, and was not therefore entitled to payment for services, held an issue of fact for the jury. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 365.

Custody of child.—The legal presumption that a child's welfare is best served by its custody being given its parent is not conclusive, although presumed prima facie from circumstances showing the agent's private use of the ore, the question was for the jury. Bartlesville Zinc Co. v. Compania Minera Ignacio Rodriguez Ramos, S. A. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1948.

In an action against the directors of a corporation to recover the proceeds of cotton sold by the corporation as a commission merchant, which were alleged to have been misappropriated, the liability of the directors for negligence held for the jury. McCollum v. Dollar (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 259.

In corporation's action against liquidator for conversion of note, the question whether he had been guilty of collusion with a surety, whom he had failed to sue, and was not therefore entitled to payment for services, held an issue of fact for the jury. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 365.

Custody of child.—The legal presumption that a child's welfare is best served by its custody being given its parent is not conclusive, although presumed prima facie from circumstances showing the agent's private use of the ore, the question was for the jury. Bartlesville Zinc Co. v. Compania Minera Ignacio Rodriguez Ramos, S. A. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1948.

In an action against the directors of a corporation to recover the proceeds of cotton sold by the corporation as a commission merchant, which were alleged to have been misappropriated, the liability of the directors for negligence held for the jury. McCollum v. Dollar (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 259.

In corporation's action against liquidator for conversion of note, the question whether he had been guilty of collusion with a surety, whom he had failed to sue, and was not therefore entitled to payment for services, held an issue of fact for the jury. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 365.

Custody of child.—The legal presumption that a child's welfare is best served by its custody being given its parent is not conclusive, although presumed prima facie from circumstances showing the agent's private use of the ore, the question was for the jury. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 365.

Custody of child.—The legal presumption that a child's welfare is best served by its custody being given its parent is not conclusive, although presumed prima facie from circumstances showing the agent's private use of the ore, the question was for the jury. Bartlesville Zinc Co. v. Compania Minera Ignacio Rodriguez Ramos, S. A. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1948.

In an action against the directors of a corporation to recover the proceeds of cotton sold by the corporation as a commission merchant, which were alleged to have been misappropriated, the liability of the directors for negligence held for the jury. McCollum v. Dollar (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 259.

In corporation's action against liquidator for conversion of note, the question whether he had been guilty of collusion with a surety, whom he had failed to sue, and was not therefore entitled to payment for services, held an issue of fact for the jury. Peerless Fire Ins. Co. v. Barcus (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 365.
68. — Wrongful death.—The amount of damages for death rests largely in the judgment of the jury, based on facts of the particular case. Panhandle & S. F.

69. — Mental suffering.—Where serious and permanent physical injury is shown, jury is warranted in finding that there was substantial pain, so that the submission of mental pain as element of damages is proper. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas
v. Walker (Clv. App.) 201 S. W. 447.

In an action for delay of delivery of a message announcing mother's last illness, where addressee testified to his grief, the question of damages from his grief was for the jury, though he also testified to his anger and disappointment. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McCormick (Clv. App.) 219 S. W. 270.

70. — Injuries to property.—In an action against a railroad for destruction by fire of cotton shipped over its line, question of value of cotton held for the jury. Sugar

In action for damages to shipment of cattle, where the evidence leaves it doubtful whether there was no market value at the place of delivery, the question becomes one for the jury. Lancaster v. Tudor (Clv. App.) 322 S. W. 990.

Evidence regarding the sale price of cattle transported by defendant railroad, the average excess shrinkage, etc., held to make the amount of depreciation in market

72. — Breach of contract.—In an action on a note in part payment for an automobile, held that under this article, the question of defendant's damages for breach of warranty, etc., should have been submitted to the jury. Harlington Land & Water Co. v. Fort-Scott-Day Co. (Com. App.) 290 S. W. 146.

In suit for breach of contract to sell stock whether there was fraud on the part of the sellers, all errors and mistakes in their failure to carry out the contract, and what accounts were included as assets, or what not owned by it or left out, held questions bearing on a proper valuation of the stock, which should have been submitted

74. — Exemplary damages.—Freedom from animosity, ill will, and malice, and consequent nonliability for exemplary damages of a defendant claimed to be a party to the conspiracy, pursuant to which plaintiff was tarred and feathered, held, under

75. — Mitigation of damages and reduction of loss.—In action for breach of contact to deliver timber, issue whether buyer could have purchased such timber for profitable use of its mill from others held properly submitted. West Lumber Co. v.
C. R. Cummings Export Co. (Clv. App.) 196 S. W. 646.

78. Duress, undue influence and mental capacity.—The question whether the testator was competent at the time he made the will held, under the evidence, for the 218 S. W. 1071.

Evidence held insufficient to raise issue for jury as to testatrix's want of capacity to make will in question or as to undue influence. Daley v. Whitacre (Clv.
App.) 267 S. W. 350.

Whether insured, at time of executing release to insurance company, was competent to fully comprehend the nature of the release was for the jury. Western Indemnity Co.

In action to cancel deed, question of whether grantor had mental capacity to comprehend the nature and effect of the execution of the deed held for the jury. Wisdom
v. Poak (Clv. App.) 220 S. W. 918.

Though, under art. 3267, a will may be proved by one of the subscribing witnesses, it is improper to direct a verdict in favor of the contestant, although the only subscribing witness who testified stated that, in her opinion, the testator did not know what he was doing; the attorney who prepared the will and others giving testimony thereon to show that the testator was competent. Day v. Henderson (Clv. App.) 224
S. W. 248.

In suit by lessee for conversion of part of crop obtained by compelling assignment of plaintiffs lease contract by threats of prosecution, etc., case held for the jury under evidence as to plaintiff's having been actuated by defendant's illegal influence. Grice

80. Estoppel.—Whether subscriber to corporation stock was estopped by delay in setting up fraud in securing subscription, held for the jury. Lone Star Life Ins. Co.
v. Pick (Clv. App.) 200 S. W. 1104.

In trespass to try title, evidence held not to warrant submission of issue whether plaintiffs were estopped by their predecessors' acquiescence in or consent to a subsequent conveyance by his grantor to another. Watts v. McCloud (Clv. App.) 205 S. W. 381.

In action by a savings bank receiver to recover proceeds of drafts used in discharge of individual liability of the president of the savings bank, it being disputed whether the acts of the president were beyond his powers, the question whether the receiver was estopped by failure to pursue other assets of the president held, under the evi­

That plaintiff remained silent at an interview had for the purpose of determining whether she had any objection to sale of land to a defendant held not as a matter of law to estop her as to such defendant who had knowledge of the coercive methods used by the other defendants inducing her to part with title. Heimer v. Yates (Com.
App.) 216 S. W. 680.

81. Execution and delivery of written instruments.—Whether deceased had in fact executed the will offered for probate held for the jury. Milla v. Milla (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 919; Campbell v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 124.

In trespass to try title, where plaintiff alleged and testified that she did not sign deed, nor sell land to defendants, it was not error to submit to jury question whether plaintiff induced such deed in presence of a notary public, whose certificate was thereon. Hensley v. Pena (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 427.

Where there was no evidence of the execution of an ancient deed against which a plea of nunc factum was interposed, the question whether title passed should not be submitted to the jury. Kellogg v. Chapman (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 956.

Where there is a material difference between the terms of a contract as testified to by plaintiff and as testified to by defendant, it was reversible error for the court to refuse to submit to jury the issue of whether contract as testified to by plaintiff was executed and delivered. Girard v. Newcom (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 498.

Whether a deed under which plaintiff claimed, made to his wife by her father, who was also defendants' father, was genuine or a forgery, held for the jury under the evidence. Minett v. Agee (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 955.

Whether a life policy acknowledging payment of premium was delivered, so as to estop the insurer from asserting invalidity of the policy because of nonpayment of the first premium, held, under the evidence, for the jury. Dunken v. State Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 691.

82. Exemption.—Abandonment of homestead on sale and conveyance held question of fact, though such homestead remained in possession until they could obtain possession of a newly acquired homestead. Jones v. Lanning (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 445.

Intention of mortgagees, with reference to abandonment as a homestead of lot mortgaged, held question for jury. Turrentine v. Doering (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 802.

To determine the tract on which a homestead was located, the deeds from which it was derived may be so used as to make it a part of the homestead, testimony merely that land so situated was considered by owner as part of his homestead is not sufficient to establish that fact as to justify a peremptory instruction. Johnson v. Russell (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 522.

Whether a homestead in an unincorporated city or town is rural or urban is a question of fact, unless the city or town is of such size and the homestead is so situated thereon and is of such a nature that reasonable minds cannot differ. O’Fiel v. Jan (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 771.

The question whether property was urban within the meaning of the provision of the Constitution relating to homesteads held, at least, a question for the jury. Id.

A statement of facts showing that there were two buildings on two lots with a stairway between them to the second story held not to show conclusively that the building was not divisible into two separate parts adapted to distinct uses, so that that question should be submitted to the jury. Kelly v. Nowlin (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 373.

83. False imprisonment and malicious prosecution.—In action for malicious prosecution by one partner against another, charge against plaintiff having been that he was guilty of theft of partnership property by baillee, question of probable cause held for jury on evidence. Stein v. Greenbaum (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 809.

Issue of defendant partner's good faith in placing facts before county attorney before making complaint held for jury. Id.

When the facts are not contested, probable cause for a criminal charge is a question of law, but when they are disputed it is one for the jury. Forrest v. Elliott (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 885.

85. Fraud.—Whether representations of plaintiff induced defendant to believe that plaintiff's story was unusually efficient, so that defendant gave his note for the agency thereof, was fraud on the jury. Lang v. Bohlen (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 872.

Mere fact that purchaser demanded privilege of inspecting land would not, as matter of law, establish that he undertook to discover truth with regard to representations as made. Hahl v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 795.

Whether representations of a conveyance of a wife's interest, relied on her representations that she had been forced to leave her husband because of his treatment, and was selling her interest for her necessary support and maintenance, held, on the evidence, a question for the jury. Lasater v. Jamison (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1151.

Evidence held to present question for jury whether Louisiana creditor as ancillary administrator in that state was guilty of fraud in purchasing land at sale to pay its claim and immediately selling it at a profit. Vann v. Calcasieu Trust & Savings Bank (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1062.

In an action to recover the value of a mule, evidence held not to justify submitting issue of fraudulent representations as to the sound condition of the mule. Fulwiler Electric Co. v. Jinks McGee & Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 480.

The sufficiency of circumstantial evidence to establish fraud is for the jury under proper instruction; but, as a rule, if upon the contradicted evidence reasonable men can reach but one conclusion, the court may direct a verdict, and may also direct a verdict where there is no evidence to prove one or more of the essential elements. Wootman v. Young (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 660.

In an action for damages for fraud in exchange of property, whether plaintiff's husband, when he examined the property, was deceived by the fraudulent representations of the defendant held for the jury. Medley v. Lamb (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 1048.
In a suit to cancel vendor’s lien notes and for damages for fraud in connection with a contract in adjustment of differences under an earlier contract, where the evidence was in conflict as to whether the vendee had knowledge of the facts and waived the fraud when he entered into the new contract, the issue of the value of the property at the date of the new contract was properly submitted to the jury. United Land & Irrigation Co. v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 853.

In such case the question whether the vendee in making the new contract relied on representations previously made held properly submitted to the jury. Id.

In suit by the lessee to recover an amount paid under false representations for cancellation of an oil and gas lease, where there was a conflict in the testimony as to what representations were made by defendant, the trial court properly refused peremptorily to instruct the jury to return verdict for him. Ware v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 598.

In a suit to set aside a deed for purchaser’s misrepresentations as to value of the land, evidence held sufficient to go to the jury. Touchstone v. Derrick (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 852.

86. Fraudulent conveyances.—In an action by a creditor of a widow who deeded property to her children, in which she had a life interest at least, receiving notes for the purchase price, which were not collected, evidence on the question whether the transaction was fraudulent as to existing creditors held sufficient to go to the jury. Durret v. Hill (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 771.

86 1/2. Indemnity.—Where there is no conflict of evidence regarding question of indemnity between joint tort-feasors, it is trial court’s duty to declare law resulting therefrom. City of Weatherford Water, Light & Ice Co. v. Velt (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 986.

87. Insurance and beneficial associations.—In a suit on an automobile insurance policy, evidence as to the issuance or the original policy, the collision features therein had been canceled by mutual agreement between insured and insurer, held in conflict, and to make a question for the jury. Drew v. American Automobile Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 547.

In suit on note given for premium on life policies, question of delivery of policies through a bank to defendants held for jury under evidence. Wittliff v. Tucker (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 751.

88. Representations and warranties.—Evidence held to make a question for jury as to whether a attack of renal colic several months before application was a serious illness or disease within the meaning of a representation. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Hicks (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 616.

Under art. 4947, providing that false statements in contracts of insurance will not constitute a defense, unless material, and a provision in policy that it would be void if insured was not sole unconditional owner, it was question of fact whether such provision was material, where insured was only a mortgagee. National Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Carter (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 597.

Evidence, in a suit on benefit certificate, held not sufficient to justify peremptory instruction for defendant on theory that applicant’s answer to question whether she had been under care of physician within ten years, and as to cause of illness, physician consulted, etc., was false. The Homesteaders v. Stapp (Civ. App.) 265 S. W. 743.

Evidence held to make a question of fact as to whether applicant in answering question as to her health and consultation with physician did so in good faith. Id.

Whether declaration in application as to cause of death of insured’s brother and as to insured’s use of alcoholic or malt liquors, was material within meaning of art. 4741, held that under an insurance contract, Ins. Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 666.

In action on fire policy covering an automobile, held, it was a controverted question of fact whether any representation was made about the automobile being paid for, and also as to whether any misrepresentation, if made, was material, so that court did not err in refusing to instruct a verdict for defendant. California Ins. Co. v. Eads (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 216.

In an action on an insurance policy, whether or not the insured falsely stated in the application that she had not been rejected by any other insurance company held for the jury. McNeil v. Ins. Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 216.

In an action on a life policy of a benefit association, where the evidence as to whether insured had tuberculosis at the time of the delivery of the policy was conflicting the trial court would not have been warranted in giving a peremptory instruction to find for insurer as to the matter of misrepresentations by insured that he was in good health. Security Ben. Ass’n v. Webster (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 219.

89. Compliance with conditions subsequent.—Question whether insured complied with a stipulation of the policy requiring him to keep certain books clearly and plainly presenting a record of the business, held for the jury. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. McMinn (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 635.

In action upon an accident policy, held, on the evidence, that the refusal to give a peremptory instruction for insurer on ground of insured’s failure to give written notice of accident within time prescribed by policy was proper. Fidelity & Casualty Ins. Co. of New York v. Mountcastle (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 862.

That plaintiffs in their proof of loss to defendant insurer had placed value of furniture before fire and amount of loss at higher figure than found by jury, would not, as a matter of law, show plaintiff’s fraud or false swearing. Royal Ins. Co. of Liverpool, England, v. Humphrey (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 426.

Whether the beneficiary in an accident policy notified the insurer of the death of insured and requested blanks required by the policy for proof of claim, and received no reply and no blanks were sent, held a question of fact for the jury. Simmons v. Weaver Indemnity Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 242.

In an action on a fire policy covering fixtures as well as a stock of goods, defendant's motion for direction of verdict, on the ground that plaintiff failed to make proof of any loss on fixtures which would preclude him from recovery, since the evidence showed he had exhausted the record warranty clause, held properly denied. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Biggs (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 274.

Where the defense was interposed that insured carried more concurrent insurance than was allowed, and the only question was whether certain insurance policies showed concurrent insurance in excess of the stipulated amount, it was not error to refuse to submit the issue to the jury; the question being one mainly of mathematics. Austin Fire Ins. Co. v. Adams-Childers Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 393.

90. Risks and causes of loss.—Whether insured's death was due to suicide, held, under the evidence, for the jury. Bankers' Health & Accident Ass'n v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 230; Woodmen of the World v. Holmes (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 575.

If mutual insurance certificate insured only against death by accidental means, whether death of insured was caused solely and exclusively by accidental means held for jury. Plagge v. Business Men's Acc. Ass'n of Texas (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 839.

It is error to direct a verdict for insured if there is evidence that the premises were vacant, sufficient to make a jury question. Western Assur. Co. of Toronto, Canada, v. Busch (Civ. App.) 255 S. W. 468.

Evidence, in action on fire policy, held insufficient to raise jury question as to whether premises insured were vacant at the time of the fire. Id.

Evidence of suicide held such that refusal to direct a verdict for defendant was error. Texas Life Ins. Co. v. Childress (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1035.

In an action on a life policy, evidence held insufficient to submit issue whether death of insured was caused by his own voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger. Bankers' Health & Accident Ass'n v. Wilkes (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 230.

Whether the injuries were effected, directly and independently of all other causes, through the instrumentalities or whether diseases or use of alcoholic liquors caused or contributed thereto, held for the jury. Western Indemnity Co. v. MacKeechnie (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 456.

Evidence held sufficient to carry to the jury the question whether the insured's disability resulted solely from accident and not from disease. National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Weaver (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 754.

91. Waiver.—Whether breach of provision invalidating fire policy if property remained vacant or unoccupied for 10 days was waived by submitting proofs of loss, etc., pursuant to request of insurer's adjuster, held a jury question. Liverpool & London Globe Ins. Co. v. Baker (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 632.

Evidence, in action on benefit certificate, held to present a question of fact as to waiver or estoppel against a defense based on falsity of statement in application as to health by reason of medical examiner's approval of and local agent's acceptance and forwarding of application. The Homesteaders v. Stapp (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 743.

In an action on a life policy, evidence held sufficient to go to the jury on the question of waiver of forfeiture for nonpayment of premiums. Dunken v. Ætna Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 691.

Where it appeared that the policy had been delivered together with a bill for the first premium which had not been paid prior to the fire, evidence held to make the issue of waiver of payment by insurer a question for the jury. Ginnors' Mut. Underwriters Ass'n v. Fisher (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 285.

92. Judgment.—Whether judgment foreclosing mortgage lien, etc., was intended simply to change form of security is jury question, where suit was instituted by agreement, some differences arose between parties during its progress, but judgment was final and pursuant to an agreement. Bonar v. Smith (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 904.

In suit by a wife to set aside a judgment, the court should not have instructed a verdict for defendant if judgment might have found from evidence that defendant held title to land in trust for the wife and her husband, and by collusion with husband secured judgment, and that the wife had sufficient excuse for not contesting defendant's right. Smith v. Patillo (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 60.

Proof that one against whom a judgment had been entered was seen alive within less than seven years of the date of the trial held to require submission to the jury of the issue as to whether he was dead when the suit was filed. Jackson v. Wallace (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 676.

93. Libel and slander.—In action for slander and for wrongful interference with contractual relations, evidence held sufficient for submission to jury of whether alleged agent who made defamatory statement had authority from defendant to make statement. Providence-Washington Ins. Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 666.

In such action, evidence held to justify submission to jury of whether alleged defamatory remarks were made. Id.

Whether an alleged defamatory publication is privileged or not is a question of law for the determination of the court, under the definition of privileged publications given in art. 5937. Express Pub. Co. v. Wilkins (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 614.

In an action for libel by the police judge of a city against a newspaper, natural and legitimate inference to be drawn from the headlines of the publication held for the jury. Id.

94. Limitations and laches.—Under art. 1812, where petition was filed within period of limitations, whether plaintiff was guilty of laches because of delay in issuing and serving citation held a question for the jury. Godshalk v. Martin (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 356.

Whether stock subscription contract alleged to have been secured by fraud was barred by limitations, held for the jury. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Pierce (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1104.

Petition of purchaser of land for shortage in acreage held not to show on its face that the purchaser was guilty of negligence as a matter of law in failing to discover the shortage before the day when possession was delivered to him, so that it was a question for the jury whether the purchaser was guilty of negligence barring his suit by limitations. Gillispie v. Gray (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 720.

96%. Marriage.—That a railroad man had a sweetheart in every town, and kept other women at intervals at other places, does not make the question of whether there was a common-law marriage one for jury, where there was otherwise positive uncontradicted evidence of a common-law marriage with the woman in question. Walton v. Walton (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 133.

97. Misconduct by physician.—In an action for damages for burning in X-ray treatment, held that court did not err in submitting issue as to whether defendant was negligent in using lead blanket having opening 6½ inches in diameter, where diseased spot was only size of a dollar, where blanket was introduced by defendant in evidence for what it was worth. Hamilton v. Harris (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 533.

Where merchant negligently burned between the legs by X-ray, testified to his incapacity to get about, walk, and attend to his business affairs and to travel in connection with his business, and to extent the returns from his business were diminished, and it appeared the condition was permanent, the court properly submitted the question of future and permanent disability to the jury. Id.

98. Mistake.—That other provisions of a contract are correct, and that complainant was without opportunity to discover one issue of mutual mistake, so as to warrant a peremptory instruction. Estes v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 941.

In an action on a hail insurance policy, where defendant set up a settlement agreement, a peremptory instruction for defendant was properly refused, where there was sufficient evidence to make an issue as to whether insured had a right to set such settlement aside for mistake as to his rights. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Pipkin (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 380.

If the insured signed compromise because he misapprehended the provisions of the policy and his rights thereunder, whether such mistake was the result of his own negligence was a question of fact. Id.

Where a purchaser of land, which is described in the deed as containing 100 acres more or less, upon having a survey made, discovered that there was a deficiency of 16 acres, which was not contemplated by either party, the mistake was a material one, and so gross as to entitle such purchaser to relief as a matter of law. Cox v. Barton (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 652.

Evidence held sufficient to submit to jury question of driver's negligence in not stopping when signaled to do so by railway flagman, and whether it proximately caused flagman's injury. Sulzberger & Sons Co. of America v. Page (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 928.

Question of whether driver could assume that railway crossing was safe, where he pushed flagman on track causing latter's injury, was for jury. Id.

In suit against insurance company for damages from negligence, whether defendant contracted only to compile abstract covering lands west of a road, and whether he performed, were issues of fact. National Bank of Garland v. Gough (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1119.

Evidence that individual warehouseman was officer of corporate warehouseman, that their financial affairs were handled together, that corporation partly paid rent of building where goods were stored, etc., held not to make corporation's liability for burning of goods a jury question. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

Right of way for municipal water supply pipe line for damages for draining all the water and killing the fish, evidence held to present jury question whether draining all the water was necessary in repairing the pipe line. Town of Jacksonville v. Ragsdale (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 774.

In action against warehousing company for destruction of cotton by fire, whether company was negligent held a jury question. Exporters' & Traders' Compress & Warehouse Co. v. Wills (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1056.

In suit against innkeeper for loss of grip, where it appeared that when thief was arrested part of goods were recovered, but district attorney kept them to use in evidence, whether innkeeper was liable for loss of goods recovered, or whether his liability was simply for delay in delivering them, were questions of fact. W. R. Case & Sons Cutlery Co. v. Canode (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 356.

Whether failing to do any particular act is negligence is for the jury, unless it be one commanded or forbidden by law, or where the evidence is so conclusive that the act done or omitted was negligence that reasonable minds could come to no other conclusion. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Whitfield (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 380.

While ordinary negligence is a question for the jury, this is true only when there is substantial evidence tending to establish it. A scintilla of evidence, or such as raises a mere surmise or suspicion, is not enough. Abion v. Electric Express & Baggage Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 717.
In actions for personal injuries, whether the parties exercised the required care is for the jury to decide, in cases where the alleged negligent act is in violation of law, or when the undisputed facts disclose that it was the proximate cause of the injury. Texas Midland R. R. v. Butler (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 344.

Whether or not there has been negligence in the use of dangerous instrumentalities is a question for the jury. Missouri Iron & Metal Co. v. Cartwright (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 357.

It is the duty of persons engaged in dangerous operations to give notice to all persons passing within limits of possible danger, and the question of negligence in omitting to do so is for the jury. It is always a question of law for the court to say whether or not any care is required under a given state of facts. Ferrell v. Beaumont Traction Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 60.

In an action for damages by setting fire to hay through alleged negligence of defendant's employees, a peremptory instruction was properly given, where there was no evidence that the fire was caused by any negligence traceable to defendant. Cobo v. Rodriguez (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 196.

To authorize the court to take from the jury the question of actionable negligence, the evidence must be of such a character that there is no room for ordinary minds to differ as to the conclusion to be drawn from it. Jones v. Texas Electric Ry. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 748.

In drawee's action to recover from payee amount paid on drafts before discovery that attached bills of lading were fictitious, evidence held insufficient to present issue of whether payee in forwarding drafts with bills of lading was negligent in failing to detect forgery. Howe Grain & Mercantile Co. v. A. B. Crouch Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 946.

Where a bank with which a check is deposited forwards it to its correspondents in due course, and the check is appropriated by the drawee bank, but not paid, the mere failure of the collecting bank to obtain the check does not charge it with negligence as a matter of law. Waggoner Bank & Trust Co. v. Gamer Co. (Sup.) 213 S. W. 925, 6 A. L. R. 613.

Whether deceased, who fell into an unguarded pit, was rightly on the premises for the purpose of delivering a lunch to an employe of defendant, or was simply a trespasser, held a question for the jury. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Bustillos (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 265.

In an action for personal injury from collision upon a bridge on a highway between plaintiffs' Surrey and team and defendant's automobile, whether defendant negligently caused the accident held a question for the jury. Melton v. Manning (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 488.

In an action for injuries to plaintiff when the automobile in which she was riding struck an open door and an iron bar extending out from a railroad car on the tracks in a street, the question whether the railroad company was negligent in allowing the car to remain in that condition after unloading it held, under the evidence, for the jury. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Ristine (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 515.

In action for injuries to a bicyclist who collided with a truck which was turning at a street intersection, evidence held sufficient to authorize submission of the issue whether signal was given. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 232.

Evidence, in action for negligently furnishing gasoline instead of coal oil for an oil stove resulting in explosion whereby plaintiff was burned, held sufficient to go to the jury on question whether liquid was gasoline. Jacobson v. Thomas (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 452.

Ordinarily, negligence is a fact to be found by the jury from the testimony, yet some acts are so obviously dangerous and reckless that no court should hesitate to declare them negligent. Baker v. Loftin (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 195, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 159.

What distance from a public road a dangerous place must be in order to free a person from responsibility for the place, and from responsibility for injuries therein to a traveler, is a question for the jury to determine under the facts. Athens Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 421.

It cannot be said as matter of law that it was negligence for the proprietor of a swimming pool to leave a small part of the tile flooring around the pool in a smooth condition, so that a patron slipped and was injured. Crystal Palace Co. v. Roempke (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 250.

Evidence held to make the issues of negligence in not furnishing suitable equipment for alighting, and in failure of conductor to furnish proper assistance, questions for the jury. Williams v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 156 S. W. 309.

In action for injuries on railroad station premises to which plaintiff had gone with family six hours before departure of train he intended to take, question of reasonableness of time in which plaintiff went to station held for jury. Baker v. Williams (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 808.

In action against two railroads for personal injuries to a passenger, where it appeared that one had been running trains over the track of the other for 14 years, the court did not err in submitting to the jury the question as to whether there was an agreement between the roads. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1985.

Where plaintiff, who had assisted his mother and two children to board defendant's train, was injured while alighting, on the conductor's refusal to stop the train to let him off, the issue of negligence was for the jury. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Churchill (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 155.

In passenger's action for injuries to hand from closing of car door, question of carrier's negligence in closing door after passenger had placed hand on door jamb to steady himself after stepping aside to permit employé to pass held for the jury. Schaff v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 638.

Whether the servants of the carrier, who allowed passenger to sit by an open window through which she tumbled while the train was in motion, knew of her mental condition and exercised due care under the circumstances, held under the evidence for the jury. Stewart v. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 577.

In a passenger's action for injuries by reason of a lurch of the train, causing her arm to fall outside the window and strike a locomotive on a sidetrack, held that it was not error to refuse an instruction to find for defendant, where trainmen's testimony as to possibility of accident so happening was contradicted by evidence that plaintiff's arm did strike a locomotive on the side track. Lancaster v. Knighton (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 376.

Whether an alighting passenger was in need of assistance, and whether such need was reasonably apparent to employés, and whether failure to render such assistance constituted negligence, are questions for the jury to be determined under the facts in each case. Wisdom v. Chicago, B. I. & G. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 344.

103. Injuries from defects in streets.—In action against city for negligence in maintenance of street, whether acts constitute negligence is a jury question, where there is no statutory law making such acts negligence. City of Dallas v. Halford (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 725.

Whether city was negligent in failing to provide a railing or barrier along a street adjacent to a deep ravine was a question for the jury in the absence of statute making such failure negligence. Id.

104. Injuries to employés.—In railroad servant's action for injuries while handling timber with others, whether railroad was negligent in means and method employed in transferring timber from one car to another held for jury. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 665.

Peremptory instruction held properly refused if there was any evidence that plaintiff was defendant's employé, was performing the duties of his employment, and that defendant's negligence proximately caused his injuries. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

105. Injuries to and from employés.—In action under federal employers' liability act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 5657-5665) for the death of a freight brakeman, evidence as to defendants' negligence held to make a question for the jury. Rowe v. Colorado & S. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 751.

Question whether minor's mother consented to the employment held for the jury. Urban v. Cook (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 160.

In an action for the death of a servant caught in an electrically driven merry-go-round, circumstantial evidence, in the light of the presumption that he did not negligently expose himself to danger, held sufficient to go to the jury on the issue of defendant's negligence. Hutcherson v. Amarillo St. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 931.

In the absence of a controlling statute or municipal ordinance, the question of master's negligence is one of fact, and becomes a question of law only when the facts are undisputed and reasonable minds cannot differ as to the conclusion. Rio Grande, E. F. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Guzman (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 1102.

Where a shipper's employé was injured while assisting in placing a flat car in position for loading, and the shipper maintained no lookout for cars that might be moved upon same track as that on which he was working, a peremptory instruction in the shipper's favor on the ground that there was no evidence of negligence on its part was properly refused. Id.

In an action against a railroad by its switchman for injuries, evidence held not to present the issue of accident to call for its submission to the jury. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. v. Estee (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 1087.

106. Relation of parties and scope of employment.—In action against company by machinist injured while doing piece of work for company by one of its servants assisting him, issues that the machine shop sending him was his employer and undertook to do specific work: that the machinist, for it, was in control of the work, including the company's employés loaned to assist him, that the company was interested only in the result of the work, etc.—were for jury. Texas Refining Co. v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 131.

In car checker's action for injuries whether, while attempting to board a moving train to return to the station plaintiff was acting without the scope of his duties held for the jury. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. v. Stephens, 106 Tex. 155, 203 S. W. 41.

Whether the injured employé was acting within the scope of his employment is a question for the jury, when the evidence is conflicting or when a difference of opinion may be drawn from the evidence, as to the proper inference to be drawn therefrom. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Bremer (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 213.

In an action for the death of a foreman who climbed a ladder to superintend repairs of a flagpole on employer's shop preparatory to raising of flag purchased by employés as evidence of their loyalty to the government, the question of whether he acted within the scope of his employment held for the jury. Id.

There being practically no dispute in the evidence, the question whether plaintiff was for the defendant, or an independent contractor, was not one of fact for the jury, but one of law for the court. West Lumber Co. v. Powell (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 333.

Where two railroad corporations were constructing a common system, each one constructing that portion on one side of a state line, facts held not to charge an employer as a matter of law with notice of the change of employers so as to relieve the original employer of liability for injuries. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Trout (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 472. 106.

Defective tools, appliances, and places for work.—Where a bricklayer working in a manhole was struck by falling brick alleged to have been negligently piled too near the edge of the manhole, evidence held to make the master's negligence a jury question. Atterbury v. Horton & Horton (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 235. In action for injuries when an employee used a sledge hammer to off handle, whether employer was negligent in furnishing plaintiff with hammer held for jury. Santa Fé Tie & Lumber Preserving Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 164. Whether a master permitting a pulley to become so out of alignment that a servant had to hold a cable to prevent its running off a wheel is bound to anticipate that a loose sleeve of a servant's jumper might be caught, resulting in injury, is for the jury. McBride v. Hodges (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 877.

In action for death of employee alleged to have been caused by employer's negligence in ordering employee to turn on electric switch with knowledge of danger, and employer's ignorance thereof, employer's negligence was, under the evidence, for the jury. San Antonio Portland Cement Co. v. Gschwender (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 967. Where the evidence raises the question whether a machine was ever inspected or more than casually observed by the master, whether the defect existed for a time sufficient to be discovered upon proper inspection does not arise, and whether the defendant was free from negligence is a question for the jury. Gammage v. Gamer Co. (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 389.

Where a master operating a large shop was guilty of negligence in not covering a ditch at a dark place in shop near a forge, giving forth a glare which tended to blind one approaching, held for jury. Lancaster v. Boudreau (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 780. A master cannot, in such a matter of law, be held merely because he uses methods and appliances customarily employed by others in the same character of work, nor yet to be without such care solely because he fails to adopt the latest and most approved devices known, but the question in such case is for the jury. Fratton-Milholme Electric Co. v. Faulk (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 337.

In an action for death of an employé from falling into an elevator shaft in a poorly lighted room, with a greasy floor, bearing marks indicating that he slipped and fell through an opening under the gate, evidence held sufficient to require the submission of the issue of defendant's negligence. Eick v. Fellman Dry Goods Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 625.

In car repairer's action for injuries from defective drainage, the question of whether defendant railroad had invited its employés to use the ground in performance of their duties, and whether it had furnished such ground as place for them to work, held, under the evidence, for the jury. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 594.

In action for death of an employé of M. from injuries received while loading a truck on a flat car, peremptory charge in favor of M. held improper, in view of the placing by M. of deceased in a dangerous place to work. Rio Grande, E. P. & S. F. R. Co. v. Guzman (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 623.

Where the proof showed that a sander machine without cover, over the rollers in which employé's hand was caught, was the only character of sander machine then built, that a similar machine was used by others in the same business, and that no machine was protected by a screen over the rollers, there was no inference of negligence and submission of question of negligence was error. Bering Mfg. Co. v. Seldit (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 635.

In an action by a mule team driver for injuries suffered when the mule which he was riding fell, evidence on the issue of negligence in furnishing a stiff, clumsy, and unlit animal held insufficient to go to the jury. Hoot v. Walker County Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 644.

In action for death of employé of an electric company from the breaking of a telephone pole, evidence held insufficient to show as a matter of law that employé had contractual duty of inspection, and that company was not negligent for failure to inspect. Halbrook v. Orange Ice, Light & Water Co. (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 587, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) 181 S. W. 751.

It cannot be said as a matter of law, without reference to the use made of it, that because a hammer or maul is a simple appliance a master, when furnishing it to his servant, does not owe to him the duty to ordinary care to see it is reasonably suitable and safe to use in the work to be done. Ilines v. Finn (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 678.

In an action for injuries to a railroad section foreman, struck in the eye by a splinter from a maul or hammer, question of negligence in furnishing such hammer held for jury. Id.

In a foreman's action for injury by caving in of a wall in an excavation, evidence held to raise the issue as to whether the duty to see to the safety of the wall rested on plaintiff. Texas City Transp. Co. v. Winters (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 541, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 366, and rehearing denied (Com. App.) 224 S. W. 1087.

107. Negligence in operation of railroads.—Where injured servant's petition charged negligence in ordering him to operate locomotive turntable by hand while the electric current was turned on in the machine turner, without the servant's knowledge, there was an issue of negligence for the jury. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Miller (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1049.

In Brakeman’s action for injuries from sagging telephone wires, evidence held insufficient to justify submission to jury of signal board’s had duty of looking to see if track was clear before giving signal to proceed. Southern Kansas Ry. Co. v. Shinn (Com. App.) 307 S. W. 87.

Railroad employee operating signal board by means of lever in projecting bay window of station required to look to see if track was clear before giving signal that operator had no orders for engineer. id.

Whether railroad was negligent in maintaining a mail crane near its track, according to postal regulations, against which the engineer struck his head while looking out of his cab, held for the jury. Southern Pac. Co. v. Berkshire (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 232.

In an action for injuries to railroad fireman in collision where the evidence showed that green light and green target meant clear main track and red light and red target meant open switch, it was a question for jury whether engineer was negligent in passing a green light and red target. Lancaster v. May (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 876.

In action for death of fireman from derailment of engine, evidence that switch point was in a condition to cause wheel to climb on top of rail and cause derailment was sufficient to warrant the submission to jury of whether switch point was defective. Lancaster & Wight v. Allen (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 984.

In action for injuries sustained by switch tender when thrown under a moving train, because of his stumbling over a pipe partially obstructing a patch along the track, question of negligence held, under the evidence, for the jury. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. v. Butts (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 419.

In an action for injuries to a car inspector struck by a locomotive while he was looking under a car, evidence held to warrant the submission of the issue whether the locomotive was operated without proper lookouts. El Paso & S. W. Ry. Co. v. Havens (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 444.

There was evidence that the derailment of a standard make hand car purchased of a reputable manufacturer and furnished to plaintiff without inspection was the result of an improper adjustment of its cogwheels, discoverable by a reasonable inspection, a peremptory instruction for defendant railroad was properly refused. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Ewing (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 198, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 390.

In an action by a railroad detective for injuries occurring when a handhold on a car gave way, whether the handhold was insecure and insufficient for the use for which it was intended, and whether such condition was due to negligence imputable to the defendant, held for the jury. McAdoo v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 734.

In an action under the federal Employers’ Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665) for death of a freight brakeman run over by the train from which he fell when a car ahead of him dumped coal on the track, causing the air brakes to set suddenly, evidence held sufficient to take the case to the jury on the theory that the railroad was negligent in failing to provide safe fastening for the dump door on the car. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

In an action by a railroad shopman for injuries received when a switch engine suddenly pushed cars which he was chaining together, evidence held to establish conclusively that the railroad was negligent, that a switchman gave an unauthorized signal, so as to justify a peremptory instruction for the plaintiff. Wight v. Callieut (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 389.

In an action for the death of the brakeman of a work train, evidence held to make a question as to the employer’s negligence in not operating a dump car by air pressure, as intended by the manufacturer, instead of permitting it to close by gravity after being dumped. Schaff v. Morris (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 199.

In an action by a member of a railroad wrecking gang whose leg was broken when a caboose it was to pull derailed, evidence held to warrant the issue of negligence of the railroad company held for the jury. St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Reichert (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 550.

In action for injury to railroad section hand by lifting while assisting to move motorcar from toolhouse onto the track, evidence held to make the issue of negligence, constituting a proximate cause of the injury, a question for the jury. Olds v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 336.

In an action under Federal Employers’ Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665) for injuries to a housekeeper residing in a roundhouse held to be injured by falling from engine cab to ground, the issue of negligence in not lighting the premises held a question for jury. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smithers (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 637.

In an action for death of freight brakeman, struck by a passenger train going 25 to 30 miles per hour, evidence held not to raise the issue of negligence in failing to slacken the speed; the signals indicating that the track was clear. Sorrell v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 768.

In an action under the federal law for the death of a locomotive fireman when the engine was derailed, evidence held not to raise the issue of defendant’s negligence in using a wheel which was defective notwithstanding evidence of defendant’s witnesses to the contrary. Payne v. Allen (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 145.

Orders, and warning and instructing employees.—Whether a foreman was negligent in ordering plaintiff to remove a live wire torn down by a wreck, without warning him as to the danger, held a question for the jury. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. v. Weikart (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1024.

In an action for injuries to a 17 year old farm employed from contact with revolving shaft of cotton gin whether employer was negligent in directing him to work around the machine while it was in operation, without instructing him as to the danger. Pelichy v. Horden (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 283.

In an action against a city for personal injuries from the delayed explosion of a stick of dynamite in a sewer ditch where it appeared that defendant had failed to warn plaintiff against additional danger involved in the use of defective fuses, evidence held to require the submission of the question to the jury. Doel v. City of Waco (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 176.

110. — Number and competency of fellow servants,—Whether improvised battering ram used to drive crank pin into place in upright engine was instrumentality requiring special skill in its operation held, in suit by machinist injured by its operation, jury question. Texas Refining Co. v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 131.

In action by Pullman porter for injuries sustained while being ejected from his car by company's watchmen acting under express orders, contradictory to plaintiff's orders, it was proper to submit to the jury, as a ground of negligence, the watchmen's incompetence, in that they were unable to speak English. Pullman Co. v. Ransaw (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 122.

In an action for injury to a railroad employé, evidence as to defendant's negligence in not furnishing sufficient help for the work held sufficient to take such issue to the jury. Thornhill v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 490.

111. — Negligence of fellow servants.—Whether vice principal was guilty of negligence in lightening match to look into bunghole of barrel to ascertain amount of liquid therein, causing an explosion, held for jury. Coca-Cola Co. v. Williams (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 296.

In an action by a foreman for injuries suffered when a loose roof fell from the top of a car being righted by a wrecking crew, whether the engineer started to pull the car over without waiting for the proper signals from plaintiff, and whether it was the duty of the crew or to notify plaintiff that it was loose, held for the jury. Wight v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 292.

113. — Hospital service.—In an employé's action for hospital expenses, question whether employer's purpose in making monthly deductions from employés' pay, called "hospital fees," was to establish a hospital, or hospital plan, or to apply fees any time thereafter to the payment of hospital expenses at a hospital in case of sickness, held for jury. Courchesne v. Brown (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 674.

114. Injuries to persons on railroad tracks.—The question of whether an engineer exercised due care in attempting to stop locomotive to avoid impending accident was for the jury. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 397.

In action against interurban railroad for injuries in collision, question whether road was negligent in propelling its car toward crossing at speed of 46 miles an hour or more held for jury. Southern Traction Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 150.

Whether interurban railroad as to one injured on crossing exercised ordinary care is question of fact for the jury, save where there is, under facts deducible from evidence, no room for ordinary minds to differ. Id.

In action for injuries sustained by plaintiff, when defendant's car collided with his wagon at crossing, peremptory verdict for defendant held properly refused. Southern Traction Co. v. Gee (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 992.

In action for death of one run down while on defendant railroad company's tracks evidence of negligence of those in charge of company's trains held sufficient to go to the jury. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. McGil (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 338.

In an action for death of one struck by railroad train, evidence held not, as matter of law, to show that deceased was a trespasser, and not at a public crossing, when struck. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Luten (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 399.

In an action for injuries by moving of train while plaintiff was at a crossing between tender and coal car, whether defendant's brakeman saw plaintiff between the cars, was, under the evidence, for the jury. Freeman v. Huffman (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 819.

In an action for the death of a person killed on defendant's railroad track, whether deceased was at a crossing when struck held for the jury. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Douthitt (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 201.

In an action for injuries to one riding in an automobile struck by an interurban car at a street crossing, where there was evidence that the motorman saw the automobile and that a sign of slowing up, he did not signal the approach of his car, the question whether he was guilty of negligence was properly submitted to the jury. Texas Electric Ry. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 730.

In an action for death on railroad track, whether trainmen saw deceased in a position of peril and realized that the object was a man at a distance within which they could stop the train held a question for the jury, notwithstanding positive testimony of trainmen in defendant's favor. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. McGill (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 699.

116. — Frightening horses.—In an action for injuries due to plaintiff's horse becoming frightened by an approaching train at a crossing and upsetting the wagon, evidence as to defendant's negligence in failing to give warning, either by signal or by its brakeman, held to raise questions for the jury. Texas Midland R. R. v. Butler (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 544.
117. Signboards and flagmen.—In an action for injuries sustained by one struck by railroad train at a crossing, it appears that the train had been too fast and that the view of the approaching passenger train was thereby obscured, evidence held insufficient to warrant submission of the issue as to whether defendant should have stationed a flagman at the crossing. Baker v. Streater (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1038.

Railroad company was negligent in failing to maintain gates or a flagman at a much-traveled and obstructed crossing a short distance outside a large city held a question for the jury. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Pearson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 708.

In an action for the death of the driver of a vehicle struck by a work train approaching the main business street of a town of 1,500 people, evidence held sufficient to justify submission of the issue of defendant's negligence in not maintaining a flagman at the accident, though there was no ordinance or statute requiring a flagman. Tisdale v. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 238 S. W. 153.

If a crossing is used extensively and frequently and trains are operated over it at frequent intervals, and there are obstructions materially obstructing the view, it is a question for the jury, or for the court sitting without a jury, whether the failure to have a flagman at the crossing constitutes negligence. Baker v. Hodges (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 114.

118. Signals and lookouts from trains.—In action against interurban railroad whether motorman blew warning whistle as car approached crossing held for jury. Southern Traction Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 150.

In an action for death of one on the track, evidence held to warrant a submission of the question as to habitual use of the track as bearing on duty to keep a lookout for persons on the track. Baker v. Loftin (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 159.

In action for death of wagon driver struck at crossing in village, it was for the jury whether defendant having no lookout in hay of the train which backed into and upon deceased, and, in view of conflicting evidence, whether the bell of the train was rung. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Tisdale (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 347.

In action for death of one struck by railroad train at public crossing, evidence held to make question for jury as to whether statutory crossing signals were given. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Luten (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 909.

Evidence held insufficient to warrant submitting the issue of negligence in failing to equip interurban car with a sufficient whistle, though there was testimony that the whistle was less-efficient than a locomotive whistle. Galveston-Houston Electric Ry. Co. v. Patella (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 615.

Evidence held sufficient to raise the question of the negligence of the operatives of the train, approaching a crossing, in failing to give warning signals by bell or whistle. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Pearson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 708.

Evidence in action for death of child killed by train and for injury to mother in attempting rescue of the child, held to warrant submission of the issue of train operatives having exercised ordinary care to keep a lookout. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Haywood (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 347.

Whether the trainmen failed to sound the whistle and ring the bell at least 80 rods from the crossing, as required by art. 594, held a question for the jury. Hines v. Foreman (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 630.

In action for death of employed struck by train while riding on velocipede on company's tramroad, where the engineer had been advised by deceased that he was starting ahead of the train and the engineer had promised to keep a lookout for him, held, that the company owed deceased the duty of exercising ordinary care for his protection, and whether this duty was performed by the occasional lookout kept by its servants was for the jury, and the company was not entitled to an instructed verdict on the theory deceased was a licensee. Kirby Lumber Co. v. Scurlock (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 975.

119. Injuries to animals on or near railroad tracks.—In action against railroad for death of mule alleged to have been struck on right of way, whether it was impossible for locomotive or cars to have inflicted such injury as animal received held for jury. Robinson v. Bell (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 365.

In an action against a railroad company for killing cattle, where the evidence was conflicting as to whether the engineer and fireman were negligent or whether the killing could not have been avoided after the position of the cattle was discovered, the question was for the jury. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Martin (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 1113.

120. Injuries by fire set out in operation of railroad.—Whether house situated near defendant's railroad track was set on fire by sparks from a passing engine held, under the evidence, to be a question for the jury. Schaff v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 284 S. W. 331.

In action against railroad for fire from locomotive involving issue of whether fire originated from locomotive spark, evidence held to require submission of case to jury. Roosevelt v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 645.

In action for burning barn from sparks from a locomotive, where plaintiff's witnesses testified to seeing a freight train pass shortly before fire was discovered, defendant's train dispatcher's records showing that no train passed at or near the time held not conclusive; the issue being for the jury. Hines v. Jumper (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 350.

121. Injuries to property from operation of railroad.—Whether railroad in constructing roadbed across creek and valley left sufficient openings for drainage, as required by art. 6495, held properly left to jury. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Behnsen (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 630.
In action against railroad company for damages to plaintiff's crops by overflow of water due to the construction of railroad, whereby water backed up a creek, thereby overflowing its banks and flooding plaintiff's lands, evidence held to require the submission of the question to the jury. Johnson v. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 388.

122. Injuries to persons at stations.—Whether carrier was negligent in operating car at high rate of speed approaching station where passengers buying tickets had to cross tracks to board car, held, under the circumstances and evidence, for the jury. Texas Electric Ry. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1081.

The fact that he passed a railroad platform before the time of injury to a drayman thereon through fall of a tombstone was not sufficient to establish as matter of law that the railroad was not guilty of negligence in the manner in which the tombstone was placed, or that the same was not the proximate cause of the injury, such matters being issuable facts for the jury. Hines v. Jones (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 412.

123. Injuries to persons working on or about railroad cars.—Where a railroad maintained a commercial track knowing that warehouse employees would move cars along the track for unloading, the question whether it was negligent in permitting to remain on such track a sliver from one of the rails, which was badly worn from use, was for the jury, in action by warehouse employe for injuries from such sliver. McLain v. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 109 S. W. 292.

Whether switching crew exercised ordinary care to ascertain plaintiff's presence in a car which he was unloading before coupling and moving same held for the jury. Schaff v. Moss (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 543.

In an action for injuries to refinery company's employe requested to remedy leak in car containing gasoline, evidence held insufficient to support finding railroad's negligence and to support finding employe's negligence in unloading, and to support finding act of unscrewing the top cap on car, which caused explosion. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clement (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 497.

In an action for death of shipper's employe helping to place a flat car for loading, whether railroad was negligent in having shunted a string of cars on the track without warning held a question for jury under the evidence. Rio Grande, E. P. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Guzman (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1102.

In an action for death of an oil mill employe during switching operations on the mill's spur track, it was for the jury to determine whether decedent had been warned of the operations, and whether the warning was sufficient to notify him of the danger, though an employe of the railroad and another testified without contradiction that warning was given. Jefferson & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Blaft (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 546.

126. Injuries in operation of street railways.—Where evidence shows that the collision and consequent death of plaintiff's wife was proximately caused by negligence of motorman of defendant's street car, and that deceased was not contributorily negligent, a peremptory instruction for defendant was not warranted. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Benjamin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 966.

Where there was ample evidence that the motorman was negligent in not having his car under reasonable control on approaching the street crossing, where it collided with an automobile, causing death of plaintiff's wife, court properly submitted issue to jury. Ibid.

In action for injuries sustained by a child over 10 years old, struck by street car while attempting to cross a street at a place other than a street intersection, whether motorman failed to use ordinary care "to discover" and avoid injuring plaintiff, held, under the evidence, for the jury. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Allen (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 725.

Whether it was negligence to operate a street car at a speed of 25 miles per hour near a crossing held to be a question of fact. Beaumont Traction Co. v. Arnold (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 275.

In an action by one injured while riding in an automobile which collided with a street car, whether the motorman saw the automobile in a position of danger in time to have slowed down and avoided the injury held for the jury. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Crump (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 827.

Plaintiff's testimony that automobile was in plain sight of motorman, and that the car did not slacken speed, but that he did not know whether the motorman was looking toward the automobile, held insufficient to take to the jury the issue of the motorman's failure to keep a proper lookout. Nicholson v. Houston Electric Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 622.

Whether or not defendant's motorman saw a signal to stop given by members of crew on an army truck, struck while crossing the track, held for the jury. Texas Electric Ry. v. Whitmore (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 644.

In an action for injuries to a soldier in a collision between defendant's street car and a truck with a trailer, evidence as to the failure of the motorman to keep a proper lookout held sufficient to justify the submission of such issue to the jury. Ibid.

In action for damages to automobile struck by a street car at a street intersection, evidence as to the motorman's negligence in operating the car at a dangerous speed and in making no effort to stop or check the speed after having discovered that the automobile was in a dangerous position held sufficient to go to the jury. Southwestern Gas & Electric Co. v. Grant (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 544.

In an action for injuries to an automobile driver in collision with a street car, whether motorman used all the means at his command consistent with the safety of the car and its passengers to avoid the collision held a question for the jury. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Martin (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 213.

In an action for negligently running a street car against plaintiff's mule tied to the rear of a wagon, held on the evidence that the question of defendant's negligence in using no means to prevent the injury, or in running the car at such speed as to be unable to stop it, after discovering the mule submitted to the jury. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Stone (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 754.

127. Injuries from live electric wires.—In action by a telephone lineman for injuries resulting from defendant's high-voltage wires, question of defendant's negligence was for the jury. City of Weatherford Water, Light & Ice Co. v. Veit (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 986.

In action for death of plaintiff's intestate, due to contact with defendant's live wire, evidence held to raise issue as to defendant's negligence, with respect to failure to inspect line and uncover broken wire. Abilene Gas & Electric Co. v. Thomas (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 690.

In action for damages for alleged negligent killing of deceased, who came in contact with defendant's live broken wire, whether the installation of a fuse on the switchboard would have the same effect as a circuit breaker held for the jury. Id.

In an action for injuries to a horseman who became entangled in an unguarded guy wire in or near a public roadway, question of power company's negligence in leaving a dangerous thing near the roadway unguarded, held for the jury under the evidence. Athens Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 421.

130. Notice.—In action by savings bank receiver to recover proceeds of drafts applied on a claim against the president individually, evidence held to present jury question whether defendant's officers were charged with knowledge that such president had not arranged to take up the drafts and that his acts in regard thereto were unauthorized. Nat. Bank v. Houston Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 484.

132. Partnership and rights and liabilities incident thereto.—In a suit to restrain defendant from operating a business under her own name in violation of an agreement, claimed by plaintiff to be one of employment, and by defendant to be one of partnership, the ascertainement of the nature of the contract was for the jury where the question was one of mutual intention and understanding not under an ambiguous instrument. Lomax v. Trull (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 861.

133. Payment.—In a bank's suit on a note, where the evidence did not conclusively show bank's predecessor ever received credit for the note, but left the matter in doubt, the trial court erred in directing verdict for defendants, and should have submitted the case to the jury. First Nat. Bank v. Henry (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 696.

134. Penalty for violation of statute.—In an action for penalties for failure to comply with art. 6592, whether waterclosets 524 feet from a depot in a town without sewers were within a reasonable and convenient distance held for the jury. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. State, 110 Tex. 128, 116 S. W. 393.

135. Proximate cause.—Question of whether railroad's negligence in permitting gap in its right of way fence was the proximate cause of the death of a horse, which strayed onto the right of way and became caught in a bridge held for the jury. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Lovell, 110 Tex. 546, 221 S. W. 929, answering certified questions (Civ. App.) 179 S. W. 1111, and answers conformed to (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1024; Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Lovell (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1024, conforming to answers to certified questions, 110 Tex. 546, 221 S. W. 929.

Where a warehouse employé was caught on a sliver on a rail while helping to move cars on a commercial track for unloading at a warehouse, the question whether railroad's negligence in leaving such sliver on the rail was the proximate cause of the injury was for the jury. McLain v. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 130 S. W. 292.

Whether failure of railroad in constructing roadbed to leave sufficient openings for drainage, as required by art. 6495, was proximate cause of death of one knocked from tree by its floating trestle, held properly left to jury. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Bohn (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 659.

In an action for injuries to a jitney passenger, riding on the running board and struck by a street car whether passenger's negligence in riding on running board in violation of a city ordinance was the proximate cause of injuries held under the evidence conclusively in favor of the jury. Dallas Ry. Co. v. Eaton (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 318.

The question of proximate cause is one of fact for the jury, unless the facts are such that reasonable minds might not differ as to the conclusion to be drawn therefrom. Id.

In an action for injuries to a soldier in a collision between defendant's street car and the trailer of a truck crossing the track, whether the motorman's failure to sound warning was the proximate cause of the injuries held for the jury. Texas Electric Ry. v. Whitmore (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 644.

Whether the speed of defendant's car was the proximate cause of such injuries held, under the evidence, for the jury. Id.

In an action against city and its street repair contractor for injuries to a woman who stepped into a hole or sink over an old catch-basin, evidence that the contractor's failure to plug a pipe might have been the cause of the sink held insufficient to take the case to the jury. Peterson v. City of Houston (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 680.
136. — Injuries to passengers.—Whether train porter's negligence in closing door after passenger had placed his hand on door jamb to steady himself after stepping aside to permit porter to pass was direct cause of injuries to passenger's hand sustained in the closing of door held for the jury. Schaff v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 638.

In an action for injuries to a passenger shot during an altercation between two other passengers, whether negligence in failing to eject the aggressor was the proximate cause of injury from a shot fired in self-defense by the attacked passenger, held a question for the jury. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Bell, 110 Tex. 104, 216 S. W. 399.

In action for death at railroad crossing of one driving automobile, whether or not crossing was obscured either wholly or partially held a question of fact for the jury, under the evidence, so that the court was not authorized to take the issue of proximate cause from the jury. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Harrington (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 763.

In an action for the death of an automobilist at a railroad crossing, whether negligence of deceased in driving upon the crossing, the view of which was obstructed, was the proximate cause of the accident, held for the jury. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 674.

Whether failure to sound the whistle and ring the bell at least 80 rods from the crossing, as required by art. 6664, was the proximate cause of injuries in a collision with an automobile, held a question for the jury. Hines v. Foreman (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 659.

138. — Injuries to employes.—In an action for death of a section man on the track at midnight with a motor, whether negligence of the railroad was the proximate cause of the death held a question for the jury. Baker v. Loftin (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 158.

Whether negligence of deceased was the proximate cause of death held a question for the jury.

It cannot be said as a matter of law that the wearing of a jumper sleeve unbuttoned and dangling three or four inches from the arm, the catching of which on a cable resulted in servant's injury, was the proximate cause thereof or only an intervening agency. McBride v. Hodges (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 877.

Where a switchman walking along the top of a string of cars looking for his foreman fell between the cars when uncoupled by the foreman, who, without notifying the switchman, had changed the method of switching, the question as to whether the change in method was the proximate cause of the injury was for the jury. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Estes (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1155.

In action by section foreman for injury to his hands and face from handling ties wet with a poisonous mixture, whether the permanent injuries suffered were the natural and proximate result of defendant's negligence in not warning him of danger, held, on the evidence, a question for the jury. Collins v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 477.

In an action for death of an employé falling into an elevator shaft in a poorly lighted room, with a greasy floor, bearing marks indicating that he slipped and fell through an opening under the gate, evidence held sufficient to require the submission of the issue of proximate cause. Bock v. Fellman Dry Goods Co. (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 895.

In an action for death of an inexperienced servant 'caught by cogwheels of an electrically driven merry-go-round, which started because of a defective switch while he was making repairs, whether the proximate cause of death was due to defendant's negligence held to be a question for the jury. Hutcherson v. Amarillo St. Ry. Co. (Com. App.) 210 S. 931.

In an action by a railroad detective, for injuries received when a handhold on a car gave way, whether negligence in furnishing an insecure and insufficient handhold was the proximate cause of the injury held for the jury. McDade v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 784.

In an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665) for death of a freight brakeman, run over by the train from which he fell when a car ahead of him dumped coal on the track, causing the air brakes to set suddenly, evidence held sufficient to take the case to the jury on the theory that negligence in failing to provide safe fastening for the dump door on the car, was the proximate cause of the accident. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

In an action against railroad under Federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665), for injuries to a roundhouse hostler who fell while descending from engine cab, question whether railroad's failure to light the premises was a proximate cause of the injuries held for the jury. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smathers (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 637.

Whether he slipped on water and grease on floor of cab, held a question for the jury.

Whether negligence in moving engine on turntable, over pit into which he fell, was a proximate cause of the injury, held a question for the jury. Id.

COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN (Title 37

143. Ratification.—Whether officers of corporation ratified subscription to stock obtained by unauthorized agent held for the jury. Lone Star Life Ins. Co. v. Pierce (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1194.

145. Reasonable time.—Unless the facts are clear, the question as to what is a "reasonable time" after refusal of insurer to furnish blanks for proof of loss under an accident policy, that a privilege to limit the time of suit would not run, is a mixed question of law and fact to be submitted to the jury under proper instructions; "reasonable time" being such promptitude as the situation of the parties and the circumstances allow (citing Words and Phrases, vol. 4, p. 186). Simmons v. Western Indemnity Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 718.

What is a reasonable or unreasonable time is generally for the jury. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

The rule that, where there is no dispute about the material facts, the question of reasonable time in which the goods should be removed from carrier's warehouse by the consignee is one of law for the court has no application, where the consignees were bound by the custom of the railroad to make delivery at the warehouse of a common carrier company. Wichita Valley Ry. Co. v. Golden (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 465.

A party seeking to rescind a purchase of a mare must act with promptness and within reasonable time after discovering her unsoundness, what is a reasonable time being a question of fact to be determined by the jury under the circumstances. McDonald v. Stafford (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 732.

Whether a reasonable time for the removal of the goods had elapsed since notice of their arrival to the consignee varies with the circumstances of each particular case, but when the facts are undisputed the question of what length of time is reasonable becomes one of law to be determined by the court. Hines v. First Guaranty State Bank of Abilene (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 658.

150. Set-off and counterclaim.—In a suit by materialmen, subcontractors, and laborers against the owner, the contractor, and the latter's sureties, there was no error in submitting to the jury the question of the amount due the owner's attorney as at-torney's fees which the owner was entitled to set off against the balance due the contractors from him and assigned to the sureties. Wright v. A. G. McAdams Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 571.

152. Suretyship obligation.—The question whether judgment should be rendered against sureties on accolvin bond is exclusively for the court. Gonzales v. Flores (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 831.

Evidence under plea by surety that claimant had waived his right to share in an indemnity paid to other litigants examined, and held not such as to warrant the court in refusing submission to the jury. Darrah v. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1101.

Evidence held to make a question for the jury whether there was an extension of time of payment of a note, discharging the surety. Scarborough v. McKinnon (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 223.

153. Torts in general.—Where defendant, under the guise of buying wages to be earned, charged excessive interest and, though plaintiff had paid in an interest more than enough to discharge the loan, filed an assignment with employer's employer, knowing the employer's rule to discharge any such cases, held, that the question whether defendant wrongfully caused plaintiff's discharge was for the jury. Cotton v. Cooper (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 156.

In action for assault and battery by a creditor upon his debtor, evidence held insufficient to justify submission to jury of special issue of self-defense. Hall v. Hayter (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 436.

Evidence that plaintiff secreted himself on defendant's premises after 11 at night, and when asked what he was doing made no reply, but rose up in such a way that defendant said he feared bodily injury, was sufficient to raise the question of whether defendant had reasonable apprehension of the commission of an offense when he shot plaintiff. Ater v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 222.

153. Title and possession.—Evidence of a third party's claim to property levied on under execution held to take to the jury the question as to ownership. Horn v. Price (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 506.

Evidence on trial of right to cotton sequestered in action by plaintiff warehouse company against a common carrier which had issued receipts therefor to claimant, held sufficient to go to the jury on the issues of title to the cotton which plaintiff manager had embraced from it, and sold after destroying the marks thereon. King-Collie Co. v. Wichita Falls Warehouse Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 748.

In an action to recover the value of goods wrongfully seized as damages, where defendants claimed the goods had been stolen from them by another, testimony by plaintiff that he had raised the goats on his ranch requires the issue of ownership to be submitted to the jury. Hernandez v. Garcia (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 477.

In a suit to enjoin trespasses, issues of title and right to the writ may be determined in the same case; but, when it requires facts to establixh title, those questions of fact should be submitted to the jury. Butler v. Borroum (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1115.

Even as against a plea of general denial, a plaintiff in trespass to try title cannot have an instructed verdict, when by his own testimony he raises issues of fact against his title. O'Fiel v. James (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 371.

Showing of plaintiff in trespass to try title of a definite interest in the land, depending on the mother of his half-brothers not having remarried and had children after.
divorce from his father, held sufficient to go to the jury. Stedum v. Kirby Lumber Co. 25 Tex. 512, 221 S. W. 820, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 154 S. W. 272.

154. Transmission of telegraph and telephone messages.—In action for delay in transmitting messages conflicting as to whether sender spelled out the name of addressee, it was proper to submit the question to the jury, and, if an incorrect spelling was sanctioned, to show the question of sender's negligence. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McGaughy (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1084.

155. Usury.—Whether alleged usurious interest, when evidence showed that interest was payable in monthly installments, was usurious, when title to property had been held, plaintiff in error, defendant in error, was discharged. McCormick v. Western Union Tel. Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 314.

156. Usurious interest.—Whether evidence held insufficient to prove usurious interest, when evidence showed that interest was payable in monthly installments, was usurious, when title to property had been held, plaintiff in error, defendant in error, was discharged. McCormick v. Western Union Tel. Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 314.

157. Trespass.—In action to recover an automobile from buyer, undisputed evidence held to show that plaintiff had not parted with his title to the seller, so that the trial court should have instructed a verdict for plaintiff. Haynes v. Howe (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 248.

158. Transmission of telegraph and telephone messages.—In action for delay in transmitting messages conflicting as to whether sender spelled out the name of addressee, it was proper to submit the question to the jury, and, if an incorrect spelling was sanctioned, to show the question of sender's negligence. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McGaughy (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1084.

159. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

160. Trespass.—In an action for the death of hogs which plaintiff claimed resulted from lack of water when defendant entered the premises he was occupying as lessee, cut a dam and emptied a tank of water, the submission of the issue whether the draining of the water was the proximate cause of the death of the hogs was proper; the evidence not being undisputed. Wallace v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 355.

161. Trespass.—In action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

162. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

163. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

164. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

165. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

166. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

167. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

168. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

169. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

170. Trespass.—In an action to recover damages for mental anguish from a failure to promptly deliver a message announcing illness, negligence of defendant held a question for the trial court. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.
of defendants was indebted on both notes, instead of on one as the fact was, held not to make the affidavit false so as to authorize a verdict for defendants as for wrongful levy; the question being for the jury. Lancaster v. Corsicana Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 580.

(C) Instructions Invading Province of Jury

171. — Contracts and actions relating thereto.—A requested instruction, in action for price of articles, assuming authority of an architect, contrary to what the evidence shows without practical contradiction, is properly refused. J. Kennard & Sons Carpet Co. v. Houston Hotel Ass'n (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1139.

172. Actions relating to property.—In action for depreciation in value of property from excavation in street by railroad in construction of road, question submitted to jury held not subject to objection that it assumes that owner suffered the damages. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Weaver (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 740.

173. — Actions for torts in general.—In action against city for damages from city's septic sewer tank, plaintiff's requested charge held properly refused as assuming facts and declaring they constituted nuisance. Brewer v. City of Forney (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 636.

174. — Negligence in general.—In action against railroad, charge that, if jury believed consignment was roughly handled and delayed, and that delay and rough handling was proximate cause of damage, they should find for plaintiff, was erroneous as assuming proximate cause of damage was negligence as matter of law. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Wright-Herndon Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 218.

175. — Personal injuries in general.—Refused instruction as to right of pedestrian to go on highways and to assume that automobile drivers would not negligentby injuring him held to assume that plaintiff was exercising ordinary care and that defendant was negligent. Magee v. Cavins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1015.
Courts—District and County—Practice in

176. Personal injuries in operation of railroads in general.—In action against interurban railroad for injuries at crossing road's requested charge on issue of discovered peril which assumed material facts in dispute was properly refused. Southern Traction Co. v. Owen (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 160.

177. Employed to repair track; defendant was injured while blocking a coal car moving by gravity after plaintiff had released a defective brake, it was not error to refuse an instruction for defendant, erroneously assuming that plaintiff knew, or ought to have known, of the defective brake, and that he moved the car without inspection. Texas Midland R. R. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 310.

An instruction, assuming contributory negligence on plaintiff's part in going in front of the car, was properly refused; evidence showing that plaintiff thought it necessary to stand in front of the car, the expected accident to others on the track.

Injuries to passengers.—Instruction, in action for injury to passenger in alighting at station platform, that if she stepped on the edge of a plank, partly under the car stop, and between it and the platform and slipped, and there was room on it for her to have placed her foot without slipping, she could not recover, held erroneous as assuming this was contributory negligence. Williams v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 309.

In street car passenger's action for injuries, instruction held not to assume that plaintiff was negligent per se in alighting from moving car, thinking that it had stopped. Drake v. Northern Texas Traction Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 616.

Injuries to servants.—Charge on measure of damages in servant's action for injuries, held erroneous as assuming master's liability. Strawn Coal Co. v. Trojan (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 356; Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Sherbely (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 758.

In servant's action for injuries, a charge that as a guide in answering special issue jury should assess plaintiff's damages, if any that he finds he has sustained, at such sum, etc., held improper as assuming negligence. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Sherbely (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 758.

A charge submitting issues of negligence causing injury to servant which prefixed such issues with the words "if you find," etc., did not assume that defendant was guilty of the negligence submitted. El Paso & S. W. Ry. Co. v. Havens (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 444.

Where plaintiff was injured by the fall of a plank when the end opposite the one he was carrying was dropped by coworkers to enable them to avoid a falling lumber pile which the foreman had promised to hold up while they were working under it, refused instructions for defendants: if the coworkers dropped the plank to escape danger, were properly refused as assuming as a matter of law that the foreman's act was not the proximate cause. Lancaster v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 207.

Damages and amount of recovery.—In a servant's action for injuries, a charge assuming decrease in the servant's earning capacity as a proven fact from statement of a physician that plaintiff would always have a weak arm was erroneous, since the weakened condition of the arm need not necessarily decrease plaintiff's earning capacity. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ervin (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 234.

Where a city condemned a portion of a lot on which a building was erected and left the owner an insufficient area to accommodate the building as then constructed, an instruction authorizing consideration of cost of removal or reconstruction of the building was not on weight of evidence as assuming without conclusive proof that such removal or reconstruction would be made. City of San Antonio v. Pike (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 911.

Uncontroverted facts or evidence.—Authority of agent being undisputed, it is not error for court to assume such authority in his charge. McCauley v. McElroy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317.

Where plaintiff testified that there was breach of contract, which was not denied, but defendant claimed there was no contract, and all the evidence showed a breach if there was a contract, the court could assume the breach as a fact. New Fennfield Townsite Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 788.

Ordinarily it is improper for the court to assume as a fact a matter proven only by the uncorroborated testimony of an interested witness. Brown v. McKinney (Civ. App.) 255 S. W. 565.

Where petition to cancel an oil lease alleged that certain defendants claimed an interest in the land under a sale or transfer, in view of further fact that the plaintiff testified he received checks from such persons to cover rentals, there was no error in assuming as an admitted fact that such persons were in privity with the lessee as assignees of his interest. Boyles v. Gilman (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 645.

Opinion or belief of judge as to facts.—Burden of proof being a legal principle, not a fact issue, the repetition of such principle in instructions cannot mislead the jury into the belief that the court entertained views on fact issues adverse to plaintiff. Dallas Waste Mills v. Texas Cake & Linter Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 863.

In a passenger's action for injuries from exposure after car was derailed, instructions as to plaintiff's contributory negligence, in walking four miles in the rain, instead of staying at a nearby farmhouse, held erroneous as intimating that in the court's opinion plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence and placing undue stress on such issue. Dowdy v. Southern Traction Co. (Com. App.) 219 S. W. 1092.

A charge which would have had tendency to create in minds of the jury the impression that certain facts should, in opinion of the court, be given controlling effect in their determination is bad as on weight of evidence. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gentry (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 482.

183. — Nature of instruction in general.—Instruction not to consider plea in intervention, filed in former suit and admitted in evidence, as statement of any fact, was not charge upon weight of evidence. West Lumber Co. v. C. R. Cummings Export Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 546.

Instruction that the jury could consider the fact that plaintiff read all the interrogations before making his answers thereto was properly refused as on the weight of the evidence. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 164.

Instruction refused to instruct upon relative importance of surrounding circumstances and inferences, or to call attention to evidence thereof. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 199.

Where plaintiff relied on circumstantial evidence and defendant on direct, an instruction to the contrary was shown by the circumstances, etc., held on the weight of the evidence. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. McGill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 333.

The word "casual" meaning something by chance without being foreseen or expected, an instruction referring to a conversation as casual when the evidence tended to show the weight by one of the parties was properly refused. Cotulla State Bank v. Herron (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 797.

A charge stating what the law was upon certain facts submitted for consideration of the jury was not a charge upon the weight of the evidence. Etter v. Stampp & Electric Tugger (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 143.

Requested instruction to effect that declarations made by a party with reference to making testimony in his favor or subserving his interests should be rejected, held a comment on weight of evidence and properly refused. Watts v. McCloud (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 381.

186. — Uncontroverted evidence.—Objection to charge as on weight of evidence is not tenable where there is no dispute as to fact. Hegman v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 268.

A charge, in an action for personal injuries, that the undisputed evidence showed that an electric light was at a certain point, is not a charge on the weight of the evidence. Athens Electric Light & Power Co. v. Tanner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 421.

188. — Nature of action or issue in general.—The court in its charge could not assume as untrue proof sufficient to support allegations as to actual application of payment, though there was no evidence directly so showing. Love v. Harding (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 533.

While exhibition of high temper, eccentricities, and unreasonable prejudices would not, in the absence of other evidence, establish a want of testamentary capacity, yet in a will contest an instruction that such exhibitions were not alone proof of incompetency, or testamentary incapacity was properly refused, being on the weight of the evidence. Campbell v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 134.

In action against railroad for failure to comply with art. 6592, where the real issue was whether water closets were in a reasonable distance from the station, and the undisputed evidence showed that the railway did not have any closets within its passenger depot; instruction held erroneous as virtually an instruction to find for the state, regardless of how the real issue in the case might be determined. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. State, 116 Tex. 138, 216 S. W. 392.

In contest of Title, if old testatrix's will on ground of mental incompetency, requested charge on testamentary capacity as affected by old age and sickness held properly refused as on the weight of the evidence. Bradshaw v. Brown (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 1071.

In an action by an administrator, an instruction that, if the jury found from the evidence, taking into consideration the long lapse of time, the friendly relations between deceased and defendant, and the other circumstances, that there was a full settlement, they should find for defendant, was erroneous as on the weight of the evidence. Dodson v. Watson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 588.

Requested charge that a partnership is not to be determined by the fact that parties or witnesses called the relation such, but by the facts testified to as to the arrangement and contract, and that a mere interest in profits does not make parties partners, is argumentative and on the weight of the evidence. Brown v. Cassidy-Southwestern Commission Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 844.

Instructing that every influence operating on testator's mind will not invalidate the will, that influence to invalidate will must be undue influence, and that a mere request, entreaty, persuasion, or argument does not necessarily amount to undue influence, even though it affects the testator's mind, unless it overcomes his will, held not erroneous as on the weight of the evidence. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 716.

189. — Actions relating to property.—In trespass to try title, instruction as to sufficiency of plaintiff's record title and right of recovery held not objectionable as on the weight of the evidence. Paine v. Goff (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 618.

In a boundary dispute an instruction that surveyor is presumed to have surveyed on the ground all lines called for, etc., held, under the facts on the weight of the evidence. in each error, peremptory instruction, Kerr v. State (Civ. App.) 265 S. W. 747.

In action involving boundary dispute, an instruction as to recitals of distance in deeds, patents, surveys, or other instruments subsequent to original survey, and effect thereof upon location by original surveyor, held not on weight of evidence. Oates v. Maxey (Civ. App.) 296 S. W. 535.

In action against railroad for depreciation of property, resulting from excavation in street in constructing road, instruction as to duty of receivers to restore street to its original condition held not erroneous, as a comment on the evidence as to damage resulting from excavation. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Texas v. Weaver (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 740.

In trespass to try title, a requested special charge to find against defendant if he stated to plaintiff that he knew her father's heirs owned the land, or if defendant made any statement to the effect that he did not claim the land adversely, was improperly refused, being correct and not open to attack as on the weight of the evidence. Collins v. Megason (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 583.

190. — Contracts and actions relating thereto in general.—Instruction that application for employment and agreement as to plaintiff's seniority on list of conductors was not an employment, held properly refused as an instruction on the weight of the evidence, prohibited by this article. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

In broker's action for commission, instruction that if plaintiff had contract with defendant to sell land, and no contract of exchange, and if third person was procured as one who would trade for defendant's land, and was introduced for that purpose, jury should find for defendant, held properly refused as on weight of evidence. Buck v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 241.

A requested instruction, in an action to cancel an oil lease for fraud, that, if the jury found that defendant did not invite plaintiff to investigate the truth or falsity of verbal representations, then a failure to make any investigation would not bar him from canceling the contract and he owed no duty to investigate, was properly refused as being on the weight of the evidence and argumentative. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

Instruction that if jury should find from evidence policies sued on were in force at time of destruction of property, if it was destroyed, and, if they should find property was destroyed by fire while policies were in force, they would find for plaintiff in amount of his damage, held not on weight of evidence. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 795; National Ben Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Same (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 796.

In an action by a husband's residuary legatees to cancel deed to his wife, instruction that the burden of proof rested on plaintiffs to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the instrument was not delivered held not on the weight of the evidence. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 970.

In such action, instruction that, if a husband executes to his wife a conveyance, though he retains the manual possession thereof, unless a contrary intention is shown, his possession is the possession of the wife, and delivery is presumed, held not on the weight of the evidence. Id.

In a suit to recover the purchase price of land for vendor's failure to sink a well before given time, it was not error to refuse to instruct what would be a reasonable time within which to perform the contract within the meaning of the law; such charge constituting an invasion of the province of the jury, and being on the weight of the evidence. McDonald v. Whaley (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 313.

In action by broker for commissions for furnishing purchaser for oil and gas lease, court did not err in submitting special issues as to whether defendant had revised the price of oil lease at the time the plaintiff bought the property, and whether he did not revise the price after plaintiff brought the purchaser there, as against an objection that the said issue was a comment by the court upon the weight of the testimony. Priddy v. Childers (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 172.

In an action to cancel an oil lease on the ground of fraudulent representations, a requested charge, stating as a matter of law that a certain fact was material and a certain other fact, taken alone, was not material, held erroneous as on the weight of the evidence. Waggoner v. Zundelovitz (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 721.

192. — Sales.—In action for failure to deliver goods according to sample, a charge that it appeared that a sufficient amount had been tendered held not erroneous as upon the weight of the evidence. Dallas Waste Mills v. Texas Cake & Linter Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 858.

193. — Carriage of goods and live stock.—In an action for delay in shipment of live stock, wherein plaintiff relies on negligent condition of switch track, preventing loading, an instruction that the degree of diligence required in construction of main track is not the diligence required in construction of switch track held properly refused, as on the weight of the evidence. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bomar (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 570.

Refusal of instruction requested by initial carrier as to time of shipment required from S. in Texas to S. in Missouri was proper; such charge being directly upon the weight of the evidence. Rio Grande & E. P. Ry. Co. v. J. H. Russell & Son (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 530.

195. — Torts in general.—In action for securing writ of sequestration without probable cause, instruction that original proceedings were not conclusive of issues on trial, but that jury should determine damages without regard to result of such proceedings, was properly refused, being on weight of evidence, and not objectionable as tending to outcome of such proceedings. Fred Mercer Dry Goods Co. v. Fikes (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 830.

In an action by plaintiff who claimed that he had been fraudulently induced to lease oil lands, and that defendants had not paid him the entire bonus as agreed, a general charge submitting the issues held not on the weight of the evidence. Moorman v. Small (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 127.

In a suit for an injunction, an instruction that the operation and maintenance of a railroad was not a nuisance as a matter of law was not a comment on the weight of the testimony. Oliver v. Forney Cotton Oil & Ginning Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1094.

Where defendants had sequestered and reprieved certain goats in an action for conversion by plaintiff, it was not error to refuse to instruct for defendant if the jury believed that the goats were unlawfully taken from a certain ranch by plaintiff's brother; such instruction being upon the weight of the evidence, as intimating that the goats were unlawfully taken. Garcia v. Hernandez (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1099.

196. — Negligence in general.—Instruction held not a charge on evidence that plaintiff was contributorily negligent at the time he was injured. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Lowery (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 605.

197. — Personal injuries in general.—Refused instruction as to right of pedestrian to go upon highways and to assume that automobile drivers would not negligently injure him held on the weight of the evidence. Magee v. Cavins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 105.

198. — Personal injuries in operation of railroads in general.—A requested instruction that if one drives in front of a street car approaching at a high rate of speed, and is thereby injured, he cannot recover, was properly refused as being upon the weight of the evidence, there being evidence that such act was not negligent. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Terrazas (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 287.

In an action for injuries sustained by plaintiff, struck by train while riding in an automobile driven by another, an instruction that the failure of another passenger to observe the approaching train was contributory negligence imputable to plaintiff held properly refused as being on the weight of the evidence. Baker v. Streeter (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1039.

In an action for injuries to a drayman whose ankle was crushed by a tombstone on a station platform, which fell on him as he, with others, was moving a cooking range to a car, instruction, after defining ordinary care and negligence, as to the duty of defendant, his servant, to employ to exercise ordinary care, etc., held not on the weight of the evidence. Hines v. Jones (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 412.

Though a railroad may under certain circumstances be required as a person of ordinary prudence, to exercise "great care and prudence," this should not be given in a charge to the jury, but the quantum of care and diligence that a person of ordinary prudence would have exercised under the circumstances should be left for the jury.

In suit against a street railroad for injuries to person struck by a car, the trial court should not have instructed the jury that it was the duty of the motorman to have done any particular thing to avoid the injury after discovering plaintiff's peril, but should have left the jury free to decide whether he exercised the requisite care to avert injury after discovering him. Paris Transit Co. v. Fath (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 1089.

Injuries to passengers.—In an action by a railroad to recover, it was held not an error to refuse to charge submitting special issue held not upon weight of evidence. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 714.

It was not error to refuse a special charge, which violated the statute prohibiting judges from commenting on the weight of the testimony, in that it stated that it was negligence for a passenger, intending to board a car, to get too close to the track on its approach. Texas Electric Ry. v. Hooks (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 654.

In an action for death of a passenger struck by a rapidly moving car while crossing the track to board it, an instruction as to defendant's authority to run the car upon its track held properly refused, as being on the weight of the evidence. Texas Electric Ry. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1061.

200. — Injuries to servants.—In an employé's action for injuries, an instruction, grouping the facts relied on by plaintiff as constituting negligence, and directing the jury to find for plaintiff if such facts constituted negligence, was not objectionable as being on the weight of evidence. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kornegay (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 708.

In an action for death of a fireman killed by reason of a derailing switch being left open, instruction held properly refused, as being on the weight of the evidence. Hines v. Mills (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 727.

Where it was claimed that plaintiff was injured when leaving train while accompanying passengers, held not on weight of evidence. Hines v. Mills (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 727.

Where it was claimed that plaintiff, a blacksmith riding on a gasoline motor on railroad track, was guilty of contributory negligence in remaining on the car, which was being operated in the dark without lights, a requested instruction on contributory negligence, in effect a peremptory charge, was properly refused. Hines v. Parsons (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1027.

In a lineman's action for injuries from shock, special charges requested by defendant held properly refused as argumentative and on the weight of the evidence. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Lee (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 497.

201. — Damages or amount of recovery.—Charge in a female passenger's personal injury action that jury might consider a second miscarriage in determining the extent of first held not on weight of evidence. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gentry (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 482.

In action for damage to mules in transit, instruction as to measure of damage held on weight of evidence as making railroad liable if mules were injured without reference as to whether or not through railroad's negligence. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Helms Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 557.

A charge that, if the injuries were inflicted in such manner as to render defendant liable and if plaintiff was suffering from disease, defendant would be liable for any aggravation of the disease, but not liable for its natural progress, was not objectionable as argumentative or on the weight of the evidence. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Jennings (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1113.

204. Determination of questions of law—Duty of judge.—Charges interpreting or declaring the effect of written instruments are within the province of the court, and not objectionable as taking the facts from the jury. Sherman Slaughtering & Rendering Co. v. Texas Nursery Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 478.

205. — Submission to jury.—Requested instruction calling for finding whether the contract was breached calls for answer to a question of law, rather than of fact; many and various breaches being alleged. McCulloh v. Reynolds Mortgage Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 565.

The charge must submit questions of fact solely to the decision of the jury, and should not include questions of law, which the court only is authorized to determine. Varnes v. Dean (App.) 228 S. W. 1017.

II. FORM, REQUISITES, AND SUFFICIENCY OF INSTRUCTIONS

(A) In General

211. Written instructions—Signing.—The failure of the trial judge to sign the charge is not reversible error. McDonald v. Axtell (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 565.

212/2. Instructions prepared by party.—It was not improper for the court to adopt as its main charge a charge prepared by plaintiff's counsel. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Texas v. Harral (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 659.

213. Form and language in general.—In a personal injury action against a railroad, a bus company, and others, the court, after instructing a verdict as to other defendants, did not err in instructing the jury to direct their inquiry against the railroad and the bus company, as against the bus company's contention that it was prejudiced by juror's attention having been directed to the fact that it was a joint defendant with the railroad. McAdoo v. McClure (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 348.

217. — Conjunctive and disjunctive charges.—Where the facts constituting the alleged contributory negligence are pleaded conjunctively, no affirmative error will arise in submitting the issues in that form. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Keith (Com. App.) 208 S. W. 891.

In a personal injury action, it is not error to submit the different items of damage conjunctively in the main charge. Melton v. Manning (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 488.

218. Repetition.—An instruction that the findings of an arbitrator would be binding unless he acted fraudulently and in bad faith, given in response to a question by the jury as to the effect of interest and partiality, held not erroneous, although a repetition of the main charge. Smith v. Bryan (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 358.

In action to enjoin parol trust upon deed absolute in form, where court has instructed jury as to the presumption in favor of deed in general charge, the repetition of the statement in a special charge was objectionable in giving undue prominence to such presumption. Carl v. Settegast (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 566.

221. Sufficiency as to subject-matter in general—Definition of terms.—Instruction defining nuisance as "the use of one's property for the conducting of one's own business in an unreasonable manner as will, under all the circumstances, unfairly cause real or material damage to another," is not incorrect. Brewer v. City of Forney (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 636.

Definition of "serious illness or disease," as one calculated to or tending to impair the general health or constitution, or produce a vice in the constitution or death unless arrested, and not including slight temporary ailments, held slightly, if at all, imperfect, and amply sufficient to guide the jury. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Hicks (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 616.

Instruction that: "'Negligence' means that failure to exercise ordinary care. 'Ordinary care' means the doing of that which an ordinarily prudent man would do under the same or similar circumstances or not doing that which under the same or similar circumstances an ordinarily prudent man would not do"—as applied to handling of stock, held substantially correct. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Harris Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 255.

An instruction defining proximate cause as not necessarily the cause nearest in time or physical sequence, but a cause without which the injury would not have happened, and from which the injury or a like injury might reasonably have been anticipated, is substantially correct. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Cook (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 639.
Instruction that a common-law marriage is consummated when parties actually agree and consent together to become husband and wife, and thereafter carry out a agreement and cohabit together openly and professedly as husband and wife, was sufficient and equivalent to a statement that the parties must hold themselves out publicly as man and wife; the word "publicly" being defined as "openly." _Winters v. Duncan
(Civ. App.)_ 229 S. W. 219.

224. _Statement of issues._—While the court is not required ordinarily to state the issues made by the pleadings in the preliminary part of the charge, if he attempts to do so, the issues should be correctly stated. _Bonnett-Brown Sales Service Co. v.
Penison Morning Gazette (Civ. App.)_ 261 S. W. 1944.

227. _Evidence and matters of fact in general._—In an action for damages to a shipment of cattle, though evidence that the cattle were shipped for range feeding and that the cattle recovered their normal condition soon after being placed on the range was admissible, it was not error, after properly charging the measure of damage, to refuse a requested charge to consider the temporary nature of the injuries.
_Civ. App.)_ 191 S. W. 142.

228. _Stating, grouping or summarizing facts or evidence._—In action against railway for injuries, instruction which grouped facts under which verdict might be returned for defendant held not erroneous as requiring jury to believe before finding for plaintiff that defendant's servants were guilty of negligence in several respects.

Where defendant railroad pleaded contributory negligence on the part of decendant killed at a crossing while driving an automobile, on request, the trial court should list the facts constituting contributory negligence, if any; hence, he submit-

A defendant is entitled to a charge, when properly requested, requiring the jury to find whether the evidence establishes the existence of any specified group of facts which, if true, would establish a defense which had been and made an issue by the evidence, and instructing them, if they find such facts, to find for defendant. _Hannes
v. Raube (Civ. App.)_ 210 S. W. 985.

A defendant in case submitted on general charge, is entitled to have the facts constituting his defense grouped, and pointedly and affirmatively submitted to the jury.

233. _Presumptions and burden of proof._—In action for death at crossing, instruction that defendants had burden of proof on defensive matters pleaded held erroneous as susceptible of construction of imposing upon them burden of proving contributory negligence by evidence offered by them alone. _Lyon v. Phillips (Civ. App.)
196 S. W. 995.

Though defendant relied on plaintiff's own evidence to sustain its claim of contributory negligence, held that charge that burden was on defendant was not mis-

Instruction that negligence could not be presumed, held not erroneous on theory that jury could presume negligence from facts shown, as the jury does not presume negligence, but finds that the facts constitute negligence. _Drake v. Northern Texas and Pacific Co. (Civ. App.)_ 197 S. W. 610.

In passenger's action for injuries, an instruction that negligence would not be presumed, but must be proved, correctly presented the issue of burden of proof, and, not being included in the general charge, was properly given as a special charge. _Id.

Burden of proof was on defendant to prove was out of his allegation of fraud in a conveyance by a preponderance of the evidence was sufficient on the burden of

In suit for commission on exchange of land, charge held not subject to objection that, it placed burden of proof "upon the defendant to establish that he did not list his land with plaintiffs." _Blaschke v. Ferguson & Dyess (Civ. App.)_ 208 S. W. 727.

In suit for injuries, due to cover of manhole tilting, instructing that burden of showing contributory negligence was on defendant, and that in determining the issue the jury should consider all the facts and circumstances in evidence, held not erroneous.

Though plaintiff's evidence tended to show such negligence. _City of Ft. Worth v.
Weisler (Civ. App.)_ 312 S. W. 290.

In an architect's action to recover for plans and specifications furnished defendant upon order of its agent, an instruction undertaking to inform the jury that the burden of proof was upon plaintiff as to matters alleged by him and on defendant as to special matters pleaded by it held objectionable. _Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v.
Roquemore (Civ. App.)_ 214 S. W. 679.

In a suit on a note which defendant maker admitted signing in blank, seeking to avoid his admission by pleading a fraudulent filling in of the amount of the note, charge that, where the maker denies execution under oath, plaintiff has the burden of proof, but, where the maker admits the signature in a plea of non est factum, the burden to prove it was fraudulently filled out is on him, was sufficient. _Goree v. Uvalde Nat'l Bank (Civ. App.)_ 219 S. W. 620.

An instruction that the jury should return a verdict for defendant if from all the evidence they were uncertain as to the true location of the boundary line was correct, since the burden was on plaintiff to prove the location of such lines. _West Lumber Co. v. Goodrich (Com. App.)_ 223 S. W. 185, reversing Judgment Goodrich v. West
Lumber Co. (Civ. App.)_ 182 S. W. 341.
A charge requested by plaintiffs that, having established the beginning corner, the jury are not required to find on the ground any of the other corners or the bearing trees, but that the burden was on defendant to prove affirmatively that the original surveyor did not run out his full course and distance, was properly refused, because the burden of establishing the boundaries was on the plaintiff, and remained so throughout.

Where there was an issue under the pleading and evidence whether cattle were in good condition when delivered to the carrier for shipment, it was not error to refuse a request to charge that the burden was on the carrier to show that the injury was caused by inherent vice and defect of the cattle. Leon v. Hines (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 239.

The burden of proof as to the defense of assumed risk was on the employer, and it is not error to refuse a request to so charge. Thornhill v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 490.

In an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8658) for death of a brakeman when a defective car ahead of him damped coal on the tracks, the trial court charged erroneously as part of the burden of showing that the car was in a reasonably safe condition. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

In such action instruction that the burden of proof on each special issue was on the party having the affirmative, coupled with the refusal of the trial court to give requested instructions informing the jury specifically that the burden was on plaintiff as to certain issues, held not confusing. Id.

In an action by an administrator on written instruments found in possession of deceased alleged to be defrauded by defendant, where the only denial was that the defendant did not know the nature of the document, an instruction that the burden was on defendant to establish his right to recover by a preponderance of the evidence was misleading and erroneous. Dodson v. Watson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 586.

Weight and effect of evidence.—The court properly charged the jury that where the evidence was conflicting, the credibility of witnesses and the weight to be given the testimony, and was not required to add, as requested by defendants, “and of all the facts proven.” Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Blumberg (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 734.

Preponderance of evidence.—Instruction that burden of proof was on plaintiff to prove case by preponderance of evidence, and on defendants to prove defense by preponderance of evidence, held confusing to jury. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Novit (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 496.

In physician’s action for hospital services rendered boy injured by defendant, court’s special charge refused a request to instruct jury that only in event they should find from preponderance of evidence that plaintiff had proven his cause of action could they render verdict for him. Banfield v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 442.

Instruction that plaintiff must “establish” the claimed trust by a preponderance of the evidence was open to the objection that it required certain and indisputable proof; the word “establish” being synonymous with the word “prove.” Carl v. Settegast (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 506.

Degree of proof required in general.—An instruction that the burden was on plaintiff to establish facts necessary to recovery by a preponderance of the evidence, and that the burden was on the master to establish to the jury’s satisfaction the servant’s contributory negligence, is erroneous, being equivalent to a charge calling for a finding beyond a reasonable doubt on the issue of contributory negligence. Peden v. Iron & Steel Co. v. Jaimez (Com. App.) 208 S. W. 898.

To require proof of a fact by “full and satisfactory evidence” is equivalent to a requirement that the fact must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Carleton-Parson Dry Goods Co. v. McFarland (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 208.

Requiring matters to be proved to the satisfaction of the jury.—In a suit to restrain the operation of a cotton gin as a nuisance, an instruction to find for defendant unless the jury should “find and be satisfied” that the evils complained of are imminent and certain to occur was properly refused, since a preponderance of the evidence only was required. Moore v. Coleman (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 212.

In a suit to be foreclosed in truth of grounds set out in affidavit for attachment not affecting right to recovery for wrongful attachment, held argumentative. Hegman v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 268.

In a boundary dispute an instruction that surveyor is presumed to have surveyed on the ground all lines called for and ran to all of the artificial objects or lines called for in his field notes, and that original east lines of league of land were marked lines, an artificial boundary, held, argumentative. Kerr v. State (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 474.

In an action for delay in shipment of live stock, where plaintiff relies on negligent combining loading, an instruction that the degree of diligence required in construction of main track is not same diligence required as to switch track held properly refused as argumentative in form. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Bomar (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 570.

A requested instruction, containing a correct proposition of law, but also contailing matters strongly argumentative, and being a very partisan presentation of the issue, plaintiff v. Kristan & McFarland-Parr Co. 212 S. W. 939.

While art. 7855, gives every person of sound mind absolute power of disposition over his property, yet, where unnatural disposition was shown as evidence of want of testamentary capacity, instruction that, if the testator was not incapable, he might dispose of the property as he thought fit, though dictated by overwhelming love, was properly refused, as argumentative. Campbell v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 134.

An instruction, in an action to cancel an oil lease for that if the jury found that defendant did not invite plaintiff to investigate the truth or falsity of verbal representations, then a failure to make any investigation would not bar him from canceling the contract, and he owed no duty to investigate, was properly refused, as argumentative. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

In a lineman's action for injuries from shock, special charges held properly refused as argumentative. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Lee (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 497.

A charge that, if the injuries were inflicted in such manner as to render defendant liable and if plaintiff was suffering from disease, defendant would be liable for any aggravation of the disease, but not liable for its natural progress, was not objectionable as argumentative. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Jennings (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1113.

Requested charge, that a partnership is not to be determined by the fact that parties or witnesses called the relation such, but by the facts testified to as to the arrangement and contract, and that a mere interest in profits does not make partners, is argumentative. Brown v. Cassidy-Southernwestern Commission Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 833.

Instruction that every influence operating on testator's mind will not invalidate the will, that influence will must be undue influence, and that a mere request, entreaty, persuasion, or argument does not necessarily amount to undue influence, even though it affects the testator's mind, unless it overcomes his will, held not erroneous as argumentative, and confusing. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 716.

 Charges refused, that plaintiff was entitled to anticipate that another will fail to obey the law, and you are therefore charged that in passing on the issue" whether deceased "exercised ordinary care in approaching the crossing, he had the right to expect that defendant's" trainmen would give the required crossing signals, is argumentative. Missouri-Kansas-Texas R. Co. v. Mercantile (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 327.

246. Confused or misleading instructions.—In an action for death on crossing, instruction that deceased had equal right to travel with automobile on road at intersection with railroad as railroad had to run trains at point, was improper as confusing and misleading. Baker v. Collins (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 519.

Where words of message and other facts were admitted, except date of delivery to telegraph company, court should have submitted question whether it was delivered on one day or other without including in instruction words of message which tended only to confuse. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Goodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 726.

The principal issue being whether plaintiff was the procuring cause of sale of defendant's cattle, an instruction that, if defendant assisted another broker in the sale, etc., plaintiff was the procuring cause, held misleading. Lumaden v. Jones (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 375.

In an action by vendee for fraud, a requested charge that even though jury believed particular representation made, they should not consider same as element of plaintiff's damages because such representations did not increase the damages, held properly refused. Baker v. Smith & Ford (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 53.

In action for injury to plaintiff by escaping steam from passing engine when he drove his team between depot platform and track for purpose of unloading lumber, an instruction on proximate cause held not misleading. St. Louis, S. F. & T. R. Co. v. Whatley (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 968.

In an action for the death of a passenger struck by car while crossing the track to board it, an instruction as to decedent's duty to look and listen for the approaching car was properly refused as misleading. Texas Electric R. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1051.

Where the facts raised the issue of appointing defendants as agents or trustees to invest money deposited with them, which partakes more of the nature of a trust, an instruction defining a trust was not erroneous, as calculated to mislead the jury. Murphy-Bolanz Land & Loan Co. v. McKibben (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 550.

In mother's action for injury to minor son, instruction submitting as measure of recovery such sum "as paid now will be reasonable compensation to the plaintiff for the loss of the services, if any," of the son "until he becomes 21 years of age," held not misleading. Dallas Ry. Co. v. Paton (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 318.

In an action to have land deeded by father to daughter applied in payment of debts of father, where daughter claimed a prior parol gift, a requested instruction that an understanding that the land was given to her "on condition that she and her husband remain in Texas or upon any other condition would not be sufficient" to constitute a gift was properly refused because misleading. Carleton-Ferguson Dry Goods Co. v. McFarland (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 298.

A charge submitting the issue whether defendant's motorman, in passing and overtaking plaintiff's mule tied to the rear of a wagon, gave "such assistance to plaintiff as was reasonably demanded by the circumstances to obtain clearance and avoid the accident," followed by language that might lead the jury to believe that the street car should have steered around the mule, as an automobile would do, in observing the Argumentative charge that "no one is required to anticipate that another will fail to obey the law," and that in passing on the issue whether deceased "exercised ordinary care in approaching the crossing, he had the right to expect that defendant's trainmen giving signals held crossing and its effect not necessarily counteracted by the fact that the case was submitted on special issues, or that the jury found that deceased looked and listened for the train. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Merchant (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 327.

247. Inconsistent or contradictory instructions.—In servant's action for injuries, where court, in submitting affirmative liability, stated grounds of negligence conjunctively, but, in submission of issue of concurrent negligence, jury was instructed to apply doctrine of comparative negligence, charge was inconsistent. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 665.

An instruction allowing recovery for passenger's injuries on a finding of negligence based either on a quick and sudden lurch of the train in stopping or on the place and manner and means provided for alighting is inconsistent with another instruction requiring the jury to find for defendant unless its servants stopped the train with a quick and sudden jerk and were negligent in carrying plaintiff's wife past the station and having her alight where they did. Shipley v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas, 110 Tex. 194, 217 S. W. 137.

An action by plaintiff who asserted that he had been fraudulently induced to execute a lease to oil lands, and that defendants did not, as they had agreed, pay him the entire bonus, held that the charge was not objectionable as contradictory. Moorman v. Small (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 127.

What is inserted in the instructions of the court which is misleading, or whatever contradicts, extends, or limits the terms of the charge correctly defining the acts, conduct, or omission from which the liability in law springs, is erroneous, because inconsistent with or contradictory of such other parts of the charge. Patterson v. Williams (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 89.

248. Undue prominence of particular matters.—Though either side is entitled to affirmative presentation of case or defense, and special grouping of facts in certain cases, repetition or emphasis that essentially gives case, issue, or defense prominence, is erroneous. McDonald v. Marquis Oil & Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 585.

Where the court gave all the material issues in its charge, it was not error to refuse a special charge that sought to single out and submit a question to the jury that was not controlling. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Brown (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 102.

Instruction to include in amount due plaintiff specified amounts due on specified accounts, "and any other amount you find chargeable to such accounts," where there was evidence of other amounts due on such accounts, was misleading, and calculated to cause jury to attach too much weight to specified amounts. McFarland v. Ray McDonald Co. (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 946.

It is improper for court to select certain portion of testimony giving undue prominence thereto. Southern Traction Co. v. Gee (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 992.

A requested instruction, singling out certain portions of the testimony relating to an issue which was not submitted to the jury in the main charge, was properly refused. McDonald v. Stafford (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 732.

Every statement made by the court in discussing and passing on the sufficiency or insufficiency of certain evidence to justify a particular finding in a given case need not be included in the instructions as a result would be to give undue prominence to such matters. Bradshaw v. Brown (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 1971.

In broker's action for commissions, special issues held not erroneous, as unduly emphasizing a particular part of defendant's testimony. Friddy v. Childers (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 172.

250. Nature of action or issue in general.—The language "living in the same house in like manner as marks the intercourse between husband and wife" in an instruction on evidence of common-law marriage held not erroneous as laying undue stress on the occupancy of the same house and detracting from the importance of their holding themselves out to the public as husband and wife, in view of other parts of the instructions. Bobbitt v. Bobbitt (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 478.

In an action for failure to deliver bales of cotton linters where the main charge stated that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff to make out its case by a preponderance of the evidence, a special charge that the burden was on plaintiff to show by a preponderance of the evidence, the number of bales, if any, that defendant failed to deliver was error as singling out a particular issue and giving it undue prominence. Dallas Waste Mills v. Texas Cake & Linter Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 118.

251. Negligence and personal injuries.—In a passenger's action for injuries sustained in alighting from street car, special charges, though correct, held to give undue prominence to the claim of contributory negligence. Drake v. Northern Texas Traction Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 610.

In railroad servant's action for injuries from a defective dirt spreader, paragraph of charge authorizing recovery for one or all alleged acts of negligence which singly or combined were a direct and proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries, held erroneous, as undue emphasis of such grounds of negligence previously submitted separately. Hines v. Bannon (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 684.

252. — Matters of law and amount of recovery.—A typewritten instruction on measurement of damages for injury to crops having a written interlineation as to issue of actual value held not to thereby give undue prominence to that issue. W. R. Pickering Lumber Co. v. Childress (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 672.

(B) Particular Actions or Issues

256. In general.—In suit for breach of marriage promise, instruction held not objectionable as telling jury that it is legitimate for unmarried woman to have illicit intercourse with man to whom she is engaged and as authorizing damages from illicit intercourse during engagement whether she was seduced by reliance upon alleged promise of marriage. Freeman v. Bennett (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 228.

Where the only relief sought against the original grantor who recovered the land for the fraud of his grantee was foreclosure of the lien securing a note given to the original grantee by a subsequent grantee and transferred to plaintiff, an instruction that, if the grantor given the original grantor secured on other land were void, there could be no recovery against that grantor, was manifestly erroneous. Pope v. Beauchamp, 110 Tex. 271, 218 S. W. 447.

An instruction as to cooling time, in an action for tarring and feathering plaintiff, held not to thereby authorize any evidence, not to make it clear, as it should, that time for cooling should be computed from the last act of provocation. Walker v. Kellar (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 796.

257. Adverse possession.—An instruction that an attempt by the person in possession to take up all the interest of another in the land was not a recognition of the other's ownership held sufficient to cover the issue of the possessor's attempt to buy his peace. Chapman v. Dickerson (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 318.

Instruction that by the term "hostile" is meant an occupancy of the premises under a holding by the possessor as owner and not erroneous, as requiring a finding of possession hostile to others than plaintiffs. Id.

A requested charge that, if jury found from all the facts and circumstances it was more reasonably probable that the patentee sold the certificate to the predecessor of defendant than that defendant did not make such sale, it could find for defendant, and that prior to 1846 it was not necessary for a sale of the certificate to have been in writing, was correct. Id.

A party claiming by limitations, was entitled to have such issue, as raised by the pleadings and evidence, clearly, distinctly, and affirmatively submitted to the jury, and the court erred in not giving at such party's request more than a general instruction as to limitations. Caso v. Green (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 938, opinion supplemented 227 S. W. 233.

259. Assumption of risk.—Charges that if plaintiff by ordinary care could have known of danger or insufficiency of number of men to perform work, he assumed risk, held incorrect as imposing too great burden on plaintiff. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 665.

An instruction, on assumption of risk, that makes knowledge of patent defects a defense, where the danger therefrom was latent and beyond the knowledge of the injured servant, was properly refused. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Challen (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 213.

An instruction that an injured servant assumed the risk of such defects, as were open to his inspection was improper, where the evidence showed that the servant did not know such defects would cause an explosion. Id.

In railroad servant's action for injuries while working on defective dirt spreader, special charge affirmatively presenting defense of assumed risk, pleaded and raised by evidence not having been given; defense not having been given; defense not presented affirmatively in court's main charge. Hines v. Bannon (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 684.

Instruction held defective in not clearly stating that employer assumed risk of known or obvious dangers, though arising from defendant's negligence. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Francis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 342.

In an action under Federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 6557-6565), instruction held erroneous, in that it assumed that employee would not be guilty of assumed risk if with knowledge of railroad's negligence he exercised ordinary care to avoid injury. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smithers (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 667.

262. Bona fide purchase.—In suit to try title, charge as to rights and duties of one purchasing land without record or other notice of adverse claim held to contain no error. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Ragley-Saner Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 238.

266b. Boundaries.—If boundary suit, where plaintiffs claimed corner at tree marked F and defendants claimed the corner at a different tree, alleged to be so marked, but on which the letter was indistinguish, instruction describing plaintiffs' claimed tree, and requiring verdict for plaintiffs, if such was the corner, held proper. Jackson v. Graham (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 765.

In action for damages to shipment of cattle from delay in transit, charge that responsibility of railroad ceased when cattle were delivered to stockyards company at destination and unloaded into pens held as favorable as defendant railroads could ask. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1079.

In action for damages to shipment of peanuts from contamination with coal oil and says that oil was required to be removed from peanuts before shipment. Plaintiff's agent instructed carrier to inspect peanuts on receipt and to evert over if peanuts were to be received in dry and cured condition and could not recover if delivered in green and uncured condition, though they were thereafter damaged through carrier's negligence, held erroneous. Cleburne Peanut & Products Co. v. Southern Ry. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 270, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 184 S. W. 1070.

In action for damages for mules in transit carrier was entitled to charge that a common carrier is not an insurer of live stock received for transportation but liable only for injuries caused by its own negligence. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Helms Bros. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 853.

But instruction that common carrier is not an insurer of live stock received by it for transportation, but responsible only if careless and negligent, etc., held improper, on account of the use of the word "careless." Id. 267.

Conspiracy.—In an action against fire insurance companies for conspiracy in refusing plaintiff insurance, an instruction that defendants had a legal right to refuse to write insurance for plaintiff, limiting such right to individual action of the party exercising it was erroneous where the jury were required to find whether a conspiracy had been formed to injure plaintiff by any of the means alleged in his petition. Palatine Ins. Co. v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 1014.

An instruction requiring the jury to specifically find when and where the conspiracy was entered into, held properly refused. Id.

268. Contracts.—In action for breach of agreement to transfer notes and accounts of a bankrupt purchased by defendant at judicial sale, requested charges on validity of agreement between plaintiff and defendant relative to plaintiff's refraining from bidding at sale held properly refused. Taylor v. Lafevers (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 651.

In action against cotton factors for sale of cotton contrary to selling instructions, where defense was that factors had sufficient margin for their protection, instruction held not subject to objection that it permitted factors to demand unreasonable additional security. Robinson v. William D. Cleveland & Sons (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 171.

In an action by son's creditor against father refusal of special requested charge as to whether a son directed a third person to convey land to father for the purpose of paying son's indebtedness held proper, since father's liability could not be made to depend merely upon directions from son to third party. Bell v. Swim (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 470.

In a contractor's action against an irrigation district for a balance due for construction work, it was proper to submit the issue as of substantial rather than of 269. Sales.—In action on note which defendant alleged was given for agency of churn under false representations as to agency of churn and its especial qualities, instruction that plaintiff could recover if the churn would make butter was error. Lang v. Robles (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 429.

In an action for damages for seller's breach of sale contract by failure to deliver, held under the evidence, that it was not error to refuse a special charge on the doctrine of offer and acceptance to complete a contract. Russell v. Saffold (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 281.

Contributory negligence.—Defendant's right to have the full effect of its plea of contributory negligence should be safeguarded in connection with each issue of alleged negligence submitted by the court. Southern Traction Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 457.

Acts in emergencies.—In an action by a section hand hurt while removing a hand car to prevent collision with a fast passenger train, a charge on contributory negligence which was submitted to plaintiff's claim that he was attempting to remove the care to save life, held not objectionable. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Mitchum (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 659.

Employés.—In action against railroad for injuries to servant while lowering pipe to well, in view of evidence, instruction that if defendant himself slackened rope and threw it from around drum, and the foreman did not do so, plaintiff could not recover, held properly refused. Stephenville, N. & S. T. Ry. Co. v. Shelton (Com. App.) 208 S. W. 915.

In car repairer's action for injuries from defective drainway involving issue of whether the ground was furnished as a place to work, and whether car repairer in performance of his duties properly walked over such land, court's charge held to properly present issue to jury. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 924.

An instruction that the fault or negligence precluding recovery is not the least degree of fault or negligence, but must be of such degree as to amount to want of ordinary care, held no ground for complaint. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Mitchum (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 659.

280. Persons at railroad crossings.—Instructions as to whether a railway crossing flagman, injured by being pushed on to track by approaching vehicle, was negligent, held proper. Sulzberger & Sons Co. of America v. Page (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 928.

281. Plaintiff struck at a crossing by an electric car, refusal of an instruction that if deceased saw the car, or could have seen it, and yet permitted his automobile to come in contact with the car, there could be no recovery, was improper, though the request did not submit the issue of proximate cause. Southern Traction Co. v. Kirksey (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 762.

In an action for death of one riding in an automobile, it is error to refuse defendant's request to charge that if decedent approached the crossing without looking or listening, and if by so doing he could have seen or heard the train in time, and if a man of ordinary prudence would have looked or listened, the jury should find decedent was guilty of contributory negligence proximately causing his death. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Pevey (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 552.

An instruction for injuries through the negligent operation of a train running without signals as it approached a crossing not guarded by a flagman or gates the refusal of the railroad's requested charge that there could be no recovery if the person injured by listening or looking could have discovered the approach of the train, and the omission to do so was a failure to exercise the care of an ordinarily prudent person under the circumstances, held error. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Pearson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 708; Same v. Skinner (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 713.

282. Persons on railroad tracks.—In action for injury from escaping steam to one who crossed depot track for purpose of unloading lumber, an instruction on contributory negligence, making it the duty of plaintiff to exercise ordinary care held to sufficiently cover the issue as raised by the evidence. St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Whatley (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 908.

283. Persons injured in operation of street railroads.—Instruction that deceased was not guilty of contributory negligence, if she was a mere guest and in no control over the automobile, unless she failed to keep a lookout for street car and failed to warn the driver of its approach, or negligently rode with the curtains as they were, held fair to defendant. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Benjamin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 396.

In an action for injuries to the driver of a buggy struck by a street car when the horse became unmanageable, a charge requiring the jury to find that the motorman "actually discovered" the driver's peril before the latter would be entitled to a verdict was not erroneous as failing to require finding that the motorman "realized" and "appreciated" the peril. Paris Transit Co. v. Fath (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 482.

284. Discovered peril or last clear chance rule.—A requested charge that jury must find the motorman actually discovered and realized the peril, and knew that plaintiff's decedent would go on the crossing ahead of the approaching car and be injured, before they would arise to stop the interurban car or check its speed, was incorrect. Galveston-Houston Electric Ry. Co. v. Patella (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 615.

A charge that it is the duty of the engineer and fireman to use all reasonable means on their command consistent with safety to avoid injury is not objectionable, as requiring more than the use of ordinary care as to a person discovered in a perilous position at a crossing. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Pearson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 708.

285. Conversion.—In action by tenant against purchaser from his landlord for money received for pasture land, instruction on conversion of crops held erroneous. Cooke v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 136 S. W. 642.

286. Fraud and undue influence.—In will contest, requested charge, referring to acts of proponent and requiring finding of undue influence if she by false representations procured testator to make no bequest to contestants, held properly refused. Edens v. Cleaves (Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 353.

In an action for fraud in sale of land, an instruction requiring the jury, in order to find for plaintiff, to find that the defendant represented to the plaintiff that he was a true and tried friend of the plaintiff and had superior knowledge of property values, etc., was erroneous, as submitting to the jury as issues merely evidential facts. Klein v. Stahl (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 523.

287. Libel and slander.—In an action for libel by the police judge of a city against a newspaper on account of article, privileged under art. 5527, an instruction in relation to the defense of privilege, which, instead of speaking of actual or express malice as a condition to defendant newspaper's liability spoke of gross negligence, and predicated liability thereon, was erroneous. Express Pub. Co. v. Wilkins (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 614.

300/4. Mental incapacity.—Instruction that if testator had sufficient mind and memory to know and appreciate what he was doing the extent and nature of the property, and the persons he wished to make the objects of his bounty, he had sufficient mental capacity to execute a will was sufficient. Edens v. Cleaves (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 355.

302. Negligence in general.—In action by county against tax collector for moneys unlawfully retained refusal of defendants' requested instruction defining negligence and submitting issues whether the county commissioners were negligent in failing to discover the fraud before certain dates held not error. Powell v. Archer County (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1097.

303. Injuries to employees.—Defendant in servant's action for injury held properly refused an instruction that it could not be guilty of negligence, unless a certain fact be found, other facts which could be found under the evidence warranting a finding of negligence. Liquid Carbonic Co. v. Dilley, 109 Tex. 140, 202 S. W. 216.

In servant's action for injuries instruction requiring as prerequisite to recovery that in boarding moving car plaintiff was performing his duty in manner expected of him, and that switch stand which struck plaintiff was negligently located was not objectionable as permitting recovery on facts constituting plaintiff's negligence. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. v. Stephens, 109 Tex. 185, 203 S. W. 41.

304. — Appliances and places for work.—Instruction that railroad's duty was to have its cars equipped with couplers which worked automatically without going between the cars to make the coupling, was not improper. As confusing preparation of coupler for impact and actual coupling since both acts were part of a larger act regulated by the federal Safety Appliance Act of March 2, 1893. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Sprole (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 985.

305. — Knowledge of defect or danger and duty as to inspection.—Where the foremen of a deferswitching crew knew plaintiff was attempting to couple cars not equipped with automatic couplers, necessitating going between the cars when the foreman gave "kick-back signal" a requested special charge, submitting the question whether the foreman when he gave the signal knew that plaintiff was between cars "and attempting to make the coupling," was properly refused, as making right of recovery dependent upon knowledge of foreman at very instant of time when it was negligence for him not to know. Baker v. Bell (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 245.

306. — Operation of locomotives, trains, or cars.—In an action by an employé against a railroad company for injuries caused by sudden increase of engine's speed while plaintiff was fanconing defendant was entitled to instruction that, if the engineer did not see plaintiff at such time they would return a verdict for defendant. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Wiley (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 823.

In an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665) for a brakeman's death by falling under his train when a defective car going ahead of him dumped coal on the track, evidence held not to render the submission of negligence in general terms erroneous, and to warrant a special charge excluding from consideration the facts as to the uncoupling of the train and the air hose and the bouncing of the coal. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 928.

311. Injuries to passengers.—Where railroad servants called passenger's station before she reached it and induced her to alight, charge that railroad company must have its stations properly announced which required a finding that missing of station was negligence before verdict for plaintiff could be authorized, was correct. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gentry (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 482.

In an action for injuries received by a passenger who alighted before reaching her destination, wrong station being called, a charge held not to submit railroad company's theory of defense. Id.

Where the carrier and the express company pleaded that plaintiff negligently walked into an express truck and received the injuries complained of, a charge that, if plaintiff's alleged negligence was established and was the proximate cause of the injury, the jury should find for defendants, properly protected the rights of the defendants. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Lowery (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 605.

Instructions submitting question whether an ordinarily prudent person would have alighted from street car under the facts related held equivalent to submission of question whether one exercising ordinary care would have done so. Drake v. Northern Texas Traction Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 610.

In action for injury to passenger in collision between two interurban cars instruction that jury must not believe that reasonably prudent persons would have anticipated injury as alleged was erroneous. Southern Traction Co. v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 982.

In an action by passenger for claim that as result of exposure in cold waiting room he contracted la grippe resulting in pneumonia and tuberculosis, instructions submitting those issues held correct. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Shaw (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 814.

A charge, authorizing a verdict for a stock caretaker on a finding that he contracted serious sickness from exposure in leaving the caboose at a place which was unusually or unreasonably, required the jury to consider all the facts and circumstances in evidence, and was not erroneous. Roberts v. Pt. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 954.

313. Injuries at railroad crossings.—In action for injury to person at crossing when struck by crossing car instruction held not erroneous, as inapplicable to the facts, held not solutely liable for falling of coal instead of liable only for failure to use ordinary care. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Duff (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1168.

In a suit for injuries to plaintiff at a crossing in the process of being repaired, due to his horses becoming frightened on account of piles of lumber and a hand car, an instruction for plaintiff not held affirmatively erroneous. Texas Midland R. R. v. Combs (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1178.

Law not fixing limitations as to speed at crossings and court having submitted the issue as to negligence of defendant's car, held it was error to refuse instruction that if the car was operated as persons of ordinary care, caution and prudence would operate under similar circumstances defendant would not be liable. Southern Traction Co. v. Dee (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 992.

Instruction submitting question of railroad's negligence in failing to maintain watchman at a crossing held properly refused because the question of contributory negligence was improperly injected into. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Wentzel (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 710.

Instruction in language of art. 6485, providing that a "railroad shall keep such crossing in a good and workmanlike situation," was proper for the instruction that ordinary care to maintain crossing did not impose an absolute duty on the railroad. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Huckabee (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 666.

317. Injuries in operation of street railroads.—An instruction that if the jury believed that plaintiff was on the street car tracks in a position of peril due to the balking or fright of his horse and the motorman actually discovered him in that position in time to have stopped the car before the collision, but failed to do so, then to find for plaintiff, was not erroneous as imposing a greater duty than the law required. Paris Transit Co. v. Fasnacht (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 762.

319g. Injuries on streets and highways.—In an action for injury sustained in a collision with defendant's automobile which he alleged was being operated in violation of Vernon's Ann. Pen. Code Supp. 1918, arts. 520a-520yy, an instruction that such statute had no application, and that the jury should not consider it in arriving at their verdict, was properly refused. Flores v. Garcia (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 743.

325. Partnership.—In action for partnership accounting, where the partnership articles gave defendant the sole right to demand dissolution, it was not error to refuse to instruct that for plaintiffs to legally demand dissolution on the ground of disagreement the means of such as to make a discontinuance of the partnership unprofitable. Shelton v. Trigg (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 761.

326. Proximate cause.—Instruction on negligence in a servant's action for injury held not misleading because in terms requiring finding that the acts of negligence were proximate cause. Liquid Carbonic Co. v. Dilley. 300 S. W. 2d 293 (Civ. App.) 316.

In action for death at crossing of one driving automobile, special charge on contributory negligence and proximate cause requested by defendant held properly refused, facts grouped therein not necessarily being proximate cause of accident. Texas & O. R. Co. v. Ewing (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 685.

In a servant's action for injuries by the slipping of a defective pipe wrench, causing him to be caught in exposed cogwheels, instructions held erroneous in failing to instruct the jury to find whether the defective wrench or the exposed cogwheels, or both, was the proximate cause of the injuries. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ervin (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 234.

329. Rescission and cancellation.—In action by lessors of oil lands to cancel leases and for damages, instruction held improper as calculated to prejudice right asserted by lessors to forfeit leases by conveying suggestion that right of forfeiture is regarded unfavorably. Munsey v. Marnet Oil & Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 696.

In action to cancel oil leases, instruction limiting jury's consideration to circumstances tending to establish forfeiture by abandonment arising after plaintiffs' purchase of land from original lessors held erroneous. Id.

In an action to set aside transfer of plaintiff's interest in an oil and gas lease because of fraudulent misrepresentations, an instruction that the seller must know "all of the facts with reference to the transaction" was not erroneous by omitting the word "material," such qualification being implied. Zundelowitz v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 593.

In an action to cancel an oil lease for fraud, the court in its instructions should have separated for the jury invitation as to form of the lease from an invitation by the defendants to investigate representations made and relied on for cancellation. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

In such action, an instruction requiring the jury, in order to find for plaintiff, to find that plaintiff exercised diligence to ascertain the falsity of representations relied on by him, was erroneous. Id.

Where, in a suit to cancel an oil lease, an amended petition was filed on the day the trial was commenced, evidence was admissible as to whether the drilling of a well had been prosecuted with due diligence up to the date of the amendment, and an instruction submitting that question properly referred to such date instead of the date of filing of the original petition. Sunshine Oil Corporation v. Randals (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1060.

In a suit to rescind an assignment of interest in an oil lease, for false representations to obtain an option on such interest, an instruction to find for defendants if plaintiff discovered falsity of representations before he signed, and, knowing thereof, executed the transfer was not erroneous, if none of the misrepresentations involved an opinion, but were all statements of actual facts. Waggoner v. Zundelowitz (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 721.

In such action, a special charge that plaintiff did not waive the fraud by signing the transfer after discovering the falsity of representations, unless he knew of defendant's bad faith, was properly refused for failing to submit the question as to whether or not the knowledge had was sufficient to put him in inquiry.

A charge that, unless the plaintiff, before he executed the transfer, knew all the facts with reference thereto, the representations were false, and that the defendant at the time knew the facts and failed to communicate the same, was erroneous, as not confining the necessitating plaintiff's knowledge of bad faith to the one opinion representation that a well being drilled on nearby land was to be a dry hole. Id.

333. Title, ownership, and possession.—In trespass to try title by one who took by inheritance from his mother and gift from his father, instruction that he could not recover unless his father could was not erroneous as instructing to find for defendant because the father was making no claim. Massingill v. Moody (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 255.

337. Wrongful death.—In action for wrongful death, charge held to materially abridge defendant's right of self-defense. Aycock v. McQuerry (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 872.

(C) Damages and Amount of Recovery

In such action, jury could not have been misled into allowing double damages, although court, after having embraced in one paragraph all elements which jury should consider, gave a second paragraph, calling attention to fact that jury could consider seduction not before mentioned. Id.

An instruction that the jury in assessing damages for the death of plaintiff's daughter could consider everything that could reasonably be estimated in money, labor, service, kindness, and attention from a child to its parents held not erroneous as authorizing double recovery, in that several of the terms meant the same thing. Houston Electric Co. v. Flattery (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 960.

342. Mitigation of damages and reduction of loss.—Where facts were admitted showing that employer was within the purview of the Employers' Liability Act held that instruction to diminish damages in proportion employer's negligence bore to that of defendant was correct. Southern Pac. Co. v. Eckenfels (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1003.

In railroad servant's action for injuries while working on defective dirt spreader, special charge held properly refused, on ground facts detailed related, not to contributory negligence, but to absolute defense of assumed risk while charge, in concluding, predicated reduction of damages on any contributory negligence. Hines v. Bannon (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 684.

An instruction as to cooling time, in an action for tarring and feathering plaintiff, in which there was shown, in mitigation of damages, a series of unpatronizing acts by plaintiff, held even if authorized by any evidence, not to make it clear that time for cooling should be computed from the last act of provocation. Walker v. Kaier (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 796.

In action for injuries to the person.—In minor's action for injuries at crossing, charge on damages held correct, and not objectionable as not permitting jury to award plaintiff sum, paid presently, less than he would be entitled to when 21. Southern Traction Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 156.

In action for personal injury, instruction not limiting time for which damages might be allowed for plaintiff's lessened earning capacity, in view of evidence failing to show permanent lessening of earning capacity, held erroneous. Southern Traction Co. v. Dillon (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 698.

In a servant's action for injury where there was evidence of permanent injury, but none of diminished future earning capacity, the charge should be so framed as to definitely submit the different elements of damages to jury, and to exclude all improper elements tested by the pleadings and evidence. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Swift (Civ. App.) 254 S. W. 135.

Where injured passenger sought general damages, but not damages for loss of time or diminished earning capacity, and testified he could no longer work because of injuries received, instruction, submitting what amount would compensate him should have been followed. Instructed consideration of whether plaintiff sustained damages by loss of time or diminished earning capacity; the evidence being insufficient to sustain recovery for damages for loss of time. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. Brown (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 378.

An instruction on the measure of damages for the death of child, allowing the jury to assess a fair compensation for the pecuniary loss sustained, held not improper because it did not specifically authorize a deduction for his maintenance during minority. Southern Portland Cement Co. v. Bustillos (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 268.

In a mother's suit for death of a minor daughter, an instruction defining pecuniary benefits as including kindness and attention of deceased held not erroneous as permitting the assessment of damages of a sentimental nature. Houston Electric Co. v. Flattery (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 950.

Omission of the words "and did expect" from the instruction as to damages for death of plaintiff's son, that the jury might consider the pecuniary benefit that plaintiff had a reasonable right to expect, and did expect, would eliminate a possibility of misconception by the jury. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Francis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 342.

348. Injuries to property.—It was proper in a suit for damages resulting from street improvement to instruct the jury to find the reasonable market value of the property prior to the beginning of the improvements and also just after their completion, leaving the jury to an unlimited field of inquiry and the correct standard of values to work a verdict. Richey v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 214.
Art. 1071  COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN (Title 37

In action for damages to automobile, where there was no prayer for damages for depreciation, an instruction, stating the cost of repairs, and not the depreciation, was the measure of damages, held proper. W. F. Norman & Sons v. Clark (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 235.

In an action for injuries to a shipment of cattle where there was testimony that the railroad company refused to allow the owner's agents to care for animals down in the cars, and that at another point three cars were roughly handled in switching, a requested charge restricting recovery to the three cars was properly refused; there being further testimony that other cars were roughly handled. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 469.

In shipper's action, where the railroad's right to have the jury exclude from the amount of damages found the usual and ordinary losses from shipment or those resulting from the condition of the cattle was safeguarded by the general charge, the carrier was not entitled to a specific instruction, which required the jury to find no damages whatever if they should believe that the injuries were caused in part by impoverished condition of the cattle unless they could separate such damages from those accruing from the negligence of the carrier; for the requested instruction was incorrect and misleading. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Buck (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 891.

If plaintiff's crops had not matured and were not ready for harvesting at the time of injury, the court should not have framed its charge so as to limit the sense of cultivation should be taken into consideration, as well as that of harvesting; also the charge should guard against assessment of any damages for permanent injuries for any period barred by limitation. Payne v. Cummins (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 1118.

A question of reach of contract.—In action for balance under contract where defendant made unconditional tender of a smaller sum, instructions precluding recovery of anything except the amount sued for was error. Bonnett-Brown Sales Service Co. v. Denison Morning Gazette (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1044.

350. Contract of carriage.—In action in delay in shipment of cattle, court properly subtracted shrinkage in weight as an element of damage where there was evidence as to what the shrinkage should have been on the market had they been transported at the usual time, and as to what the cattle actually weighed when sold on the market. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clarendon Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 666.

In action against a transfer company for damages to household goods, an instruction held erroneous as in effect authorizing a recovery for the value of the goods plus the difference between the market value before the damage and after the repair. Empire Transfer & Storage Co. v. Bottlo (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 241.

361. Exemplary damages.—Plaintiff's requested special charge relative to exemplary damages obligating the jury to assess the amount at not less than would be reasonably proportionate to the amount of actual damages, was properly refused. Montgomery v. Gallas (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 557.

III. APPLICABILITY TO PLEADINGS AND EVIDENCE.

Trial courts are required to so instruct juries that the juries may exercise their judgment of cases on the facts under the law, and not independent of the law, and so as to create in their minds a proper conception of the law applicable to the particular case, and shut out of their minds, so far as possible, whatever is calculated to import a misconception of legal requirements as to liability. Patterson v. Williams (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 89.

It is not error to refuse requested charges which are clearly on the weight of the evidence, or are abstract and would confuse rather than assist the jury. Land v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 891.

363. Application of instructions to case in general.—In action for damage to cattle in transit, evidence and issues having no reference to depreciation by crowded condition of pens at destination, instruction that jury should not consider any damage so resulting was properly refused. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 1679.

In an action for rent, where defendant alleged that he had surrendered the premises to the plaintiff and that plaintiff had taken possession thereof and there was evidence pro and con, court properly gave an instruction stating what would constitute a resumption of possession and control. Goodman v. Republic Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 466.

In an action on a fire policy, where there was no pleading or evidence concerning the matter, the court did not err in refusing a charge upon the question of friendly or hostile fire. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. v. Westmoreland (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 471.

In action on fire policy, in absence of pleading and proof to support charges as to whether fire was friendly or hostile, they were properly refused. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 796; National Ben Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Same (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 796.

Where plaintiffs, seeking cancellation of oil and gas lease, did not present issue of want of mental capacity as independent ground for cancellation, while evidence was insufficient to raise such issue, trial court erred in charging that, if plaintiff husband was mentally incapable, the contract was void from the beginning, and the jury should find for plaintiffs. Turner v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 262.

In an action for assault and battery, court did not err in refusing the plaintiff's request to charge that, if plaintiff by his words and acts merely provoked the difficulty, and under such provocation defendants injured plaintiff, the defendants would not be justified, and they should find for the plaintiff, where under the pleading and evidence verbal provocation was alone in issue. Haverbecken v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 256.

364. Pleadings and issues.—Trial court is not warranted in charging upon affirma-
Instructions relating to issues not presented by the pleadings are properly refused.

Refusal to give special instructions was not error, where they were not appropriate in connection with the issues, and would have tended only to confusion in the consideration of those issues. St. Louis Union Trust Co. v. Harbaugh (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 496.

A litigant is entitled to have his defense or cause of action affirmatively submitted, and a general denial is sufficient to require the submission of any defensive issue raised by the evidence which is not required to be specifically pleaded. Galveston, H. & S. A.

366. — Nature of action or issue in general.—An instruction that slander or defamation is a defamation expressed by spoken words by one to another, tending to injure the reputation of the one spoken of, and thereby expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule or financial injury, or to impeach the honesty, integrity or reputation of the party spoken of, held not broader than the petition. Vacelek v. Tro­ jack (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 566.

In contest of will making testator's wife principal beneficiary, on ground of undue influence and mental incompetency, court's refusal to define the part of testator's property which was community property held proper; such matter being foreign to the

368. — Actions relating to property and for injuries thereto.—Where cold storage warehouseman based his claim on the plaintiff's having hung his meat, claimed to have been injured, in the room, there was no error in submitting it

In suit against railroad to recover for horse killed by its motorcar within city limits, submission of question whether city was required by law, an issue not raised, was misleading. Texas City Terminal Co. v. McJee (Civ.
App.) 201 S. W. 673.

Defendant's requested charge that it was not required to operate its plant to suit the wants or sensibilities of others was properly refused, claim to the contrary not being made by plaintiff's pleading or evidence. Texas Refining Co.

369. — Contracts and actions relating thereto in general.—Where plaintiff pleaded contract consummated by correspondence, etc., court did not err in refusing defendant's request to charge that there could be no recovery unless contract was made in certain telephone conversation. West Lumber Co. v. C. R. Cummings Export Co. (Civ.
App.) 196 S. W. 546.

In action for balance alleged to be due under contract, instruction that, if defendants defaulted in payment before cancellation of the contract, to find for plaintiff was error in the absence of a pleading to support it. Bonnett-Brown Sales Service Co. v.
Denison Morning Gazette (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1014.

In suit for services rendered deceased, refusal of requested instruction as to promise of deceased to compensate plaintiff by provision in will, matter not in issue, was not

Where oil and gas lessee in the lessors' suit for cancellation did not allege correcorrespondence between him and lessor, which preceded execution of the lease, the trial court did not err in refusing to declare the legal effect of such correspondence, and to submit the issue to the jury. Turner v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 252.

In an action for procuring an exchange of lands a petition answered by general defense, held sufficient basis to invoke submission of a special charge presenting defendant owner's theory that he effected an exchange of the land himself. McBryo v. Dobbs (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 674.

370. — Contracts of carriage.—In consignee's action for damage to bananas in transit, defended on ground that conductor obeyed instructions of messenger accon­ ting shipment, it was error to fail to submit issue raised by such defense. Gulf, C.

In action for delay in live stock shipment, where, under issues submitted, no damage arising after the delivery of the shipment to certain stock yards, could have been considered. It was proper to refuse carrier's requested charges that its liability termin­
S. W. 693.

In an action for damage to a shipment of cattle, an instruction on detention of cattle in cars without food, water, or rest was error, where there was no such issue raised

In action against receivers and railroads for damage to a shipment of cattle, charge of negligence, found as to whether either receiver was guilty of the acts charged, and whether such acts were negligence and the proximate cause of the injuries complained of, held erroneous, under this article, as too broad, as permitting the jury to consider an issue of negligence not pleaded, and as not confining issues to specific negligence
372. — Contracts of sale and actions relating thereto.-An instruction, in action for price of goods, authorizing the jury to find that there was no contract, on the ground that there was no meeting of minds as to how the price should be fixed, is properly refused, plaintiff by his petition alleging in the alternative that, if it be found the contract was not as claimed by him, then he seeks a recovery on the contract as claimed by defendant. Smith v. Duncan (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 140.

374. — Actions on notes.—In suit on promissory note and to foreclosure vendor's lien, in view of pleadings, held that court properly submitted to jury issue whether it was understood between plaintiff and defendant, at time of execution and delivery of deed and note, that defendant should assume payment of taxes. Baldwin v. Drew (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 636.

In suit on note, where defendant pleaded that plaintiff had bought reality from him, and that he was entitled to additional credit, and asked that the note be canceled, and plaintiff alleged that deed was a mortgage, and it was shown that plaintiff had reconveyed to defendant who had recorded the deed, the issue whether deed was absolute or a mortgage was not in the case, and it was error to submit it to the jury. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Garth (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 604.

375. — Injuries in operation of railroads in general.—A complaint, in an action for death alleging that deceased was rightfully upon the track in the night, justified an instruction suggesting that deceased "was on the motorcar, or standing or lying down near." Baker v. Loftin (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 159.

Refusal of an instruction drawing distinction as to whether defendant's street car ran into the automobile or the automobile ran into the street car was not error, where the petition was broad enough to cover either phase of the case. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Benjamin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 996.

In an action by one injured while riding in an automobile which collided with a street car, an instruction submitting negligence of defendant held within the pleadings. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Crump (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 827.

Plaintiff shipper having alleged his injuries were caused by a certain negligent act of "one of the train crew," it was improper to submit the issue whether or not some other act of defendant was guilty of the act of negligence charged. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 773.

In action against street railroad for injuries to jitney passenger riding on running board, when jitney collided with street car, the pleading held to have justified charge submitting issue of jitney driver's negligence, where court directed finding that passenger was negligent in riding on running board, since jury could not have understood such charge to have reference to violation of ordinance by driver, Dallas Ry. Co. v. Eaton (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 318.

376. — Injuries to employés.—In employé's action for injuries caused by railway motorcar running into open switch, instruction as to defects or insufficiency of appliances, etc., though inapplicable, held not misleading. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. McCallister (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1082.

In servant's action for injuries occasioned by the improper turning of a switch by another servant, in submitting the question of negligence as to turning a switch the charge should be confined to such single servant, and submission of question whether defendant, "through its employés or agents," was guilty of "negligence" in turning the switch, etc., was improper. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Sherbey (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 758.

379. — Contributory negligence.—In an action against a street railroad for wrongful death in crossing accident, it was proper to refuse an instruction that deceased was guilty of contributory negligence if he failed to look and listen for the approaching street car, where such act of contributory negligence was not pleaded. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Terrazas (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 337.

In an action for injuries by driving over an unsafe place between railroad tracks, an instruction that, if plaintiff failed to use ordinary care, she would be guilty of negligence was properly refused where the contributory negligence pleaded was that she did not drive in a place of safety. Schaff v. Hollin (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 279.

In such action, an instruction that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence if she paid no attention to where she was driving was properly refused as not within the issue. Id. Refusal of instructions, submitting contributory negligence not pleaded, held proper. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Martin (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 319.

In an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665) for death of a brakeman when a defective car ahead of him dumped coal on the tracks and portion of the tender, 16 inches on the pin ladder between cars held not in sufficiently pleaded to require submission of his negligence in doing so. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

381. — Assumption of risk.—In action for injuries sustained when motorcar ran into open switch, instruction as to when defense of assumption of risk was not available held proper because inapplicable under the pleadings. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. McCallister (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1082.

In a railway employé's action for injuries sustained while alighting from a moving train, assumed risk as an extraordinary incident to the employment was properly withheld from the jury where not pleaded. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kornegay (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 708.
In a servant's action against a master for personal injury, where the defense of assumed risk was not pleaded, the court was not in error in failing to submit that issue. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ervin (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 234.

Where there was no question submitted by the court requiring a definition of assumed risk or a charge on that subject, a special charge, directing the jury to consider whether defendant assumed the risk by sawing without a guide they should return a verdict for the defendant on the "issues submitted in reference thereto," was misleading and erroneous. Worden v. Kroeger (Com. App.) 219 S. W. 1094.

382. — Amount of recovery.—Where shipper claims damages to stock for time not used and, because carrier did not ship them on certain train, it was error to instruct generally that plaintiff's measure of damages would be different in market value in which they were when they reached the pens and condition they should have been in had there been no delay, where shipper had put stock in pens days before they were to be shipped. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Stinson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 476.

In an action by one tarred and feathered and chased out of the county, where the damage alleged was loss of profits caused by inability to give his personal services to his business, a charge, authorizing the jury to allow him the "loss sustained in his business as the direct result of his so being driven from his home and business," was erroneous, as authorizing recovery of losses not pleaded. Walker v. Kellar (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 792.

The court was not warranted in submitting requested charges upon issues not raised by evidence. Parry v. Davich (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 249.

The refusal of a request based on a theory in conflict with the uncontested testimony is proper. Durham v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 138.

A requested instruction was properly refused, where there was no proof upon which to base it. Missouri Iron & Metal Co. v. Cartwright (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 397.

It is error to submit an issue to the jury in reference to which there is no evidence, or to withdraw an issue from the jury raised by the evidence, if in the first case the jury were probably misled, or if the issue withdrawn was material. Crawford v. Thos. Goggan & Bros. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1106.

Charge need not on request be given on an issue as to which there is not sufficient evidence to require its submission. Hines v. Parry (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 339.

385. — Evidence excluded or withdrawn or improperly admitted.—The admission of evidence inadmissible under the pleadings did not authorize the court to submit the issue raised by such evidence. Lipscomb v. Adamson Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 228.

386. — Nature of action or issue in general.—Judgment for defendant will be reversed where the case was submitted to jury on the theory of estoppel, while the evidence raised the issue of novation. Grossman Co. v. F. De Witt & Son (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 322.

Where trial judge sought to leave the jury, not only the findings of facts, but also whether in law they were sufficient to render further relation of husband and wife inadmissible, he should have carefully applied the law to the facts, and not simply announced abstract propositions of law in his charge. McNabb v. McNabb (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 129.

387. — Actions relating to property in general.—In action for diverting surface water upon plaintiff's land, held that court should submit issue as to injury being caused by other parties when evidence tends to show such fact. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Wright (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 606.

Instruction defining a trust held inapplicable to the facts which raised issue of appointing defendants as agents or trustees to invest money deposited with them. Murphy-Bolanz Land & Loan Co. v. McKibben (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 650.

A requested instruction that the course and distance from a located corner should control rather than marked trees, not called for by the field notes, was properly refused, where only the evidence locating the beginning point was the testimony of an interested witness, which the jury might have disbelieved. West Lumber Co. v. Goodrich (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 156, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Goodrich v. West Lumber Co., 182 S. W. 341.

Where the defense to trespass to try title was adverse possession, and there was no evidence that defendants entered on the land expecting to acquire it from the state, it was not error to refuse to submit the latter issue. Padgett v. Hines (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 558.

388. — Actions for torts in general.—Evidence held to warrant charge that, if there was no contract by which mule was turned over by plaintiff to defendant, there was want of probable cause on part of defendant. Bukowski v. Williams (Civ. App.) 138 S. W. 342.

Evidence held not to warrant charge that, if contract by which defendant claimed to have acquired mule was made, it would constitute probable cause for prosecution for theft of mule. Id.

In lessee's action for wrongful dispossession, there being nothing to show whether he could under his lease sublet the premises, it was not error to refuse to submit whether he had arranged to sublet the premises. McCauley v. McElroy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 517.
Where defendants had2quested and releved goats in an action for conversion, it was not error to refuse to instruct for defendants if the jury believed that the goats were taken from a certain range in Mexico by plaintiff's brother by unlawful means as against an assignment that the undisputed testimony showed that the goats were so taken. Garcia v. Hernandez (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 1098.

390. Negligence in general.—Where negligence was shown beyond dispute, and defendants did not concede same, thereby eliminating such issue, they cannot complain that instructions submitted too many issues, where there was evidence justifying their submission. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 343.

391. Personal injuries in general.—In action for injuries sustained by pedestrian run down by an automobile, held, under the evidence, that court did not err in refusing to give special charge submitting issue whether chauffeur was an employee or servant of defendant. Burnett v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 540.

392. Injuries to passengers.—In action for injuries while attempting to board street car, it was not error to refuse to instruct, intending to catch car, where evidence showed that she had actually seized handholds and put her foot on step. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Crouch (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 781.

In an action by a passenger, who, when struck by an alighting passenger, fell as she was mounting the step of the car, a special charge on the duty of carrier to assist passengers held properly refused under the evidence, as the act of the other passenger was an unexpected occurrence. Eird v. Schaff (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 711.

393. Injuries to servants.—In a servant's action for injuries sustained while attempting to board a switch engine, an instruction, if the engineer increased speed upon approaching a semaphore, did not see plaintiff and did not stop, was erroneous; there being no testimony that the speed was increased because of the semaphore. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Wiley (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 823.

394. Assumption of risk.—In action for injuries sustained when motorcar ran a stop sign in response to instruction as to stopping not to assume risk, though correct, held erroneous, because inapplicable to the evidence. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. McCallister (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1082.

An instruction that a servant is presumed to understand the risks incident to his being on top of the tender or tank of an oil-burning locomotive held improper, under the evidence. Southern Pac. Co. v. Hazelbush (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 268.

Where injured servant's testimony disclosed that he was legally chargeable with knowledge of some of the dangerous conditions, requested instruction that he did not assume them without time under orders, the danger was improper. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Miller (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1049.

In an employe's action for personal injury, a charge on assumed risk should not be given, where there was no evidence on which to base it. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Streater (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 130.

In a railway employe's action for injuries sustained while alighting from a moving train which failed to stop as was customary, it was not necessary to submit the law of assumed risk as an ordinary incident to the employment, where there was no evidence thereof. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kornegsay (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 798.

Contributory negligence.—Refusal of instructon on contributory negligence of injured servant was not error where there was no evidence of such negligence. San Antonio Portland Cement Co. v. Gschwender (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 967; Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Carpenter (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 270.

Plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, it occurred from his action in approaching a railroad crossing, charge on imminent peril in reference to plaintiff urging his mules, in trying to cross the track just ahead of the car held error. Southern Traction Co. v. Geo (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 952.

A charge that it was the duty of the servant to have acquainted himself with the general duties of his position, etc., held improper, where there was no evidence as to any neglect of his duties, he being an electrician and under no duty to guard the premises against explosions. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Challen (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 212.

In an action for injuries sustained by being struck by interurban car, while endeavoring to signal it to stop, a requested instruction, that plaintiff could not recover if she knew that the car was a special car and did not make local stops, was properly refused, where there was no evidence that plaintiff had such knowledge. Texas Electric Ry. v. Hooks (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 654.

Instructions in a negligence case need not refer to contributory negligence, where there is no evidence raising the issue. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Crump (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 827.

In an action for injuries sustained by plaintiff, struck by train at a crossing while riding in an automobile driven by another, an instruction that the failure of another passenger to observe the approaching train was contributory negligence imputable to plaintiff held properly refused, as placing upon such other passenger the duty of stopping the car, when it was not shown that he had any control thereof. Baker v. Streater (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1093.
Such instruction held properly refused as not based upon evidence sufficient to raise the issue of joint enterprise. Id.

In an action for the death of an automobile driver at an interurban crossing, where there was no contention that the driver did not have a right to be where he was and the evidence barely supported an inference of freedom from contributory negligence, it was misleading to give a correct charge that the driver had a right equal to the interurban company to use the street. Galveston-Houston Electric Ry. Co. v. Patella (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 615.

396. — Discovered peril.—In action for injuries sustained by pedestrian run down by an automobile, special requested charge on discovered peril held not erroneous, as against objection that there was no evidence that chauffeur saw plaintiff. Burnett v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 540.

In an action by a motorist struck at a crossing, the submission of issue of discovered peril held justified, the fireman testifying that he saw the automobile approaching the crossing. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Laird (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 305.

397. — Contracts and actions relating thereto in general.—Evidence showing that agent no longer had authority to agree to deliver threshing machine parts within specified time, court should have given a special charge submitting question of implied authority. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 922.

There was no evidence of ratification of an agent's act, it was error to instruct on question of brokers' agent being the agent of tenant in procuring a lease for landlord was properly refused, where there was no evidence on such question. Brady v. Richey & Casev (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 176.

In an action may not be authorized to find that there was no meeting of minds, but should be left to find, under all the evidence, what the real contract was, there being no contention that a contract was not made, especially where the contract has been executed by one party, and the controversy is as to a particular term of the contract. Smith & Dcretam (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 149.

A general charge purporting to instruct particularly on question of abstract law cannot be challenged on the ground that there was no issue to the act, which was one relating to the existence of an alleged lost deed, was insufficient to take the matter to the jury. Brown v. Williams (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 606.

398. — Contracts of carriage.—In action for injuries to cattle from delay in transit and bedding of herd with cinders, held, under the evidence, court properly refused to charge that jury should not consider shrinkage in weight because no damage was shown by shrinkage for which defendant was liable. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 398 S. W. 172.

That there was no evidence or negligence against carrier for injuries to mules in transit, instruction presenting issue of carrier's negligence in not preventing injury to mules caused by proper vice or propensities of animals held unsupported by evidence. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Helma Bros. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 853.

Refusal of instruction as to the act of God in destroying the cabbage shipped was not error, where the decayed condition of the cabbage was not traced to low temperature, and there was no fact sustaining such a theory. Rio Grande & E. P. Ry. v. J. H. Russell & Son (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 530.

Refusal of instruction asked by initial carrier as to the freezing of the cabbage was not error, where there was no evidence tending to show that the cabbage had frozen. Id.

In action for delay in delivery of live stock shipment, where there was no testimony of any contract to transport the shipment to place of its destination, the court erred in submitting that issue and authorizing a recovery thereon. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 552.

In a shipper's action for injuries to live stock, it was not error to refuse to instruct that there was no evidence of the kind or character of the animals killed, and in no event to find value in excess of the cheapest grade of animals in the shipment, where there was evidence that the dead animals were an average of the shipment. Rio Grande, E. P. & S. F. R. Co. v. Kraft & Madero (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 981.

In action for injuries to live stock, it was not error to refuse to instruct that defendant was not liable for injuries occurring while the cattle were being switched by another road at destination, where such road was not acting as a connecting carrier, but as defendant's agent to do the switching. Id.

In an action for injuries to live stock, it was not error to refuse to instruct that defendant was not liable for injuries occurring while the cattle were being switched by another road at destination, where such road was not acting as a connecting carrier, but as defendant's agent to do the switching. Id.

In an action against initial carrier and connecting carriers for loss of cattle, the court erred in submitting an issue as to the liability of the connecting carriers, where the evidence was undisputed that the cattle were lost while in the hands of the initial carrier. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clarendon Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 866.

In a shipper's action for damages to a shipment of hogs, submission of negligence on the carrier's part in failing to water the hogs held erroneous in view of the shipping contract which required the caretaker to look after that matter. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Griffith (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 688.

400. — Contracts of sale and actions relating thereto.—In action on note depended on ground of breach of warranty, in the absence of evidence that alleged warranty was mere statement of opinion, instruction that defendant was not liable it the alleged warranty was mere statement of opinion was erroneous. Lewis v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 296.

In an action for the removal of fixtures, it was error to submit to the jury the question of fraud, accident, and mutual mistake in omitting reference to the fixtures from the contract of sale of the land, where there was no evidence raising such issue. Alexander v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 295.

An instruction that an exhibit on billhead of seller amounted to an offer to sell, and that, if it was communicated to defendant and accepted and the acceptance was communicated to the seller, then the relarer became bound to deliver and defendant to accept, held erroneous: defendant's agent having denied receiving any offer to sell or communicated any acceptance, and the exhibit tending to show on its face that the sale was made to a third person. El Paso Grain & Milling Co. v. Lawrence (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 512.

Where defendant had sequestered and releved goats for which plaintiff sued in conversion, it was not error to refuse to instruct as to reservation of title as security for purchase money, under art. 5654, the evidence showing a delivery to vendee on the understanding that title should not pass until payment made. Garcia v. Hernandez (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 192.

401. — Actions on insurance policies.—An instruction concerning an understanding that a premium note should not be paid in any event, and that the execution of the note would keep alive a life insurance policy, and as to insurers making insured belief that there was no testimony of such matters. Atiia Life Ins. Co. v. Dunken (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 241.

Absence of evidence by a fire insurer as to value of remnant of building and cost of removal thereof did not preclude the insurer from total loss, and submission of the issue whether a reasonably prudent owner, uninsured, desiring to reconstruct, would utilize the remnant as a basis therefore. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Strayhorn (Com. App.) 211 S. W. 447.

In a policy, where there was no evidence that plaintiff procured the destruction of the property, refusal of requested special charge, submitting such question, was proper. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 755; National Ben Franklin Fire Ins. Co. v. Same (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 796.

407. — Extent of injury and amount of recovery.—Where evidence showed that automobile injured in shipment was not valueless after being repaired by carrier, instruction based on value "in the event of total destruction," held erroneous. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Iversen (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 908.

In railroad's condemnation proceedings the court properly refused a requested charge that the jury should not consider injuries, if any, which the owners sustained in common with the community in general, where there was no evidence that the community generally sustained injury. Golf & Interstate Ry. Co. of Texas v. Stephen­ son (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 215.

In an action for breach of a contract of lease, it was error to instruct that plaintiff was entitled to the reasonable market value of two-thirds of the grain and fourths of the cotton which plaintiff would in reasonable probability have grown, where there was no evidence that plaintiff was to pay a part of the crops, and no evidence showing the kind of crops the plaintiff expected to plant and grow, or the price or value of farm products during the year. Williams v. Gardner (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 381.

The words "physical pain" do not include mental distress, but mean bodily suffering, although a strong mental emotion may produce bodily injury and cause bodily suffering, so as to justify instruction allowing recovery for physical pain and also mental distress was error, where there was evidence of mental distress, but not of physical pain. Walker v. Kellar (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 792.

In an action for seller's breach of sale contract, it was not error to refuse to submit the issue of buyer's diligence and lessen the damages, where the evidence made no issue such; the contract being for immediate delivery and the evidence showing prompt purchasing at test obtainable price immediately after breach. Russell v. Safold (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 281.

In action involving damages for loss of use of personality for over two years, court should have given requested charge that the jury should not base their estimate on the daily, weekly, or monthly value of the use, but determine the value of the use for the entire period, though testimony as to monthly value had been admitted without objection, and refusal was not justified, because charge was on weight of evidence. Montgomery v. Gallais (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 557.

408. Instructions excluding or ignoring issues, defenses, or evidence.—A special charge ignoring an issue of fact clearly presented by the evidence is properly refused. Southern Traction Co. v. Rogan (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1156.

410. — Nature of action or issue in general.—In trespass to try title, court erred in not giving an instruction requested by a party claiming by limitations merely because it omitted to require a finding of cultivation, use, or enjoyment of the property, shown by undisputed testimony; the only issue being whether or not the use was adverse. Cass v. Green (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 938, opinion supplemented 227 S. W. 598.

413. — Personal injuries in general.—In action against interurban railroad for injuries at crossing, court's requested charge, which would have eliminated every issue save that of discovered peril, was properly refused. Southern Traction Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 150.

In action for injuries in collision, where plaintiff alleged defendant was violating Pen. Code 1911, arts. 815, and 816, held error to submit only recovery under article 815. Figueroa v. Madero (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 271.

In action for death of plaintiff's decedent struck by train, it was not error to refuse special charge that, unless jury believed that decedent was struck while upon road crossing, they could not find for plaintiff; such instruction ignoring issue of discovered peril, and requiring finding for defendant, unless decedent was at crossing when struck. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Luten (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 909.

In action for injuries from being run over by defendant's automobile, a charge on plaintiff's contributory negligence held not affirmatively erroneous, as taking from jury's consideration the defense that the accident was unavoidable. Thomas v. Corbett (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 806.

It was not error to refuse instructions ignoring plaintiff's claim of mental incapacity urged against settlement for injuries as defense to action for such injuries. Schaff v. Hollar (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 279.

In action for death of jitney car passenger in collision with train at crossing, where there was evidence of negligence in failing to maintain watchman at crossing, requested charge, eliminating such issue, held properly refused. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Wentzel (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 710.

In action for death of jitney car passenger in collision with train, instruction on eliminating issues of negligence and contributory negligence, and authorizing recovery on mere proof of damage sustained. Id.

In an action for the death of an oil mill employee, killed by a railroad's car during switching operations on the mill's spur track, instruction held not erroneous, as ignoring the fact that the switch employee had been instructed with the switching, or as ignoring the effect which the information, given by a brakeman to decedent when the operations were begun, had upon the railroad's liability. Jefferson & N. W. Ry. Co. v. Blair (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 546.

In action for damages for assault and battery, a charge that, if, after the original demonstration ceased, defendants or any of them assaulted plaintiff, it would not be justified, was properly refused as being too broad, where there was evidence that plaintiff attempted to attack some of the defendants after the original alleged hostile demonstration. Johnson v. Haaverbekken (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 256.

Contributory negligence and assumption of risk.—A charge that, if plaintiff knew of the defects in the machinery and appliances and failed to notify the master and continued in the service, he assumed the risk held properly refused, because it ignored defendant's negligence in furnishing a dangerous place to work, the danger being unknown to plaintiff. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Challen (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 213.

An instruction that a servant assumed the risks and dangers usually and naturally incident from his employment, but which ignores the rule that he does not assume risks due to master's negligence, is improper. Id.

In action by employee injured in handling heavy barrel unaled, plaintiff's requested charge that he did not assume the risk by remaining in defendant's employ if his superiors knew of the manner of doing and danger from the work was faulty in ignoring the defense that the injury resulted from a danger ordinarily incident to the business. Swann v. Texas & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1131.

Where injured servant's testimony disclosed that he was legally chargeable with knowledge of some of the dangerous conditions, it was error to charge that he could recover if the master was negligent. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Miller (Civ. App.) 301 S. W. 1049.

In action for death in collision at crossing, instruction on railroad's negligence in failing to keep watchmen at crossing was erroneous, where it authorized recovery upon a finding of such negligence as the proximate cause of the accident, irrespective of finding of contributory negligence. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Shookley (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 716.

In action for negligence in failing to provide an adequate force for the work, defined on the ground of assumed risk, it was reversible error to give a charge ignoring the elements of article 6645, that the defense of assumed risk could not be available where plaintiff's foreman knew of the defect or danger prior to the injury. Thornhill v. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 490.

Contributory negligence in failing to keep watchmen at crossing was erroneous, where it authorized recovery upon a finding of negligence of the company as the proximate cause of the accident, irrespective of finding of contributory negligence. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Harrington (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 685.

Injuries to passengers.—An instruction predating liability on failure to stop a train to let plaintiff off, without taking into consideration whether failure to stop was proximate cause of injury, was erroneous. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kornets (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 1100.

Injuries to servants.—In the action by a switchman to recover for personal injuries, requested charges which ignored the issue of negligence of a fellow

In a railway employee's personal injury action, requested charges, ignoring the negligence of plaintiff's assistants were properly refused. Payne v. Harris (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 350.

418. Contracts and actions relating thereto in general.—Failure to submit issues relating to validity of release net by defendants held not to destroy plaintiff's right to have such issues submitted and warrant special charges ignoring them. Southern Traction Co. v. Hogan (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1135.

In a suit to recover on notes given in purchase of a silo, it was not error to submit the question whether the silo complied with the written guaranty, ignoring a verbal guaranty relied on by defendant, where there was no material difference between the two guaranties. Dark v. Indiana Silo Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 246.

Instruction that, if seller sent bill of lading and demurrage for car load other than agreed on, causing delay in delivery and accrual of demurrage, buyer could refuse to accept car load unless plaintiff paid demurrage was error, where there was evidence, ignored by such instruction, that buyer agreed to accept and pay demurrage upon a rebate in price. Lillard Milling Co. v. Brooks & Fow (Civ. App.) 117 S. W. 685.

In action on fire policies, where pleadings and evidence raised issues whether adjuster's agreement covered only property inventoried or all property insured, court properly refused insurer's charge that, if jury found for plaintiff, they should fix amount of his recovery in accordance with adjuster's agreement. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Goodman (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 142.

In an action for rescission of a conveyance of land which plaintiff exchanged for an interest in an oil and gas lease, where plaintiff asserted defendant's failure to grant in oil and gas lease was fraudulent, a charge which ignored the right of plaintiff to rescind, etc., and presented only defendant's claim that he was to receive an additional consideration for the lease, was properly refused. Long v. Calloway (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 414.

Where plaintiff's insurance and蓁 defendant on the ground that member met his death while in violation of law, etc., a charge that, if it could not be determined whether the member had made or attempted to make an unlawful assault, and in consequence thereof met his death, verdict should be for plaintiff, was erroneous, authorizing a verdict for plaintiff without requiring a finding on the defensive issue. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World, v. Bailey (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 560, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 107.

Where there was evidence that insurer's agent had waived tender of the premium by declining an offer to pay it unless an unauthorized bonus was also paid, a requested charge that plaintiff could not recover unless the money was actually tendered and refused by an authorized agent was properly refused as omitting the issue of waiver. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Allen (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 823.

A requested special charge defining tender as an actual production of the money and offering of it was properly refused as ignoring the issue of waiver of the actual production of the money, where there was evidence to support a finding of such waiver. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Allen (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 823.

420. Damages and amount of recovery.—In action for death of plaintiff's son, instruction that jury might consider net value of his services during minority, without requiring consideration of plaintiff's expenses on his account during minority, held erroneous. Southern Traction Co. v. Dillon (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 698.

In action by tenant for landlord's failure to permit him to cultivate rented lands, instructions allowing damages as damages reasonable cash market value of plaintiff's share of crops he might have raised thereon held to erroneously pretermitted consideration of expense of making and gathering crops. Butler v. Perdue (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1176.

IV. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION.

422. Construction of particular instructions.—Instruction not to consider testimony of witness in determining issue of plaintiff's right to recover, but only on issue of amount of plaintiff's recovery, if any, held not to forbid consideration of witness' testimony on issue of credibility of plaintiff or a witness. Freeman v. Bennett (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 238.

In action for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff pedestrian when run down by an automobile, driven by defendant's chauffeur, held, that court's main charge was not subject to objection that it submitted issue of discovered peril. Burnett v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 540.

In an action by a wife and her husband for personal injuries sustained by the wife, an instruction permitting recovery for "the reasonable value of lost services to plaintiff in the performance of her household duties," could not be construed to have authorized any recovery in behalf of husband for the value to him for the lost services of his wife. Ayo v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 979.

In action to enjoin parol trust upon deed, instruction as to the effect of the failure of consideration held not to withdraw the question of whether consideration mentioned in deed was in fact paid upon the issue of existence of the trust, but merely instructed jury that, if trust was not intended, the failure to pay the consideration could not in itself have the effect to constitute the transaction one of trust. Carl v. Settegast (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 596.

In an instruction as to justification for burial of a body without consent of the widow which stated in the alternative several situations indicating abandonment by the widow and then stated, "and if you further believe" that the burial was made by plaintiff without intending to derive the widow of her privileges, the last clause qualifies all preceding ones so that the instruction does not deny recovery in certain cases without v. Benefit finding of good faith. Foster v. Foster (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 215. W. 551.

In action under Federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8857-8865), for injuries to roundhouse hostler, instruction held not to submit question of whether railroad failed to install the ash pan required by Ash Pan Act (U. S. Comp. St. § 4824), as against evidence that there was no evidence of such failure, but merely to submit issue as to whether the ash pan was in proper repair. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smithers (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 637.

426. Construction and effect of charge as a whole.—Charge of court should be considered as construed as whole. Shipley v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 661.

427. Nature of error or omission in general.—In an action to join the maintenance and operation of a hog ranch and for damages, an instruction defining nuisance as "anything that works-hurt, inconvenience, or damage to another, either in his person or his estate, in such manner as to constitute a nuisance, adding to defendant's requested charge, that erection of the building gave no cause of action, the words, "unless in the operation thereof a nuisance was created," was not misleading. Texas Refining Co. v. Sartain (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 355.

In an action for personal injuries, in action, for injuries, in action, personal injuries, in which buyer, in purchasing, in cross-action, sued for damages because of inferior quality of goods, an instruction authorizing a recovery for plaintiff upon finding that goods were delivered as alleged and not paid for. "unless you find for defendant on his cross-action," held not to preclude a recovery for seller, when viewed together with another charge as whole. St. Louis, Dodge & Fadgit Bros. Co. v. Dorsey (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 397.

Objections that an instruction is based on evidence of a common-law marriage omitted the requirements that the agreement must be for life, and that the cohabiting must be public, are not well founded, where instructions as a whole properly cover such matters. Bobbitt v. Buhit (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 478.

428. Negligence in general.—In an electric lineman's action for injuries, instruction that defendant's foreman informed plaintiff that certain wires were not charged, held not erroneous, in view of the whole charge and in connection with the issues denoted by the evidence, as suggesting the existence of a circumstance which the proof showed did not exist. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Lee (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 497.

430. Contributory negligence and assumption of risk.—In an action for death of a person who, after having alighted from defendant's train, boarded it again, and immediately tried to get off to get to another train, whereby he was killed, instructions construing a request for contributory negligence, in view of erroneous as requiring as a prerequisite to a verdict for defendant that the jury find both that deceased left the train without being induced to do so by the porter and that he was guilty of contributory negligence in so doing. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Keith (Com. App.) 204 S. W. 691.

In a cross-action on a personal injury, in which the jury in previous paragraphs of the charge were directed to find for plaintiff if defendant was guilty of negligence specified, yet as subsequent paragraphs declared there should be no recovery if plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, the charge as a whole was not objectionable. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Pearman (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 708.

A special charge which is antagonistic upon a material issue to some other portion of the charge is reversible error, although the instruction given in the other portion of the charge is correct. Lillard Milling Co. v. Brooks & Few (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 686.

Erroneous parts of court's charge, complained of, which were rendered harmless by the whole charge, directed to find for plaintiff if defendant was guilty of negligence specified, yet as subsequent paragraphs declared there should be no recovery if plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, the charge as a whole was not objectionable. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Pearman (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 708.

436. Issues and theories of case in general.—In action to recover penalty for failure of railway to comply with art. 6592, an instruction to find for the state in either of two alternative contingencies held not cured by a contradictory instruction to find for defendant in one of such contingencies. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. State, 110 Tex. 215, 216 S. W. 392.

Error in a charge denying right of recovery on finding of fact insufficient to bar recovery is not cured by subsequent paragraphs of the charge authorizing recovery without requiring an opposite finding on those facts, since that merely made the charge contradictory. Pope v. Beauchamp, 110 Tex. 271, 219 S. W. 447.

A charge which does not embody correct standards by which to determine liability generally vitiates the whole charge, even though the correct standards are elsewhere contained in the charge. Patterson v. Williams (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 89.

Negligence in general.—In employee’s action for injuries caused by railway motorcar running on open track, instruction sustains while alighting, submission conjunctively of separate issues of negligence held not to have misled jury to prejudice of plaintiff, in view of the evidence and the other instructions. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. McCalister (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1062.

In action against railway for injuries to plaintiff’s wife while alighting, submission conjunctively of separate issues of negligence held not to have misled jury to prejudice of plaintiff, in view of the evidence and the other instructions. Shiple v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 661.

In employee’s action for injuries sustained while alighting from a train, an instruction for plaintiff if the facts relied on by him constituted negligence was not erroneous, as directing a verdict without a finding of proximate cause, in view of other instructions given. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kornegay (Civ. App.) 266 S. W. 703.

Instruction that automobile driver was not negligent if he was not driving “at a rate of speed that was dangerous and improper under the circumstances” held erroneous, in that it permitted jury to establish its own standards as to what constituted “dangerous” and “improper” driving, notwithstanding that court in other portion of the charge correctly instructed jury as to what constituted liability. Palter v. Williams (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 89.

In action for death of pedestrian struck at crossing, error in charging jury that the railroad was required to use great care and prudence in operating trains held not cured by subsequent instructions. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Luten (Com. App.) 239 S. W. 159.

Contributory negligence.—A portion of a charge in a negligence case that omitted the duty of plaintiff to use ordinary care to avoid being injured was not error, where the charge correctly stated the ordinary care required of plaintiff. Baker v. Loftin (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 159.

In action for death in collision between train and automobile at crossing, erroneous charge that traveler at crossing had equal rights with train held not cured by charge that if he failed to exercise reasonable care he could not recover. Baker v. Collins (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 519.

Error, if any, in failing to submit in main charge issue of contributory negligence was cured by the giving of two requested instructions on such issue. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Carpenter (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 570.

Contention that from special instruction given jury might have believed that railroad company owed plaintiff employed no duty even after discovering his peril, is not tenable, in view of instruction that duty of operators of train to use ordinary care was not diminished or dispensed with because plaintiff might have been wrongfully upon the track. Frick v. International & G. N. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 198.

An instruction to find for plaintiff if they believed defendant was guilty of negligence in the particular specified, without reference to contributory negligence, of which there was evidence, was not rendered harmless by another instruction to find for defendant if they believed plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Roach-Manigan Paving Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 182.

In action for injuries to jitney car passenger in collision with train, an instruction on discovered peril, erroneous in requiring trainmen to anticipate danger to deceased though it resulted from her negligence, was not cured by instruction requiring jury to find that deceased and other occupants of car were not conscious of the near approach of train. Chicago, K. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Wentzel (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 718.

Assumption of risk.—In a servant’s action for injuries, an instruction in effect that, if plaintiff’s injury was not incident to his employment, he was entitled to recover, was not objectionable as ignoring the issues of negligence and contributory negligence, where other instructions preceding and following it fully and properly presented the issues claimed to be omitted; the situation not presenting a case of conflicting instructions. Texas Electric Ry. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 823.

Evidence and matters of fact in general.—In action against bank for negligence in collecting draft, in which defendant admitted plaintiff’s right to recover except in so far as its demand might be defeated by facts pleaded by defendant, any error in instructing that burden was on plaintiff to show negligence in failing to collect the drafts held harmless, in view of the other instructions given. Central Exch. Nat. Bank of Waco v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 660.

In slander action any error in not charging on burden of proof in main charge was cured by giving of request of defendant that qualified privilege was claimed, and that burden of proof of malice was on plaintiff. Vacek v. Trojacek (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 605.

In will contest, error, if any, in instructing the jury not to consider evidence introduced by proponent tending to show undue influence was cured by other instructions requiring the jury to consider “all the facts and circumstances in evidence before you” on such issue. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 716.

Invasion of province of Jury.—In an action for a balance due for the cutting of hay, a charge stating that plaintiff sued defendant for the sum of $151.65, the balance due upon a sworn account for cutting and baling hay, held, in view of the instruction requiring the jury to consider “all the facts and circumstances in evidence before you” on such issue. Cochran v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 253.

In an action against a carrier for damages to live stock, instructions submitting special issues held not prejudicial to defendant because assuming the existence of facts

In a will contest, instruction that ordinarily less mental capacity is requisite to enable a person to make a will, or a codicil to a will, than is necessary for the same person to make a contract or to engage in an intricate or complex business matter, held not to operate on the weight of the evidence, in view of other instructions. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 716.

444. — Definition or explanation of terms.—In a suit to restrain defendant from operating a hog ranch and for damages, an instruction on the word "unreasonable," as applied to use of such ranch, and an instruction on "nuisance," held, in view of other instructions, not such as to mislead the jury. Royalty v. Strange (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 421.

V. OBJECTIONS.

449/4. Right to object.—Where defendant, not standing on its objection to charges, undertook, at court's request, to prepare special charges on issue of contributory negligence, part of which were given by court, it could not complain that they were not full and specific. Southern Traction Co. v. Dillon (Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 698.

Under arts. 1971 and 2061, an appellant who at the trial fails to object to an instruction given has waived his right to object on appeal. Texas Midland R. R. v. Combs (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1178.

Objection to instruction not urged at time of trial was waived, and constitutes no ground for reversal and cannot be considered. Baker v. Williams (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 808; Fisher v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 302 S. W. 343; Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. O'Kelly (Civ. App.) 251 S. W. 1115.

Where ground of objection to a part of the charge was not the ground taken in the trial court, the assigned error, if any, must be considered as waived, under this article, as amended. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Ewing (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 194; affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 330 S. W. 306; Schaff v. Booggin (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 768.

Under this article, as amended, errors in the charge, though apparent on the face of the record, are waived when objections are not presented in the trial court. Hendrick v. Elmont-Decker Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 171; Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

Where appellants have failed to object to instructions before they were read to jury, they must be held to have approved them and waived their objections. Shumaker v. Byrd (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 461; St. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Miller (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1049.

Although by express provision of art. 1972, complaining litigant need not take any formal "bill of exceptions" to error in the main charge, yet by the terms of arts. 1970, 1971, as amended, due "objection" must be made and presented to the court before the charge is read to the jury; otherwise, it is waived. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Ablon, 110 Tex. 235, 218 S. W. 1060; Denman v. Pyle (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 335.

Under this article, an error in a charge submitting issues made by the pleadings and the testimony cannot be reviewed as fundamental error, where not objected to below. Parsons v. Hubbard (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 441; Mann v. Agee (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 905.

Where no objection was made at trial to giving of special charge as required by the amended act, assignment of error relating thereto will be overruled. Jones v. Wichita Co. (Civ. App.) 186 S. W. 896.

Failure to reduce to writing an instruction directing verdict is not a fundamental error which can be reviewed in absence of objection in trial court. Meyer-Forster Realty Co. v. Read (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 397.

Where no objection was made at trial to an instruction submitting issue regarding true meaning of written contract in light of surrounding circumstances, defendants are in no position to complain on appeal. Langford v. Power (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 662.

Assignment that court erred in refusing special instruction will not be considered, where general charge in effect contrary thereto was not objected to on grounds urged in support of assignment. City of Ft. Worth v. Ashley (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 397.

Assignment that award of certain damages was unauthorized will be overruled, where charge submitting such element of damages was not objected to on such ground. Id.

Under this article, as amended, objections to the court's charge will be regarded as waived, where the record does not show that they were called to the attention of the trial court. Heidenheimer, Strassburger & Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 896.

Where there was no objection to submission of issue of conversion, instruction defining conversion is no ground for objection. Taylor v. Lafevres (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 651.

Under Rev. Civ. St. art. 1971, as amended in 1913, even an error apparent on the face of the record when resulting from an improper charge is waived, and the right of revision on appeal is lost when no objections are presented in the court below. Hendrick v. Elmont-Decker Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 371.
Complaint cannot be made for the first time on appeal that a charge was inconsistent, confusing, contradictory, confusing, and misleading. Corpus Christi Street & Intercity Ry. Co. v. Kjellberg (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1052.

While a formal bill of exceptions is not necessary, it is essential to show that objections to the general charge were made in writing, presented to opposing counsel and the court, before submission of the charge to the jury, and that the court did actually overrule them. Id.

Error as to court's charge upon burden of proof, not being presented as required by this article, court on appeal is without authority to review question. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 196.

This article requires that the particular grounds of objection shall be presented below to secure review on appeal. Harlan v. Acme Sanitary Flooring Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 412.

Alleged error in a special charge invited and acquiesced in by the appellant could not be complained of on appeal in view of this article. First Nat. Bank v. Hardt (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 712.

In March, 1912, it was not necessary, under arts. 1970-1975, to raise objection to the court's charge in a motion for new trial. Harlington Land & Water Co. v. Houston Motor Car Co. (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 145.

Under this article, plaintiff's failure, in a suit against a carrier for damages to an interstate shipment, to object to a charge submitting the issue of negligence, waived any errors committed in such submission. Nabors v. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 276.

Failure to comply with this article, as amended, waives all errors in a charge or instruction given to the jury, including fundamental as well as lesser errors. Dennan v. Pyle (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 325.

On appeal, objections to a charge not embodying fundamental error cannot be considered, where error in the charge was not called to the notice of the court below by any objection. Peterson v. Graham-Brown Shoe Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 237.

Error in charge is waived by appellant, when he fails to properly and timely object and except to the charge before it is given to the jury. Thomas v. Corbett (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 806.

Under the act amending this article, in trespass to try title to former free school lands, if definitions in the charge of "actual settler" and "continuous residence" were erroneous, the error was waived by defendants' failure to object at proper time. Nations v. Miller (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 742.

Complaint cannot be made that a charge submitted the issue of negligence generally, and did not specifically submit the acts of negligence pleaded for the first time on motion for new trial, where it was not objected to that particular ground on the trial. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Crump (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 827.

Objection that trial court erred in submitting question of interurban railroad's failure to fence its right of way under art. 6666, was an objection to the charge, and where not made in court below is waived, by force of this article. Texas Electric Ry. v. Barton (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 689.

This article includes every error, fundamental and otherwise, which can be waived, though there are some errors, including jurisdiction of the subject-matter, which cannot be waived. Id.

Failure to give instructions will not be considered on appeal, where no objection to main charge was made on ground that it did not contain such instruction, and no special charge was tendered. Donoho v. Carwile (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 553.

Defendant appellant's failure to present a particular objection to a charge waived his right to urge such objection on appeal, and commits him to an approval of the language thereof, that he is in no position to complain of the refusal of a requested instruction drawn to cover the particular objection. Graves v. Haynes (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 665.

In view of Act 1915, c. 59, a party cannot complain that court failed to submit an issue raised by the pleadings and evidence, where no objection was made to the court's charge. McAdoo v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 870.

In a broker's action for commission, where the charge submitted only three issues and the controlling issues were few and simple, and the court adjourned from 11:45 a. m. until 2:30 p. m., requiring that all special issues be prepared in the interval, and appellant prepared and filed objections to the court's charge, and it does not appear what further objections appellant wanted to prepare, the assignment that the court erred in not granting more time must be overruled. Varn v. Moeller (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 234.

Arts. 1970, 1971, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 59, § 2, and article 1972, are mutually complementary, and when the main charge submits the cause upon special issues, those articles and art. 1984 a. (Acts 1913, c. 59, §1) form a consistent scheme of procedure, and the provisions of art. 1971, apply as well when the case is submitted "on special issues" as when submitted to the jury by an ordinary charge presenting the general issue; the special issues contemplated being only those of fact "raised by the pleadings and the evidence in the case," under art. 1984 a. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Ablon, 210 Tex. 235, 218 S. W. 1001.

Arts. 1973, 1974, 2061, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 59, § 2, relate exclusively to special requested instructions or charges, and not to special issues submitted in the main charge of the court, while arts. 1970 and 1971, as amended by section 3, and also art. 1972, which was entirely amended by the act of 1913, are applicable to main charges submitting cases on special issues under art. 1984 a., which was enacted by section 1 of the act of 1913. Id.
Where there was no exception to a general charge, it will be presumed that defendants acquiesced therein, and special charges in conflict therewith were properly refused. Swann v. Mills (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 850.

To authorize review, objections to the charge of the court must be called to the attention of the court, before the charge is read to the jury. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 154.

Absence of defendant's attorney from the courtroom when the court defined good faith in its charge, under the circumstances, held insufficient to justify the Court of Civil Appeals in holding there was no objection in the absence of objection, assignment of error complaining of such charge. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. O'Kelly (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1115.

Appellant cannot avoid the refusal of special charges requested by him which were inconsistent with instructions given in the main charge, to which he interposed only a general objection insufficient to entitle him to a review of the charge. Isabell v. Lennox (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 524.

Where no fundamental errors are shown, appellate court is confined to the objections to the charge taken at the time. United Land & Irrigation Co. v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 845.

In will contest, objection that charge on proponent's burden of proving testamentary capacity was a violation of art. 271, was not available on review, where not urged in lower court, in view of Acts 33d Leg. (1913) c. 59. Earl v. Mundy (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 716.

Where no objection was urged to the court's charge in submitting either of two issues, in the absence of objection made and presented to the court before the charge was read to the jury, such objections as could have been made must be considered on appeal. England v. Henderson (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 381.

Assignments of error attacking an instruction as erroneous on grounds not urged in the court below will not be considered in view of this article. City of Greenville v. Mc-Afee (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 792.

Injunction for injunction objection to an instruction on the ground that contributory negligence appeared as a matter of law was waived when defendants did not present that objection in the trial court, as required by this article. Lancaster v. Knappston (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 787.

Where, in an action based on alleged false representation, most of which appeared to be not merely matters of opinion, an instruction, proper as applying to misrepresentations as to facts, must be held correct on appeal, in absence of objection that it did not distinguish between kinds of misrepresentations and apply the law accordingly. Waggoner v. Zundelowitz (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 721.

The peremptory direction of a verdict was subject to challenge on appeal, though not objected to in the trial court before read to the jury. Decker v. Killicks, 110 Tex. 90, 216 S. W. 385; Almager v. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 112.

Under arts. 1607 and 1971, as amended, giving of peremptory instruction cannot be reviewed without objection or assignment of error if its propriety is doubtful, and a critical examination of the evidence is necessary. Hendrick v. Blount-Decker Lumber Co., 200 S. W. 171.

Where peremptory instruction was not requested by plaintiff at proper time, and its refusal excepted to, and plaintiff did not object to court's charge, he cannot complain of such charge or refusal. Old Faithful Oil Co. v. McGiveran (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 249.

Appellants having failed to object to the charge of the court, cannot contend on appeal that there is no evidence to support verdict and judgment. Gonzales v. Flores (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 851.

The giving of a peremptory instruction is not fundamental error so apparent on record that it will be reviewed despite failure to object to such instruction as required by Acts 33d Leg. c. 59. Harlan v. Acme Sanitary Flooring Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 412.

Where defendant in error presented in writing a request for a peremptory instruction, which was given without objection, plaintiffs in error cannot complain. Toole v. Moore (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 429.

Sufficiency of evidence to justify submission of issue to jury will not be reviewed on appeal where no objection to sufficiency of such evidence was made at time of submission of issue, and where appellant asked for charge on burden of proof. Schallert v. Boyd (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 946.

Even were the articles of the statute (arts. 1971-1974, 2561) relating to the filing of objections action exceptions to giving and refusing of charges applicable when case is submitted on special issues, sufficiency of evidence to support a finding is an open question on appeal, not waived by submission without objection, having been made ground of motion for new trial. Ablon v. Electric Express & Baggage Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 717.

Appellant in giving peremptory instruction for appellee, as well as refusing peremptory instruction for appellant, is waived by appellant's failure to object in the trial court to such charge or such refusal before the charge is read to the jury, as required by arts. 1971, 2561, as amended by Acts 33d Leg. c. 59. McDonald v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 446.
TREATING a document found in the transcript as an objection to the charge, directing a verdict or finding, plaintiffs, and defendants, were not entitled to have such act of the court reviewed, where it does not appear the objections filed were ever presented to the judge. Denman v. Pyle (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 335.

In view of arts. 1970, 1971, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 59, § 3, the fact that plaintiff waived right to have objection to any submission to the jury of the special issue of contributory negligence in the main charge, did not legally prevent him from complaining in his motion for a new trial that the evidence was insufficient to support such special issue. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Abion, 110 Tex. 255, 213 S. W. 1926.

Under arts. 1970, 1971, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 59, § 3, a party may complain in a case submitted on special issues of an adverse verdict on a particular issue, because of the evidence being insufficient to sustain the verdict thereon; though there was no objection in the first instance to the court's submission of the issue. Short v. Blair & Hughes Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 427.

446/2 — Showing objection in record. — Where the record failed to show that objections to the charge were presented before it was read to the jury as required by art. 1971, as amended, and art. 1972, in view of art. 2061, Court of Civil Appeals need not consider the objections. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Bartek (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 602; Stephens v. Miller (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1951; Midkiff v. Benson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 186; Payne v. Harris (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 350.

Record failing to disclose objection to giving of peremptory instruction or exception to refusal of requested charges, assignments relating to sufficiency of evidence to support verdict and judgment would be overruled. Rockhill Country Club Co. v. Nix (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 155.

In view of arts. 1971, 1972, 2061, 2062, where the record fails to disclose, either by bill of exceptions or filed objections to the charge, that any objections were made thereto, the court on appeal is justified in disregarding an assignment of error to the failure of the court to direct a verdict. Mason v. Ols (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1040.

An objection to submission of special issues will not be considered, unless by proper authentication the record discloses that the objections were presented in the court below within the time prescribed. Southern Traction Co. v. Rogan (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1125.

Compliance with Acts 193d Leg. c. 59, requires that particular grounds of objection be specified in the record, and a failure to do so is fatal to a review of such objection on appeal. Harlan v. Acme Sanitary Flooring Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 412.

An assignment of error based on objections to the charge will not be considered, where there is no authentic record that objections were presented to trial court before main charge was read to jury, as required by this article, though it is not necessary to show by formal bill of exceptions that objections were presented. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Churchill (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 253.

A purported bill of exceptions showing that objections were presented to the court before the charge was read to the jury, which is not approved by the judge or authenticated in any manner, but merely filed by the clerk, is not sufficient under this article, to present objections to instructions for review. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Cook (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 529.

447. Sufficiency of objections. — In action for damage to shipment, objection to charge which complained that in submitting issue of rough handling language placed higher duty on defendant than law required in not requiring finding of negligence sufficiently indicated to trial court vice in charge. Fanhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Wright Herndon Co. (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 216.

Requested instructions made a part of the bill of exceptions held sufficient, under arts. 1971, 2061, to indicate the objections to the peremptory charge given. Buckholts Staging Co. v. Nafz (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 858.

Objection that charge is otherwise involved and uncertain is too general to be of any assistance to trial court, and cannot be aided by making specific objections in appellate court. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 343.

General bill of exceptions when trial court announced it would instruct verdict for plaintiff, held no objection at all to charge before reading to jury within this article, so that objection to instruction cannot be considered. Taliaferro v. Brady Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 174.

An objection urged in the court below, that "because paragraph 6 of said charge upon the subject of assumed risk is erroneous," is too general for consideration upon appeal. El Paso & S. W. R. Co. v. Lovick (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 283.

Where it appeared affirmatively that a request for a special charge embodying correct instructions was made after the giving of the main charge, it could not operate as an objection thereto under art. 1971, as amended, and art. 1973, in view of art. 2061. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Bartek (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 602.

In a trial governed by this article, defendant may not complain of failure to charge that plaintiff's servant's personal injury made it proximate result of the alleged negligent violation of a statute, where the objective below was that the evidence was insufficient to support a finding for plaintiff on ground stated in charge. Waterman Lumber Co. v. Beatty, 110 Tex. 225, 218 S. W. 363.

In a divorce case, defendant's requested special charge that the evidence was insufficient to establish plaintiff's allegation of adultery shows a substantial objection to such submission at the proper time, although the method adopted was perhaps not strictly in accord with the rules. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 692.
A request for the submission of a special issue requiring a finding as to the same matter in a special issue submitted cannot be made by plaintiff in error as an attack on the manner of submitting the issue as contained in the charge of the court; no such objection having been taken at the trial. Eller v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 606.

Where, though mortgagee's formal motion for a peremptory instruction was filed at completion of mortgagor's testimony, objection was later repeatedly made to charge as a whole, and separately to every fact question submitted as tendering irrelevant and immaterial issues, no waiver by defendant of his previously asserted right to complaint of submission as shown. Lipper v. McClone (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 249.

A general objection to the instructions given by the court does not comply with the requirement of this article, the purpose of which is to give the court an opportunity to correct instructions before they are given, and such objection not only does not entitle appellants to a consideration of the instructions, but does not give the appellate court the right to consider them. Isbell v. Lennox (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 524.

In action for death of brakeman when a car ahead of him dumped coal on the track, neither objection to the charge on burden of proof nor the proposition thereunder held sufficient to raise the point that the charge was erroneous as putting on defendant the burden to prove that the car ahead was in a reasonably safe condition. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

Objection to the "whole" of the charge on the ground that "it is so framed that, when taken as a whole and considering each of the paragraphs and questions therein together, it is on the weight of the evidence," was too general. Hines v. Jones (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 412.

Where only objection to instruction was that it took from consideration of jury and decided issues that were raised, and assumed that facts were proved that were not proved, plaintiffs on appeal could not raise objection that instruction was on the weight of the evidence, since particular vice in instruction was not pointed out in trial court, as required by this article, and that a requested instruction offered by plaintiffs would have cured the vice would not aid them. Hart Bros. & Hamm v. Angus (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 813.

Where court, following special issues, advised jury that burden of proof was on plaintiffs to establish their case by a preponderance of the evidence, objection on ground that the charge might cause the jury to believe that burden of proof rested on plaintiffs with reference to all of the special issues, held to entitle plaintiffs to insist on the error on appeal; the rule that the burden of proof rests on party alleging facts constituting issue being fundamental. Cotten v. Willingham (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 573.

An assignment of error that verdict is unsupported by that answer to special issue had no evidence to sustain it considered, though no objection to special issue was made before charge was read to jury, where objection was made in motion for new trial. Deprot Hardware Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Paris (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 502.

448. Necessity of rulings on objections.—Where the record shows that appellant filed with the record written objections to the court's charge, but fails to show that such objections were presented to the trial judge as required by the amending act of 1913, such objections cannot be presented on appeal. Lowery v. McCrary Transfer & Storage Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 736.

Assignment of error based on objections to the charge cannot be considered; the record failing to disclose that the objections were timely and properly presented to the trial court, and its action thereon. Arts. 1971, 1973. Smith v. Belding (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 562.

Art. 1972. [1318] [1318] Charge need not be excepted to.

Application in general.—Arts. 1973, 1974, 2061, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 59, § 3, relate exclusively to special requested instructions or charges, and not to special issues submitted in the main charge of the court. While arts. 1970 and 1971, as amended by section 3, and also art. 1972, which was neither repealed nor amended by the act of 1913, are applicable to main charges submitting cases on special issues under art. 1984a, which was enacted by section 1 of the act of 1913. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Ablon, 110 Tex. 263, 218 S. W. 1030.

Effect of failure to object or except.—See. also, notes to arts. 1971, 2061.

Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1318, an instruction on a matter not in issue is ground for reversal, when it was assigned below on motion for new trial, though it was not excepted to, nor a countercharge requested. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Click, 5 Civ. App. 224, 23 S. W. 853.

Although by express provision of this article, complaining litigant need not take any formal "bill of exception" to error in the main charge, yet by the terms of arts. 1970, 1971, as amended, due "objection" to such erroneous charge must be made by such litigant and presented to the court before the charge is read to the jury; otherwise, it is waivable. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Ablon, 110 Tex. 255, 218 S. W. 1030.

Submission of a special issue may be reviewed on appeal where objections thereto have been submitted to the court notwithstanding exceptions to the submission of such issue had not been taken in view of this article. Cobb & Gregory v. Lanier (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 890.

Instruction that defendant was not negligent unless he drove automobile at a "dangerous and improper" rate of speed, without defining the words "improper" and "dangerous," held reversible error, notwithstanding defendant's failure to request a special charge defining such terms, where art. 1971 was complied with, since the charge is deemed excepted to under this article. Patterson v. Williams (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 89.

Art. 1973. [1319] [1319] Parties may ask instructions; time for examination and objection.

1/2. Application in general.—Arts. 1973, 1974, 2061, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 59, § 3, relate exclusively to special requested instructions or charges, and not to special issues submitted in the main charge of the court, while arts. 1970 and 1971, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 59, § 3, as amended, were not repealed nor amended by the act of 1913, are applicable to main charge submitting cases on special issues under art. 1984a, which was enacted by section 1 of the act of 1913. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Ablon, 110 Tex. 255, 218 S. W. 1030.

1. Necessity and propriety of requests in general.—In the absence of record showing objections to the charge given or requests for other charges, assignments of error to peremptory instruction will not be considered. Stevens v. Gustine Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1126.

Where peremptory instruction was not requested by plaintiff at proper time, and its refusal excepted to, and plaintiff did not object to court's charge, he cannot complain of such charge or refusal. Old Faithful Oil Co. v. McGiveran (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 249.

The court's refusal to make certain special findings of fact should have been raised by request for special charges to be given to the jury. Wofford v. Herndon (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 352.

Assignment of error complaining that court did not give special instructions cannot be considered, where the court was not requested to give them. Willie v. Hays (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 427.

Failure to give instructions will not be considered on appeal, where no objection to main charge was made on ground that it did not contain such instruction, and no special charge was tendered. Donoho v. Carwile (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 553.

A peremptory instruction is a submission of the issue to the jury cannot complain of an unfavorable finding by the court based on contradictory and confusing evidence. Friemel v. Coker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1105.

1/3. It is the duty of the court in the line instance to submit all the issues raised by the pleadings and evidence, and on its failure so to do it is then the duty of the complaining party to present the matter to it and request proper instructions, which, if material, it must give or submit in some form. Gulf Pipe Line Co. v. Hurst (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 1024.

3. Evidence and matters of fact in general.—An assignment of error attacking the verdict and judgment cannot be sustained, where appellant did not except to the general charge, and did not request special charge covering the particular phase of the case covered by the assignment. Bay Lumber Co. v. Snelling (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 763.

An instruction that burden of proof was on defendant to show contributory negligence without instructing jury to look to the entire evidence in determining the issue held not reversible error, in absence of request for instruction advising jury to consider the entire evidence. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1013.

Where there was no request for an order as to burden of proof at the time of trial, no complaint can be made on appeal that the trial court failed to make an order with reference to the matter. McLendon Hardware Co. v. J. A. Hill & Son (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 835.

Failure to charge as to burden of proof held not error, in absence of a request for an instruction covering the omission. Holden v. Evans (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 146.

Failure to charge jurors that they were the exclusive judges of the facts proved, the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be given to their testimony, held not reversible error, in absence of request for such instruction, since it will be presumed that the charge as given was satisfactory. Jemison v. Estes (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 797.

4. Purpose and effect of evidence.—Where defendant failed to except to charge on account of its failure to limit testimony, and submitted no special charge thereon.
he could not complain; the testimony being admissible for some purpose. Mackey Telegraph & Cable Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 225.

Evidence being admissible for a certain purpose, the other party, if desiring it be considered for that purpose alone, should request the court to limit it thereto. King-Collie Co. v. Wichita Falls Warehouse Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 748.

Although the party objecting to the introduction of evidence admissible for a particular purpose should ordinarily request an instruction limiting it, where the effect of the objection amounted to such request and the court admitted it "in evidence for whatever it is worth to make formal motion to limit such evidence. Texas Employers’ Ins. Ass’n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.

Where evidence, admissible as against one person, is introduced, no complaint can be made by other persons of its admission, where no instructions as to the conditions or limits upon which the evidence might be considered were requested. Denninger v. Martin (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1095.

A party who objected to the admission of testimony, admissible for certain purposes, but did not ask the trial court to place any limitation thereon by special charge or otherwise, is not entitled to have the ruling of the trial court reversed for failure to limit the testimony. Massie v. Hutchinson, 110 Tex. 558, 222 S. W. 962, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Hutcherson v. Massie, 159 S. W. 315, and opinion of Supreme Court confirmed to (Civ. App.) Hutchison v. Same, 225 S. W. 636.

An objection against persons, an objection by one that statements by the other partners in his absence were placed in evidence held untenable, since if he wished to protect himself, he should have requested an instruction limiting such testimony. Steger v. Greer (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 304.

Evidence was admissible as between plaintiffs and a defendant, and no request was made to limit it to such extent, defendant's assignment to its admission must be overruled. Johnson v. Frost (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 558.

6. Arguments and conduct of counsel.—Defendants setting up adverse possession in predecessor of court in permitting counsel to read statute which had no application, in effect authorizing jury to exclude time defendants' predecessor occupied premises as homestead held error, though no request was made for instruction to disregard the matter. Tompkins v. Hooker (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 193.

An attorney without a request that the court repress the argument or instruct the jury to disregard it is sufficient to authorize review of the argument on appeal. Wilson Co. v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 703.

Argument of defendants' counsel held reversible error, though plaintiff did not request the court to withdraw the remarks from the consideration of the jury by a charge to such effect. Morris v. McGough (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1092.

7. Nature of action or issue in general.—Mere failure of instruction to define a party’s duties requires a request for an instruction covering the omission. McCulloh v. Reynolds Mortgage Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 566.

In proceedings for custody of children from maternal grandparents, who had adopted the children, father should have requested instruction that adoption did not confer the right of custody, if he had desired such instruction. State v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 718.

8. Actions relating to property in general.—In trespass to try title to property which plaintiff claimed his wife purchased with community funds, it appearing that thereafter the wife disposed of her interest and defendant took under conveyance from the original source of title, plaintiff cannot complain of the failure to instruct as to the effect of a deed to the wife, where such matter was not embraced in any of his requested charges. Moss v. Ingram (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 258.

9. Actions for negligence in general.—Defendant waived right to have question of negligence submitted, when he did not request instruction upon subject and except to action of court in refusing to instruct. Southern Traction Co. v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 983.

Where defendant traction company pleaded contributory negligence, and supported it by evidence, court should have presented a proper charge thereon, and its failure to do so would have been ground for reversal without presenting charges. Southern Traction Co. v. Dillon (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 695.

The error of the trial court in failing to submit the issue of proximate cause is one of omission and to be available as reversible error appellant must have presented a special charge curing the omission. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ervin (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 234.

In action for injuries in collision, instruction that defendant was not negligent unless he drove automobile at a “dangerous and improper” rate of speed, without defining the words “improper” and “dangerous,” held reversible error, notwithstanding defendant’s failure to request a special charge defining such terms where art. 1971 was complied with. Patterson v. Williams (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 89.

In action for injuries in collision, instruction that defendant was not negligent unless he drove automobile at a “dangerous and improper” rate of speed, without defining the words “improper” and “dangerous,” held reversible error, notwithstanding defendant’s failure to request a special charge defining such terms where art. 1971 was complied with. Patterson v. Williams (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 89.

12. Contracts and actions relating thereto.—In an action for rent, where the court instructs the jury to find for plaintiff in the amount specified in the lease, it was the duty of the lessee to request special instructions concerning a claimed modification whereby he was not necessary to pay less rent. Foster v. Dunn (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 374.

Where guarantor of rent did not request instruction to find value of goods levied 635 on under distress warrant, other than those covered by a chattel mortgage, the failure to pay the amount claimed was error. O’Keefe v. O’Keefe (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 253.

Where plaintiff sought to recover a balance due for cutting and bailing hay under a contract whereby defendant was to pay $3 per ton for the first cutting and more for the second, held where no special charge that independent of plaintiff’s right to recover for the hay cut was not recoverable. Plaintiff claimed that the hay cut was not done as requested, and there was no assignment of error presenting that matter, the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to authorize a recovery for the second cutting was not presented. Cochran v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 253.

In the case of land listed with agent of plaintiff, not known, to be such by landowner, if defendant did not want plaintiff to have any of the commissions, or anything to do with it, that was a matter of defense, to be submitted at defendant’s request, even if the fact was provable under the general issue; defendant claimed that plaintiff was not interested and would obtain none of the commissions. Christian v. Dunavent (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 875.

13. Definition or explanation of terms.—Where defendant failed to ask special charge supplying omission in instruction, he cannot complain of omission, though definition omitted was necessary. Bblaske v. Ferguson & Dyess (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 727.

14. Damages and amount of recovery.—Where defendant requested no charge advising jury as to measure of damages, and his objection to omission was not made until after case was tried and verdict returned, he is not entitled to reversal for omission to charge. Baker v. Williams (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 898.

In an action in which defendant filed a cross-action for damages, where the charge-man stated no interest as an element did not object to the charge as given, nor request a special charge embodying interest as an element of damage, it waived its right to interest. Southern Gas & Gasoline Engine Co. v. Adams & Peters (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 946.

A case will not be reversed for an omission to state the law with more fullness and accuracy, unless the party complaining of such omission seeks to have it supplied by a request that the additional instruction omitted be given. Jenkins v. W. Jenkins (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 266.

Where general charge was correct as far as it went, though defendant was entitled to additional instruction defendant is bound to request such additional instructions, and cannot raise point by objections to general charge. San Antonio Water Supply Co. v. Cantine (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 596.

A party cannot complain that an instruction was not as full and complete as might be desired, where he did not prepare and request one in proper form. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Bustillos (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 268.

If defendant is not entitled to a further charge, such further charge should have been requested. City of San Antonio v. Newnam (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 123.

Defendant could not complain that a charge was too general and left it to the jury to search out the important issues, where he did not suggest any better charge. United Land & Irrigation Co. v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 940.

17. — Erroneous or misleading instructions.—Where instruction embraces substantially the proper rule, but is not verbally correct, the adverse party is required to submit a correct instruction. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Weaver (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 740.

Where the court charges on an issue incorrectly, if the charge is not objected to, the aggrieved party is required to request a correct charge on that issue, in order to present error in the court’s charge and in the refusal of the requested charge. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

In an action under the federal Employers’ Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665), a charge that if plaintiff was injured, and if the proximate cause thereof was concuring negligence, then you will diminish your findings on this issue in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to plaintiff,” cannot be complained of, in absence of a special charge suggesting corrections. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Smith (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 1999, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 614.

23. — Actions for torts in general.—Where defendant’s requested charge does not apply the law to the facts developed, but is merely that the conditions as to annoyance persons must have been worse after than before the addition to defendant’s mill, and the court so charges as to noises, defendant, if desiring such a charge as to odors, should specifically request it. Texas Refining Co. v. Sartain (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 553.

In an action for slander where the court gave the correct general definition of malice, if that was not sufficient as applied to the facts the defendant should have asked for an additional charge, otherwise he cannot complain, where the facts were sufficient to raise the issue of his Ill will toward plaintiff. Vogt v. Gulidy (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 656.

26. — Contracts and actions relating thereto.—Objection to an instruction on false representations, because it gave jury no criterion for determining what was a misrepresentation of fact and what was a statement of opinion and what were mere promisatory representations, will not be noticed on appeal; no request for explanatory charge having been made. Texas Co-operative Inv. Co. v. Clark (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 220.

27. Definition or explanation of terms.—While under art. 1971, it is sufficient to call the court's attention to a positive error in the charge as therein provided, and it is requested to correct it, party thinking the expression in the charge requires explanation must request a special instruction defining it, and a mere objection is not sufficient. Oliver v. Forney Cotton Oil & Ginning Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1094.

28. Damages and amount of recovery.—Where in a shipper's action against connecting carriers a proper instruction is not sufficiently clear that damages are to be assessed separately, a special charge to that effect must be requested. Rio Grande, E. P. & S. F. R. Co. v. Kraft & Madero (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 981.

In an action for damages caused by the negligence of a互相 connecting carriers, under the seller's guaranty clause, that the measure of damages was the difference, between the increased cost, actually and necessarily incurred, of preparing concrete with the machine as furnished, and what would have been the cost had the machine met representations, held to afford seller no ground of complaint; no special instructions having been requested. Standard Scale & Supply Co. v. Chapin (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 846.

Where the court submitted the question whether plaintiff was guilty of any negligence while under treatment which aggravatd his injury, and charged that, in case he was, the recovery should be limited, defendant, if desiring a more explicit presentation of the issue, should have requested additional instructions. West Lumber Co. v. Keen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 625.

30. Form and requisites of requests in general.—Where tenant filed a cross-action for damages caused by numerous wits of sequestration, a requested charge as to the circumstances to which plaintiff was entitled to be limited to the time and manner in which plaintiff was entitled to define the terms "malice," "want of probable cause," "and want and disregard of defendant's rights," was not sufficiently specific to call the court's attention to such purpose. Rosser v. Cole (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 510.

During trial the defendant's action for recovery in a passenger's action for injury that, if derailment was from defect in the road unknown to defendant, and which could not be discovered by reasonable observation, etc., defendant would not be guilty of "negligence" as defined, held requested by way of supplement, rather than for correction of the court's charge on negligence. Hines v. Parry (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 796.

31. Written requests or prayers.—Under art. 1955, failure to charge as to effect of verbal agreement was an omission which could not be complained of, in the absence of a request in writing. Heldritter v. Keith Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 885.

Refusal to submit affirmatively one of appellant's defenses in personal injury action was not ground for reversal, where such defense was substantially presented in court's general charge. Missouri, E. & T. Ry. Co. v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1120.

Trial court is not required to give general charge, independent of special charges given, where such special charges fairly cover all issues called for by pleadings and evidence. Handfield v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 442.

Court did not err in refusing to give requested special charges, where charge given covered same subject-matter more favorably to party who had made request therefor. Fred Mercer Dry Goods Co. v. Fikes (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 836.

Where the court to plaintiff's request gave an instruction on a particular issue, the refusal of a similar instruction covered by the one given was not error. Texas Electric Ry. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 730.

It was not error to refuse requested charges which were, in effect, the same as given in the main charge, which corresponded to the allegations in the petition. Melton v. Manning (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 488.

The court did not err in refusing to give a requested charge embracing more than one subject, where each one of such subjects was covered by the general charge. Hullshizer v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 658.

34. — Issues in general.—The refusal of requested instructions properly framed, and which, if given, would have submitted defendant's theory more fully and clearly than the charge of the court, was error. Kuehn v. Neugebauer (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 369.

35. — Evidence and matters of fact.—Requested instruction as to matters that must be shown by preponderance of evidence to authorize recovery on the theory of operation of defendant's mill being a nuisance causing plaintiff's illness, held covered by general charge. Texas Refining Co. v. Sartain (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 663; held, where defendant's contention was that building fell before the fire broke out and the company was not liable, a correct charge upon the law governing liability was not equivalent to a correct charge upon the burden of proof; defendant being entitled to an affirmative charge thereon. Northwestern National Fire Ins. Co. v. Wilmot (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 471.

Where, in personal injury action, the trial court placed the burden of proof on plaintiffs as to every material allegation it was unnecessary to repeat that instruction at defendant's request; there being no showing that the jury were misled as to the burden to defendant's negligence and amount of damages, which is the test. Zucht v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 654.

Where the jury were told that the burden was on the plaintiff to make out her case by a preponderance of the evidence, and that if she failed to charge that burden verdict should be rendered for the city, there was no reversible error in refusing to further charge that each particular fact relied on by plaintiff must be established by a preponderance of the evidence. City of Ft. Worth v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 127. Where, in action for injuries to passenger, refusal to follow the submission of the issue of negligence by a charge on the burden of proof, where the court gave a correct charge on the burden of proof on the whole case, held not error. McDade v. McClure (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 348.

37. — Affirmative and negative of issues.—An affirmative instruction held to sufficiently issue requested, although requested instruction was in the negative form. Sherrill v. Union Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 149.

38. — Nature of action or issue in general.—There was no error in a will contest in refusing special requested instructions fully covered by the general charge. Edens v. Cleave (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 351.

Where, in a will contest, the court, in addition to giving in its main charge a definition of mental capacity which was not objected to, gave a special charge for plaintiffs, again explaining the meaning of mental capacity, it improperly refused an additional charge for plaintiffs on mental capacity, even though correct. Leahy v. Timon (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 189.

Where the only issue was whether a lost will had been revoked by destruction, and such issue was submitted in appropriate language, a requested charge that a will could be revoked only by "subsequent will, codicil, declaration in writing, or by the testator destroying, canceling, or obliterating same or causing it to be done in his or her presence," was properly refused as unnecessary and confusing. Rape v. Cochran (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 250.

Where plaintiff asserted that defendants fraudulently induced him to execute a lease and pay him the entire bonus as agreed, a charge held to submit the true issue so a special charge submitting the issue of agreement as to payment was properly refused. Moorman v. Small (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 127.

Requested instruction that, if the jury believed the surveymen could be more certainly followed from the courthouse and distance than by survey and distance from another distance because of marked trees, not called for, they should find in favor of plaintiff held properly refused, as fully covered by the court's general charge. West Lumber Co. v. Goodrich (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 183, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Goodrich v. West Lumber Co., 152 S. W. 341.

40. Actions for torts in general.—Refusing requested instruction that plaintiff could not recover for damages to his crops by defendant landlord if he was a sub-tenant without defendant's consent is not erroneous, where an instruction submitted question whether plaintiff leased from defendant. Anderson v. McCain (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 921.

In an action to restrain and for damages for using adjoining land for raising and slaughtering hogs, an instruction that the jury must look to "the facts and circumstances in evidence to determine whether the manner" of operation by defendants was such an "unreasonable use" as to cause injury and discomfort to plaintiff or his family, together with defendant's similar requested charge given, held to substantially cover a refused charge on the reasonableness of use of such premises. Royalty v. Strange (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 421.

Refused instructions as to odors, noises, and incidents held sufficiently covered by others, and that defendant, appellant, was not injured. Id.

41. — Actions for negligence in general.—Since certain facts establish prima facie negligence by a railroad in causing a fire, the court should submit the defense of proper equipment and operation of the engine, notwithstanding it had already submitted generally the issues of negligence and contributory negligence. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 288.

In an action for the killing of cattle struck by an electric car, an instruction which defined pure as an unavoidable accident, was properly refused, in view of the fact that the court defined negligence, and the jury found defendant guilty of negligence (citing Words and Phrases, Second Series, Unavoidable Accident). Eastern Texas Electric Co. v. Hunsucker (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 817.

42. — Personal injuries in general.—In action for injuries caused by a member of the train crew flashing his lantern before horses and mules on loading chute, causing them to rush back and trample plaintiff, a requested charge that, if plaintiff was injured, it was done because of the 'wild and unruly nature' and disposition of the mules and horses, verdict should be for defendant, even though defendant was guilty of negligence held sufficiently presented by another charge. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 773.

43. — Actions of railroad companies in general.—The refusal of a requested charge, authorizing a verdict for plaintiff upon a finding of negligence of railway employees in requiring plaintiff to leave the caboose in a rain, was not erroneous, where the main charge submitted that issue to the jury even more favorably to plaintiff. Roberts v. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 964.

44. — Injuries to passengers.—In an action by a passenger injured when entering a train, the refusal of a special request on the carrier's duty towards passengers, etc., held proper; it being covered by the main charge. Bird v. Schaff (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 711.

The general charge in an action for injuries to passenger in alighting having restricted the jury to injuries proximately caused by the defendant's negligence, there was no reversible error for refusing a special charge to that effect limited to a claimed injury of an ovary. Schaff v. Wright (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 945.

Where an instruction given did not authorize the jury to find a carrier guilty of negligence if it failed to bar or screen a window, it was not reversible error to refuse instructions that the carrier was not negligent in failing to make such precautions. Lancaster v. Knighton (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 876.

45. — Injuries to employees.—Where charge given in suit by employed for injuries was correct, it was unnecessary to present issue relating to injuries and consequences resulting therefrom, as that could be done by counsel in argument. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 343.

Where under the instructions the jury could find for plaintiff, a railroad fireman, only negligent in failing to discover open switch, etc., held, that the refusal of further instructions that the engineer was not negligent in doing no more than he did to stop the train after discovering the open switch, that negligence could not be based on the fact the switch was open, etc., was proper. Lancaster v. Mays (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 676.

A charge that, though foreman failed to take proper precautions, the jury should find for defendant if they believed a person of ordinary care under the same circumstances would have acted as the foreman did, furnished the proper test, and was sufficient to justify the refusal of a requested charge covering the same idea. Lancaster v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 207.

In an action against a railroad company for the death of a servant caused by derailment the court did not err in refusing a special charge on the matter of unavoidable accident where such matter was placed before the jury in the court's charge. Hines v. Kelley (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 493.

46. — Contributory negligence and assumption of risk.—It is not error to refuse to give a requested instruction as to contributory negligence, which is sufficiently covered by the court's general charge. Texas Electric Ry. v. Hooks (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 654; City of Ft. Worth v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 122; Ft. Worth v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 286.

Refusing instruction to find for defendant railroad if plaintiff was negligent in not stopping his team at safe distance from tracks is not erroneous, where jury were told to find for defendant if plaintiff negligently stopped within few feet of track. Mission, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Hart (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 966.

In action for injuries while attempting to board street car, refusal of instruction 639.
as to contributory negligence held proper, in view of another instruction given. Northern Texas Traction Co. v. Crouch (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 741.

It was error to refuse an instruction that railroad was not liable if plaintiff's horse was more readily frightened than an ordinary horse, where the issue of contributory negligence was sufficiently covered by an instruction given. Texas Midland R. R. v. Butler (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 344.

In an action for killing of mules and damage to harness and wagon, in collision at crossing, an instruction requested by defendant to find for it, if the driver was guilty of "negligence in the manner in which he drove or attempted to drive over said crossing," held sufficient to require the jury to find whether the evidence established facts on which it was charged to find in favor of plaintiff in refused special charges. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Roach-Manigan Paving Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1017.

A requested charge that, in accepting employment, assumed dangers commonly encountered therein was sufficiently covered by charge that, if the injury was caused by acts of the dangers commonly encountered in the employment, they should find for defendants. Lancaster v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 207.

A request for a charge that plaintiff's contributory negligence bars recovery even if defendant was negligent was sufficiently covered by charge that contributory negligence barred recovery, and that the jury should find for defendant if they believed he was negligent, but did not believe that his negligence was the proximate cause of the injury. Schaff v. Brasher (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 1117.

48. — Contracts and actions relating thereto.—In a suit for breach of marriage promise, court's charge held to sufficiently define seduction, and hence refusal of requested charges containing such definition was not error. Freeman v. Bennett (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 228.

Effect of charge, which did not use word "mutual," held the same as if refused requested instruction that omission in contract must have been due to mutual mistake of parties. Ennis v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 941.

Where issue whether plaintiff was precluded from foreclosing mortgage, because of having authorized or ratified sale of mortgaged property in open market, was presented by given instructions as one of waiver, defendant was not entitled to have the issue presented as separate issue of estoppel. Perkins v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 789.

Instruction that, if mortgagee authorized or knowingly permitted mortgagor to sell mortgaged property in open market, there would be a waiver of mortgage, though mortgagee failed to properly apply proceeds, held substantially covered by the more favorable charge given. Id.

Where trial court, on plaintiff's request, charged that, it was not necessary that jury should find all of the alleged grounds for canceling oil lease to be false or material, but, if they found any one or more of them to be so, to find for plaintiff, it was not necessary to give separate requested charges regarding each false statement relied on. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 154.

Court did not err in refusing a special requested charge defining the elements of a contract where the general charge correctly covered the subject-matter of the requested charge and in a manner not objected to. Elmdendorf v. Mullicken (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 164.

49. — Contracts of carriage or for telegraphic or telephonic service.—Where general charge fairly submitted carrier's theory that damage to rice was caused by initial wetting at time of threshing, requested instruction, embodying such theory, was properly refused. Gulf Coast Transp. Co. v. Standard Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 874.

In action for failure to furnish car, refusal of requested instruction permitting jury to take surrounding conditions into consideration on question of reasonable diligence in furnishing car was not error, where main charge defined reasonable diligence correctly, and told jury to consider railroad's situation and its ability to furnish particular car requested. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Strickland (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 410.

In action for defendant's failure to seasonably deliver shipments to connecting carrier, held, as instructions as a whole properly submitted the case, that refusal of requests that no penalty could be recovered for defendant's failure to deliver in shorter time than that fixed by Railroad Commission was not error. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 709.

51. Amount of recovery.—Refused instruction not to allow plaintiff anything for deliberation or cold, some time after injury, held sufficiently covered by instruction given. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. McCallister (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1082.

Instruction that if plaintiff, at time of trial, was in bad condition, and this was due to former illness, damages could not be allowed on account of such former illness, is inadmissible to defendant's requested charge, that, if plaintiff's then condition was due to former illness, she could not recover, nothing on account of her health. Texas refining Co. v. Sartain (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 553.

In suit for breach of contract to sell majority stock of company, and all its property, including notes and accounts, instruction on damages was insufficient, where it stated no rule for admeasurement, so that seller's requested charge eliminating damages for failure to comply with agreement to put notes and accounts in collectible shape should have been given, in view of their pleadings. McKamey Bros. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 607.

52. Erroneous requests.—A requested special charge, though incorrect, requires the court in a proper case to submit a correct charge on the issue to which the incorrect

Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1319 and 1321, the court may refuse to give requested instructions on the ground that the acts are written with the bad, on the same plain of paper, so that they cannot be separated; such ground is not to be stated at the time of the refusal. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. King. 2 Civ. App. 122, 23 S. W. 917.

Where instructions are requested as a whole, some of which are inconsistent with each other and others obviously improper, the court need not separate the good from the bad, and is justified in refusing them all. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Pipkin (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 360.

Where improper instruction is objected to, it is the court's duty to submit a correct charge, though the charge tendered by the party objecting is objectionable. Chicago, R. I. & S. Ry. Co. v. Wentzel (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 710.

A request for a further instruction relative to portion of court's charge is properly refused, where the request is not on an issue presented by that portion of the charge, but rather contradictory of it. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

If an instruction is desired on a particular issue, a correct one should be requested. Hines v. Parsons (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1027.

A requested instruction, though defective, is sufficient to require the submission of a correct charge on an issue made by the pleadings and evidence which has not been submitted at all; but, if the issue has been submitted generally, the party wishing a more specific charge must submit a correct instruction in order to be entitled to complain on appeal. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 289.

When the court instructs the jury with reference to an issue, and the instruction is correct so far as it goes, it is not error to refuse an incorrect requested special charge, intended to instruct them fully with reference to such issue. Collins v. Mega­son (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 583.

In an action against seller for losses resulting from cattle being diseased, defended on the ground that defendant acted, merely as plaintiff's agent, a requested instruction presenting such defense, while not technically correct in every particular, held so nearly as to require the court to give a proper charge on such defense. Grauer v. Hayes (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 382.

53. On issue omitted from charge as given.—Requested charge that acts or quarrels, the result of sudden outbursts of temper, are not grounds for divorce, where not correct in its entirety, was properly refused, but sufficiently called court's attention to omission. McNabb v. McNabb (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 129.

54. Presentation in general.—Where counsel requested the court to prepare an instruction on a certain issue, but the court indicated that it would not do so, counsel's failure to submit a proper instruction did not waive the right to present the issue. Dunaway v. Austin St. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1167.

The requested charges were prepared, filed, and marked, "Given," the evening before they were read to the jury, held not error, where ample opportunity was afforded to file objections before they were read. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Harral (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 659.

55. Withdrawal of requests.—Where defendant's objection to improper instruction, error in placing it, made after defendant made objection, should have been accompanied by withdrawal of request. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 230.

56. Examination and inspection of requested instructions.—Under Acts 33d Leg. c. 59, refusal of special requested charge will not be reviewed on appeal where record fails to show it was presented to opposing counsel for examination and objection as required. Shipley v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 667; Sullivan v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 194; Delano v. Delano (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1145.

Refusal of special issues will not be reviewed on appeal, where record fails to show they were presented to opposing counsel for examination and objection as required by Acts 33d Leg. c. 59, § 3. Delano v. Delano (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 1145.

Assignments of refusal to give special instructions, cannot be considered, where it does not appear they were requested after examination by opposing counsel, or were signed or filed, refused or given. Lotto v. State (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 655.

Acts 33d Leg. 1913, c. 59, § 3, makes it the duty of the trial judge, and not of counsel, to submit special charges to opposing counsel. Shipley v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas, 110 Tex. 194, 217 S. W. 137.

Where on writ of error it is objected that special charges are not to be considered because not submitted to opposing counsel as required by Acts 33d Leg. 1913, c. 59, § 3, it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that the trial judge performed his duty as to such submission. 1022 SUPP. V. S. CIV. ST. TEX. — 41

50. Manner of giving instructions asked.—Where question of assumed risk was submitted by a special charge, fact that a paragraph of general charge required jury to find for plaintiff, unless they should find for defendant upon some other paragraph of that charge, does not necessitate a reversal, although it is preferable practice to incorporate such special charges within the general one. Southern Pac. Co. v. Stephens (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1076.

61. Modification or substitution by court.—Though requested instructions are correct, court need not give them verbatim. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Goodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 766.

Art. 1974. [1320] [1320] Endorsement by judge on special instructions refused; as bill of exceptions; presumption on appeal; endorsement when instruction given or modified.

Application in general.—See Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Ablon, 110 Tex. 235, 218 S. W. 1030.

Acts 35th Leg. c. 177, applies to case tried before its passage, and appealed about time the act went into effect. Texas Refining Co. v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 131.

Under specific provision of art. 2061, as amended by Acts 35th Leg. c. 59, § 3, failure to except to refusal to submit special issues waives objection thereto, and the alleged error cannot be considered on appeal, notwithstanding Acts 35th Leg. c. 177, § 1, which was not effective at the time of trial. Robinson v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 395.

Acts 35th Leg. c. 177, does not amend procedure in criminal cases which is embodied in Acts 35th Leg. c. 138 (Vernon's Ann. Code Cr. Proc. 1916, arts. 785, 787, 737a, 743a, and 753a) and bills and not brought up for review by bill of exceptions cannot be considered. Barros v. State, 83 Cr. R. 548, 204 S. W. 326.

Acts 35th Leg. c. 177, nullifies the amendment of 1913, so that in a case tried in February, 1915, it was the court's duty to indorse the word "Refused" on requested instructions, or the words "Modified as follows," if modified and given; such indorsements constituting a bill of exceptions so that appellant need save no formal bill of exceptions. Rowe v. Guderian (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 960.

Decisions prior to amendment of April 2, 1917.—Prior to amendment by Acts 35th Leg. c. 177, giving and refusal of special issues held not reviewable where exceptions were not embodied in bill of exceptions. Schraub v. Uhr (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 415.

In case tried before Acts 35th Leg. c. 177, went into effect, where there are no bills of exception disclosing special charges were presented at time and in manner required, and refusal to give excepted to, assignments as to such charges must be overruled. Dixon v. Winters (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1103.

In a case tried prior to amendment of this article, by Acts 35th Leg. c. 177, assignment complaining of refusal of requested charges will not be reviewed, unless statement shows exception at proper time with proper bill of exceptions and reference to page of record where the exception may be found, in view of court rule 31 (142 S. W. xll). Continental Casualty Co. v. Chase (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 779.

Filing.—A special charge requested by a party should be filed before it is read to the jury. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Thorp (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 335.

Where a special requested charge was read before being filed, but on objection was ordered filed, there was at most an irregularity and not error. 1d.

Art. 1975. [1321] [1321] Jury may carry charge, etc., with them.

Additional charge.—On a trial for horse theft, the court could of its own motion, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1321, recall the jury after their retirement, and instruct them as to the law of circumstantial evidence, if the defendant was present. Benavides v. State, 31 Cr. R. 173, 20 S. W. 369, 37 Am. St. Rep. 789.
CHAPTER FOURTEEN
THE VERDICT

1981. Not responsive to the issues. 1990. Court to render judgment on special verdict or conclusions, unless set 1982. Verdicts either general or special. aside, etc.
1983. General verdict. 1991. Exceptions to conclusions or judgment noted in judgment; appeal, etc.: transcript.
1985. Special verdict, requisites of: failure to submit issue not reversible error unless request, etc.
1988. Verdict to comprehend whole issues or all issues submitted.
1989. Judge, on request, to state conclusions of fact and law separately.
1990. Court to render judgment on special verdict or conclusions, unless set aside, etc.
1991. Exceptions to conclusions or judgment noted in judgment; appeal, etc.: transcript.
1992. No submission of special issues unless requested.

Article 1977. [1323] [1323] Must be in writing and signed.

Signature.—It is not essential to the validity of a verdict that it be signed by the foreman. Aycock v. Paraffine Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 851.

Where all members of jury declared the verdict to be the one agreed to by them, the formality of signing verdict was waived; the verdict not being affected by fact that foreman was afterwards required to sign it. Laybourn v. Bray & Shiflet (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 630.

Art. 1980. [1326] [1326] Defective or mistaken verdict.

Defective or informal verdicts in general.—Judgment should conform to verdict, whether it be correct or not, and whether the error therein, if any, arose from erroneous instructions, or from misinterpretation of the evidence by the jury. Turner Cummings Hardwood Co. v. Phillip A. Ryan Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 481.

Certainty in general.—Where under the charge the only theory on which verdict could be rendered against defendant for injuries to railroad fireman was negligent lookout, a verdict for plaintiff could not be indefinite in that it could not be known whether jury found on some other acts of negligence. Lancaster v. Mays (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 678.

In an action for the price of lumber sold, special verdicts held sufficiently certain on which to base judgment. Adamson Lumber Co. v. J. E. King Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 702.

A verdict of a jury is sufficient if it can be ascertained with reasonable certainty what the jury's intention was, and any uncertainty can be explained by reference to the record. Crenwelge v. Ponder (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 145.

Alden by pleadings and evidence.—In trespass to try title to establish boundary, where line claimed by plaintiff was definitely described in petition, general verdict for plaintiff established line as described, and was sufficiently definite to support judgment establishing line as claimed. Grawunder v. Gotoskey (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 706.

Verdict, in being construed, should be viewed in the light of the testimony. Southern Gas & Gasoline Engine Co. v. Richardson (Com. App.) 216 S. W. 358.

A general verdict for plaintiff, which can be made certain by a reference to the petition, will be sustained, and will form sufficient basis for a judgment. Lopez v. Garcia (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 665.

Amount of recovery.—Where sequestration was sued out and levied on cotton claimed by third person, verdict for plaintiff held not to support judgment for him because failing to find value of property, or to specify any sum he was entitled to recover: case not having been submitted on special issues to render applicable art. 1985. Wheeler v. Moore (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 678.

Interest.—Where an architect sued for breach of contract to pay a specific sum for plans and specifications, it was not necessary for the verdict to find the interest: interest being recovered as a matter of law when prayed for from the date when the plans and specifications were delivered. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Roquemore (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 679.

Designation of parties.—In action against several defendants, verdict for plaintiff against "defendant" apportioning the damages against named defendants held a finding against all the named defendants. Crenwelge v. Ponder (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 145.

In action against receivers of railroads, verdict for plaintiff against "defendant" apportioning damages against the railroads without reference to the receiver of a railroad held sufficient to support a judgment against the receiver; the verdict being against all the defendants. Id.

Severance as to parties.—In action for damages to shipment of cattle against receivers of one railroad and against another road, the fact that the jury wrote a separate verdict as to each defendant did not render it unintelligible. Lancaster v. Tudor (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 990.
Apportionment of amount of recovery.—Where jury in action under federal Employers’ Liability Act found suits for damages among her and five children, if error, is surplusage. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Carpenter (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 270.

In action involving liability of initial and connecting carriers, held evidence which while damage occurred on each Occasion, the basis for the apportionment of damages by jury. Fonder v. Crenwelge (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1155.

Objections to verdict.—In an action for loss under a contract wherein connecting carriers were only liable for their own negligence, connecting carriers did not waive an objection to entry of a joint judgment by failing to object to the reception of verdict holding them jointly liable. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clarendon Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 866.

Amendment or correction.—See North American Dredging Co. v. Pugh (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 255; notes to art. 1981.

Responsiveness in general.—If correct elements of damage are defined by court, jury are restricted thereto. Southern Traction Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 160.

In action against interurban railroad for injuries in collision with wagon, answer of jury to special issue, inquiring whether those in charge of car failed to sound whistle as it approached crossing, that they failed to sound it at proper time was proper and responsive. Eld.

Where plaintiff was entitled to judgment for $294.74, the difference between contract and market prices of cotton on date defendant breached delivery, or nothing, a verdict for plaintiff for $50, presumably based upon a compromise offer before suit, is not responsive to either issue or evidence, and must be set aside. Smith v. Hoffman (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 204.

Where there was really but one issue, which party was right as to the terms of the contract, and each could not have verdict, a finding for defendant was effective as disposing of issue against plaintiff, though issue was submitted in a double form. Reed v. Hunter (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 207.

Where pursuant to agreement between Q. and E. for exchange of lands, Q. conveyed by direction of E. a tract to plaintiff, and plaintiff was forced to pay for improvements, and brought suit against E. and Q., in which suit E. set up a counterclaim that he was entitled to recoup from Q. a verdict against E. was responsive to issues. Estes v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 941.

In an action against railroad for loss of cattle through openings left in plaintiff’s fence, where special issue submitted question of whether the head of cattle alleged in plaintiff’s petition escaped through opening, with the requirement that jury answer yes or no, answer of "Yes; at least 10 head," held sufficiently responsive. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Baker (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 7.

In an action for specific performance of a contract to convey land, executed by a broker, the jury’s answer to the question as to whether the owner listed the property that the owner did list land for sale, subject to his approval, held responsive to the issue; the jury being admonished to answer as the facts might be. Brown v. Musgrave (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 606.

Where there was no controversy as to the price of property sold, and the court in the judgment expressly found that it sold for $7,000, an answer by the jury to a special issue as to whether broker’s commission was reasonable under the circumstances, was a responsive answer, and defendant vendors cannot complain that the question of the price realized was not submitted, etc. Sutton v. Morehead (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 565.

In action by son’s creditor against father on the ground that father assumed payment of son’s debt, after finding of "This land was deeded to pay the P. (son’s) debts," held sufficiently responsive to special issue as to whether land had been conveyed to the father to pay off son’s debt to plaintiff. Bell v. Swimm (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 470.

An answer to special issue as to what induced defendant to sign note, that the note was signed, for the consideration therein expressed is responsive, being equivalent to a statement that the consideration recited was true. Gray v. Stolley (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 866.

Disregard of instructions.—It is the province of the jury to receive and follow instructions as to law applicable to the facts. Lillard Milling Co. v. Brooks & Few (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 656.

Where court instructed jury to assess damages separately against connecting carriers, a verdict assessing damages jointly was not responsive to the issues, and it was the duty of the court to call the jury’s attention thereto, and send them back for further deliberation, and, having failed to do so, no judgment could be rendered, in view of this article. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Clarendon Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 866.

Where the court charged that, if defendant proposed to marry plaintiff if she would have sex intercourse with him, the verdict should be for defendant, and the uncontradicted evidence showed there was no other consideration for the promise, a verdict for plaintiff, was contrary to both the law and the facts. Olguin v. Apodaca (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 166.

Sending the jury back for further deliberation.—In view of arts. 1980, 1981, as to submission of issues where the verdict is not responsive, the court’s action in withdrawing certain issues submitted held not prejudicial error. North American Dredging Co. v. Pugh (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 255. Arts. 1980, 1981, do not permit reassembling of jury after separation of four days and allowing it to reverse its findings upon vital issues of fact. Hughes-Bule Co. v. Vasquez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 525. Where verdict was incomplete and not responsive to charge, jury should have been sent back for further deliberation, as required by this article. Wheeler v. Moore (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 678.

Art. 1982. [1328] [1328] Verdicts either general or special.

Cited, Dwyer v. Kaltayer, 68 Tex. 554, 5 S. W. 75.

General and special verdict.—Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1328, 1333, authorizing either a general or a special verdict of a jury, does not contemplate the rendering of both. (Dwyer v. Kaltayer, 5 S. W. 80, followed.) Cole v. Estell (Sup.) 6 S. W. 175.

As defendant does not have privilege of requiring jury to append to its verdict list of injuries found to have been sustained, where case is submitted on charge calling for general verdict it cannot be said that such privilege is essential. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 348.

Where the court submitted a case on special issues, it did not err in refusing to give a charge which would make the verdict one part general and partly on special issues. Lassater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1093.

Where jury, the case being submitted on special issues, returns a general verdict without any instructions from the court, in addition to answering the questions submitted, and the court copies into its judgment the general verdict and unsigned special verdict, the judgment is not void on the ground that it cannot be determined whether it is on the special or general verdict, as court should not ignore general verdict. Aycock v. Paraffine Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 851.

In a suit to restrain cutting of timber, in view of the pleadings and verdict, special verdict on the issue whether short-leaf pine timber was merchantable at the date of the timber deed, held not improper, on ground jury cannot return a general and special verdict. Southwestern Settlement & Development Co. v. May (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 133.

Implied findings.—In a person injury case, after instruction as to contributory negligence, and that verdict for plaintiff should be diminished in proportion to the amount of his negligence, under art. 5246h, a verdict for the plaintiff finds defendant's negligence was the proximate cause of plaintiff's injury. McBride v. Hodges (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 877.

Where the court submitted the issues, including that of defect in machinery, in a general charge so framed that, unless the jury found the machine defective, its verdict would be for the defendant, verdict for plaintiff necessitated the conclusion that they found the machine defective. Gammage v. Gamer Co. (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 389.

Where the court submitted the question of plaintiff's contributory negligence, as well as defendant's negligence, a verdict for plaintiff involved a finding that plaintiff was not contributorily negligent. Texas Electric Ry. v. Scott (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1112.

Art. 1984. [1330] [1330] Special verdict defined.

Constitutionality and construction in general.—In a jury trial it was reversible error to refuse to submit the case on special issues, on request therefor before the general charge had been submitted, and after objections thereto had been overruled, in view of this article; the statute being mandatory. Jackson v. Martin (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 4; Panhandle & S. F. R. Co. v. Cowan (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 185.

This article is mandatory, the court having discretion, subject to review, as to whether the cause can be determined on special issues. Buckholts State Bank v. Graf (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 638.

It was not the purpose of the Legislature, in providing for special verdicts, to deprive litigants of any substantial and valuable right necessary for the protection of their interests, as the same existed before the passage of the act. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Harrington (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 638.

This article is mandatory, and failure to submit special issues is excusable only in cases that cannot be determined upon such submission. Dorsey v. Cogdell (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 362.

When special issues should be submitted.—Where the evidence on an issue was conflicting and irreconcilable, there was an issue for the jury and failure to submit on special issue as requested under this article, is reversible error. Buckholts State Bank v. Graf (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 2d 589.

Where facts are undisputed, no special issues relative thereto should be submitted, but motion should be made, asking the court to pronounce judgment required by law upon such undisputed facts, Lasater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1039.

In an action for breach of contract, plain instruction and for special issues which may not have been raised by evidence in the judgment of the court did not relieve the trial court of the duty to submit the case upon special issues, in view of this article. Dorney v. Cogdell (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 793.

When the court charged that the burden was on plaintiff servant, suing to set aside an award of the Industrial Accident Board, to show that his total and permanent incapacity resulted from the accidental injury, and also gave defendant's special charge on proximate cause, there was no error in refusing the submission of a special issue as to whether plaintiff received any of the injuries alleged, and whether such injuries resulted in total and permanent incapacity. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.

In landlord's action against tenant, the overruling of defendant's request to submit the cause on special issues raised by pleadings and evidence, was error, since the case was determinable on special issues, in view of this article. Watson v. Corley (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 481.

Under this article, it was not error to submit a suit to enjoin a cotton gin as a nuisance on special issues, without request of either party. Oliver v. Forney Cotton Oil & Ginning Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1094.

Necessity of request.—Notwithstanding art. 1982, the trial court may, under this article, submit a case on special issues without request by either party. Penelope Real Estate Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 702; Ellis v. Haynes (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 249.

Under this article, in action on fire policy, if defendant desired finding of jury upon cash value of building, it should have requested special issue, and by not so requesting left question to court. Security Ins. Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 874.

Where the court submitted an issue whether a landlord's eviction of the tenant damaged the tenant in value of pasturage lands, the tenant, if he desired a fuller statement of the law in connection with the submitted issue, should have requested it. Friemel v. Coker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1105.

Appellant cannot complain of the failure to submit the issue as to the extent by which improvements he had made before the accident had increased the value of the land, where he made no request for the submission of such issue and did not object to the issues submitted because they did not require the jury to consider such increase. Fabra v. Fabra (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1068.

Facies having failed to request a submission of certain issues cannot complain of the failure of the court to submit the same. Elmondor v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

Where there is no request by either party for submission on special issues, the court may submit on special issues or upon a general charge at his discretion. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Cowan (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 185.

See, also, notes to art. 1982.

In an action for wrongful death, it was error under this article, to submit the question of contributory negligence without also submitting special issues thereon requested by defendant separately. Dallas Hotel Co. v. Fox (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 61. Submitting special issue whether defendant railroad negligently permitted its fence to be removed and negligently failed to prevent stock coming upon its right of way, held erroneous because embracing distinct issues capable of different answers. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Turner (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 688.

Submitting special issue whether defendant railroad negligently permitted its right of way to be unfenced and negligently ran down plaintiff's mules, held erroneous because embracing distinct issues admitting different answers. Id.

Special issue as to whether box car at time of accident was being moved by defendant in the operation of its railroad or in work incidental to such operation, held not objectionable as submitting two issues in one. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

In personal injury suit, court as general rule is not required to submit separate issue as to each injury. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 343.

The several grounds of negligence which plaintiff pleads and supports by evidence should be submitted separately. Schaff v. Scoggins (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 758.

In action on note where transfer was disputed, issue whether payee transferred the notes to plaintiff in good faith before due should have been divided; one issue being whether there was a transfer, and the other whether it was in good faith before the due date. Lewis v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 882.
In an action for injuries to live stock from delay in loading, where plaintiff, relying both on the negligent condition of a switch preventing loading and the muddy condition of the loading pens as distinct acts of negligence, they require submission as distinct and separate special issues, unless the pens' condition is proved merely to 207 S. W. 570.

The issue as to whether a berth was requested by passenger and refused by sleeping car company held not objectionable as submitting two issues. Pullman Co. v.
McGowan (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 842.

On appeal in eminent domain cases by a city it is best to submit on issues: First, as to the market value of the land taken; second, whether the remaining land has depreciated in value by the taking; and, third, if there has been such depreciation, its amount; and it would be proper to give instructions concerning the elements to be considered, in view of the proof, in deciding the issues, but to submit each element separately does not furnish a practical way to decide them. City of San Antonio v.
Fike (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 639.

Financial injury and mental suffering are both elements of actual damages, the first being classified as special and the second as general damages, and hence a special issue inquiring of the jury whether plaintiff sustained "any financial injury or mental suffering" was not erroneous on ground that financial injury and mental sufferig were distinct elements of damages and should have been separately submitted. Evans v.
McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 650.

In suit on accident policy to recover both indemnity for disability and for death, the submission, of a special issue whether the claimed injuries to insured did "continuously result from wholly 'insurable' injury, "result and in his death," held erroneous, as com-binning distinct issues, which might be answered differently. Western Indu­nity Co.

In action on accident policy, the submission in one issue of whether plaintiffs had proved that neither the driver nor either of the trucks caused, or contrib­ ted to cause, the injury which resulted in insured's death, was erroneous, involving several issues of fact, which insurer was entitled to have separately submited.

The issue of unavoidable accident is comprehended within issues as to negligence as the proximate cause of the injury, being the negative thereof, and defendant is not
App.) 214 S. W. 539.

In attorneys' action to recover fees, where answer alleged fraud in procuring em­ployment and also in obtaining abandonment of original contract and the making of contract sued on, special issue as to whether attorney made fraudulent representations to procure employment and the contract sued on was not erroneous for intermingling original and subsequent contracts. Laybourn v. Bray & Shiflett (Civ. App.) 214 S.
W. 630.

Though this article contemplates that each issue of fact be submitted separately, where two matters are combined in one issue, and one of them is not in reality an issue of fact, on account of the undisputed testimony thereon, there is no reversible error.

In a servant's action to set aside award of the Industrial Accident Board and for lump sum settlement, the court should separate the issues of the extent of plaintiff's incapacitary and of the duration thereof. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ.
App.) 218 S. W. 112.

An interrogatory, "Now, if you have found in answer to the issues heretofore submitted that the defendant, S. L. R. Co., was negligent in any or all of the followi­ng respects, that is, etc., then was such negligence, if any, the proximate cause of the collision," held not erroneous as embracing several questions in one. St. Louis

Single issue of negligence of railroad in inducing refinery company's employe to expose himself to danger of explosion in repairing leaky car of gasoline stated to con­tain unrefined naphtha could not be split so as to make separate issue of each circum­stance
S. W. 407.

Total court was not required to separate issues one from another so as to isolate a requested charge, coupled with and made dependent on the issue immediately pre­ceding it. Gregory v. Corpus Christi Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 305.

In grantor's action to enjoin sale on execution against grantor, court's refusal to submit separately special issues as to the market value of the pieces of property held error. Slaton v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 955, affirming judgment

In action against mortgagee for wrongful sequestration special issue as to whether mortgagee's agent acted in good faith and with reasonable grounds for believing that mortgagee felt itself insecure or unsafe or preventing loading and the muddy con­ jure the automobile during pendency of suit, held an erroneous combination of two separate and distinct issues which the jury should have been permitted to pass upon separately. Central Transfer & Storage Co. v. Wichita Falls Motor Co. (Civ. App.)
222 S. W. 683.

Under this article, the several grounds of negligence alleged should be submitted separately, rather than, Was defendant negligent in any of the respects claimed in the
In an action by a broker for commissions, special issues, submitting whether the land was sold to a purchaser procured by the broker, and whether it was sold to a third person, and, if so, for the purpose of avoiding payment of commissions, held not objectionable on the theory that the latter question should have been submitted independently, notwithstanding the rule that a defendant is entitled to have his defenses affirmatively submitted. Sutton v. Morehead (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 558.

Where a shipper of hogs contended that they were injured by negligent delay, rough handling, and failure to feed, special issue, held improper, because not separating the railroad and water, a question of fact and whether handling in the absence of any evidence thereof. Hines v. Whiteman (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 979.

In an action for injuries to jitney car passenger sustained in a collision with a truck, special issue submitting whether jitney car driver was negligent in different respects, held the court, and, as each and every issue peculiar to his case, submitted, the words, though J. G. R. Co. v. Laybourn (Civ. App.) 149 S. 919; as submitted. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112; note, at art. 1985.

Form of special issues.—See Steele v. Steele (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 161; notes to art. 1985.

Explanations and definitions.—Instruction defining "employer" and "employee" held properly refused where the special issues did not use these words, though they asked whether plaintiff was in defendant's employ. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

Under this article, instruction that a person was an independent contractor, and that defendant was not liable for his negligence, held properly refused where it did not explain or define anything in the special issues. Id.

In an action for injury to a switchman, it was not error to refuse to submit a special issue as to whether the injury was the result of an accident, which defined "accident" as a thing which occurs without fault of any person, but not defining the word "fault." Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Estes (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 118.

In action for balance due on contracts, where court submitted special issue of whether there was bona fide dispute as to amount due plaintiff when he accepted defendant's voucher stating that it was for balance in full, court's refusal to give special charges defining "bona fide controversy" held not error. Bay Lumber Co. v. Snelling (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 763.

Instruction that plaintiff was a trespasser, and that railroad owed him no duty until his position of peril was discovered, although erroneous, and not in compliance with this article, cannot be said to have contributed to result where jury found in answer to only issue submitted that operators of train did not discover plaintiff's peril in time to have prevented injury. Frick v. International & G. N. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 887.

In submitting a case upon special issues it is proper for the court to give all necessary definitions and explanations, but not to charge generally on the law of the case. Watkins v. Hines (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 663.

In an action by shippers of live stock for delay in transit, the shippers' case being founded on negligence, the railroad was entitled to have it properly defined to the jury, and the requested charge, defining negligence and fault as used in an issue submitted, should have been given. Quannah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Collier (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 835.

In action for injuries sustained at railroad crossing, special charge held, in effect, general charge, and improperly given, special issues having been submitted. Southern Traction Co. v. Gee (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 927.

Where case was submitted on special issues, refusal of requested instructions which would not have aided jury in answering questions is not error. Grimm v. Williams (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1119.

Where a case is submitted on special issues, a party is entitled to an affirmative presentation of an issue raised by the broker, whether the land was sold by improper, and without reference or not directing the jury's attention to any particular special issues submitted in the court's charge, are properly refused. Id.

Where the case was submitted upon special issues and in each instance the jury was instructed to return an answer in accordance with the preponderance of the evidence, there was a sufficient charge as to the burden of proof. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Hristow (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 792.

Where a case is submitted on special issues, it is not error to refuse a general charge. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Roquemore (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 679.

Where the only issue was submitted specially and was clearly defined, special instructions to the jury to determine what their answers would be to a following question by what they believed to be the truth of a preponderance of the evidence submitted before them held not erroneous as misleading and confusing. Veitmann v. Slator (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 550.

Where plaintiff agreed that the cause should be submitted on special issues, he cannot complain of the refusal of a requested charge directing verdict in his favor. Master­son v. Urnley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 428.

Where the case was submitted on special issues, a special requested instruction in the nature of a general charge on those issues was properly refused. Rosser v. Cole (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 510.

Rule that a request to give a special charge which is incorrect if sufficient to direct the attention of the judge to the issue, requires the court to submit this issue by a correct charge, does not apply in a case submitted on special issues; there having been no request for submission of a special issue on the matter to which the requested charge applies. Hines v. Harvy (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 339.

Where a case is submitted under a general charge, the defendant is entitled to have facts pleaded as a defense and supported by testimony grouped and affirmatively submitted to the jury; but, where the case is submitted by special issues, a special charge grouping the evidentiary facts is erroneous. Jordan v. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 1117.

Where the case was submitted to the jury on special issues, so that they were not told what facts were necessary to entitle plaintiff to recover, a requested charge that the burden of proof was on the plaintiff to show by a preponderance of the evidence such facts as would entitle him to recover was properly refused. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Preston (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 928.

When a case is submitted upon a general charge, it is proper for the trial judge to state the issues made by the pleadings; but such a statement is rarely necessary or appropriate in submitting a case upon special issues. Didier v. Woodward (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 563.

Nature of action or issue in general.— In trespass to try title wherein defendants' only claim was by limitation, where a special issue submitted such claim, plaintiffs' requested charge that it former husband of a defendant purchased the land and gave it to the mother of plaintiff's grantors, before he could hold adversely to those holding under her, there would have to be some act on his part repudiating her claim, should have been given. Kendrick v. Polk (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 826.

A requested peremptory charge not to find for the interveners for certain of the land involved in trespass to try title was objectionable in form where the case was submitted on special issues, as the jury was not authorized to find for or against interveners for any land. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Choate (Com. App.) 232 S. W. 285.

In a partition suit, in which defendant claimed title by adverse possession, the action of the court in stating in detail the issues made by the pleadings, though the case was submitted to the jury on special issues, held not reversible error. Didier v. Woodward (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 580.

Actions and issues relating to contracts.— In action by lessor to forfeit lease for nonpayment of rent, when the jury expressed a desire that tenant keep his lease but pay all back rents, costs, etc., court properly refused to instruct them how to answer special issues submitted to arrive at that verdict. Crawford v. Texas Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 196.

In an action on notes in view of wording of submission of special issue of considera­tion for an agreement to forbear refusal of requested charge held error. C. C. Slaughter Co. v. Eller (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 704.

In action on fire policy in which defense was an award, and case was submitted on special issues, and on face of proceedings award was at least irregular, refusal of instruction that in absence of fraud, etc., award was binding held not error. Security Ins. Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 874.

In action for commission for selling land special issues as to the commission contract and its performance, and peremptory instruction for plaintiff for a certain sum, regardless of answers to special issues, were irreconcilable. Pryor v. Scott (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 909.

Where court submitted cause on sole issue whether deed was intended as a mortgage or security, a charge on burden of proof, and question whether defendant after conveying the land remained in possession and attended to plaintiff as his landlord for such time as would be a bar under statute of limitations, held necessary. Ellis v. Haynes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 249.

In an action on a fraternal benefit certificate, an instruction, erroneous in requiring the jury to say whether the applicant for insurance was affected by any of certain prohibited conditions was cured by the submission of each separately. Knights and Ladies of Security v. Shepherd (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 696.

Where suit against a bank, its directors, and liquidating agent, to recover deposits made by plaintiff, was submitted on special issues general charge to control the disposi­tion of at least half the amount sued for was properly refused to plaintiff. Holmes v. Uvalde Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 640.

Negligence in general.—Where the court in an action for wrongful death submits special issues to the jury, it should not submit charges either general or special in connection therewith, except for the purpose of explanation or definition. Dallas Hotel Co. v. Fox (Civ. App.) 136 S. W. 647.

Personal injury case being submitted on special issues, defendant was not entitled to general charge. Southern Traction Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 150.

As regards the special issue, in an employe's injury case, was the place furnished a reasonably safe one to work? the general charge, requiring the affirmative of any special issue, being an attempt to preponderate the evidence, erroneously places the burden of proof on defendant. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Francis (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 342.

In an action for the negligent killing of a borrowed mule, the failure to extend an instruction placing the burden of proof on plaintiff to a special issue requested by defendant as to whether the mule died as the result of any act of negligence of defendant held not error. Shook v. Newsome (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1118.

In an action for the killing of cattle, the refusal of a special requested charge that if motorman was operating car at a rate of speed that an ordinarily prudent person would have operated the same they would answer in the negative the special issue submitting the question of negligent speed, held harmless; the court having in its main charge defined negligence, and having given defendant's special charges defining proximate cause and directing a finding on whether the speed was the proximate cause. Eastern Texas Electric Co. v. Hunsucker (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 817.

In action for injuries to passenger, refusal of defendants' request to instruct the jury that plaintiff had the burden to establish the affirmative of certain special issues submitted to them held not error, in view of the court's charge on the burden of proof. McAadoo v. McClure (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 348.

Contributory negligence and assumption of risk.—A statement in charge that if plaintiff assumed the risks he could not recover for injuries was properly refused, where the case was being submitted on special issues. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Challen (Civ. App.) 500 S. W. 212.

In action for injuries, case being submitted on special issues, instruction that burden was on plaintiff to make out case by preponderance of evidence held sufficient, and instruction that burden was on him to show want of contributory negligence properly refused. Furno v. Smith (Civ. App.) 302 S. W. 99.

The court did not err in refusing to give defendant's special requested charge with reference to contributory negligence of deceased where the same was substantially given in the questions submitted. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Bristow (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 707.

In a railroad brakeman's action for injuries, the refusal of special charges denying recovery to plaintiff on the finding of contributory negligence on his part was not erroneous, where the court's question on the point directly included every phase of the evidence and the matters contained in the special charges. Lancaster v. Hynes (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 957.

Where requested special charge on discovered peril was sufficiently embraced in the court's charge and the special issues correctly submitted that issue it was not error to refuse the request. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 282.

Where an action for injuries to a passenger was submitted on special issues, and there was no issue submitted or requested as to contributory negligence, if injury occurred in the manner he claimed it was not error for the trial court to refuse special charges relating to contributory negligence, even though sustained by the evidence. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Preston (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 928.

Damages and amount of recovery.—Refusal of instruction not to include, in any amount due, doctor's bills, etc., was proper, where such issue did not include such bills same being specifically inquired into in other issues. Fithers Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 303 S. W. 343.

In action against a carrier for damages to hogs, it was not necessary to give a charge upon the measure of damages where the cause was submitted upon special issues. Lancaster v. Pitzer (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 313.

In a personal injury action, an instruction accompanying a special issue submitting the question of the amount of damage, held not improper as influencing the jury to allow a double recovery for disability to earn money. Texas Electric Ry. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 730.

In condemnation proceedings, where the court submitted special issues as to the items of damage, it was not improper for the court to give a general charge as to the elements to be considered by the jury in determining the damages. City of San Antonio v. Flite (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 911.

In action involving damages for loss of use of personality for over two years, in which issue as to the value of the use was submitted, defendant was entitled to an instruction which would have furnished them a guide concerning their duty in arriving at such value. Montgomery v. Gallas (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 567.

The evidence in action for Injury to land being conflicting as to whether the injury, if any, was permanent or temporary, an issue should have been submitted as to what was its nature, with an instruction as to the difference in the measure of damages in the two cases. Gulf Pipe Line Co. v. Hurst (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1024.

In action for injuries to passenger, instruction as to taking into consideration miscarryage or any suffering therefrom or any expenses incurred because there of in assessing damages, held proper, as against contention that it was the burden of proof in a case submitted on special issues, and unduly emphasized the facts of the miscarriage and the suffering therefrom. McAadoo v. McClure (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 348.
Art. 1985. [1331] [1331] Special verdict, requisites of; failure to submit issue not reversible error unless request, etc.

Questions on issue to be submitted.—The rule in cases submitted by a general charge that each group of facts pleaded and supported by testimony should be affirmatively submitted does not apply when the case is submitted upon special issues. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247; Zucht v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 642.

When a case is submitted on a general charge, issues of each party should be affirmatively submitted, but such is not the case if the submission is on special issues. Jackson v. Graham (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 755.

Arts. 1984a, and 1985, require the court to submit only the ultimate controlling issues necessary to a judgment on the pleading, and not subordinate issues necessarily embraced in the finding of the fact issue. The rule dispose of the controlling issues judgment may be rendered thereon although all issues are not answered. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 127.

A refusal to submit an answer requiring a different judgment from that rendered might have been made by the jury to questions refused to be presented, refusal of court to submit such issue was error; but in determining what the jury might have answered it cannot be assumed that they would have found a fact in conflict with what the record shows they did find in response to questions which court submitted. Lancaster v. Camp­bell (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 550.

Trial courts should submit issues so as to conform to the particular facts in the case under trial. Peterson v. Clay (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1112.

Evidence or ultimate facts.—The refusal to submit requested issues which were not evidence, not ultimate issues, and not controlling was not error. Dark v. Indiana Silo Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 245; Burkett v. Chestnut (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 271; Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 288.

In view of this article, the trial court should submit questions upon controlling issue only, and should avoid propounding questions calling simply for finding of an evidentiary fact. Manes v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 255; Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Estes (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1155.

Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1321, it is proper to refuse to submit as a special issue the question whether plaintiff by looking westward could have seen the train in time to avoid the accident as, upon an affirmative finding it would still be a question for the jury whether his failure to look in that direction was negligence. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. An­derson, 76 Tex. 244, 12 S. W. 196.

Under this article, special issue as to who gave plaintiff instructions to do work at which he was injured and issues requiring finding of evidence of fact of employment held properly refused. San Antonio U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

Subpoena was a proper party to ascertain whether a conspiracy had been formed by defendants by any of the means alleged in plaintiff's petition was erroneous, where allegations of the petition, if true, standing alone, do not show wrongful conduct; it being proper to submit issue only as to ultimate, and not evidentiary, facts. Palatine Ins. Co. v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1014.

In an action for conversion of cotton in which the controlling issue was whether plaintiff or plaintiff's father owned the cotton, the question of who rented the land upon which it was grown was mere evidentiary fact upon the ultimate issue and should not have been submitted. Douglass v. Wallace (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 530.

Where a case is submitted on special issues, the trial court is not required to submit questions which involve merely a decision upon evidentiary facts, or issue merely incidental to the material issues by which the controversy must be determined. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 420.

Where question of possession had been fully and clearly submitted, the court did not err in refusing to submit special issues as to whether either of the parties had held exclusive or joint possession of the land in question; the statute on submission of special issues not contemplating that evidentiary matters be submitted. Vaelo v. Rodriguez (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1087.

In action by lessors to remove cloud from title by reason of lessee's record of escrow agreement covering lease, refusal of special charge requested by defendant lessee whether lessor by reasonable diligence before they signed and delivered could have discovered words "limitation" or "limitation title" were not in agreement held proper; court being required to submit only ultimate issue of facts, which it did. Mackenzie v. Pugh (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1010.

No complaint can be made of the refusal of the court to submit certain special issues, where it submitted the ultimate controlling issues, and the answers necessarily ansawed the more detailed subordinate issues requested. Dendinger v. Martin (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1095.

In action against railroad for death of shipper's employee crushed between cars, refusal to submit issue of whether railroad in shoving cars upon track without warning knew that deceased employee was on the track held not error, since such issue was evidentiary and necessarily have resulted railroad of liability. Rio Grande, E. F. & S. P. Ry. Co. v. Guzman (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1102.

Every issue of fact presented by the pleadings and supported by evidence must be submitted to the jury, where requested by either party; "issues of fact" meaning, not the various controverted specific facts which may enter into the main issues of fact but only the independent ultimate facts which go to make up plaintiff's cause of action and defendant's ground of defense. Texas City Transp. Co. v. Winters (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 541, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 386, and rehearing denied (Com. App.) 224 S. W. 1087.

In an action for death of plaintiff's husband a special issue as to the earning capacity of deceased was properly refused, since it was only as to an evidentiary fact. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Price (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 678.

In an action by a purchaser of a share of an oil company based on the misrepresentations of the seller, it was error to refuse special issue whether purchaser had been informed that a named person sent a telegram concerning the bringing in of an oil well, and this is so, even though the jury ordinarily are required only to find as to the ultimate facts. Philpott v. Edge (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 263.

In jetney bus passenger's action on operator's indemnity bond for injuries sustained in collision, refusal to submit issue as to the motor number of car in which she was injured held proper, such being merely an evidentiary fact. Interstate Casualty Co. of Birmingham v. Hogan (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 354.

All issues to be submitted.—Failure to submit question of defendant's negligence constituted no ground of objection to a special issue as to damages. Southern Traction Co. v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 983.

Immaterial issues and issues not warranted by evidence.—A special issue need not be submitted, there being no evidence in support of it. Schaff v. Scoogg (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 703; Jemison v. Estes (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 797.

It is improper to submit an issue of fact when the uncontradicted testimony establishes such fact. National Equitable Soc. v. Reveire (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 799; Stahlman v. Riordan (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 726.

Special issue in trespass to try title, which, if affirmatively answered would show prior possession for plaintiff, held not immaterial where neither party derivants title from sovereignty. Crafts v. McAllen (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 729.

In action on fire policy refused issue as to whether adjuster told insured she might remove all her furniture held immaterial. Security Ins. Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 974.

Presentation of special issues to jury is permitted to have issues clearly found, that law may be applied to them, not to find multitude of facts neither establishing nor destroying an issue. Baker v. East (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1123.

In an action for damages for delayed telegram, it was not error to refuse an issue relative to negligence of the sender, where there was no evidence of such negligence. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McGaughey (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1084.

Where jury found that defendant warehouseman was entitled to restore plaintiffs' goods in warehouse, refusing to submit immaterial issue whether under­stood goods would be stored in defendant's warehouse is not erroneous. Thornton v. Dan­iel.

In action against city for flooding land, there being no evidence as to injury from particular floods, refusal of special issues as to damages therefrom was proper. Moore v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 870.

Where both parties to an action admit that certain goods were sold at an agreed price, court's refusal to submit special issue as to whether such goods were sold at an agreed price is not error: Gass v. Sweeney (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 249.

where was an issue as to such contract, though it is treated as though it sought to pre­sail (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

Where evidence was insufficient to raise issue of whether brakeman, an employee of defendant railroad, knew, upon seeing plaintiff between coal car and tender, that train was likely to move and whether if he had so known he could have prevented train from moving, court was not authorized to submit issue of discovered peril. Freeman v. Huff­man (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 819.

In suit on guardianship bond where undisputed evidence showed that guardian had failed to account for guardianship fund, there was no necessity of submitting issue as to amount which had been lost by guardian as executor and trustee. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 679.

Where probable court never authorized guardian to expend any part of guardianship fund, and guardian had ample funds as executor and trustee to educate and maintain wards as he was directed to do under will, question as to amount expended by guardian for maintenance and education was immaterial, in suit on the guardianship bond and was properly not submitted. id.

Only where there is a dispute in evidence touching some material issue in the trial court required to submit such issue for the jury's determination. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 714.

In action for injuries sustained when leaving train by person accompanying passenger, plaintiff's request for the railroad which would have been decisive of no issue in the case, however it might have been answered, was properly refused. Id.

Plaintiff being an innocent purchaser for value before maturity of the note sued on, issue whether original payee insurance company, which was not a party, had obtained a permit to do business within the state was immaterial. National Equitable Soc. v. Refereé (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 799.

A requested special issue embracing question not applicable to evidence is properly refused as a whole. Ingram v. Fred (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 298.

An action to enjoin enforcement of Railroad Commission's order requiring construction of depot building at certain place, where there was no evidence tending to show creation of station at such place otherwise than by designation of depot grounds, court properly refused to submit issue of whether railroad established a siding or stopping place at such place or nearby stations. Railroad Commission of Texas v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 535.

In action for delay in shipment of cattle so that a market was lost in the absence of evidence that another railroad, which handled the shipment after defendant railroad, was guilty of negligence in failing to transport with reasonable care and dispatch, the issue whether the cattle could have reached the market in time had the second road transported them promptly, was properly not submitted. Quannah, A. & F. Ry. Co. v. Collier (Comp. App.) 215 S. W. 838.

Where defendant who relied on the 10-year statute of limitations, did not hold under any memorandum of title other than deed, the submission of the issue of holding under another plaintiff of title other than a deed, which was in no wise raised by the evidence, was improper. Crawford v. Thos. Goggan & Bros. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1106.

In trespass to try title, the action of the court in submitting an issue under the 10-year statute was improper, where the evidence raised no such issue. Id.

In an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665) for the death of a fireman, the court properly refused to submit the inquiry, whether deceased saw or should have seen derail open in time to have requested the engineer to stop the train or so lessened its speed that the engine would not have been derailed, or that would not have been overturned, there being no evidence that the open switch could have been seen in time to have stopped the train. Hines v. Mills (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 777.

In an action for the death of an automobile driver at an interurban railroad crossing, the submission of a special issue raised by the pleadings and evidence whether it was negligence not to have the car under control after the motorman discovered the automobile approaching the crossing was not error, though there was no evidence to sustain an issue of discovered peril. Galveston-Houston Electric Ry. Co. v. Patella (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 615.

Evidence held not to show conclusively that the car which caused the death of defendant railroad's brakeman was a foreign car, though it was called the car of another road, so as to require submission of defendant's special issue of liability for injury by a foreign car. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rows (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

In action to recover on express or implied contract to pay for services, in the absence of evidence of an express contract, the trial court properly refused to submit what was an issue as to an implied contract. Ivy v. Lane (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 61.

In a minor's action to recover back money paid a college for tuition, etc., where defendant pleaded a contract with plaintiff's father and relied on a catalogue sent the father to establish it, but the evidence showed that the father did not order the catalogue and failed to show that he received it, an issue as to whether the college president knew plaintiff was acting for himself was immaterial. Peacock Military College v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 221.

In a suit to recover the purchase money for land because of vendor's default in sinking a well, submission of a special issue as to whether plaintiff made a tender of performance held not erroneous as not being supported by evidence. McDonald v. Whaley (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 313.

Conformity to pleadings and issues.—It is not error to refuse to submit special issues, when such issues are not raised by the pleadings. Conlisk v. Collins (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 462; W. R. Case & Sons Cutlery Co. v. Canode (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 350.

In action applicableity of special issue, all reasonable inferences from the facts alleged in the pleadings as a whole should be made in aid thereof. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Sloman (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 321.

In suit on promissory note and to foreclose vendor's lien, where whole issue was whether defendant deed to defendant was quittclaim deed or conveyance derailed, or refused to submit defendant's special issue whether defendant knew when he purchased from plaintiff that plaintiff's grantor was insane and in insane asylum when he conveyed to plaintiff. Baldwin v. Drew (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 636.

In action for death of wagon driver on crossing in village under allegations that a temporary depot and a crossing track not ordinarily occupied by cars obstructed the view, held error to submit the issue of negligence in failing to have a crossing flagman. Fairhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Tisdale (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 347.

In absence of sworn denial nondelivery of instrument upon which suit was based should not have been submitted to jury, as it was not an issue. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 540.
In action for breach of contract of employment, where defendants did not plead as mitigation earnings by employee after termination of contract, it is improper to submit that special issue to jury. Mindes Millinery Co. v. Wellborn (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1069.

Where complaint in an action under federal Employers’ Liability Act for injury to railroad employee alleged cause of injury an handhold breaking loose from side of car, it is error to refuse to hold that handhold may have been loose and insecure, though not broken off. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Swift (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 135.

In action against railroad for injury to land caused by overflow, allegations that railroad, having raised its roadway, failed to construct sufficient culverts or sluiceways to drain water, held sufficient to authorize submission of special issue as to whether maintenance of roadbed caused damage. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Pemberton (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 253.

Where the bill alleged that two defendants on reorganization of a corporation agreed through specific agent to pay the pre-existing debts of the corporation, submission of issues whether they or any one authorized to speak for them agreed to pay such indebtedness was erroneous. Lockett v. Farmers’ State Bank of Vernon (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 526.

A special issue, whether defendants were guilty of negligence, should not be submitted over timely exception to it as not confined to negligence pleaded as well as shown by evidence. Jamison Oil Co. v. Measels (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 365.

In an action for damages resulting only from delay in loading cattle, requiring them to remain in the carrier’s muddy pens, there was no error in not submitting the negligent condition of the pens upon which no independent damage was sought, as special issue where the jury were instructed to determine if such condition caused the delay. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bomar (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 579.

In action for injuries sustained when leaving train by person accompanying passengers, special issues or instructions requested by railroad held properly refused, where no such issues were presented by the pleadings. Houston B. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 714.

In action against railroad for injuries to man leaving train, court erred in refusing to submit special issue as to contributory negligence requested by railroad, which issue hypothesized specific facts requiring finding of contributory negligence, though road had instructed in general plea of contributory negligence. Id.

Where plaintiff, struck at a railroad crossing, pleaded that engine was carelessly operated and engineer failed to use brakes, a finding on the issue of discovered peril was within the pleading. Baker v. Shafter (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 961.

Issues of railroad’s liability for violation of art. 6455, by failure to provide necessary culverts and sluices, held not to conform with petition, which did not following wording of statute. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Speer (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 762.

In action by widow for death of husband from injuries received while engaged in loading a truck on a flat car, it was error to submit to the jury the question of defendant railroad company’s negligence not pleaded in placing cars on the track where deceased was working. Rio Grande, E. F. & S. F. R. Co. v. Guzman (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 628.

The court in submitting to the jury the issue of negligence should confine them to concrete acts of negligence pleaded and the evidence in support thereof, and questions too general in character and based upon grounds of negligence not pleaded should not be submitted. Id.

In trespass to try title, where the question was one of disputed boundaries and the issue for determination was as to the construction of the fence on an agreed line and the establishment of a boundary line by acquiescence, the submission of a special issue as to whether fence was on the original division line held error. Watkins v. Hines (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 663.

In action by a rice company, where defendant set up a counterclaim for flooding of corn, plaintiff was not entitled to have submitted as a special issue the question of whether defendant was negligent in not building a levee to protect his corn, where it did not specially plead such defense. San Jacinto Rice Co. v. Ulrich (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 777.

In action for commissions on sale of property by broker, requested special issue, embracing making of agreement not germane to real issue in the case, held properly refused. Varn v. Moeller (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 224.

In trespass to try title, where plaintiff sought to recover lands in one tract which defendants claimed had been conveyed to their ancestor by lost deed, the refusal of the court to submit a special issue as to conveyance of another tract was proper. Martinez v. Brun (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 655.

In a landlord’s action to recover interest on the crops in which the tenant filed a cross-action for damages caused by numerous writs of sequestration levied on kaffir corn and maize, special issues as to whether the tenant had refused to divide the kaffir corn on the place and the value of the maize and kaffir corn were within the pleadings. Roeser v. Cole (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 510.

In an action between an insurance company and the beneficiary, where the company claimed a bank to which the renewal premium was paid was not authorised to receive it, and the beneficiary relied on waiver and estoppel, it was improper to submit an issue whether the insurance company would have accepted payment of the premium through the bank if the bank had remitted in the usual manner instead of by certificate of deposit. Kansas City Life Ins. Co. v. Elmore (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 709.

Where there is no issue of negligence, such facts, the court should so charge, and not submit it as an issue to be found by the jury. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smithers (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 637.
An issue whether lease represented to lessor that lease was only for a period of six months held without basis in the pleading, and should not have been submitted in an action to cancel the lease. Smith v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 136.

In an action against carriers for injuries to passenger, plaintiffs were entitled to the submission of the issue of negligence as the plaintiffs had pleaded it. McAdoo v. McClone (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 248.

In jitney bus passenger’s action for injuries sustained in collision with a truck, special issue held reversible error in submitting alternative grounds of recovery, whereas plaintiffs’ alleged acts which constituted negligence as act of negligence. Interstate Casualty Co. of Birmingham v. Hogan (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 354.

Questions of law or fact.—In action on a fire policy an issue whether an award introduced by defendant was valid held properly refused, as it involved a question of law and fact. Security Ins. Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 874.

Special issue, Did employer have ‘in force’ employers’ liability insurance with defendant? clearly submitted question of fact as to whether insurance contract had been canceled; quoted words not presenting question of law. Southwestern Surety Ins. Co. v. Curtis (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1162.

A special issue as to whether plaintiff at the time he was injured was engaged in the discharge of his duties as defendant’s employé was not objectionable as submitting a question of law. San Antonio U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

Submission of special issue whether land described in deed was conveyed to son as advancement held not erroneous as submission of question of law, in view of court’s definition of an advancement. Delano v. Delano (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 1145.

Refusal to submit special issue, “was there a difference in defendant’s favor between the scale and compress weights,” was not error; such issue submitting question of law. Gass v. Sweeney (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 249.

Issues submitting question as to amount of loss sustained by plaintiffs against D., as guardian, and as executor and trustee, held properly refused, as calling for a conclusion upon a mixed question of law and fact. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 675.

Special issue, Did sheriff in entering defendant’s home and taking property therefrom was a trespass, being a question of law, was properly refused. De Arcy v. South Texas Music Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 351.

In action by seller of logs against buyer, the purchaser from buyer, and assignee of buyer’s claim for price, trial court erred in submitting so-called special issue whether party was entitled to amount as credit on proceeds of car as against plaintiff; same being merely issue of law on pleadings and evidence. Hickory Jones Co. v. Mettauer (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 745.

In action to recover secret profits made by stockholder in selling property of corporation after getting corporation to give option to his dummy, special issue as to whether option was executed on account of deceit held not objectionable as presenting a question of law. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 273.

In an action for divorce, special question as to the custody of a child, which was involved, is objectionable, where it was a mere legal conclusion, and did not furnish any proper rule or standard to determine the proper person to have custody of the child. Steele v. Steele (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 161.

In action involving the ownership of crop claimed by plaintiff as foreclosure sale-purchaser and by defendant by reason of alleged conspiracy between his partner and plaintiff, the special issue of the ownership of the crop presented a mixed question of law and fact which should not have been presented to the jury. Mason v. Gantz (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 435.

Refusal to submit issues relating to mixed questions of law and fact was not erroneous. Stahlman v. Riordan (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 726.

In a suit to recover the purchase money for land for vendor’s default in sinking a well, submission of a special issue as to whether it was defendant’s “duty” to sink the well prior to a given date held not erroneous as involving a conclusion of law. McDonald v. Whaley (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 313.

In such suit, special issues as to whether defendants had performed their part of the undertaking of sinking the well before certain date or within a reasonable time therefor held not to call for a legal conclusion; question of reasonable time being an issue of fact, and not of law, under the evidence. Id.

Issue as to whether lease as executed contained the essentials of the written agreement previously entered into was erroneous, as it contained a mixed question of law and fact where no direction was given in the charge as to what were the essentials of the written agreement alleged to have been made. Varnes v. Dean (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1017.

Nature of action or issue in general.—Where the amount of back taxes could have been mathematically determined, court properly refused to submit special issue as to amount. Baldwin v. Drew (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 656.

In action against railroad and watchman for shooting plaintiff in railroad’s yard, question whether defendant watchman shot plaintiff intentionally presented pertinent and material issue. Galveston H. & H. R. Co. v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 106.

In special issue as to whether railroad’s action in discharging plaintiff unjustified, special issue submitted to jury, judge refusing to discharge special issue, was improper, refusal being a question of law. Lusater v. Jamison (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1151.

Refusal to submit special issue as to difference in defendants’ favor between scale and compress weights held not error; such issue improperly presenting question whether compress weights were to govern, instead of scale weights. Gass v. Sweeney (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 249.
In suit to set aside constable's sale of realty to foreclose lien for street improvements, though property was heavily encumbered at time of sale and defendant's purchase, its reasonable value was a proper issue for submission. Dubois v. Lowery (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 858.

In such suit, court properly submitted, at plaintiff's request, issue whether defendant purchaser at time of making improvements possessed in good faith, an issue raised by pleadings and evidence. Id.

Court's action in submitting issue of defendant's right to compensation for improvements, and judgment denying defendant compensation for his improvements, held not reversible error. Id.

In action for slander resulting in tie-up of plaintiff's shipment, because of alleged statements that certificates covering shipment were unauthorized and insurance had not been reinsured, evidence held to justify submission of special issue whether financial backer refused to accept certificates regardless of alleged statements. Providence-Washington Ins. Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 666.

In suit on guardianship bond, held, that court properly refused questions submitting in substance whether money collected by guardian as such had been turned over to plaintiffs, in accounting suit brought against him as executor and trustee. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 679.

In trespass to try title, evidence held sufficient to require submission to the jury of the special issue as to defendant's ownership of the land from continued privity of possession under claim of right, under the ten-year statute of limitations. Brady v. McEullion (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 816.

In action to set aside a judgment based on trustee's sale of land, on ground that land had been homesteaded and that sale was simulated, held error. In view of the evidence, to refuse to submit issue concerning defendant's actual or constructive notice that the land was a homestead, and that sale was simulated, defendant being a purchaser of secured vendor's lien note. Brooker v. Wright (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 196.

When the owner made the only admission of ownership, the testimony showed that he failed to convey all of her interest in one tract except one lease, while inadmissible testimony was that the lost instrument included all the grantor's interest in another tract except one lease. It was proper to exclude a special issue relating to conveyance of "all her interest" in the second tract. Martinez v. Bruni (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 655.

In property owner's action against railroad for depreciation of property from excavation in street in front of property, made by railroad in construction of road, question held sufficient to submit issue as to whether plaintiff's property was depreciated by the excavation in front of property. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Weaver (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 740.

In an action on notes wherein limitations was pleaded, in the absence of evidence that plaintiff undertook in person to have citation issued, he having done what an ordinarily prudent person would have done who wished to bring suit, that is, simply employed an attorney, special issue permitting the jury to find that reasonable diligence was used if plaintiff in person used such diligence to have citation and prosecution issued and served was erroneous. Puig v. Rodriguez (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 291.

In an action to enjoin operation of a hog ranch near plaintiff's home and for damages, it was not error to submit a special issue permitting recovery for annoyance and discomfort to plaintiff and his family. Royalty v. Strange (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 431.

In action involving ownership of wheat crop on land, whether at time of trustee's sale the wheat crop had been severed by mortgage or conveyance, or by harvesting, or had matured on such date, held a material issue. Mason v. Gantz (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 455. Held, question submitted to jury whether, by unsecured note for land conveyed, timber thereon to persons subsequently purchasing the land from one claiming under a subsequent conveyance by A.'s grantor, the court properly refused to submit a question as to whether A. would have sold defendants his interest on inquiry, though he testified that he had, if he could, dismissed for the asking, by forgetting that he owned it. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 177.

The evidence in action for injury to land being conflicting as to whether the injury, if any, was permanent or temporary, an issue should have been submitted as to its nature. Gulf Pipe Line Co. v. Hurst (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1024.

Actions and issues relating to contracts.—In suit for breach of marriage promise, evidence held not to justify submission of special issue requested by defendant, instructing jury to find for him if they believed plaintiff submitted to him because she loved him, and not because she relied on his promise to marry her. Freeman v. Bennett (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 238.

In action on note, held, under evidence, that court properly refused to withdraw from jury special issue of payment, although plaintiff testified that note had not been paid. Thomas & Sons v. Folmar (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 879.

In action for contract to deliver timber, issue whether buyer could have purchased such timber for profitable use of its mill from others held properly submitted. West Lumber Co. v. C. R. Cummings Export Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 546.

Fact that insured under fire policy instituted suit and does not rely on award, but assuages the same, held sufficient to show that he objected to it, and there was no necessity of submitting issue whether she objected. Security Ins. Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 874.

Where proof was conflicting as to whether insurer was afforded opportunity to examine insured, pursuant to policy, held, that requested issue should have been submitted. National Fire Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., v. Humphrey (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 865.
Where existence of contract to pay compensation sued for was sufficiently proved by secondary evidence and defendant's admissions, it was not error to submit issue as to whether contract had been canceled, although contract had not been introduced. Southern Surety Ins. Co. v. Curtis (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1162.

In action by manufacturer of water-closets against jobber, court properly submitted issue whether jobber, or before he ordered goods from manufacturer, knew latter had fixed price to customers, contractors to erect schoolhouse. Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. Gamer (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1068.

In such action, court properly submitted issue as to whether moving consideration to jobber to make order of manufacturer's goods, without which he would not have handled it, was belief he could fix higher price with contractors, his customers, and make larger profit. Id.

In action for fraudulent representations by vendor, special issue whether purchaser could by ordinary prudence, discover value of land sold to him was improper, unless, as matter of law, purchaser undertook to discover truth with regard to such value. Hahl v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 792.

In an action for the purchase price of cotton sold, under agreement to pay 12 cents if the market price advanced, it was not error to submit the case on whether the contract was to be governed by the Hillsboro or New York market, where that was the only material issue in dispute. Smith v. McBroom (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1193.

In landlord's action for rent and to foreclose lien, defendants bringing cross-actions for damages, alleging a sale of the business, etc., the special issue whether the bill of sale made by a tenant to another was in good faith was material. Fantaz v. Farmer (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 521.

In action against lumber company for balance due on piling contracts, refusal to submit special issue as to whether defendant's agent acted for protection of company when he refused to settle with plaintiff until claim of third party, which he claimed could be set off, was settled, held no error. Bay Lumber Co. v. Snelling (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 763.

In such action, refusal to submit requested special issue as to whether the piling plaintiff agreed to furnish by a certain contract was the piling described in a certain letter held no error. Id.

In suit for specific performance of verbal contract to sell land, trial court properly refused defendant's requested instruction requiring jury to find rental value of land while plaintiff was in possession. Williams v. Sweatt (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 238.

In action for rent, tenant having vacated by reason of leaks in roof, court properly refused to submit question whether leak was caused by downspouts being stopped by refuse thrown on roof by persons in adjoining building, where no proof was offered that it was impracticable to avoid such stopping of downspouts. Ingram v. Fred (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 298.

In action on fire policy, where insurer pleaded it had been deprived of right of arbitration through refusal of insured in refusing to arbitrate, trial court properly submitted question whether defense was sustained by determining whether the appraiser selected by the insurer was disinterested. Delaware Underwriters v. Brock, 109 Tex. 425, 211 S. W. 779.

In an action for fraudulent representations in sale of interest in a stock of groceries and for a balance due under a contract whereby such groceries were exchanged for defendant's interest in a drug business, it was error to refuse to submit an issue as to the amount paid by defendant to a third party on plaintiff's account pleaded as an offset, in view of the evidence. Richardson v. Wilson (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 613.

In a suit by a daughter to cancel a deed given to her father because the deed was secured by false statement of facts by the father, proof by the daughter of evidence requiring the submission of a special issue as to the falsity of his statement that the land belonged to him. Dean v. Dean (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 605.

In an architect's action to recover for plans and specifications furnished defendant on the order of its general local agent, if a finding upon the question of the agent's authority to procure a sketch had been requested in the form of a special issue, the court should have submitted it. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Roquemore (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 679.

In an action to set aside a mortgage foreclosure by one who purchased the land before foreclosure, court erred in refusing to submit questions as to whether or not the mortgagees knew of the sale of the land by the mortgagor before its consummation, and stood by and acquiesced therein, etc. Wells v. Miller (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 142.

In broker's action for commission, where evidence raised issue of fact as to whether plaintiff or a third party was procuring cause of sale, refusal to submit such issue to jury on defendant owner's request therefor held reversible error under this article. Moyer v. Park (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 205.

Refusal to submit defense that shipper failed to unload cattle after sudden stop in an effort to diminish or mitigate the damage was not error, where there was no evidence that to have so unloaded the cattle would have resulted in any material benefit to them, nor that any definite injury which could be measured by delays properly resulted by failure to so unload. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Sanderson (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 340.

In a bank's suit on a renewal note, defendant maker, claiming that he had signed the note in blank, and that the cashier of the bank had fraudulently filled in the amount without authority, the issues submitted whether the note was delivered as a renewal, and whether it was fraudulently filled out without authority, were plain and sufficient. Gomez v. United Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 620.

In a bank's suit on a note, where the trial court had sufficiently defined where the burden of proof rested, it did not err in refusing special issue, whether the bank had shown by a preponderance of evidence that the note renewed by that in suit was executed by defendant or by his authority. Id.

In action to cancel deed for mental incompetency and undue influence, court did not err in submitting the issues of mental capacity and undue influence at the same

Refusal to submit the issue, raised by the evidence, whether defendant's alleged agent was authorized to make the contract sued on, could not be justified by the claim that all the evidence showed that defendant ratified the acts and conduct of such agent, which defendant's alleged agent was not purported. Ki.App.) 222 S. W. 302.

In suit against a bank, its directors, and liquidating agent for deposits made by plaintiff, refusal of trial court to place before jury issue whether bank's cashier had converted any money of plaintiff to his own use held proper in view of the evidence.

In action by purchaser of a share of an oil company, who claimed that the seller had falsely stated that a named person had sent a certain telegram, the refusal of a special issue submitting the question of that misrepresentation cannot be justified, on the ground that the issue requested did not present the question whether the telegram had in fact been sent, there being no evidence that such telegram had been sent, and that being a matter of defense, which should be called to the court's attention. Philpott v. Edge (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 263.

In action to cancel deed for fraud, court should submit special issue as to what was the fair and reasonable market value of the land conveyed and other land conveyed in

In such action submission of issue whether grantee informed grantor that it would be necessary to get an order from the probate court to sell a lot which the grantee had agreed to convey to the grantor's wife, held error in view of undisputed evidence that the grantor and his wife afterwards accepted the deed to the lot from the grantee as guardian. Id.

Where it appeared from other findings that shipper's agent directed delivery to the consignee in care of a third person but such direction was omitted from the bill of lading then requested by the shipper as to whether it relied on the bill of lading as expressing the true contract was not controlling, so that it was not reversible error to refuse to submit it to the jury. City Nat. Bank of El Paso

In a shipper's action for failure to transport live stock wherein special damages were claimed depending on whether such live stock would have passed government inspection, it was error to refuse a special charge submitting the issue as to whether the stock would have passed inspection had it arrived, notwithstanding testimony only raising the question of part of the stock being below government requirements. Gulf,

Where the beneficiary of an insurance policy relied upon payment of a premium to an agent which did not have the receipt furnished by the company, an issue requested by the insurance company whether another bank to which the receipt had been sent was the sole agent to collect that premium was proper and should have been submitted.

A requested issue as to whether the bank to which payment was made was authorized by the insurance company to accept payment of the premium without having the receipt was proper and should have been submitted. Id.

--- Proximate cause of injury.---In an action by a master mechanic in charge of tramroad engines for death of his son on an engine with defective axles, the trial court at employer's request should have submitted a special issue whether the death was proximately caused by plaintiff's own negligence. West Lumber Co. v. Hunt (Civ.
App.) 219 S. W. 1106.

In such action, unauthorized or improper submission of issue of son's contributory negligence in absence of plea, its existence being negatived by jury's answer, did not deprove defendant of its right to have submitted issue as to whether plaintiff's own negligence was proximate cause of son's death. Id.

In an action by one injured in a collision between a street car and defendant's train where the jury found that defendant's engineer discovered the perilous situation of the occupants of the street car in time to have avoided the collision and did not use all the means at command to prevent the collision, held, that the court might have assumed that such negligence was the proximate cause of the collision without submitting the question to the jury. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Lamkin (Civ. App.)
229 S. W. 179.

In employee's action for personal injuries sustained by caving in of wall excavation, a special issue as to whether the failure of the master's engineer to warn plaintiff of the danger of the wall was the proximate cause of the injury held improperly refused, where sustained by evidence. Texas City Transp. Co. v. Winters (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 541, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 366, rehearing denied (Com. App.) 224 S. W. 1087.

--- Negligence in general.---Special issue as to whether box car which plaintiff was boarding when injured belonged to defendant at the time held to submit a question of fact, within this article. San Antonio U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S.
W. 247.

In an action for damages to live stock from negligent delay in loading, it was proper to refuse to require a finding whether the delay was caused by the weakened condition of defendant's roadbed from excessive rains, since it might be found that the carrier should have been presented against such rains. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Bomar (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 570.

658

A special issue as to whether the cause of the injury was inevitable accident was properly refused where defendant's train was admittedly running at a speed forbidden by ordinance. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Cook (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 528.

The question whether the cause of plaintiff's injury was a special issue as to whether an interurban car was operated at a negligent rate of speed, was not objectionable, on the ground that the speed may not have been the proximate cause. Eastern Texas Electric Co. v. Hunsucker (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 817.

Personal injuries in general.— In action for death in crossing accident, where issue of discovered peril became only one applicable to developed facts, court properly submitted it alone, and would have been in error had it done anything else. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Sloman (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 321.

In a servant's action for injuries submission of issue whether other roads maintained interlocking plants in the same condition held not necessary. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Grimes (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 691.

In action for personal injury when struck by defendant's car when running at usual speed, with nothing to indicate that its speed would be lessened, until plaintiff drove upon crossing, held, that speed was not in issue, and that its submission was erroneous. Southern Traction Co. v. Dillon (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 698.

Where, in action for wrongful death, evidence failed to raise issue of apparent danger from knife held by deceased, and court submitted such issue, it properly refused to submit special issue whether it reasonably appeared to defendant that he was in danger of losing his life at time he shot deceased. Aycock v. McQuerry (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 873.

Where defendant introduced testimony that plaintiff worked intermittently for it and an independent contractor, special issue as to whether at the time he was injured he was engaged in doing any service for defendant held material. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

In railroad conductor's action for injuries in which defendant denied that plaintiff was working for it, special issue as to whether he was in defendant's employ when injured held proper. Id.

In actions for injuries to passengers in automobile struck by car with gong and whistle insufficient to give reasonable warning, court properly refused to submit issue whether accident would have happened had car been equipped with different bell and whistle, as required in certain cases by art. 6564. Sellers v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 297.

In action by widow against railroad company for death of her husband from injuries received in loading truck upon a flat car, issue ignoring evidence showing that defendant's switching crew may have known that deceased was in a dangerous position held properly refused. Rio Grande, E. F. & S. F. R. Co. v. Guzman (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 628.

In action by the station agent for injuries received from a fall of heavy iron bundles he was steadying, refusal to submit the issue whether plaintiff volunteered his services in unloading freight held proper; it not being disputed that what he did was voluntary, in the sense that he was not requested to help. Houston, E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 410.

In action, where it was not contended by plaintiff that the weight of the iron, or the mode of its placing constituted negligence which proximately caused his injuries, the trial court properly refused to submit the issue whether plaintiff knew the weight of the iron and the mode of the placing. Id.

In an action for injuries caused by an explosion of gas, special findings held not to state facts constituting negligence per se, so as to justify the failure to submit the issue of negligence. North Texas Gas Co. v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 254.

In an employe's action for injuries sustained by the caving in of an excavation, a special issue as to whether the duty rested on the master to place in the excavation material for curbing the wall was held proper; whether employed in the exercise of ordinary care could have obtained the material, was improperly refused, where sustained by evidence. Texas City Transp. Co. v. Winters (Comm. App.) 522 S. W. 541, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 566, and rehearing denied (Comm. App.) 224 S. W. 1057.

Contributory negligence.— Submission of issue whether plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence is insufficient to submit issue whether plaintiff could have reached place of safety after he saw or could have seen or heard approaching motor by ordinary care. Straw v. Trojan Coal Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 266.

Where defendant pleaded and introduced evidence tending to show contributory negligence, failure to submit a special issue as to such negligence when properly called to the court's attention, held error. Mumme v. Sutherland (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 395.

Evidence submitted contributory negligence, in that plaintiff failed to have his team under control when approaching crossing, held sufficient to call for submission of such issue. Southern Traction Co. v. Gee (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 992.

A question to the jury. Did the plaintiff fail to use ordinary care in failing to procure, or in failing to attempt to procure, a postponement of the funeral? was proper, where plaintiff left it to her son who was to be governed by the preservation of the body, and she would have gone anyway to see the casket if defendants had not been negligent in transmitting a telegram. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McGaughey (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1054.
In action for injuries sustained when leaving train by person accompanying passengers, special issue as to contributory negligence, submission by road, held not correctly refused as taking from jury issue of proximate cause. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 714.

An issue whether plaintiff discovered that the floor was as unsafe as the jury found it to be necessary to prejudice the jury in believing the plaintiff was not contributory negligent unless she discovered the floor was as unsafe as they found it. Pollack v. Perry (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 967.

Requested special issue whether a reasonably prudent person in the exercise of ordinary care under the same circumstances would have driven across track, held to have correctly presented the issue of contributory negligence. Harrell v. St. Louis & S. W. Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 221, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) St. Louis & S. W. Ry. Co. v. Harrell, 194 S. W. 971.

In an action for damages in a crossing collision, the refusal to submit requested issues as to whether plaintiff could have seen the train, whether his failure to see it was negligence, and whether such negligence caused or contributed to the collision, held not reversible error. Hines v. Arrant (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 767.

Damages and amount of recovery.—In action for personal injuries due to sidewalk made defective by sewer construction, special issue as to damages held not erroneous. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. v. Scheppelman (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 167.

In action on note for price of automobile, defense breach of warranty, the court should have submitted the special issue as to the difference between the reasonable market value of the automobile in its defective condition and its reasonable market value if it had been as represented. Lewis v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 883.

In proper's action for damages to live stock by delay, it was proper to submit issue as to the relative market value on the day when they should have arrived and on the day on which they did arrive at the market, so that in the event of a finding of negligence there would be a basis upon which to determine damages. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. v. Fike (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 155.

On appeal in eminent domain cases by a city, it is best to submit on issues: First, as to the market value of the land taken; second, whether the remaining land has depreciated in value by the taking; and, third, if so, its amount; and it would be proper to give instructions concerning the elements to be considered, in view of the proof, in deciding the issues, but to submit each element separately does not furnish a practical way to decide them. City of San Antonio v. Fike (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 639.

Where there was no evidence that an injured servant ever had tuberculosis, refusal of special instruction submitting to the jury the question whether the injury, which assumed the form of a pronounced curvature of the spine, was the result of tuberculosis, was proper, though there was medical testimony that it was possible for tuberculosis to cause such curvature. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Mitchum (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 696.

Though evidence raised issue whether condition of plaintiff's legs was caused by injury sustained in alighting from defendant's train, there was no error in refusing to submit such issue where condition of plaintiff's legs was not the only injury complained of. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 420.

In action for unlawful eviction, where tenant alleged and proved incidental items of expense, but the court refused to submit such items as recoverable damages, and submitted only the value of tenant's property detained by landlord and the amount of exemplary damages if malice were found, the landlord's rights were not prejudiced. Evans v. Caldwell (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 512.

A special question as to what sum would compensate plaintiff for damages sustained on account of injuries, which allowed the jury to take into consideration, in case they should find the injuries permanent, any loss of time or incapacity or any pain or suffering she might sustain in the future, is not objectionable as allowing the jury to consider such elements of damage without regard to whether they would result from the injuries suffered. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Ristine (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 515.

Defendant, having without controversy discharged his burden to prove that plaintiff's attachment was wrongful, was entitled to finding on the question of how much, if any, damage he had sustained, a right precluded by an unsupported finding of the jury that there was no falsity in the affidavit for attachment, rendered on an issue which under the proofs should not have been submitted. Miller v. L. Wolff Mfg. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 212.

In an action for breach of a contract for the sale of trucks purchased for resale, a special issue as to the amount of damages, in which it was stated that the damages would be the difference between the contract price and the net price for which the trucks would have been sold if plaintiff would have sold them, was substantially correct. Denby Motor Truck Co. v. Pierson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 934.

The issue of minimizing damages having been raised by the pleading and evidence, the court should, on request, have submitted whether plaintiff could have saved part of the hay which was destroyed, and not merely whether he could have saved all of it. Gulf Pipe Line Co. v. Lindo (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1024.

The evidence in action for injury to land being conflicting as to whether the injury, if any, was permanent or temporary, an issue should have been submitted as to what was its nature, with an instruction as to the difference in the measure of damages in the two cases. Id.
Effect of failure to submit. Even if the address in a telegram is improperly named, a refusal to submit the question of whether the sender gave a wrong name is immaterial, where the jury found that defendant was negligent in transmission and delivery of the message as sent. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McLaughey (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1084.

Requests for special findings.—Under this article, requests for special issues need not comply with the provisions of law on the subject, nor will the court be required to submit the issue. Brady v. McCusiyon (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 815; Texas Refining Co. v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 131.

There was no error in refusing special issues where they were requested and written on a single piece of paper with a number of other issues, some of which were not correct or were covered by those submitted by the general charge. Ater v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 222; Waurika Oil Ass'n No. 1 v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 364.

Refusal of special issues will not be reviewed on appeal, where record fails to show they were presented to opposing counsel for examination and objection, as required by Acts 33d Leg. c. 59, § 3. Delano v. Delano (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1145.

A requested special charge which was incomplete in failing to designate what question the jury should answer "No" was properly refused. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Terrazas (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 387.

In action for breach of marriage promise, objection that a charge assumed that plaintiff had sustained injuries, made at time charge was submitted to attorneys for examination, was not equivalent to request that issue be submitted to jury, under this article. Funderburgh v. Skinner (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 463.

Where defendant asked the submission in bulk of 23 issues, on different matters, they were properly refused, when at least a portion thereof had been embodied in the charge of the court. Pullman Co. v. McGowan (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 842.

Inart 142, a request for special issue as to the ultimate cause of injury to cattle in transportation was improperly refused, though request was insufficient, where defendant by special exceptions to main charge called court's attention to omission to charge on that issue, and stated that it should be specially submitted. Galveston, H. & A. Ry. Co. v. O'Steeley (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 721.

Filing before charge was read to jury of written objections to issues submitted on ground that case was submitted on wrong theory as to measure of damages, and framing and incorporating in objections an issue on measure of damages with request that it be submitted, was a sufficient request to submit issue within this article. Foster v. Atlir (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 555.

Where there is a material issue which the court does not submit, a party desiring the submission of such issue is entitled to request its submission in writing, and although the requested issue may not be strictly correct, yet, if it be sufficient to call the trial court's attention to its failure to charge on the issue, it should frame one and correctly submit the issue to the jury; but, where the trial court charges on or submits a material issue which is not correct or full enough, the complaining party should frame a charge or special issue that is correct, and, if the court then refuses to give such correct charge or special issue, its refusal would be reversible error. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Goodson (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 183.

Where seven special charges or issues were requested by defendant in one instrument, it was not the duty of the trial judge to sever and separate the good from the bad, nor to send to the jury portions marked "Given" with those refused. Standard Scale & Supply Co. v. Chapin (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 645.

If for error of omission, defendant's request for submission of issue whether death was proximately caused by plaintiff's own negligence held sufficient to call attention to issue so that, pleading and evidence justifying submission, it became duty of court either to submit it properly in his own charge or to reframe issue as requested, if erroneous, and then submit it. West Lumber Co. v. Hunt (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1106.

A special issue, requested by defendant, as to whether plaintiff's truck driver discovered the approach of plaintiff, was inaccurate, since he might have discovered the approach without discovering the peril. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 282.

Though defendant's request for submission of numerous issues was by a single paper, and he was not entitled to submission of some of them, he may complain of another not being submitted, the record showing that the judge held that neither of the issues concerning which he made findings should have been submitted, and his erroneous statement that the facts found by him were proved by the uncontradicted testimony indicating with reasonable certainty his reason for the refusal. Gaylor v. Monroe (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 330.

In a shipper's action for special damages due to failure to transport certain live stock when the issue arose as to whether the live stock would have passed government inspection at destination a requested special charge to submit such question held sufficient to call the court's attention to his failure to submit the issue. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Davis (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 773.

Requested issues should be submitted to the trial judge separately, and not altogether as a complete charge. Hall v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1110.

If any of requested special issues were appropriate, the duty did not devolve on the trial court to separate the wheat from the chaff, but he properly rejected the whole charge. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Blumberg (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 784.

Where the case is submitted to the jury on special issues, requests by defendant for charges on a particular issue are not equivalent to a request for the submission of that issue to the jury. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Preston (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 928.

Requested special issue in properly refused where issue therein is submitted to jury in other issues in nearly identical language and favorably to requesting party. Brewster v. City of Forney (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 626.

A requested issue “Did the employee stop the train for the usual length of time, and was the station duly called?” held sufficiently covered by the issue given. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Thorn (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 778.

Where court submitted issue whether servant suffered damages by reason of sledge hammer coming off handle, and instructed no damages could be allowed for prior injury or sickness, it properly refused to submit issue whether injuries resulted from hammer slipping, from prior disease, or both. Santa Fe Tie & Lumber Preserving Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 164.

In servant’s action for injuries, court properly refused to submit defendant’s special issue, accompanied by incomplete instructions, where jury would not have been any better had defendant’s issue been submitted than they already were. Id.

Where court submitted special issue as to whether plaintiff when injured was in defendant’s employ, refusal of issue as to whether he was in the employ of an independent contractor held proper. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

Refusal of special issue as to whether box car belonged to independent contractor at time of injury held proper, where court submitted an issue as to whether it belonged to defendant. Id.

Refusal to submit issue of whether foreman informed employee of danger incident to work was not error, where issue of whether employee comprehended danger had previously been submitted, such issue completely covering that refused. San Antonio Portland Cement Co. v. Gischwender (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 667.

The refusal of the court to submit special issues, where such issues had already been submitted in substance, though the form of such special issues was different, is not error. Lanham v. West (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 258.

Refusal to submit special issues was not error where, while their verbiage was different, their substance was covered by those submitted by the court, and the jury found all the facts essential to sustain the judgment. Folk v. Inman (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 261.

In an action for injuries due to an explosion of gasoline sold as coal oil, where the issue whether defendant sold gasoline representing it to be oil was submitted, it was not error to refuse to submit a special issue as to what kind of oil defendant sold. Cohn v. Saenz (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 492.

Refusal to give certain issues to the jury in a special charge is not error, where such issues were sufficiently given in the general charge. Angelina & N. R. R. Co. v. Railroad Commission of Texas (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 703.

In an action for damages from increased overflow caused by the negligent construction of a railroad bridge, the refusal to submit the special issue, “were the overflow damages to plaintiff caused by heavy rains, such as would overflow and inundate plaintiff’s said lands irrespective of the presence and condition of defendant’s railroad track and bridge in question,” held error, even though the matter was covered in a general way by the court’s charge. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Glenn (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 762.

Special issues, properly submitted in the main charge, were properly refused. McDonald v. Stafford (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 732.

In attorneys’ action to recover fee defended upon ground of fraud in procuring the contract, refusal to submit issues as to whether attorneys, in making contract, concealed facts from client and failed to exercise good faith, held not error in view of issues submitted and instructions given. Laybourn v. Bray & Shiflet (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 630.

In an action for injuries to a shipment of cattle, it was error to refuse to submit affirmatively the issue whether the damage complained of was the sole result of the cattle being too poor or weak to stand ordinary transportation, though it was submitted inferentially and in a negative form in other issues. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Crowley (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 721.

In a broker’s action for commission, where the court had submitted to the jury in the first two issues in his general charge, the ultimate and controlling issues of the case held not error to refuse to submit any one of the requested special issues. Var v. Moeller (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 234.

Where trial court submitted issue whether defendant turned to the left before reaching center of street intersection, it was unnecessary to further ask whether defendant went straight ahead across the intersecting street on the right-hand side of the road. Zucht v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 658.

Where issue of contributory negligence was properly submitted, it would have served no useful purpose to submit either question whether plaintiff, after discovering defect in coupling, notified foreman, or question whether plaintiff’s knowledge of defect was sufficient to put a reasonably prudent person on notice that it was dangerous to go in behind car and attempt to couple, and there was no error in refusal to submit. Baker v. Bell (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 216.

Refusal to submit further special issues was proper, where those submitted fully covered all the issues raised by the pleadings and evidence. Gordon v. Beaton (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 242.

In action involving the question whether employer had misappropriated funds, refusal to submit special issue whether checks were drawn on employer and money paid thereon without the authority, knowledge, or consent of employer, was not error, where court submitted issue of whether employer had misappropriated employer’s money. Nordmeyer v. Mcallen State Bonded Warehouse Co. (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 1158.

In bank’s suit on notes, where jury’s answers in response to questions fully met issues of payment of one note and lack of consideration for another made by defendant, refusal of certain other issues held not erroneous. Gregory v. Corpus Christi Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 208.

Special issues requested which were sufficiently covered by a special issue already submitted need not be given. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 289.

The refusal of an issue whether the enginemen were unable to avoid striking plaintiff’s car after they knew he was not going to stop was not error: the court having submitted the question whether the operators discovered and realized plaintiff’s position of peril in time to avoid the accident. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Laird (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 365.

Where special issues submitted by the trial court fully and fairly presented the issues involved, the trial court was not required to ask of the jury additional questions presented by defendant. Kirby Lumber Co. v. Henry (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 814.

In an action for death of brakeman, when a car ahead of him dumped coal on the tracks, held that failure of accident requested by defendant railroad, was not error: the affirmative answer to the issues of negligence and proximate cause involving necessarily a negative of the issue of accident. Colorado & S. Ry. Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 928.

In an action for the price of rags the court having sufficiently submitted the issue whether the rags were stored in warehouse at the request of any of the buyers, it was not error to refuse to submit an issue as to whether defendant buyers merely suggested the rags could be stored in the warehouse to save demurrage. Ehrenberg v. Guerrero (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 86.

In an action by a depositor, who asserted that a bank had paid and charged his account with forged checks, where it was neither asserted in the pleadings or evidence that the depositor was entitled to recover any other balance, the refusal to submit the issue whether the bank had repaid all of the money deposited was not error: it being covered by the issue of forgery. Texas State Bank of Ft. Worth v. Scott (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 571.

In an action for injuries suffered by member of a railroad wrecking gang, whose leg was broken by the tightening of a wire cable, where the issues were whether defendant was guilty of negligence in moving an engine and whether it was the proximate cause of the injuries, the refusal of a special issue as to whether the engine was being moved in the usual and customary way was not error, the issues being correctly submitted. St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Reilchert (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 559.

In an action for specific performance where the court submitted the question whether the alleged purchaser had executed any contract, etc., that special issue sufficiently submitted the question whether the parties had executed a contract independent of the deed and could not have been placed in escrow, so a special issue whether the vendor had executed a written contract was properly refused. Watson v. Watson (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 899.

In an action against agent and sureties on such agent’s bond, where a special issue was submitted to require the jury to find the net balance due on the agency account, after allowing all credits, payments, and offsets properly pleaded and proven, there was no material error in the refusal of a special issue requested by a surety as to whether any portion of the account sued on was satisfied as between plaintiff manager and the agent. Chapman v. Gross R. Scruggs & Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 471.

Refusal of special issue, “At the time defendant entered into the contract to sell to plaintiff the rooming house and property in question, did defendant have authority from the owners of said property to sell the same?” held proper, in view of submitted special issue as to whether defendant had authority from the owner to sell upon the particular terms of the contract made by him with E. (plaintiff.).” Holden v. Evans (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 146.

In action for injuries to passenger of bus sustained when automobile backed into one of the horses of the bus, special issue held to sufficiently submit question of bus driver’s negligence in leaving the horses unfastened and refusal of requested issue proper. McDaid v. McClure (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 348.

Preparation, form and construction of interrogatories or findings.—In action for death, instead of requiring the jury to find whether or not the employer and its agents, servants, agents, and servants, were guilty of negligence, the charge should require a finding whether the employer or its agents, servants, or employes were guilty of negligence. Dunaway v. Austin St. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1157.
WHERE defendant claimed that all of partners agreed to and did turn back restaurant, in action by partnership lessees to recover damages for eviction by lessee, held, that the court did not err in submitting special issue whether all members voluntarily returned restaurant and not whether one did. Davidson v. Jones, Sullivan & Jones (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 571.

Failure of special issue held not bad because whether G. or her husband took possession of land, though plaintiff claims under G. alone, whatever possession the husband took being under claim of ownership in G. Crafts v. Mcallen (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 729.

In action on fire policy in which defense was awarded, special issue held to sufficiently submit fraud on part of arbitrators and to ask finding in what it consisted. Security Ins. Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 874.

In action for damage to shipment of cattle through delay in transit, special issues held not erroneous as imposing absolute duty to transport shipment within reasonable time. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 769.

In an action for damages for delayed telegram, a requested issue, "Did sender send the message sued on to Josh McGaughy or to Josh McGaughy?" was properly refused, where the real question was as to how the sender pronounced the name "McGaughy." Western Union Telegraph Co. v. McGaughy (Civ. App.) 158 S. W. 1084.

A special issue, "Did the plaintiff fail to use ordinary care, as that term has been hereinafter defined?" when she failed to take a buggy to D. and there take a train to N. G., fully and affirmatively covered the issue of contributory negligence in not getting to a funeral at N. G. 1d.

A special issue as to whether defendant and plaintiff did not understand that a guaranty contract was only for $1,000 was not a repetition of an issue as to whether defendant relied on such a representation by plaintiff, but fraud and mutual mistake having been at issue. Bulten v. Neblett (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 355.

In trespass to try title, a question whether a certain tract was located as claimed by defendants and interveners was not objectionable as ambiguous. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Lane (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 612.

A request to find specially whether the deceased upon reaching Latta street did or did not to any of a number of acts specified—held sufficiently intelligible to be answered by "Yes" or "No," particularly where aided by subsequent answer to another special issue. Paducah Electric Ry. Co. v. Terrance (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 857.

In an action to recover land, the objection to the submission of an issue on the statute of limitations that it would include land not subject thereto would not justify refusal to submit the issue, since the jury were to find the facts and the court to declare the law thereon. Brady v. McCuistion (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 815.

In action for death of plaintiff's intestate due to contact with live wire, special issue, as to negligence in failing to make inspection, held not subject to objection that it left the jury to conclude that it was negligence for defendant to permit the accident, and that it placed a greater burden on defendant in the matter of inspecting its line than the law required. Abilene Gas & Electric Co. v. Thomas (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 600.

In such action special issue, submitting question whether defendant could have discovered and remedied danger, held not subject to objection that it induced jury to believe that it was defendant's duty to prevent the accident, at all to proceed. Id.

In action to enjoin enforcement of Railroad Commission's order requiring railroad to construct depot building at certain point, where special issue was whether railroad had designated spot grounds at such point, requested addition to issue that designation once made could not afterwards be changed by railroad was erroneous, since it would have been regarded as an intimation by court of abandonment, and since issue could not have been asserted in negative upon ground of abandonment. Railroad Commission of Texas v. Fecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 555.

A special issue where the jury was asked to find notice with plaintiff's employer claiming that defendant had an assignment of plaintiff's wages was not erroneous as depriving defendant of the right to have the jury decide whether C. was the authorized agent of defendant, as it did not prevent defendant from requesting the court to submit the question of C.'s agency. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 650.

In attorney's action to recover fee, defended upon ground of attorneys' fraud in procuring employment contract and their lack of good faith in their relations to client, held, the special issue did not require client to prove actual fraud. Laybourn v. Bragg & Shiflet (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 600.

An issue submitted which refers the jury to a pleading to determine the nature of such issue is objectionable. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. v. Roquemore (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 679.

In a divorce suit, special issues under arts. 1984a, 1985, should distinctly and specifically state the questions made by the pleadings and evidence, and should not refer the jury to the pleadings for a narration of the facts. Steele v. Steele (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 161.

In an action on note wherein limitations was pleaded, special issues, submitting matters of reasonableness on plaintiff's part in having citation or process issued and served, thus instituting suit, held objectionable, as so worded that if the jury found that plaintiff in person used reasonable diligence, or that her attorney used such diligence, etc., they must find in the affirmative. Puig v. Rodriguez (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 291.
issue submitted in servant's action for injury. Did the door which fell have any fastening by which it could be safely held in place? held not objectionable in form, at least in connection with other issues. West Lumber Co. v. Powell (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 335.

An issue, "Do you believe from the evidence that the plaintiff C. has been in peaceful and adverse possession of the land described in plaintiff's petition for a period of 10 years next after the year 1896?" was not erroneous, as limiting the jury in their answer to the 10 years immediately following 1896. Kirby Lumber Co. v. Conn (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 945.

If ultimate issues of fact are fairly presented to the jury, the mode of presenting them by the trial court is discretionary and will not be reviewed. Texas City Tranp. Co. v. Winters (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 541, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 153 S. W. 366, and rehearing denied (Com. App.) 224 S. W. 1087.

The substance of the issue relative to special damages being whether the seller at the time of wrongful refusal to deliver had sufficient notice of the probable consequences of its refusal. It is enough that the evidence showed such notice after the making of the contract, though the special issue, answered in the affirmative, was in form whether the seller was informed at or before the making of the contract. Brooks Supply Co. v. Hines (Civ. App.) 273 S. W. 709.

Though a mistake by the parties to the written contract must be established with reasonable certainty to entitle either to a reformation of the contract, it is proper to submit to the jury a special issue as to such mistake in the ordinary form and with the ordinary tests, and affirmative answer establishes the mistake. City Nat. Bank of El Paso v. El Paso & N. E. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 391.

Where a shipper of hogs contended that they were injured by negligent delay, rough handling, and failure to feed, the following special issue, held improper, being so worded as to confuse the jury, because not separating the issues of delay and failure to feed and water, and also in suggesting improper handling in the absence of any evidence thereof, Hines v. Whiteman (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 879.

In an action for breach of contract to drill an oil well, a special issue submitting what amount would reasonably compensate plaintiff for the expense of moving its apparatus and drilling the well, in view of the answer, held not to have submitted the question of the value of the well. Osage Oil & Refining Co. v. Lee Farm Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 618.

A special question whether the flange on a wheel had a flat vertical surface, when tested by the rule prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, required the jury to find that the measurement of the flange was made by the metal gauge required by the rule of the commission, and was not erroneous as measured by the gauge, wherein to the conclusion that the court was inquiring for the specific authority for the sale of the particular cattle in suit. Peterson v. Clay (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1112.

The special issue in action for death of an employee, Did he assume the risk of being injured or killed? was not objectionable by reason of the words "or killed," though it would be sufficient without them. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Francis (Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 342.

Where a shipper of hogs contended that they were injured by negligent delay, rough handling, and failure to feed, the following special issue, held improper, being so worded as to confuse the jury, because not separating the issues of delay and failure to feed and water, and also in suggesting improper handling in the absence of any evidence thereof, Hines v. Whiteman (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 879.

In an action for breach of contract to drill an oil well, a special issue submitting what amount would reasonably compensate plaintiff for the expense of moving its apparatus and drilling the well, in view of the answer, held not to have submitted the question of the value of the well. Osage Oil & Refining Co. v. Lee Farm Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 618.

A special question whether the flange on a wheel had a flat vertical surface, when tested by the rule prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, required the jury to find that the measurement of the flange was made by the metal gauge required by the rule of the commission, and was not erroneous as measured by the gauge, wherein to the conclusion that the court was inquiring for the specific authority for the sale of the particular cattle in suit. Peterson v. Clay (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1112.

The special issue in action for death of an employee, Did he assume the risk of being injured or killed? was not objectionable by reason of the words "or killed," though it would be sufficient without them. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Francis (Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 342.

Where a shipper of hogs contended that they were injured by negligent delay, rough handling, and failure to feed, the following special issue, held improper, being so worded as to confuse the jury, because not separating the issues of delay and failure to feed and water, and also in suggesting improper handling in the absence of any evidence thereof, Hines v. Whiteman (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 879.

In an action for breach of contract to drill an oil well, a special issue submitting what amount would reasonably compensate plaintiff for the expense of moving its apparatus and drilling the well, in view of the answer, held not to have submitted the question of the value of the well. Osage Oil & Refining Co. v. Lee Farm Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 618.

A special question whether the flange on a wheel had a flat vertical surface, when tested by the rule prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, required the jury to find that the measurement of the flange was made by the metal gauge required by the rule of the commission, and was not erroneous as measured by the gauge, wherein to the conclusion that the court was inquiring for the specific authority for the sale of the particular cattle in suit. Peterson v. Clay (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1112.

The special issue in action for death of an employee, Did he assume the risk of being injured or killed? was not objectionable by reason of the words "or killed," though it would be sufficient without them. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Francis (Civ. App.) 275 S. W. 342.

Where a shipper of hogs contended that they were injured by negligent delay, rough handling, and failure to feed, the following special issue, held improper, being so worded as to confuse the jury, because not separating the issues of delay and failure to feed and water, and also in suggesting improper handling in the absence of any evidence thereof, Hines v. Whiteman (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 879.

In an action for breach of contract to drill an oil well, a special issue submitting what amount would reasonably compensate plaintiff for the expense of moving its apparatus and drilling the well, in view of the answer, held not to have submitted the question of the value of the well. Osage Oil & Refining Co. v. Lee Farm Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 618.
negligence just before and at the time he was injured was too general. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Francis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 342.

Assuming facts.—In action against city for damages from discharge from city's septic sewer tank, requested special issue assuming existence in and around plaintiff's residence of filth, offensive odors, etc., as result of operation of defendant's plant and Genest v. City of Fort Worth (Civ. App.) 96 S. W. 625.

In action for damage to cattle from delay in transit, submission of issues, whether cattle lost more in weight than they would have lost had they been transported within reasonable time, held not erroneous on ground issues assumed cattle were not transported within reasonable time. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1079.

Special issues as to market value of cattle which died held technically subject to the objection that they assumed that the cattle were not transported by defendants with ordinary care. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Sutherland (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 521.

Special issue held not misleading, as assuming defendant's ownership of a car and that plaintiff was in its employ, in connection with preceding issues. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

It is not error for the court in submission of questions to assume as a fact a matter not contested. American Metal Co. v. San Roberto Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 302 S. W. 369.

In action for damages to live stock shipped under contract by which all were to be shipped at one time, submission of issue whether cattle in second shipment lost more than they would have lost if shipped in the first shipment held not to erroneously assume that the failure to ship all of the cattle together was negligence in view of instructions. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Matsler (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 155.

A submission of the question of plaintiffs' adverse possession through certain named persons was held not objectionable as being assumed that such persons were plaintiffs' tenants, and therefore on the weight of evidence, were the facts not sufficient to warrant such assumption. Stark v. Brown (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 811.

In an action against a carrier for damages to a cattle, a special issue as to whether the fact of negligence was the proximate cause of the result of assumed negligence, where the jury were told not to answer the question unless they had found the carrier guilty of negligence in answering a previous question. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Harris Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 255.

In action for secret profits made by stockholder in selling property of corporation after getting corporation to give option to his paid dummy, special issue as to whether option was executed on account of deceit held not objectionable as assuming that stockholder was guilty of deceit. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 273.

In suit involving validity of release, it would have been error to have submitted issue "did the plaintiff believe and rely upon the statement made by defendant's attorney Lumpkin," etc., since it was assumed that the statements therein referred to were made when the evidence was not conclusive as to such matter. Andrus v. California State Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 497.

In an action against a railroad for damage to a shipment of sheep by delay, in view of the charge as a whole, special issue whether the sheep sustained damage as a proximate result of delays, which defendant railroad or any of its connecting carriers could have avoided by ordinary care, held not erroneous as assuming delays were caused by defendant's negligence. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Blackstone & Slaughter (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 268.

Issues on weight of evidence.—A question to the jury held not on the weight of the evidence or objectionable as delegating to the jury the right to pass upon the legality of oath of poll and Pollard (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 183.

In a special issue, "Do you find * * * that defendant allowed fine dust and coal to escape from its conveyors and elevators and accumulate in the coalhouse?" etc., the word "accumulate" was used in the sense of allowing the dust to "remain," and in light of the evidence, suggesting that the mere presence of dust created a dangerous condition. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Challen (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 213.

Contention, in action on guard's bond, that charge was upon the weight of the evidence, because it failed to submit value of certain items of property turned over on prior accounting, will be overruled, where appellants point out no evidence showing that such items were of any greater value than that at which they were accepted by plaintiffs. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 679.

An interrogatory, "Now, if you have found that the defendant * * * was negligent in any or all of the following respects, that is, etc., then was such negligence, if any, the proximate cause of the collision and injuries to the plaintiff," held not upon the weight of the evidence. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Texas v. Lankin (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 172.

In an action for breach of marriage promise, defendant having breached his agreement at a time when he thought plaintiff was guilty of theft, special issue that, if the jury found that defendant had breached the contract, and that plaintiff had not stolen the money, they should then state the amount of actual damages, was not on the weight of the evidence, because, if the jury found a breach and the worthlessness of the woman, actual damages followed inevitably. Vogt v. Guidry (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 345.

In an action for injuries in a crossing collision, special issue whether plaintiff by the exercise of ordinary care would have seen the approaching train in time to have stopped before collision had she been keeping a lookout held erroneous as misleading and confusing, and as assuming that plaintiff was not keeping a lookout. Harrell v.
Leading or suggestive issues.—It is proper in submitting the case on special issues to ask leading questions, if not so framed as to suggest the answer. Schaff v. Snorde (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 238.

In a broker's action for commission, a special issue, following one as to whether sale was to a purchaser procured by the broker, submitting whether the sale was to a third person, and, if so, whether it was to avoid payment of the commission, was not objectionable. S. v. Morehead (Civ. App.) 277 S. W. 588.

Issue whether grantors relied on certain statements and representations of the grantee (involved in the preceding issue), and whether they were thereby induced to issue the instrument in controversy, directing the jury to answer the same "Yes" or "No" as a whole, as suggesting the way it should be answered. Walker v. Amen (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 365.

Undue emphasis.—In an action for injury to a servant by an explosion, the use of a phrase in several questions to jury held not to have laced undue stress upon the mere creation of coal dust as to suggest that the court believed such to be actionable negligence. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Challen (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 213.

In suit by child for injuries from collision with street car, a question submitted, which special issue of negligence, held not to render special issue of negligence and general or partial, or place undue emphasis on any or more, the evidence as a whole. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Allen (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 739.

Sufficiency of verdict or findings in general.—A case being submitted on special issues, the court should not accept a general verdict not responsive thereto. Patterson & Roberts v. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1163.

Judgment for defendant must be affirmed, where plaintiff in his brief assailed only the answer to one special issue; the answers to other issues being sufficient to support the judgment. Magee v. Cavins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1015.

Whether court submitted special issue as to whether defendant was negligent in any of a number of ways, judgment for defendant held to be sustained, if the evidence showed that plaintiff was guilty of any of such acts of negligence. Id.

Finding that speed of defendant's car or the holes in crossing were the "indirect" cause of the collision held insufficient to support verdict for plaintiff. Southern Traction Co. v. Gee (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 992.

If what plaintiff would have realized from sale of apples damaged in transit was proper measure of damages, no judgment could have been entered on jury's answers to issue as to what plaintiff would have realized, because expense which would have been deducted was unknown. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Novit (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 496.

Jury's answers to special issues in action on life policy, involving payment of premium and giving note for part of it, held to leave the actual findings in such doubt that judgment could not be entered thereon. Kansas City Life Ins. Co. v. Jinkens (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 772.

Where the special issues submitted, together with the answers of the jury thereto, authorized a verdict for either party, such verdict is too contradictory to be the basis of a judgment. Maves v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 235.

In an action on a note, where without objection the court charged, if jury answered a question as to a waiver of the landlord's lien and the acceptance of cotton to the affirmative, then they should answer issue No. 4, and the jury answered such issue in the negative, it was unnecessary to reverse under the fourth issue that the cotton was not delivered as indicated. McKelvey v. Gugenheim (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 757.

Although execution of chattel mortgage was undisputed, where court directed jury to find for its foreclosure if they found for plaintiff on the other issues, foreclosure could not be had without an express finding for foreclosure. Perkins v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 789.

In an action by a passenger for personal injuries received while alighting from car, a verdict and findings held not to warrant a judgment for plaintiff in view of findings showing plaintiff's failure to exercise ordinary care. St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 263.

The finding by a jury of a fact not alleged and not supported by any evidence, though submitted by the court, is a nullity, and can form no basis or support for a
A finding that defendant's logging train, on which plaintiff was permitted to ride, was negligently operated, held to warrant judgment in plaintiff's favor, though the jury had answered that the speed of the train was not excessive. Kirby Lumber Co. v. Davis (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 831.

Where each special issue was divided by letter into several questions, jury's answer numbered to correspond with number of issue, and not by the divisions by letter, held sufficiently intelligible for rendition of judgment. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Hucklebee (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 656.

In action for value of accessories in an automobile, delivered to defendants for repairing the jury's affirmative answer to question whether the defendants or any one removed the accessories from the car does not sustain a judgment for plaintiff. J. C. Killgore & Co. v. Whitaker (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 446.

In a servant's action for injuries from exposure to cold while lost on the prairie, findings held sufficient to form a basis for a judgment for plaintiff. C. C. Slaughter Cattle Co. v. Pastrana (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 749.

In action against railroad for loss of cattle through openings in fence on railroad's right of way, where jury, in answer to special issue as to whether 17 head of cattle had escaped through openings complained of, had answered "Yes; at least 10 head," answer as to reasonable value of "said cattle," without specifying whether such amount was for 10 or 17 head of cattle, held sufficient on which to base Judgment, in view of the pleadings, evidence, and instructions. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Baker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 7.

Where a jury is demanded in a divorce case there must be a verdict affirming the material facts alleged in the petition; but the court does not proceed upon the verdict, for his own judgment must be satisfied. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 602.

In an action for personal injuries caused by an explosion of gas, special findings held not to entitle the gas company to judgment. North Texas Gas Co. v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 254.

In action against railroad for injury to shipper, in absence of affirmative finding that injury in car, and not a subsequent injury, was proximate cause of death, or of finding that injury in car and subsequent injury concurred as cause of death, there was no basis for judgment against the railroad. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Texas & Norris (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 1097, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 184 S. W. 261.

In suit to enjoin erection of a live stock barn, judgment for plaintiffs held not erroneous for absence of any affirmative issue raised by their petition submitted to the jury and absence of findings of the jury in response to such affirmative issue submitted. Jacobs & Wright v. Brigham (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 249.

Where the jury, having found that the hogs of plaintiff, died for want of water after defendant cut a dam and emptied the tank, further findings that defendant lessor reserved the right to lease portions of the land and that the death of the animals was not the direct result of draining the water from the tank warranted a judgment for defendant. Wallace v. Prairie Oil & Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 363.

In a tenant's action to enjoin another tenant under a prior lease from the use of water except for certain purposes, in which lessor intervened, seeking cancellation, findings held sufficient to support lessor's suit for cancellation on the ground of fraud. Osborn v. Texas Pac. Coal & Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 329.

In an action for the death of a locomotive fireman, answer to special question, stating that the reason for the flange on a locomotive wheel being worn was that the truck was out of tram, is a finding that the truck was out of tram, which, when sustained by the evidence, is sufficient to show the master's negligence, under the rule of the Interstate Commerce Commission, requiring trucks to be maintained in a safe and suitably condition. Allen v. Ash (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 537.

Failure to answer interrogatories or make findings.—If answers in a special verdict dispose of the controlling issues, judgment may be rendered thereon, although all issues are not answered. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.

Inconsistent findings.—If material findings in answer to special issues are contradictory and in conflict with each other, no judgment can be properly entered. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Wilkerson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 574; Wisdom v. Peek (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 210; Kahn v. Cole (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 556.

For inconsistent findings preventing Judgment, see Baker v. Beattie (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 656.

In action by lessor to forfeit lease for nonpayment of rent, jury findings held not in conflict with findings upon controlling issue that lessee was willful and persistent in his failure to comply with his contractual obligations, and did not raise any equity in lessee's favor. Crawford v. Texas Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 195.

In buyer's action for breach of contract, special findings as to whether plaintiffs had notice of danger of goods when they paid for them, held not inconsistent. Robinson v. S. Samuels & Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 833.
Affirmative answer to issue whether plaintiff was contributorily negligent, with negative answer to issue whether said negligence proximately caused or contributed to cause his injury, under the court's definition of proximate cause, held contradictory, requiring verdict for plaintiff to be set aside. Texas Refining Co. v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 131.

In action for fraud in exchange of dry goods for land, findings that parties finally effected exchange under terms in written instrument, and that, though plaintiff finally took dry goods at price marked, he did not know goods had been re-marked, held not in conflict. Seattle Coal v. N. W. Wagner (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 495.

Findings that husband did not intend to make a lot the wife's separate property and did not know that deed had that effect, but intended to put title in her to protect it from claims of his creditors, were contradictory, and would not support a judgment for husband. Markum v. Markum (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 835.

In a passenger's action for injuries received while alighting, where the jury found plaintiff negligent in failing to look to see the position of the step box, such negligence was the proximate cause of the injury suffered, and a contrary finding must have been the result of misapprehension. St. Louis, S. F. & T. Ry. Co. v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 263.

Where, in a personal injury suit, the answers indicated that the jury was confused by the multifarious and unnecessary issues submitted, and as a result rendered inconsistent and irreconcilable a finding which no intelligent jurors could have reached, a new trial should have been ordered. Bowdoin v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 588.

A judgment for plaintiff should not be rendered, where the jury found that plaintiff did not exercise due care, and in answer to another special issue found that he did exercise due care. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Houston Undertaking Co. (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 84.

In an action on a policy insuring an automobile, unconnected findings of $1,500 as the total damage, and also in such amount as the amount of damage done before the automobile slipped off the sunken ferry, held not necessarily in conflict, in view of the charge. American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Fox (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 82.

In an action by landowners who had released purchaser on faith of agreement by defendant bank to furnish funds so that they could stock their ranch, special finding as to the making of the agreement held not inconsistent with other findings. Sutherland v. Citizens' State Bank (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 115.

In an action to cancel deed, finding that grantor did not have sufficient mental capacity to comprehend the nature and effect of his act held not inconsistent with a finding that he was unduly influenced. Wisdom v. Peek (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 210.

It is the duty of the trial court to determine, if reasonably possible, what the jury meant by special findings, and to reconcile apparent conflicts between the findings. West Lumber Co. v. Keen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 625.

Answers by the jury, in an action to cancel a deed, to questions whether or not there was a delivery of funds notes as consideration, held not in any real conflict. Dendinger v. Martin (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1095.

In an action for death at a railroad crossing, a finding that deceased automobilist failed to exercise such care in looking for an approaching train as would have been exercised by a person of ordinary prudence was not in irreconcilable conflict with findings that deceased was not guilty of contributory negligence, and that his negligence was not the proximate cause of the accident. Texas & N. O. Ry. Co. v. Wagner (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 377.

Special findings as to contributory negligence of one killed at crossing held not in conflict. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Wilkerson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 574.

When a separate and distinct finding of negligence is made in conformity with the pleadings and proof, although a different and additional finding of negligence is unwarranted as a reasonable interpretation of the distinctly submitted issues, the valid finding should be upheld and the improper one be disregarded; the liability being the same if the improper finding be eliminated. Schaff v. Morris (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 195.

In an action against a railroad for diverting surface water and causing it to flow upon and into plaintiff's crops, where the jury in response to special issue found that the injury was caused solely by water which fell upon land other than that of railroad's right of way, and not by water which had been diverted by the railroad, and in response to other special issue made an inconsistent finding that, if the railroad had not constructed its railroad in the manner complained of, the crops would not have been injured, it was error for court to render judgment for plaintiff; such findings being in irreconcilable conflict. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Hanson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 375.

In trespass to try title where plaintiff rested his claim on limitation, and it was agreed that plaintiff was entitled to recover unless he entered on the land under a claim asserted by a certain other person, answers held in conflict. Dow v. Horne (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 562.

A finding that automobilist could have crossed a railroad in safety, if he had reduced the speed of his car to 6 miles per hour, was not irreconcilable with a finding acquitted him of contributory negligence; the crossing not being obscured and Acts 35th Leg. (1917) c. 207, § 17 (Vernon's Ann. Pen. Code Supp. 1918, art. 820), not applying. Hines v. Richardson (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 889.

Construction and operation.—In lessor's action to forfeit lease for nonpayment of rent, jury finding that lessee was negligent in believing that lessor would not, without notice, forfeit lease for failure to pay rent, was equivalent to saying that such belief was unjustified. Crawford v. Texas Improvement Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 185.

In an action for damages caused by having to walk back after being carried past.
a station, a finding held a finding that plaintiff would have suffered the same damage if she had hired a team. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Thorn (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 778.

Where jury found upon special issues that speed of defendant's car and holes in crossing were indirect causes of collision with plaintiff's wagon, and that plaintiff was negligent in crossing while approaching defendant, plaintiff was unwarranted. Southern Traction Co. v. Gee (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 992.

In action for damages by wrongful dispossession of lessee, finding of jury that lessor had not dealings with dispossession did not require judgment for all defendants. Mc-Cauley v. McElroy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317.

In suit to recover on note of president of corporation, finding construed as finding that note was executed in consideration of plaintiffs' forbearance to sue company on its contract to repurchase stock. Blass v. Wallace (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 506.

A finding by jury to the effect that the building site was not improved when defendant sold to plaintiff, was not contradicted by evidence presented by defendant. McElroy v. Mc-Cauley (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 385.

A finding by jury to the effect that the building site was not improved when defendant sold to plaintiff, was not contradicted by evidence presented by defendant. McElroy v. Mc-Cauley (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 385.

A finding that the building site was not improved when defendant sold to plaintiff, was not contradicted by evidence presented by defendant. McElroy v. Mc-Cauley (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 385.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In action for injuries in collision, jury's finding that railroad was guilty of no negligence which was the proximate cause of the accident was conclusive, irrespective of finding on issue of contributory negligence, unless the findings were irreconcilable conflict. Robinson v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 285.

In action for injury to plaintiff's horse in collision, finding that horse was injured in collision should not be set aside. Dye v. Transit Co. 190 S. W. 273.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.

In determining whether parties agreed that defendant warehouseman might store plaintiff's goods elsewhere, that defendant had privilege of restoring furniture, covers both office and household goods, where pleadings and evidence treated them as one. Thornton v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 831.
age system was a nuisance, an answer to another special issue that they did not believe the operation constituted a nuisance, was a mere expression of opinion. Brewster v. City of Forney (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 175, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 636.

A finding by a jury that land was damaged $10 per acre by the construction and operation of a sewerage system was a finding that such construction and operation constituted a nuisance. Id.

It is the duty of the court to accept a finding of the jury with the interpretation that will support the judgment, if possible, where such finding has several interpretations. Townsend v. Day (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 252.

In an action for the death of an automobilist at a railroad crossing, a finding that deceased was negligent, was not a finding that such negligence was the proximate cause of the injury resulting in his death. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Wilkerson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 574.

In an action for death, answer in the negative to a special issue, "Do you believe from the evidence that the deceased, W., did any act or failed to do any act that contributed to the injury causing his death?" had the inevitable effect to acquit deceased of contributory negligence. Id.

Where the jury found that the purchaser procured by broker was ready, able, and willing to purchase on the terms stated to the broker, a subsequent finding that he refused to purchase on terms agreed on with the owner evidently referred to additional terms subsequently agreed on and does not prevent recovery by the broker of his commission. Gilliam v. Jones (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 417.

Special findings on sufficient evidence that the operation of defendant's cotton gin materially interfered with plaintiffs in the use and enjoyment of their premises, and that no equipment could be provided to eliminate such injury, held not to require a judgment enjoining the gin as a nuisance in view of other findings. Oliver v. Forney Cotton Oil & Ginning Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1094.

In an action in construing answer to a special interrogatory as dealing with lumber already sold and delivered, and not applicable to the purchase price of lumber thereafter sold, and hence the denial of credit was not error. Adamson Lumber Co. v. J. E. King Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 702.

In an action for a nuisance, a finding that the disposition of the contents of a septic tank by burial on the premises, to which plaintiff had objected, was the proper method of disposing of the contents, does not establish that it was the only practicable method, where the evidence justified a conclusion that the contents could have been hauled away. Town of Gilmer v. Pickett (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 347.

In a switchman's action, under the federal Employers' Liability Act (U. S. Comp. St. §§ 8657-8665), finding that the foreman in failing to notify switchman of a change of method in switching and uncoupling cars proximately caused, or contributed to cause, switchman's injuries, held to necessarily embrace the element essential to proximate cause that the foreman should have anticipated injury. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Estes (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1087.

The findings being unambiguous and responsive to the questions propounded by the trial court, neither the trial court nor the Court of Civil Appeals had a right to say their meaning was different from that evidenced by the language used. Tompkins v. Hooker (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 351.

The findings being unambiguous and responsive to the questions propounded, neither the trial court nor the Court of Civil Appeals had a right to say their meaning was different from that evidenced by the language used. Id.

In an action for injuries in the absence of any objection to the issues or request for special charges, those submitted will be presumed to conform with the pleadings and evidence, without necessity of submitting the issues submitted to any theory relied upon, it follows that, the jury having found plaintiff guilty of negligence, such negligence bars recovery unless the pleadings or evidence raise the issue of discovered peril, so that, under this article, all facts necessary to support the judgment can be deemed found. Baker v. Shutter (Com. App.) 311 S. W. 349.

In an action for deceit in the sale of an undivided interest in an oil and gas lease, an answer to a special issue as to the reasonable market value of the lease and the wells held to refer to the value of the lease as an entirety, and not limited to the interest in controversy. Pickrell v. Imperial Petroleum Co. (Civ. App.) 312 S. W. 412.

A special verdict rendered by the jury must, like many other instruments, be construed in the light of the surrounding circumstances. Id.

In action for injuries to jitney bus passenger in collision with a truck, a finding that the driver of the jitney was negligent and that such negligence was the proximate cause of the accident necessarily included the finding that the negligence of the driver of the truck was not the sole cause of the injury. Interstate Casualty Co. of Birmingham v. Hopkins (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 354.

Review by appellate court in general—Submission or refusal to submit findings.—Where appellants took no bill of exception and made no objection of any character in trial court to refusal to submit issue, they waived right to complain, in Court of Appeals, of refusal of their request for submission. Pantaze v. Farmer (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 526.

Sufficiency of evidence to support findings.—The sufficiency of evidence to support a finding will not be considered on appeal, where the submission of the issue was not objected to in lower court on ground of insufficiency of evidence. Gillespie v. Williams (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 975.
Though defendant did not object to submission of an issue to the jury, it had the right to complain in its motion for new trial and on appeal of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the jury's finding on such issue. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 822.

Under arts. 1970, 1971, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 59, § 5, a party may complain in writing, in submitting special issues of an adverse verdict on a particular issue, because of the evidence being insufficient to sustain the verdict thereon, though there was no objection in the first instance to the court's submission of the issue. Short v. Blair & Hughes Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 427.

Under this article, it is the province of the court to determine a matter as to which no special issue was submitted, and as to which the jury made no special finding. Walker v. Irby (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 331; Brod v. Luce (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 553; Hines v. Purry (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 339.

Court may make specific finding for item and render judgment therefor without finding by jury when issue is not submitted to jury and none requested; there being evidence supporting finding. Garrett v. Dodson (Civ. App.) 159 S. W. 675.

Where no charges were requested by defendants as to either of issues referred to in counterpleadings, it finding for plaintiff was sustained by judgment, under this article, it will be presumed trial court made such finding. Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Goodman (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 142.

Where defendant did not request special finding of certain issue raised by supplemental pleading in reply to defendant's cross-action, it will be presumed on appeal that court found against defendant on such issue. Sanger v. Futch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 631.

Where answers to special interrogatories are in themselves an incomplete verdict, it will be presumed on appeal that the trial court made the necessary findings to support the judgment, if there is evidence justifying such findings. Baker v. Shafter (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 961.

Whatever may be state of evidence, a judge cannot base a judgment upon a finding of fact contrary to verdict of jury upon the issue. Vineyard v. Miller Land Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 608.

The rule that every issue, whether submitted or not, necessary to support judgment, should be deemed to have been found by the court in such manner as to support a judgment is inapplicable to an issue in support of which there is no evidence. Fuller v. Cameron (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 711.

This article did not relieve the court from the duty to comply with art. 1970, providing that the judge shall, unless expressly waived by the parties, deliver written charges, or submit special issues, where the latter were requested in due time. Dorsey v. Cogdell (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 303.

Under this article, the Court of Civil Appeals will presume a finding of the trial judge necessary to sustain the judgment. Rupert v. Swindle (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 671.

Under art. 1971, as amended by Acts 1965, it is the duty of the Supreme Court to dispose of a case as though conclusions had been found warranted by evidence and supporting the trial court's judgment. Stevens v. Cobern, 109 Tex. 574, 213 S. W. 925. A judgment entered after finding on special issues will be sustained, though all issues on cross-examination not submitted, as it must be presumed that the court found on necessary facts, under this article. Friemel v. Coker (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1106.

Although it was the court's duty to submit all issues of fact to the jury, under this article, yet, if there was no request for a submission of the issues, the court itself could make a finding on it. 1d.

Under this article, in absence of a statement of facts, Court of Civil Appeals must presume evidence sustained trial court in finding all issues necessary to support judgment for plaintiff, if not in conflict with any issues submitted to the jury, and warranted by plaintiff's pleadings. Bartlett Lumber Co. v. Chaney (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 837.

Where the case was submitted on special issues, the court could not find issue so submitted as to which the jury disagreed, so that it could not be presumed on appeal, even in absence of a statement of facts, that the court made findings on such issue supported by the evidence as were necessary to sustain the judgment. Lakewood Heights Co. v. McCulision (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1109.

When the court has sought a finding of a jury on an issue, or has been requested in writing to submit an issue, it will not be presumed that the judge has so found the issue as to support a judgment, certainly not if the judgment should be contrary to the findings of the jury, even if the issue submitted or requested is not as clear or as accurate as it should be. First Nat. Bank v. Rush (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 378.

Though the special verdict must, though sufficient, yet where the court rendered judgment for plaintiff thereon the judgment must be upheld, being supported by the testimony: It was assumed that the court found facts necessary to support the judgment. Adamson Lumber Co. v. J. E. King Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 762.

Where only one issue was submitted, and no request was made for the submission of another to support the finding upon every other issue presented by the pleadings, the verdict was a sufficient basis for the judgment for plaintiff, in view of this article. Stanton v. Security Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 854.

It is not necessary for plaintiff to require the submission of special issues as to matters of defense, in order to escape the presumption of an adverse finding on such issues in support of a judgment for the defendant, under arts. 1970-1972, 1955. Christian v. Dunavent (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 875.

See also notes to art. 1985.

Nature of action or issue in general. Where an issue of fraud was not submitted, and there was no request therefor, nor any showing of it in the judgment or finding thereon, it will be presumed on appeal that such issue was found by the court against the defendant under this article. Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 706.

Although services of doctors were rendered at special instance and on credit of employer, where no issue was requested as to whether employé became liable therefor, it will be presumed that court so found, so that reasonable charges for such services were properly included in judgment. Fisheries Co. v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 343.

In the absence of any finding by the jury that a homestead was never abandoned, a finding by the court to the contrary must be presumed in support of a judgment. Thompson v. War (Civ. App.) 302 S. W. 1058.

In a suit to recover state school surveys, contention that judgment against defendant for rents was error held without merit, in view of this article, as to presumption of findings where issues not submitted. Lasater v. Jamison (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1151.

In a boundary dispute, where court instructed that if it should be found that several lines were located by a surveyor, with reference to certain mounds, then the verdict should be for plaintiff, "otherwise, the finding should be for the defendant!" and the judgment of general verdict for plaintiff, there is no presumption that issues not submitted were resolved by the court in plaintiff's favor. Hankins v. Dilley (Civ. App.) 308 S. W. 549.

Where there was evidence which would support a finding that the laws of Mexico were substantially the same as the laws in Texas, and the issue was not submitted to the jury, in upholding action of court in taking jurisdiction, presumption must be indulged, under this article, that the court so found. El Paso Electric Ry. Co. v. Carruth (Civ. App.) 308 S. W. 984.

Where it was necessary for court, in a boundary line case submitted on special issues only, to refer to the evidence to determine the position of a line and the description of land for the judgment, the court will be presumed to have found such issue if supported by evidence in a way to support the judgment. Thompson v. Russell (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 540.

In such case it must be held that appellant consented thereto, where he failed to request the submission of location and description. Id.

In action for value of automobile accessories it cannot be presumed, in order to support a judgment for plaintiff on special verdict, that the trial court found defendants removed the accessories, where the evidence only showed that they were removed while the car was in defendants' possession, and there was testimony denying removal by defendants or any one in their employ. J. C. Kilgore & Co. v. Whitaker (Civ. App.) 317 S. W. 445.

Where the question whether a conspiracy between a mother and daughter to extort money from defendant was not submitted to the jury, there being no request for submission, and the court admitted as against the daughter, suing for breach of marriage promise, the evidence of declarations of the mother which would not have been admissible but for the conspiracy, it will be presumed that it was established. Wells v. Scales (Civ. App.) 322 S. W. 303.

If there was any issue as to appellant's domicile during a certain period, on account of his failure to request the submission of such issue, he consented that court should decide it, under this article. Bobbitt v. Bobbitt (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 478.

Court, having submitted issue of notice of fraudulent conveyance, a material issue by virtue of art. 3906, could not himself make a finding thereon under this article, because the jury did not answer it, having no right to submit his judgment for that of the jury on an unanswered question. Ford v. Honse (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 860.

Where the evidence authorized the trial court to find that the separate ownership of land by a wife was open and notorious and that inquiry of her tenant would have informed the purchaser that the property was her separate property, the court will be presumed, in a case submitted on special issues, under this article, when necessary to support the judgment, to have found such facts. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Chote (Com. App.) 232 S. W. 285.

Where defendant did not request finding as to whether nuisance was permanent or finding of damages if the nuisance was temporary, and the question was a question of fact for the jury, it must be presumed in support of judgment allowing damages for permanent nuisance that the trial court found that the nuisance was permanent, in view of this article. Town of Jacksonville v. W. S. McCracken (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 284.

Where no issue of fraud per se was submitted to the jury, the Court of Appeals

396 Supp. V. S. Civ. St. Tex.—43

HANKINS, Chief Justice:

The judgment of the trial court in favor of the plaintiff in error is reversed and remanded. The judgment of the trial court in favor of the defendant in error is affirmed.
must presume in support of the trial court’s judgment for plaintiff, that the trial court found against fraud by him where the record supported such finding. Mason v. Peterson (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 567.

Although question whether agent, who consented to concurrent insurance, was still insurer’s agent, was not submitted to jury, where case was tried upon special issues, and there was testimony tending to show agency presumption is that judge found such fact before judgment was rendered for plaintiff. Prussian Nat. Ins. Co. v. Dalton (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1075.

Where plaintiff sued for breach of contract, and defendant pleaded counterclaim which was not submitted with the other special issues, the Court of Appeals must assume that the findings of the court were such as to support the judgment. Thompson v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1124.

Where failure of court to submit question whether plaintiff had waived his right to rescind was not complained of, it will be presumed upon appeal that court resolved such issue in favor of plaintiff, who procured judgment. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 199.

In action to cancel deeds claimed by defendant to have been deeds of trust where defendant failed to request special finding in favor of lien on land, it will be presumed on appeal, in support of judgment for plaintiff, that court found against legality of lien. Sanger v. Futch (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 631.

Where jury found that personality sold to a creditor was worth considerably more than debt, and that the creditor was a bona fide creditor, court was not precluded from passing upon issue of constructive fraud, which was not submitted to the jury; court having defined “bona fide” as meaning “real.” Watson v. Schultz (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 958.

Where it was doubtful whether defendant would have issued fire policy, where dealer had taken notes in full payment, to have submitted issue whether automobile was fully paid, or had not paid, would not have made it an ultimate issue for judgment; and, as defendant did not request submission of issue whether misrepresentation was material, it must be presumed on appeal that it was found in favor of the judgment entered. California Ins. Co. v. Eads (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 218.

In an action for conversion, plaintiff claiming both as a mortgagee and as a purchaser, where court submitted case upon special issues, and defendant did not ask to have issue of title by purchase submitted and there was testimony tending to prove such title, it will be presumed that court found in plaintiff’s favor upon that issue, under this article, if necessary to sustain a judgment in favor of plaintiff. Citizens’ Guaranty State Bank v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 271.

In trespass to try title, where there was evidence to authorize finding that grantee did not promise to pay mortgage on land conveyed, it will be presumed, in order to support judgment rendered, that court so found. Clark v. Scott (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 728.

In an action on a vendor’s lien note wherein the defense of payment to plaintiff’s agent was interposed, although the case was submitted on special issues and neither party requested the submission of the question of agency, it will not be presumed that the court found in favor of defendants on such issue, where an inconsistent finding was made showing that judgment was rendered on the theory that the agent was the agent of defendants, to which defendants made no objection. First State Bank of Abilene v. Shaw (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 442.

There was no presumption on appeal in favor of the verdict under this article, as to the issue, not submitted to the jury, of the discharge of a surety by dissolution of the chattel mortgage, security, where there was no affirmative evidence to establish what became of the property. Wahl v. Ramsey (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 559.

In action to cancel deed for fraud, in which it was claimed that grantor by delay waived the fraud and affirmed the sale, it must be presumed in support of the judgment for grantee that the court, in failing to submit such question to the jury before making a finding therein, impliedly found that grantor had not waived the fraud. Baugh v. Baugh (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 796.

Where the evidence was sufficient to show that insurance company made a bank its agent and waived the requirement that the bank should have a receipt, but the jury did not specifically find that the bank as agent collected the premium that finding may be imputed to the trial court to support a judgment sustaining the policy. Kansas City Life Ins. Co. v. Elmore (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 709.

In action on policy insuring against illness common to both sexes, where there was evidence from which a court or jury could have found that a disease was common to both sexes, it will be presumed under the statute, where that issue was not submitted and no request was made for its submission, that it was determined by the court in favor of the insured, the successful party below. National Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Weaver (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 754.

Where no request was made for submission of a special issue on the value of attorney’s services, it must be presumed in support of the court’s judgment that the trial court found the amount held that the amount for which judgment was rendered against such defendant, there being evidence to authorize it, was reasonable. Chapman v. Gross R. Scruggs & Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 471.

In an action to cancel an oil and gas lease which was delivered by a bank in whose name it was issued, it will be presumed that the court found that the bank was not negligent; no issue as to the bank’s negligence having been submitted to the jury, though the case was tried on special issues. Hapgood v. City Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 775.

Negligence.—Where defendant interposed plea of contributory negligence which was not submitted, the statute would require the court on appeal to presume that trial court found that plaintiffs were guilty of contributory negligence if necessary to an affirmance of judgment. Washington v. Austin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 382.

In an action for injuries to a pedestrian, struck by a locomotive while crossing a street without maintaining a proper lookout, evidence held sufficient to warrant the court in completing the verdict by a finding of negligence on the part of the engineer which proximately caused the injury. Baker v. Shafter (Civ. App.) 298 S. W. 961.

An implied finding in a personal injury action that the servant was not a farm laborer within the Workmen’s Compensation Act must stand on appeal, unless the evidence is insufficient to support it, in view of this article. C. C. Slaughter Cattle Co. v. Pastrana (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 740.

Where employee was killed by an interurban car while crossing the track to board it, and the jury found on special issue that defendant’s operatives did not have care under control, it will be presumed on appeal that the trial court found that defendant’s servants were negligent in approaching and passing the station at a high and dangerous rate of speed, and that such negligence was the proximate cause of the employee’s death, no special issue as to negligence having been submitted. Texas Electric Ry. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1081.

Damages and amount of recovery.—In action by church trustees against contractor for amount over price expended in completing work, jury not being required by issue to find what sum material on ground brought after completion, court properly could do so. Garrett v. Dodson (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 675.

Where in a case submitted on special issues, the evidence is overwhelming that plaintiff had suffered the injuries alleged, it will be presumed that this issue was found by the court for plaintiff. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Challen (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 213.

Where plaintiff sued for breach of contract, and defendant pleaded a counterclaim and produced evidence thereon, but the counterclaim was not included in the special issues, the court had a right on proper evidence to deduct from plaintiff’s damages as found by the jury, the amount of the counterclaim. Thompson v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1184.

Notwithstanding art. 4704, relating to the assessment of damages in death actions, the court, under this article, may, in a death action submitted on special issues, determine the question of the amount of damages, where the only special issue submitted or requested on the question of damages was to the yearly earnings of deceased. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Huckabee (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 329.

In action for breach of marriage promise, in absence of request to have jury pass upon issue, court had right to find that, if there was a breach of contract, plaintiff had sustained injuries for which she might claim compensation. Punderburgh v. Skinner (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 452.

Failure to submit issue not error unless requested.—Where servant’s case for injuries was submitted on special issues, failure to submit issue whether negligent acts were proximate cause of injuries was not error in absence of request under this article. Srawn Coal Co. v. Trojan (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 256.

In suit for commission, where jury’s finding that there was no satisfactory sale was supported by sufficient evidence, and there was no objection to questions submitted, or any request for additional questions, judgment for defendant will not be disturbed. Heidritter v. Keith Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 885.

Appellant cannot complain of omission from an issue which he did not seek to correct by requesting submission of a proper issue. Santa Fé TIE & Lumber Preserving Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 164.

Defendant, having failed to request submission of question whether deceased was in position of peril, held not entitled to urge objection that special issue submitting question of its motorman’s negligence after discovering deceased was on weight of evidence assuming that deceased was in position of peril. Southern Traction Co. v. Bogum (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1129.
In action by intending passenger injured when he attempted to sit in a defective seat, submission of the issue, "Was plaintiff of himself guilty of contributory negligence in sitting in said seat as he did?" was not erroneous, in the absence of a correct request for a more specific submission. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 378.

Contestation that court erred in overruling appellant's exception to main charge cannot be sustained, where bill of exception discloses that objection was to omission alone, since, under this article, failure to submit an issue is not ground for reversal, unless submission was requested in writing. Frick v. International & G. N. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 198.

Where case is submitted upon special issues, failure to submit an issue does not present a ground of reversal, unless its submission has been requested in writing by the complaining party, in view of this article. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 679.

Assignment of error complaining of court's failure to submit requested issue to jury, neither it nor statement under it showing that plaintiff in error requested submission of any such issue, and record not showing that charge of court was excepted to for failing to submit issue, cannot be considered. Neeley v. White (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 991.

Under this article, failure to submit a special issue is not error, where its submission was not requested in writing. Douglass v. Wallace (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 530.

Where a cause is submitted on special issues and there are no special issues submitted by the opposite party from his viewpoint, it will be presumed such party is satisfied with those submitted. Richey v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 214.

An assignment that the special issue on contributory negligence narrowed the defense cannot be sustained, where the issue followed generally the language of the answer, and there is no reason why it was erroneous, and that the claim that it should have been stricken out; it being the duty of defendant in such case to prepare and present a charge as required by this article. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 292.

Too great a generalization by the trial court in submitting ultimate issues of fact to the jury will not be reviewed, even upon timely objection, in the absence of correct special issues tendered by the objecting party, unless there is affirmative error in the issues submitted by the court. Texas City Transp. Co. v. Winters (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 541, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 366, and rehearing denied (Com. App.) 224 S. W. 1087.

Where there was no request for the submission to the jury of an issue, there was no error in withholding it from the jury. Leach v. Leach (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 287.

Submission of a special issue as to contributory negligence over the defendant's objection that issue did not apply acts of deceased to the facts as disclosed by the evidence, and permitted jury to speculate, was unavailing on appeal, where defendant did not request special issue grouping the facts relied on to constitute contributory negligence. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Willkerson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 674.

Failure of the trial court, in a switchman's action for personal injuries, to submit the issue of the foreman's anticipation of injury as related to proximate cause, was not prejudicial in the absence of refusal by the trial court to submit a correct special issue on such subject at the request of defendant. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. v. Estes (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 1987.

The court's failure to submit a particular issue is not properly before the appellate court where it does not appear from assignment of error that appellant requested the submission of any such issue or filed any written objections to the charge because it was not submitted. Irwin v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 522.

In an action for breach of sale contract, where the defendants pleaded alteration and inferior quality of the goods, a judgment for defendants on a verdict by the jury, to the issue of alteration was submitted, will be affirmed, though the challenged alteration was immaterial, where the evidence would support a finding for defendants on the issue of quality, and no request was made to submit that issue to the jury. Federal Stock Food Co. v. Thomas-Tyler Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 528.

Submission to submit issue is not available on appeal, in absence of request therefor. Jenison v. Estes (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 797.

Objections to issues.—Where objections to an issue were general, specific objection, not included therein, cannot be urged on appeal. Santa Fe Tie & Lumber Preserving Co. v. Collins (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 164.

Objections to submission of special issues will not be considered, unless by proper authentication the record discloses that the objections were presented in the court below within the time prescribed. Southern Traction Co. v. Rogan (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1135.

An assignment of error to the refusal of an issue requested will not be considered, when no objection was made in the trial court to such refusal. Anderson v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 754.

In absence of exception to submission of any of the issues, appellees waived right thereafter to complain that evidence was insufficient to support findings not so objected to. Pantaze v. Farmer (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 521.

Even were the articles of the statute relating to the filing of objections and exceptions to giving and refusing of charges applicable when case is submitted on special issues, sufficiency of evidence to support a finding is an open question on appeal, not waived by submission without objection, having been made ground of motion for new trial. Abbon v. Electric Express & Baggage Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 717.
That a special issue did not give jury a standard by which they were to be guided in determining the matter of agency is not ground for complaint where no request was made to correct the omission. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 273.

Objection that special issue as to whether option was executed on account of deceit did not give jury any standard to guide them, is unavailing in absence of request therefor. Id.

An objection that evidence to support a special issue submitted in the main charge held not to be a mere complaint that said special issue ought not to have been submitted to the jury. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Abdon. 110 Tex. 235, 218 S. W. 1050.

An exception to special issues in court's charge reciting that it was taken in proper time and properly signed by counsel, and which was indorsed by the court. "O. K. Ordered filed," is sufficient to show that the exceptions were presented to the court at the time and in the manner required by statute. Rosser v. Cole (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 510.

In action by broker to recover commission court erred in submitting special issue, "Did defendant have his land listed with the plaintiff?" in refusing to further instruct that, if the person with whom the land was listed was acting as agent of plaintiff, then the listing would inure to the benefit of the plaintiff and plaintiff need not go further and request issue whether such person was the agent of plaintiff, and whether the property was listed with such agent, under arts. 1970-1972, 1986, since the charge was sufficient to call attention to matter omitted from special issue. Christian v. Dunavent (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 875.

See also, notes to art. 1981a.

Form of judgment.—See Aycock v. Paraffine Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 851; notes to art. 1990.

Conclusiveness of verdict.—When case is submitted to jury on special issues, trial court cannot, under this article, disregard its finding, though without support in evidence, and must enter judgment in conformity with verdict. Stone v. Bare (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1102.

Under this article, a special verdict should be upheld unless there is no evidence to sustain it. Sanger v. Putch (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 681.

In view of arts. 1986, 1990, the trial court should render judgment on jury's findings of special issues, unless verdict be set aside or new trial granted. Id.

Plaintiff's vendor's explicit testimony that he had not waived his vendor's lien held to preclude review of special verdict to that effect in view of this article. George v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 835.

The holder of benefit certificate in a fraternal benefit association is conclusively presumed to know the constitution and by-laws of the association which form part of his policy so that a finding that he did not know a provision thereof will be disregarded. Carter v. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 239.

Art. 1987. [1333] [1333] Jury to render general or special verdict as directed.

General or special verdict.—See Cole v. Estell (Sup.) 6 S. W. 175; notes to art. 1982. See also, notes to art. 1984a.

Discretion of court.—It was assigned as error that the court submitted special issues. Held, that the statute (Rev. St. 1579, arts. 1327-1329, regarding verdicts) makes this a matter within the discretion of the court. Cole v. Crawford, 63 Tex. 124, 5 S. W. 846.

Art. 1988. [1333] [1333] Verdict to comprehend whole issue or all the issues submitted.

Failure to answer or agree on some issues.—Court, having submitted an issue to the jury, cannot make a finding thereon; the jury having failed to answer the same. Benton v. Jones (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 193; Peterson v. Clay (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1112.

No judgment can be properly entered in a cause submitted on special issues where the jury fails to answer material matters so presented to them, under this article. Goggin v. Wells Fargo & Co. Express (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 246; Ford v. Horse (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 860.

In actions for injuries in collision at crossing, where jury found, in answer to special issues, that plaintiffs were negligent, failure to find on other issues was immaterial, and did not preclude judgment for defendant railroad. Sellers v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 397.

Where appellant had requested a special issue, which the jury had failed to answer, the court could not substitute its finding, but should have declared a mistrial instead of rendering judgment. Early-Foster Co. v. Tom B. Burnett & Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 316.

Response by the jury to material special issues, "Unable to say," when categorically directed to answer yes or no, amounted to no answer at all, and judgment could not be rendered thereon, although the court told the jury to answer the questions "as best they could." Goggin v. Wells Fargo & Co. Express (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 246.

Where the jury answered some questions submitted to them, but failed to agree on others, the question whether the answers made were sufficient to enable the court to render any judgment is within the trial court's discretion, and cannot be reviewed in the absence of abuse of that discretion. Phoebeus v. Connellee (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 982.

Art. 1989. [1333] [1333] Judge, on request, to state conclusions of fact and law separately, statement to be filed.

Duty to make and file in general.—Where, by the pleadings and evidence, issues of fact are raised, failure of the trial judge after due request to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, as required by arts. 1989, 2075, is reversible error. Beavers v. Supreme Home of Ancient Order of Pilgrims (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 713; Irwin v. State Nat. Bank of Fort Worth (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 246.

In absence of statement of facts, failure of trial judge to file findings and conclusions, as required by this article, requires reversal of judgment. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Tuggle (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 910.

On trial without a jury, it was trial court's right and duty to pass on issues of fact. National Bank of Garland v. Gough (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1119.

Case will not be reversed because of court's failure to file findings and conclusions upon appellant's request, where appellant filed statements of facts containing all the testimony, and in his brief concedes that the testimony is practically undisputed, and expresses the belief that the appellate court can determine the issues from such statement. Aukerman v. Bremer (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 261.

Where statement of facts has been filed containing all the testimony introduced on the trial, court on appeal may determine the issues of the case from such statement, notwithstanding lower court's failure to file findings and conclusions. Id.

Where record shows that cause of action was barred, that defendant pleaded the bar, and that judgment of county court on certiorari from justice court states that special exception was taken and judgment rendered, assignment that court erred in not filing findings of fact and conclusions of law will be overruled; there being no facts to be found, and failure to file conclusions of law, if error, being harmless. Hill v. Patraka (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 506.

Under this article, where trial is by jury and case submitted upon special issues, to which jury returned their answers, and judgment of court upon motion of defendants was entered upon such verdict in their favor, court was not required to file findings of fact and conclusions of law. Carl v. Setttagast (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 506.

Where the evidence is undisputed, the appellate court may declare its legal effect, and the fact that the trial court did not enter finding on the undisputed evidence is ground for reversal. Schaff v. Kennedy (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 223.

It was error for trial court to fail and refuse to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, though duly requested. Culwell v. Allen (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 352.

Time for making and filing.—See Lester v. Oldham (Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 575; notes to art. 2075.

Facts and conclusions to be found.—Where a city charter is made a public act to be read in evidence without proof, it should be cited as a law and not found as a fact. City of Austin v. Great Southern Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 483.

Requests for findings.—Where no request is made for findings on a certain issue, error cannot be assigned for failure to make findings on such issue. School Dist. No. 7 v. Frazier (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 546; Spearman v. Mims (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 572.

There is no right to the request that the writing, Grier v. Trevino (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 574; Irwin v. State Nat. Bank of Fort Worth (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 246.

After the court has entered an order showing a request and authorizing the findings to be filed, the person requesting the findings to be filed need not again call upon the court for or request the findings. Lester v. Oldham (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 575.

Where a party is dissatisfied with findings or conclusions as made because not sufficiently full and definite, he cannot complain unless he has made request for more specific findings. Tingha v. Kennedy (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 65.

Where a husband claimed that he furnished the purchase price of land, and put it in the name of his wife to be held in trust for him, a finding that the land was the separate property of the wife was in effect a finding that the husband intended to make a gift to his wife, and was sufficient. In the absence of a request for more specific finding. Id.

Where there is a statement of facts filed, but no findings of fact or conclusions of law, motion for new trial, or bill of exceptions, the judgment will be held conclusive on the facts, unless defeated by some testimony that shows that another judgment should have properly been rendered; no request to file findings of fact or conclusions of law having been made. Pittman & Harrison Co. v. Knowlan Machine & Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 618.

Where request or motion for findings of fact was never called to the attention of the trial judge, and his action thereon was never properly invoked, he was not in error for failure to file findings of fact and conclusions of law. Johnson v. Frost (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 555.

Preparation and form in general.—A bill of exceptions cannot be considered as a part of the statement of facts, nor as part of the judgment, or as a finding of fact by the court upon which the judgment is based. Texas Midland R. R. v. O'Kelley (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 152.

It was not reversible error for the judge, in open court and over defendant's objection, to request counsel for plaintiff to prepare the findings and conclusions, where the judge replied to the objection that he would not sign and approve them unless found to be correct, and they were subsequently submitted to him, and signed and approved; there being no real delegation of judicial function. Berkman v. D. M. Oberman Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 838.

Separate statement of facts and law.—That conclusions of law and fact are to some extent interwoven in the findings of fact does not necessitate reversal of the case. Leonard v. Torrance (Civ. App.) 2.0 S. W. 295.

Sufficiency in general.—The court's findings should be of facts, and should not include evidence which it thought established, as facts, findings made. Spearman v. Mims (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 570.

In suit by broker for commission in which defendants alleged that agency had been canceled, and that one of defendants, and not plaintiff, was the procuring cause of the sale, held that court's findings of fact were sufficient to comply with arts. 1985-1991, requiring only a statement of conclusions on issuable facts, and not a statement of the evidence. Leonard v. Torrance (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 295.

It is unnecessary for the court to state the evidence upon which it bases a finding of fact, nor the reasons therefor. Kennedy v. Kennedy (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 581.

In conclusion of payees, plaintiff did not take into consideration a defendant's latent and legal possesion, by requiring exting it indorsed to aid in further negotiation, a finding that the note was never delivered to payees. "in the sense that they advanced any money thereon," held not objectionable. Rabb v. Seidel (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 607.

Conformity to pleadings, issues, and proof.—Where it is assigned as error that the court did not make certain findings of fact, such assignments, involving facts contradictory to findings made, will be overruled where the findings made are supported by the evidence. School Dist. No. 7 v. Frazier (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 546.

Trial court's finding of fact, not supported by any allegation in pleadings of either party, cannot be considered. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., v. Schwartz (Civ. App.) 265 S. W. 156.

Requested findings in conflict with trial court's findings, which were sustained by evidence, held properly refused. Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. City of Port Arthur (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 862.

In action for injuries received in collision between motor truck and street car, a finding that it was customary for defendant's cars to slow down for crossing was not authorized, where existence of custom was not alleged. Beaumont Traction Co. v. Arnold (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 275.

In trespass to try title based on delivery of a deed to plaintiff's decedent by his mother, a finding that the son said that the instrument was "of no present value and conveyed no present title" held not supported by the evidence and not to support a judgment based on the acceptance of such deed by the son. Benavides v. Benavides (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 566.

Inconsistent findings and conclusions.—In suit for partition, involving construction of item of will, if trial court did not consider facts set out in its findings in its conclusion of law in construction as to trust, it contained a latent and legal ambiguity by requiring the court's to aid in further negotiation, a finding that the note was never delivered to payees. "in the sense that they advanced any money thereon," held not objectionable. Rabb v. Seidel (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 607.

In a divorce suit, a finding that plaintiff and defendant agreed to work together to a common purpose, the proceeds of their labor to become their joint property, was not inconsistent with a finding that plaintiff and defendant had entered into a common-law marriage agreement made effective by cohabitation continuing for about 30 years. Bobbitt v. Bobbitt (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 478.

In trespass to try title, findings that both plaintiffs and defendant acquired title by adverse possession, not contradicted by evidence showing that, after plaintiffs acquired title under the ten-year statute, their possession ceased, and defendant acquired title under the five-year statute. Collins v. Megason (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 582.

In action by son's creditor against father on ground that father assumed payment of son's debts, findings held not inconsistent. Bell v. Swim (Com. App.) 229 S. W. 470.

In an action for breach of a contract for the shipment of high density Web cotton, a finding that there was no general custom fixing the weight of a bale of such cotton is not in conflict with a finding that a bale of cotton properly compressed by the Webb process would weigh more than the average weight of the bales furnished for shipment, and that plaintiff thereby breached his contract. Elder, Dempster & Co. v. Weld-Neville Cotton Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 102.

Additional findings.—In the absence of exceptions to the findings or request for further findings on an issue, the findings will not be questioned on appeal or the judgment disturbed, in view of this article. Daugherty v. Manning (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 983; Celaya v. City of Brownsville (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 153.

Construction and operation.—A finding in broker's action for commission on sale concluded directly by owner at price less than limited to broker held an expression of the court's view of the law rather than a finding on issue of fact of broker's efforts being procuring cause. Goodwin v. Gunter, 193 Tex. 56, 196 S. W. 448.

Where steamship owners sued cotton shippers because cotton shipped was not "Webb high density cotton" as alleged, and took up too much room, they could not recover when court found that cotton turned out by Webb high density presses in workmanlike manner, without reference to density, was generally regarded as compliance with contract for such cotton, notwithstanding further finding that such cotton should have specified average minimum density. Weld-Neville Cotton Co. v. Elder, Dempster & Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 678.
In an election contest, a declaration in a judgment that parties referred to were qualified for certain reasons, would not constitute a finding of fact, but would be a conclusion of law; hence appellants would not be entitled to have it given effect on appeal. Barker v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 542.

Court's special findings, corroborated by decree that money tendered by plaintiff had been taken from defendant's premises. In determining whether or not the money was deposited, since trial court knew judicially whether money was in court. Mission Auto Co. v. Aldape (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 223.

Conclusions, in court's findings of fact, that cancellation of plaintiff's agency was not done in bad faith, that one of defendants was the procuring cause of the sale, and that plaintiff was not the procuring cause, are conclusions of fact, not law. Leonard v. Torrance (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 295.

Finding that payment was voluntarily made does not support conclusion of law that money was paid under mistake of law, since voluntary payment might have been induced by either mistake of law or of fact. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. White Jackson & Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 315.

In an action for burning of plaintiff's house by fire communicated thereto from defendant's oil tanks, court's findings as a fact that the defendant, "in the manner of the erection and maintaining of its tanks, was not guilty of a nuisance in the place in which the same were erected," held a conclusion of law not sustained by the evidence. McGuffey v. Pierce-Purdy Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 322.

In suit to recover the amount of a promissory note for $1,125 and for foreclosure of lien on the east half of a survey conveyed by plaintiff trustee to defendant maker, which lien secured payment of the note, finding that plaintiff and defendant agreed, when the note was signed, that certain money derived from the sale of timber on land constituting the west half of the survey should be credited on the note, held properly construed as finding the agreement was that the credit against the purchase money due defendant on the land on account of the timber was to be entered as of the dates the payments for the timber were made by plaintiff. Twyman v. Clark (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 299.

A finding by the trial court that a letter mailed to plaintiffs was not received is equivalent to a finding that the circumstances of the mailing proved by the evidence did not raise the presumption of the receipt of the letter. Bruck Bros. v. Lipman, Spier & Hahn (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 202.

Findings showing cessation of work for more than 18 months, removal of tools and appliances from the premises, and the allowing of a derrick to get into disuse held to sustain a conclusion that the parties abandoned a well before its completion. Burnett v. Summerour (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 1013.

In an action against a railroad company by a passenger shot as a result of the alleged negligence of the conductor in handling a pistol, finding held not to necessitate a judgment for the railroad company on the theory that, as the passenger requested to see the operation of the safety device, the conductor was outside of his duties when he discharged the pistol. Texas Midland R. R. v. Monroe (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 349.

The entire findings of the trial court should be read together and construed as a whole, and when they permit of more than one reasonable construction, that construction should be adopted which will support the judgment. Elder, Dempster & Co. v. Weld-Neville Cotton Co. (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 102.

Failure of trial judge to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, as required by this article, must be shown by bill of exception to authorize consideration of it as cause for reversing judgment in the Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. 252). Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Tuggle (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 510.

In suit on accident policy, held that defendant, not having complained in court below, that the amount of attorney's fees awarded was excessive, or that court could not allow the same, could not raise such question on appeal. Georgia Casualty Co. v. Shaw (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 316.

Where plaintiffs reserved no exception to court's findings, court is not called upon to consider complaints made of such findings in motion for new trial. Frick v. Gliddings (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 230.

Failure to make finding does not present reversible error, where such failure was not called to attention of trial court. Schauer v. Schauer (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1010.

Where no exception was taken to findings, and no request made for additional findings, assignment complaining of findings will be overruled in view of this article. Celya v. City of Brownsville (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 153; Daugherty v. Manning (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 383.

Exception having been duly reserved to judgment overruling motion for new trial it was unnecessary that exceptions be also taken to conclusions of law and fact to secure their review under due assignments of error. Hess & Skinner Engineering Co. v. Turney, 109 Tex. 298, 203 S. W. 596.

In suit to establish parol trust in land by certain heirs, failure to challenge finding that property given to a certain child was not in settlement of his interest in the community estate, as not being supported by the evidence, committed appellants to the proposition that there was sufficient evidence to sustain the finding. Thomas v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1010.

Where a statement of facts appears in the record, findings of fact need not be excepted to in the trial court to be subject to review on appeal. Lieber v. Nicholson (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 512.
Under Rev. St. 1911, arts. 2058, 2073, and Court Rules 53, 54, 55 (142 S. W. xxx), the appellate court will not review a trial court's finding of fact and conclusions of law, unless such matter is raised by a bill of exceptions, or at least unless it appears in the record, not merely that a request therefor was made, but also that, upon failure to comply with request, appellant excepted. Kennedy v. Kennedy (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 581.

When the trial is before the court without a jury, the appellant is not required to file a motion for new trial presenting alleged errors as a prerequisite to urging them in the appellate court, where the court has filed its findings of fact and conclusions of law, and such findings will not be taken as exceptions. McClintic v. Brown (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 546.

Rulings on the sufficiency of the pleadings other than those subject to a general demurrer, such as the overruling of special exceptions, are not reviewable in the absence of a statement of fact or findings of fact. Spitzer v. Smith (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 559.

An attack on the correctness of findings actually made by the court may be made without further predicate than an exception to the judgment. Clover v. Clover (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 916.

Document stating that plaintiff "enters of record its exceptions to the findings of fact and conclusions of law made and filed by the court" held too general and indefinite. Stockyards Nat. Bank v. Wilkinson (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1040.

Presumptions in aid of judgment.—Where there was no express finding by court on particular issue of fact, and none was requested, appellate court must presume that lower court found the facts, so as to support the judgment. Cooper v. Newsom (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 568; Walker-Smith Co. v. Bilbo (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 777; Woldert v. Phill (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1112; Campbell v. Turley (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 528; Lewis v. Berney (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 246.

No findings of fact or conclusions of law having been filed by the court below, the judgment must be sustained, if there is sufficient evidence to support it upon any theory of the case. Pennington v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 363; Blewett v. Richardson Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 385.

Where no findings of fact were filed by the trial court, it must be presumed by the Court of Civil Appeals that all issues of fact raised by the evidence were decided against the appellants. Allison v. Ham (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 482; Cooks', Waiters' & Waitresses' Union No. 299, v. Theoharris (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 984.

In the absence of a statement of facts or findings of fact by the court, or a proper bill of exceptions showing the assertions made, a judgment must be taken on appeal as proved. Nease v. Broadwater Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 692.

Where the trial is by a court without a jury, and there are no findings of fact in the record, it will be presumed on appeal in support of the judgment that the court did not consider improper testimony although admitted. Kingsville Cotton Oil Co. v. Dallas Waste Mills (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 832.

Judgment being for plaintiff, it will be presumed on appeal, in the absence of a specific finding, that the issue of fact presented by defendant's defense was found against him. Brannen v. First State Bank of Comanche (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 945.

Inconsistencies in the evidence, in the absence of findings of fact, must be resolved on appeal so as to support the judgment. Crip v. Christian Moerlein Brewing Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 531.

In the absence of contrary facts found by the trial court, the Court of Civil Appeals must indulge the presumption that a deed of property, including land from plaintiff husband to plaintiff, was made in compliance with law, and was not by parol. Fenton v. Miller (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 14.

If the conclusion of the trial court is not properly deductible from the facts set forth in its findings of fact, it will be presumed to have been established by other competent testimony given on the trial of the case. Woytey v. King (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1081.

In view of rule 24 for district and county courts, it will be presumed in the appellate court, where there was nothing in the record to show the contrary, that there was other evidence, besides failure of defendant to call attention to its plea of privilege, to support a finding that the same had been waived. Auds Credk Oil Co. v. Brooks Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 318.

Where appellant requested no express finding on an issue, it will be presumed that the court based its judgment upon sufficient facts and necessarily found against appellant on that issue. Daugherty v. Manning (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 983.

Where a deed delivered November 30, 1576, conveyed land to R. with remainder to her children and their descendants, it will be presumed, in favor of the conclusion and judgment below, that the only child of R., who was born some time in the year 1576, was born prior to November 30th, as the law favors vested rather than contingent remainders id.

In mortgage sale purchaser's action against mortgagor, where court denied purchaser relief on ground that mortgage was a part of an immoral transaction, it will be presumed in support of the judgment that purchaser bought the property for mortgagee. Hall v. Edwards (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 167, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 674.

It will not be presumed, in support of an injunction against acts of a county chairman after the election of his successor, that the court found that the successor had accepted the office, where such finding would be against the preponderance of the evidence, and especially where the injunction was also issued against other officers. Walker v. Hoping (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 146.

In the absence of an affirmative finding on an issue, the issue is resolved by law in support of the judgment rendered. Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. Lockwood Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 363.

The Court of Civil Appeals must indulge every intendment in support of the judgment, where no conclusions of fact have been filed, and must affirm the judgment, if the conclusion it embodies can be reasonably derived from the evidence. Robertson v. Lee (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 730.

Where there was no finding of fact nor conclusion of law in the record, the judgment must be affirmed, if it can be done on any sound reason in law applicable to the pleadings and the facts. Head v. Moore (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 362.

Art. 1990. [1333] [1333] Court to render judgment on special verdict or conclusions, unless set aside, etc.

Rendering judgment or setting aside verdict.—See Closer v. Sprague v. Acker (Civ.
App.) 200 S. W. 421; Continental Casualty Co. v. Chase (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 779; Chi-App.) 219 S. W. 855; notes to art. 1994.

Under this article, it is imperative on the trial court to render judgment on the facts found by the jury, though it may then grant a rehearing, but error, if any, would be on the overruling of the motion for a new trial, and not on the motion to set aside the findings and render judgment. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 164.

In the absence of motion to set aside the findings of the jury, the court is bound to enter a judgment in accordance with the jury's answers. Dallas Hunting & Fishing Club v. Nash (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 1032.

Under this article, judgment must follow verdict of jury on special issues, unless same is set aside and new trial granted, even though verdict be so erroneous as to require granting of new trial after judgment is rendered. Pantaz v. Farmer (Civ. App.)
205 S. W. 521.

In view of arts. 1986, 1990, the trial court should render judgment on jury's findings of special issues, unless verdict be set aside or new trial granted. Sanger v. Futch (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 681.

It is court's duty to enter judgment in accordance with findings of jury, even though they are unsupported by the evidence, where verdict is not set aside. Pyle v. Park (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 652.

Assigns of error of advertment that the court erred in rendering judgment because the special verdict was without support in the evidence will be overruled under the rule that it is the duty of the court to conform its judgment to the special verdict regardless of whether it has support in the evidence, and thereafter either upon its own motion or that of the complaining party set the verdict aside. Cobb & Gregory v. Lanier (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 990.

Assignments of error complaining of the entry of judgment for the damages assessed by the jury cannot be sustained, where was no motion to set aside the findings, since unless they are set aside the court is bound to enter judgment in accordance with them. Town of Glimer v. Pickett (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 347.

The trial court could do only one of two things, he had either to set aside the findings of the jury, or render judgment in conformity with them. Tompkins v. Hooker (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 351.

Review.—Under arts. 1990, and 1991, as well as Supreme Court rule 711, it is unnesssary, where a case was submitted on special issues, and a special verdict returned, that motion for new trial be made in order to entitle appellant to review of judgment which he asserted was erroneous because not following the findings. Rudasill v. Rudasill (Civ.
App.) 219 S. W. 844.

Though, under this article, the trial court must render judgment on the special verdict or set it aside, a Court of Civil Appeals, under article 1626, is not limited to rendering such judgment as the trial judge should have rendered on such verdict. Houston Belt & Terminal Ry. Co. v. Lynch (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 355, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 362.

Under arts. 1990, 1991, where a case has been tried; upon special issues, a motion for new trial is not necessary to perfect the appeal. Stublesfield v. Jones (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 729.

It being the statutory duty of the trial court to render judgment in accordance with the jury's verdict unless the same be set aside and a new trial granted, a failure so to do presents a fundamental error which can and should be considered by the Court of Civil Appeals whether properly assigned or not. 164.
Art. 1991. [1333] [1333] Exceptions to conclusions or judgment noted in judgment; appeal, etc.; transcript.

Exceptions and motions for new trial.—Where record does not show that appellant excepted to the judgment and caused the exception to be noted on the record of the judgment entry, as required by this article, and they filed no cross-assignment in the trial court, their assignment on appeal cannot be considered. Rossetti v. Benavides (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 268.

Under arts. 1990 and 1991, as well as Supreme Court rule 71a, it is unnecessary, where a case was submitted on special issues, and a special verdict returned, that motion for new trial be made in order to entitle appellant to review of judgment which he asserted was erroneous because not following the findings. Rudasill v. Rudasill (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 542.

Under arts. 1990, 1991, where a case has been tried upon special issues, a motion for new trial is not necessary to perfect the appeal. Stublikefield v. Jones (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 321.

Where trial is before court without jury and judgment is excepted to, exceptions need not be taken to the findings of fact and conclusions of law as a prerequisite to review. Temple Hill Development Co. v. Lindholm (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 321.

Art. 1992. [1333] [1333] No submission of special issues unless requested.

Operation in general.—Notwithstanding this article, the trial court may, under art. 1984, submit a case upon special issues without request by either party. Penelope Real Estate Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 702.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

JUDGMENTS

1995. For or against one or more plaintiffs, etc.
1995a. Contribution between tortfeasors on payment of judgment.
1998. Judgment may pass title, etc.
2094. Judgments against executors, etc.

2006. Against partners when all not sued.
2010. Releases errors, but impeachable, etc.

See Davis v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1117.
Cited, Day Land & Cattle Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526, 4 S. W. 865.

1½ Nature of judgment.—A "judgment" is a conclusion of the law upon matters contained in the record or the application of the law to the pleadings and facts as found by the court or admitted by the parties or deemed to exist upon their default in a course of judicial proceedings. Allen-West Commission Co. v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 342.

¾ Rendition of judgment.—A judgment rendered when a court is not in session is not a judgment of the court, and is void in any proceeding when that fact is shown. Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 138 S. W. 627.

A judgment of the county court held not void on its face as rendered and the cause heard in vacation, although it recited a hearing had in vacation, and that pursuant to said hearing the court "concluded" the plaintiff should recover, and that such judgment should be entered at the succeeding regular term. Kerr v. Hume (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 908.

Where the trial was not concluded and the case submitted to the court until the last day of the term, rule 66 for the district courts (142 S. W. xxii) did not apply, and judgment was properly rendered on the last day of the term. Richards v. Howard (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 95.

1. Entry of judgment.—The rendition of a judgment is to be distinguished from the entry thereof. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 650.

If, after hearing and decision by the county court of a cause in vacation, nothing had been done relative to the judgment at the succeeding regular term of the court but to have the clerk enter it upon the minutes of the court, it would have been a nullity. Kerr v. Hume (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 908.

Where defendants permitted judgment to be entered against them by default without making a defense against plaintiff's cause of action, they are precluded from interposing such defenses on motion to enter judgment nunc pro tunc. Miller v. Trice (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 229.

A motion made in March, 1919, to enter nunc pro tunc a final judgment by default rendered November 2, 1915, was not too late. Id.

Where the jury in the county court, disposing of the issue as to a party's sanity, found him of sound mind, and the judge made entry on the probate docket, the entry had the full force and effect of a formal judgment of record, and it was immaterial that the judgment was not formally entered until later. Wagle v. Wagley (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 495.

The office of an order nunc pro tunc is to make a present record of something previously done, though not recorded. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 988.

2. Parties.—Claims against a railroad company under art. 6625, enacted September 1, 1910 (Acts 31st Leg. 4th Called Sess.) c. 4, could not have been adjudicated in re­celvership proceedings had prior to the enactment of such statute, and therefore prior to the existence of the purchasing corporations. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Concrete Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 718.

In suit by trustee, judgment held admissible, though the copy offered misnamed the beneficiary. While the defendant in the present suit, is sued as "Geo. W. Wigham," while in the other suit he was sued simply as "Geo. Wigham." Wigham v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 469.

The legal owner of a note could procure a judgment in his own name, even though he be admitted in his pleadings that the equitable title was in another; such judgment to be subject to the equities shown to exist against the beneficial owner. Rabb v. Seldel (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 697.

Action of the court in directing a verdict in favor of the S. G. D. Motor Car Compa­ny, under which trade-name plaintiff was doing business, being inadvertent, amounted to no more than a misnomer, and as between the parties themselves did not impair the validity or effect of the judgment for the motor car company. Jones v. S. G. Davis Motor Car Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 701.

4. Sufficiency and Certainty of determination in general.—In a vendor's suit for specific performance, decree for plaintiff held too uncertain and indefinite to be sustain­ed. Giles v. Union Land Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 312.

Description in judgment, sufficient to identify land as that described in petition, is sufficient. Frieh v. Giddings (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 330.

Judgment held not void for lack of sufficient description of land involved where it was apparent from the judgment, by reversing the calls, that the beginning call for Twenty-Third street was a mistake, and that Twentieth street was meant. Pearson v. Lloyd (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 758.

A description of land in a judgment is sufficient, if by it the true location of the land may be ascertained, and if it contains an erroneous or false call or designation or description, or other detail, and by omitting or disregarding such there remains suf­ficient description by which the land may yet be identified and located, the judgment is effective. De Guerra v. De Gonzalez (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 896.

13. Conditions.—A judgment for a specified amount, providing that plaintiff "may have his execution," and also that certain banks who were parties might have their executions for certain amounts of that obtained by plaintiff, was not erroneous as al­lowing double recovery, where it also provided that any money paid to such banks would be credited on the judgment of the plaintiff. Liverpool & London & Globe Ins. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 736.

14. Validity and partial invalidity.—Where a court of general jurisdiction, in the exercise of its ordinary judicial function, renders a judgment in a cause in which it has jurisdiction over the person of the defendant and the subject matter, such judgment is never void, no matter how erroneous it may appear to be. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 798. Pearson v. Lloyd (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 759.

When a court has jurisdiction to enter a particular order or render a given judg­ment and enters an order or judgment regular on its face, its validity is conclusively presumed unless set aside or annulled in a direct proceeding. Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 198 S. W. 637.

To show judgment for defendants on cross-bill is nullity, it must appear from judg­ment record court did not acquire jurisdiction over plaintiff's person as to cross-action. Elstun v. Scanlan (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 762.

A probable court is a court of general jurisdiction, and its judgments, within the scope and power granted to it by law, are entitled to the same presumptions in favor of their validity as those of any other court of record of general jurisdiction. Waterman Lumber & Supply Co. v. Robbins (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 825.

Judgment establishing plaintiff's right to the use of particular roadway held objec­tionable as decreeing title to the land. Santa Fe Town-Site Co. v. Norvell (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 960.

If judgment, entered in county court on defendant's appeal from justice court, against defendant and sureties on his appeal bond, was erroneous as to the sureties because of its form, or its entry, or because obtained by agreement from the defendant without sureties' knowledge or consent, it was not therefore void, but at most only voidable. C. J. Gerlach & Bro. v. Du Bose (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 742.

There is a presumption in favor of judgments of courts of competent jurisdiction, and one attacking the judgment has the burden of showing that in no possible way could it have been valid. Van Ness v. Crow (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 572.

Where the district court in trespass to try title rendered judgment divesting an infant of title to land which had been part of the community estate of her mother and deceased father, and which had been conveyed by the mother after remarriage, held that though the mother had authority to convey the property, and though as a general rule a minor's interest in land can be sold only under order of court of probate, the presumption in favor of the validity of the judgment was not overthrown. 1d. Where it is shown that judgment condemning land at a city's instance was invalid for want of notice to the infant landowner, other matters recited in the judgment vacating such judgment do not affect it, because, if void for one reason, it is void for all. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 395.

Where, in an action against husband and wife to recover land sold to the community, the property was divisible, it is valid against the husband for possession of the land notwithstanding the failure to serve the wife, even though it also taxed the cost against both. Lewis v. Reese (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 270.

Where defendants made a third person a party defendant and prayed for judgment against him in event of recovery by plaintiff, error of the court in making a finding as to the value of the cattle sold for, in that it submitted such issue to the jury and the jury had not answered it, did not invalidate the portion of the judgment in favor of plaintiff, but invalidated the portion in favor of the original defendants against the third party. Peterson v. Clay (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1112.

The fact that a judgment rendered within the jurisdiction of the court was erroneous does not make it void. Crow v. Van Ness (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 539.

A judgment is not void unless there was want of jurisdiction over the subject-matter, over the parties, or some of them, or want of power to grant the relief contained in the judgment, and where the subject-matter was the title to land as to which that court had jurisdiction under the Constitution and statutes, the defendants appeared and answered, the minister defendant by guardian ad litem, under art. 1945, and the decision was in accordance with the issues made by the pleadings, the judgment was not void. 1d.

15. Construction and operation.—In suit by only son of deceased's first wife against administrator, surviving wife, and children of second and third wives, to recover such part of estate as belonged to his deceased mother, decree setting aside to such son one-fourth of property and to administrator and other defendants other three-fourths had no other effect than to partition interest of plaintiff from interest belonging to estate without adjudication of rights of defendants as between themselves. Boese v. Parkhill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 125.

In tenant's suit for possession from a subtenant, decree for plaintiff on ground of renewal of original lease after commencement of action, without prejudice to any right of defendant growing out of suit and execution of writ of sequestration, had no more effect than usual order sustaining exceptions to part of cause of action, and dismissing it. Adams v. Van Mourick (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 721.

In an action on an account, judgment rendered against defendants for the exact amount claimed in petition is necessarily a finding against the counterclaim, and in legal effect disposes of counterclaim. Yerb v. Heineken & Vogelsang (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 835.

When the language of a decree is susceptible of two constructions, that construction should be adopted which correctly applies the law to the facts. Gough v. Jones (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 943.

In trespass to try title, where affirmative judgment for defendant on his cross-bill was rendered on the day of trial, recitation in the judgment, held not to show waiver by agreement of counsel of notice of defendant's cross-action. McGowan v. Lowry (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 465.

16. Service of process.—See notes to art. 1885.

A judgment rendered without service of process is void, though the return shows legal service, and the judgment recites legal service, whether or not plaintiff was guilty of fraud or collusion in procuring a false return. Godshalk v. Martin (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 535.

Judgment against plaintiff on cross-bill, supported by judgment record silent on question of service on plaintiff or his appearance, is not nullity. Elston v. Scanlan (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 762.

Statement, in citation served by publication, that suit was filed in the Seventy-Fifth Judicial District court, though in fact it had been transferred to such district, held not to affect validity of default judgment or the judgment against another party. Hill v. Liberty State Bank (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 328.

20. Collateral attack in general.—The allowance by a court of competent jurisdiction of a claim against a decedent's estate is a judgment which cannot be collaterally attacked. Fryckenberg v. Scott (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 21.

Where a default judgment foreclosing vendor lien notes was rendered, it cannot thereafter be collaterally attacked by evidence that the plaintiff was not the owner of the notes, the rule as to collateral attack applying to default judgments. Allen-West Commission Co. v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 342.

The county court is a court of general jurisdiction over the estates of decedents, and, unless a lack of jurisdiction in a given case affirmatively appears of record, its orders will not be subject to collateral attack. Tholl v. Speer (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 453.

Judgment against an insane person is not void and can be attacked only on a direct proceeding for that purpose. Howell v. Fidelity Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 151; Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Howell (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 947.

A judgment rendered when a court is not in session is not a judgment of the court.
and is void in any proceeding when that fact is shown. EX parte McKay, 82 CR. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

Order of probate court, divesting itself of supervisory control of guardianship estate, being a nullity, was subject to collateral attack. Davis v. White (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 679.

A dormant judgment is not void, but only voidable, and for that reason it cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding. Burlington State Bank v. Marlin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 954.

In personal injury action where defendant filed no plea challenging plaintiff's right to sue the estate of her former husband, a dormant collateral attack upon the divorce decree, will not support an assignment that the evidence shows that the divorce decree is null and void. Abilene Steam Laundry Co. v. Carter (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 571.

A judgment rendered in pursuance of a parol agreement of compromise is not void, and can be attacked only by a direct proceeding. C. J. Gerlach & Bro. v. Du Bose (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 742.

A void judgment may be collaterally attacked. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 620.

On collateral attack upon a judgment as not disposing of a defendant, it will be presumed that some disposition of him satisfactory to the court was made. Conner v. McAlfe (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 646.

Where judgment on its face is legal and does not disclose any fact which indicates that it is invalid, to disclose that it is void requires direct attack, which must be made in the court where the judgment was obtained. Cotulla State Bank v. Herron (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 1091.

The wife not being a necessary party to try title against the husband as to community property though he was insane, judgment against him is binding on the community estate as well as him when attacked collaterally. Howell v. Fidelity Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 238 S. W. 151.

22. WANT OF JURISDICTION.—See Reed v. First State Bank of Purdon (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 333.

Judgment rendered when a court is not and cannot be in session is without color of law, but a judgment of a court purporting to be in session under an order regular on its face and authorized by law is under color of law, and imports verity except upon direct attack. Ex parte McKay, 82 CR. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

In collateral attack upon a judgment of a domestic court of general jurisdiction regular on its face, inquiry by evidence allunde the record into any fact which the court must have passed upon is precluded; "jurisdiction" meaning simple power to determine and give judgment. Id.

A presumption in favor of the jurisdiction of courts and the validity of their judgments cannot be overcome in a collateral proceeding by evidence dehors the record that the necessary jurisdictional facts did not exist. Waterman Lumber & Supply Co. v. Robbins (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 825.

In husband's action for custody of child awarded him by divorce decree, where defense is that decree has been modified, husband will not be permitted to show, by evidence allunde the record, that court at time of modification of judgment had no jurisdiction over child because it was a nonresident at such time; it being presumed in a collateral attack that jurisdiction attached. Milner v. Gatlin (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 617.

That petition, in action by temporary administratrix, did not affirmatively show her authority from probate court to bring suit, does not render judgment subject to collateral attack upon ground that court was without jurisdiction, notwithstanding art. 3802, the judgment being a judicial determination that court had jurisdiction. Pearson v. Lloyd (Com. App.) 214 S. W. 759.

A judgment is void, and so subject to collateral attack, only in case of an entire absence of power in the court to render such a judgment. Simmons v. Arnim, 110 Tex. 509, 220 S. W. 66, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 184.

23. RIGHTS OF PARTIES OR THIRD PERSONS TO IMPAIR JUDGMENT.—In a collateral attack by one not a party to a former judgment, the meritorious sufficiency of the grounds relied on in the pleadings will not be inquire into. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148.

As a general rule, no one has such an interest in a dormant judgment which is merely voidable that he can attack the same, except the parties thereto or their privies. Burlington State Bank v. Marlin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 954.

While a judgment binds only the parties thereto and those in privity with them, it is not subject to collateral attack by a stranger unless he shows that he has rights, claims, or interests which would be prejudiced or injuriously affected by its enforcement. Heard v. Vineyard (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 489.

The question of whether a judgment should have been for the amount of a replevin bond or for the value of the property repleived cannot be raised on collateral attack, by mere application by plaintiff after judgment for a writ of garnishment. Triplett v. Hendricks (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 754.

Where a domestic court of general jurisdiction has acquired jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter, its judgment, unless reversed or annulled in some manner provided by law, or unless absolutely void, cannot be successfully attacked or impeached by parties thereto, or their privies, in any collateral proceeding. Pearson v. Lloyd (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 759.

The rule that every reasonable presumption is indulged to support the judgment on collateral attack by a party does not apply to a collateral attack by a stranger, who

24. Effect of recitals in record or judgment.—A domestic divorce judgment can be collaterally attacked only when it does not recite jurisdictional facts. Givens v. Givens (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 377.

Under arts. 5502, 7506, a judgment reciting that service was had on „defendant” showed sufficiently that service was had on two defendants, for the purpose of a collateral attack. Robinson v. Monning Dry Goods Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 535.

Recitals of judgment concerning service of process import absolute verity, and cannot be contradicted or disproved in a collateral proceeding by extrinsic evidence. Miller v. Gatlin (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 617.

In action for custody of child awarded plaintiff by divorce decree, the defense being a modification of the decree, where there is nothing in the record upon which the judgment as modified was founded showing affirmatively plaintiff’s nonresidence, he will not be permitted to contradict the recital of the judgment as modified, as to issuance and service of citation upon him, by proving by evidence de hors the record that he was in fact a nonresident. Id.

In a prosecution by habeas corpus brought by a juvenile to be released from a training school, that no notice was given to the parents of relator of her arrest and prospective trial as recited in the judgment was properly provable to show the invalidity of the judgment. Ex parte Cain, 86 Tex. 255.

25. Errors and irregularities.—A judgment based upon an erroneous view of the law is not for that reason void and subject to collateral attack. Heard v. Vineyard (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 493.

A judgment rendered fraudulently on account of improper overruling of defendant’s plea of privilege was not void so as to be subject to collateral attack, but voidable merely. Price & Beaird v. Eastland County Land & Abstract Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 473.

Foreign judgment.—A foreign divorce judgment, though reciting jurisdictional facts, may be collaterally attacked. Givens v. Givens (Civ. App.) 185 S. W. 377. Where Louisiana administrator, who was also mortgagee, purchased property at his own sale and immediately resold it at a profit, if the approval of final account as administrator was an adjudication of its right to the profits, the judgment could be attacked in Texas for fraud. Vann v. Calcasieu Trust & Savings Bank (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 1062.

Decree of divorce obtained in a foreign state may be collaterally attacked to show that the court which rendered it had no jurisdiction, even though it recites all necessary jurisdictional facts. Richmond v. Singster (Civ. App.) 337 S. W. 723.

A judgment in an action in rem or in personam, procured in a court of foreign jurisdiction by willful fraud upon the jurisdiction, may be collaterally attacked. Id.

26. What is collateral attack.—Injunction to restrain sale under execution issued upon Justice court judgment forfeiting bail bond was collateral attack on judgment, not permissible where judgment was not void. Fleming v. Bonine (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 364.

A suit to set aside a sale of community property by the survivor because of insufficiency of his bond is a collateral attack on the decree of the probate court which cannot be sustained. Rice v. Lipsitz (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 293.

Under art. 3600, authorizing the survivor of a community to sell community property, after qualifying, for the best interest of the estate without control by the court, a suit to set aside a sale by a survivor because not for the best interest of the community is not a collateral attack on a probate court judgment. Id.

A suit by the owner of water rights to compel the delivery of water to them by one who purchased the irrigation system at a receiver’s sale, under an order that the system be sold free from the easement of the water claimants, is a collateral attack on the order of sale, which cannot be sustained, where the order was not void. McBride v. United Irr. Co. (Civ. App.) 243 S. W. 928.

In an action to recover land, where answer set up judgment as res adjudicata, plaintiffs’ supplemental petition, alleging invalidity of judgment for purpose of avoiding such defense, held a collateral and not a direct attack. Pearson v. Lloyd (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 759.

Adjudication by one district court that a judgment of another district court had been satisfied before an execution sale under it was not void for want of jurisdiction over subject matter, not being an impeachment of the integrity of such judgment of the other court, such an attack upon it as could only be presented in the court that rendered it. Williams v. Croom (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 156.
Plaintiff, who had recovered judgment in trespass to try title, filed a petition, to contest the defendant's claim. Held that the defendant's cross-bill attacking the former judgment and asserting title in herself, was a direct, and not a collateral, attack on the original judgment. Van Ness v. Crow (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 572.

An objection to a judgment offered in evidence on the ground that an application for a hearing was not a collateral attack on the judgment. McCarthy v. Houston Oil Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 307.

Although a judgment rendered against a surety recites appearance by the surety, in an action on such judgment want of jurisdiction over the person of the surety may be urged, without defense not constituting a collateral, but a direct, attack upon the judgment. Walker v. Chatterton (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 1100, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 1085.

A suit to set aside a default judgment rendered in a tax suit and the sheriff's deed to the property was not a direct appeal. Held that judgment rendered in the tax suit. Rowland v. Klepper (Com. App.) 227 S. W. 1066.

An action, though in the briefest and simplest form of trespass to try title, held, in effect, a collateral attack on a judgment, execution, and sale. Graves v. Griffin (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 913.

Where, in a suit to foreclose a tax lien, sale was had under regular judgment and order of sale, suit by the owner, or one claiming under him, to recover the land from the purchaser at the tax sale, was a collateral attack on the judgment. Brown v. Bonoug (Sup.) 232 S. W. 490.

29. Conclusiveness of judgment in general.—That decree claimed to conclude issue in subsequent litigation was rendered in friendly litigation, where no real contest took place, is without importance. Tompkins v. Hooker (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 135.

Where landowners intervened in receiver's proceedings against irrigation company, the action had been fixed with rates had been declared, it is from again passing on the question of such conclusion upon intervenor's plea of intervention. McHenry v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 560.

An erroneous judgment is not void, and, unless appealed from, remains in force, and an error or irregularity therein does not lessen its effect as a bar to further suits upon the same cause of action. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 680.

Res judicata is but the assertion in a pending suit that some legal or equitable issue there presented has been decided by some other court of competent jurisdiction and as a consequence a bar to again litigation. Id.

Absolute verity attaches to judgment of district court on appeal from order appointing guardian as it appears on the minutes, and the judgment entry on the minutes cannot be controlled by what appears on the docket, unless and until the district court shall have corrected the minutes. Jarvis v. Jarvis, 119 Tex. 218 S. W. 638.

Recitals in a judgment forfeiting a bail bond as to service of citation will not on direct attack, as writ of error, prevail against recitals in the sheriff's return. Sаundеrs v. State, 86 Cr. R. 413, 217 S. W. 148.

In an action on a judgment, the original cause of action is merged in the judgment, and, unless void, it is conclusive; the principles of estoppel attached to final adjudications being as operative and conclusive in an action on judgment as in other cases, so that no defense can be urged which existed anterior to the judgment, the effect of which would be to render the judgment voidable, or erroneous, but not void. Walker v. Chatterton (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 1100, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 1085.

Conceding that parties had title by limitation prior to the rendition of a compromise judgment which through erroneous description excluded such land, yet such judgment divested title of them, and they are now estopped to claim under a prior deed as if they had voluntarily conveyed it. Gulf Production Co. v. Palmer (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1017.

32. — Dismissal or nonsuit.—Judge's order refusing temporary injunction, after which plaintiff dismissed its suit, is not res judicata of right of petitioners to have an alleged illegal assessment of taxes enjoined. Baker v. Druesedow (Civ. App.) 177 S. W. 1042.

Judgment of district court dismissing action on ground that such action was within the exclusive original jurisdiction of county court does not vitiate against a suit in the county court. Nueces Hotel Co. v. Hug (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 265.

33. — Judgment by default.—A default judgment based on sufficient pleadings and legal service is as conclusive an adjudication between the parties of whatever is essential to support the judgment as one rendered after answer and contest so long as it is unreversed and unappealed from. Allen-West Commission Co. v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 342.

34. — Finality of judgment.—In action to set aside a judgment for the price for fraud, etc., a previous judgment setting aside such purchase price judgment held on appeal not a final judgment and not res judicata. Lyon-Taylor Co. v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 875.

A judgment was not a final judgment, and was not admissible in evidence for any purpose if a pending application for a new trial was filed by a person having authority to file it. McCarthy v. Houston Oil Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 307.

35. — Judgment on demurrer or exceptions.—An entry on the trial docket that defendants' exception to plaintiff's petition was sustained was not a final judgment amounting to res judicata, though it recited that plaintiff excepted to the ruling and refused to amend and gave notice of appeal, as there is no such thing as an automatic judgment, and affirmative judicial action by the court is necessary. Kuehn v. Kuehn (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 918.

37. — Pendency of appeal.—Suit cannot be maintained on a judgment on which appeal is pending, whether on cost or supersedeas bond. Van Natta v. Van Natta (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 907.

38. — Vacation of judgment.—Where judgment has, at a succeeding term, been reopened and dismissed, it does not preclude a party defendant thereto from being a party plaintiff to another suit on the same cause. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148.

39. — Foreign judgments.—The administration of an estate is a proceeding "in rem" and is binding upon all parties when notice of the proceedings is given as required by law of state in which proceedings are had, but is binding only as to matters and things brought before the court and essentially within its jurisdiction. Vann v. Calcasieu Trust & Savings Bank (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1062.

A Louisiana judgment confirming account of administrator who made profit from the estate was not res judicata against the Texas domiciliary administrators who could not have instituted any suit, or made any defense in the courts of Louisiana.

Where petitioner was granted a divorce in a foreign state, and was also granted the control and custody of infant children the courts of Texas, are not bound by the judgment in the divorce, though required to give in full faith and credit, but may inquire into the matter and award the custody of the infants according to their best interests. Cox v. Cox (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 627.

399/2. Persons to whom bar available.—Where plaintiff had recovered against defendant's employer, and its indemnitor under Workmen's Compensation Act, her suit against a third person for the injury was barred. Dallas Hotel Co. v. Fox (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 647.

A judgment of foreclosure in an action by a vendor against purchasers of vendee who had assumed incumbrances, the amount claimed being interest which the vendor had been required to pay to protect his interest and for interest on the note, did not estop him from subsequently suing the vendee for the amount of the note; the vendee being a necessary party to the foreclosure proceeding. Rector v. Brown (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 702.

Judgment in action by creditors against assignees for benefit of creditors, to which assignors are not parties, declaring conveyances by the assignees void as to creditors, does not avail the assignors as to right to surplus. Mc Cord v. Bass (Com. App.) 225 S. W. 192, reversing Judgment (Civ. App.) Bass v. Mc Cord, 178 S. W. 998.

Where party invoked a decision of question of insolvency of corporation and right of court to administer its assets by a receiver, and had a trial on issue, it is estopped in a collateral proceeding, to question right to sell property on such theory. Guaranty State Bank & Trust Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 960.

Copy of opinion rendered in action between other parties holding that one under whom plaintiff claimed did not have title to lands, including that in controversy, is inadmissible as against plaintiff. Ludtke v. Murray (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 321.

Where one having a lien on land under a trust deed is not made a party to an action against the trustee for the ownership of the land, he can set up, as a perfect defense to conversion of wood any superior title he may prove to have obtained as a purchaser on foreclosure of the trust deed. Chavez v. Chairez (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 395.

Where railroad was not party to suit in which state recovered section of land from another railroad, its title to its own section of land overlapping other was not affected by judgment. Main v. Cartwright (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 847.

In trespass to try title by claimants under original patent, against claimants under conflicting subsequent patent, judgment in earlier suit between different persons, divesting original patent and fixing corner was not admissible, since plaintiffs would not be estopped thereby, having derived title under earlier owners. Dallas Hunting & Fishing Club v. Nash (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 1602.

In a suit for an injunction against a foreclosure action, wherein the wives of petitioners did not set up their homestead rights, the decree in the foreclosure action did not conclude them; they not being joined as defendants, there is no foreclosure action. Massillon Engine & Thresher Co. v. Barrow (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 883.

Where, in a divorced wife's suit for partition of her husband's lands, the pleadings were insufficient to bring the independent executor of the husband into court as such, he, in his capacity as executor, and his successor, were not concluded by the decree. McDaniell v. Lauchner (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 221.

Transferee of vendor's lien notes, who was not a party to suit between maker and former owner of land, who claimed a one-half interest therein as a homestead, was not bound by the judgment. Durst v. Bludworth (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 217.

22 Supp. V. S. Civ. St. Tex. 44 (1899)
A judgment rendered in a proceeding to which the present plaintiff was not a party is not res judicata on him by way of estoppel. Jansen v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 455.

One not a party to proceedings was not bound by judgments therein, and could pursue his remedy against garnishee bank for recovery of his deposit. Reed v. First State Bank of Purdon (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 323.

A judgment on an issue in another proceeding vesting in one of plaintiffs an undivided interest in the land, was admissible as a link in plaintiff's chain of title, notwithstanding defendants were not parties to that suit, and such judgment, in connection with the decree of partition and sale by an executor, held to establish title in plaintiffs. Heard v. Vineyard (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 459.

In trespass to try title, a previous judgment recovering land involved against others than defendant held admissible to establish plaintiff's title. Clark v. Scott (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 728.

A judgment by default against a corporation for conversion of the proceeds of cotton after its directors had been dismissed from the suit, held not conclusive, in a subsequent suit against the directors alone, either that such directors had participated in the misappropriation or that they were negligent in not preventing such misappropriation. McCollum v. Dollar (Com. App.) 213 S. W. 225.

Where husband and wife, sold land to purchasers, who failed to appear in third party's action to recover the land and permitted default judgment but thereafter rescinded contract, such default did not affect the interest inherited by vendor's daughter, not a party to the action. Brader v. Zbranek (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 381.

Though court refused to rule that an appeal was frivolous, for purpose of awarding costs, such holding would not make applicable the doctrine of stare decisis as against a party not to suit attempting to base liability for fraud on ground that appeal was frivolous and to hinder collection of a judgment. Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 690.

If a necessary party, for whose use and benefit plaintiff assumed to sue, were personally present at trial of the suit, directing the suit as far as it affected his interest, judgment therein would bind him. Perkins v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 561.

All parties in receivership suit are bound by judgment therein. Franckowi v. Ulmann, Stern & Krausse (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 727.

Judgment, in suit to remove cloud from title against unknown heirs in terms simply vesting title in plaintiff held not, in trespass to try title against a third person, evidence of the facts recited in petition. Woodley v. Becknell (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 922.

Where an action is brought by a particular class of persons, as citizens and taxpayers, all members of such class are bound by the judgment rendered, although not named in the record as parties. City of Dalian v. Armour & Co. (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 222.

It is essential to the application of the principle of res judicata, not only that the person sought to be bound by the former judgment should have been a party, but he must have been a party in the same capacity. Baber v. Houston Nat. Exch. Bank (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 156.

A party to a suit who has not appealed from the judgment is bound thereby. West Furniture Co. v. Cason (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 774.

Mother's recovery of damages for delay in delivery of her telegram to son, informing him of daughter's impending death, did not preclude son from recovering damages. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Morgan (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 244.

Supply creditors of the receiver were privies to receivership proceeding, and were affected by the process of administration in due course. Maytown Lumber Co. v. Nacogdoches Grocery Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 644.

Persons claiming interest in land as heirs are barred by judgment foreclosing any interest of the person through whom they claim; they being in privity with her. Kirtley v. Spencer (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 328.

In an action to recover ordinary taxes on land, a judgment obtained could not bind the interest of a co-owner who was not made a party to the suit. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 631.

The title and right of possession of landlords could not have been put in issue in a forcible detainer suit brought by one of their tenants against the others, and the landlords are not bound by the judgment. Vogelsang v. Gray (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 525.

Judgment rendered in favor of receiver of an insolvent corporation suing its debtor on a stock subscription bill, when paid, be a complete bar to any further suit in behalf of the same creditors represented by the receiver. Davis v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1117.

Judgment for defendants in action on a contract which the defendants claimed did not exist was res adjudicata in subsequent action by plaintiffs against same defendants and other defendants who were privies to defendants in first action, based on the same cause of action. Ben C. Jones & Co. v. State Printing Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 619.

Divorce decree, recognizing existence and validity of husband's note secured by deed of trust in wife's land, was not conclusive, in subsequent action to foreclose the deed of trust, that wife was sane at time of divorce, and therefore ratified it, notwithstanding art. 4632, as amended by Acts 33d Leg. (1913) c. 57, the plaintiff in subsequent action not having been a party to the divorce suit. White v. Holland (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 611.

In trespass to try title, a judgment in favor of defendants against the unknown heirs of the person under whom defendants claimed title was admissible in evidence. Southwestem Settlement & Development Co. v. Village Mills Co. (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 869.
42. Matters concluded in general.—Ordinaril" judgment is conclusive not only as to subject-matter determined, but as to other matters which might have been litigated.

Whenever question is of such character it requires evidence to sustain it, and on that evidence determination has been declared, fast adjudicated in one which parties and privities will not be permitted to reopen. Tompkins v. Hooker (Civ. App.) 200 S.
W. 198.

When subject-matter of two suits is not same, it devolves upon those invoking estoppel by prior adjudication to show by record or evidence that particular question has been previously determined. Id.

The distinction between a judgment conclusive as to a particular question and one which is a complete bar to a second suit is that in the former there must be an identity of parties and issues, while in the latter there must be also identity of subject-

That claim under art. 6625, could have been asserted by amendment of plea of intervention filed prior to enactment of such statute did not make determination of plea res adjudicata as to such claim. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Concrete Inv. Co.
(Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 718.

In order for judgment to be res adjudicata, it must have litigated same claim as that involved in second action. Id.

Recovery of damages for obstructing property by erection of bridge bars plaintiff, after raising his house to the bridge level, from recovering damages for obstruction by bridge balustrade, not changed since first action, and from claiming mandatory injunction requiring tearing down of bridge balustrade. Medley v. Brown (Civ. App.)
202 S. W. 397.

Doctrine of res judicata will not be enforced when failure to have question determined was not due to any negligence or fault of the party against whom rule is invoked, and against whom enforcement will produce injustice, unless the issue was clearly within the pleading in first suit. Vann v. Calcasieu Trust & Savings Bank (Civ.
App.) 204 S. W. 1062.

In respect to its operation upon the subject-matter, a judgment is to be understood as determining whatever follows by necessary implications from its terms, although not specifically raised, as disposing of all issues raised, unless questions are reserved or leave given to take further proceedings. McKenzie v. Withers (Com. App.) 206 S. W.
508.

A wife injured by contact with an electric wire on going to the aid of her husband who had come in contact therewith and who died from his injury, can maintain a suit for her own injuries and a separate suit for his death, and a judgment in the first is not a bar to the second. Abilene Gas & Electric Co. v. Thomas (Civ. App.)
211 S. W. 500.

In action for wrongful sequestration, the pleadings and judgments rendered in original action are admissible in evidence; the result of such action being basis of action for damages, and proof of its outcome being necessary to proof of damages.

In a second suit on the same claim or demand the judgment constitutes an absolute bar, while in an action between the same parties upon a different claim or demand the judgment operates only as an estoppel as to those matters in issue or points con-troverted upon the determination of which the finding or verdict was rendered. Evans
v. McKay (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 650.

In order for a second suit upon the same cause of action to be barred under the doctrine of res judicata, there must be identity in the thing sued for in the cause of action, in the persons and parties, and in the quality in the persons for or against whom the claim is made. Id.

A judgment in an action to recover wages and to cancel an assignment of the wages adjudging that the debt to defendant had been paid prior to notice to the employer was res judicata in an action against defendant for falsely and maliciously notifying the employer that plaintiff owed defendant a debt, and that defendant had an assignment of plaintiff's wages. Id.

A suit to enforce a personal judgment against the land of the judgment debtor held not to state the same cause of action as a former suit to subject the property in question to a lien for paying, in which the personal judgment was rendered. Harrison v.

Judgment upholding validity of election amending city charter held conclusive in subsequent action involving validity of election, not only as against objections urged in prior action, but also as to objections which might have been urged therein. Jones

A prior judgment disposing of the same land as between the same parties was res judicata of all matters affecting the title to the land that could have been appropriately pleaded therein by those properly before the court. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 221.

Where, in violation of an agreement in an action on a note and to foreclose a deed of trust the creditor took a default judgment, and the debtors then filed a suit to have the judgment vacated the statement, on the hearing at which the injunction was dissolved, that the debtors abandoned any ground based on any homestead claim, did not estop the debtors thereafter from using the homestead claim as a ground for setting aside the default judgment; for a point is not concluded by a judgment, although it was involved in the action, or was placed in issue therein, if it was withdrawn or abandoned or ruled out by the court. Jones v. Wootton (Com. App.) 235 S. W. 145.
Judgment dismissing suit for injuries caused by defect in gasoline engine, on the ground it was barred by preclusive limitations, held not to bar claim for such damages in subsequent action for price of engine. Alley v. Bessemer Gas Engine Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 963.

In buyer's action against seller for breach of agreement not to engage in the same business in the community, where a writ enjoining further violation was applied for but refused by the trial court but ordered five years later on appeal, defendants having violated the contract pending the entire appeal, plaintiff is entitled to recover for the injuries thus inflicted. Riddlesperger v. Malakoff Gin Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 656.

Where plaintiff noted under 390.101, &c., that an automobile had been transferred to third persons, recovered a judgment for title and possession, such judgment is not conclusive against his right to maintain an action for conversion against the transferees for res judicata arises only as to matters directly in issue, or fairly within the scope of the pleadings. Palmer v. Buzell (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 741.

Ordinarily a judgment is res judicata only as to those matters which are in issue or disposed of or necessarily are included or should have been included and disposed of by the action. Campbell v. Jones (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 719.

Where all the parties were before the court on a motion to correct the judgment entry, and the answer to the motion had raised the issue of fraud, the judgment on the motion correcting the judgment entry with no express disposition of such issue held res judicata as to validity of judgment in subsequent action making attack thereon. Wagoner v. Gibson (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 297.

43. — Matters in issue and essentials of adjudication.—Where second partition suit involves property different from that involved in first, though involving same parties or privies, in order for judgment in first to be conclusive as to whether party's wife left children, it must appear that particular issue was decided in first suit. Tomkins v. Hooker (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 236.

In passing on plea of res adjudicata, issues involved in actions are determined from pleadings therein. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Concrete Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 218.

Judgment is not res judicata to prior suit, where matter in issue in subsequent suit was not in issue in prior suit. Id.

If set-off is presented by defendant in his pleadings and attempted to be supported, whether allowed or disallowed it will become res judicata, being settled by judgment as conclusively when it does not appear to have been allowed as though there were express finding against it. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 68.

In bill of review, seeking a revision and cancellation of a judgment for personal injuries, held that issues presented had been decided in suit for damages. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Duff (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 580.

Where suit has been brought and judgment obtained, the original cause of action is merged in the judgment. Burlington State Bank v. Marlin Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 594.

A judgment against a vendee for the amount due on notes and against all defendants foreclosing vendor's lien, directing that any excess proceed be paid to the "defendants," in the absence of any pleading or proof as to the amounts each was entitled to receive, will not preclude either of the defendants from having their equities in any such excess proceeds thereafter adjudicated. Clark v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 231.

Where the pleadings upon which trial was had put in issue plaintiff's right to recover upon two causes of action, and judgment awarded him a recovery upon one and was silent as to the other, such judgment is prima facie an adjudication that he was not entitled to recover upon such other cause of action. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 639.

Where court had jurisdiction of a suit by a widow to recover lands which belonged to the community estate of herself and her deceased husband, and also were part of the homestead, the judgment of the widow's favor is conclusive, not only as to matters decided, but as to all matters which by necessary implication must have been decided to support the judgment. Whitaker v. McCarthy (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 572.

Whenever there is an issue directly involved and common to two causes of action, its determination in the first suit operates as an estoppel and bar to a litigation of it in the second suit. Harrison v. First Nat. Bank of Lewisville (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 299.

Where vendor sued vendee on note which had been secured by a vendor's lien judgment did not bar an action by the defendant to have a foreclosure under the doctrine of subrogation, land having been conveyed to persons who assumed payment, and plaintiff having foreclosed his vendor's lien and having purchased and resold the land, especially where such judgment was rendered in the county court. Brown v. Farquhar (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 511.

44. — Personal status and right.—See Lee v. State, 86 Cr. R. 146, 215 S. W. 326.

45. — Title or claim to property.—In trespass to try title to strip off east side of lot 20, evidence held to sustain finding that default judgment in former suit for strip off on east side of lot 21 did not bar plaintiff's right to all of lot 20. McKinley v. Bone (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 298.

In partition suit, court must assume that court, in prior suit involving same parties and privies, wherein husband claimed interest by inheritance from wife, who died without issue, heard necessary evidence as to who were wife's heirs, and on it based decree to husband's interest. Tomkins v. Hooker (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 192.
A judgment merely denying to plaintiff recovery of land, without vesting title thereto, is not res judicata as to right to recover the land in a subsequent suit. R. B. Godley Lumber Co. v. C. C. Slaughter Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 801.

Plaintiff in a suit to recover land is not precluded by a former judgment from asserting a subsequently acquired title.

In a suit on an account alleged to have been assigned, the assignment is not proved by showing decree merely directing the assignment, and not itself vesting title to the assets assigned, since it cannot be assumed that the decree was complied with. Interstate Corporation v. Sentinel Pub. Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 548.

A judgment obtained in a wife's divorce and partition suit, giving the wife no interest in income from spendthrift's trust estate devised to husband, held not res adjudicata in a suit to enjoin attachment sale of part of the corpus of such trust estate, in which the husband was not a party. Hoffman v. Rose (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 424.

Where, after death of husband and probate of will of himself and wife, giving their property to trustees subject to payment of half the income to the survivor, she conveyed a half interest to a university, and at her request suit was brought by the trustees to remove cloud caused thereby, judgment in their favor, on disclaimer by her, was sufficient to foreclose any right asserted by her contrary to the will. Kirtley v. Spencer (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 328.

Where court in an action to foreclose a paving lien, determined that the entire property was the defendant's homestead, the plaintiff was estopped, in a subsequent action, from claiming that there was an excess over and above the homestead exemption, but a judgment on a lien property as assigned to all the parties uncontrolled as a homestead. Harrison v. First Nat. Bank of Lewisville (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 269.

If possession of land was accompanied by cultivation, use, or enjoyment so as to vest the title thereto in defendant's vendor before judgment adverse to him on disclaimer of such judgment operated as an estoppel of record against him in asserting under him to assert the title he had so acquired. Smith v. Wood (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 583.

In an action by grantor to cancel a conveyance, a judgment quieting title in defendants would not estop plaintiff from maintaining his right to foreclose in case he should be required to pay a mortgage subject to which the land had been conveyed. Campbell v. Jones (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 719.

If, as between plaintiffs and certain others, the former had perfected a title by limitation to land before making a settlement with the latter in another action, then this limitation claim was merged into the judgment, and plaintiffs could assert no rights thereunder without first correcting the judgment, which erroneously described the land, where they had not, since judgment, perfected title by limitation. Gulf Production Co. v. Palmer (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1017.

A judgment awarding a 50-acre tract to defendants E. and J., as against another defendant, and reciting that "as to said defendants" J. was the owner of the west half and E. of the east half, "as will appear from their answer to said cross-bill," held not to vest any title in J. as against E. Laidacker v. Palmer (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 362.

46. Rights and liabilities under contracts.—Landlord's suit, under contract to pay $300 rental for a year at $20 a month, held not to estop him to sue again. Neal Community v. Rodford (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1093.

Under lease for 26 months for rental payable monthly, judgment for rent for certain months held not to bar action for rent for subsequent months. Meacham v. O'Keefe (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1000.

A decree canceling a deed for part of plaintiffs' homestead and enjoining the assignee of a vendor's lien note from selling the property will not bar an action at law on the note, where personal liability was not litigated. Sessions v. Sanders (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 180.

Judgment against fraternal order in favor of claimed beneficiaries was not res judicata of claim against order of guardian of another beneficiary. Dorsey v. United Brotherhood of Friends (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 350.

Where judgment in seller's action on notes given for an auto truck recited buyer's cross-action for damages for breach of warranty and misrepresentations, and that he take nothing thereby, it would be presumed that issue as to misrepresentations was presented. McCoy v. Wichita Falls Motor Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 322.

In suit upon notes for price of auto truck, wherein buyer pleaded breach of warranty, judgment on notes and that buyer take nothing by his cross-action, was a defense to buyer's subsequent action for damages for same breach of warranty. Id.

It was not necessary for an assured, in an action by insurer, to assert his right to a rebate, and he could subsequently sue therefor, where the only issue in the first suit was the amount of the premium. Providence-Washington Ins. Co. v. Owens (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 558.

Where judgment denies specific performance of an agreement, the right to such performance is res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties. Wiss v. McFaddin (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 337.
In an action against employer and another for wages and cancellation of an assignment, for plaintiff necessarily included a finding that the debt had been paid, and the assignment canceled prior to the date notice was given the employer, and the judgment was admissible in another action by plaintiff against the assignee to show such fact. Evans v. McKay (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 680.

In an action by plaintiff to recover unusual interest paid and to cancel an assignment for excess carrier operating of Conformity action, to S. that had 84!.

in judgment, in suit to enjoin cutting of timber, held conclusive, in suit by buyers from the successor of the grantee against the successors of the grantor, that shortleaf pine timber was merchantable at the date of the original timber deed. Southwestern Settlement & Development Co. v. May (Civ. App.) 330 S. W. 122.

Although a contract by which seller of a gin plant agreed to refrain from operating another plant in the community for an indefinite period of time is entire in the sense that such promise is single, it was subject to separate and distinct breaches for each of which damages is recoverable. Riddlesberger v. Mahaffy Gin Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 636.

In an order in suit to enjoin construction of a levee, as diverting surface water to plaintiff's injury, permitting a different levee, without pleading or evidence to support it, is improper. Huff v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 979.

Judgment must be supported by both pleadings and proof, and absence of either is fatal. Hill v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 957.

A judgment, in a buyer's action, could not allow recovery for feed buyer could have purchased pure in place, which evidence showed buyer did not in fact buy. Kincannon & Galnes v. Independent Cotton Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 878.

In action for title to land, held, that description given in petition and that given in judgment described the same tract of land, and that judgment was valid. Frick v. Giddings (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 330.

Description in judgment, sufficient to identify land as that described in petition, is sufficient, and more comprehensive description in judgment than in petition does not render judgment void. Id.

Where purported receiver of estate of insane person sued as such, and, realizing he had no authority to enter into agreed judgment, sought to make same effective by reciting he recovered both as receiver and next friend, but he did not in fact prosecute suit as next friend, recital in judgment was not recognition of him in such capacity, McKenzie v. Frey (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1009; Same v. Sutton (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012; Same v. Winters (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012.

In action for failure to deliver message of fatal illness, where complaint failed to allege possibility of delivery on any other day than the when sent, or that any subsequent notice in the本领ized plaintiff, or to have seen his sister alive, and the judge found no negligence on that day, judgment for the plaintiff could not stand. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Tartar (Civ. App.) 290 S. W. 559.

Where plaintiff suing on notes alleged that it acquired them by written transfer, and evidence showed that there was no indorsement or writing, there was nevertheless no variance in view of arts. 1994, and 582; production of the note being presumptive evidence of ownership, especially where the original payee was a party. Lewis v. Farmsers Nat. Bank of North (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 888.

In suit for breach of warranty, judgment in another suit in another county held not supported by evidence that the evidence showed the land conveyed was part of the grantor's addition, and not the land described in the judgment. Wigham v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 469.

In action on a note deposited by defendant to be forfeited if he should fail to accept certain cattle, a judgment for plaintiff was sustained where, plaintiff alleged and proved, and the court found, actual damages resulting from refusal to take cattle in excess of amount of the note, although court found that note represented a penalty, and not liquidated damages. Slavens v. James (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 845.

In an action for rent, a judgment against defendant was proper, although the facts showed a partnership contract between defendant and others and that other persons were jointly liable, where defendant admitted the facts which made him individually liable. Goodram v. Republic Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 466.

While plaintiff husband's connivance in his wife's adultery is an affirmative defense in so far as it is unnecessary for plaintiff to negative connivance, and defendant cannot introduce evidence thereof unless the issue is made by the pleadings, yet when the evidence shows connivance a divorce will be denied. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 767.

In purchaser's action for shortage in tract of land, where the jury failed to agree upon the value of the land, and the evidence wholly failed to show the value of machines, etc., constituting a part of the consideration, verdict for plaintiff and judgment thereon was erroneous there being no basis in the verdict for the essential elements in ascertaining the damages. Taylor v. Hill (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 367, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 183 S. W. 836.

To enforce a rate claimed to be established by a contract between express company and railroad company, the decree must follow the contract in its entirety, and any substantial variation therefrom, and substitution therefor, of the court's judgment, would be the fixing of the rate by the court in usurpation of a legislative function. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Texas v. Empire Express Co. (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 590, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 222.

Where plaintiff in trespass to try title did not allege right to recover land east of a certain survey, and in his agreement as to the evidence it was admitted he owned the east half of the survey, judgment in his favor should have been limited to such survey. Grimes v. Kansas v. Smith (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 718.

A petition, alleging that the carrier failed to deliver the cattle shipped to the consignee or to the consignor, does not support recovery by the shipper for the carrier's delivery to the person in whose care the consignee was to be reached without requiring the surrender of the bill of lading, even though the latter cause of action was supported by the evidence. City Nat. Bank of El Paso v. El Paso & N. E. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 391.

A judgment, canceling a mineral lease based on grounds not pleaded, although supported by evidence, cannot be sustained. McCaskey v. McCall (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 452.

In a suit by grantees to cancel their deed and subsequent deeds, rents were not recoverable for the use and occupation of the property where there was no sufficient evidence that defendants had been in possession or had the use or occupancy of the premises. Lawson v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 687.

48. — Issues raised by pleadings.—A judgment awarding intervenor in a garnishment proceeding payment of a claim which pleadings indicated belonged to others, held not supported by the pleadings. Zimmerman Land & Irrigation Co. v. Rooney Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 201.

In suit to set aside judgment, held that, in view of defendant's pleadings, court could not have rendered judgment for defendant for 32 acres awarded to him by judgment set aside as to plaintiff. Winfree v. Winfree (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 265.

In action by beneficiary claiming that change of beneficiary was made while insured was insane, and fraudulently, petition held to support judgment for plaintiff. Turner v. Turner (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 326.

In suit to restate account because of usury, etc., judgment establishing lien not pleaded is erroneous. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 964.

A judgment in a buyer's action for damages could not allow recovery upon a phase of the case not pleaded. Kincannon & Gaines v. Independent Cotton Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 878.

Where plaintiff alleged suit was to obtain settlement of partnership accounts, and defendant partner and sister alleged debts due sister were partnership debts, pleadings were sufficient basis for decree subjecting partnership property, to partnership's debts to sister. Bolding v. Bolding (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 587.

Where in suit to cancel extracting of oil from right of way plaintiffs did not sue for reformation or allege fraud, accident, or mistake, deed to railroad company could not be reformed, and its title must be determined by the deed. Crowell & Conner v. Moore (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 911.

Though petition of contractor suing on bond of subcontractor was insufficient, held in view of answers or cross-actions of creditors, pleadings were sufficient to support judgment for contractor against subcontractor's surety. Art. 6394f et seq. Southern Supply Co. v. Owens Bros. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1148.

In action against seller of swing for injuries when hook gave way, petition held to support judgment for buyer. Rick Furniture Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 99.

Petition which may reasonably be construed as suing both railway company and receivers supports judgment against company. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Aiken (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 811.

In a suit by the payee of a promissory note against the surety, a finding that the payee promised the surety to bring action on the note will not support a judgment where the issue was not pleaded. Fisher v. Russell (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 143.

In suit by creditors of sellers to enforce a trust in note given by purchasers, allegation that purchasers, parties defendant, executed the note and signed the contract, creating the trust, authorized a judgment against the purchasers for the amount of the note. Warren v. Parlin-Orendorff Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 586.

In suit against city by bidder for paving bonds to recover judgment obtained by city by cashing check after bidder's attorney had reported unfavorably, judgment ordering city officials to provide by taxation to pay sum recovered, held without support in pleadings to that extent. City of Amarillo v. W. L. Slayton & Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 967.

In action to enjoin sale of land under execution, court did not have jurisdiction to order sale of the property in satisfaction of costs incurred in the injunction suit and of the judgment under which the execution had been rendered, in the absence of plead-Ings that would authorize the entry of such a judgment. Robinson v. Monning Dry Goods Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 525.

A judgment cannot be based on a pleaded conclusion of law not warranted by the facts pleaded. Hurst v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 284.

Finding of breach of contract could not sustain a judgment for damages for such breach, where breach was not pleaded. Langben v. Crespi & Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 144.

Where defense of discharge of sureties was limited by the pleadings to the mere fact of an agreement to extend time in consideration of interest to be paid, judgment cannot be based on finding that plaintiff agreed that sureties should be released. Archenhold Co. v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 898.

A suit on contract will not authorize a recovery for a tort, and a judgment for a tort will be set aside where the pleading only seek recovery on a contract. Sanger Bros. v. Barrett (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1987.

The court is without jurisdiction to render judgment against one party in favor of another without a pleading filed as a basis in favor of such party, with process duly served upon him, such judgment being a nullity. Edinburg Irr. Co. v. Paschen (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 329.

In a suit to restrain the sale of lots in violation of agreement to include restrictions in the deeds, where it was undisputed that defendant had sold one lot without the restrictions, and the jury found that it would sell other lots without restrictions, it was not error to grant the injunction, though the petition did not specifically charge an intent to sell without the restrictions. Wilson Co. v. Gordon (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 765.

In trespass to try title collaterally attacking a judgment and sale on execution, where there was no pleading therefor, it was error to render judgment for defendant for the money paid by him upon the land purchased at execution sale, and to admit or hear any parol proof. Graves v. Griffin (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 513.

A judgment raised by pleadings to issues upon which case was tried, and courts cannot ignore jury’s findings and render judgment upon theory of discovered peril in an action for personal injuries in railroad crossing accident where such matter was not pleaded. Baker v. Shafer (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 249.

49. Prayer for relief in general.—Personal judgment against defendant, warranted by facts pleaded and proved, is authorized by prayer not specifically asking it, but such other and further relief as in law or equity plaintiff may show itself entitled to. Gilles v. Miners’ Bank of Cartersville, Mo. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 179.

In trespass to try title, it is error to grant to plaintiffs rent for which their petition does not pray, in view of art. 7722, subd. 7. Slipes-Nash Co. v. Manning (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 374.

In replevin, where defendant’s prayer for relief was that plaintiffs take nothing by their suit, a judgment that defendant recover the property, was not supported by the pleadings. Wilkes-Overland Co. of California v. Chapman (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 978.

In divorced wife’s suit to set aside decree, in so far as affecting community property, wife’s pleadings, and her prayer for general relief, held adequate basis for judgment, making a redistribution in money of the community property. Celli v. Sanderson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 179.

Art. 1830, subd. 25, providing that, where freight has been damaged in transit over two or more railroads, the damage shall be apportioned, does not require the apportionment, where defendants have not filed pleadings asking apportionment. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Kemp (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 666.

Although court would not have jurisdiction to cancel instruments as requested in special prayer, where petition stated facts showing jurisdiction of defendants, and that fraud had been committed, court could have granted petition, subject to limits by requiring defendants to reconvey, the court had jurisdiction to grant such relief under the general prayer. Griner v. Trevino (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 947.

A judgment on either a cause of action on a quantum meruit or on an express contract cannot be sustained unless it appears that particular cause of action was pleaded in the alternative or in both counts, and a mere prayer for relief in the alternative is not sufficient. Thames v. Clesi (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 195.

In an action by stockholders against another stockholder and president for recovery of secret profits, where judgment was based on what was due suing stockholders, no recovery of attorney fees could be had, the pleading not asking for them. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 272.

One who applies to the equity powers of the court for relief cannot complain that the rules of equity are applied against him in determining the rights of the parties, instead of enforcing the strict rules of law. Friddy v. Green (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 243.

Where, although plaintiff in action on insurance policy did not pray for recovery of the lesser amount for which the insurance company admitted liability, yet a ground of his motion for a new trial was alleged error in not rendering judgment for that amount, judgment should have been so rendered. Illinois Bankers’ Life Ass’n v. Floyd (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 967. reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Floyd v. Illinois Bankers’ Life Ass’n of Monmouth, Ill., 192 S. W. 607.

Where the petition in a suit to cancel deeds prayed for restitution and for all legal and equitable relief both general and special to which plaintiffs might be entitled, and the heirship of plaintiffs and defendants was established, the court had power to partition the property. Sherwood v. Sherwood (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 565.

50. Amount demanded.—Judgment on item sued for could not be for more than claimed in petition. Garrett v. Dobson (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 675.
In suit against heirs to rescind contract for purchase of land, where defendants averred no equitable relief further than that permanent and valuable improvements were put on land and prayed for value of such improvements only, judgment was not erroneous for failure to award to defendants portion of purchase money paid and value of improvements. Perez v. Maverick (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 199.

In suit for rescission of contract for purchase of land and to recover amount paid, judgment allowing $58.65 as attorney's fees, where there is neither pleading nor proof that any such fees were contracted for, is excessive. Rascou v. Myre (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 780.

In action for conversion of ore, in absence of pleading and evidence as to cost of shipping ore or charge for smelting, defendant lumber company cannot get judgment for such items, and converters of ore who shipped to lumber company, being trespassers, are not entitled to recover expenses. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 68.

In trespass to try title, defendant, who pleaded his warrantor, could not recover from him an amount in excess of that pleaded, although a greater price was proven. Allen v. Draper (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 792.

In a case to try title, the allegation which expressly alleged value of use of premises to be $250 per annum, and asked for judgment for damages, rent, and costs of suit, was sufficient to support judgment for $381 for use of premises for two years prior to beginning of suit. Watts v. McCloul (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 381.

Where broker sued on oral contract for one-half of commission collected by defendants, and defendants alleged the contract was for one-third of the commission collected, judgment for one-third of the commission from the latter was within the pleadings. Security Realty Co. v. Critchett (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 852.

In action for judgment for balance due $78.48, admitted in testifying that defendants were entitled to credits aggregating $120.35, he was not entitled to recover any sum in excess of $168.11. Jennings v. Pollard (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 415.

In action for damages due to collision of steamship with canal bridge of plaintiff city, to afford its pleasure pier, it was access to its pleasure pier rather than to plaintiff and a third person for the use of the pier could not be recovered, there being no pleading to the effect that defendant knew of contract. Magnolia Petroleum Co. v. City of Port Arthur (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 803.

In an action for injuries to a shipment of goods, where interest was not claimed on the damages from date of delivery of the damaged goods, the awarding of such interest was erroneous. Baker v. Lyons (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1030.

51. — On counterclaim.—Judgment should not be for plaintiff for amount sued for, and for defendant on his cross-action for greater amount, but that plaintiff take nothing, and defendant recover excess. Hecman v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 269.

Where defendants, by cross-petition, alleged two items of actual damages, one for $1,000, and other for $100, judgment for $1,010 was not erroneous, simply because prayer left out $100 item. Lamar v. Hildreth (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 156.

In grantor's heirs' action to cancel deed, where plaintiffs alleged that rental value was an adequate compensation to grantee for the support and maintenance of grantor, it was incumbent upon grantee, in order to recover for such support, to allege and prove that value thereof exceeded the rental value. Wisdom v. Peek (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 210.

52. Conformity to verdict or findings in general.—See Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 602.

Rule that, if proof is sufficient to show negligence of defendant in any one of three acts charged, judgment for plaintiff should be sustained, does not apply where the case was submitted upon a general charge, the verdict was general, and there was nothing to show upon which charge of negligence the verdict was returned. Panhandle & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Tisdale (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 347.

Judgment should conform to verdict, whether it be correct or not and whether the error therein, if any, arise from erroneous instructions or from misinterpretation of the evidence by the jury. Turner-Cummings Hardware Co. v. Phillip A. Ryan Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 431.

In trespass to try title to determine boundary, general verdict being for plaintiff, fact that, in addition to description of line in petition, judgment gives variation and other data identifying line does not make it obnoxious to rule requiring judgment to follow verdict. Grawunder v. Gotoskey (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 705.

In action for deficiency in property received in exchange, the measure of damages is the difference between the value of the property given and that actually received in exchange, and in the absence of an evidence as to value of the respective properties the court cannot render a proper judgment. Foster v. Atlir (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 955.

A judgment must conform to the verdict. Independent Order of Puritans v. Manley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 647.

Where the trial court did not find the time of shipment on the line of the terminal carrier was unreasonable, and found only the amount of the decline in the market between the issuance of a diversion order before the car was received from a connecting carrier and on delivery, the findings do not support a judgment against the terminal carrier for any depreciation in the market value. Lancaster v. Smith (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 460.

Sufficiency of special findings to warrant judgment, see notes to art. 1985. See, also, notes to art. 1990.

Court may make specific finding for item and render judgment therefor without finding by jury, when issue is not submitted to jury and none requested; there being evidence supporting finding. Garrett v. Dodson (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 675.

Where plaintiff sued for breach of contract, and defendant pleaded a counterclaim and produced evidence thereon, but the counterclaim was not included in the special issues, the court had a right on proper evidence to deduct from plaintiff's damages, as found by the jury, the amount of the counterclaim. Thompson v. Fleming (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1124.

Although the trial judge is required to render judgment in conformity to a special verdict, yet where the verdict finds issue in favor of one or the other party, and facts supported by the evidence which clearly entitle one to a judgment, the court should render judgment. Board v. Emerson-Brantingham Implement Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 421.

Where evidence was conflicting, and tended to support theory of both defendant and plaintiff, and findings of jury were in support of plaintiff's theory of case, court properly entered judgment for plaintiff. Sanger v. Futch (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 704.

Where jury found that personality sold to a creditor was worth considerably more than debt, and that the creditor was a bona fide creditor, court was not precluded from passing upon issue of constructive fraud, which was not submitted to the jury, court having defined "bona fide" as meaning "real." Watson v. Schultz (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 958.

That court copied into judgment a general verdict, though case was submitted on special issues, is harmless error, where judgment rendered was demanded by the special issues. Aycock v. Paraffine Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 851.

In an action for profits from a sale of cattle where defendant set up a settlement and that through plaintiff's fraudulent representations a certain sum had subsequently been paid to plaintiff, for which recovery was sought, held error to fail to allow a recovery of such amount under the special findings. Benton v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 704.

Where jury found that personality sold to a creditor was worth considerably more than debt, and that the creditor was a bona fide creditor, court was not precluded from passing upon issue of constructive fraud, which was not submitted to the jury, court having defined "bona fide" as meaning "real." Watson v. Schultz (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 958.

That court copied into judgment a general verdict, though case was submitted on special issues, is harmless error, where judgment rendered was demanded by the special issues. Aycock v. Paraffine Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 851.

In an action for damages to a shipment of live stock brought against connecting carriers, where the findings of the jury required a judgment against all the defendants, it was fundamental error to render a judgment against one alone. Chicago, R. I. & G. Ry. Co. v. Hallam (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 809.

In suit for title and possession of land, where jury found in response to special issue that deed executed by plaintiffs to defendant's grantor to correct mistake was intended to operate as a deed, the court could not enter judgment for plaintiffs, who neither objected to the issue nor filed motion to set aside answer. Galloway v. Hodnett (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 238.

An injured servant's right to recover is limited to the material allegations contained in his pleadings as to how the accident occurred, and when a verdict on special issue negatives the alleged cause of action, judgment should be rendered for defendant. Bartlett Lumber Co. v. Chaney (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 837.

The trial court, under the law, was bound to render judgment according to the findings on special issues submitted to the jury. MoBroom v. Velz (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 555.

When the court gives a charge, which is inaccurate but for the purpose of submitting an issue raised, and the jury answers the same, the answer cannot be disregarded because inaccurate. Benton v. Jones (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 193.

In a crossing collision, error in instructing the jury as a matter of law that it was the duty of plaintiff to keep a lookout held not to warrant trial court in rendering judgment for plaintiffs in face of answer of jury that plaintiff would have seen the approaching train in time had she kept a lookout, and that her failure to keep a lookout was not contributed to the accident. Harrell v. St. Louis & S. W. Ry. Co. of Texas (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 221, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) St. Louis & S. W. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Harrell, 194 S. W. 971.

54. — Amount awarded.—If what plaintiff would have realized from sale of apples damaged in transit was proper measure of damages, no judgment could have been entered on jury's answer to issue as to what plaintiff would have realized, because expense which should have been deducted was unknown. Quannah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Novit (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 496.

Though as a rule judgment must be based on verdict, where verdict is excessive, remitted, and order in rendering judgment for amount unauthorized without formally entering judgment and filing remittitur is immaterial. Garrett v. Dodson (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 675.

Notwithstanding defendant expressly admitted he owed plaintiff a certain sum, so that the court did not submit that issue in his general charge, it was error to enter judgment for such sum, since the judgment must follow and conform to the verdict, and cannot exceed it, in view of our statutes. Shotwell v. Crier (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 262.

In purchaser's action for shortage in land, where the jury failed to agree upon the value and the evidence wholly failed to show the value of machines, etc., constituting a part of the consideration for such land, the rendition of verdict for plaintiff and judgment thereon held reversible error; there being no basis in the verdict for ascertaining the damages. Taylor v. Hill (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 367, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 182 S. W. 526.
Chap. 15) COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN Art. 1994

55. Parties.—In action for wrongful dispossession of lessee, finding of jury that lessor had not conspired with dispossession did not require judgment for all defendants. McCauley v. M-Elroy (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 317.

Judgment not conforming to the verdict, as required by this article, with respect to the parties, was erroneous. Turner-Cummings Hardwood Co. v. Phillip A. Ryan lumber (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 581.

Where only the receiver of a railroad was sued, a verdict against company alone will not support a judgment against receiver and company. Pondor v. Creneljee (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 1125.

56. Interest and attorney’s fees.—In action for negligence in transportation of a shipment of cattle, interest was properly included in judgment, though special verdict contained no finding respecting interest. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Sutherland (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 521.

Where the question of the amount of damage suffered by plaintiff when the basement of his store was flooded, was submitted to the jury, and a verdict was returned thereon fixing the damage, the court cannot add interest. City of San Antonio v. Pfeiffer (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 207.

In an action for injuries to an automobile, where the jury was only required to find facts from which the court could ascertain the damage, interest may be awarded by the court, provided it is sued for. 1d.

In suit for undivided damages for a breach of contract, it was improper to add to the verdict interest from date of breach, since interest, when allowed in such contracts, is allowed as a part of the damages. Faulkner v. Reed (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 945.

In action for breach of covenant against incumbrances, it was improper to allow interest on the amount specially found by the jury to be the value of the diminution of the value of the improvement at the date of the finding and from the date of action, there being no jury finding awarding such interest; but interest was recoverable only from the date of the judgment. Morris v. Hesse (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 317.

Where a special verdict was rendered, the court could not render a judgment non obstante veredicto, in view of arts. 1990, 1994. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 168 S. W. 357.

In suit to foreclose vendor’s lien, in which defendant filed cross-bill for fraud and failure to furnish water for irrigation, court held to have erred in ignoring verdict and rendering judgment contrary to defendant on the cause of action for failure to furnish water. Closer v. Sprague v. Acker (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 421.

Where jury found insured to have been disabled for 21 weeks and 3 days, it was error to render judgment for the benefit of 39 weeks contrary to the verdict, in view of art. 1990, Continental Casualty Co. v. Chase (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 779.

To be entitled to a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, a party must be able to show that undisputed facts other than those involved in the findings of the jury entitle him to a judgment, even though the facts found by the jury are taken as true. Lasater v. Jamison (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1151.

Trial court could not have entered judgment in favor of plaintiff on his motion on the jury’s verdict, which was wholly adverse to him; practice of entering judgment non obstante veredicto having become obsolete. Hall v. Hayter (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 456.

Having submitted the case to the jury on special issues, the court was without authority to render judgment for defendant notwithstanding verdict for plaintiff; the limit of the court’s power under such circumstances being to set aside the verdict and grant new trial, in view of art. 1990. Helmer v. Yates (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 680.

When a special verdict has been rendered which entitles one of the litigants to judgment, the trial court has no power to grant judgment still further contrary to the verdict; but may set aside the verdict and to grant new trial, or to render judgment upon and in conformity with it; and it is error for the court to ignore special verdict on an issue erroneously submitted, and to award the party found against judgment non obstante veredicto. Kendrick v. Polk (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 836.

It is not permissible to render judgment contrary to the jury’s findings, though the trial court has authority to set aside findings made by the jury. Walker v. Ames (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 366.

60. Disposition of rights of parties.—A judgment was not erroneous because not disposing of one who was a party plaintiff in the original petition, and because not disposing of part of suit to cancel deed to defendant, where such party plaintiff was dismissed by amended petition, and prayer for cancellation of deed was made in case there was no recovery of damages, which were awarded. San Antonio, U. & G. Ry. Co. v. Ernst (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 602.

Upon appeal from a probate court order appointing guardian of a minor’s person and estate, a district court order appointing guardian for minor’s person only is erroneous, since it did not dispose of entire case. Sparkman v. Stout (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 556.

Where there are not more parties than one on a bail bond and sureties have not all been served, a judgment cannot be rendered against them even by default, unless judgment dissolves as to parties not served, and renders judgment against those served. Saunders v. State, 88 Cr. R. 322, 216 S. W. 870.

64. Revival of.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1218, which provides that, when a defendant dies before judgment, his administrator or executor, and, in a proper case, his heir, may be substituted as defendant, a petition for scire facias to revive a money judgment against a deceased defendant, which alleges that deceased left assets which came into the possession of a party, but does not show that there was no insurrance for administration, does not show a proper case for citing the heirs as defendants.

Schmidtke v. Miller, 71 Tex. 103, 8 S.W. 688.

Where scire facias proceeding to revive a judgment is a new action for debt on the judgment, it is without jurisdiction; there being no appearance by the judgment debtor, and the service had on him, in such connection, being in another state, where he then resided. Collin County Nat. Bank v. Hughes, 110 Tex. 252, 256 S.W. 767, affirming judgment (Civ. App.)
154 S. W. 1181.

The manner in which an action on a foreign judgment is brought does not lack jurisdiction because the foreign judgment was not a final one. American Nat. Bank of Oklahoma City, Okl., v.

As the Oregon Supreme Court has construed the state statutes as clothing the court rendering judgment for alimony with power to set aside as well as to alter or modify a provision for permanent alimony or allowance, and the decree of annulment may be made to operate retrospectively, a judgment for alimony for support and maintenance is not, as to Installments already accrued, entitled to be given effect under the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution (article 4, § 1). Criteser v. Gaffey (Com.

A judgment for the periodical payment of alimony in an Oregon divorce suit under L. O. L. §§ 512, 514, held not a final judgment within the full faith and credit clause of

In suit on foreign judgment, held, under evidence, that trial court was justified in finding that defendant was not party to suit when judgment was entered, and that judgment for alimony was nullity for want of jurisdiction. Guarnaty Trust Co. of New York v. Green
(Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1026.

Under Const. U. S. art. 4, § 1, and Rev. St. U. S. § 905 (U. S. Comp. Sp. § 1519), in actions on a state court judgment, defense being pending appeal, effect of appeal on finality of the judgment and its admissibility in evidence is determinable by the laws of

Where action is brought in Texas on a judgment rendered in Indiana, from which an appeal is pending, and the right to sue thereon in Indiana is not shown, the action is governed in that respect by the laws of Texas. Id.

Where a foreign corporation had been put through receivership proceedings in federal court with ancillary appointment of receiver in Texas, and property of foreign corporation had been sold to another corporation under decree providing limit of time for filing claims and selling free of claims, judgment of Texas court in action by Texas creditor not submitting himself to jurisdiction of federal court, held not to deny full fair and credit of federal court's judgment. Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss
(Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 690.

Foreign divorce decree procured through wife's fraud and falsehood was not vitalized and validated by the act of the husband, never made a party to the suit, and who knew nothing of the action until after rendition of the decree, in subsequently visiting the wife after her return from the foreign state, and by failing to go there and attack the judg-

The validity of a decree of divorce, procured in the Illinois courts by a wife who left her husband in Texas, depended on the truthfulness of the facts stated in the wife's affidavit for substituted service upon the husband, rather than upon the good faith of the wife or her attorney in making the affidavit. Id.

Where wife left husband in Texas, and, going to Illinois, sued him for divorce, and, when petition was filed to change domicile, and where it was shown by affidavit that the husband was domiciled and did not reside in Texas, held that the Illinois court had jurisdiction and the Illinois court's decree was binding. Id. and In re Huffer (Ill. 306 S.
638, 65 Ill. App. 482).

An order of a court in another state giving intervener a lien on the property involved in a suit to be protected when the decree of foreclosure shall be entered in favor of plaintiff is an interlocutory order, not a final judgment, and cannot be made the basis

Where the right to installments of alimony becomes absolute and vested upon becomning due, the judgment providing therefor is protected by the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution (article 4, § 1) so as to such installments, but that rule does not apply where, by the law of the state in which the judgment for future alimony is rendered, the right to demand and receive the same is discretionary with the court rendering the judgment to such an extent that no vested right attaches. Criteser v. Gaffey (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 193, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) Gaffey v. Criteser, 195 S. W.
1166.

Art. 1995. [1336] [1336] For or against one or more plaintiffs, etc.

Joint and several judgments.—In suit by corporate stockholders to recover assets of company wrongfully disposed of by director, judgment must be for all stockholders and company, not for plaintiffs individually for respective interests in recovery. Millspa v.
Johnson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 292.
Where an injury is occasioned by acts of two or more joint tort-feasors, though the party injured may have judgment against all of them, he can have but one satisfaction for the injury received. City of Austin v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1181.

In an action on a note given in payment for bull bought by first defendant and delivered to a subsequently created partnership, held that under the pleadings and evidence a judgment for plaintiff for the full amount against the first defendant and in his favor for half the amount of the note against the second defendant was improper. Snyder v. Slaughter (Civ. App.) 285 S. W. 974.

Where liability of sureties upon a bond is joint and several a judgment in favor of one does not discharge the other. Southland Life Ins. Co. v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 460.

In suit against two sureties on a bond, where one surety failed to appear and answer, and plaintiff's petition stated a cause of action against him, and was sustained by proof, plaintiff was entitled to judgment against such surety notwithstanding the other surety pleaded and proved facts entitling him to discharge. Id.

Where members of a truck growers' association brought action joining the association for defendant's breach of contract to furnish onion crates, each member having a separate cause of action, a joint judgment was improper; since each member separately should have been awarded such damages as he proved. Mayhew v. Isbell Lumber Co. v. Valley Wells' Truck Growers' Ass'n (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 225.

Where, in a suit to foreclose a chattel mortgage, defendants S. and C. answered separately, S. claiming a lien for storage, and C. a lien for repairs, it was error to render a joint judgment for them for the amount of C.'s claim as proved; there being no proof with respect to S.'s claim. Holt v. Schwarz (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 836.

Demand for judgment.-Where certain defendants disclaimed before petition was assailed, if plaintiff desired judgment as to disclaiming parties he must demand judgment. Ballard v. Ellerd (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 305.

Judgment for each defendant.—In a suit involving the homestead of husband and wife, though the wife was not a necessary party, a judgment in her favor as well as her husband's was proper. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Hill (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 875.

General rule.—Usually there is no contribution between joint tort-feasors, and they are each jointly and severally liable for the entire damages. Parks v. Schoellkopf Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 704.

Necessity of final judgment.—Ordinarily courts can enforce a plaintiff's rights only after a trial on the merits, their power preliminary to the final adjudication being limited to the preservation of the subject-matter, the maintenance of the status, and issuance of extraordinary writs for the purpose of securing an effective adjudication and enforcement of the rights of the parties after such adjudication. Colby v. Osgood (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 459.

Essentials of final judgment.—A "final judgment" should contain the judicial ascertainment of the facts, together with the manner of their ascertainment and a recorded declaration of the court pronouncing the legal consequences upon the facts thus ascertained. Kinney v. Tri-State Telephone Co. (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 227, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 1180.

To constitute a "final judgment," the record must affirmatively show, not only that the trial court pronounced its opinion as to the merits of the case, but that it awarded the judicial consequences which it held that the law attached to the facts, and there is no final judgment until the court by affirmative action has applied the law to the facts and pronounced a judgment in favor of one and against the other party to the litigation. Kuehn v. Kuehn (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 918.

Judgments which are final.—A judgment awarding land to claimant under tax title, and the city judgment for taxes accruing since claimant's purchase, and reciting that it does not affect former tax adjudications against parties other than claimant, is a final judgment, not violating the law against rendering two judgments in a cause. Ivey v. Teichman (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 866.

To sustain general demurrer to answer is a final judgment of the court on all the issues raised, and is just as effective as a judgment on the full hearing. Bostick v. Haney (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 47.

Where, upon the return of a verdict, the court entered upon its docket, "Judgment for the defendant on verdict of jury," but failed to enter the judgment on the minutes during the term, no ruling having been made on a motion for a new trial, the judgment was final. First Natl. Ins. Co. v. Dancer (Com. App.) 215 S. W. 962.

Where plaintiff abandoned his cause of action as against a defendant, there was no merit in an objection to judgment in plaintiff's favor that it was not a final judgment, because not in terms making any disposition of the case as to such defendant. Buchanan v. Quiddle (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 899.

Where plaintiff sought to secure a dissolution of a partnership, and a determination that plaintiff was entitled to one-half of the assets, and defendant demanded a trial of the question of partnership before a jury, a judgment declaring the existence of a partnership and its dissolution and that plaintiff was the owner of an undivided one-half interest, and appointing a receiver held a full and final adjudication of all the matters

Judgments not final.—A judgment which leaves something further to be

Number of Judgments.—Under this article, there cannot be final judgments on both plaintiff's original claim and defendant's plea in reconvention, a plea in reconvention or a cross-action being such a part of the entire suit that, when judgment is rendered for plaintiff, the judgment will be held to have disposed of such plea so as to be appealable.

Art. 1998. [1338] Judgment may pass title, etc.

Passing of title.—A decree of the federal District Court held to divest out of plain-tiff's predecessor in interest any title which such predecessor had acquired by virtue of possessory title under the two-year statute of limitations. Conn v. Houston Oil Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 137.

Where the grantee in a quitclaim deed subsequently obtained a judgment establishing his title as against the child of the former owner, he held title to the child's interest under the judgment, and not under the quitclaim deed. Crow v. Van Nees (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 559.

See Howard v. Parks, 1 Civ. App. 603, 21 S. W. 269.

7. Execution, issuance of.—In view of arts. 2000, 3757, the clerk of a county district court was without authority to issue an order of sale in foreclosure, requiring the sheriff of

14. Jurisdiction of foreclosure suits.—In view of this article, value of property against which farm laborer's lien is asserted, if greater than the debt, controls in determining jurisdiction; a rule applying to common-law and statutory liens as well. Ball v. Beaty (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 552.

16. Personal and foreclosure judgments.—Where creditor under a trust deed bought at a sale and, to protect its title, purchased a prior mortgage, it is entitled to be subrrogated to the senior lien, but the land is the primary fund for its payment, and foreclosure must be first had, after which it may have judgment for any deficiency. Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank of Ballinger v. Cameron (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 1167.

Where judgment decrees foreclosure of lien on land claimed as a homestead for only a portion of the amount of the judgment, an appeal may be taken from only so much of the judgment as affects the land claimed as a homestead. Slaughter v. Texas Life Ins.

Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 350.

Evidence that mortgages' attorney stated he would bid in the property, and the mortgagees requested him not to do so, promising to take the property in full satisfaction of their judgment, held sufficient, though contradicted, to sustain a verdict finding an agreement by the mortgagees to release from deficiency liability, if they procured the prop-

The promise of mortgagees not to bid at the foreclosure sale, whereby the mortgagees were enabled to bid in the property for less than its market value, and to avoid the payment of sheriff's fees on the full value, is sufficient consideration for the promise of the mortgagors to release their deficiency liability. Id.

Where on exchanging lands covenant in deed was qualified as being subject to a mortgage, the contract was executed, and not executory, and defendants were not obligated to pay the incumbrance, and no personal judgment could be obtained against them, where there was no agreement to pay this sum as part of the consideration for the land.

One conveying land subject to a mortgage could, if he desired, pay the mortgage when due and secure subrogation, but, if he does so, he is only entitled to foreclose against the land, and cannot obtain a personal judgment against the grantee; the payment of the mortgage not having been made a part of the consideration for the land. Id.

17. Requisites and validity of judgment.—Where an improper description is put in a mortgage and foreclosure is had and the mistake is carried into the sheriff's deed, the sheriff's deed cannot be reformed, but to get title the mortgage itself should be reformed and another foreclosure had. Alfalfa Lumber Co. v. Mudgett (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 337.

In action on notes and to foreclose vendor's lien against the vendee and others, a judgment against the vendee for the amount due and against all of the defendants foreclosing the lien and ordering sale in directing the officers making the sale, in event the lands should sell for more than sufficient to satisfy the judgment, to pay the excess to the "defendants," was not indefinite nor uncertain, so as to require that it be reversed

Where a foreclosure judgment described the land to be sold with certainty, but recited that it was all situated wholly or partly in one county, whereas after a division of coun-cases, certain tracts were wholly in another county, the description was nevertheless good. De la Guerra v. De Gonzalez (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 836.

20. Conformity of judgment to pleadings, proof and verdict.—In suit to foreclose implied vendor's lien arising from sale of lease and other rights, judgment for defendants was rendered where lien was not described, and there was nothing in pleadings, evidence or record whereby description thereof might be made definite and certain. Blair v. Armstrong (Civ. App.) 264 S. W. 465.

In such suit judgment for defendants was properly directed, where petition contained no sufficient description of land involved to enable court to locate it. Id.

In such suit, judgment was properly directed for defendants where it did not appear that plaintiffs had any title to any property claimed to have been sold by them, but petition and contract of sale attached showed that prior to such alleged sale they had conveyed all their rights in and to property in controversy. Id.

Judgment for defendants was properly directed where neither pleadings nor evidence showed anything to enable court to fix amount. Id.

Where original petition in suit to foreclose vendor's lien did not ask for personal judgment against defendant, and there was no personal service after amendment, there could be no personal judgment. Henson v. C. C. Slaughter Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 375.

In a suit to foreclose vendor's lien against the vendee and others who had purchased part of the land from the vendee, in the absence of any pleading of equities or any pleading or proof as to the amount either defendant was entitled to receive, the court could not do otherwise than direct that excess proceeds be paid to the defendants jointly. Clark v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 291.

In action to enjoin sale by trustee under power conferred by deed of trust, prayer of answer for the "foreclosure of their said deed of trust lien as provided for in said deed of trust" held to authorize a foreclosure by the court, and not merely an order directing foreclosure by trustee. Poole v. Cage (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 566.

In action to foreclose a contract lien, plaintiff's failure to plead and prove compliance with the contract, did not render judgment of foreclosure invalid; noncompliance with contract being a matter of defense. Johnson v. Barker (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 348.

21. Conclusiveness of judgment.—Rights of holder of deed of trust are not affected by suit, to which he is not a party, to foreclose a prior vendor's lien. Houston v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1121.

Judgment foreclosing mortgage, in action against husband, is not res adjudicata against wife who was not made a party to the suit, and in no way affects her right to assert her homestead claim to the land. Barbee v. Lundy (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 257.

Where a defendant was duly cited by personal service outside of the state, and did not appear, but made default, a judgment which foreclosed the vendor's lien securing the notes sued on as to such defendant was a judgment in rem; the only judgment which the court could have rendered as to him, and disposed of him and his rights, divesting him of all interest in the land. Conner v. McAfee (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 646.

A judgment in an action on a note and to foreclose a mortgage held conclusive as to the amount due on the note and the right to foreclose the lien. Chandler v. Young (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 484.

In suit to foreclose improvement certificate, where owner, being cited, failed to set up her claim of homestead exemption, judgment of foreclosure held res judicata of the claim of homestead exemption under Const. art. 16, §§ 50, 51. Eureka Faving Co. v. Barnett (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 903.

The foreclosure of a lien on land at the suit of the senior mortgagee who did not have notice of the right in the owner of the junior mortgage in the property bars such right, notwithstanding the junior mortgagee was not a party to the foreclosure suit. Masterson v. Ginners' Mut. Underwriters' Ass'n of Texas (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 263.

Unless a party to a suit for foreclosure of a mortgage, the holder of the legal title to the land is unaffected by the foreclosure. Martinez v. Logan (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 611.

Judgment and sale in prior suit to foreclose vendor's lien held res judicata of every right possessed in the land by the holder of certain of the vendor's lien notes as against the holder of other of such notes; all parties having been properly before the court in such prior suit. Burns v. Dyer (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 867.

21½. Construction and operation.—Judgment foreclosing mortgage liens, etc., tended simply to change form of securities held by judgment creditors can be enforced only to same extent as principal debt could have been. Bomar v. Smith (Civ. App.) 295 S. W. 964.

After a judgment has been entered on a note secured by a trust deed and foreclosure thereof ordered, the 4-year statute of limitations no longer applies, even in favor of subsequent lien claimants who were not parties, but the judgment can be enforced at any time within 10 years. Shaw v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 520.

22. Sales under foreclosure.—Where mortgage had sold land, held that, if sale of L. tract occurred prior to hypothecation to bank, before maturity of notes for J. tract, or if L. had no notice of hypothecation, interest of bank in J. tract should be sold before resorting to L. tract. Magee v. Snell (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 364.
Where plaintiff was in possession of mortgaged lands before foreclosure under a lease or mortgage, notice to mortgagee was notice to mortgagee who bought in land at foreclosure of his rights to crops. Temple Trust Co. v. Pirtle (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 627.

In mortgage foreclosure sale, owners may divide land and have it sold in lots, under art. 5754; process issued upon judgments decreeing foreclosure of mortgage lien being "execution" within such statute, in view of arts. 2000 and 3729, subd. 2. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

24. — Validity.—In view of Houston City Charter of 1905, art. 2, § 2, and article 3, § 8, and arts. 2000 and 2004, a sale of ward's land under a tax judgment was invalid. Teat v. Perry (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 650.

Art. 2004. [1344] [1343] Judgments against executors, etc.

Enforcement of judgment.—In view of Houston City Charter of 1905, art. 2, § 2, and article 3, § 8, and Civ. St. arts. 2000 and 2004, a sale of ward's land under a tax judgment was invalid. Teat v. Perry (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 650.

This article, requiring money judgment against "guardian as such" to be certified to probate court, and there enforced, contemplates an existing guardianship at time of the recovery, and does not deal with a recovery against "minors." Simmons v. Arnim, 110 Tex. 395, 220 S. W. 66, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 184.

Under arts. 4062, 4067, 2004, and 4051, a judgment creditor of a minor whose person or property is not under the jurisdiction of the probate court in a guardianship proceeding, need not institute such a proceeding, or cause it to be instituted and perfected, for execution of his judgment. Id.

Rights and liabilities of independent executors.—In view of arts. 2005, 2295, 2292-2296, when an executor authorized to act independently of the probate court in good faith, passes the estate to those entitled to receive it, he loses control thereof and may not thereafter administer it for creditors, and is not as a consequence further accountable to creditors in his representative capacity. Patton v. Smith (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 1094.

Art. 2006. [1347] [1346] Against partners when all not sued.

See Frank v. Tatum, 87 Tex. 204, 25 S. W. 409.

Citation against partners.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1346, providing that service on one partner is service on the firm, and on the partner actually served, service by publication, where the records shows the partner's residence to be unknown, is "actual service," within the meaning of the statute. Martin v. Burns, 59 Tex. 676, 18 S. W. 1672.

Judgments, validity.—Where an oil lease was taken in the name of a company under which a partnership did business, and the petition to cancel alleged the name of the partnership and of each individual member, and prayed judgment against all, it was proper to render judgment against all defendants. Hamilton County Development Co. v. Sullivan (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 116.

Execution.—Under this article, execution may issue against the partnership property where the petition showed that the debt was the obligation of the partnership as such, and it was sued, the individual partners being named, and neither those served nor those not served can complain of such execution. Self Motor Co. v. First State Bank of Crowell (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 428.

Art. 2007. [1348] [1347] Confession of judgment.

Stipulation.—A stipulation whereby defendant, in consideration of an extension of time agreed that judgment might be taken against him, is a pleading in the nature of a confession of judgment under this article. Dunne v. Vogele (Civ. App.) 289 S. W. 197.

Agreement of parties.—In suit on vendor's lien notes, the judgment entered by agreement held binding on the appealing defendants, as made in open court and entered of record in full compliance with rule 47 for the district and county courts (142-S. W. xxii), in the absence of objection, except in two particulars. Wyss v. Bookman (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 297.

That a judgment did not follow the prior parol agreement of the parties would not make the judgment less binding, and, if different from the agreement through mistake, it would control so long as it was not reformed. Gulf Production Co. v. Palmer (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 1017.

Construction of judgment.—A consent judgment in a suit on vendor's lien notes, which was not after all defendants had been duly and legally cited, were properly before the court, and that the rights and interests of all were determined, held to have disposed of the rights of a defendant whose name was not specially mentioned. Wyss v. Bookman (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 297.

Art. 2008. [1349] [1347a] The acceptance of service and waiver of process.

Constitutionality.—This act relates to the remedy, and does not impair the obligation of a contract, executed prior to its enactment, which authorized a licensed attorney to appear in court, waive process, and confess judgment against the party liable thereon. Worsam v. Stevens, 68 Tex. 89, 17 S. W. 404.

Applicability of provision.—This article does not forbid a stipulation in a bond for performance of a contract in a certain county that the bond may be sued on in that county. Ft. Worth Board of Trade v. Cooke, 6 Civ. App. 324, 25 S. W. 320; Howard v. Borthole & Casey (Civ. App.) 396 S. W. 378.

Acceptance and waiver before suit.—Under this article, defendants' acceptance of service and waiver of process indorsed on the petition in the suit against him, before it was filed, will not support a judgment by default. McAnelly v. Ward, 72 Tex. 342, 12 S. W. 206.

Applicability of provision.—A judgment reciting that the parties appeared by their attorneys, and by agreement judgment was rendered, does not show an agreement or confession by attorney merely, so as to require filing and recital of power of attorney under this article. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Adams (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 834.

Art. 2010. [1351] [1349] Releases errors, but may be impeached.

Impeaching for fraud.—A consent decree between husband and children without notice to wife, by which the children were given the former homestead and another tract, subject to a life estate in the husband and a lien on the life estate to secure notes executed by the husband, was void as to the wife as a fraud on her homestead rights. Bell v. Franklin (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 181.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

REMITTER AND AMENDMENT OF JUDGMENT

Power of court.—Where jury rendered excessive verdict, the trial court had authority to require remittitur to reduce verdict to a proper amount. San Antonio, U. & G. Ry. Co. v. Ernst (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 603.

Curing excessiveness.—In action against railroad for destruction of pasturage by failing to fence right of way, any error in excessive verdict for $1,200, evidence justifying verdict for at least $750, was cured by remittitur of $450. San Antonio, U. & G. Ry. Co. v. Ernst (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 603.

Remittitur before judgment.—Though as a rule judgment must be based on verdict, where verdict is excessive, remittitur may be filed, and error in rendering judgment for amount authorized without formally entering judgment and filing remittitur is immaterial. Garrett v. Dodson (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 675.

Authority of court.—Trial court has inherent power to correct evident mistake in its judgment. Mouser v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1000.

An error in the ministerial entry of the judgment may be subsequently corrected by a proceeding, in the same case on the initiative of the court or a motion of the parties; the power to correct the record existing in the court, not by reason of continued jurisdiction over the subject-matter, but by virtue of its continuing power over its record. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 690.

Court may, in view of this article enter nunc pro tunc the order outlined in Code Cr. Proc. art. 668, upon motion to quash venire. Barnes v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 986.
Judgments and mistakes which may or may not be corrected.—See Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Haynes, 52 Tex. 448, 18 S. W. 665; notes to art. 2015; Kentz v. Kentz (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 200.

Where court was authorized to direct verdict, and in so doing directed verdict against one not served with citation, it was equally authorized to set it aside as to such person, and enter judgment accordingly, instructed verdicts being in effect judgments which may be corrected. American Surety Co. v. Sheerin (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1120.

Judgment, in suit to determine boundary line, which was not written in accordance with the order of the court, will be corrected on motion. Johnson v. McFee (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 159.

Under this article, the court may correct a judgment entry nunc pro tunc so as to make it appear that the cause was determined to all parties who joined issue. Smith v. Moore (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 988.

Where a judgment followed the petition which misdescribed land, held that many years thereafter the judgment could not be corrected nunc pro tunc so as to correctly describe the land; the matter not being an error which could be corrected on motion. Van Ness v. Crow (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 572.

The proper procedure to amend a judgment is by motion showing ground for and praying for such relief filed in the original action; but, where a judgment, in trespass to try title, which misdescribed the land, followed the petition, the defect is such that it cannot be remedied by mere motion.

The court may at any time after a judgment is entered correct a ministerial error as to description of land. Renois v. Griffith (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1067.

What constitutes amendment.—The effect of entry of second judgment during same term was amended first judgment. Mahan v. Lemasters, New York (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 382.

Evidence justifying correction.—Where writ of garnishment issued against one who answered that he was indebted to defendant in a sum secured by lien, and judgment was against the garnishee, but by mistake the lien was not foreclosed, the garnishee's answer furnished a sufficient basis for the correction of the judgment. Mouser v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1000.

This article does not require the existence on the court's records of some written memorandum or evidence showing the judgment actually rendered, in order to correct a judgment. Smith v. Moore (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 983.

Notice.—Under this article, entry of judgment nunc pro tunc after notice only to plaintiff's attorney of record, where it was not shown that he had authority to continue to represent her, was void, and must be set aside. Hamilton v. Hamilton (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 69, 69.

In a proceeding to correct a ministerial error in a judgment in describing land, that parties were permitted to intervene, without notice of intervention being given nonresident defendants, cited to answer the original petition, is without merit, where the interveners merely adopted the allegation of the original motion. Renois v. Griffith (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1067.

Rights of third persons.—The fact that petitioners, interested in land, were not parties to the original suit, in which the decree was corrected for ministerial error in description of land, is immaterial, since the right to have the error corrected is not personal. Renois v. Griffith (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1067.

A motion to correct record of judgment is not an "action," and does not raise question of correctness of judgment on the merits; the only issue being whether the judgment as actually rendered was accurately recorded. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 690.

Where answer to motion to correct entry of judgment raises issue of correctness of judgment on the merits, and courts actually hears and tries issues and renders judgment thereon, the proceeding and judgment may properly be regarded as a proceeding in an independent action, though it was filed in and took the number and style of the original suit. id.

Motion or application and answer thereto.—Where, on trial of action to determine boundary line, plaintiff set up defense of limitations, which was disregarded, and no appeal was prosecuted, plaintiff cannot raise issue in defendant's action in nature of motion to correct clerical error in judgment. Johnson v. McFee (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 159.

Where all the parties to an action in which a judgment was rendered were served with notice of motion to correct the judgment entry, it was permissible for the answer to the motion to raise the issue of fraud in the rendition of the judgment and to ask that the judgment be set aside. H. Waggoner v. Knight (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 357.

Answer to motion to correct judgment entry, alleging that judgment was procured by fraud, raised the issue of fraud, though movant did not deny allegations of fraud. id.

Time for application.—When a will was probated it was incorrectly recorded. Seven years later the court ordered the record amended, and the will properly recorded. Held, that the probate court had power to amend the record under arts. 2015, 2016, and the lapse of time was immaterial. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Whitaker, 4 Civ. App. 380, 23 S. W. 520.

The court may, at any time after a judgment is entered, correct a ministerial error as to description of land, first giving notice to the parties in interest, and in the absence of intervention of rights of innocent parties, who are not parties to the suit, the defense of delay cannot be invoked. Renois v. Griffith (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1067.

See, also, notes to art. 2016.

706
Dismissal after opening judgment.—Where in suit in equity judgment is opened at succeeding term, the court may upon correction dismiss the action. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148.

Art. 16. [1357] [1355] Misrecitals, etc., corrected in vacation or term time, in certain cases.

Amendments allowable.—Where, in an action against a carrier for destruction of cotton, the court finds for plaintiff, but the weight, as computed by him, includes only the bales covered by two of the bills of lading, and the findings fall to show how the error occurred, the error is not clerical, and cannot be amended under Rev. St. 1873, arts. 1354 and 1355.

Amendments during term.—Court has full authority during term to set aside judgment if erroneous and render proper judgment, and it may do so on its own motion. Ballard v. Ellerd (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 306; Elmenendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 322.

Court may revise any judgment, decree, or order at term at which it was rendered. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Muse, 109 Tex. 352, 207 S. W. 897, 4 A. L. R. 613.

Independently of acts. 2015, 2016, the court, during the term at which a judgment is rendered, has plenary power over it, and may vacate, modify, or correct it at discretion, not only as to clerical mistakes, but mistakes as to rights of parties, provided the intervention of a jury is unnecessary, or that it does not involve the entry of judgment against the verdict. Kentz v. Kentz (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 290.

Amendments after term.—A judgment may, in equity at a succeeding term, be reopened for such corrections as justice demands. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148.

Where a judgment, through mistake of court and counsel, did not dispose of an abandoned issue, the court may at a later term amend the judgment and make it final. Rouser v. Wright (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 549.

A judgment at term during which judgment was rendered, trial judge lost all jurisdiction to correct error in allowing excessive interest. Texas Harvester Co. v. Wilson-Whaley Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 574.

Upon adjournment of term, the jurisdiction or power of the court over judgment, rendered during the term, on its merits is exhausted. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 690.

Amendments in vacation.—Hart. Dig. art. 736, which provides that the court may correct a judgment "in vacation" in case there shall be among the records any instrument in writing whereby such judgment may be safely amended, does not apply to amendments requested in open court during the term at which the judgment is rendered. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Haynes, 82 Tex. 448, 18 S. W. 695.

Time for application.—See Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. v. Whitaker, 4 Civ. App. 330, 23 S. W. 520; notes to art. 2015.

Art. 17. [1358] [1356] Correction made in vacation to be certified to clerk, etc.

Art. 18. [1359] [1357] Correction or remitter operates to cure error.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

NEW TRIALS AND ARREST OF JUDGMENT

Art. 2019. New trials may be granted.

2020. Motion for, requisites of.

2021. Misconduct of jury, etc., as ground of motion; evidence.

2022. New trials granted where damages too small, etc.

Article 2019. [1370] [1368] New trials, etc., may be granted.

See McGuire v. State, to Use of Bee County (App.) 15 S. W. 917.

I. IN GENERAL

3. Arrest of judgment.—One who entered into a lease without revealing names of his partners, and proceeded in a trial against him for rent up to the closing of the testimony without attempting to plead the facts and ask that the other partners be brought in, was in no position to demand an arrest of judgment simply because such other persons might be jointly and severally liable with him. Goodman v. Republic Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 466.

II. GROUNDS FOR NEW TRIAL

8. In general.—Where mortgagee sues for all he loaned person of unsound mind, and at no time asks for any part thereof, he cannot maintain that verdict and judgment against him were contrary to law and evidence, although some of money was spent for necessities. Bass v. Joseph (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1047.

Where trial before the court progressed to a certain point, whereupon the court announced that the trial would be resumed on a day following, at which time the final testimony was taken and judgment rendered, but defendant was not then in court, he cannot be granted a new trial on ground that judgment was not rendered at a regular trial, but on the unverified report of an auditor without opportunity to defendant to object. Kerwin v. Mead (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 677.

The granting of an order setting aside a judgment and granting a new trial is left largely to the discretion of the trial court, and every presumption must be indulged in favor of the ruling on the motion. McCaskey v. McCall (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 432.

10. Absence of party.—Where defendant failed to appear at either the first or second time for which case was set, and, though notified that it was again set for 9:30 the next morning, failed to start from his home, 20 miles in the country, till that morning, and, because of mud and automobile troubles, arrived after judgment, there was no abuse of discretion in refusing new trial. Scaling v. Collins (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 424.

A new trial of a divorce suit will not be granted merely on account of the absence of defendant who was in jail, and who could have testified to material facts, where there is no evidence that he was denied the right to appear, but only evidence that he told the jailer to let him know when the suit came up and that the jailer did not do so. Harris v. Harris (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 224.

Although it is a general rule that advantage cannot be taken of improper argument unless the objection be presented at the time the argument is made, yet, where the argument is intensely vituperative and based on matters not in evidence, so that it necessarily must have caused prejudice and probably thwarted justice, the trial judge should set aside the verdict even though no objections were urged at the time. Vogt v. Guildry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 656.

20. Surprise in respect to evidence.—Plaintiff's testimony that there was no fastening on a gate when it was installed having been received, though the proper conclusion from the petition was that plaintiff expected to show that fastening was insufficient or had become out of repair, new trial should have been granted on motion presenting testimony of three reputable persons that defendant placed a proper fastening on the gate when installed. Texas Electric Ry. Co. v. Simmons (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 563.

A new trial to permit plaintiff to produce stenographic report of testimony of one of the defendants given at a former trial, which differed with his testimony at the trial, was properly denied, where plaintiff sought no postponement to procure such stenographic report, and not only failed to interrogate defendant as to his former testimony, but did not seek to prove it in any other way. Hagar v. Adams (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 592.

22. Insufficiency of evidence.—It is not ground for new trial that the verdict or judgment was against the evidence, or against the preponderance of evidence; but it must be against all the evidence, or at least against the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Southern Traction Co. v. Coley (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 266.

Verdict, to authorize trial or Appellate Court to set it aside, must be against the preponderance of the evidence to a degree showing that manifest injustice has been done, at least it must be affirmatively wrong. Nations v. Miller (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 742.

23. Verdict defective or not responsive.—Where findings of jury were conflicting on several pertinent issues rendering their conclusions as to controlling facts uncertain, it was error to refuse new trial. Southern Traction Co. v. Gee (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 592.

Conflicting jury findings on question whether mortgage notes were delivered to trustee under trust deed as attorney for collection or to institute foreclosure proceedings as trustee, held to require new trial. Oak Cliff State Bank & Trust Co. v. Conroy (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 656. 17

Where, in a personal injury suit, the answers indicated that the jury was confused by the multifarious and unnecessary issues submitted, and as a result rendered inconsistent and irreconcilable answers upon which no intelligent judgment could be based, a new trial should have been ordered. Bowdoin v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 538. 21

33. Newly discovered evidence.—In action to recover land, showing of newly discovered evidence as to adverse possession held sufficient to require new trial. Stark v. Leonard (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 708.

In a servient's action for injuries wherein he obtained judgment, newly discovered testimony, as to which due diligence had been exercised, that before his alleged injuries he complained of the condition on account of which he sued was required to grant a new trial. American Indemnity Co. v. Hubbard (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 101.

At judgment for defendants in action to set aside a previous judgment because of disqualification of judge, the discovery of a letter tending to show such judge had acted as adviser and attorney for defendants as to the claim on which they recovered in the former action was sufficient to warrant new trial. Cotulla State Bank v. Herron (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 797.

After verdict against a railroad company for personal injuries to a pedestrian, struck by a loose door when the train passed him, newly discovered evidence that the pedestrian was attempting to board the train when injured required a new trial. Lancaster v. Settle (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 772.

Alleged newly discovered evidence as to declaration made by defendant cannot be said to have been newly discovered after trial, where plaintiff was in fact present at time such declaration was made. Carl v. Seftegast (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 506.

Newly discovered evidence being relevant, material, and competent, and there being no suggestion of lack of diligence or of interest of the affiants in the result, a new trial should have been granted. International Life Ins. Co. v. Lester (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 381.

In an action for rent, where defense was that plaintiff had not constructed building as agreed, it was not error to refuse a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence to the effect that the building was not constructed according to the plans and specifications. Goodman v. Republic Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 456.

A motion for a new trial in an action on a foreign judgment in which no issue was raised at the first trial as to the statutory law of the foreign state, based on a statute, of which plaintiff's attorney had learned since the former trial, was properly overruled, since such a motion must set forth evidence relating to an issue of the trial which could not have been discovered by due diligence. American Nat. Bank of Oklahoma City, Okla., v. Garland (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 397; Walker v. Garland (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 399.

At personal injury action where verdict was not claimed to be excessive, appellate court will not set aside verdict and judgment to enable defendant to use newly discovered evidence on issue of nature and extent of plaintiff's injuries, or to affect her credibility as a witness. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Turner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 353.

Where it was claimed that mutual benefit certificate had been altered by the insertion of the name of plaintiff's alleged wife, newly discovered evidence of notary public relating to the original condition of the certificate held insufficient to require new trial. Phillips (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 477.

Where vendor's wife refused to sign the deed, and the sale failed, it was not an abuse of discretion in an action by broker for commission to deny a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence that the purchaser would not have bought unless the vendor's wife joined; for such evidence could not have been newly discovered and would not have affected the result on another trial. Carson v. Brown (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 672.

35. Materiality and admissibility.—Newly discovered evidence as to the foreclosure proceedings on which plaintiff's title was based, accompanied by a proof of due diligence, entitles defendant to a new trial, though his answer did not contain any allegation under which the newly discovered evidence could be based, where it reasonably appeared that he intended, after a new trial was granted, to make such evidence available by proper pleadings. Turner v. Maury (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 255.

Newly discovered cumulative evidence which is probably not true and which would not change the result is not ground for new trial. Zamora v. Vela (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 215.

In an action involving contract, there being a conflict as to whether there was one or two conversations over telephone, court did not abuse its discretion in denying new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence, consisting of affidavit of telephone company employee that files showed two conversations. Hollis Cotton Oil, Light & Ice Co. v. Marrs & Lake (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 367. 709
The principle that a new trial will not be granted upon newly discovered evidence which was, or ought to have been, produced at the trial, is confined to evidence which was made known to the court by the parties at the trial, and which was not produced at the trial through the fault or omission of the party seeking the new trial. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Duff (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 580.

Motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence was properly denied, where the same character of evidence had been given on the trial by other witnesses; such evidence being of a cumulative character. Carl v. Settegast (App.) 211 S. W. 411.

Court did not abuse its discretion in denying motion for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence, where such evidence was cumulative in tendency. Donoho v. Carwile (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 553.

Where the greater part of newly discovered evidence, relates to distinct and independent facts, that such facts would strongly corroborate evidence which was offered at the trial, and would contradict the evidence of plaintiff appellee, does not render such evidence merely cumulative. International Life Ins. Co. v. Lester (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 251.

The trial court did not err in overruling the motion for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, where the testimony relied on was cumulative, and there was no showing as to when the testimony was discovered, nor why it was not produced on trial. W. v. Wayland (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 975.

After verdict against a railroad company for personal injuries to a pedestrian, struck by a swinging door as the train passed him, newly discovered evidence that plaintiff's witness stated, in plaintiff's hearing, without denial, that plaintiff was trying to jump the train and fell, was more than impeaching testimony, and required a new trial. Landers v. Settle (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 772.

Plaintiff seeking damages for the death of her alleged common-law husband is not entitled to a new trial for newly discovered evidence impeaching witness who testified that deceased was the lawful husband of another, which evidence was not material, because plaintiff failed to show a common-law marriage. Lopez v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 405.

In a suit to set aside a settlement of partnership affairs, held, that court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to grant a new trial for newly discovered evidence concerning items in evidence, where it probably would not have changed the result and there was nothing to indicate that the court charged defendant with such items. Woldert v. Pukli (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1112.

Motion for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence that plaintiff subsequent to injury had made application for life insurance, in which she stated that her health was in good condition, was properly denied, where both plaintiff and the physician who had filled in application testified that plaintiff had not authorized physician to make such statements, since the application would be of little or no value on a new trial. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Turner (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 353.

In a trespass to try title, where affirmative judgment for defendant was rendered in plaintiffs absence, affidavits accompanying plaintiffs motion for a new trial held to show that a different result would be obtained by a new trial. McGowan v. Lowry (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 465.

III. RIGHT TO NEW TRIAL AND PREREQUISITES TO GRANTING THEREOF

43. Diligence. — Court properly denied defendant new trial for newly discovered evidence materially affecting controlling issue where same diligence that secured evidence after trial would have secured it before trial. Robbins v. Bell (Civ. App.) 155 S. W. 546.

Motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence was properly denied where the alleged facts were known at the time of the trial and for at least 20 days prior to judgment. Neal Commission Co. v. Golston (Civ. App.) 157 S. W. 1124.

One is not entitled to a new trial for newly discovered evidence; lack of diligence in not discovering it before being apparent. Strachbein v. Gilmer (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 353.

Where the existence of evidence was known at the time of the trial, but not the whereabouts of the witness, and no continuance or postponement was requested, new trial was properly refused, although great effort was made to find the witness before trial. Sherrill v. Union Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 149.

No error was committed in refusing a new trial on ground of newly discovered testimony as to certain transactions, where the moving party knew of such transactions before trial, made no motion for continuance to secure the new testimony, and other like testimony was introduced. Morrison v. Neely (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 586.

Question as to time of closing post office should have been asked postmaster when he was on the stand, and motion for new trial based upon alleged newly discovered evidence as to time of closing is not supported by an affidavit of postmaster. Schkade v. Western Union Telegraph Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1113.

In a pedestrian's action for personal injuries, due to falling into a culvert, it was not error to refuse a new trial for newly discovered evidence, where the suit had been pending for nearly two years, and the city had made no effort to have the witnesses testify, although their residence was known. City of Polytechnic v. Redmon (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 736.

Motion for a new trial for newly discovered evidence held properly overruled, where the newly discovered witness resided within 2 miles of the land in controversy for approximately 65 years, was well acquainted with the land and the history of that locality, and there was no reason why such witness had not been approached prior to the trial. Barlow v. Greer (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 301.

A new trial for newly discovered evidence was properly denied where the suit had been pending nearly three years, the witnesses were personally acquainted with plaintiff and his attorney, and plaintiff wholly failed to show diligence in procuring their attendance. Smith v. Coburn (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 314.

Where the materiality of certain evidence became known to the defendants before the close of the trial, they should have promptly asked for a continuance or a postponement in order to secure such evidence, and, having failed to do so, they did not use sufficient diligence to require the granting of a new trial. Peterson v. Clay (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 1112.

Though the motion does not show sufficient diligence, the ends of justice require the granting of a new trial, in action for death of a son, for newly discovered evidence that the parents will receive, during life, $50 a month from government for death of another son in war. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Francis (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 342.

44. Codefendants.—In trespass to try title, that portion of a judgment awarding a tract to certain defendants may be set aside, and a new trial granted, without disturbing a portion of the judgment which awarded another tract to another defendant on different facts and distinct issues. Louisiana & Texas Lumber Co. v. Southern Pine Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 281.

45. Conditions on granting new trial.—An order granting a new trial directed the party to whom it was granted to pay witness fees "as a condition upon which" such new trial was granted. Held, that the payment of the fees was the "terms" on which the order was made under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1386, and not a condition on performance of which it should take effect. Fenn v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co., 76 Tex. 380, 13 S. W. 273.

IV. RULING ON APPLICATION AND EFFECT THEREOF

49. Construction and operation of order in general.—When a new trial is granted, the legal effect is the same as though there had been no judgment, and the case stands on the docket for trial and future disposition by the trial court. Liz Mar Plantation Co. v. Whitfill (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1118.

V. REVIEW BY APPELLATE COURTS

Judgment held not to be reversed on ground that it was based on false evidence and that refusal of new trial is gross injustice and abuse of discretion, where diligence or excuse for failure to introduce such evidence was shown, and the evidence is not conclusive. Farmers' State Guaranty Bank v. Pierson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 424.

The granting of an order setting aside a judgment and granting a new trial is largely within the discretion of the trial court, and every presumption must be indulged in favor of the ruling on the motion. McCaskey v. McCall (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 432.

A replevin bond, valid on its face and adjudged valid, will not be presumed invalid because of an order quashing the writ of sequestration or other defect not shown and not urged for new motion for new trial. Gonzales v. Flores (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 551.

Where court had jurisdiction of action on notes and not a fraud, accident, or mistake was shown, under statute, defendant must raise question of errors in judgment by new trial application and appeal from order thereon. De Berry v. Chambers (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1141.

Where a motion for new trial has been filed, the party appealing is confined to the matters therein assigned, under Court of Civil Appeals rule 24 (142 S. W. xii). Boedefeld v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1027.

Under art. 5550, as amended by Acts 33d Leg. c. 336, assignments of error which are not copies of any paragraphs of motion for new trial cannot be considered. Oguzin v. Apodoca (Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 367.

In jury trials filing of motion for new trial is prerequisite to appellant's right to assign error in Court of Civil Appeals. Necley v. White (Civ. App.) 268 S. W. 591.

Where there was no motion for new trial in trial court, there can be no assignments.

Assignments of error not included in the motion for new trial cannot be considered on appeal, unless the error assigned arose after filing of the motion. General Bonding & Casualty Ins. Co. v. Harless (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 307.

Where no effort was made in the trial court by motion for a new trial to set aside a stipulation as improvident, the effect of the stipulation cannot be avoided in the Court of Civil Appeals. Richmond v. Sangster (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 725.

Where appellant not only did not file a motion for a new trial, but also failed to file assignments of error in the trial court as required by arts. 1512, 2113, appellant was not entitled to complain of the judgment except for error "in law apparent on the face of the record," under art. 1607. Aetna Accident & Liability Co. v. Trustees of First Christian Church of Paris (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 537.

Under arts. 1990 and 1991, as well as Supreme Court rule 71a, it is unnecessary, where a case was submitted on special issues, and a special verdict returned, that motion for new trial be made, in order to entitle appellant to review of judgment, which he asserts was erroneous, because not following the findings. Rudasill v. Rudasill (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 843.

Under arts. 1990, 1991, where a case has been tried upon special issues, a motion for new trial is not necessary to perfect the appeal. Stubblefield v. Jones (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 720.

When judgment is based entirely on findings by the court or jury, it is not indispensable to the right of the losing party who duly excepted thereto, to have the judgment reviewed on appeal, that he should have filed and had the trial court set on a motion for new trial. Southwestern Oil Corporation v. Boise D'Arc Greek Oil & Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 821.

57. --- Trial by court.---Where case is tried by court, motion for new trial was not prerequisite for appeal. Gilbreath v. Cage & Crow (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 972; Hess & Haggard v. Co. v. Turney. 109 Tex. 208, 203 S. W. 593.

When the trial is before a court without a jury, the appellant is not required to file a motion for new trial presenting alleged errors as a prerequisite to urging them in the appellate court, where the court has filed its findings of fact and conclusions of law. McClintic v. Brown (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 540.

58. --- Sufficiency and scope of motion.---A motion for new trial and an assignment of error, on the ground that the trial court erred in instructing the jury to return a verdict for plaintiff in any amount, is sufficient to be considered on appeal. Harlington Water Co. v. Houston Motor Car Co. (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 145.

Ground of motion for new trial, that the judgment rendered should be set aside because the verdict of the jury is contrary to the law and the evidence and not supported by the evidence, is too general to Justify its consideration on appeal. Ball v. Henderson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 361.

60. --- Review of rulings on pleadings.---That agency should have been taken as existing, because alleged in petition and not denied in answer, cannot be urged on appeal, plaintiff having requested instruction for verdict because evidence showed agency, and in motion for new trial complained of its refusal. J. Kennard & Sons Carpet Co. v. Houston Hotel Ass'n (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1139.

Where, though record showed order sustaining exceptions to answer, case was tried on the answer, without objection or exception to evidence, and motion for new trial did not raise the question, held, that plaintiff was estopped from asserting that there was no evidence. C-F Live Stock, etc., v. Mathis. App. 199 S. W. 641.

Under court rules 24 and 70 (142 S. W. xii, xxii), rules 1 and 101a (159 S. W. vii, xi), and art. 1612, overruling of a plea of privilege for change of venue cannot be reviewed where not set up in the motion for new trial. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Webber (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 519.

Where the trial on issues raised by sequestration and replevin proceedings was to the court without a jury, objection to assignments of error attacking a ruling sustaining a plea to the jurisdiction on the ground that there was no motion for new trial in the court below cannot be sustained. Automobile Underwriters of America v. Brooks (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 367.

64. --- Review of sufficiency of evidence and verdict or findings.---In action to recover automobile, plaintiff having sued out writ of sequestration and car having been repleved by defendant, failure of verdict and judgment to find value of car held error apparent on face of record requiring reversal, though not raised in motion for new trial. Reeves v. Avina (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 720.

The correctness of the court's action in rendering a judgment in accordance with the verdict cannot be questioned on the ground that a finding was unsupported by the evidence, where no move was made to set aside the verdict. Green v. Hall (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1175.

Unless the sufficiency of the evidence to support the jury's findings has been raised and the verdict attacked by motion for new trial, it cannot be considered in the Court of Civil Appeals in view of Rule 71a of District Court and Rules 24 and 25 of Court of Civil Appeals. Neeley v. White (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 991.

In the absence of a motion for new trial and proper assignments based thereon, the Court of Civil Appeals will not consult the statement of facts to ascertain if the allegations were sustained by the evidence. Stewart v. McAllister (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 704.

Assignments of error based on the insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict will not be reviewed unless that ground was specified in a motion for new trial. Rudasill v. Rudasill (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 843.
68. Exceptions and objection in trial court.—Though plaintiff, whose motion for new trial was denied, did not formally except, held that, when it appeared that such motion was overruled she gave notice of appeal in open court, the appeal may be considered. Allen v. Crutcher (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 236.

VI. OPENING DEFAULT JUDGMENTS

68. Right to vacation in general.—In transferee’s action on note against maker, refusal to set aside default judgment against defendant, and to permit defendant to file answer, alleging that plaintiff was not the owner and holder of the note, held not error. Mach v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 275.

In such action refusal to set aside default judgment to permit maker, who claimed that there was a conspiracy between payee and transferee and that transferee was not holder in good faith, to make the payee a party to the action, held not error. 1d.

Where a defendant did not answer because of pending negotiations between parties, held that court did not abuse its discretion by refusing a motion to set aside default judgment two days after it was rendered. Boyd v. Urruth (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 341.

The discretion enjoined by the court in the matter of setting aside default judgments is not an arbitrary discretion, and is subject to such review, where manifest injustice has been done. Hubb-Diggs Co. v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 426.

71. Excuses for default.—Necessary absence of defendant’s attorney in District Court, where justice decided in favor of such defendant, the court erred in not setting aside the default judgment. Pfe v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 96.

Motion for new trial, made at same term that default judgment was rendered, alleging that defendants were cited to appear November 12th, that Legislature by Acts 35th Leg. c. 51, § 2 (art. 30), effective August 1st, changed term of court so that it began October 6th, and that defendants were nonresidents and had no knowledge of the change, showed sufficient excuse for failure to appear. Queiroli v. Whitesides (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 120.

Where defendant appeared on day of return and filed answer, but failed to appear on day to which case was continued, a default entered on such nonappearance should have been set aside, where showing, in support of motion, that postponement had been agreed to, was not controverted. Counts v. Southwestern Land Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 207.

Plaintiff, who had not resided in the county for two years, and was unable to speak, read, or write English, held to have been sufficiently diligent to justify setting aside defendant’s judgment by default. Legislature having changed time of holding court, etc. Ramirez v. Martinez (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 389.

Where plaintiff’s attorney was diligent in preparation of his case and had a meritorious cause, but did not appear when case was called because mistaken as to time when term of court convened, trial court erred in refusing to set aside an order of dismissal, in absence of a finding that attorney was negligent. Hickman v. Swain (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 548.

Where answer was not filed until one day after judgment was rendered, because of inadvertence and mistake of counsel in misdirecting answer through the mail, court did not abuse its discretion in setting aside default. Jackson v. Pure Oil Operating Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 959.

Court’s refusal to set aside default judgment on ground of sickness held not error. Woytek v. King (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1081.

Where trial judge announced that he would hear no contested cases for a period of two weeks, counsel for defendant were not diligent, where they did not make inquiry concerning the status of their case until several months after such statement and after entry of default judgment. Dumas v. Easley (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 866.

On a surety’s motion for rehearing or new trial after default judgment in the state’s proceeding on a forfeited bail bond, a sufficient excuse must be shown by the surety for his failure to answer. Briggs v. State, 87 Cr. R. 473, 222 S. W. 246.

In the absence of some showing of fraud, accident, or unavoidable cause, a default judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction will not be set aside. 1d.

A count in trespass to try title attacking a default judgment rendered in a prior suit was insufficient, where, assuming that it showed a meritorious defense, it alleged no facts excusing plaintiffs from presenting the defense in the prior suit. Hare v. Marshall (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 432.

Trial court held to have erred in denying a motion to set aside a default where defendant’s attorney made affidavit that he had prepared a plea of privilege and that on the day he was expecting to leave to attend the trial his wife was seriously injured.
he was detained, but immediately mailed the plea and wired plaintiff's attorneys and sent a message to the district judge in care of the clerk. Walker v. Harris (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 569.

Where plaintiff took a default judgment foreclosing a deed of trust in violation of an agreement that the time would be extended and the case would not be tried for a year, the default should be vacated on a showing of a meritorious defense. Jones v.
Wooton (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 142.

Where return day stated in citation served upon corporation was incorrect, and another citation giving the correct return date was served but neither the officers of the company nor its attorneys had been referred had actual knowledge of the service of the second citation until after default judgment was taken, the default will be set aside; there being an equitable excuse for the failure to appear and answer. Hubb­

72. Meritorious cause of action or defense.—Although defendants presented sufficient excuse for not appearing at time default judgment was rendered, court was justified in refusing to grant new trial unless it was shown that defendants had a meritorious

On motion to vacate default judgment against indorser on note, a defense that the maker and another indorser had not been joined as defendants was insuficient, where it appeared that such parties were wholly insolvent. Drinkard v. Jenkins (Civ. App.)
207 S. W. 353.

Where judgment was entered against a defendant failing to appear at trial, his motion for a new trial was denied, where the meritorious defense urged would require the use of incompetent parol evidence. Gregory v. South Texas Lumber Co. (Civ. App.)
216 S. W. 429.

A party seeking to set aside a default judgment must show not only that he was prevented from presenting his defense at the time of trial by some cause unmixed with negligence on his part, but that he has a good defense. Wheat v. Ward County Water Improvement Dist. No. 2 (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 732.

On a surety's motion for rehearing or new trial after default judgment in the state's proceeding to take back bond, a sufficient excuse must be shown by the surety for his failure to answer, as well as a further showing that he has a meritorious de­

In retail dealer's action against wholesale dealer in which it was alleged that retailer had agreed to sell tractors at market price, and that wholesaler had agreed to reimburse retailer on reduction thereof, answer, held to present a meritorious defense, on motion to set aside default judgment and for a new trial, as against contention that the agreement alleged was illegal, and that court should not aid party to illegal agreements who has suffered default to go against him. Hubb-Diggs Co. v. Mitchell (Civ.
App.) 231 S. W. 425.

VII. OPENING AND VACATING JUDGMENTS

74. Authority of court.—During the term at which a judgment is rendered the court has jurisdiction to hear additional testimony in regard to any part of the proceedings as to which he might entertain doubt, and to open all or part of the judgment for such

The power of the trial court to open and modify a judgment entered at the same term is reversible for abuse of discretion. Id.

A judgment rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction and regular on its face cannot be set aside after the adjournment of the term at which it was rendered. Drink­

Trial court could during term, on its own motion, set aside judgment. Mahan v.
Kyle (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 302.

An action can be set aside after adjournment of term only in an independent ac­tion brought for that purpose. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 690.

Where a final judgment in a civil action has been rendered and has not been set aside during the term, the court has no power on motion for new trial to set it aside at

75. Nature of proceeding or relief.—If record does not speak truth, and extraneous evidence is necessary to establish facts as to jurisdiction, suit to set aside judgment on cross-bill against plaintiff on ground court had no jurisdiction of his person is proper remedy, but it must appear he had no opportunity to move for new trial during term.

Petition of landowner and husband to cancel and annul, for want of service judgment in a condemnation suit, held to set up a cause of action as distinguished from a mere motion to correct an error of entry. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 225 S.
W. 205.

Since equitable defenses may be interposed to actions at law, a defendant in an action on a judgment may interpose by way of defense facts which would require a vacation of the judgment for want of jurisdiction, and such defense should be given the same force and effect as a cross-bill. Walker v. Chatterton (Com. App.) 222 S.
W. 1100, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 1085.

An independent suit for a new trial to cancel a judgment and enjoin enforcement is an equitable proceeding. Huddleston v. Texas Pipe Line Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S.
W. 280.

714
76. Judgments which may be vacated.—Any judgment, decree, or order, including order granting new trial, may be vacated by court at term at which it was rendered. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Muse, 166 Tex. 352, 207 S. W. 887, 4 A. L. R. 613.

A default judgment may be attacked by a direct bill for the reason that it was rendered on an amendment to the complaint which stated a new cause of action and which was not served on defendant. Young v. City Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 240.

A judgment on attachment bond will be set aside for alteration in bond by party to original action. Knox v. Denver (Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 259.

In action to set aside compromise judgment for fraud, plaintiff held to be in "privity" with plaintiffs in action in which the judgment was rendered. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Ewing, (Civ. App.) 301 S. W. 1163.

To an action to set aside a mortgage foreclosure by one who had purchased part of mortgaged land and had not been made a party, the mortgagor could not show that the mortgage note had been paid prior to the foreclosure, where he had agreed to the rendition and entry of judgment, and did not ask in his pleading that such judgment be annulled. Woi v. Miller (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 142.

80. Persons against whom relief may be granted.—The reason for requiring a direct attack to set aside a judgment for any reason not appearing on the face of the record is to enable the court to adjust the equities of the parties and protect the rights of innocent persons, and an innocent purchaser who has acquired rights under a judgment apparently regular will be protected against a direct attack on the judgment. Crow v. Van Ness (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 539.

81. Failure to resort to other remedies.—Where court was in error in asserting jurisdiction of plaintiff's person on defendants' cross-bill for lack of service or appearance, and in error in entering judgment, and, in absence of error relating to plaintiff could not have procured relief thereby, separate suit in equity will not lie to set aside judgment. Elston v. Scanlan (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 762.

Failure to procure writ of error from judgment on cross-bill erroneous because court had jurisdiction of his person, does not deprive plaintiff of his remedy by separate suit to vacate judgment, if there are sufficient grounds aside from errors which should have been corrected on writ of error. Id.

That defendant had the right to make motion for new trial or appeal from judgment did not preclude her from instituting separate action to set aside the judgment, where such motion or appeal would have brought up for review only irregularities, and would not have gone to the real merits of her case. Knight v. Waggoner (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 640.

The dismissal of an appeal because notice of appeal was not given within time does not affect any rights which appellant may have to set aside the judgment in a direct suit for that purpose. Sovereign Camp Woodmen of the World v. Shaddox (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1094.

In city's proceedings to condemn land, the infant owner, for lack of notice to her, was not required to request a new trial on the proceedings, petition and report of which were void, before suing to set aside judgment of condemnation. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 365.

82. Laches.—A delay of four years in filing a bill making a direct attack on a default judgment rendered on an amended petition stating a new cause of action is not barred by laches if filed within one year after the judgment debtor first learned of the terms of the judgment. Young v. City Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 240.

83. Grounds for relief in general.—Where attorney purporting to act for party in arranging compromise judgment was not in fact the attorney for such person, and person for whom he purported to act was never served with citation, and never appeared, judgment against such party will be set aside, irrespective of fraud. Winfree v. Winfree (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 245.

That orders of court appointing receiver of estate of person of unsound mind were not entered of record upon minutes of court, as required by art. 4988, is sufficient to void judgment taken by receiver as such in case of direct attack on judgment. McKenzie v. Frey (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1009; Same v. Sutton (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012; Same v. Winters (Civ. App.) 188 S. W. 1012.

In view of arts. 1822, 1966, where defendants in an action on notes answered, and failed to raise the issue that the plaintiff bank was not duly incorporated, they could not raise such question by motion to set aside the judgment. Sayles v. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Galvton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 822.

Where defendant answered and appeared judgment against him will not be set aside because no citation was served upon him. Dickinson v. Comstock (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 862.

A judgment cannot be set aside on ground that judgment debtor had good defense in original action, unless equitable excuse be shown for failure to assert such defense therein. Id.

Defenses which should have been presented in original action present no ground for setting judgment aside. Id.

In action to set aside judgment on note, judgment creditor's ownership thereof cannot be questioned without adequate excuse for failure to raise point in original action. Id.

In action by sureties to set aside judgment on attachment bond, their failure to know of alleged alteration in bond until after term of court had expired held not sufficient excuse for failure to set up such defense in original action. Knox v. Horne (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 259.

In suit to set aside judgment for want of service, where judgment and return showed service, facts constituting meritorious defense should have been alleged. Godshall v. Martin (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 535.

Where plaintiff's attorney withdrew from case without notice when he was so ill he was forced to rely upon them, he was entitled to relief in equity against judgment on defendant's cross-action, which he had no opportunity to defend, and which it would be inequitable to allow to stand. Eliston v. Scanlan (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 762.

In suit plaintiff on cross-action allegations, showing homestead character of premises involved, and that plaintiff's wife was not party to suit, state no grounds for relief, where it does not appear any defense to cross-action could have been based on ground of homestead. Id.

Where attorney for several plaintiffs abandoned one without her knowledge, she could not have the judgment set aside in equity after the expiration of the term of its rendition, if she had knowledge of the judgment before the expiration of such term, in the absence of fraud. Durfee v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 426.

If defendant's attorney told plaintiffs suit on a note would be dismissed and no judgment taken, and defendant, without notice, regular trial, and jury, took judgment before cause of action was due, plaintiffs were entitled to equitable relief. Wootton v. Jones (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 251.

A final judgment, in an action by a guardian ad litem, can be attacked by the infant's guardian only for fraud, accident, or mistake in an independent proceeding instituted for that purpose. Jones v. Chronicle Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 704.

In equitable suits to reopen judgments for new trial, the complaining party must allege in the answer only a just defense but that he was denied the benefit of any defense arising from failure to make it by some fraud, accident, or mistake, unmixed with negligence on his part. Drinkard v. Jenkins (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 332.

Usury being a defense which must be specifically pleaded, such issue cannot be raised for the first time in a suit to set aside the judgment on a note asserted to be usurious. Chandler v. Young (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 484.

One who sues to annul a judgment agreement must not only establish its invalidity, but must also show that he will suffer some injury if the judgment is permitted to stand. Pierce v. Foreign Mission Board of Southern Baptist Convention (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 140.

An infant landowner had a right to show that judgment of condemnation in favor of a city was obtained without jurisdiction over her person for lack of personal service, but she was not required, in suing to set aside such judgment to ask that the city proceed again to condemn. City of Dallas v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 305.

A petition to set aside a judgment for recovery of land by vendor under his reserved title, which alleged that purchaser could sell the property for more than the vendor's lien, but stated no defense against liability on the note, presented no meritorious defense. Lewright v. Reese (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 270.

In a suit against a husband and wife where the husband when served told the officer he would deliver the citation to his wife, the husband has no equity to attack the judgment for failure to serve wife. Id.

To entitle a party to set aside and vacate a judgment after the adjournment of the term, he must allege a meritorious defense to the original cause of action, and show that his failure to present the defense at the proper time was not due to lack of diligence. Jones v. Wootton (Com. App.) 233 S. W. 142.

That a judgment is erroneous as a matter of law is no ground for setting it aside on direct attack. Wagley v. Wagley (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 493.

A motion to set aside judgment for failure to present defense in due course of law was properly denied where no showing was made that the plaintiff was prevented from presenting his defense by any circumstances constituting excusable neglect. Jessup v. Whitman (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 583.

In suit against party to set aside judgment of divorce held that his physical condition was not such an accident as prevented him from being in attendance; it appearing that his failure to attend court was due to his own negligence. Id.

Judgment rendered against defendants not served with process, though an attorney without authority appeared for them, can be vacated by direct proceeding. Levy v. Roper (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 514.

The court in vacation properly denied a motion to set aside a judgment for defendant on the ground that it was not binding on third persons whom plaintiff might properly have made parties where plaintiff did not show that he was deprived by fraud, accident, mistake, or other uncontrollable circumstances of the opportunity of properly presenting his cause. Whiteman v. Whitman (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 888.

84. Fraud, perjury, or other misconduct.—See Watts v. Baker (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 653.

Insane person held entitled to have set aside judgment denying cancellation in suit by purported receiver of her estate to cancel her deed, it having been procured by fraud and collusion of purported receiver and her grantees. McKenzie v. Frey (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1099; Same v. Sutton (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012; Same v. Winters (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012.

A party, prevented from making a valid defense by misrepresentations or fraud or misconduct of the opposite party, unmixed with negligence on his part, may have the judgment vacated after term of court at which rendered. Reed & Reed v. McKee (Civ. App.) 294 S. W. 717.

District courts may grant relief against a judgment by re-examining the case on its merits, when it appears that the judgment has been obtained by fraud, mistake, or accident without any want of diligence on the part of the person against whom rendered. McElvey v. Reid (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 380.

While a judgment will not be vacated after adjournment of the term to allow defendant to present a defense which might, in the exercise of diligence, have been urged at trial, this rule has no application where the complaining party has been prevented by fraudulent fremes to Wootton (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 142.

Where plaintiff's counsel promised to advise defendant's attorney when a case was to be set, but failed and obtained judgment, such judgment may be vacated and enforcement enjoined on the ground of fraud. Huddleston v. Texas Pipe Line Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 259.

Judgments may be set aside, by direct suit brought for that purpose, upon proper showing of fraud, accident, or mistake. Wagley v. Wagley (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 493.

A judgment cannot be vacated for fraud when the particular question of fraud was in issue in the original proceedings. Id.

A judgment will not be set aside on direct suit, despite showing of fraud, accident or mistake, unless the party seeking relief can show that he was prevented from making a valid defense by fraud, accident, or the act of the opposite party, unmixed with fault or negligence on his part. Id.

In an action for divorce, where the husband was duly served, appeared, and filed answer, the action of the trial court in allowing plaintiff to amend so as to amplify the grounds of divorce, and no fraud on the husband, who did not appear at the trial. Id.

Where the defendant husband wrote a letter to his wife, stating that it looked like the only way for her to get possession of her property was for her to file suit for divorce, and she shortly thereafter filed suit for divorce, held that he could not, being a participant judgment for fraud. Id.

As the fact of residence is jurisdictional and in a divorce action must be proved, a judgment cannot be vacated on the ground that plaintiff was guilty of fraud in establishing the allegations as to her residence, for that issue was adjudicated. Id.

Evidence.—In action to set aside compromise judgment for fraud and mistake, evidence held to show fraud and mistake. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Ewing (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1163.

In action to set aside compromise judgment releasing plaintiff's warrantors from liability, evidence held to show amount of purchase price paid warrantors. Id.

In action to set aside compromise judgment as having been procured by fraudulent representations inducing purchase by defendants therein, evidence held to show that such defendants did not purchase a "chance of title." Id.

In an action to set aside a decree of mortgage foreclosure, evidence held sufficient to support a finding that mortgage indebtedness had been paid. Well v. Miller (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 142.

In suit to set aside judgment entered on agreement of attorneys on the ground that the attorneys were unauthorized, evidence held to sustain the trial court's conclusion that cancellation of the judgment was not justified in view of absence of injury. Pierce v. Foreign Mission Board of Southern Baptist Convention (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 140.

Where, since rendition of judgment by agreement, the rights of innocent third parties have become involved, the courts will be more exacting as to the quantum of proof required before setting aside the judgment on the ground that the attorneys who made the agreement were unauthorized by plaintiffs. Id.

In suit to cancel a judgment and enjoin enforcement, a prima facie showing of a meritorious defense is sufficient. Huddleston v. Texas Pipe Line Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 250.

In an action to set aside judgment of divorce, evidence held not to show that plaintiff's wife knew of defendant's lunacy at the time he was served with citation and filed his answer. Wagley v. Wagley (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 493.

Recital in judgment against defendants of service on and appearance by them raises only a presumption of regularity, which can be removed in direct proceeding to set aside the judgment. Levy v. Roper (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 514.

Operation and effect.—Where judgment has, at a succeeding term, been reopened and dismissed, it does not preclude a party defendant thereto from being a proper party defendant to another suit on the same cause. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148.

Even judgment against an insane person in trespass to try title be opened, by direct proceeding, the defense of adverse possession cannot be aided by time elapsing after rendition of the judgment. Howell v. Fidelity Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 181.

88. Petition or bill of review.—See notes to art. 2023.

89. Hearing and determination.—On petition to vacate judgment and enjoin enforcement, it is the court's duty to determine the rights of the parties to a judgment on the pleadings and evidence, and it is error to enjoin enforcement of the judgment without a hearing. Reed & Reed v. McKee (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 717.
Motion for new trial.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1368, a motion without signature will not be considered on appeal, where there are no material errors in the record. Smith v. Fordyce (Sup.) 18 S. W. 663.

A motion for a new trial for newly discovered evidence, which failed to give the names of the witnesses by whom the alleged facts could be proved, and offered no proof that they would testify as claimed, was properly denied. Neal Commission Co. v. Golston (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1124.

A motion for a new trial for newly discovered evidence which failed to show any deficiency to discover such evidence prior to trial was properly denied. Id.

The trial court held not to have abused his discretion in holding that the motion failed to show diligence. Rooney v. Porch (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 246.

A statement in a motion for new trial that movants used diligence to secure alleged newly discovered and that it was not due to negligence or lack of diligence on the part of the plaintiffs that such evidence was not had, amounted to no more than legal conclusions, and was insufficient, it being necessary to state facts showing diligence. Tominson v. Noel (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1028.

One seeking to have a judgment set aside and a new trial granted must distinctly show, not only that he was prevented from presenting his defense at the proper time by some cause unmixed with negligence on his part, but that he has a good defense to the action brought against him, and his defense must be made to appear with such particularity that the court may know of what it consents. McCuskey v. McGall (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 432.

A motion for new trial after rendition of judgment on failure of defendant to appear, stating that the case was based on alleged fraudulent representations made by an agent, and that such representations could not be binding, * * * held not to show a good and meritorious defense; statements in reference thereto being mere legal conclusions. Monarch Petroleum Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 1116.

—— Specification of errors.—The grounds of error must be set out in the motion for a new trial, and must distinctly specify the error complained of. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 164.

Where motion for new trial was filed May 1st, and overruled May 24th, and bills of exception was not filed until July 18th, reference in the motion to a bill of exception, without more facts, must distinctly specify the error complained of. Where defendant desired to complain of the excessiveness of the judgment because of recovery on account of certain shipments, held that, under rules 24, 25, and 26 for Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xii), and rule 65 of the district courts (142 S. W. xxxi), matter should be distinctly set out, and general assignment is not enough. Quanah, A. & F. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 709.

Under Rule 65 for district courts (142 S. W. xxi), the trial court was justified in disregarding a ground of a motion for a new trial asserting merely that the verdict was contrary to the evidence. Denby Motor Truck Co. v. Mears (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 294.

—— Amended and supplemental motions.—Refusal to permit amendment to amended motion for new trial on last day of term, and after a hearing had begun on the amended motion, was a proper exercise of court's discretion. San Antonio Portland Cement Co. v. Gschwender (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 967.

—— Affidavits and other evidence.—It is not error to refuse a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence when the motion is not supported even by an affidavit of the party applying. Neal Commission Co. v. Golston (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1124.

It was not an abuse of discretion to deny a new trial for newly discovered evidence on an affidavit that a witness admitted that he lied on the stand, where the witness denied the statement under oath. Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Glass (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 730.

A motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence should be accompanied by the affidavit of the witness. McDonald v. Lastinger (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 829.

Where motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence was unaccompanied by the affidavit of the witnesses, no diligence was shown, and the testimony was chiefly on the matter of the impeachment of the adverse party's testimony, such motion was properly denied. Id.

Opening default.—This article, providing every motion for new trial shall be in writing and signed, and specify ground, is directory, and court had authority to set aside, on own motion, in term, default judgment in absence of written motion invoking relief. Dornay v. United Brotherhood of Friends (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 550.

A motion to vacate a default judgment regular on its face, on the ground that defendant had no notice of the date of trial and that such date had not been set nor posted, was insufficient, where it did not show defects, that the case was irregularly tried, nor that counsel had been misled. Drinkard v. Jenkins (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 552.

A party seeking to set aside a default judgment must set out his defense with such particularity that the trial and appellate courts may know of what it consists. Wheat v. Ward County Water Improvement Dist. No. 2 (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 718.

An allegation in a motion to set aside a default judgment in a water improvement district's suit for taxes that the moving party believed the assessment and levy illegal and exorbitant, without alleging facts showing that it was illegal or exorbitant, was insufficient to justify relief. Id.

A petition to vacate a default judgment which merely showed that defendant default because he erroneously believed he could not be sued without joinder of another, and which did not state any defense, is insufficient. Strickland v. Higginbotham Bros. & Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 483.
Defendant cannot complain of refusal to set aside default without showing in his motion the judgment was not the result of a negligent failure on his part, and also that he had a meritorious defense to plaintiff's cause of action; the facts and not conclusions of defendant being stated. Schultz v. Burk (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 700.

Motion of defendant to set aside default judgment insufficient as not stating the facts on which his belief was based that the controversy between the parties would be settled out of court which led him to make default. Id.

Allegations in defendant's motion to set aside default judgment against him, that he had a meritorious defense without stating the facts on which the defense rested, held merely statement of a conclusion. Id.

Affidavits and other evidence on application.—Where default judgment was taken on notes, and defendants sought to set aside the default on the ground that plaintiff had violated an agreement whereby he was to be allowed to make a crop before making payment, it was by order of court to hear evidence as to whether the agreement had terminated. Winniford v. Lawther Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 553.

— Hearing and determining effect of granting relief.—In lessor's action against lessee and assignee, where only relief sought against lessee was cancellation of the lease, and lessor failed to show any ground for cancellation as against assignee, court, in setting aside the default against the assignee, also properly opened it as against lessee. Jackson v. Pure Oil Operating Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 959.

On motions to set aside default judgments, a court must determine from the proof whether or not the failure of defendant to appear is to be justified and excused, and from the allegations of the verified motion whether or not he has a meritorious defense. Winniford v. Lawther Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 553.

The truth or falsity of a defense alleged in a motion to set aside a default judgment is not a proper subject of inquiry in passing upon the motion. Id.

Art. 2021. [1371] [1369] Misconduct of jury, etc., as ground of motion; evidence.

Disqualification of jury.—Having failed to challenge juror for interest in subject-matter, interveners could not first present question of ineligibility on motion for new trial. Wise v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 977.

Where garnishment bond executed by juror as one of sureties was on file, interveners, contending they did not know fact juror was surety until after trial, must be held to have had constructive notice. Id.

In view of Const. art. 16, § 19, and Rev. St. 1911, arts. 5114, 5115, 5117, 5119, 5206, a juror under 21 years of age is incompetent and disqualified, the word “competent” in the preceding statute obviously qualified, but such disqualification did not render the verdict void where the question was first raised on motion for new trial. German v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 662.

Misconduct of jury.—Though jury discussed matters outside the issues, held, that new trial was properly denied, where 10 of the 11 jurors had already agreed on a verdict, and the eleventh juror was not affected by such discussion. Fritsche v. Niechty (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1017.

Act of juror during introduction of evidence in action to recover diamond in placing dampened paper over it, and calling attention of other jurors to fact that presence of flaw testified to by plaintiff was thereby made more apparent, did not evidence undue bias authorizing new trial. Hall v. Collier (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 880.

On its appearing with reasonable certainty that jury has been guilty of misconduct affecting amount of verdict, new trial should be granted. West Lumber Co. v. Tomme (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 784.

Trial courts should be liberal in granting new trial where misconduct of jury in discussing necessity of plaintiff's paying, from his verdict, a share thereof to his attorney, is clearly shown to have taken place and should not hold defendant to a too strict showing of injury. Id.

In suit to recover money paid for an automobile because not as warranted, juror's statements concerning his experiences with engine of similar make, etc., held to require new trial. Manes v. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 225.

In an action for plaintiffs' ejection from defendant's train after being carried beyond destination, the jury's consideration of its foreman's map, statements based on his own knowledge held to constitute misconduct of jury warranting new trial. German v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 662.

It was misconduct for which defendant in a personal injury case should be granted a new trial that, not only matters of negligence, but items of damage not in evidence nor authorized by the charge, as hospital and doctor's charges and attorney's fees, were discussed by the jurors, and by part of them, considered in making up the amount of the verdict. Crystal Palace Co. v. Roempke (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 230.

In suit to recover an amount paid under false representations for cancellation of an oil and gas lease, where the evidence raised the issues as to whether plaintiff lessor relied on return of the lease contract within 10 days, etc., the jury were at liberty to discuss them, and their doing so did not constitute misconduct, and the trial court properly refused to hear evidence in support of defendant's motion for new trial as to such discussions. Ware v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 593.

Admissibility of evidence of misconduct or to impeach verdict.—Misconduct of jury as ground for new trial could not be proved by juror's affidavit; this article requiring testimony to be taken in open court. Jones v. Wichita Valley Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 195 719.
This article would not include reception of testimony to show that jurors did not understand the legal effect of their answers to special interrogatories. Farrand v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 846.

Verdict. Had a jury candidate been impeached on motion for new trial by affidavits of the jurors that there was a mistake entering into the verdict. Ellerd v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 695.

It is the province of the jury to find the facts, and they have no concern with the legal effect of their findings, and a new trial should not be granted under this article, on affidavit by the jurors that they did not understand the legal result of their verdict. Id.

In suit to set aside a sheriff's sale under foreclosure of a vendor's lien, it being claimed that the purchaser had bid in the property pursuant to a conspiracy, findings of such a fraudulent conspiracy could not be impeached by testimony of jurors that they had so found in order to answer another issue as to whether defendant had agreed not to buy in the affirmative. Jenkins v. Moore (App.) 247 S. W. 587.

Sufficiency of proof.—Evidence held to show that the amount of the verdict was not influenced by consideration of attorney's fee. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Cook (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 539; Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smithers (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 687.

On motion for new trial, evidence held sufficient to show that jurors improperly discussed that plaintiff would have to pay large attorney fees, and that their verdict was influenced thereby. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1004.

Testimony as to misconduct of the jury in considering what portion of recovery in personal injury action would go to plaintiff's attorneys held sufficient to show that new trial should have been granted. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Vickers (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 247.

On motion for new trial for misconduct of jurors in discussing that plaintiff's attorney would get large fee, held it was abuse of discretion of trial court to overrule motion. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1004; Louisiana Western R. Co. v. White (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 724 S. W. 856.

Denial of new trial on ground that juror was influenced by statement of other juror concerning the facts and his expert knowledge held not an abuse of discretion. Turner v. Turner (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 226.

Where undisputed evidence showed misconduct of jurors in reaching their verdict, trial court's refusal to grant new trial was abuse of discretion, reviewable on appeal. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 1004.

In a personal injury case, the fact that there was mention by several jurors of the fact that plaintiff would have to pay his attorneys a portion of any amount recovered is of itself insufficient to warrant reversal, unless it clearly appears that the trial court abused its discretion in denying new trial. West Lumber Co. v. Tomme (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 784.

Denial of plaintiff's motion for new trial on account of misconduct of juror in talking with witness, who averred that a witness for plaintiff had lied, but whose statement did not mention several jurors of the way that plaintiff's witness had been guilty of stealing cotton, but escaped conviction, and that plaintiff had been convicted of ravishing a girl less than 15 years old. Jones v. Texas Electric Ry. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 749.

In action for personal injuries, it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse a new trial to plaintiff because statements were made in the jury room that plaintiff's witness had been guilty of stealing cotton, but escaped conviction, and that plaintiff had been convicted of ravishing a girl less than 15 years old. Jones v. Texas Electric Ry. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 749.

An appellate court will not review the trial court's action in denying a new trial on account of the alleged misconduct of the jury, under this article, unless it appears that the rights of the parties have been disregarded, or unless the evidence left the question reasonably doubtful, considering the effect of the misconduct on the jury. Campbell v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 134.

In proceedings to condemn land and easement that a juror had stated during the jury deliberations that he had been authorized to offer for similarly situated land $750 per acre, held not such misconduct that refusal of new trial therefor constituted abuse of discretion under this article. Dallas Power & Light Co. v. Edwards (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 910.

In condemnation proceedings, refusal of new trial on the ground that a juror concealed upon examination his preconceived ideas as to the value of the land was not an abuse of discretion, where it appeared merely that such juror knew at the time that he had been authorized by another party to pay $750 per acre for land similarly situated. 16

The discretion of the trial judge in refusing a new trial for misconduct of the jury in considering evidence of their foreman given while deliberating on verdict is subject to review upon appeal. German v. Houston & T. C. R. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 666.

Refusal of new trial for misconduct of juror in receiving information other than at the trial and talking about it to other jurors, held not an abuse of discretion, in view of his and her statements as to its failure to influence them, and the manner in which he voted before and after the information. Hines v. Parry (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 539.

Where it did not affirmatively appear from the evidence that a suggestion made in the jury room during deliberation as to amount of verdict, that plaintiff's attorney was to receive one-half of the amount recovered, influenced the verdict, court's denial of new trial held not an abuse of discretion, under this article. Ft. Worth & D. C. Ry. Co. v. Smithers (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 627.

While the discretion of a trial judge in refusing to set aside a verdict for improper conduct of a jury is not an arbitrary one, and is subject to review by the appellate courts, the action of the trial court will be reviewed only where there has been a clear abuse of discretion. Gray v. Stolley (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 886.

Art. 2022. [1452] [1448] New trials granted where damages too small, etc.

$4,500 held not excessive damages to parent for loss of arm of 13 year old boy, where suit was not brought until child was 21. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. v. Lawrence (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1029.

On evidence in a suit for damages for wrongful sequestration of personal property, judgment for plaintiff for $419.70, in view of the restoration of the property to plaintiff, held excessive. Kelly v. Kepler (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 704.

A verdict of $2,750 held excessive, and reduced to $1,800, where a Pullman porter was injured by being thrown from his car and shot by defendant's watchman. Pullman Co. v. Ransaw (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 122.

A jury cannot arbitrarily set an amount in a verdict that is not sustained by the evidence. Jeanes v. Blount (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 299.

In action against railroad for failure to seasonably deliver shipments to connecting carrier, held, that verdict awarding damages for particular shipments did not show passion or prejudice on part of jury. Quanah, A. & P. Ry. Co. v. Bone (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 709.

The imposition of heavy exemplary damages, where the actual damages recoverable were small, is a fact which ought to be looked to in determining whether passion rather than reason dictated the verdict. Cotton v. Cooper (Com. App.) 209 S. W. 135.

An award of $400 actual damages and $7,500 exemplary damages in favor of an employee whose discharge had been brought about by a loan broker, who, after being paid more than the principal of his loan, filed an assignment of wages, thus causing the employee's discharge, held, warranted, and not to have been dictated by passion or prejudice. Id T.

In action for breach of marriage promise against a man worth $35,000, who under promise of marriage had seduced plaintiff and was the father of her child, a verdict of $900 was not excessive. Funderburgh v. Skinner (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 452.

In an action for fraudulent representations, which induced plaintiff to purchase and pay for corporate stock, evidence as to alleged fraud held insufficient to justify verdict for plaintiff for $750. Barthold v. Thomas (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 506.

In an action against a railroad for damages arising from overflows on plaintiff's land and crops, evidence as to the damages to plaintiff's crops held insufficient to sustain an award for more than the sum of $25. Payne v. Cummmins (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 1118.

Cited, Childs v. Mays, 73 Tex. 76, 11 S. W. 154.

In a general action of a motion in arrest of judgment does not prevent a court entering judgment before passing upon the motion, there being nothing in this article to indicate that a motion in arrest of judgment has precedence over a motion for a new trial. Goodman v. Republic Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 466.

Where suit was filed March 13, 1918, and plaintiff took default judgment in March, 1919, the denial of defendant's motion for new trial, filed 15 days after judgment by default was taken, held not reversible error. Anderson v. Adams (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 656.

Discretion of court.—The court may, within its discretion, entertain a motion for new trial, filed after the expiration of the two days as provided in this article; but it is largely within the discretion of the court whether such a motion should be granted or not. Dumas v. Easly (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 566.

Where more than 3 months intervened between trial and decision, failure to present evidence discovered after trial before decision was rendered, with motion to reopen the case, and failure to file motion for a new trial on that ground for several days after the decision was rendered, and until the last day of the term, shows such want of diligence that it was not an abuse of discretion to overrule the motion. Smith v. Pclarations (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 556.

Where a motion for a new trial is not filed within two days after notice of rendition of judgment, on defendant's failure to appear, the granting of the motion rests largely within the discretion of the trial court, and the delay imposes on the moving party, not only the duty of showing some excuse for the failure to sooner move, but of showing that it has a meritorious defense. Monarch Petroleum Co. v. Jones (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 1116.

Petition or bill of review.—One can obtain new trial by original proceeding after term of court has expired only by affirmatively alleging diligence to prevent judgment, or that defense in original action was prevented solely by fraud, accident, or opposing party's acts. Knox v. Horne (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 259.

In a bill of review, seeking a revision and cancellation of a judgment for personal injuries, held that issues presented had been decided in suit for damages. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Dart (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 580.

A motion to vacate an order of dismissal for want of prosecution is in the nature of a bill in equity, and may be granted at a succeeding term, if plaintiff shows that he was not negligent and has a meritorious suit. Hickman v. Swain (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 546.

A judgment of partition in favor of plaintiffs, in a suit in which two of the persons named as plaintiffs were dead, and a necessary party not joined, is at least voidable, and may be attacked for fraud and mistake at a subsequent term in a direct proceeding by a bill of review. Farrias v. Delgado (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 610.

Default judgment will not be set aside upon ground of insufficient service, in action brought after the term at which it was rendered, where defendant had such notice of the judgment entry that he could have moved to set the judgment aside at the term at which it was rendered. Kimbell v. Edwards (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 281.

An independent suit for a new trial of a divorce suit is an appeal to the conscience of the court, and, where he hears the evidence and it does not appear that he abused his judicial discretion in refusing a new trial, the appellate court will not disturb the judgment. Harrison v. Harris (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 224.

In a suit in the nature of a bill of review to set aside a divorce judgment on the ground that plaintiff was in jail and did not know when the suit was to be tried, relief will not be granted unless a meritorious defense is presented and proved. Id.

Art. 2024. [1372] [1370] Not more than two new trials, except, etc.

In general.—In view of Const. art. 1, § 15, and this article, it is the province of the jury to determine the credibility of witnesses and the weight of testimony, and the court may not assume its functions by deciding that testimony is entitled to no credit because overborne by contradictory testimony, or that it is so contradictory to circumstances and proof as to be Improbable. Drew v. American Automobile Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 547.

Art. 2025. [1374] [1372] Determined when.

Cited, Childs v. Maya, 73 Tex. 76, 11 S. W. 154.

Time for hearing and decision in general.—The district courts have statutory power to grant new trials or arrest judgments during term, or until final adjournment have control of all judgments. Liz Mar Plantation Co. v. Whitfill (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1118.

Motion for new trial was discharged by operation of law when the term at which the judgment was rendered ended, and the act of the trial court in continuing the motion to the next term was unauthorized and void. White v. Day (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 843.
Under Vernon’s Statutes Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 2025, court is without authority to determine a motion for new trial at a term subsequent to that during which motion is made. Southern Surety Co. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 144.
Rehearing.—The granting of a new trial cannot be called in review at a subsequently term upon a pleading in the form of a plea in abatement, where judgment was entered at the former trial but was set aside during the term. Western Union Tele-

Art. 2026. [1375] [1373] Bill of review in suits by publication.
Parties.—Under this article a bill of review to amount to a new trial must be filed by those authorized so to do. McCarthy v. Houston Oil Co. of Texas (Civ. App.)
221 S. W. 397.

Art. 2029. [1378] [1376] Sale under such execution not avoided, but, etc.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN
COSTS AND SECURITY THEREFOR

Art.
2030. Who responsible for costs.
2031. Each party liable for costs incurred by him.
2032. Officers may demand payment of costs.
2033. May put bill of costs with officer for collection.
2035. Successful party to recover.

Art.
2037. Fees of only two witnesses to any fact.
2042. Where demand reduced by payment, etc.
2046. On appeals and certiorari.
2048. Court may otherwise adjudge costs.
2050. Who may require security.
2051. Judgment on cost bond.
2052. Affidavit of liability to give cost bond.
2054. No security to be required of whom.

Article 2030. [1421] [1420] Each party responsible to officers for his own costs.
See Extence v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 296; notes to art. 2033; Walker v.
Hopping (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 146; notes to art. 2046.
Parties liable—Primary liability.—Under Rev. St. 1878, arts. 1420, 1420a, no injunction to restrain a district clerk from collecting appeal costs can be sustained, as appelrant is primarily liable for the costs, though successful on his appeal. Moore v. Moore (Sup.) 8 S. W. 26.

Art. 2031. [2491] [2427] Each party liable for costs incurred by him.
In general.—Costs of an unsuccessful claimant in garnishment should not be adjudged against plaintiff in garnishment, though he is unsuccessful because of the claim of another under this article. Brown v. Cassidy-Southwestern Commission Co. (Civ.
App.) 225 S. W. 833.

Art. 2032. [1422] [1420a] Officers may demand payment of costs up to adjournment of each term.
See Moore v. Moore (Sup.) 8 S. W. 28, notes to art. 2030; Extence v. Stewart (Civ.
App.) 23 S. W. 296, notes to art. 2033.

Art. 2033. [1423] [1420b] May put bill of costs in hands of officer for collection, when. Same to have force of execution. Appeal not to prevent issuance of execution for costs.
Execution, issuance of.—Under Rev. St. 1878, arts. 1420, and 1420b, after an appeal bond has been filed, execution for costs against appellant can be issued only for such costs as appellant has incurred. Extence v. Stewart (Civ. App.) 23 S. W. 296.
Art. 2035. [1425] [1421] Successful party to recover of his adversary.

See Denson v. McCasland, 2 Civ. App. 184, 21 S. W. 169; notes to art. 2042.

2. Persons entitled to costs.—Under Rev. St. 1879, plaintiffs are entitled to costs on a judgment in favor in a suit on a dormant suit and for the costs of the dormant suit; but, even if they were not, that objection is not available, when raised for the first time on appeal. Bridge v. Samuelson, 73 Tex. 522, 11 S. W. 530.

Plaintiff in an action on notes providing for attorney's fees is not entitled to costs; the action being prematurely brought, and defendant having made tender when notes were due. Brooks v. Long (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 519.

Where judgment was in favor of one of the defendants, though against the other, plaintiff was not entitled as unsuccessful defendant to costs for making the successful defendant a party. Angelina County Lumber Co. v. Maat (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 730.

Where an account is assigned pending action thereon, and assignee is permitted to intervene and prosecute the suit, the assignee upon recovering judgment is entitled to costs. Yerby v. Heineken & Vogelsang (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 836.

Where probate of a will offered by appellant was denied, as was probate of an earlier alleged will offered by a contestant, held that, where all of the costs were taxed against appellant, it will be presumed on appeal, that contestant was the successful party, and under this article, entitled to recover all her costs. Campbell v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 134.

Under this article, the successful party shall recover all costs incurred, and plaintiffs were successful parties though they did not recover on every count, but only on some. Veitmann v. Siator (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 530.

In an action for debt and to foreclose a deed of trust lien on real estate, where plaintiff obtained judgment for the debt, he was entitled to costs, notwithstanding that third persons recovered the property. Lemm v. Kramer (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 500.

4. Persons and funds liable for costs in general.—Cost should not be adjudged against unnecessary defendants in trespass to try title, who promptly disclaim; nor should costs incurred in improperly making such parties defendants be adjudged against the other defendants. Johnson v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 990.

Where vendor owned five lots, four of which were subject to trust deed, and he sold the fifth lot and three others on consideration that the vendee discharge the trust deed on all of them, and she failed to do so, all costs should be awarded against her in the foreclosure suit. Nix v. Albert Pick & Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1112.

In action against county where different officers were made defendants, it was error to tax against the county costs incident to making defendants other than the county parties to the action. Bexar County v. Linden (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 478.

All costs incurred by reason of receivership of a corporation, including the receiver's salary, are taxable against the plaintiff and his sureties where the receivership was improperly granted. Hook v. Payne (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 255.

Where executor appointed temporary administrator, under Art. 3302, intervened in will contest, though the order appointing him did not authorize him to do so, costs were properly taxed against him individually, and not against estate. Campbell v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 134.

A county which improperly is allowed to make itself party to a suit, which merely involves the question of land being plaintiffs' private property or a city street, should be charged only with costs incurred by making itself a party and prosecuting its claim, and the balance of the costs should be adjudged against plaintiffs unsuccessful on their claim. Feira v. E. Southern L. R. (Civ. App.) 257 S. W. 233.

9. Quo warranto.—In quo warranto, the costs will be taxed against the relator, where judgment was rendered against him on his claim for the salary, fees, and emoluments of the office and the suit for the office is dismissed because the term has expired. Ex parte Griffith v. States (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 428.

13. Tender.—Where plaintiff, suing on an insurance policy, made no prayer for recovery of the lesser amount for which defendant admitted liability and when it was tendered by the company it was refused by her, costs should be adjudged against her. Illinois Bankers' Life Ass'n v. Floyd (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 907, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Floyd v. Illinois Bankers' Life Ass'n of Monmouth, Ill., 192 S. W. 607.

Where amount of judgment was not tendered by answer, it was not error for court to tax costs against defendant, though record showed defendant was ready at all times to pay such amount; the filing of the suit being a sufficient demand therefor. Reynolds v. Reynolds (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 382.

In action on purchase-money notes and to foreclose vendor's lien, the court on finding that plaintiffs had tendered the amount due before commencement of suit, properly taxed the costs against the plaintiffs and refused to allow plaintiffs attorney's fees. Ex parte Enslay (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 428.

15. Attorney's fees as costs.—A litigant is not liable to his adversary for any sum expended by the latter as attorney's fees apart from exceptions made by the Legislature. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Turner (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 487.

16. Guardians ad litem, fees of, as costs.—See Simmons v. Arnim, 110 Tex. 399, 229 S. W. 110; judgment (Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 184; notes to art. 2048.

Under art. 1942, authorizing the appointment of a guardian ad litem, the fee allowed such guardian should be taxed as costs against the losing party. Brown v. Brown (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1058.
19. Witnesses' fees.—It is only when a witness appears in obedience to an authorized subpoena entitling him to the statutory compensation that his fees may be finally taxed against the party cast in the suit. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Scott (Civ. App.) 311 S. W. 345.

24. Discretion and review.—In an action by several against a brother to set aside a deed executed by a parent to the defendant, wherein children of a deceased plaintiff were impeached by defendant and judgment was in favor of plaintiffs, a decision of the appellate court reversing the judgment and rendering one for defendant was not erroneous because upsetting an order of the trial court taxing defendant with an item allowed guardian ad litem of children as attorney's fees. Rogers v. Rogers (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 489.

Art. 2037. [1427] [1423] Fees of only two witnesses to any fact.

Application.—Rev. St. 1879, art. 1423, does not apply to criminal cases. Tracy v. State (Cr. App.) 24 S. W. 997.

Art. 2042. [1432] [1428] Where demand reduced by payments, etc.

Reduction by set-off.—Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1421, 1428, and 1434, where plaintiff's claim was reduced to an amount not within the jurisdiction of the court by counterclaim, and not by payment, and the court, without stating any reason, adjudged the costs against him, the Court of Civil Appeals will reverse the judgment, and allow plaintiff his costs. Denson v. McCusland, 2 Civ. App. 184, 31 S. W. 169.

Art. 2046. [1436] [1432] On appeal and certiorari.

Costs on appeal or writ of error in general.—Where plaintiff obtained judgment in the justice court and again upon certiorari, but the defendant obtained judgment on a counterclaim not given him below, it was not error to assess the costs in county court to plaintiff under this article. Nations v. Williams (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1176.

Where one contesting the probate of a will offered for probate another alleged will and probate thereof was denied, held that, where such contestant also appealed, as did the original proponent, and all records were consolidated, all costs incurred by such contestant, who failed to maintain her contention on appeal, must be taxed against her. Campbell v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 224.

In negligence action against railroad and receiver, where court, on appeal from judgment for plaintiffs, dismisses action as to railroad on ground that it was not a necessary or proper party, the costs incurred by the railroad will be taxed against plaintiffs, though judgment is affirmed as to receiver. Schaff v. Mason (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 388.

Generally, appellate court in dismissing appeal on ground that the subject-matter has ceased to exist will adjudge costs against appellant. Roy v. Schneider (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 188.

The court on dismissal of appeal following receipt of Supreme Court's answer to certified questions, on ground that subject-matter has ceased to exist, will tax costs against appellee, where answer to certified questions showed that judgment of lower court should have been for appellant. Id.

Where, pending a motion for a rehearing on appeal from an injunction to restrain the party committee from entertaining a contest of the primary election, the general election was held, the case has become moot and will be dismissed; each party under art. 2090, paying the costs incurred by him. Walker v. Hopping (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 146.

Amount of recovery as affecting right to costs.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1432, the interest pending the appeal should not be counted, in determining the amount of judgment, to ascertain the liability for costs. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Weimers, 74 Tex. 564, 13 S. W. 281.

Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1432, it is error to tax the costs of appeal against a defendant who has obtained a smaller verdict thereby, although the record contains sworn statements of the jurors that they intended to give a larger verdict. Rogers v. Fox (App.) 16 S. W. 781.

Where on appeal judgment had been reduced, it was error to tax costs against appellant. Southern Surety Co. v. Stubbs (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 243.

Where plaintiff recovered judgment in the justice's court, and upon appeal to the county court again recovered judgment, but for a lesser sum, the costs in the county court should be assessed against the plaintiff. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Sutherland (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 982.

Where amount of recovery by appellee in trial court has been reduced in Court of Civil Appeals, costs of appeal will be taxed against appellee. Texas Harvester Co. v. Wilson-Whaley Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 574.

Where insurer, without appealing from award of Industrial Accident Board, refused to make payment of the weekly amounts as they became due, and upon employe's action on award it was held that it was proper to set aside, appellate, the award set aside, appeal, properly adjudged costs against insurer, though it reduced judgment, notwithstanding this article; the court, under the circumstances, having "good cause" to "adjudge the costs otherwise" under art. 2048. Southern Surety Co. v. Lucero (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 55.

Where judgment is reformed on appeal so as to draw the statutory rate of 6 per cent. instead of 10 per cent. interest as rendered by lower court, costs of appeal will be taxed against appellants. Woytek v. King (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1051.

At Reversal, as Affecting costs.—No costs of the appeal should be taxed against an appellee, where the case has been reversed on appeal, unless error has been committed or testimony not offered by her. Reese v. Hamlett (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 346.

Acts or omissions of parties affecting right.—Correction of judgment with respect to amount of interest allowed would not prevent taxing of costs of appeal against an appellant who failed to seek correction in trial court. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Sutherland (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 551.

Where a judgment was too large by reason of error in calculation, the appellate court, though it reduces the judgment, will not relieve appellants of the payment of the costs of the appeal. Such error in calculation was raised for the first time on appeal. Koger v. Clark (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 434.

Where the fact that the judgment did not conform to the verdict was not called to the attention of the trial judge, and a party appeals, assigning such matter as error, and the judgment is corrected upon appeal, costs of appeal will be taxed against the appellant. Independent Order of Puritans v. Manley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 647.

A judgment will be reversed at the cost of appellant where the errors were not called to the court's attention by motion to correct or otherwise, and would have been corrected if timely requested, and there is no objection to the correction. Daugherity v. Manning (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 983.

Where judgment was rendered against both the Director General of Railroads and the railroad, and the trial court's attention was not called to error, on reversal as to the railroad the costs of the appeal should be assessed against the appellants. Houston E. & W. T. Ry. Co. v. Wilkerson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 574.

Apportionment of costs.—Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1432 and 1434, it is not a good reason for dividing costs, where the judgment was reduced over half on appeal, that defendant failed to make any defense in the justice's court. Guif, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Klug (App.) 17 S. W. 944.

The expenses of record.—Where statement of facts is prepared by trial court pursuant to art. 2069, parties having failed to agree, there can be no charge against either party for such statement taxed as costs. Dugan v. Smith (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 543.

Under Arts. 2757, Leg. c. 119, §§ 6, 7 (arts. 1924, 2870), where narrative form of testimony was transcribed by stenographer on request of appellant his fee is not taxable as cost of appeal. Schallert v. Boggs (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 601.

Where plaintiffs in error did not object to exhibits attached to the answer, and did not specify the exhibits attached or objects of the trial court, such exhibits should be copied in transcript, they were not entitled to have cost of copying them charged against the defendants in error, on court affirming judgment. Ben C. Jones & Co. v. State Printing Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 619.

Taxation of costs on appeal or error.—Where a case is reversed and remanded, a motion filed at a subsequent term to retax the costs so as to include an item representing stenographic fees in preparing a statement of facts will be overruled, where such item was not taxed in the district court and was not included in the bill of costs in the transcript, mandate having issued and been filed prior to the making of the bill, although the error was not discovered until after the adjournment of the appellate court. Brady v. Cobbs & Bonner (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 420.

Art. 2048. [1438] [1434] Court may otherwise adjudge costs.

Power of court in general.—See Denson v. McCasland, 2 Civ. App. 181, 21 S. W. 169; notes to art. 2042.

On appeal, see Southern Surety Co. v. Lucero (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 58; notes to art. 2046.

In action on a fire insurance policy, underwritten by numerous parties, some of whom were not served, costs incurred in attempting to serve such parties were improperly taxed to defendant, although plaintiff prevailed in the suit, since they were not necessary parties. Merchants' & Mfrs.' Lloyd's Ins. Exch. v. Southern Trading Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 332.

Where tenant, suing subtenant, to recover possession, had no cause of action when his suit was filed, but could only recover on theory of renewal of original lease after commencement of action, which was set up in his amended pleadings, it was not error for court to tax costs to him. Adams v. Van Mourick (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 721.

Though fee of guardian ad litem is, under art. 1942, taxable as costs, and though the infants were the successful parties, and article 2035 declares such parties shall recover all the costs incurred, "except where it is * * * otherwise provided by law," yet under art. 2048, judgment charging the fee on the lands recovered for the infants is void, and this matter the "good cause" be not stated on the record; this being at most but an irregular exercise of the court's power. Simons v. Armin, 110 Tex. 506, 220 S. W. 66, affirming judgment (Civ. App.) 172 S. W. 184.

Under arts. 1932, 2035, 2048, the trial court is authorized to adjudge costs of the stenographer against the successful party, as where the stenographer was demanded by a defendant as to whom plaintiff admitted he had no case, though it be conceded that plaintiff is the successful party. Brod v. Luce (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 552.

BILLS OF EXCEPTIONS AND STATEMENTS OF FACTS

Art. 2058. Exceptions to rulings taken, when.
Art. 2059. Requisites of bill of exceptions.
Art. 2060. May refer to statement of facts.
Art. 2061. Charges regarded as approved unless excepted to.
Art. 2062. No bill of exceptions where ruling appears of record.
Art. 2063. Bill to be presented to the judge.
Art. 2064. Submitted to opposing counsel, etc.
Art. 2065. If found incorrect.
Art. 2066. On disagreement, judge to make out bill, etc.
Art. 2067. Bystanders’ bill, how obtained.
Art. 2068. Statement of facts, how prepared.
Art. 2069. When the parties disagree.

Art. 2070. Statement of facts prepared from transcript of official shorthand reporter, when and how, etc.; in duplicate; original sent up; reporter to prepare on request, etc., fees.

[Superseded.]

Art. 2071. Time for preparing and filing statements of facts and bills of exceptions; judge may extend, provided, etc.
Art. 2074. Statement of facts not filed in time, when considered by court.

Art. 2075. Time for judge to file conclusions, etc.
Art. 2076. Where term of office expires before adjournment, etc.

727
Article 2058. [1360] [1358] Exception to rulings taken, when.

1. Reservation of exceptions.—See Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Lockhart (App.) 18 S. W. 649; Smith v. Houston Nat. Exch. Bank (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 181; See also, particular subjects, such as Pleading, Evidence, etc.

Exceptions not acted upon by the trial court will, on appeal, be treated as waived, in absence of any showing that the trial court's action was invoked. Hadnot v. Hill (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 327.

Assignments of error, no exceptions having been reserved, may not be reviewed. Southwestern Gas & Electric Co. v. Cobb (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 1116.

3. Necessity of bill of exceptions, statement of facts, or conclusions of law and facts.—In the absence of a statement of facts or findings of fact by the court, or a proper bill of exceptions showing the assertions made, a judgment must be taken on appeal as prayed. Near v. Broadwater Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 692.

5. — Bill of exceptions or statement of facts.—There being no statement of facts, bill of exception, or assignment of error in the record, judgment will be affirmed, where no fundamental error is disclosed. Ogg v. Loyd (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 553.

Where the jury's findings showed that one who had celebrated an invalid ceremonial marriage with deceased received more in rents out of his personal property than she had paid in securing title to certain lands in which she was given no share, held, that final decree of partition did not disclose fundamental error in its favor, reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 242.

6. — Bill of exceptions.—Where there are no proper bills of exception and no fundamental error apparent of record, the judgment will be affirmed without consideration of merits. C. R. C. Law List Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 781.

The assignments of error in a criminal prosecution should be brought up by bills of exception, verified by the trial court or proved up by bystanders, in view of this article, and Code Cr. Proc. art. 744. Perez v. State, 84 Cr. R. 184, 206 S. W. 192.

Where all bills of exception and assignments of error were stricken from the record, and there was no fundamental error apparent in the pleadings, charge, or judgment, the judgment must be affirmed. Gulf Refining Co. v. Nelson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 549.

No bill of exceptions is necessary to preserve the question of the illegality of the election of a special judge to try certain cases. Texas & Pacific Coal Co. v. Ready (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1054.

Assignments of error, failing to show that they are predicated on any bill of exceptions or that any exception was taken to the ruling complained of, will not be considered. Sullivan v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 194.

To review the court's action in refusing landlord's motion requesting the court to construe the lease, it was necessary to reserve the usual bill of exceptions. Evans v. Caldwell (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 512.

Assignments of error, based on bill of exceptions, stricken because filed after expiration of period granted for the filing thereof, will not be considered. Robertson v. Leno (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 740.

10. — Refusal to remove to federal court.—Under arts. 1902, 1909, 1910, and in view of rule 7 for district and county courts (142 S. W. xvii), defendant waived its plea of privilege to be sued in the federal court, where no bill of exception preserving overruling of such plea was reserved, and final judgment to which exceptions were preserved purported to overrule plea. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. City of Ennis (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 255.

11. — Rulings as to pleadings.—Where petition showed cause of action for amount within jurisdiction of court, and where judgment was for an amount within the court's jurisdiction, failure to sustain plea to jurisdiction held not error, in absence of a statement of facts and bills of exceptions. Mach v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 235 S. W. 275.

12. — Ruling on plea of privilege.—Although the effect of sustaining a plea of privilege is to change the venue, pleas of privilege are not included within district and county courts rule 55 (142 S. W. xxi), providing for bills of exceptions to review rulings on change of venue. Valdespino v. Dorrance & Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 649.

If judgment showing action of court in overruling plea of privilege is in the record, formal bill of exceptions is unnecessary. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Webber, 109 Tex. 583, 210 S. W. 677.

14. — Interlocutory proceedings.—Where motion to strike bills of exceptions covering refusal to compel appellee to submit to examination by physicians was sustained, it was too late, assignments presenting rulings with reference to such request will not be considered. Tull v. P. & Y. Ry. Co. v. Duft (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 1169.

Though petition for partition alleged that one defendant was a minor without legal guardian, held that, though the record showed no appointment of a guardian ad litem, etc., no fundamental error appeared, reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 242.
19. If an objection to the consideration of an assignment of error to proceedings on motion for examination of injured plaintiff was made, or that there was no bill of exceptions as required by court rules 53, 54, and 55 for district and county courts (142 S. W. xxii) has been presented at the proper time, the court would have been bound to sustain it. Texas Employers' Ins. Ass'n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.

Refusal of application for continuance cannot be reviewed unless exceptions are duly reserved and presented in bill of exceptions filed within time. Cottoniere v. White, Jackson & Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 906.

An assignment of error to the overruling of a motion for a continuance cannot be considered, where there is no bill of exceptions to the action of the court, though the judgment recites that the motion was presented and overruled, and that appellant duly excepted. Anderson v. Rich (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 549.

19. Conduct of trial.—Where there was no bill of exceptions, and no evidence was introduced, and statement of facts did not show that affidavits had been introduced to show that the jury took evidence into the jury room, such matter cannot be reviewed under art. 2021. Morales v. Cline (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 747.

Where there was no bill of exceptions to alleged misconduct of counsel in argument, an assignment of error asserting prejudice resulting from such misconduct must be overruled. Du Bois v. Tyler (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 211.

That one may complain on appeal of introduction of improper evidence, he must have objected to it at the time, and preserved the objection by bill of exceptions. City of San Antonio v. Newman (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 191.

An assignment of error to the overruling of a motion to strike out certain evidence will not be reviewed where the record shows no bill of exceptions to such action. Stephens v. Miller (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1051.

Where the action of the court in overruling a motion to strike out evidence is not evidenced in the record by any bill of exceptions, the question cannot be reviewed. Gilroy v. Rowley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 623.

If an objection was made to testimony when offered, it was waived by failure to reserve bill of exceptions. Evans v. Caldwell (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 512.

Assignment complaining that the court required defendant to answer question cannot be reviewed, where there was no bill of exception or statement of facts showing any objection by defendants. W. J. & F. J. Powers v. James (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 382.

In an action against a carrier for injuries to live stock, it cannot be said that it was error to offer expense bills in evidence, where the bill of exceptions does not show that the contents of such papers were ever known to the jury. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 781.

21. Submission of issues.—Refusal to submit special issues cannot be reviewed, if exception is timely taken, and all of the issues are considered without exception. Bost v. Biggers Bros. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 1112.

22. Instructions.—Rulings upon special instructions cannot be reviewed, where the exceptions thereto are not supported by a formal bill of exceptions as required by the statute in force at the time of the trial. Handly v. Adams (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 888; Miller v. F. W. Essel Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 784.

Assignments of error based on refusal of special charges or on giving of instructions will not be considered, where there is no bill of exceptions reserved to any of such errors as specifically required by art. 2061. Couch v. Biggers (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1101.

Objections to paragraphs of general charge, if shown by record to have been presented to trial court before giving of charge, are sufficient, without formal bills of exception, for review. Id.

Where there is no bill of exceptions, an assignment that the court gave a verbal instruction cannot be considered, although it was assigned in the motion for a new trial. Morales v. Cline (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 754.

Where the record shows that appellants objected to the court's charge, and the authentication of the judge shows that these objections were presented and overruled, and that appellants excepted to the action of the court before the charge was read to the jury, an assignment is insufficient, although the formal bill of exceptions was stricken out by order of this court. Thomas v. Derrick (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 140.

To have a peremptory instruction reviewed, the giving of the instruction must be excepted to at the time and before it is given to the jury, and unless a bill of exceptions is reserved the giving of the instruction cannot be reviewed. Thames v. Clesi (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 195.

The giving of a peremptory instruction does not raise the question of fundamental error to be reviewed by the court in the absence of bill of exceptions attacking the giving of such instruction. 1d.

Where proper bill of exceptions was not taken to the manner and form of court's charge to the jury, an assignment on the charge cannot be considered on appeal. Hook v. Nease (Civ. App.) 311 S. W. 250.

An assignment that the court erred in refusing to give additional instructions, which the jury asked for in writing, cannot be considered on appeal, where there is no bill of exception in the record bringing up the matter. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

23. — Verdict or findings.—There being no statement of facts with record, or bills of exceptions therein, assignments complaining of findings of fact of trial court, or refusal to find facts requested, will not be considered. Frick v. Giddings (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 330.

Where the judgment itself shows that appellants duly excepted to the action of the court in rendering judgment against them, they are entitled to have the trial judge's findings of fact reviewed, without properly authenticated bills of exception thereto. Johnson v. Masterson Irr. Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 407.

25. — Matters pertaining to judgment.—A decree and proceedings in partition held not to show fundamental error, reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts, on the theory that the court in its first decree judicially determined that the land was susceptible of partition, and thereafter in conformity to the report of commissioners ordered it sold, and thus violated art. 6161. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 242.

26. — Failure to file conclusions of law and fact.—Failure of trial judge to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, as required by art. 1989, must be shown by bill of exceptions, to be excepted to on appeal, as provided in rule 55 of the Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xxi). Ft. Worth & R. G. R. Co. v. Tuggle (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 910.

Court's failure to file conclusions of fact and law will not be considered on appeal without a bill of exceptions. Masterson v. Pullen (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 537.

Under arts. 2058, 2073, and Court Rules 63, 54, 55 (142 S. W. xxi), the appellate court will not review failure of trial court to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, unless such matter is raised by a bill of exception, or at least unless it appears in the record, not merely that a request for findings and conclusions was made, but also that upon failure of trial court to comply with such request, appellant excepted to such failure. Kennedy v. Kennedy (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 551.

27½. Presumptions from failure to make.—See art. 2068, note 68, and notes at end of chapter 20.

Where there was no bill of exceptions showing the evidence adduced upon the hearing on a plea of privilege, it must be presumed on appeal from the order overruling such plea that the evidence showed the mineral leases sued on were vested in the plaintiffs an interest in the lands. Stemmons v. Matthal (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 364.

290. Substitutes for bill of exceptions.—Where the record shows no bill of exceptions, the detailing of alleged reasons why the court erred in admitting the evidence and the statement that plaintiff excepted are wholly insufficient as a basis for consideration of the assignment. Stephens v. Miller (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1051.

An assignment that the court erred in refusing to give additional instructions, which the jury asked for in writing, cannot be considered on appeal, where there is no bill of exception brought up the matter, although there is a statement signed by appellant's counsel, not approved or ordered filed by the judge, to the effect that the jury requested certain additional instructions, and that the court refused the request. Nolan v. Young (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 154.

A statement of the judge, certifying that he advised with the jury without the knowledge or presence of plaintiffs, serves all the purposes of a bill of exceptions, for it is the statement by the trial judge that gives force and effect to a bill of exceptions. Holman Bros. v. Cusenbary (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 65.

Art. 2059. [1361] [1359] Requisites of bills of exceptions.

See Nader v. State, 86 Cr. R. 424, 219 S. W. 474; notes to art. 2060.

Requisites and sufficiency of bill of exceptions in general.—Where bill of exceptions did not show or state that testimony of witness violating rule was material. It could not be aided by the statement of facts. Dowdy v. Purrier (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 817.

Where witness in civil case was permitted to testify after admitting that he had been convicted of a felony and sentenced, objections to certified copy of pardon, subsequently placed in evidence, will not be considered, where bill of exceptions only objects to statement of witness that he had been pardoned. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Ash (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 668.

Under this article, a notice of appeal given at the time of court's ruling on motion to set aside default was sufficient exception to the ruling, no formal words being necessary. Counts v. Southwestern Land Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 207.

Where there is neither a statement of fact nor a finding of facts by court, and a bill of exceptions fails to negative that there was other evidence, it cannot be said, from the mere fact that an improper authenticated transcript was admitted in evidence, that a judgment of a court upon competent testimony. Neele v. Broadway Water Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 692.

An assignment of error in admitting deposition over objection that answers were immaterial and irrelevant will be overruled, where bill of exceptions failed to separate the admissible evidence from that which was inadmissible. Padgett Bros. Co. v. Dorsey (Civ. App.) 266 S. W. 561.

Bill of exceptions reciting that judgment is void because judge was a cousin of surety on appeal bond and was therefore disqualified, under art. 1736, was insufficient to present matter, where it failed to show that relationship was within third degree of consanguinity. Fred Mercer Dry Goods Co. v. Pikes (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 530.

Substantial compliance with this article is necessary to enable the Court of Criminal Appeals to perform its reviewing function; the appellate court must in some authentic way be advised of the nature of the ruling, the character of the objection, the subject-matters to which it related, and the probable influence upon the result. Crisp v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 382.

Certainty and definiteness.—Bill of exceptions to the admission in evidence of books kept, etc., held so indefinite as to be of itself sufficient ground for overruling assignment predicated upon ruling excepted to. Avery v. Llano Cotton Seed Oil Mill Ass'n (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 251.

A bill of exceptions, stating that "the charge is incomplete and fails to submit to the jury material issues raised by the pleading and testimony, and covered by issues requested on the part of" appellant, is too general to be considered. Bost v. Biggers Bros. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 1112.

Scope and contents in general.—The failure to exclude testimony on motion will not be considered where the bill of exception does not affirmatively show that the court ruled on the motion. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 291 S. W. 247.

A bill of exceptions which did not affirmatively show that a witness giving opinion evidence was examined as to whether he was sufficiently informed upon the matters to express an opinion is insufficient to show error. Southern Pac. Co. v. Stephens (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1076.

The record must go further than to show that a party excepted to a refusal to give special charges, and must show by bill of exceptions that the charges were presented at the time and manner prescribed by law. Morales v. Cline (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 754.

Where deeds were excluded on objection that descriptions were insufficient, and bill of exceptions did not contain a description of the property; and the record did not otherwise give a description could not suggest that the trial court erred in excluding the deeds. Hopkins v. King (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 356.

In an action on notes given for the price of a piano, testimony of the buyer as to the market value of the instrument will not be held inadmissible on the ground the buyer was not an expert, but that his testimony was mere hearsay; the bill of exceptions failing to rebut the presumption that the buyer qualified himself to testify as an expert. Lee v. Bule (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 356.

The trial court will not be required by mandamus to include certain facts in bill of exception complaining of court's ruling on motion for new trial on ground of insufficiency of evidence, since the facts proved should be brought up by a statement of facts, and not by the bill of exception. Rhoades v. El Paso & S. W. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 481.

Setting forth errors.—Where answer to question is not shown in assignment of error, and statement of facts or bill of exceptions, to which reference is made, contains certain testimony of the witness, but does not show the question complained of, no error is presented. McAllen v. Wood (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 433.

Bills of exceptions should be sufficient to disclose the error complained of without the aid of the statement of facts, but, where the record contains a statement of facts, the bill should not be construed so strictly as to defeat the purpose of the law requiring bills of exceptions, in view or arts. 2059 and 2060. Plummer v. State, 36 Cr. R. 457, 218 S. W. 499.

An assignment of error complaining of the refusal of the court to suppress an answer in a deposition cannot be considered, where the bill of exceptions referred to to sustain the assignment had no reference to the testimony complained of. American Automobile Ins. Co. v. Struwe (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 554.

A statement of the reason for objecting to court's ruling does not comply with this article, but the facts showing the relation of the ruling to the case must be stated in a manner to disclose that they are facts certified to by the trial judge. Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

Showing prejudice to appellant.—In a review upon an incomplete record, held, that the ruling admitting the testimony of a witness to a will cannot be revised where neither the bill of exceptions nor the record shows sufficient to determine if such testimony controlled the jury's finding or prejudiced appellant. Pruitt v. Blesi (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 714.

An assignment of error to an instruction not embodied in the bill of exceptions taken to such instruction cannot be considered. Powell v. Archer County (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1037.

An assignment of error complaining of the argument will be overruled where the bill of exception states no reason for the objection, especially where it appears therefrom that the argument was without the record and was proper. San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247.

Bills of exception not disclosing specific ground of objection, urged to introduction of each particular receipt offered, merely reciting court excluded each receipt from evidence, 731 and appellant duly excepted, held insufficient to authorize review. Wittliff v. Tucker (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 751.

An assignment of error based on objections to the charge will not be considered, where there is no authentic record that objections were presented to trial court before main charge was read to jury, as required by art. 1971, though it is not necessary to show that the objections were so presented. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Churchill (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 253.

Where bill of exceptions to exclusion of testimony fails to disclose the objections made to the evidence, the action of the trial court in the matter cannot be reviewed. Schomaker v. Clarke (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1112.

A bill of exceptions to the exclusion of testimony cannot be sustained, where it failed to disclose the basis of the exception. Swann v. Mills (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 855.

Where the bill of exception taken to the admission of testimony does not show that its admission was objected to on the ground that there was no pleading authorizing it, such objection cannot be first raised on appeal. Dallas Cotton Mills v. Hugley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 432.

Incorporating evidence in general.—Bills of exception to admission of testimony, which fail wholly to show facts elicited from the witness, are insufficient. National Bank of Garland v. Gough (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1119.

Bill of exceptions is not sufficient for review of admission of testimony over objection that the question called for a conclusion, and that witness was not shown qualified; neither the question nor the evidence as to qualification being shown. Long v. State, 82 Cr. R. 312, 200 S. W. 160.

Assignments of error in admitting evidence cannot be considered, where the bills of exceptions do not disclose what the evidence objected to was. Farmers' & Merchants State Bank v. Dalling (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1196.

Bill of exceptions to the overruling of objections to questions propounded to witnesses, which failed to show what the answers were, presents no reversible error. Willard v. Knoblauch (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 734.

Testimony taken under the statute authorizing a new trial for misconduct may be perpetuated as part of the record by means of a bill of exceptions. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Vick (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 247.

Bill of exceptions not containing in narrative form, as required by the statutes and rules, evidence taken on issue of misconduct in jury room, is insufficient to present the question on appeal. Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 273.

The practice of reproducing in bill of exceptions the testimony of a witness in question and answer form is to be avoided, except when such a reproduction is necessary to explain the meaning; notwithstanding this article. Hewey v. State, 87 Cr. R. 248, 220 S. W. 1106.

Under district and county court rule 58 (142 S. W. xxi), a bill of exception taken to the overruling of an objection to testimony should set out so much of the evidence as is necessary to show that the objection to the testimony is well taken. Dendinger v. Martin (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1096.

Setting forth evidence excluded.—Where the bill of exceptions does not show what the answer would have been, no error is shown in the sustaining of an objection to evidence. Horn v. Price (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 690; San Antonio, U. & G. R. Co. v. Dawson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 247; McBroom v. Wier (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 865.

Where exclusion of statement of account and refusal to permit witness to testify as to items thereof are assigned as error, assignment will be overruled where bills of exception do not contain statement or show what witness would have testified. Schillert v. Boyd (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 940.

Complaint cannot be made of argument of counsel that testimony of a certain witness should not be believed on the ground that the opposing party had not produced other witnesses, who-in fact offered to account for the party had offered of other witnesses, where the bill of exceptions does not show what the absent witnesses would testify to. Fehn Life Ins. Co. v. King (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 348.

Assignment of error to the exclusion of testimony, based on a bill of exceptions, not making the witness name or what testimony of his was excluded, must be considered as waived, and cannot be entertained by the Court of Civil Appeals. McBroom v. Weir (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 855.

Conflict between bill of exceptions and statement of facts.—See notes to art. 2068.

Operation and effect of bill. Though bill of exceptions showed that court explained written charge after jury had retired, the court's statement therein that he gave no additional instructions held controlling. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Harral (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 659.

A bill of exception cannot be considered as a part of the statement of facts, nor as a part of the judgment, or as a finding of fact by the court upon which the judgment is based. Texas Midland R. R. v. O'Kelley (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 152.

Art. 2060. [1362] [1360] May refer to statement of facts.

Construction with statement of facts. — Bills of exceptions should be sufficient to disclose the error complained of without aid of the statement of facts, but, where the record contains a statement of facts, the bill should not be construed so strictly as to defeat the purpose of the law requiring bills of exceptions, in view of arts. 2069 and 2060.

Relation to statement of facts. — Reversal of conviction of manslaughter, on the ground that evidence was improperly admitted, held not objectionable as a decision on deductions 732
Art. 2061. [1363] [1361] Charges regarded as approved unless excepted to.

Application in general.—Arts 1973, 1974, 2061, as amended by Acts 1913, c. 58, § 3, relating exclusively to special requested instructions or charges, and not to special issues submitted in the main charge, while arts. 1970 and 1971, as amended by section 3, and also art. 1972, which was neither repealed nor amended by the act of 1913, are applicable to main charges submitting cases on special issues under art. 1984a. Electric Express & Baggage Co. v. Walters, 110 Tex. 496, 221 S. W. 264.

Decisions under prior act.—An instruction that a carrier of passengers must use "all possible care" for a safe conveyance was not merely a defective statement of the law, but was a positive error, and, as such, stood excepted to, under Rev. St. 1579, art. 1561, and no request for a special charge in respect to it was necessary. International & G. N. R. Co. v. Welch, 86 Tex. 203, 24 S. W. 390, 40 Am. St. Rep. 829.

Necessity in general.—See Couch v. Biggers (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1101; notes to art. 2058.

Under this article, as amended, the refusal of a requested instruction could not be considered, although it did not appear to be such an error as had been reserved to the court. Heldenheimer, Strassburger & Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 886; Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Duff (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1169.

Assignment of error "the court erred in failing to give special charges," numbering them, was insufficient because it did not appear that appellant excepted to refusal of court to give such special charges as required by Rev. St. art. 2061. Shuler v. City of Austin (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 445; Beadle v. McCrabb (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 556.

Where the master, in action for injuries to servant when motor car was derailed, failed to except to charge on account of its failure to limit testimony as to prior derailments and submitted no special charge thereon, he could not complain; the testimony being admissible for some purpose. Mackay Telegraph & Cable Co. v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 235.

Reservation and seasonable filing of bills of exceptions is necessary under Acts 324 Leg. c. 88, for review of rulings in giving special requested charges and admitting evidence. Elledge v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 203.

Where the record fails to show that appellant reserved exceptions to the trial court's refusal to give requested instructions, the assignment will not be considered. Mansfield v. Gerding (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 462.

Failure to except to court's refusal to special charge requested was waiver of right to assign the error thereon. Southern Surety Co. v. Hartman (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 579.

Failure to except to the general charge does not preclude court on appeal from considering appellant's objections thereon. Id.

Refusal to give a correct charge in lieu of an erroneous one will not be considered. In the absence of a proper exception and assignment. Texas Midland R. R. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 340.

Under this article, the ruling of the court in giving, refusing, or qualifying instructions will be regarded as approved, unless excepted to in the manner provided by law. Wolf v. Gardner (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 752.

Peremptory Instructions.—Refusal of a motion for a directed verdict, if it could be treated as a request for special charge, is not ground for complaint, where no exception was taken to the ruling. Fretwell v. Pollard (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 183.

To have a peremptory instruction reviewed, the giving of the instruction must be excepted to at the time. Thames v. Cleci (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 196.

Special issues.—Under specific provision of this article, as amended, failure to except to refusal to submit special issues waives objection thereon, and the alleged error cannot be considered on appeal, notwithstanding Acts 35th Leg. c. 177, § 1 (art. 1974), which was not effective at the time of trial. Robinson v. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 396.

Necessity of ruling.—Where record showed that the cause was tried March 22d and judgment on peremptory instruction was rendered the same day, and that plaintiff filed exceptions to the charge on the same day, but failed to show that the court considered them, or acted thereon, assignment of error to the giving of peremptory instruction could not be considered. Mosher v. Dingee (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 102.

Sufficiency of exceptions.—See Boat v. Biggers Bros. (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 1112; notes to art. 2058.

Where requests for special instructions were on three separate pieces of paper, bill of exceptions disclosing but single exception to single action of court was insufficient. In view of Acts 33d Leg. c. 59. Gulf Coast Transp. Co. v. Standard Milling Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 874.

Where the formal exception was stricken out, and the transcript only showed that a charge was presented to the court and refused, and that defendant excepted, as shown in by the indorsement of the judge on the special charge, the notation and authentication are insufficient to constitute an “exception” under the statute. Thomas v. Derrick (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 140.

An exception “to the rulings of the court in not submitting to the jury defendant’s special issues Nos. 1 to 12” is insufficient, under this article, since it fails to show that the record made in the time and manner required by the act. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Churchill (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 155.

Where but one general exception is taken to the action of the court in refusing to give several distinct charges or issues, it is not entitled to consideration on appeal if one or more of such charges or issues should not have been given. Id.

Effect of failure to except.—Under arts. 1971, 1972, 1973, appellant’s failure to except to charge for appellee does not preclude consideration of his objections to refusal of his requested charge on same issue. Brewera v. City of Forney (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 656.

An assignment of error attacking the verdict and judgment cannot be sustained, where appellant did not except to the general charge and did not request special charge covering the particular phase of the case covered by the assignment. Bay Lumber Co. v. Snelling (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 765.

Art. 2062. [1364] [1362] No bill of exceptions where ruling appears of record.

Rulings shown by record.—In suit to foreclose chattel mortgage, failure to allege the value of the property mortgaged to secure the debt is fundamental error apparent of record, requiring reversal, whether or not there was an exception, plea, or other objection to the petition on that ground in the court below. People’s Ice Co. v. Pharris (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 66.

Affidavits in support of motion for new trial are a part of the motion, and under this article, will be considered in connection with the order overruling the motion without a formal bill of exceptions. Counts v. Southwestern Land Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 207.

Under this article, a bill of exceptions was not necessary to reserve an exception to court’s ruling on motion to set aside default judgment, the motion and the ruling thereon being a part of the record proper. Id.

Necessity of allowance and signature by judge.—An assignment of error, which predicated error upon a state of facts shown by a bill of exceptions not approved by the trial court, could not be considered. Closner v. Sprague v. Acker (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 421.

Under statutes, requiring that a bill of exceptions be taken to the refusal of requested special instructions, and that such bill be authenticated, and allowance or approval shown, where proof thereof is not of record the alleged error cannot be reviewed. Planters’ Oil Co. v. Hill Printing & Stationery Co. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 192.

A purporting bill of exceptions showing that objections were presented to the court before the charge was read to the jury, which is not approved by the judge or authenticated in any manner, but merely filed by the clerk, is not sufficient under art. 1971, to present objections to instructions for review. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Cook (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 539.

Sufficiency of approval.—Refusal to submit special issues cannot be reviewed without a bill of exceptions under arts. 2061, 2062, article 2058 being controlling; and the mere fact that the court's indorsement upon objections and exceptions recites that a bill was

Effect of approval.—A statement in a bill of exception that objection was made to evidence on certain grounds is not a statement approved by the trial court that those Presumption as to filing.—Under Rev. St. 1878, art. 1364, requiring bills of exceptions to be filed during the term, and within 10 days after the trial is concluded, where the bill of exceptions was contained in a statement of facts filed during the term, in the absence of any showing, it would be presumed that it was filed within the 10 days, though the statement of facts appeared to have been filed after that time. Electra v.

Duty to file or qualify.—That the trial court did not concur with the facts as stated in the bill of exceptions tendered is not ground for final rejection of the bill, but the court should qualify it to state the facts as he understands them, or should prepare quested and refused than the one alleged on appeal, appellant's counsel may not contradict the court's qualification and thus vary the facts by their ex parte affidavit. Richley

Though the trial judge qualified the bill of exceptions with the statement that he had no recollection as to any request that he file written findings of fact and conclusions of law, yet, where the qualification admitted that such request was made, the fact of making must be accepted on appeal. Irwin v. State Nat. Bank of Ft. Worth (Civ. App.)
224 S. W. 246.

Where counsel refused to agree to the qualifications of his bills by the trial judge, but, after the trial judge had marked them refused, had them filed by the clerk, whereupon the judge again inserted the qualifications and had the bills referred, accused is not entitled to have the bills considered either as they were originally drawn, or as qualified with the changes so made. 2063-2067, made applicable to criminal prosecutions by Code Cr.

Mandamus.—Under arts. 1607, 2065-2067, the Court of Civil Appeals cannot by mandamus, upon application therefor by plaintiff in error, supervise the making of the bill of exceptions by instructing the lower court what to put in the bill. Rhoades v. El Bystanders' bill—In general.—Though jurors are not "bystanders" at the trial of a case by the ordinary meaning of that term, they can sign a bystanders' bill of exceptions to acts and comments by the court and the argument of attorneys thereon, since as to those matters they are impartial. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 252.

The fact that jurors, because of their situation and duties, could not sign a certificate as bystanders, authenticating a bill of exception at the time the occurrence took place, does not prevent them from signing such bill as bystanders after their discharge.

Bystanders' bills filed in April after trial had in November, which were not verified by bystanders or any one else, and which were filed after adjournment of the term at which cause was tried, cannot be considered. Scheps v. Giles (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 348.

This article, in using the term "bystanders" does not include parties to the suit or their attorneys; "bystander" meaning one who stands near, one not concerned with the business transacted. Walker v. State (Cr. App.) 227 S. W. 305.

A defendant and his attorneys are not such "bystanders" as the law contemplates, so that bills of exceptions verified by them are not entitled to consideration as bystanders' bills. Hunt v. State (Cr. App.) 229 S. W. 866.

When allowed.—Trial court, in homicide case, probably abused discretion in requiring accused's counsel to whisper his objections regarding prosecuting attorney's misconduct, since Const. art. 1, § 10, guarantees a speedy public trial and right to be heard by counsel, and a bystanders' bill of exceptions could not be made, pursuant to arts. 2066, 2067, in case court and attorneys failed to agree upon objections or ruling so made. Weige v. State, 81 Cr. R. 476, 196 S. W. 524.

This article contemplates the prior filing of a bill by the court as provided in article 2066, but does not deny the right to prove by bystanders' bills of exceptions refused by the court, on the date they are prepared in lieu of the bill as directed by the statute. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 283.

Time of preparation, verification and filing.—Bystanders' bill, filed after the trial, is in time, under this article. Williams v. State, 84 Cr. R. 131, 205 S. W. 942.

Where a bill of exceptions was filed within the term, but was retained by the judge until after the term, and then rejected without a new bill prepared, by the judge in lieu thereof, a bystanders' bill, filed thereafter within the time fixed by the court under the authority of art. 2073, for filing bills of exceptions and statements of fact, was in time. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 283.

Though originally a bill of exceptions authenticated by bystanders must have been made at the time of the occurrence, the statutes, extending the time for filing the bill if approved by the court, also extended the time for filing the bystanders' bill. Id.

Signing and verifying.—Bostick v. State, 81 Cr. R. 404, 412, 195 S. W. 862, 863; Ex parte Bostick, 81 Cr. R. 411, 196 S. W. 631.

Art. 2068. [1379] [1377] Statement of facts, how prepared.

1. Not repealed.—Arts. 2068, 2069, relating to statement of facts on appeal, were not repealed or modified by act providing for appointment of official court stenographers, or subsequent acts relative to their duties and preparation of statement of facts by them when requested. Dugan v. Smith (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 548.

11. Decisions not reviewable without statement—Rulings on pleadings.—Rulings on the sufficiency of the pleadings other than those subject to a general demurrer, such as the overruling of special exceptions, are not reviewable in the absence of a statement of fact or findings of fact. Spitzer v. Smith (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 595.

Misjoinder of defendants and causes of action is a matter properly raised by special exception to the pleadings, and not reviewable in the absence of a statement of facts or findings of fact. Id.

In the absence of a statement of facts, assignments of error, relating to rulings on special exceptions, cannot be reviewed. Ward v. Graham (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 294.

Where petition showed cause of action for amount within jurisdiction of court, and where judgment was for an amount within the court's jurisdiction, failure to sustain plea to jurisdiction held not error, in the absence of a statement of facts and bills of exceptions. Mach v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 275.

In a landlord's action for tenant's breach of lease, if defendant's pleadings were true, he was entitled to show his damages by reason of plaintiff's false statement inducing the lease, and the court, having stricken this part of the answer, an objection that there is no statement of facts, exceptions to such ruling cannot be considered, is not well taken. C. R. Miller & Bro. v. Nigro (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 611.

12. Denial of continuance.—Where there was no statement of facts in the record making it appear that the denial of a continuance was error, the matter cannot be reviewed. Martin v. Martin (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 695.

13. Interlocutory proceedings.—Denial of injunctive relief held not to be disturbed in the absence of a statement of facts, where allegations of petition were denied by answer. Trimble v. Hawkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 224.
Though the record showed no appointment of a guardian ad litem, etc., for minor defendant, held that no fundamental error appeared, reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts, where the judgment of partition rendered two years later recited that another defendant, a minor, appeared by guardian ad litem, and all of the other defendants by attorney. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 242.

Assignment of error to the dissolving of temporary injunction against opening of road because the road judgment was void, held to present no question for review in the absence of a statement of facts. Crenshaw v. Montague County (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 569.

14. Admissibility of evidence.—In the absence of a statement of facts, rulings upon admission and exclusion of evidence will not be revised, unless it manifestly appears from the bill of exceptions and the record that such ruling was both erroneous and prejudicial to the complaining party. Pruitt v. Blesi (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 714; Robinson v. Robinson's Estate (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 92.

Assignments of error attacking the charge and the admissibility of evidence cannot be reviewed without statement of facts, unless the necessary facts otherwise appear, however difficult it might be to conceive any legal support for the action of the lower court. Robinson v. Robinson's Estate (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 92.

15. Weight and sufficiency of evidence.—Assignments, complaining that findings are not sustained by evidence, must be overruled, in the absence of a statement of facts. Burnett v. Summerour (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1012.

Where there is no statement of facts in the record, appellant is in no position to say that the judgment was not supported by the evidence. Leyhe v. McNamara (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 450.

17. Questions depending on facts.—Where there is no statement of facts in the record, assignments of error dependent upon the facts cannot be considered on appeal. Texas Electric Ry. v. Gonzales (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 347.

18. Submission of issues.—In the absence of a statement of facts, the Court of Civil Appeals cannot say that the issues made by the pleading and the evidence were not fully submitted. Jemison v. Estes (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 797.

19. Assignment of error to the giving of, or refusal to give, the jury special exceptions to the giving or refusing of instructions which can be considered as such, the court on appeal cannot determine whether there is merit in complaint that trial court erred in giving and refusing instructions. Billingsley v. Texas Midland R. R. (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 408.

20. Conclusions of law and fact.—There being no statement of facts with record, or bills of exceptions therein, assignments complaining of findings of fact of trial court, or refusal to find facts requested, will not be considered. Pyck v. Giddings (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 230.

21. Verdict or judgment.—Where the jury's findings showed that one who had celebrated a ceremonial marriage with deceased received more in rent out of his personal property than she had paid in securing title to certain lands in which she was given no share, held, that finding of judgment did not disclose fundamental error, reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 242.

A decree and proceedings in partition held not to show fundamental error, reviewable in absence of bill of exceptions and statement of facts, on the theory that the court in its first decree judicially determined that the land was susceptible of partition, and thereafter in conformity to the report of commissioners ordered it sold, and thus violated art. 6101. Id.

In an action to foreclose vendor's lien it cannot be said on appeal that the direction to pay the excess to the "defendants" was not proper, where there was no pleading between the defendants and the only allegation as to the ownership of the land was an allegation in plaintiff's petition that part of the tracts had been sold by the vendee to the other defendant, and where there is no statement of facts with the record. Clark v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 231.

Although record fails to show that map was attached to findings of fact, where there is a complete map among papers which were attached to statement of facts, and both parties rely on such map, it will be considered by court on appeal, there being no dispute concerning fact that it is a part of statement of facts. Summit Place Co. v. Terry (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 245.

In a suit involving the ownership of oil, petroleum, and gas in a tract of land, a judgment vesting title in plaintiff was not shown to be erroneous by a statement of facts which showed that a deed excepted certain rights without showing what the exceptions were. Lupe v. Luebbers (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 302.

28. Setting forth objections.—Assignment complaining that the court required defendant to answer question cannot be reviewed, where there was no bill of exception showing any objection by defendants. W. J. & F. J. Powers v. James (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 382.

29. Setting forth evidence in general.—Where answer to question is not shown in assignment of error, and statement of facts or bill of exceptions, to which reference is made, contains certain testimony of the witness, but does not show the question complained of, no error is presented. McAllen v. Wood (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 458.

Where there was no bill of exceptions, and no evidence was introduced, and statement of facts did not show that affidavits filed had been introduced in evidence, to show that the jury took evidence into the jury room, such matter cannot be reviewed under art. 2021. Morales v. Cline (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 764.

Where statement of facts fails to show any testimony given by a witness on the question of reasonable time for shipment of stock as complained of in a bill of exception, assignment that court erred in overruling objection to question, held not sustainable. Ft. Worth & S. Ry. Co. v. Hasse (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 448.

37. Sufficiency of statement in general.—Under this article, authorizing parties to agree to a written statement of facts, such a statement, when duly made and approved by the trial judge and filed in time, is sufficient. Galviz v. State, 82 Cr. R. 377, 198 S. W. 945.

38. Execution and approval—in general.—Where purported statement of facts is not signed by counsel or approved by trial judge, appellate court cannot consider it for any purpose. Trimble v. Hawkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 272.

39. Signature of parties or attorneys.—Paper purporting to be a statement of facts and signed by the trial judge and appellee's counsel, held to be treated as a statement of facts though not signed by appellant's counsel. Bigham v. Stamps (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 775.

A statement of facts, certified by the judge, may be considered, though it is signed by counsel for one party only, there being a presumption that it was properly certified. Schelmler v. Stephens, 60 Tex. 419.

40. Approval and signature of judge.—A purported statement of facts, not approved by the trial court, as required by arts. 2068-2070, will not be considered on appeal. Texas Electric Ry. v. Gonzales (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 347.

Court's special finding, corroborated by decree that money tendered by plaintiff had been deposited in court, will control over statement of facts that shows no money was deposited, since trial court knew judicially whether money was in court. Mission Auto Co. v. Aldape (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 223.

Suit to set aside judgment being a direct attack on the judgment, under the record as presented the Court of Civil Appeals is not at liberty to go behind the statement of facts approved below, and to assume or presume there may have been some other and different citation, than the one shown in the record. Rousset v. Settegast (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 218.

53. Conflict with bill of exceptions.—An assignment of error complaining of the admission of a deposition will be overruled where it appears from statement of facts agreed to by appellant that the deposition was put in evidence by him, though the bill of exceptions impliedly states that it was offered by appellee. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Storey (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 350.

The statement of facts showing that a witness' testimony was rejected will prevail over a bill of exceptions objecting that witness was incompetent and that his testimony was admitted. Carvel v. Kusel (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 941.

Where a bill of exceptions seems to show that a question and answer were read to the jury, but under the statement of facts approved by the court it appears that they were not read, the assignment of error in admitting the evidence need not be considered. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Harris Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 256.

In case of conflict between the bill of exceptions and the statement of facts, the latter, when agreed to by the counsel and approved by the court, will control. Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 1652.

54. Documents considered in connection with statement.—On appeal in a tax judgment case the Court of Civil Appeals will not consider a city map, and assertions, not contained in statement of facts, designed to show that city contained no such block or street as tax assessment described. Garza v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 488.

56. Amendment or correction of statement.—The statement of facts is a part of the record made by the district court, and motions affecting such record and to make it

62. Striking from record—Grounds in general.—Statements of facts will not be stricken out, though not bearing clerk's file mark, when accompanied by certificate that it is exact copy and duplicate original of the statement filed. Drillhart v. Beever (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 973.

63. Effect of absence of statement—in general.—In absence of statement of facts, failure of trial judge to file findings and conclusions, as required by art. 1989, requires reversal of judgment. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Tuggle (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 910. Appeal will not be dismissed on the ground that there is no statement of facts, but will be dismissed so that court may ascertain if any of the assignments of error can be sustained without such statement. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kriegel (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 489.

Where neither party has filed a statement of facts or briefs, the case will be dismissed as want of prosecution. Burnett v. Foster (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 574.

67. — Conclusiveness of findings.—Where no statement of facts accompanies record, trial court's finding that services were performed in a certain county is conclusive upon appeal. Walker v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 713.

Where the court made findings of fact and conclusions of law, and there was no statement of facts in the record, the Court of Appeals can look alone to the findings of fact to determine the rights of the parties. Carter v. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 239.

In the absence of statement of facts, the court's findings of fact are conclusive on appeal. Finch v. Wood (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 888.

In absence of statement of facts, it will be presumed on appeal that evidence supported court's findings. Frick v. Giddings (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 330; Woytek v. King (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1061; Swancy v. Finch (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 422.

In the absence of statement of facts, presumption was introduced sufficient to support all material allegations of plaintiff's petition, plaintiff having secured judgment. Mother Mary Angela v. Battle (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1030; Phillips v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 243.

Where there was no statement of facts, trial court's findings of plaintiff's ownership held not subject to construction as based on plaintiff's mere oral testimony that she "owned" the property, as it would be presumed that it was based on oral evidence of possession. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 1117.

Appellant being required to show error, it will be presumed, in absence of statement of facts, in favor of instruction on weight of evidence, that fact was undisputed. Hegman v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 265.

Where, in granting prayer for temporary restraining order in action to annul a marriage, the court stated that the petition and proof had been considered, allegations that marriage in another state was invalid must be taken as true on appeal where there was no statement of facts. Thompson v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 175.

In the absence of a statement of facts or findings of fact by the court, or a proper bill of exceptions made, a judgment or findings made taken on appeal as proved. Nease v. Broadwater Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 692.

Where an answer was filed and hearing had, resulting in judgment for plaintiff, and no statement of facts was brought up on appeal, it must be presumed the evidence supported plaintiff's allegations and did not support the pleadings of defense, and the judgment must be affirmed if plaintiff's petition states a cause of action. Live Oak County v. West (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 965.

There being no bill of exceptions or statement of facts, it will be presumed that appellant had due notice of the purpose to amend judgment during term. Mahan v. Kyle (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 302.

Where there was no statement of facts and plaintiffs were denied relief on the ground of the pendency of another suit in the federal bankruptcy court, it will be presumed in favor of the trial court's holding that there was sufficient evidence that the bankruptcy court had jurisdiction. Spencer v. Burk (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1110.

In the absence of a statement of facts, and in view of a recitation in the judgment and in overruling the motion for new trial that evidence was heard, the appellate court will presume that the evidence failed to support appellant's motion for new trial. Dumas v. Esalley (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 866.

Where there was no exception to petition and pleas of intervention against the sureties on school building contractor's bond for failure to allege that the certificate required by arts. 2904n, 2904o, was procured, and no allegation that such certificate was not procured, it will be presumed, on appeal without statement of facts, in support of the court's finding, that such certificate was procured. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Burt's Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 699.

There being no statement of facts, it will be presumed that the court in its findings set out all the evidence on the subject before it material on the issue. Daugherty v. Manning (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 983.
Ordinarily, it will be presumed on appeal, in the absence of a statement of facts, that every fact necessary to sustain the verdict and judgment which is responsive to and follows the relief sought by the complaint or petition was proven, but it will not be presumed that facts were proven, which will sustain verdict and judgment for relief not sought, or to which the parties were not entitled under the broadest construction of the pleading. Patten v. Smith (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1634.

Where a statement fails to show that the court ever acted on special exceptions to the petition, and the record is itself silent on the subject, the presumption must prevail on appeal that the court did not act on the exceptions. Modern Order of Praetorians v. Nelmann (Civ. App.) 255 S. W. 438.

In the absence of a statement of facts, it must be presumed that the sum found by the trial court, in a suit relative to taxation, as the reserve liabilities of plaintiff dom­estic insurance company, consisted of outstanding policies, which art. 4764, declares shall constitute the reserve. City of Waco v. Texas Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 245.

In the absence of a statement of facts to the contrary, the appellate court will re­gard every finding made as proven, and will indulge in every presumption necessary to support the finding and judgment. Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. Coonrod (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1099.

69. Affirmance of Judgment.—A judgment must be affirmed where all the as­signments of error must be tested by the facts, and no statement of facts was filed. Hamilton v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 17.

In absence of statement of facts, and where no error is apparent on face of record, judgment will be affirmed. Lutcher v. Fuller (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 553.

Where the statement of facts and bills of exception have been stricken, and the assignments of error are such as cannot be considered without a statement of facts, a cause must be affirmed, where the trial court had jurisdiction and rendered a judgment authorized by the pleadings. Cook v. Trinity County Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 214.

Upon a motion for affirmance of judgment for failure to file statement of facts with­in required time, that court reporter failed to transcribe testimony in form required by art. 1924 did not excuse appellant, where neither attempt to mandamus reporter nor to make statement of facts from memory under art. 2065 was made. Pruitt v. Blesi (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 714.

On appeal from order dissolving temporary injunction, where there is no statement of facts and no information as to any evidence which may have been heard and con­sidered except the affidavits filed, the court will affirm order of dissolution, unless the facts shown by the petition and motion to dissolve disclosed order to be erroneous. Obeis & Harris v. Speed (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 316.

Failure to file statement of facts is not alone ground for affirmance: and, if defen­dant in error desires an affirmance, he must file briefs in accordance with rule 42 for the Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiv), and where he fails to do so the court can only dismiss the writ of error for want of prosecution. Edwards v. Holder (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 450.

70. Substitutes for statement of facts.—Where the attorneys and the judge could not agree upon a correct statement of the evidence, evidence not brought to the court on appeal except by statement in the appellant's brief could not be considered. Rossetti v. Benavides (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 208.

Where no statement of facts has been filed, Court of Civil Appeals may examine bill of exceptions to ascertain facts upon which court decided question of venue. Sanders v. George M. Hester Cotton Co. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 269.

A bill of exception cannot be considered as a part of the statement of facts, nor as part of the exhibit, as a part of the finding of facts from which the judgment is based. Texas Midland R. R. v. O'Kelley (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 152.

The appellate court can only consider evidence incorporated into the statement of facts, and cannot consider an abstract book which by agreement was sent to the court for trial. Cochran v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 21.

Where in the transcript certain documents appear which purport to be the records of a former suit, but which are not agreed to by counsel, nor approved by the court as a true statement of the evidence introduced, such documents cannot be given consider­ation as a statement of facts. Scaling v. Collins (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 624.

Where no statement of facts appeared in the record, instruments incorporated in the transcript which were not agreed to by attorneys, nor approved by the court as state­ments of fact, nor attached to the pleadings in the trial court, cannot be considered. Id.
The appellate court is confined to the statement of facts and cannot consider evidence from any other source. McLendon Hardware Co. v. J. A. Hill & Son (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 825.

Testimony from the evidence adduced on motion for new trial and not from the cer­tified statement of facts on appeal cannot properly be considered by the Court of Civil Appeals in testing the accuracy of the judgment entered. Kerwin v. Mead (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 677.

71. Reversal because of inability to secure statement.—On a motion to reverse a judgment of conviction because of failure to secure a statement of the facts adduced at the trial, held that, diligent search being shown by defendant to procure the statement of facts, an appellate court will not reverse the judgment. Alstrop v. State, 31 Cr. R. 467, 20 S. W. 999.

That the official reporter had lost the shorthand notes which he was required to take and preserve under arts. 1924 and 1923, so that he could not prepare a statement of facts, and that the attorney who represented appellant had moved from the county, do not require the citation in error was served more than four months after final judgment, and appellant made no attempt to prepare a written statement of facts under art. 2068, or to secure an agreed statement of facts under art. 2112, or to reason ably apply for proper process to compel the reporter to file transcript of his notes or substitute them as provided under arts. 2167 and 2168. Crenshaw v. Montague County (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 569.

Art. 2069. [1380] [1378] When the parties disagree.

Cited. City of Galveston v. Dazet (Sup.) 16 S. W. 20.

1/2. Repeal.—Arts. 2068, 2069, were not repealed or modified by act providing for appointment of official court stenographers, or subsequent acts relative to their duties and preparation of statement of facts by them when requested. Dugan v. Smith (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 548.

2. Statement of facts prepared by judge—Duty to prepare.—Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1327, 1379, requiring the judge, on a motion for a new trial, to file a statement of facts, if the parties disagree, the failure to file such statement within the time required is error. Collins v. Kay, 69 Tex. 366, 6 S. W. 312.

Where request for court to make statement of facts was not presented within 30 days granted for filing, held, court could not be required to make statement, in view of art. 2073. Hoff v. Clark (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 451.

5. Presumption of disagreement.—Though it is the better practice for the judge properly to certify that the parties failed to agree, under Rev. St. 1856, art. 1380, when the statement is signed by the judge, the presumption exists that the parties failed to agree, and the statement of facts is not insufficient. McGlasson v. Fiorella (Civ. App.) 258 S. W. 254.

8/4. Presentation of statement by party.—Where on failure of the parties to agree as to the statement of facts counsel to plaintiff in error presented to the trial judge within time as extended a statement of facts bearing their signed certification that it was a true and correct statement of facts in the case, there was a sufficient compliance with art. 2073. Martin v. Martin (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 696.

21. Reversal for failure to prepare and file.—Where the statement of facts is stricken out because not properly authenticated by the trial judge, appellant cannot, on the ground that he was deprived of the statement through no fault of his own, have the judgment reversed, under art. 2074, requiring the judge to file a statement of facts if the parties disagree as to their statement. Railway Co. v. Bell (App.) 16 S. W. 598.

Where appellant exercised proper diligence to obtain a complete statement of facts, but the parties were unable to agree and the statement presented by the court was incomplete and did not contain facts justifying the direction of a verdict, it will not be presumed that a complete statement would have justified the judgment, but appellant is entitled to a reversal. Shumaker v. Byrd (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 817.

Under art. 2073, where the parties fail to agree on a statement of facts, and the party appealing or bringing error presents his statement to the trial judge and requests him to prepare and file a statement of facts it is the duty of the judge to do so, and, if he fails or refuses, the appellant is entitled to have the case reversed. Martin v. Martin (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 695.

22. Costs.—Where statement of facts is prepared by trial court pursuant to this article, parties having failed to agree, there can be no charge against either party for such statement taxed as costs. Dugan v. Smith (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 548.

Art. 2070. Statement of facts prepared from transcript of official reporter, when and how, etc.; in duplicate; original sent up; reporter to prepare on request, etc.; fees.

2. Does not repeal other articles.—Arts. 2068, 2069, were not repealed or modified by act providing for appointment of official court stenographers, or subsequent acts relative to their duties and preparation of statement of facts by them when requested. Dugan v. Smith (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 548.

11. Preparing statement from stenographer's report—Execution and approval.—Statement of facts prepared under this article, by the official stenographer must be approved by the trial judge, and will not be considered unless so approved. Texas Portland Cement Co. v. Lumberoff (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 366.

14. Condensation.—A statement of facts containing 40 pages, 10 per cent. of which consists of questions and answers, and much of which is unnecessary repetition and testimony as to undisputed facts, is in violation of this article and district court rule 78 (142 S. W. xxii), requiring statement to be condensed, and will be stricken. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Kriegl (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 485.

Superfluous and unnecessary words should not be inserted and statements of witnesses should not be prefixed with the words “as to,” in view of this article. Vogt v. Guild (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 343.

22. Sending up original statement.—The copying of statement of facts into the transcript of the proceedings does not constitute compliance with statute requiring original statement of facts to be sent to appellate court. City of Pearshall v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 327.

23. — Appeals from county courts.—Rule that a statement of facts should not be included in the transcript, but the original statement of facts set up with the agreement of counsel thereto and approval of the judge, applies in appeals from the county court to the Court of Civil Appeals. Scaling v. Collins (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 621.

Art. 2071.

Note.—Superseded by Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 47, § 1, amending section 8 of ch. 119, Acts 1911 (as amended by Acts 1917, ch. 189, as amended by Acts 1917, 1st C. S., ch. 27, as amended by Acts 1918, 4th C. S., ch. 79, and as amended by Acts 1919, ch. 111), so as to read as set forth in art. 1925, ante. The amendatory act makes no provision for a poverty affidavit. But see art. 1925b, ante, making special provision in this respect as to the 3d, 39th, and 50th judicial districts.

Art. 2073. Time for preparing and filing statements of fact and bills of exceptions; judge may extend, provided, etc.; when parties fail to agree on statement, etc.; proviso.

1/2. Application in general.—This article does not apply to testimony taken on motion for new trial for misconduct of jury, which must be preserved by bill of exceptions or statement of facts filed in term time. Smith v. Texas Power & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 119.

Within this article, removal of a case from a trial court to an appellate court by writ of error is a method of "appeal," and the time for filing the statement of facts may be extended. Martin v. Martin (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 695.

5. Time for filing—in general.—A statement of facts filed within 12 months is in time, where the case is brought to the appellate court for review by writ of error. Brillhart v. Beever (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 973.

This article does not apply to testimony taken on motion for new trial for misconduct of jury, which must be preserved by bill of exceptions or statement of facts filed in term time. Smith v. Texas Power & Light Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 119.

Under art. 2073, a bill of exceptions to the court's failure to file findings could not be filed before adjournment, and was therefore properly filed after adjournment. Lester v. Oldham (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 675.

Appellate court may consider refusal of plea of privilege, although appellant did not prepare and have approved and file a formal bill of exceptions at term same as acted upon; it being sufficient that appellant prepared and had approved and filed statement of facts and upon final trial prepared and had approved and filed a formal bill of exceptions. Trevathan v. G. M. Hall & Son (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 447.

A ruling which would have been reviewable under proper bill of exceptions filed to the term at which it was made is clearly not reviewable under a bill of exceptions filed to a succeeding term. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Webber, 108 Tex. 383, 210 S. W. 677.

Where a bill of exceptions was filed within the term, but was retained by the judge until after the term, and then rejected without a new bill prepared by the judge in lieu thereof, a "bystanders" bill, filed thereafter within the time fixed by the court under the authority of this article was in time. Alamo Iron Works v. Prado (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 282.

6. Filing within time for filing transcript.—Where a statement of facts was filed in the appellate court more than eight months after final judgment, a motion to strike out bills of exceptions and statement of facts held to be overruled, under this article, as amended, and article 2073, as amended, since it is legal to file a statement of facts as long as it is legal to file a transcript in an appellate court, and the time for filing bills of exception being within the legal limit or that of extensions. City of Aransas Pass v. Eureka Fire Hose Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 330.

Under art. 1608 and this article, where the transcript was filed as required, a statement of facts filed before the expiration of the time for filing the transcript was filed in time, though not presented to opposing counsel, or to the court within 100 days after the court's adjournment. Early-Foster Co. v. Mid-Tex Mills (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 1117.
9. Extension of time—Time of granting extension.—Bill of exceptions filed nearly year after judgment in district court cannot be considered; no order extending time appearing to have been granted within 30-day period allowed for filing of bill of exceptions. Cottoniere v. White, Jackson & Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 906.

12. Excuses for failure to file in time.—Statutes prescribing time for filing bills of exceptions and statements of fact are mandatory, and it is no defense to motion to strike that trial court and attorneys were mistaken as to time, or that appellant was misled by opposing counsel. St. Louis, Southwestern Ry. Co. v. McCord (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 525.

That the regular court reporter was absent from the state, with approval of the court, and engaged in private work much of the time between the trial of the cause and the motion to dismiss appeal for want of statement of facts, held not to excuse plaintiff's failure to compel transcription and filing of testimony. Pruitt v. Blesi (Civ. App.) 304 S. W. 714.

13. Effect of failure to file in time.—In general.—Bills of exception, not filed in time, cannot be considered valid parts of the record by any waiver, as by failure to file motion to strike out bill of exceptions within the time prescribed by Court of Appeals rule No. 8 (142 S. W. 21). St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Vick (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 217.

14. — Not considered.—Bills of exceptions not filed within the time allowed therefore cannot be considered on appeal. Edged v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 203; Byrne v. Texas Lumber & Loan Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 606; Camp v. Gourley (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 671; Smith v. Smith (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 275. Where a statement of facts on appeal was not filed with the transcript, and leave was not obtained to file it subsequently, it will not be considered. Owens v. Barden (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 322.

Document delivered to clerk of court on appeal will not be considered as a statement of facts, where not filed in the court below within 30 days from the date the citation in error was served, as required by arts. 1008, 2073. Billingsley v. Texas Midland R. R. (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 408.

A bill of exceptions not filed within the time prescribed by law cannot be considered. Poole v. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 706.

15. — Striking out.—Bills of exception, filed long after the time granted for filing, cannot be considered by the Court of Civil Appeals, and will be stricken out. Carwile v. Frazier (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 781.

Bills of exceptions filed more than 30 days after adjournment where no order extending time for filing has been made, will be stricken from the record upon appellee's motion made within 30 days after filing of transcript in court of appeals, in view of this article. Allen v. Berkemier (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 647.

30. Decisions under prior acts—Excuses for failure to file in time.—Where an attorney neglected to file a statement of facts on appeal, and, in excuse of the neglect, files an affidavit stating that he prepared and signed the statement, and delivered it to his opponent's counsel, with the request that he get the approval of the trial judge, but affidavit is denied by a counter-affidavit of the opponent's counsel, the latter neutralizes the former; and, the burden of proof being on the party guilty of the neglect, his excuse fails. Spencer v. State, 25 Tex. App. 585, 8 S. W. 648.

Under the Texas act of March 8, 1887 (Gen. Laws, p. 17), appellant is not excused by sickness, when it appears that he was in court at the time, and the statement was agreed to in the presence of the trial judge. Id.

Under Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1277, 1278, where the court adjourned two days after conviction and a statement was filed nearly a month thereafter, the delay was not excused because a statement mailed by defendant's counsel to the district attorney six days after adjournment was on account of delayed mails, ten days in reaching him. Suit v. State, 20 Tex. App. 318, 17 S. W. 455.

32. Effect of failure to file in time.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1314, requiring a bill of exceptions to be presented and filed during the term, this court cannot consider a bill of exceptions filed after the term, though it is included in a statement of facts settled within the time allowed for that purpose. Schaub v. Dallas Brewing Co., 80 Tex. 634, 16 S. W. 429.

A mandamus to compel a county judge to certify a bill of exceptions stating that he failed to comply with Rev. St. 1879, art. 1306, relative to admonishing the jury, will not issue, where no exception was reserved at the time, as required by art. 1358, or presented within 10 days after the close of the trial, as allowed by art. 1363. Guff, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Lockhart (App.) 18 S. W. 649.

Art. 2074. [1382] [1379a] Statement of facts not filed in time, when considered by court.

Art. 2075. Time for judge to file conclusions, etc.

Time for filing.—Where a case is tried before the court without a jury, the court must file its findings of fact and conclusions of law within 10 days after adjournment. Mueller v. Spencer (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 223.

Since this article provides that the judge shall have 10 days after adjournment in which to prepare his findings of fact and conclusions of law, it is not error for the court to decline to make and file his findings before entry of judgment. Wilson v. Crawford (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1104.

Excuse for failure to file in time.—It is no excuse, for failure of trial court to prepare and file findings of fact and conclusions of law, as required by this article, that appellant asked time to prepare and file statement of facts. Anderson v. Lockhart (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 218.

Filing after time allowed.—Findings of fact and conclusions of law not filed within the time required by law cannot be considered on appeal. Owen v. Smith (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1171.

Where the findings of fact and conclusions of law were omitted from the transcript, and appellants and appellee agreed to have them incorporated in a supplemental transcript, but the findings and conclusions were not filed within the time prescribed by statute, they are not before the Court of Civil Appeals. Patton v. Texas Pac. Coal & Oil Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 857.

Reversal for failure to file in time.—Where issues of fact are raised, failure of the trial judge after due request to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, as required by arts. 1980, 2075, is reversible error. Beavers v. Supreme Home of Ancient Order of Pilgrims (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 718; Lester v. Oldham (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 572; Stryker v. Van Velzer (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 674; Marvin v. Kenison Bros. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 821.

In shipper's action, where the evidence was conflicting and the court dismissed one defendant and found for the other, its failure to file its findings of fact and conclusions of law, after due request, under this article, prevented appellant from fairly presenting the appeal, and was ground for reversal. Stewart & Threadgill v. El Paso & S. W. Co. (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 584.

For failure of trial court to prepare and file findings of fact and conclusions of law, as required by this article, preventing assignments of error thereon, there being several affirmative defenses, calling for findings and conclusions, judgment will be reversed. Anderson v. Lockhart (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 218.

Where a proper statement of facts accompanies the record on appeal, and it is manifest therefrom that no other judgment could have been properly rendered, the failure to file findings and conclusions in 10 days under request in accordance with this article, is not cause for reversal. Gerhart v. Moore (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 876.

Art. 2076. Where term of office expires before adjournment, etc.

Power of trial judge's successor.—Proposed bills of exception and statement of facts did not become part of record by signature of successor of president judge, who was living at time bills were presented for approval. C. R. C. Law List Co. v. Rowe (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 781.

Article 2078. [1383] [1380] Appeals, etc., to the courts of civil appeals, allowed in what cases.

1. Appeals and writs of error—Nature and origin.—Unless granted by the Constitution, right of appeal itself is but a privilege, not an irrevocable right, and may be restricted, changed, and regulated by Legislature at discretion. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Blair, 18 Tex. 434, 19 S. W. 502, 1153.

There is no such thing as a right of appeal, except as the same may be conferred by the Constitution or legislative enactment; and, being wholly derived therefrom, such right moves only in channels fixed by such legal direction. Ex parte Bennett, 85 S. 315, 211 S. W. 924.

2. — Statutory provisions and remedies.—The Legislature cannot take away the right to appeal given by the Constitution, although it may enact rules of procedure limiting the exercise of the right, and may increase, diminish, or change, civil or criminal jurisdiction. City of Ft. Worth v. Capps Land Co. (Civ. App.) 265 S. W. 491.

3. — Proper mode of review.—Under art. 5065, a decision in an election contest can be reviewed only by appeal, and a writ of error to review the same must be dismissed. Frank v. Sufford (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 283.

Under the statute, the Court of Civil Appeals has jurisdiction to review on writ or error the action of the county court in overruling defendant's plea of privilege, the right given by art. 1003, as amended by Acts 58th Leg. (1977) c. 176, to appeal from judgment sustaining or overruling such a plea, not being exclusive. Bennett v. Rose Mfg. Co. (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 143.

4. — Successive proceedings for review.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1390, the perfecting of an appeal, which is never prosecuted, does not deprive a party of his right to a writ of error, especially where defendant in error, although entitled to an affirmance of the judgment, fails to ask for it during the term to which the appeal is returnable, and the appeal itself in no way obstructed his enforcement of the judgment. Thompson v. Anderson, 82 Tex. 257, 18 S. W. 153.

An appeal in error will not be dismissed because it is prosecuted after the dismissal of an appeal from the same judgment where the judgment was not affirmed on the appeal. Brillhart v. Beever (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 972.

6/2. — Appeal from part of judgment.—Where judgment decrees foreclosure of lien on land claimed as a homestead for only a portion of the amount of the judgment, an appeal may be taken from only so much of the judgment as affects the land claimed as a homestead. Slaughter v. Texas Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 556.

7. Grounds of appellate jurisdiction—in general.—Jurisdiction cannot be conferred on the appellate court to review by writ of error, by waiver or estopped on defendants in error. Saner-Ragley Lumber Co. v. Spivey (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 818.

8. — Existence of actual controversy.—Where pending appeal from an order refusing to enjoin defendants from paying money and before the filing of the appeal bond, the money was paid, the appellate court cannot entertain the appeal. Flood v. City of Dallas (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 194.

Where the subject-matter of the litigation has ceased to exist, an appeal will not be entertained merely to determine a question of costs. Id.

9. — Jurisdiction of lower court.—Jurisdiction in county court on appeal from justice was necessary to give Court of Civil Appeals jurisdiction on appeal from judgment of county court. Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Independent Fruit Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 594.

It is the duty of appellate courts to pass upon the jurisdiction of the trial court to render the judgment, whether the question is raised or not. Werner v. Needham (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 213.

Where it appears from face of petition for injunction in county court that such court had no jurisdiction over subject-matter of suit, Court of Civil Appeals has no jurisdiction over appeal from judgment of county court. Luhning v. Scott (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 465.

If county court had no jurisdiction, Court of Civil Appeals is without appellate jurisdiction. Baker v. Cole (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 411.

12. Decisions reviewable—in general.—Under art. 1990, it is imperative on the trial court to render judgment on the facts found by the jury, though it may then grant a rehearing, but error, if any, would be on the overruling of the motion for a new trial, and not on the motion to set aside the findings and render judgment. Zeiger v. Woodson (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 164.

No appeal lies from an order granting a continuance. Ozbolt v. Lumbermen's Indemnity Exchange (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 158.

Where landowners intervened in receivership proceedings of irrigation plant, alleging water rights, and collusion in the fixing of rates, court's decree, holding that there was no collusion and that court had right to fix rates, was appealable. McHenry v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 296 S. W. 503.

Where the district court, in term time, entered an order postponing the hearing on a motion to substitute receivers to a day certain beyond the term in another county, a provision in the order that the hearing should be had and considered as in term time did not operate to make the decision of the motion a judgment of the court from which an appeal would lie; arts. 1714, 1726, not being applicable. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Valley Reservoir & Canal Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 438.

13. — Action of judge in vacation or at chambers.—The fact that an order in vacation is void has no bearing upon whether or not it is appealable. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Valley Reservoir & Canal Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 438.

An order made by a district court in vacation, removing receivers and appointing their successors, is not appealable, in the absence of statutory provision; art. 2079 not applying. Id.

14. — Discretionary action.—It is duty of appellate court to sustain trial court's action in dismissing cause unless there has been abuse of discretion. Hinkle v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 311.

A discretionary order or decree will not be reversed unless it clearly appears from record that there has been a disregard of rights of a party. Peters v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 989.

Appellate court will not review causes on ground of abuse of discretion, unless it clearly appears that such discretion was abused. Smith's Heirs v. Hirsch (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1114.

Judgment for probate of will is not lacking in finality for appeal because will was not copied therein, if the judgment identified the will by definite description, declared it probated, and ordered it to be filed and recorded, and the transcript to the district court showed compliance with art. 7874, as to filing wills. Edens v. Cleaves (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 355.

Judgment merely finding facts and conclusions of law without pronouncing legal consequences thereof is not final appealable judgment. Ogburn v. Loop Land & Irrigation Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 386.

No appeal can be prosecuted from any other than a final judgment. Taylor v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 555.

18. — Nature and scope of decision.—In suit to foreclose deed of trust lien, order of court that lands and nursery stock thereon be sold separately held final and appealable judgment. Colonial Land & Loan Co. v. Joplin (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 626.

Under Code Cr. Proc. arts. 458-464, and arts. 490, 493-498, dismissal of motion to set aside judgment nisi on forfeiture of bail bond left such judgment in statu quo, and the order was not appealable, in view of Code Cr. Proc. arts. 564, 969, and Civ. St. art. 2078.

The action of the court in setting aside a decree or decree in divorce must be treated as any other interlocutory order granting a new trial; and, not being final, the Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction to review it. Henderson v. Henderson (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 316.

Orders directing a sale of property by a receiver and confirming the sale are not merely interlocutory, but are orders from which an appeal will lie, before the determination of the main controversy. McBride v. United Irr. Co. (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 885.

Appeal does not lie from order for custody of children pending suit for divorce; the statute not providing for appeal from a temporary order of such kind. Goodman v. Goodman (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 207.

Where during the same term at which judgment was entered, the court set it aside and granted a new trial, and ordered that the cause be continued by operation of law, an appeal, subsequently taken, was premature, and from no final judgment and the Court of Civil Appeals is without jurisdiction to entertain it, and it will be dismissed. Lila M. McColl v. Whitthall (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1118.

An order entered after trial before jury in which special issues were submitted, some of which were answered, and others of which the jury could not agree on, which order declared a mistrial and set the case for another trial, is not a final judgment, and is not appealable. Phoebus v. Connellee (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 962.

Order of district court, fixing the capacity of contestants to contest the probate of a will, on appeal from order of county court denying probate, held not appealable, being an interlocutory order to be passed on in an appeal from the final judgment. Warne v. Jackson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 242.

The overruling of a motion to strike a case from the docket for plaintiff's abandonment of the case by not sooner filing papers after change of venue, is not a final order from which an appeal will lie, in view of art. 1997. W. T. Wilson Grain Co. v. Tobian (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 436.

A judgment granting a petition for review and setting aside a decree of divorce, and holding the original suit for divorce to stand new, is not a final judgment, and is not appealable under this article. McVey v. McVey (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 781.

An order sustaining a demurrer and special exceptions to pleas in reconvenion, following a demurrer declined to amend and gave notice of appeal, and stating that the cause was continued, was not a final judgment, but an interlocutory order or decree which the appellate court has no jurisdiction to review. Taylor v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 856.

Where the trial court only overruled motion for order transferring the cause and asking the court to sustain pleas of privilege and to transfer the cause, such order was merely interlocutory, from which there is no right of appeal, under arts. 1902, 2018. Seale v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 928.

19. — Finality as to all parties.—Where the court overruled motion for continuance to bring in other parties as sought by cross-bill, such parties were not before the court, and it was not necessary, in order to be final, that the judgment dispose of them, or of any cause of action asserted against them. Thompson v. Harmon (Com. App.) 267 S. W. 909.

In action against partnership operating bank, cross-bill held to seek no relief as against temporary administrator of partner, so that judgment was final, although it failed to dispose of his interest. Id.

Judgment foreclosing laborer’s lien against all defendants is final, although it failed to dispose of certain parties against whom plaintiff sought only to foreclose lien. Security Trust Co. of Houston v. Roberts (Com. App.) 268 S. W. 982.

Where the account sued on was assigned, and assignee was permitted to intervene, and prosecute the suit, and amended petition, though including original plaintiff as a nominal party, alleged that the account had been assigned for a valuable consideration, judgment for interveners without formally dismissing the action as to plaintiffs or reating that plaintiffs take nothing by the action held a “final judgment,” and appealable as such. Yerby v. Heineken & Vogelsang (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 835.

In a suit by the holder of a secured note and the trustee under the deed of trust, a judgment awarding foreclosure to the creditor only is a final judgment; the trustee being only a nominal party. Gregory v. South Texas Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 420.

In action to cancel oil lease, judgment ordering cancellation of lease as to two of the defendants, but making no disposition as to a third defendant’s interest, held not appealable. Kay v. Hines (Civ. App.) 250 S. W. 71.

Judgment for defendants in action for specific performance, which makes no disposition as to one of the plaintiffs, held not a final judgment, and not within jurisdiction of appellate court. Tenison v. Donigan (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 362.

A judgment of two plaintiffs and one of them, and ordering them to pay the costs, but making no disposition of the suit by the other plaintiff, is not a final judgment, and an appeal therefrom must be dismissed. Cook v. Marshall Gas Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 57.

In an action to quiet title wherein defendant asked judgment against a third party, a judgment dismissing the suit so far as it was by one plaintiff against the defendant, and awarding defendant relief against the third party, one of the plaintiffs not being mentioned, was not a final one, and an appeal therefrom must be dismissed. Widows’ and Orphans’ Home and Charitable Institution of the Church of the Living God v. Anderson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1115.

20. — Determination of controversy.—Where verdict disposes of issues, in main suit and those in a cross-action a judgment not disposing of issues on cross-action is not final and appealable. Burton Lingo Co. v. First Baptist Church (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 1012.

Judgment in action in which set-off is interposed, finding for plaintiff for less than claimed, is final, though set-off is not expressly mentioned. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 68.

Though defendant who abandoned his case by refusing to offer proof in support of the part of petition sustained in his favor is not entitled to appeal from the judgment against him, as only part of the case would be brought up for review. Beckham v. Mungin Oil & Cotton Co. (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 186.

Where defendant counterclaimed for balance in his favor, but in open court admitted balance in favor of plaintiffs, and merely disputed one item, judgment failing to dispose of or eliminate the cross-action, held a final judgment, and appealable as such. Yerby v. Heineken & Vogelsang (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 835.

A judgment which does not dispose of all the parties and issues is not a final judgment, and therefore not within the jurisdiction of appellate court. Tenison v. Donigan (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 362.

The general rule is that a judgment is “final” only when it leaves nothing further to be done. Burton Lingo Co. v. First Baptist Church of Abilene (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 262, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1012.

Judgments, in suits for partition disposing of the rights of the parties and appointing commissioners to partition the land in accordance with the provisions of the judgment, are final and appealable. Zarate v. Cantu (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 265.

Judgment in action to enforce award of Industrial Accident Board held final and appealable, it disposing of all of the issues. U. S. Fidelity & Guaranty Co. of Baltimore v. Parson (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 418.

Under art. 1987, there cannot be final judgments on both plaintiff’s original claim and defendant’s plea in reconvention, and when judgment is rendered for plaintiff on his claim without mentioning defendant’s plea, the judgment will be held to have disposed of such plea so as to be appealable. Taylor v. Masterson (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 856.

For purpose of appeal, a judgment is only “final” when the whole matter in controversy is disposed of as to all the parties, and no order or decree which does not preclude further litigation is final. Id.

A judgment for plaintiff for less than the amount due from garnishee, without any mention of cross-action, held res judicata as to the cross-action, and therefore a final judgment, from which an appeal may be taken. Kelvin Lumber & Supply Co. v. Copper State Mining Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 858.

23. Amount in controversy.—Where plaintiff alleged he had paid $42.50 usurious interest, and that defendant was asserting an illegal claim for $20, the principal debt, and prayed for judgment for $84.60, and for cancellation of the debt, the amount was insufficient to give the Court of Civil Appeals jurisdiction. Watson v. Evans (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 1170.

Where plaintiff, in an action for conversion, asked for $100 for mental anguish, but did not allege injury to person, and hence was not, on face of pleading, entitled to damages for mental anguish, the $100 will not be considered in determining amount in controversy, for purpose of appeal. Dunn v. Wilkerson (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 59.

The Court of Civil Appeals is without jurisdiction of the appeal of plaintiff from an adverse judgment in his action to recover less than $100, one-half of the fee paid an attorney in a personal injury case when the plaintiff had asserted a claim for mental anguish. Yeager v. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 3.

Art. 1903, as amended by Acts 1917, c. 176, providing procedure for contesting plea of judgment and that either party may appeal, is subordinate to and must be construed in harmony with art. 2078, limiting appeals from county court to Court of Civil Appeals to cases involving more than $100. Moss v. Bross (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 343.

26. Interest.—Where plaintiff in justice court could not have added interest without exceeding the jurisdiction of the justice court, she cannot amend in the county court by claiming interest, to bring the amount in controversy within the appellate jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals. Dunn v. Wilkerson (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 50.

30. Persons entitled to and right of review—Appeals between co-parties.—Where appellant's claim of subject-matter of a judgment against a defendant is allowed to stand, would estop them in a controversy with such defendant over the matter involved, they have a right to be heard, which right cannot be impaired by the dereliction of such defendant. Hull v. First Guaranty State Bank of Overton. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1148. .

31. Interest.—Appellant, who is a lessee of real estate, had the right to protect its possession and claim by questioning validity of plaintiff's lien against the property, and by seeking relief from judgment foreclosing lien. Security Trust Co. of Houston v. Roberts (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 892.

Where judgment canceling an oil lease required the lessor to pay costs, he could appeal therefrom, though he had parted with his interest in the lease. Johnson v. Russell (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 322.

Directors of an insolvent corporation, who were trustees for the corporation and creditors of the assets, to the legal estate in the property, held they could prosecute a writ of error from a judgment in an action to foreclose a lien against it. Lehey v. Leyhe (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 377.

32. Parties or persons injured or aggrieved.—Any one or more of the parties aggrieved by the judgment of a trial court may perfect his or their appeal. Farrias v. Delgado (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 610.

To maintain writ of error or appeal, the damage must be a direct and positive one. effected by the judgment and not merely in consequence thereof. Royal Neighbors of America v. Fletcher (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 476.

A party cannot appeal when his substantial rights are not affected, or when he is given all the relief sought; therefore, where appellant took the position of an interpleader, and the judgment determined the rights of the claimants, it is not entitled to appeal. Id.

33. Waiver of right of review.—Recognition of or acquiescence in decision.—Where personal judgment is recovered against husband, and foreclosure of lien on land claimed as homestead is decreed as to a portion of the judgment, the husband and wife, by appealing from only that portion of the judgment, concede that the judgment is appeal, except in so far as it establishes and forecloses a lien against such land. Slaughter v. Texas Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 350.

An action started by appellant against prevailing plaintiff, petition referring to the adverse judgment, filed prior to motion for a new trial, held not to show acquiescence in the judgment rendered as a matter of law so as to bar his right of appeal. O'Fiel v. Jones (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 371.

36. Compliance with judgment.—Act of a defendant in purchasing judgment for plaintiff held not satisfaction precluding appellate court from entertaining appeal, since other defendants have right to appeal. Boyd v. Urrutia (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 541.

Where, in the main case, a judgment was given against garnishers as trustees for defendants' creditors, which was not appealed from but was paid, an appeal will not lie from the judgment discharging the garnishers, which would re-litigate matters already finally adjudicated. Fergin v. Vincent (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 356.

39. Persons entitled to allege error.—Where appeal was by individual defendant and by defendant firm only, plaintiff not appealing from judgment rendered in favor of two members of firm, such part of judgment is not before Court of Appeals for review. Wooster v. Hoecker (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 332.

Where defendant and cross-complainant sought judgment for attorney's fees on note against both plaintiff and defendant indorser, his cross-assignment as to such defendant could not be considered or judgment rendered against him without rendering judgment against plaintiff. Slaughter v. Morton (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 897.

Chap. 20) COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN Art. 2078

Court of Civil Appeals will not consider suggestion of fundamental error made by party not appealing. Price v. Traders' Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 192 S. W. 834.

Judgment creditor, against whom and the sheriff suit to enjoin execution was brought and sustained, held in no position to complain of service of original citation on sheriff by his deputy. W. Mansfield v. Ramsey (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 730.

While in action for conversion, judgment is rendered against both defendants, court will not, on appeal, determine whether there was error as to defendant not appealing in submitting a special issue to the jury. Sikes v. Keller (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 311.

Defendant cannot complain of judgment for entire judgment to community property and adjudging that children who were parties take nothing. San Antonio & A. P. Ry. Co. v. Evans (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 674.

In action for damages to community property, held that court did not dismiss the children from the suit before judgment, but ruled that there was no testimony authorizing recovery by them, and hence defendant could not complain. Id.

Where no objection was made by intervenor or any one else to judgment in his favor and he is not included in appeal bond and made no motion for new trial, but filed a brief styling himself appellant, he has no standing in Court of Civil Appeals. Binder v. Milliken (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 239.

Assignments of error which are only available to certain defendants who did not file motion for new trial or assignments of error will not be considered. Farmers' Petroleum Co. v. Lyndon (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 184.

Plaintiff's right to recover against appellant's codefendant, as well as against appellant, being a matter affecting plaintiff's rights only, appellant cannot complain. Estes v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 91.

Defendant brings a cross-action against a third party and the latter alone appeals, the third party cannot complain of the overruling of plaintiff's exception to the answer interpleading the third party. Lester v. Park (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 734.

In passenger's action for injuries, sleeping car company could not complain that liability of railroad company was not submitted to the jury, so far as the judgment rendered against it in favor of the passenger was concerned; both it and the railway company being joint tort-feasors. Pullman Co. v. McGowan (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 842.

Although in suit on covenant of warranty defendant filed cross-action against his grantor, he could not, on appeal, complain of exclusion of the original warranty deed to him, since such deed could not affect his rights in the main suit. Fisher v. Sands (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 269.

Where there was full proof as to appealing defendants they cannot raise any question as to whether or not the judgment against other defendants not appealing rested on any evidence. Wyss v. Bookman (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 297.

Director General of Railroads cannot complain, in an action for death of employe, that jury was permitted to apportion the damages between the widow and children in that such apportionment infringed upon the jurisdiction of the probate court. McAdoo v. McCoy (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 876.

On defendant's appeal, where plaintiff did not object to failure of court to include interest, and presented no such question by cross-assignment, appellate court cannot consider such question in determining whether defendant's complaint against judgment should be sustained. Langben v. Cresp & Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 144.

In an action by a husband to establish his rights in his wife's separate property, where the trial court erred in adjudging a lien on the separate property, and the wife did not appeal, or object, the error will not be corrected on appeal by the husband. King v. King (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1093.

Where plea of privilege was sustained as to one defendant and overruled as to others, and only the latter defendants appeal, plaintiff by cross-assignment cannot complain of the judgment as to the other defendants. Rutledge v. Evans (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 218.

The appellate court will not reform a judgment in favor of an appellee who has sued out no cross-appeal nor filed cross-assignments of error. Independent Order of Puritans v. Manley (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 647.

In partition suit, the sole appealing defendant could not object to the action of the court in determining the interest of minor defendants, on the ground that they were not properly within the court's jurisdiction, unless he had a right to and did appeal as representative of the minors. Leach v. Leach (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 287.

No complaint can be made on appeal concerning a judgment against sureties on a reply bond, where the sureties prosecuted no appeal. Fincher v. Wood (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 868.

That the judgment was rendered against a party as a member of a firm, who was in fact not a member, cannot affect the judgment on appeal, where such party did not appeal. Schweers-Kern Live Stock Commission Co. v. Kothmann (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 592.

Appellee cannot complain of errors in the judgment of the court below in awarding costs, and the appellate court is without power to disturb a judgment against it. Minnick v. Dreyer Motor Co. (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 395.

A defendant who did not appeal cannot, on appeal by other defendants, ask a reversal of the judgment against him, even though he suggests fundamental error as to him. Traders' Nat. Bank v. Price (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 160.

On appeal from judgment for defendant in original suit, where there was no appeal from the judgment against defendant in his cross-action, the appellate court will not reverse such judgment. Nesbitt v. Hudson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 746.

On appeal by plaintiff in an action in which judgment was rendered for plaintiff and others in defendant's cross-action the appellate court will not consider matters affecting merely issues between plaintiff's coparties on the one hand and defendant on the other. Id.

Appellant cannot complain that recitals in a surveyor's field notes were erroneously admitted, where he read such field notes in evidence, and did not object to the testimony. Houston Oil Co. v. Miller (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 282.

In action for feed sold, where defendants introduced in evidence the account which was attached to plaintiff's pleadings as an exhibit and made a part thereof, they waived their right to complain of its admission. Avery v. Llano Cotton Seed Oil Mill Ass'n (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 351.

An assignment of error to the court's definition of "reckless" and "careless" will be overruled, where the objecting party requested a charge substantially as given. Wells Fargo & Co. v. Lowery (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 605.

Where jury were told to diminish damages if employed was negligent, employer held in no position to complain of further instruction requested by it to find for it if employed was negligent. Southern Pac. Co. v. Eckenfels (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 1063.

Assignment relating to evidence drawn out by appellant, and not of such nature as to probably injure him, presents no ground for reversal on his appeal. Southern Traction Co. v. Ellis (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 883.

In suit by plaintiff for injury to his wife, defendant, who introduced testimony showing that wife's eyesight was defective, cannot complain that cross-examination upon subject was permitted. Id.

Court having charged, at defendant's request, that damages should be diminished if plaintiff was negligent, refusal of further instruction to find for defendant, if his negligence was the sole proximate cause, held not ground for complaint by defendant. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. McCallister (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1082.

Where an abstract of title in its entirety was introduced in evidence by a party, he cannot complain of the introduction of a part thereof by the other party. Fretwell v. Pollard (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 183.

That party, objecting to testimony as hearsay, brings out testimony to same effect on cross-examining witness, does not waive error. Jurado v. Holmes (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 889.

Defendant employers held not to waive objection to submission of separate issue as to defective gun used by employed in glass factory, by subsequent request for instruction as to ordinary care. Skelton v. Wear v. Wolfe (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 190.

Where both sides introduced similar evidence, without objection, one party cannot later complain that the evidence was improper. Houston Oil Co. of Texas v. Brown (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 102.

In city's action to recover taxes assessed long after the year in which they were due, where defendant objected to introduction of assessment rolls on the ground that the description of the property was totally void, he could not complain that plaintiff introduced no evidence to identify the land. City of San Antonio v. Terrill (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 361.

An appellant cannot complain of failure of the court to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, where such failure was not the fault of the court but of appellant's counsel. Bragg v. Bragg (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 992.

A motion for a new trial containing several distinct matters, being at request of appellant, is not ground for reversal. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Weatherby (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 793.

Where appellant asked a special charge on the burden of proof, he cannot complain that the evidence was insufficient to warrant submission of the case to the jury. Schailer v. Boyd (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 940.

Plaintiff could not complain of instruction which did not materially differ from a special charge which he requested; the error, if any, being invited. Dutton v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 352.

Where court with appellant's acquiescence instructed that appellants' knowledge and good faith in purchasing property from appellant's debtor need not be considered if jury found that debtor was not insolvent, and jury did not so find, refusal of appellant's special charges submitting issue of appellants' good faith was not error. Id.

A proper instruction that improper evidence was elicited from his witness on cross-examination, where same evidence had been given on direct examination. Askew v. Bruner (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 152.

It being alleged that defendant listed cattle with plaintiff for sale, proof that cattle belonged to a partnership was not create a fatal variance; defendant, who personally listed cattle and failed to plead that his partner was jointly liable, being in no position to complain. Lumsden v. Jones (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 375.

Where an erroneous instruction, conflicting with another, was given at appellant's request, cannot complain. Ferguson v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 615.

In action for failure to deliver goods sold, where defendant sought to prove plain-tiff's insolvency and to have that issue submitted, defendant could not complain of the manner in which the instructions submitted the question, and at the same time contend that was immaterial whether plaintiff was insolvent. Rankin-Hill Co. v. Alberson-Lewis Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 731.

Where the measure of damages submitted by the court was in accordance with a requested instruction by defendant, defendant cannot complain that the measure of damages was improper, and constituted fundamental error. Angelina County Lumber Co. v. Mast (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 360.

Where the testimony objected to was first given on direct examination of a witness by one of defendant's attorneys, defendant cannot complain. Cochran v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 253.

A party cannot complain of a charge submitting the issue of negligence to the jury, where he invited the error by pleading negligence, offering proof thereon, and impliedly assenting to the charge by failing to object to it. Nabors v. Colorado & S. By. Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 276.

If an instruction is erroneous as assuming facts, it must be considered as invited error, where defendant offered an instruction which was given upon the same subject, and which is subject to the same criticism. Galveston, H. & S. A. By. Co. v. Harris Bros. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 255.

A party cannot complain of the submission of an issue, where he requested its submission. Hanrick v. Hanrick, 110 Tex. 39, 214 S. W. 321.

In suit to enjoin drilling for oil and gas on the public highways under an attempted lease by commissioners' court, where appellants had in their answer expressly invited the court to grant injunction as to all portions of the highway except those where the county owned only an easement, and lessees had acquired the mineral rights from the owners, court held suit should have been abated in its entirety for plaintiffs' failure to allege a special injury as to all the portions of the highway involved. Boone v. Clark (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 607.

An appellant cannot complain of the admission of testimony, where on cross-examination the witness was elicited similar testimony. Campbell v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 124.

Contention that trial court erred in submitting special issues Nos. 1 and 2, for the reason that such issues were in conflict with special issue No. 3, cannot be sustained. Issues, No. 3 being identical with issue No. 2, requested by appellant. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Williams (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 426.

That appellant requested instructions relating to question of discovered peril would not estop him from claiming that the question should not have been submitted; appellant, who objected to submission of question, seeking by the requests merely to have views of his counsel presented, should the question be submitted. Schaft v. Gooch (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 783.

Where purchaser, introduced several letters between himself and seller, one of which contained numerous self-serving declarations made by the seller, he cannot complain of the subsequent admission of another letter written by seller containing the same self-serving declarations. McMahon v. Gunter (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 284.

In an action for injuries, where defendants alleged that plaintiff attempted to cross street between the intersection of two other streets, a special issue, submitting in the language of the answer the claim therein made, cannot be objected to by defendants as misleading and obscure. Merchants' Transfer Co. v. Wilkinson (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 892.

Allegation of amended petition that original petition was filed on a given date was sufficient to show the date of filing of such pleading, and plaintiff appellant who made up the record cannot be heard to complain on appeal that the original petition should have been placed in the record. Ivey v. Lane (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 61.

If instruction that the burden of proof of plaintiff, over his objection, is not invited, though plaintiff claimed and was allowed the opening and concluding argument, to which under art. 1553, the party having the burden of proof is entitled. First Nat. Bank v. Todd (Com. App.) 231 S. W. 322.

A party, having requested a fuller instruction as to a matter covered in the main charge, could not complain of court's action in giving it. McdAoo v. McClure (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 548.

Art. 2079. [1383] [1380] Appeal from interlocutory order appointing receiver, or trustee, etc.

Order appointing receiver.—This article, held to authorize appeal only from order adjudicating that property be taken from defendant's possession and appointing a receiver, and not from order appointing a successor, on removal of the first receiver as disqualified. McFadden v. Gray (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 294.

An order made by a district court in vacation, removing receivers and appointing their successors, is not appealable in the absence of statutory provision, this article not applying. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Valley Reservoir & Canal Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 428.

Time for appeal.—Under this article, appeal bond and not transcript must be filed within 30 days after appeal is perfected. Merchants' Transfer Co. v. Hildebrand (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 551.

751
In partition suit, where a receiver was appointed at plaintiff's instance to take possession of the property, and no objection was then made to the order, nor was any appeal prosecuted from it, and the case was not tried on its merits for several months, complaint, on appeal, concerning the receiver's appointment, came too late, in view of this article. Leach v. Leach (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 287.

Stay of proceedings.—See Blankenship v. Little Motor Kar Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 210; notes to art. 2079a.

Art. 2079a. Appeal from interlocutory order overruling motion to vacate order appointing receiver or trustee, etc.

Applicability.—In a suit by stockholders against a corporation and its managing trustees, wherein receiver was appointed, motion of intervening successor trustees that the receivership be vacated, dissolved, and terminated held to come within this article, as motion to vacate order appointing receiver, rendering the interlocutory order overruling the motion appealable. Little Motor Kar Co. v. Blankenship (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 315.

Supersedes.—Notwithstanding an order appointing a receiver under arts. 2079, 2101, may be superseded pending an appeal, art. 2079a, does not contemplate a supersedeas, for the denial in such a case is a mere negation, and it would be improper to temporarily terminate a receivership pending an appeal, where it might well be reinstated thereafter. Blankenship v. Little Motor Kar Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 210.

Art. 2084. [1387] [1387] Appeal perfected, how.

When appeal perfected in general.—Under arts. 2084, 2098, as to how and when appeal is perfected, appeal was not perfected by mere notice of appeal, and appellate court's jurisdiction did not attach until appeal bond was filed. Mahan v. Kyle (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 392.

Time to appeal in general.—Under this article, the Court of Civil Appeals is without jurisdiction to hear an appeal, unless the appellant gives notice of appeal in open court, sufficient term at which final judgment is rendered, and within two days after final judgment overruling motion for new trial. Davenport v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 638.

Where case was tried before special judge and final judgment was rendered July 30th, and motion for new trial was not filed until August 30th, and was presented to the regular judge, who declined to enter any order, a notice of appeal given on August 30th was not given within two days after judgment, or as required by this article. Sovereign Camp Woodmen of the World v. Shaddox (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1094.

Interlocutory orders.—As under art. 4614, a temporary injunction order may be made in chambers, out of term and without notice or hearing, a notice of appeal is not necessary to give a right of appeal from such order; this article requiring exceptions to the ruling of the trial court and notice of appeal therefrom having no application. Blaylock v. Slocumb (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 864.

Notice of appeal.—Necessity.—Proper notice of appeal under this article, is a jurisdictional matter. Sovereign Camp Woodmen of the World v. Shaddox (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 1094; White v. Day (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 843.

In view of this article, it is jurisdictional that the record on appeal discloses that notice of appeal was given in the court below. Luse v. Parmer (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1031.

To appeal from a final judgment perpetuating an injunction made in open court upon a hearing in term time in a trial upon the merits, exception and notice of appeal required by this article, is necessary, and where no exception was taken and notice given the appeal must be dismissed. Blaylock v. Slocumb (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 864.

Sufficiency.—Certificate of trial judge stating that appellant's attorney came to his office, and stated that he wished to except to judgment and take appeal, does not show proper notice, where it does not show that judge's office was place where court was then being held. Davenport v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 558.

Time for filing bond or affidavit.—To confer jurisdiction upon the appellate court the appeal bond must have been filed within 20 days after the expiration of the term at which judgment was rendered, as required by this article. Lewis v. McDowell (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1178.

Under art. 2079, regulating appeal from interlocutory order appointing receiver, appeal bond must be filed within 20 days after appeal is perfected. Merchants' Transfer Co. v. Hildebrand (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 551.

Where court adjourned March 31st and a new term began April 2d, a motion for appeal and an affidavit in lieu of bond filed April 7th was timely under this article, although the order granting the appeal was not entered until May 5th; the Court of Civil Appeals having, by article 1593, power to ascertain matters of fact touching its jurisdiction. Phillips v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 263 S. W. 77.

Where a cause was tried in the May term, which could not continue more than thirty days, and a new term was adjourned June 25th, and an appeal bond filed July 27th was not filed within 20 days after expiration of term, as required by this article, and the Court of Civil Appeals did not acquire jurisdiction. Edens v. Cleaves (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 722.

No appeal was perfected as to an order of sale made by the court on December 14th at which time exception was taken and notice of appeal given, where the appeal bond was not filed until January 2nd. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Valley Reservoir & Canal Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 438.

Where trial court adjourned July 1, 1930, and affidavit in lieu of appeal bond was "filed August 19, 1930," the appeal must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, under this article. McVey v. McVey (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 781.

Where final judgment was January 8, and appeal bond filed on March 20 was not filed in time to confer jurisdiction upon the appellate court under this article. Southern Surety Co. v. Town (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 144.

— Nonresident of county.—An unincorporated association not having its headquarters in county in which it was sued was not required to file appeal bond within 29 days under this article, since such association is an entity in view of art. 6149-6154, and as such has its residence at the place of the general headquarters of the governing officers and body. Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen v. Cook (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1049.

Where the term of court might have, and did continue more than 8 weeks and some of the defendants did not reside in the county, under this article, defendant appellants were required to file appeal bond within 20 days after their notice of appeal was given to the Court of Civil Appeals jurisdiction. Yount v. Fagin (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 591.

Effect of failure to file in time.—A motion to set aside a judgment of affirmance and dismiss the appeal, because the appeal bond was not filed within the time fixed by this article, may be made at a subsequent term. Edens v. Cleaves (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 722.

Where appeal bond was not filed in trial court within time allowed by art. 26, subd. 4, and art. 2084, Court of Civil Appeals is without power to hear and determine appeal, which must be dismissed. Farmer v. McKinley (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 468.

Where bond on a cross-appeal is not filed within the time required, a motion to dismiss the appeal will be sustained. Benton v. Taylor (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 794.

Under this article, where trial term must have adjourned September 26th, transcript showing it began September 5th, but not showing date of adjournment, or any order extending term, and appeal bond was not filed until October 26th, court had no jurisdiction of appeal. Hart Cotton Mach. Co. v. Graham Gin Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 269.

Where an appeal bond is not filed in time to give jurisdiction to the appellate court under this article, the appeal must be dismissed. Fryer v. Headlee (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 654.

The Court of Civil Appeals is without power to hear and determine an appeal which was not perfected by filing of an appeal bond within the time required by this article. White v. Day (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 843.

Art. 2085. [1388] By parties of whom no appeal bond is required.

Dismissal for want of notice.—Where the record on appeal from a judgment dissolving a temporary writ of injunction does not disclose that there was a notice of appeal as provided by this article, the cause must be dismissed from the docket of the Court of Civil Appeals. Parry Oil Co. v. Michaels (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 225.

Art. 2086. [1389] Writ of error sued out, when.—The writ of error may, in cases where the same is allowed, be sued out at any time within six months after the final judgment is rendered and not thereafter. [Acts 1892, p. 42; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 85, § 1, amending art. 2086, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Time for suing out writ of error.—Rev. St. 1879, art. 1389, provided that a writ of error might be sued out within two years. Act 1892, taking effect September 1st. (Gen. Laws 1892, c. 15), provided that a writ of error to the court of civil appeals might be sued out within 12 months. Held, that a writ of error to such court, from a judgment rendered before the date of the taking effect of the act, might be sued out within 12 months of such date, provided that it be done within 2 years from the rendition of the judgment. Crompton v. Ashley, 4 Civ. App. 498; 25 S. W. 487.

Where the transcript shows that on the day final judgment was rendered the trial court overruled defendants' general demurrer, but the record contains nothing to show that the order was not entered of record as indicated by the transcript on that date, motion to dismiss cannot be successfully resisted on the ground that time for suing out the writ dates from the time a certain nunc pro tunc order overruling demurrer was subsequently made. Texas Power & Light Co. v. Healer (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 341.

In estimating the time under this article, within which writ of error should be sued out the period should commence with the date of judgment, and not with the date of overruling of motion for new trial. Williams v. Knight Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 755.

Defendant's application for writ of error, filed more than 12 months after entry of judgment when judgment was not thereafter amended or corrected by the court.

under art. 2015, was not in time, though plaintiff had voluntarily filed a remittitur under article 5911, and the time within which writ should have been wadded having commenced with the rendition of judgment, and not the date of a voluntary remittitur. Pope v. Wedgeworth (Com. App.) 221 S. W. 950, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) Wedgeworth v. Pope, 196 S. W. 621.

The time for suing out a writ of error begins with the date of final judgment and not with the date overruling motion for new trial, so that where the petition and bond were filed more than one year after judgment, the proceeding must be dismissed, whether Acts 38th Leg. c. 85, reducing such time to six months or the old law applied. Beever v. McMurtry (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 872.

Such act does not, even as to a judgment rendered prior to the amendment, give to plaintiff in error six months after the amending act became effective in which to sue out his writ. Id.

Where judgment was rendered February 5, 1918, and court adjourned February 7, 1919, a writ of error sued out on January 24, 1920, did not give the appellate court jurisdiction, since such amending act went into effect on June 19, 1919; such amendment applying to judgments rendered before as well as those rendered after it went into effect. Cameron County Irr. Dist. No. 1 v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 121.

Where judgment was rendered May 24, motion for new trial overruled May 12th, in which notice of appeal was given, application for writ of error, filed in the district court April 13th of the following year, was too late, under this article, as amended by such act, which took effect June 17, 1919, 90 days after the adjournment of the Legislature, March 19th. Jowell v. A. G. McAdams Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 1114.

Where judgment in suit for partition disposing of the rights of the parties and appointing commissioners was entered on October 24, 1916, and corrected April 16, 1917, and judgment appointing the commissioners was reported October 23, 1918, under such act, petition for writ of error filed August 22, 1919, more than 12 months after the date of either of the judgments, was too late, and the writ will be dismissed. Zarate v. Cantu (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 385.

When a final judgment in the county court was entered against plaintiff in error October 28, 1918, a writ of error sued out October 14, 1919, comes too late, for as more than four months remained when such act went into force June 17, and the time was reasonable, the new law must be deemed to apply from that date, and the time for suing out a writ of error was reduced to two months in accordance with the ratio between the two periods. Wichita Valley Ry. Co. v. Carter (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 592.

Evidence as to time of suing out.—To convince the Court of Civil Appeals that it has jurisdiction because a petition for writ of error was filed in the trial court in due time, the petition being marked by the clerk of court as filed late, the evidence should go to show that a petition was mailed in due course and that the county court should have reached the clerk 10 days before the date indicated by his file mark, and in time. Zarate v. Cantu (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 285.

Art. 2088. [1391] [1391] Requisites of petition.

Requisites of petition—In general.—See Fouga v. Fouga (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1117; notes to art. 2091.

Under Gen. Laws 1892, p. 20, and Sup. Ct. Rule No. 1, a petition which states the objections made in the district court, and that their determination was necessary to the decision of the court of civil appeals, and that they were specifically called to its attention by a motion for a rehearing, was insufficient. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Wilson, 85 Tex. 607, 22 S. W. 385.

---

Names and residences of parties.—In action against the E. & "Railroad Company," petition for writ of error naming the defendant as the "Railway Company," held not fatally defective, the variance not being material. Rhoades v. El Paso & S. W. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 481.

Petition for writ of error containing the judgment in which it was expressly recited that the defendants were corporations, and naming as defendants the same defendants named in such judgment, held to sufficiently show who the defendants are, and that there are corporations, though it would have been better practice to have named the agents upon whom service might be had. Id.

To give jurisdiction to the appellate court, there must be substantial compliance with art. 2088, requiring petition for writ of error to state the names and residences of the parties adversely interested, and articles 1097, requiring a writ of error bond.

Waiver of defects.—Where parties adversely interested are not made parties to writ of error, defect cannot under rule 9 (142 S. W. xi) be waived except by voluntary appearance of said defendants. Dunnagan v. East Texas Colonization & Development Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 337.
While motion to dismiss writ of error for defect of parties should, under rule 9 (142 S. W. x), be filed within 36 days, failure so to move does not waive the defect. 1d.

Parts to writ of error—Necessary parties.—In trespass to try title, with judgment for all defendants, including original defendant and one made a party because it had warrantied title, such defendants were adversely interested and necessary parties to writ of error. Dunnagan v. East Texas Coloniation & Development Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 357.

When parties adversely interested are not made parties to the writ of error, the Court of Civil Appeals has no jurisdiction. 1d.

In suit by a daughter against her father and brothers to recover her share of the community estate of her father and deceased mother, plaintiff's two brothers were necessary parties to the father's appeal by writ of error, according to plaintiff daughter's allegations being necessary parties to the suit and interested adversely to plaintiff. Reilly v. Hangman (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 797.

That, after judgment for plaintiffs, the court made an order awarding half to their attorneys, does not render the judgment divided, so as to give the appellate court jurisdiction to review it, on writ of error sued out by defendant, but not naming some of the other parties in the petition for error or in the error bond. Saner-Ragley Lumber Co. v. Spivey (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 878.

Art. 2089. [1392] [1392] Error bond.

Art. 2090. [1393] [1393] Citation in error.

Appearance by party.—Execution by defendant in error of an agreement that plaintiff in error could file the transcript and record and file its briefs at any time before a specified date, and that defendant in error might file his briefs at any time prior to 90 weeks before submission of the cause, operated as an appearance in the Court of Civil Appeals by defendant in error. Indemnity Co. of America v. Mahaffey (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 861.

Art. 2091. [1394] [1394] Form and requisites of citation.

Effect of defects.—Where the citation in error does not correctly describe the judgment as it was described in the petition in error, as required by Rev. St. 1879, art. 1394, while the suit will not be dismissed if the petition is good, it will be stricken from the docket and another citation issued. Crane v. Hogan (Sup.) 7 S. W. 57.

Where there is no return in the citation in error, and the writ fails to state the time within which defendant in error is notified to appear, as required by Acts 1893, p. 44, art. 1394, and defendant in error does not appear, the cause will be stricken from the docket. Morris v. Grapevine (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 60.

Where, on motion by defendant in error to affirm on certificate, the certificate failed to show that a citation in error, as required by Rev. St. 1879, art. 1394, was issued and served, the motion will be overruled. Scarborough v. Groesbeck (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 687.

Error in making citation in error returnable in 30 days, instead of 10 or 20 days, under this article, held not to require quashing of the citation. Brillhart v. Beever (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 973.

Where a petition for a writ of error misstated the date of judgment, the number of the cause, and the date new trial was denied, and the citation in error gave a different description of the judgment from that in the petition and failed to properly describe the judgment, as required by this article, the cause will be dismissed on account of such defects in the petition and citation. Fouga v. Fouga (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1137.

Waiver of defects.—Defendant in error held to waive right to abate citation for mistake in return day by moving to strike out statement of facts and dismiss proceeding in error. Brillhart v. Beever (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 973.

Art. 2092. [1395] [1395] Service and return of.

Effect of defective service.—Though defendant in error does not appear, the court will of its own motion order the case stricken from the docket for insufficient showing of service of citation in error, the matter being jurisdictional. Queen City Motor Co. v. Texas Auto Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 591.

Waiver of defective service.—Appearance for the purpose of moving to dismiss writ of error, and to strike out parts of the record, "in the event the court should overrule the motion to dismiss," held not a waiver of defective service of the petition for the writ of error. Rhoades v. El Paso & S. W. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 481.

Unqualified appearance by defendants in error constitutes a general appearance, and operates as a waiver of any defects in the process. 1d.

Defect in sheriff's return of citation in error served upon defendant in error, if not amendable, does not deprive appellate court of jurisdiction to determine cause. Sypert v. Rogers Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 301 S. W. 1102.

Return on citation in error, executed by delivering to L., president of T., is insufficient, it not showing what was served or how service was made, under this article, Queen City Motor Co. v. Texas Auto Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 521.

Arts. 2093-2096. [1396-1399] [1396-1399].

Art. 2097. [1400] [1400] Cost bond on appeal or writ of error.
See Cunningham v. McKinney (Sup.) 9 S. W. 157; notes to art. 2101.

1. Necessity of bond.—To give jurisdiction to the appellate court, there must be substantial compliance with art. 2088, requiring petition for writ of error to state the party appealed from. In re H. W. Jones, 204 S. W. 322, 323;见 Hart v. McClenahan, 205 S. W. 324, 325; see art. 2103, requiring a writ of error bond payable to defendant in error. Saner-Ragley Lumber Co. v. Spivey (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 878.

7. Parties to bond—Obligees.—Where appeal was taken by one secondarily liable and defendant was cross-complainant was made sole obligee of bond and party primarily liable was no party to appeal, bond was sufficient to give court jurisdiction of appeal. Slaughter v. Morton (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 897.

Where plaintiff dismissed a motion to set aside an order of dismissal, as against certain defendants who had not been served with notice, such dismissal was in legal effect a dismissal of plaintiff's original suit against such defendants, and it was not necessary to make them payees in a writ of error bond in order to have reviewed an order refusing to reinstate as to the other defendant. Hickman v. Swain (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 548.

Defendants, as to whom an action was not dismissed on plaintiff's default, need not be named as payees in a writ of error bond in order to have reviewed an order refusing to set aside the order of dismissal as to other defendants. Id.

8. Obligors.—Husband having no interest in subject-matter, being joined with his wife to meet requirements of law, is only "nominal party," and where he alone executes appeal bond appeal will not be considered. Boose v. Parkhill (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 120.

An appeal bond will bind the living parties who signed it, although the names of two dead parties, named as plaintiffs in instituting the suit, also appeared as signers of the bond. Farron v. Delgado (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 619.

13. Conditions of bond.—Under Gen. Laws Called Sess. 22d Leg. p. 44, art. 1404, a bond conditioned that appellant "shall prosecute this appeal with effect, and, in case the judgment of the said court of civil appeals shall be adverse to the defendants herein, they shall perform the judgment," etc., of said court, and pay damages awarded, is not so defective as to deprive the court of civil appeals of jurisdiction to affirm the judgment below on motion of the appellee. Davis v. Estes, 4 Civ. App. 207, 23 S. W. 412.

Held not conditioned that appellants shall pay all of the costs which have accrued in the court below and which may accrue in the Court of Civil Appeals and the Supreme Court is insufficient as a cost bond. Slaughter v. Texas Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 350.

14. Sufficiency of bond—In general.—Where an appeal bond does not distinctly name the obligees, but does so by reasonable intendment, it gives the appellate court jurisdiction. Hall v. Hall (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 636.

On appeal to a court of civil appeals in cases where the county court exercises original jurisdiction under Const. art. 5, § 6, an appeal bond deficient in any particular required by this article, is sufficient to confer jurisdiction, since it may be amended under art. 2104, when objection is made. First State Bank & Trust Co. of Santa Anna v. O. D. Mann & Sons (Civ. App.) 269 S. W. 818.

Since the effect of art. 2104, authorizing the amendment of any appeal bond however defective, purporting to be an obligation to indemnify appellee, a bond, whether defective in form or substance, is sufficient to give the appellate court jurisdiction. Newell v. Lafarelle (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 613.

18. Scope and effect of bond.—In action by administratrix and others, where general petition dismissed, plaintiffs all gave notice of appeal, but no appeal bond being given, only administratrix is before appellate court. Cole v. Mallory S. S. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 326.

In trespass to try title, although appeal was taken by giving cost bond only, if continued case until final decision by Supreme Court, so that defendant had 18 months provided by judgment of lower court, and arts. 7764, 7765, to pay for land, after decision by Supreme Court. Pain v. McCain (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 889.

Where defendants appealed merely by giving a cost bond, and plaintiffs commenced garnishment proceedings, the Court of Civil Appeals will not issue writs of injunction and mandamus to restrain enforcement of the garnishment judgment, for the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals is not involved. Durham v. Scrivener (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 282.
Art. 2098. [1401] Appeal, etc., by party unable to give cost bond.

Proof before county judge or court in session.—Proof of inability to pay costs required by this article, to be made before court trying the case, must be made before the court, or in session, and must affirmatively appear it was thus made to give jurisdiction. Horn v. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1101.

The judge has no power to hear proof after adjournment for the term. Id.

Hearing, while in session, proof of inability to give cost bond in trial court would not cure irregularity in perfecting appeal in hearing proof of inability to pay cost after court has adjourned. Id.

Requisites and sufficiency of affidavit.—An affidavit for appeal in lieu of bond under this article, may be made before a notary public who is affiant's attorney, since such party is in evidence merely. Phillips v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 77.

Under this article, an affidavit made before a notary public is insufficient to give the appellate court jurisdiction. Oliver v. Swift & Co. (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 234.

Art. 2099. [1402] Appeal or writ of error, perfected, when.

Appeal perfected when.—Appeal from judgment in lower court, where law requires bond to be given, is not perfected until bond is filed, under arts. 2095, 2101. Lynch v. Bernhardt (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1051.

Under arts. 2084, 2099, appeal was not perfected by mere notice of appeal, and appellate court's jurisdiction did not attach until appeal bond was filed. Mahan v. Kyle (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 302.

The Court of Civil Appeals acquired jurisdiction of an appeal when appellant filed his supersedeas bond with the clerk of the county court, and settlement of the matters in dispute by the parties would not defeat such jurisdiction. Hedrick v. Matthews (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 424.

Effect of transfer to appellate court.—In general.—Where county court at law had jurisdiction of parties in a forcible detainer case and judgment was regular upon its face, district court did not have jurisdiction to enjoin issuance and execution of a writ of possession; an appeal having been taken to appellate court from county court. Crosby v. Arrietta (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 252.

A judgment refusing a permanent injunction does not affect a temporary injunction in force at the time the judgment dissolving the injunction was rendered, so that an appeal from such final judgment leaves the temporary injunction in force. Ford v. State (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 499.

— Powers and proceedings of lower court.—As injunction is auxiliary to main suit, and cannot be maintained separately, district court had jurisdiction to grant temporary injunction enjoining persons from voting shares of stock, title to which was being litigated, appeal from district court's judgment. Needham v. Arno Co-op. Irr. Co. (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 857.

The appeal from a judgment in an action to set aside a former judgment deprived district court of authority to proceed with trial on the merits until the appeal was finally disposed of by the Court of Civil Appeals. Godshalk v. Martin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 1161.

Where defendant brought cross-action against another, and the latter's plea of privilege was sustained, whereupon defendant excepted and gave notice of appeal, it was not error to try the case before determination of the appeal; the only effect of the notice of appeal being to suspend the transfer of the case, under art. 1693, as amend-
Art. 2099  COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN (Title 37)

A garnishment proceeding should not be dismissed, on motion of the garnishee, on the ground that the main or original suit has been dismissed, but should be continued to await the result of an appeal by the plaintiff in the original suit. Farmers' State Bank of Merkel v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 268.

Art. 2100. [1403] [1403] Appeal, etc., on cost bond or affidavit does not suspend execution.

Operation and effect.—Judgment of trial court, under this article, never having been suspended upon appeal prosecuted on bond for costs only, and not on supersedeas bond, it can be enforced, notwithstanding appeal, by process issued from trial court. Kirby v. Morris (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 995.

While a sale of property under court process for a greater sum than this court has since held it chargeable with, may have been rendered void, that fact alone could not confer jurisdiction to stay execution, where the cause reached appellate court about a month after sale on a mere cost bond, which does not, under this article, stay the execution, and which appeal has been disposed of and a rehearing denied. Benavides v. Thomas (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 205.

Where defendants perfected their appeal by a cost bond only, thus coming within this article, the trial court has jurisdiction to entertain garnishment proceedings pursuant to art. 271, subd. 3, even if the word "execution," should be taken in its strict sense. Durham v. Szevener (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 232.

Art. 2101. [1404] [1404] Supersedeas bond.

Right to supersedeas.—Art. 2079a, relating to appeals from orders denying the vacation of receivership does not contemplate a supersedeas, for the denial in such a case is a mere negation, and it would be improper to temporarily terminate a receivership pending an appeal, where it might well be reinstated thereafter. Blankenship v. Little Motor Kar Co. (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 210.

Amount of bond.—Where judgment decrees foreclosure of lien for a portion of the amount of the judgment, bond stating that judgment was recovered for the amount for which foreclosure was decreed without showing that the appeal is only from such portion of the judgment is insufficient as a supersedeas bond, where amount thereof is less than twice the amount of the entire judgment. Slaughter v. Texas Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 356.

Conditions of bond.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1404, a bond conditioned that the obligors "shall comply with the judgment, order, or decree of the supreme court upon such writ of error, and pay all such damages as may be awarded against him," does not embrace all the conditions required by the statute, and the writ of error must be dismissed. Caldwell v. Ballow (Sup.) 1 S. W. 677.

A bond in an action where judgment is rendered for foreclosure of a lien on land owned by the appellees, for which they were not personally liable, conditioned as provided in Rev. St. 1879, art. 1400, with the additional condition required by art. 1405, is not a supersedeas bond within art. 1404. Crumley v. McKinney (Sup.) 9 S. W. 157.

Form and contents of bond.—Where judgment decrees foreclosure of lien for only a portion of the amount of the judgment, and appeal is taken from only such part of judgment, the bond should clearly and distinctly show upon its face that appeal is not from any other portion of the judgment. Slaughter v. Texas Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 356.

Approval of bond.—Supersedeas bond complying in form and substance with this article, was sufficient to give the Court of Appeals jurisdiction, and should have been approved by the clerk of the district court if the sureties were sufficient. Bean v. Polk (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 1106.

Clerk may not reject supersedeas bond because of form or substance. Id.

Accrual of liability on bond.—An appeal is prosecuted "with effect" within supersedeas bond, where it is prosecuted successfully, and appellant succeeds in reversing judgment in material part, such as enforcement of lien in suit on contract to pay money, although entire judgment is not reversed. Schutz v. Dabney (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 342.

Defenses to actions on bonds.—Where the widow sued for community property notwithstanding pendency of administration, and defendant made no objection, the supersedeas bond being made payable to the widow, defendant cannot thereafter in an action on the bond, urge that the widow was without capacity to sue, particularly as the land, being part of the homestead, was not subject to debts. Whitaker v. McCarthy (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 572.

Art. 2102. Supersedeas bond, where judgment is for land or other property.

See Crumley v. McKinney (Sup.) 9 S. W. 157; notes to art. 2101; Corley v. Renz (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 1130.

Application.—Rev. St. 1879, art. 1405, is not applicable to an appeal from a judgment of the peace for the possession of personal property, as such appeals are governed by art. 1639. Batsel v. Blaine (App.) 15 S. W. 283.

Liability on bond.—A judgment in trespass to try title for the land, but not allowing rentals, does not bar an action for rentals accruing subsequent to the former judgment and secured by a supersedeas bond given under this article, on appeal in the former cause. Roberson v. Tom (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 723.

See Crumley v. McKinney (Sup.) 9 S. W. 157.

Scope and effect as stay.—Suit cannot be maintained on a judgment on which appeal is pending, whether on cost or supersedeas bond. Van Natta v. Van Natta (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 907.

In view of arts. 2101, 2103, an appeal from a judgment of any character upon a supersedeas bond does not suspend the judgment, but only stays its execution pending appeal; the judgment itself remaining in full force until reversed. Ford v. State (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 490.

Stay in injunction suits.—In suit for temporary injunction restraining defendant from selling intoxicating liquors at retail, after defendant's appeal from injunction order, bond given as a supersedeas bond, the state, on motion to the Court of Civil Appeals, is entitled to injunction restraining defendant from pursuing the occupation. Ford v. State (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 490.

A judgment, which requires no process to enforce its execution, as a prohibitory injunction, is not affected by an appeal therefrom on a supersedeas bond, as the judgment is not suspended pending the appeal, but execution alone is stayed. Id.

Stay on appeal from appointment of receiver.—The legal effect of execution of supersedeas bond by defendant railroad, proceeded against by the state for appointment of receiver, was to suspend order appointing receiver until appeal therefrom had been disposed of, and it became duty of receiver, if he had taken charge of property, to return it to railroad, and to refrain from exercising powers. Timpson & H. Ry. Co. v. State (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 322.

Art. 2103a. Requiring additional supersedeas bond.—In all cases hereafter carried by appeal or writ of error from the District or County Court to the Court of Civil Appeals or to the Supreme Court, in which a supersedeas bond shall be given, and whenever the said bond shall become insufficient by reason of the insolvency of the sureties on such bond, or from any other cause, it shall be the duty of the Court in which the said appeal or writ of error is pending, upon proper showing of such insufficiency being made to require the giving of additional supersedeas bond in like amount as the original, to be approved by the clerk of the Court in which said appeal or writ of error is pending. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 117, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 4 repeals all laws in conflict. The act took affect 90 days after March 13, 1921, date of adjournment.

Art. 2103b. Same; execution in trial court on failure to give additional bond; original bond as cost bond; dismissal.—In case of failure to comply with the rule of the Court ordering the execution of said additional supersedeas bond within a period of twenty (20) days after such order is served, the Court in which said appeal or writ of error is pending shall issue an order to the trial court, directing or permitting the issuance of execution on the judgment appealed from; but said appeal or writ of error shall not be dismissed, but continued upon the docket as if said cause had been appealed or writ of error granted upon cost bond, provided the clerk of the court in which said appeal or writ of error is pending is satisfied that the said original bond is still sufficient when considered as a cost bond. But in the event that the said clerk shall consider the said original supersedeas bond insufficient as a cost bond, then the said appeal or writ of error shall be dismissed, unless the appellant or the plaintiff in error shall within twenty (20) days after notice served by the clerk that the said bond is deemed insufficient for the purposes of the cost bond, shall execute a new bond satisfactory to said clerk, sufficient to secure the payment of the costs theretofore accrued, or that might thereafter accrue in the further prosecution of the said appeal or writ of error, the giving of said additional original bond or bonds shall not release the liability of the sureties on the original superseded bond. [Id., § 2]

Art. 2103c. Same; partial invalidity.—If any paragraph, subsection or section or part of this law shall be held unconstitutional, such invalidity shall not affect any other part of this Act not subject to like objections. [Id., § 3]

Art. 2104. Amendment of appeal bond.

See Mitchell v. Hancock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694; First State Bank & Trust Co. of Santa Anna v. O. D. Mann & Sons (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 693; Sparkman v. Stout (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 526; notes to art. 2097.

Amendment or substitution of bond—in general.—The court will not dismiss a writ of error for insufficiency of the bond, but will give opportunity to amend. Dunnagan v. East Texas Colonial & Development Co. (Civ. App.) 248 S. W. 248.

Where superseded bond filed is insufficient because it fails to show on its face that the appeal is only from portion of the judgment, appellate court on motion to dismiss will give appellants the right to file a sufficient bond within specified time, under the statute authorizing amendment of appeal bonds. Slaughter v. Texas Life Ins. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 250.

— Defects that may be cured.—Under this article, in suit wherein plaintiff died and his executrix was substituted, a defendant's appeal bond, which identified the case, stated the judgment rendered, and was defective only in that it was made payable to the deceased plaintiff, is amenable as purporting to be an obligation to indemnify executrix against loss by the appeal. Newell v. Lafarelle (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 853.

Art. 2105. [1407] [1407] State, county, etc., not to give bond.

See Pearce v. Tootle, 75 Tex. 148, 12 S. W. 536.

Art. 2106. [1408] [1408] Of executors, etc.

Persons exempted.—A guardian ad litem, being always appointed by the court, and deriving his authority to act through such appointment alone, comes within the letter of Rev. St. 1873, art. 1408. Schonfeld v. Turner (Sup.) 6 S. W. 628.

Persons exempted.—In action against sureties on guardian's bond, appeal bond was necessary to protect appeal by sureties. Lynch v. Bernhardt (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1651.

Persons exempted.—Though minors are the only children and heirs, and entitled to the whole of the estate, the duly qualified and acting administratrix is entitled, in view of art. 3235, to appeal as administratrix without bond from judgment withdrawing estate from administratrix. Drew v. Jarvis, 110 Tex. 436, 216 S. W. 618.

Persons exempted.—Under this article, a guardian ad litem, appealing from a judgment against his wards, need not give an appeal bond. Day v. Henderson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 248.

Persons exempted.—Appeal in individual capacity.—This article does not apply where guardian or administrator is personally aggrieved, and appeals in his own right. Lynch v. Bernhardt (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1651.

Art. 2108. [1410] [1410] Transcript to be made out and delivered.

Presumption as to performance of duty by clerk.—Where judge's name does not appear in the blank constituting part of the form required by district court rule 48 (142 S. W. xxx), following the judgment copied in the transcript, it will be presumed, for the purpose of giving jurisdiction, in the absence of such attack on the validity of the record as is permitted by law, that the clerk performed his duty in making out and certifying transcript as required by arts. 2108, 2114, and that judgment was entered under direction of judge under art. 1694, since such direction may be oral. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 718.

Art. 2109. [1411] [1411] Transcript to contain all proceedings, except, etc.

1. Duty of appellant as to transcript.—It is the appellant's duty to see that the transcript is properly made up. Eldora Oil Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 738.
3. Matters to be shown by transcript.—In general.—Assignments of error based upon alleged action of court in overruling certain exceptions cannot be considered, where transcript contains no order showing that court ever considered or ruled upon exceptions. First Nat. Bank of Canadian v. Jones (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 468.

An agreement between attorneys that a bill of exceptions was presented and filed at the trial and could be considered by the Court of Civil Appeals as part of the transcript cannot be considered by the Supreme Court for any purpose when not filed in the trial court, authenticated by the trial judge, nor incorporated in the transcript. Missouri v. Turpin & Co. v. Churchill (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 214.

There being no adequate basis shown for judgment within arts. 2108-2114, as to preparation and contents of transcript, judgment against garnishee containing no recitations that necessary statutory proceedings were had will be reversed, where record contains no writ in the nature of garnishment or a showing that one was issued and no answer to any purported writ or fact authorizing judgment against garnishee in the absence of answer under arts. 271-300. Van Velzer v. Houston Installation Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 465.

On appeal from suit in county court to foreclose debt of $112.21 where the transcript did not affirmatively show, by allegations in pleadings, the value at time of chattels which was subject of foreclosure, so as to show jurisdiction of lower court. Court of Civil Appeals has no jurisdiction. Bush v. Campbell (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1055.

The record on appeal, showing no citation to defendant, waiver, or appearance, fails to show the trial court had jurisdiction, as required by arts. 2109, 2110; recital in judgment not being enough. Steger v. May (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 393.

6. Proceedings of Intermediate Courts.—In case originating in Justice court, where record to Court of Civil Appeals contains no transcript from justice to county court, and Justice court's original jurisdiction of the cause of action is not otherwise shown, appeal will be dismissed. Brotherhood of American Yeomen v. Jaggers (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 1179.

7. Scope and contents of transcript.—The statement of facts contained an agreement that the evidence used in a certain case between the defendant and another party, tried in the same court, and before the supreme court at a former term, "is the same as was offered on the trial of this case, so far as it goes; and that the evidence found in the statement of facts in that case may be used in this, without copying it in the transcript in this case."

Papers purporting to have been filed, and to be the petition for an injunction and the answer thereto, though sent with the transcript, were not entitled to be filed in the Court of Civil Appeals, and could not be considered, under art. 2109 et seq., and court rules 85, 84, and 110 (142 S. W. xxiii, xxiv). Baker v. Nipper (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 596.

In view of Court of Civil Appeals rules 14, 84 (142 S. W. xviii, xxiii), where case was tried and judgment rendered on amended petition, the original petition was improperly included in the transcript. Jones v. Fink (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 777.

8. Requisites and sufficiency of transcript.—Where transcript was purport of error to review default judgment does not show that defendants appeared, and does not contain the citation and return, the judgment must be reversed: the mere recital that defendants were duly served being insufficient. McDaniel v. State (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 411.

Where clerk, in not being transcriber, indicated time by date at end of each pleading, court on appeal will take jurisdiction, where there is no file mark following affidavit in lieu of appeal bond, but judgment immediately following is followed by file mark; it being obvious that file mark was intended for affidavit, since judgment was rendered in timely manner. Baker v. Nipper (Civ. App.) 190 S. W. 596.

Where the transcript showed that guardian ad litem gave notice of appeal, and a supplemental transcript, containing the judgment showed the appointment of the guardian ad litem, the appeal will not be dismissed, on the theory that the record failed to show the guardian ad litem was appointed, Mangum v. Henderson (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 245.

11. Effect of omissions.—Where transcript on appeal from a judgment against defendant does not show that there was citation, waiver, or entry of appearance, a judgment by default must be reversed, though it recites that due service was had. Rhodes v. Coats (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 470.

12. Effect of failure to file proper transcript.—Where the transcript consisted solely of the order refusing the injunction, the appeal bond, and the clerk's cost bill and certificate, the appeal will be dismissed, as the court could not determine whether the judge erred in refusing the injunction. Baker v. Nipper (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 586.

13. Correction of transcript.—Where assignments have been lost or destroyed and have been substituted, as provided by arts. 2157-2163, inclusive, the transcript on appeal can be perfected by certiorari. Hassell v. Rose (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 845.

A stipulation whereby defendant, in consideration of an extension of time, agreed that judgment might be taken against him, is a pleading in the nature of a confession of judgment (art. 2007), and not a matter of evidence, which, when certified as being left out of the transcript by mistake, would have to be certified by the trial court.
Art. 2109

COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN

20. Presumption as to matters not shown.—Where there is nothing in the transcript to show that the action of the court on special exceptions to the petition was ever revoked, such exceptions are presumed to have been waived. Southwestern Portland Cement Co. v. Bustillos (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 268.

Art. 2110. [1412] [1412] Citation and return omitted, when.

Omission of citation and return.—Under arts. 2109, 2110, providing that the transcript on appeal shall contain the citation and return, if the pleadings or judgment do not show an appearance in person or by attorney, it is not enough that the judgment recite that service was had. McMillen v. Texarkana Nat. Bank, 4 Civ. App. 210, 23 S. W. 428.

The record on appeal, showing no citation to defendant, waiver, or appearance, fails to show the trial court had jurisdiction, as required by arts. 2109, 2110; recital in judgment of due citation not being enough. Steger v. May (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 988.

Art. 2111. [1413] [1413] Omission of unimportant proceedings, when.

Notice of appeal.—Though Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1413, 1414, provide for an appeal on an agreed statement of the case and the facts proven, omitting from the transcript such portions of the proceedings as are agreed to be omitted, where the record fails to show a notice of appeal the appellate court acquires no jurisdiction. Blount v. Baker (Civ. App.) 22 S. W. 1008.

Findings.—Findings of fact should not be omitted from transcript unless both parties agree to such omission. Ben. C. Jones & Co. v. State Printing Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 619.

Art. 2112. [1414] [1414] Agreed statement of pleadings and proof.

Agreed case.—An agreed statement of facts, on which a case is tried in the court below, and which the court embodies in its judgment, is sufficient, under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1293, to authorize a revision of the judgment on matters growing out of such facts, in the absence of a statement of facts, or findings of fact by the court, or an agreed case for appeal, under arts. 1333 and 1414. State v. Connor, 86 Tex. 133, 23 S. W. 110.

Omission of notice of appeal.—See Blount v. Baker (Civ. App.) 22 S. W. 1006; notes to art. 2111.

Art. 2113. [1415] [1415] Transcript must contain what.

Scope and contents of transcript—Assignment of errors.—Where appellant not only did not file a motion for a new trial, but also failed to file assignments of error in the trial court as required by arts. 1512, 2115, appellant was not entitled to complain of the judgment except for error "in law apparent on the face of the record," art. 1607. Atlanta Accident & Liability Co. v. Trustees of First Christian Church of Paris (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 537.

Under this article and art. 1612, as amended by Acts 1925 Leg. (1913) c. 136, appellant's brief need not present the assignment in the motion for new trial, the statute being simply directory. Marvin v. Kennison Bros. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 831.

Under Supreme Court rule 101 (142 S. W. xxiv), as amended to conform to art. 1612, Rev. St. 1911, as amended, Acts 1925 Leg. (1913) c. 136, appellant could present in his brief, without incorporating in the transcript, an assignment of error relating to the failure of the court after final judgment to file findings of fact and conclusions of law, as requested by appellant. Id.

Art. 2114. [1416] [1416] Clerk's certificate and indorsement.

Clerk's certificate and indorsement.—Where judge's name does not appear in the blank following the judgment copied in the transcript, it will be presumed, for the purpose of giving court jurisdiction, in the absence of proper attack on the very record, that the clerk performed his duty in making out and certifying transcript as required by arts. 2106, 2114, and that judgment was entered under direction of judge under art. 1864. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

This article requires the binding of the transcript under the seal and certificate of the clerk, and, where such statute is not complied with, the transcript is incomplete, and appeal must be dismissed on motion. Collums v. State (Cr. App.) 230 S. W. 1065.

Where a transcript is not certified by the clerk and the bills of exceptions are not approved by the judge, and the statement of facts is neither signed by the attorneys nor the judge, an appeal must be dismissed without passing upon the merits, under Code Cr. Proc. art. 95, Rev. St. art. 2114. Ray v. State (Cr. App.) 231 S. W. 396.

Effect of defects in or lack of certificate and indorsement.—Where this article is not
Art. 2115. [1417] [1416a] Briefs filed in courts below and notice given.

Necessity of filing.—On appeal from a judgment final on a forfeited bail bond, briefs must be filed by appellants in the lower court as well as in the Court of Criminal Appeals; such appeal being in the nature of a civil appeal. Grammer v. State (Cr. App.) 220 S. W. 165.

Excuse for failure to file in time.—Failure to comply with this article, as to time of filing brief, held not excused by custom among the attorneys of the place to waive it and the effects under rule 39 (142 S. W. xiii) of noncompliance. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Jefferson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 211; Reilly v. Hanagan (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 797.

Under this article, the fact that one of appellant's three attorneys suffered from hay fever is not ground for postponing submission of case where there is no explanation why brief was not prepared prior to attorney's sickness or by one of the other attorneys, and appeal will be dismissed. Daniel v. Nixon (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 579.

In view of arts. 1615, 1616, held, that appeal would be dismissed for failure to file briefs in time required by article 2115 and the rules of the Court of Civil Appeals, although appellant's leading counsel, being from another state, did not know of the requirement of the rules as to briefs. West Louisiana Bank v. Terry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 639.

Effect of failure to file or file in time.—Appellant not having filed his brief in the lower court within the time allowed hereby or given excuse therefor, he cannot file briefs in the court of appeals at a time which would delay trial, except on consent of appellee. Werner v. Kasten (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 317.

Appeal will be dismissed under rule 39 (142 S. W. xiii), appellant's brief being filed only four days before time for submission instead of according to this article, and noncompliance not being excused. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Jefferson (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 211.

Motion, under rule 39 (142 S. W. xiii), to dismiss appeal for noncompliance with this article, held not governed by rule 8 (142 S. W. xi) as to time for motions affecting formalities attending the filing of transcripts. Id.

A motion to strike out appellant's brief and assignments of error on the ground that they do not comply with the rules, and were filed too late to afford reasonable time to properly reply, will be overruled, where appellant has filed a comprehensive answering brief. Ward v. Compton (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 129.

Where plaintiff in error did not comply with this article, held that, even though plaintiff in error did file briefs at the time transcript was filed, and defendant failed to file briefs until the day preceding submission, some 13 months later, yet, in view of rule 2114 for Court of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiv), defendant's briefs will be considered where there was no showing that injury resulted from the delay. Du Bois v. Tyler (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 211.

Where appellant failed to file his brief before filing the transcript of record, as required by this article, and Court of Civil Appeals rule 39, and for four months after the transcript was filed, without excuse, and the brief was finally filed only two days before the case was set down for submission, so that attorneys for appellees did not have sufficient time to prepare a reply brief, the appeal will be dismissed. Forbes v. Cannon (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 944.

Where plaintiff in error, in answer to motion to dismiss for failure to comply with this article, made no effort to show that defendants in error will have ample time within which to brief their case, and, without excuse for not making timely answer, plaintiff in error cannot be heard on petition for rehearing or favored on his contention that his violation of the statute and Rule No. 39 (142 S. W. xiii), is without prejudice. Reilly v. Hanagan (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 797.

Where plaintiff in error failed to file briefs in lower court, as required by this article, the writ will be dismissed on defendant in error's motion, pursuant to Rule 39; no excuse having been offered for such failure, and the burden of showing that no injury can result being on plaintiff in error. Id.

Under Code Cr. Proc. arts. 497, 498, regulating proceeding on forfeited bail bonds by the rules governing other civil actions, the failure of parties appealing to file briefs in the appellate court or in the trial court as required by District and County Courts Rule 292 (142 S. W. xxiv), and Civil Courts of Appeals Rule 29 (142 S. W. xii), requires dismissal for want of jurisdiction. Davis v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 499.

An appeal from a judgment in a scire facias proceeding upon a forfeited bail bond must be dismissed, where no brief was filed with the record. Kennedy v. State (Cr. App.) 226 S. W. 415.

An appeal will not be dismissed for appellant's failure to file brief within time required by this article, where it affirmatively appears that appellant was not injured thereby. Eastern Texas Electric Co. v. Reagan (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 366.

Where a transcript of an appeal has been on file for about 8 months, and the appellant has failed to file briefs as required by law, a motion to dismiss will be allowed Ruling of Court of Civil Appeals in striking out the briefs of appellant as not filed in the trial court, as required by this article, and rule 29 for the Courts of Civil Appeals (142 S. W. xiii), held in conflict with decisions of other Courts of Civil Appeals, entitled appellant to mandamus from the Supreme Court for certification of the question to it. Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Conner (Sup.) 229 S. W. 844.

In case involving many appeals where appellant presented copy of brief, to be thereafter printed, to appellee at a time when he would have only 11 days to prepare a reply brief, appellate court will not controvert appellee's sworn statement that they did not have sufficient time to reply, where to do so would require an independent investigation without the aid of appellee's brief, and the appeal will be dismissed. Loven- skild v. Casas ( Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 885.

RECORD AND PROCEEDINGS NOT IN RECORD

1. Matters to be shown by record—Jurisdiction of lower court.—The record on appeal, showing no citation to defendant, waiver, or appearance, fails to show the trial court had jurisdiction as required by arts. 3109, 2110; recital in judgment of due citation not being enough. Steger v. May (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 989.

It not appearing from record that county court had jurisdiction of appeal from justice court appeal will be dismissed. Baker v. Cole (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 411.

In action to recover $169, in the absence of showing that the action was ever tried in justice court, an appeal from the county court will be dismissed; such amount being below the original jurisdiction of the county court. Oxweld Acetylene Co. v. Cole (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 444.

2. — Nature and form of decision.—Where the record fails to disclose any final judgment or appealable order, the Court of Civil Appeals has no jurisdiction, and the appeal will be dismissed. Roth v. Lottin (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 89; Herrick Hardware Co. v. Beard (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 526.

4. — Presentation and reservation of grounds of review.—Where the record does not show that a demurrer or exception was ever submitted to the court or acted upon an assignment of error complaining of the sustaining of the demurrer cannot be reviewed. Duenkel v. Amarillo Bank & Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 678; Heidenheimer, Strassburger & Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 886; Logan v. Martinez (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 624.

Where record does not indicate that pleas of privilege were called to court's attention during two years, they will be considered waived. Cruz v. Texas Glass & Paint Co. v. Beard (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 819.

Where record on appeal does not show that demurrer and exception to plaintiff's petition were called to attention or ruled on by trial court, they will be regarded as waived. Shumaker v. Byrd (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 461.

An assignment assailolling the sustaining of demurrer to an answer and cross-action should not be considered, where the record contains no indication that the demurrer was acted on, except a bill of exceptions objecting to the overruling of a general demurrer. Carvel v. Kusel (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 941.

Where the record does not contain an order of the court on the plea of special privilege and does not show any exception to the court's action in overruling it, the question cannot be reviewed. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Webber, 109 Tex. 383, 210 S. W. 677.

In absence from transcript of order or judgment sustaining special exceptions to certain items, court cannot consider assignment that, trial court having sustained special exceptions to all of the petition save for $500, the county, and not the district, court, had exclusive jurisdiction. Wigham v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 469.

An objection to sustaining special exceptions to certain portions of a petition is not properly preserved, where there does not appear to be any ruling of the court thereon. Ritchey v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 214.

A payment of rent by assignment of error by a defendant that is requested and the court refused an instruction peremptorily directing verdict for him where the record, while containing what purported to be such a charge, did not show that it was ever presented to or acted upon by the court below. Eddleman v. Wofford (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 221.

The fact that the charge excepted to was given is sufficient to show that the court overruled the exceptions, so that no order in the record showing such ruling is necessary. Rosser v. Cole (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 510.

5. Exceptions.—The record must show the reservation and reasonable filing of necessary bills of exception. Elledge v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 203.

8. — Taking and perfecting of appeal or other proceeding for review.—In view of art. 2084, it is jurisdictional that the record on appeal discloses that notice of appeal was given in the court below. Luse v. Parmer (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 193.

It is jurisdictional that it appear from an inspection of the record that proper service of citation in error was made. Queen City Motor Co. v. Texas Auto Supply Co. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 591.

Where the record on appeal from a judgment dissolving a temporary writ of injunction does not disclose that there was a notice of appeal as provided by art. 2085, the cause must be dismissed. Parry Oil Co. v. Michaels (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 223.
12. Scope and contents of record—Pleadings and proceedings relating thereto.—Original answer, having been amended, should have been omitted from the record.

Eldora Oil Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 738.

23. Defects, objections, amendment, and correction—Time to amend or make objections.—Under Court Rule 11 (142 S. W. xii), requiring certiorari to perfect the record to be made as required by rule 8 (142 S. W. xii), which requires motions to be filed within 30 days after filing the transcript, where transcript was filed in July, motion for certiorari to perfect the record made on November 17th was too late. Bonnett-Brown Sales Service Co. v. Denison Morning Gazette (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1944.

24. Amendment or correction in lower court.—After decision on appeal, the record cannot be amended by certificate of the trial judge to show an agreement in open court that the court should allow a recovery for an admitted amount, to justify a judgment in excess of the verdict. Shotwell v. Crier (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 262.

25. Plaintiff in error had desired to correct the record so as to make it show the true date of judgment in order to avoid dismissal of his appeal on the ground that his petition for writ of error was filed later, he should have filed his motion to correct the record in the trial court. Williams v. Knight Realty Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 755.

26. Amendment in appellate court.—The usual rule regarding the necessity for correcting the record in the trial court does not apply where the issue, as whether the petition for writ of error was filed August 12, 1919, or August 22, 1919, as shown by the file mark of the clerk, is one affecting the jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals.

27. Certiorari or other proceedings to bring up record.—Motion for certiorari to correct record, filed subsequent to submission, alleging that purported petition contained in record was not petition on which judgment was rendered, but was an amended petition not filed until after hearing, held to be denied. Trimble v. Hawkins (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 254.

Under rule 57 (142 S. W. xvi), as to bringing up original papers, an order of the trial court is prerequisite to incorporation of such papers in the record on appeal. Bonnett-Brown Sales Service Co. v. Denison Morning Gazette (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 189.

28. Conclusiveness and effect, impeaching and contradicting—Conclusiveness of record.—Where judgment, reciting that upon hearing of the pleadings, proof, and argument the court decided that there was no question to be submitted to the jury, is the only evidence before the court on appeal, contention that no evidence was heard by the court below cannot be sustained. Andre v. Fajkus (Civ. App.) 260 S. W. 753.

29. Conflict in record.—Absolute verity attaches to judgment of district court on appeal from order appointing guardian as it appears on the minutes, and the judgment entry on the minutes cannot be controlled by what appears on the docket, unless the district court correct the minutes. Drew v. Jarvis, 110 Tex. 128, 216 S. W. 618.

30. Impeaching or contradicting.—If a record of a trial court does not speak the truth, the proper place for correction is in that court, and not by affidavits filed in the appellate court. Chase Hackley Piano Co. v. Clymer (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 214.

31. Questions presented for review—Limitation by scope of record in general.—Terms of receipt issued by defendant compress company to plaintiff to effect for cotton delivered, not being set out in statement of facts, court on appeal cannot discuss its effect. Jackson v. Greenville Compress Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 324.

Record held to contain sufficient showing of the time of commencement of action to warrant the appellate court to hold the action barred by limitations. City of Ft. Worth v. Rosen (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 84.

On appeal in trespass to try title, objection as to validity of execution sale relied on by appellee could not be considered where matters alleged as affecting its validity did not appear from the record. Holmes v. Tennant (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 795.

Objections to action of the court below cannot be sustained, where the matters complained of are not shown by the record. Texas Employers’ Ins. Ass’n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.

The question whether the plea of limitations was available against the second amended original petition cannot be considered, where the record did not contain the original pleadings. Grand Lodge of Colored K. F. of Texas v. Allen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 675.

32. Pleading.—In the absence from the record of the ruling on a general demurrer and in the absence of any exception relating thereto, the court’s action could not be reviewed. Houston Tie & Lumber Co. v. Hankins (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 233.

Overruling of exceptions to answer filed in the justice court cannot be reviewed where the answer does not appear in the transcript. Stephens v. Miller (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 1061.

33. Questions on interlocutory proceedings.—In a servant’s action to set aside an award and for lump sum payment, an objection that the time for making a physical examination as fixed by defendant’s motion therefor was not reasonable, and would have delayed the trial, must be overruled, where the record does not support such statement, nor show that the examination was resited for such reason. Texas Employers’ Ins. Ass’n v. Downing (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 112.

34. Conduct of trial or hearing.—Assignment with reference to argument of counsel will be overruled, where there is nothing in the record to show any such argument, though there is a statement in motion for new trial that such argument was made. Southwestern Telegraph & Telephone Co. v. Higgs (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 403.
Sufficiency of evidence.—An assignment of error to the effect that a finding of the jury was not supported by the evidence and was against the uncontroverted testimony must be overruled, where the appellate court, by reason of the witnesses having referred to maps, etc., cannot determine from the statement of facts that the answers were not sustained. San Jacinto Rice Co. v. Ulrich (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 777.

Instructions.—An assignment of error, merely reciting that it was the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to the law in the case, etc., must be overruled, where there was nothing in the record to show that instructions were not waived. Dixon v. Haynes (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 441.

Verdict, findings, or decision.—A letter in evidence, construed as one of agency, not being in the record, the finding of agency, with a circumstance tending to support it, cannot be disturbed, though there is evidence tending to show prior different and inconsistent relation. Owosso Mfg. Co. v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 815.

Finding against plaintiff, on fact which he had burden of establishing, cannot be disturbed on appeal; record not containing affirmative evidence of fact. Id.

Grounds for new trial.—Where the evidence heard on a motion for new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence was not in the record, the appellate court cannot hold that the newly discovered evidence would likely have changed the result. Summit Place Co. v. Terrell (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1119.

Judgment.—A discretionary order or decree of trial court will not be reversed on appeal, unless it clearly appears from record that there has been a disregard of rights of a party. Peters v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 985.

Questions arising after judgment.—Assignments of error, questioning court's ruling as to whether a judgment was final, cannot be considered, when the original judgment or the pleadings on which it is based are not in the record. Jones v. Chronicle Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 704.

Whether a party is entitled to mineral rights by virtue of stipulations made in deeds subsequent to the filing of the application for writ, the error could not be determined by a review of the record. Moore v. American Lumber Co. (Com. App.) 251 S. W. 318.

Matters not apparent of record.—Matters not included or shown in general,—The Appellate Court is bound by the record, and a decision cannot be based on matters not shown by the record. Beckham v. Munger Oil & Cotton Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 186.

Matters appearing otherwise than by record.—On appeal in an action to reopen a judgment, the records on appeals in the former case may be considered. Lee v. British & American Mortgage Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 430.

Alleged facts outside of the record may not be considered upon appeal. Fielder v. Houston Oil Co. (Com. App.) 210 S. W. 787.

Where there is nothing in the record to show that court made a statement because of which a finding was asked, appellate court will not accept the motion for a finding or the motion for new trial asserting such fact as the fact. Beasley v. Faust (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 179.

The citation issued from the justice court is no part of the pleadings, and cannot be looked to in aid of the record in determining the issues presented to the county court on appeal. Alvis v. John G. Harris Hardware & Furniture Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 533.

A letter written by the trial judge, notifying attorneys of action of court in overruling motion for new trial, giving reasons, and commenting on evidence, will not be permitted to be filed on appeal, although accompanied by an affidavit of counsel. Dumas v. Easley (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 866.

Evidence relating to question involved.—Court of Civil Appeals can take affidavits in aid of jurisdiction, but can know whether county court had jurisdiction of appeal from justice court only from record sent up from justice court. Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Independent Fruit Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 694.

The Court of Civil Appeals is bound by the record as it appears in the transcript and statement of facts, and extraneous matters shown in affidavit cannot be considered. Mills v. Frost Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 658.

Courts of Civil Appeals will not consider affidavits outside the record tending to show want of jurisdiction in lower court. Bingham v. Graham (Civ. App.) 239 S. W. 108.

1. MOTIONS

Article 2118. [1456] [1452] Motion docket.

2. AUDITORS

Art. 2124. [1494] [1471] Auditor appointed, when.

In general.—In suit involving a dissolution of partnership, where no auditor was appointed such as is contemplated by statute, but the court simply asked the county auditor to inspect the books and report whether plaintiff partners had been charged with a certain $15,000 in controversy and defendant partner given the proper credit therefor, such irregularity does not necessitate reversal, there being ample evidence to support the court's judgment; the fact that some auditor after trial audited the books and reached a different conclusion is not ground for reversal on an assignment the court erred in refusing new trial. Kerwin v. Mead (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 677.

Art. 2126. [1496] [1473] Shall be admitted in evidence, but, etc.

Operation and effect of report and findings.—An error in submitting the auditor's account to the jury for statement, in disregard of Rev. St. 1879, art. 1473, making such report conclusive unless contradicted by exceptions filed before trial, is not ground for complaint by defendant, when the verdict of the jury for all the items concluded by the report does not aggregate so much as the balance shown by the report to be due plaintiffs. Aransas Pass Land Co. v. Hanaford, 4 Civ. App. 286. 23 S. W. 566.

Motion to suppress.—A motion to suppress an auditor's report on the ground that the court had failed to prescribe his powers and duties in the order of appointment held properly overruled. Lomax v. Trull (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 861.

3. RECEIVERS

Art. 2128. [1465] When receivers may be appointed.

1/2. Constitutionality.—The provision for the appointment of a receiver where a corporation has been dissolved or has forfeited its corporate rights, is not unconstitutional, 767

The case made by the pleadings being one in which trustees are sued by some of the beneficiaries in behalf of others alleging insolvency of trustees, breach of trust, misconduct, misapplication of trust funds, refusal to account for, and pay over income, fraud in executing a fictitious vote and mortgage, loss of trust funds, etc., the rules governing cases of trust and appointment of receivers for trust estates apply. Bingham v. Graham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 105.

3. Remedy incidental to other relief.—In a straight suit on a note expressly payable in the county of suit, a receiver may be appointed as an ancillary remedy, although the domicile of the defendant, a corporation, is in another county. Carter-Mullaly Transfer Co. v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 791.

Receiverships are created only as auxiliary to some ultimate relief for which a suit may be instituted. Alto Cotton Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Berryman (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 518.

5. Existence of other remedy.—Where pledgor of corporate stock could obtain adequate relief by injunction restraining pledgée from disposing of the stock and corporation from transferring it on its books pending litigation, he cannot have a receiver appointed. Merchants' Transfer Co. v. Hildebrand (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 651.

Where corporate stock pledged was wrongfully voted by pledgée, whereby charter amendment was procured authorizing company to embark in hazardous business, pledgée's stockholder's remedy by suit for injunction against company or to set aside action by it, was adequate; and there was no ground for receivership. Id.

In an equitable suit for corporate stockholder seeking receivership and complaining contracts were to be made by company to launch into hazardous business authorized by amendment to charter improperly procured by a pledgee's voting stock; hence there was no ground for appointment of receiver. Id.

A receiver would not be appointed at the suit of a minority stockholder where it did not appear that an injunction would not properly conserve the interest of the minority stockholders. Bordages v. Burnett (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 326.

In trespass to try title to land on which an oil well had been drilled by defendant, who was in possession, and who was solvent, evidence being conflicting on the question of right to possession, plaintiffs held to have an adequate legal remedy by sequestration, under art. 7094, subd. 4, and equity could not be called upon to give relief by appointment of receiver. General Oil Co. v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 261.

The appointment of a receiver under subd. 1, on the ground that property was in danger of being lost or destroyed, cannot be attacked on the theory that plaintiffs had an adequate remedy at law; the proceeding being based on the statute, and not general principles of equity. Richardson v. McCloskey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 325.

7. Discretion of court and review.—The appointment of a receiver rests largely within the discretion of the trial court, and its discretionary act will be reviewed only in case of an abuse. Richardson v. McCloskey (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 323; Davis v. Hudgins (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 72.

In action for divorce and for settlement of property rights, the appointment of a receiver of a portion of the property involved rests largely within the discretion of the trial court. Reum v. Reum (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 769.

8. Jurisdiction of court.—Where a suit for partition of property was begun after the death of either of the parties, temporary administrator was appointed for her estate and before application for probate of her will, the district court did not acquire equity jurisdiction to the exclusion of the court of probate, and could not by appointment of a receiver deprive the administrator of control of the property. Van Grinderbeck v. Lewis (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1043.

District court of one county has no jurisdiction of suit and to compel receiver of irrigation company to supply water upon terms other than those imposed by order of district court of another county appointing receiver, and to have such terms declared unreasonable, and to enjoin enforcement thereof, since an order granting such relief would constitute an interference with the possession, control, and management of the receivers appointed by another court. Mudge v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 819.

One court has no right to interfere with the possession by another court of property for which it has appointed a receiver. Id.

The district court has power to appoint receivers in a proper case on appeal of a will contest from the county court. Pierce v. Foreign Mission Board of Southern Baptist Convention (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 140.

10. Grounds of appointment.—Rev. St. 1879, art. 1461, authorizing a judge of any court of competent jurisdiction to appoint a receiver does not empower a stockholder or lien creditor of an insolvent corporation, which is still a going concern, to have a receiver appointed to take charge of the entire assets and convert them into money for general distribution, on the sole ground of insolvency. Espuela Land & Cattle Co. v. Bindle, 5 Civ. App. 18, 23 S. W. 819.

Any denial of plaintiff's interest in accounts, which he claims he and defendant's intestate owned jointly, and intestate agreed to collect and divide the proceeds with him, is not ground for appointment of receiver therefor. Caougnaud v. Tarnke (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 221.
In a partition suit, where parties were jointly interested in the property and the facts showed that defendant was appropriating the proceeds thereof to her own benefit, rents were in imminent danger of being lost to the heirs, and taxes were accumulating, the appointment of a receiver was clearly authorized by subd. 1. Quintana v. Giraud (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 770.

Under subd. 1, petition in suit against a bank and other parties interested with plaintiff in a trust fund deposited with the bank held sufficient to authorize the court to appoint receiver of the fund. Temple State Bank v. Mansfield (Civ. App.) 215 S. W. 154.

Right to have receiver appointed under either of any subds. is independent on rules of practice in equity; and, when facts bring case within any of the sections, allegations and proof of insolvency of defendant, inadequacy of legal remedy, or other equitable grounds for receiver, are not required. Id.

In an action of trespass to try title to land on which an oil well had been drilled by a solvent defendant, who was in possession, the court erred in granting a receivership prayed for by plaintiff, where the testimony was conflicting, and a verdict and judgment for either party, obtained on a hearing on the merits, would be sustained by the appellate court on the facts, under this article. General Oil Co. v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 261.

The remedy of a receivership in all cases is to be cautiously applied, and receivers should not be appointed except on clear showing that applicant's rights imperatively demand the remedy. Davis v. Hudgins (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 12.

Petition pleading contract whereby plaintiffs agreed to assist in securing oil and mineral leases to be taken over by a corporation to be organized by plaintiffs and defendants, and whereby defendants agreed that plaintiffs should receive certain amount of stock in such corporation for such services, and alleging that defendants had not formed any corporation, had abandoned the plan to form the corporation, and had disposed of or contracted to dispose of some of the leases, held not to state a cause of action for appointment of a receiver. Messinger v. McLean (Civ. App.) 237 S. W. 247.

To an action of ejectment, praying for judgment on the merits, etc., evidence held to warrant the appointment of a receiver under subd. 1, on the theory that such appointment was necessary to protect the estate: it being in danger of being lost or injured. Richardson v. McCloskey (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 229.

The court erred in allowing plaintiffs, who were suing for an accounting, etc., to take possession of funds in hand and collect rents, that is no ground for denying the appointment of a receiver where the estate was liable to be lost or destroyed; receivership having up to that time been refused. Id.

In a suit to determine who is in possession or enjoyment of property for which a receiver is sought not always indispensable to the granting of the order, though the fact of financial irresponsibility may be sufficient to justify the appointment on the ground that a remedy against loss or injury would be inadequate. Id.

To warrant the appointment of a receiver to protect property from being lost or destroyed, it is not necessary under subd. 1, to show that the persons having custody of the property were insolvent. Id.

A strong case is required to induce the appointment of a receiver to take assets from the custody of an executor or administrator displacing his authority. Id.

Where after the death of husband and wife the executors paid over portion of the community to the executor and residuary legatee of the wife, and the husband's residuary legatees, asserting rights in the property, sought an accounting, etc., and the appointment of a receiver on the theory that the property was in danger of being lost, the court may appoint a receiver for the whole of the property and take it into custodia legis, though the executor of the husband's estate was not a joint owner of the property, and might not come within the exact terms of subd. 1. Id.

In a suit by the residuary legatee against the executor and the executor and residuary legatees of the estate of the testator's wife, who had obtained a division of the community, evidence held to warrant the appointment of a receiver under general principles of equity; it appearing that the estates were not properly cared for and were in danger of being lost or materially injured. Id.

Where plaintiffs, the residuary legatees under the will of a husband, sought an accounting by the executors and asserted rights in property delivered to the executor and legatee of the estate of the husband's deceased wife, who was entitled to one-half of the community, held, that the controversy over the property was sufficient to bring the case within subd. 1, authorizing the appointment of a receiver in an action between persons jointly owning or interested in any property, when it is shown that the property is in danger of being lost or destroyed. Id.

A court in dissolving a partnership, and fixing the rights of the parties in the partnership property, had the right to appoint a receiver to carry out the judgment by a sale of the property and division of the proceeds. Leyhe v. McNamara (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 459.

11. Application for appointment, requisites of.—Under subd. 2, where property is in danger of being materially injured, etc., a petition alleging generally that defendant was insolvent, and would injure property pending suit, is insufficient to authorize an ex parte appointment of receiver. Arnold v. Meyer (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 602.

Application and verification upon information and belief on facts on which court must rely in determining whether the appointment of receiver for defendant company at plaintiff's instance was proper held insufficient. Alto Cotton Oil & Milling Co. v. Erpman (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 512.

12. Notice of application.—That defendant was threatening to withdraw certain money from bank and sell certain personalty would not warrant appointment of a

22 SUPP. V. S. CIV. ST. TEX. — 49 769

A receiver should not be appointed without notice to the parties adversely interested, unless it is made to appear that plaintiff would suffer some material injury by the delay necessary to give notice. Alto Cotton Oil & Mfg. Co. v. Berryman (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 312.

In suit by stockholders of an oil company, a joint-stock association, against trustees, alleging insolvency and misappropriation of trust funds, etc., held that allegations of petition showed a case within subd. 1. as to the appointment of receivers where parties or others jointly show that property or funds are in danger of loss, and authorized court to appoint a receiver ex parte. Bingham v. Graham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 165.

14. Proof, nature and sufficiency of.—The allegations of a petition to which no answer was filed were held as true on a hearing of a motion to appoint a receiver. Bingham v. Graham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 165.

In an action by minority shareholders in a trust to operate an oil company charging misappropriation of funds against defendant trustees, etc., and asking accounting and dissolution, evidence of defendant trustees' fraud, mismanagement, etc., is held sufficient to authorize appointment of receiver. Davis v. Hudgins (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 73.

The question of the credibility of witnesses in support of an application for appointment of a receiver is for the trial court. Richardson v. McClainsey (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 323.

Where the petition for appointment of a receiver, etc., was controverted by a verified answer, the pleadings are not conclusive, and the action of the trial court in appointing should be tested by the evidence. Id.

On appeal from an order appointing receivers to take over the custody of an estate from the executors, evidence held to warrant a finding that books of account were not properly kept for the estate. Id.

16. Order of appointment.—Where plaintiff receiver, suing a stockholder on a note for his stock subscription, was appointed in a former suit against the corporation, defendant's plea that the suit against the corporation was collusively instituted to avoid frauds practiced on the stockholders was a collateral attack on the order of appointment, and could not be maintained. Davis v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 255 S. W. 111.

18. Duration of receivership in general.—Where none of the judgments have been executed, and no judgment has been rendered in a suit in intervention against the receiver, there is a necessity for continuing the receivership, although the receivership is no longer necessary for the protection, preservation, and disposition of the insolvent's property. Davis v. Mitchell (Civ. App.) 255 S. W. 112.

In suit by stockholders against the corporation and its managing trustees for fraud and dissipation of assets, wherein successor trustees intervened and sought vacation of the receivership, allegations of the interveners held sufficient to admit evidence on the question of the vacation, order prayed for would be authorized, so that the trial court erred in declining to receive the evidence, the court not having exercised his sound discretion in the premises, but having refused to put himself in a position to exercise it by sustaining demurrers instead of hearing the evidence. Little Motor Kar Co. v. Blazek (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 318.

21. Operation and effect of appointment in general.—After appointment of a receiver under subd. 2. in action which contemplates sale of property of insolvent corporation, held, that no one will be permitted to acquire a lien thereon by attachment, judgment, or otherwise. Guaranty State Bank & Trust Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 236 S. W. 949.

Broker cannot recover on contract with owners of property, whereby he was to produce buyer at stipulated price, where he knew that a receiver had been appointed to sell the land at the time broker's contract had been entered into; such appointment having terminated owner's right to stipulate terms of sale. Sligh v. Stanley (Civ. App.) 234 S. W. 700.

Mere defects in the petition upon which the receiver was appointed would not render the receivership proceedings void. Laurainc v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1022.

Esasments and water rights of landowners could not be taken and destroyed in receivership proceedings against an irrigation company without the owners having their day in court, such procedure being tantamount to deprivation of property without due process in violation of state and federal Constitutions. Edinburg Irr. Co. v. Fuchs (Civ. App.) 233 S. W. 329.

22. Right to object to or attack appointment.—Where a court had jurisdiction to appoint a receiver and administer property of insolvent corporation, creditor having no interest in property at that time could not subsequently acquire a lien and compel, in a collateral proceeding, power of court to sell property. Guaranty State Bank & Trust Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 596.

Where petition for appointment of receiver stated a cause of action within the jurisdiction of the court, the judgment, however erroneous, cannot be set aside for defects in the pleading, especially when attacked by parties who actively procured its rendition and acquiesced in subsequent orders. Laurainc v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1022.

The failure of defendants to except to the petition or appeal from the order appointing a receiver precludes them, on denial of later motion to vacate the order of appointment, from complaining on the ground that the petition for appointment was defective and the order improvidently made. Id.

23. Wrongful receiverships and liability for damages and costs.—All costs incurred by reason of receivership of a corporation, including the receiver's salary, are taxable against the plaintiff and his sureties where the receivership was improperly granted.

Operation and effect in general.—This article is declaratory of the laws applied by

Person interested.—Where wife sued for divorce and to establish land as her sepa­rate property, and husband set up express parol trust in him, it was improper, pending outcome of suit, to commit property to husband's charge, since he was an interested party, in view of this article, notwithstanding broad powers of court, in suits for di­vorce, to make equitable orders. Rudasill v. Rudasill (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 983.

Validity of appointment of improper person.—The objection to the appointment of one who held rights vested in plaintiff bank as receiver of the defendant debtor corporation because disqualified for interest, where not seasonably urged, was waived.

Where a bank cashier and stockholder, although disqualified for interest, was ap­pointed by the court for a corporation, the appointment was not void or voidable, under this article, and, where he performed the receiver's duties in good faith without objec­tion benefitting creditors and stockholders, he was entitled to compensation from the corporate funds. Id.

The compensation of an improper person appointed as a receiver should be de­termined by equitable principles. Id.

Compensation under void appointment.—Although one appointed as a receiver was not a citizen of the state, the court could lawfully without abuse of discretion com­pensate him for services and expenses by a receiver, James v. Rob­erts Telephone & Electric Co. (Com. App.) 206 S. W. 933.

See Mudge v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 819.

Art. 2133. [1470] Receiver's power.

1. Property and rights vested in receiver.—A bank, as an accommodated party, cannot maintain an action against accommodation makers of note, and the receiver of such bank acquired no better title to the paper than the bank itself. Brady v. Cobbs
(Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 802.

In a suit against the receiver of a bank to enforce stock subscriptions against various subscribers, the subscribers cannot be held liable as partners, for, if they are so liable, it is not on their subscriptions, but for money of depositors received and converted, a liability enforceable by the receiver. Davis v. Allison, 109 Tex. 440, 211 S. W. 980.

When court appointing receiver for irrigation company, took into its custody the property of the company, it took the water flowing into the canals as a part thereof.
Mudge v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 819.

Subscriber to stock in insurance company, party to transaction whereby his note was accepted in payment for stock, and whereby he received stock, being stopped to deny legality of note in suit of creditors of company, held bound to its receiver for portion of note representing subscription to surplus, not within constitutional in­hibition of issuance of stock for notes, particularly in view of fact burden was on him to show invalidity of note. Mitchell v. Porter (Com. App.) 223 S. W. 197, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 194 S. W. 981.

5. Authority of receiver in general.—A receiver appointed in partition proceedings becomes invested with the full right to the possession and control of the property.

Where the receiver of a corporation which had conveyed lands, retaining lien to secure the discharge of vendor's lien notes by the grantee, executed a release to which the holder of the vendor's lien notes was not a party, such release is not binding on the holder of the vendor's lien notes, and does not constitute evidence of the inten­tion in the minds of the parties to the conveyance. Lanham v. West (Civ. App.) 209
S. W. 258.

Receivers of railroad, who had authority to construct road, and who in so doing were required to build an embankment, had implied authority to excavate in street, in view of arts. 6445, 6494, beyond the limits of the right of way, where the engineers for the receiver testified that such excavation was necessary to get the proper drain­age, to secure an underground crossing, and to place road in reasonable state of use­fulness. Kansas City, M. & O. Ry. Co. of Texas v. Weaver (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 740.

Where a town which had two light plants was not large enough to justify the operation of both, and the plant for which a receiver was appointed could not operate at a profit without additional equipment and extensions, the order of the court authorizing the operation of the plant by the receiver was improvident and an abuse of its discretion. Ford v. Van Valkenburg (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 194.

5/2. Conflict of Jurisdiction.—When a trustee in bankruptcy takes over property in hands of a state receiver, as far as title to property is concerned, the adjudication relates back to the date of the petition, and makes subject to review only actions of the receiver or the state court appointing him. Carter-Muhlasy Transfer Co. v. Robertson (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 731.

Where a petition in bankruptcy is filed within four months of appointment of a receiver by a state court, when the adjudication in the bankruptcy court succeeds the state court, and the trustee takes over the property. Id.

Where, at the time of intestate's death, her property was being administered under receivership, the receiver was entitled to the possession of the property, and to collect the rents, and the administrator of the intestate could not collect them. Lautraine v. Dickson Car Wheel Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1103.

In view of arts. 2132 and 2133, the district court of one county has no right to interfere with the management and control of the corporation being administered by a receiver appointed by district court of another county. Mudge v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 819.

8. Supervision of court in general.—Court, having appointed receiver for irrigation plant, has the power of fixing the rates and conditions upon which the property should be conducted as a going concern. McHenry v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 660.

Contracts made by receivers under authority given by the court are in a substantial sense the contracts of the court, and cannot be annulled at the pleasure of the court. Mudge v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 819.

Itinerant testimony held to authorize holding that contract, in terms by railroad company, by an agent, to divert grain shipment from original destination, was made for and on behalf of receiver, and so bound him, in absence of testimony that agent was an interloper. Baker v. Clement Grain Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 679.

Receiver of a company, the buyer of cottonseed oil, had authority to use for the acceptance of the oil from the seller company certain cars belonging to another company, so, though he offered no other cars, he did not fail to furnish cars for the shipment. Tecumseh Oil & Cotton Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 231 S. W. 468.

9/2. Receivers' certificates.—Priorities, see notes under art. 2135.

A corporation, to justify issuance of receiver's certificates on ground that it is a quasi public corporation, must be actually quasi public, and not merely potentially so, and must subserve some appreciable service to the public, and to some reasonable extent meet a public demand and necessity. Van Valkenburgh v. Ford (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 406.

An ice and light plant whose average monthly income from ice department during the eight months under receivership was $451.33, and whose monthly average income from the light department was only $78.61, will not be deemed a quasi public corporation for purposes of issuing receiver's certificates, the dominant pursuit of such corporation being the furnishing of ice. Id.

Court had no power to authorize issuance of receiver's certificates for original construction of plant. Id.

12. Sales, authority and necessity of court to direct.—Where a court had jurisdiction to appoint a receiver and administer property of an insolvent corporation, it could convey such title as the corporation had when it took possession thereof. Guaranty State Bank & Trust Co. v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 960.

If the receiver is appointed to take possession of and sell certain real estate, the owners of the property have no right to fix the terms upon which the land is to be sold. Sligh v. Stanley (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 700.

Court, having appointed receiver for irrigation plant, has a right, upon its own motion, to sell and dispose of all assets and properties which it had taken and was administering through its receiver. McHenry v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 560.

15. Rights and liabilities of purchasers.—Purchaser of railroad property and corporate organization appointed to operate held charged with contract made by receiver to establish for a railroad construction division headquarters at particular town. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. City of恩施 (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 256.

Where parties to whom an irrigation plant had furnished water for irrigation purposes were made parties to receivership suit wherein the plant was sold at judicial sale, free from all easements, a purchaser at such sale held to have acquired title to the plant free from plaintiff's easements. McBride v. United Irr. Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 498.

In an action to compel a public water supply company to furnish water for irrigation purposes at a stated price, evidence held to show that plaintiff had acquired a right to receive water at a reasonable rate from the plant prior to a receiver's sale wherein plaintiff's easements were alleged to have been sold. Id.

In a suit by judgment creditor to establish liability of purchaser of property of debtor, a foreign corporation, sold under receivership proceedings in federal court, evidence held insufficient to establish that purchaser was a continuation of foreign corporation or was party to any fraud in attempt to defeat claim of judgment creditor. Advance-Rumely Thresher Co. v. Moss (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 690.

Where assets and property of insolvent corporation are transferred to purchaser under federal court decree authorizing sale free of lien, purchaser held not liable on trust fund theory to judgment creditor who obtained judgment after receivership proceeding in a suit pending prior thereto and who had not submitted himself to jurisdiction of federal court. Id.

Receiver's sale under decree decreeing the property to be sold free of all liens, except the contract liens, held to pass title to all improvements placed on the property by the receiver, and all additions thereto made by him from the net earnings, and to preclude receiver's supply creditors, who did not question sale, and who accepted a part of the proceeds in part payment of claims, from asserting any claim against purchasers based on excess earnings by receiver. Mayowntown Lumber Co. v. Nacogdoches Grocery Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 644.

Purchasers of an irrigation system in receivership proceedings could acquire no higher title than the receiver acquired, and were charged with all obligations of irrigation company and with all its covenants to furnish water. Edinburg Irr. Co. v. Paschen (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 329.

17. Allowance of demands.—Receiver for railroad company held to have authority to determine claim which accrued before he was appointed and took charge of railroad company's property. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Concrete Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 718.

21. Liability of receiver in general.—Though a receiver may not be forced to carry out executory contract, the estate is not, by his rejection of the contract, released from liability for its breach. Tecumseh Oil & Cotton Co. v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 485.

23. Actions against receivers.—Parties to actions, see notes at end of ch. 5 of this title.

Where bondholders were not parties to receivership proceeding, but acquired title therein, receiver's supply creditors, in bringing suit for payment, in which bondholders were joined as defendants, properly instituted an independent proceeding, since their equities as against the bondholders could not be adjusted, except by making the bondholders parties thereto. Mayowntown Lumber Co. v. Nacogdoches Grocery Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 644.

Art. 2135. [1472] Application of funds in hand of receiver and claims preferred.

Construction and validity in general.—Under this article, which subjects to the payment of claims against the receiver of a railroad, on contracts made by him during the receivership, the moneys received by him as such, a shipper may maintain against a receiver an action for damages resulting from injury to goods, and for delay in transporting them. Yockum v. Dunn, 1 Civ. App. 524, 21 S. W. 411.

Priorities of liens and incumbrances.—The power to discharge prior liens, and thus to impair the force of contracts, is such an extraordinary one, that, in order to call into exercise such power, the facts justifying it should be clear and unequivocal. Van Valkenburgh v. Ford (Civ. App.) 287 S. W. 406.

Priority of claims in general—Expenses of receivership.—Vendor's lien is entitled to priority over fees of receiver, his attorney, and master in chancery incurred in receivership proceedings of corporation organized by vendee, where vendor was not a party thereto until his action against vendee on purchase-money notes, in which corporation was not a party, was consolidated with receivership proceeding without consent of vendor, and where such fees were incurred before vendor was made a party. But such fees are superior to chattel mortgage liens on property in receivership, where holders of such liens intervened in receivership proceedings, and voluntarily used such proceedings for collection of their debts. Van Valkenburgh v. Ford (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 405.

—— Debts incurred prior to receivership.—Intervener recovered a judgment for personal injuries against a railroad company which subsequently went into the hands of a receiver, after which the mortgagee of the road took steps to foreclose its mortgage, which in express terms covered the earnings, and to establish a lien against the earnings in the hands of the receiver. Held, that intervener's claim was entitled to such preference in the distribution of the earnings of the road while in the hands of the receiver, and before the mortgagee took steps to foreclose, for the statute does not impair the mortgage security, since a mortgagee has no lien on earnings that arise after his taking possession, though his mortgage expressly covers the earnings of the road. Glies v. Stanton (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 556.

—— Receiver's certificates.—Court's power to issue receiver's certificates to become a superior lien to the displacement of prior mortgage liens is not an arbitrary capricious one, but can be resorted to only in the exercise of sound judicial discretion. Receiver's certificates improvidently issued, without notice to prior lienholders, and without hearing, will not be given priority as against prior incumbrances or liens, where such improvidently issued are not appear on full hearing, and where light plant during its eight years of existence had never been a success, had been idle much of the time, had competing light plant serving more customers in town of 3,000 population, and during eight months of operation by receiver had continually lost money, so that at end of such time the plant had entirely consumed itself, the issue of receiver's cer-titicates as superior lien on property was improvident and an abuse of discretion. And the failure to hold certificates, which was a stockholder and the issuance of the certificates with understanding that no notice was to be given to creditors, was the chief mover in proceedings to procure certificates, no application therefor being made by creditors, holds certificates subject to prior rights of prior lienholders who was not a party to the proceeding, as who was given no notice thereof. Van Valkenburgh v. Ford (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 405.

In the operation of a public corporation the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, may authorize the issuance of receiver's certificates for operating expenses, even to the displacement of prior mortgage liens, but has no such power, except under the doctrine of estoppel, where the corporation in the hands of the receiver is a private corporation. And receiver's certificates improvidently issued, and made superior lien on property, issued without making prior lienholders parties to the receivership proceedings, will not be given priority over prior liens, where holder of receiver's certificates was stockholder and treasurer of the company when property was being administered by receiver, and must have had full knowledge of hopeless financial condition and impracticability of operation at a profit. Where idle and stagnant ice and light plant was sold by individual, subject to vendor's lien, to one who subsequently organized corporation with quasi public incidents to operate plant, the character of the corporation, upon plant passing into hands of receiver, did not destroy priority of vendor's lien as to receiver's certificates. Id.

Receiver's certificates issued for the cost of operating a plant which was unnecessary and could not be operated at a profit, and which were therefore improvidently issued, are not entitled to priority over an existing vendor's lien on the real estate. Ford v. Van Valkenburgh (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 194.

Parties entitled to contest priorities.—Holder of vendor's lien on property being operated by receiver, not having been made a party to receivership proceedings at the time receiver's certificates were issued, and having no notice of issuance thereof, may attack the necessity and wisdom of issuance of such certificates upon subsequently being made party. Van Valkenburgh v. Ford (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 405. Bondholders, having acquiesced in the appointment of a receiver, and the operation of the properties of the company through such receiver, made themselves responsible for the cost of such operation, and their contract lien became subject to the payment of the supply creditors. Evidence in action by receiver's supply creditors for payment held to sustain finding that bondholders were privies to, and acquiesced in, and agreed and consented to the appointment of such receiver, and the operation of the lumber company through such receivership. Mayowntown Lumber Co. v. Nacogdoches Grocery Co. (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 644.

Liability of parties for whom receivers have been appointed.—As a general rule, a corporation is not liable for any acts of a receiver, who has full possession of its property and entire charge of its affairs. Foder v. Crenwelge (Civ. App.) 293 S. W. 1125.

Art. 2136. [1473] Proceedings in suits where receiver is discharged.

Actions against receivers.—In a negligence action against railroad in hands of receiver, the railroad company is neither a proper nor necessary party to such action. Schaff v. Mason (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 288.

Art. 2137. [1474] When property in the hands of receiver subject to execution.

Issuance of execution.—In action against receiver of railroad company, direction of issuance of execution for collection of judgment in favor of plaintiffs was error; plaintiffs being entitled to present their claim evidenced by judgment to court in which receivership proceeding is pending. Andrews v. Rice (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 695.

Enforcement of judgment of one court against property in hands of receiver of another court.—Art. 2146 does not, in view of this article, confer upon one court the right to enforce a judgment out of property in the hands of receiver of another court, or to interfere with the custody and control of such property. Mudge v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 819.

Art. 2139. [1476] Persons to whom property delivered liable for debts.

Operation and effect in general.—On appeal from judgment finding railroad company receiving road after termination of receivership liable for negligence of receiver, burden lay on company to show that receiver was appointed by federal court to avoid operation of arts. 2139, 2141, making company liable as receiver. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Burleson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 617.

Where receiver of railroad company is appointed by state court and not federal court, by express provisions of arts. 2139, 2141, railroad company after termination of receivership is liable for negligence of receiver while operating road. Id.

Grounds of liability.—To make carrier liable for injuries to cattle, while railroad was in hands of a federal receiver, it must be shown that the receivership has terminated and the railroad returned to the corporation with such liability imposed upon it by the decree of the court as a condition to receive it, or that the revenues received by

Art. 2140. [1477] Effect of discharge of receiver.

Art. 2141. [1478] Property redelivered by receiver without sale still liable for debts; suits do not abate, but new party may be made.

Liability for unpaid debts and claims.—Railroad to which its property was returned after discharge of receiver held not liable to passenger, injured by trainmen when road was in hands of receiver, where receiver made no earnings while operating road's properties, and no betterments were made therein while in his hands. Beaumont, S. L. & W. Ry. Co. v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 193 S. W. 825.

Railway company after termination of receivership, was not liable for loss or damages to shipment of household goods occurring during receivership, where it was not shown that receiver operated at a profit, and that sufficient net earnings to pay all claims incurred by receiver had been paid over to the company on termination of receivership, or that court appointing receiver made his debts a charge upon corpus of the property, or that, when receivership terminated, the debts incurred were made a charge against railway company. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Zidell (Civ. App.) 267 S. W. 351.

Where court ordered railroad to take back its assets from receiver with all receiver's "obligations," word "obligation" included cause of action by employer for injuries from negligence of the receiver. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Webber (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 519.

"Receiver for property by railroad which 'released and relieved' receiver "from all liabilities" was supported by a consideration, and implied a promise to pay liabilities occasioned by negligence of receiver, and could be sued on by injured employe. Id.

Railroad not being primarily liable for acts of receiver arising from his negligence, because receiver is independent agent of the court, in suit against railroad after discharge of receiver to enforce obligation or liability incurred by receiver, a state of facts must be shown creating liability of railroad. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Lopes (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 192.

Railroad company held to have assumed all liabilities of its receiver or receivers when it received back its properties pursuant to order of court, in view of decree, in connection with indemnity agreement. Id.

In absence of statute, railroad, upon termination of receivership, is not liable for negligence in operation of road during the receivership, unless profits of operation during such time have been paid over to the company or invested in betterments, or the company or its property was made liable for debts of the receivership in the order or decree discharging receivers. Best & Russell Cigar Co. v. William Reese Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 217.

— Federal court receivership.—Where federal court which appointed receiver for railroad ordered property turned back conditionally on railroad's taking all benefits and assuming all obligations, railroad was bound to pay judgment for damages predicated on tort of servant of railroad while in hands of receiver. Beaumont, S. L. & W. Ry. Co. v. Danielis (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 481.

On appeal from judgment finding railroad company receiving road after termination of receivership liable for negligence of receiver, burden is on company to show that receiver was appointed by federal court to avoid operation of arts. 2138, 2141, making company liable for negligence of receiver. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Burleson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 617.

Judgment.—In a suit against both a receiver and a railroad company on a cause of action accruing during the receivership, the property having been restored to the company, the failure to render judgment against the receiver when judgment is rendered against the company, if error, is not prejudicial. Bonner v. Blum (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 60.

Art. 2143. [1480] Receiver and person to whom property is delivered both liable and may be sued for unpaid claim.

Liability of receiver.—Where railway was in receivership when plaintiff's cause of action for injury to shipment of household goods accrued, and for nearly a year thereafter, receivers should be made parties to his action against railroad for such damage, brought after termination of receivership. Ft. Worth & R. G. Ry. Co. v. Zidell (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 351.

In suit for injuries against railroad and receiver, it being alleged that properties of road had been restored to it (not that receiver was ever discharged), but with assumed liability for all debts and damages during receivership, or that its revenues were expended by receiver in betterments, receiver himself should not be held liable in absence

After termination of railroad receivership, receiver cannot be held liable for negligence in operation of railroad during receivership, where he was not personally at fault; the receiver's liability being official, and being terminated upon termination of receivership. Best & Russell Cigar Co. v. William Reese Co. (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 317.

Art. 2144. [1481] Receiver to give bond on appeal.

Constitutionality.—Gen. Laws Tex. 1888, p. 58, purports in its title to be “an act to amend * * * * an act for the appointment of receivers, and to define their powers and duties, and to regulate proceedings under such appointment of receivers.” Held, that this is not violative of Const. Tex. art. 5, § 35, which provides that “no bill shall contain more than one subject, which shall be expressed in its title.” Dillingham v. Putnam (Sup.) 14 S. W. 302.

The provision of this article that, before an appeal or writ of error is allowed a receiver, he shall give bond with sureties in a sum double the amount of the judgment, is unconstitutional, as violating Const. art. 1, § 13, in that it denies to receivers the right to have judgments against them reviewed on the same terms as those prescribed for other persons (citing Dillingham v. Putnam, 109 Tex. 1, 14 S. W. 203). National Equitable Soc. v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 602.

Art. 2146. [1483] Receiver may sue or be sued without leave; effect of judgment against.

Action against receiver.—In an action against two different railroad companies and their receivers, evidence held to establish that only one of them was acting as receiver when the cause of action arose. Baker v. Lyons (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1090.

Under this article, a receiver may sue in a court other than that in which the receivership is pending, for the purpose of establishing and reducing the claim to judgment. National Equitable Soc. v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 184.

Judgment and enforcement.—Art. 2146, authorizing suits against receivers without first obtaining leave of the court appointing such receivers, does not, in view of this article, confer upon one court the right to enforce a judgment out of property in the hands of receiver of another court, or to interfere with the custody and control of such property. Mudge v. Hughes (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 819.

Art. 2147. [1484] Suits against receiver, where brought.

Cited.—Kieschnick v. Martin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 948.

Venue.—Under art. 1330, subd. 24, and this article, the district court of S. county, through which the road of a railroad corporation extended, had authority to appoint a receiver for such corporation, though the principal office of the corporation was in A county. Bonner v. Heerne, 75 Tex. 242, 12 S. W. 38.

The word “may” as used in this article, is permissive only, and hence does not limit jurisdiction of actions against receivers of corporation to the county where the principal office of the corporation is located. Mitchell v. Hancock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694.

Receiver's plea to the jurisdiction on the ground that he was not sued in the county where the principal office of the defendant corporation was located, held properly overruled, where it appeared that he was made a party merely that he might be concluded by the decree and had no real objection to being a party to the litigation. Id.

Art. 2151. [1489] Where there are betterments, general creditors have rights to be protected.

Necessity of showing of betterments.—Railroad to which its property was returned after discharge of receiver held not liable to passenger injured by trainmen when road was in hands of receiver, where receiver made no earnings while operating road's properties, and no betterments were made thereon while in his hands. Beaumont, S. L. & W. Ry. Co. v. Daniel (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 625.

Damages for personal injuries to railroad's servant while railroad is operated by receiver are part of receiver's expenses incurred in operating, payable out of current earnings of railroad, which earnings, if diverted by receiver, and placed in permanent improvements, or turned over to railroad without sale, make it liable to extent of earnings diverted or turned over. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 192.

In action by injured servant against railroad previously under receivership, evidence held sufficient to show betterments by receiver, at least prima facie. Id.

If railroad unquestionably assumed liability of receiver as to injured servant's cause of action and secured discharge of receivership and redeivery to it of all properties without sale, issue of betterments is immaterial in fixing railroad's liability to servant, though he alleges railroad's liability rests upon betterments rather than upon assumption. Id.

Evidence held to show that improvements were made upon railroad properties by receiver out of earnings while in his hands in excess of amount sued for by one injured by the negligence of the receiver's servants. St. Louis, B. & M. Ry. Co. v. Broughton (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 664.

Art. 2152. [1490] Judgments and other claims have preference over mortgage.

Application in general.—Where a railroad company, in consideration of a right of way, contracts with the grantor for the erection of a tank on his land for its use, to be supplied with water from his spring, and agrees to pay him therefor, a lien to secure such payment exists on the earnings of the road in the hands of a receiver subsequently appointed, and an action for the breach of such contract will lie, and judgment may be rendered against the receiver, under this article. Howe v. Harding, 76 Tex. 17, 13 S. W. 41, 18 Am. St. Rep. 17.

In an action for damages caused by defective construction, the receivers having been appointed before judgment, in the hands of the receivers when the judgment was rendered. Held, that the judgment would be presumed good, in the absence of any request by defendants for findings to the contrary, or of a statement of the facts before the trial court. Yoakum v. Richards (Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 308.

Art. 2153. [1491] Receivership of corporations limited to three years.

Pendency of litigation.—If this article could be held to apply to individual receiverships, it would not authorize termination of receivership of individual, pending litigation. Lauraline v. First Nat. Bank (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1022.

Effect as to rules of practice in Supreme Court.—In view of art. 2156, this article does not affect the rules of practice provided by statute and established by the supreme court; and a bill of exceptions approved by a master in chancery, but not approved by the district court, cannot be considered on appeal. Ballard v. McMillan, 5 Civ. App. 679, 25 S. W. 327.

Costs.—In receivers' proceedings, held, that petitioner alone was liable for attorney's fees or filling original petition, in view of the agreement did not show earnings in the hands of the receivers when the judgment was rendered. J. B. Farthing Lumber Co. v. Greenwood (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 313.

Jury trial.—Intervening landowners in receivership proceedings against an irrigation plant have no right to have their water rights determined by jury trial, the court which appointed receiver having right to fix rates, and landowners' remedy being appeal. McHenry v. Bankers' Trust Co. (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 569.

4. MASTERS IN CHANCERY

In general.—Where duties of master in chancery are not fully set out or indicated by court's appointing order, such duties are to assist court, but in no wise to supersede its action. Citizens' State Bank of Alvin v. Joplin (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 370.

Proceedings before master.—Arts. 2155, 2156, do not affect the rules of practice provided by statute and established by the supreme court; and a bill of exceptions approved by a master in chancery, but not approved by the district court, cannot be considered on appeal. Ballard v. McMillan, 5 Civ. App. 679, 25 S. W. 327.

Master in chancery has authority to adjudicate only that which has been referred to by him by order of his appointment. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Concrete Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 718.

Report of master.—Where court, on own initiative, appointed master, findings of master, specifically excepted to and presented to court, which heard other testimony, were not binding on the court. Citizens' State Bank of Alvin v. Joplin (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 370.

The report of a referee is a proper basis for a judgment, but is not evidence of an adjudication until it has been accepted and judgment rendered thereon. International & G. N. Ry. Co. v. Concrete Inv. Co. (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 718.

Art. 2157. [1498] [1475] Lost records and papers supplied, on motion.

Necessity of substitution.—See Crenshaw v. Montague County (Civ. App.) 238 S. W. 569.

Where assignments had been lost or destroyed, it was incumbent on appellant to substitute them as provided by arts. 2157–2163. Hassell v. Rose (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 845.

Where the files were lost, and appellant made no attempt to substitute records under arts. 2157–2163, and his bills and assignments showed no error, he was not entitled to demand for new trial "to permit intelligent consideration by the Court of Civil Appeals." Massingill v. Moody (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 265.

Art. 2163. [1504] [1481] Substituted copies constitute record.

Operation and effect in general.—Where assignments have been lost or destroyed and have been substituted for, as provided by arts. 2157–2163, inclusive, the transcript on appeal can be perfected by certiorari. Hassell v. Rose (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 845.

6. DEPOSIT OF MONEY, ETC., IN COURT

Art. 2164. [1462] [1458] Custody of money and other articles deposited.

Applicability in general.—A sheriff made a levy on certain counters and shelving, but did not sell them before the expiration of his term, nor make a formal transfer to his successor. Held, that Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1458–1460 do not apply to the property levied on. Wolf v. Taylor, 68 Tex. 660, 5 S. W. 855.

Deposit in court.—All of rice in which plaintiff owned, as claimed, a fifth interest being sold by consent, and four-fifths of proceeds paid to defendant, the other fifth passed into registry of the court, and was properly adjudged to plaintiff. Blair v. Colorado Canal Co. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 176.

In action to cancel sheriff's deed on ground that purchaser promised owner to re-convey on owner's payment of price paid for land by purchaser, it was not necessary for owner to actually tender the money admitted to be due and owing to purchaser into court; an offer to do equity and to perform such decree as the court may enter being sufficient. Chandler v. Riley (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 716.

STIPULATIONS

Construction and operation in general.—In an action in which it was sought to enforce an agreement that the action, with others, should abide the result of a certain pending action and be determined by such result, it was not necessary that the parties plaintiff in the other suits mentioned in the agreement should be joined as parties to the present action. Mitchell v. Hancock (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 694.

It is a stipulation between the parties that a pending action shall abide the result of another action and be determined thereby that the stipulation be mutually beneficial. Id.

Where by filed agreement of counsel the issues and questions involved in a suit are identified with those involved in another suit, and the briefs taken in the latter case are applicable on appeal in the former case. Santa Fe Townsite Co. v. Parker (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 274.

In suit to restrain the approval and sale of bonds voted by a school district, an agreement or stipulation that the voters of the district had actual notice of the bond election, notice of which was not posted as prescribed by statute, in the absence of any words of limitation, must be construed to mean that all the voters of the district had notice. Mayhew v. Commissioners' Court of Coryell County (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 96.

Plaintiffs were not represented by counsel when the case was called, and after granting several short postponements the court began trial after expiration of time fixed for duration of term, but on one of plaintiff's counsel becoming ill the case was by agreement postponed until the following term, at which time testimony introduced on the first trial was reintroduced, held that, although the court may have considered testimony introduced on the first hearing at a time when it had extended the term, plaintiffs, having failed to raise the matter even in their original brief in the appellate court, cannot, as their stipulation contemplated the consideration of evidence heard before postponement, raise it thereafter. Blair v. Paggi (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 237.

In suit by company to recover from the representative of a buggy company moneys from sale of buggies pending litigation, agreed by defendant to be paid over to plaintiff company if the court held its chattel mortgage lien superior, there being no evidence that defendant obtained the fund by fraud, plaintiff was not entitled to recover attorney's fees. Short v. Blair & Hughes Co. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 427.

In agreement between a company and the representative of a buggy company that, if pending litigation resulted in the determination of the priority of the chattel mortgage,
SUIT BY NEXT FRIEND

Article 2167. [3498a] When minor may sue by next friend.

Actions by next friend of minor.—A parent under this article, can bring an action, if in good faith, as next friend to annul a marriage of a minor son. Thompson v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 175.

A petition wherein a parent sued to annul the marriage of his minor son, held to have been instituted by the parent as next friend, although the son was named as a defendant and the parent sought certain relief in his own behalf. Id.

Suit for a minor may be instituted by his father as his next friend. Race v. Decker (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 709.

A married woman has no legal capacity to sue as next friend on behalf of her minor son, where her husband, who is the minor’s stepfather, refuses to sue or join in the suit. Carroll v. Embry (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 575.

While a minor’s guardian may, under this article, represent the ward in all suits filed after his appointment, he has no absolute right to displace the next friend in a case originating prior thereto. Jones v. Chronister Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 704.

Guardian’s allegations that ward was injured while employed in violation of law, and that his father, as next friend, made insufficient and inadequate settlement through ignorance, but that no final judgment was entered, made in an unsworn petition, were insufficient to require the court to substitute the guardian for the father as next friend. Id.

Judgment.—It is not an absolute prerequisite to jurisdiction of an action by a minor that he should sue by next friend, but it is a matter of procedure, and the fact that the minor was without representation merely makes the judgment voidable at his instance and not void; consequently a judgment recovered by a minor not suing by next friend need not be enjoined in the independent suit of defendant on the ground that it was wholly void. Gross v. Griffin (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 784.
Art. 2167  COURTS—DISTRICT AND COUNTY—PRACTICE IN  (Title 37)

Though an infant was a party plaintiff by next friend in a suit to partition a decedent’s estate, yet the suit being expressly against his interest, and the judgment following the petition arbitrarily and illegally taking from him part of what the will gave him and adding it to what the will gave the others, he may, on attaining majority, attack the judgment as one obtained through the active fraud or collusion of his next friend, whatever her motive and however honest her purpose. Reynolds v. Prestidge (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 358.

Art. 2168.  [3498v] Next friend may compromise, etc.

Inadequate settlement as ground for substitution of guardian.—Guardian’s allegations that ward was injured while employed in violation of law, and that his father, as next friend, made insufficient and inadequate settlement through ignorance, but that no final judgment was entered, made in an unsworn petition, were insufficient to require the court to substitute the guardian for the father as next friend. Jones v. Chronister Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 784.

Art. 2169.  [3498w] May collect certain personal judgments, etc.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

SUITES AGAINST NON-RESIDENTS

Art. 2174.  [1504c] Requisites of pleadings.—The pleadings in such case shall set forth the title of the complainant; and such proceedings shall be had in such action as may be necessary to fully settle and determine the question of right or title in and to said property between the parties to said suit, and to decree the title or right of the party entitled thereto; and the court may issue the appropriate order to carry such decree, judgment or order into effect. [Acts 1893, p. 77; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 58, § 1, amending art. 2174, Rev. Civ. St.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 2175.  [1504d] Judgment by default cannot be rendered.

Personal judgment against non-resident.—Judgment in rem against nonresident by publication after attachment and garnishment proceedings against property in state binds only the property attached, and does not support garnishment proceedings instituted after entry of such judgment in rem. Burrow-Jones-Dyer Shoe Co. v. Gerlach Mercantile Co. (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 250.

Proper judgment in attachment and garnishment proceedings against nonresident not personally appearing would be to limit judgment’s execution to specific property attached or garnished. Id.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

ATTORNEY’S FEES, RECOVERY OF

Article 2178.  Attorney’s fees recoverable in certain cases; procedure; costs.

Constitutionality.—To construe this article, as applying to damage claims arising prior to the act becoming effective, would render it retrospective in its operation, and therefore obnoxious to Const. art. 1, § 16. Freeman v. W. B. Walker & Sons (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 637.

Prospective operation.—It must be presumed that the Legislature intended by the use of the word “hereafter” that the statute should be prospective, so that attorney’s fees could not be had in a suit upon a claim which arose prior to the act becoming effective. Freeman v. W. B. Walker & Sons (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 637.

Street assessments.—Art. 1011, authorizing provision for reasonable attorney’s fees in an action on certificates of assessment for improvements, is not limited or affected in any way by this article. Elmendorf v. City of San Antonio (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 631.

Persons entitled to allowance.—Under art. 8623a, permitting materialmen and laborers to file suit to enforce payment and collection of the indebtedness due them, the suit being against the owner as well as the building contractors, the owner is entitled to recover his attorney's fees against the contractor's surety. Wright v. A. G. McAdams Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 571.

Persons liable.—The Director General of Railroads is a "person doing business in this state" liable under this article, for attorney's fees on recovery of judgment for full amount of claim not paid after presentation. Hines v. Easterly (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 913.

Grounds for allowance in general.—There is no authority under Texas law for assessment of attorney's fees against creditors or sureties on sheriff's indemnity bonds taken under art. 253, when sued for conversion, unless the bonds so provide. Copprand v. Gardner (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 659.

Under this article, in action against railroad for killing a mule, if plaintiff's claim presented was not for a greater sum than the claim proved he is entitled to recover a sum not exceeding $20 as attorney's fee, but if the claim presented was for a greater sum than the claim proved, he is not entitled to recover anything as an attorney's fee. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Post (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 129.

In such action, where plaintiff complied with the statutory condition that plaintiff "shall finally establish his claim * * * as presented for payment," the fact that he did not establish, at the trial, a claim for interest covered by his suit, but which he never presented to defendant for payment, is not a reason why the statute did not operate in his favor.

On quashing writ of sequestration, see Kubena v. Mikulascik (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1163.

Amount and computation.—Where a portion of the homestead has been abandoned, in foreclosure a materialman's lien on such portion there is no legal objection to including the amount of attorney's fees in the foreclosure. Lipscomb v. Adamson Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 228.

In a suit by materialmen, subcontractors, and laborers against the owner, the contractors, and the latter's sureties, there was no error in submitting to the jury the question of the amount due the owner's attorney's fees which the owner was entitled to set off against the balance due the contractors from him and assigned to the sureties. Wright v. A. G. McAdams Lumber Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 571.

Proof and allowance.—In action for value of horse killed by train of defendant, plaintiff could not recover attorney's fees, without evidence as to what would be reasonable attorney's fee under statute. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Claybon (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 488.

As a part of amount in controversy.—In action against railroad for $200 for mule killed and $20 attorney's fees under this article, where it appeared plaintiff had a right to the attorney's fee claimed, such fee was properly included in determining the amount in controversy, which therefore amounted to $220. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Post (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 129.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Name of state.—The order of the county commissioners for an election to determine whether, within a certain district, the sale of liquor should be prohibited, a copy of which order Rev. St. 1879, art. 3250, requires shall be posted by the clerk at four different places within the proposed election district, is not a "writ" or "process" within article 1445, which requires that all writs and processes shall run in the name of the state. Gilbert v. State, 32 Cr. R. 596, 28 S. W. 632.

Date of issuance.—Notification by clerk of date of issue of citation upon whom thereof was sufficient, within this article, requiring date of issuance to be noted on same. Hoff v. Clark (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 431.

Art. 2182. Suits consolidated, when.

Actions which may be consolidated.—Suits by separate plaintiffs, suing for separate demands, each case being dependent on issues entirely disconnected and distinct, are not within this article. Pena v. Baker (Civ. App.) 297 S. W. 426.
The district court did not err in consolidating writs of certiorari to review orders of the county court appointing an administrator to collect inheritance tax, approving the contract between the administrator and the attorney for the estate, ordering sale of a small part of the land belonging to the estate to pay the attorney's retaining fee, etc. Thompson v. Dodge (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 586.

Actions against executors and their sureties, one for waste and misapplication of funds, and another to set aside a conveyance of lands of the estate, fraudulently procured, to one of the sureties, with the collusion of the executors, held properly consolidated under this article. Bain v. Coats (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 571.

Discretion of court and review.—The rights of action of a widow and her children for damages for the unauthorized burial of their husband and father are for a tort affecting each individual separately, and, though the court may for convenience permit them to be prosecuted jointly as arising from the same transaction, that is within the court's discretion, and his requirement that they be prosecuted separately is not reversible. Foster v. Foster (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 216.

The ruling or order for consolidation of causes cannot be reviewed; exception not having been taken thereto. Williams v. Baldwin (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 975.

Under this article, whether suits should be consolidated is largely in the trial court's discretion, and this discretion will not be reviewed unless there has been manifest injury. Pena v. Baker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 426; Bain v. Coats (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 571.
TITLE 38

COURTS—JUVENILE

1. Dependent and neglected children.

CHAPTER ONE

DEPENDENT AND NEGLECTED CHILDREN

Art. 2184. “Dependent child” or “neglected child” defined.

Cited, Gully v. Gully (Bup.) 131 s. W. 97.

Constitutionality.—Arts. 2184–2190, defining the jurisdiction of juvenile courts and prescribing the procedure as to dependent or neglected children, are not in violation of Const. art. 5, § 8, conferring on the district court original jurisdiction over guardians and minors and general jurisdiction over all causes of action for which a remedy or jurisdiction is not provided by law or Constitution, when considered in connection with section 16, giving the county court a power to appoint guardians of minors. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 251.

Contempt in controversy over custody.—Relator, adjudged guilty of contempt in controversy over custody of dependent child, under arts. 2184–2190, a civil proceeding will not be granted habeas corpus by Court of Criminal Appeals, but relegated to civil courts in view of Const. art. 5, §§ 3, 5, and art. 1529. Ex parte Little, 83 Cr. R. 375, 203 S. W. 766.

Art. 2185. County and district courts, etc.

Art. 2189. Adjudication, etc.

In general.—Rev. St. 1895, arts. 3502a, 3502b, conferred upon the county courts the power to determine the custody of children and to exercise the power through a writ of habeas corpus in cases where guardianship was not involved, while Rev. St. 1911, arts. 2184, 2189, and 2190, provide for the appointment of guardians and make custody in such cases only an incident of the guardianship. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 251.

Habeas corpus to review.—Where the county court authorized the probation officer to take charge of a dependent child pending a motion for a new trial, such action, if error, could be corrected only upon motion for new trial or upon appeal, but not by means of writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 251.

Art. 2190. Child to be ward of custodian, etc.

See Ex parte Grimes (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 251.

CHAPTER TWO

DELINQUENT CHILDREN

Article 2200.

Repeal.—Code Cr. Proc. 1916, art. 1196, repealing a former provision, leaving a transfer of case of juvenile charged with felony to juvenile court to trial judge’s discretion, repealed Rev. Civ. St. art. 2200, containing a similar provision. McLaren v. State, 82 Cr. R. 449, 199 S. W. 811.
Art. 2201e. May grant habeas corpus, etc.

Art. 2216-2228. [Superseded.]

ORGANIZATION

Art. 2237. Court composed of whom and the presiding officer thereof.
Art. 2238. Three members constitute a quorum, except.

Article 2237. [1533] [1510] Court composed of whom and the presiding officer thereof.

Art. 2238. [1534] [1511] Three members constitute a quorum, except.

CHAPTER TWO

POWERS AND DUTIES

Article 2241. [1537] [1514] Certain powers of the court specified.

1/2. Jurisdiction not exclusive.—Const. art. 5, § 18, providing that the commissioners' court shall exercise such power and jurisdiction over all county business as is conferred by the Constitution and laws of the state, does not preclude the Legislature from conferring on other agencies, nor does any provision of the Constitution prohibit the exercise of such legislative power. Garrett v. Commissioners' Court of Limestone County (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1010.

2/2. Fixing time and place of holding justices' courts.—Const. art. 5, § 19, provides that the justices shall hold their courts at such times and places as may be provided by law. Rev. St. 1879, art. 1514, and art. 1547 as amended by Act 1881, provide that the times and places at which justices of the peace shall hold their terms of court shall be fixed by the county commissioners' court. No order was made by the commissioners' court fixing the time and place of holding court by one E., elected one of the justices of the peace for a certain precinct. But it appeared that such an order had been made in the case of S., a former justice of the peace for such precinct, and that both one who had been justice of the peace for said precinct up to B.'s election, and B., held court at the time and place indicated in such order. Held, that a judgment rendered by B., as justice of the peace was not void as rendered without jurisdiction; it being presumed that the court held by S., was the same court as that held by B., and an order once made fixing the time and place of holding court continuing in force until changed. Kammer v. Towner, 77 Tex. 45, 11 S. W. 26.

4. Construction of roads, bridges, and ferries.—Under subd. 6 of this article, commissioners' courts may pave a road or street within the limits of a city connecting with a county highway where the city does not object to the county doing so. Smith v. Cathey (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 158.

The powers of commissioners' courts in relation to the building of county roads, except as to the limits of taxation therefor, are governed wholly by general laws, following the command of Const. art. 11, § 2, particularly arts. 600-610, this article and art. 2242, which follows the amendment of Const. art. 8, § 9, limiting the amount of levy. Lasater v. Lopez, 110 Tex. 175, 217 S. W. 375.

By this article, as to powers of commissioners' courts over public roads and highways, such courts are given general jurisdiction. Jackson v. McAllister (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 671. When bonds are issued commissioners' court, as incidental to the express power over roads given by this article, and the "control" and "custody" of the bonds given by article 632, has power to determine the manner and methods to be adopted in order to effect a sale, and when it is not reasonably possible to sell them at par. Id.

Courts cannot go into the question of the necessity for improvements made by the commissioners' court, under this article. Lasater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1039.

That the Legislature has provided means for procuring a road fund does not imply prohibit the commissioners' court from going into debt to build roads, under this article. Id.

See Montfort v. Commissioners' Court of Navarro County (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 424.

6. Contracts in general.—Although contract between commissioners' court and road contractor made estimates of a certain engineer binding, such court was not precluded from rejecting the estimate as grossly erroneous and unfair to the contractor. Lasater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1639.

Statutes authorizing the use of road hands cannot be held to affect or limit the powers granted by this article, to the commissioners' court to improve roads by contract. Id.

6/2. Provision for payment.—Under Const. art. 11, § 7, providing that no debts shall ever be incurred by a county unless provision is made at the time of creating the same for levying and collecting a sufficient tax to pay it, it is not enough, to provide funds for the payment of the debt after it has been created, as nothing the commissioners' court can do after creating the debt, without so providing, can validate it. J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co. v. Camp County (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 1, 2.

To make provision for the levy and collection of taxes prior to or at the time of creating a debt as provided by Const. art. 11, § 7, when this has not been done by law, requires some affirmative action on the part of the county authorities with special reference to the particular debt being created or contemplated, it not being sufficient to provide for raising a fund which may or may not be used lawfully for its payment, a fund being necessary which cannot lawfully be diverted for any other purpose by a succeeding commissioners' court. Id.

8/2. Lease of highways.—In view of Pen. Code 1911, art. 812, as to obstructing highways, a commissioners' court has no authority, under this article and arts. 1375, 6859, 6860, 6861, to lease any portion of the public highways for oil and gas wells, which will necessarily be obstructions thereof, notwithstanding such portion of the highway has been acquired by purchase and not condemnation, or the lessee also holds a lease from the owner of the fee of the land over which such portion of the highway runs as a right of way. Boone v. Clark (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 607.

9. Delegation of authority to construct court house.—A contract by commissioners' court of a county for the construction of a courthouse in effect making the contractor its agent, with authority to parcel out the contract to subcontractors and thereby releasing him from all liability thereon, was void, because delegating the court's powers. Hendies v. Fryer (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 216.
1052. Form of orders.—The commissioners' court need not go through any particular form in passing orders, and the suggestion by one member that certain action be taken upon a proposition, and assent by other members, in open session, is sufficient to authorize the entry of such action on the minutes. Earnest v. Woodlee (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 963.

15. Employment of counsel.—After the commissioners' court has passed a resolution directing the employment of counsel for a specified purpose, it may delegate to the county judge and chairman of the finance committee ministerial executive duties of selecting the attorney and fixing his compensation. Galveston County v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 556.

22. Scope of power to establish ferries.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1514, giving commissioners' courts authority "to establish public ferries whenever the public interests may require it," such courts are authorized to grant a franchise for a ferry across the Rio Grande, which forms a part of the boundary between Texas and Mexico, the franchise extending as far as the political jurisdiction of the state; that is, to the middle of the river. Tugwell v. Eagle Pass Ferry Co., 74 Tex. 489, 8 S. W. 120.

25½. Validity of payments.—Where an extension of a sea wall was necessary for the protection of the lives and property of inhabitants of a county but a greater part of the wall was built by the federal government, payment by the county to the attorney who secured the government's consent to the construction and procured title to the right of way to other land desired by the government was not invalid as a grant to the government. Galveston County v. Gresham (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 560.

29. Power to build court house and jail.—The county commissioners' court being by this article, and art. 2270, the only body empowered to authorize contracts for the erection of county buildings, injunction will not lie to restrain the sale or payment in any manner, or to prevent the county from constructing a jail, to be built under an alleged contract made by one of the judges of the commissioners' court, not only without the authority, but directly contrary to the resolution, of that court. Such bonds would be utterly void in the hands of all purchasers. Polly v. Hopkins, 74 Tex. 146, 11 S. W. 1054.

29½. Power to issue warrants.—The commissioners' court of a county can, under subd. 3, issue interest-bearing warrants maturing annually in future years, limited only by Const. art. 11, § 7, in spite of arts. 605, 610, relating to bonds. Lasater v. Lopez (Civ. App.) 262 S. W. 1059.

This article empowers the commissioners' court of county which has not adopted art. 696 to build a road and create an indebtedness to be paid by interest-bearing warrants in future years, although a bond issue under articles 605, 610, for such purpose has been voted down in an election. Id.

A sum contracted to be paid a contractor for work on roads, to be paid for in interest-bearing warrants, is a "debt" within Const. art. 11, § 7, restricting and limiting county debts. Id.

Const. art. 11, § 7, prohibiting incurring of debt unless a tax is provided for interest and sinking fund, is a restriction and also a limitation on county debts. Id.

Without special authority, the commissioners' court of a county is without power to issue negotiable securities, depriving the county of true defenses against the original creditor, and such power is not to be implied, but must be expressly conferred. Lasater v. Lopez, 110 Tex. 179, 217 S. W. 373.

30. Allowance of claims.—The duty of the county commissioners to audit all claims against the county found to be just, as imposed by subd. 8 of this article, is judicial, and its performance cannot be delegated to another. Fadgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1046.

Where a county judge approved fictitious claims against the county, on which the county clerk issued warrants on which, in turn, the county treasurer issued checks, which, after payees' signatures were forged, the county depositary bank paid, and the county commissioners, after discovery of the fraud, took no steps to hold the bank accountable, the bank's payment was not the sole proximate cause of loss, and all such officers are jointly and severally liable therefor. Id.

Since the duty of the county commissioners to audit all claims against the county is judicial and nondelegable, they are without authority to ratify the acts of the county judge in approving such claims. Id.

As the special road laws of Henderson county provide that all moneys received from sale of bonds shall be held by the treasurer and paid out on orders of the commissioners' court, and as the last special road law (Sp. Acts 1918, c. 24, § 15k) makes it the duty of the treasurer to hold the funds and pay them out as in other cases, a judgment, in an action by an engineer against the commissioners' court to recover compensation for services rendered in supervising construction of highways, is not, in view of Const. art. 5, § 8, and this article, erroneous in directing the commissioners' court to draw warrants on the treasurer who held funds belonging to the road district. McDonald v. Axtell (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 862.

Under art. 1509, prohibiting payment by county treasurer, except on certificate or warrant from some officer authorized by law to issue it, and subd. 8 of this article, commissioners' court having refused to allow such an account, the district court, though under Const. art. 5, § 8, having jurisdiction and general supervisory control over the commissioners' court, cannot, by original and direct mandamus proceeding against such treasurer, compel him to pay the claim. Id.

Where the commissioners' court refuses to allow a claim against the county, the remedy is by direct suit against the county. Id.
31. — Conclusiveness of order allowing claim.—Allowance of claims by a commissioners' court is a judicial act which cannot be revoked at a subsequent term. Edmondson v. Cumings (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 428.

32. — Collateral attack.—Allowance of claims by a commissioners' court cannot be collaterally attacked, but can only be revised, if at all, by appeal or other appropriate proceedings instituted for that purpose. Edmondson v. Cumings (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 428.

In prosecution of county judge for passing forged check issued upon an account approved and ordered paid by commissioners' court, the judgment of the court approving such account does not preclude proof of forgery upon ground that no collateral attack can be made upon commissioners' court's judgment, since if payee named was fictitious the proceeding was void, and since the county judge, if guilty of forgery, was disqualified, such disqualification invalidating proceedings. Fry v. State, 86 Cr. R. 78, 215 S. W. 560.

Art. 2242. [1538] Power to levy taxes.

See Carroll v. Williams, 109 Tex. 155, 202 S. W. 504.

Cited. Free v. Scarborough, 70 Tex. 672, 8 S. W. 495.

In general.—The grant of taxing power to any county or district by the Legislature should be construed with strictness, the presumption being that the Legislature has granted in clear terms all it intended to grant. State v. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 820.

Limitation of levy.—Where commissioners levied tax for building fund of county, with intent to swell general fund beyond limit of 25 cents on $100, as provided by Const. art. 11, § 2, Veltmann v. Slator (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 635.

The powers of commissioners' courts in relation to the building of county roads, except as to the limits of taxation therefor, are governed wholly by general laws following the command of Const. art. 11, § 2, particularly Rev. St. 1895, arts. 877-881, Rev. St. 1911, arts. 505-510, 2241, and this article, which follows the amendment of Const. art. 11, § 3, limiting the amount of levy. Lasater v. Lopez, 110 Tex. 179, 217 S. W. 373.

Under Const. art. 8, § 9, and this article, commissioners' court may levy and collect a special tax for the repair of the courthouse and jail. Sanders v. Looney (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 299.

Diversion of funds.—As it would be unlawful to transfer taxes levied and collected for public building fund to general county fund, when that fund exhausted constitutional limit, such transfer could be enjoined. Veltmann v. Slator (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 639.

Unlawful intent of commissioners to transfer tax levied for county building fund to general fund was material issue of fact, and district judge had authority to enjoin collection of tax until such issue had been determined. Id.

Levy of taxes in guise of one fund, with intent to use for another, which thereby would exceed constitutional limit, is illegal and void. Id.

Art. 1449, empowering the commissioners' court to transfer money from one fund to another, held to apply only to statutory funds classed by art. 1438, and not to those raised by taxation under Const. art. 8, § 9. Carroll v. Williams, 109 Tex. 155, 202 S. W. 504.

Const. art. 8, § 9, as to taxes for various purposes, held not only to control the raising but the expenditure of the funds; and so not to allow transfer of those raised for one purpose to another purpose. Id.

In suit by taxpayers to enjoin the commissioners' court and tax collector from collecting the public building and improvement tax for a year as having been levied under a subterfuge, etc., admission by defendants that at least $600 of the special improvement fund had been used for general expenses authorized peremptory instruction by the court that part of the fund had been used for general purposes. Veltmann v. Slator (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 530.

In suit by taxpayers to enjoin the commissioners' court and tax collector from collecting the public building and improvement tax for a year as having been levied under a subterfuge, etc., evidence held sufficient to sustain finding either that no improvements were contemplated when the levy for improvements was made, or that the commissioners made levy with intent to transfer all or part of the fund to general revenue. Id.

Art. 2245. [1541] [1518] Power to fill certain vacancies.

Vacancy by involuntary absence as soldier.—In the existing absence of any statute or constitutional provision that the involuntary absence from the county of one of its officials engaged as a private soldier in the Army of the United States shall create a vacancy in his office, the commissioners' court has no authority to declare that such absence constitutes a vacancy. Hamilton v. King (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 955.

The mere absence of a county officer while involuntarily in the military service of the United States, without showing as to the probable duration of his absence, does not create a "vacancy" in his office. Id.

Art. 2253. May co-operate with cities, etc.

Art. 2268a. Commissioners shall not make contracts in excess of $2,000 without submission to competition; exception.

Submission to competition.—Under arts. 2268a, 2268b, the commissioners' court, which on the day advertised for receiving bids and upon adjournment resolved to erect a building to be constructed under any such contract of a building, erected an architect, adopted a contract for its construction subject to modifications, did not comply with the statute. Headlee v. Fryer (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 213.

Under arts. 2268a, 2268b, the commissioners' court must be prepared to present to bidders some independent and concrete statement of work required to be done and must take such steps as are reasonably and fairly calculated to carry out the act. id.

The commissioners' court, having authority to contract for construction of courthouses, etc., subject to arts. 2268a, 2268b, in absence of constitutional or statutory prohibition, may make necessary changes in details by which price is increased or diminished. id.

A contract between a county and a contractor, whereby the latter was to supervise the construction of a county courthouse, and to receive a stipulated sum payable in daily installments, is not within the exception to the requirement of competitive bids for county contracts of work done under the direct supervision of the county commissioners and paid for by the day. Ashby v. James (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 732.

This article held not applicable to county's contract with civil engineers for professional services in connection with the construction and maintenance of public highways and roads in proceedings under tit. 18, c. 2, as amended in 1917, in view of arts. 640, 1469-1485, 2571, 5535, 5572, and 1498c, and in view of the purpose of the statute, and the absurdity of letting contracts for professional services of a technical nature through competitive bidding. Hunter v. Whiteaker & Washington (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 1096.

Notice of letting of contract.—Under arts. 2268a, 2268b, where published notice inviting bids on February 14th, but where recorded copy thereof fixed the date as February 4th, an award of contract on February 13th did not comply with statute, and contract was void for want of notice. Headlee v. Fryer (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 213.

Where the notice for bids to erect a county courthouse called for bids for the erection in accordance with plans and specifications on file, a contract with a bidder on the cost plus basis, whereby the contractor was not to be liable for the material and labor furnished, but was merely to supervise the construction and receive compensation for such supervision, is illegal, as made without the notice required by this article, and art. 2268b. Ashby v. James (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 732.

Art. 2268b. Contracts made without compliance with act void; injunction; repeal.

Art. 2270. [1548] [1521] May provide building, etc., for county court.

County Jail.—The county commissioners' court being by Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1514, 1521, the only body empowered to authorize contracts for the erection of county buildings, injunction will not lie to restrain the issuance of bonds in payment for a county jail, to be constructed under an alleged contract made by one of the judges of the commissioners' court, not only without the authority but directly contrary to the resolution of that court. Such bonds would be utterly void in the hands of all purchasers. Polly v. Hopkins, 74 Tex. 146, 11 S. W. 1084.

Art. 2273a. Court rooms for Justices of the Peace.—Hereafter the Commissioners' Courts of the respective counties affected hereby, shall provide and furnish suitable places in the Court House of their respective Counties for the holding of Court by Justices of the Peace in the Precinct where such Court House is situated, where there are more than seventy-five thousand inhabitants in such Justice Precinct. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 94, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 2273b. Soldiers records.—The commissioners' court of each county of this State is hereby authorized, and it shall be their duty, to purchase out of the general fund of the county a well bound book, to be used by the county clerk in recording the official discharge of each soldier, sailor or other person resident of the county, serving at home or abroad in the army or navy of the United States in the war with Germany and Austria Hungary lately concluded by armistice. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 96, § 1.]

Took effect March 26, 1919.
Art. 2273c. Same.—It is hereby made the duty of the county clerk of each county to record in a well bound book the official discharge of each soldier, sailor or other person resident in the county who served at home or abroad in the army or navy forces of the United States in the war with Germany and Austria-Hungary lately concluded by armistice; and for such services the county clerk shall be allowed by the commissioners' court, out of the general fund of the county, not to exceed fifteen cents for each one hundred words so recorded. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 2273d. Rest rooms in court houses.—The commissioners' court in each county in this State may maintain a rest-room for women in the court house, or if for any reason a suitable rest-room for women cannot be had in the court house, they may maintain a rest-room at some convenient place near the court-house. The rest-room may be comfortably furnished with lounge, chairs, mirror, lavatory, tables and such other furnishings as may be needed to make the room attractive and comfortable for women who may be in attendance on the court or who may for other reasons be in town.

The commissioners' court may assist the business and professional men, the various women's clubs and other organizations in paying the salary of a matron for the rest-room; providing the county judge shall appoint such matron with the consent of the commissioners' court; providing that in counties having a population according to the last United States census of less than 25,000, the expense and furnishing of the rest room shall not exceed $125.00, nor shall the commissioners' court expend more than $15.00 per month for the maintenance of the rest-room, including the compensation paid by the county to the matron; counties having a population according to the last United States census of more than 25,000 and less than 50,000 may expend not to exceed $200.00 in furnishing a rest-room and may expend for its maintenance not to exceed $25.00 per month, including the compensation paid by the county to the matron; and those counties having more than 50,000 may expend in furnishing a rest-room not to exceed $300.00, and may expend for its maintenance, including the compensation paid by the county to the matron, any amount not to exceed $50.00 per month. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 102, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 68, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after July 22, 1919, date of adjournment.

TERMS AND MINUTES OF THE COURT

Article 2276. [1554] [1527] Minutes of the court.

Cited, King v. Marion County (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 1052.

In general.—Under arts. 2237, 2238, and this article, commissioners' court can leg­ally transact business, though county judge is not present and presiding, notwithstanding Const. art. 5, § 18, providing that the commissioners, "with the county judge as presiding officer," shall compose the commissioners' court. Dalton v. Allen, 110 Tex. 68, 215 S. W. 439.

Varying effect of by parole.—See notes under art. 3687.

Article 2291. [1568] [1539] Jurisdiction in civil cases.

1. In general.—The exclusive jurisdiction given a justice court in certain classes of cases was not intended to limit or restrict the equity jurisdiction of the district court to give relief against wrong and injustice, when the justice court does not possess adequate power to grant such relief. Houston Heights Water & Light Ass'n v. Gerlach (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 634.
Where any matter of practice and procedure is prescribed in the statutory title governing such matters in the justice court, it is exclusive, and can be applied only in such courts. Fears v. Fish (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 567.

2. Pleading jurisdictional facts.—Where plaintiffs in good faith, in suit to foreclose mortgage on two mules, alleged that they were of the value of $139, allegation should be treated as conclusively establishing that to be their value, so far as question of jurisdiction was concerned. J. F. Turner & Bro. v. Gable (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 348.
If plaintiff's allegations are susceptible of construction which will support jurisdiction of justice court rendering judgment, that construction will be adopted. Sikes v. Keller (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 511.

In a suit for conversion, jurisdiction of justice court is determined by plaintiff's allegations as to value of the property and damage claimed, in the absence of a special plea charging that it was so alleged for fraudulent purpose of wrongfully conferring jurisdiction. Id.

The jurisdiction of a justice of the peace in a mortgage foreclosure must generally be settled by the pleadings of the plaintiff, who must allege the value of the property, and where this has been done in good faith, and there is no effort to show fraud, jurisdiction upon the ground of amount cannot thereafter be raised by proof of greater value. Brown v. Green (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 357.
The amount in controversy in replevin will be assumed to be that fixed in the complaint, in determining the jurisdiction until the contrary is shown. Stripling v. Mooney (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 229.

It is not sufficient that the value of property in controversy is more than stated in the complaint and beyond the justice's jurisdiction, unless plaintiff falsely stated the value for the purpose of obtaining jurisdiction. Justice is fixed by allegations of existence of a lien in favor of plaintiff farm laborer, and not lost by failure to prove them. Ball v. Beaty (Civ. App.) 223 S. W. 552.

3. Actions involving title to real property.—Justice court had jurisdiction of an action by a purchaser of land to recover moneys paid to a third person to perfect title. Hill v. Massee (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 746.

5. Amount or value in controversy.—Where plaintiff prayed for actual damages less than $200, without any prayer for interest or general relief, justice court had jurisdiction. Davidson v. Jones, Sullivan & Jones (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 571.

Justice court held to be without jurisdiction to try the issue of lump sum settlement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, where the amount involved exceeded the jurisdiction of the court. Employers' Indemnity Corporation v. Woods (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 461.

7. Enforcement of liens on personal property.—In suit to recover $151.89 rent and to foreclose landlord's statutory lien on crop, that the property levied upon exceeded $200 in value would not deprive justice court of jurisdiction. Williams v. King (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 106.

In view of art. 2000, value of property against which farm laborer's lien is asserted, if greater than the debt, controls in determining jurisdiction, a rule applying to common law and statutory liens as well. Ball v. Beaty (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 552.

Pacts that lien existed on oats, and that cattle had been sold prior to filing for record of plaintiff farm laborer's account, held immaterial on issue of value of property against which he asserted lien. Id.

Where plaintiff sought the collection of a debt and asserted a lien and sought foreclosure on personal property of an agreed value exceeding $200, asking foreclosure of lien against all of the property, and not merely so much as to pay the debt, the justice court was without jurisdiction. Childress Oil Co. v. Wood (Sup.) 220 S. W. 149.

8. Mortgage foreclosure.—In view of Const. art. 9, § 19, the justice court would have no jurisdiction of foreclosure of mortgage on two mules, if their value exceeded $200. J. F. Turner & Bro. v. Gable (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 348.

In mortgage foreclosure, where the value of mortgaged property exceeds $200, the justice court has no jurisdiction, even though the debt sued for is for a less amount. Brown v. Green (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 357.

9. Interest, costs, and attorney's fees.—Jurisdiction of justice court cannot be defeated by adding interest to alleged value of converted property, thereby extending plaintiff's claim beyond $200, where no interest is asked for or adjudged. Sikes v. Keller (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 311.

In action on note in justice court, court had jurisdiction to enter judgment for the note and accumulated interest as provided in the note, even if amount exceeded $200; principal of the note being $100. Wilson v. Thompson (Civ. App.) 292 S. W. 341.

In an action for value of steers killed by defendant's train, in the amount of $195, brought in justice court, interest thereon is not recoverable ex omnino, but only as an item of damages, and must be pleaded, or otherwise it is not a matter in controversy, to be added to the amount sued on in determining jurisdiction. Hufstutler v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 486.

As amount recoverable from a railroad for stock killed does not include interest, ex omnino or as damages, action against railroad on claim for mule killed, in which the complaint alleged the mule's value was $200, did not appear, because of any element of interest recoverable, to be for more than $200, of which the justice court alone had jurisdiction. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. of Texas v. Post (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 125.

In action against railroad for $200 for mule killed and $20 attorney's fees under Vernon's Payles's Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 2178, where it appeared plaintiff had a right to the attorney's fee claimed, such fee was properly included in determining the amount in controversy, which therefore amounted to $220. Id.

Attorney's fees, expressly contracted for in a note and sought to be recovered in a suit, are a part of the contract, and must be considered in estimating the amount in controversy, in determining the jurisdiction of justice court. Jones v. McKinney (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 720.

11. Reduction of amount to give jurisdiction.—In order for a demand to be liquidated, one party must have obligated himself to pay the other a specific sum of money, either absolutely or upon the happening of a specified contingency. Whi. Cam. v. Rice (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 284.

Where plaintiff agreed to furnish certain materials at specified price, and later furnished a bill of extras without naming the price, the demand was unliquidated, and the plaintiff, when the account as originally made showed a balance in excess of jurisdiction, could not remit the excess so as to confer jurisdiction. Id.

Plaintiff could not on day of trial admit credit of $40 owing defendant on another transaction than that involving particular mule sued for, in order to bring controversy within jurisdiction of justice's court, there being no pleading or suggestion of institution of cause of action before trial on partial payment, or that plaintiff would admit a credit to bring case within jurisdiction. Wischkeaper v. Allen (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 1067.
3) Shall the court open the district made by such order within the precinct, the court, decreeing the foreclosure, although there is no valid objection to the method provided by said article for enforcement of attachment lien by mere judgment recital of issuance and levy of attachment, followed by execution. Baker v. Pitlik & Meyer, 109 Tex. 237, 206 S. W. 582.

Under article 268, a justice court, in suit within its jurisdiction, has authority to decree a foreclosure of attachment lien on real estate, and direct an order of sale of the land: Const. art. 5, § 5, not conferring exclusive jurisdiction on district courts. Id.

16. Reconvention.—In ascertaining whether the justice's court has jurisdiction of a plea of reconvention, the amount in controversy is determined by considering plaintiff's claim and defendant's claim separately, and not by adding one to the other. Ft. Smith Couch & Bedding Co. v. George (Civ. App.) 222 S. W. 335.

18½. Equitable jurisdiction—injunction.—The district court of one county has jurisdiction of a suit to enjoin execution on a justice's judgment rendered in another county from which appeal has been taken to the district court of such county notwithstanding art. 4653, requiring writs of injunction to be returnable to the court where the suit is pending; a justice court not having jurisdiction of injunction suits. Kieschnick v. Martin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 948.

Art. 2295. [1572] [1543] Other jurisdiction, etc.

CHAPTER THREE

TERMS OF THE COURT

Art. 2299. [1576] [1547] Times and places of holding.
Cited, Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Ware (Sup.) 11 S. W. 554.

In general.—Const. Tex. art. 5, § 19, provides that justices of the peace shall hold their courts at such times and places as may be provided by law. Rev. St. 1879, art. 3514, and art. 3547 as amended by Act 1881, provide that the times and places at which justices of the peace shall hold their terms of court shall be fixed by the county commissioners' court. No order was made by the commissioners' court fixing the time and place of holding court by one B., elected one of the justices of the peace for a certain precinct. But it appeared that such an order had been made in the case of S., a former justice of the peace for such precinct, and that both one who had been justice of the peace for said precinct up to B.'s election, and B., held court at the time and place indicated in such order. Held, that a judgment rendered by B. as justice of the peace was not void as rendered without jurisdiction; it being presumed that the court held by S. was the same court as that held by B., and an order once made fixing the time and place of holding court continuing in force until changed. Koehler v. Earl, 77 Tex. 189, 14 S. W. 28.

CHAPTER FIVE

VENUE

Art. 2308. Suits to be brought in the county of defendant's residence, except, etc.

Art. 2312. Where justice is disqualified.

Art. 2313. Change of venue on affidavit.

Article 2308. [1585] [1556] Suits to be brought in the county of defendant's residence, except, etc.

In general.—Although defendant was originally alleged to reside in H. county, if in fact he had removed to county where suit was brought, process could be issued by justice of latter county, and if properly served would support judgment by default. Hooks v. Pate (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 613.

Where defendant company was served with citation and filed a plea of privilege, the justice court had jurisdiction of its person; the plea of privilege raising only a question of mere venue privilege, so that the judgment, the court having jurisdiction over the subject-matter, was not void. Price & Beard v. Eastland County Land & Abstract Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 478.

Should any question arise in justice court with reference to venue not covered by this article, the court must be governed by any provision of Vernon's Sylles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 1830, applicable thereto. Fears v. Fish (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 567.

This article applies to suits in courts of justices of the peace, and not to county courts. Texas Supply Co. v. Clarke (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 573.

Contracts.—Where contract subject to confirmation was signed in L. county, and telegram of corporation confirming same, accepted there, contract was completed in such county, and action was properly brought against corporation in such county, under this article, subds. 4, 10, although it resided in another county. Wright v. M. M. Graves Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 958.

The amendment to this article, subd. 4, providing that suits for labor performed may be "maintained" where such labor was performed, applies to cases pending then in county where services were performed, since "maintained" refers to cases already in existence. Walker v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 713.

This article, subd. 4, fixing venue of suits to recover for "labor" actually performed, applies to suit seeking recovery of commissions for selling real estate. Id.

An action by an attorney to recover fees, brought in the county court, is controlled as to venue by Vernon's Sylles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, art. 1830, relating to special proceeding in such courts, and it was therefore error, in overruling defendant's plea of privilege, to base the decision upon this article, subd. 4, relating to venue in justice courts, and holding that in all suits to recover for labor actually performed suit may be maintained where such labor is performed, whether contract is oral or in writing. Fears v. Fish (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 567.

This article, subd. 4, providing that in all suits to recover for labor actually performed suit may be brought and maintained where such labor is performed, applies only to suits brought in the justices' courts. Randall v. Harris (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 569.

This article, subd. 4, as amended by providing that suits for labor performed "may be brought and maintained" where labor was performed, held not applicable to cases pending at the time the amendment became operative, Walker v. Alexander (Civ. App.) 257 S. W. 696.

This article, subd. 4, has no application to an action on a contract of sale and purchase for the value of the articles. Tidwell v. Kelly (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 470.

Under this article, subd. 4, where plaintiff threshed several hundred bushels of grain for defendant during threshing season at stipulated sum per bushel and owned the threshing machine and employed laborers, he could not resist plea of privilege (citing Words and Phrases, Second Series, "Labor"). Reece v. Langley (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 509.

Rents.—Where the court found that the defendant was at no time a resident of the county of venue, and that the contract between plaintiff and defendant was a pasturage contract only, and that defendant did not rent plaintiff's land, this article, subd. 5, did not authorize plaintiff to sue in such county (citing Words and Phrases, First and Second Series, Rent). McClintic v. Brown (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 546.

Art. 2312. [1589] [1560] Where justice is disqualified.

Disqualification of justice.—Under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1560, a suit could be brought in the proper precinct though the justice therein was disqualified, by reason of his relation to one of the parties, and then transferred to the nearest justice. Morris v. Foreaker (App.) 15 S. W. 37.
Art. 2313. [1590] [1561] Change of venue on affidavit.

Statutes liberally construed.—Statutes relating to change of venue to county of defendant’s residence should be liberally construed to effect such purpose. Brooks v. Wichita Mill & Elevator Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 538.

CHAPTER SEVEN

PARTIES

Article 2320. [1597] [1567] Same rules as to parties, etc.

Assignees.—A justice of the peace cannot render a judgment binding on the assignees of labor claims sued for in the name of the assignors, unless the assignees are made parties. Pena v. Baker (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 426.

CHAPTER EIGHT

PROCESS AND SERVICE

Art. 2321. Process of justice’s court, requisites of. Art. 2322. Citation to be issued, when.

Art. 2322. [1599] [1569] Citation to be issued, when.

Art. 2323. [1600] [1570] Citation shall contain what.

Requisites and sufficiency of citation.—Rev. St. 1879, arts. 1568, 1570, under the title of "Justices' Courts," requires a citation to be made returnable at the first day of "some" term of court. Held, that such citation need not be made returnable at the "next" term of court. White v. Johnson, 5 Civ. App. 480, 24 S. W. 568.

CHAPTER NINE

PLEADINGS

Art. 2326. Pleadings oral but entered on docket. Art. 2327. Pleadings to be in writing and under oath.

Art. 2326. [1603] [1573] Pleadings oral but entered on docket.

Pleadings in general.—The technical rules of pleading do not apply to the manner of forming issues in justice courts in ordinary suits. Rowe v. Daugherty (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 240.

A petition before justice of the peace in a suit on a note and for foreclosure of a chattel mortgage failing to allege the jurisdictional amount held cured by the averments of the answer. Hranicky v. Sell (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 315.

Pleadings are as essential to make an issue in justice court as in the district court. Alvis v. John G. Harris Hardware & Furniture Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 538.

A liberal rule as to pleading is applied to cases in justice courts. Watson v. D. A. Paddleford & Son (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 779, certified questions answered 110 Tex. 523, 221 S. W. 569.

Petition or complaint.—In justice court, where account sued on and complaint referred to contract of lease, which gave names of partners, pleadings were sufficient, 795.
although members were not named therein. Davidson v. Jones, Sullivan & Jones (Civ. App.) 156 S. W. 571.

— Plea or answer.—An answer alleging a bona fide controversy over the amount due, that defendant sent its draft with a letter saying it was in full payment, which draft plaintiff collected, under the rules applicable to justice and county courts, sufficiently pleads accord and satisfaction. Miller Bros. & Co. v. H. Lesinsky Co. (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 992.

— Conclusiveness of written pleading.—In view of this article, authorizing oral pleading in justice's court, where plaintiff filed written petitions, both in the justice and in the county court, and the record failed to show that they were not supplemented by oral amendment, curing alleged fatal defects, the petitions will be held sufficient. Heidenheimer, Strauburger & Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 886.

Docket entry of pleadings—Necessity and sufficiency.—Statement of plaintiffs' cause of action on docket of justice of peace: "Suit upon damages for $150.00 of date — — — due — — interest — — per cent." — was not as full a statement of plaintiffs' cause of action as defendant was entitled to. Kelly v. Collins (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 396.

Art. 2327. [1604] [1574] Pleadings to be in writing and under oath.

Verification.—Where the account filed by plaintiff was not verified, defendant is not required to verify his answer under this article or art. 3712. Markowits v. Davidson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 968.

Plea of privilege.—That defendant's plea of privilege was filed December 30th, during the December term of justice court, and was not called to the attention of the justice or passed without prejudice, is insufficient to show a waiver of plea; it not appearing when term expired, or that there was an opportunity to hear a plea during said term. Poole v. Pierce-Fordyce Oil Ass'n (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 796.

Where case was pending in justice's court for several months, and five continuances were had, and no plea of privilege was ever called to attention of justice and ruling procured with respect thereto, the plea was waived. Beall v. Moore (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 623.

APPEARANCE AND TRIAL

CHAPTER TWELVE
TRIAL BY JURY

Article 2361. [1638] [1608] Mode of proceeding on trial before jury, etc.

Charge to the jury.—Under this article, and art. 2400, it is permissible for the county court to deliver a general charge in a case appealed from justice court, but where such charge is waived by both parties, the county court after refusing their requested peremptory charges, may in its discretion refuse to permit defendant's counsel to read a decision to the jury. Hedrick v. McLaughlin (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 955.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
THE JUDGMENT

2368. Judgment for specific articles.
2370. No judgment without citation, unless.

Article 2366. [1643] [1613] Judgment.

Res judicata.—For the judgment of a justice court to be res adjudicata of the issues submitted to it, such court must have jurisdiction both of the parties and of the subject-matter. Employers' Indemnity Corporation v. Woods (Civ. App.) 330 S. W. 461.

Art. 2368. [1645] [1615] Judgment for specific articles.

In general.—While not recognizing common-law forms of action, yet, where personal property is sued for, the legal principles governing the action of detinue must be resorted to and the judgment in such an action, as well as under this article, is in the alternative for the recovery of the property or its value, and where plaintiff's petition entitled recovery of possession of specific personal property, and there was a prayer for general relief, a motion to quash a writ of sequestration should have been denied. White v. Texas Motor Car & Supply Co. (Com. App.) 228 S. W. 138.

Art. 2370. [1647] [1617] No judgment without citation, unless.

Service by publication.—Under Rev. St. 1875, art. 1572, providing that all rules governing the service of citations issued out of the district courts, except when otherwise provided by law, shall govern also the justices' courts in so far as they are applicable, art. 1577, fixing appearance day after publication of process from justice's court, art. 152, providing that justices may issue attachments where defendant is not a resident of the state, and this article, process from justices' courts may be served by publication under the same rules governing district courts. Davis v. Robinson, 70 Tex. 394, 1 S. W. 749.

Service of nonresident notice.—Service may be had in garnishment suit under this article, by service of nonresident notice issued out of justice court. National Bank of Commerce of Amarillo v. A. Walker Brokerage Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 174.

Art. 2373. [1650] [1620] Same rules as govern district courts, etc.

Judgments conclusive.—Justices' courts have special and exclusive jurisdiction under Constitution, and other courts cannot review trials therein except upon appeal, and, where no appeal is allowed, judgments rendered therein are conclusive. Mann v. Brown (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 498.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

NEW TRIALS, ETC.

Art. 2374. Judgments by default, etc., may be set aside.

Art. 2375. New trials may be granted.

Art. 2376. But one new trial to either party.

Article 2374. [1651] [1621] Judgments by default, etc., may be set aside.

Injunction and motion for new trial.—Where an appeal does not lie from judgment by default in a justice court, the losing party is not entitled to an injunction restraining the execution of the judgment unless he has exhausted his legal remedy provided by this and following articles for securing a new trial, by showing on such motion that he was not in default in permitting the case to go to judgment in his absence, and also that he has a meritorious defense to the cause of action. Zickefoose v. Richardson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 532.

Refusal of justice of the peace to file defendant's motion to set aside default judgment did not warrant district court to enjoin execution of the judgment where his motion for a new trial had previously been denied; his right to have the default judgment set aside having been determined against him by the denial of the motion for new trial, id.

Art. 2375. [1652] [1622] New trials may be granted.

Form of motion.—Allegation in motion for new trial that default judgment of justice of the peace was "contrary to law and the evidence" held not a sufficient showing of a meritorious defense; the allegation being a mere legal conclusion. Zickefoose v. Richardson (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 532.

Art. 2379. [1656] [1626] But one new trial, etc.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

APPEAL

Art. 2391. Appeal may be taken.
2394. Affidavit of inability to give bond.
2395. When appeal perfected on affidavit.

Article 2391. [1668] [1638] Appeal may be taken.

Final judgments.—A judgment of the justice court in favor of plaintiff may be final and appealable, although it does not dispose of defendant's counterclaim or cross-action for damages. Watson v. Corley (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 481.

Amount or value in controversy.—If the justice court did not have jurisdiction of the mortgage foreclosure, because the value of the mules exceeded $200, the county court did not, by appeal to it, acquire jurisdiction. J. F. Turner & Bro. v. Gable (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 348.

County court on appeal from justice has jurisdiction to adjudicate claim for additional damages from deterioration of attached goods since appeal, although the raised amount involved above $200. Hegman v. Roberts (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 268.

If the justice court did not have jurisdiction of action because the value of the property exceeded $200, the county court had no jurisdiction on appeal. Stripling v. Money v. Money (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 229.

In replevin action brought in the justice court, upon appeal to the county court, it was error to exclude evidence that plaintiff's attorney stated that he knew the automobile's value was beyond the justice court's jurisdiction, but lowered it in the complaint because he could get quicker trial in the justice court. Stripling v. Money (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 229.

Though the jury on appeal found the value of personality in controversy to be $200, it must be held that plaintiff's allegation of value to be $195 was made in good faith, where there was no request for finding on plaintiff's good faith. Id.

Art. 1903, making verified plea of privilege prima facie proof of defendant's right to change of venue, and providing for procedure for contesting plea and that either party may appeal from a sustaining or overruling judgment, is subordinate to and must be construed in harmony with this article, which limits appeals from justice court to county court to cases where the controversy exceeds $20. Moss v. Bross (Civ. App.) 221 S. W. 345.

A county court acquired no jurisdiction on plaintiff's appeal from a justice court judgment for defendant in an action involving more than $200, and the appellate court could acquire no jurisdiction of the case by plaintiff's appeal from the judgment in the county court for defendant. Jones v. McKinney (Civ. App.) 224 S. W. 720.

Where the justice court had no jurisdiction of plaintiff's demand, the county court had none on appeal, so that the cause must be dismissed, but where defendant's counterclaim was within the jurisdiction of both courts, and was substantially admitted, and its amount ascertained by the jury, judgment should be rendered therefor. Russell v. Saffold (Civ. App.) 225 S. W. 281.

A cause of action in the justice court being not only for debt, but for foreclosure of a lien on personal property, its jurisdiction was dependent upon such property's value, and where its value admittedly exceeded the court's lawful jurisdiction, the county court was without jurisdiction on appeal, and plaintiff's abandonment of the lien in the county court did not give such court jurisdiction. Childress Oil Co. v. Wood (Sup.) 230 S. W. 143.

Jurisdiction dependent on jurisdiction of justice court.—The jurisdiction of the county court in cases appealed from justice court depends absolutely on the jurisdiction of the latter; for, while the case is tried de novo in the county court, its power is not original, and it cannot have jurisdiction where the justice court had none. Childress Oil Co. v. Wood (Sup.) 230 S. W. 143.

Motion for new trial as essential to appellate jurisdiction.—A motion for new trial is not essential to confer jurisdiction on county court on appeal from justice court. American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Frankel (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1132.

Right of appeal.—Under art. 1903, prescribing the duties of the judge or justice of the peace when a plea of privilege is entered and authorizing an appeal from a judgment sustaining or overruling the plea, the right of appeal is given from an order overruling the plea of privilege made by a justice of the peace the same as from that made by any other court. McKay v. King-Collie Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 991.

The fact that the county court could not command any justice's court to which the case was transferred to proceed with the case on its merits after an appeal on a plea of privilege does not defeat the right of appeal. Id.

Art. 2393. [1670] [1639] Bond for appeal; appeal perfected.

In general.—Under art. 2396, providing that upon appeal to the county court the justice shall certify and transmit a copy of his docket entries to the county court, and art. 2397, relating to time of transmission of transcript and papers, and this article, where defendant did not appear until the appearance term, he did not waive his plea of privilege. Girvin v. Gulf Refining Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 330.

Bond on appeal—Necessity.—Plaintiff, who recovered in justice court against one of the joint defendants, but lost against the other, had a right to appeal without bond to the county court. S. Samuels & Co. v. Morgan & Friedlander (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 538.

In view of this article, and art. 2396, and Const. art. 5, § 19, appeal will not be perfected so as to confer jurisdiction on the appellate court until a sufficient bond or affidavit in lieu thereof be given. Piquero & Smith v. Carlin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 956.

Where judgment in the justice court was in plaintiff's favor except for costs, plaintiff could not appeal without filing a bond. Watson v. Corley (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 451.

The Director General of Railroads being sued for death of cattle on track could not appeal to the county court from judgment for plaintiff in a justice court without executing an appeal bond, notwithstanding Director General's General Orders Nos. 50 and 50a, providing that no appeal bond shall be required in such proceedings; the Director General having no authority under Act March 21, 1918 (U. S. Comp. St. Ann. Supp. 1919, §§ 3115%o—3115%p), to make such a regulation. Bryson v. Payne (Civ. App.) 232 S. W. 362.

U. S. Comp. St. § 1661, exempting the United States government and the heads of its different departments from giving an appeal bond held inapplicable to Director General of Railroads' appeal from the justice court to the county court, having reference only to proceedings in the federal courts. 1d.

— Form, requisites, and sufficiency.—Under this article and art. 2394, a bond, on appeal from a justice of the peace, conditioned that "appellant shall prosecute his appeal with effect, and shall pay all costs," is a compliance with neither section, and the appeal must be dismissed. Pace v. Webb, 79 Tex. 314, 15 S. W. 269.

This article does not require a description of the judgment or its amount to be in the bond. Perry v. Cullen, 6 Civ. App. 178, 25 S. W. 1043.

— Time of filing.—Where appeal bond was not filed in justice court until 16 days after judgment, county court had no jurisdiction on appeal. Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Independent Fruit Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 594.

Liability on bond.—On defendant's appeal from justice court to county court, judgment being rendered against defendant, as a matter of law it followed against the sureties on his appeal bond. C. J. Gerlach & Bro. v. Du Bose (Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 742.

Sureties on a bond given on appeal from justice court to county court are not relieved from liability by the fact that the appealing principal and his adversary agree upon a judgment against the principal with stay of execution, and that such agreement is made without the knowledge or consent of the sureties; the sureties' obligation being presumably assumed with a view to control by the principal of the litigation on the appeal. 1d.

Judgment on appeal—Default judgment.—On an appeal by the plaintiff from a justice of the peace, no judgment by default is authorized unless the defendant has entered an appearance, or been served with notice of the appeal, under this article, providing that no judgment by default shall be rendered against an appellant who has not entered an appearance, unless notice of such appeal has been served on the appellee, his agent or attorney, at least five days before the first day of the term. Parks v. Igo (App.) 14 S. W. 1069.

Art. 2394. [1671] [1639a] Affidavit of inability to give bond.

Cited, Pace v. Webb, 79 Tex. 314, 15 S. W. 269.

Sufficiency of affidavit.—Affidavit by one member only of plaintiff partnership held sufficient on appeal from justice to county court to entitle plaintiffs to prosecute cause as upon pauper's oath under statute. Davidson v. Jones, Sullivan & Jones (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 571.

Right to appeal in forma pauperis.—The question on contest of right, under this article, to appeal in forma pauperis from a justice of the peace, is of inability to give security for, as well as pay, costs. Hardin v. Hamilton (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 679.

The question for the county court on hearing of petition for mandate to a justice of the peace to allow appeal in forma pauperis is, not whether the justice erred in refusing such appeal on the evidence before him, but whether on the further evidence before the court there is a right thereto. 1d.

Art. 2395. [1672] [1639b] When appeal perfected on affidavit.

Art. 2396. [1673] [1640] Duty of justice in case of appeal.

In general.—Under this article, art. 2397, and art. 2335, relating to appeal bond and requiring appearance at the "next term of court to which the case has been appealed," where defendant did not appear until the appearance term, he did not waive his plea of privilege. Girvin v. Gulf Refining Co. (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 330.

On appeal from justice court to county court, if the transcript did not conclusively show error or prejudice in the action taken, defendant appealed from the judgment to the district court refusals to hear oral testimony as to what the oral pleadings were below. Hufstutler v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 496.
Art. 2396  COURTS—JUSTICES

Transcript—Amendment.—While it would be a better practice to correct a transcript before the parties proceed to trial in a county court, an appeal from the county court, such correction at such time is not imperative, and certainly not where the alleged jurisdictional defect is not pointed out specifically until the motion for a new trial is filed. Hufstutler v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 495.

Compelling transmission or perfecting of record.—Although, under this article, upon granting appeal to county court, county court shall immediately make and transmit transcript, and under art. 2395 appeal is perfected upon filing bond, appellant must cause transcript to be filed as required by art. 2397. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Aycock (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 664.

Abandonment of appeal.—Where attorney for appellant obtained possession of appeal bond, etc., and failed to redeliver them to justice until more than six terms of county court had expired, held, that appeal would be considered abandoned and execution could issue on justice's judgment notwithstanding duty of justice to file such papers in county court. Cross v. Flewellen (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 500.

Dismissal of appeal.—Want of prosecution.—Upon failure of justice of peace to make and transmit transcript upon appeal to county court, as required by this article, and within time required by art. 2397, appellant must compel same, failure to do which for several subsequent terms is negligence justifying dismissal. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Aycock (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 664.

Effect of court's failure to file transcript.—When plaintiff's appeal from the justice court to the county court was perfected, jurisdiction of the suit was thereby vested in the county court, and it was not destroyed by the failure of the justice to forward to the county court transcript of his proceedings, as required by this article, and failure of the justice to file such transcript, though it continued for more than two terms, will not warrant dismissal. Imperial Motor Sales Co. v. Brannon (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 761.

Art. 2397. [1674] [1641] Transcript, etc., to be transmitted to county court.

In general.—On appeal from a justice's judgment, where a bond was not filed within the time required by this article, but upon motion to dismiss a substitute bond to replace an alleged lost original bond was filed, such bond was not sufficient to confer jurisdiction of appeal, where it did not appear that the justice had approved the original bond nor that the substitute bond was identical therewith. Piquero & Smith v. Carlin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 966.

Compelling transmission or forfeiting of record.—Mandamus to compel a justice to send up a transcript on appeal will not be granted on petition filed during the first term after the appeal was perfected, where such petition does not allege that it was practicable for the justice to have sent it up when the petition was filed. Rev. St. 1875, art. 1641. Raleigh v. Jones (Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 144.

Upon failure of justice of peace to make and transmit transcript upon appeal to county court, as required by art. 2396, and within time required by this article, appellant must compel same, failure to do which for several subsequent terms is negligence justifying dismissal. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Aycock (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 664.

Although, under art. 2396, upon granting appeal to county court, justice shall immediately make and transmit transcript, and under art. 2395 appeal is perfected upon filing bond, appellant must cause transcript to be filed as required by this article. Id. While it was the duty of the justice of the peace under this article, and art. 2396, to transmit transcript to county court on appeal, it was also the duty of appellant to prosecute his appeal with reasonable diligence, and, if necessary to that end, resort to proper means to compel the justice to make up and transmit transcript to county court. Clark v. Maund (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 257.

Dismissal.—Under this article, an appeal which is not perfected until the first day of a term of the county court is not returnable to that term, and it is error to dismiss it because the transcript is not filed in the county court on the first day of the next succeeding term. Foos Mfg. Co. v. Prather (App.) 16 S. W. 362.

Where an appeal from a justice of the peace has been perfected by service of the notice of appeal, and the execution and filing in the district court of a proper appeal bond, the justice's failure to make out and transmit to the district court a transcript of his record before the first day of the second term next succeeding the rendition of judgment, as required by art. 2393–2397, is no ground for dismissing the appeal. Petty v. Miller, 5 Civ. App. 308, 24 S. W. 330.

Failure to file appeal transcript from justice with county court within time prescribed in this article, will not always be ground for dismissal, since art. 2400 provides mode of procedure in district and county courts shall control in justice's courts, unless procedure is otherwise prescribed, where for good cause more than 30 days may be allowed. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Aycock (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 664.

Where the transcript on appeal from justice's court has not been filed within the prescribed time, the appeal has not been perfected, and, if the delay is not explained or excused, the case will be dismissed on motion reasonably made. Piquero & Smith v. Carlin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 958.

Where justice of the peace did not comply with this article, and art. 2396, requiring in case of appeal to county court, transmission of transcript on or before the first day 800.
of the next term, or on or before the first day of the second term of the county court, and defendant appellant did not cause transcript to be filed until the last day of the third term, held, county court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing appeal for want of prosecution. Clark v. Maund (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 257.

DECISIONS RELATING TO APPEAL IN GENERAL

3. Pleadings in 'justice's court—Presumptions.—In view of art. 2326, authorizing oral pleading in justice's court, where plaintiff filed written petitions, both in the justice and in the county court, and the record failed to show that they were not supplemented by oral amendment, curing alleged fatal defects, the petitions will be held sufficient. Heldenheimer, Strassburger & Co. v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 886.

Where plaintiffs in justice court pleaded orally, as it was their privilege to do, it would be presumed that such pleadings, though not shown, were sufficient to cure the defect, if any, in the written pleadings. Watson v. D. A. Paddleford & Son (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 779, certified questions answered 110 Tex. 525, 221 S. W. 569.

4. Pleadings on appeal.—Evidence as to a written contract was admissible in county court, although written contract was not pleaded in justice court, no pleading required by statute in the latter court or on appeal in the county court. Eller v. Newcom (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 408.

Pleadings on appeal from justice to county court are governed by rules applicable to justice courts, and parties are entitled to replead, without complying with rules of pleading applicable to cases originating in county courts. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Bean (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 782.

By delaying making of plea in abatement setting up pendency of prior suit until case had been brought to the county court, defendant waived any right of abatement to which she might have been entitled had timely objection been made. Arrietta v. Crosby (Civ. App.) 213 S. W. 987.

Where, on an appeal to the county court, the transcript showed no pleadings in the justice court, and no pleadings were filed or made orally in the county court, an exception on this ground should have been sustained. Texas & N. O. Ry. Co. v. Sims (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 694.

5. Amendments in general.—On appeal from justice to county court, pleadings being oral in justice court, amendment may be made orally, and pleadings need not comply strictly with rules of pleading, as when case originates in county court. Cameron Automobile Co. v. Berry (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 411.

Where district court on appeal from a justice of the peace heard evidence and took case under advisement, a party was properly denied leave at date fixed for rendition of judgment to file amendment to petition. Cross v. Flewellen (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 500.

Where plaintiff in justice court could not have added interest without exceeding the jurisdiction of the justice court, she cannot amend in the county court by claiming interest, so as to bring the amount in controversy within the appellate jurisdiction of the Court of Civil Appeals. Dunn v. Wilkerson (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 59.

In action for value of plaintiff's mure killed by defendant's log train, plaintiff's oral justice court pleading as orally amended in county court held sufficient to permit evidence that mare was negligently killed by defendant. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Bean (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 782.

Where pleadings in justice court are oral, amendments in county court may also be oral. Id.

Where defendant filed cross-action in justice court for $200, he could not, on appeal to county court, increase amount of his cross-action to $500, as appellate jurisdiction cannot exceed in amount jurisdiction of justice court. West v. McMahon (Civ. App.) 206 S. W. 67.

The right conferred by statute and rules on either party to amend pleadings extends to jurisdictional matters, so that, on appeal from justice court to county court, plaintiff had a right to amend his petition by reducing the amount of his damages, so as to cure the defect as to jurisdiction. Hafstutler v. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 495.

6. New cause of action.—In county court on appeal from justice court, it was not permissible for plaintiff to allege new promise of defendant's, renewing account sued on, defendant having pleaded limitations; such new promise not having been pleaded in justice court. Cameron Automobile Co. v. Berry (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 411.

Where judgment for the plaintiff in justice court shows on its face that it was founded on a written contract, defendant cannot contend on appeal to the county court that plaintiff is seeking for the first time to recover on a written contract. Eller v. Newcom (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 408.

In action for value of mare killed by defendant's log train, plaintiff's oral plea in county court on appeal from justice's court held not subject to objection that it essentially changed cause of action. Fidelity Lumber Co. v. Bean (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 782.

Where plaintiff appealed from a justice court judgment in his favor recovered on a contract renting land, an additional claim on appeal for the value of seed cane as rent under the contract did not constitute an amendment setting up a new cause of action or authorize striking the appeal. Watson v. Corley (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 481.

In suit in justice court by a bank on a check against the maker and the payee who did not cash, defendant counterclaimed for all overcharges upon the check in suit. Watson v. Fiddle (Tex. Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 481.
had deposited the check for collection, it having been lost, the maker refusing to give a new one, so that the bank charged back the payee's account, the evidence showing that defendant maker was liable on the check to defendant payee, and both the bank and the payee having secured judgments against him, by amending his pleadings in the county court, asking judgment in his favor against defendant maker for the amount of the check, defendant payee sought neither to enlarge nor change defendant maker's liability, and the amendment was proper under art. 759. R. W. Taylor & Co. v. Ferguson (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 1102.

9. — New defenses.—Defendant cannot rely on a defense not pleaded in county court, action having been appealed to that tribunal from justice's court. Neely v. Dublin Fruit Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 827.

12. — Demurrers or exceptions on appeal.—On appeal from justice's judgment, statement of plaintiffs' cause of action having been imperfect, county court correctly refused to sustain defendant's motion to strike transcript and dismiss appeal; defendant's remedy being by special demurrer to statement of cause of action. Kelly v. Collins (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 596.

14. Trial de novo.—The county court, on appeal from an order of the justice of the peace denying a plea of privilege, hears the plea of privilege de novo, and if he sustains it he can render an order changing the venue to the proper justice court of the county of defendant's residence, and if he overrules the plea he can order the records transmitted to the justice court where the case originated. McKay v. King-Collie Co. (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 901.

16. Dismissal of appeal.—Motion for.—Upon appeal from justice of peace to county court, appellee cannot file motion to dismiss until transcript has been filed. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Aycock (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 664.

18. — Grounds for dismissal.—If on appeal from justice to county court, transcript fails to show jurisdiction in county court, appeal will be dismissed. Fruit Dispatch Co. v. Independent Fruit Co. (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 594.

An appeal from the justice to the county court will not be dismissed, because appellant, before disposition of the appeal, filed a second action in the county court on the same cause, where such second action was thereafter dismissed by appellant, the institution of the second action not being an abandonment of the first. Imperial Motor Sales Co. v. Brannon (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 761.

19. — Effect of dismissal.—Dismissal by county court of appeal from judgment of justice for less than $100 for want of jurisdiction because appeal bond had not been approved within time required was final and revived judgment of justice. Womack v. Phillips (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 697.

Dismissal by county court of appeal from judgment of justice for less than $100 for want of jurisdiction because appeal bond had not been approved within time required being final and revived judgment of justice, it could not be attacked in suit to restrain execution thereon. Id.

22. Presumptions on appeal.—It is presumed that the issues made by the pleadings were consistent with the orders or rulings of the trial court, as found in the transcript in all cases originating in the justice court where oral pleadings are allowed. Caffarelli Bros. v. Lyons Bros. Co. (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 685.

26. Determination of cause on appeal.—Where plaintiffs abandoned their claim of right to have mortgage foreclosed after cause by appeal was transferred from justice to county court, they were not entitled to judgment of foreclosure in county court. J. F. Turner & Bro. v. Gable (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 348.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN
GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 2400. [1677] [1644] Rules governing district courts, etc., to apply, except, etc.

See Allison v. Gregory (App.) 15 S. W. 416; Fears v. Fish (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 507.

Charge to jury.—Under Rev. St. art. 2361, and this article, providing that procedure in justice court shall be the same as in the county court, except that the justice shall not deliver any charge, it is permissible for the county court to deliver a general charge in a case appealed from justice court; but where such charge is waived by both parties, the county court after refusing their requested peremptory charges, may in its discretion refuse to permit defendant's counsel to read a decision to the jury. Hedrick v. McLaughlin (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 985.
Art. 2403. Practice of dentistry or dental surgery without license unlawful; exceptions.—It shall be unlawful for any person to practice or offer, or attempt to practice dentistry or dental surgery in the State of Texas, without first having obtained a license from the State Board of Dental Examiners, as provided for in this Act; provided that physicians and surgeons may, in the regular practice of their profession, extract teeth or make application for the relief of pain, and provided further that nothing in this Act shall apply to any person legally engaged in the practice of dentistry in the State of Texas at the time of the passage of this Act, except as hereinafter provided. [Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 1; Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1905, p. 143; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment. Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, supersedes title 43, Rev. Civ. St. 1911. It also supersedes chapter 7 of title 12 of Revised Penal Code 1911, except art. 770 of such chapter.

Art. 2404. Extracting teeth unlawful, when.—It shall be unlawful for any person or persons to extract teeth or perform any other operation pertaining to dentistry or dental surgery, for pay, (or for the purpose of advertising, exhibiting or selling any medicine or instrument) unless such person or persons shall first have complied with the provisions of this act. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 2; Acts 1905, p. 143; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 2.]

Art. 2405. Board of examiners; qualifications of applicants for license.—A Board of Examiners, consisting of six practicing dentists of acknowledged ability as such, is hereby created, and shall have authority to examine all persons making application for license to practice dentistry in Texas, and to issue license to any person in the practice to dentistry or dental surgery in the State of Texas; provided such applicant shall be not less than twenty-one years of age, and shall have complied with all the requirements of this Act, and shall have passed a satisfactory examination before such Board. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 3; Acts 1905, p. 143; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 3.]

Art. 2406. Same; appointment; terms of office; vacancies.—The members of the said Board shall be appointed by the Governor of the State of Texas, and shall serve two years, except that the members of the Board first appointed shall be made as follows:

Three for one year and three for two years respectively, after which each member shall be appointed for two years; and until his successor is duly appointed. In case of a vacancy occurring in said Board by resignation, removal from the State or by death or otherwise, such vacancy may be filled for its unexpired term by the Governor; provided, however, that no person shall be eligible to appointment on the Board unless he has been actively engaged in the legal practice of dentistry in the State of Texas for a period of not less than three years next preceding his appointment. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 4; Acts 1905, p. 143; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 4.]

Art. 2407. Same; oath of office.—Before entering upon the duties of his office, each and every member of the Board shall make oath before any officer authorized to administer oaths, and who shall be empowered to use a seal of office, that he will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties incumbent upon him to the best of his ability; said oath of office shall be filed with the County Clerk of the County in which affiant resides, and the Clerk of said County shall duly record the same on the records of his office, and shall receive a fee of fifty cents for said service. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 4a; Acts 1905, p. 144; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 5.]

Superseded by Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31 (arts. 2403-2416a).

Art. 2408a. Same; record; organization; meetings; quorum.— Said Board shall keep a record, in which shall be registered the name and residence or place of business of all persons authorized under this Act to practice dentistry or dental surgery in this State. It shall elect one of its members President and one Secretary, and it shall meet at least twice in each year, and as much oftener and at such times and places as may be necessary. A majority of the members of said Board shall constitute a quorum, and the proceedings thereof shall be open to the public. Provided further that said Board shall examine and grade all papers submitted by applicants for license and report thereon to such applicant or applicants within thirty days from the time of meeting of said Board. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 5; Acts 1905, p. 144; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 6.]

Art. 2409. Persons desiring to practice dentistry, what is required of.—Any person desiring to commence the practice of dentistry or dental surgery within the State of Texas, after the passage of this Act, shall, before commencing such practice, make application to said Board, and upon payment of $25.00, which shall not be returned to said applicant, and upon presentation of satisfactory evidence of his or her good moral character, and upon presentation of a diploma from a reputable dental college, and upon undergoing a satisfactory examination before said Board, on all the subjects pertaining to dentistry, or upon such subjects as the Board may in its judgment deem necessary, and having complied with all other requirements of this Act, shall be granted a license to practice dentistry or dental surgery in the State of Texas; provided that any person upon presentation of satisfactory evidence before the Board that he or she has been regularly engaged in the legal practice of dentistry in any State in the United States, for a period of three years next preceding said application, and upon complying with other requirements of this Act, shall be entitled to an examination without the presentation of a diploma; provided further that such colleges shall be considered reputable within the meaning of this Act, whose entrance requirements and courses of instruction are as high as those adopted by the better class of dental colleges of the United States; and provided that the Board appointed under this Act shall be the final judges of a reputable dental college. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 7; Acts 1905, p. 144; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 7.]

Arts. 2410, 2411.

Superseded by Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31 (arts. 2405-2416a).

Art. 2411a. Same.—Any person who has heretofore been licensed, authorized, or granted permission to practice dentistry or dental surgery under the laws of this State, and who has so practiced, under said license, authorization or permit, previous to the passage of this Act, and who desires to obtain a license of authority from the Board created under this Act, under presentation and surrender to the Board of said license, authorization or permit, and an affidavit that he is the same person to whom same was originally granted, shall be granted a license under this Act, for which the Board shall receive a fee of $1.00. Provided, however, that no person shall be required to surrender an old license for a new one except he so desires. Provided, also, that if any license issued under this or any previous Act, in Texas, be lost or destroyed, the holder of said license may present his application to the Board for a duplicate license, together with his affidavit that the old license has been so lost or destroyed, and upon further affidavit that he is the same person to whom said license was issued, shall be granted a license under this Act. Provided that if the records of said Board fail to show that such person has ever been granted a license, the Board may have the power to exercise its discretion in granting such duplicate license, and for each duplicate license granted the Board shall receive a fee of $1.00. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 8.]

Art. 2412.

Superseded by Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, set forth herein as arts. 2403-2416a.

Art. 2413. License issued by board to be filed for record.—Every person to whom license is issued by the Board of Examiners, shall, before beginning the practice of dentistry in this State, present the same to the County Clerk of the County in which he or she resides or expects to practice; who shall officially record said license in a book provided for that purpose, and said clerk shall receive a fee of fifty cents for each license so recorded. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 9; Acts 1905, p. 144; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 9.]

Art. 2414. Revocation of license.—It shall be the duty of any member of the Board of Examiners under this Act, when it shall be made to appear to said member by satisfactory evidence from a credible witness that any person who has been granted a license to practice dentistry or dental surgery in this State has been convicted of a felony, or has been guilty of any fraudulent or dishonorable conduct or malpractice, or any deception, or misrepresentation of facts for the purpose of soliciting or obtaining business, to report the same to the county or district attorney of said county, whose duty it shall be, if in his judgment the evidence is sufficient, to file a complaint in the District Court of said County, requiring the person so accused to appear before said court, at a regular term of said court, and upon the trial of said cause, if the defendant is found guilty of said charge, it shall be the duty of said District Court to revoke the license of said defendant, provided no one shall be required to stand trial, unless a copy of said charges shall have been furnished him or her at least ten days before said trial; and provided further that he shall be cited to appear under the same rules as govern other civil cases in said court. And if any person whose license has been revoked under this section shall practice or attempt to practice dentistry or dental surgery after such a license has been revoked, he or she shall be punished as provided in Section 14 [Penal Code, Art. 768] of this Act. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 10; Acts 1905, p. 143; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 10.]

Art. 2414a. Exhibition of license.—Any person authorized to practice dentistry or dental surgery, in this State, either under this Act or any previous Act of any legislature of Texas, shall place his or her license on exhibition in his or her office where said license shall be in plain view of patients, and any person who shall do any operation in the mouth of a patient, or treat any lesions of the mouth or teeth, without having said license exhibited in his or her office in plain view, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished as provided in Section 14 of this Act [Penal Code, Art. 768]; and each day so engaged shall constitute a separate offense; provided that nothing in this Act shall apply to students of a reputable dental college, who perform their operations without remuneration except for actual cost of materials, in the presence of, and under the direct personal supervision of a demonstrator or teacher, who has complied with the provisions of this Act, or has been legally authorized to practice dentistry in Texas under some other Act of the Legislature of Texas. Provided further that nothing in this Act shall apply to persons doing laboratory work on inert matter only. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 11.]

Sec. 12 of the act is set forth, post, as art. 767a, Penal Code.

Art. 2415. Compensation and expenses of board.—Each member of the Board of Examiners shall receive for his services $5.00 per day for each day actually engaged in the duties of his office, together with all legitimate expenses incurred in the performance of such duties. Provided that all expenses of said Board shall be paid from money received by the Board from applicants, as provided for in this Act, and no money shall ever be paid to any member of the Board from any fund in the State Treasury. Provided further that any excess money remaining in the hands of the Board, after all expenses in the performance of their duty have been paid, shall be kept in the hands of the Secretary for the proper enforcement of this Act, and for other legitimate expenses of the Board. The Secretary shall be required to give bond payable to the Board in such sum as the Board may require for the faithful performance of his duty in the safe keeping of and proper delivery of said money. [Acts 1889, p. 91; Acts 1897, ch. 97, § 12; Acts 1905, p. 143; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 31, § 13.]

Sec. 14 is set forth, post, as art. 768, Penal Code.

Art. 2416. Disposition of fines collected.—All fines collected under the provisions of this Act shall be turned into the common school fund of the county in which said fine is collected, and no part of such fine shall be collected or used by the Board of Examiners. [Acts 1889, p.
Art. 2417. State Depository Board; quorum; State Treasurer to act as secretary.—The State Treasurer, the Attorney General, and the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, are hereby constituted the State Depository Board, and any two of such members shall constitute a quorum. The State Treasurer shall also perform the duties of Secretary of the board. [Acts 1905, p. 387; Acts 1907, p. 183; Acts 1911, p. 2; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Acts 2417-2439, as contained in Revised Statutes 1911, consisted of Acts 1905, p. 387, and Acts 1907, p. 185. Some of these articles were subsequently amended by Acts 1911, p. 2; Acts 1911, 1st C. S., ch. 15; Acts 1913, p. 299, and Acts 1915, 34th Leg., ch. 30. Acts 1918, 35th Leg., 4th C. S., ch. 3, sec. 1, added article 2438a. Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, sec. 1, amends all of the articles in this chapter. The enacting clause of said Acts 1918, 35th Leg., ch. 116, reads as follows: "That Chapter 3 of Title 44, embracing articles 2417, 2418, 2419, 2420, 2421, 2422, 2423, 2424, 2425, 2426, 2427, 2428, 2429, 2430, 2431, 2432, 2433, 2434, 2435, 2436, 2437, 2438 and 2439 of the Revised Civil Statutes of 1911, and all amendments thereto be amended so as to hereafter read as follows." This amending act contains only articles 2417-2425, leaving articles 2426-2439 uncared for. The text of these articles as contained in said Acts 1919, ch. 145, does not correspond to the same articles as contained in Revised Civil Statutes.
Art. 2417

DEPOSITORIES

(Title 4)

1911; but the subject matter of the articles as contained in said Acts 1919, ch. 145, covers all of the subject matter of the articles as contained in Revised Civil Statutes 1911, and the subsequent amendments thereto. The effect of this amendment is to supersede all of the articles as contained in Revised Civil Statutes 1911, and the subsequent amendments thereto, and to substitute therefor articles 2417-2435, as set forth here.

Section 2 of said Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, repeals all conflicting laws.

Constitutionality.—Assuming that Const. art. 8, § 6, providing that no “money shall be drawn from the treasury” but in pursuance of specific appropriations made by law, prohibits any loan to or investment with a bank of any state funds, and that money is drawn from the treasury if withdrawn from the official custody and control of the state treasurer, it is not contravened by the State Depository Law, the deposits authorized by the act not constituting a “loan” or “investment,” and not taking the funds out of the official custody and control of the treasurer, they being subject to withdrawal at any time, except that 10 days’ notice must be given where more than a fifth of the funds in a depository are to be withdrawn; and safety of the funds, as well as profit by way of interest, being one of the chief purposes of the act. Lawson v. Baker (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 260.

The mere temporary deposit of special funds of the state in depositories, while awaiting investment or disbursement, does not interfere with their application as directed by the various provisions of the Constitution relating thereto, so that the State Depository Law, by authorizing such deposit, does not contravene Const. art. 8, § 6, as to diversion of such funds. Id.

Suit to enjoin depositing.—A taxpayer and citizen may not sue public officers acting under color of authority to restrain their action, without showing special damages to himself, whether they are alleged to be acting merely ultra vires or under unconstitutional law, and therefore cannot sue to prevent the carrying out of the State Depository Law by the State Depository Board; its provisions being beneficial to him through decreased taxes on account of profits therefrom to the state. Lawson v. Baker (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 260.

Art. 2418. Soliciting bids for keeping state funds.—It shall be the duty of the State Treasurer, between the first and fifth day of January next after each general election, to mail to each state and national bank doing business in this State a circular letter soliciting bids for keeping state funds, for a term of two years next after the succeeding March 1, upon the condition prescribed in this chapter. Said circular letter shall state the conditions to be complied with by the bidders as hereinafter provided, and what each bid shall set forth. The State Treasurer shall make three certified lists of the banks to which such letter was mailed, each to be accompanied by a copy of such letter, one of which he shall deliver to the Attorney General, one to the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, and the other he shall keep on file in his office for the inspection of any person desiring to see the same. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1.]

Art. 2419. Contents of bids.—Said bids shall state the amount of paid up capital stock of said bank, the maximum of State funds, to be not less than ten thousand dollars, it will accept, the rate of interest it will pay on the average daily balance to the credit of the State Treasurer in such bank, and shall contain a provision that the books and accounts of such bank, if designated as a State Depository, shall be open at all times, to the inspection of the State Depository Board, any member, or any accredited representative thereof.

Said bid shall be sealed in an envelope, marked “Bid for keeping of State Funds,” and shall be mailed to the State Treasurer in time to reach his office on or before noon of the succeeding first Monday in February. [Id.]

Art. 2420. Opening and listing bids.—When the State Treasurer receives such bids he shall endorse thereon the date of receipt of same, and shall on the first Monday in February open the same in the presence of the State Depository Board; and thereupon said board shall make a list of said banks, in the order of the rate of interest offered; that is, the bank offering the highest rate of interest shall be listed first, the one offering the next highest rate next, and so on until all such banks are listed, provided that said board may reject any or all bids, and no bids for less than three percent on the average daily balance of State funds shall be considered. [Id.]

In general.—The State Depository Law passed March 31, 1919, in view of the declared emergency from the fact that the depository laws are inadequate to meet "present conditions," there being at the time in the state treasury several million dollars more than could be placed in the then existing depositories, will be held intended to become operative at once, and the act declaring it the duty of the state treasurer, during the first days of January next after each general election to mail a circular to all states and national banks in the state, soliciting bids for keeping state funds for a term of two years next after the succeeding March 1, was intended to prescribe a permanent and uniform standard, to be observed after the next general election, and not to require a postponement in the meantime of the selection of depositories for the excess funds during the interim. Lawson v. Baker (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 260.

Art. 2421. Further solicitation of bids.—In case at any time the banks being used as State depositories, as provided in this chapter, are not sufficient to handle all of the funds of the State, and no other bank that has offered an accepted rate of interest has qualified according to the provisions of this chapter, then such board may cause the State Treasurer to send out a circular letter embodying the requirements prescribed in Article 2418 above, to all banks authorized to bid, not then acting as State depositories, giving the date when bids must be in the hands of the State Treasurer, which shall not be less than thirty days from the date of mailing such letter, and bids shall be received, and opened, on the date set out in said letter, in the same manner and upon the same conditions, and a list of the banks bidding shall be made in the order of the rates of interest offered, as provided in the preceding article. [Id.]

Art. 2422. Selection of banks and notice thereto to qualify.—After such list has been made said board shall select from the list the number of banks offering the highest rate of interest on average daily balance that will in the judgment of said board be necessary to keep all State funds, and notify them to qualify as prescribed in this chapter: and if, at any time, it should develop that more depositories are required, said board shall select another list of banks next in order on said list and notify them to qualify as depositories under this chapter, or, in its discretion, said board may advertise for bids as provided in the preceding article. [Id.]

Art. 2423. Qualification by banks selected; deposit of bonds; giving of surety bond.—When a bank has been notified to qualify as a depository it shall, within thirty days after such notice, deposit with the State Treasurer, in an amount one-fifth greater than the maximum amount of state funds said bank proposes to keep, United States, State, Federal Land Bank, located in Texas, county, independent school district, common school district, or municipal bonds, or vendor's lien or mortgage lien notes, secured by a first lien on real estate of value at least double the amount of said notes exclusive of improvements; or shall execute a bond signed by some surety company, authorized to do business in Texas in an amount not less than double the amount of State funds deposited in said bank, said bond to be payable to the State Treasurer and to be in such form as may be provided by the depository board and subject to the approval of said board, but before any State, county, independent school district, common school district, or municipal bonds, shall be received as collateral security, they shall be submitted to the Attorney General and by him approved, and such bonds shall be registered under the same rules and regulations as required for bonds in which the permanent school funds are invested, and provided that such bonds, except United States bonds, shall be worth not less than par. In case vendor's lien or mortgage notes are offered for deposit they shall be accompanied by an abstract of title to the land securing the payment thereof, and an opinion of a reputable attorney, residing in the county where such land is located, approving such title and the Depository Board shall make such investigation in regard to the value of the land securing the payment of such notes as is deemed proper, and it may require such payment or deposit as is deemed proper to cover the expense of investigating the title to and value of the land securing the payment thereof. Said Depository Board shall have the right to reject with or without cause any abstract, opinion thereon, or any notes, or other securities that may be offered. Provided that a bond executed by any surety company may in its discretion be rejected by the board whenever in the judgment of said board the same should be rejected, and the action of the board in rejecting said bond shall not be subject to revision. [Id.]

Art. 2424. Failure of bank selected to qualify; liquidated damages.—In case any bank that has submitted a bid for keeping State funds shall fail to qualify within thirty days after being notified to do so, it shall forfeit to the State, as liquidated damages, the difference between the interest rate offered and the lowest rate of interest the State is compelled to receive on its funds, under the provision of this chapter for six months, on the maximum amount that said bank proposed to keep, provided that no bank shall be compelled to qualify, or be subject to any penalty, that was not notified to qualify within four months after the bid was opened. [Id.]

Art. 2425. Deposit of funds in depositories; interest on deposits; failure of State Treasurer to deposit.—After the depositories have qualified as provided in the preceding articles, it shall be the duty of the State Treasurer to deposit the funds belonging to the State in such depositories, and he shall at all times keep the funds in the bank or banks in the order of the rate of interest offered, so that the State shall receive the highest rate of interest possible on such funds; provided that the depositories selected in the beginning of a biennium shall retain their preference over depositories subsequently selected. No depository shall be entitled to keep on deposit more than its paid up capital stock, and permanent surplus. If the State Treasurer shall fail to deposit said funds in accordance with the provisions of this chapter, he shall be liable to the State for five per cent a month on the funds he fails to deposit; provided that he may retain in the State Treasury from time to time with the express consent of said board, sufficient funds to meet the current demands on the Treasury. [Acts 1905, p. 388; Acts 1911, ch. 3, § 1; Acts 1911, 1st C. S. ch. 15, § 1; Acts 1913, p. 330, § 1; Acts 1915, 34th Leg., ch. 30, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1.]

Art. 2426. Custody and disposition of securities deposited by depositories; additional security.—The securities above mentioned shall be delivered to the State Treasurer and receipted for by him and retained by him in the vaults of the State Treasury and if, in any case or at any time, such bonds are not satisfactory security, in the opinion of the State Depository Board, for the deposits made under this chapter, they may require such additional security to be given as will be satisfactory to them; and said State Depository Board shall, from time to time, inspect such bonds and see that the same are actually kept in the vaults.
of the State Treasury; and in the event that said bank or banks selected as state depositories shall fail to pay deposits or any part thereof, on the check of the State Treasury, he shall have power to forthwith convert such bonds into money, and disburse the same according to law upon the warrants drawn by the State Comptroller upon the funds for which said bonds are security. Any bank making deposit of bonds with the State Treasurer under the provisions of this chapter may cause such bonds to be endorsed or stamped, as they may deem proper, so as to show that they are deposited as collateral, and are not transferable, except upon the conditions of the chapter. [Acts 1905, p. 388; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1.]

Right to convert bonds on default.—It being the province of the court to decide only questions affecting substantial rights, it will not, in advance of any applicable conditions, determine whether due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment would be violated by an exercise of the authority given the state treasurer, by this article, on failure of a depository to pay over state funds on his check, to forthwith convert the securities deposited by such depository and disburse the money for account of the state funds. Lawson v. Baker (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 260.

Art. 2427. Payment of interest on deposits.—Any State Depository receiving State funds under the provisions of this chapter shall pay to the State Treasurer at the end of each month, interest on the average daily balances for said month at the rate of interest agreed on, which shall in no event be less than the rate of three per cent per annum, which interest shall become part of the general revenue. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch 145, § 1.]

Constitutionality.—Provision of the State Depository Law that interest on all funds deposited in depositories shall become part of the general revenue will be construed as limited to general funds, to avoid conflict with Const. art. 8, § 6, as to special funds; for “interest” is an accretion to the principal fund earning it, and, unless lawfully separated therefrom, becomes a part thereof and interest earned by deposit of special funds is an increment accruing to such special fund. Lawson v. Baker (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 260.

Art. 2428. All funds to be paid into State Treasury or State Depositories; forfeiture for failure.—All officers of this State charged with the collection of, or who shall come into the possession of State funds or other funds required to be kept by the State Treasury shall remit, or pay such funds into the State Treasury or the State Depository designated by the State Treasury as herein provided daily as the same are collected and any officer failing to so deposit such funds shall forfeit to the State five per cent per month on the amount of such funds for the time such funds are withheld as liquidated damages, and shall be subject to all other penalties now prescribed by law; provided that such officers as are required by law to remit to some other officer or department, shall instead of remitting to the State Treasury remit as is required by law, within the time herein fixed for making remittances to the State Treasury. [Id.]

Art. 2429. Designation of depositories as receiving depositories; deposit of funds with.—The State Depository Board may in its discretion designate certain depositories as receiving depositories and authorize such officers and other persons who come into possession of funds belonging to the State to deposit such funds in any such depositories as are found most convenient for the State Treasurer, but unless specially authorized to deposit in such depositories such persons shall remit such funds to the State Treasury. In either event, such funds may be remitted in cash by registered letter, by post office money order, express money order of any express company doing business in Texas, or by check or draft on any bank, provided the liability of the persons so remitting shall not cease until the cash proceeds of such remittances, or cash, if sent by registered letter, is actually received by the Treasurer or the duly authorized State Depository in the due course of business. [Acts 1905, p. 388; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S. ch. 25, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Sec. 2 of Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S. ch. 25, repeals all conflicting laws. The act took effect 90 days after July 22, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 2430. Receipts to be issued for deposits; excess of deposits.—In all cases where State funds are deposited in State depositories by the persons paying the same, such depository shall issue and deliver to such person a triplicate receipt thereof, one of which shall be preserved by the party making such deposit and the others shall be forwarded to the State Treasurer and the Comptroller respectively, and if any State depository shall receive or have on hand State funds in excess of the amount of deposit awarded it by the provisions of this chapter, the same shall be considered in computing the average daily balances and draw the same interest; but such depository shall on the first business day of each month and oftener if requested by the State Treasurer, remit all State funds in excess of the amount it is entitled to keep to the State Treasury; and in case any State depository shall fail or refuse to remit this excess, or in case it shall fail to remit any other funds on deposit when requested to do so by the State Treasurer under the provisions of this Act shall forfeit its right to act as State Depository and the State Treasurer shall at once close his account with said depository and notify all collectors and others charged with the duty of collecting public funds for the State of Texas, and the Attorney General of the State shall cause such action to be taken, if any, as shall be necessary to protect the State's interest in the premises. [Acts 1905, p. 388; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1.]

Art. 2431. All state funds to be deposited in depositories.—All state funds shall be deposited and kept in State depositories designated under this chapter, subject to the regulations of this chapter; provided that the State Treasurer may with the consent of the Depository Board retain in the State Treasury at Austin sufficient funds to meet the current expenses of the government in case he finds it advisable to do so. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1.]

Cited, Ex parte McKay, 82 Cr. R. 221, 199 S. W. 637.

Art. 2432. Equalization of deposits among depositories; investment of excess funds in United States Treasury certificates of indebtedness.—It shall be the duty of the State Treasurer to keep the funds in the depositories paying the highest rate of interest and to maintain as nearly as possible a fair and equal balance of money on hand in all state depositories paying the same rate of interest in proportion to the amount each is entitled to receive, by drawing warrants alternatively thereon or by apportioning the warrants so drawn. The State Depository Board is hereby authorized and empowered whenever there are excess funds in the State Treasury for which there is no immediate use to subscribe for such amount of United States Treasury Certificates of Indebtedness as their judgment may dictate, and the interest earned thereon shall become part of the general revenue fund. [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 3, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1.]

Art. 2433. Depositories to collect checks, etc., for state and to issue drafts on "Reserve Banks."—All State depositories shall collect without cost to the State all checks, drafts and demands for money and on the demand of the State Treasurer shall issue to him or his order, free of charge, a draft or exchange on a bank designated by the United States or State Authorities as a "Reserve Bank" in any banking center of this State, which draft may be in any sum designated by the State Treasurer not exceeding the amount of the State deposit in said depository, provided that the said Treasurer shall give to such depository ten days notice of his intention to draw on funds therein, before drawing more than one fifth of the amount such depository is entitled to keep, but this limitation shall not apply to deposit made during the preceding thirty days. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, § 1.]

Art. 2434. Rules and regulations for depositories.—The State Depository Board of the State of Texas shall have the right to make such rules and regulations governing the establishment and conduct of State depositories, and the handling of funds therein as the public interest may require, not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter, which said rules and regulations shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of said board. Art. 2435. Advertisement for bids from banks to act as clearing houses, etc., for state funds.—If in the opinion of the State Depository Board it is advisable to have the State's business cleared through a bank other than one of the regular State Depositories, it may advertise for bids, from all state and national banks having a capital stock of not less than fifty thousand dollars, for the clearing and safe keeping of State funds, in the manner herein prescribed for the selection of State depositories, and the bank offering the highest rate of interest, to be not less than two per cent per annum, on the average daily balances on deposit shall be selected and notified to qualify by the deposit of securities or the giving of bond in an amount to be fixed by the Depository Board in the manner herein prescribed for the qualification of other depositories, and collections and clearings may be handled through such depository, and after giving such depositories a reasonable time for clearing and collection, the State Treasurer shall transfer such funds to available depository paying the highest rate of interest on average daily deposits. [Id.]

Took effect March 31, 1919.

Art. 2435a. Extension of time of payment on change of depository. —That during the existence of any general financial or industrial depression at the end of any biennial depository period after new depositories have been selected by the State Depository Board, if it should be found by the State Depository Board that any of the then existing old depositories have not been or will not be selected as depositories for the next two-year period under the bids submitted, and that the withdrawal of the entire amount of State funds in any particular depository on March first will create a demand on such old depository which it will not be able to meet, though otherwise solvent, then the State Depository Board shall have the discretion and authority to extend the time of payment of such funds into the State Treasury from time to time: provided, however, that such extension shall not be made unless and until such old depository executes a new contract and bond or gives security, as in the first instance, for such period of time as the State Depository Board may designate, and at such rate of interest as the State Depository Board may find to be not less than the approximate average rate of interest which the State will receive under the bids submitted for the current biennial depository period into which such extension of time is made. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 14, § 1, amending Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, by adding thereto art. 2435a.]

Art. 2435b. Extension of time for payment of drafts or demands; contract and bond; suspension of deposits.—That during the existence of any general financial or industrial depression prior to March 1, 1923, if it should be found by the State Depository Board that any State depository is not able to pay the drafts or demands made upon it by the State Treasurer in the ordinary operation of the State Depository Law without closing its doors and ceasing to exist as a going concern, though otherwise solvent, then the State Depository Board shall have the discretion and authority to extend the time for payment of the funds on deposit in such State Depository into the Treasury from time to time; provided, however, that such extension shall not be made unless and until such depository and the sureties, if any, on its depository bond, execute a contract of extension or give bond or security as in the first instance for such period of time as the State Depository Board may designate. The State Depositories to which extensions of time are granted under this Act shall not receive any additional funds on deposit from the State Treasury until the demands of the State Treasurer as to previous existing funds have been met. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 3, § 1, amending Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 145, by adding art. 2435b.]

COUNTY DEPOSITORIES

Art. 2440. Commissioners' court to receive proposals from banks; advertisement.

Art. 2441. Bids when and how presented; to state what; deposit; failure to comply with bid.

Art. 2442. Bids to be opened when, etc.: award; interest how computed and paid; disposition of proceeds; return of deposits.

Art. 2443. Bond of depository; surety company; substitute security; venue of suits.

Art. 2444. Order designating depository, etc.

Art. 2445. Treasurer's checks payable at county seat, penalty.

Art. 2449. Warrants how paid, etc., and charged; statements, bonds, etc.

Art. 2452. Treasurer not responsible for negligence of depository, but, etc.

Article 2440. Commissioners' court to receive proposals from banks; advertisement.

Selection of depository discretionary.—The authority to select a depository for the funds of a county is vested in the commissioners' court, and in making such selection it has a discretion, the exercise of which, unless abused, is not subject to be reviewed or controlled by the district court, under this article, and arts. 2441, 2442. Hurley v. Citizens' Nat. Bank of Sour Lake (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 663.

Priority of county's claim for deposits.—Under this and following articles, and the Bank Deposit Guaranty Law, a county which deposited its funds in bank held not entitled to assert any superior claim over other creditors in distribution of assets of bank after its insolvency. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 542.

Art. 2441. Bids when and how presented; to state what; deposit; failure to comply with bid.

Art. 2442. Bids to be opened when; award of contract; interest how computed and paid; disposition of proceeds; return of deposits.

Selection of depository discretionary.—It was not the intention of the Legislature by this article to compel the commissioners' court of a county to select as depository of county funds the one offering to pay the largest rate of interest per annum for said funds, and such court may select any bidder unless it abuses its discretion by acting with some improper motive. Hurley v. Citizens Nat. Bank of Sour City (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 663.

Art. 2443. Bond of depository; surety company; substitute security; venue of suits.

Cited, Padgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1046.

Indemnity bond in general.—In view of circumstances under which a bond was given to indemnify a county for bank deposits, held, that bond covered only deposits of 'good roads' money. McHaney v. People's State Bank of Longview (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 997.

Bonding company had a right to limit its liability under common-law bond covering county deposits, to fractional part of total loss. Id.

The mere fact that a bonding company was a bank's surety did not in law make it a creditor of the bank with which the county had deposited funds. Lion Bonding & Surety Co. v. Austin (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 542.

Art. 2444. Order designating depository, etc.

Art. 2447. Treasurer's checks, etc.

Art. 2449. Warrants, how paid, etc.

Cited, Padgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1046.

Art. 2452. Treasurer not responsible for negligence of depository, etc.

Treasurer's liability.—This article, providing that the treasurer shall not be liable for loss caused through the negligence of any depository, does not excuse a treasurer for his negligence in issuing checks on unauthorized warrants, contributing, with the depository's negligence, to loss to the county through the depository's payment of such checks. Padgett v. Young County (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1046.

Where a county treasurer negligently issued checks to fictitious persons upon unauthorized warrants, which checks the county depository bank paid upon forged indorsements, the treasurer could not be subrogated to the county's rights against the bank, since public policy forbids that he profit by his own negligence. SUSPENSION OF DEPOSITORY BANK

Art. 2460½. Selection of special depository on suspension of regular depository; assumption of obligations of suspended depository; how paid; bond; interest.

Art. 2460½a. Arrangement as to state funds; interest.

Art. 2460½b. May proceed against suspended depository.

Article 2460½. Selection of special depository on suspension of regular depository; assumption of obligations of suspended depository;
how paid; bond; interest.—When any bank, which is a county, city or district depository, of public funds under the laws of this State, suspends business or is taken charge of by the Comptroller of the Currency or the Commissioner of Insurance and Banking, as the case may be, the lawful county, city or district authorities, authorized to select the depository in the first instance, shall have the discretion and authority to select by contract a special depository for the public funds in such suspended bank. Such special depository shall assume the payment of the amount of public funds due by the suspended bank on the date of its suspension, including interest to that date, and shall pay the same to the lawfully designated public authority in accordance with the contract entered into by such special depository. The contract shall be for the performance of the agreement entered into between the proper public authorities designated above and the special depository, and shall require the payment of the deposit in such installments as may be agreed upon, the last of which shall be paid not exceeding three years from the date of the contract; the installments, or the amount due, may be evidenced in the discretion of the contracting parties, by negotiable certificates of deposit or cashier's checks, payable at specified dates, if made a part of the contract; the performance of the contract and the payment of funds described therein shall be secured by bond, or by several bonds in case of installments, to be given by the special depository with the same character of sureties as is required by regular depository bonds. The contracts and bonds of special depositories shall be approved by the authority authorized by law to approve contracts and bonds of regularly selected depositories. The rate of interest which funds placed in a special depository hereunder shall bear shall be fixed by the contract, or such funds may, in the discretion of the contracting parties, be non-interest bearing. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 27, § 1.]

Took effect March 13, 1921.

Art. 2460½a. Arrangement as to state funds; interest.—If any State funds are in the county depository which has failed, the amount thereof shall be ascertained by the State Comptroller, who shall be authorized in his discretion to enter into a contract for the custody and payment of the same, with the special depository selected by the county authorities in the same manner that the county authorities are herein authorized so to do, and to take and approve contracts and bonds therefor; providing, however, that State funds thus placed in such special depository shall bear the average rate of interest received by the State on State funds placed with the regularly selected state depositories. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 2460½b. May proceed against suspended depository.—Nothing in this Act shall require the State, county, city or district authorities to select any special depository as is herein permitted, but they may proceed by their lawful remedies against the failed bank, if, in their discretion, it is best for the public interest so to do. [Id., § 3.]
TITLE 45

DECENT AND DISTRIBUTION

Art. 2461. [1688] [1645] Where intestate leaves no husband or wife.

Inheritance estate.—The laws of descent and distribution govern only what the person owns at his death, and cannot touch what he has disposed of during his life, so that a person has heirs only as to property which he holds at his death, and not as conveyed away during his lifetime. Runge v. Freshman (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 264.

Representation.—In Texas, when children of deceased child inherit from parent of such child, under statutes of descent, they take, not through or by representation of parent, but directly from deceased. Harle v. Harle, 108 Tex. 214, 204 S. W. 217.

Art. 2462. [1689] [1646] Where intestate leaves husband or wife.

Cited, Evans v. Opperman, 76 Tex. 293, 13 S. W. 312.

In general.—A wife devised to her husband her half of the homestead for life, "with remainder to my legal heirs," and also certain property "in trust for my legal heirs," and directed the revenue of the property paid "to my legal heirs, with remainder after my husband's death, or the relinquishment of said trust, to my legal heirs." The husband was authorized to sell any of the property, and reinvest the proceeds as he might deem beneficial to her legal heirs. The wife had no descendents at her death. Her father, mother, brothers, and sisters survived her. Held, that the husband did not take, under the will, as "legal heir," under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1646. Peet v. Commerce & E. S. Ry. Co., 70 Tex. 522, 8 S. W. 203.

Right of wife who killed husband to insurance on his life.—See Murchison v. Murchison (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 423.

Art. 2465. [1692] [1649] No corruption of blood, forfeiture, etc.

Right of wife who killed husband to insurance on his life.—Despite Const. art. 1, § 21, and this article, providing no conviction shall work forfeiture of estate, beneficiary in life insurance policy, who kills insured to accelerate due date and collect money, cannot recover proceeds against insurance company. Murchison v. Murchison (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 425.

Under article 2462 and this article, where wife, beneficiary of her husband's life insurance policy, feloniously killed such husband, who died intestate and without children, to accelerate due date of policy and obtain money, liability of insurance company to husband's estate not being canceled, and proceeds of policy being personality, wife was entitled to them. Id.

Art. 2466. [1693] [1650] Persons not in being.

Children of adopted child who died before death of adopter.—This article appears to expressly forbid recognizing any right in children of adopted child who died before the adopter, to inherit from adopter's ancestor. Harle v. Harle, 109 Tex. 214, 204 S. W. 317.

Art. 2467. [1694] [1651] Advancements brought into hotchpotch.

Advancement.—Under this article, where father made advancement to son, son held to have no interest in the estate on the father's death subject to execution, though there was no record evidence that he was excluded. Butler v. Lollar (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1175.

Facts held to warrant finding that son received land from father as an advancement and had a further interest in his father's estate. Id. Where a father conveyed to children of his first marriage, 175 acres of a parcel which was his separate estate, retaining 200 acres therein, and the jury found that the 175 acres conveyed was of the value of the parcel retained which was subject to the second wife's life estate, held that, as the two children of the first marriage were bound to account for the advancement under this article, the child of the second marriage, who took the land at the death of her mother, was entitled to it free from claims of the other children; the value of the mother's estate being computed at more than one-half of the value of the land. Rutherford v. Deaver (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 29.

Where a parent who had married a second time conveyed to children of the first marriage 175 acres of a parcel of land which he owned as his separate property, held that such conveyance will be deemed an advancement, and hence the grantees must account for the advancement in settlement of the parent's estate. Id.

If payments to plaintiffs by the temporary administrator of their father were in satisfaction of an indebtedness of the father to them, it could not be urged as a defense to plaintiffs' suit to recover their undivided interest in the homestead. Allen v. Ramey (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 489.

If money paid plaintiffs by their father's temporary administrator might be recovered back in a proper suit against them or against the temporary administrator and his bondman, it could not be recovered in a suit by plaintiffs to recover their undivided interest in the homestead. Id.

Art. 2469. [1696] [1653] Rule as to community estate.

Rights of children or heirs.—On death of husband, half interest in community property, or himself and wife descended to nine children of husband, subject to homestead rights of wife and her minor son. James v. Stratton (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 385.

Where husband paid consideration for deed in his name only, and subsequently died, devising all property in equal shares to wife, stepson, and four children, the property having been community property, a son, who purchased the rights of all the children would be legally regarded as having acquired title by purchase from the grantor in the deed to a one-half undivided interest, and was entitled to sixteen twenty-fourths, the widow to seven twenty-fourths, and the stepson to one twenty-fourth of the land. Aldridge v. Aldridge (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 305.

If a father recognized the interest of his children in land purchased with community property, and there was no repudiation of such interest, the statutes of limitation did not begin to operate until his death, nor was the suit to establish a trust in the land a stale demand when brought within a very few years after the father's death. Thomas v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 1010.

Under Const. art. 16, §§ 50 and 52, and this article, where the homestead was community property, the husband's undivided one-half interest passed on his death to his children subject only to the homestead right of the widow and minor children; there being no indebtedness of the character specified in art. 2427. Allen v. Ramey (Civ. App.) 226 S. W. 489.

Where land was purchased as the community property of plaintiff and his wife and the deed was made to her and subsequently her name was erased and that of D. substituted, D. took no title in himself, and the deed was simply destroyed, so that, notwithstanding deed by D. to children of plaintiff and his wife, the title remained in plaintiff's wife and upon her death the land passed one half to plaintiff and the other half to children of decedent. Where, under this article; and whatever opinion plaintiff might have had as to the alteration as putting title in D., or the deed from D. to the children as conveying title to them, and however long or much he might have acquiesced in the supposed condition of the title would not effect a conveyance of the title to the children. Nabors v. Nabors (Civ. App.) 220 S. W. 1109.

Grandchildren.—As to a person who died before the amendment to Rev. St. 1879, art. 1653, passed March 20, 1887, her grandchildren inherited no part of an estate held by her and her husband in common. McKinney v. Moore, 73 Tex. 470, 11 S. W. 496.

Adopted children.—Words "child" or "children of deceased or their descendants," as used in this article, cannot be interpreted to include adopted heirs and their issue. Harle v. Harle, 199 Tex. 214, 204 S. W. 317, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 674.

Rights of survivor.—Land, being part of community estate of husband and wife under this article, passed on dissolution of marriage by wife's death to husband as survivor, unless descendants of child or children of wife survived her. Harle v. Harle, 199 Tex. 214, 204 S. W. 317, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 674.

If land conveyed to second wife was community property of second marriage, a divorced first wife claiming in right of son after his father's death was owner of undivided half interest, subject to the second wife's right to use property as her homestead. Johnson v. Johnson (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 202.

Under the statutes defining community property, surviving spouse takes an undivided one-half interest in the entire estate, not as an heir, but as an owner. Slavin v. Greer (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 479.
Upon death of mother, the interest of the father and daughter, who has become of age, in the community estate of the mother and father, is that of tenants in common.

Where a husband took all of the money he and his wife owned, about $2,500, two mules, and a wagon, and abandoned her, leaving her, however, in possession of 400 acres of land and other property, there was no partition of the community estate which would prevent the husband, after the wife's death, from recovering a portion of the land.

Sale, mortgage or conveyance by survivor.—The widow of an intestate, for herself and her minor heirs, in consideration of the finding of a lost land certificate which was community property, locating it, and procuring a patent therefor, without an order of the probate court conveyed one-half of the land so located. In an action against the minor heirs to remove the cloud from the title, held, that under this article the widow had no right to make such conveyance.

Stone v. Ellis, 69 Tex. 325, 7 S. W. 345.

Where property of deceased was left to an executor in trust without action of the probate court, a deed of testator's half of community property by the survivor, before the executor qualified, was ineffective. Nations v. Neighbors (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 691.

Where a wife died prior to her husband and their estates were combined, persons claiming under sale by the executor or administrator of the husband's estate, in order to establish title to the interest of the heirs of wife, must prove the existence of the community debts at date of the sale. Heard v. Vineyard (Com. App.) 212 S. W. 489.

Where plaintiffs proved the existence of community debts established by suit, classified in the estate of deceased husband and one-half thereof paid out of the consolidated estates of the deceased husband and deceased wife, the lands being sold prior to the opening of administration on the wife's estate and not inventories made part thereof, and the proceeds of the sale formed assets of the consolidated estates and entered into the amount distributed to the heirs of both, held, in view of the record, that the sale by the executor of the estate of deceased husband was valid, vesting purchaser with title of both of the estates. Id.

Divorce.—Divorced wife, whose property rights were not disposed of in divorce decree and whose interest in community fund was not subject to any debts contracted by her husband, held entitled to recover one-half from the husband's administratrix.

Jones v. Frazier (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 445.

Subsequent marriage of survivor.—Where community of which third wife was member made deferred payments on land purchased by community of husband and second wife, it was entitled to be subrogated to rights of vendor lienholder against land, whose claim it satisfied, or husband's heirs in partition could seek reimbursement equal to their inherited interest in funds expended in discharging debts against common property.

Guest v. Guest (Civ. App.) 208 S. W. 547.

That land uncompensatedly conveyed to a man during his first marriage was paid for during his second and third marriages does not disturb the title of the first community; but, subject to reimbursement of the second and third communities for their funds used, the children of the first marriage are entitled to their mother's interest, and to share equally in the remainder with the children of the other marriages. Hughes v. Robinson (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 946.

Administration.—Under this article, husband's share of the community estate passed to his children or their descendants on his death, subject to the administrative right of the surviving wife to control, manage, and dispose of the community property under article 2606, and the action of the wife in qualifying as survivor did not divest the children of the title so acquired.

Art. 2471. [1698] [1655] Jus accrescendi abolished.

See Peterson v. Fowler, 73 Tex. 524, 11 S. W. 534.

Art. 2472. [1699] [1656] Illegitimate children and issue of void marriages.

In general.—Children of a common-law marriage could not be deprived of their interest in their father's estate after his death merely because they failed for many years before his death to proclaim to his wife that they were the children of his first marriage—that is, the one at common law—and that as such they intended to assert their interest in his estate whenever he should die, since they could have no inherited interest until after his death. Cunningham v. Cunningham (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 231.

Slaves.—The existence of a marriage of slaves after emancipation, and the husband's subsequent recognition of their child who was born in slavery, rendered the child legitimate, and capable of inheriting from either of them under Rev. St. 1879, art. 1666. Cumby v. Henderson, 6 Civ. App. 518, 25 S. W. 673.

DRAINAGE BY DISTRICTS, ONE OR MORE IN EACH COUNTY—BONDS

Art. 2568. Petition for drainage district; notice.
See 1918 Supp., arts. 6016½-6016½c, as to newspaper publication instead of posting.

Art. 2571. If finding for petitioners, civil engineer appointed; assistants; pay.—After the hearing of the petition as provided in Sections 3 and 4 of this Act [Vernon's Sayles' Ann. Civ. St. 1914, arts. 2569, 2570], if the court should find in favor of the petitioners for the establishment of a district according to the boundaries as set out in said petition or as modified by said court, then the court shall appoint a competent civil engineer, who shall be entitled to such assistants as may be necessary; and, for doing the work required of said engineer under this Act, he and his assistants shall receive such compensation and allowances for transportation, supplies, etc., as may be agreed on between him and the drainage commissioners with the approval of the commissioners court. [Acts 1911, p. 245, § 5; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 34, § 1 (§ 5).]

Competitive bidding on contracts for services.—Art. 2568a, requiring commissioner's court, before entering into a contract requiring the expenditure of $2,000 or more, to submit the contract to competitive bids, held not applicable to county's contract with civil engineers for professional services in connection with the construction and maintenance of public highways and roads in proceedings under Rev. St. tit. 18, c. 2, as amended in 1917, in view of this article, and arts. 640, 1460-1498, §§ 25, 5972, and 1496c, and in view of the purpose of the statute, and the absurdity of letting contracts for professional services of a technical nature through competitive bidding. Art. 2585. Drainage commissioners appointed; qualifications; pay; term; elected when.—After the establishment of any drainage district as herein provided, the Commissioners' Court shall appoint three drainage commissioners, all of whom shall be residents of the county or an adjoining county, who shall be freehold taxpayers of the district and legal voters of the county of their residence, whose duty shall be as hereinafter provided, and who shall each receive for their services the sum of not more than $2.50 per day for the time actually engaged in the work of said district; provided the compensation, if any, shall have been definitely fixed in the order of the court; and before any amount shall be paid said commissioners, or either of them, shall make a detailed report to the Commissioners' Court of the time actually consumed in the work for said district, and of the work done, and such report shall be audited and approved by the Commissioners' Court. Said drainage commissioners shall hold office for the term of two years, and until their successors have qualified, unless sooner removed by a majority vote of the County Commissioners for malfeasance or nonfeasance in office. Upon expiration of the term of office of said drainage commissioners, or in case of the resignation of any such commissioners, the Commissioners' Court shall appoint their successor by a majority vote; provided that after the election establishing a drainage district, is [if] a majority of the real property-tax-payers of such district residing in such county, present a petition to the County Commissioners' Court, praying for an election in said district for the purpose of electing three drainage commissioners therefor, the County Commissioners' Court shall immediately order an election to be held in said district for said purpose at the earliest legal time, and an election shall be held and the returns thereof made as hereinbefore provided for other elections, and the same qualifications hereinbefore provided for voting at other elections shall apply in said election. The Commissioners' Court shall canvass said returns and declare the result at their next regular or special session, and the three persons receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared elected. In the event the third highest vote be tied, the Commissioners' Court shall elect the third drainage commissioners from among those receiving the third highest vote. Such Commissioners so elected, when duly qualified by this Act, shall be the legal and rightful Drainage Commissioners for such district within the full meaning, intent and purpose of this law. All Drainage District Commissioners elected as herein provided shall hold their offices, until the next regular election for State and County officers, and shall then and thereafter be elected every two years at such general election. [Acts 1911, p. 245, § 17, superseding Art. 2585, Rev. Civ. St. 1911; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 54, § 1, amending art. 2585, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

T Neal, April 2, 1918.

Election.—In suit contesting election of drainage commissioners, party challenging voter has burden to prove vote was illegal. Cantwell v. Suttles (Civ. App.) 396 S. W. 655.

In such suit, evidence held to sustain court's finding that voter was qualified to vote, voter living in county and paying poll tax there. 1d.

In such suit, evidence held to sustain finding that voter was not qualified because he had not resided within district for six months preceding election. 1d.

Art. 2590. Right of eminent domain, etc.

Restraining construction.—In view of this article, and arts. 6504, 6530, 6531, as to condemnation by railroads, and Const. art. 1, § 17, as to payment of condemnation damages, an insolvent drainage district in suit to enjoin it from damaging land by flowage could not in its answer seek to condemn the lands by making offer to pay the damages determined. Matagorda County Drainage District No. 5 v. Borden (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 398.

Art. 2592. Civil engineer; term; to make map and profiles; requisites.—After the establishment of any such district the drainage commissioners shall appoint a competent civil engineer, who shall be entitled to such assistants as may be necessary; and, for doing the work required of said engineer under this Act, he and his assistants shall receive such compensation and allowances for transportation, supplies, etc., as may be agreed on between him and the drainage commissioners with the approval of the commissioners court; and said engineer shall proceed to make a map of such district, showing the boundary lines thereof, with the original surveys therein, and also to make maps and profiles of the several canals, drains, ditches and levees located in such district, which maps and profiles shall also show any part of any such canals, drains or ditches extending beyond the limits of such district, made necessary in order to procure necessary outlets for any such canals, drains or ditches; but a copy of the land office map of the county, as it applies to such district, showing the name and number of each survey, and showing the area or number of acres contained in such district shall be a sufficient compliance with such order in so far as making a map of the district is required, and any recognized map of any city or town which may be embraced within the boundaries of said district shall be sufficient as to such city or town. Provided, however, that where boundary lines of such drainage district or any of them cross an original survey the map shall show how many acres of such original survey are included within such drainage district. [Acts 1911, p. 245, § 21; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 34, § 2 (§ 21).]

Took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment.

Art. 2601. Bond of county judge before sale; compensation.—After the drainage bonds have been registered as provided in the preceding Sections of this Act, the County Judge shall at once execute a good and sufficient bond, payable to the commissioners of such drainage district, to be approved by such drainage commissioners, for an amount not less than the amount of the bonds issued, conditioned upon the faithful discharge of his duties; provided, in the event said bond is executed by a satisfactory surety company, the drainage district may pay a reasonable amount as premium on said bond, which amount shall be paid out of the construction and maintenance fund of the drainage district, upon presentation of the bill therefor to the drainage commissioners, and should there be any controversy as to the reasonableness of the amount claimed, as such premium, such controversy may be determined by any court of competent jurisdiction. The County Judge shall be allowed one-half of one per cent of the amount received on the sale of any bonds sold by him in full payment of his services in that behalf, only where under the present law he is entitled to such commission; provided, the premiums paid by the drainage district on the County Judge’s bond may be deducted by the drainage commissioners from his said compensation. [Acts 1911, p. 245, § 29; Acts 1913, S. S., p. 89, § 1 (§ 29); Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 83, § 1 (§ 29).]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Compensation.—Art. 3881, declaring that the maximum amount of fees of all kinds that may be retained by a county judge shall not exceed $2,000 per annum, etc., includes all commissions allowed by law for the performance of official duty, and so includes the commissions paid the judge for making a sale of drainage bonds. Ward v. Harris County (Civ. App.) 209 S. W. 792.

Where a county judge has retained fees up to the maximum allowed by art. 3881, he cannot retain commissions for making a sale of drainage bonds on the ground that he would, if not allowed to retain such commissions, be required to perform extra duties imposed by the drainage act without compensation, nor on the ground that the commissions were paid out of the funds of the drainage district, and not the county: it being permissible for the Legislature to require payment by the drainage district of such commissions to aid the county. Id.
Art. 2603. Tax for interest, sinking fund, and expenses; reports and estimates; sale of remaining bonds; readjustment of funds; investment of sinking fund.

Power to levy taxes.—Drainage districts being departments of government, the purpose of taxation by them is a public purpose and among the powers given by the general provisions of the Constitution to the Legislature. Ogburn v. Barstow, Ward County, Tex., Drainage Dist. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1036.

The Legislature had constitutional authority to pass art. 2608b and this article, providing for levy of taxes for the upkeep of drainage ditches, and such power was not taken away by the 1917 amendment to the Constitution, adding to article 16, section 59, designated section 59a. Id.

Art. 2608b and this article, providing for levies for the upkeep of drainage ditches, are not violative of Const. art. 8, § 5, article 3, § 52, and article 16, § 59, as attempting to levy a tax in excess of that prescribed therein. Id.

Art. 2604. Additional tax books; assessment of property in drainage district, etc.

Compensation of assessor.—Amounts paid county assessor for assessing taxes, for drainage and school districts under this article, and art. 2302, held “fees,” within arts. 3851, 3853, 3858, fixing the maximum of “fees,” and not compensation for “ex officio services,” within art. 3859, making such maximum fee statutes inapplicable to compensation for ex officio services. Nichols v. Galveston County (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 547.

Art. 2605. Collector charged with assessment rolls; compensation; bond required, etc.

Bond.—Taxes in hands of tax collector are secured by his general county bond and not the bond required by this article, “to secure the collection of said taxes.” Watson v. El Paso County (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 126.

Art. 2606. Collector to report, etc.

Art. 2608. Treasurer's bonds, etc.

In general.—Where a county treasurer defaulted, and it is impossible to ascertain which funds were depleted, his successor cannot be compelled by mandamus to pay the full amount of funds due to a drainage district although he may have wrongfully paid orders from other funds; art. 709 and this article, being inapplicable. Nueces County Drainage Dist. No. 2 v. Garrett (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 1000.

Recovery of illegal commissions.—Commissions collected and retained by the county treasurer in his capacity as treasurer for drainage and navigation districts, if illegally retained, are not voluntarily paid by the county so as to bar their recovery. Charlton v. Harris County (Civ. App.) 228 S. W. 969.

Art. 2608b. Levy of annual tax for maintenance of improvements, etc.

Constitutionality.—The Legislature had constitutional authority to pass this article, and art. 2608, providing for levy of taxes for the upkeep of drainage ditches, and such power was not taken away by the 1917 amendment to the Constitution, adding to article 16, section 59, designated section 59a. Ogburn v. Barstow, Ward County, Tex., Drainage Dist. (Civ. App.) 230 S. W. 1036.

This article, and art. 2608, providing for levies for the upkeep of drainage ditches, are not violative of Const. art. 8, § 5, article 3, § 52, and article 16, § 59, as attempting to levy a tax in excess of that prescribed therein. Id.

Art. 2623. Drainage commissioners to keep canals, drains, etc., in repair.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS

Art. 15. Common school districts.

2633a. Lease or destruction of buildings on land acquired.

—Upon the acquisition of the lands above described by the Board of Commissioners herein created, and the delivery of the same to the Board of Regents, the said Board of Regents and their successors shall have the right to lease the buildings and improvements situated upon the land acquired for such sum and for such period of time as in their judgment is best and the revenues derived therefrom shall be deposited and become a building fund and shall be expended for no purpose other than to construct permanent buildings to be used for the purposes of the University. It is expressly provided, however, that no lease of any of said property shall be for a longer term than five years. The board of Regents is hereby expressly empowered to dismantle, tear down and dispose of, or remove any and all improvements from such land as may be acquired under the provisions of this Act. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 137, § 6.]

Explanatory.—The above provision is a part of section 6 of Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 137, authorizing the purchase of additional lands for the use of the University. It is inserted here as being permanent in its nature. The other provisions of the act are omitted, because they are local and temporary in their nature. The act took effect April 1, 1921.

STATE AID

3726¼a. Schools entitled to aid. 2726¼e. General powers of the State Board of Education.
3726¼b. Districts having no special tax and receiving donations. 2726¼f. Duties of State Superintendent of Public Instruction.
3726¼c. Additional aid. 2726¼g. Second aid.
3726¼d. Disposition of funds not expended as provided by previous articles. 2726¼h. Warrants and reports.
3726¼i. Apportionment privileges.

Article 2726¼. Appropriation.—For the purpose of promoting the public school interests of rural schools and those of small towns and of aiding the people in providing adequate school facilities for the education of their children, there is hereby appropriated out of any money in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated $1,500,000.00 or such part thereof as may be necessary for the school year ending August 31, 1922, and $1,000,000 or such part thereof as may be necessary for the school year ending August 31, 1923, and to be used in accordance with the provisions of this Act in aiding rural schools and those of small towns; provided that none of the money appropriated by this Act shall be allotted to any independent or common school district in which property belonging to the State of Texas is located unless said district is entitled to receive same under the provisions of this Act; and it is further provided that none of the money appropriated by this Act shall be expended for the purpose of disseminating by any means information intended to infuence voters in any election whatsoever. [Acts 1917, ch. 80; Acts 1919, ch. 65, § 1; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 20; Acts 1921, 37th
Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 43, § 1.]

Took effect Aug. 31, 1921.

See County Trustees of Navarro County v. Bell Point Common School Dist. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 697.

Art. 2726½a. Schools entitled to aid.—State aid under the provisions of this Act may be distributed in such way as to assist all schools of not more than 500 scholastic enrollment to maintain the school for such length term, not to exceed nine months, as may be desired by the district board of school trustees. Provided further that not more than one thousand dollars for any one year shall be granted to any one school district under the provisions of this Act, the granting of such aid to be subject to the following conditions:

(1) A Common School District: or independent school district receiving this aid must have had an average attendance the preceding year of at least twenty times as many scholastics as the number of teachers employed, and must maintain during the year in which aid is received, an average attendance of at least 75 per cent of the enrollment during the time that the school is in session unless cause for such non-atten-dence, satisfactory to the State Board of Education can be shown.

(2) Any Common School District or Independent school district receiving this aid must make such heating and ventilating arrangements, provide such sanitary closets, and keep the school premises in such condition, as can be approved by the rural school inspector, sent by the State Department of Education.

(3) No Common school district or independent school district which refuses to conform to a plan of consolidation formulated by the county superintendent, and approved by the county board of trustees and by the State Superintendent shall receive aid from this fund for any school ses-tion following the school year in which such refusal is made.

School districts in sparsely settled communities where consolidation is impracticable are to be exempted from this provision of this Act; provided that the decision as to whether such consolidation is not advantageous shall rest with the county board of trustees and shall be approved by the State Superintendent: It is expressly provided that in case of schools where compliance with the preceding conditions is impossible, or would work undue hardships, the State Superintendent shall have power with the approval of the State Board of Education, to grant funds to such schools.

(4) No common or independent school district which has received special State aid under the provisions of this or previous similar Acts for one scholastic year, shall be granted such aid a second time unless it shall provide for the maintenance of its schools by voting a local school tax of fifty cents on the hundred dollars of property valuation; and in no case shall the assessed valuation for common school districts be less than the valuation of the county assessor: and in no case shall the as-essed valuation in towns be less than the assessed valuation of town property for other purposes.
Schools of not more than 500 scholastic, enrollment, complying with the foregoing conditions, shall send to the State Superintendent, on blanks provided by the State Department of Education, a list of teachers employed in the schools, with a statement as to the monthly salary of each teacher, and a list of expected receipts and other expenditures. it being shown on this blank that the trustees lack sufficient funds to maintain the school for the desired length of term. The State Superintendent of Public Instruction with the approval of the State Board of Education may then grant to the school such an amount of this fund as may be necessary to maintain the school for the desired length of term; provided that this period be not longer than nine scholastic months, and provided that such aid be not granted in excess of any amount sufficient to pay the teachers the maximum salary permitted by State law to those holding certificates of the grades held by teachers of the school district to which such aid is granted. It is expressly hereby provided that all school districts meeting the requirements of this Act, and not having sufficient available school funds to maintain their school six months in the year shall be given preference in the distribution of this fund, until all the public schools in the State can be maintained at least six months in the year. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 43, § 2.]

Art. 2726\(\frac{1}{4}\)b. Districts having no special tax and receiving donations.—Any common or independent school district which has no special tax, but where private donation is made for the benefit of the school, either by person or a corporation, then that district shall be entitled to the same proportion of the State aid as any other district that is provided for under this law. [Id., § 2a.]

Art. 2726\(\frac{1}{4}\)c. Additional aid.—In addition, State aid to the amount of not more than $500 for any one district may be granted from the appropriation authorized by this Act, to school districts under the following conditions:

1. Location: Each such school receiving this State aid shall be well located on a plot of ground not less than one acre in extent, properly drained and suitably laid out.

2. School House: There shall be provided a suitable school house, erected in accordance with the school house building law of Texas or meeting substantially the requirements thereof.

3. Equipment: Each such school shall be provided with necessary desks, seats, and black boards; and with such library, books, maps, and globes as are recommended in the State bulletins, as in the opinion of the State Superintendent the said school may be able to purchase.

4. Teachers: Teachers employed in country or small town schools shall furnish to the State Superintendent satisfactory evidence of professional training to their credit, and all teachers must render efficient services of a high grade.

5. Attendance: In order to receive State aid under these conditions, the school must have a scholastic enrollment of not more than 500 scholastic enrollment, exclusive of transfers, and must maintain an attendance record during the year in which it receives such aid of not less than seventy-five per cent of the enrollment unless causes for such non-attendance satisfactory to the State Board of Education can be shown.

6. Local Tax: A school district, to be eligible to special State aid, under the provisions of this Act, if it has received special State aid under the provisions of this or other similar Acts, for a period of one scholastic year, must be levying and collecting a local school tax of not less than fifty cents on the one hundred dollars of property valuation.

(7) Course of Study: Each country school or small town school receiving State aid under the provisions of this Act shall teach the common school subjects as prescribed by law, and shall follow the State courses of study, and shall be required to observe the school, laws, especially as to care of text books. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 27261/4d. Disposition of funds not expended as provided by previous articles.—Such part of this fund as may not be expended under the preceding provisions of this Act may be granted to schools of not more than 500 scholastic enrollment for the following purposes:

(1) Schools making provisions for transportation of pupils to and from consolidated schools may be granted from this fund a sum equal to one-half of the total cost of transportation provided that the provisions of the contract for said transportation be approved by the State Superintendent.

(2) State aid from this fund may be granted in accordance with rules approved by the State Board of Education, for the purpose of providing for an annual increase of salary to teachers of rural schools and schools of small towns, who remain in the same position, provided, (1) that such aid shall not exceed one-half of the amount of the annual increase paid by the school, (2) that such teachers shall furnish recommendations as to satisfactory work from their local boards, (3) that in each such year, when increase is granted from State aid funds, such teachers receiving the increase shall attend a summer school for at least two months, completing work under terms prescribed by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, (4) and that the maximum salary paid such teachers shall not exceed the average of the salary paid to such teachers of similar acquirements and experiences in the three largest cities of the State; provided that in no event shall any teacher in any school to which State aid is granted be paid more than the following amounts: to a teacher holding a second grade certificate sum of $100.00 per month, a teacher holding a first grade certificate $150.00 per month and a teacher holding a permanent certificate $175.00 per month.

(3) Any school eligible to State aid under the provisions of this Act, which acquires by purchase, or by gift an addition to its library, of the value of $50 or more, consisting of unused books approved by the regulations of the State Department of Education, may receive from this fund, a sum not exceeding one-half of the value of said library; providing that no school may receive for its library more than $200 per year; and provided that all funds granted for libraries must be spent for additional library books for the school; provided that funds for the purchase of books for a school library may not be granted to any school which has not provided proper facilities for the care of such books, such facilities to be defined by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 27261/4dd. Extraordinary conditions.—In the case of extraordinary and unusual conditions, the State Board of Education may arrange for the support of a school from State aid funds, for a period not exceeding six months, if otherwise pupils would be deprived entirely of all school privileges. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 27261/4e. General powers of the State Board of Education.—The State Board of Education shall be authorized and it shall be their duty to take such action and to make such rules and regulations not inconsistent with the terms of this Act, as, in its opinion may be necessary to carry out the provisions and intentions of this Act. They shall have the power to impose such other conditions and regulations as to the granting of State aid, that do not conflict with the provisions herein specified, as, in their judgment may be for the best interest of the schools for whose benefit the funds are appropriated. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 2726¾f. Duties of State Superintendent of Public Instruction.
—It shall be the duty of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to go in person or to send one of the rural school supervisors authorized by this Act to assist the school committees who may desire the privileges of this Act in their efforts to meet the necessary requirement in order that they may participate in the distribution of the funds herein appropriated.

Before approving any application, he or she shall make a thorough investigation in person, or through representatives approved by the State Board of Education, of the grounds, buildings, equipment, and possibilities of each school applying for State aid under the provisions of this Act, and aid shall not be granted to any school unless it be shown that such aid is actually needed for efficiency of school work and for the desired length of term. In case where exceptional conditions, or lack of efficient supervisory force renders personal inspection by the Department of Education, impossible, in time to grant State aid to some schools, the State Superintendent shall pursue such course in regard to final granting of State aid to such schools, as, on his recommendation, may be approved by the State Board of Education. In such case, the State Superintendent shall provide for the visitation of such schools, after the aid has been granted, and in future grants to such schools, shall be governed by the eligibility of such schools as shown when so visited. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 2726¾g. Second aid.—Before State aid shall be granted a sec-time to the same district it shall be necessary that all reports as required of the school officials of said districts shall have been received and approved; that the State Superintendent of Public Instruction or one of the rural school supervisors shall have visited said district and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction shall have advised the State Board of Education that in his judgment the school officials of such district have made diligent efforts to meet the requirements and standards as set forth in this Act, that the district receiving State aid has made satsfactory progress, under existing conditions, and that, in his opinion, further aid would prove a good and desirable investment for the State in promoting the educational interests of the people of such district; provided that no school shall be granted State aid a second time until all applications on file for first aid from schools entitled to aid under this Act shall have been acted upon. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 2726¾h. Warrants and reports.—Warrants for all money granted under the provisions of this Act shall be transmitted by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to treasurers or depositories of school districts to which State aid is granted in the same manner as warrants for State apportionment are now transmitted, and it shall be the duty of all treasurers or depositories to make annually itemized reports, under oath, to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction of the expenditure of all money granted under the provisions of this Act.
[Id., § 9.]
Art. 2726½i. Apportionment privileges.—Country schools and small town schools shall be entitled to share in the distribution of State and county available school funds, and in all other school funds in the same manner as other school districts, and in case high school grades are maintained the community shall still be entitled to participate in the distributions of any State aid that may be extended by the Legislature of Texas for vocational or industrial purposes to high schools of the State, though it accept the provisions of this Act. [Id., § 10.]

Art. 2749c. Subdivision of county into school districts, etc.

Cited, Lovelady v. County Board of School Trustees (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 622.

Powers conferred.—Under this chapter, the board of school trustees became vested with the power of the commissioners' court under Rev. St. 1911, art. 2816, to change the boundaries of any independent school district and to consolidate such districts. Hino County School Trustees v. Melton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1142.

Dividing district.—Neither the fact that rural high school in part of a district would enhance values and trade of that part, nor that children of other part could attend high school, nor that majority of school trustees would be elected by majority of district voters, tended to show that trustees' refusal to divide district was an abuse of power. Schulz v. Davis (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 624.
In suit to require county school trustees to divide a school district, where it was alleged that the tax-mill rate was sufficient to maintain both elementary schools in district without a division, allegations that maintenance tax rate was to be raised, or the fact that one elementary school had the money and the other the children, was no reason for a division. Id.

With an allegation, in suit to require trustees to divide a district, that any official action was being taken to inaugurate a system of transportation in a school district, it could not be anticipated that officials might attempt a wrongful act, where, if attempted, a division of district was not the remedy. Id.

The surplus therefrom of the taxes in part of a district would be used for benefit of the three-fourths of the children in another part thereof, would not indicate any abuse of power by board of county trustees in refusing to divide district. Id.

Consolidation.—In view of this article, contention on appeal that order of consolidation of common school districts was a nullity because not made upon petition of majority of electors of such districts will not be considered, where there was no allegation that consolidation was to establish a high school. Mathis v. Pritchard (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 622.

Apportionment.—Where apportionment of part of consolidated school district to an independent district would make it impossible for children of the affected territory to attend school during wet weather because of bad roads, the county board of trustees, in ordering such apportionment, abused its discretion. Hill County Board of School Trustees v. Bruton (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 709.

Art. 2749d. Supervisory powers of district court.

Powers of court.—Under arts. 2666, 2749c, and this article, district court held authorized to review change of boundary line between independent school districts by county board of school trustees. Hooker v. State (Civ. App.) 197 S. W. 431.

This article does not give district courts supervisory control of management or abolition of elementary schools within established districts, nor of establishment or maintenance, of rural high schools; such duties, under the law, resting on district school trustees, with successive appeals to county trustees, to state superintendent of public instruction, and to state board of education. Schulz v. Davis (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 634.

Under this article, district court held to have jurisdiction to hear and determine issues presented in petition of plaintiffs suing to enjoin consolidation of school districts for high school advantages, notwithstanding art. 2749h providing for appeals. Wilkinson v. Lyon (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 635.

Under this article, court had power to determine whether order of county board, apportioning part of consolidated district to an independent district, was for the public good, where the evidence was contradictory. Hill County Board of School Trustees v. Bruton (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 709.

District court's power to try a case to enjoin county school trustees from apportioning part of consolidated district to an independent district, and to correct any error or mistake made by the county board of trustees under this article, is absolute. Id.

Abuse of discretion.—Under this article, the district court's supervisory control of action of board of county school trustees in creating and changing school districts will be exercised to prevent or correct their action only when they have exercised that power in a harsh and arbitrary manner amounting to an abuse of discretion. Schulz v. Davis (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 634.

The matter of establishing and maintaining school districts is left largely to the discretion of the county board of education, and, unless it is clearly shown that such discretion has been abused, the courts will not interfere. Baker v. Davis (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 634.

Direct appeal from order of trustees.—Construing, so as to give effect to the provisions of all, this article, and art. 2749h with art. 4510, as to appeal to higher from lower school officers, appeal to higher school officials from refusal of school trustees to form school district from parts of other districts is a condition precedent to remedy in the district court. Jennings v. Carson (Com. App.) 220 S. W. 1050, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 184 S. W. 562.

Restraining action of trustees.—The law giving district courts general supervisory control of the action of county school trustees in creating, changing, and modifying school districts, does not authorize the issuance of an injunction against the abolition of a district and the consolidation of its territory with other districts until appeals have been taken to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction and State Board of Education under art. 4510, though the school building may be destroyed during the delay involved in such appeals. County Trustees of Navarro County v. Bell Point Common School Dist. (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 697.

Art. 2749h. Appeals.

See Wilkinson v. Lyon (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 638.

Appeals to district court.—Construing, so as to give effect to the provisions of all art. 2749d and this article, with art. 4510, as to appeal to higher from lower school officers, appeal to higher school officials from refusal of school trustees to form school district from parts of other districts is a condition precedent to remedy in the district court. Jennings v. Carson (Com. App.) 259 S. W. 1090, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 154 S. W. 562.

CHAPTER TWELVE
COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT AND OTHER OFFICERS

Art. 2750. Office established.
2758. Salary.
2760. Application of parent or guardian.
2761a. Emergency transfers.
COUNTY JUDGE EX OFFICIO COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT
2763. County judge shall be, when.
2765. Compensation.

TREASURERS OF SCHOOL FUNDS

Art. 2767. Treasurers to keep funds in depositories.
2771. Treasurer of independent districts; best bidder of interest on average daily balances; tenure; bond.
2772. Purposes for which funds may be expended.
2773. Treasurers shall make reports.

Article 2750. Office established.
In general.—The office of county superintendent of public instruction depends for its existence, under this article, on the condition of the scholastic census at each general election, no election to such office being valid in a county having a scholastic population of less than 3,000, as shown by the preceding census, except in counties where the office has been created by an election held for that purpose. Miller v. Brown (Civ. App.) 216 S. W. 452.
Since it was not the purpose of this article, to create the office of county superintendent of public instruction, nor authorize the election to the same, in counties having a scholastic population of less than 3,000 as shown by the preceding census, except in counties where such office has been created by an election held for that purpose, one elected to such office in a county having a scholastic population of less than 3,000, where such office was not created by an election held for that purpose, even if termed a de facto officer, is not entitled to the emoluments of the office for the term for which elected. Id.

Art. 2758. Salary.—The county superintendents of public instruction herein provided for shall receive from the available school fund of their respective counties annual salaries as follows: In every county that has a scholastic population of three thousand or less in which the office of county superintendent has been created or may be created after this Act shall have gone into effect, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of sixteen hundred dollars; in every county that has a scholastic population of more than three thousand or less than four thousand, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of eighteen hundred dollars; in every county that has a scholastic population of more than four thousand and less than five thousand, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of nineteen hundred dollars; in every county that has a scholastic population of more than five thousand and less than six thousand, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars; in every county that has a scholastic population of more than six thousand and less than seven thousand, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of twenty-two hundred dollars; in every county that has a scholastic population of more than seven thousand and less than eight thousand, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of twenty-four hundred dollars; in every county that has a scholastic population of more than eight thousand and less than nine thousand, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of twenty-five hundred dollars; in every county that has a scholastic population of more than nine thousand and less than ten thousand, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of twenty-six hundred dollars; in all counties that have a scholastic population of ten thousand or more, the county superintendent shall receive an annual salary of twenty-eight hundred dollars; provided, that in making the annual per capita apportionment to the schools, the county school trustees shall also make an annual allowance out of the State and county available funds for salary and expenses of the office of the county superintendent of public instruction, and the same shall be prorated to the schools coming under the supervision of the county school superintendent. The compensation herein provided for shall be paid monthly upon the order of the county school trustees; provided, that the salary for the month of September shall not be paid until the county superintendent presents a receipt from the State Superintendent of Public Instruction showing that he has made all reports required of him.

The county board of trustees may make such further provision as it deems necessary for office and traveling expenses for the county superintendent of public instruction and any assistant he may have; provided that expenditures for office and traveling expenses shall not exceed three hundred dollars, and the county board of trustees may make provision for the employment of a competent assistant for the county superintendent of public instruction, who shall, in addition to his duties, act as attendance officer; and said board are hereby authorized to fix the salary of such assistant and pay the same out of the same funds from which the salary and expenses of the county superintendent are paid. [Acts 1905, p. 263, § 40; Acts 1907, p. 210; Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 41, § 1; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 57, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment. Sec. 2 of the act repeals all laws in conflict.

Art. 2760. Application of parent or guardian.

Transfer of funds.—A county superintendent of schools is authorized, if not required, by law to effect transfer of fund arising from transfer of school children from common schools to independent school district, and can draw checks and orders for purpose of doing so. Carrell v. State, 84 Cr. R. 554, 209 S. W. 153.

Art. 2761a. Emergency transfers.—In the case of conditions resulting from public calamity in any section of the State such as serious floods, prolonged drought, or extraordinarily border disturbances, resulting after the scholastic census has been taken, in such sudden changes of the scholastic population of any county as would work a hardship in the support of the public free schools of the said county, the State apportionment of any child of school age may, on the approval of the State Board of Education, be ordered by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to be transferred to any other county or independent school district in any other county of the State; provided that the facts warranting such transfer shall be sent to the State Superintendent by the county or district board of trustees of schools to which transfer is to be made with a formal request for the transfer before the first of August of the year in which such unusual conditions occur. The State Superintendent shall in such case notify the County Superintendent of the county to which the funds are to be transferred and the County Superintendent of the county from which the funds are to be transferred that final apportionments of school funds cannot be made under these circumstances before August 15th. All arrangements for said emergency transfers must be completed by the fifteenth of August following the unusual conditions causing the emergency. Children whose state funds are thus transferred to any county shall be included in the number of children for whom the county school apportionment of the said county is made. Any county Judge serving as ex officio county superintendent, county superintendent, district, city or town superintendent or other school officer who refuses to comply with the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall on conviction, be fined in any sum not less than $50.00 nor more than $500.00, or shall be confined in the county jail for not more than sixty days, or shall be punished by both such fine and imprisonment. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 36, adding § 91b to Acts 30th Leg., ch. 150.]

Took effect July 26, 1919.

COUNTY JUDGE EX OFFICIO COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT

Art. 2763. County judge shall be, when.

Art. 2765. Compensation.—In a county where the county judge acts as superintendent of public instruction, he shall receive for his services as superintendent such salary as may be provided by the commissioners court, not to exceed the sum of nine hundred dollars per annum. [Acts 1905, p. 263, § 44; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 57, § 2.]

Took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment. Sec. 3 of the act repeals all laws in conflict.

In general.—The fact that the county judge, elected November, 1910, served during his entire first term till 1912 without an order fixing his salary as ex officio superintendent of public schools, and for more than a year on his second term after re-election in November, 1912, without such an order, during all of which time he drew $87.50 per quarter for such service, and that the facts that the accounts were approved by the commissioners' court, amounted to an agreement between him and the court that the ex officio salary of $87.50 per quarter as fixed for his predecessor applied to him until changed, since otherwise he drew $700 illegally during his first term with the knowledge and consent of the commissioners' court. Dalton v. Allen (Civ. App.) 218 S. W. 73.

TREASURERS OF SCHOOL FUNDS

Art. 2767. Funds must be kept in depositories.

Suit for school taxes.—A county has no authority to receive or sue tax collector for taxes collected for either independent or common school districts and not accounted for, under this article, and acts. 2822, 2836, 2861, 2862; such taxes being payable to district treasurers which districts are the ones to sue. Watson v. El Paso County (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 126.

Art. 2771. Treasurer of independent district; best bidder of interest on average daily balances; tenure; bond.

Selecting depository.—The board of trustees of an independent school district has a discretionary power in selecting the depository, under this article, and in view of arts. 2850-2852, vesting the trustees with power and discretion in selecting depository. Donna Independent School Dist. v. First State Bank of Donna (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 274.

Though school officers selected as depository a bank offering a lower rate of interest than that offered by a bank which had previously acted as depository, but which had not accounted for funds, as required by art. 2773, and had not tendered bond as required by this article, the selection cannot be deemed an abuse of discretion. Id.

Art. 2772. Purposes for which funds may be expended.—The public free school funds shall hereafter not be expended except for the following purposes:

(a) The State and county available funds shall be used exclusively for the payment of teachers' and superintendents' salaries, fees for taking the scholastic census, and interest on money borrowed on short time to pay salaries of teachers and superintendents, when these salaries become due before the school funds for the current year become available; provided that no loans for the purpose of payment of teachers shall be paid out of funds other than those for the then current year.
(b) Local school funds from district taxes, tuition fees of pupils not entitled to free tuition and other local sources may be used for the purposes enumerated for State and county funds and for purchasing appliances and supplies, for the payment of insurance premiums, janitors and other employees, for buying school sites, buying, building and repairing and renting school houses, and for other purposes necessary in the conduct of the public schools to be determined by the Board of Trustees, the accounts and vouchers for county districts and communities, to be approved by the County Superintendent; provided, that when the State available school fund in any city or district is sufficient to maintain the schools thereof in any year for at least eight months, and leave a surplus, such surplus may be expended for the purposes mentioned herein. [Acts 1905, p. 263, sec. 83; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 122, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Diversion of funds.—Rev. St. 1895, art. 4041, validating title to minerals in purchasers of public lands, when treated as a validating act, is not in violation of Const. art. 7, § 4, as to Legislature not having power to grant relief to purchasers of school lands, or section 5, forbidding appropriation of school funds to a foreign purpose. Greene v. Robison, 109 Tex. 367, 219 S. W. 498.

Art. 2773. Treasurers shall make reports.—Each treasurer receiving or having control of any school fund of an independent school district shall keep a full and separate itemized account with each of the different classes of school funds coming into his hands, and shall on or before the first day of October of each year, file with the Board of Trustees of such independent school district and with the State superintendent of Public Instruction an itemized report of the receipts and disbursements of the school funds for the preceding school year ending August 31st, which report shall be on a form prescribed and furnished by the Department of Education. The Board of Trustees shall notify the Superintendent of Public Instruction of their approval of said report within thirty days after receipt of same, should same be approved, and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction shall notify the Board of Trustees of objections or of recommendations concerning same should he desire to make any. All vouchers showing items of the report shall be filed with the Board of Trustees and the Superintendent of Public Instruction may demand same when passing on said report or for the purpose of investigating same. [Acts 1905, p. 263, sec. 49; Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 149, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Failure to make report.—Under this article, and Pen. Code Supp. 1915, art. 1513h, relating to reports required of depositories of school funds, etc., an information, charging defendant, a cashier of a bank which was a depository, with failure to make a report, not alleging that defendant occupied any position mentioned in the statute, stated no offense. Ex parte Ballard, 87 Cr. R. 460, 223 S. W. 222.

Though school officers selected as depository a bank offering a lower rate of interest than that offered by a bank which had previously acted as depository, but which had not accounted for funds, as required by this article, and had not tendered bond as required by art. 2771, the selection cannot be deemed an abuse of discretion. Donna Independent School Dist. v. First State Bank of Donna (Civ. App.) 227 S. W. 974.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN A

COMPULSORY EDUCATION

Art. 2779b. Exemptions.

2779b. Exemptions. The following classes of children are exempt from the requirements of this Act:
(a) Any child in attendance upon a private or parochial school or who is being properly instructed by a private tutor.
(b) Any child whose bodily or mental condition is such as to render attendance inadvisable, and who holds definite certificate of a reputable physician specifying this condition and covering the period of absence.
(c) Any child who is feeble-minded, for the instruction of whom no adequate provision has been made by the school district.
(d) Any child living more than two and one-half miles by direct and traveled road from the nearest public school supported for children of the same race and color of such child, and with no free transportation provided.
(e) Any child more than twelve years of age who has satisfactorily completed the work of the fourth grade of a standard elementary school of seven grades, and whose services are needed in support of a parent or other person standing in parental relation to the child, may, on presentation, of proper evidence to the County Superintendent of Public Instruction, be exempted from further attendance at school. [Acts 1915, 34th Leg., ch. 49, § 2; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 125, § 1.]

An ordinance, denying school children the right to attend school unless vaccinated for smallpox, was not inconsistent with the law for compulsory education exempting from its requirement "any child whose bodily condition is such as to render attendance inadvisable." City of New Braunfels v. Waldschmidt, 109 Tex. 302, 207 S. W. 303.

Art. 2779bb. Instructions to census trustees; reports and rolls.

It shall be the duty of the County Superintendent to issue instructions to the school census trustees to make adequate entry upon the rolls and summaries of the various trustees which are now required by law to be filed with the county superintendent in his office, of each and every child within the scholastic age which is either deaf or blind. Upon receipt of said census reports and rolls the county superintendent shall immediately compile a complete list of names, ages, and information contained on the census report of each child deaf or blind, certify thereto and forward same to the respective officers, the deaf to the Superintendent of the Texas Deaf and Dumb School, the blind to the Superintendent of the School for the Blind. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 125, § 2.]

Art. 2779bbb. Admission of deaf, dumb, and blind children to institutions; inadequacy certificate; children included within compulsory law.-The certificate made above shall constitute an application to the institution to which it is directed for the maintenance, care and education of all such children, and it shall be the duty of the Superintendent of the Deaf and Dumb and the School for the Blind respectively to permit the entrance, provide for the maintenance, care and education of said applicants under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by him in so far as the facilities now or hereafter be provided are adequate in such institutions.

In the event that all of said applicants or any part thereof cannot be received it shall be the duty of the superintendents of the respective institutions to issue and mail to the parents of all children for whom there is no adequate facilities, a certificate to be known as an Inadequate Instructional Facilities Exemption. This exemption shall contain thereon the fact of the application and that there is now no means by which the State may maintain, care for and instruct the person to whom said certificate is given, and such other information as may be prescribed by the Superintendents of the Deaf and Dumb School and the School for the Blind.

All deaf children between the ages of seven and twenty-one years of age inclusive, and all blind and partially blind children between the ages of six and fourteen years of age inclusive, whose vision is not sufficient to enable them to attend the public schools shall be subject to all the provisions of the law with reference to the compulsory school attendance, provided, however, that such children as hold a certificate of exemption as above described shall be exempted from such laws and shall not be subject to any of the penalties now provided for failing to attend school. [Id., § 3.] out of the public free school fund; a teacher holding a first grade certificate shall not receive as wages from the public free school fund more than one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month, and a teacher holding a second grade certificate shall not receive as wages from the public free school fund more than one hundred dollars per month; provided that the salary limits herein specified shall not apply to any school district which levies and collects a local tax for school purposes, and provided further that all contracts herefore made with teachers and which are not in conflict with this Act are hereby validated. [Acts 1905, p. 262, § 73; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 27, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 108, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Art. 2781a. Salaries of women teachers.—All women teaching in the State Schools of the State of Texas shall be paid the same compensations as are paid to men for performing the same kind, grade and quantity of service, and that all women performing public service for the State of Texas shall be paid the same compensation for their service as is paid to men performing the same kind, grade and quantity of service, and that there shall be no distinction in compensation on account of sex. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., ch. 89, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 19, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 2785a. Operation of certificate law.—That provisions of the certificate law in force January 1, 1921, relating to certification through examinations, shall continue in force until September 1, 1923: and provisions of the said law, relating to building on a certificate of lower grade secured before September 1, 1923, to a certificate of higher grade, shall continue in force until September 1, 1925, after which date certificates shall be granted only in accordance with the provisions of this new Act.

Certification of teachers in accordance with the provisions of this Act shall be in force from the time that this Act takes effect and applicants shall exercise a choice as to the law under which they may secure a certificate, until September 1, 1923. After this date they may complete building already begun. Those who have not begun building under the old law by this date, must receive certification under the terms of this Act. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 129, § 1.]

Explanatory.—Sections 2 to 7, inclusive, of the above act, are set forth, post, as arts. 2787, 2797a, 2799a, 2804bbb, 2806b, 2811. The act took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Art. 2785b. Repeal.—That all laws or parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed; provided that, nothing in this Act shall be construed as invalidating or in any way affecting any certificates issued prior to September 1, 1925, or affecting or limiting the rights and privileges of the holders thereof. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 2786. County board of examiners; appointment, etc.; county superintendent to forward examination papers, etc.; fees; issuance of second-grade certificates; examinations; duties of state superintendent. —There shall be in each organized county in this State a county board of examiners composed of two persons to be appointed by the county superintendent or the ex-officio county superintendent. A person to be eligible to appointment on the county board of examiners must be the holder of a teacher's first grade State certificate or a State certificate of higher grade. The members of the county board of examiners shall serve during the pleasure of the county superintendent, and shall meet at the call of the county superintendent. The State Superintendent may, for cause approved by the State Board of Education, require the county superintendent to dismiss appointees from the county board of examiners. In such cases the vacancy must be filled by an appointee approved by the State Board of Education. The county superintendent shall promptly forward to the State Superintendent to be submitted to the State Board of Examiners, the examination papers of applicants for certificates, together with the reports of the county board of examiners on a prescribed form furnished by the State Department of Education, with a fee paid to him by each of the applicants.

The passage of this law shall not be construed to prohibit the county board of examiners from issuing county second grade certificates provided the examination shall meet the requirements for second grade certificates. After August 31, 1920, no county certificate shall be granted for a term longer than one year. A county certificate may be extended one year, provided the applicant produces evidence of having taken eight weeks professional training at a State Normal College or at any school recognized by the State Department of Education as a first class university or junior college. Such applicant must have made a passing grade on at least three of the subjects studied.

The State Board of Examiners shall, at their next meeting after the receipt of said papers and reports, together with the fees, examine the papers and shall make a report to the State Superintendent recommending that certificates be issued or be not issued, according to the grades made.

The county board of examiners of each county shall hold an examination, if there be applicants, on the first Friday and Saturday following in the months of April, June, July, September and December of each year, and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction may authorize such other examinations as may be necessary to secure an adequate force of certified teachers. Said board of examiners shall use the questions prescribed by the State Department of Education and shall conduct the examination in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by the State Department of Education and the county superintendent of public instruction.

To each applicant who has made the required grades the State Superintendent shall forward the report, together with the certificate recommended by the State Board of Examiners; and to each applicant who has failed to make the required grades, the State Superintendent shall forward the report of the State Board of Examiners without a certificate. [Acts 1911, p. 189, §1; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 61, §1 (§122).]

Art. 2787. Applicant for certificate; examinations in writing and English language.—Any person desiring to be examined for a teacher’s certificate authorizing him or her to contract to teach in the public free schools of Texas, shall make application to the County Superintendent, stating the class of certificate desired, and shall present to the County Superintendent a statement of three good and well known citizens, or such proof as he may require of his qualifications, except the examination grades required for the class of certificate desired. After investigation, the County Superintendent shall give the applicant a written recommendation to the county board of examiners requiring them to examine the applicant for a certificate of the class mentioned; but no person shall receive such recommendation without first depositing with the County Superintendent the sum of four dollars as an examination fee, and the recommendation given by the County Superintendent shall show the recept of said fee. The county board of examiners shall not permit any person to enter the examination who does not first present the written recommendation of the County Superintendent; provided, that all examinations provided for herein and elsewhere in the Texas School Laws shall be conducted in writing and in the English language. The County Superintendent shall forward promptly to the State Superintendent, all papers of applicants applying for State certificates, these to be submitted to the State Board of Examiners, together with the reports of the county board of examiners, on a prescribed form, furnished by the State Department of Education, with a fee of two dollars from the fee paid to him by each of the applicants applying for State certificates; provided that, until shipment of papers to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, papers of applicants for a State certificate shall be deposited in some safe or vault at the county court house. [Acts 1911, p. 189; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 61, § 1 (§ 109).]

Art. 2804. Building to higher grade certificates.—A person holding a second grade certificate may build to a first grade certificate or to a permanent primary certificate during the validity of the said second grade certificate by taking the examination in the additional subjects and making the required grades, said person having the privilege of being examined in one or more subjects at any one examination in building on his second grade certificate. A permanent record of his examination shall be made in the State Department of Education, and upon the surrender of the lower class certificate the higher class certificate shall be issued.

The holder of a first grade certificate may build to a State permanent primary certificate or to a State permanent certificate during the validity of the said first grade certificate by taking the examination in the additional subjects, said person having the privilege of being ex-
The holder of a State permanent primary certificate may build to a State permanent certificate during the first six years of the validity of said State permanent primary certificate by taking the examination in the additional subjects, and making the required grades, said person shall have the privilege of being examined in one or more of the subjects at any one examination in building on his State permanent primary certificate. A permanent record of his examination shall be made in the State Department of Education, and upon the surrender of the lower class certificate the higher class certificate shall be issued. [Acts 1911, p. 189; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 61, § 1 (§ 110).]

Art. 2804a. Certificate holders eligible to teach in what grades, etc. —The holder of a second grade certificate or of a permanent primary certificate shall be eligible to contract to teach only the elementary grades of the public schools of Texas; that is, in the grades one to seven, inclusive. The holder of a State first grade certificate, or a State permanent certificate shall be eligible to contract to teach in any public free school of Texas. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 61, § 1, adding § 110a.]

Art. 2804b. Duration of permanent certificates.—A State permanent primary certificate or a State permanent first grade certificate, or a State permanent certificate shall be valid during the life of the holder, unless canceled by lawful authority. [Id., § 1, adding § 110b.]

Art. 2804bb. Collegiate credits substitute for examinations; double counts.—An Applicant for examination for any certificate, may present, in lieu of an examination on any subject required for that certificate, one year's credit in that subject taken in any university, normal college, or junior college, which is classed by the State Department of Education as a university or junior college of the first class. In this event, the applicant must present an official statement of the grade on this subject given him by the said university or college, which grade shall be counted, for his average; among the grades obtained by examination. A course which has once been counted toward a State certificate, shall not again be counted for a State certificate. [Id., § 1, adding § 110c.]

Art. 2804bbb. Experience in teaching as basis for issuance of certificate or extension.—A person who for fifteen consecutive years or more, has been the holder of a State first grade certificate, and who can furnish evidence of successful experience in teaching for fifteen or more consecutive sessions of school shall be entitled to receive a State permanent first grade certificate.

Provided further, that a teacher who has taught successfully for five years on a first grade State certificate, if this certificate has expired may, on recommendation of the county school board and the county superintendent, have this first grade State certificate extended for a period of one year; provided that no extension of certificates under the provisions of this Act shall apply after the session of 1921-1922. [Id., § 1, adding § 110d.]

Art. 2804bbbb. Building on elementary certificate; examinations.—The holder of an elementary certificate of the second class may during the validity of said certificate build to a high school certificate of the second class by taking examination in the additional subjects required for a high school certificate of the second class and in any four of the optional subjects prescribed for a high school certificate of the second class.

An applicant who, at one series of examinations, takes examinations on all of the subjects required for a high school certificate of the second class, shall not be permitted to take examination, at any one series of examinations, on more than twenty subjects, fourteen required and six optional, as specified in the requirements, respectively, for the issuance of elementary and a high school certificate of the second class. An applicant who takes at one series of examinations all of the examinations necessary to raise an elementary certificate of the second class to a high school certificate of the second class, shall not be permitted to take examinations, during any one series of examinations on more than seven subjects, three prescribed, and four optional.  [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 129, § 4, adding § 110e.]

Art. 2804c. Extension of certificates of persons serving in army.—All teachers' certificates held by persons who are enlisted or may hereafter be enlisted in the United States army service during the war with Germany or any other foreign foe shall, upon honorable discharge be extended by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, upon proper application, for a period equal to that in which the applicant was engaged in the army service.  [Acts 1918, 35th Leg. 4th C. S., ch. 65, § 1.] Took effect 90 days after March 27, 1918, date of adjournment.

Art. 2805. [Repealed.]

Explanatory.—Acts 1921, 37th Leg. ch. 129. § 5, repeals sections 114, 116, 117, and 119 of ch. 96, Acts 32d Leg., as amended by Acts 3d Called Session, 36th Leg., ch. 61, and enacts as a substitute therefore the provision set forth below as art. 2805b.

Art. 2805a. Summer normal institutes; certificates, etc.

In general.—Where plaintiff, who held a first grade teachers' certificate and had taught for 10 years, was designated as one of the faculty for a summer normal institute for colored teachers, the holding of which was authorized by the state superintendent of public schools, plaintiff was qualified to be a member of the faculty within this article and, where no reason appeared to the contrary, he was entitled to his pro rata of the tuition collected. Williamson v. Carr (Civ. App.) 219 S. W. 1116.

Art. 2805b. Certificates to persons completing normal school, university or college courses; high school certificates; value of certificates; terms defined; duration of certificates; classification of institutions of learning.—An applicant who completes the first year course of a Texas State normal school shall be entitled to receive an elementary certificate of the first class, which shall be valid unless cancelled by lawful authority until the second anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the calendar year in which the certificate was issued.

An applicant who completes the second-year course of a Texas State normal school shall be entitled to receive an elementary certificate of the first class, which shall be valid, unless cancelled by lawful authority, until the third anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the calendar year in which the certificate was issued.

A person who has satisfactorily completed five full courses in any Texas State Normal College, or in any university, senior college, junior college, or normal college which are ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be entitled to receive from the State Department of Education an elementary certificate of the first class, which shall be valid unless cancelled by lawful authority, until the fourth anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the calendar year in which the certificate was issued; provided that the five courses shall include at least one course in education dealing especially with elementary education, at least one course in English, and that not more than two courses may be taken in one subject; and provided further that all of these five courses must be those only which the college recognizes as credit towards its diploma or degree.

An applicant who has satisfactorily completed the second year of college work in a Texas State Normal College, and who has specialized in the materials of elementary education, including a minimum of thirty-six recitation hours of practice teaching in the elementary grades, under the supervision of a critic teacher, shall be entitled to receive a permanent elementary certificate.

An applicant who has satisfactorily completed the second year's work of a university, or senior or junior college, other than a Texas State Normal College, which is classified as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, in which work shall be included two courses of professional training, shall be entitled to receive an elementary certificate of the first class, valid until the sixth anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the calendar year in which the certificate was issued; provided that the holder of this certificate shall, upon completion of five years of successful elementary teaching, be granted a permanent elementary certificate; provided further that the satisfactory completion of any year's work at any Texas State Normal College, or any university, senior college, junior college, or normal college, which are ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, may be substituted for a year's successful teaching, if this attendance at college take place after the issuance of the certificate.

A high school certificate of the first class, valid until the second anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the scholastic year in which the certificate is issued, shall be granted to a student who has satisfactorily completed five full courses in any Texas State Normal College, or in any university, senior college, junior college or normal college, which is ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction; provided that the five courses shall include at least one course in education, and at least one course in English, and that not more than two courses may be taken in any one subject; and provided further that all these five courses must be those only which the college recognizes as credit towards its diploma or degree.

A high school certificate of the first class, valid until the fourth anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the scholastic year in which the certificate is issued, shall be issued to a student who completes two years of college work in any Texas State Normal College, or in any University, senior college, junior college, or normal college, which is ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, provided that this work shall include two courses in education, one of which shall bear upon training for high school teaching.

A high school certificate of the first class, valid until the sixth anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the scholastic year in which the certificate is issued shall be granted to a student who completes three years of college work in a Texas State Normal College or in any university, senior college, or normal college, which is ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, provided that this work shall include three courses in education, one course of which must include a minimum of thirty-six recitation hours of practice teaching and one course of which shall bear upon training for high school teaching.

A permanent high school certificate shall be granted to a student who has satisfactorily completed a four year course, leading to a degree, in a Texas State Normal College or in any university, senior college, or normal college, classified as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, provided that this work shall include four courses in education, one of which shall bear upon high school teaching and one of which shall consist of study of methods, observation of methods, and practice in teaching, one of which shall bear upon high school teaching.

Any person who holds a diploma conferring upon him the degree of Bachelor of Arts, or any equivalent Bachelor's degree, or any higher academic degree, from any Texas State Normal College, or any University, senior college, or normal college, which is ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, who has not had four full courses in education, but who furnishes satisfactory evidence of having completed two full courses in education, one of which shall bear upon high school teaching, and of having had not less than three years' successful experience in teaching, aggregating not less than twenty-seven months, subsequent to the taking of the degree, shall be entitled to receive from the State Department of Education, a permanent high school certificate, which shall be valid anywhere in the State, unless cancelled by lawful authority; provided that a person on receiving such a diploma and degree from any Texas State Normal College, or any university, senior college, or normal college, which is ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, who has taken two full courses in education, one of which shall bear upon high school teaching, and who has not had three years' successful experience in teaching, may be granted a temporary high school certificate, valid until the fourth anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the scholastic year in which the diploma is issued.

An elementary certificate of the second class shall be valid in elementary schools, grades one to seven, inclusive.

A high school certificate of the second class shall be valid in elementary schools, grades one to seven, inclusive, and in third class high schools, and unclassified high schools, but not in first and second class accredited high schools.

An elementary certificate of the second class shall be valid only in elementary schools, grades one to seven, inclusive; provided that, the holder of an elementary certificate based upon the completion of two years of college work in a Texas State Normal College, or in any university, senior college, junior college, or normal college, ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, may contract to teach in unclassified high schools, and in high schools of the third class.

A high school certificate of the second class shall be valid in elementary schools, grades, one to seven, inclusive, and in third class high schools, and unclassified high schools, but not in first and second class accredited high schools.

A two-year high school certificate of the first class shall be valid in the elementary grades, one to seven, inclusive, in third class high schools, and unclassified high schools, but not in accredited high schools of the first and second class.

A high school certificate of the first class, valid for four years or six years, shall entitle the holder to contract to teach in any elementary grade or in any high school.
The term course as relating to college work, wherever it occurs in this Act is to be taken as designating not less than the equivalent of 108 recitation hours of work.

The term scholastic year is herein specified as meaning from the first day of September to the thirty-first day of the following August.

In all cases of elementary, high school, or special certificates, granted on college work, the validity of the certificate shall begin with the date of the completion of the work on which the certificate is granted, and shall expire on the thirty-first day of August of the scholastic year, for the specified length of time for which the certificate was issued.

The State Board of Examiners shall on application of institutions to be recognized as colleges or universities of the first class, make investigations as to the courses of study and the standards of such institutions, and shall make recommendations to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, who shall give them such rating as the standards of their work may justify. Any school applying for approval under the provisions of this Act shall pay a fee of twenty-five dollars, and each applicant for teacher's certificate on college credentials shall pay a fee of one dollar to cover the expenses of inspection and standardization of approved colleges.

It shall be the duty of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to appoint a suitable person or persons of recognized college standing, who shall make a thorough inspection of the equipment and standards of instruction maintained in each school applying for approval under this Act, and who shall make a report to the State Board of Examiners for their consideration. The State Board of Examiners shall make recommendation to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction in regard to the classification of schools applying for approval under the provisions of this Act, and shall give to them such rating as the standards of their work may justify.

The State Superintendent shall have each school receiving the benefits of this Act thoroughly inspected from year to year as to its standards and facilities of instruction, and he shall have authority to suspend any school from the benefits of this Act which fails for any reason to maintain the approved standards of classification. [Acts 1911, p. 189, § 1 (§§ 114, 116, 117, 119); Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 61, § 1; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 129, § 5.]

Explanatory.—Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 129, § 5, repeals sections 114, 116, 117, 119, of Acts 1911, ch. 96, as amended by Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 61, § 1, and as a substitute therefor enacts the provision as above set forth. The act took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.

Arts. 2806-2808. [Repealed.]

Explanatory.—Repealed by Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 129, § 5, and the provisions of such articles re-enacted in a single section set forth, ante, as art. 2809.

Art. 2809. Certificates based on diplomas or certificates from other states.—The holders of diplomas or certificates from other States, who desire certificates valid in Texas, shall present such diplomas or certificates to the State Superintendent, who shall require the State Board of Examiners to make investigations as to the value of such diplomas or certificates as measured by the standards for certificates in this State; and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction shall have the power to issue to the holder of a diploma or certificate from another State such Texas certificate as, in his judgment, the holder is entitled to receive, when the value of his diploma or certificate is estimated by the standards required for Texas certificates; provided that
Art. 2810. City certificates.—A city or a town which has a scholastic population of one thousand or more and has become an independent school district and which levies a local tax for educational purposes or which maintains a system of free schools for nine months in each year, and which has employed a superintendent of city schools may have a city Board of Examiners. Said Board of Examiners shall in all cases consist of the City Superintendent, of the City Schools; together with two other persons who shall be appointed by him, and who shall be teachers. The City Board of Examiners is hereby authorized to issue certificates valid only in the city in which they are issued. Such certificates shall be temporary.

Temporary city certificates shall be of three classes, as follows: Second Grade, First Grade, and High School. A temporary city certificate shall be good for two years, unless cancelled by lawful authority, and a Second City certificate shall not be issued to any person. The further regulation of the issuance of such certificates shall be provided for by the board of trustees of such cities or towns; provided, that no city or town shall make the requirements for a temporary certificates inferior to the requirements provided by law for county or State certificates of the corresponding grades. Nothing in this chapter shall interfere with the validity of outstanding certificates in such cities or towns. Cities and towns authorized by the provisions of this chapter to have a City Board of Examiners may at the discretion of the Superintendent of City Schools, employ a teacher of any special branch not included in the requirements of a state certificate without requiring an examination or a teacher’s certificate; and nothing in this chapter shall prevent the Board of Trustees of any city or town from recognizing the certificate issued in any other such city or town in this State and validating the same in the city or town so recognizing.

A superintendent of schools in any city or town of this State shall be required to be the holder of a State First Grade or State permanent certificate, and no school board may legally contract with any superintendent who is not the holder of a State first grade or State permanent certificate, provided, however, this certificate requirement shall not apply to a Superintendent who has held a position as city or town superintendent for a period of ten consecutive years in the school in which he or she is employed. [Acts 1911, p. 189; Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 61, § 1 (§ 120).]

Art. 2811. Special certificates.—Special certificates may be issued authorizing the holders to teach in a kindergarten or to teach the special subjects specified in this Section of this Act.

A person who has satisfactorily met the college entrance requirements of any Texas State Normal College or any university or senior college, junior college, or normal college, ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction and who has satisfactorily completed one years training in a kindergarten training school for teachers which has been classified by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction as a kindergarten training school of the first class, shall be entitled to receive a kindergarten certificate valid for two years, and the holder thereof on completing the equivalent of three courses of additional work at a kindergarten training school classified as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, shall be entitled to have this certificate extended for one year.

A person who has satisfactorily met the college entrance requirements of any Texas State Normal College or any university, or senior college, junior college, or normal college ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction and who has satisfactorily completed a two-year college course in kindergarten training school for teachers, classified by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction as a kindergarten training school of the first class, shall be entitled to receive a kindergarten certificate valid for four years. The holder of such certificate, after three years of satisfactory experience in teaching in a kindergarten, shall be entitled to receive a permanent kindergarten certificate; provided that it shall be illegal for a person to teach in a public school kindergarten, unless he or she is the holder of a kindergarten certificate.

Certificates authorizing the holders to teach the special subjects of agriculture domestic art, domestic science, commercial subjects, public school drawing, expression, manual training, physical training, public school music, vocal music, instrumental music, industrial training, or foreign languages may be granted to applicants as follows:

An applicant who has met the college entrance requirements of any Texas State Normal College, or any university or senior college, junior college, or normal college, which is ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and, in addition thereto, has satisfactorily completed ten college courses, at least one of which shall be in English, at least one of which shall be in education, and at least one of which shall be in the special subject on which the certificate is issued, these courses to be taken in any Texas State Normal College, or any university, or senior college, junior college, or normal college, which is ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, shall be entitled to receive a special certificate authorizing him to make contract to teach his special subject, which special certificate shall be valid until the third anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the scholastic year in which the certificate was issued; provided that one of these courses must include special methods of teaching the subject on which the certificate is granted.

An applicant who has met the college entrance requirements of any Texas State Normal College, or any university, senior college, or normal college, which is ranked as first class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and in addition thereto has satisfactorily completed fifteen college courses, at least one of which shall be in English, at least one of which shall be in education, and at least three of which shall be in the subject on which the certificate is granted, these courses to be taken in any Texas State Normal College, or any university, or senior college, or normal college, ranked as first-class by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, shall be entitled to receive a certificate entitling him to contract to teach his special subject, which certificate shall be valid until the fourth anniversary of the thirty-first day of August of the scholastic year in which the certificate is granted.

It is especially herein provided that the holder of a special kindergarten certificate, or a special certificate in commercial subjects, public school music, public school drawing, or physical training, on the completion of three years of teaching the special subject during the validity of his certificate or certificates, shall be entitled to receive a permanent special certificate in his subject, valid for use in the public schools, unless cancelled by lawful authority.

An applicant who has met the college entrance requirements of any Texas State Normal College or any university or senior college, or normal college, ranked as first class by the State Department of Education, and in addition thereto, has completed twenty college courses, at least one of which shall be in English, at least one of which shall be in education, and at least four of which shall be in his special subject, these courses to be taken in any Texas State Normal College, senior college, or normal college, ranked by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction as a college of the first class, shall be entitled to receive a permanent certificate in his special subject, valid for life unless cancelled by lawful authority; provided that the college courses shall include special methods of teaching the subject on which the certificate is issued.

After September 1, 1925, teachers who devote the major portion of their time to teaching or supervising special subjects, shall be required to hold a high school certificate or a special certificate, as provided for in this Act, on the special subject in which they give instruction or supervise work.

For the scholastic year of 1920–21, Texas universities and colleges shall have the right, if preferred, to continue their former laws granting privileges on which they have made pledges to their students, to fulfill the pledges authorized by these former laws. [Acts 1911, p. 189: Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 129, § 6 (121)].

Explanatory.—Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 129, § 6, repeals section 121, ch. 96, Acts 32d Leg., and enacts as a substitute therefor the provision as above set forth. The new act took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment. See art. 2785a.

Art. 2814a. Outstanding certificates not affected; power of cities.

—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to impair the validity of outstanding city, county, or State certificates, cities and towns may, at the discretion of the superintendent, employ a teacher of any special branch not included in the requirement for a State certificate, without requiring a teacher’s certificate. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 61, § 3.]

The act took effect 90 days after June 18, 1920, date of adjournment. Sec. 4 of the act repeals all laws in conflict.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN
COMMON SCHOOL DISTRICTS

Art.
2815. Establishment of districts.
2815a. Common county line districts.
2815b. Rights, powers and privileges of common county line districts: management; taxes; bonds, etc.
2815c. Land taken into city or town constituting independent school district shall constitute part of city districts; adjustment of bonded indebtedness, etc.
2815d. Town or village incorporated for free school purposes only liable for proportion of bonded indebtedness of part of common school district within its limits.
2816. Commissioners’ court may change district lines.

CONSOLIDATION OF DISTRICTS FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES

2817c. Same.
2817d. Bond elections validated.
2817e. Act cumulative.

CONSORTIUM OF DISTRICTS FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES

2817h. Petition to county judge: order for election; canvass of returns; declaration of consolidation; consolidation of common school districts with independent districts; procedure; district defined.
Art. 2815. Establishment of districts.

Legislative control.—Under Const. art. 7, § 3, as to school districts, the Legislature can exercise the same authority over a school district through a special law, without notice, as through a general law. Powell v. Charco Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1178.

Application.—A school district created prior to 1905 was not required to contain nine square miles, and, its area never having been reduced, this article has no application. Mayhew v. Commissioners' Court of Coryell County (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 943.

Change of lines.—The boundaries of a school district may not be changed, so as to reduce the taxable value of the property included in it after the district has issued bonds which are outstanding obligations, under this article, by appeal to the injunctive power of the court, since the court cannot do indirectly what cannot be done directly by the commissioners' court. Harbin Independent School Dist. v. Denman (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 538, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 176.

Art. 2815a. Common county line districts.

Venue of suit against district.—Suit to oust defendants, trustees of a county line school district under control of C. county, in which defendants resided, from exercising or asserting any corporate right, franchise, privilege, or jurisdiction over that portion of the school district taken from a district in G. county, was an attack upon the corporate existence of the district, and the district, through its trustees, had the privilege of being sued in C. county, the situs of the district fixed by this article, and art. 2815b. State v. Waller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 222.

This article contemplated that the domicile of a school corporation shall be in the county which is given control and management of the public schools in the county line districts. 1d.

Art. 2815b. Rights, powers and privileges of common county line districts; management; taxes; bonds, etc.

See State v. Waller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 322.

Art. 2815c. Land taken into city or town constituting independent school district to constitute part of city district; adjustment of bonded indebtedness, etc.—Whenever the limits of any incorporated city or town within this State, which city or town constitutes an independent school district shall be so extended or enlarged, or shall have been so extended or enlarged, as to embrace within the limits of such incorporated city or town the whole or any part of any independent or common school district adjacent to such incorporated city or town, that portion of such adjacent independent or common school district so embraced within the corporate limits of such incorporated city or town, shall thereafter become a part and portion of the independent school district constituted by such incorporated city or town.

Provided, however, that if such independent or common school district so brought, in whole or in part, within the limits of such incorporated city or town, shall have an outstanding bonded indebtedness, then such incorporated city or town shall become bound and liable for the payment of such proportion of the bonded indebtedness of such independent or common school district as the assessed value of the portion of such independent or common school district so brought within the incorporated limits of such city or town, shall bear to the whole assessed value, of such independent or common school districts so encroached upon, as such assessed values are shown upon the last preceding county tax assessment rolls; and thereafter, such incorporated city or town shall pay either directly or through the officer of such independent or common school district, the proportion of the interest and principal of such bonded indebtedness for which they so become liable.

If within the portion of such independent or common school district so brought within the limits of an incorporated city or town there should be situated any real property belonging to such independent or common school district, such city or town may acquire the same upon such terms as may be mutually agreed upon between the city council of such city and the authorities of such independent or common school district.

Provided, further, however, that none of the provisions of this article shall be applicable where it shall be determined at an election held within such incorporated city or town by majority vote of those voting thereon that the territory or any portion thereof to be taken into the limits of such incorporated city or town shall not thereby become a part and portion of the independent school district constituted by such incorporated city or town, but shall be taken into the city limits for municipal purposes only, and shall remain for school purposes, a portion of the adjacent independent or common school district as though said city limits had not been extended. [Acts 1917, 35th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 28, § 1; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 44, § 1.]

Took effect July 25, 1919.

Art. 2815d. Town or village incorporated for free school purposes only liable for proportion of bonded indebtedness of part of common school district within limits.—In all cases where any town or village has heretofore been incorporated or may hereafter be incorporated for free school purpose only and which shall include within the limits thereof any portion or portions of any common school district which has an outstanding bonded indebtedness, then such town or village, incorporated for school purposes only, shall become bound and liable for the payment of such proportion of the bonded indebtedness of the common school district as the assessed value of the portion of such common school district included within the limits of the district so incorporated for free school purposes only, shall bear to the entire assessed value of the common school district from which the same was taken, as such assessed values are shown upon the last preceding county tax assessment roll; and thereafter such incorporated town or village shall pay either directly or through the officers of such common school district, the proportion of the interest and principal of such bonded indebtedness for which it is

EDUCATION—PUBLIC

[Acts 1917, 35th Leg. 1st C. S., ch. 28, § 1a; Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 44, § 1a.]

Took effect July 19, 1919.

Art. 2816. Commissioners' Court may change district lines.

Power of board of school trustees.—Under title 48, ch. 11A, the board of school trustees have been vested with the power of the commissioners' court under Rev. St. 1911, art. 2816, to change the boundaries of any independent school district and to consolidate such districts. Hill County School Trustees v. Melton (Civ. App.) 199 S. W. 1142.

Art. 2817. Court shall give metes and bounds of each district.

Order establishing boundaries.—Order of county school trustees, apportioning a part of a consolidated district to an independent district, held to insufficiently comply with Rev. St. 1911, art. 2817, requiring land affected to be described by metes and bounds. Hill County Board of School Trustees v. Bruton (Civ. App.) 217 S. W. 799.

Art. 2817b. Validation of districts.—All common school districts in this State heretofore laid out and attempted to be established by the proper officers of any county, and heretofore recognized by said county authorities as school districts of said county, are hereby validated in all respects as though they had been duly and legally established in the first instance. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 7, § 1.]

Took effect June 8, 1920.

Art. 2817c. Same.—All common school districts containing less than nine square miles in which an election for the purpose of issuing bonds has been held subsequent to July 1, 1919, or may hereafter be held, are hereby validated as common school districts and are hereby authorized to issue bonds in the same manner as common school districts containing more than nine square miles. [Acts 1920, 36th Leg. 3d C. S., ch. 55, § 1.]

Took effect June 15, 1920.

Art. 2817d. Bond elections validated.—All elections for the purpose of issuing bonds in common school districts containing less than nine square miles, and which said elections have been held subsequent to June 1, 1919, in which the proposition to issue bonds was carried by legal majority of the qualified voters, voting at said election, as required in districts containing more than nine square miles, are hereby validated, and the same are in all things validated from and after the first day of July, 1919; provided said election or elections were ordered by the commissioners court, and in its order correct field notes of said district were contained and the correct boundaries of said district recorded in the minutes of said court in said order, although the petition for election may have been presented to the commissioners court prior to the establishment of the exact boundaries of said district; and all bonds authorized by said election or elections are hereby validated and shall have the same force and effect and shall be payable in the same manner as if said district contained more than nine square miles and the field notes thereof properly defined prior to the presentation of the petition for the election and said bonds shall be issued in the same manner as now provided by law for the issuance of bonds in common school districts containing more than nine square miles. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 2817e. Act cumulative.—This Act shall be cumulative of all laws on the subject of issuing bonds in common school districts now in effect, and not in conflict herewith. [Id., § 3.]

CONSOLIDATION OF DISTRICTS FOR SCHOOL PURPOSES

Art. 2817½. Petition to county judge; order for election; canvass of returns; declaration of consolidation; consolidation of common school districts with independent districts; procedure; district defined.—When any number of contiguous Common School Districts within this State, desiring to consolidate for school purposes, present a petition to the county judge of the county wherein such districts are situated, signed by twenty or a majority of the legally qualified voters of each district so desiring to consolidate, the county judge shall issue an order for an election to be held in each of the Common School Districts so petitioning, which elections shall be held on the same date. The county judge shall give notice of the date of such elections by publication of the order in some newspaper published in the county, for twenty days prior to the date on which such elections are order, or by posting a notice of such elections in each of the districts, or by both such publication and posted notices.

The Commissioners' Court of the county in which such elections are held shall at its next meeting canvass the returns of such elections, and if the votes cast in each and all districts show a majority in favor of the consolidation of such common school districts, the Commissioners' Court shall declare such common school districts consolidated, said districts being contiguous territory.

It is herein provided that in the same manner as is described in Section 1, common school districts may be consolidated with contiguous independent School Districts, and that when common school districts are so consolidated with an independent school district, the district so created shall be known by the name of the independent school district included therein, and the management of the new district shall be under the existing board of trustees of the Independent District, and that all the rights and privileges granted to independent districts by the laws of this State shall be given to the consolidated independent districts created under the provisions of this Act.

The term "District" as hereinafter used shall be construed to mean "consolidated common school district" or "consolidated independent school district," as the case may be. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg. 2d C. S., ch. 65, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after July 22, 1919, date of adjournment.

Art. 2817½a. Assumption of outstanding bonds and tax levy therefore; election to determine.—If at the time of such proposed consolidation there are outstanding bonds of any one or more of the districts proposed to be consolidated, then at an election held for that purpose on some future day, there shall be, or at the election held for the purposes of consolidation, there may be submitted to the qualified tax paying voters of such proposed consolidated district the question as to whether or not the said consolidated district shall assume and pay off the said outstanding bonds and whether or not a tax shall be levied therefor, provided that if said election on the question of assuming said outstanding bonds is held on the day upon which the election on the question of consolidation is held, in that event, there shall be separate notices, ballots, and ballot boxes and tally sheets for the two separate elections. If a majority of said voters should vote at either of said elections to assume and pay off said bonded indebtedness, then said bonded indebtedness shall become valid and subsisting obligations of said consolidated district, and the proper officers thereof shall annually thereafter levy sufficient taxes. to pay the interest thereon as it accrues and to create a sinking fund which in addition to the sinking funds already accumulated in the original bonded district or districts will pay off and retire the said outstanding bonds when they shall become due. [Id., § 2.]

Art. 28171/4b. Trustees of consolidated district; appointment; election; terms and oath of office; officers of board; vacancies.—The Board of County School Trustees at its next meeting after such consolidation of school districts is declared shall appoint a board of seven trustees for the consolidated district. The terms of office of three of the trustees so appointed shall expire on the first day of May next following their appointment, and the terms of office of the other four trustees shall expire on the first day of May of the succeeding year, the trustees so appointed to determine by lot which three trustees shall serve the short term and which four of their number shall serve the long term, and each year thereafter alternately three trustees and four trustees shall be elected by the qualified voters of the district on the first Saturday of April of every year, which trustees so elected shall enter upon the discharge of their duties on the first day of May next following. District trustees shall qualify by taking the oath of office required of all State Officers in this State, which oaths shall be filed with the county superintendent of the county wherein the district is situated. The board of trustees after being qualified shall immediately organize by electing one of their number president and another secretary, a report of which organization shall be filed with the county superintendent. Trustees so elected shall each serve for two years from the first day of May of the year in which they are elected or until their successors are elected and qualified, and in case a vacancy is created in any board of district trustees by resignation or otherwise, the board of county school trustees shall fill such vacancy by appointment, which appointment shall extend to the time of the next regular election for district trustees. [Id., § 3.]

Art. 28171/4c. Officers to conduct election of trustees; compensation; notice of holding of election; qualifications of trustees.—The board of trustees of the district shall appoint three persons, qualified voters of the district, to hold election for district trustees, who shall make returns thereof to the board of trustees of the district within five days after such election shall have been held, the three persons holding such election shall receive as compensation for their services the sum of two dollars each, to be paid out of the general fund of the county in which said election was held. The board of trustees when ordering such election and appointing persons to hold election shall give notice of the time and place where such election will be held, which notice shall be posted in three public places in the district twenty days prior to the date in which such election is ordered to be held. If at the time and place for holding such election, any or all of the persons so appointed to hold such election are absent or refuse to act, then the electors present may select of their number a person or persons to act in the place of those absent or refusing to act.

No person shall be eligible to serve as school trustee who is unable to read and write the English Language understandably, and who has not been a resident of the State one year and of the district six months prior to the election for trustees. [Id., § 4.]

Art. 28171/4d. District superintendent; election; term of office; duties; teachers; employment; term; contracts.—The board of trustees so elected shall employ a district superintendent for the district.
who shall be elected for one year or for two years as the trustees may determine, and who, in addition to his duties as superintendent, shall be a teacher in one of the elementary schools or the high school of the district. Acting in collaboration with the district superintendent, the board of trustees shall employ teachers for the several elementary schools of the district, or for the departments of the high school, which teachers shall be elected for one year or two years as the trustees decide, and they shall serve under the direction and supervision of the district superintendent. Contracts between the trustees and the district superintendent and teachers shall be in writing and subject to the approval of the county superintendent of the county wherein such district is situated. [Id., § 5.]

Art. 2817¼e.—Visitation of schools by district superintendent; records and reports.—It shall be the duty of the district superintendent to visit personally and inspect the several schools of the district and advise with the teachers therein, and he shall be responsible to the district trustees and to the county superintendent for the proper conduct of the school work and the management of the schools of the district. The district superintendent shall spend at least one-fourth of his time in visiting and inspecting the schools of the district, and he shall make recommendations from time to time to the district trustees and to the county superintendent for any changes which in his judgment are necessary for the proper management of the schools of the district. The district superintendent shall keep such records and make such reports as are required of him by the district trustees and the county superintendent, and the county superintendent shall refuse to approve vouchers drawn against the school funds of the district until such reports are made by the district superintendent. [Id., § 6.]

Art. 2817¼f. Establishment of elementary schools; instruction in. —The district trustees shall recognize or establish elementary schools within the bounds of the district as the need for such elementary schools shall appear. They shall, in so far as is practicable, provide uniform school buildings and equipment for the several elementary schools so recognized or established, and they shall arrange an annual wage schedule for the teachers employed in such elementary schools as nearly uniform as is possible. It is herein expressly provided that the instruction in the elementary schools of the district shall embrace, not more than the first seven grades or years of work as outlined in the course of study issued by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for this State, and approved by the County Superintendent of the county wherein such elementary schools are situated. [Id., § 7.]

Art. 2817¼g. Establishment of high schools; courses of instruction; transportation of pupils.—The trustees of the district may recognize or establish not more than one high school for white children and one high school for colored children within the limits of the district, which high schools shall be located with reference to the convenience of the majority of the high school pupils of either race. It is herein provided that the instruction in such high schools may embrace any or all of the four years or grades or work above the seventh grade, as outlined by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for this State and approved by the county board of trustees of the county wherein such high schools are situated. It is herein further provided that such high school may be located and conducted in connection with some of the elementary schools of the district as may be decided by the trustees of the district.

When in their judgment it is deemed necessary or expedient, the trustees of the district may provide for the transportation of pupils to and from any elementary school or high school of the district whereupon such pupils may be in attendance, and trustees are hereby empowered to employ transportation vehicles and drivers for such service, paying the cost thereof out of the local maintenance fund of the district or out of such other funds as may be appropriated for this purpose. [Id., § 8.]

Art. 2817½h. Taxing and bonding powers of consolidated districts; free text books; appeals from such districts.—It is herein expressly provided that taxing and bonding powers as are provided for elsewhere in the laws of this State are hereby guaranteed to the district consolidating under the provisions of this Act, either common school districts or independent school districts, and it is further provided that rural school aid shall be extended to any or all of the schools of the districts so consolidating which comply with the laws and rulings governing the distribution of State aid to rural schools and independent districts. It is further guaranteed that the law providing free text books to the free schools of this State shall apply to the districts consolidating under the provisions of this Act. Appeals from consolidated common school districts shall be made to the county superintendent and Board of Education. [Id., § 9.]

Sec. 10 repeals all conflicting laws.

Trustees

Art. 2819. Election officers; returns; compensation; notice of election; appointment of substitutes; eligibility of school trustees.
Cited, Cowell v. Ayers, 110 Tex. 348, 220 S. W. 764.

Art. 2820. Returns of election.
Cited, Cowell v. Ayers, 110 Tex. 348, 220 S. W. 764.

Art. 2822. District trustees a body corporate.

Residence of trustees is domicile of corporation.—In view of the act creating school districts, and declaring that trustees thereof are to be a body politic and corporate in law, the board of trustees is to all intents and purposes the corporation, and where they have their residence or place of business would be the domicile of the corporation. State v. Waller (Civ. App.) 211 S. W. 922.

Art. 2824. Make contracts for the district.
In general.—In action against school trustees for not accepting lowest bid for schoolhouse, answer of two trustees that they had delegated to third defendant authority to receive bids does not render him individually liable to his codefendants. Stapleton v. Trussell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 269.

Location of schools.—In view of article 2749d, this article, declaring that district trustees shall determine how many schools shall be maintained in their district and at what points they shall be located, applies only to elementary schools; the later act having given county trustees authority to locate high schools and repealed all conflicting acts. Woodson v. Stanley (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 659.

Art. 2826. Check for payment of teacher.—The amount contracted by trustee to be paid a teacher shall be paid on a check drawn by a majority of the trustees, on the county treasurer, and approved by the county superintendent. [Acts 1905, p. 263, § 74; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 126, § 1.]

Took effect 90 days after March 12, 1921, date of adjournment.
Local Tax

Art. 2827. Special tax authorized.—The commissioners' court of any county in this State shall have the power to levy a special tax for the further maintenance of public free schools and the erection and equipment of a school building or school buildings within and for each common school district located in such county; providing a majority of the qualified property tax-paying voters of the district, voting at an election held for that purpose, shall vote such tax not to exceed in any one year one dollar on the one hundred dollars valuation of the taxable property in such district; and provided further that all property assessed for school purposes in such districts shall be assessed at the rate of value of property as said property is assessed for state and county purposes. [Acts 1905, p. 263, § 57; Acts 1909, p. 17; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 24, § 1, repealing art. 2827. Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

The act took effect March 5, 1921. See arts. 2827-2860. 296Ca. 296cb. post.

Taxing power strictly construed.—The grant of taxing power to any county or district by the Legislature should be construed with strictness; the presumption being that the Legislature has granted in clear terms all it intended to grant. State v. Houston & T. C. Ry. Co. (Civ. App.) 299 S. W. 529.

Constitutional authorization.—By Const. art. 7, § 3, as amended in 1909, the Legislature is authorized by general or special law not only to create school districts, but to provide for the assessment and collection of taxes therein and for the management and control of their schools, and to authorize the levy and collection of additional ad valorem taxes, not only in such districts as then existed, but those thereafter formed. Powell v. Charco Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 1178.

Amount of tax.—That one of the two elementary schools in a district needed repairs and ornamentation justified an increase of the revenue from the district within the legal limits. Schulz v. Davis (Civ. App.) 207 S. W. 634.

Art. 2828. Petition for tax election.—It shall be the duty of the county judge, upon the presentation of a petition signed by twenty, or more, or a majority, of the property tax-paying voters of the district, to order an election to be held in said district for the purpose of levying a tax to supplement the State school fund apportioned to said district and to determine whether such tax shall be levied; provided, said petition shall designate either the specific rate of tax to be levied, or a rate of tax not exceeding one dollar on the one hundred dollars valuation of the taxable property of the district. The order of the county judge shall state the time and place or places of holding such election and the rate of tax to be voted on, or, the proposition may be for a school tax not exceeding one dollar on the one hundred dollars valuation of taxable property of the district. The county judge shall order the sheriff to give notice of such election by posting three notices in the district for three weeks prior to said election, and the sheriff shall obey such order. Not more than one such election shall be held within a year from the date of such election. The manner of holding said election shall be governed by the provisions of Articles 2829, 2830, 2831, and 2832, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas of 1911. [Acts 1905, p. 263, § 38; Acts 1909, p. 17; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 24, § 2, repealing art. 2828. Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

See 1913 Supp. arts. 6015½-6018½c, as to publication in newspaper instead of posting.

Art. 2836. Levy of tax.—The county commissioners' court, at the time of levying taxes for county purposes, shall also levy upon all the taxable property within any common school district the rate of school maintenance tax said district has voted upon itself, or if the proposition shall have been for a school tax not exceeding one dollar on the one hundred dollars valuation of taxable property in the district, the commissioners' court shall levy such a rate within that limit as shall have been determined by the board of trustees of said district and the county superintendent and certified to said court by the county superintendent. [Acts 1905, p. 263, § 66; Acts 1909, p. 17; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 24, § 3, repealing art. 2836, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Suit to recover tax.—A county has no authority to receive or sue tax collector for taxes collected for either independent or common school districts and not accounted for, under this article, and arts. 2767, 2832, 2841, 2862; such taxes being payable to district treasurers which districts are the ones to sue. Watson v. El Paso County (Civ. App.) 202 S. W. 126.

Art. 2836a. Assessment of tax; lien; when special tax shall be levied; collection; commissions; disposition of taxes collected.—It shall be the duty of the tax assessor to assess said tax as other taxes are assessed and to make an abstract showing the amount of special taxes assessed against each school district in his county and to furnish the same to the county superintendent on or before the first day of September of the year for which such taxes are assessed, and the taxes levied upon the real property in said districts shall be a lien thereon, and the same shall be sold for unpaid taxes in the manner and at the time of sales for State and county taxes. A special tax voted in any district after the levy of county taxes shall be levied at any meeting of the commissioners' court prior to the delivery of the assessment rolls by the assessor. The tax assessor shall assess and the tax collector shall collect said district taxes as other taxes are assessed and collected. The tax assessor shall receive a commission of one-half of one per cent for assessing such tax and the tax collector a commission of one-half of one per cent for collecting the same. The tax collector shall pay all such taxes to the county treasurer, and said treasurer shall credit each school district with the amount belonging to it and pay out the same in accordance with the law. [Acts 1905, p. 263, § 66; Acts 1909, p. 17; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 24, § 4.]

Schoolhouse Bonds

Art. 2837. Election for issuance of bonds.—Upon the petition of twenty, or more, or a majority, of the qualified property tax-paying voters of a common school district, to the county judge, the judge shall have the power, and it is hereby made his duty to order an election to be held in such district to determine whether or not the bonds of such district shall be issued as indicated in the petition, and the annual levy of a tax sufficient to pay the current interest on said bonds and provide a sinking fund sufficient to pay the principal at maturity. The petition and the order and notice of election must distinctly specify the amount of the bonds, the rate of interest, the time in which they are to run, and the purpose for which the bonds are to be used; but it shall not be necessary to vote upon a specific rate of tax but the rate shall be determined in the manner provided by Section 11 of this Act. [Art. 2841.] [Acts 1905, p. 263, § 76; Acts 1909, p. 17; Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 24, § 5, repealing art. 2837, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Proof of notice of election.—When the statute prescribing the mode of notice of a school district bond election has not been complied with, it rests upon him asserting the legality of the election to prove satisfactorily that sufficient notice was given the voters, that they in fact had actual notice, and that failure to give the prescribed notice did not affect the result. Mayhew v. Commissioners' Court of Coryell County (Civ. App.) 214 S. W. 943.

Residence of voters.—In order to vote at an election to determine whether bonds shall be issued to build a schoolhouse, one must reside in and own property in the school district. Barker v. Wilson (Civ. App.) 205 S. W. 543.

In contest of school election, evidence held insufficient to show that one denied right to vote resided within the school district. Id.
Art. 2837a. Notice of election; conduct of election.—The county judge shall order the sheriff to give notice of such election by posting three notices in the district for three weeks prior to said election, and the sheriff shall obey such order; provided, that the manner of holding said election and making returns thereof shall be as in other school elections in accordance with the laws of this State. [Acts 1921, 37th Leg., ch. 24, § 6.]
See 1918 Supp. arts. 6016½-6016½c.

Art. 2838. Ballots.—The county judge shall prepare proper ballots for use in such school district bond election, and the county shall bear the expense of having such ballots printed; and all voters who favor the proposition to issue the bonds and the levy of the tax therefor shall have written or printed on their ballots the words: “For the issuance of bonds and the levying of the tax in payment thereof”; and those opposed shall have written or printed on their ballots the words: “Against the issuance of bonds and the levying of the tax in payment thereof.” [Id., § 7, repealing art. 2838, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Art. 2839. Issuance of bonds.—If, after the result of said election is known, it shall appear to the Commissioners’ Court of the county in which such school district is located that a majority of the votes cast at such election were in favor of the issuance of the schoolhouse bonds, it shall be the duty of the Commissioners’ Court, as soon thereafter as practicable, to issue said bonds on the faith and credit of the said common school district. [Id., § 8, repealing art. 2839, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Art. 2839a. Interest on and terms of bonds.—Such bonds shall bear not more than six per cent (6%) interest per annum and may mature, serially or otherwise, not exceeding forty years from the date thereof; provided, that when the houses are to be built of wood, the time of the bonds herein provided for shall not be more than twenty years from their date. [Id., § 9.]

Art. 2840. Form of bonds; approval and registration; disbursement of proceeds; investment of school fund in bonds.—The said school district school house bonds shall express on their face: The State of Texas, the name of the county, and the number or corporate name of the district issuing said bonds. Such bonds shall be signed by the County Judge of the county in which the school district is located and countersigned by the County Clerk and registered by the County Treasurer of such county in accordance with the General Law relative to county bonds; and such bonds shall be examined by the Attorney General of Texas and registered by the Comptroller of Public Accounts of Texas, and when so issued they shall be sold to the highest bidder at not less than their par value, and the purchase money shall be placed in the county depository to the credit of said school district. Such funds shall be disbursed upon warrants issued by the district trustees approved by the County Superintendent in payment of accounts legally contracted in buying, building, equipping or repairing the school house or school houses for such district, or in the purchase of sites therefor. The Commissioners’ Court may invest the county permanent school fund in such common school district schoolhouse bonds and the State Board of Education shall have the right to purchase such bonds on the same conditions as it may purchase other bonds. [Id., § 10, repealing art. 2840, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]
Art. 2841. Levy of bond tax.—When the Commissioners’ Court shall provide for the issuance of such bonds, and each year thereafter so long as the bonds, or any of them, are outstanding, the said Court shall levy a tax not to exceed fifty cents (50c) on the one hundred ($100.00) dollar valuation of taxable property of said school district sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds and to produce a sinking fund, which, together with the interest thereon, when placed at interest, shall be sufficient to pay the principal of said bonds at maturity. The rate of such tax shall be determined by the trustees of the district and the county Superintendent and certified by the County Superintendent to the Commissioners’ Court; provided that the rate of bond tax, together with the rate of special local tax of the district for the maintenance of schools therein shall never exceed one dollar on the hundred dollars valuation of taxable property of said school district; but if the rate of bond tax certified by the County Superintendent to the Commissioners’ Court, together with the rate of maintenance tax previously voted in the district, shall at any time exceed one dollar on the hundred dollars valuation, such bond tax shall operate to reduce the maintenance tax to the difference between the rate of the bond tax and one dollar. Said school district bond tax shall be assessed and collected in the manner provided by law for the assessment and collection of special local tax for the maintenance of public free schools; provided that the rate of school tax certified to the Commissioners’ Court by the County Superintendent shall be the rate to be levied by the Commissioners’ Court in the school district until a change in such rate shall be recommended by the County Superintendent and board of trustees of the district within the limit herein prescribed. [Id., § 11, repealing art. 2841, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Art. 2842. Tax continued until bonds are paid.—After said bonds shall have been issued and sold and said tax shall have been levied sufficient to pay said bonds and the interest thereon, as provided above, it shall not be lawful to hold an election in said district to determine whether or not said tax shall be discontinued or lowered until said bonds, together with the interest thereon, shall have been fully paid. Nor shall the limits and boundaries of said common school district ever be decreased by the county board of school trustees until all of said bonds and the accrued interest thereon shall have been fully paid. [Id., § 12, repealing art. 2842, Rev. Civ. St. 1911.]

Boundaries not to be decreased after bond issue.—The boundaries of a school district may not be changed, so as to reduce the taxable value of the property included in it after the district has issued bonds which are outstanding obligations, under art. 2815, by appeal to the injunctive power of the court, since the court cannot do indirectly what cannot be done directly by the commissioners’ court. Harbin Independent School Dist. v. Denman (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 538, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 176.

School Property

Art. 2844. Trustees to contract for building.

See Hicks v. Faust, 109 Tex. 481, 215 S. W. 608.

In general.—Where jobber handled for manufacturer order for water-closets of contractors to erect schoolhouse, contractors were not agents of plumber after they had filed voluntary petition in bankruptcy. Sanitary Mfg. Co. v. Gamer (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 1968.

Neither architect of school building nor superintendent of schools could be held to be agent of jobber who took order for water-closets of contractors to build school and handled it with manufacturer. Id.

Lowest bidder.—Petition, alleging that tax had been levied for building schoolhouse, and that school district trustees had not accepted lowest bid, states no cause of action.
this article not arbitrarily requiring acceptance of lowest bid. Stapleton v. Trussell (Civ. App.) 196 S. W. 269.

Bond of contractor—In general.—In action on a school building contractor's bond, payments in good faith on architect's certificates, as required by contract, are conclusive. Texas Fidelity & Bonding Co. v. Rosenberg Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 298.

Under a school building contract providing that contractor should forfeit certain amount daily for delay in completing work, the surety is liable for such sum, especially where entire delay resulted from contractor's fault before he abandoned work. Id.

A school building contractor's default made inoperative contract provisions requiring district to pay upon architect's certificates, to retain certain amounts for paying materialmen's claims, and requiring contractor be given written notice of default before owner supplies materials, etc., so far as liability of contractor's surety is concerned. Id.

Construction.—A school building contractor's bond broadly binding, surety, to carry out contract's design, true spirit, etc., will not be strictly construed in surety's favor. Texas Fidelity & Bonding Co. v. Rosenberg Independent School Dist. (Civ. App.) 195 S. W. 298.

The rule that parties' intent is dominant test in construing a contract applies to a bond of a school building contractor. Id.

Art. 2845. Lien may not be acquired.

See Hicks v. Faust, 109 Tex. 451, 212 S. W. 608.

Right to lien.—Under this article, where school trustees, pursuant to written contract, have schoolhouse, or a contractor, there was severance, and plaintiff, who furnished material for reconstruction of schoolhouse, was entitled to lien, although contractor sold interest in building, sale not becoming effective until after materials were furnished. R. H. Spencer & Co. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1179.

Art. 2846. Sale of school property.

See Hicks v. Faust, 109 Tex. 451, 212 S. W. 608.

Application.—This article, requiring order of commissioners' court for sale of school property, relates to common school districts, and is inapplicable to independent school districts. R. H. Spencer & Co. v. Brown (Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1179.

Art. 2849. Title to property.

Deed "for school purposes."—A deed to a county judge "for school purposes," wherein the habendum clause was, "To have and to hold the above-described premises, together with all and singular the rights and appurtenances thereto in any wise belonging, unto the said C. county judge, his successors in office, heirs and assigns, forever," held a conveyance of the fee-simple title to the judge in trust for the school or schools of the district in which it is situated; the words therein "for school purposes" simply designating the beneficiaries, and not expressing conditions, especially in view of arts. 1105, 1107. Wilson v. County School Trustees of Eastland County (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 663.

The nature and extent of a trust created by a deed in trust for schools may be arrived at as any other fact. Id.

A deed "for school purposes" to the county judges, wherein the habendum clause was, "To have and to hold the above-described premises, together with all and singular the rights and appurtenances thereto in any wise belonging, unto the said county judge and his successors (of Merriman school district) of Eastland county, Texas, heirs and assigns forever," etc., held a conveyance of the fee-simple title to the judge in trust for the school or schools of the district in which the land is situated. Taylor v. County School Trustees of Eastland County (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 670.

County judge as grantee.—County judge is a sufficiently definite grantee in a conveyance of a fee-simple title in trust for the schools of the district in which it was situated. Wilson v. County School Trustees of Eastland County (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 669.

Power to abandon.—Land conveyed in fee simple to the county judge, in trust for schools of the district in which it was situated, could not be abandoned. Wilson v. County School Trustees of Eastland County (Civ. App.) 229 S. W. 669.

Where the fee-simple title of land is conveyed to county judge in trust for schools, the school trustees cannot abandon it. Id.
CHAPTER FIFTEEN A

PUBLIC HIGH SCHOOLS IN COMMON SCHOOL DISTRICTS

Art. 2849a. [Superseded.] Art. 2849c-2849o. [Superseded.]
2849b. Classification of high schools.

Article 2849a. [Superseded.]

Explanatory.—This article constitutes section 1 of ch. 26, Acts 1911. Chapter 26 of Acts 1911 is amended by Acts 1915, ch. 36, so as to read as set forth in the 1918 Supplement (Articles 2849a-2849r, 2849b, 2849bb). This would seem to supersede this article and articles 2849b-2849o as they appeared in Vernon's Sayles' Civ. St. 1914. Sections 5 and 6 of the amendatory act related specifically to high schools, and those two sections are set forth in the 1918 Supplement as articles 2849b, 2849bb.

Art. 2849b. Classification of high schools.

Establishment.—Under arts. 2749a-2749c, 2749d, and this article, amending Acts 212 Leg. c. 26, the county trustees alone have authority to establish high schools, and district trustees will be enjoined from attempting to select the site. Woodson v. Stanley (Civ. App.) 201 S. W. 659.

Arts. 2849c-2849o. [Superseded.] See note under art. 2849a.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

INDEPENDENT DISTRICTS

Art. 2850. Application to county judge for elections.
2851. Incorporation.
2851a. Schools in independent district assumed or controlled by city or town within district; order for election to determine.
2851b. Ballots to be used at election.
2851c. "Assuming control of the schools" defined.
2851d. Certificate of result of election; ordinance assuming control; extension of boundaries of city or town for school purposes; assumption of bonded indebtedness; tax levy to pay.
2851e. Existing trustees.
2852. Board of trustees.
2853. Powers of the board.
2854. General laws apply to all districts.
2855. Change or abolition of district.

TAXES AND BONDS

2857. Local taxes; bonds.
2857a. Issuance of bonds; limitation; interest and maturity; election.
2858. Petition for election.
2858a. Order for election; ballots; polling places, officers, etc.

Article 2850. Application to county judge for elections.

District not a "person."—An independent school district is not a "person" within the meaning of the statute giving the right to an aggrieved person to sue for the forfeiture on a liquor dealer's bond. Devine Independent School Dist. v. Koehler (Civ. App.) 212 S. W. 238.

Special law.—In view of Const. art. 7, § 3, as amended September 24, 1909, authorizing the Legislature to form school districts by general or special law, the enactment of a
Art. 2851. Incorporation.

In general.—Slight inaccuracies in description of boundaries of a school district are insufficient to render its incorporation void. Harbin Independent School Dist. v. Denman (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 176.

Collateral attack on organization.—In suit to enjoin assessment of taxes on plaintiff's land by defendant school district, on ground that land was in another lawful district, defendant's answer that incorporation of latter district was void was a "collateral attack" upon its corporate existence. Harbin Independent School Dist. v. Denman (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 176.

Petition to enjoin assessment and collection of taxes in school district, on ground that plaintiff's land was within boundaries of another legal district, was not a collateral attack on incorporation of defendant district. 10.

A suit to enjoin assessment of taxes on plaintiff's land by defendant school district, on the ground that the land was in another district and that the incorporation of the former district was void, in that it encroached on the latter district when it included plaintiff's land, was collateral attack upon the corporate existence of the defendant district, and not maintainable by an individual. Harbin Independent School Dist. v. Denman (Com. App.) 222 S. W. 538, reversing judgment (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 176.

Former law.—Rev. Civ. St. 1879, art. 607, declares that if the inhabitants of certain towns and villages desire to be incorporated, a given number of voters shall file an application with the county judge, "stating the boundaries of the proposed town or village;" and a prior statute, similar to this article, allowed towns to incorporate for free school purposes only, and to hold an election under the same provisions, and provided that the county judge should cause a record of the election to be made, upon which the town should be regarded as duly incorporated for school purposes. Held, that if a petition presented to the county judge for incorporation for school purposes failed to give the boundaries of the proposed incorporation, the proceeding was void, though an order of the county judge, duly recorded, designated the boundaries, and an election was held thereon. Furth v. State, 6 Civ. App. 221, 24 S. W. 1126.

Art. 2851a. Schools in independent district assumed or controlled by city or town within district; order for election to determine.—When a town or village incorporated for free school purposes only under the general law, and hereinafter designated as an "Independent School District," and a city or town forming a part of such Independent School District which is incorporated for municipal purposes, under the general law, and hereinafter referred to as an "Incorporated city or town," shall be desirous of having the public schools within such independent district assumed by or under the control of such city or town, the same shall be done in the following manner to-wit:

Whenever as many as fifty or a majority of the resident qualified voters of such Independent School District shall petition the Board of Trustees of such Independent School District to order an election for the purpose of voting on the proposition of whether or not the public free schools in said district shall be assumed and controlled by such incorporated city or town, said board of trustees shall order an election, to be held at the usual voting place or places, within such independent school district and which election shall be ordered and held in conformity with the law governing bond and tax elections in independent school districts, except the qualified electors voting thereat need not be property tax payers, but must be qualified to vote under the laws of this State regulating general elections; provided that the petition on which said election is ordered shall be signed by a majority of the qualified voters of such district living without the limits of such incorporated town or city. [Acts 1919, 36th Leg., 2d C. S., ch. 9, § 1.]

Art. 2851b. Ballots to be used at election.—All persons voting at such election in favor of the incorporated city or town assuming control of the schools of such independent school district shall have written or printed on their ballots the words "for assuming control of the public free schools of ....... Independent School District by the city of ....... Texas," and all persons voting at such election not in favor of the incorporated city or town assuming control of the schools shall have written or printed on their ballots the words "against assuming control of the public free schools of ....... Independent School District by the city of ....... Texas." [Id.]

Art. 2851c. "Assuming control of the schools" defined.—The term "assuming control of the schools" as used in this act shall be held to mean the assumption of the control and management of the schools of such independent school district by the incorporated city or town in conformity with the provisions and requirements of Chapter 17, Title 48, Revised Civil Statutes 1911, except as herein otherwise provided. [Id.]

Art. 2851d. Certificate of result of election; ordinance assuming control; extension of boundaries of city or town for school purposes; assumption of bonded indebtedness; tax levy to pay.—In the event a majority of the qualified voters voting at the election in such independent school district, shall vote in favor of the incorporated city or town assuming control of the schools of such independent school district, it shall be the duty of the Board of Trustees of such district to certify the results of such election to the City Council, City Commission or other governing authority of such incorporated city or town, together with a certified copy of the record showing all the proceedings had in the incorporation of such independent school district and all boundary extensions thereto, if any, together with a well defined map accurately showing the territory described in such record, and if upon investigation by the City Council, City Commission or other governing authority of such incorporated city or town, it is found that the election for assuming control of the schools of such independent school district has been in all respects lawfully held and the returns thereof duly and legally made, then the said City Council, City Commission or other governing authority shall, by ordinance duly passed and entered of record assume control and management of the public free schools within its limits; provided, that if the boundaries of such independent school districts do not coincide with the boundaries of the incorporated city or town, then the City Council, City Commission or other governing authority, shall on the same day pass an ordinance extending its corporate line for school purposes only so that the same shall coincide with and embrace the same territory within such independent school district, and provided further, that if such independent school district shall have an outstanding bonded indebtedness, then the incorporated city or town shall become bound and liable for the payment of such bonded indebtedness and the City Council, City Commission, or other governing authority thereof, shall levy and cause to be assessed and collected, upon all property subject to taxation within the limits of such incorporated city or town or within the limits of such corporation as extended for school purposes only if the boundaries of the former independent school district were not the same as the boundaries of the incorporated city or town, taxes for the purpose of paying the interest on such bonds and provide a sinking fund sufficient to redeem the same at maturity, and such tax thereafter shall be annually levied and collected so long as such bonds, or any of them, are outstanding.
and unpaid; and provided further that the assumption of the control of the schools of such independent school district shall not abrogate or affect any maintenance tax theretofore authorized in such independent school district and such tax shall thereafter be annually levied, assessed and collected by the proper authorities of such incorporated city or town, until increased or changed by the qualified voters in conformity with the provisions and requirements of Chapter 17, Title 48, Revised Statutes 1911, as amended by Chapter 169 Acts Regular Session Thirty-fifth Legislature. [Id.]

Art. 2851e. Existing trustees.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed as affecting the term or terms of office of any trustee previously elected in such independent school district and serving as such at the time of the assumption of the control of the district schools by the incorporated city or town, as herein provided, and such trustees shall be vested with the same authority as is conferred by law upon school trustees in cities and towns constituting separate and independent school districts, and shall thereafter be elected in the same manner as school trustees for such cities and towns, in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 18, Title 48, Revised Statutes 1911. [Id.]

Art. 2852. Board of trustees.

Attempted election under act not yet effective.—In order for there to be a de facto officer there must be a de jure officer, and hence an attempted election of trustees for an independent school district, under an act which had not yet become effective, was not only irregular and informal, but void. Gray v. Ingleside Independent School Dist. (Clv. App.) 220 S. W. 350.

A school district created by law has no authority to elect a board of trustees under the act creating it before the act has gone into effect, and an election of trustees under Local & Special Laws 1919, passed by the Thirty-Sixth Legislature, c. 35, creating the Ingleside Independent School District, held before June 17, 1919, was void; such law not becoming effective until such date. Id.

Art. 2853. Powers of the board.

in general.—The act of two members of a school board in promising to procure a guaranty from the board of a materialman's bill for brick used in the construction of a school building was not binding on the board, it never having been ratified in regular session. Elgin-Butler Brick & Tile Co. v. Hillsboro Independent School Dist. (Clv. App.) 205 S. W. 942.

Power to require vaccination of pupils.—Charter of independent school district authorizing board of education to establish, manage and control schools held to authorize board to prescribe vaccination as condition of admission to schools if requirement is not unreasonable. Staffel v. San Antonio School Board of Education (Clv. App.) 201 S. W. 413.

Resolution of board of education for exclusion of unvaccinated children from the schools held not to violate Const. art. 1, § 19, as to due course of the law. Id.

Resolution of board of education for exclusion from schools of unvaccinated children held not in violation of Const. art. 7, §§ 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, or Rev. St. 1911, §§ 2899–2901, as to public free schools. Id.

Resolution of school board excluding unvaccinated children from schools held not unreasonable where there was smallpox within the district and danger that it would spread and be communicated from one person to another. Id.

Power to select depository.—The board of trustees of an independent school district has a discretionary power in selecting the depository, under art. 2771, providing that the depository or treasurer shall be that person or corporation who offers a satisfactory bond and the best bid of interest, and in view of articles 2850–2852. Donna Independent School Dist. v. First State Bank of Donna (Clv. App.) 227 S. W. 974.

Liens of tax.—This article and art. 2851 did not make applicable to independent school districts that part of article 288 making taxes levied and assessed by cities and towns lien on personal property against which tax is assessed. Armstrong v. Mission Independent School Dist. (Clv. App.) 195 S. W. 895.

Lien on personality created by an independent school district's assessment under this article, having attached, was not defeated by sale under a deed of trust, but the buyer took the property subject to the right of the district through its collector to enforce collection by levying on and advertising the property for sale to satisfy the lien.

Under this article, in view of article 858, incorporated by reference, which does not fix a specific date when the lien of taxes on personality shall attach, the lien created by a school district's tax levy attached and became an incumbrance on the property as soon as the assessment was made.

Art. 2856. General laws apply to all districts
Cited, Cain v. Lumsden (Civ. App.) 204 S. W. 115.

Art. 2856b. Change or abolishment of district.
No abolishment by nonuser.—Where school district was declared duly incorporated, etc., and was operated for some time, held, it could only be abolished by election, as provided by arts. 1077, 1078, and this article, and not by nonuser. Harbin Independent School Dist. v. Denman (Civ. App.) 200 S. W. 176.
